NO. 35.

AT. D. BASSEN'S

Time is moving fast. February is gone and March is here. The branch store we are to have in St. John will not be opened before May 1st. In the mean time capital is the main subject. And it must be raised.

Our Sale will Continue to March 15th. In the Mean Time

Preparations for spring and summer seasons are made right here at home.

We have engaged Miss Ada May Reynolds from Stellarton, N. S. as our milliner for the coming spring.

We intend to boom business more swiftly than ever before.

We bought large stocks of the first appearing styles in every line for ladies and gents. And by having a branch store in St. John, being handy to the business centers, we can give better attention to styles and novelties.

A COSTLY RAILROAD.

Portland, Ore.—Construction of two hundred miles of Copper River & Northwestern Railway, on the coast of Alaska, to the Copper River mines, at a cost of $2,000,000, meant overcoming of physical obstacles not often found in the railroad building, and besides the rigors of the climate had to be endured by the men employed. However, modern engineering skill triumphed, with the result that it has been completed, with the exception of a steel viaduct 1,300 feet long. When Skagway Railroad was built over the pass into the interior it was thought to have been the acme of engineering skill, but the line does not compare with the Copper River Railroad. The construction of the North Bank Railroad through the Columbia river gorge presented some of the difficulties engineers on the Copper River Railway met and overcame. But on the North Bank supplies were obtained easily, while the Copper River Railway was miles away from food and fuel base. First a depot was made at the fishing hamlet of Cordova, the cross-terminus of the railroad, as its basis of supplies. Then the supplies for the engineers were carried on the shoulders of men as the right of way was surveyed and marked along the river, which averaged in width from one mile to three hundred yards, and which is not navigable until Abercrombie Rapids have been passed. The railway follows the river closely for the entire route except within a short distance of the Copper River Mines, when it branches off to a small stream.

Extremely Dangerous Was Work. A. C. McNeel, of Portland, was engineer in charge of construction of five new steel bridges which carry the track across Copper River at the several points. C. N. McDonald, also a Portland man, was general foreman of bridge construction. E. G. Hawkins was chief engineer, H. A. Brown and A. O. Johnson assistants, and W. N. Bell, of Portland, formerly connected with the Southern Pacific Co., was chief draughtsman.

"When I went to Cordova, in 1909, said Mr. McNeel, "nine miles of the railroad had been built. Cordova the hamlet on the coast of Alaska, became the depot and the base of supplies. I don't if any railroad in the United States ever was built under so great difficulties, and yet with so little loss of life, taking into consideration the nature of the undertaking and the physical difficulties that were to be overcome. While I was not connected with the building of the railroad, I was brought into contact with it as engineer in charge of bridge construction. The work of the engineers who pushed their way into the interior over the trackless waste of mountains, icebergs, across moraines and moving glaciers, is a story of rare interest and tells something of the endurance and determination of the engineers and men who carried forward the work of clearing the right of way for the track and then constructed the roadbed itself. As the river is not navigable up to Miles Glacier, supplies used by the engineers' corps were taken in on the shoulders of men. We transported some supplies by boat. We loaded supplies on the barges and, with twenty or thirty men holding lines, we pushed up the river, the men with the lines often wading in the icy water. It was dangerous and tested the hardihood of the men as nothing else could have done.

The railway was built from Cordova and supplies were then shipped out as the tracks were laid. We had 800 men employed on an average, and 1,000 men most of the time. Men in my department of course, were of higher grade than the railroad laborers who laid the tracks, as they were men who worked on the bridges and were structural steel men drawn from different parts of the country.

Men Carried Supplies. The company had parts of a small steamer transported to Copper River from Valdez. This was used in the transportation business above Abercrombie Rapids. The river is dangerous and not navigable up to that point. I had one experience on the river in a small boat and I felt as we whirled through the current, threatened with destruction at every moment, that if I got out I should stay on shore afterward. The engineers who surveyed the line of the railway, of course, had to cross and recross the river many times in the course of their work.

We built five steel bridges of the heaviest character. The longest is the Miles Glacier Bridge, 1,530 feet long. The piers of this bridge were built, as were the bridge piers of the North Bank Railroad across the Columbia, at Portland, with compressed air. It was built in the face of the great Miles Glacier. Huge icebergs were swept across the bridge with tremendous force. While we were building the Miles Glacier bridge I stationed a watchman on the lookout for the ice mountains, and we kept out of their way.

The site of the bridge was located in the summer of 1907 by Assistant Bridge Engineer A. O. Johnson, who was sent there in 1908 to continue the meteorological collection of data, begun in 1907, and he also made a profile map of the river.

After consideration it was decided to use the spans 400 feet long. Solid icebergs fenders were constructed of concrete and railroad iron. In the piers of that bridge 16,146 yards of concrete were used, and the total weight of the steel used was 982,712 pounds. The conditions under which this bridge was built were severe. Sometimes the wind would attain a velocity of sixty and ninety miles an hour, and then no one could work. Often the temperature was 50 degrees below zero. Daylight lasted for four hours and we worked with lamps, putting in nine hours on the bridge. The blizzards frequently drove us indoors.

