TITLES FOR POOR MEN.

A short while ago there was a mine explosion near Glasgow. Twenty six men were in the mine at the time and only three escaped. Those three would also have perished had not a fireman numed Charles Riley run fowaru them. He then groped into the workings to alarm the others. He was not again seen alive.

Here is a story best told thus curt ly. It shines enough in its own plainepic. Twice the passion to live unus have sweated the soul of Charles Riley; once when he saw the first smoke, again when he had warned his nearer mates and could have escaped as they did. But he went on into flames that "raged like a furnace"; and when they found the shell of him one of the search party cried, 'That man's wife ought to receive the Victoria Cross."

Who will not chime to the exclamation? Who will not spread the bravest deed in the limelight of warfrensy is paled by those hot heroisms of industrialism's stunning disasters? What is too much of honor to give these unfeshed soldiers who will run to death on a summons that need no be obeyed, whose only court-martial is a man's inner love of his fellows? Charles Riley is not the only man of the mine who has acted this utmost knighthood of self-sacrifide. There is scarce ever a mining disaster that does not anneal in its crucible of agony some such swift-tempered hero. Here, indeed, is the coat-of-arms of democracy, the emblazonment of the great brotherhood of labor, this last sacrifice f r mateship that some of them will always run to make in the face of ugly death. It happens again and again in the engine-room, in the chemical vat, the smouldering magazines, the rank well, and the lethal sewer. Sometimes he is brought out maimed or poisoned—always, after his fleeting day in print, his name and his deed are forgotten by the world.

And so, thinking of Charles Riley, archetype of all that pale array of the forgotten dauntless, I ask why there is no title of honor for poor men who so enrich the greatness of our common humanity, a title that will be theirs for life if they survive, a has to the noble. For he is doffing his hat to himself.

Gladstone's Nickname.

Lord Gladstone, the Governor General of South Africa, who has been so greatly criticized on account of his action in permitting imperial troops to be used during the recent riots on the Rand, is now fifty-seven years of age. At Eton he was nicknamed "Tuppenee" on account of twopence being remitted off the in ome tax by his father, the G.O.I., the year Herbert first went to that classic school. That cognomen has stuck to him through life and to his intimates the Governor-General of South Africa is still known as "Tuppenee."

When a boy Lord Gladstone was said to have been keenly interested in politics and in history, but he did not particularly distinguish himself in classics, but he was second to none at cricket. He was very sturdily built when a boy of sixteen, with a fine muscular development, and was an excellent gymnast. His love for the country and its pursuits even at a very early age was quite extraordinary, and besides being a first-rate shot, he knew a great deal about forestry and loved every corner of the beautiful Hawarden Park. Of animals "Tuppenee" was very fond. One of his earliest deals in live stock was the purchase of a retriever puppy from the Home for Lost Dogs, at Battersea, which lived for many years, and became a very valuable dog, for which he was offered $100. Musie was always a great delight to him, and he had plenty of pluck and wonderful animal spirits and always viewed the world generally through rose-colored spectacles.

All Old.

Discovery of a prehistoric Turkish bath in Ireland suggests again the thought that most of the things about which modern civilisation boasts are ancient. An actomatic machine was in use to supply sacrificial water in an ancient Greek temple. Queen Maria Theresa had an elevator in her house at Luxembourg at least as early as 1777, and an omnibus was running in Paris in 1662. In 1667 Robert Hooke conveyed sounds to a distance by distended wire—telephone, in fact.

Great Dreamers. Great Dreamers.

Robert Louis Stevenson was a great dreamer, and could dream in sequence, continuing a dream from the point where it had broken off the night before. It was in this way that the greater part of "Tekyll and Hyde" was put together. Dante, too, is said to have dreamed many cantos of "The Divine Comedy." and Voltaire records how the "Henriade" came to him in sleep. "Heas occurred to me" he wrote, "in apite of myself and in which I had no part whatever."

