The Lost Will; OR, LOVE TRIUMPHS AT LAST.

CHAPTER XXIV.

"Dearest, I have not spoken of my past to you because—well, one shrinks from recalling anything that is painful, shameful; one tries to hide it from the woman one loves, because to speak of it is to cast a shadow over her. And yet sometimes I have thought it would be better—it would be only honest—to tell you of the cloud which has darkened my life."

"Don't tell me," she said quickly, for she shrank from receiving the confidence to which only a woman who loves a man is entitled.

"Yes, I will," he said, after a pause of hesitation, and taking her hand. "Some day the impulse would come on me, perhaps after our marriage; I should tell you, and you might consider that I ought to have told you before. Now, when I was a young man, quite a young man, scarcely more than a boy, I made a fatal mistake. There was a young girl, the daughter of a petty tradesman, at Oxford—oh, I can't talk about her—to you especially; it is like sacrilege. Let it suffice that I was infatuated with her, that her coarse and common beauty exerted that kind of spell to which so many a young man falls a victim."

"But why tell me all this?" said Nora. "I know something of the world, of men—the many temptations they have to face, the follies. I can guess the rest. It is all over now. Why give yourself—and me—the pain of talking about it?"

"Yes, it is all over," he said, with a movement of his white hand, a toss of his head. "But I don't think you guess the whole of the story, the extent of my folly. Nora, I—married her."

Nora did not shrink; indeed, the whole of her became rigid. It was not that she was startled or horrified, but that the revelation had placed him, in her mind, in a different position from that which he had occupied a few moments before. Although she did not love him, she admired and respected him, regarded him as a kind of Bayard, a knight without fear and without reproach; indeed, she had tried to strengthen that respect for and regard of him by comparing him with other men—say, Jack Chalfonts, who had been caught by the mere prettiness, the showy charms of the village girl, Maud Delman. And now this Bayard, this spotless knight, was

Try Making Your Own Cough Remedy

You can save about $2, and have a better remedy than the ready-made kind. Easily done.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (10 cents worth). Pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is 10 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made, and saves easily $2. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and, for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

proved by his own confession to be no better than the general run of men. The glamour she had striven to weave about him was dispelled as by a vulgar breath, and in an instant he had sunk in her estimation, and was just a common-place man, masked in a handsome face and a graceful form. She sat quite still, her eyes fixed on the ground, her heart like lead, and his voice came to her robbed of that intonation of dignity and pride of rank which, though she did not love him, had held something of a charm for her.

"I married her," he said, with the bitterness of self-contempt. "We lived together for a short time; I had kept our marriage secret. Oh, I must have been ashamed of her from the first. She did not care for me, and only married me because she thought she would be a 'fine, grand lady,' as she phrased it, and, of course, she was disappointed when she found that I was poor and could not give her all the things she had set her heart on. We parted, and she went abroad. I made her an allowance. It was not an illiberal one; it made me poorer than I had been; and she went her own way, bribed to silence. Her course was a foolish and a vicious one. Repeatedly, I had to send her additional sums of money."

He paused and drew his hand across his brow, then he said, in a lower voice:

"She is dead. She died quite recently, a few weeks ago. You will remember that I went up to London? It was free, that my release had come, death. It was when I knew that I was free, that my release had come, that I let my heart speak to you. It was full of love for you, almost from the first day I saw you. I tried to crush it down. I think, dearest, you must have noticed the constraint, the forced coldness of my manner. Nora, I was in misery, in agony. Then the news came, and— Ah, well, it is all over. The penalty of my folly has all paid. I am not only free, but I am consoled for all that is past by your sweet, pure love."

There was silence. Nora's heart was still as heavy as lead; she was burdened by the consciousness of the disillusion which his revelation had worked.

"Are you sorry I have told you, Nora?" he asked, feeling the constraint of her rigidity, her irresponsiveness.

"No-yes," she replied, in a voice that sounded hard and unsympathetic even in her own ears. "It wasn't necessary."

"I know," he assured her. "I know that that tender heart of yours can only feel pity for the folly which cost me so much. I am glad I have told you; the doing so has lifted a weight off my mind. I feel now that, indeed, there is nothing between us."

Nothing between them! To Nora it seemed as if a great barrier had risen between them, reared on the foundations of the ideal which she had made of him, and he had destroyed.

"So now you see why I do not attach any importance to that past of yours, that old poverty and—want of position," he said, regaining his usual composure and characteristic air of dignity. "Compared with mine, it is as the snow to the mire. Nora, we will never speak of this again. At one time I felt as if I should never be able to get away from the dark shadow which this cloud cast over us; but our mutual love has lightened, brightened all my life, and from this moment I am going to forget everything but the life of joy and sunshine which spreads before us."

He bent and kissed her brow—Nora had moved so that his lips did not reach hers—and rose, drawing on his gloves slowly, with the air of ease and leisure which was habitual to him.

When he had gone Nora paced up and down her room, as she had paced so often of late. The spell, the slight spell in which he had held her, was dispelled. She was not going to marry a man without speck or flaw, a stainless knight, but a man who had proved himself a fool like other men, and had besmirched himself by a marriage with a common "no-class" girl. She threw up her arms with a gesture which expressed her longing to be free. Why, even Jack Chalfont's rose superior in his folly to Lord Ferndale; for Nora divined that Maud Delman was neither vicious nor self-seeking. Oh, to be free! And yet, how could she demand freedom, when the man who loved her had been so frank and candid, when her money would restore the Abbey, his ruined fortunes?

At that moment, strange to say, Nora wished herself back in the wilds of Australia, in Melbourne, in the London slum—wished herself anywhere, again poor and of no account. It seemed to her, at that moment of his disillusionment, of her revolt against a marriage with Ferndale, as if the fortune into which she had stepped was a kind of ban or curse. She bathed her face and went downstairs.

The door of Mr. Chalfont's den was open, and, aimlessly she went in and sank into the cheap and uncomfortable Windsor chair in which Chalfont used to sit and smoke his pipe. The simplicity, plainness, of the room, the absence of the luxury which characterized the rest of the great house, appealed to her and soothed her; it recalled her own simple, poverty-stricken past. As she sat there looking absently at the common furniture, the pipes on the mantelshelf, the cheap paraffin lamp which, from respect and reverence for the dead, had been left in its place, she wished that all this wealth of hers could take to itself wings and fly away, and that she could be free to live her own life, to marry whom she pleased or not to marry at all.

The longing for freedom, for an unshackled condition, was torturing her. A sheet of paper lay on the desk before her; she drew it towards her and looked at it. Of course it was a sheet of memoranda in Jack Chalfont's handwriting. She flung it from her and eyed it as if it were a basilisk. She sat thus for some half hour or so, when gradually there grew upon her consciousness a faint smell of burning.

She looked round the room, but there was no suggestion of the cause. There was no fire in the grate; for, though the autumn had come, this room was in the sun and the fire had not been lit. Mechanically she rose and moved about, trying to trace the smell, and presently she was assured that it came from the wall behind the safe.

Like most of the rooms in the Hall, the den was panelled by wood, and it occurred to her that in some way or other, one of the panels behind the safe had become ignited. She was pondering over this solution of the enigma when James opened the door suddenly, and at sight of his mistress stopped short and stammered:

"I beg your pardon, miss; but something's gone wrong with the fire in the still-room, and I thought—there was a smell of burning, miss—that perhaps it had set light to this old wall. You see, miss, the fireplace is just at the

After Being Relieved of Organic Trouble by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Oregon, Ill.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for an organic trouble which pulled me down until I could not put my foot to the floor and could scarcely do my work, and as I live on a small farm and raise six hundred chickens every year it made it very hard for me."

"I saw the Compound advertised in our paper, and tried it. It has restored my health so I can do all my work and I am so grateful that I am recommending it to my friends."—Mrs. D. M. ALTERS, R. R. 4, Oregon, Ill.

Only women who have suffered the tortures of such troubles and have dragged along from day to day can realize the relief which this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, brought to Mrs. Alters.

Women everywhere in Mrs. Alters' condition should profit by her recommendation, and if there are any complications write Lydia E. Pinkham's Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice. The result of their 40 years experience is at your service.

back of this wall, and there's no telling in these old houses—" "You mean that the chimney is on fire, that something may have been set alight? The still-room. Let me see; it is at the back of this one."

"Just behind this wall, miss," said James. "It's just as likely as not that a brick might have got loose, and that the fire might have set alight to a bit of the partition."

As he spoke the smell of burning grew stronger, and a wisp of smoke rose from behind the safe.

"There you are, miss!" cried James. "It 'as set light to the partition. Oh, dear me, what had we better do?"

"Call some of the servants; tell Forbes the fire is behind the safe there. It must be got away from the wall at once—at once—do you hear?" James ran out, and in less than a minute the butler and half-a-dozen other men were in the den.

"You must drag the safe away," said Nora, with the quietude and self-possession of a woman who has seen men draw upon each other, who has helped to extinguish a prairie fire; in short, the coolness and readiness of one who has been confronted by serious accidents.