One of the interesting scenes on the route is the bridge over Kusplana Gorge. The centre span spans 238 feet above the water in the ravine below. The cantilever plan was used in this structure. The surroundings are the widest and the most picturesque imaginable. The other bridges ranged down to 525 feet. One bridge to be built will be 2,300 feet long. At present the track is laid over a temporary structure, which will go out in the spring.

Country Has Great Scenic Beauty.

While the Copper River Railroad was built for Commercial purposes, it bids fair to become one of the most popular in the world of tourists. Many tourists visited the line while we were at work. I do not know of a railroad of the same length that presents so great scenic attractions as this one does. The Railroad follows the bank of the Copper River from its delta to the copper mines, crossing and recrossing the river five times and skirting the stream.

The Empire's Gain.

The anniversary of Cronje's surrender at Paardeburg is cherished with just pride in Canada, for Canadians took a leading part in administering the "coup de grace" to the stubborn resistance which Cronje and his army had maintained for days after they had been overtaken and surrounded in their retreat from Kimberley. Cronje's surrender was a disaster to the Boer cause, for the loss of a capable commander and some four hundred men made prisoners of war was one which they could very ill afford. But if the Boers were beaten at Paardeburg they were assuredly not disgraced, and they may recall the 27th of February, 1900, with pride, so much less than the memory of February 27, 1881, the day of Majuba, justly kindles. And it is no more than is due to the memory of Cronje himself to say that the retreat from Kimberley is not less deserving of admiration than the defence of Magerfontein.

Britain sacrificed thousands of lives and huge sums of money to bring the Boers to terms. What has the conqueror gained by the conquest? What is there to show for all the expenditure of blood and treasure? By converting the "protected," "guaranteed," or "supervised" Boer republics into British colonies the Imperial authorities have increased their independence. The Imperial Government has renounced the right of intervening in the affairs of self-governing dominions, whether they are managing those affairs rightly or wrongly, especially Sir C. Lucas asserts, if they are managing them wrongly. In the course of the debates on South African federation last year Mr. Asquith declared that the opinion of Britain was almost unanimously opposed to the "color bar" on which the South Africans insisted. But, he went on to say, "the opinion of the British Government and the opinion of the British people must not be allowed to lead to any interference with a self-governing colony." British opinion was allowed to lead to interference with the Transvaal or South African Republic. The consequence of that interference is that now the Boer leaders and their allies in Cape Colony are the rulers of a united South Africa.

As we conclude, then, that Britain has gained nothing by her costly South African policy? No. Britain has gained South Africa for the Empire. Certainly the federation of Cape Colony and Natal with the Transvaal and the Orange River State was neither expected nor intended by the Imperial Government, which allowed itself to be drawn into war with the Boer Republics in 1899. Even the concession of autonomy was to be delayed for a considerable time after the war had been brought to an end. But the only way of bringing good out of all the evil that had been wrought in South Africa was the way chosen by the Imperial authorities in 1906 and the years following. Held down under a repressive form of government the Transvaal and the Orange River State would have been foci of continual trouble, a double discredit to the Empire, if not a twofold danger. With the liberties they enjoy there is nothing to tempt them to secede. They would stand to gain nothing and to lose much by secession. And while they stand to profit by the Imperial connection, the Empire needs South Africa by reason of its serviceableness as a link between Britain and Canada on the one side and India and Australia on the other. The British people has acquired no territory, no gold mines, no tribute, no ascendancy in South Africa. But the policy of concession, illogical sequel to the South African war as it may appear, was the very course of action required if South Africa was to be kept where she could do most good.—Ter. Globe.

CHIMPAN MEMORIAL HOSPITAL

Terms of Admission

The hospital is open to all applicants who present a certificate from a member of the Hospital Staff saying that their case is a suitable case for admission. Chronic cases, insane persons, or incurables, not admitted. Except in cases of emergency, application for admission must be made to the secretary, or other officer acting in his absence; and the regular form of admission must be filled and signed by some responsible person who will agree to take charge of the patient when discharged. Patients being out of town must submit to the secretary an application in writing, accompanied by a statement of their case from some responsible physician, and await an answer before presenting themselves at the hospital for admission. Patients will be admitted between the hours of 9 a. m., and 4 p. m., every day except Sundays and holidays; and in cases of emergency will be admitted at any time.

The fees for patients are ten dollars per week or upwards; but, in return for the county and town grants to the hospital, Charlotte county patients are admitted to the general ward at the rate of five dollars a week. Provision is made for a limited number of non-paying patients from parts of Charlotte county outside the incorporated towns, with the approval of the executive committee.

The need of contributions to the hospital funds is hindering the work at present, and there are patients waiting their turn for admission who are outy kept out for want of room.

The Chair Didn't Move.

A request to the Mayor of Seattle, Wash., to assist her in finding her a good husband in the Far West from a writer; who described herself as Mrs. H. Arnold, a young widow, of 530 W. 113th street, resulted in the arrival of that address of more than 200 proposals of marriage during the last week. In her letter Mrs. Arnold said she was a "jolly good cook of both plain and fancy dishes."

