— OR —

THE STORY IN THE LONE INN.

CHAPTER X.

"Certainly. When I do dream, I always pay attention to it, and omit no detail. It was somewhere in an old, deserted room, I believe."

"Ah!" she said, with a paling cheek, and a rising fire in her eye. "Perhaps you can also tell me what we said?"

"No, I cannot. And I do not see anything remarkable in your meeting the old lady," he said, in an indifferent tone.

"Nor in our plotting to murder you—stranger things have happened. Are you sure you locked your chamber door last night on retiring, Capt. Disbrow?"

"A singular question; but, yes, I rather think I did."

"And you are not given to walking in your sleep, occasionally?"

"In my sleep? No, never." And he looked at her with a peculiar smile.

Jacinto laughed.

"Really Jacquette, one would think you were cross-examining him as if he were on trial for shoplifting. I shall be careful how I tell you what I dream."

"Well, he said, half annoyed, half laughing, 'is it my turn next?'"

"Do you know," said Disbrow, "I have the strangest idea that I have seen you somewhere before. But for your foreign accent, and your dark hair and complexion, I could swear you were—"

"Who?" said Jacinto, as he paused.

"You will laugh, but a lady I knew in England. You reminded me of her from the first, in some odd, unaccountable way, and your laugh—if I had not looked at you that time, I could swear it was—"

"Norma!" laughed Jacquette.

"By Jove! you're hit it! But what do you know of Norma?"

"I had a dream," said Jacquette, with a malicious twinkle of her eye. "I dreamed Captain Disbrow was to be married to a certain Miss Norma Macdonald when she would attain her nineteenth birthday, and that he only came to America to kill time during the tedious interval. Ahem! You see others can dream besides you, my good cousin."

Disbrow stood fairly dumb with amazement, and his color came and went. Jacquette's wicked eyes sparkled with triumph.

"I say!" called Frank, at this interesting juncture, thrusting out his head, through the parlor door, "do you mean to come to breakfast to-day, or are we all to starve in here, while you three talk scandal out here?"

"We weren't talking scandal, Frank, dear," said Jacquette.

Then passing her arm through Jacinto's, she went in, followed by Captain Disbrow.

"Why, Jack!—I say Jack! where's little Orrie Howlet?" asked Frank, at the table.

"Gone," said Jacquette, curiously.

"Gone!" echoed the young gentleman. "Where?"

"Home—to the inn!"

"Home! Go away! she couldn't go so early!"

"Has she really gone, Jack?" said Mr. De Vere, in surprise.

"Yes, sir."

"Why, when did she go?"

Late last night—just before I retired. Old Grizzle came after her. Was that part of your dream, cousin?"

Disbrow smiled, and bowed slightly.

"Oh, she did, did she?" said Frank.

"How did Orrie like that?"

"She didn't like it at all. She would have preferred remaining until morning, and being escorted home by Captain Disbrow, for whom she has evidently conceived a rash and inordinate attachment."

Jacquette teased Captain Disbrow unmercifully throughout the meal. But just as she was uttering a witticism a sudden and most unexpected sound froze the words on her lips.

He sprang from his horse, and had raised his whip to knock at the door, when a scream of delight greeted his ear; and the next instant a pair of arms were around his neck, and little Orrie herself was kissing and clinging to him like a human crab.

"Oh, I knew you'd come! I knew you would! And I'm so glad!" she exclaimed, in tones of breathless delight. "I've been waiting for you all the morning. Why didn't you come earlier?"

"Well, unless I had started in the middle of the night, I don't see how I could!"

"I came in the middle of the night—did you know it?"

"Yes."

"Oh, Miss Jack told you. I wanted to see you, but Miss Jack wouldn't let me."

"What did she say?"

"Why, that you were asleep, and it would not look well to go and awaken you. And then she said she would tell you to come and see me to-day. Were you sorry when she said I was gone?"

"Very."

Orrie lowered her voice, and pointed to the house.

"It wasn't my fault, you know, she came for me, and I didn't want to go. But then, it's just like her. She's a horrid, ugly old thing, every way you can fix it!"

"Did she beat you when she got you home?"

"No; Old Nick was here, and he wouldn't let her. Only for him, I guess I'd have caught it!" said Orrie, with a chuckle.

"Ah! is he there now?"

"No; he and Kit and Blaise went away this morning. Do you know," said Orrie, lowering her voice again, "they were talking about you when I arrived?"

"Were they? What did they say?"

"Well, you know, I couldn't hear very well—I wasn't in the room, but listening at the door."

"Oh! a very commendable practice, which you ought to cultivate while you are young, as I fancy you have a talent that way. And they were taking my name in vain, were they?"

"They were talking about you!" said Orrie, looking a little puzzled, for one-half of the young gentleman's speeches were Greek to her or thereabouts; and Captain Nick said he would kill you, if he was to swing for it the next moment. What did he mean by that?"

"Never mind! You will find out, probably, by experience, one of these days, if you live much longer with this amiable old lady of yours. What else did they say?"

Why, old Grizzle laughed at him, and said she despised his notions of revenge. That killing was no good—or something like that—and that she knew a way to fix you off a thousand times worse!"

"Dear old soul!" said Disbrow, apostrophizing her in a low voice.

"What a blessed old lady she is, to be sure!"

"Then I heard old Nick ask her how; and she said to come to-morrow night—that's to-night, you know," said Orrie—"and she would tell him. And he wanted her to tell him then; and she got cross, and said she would not. And I heard her tell him another thing, too!" added the little one, suddenly—"something about Miss Jack."

"You did, eh? What was it, magpie?"

"Why, that she was going to kill two birds with one stone—you and her. So you and Miss Jack had better look out!"

"Thank you. I wish you could twist yourself into some corner and hear what precious revelations they will make to-night."

"Eh?" said Orrie.

"Oh, nothing! If you hear anything more, will you let me know?"

"Well, it's such a long place to go to Fontelle," said Orrie, hesitatingly. "And old Grizzle does get so mad—though I don't care for that much—that—"

"Oh! I don't wish you to travel to Fontelle, my dear child," said Capt. Disbrow, smiling at her troubled little face. "Perhaps I may ride over again to-morrow and see you."

"Will you? Oh, how nice! And ain't Fontelle a beautiful place with such lovely big rooms, and nice pictures, and carpets, and splendid soft beds? Oh! I wish I lived there!" said Orrie, with sparkling eyes.

"Upon my honor I wish you did, Firefly! Perhaps you may some day. Shall I tell you how?"

"Yes!" said Orrie, eagerly.

"Then make Frank fall in love with you, and get married to him!" laughed Disbrow.

Carnation Milk

Buy Your Milk With Your Groceries

YOU can pick up your phone and order a week's or a month's supply of Carnation Milk if you want to. Put it on your pantry shelves and it will keep indefinitely—just as fresh and pure and sweet as the day it was put in the can. You are then assured of milk for any use. No matter what the day or weather, there's your milk supply. Could anything be more convenient?

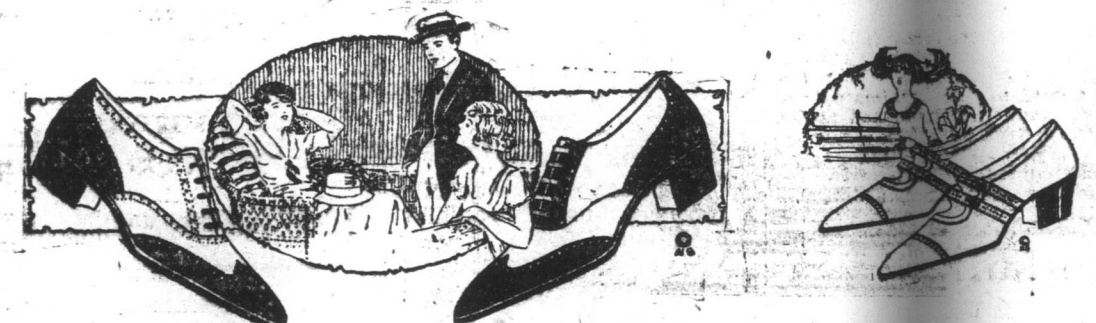

Carnation Milk is just pure fresh milk, evaporated to double richness, kept safe by sterilization. Order several tall (16 oz.) cans or a case of 48 cans from your grocer.

Try this delicious recipe and write for your copy of the Carnation Recipe Book. It contains 100 others and it's FREE.

CARNATION BISCUIT.—2 cups flour, 4 tsp. baking powder, 2 tsp. shortening, ½ tsp. salt, ½ cup water, ¼ cup Carnation Milk. Sift dry ingredients together. Mix in shortening with knife or fingers; add liquids, mixing to a soft dough. Roll lightly to one half inch in thickness, cut and bake in hot oven about 15 minutes. This recipe makes about eight biscuits.

Household Notes

Creamed peanut butter and tart jelly make a good combination for a sweet sandwich spread.

A mixture of fruits canned together may be used for delicious winter salads and desserts.

Serve planked lamb with carried rice timbales, and garnish with buttered carrots and peas.

Sausage is nice served with apple rings fried in sausage fat, and mashed sweet potatoes.

Sausage is nice served with apple rings fried in sausage fat, and mashed sweet potatoes.

With coffee gelatin serve cream that has been sweetened, flavored with vanilla and whipped.

Left over boiled hominy and cream-whipped beef make an excellent luncheon casserole.

When preparing dressing for a vegetable salad, flavor with a little onion juice, or onion extract.

Chopped nuts should be added last to the conserve. Only cook them long enough to heat through.

White cotton tape which can be can be discarded after using is excellent for cleaning the teeth of a comb.

Large, firm pears are nice halved, cored and canned in slightly sweetened syrup, with a little ginger. They make delightful winter salads.

Hundreds Killed in Armenia by Earthquake

Many Parts of Japan Inundated; 100 Reported Dead—10,000 Jews Bound for U.S. Stranded in Embarkation Ports—21 Bodies Recovered from Wyoming Mine.

WILL SUPPORT LOAN.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17. International bankers will support the proposed loan to Germany because it is safe, according to Paul Warburg, Chairman of the Board of International Acceptance Banks, Inc., who returned on the Homeric to-day after a two months' study of the European financial situation. He said much of the loan's success depends on the French attitude toward the Ruhr.

21 BODIES RECOVERED.

WYOMING, Sept. 17. Rescue parties penetrating the debris laden workings of the mine of the Kemmerer Coal Company, at Sublet, near here, to-day have recovered the bodies of 21 miners, victims of yesterday's explosion.

CONFESSES TO PIRACY.

PARIS, Sept. 17. Jerome Max Phaff, a naturalized citizen born in Germany, was arrested to-day, charged with piracy in holding up the French freighter Mulhouse, off the Atlantic coast, of the United States, in July, and robbing her of a cargo of more than 15,000 cases of champagne and liquor. The prisoner pleaded guilty.

OFF FOR OMAHA.

U.S. Mail Field, Maywood, Ill., Sept. 17.—The army round the world fliers hopped off from the air mail field at 8:11 a.m. on their 440 miles flight to Omaha. Flying conditions were ideal and Lieut. Lowell Smith, commander, expected to reach Fork Creek Field, Omaha, in about six hours.

GERMAN UNEMPLOYED.

BERLIN, Sept. 17. The number of unemployed in Germany, including occupied territories, now totals 1,000,000, of whom 540,000 are drawing doles, according to latest statements compiled by the Ministry of Labor.

FREIGHTER WRECKED.

QUEENSTOWN, Sept. 17. The British freight steamer Asian, for Orleans, Aug. 31st, bound for Liverpool, struck on Stag Rock in the vicinity of Galley Head on the south coast of County Cork, Ireland, to-day, and is reported to be breaking up. The crew is believed to have landed on the steamer's boats or to have been taken off by the steamer San Quirino which came to the assistance. The Asian, of 5,614 tons gross, was built in 1898, at Greenock, and is owned in that port.

SOVIETS ARE ANGRY.

MOSCOW, Sept. 17. Bitter resentment is manifested by the Soviet officials and newspapers over the resolution adopted by the League of Nations Assembly with regard to the situation in Georgia. In supporting the resolution Prime Minister MacDonald, of Great Britain, is accused by the Government newspapers of violating deliberately the recently concluded Anglo-Russian Treaty, which expressly forbids interference by one country in the internal affairs of the other. Recent despatches from various sources have indicated that a movement of considerable proportions was underway in Georgia with the object of establishing the country's independence from Soviet Russia.

FIGHTING FIVE MILE BELOW SURFACE.

CALUMET, Mich., Sept. 17. The miners of the Calumet and Hecla mines early to-day were fighting a fire which broke out here last night, a mile below the surface. The fire which was on the 57th level and while it has been confined to a small area the heat, smoke and gas filled the shafts making it difficult to fight. One man was reported missing.

LATE BANK MANAGER ARRESTED.

MONTREAL, Sept. 17. John Fred McEldan, former manager of one of the branches of the Union Bank of Canada here, was arrested this afternoon on complaint of the Bank, by which he is charged with having misappropriated a sum of $25,000 of the Bank funds.

THREE INJURED IN EXPLOSION AT SYDNEY STEEL PLANT.

SYDNEY, Sept. 17. One man, it is feared, will lose the sight of an eye, and two others were painfully injured, when a charge of dynamite exploded in their faces while they were at work tearing away the lining of No. 8 blast furnace at the steel plant early on Wednesday morning.

DEVASTATING EARTHQUAKE.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 17. An earthquake last Saturday destroyed 102 villages and killed hundreds of people, according to dispatches received by the Turkish Government, from Erzurum, Armenia. The Red Cross has despatched aid to the stricken region.

FLOODS CAUSE HEAVY DAMAGE IN JAPAN.