The men eyed the heavy mass of iron and steel dubiously; but they were spurred to effort by Nora's "Be quick, please!" and, throwing themselves on the safe, they managed, with no little difficulty, to drag it some six inches or so from the wall, and disclosed a burnt and smouldering patch on the wooden panelling.

"I thought so!" exclaimed Nora. "Bring some buckets of water, quick! We shall soon put it out."

"They rushed from the room in a confused body, and Nora knelt down to examine the burning spot. As she did so something, a paper, lying on the floor, as if it had fallen when the safe had been removed, caught her eye. She picked up the paper and thrust it inside her belt mechanically. In a minute or two the men returned with some buckets of water, which they threw on the smouldering wood; there was a hissing, some flecks of steam, and a belch of smoke; they threw on more water, and presently the smoke ceased; they had extinguished the fire. The men drew back and surveyed the success of their efforts with an air of satisfaction.

"It hasn't done much harm, miss, thank goodness," said Forbes. "We've put it out on the other side; and—ah—it's all right. Don't be frightened, miss. It wasn't anybody's fault; these old houses—"

"No, no, it's all right, Forbes," said Nora. "We will have a brick wall, a fireproof wall, built up between the fireplace and the partition. What's that?"

"That" was the village fire-engine, which, attended by the amateur fire brigade and a large following, had come snorting up the drive.

"Oh, the fire brigade," said Nora, with a smile. "I'm afraid it will be awfully disappointed. Give them some beer and something to eat, Forbes. Tell them it is all over, and thank them for coming so quickly."

At this moment Mrs. Feltham came in, hurriedly and affrightedly. "It's all right, dear," said Nora soothingly. "We have been having a little fire. I'm so sorry you weren't here to enjoy it. Yes, it's all over; and there's not much damage done," she added, pointing to the charred wood.

"Oh, my dear, how dreadful!" exclaimed Mrs. Feltham. "How fortunate you found it out in time! The place might have been burned down. And how frightened you must have been! Won't you come and lie down and rest, now it's all over?" she added beseechingly; for not even yet had she realized that Nora was unlike the ordinary run of young women, and not in the least neurotic.

AUSTRIA AND PEACE. BASEL, Oct. 29. A semi-official note issued at Vienna to-day on Austria's reply to President Wilson says, Austria was obliged to conform to the methods of President Wilson who has successively applied to the three members of the triple alliance and act apart from her allies. The monarchy which has formally adopted President Wilson's line of action shares his opinion as was shown by the Emperor's manifesto to the peoples which in proclaiming the realization of President Wilson's programme, the complete reorganization however, can only be carried out after an armistice. If Austria-Hungary has declared herself ready to enter into negotiations with other states that does not necessarily signify an offer of a separate peace. It means that she is ready to act separately in the interests of the re-establishment of peace.

AUSTRIAN NOTE RECEIVED. WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. The Austrian note asking for an armistice and peace terms, was received by cable to-day at the Swedish Legation for delivery to the State Department. The text is said to be identical with that carried by the Associated Press from Basel, Switzerland, yesterday. Word of the arrival of the note came just as the Cabinet was assembling at the White House for the usual Tuesday meeting, at which both the Austrian plea and the latest German note were expected to be discussed.

BRITISH PRESS VIEW. LONDON, Oct. 28. Austria's reply to President Wilson viewed here as an unconditional surrender. Although recognized as an act of the greatest moment as denoting the breaking up of the Hapsburg power, the main interest in the transaction lies in the effect it will inevitably have on the position of Germany.

FRENCH PRESS VIEW. PARIS, Oct. 29. "The capitulation of Austria" is the varying caption with which the morning newspapers precede Count Illus Andrássy's note to President Wilson. The editorials of the newspapers, while accepting this conclusion, urge caution lest there be a hidden snare behind the Austrian offer.

ITALY CONTINUES VICTORIOUSLY. ROME, Oct. 29. The battle begun on the Piave River Monday by Italian and Allied troops continuing victoriously, the war has announced to-day, Italian troops formed the heights of Val Dobbiaden.

BRITISH CONTINUE ADVANCE ON ITALIAN FRONT. LONDON, Oct. 29. The resistance of the Austrians against the British in the Italian theatre appears to be weakening, according to an official communication issued to-night. The text of the communication follows: "The advance of the tenth army continues, according to plan. The enemy's resistance appears to be weakening considerably. Early this morning the enemy was attacking the line on the River Montebelluna with a number of machine guns, which cavalry and infantry forced a withdrawal."

FRENCH PRESS VIEW.

PARIS, Oct. 29.
"The capitulation of Austria" is the overriding caption with which the leading newspapers precede Count
Andrassy's note to President Wilson. The editorials of the newspapers, while accepting this conclusion, urge caution lest there be a hidden snare behind the Austrian offer.

BATTLE CONTINUES VICTORIOUS-LY.

ROME, Oct. 29.
The battle begun on the Piave River yesterday by Italian and Allied troops continuing victoriously, the war was announced to-day. Italian troops stormed the heights of Val Dobbiaden-
e. They also carried the heights of Monte and entered Susegana. Numerous guns were captured. French cavalry assaulted Mont-Planar and captured it.

The resistance of the Austrians against the British in the Italian theatre appears to be weakening, according to an official communication issued to-night. The text of the communication follows: The advance of our south army continues, according

British cavalry and infantry forced a passage of the river, northeast of Vazzola, making prisoners of several hundred of the enemy. The Porto Buffalo aerodrome is reported to be in flames. The British raided enemy trenches opposite Asiago, but found them unoccupied. The Italian armies operating north from the Montello are making good progress.

BIG BATTLE ON PIAVE FRONT.

VIENNA, Oct. 28.
(Via London, Oct. 28.)—A great battle is raging on a front of thirty-seven miles east of the Brenta, according to the official statement to-day from Austro-Hungarian headquarters.

ALLIES SEASH AUSTRIAN DEFEN-CES.

WITH THE ALLIED FORCES ON
THE PIAVE, Oct. 28. (By the A.P.)—
The last lines of the Austro-Hungarian resistance on the central portions along the Piave River were broken today by the British, French and Italian forces.

IMPORTANT TOWNS TAKEN.

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS,
Oct. 29.—Conegliano has been taken and the whole line has been advanced between that important railway and road center and Val Dobbiaden.

15,000 PRISONERS CAPTURED.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS ON THE PIAVE, Monday.—Fifteen thousand prisoners had been taken by British, Italians and French up to late to-day in their advance across the Piave which for the third time in one year is the scene of a desperate battle. This time, however, the tables are turned against the Austrians who are steadily being pressed back from the eastern bank of the river.

FRENCH CLOSE IN ON GUISE.

PARIS, Oct. 29.
General Debenedy's first army continues to close in on Guise, and has captured the German first line trenches and the barracks and hospital south of the Chateau in the town of Guise, according to the War Office statement to-day.

ONLY ARTILLERY ACTIVITY.

LONDON, Oct. 29.
Artillery duels and patrol encounters were the only activity on the British front during the night, Field Marshal Haig reported in his official statement to-day.

FRENCH TAKE PRISONERS.

PARIS, Oct. 29.
In an advance west of Banogne,
northeast of Laon, the French to-day took 850 prisoners, according to the war office announcement to-night.

ENEMY MACHINES DESTROYED.

LONDON, Oct. 29.
Thirty-two enemy machines were destroyed yesterday and ten were driven down out of control, says the British official communication. "Dealing with aerial operations" issued tonight.

APPEAL TO GERMAN ARMY.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY
NORTH WEST OF VERDUN, Oct. 29.
—"Hold fast, an armistice has not yet been concluded," is the word sent to the German troops by Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, chief of the general staff, according to a captured document now in the hands of the Americans. The commander's appeal reads:
"German soldiers, be vigilant. The word armistice is current in the trenches and camps, but we have not yet reached that point. To some the word represents a certainty, to others

it is even a synonym of the peace so long desired. They believe we no longer depend on them, their vigilance is relaxed, their courage and their endurance as well as their spirit of defiance toward the enemy are diminished. "We have not yet reached our aim. The armistice has not been concluded. The war is still on the same ever, now more than ever you must be vigilant and hold fast. You are upon the enemy's soil and on the soil of Alsace-Lorraine, the bulwark of our country. In this grave hour the fatherland relies on you for its prosperity and for its safety."

ANOTHER GOVERNMENT.

PARIS, Oct. 29.
The executive committee of the German parties in Austria has formed a provisional government, according to a despatch from Vienna, and has decided to send a separate note to President Wilson. The Arbeiter Zeitung of Vienna declares that Germany and Austria-Hungary will capitulate without delay.

WANT GERMAN TROOPS REMOVED

PARIS, Oct. 29.
Czecho-Slovak deputies in the course of an audience with Emperor Charles of Austria, asked that Austro-German troops be removed from their portions of the empire, and that Czecho-Slovak regiments be returned according to a despatch from Vienna.
It is said they made it clear to the Emperor that an internal revolution might ensue if the request was not granted.