The old Court and the New

Much as they loved King Edward, the English people recognize that a man of a very different type may be equally worthy of their affection. Edward VII loved society for its own sake; it is no secret that George V does not. Like his father, he is a keen sportsman and a hard worker but possesses less of that superfluous energy which made the late King throw himself with the same zest in to the social as into the more serious side of life.

Queen Mary is essentially a mother. It will perhaps be impossible for her to be as much in the public eye from a merely social point of view as was Queen Alexandra, who came to the throne when she was a young girl and had to perform a more absorbing side of her domestic duties may be said to have been at an end. But it was as the devoted mother while Princess of Wales that Alexandra gained that deep hold on the affection of the English people which she has never lost.

As Queen and mother, Mary will probably follow in her footsteps. With the sterner element of society she may not be entirely popular, but that element is not important. This much is assured, that for one reason or another various well known, or at least much talked of people whose names were familiar at King Edward's court will not be seen at King George's, and that some of them have already received plain intimation of the fact.—Exchange.

Four Thousand on the Ocean On way to Canada

Close to 4,000 passengers in five steamers are enroute to this port and will arrive during the next ten days. The exact number is 3,893 and of these 2,453 are now on two steamers, the Donaldson liner Saturnia, from Glasgow, with 238 cabin and 210 steerage, and the C. P. R. liner Lake Michigan with 795.

The C. P. R. liner Lake Champlain sailed from Liverpool on the 1st, with 142 cabin and 784 steerage. Allan liner Sardinian sailed from Havre on the 3rd, with sixty-one cabin and 222 steerage, and Allan liner Virginian sailed from Liverpool for St. John via Halifax on the 3rd, with 1,440-fifty-six saloon, 459 second cabin, and 925 steerage. A number of these latter, however, will be landed at Halifax. All indications point to the immigrant rush being on.—St. J. Times.

THE NEW REMEDY FOR Nervous Exhaustion
Hereditary is one of the main causes of nervous exhaustion. Children whose minds give way in school, girls lacking in nerve-stamina, and young men exhausted by ordinary business cares, prove this. Occasional treatment with "ASAYA-NEURALL" is their salvation. It feeds the nerves, induces sleep, improves the appetite and digestion, and restores full nerve power. $1.50 a bottle. C. P. R. Work on New Property As soon as Frost Permits

The C. P. R. will start the erection of their new warehouses on the recently acquired property at the head of the harbor, as soon as the frost is out of the ground. While some of the leases of the properties do not expire until May 1, it is not likely that the company will wait until then, but will push the work right ahead within a few weeks, so as to get an early start on the buildings, as they are anxious to get into their own warehouses where they will be better able to handle their freight than under the congested conditions in the U. C. R. sheds.

The growing business of the railway here has made the erection of new and larger sheds a necessity. The list of appropriations for work on the Atlantic division this year is unusually large and includes repairs, new bridges, sidings, replacing heavy rails in place of some now in use and generally putting the road and equipment in 1st class shape. —St. John Times.

THE FARM

The Value of Composts

(By Frank T. Shutt, M. A., Dominion Agricultural Chemist at Ottawa.)

It is on hygienic grounds that in towns and villages in which there is no provision for the collection of garbage the housewife is advised to consign to the furnace or kitchen range all the household refuse—vegetable and animal. While such a crematory system may be very satisfactory from the standpoint of effectually disposing of the material that might become objectionable, it is an unnecessary waste of fuel for the possessor of a garden. Potato peelings, cabbage and celeriac leaves—and indeed vegetable matter generally—bones, etc., etc., may all be utilized through the means of the compost heap in the production of much humus-forming material rich in the elements of plant food. In the building up of such a soil as is needed for the majority of our garden crops, humus is a most important constituent. Physically, it serves to make the soil a comfortable anchoring and foraging ground for the plant's roots—warm, moist, open and mellow—chemically, it furnishes, by its further decay, much plant food in forms readily available for crop growth, and biologically it performs a most useful function in supporting the bacterial life that prepares or digests from the soils inert stores the elements needed for plant growth. Humus is the constituent that makes a loam rich, and it is a constituent that must be constantly supplied, especially to light soils, in which the waste through oxidation is necessarily heavy. The compost heap may, therefore, be a very valuable material for supplementing the annual dressing of organic manures which many gardeners find so desirable for the best results.

Earth is an excellent desiccant and by using a sufficiency to mix with an cover the refuse there need be nothing objectionable about the compost heap, which, for the best results should be kept moist (not wet) and occasionally turned over.

What would happen to Canada if the United States abolished its tariff on all Canadian goods? Would annexation at once follow? The Conservatives appear to hold that view. Theirs is a peculiar brand of loyalty.

The mere fact that disarmament was discussed in the German and French parliaments yesterday, and is the subject of correspondence between Great Britain and the United States is in itself a hopeful indication. The peace movement is slowly gaining force, because the burden of armament is becoming too heavy to bear.

A Dinner of Alfalfa.

Alfalfa must be one of the most widely useful products of the earth if all the claims of its admirers are allowed. At a dinner in Colorado it appeared in some form in every course. The biscuits were made of alfalfa meal. The turkey was stuffed with alfalfa while he was alive and afterwards when he was prepared for the oven. Mashed alfalfa took the place of potatoes and cooked alfalfa leaves masqueraded as spinach. The fresh green leaves were served as salad and alfalfa tea and alfalfa cider were used in place of coffee and water.