TOKIO, Sept. 17. Floods following a heavy typhoon have inundated many parts of Japan. The death list may reach 100. Forty thousand houses in Tokio alone have been partially flooded. Three hundred persons are reported missing in one village in Saitama Prefecture. A land slide following the floods killed several persons in Chiba Prefecture.

JEWISH REFUGEES PENNILESS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17. Ten thousand Jews, bearing American Consular visas and tickets calling for trans-Atlantic transportation, are stranded in Cuban, American, English, Dutch and Roumanian ports, an emergency committee, headed by Louis Marshall and Dr. Stephen Wise, asserted in appealing for $500,000 fund for relief for refugees. These people are victims of the United States Immigration laws, the Committee said, and in some cases have been held in foreign ports for more than a year penniless. After their long detention they are facing starvation, the announcement continued.

GERMAN NATIONALISTS KICKING.

BERLIN, Sept. 17. A threat of vigorous opposition is made by German Nationalists in a manifesto to-day, if notification of Germany's repudiation of war guilt does not go forward, as they claim was promised when their votes were sought for the passage of the bill to put the Dawes plan into operation. The German Nationalists assumed part of the responsibility for the adoption of the Dawes bill, the manifesto says, and now demand that they share the responsibility of the execution of the plan and do all in their power to alter, improve, or revise the impossible clauses and unbearable stipulations of the London pact, as must also be done with the Versailles Treaty.

PATROLMAN STABBED WHILE DEFENDING LOCATELLI.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17. A patrolman defending the Italian aviator, Antonio Locatelli, from attack by a frenzied mob of fellow countrymen who awaited his appearance outside the Manhattan opera house last night, was stabbed three times with a stiletto. Anthony Cioffo, who says he came here recently from Chicago and is a member of the I.W.O., is under arrest charged with felonious attack. Patrolman Edward Trump is in a serious condition in hospital.

FIGHTING CONTINUES

WITHOUT MATERIAL CHANGE.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 17. The general engagement between the Kiangsu and Chekiang armies, west of Shanghai, continues this morning without any material changes in the positions of the two armies. The latest development in the operations is a report of a recent fighting near the border of Anhwei Province, southwest of Tai Lake. In this corner, where the borders of the Lungwha headquarters claims the Chekiang forces are withstanding the attacks of the enemy. The fighting, according to reports, occurred near the towns of Szean, Ischekiang and Kwangchee, just across the border in Anhwei.

FLOUTING BRITISH

ADMINISTRATION.

SIMIA, British India, Sept. 17. The Legislative Assembly has taken another step in flouting the British administration by passing the second reading, despite Government opposition, of a native bill repealing a criminal law amendment enacted in 1908 to suppress anarchical crime in Bengal. The vote was 71 to 39. The final reading of the bill was postponed.

$90,000,000 LOAN.

OTTAWA, Sept. 17. The Canadian Government, it is announced, has sold to Chase Securities Corp., and Bayers and Company, New York City, $90,000,000, one year four per cent. Treasury gold notes, due September 15, 1925, the proceeds of which are to be used in connection with the retirement of maturing Treasury bills exceeding the amount of the new issue. The Treasury bills it is understood, were taken over at par. They form part of $200,000,000 approximately of obligations coming due this year, including $107,000,000 in victory bonds and $93,000,000 Treasury notes.

THE NEWEST MOTION PICTURE DISCOVERY NOW SHOWING.

At last the stereoscopic motion picture—the goal toward which scientist, inventor and experimenter have been striving ever since the first motion picture flashed on the screen—is a reality. The illusion of depth as well as breadth and height—the "third dimension" which makes figures or objects on the screen "stand out" in a life-like and startling manner, appearing to leave the screen and come within arm's reach of the spectator—is now available to every motion picture theatre through the invention of Mr. Frederic Eugene Ives.

Also showing to-night is the current episode of "The Fighting Blood" series, the first chapters of which made such a decided hit last week. To-night's story is even better. And still another feature forms part of this bill. It is entitled "The Kingdom Within" starring Pauline Starke and Gaston Glass.

This is a story that has all of the pathos of "Over the Hill," all the human interest of "The Miracle Man," and all of the suspense of "The Birth of a Nation." It will enthrall you from beginning to end.

Positively the Screens Greatest Masterpiece

IS "THE WHITE SISTER" COMING TO THE NICKEL MONDAY.

It is truly the age of big things in motion pictures and naturally some pictures are bigger than others. But, at last the utmost in screen drama has been made—"The White Sister" featuring Lillian Gish has reached St. John's and will be shown on Monday next. The following clippings show the wonderful ovation by the American press:—

"The White Sister" is always exquisite. . . . Remarkable qualities and emotional repression. . . . The exterior scenes are beautiful. . . . It is so superbly played by Lillian Gish and by Ronald Colman, and so perfectly directed by Henry King that one is entitled to assume that here is an unquestionable candidate for the Hall of Film Fame.—The New York Herald.

"The White Sister" is not a movie; it is a work of art. . . . a genuine artistic triumph. . . . a complete and satisfying masterpiece of the screen.—The Sun and The Globe.

Exquisitely poignant in its religious thrill and ecstasy, it leaves one feeling almost inspired. "The White Sister" is a classic. . . . There is no doubt of its artistry. . . . It is a fascinating photoplay.—The Boston Daily Globe.

"The White Sister" contains much genuinely moving and thrilling drama. A big and a fine picture that deserves to rank with the best movies have yet produced. It is fine entertainment. You ought to see it.—The Evening World.

"The White Sister" achieves a place by itself. Miss Gish displays a surer, more mature, more compelling—almost, it would seem, a perfect art. . . . you realize you are viewing one of the screen's greatest. Locations are of great beauty. Henry King's direction and adaptation are worthy of great praise.—Chicago American.

Lillian Gish is still the screen's greatest emotional actress. . . . The scenes and settings are unbelievably lovely. The pathos, the romance and the pictorial beauty are perfectly blended to make a fine film.—The Boston Post.

DON'T BLAME THE CHILDREN.

A friend of mine who used to keep two or three servants all the time has recently lost some of her money and now does all her own work with the exception of the washing.

She has, besides a baby and a little boy four, two girls, one 11 and 13; and one would naturally expect that they would be a good deal of help to her, especially during their summer vacation.

Someone to whom she was talking about her new way of living said as much, and she sighed.

"They ought to be," she said, "but they aren't. It's just like pulling teeth to get any steady work out of them. Really I don't see how they can be so heartless when they know how hard it is for me. I have to keep right at them to have them to their beds and the dishes. I can't understand it. You'd think they'd want to help me. They were lovely at first too, but it didn't take long for it to wear off."

Blame Their Training.

She seemed so grieved and surprised that her children should not show more character and stamina about doing routine work that bored them.

Wouldn't it be more surprising if they had?

What have they had to develop character?

From babyhood these children have had everything done for them. They have never had the simplest task to do daily. Their rooms have been looked after, their clothes mended, their hair brushed. Food appeared on the table and dishes disappeared as if by magic. And every wish has been gratified as far as possible.

Nothing for Character to Bite On. Suppose one never ate anything but liquid and predigested food. Would one be apt to have the best of teeth and digestion?

Why then should one expect children to develop character if they are not given anything for their character to bite on?

I have faith to believe that if their mother does not give in to them too easily those children will develop helpfulness and responsibility, for they have good stuff in them. If she holds them to their tasks and tries to make them realize that it is only right and fair they should do their share, they will probably develop the capacity for doing something they don't want to do.

And that will be more valuable to them in after-life than all the luxuries she used to give them.

But What Is An Advantage?

Is it fair to blame a child for not developing character and a sense of responsibility, and a capacity for facing the disagreeable things of life courageously and competently, when you have done everything to shelter him from responsibility, and from the things that are disagreeable?

Of course the reason parents make this mistake is that they want so passionately to give their children every happiness and every advantage.

But too often parents try to do this without getting it clear in their own minds what contributes to lasting happiness and what is an advantage.

Rum-Runners Received "Protection"

Liquor Dealers in Massachusetts also Paid for Protection.—Investigation Opened at Boston.—Bribery and Corruption Is Charged, and Former Government Officials are Involved.

Boston, Sept. 12.—After five witnesses out of fifty had been examined, the Federal Grand Jury which to-day began investigation of charges that rum-runners along the North Eastern Massachusetts coast had been "protected," adjourned for ten days. The alleged conspiracy involved, it was said, former agents of the Department of Justice and officials of towns and cities along the coast.

The investigation, the second to be conducted by the Government, results from long preliminary work by the officials and agents on orders of United States Attorney Robert O. Harris. It was said that the case involved investigation of activities of two former justice agents, a former official of a North Shore community and a Government official. Charges were made by women, it was said, that open violation of the laws was countenanced in some communities. Government agents said that bribery, corruption and "protection" was indicted in their investigations of rum-runners. Liquor dealers, witnesses admitted, paid $50 a week for protection, while larger fees were paid by smugglers.

Evidence Disappears.

Evidence and affidavits, it was said, obtained in the earlier investigation have disappeared from the files of the Department of Justice. In the present investigation the utmost secrecy has been maintained.

The first witness was Ruel S. Getchell, Selectman of the town of Salisbury. Anthony Caramagne, of the same town, followed him. The three other witnesses were Daniel B. Pierce, Salisbury Police Department; William B. West, Department Agent, who has been investigating the case, and Albert H. Reynolds, of Newburyport, Assistant United States Attorney Joseph V. Carroll conducted the inquiry, and United States Attorney Harris was in the jury room for a time.

The thoroughness of the investigation was indicated by the number of witnesses called, exceeds 3 g in number those summoned.

Mediterranean Folk Fond of Salt Codfish

French Explorers Following Columbus Discovered the Virtues of New England Food.

(From the Detroit News)

Not a codfish swims nearer the Straits of Gibraltar than the banks of Newfoundland or Iceland, and yet all Mediterranean peoples eat salt cod cooked in many and varied forms.

New England got its salt from Italy and paid for it with codfish, sometimes with Old Medford run. Those days are past.

The French explorers who followed close upon the heels of Columbus discovered the virtues of Newfoundland cod.

Lately curing plants have been established on the Mediterranean shores of France—to save one handling, since the Mediterranean peoples eat so much of it, also because the salt is conveniently dried out from the very salty water of the Mediterranean.

Labor Premier is Capitalist, London Hears

Ramsay MacDonald Owns 80,000 Shares in Big Scotch Company.

London, Sept. 11.—(British United Press)—Disclosure by the Daily Mail that Premier MacDonald on March 12 last acquired possession of 30,000 shares of a great Scotch biscuit company, valued at £1 a share, promises to develop into a political sensation of the first magnitude.

The Morning Post to-day, after commenting upon the fact that the Socialist Prime Minister made no attempt to conceal his ownership of the shares, says:

"It only remains for the Prime Minister to afford the public the explanation which is its due, having regard for the fact that in a speech at Carlisle on January 29, of this year, Mr. MacDonald said:

"I hear securities have gone up. I do not know. I have nothing of this world's goods to turn into securities."

In an interview at Looe, where he was returning from a picnic, MacDonald made a statement regarding the securities of the McVitie and Price Ltd. Biscuit Company:

"The capital is not mine," he said, "I only technically own the shares. The matter had to do with politics."

Sir Alexander Grant, principal owner of McVitie and Price, received a baronetcy last June.

Referring to this, the Prime Minister said: "Sir Alexander received his honor for public services, including the gift of a national library to Scotland, which most people know about and for which he has already received the freedom of Edinburgh."

MUTT AND JEFFA COUPLE OF SICK MEN HEAD FOR CANADA.

Dr. Morgan's Meetings

THE AFTERNOON TEACHING.

United worship. How great is the charm. How sweet is its influence. How hallowed is its unity. One who has been every afternoon at Canon Wood Hall wonders why united worship has not always been the path chosen in looking for re-union, rather than a request for union, first with united worship as its goal.

Mr. Swann, it is true, led in prayer, but even a heathen would have been impressed with the spirit of prayer. The audience was considerably better also than Tuesday. Several more Ministers have come in. What might be called the

SONG OF THE MISSION.

Break Thou the bread of life
Dear Lord to me
An' Thou didst break the loaves
Beside the sea,
Beyond the sacred page
I seek Thee, Lord
My spirit longs for Thee,
O Living Word.

was sung.

The Gospel according to Mark would make that impression on a man who began his study of the Life of Jesus by reading Matthew. First he would see a great similarity. Compare Mark 1:14 with Matt. 4:17 as to the commencement of the ministry. Second, comparing Mark 8:31 with Matt. 23:1, both show the beginning of Jesus teaching regarding his suffering.

Mark, however, has great dissimilarities. Mark leaves out all the special dignities which others relate, such as His pre-existence, Incarnation and Angel songs. There is also a difference in regard to mechanical method. In the third place Mark shows Jesus travelling the whole country doing good and Mark alone records the saying "He came not to be served but to serve." As a further evidence of this trend Dr. Morgan noted that Mark never once called Jesus Lord. As a matter of fact in the opening verse of the Gospel (revised version which is usually to be preferred) there is a reference to Isaiah which is not correct. But that evidence of difficulty is a proof that there is something there worth studying. Now punctuation was never found in old books written say 1400 A.D. So the student of to-day has a right to suggest changes in the punctuation. The title of Mark does not end with verse one. It ends after the word prophet. Then follows a quotation from Malachi after which verse three of Mark leaps back to Isaiah (already referred to) which in chapters 1 to 35 contains a prophetic outline of the Gospel all the way from the Virgin birth in the sign of Ahaz to the outlook which every Hebrew prophet always had, not pessimistic, but optimistic of the wilderness blossoming. The spirit of Isaiah is one even if the authors are two or six, which the speaker did not believe. Chapter 40 where the second Isaiah is supposed to have four introductions:—

1—Comfort.
2—Prepare.
3—Cry.
4—All flesh grass.