INDEPENDENT HUNGARY.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 29.
An independent and anti-dynastic
state has been formed in Hungary, under the leadership of Count Michael Karolyi; in agreement with the Czechs and South Slavonians, according to Vienna reports received by the Politken. In a speech at Budapest Karolyi declared he had presented his programme to Emperor Charles who refused to accept it. Karolyi thereupon put into effect his plan for an Independent State.

TURKEY MAKING SEPARATE

LONDON, Oct. 29.
Turkey has independently presented peace proposals to the Entente nations, according to a report from Constantinople, forwarded by the correspondent at Copenhagen of the Exchange Telegraph Company. The negotiations are expected to end soon, it is added.

POINTS OF ARMISTICE AGREED ON

LONDON, Oct. 29.
The Versailles conference, according to the report circulated in London this afternoon, has agreed on the main points of the armistices, which will now be considered by the military commanders. The final peace terms it is stated, will be submitted to Germany simultaneously with the armistice terms.

AGITATION IN THE REICHSTAG.

PARIS, Oct. 29.
Extremely important decisions were taken at the meeting of the Crown Council, held under the Presidency of Emperor William at Berlin on Saturday, says a despatch from Zurich to Le Journal. The greatest agitation prevails in the Reichstag where groups of deputies, the message adds, are sitting continuously. Considerable nervousness, it is stated, prevails in German military circles as a result of the decision reached at the Crown Council. The German Government, it is declared, is determined to resort to extreme measures.

FEDERAL COUNCIL APPROVES BILL.

COENHAGEN, Oct. 29.
The German Federal Council has approved the bill amending the Imperial constitution in the form as adopted by the Reichstag, according to a Berlin telegram.

SOCIALISTS GETTING BOLD.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 28.
Exciting scenes occurred in the German Reichstag during the proceedings of the House on Friday and Saturday.

"The question cannot longer be evaded," said Dr. Cothen; "War with the Hohenzollerns or peace without the Hohenzollerns. World revolution will follow on world imperialism and world militarism and we will overcome them. We extend our hand to our friends beyond the frontier in this struggle." Another socialist, Otto Kutto Ruchle, was called to order for declaring that the emperor must abdicate. He retorted, "a call to order won't save him from the criminal court." State Secretary Croeber, and War Minister Major-Gen. Schenck, both declared that there was nothing in the reforms which would endanger the firm structure of the army, or the personal relationship between the Prussian King and the officers.

BEAVERBROOK RESIGNS.

LONDON, Oct. 29.
Baron Beaverbrook, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, and head of the propaganda department of the government has resigned according to official announcement made to-day. In a letter to Premier Lloyd-George tendering his resignation, Baron Beaverbrook says it is due to ill-health and the necessity of undergoing an operation for enlarged glands. Baron Beaverbrook is a Canadian and as Sir Max Aitken was official witness with the Canadian troops on the front in France throughout 1915. In December 1916 King George conferred a peerage on him and he assumed the title of Baron Beaverbrook.
He has been very close to the Lloyd-George government and has filled various offices under it. On February 10 last he was appointed Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster and head of the propaganda department.

URGE UNITY TILL ENEMY OVER-THROW.

LONDON, Oct. 28.
(British Service.) Resolutions unanimously passed at the recent conference of French, Italian, Belgian and British sections of the inter-allied parliamentary committee recommended that the nations now united in the fighting for liberty should maintain their close-association until the dangers threatening them had been removed by the complete overthrow of the enemy powers.

RIOTERS ATTACK GERMANS.

ATHENS, Oct. 29.
Rioting has broken out at Constantinople and Smyrna according to a despatch from Mytilene Island, or Lesbos, to the Patria. At both cities the despatch adds, Germans were attacked.

TO THE LAST FARTHING.

LONDON, Oct. 29.
Sir George Cave, the British Home
Secretary, to-day gave a long account in the House of Commons of Germany's ill treatment of British war prisoners, and her continued violation of agreement concerning prisoners of war. The Home Secretary declared that Germany ought to be made to pay for these violations.

A PROPER MEASURE.

LONDON, Oct. 29.
As part of the terms of an armistice the Evening News says it understands the Allied nations will insist upon the surrender of the German fleet including all the German submarines and upon the occupation by Allied forces of all the fortified towns
on the Rhine.

Wilson's Ultimatum.

Germany has not yet replied in any form to President Wilson's last note, which was practically an ultimatum, if we except the yesterday's despatches contained in the Imperial German Government's reply for time in which to prepare its answer. The Hun is now firmly impaled on the horns of a diplomatic dilemma. Should he accept the terms and principles enunciated by Mr. Wilson, such acceptance will mean unqualified and unconditional surrender. On the other hand if he rejects them entirely, the war will continue until Germany is completely exhausted. The President leaves no hole through which the wily German can crawl. He has met the new "peace offensive" squarely and puts the onus of continuing the war on the German Government. There is no way of escape, because to once again quote this famous document, "the only armistice (he the President) would feel justified in submitting for consideration would be one which should leave the United States and the Powers associated with her in a position to enforce any arrangements that may be entered into, and to make a renewal of hostilities on the part of Germany impossible." The Allies also must be assured of "unrestricted power to safeguard and enforce the details of the peace to which the German Government has agreed."

In these words, pregnant with import, the German Government is told that the conditions demanded by the Allies are such as will make the aggressive power of the enemy armies impotent for future evil, and that such guarantees will be exacted as will ensure the keeping of the agreement, should Germany accept the terms laid down. These guarantees may be either by the occupation of German territory or the demand for the handing over of the German Grand Fleet. In any case there is subject humiliation for the proud and arrogant German.

The transparent deception of the German Chancellor's talk of a Government of the people is at once challenged by the United States President who goes straight to the kernel of the matter, by addressing his note to the German Government, but making the appeal directly to the German people. The President repudiates the claim that responsible government has been established in Germany, and plainly points out that the Kaiser and his military swashbucklers are the real masters of that country, and their word cannot be trusted. While they control the country and Government and dictate the policies of the latter, and continue to stifle public opinion, there will not be any consideration of or arrangement for peace negotiations. Only in terms of absolute surrender will there be any treating with autocracy and militarism.

There is no latent ambiguity about the President's utterance. It is an ultimatum in every sense of the word, and one which is unexampled in its sternly and plainly outspoken language. The choice for Germany is between the Kaiser and all that he stands for, and peace, and the answer must come, not from the present rulers who are merely the puppets and mouthpieces of Kaiserism, but from the lips of the German people themselves through their popularly elected representatives. No need to wonder that the German Government requests an extension of time.

In the meantime, it is understood that the Allies have given their approval to this latest note, which represents, in a general sense, their view of the situation. Press comment, particularly in the United States, is so far scanty, the whole of newspaperdom realising that the matter is now in the competent hands of the Allied War Council, and their decision will be the last word.

Released on Bail.

Mr. Jas. Walsh, who was in charge of Reid's launch, when she collided with the row boat on the harbor Monday night, and who was arrested by the police yesterday, was arraigned before Judge Morris at 3.30 p.m. yesterday. Hon. W. J. Higgins, K.C., appeared for him, and the I.G. for the prosecution. He was not asked to plead, and was remanded, bail in the sum of $20,000, $10,000 on his personal bond, and $5,000 each from Walter Ladley, and Wm. Watson, of the Reid Mtd. Co., being accepted. The preliminary hearing was set for Wednesday next, Nov. 6th.

The Epidemic.

Five cases of Spanish Influenza were admitted to Grenfell Hall Hospital yesterday, two in the morning, and three later. Mr. Wm. Collins, Duckworth Street, Mr. Sexton, Livingstone Street, Miss Murphy, Caul's Lane, Mrs. Kennedy Flower Hill, being the patients. Two were removed to the convalescent ward, two were released, and one death occurred, Wm. Collins, who had been admitted in the forenoon, being the victim. He was a Jeweller, being employed at Scater's, and was a son of the late George Collins, of the G.P.O. staff. No cases have yet appeared in Trepassey. New cases are developing every day in Gambo, and every house in Duck Cove and Middle Brook is affected. Two deaths occurred there during the morning, and a doctor has been sent. Several cases and two deaths have been reported from Jersey Side and Argentia, Placentia, is affected. Some forty cases have been reported at Pouch Cove, but no deaths have occurred. At the different hospitals, improvement is being shown by most of the patients.

Fishery Reports.

Harbor Grace reports the arrival of the following vessels from Labrador: Isabella, Horse Hr., 1,700 qts.; Ungava, Grady, 1,500 qts.; Peerless, Seal Islands, 470 qts.; Ruby, Grady, 250 and Marion, Corbett's Hr., 320 qts.
Between Cape John and Brent's Cove 45 motor craft are still operating. The bait supply is limited, no herring having struck in that section to date. The total catch is 3,820 quintals, with 20 qts. for last week.
Fortune, Burin District, reports a total catch of 7,470 quintals, and for last week 100 qts. Thirty dorles and shiffs and seven boats are now employed and a fair sign of cod is in evidence. Herring bait is obtainable and weather continues favorable.
A number of fishermen who were on the local grounds yesterday took some good fares, which were disposed of through the usual channels.

Grenfell Hall Hospital.

