MORNINGSTAR.

WHENEVER anybody pours into your ears some piece of scandal, remember there are two sides to the story, and ask yourself what the motive of the teller may be. It will often be found that the scandal monger has some personal grudge to satisfy which has led to outrageous embellishment of the original incident. Usually, too, the person whose habitual discourse and conversational stock-in trade is bitter and malevolent gossip, is a good person to avoid. Generally speaking, the person who will vilify a neighbor to you, will vilify you to a neighbor.

The logic of colds is simple enough.

bor to you, will vilify you to a neighbor.

The logic of colds is simple enough.

Treat a cold respectfully, put it to bed for the first twenty-four hours and it will retire from the scene with grace and speed. On the other hand, ignore its existence for a couple of days and it will gather such strength that soon you won't be able to think of anything else. Keep up the fight a week or so longer, going about your business as usual, and there's an even chance, in the present state of health statistics, that the cold won't be a cold any more but will have put on the dignity of influenza. And influenza treated with contempt can show its mettle by turning into any one of a number of things that are worse.

Watford won the first round in their home-and-home games with Ailsa Craig on Tuesday evening by 8-4. The locals were not up to their usual speed, but apparently had no difficulty in outclassing Craig.

Many of the boys are still nursing old wounds and scars received last week from Glencoe, but are quite confident of holding their own in the return game in Ailsa Craig this (Friday) evening. In this event they step up another notch to meet either Preston or other northern towns for the finals.

The boys have proved in the past few weeks that they can play clean, fast hockey and it would seem a great pity if they have to give up the future games on account of being unable to meet such heavy expenses. Surely some way can yet be found to back the boys to the finish. It is some years since Watford sent her team regularly into the finals.

Do your best to help them get there this year.

FORWARD MOVEMENT FINANCIAL DRIVE

The Inter-church Forward Movement has proved a success financially, the total of $11,400,000 having been raised, and when all returns are in this amount will be increased. On Tuesday night $11,321,089 of the Dominion objective had been raised. The Methodists led with a total of $4,266,563, or 6 66 per cent. over their objective. Next came the Baptists with $872,000, or 3.86 per cent. over the amount aimed at. The Congregationalists also ran over their Mrs. Manfred Thompson has spent the last two weeks with Mrs. L. Griffith, Sarnia, who has been seriously ill with flu and pneumonia.

Mr. John Livingstone left on Friday last for Edmonton to visit his son Frank, who the week previous lost his entire their objective with $102.856-2.86 per cent. surplus. The Presbyterians were unable to report their objective reached last night, but came within 5 45 per cent. of their goal, with $3,822.177, and many points on the prairies yet to send in their returns. The Anglicans are in much the same position, reporting a total of $2,257 065, or a percentage of 90 26.

Local Subscriptions

Below will be found statements of the financial drive of the Forward Movement furnished by the managing committees of the local churches.

The drive in connection with the Methodist National Campaign as part of the Inter-church Forward Movement is over and we are able to report success far beyond the most sanguine expectations. The Methodists made a two-fold appeal to their people first for the "current conofferings to missions, educational society and evangelism and social service, and secondly for the special objective of $4,000,000. These we speak of as A and Watford A.$405.50 B.$2342.35 - $2747.85 Zion A. 312.00 B. 1479.00 - 1791.00

A Musical Program That is Highly Entertaining.

The company consists of Andrew Vissochi, piano accordionist; Miss Olga Capuccio, violiniste; and Miss Roramond Wright, pianist and soprano, and will appear at the Lyceum, Friday, Feb. 27th. Unless you have heard Vissochi, you have no idea what music can be played with a piano accordion. This instrument is little known outside of Continental Europe. While one of the most complicated instruments known, it has endless possibilities. In the hands of such a master as Vissochi, it proves a revelation and a marvel of musical delight.

The assisting artists are excellent and

The assisting artists are excellent and put much spirit into their programs. They are magnetic, vivacious, brilliant. Miss Capuccio is a favorite pupil of Fabrizio who stared in branches. who starred in lyceum circles some six years ago. Miss Wright has won laurels in extended concert tours and plays with a fine sincerity and an appreciative understanding.

Vissochi's repertoire knows no limitations. From the gems of grand opera, through the ibspiring range of patriotic marches and melodies, rag time, folk songs, negro jubilees and popular songs he holds his audience captive by his wonderful musicianship.

You'll get a maximum of cultured entertainment from these three excellent artists.

nind the dogs and the sied to keep from freezing to death. One of the happiest recollections of my life is the meeting, up in the north country, with a derelict, who was a Cornell graduate. The minute I met him he said, 'Basham, I'm a drunkard.'

"I liked him and his case impressed me deeply. Many a night I have played chess with him all night, trying to help him forget liquor. I spent a lot of time with him, and one night it was necessary to knock a man down in a sa'oon because he tempted my friend with a bottle of whiskey. After that they let him alone. I count one of the greatest achievements of my life the wooing of that man from the control of the grip of liquor. That man is now one of the most splendid fellows I know.

"I have spent eleven years in the pit, and eleven in the pulpit," said Basham. "At the age of 11, I was a coal miner in Wales. Now I have six brothers in the mines of Wales. There were eight of us in the world war. One was killed, and all were wounded. I am not green at the job. I know the lives of miners. I have played cards with them, and I am willing to match the miners' bible, (a deck of cards) against the bible I teach, any day."

