HORTON DISTRICT S. S. ASSN.

Holds Annual Convention at Hortonville—Interesting Addresses

The annual convention of the Horton District Sunday School Association opened on July 29 in the Methodist church, Hortonville, at 3 o'clock. After a brief devotional service led by Mr. Burbridge, pastor of the church, the reports of the seven Sunday Schools represented, were given.

Miss Harrison then gave an informal talk on "Children's Work in the Sunday School".

The child, she said, has three gifts: body, mind, and soul. It is the third gift which controls the life, and it is that gift which must be developed. She also gave several helpful suggestions for children's work.

Mr. Machum in his address stressed the need of a Workers' Conference in the Sunday School, and outlined its program as follows:

A period spent in prayer. The consideration of current problems of the Sunday School.

A definite facing of a standard of excellence. A brief digest of a good book on Religious Education read.

After an interesting discussion the meeting adjourned until evening. The evening session opened at 8 o'clock with a devotional service led by Mr. Bleasdel, pastor of the Baptist church, Avonport.

Mr. Machum gave the address of the evening talking as his subject, "The Significance of Childhood from the Standpoint of the Church". He also gave a brief outline of the work of the Maritime Religious Education Council.

Following are the officers elected for the coming year: Pres.—Mr. Patriquin, Wolfville. Vice-Pres.—Mrs. P. C. Reid, Avonport. Sec'y.—Mrs. Gwen Patterson, Wolfville.

A RIPE OLD AGE
On Sunday last Dr. Elias N. Payzant, one of Wolfville's oldest and most esteemed residents, celebrated his ninety-fourth birthday. During the day a number of friends who were aware of the anniversary, called on Dr. Payzant to tender congratulations and best wishes, accompanied in some cases by beautiful floral offerings.

The following lines composed by an old friend, and particularly appropriate, were also received:

Friend of my youth, of my age, of my prime,
Forgive I send you this poor little rhyme.
To welcome to you the return of the day
You first started out in your brave, cheery way.
So that every old friend, of whom I am one,
Is ready to say "well lived and well done."

And each coming birthday from now to the end
Will find you dearer to each loving friend.

Our venerable townsman retains his mental faculties to a wonderful degree and takes a keen interest in all public matters, of which he is exceptionally well informed. He is widely known in this and neighboring counties, and many friends will join THE ACADIAN in wishing for him continued health of mind and body.

Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, who has been unable to attend to his duties for some months on account of ill health, arrived in Nova Scotia on Saturday and will spend some weeks at Smith's Cove, Digby county, hoping that the rest and quiet will be beneficial to his health.

WILL ERECT STATUE OF LONG-FELLOW
Author of "Evangeline" to Have Place in Grand Pre Park

During the recent visit of Governor Cox and party, of Massachusetts, to the Memorial Park at Grand Pre, the suggestion was made that a bronze statue in memory of the poet Longfellow should be erected on those historic grounds. The idea had the prompt and hearty endorsement of Governor Cox, who expressed the opinion that few visitors to Grand Pre would neglect the opportunity to subscribe to funds for a memorial to the man whose genius gave the world the immortal poem "Evangeline".

Almost every school child in the United States and Canada is familiar with the name "Grand Pre", and in this connection learns something about Nova Scotia. The Evangeline story is still the greatest link between this Province and the outside world, and Longfellow remains our greatest poet.

Already subscriptions for the memorial have been received from enthusiastic visitors by G. F. Parker, who has been placed in charge of the Publicity Bureau at Grand Pre Memorial Park. It is believed that the necessary funds for the erection of the proposed statue will be made available in a remarkably short time.

NEW ENGLAND APPLE CROP REPORT
From the statisticians office Wakefield, Mass., we take the following in reference to apple crop reports:

According to reports from the farmers' conditions up to July 1st were much more favorable to apples than average and 13 per cent. better than last year for New England as a whole. In per cent. of a normal outlook July 1st, the figures are:—Maine 88, New Hampshire 88, Vermont 87, Mass. 82, Rhode Island 84, Connecticut 82, New England 85.2; earlier varieties are reported better than later ones, Baldwins and McIntosh are mostly a moderate crop.

The United States crop of hatched apples promises July 1 to be 13 per cent. above last year and 23 per cent. above average. But box apples show a 30 per cent. decrease from last year and 12 per cent. below average. For the entire crop the July outlook is for a production 93.9 per cent. of last year and 109.1 per cent. of the 5 year average. The crop is yet subject to several unmeasured influences which may alter the present outlook very much. Reaches are a good crop in Connecticut and Rhode Island but light in Massachusetts with practically none in New Hampshire.

The forecast for New York State gives nearly 2 million barrels more than last year; Virginia one million, while Michigan is short about a half million and Washington short about three million barrels.

MISS ARCHIBALD'S WORK FEATURED IN MACLEANS
In its department of "Women and Their Work" the latest issue of Macleans Magazine contains an extended sketch entitled "Rosamund DeWolf Archibald Crusades for Better English". The article, which is accompanied by a good portrait of Miss Archibald, interestingly describes the phenomenal manner in which the inhabitants of the eastern provinces have rallied to the standard which she has raised in support of the King's English. Miss Archibald is described as "an intrepid young woman who has set herself to lead the army of protesters and uplifters in the protest against the reckless, careless, and often deliberate slaughtering of our mother tongue."

The writer tells in detail the story of Miss Archibald's crusade and of her call to undertake what she intends to make her life work.

ANOTHER FLIER OFF

LONDON, July 26.—A dispatch from Rotterdam states that Major Pedro Zanni, Argentine flier, who has announced his intention of attempting to fly around the world, arrived there this morning at 9.45 o'clock from Amsterdam and left for Le Bourget. The route to be followed by Major Zanni will be the one used by Stuart MacLaren, the British flier.

THOUSANDS OF CANADIANS RETURNING

During Past Three Months Over 14,000 Have Crossed From U. S. to Canada.

OTTAWA, July 28.—Repatriations of Canadians returning from the United States continued during June, 1924, when 4,720 were registered. In the previous month 4,936 returned to take up residence in Canada and in April 4,087, a total of 13,743, of whom 11,740 were Canadian born.

The figures are given in a statement issued today by the Department of Immigration. It shows that total immigration to Canada in June was 14,421, an increase of five per cent. over June, 1923. In May, 1924, it was 19,494, an increase of ten per cent. over May, 1923, and in April, 19330, an increase of 103 per cent. over April, 1923.

Of last month's quota, 8,188 came from the United Kingdom, 1,795 from the United States and 4,438 from other countries. The total immigration represents an increase of 12,283 over the corresponding quarter last year.

An analysis of the figures concerning repatriated Canadians shows that in June, 3,962 were native born Canadians, 447 were British subjects, who had acquired Canadian domicile, and 311 were naturalized Canadians, formerly subjects of a foreign country.

The total immigration figures for the quarter represent an increase of 26 per cent. in immigration from the United Kingdom, a decrease of 15 per cent. in that from the United States and an increase of 61 per cent. in that from "other countries".

HARVEST EXCURSIONS
At least 40,000 harvesters will be required this year to gather in the wheat crop of Canada, according to information given by the Canadian National Railway offices. Of this number, approximately 20,000 will have to be secured from Eastern Canada.

It is being thought that the remainder will be supplied by the three Prairie Provinces and British Columbia. This information is the outcome of a conference held at Winnipeg Friday, attended by representatives of the Canadian National Railways, the Provincial and Federal Governments, and the Labor Board. It was also brought out that harvesting is expected to commence in Manitoba August 20th and in Saskatchewan and Alberta about August 25th.

A further meeting is to be held on August 2nd in Winnipeg to determine the dates when the special train fares for harvesters will go into effect. This date will be governed by the time when the farmers are prepared to accept harvesters. The representatives of the Canadian National Railways have assured the Government representatives that they are fully prepared to handle this traffic, that the National System has approximately four hundred cars of the very latest type of colonist equipment held in readiness, and in addition there are ready for service on the line vest trains a number of specially designed lunch counter cars, all of them larger and better equipped than any other cars of this type in the country.