This outline which we think is the Gospel Peter says in his Epistle is the Gospel.

NOW WHO IS THE SERVANT

who is to accomplish that work, the servant who is mentioned in Is. 41:8? Well that question was first raised by the Ethiopian Eunuch. The only answer must be "Israel thou art my servant" not Peter, but from (42:1) Israel emerges a personal servant. 42:18 tells of a blind servant, was not that true? Israel did not fail to recognize Jesus. The nation did become inmates to God and so was useless to man. Is. 49:1 says out in contrast, "Thou" the individual "art my servant" instead of the nation. Thou art called from the womb (a reference to the Virgin birth) and called by name and given for the redemption of the very isles of the sea and the Zettles. Israel 54—triumph through suffering leads to joy for all nations. "All" everyone that thirsts." Mark shows Jesus fulfilling the story of the servant. The Apostolic interpretations in Philipians shows that the servant just because he is a faithful servant is the priest also. Now the line of Matthew is shown also to wear the Mitre of the Shepherd of souls.

EVENING SERVICE.

Three Cilla Lillies stood in a row along the table beneath the pulpit of Lower Street. The arrangement was odd, but their straight beauty grew upon all who saw them.

Dr. Robinson has promoted himself to stand upon a chair within the great platform pulpit. The regular hymn sheets have arrived and there is a new power in the singing. The choir did the grand anthem "Up from the grave He arose" with effect, and the audience breathed life with their expressive rendition of that atmosphere of prayer which was so marked in the afternoon. This spirit Rev. Edwin Moore expressed in prayer and edified were still further helped.

THE OLD BIBLE AND THE NEW CHILD.

This superlative subject was introduced by the singing of "Jesus loves me this I know," which everybody sang with the abandon of their old Sunday School days.

At once there was an interest created by a study of the adjectives "old and new." The Old Bible does not mean the out of date Bible nor the short Bible, "that impertinence." No child is really new. In him are humanity, faith, and charity which is love and cheerfulness. How are we to keep the child who has those qualities with the book which has the same qualities. They are meant for each other. But specifically, why should we teach the Bible to the child, and second, how should we teach the Bible. Dr. Morgan spoke from the viewpoint of one trained for school teaching.

The secret of teaching the Bible is found in Timothy 3-15 "From a Child thou hast known the holy scriptures which are able to make thee wise unto salvation." This is not much like the preacher, who said the Bible should not be put in the hands of children until first they had studied some other books. Though a child of mixed marriage there was devotion in the home of Timothy and his mother had given the instruction.

THE MOTHERS OF SALEM

did not take their children to Jesus for His blessing. The pronoun in the scripture is masculine. It was the fathers. What are the fathers of St. John's doing? A Lystra Paul was left for dead after the attack of the mob, but there Timothy heard Paul explaining that the Old Testament was fulfilled in Jesus and because from a child Timothy had known the Old Testament he recognized the truth of Paul's preaching.

The baby begins the passage. The passage ends with the good work of the full grown man. There are four steps here, first, teaching; second, proving (that is making sure); third, correction, and fourth for discipline in ethics. This and this only is salvation. It must include righteousness, ethics. Knowledge of the scriptures is not enough. Paul after a youth spent with the best teachers had to spend three years in Arabia rebuilding his explanations of the scriptures. There must be personal experiences and decisions, but those experiences are never the same. It is criminal to try to force every child to pass through the same experience. Dr. Morgan here announced that he did not have the shadow of an idea when he decided to be a Christian.

HOW TEACH THE BIBLE.

Never use the Bible in any way for punishment. To suggest that is grotesque (An aside. The foundation of science is in Holy Writ. It is ask and you shall receive. You say, oh that applies to prayer. But it applies to science.)

BETWEEN 12 AND 16.

Boys and girls choose. Will power is dominant. To "break a child's will" is to commit a crime so great that a man is in danger of the millstone threatened by Jesus. Here was a sudden outbreak that was splendidly interesting and thought provoking. Parents must cease to commune with their children. These sentences seem like treasures. (Once more the reporter must say to his readers that no precise can convey the personality and atmosphere of any great speaker.) You must tell the children stories, the Bible stories. Telling stories made a congregation of 30 into a congregation of 2500 in his own experience. The stories you tell the children are forgotten in 30 minutes and remembered in 30 years. That sinking in of the truth in children under eight is one of the marvels of God's providence. The close of the lecture was as abrupt as usual, but that method had a greater value than usual in sending the audience away with un-mixed impressions of what was one of the most challenging addresses ever given in the city.

Paid 100 Francs for Head of King

If a French antiquary is correct in his surmise the head of Henri Quatre, unquestionably the most popular king who ever ruled over France, was last year sold at public auction by a French official for the insignificant sum of one hundred francs.

M. Bourdais, of D'ard, is the antiquary in question, as well as the owner of the head. He purchased it last year at Salle Drouot—a building where forced auctions in Paris are held—simply because it held some inexplicable attraction for him. He took it home and interest in his acquisition constantly grew till one day he suddenly realized that it bore a striking resemblance to the gallant king of Navarre. He made exhaustive researches and discovered there was every likelihood he was in possession in reality of the head of the venerated ruler.

Henri Quatre, the research showed, was embelmed after the manner brought to France by the Medici, and which comprised the severing of the head. The body was buried in Saint Denis, but during the revolution, it is recorded, when a mob opened the royal tombs the body of King Henri was found in a state of remarkable preservation. "From the venerable head still hung the gray beard of which national poetry so often has sung, and a soldier dared pluck it from the pale face to make a mock

PREPARING FOR A GENERAL ELECTION.

LONDON, Sept. 18.

Those who "ought to know" in the political world appear to be equally divided in their opinions as to the probable date of a general election. Some say there will be an election in November and others think a general election will take place early next year. There are few who do not believe that an election is inevitable in the near future, the difference of opinion being chiefly as to the likely date. Whether election is held this year or early next year, the fighting organizations of the different political parties are being whipped into shape.

NEW WEAPONS OF WARFARE DESCRIBED.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18.

New developments in aerial warfare that render certain world war methods of strategy obsolete were described to-day by government experts before a gathering of scientists here in honor of the centennial of Franklin Institute. The end of transportation of great armies overseas, the bombing of cities by unmanned and automatically operated airplanes, a new aerial camera "that nullifies camouflage," the wiping out of battleships with a single air bomb and a possible paralysing of an entire nation by combination of new chemical discoveries were among the new weapons of war discussed.

ALLIANCES, WHICH MAY PROVOKE COUNTER ALLIANCES.

GENEVA, Sept. 18.

Regional accords between states will continue to form one essential feature of the draft protocol written by Dr. Edouard Benes if the action taken to-day by the sub committee on disarmament is approved by the full commission and assembly. Some of the keenest intellects of the world struggled all day with this question of supplementary alliances which have always made the English fearful and others too on the ground that they would only engender counter alliances and tend to destroy that peace which the League of Nations is striving to make lasting.

ASSASSIN CONFESSES TO BEING AN I.W.W.A.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.

Cloffe captured last night after a policeman was stabbed three times with a stiletto while defending Lieut. Antonio Locatelli, the Italian aviator from an attack of a mob to-day confessed that he intended to kill the aviator, according to the police. Cloffe admitted being a member of the I.W.W.A. and said he came from Chicago to kill Locatelli because of the airman's activities, the police said.

ELECTROCUTED IN COAL YARD.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Sept. 18.

Two men were electrocuted and a third severely shocked to-day when the steel wheels of a coal loading machine in the yards of George Fogarty of this city crossed a live electric cable short circuiting current through the steel sides of the machine which the men were pushing.

PRINCE OF WALES SEEING NEW YORK.

SYOSSET, Sept. 18.

The Prince of Wales to-day put polo and dancing aside and became a Metropolitan sightseer. He spent this full afternoon in New York visiting an ultra modern high school, the museum of Natural History and two great newspaper plants. He said to-night that the trip was one of the most interesting experiences of his present American vacation and that he probably would spend another afternoon or two inspecting institutions in New York that he had heard about.

STILL REGRETTING THEIR ACKNOWLEDGEMENT OF GUILT.

BERLIN, Sept. 18.

Threat of vigorous opposition is made by the German Nationalists in a manifesto to-day if notification of Germany's repudiation of war guilt does not go forward, as they claim was promised when their votes were sought for a passage of bills to put the Dawes plan into operation. The German Nationalists assumed part of the responsibility for adoption of the Dawes Bill Manifesto, and now demand that they share responsibility of the execution of the plan, and do all in their power to alter, improve or revise the impossible clauses and unbearable stipulations of the London pact as must also be done with the Versailles Treaty.

AT THE MAJESTIC TO-DAY.

You may remember our card of a few days ago, notifying you of the approach of one of the really unusual pictures of the year: "Cordelia the Magnificent," starring Clara Kimball Young.

For excitement, for gorgeous gowns and luxurious settings, "Cordelia the Magnificent" surpasses any of Miss Young's previous pictures. As for the thrills in the story: if you read it in Hearst's International, you remember them. The screen version adds a few more.

We begin our showing of "Cordelia the Magnificent" to-day.

Capitulating to Communism

London Daily Telegraph: We have had recent lessons from Berlin and Warsaw as to the use which Bolshevik trade officials make of the extra-territoriality which it is now proposed to extend to them in Britain. But apart from such specific laws there can be no doubt as to the use which will be made of the whole agreement in Bolshevik propaganda. It will be held up as the surrender of "the greatest Capitalistic State" to Communism, and the effects of such surrender on our general political and commercial prestige throughout the world is by no means to be left out of consideration in any survey of the question.

Something Fishy

At a dinner given in his honor after his return from his recent European trip, Mr. Herbert Hoover, the well-known American statesman, said that the enthusiastic acclaim with which the Dawes Reparation Plan had been received by all the creditor nations made him a bit suspicious of its genuineness.

Then, as is the custom with American after dinner speakers, he proceeded to illustrate his contention with a story, saying that he found himself in much the same position as young Reginald.

"Reggie, darling," exclaimed his sweetheart, "why did you want to break our engagement since daddy has given his consent so readily?"

"That's the very reason. He was too darned willing. Seems to me there's something fishy about it."

Bicycle Aeroplanes

Aeroplanes that are driven not by engines but by muscular power, in much the same way as a bicycle, will become a reality in the near future in the opinion of a German scientist. The discovery that aeroplanes could be driven by gasoline temporarily halted experiments in flying man-propelled machines, but the results achieved by gliders, he declares, give new encouragement to the idea. The planes will have to be built extremely light, although at the same time strong enough to stand the strain, and the legs will have to be the driving force as the hands will be necessary for guiding. The scientist pictures the machine as bi-plane, in the centre of which the flier sits, on a structure looking much like a bicycle, and drives a propeller in the rear.

PUNTA ALLEGRE SUGAR CO.

20% of Its Crop Unsold—Antilla Should Add 500,000 Bags to Next Year's Output.

Boston—The Punta Alegre Sugar Co. has remaining unsold approximately 20% of its past season's output. This means about 253,000 bags of the 1,267,910-bag crop. The recent rise in raw sugar prices from a level around 3 cents to above 4 cents puts a different complexion on the outlook for earnings, which should comfortably exceed the $5 dividend requirement on the stock. Including the 50,000 shares issued in connection with acquisition of the Antilla properties, Punta now has outstanding 381,841 shares of stock.

In the next crop Punta sugar producers. Cuba Cane Sugar Corporation of course has a commanding lead with an output last year of 3,683,291 bags, followed by Cuban-American with 1,822,785. As the Antilla property will add 500,000 bags to Punta's output for next season, the company's total should nearly equal, if it does not exceed, that of Cuban-American. The Florida mill of the Punta group is being increased by about 150,000 bags, and it is believed that it can run full next season.

No important outlay is being made for machinery at Punta Alegre proper but the cane supply on that property indicates a considerable increase in the next season's crop. Baragua may also have increase in cane, but no major outlay is being made there. Trinidad expects approximately the same crop as last year.

WILLIS-OVERLAND.

Brighter Trade Outlook Seen. N.Y.—"Outlook for the motor industry is brighter," said Sir Wm. Lettis, managing director of Willis-Overland subsidiary in England, after a tour with John Willis, president of Willis-Overland.

"The industry is well stabilized. Willis-Overland business was never better. Production is increasing from week to week.

"Its financial structure never looked sounder here and abroad, and its future never looked brighter. New Willis-Knight is being equipped with a Lanchester balancer, which eliminates vibration. It adds power to motor and makes it ride like a 6 or 8-cylinder car. It will revolutionize this car. Trend for motor prices is up. Before end of year there may be additional advances."

Covent Garden Strike

IS BLESSING IN DISGUISE TO OLD COUNTRY FARMERS.

London, Sept. 11. (Canadian Press).—The very slight inconvenience inflicted on the retailers or consumers of fruit and vegetables by the strike of the Covent Garden porters has resulted in leading other traders to explore methods of how to dispense with the services of the middleman.

The West Lancashire farmers propose opening shops in the seaside towns to sell their produce direct to the consumers. It is claimed that some small essays already made in this direction show that the farmers can obtain 2 1/4 for a ton of potatoes whereas the price heretofore has been 2 1/2.

Apples which have been practically given away by shopkeepers at two shillings a score can be sold by the farmers direct to the consumers at five times that sum. Rabbits which hitherto have been scarcely worth shooting for the market, may now yield a substantial profit by the system.

The National Farmers' Union extends its benediction to the new movement to establish farmers' shops which it is thought may possibly revolutionize the home agriculturist's outlook on methods of making a livelihood.

At one of the many complimentary dinners given to Sir Harry Lauder during his recent world tour, he created roars of laughter by telling in his own inimitable way a story concerning an old Scottish woman who was bitterly opposed to the introduction of an organ into the kirk. One day she particularly and loudly expressed her dislike of the singing of an anthem, remarking that she "didn't hold w' these new fangled notions."