"Oh, yes, I have played cards. I was tried for heresy once for playing whist in the home of one of the elders of my church. Because of the action of this church I received great publicity. Dr. James L. Gordon, of Winnipeg, took a kindly interest in me and encouraged me to continue my work in the ministry, pointing out the advantage of going to college.

"Did you ever play cards for money?" he was asked.
"Yes, but I didn't know it at the time. It was in France. I was spending the afternoon at the home of a French colonel. The colonel's daughters, and a countess with whom I had been associated in the Red Cross Bazaar suggested that we play bridge zaar, suggested that we play bridge. I learned the game that afternoon, and at the end of the game, I noticed the women counting up, but it never dawned on me that we had been playing for money, until the colonel told me that I had won. It was rathering an embarrassing position, so I took the money and turned it over to the fund for disabled French Soldiers."

"I am not content to be a drone in the Bee Hive of the Kingdom of God," declared Basham. "If 50 per cent. of us as ministers were to go on a strike at once, Protestantism on this continent would not suffer in the least degree. We aren't essential, but most of us are not willing to admit

"The chief reason I am interested in this mining camp job, is first, because of the opportunities for building up. The common run of preachers are merely holding down jobs. Concrete. The movement to modernize the Eskimo by providing him with concrete huts in place of his picturesque snow "igloos" as suggested by an official of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, would be the death of the denizen of the icy north, in the opinion of Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the Arctic explorer. Not only is the Es-kimo devoted to his age-long habitation as the South Sea Islanders are to their traditional garb of flower far healthier, warmer and more com-fortable in his domed mansion of snow blocks than he could be in any modern house of concrete.

The statement that the natives of the Prybiloff Islands were about to the Prybiloff Islands were about to discard their snow huts for modern concrete huts, finding the gales of the Bering Sea too strong for the former, upon which the story of the intended change of Eskimo habits was based, Mr. Stefansson characterized as too silly for discussion. The ized as too silly for discussion. The explorer said that the Prybiloff Islanders had never lived in snow but in wooden huts and that further north, where the natives do live in snow houses, it would be next to impossible to convert them to any other possible to convert them to any other ossible to convert the dwelling.

"Their igloo serves as a home for two or three weeks. Then they build a new one. Because it is new it is clean and sanitary. It is as warm and the car your library. A canclean and sanitary. It is as warm and comfortable as your library. A candle gives as much illumination as three electric lights, because of the intense whiteness of the snow. The snow house will stand under any conditions. In all, the igloo is as comfortable a home as a man could wish. "The concrete hut, like the wooden hut, must be uncomfortable and unsanitary. Wherever the natives have changed from the snow to the wooden concrete hut hastens that extinction. The Eskimos are like the gypsies. Try to keep a gypsy in a house of concrete and see what happens.

"Still, the Eskimos might be converted to the concrete hut," went on Mr. Stefansson, "smiling. "If it becomes the fashion. Should concrete homes become fashionable, all Eskimos would soon be living in them. Human nature is the same the world over. Let some one introduce the wearing of furs, as a fashion, in the Zulu Islands, and the natives there would wear furs. with nothing but the best! This explains the ever-increasing demand for Zam-Buk. Not only is this great balm the best household remedy to-day, but it is also the most economical.

Zam-Buk's superiority is due to the fact that it is all medicine, containing none of the coarse animal fats or harsh mineral drugs found in ordinary ointments. Again, the medicinal properties are so highly concentrated that they contain the maximum amount of healing, soothing and antiseptic power, so that a little of this balm goes a long way.

Another reason why Zam-Buk is most economical. It will keep indefinitely and retain to the last its strength and purity. Best for skin

THE EWE AT LAMBING

Hints on Care of Both Mother and Lamb.

Care Before Lambing Important-How to Help In Cases of Poor Delivery - A Good Ration for Ewes When Raising Lambs.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE two main factors contritributing to a satisfactory lamb crop are the proper feeding and care of the sheep during the six months previous to lambing time together with care and detailed attention given to the flock during the lambing period. Plenty of exercise coupled with sufficient amount of the right kind of feed to maintain the ewes in good thriving condition will usually result in the birth of active rugged lambs, for which the mother will have a sufficient supply of milk. In practically every flock, no matter how well cared for, the attendant must be on hand frequently, day and night, during the period the lambs are arriv-ing. A little attention at the proper time often results in the saving of not a few lambs.

Absolute dryness and freedom from draught are very essential for the flock at lambing time, and when the lambs are expected in March or even early April provision should be made for reasonable protection from Wool balls in the stomach is often the cause of much loss in young lambs. This trouble as well as diffi-culty in getting the lambs to nurse may be avoided by clipping away all may be avoided by clipping away all loose and dirty wool from around the udder and quarters of the ewes. It must be borne in mind that at this time the ewes, heavy in lamb, should be handled gently, otherwise serious loss may occur from ewes slipping their lambs.

Provision should be made for a few small pens located along the warmest side of the building. The ewe about to lamb is much safer separated from the main flock and in cases of difficult parturition, weak in cases of difficult parturition, weak lambs, ewes disowning their lambs, and numerous other difficulties that may arise they can be looked after a great deal more satisfactorily when confined in small enclosures. It not infrequently happens that a ewe has difficulty in delivering her lamb; this is more common in the case of young ewes with their first lamb. When the lamb has come forward far ewes with their first lamb. When the lamb has come forward far enough so that the nose and front feet are in sight and the head is unable to pass through the ewe should be assisted by gentle pulling on the forefeet. If this fails smear the inside of the vagina well with linseed oil; this has the effect of softening and allowing the opening to stretch, and will, unless the case is a very severe one, give relief. No to the heart just back of the shoulder.

