

ANTWERP TAKEN, GERMAN ARMY REPORTED TO BE MOVING SWIFTLY TOWARDS OSTEND

ENORMOUS DEATH TOLL MARKED ANTWERP SIEGE; GERMAN LOSSES HEAVY

Number of Lives Sacrificed May Never be Known, but Each Side Has Large Casualty List—Fall of City Proves Modern Forts Powerless Against German Howitzers—Effect of Capture on General Situation.

London, Oct. 11.—Antwerp and the forts surrounding the city are now in complete possession of the Germans, but the greater part of the Belgian army have made good their escape. It took the Germans just eleven days to capture the strongest fortress in the world.

The fall of Antwerp is evidence that even the most powerful forts are no match for the howitzers which the invaders have successfully employed against every fortified place that stood in their way. These huge guns, completely outrange the guns of the forts, simply play havoc with the most solidly built defences, and open gaps through which their field artillery and infantry.

ANOTHER ATTACK ON PARIS BY GERMAN AIRSHIPS; THREE KILLED

Paris, Oct. 11 (3.46 p.m.)—A score of bombs, launched on different quarters of Paris by two German aviators today, killed three civilians and injured fourteen others. The damage done to property was small.

Paris, Oct. 11.—The following announcement by the French war office was made this afternoon: "First—On our left wing German cavalry, having seized certain points of passage over the Lys river to the east of Aire, was driven off yesterday and retired last evening into the Armentieres district. Between Arras and the Oise the enemy made a very vigorous attack on the right bank of the Ancre, but without making any progress."

Death of King Ferdinand to be Work of Disembarkation Begins Today—Going to Training Camp at Salisbury Plains

London, Monday, Oct. 12.—The arrival of the troop ships carrying the Canadian contingent, previously announced prematurely and officially delayed by the war office, is now accomplished fact. The troop ships are now in home waters, and the work of disembarking them begins this Monday morning. All is in readiness for their transportation to the training camp at Salisbury Plains.

CIGARS MADE FROM CANADIAN TOBACCO POPULAR IN LONDON

Special to The Standard. Ottawa, Oct. 11.—A trade report from London states that Canadian tobacco grown in the Okanagan Valley of British Columbia is second only in quality to the Havana and Sumatra leaves. It is expected that in time this tobacco will be equal to the best foreign grown leaf. Cigars made from the Okanagan tobacco have already a large sale.

HEALTHY INCREASE IN TRADE BETWEEN CANADA AND NEW ZEALAND

Special to The Standard. Ottawa, Oct. 11.—Canadian trade with New Zealand shows a healthy increase. New Zealand's imports from Canada from the fiscal year ending March last totalled $2,325,000, an increase of $241,275. Her exports to Canada were $3,110,445, an increase of $116,000. The latter includes an increase in trade in butter.

ALLIES HOLDING THEIR GROUND IN AISNE BATTLE

ALLIES MAKE GAINS WHERE DISTRICT Series of Violent Attacks Delivered by Enemy, but All Repulsed — Reported That Queen of Belgians Has Arrived Safely in England.

London, Oct. 11, 9:30 p. m.—With the conclusion of that phase of the war of the nations which came with the fall of Antwerp, the censorship has again drawn a veil over the fighting in the greater part of the European continent.

The French communication issued this afternoon details only of the battle, or series of battles, which have been in progress for four weeks from east to west in France, with an ever-advancing line, which now reaches northward from the elbow at Noyon to and across the Belgian border at Armentieres.

The statement says that the allies have held their positions everywhere and that German cavalry, which was attempting to envelop the allies' left wing, and had set out in pursuit of passage on the River Lys, to the east of Aire, was defeated yesterday and retired to the northeast, into the Armentieres district.

At the same time the Germans delivered a vigorous attack on the right bank of the Aisne river, between Arras and the Oise, without making any progress.

This indicates that the battle in Picardy, comprising the department of Somme and part of Oise, Pas de Calais and Aisne, in which the cavalry is taking such a prominent part, and on a scale not seen in previous modern wars, extends over a very considerable area.

Here there are many miles of open country, where horsemen can manoeuvre with advantage.

French Retake Agreement.

Between the River Oise and Rheims, and particularly in the region north-west of Soissons, where the British forces have been made, it thus seems probable that the Germans have abandoned some of their strongly entrenched positions in this neighborhood. It is reported that sanitary work has been completed this, as the trenches in which the troops have been living for weeks have become the breeding places of disease.

The Germans have resumed their night attacks between Craonne and Rheims, which, according to French accounts, have been repulsed. From Rheims to the Meuse nothing of importance has occurred of late, but in the Aremont district, to the west of the east of St. Mihiel, the Germans made violent attacks during the night of October 9 and the following day.

Agreement was taken by the Germans, but was re-taken by the French and remains in their hands. The Germans, apparently determined to maintain, as far as possible, their positions where they have pierced the line of fortifications between Verdun and Toul, along the River Meuse. Should they be successful against the allies elsewhere, this line would be the route by which they would endeavor to enter the heart of France.

To remind Parisians that they are still in France, two German aeroplanes which seem to choose Sunday for their visits, flew over the French capital today. They dropped a score of bombs which killed three persons and wounded twenty, but did no material damage to the city.

Countless Thousands of Refugees.

Part of the Antwerp garrison and 2,000 of the British and French soldiers who crossed into Holland and laid down their arms, have been interested and will have to remain there until the end of the war. Some of the Germans also unwittingly crossed the frontier, and were similarly treated.

Of refugees there appears to be no end. The Dutch towns are now crowded with people who left their homes in Belgium, and the Hollanders are finding some difficulty in providing for them. The Germans, however, have invited the refugees to return to their own country, promising them fair treatment.

England also continues to be a place of refuge for many fugitives, besides wounded officers and men, who are crossing from Ostend on the regular steamers.

In Antwerp everything is quiet after days of turmoil. The Germans, who arranged with the Burgomaster for the surrender of the town, all the military authorities have left, have issued a warning to the people that any disturbances or attacks on the Germans will be severely dealt with.

So far as can be ascertained the damage done to Antwerp by the bombs was not so serious as at first feared. The cathedral, art gallery, museum and other public buildings are in the northwestern part of the city, along the Scheldt, to which the shells did not reach. The Germans used lighter guns after they had battered down the forts with their heavy guns, and naturally the former did not do so much execution.

A Berlin report says that these heavy guns have been sent to France, if this is so, probably the Verdun forts along the French frontier, which are hindering the German advance, are to be attacked with them. In this case, however, there is a big field army behind the forts, so that while the destruction of them would make progress easier for the Germans, it would not absolutely ensure their advance.

Gen. Von Bessler, who directed the attack on Antwerp, and Prince August William, fourth son of the German Emperor, who was one of the first to enter the city, have been decorated by the Emperor. What the taking of the town cost the Germans is not known, but it is reported to be

SOUTH AFRICA AND ITS TRADE. Furnishes 80 per cent. of world's diamond supply — Coal deposits enormous but little developed.

Special to The Standard

Ottawa, Oct. 11.—Some interesting facts relating to South Africa and its trade have been brought out in an interview report by the Dominion Royal Commission which recently visited that country. This commission was to have been in Canada this year, but owing to the outbreak of war, the visit had to be postponed.

South Africa furnished eighty per cent of the world's supply of diamonds. Since 1906 to 1913, the value of the output of diamonds increased from $47,785,000 to $56,945,000.

The coal deposits are described as enormous, but comparatively undeveloped. In 1913 the total output amounted to $300,000,000 to the world's stock of coal, but although the deposits of coal and diamonds are of vast importance to the country, and although in both cases a very prolonged future may be predicted, still greater importance must be assigned to the gold industry. Although gold mining as an organized industry in the Transvaal is less than thirty years old, it has already contributed $2,000,000,000 to the world's stock of gold, and at the present time nearly forty per cent of the total annual output of the world is derived from this source.

Out of a total government revenue amounting to $135,000,000, the Rand contributes $60,000,000.

The progress of agriculture has been hindered by insufficient rainfall, pests and animal diseases. These hindrances are being steadily conquered.

Missionary Convention. The annual convention of the United Baptist Women's Missionary Union of the Maritime Provinces will be held this week on Wednesday and Thursday at Middlebrook, N. E. Tomorrow the executive board will meet. There will be between 250 and 300 delegates at the convention, and a number of returned missionaries will deliver addresses. The delegates, who will leave St. John this morning for the convention are: Mrs. M. E. Colwell, Mrs. W. F. Burditt, Mrs. N. C. Scott, Mrs. A. D. Fowler, Mrs. W. E. McIntyre, Mrs. Z. CANADA'S OPPORTUNITY. An excellent trade opening for Canadian Iron and Steel manufacturers.

Ottawa, Oct. 11.—The Canadian trade commissioner at Manchester reports that during August there was a decrease of $3,500,000 in the imports of iron and steel manufactures into Britain. Many of these formerly came from Germany, and Canadian manufacturers, he says, have an opportunity to supply the mother country with the following articles for which inquiries have been made: Wire nails, cut nails, nuts and bolts, machine screws, barbed wire, wood screws (iron and brass), copper pins, domestic wire goods, etc. In one case wire nails were so urgently needed that an initial order of 2,000 tons was forwarded to Canada by cable and the outlook for this trade is very promising.