"Why, granny," remarked the minister soothingly, "that anthem is a very ancient one. It is from the Psalms, and may be the very one that David sang to Saul."

"I shouldn't wonder," drily remarked the old lady. "I shouldn't wonder at a. That was explain why Saul threw his javelin at David when the ladie sang before him!"

United in Sympathy.

Citizens of all classes and officials joined to-day with the comrades in arms from the various warships and from the Newfoundland units to pay their last tribute to those who had met their deaths under such tragic circumstances. Tenderly their bodies have been laid in the bosom of Mother Earth, and all that it is possible for us to do for them has been accomplished. Their troubles are over, and although it cannot lessen the terrible loss sustained by the bereaved, we can at least share their sorrow with them, and trust that our sympathy may help them to bear up under the heavy burden which has been laid upon them.

Britain and The Sudan.

The demands made by the Egyptian Government for control of the Sudan and the disturbances which have been traced to agitators residing in Cairo have aroused considerable interest in England, and there is little likelihood that the Government will be influenced either by demands or threats into making any changes in the existing state of affairs.

Lord Milner interviewed by the Sunday Express regarding the situation declared:

"With regard to the question of the future of the Sudan it seems to me that all we have got to do is to stick to what successive British Governments have said."

"It simply comes to this—that we have no intention of allowing the Egyptians to push us out of the Sudan, or to disturb the good work that has been and is being carried on there under British administration."

"So far as I know there are no two views in this country. I cannot understand how there can be two views about our duty in the matter, and if I read their declaration aright the present Government are quite as clear and determined in the matter as any of their predecessors."

Progress in the Sudan.

"There is, as a matter of fact, not the slightest justification for the attempt of the Egyptians to upset the existing system of government in the Sudan, which has been established under the Anglo-Egyptian Convention of 1899, and which is working admirably."

"The progress achieved in the Sudan under that system has been marvellous. The people of the Sudan have benefited enormously. Egypt has benefited owing to the fact that she has had a peaceful and prosperous neighbour on the south, instead of a savage and dangerous one, and owing to the increase of her trade with the Sudan. Great Britain, too, has derived benefit from the development of the Sudan, in which large sums of British capital have been invested. As we all know, there is a great prospect of the Sudan becoming a large cotton-producing country."

"It seems to me wanting—I might almost say idiotic—to think of disturbing all this. The consequences of allowing it to be disturbed might be really terrible, possibly ending in a relapse of the Sudan into the terrible barbarism from which we delivered it."

"My conviction is that we have only to make it quite clear to the Egyptians that we do not intend to allow the present regime in the Sudan to be upset, and the agitation in Egypt on the subject which has been the cause and source of any disturbances which have occurred in the Sudan itself will very soon die down."

"The great mass of the Egyptian people do not care two straws about the Sudan. The whole movement is factitious. The real interests of Egypt in the Sudan can well be safeguarded, as they always have been, by the present administration of that country.

"In the Sudan," says the Times, "our course is clear and simple. We are there by right of conquest since Lord Kitchener 'smashed the Khalifa' in 1898, and under the condominium concluded with the then Khedive in 1899. The predominant position assured to us by this twofold title has been used by us for more than a quarter of a century to restore that immense region after the devastation wrought by the Mahdi and the Khalifa, and to endow it with an administration suited to its peoples. They never enjoyed the semblance of tolerable government under the Khedives. Men like Sir Samuel Baker and General Gordon said plainly that Egyptian methods had utterly ruined the Sudan, that the administration was mere 'brigandage,' and that the only reason why the Cairo Government kept possession of the region at all was for the sake of the highly lucrative slave trade. The horrors of the Dervish rule are not yet forgotten either in the Sudan itself or in Europe. They are written in the contemporary accounts of one Kitchener expedition and in the books of Slatin Bey and Father Ohrwalder, who had themselves been Dervish prisoners. We have given the land peace and a measure of prosperity unknown to it in the past."

When the late President Roosevelt visited Egypt and the Sudan in 1910, he paid the highest tribute to the effect of British administration. He declared that it was doubtful whether there was any region in the earth where there was a more striking instance than there was in Khartoum of the genuine progress achieved by the substitution of civilization for savagery, and at Wady Halfa he expressed his profound conviction of the benefits of British rule.

Britain's authority extends over a vast area, and her responsibilities go further than the mere retention of the territory. The welfare of the different peoples has ever been her first care, and it is only necessary to compare the conditions now with those which existed previous to the introduction of the principles of British administration to confirm the truth of this statement. "We hold that we have a trust for these people," declared Premier MacDonald recently, and we should be worse than cowards not to fulfil it. That is the feeling of the ordinary Britisher, and that feeling is too strongly backed by his natural pride in the achievements of his fellow countrymen who have built up the Empire to allow it to be disintegrated by a handful of empty-headed extremists.

Mount Cashel Band

To-night the Mount Cashel Band will give a concert in Bannerman Park, and no doubt there will be the usual large attendance.

During the past few weeks the Band have suffered the loss of Brother Walsh, who was in charge at the Institution, and who did such splendid work in connection with the Band. Brother Walsh was transferred to Seattle. They have also lost six splendid boys all first class performers, two Solo Clarinets, Solo Euphonium, 1st Baritone, the Bell Player, and Bass Drummer. Their time being up they have left the Institution, and it will take some time to replace these boys.

This Band was organized only two years ago with a membership of 22 members, and to-day only 6 to 8 boys of the original number are members of the present Band.

Inexcusable Negligence

Attention is called to the deplorable condition of the antiquated public convenience in Bannerman Park. It is frequented by the children who assemble daily in the recreation ground and in its present state it is unsafe to allow even an animal to enter. We presume someone has been detailed to attend to this place and it is quite time that he was told to see that it is at all times clean and sanitary.

Newfoundland Students' Successes

Two brothers, Ralph and Gerald, the sons of Mr. E. M. LeMessurier, have just scored further successes in scholastic examinations. The latter, who left for England by the last Sackem to enter St. Augustine's College, has just informed his parents by wire that he had successfully passed the Durham University Examination for the L. Th. which he took here last summer. Ralph, who recently took his B.A. at Oxford, is to be ordained on Sunday next at Chester Cathedral. These young men, both distinguished themselves throughout their scholastic career at Bishop Field College and they give every promise of making their mark in the serious work which they have undertaken.

We can sympathize more fully with the relatives of those who have recently lost their lives as we ourselves mourn two very dear shipmates.

Our deepest sympathy is offered to the driver of the car in the recent motor accident, and we appreciate how very much he must feel the loss of his friends.

Impressive Funeral Service to Naval Officers

The funeral obsequies of Lieut.-Commander D. P. O'Callaghan and Lieut. Burrows took place this morning from the City Hall with full naval ceremonial. The procession lined up as follows:—Firing party from H.M.S. Constance with arms reversed; Band from H.M.S. Hood; gun carriage drawn by crew from H.M.S. Hood and carrying the body of Lieut. Commander O'Callaghan with officers as Guard of Honor; gun carriage drawn by men from H.M.S. Repulse with an officers' Guard of Honor and carrying body of Lieut. Burrows; official representative of His Excellency the Governor and officers bearing wreaths; Marines, officers and men from H.M.S. Constance; G.W.V.A. executive; Mayor and City Council; other representative citizens. The cortege moved off at 10 a.m., proceeding via Duckworth Street to the Church of England Cemetery. Along the line of route, hundreds of people stood with bowed heads as the solemn procession moved past. Arriving at the cemetery the caskets covered with Union Jacks and bearing the caps and swords of the deceased officers were brought into the mortuary chapel where the burial service was conducted by Rev. Canon Jeeves. The caskets were then borne to the grave side by the officers of the Guard of Honor. The Commitment Service was taken by his Lordship the Bishop. During the course of the service, "Nearer My God to Thee," and "On the Resurrection Morn" were sung to the accompaniment of the band. The bodies were then consigned to Mother earth, being laid side by side. The firing party fired three volleys, then came the Last Post and as the last note died away arms were presented in silence. The G.W.V.A. representatives then filed past and dropped poppies into the grave. The concluding ceremony was performed by the Governor's representative, Capt. Campbell and other officers of the Special Service Squadron who banded the grave with wreaths. The gathering then slowly dispersed and the ranks of the naval contingents having been reformed they moved off. They have left their comrades resting far from their own homes, but they are in the care of a people to whom they are united by the closest ties and by whom they will not be forgotten.

On behalf of our G. W. V. A. branch here kindly convey to the parents of the late Whitty and King our deepest sympathy in their sad bereavement.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—The sympathy between this most loyal Colony of Newfoundland and the Royal Navy has never shown itself more than at this time of sorrow and mourning. We offer our heartfelt thanks to all those sympathizers who in so many ways have shared our losses with us.

The fact that we have committed two members of the "Constance" to your soil will cement the friendship that has always existed between St. John's and the ship I have the honor to command.

We can sympathize more fully with the relatives of those who have recently lost their lives as we ourselves mourn two very dear shipmates.

Our deepest sympathy is offered to the driver of the car in the recent motor accident, and we appreciate how very much he must feel the loss of his friends.

I am, Sir,
 Yours faithfully,
 D. J. CAMPBELL, Captain.

Dear Sir,—The Captain, Officers and Ship's Company of H.M.S. "Constance" would like to thank, through your columns, the many people who have shown sympathy to them in the loss of their shipmates.

Owing to the large number of wreaths and letter of condolence, it is found impossible at present to write to all and express our thanks. We take this opportunity to assure the relatives of the others killed in this unfortunate accident, of our deepest sympathy, and we would also like to express our very great sympathy with the driver of the car.

Yours faithfully,
 O. MOORE,

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

BANKER FEARED LOST WITH ALL HANDS.

GLoucester, Sept. 18.
 With no report of the schooner "Anita and Bernice" since the gales of August 27, the belief is growing to-day that another Gloucester fishing vessel has passed to the port of missing ships. The "Anita and Bernice" sailed from Boston four weeks ago on a swordfishing trip to the Georges Banks. She was last sighted on the Bank just before the storm, struck the North Atlantic coast in late August. The schooner was commanded by Capt. Albert Larsen of this city and carried a crew of seven. The men who sailed on her were: Ed. M. Proctor, Peter Mann, Peter Nelson, and Chas. Larsen, all of Gloucester; Joseph Targrett, of Nfld.; Alvin Selig and Hilary Conrad of Lunenburg, N.S.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES.

Sept. 17th.—A great argument this day with my wife over the manner in which she neglects me, and indeed, is the rarest thing for me to have a good breakfast, nor can I make the wretch take the care of me that it is proper she should. Indeed, I was in such a heat over it, that I did threaten to reduce her allowance, which causes her to burst into tears, and drives me from the house. So to Water Street, and meet Povey, he pretty madd, and says I did not tell the truth of him in the great storm on the South Coast, and swears he was in no way ill, which do prove to me how some people may, by the force of suggestion, make themselves believe things which are at utter variance with the truth. Much talk of the discourse which Admiral Field made at the luncheon yesterday, and is a straightforward, manly speech, such as one would expect from so able an officer. One thing of importance in the discourse of Mr. Monroe, is of the status of our Island, which is no dominion, as some do think, but a colony. And, indeed, it is better by far to be known as the oldest colony rather than the youngest dominion.

Denial of Iron Mine Bargain

"ST. JOHN'S.—The Government is negotiating with the British Empire Steel Corporation to operate the Bell Island iron mine during the coming winter in return for an order for 50,000 tons of steel rails for the main line island railroad for 550 miles between St. John's and Port aux Basques.

It is claimed that this arrangement will be mutually beneficial."

The above clipping taken from a recent issue of the London Daily Mail is entirely misleading, according to the Prime Minister. The report that the Government is negotiating with Besco to operate Bell Island mines in return for an order for steel rails is absolutely incorrect. The Prime Minister told our reporter to-day, and added that the Government is not considering the purchase of any rails at the present time. We learn that the Railway Commission has decided to use heavier fish plates, and to experiment with them on the present weight of rail. The experiment will be tried out on the Clarendville section. The Commission is rather impressed with the idea that the roadbed should be given the main consideration, and in this connection attention should be given to ballasting rather than by relaying heavier rails.

Personal

Miss Muriel Burridge, who has been on a visit to friends in St. John's, during the summer, left by the express to resume her studies in the nursing profession at Dr. Grey's Hospital, Montreal. She was accompanied by her sister Mrs. Harold Rendell, and children, who will reside at Montreal in future.

Dr. F. A. Jones, the Dentist, who has been on a visit to Montreal and Toronto, during the past four weeks, returned by the Silvia this morning.

Mr. B. C. Nevins, accompanied by his nephew, arrived by the Silvia from New York, on his annual visit. Mr. Nevins made his first trip to Newfoundland on S.S. Stephano, and he was so pleased with Newfoundland as a holiday resort that ever since he has not failed to pay us an annual visit.

Empire Co-Operation

Sydney Bulletin: In the pursuit of an honorable position in the world, and all that it means in spiritual and material profit, we can plump for either independent action or co-operation with Britain's. (The blend of Federal Labor favors the trick of openly denying that there is any necessity for us to arm, while secretly rejoicing that the U. K. is taking the costly duty off our shoulders—can only lead in the long run to disappointing experiences). As to which of the two is the wiser there can hardly be an honest doubt. The universal tendency to-day is in the direction of co-operation, and particularly in the international sphere. Wherever small nations insist on standing alone they cause trouble or achieve it. Australia's obvious and only place is in a British group. From that vantage point it could aim at any national destiny it felt capable of attaining. The rise or fall of its national status would be in its own hands; and neither movement would be affected by our association on land or sea with Britain or any other part of the Empire. The Commonwealth and the rest of the world have been treated as negligible by the United States, France and other parties to the Allied Conference, not because they are parts of the British Empire, but because in all that counts internationally they are negligible.