Unearth Site of Belshazzar Feast

Professor Kollwey, who for eleven years has been engaged in excavating Babylon for the German Orient Society, publishes in the Berlin Tagblatt an interesting account of the results of last year's work.

This work was divided between the private houses of the city, the fortifications, the city del Kasr, with palace and connected buildings, and finally the sacred precincts of the Tower of Babel. Results of importance were attained in all four quarters.

A large area covered with streets and houses from New Babylonian time was discovered. The streets more or less coincide with the streets of the older city underneath, being fairly straight and right angled. As, however, the house rooms were always built with exact right angles, the builders met with technical difficulties, which were got over by building the walls with zigzag projections, a method which gives to the walls to-day a fantastic appearance seen nowhere else in the world.

The part of the outer fortifications which was laid bare shows the massive character of this work, each side of which was six kilometers long. Almost the whole southern side of the inner town wall has been excavated. Originally this wall was directly connected with the fortifications of the citadel. The Southern part of the citadel has nearly all been uncovered. This part is oldest, and here ever built by Nebuchadnezzar's later palace extensions this part of the citadel served as the private residence of the king, the offices of the court, the private dwellings of the palace officials and the government offices being farther to the west.

"Here," says Professor L. Kollwey, "is the hall where Nebuchadnezzar was enthroned and the scene of Belshazzar's feast. It was here also that Alexander gave his generals the last commands for the conquest of the world."

The fourth object of investigation, the "Sachn," lies between the citadel and the hill "Amran." The precinct of the Tower of Babel is a square with sides of about four hundred meters, divided into several compartments. On all four sides are large entrances, mostly with courts on the outside. Probably in these courts collected the spectators or participants in processions. Into the walls were built towers vertically fluted at short intervals. Remains of four hundred of these towers have already been excavated but the total number was probably a thousand.

"Here," continues Professor Kollwey, "there is no trace of grace but only might and power, great numbers and great masses." This style of architecture will probably also be found in the Tower of Babel, "the excavation of which," says Professor Kollwey, "we now aspire to and expect."

To those particular ruins refers a not fully deciphered Babylonian inscription, giving the measurements of various edifices. It is hoped that when the excavations are complete a comparison of the inscription with the ruins will completely elucidate the Babylonian standard of measurement.

Give Children Good Bread and Butter

YOU may say bread is bread and all children want plenty of it. In a way, that's true.

But it makes considerable difference whether the bread you give your children now counts just as a "filler" or whether it counts for future health. For there is a vital difference between breads made from different flours.

The most healthful as well as the cheapest food in the world is bread made from

Royal Household Flour

This bread isn't merely something to fill a hungry stomach. It is a perfectly balanced food, rich in strengthening, blood-making material. It counts for long life.

It counts for a vigorous constitution. It counts for bone and muscle making and good rich blood.

And this because "Royal Household" is made from the finest wheat in the world — the famous Red Fyfe — richest in high quality gluten, most in demand, and most valued in all the markets of the world.

Catarrh Conquered

You know the loathsome offensiveness of a bad case of catarrh. You know that catarrh very often works its way down to the lungs, ending, perhaps, in consumption. You know that, even before it becomes severe or chronic, catarrh is most disagreeable.

Why, then, let it run on, gradually getting worse?

Possibly, like hundreds of others, you have been unable to find a cure that really cures. Then you haven't tried

Father Morrissey No. 26

This remarkably effective remedy, prescribed by the famous priest-physician, combines the advantages of both external and internal treatment. It includes tablets to purify the blood and a healing, strongly antiseptic salve to be applied inside the nostrils, directly to the affected parts.

Even chronic catarrh soon yields to this combined treatment. The discharge is stopped, the diseased membrane healed, and colds no longer follow one another with monotonous regularity. Don't let that catarrh run on—get Father Morrissey's No. 26 and cure it.

See for the combined treatment—at your dealer's.

Skeleton of Man 170,000 Years Old

London, Feb. 25.—The skeleton of the man recently found in the Thames behind Galleys Hill, near the chalk pits of Northfleet, is declared by Prof. Arthur Keith to be 170,000 years old.

In delivering the Hunterian lecture before the Royal College of Surgeons yesterday on "The Antiquity of Man," Prof. Keith said he had arrived at his estimate of age by the action of the Thames since the time when the level of the river was from 90 to 100 feet higher than it is to-day. A consideration of the parts of this skeleton man is, the Galleys Hill man, although differing in several features, is essentially modern in type and is the only representative known of the thousands of generations of Englishmen which span the vast period of human life in this country from the glacial to neolithic times.—Exchange.

THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

Swine-Raising Pays

Editor Weekly Globe and Canada Farmer: I saw in the paper that you invite subscribers to write for publication. I think one subject sufficient for one time; therefore I will try swine-raising. I have had considerable experience in Ontario in that line.

In the first place, you want to win success, the right kind of a man. He must have some common sense and be practical and careful, as well as persevering. Then he must have the right kind of buildings and surroundings to make profitable this business.