Crippled With Rheumatism. And Skeptical After Trying Many Medicines—Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Cured Him.

When the kidneys fail to purify the blood the poisons left in the system cause pain and suffering, such as backache, lumbago and rheumatism. Read this testimonial and you will be convinced that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are a cure for all these ailments.

Mr. E. W. Brown, Kingsbury, Que., writes: "I have been completely cured of backache and lame back by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I also recommended the pills to a man who was a cripple from rheumatism. He was skeptical, as he said that he had tried nearly everything on earth. Finally he consented to try them, and to his surprise was greatly benefited in the first week, and the pains left his legs until he was so supple he could walk without pain or difficulty. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have worked wonders in this case, and we think there is no medicine like them."

SYSTEM OF PAYING CANADIAN TROOPS. Militia Department Sending Out 20,000 Cheques Monthly—Regular Cash Payments to the Soldiers.

Special to The Standard.

Ottawa, Oct. 11.—Twenty thousand cheques are being sent out by the Militia Department monthly for the soldiers of the Canadian expeditionary force, states J. V. Borden, the paymaster general. Mr. Borden is a brother of the Prime Minister.

The paymaster general explained the system of payment of the troops. There will be a base paymaster in England who will forward funds regularly to the paymaster in the field. The soldiers will get their pay regularly in cash, that is those who desire it. Most of the men, however, have payment of their pay in a certain portion of it to their relatives or to banks in which they have accounts. Twenty thousand have made such assignments and the cheques are being sent from headquarters at Ottawa. The same arrangement is for the men applies to the nurses.

Hon. Robert Rogers went to Montreal tonight to make arrangements for forwarding of supplies to the Canadian expeditionary force, which are large supplies which the British war office has secured in Canada.

Recently a committee of the cabinet took over the whole matter of handling supplies in connection with the war, they are Hon. Robert Rogers, Sir George Foster, Hon. Frank Cochrane, Hon. J. D. Reid and Hon. A. B. Kemp.

SAYS PERMANENT FORTIFICATIONS ARE FUTILE. French Military Expert Believes Rude Works Easily and Quickly Built are Better.

Paris, Oct. 11.—The military consequences of the fall of Antwerp are not so great as the lesson to be learned therefrom of the futility of permanent fortifications. This opinion is expressed by Lt. Col. Rousset, who says that it will be necessary to abandon entirely this sort of defense, and replace it with rude works of easy and quick construction, which can be placed anywhere, according to the need of the hour.

Then, he says, shells, because of the absence of resistance, would cause only small damage. Never, he declares, has a country been saved by its fortifications, while there are those whose fortresses have been their ruin.

Col. Rousset continues: "To speak only of that which concerns us, it is permissible to affirm that if Metz had been in 1870 an open city, Basaine would not have sent forth from there his magnificent army, for the subsequent loss of which he was condemned to death, and did actually suffer imprisonment."

"Belgium believed itself protected by its triple barrier of Liege, Namur and Antwerp. Alas—it was not. No more are we with Meuse, or the Ardennes with Lemberg and Przemyel. The real safeguard of a nation is an effective military force, that can stay an army of invasion."

The observations of Rousset, which are published today, have created special interest in view of the possibility of heavy siege operations later in the campaign.

The MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

$10,000 FOR 100 WORDS.

"The Million Dollar Mystery" story will run for ten consecutive weeks in this paper. By an arrangement with the Theatrical Film company it has been made possible not only to read the story in this paper but also to see it each week in the cinema, moving picture theaters. For the solution of this mystery story $10,000 will be given by the Theatrical Film company.

CONDITIONS GOVERNING THE CONTEST.

The prize of $10,000 will be won by the man, woman, or child who writes the most acceptable solution of the mystery, from which the last two reels of motion picture drama will be made and the last two chapters of the story written by Harold MacGrath.

Solutions may be sent to the Theatrical Film corporation, either at Chicago or New York, any time up to midnight, Jan. 24. This allows several weeks after the last chapter has been published.

A board of three judges will determine which of the many solutions received is the most acceptable. The judges are to be Harold MacGrath, Lloyd Lowrey, and Miss Mae Tinee. The judgment of this board will be absolute and final. Nothing of a literary nature will be considered in the decision, nor given any preference in the selection of the winner of the $10,000 prize. The last two reels, which will give the most acceptable solution to the mystery, will be presented in the theaters having this feature as soon as it is possible to produce the same. The story corresponding to these motion pictures will appear in the newspapers coincidentally, or as soon after the appearance of the pictures as practicable. With the last two reels will be shown the picture of the winner, his or her home, and other interesting features. It is understood that the newspapers, so far as practicable, in printing the last two chapters of the story by Harold MacGrath, will also show a picture of the successful contestant.

Solutions to the mystery must not be more than 100 words long. Here are some questions to be kept in mind in connection with the mystery as an aid to a solution:
No. 1—What becomes of the millionaire?
No. 2—What becomes of the $10,000,000?
No. 3—Whom does Florence marry?
No. 4—What becomes of the Russian countess?

Nobody connected either directly or indirectly with "The Million Dollar Mystery" will be considered as a contestant.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS.

Stanley Hargrave, millionaire, after a miraculous escape from the den of the gang of brilliant thieves known as the Black Hundred, lives the life of a recluse for eight years. Hargrave accidentally meets Braine, leader of the Black Hundred. Knowing Braine will try to get him, he writes a letter to Braine and writes a letter to the girls' school where eighteen years before he mysteriously left on the deserted ship. Braine, Florence Gray, that day Hargrave also draws $1,000,000 from the bank, but it is reported that this dropped into the sea when the balloon he escaped in was punctured.

Florence arrives from the girls' school. Countess Olga, Braine's companion, visits her and claims to be a relative. Two bogus detectives call, but their plot is foiled by Norton, a newspaper man.

By bribing the captain of the Orient Norton lays a trap for Braine and his gang. Countess Olga also visits the Orient's captain, and she chastely falls into the reporter's snare. The plan proves abortive through Braine's good luck and only Hargrave falls into the hands of the police.

After failing in their first attempt the Black Hundred trap Florence. They ask her for money, but she escapes, again foiling them.

Norton and the countess call on Florence the next day, and move into a house. The visitors having gone, Florence removes a section of flooring and from a cavity takes a card. Furnished by members of the Black Hundred, he rushes to the water front and succeeds in dropping the box into the sea.

Countess Olga succeeds in breaking the engagement existing between Florence Hargrave and Norton.

Accomplices of Braine succeed in kidnapping Florence while she is shopping and hurry her off to sea. She leaps into the sea and is picked up in a dazed condition by a party of fishermen. The Black Hundred locates her and Braine, disguised as her father, succeeds in taking her back to sea with him. Florence sets fire to the boat and is rescued by a ship on which Norton has been abandoned.

Norton and Florence, safely ashore and with no longer any misunderstanding between them, take the train for home. The train is wrecked and waiting members of the Black Hundred carry the injured Florence to a deserted hotel. Norton, who tries to rescue her, is tied to the railroad tracks. Florence saves him and Stanley James comes to the rescue of both.

CHAPTER XXI.

DIPSY-CHANTY, if you please; of sailormen in jerseys and terry caps, of rolling gulls, strong tobacco and blundering profanity; of cutters, and blundering schooners, and tramps, came-and-steam, some of them honest, some of them shady, and some of them pirates of the first water who did not find it necessary to hold aloft the skull and bones. The men were dotted with them. They remind you of the once prosperous merchant, run down at the end, who sinks along the side straits, ashamed to meet those he knew in the past. You never hear them mentioned in the maritime news, which is the society column of the ships; you know of their existence only by the bleached bones of them, strewn along the coast.

An honest ship, run down at the end, rode at anchor in the sound, a fourth-master of the lookout board; that is, her principal line of business was hauling barges-up-and-down the coast. When she could not pick up enough barges to make it pay, why, she'd go galavanting down to Cuba for boxes of tobacco or over to the Bermudas for the heaven-smelling onions. Today she was an onion ship; which precludes any idea of adventure. She was about 4,000 tons, and her engines were steamward and not windward. She carried two masts and a half down-hat boom, and the only visible sign of anything new on her was her bowsprit. This was new doubtless because she had poked her nose too far into her last ship.

Her crew was orderly and tractable. There were shore drunks, to be sure, because they were sailors; but they were a peaceful lot. At this moment they were at work on deck. There was a sailor among this crew, and he went by the name of Steve Blossom; and he was one of his kind. A grimy dime novel protruded rakishly from his hip pocket, and his right cheek was swollen as with the toothache, due, probably, to a generous "chaw" of Seaman's Delight. He was a real tobacco chewer, for he rarely spat. He was as peaceful as a backwater bay in summer; non-argumentative and passive, he stood his watch in fair weather and foul.

No one gave the anchor any more attention after it came to rest. The great city over the way was fair-like in its business and transparency. It was the poetry of angles, of shafts and spars of stone; and Steve Blossom, having a moment to himself, leaned against the rail and stared regretfully. He had been generously drunk the night before, and it was a pleasant recollection. Chance led his glance to trail down the cutwater. His neck stretched from his collar like a turtle's from its shell.