GOV. COX VISITS VALLEY
Hon. Channing H. Cox, Governor of Massachusetts, and party, arrived at Halifax last Saturday morning on board the Boston steamer yacht Una, owned by Arthur Chids, of Boston. After the day at Halifax the party left Sunday morning by special train over the D. A. R. for a trip through the Annapolis Valley, guests of General Manager Geo. E. Graham. The first stop was made at Grand Pre, from which point the party was motored to the Ken-wo Country Club and from there to Kentville for lunch. In the afternoon they proceeded by train to Annapolis Royal and from there to Digby, where they spent the night. Monday morning Gov. Cox proceeded to Yarmouth and boarded the boat for Boston, while the remainder of the party returned to Halifax and rejoined the Una for a cruise to the Bras d'Or Lakes.

Considerable complaint is heard of the condition of the road between Wolfville and Kentville, upon which much work was done two years ago by the Provincial Highways Board. In places new gravel has been applied and when properly rolled, by the traffic, for a time at least will be considerably improved. This road is subjected to much hard travel and at the time the work was done THE ACADIAN urged that it might be of a more permanent character. The attempt to make a gravel road meet the requirements is evidently not an economical policy, as was then pointed out.

WOLFVILLE DEFEATS WINDSOR

Local Tennis Players Win Five out of Eight Events

Last Saturday afternoon the Wolfville Tennis Club played a league tournament with the Windsor Club on the latter's courts, and were again victorious. The early morning rain had laid the dust and the courts were in excellent condition. The local players again demonstrated their superiority over the Windsor players, but despite this the games were hard fights and the results in most cases close.

Probably the most interesting match from the gallery's standpoint was the men's doubles. After being three games down in the first set the Wolfville pair improved their game, and from then on it was a see-saw affair with plenty of spectacular thrills until finally Windsor pulled out at 10-8. The effort proved so much, however, for the Wolfville couple and they lost the next set 6-0. The men's singles was well played with several long rallies. V. L. Curry for Windsor doing very well to win. The mixed doubles were all interesting matches and well contested, but in three of these events the classy play of those past-masters, Dr. Leslie Eaton, Robbie Tufts and Austin Chute, stood out.

Tea was served by the Windsor ladies in their usual happy manner and the afternoon's entertainment was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Results were as follows:
Ladies' Singles
Miss D. Holmes, Wolfville, defeated Miss I. Dimock, 6-2, 6-3.
Men's Singles
V. L. Curry, Windsor, defeated Prof. Ross, 6-2, 7-5.

Ladies' Doubles
Mrs. R. T. Christie and Miss G. Harriott, Windsor, defeated Misses Johnson and Ford, 6-0, 6-2.
Men's Doubles
E. Shand and H. Smith, Windsor, defeated O. Foshay and A. Corey, 10-8, 6-0.

Mixed Doubles
Miss McLean and R. Tufts, Wolfville, defeated Miss J. Geldert and C. H. Brown, 6-4, 6-1.
Mrs. Bishop and Dr. L. Eaton defeated Miss Duncan and G. Duncan, 6-4, 6-4.

Mrs. McGill and G. Eaton, Wolfville, defeated Mrs. H. Wilcox and Dr. Keddy, 4-6, 6-2, 6-3.
Mr. and Mrs. Austin Chute, Wolfville, defeated Miss M. Hobart and Jas. Reid, 6-3, 6-3.

IMPORTANT DECISIONS FOR CABINET
OTTAWA, July 29.—Important decisions lie before the cabinet council when, after a holiday of a fortnight, it meets on Tuesday next. First comes the question of cabinet reorganization which in some measure, at any rate, is regarded in political circles as inevitable, although it may be deferred for some time. Bye-election writs have to be issued for West Hastings, Ont., and Vale, B. C. There is the appointment of a chief inspector of banks; the Canadian National Railway board has two vacancies to be filled, while there is the proposal to be considered of adding to the present Canadian National board with a view to forming an executive within easy reach of Sir Henry Thornton.

Other matters which will have to be taken up soon concern the floating of the refunding loan in the fall; recommendations of the Turgeon commission that the operation of terminal elevators should be divorced from the Board of Grain Commissioners; the attitude of the government towards the suggestion of a revision of the trade agreement between Canada and the West Indies; Dominion governments over Imperial relations, and the nomination of a Canadian representative to the Empire food board.

There has also been some tentative consideration of a revision of the trade agreement between Canada and the West Indies, concluded in 1920. The view has been taken in the West Indies that they are not getting the service contemplated under the 1920 agreement and the proposal has been discussed that Canada should cease her subsidies to the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company and increase the service of the Canadian Government Merchant Marine. The Royal Mail Steam Packet Company recently asked for an increase on subsidy for the West Indies service. In support of the view that the Canadian Government Merchant Marine Service should be increased, it is asserted that, with the increase in subsidy, the total paid to the Royal Mail line in ten years would pay for our additional steamers.

ON PETS
A missionary friend of mine has presented me with a beautiful young man eating tiger which I prize very highly as a pet. I have him in my back yard and try as best I can to keep him there, but despite my best efforts he will occasionally, especially at night, wander away and probably eat some of my neighbors' children, poultry, etc. I hope my friends will bear with me in this matter and not do any violence to my pet as it is the nature of the beast to murder and destroy; and it is impossible to prevent him. If any of my neighbors should be so rash and vindictive as to shoot, trap or drown him I shall never speak to him again. I will pass him by on the street with my nose in the air as if he were not in existence; for I think I have a right to keep a pet and allow him to wander around and eat my neighbors' children, chickens, and birds if he is so inclined.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

Hold Inspiring Series of Meetings

The annual meeting of the Summer School of Methodists for Sunday School Workers has been held at Acadia Ladies' Seminary during the past week. The body of young people making up the school includes representatives of the various churches of the Maritime Provinces who devote themselves to a study of Sunday School problems, child psychology and kindred subjects, and has met here every summer for several years past. The course given provides for a three years study on the different phases of the work, and at the end of the school competitive examinations are held. In these, those making over fifty per cent. in all subjects receive a certificate if their work is of the first and second years, and a diploma for a completion of the course.

The faculty of the school this year comprised: Rev. Waldo C. Machum, Field Secretary of the Board of Religious Education, Maritime Baptist Convention, who lectured on "The Teacher"; and gave the Young People's Specialization Study; Rev. Alexander MacMillan, D.D., Secretary of Praise Committee of the Presbyterian church, who delivered the evening lectures on "Worship Through Song"; Miss Dorothy Alward, of Woodstock, N. B., who led the Teen Age Girls' Specialization; Miss Annie Harris, of Sclarton, on Beginners and Primaries' Specialization; Miss Alice Harrison, Elementary Secretary of the Maritime Religious Education Council, on the Junior Specialization Work.

At the morning meetings the lectures on "The Teacher" and the special studies were held and proved very interesting and instructive, while the afternoon was devoted to recreation and in the evening lectures on "Worship Through Song" were given, followed by demonstrations, games, and pageantry.

BACK TO THE SCREEN
Madge Kennedy Seen in Picture, "The Purple Highway"

Madge Kennedy, stage and screen favorite, is facing the camera again for the first time in more than two years. After her temporary retirement from the screen she started on the stage in "Train Beds", "Fair and Warmer", and "Coroner". The Paramount picture, "The Purple Highway", which will be the feature at the Orpheum Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday is Miss Kennedy's first motion picture vehicle since that time.

It is believed that this production will prove a revelation to audiences who have seen Miss Kennedy in her recent stage tractors in which she appeared as a comedienne. In this picture she stars in a given opportunity for emotional acting which has previously never fallen to her lot on stage or screen. But at the same time, there are many bright spots of humor of the sort that Miss Kennedy is known to interpret so well.

This production, it is stated, cost in excess of $225,000. A practically all-star cast, including Monte Blue, Vincent Coleman, Pedro de Cordoba and others, supports the star.

Thursday, being band night, the show will not start before 8.30.