The buildings should be warm and well ventilated for winter and have plenty of light and be kept clean. I prefer a basement under a barn or under some other building, as it is warmer than a one story building in the winter and cooler in the summer.

The pens should have a concrete floor, sloping slightly back from the trough. In the back part a drop of six inches or a foot to hold manure, etc. At one end of the building it is well to have a store or feed room, with a boiler in it for cooking feed, also to use in killing time. Between it and the pens door should be hung, about three feet wide, the length of the troughs. These should be hung by the top, so that a bar will keep them in place over the back edge of the trough and when the pigs are to be fed raise the bar and crowd the floor open the width of the trough and shove the bar down. This shuts the pigs out and gives a chance to mix any feed that requires to be mixed without the pigs bothering, and saves lifting the feed over partitions etc.

The next would be to select the kind of pigs that are the best suited for pork. My opinion has been that a cross between the Berkshire and White Yorkshire gave as good results as any. They make pork while young and it is of good quality. In choosing pigs to breed from it is necessary to get the best not only of breeds, but of individuals as well. Anyone that is a judge of pigs can pick the best out of a litter at sight and none but the best should be kept for breeding. A pig with a smart, wise head will thrive the best. One with a good long body, straight to the back and under side, with well developed shoulders and hams, is the right kind of pig to keep.

In regard to feeding in my experience a pig to thrive well and pay must be fed regularly enough, but not too much. A pig should eat up his food clean and should be content till the next feeding time.

There is a great deal in feeding. We should feed cheaply and make it pay. The profit is what people are after. I found that pulped turnips made the cheapest food that I could feed for growing and fattening pigs, but they want meal with the roots. I think mixed grain is the best, such as peas, barley, wheat and corn. Oats will do to mix with the others, also shorts, bran, etc.

Sows should not be fed too heavy till after the little ones come. Then they want plenty of feed. The little ones when weaned want milk and shorts. I have found that to be best for them. Meal should be gradually added as they get older. The best way to make pigs pay is to keep them growing and fattening from the time they come till they are killed or sold. In the summer they should have a yard to run in. An orchard is the best place, where they can get shade and clean earth. They want plenty of pure water. A pig is a clean animal, if it has a chance to be clean. Do not crowd them in the pen; two will do better than more. There should not be more than eight in a pen and all the same age and size. It is only by paying careful attention to the details of breeding, feeding and housing that the best profits will be made from raising swine in this or any other country.

Sask. J. R. Hogarth.

FRIDAY, MARCH 10 1911

The local government is now in session and their supporting papers report that everything proper has been done by them and that the finances of the province are in a better condition than ever before and has been wisely and judiciously expended, also honest, while the opposition organs claim that things are at the reverse. While the receipts have increased it has been scandalously wasted and frittered away both injudiciously and dishonestly. Among the two reports only some half way house might be found that would perhaps be about right, however our roads have not shown any improvement since the present government has taken hold and this was their principal canvass and promise, when seeking election and some little attention should be paid toward the fulfilment of their contracts.

This matter we realize is one of the greatest difficulties our Provincial Governments have to contend with and needs to be handled with the greatest honesty to give anything like adequate returns for the money expended, which in all places is most woefully small for the demands made upon it. There is one thing the present administration should get credit for is the management of the Crown lands by our member from Charlotte, Surveyor Gen. Grimmer who has managed to make a much better showing in this department than the former administration.

The house adjourned last week for the funeral of Mr. Robinson and thus far very little has as yet been done.

American Army Ready For War

Canadian Press.
Washington, D. C., March 7.—The most extensive movement of troops and war vessels ever executed in this country in time of peace is now under way by order of the president, as commander-in-chief of the army and navy, the objective being the country north of the Mexican boundary and waters of the two oceans at either end of it.

Twenty thousand soldiers, more than one-fourth of the army of the United States of all arms of the service, are moving toward the Mexican border; four armored cruisers, comprising the fifth division of the Atlantic fleet have been ordered from northern waters to the naval station at Guantanamo, Cuba, and part of the Pacific fleet is shortly to be on its way to assemble at San Pedro de San Diego, California, and 2,000 machines are preparing to make Guantanamo their temporary headquarters. It was officially announced at the White House and at the war and navy departments today that the purpose of this great mobilization, unprecedented, save in war times, is the training of officers and men under service conditions, and practice in co-operation between the land and naval forces. Unusual pains were taken by all officials concerned in the matter to give this color to the sudden activity, but their statements were accepted at increasing reserve.

McLean Revolt The Reason
The real significance of these activities, which have been confined apparently to the last forty eight hours, or less, is thought to relate very directly to the conditions in Mexico, and to the growing belief that the situation there is by no means so satisfactory as the Mexican government would have it believed to be. There are persistent reports that the physical condition of President Diaz has lately become such as to alarm his adherents, and that momentous developments are prepared for.