No deaths were reported this morning. One case, a man from the schooner Novelly, was admitted. One or two cases are expected from the Sable L. this afternoon, and two or three others from elsewhere. Three patients were removed to the convalescent ward.
Reids Boats.
The Argyle has not been reported since leaving Placentia yesterday. The Clyde left Salvage at 7.30 a.m. yesterday.
The Dundee left Herring Neck at 9.20 a.m. yesterday.
The Ethel is still at Humbermouth. The Home left Lewisporte this morning.
The Melje is at St. John's.
The Sagona left St. Anthony yesterday, coming south.
The Petrel left Clarenville at 8.30 a.m. yesterday.
The Argos left St. John's at 2.30 p.m. yesterday.

Disinfect the Telephones.

We suggest to the Health Authorities that they ask every body possessing telephones to disinfect the mouthpieces of same every day, especially in those cases where many people use them. As the disease is chiefly contagious by way of the mouth and throat, this suggestion may be well worth considering.

Tell Us Their Names.

London Daily Express: A few days ago a corporal and six men of the Highland Light Infantry holding a post north of Moeuvres were surrounded by the enemy. At seven o'clock two days later the Germans were driven back and it was found that the little knot of gallant men, whom their comrades had supposed were dead or prisoners, were still alive and holding out. They were ravenously hungry. They were weary and their feet were ringed round with many corpses. It was "no surrender" for these men of the H.L.I. They had held the fort, and they had determined if they were not relieved, to try to fight their way through the enemy to the British line. Thermopylae itself was not a greater story. Heroism was not a greater hero. Their heroism is told in a few words in the official report. The names of the gallant seven remain a closely guarded secret. Let us know at once who these matchless fighters are!

Train Notes.

Monday's west bound express arrived at Port aux Basques on time yesterday.
Yesterday's west bound express left Howley on time.
Yesterday's east bound express left Tickle Hr. at 8.55 a.m.
Today's east bound express has not been reported since leaving Port aux Basques, on account of wire trouble.

Fire on the Freshwater Rd.

At 4.30 yesterday afternoon, a house about two hundred yards inside Baird's Cottage, was found to be on fire, the same being in the chimney. The owner, Mr. McDonald, was in town, but the neighbours put out the fire with a few bucketsful of water. No damage was done.

A Suspicious Incident.

London Morning Post: Defection in the shipyards, the Admiralty points out "this as all hard a blow as any of the enemy." Yes, and it is not the ignorance of that fact but just the realization of it that has brought the Clyde shipwrights out on strike. Can it be a mere coincidence that these dislocations of vital war industries always occur when things are going badly for the German in the field? Is not the unity of command to which these offensives on the home front respond too obvious to be mistaken? Has Germany any ally more faithful and obedient than the British Bolsheviki?

Gentlemen!
Have You Seen Our Window Display of Autumn Wearables?

If You have not, do so at your earliest. It will surely prove interesting. Let us tell You why:

Men's Wear, such as we are going to describe, is almost impossible for us to secure just now, and it is only keen foresight and early purchasing that enables us to put up such a complete display.

The down town window contains NECKWEAR of every variety, and you will certainly say that you have never witnessed a smarter line. Every known shade is stocked by us, and the refined tone for which our Neckwear is noted, and that better-than-the-average look that it bears, brings us a class of customers that will not go elsewhere when seeking Neckwear.

Then our Prices---Mark them: 50c., 75c., $1.00, $1.25, $1.50.

Arrow Collars, all newest Shapes, 25c. each.

O-DAY'S MESSAGES. NOON.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. A. P. to-night issued the following: In the Italian theatre, over a of nearly forty miles from the to the middle reaches of the River, the British, French and an armies are developing, with an offensive against the Austro-Hungarians, and are swiftly driving them from the mountain passes and the Austrian frontier, and as the plains east of the Piave. Northern Italy, American reserves behind the lines, prepared to aid Allies when the opportune moment comes. On all the other battlefronts the allied armies continue to be ed. In Belgium there has been fighting except by the artillery of the opposing armies, while the region around Valenciennes, the segment between the pitched battle. In whatever fighting there has however, Field Marshal Haig's has retained the upper hand, taken more prisoners and additional guns and war stores. Further the French are continuing successfully their process of levelling old salient, between the territory of St. Quentin and Bethel. Additional progress has been made by Debeney's troops, notwithstanding the violent resistance of the men who all along the front are machine guns to retard the advance of the Frenchmen toward the front lines of railway communication to the east. On some sectors Germans are slowly retreating, nowhere are the French patrols hitting the enemy to get out of set with them. Large numbers of and numerous guns have taken by the Allied troops in the battle that is in progress on the an front. The Allies, particularly British, are well across the Piave toward the Adriatic. The latest British official communication announces that the opposition of the pro-Hungarians appears to be ending in the face of attacks of British Tenth Army, which is successfully driving northeastward. Report are to the effect that an independent state has been formed in Hungary. There are also reports that they has made an independent proposal.

BEAVERBROOK RESIGNS.
LONDON, Oct. 29. (Reuter's Ottawa Agency)—Beaverbrook has sent the following letter to the Premier under October 21: For the last four I have been suffering severely enlarged glands in the neck, and been unable to go to the Minister's office. I am now faced with the prospect of immediate operation, and Mr. and Mr. Badergo, both, advise that it will be necessary for me to quish for the time being all duties. In the circumstances that it would not be fair to Majesty's Government for me to be in office, and must, therefore, resign.

REVIEW OF OPERATIONS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. The A. In Belgium there has been fighting except by the artillery of the opposing armies, while the region around Valenciennes, the engagement between the British and the Germans have savoured of outpost encounters rather than pitched battles. In whatever fighting there has been, however, Field Marshal Haig's army has retained the upper hand, and taken more prisoners and additional guns and war stores. Farther east the French are continuing successfully their process of levelling the old salient between the territory of St. Quentin and Reims. Additional progress has been made by General Debeney's troops, notwithstanding the violent resistance of the Germans who all along the front are using machine guns to retard the advance of the Frenchmen toward the important lines of railway communication to the east. On some sectors the Germans are slowly retreating, and nowhere are the French patrols permitting the enemy to get out of contact with them. Large numbers of prisoners and numerous guns have been taken by the Allied troops in the West. The Allies, particularly the British, are well across the Piave toward the Adriatic. The Italian British official communication announces that the opposition of the Austro-Hungarians appears to be weakening in the face of attacks of the British Tenth Army, which is successfully driving northeastward. Reports are to the effect that an independent state has been formed in Hungary. There are also reports that Italy has made an independent proposal.

Big Tasks by American Navy.

Washington, Oct. 21.—Details of the construction of the North Sea mine barrage against submarines, laying off an oil pipe line across Scotland, establishment of naval aviation stations from the Spanish border to the English Channel and other work of the American Navy in foreign waters, were given to the public to-day by Assistant Secretary Roosevelt, who recently returned from a visit to Europe. "The American people seem to have very little idea of the extent of our naval activities abroad," he said. "The tendency is to think merely of the convoying and patrol work our destroyers and other vessels are doing and the presence of our battleships with the British fleet. But important as this is, it is only a part of our activities and there are dozens of other things of importance of which little has been said."

The building of the Northern mine barrage was one of the biggest things ever accomplished in ordnance work, Mr. Roosevelt said. In turning out material for it a number of plants in this country were kept busy for months. Several American bases were established on the British coast to lay and handle the mines. "To save haulage of oil, the American Navy has undertaken to construct a pipe line across Scotland. "All the way from the Spanish border clear around to the English Channel we have established aviation stations so spaced that the entire coast line is covered by seaplanes and dirigibles. These stations were built almost entirely by our sailors. At each station there is an average of from 200 to 300 men.

"This aviation force and our patrol vessels have been doing such splendid work that for the past six months there have been practically no sinkings within 50 miles of the French coast. We hope to extend this patrol zone to 100 miles."

In Northern France in co-operation with the British and Belgians, Secretary Roosevelt said there had been established what is known as the Northern bombing group composed of a number of aviation units which did much to prevent the Germans from using Zeppelings and Ostend as submarine bases.

An American naval force co-operating with the British at Gibraltar is patrolling the Atlantic in that vicinity and is acting as convoy to vessels going and from Italy, Greece and Egypt. There is a flying school with several naval aviation units on duty in Italy while in the Adriatic is a large group of submarine chasers. Each naval base has its hospital, Secretary Roosevelt said, and in Scotland an entire watering place has been taken over by the Americans for use as a hospital.

"Conditions have vastly improved from what they were last year," said the Secretary, referring to the submarine menace, "but we cannot afford to let up in our activities for one single second. In regard to the respect which U-boats have shown for international law, you have but to ask any officer or man in our own or in the British or French navies. "They will tell you of, and prove to you, great numbers of actual cases where the Hun has violated every rule and every principle of humanity."

Shanghai's Bamboo Organ.