CAMP MEETING
For over half a century the services of the Methodist Camp Meeting have been carried on in the beautiful grove at Berwick. There has grown up an institution that cannot be appreciated save by those who have passed through its gates, and these now number thousands. Here under the great trees, survivors of the forest primeval, are to be found sixty comfortable cottages occupied by families or parties of friends; dormitories offering comfortable lodging at reasonable prices; dining room; a large and imposing covered pavilion; offices and other buildings. Outstanding pulpits and platform orators of Canada and the United States have here delivered inspiring messages. The singing of a vast concourse of people in the quiet of the evening under the great trees is an unforgettable experience to those who have once heard it. In short, Nova Scotia has in this Camp Meeting a unique institution. One would have to travel far to find another place where three thousand persons can be brought together for religious services. Large numbers of old friends are expected to attend the Camp during this Old Home Summer. The principal speakers each day are Rev. Lawrence E. Emie of Melrose, Maine, and Dr. John A. Clark of St. Matthews church, Halifax. The Masonic Male Quartet of New Glasgow, led by Mr. Munson McKay, will be in attendance throughout. The dates are August 1st to 10th inclusive. The Bluesone will stop at Berwick August 1st to 11th.

--and Now Bermuda

Moir's Chocolates have had a hold on J. Bermuda Market (where by the way the best confections of the old and new continents meet in competition).

Now it's the turn of Moir's Cake: the last boat sent substantial shipments of the Plain Pound and Sultana to several of the more important stores.

Some of the orders for Moir's Wedding and Anniversary Cake carry diagrams and directions almost like a blueprint. And they are executed just as carefully. And elaborately.

Water Notice

The demands made on our water supply on account of the continued dry weather has begun to affect the town reservoirs. To avoid the possibility of a shortage of water all citizens are requested to conserve water as much as possible during the next few weeks, especially in the use of water for lawns and gardens. Co-operation by all in this matter will be appreciated, and will not necessitate the Council taking further measures to prevent waste.

Editorial

Our pulpits are our work clothes. Each of us live some kind of a sermon every day.

THE SHAD-FISHING INDUSTRY

In our issue of last week there was published an article relating to the shad fishing industry, which at one time reached considerable proportions around Minas Basin. This article should be of special interest to our readers, dealing as it does with the possibility of again making the old time occupation a lucrative proposition.

Some of the older residents well remember what would be deemed incredible today that Wolfville at certain seasons of the year was quite a fishing centre. During each summer for several weeks a dozen or more boats and their crews were actively engaged "drifting" for shad. Late in the day, as the tide served, these boats with their nets neatly packed away, set sail for the fishing ground and returned to port the following morning well laden with their harvest of shining fish. In those days the usual price for shad when sold at the door was "eight cents each or three for a quarter." If one wanted a larger number they could be purchased for five dollars a hundred—the pick of the catch.

In the year 1875 the catch of this fish in Canada amounted to 3,340,000 pounds. Today it has practically reached the vanishing point. The other day in a local store a few shad were being offered at twenty cents a pound—a fairly good fish weighing from three to five pounds.

The decrease of the shad in this section is credited to different causes. One of the most likely, in our opinion, was the introduction of the method of catching in weirs. By this means not only were the full grown shad caught by the thousands every tide but the half-grown were taken in equal numbers and allowed to perish. Had proper safeguards been used or had the fishermen themselves realized the mistake they were making shad-fishing in this section would today be a profitable occupation.

OURSELVES TO BLAME

There appears to be a disposition of the part of some of our provincial exchanges to fix the responsibility for our diminished representation in the federal house upon the government at Ottawa. As we see it the result is only what is logically to be expected according to the terms of confederation. While we regret the conditions which make necessary the standing of the province in the Dominion there is no justification for an attempt to nullify a bargain that was deliberately entered into. If we are dissatisfied with the manner in which the bargain is working out for us as Nova Scotians, and inclined to rest the blame somewhere we must most assuredly look elsewhere than to Ottawa for the culprit. The policy of seeking to find a scapegoat to bear the shortcomings which are rightfully our own is neither just nor courageous.

If Nova Scotia during the past forty-six years has not made the progress that she should have done the people and the government must assume full responsibility. If the affairs of the province—with its abundant resources—had been wisely administered during that time conditions would not have been such as to require our sons and daughters to seek homes in other lands. A proper care and development of our natural resources in the interest of our own people would have kept them at home and encouraged them to establish homes and build up useful industries. The responsibility must be placed where it properly belongs, and for the future we must seek to profit by the mistakes of the past. Sins both of omission and commission have prevented Nova Scotia from taking its rightful place in this Canada of ours, but it is not yet too late. In other lands our sons have demonstrated their ability to make good and there is no reason why given the same opportunity they might not have been instrumental in developing the capabilities of their own province to an equal or greater degree.

BUILDING A COMMUNITY'S BUSINESS VOLUME

The advertising "game" is more and more becoming the telling factor, the barometer if you please for finding the business pulse of a community in general. Along with tidy streets and well kept business houses, should go the well filled advertising columns of the local newspaper. No community can reach a high degree of prosperity without the local newspaper, as likewise no local newspaper can experience true prosperity without the co-operation of the prosperous business people of the community. Advertising systematically and persistently followed shows real value in the increased sales of any business house.

Recently a friend of THE ACADIAN who had prepared an effective advertisement and published it in THE ACADIAN the week before stated that, as a direct result of that advertisement he had experienced several days of particularly good business, better in fact than he had ever enjoyed, and these are times when people do not part with their money freely.

There was nothing surprising in this for us, because publishers know the mission of their columns and what they will accomplish. Ask any newspaper worker who has inadvertently made an error or mis-statement. He is immediately prodded and jibed and kept busy explaining matters for days to come, even though the error covers only two lines in print.

Oh, yes, we newspaper people are well aware that advertising—the commodity we have to sell—is effective. When business concerns who do not advertise, or who advertise spasmodically, wake up to the sales-building power of a definite newspaper advertising policy, we will have a better community.

ARE WE SATISFIED?

A satisfied community is in a mighty bad fix. It is stagnation. A satisfied community and a satisfied people don't stand much chance these days. A community cannot grow ahead of its civic improvements. The improvements must lead the way, the growth will follow. Of this there is no question.

NO ROOM FOR MALICE

There is no room in the breast of a newspaper editor for malice. He of all men, learns the lesson of forbearance. He spends a lot of time in keeping out of the papers, items that would hurt, or bring a blush of shame or sadden unnecessarily the heart of some wife or mother or friend.

A high aim in community thought, a high purpose in community activity, and a high quality of community hospitality are worthy goals for Wolfville.

THE STORY SHOULD BE TOLD

We have on the one hand the assurance of one of the members of the Ontario Government that British capitalists are prepared to apply capital to the development of Canadian natural industries, and on the other the hope raised by the editor of the Canadian Mining Journal that the goldmining industry of this province may be revived. Evidently what has to be done is to interest British capital specifically in our resources. If the old abandoned gold fields of the country can be made at length to yield profits and provide employment, some steps ought to be taken to bring the two together. It seems to us that the Nova Scotia Government through its department of industries and immigration has a piece of work indicated here for it to do. Perhaps the Department of Mines might help.

Certain individuals can do something to help the movement along, but it is big enough, and sufficiently in the interests of the province at large, to justify definite steps on the part of the Government. Apart from what certain men of a speculative turn of mind may do in their own interests in this connection, it is not to be expected that there will be much initiative on the part of individuals. In any case the agency best fitted to do the work thoroughly is the agency that has some direct responsibility for the development of the country.

How many financial people in London know anything about our gold resources? If it is true that there is a real opportunity to develop them properly, it would be at least a first step to do some publicity that would properly inform such people as are most likely to be effectively interested. There never was a time when it was more necessary than it is now that every available thing we can put our hands on should be turned into money, and apparently there is a hope here lively enough to justify the Government in doing some constructive publicity work.

As a beginning it ought not to cost very much to let something be known regarding expert opinion on the possibilities of our gold fields. It would surely be a pity if the opportunity were to be allowed to go unutilized while everywhere else enterprise is being shown in making opportunities available to those who can make use of them. We hope that the very utmost use will be made of the opportunity which now seems to be presented in connection with gold mining.—The Maritime Merchant.