"Bol" Wou lied to me! Well, I'm through with this foolishness. If you'll go back on your word like this you'll bawl me out before the priest,

"Let me go!" she panted, "I'll mar ry you. Yes, yes, I'll do it, only don't touch me now?' He led her back to the fire, which "That's right. Sit down and behave

I've got a lot of money, or I will have, and once you're Mrs. Run-mion nobody 'Il ever know about this or think of you as a squaw." He was still talking when the girl sprang to her feet and sent a shrill cry out over the river, but instantly be was up and upon her, his hand over her mouth, while she tore at it, screaming the name of Poleon Doret. He allenced her to a smothered, sobbing mumble and turned to see, far iver, a man in a bark cance. The craft had just swing past the bend above and was still a long way off, so far away, in fact, that Necla's signal had not reached it, for its occupant held unwaveringly to the swiftest channel, his body rising and falling in the smooth, unending rhythm of a master boatman under great haste, his arms upfung now and then as the paddle glinted and flashed across to the converte side. the opposite side, Runnion glanced about hurriedly, concealment. The Peterborough stood out upon the bar conspicuously, as did be and the gtri. But the chance remained that this man, whoever he was, would pass by, for his speed was great, the river a mile in width and the bend sharp. Nects had cried Poleon's name, but her companion.

name, but her companion saw no re-semblance to the Frenchman in this strange looking voyager. In fact, he could not quite make out what was peculiar about the man—perhaps his eyes were not as sharp as hers—and then he saw that the boatman was naked to the waist. By now he was drawing opposite them with the speed of a hound.

The girl, gagged and held by her captor's hands, struggled and mouned despairingly, and, crouching back of the boat, they might have escaped disthe boat, they might have escaped discovery in the gray morning light had it not been for the telltale fire—a tiny, crackling blaze no larger than a man's hat. It betrayed them. The dancing craft upon which their eyes were fixed whipped about, almost leaping from the water at one stroke, then came toward them, now nothing but a aarsow thing, half again the width of a man's body. The current carried it down ahreast of them, they past, and Runnion rose, releasing the girl, who cried out with all her might to the boatman. He made no sound in reply, cree out win all ner imput to the boatman. He made no sound in reply, but drove his cance shoreward with quicker strokes. It was evident howould effect his landing near the lower end of the spit, for now he was within hearing distance and driving closer overy instant.

Nects heard the gambles call:

The Caundian's clinched hands crushed wintever they fell upon as frundled with metal. The fingers were like tearing tongs that could not be loosed. It was a frightful combat, hillcome from its inequality, like the bettle of a man against a maddened beast whose teeth tore eard whose claws ripped, whose every move was irresistible, hand so it was over sharity.

Poleon rose and ran to the fallen girl, leaving belind from a huddled and twisted likeness of a man. He picked her up tenderly, mouning and crooning. But as her limp head loiled back, throwing her pale, blind features up craft in a sidewise drift, and with it the girl saw coming a terrible tragedy. She started to run down the graveled ridge behind her enemy, not realising ing. But as her itmp head lolled beek, throwing her pale, hilled features up to the heavens he began to cry, this time like a woman. Tears fell from his eyes—burning bears, the agony of which seared his soul, He had her carefully beside the water's edge, and, holding her head and shoulders in the crook of his left arm, he wet his right hand and bathed her face, crouething over her, helf unde, dripping with the sweat of his great labors, a tender, palpitisting figure of bronzed muscle and since, with all his fury and hate replaced by apprehension and pity. The short moments that he wocked with her were ages to him, has she revived beneath his ministrations, and the value or moment of her action nor knowing clearly what she would do, but as she drew near she saw Runnion raise his gun again and without nion raise his gun again and without thought of her own safety threw herself upon him. Again his shot went wide as he strove to hurt her off, but his former taste of her strength was nothing to this now that she fought for Poleon's life. Runnion snarled angrily and thrust her away, for he had waited till the cance was close.