A ewe may lose her lamb and still have a supply of milk. She may be given a lamb say one of twins or an orphan lamb belonging to another ewe to raise. This may be accomplish by skinning the dead lamb and throwing the skin over the one to be adopted. A ewe may take to another lamb when held and the lamb allowed to suck. Especially is this true where a ewe has a full flow of milk. When a lamb is born during a cold spell it may become so thoroughly chilled as to require attention. Place the lamb in hot water until well warmed, rub dry, then wrap in a cloth and place beside a fire until restored. A little warm milk 'aken from the mother should be given as soon as the lamb will take it. A few drops of whiskey in a little warm water may often prove beneficial.

Ewes, like dairy cattle, vary a great deal in the amount of milk given. In case of single lambs the mother may have more milk than the lamb will take for a week or mother may have more milk than the lamb will take for a week or more, the lambs may be nursing on one side only and the other side will become inflamed and caked. Either hold the ewe and allow another lamb to nurse or milk out. In case the udder has become hard bathe with hot water for five minutes with a woollen cloth, dry thoroughly and apply (warm) pure melted hogs'

Ewes should be fed sparingly, Ewes should be fed sparingly, especially of grain, for a few days after lambing, as soon as they are safely over the effects of lambing they should be gradually brought up to full feed. Clover or alfalfa hay, together with a grain ration of oats and bran should give results. If roots or good quality silage is available they will supply succuency and add variety to the ration. variety to the ration.

All lambs should be docked and the male lambs, other than those in-tended for breeding purposes, cr.strated at from ten days to two weeks'

Following is a good ration for wes when raising lambs:—
Oats, eight parts.
Bran, four parts.

Oil cake, one part. Roots, four to six pounds per day. Good hay.

Lambs started on ¼ pound per day will give a good account of the feed consumed.—Percy Sackville, O. A. College, Guelph.

Buy Red Clover Seed Early

Prime red clover seed was quoted at $35.55 per bushel on the Toledo market of the 6th instant. Toronto prices then ranged about $3 00 per bushel in advance of Toledo prices. Clover seed that would grade "Prime" on the Toledo market could be bought in Toronto at $38.50 and, because of exchange conditions, delivered could be bought in Toronto at $38.50 and, because of exchange conditions, delivered to United States points at approximately $33.00 per bushel, or about $2.50 less than the Toledo price. The money situation, short supplies, and an earlier demand in the United States will explain the heavy exports of clover seed.

The price of red clover seed has advanced almost $14.00 per bushel on the Toledo market since May last. The world supply will not be sufficient to meet normal requirements. In these circumstances, Canadian farmers who delay the purchase of their red clover seed requirements until seeding time may be unable to obtain supplies at any price. to obtain supplies at any price.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS ALWAYS IN THE HOME

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she always keeps a supply on hand, for the first trial convinces her there is nothing to equal them in keeping children well. The Tablets are a mild but thorough lexative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach, thus driving out constipation and indigestion, colds and simple fevers and making teething easier. Concerning them, Mrs. Saluste Pelletier, St. Dumas, Que., writes:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the past ten years and am never without them in the house. They have always given the greatest satisfaction and I can gladly recommend them to all mothers of little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or direct by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co, Brockville, Ont.

CHAPTER L

The Ray of Sunlight Just as the rays of the afternoon sun hesitated to enter the open door of Joseph Stagg's hardware store in Sunrise Cove and lingered on the sill, so the little girl in the black frock and hat, with twin braids of sunshiny hair on her shoulders, hovered at the entrance of the dim and dusty place.

She carried a satchel in one hand, while the fingers of the other were hooked into the rivet-studded collar of mottled, homely mongrel dog.

"Oh, dear me, Prince!" sighed the little girl, "this must be the place. We'll just have to go in. Of course I know he must be a nice man; but he's

Her feet faltered over the door sill and paced slowly down the shop been long counters. She saw no clerk.

At the back of the shop was a small office closed in with grimy windows. The uncertain visitor and her canine panion saw the shadowy figure of a man inside the office, sitting on a high stool and bent above a big ledger. The dog, however, scented something

In the half darkness of the shop he and his little mistress came unexpect-edly upon what Prince considered his arch-enemy. There rose up on the end of the counter nearest the open office door a big, black tomcat whose arched back, swollen tail and yellow eyes blazed defiance.

"Passi ye ow!"
The rising youl broke the silence of the shop like a trumpet call. The little girl dropped her bag and seized the dog's collar with both hands.

"Prince!" she cried, "don't you speak that cat-don't you dare speak to it!"

Bless me!" croaked a voice from the office.

The tomcat uttered a second "ps-s-st -ye-ow!" and shot up a ladder to the top shelf.

"Bless me!" repeated Joseph Stagg, taking off his eyeglasses and leaving them in the ledger to mark his place. What have you brought that dog in

He came to the office door. "I-I didn't have any place to leave him," was the hesitating reply. "Hum! Did your mother send you for something?" "No-o, sir," sighed the little visitor. At that moment a more daring ray, of sunlight found its way through the transom over the store door and lit up the dusky place. It fell upon the slight, black-frocked figure and for an instant touched the pretty head as with an aureole.