THE HOUSE BY THE SIDE OF THE ROAD

There are hermit souls that livewithdrawn
In the peace of their self-content;
There are souls, like stars, that dwell apart
In the fellowless firmament.
There are pioneer souls that blaze their paths.

Where the highways never ran—
But let me live by the side of the road
And be a friend to man.

Let me live in a house by the side of the road.

Where the race of men go by—
The men who are good and the men who are bad.

As good and as bad as I.
I would not sit in the scorners' seat,
Or hurt the cynic's ban—
Let me live in the house by the side of the road
And be a friend to man.

I see from my house by the side of the road.

By the side of the highway of life,
The men who press with the order of hope.

The men who faint with strife;
But I turn not away from their smiles
nor their tears—
Both parts of an infinite plan—
Let me live in a house by the side of
the road
And be a friend to man.

I know there are brook-gladdden meadows ahead.

And mountains of wearisome height;
And the road passes on through the long afternoon
And stretches away to the night.
But still I rejoice when the travellers rejoice,
And weep with the strangers that moan,
Nor live in my house by the side of the road,
Like the man who dwells alone.

THE TIME TO ADVERTISE

There is nothing so mysteriously funny as a newspaper advertisement. The prime, first, last and all the time object of an advertisement is to draw custom. It is not, was not, and never will be designed for any other human purpose. So the merchant waits until the busy season comes and his store is so full of customers that he can't get his hat off, and then he rushes to the newspaper and puts in his advertisement. When the dull season gets along and there is no trade and he wants to pay his rent, he takes out his advertisement. That is, some of them do, but occasionally a level-headed merchant puts in a bigger one and scoops in all the business while his neighbors are worrying to pay the bills.

There are times when you couldn't stop people from buying everything in the store if you planted a cannon behind the door, and that's the time the advertisement is sent out on its roly mission. It makes light work for the advertiser for a chalk sign on the sidewalk could do all that was needed and have a half-holiday six days in the week, but who wants to favor an advertisement? They are built to do hard work, and should be sent out in dull days when a customer has to be knocked down with cold, hard facts, and kicked insensible with bankrupt reductions and dragged in with irresistible slaughter of prices before he will spend a cent.

Write this down where you'll fall over it every day. The time to draw business is when you want business and not when you have more business than you can attend to already.—(Ex.)

PLAN SPECIAL TRIP TO THE MARITIMES

Montreal Party Will Visit Historic Places in Nova Scotia

(From the Halifax Herald)
A special excursion to the Maritime Provinces is being planned by Henri Bourassa, publisher of "Le Devoir", Montreal, according to F. G. J. Comeau, General Passenger agent of the Dominion Atlantic Railway. The party will consist of from 150 to 200 people from Montreal and the vicinity and they will visit the historic places in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

The special train, by which they will travel, will consist of nine or ten cars in all including diners, sleeping cars, etc. The train will leave Montreal on August 17 and is scheduled to arrive in Truro early Tuesday morning, August 19, and at Grand Pre at seven a. m., on the same day, where a stop of three hours will be made to enable the visitors to take in the scenery of Memorial Park and the surrounding country. The party will then proceed to Annapolis, where two hours will be spent in visiting Fort Anne Park and museum. The next stop will be made at Weymouth where they will be met by a delegation of Acadians. At Church Point a further stop will be made before continuing on to Yarmouth, where the train is expected to arrive at 10.55 the same evening.

The return trip will be made via the Halifax and South Western Railway to Halifax, arriving in the city at seven a. m., August 21. The party will be in the city until 10 p. m., when they will leave on the Canadian National Railway on the return to Montreal.

This is the first trip of its kind from Quebec and many will see the historic sites of the province for the first time. "Nova Scotia should be the playground of Quebec and Ontario and the further western provinces in the summer. We have the climate, scenery and recreation that is needed to bring tourists to the province and we are going to have them," said Mr. Comeau.

DEMAND FOR LUXURIES PARTIALLY RESPONSIBLE FOR DEPRESSION IN BUSINESS

Investigation by Quebec Retail Merchants Shows that Automobiles, Betting, and High Living are Cause of Present Conditions.

MONTREAL, July 22.—The increasing demand for luxuries is partly responsible for the present depression in business, according to M. Lapointe, Secretary of the Quebec Division of the Retail Merchants Association of Canada, who has recently been investigating this question for members of the Association.

"The great difficulty is that people without the means insist on maintaining and operating motor cars," declared Mr. Lapointe. Members of our Association whose customers have not been purchasing as much as usual have, on making enquiry found that automobiles, betting on race horses, high living, or some form of extravagance, have been taking the customers' money with the result that the merchants suffer.

"We have learned that expenditures on automobiles alone amounts to millions a week in this province, and this is money that formerly went to the small merchants and into the banks." Serious thought will be given to these matters at the Dominion convention which opens in Ottawa on August 18. Quebec was not alone with the gambling problem but reports from various other parts of Canada, Toronto particularly, indicated that the gambling problem constituted a distinct menace to business, Mr. Lapointe said.

THE EUROPEAN RED MITE

Sometimes during the summer months it will be noticed that the leaves of apple trees and, to an even greater extent, of plum leaves have lost their normal deep green color and have become paler in appearance. Examined closely, the leaf will be seen to be covered with innumerable fine whitish blotches, most noticeable on the upper surface. As the trouble develops further the leaves become brown or bronzed and, from a distance, may appear to be covered with fine road dust. In its severest form there may even be an extensive drop of the leaves, a dwarfing, paling and consequent reduction in yield of the fruit and a further reduction of the next year's "set".

If the leaf from an infested tree be examined beneath a magnifying glass, there will be found a tiny 8-legged, dark red or blackish, hairy mite, the mouth parts being usually paler in color and white dots on the back at the base of the long hairs. In addition to the mites themselves, the cast skins of the mites and the tiny particles of voided excrement will be seen adhering to the leaf. The small red eggs may be found during the winter months adhering to the twigs and smaller branches about bud scars and in crevices. As the blossom buds show pink in the spring they emerge and feed upon the leaves. There are several generations per year which overlap, the entire life being accomplished in about three weeks during the warmest weather. The duration of the egg laying period is from one to two weeks, while the mites require about the same length of time to reach the adult stage. The active egg laying period of the adult also extends over two weeks or more. The eggs are laid on the leaf, being fastened to it by a few silken strands. In the latter part of the season the mite is often brought under control by a series of natural enemies. Dry seasons seem to favor their development. It has only been found doing serious damage in isolated orchards in Nova Scotia, especially in the dry season of 1921 and again in 1924. Bienheim's Ribbons, Cooper's Market and Golden Russet seem to be especially subject to attack. Much of this injury this year is being attributed to dust injury.

Control. While miscible oils have given satisfactory results, summer sprays are more practical under our conditions. Where the pest is sufficiently serious to warrant the application of the regular summer sprays of fine sulphur (commercial concentrate diluted 1-40) applied (1) when the blossoms are showing pink; (2) when the petals fall and (3) two weeks later, will keep it in check. Where danger of burning exists from the use of this material wettable sulphur 30 lbs. to 100 gal. (as recommended in the "Spray Calendar") seems to have a very good effect and may be substituted for the last application, the last two or for all of them. A combination of these two materials has been recommended, viz., lime sulphur, 1 gal.; wettable sulphur, 8 lbs.; water, 100 gals.; which should be safe and effective. Sulphur dust has some slight effect but is not satisfactory, while Bordeaux dust has no effect whatever upon the pests.

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER MEN ADVERTISE CANADA IN FRANCE

LONDON.—That the Canadian weekly newspaper party has made a very deep impression on French business men and politicians during their visit to France in the opinion of an American newspaper man who discussed the matter with Roy Sayles, secretary of the association. The members of the party speak very highly of their busy and interesting trip. On the continent they were entertained by the King of Belgium and Marshal Foch.

Splendid music was provided by Miss Claire MacDonald, piano, and Smith brothers, of Windsor, violinists. The proceeds will be used to help defray the small debt on the courts.