"Well, I'll be hornswoggled!" he murmured, shifting his head from starboard to port. Caught on the fluke of the anchor was the strangest looking box he had ever laid eyes on. There was leather and steel bands and diamond-shaped ivory and mother of pearl, and it hung jauntily on the point of the rusty fluke.

Treasure! And Steve was destined never to be passive again. His first impulse was to call his companions; his second impulse was to say nothing at all, and wait for an opportunity to get the box to his bunk without being detected. Diamonds and rubies and pearls and old Spanish gold; all hanging to the fluke of the anchor.

"Hornswoggled!" in a kind of awestruck whisper this time. "An' we a-beadin' for 't' Bahamas!" For under his feet he could hear the rhythm of the engines. "Wlan't I do? If I leave it, some one else'll see it." He scratched his chin perplexedly; and the cud went back to starboard. "I got it!"

He took off his coat and carefully dropped it down over the mysterious box. It was growing darker and darker all the time, and shortly nothing but the anchor would be visible without close scrutiny. Treasures, greed, cupidity, crime. Steve saw only the treasure and not its camp followers. What did they call them?—doubloons and pieces-of-eight?

He ate his supper with his messmates, and he ate heartily as usual. It would have taken something more vital than mere treasure to disturb Steve Blossom's appetite. He was one of those enviable individuals whose imagination and gastric juices work at the same time. And while he ate he planned. In the first place, he would buy that home at Bedford; then he would take over the Gilson house and live like a lord. If he wanted a drink, all he would have to do would be to turn the spitout or tip a bottle; and more than that, he'd have a bartender to do it. Onions! He swore he would not have an onion within a mile of the Gilson house. "Onions!" Quite unconsciously he spoke this word aloud.

"Huh? Well, if you don't like onions, find a booker that packs violets in her hold," was the cheerful advice of the man at Steve's elbow.

"Who's talkin' 't' you?" granted Steve.

"Who'd I say?"

"Onions, yo' s'ber! Don't we know what onions is? Ain't we smelt 'em so long that you could stick yer nose in 't' starboard light an' never smell no onions? Onions! Pass 't' 'cawf'ly."

Steve helped himself first. The man who spoke barked over him, and they were not on the best of terms. There was no real reason for this frank antagonism; simply, they did not spice any more effectually than cotton rope and hemp splices. Sailors are moody and superstitious; at least they generally are on hookers of the "Captain Manners" breed. Steve was superstitious and Jim Dunkers was moody and had no thumb on his left hand.

Spanish doubloons and pearls and diamonds and rubies! It was mighty hard not to say these words out loud, too; bare them into the silent faces grouped about the table. He was off watch till midnight; and he was wondering if he could get the box without attracting the attention of the lookout, who had a devilish keen eye for everything that stirred on deck or on water. Well, he would have to risk it; but he would wait till full darkness had fallen over the sea and the lookout would be compelled to keep his eyes off the deck. The boys wanted him to play cards.

"Not for me. Busted. How long 'd' y' think $40 'll last in New York, anyhow?" And he stalked out of the forecastle and went down into the waist to enjoy his evening pipe, all the while keeping a weather eye forward, at the rusty old pipe hole.

It was 10 o'clock, loud time, when he rapped his cutty into a pocket and reverently walked forward. If any one watched him they would think he was only looking down the cutwater. The thought of money and the pleasure it will buy makes cunning the stupidest of dots; and Steve was ordinarily a dot. But tonight his brain was keen enough for all purposes. It was a hazardous job to get the box off the fluke without letting it slip back into the sea. Steve, however, accomplished the feat, climbed back on the rail and sat down, waiting. A quarter of an hour passed. No one had seen him. With his coat securely wrapped about his precious find he went to the forecastle. His mates, save those who were doing their watch, were all in their bunks. An oil lamp dimly illuminated the forward partition. Steve's bunk was almost in darkness. Very deftly he rolled back the bedding and stretched the box under his pillows, and then stretched himself out with the pretense of snoring till the bell called him to duty.

"YOU LEMME BY!" BREATHED STEVE.

He was rich; and the moment a man has money he has troubles; there is always some one who wants to take it away from you. His bunk was on the port side, and there was plenty of hiding space between the iron plates and the wooden partition. He intended to loosen three or four planks, and then when the time came, slip the box behind them. Some time during the morning the forecastle would be empty, and then would be his time. But he suffered the agonies of damnation during his four hours' watch. Supposing some fool should go rummaging about his bunk and discover the box? Suppose . . . But he dared not suppose. There was nothing to do but wait. If he created any curiosity on the part of his mates he was lost. He would have to divide with them all, from the captain down to the cook's boy. It was a heart-rending thought. From being the most open and frank man aboard, he became the most cunning. From being a man without enemies, he saw an enemy even in his shadow.

At 4 o'clock he turned in and slept like a log.

In the morning he found his opportunity. For half an hour the forecastle was empty of all save himself. Feverishly he pried back the boards, found the brace beam, and gently laid the box there. It was a mighty curious looking box. Once he had stoked up the Chinese cook from the Philippines, and he judged it to be Chinese in origin. He tried to pry open the cover and feast his eyes upon the treasure; but under the leather and ivory and mother of pearl was impervious steel. It would take an ax or a crowbar to stir that lid. He sighed. He replaced the boards, and became to all appearances his stolid self again.

But all the way down to the Bahamas he was moody, and when he answered any question it was with words spoken tersely and jerkily.

"I know what's 't' matter," said Dunkers.

"He's in love."

"Shut your mouth!"

"Didn't I tell you?" laughed the tantalizer, dancing toward the companionway. "Steve's in love, 'r he didn't get drunk enough on shore 't' satisfy his whale's belly!"

A boot thudded spitefully against the door jamb.

"You fellows let me alone, 'r I'll bash in a couple o' heads!"

"O, yuh will, will yuh?" cried Dunkers from the deck. "If yuh want a little exercise, yuh can begin on me, yuh moonieck swab! What's 't' matter with yuh, anyhow? Swab! Yuh git this grouch? What're we doin' 't' yuh? Huh?"

"You keep out o' my way, that's all. I'm mindin' my watches, an' don't ask no odds o' your duffer. What if I have a grouch? Is it o' your blame business? All right. When we step ashore at 't' Bahamas, Mister Jim Dunkers, I'll tear the ropes out o' your pulley blocks. But till we git there, you 't' upper bunk an' me 't' mine."

"Leave 't' o' grouch alone, Jim. 't' mate won't stand for no scrapperin' aboard. We'll have 't' thing done right in 't' custom shop. We'll have a finish fight, Queensberry rules, an' my 't' best man win."

"I'm willin'," said Jim.

"So 'n I," agreed Steve. But his intentions were not honorable. He proposed to desert before any fight took place. Not that he was physically afraid; no; he wanted to dig his hands deep into those doubloons and pieces-of-eight.

AND THAT IS WHY THE ORIGINAL BOX WAS ABLE TO BE HIDDEN ONCE AGAIN.

So the four days down passed otherwise uneventfully, amid pain pots and iron rust and three meals a day of pork, onion soup, potatoes, and strong, bitter coffee. The winds became light and balmy and the sea blue and gentle. The men went about in their undershirts and dunnies, barefooted. Of course the coming fight was the main topic of conversation. It promised to be a rattling good scrap, for both men were evenly matched, and both had a "kick" in either hand. Even the captain took a mild interest in the affair. He was an old sailor. He knew that there was no such word as arbitration in a sailor's vocabulary; his disputes could be settled only in one manner, by his called-for fists.

When the old mouthhook (and some day Steve was going to buy it and hang it over the entrance of the Gilson house) slid down into the smiling waters of the bay, Steve concluded that discretion was the better part of valor. He would stroll ashore on the quarantine tug which lay alongside. He was willing to fight under ordinary circumstances, but he must get his treasure in safety first. They could call him a welscher if they wanted to; but he'd be careful. So he pried back the boards of his bunk wall, took out the box, eyed it fondly, and noted for the first time the lettering on it:

STANLEY HARGRAVE.

He wrinkled his brow in the effort to recall a pirate by this name, but was unsuccessful. No matter. He hugged the box under his coat and made for the gangway, and inadvertently ran into his enemy.

Dunkers caught a bit of the box peeping out from under the coat.

"What 't' yuh got there?" he demanded truculently.

"None o' your damn business! You lemme by; hear me!"

"Ain't none o' my business, huh? Where'd yuh git a box like that? Steal it? By cripe, I'm goin' 't' have a look at that box, my hearty. It don't smell like honest onions."

"You lemme by!" breathed Steve, with murder in his heart.

Suddenly the two men closed, surged back and forth, one determined to take and the other to hold this mysterious box. Dunkers struggled to uphold his word; not that he really wanted the box but to prove that he was strong enough to take it if he wanted to.

The name on the box flashed and disappeared. It was a kind of shock to him. He and Blossom went battering against the rail. Dunkers' grip slipped and so did Blossom's. The result was that the box was catapulted into the sea. With an agonizing cry, Blossom leaped far over. He saw the box oscillate for a moment, then sink gracefully in a zigzag course, down through the blue waters. Fainter and fainter it grew, and at last vanished.