Nfld. Light & Power Co.

WORK OR RE-CONSTRUCTION AT POWER HOUSE, PETTY HR.

The work of re-construction at the Power House, Petty Hr., which commenced early in July last, under the new company now called the Newfoundland Light and Power Company, Ltd., is progressing very satisfactorily, and the company are hoping to have operations running in full swing by the middle of October. About five months ago the Newfoundland Light and Power Company took over the operation of the St. John's Power and Light Company. The water power development at that time consisted of 4,200 horse power capacity. Several experts who had arrived on the scene and inspected the plant, advised the company to have this power increased to provide a continuous supply of light and power for extended tram system and other purposes. Improvements at the Petty Harbor Plant were found necessary for increased power. The owners acting on advice of the experts, soon got to work, and started operations in this connection. The additional machinery for the Power House was imported, some of which has already been installed and a considerable part of the old plant will be replaced, while the premises have already been reconstructed to suit the purpose. It is estimated that the power will then be increased to 6,000 horse power, which will be sufficient to provide for all future requirements. In the first place it was decided to alter the old V-shaped roof of the Power House into a flat roof of reinforced concrete. This has already been accomplished, the walls having been raised on all four sides of the building an extra eight feet. The job was carried out with dispatch, well handled, and this improvement alone has cost in the vicinity of $70,000. The building is now absolutely fire-proof.

15 Ton Crane Installed.

One of the chief reasons for having the roof raised was to give the necessary space for the installing and operating of a crane for the moving of machinery. This crane, with its huge steel girders, and carriage, with a weight of 15 tons, has been placed in position and rests on rails on either side of the interior of the building, some 15 feet above the floor, and can be operated by hand chains from below. To clearly demonstrate the worth of this machine for lifting, one of the generators, with the assistance of four men was removed a few days ago in five hours. Several years ago, without the use of a crane, and with twelve men employed on the job, it took twelve days to do it. The work of removing the old machinery to be replaced by the new has been carried on without the slightest hitch by the men employed, under the supervision of Mr. Wm. Taylor. The crane will be kept aloft permanently for general use. A new high tension switchboard of the single press type has been installed, and is a big improvement over the former, particularly from a safety point of view. It contains five panels on the front, as well as two generator panels, two feeders, and one extra panel. This switchboard is of the most modern type and was made by the Canadian General Electric. The old indoor transformer has also been abandoned, also the 500 K.W. switchboard. At present the workmen are busy setting space for the installing of a new 2,000 k.w. generator, which is of the very latest type. It weighs about seven tons, and will substitute two 500 k.w. generators, which have been abandoned after many years of service. The officials are hoping to have this change over ready for full operation by the second week of October. The 1750 k.w. generator running at present will be shut down later and re-installed. A representative from the Westinghouse Electric Company has been engaged for that purpose. The turbines which have given entire satisfaction during the past 13 years do not need replacing as yet. These turbines will be thoroughly overhauled in due course and will be made as good as new. Three new transformers of the outdoor type, each weighing 7 tons, have been erected on the outside of the building. These take the place of six of the old type which have been abandoned. It is the company's intention at a later date to install an extra generator of 2,500 k.w., which will give an increased horse power of between 650 and 700.

No alterations will be made to the same at present. Mr. Alan Williams is in charge of this end of the plant and with recent repairs the same is now in A-1 condition. It has been proposed to construct a new wooden pipe flume later on. The plans are being made to run it down by the side of the main river bed on the Petty Hr. side, to the Power House. The present one is 2,300 feet long. Construction work at this end will give a great deal of employment for the mechanics and laborers.

No Shortage of Water.
There has been no scarcity of water at the plant in the summer. The only water drawn was from Second and Big Pond; besides, there was always a good supply in Middle and Cochrane Ponds available. The work of re-construction at the Petty Hr. plant is going on with great rapidity, and to Mr. Wm. Taylor, who is superintendent ing the installation of the new apparatus, with Foreman, Mr. John Halley, the painstaking official of the Power House for the past twenty-three years, every praise is due. The much needed improvements will ensure no loss of light or power in future and may possibly result in a cheaper light rate later on. The site for the new substation is still uncertain. The Government, it is understood, gave the new company a site west of the Gas Works, but the City Council raised an objection. The company intends to build a new sub station, and an up-to-date car barn, involving an outlay of about $100,000.

Baby Week

Baby Week, under the direction of the Child Welfare Association, is continuing very successfully at the Star Hall, and yesterday many mothers and children visited the hall, and much valuable information was received. The various stalls are attracting much attention, whilst the posters around the walls contain much that should be of benefit to the mothers of the city.

At 5 o'clock Mrs. D. L. Nichol addressed a large audience on the subject of "The Child Mind." The address was a very instructive one and showed the speaker to be well acquainted with the subject. The different things that affect the child's mind were shown, and many instances, humorous and otherwise, were cited to make the meaning clear. Valuable advice was given as to the kind of stories, etc., to tell the children, and the mothers were advised not to frighten their offspring, as very often the dread of things received in early childhood remain all through life. Children are great imitators and parents should always be careful what they do and say in the presence of the children, who will imitate sometimes what is not at all desirable. The value of teaching self-control was also dealt with, and it was shown how this can be done, and its desirability. Many other phases of the subject were dealt with in a very capable manner, and Mrs. Nichol concluded with an appeal to the mothers, in whom, she said, lies the future of Newfoundland. The children of to-day are the coming rulers of the country, and it rests with the mothers to see to it that they are worthy in every respect.

LAST NIGHT'S FOOTBALL

C.L.B. Play To A Draw With Guards

The Guards and C.L.B. teams tried conclusions at St. George's Field last night, in the fixture for the Tie Cup, and to the surprise of many the game ended in a draw, one goal each. The C.L.B. team to a man played true to form and at times had matters practically all their own way over the Champions. The Guards taking advantage of the westerly breeze played into the eastern goal in the first half, and try as they would, all attempts to score were successfully frustrated by the backs, Husey and Noonan, who were playing a good game. After 15 minutes of play the ball was transferred west by the C.L.B. and by good combination on their part, the first goal was recorded through Hooker. The Guards then came to life and shortly before half time they were awarded a free kick outside of the penalty area. This was well placed by Rose who equalized matters.

Second Half.

Upon resumption of play the Guards upped the ball to the western goal. The forwards were getting in some excellent work but try as they would the C.L.B. goalie was unbeatable, and the defence were putting up a good game as from the very outset, and would allow nothing to pass. On several occasions the C.L.B. forwards brought the spheroid down field and caused the Guards no little worry near the goal area. Several corners followed without result, although one was nicely placed by E. Hennebury, but was fisted out by Joyce. Towards the close of the game the ball was sent from end to end with honors about evenly divided. No further scoring resulted. The game ended in a draw, one goal all, this necessitating a play-off. Mr. T. Delahunty was referee. Should weather conditions permit this game will be replayed to-morrow, commencing at 6 o'clock sharp.

CITY RUNNERS GIVE CREDITABLE PERFORMANCE ON BELL ISLAND.

The sporting section of Bell Island had another pleasant surprise on Saturday evening, when W. Linegar (T. A. St. John's), faced Jacob Ralph (C. L.B. St. John's), in a most interesting contest.

Linegar had previously visited the Iron Isle, and had defeated Stone in a fine exhibition, but this time he was suffering from the effects of the N. A.A.A. Sports, and claimed that he was not in his usual form. Ralph, too, had been a competitor in the long distance race, and although both were feeling their grueling experience, they went into the event with great spirit and delighted the many enthusiasts who wended their way to the Star Field.

Ralph was given a handicap of 220 yards, and from the opening of the race he ran in excellent form, winning many admirers from the people who witnessed his stride for the first time. At the eleventh lap, however, Linegar passed his opponent, and from that lap, until the final round, the race was well run, although Linegar was marked from the twelfth lap as the winner.

The spectators greatly enjoyed the exhibition, as well as the excellent characteristics of both competitors.

Journalist's Boots not Needed That Day

In connection with the murder of King Alexander and Queen Draga of Serbia in 1908, Mr. Wickham Steed, who, as editor of the London Times, travelled through Canada with Lord Northcliffe, tells a remarkable story in the Review of Reviews. Here are his words:

The revolving details of the crime, the strange apathy of the Russian minister at Belgrade who heard the explosion as the door of the palace was blown in, but did nothing until he saw the bodies of the King and Queen thrown from the window, and the reign of terror afterwards established by the regime officers, are matters of history. But one tragicomic incident remains in my memory.

The day before the assassinations, a well known Danish journalist had "interviewed" King Alexander, who had wished him also to "interview" Queen Draga on the morrow. Though he had intended to leave Belgrade that night, the journalist decided to stay on at his hotel for twenty-four hours and, after writing out his interview with the King, went to bed, leaving a pair of patent leather boots outside the door of his room so that they might be cleaned in readiness for his audience with the Queen in the morning. He woke late, dressed hurriedly, and opened the door to get his boots. They had disappeared. He rang for the valet, but in vain. Then he went to the head of the stairs and shouted for a maid or a waiter. At length a boy appeared.

"Where are my patent leather boots?" asked the journalist angrily. "You need no patent leather boots," the boy replied.

"You impudent young rascal, I must have my boots," roared the who were on the most friendly terms, and were good, clean sports throughout.

L. A. F. Power acted as starter; the judges being, R. D. Walsh and Capt. Leo. Murphy; the timekeepers were J. H. Morley and P. J. Murphy. The time for the three miles was sixteen minutes and fifty seconds as against 18. The last time Linegar ran on Bell Island.

Run For Pennant Very Tight In Both National And American Leagues.

NEW YORK.—The baseball season has another month to go, and it probably would be just as well for the fans in Brooklyn and Washington to restrain their enthusiasm for a moment until the effective knockout blow administered to the contenders. Although the Yankees have been pushed around roughly in the last few weeks the players are still entertaining a confidence that they will win out on their present road trip.

A realization of their precarious position may prod the Yankees into a fighting attitude. A revival of the irresistible batting attack which has carried them to the front in past seasons will offset any pitching inefficiency which may continue during the coming important invasion of the Middle West.

The Yankees have made the mistake of being too much impressed with their ability to win when the spirit moved them. They have won so much in the past that they have underestimated the strength of Washington. They regarded Detroit as the only club which would give them trouble, and in the meantime Washington has pushed to the front.

The Senators are under a terrific strain. They have just as hard a time ahead of them as the Yankees. Washington hasn't won the pennant yet. Detroit is still in position to make a lot of trouble.

So much enthusiasm has been aroused over Brooklyn's great upset that the fans have overlooked the fact that the Giants are still very much in the pennant race. McCraw's club will play better baseball with the odds against them. They have done it in the past. The fact should not be overlooked that there is more reserve power on the Giants than on any other club. The Robins have been going at a phenomenal pace, while the Giants have been under no particular strain.

Will Circle Globe in One-Man Boat

GREEK SAILOR WANTS TO MAKE HISTORY.

An attempt to sail around the world in a twenty-four-foot sailboat, a converted lifeboat with a small box cabin, will be made from New York by Dimitrios Sigelakis, twenty-six, a seaman from the island of Crete.

Sigelakis, who built his boat in Hoboken at a cost of $2,400, and brought it to the Battery, said he was inspired by a dream to circle the globe in a one-man boat.

"When I saw that Frenchman come here, I force myself to do that dream," he said, referring to the trip of Alain Gerbault, the French tennis star, who came from France in a slightly larger boat than Sigelakis' Carcharias, meaning "the shark."

"I have that in my brain before three years to do that, but when I see that Frenchman, I make so much economy, I sell my properties, I work in restaurant, and some people of my countries help me, too," Sigelakis declared enthusiastically. "I want to be champion and to make history." he said, adding that he will keep a log book, which he expects to sell.

He plans to sail to Gibraltar and then to Piræus, Greece, where he will use his boat as "a museum," obtaining money for the rest of the journey. He then will pass through the Suez Canal and cross the Indian and Pacific oceans to the Panama Canal and up to the Atlantic coast to New York.

The boat has only one mast and will receive its motive power solely from the jib and mainsail, as there is no auxiliary motor. Sail can be raised and lowered during a storm by two hand winches within the cabin.

Sigelakis said the air tanks fore and aft will keep his craft from turning over, and a 300-pound steel ball will be used to supplement the keel during storms. He plans to sleep by day and will sail at night, getting his position each noon with a sextant. To keep the boat from drifting during the day he will throw out a drag sail.

The cabin is eight feet long, five feet wide and forty inches high, and contains a large table and a small bunk. Its only ventilation during a heavy storm will be through a small vent pipe in the roof.

A PHOTO-PLAY OF WHITE BLACKMAIL.

ALL THE MONEY IN THE WORLD—and all the looks. These Cordelia had. She lost the money but not her beauty. And a girl like Cordelia needs money, lots of it. Otherwise she's not herself. What did Cordelia do? She was incapable of earning it, yet she must. Leroy Scott has written her story—you may have read it in Hearst's International—and Metro has put it out a photoplay starring Clara Kimball Young. "Cordelia the Magnificent" is its name—a name worth remembering if you like the unusual in pictures.

He estimates it would require two and a half years for the trip of 36,000 miles, and between 90 and 120 days to cross the Atlantic. Food for four months and thirty-five gallons of water will be carried, and the water will be replenished on the trip by a drain pipe which collects the rain on the roof of the cabin.

He plans to sail to Gibraltar and then to Piræus, Greece, where he will use his boat as "a museum," obtaining money for the rest of the journey. He then will pass through the Suez Canal and cross the Indian and Pacific oceans to the Panama Canal and up to the Atlantic coast to New York.