DIARY OF MARGARET D. MICHENER

Aug. 8, 1849—Ann and I went to visit Mrs. Vaughan in the afternoon, and called in at Mrs. Elder's coming back to see Nancy. We met Ezra at Mrs. Vaughan's gate coming for me to go to keep house for his mother; while she goes for a trip with Hibbart; so I came down and agreed to stay. Mrs. Hines, Aunt Sally and others were in to bid her "Good-bye."

Aug. 9th.—We arose quite early this morning. Mary and Hibbart packed up and started before the children were up. They go to Halifax first, then to Sidney, Fredericksburg, St. John and then home, expecting to be gone about two months. So here I am at home with my family. Ezra, and Silas Hibbart are at school, Simeon asleep and Rodmond is watching me writing. I have just borrowed a book from Mrs. Beckwith called "Animal Physiology," by Dr. G. Hamilton.

Aug. 11th. The children are playing about so I will write a few lines. I am quite disappointed, not being able to go to the lecture tonight. A man by the name of Griffin from the States lectured last night on Electricity, Galvanism, and Magnetism. He also explained how the telegraph works. All were much interested; the house was filled. Tonight he lectures on "Animal Physiology."

12th.—I left the younger children with Ezra and went up to Sunday School this morning. Only two of my scholars were there besides Jane, who took Nancy's class, as she was sick. After S. School I came home, but Ann stayed to meeting. Mrs. Beckwith called to tell me that Mr. Griffin was to lecture at three o'clock. He had taken part in the services in the morning and she liked his talk very much. Mrs. James came in and said she would not go as she did not believe such stuff. Mrs. Manson said he was a Universalist and that was enough for her. John came up from Olivia's and we went to the meeting. I asked Mrs. Manson if she had not going and she said no, she had got enough in the morning. I could not find out anything that displeased them but the fiddle story. He said persons were differently organized; some had talents for one thing, and some for another. He spoke of a Mr. Hall being naturally of a serious turn. He was a good man and a Christian, yet for all that he had some enemies; one in particular who sought his life. Knowing Mr. Hall would be passing a particular place he lay in wait for him in some bushes close by. He saw him coming with his head bowed as if in prayer—being a very devout man—and his enemy thought "perhaps he is praying for me," and came out and told him so. He then came out and told his design and his thoughts to Mr. Hall, the outcome being he was converted and became a new man. Mr. Griffin then told of a Mr. Belcher who was naturally of a very lively turn. After preaching one Sunday—being much exhausted—he came home, took his fiddle, and went into his cellar and played to rally his spirits and quiet his nerves. It had the desired effect, and he was able to preach again in the afternoon. He had been speaking that whatever we did, should be done to the glory of God, so he said the man in the cellar playing his fiddle was doing as much for the glory of God as the man who prayed when walking the street, for the former was enabled to preach in the afternoon, which might do much good; and Mr. Hall was the means of turning his enemy from the error of his ways. Some did not like this talk as they have such an antipathy to a fiddle and think it very sinful to have anything to do with one. I liked all he said very much. After meeting John and Ann came home with me and stayed till after tea, when Ann went down to Olivia's to stay all night as Sarah is sick. John went up to the lecture in the evening. Maria had been sent for to go to her father's as she thought he was dying. Abigail is there.

13th. This morning I heard a carriage drive up and who should come in but Mrs. Will Harvey and Sarah Ann Harvey from Newport, and Susan and Rebecca Michener from Mount Denison. They stopped till after dinner, then went to Mrs. Toye's. I like Will's wife very much, she is so pleasant and sociable. I think Sarah Ann was home sick. It is raining quite hard. I must now read a while.

14th. Ruth Holmes came to see me today and as it keeps raining she is to stay all night. Sister Ann also is here. Granny is very poorly. I hope she soon may be better.

HOW THE WORLD IS SEEING CANADA

At the Wembley Exhibition pictorial representations of the various activities of Canada, almost true to life, give visitors from all parts of the world a very good glimpse of the great possibilities of this Dominion. From almost innumerable views we have selected three. The top view shows the pulp and paper industry, while the middle shows fruit growing, and the lower one gives an agricultural view. The attendance at Wembley since the opening of the Exhibition three months ago is 7,500,000. This is a daily average of about 22,000 less than the attendance at the Canadian National Exhibition.

CROP REPORT

Crop conditions in the Maritime Provinces are described as follows in a bulletin issued by the Bank of Montreal under date of July 24th:

NEW BRUNSWICK—The hay crop will be light. Potatoes continue to make good progress. NOVA SCOTIA—Crops generally need more rain. Hay is now under way and yielding an average crop. Annapolis Valley apple droppings are heavy and the crop is now estimated at about 25% less than last year. PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND—Crop conditions generally are good. Hay will be under average.

BUDGET FOR AUTO EXPENSES

A great deal of time and expense will be saved to a motorist who takes pride in his car through the use of a budget system. In the operating expenses of a car, the major items might be listed as gasoline, oil, tires, supplies and repairs. If an owner is interested in getting the maximum service out of his car at a minimum of cost consistent with such service, he will be willing to take the time to study the machine and learn how to operate best.

A gentlemen riding with an old Irishman came in sight of an old galloway, and to display his wit said: "Pat do you see that?"

"To be sure I do," replied Pat.

"And where would you be today if the galloway had it's due?"

"I'd be riding alone," replied Pat.

Hardly a week passes that a newspaper is not under the necessity of leaving out several items that are handed in too late for publication. When the items are left out the contributors are surprised and often "hurt". If these items were handed in early and not delayed until an hour or so before publication, disappointment would be averted.

15th. Father Harding is here today; he is to preach tonight. I will miss that. I feel daily the need of more learning and desire more useful knowledge.

16th. Maria Chandley went home again today, as her father is very sick. Aunt Sally is there. Mrs. Lakeman and daughter came to Mrs. Beckwith's to see him last night at Mrs. Michener's.

17th. This is the most pleasant day for over a week. Mother went down to Joe's this morning by the new road. The "Wanderer" came in today.

spectacle will be a march of contingents with their flags from every part of the British Empire to a probable number of 12,000 boys; a giant choir of 1,000 singers, whistlers, and leg-slappers, a huge cub display and pageants of Empire.

The pageant of Canada is to be assisted by the Hudson Bay Company, so that the accessories will be correct in every detail. There will also be 250 Australian scouts, a true corroboree, and 150 South African scouts, showing South African episodes.

In addition, there is to be a fair providing an interesting exhibition of scout arts and manufactures, including "muffin-tiggies", made by crippled scouts.

CAR CATASTROPHIES

Here lies the remains of Percival Sapp. He drove his car with a girl in his lap. Lies slumbering here one William Blake. He heard the bell, but had no brake. Beneath this stone lies William Raines, ice on the hill, he had no chains. Here lies the body of William Jay. He died maintaining his right of way.

GREAT MASSING OF BOY SCOUTS AT EXHIBITION

Twenty British Dominions and Colonies will be Represented at Wembley Display

LONDON, July 28.—Boy Scouts from all parts of the Empire are making their home at Wembley from August 1 to 8, the occasion being the Imperial Jamboree. The displays will be confined to the boys, scoutmasters refraining from taking any active part in the actual proceedings.

The Prince of Wales, as Chief Scout for Wales, will join the camp on August 2, and remain under canvas with the lads for two days. He will occupy a special compound with the Chief Scout, Sir Robert Baden-Powell.

On Sunday, August 3, the scouts will take part in a massed Divine service, at which addresses will be given by the Archbishop of York, the Prince of Wales and the Chief Scout.

Sir Robert Baden-Powell states that there are now 320,000 scouts in Great Britain and Ireland, and 400,000 in the Empire altogether. In the last 15 years their world membership had grown to nearly 2,000,000.