"Let me go, you derill?" he cried and admed again. But scrain she wan as There we go, you devult he erred and almed again. But again she ran at him. This time, however, she did not pit her strength against his, but pansed, and as he undertook to fire she thrust at his elbow, then dodged out of his way. Her blow was crafty and well timed, and his shot went wild. ber first frightened look of conscious-hess was changed to a melting smile. "W-what happened, Poleon?" she said. "I was afraid."

Again he took aim, and again she de-stroyed it with a touch and danced out of his reach. She was nimble and He stood up to his full height, shaking and weak as the water that dripped from him, the very bones in him light and quickened now by a cold calculation of all that depended up dissolved. For the first time he ut-tered words, "Tank God, ha gosh!" and ran his hand up over his wet face. "Where is he?" She started to her Runnion, while the cance drove close every instant. On the fourth, as she lashed at him, he struck to be rid of knees affrightedly; then, seeing the twisted, sprawling figure beyond, be-gan to shudder. "He—be's dead?" "I den't know," said Poleon carelessher, cursing wickedly—struck as he would have struck at a man. Silently she crumpled up and fell, a pitiful, fraggied, awkward little figure sprawied upon the rocks. But the delay ly. "You feel it purty good now, eh,

"Yes I be struck me!" The rememproved fatal to him, for, though the canoe was close against the bank and the huge man in it seemed to offer a mark too plain to be missed, he was branes of what had occurred surged over her, and she buried her face in her hands, "Oh, Poleon, Poleon! He was a dreadful man."

pointment of a church agent. Dr. Forrest reported for a committee, and said there the receipt of the moneys won by Dr.

The report extended to Rev. Dr. Mc. Curdy thanks for efficient workduring the past 14 years.

A recommendation was made for more assistance so that a large part of the time of the agent may be given to general superintendence of the contributions of the church, and that he be expected to evisit congregations, particularly those that are vacant.

The report recommended that the salary of the agent be $2,500 per annum with travelling expenses, that the bookkeeper's salary be $000 per annum, and that the College Board be empowered to employ a young woman as stenographer.

Rev. Dr. McCurdy thanked the Synod for their kindness to him while in office and he paid a high tribute to Miss Munro, as a most efficient and faighful official.

A ballot was taken for the next agent which resulted in Rev. Thomas Stewart receiving the appointment by a large majority.

Prof. Falconer reported on the students.

which receiving the appointment by a large majority.

Prof. Falconer reported on the students. He recommended that Victor Guest Rae and George Whilden be given the standing of third year students in the Presbyterian College, Hallian presented the report on Foreign Missions. The statistical Areport received last year showed $88,000 for the work. Ten years ago it was only $83,000.

Dr. John McMillan reported for Pine Hill College. He said the Synod ought to be proud of the equipment, as well as men. Thirteen, and perhaps fourteen men would graduate in the Spring. The world graduate in the Spring. The property at Pine Hill is worth $250,000. Last year $8,700 for the college was received and this year they need about $2,400 more.

Harvest festival service at Christ Church Mission. Personals, etc.

HAMBURG, Oct. 10.—Emperor William to-day ordered from Max Oertz, the well known yacht builder of this city, a yacht to replace his present racing yacht Meteor, and her success will have an Important bearing on the question whether Germany will challenge for the America's Cup with a cutter designed by Oertz.

Max Oertz was the designer of the last Meteor and several other fairly successful 75 foot yachts. The new schooner for the Emperor is to be built at the Krupp yard at Kiel, and probably will have less water-line than her predecessor, which was forced to concede heavy time allowances to her competitors.

The Emperor has the fullest confidence in the ability of Max Oertz, and ordered the new boat without waiting for the launching of the new yacht under construction by Herschoff for Robert E. Tod, of New York Yacht Club.

Dufferin.