Mm. Poincaré Hates Very Word "Politics"

Stephen Lauzanne, editor of the Paris Matin, asks in the August World's Work, "Will French Women Ever Vote?" M. Lauzanne is of the opinion that they will not until they themselves show a desire for the suffrage. At present French women have no political status; they cannot even vote in municipal elections. "There is but one answer," says M. Lauzanne. "It is so because the women of France want it to be so. And it will continue to be so as long as the women of Paris desire it."

M. Lauzanne quotes as typical the views expressed by three French women of high station. One was the late Empress Eugénie. M. Lauzanne once asked her:

"Does your Majesty consider it the duty of all women to participate in politics?"

"No," she exclaimed, "and the reply was sharp and cutting. 'Politics are cruel, bringing nothing to woman but tears and pain.'"

He asked Mme. Poincaré what she would say if her husband were re-elected president.

"I would immediately demand a divorce," was the quick reply. "I simply hate politics."

"But," I insisted, "I thought that the occupant of this mansion stood for feminism and woman suffrage."

"No!" Mme. Poincaré retorted. "There is but one feminist in this house. It is the president, not I."

Editors Think Death Penalty was Warranted

American Newspapers Disapprove of Justice Caverly's View—Fear of Pardon—Doubt Expressed That Leopold and Loeb Will Stay in Prison.

(Herald-Times, New York.)

The sentences imposed upon Leopold and Loeb seem to the Herald-Tribune inadequate justice, and we believe that most people will share our feeling. To most of those who followed the testimony in Chicago these youths were not youths in the ordinary sense but graduates and past masters in the ferocities and impulses of criminality. If ever two murderers deserved death, these two did, on the record established.

(The Times, New York.)

Judge Caverly's decision sentencing Leopold and Loeb to life imprisonment, instead of inflicting upon them the extreme penalty of the law for a most atrocious murder, comes as a great surprise, not because of its substance but because of the reasons given for it. It was the youth of the murderers that influenced the judge, sufficient force to evoke expressions of indignation to the prestige of the courts as the agency for the enforcement of the law.

(The Recorder, Philadelphia.)

If Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb had exactly the same chance in a court of justice that is the lot of most defendants accused of revolting crimes, the disposition of their cases would have been of little moment to any but themselves and their families. Wealth, and the assistance it buys, however, made of their efforts to evade the gallows, a sort of test between the power of money and the power of the law. The outcome will unfortunately be accepted by many as a triumph for money.

those sons again at large. That celebrated case is over, for the time being. There may be other chapters of it.

(The Tribune, Chicago.)

If the punishment given the murderers meets the approval of the state, their approval indicates that the retention of punishment by death in any case in this state is wrong. We do not see how the conscience of the state would permit any person to be sentenced to the gallows hereafter if the public approves the measure of punishment in this case.

(The Washington Post.)

The sentence of life imprisonment imposed upon Leopold and Loeb is justified by Judge Caverly on the ground of their youth. He had the sole power to determine whether they should be imprisoned or suffer death. His judgment is entitled to respect, and perhaps he has judged wisely in the circumstances. Time will tell.

(The Washington Star.)

It gives the people of this country, with few exceptions, a shock that Judge Caverly's reasoning may to some extent soften the feeling that full justice has not been done, but that feeling will remain nevertheless in sufficient force to evoke expressions of indignation to the prestige of the courts as the agency for the enforcement of the law.

London Bridge

While the question of constructing a new bridge over the Thames at St. Paul's is still being keenly debated, it is of interest to recall that the hundredth anniversary of London Bridge recently took place, for it was on March 15, 1824, that the first pile of the structure was driven.

The need for the bridge had been felt and discussed for a long time previously, the older bridge, a little lower down the stream, having for years been inadequate. Faced, therefore, by this necessity, the City Corporation in 1822 advertised for designs for a new structure, and finally selected those submitted by John Barent, the elder. From these the bridge with which we are all familiar was built by Rennie's two sons, John and George.

The bridge, as everybody knows, is of granite, and no fewer than 120,000 tons of that stone were used in its construction. Although the bridge is 2,500 feet long, its width in the first instance was 54 feet, but that was increased in 1903-4 to 63 feet. Of its 50 arches that in the centre has a span of 102 feet, the two adjoining it 140 feet each, and those nearest the shore 130 feet each.

Although the first pile was driven in March, 1824, it was not till June 15, 1924, that the first stone was laid by the Lord Mayor of the day, Alderman Garrett. King William IV, accompanied by his Queen, opened it on August 1, 1825, so that the work from first to last took over seven years to complete. Its cost is variously estimated from half-a-million to two-and-a-half millions, according to what is taken into account. A close estimate places the cost of the bridge itself at $2,500,000, the difference between that figure and two-and-a-half millions being accounted for in widening and improving the approaches, having the property of a valuable kind, namely, of course, to be dealt with. At that time the handsome thoroughfare leading from the Mansion House to the bridge known as King William Street was constructed, or reconstructed, and the name may possibly have been selected consequent on the king's visit to open the bridge. The statue of King William IV, was certainly placed at the end forming one of the main approaches to the bridge.

Since the bridge was opened, the traffic over it has almost completely changed in character. The old four-wheel cab, for instance, has all but disappeared, the hansom cab has come and gone, horse-drawn buses have been entirely superseded, the heavy lumbering dray has largely given place to the motor lorry, and motors of every type now form almost the sole vehicular traffic. A census taken in March, 1859, showed that in a single day there passed over the bridge 20,498 vehicles, including 4,483 cabs and 4,236 omnibuses, and 167,910 persons, of whom 107,074 were on foot and 60,836 in vehicles. Now it is estimated that 20,000 to 25,000 vehicles and 120,000 pedestrians cross the bridge every day.

While the bridge was intended in the first instance as a link between north and south, it is also a main instrument in dividing London into east and west. The Thames west of the bridge is known as above bridge; east of the structure it is below bridge; and the distinction is great. Westward, traffic on the river is restricted by the nature of the case to small steamers, barges, lighters, and similar craft, and the banks are for the most part interesting and inviting, with the Embankment, Houses of Parliament, County Hall, clubs, and hotels as outstanding features. Below the bridge may be found steamers of every size and type from every land, and one is confronted with docks, wharves, warehouses, and all the buildings and equipments incidental to one of the greatest shipping ports of the world. That aspect of the matter must have loomed largely during the recent dock strike, for most of the workers concerned were located below the bridge; the whole population of London westward was affected in other ways; but the division of interests was there.

Little is known to Londoners to-day of the old bridge; yet it had a life of something like 600 years. Wooden houses were built along its sides and were several times destroyed by fire, and it was not removed until 1832, when the present bridge was finally complete.

THE WEARY, SUMMER COTTAGER.

At Pointe Aux Barques, in Michigan, I met a sad and gloomy man; A gloomy man behind a tree, In hiding there he seemed to be.

"Why do you hide?" said I to him, "And why this look of anxious grim? Why don't you boldly walk about?" He whispered low: "Pray, do not shout! I came out here to rest alone And do not wish my presence known."

"Of what," asked I, "are you afraid? Have you done wrong to man or maid? That thus you hide yourself away And in such dark seclusion stay?" "Sit down," said he, "I'll tell my tale. Why seek I cover like the quail; And why it is I do not dare To occupy my rocking chair; I came out here to rest, but oh, The good wife keeps me on the go."

"If she beholds me sitting down She promptly sends me into town For oil or cheese or bread or milk, Fly swatters or a yard of silk; If I should take a book to read, A chunk of ice at once she'd need; If I but pause to pet the pup She promptly wants a shelf put up; The moment that I come in view She has a chore for me to do."

"I pick up bathing suits and chase 'em bits of paper around the place; rake the yard and split the wood, run errands round the neighborhood; And every time I think I'm through She's thought up something else to do; And that is why I sneaky alone And keep my whereabouts unknown; Behind this ancient, friendly tree I come to rest where she can't see."

Soot by the Ton

HOW SCIENCE MEASURES IMPURITIES POLLUTING THE AIR OF OUR GREAT CITIES.

Soot and tar by the ton—and all from the atmosphere! How often do the scientists remind us of these atmospheric impurities, but comparatively few of us know how the soot and tar are collected from their aerial abode and their weight determined.

One of the men best qualified to talk on the subject is Dr. John S. Owens, the well-known consulting engineer, who acts as Hon. Secretary for the Advisory Committee on Atmospheric Pollution. From him an "Answers" representative recently obtained the information contained in this article.

To catch a weighable quantity of soot, etc., a shallow, funnel-like gauge with an opening about four feet square is used.

Trapping The Tar.

This is properly protected against the introduction of tree leaves, road dust, and all other artificial contamination. The instrument is kept away from any obstacle for a distance of twice the height of the obstacle.

If, for example, there is a wall ten feet high, then you must go twenty feet away from that wall in order to fix your gauge.

Into this broad gauge, soot, tar, and other impurities in the air fall, and are washed by the rain into a large bottle beneath. The narrow neck of the gauge is inserted in the bottle for that purpose.

At the end of each month the bottle is changed, but not before care has been taken that the gauge itself is thoroughly rinsed into it, so that not the least particle of soot or other impurity is missed.

The bottle after a month's rain, is, of course, pretty full of water, and this is first allowed to settle properly, after which it is filtered. The deposit, both from the water and from the bottom of the bottle, is then ready for weighing, and for analysis.

The Soots' Paradise.

On this point, Dr. Owens explained that the exact area of the opening of each gauge is known. From that area a calculation is made which supplies the total weight of the deposit per square mile for the month over which the deposit has extended.

If, say, for December the gauge in Golden Lane, in the City of London, showed a deposit of soot, etc., amounting to sixty grains' weight, a calculation based on the area of the gauge opening would give a deposit of about twenty-eight tons per square mile. The deposit at neighbouring gauges, he assures us, is such as to confirm the reliability of the principle on which the calculation is based.

Of the towns which made a record of their atmospheric pollution, Dr. Owens said that Newcastle-on-Tyne, on the average of a number of years, had the most tar in its atmosphere, whilst Liverpool also stood high in that respect. Southwest Birmingham, on the average, was the least tarry. Rochdale and Newcastle-on-Tyne were among the sootiest towns which sent in measurements.

Too Modest to Measure.

But there are towns much sootier than these. They are too modest, however, to send in any statistical records of their sootiness and tarriness. The shyest towns in this respect, Dr. Owens declared, were the "very filthy towns and the seaside resorts."

"Any particular seaside resort?" Dr. Owens was asked.

"Yes." For the purposes of this article, however, the offender shall remain "Blanktown."

The most harmful of atmospheric impurities are those which come from the sulphur in coal and coke. They eat away building stone and kill vegetation. Loss of sunlight is the chief evil caused by the presence of soot in the atmosphere.

Household Notes.

If hash is to be baked, garnish it with halved, stuffed, hard-cooked eggs covered with buttered crumbs.

Pears make a delicious ginger. Prepare as you would apple ginger flavoured with both lemon and orange.

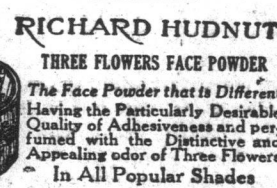

Beans are nice when boiled until half done in clear water, then drained and finished cooking in ham stock.

UNCLE JOE.

When I was young I piled a hoe for thirty cents a day; the boss — we called him Uncle Joe — had kopecks put away. His farm was mostly made of rocks, with stinging soil between, and it required the hardest knocks to raise a squash or bean. The things we ate, the things we wore were raised upon that farm; the plan of buying at the store for Joe had little charm. He always had some stuff for sale when he repaired to town; he would not think of spending kope when he could salt it down. He had some butter in a crock, some eggs, a bale of wool; sometimes he sold a bunch of stock, some roosters or a bull. He never bought a single thing that he could raise at home, and he was happy as a king, existence was a pome. His grandson farms the old home place — his name is Willyum Woods — and every day I see him chase to town to buy some goods. He buys his ham and bacon there, his flour and winer-wurst, and goes home groaning in despair that farming is a curse. He buys the things he ought to sell, the things he ought to grow, and, going home, I hear him yell and yammer in his woe. He buys whatever he can find, and has no junk for sale, and, maybe seven jumps behind, the sheriff keeps his trail. He hasn't learned to make things go, he hasn't learned to save; and doubtless poor old Uncle Joe is turning in his grave.

Getting the Facts About Mars

It is gratifying to note that one scientist, Abbe Moreux of the Bourges Observatory, has been at pains to explode myths about possible communications with Mars, which of course predicated the existence of human life, in our conception of the term, and civilized institutions on that planet. During the past half century more fantastic rubbish has been written in newspapers about Mars than was ever published about the sea serpent. There are perhaps millions of readers of the type who believe what they see in the Sunday supplements and accept the possibility of a race of Martians, similar to our own terrestrials, familiar with English or some other European language and the Morse code; and utilizing our own engineering devices for the construction of canals.

Abbe Moreux as a result of his own observations through a powerful telescope is of the opinion that there may be heavy vegetation of an undetermined character on Mars; but that it would be impossible for a dog or even a mouse to exist there. As for human beings capable of the arts of earthly civilization, that is of course, out of the question. There is nothing new about this revelation of the Abbe's except his surmise as to the existence of vegetation. The folly of ordinary speculation about a race of Martians was pointed out two generations ago in one of the "Breakfast Table" causeries of the late Oliver Wendell Holmes, who was himself a scientist. Science has long been able to analyze the atmospheric structure surrounding most of the planets and examination of Mars has failed to reveal oxygen in the right proportions to support human life. As Dr. Holmes pointed out life on the planets, if life there is, probably takes forms that for us would be horrible and unendurable nightmares.