In the wonderful pageant of British youth, which the jamboree typifies, 20 British dominions and colonies are to be represented. The week will provide a wide variety of attractions, and will be occupied with competitions, displays, conferences, etc. An unprecedented

THE INVERTED PYRAMID

BY
Bertrand W. Sinclair
Author of "North of Fifty-three"

"That's not true. You know it isn't," he shook her roughly. "We're both thoroughbreds. It isn't class that counts. It's character. All the rest is just trimmings. If accident of birth made me a rich man's son, is that any reason why I shouldn't make my own way and my own place in the world if I have to choose between that and conforming to class prejudice in so important a thing as picking a wife? What sort of weak saphead do you think I am?"

"It's no good, Rod," she answered doggedly. "You simply don't understand. You never had any experience of poverty, of struggle, of sordidness. You'd lose a lot that even money can't buy. And after a while you'd begin to wonder if it were worth while. The world well lost for love is a fine poetic fancy, but nothing more. I tell you quite frankly I'm afraid of love. It brings pain. It brings all sorts of bitter things to men and women, this mating passion. I have an instinct about these things. I won't marry you. I won't be carried away by any sort of feeling for you. I don't even want to see you again. What's the use? Oh, what's the use of our even thinking about it?"

She broke away from him with a wrench of her body. The door slammed behind her. He heard the quick patter of her feet on the uncarpeted floor. Then silence. Rod had a clairvoyant vision of her flinging herself on her bed, of her shoulders shaking, of sobs strangled in her throat. And he stood bewildered. What had seemed so simple had become disastrously complex, bearing implications of grief and pain and loneliness beyond his comprehension.

But there seemed a note of finality in that scene. He could not break down her defences, tenuous as they were. And so, his heart filled with a strange, heavy ache, Rod walked down to his canoe and put out into the channel. Across the way the red roof and gray gables of Hawk's Nest beckoned him home. Home—where there were no problems that could not be solved by the writing of a check. Rod thought sardonically.

The inevitable reaction set in. A passionate resentment against Mary Thorn began to burn in him. She was a fool, he said. He himself a greater fool to abase himself before her. But neither objection nor self-styled epithets could rid him of that heavy feeling in his breast.

CHAPTER IX

On an afternoon a week later Rod sat in the library nursing a book, a cigarette, and some curiously mixed reflections. A week end party had come and gone, leaving Laska, her maid, and a friend at Hawk's Nest. Whereupon Phil had taken the Haida and departed for a point up the coast. The old restful quiet had succeeded that forty-eight hours of good-natured clamor, the laughter and drinking and dancing, in which Rod, morose and broody, seemed to detect an irritatingly hectic note. He was glad they were gone, glad to see the Kowloon clear of Mermaid Bay. Grove was getting beefier, more assertive, more arrogant. He was so cocksure, so frankly contemptuous of things and persons outside his own sphere.

Yet by all accounts Grove was becoming a reckonable power in the affairs of B. C. There was a dash and sweep about his operations that moved men to admiration. He had been tremendously successful in all he undertook, far more so than Rod had believed possible. The Norquay Trust Company was a three-ring circus and Grove was the ringmaster. Lesser men and concerns leaped and curvetted when he cracked his whip. He was fond of cracking the whip. Rod cynically observed Rod eyed his father, sitting on the other side of a period-strewn table. He wondered what his father thought of Grove now. But he knew that his father was thinking of quite another matter—for which he was himself responsible. He continued to look at Norquay senior with a mildly expectant curiosity. The library was the council chamber of the family, the place chosen for edicts, discussions of policy, administration. From childhood Rod and his brothers had, so to speak, taken their medicine in that pleasant book-lined room. His father now bent a placid eye, slightly quizzical, on his youngest son.

"I really don't see the necessity," Norquay senior remarked at last. "Of course a gentleman need not necessarily be a drone. On the other hand one doesn't need to do a laborer's work in order to acquire knowledge of labor. You've finished school, of course. You have seen a little of the world and as time passes you will undoubtedly see a great deal more. Still, if you've keen on this, I'll speak to Phil. He can give you charge of a camp."

"I don't want to take charge of a camp," Rod said. "I'm not competent, for one thing. I'd either make a hash of it, or leave it all to a foreman—which is not what I'm after. What I mean by going into the woods is to go in arms work; take over jobs as I master them. I want to know all there is to be known about timber, from the standing tree to the finished product."

His father continued to eye him. "What's the idea for such thoroughness—this starting in at the bottom and getting blisters and experience together?"

The root of this expressed resolve lay in a folio of notepaper on a stool beside Rod's chair. But it was not a matter he could make clear, or even discuss with his father. At least, that was how he felt.

"I want to see the wheels go round," he answered lightly.

"Very well," his father agreed. "You shall. I'll speak to Phil. He'll see that you get a job. I take it that's what you want."

"The job's incidental," Rod replied. "I've been thinking about this for some time. I'm not dull. I have an idea I'll pick things up quickly. I want to know something about timber, about methods of handling it, about the men who actually do the handling. I want to get it first-hand. Even a university training should be an advantage in that."

"No doubt," Norquay senior permitted himself an indulgent smile. "If you're so interested in timber, it's a wonder you didn't take a forestry course. The Lord knows we need forestry experts in B. C."

"Why?" Rod inquired. It had no bearing on his purpose, but the remark aroused his curiosity. "To teach them how to get one prime stick to the booming ground without destroying twice as much more," his father snorted. "To inaugurate a campaign of necessary reforestation. Outside of two or three concerns, logging in B. C. today is an orgy of waste. They are skimming the cream of the forest, spilling half of it. Kicking the milk-pail over now and then, refusing to feed the cow they milk. However, we don't do that. I can show you lists we logged when I was a young man that will bear merchantable timber by the time your children are grown my boy. But to get back to our sheep. You surprise me. If you'd gone in for wild-eyed art, it would have seemed more natural. I never could make you out, my son. You were always a bit dreamy. Sure this isn't just a whim? Want to see what makes the wheels go round, eh?"

"Precisely," Rod agreed. It was as far as he would go. "Well, it won't do you any harm," his father rambled on, "and you may acquire a useful technique. We are expanding more or less in spite of a conservative policy. Phil would undoubtedly appreciate a second-in-command before long. He has his hands pretty full. On the whole, I'm rather glad you've taken this notion. I won't last forever, and I'd like to see you and Phil solidly established before my mantle descends on Grove. Timber and land are good, solid foundations."

"What about finance?" Rod asked idly. "That seems pretty gorgeously productive, pater. Does it ever strike you that Grove may outgrow the regulation Norquay mantle?"

"If he does, it will be because he has made a more capacious one for himself," Norquay senior smiled complacently. "I imagine Grove's well able to run his own show and live up to the Norquay tradition, too. He has a genius for affairs."

"So it seems," Rod commented dryly, "and the 'affairs' he was thinking of were not the ones his father had in mind. I wouldn't fancy it myself."

"As a matter of fact, he's young and knows quite what he fancies," his father drawled. "I had a fancy for the law and politics. Two years of reading Blackstone and a term in the Legislature cured me of both. Take your Uncle Mark. He was past thirty before he found his real bent. Follow your natural bent, Rod, whatever it is. You have plenty of time and backing. This beginning on the ground floor may work out. Knowledge of any sort never comes amiss."

So that was settled. When his father presently left the room Rod picked up and opened the folio. He read over forty or fifty closely written sheets, knitting his smooth young brow over the phrasing. "Won't do—only in spots. It's dead. I've got to breathe the breath of life into these people. And I don't seem to know how. He sprang to his feet, paced the floor. "All I know is what somebody has done, but not how they did it—why they did it. And language. What's the good of a 'teen-thousand-word vocabulary if you've got no peg to hang it on, only the old pegs other people have used till they're all worn and shiny? I'm like a man with a craving to paint beautiful things he can see, with a whole box of color-tubes, and no idea how to apply his colors to get the effects he wants. Or a finely made steam engine all ready to run, greased and oiled and water in the boilers, but no fuel to make steam. I don't know people, humanity, only one kind. I don't know life; only one comfortable groove of it. I don't know anything that really counts, except that I don't know much. I wouldn't be stuck with this, if I did." He faced about, frowning on the pile of written sheets. "I'd be able to make a thing go the way I wanted it, whether it was a story or a girl. I can't do either. I don't know how—and I've got to find out how. As long as I stay in a nice, fenced pasture I never will find out. It's all too cut and dried. Too many taboos. Too many fences. I've got to break through. I'm too much like the pea in the pod—I am green, the pod is green, all the world is green."