"Bless me, child!" exclaimed Mr. Stagg. "Who are you?"

The flowerlike face of the little girl quivered, the blue eyes spilled big drops over her cheeks. She approached Mr. Stagg, stooping and squinting in the office doorway, and placed a timid hand upon the broad band of black crepe he wore on his coatsleeve

"You're not Hannah's Car'lyn?" questioned the hardware dealer huskily. "I'm Car'lyn May Cameron," confessed. "You're my Uncle Joe. I'm very glad to see you, Uncle Joe, and and I hope—you're glad to see me— and Prince," she finished rather fal-

"Bless me!" murmured the man Nothing so startling as this had en tered Sunrise Cove's chief "hardware emporium" for many and many a year. Hannah Stagg, the hardware merchant's only sister, had gone away from home quite fifteen years previously. Mr. Stagg had never seen Han-nah again; but this slight, blue-eyed, sunny-haired girl was a replica of his sister, and in some dusty corner of Mr. Stagg's heart there dwelt a very faithemory of Hannah.

Nothing had served to estrange the brother save time and distance.
"Hannah's Car'lyn," muttered Mr.
Stagg again. "Bless me, child! how dld you get here from New York?"

"On the cars, uncle. You see, Mr. Price thought I'd better come. He says you are my guardian—it's in papa's will and would have been so in mam-ma's will, if she'd made one. Mr. Price put me on the train and the con-

"Who is Mr. Price?" the storekeeper asked.

"He's a lawyer. He's written you a long letter about it. It's in my bag.
Didn't you get the telegram be sent you tast evening, Oncie Joe? A night letter,' he called it." "Never got it," replied Mr. Stagg shortly. "Well, you see, when papa and mamma had to go away so suddenly they left me with the Prices. I go to school with Edna Price and she slept with me at night in our flat-after the Dunraven sailed.'

"But-what did this lawyer send you up here for?" asked Mr. Stagg. The question was a poser and Carolyn May stammered: "I—I— Don't guardians always take their little girls home and look out for them?" "Hum-I don't know." The hardware merchant mused grimly. "I-I guess we'd better go up to The Corners and see what Aunty Rose has to say about it. You understand, I couldn't really keep you if she says 'No!'"

"Oh, Uncle Joe, couldn't you?" "No," he declared, wagging his head decidedly. "And what she'll say to that dog—"

"Oh!" Carolyn May cried again, and put both arms suddenly about the neck of her canine friend. "Prince is just the best dog, Uncle Joe."

Mr. Stagg shook his head doubtfully. Then he went into the office and shut the big ledger into the safe. After locking the safe door, he slipped the key into his trousers pocket and glanced around the store.

"I'd like to know where that useless Gormley boy is now," muttered

Mr. Stagg.
"Chet! Hey! you Chet!" To Carolyn May's amasement and to the utter mystification of Prince, a section of the floor under their feet began to rise. "Oh, mercy me!" squealed the little girl, and she hopped off the trapdoor; but the dog uttered a quick, threatening growl and put his muzzle to the widening aperture "Hey! call off that dog!" begged a muffled voice from under the trapdoor, "He'll eat me up, Mr. Stagg."

"Lie down, Prince!" commanded Carolyn May hastily. "It's only a boy. You know you like boys, Prince," she

"Come on up out o' that cellar. Chet. I'm going up to The Corners with my little niece-Hannah's Carlyn. This is Chetwood Gormley. If he ever stops growin' longitudinally mebbe he'll be a man some day and not a giant. You stay right here and tend store while I'm gone, Chet."

Carolyn May could not help feeling some surprise at the finally revealed proportions of Chetwood Gormley. He was lathlike and gawky, with very prominent upper front teeth, which gave a sort of bow-window appearance to his wide mouth. But there was a zood-humored twinkle in the overgrown boy's shallow eyes; and, if unouth, he was kind.

"I'm proud to know ye, Carlyn," he said. He stepped quickly out of the way of Prince when the latter started for the front of the store. Once out of the shop in the sunlit street, the little girl breathed a sigh of relief. Mr. Stagg, peering down at ber sharply, asked:

"What's the matter?"

"Have the matter,"
"I—I—Your shop is awful dark, Uncle Joe," she confessed. "I can't seem to look up in there."
"Look up?" repeated the hardware dealer, puzzled.
"Yes, sir. My papa says never to get in any place where you can't look up and see something brighter and bet-ter ahead," said Carolyn May softly. "He says that's what makes life worth living.

"Oh, he does, does he?" grunted Mr.

He noticed the heavy bag in her hand and took it from her. Instantly her released fingers stole into his free hand. Mr. Stagg looked down at the little hand in his palm, somewhat startled and not a little dismayed.

The main street of Suurise this warm afternoon was not thronged with shoppers. Not many people notice that shambling, round-shoul-The main street of Sunrise Cove on ticed the tall, shambling, round-shoul-dered man in rusty black, with the petite figure of the child and the mon-

But when Mr. Stagg and his companions turned into the pleasantly shaded street that led out of town towards The Corners-where was the Stagg homestead—Carolyn May noticed her uncle become suddenly flustered. She saw the blood flood into his face and neck, and she felt his hand loosen as though to release her own. The little girl looked ahead curiously at the woman who was approaching. She was not a young woman-that is, not what the child would call young. Carolyn May thought she was very nice looking-tall and robust. brown eyes flashed an inquiring glance upon Carolyn May, but she did not ook at Mr. Stagg, nor did Mr. Stagg look at her.