It is natural for astronomers and scientists in general to try and get a good look at Mars when the opportunity arises. But every time they do so a multitude of syndicated liars bloom forth with fantasies about communications with Mars as a variation on the adventures of Jiggs and Andy Gump. It is refreshing to note Abbe Moreux's attempt to check these delusions, but he is not likely to succeed in this glib world of ours.

REVENGE FOR WIFE'S BOB.

GOOSE CREEK, Tex., Aug. 30.—A Goose Creek husband used an original method of "getting back" after the usual result in a family argument as to whether or not his wife should bob her hair.

After she had made it plain that her hair was to be bobbed, he cut-ted to accompany her on the visit to the barber. They found two vacant chairs in the shop. When the wife had given instructions that her hair be bobbed, the husband instructed his barber to shave his head. The object, apparently, was to preserve the relative length of the family hair.

Harbor Grace Notes

The Danish scho. "Helga", Captain Modeson, arrived on Friday from Marytown, England, to Messrs. Murray & Crawford, and is loading seal oil for Glasgow.

S.S. Meigle, from Labrador, called here on Friday night. The fishery has been very poor at some parts of the coast, and consequently a number of fishermen returned home by this boat.

Mrs. R. S. Munn and Miss Muriel Munn, having spent the summer at Shoal Bay Islands, Labrador, returned home by the Meigle on Friday. Miss Munn leaves town during the week, for Toronto, Canada, where she will resume her studies at college there.

Miss Flo Goodwin left by Friday morning's train for St. John's to connect with s.s. Rosalind, en route to Sackville, N.B., where she will resume her studies.

Mr. T. J. Quintin, who has been in charge of Upper Island Cove School the past two years, left by the Rosalind en route to Montreal, where he will enter McGill University to study medicine. Jim's many friends wish him success in his studies.

Cadet Greenham, who had been stationed with the Salvation Army here since December, leaves town this week to enter the Training College, St. John's. He made his farewell at the Citadel on Sunday.

Miss Julia Garland, stenographer at G. Knowling, Ltd., St. John's, is in town on a week's visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Garland.

Miss McFarlane of St. John's, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. J.

Driscoll, returned to the city again on Tuesday last. Mrs. Driscoll accompanied her, and will remain for a while visiting relatives and friends.

Rev. W. R. J. and Mrs. Higitt left by Thursday afternoon's train, for Dil-do, where they will remain for two weeks.

Mrs. Mollie Pugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Pugh, left here by Friday morning's train to connect with the Rosalind en route to Calgary, Alberta. Miss Pugh has been connected with the 1st St. John's Company of Girl Guides since the formation of the Company, and was an interested and energetic worker. The Guides met on Monday night last, when a farewell address was given Lieutenant Pugh, accompanied by a piece of gold. Miss Pugh takes with her the best wishes of her many friends for much happiness and success amidst her new surroundings.

We congratulate the successful candidates in the C.H.E. Examinations. The results, which have recently come to hand, show that the pupils of the different schools here were very successful.

Mrs. John LeDrew, arrived home on Thursday last, after a thirteen months' absence, during which time she visited her relatives and friends in Canada, among them being her daughters, Misses Annie and Alma, and her son Ralph, at Regina; and daughters, Mrs. George Bussey and Miss Pearl, at Toronto. The latter has recently left Toronto and gone to Regina to live. Mrs. LeDrew spent the last month in Sydney. Her many friends are pleased to see her looking so well after the trip.

An excursion to visit H.M.S. Hood was arranged for Sunday and in spite of the unfavorable weather, the Pawnee left here at 1.30 with a large number on board. Needless to say the party were amply repaid for their visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Jordan Simmons, of Whitbourne, motored to town on Wednesday, and returned again the same evening.

On Tuesday last, there was laid to rest in the Church of England cemetery, Mrs. Noel, widow of the Rev. Canon John M. Noel. The end came at the good old age of 80 years, after a life of usefulness and service for others. She leaves behind four daughters, Mrs. (Rev. Canon) F. Smart, of Heart's Content, Mrs. J. T. McRae, of this town, Mrs. C. C. Butt of Bay Roberts and Miss Florence; one son, William, of the Surveyor's Department, St. John's, to all of whom we offer sympathy. The funeral was largely attended and the services were conducted by Revs. E. E. Rustad, E. M. Bishop, W. R. J. Higitt, while Revs. E. C. Clench, W. E. R. Cracknell and J. Goodland, were also in attendance.

The sad news reached town on Sunday of the death of Mr. Thomas Davis, son of Mrs. Edward Davis, which occurred at Montreal on Saturday. No details have come to hand as to what brought about the end of this promising young life. Thomas, as he was familiarly known, had been employed at Strapp's Pharmacy for a couple of years prior to his going away, and left here in the spring for Montreal. The body will be brought home for burial. Our deepest sympathy goes out to the sorrowing family.

Mr. Grace, Sept. 15th.

Canada's Biological Stations

Marine research in Canada can be traced directly to the activities of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. Zoologists were reminded of this fact at the University today by Dr. E. E. Prince, Canadian Commissioner of Fisheries, who showed how plans for the organization in the Dominion of laboratories for zoological research were brought to a head by the first Toronto meeting of the society in 1897. Dr. Prince was the first chairman of the Biological Board of Canada, and he is given credit for originating the scheme for fostering this type of research by the Government. Several years after he made the suggestion in 1893, a committee was appointed by the British Association meeting here, and the result was the setting aside of $15,000 for the purpose of equipping a station and maintaining it for five years. The move was speedily justified, and since then, the activities of the Biological Board have developed many ramifications.

A similar Pacific station was erected in 1905 near Nanaimo, B.C., and a third station was also carried on for some years on Georgian Bay, Ontario, for the study of the fisheries of the Great Lakes.

No lectures or instruction have been provided at these stations, which are purely for research, and only qualified workers are admitted. All the facilities for investigations are furnished gratis, and board and travelling expenses are provided. At each station a small biological vessel for work at sea, and a number of smaller boats with nets and appropriate equipment, enable work to be carried on in adjacent waters. The fisheries problems have always been most prominent in the programme of work each season, but owing to the severe winter weather, and academic duties occupying most of the workers during part of the year, the chief researches are carried on in the summer. A very large amount of original scientific work has been accomplished.

Over 300 papers have been published embodying researches by the staff of workers each year, and the total number of workers ranges from 20 to 30. Especially notable are the investigations upon insulin. Much important work has been done at the stations in regard to the sources of insulin and very striking results have also been accomplished in an extensive survey of currents and tidal movements in the Bay of Fundy and Gulf of St. Lawrence, by means of specially devised drift bottles. This last investigation has taken on an international character and the United States and the government of France and Newfoundland have recently participated in the work, which is of great importance in connection with the migrations of food fishes.

The board publishes at intervals volumes entitled "Contributions to Canadian Biology" and also special "bulletins" and "studies."

The Great Lakes station has ceased to operate, but the marine researches on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts have been largely extended. Recently at Halifax, N.S. a project has been entered upon for the erection of a large fisheries sub-station under the supervision of the board.

It is creditable to scientific workers in Canada that during the whole history of the Biological stations, without exception, the workers have received no emolument for the work done. The stations provide facilities for men from the universities coming into contact with great fisheries' problems, and it is difficult to estimate the benefit which biological science has gained and the substantial aid the fisheries have received during the quarter of a century which has elapsed since the work was first begun.

Woman Uses Knife
on Rival After First
Duel Over ManThe Bested in Fight On Road Made
Famous By "Evangeline"

ALEXANDRIA, La.—Mrs. A. D. Foreman received medical attention in a hospital here recently for stab wounds in the back, chest and shoulder, inflicted after what she said was a "fair fist fight" with Miss Mildred Lee of this place. Mrs. Foreman in commenting on the encounter said:

"I might have known that any woman who steals another woman's husband would not fight fairly. Down at Rapides Parish, the fight was to have been one of those old-fashioned, knee-knuckle affairs, the victor of which was to be undisputed custodian of A. D. Foreman, who she charged had been dividing his attentions between his wife and Miss Lee.

The combat took place on a quiet stretch of the Lake Charles Alexandria Road, near Alexandria, according to Mrs. Foreman, and her wounds are testimony of its seriousness. The sheriff is saying nothing. He will do nothing until consultation with the District Attorney.

"Now, if it had been men stabbing each other," the Sheriff declared, "it would have been a simple thing. But these women? It is best for a man to keep out of a woman's arguments until things simmer down."

Mrs. Foreman, accompanied by Miss Julia Benfield, a friend, drove from Lake Charles to Alexandria Monday, with the express intention of whipping Miss Lee, she told the Sheriff.

"She stole my husband a year ago," Mrs. Foreman charged. "I got tired of it and tired of her, and decided to settle once and for all whether he is my husband or her man."

Mrs. Foreman met Miss Lee on the Bayou Road—the trail made self.

memorial by the story of Evangeline. According to Mrs. Foreman, she opened conversation with her enemy about her husband. In the argument that followed came the challenge for "a fair fist fight," to settle the issue. The women were to stand toe to toe and fight until one of them cried "enough."

The fight got under way and Miss Lee was getting the worst of it, Mrs. Foreman being more solidly built. Then, according to Mrs. Foreman, she was stabbed and was forced to withdraw.

The Old Side-Saddle

According to Mr. Vignoles of the Chestnut Hill Riding School, says the Boston Transcript, the sidesaddle must and will come back because of its greater comfort, safety, and scientific correctness for women. He feels that the English saddle is not adapted for older women. Riding astride is all right for young girls and women with long limbs. But the pelvic bone in women is wider and flatter than in men, and their legs are usually rounder and they are unable to get down into the saddle as a man can. A Mexican saddle, because of its high cantle, would correct some of the faults the English saddle possesses.

In England recently Mr. Vignoles hunted with the Devon and Somerset stag hounds in the Lorna Doone country. About 60 women rode in the hunt and only two were astride. With so many small ravines and gullies which the horses cannot gallop down but rather jump down like rabbits, Mr. Vignoles believes the terrible impact would have injured them. The double pommel of the sidesaddle gives a firmer grip and makes a fall less likely. Of course, as several women riders and instructors have stated in answer to Mr. Vignoles, it is a fall more difficult for a rider to save himself.

Mrs. Foreman, accompanied by Miss Julia Benfield, a friend, drove from Lake Charles to Alexandria Monday, with the express intention of whipping Miss Lee, she told the Sheriff. "She stole my husband a year ago," Mrs. Foreman charged. "I got tired of it and tired of her, and decided to settle once and for all whether he is my husband or her man."

Mrs. Foreman met Miss Lee on the Bayou Road—the trail made self.

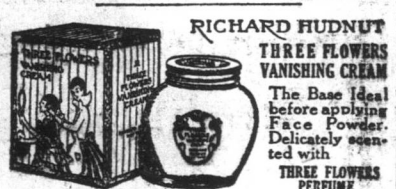

The Vital Spark

Lingers Three Days in Beheaded Swordfish.

North Sydney, Sept. 12.—The new fish pier at Boston has been set agog by a swordfish received there from North Sydney, according to word received here today by the shipper, R. L. Mosher, Superintendent of the Cape Breton Cold Storage Co., Ltd., from John Nagle Company, fish buyers. The fish caught in Cape Breton waters on August 6th, beheaded and cleaned, was found to be still alive when it was removed from the ice pack at Boston Pier on August 9th.

Nagle states that the like has never happened previously in the history of the Boston swordfish industry. It is a quite common thing to see the body of a cleaned fish work for several hours after it had been landed here, but no person of experience in the swordfishery has knowledge of so pronounced a case. The information received from Boston is that, because of the active condition of the fish it was split, and examination revealed a peculiar growth lying along the spinal column. The flesh was inspected by an examiner, and found to be wholly unaffected by the growth, and after it had been removed the fish was passed for sale.

The fish weighed about three hundred and fifty pounds, and Nagles report it to be of exceptionally fine quality.

Youth Kills Friend
Sparring in Street

HITS HIM BELOW THE BELT IN FRIENDLY BOUT.

A blow below the belt struck during a friendly sparring bout between two youths at Rockaway Avenue and Herkimer street, killed Emil Neapolitano, seventeen of No. 28 Ocean Place, Brooklyn. Tony Allitino, 20, of No. 2047 Fulton Street, voluntarily surrendered to the police and was locked up in the Brownsville Station, charged with manslaughter.

In the Ocean Hill section of Brooklyn, once the home of Johnny Dundee and "Pepper" Martin, boxing is the favorite sport among the youths. Both Neapolitano and Allitino had acquired considerable reputations as boxers. The boys met at the accustomed corner and began sparring casually, demonstrating the favorite punches of Firpo and Willis. Allitino was much heavier, but Neapolitano was faster. The bout attracted a good-sized gathering.

Despite the disadvantage in weight, Neapolitano had all the better of it. A series of blows to the body sent Allitino back into the crowd, panting for breath. Allitino gathered himself for a final rush. With a right swing he caught the younger boy below the belt and the latter fell to the ground.

A dozen boys helped Allitino pick Emil up and carry him to a nearby drug store. Efforts to revive him were fruitless, and when an ambulance surgeon arrived the boy was dead.

Decrease in Imported Cars

SINCE REPEAL OF MCKENNA DUTIES.

As a result of the repeal from August 1 of the McKenna Duties of 32 1/2 per cent on motor vehicles, there has been an average reduction in the price of automobiles in Great Britain of about 12 per cent, according to advice received by the Bankers' Trust Company of New York from its English Information Service. The total number of employees engaged in the motor industry in July was 194,420. Up to the end of July the figures of foreign trade in motor cars and parts thereof showed that the British motor trade had been very much more than holding its own, while the statistics for the month of July alone showed a substantial increase in the export of British cars.