William Nauss, son of Captain Nauss, Prince St., is here from New York on a visit to his parents.

Rev. Father Ethelbert will give an address on temperance under the auspices of St. Peter's C. T. A. and B. Society in St. Peter's hall to night commencing at 8.15 o'clock.

The Golden Star Bible Class of the Methodist Sunday school held a very successful tea in the Methodist school room last evening. The proceeds go towards the supply of new chairs for the Sunday school. The little North End Mission of Christ Stohy, of the All-Blacks, booted a field supply of new chairs for the Sunday school. The little North End Mission of Christ Church was beautifully decorated with fruit, flowers and Autumn leaves, etc., last evening on the occasion of a harvest festival service there. There was a large audience present. The preacher was Rev. T. H. Perry, of St. Matthias Church, Halifax, who preached a very fine sermon appropriate to the occasion. The singing was particularly well rendered, the anthems being "O Give Thanks Unito The Lord and "Ye Shall Dwell in the Land."

and "Ye Shall Dwell in the Land."
The case of a man neglecting his ox has been taken up by the S. P. C. and a warrant has been issued for his appearance to answer for his negligence. It seems that a few days ago, the man came in from the country and left his ox tied in in a field without giving him any attention for some days, when it was looked after by the authorities.

Story of heroism brings the tears.

Disciples are told of sacrifice of missionaries.

(Toronto Globe, Monday.)

"He had to close the eyes of his dead wife and put her in the coffin he had made with his own hands and bury her." No more thrilling story has ever been told than was told by Dr. Royal J. Dr. yesterday afternoon at the Disciples of than was told by Dr. Royal J. Dr. yesterday afternoon at the Disciples of the world. It was the story of the death of Mrs. R. Ray Eldred, the wife of one of the missionaries of the Church of the Disciples of Christ in the Congo. With a sob in his throat and a tear in his eye, the deep furrows in his own countenance telling of his own privations in Africa, Dr. Dye spoke in thrilling accents of the work of Dr. and Mrs. Eldred. They had left three little children in America and gone back to the work because of the dearth of missionaries.

Mrs. Eldred was stricken down, and seven of those faithful black men who were ready to give their lives to the exerts strong man physically, left in a cance and pulled before they came back. Alone the missionary went ploughing his lonely fourow, blazing the way through the forest to reach and teach men who had never heard of his Master. Then came the news that he, too, had reached the end, and he methis death on one of those rivers which he was using as a highway to carry his message.

would be paid over to Mr. McLellan.

The Herald says that Mr. Perkins, of the Russell House, Montreal, purchased Dr. Sharper from a carload consignment of horses when he was rising three years old; that it took the combined efforts of three experienced horsemen, a strong rope and an iron post solidly embedded in a Montreal yard, to hitch the erratic, high strung Sharper to a road cart.

Last Spring Mr. McLellan sent the horse to a Sydney exchange stable with an eager request that some person exchange $225 for the horse. Is there were no takers. Then Mr. Purves, who firmly believed, from experience, that there was a whole lot of genume speed and endurance in the horse, devoted much of his time to him, with the result so wells known. FANS DROPPED DEAD.

PHILADELPHIA, Qcb. 8.—While watching an electric score-board during to day's game between the Giants and Athletics, John Sherrick collapsed on the sidewalk and died a few minutes later. It was during the first ining of the contest and Sherrick had just yelled "give us another homer, Baker." When the play reproduced on the score beard showed that the Athletics star batsman had struck out the excited fan dropped to the pavement. Heart failure is believed to have caused his death.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—A middle-aged man who had been leading the cheering in front of a Park Row bulletin board to-day, dropped dead of heart disease as the news was flashed that Mattlewon had made a hit in the tenth inning.