He sat down in a chair, clasped his hands behind his head, and lost himself in concentrated thought. The history of Rod's family was part of the history of his native land, in so far as Anglo-Saxon occupancy had made history. The Norquay foothold had been the first individual one established by a white man on the Pacific between Spain to the south and Russia to the north. That century and more of far-seeing purposeful struggle had culminated in the possession of every material benefit men live and work and sometimes vainly die to grasp. Blood had been spilled, storms braved, great risks faced to win that security. To Rod, ever since he could remember, these things had been real, vividly colored episodes enacted under the auspices of the high gods of adventure. He was imaginative, creatively imaginative. Old Roderick Sylvester, the barque Hermes, the sea-otter trading, the bride who fled her English home to fare into strange seas for love, the Chilcotina on their bloody forays, the wooden blockhouse, the first course of masonry, the vast influx of gold-seekers in the Cariboo rush of '58, the completion of Hawk's Nest in all its comfortable permanence—these were not simple things he knew as part of his antecedents. They were realities, as if they had happened yesterday, under his own eyes. They moved him strangely, deeply. He could reconstruct in his mind all the men and women whose bones lay underground about the great red cedar lived and moved and had being once more. He could see them as clearly as he saw Phil and his father and his mother.

He had been trying to capture those visions, those personalities, those old stirring times so crowded with pregnant action. He had been trying more or less earnestly for a year and a half. And he had failed. He was aware of his failure. The human equation somehow evaded him when he put pen to paper. He couldn't put his finger with surety on the well-spring of human motive. He hadn't the key to character. Rod had more than a casual acquaintance with literature in two languages. He knew Balzac and O. Henry alike, Homer and George Ade, Dux Maurassant and the Brothers, Flaubert and Anatole France, Ibsen and Tolstoj and Gorky, Kipling and Hardy and Dickens and Poe. He read these writers, and he saw that they created men and women, creators of pain and passion, even as God created them. He perceived that they did it, that with deft strokes they clothed their skeletons with flesh and blood, and breathed the breath of life into them, so that they strutted and sighed and fought with an emotion-compelling intensity. But he could not do it himself. And he passionately desired to catch and transfix those gorgeous pictures his brain evoked from that pioneering past.

It could be done. It wanted doing. Rod had always wanted to do it. Unconsciously he had been preparing for the task. He had meant to do something like that ever since a day when he had laid down his book and told his father that some one ought to write the Iliad of the pioneers, an epic of the men and women who with vision and high courage had tamed a wild land for their children's children, those bold spirits who shrank from nothing, by land or sea that promised a reward for enterprise.

Rod thought he knew why there was no magic in his pen, why these magnificent visions eluded capture. It was not a reasoned conviction. He felt his lack instinctively. The first faint labor pains of creative effort apprised him of his need; to plunge into the agitated pool of life instead of viewing it from a distant eminence. That was how the manner of life he had led from childhood struck him now, as a view from afar. Rod was sophisticated enough to realize that his world was one exclusively occupied by a limited number of fortunate people, holding their preeminence largely by sheer inertia. Statisticians observed that the university delving in economics and sociology, had informed him that for one very wealthy family there were a hundred subsisting in various degrees of comfort, a thousand and but a step beyond poverty. Accident of birth, or inherent superiority? How was he to know? How could he know unless he got outside the fences, prohibitions, the unyielding rigidity of his own class? It was rigid, Rod perceived; although that perception had only become clear to him through Mary Thorn's eyes. It had a fateful of superiority which might or might not be valid. Even aside from that, how could he father things that were universal above and apart from the narrow race—men's hopes and fears and aspirations—unless he established a contact with men? And Rod's instinct, the wise, fundamental instinct of an unwarping nature, urged him to make that contact first among the lowly, where the sweat and strain was greatest. There was the raw material. The Norquays—a little more perhaps than any of their circle—were the finished product. Rod wanted to know the process—and the by-products. That was why he chose the woods. It might be well to know timber. But it was better to know men. And the way to know men was to live among men, to work with them, to stand with them—if such a thing were possible—upon a common ground. Afterward he would know what he knew.

So for himself Rod, at the age of twenty-two, defined the approach to knowledge: through experience—plus imagination. And to him it seemed that with the first rebuff life had dealt him, it had also given him a clarified purpose, a definite mark to shoot at.

CHAPTER X

Rod found work in a logging camp a thing that tried his vigorous young body to the utmost until he hardened somewhat to the task and learned what every manual labourer must learn—to strike a gait he could hold all day and not one that sapped his energy in two hours. He found relief he had not expected in physical exertion. He could stop thinking about Mary Thorn. He took to work as some men take to whisky when a dumb ache oppresses them or some haunting memory will not let them be. And Mary Thorn did haunt him so long as he could look across from Hawk's Nest at that weathered cedar house. He told himself that he was a fool to feel that way. But logic had nothing to do with feeling. Irrational or not, it existed. Something in him had burned up full flame. Love, the mating instinct, whatever it was, had settled upon an object and refused to be directed elsewhere. There was more than sex involved. He did not know precisely what else, but he was sure of something above and beyond the urge of the flesh, however strong that might be. Because he couldn't say to himself that there were other girls and be consoled. Another girl wouldn't do.

He couldn't rid himself of the notion that he and Mary Thorn were made for each other. His mind went questing forward and backward and verified the emotional prompting. They had been shaping their own destiny for years. Or was it being shaped for them? He couldn't decide. But he could trace some indefinable influence drawing them together since childhood. There had always been a subtle pleasure in being together, a community of personal interest, a flowing of thoughts and feelings along the same channel that transcended the material factors in their lives. The material factors were prying them apart now. Rod saw that. He knew Mary's inflexibility once she determined on a given course. He had beaten his will against that in simple, childish matters. She would not be driven. She would walk her own road. She had always been a silently determined, lovable little devil. Rod told himself sadly. She was herself uniquely, neither a pattern nor an echo, and he would have loved her for that alone in a world where girls were very largely patterns or echoes, armed for conquest in the arena of men—with the sole weapon of their sex.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

AUGUST 1
O LORD, THOU ART MY GOD: I will exalt thee, I will praise thy name; for thou hast done wonderful things.

Thou hast been a strength to the poor, a strength to the needy in his distress, a refuge from the storm, a shadow from the heat.—Isaiah 25: 1, 4.

AUGUST 2
THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD: I shall not want. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.—Psalm 23: 1, 6.

AUGUST 3
BLESSSED ARE THE PURE IN HEART FOR THEY SHALL SEE GOD.—Matt. 5: 8.

AUGUST 4
HE THAT BY USURY AND UNJUST GAIN INCREASETH HIS SUBSTANCE, HE SHALL GATHER IT FOR HIM THAT WILL PITY THE POOR. A FAITHFUL MAN SHALL ABOUND IN BLESSINGS; BUT HE THAT MAKETH HASTE TO BE RICH SHALL NOT BE INNOCENT.—Proverbs 28: 8, 20.

AUGUST 5
IS NOT THIS THE FAST THAT I HAVE CHOSEN? TO LOOSE THE BANDS OF WICKEDNESS, TO UNDO THE HEAVY BURDENS, AND TO LET THE OPPRESSED GO FREE, AND THAT YE BREAK EVERY YOKE?—Isaiah 58: 6.

AUGUST 6
BETTER IS A DRY MORSEL AND QUIETNESS THEREWITH THAN A HOUSE FULL OF SACRIFICES WITH STRIFE.—Proverbs 17: 1.

AUGUST 7
COMMIT THY WAY UNTO THE LORD; TRUST ALSO IN HIM; AND HE SHALL BRING IT TO PASS.—Psalm 37: 3, 5.