One report, which was current here today, was that the Pearson syndicate heavily interested in enterprises in Northern Mexico, had appealed to the British government for adequate protection of themselves and other foreign interests in preparation for the chaotic conditions which would almost certainly follow any serious loss of prestige, to say nothing of the collapse of the Diaz government. It was said that the British ambassador had taken up the question with the state department here with a suggestion that unless the United States took immediate steps to exhibit its disposition and ability to protect foreign interests in Mexico, the European governments, more particularly Great Britain and Germany, will be compelled to do so. Of course, no direct confirmation of this report was obtainable, but the sudden burst of martial activity gave it color.—Tel.

Extracts From Speech of F. B. Carvell M. P., on the Trade Agreement

(From Hansard)
Mr. F. B. Carvell (Carlton, N. B.), Mr. Chairman, there is cast upon me this afternoon the somewhat unpleasant duty of attempting to reply to two hon. gentlemen with whom I have been associated in the past in the most friendly relations, who have been my political friends and associates, and who have decided to oppose the government of the day on the question now agitating this country as well as the great country to the south of us. I have nothing but the kindest words to say of these two gentlemen, because I am bound to believe that they are speaking their inmost thoughts and are entirely sincere in the course they have taken and intend to pursue. I have listened with a great deal of attention to the remarks of my hon. friend who has just taken his seat (Mr. German). I have been somewhat struck with the generalities of the arguments which he has offered, and the absence of anything in particular on which one can meet him in order to see whether his conclusions are well founded or not. Both he and the hon. member for Brandon (Mr. Sifton) have chosen to discuss this question almost entirely from the standpoint of free trade and protection. They have assumed that it means the breaking down of all the barriers which they say have made Canada prosperous in the last 25 or 30 years; they are assuming that we are throwing away our protective tariff, and they have studiously avoided any reference to the details of the agreement under discussion. It will be my duty to try to bring the minds of the members of this house back to the true condition of affairs and discuss the question submitted in these resolutions.

I want first, however, to point this out to my hon. friends opposite, especially those members from the west of Lake Superior, who so willy nilly cheered my hon. friend from Welland when he said that in three years, if this agreement went through, he expected to see the farmers of the west come back here and ask for protection for themselves if they did not get free agricultural implements. I wonder if my farmer friends from the west who cheered that so willy nilly will not be going through the province of Manitoba and the province of Saskatchewan in the next three years telling these people that what they want is free agricultural implements. If they do, then there is an entire absence of logic in the whole argument put up by my hon. friend from Welland and my hon. friend opposite the proposed agreement. The trouble is my hon. friends cheer everything which they think may create some little friction on this side. We, however, on this side are not losing any sleep because my friends from Welland (Mr. German) and Brandon (Mr. Sifton) have chosen to take the course they did, and the Liberal party is big and broad enough

Facts for Weak Women

Nine-tenths of all the sickness of women is due to some derangement or disease of the organs distinctly feminine. Such sickness can be cured—is cured every day by

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

It Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

It acts directly on the organs affected and is at the same time a general restorative tonic for the whole system. It cures female complaint right in the privacy of home. It makes unnecessary the disagreeable questioning, examinations and local treatment so universally insisted upon by doctors, and so abhorrent to every modest woman.

We shall not particularize here as to the symptoms of those peculiar affections incident to women, but those wanting full information as to their symptoms and means of positive cure are referred to the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser—1208 pages, newly revised and up-to-date Edition, sent free on receipt of 31 cent stamps to cover cost of mailing and; or, in cloth binding for 50 stamps.

to treat those two gentlemen as friends, and yet allow them to disagree with us in this matter. But when my hon. friends from the west go around telling the farmers that they want free agricultural implements, how will they square this with these two hon. gentlemen or the rest of their party?

Mr. Lennox.—You do not know the west.
Important Benefits.
Mr. Carvell.—I have had the privilege of meeting here about a thousand men from the west and of listening to what they said, and I know what they asked for, and I am bound to think that they were sincere. I know that they asked for free agricultural implements, and I would ask my hon. friend who interrupts me if he would vote for free agricultural implements, as possibly he may have a chance to do before this session is through. Let us examine this proposed agreement and see whether it has broken down the bulwarks of protection or not. The government have brought down a proposition to provide for the free entry into Canada of certain articles. I shall not weary the house by going over the list, but I shall give a few in order that my hon. friends opposite may appreciate the true condition of affairs. We propose to bring in under the free list cattle, horses and mules, sheep and lambs and other livestock. Will my hon. friend from Welland (Mr. German), or any hon. gentleman opposite tell me how it will injure the people of Canada to have these things brought in free? Do we import any of them? Why, these are among our staple exports. Then, how on earth can it injure us to have free imports of those goods which we are sending out of this country by the tens of millions. We next come to wheat and other grains. As we do not import these grains it cannot do our people any harm to have them in free.

A good position can be had by ambitious young men and ladies in the field of "Wireless" or Railway telegraphy. Since the 8 hour law became effective, and since the wireless companies are establishing stations throughout the country there is a great shortage of telegraphers. Positions pay beginners from $70 to $90 per month, with good chance of advancement. The National Telegraph Institute operates six official institutes in America, under supervision of R. R. and wireless officials and places all graduates into positions. It will pay you to write them for full details at Cincinnati, Ohio, or Philadelphia.

Public School Board Affairs.