After 50 years of service the bamboo organ in the Church of St. Francis Xavier, Tungshoo, Shanghai, is still in fairly good condition. It is stated that there is one other bamboo organ in the Orient, but it is not possible at this time to secure definite information relative to its whereabouts or condition. As metal pipes are to replace the bamboo in the Shanghai organ, the noted instrument will lose much of its public interest. In a recent issue of the North China Daily News of Shanghai, the following comment appears regarding the tone of the historic bamboo organ: "It would be better if it were completely in time, for a long while, similar to the short one which gives the beauty to the tremendous 'vox coelestis' betrays the fact that it is not. Possibly it never was, for bamboo does not seem refractory stuff for organ building. Despite this, however, the tone is sweet, if somewhat 'woolly,' and the whole instrument speaks volumes for the skill of those men who, using only materials immediately at hand, were able to devise an organ pleasing to the ear and able to defy the severest test—that of time."

Laon and America.

Westminster Gazette: Many a man in General Pershing's army must feel a personal interest in the taking of Laon, for the romantic old town has a strong link with the Western continent as the birthplace of Abbe Marquette, the first white man, not to discover, but to explore, the Mississippi. In company with Joliet, the Abbe made an adventurous voyage on the "Father of Waters" in 1675, publishing a description of his journey in the following year, and was continuing his explorations near Lake Michigan when death overtook him in 1675. His quietus, at Marquette City, Michigan, commemorated the devoted Abbe of Laon.

Embargo Raised.

The following letter was posted up in the Board of Trade Rooms this morning:—
Mr. E. A. Payne,
Board of Trade.
Dear Sir,—I am instructed by the Minister of Shipping to inform you that he has received a cable from the General Manager of the Canadian Government Railways to say that the embargo on freight via Reid N.S.C. and North Sydney route has been lifted as from to-day.
T. A. HALL,
Secretary.

Runaway and Smash up.

This morning while coming west on Duckworth Street the horse of P. Winsor, owner of an express delivery, took fright and getting the bit between his teeth dashed up the street out of control. When opposite the Daily News building another horse was coming from the opposite direction, and the driver of it, fearing a collision shouted out and waved his arms. The express horse, seeing this, swerved, and ran into a telegraph pole across from the News office. The express was completely demolished by the collision but the horse continued on up the street, and was found a half hour later. The driver was unhurt.

Personal.

Mr. R. A. Young, of the News Office staff is ill.
Mr. T. J. Foran, reporter of the Daily News, has been confined to his home for a week suffering from a heavy cold.
Mr. W. H. Cullen, night foreman of the same paper is suffering from an attack of Spanish influenza, but is improving.
Mr. Geo. Andrews, linotype operator, also suffering from influenza but is doing well.

The Laughter of "the Boys."

(From the New York World.)
When the first troops marched through London on their way to the great front, a keen-witted cockney hailed them as "solemn blokes." This phrase spread. And it fitted. They were indeed serious young Yankees who came there to open in the Old World an adventure not only startlingly new to themselves but new to the history and policy of their native land. Times and the faces of the army abroad have changed since the days of those first arrivals. Our boys have found themselves and their job. They have discovered friendships, and comradery where in earlier, peaceful days, thinking across the ocean, they considered only alien throngs and queer geographical names. With the spirit of their high quest they have combined their born instinct to humor. In current magazine pages a new phrase arises, born the American occupation of France." We read of "The Liaison of Laughter" and of the readiness to a joke which "is binding the French and Americans closer together every day." After a terrific bloody struggle over the taking of a Boche-ridden village, American soldiers sent post cards into paroxysms of mirth, it is related, by appearing in a marvellous medley of straw hats, salvaged from a shell-wrecked shop. The Yankee boys were relaxing after their tense hour of war. And the incident was typical of their ever-present impulse, delightful to their French friends, to react with smiles from situations meant to be terrifying. It is no frivolous folly that our boys have thus carried into the midst of dreadful affairs. Theirs is the laughter of courage. They make a mock of fear. They gibe at peril. From the shadow of death they emerge with quaintly worded gulps. But in the light when it is on and in their hearts always they stand for love of life, liberty and loyalty among men. What power of human evil can hope to beat such laughter knights as these?

England to Demand U-Boats

London, Oct. 23.—The British Foreign Office to-day issued the following statement regarding the latest German note to President Wilson: "The reply was addressed to President Wilson. He must deal with it and determine whether it shall be communicated to the Allies. Until then, it is not desirable to make a statement officially."

The Chronicle to-day publishes the following: "England will demand the surrender of the U-boats, and France will demand the evacuation of Alsace-Lorraine, as a condition of any armistice."

When Truthfulness Pays.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Do you have a reputation for dependability and truthfulness? Personally, I do not think I have been as strong a champion for absolute truth as perhaps I ought to be. I believe in absolute truthfulness with oneself; I believe emphatically in truthfulness where interests of honor are concerned; but I am afraid I am not quite so hard on the careless little lies that we are apt to tell, as a moralist should be. And yet the other day I had a little experience which made me see the other side of the case.

She Tried to Get Her Friend's Man Away.

Among my acquaintances are two women who dislike each other. We will call them Bertha and Margaret, for convenience's sake. The reason Margaret dislikes Bertha is that once, when they were girls, Bertha did a very mean thing to her: she tried to win away a young man who had been attentive to Margaret and of whom she was very fond.

We had all heard Margaret's side of it and sympathized with her.

Recently, through another woman, we heard Bertha's side of it. As she put it, she had made no effort to win the man but he had insisted on coming to see her and had assured her he cared nothing for the other girl. It was all told very convincingly and the group of us listened, I think, with open minds. At the end of the explanation the woman who had given it asked, "Well, what do you think now?"

One Had a Reputation For Truthfulness, And One Didn't.

We were silent a moment and then one woman who has a reputation for great fair-mindedness said, "I think it sounds very possible and no doubt there is some truth in it, but all of both stories can't be true and, well, you know Margaret is absolutely truthful and you know Bertha is not. I can't help believing Margaret, and it isn't because I like her better, either, for I don't. What do the rest of you think?"

There were four of us there. We all knew the two girls and like them both. And we all gave the same verdict.

A Friend In Need.

Now that what a reputation for perfect truthfulness will do for you. It will put conviction into your words, it will stand by you when circumstances are against you.

I have a neighbor who is that sort. Sometimes it annoys me, a little, and yet when I want honest advice I go to her. And when she gives me a compliment, as she sometimes does (for I do not mean that she is the kind who speaks only disagreeable truths), I glow all over because I know it is really meant.

After all, a reputation for dependability and truthfulness is rather a good thing to have, isn't it?

Milady convalescence has not the slightest ambition of her former self, to be sure, but she is bound to take at least a trifling interest in her appearance, as she grows stronger each day in her lounging chair.

At first she is, perhaps, rather loath to look in the mirror, and frowns at herself as she does so. It is quite natural that she should have lost some of her vanity and glorious appeal, while confined to the sick-room.

Milady convalescence is bound to frown, first at her chair, which has been slightly neglected by the nurse who was anxious only for her recovery. A shampoo should be given as soon as the patient is able to stand the exertion.

WHEN HEINE RUNS.

When Heine starts to run, Gee whizz! He leaves behind a cloud of dust. He throws away his cartridge belt. His derby hat of iron felt. His iron cross, his trusty gun. And needs, for hope upon the run.

He never stops to greet his friends. Or ask which way the road goes. And if a woman old and fat Gets in his way, she's promptly downed.

To dodge her would be losing ground.

When Heine feels that run he must. He leaves behind a cloud of dust. Along his trail you'll find his coat. The collar that adorned his throat. The packknife in his rusty sheath. With which he used to pick his teeth.

When Heine gets a running fit. He makes a splendid job of it. He'll run in ditches and in squares. And even shed the shirt he wears. For Heine, when he's talking flat. Believes it is best to travel light.

The dogs go scampering from his way.

The chickens flee as best they may. The frightened pigeons take the sky. And horses turn to let him by.

The wildest thing beneath the sun Is Heine, when he starts to run.

The Toiler's Champion

(By "FERRIS.")

THESE THINGS HE SAID UNTO THEM WHO IN THEIR HEARTS BELIEVED IN HIM, AND WHO WERE PREPARED TO FOLLOW HIM, EVEN UNTO DEATH, HAVING ACCEPTED HIM AS THEIR DELIVERER.

A great writer has said "that the pages of the world's history are littered with the bodies of men who have opened their mouths to the poisoned spoon." This is indeed correct as far as Mr. Coaker is concerned, for he has not alone opened his mouth to the poisoned spoon, but he has swallowed the spoon as well.

To-day the Toiler's Champion is associated with the very same men he cast out from amongst his political followers as undesirable, as things unclean. The country to-day is governed by the very same men Mr. Coaker held up to public gaze as embodying "the basest and vilest" in public life of this Dominion. The Union which was started as a means of uplifting the common toiler, of easing the burdens which so heavily oppressed them, is to-day controlled by the very same men who, according to Mr. Coaker himself, "have tried their utmost to smash the Union and who have heaped abuse upon every Council and member." And Mr. Coaker himself is held fast and firm in the grip of men who publicly branded him as "a socialist and anarchist," and we have the editor of the Herald, for instance, P. T. McGrath, as saying, "The regarded Mr. Coaker as a public nuisance and a public menace."