"I'm sorry, Steve; but yuh wouldn't let me look at it," said Dunkers, contritely.

"Damn you; I'm goin' 't' kill y' for that!"

It became a real fight this time, fist and foot, tooth and nail; one mad with the lust to kill and the other desperately intent on living. It was one of those contests in which honor and fair play have no part. But for the timely arrival of the captain and some of the crew Dunkers would have been badly injured, perhaps fatally. They hauled back Blossom, roaring out his oath at the top of his lungs. It took half an hour's arguing to calm him down. Then the captain demanded to know what it was all about. And blubbering, Steve told him.

"Six hundred feet of water, if I've got my reckoning right. The anchor lies in sixty feet, but the starboard side drops sheer six hundred. You swab! Why didn't you bring the devil a bit did he care. So he pried back the boards of his bunk wall, took out the box, eyed it fondly, and noted for the first time the lettering on it:

been in 't' water long, etc. Somethin' 'out overboard by some private yacht, 't' my thinkin'. I'll keep out o' Steve's way. I'll lay low on shore, etc."

And though Steve made a perfect range-of-the-spot, he never came back to find the mysterious box, never saw the Gilson house back home, nor did he ever see Dunkers again. On that voyage home he landed continents, and was frequently found blubbering; and one night he skipped his watch and went to Dunkers' locker.

Dunkers had not told at out-the-same he had seen on the box; and Blossom had not thought to. The name Hargrave had instinctively brought back to Dunkers' mind the newspaper stories he had recently read. There was no doubt in the world that this box belonged to the missing millionaire, who had drawn attention from his banks and vanished; and, moreover, there was no doubt in Dunkers' mind that this million lay in the Bahamas waters. It had been drawn up from the bottom of the sound, under the path of the bottom. He proceeded, then, to take a most minute range. It would require money and partners; but half a loaf would be far better than no loaf at all; and he was determined to return to New York to find backing. Finding is keeping, on land or sea.

Now it happened that his favorite grog shop was a cheap saloon across the way from the headquarters of The Black Hundred; and Vroom occasionally dropped in, for he often picked up a valuable bit of maritime news. Dunkers was an old friend of the bartender, and he proceeded to pour and fumble down his throat a very poor substitute for whisky. He became communicative. He bragged. He knew where there was a million, and all he needed was a first class diving bell. A year from now he would not be drinking cheap whisky; he'd be steering a course up and down Broadway and buying wine when he was thirsty. He was no other. But he had to have a diving bell; and where the blue devil could he get one with $12 and an Ingersoll watch in his pocket?

From his table Vroom made a sign which the bartender understood. Then he rose and approached Dunkers.

"I own a pretty good diving apparatus," he said. "If you've got the grub, I'll take a chance on a fifty-fifty basis." Vroom did not believe there was anything back of this talk; but it always paid to dig deep enough to find out. "Have a drink; and, Bill, give us a real whisky and none of your soap-bye. Now, let's hear your yarn."

"I don't know yuh," said Dunkers, with drunken caution. "How is it, Bill?" turning to the bartender.

"He's the goods, Jim. You've heard of Wyant & Co.?"

"Sure I've heard o' them. Best divin' apparatus they is."

"Well, this gent here is Mr. Brooks, general manager for Wyant & Co. I can o. K. him."

Vroom threw an appreciative glance at the bartender. He was not affiliated with The Black Hundred, but he had often aided Vroom in minor affairs.

"All right, if yuh say so, Bill. Well, here's 't' yarn."

And when he had done, Vroom smoked quietly without speaking.

"Don't yuh believe it?" demanded Dunkers, truculently.

"But 600 feet of water, in a coral bottom, and no way of telling just where it fell overboard. That's a tough proposition."

"O, it is, is it? I'm a sailor. I can say my hand right over 't' spot. Do yuh think I'd be fool enough 't' hunt for it without a perfect range?" Dunkers tapped his coat pocket suggestively.

And Vroom knew that the one thing he wanted was there, a plan or a drawing of the range. So there was another man shagwilted that night, and his destination was Cape Town, twenty-two days' voyage by the calendar.

Vroom carried his information to the organization that same night. They would start the expedition at once, and till this was accomplished, Hargrave's daughter was to be immune from attacks. Besides, it would give Hargrave (wherever he was) and the others the idea that The Black Hundred had concluded to give up the chase.

Above, with his ear to a small hole, skilfully bored through the ceiling without permitting the plaster to fall, knelt a man with a bandaged arm. He could never see any faces; no one ever took off a mask in this sinister chamber. But there were voices, and he was never going to forget some of them. After the meeting came to an end, he waited an hour after, and then stole down into the street by the aid of the fire escape. Later, he entered a telephone booth and called up Jones.

Then, one leather and steel box, dotted with bits of ivory and mother-of-pearl, became two; and the second one was soaked in mud and salt water for two weeks till you could not have told it from the original. And that is why Jones was able, some weeks later, to hide one more the original box. As for the substitute, just as Braine was about to use a mallet and chisel upon it, the lights went out. There was a wild scramble, a chair or two was overturned.

"The door, the door!" shouted Braine, furious.

It slammed the moment the words left his lips. And as suddenly as they had gone out the lights sprang up. The box was gone. There were evidently traitors among The Black Hundred.

THE WAR SITUATION.

Aside from the fact that the fall of Antwerp will release a large number of men to swell the German ranks in the Battle of the Aisne, and that the Belgian metropolis may be used as a base from which to attack the Channel ports of England, the events of the past few days are not expected to have much influence upon the general campaign. It is stated that the Germans are moving heavy siege guns from Antwerp to Ostend, with the idea of using them in attack on that town, but as the Ostend defenses are light compared with Antwerp and Liege it is not now apparent that the big guns will be required.

Much of the importance attached to Antwerp, by followers of the war despatches, has been due to the fear of an attack upon Britain. There is nothing to indicate that the English people attach much importance to such a prospect. It must be remembered that before a German force can land in England the British fleet must be accounted for, and the fact that for weeks German war vessels have remained in the shelter of the Kiel Canal rather than face that same fleet should fairly indicate that Germany herself is not supremely confident of the result of such an encounter.

The Zeppelin, and its supposed ability, has been a source of some anxiety but it is reasonable to have prepared for an eventuality, such as an aerial bombardment, and if not able to prevent the German air craft from dropping bombs into London are at least in a position to undertake reprisals in kind. Even admitting the possibility of an aerial attack it is difficult to see why Antwerp is necessary to the German plan. Germany's air-fleets are largely stored at Wilhelmshaven, Dusseldorf and Cologne, any of them but few hours distant from Antwerp, and sufficiently close to England to make an air attack from them as possible as an attack from the Belgian metropolis. The capture of Antwerp was not essential to such a project.

The German success at Antwerp, however, emphasizes several things. One is that against modern siege artillery, such as the Germans possess, fortifications are of little value. Antwerp was supposed to be one of the strongest fortresses in existence and yet its capture was effected in eleven days. Also, it serves to again remind the world of the sorry plight of the Belgian people, and of Great Britain's need of more men, apparently cannot be so ever. Too much can be said of the claim the Belgians have on the world. Their cities destroyed, their fighting men decimated, their women and children slaughtered or tormented, and all because they refused a passive submission to the brutal proposals of the Prussian war lord. In the final settlement of Germany's debt the atrocities perpetrated on the Belgians should be avenged on Prussian oughtness that will make of Prussian militarism only a hideous memory. In the meantime the people of Belgium who have lost their homes must be provided for. They must be housed, fed, clothed and warmed. Upon the people of Britain, France and Russia rests the responsibility of providing Belgium with sustenance now and vengeance in future. It is a duty which must be carried to the full, no matter what the outcome.

The fall of Antwerp will release an other large fighting force of Germans for service against the allies, else where; it will relieve the enemy of the necessity of guarding against attacks from that section and will entail upon the allies the duty of providing sufficient men to meet any danger to their own lines from such a source. This situation must be met by more men from Britain. The Battle of the Aisne has already lasted four weeks without decisive advantage to the allies. German occupation of Antwerp is likely to prolong it and add to the task before us. If the enemy is to be driven out of France and Belgium every man who can be sent to the battle line is needed and quickly. Eventually Germany must be defeated but this does not serve to hide the fact that up to the present she has proven a desperate and powerful enemy and must continue so for some time.

On the eastern frontier the situation is but slightly changed. The Russians claim further successes, and it has been the experience of the past that the claims from Petrograd are usually authenticated. Apparently after the first attack upon East Prussia, which was beaten back by the Germans and Austrians, General Rennenkampf reorganized his forces and now, with more men behind him, is making splendid success where he originally floundered. And it is reported that the Russian reserves have not yet been called into action although they have been mobilized and are within easy striking distance ready for the word. They may be required before many days elapse for the Czar's soldiers are likely to meet strenuous resistance on the road to Berlin and Vienna, when every man will count. At the moment, however, it appears that the Russians are most successful and what they are able to do in the eastern field of operations may bring the first decisive defeat to Germany.

COL. HUGHES AND HIS CRITICS

Whatever may be said by Liberal newspapers concerning Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes, they are forced to admit that he has made a distinct success of the arrangement and mobilization of the Canadian contingent at Camp Valcartier. He undertook the duty with characteristic energy and carried it through with an ability which brought to him the praise and approval of all Canadians in whom the spirit of fair play was not entirely subordinated to the bias of political partisanship.