When the day is a bore and your mouth is parched, you're tired. That's a rule of nature, and it prescribes refreshment. And when you take a pleasant cooling drink of something good, you're suddenly on your toes again. Take nature's hint when you're thirsty. A nice cool drink of Tennant's Oxola is exactly the prescription you need. At the first mouthful the fatigue will lift. Announcement is made that the British government has abolished the corporation profits tax, which was introduced four years ago, and it is reported that the industrial markets have already benefited materially from the annulment. Similarly in the United States recent taxation reductions have relieved the burdens on industry.

Unfortunately Canadian legislation bearing on business and industry which must compete with Great Britain and the United States has increased rather than reduced taxation handicaps. Our legislators seem to be unaware of the true situation and of the requirements. Furthermore the leaders of organized business industry have failed to familiarize the public with the necessity of ridding business of unnecessary handicaps. Business baiting is a popular and profitable political game. As a consequence, we are laboring under heavy difficulties in competing with older and frequently more powerful trade rivals.—Financial Post.

A water leak at the bottom of the radiator may be a sign that a new washer is needed in the radiator filler cap. If water spills over the neck, either when being added or when boiling over, it will run down inside the shell and drop out the bottom of the radiator. For the sake of a five cent washer the motorist may therefore go to the expense of having a perfect radiator "repaired".

Dimming auto lights at night when passing another motor car is only common courtesy. This is something many drivers have neglected. It is a dangerous practice to pass with the lights burning full, even though the car is equipped with non-glare lenses. The majority of the lenses now sold as non-glare are not effective. The glare from practically every headlight blinds the driver in an oncoming car. Every motorist should get into the habit of dimming his lights on approaching another auto.

Many car drivers have made it a practice to dim their lights when within 150 yards or so in order to signal the oncoming motorist that his lights are glaring. Then it is all right to switch back on to the bright light until within 75 yards or so when both drivers should dim their lights. It is a safe plan and should be adopted by all car owners.

OTTAWA.—In parliament and government circles there is a growing appreciation of the value of the tourist traffic to the country. A vote of $25,000 to promote tourist traffic in the Maritime Provinces had an easy passage through the House. The same is true of a vote of $10,000 for an enquiry into the promotion of trade with the West Indies. The purpose of this is to see a better trade treaty can't be negotiated.

A good feature of the situation the awakening to the fact that something more than government action required to make business better.

Do you wish the world were better? Let me tell you what to do. Set a watch upon your actions. Keep them always straight and true. Rid your mind of selfish motives. Let your thoughts be clean and high; You can make a little Eden. Of the sphere you occupy.

Here and There

The value of Ontario's mineral production for the first quarter of the present year, as shown by a report of the Department of Mines, has increased $2,333,000 over the corresponding quarter of last year, the total being $11,575,151 and $9,242,151 respectively. Silver was the only metal of importance to record decreased production during the period under review.

Among the passengers sailing on the Canadian Pacific liner "Montana" for England on July 8th, was E. W. Beatty, Chairman and President of the Canadian Pacific Railway. While in England, Mr. Beatty is scheduled to address the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World on July 17th on the subject of "Building an Empire with Advertising."

Excellent reports as to the hunt in the Caribou district of British Columbia are being received. W. Pridham and Fred. Shaver recently returned from a month's hunt in that district with an excellent specimen of grizzly bear weighing about 1,400 pounds. They saw moose, caribou, deer, black bear, muskox and grouse, and consider the district a hunter's paradise.

Addressing the annual meeting of the Bond Dealers' Association of Canada at Toronto recently, the president declared that during the months ending May 1st, $507,000 worth of Canadian bonds had been distributed, this being by far the largest total issued in the Dominion in any post-war year. The most striking feature in this connection is that about 89 per cent. absorbed within the borders of Canada.

On June 18th Winnipeg, Manitoba, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its incorporation. From a struggling frontier village of the 70s, Winnipeg has forged into the position of third largest city in the Dominion, with continental reputation as a railroad centre. It is the Gateway of the West and 100,000,000 pounds of prairie grain pass through it to the head of the lakes, whence it goes to the markets of the world.

Twenty-five officers and 200 men of the Royal Navy, from the special mines squadron headed by H.M.S. "Albatross," enjoyed a trip through the waters over the Canadian Pacific coast when their ships were anchored at Vancouver recently. The officers, who made a point, in true naval style, of seeing and doing something, were enthusiastic over the scenery at such show-places as Victoria and Lake Louise, which they considered the most beautiful they had seen in all their world cruise.

In addition to the encouragement to the raising of high-class swine, which was fostered by the government of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Canadian Pacific Railway is awarding a champion cup to the Boys' and Girls' Clubs winning the club competitions in these provinces. The cup is for annual competition, and will become the property of the club which won for three years in succession. Medals will be awarded to the winning teams. This year winning teams resident on the Comox lines will also be granted a trip to the Royal stock show at Toronto.

The Arts, Science and Letters Society of the Province of Quebec recently sent a questionnaire to the various parishes of Quebec and surrounding counties, seeking information as to the age and size of families residing in those territories. It was discovered that the family of Ismael Bedard had remained on the same land at Charlesbourg since 1629, that the largest family in Montmorency was that of the Laliberte, of St. Jean, Island Orleans, who has 20 children living, and that Joseph Gagnon, St. Pierre, Island of Orleans, has the greatest number of living descendants, 210.

REHABILITATE CLARKE BROS. MILL. The Bear River Mill, Ltd. are installing in the neighborhood of $300,000 for the rehabilitation of Clarke mill at Bear River. Several new machines are being installed which will increase production but will mill on a more efficient basis and reduce overhead. A pipe line for applying of water is already practically completed. The line is about 10 miles in length and runs from the branch of the Bear River to the mill. It is expected that alterations will be completed and the mill in operation by October 1st.

FULL OF FUN, ROMANCE AND ADVENTURE

Some persons prefer comedy as the piece de resistance of their motion picture bill of fare; many like pure romance; others confess a desire for adventure and hair-raising "thrillers". All of these classes will find their wishes fulfilled in "Painted People", a First National picture featuring Colleen Moore, which is coming to the Orpheum Theatre on next Monday and Tuesday. Clarence Badger directed it from the Collier's Weekly story, "The Swamp Angel".

The author, Richard Connell, is one of the foremost humorists of the day and he has supplied laughs without end. Treading the footage is a love story of tender appeal—one that will be relished by every type of theatre-goer, with Ben Lyon playing opposite the star. And there are plenty of thrills, which include the stopping of a runaway horse and a sandlot baseball game. These elements combine to make one of the most fascinating productions of the current season.

HELPING THE HOME PAPER

"Blessed are the merchants who advertise because they believe in it and in their business; for their prosperity shall increase many fold," sagely remarks an exchange and adds: "Blessed are the country correspondents who send in their well written items every week; for fame of their friendly neighborhoods shall go abroad in the land." "Blessed is the woman who sends in a written account of a party or wedding; for she shall see the details of a function and the names of her guests correctly reported."

"Blessed are all those who do not expect the editor to know everything but who call up and tell him whenever an interesting event occurs for them; for they shall have a newsy paper in their town." "Blessed are they who get their copy in early; for they shall occupy a warm place in the editor's heart." "Blessed are those who co-operate with the editor in his efforts in behalf of the community; for their town shall be known far and wide as a good place in which to live."

SUMMER CHAUTAUQUA AT KENTVILLE

Chautauqua with its big tert of attractions is coming to Kentville for its annual summer week engagement, beginning on Saturday evening. Readers of THE ACADIAN have seen the announcements which have appeared in these columns during the past few weeks. The program this year is said to be an unusually attractive one and includes a fund of educating and elevating entertainment. Those who are able to attend the full series will effect a great saving by the purchase of a season ticket at three dollars, as the general admissions if taken singly would total three times that amount. This year, we understand, the guarantors have assumed the entire financial responsibility of the undertaking and any surplus that may result will be applied to the Children's Play Ground fund. With the opportunities for transportation that now obtains there should be a good attendance from Wolfville and adjoining sections. Read the adv in this issue.

Every man who has anything to sell—be it goods, or labor, or time—should make a bid for business, by inviting customers through the columns of the newspaper.