"Oh! who is that lady, Uncle Joe?" asked the little girl when they were out of earshot.

"Hum!" Her uncle's throat seemed to need clearing. "That—that is Mandy Parlow-Miss Amanda Parlow," he corrected himself with dignity.

The finsh did not soon fade out of his face as they went on in silence.

It was half a mile from Main street to The Corners. There was tall tim-ber all about Sunrise Cove, which was built along the shore of a deep inlet cutting in from the great lake, whose blue waters sparkled as far as one might see towards the south and west.

Uncle Joe assured Carolyn May when she asked him, that from the highest hill in sight one could see only the lake and the forest—clothed hills and valleys.

"There's lumber camps all about. they'll interest you. Lots of building going on all the time, too."
He told her, as they went along, of the long trains of cars and of the strings of barges going out of the Cove, all laden with timber and sawed boards, millstuffs, ties and telegraph

They came to the last house in the row of dwellings on this street, on the very edge of the town. Carolyn May saw that attached to the house was a smaller building, facing the roadway, with a wide-open door, through which she glimpsed benches and sawed lumber, while to her nostrils was wafted most delicious smell of shavings. "Oh, there's a carpenter shop!" ex-claimed Carolyn May. "And is that the carpenter, Uncle Joe?"

A tall old man, lean-faced and closely shaven, with a hawk's beak nose straddled by a huge pair of silverbowed spectacles, came out of the shop at that moment, a jackknife in his hand. He saw Mr. Stagg and, turning sharply on his heel, went indoors again.

"Who is he, Uncle Joe?" repeated the little girt. "And, if I asked him, do you s'pose he'd give me some of those nice, long, curly shavings?"

"That's Jed Parlow-and he wouldn't give you any shavings; especially after having seen you with me," said the hardware merchant brusquely.

The pretty lady whose name was Parlow and the queer-looking old carpenter, whose name was likewise Par-low, would neither look at Uncle Joe! Even such a little girl as Carolyn May could see that her uncle and the Parlows were not friendly.

By and by they came in sight of The Corners—a place where another road crossed this one at right angles. In one corner was a white church with a square tower and green blinds. In another of the four corners was set a big store, with a covered porch all across the front, on which were sheltered certain agricultural tools. There was no sound of life at The Corners save a rhythmic "clank, clank, clank" from the blacksmith shop on the third corner. On the fourth corner of the cross-roads stood the Stagg homestead—a wide, low-roofed house of ancient ap-pearance, yet in good repair. Neat-less was the keynote of all about the asked Carolyn May breathlessly. what a beautiful big place! It see awful big for me to live in!" Mr. Stagg had halted at the gate and now looked down upon Caroly May with perplexed brow. "Well, we've got to see about that first," he muttered. "There's Aunty Rose,"

A voice calling, "Chuck! Chuck! Chuck-a-chuck!" came from behind the old house. A few white-feathered fowls that had been in sight scurried wildly away in answer to the sum-

"Oh, Uncle Joe!" quivered his niece "You go ahead and get acquainted with her," urged Mr. Stagg. "She don't like dogs. They chase her chickens and run over her flower beds, Aunty Rose is peculiar. I might say "Oh, Uncle Joe!" repeated the little girl faintly. "You've got to make her like you, you want to live here," the hardward dealer concluded firmly.

He gave Carolyn May a little shove up the path and then stood back and mopped his brow with his handkerchief. Prince strained at the least and whined, wishing to follow his little mistress. Mr. Stagg said: "You'd better keep mighty quiet, dog. If you want you home address to be The Corners, sin

Carolyn May did not hear this, but disappeared after the fowls aroun the corner of the wide, vine-draped porch. The pleasant back yard wa full of sunshine. Aunty Rose's appearance wrote the little girl with a feeling of awe. There was no frown on her face; it was only calm, unruffled, unem tional. It simply seemed as though nothing, either material or spiritual could ruffle the placidity of Aunts Rose Kennedy.

"And how came you here alone?" "If you please, Uncle Joe said To etter prob'ly come ahead and get acquainted with you first."

"He—he's coming." "With the dog?"
"Yes, ma'ara."

Aunty Lose seemed to take some time to digest this; but she made no further comment in regard to the matter, only saying:
"Let us go into the house, Car'lyn

May. You must take off your hat and bathe your face and hands." Carolyn May Cameron followed the stately figure of Aunty Rose Kennedy into the blue-and-white kitchen of the old house, with something of the feel-ing of a culprit on the way to the

The little girl took off her plain black hat, shook back her hair and patted it smooth with her hands, then plunged her hands and face into the sin of cool water Aunty Rose had awn for her at the sink. The dust drawn for her at the sink. was all washed away and a fresh glow came into her flowerlike face. Aunty Rose watched her silently. Such a dignified, upright, unresponsive woman as she seemed standing there! And so particular, neat and immaculate was this kitchen !-

Carolyn May, as she dried her face and hands, heard a familiar whine at the door. It was Prince. She wondered if she had at all broken the ice for him with Aunty Rose.

"Oh," the little girl mused, "I won-Her what she will say to a mongorel."

CHAPTER IL

Going to Bed. Mr. Stagg had fastened Prince's strap to the porch rail and he now came in with the bag.

"Is that all the child's baggage, Joseph Stagg?" asked Aunty Rose, taking it from his hand. "Why-why, I never thought to ask her," the man admitted. "Have you a trunk check, Car'lyn?"