With the outbreak of war Col. Hughes was brought face to face with a situation such as no previous Minister of Militia had confronted. It was a man's work and he did it in a man's fashion. The completely satisfactory arrangements at Valcartier will stand as a monument to his ability and energy. Throwing himself into his task with zeal and a wide knowledge of military needs, he wrought wonders, and it is probably not going beyond the truth to say that none of his critics, placed in his position, could have made a better or more creditable showing.

chooses. In details the naval bill would of course be modified to meet present conditions, but the features on which the Senate Opposition was based, so far as it was intelligible, based on anything but a desire to force an election, on that issue at any time that he likes; and the present seems a good opportunity for a vote given by a tremendous majority, not only for the Liberal party, but also for the Liberal party and its institutions. In this tactical struggle, the fact is that the Liberals, by their flagrant partisan use of the Senate in 1912 to force an election, and thus take away the rights of the party in control of the popular branch of Parliament to select its own time for submitting its acts to the electorate, have practically given Sir Robert Borden carte blanche to bring on an election, on that issue, at any time he likes; and the present seems to him, naturally, a good time.

There will, of course, be terrific indignation among the Liberals, not only at being subjected to an election at a moment when their hands are tied from all effective opposition, but at being robbed of the right to select their own time for an election. The election of two years later, when the excitement of the war would be over, and mistakes in the conduct of the business would be forgotten, and the burden of paying for it would be just becoming acutely painful. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's whole name will stand out in all directions, and Mr. Pugsley will resemble Mr. Dallas Wolford in his most apologetic moments. These things would impress the Canadian electorate a great deal more, however, if the said electorate were not firmly convinced that Sir Wilfrid Laurier would do just the same thing as Sir Robert, and do it with choruses of glee, if they only had the opportunity to see him above observed, if Canadian institutions were worked in the British spirit, things would be different.

"When Britain Needed Men"

In days when Britain needed men, To serve her for the right, Most willing hands were lifted then, And fear the trial was not light. Her battle flags were flung afar, Embellished in the sun, And followed by her sons of war, 'Till the task was done.

Ye sons of Scotia, take your stand, For God, and home, and native land; For freedom, clutch the mighty steel And crush a despot's iron heel.

In days when Britain needed men, To hold for truth and right, The British heart leaped forth again, To strike with all its might. Shall any say that Britain's lot The iron from her soul, Or fears the trial was not light, Or even the last great toll?

Ye sons of Erin, take your stand, For God, and home, and native land; For freedom, clutch the mighty steel And crush a despot's iron heel.

In days when Britain needed men, To meet the running tide, She found the ships, the men—the great robbers' prey, And flung them far and wide. Her shouts were freedom's vital shout, And now a world awaits A despot's fatal stroke of death— The bursting of his gates.

Ye sons of Cambria, take your stand, For God, and home, and native land; For freedom, clutch the mighty steel And crush a despot's iron heel.

All Britain's sons of every clime, Of colors, race and kin, Arise to meet the tide of crime— To slay the Man of Sin. Her sons are gathering from afar, From every tide and plain, Who will not sheath the sword of war 'Till the tyrant's slain.

Ye sons of Britain, take your stand, For God, and home, and native land; For freedom, clutch the mighty steel And crush a despot's iron heel.

The Mind of Germany. Two remarkable books on the mind of Germany are now being widely read. They are "Germany and the Next Year" by P. Bernhart, "The Man of Sin" by J. Cramb (John Murray). These volumes have proved to be a correct forecast. Bernhart's book is a philosophy read with incredulity, but now a veil is raised and the foresight of the authors is vindicated. Cramb's book, derived from lectures delivered by him at Queen's College, Harley street, London, in the beginning of last year, is a masterpiece of health and already begun to fall when he commenced his task, and in October, 1913, he delivered a paper in his department on scattered notes and from reports. Even under such disadvantages the book has distinct value and vitality. The work of General Von Bernhardi is more limited in scope, but it gives views of a distinguished German soldier, who represents the fervent faith of tens of thousands of Germans. Bernhardi's book is a philosophy derived from Nietzsche and Treitschke. Of Nietzsche and his views we say nothing. Treitschke is regarded as the Macaulay of Germany. He has written the history of his country, and has had a profound influence on the German mind. Treitschke became a German child, and there is something lonely, defiant, and remote about his work. But he never leaves us in doubt of his governing idea. That idea is "the greatness of Prussia, the glory of an army which is a nation, and a nation which is an army." Such is his view is the glory of Germany that there must be no rest for the German people till Germany is in her shining armor assumes the dominion of the world.

The chief obstacle to this consummation is the present world predominance of Britain. That predominance, in the opinion of these German writers, is out of all proportion to the amount of the opportunities that will be offered to Germany in her shining armor. Britain is a sham which has endured for a time, but cannot endure for ever. It is a corrupt, hypocritical, and rotten, Britain is the curse of the earth, and must at all costs be abased to the dust. In order to accomplish this world-empire of Germany, the accepted morality must be decisively set aside. Bernhardi begins his book by an attack on peace. To him, peace is perfidy and stagnation. War is the only outlet for magnanimity, heroism, and mercy. The brutal incidents inseparable from every war are negligible in view of the grand results. The State is not bound by the laws of morality. The end-all and be-all of the State is power, and he who is not man enough to look this truth in the face should not meddle in politics. It is the duty of the State, and almost its only duty, to increase its power. Chimpous political aims is the sin of feebleness. The State must not merely defend itself when attacked; it must also attack when there is the smallest prospect of success. The culture and the religion of Germany entitle her to a place in the sun. Needless to say, the religion of Germany that is to be is not Christianity. Just as the Christian morality rejected by the German people is denied and abhorred, Strauss was weakened because he clung to the ethics of Christianity while he rejected its doctrines.

In a word, the battle of the future is between Christ and Napoleon, and we are told that Napoleon has conquered Galilee. Christ is dethroned. In Germany Napoleonism, especially the cleanliness and self-consistency of a formulated creed. The Germans have not forgotten—how could they forget?—the "Corica" which was the longest among the children of Europe. But Mr. Cramb the oppressor that in spite of this Germany has gradually acquired a profound and ever profounder reverence for the creed and the religion towards which that great and solitary spirit, perhaps the loneliest among the children of men, still struggled amidst the tumults and desolations, the triumphs and the glories of the victory and the disaster of his tragic and brief career—a world-tragedy his, at once the Man of Destiny and the Antagonist of Destiny. When Germany subdues the world she will, we are told, not confront the twentieth century, and its thronging vicissitudes as the world-shippers of an alien world and the thrall of an alien morality. It is to be noted that this school is openly at war with democracy—with the power of self-government inhering in the people. Bernhardi admits the difficulties in the path of Germany to world power. Austria's weakness is the strong admixture of the Slavonic elements. Italy's antagonism to Austria has run through the history, and his hopes of Empire are not bright. But he thinks that England has failed to link her vast Empire together either for the purposes of commerce or defence. Her Colonies and Dominions all tend to separation, and he foresees a great colonial war. He thinks also that the world will be opposed in war not only by the Colonies, but also by India. He admits the power of the British Fleet, but fears an alliance between it and the French Fleet. As for Russia, she must be isolated by bribes. The next thing is to crush France to the very dust. This is accomplished, England must be dealt with when the day and the hour arrive. Perpetually we are told that Germany has the genius for Empire, and that England stands in the way. She has won one-fifth of the globe by craft and violence, and is the great robber state. To sum up, there is before Germany either world dominion or ruin and ruin must be the result of the most efficient glass possible. Thus sharply and unmistakably are the issues put. Germany as represented by its dominant thinkers is at not yet quite conquered Galilee! The newer imperative is quoted by Mr. Cramb: "Ye have heard how in old times it was said, 'Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth;' but I say unto you, Blessed are the valiant, for they shall make the earth their throne. And ye have heard me say, Blessed are the poor in spirit; but I say unto you, Blessed are the great in soul and the free in spirit, for they shall enter into Valhalla. And ye have heard me say, Blessed are the peace-makers; but I say unto you, Blessed are the war-makers, for they shall be called, if not the children of Jafve, the children of Odin, who is greater than Jafve."

As for public morality, it is at an end. The policy advocated is one of virulent attack on all those who have held out their hands in friendship. Plain dealing, generosity, and regard for human rights are antiquated superstitions. It may be wise sometimes to affect regard for them in order to serve a purpose, but such conduct is merely tactical. It will also hold out their hands under the new regime would be wholly at an end. This war is one of life or death for free institutions. The German Government is a standing conspiracy against the rights of the people. It will be seen that we have good reason for fighting and for fighting even to the death. It is a shallow optimism which pretends that there are no great calamities in history. We are now fighting to avert one of them.

Evident A weird looking lady had been addressing a somewhat hostile meeting, and in conclusion said, "Now, do I make myself perfectly plain?" A voice from the back of the hall—I don't know. Somebody must have done it.—St. James Gazette.