When Mr. Coaker first sprang into prominence, through the columns of the Fishermen's Advocate, then a weekly paper which he controlled with a rod of iron, he laid bare before his followers and the public generally, an outline of the many reforms which he considered necessary for the emancipation of the toilers. He pointed out to his followers that only through their following his leadership could they improve their conditions in life. By giving him their hard earned savings and their moral support only could they expect to raise themselves above the level of being mere "beavers of wood and drawers of water."

Mr. Coaker was to teach the fishermen, laborer and farmer how to smash the greedy capitalist. He was to show them how to frame laws which were to bring the wealth of the country into a newer and saner distribution. He pointed out the folly of old ideas and unfolded his "New Gospel" which he claimed he was sent from Heaven to preach to the poor oppressed underdogs of long suffering Terra Nova. Co-operation was to be the means of turning this country into a veritable Eldorado. The fishermen were to become the real business men of the land with Mr. Coaker as their uncrowned King. St. John's was to be abandoned by the fishermen as they would a plague, for the Capital City, Mr. Coaker said, was a hotbed of immorality, drunkenness and gambling. Its people were spending more money than they earned. The weather classes were living idle lives and the Churches had failed in their mission to Christianity. All this was to be remedied and he was the man to do it.

And so it came to pass that the praise of this great Deliverer spread throughout the country, and soon, from beyond the limits of the capital, men appeared before him to say: "You shall lead us all; we, too, would taste of the New Gospel," and the champion of pure Democracy said: "I shall serve as you will"; so that the day came when he took his place as the acknowledged leader of the Union, and the toilers everywhere rejoiced that here was no friend of the unrighteously great, but of the just and the godly, the poor and the needy, one whose thoughts and every act would be known to all, for did he not dwell and work in the open? Could not the humblest present their own petitions? Was it not familiar to all with whom he labored?

There was great rejoicing in the homes of the fishermen. Now they had a man who understood their desires and one whose door always stood ajar to the weak and the oppressed. However lowly, the suppliant found his way to the side of the all-powerful to plead his case and state his hopes. Within this council-chamber the toiler's champion planned by night and day to free a long oppressed people. His heart fairly ached for Democracy, and he was always ready to point the way to road special privilege, to check injustice, to right wrong, to stop graft and bouding on the part of the fishermen's oppressors, so that the people should more and more come into their own. To them, he said, "I must account;" to them he averred he had no higher aims than to draw the bone and sinew of the Dominion into his Councils and himself to reflect their views.

So to his aid there flocked men of all kinds, among them many who heretofore had stood aloof from politics as from something unclean. They gave of their hearts, of their enthusiasm new-born, of their unselfish selves, of their means and their precious time, thanking the heavens for this prophet of the people, who, Allah be praised, was not one of those to pretend friendship merely to profit by men's votes.

NO PREMATURE PEACE.

This war with all its pities, we shall have fought in vain, until we've shot up cities like Frankfort-on-the-Main; until we have invaded the Prussian lands as if raided the Tinty until they're laid; peace won't be safe and sane. We are not meant or spiteful, we do not lust for gore; we look on doings "rightful" as being quite a bore; but we must see the German in his own country squirming, so that he will determine to run amuck no more. 'Twill take a lot of teaching to drive the lesson home, our spiked club ever reaching to swat him on the dome; from Belgium we must shoo him, from France we must pursue him, and do him up and strew him upon his native loam. If peace should come to-morrow, as things are standing now, next day he'd try to borrow the tools to start a row; until at home he's stricken, until he's had his lickin', the conquest dreams will thicken behind his bulging brow. So down the German valleys, and up the German Mills, through German streets and alleys we'll chase the men of Bill; with lighted brands and r-otches we'll burn their roofs and hatches, destroy their pretzel patches and wreck their sauerkraut mills.

Teacher's Pensions.

AN INJUSTICE.

Dear Sir,—I was very much pleased to read your editorial a few days ago relative to the "forgotten few," meaning the retired civil servants. The Evening Telegram is always foremost in fighting for justice and fair play for all, and its editorial on the "forgotten few" deserved of that nature and commendation of that small body of civil servants who were recently forgotten, and no doubt the telegram's advocacy of their case will be instrumental in having them included in the lists for augmentation.

Mr. Editor, there is another forgotten few who deserve to be considered by the Government and educational authorities. I refer to the retired teachers who are allowed a small pittance from the Teachers' Pension Scheme when having to resign through physical disability. By that scheme if a teacher taught thirty years he would be entitled to two-thirds of his average yearly salary for years previous to his resignation. However responsible for drafting the Teachers' Pension Scheme seemed to me, I am sure that the scheme's aim at making the teachers' resigning allowance as small as possible, know a First Grade Teacher who has spent thirty years in the noble profession of teaching, and whose record is excellent, who has been retired on the munificent sum of a hundred and ninety dollars yearly. Fifteen or twenty years ago the salaries of even First Grade Teachers were very small, any not receiving much more than a hundred dollars, and although this teacher was receiving about five hundred dollars three years previous to his retirement, yet owing to the provisions of the Pension Scheme he was compelled to retire on the miserable sum of one hundred and ninety dollars per annum. And although these are legally a part of a teacher's salary, yet in estimating the teacher's resigning allowance fees are not to be regarded as a part of his salary. Hence I say the drafters of the Teachers' Pension Scheme aimed at making the resigning allowance as small as possible.

I think the retired teachers should participate in the present augmentation to teachers salaries, or the Teachers' Pension Scheme should be amended as to give the retired teachers a respectable pension. It is not to be done the scheme should be abolished altogether and the teachers put on a par with other civil servants when superannuated.

There are only a few teachers who have remained long enough in the profession to apply for a pension under the present scheme, and as all the teachers are compelled to contribute towards the Teachers' Pension Fund, I think the condition of that fund should warrant the Superintendents of Education in requesting the Government consider this matter immediately. A few years hence the teachers salaries will have trebled what they were years ago if they do not at present. Therefore the future pensioners will receive a much larger amount than present retired teachers whose contributions to the Pension Fund have just as large, and whose services the country may have been just as valuable as the prospective ones will call upon the Superintendents of Education in the enjoyment of their greatly increased salaries to think of hardships and privations of the broken down teachers who have been trying to eke out an existence on Obituary.

JOHN R. WHITTEN.

On Friday last, October 28th, the settlement of Petty Harbour was shocked and saddened on learning of the death of one of her most respected and loving citizens in the person of Mr. John R. Whitten.
 The late Mr. Whitten was only 48 years of age, and by his untimely death the career of one of Petty Har-bour's most promising and obliging business men has been cut short. He represented Monroe and Co., and was conducting quite a large business for that firm at Petty Harbour. His unvarying courtesy and ability as well as his uprightness as a business man, all won for him the respect and love of all who came in contact with him.
 The deceased was only ill for nine days, and his family had hoped that by good attendance he would pull through, but such was not God's will,
 and on the date mentioned above, at 11.30 p.m., he entered into rest.

"Now the labourer's task is o'er;
 Now the battle day is past;
 Now upon the farther shore
 Lands the voyager at last.
 Father in Thy gracious keeping Leave we now Thy servant sleeping."

The funeral took place at 2.30 on Sunday afternoon. Just before the time mentioned above, Mr. Collier, the undertaker from town, arrived and took charge of the funeral arrangements.

The service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Hewitt. On entering the church hymn No. 284: "My God, My Father, while I stray," was sung.
 After the service in the church, hymn 277: "Nearer My God to Thee" was beautifully rendered by the Organist,
 Mrs. Hewitt and sung by the congregation. After singing the "Nunc Dimittis" and to the strains of the Dead March in Saul the mourners and friends, including the Hon. J. R. Bennett, Mr. Monroe and Mr. Chafe from town, filed from the church and wended their way to the cemetery. There, amidst a large gathering of relatives and friends who had come to pay their last respects, the body was committed to mother earth there to await the final Resurrection when "father, sister, child and mother meet once more."

A wife, two sons, John and Cecil;
 two daughters, Janie and Mrs. Henry Chafe, are left to mourn the loss of a kind husband and a loving father. To these the heartfelt sympathy of all will be extended; also to his two sisters, Mrs. Thomas Whitten and Mrs.
 Robert Weir, and one brother, Mr.
 Thomas Whitten.

All the Allies

Will Now Deal With the Armistice Situation.

London, October 25.—It is understood that President Wilson's latest note to Germany is approved by the Allies and represents, in a general sense, their views of the situation. It has been erroneously assumed that the Allies have been leaving the brunt of the negotiations to fall on Mr. Wilson, but as a matter of fact, when the Central Powers elected to approach one of the belligerents singly the others stood by in the preliminary stages of the negotiations.
 Now that the President has consented to submit the request for an armistice to the other belligerents there is no question that individual action will give place to definitely co-ordinated conduct of the situation and that recommendation of the Allied naval and military commanders will constitute the joint terms of the associated Powers.

Central District Court.