At an emergency meeting of the board held on Saturday evening, the resignation of Principal G. S. Lord was handed in. The board having a high opinion of Mr. Lord's capability, did not accept the resignation, but appointed Chairman Clements and B. L. Horton as a committee to interview Mr. Lord. They saw him on Monday evening and were successful in inducing him to withdraw his resignation, thus avoiding the necessity of breaking up work in the higher grades at the end of this term. Mr. Lord's decision to remain in Vegreville will be very generally applauded as his work is giving entire satisfaction.--Vegreville Observer.

H key at St. Stephen.

The Currier's Rink at St. Stephen was the scene of two interesting hockey matches on Friday last. The games had been well advertised and about 600 people were on hand when the whistle blew.

The St. George High school and the St. Stephen Intermediate played the first game, which after a close and exciting struggle ended in the one goal each. The play was very even throughout with St. George the aggressor in the 2nd half. The St. George goal was set from a scrimmage while that of St. Stephen by one of McNichol's long hits over the lights. Owing to the fact that the Thistles and U. N. B. were to play the tie could not be played off, but it is expected will be played off on St. George on Mar. 10.

The line-ups were:

St. Stephen	St. George
Nicholson	Goal	McNichol
R. Meahan	Point	J. De w
McNichol	Cover Point	E. Johnson
A. Speely	Rover	Machum
Drolev	Centre	Hilda
MacNeil (capt.)	R. Wing	Stewart
Watterson	L. Wing	A. Johnson (capt.)

Referee--A. McWha.

The Thistle-U. N. B. game was fast but marred by dirty tactics on the part of several players. The advantage lay with the Thistles throughout, final score being 94 in their favor. A. McWha refereed this game also.

Elondin's Charges to be Heard Tuesday

Ottawa, March 7.--Inquiry into charges made by Mr. Elondin, M. P. for Chumplain, that "plundering" has been going on at the government shipyards, at Sorel and that Alclard Lanctot, M. P. for Richelieu, had his house painted by government workmen, was taken up by the committee on elections and privileges of the commons today.

No evidence was heard, but the preliminaries were arranged and the inquiry will go on next Tuesday. Both sides will be represented by counsel and the question whether this counsel will be paid for by the government will be decided later.

Mr. Lanctot denies the allegation and says while the work was done by the government he paid for it.

An Old Man's Game

(Tit-Bites)

On one occasion an old lady was in the same railway compartment as a party of golfers.

"I found fearful trouble this morning said one. At the first I fell right into the middle of a prickly gorse bush and at the second I was stuck up on the top of a tree. I pitched out of the bounds into the yard at the third got caught by the wire at the fourth; stuck fast in a deep hole at the fifth; found myself buried in mud at the sixth. I was flying in a heap of rough flints at the seventh got lost at the eighth and finished up at the bottom of that dirty ditch at the last hole."

Gracious me cried the horrified old lady from her corner of the carriage and they told me that golf was an old man's game; I'll never let my Edwin play again.

Traffic was blocked in New York by a young lady who appeared in a street in advanced costume, or rather by those who paid her various attentions. Barrie says London is the only city in the world in which a man can eat pig's feet on the street without attracting attention. No city is so great that a woman can in safety appear in its streets in advance of or far behind the fashions.--E.S.

Gambling

Gambling is undoubtedly one of the most ancient social evils of the present day. Churches and reform organizations are agitating on government the need of legislation, but legislators are finding it a matter of extreme difficulty to curb the evil. They simply succeed in changing its form occasionally. There are single room rooms in New York that are said to make a profit of $3,000,000 a year, and it is estimated that $4,000,000 are bet annually over the telephones in New York city. To this must be added the unknown and fabulous amounts made and lost in card and other games of chance, sometimes in large single amounts, more frequently in small but multitudinous sums in private parlors in bridge, the fashionable game of the hour for men and women of the wealthy and middle classes.

The forms of gambling and speculation are almost endless. The oldest forms are with lotteries, faro, thimbles, dice, cards and the like, but there are many more. There is the very popular device of the nickel in the slot. These machines are sometimes very elaborate, with the money shelves arranged in a circle which revolves like a wheel of fortune. It requires but five cents and there is a chance of winning one dollar. These machines are not infrequently found in vandy stores near schools where boys crowd at noon to take their initial lesson in gambling.

"Playing the races" is another favorite method of betting by individuals. The book-maker plays against the public and races were run honestly a good judge of horses would often win; but they very rarely are. A new device was invented last summer to escape the law against gambling. In Chicago a steamboat, owned by professional gamblers, carried at night would-be gamblers out into Lake Michigan to a point at which it is difficult to know where the state lines run and therefore almost impossible to convict under any state law.

Whatever the form it takes, whether in the subtleties and refinements of general speculative business, watering stocks, manipulating railroads to buy cheap and sell dear, gambling is a general evil, leads to vicious inclinations, destruction of morals and a loss of self-control and respect. The best sentiment of all civilized communities has for centuries held this view and expressed in legislation. It is a great corrupter of morals and of youth, drawing together the idle and evil-disposed persons to the injury of their character and the loss of their fortunes. Yet in spite of legislation the evil goes on.—Tel.