The issues put. Germany as represented by its dominant thinkers is at not yet quite conquered Galilee! The newer imperative is quoted by Mr. Cramb: "Ye have heard how in old times it was said, 'Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth;' but I say unto you, Blessed are the valiant, for they shall make the earth their throne. Asbestos Pipe Covering Experience has demonstrated that the use of ASBESTOS COVERING will pay for itself in a short time.
Not only does it lessen the coal bill by preventing Radiation of Heat and Condensation of Steam, but it reduces the temperature in engine-rooms, thus making them more comfortable. In short Asbestos Pipe Covering will give more satisfactory results than from any steel plant.

NEWS FROM CARLETON
Harland, Oct. 10.—A meeting of the People's Union Society was held at the Macintosh, the other evening. Considerable business was transacted. The matter of bonded-mixed flour discussed at length and it was decided to canvass one of the local flour millers. The president was authorized to inquire relative to securing the raw materials under the most favorable conditions. A meeting will be held on Wednesday, October 21. Ways and means of securing the flour were discussed for working up interest in the society and putting it on a proper basis. The local grant certain conditions and those present at the meeting pledged to canvass one of the local flour millers. One of the members is the procuring stock and securing the bonus. The prices of flour are also lower to the society than to other good meeting is expected 21st.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Dr. J. C. Fletcher and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Peppermint, Drops and Soothing Syrup. It is pleasant, it contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic, all Teething Troubles and Diarrhoea. It regulates the Stomach and Bowels, assimilates the Food, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

SAS WOUNDED ARE HURRIED BACK TO FRONT

Woman Arriving in London Says Germans Injured in Battle Rushed Back to Fight Before they Have Recovered

(Special cable to the Boston Globe) London, Oct. 8.—Not much news reaches here about life in Berlin except what may be obtained from women refugees, who come to England in exchange for women sent back to Germany.

The continuous arrival of wounded soldiers, many of whom are dragged from their beds and sent back to the battlefront before they have recovered, is about the only warlike thing about Berlin, said a woman who has just returned from the German capital.

Every cafe, every shop and hotel is being transformed into a Red Cross hospital. There is no idleness and no unemployment. When war was announced the shops raised their prices.

But at the Kaiser's command they were lowered. By the Kaiser's order the shops made smaller loaves and cakes, but again the Kaiser intervened and everything is normal.

The Kaiser is very popular. From the windows of my hotel I used to see him riding along Unter den Linden every morning. He looks much older than his portrait. His hair is gray and there are deep furrows in his cheeks.

War Postcards in Berlin

"The Holy War" is the name by which it is known in Berlin. In a window in Wilhelmstrasse is shown a huge bronze bust of the Kaiser, set around with modern and Medieval arms, and behind it an enormous crucifix.

Among the German picture postcards next in popularity to one representing three miserable-looking jack-tars, gazing over an empty, desolate ocean, inquiring: "Where is the English Navy?"—the answer, of course being, "Dominated by the Germans"—is one of the Kaiser addressing the populace, with an extract from his speech headed, "Der Kaiser Spricht."

But public spirits were very much dampened five days after the celebration of the anniversary of Sedan, and when they were expecting news of victories for the Crown Prince—a telegram arrived asking for wooden tumblers for the men, and rum and "cognac" for the women. "I believe in a drug given to revive courage in soldiers."

German Corps in London

"They openly boast in Berlin that they have an army corps in the very middle of London which is doing more useful service for them than if it were on the battle lines."

This woman also gave a conversation she had with an English engineer employed in a German factory before the war broke out.

"The new siege guns," he said, "which made such havoc at Liege are very short and stumpy. On account of their tremendous cost they can be used only for very large fortresses of warfare," the engineer added, "is that they can only be worked by a few specially trained men from the factory where this engineer immediately before the war was dismissed."

When hostilities began, they had just finished 150 locomotives, and were training out weapons of war as fast as they could be manufactured.

BELGIANS SACRIFICE FIELDS AND FORESTS TO CHECK GERMANS

London, Oct. 7.—A graphic picture of the desolation of Belgium was brought to London today by Mr. J. H. Whitehouse, member of Parliament from Lanarkshire, who has just returned from a tour around Antwerp for the purpose of assisting in the relief measures.

"Always having regarded war as the negation of all that is good," said Mr. Whitehouse tonight, "I desired to see what its ravages were in a country exposed to all its fury and what steps were possible to mitigate them. I do not think that any one here has realized the plight of the civilian population of Belgium today and can only attempt to give an picture of this by describing some of my own experiences."

Mr. Whitehouse made the journey outside Antwerp with two military automobiles, attended by Belgian officials. In describing the damage which the Belgians had inflicted upon their country to supplement the defences of Antwerp, he said:

"Hundreds of thousands of trees had been cut down, so that at some points of our journey we had the impression of passing through a wilderness of rocks. The tree trunks had all been removed so as to afford no cover to the enemy. All houses had been blown up or otherwise destroyed. Later, we passed through the further measure of defence. The damage resulting from these precautionary measures alone amounted to £10,000,000 (£100,000,000)."

In the villages all ordinary life was arrested. Women and children were standing on street corners and patting the roadside. Half way to Termonde we could plainly hear the booming of guns and saw many wounded men of the battle who had been treated.

"I had read newspaper accounts of the destruction of Termonde, and had seen photographs, but they had not conveyed to my mind any realization of the horror of what actually happened. Termonde a few weeks ago was a beautiful city of about sixteen thousand inhabitants, a city in which the dignity of its buildings harmonized with the natural beauty of its situation, a city which contained some buildings of surpassing interest."

"I went through street after street, square after square, and I found every house entirely destroyed with all its contents. It was not the result of bombardment; it was systematic destruction. In each house a separate bomb had been placed, which had blown up the interior and set fire to the contents. All that remained in every case were portions of the outer walls, which were still constantly falling, and inside the chinders of the contents of the buildings. Not a shred of furniture or anything else remained."

"This extent of what had happened is a considerable town. It had an indescribable influence upon observers who were present. One qualification of a pictorial record, could give the utter silence of the city, broken only by the sound of the guns."

Only Two Alive in City

"Of the population I thought that I was wrong, for as we turned into a square where the wreck of what had been one of the most beautiful Gothic churches met my eyes, a blind woman and her daughter groped among the ruins. They were the sole living creatures in the whole town."

"Shops, factories, churches and houses of the wealthy, all were similarly destroyed. One qualification only have I to make of this statement. Two or perhaps three houses bore the German command in chalk. These remained standing but deserted amidst the ruins on either side. Where a destroyed house had obviously contained articles of value, looting had taken place."

"I inquired what had become of the population. It was a question to which no direct reply could be given. They had fled in all directions, but had reached Antwerp, but a great number were wandering about the country, panicking and starving. Many were already dead."

PEACE LEAGUE IN AMERICA PROPOSED

Chairman of Executive of U. S. Peace Centenary Association is at Ottawa Confering With Canadian Committee.

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—John M. Stewart, of New York, chairman of the executive committee of the United States Peace Centenary Association, who is here conferring with the Canadian committee, states that as a result of the awful war spectacle in Europe, a conference is likely to be called of representatives of all the nations of North and South America to form a league for peace, a league that would mean the respect by each country for the territorial integrity of every other country and unite all against territorial aggrandisement by an outside nation.

"The American people, as a nation," he said, "are studiously observing the letter of their neutrality in this war. Such men as ex-Presidents Taft and Roosevelt and Judge Parker have pointed out that the influence of the United States in the matter of the peace which is to come some time will depend almost entirely on the degree to which we are able to observe the letter of our neutrality obligation."

"Apart from neutrality and without particular regard to the outcome of the war, the war itself has seemed to stir in the people of the United States acceptance of a duty in the direction of safeguarding the interests collectively of the nations of the western hemisphere and I am advocating the calling of an international conference at Washington for the purpose of organizing a league of peace."

This matter has been discussed with certain representatives of American nations and has received their hearty approval.

CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND COMMITTEES ORGANIZE AT NEWCASTLE

Newcastle, Oct. 10.—The Canadian Patriotic Fund public meeting, adjourned from October 1st, was held in the Town Hall last night, Mayor Morrissey presiding. The attendance was slightly larger than at the previous meeting, and organization was completed.

The chairman appointed the following nominating committee: Customs Collector, W. A. Park, J. D. Creaghan and Joseph J. Anderson.

This committee nominated following officers: President, Mayor C. J. Morrissey; 1st Vice-Pres., Lieut.-Col. R. L. Malby; 2nd Vice-Pres., Howard Williston; Sec., H. H. Stuart; Treas., W. J. Jardine; Executive committee, E. A. McCardy, David J. Buckley, David Ritchie, J. R. Lawlor and E. H. Sinclair, with power added to this number.

Report was adopted on motion of Revs. P. W. Dixon and W. J. Bate. The Mayor said that the above committee and officers were to direct the work, and that Finance and Relief Committees were needed to superintend collections and investigate claims.

Rev. Mr. Bate, presented name of Mrs. White, of Millerton, wife of a British reeve, as a claimant on the Patriotic fund. She had received $27.10 as the first month's instalment from the British Government.

On motion of J. D. Creaghan and W. A. Park, the officers were added to the Executive committee.