"They sent you up here with only that bag?" Mr. Stagg said with some exasperation. "Haven't you got any clothes but those you stand in?"

"Mrs. Price said—said they weren't suitable," explained the little girl. "You see, they aren't black."

"Oh!" exploded her uncle.
"You greatly lack tact, Joseph Stagg," said Aunty Rose, and the hard-ware dealer cleared his throat loudly as he went to the sink to perform his pre-supper ablutions. Carolyn May not understand just what the woman meant.

"Ahem!" said Uncle Joe gruffly, "S'pose I ought t've read that letter before. What's come of it, Car'lyn May?" But just then the little girl was so deeply interested in what Aunty Rose was doing that she failed to hear him. Mrs. Kennedy brought out of the pan-

LY & Lin Die Diate, on which work scraps of meat and bread, besides a goodly marrow bone.

"If you think the dog is hungry, Car'lyn May," she said, "you would better give him this before we break our fast."

"Oh, Aunty Rose!" gasped the little girl, her sober face all a-smile. "He'll be de-light-ed."

She carried the pan out to Prince. When the door closed again, Mrs. Kennedy went to the stove and instantly, with the opening of the oven, the rush of delicious odor from it made Carolyn May's mouth fairly

Such flaky biscuit—two great pans full of the brown beauties! Mr. Stagg sat down at the table and actually, smiled. The little girl took her indicated place at the table timidly.

"Joseph Stagg," said Aunty Rose, sitting down, "ask a blessing."

Uncle Joe's harsh voice seemed suddenly to become gentle as he reverently said grace. Stagg was in haste to eat and get back to the store. "Or that Chet Gormley will try to make a meal off some of the hardware, I guess," he said gloomily.

"Oh, dear me, Uncle Joe!" exclaimed Carolyn May. "If he did that, he'd die of indignation."

auigestion," agreed her uncle.

Aunty Rose did not even smile. "Bless me!" Mr. Stagg exclaimed suddenly. "What's that on the mantel, Aunty Rose? That yaller letter?" "A telegram for you, Joseph Stage," replied the old lady composedly.

"Well!" muttered the hardware fealer, and Carolyn May wondered if he were not afraid to express just the emotion he felt at that instant. His face was red and he got up clumsily to secure the sealed message.

"Who brought it, and when?" he asked finally, having read the law-yer's night letter. "A boy. This morning," said Aunty

Rose, utterly calm. "And I never saw it this noon," grumbled the hardware dealer.

Mrs. Kennedy quite ignored any suggestion of impatience in Mr. Stagg's oice or manner. But he seemed to lose taste for his supper after reading the telegram. "Where is the letter that this Mr.

Price wrote and sent by you, Car-lyn?" he asked as he was about to depart for the store. The little girl asked permission to leave the table and then ran to open her bag. Mr. Stagg said doubtfully: "I s'pose you'll have to put her some-where—for the present. Don't see what else we can do, Aunty Rose.

"You may be sure, Joseph Stagg, that her room was ready for her a week ago," Mrs. Kennedy rejoined, quite unruffled. The surprised hardware dealer gurgled something in his throat.

"What room?" he finally stammered. "That which was her mother's, Hanaah Stagg's room. It is next to mine and she will come to no harm there." "Hannah's!" exclaimed Mr. Stagg.
"Why, that ain't been slept in since she went away."

"It is quite fit, then," said Aunty "that it should be used for her child. Trouble nothing about things that do not concern you, Joseph Stagg," she added with, perhaps, additional sternness.

Carolyn May did not hear this. She now produced the letter from her law-

"There it is. Uncle Joe." she said. "I-I guess he tells you all about me

"Hum!" said the hardware man, clearing his throat and picking up his "I'll read it down at the store." "Shall—shall I see you again to-night, Uncle Joe?" the little girl asked wistfully. "You know, my bedtime's half-past eight."

"Well, if you don't see me tonight again, you'll be well cared for, I haven't a doubt," said Uncle Joe shortly, and went out.

Carolyn May went soberly back to her chair. She did not eat much more. Somehow there seemed to be a big lump in her throat past which she could not force the food. As the dusk fell, the spirit of loneliness gripped e tears pooled be eyelids, ready to pour over her cheeks at the least "joggle." Yet she was not usually a "cry-baby" girl.

Aunty Rose was watching her more closely than Carolyn May supposed. After her third cup of tea she arose and began quietly clearing the table. The newcomer was nodding in her place, her blue eyes clouded with sleep and unhappiness. "It is time for you to go to bed, Car'lyn May," said Aunty Rose firmly. "I will show you the room Hannah Stagg had for her own when she was

"Thank you, Aunty Rose," said the little girl humbly.

She picked up the bag and followed the stately old woman into the back hall and up the stairway into the ell. Carolyn May saw that at the foot of the stairs was a door leading out upon the porch where Prince was now moving about uneasily at the end of his leash. She would have liked to say "good night" to Prince, but it seem better not to mention this feeling to faintly. "Very well," said Aunty Rose an turned away. Carolyn May stood in the middle of the room and listened to her descending footsteps. Aunty Rose had not even bidden her good

Like a marooned sailor upon a desert island the little girl went about exploring the bedroom which was to be hers—and which had once been her mother's. That fact helped greatly.

Then she looked at the high, puffy bed.
"How ever can I get into it?" sighed Carolyn May.