The total number of touring cars exported in July, 1924, was 1,338, valued at $238,737, against exports of 236 cars valued at $25,819, in 1923. In July, 1924, 326 commercial vehicles were exported, valued at $78,555, against 68 exported in 1923, valued at $24,787, or a total of 1,664 cars exported in July, 1924, valued at $365,292, as against 305 cars valued at $120,606 in July, 1923. The export of cars thus increased five-fold in number and three-fold in value in July, 1924, as compared with July, 1923.

For seven months of 1924, the total number of cars exported was 6,601 valued at $1,940,491, against 1,655 cars exported in the first seven months of 1923, valued at $285,838. Imports of cars, on the other hand, showed a substantial decline, the total imported for seven months being 6,884, valued at $1,196,700 as against 12,128, valued at $1,932,428 for the first seven months of 1923.

Contributory Negligence

A witty retort is credited to the present Lord Stair. It was his ancestor, the first earl, who was mainly responsible for the massacre of Glencoe, and in revenge an old Highland woman called down a fearful curse on his House, prophesying among other things that the future holders of the title would die childless. And, as a matter of fact, the second, third, fourth, sixth, seventh and eighth earls did die without issue. A superstitious lady once asked the present Lord Stair if this were true. "Quite true," answered his lordship briefly. "And do you attribute it to the 'Curse of Glencoe'?" persisted the lady. "Possibly," was the staid reply. "Though as regards the third and sixth earls, at all events there was what the lawyers would call 'contributory negligence.'" "How so?" came the puzzled inquiry. "Well, you see, madam, neither of them got married."

Asiatic Religions
Getting Together

The modern Robinson Crusoe is that astonishing young Polish explorer, Ferdinand Ossendowski, who wrote the book, "Beasts, Men and Gods." As everybody knows, he has penetrated some of the most mysterious parts of Asia single-handed, first as an escaped war prisoner, and then as a very original sort of explorer. He has told Americans all about the Back of Beyond--the hidden recesses of Tibet, the terrible Gobi Desert of Mongolia, and the gigantic Kun Lun Mountains where are the mysterious sources of the thousand-league Yang Tse and Hoang Ho Rivers. Now he is in France, and they are asking him about the tremendous political awakening among the hordes of Asia.

Asia, to-day, he told the editor of the Paris Matin, is as different from the Asia of before the war as if a new continent had risen on our planet. The war and the Russian revolution mark the end of white domination according to the intrepid Pole. Asiatic solidarity is coming, and here is his significant reason for it, as quoted by the Paris Editor:

"The new fact which seemed up to the present time a Utopian idea, is religious unity. The great religious leaders of the different cults--the Buddhists, Brahmins, Confucians, and Moslems are uniting and have mutually agreed to preach to their followers and to all Asiatic peoples that the time has come to end the religious dissensions which oppose one against another, the men of one prospect?"

"Well, Russia might play a dominating role there. The Soviet propaganda is very cleverly exploiting this new spiritual state. Everywhere it keeps dwelling upon union and the emancipation of Asiatics, a rebellion against England, against France, Japan. I must say, too, that in every region that has not been directly subjected to looting by the Reds, I have found sympathy for the Soviets' race. It is practically and politically a new religion which they are going about the founding of out there in Asia."

What practical lesson there is in this fact for the many different Christian creeds which maintain missionaries in Asia, Mr. Ossendowski does not say. But he etches in very sharply indeed the picture he is trying to cut. This is how he puts it: "It is several years since I heard people saying in Asia: 'That man is my enemy; he worships a false god.' To-day throughout all that Asiatic immensity, a new saying has gone forth. They are telling each other: 'Whatever be the gods whom you worship, you are, before anything else, brothers who ought to love and help one another.' Believe me, here is a change of which the consequences may well be incalculable. Indeed, Asiatic unity may be said to exist from this moment, though for it to be clear to all men it must furnish itself with a leader."

Miss Olive Allen, a real home cook with many years experience has a very definite knowledge of the whimsical tastes of modern people. She has had charge of the food departments in hotels, clubs, canteens and colleges. She has recently gathered recipes from all over the world--from famous foreign chefs; from old fashioned home cooks; from luxurious hotels; from cozy little inns; even from hunters and trappers. From the hundreds received Miss Allen has selected two hundred. They have aroused so much interest since appearing in the newspapers throughout the United States and Canada, that they have been assembled in a convenient recipe book. Each recipe makes a perfectly delicious dish and is practical for use in the average home with the ingredients usually kept on hand. The "Open Season" for Returning Tourists

Boa-constrictors and booze, monkeys and mantillas, Egyptian fleas and Italian flowers are some of the odd things brought home by American tourists each year. But diamonds and "dope" are the articles most often involved in attempts to cheat the United States, says a writer in the Springfield Republican. And knowing this, after many years spent in pitting their knowledge, experience, and sagacity against the cunning of the world's cleverest criminals, the customs officials at New York are "sharpening their pencils"—and their wits in preparation for the homeward rush from Europe. In other words, this is the "open season" for tourists, some of whom are not above trying to smuggle jewelry or furs into the United States duty free. As this writer explains:

When your neighbor sets foot on the deck this autumn, customs inspectors are going through his luggage like locusts through a wheatfield. Congress may sleep through most of its sessions, but it woke up long enough to sock a tax onto every conceivable thing a tourist cares to lug back from Europe.

For instance, diamonds are dirt cheap abroad—compared, that is, with their price in this country. Naturally you like to load up with a few solitaires, bar-pins, pendants and other bright ideas in the jewelry line. When you arrive at the shore of the U.S.A., the fact dawns on you that you'll have to pay a 20 per cent. duty on loose stones. And—most of your stones being firmly set in gold and platinum—you'll have to pay 80 per cent. of the original price. Upon a silk dress, whether it be manufactured wholly or in part, you pay 60 per cent. Upon wearing apparel which is knitted and the edges trimmed with lace you pay 10 per cent., or about as much as you paid for it originally. Upon articles embroidered in any manner you pay a neat little 75 per cent. And upon fur articles made up as wearing apparel, whether wholly or in part manufactured, you hand over half of the original price.

By the time you've paid duty on that brooch you got for Aunt Della in Venice, and that fur coat you picked up for cousin Hattie in Moscow, and the cute little silk frock your wife asked you to get for her in Paris, you begin to wonder why the Government needs to levy any other taxes in order to meet its running expenses. The best way to get your money's worth out of any article of clothing or jewelry is to remain abroad until you've worn it out and drop it overboard before the vessel gets into an American port.

Of course we are told, "human nature being so human, it follows that the more strict the customs regulations become, the more eager a lot of people are to evade them." A few weeks ago, says this writer, a man and woman were arrested for attempting to smuggle $100,000 worth of gems past the customs. The writer goes on to tell of this and other customs troubles.

It was one of the boldest, cleverest and largest smuggling attempts with which Uncle Sam has had to deal. The jewels came originally from Vienna. A man and woman brought them into the country, not down a gang-plank past the eagle-eyed inspectors, but by way of Canada.

Diamonds and dope are the articles most often involved in attempts to cheat the Government. Liquor is a close third; but liquor, being bulky, requires deeper plans and a bigger "staff" of smugglers than those required by drugs or diamonds.

Liquor—well, the customs officials smile when you mention it. Liquor is brought in by amateur and professional smugglers in every possible container. In cigarette cases, in "cigars" in canvas, in wrist bags. So much liquor was found in the insides of one ocean liner—hidden behind steamships and under heaps of coal—that the steamship company was compelled to put up a bond of $1,000,000 as a guaranty against further offenses.

It keeps the customs officials hopping not only here but abroad, to get a line on folks who might plan to bring contraband goods with them. No American to-day can buy a really valuable jewel or arrange for a sizable shipment of drugs without a United States Inspector learning of the fact. Having once learned the fact, the inspector trails the customer till he is satisfied of the man's—or woman's—guilt or innocence.

Women are by no means rare offenders. They rely on refined manners and good clothes to fool the inspectors. Several well-dressed women with every claim to being called ladies have tried to smuggle drugs in the trimmings of their hats or inside their shoes or under the bonances of their sweaters. They have hidden jewels inside flowers or bonbons.

And women naturally are the worst offenders when it comes to the smuggling of fur coats. With tears of innocence in their eyes, three women in a row recently protested that the Russian sables which they wore had been purchased long ago in the United States, and was therefore not dutiable.

The three women, however, were not able to explain two things: First, what became of three Russian sable garments purchased by them from a Russian dealer the month before. And, second, why they had taken sable coats abroad with them when they sailed in the summer and were spending much of their time in Italy.

Two women who attempted to smuggle in gems were caught by the espionage which is always maintained in Europe. But before the women reached the port of New York, messages had come from abroad telling of mysterious purchases by these two travelers. When neither declared any dutiable goods except the routine articles, the women were, of course, searched. And thus the hidden gems were discovered, and so it goes.

Firemen Receive Call

Last evening about the hour of 6 o'clock an alarm of fire was rung in from box 224, calling the Central Fire apparatus to the residence of Mrs. Oliphant, Maxse Street, where a slight blaze was in progress in the kitchen, caused by the exploding of an oil stove. The chemical was quickly brought into operation and soon extinguished the blaze before much damage was done.

New Sport of "Check-Up"

Described by Lord Beaverbrook.

During his recent short visit to Canada Lord Beaverbrook has entertained some of his friends by accounts of a new game being played from the top of buses in London. This sport is getting almost as great a vogue as the now obsolete "Beaver," which consisted in shouting "Beaver!" whenever a bearded man was sighted, and scoring points varying with the length of the beard.

The new game has not the personal objectionable feature of "Beaver," except on rare occasions, one of which fell to the lot of Lord Beaverbrook.

"Check-up," as it is called, is played by two men. When the bus passes a large building, Westminster Abbey, for instance, one player stands up and points to it, and says in a loud voice:

"Oh, Charley, there's St. Paul's Cathedral!"

If none of the other passengers take notice of this error the player loses one point. If he is informed this is Westminster Abbey he scores one point.

If the guileless passenger is himself wrong—as when he says Westminster Abbey is York House, the residence of the Prince of Wales, the first player has a "grand slam," and wins the game outright.

Sometimes on buses which are not patronized to any extent by tourists there is a variation of "Check-up," in which one player pretends to identify notable personages on the street.

Two minor employees of the Daily Express, one of the string of papers owned by Lord Beaverbrook, were amusing themselves in this silly manner one afternoon. One pointed to a distinguished gentleman on the street buying a Daily Mail from a ragamuffin.

"Look across there," called out the player, "there's Lord Beaverbrook buying a Daily Mail. He says that's the best paper in London."

On that the player lost one point, for an affable passenger obliged with this information:

"Pardon me, young man, but I think you're mistaken. Lord Beaverbrook doesn't like the Daily Mail at all. And he's not down there on the sidewalk; he's in the seat just back of you, listening in!"

It was true. The two Daily Express employees took one agonizing look, recognized their boss—and, worse still, saw that he also recognized them—then hastily descended from the bus in utter confusion.

"I believe they've been expecting the sack ever since," laughingly concluded Lord Beaverbrook in relating the story.

One Killed in Daring Hold-Up

The cabaret musician was shot and killed, another shot and wounded, the proprietor of a road house was shot and wounded, and an unsuccessful attempt made to drag a girl into captivity by a gang of robbers in Melrose Park, Chicago.

A score of patrons were in the cabaret when the robbers entered. The proprietor was playing a fox trot and the robbers fired point blank into the cabaret, instantly killing James Melrose, a well-known musician, another musician, Harry Venable, another musician, was passing a tin cup for the robbers. The robbers emptied his pockets and shot him down. Patsy Danahy, proprietor, was shot through the leg and hand and terribly beaten. Imbriello, bartender, fell to the floor and feigned death after dropping his revolver as the invaders. They kicked and mauled him shamelessly, but he gave no sign of life, thereby saving himself.

All the guests were lined up and all the money and jewellery. A young girl singer was seized by the robbers on their way out. They endeavored to throw her into their closed car, but she managed to break away and was found later hiding in the shrubbery, badly beaten and practically nude from her battle. As she was being taken to the hospital, she was robbed of the helpless one in the crowd and call him vile names. Rings were torn from the fingers of women, necklaces ripped from their throats and their stockings were torn in search of hidden valuables. About $1,000 was taken from the cash register by the thieves, who escaped.

Duchess Loses in First Legal Tilt With Duke

Duchess of Westminster Refused Ejectment Injunction.

London, Sept. 10. (United Press). The pretty Duchess of Westminster, who is suing her husband, the duke, for dissolution of their marriage, lost her first legal tilt here today in connection with the Duke's move to eject her from her residence at Berkeley Square home.

Justice Talbot refused to allow the duchess' injunction, in which she asked that the duke be restrained from ejecting her.

The duchess, who is visiting in America, was represented in court by an attorney, who claimed the duke had made an agreement permitting the duchess to live in the house, and that he also gave her an allowance. Then he said last August the duchess filed her suit for dissolution of their marriage, and two days later the duke notified her he would allow her to live in his house.

The attorney's disclosure of the duke's London society life, and knowledge of the actual life of the duke and duchess' marital relations, which have been the principal subject of conversation since the duke's action.

The duchess' attorney told the court that soon after their marriage in 1920 the duke treated his wife with great cruelty.

"Ultimately the duke's conduct with other women caused the duchess to inform him that unless he changed his ways she would not live with him," the attorney said.

"The duke refused to alter his mode of life," the attorney continued, "and the question of separation was the duchess contending she was entitled to reside at the Berkeley Square house during the suit."

"The duchess went to live in the house in January of last year and remained there until June, when she left to seek the dissolution of the marriage, whereupon the duke issued instructions to his servants that the duchess was not to be allowed to enter the house. He discharged the kitchen staff and when the duchess returned from the country the footmen would not allow her inside the house."