Following sub-committees were appointed by the Executive: Finance—W. A. Park, J. D. Creaghan and E. A. McCardy. Relief—Col. R. L. Malby, Revs. S. J. Magarthur, P. W. Dixon, William Harrison, W. J. Bate, and M. S. Richardson, and the resident captain of the Salvation Army.

The Mayor reported having received $80 from the local Syrian Colony for the Patriotic Fund.

A pair of black foxes escaped Thursday morning from the Lyttleton ranch on Lee Johnston's farm a few miles above Redbank. The female was captured, but the male, valued at $5000 is still at large.

REV. MR. JENKINS GOING TO WELSFORD PASTORATE

Hopewell Hill, Oct. 10.—Mr. and Mrs. J. Wesley Newcomb returned on Thursday from a trip to Moncton. Mr. Newcomb was consulting a doctor in regard to injuries sustained from his recent fall which affected his hearing and sight. It was found a clot of blood which would absorb in time and restore his hearing.

Mrs. Harry Hawkes of Turtle Creek has been spending a week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Tingley. Miss Nellie Rogers is spending Thanksgiving holiday with her mother.

Rev. David Jenkins who has been in charge of the Episcopal church for the past four years in this county, leaves in a couple of weeks to take up the work in Welsford.

Mr. and Mrs. David Tingley have moved into the house recently purchased for W. L. Dawson, the latter having returned to Dawson.

Miss Celia Peck spent Thursday in Hillsborough, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. Allison Peck.

Mrs. Eaton of Eastport, Me. is the guest of Mrs. G. D. Prescott this week.

FREDERICTON JUNCTION MAN DIES SUDDENLY

Fredericton, Oct. 11.—Perley E. Seeley, aged sixty-three years of Fredericton, died suddenly at his home on Monday.

CURED OF PILES and Eczema

By Using Three Boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment

Mr. Abram Bahr, Herbert, Sask. writes: "I want to say that I was troubled with eczema and piles and suffered greatly from the itching, burning sensations caused by these annoying ailments. I sent for a free sample box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this did me so much good that I bought three more boxes, and after using same was cured of both eczema and piles."

This is the kind of letters we receive daily from people who have been cured of these distressing skin diseases by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. No matter how skeptical you might be, you could not read these letters for many days without concluding that Dr. Chase's Ointment is undoubtedly the most prompt relief and certain cure for these ailments.

If you have doubts send for a free sample box and be convinced. It was by use of a free sample that Mr. Bahr was convinced of the merits of this treatment. For sale at all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, Oct. 10.—In a battle with a dramatic climax reserved for baseball fiction, the Nationals defeated the Philadelphia Athletics here today, in the second game of the world's series, by a score of 1 to 0. As a result of the victory the Braves left for Boston tonight, a two game lead over the Athletics the added advantage of playing next, two contests on their home grounds, when the series is resumed on Monday.

Four-eight innings today the clubs battled behind the pitcher James and Plank without the semblance of an advantage. Then came the 10th inning, and once again the Braves won out in the ninth, but the Athletics were not to be denied.

James fanned, but Mann lifted a puzzling Texas League over Collins' head and although the made a great try for the ball, it touched it with his finger tip, sprawled in the turf. Deal crossed the plate, with the soliloquy of the game.

The Athletics replied with a rally in their half of the ninth. James who had carried the game in his shoulders alone up to this point, to get to the home club were still cheering and clapping in unison. Barry waited patiently until he passed him to first. Schang, for Walsh, who had been waiting for the ratted pitcher.

With two on, and one out, he felt sure that the Mackmen's success in the series was assured. He was defeating Eddie Murphy, man for the Athletics, stepped plate, and catching the heavy curves and on the end of his bat a leading runner to the left on base. Maraville sprang a knock of the bat, and with a hand clutched the ball, and other leap touched the bag.

Walsh, with almost the same motion snapped the ball to Schmidt for a double on Murphy, and a later went down in the dirt. Walsh crashed into him at the plate.

When he scrambled to his feet, other players were running. The Boston boman had perfect control, change of pace and a split broke like forked lightning.

BOSTON NOW HAS "EDGE" ON ATHLETICS

PHILADELPHIA ATHLETICS LOSE SECOND GAME IN SERIES, BRAVES SCORE ONLY RUN IN LAST INNING MOST EXCITING BATTLE IN WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP HISTORY, MACKMEN MAKE GREAT FINISH.

Philadelphia, Oct. 10.—In a pitcher's battle with a dramatic climax usually reserved for baseball fiction, the Boston Nationals defeated the Philadelphia Athletics here today, in the second game of the world's series, by a score of 1 to 0. As a result of the victory, the Braves left for Boston tonight, with a two game lead over the Athletics, and the added advantage of playing the next two contests on their home grounds, when the series is resumed on Monday.

For eight innings today the two clubs battled behind the pitching of James and Plank without the semblance of an advantage. Then came the break in the game, and once again the Mackmen saw another world's series contest slip from their clutches, to the credit of the Stalling clan. James had been pitching unhittable ball, and Plank, while not quite so effective, had, with the aid of his remarkable infield, held Boston scoreless. The Athletics veteran twirler was working as smoothly as at the beginning of the game, when Maranville faced him at the opening of the ninth inning. The phantom-like shortstop went out, Barry to McInnis, and Deal, substitute third baseman in place of Red Smith stepped to the plate. The Athletics followers were already figuring on what chance their players had to win out in the ninth. Deal and James appeared to be easy outs. The Boston third sacker, who had hit into three double plays on Friday and forced three team mates in today's game, was not considered a batting factor.

It was Deal, however, who upset Plank's expectations and the Athletics' chances. He drove a long double over Strunk's head and a moment later stole third, when Schang thought Barry to catch Deal off the base, Barry turned to throw to third, but the ball and Deal was safe.

James fanned, but Mann lifted a low puzling Texas Leaguer over Eddie Collins' head and although the latter made a great try for the ball, he just touched it with his finger tips, and sprang in the turf. Deal dashing across the plate, with the solitary run of the game.

The Athletics replied with a great rally in their half of the ninth, and James who had carried the game on his shoulders alone up to this point began to totter. The thousands of spectators for the home club were stamping, cheering and clapping in unison, and Barry waited patiently until James passed him to first. Schang fanned, but Walsh, batting for Plank, also was walked by the rattled pitcher.

With two on, and one out, the fans felt sure that the Mackmen were to break through and win, and the uproar was deafening. Eddie Murphy, lead-off man for the Athletics, stepped to the plate, and called one of "James' curves" and on the end of his bat drove a leaping grounder to the left of second base. Maranville sprang with the crack of the bat, and with a catlike pounce clutched the ball, and with another leap touched the bag forcing Walsh.

With almost the same motion he snapped the ball to Schmidt at first, for a double on Murphy, and a second later went down in a cloud of dust as Walsh crashed into him at top speed.

When he scrambled to his feet the other players were running for the club house and the game was saved. The scintillating play came at a most opportune and dramatic moment for James had begun to falter, after pitching a game which for skill and control has never been surpassed in a world's series match in this city. The Boston boxer had perfect control, change of pace and a splitter that broke like forked lightning.

He found eight of the heavy hitting Athletics, including Murphy, Oldring, McInnis and Strunk, and when the batters did connect with the usual result was a weak hoist of roller. This is best demonstrated by the fact that twenty-four of the twenty-seven pinouts made by Boston were credited to the infield or batteries.

James gave three passes, two coming in the ninth inning, when the Athletics came nearest to scoring.

Plank, while he pitched a splendid game for his club, was forced to divide more honors with his team mates than James. Plank was several times saved by the sensational fielding of Baker, Barry, Collins and McInnis.

The sun shone from a cloudless sky with mid-summer vigor, and as a result the fans, especially those in the bleachers, quickly discarded coats and vests.

Boston's royal rooters were very much in evidence again, before, during and after the game. They cheered and sang, and when the game was won paraded round the field, headed by Captain Johnny Evers, Former Mayor Fitzgerald and other celebrities. Many are still celebrating in Philadelphia tonight, while others left

MOOSEPATH RACES THIS AFTERNOON

The railbirds will have a chance of witnessing three classes of old Moosepath park this afternoon, and every race promises to be hard fought. The gate receipts will go towards strengthening the purses. It is the only sport event in the city today, and those who are not fortunate enough to own conveyances to take them out to the park will find carriages at the head of King Street, and these will leave for the track at 1.30 o'clock.

MONCTON AND U.N.B. PLAY TODAY

Special to The Standard. Fredericton, N. B., Oct. 11.—Moncton city football club will open the season with the U. N. B. here tomorrow afternoon as sporting attraction here for Thanksgiving Day. There was such a difference of opinion at a meeting of the football council of U. N. B. called on Saturday evening to select a team that all three of candidates for position of fullback will be out in uniform. Vanwart will likely start the game but both Otty and Hickman will in all probability get a chance. Other substitutes will be Gibson for half line, Edgescombe for quarter, and Rabbit and Baird for forward line. The team will line up as follows:

Around the City

WANTED AT ONCE.
 Fifty Rough Carpenters and Laborers. Apply Barracks Square to E. W. Green, Contractor.

Games for Artillerymen.
 Members of the Y. M. C. A. athletic classes will go to the island today and hold games for the entertainment of the artillerymen on duty there.