Yesterday, the action taken by Hon.
 W. J. Ellis, against Mr. James Boggan, for recovery of the cost of erecting iron gates at Littledale, was heard, the proceedings being exceedingly lengthy. The sum involved was $150, plaintiff contending that defendant had employed him to do this work,
 while the defendant denied liability,
 on the ground that he had donated the gates to the convent, but had not given any instructions to plaintiff for their erection. In summing up Judge Morris said that as there were no witnesses to confirm the evidence of their erection. In summing up Judge ment in favor of Mr. Boggan. The legal Counsel employed were Mr.
 Wood, for plaintiff, Squires, K.C., for defendant.

The Day.

"British drums were beating
 through the streets of Lille this morning."—Cable despatch, Oct. 18th.
 British drums were beating through the streets of Lille this morning.
 As the tender light of autumn was
 with gold her apron adorning;
 And happy hearts kept rhythm with the beating of the drums.
 While voices sobbed and quavered:
 "The Liberator comes!"

The muffled tramp of infantry was trying in the distance.
 The heavy-footed Hun had gone—had fled without resistance;
 He had seen his doom approaching
 and had taken timely warning;
 So the British drums were beating through the streets of Lille this morning!

Aye, the British drums, and Belgian,
 American and French
 And Italian, toll a fanfare o'er valley, hill and trench;
 From North Sea down to Switzerland
 the freedom chorus runs
 At the heels of vanquished Hindenburg and his cowering, flying Huns.

"The Day" the Germans toasted in their arrogance and scorn
 It was in, thank heaven, by the beating drums this morning;
 But it is the Day of Justice, and of Victory sought can hinder,
 For the Allied drums are playing unconditional Surrender!

"The Day" the Day! God bless it; it has come at last in glory
 To make an end for ever of proud Despotism's story;
 It will see the vanquishing war lords,
 and their Junkers ground to powder
 And will hear the world's To Dum swelling loud and ever louder!

Influenza

VACCINE TREATMENT.
 The Health Bureau of New York replies that they cannot furnish influenza vaccine outside of New York city.
 Probably the answer from Toronto will be similar. Meanwhile it is interesting to note the conclusions arrived at by a committee of medical men who considered, carefully, all the evidence available as to the value of the vaccine. The committee finds that: 1. The evidence at hand affords no trustworthy basis for regarding prophylactic vaccination against influenza as of value in preventing the spread of the disease or of reducing its severity. 2. The evidence at hand convinces the Board that the vaccines
 we have considered have no specific value in the treatment of influenza.
 While the committee is therefore non-committal in its findings as to the value of the vaccine, they are of opinion that it is not harmful, and advise its use in an experimental way.

GROCERY DEPARTMENT.

Judicial Inquiry in Railway Accident.

William Leggo, sworn and examined by Mr. Mews, B.L.—I am a section man on the Reid Newfoundland Company's Railway. Joshua Sheppard is my foreman. Joseph Kleece is the road master on that division. I live at Curling. I have been working with the Reid Newfoundland Company since June, 1918. I remember the run-off which occurred on September the 24th three miles west of Curling. We were working about two miles east of where the accident happened. We were repairing the road. We were working west. The foreman and the other section men were working with me. Repairing the road would mean taking out old ties and putting in new ones, lining the road up, gauging, driving spikes where required. We often have to take out spikes and drive them again or put in new spikes. We did not have to lay down new rails since I have been working on the road. Upon getting instructions to go to the wreck, we went up, that is the foreman, Mr. Sheppard, myself and another man. We got instructions to go to the wreck shortly after the accident happened, and we went right away. When we got there we saw the five cars off the track. Besides the engine and baggage car, there was one truck on the road bed. The truck was not on the rails, it was on the road bed. The first thing we did was to go around to see if we could render any assistance to the passengers. When we went around, we found that all the passengers had been taken out of the cars, some being in a house close by and others were around the scene of the wreck. The injured ones were removed to the house and those who were uninjured were around the scene of the wreck. I examined the rail where the truck left it; that is the truck of the second class car. I could see where she left the rail, she cut the first tie she came to. I did not look to see what distance the wheels had gone over the ties. I looked to see if the rails had been out of gauge or anything that might put a train off the track. I saw nothing whatever that would put a train off the track. I found the rails in perfect condition. I examined the spikes for a distance of three rails back, that is east. The spikes were all right. I examined the joints of the rails and I found them all right. I really carefully examined the track and rails in the neighbourhood of the accident and could discover nothing whatever that would cause a train to run off the track. I saw one of the rails turned over on the lower side opposite one of the sleepers. My opinion is that that was caused by the sleepers when it turned over on its side. About three rails west of the point where the truck left the rails, I found about 10 sleepers bunched. They were just pushed together flat. My idea of the bunching is, when the truck left the rails, she got caught in the sleepers and pushed them ahead. I should say this was a two per cent. grade. The outer rail on the curve is elevated. As to the elevation, that is done by the foreman, still I know the elevation on this curve. I would say it was two or a half inches at this curve where the accident happened. In my opinion the elevation was all right. It was not a sharp curve, and in my opinion it was an eight or ten degree curve. After my inspection of the track the foreman and we two section men started to put the track in repair so as to allow other trains to pass along. The first thing we did was to remove the truck from the road bed. There was a relief train came up about an hour after we got there with a wrecking crew aboard with doctors, priests, ministers and all to succor the wounded. They brought everything with them for the wounded passengers. Other men from other sections who came up on the wrecking train went to work with us. After removing the truck, we started to get the rails that were twisted by the sleeper, in place. Another bunch of men were heaving the track up in line that ran over the dump where the second class car left the track and went over the dump, taking the rails with her. We put down some new ties and a new rail on the lower side of the track. The old rail had been

The world will applaud the fearless concern of the King and Queen of the Belgians for the welfare of those of their subjects who have been living for so long under Germany's cruel rule. They are among the first to enter the re-captured Belgian cities, and often in the face of danger. The honored names of Albert and Elizabeth will occupy a prominent place in the pages of history.

U. S. Food Administrator Hoover says that during the year ending July 1, 1919, America must ship 2,600,000 tons of meats and fats for consumption by our own soldiers, the Allies, Belgium and neutrals; but he says also that it will be necessary to increase breadstuff shipments 3,600,000 tons over last year, sugar 330,000 tons, and feed grains 750,000 tons during the same period, so there's no argument here for vegetarianism.

The body of a woman about thirty-five years of age was recently taken from the river at the Canadian Maid of the Mist landing, Niagara Falls. The only clothing was a dark blue skirt, black stockings and black buttoned shoes. On the third finger of each hand was a gold ring, one set with a diamond and one with a sapphire, and a lace collar about the neck was fastened with a gold brooch set with a diamond. The body had been in the water about a week.

Writing to the Montreal Star, a correspondent who signs himself "Montreal Physician" makes the following observation: A large number of our supposed influenza cases can be traced directly to the use of "camphor bags." As an agent to lower temperature in febrile diseases, camphor is very useful, but it is very harmful when lowering the normal temperature of a healthy person. Drop the use of camphor and see the "drop" in influenza cases.

While reports from thickly populated sections of Ontario show an increase in the number of cases of Spanish influenza, the situation generally gives cause for encouragement. Fewer deaths are reported in the majority of towns and cities and although there is little difference in the number of new cases may be of a milder type. Doctors throughout the province express satisfaction at the production of a preventive vaccine at the Connaught Laboratory of the University of Toronto, and with this to aid them expect to check the disease in a few weeks.

Approximately $3,500,000 worth of Liberty Bonds were sold at a dinner given at New York to her friends by Miss Geraldine Farrar, the opera singer. Miss Farrar, J. P. Morgan and Galen L. Lamont was toastmaster, and among the guests was Boris Eshkoff, the Russian Ambassador, who delivered an address; Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Schwab, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Morgan, Mrs. Edward T. A schoolboy courtship and a broken engagement of 45 years ago culminated in the marriage at Chicago recently, of Mrs. Sarah Leming Sheppard, 73 years old, of St. Paul, and Rev. Edmund S. Dunham, 75 years old, of Delaware, O. Their engagement, nearly a half century ago, was postponed when Miss Leming went to India as a missionary. A report came back that she had died. The Rev. Mr. Dunham then married. When Miss Leming returned she likewise married. Within the last ten years their mates both died, and a meeting of each other, they sought a hearing.

Twilight of the Demons.

(From the New York Times.)
Teutonic mythology is getting as hard raps as the Teuton heathen who have named so many pregnable "impregnable" lines after their divinities. Hindenburg, the war god, into whose wooden idol in the Thiergarten the worshippers no longer drive their votive sails, couldn't protect his line, nor can he long protect any line. Wotan, a kindlier deity than the German Gott, who seems to be a union of Thor and Hindenburg, cannot save himself or the faithful Siegfried is helpless. Why did the Germans name a line after him? True, he was faithless, but only in love. Loge, habitual liar and traitor, would have been a better choice. The Americans have reached and crossed the Freya defense position. After the unspeakable abominations done by the Germans, the choice of the goddess of marriage as a tutelary divinity is as curious as most things German. "The Ring of the Nibelungen" is a prophecy of the fate of Germany. World-power is to come to him who is master of the enchanted gold-store of the Rhine Maidens. A promise treated as "a scrap of paper" brings on a curse. Murder and ruin follow. Valhalla is burned as pitilessly as if it were a French or a Belgian city. The Curse of the Ring is near its fulfillment. Only it is not the Twilight of the Gods that is to come, it is Twilight of the Demons.