"THE UNWRITTEN LAW." In a celebrated case, several years ago

In a celebrated case, several years ago Delmas, an eloquent Californian, argued internationally that the husband, the father or son, in avenging deeds against their women, should be exonerated under "the unwritten law." It was in an application of the spirit of an ancient proceeding, but the current courts, not inclined to sentimentalize, did not regard it with great favor. The fact is, however, that in jury trials "the unwritten law" has frequently freed the offenders, despite all legal precedent to the contrary.

A fitting recent example of this is presented in "The Ne'er to Return Road," in which a young husband is sentenced for life for being implicated in the death of his wife's lover. Under the circumstances, sentiment might argue for his freedom; but the law, stern and inexorable, calls for him to serve for life—a matter that he later takes in his own hands, making his sentenced.

This dangerous drift down "The Ne'er to Return Road" is thrilling, telling, picturesque and pathetic. It will be shown here on the screen at the Orpheus to-day and to-morrow. UNVEILING OF PORTRAIT

The late William Collins. The late William Collins.

The funeral took place yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock from 95 Cornwallis St. of the late William Collins, whose death occurred on Tuesday at the age of 71.

Services were conducted at the house and grave by the Rev. S. H. Prince, of St. Paul's church, who was assisted by Major Theakston, city missionary, and William Currie, evangelist. Interment was at Fairview cemetery. There were many floral offerings and other tributes of respect.

OBITUARY.

Archibald S. Mitchell passed away yesterday at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Mitchell, '38 Queen street, after an illness of several months, at the age of nine years. He was a bright little fellow, popular with his schoolmates, and his early death will be regretted. George S. Taylor, of Yarmouth, has re ceived a telegram announcing the death Tuesday, of Allan D. Cameron, which tool place at San Francisco. The deceased was 33 years of age.

At to-day's meeting of the Board of Control the following letter was read from General Manager F. P. Gutelius, of the With reference to your resolution of September 29th requesting the engineer in charge of the terminal work to place before the Board a plan of the construction work that will alter the approach to the Park, or encroach upon any portion of the Park area, etc. Thursday's Montreal Star says: Theg to advise that we desire to close Pleasant street from the old distillery to the Park and divert the traffic that at present traverses Pleasant street up Inglis street to Young avenue and south on Young avenue to the Park. An alternative has been suggested to run a new street from the corner of Atlantic street and South Bland street and Join Pleasant at the total distillery.

The only encroachment which we desire to make at the present time upon the Park property is the construction of a temporary rallway from the corner of Clarence and View streets to the breakwater, near Fort Ogilvie, as now staked out upon the ground. This track is to be removed after the construction of the breakwater is completed.

A plan showing the closing and diversion of the various streets will be presented to your Board as soon as it is completed, which I trust will be during the next month or six weeks.

NEW LIGHTING SYSTEM

NEW LIGHTING SYSTEM For Barrington and Granville Streets arranged for.

Through the energy of Wm. Schon and Louis Connolly, 26 lights will be placed on Barrington and Granville streets. The lights ordered, luminous are lights, were designed by Professor E. L. Doquesue, of Paris, and have been adopted by many of the large cities of Canada and the United States.

States.

The present lights will come down, and when the new system is installed Barington St. will be a gress white-way from the Academy of Music to Jacob St., and Granville from Backville to Backingham. It is understood that the city will of-operate with the business men in installing this modern lighting system. The following are the business men who have already agreed to share the expense of installing the luminous lights:

TRINITY HARVEST SERVICE. The annual Harvest Festival Service of On Home Rule question still Trinity Church was held last night, when there was a large attendance. The church was most artistically decorated with autumn leaves, flowers, and an abundance of fruit and vegetables, which were tastefully arranged. Venerable Archdeacon being discussed. London, Oct. 10.—That portion of the speech delivered at Dundee by Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiratty, making reference to Uister, has excited much discussion, Mr. Churchill declared that the claim of Northeast Uister for special consideration was a claim which could not be ignored without full consideration by any government dependant upon the present House of Commons. Martell, of Windsor, was the preacher, and was most eloquent, preaching from the text: "Trust in the Lord and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shall be fed."