Russian Agriculture

In poultry farming the chief progress is in the more thickly populated areas where, though there is more competition, labor is not so dear. The Provinces Voronezh and Kharkov come first, though closely followed by Poltava and other neighboring provinces. In many places it is like ly that, as the land is more and more subdivided into small holdings, poultry farming on scientific principles will supersede the cattle industry. Besides the exports of eggs and birds, feathers and down to the value of $950,000 were exported in 1909, so that the value of all poultry products amounted to about $41,330,000. In the year 1899 the corresponding total was only $19,285,000. In spite of the increasing export and of the rising prices of poultry products, the consumption within the country increases not only amongst well-to-do customers, but also amongst the producing peasant farmers themselves.

Women Outnumber Men

According to official figures of the census return, taken on December 1, the population of Greater Berlin now numbers 4,712,554 inhabitants, an increase of 15 per cent. since the census of 1905. Greater Berlin has assimilated no fewer than fifty-seven outlying towns and villages situated within a radius of fifteen miles from the centre of the capital. The metropolis itself only numbers 2,049,148 inhabitants, and forfeits the rank of the fourth city in the world to Chicago. The GROWTH OF BERLIN PROPER since 1905 is only 24.005, but the great contiguous suburbs of Charlottenburg, Wilmersdorf, Schoenberg, Rickdorf, Teptow, Tempelhof and Friedenau have increased enormously, some of them as much as 100 per cent.

Wilmersdorf, Berlin's fashionable West end, has grown 69.9 per cent. The great moral of Berlin's census is that trade and industry are usurping old-time residential space and are driving the house-dwelling class out of the metropolis proper into the forests of flats springing up in the environs.

The predominating feature of the national census is the growing preponderance of the female element in Germany, and this is exercising the minds, not only of the Government, but also of all politicians and social reformers. There is a deep rooted idea in Germany, which, as well known, is shared by the Kaiser and the RULING ELEMENT that woman's sphere is the home and that it is the destiny of woman to seek a mate and find her happiness out of the metropolis proper.

The increasing preponderance of women is forcing Germany further and further away from this idea, and is making the position more and more difficult for those who still oppose the entrance of women into all sorts of occupations and professions.

Strange enough, in France too, the same increase in the excess of women over men is noted. Although the last census in France was taken in 1906, the detailed results were only made public last week. The census gives the number of males as 19,009,721 and the number of females as 19,721,032, a difference of 648,211 in favor of the latter sex.

Drinks Gallon of Liquor at One Drought and Dies.

Prince Vladimir Tereptoff, a penniless nobleman, sacrificed his life at Moscow last week in an attempt to win a strange wager.

Count Waldig, a wealthy landowner made a bet with him that he would not drink a gallon of liquor at a draught. The prince's reward if he accomplished the feat was to be the title deeds to a valuable estate.

The prince ate nothing all day with the exception of salt herring, and in the evening, in the presence of the count and four witnesses, he raised a gallon jar to his lips and drank steadily until he set it down empty.

The title deeds of the estate were handed to him, but hardly had he received them when he sank to the ground and died in a few moments.

It is something of a surprise to learn that France gets locomotives in Scotland. The French are supposed and not only supposed but are known to be very effective mechanics in the art of producing locomotion machines of all kinds. But recently one of the government railways ordered fifty locomotives of a type similar to those used on a Highland Railway. The official explanation of the reason for placing this order outside France is that the French builders are to busy at the moment that they will be quite unable to complete the locomotives in the time specified. The fifty engines referred to are to be built by the North British Locomotive Company, Glasgow, and are to be delivered on the rails by first of next July.—Exchange.

HAUNTED BY GHOST.

Self-Accused Murderer Declares His Victim Continually Appears to Him.

A well-built young fellow walked into Deal Police station, England on Tuesday, 7th, and told an extraordinary story. He gave the name of Edward John Corry, and said to the inspector: "I murdered a girl in Canada two years ago and she keeps appearing in front of me and speaking to me. I can't put up with it any longer."

When he was charged the following day with being a wandering lunatic, a statement was read in which Corry said he was incited to shoot a girl at Hamilton by an American, who gave him five hundred dollars and got him a passage on a little boat bound for Birkenhead.

The magistrates ordered Corry to be detained at Chatham Asylum, and that further inquiries be made. Corry's statement gave the name of the supposed murdered girl and a description of the American.

It may be recalled that at Bow street a year or two ago a man gave into custody after making a statement to the same effect.

Halfhearted advertising can't make a busy store—never!

The bashful young man with the rocking chair habit apologized when he found himself sliding across the room, chair and all, toward the girl on the piano stool. Several times during the evening that involuntary trip across the carpet was repeated, to the evident distress of the shy young man.

The next time he called, the young man picked out the same animated chair, but though he rocked vigorously it remained rooted to that one spot. Presently he bent down and examined the rockers. Each rocker had been bandaged in two different places with wide velvet ribbon. The girl on the piano stool smiled.

"I put those velvet bands on the rockers for your benefit," she said. "You can rock just as easily with them on, but your chair will not budge half an inch all evening."

"Oh, thanks," said the young man, but he eyed the intervening distance disapprovingly, and it seemed doubtful if he appreciated her efforts to make him comfortable.