She had to stand upon her tiptoes in her fluffy little bedroom slippers to pull back the quilt and the blanket and sheet underneath it. The bed was

The window was open and she went to it and looked out. A breath of honeysuckle blew in. Then, below, op the porch, she heard the uneasy movements of Prince. And he whined. "Oh, poor Princey! He doesn't now what's become of me," thought Carolyn May.

Downstairs, in the great kitclen, Aunty Rose was stepping back and forth, from table to sink, from sink to dresser, from dresser to pantry. As the daylight faded she lit the lamp which swung from the ceiling and gave light to all the room.

It would have been impossible for the wisest person to guess what were the thoughts in Aunty Rose's mind. A glad little yelp from the dog tied to the rail of the perch sounded sud-Even Aunty Rose could not mistake that cry of welcome and she knew very little about dogs—to their credit, at least. She had heard no other suspicious sound, but now she crossed the room with firm tread and opened the porch door. Yes, a little white figure was down there hugging the whining mongrel. Carolyn May's tearful face was raised from Prince's rough neck. "Oh, Aunty Rose! Oh, Aunty Rose!"

she sobbed. "I just had to say good night to somebody. Edna's mother came and heard our prayers and tucked us into my bed after my papa and mamma went away. So it didn't seem "But tonight-why! tonight there isn't anybody cares whether I go to bed or not! But Prince! Prince, he knows just how-how empty I feel? "You would better come in now and wash your face and hands again be-fore going to bed. That dog has been lapping them with his tongue.

Sobbing, the little girl obeyed. Then she would have gone back up the stairs without a word had not Aunty Rose spoken. "Come here, Carolyn May," she said quite as sternly as before.

The little girl approached her. The old lady sat in one of the straightest of the straight-backed chairs, her hands in her comfortable lap. The wet blue eyes were raised to her comed face timidly. "If you wish to say your prayers here, before going upstairs, you may, Carolyn May," she said.

"Oh, may I?" gasped the little girl. She dropped her hands into Aunty Rose's lap. Somehow they found those larger, comforting hands and cuddled into them as the little girl sank to her knees on the braided mat.

She asked a blessing upon all her friends, including the Prices, and even Prince. But it was after that she put the timid question to Aunty Rose that proved to be almost too much for that good woman's studied calm.

"Aunty Rose, do you s'pose I might ask God to bless my mamma and papa, even if they are lost at sea? Somehow I don't think it would seem so lonesome if I could keep that in my prayer."

CHAPTER III.

"Well-She'll Be a Nulsance." Mr. Joseph Stagg, going down to his store, past the home and carpenter shop of Jedidiah Parlow, at which he did not even look, finally came to his disturbed had he been by the arrival of his little niece that he forgot to question and cross-question young Chetwood Gormley regarding the possible customers that had been in the store during his absence.

"And I tell you what I think, motion," Chet said, with his mouth full, as supper that evening. "I think hes coming's going to bring about changes, Yes, ma'am!"

Mrs. Gormley was a faded little woman—a widow—who went out sewing for better-to-do people in Sunrise Cove. She naturally thought her box Chetwood a great deal smarter than other people thought him.

"You know, mother," he said, out this evening of the arrival of Caroline.

this evening of the arrival of Carolys May, "I never have seen any great chance to rise, workin' for Mr. J Stagg."

"But he pays you, Chet," his mothe "Yep. I know. Don't be afraid I'll leave him till I see something better." he reassured her, "But I might be clerkin' for him till the cows come home and never see more'n six or eight dollars a week. But now it's apt to be different."

"How different, Chet?" she asked "You know Mr. Stagg's as hard a nails—as hard as the goods he sells," declared the gawky boy. "Mind you he don't do nothin' mean. That ain's his way. But he don't seem to have a mite of interest in anything but his shop. Now, it seems to me, this little niece is bound to wake him up. He calls her 'Hannah's Car'lyn.'

"Hannah Stagg was his only sister." said Mrs. Gormley softly. "I rem

"And she's just died, or something and left this little girl," Chet continued. "Mr. Stagg's bound to think of something now besides business. And mebbe he'll need me more. And I'll get a chance to show him I'm worth something to him. So, by and by, he'll put me forward in the business," said the boy, his homely face glowing. "Who knows? Mebbe it'll be Stagg & Cormley over the deer see that Gormley over the door one of the Stranger things have

Perhaps even Chetwood's assurance would have been quenched had he just then known the thoughts in the hardware merchant's mind. Mr. Stagg sat in his back office poring over the letter written by his brother-in-law's lawyer friend, a part of which read:

From the above recital of facts you will plainly see, being a man of business your-self, that Mr. Cameron's financial affairs self, that Mr. Cameron's financial affairs were in a much worse condition when he went away than he himself dreamed of.

I immediately looked up the Stone-bridge Bullding and Loan association. Is is even more moribund than the papers state. The fifteen hundred dollars Mr. Cameron put into it from time to time might just as well have been dropped integheses.

It rather cramped Mr. Cameron's immediate resources for your sister to go with him, and he drew ahead on his serious account. I know that It rather cramped Mr. Cameron's immediate resources for your sister to go with him, and he drew shead on his expense and salary account. I know that Mrs. Cameron feared to allow him to go alone across the ocean. He was really in a bad way; but she proposed to comeback immediately on the Dunraven if he improved on the voyage across.

Their means really did not allow of their taking the child; the steamship company would not hear of a half-fare for her. She is a nice little girl, and my wife would have been glad to keep her longer, but in the end she would have to go to-you, as, I understand, there are no other relatives.