The music, under the direction of T. Abbott Cumming, was excellent, the full choir of 3s voices being present. The anthem was, "O Worship the King," with solo by Mrs. O. S. Newman, both anthem and solo being splendidly rendered.

Mr. Cumming also rendered a solo. Familiar and appropriate hymns were also rendered. The rector, Rev. L. J. Donaldson, conducted the service. The decorations will be left in the church for Sundsy, when the music will be repeated. dependant upon the present House of Commons.

The Conservatives contend that this argues the weakness of the Government position; the Liberals, on the other hand, argue that although the Government may be willing to give full consideration to any honeat suggestions from Ulster, it is impossible that the Government could countenance the actual exclusion of Ulster from the Home Rule Bill.

John Dillon, M. P. for East Mayo, said that the whole idea of lopping off sny part of Ireland was so grotesque that he was sure the Government, would not dream of it. "The Government," he declared, "must go straight on, if only because any overture from the Home Rule side will only further inflame the ridiculous Unionist campaign in Ulster.

THE BOUNDARY EMPORIUM IS AN INGENIOUS DEVICE.

STORES ON THE "LINE"

Where an Imaginary Barrier Separ-ates the Dominion of Canada From the United States Shrewd Dealers Have Built Shops and the Goods of Two Nations Are Found

A writer in The Montreal Standar A writer in The Montreal Standard tells in a secent article how he was once asked by an "inland" Canadian what marks the International Foundary—were there gates, or bars or guards at the points where the King's highways cross the "Line," run on south, pass into the States, and become the highways of our neighbors? The questioner was inland born. He has always lived on a farm in Pontiac County, and the only boundary he had seen was that separating his tiac County, and the only boundary he had seen was that separating his county from the county of Renfrew— his province from the Province of On-tario. And it is a boundary that none could fall to observe and respect— the Ottawa, broad, deep, swift and turbulent. That boundary nature had set and none can move or effect it.

the Ottawa, broad, deep, swift and turbulent. That boundary nature had set, and none can move or efface it. But what about the boundary along thousands of miles of our southern frontier, where there is no natural demarkation, and the "Line," like the parallels of latitude and the meridians of longtitude, is a thing of compass and science, and of treaty too? What indicates it; what marks the southern edge of our Dominion and the northern edge of their Union?

The inland enquirer thought of gates and bars and guards. There are none; and yet the line is marked, and if one knows where to look for the markers he will know "hen he crosses the line. If he does not observe the markers and is not familiar with the locality, he might cross the line and travel for several miles beyond it to the north or south without knowing that he had passed from one country to the other—from the Province of Quebec into the State of Vermont or the State of New Hampshire, from a part of the British Empire into a part of the British Empir

It is easy to know when one crosses the line; it is also easy for one unfamiliar with the frontier to cross it without being aware of the fact.

There is no gate to open, no bars to put down, no guards to encounter. The road is open, and it runs straight of the fact.

There is no gate to open, no bars to put down, no guards to encounter. The road is open, and it runs straight of the fact is the fact in the line stands the "fron post," and when it has been passed the traveler has changed countries. If he has seen the post he will be aware of the fact; if he has not seen it and is unfamiliar with the locality he will go his way ignorant of the line.

One of the curious institutions of our International Line is the "line-store"—a sort of half and half store, that is, one half in the United States and one-half in Canada. There are of elling houses built in the same fashion, so that their occupants lead double lives so far as nationality of domicile is concerned. For instance, where the highway leading from Philipsburg, in Missiaquoi county, Province of Quebeo, to Highgate Springs, in Franklin county, Vermont, crosses the line, there stands one of these half-and-half houses — a new one, which is rather remarkable, for as a rule, the line houses were built years ago. This one is comparatively new, and it belongs to and is occupied by a man who owns farms on either side of the line that here meet. His landed property is divided by the International Line and possibly to preserve symmetry, he built his house across the line. His cals are prepared in a Vermont kitchen and eaten in a Vermont and smokes his pipe in a Canadian sitting-room, and be takes h' rest in a Canadian bedroom. In such an environment one should be able to take a broad and comprehensive view of international problems.