Instructions Regarding Care of Sick Persons.

hundreds of people are nursing patients these days, both untrained and because the epidemic has many families unable to spare the necessary to hire a nurse, the following instructions on how to care for the victims of the epidemic will be useful:

ESSENTIALS.

Rest in bed and sleep. Isolation (no visitors). Plenty of water to drink. Nourishing food.

Gentle, unworried service. (Avoid dragging, nagging, or questioning. Patients usually ask for what they want.)

Keep the patients in isolated room, separate beds, if possible. Keep patient in bed all of the time. Do not let patient must not get up to the bathroom.

Two or three pillows arranged step by step, the lowest well under the head, will make breathing easier.

Keep arms and shoulders well covered.

ventilate the room freely, but prevent drafts across the bed or any part of patient.

Keep patient, feverish people, resting, bed covering; patients with no need to feel snug and warm. At the onset, headache and backache are frequent. Cold cloths to the head (moist, but not dripping), changed gently and without conversation, every few minutes give some relief. A hot water bottle to the feet, a hot mustard foot bath, or rub the back with witch-hazel, may soothe the patient. In doing these things avoid exposure that may cause chills.

When the patient is extremely hot or perspiring profusely, do not bathe upon daily bathing. Wash hands and feet, especially after eating.

CARE OF MOUTH. Patient brush teeth regularly. Tooth brush should be kept standing in weak solution of boric acid. A mouth wash every few hours and cold cream to the lips help keep the mouth in normal condition.

If patient is extremely weak, swab the teeth carefully with moistened cotton applications three times daily. COUGH.

Patient should keep mouth covered when coughing. Paper napkins or three thicknesses of toilet paper used only once are safer and better than rags or handkerchiefs.

Keep a small paper bag pinned to bedside, within easy reach of patient's hand, to receive the used napkins. Change bag at least twice daily, or whenever it becomes half full.

The invisible spray from mouth and nose during coughing and sneezing is as dangerous as visible expectoration. Convalescent patients can be masked; weak patients are annoyed by them.

FOOD.

For unhappy, feverish patients, liquid diet, hot or cold, as preferred—milk, lemonade, weak tea and coffee, broths.

For convalescent and patients not feverish, soft diet—gruels, cooked cereals, milk, toast, jellies, soft boiled eggs, etc.

All patients should drink some water every hour when awake.

Extremely weak patients should be coaxed to take liquid nourishment at least every two hours.

PRECAUTIONS.

The influenza germ is short-lived and is killed by air and sunshine; nevertheless, observe every precaution.

All mouth washes, bath water, excreta, and unclean liquid food should be thrown into the toilet by the attendant.

All bags, napkins, scraps of unclean food, mouth swabs, etc., should be wrapped in clean newspaper before being carried from the sickroom to be destroyed by burning.

All linen—sheets, masks, towels, etc.—should be submerged in a large kettle of cold water in the sickroom. This can be safely carried to the kitchen stove, and when contents have been boiled five minutes any one may finish caring for the linen.

When attendant cannot stop to wash her own hands, door knobs, faucets, etc., should be protected by scraps of newspaper which may be destroyed after each using.

Attendants must be constantly masked, must wear big all over apron in sickroom, changing it to a different one always before entering any other part of the house.

Attendant must keep facilities for washing her own hands—soap, nail brush and paper towels—in clean place and never touch the patient or patient's utensils without afterward cleansing her own hands thoroughly. Running water is better and safer than a basin of weak disinfectant kept for the hands alone.

Everything used for the patient should be kept separate from the supplies for the rest of the household. This means dishes, bed linen, bath wrappers, towels, face cloths, rocking chair, etc.

Families can help visiting nurses and aids by having hot water, towels and newspapers ready whenever nurse is expected.—Montreal Star.

The Colonel Said a Mouthful.

Colonel Roosevelt has shocked some sensitive people by declaring that workmen caught in the act of practicing sabotage in munition works would be tried by court-martial and, if convicted, promptly executed. And why not? A factory worker who willfully spoils munitions or weakens a weapon in the process of manufacture may do more harm than an enemy soldier and is guilty of treason.—Hamilton Herald.

and the Worst is Yet to Come—

Spanish "Flu" of Ancient History.

Washington, Oct. 16.—Spanish influenza, Public Health Service scientists believe, is very similar to the epidemic of grippé which swept the country during the winter of 1889 and 1890.

Very probably, the infection, resurrected in Europe, and after sweeping the war-torn countries, now has appeared in the United States, has a very ancient history, taking it back to the day of Hippocrates and Livius more than 400 years before Christ.

The best means of treatment of influenza cases were communicated to the country a few days ago by Surgeon General Blue through the Associated Press. Now General Blue has issued a leaflet which tells something about the strange malady.

"It seems probable that in 1918, as in 1889-90, the earliest appearance was in Eastern Europe," it says. "By April cases were occurring on the Western Front. In Spain, according to reports, 30 per cent. of the population were attacked in May. The 1899 epidemic starting in northern Europe, also fell heavily on Spain; the present ruler, then three years old, being one of the first attacked in Madrid. The King of Spain is said also to have been attacked in the present epidemic. The epidemic of 1918 was at its height in Germany in June and July. It has appeared in practically every section of Europe. In England the epidemic prevailed in May, June and July.

"Outbreaks have been reported from various sections of the United States, but the spread has been by no means as rapid as in 1899, when the disease occurred in America almost simultaneously with its appearance in Western Europe.

"The symptoms in the present epidemic have been an acute onset, of a very sudden, with bodily weakness and pains in the head, eyes, back and elsewhere in the body. Vomiting may be a symptom of onset and dizziness is frequent. Chilly sensations are usual, and the temperature is from 100 to 104 degrees, the pulse remaining comparatively low. Sweating is not infrequent. The appetite is lost, and prostration is marked. Constipation is the rule. Drowsiness and photophobia are common. The fever usually lasts from three to five days; but relapses are not uncommon, and complications, particularly pulmonary, are to be feared. The death rate is usually given as extremely low; but in the latter periods of an outbreak an increased number of deaths, presumably due to complications, has been reported in Spain and in the United States. Besides bronchitis and pneumonia, inflammation of the middle ear and cardiac weakness may follow the disease.

"The short course of the fever (always less than seven days), in uncomplicated influenza is an aid in diagnosis. All ages are attacked, young active adults being especially susceptible. In Germany there has been such a preponderance of cases among the young that it is supposed that the 1899 epidemic conferred an immunity on most of those at present over 30 years of age. This has not been observed elsewhere."

"When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue. Mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

"Syrup of Figs" for Constipated Child
Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little stomach, liver and bowels.

The Hun is Doomed.

(From the New York Herald.)
Thanks to the American Army, Marshal Foch can strike when and where he wishes, or, as the events of the last few days show, everywhere at once. The enemy is forced to meet these attacks with his local reserves. He has no mass of manoeuvres left to him. His interior lines of communication avail him nothing, for he has no loose divisions to move along them. He dares not denude a single sector to send aid to another, no matter how hard pressed, because he has every reason to expect a blow at any point. For that very reason he is fighting desperately, blindly, asking and getting no quarter. For he is outweighed, outmaneuvered, outgeneraled. He is doomed.

Is the Wax Maid of Lille Safe?

(From the New York Sun.)
Lille is known primarily as a great industrial city, but to every lover of art—outside of Germany—the news of its recapture by civilization will at once prompt this question:
Is the Wax Maid safe?
For Lille has, or had, in its fine Palais des Beaux-Arts one of the noblest and richest collections in all provincial France; and chief among the treasures of the museum was the wonderful "Head of a Girl" in wax and terra cotta, by some connoisseurs ascribed to Raphael, by others believed to have come from a Roman tomb. It is, or was, an object unique in its interest and beauty. It ranks, or once ranked, among the great things of the world.
Is the Waxen Maid of Lille safe again in the custody of civilization, or has she gone to Berlin to join Herr Doctor Bode?

Carry the War Home to Hun.

We do not wish to treat German cities or people as the Germans have treated those of Belgium and France. But we do regard it as necessary to demonstrate to the Germans, to the German people, the fact that they are beaten, by displaying the banners of the triumphant Allies in the very heart and capital of the empire. If we do not secure such a moral victory over the Germans, our purely military victory will be vain.—North American War Weekly.

No Humour in Square-Heads.

We have long suspected that the Germans have no sense of humor, and now we know it. The ships of their new merchant marine are receiving such names as Hindenburg, Ludendorff and Trippitz. Imagine the thrill of delight with which we shall learn from our shipping bulletins after the war the Hindenburg is expected to dock at Hoboken with the afternoon tide. Consider the welcome that will be extended to the Trippitz as she passes up the Thames to Gravesend.—San Francisco Argonaut.