You will see, by the copy of your brother-in-law's will that I enclose, that you have been left in full and sole possession and guardianship of his property and affairs, including Carolyn May.

And if somebody had shipped him a crocodile from the Nile Joseph Stags would have felt little more at a loss as to what disposal to make of the creature than he felt now regarding his little niece

'Well-she'll be a nuisance; an aw ful nuisance," was his final comment, with a mountainous sigh.

Thus far, Aunty Rose Kennedy's at titude towards the little stranger had been the single pleasant disappoint ment Mr. Stagg had experienced. Aunty Rose was an autocrat. Joseph Stagg had never been so comfortable in his life as since Mrs. Kennedy had taken up the management of his home, But he stood in great awe of her.

LAMBTON'S CORN SHOW

Petrolea, Feb. 13.—Lambton County Winter Fair held its closing session Fri-day and elected the following officers for 1920: President, B. Fancher; first vice-president, J. McMillan; second vice-president, G. French; secretary, W. P. McDonald.

The outstanding features of the fair were the corn show, the dispersion sale of pure bred live stock, and the poultry show. The corn displayed was the best this county has yet produced. One special bushel grown by John McRae of Port Lambton being judged by Principal Creelman of Guelph as the best bushel he had ever seen. The highest price paid for cows at the pure bred stock sale was $255 each for two, the property of G. H. Sinclair of Ailsa Craig. At the mass meeting held under the auspices of the fair Thursday night Principal Creelman of Guelph substituted for Hon. Manning Doherty, who was ill. S. L. Sinclair of Toronto spoke of the desirability of consolidated schools. J. E. Armstrong, M. P. for East Lambton, urged the erection of a Winter Fair building at Petrolea, to the building of which the county of Lambton would contribute $5,000. The Government would be asked to furnish the balance. The outstanding features of the fair might have run down to rew lors to see her. First she had worked in the newspaper office as a stenographer. Then she had married John Lewis Cameron and they had gone immediately to housekeeping.

Cameron was a busy man; he held a "desk job" on the paper. Vacations had been hard to get. And before long Hannah had written about her baby—

"Hannah's Car'lyn."

After the little one's arrival there med less chance than before for the city family to get up to Sunrise Cove. But at any time he might have gone to them. If Joseph Stagg had shut up his store for a week and gone to New York, it would not have brought the world to an end. Nor was it because he was stings that he had not done this. No, he was no miser. But he was fairly buried in his business. And there was no "look up" in that dim little office in the back of the hardware store.

On this evening he closed the stori Corners slowly. To tell the truth, Mr. Stagg rather shrank from arriving home. The strangeness of having a child in the house disturbed his tran-

The kitchen only was lighted when he approached; therefore he was reassured. He knew Hannah's Car'lyn must have been put to bed long since, It was dark under the trees and only long familiarity with the walk enabled him to reach the back porch noiselessly. Then it was that something scrambled up in the dark and the roar of a dog's barking made Joseph Stagg leap back in fright. "Drat that mongrel!" he ejaculated, remembering Prince.

The kitchen door opened, revealing Aunty Rose's ample figure. Prince whined sheepishly and dropped his abbreviated tail, going to lie down again at the extreme end of his leash and blinking his eyes at Mr. Stagg. "The critter's as savage as a bear!"

grumbled the hardware merchant. "He is a good watchdog; you must allow that, Joseph Stagg," Aunty Rose The hardware dealer gasped again, It would be hard to say which had startled him the most—the dog or (To be continued next week.)

Nathaniel Dailey, who died at Forest on Feb. 3rd, was born on the 4th line north of Warwick. In his younger days while working on the G.T.R. he had a foot injured by getting caught in a switch. He then went to Sarnia and was clerk at the Belchamber hotel for 10 years and afterwards conducted the Commercial Hotel, Wyoming.

THE BEST TONIC FOR NERVOUS PEOPLE

Increase Your Nervous Energy by Building Up the Blood With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Nervous people who have not yet developed a disease that can be recognized and treated by the medical professions have the greatest trouble in finding relief. Irritation, headache, sleeplessness, nervous indigestion, all these discomforts make life miserable but are endured rather than run a doctor's bill without hope of recovery.

Every such sufferer should know the danger of such a condition to the nervous system. Nervous debility and even paralysis may result if the tone of the nerves is not restored by building up the blood. As a tone for the blood and nerves Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been used with the greatest success. They have a direct action on the blood and therefore enable it to carry to the nerves the with the greatest success. They have a direct action on the blood and therefore enable it to carry to the nerves the elements they need to fully restore their normal function—and at the same time improve the general health. The benefits that follow the use of this medicine, is shown by the statement of Mrs. Jenny Marr, R. R. No. 3, Port Rowan, a well-known school teacher, who says:—"Some years ago I became greatly run down, and was in this condition for nearly a year. A doctor whom I called in said I was suffering from complete nervous prestration. It would hardly be possible to tell all the symptoms of my case, but anyone who has passed through a nervous break-down will know what I suffered. As I did not seem to improve under the doctor's treatment. I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Fills, and the decision was fortunate one for me, as I soon found some relief through the use of the pills, and atter taking eight boxes I was fully restored to health. To-day I am strong and hearty, without an ache or pain, and for my present physical condition I feel I am indebted to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and can heartily recommend them to anyone suffering from nervous troubles."