The line-store is an uld institution, to age of many of the buildings telling this. The men who daying them.

The line-store is an old institution, to age of many of the buildings telling this. The men who devised them and who built and maintained the first ones, must have been as bold as they were enterprising, for there is something about the arrangement that seems to suggest defiance of the revenue laws, and if not defiance, at least a disposition to play with them. That, of course, applies only to the line-stores of long ago, when people forgot the tariffs and smuggled both ays. That was in the past, for whoever hears of smuggling now? Aya. That was in the past, for whoever hears of smuggling now?

All along the frontier, but particularly the older settled frontier from Compton county on the east to Dundee in Huntingdon county on the west, where the line strikes the St.
Lawrence, these line-stores are to be found still carrying on an interna-

small way, and thereby serving a number of the inhabitants of two countries.

They are much of the one type—in fact, the usual country stor. found at cross roads and in small villages. In the frort are two windows and a door, and through the centre of the doorway runs the imaginery line that sepe ates the two countries that occupy this part of the continent. Inside are two counters running lengthwise, so that one counters running lengthwise, so that one counters and the shelves behind it are in Canada, and the other counter and the other set of shelves are in the United States, and so from cellar to attic there is the division of goods on the national basis.

In the cellar the barrel of coal oil is rolled up against the American wall. Upstairs shelves on one side hold Canadian print, those on the other side hold American calico. And so through the whole stock—the rival products of the two countries meet here un*er a common room in friendly rivalry.

Do they never mingle? Do the principles of free trade never prevail here, when the customer and is Canadian customer decides that he will purchase the cheaper American kerosene across the cellar, or the American customer "guesses" that he will try some of the Canadian woollen goods on the north shelves? These are the secrets of the line-store.

To become tamons owing to accident — this would seem a fate to which very few were destined, yet in our time there are so many examples of fortune and distinction coming this way as to suggest that luck deliberately chooses to operate in the most unexpected and tantalizing way.

Perhaps the most remarkable instance of "fluking" into fame is that of a certain handsome peer, who new hids one of the most coveted positions in England. He was present at a gathering graced by the presence of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, and some of his friends thought it would be a good joke to write to him to say that "C.B.," who was then Fremier, wished to see him in order to give him a certain office, carrying with it social distinction. The noteduly came and the delighted peer, inwardly actonished at the mark of favor wholly unexpected, as it was wholly undeserved, presented himself at the first opportunity at 10 Downing street. He stated his errand, and "C.B." saw immediately that a mistake had been made. The astute Scotch statesman, however, thought that the idea, although not his, would not be a bad one to adopt, and he actually gave the comparatively unknown peer the position, quite realizing that it would mean bringing him instantly to the front. As it happend the appointment paved the way to an enormously rich marriage, and the lucky peer is now one of the most envied men in the three kingdoms—and all as the result of a joke which turned out trumps.

"C.B.," curlously enough, figured in another incident which unintentionally brought honor to the wrong man. He wished to bestow a knight hond was conferred. As it happened, however, recollected what his first name was, his nationality and the fact that be had just married a lady whose name he recollected. So he made known his wishes and the knighthood was conferred. As it happened, however, it went to another man of exactly the same first name, who was of similar nationality and had married a lady bearing the name "C.B." had mentioned — a most extraordinary mischance, but none who got appointed owing to being mistaken for someone whose name differed only from his to the extent of a single letter, the lucky man being comparatively unknown, whereas the man whe missed being appointed h. d done much service for his party. The same two M.P.'s were responsible, by same two M.P.'s were responsible, by the way, for an unfortunate contretemps in the Press Gallery. One of the pressmen there was told to do a column report of one of the M.P.'s for the town he represented, but confusing the names, as was very easy, sent a column report of the other man. The mistake was only found out when it was too late to rectify, but it is said the speech that was sent was infinitely superior to the one that should have gone. As both expressed similar political sentiments really very little harm was done. English Holidays Plentiful.

English Holidays Pientiful.

The subject of holidays among the English working classes is being discussed with much interest. There has been a steady growth in the number of occasions when a cessation of work has become customary. Where only one day was formerly taken, now the day before the usual holiday and the day after are sometimes expected.

There are now 26 days in a year recognized as legitimate occasions for holidays in most cities in England. They are as follows: Christmas day; the following day, known as boxing day, and often the day after; Easter, beginning on Good Friday and including the Monday following Easter Sunday; Whitsuntide, two days; race week, six days; a week known as Wakes Week; August bank holiday. All these holidays are not universal over England. Instead of those omitted, many places have local holidays, as the Fair Week in Nottingham. Cocaine In India.

The cocaine evil has attained suc serious dimensions in india that demand is being made for more sever penal legislation against its smuggling and illicit sale. The maximum penalty for cocaine smuggling in Bergal is three months' imprisonmen which is declared to be altogether it. which is declared to be altogether in adequate. Some of the smugglers are very wealthy men, and it is seldon that the principals are arrested. It is suspected that smuggling is largely carried en through Goa or one of the Prench settlements, and coatine is also brought into the country from Germany by means of Austrian steamers. The suggestion has been made that it the German Government would insign the German manufacturer of the drug keeping a register of all the coatine sent out, with the names of the purchasers, the taffic would soot bome to an end.

Hereditary Thieves.

The Bhampas, a tribe scattered throughout central India, are hereditary professional thieves. The Bhampas, before starting on a marsuding expedition, are in the habit of industing in some quaintly superstitions rites. A goat is killed and a few drops of water are poured into its ears. Should the ears shake it is held to be a good omen. If, however, the animal should remain motionless it is considered a pressge of evil, and the intended robbery is abandoned. Whether the omen be good or evil, however, no Bhampa, ever acts out on an expedition before first visiting the shrine of the founder of the fraternity, which is situated at Rul, in the Satara district.

According to Scottish Highlanders the appearance of the raven foreshadows death and disaster to the chiefs of the great clan Campbell. The other day the heir presumptive to the Dukedom of Argyll, Lord Archibald Campbell, passed away at Inverary, the hesdquarters of the clan. Prior to the death of his lordship the townsfolk were struck with the behaviour of the ravens on Duniquaich, the well-known hill close to Inverary Castle. Rare as that bird now is in many parts of Scotland, it was lately observed in scores between the castle and the hill, and as many as away were seen together on the day previous to Lord Archibald's death, though they are all supposed to be far up the glen preparatory to neeting. When Lord Archibald's father, the late Duke of Argyll, dled, ravens are said to have hovered over the hill, circling round and round the steep, wooded slopes.—Ireland's Own.

Gladstone and Wet Sponges. It was not without just cause that Mr. Gladstone's name was given to the handy "Gladstone bag." The grand old man was master of every detail of the art of packing. Mr. Gladstone, who appar-ently had been wholly absorbed in his the party that they were all wrong.

"Executioner to Her Majesty."

The actual signboard of John Calcreft, the famous public executioner, who during his long term of office carried out the extreme penalty of the law on many notorious murderers, may be seen in Mme. Tussard's exhibition. The beard used to be outside Calcraft's shop. It is framed and has rudely painted upon it in large block letters the following extraordinary inscription: "J. Calcraft, Beet and Shoemaker. Executioner to her Majesty." Surmounting the frame is the royal coat of arms. John Calcraft, who was born in 1800 and died in 1879, was executioner from 1823 until 1871.—London Standard.