Bonfire.
 The police were called on Saturday night to extinguish a bonfire which a crowd of small boys had lighted on Richmond street in honor of a wedding.

Loch Lomond Fair.
 The annual fair at Loch Lomond will be held on Wednesday next, and from all reports it is expected to be the most successful ever held in that section of the country.

Dangerous Hole in Street.
 The police report a dangerous hole in the sidewalk on Union street near the corner of St. Patrick street, also another on the corner of Prince William and Duke streets.

Disgraceful Conduct.
 A man with three names viz Mohammed Mainwood, alias Alex Slapson, alias Harry Thompson, was arrested on Saturday afternoon for disgraceful conduct on Coburg street.

P. E. I. Crops.
 A gentleman from P. E. I., who was in the city on Saturday, said that island farmers had had good crops this year. Wheat, oats and potatoes had turned out well, though the hay crop was not up to the average.

Thanksgiving.
 In all the Anglican churches yesterday special thanksgiving services were held, and the sermons in view of the war were of an exceptionally impressive character. Offerings of fruits and flowers were on extra order. The special thanksgiving offerings were large in view of the conditions.

Relief Work.
 The women of Main Street Baptist Church have been working in connection with the collection of goods for the benefit of the soldiers at the front, and their families. Already a large quantity of materials have been donated by people of the North End, and every Wednesday afternoon the women meet in Main Street Baptist Church, where they plan the making of garments and other articles. They wish to express their thanks to all who have assisted them in carrying on the work.

To Attend Ball Games.
 A large delegation left the city on Saturday evening to attend the World's series games in Boston today and tomorrow. The Boston Express had five extra cars all filled with men who were mostly from St. John. The sports arrived in Boston yesterday morning and will have a day and a half to look the hub over before they make their way to join the great crowd at Fenway Park this afternoon.

Eloquent Sermon.
 Rev. George M. Young, a former pastor, preached at the evening service in Centenary church last evening. He took his text from Genesis, "And the Lord God said..." "and the serpent said." He compared these passages and spoke of the conditions now prevailing in the world. He considered the cause of the present conflict was an disregard for the laws of God. He pointed to instances recorded in the Bible where people had transgressed the laws of God.

A Good Fall.
 The weather conditions during the present autumn have been in keeping with the usual conditions here at this season of the year. Aside from a couple of raw days during the latter part of September the weather has been all that could be desired. The days have been bright with the sun almost as strong as in mid-summer but the evenings have been ideally cool and refreshing. During last week there were two disagreeable days and yesterday was slightly foggy. This condition is not likely to last long and favorable weather is predicted for the holiday. The weather during this fall has been especially favorable to the farmers and they have had a good chance for harvesting their different crops. The rainfall has been light and it is expected that the weather will remain good for several weeks yet.

FOUR HUNDRED ST. JOHN BAPTIST CHURCH HORSES HERE FOR EUROPE

First consignment of remounts arrived early Sunday morning—A fine lot of animals.

The first consignment of remounts for the Imperial Army to be called for through this port, since the European war commenced, arrived in the city yesterday morning about five o'clock. There were four hundred horses in the lot and all were taken from the cars and comfortably housed in the Exhibition Association stables by noon. The horses are being looked after by men from the 28th Dragoons, in charge of Captain Schofield, and Lieutenant Grimmer. There is a picket on guard duty all day and night. The night guard is in charge of Corporal Ryan, who is an old hand at the business, having served some eighteen years in the Imperial Army.

The horses were placed in the cattle sheds in the Exhibition grounds with the exception of thirty stalled in the poultry building. The cattle sheds last night presented a fine sight for any person who is a lover of horse flesh. Every stall was occupied, and as the building was brilliantly lighted, a person could stand at the one end and look at the heads and backs of every one of the horses, while a walk through the different aisles gives an excellent chance of inspection.

The horses were shipped to this city from Toronto and every horse arrived in excellent condition. They appear to be about the best kind that could be procured for cavalry purposes. They are not of the heavy class and many bear the marks where they have been branded while on western ranches. There are some very fine looking animals among the hundreds, and in fact there is not one mean looking horse among the lot. All are well rounded out and as hard as steel. They will all be given an exercise this morning and this afternoon. It was stated last night that there was not one cross horse among the whole lot landed. In fact, it is said, that they are superior to those shipped to South Africa during the Boer war.

No word has been received when the first shipment of horses will be sent from St. John, but it is anticipated that inside of a week or two a ship will arrive and take away the first cargo.

On Wednesday next another consignment of four hundred more will arrive and it will then be found necessary to use the box stalls of which there is a large number on the grounds. This second consignment will bring the number up to eight hundred, but there is plenty of room for two thousand horses and from now on the old Barrack Green and surroundings will be a busy place. There is now in the vicinity of thirty Dragoons on duty and this number will be increased.

RALLY DAY EXERCISES

Special programme in Leinster Street Baptist church Sunday School yesterday afternoon—Other services

The Rally Day exercises of the Leinster street Baptist church Sunday school held in the school room yesterday afternoon were well attended. Addresses were made to the pupils by Rev. J. H. McDonald, Rev. D. J. McPherson, Rev. I. B. Colwell and Rev. Wellington Camp. Prayers were said by I. B. Kierstead and J. P. Mosher. Miss Vanwart sang a solo and Miss Moxcatt and Miss Kenney a duet. There was a scripture reading by the Good Fellowship class, and other exercises by the primary class.

In the Leinster street Baptist church yesterday, the pastor, Rev. W. Camp preached thanksgiving sermons at both services, and there were special thanksgiving offerings. On Tuesday evening a patriotic service will be held in the church, at which Dr. Silas Alward will speak on the issues of the war. There will also be an interesting programme of patriotic songs.

MANY ATTRACTIONS FOR THANKSGIVING HOLIDAY

Thanksgiving Day will be generally observed in St. John. Practically all the places of business will be closed but the newspapers will appear as usual. Many citizens took advantage of the two free days to go to the country and it is expected that many moose, caribou, deer, partridge, etc. will fall a prey to the hunters from the city. Citizens sauntered forth late Saturday night armed with a rifle and a license to shoot and it is expected that many family larders will be replenished with the fruits of the chase.

For those who remain in the city special features have been arranged. All the theatres will have attractions and extra performances.

The horsemen of the city have arranged for a grand racing event at Moosepath where the best horses in the city and vicinity will compete. The entries assure a fine afternoon of sport.

Did Not Try.
 Contractor Lahey did not make an attempt on Saturday to raise the sunken dredge Leaconfield which is grounded on Navy Island bar. It was expected that an attempt would be made, but it was decided to make a try later on.

Message from Sir George Foster urging that all equipment possible be purchased in Canada — Mayor Frink intimates this city already in line.

"The municipality of St. John has always had a preference for British made goods at least," said Mayor Frink last night, "and when possible Canadian made goods have been purchased for the use of the city. In some instances apparatus that could not be secured in Canada was purchased in the United States, but generally speaking, the bulk of materials used by the city are of Canadian manufacture."

His Worship referred to the statement of Sir George E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, in which he said he had been informed that certain Canadian municipalities and companies are buying their equipment for public utilities from foreign sources. Sir George adds that, during the stress of war and with a prospect of unemployment during the coming winter, it appears especially desirable that as far as possible equipment produced in Canada should be obtained. He believes that a patriotic sentiment would only make it necessary to call attention to the matter and purchases will be made in Canada.

Mayor Frink thought this same idea was prevalent throughout Canada and he feels sure that St. John was in line.

The message in this connection received from Ottawa last night was as follows:

"Sir George Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, states that he has been informed that certain Canadian municipalities and companies are buying their equipment for public utilities from foreign sources. Sir George adds that, during the stress of war and with a prospect of unemployment during the coming winter, it appears especially desirable that as far as possible equipment produced in Canada should be obtained. He believes that a patriotic sentiment would only make it necessary to call attention to the matter and purchases will be made in Canada."

KAISER IS LEADER OF WAR PARTY

Has Sowed the Wind and will Reap the Whirlwind, says Rev. David Hutchinson.

The services in Main street Baptist church last evening was of a patriotic nature and besides the different musical numbers Rev. Dr. Hutchinson preached an eloquent sermon, for his subject "The War as We View It."

In opening his remarks Dr. Hutchinson referred to a sermon he preached some time ago when he referred to the conditions of peace then existing on earth and at that time he had said that the nations of the earth had evidently grown tired of war. His forecast had been derived from the certain great national and international movements then underway. It had then looked as if the nations would settle their difficulties by a saner, more kindly and less costly method than by appeal to the sword. For instance the International Peace Conference to which all the great nations had sent delegates, met quite often and several disputes had been settled at its sessions. From the evidence of these conferences people were led to believe that the world was working towards lasting peace. But from this dream there had been a cruel awakening. At a time when people were talking of peace and delegates were on their way to a peace conference in Vienna the Emperor of Germany plunged madly into war. Emperor William has sown the wind and ere long he will reap the whirlwind.

The speaker referred to the outrages of the German soldiers in their work in Belgium and the great destruction wrought by them. He thought of the god of William of Germany must be a strange one if he was a god of dishonesty, whose pledges were only scraps of paper, whose word was only for nothing, who sanctioned rapine, the outraging of womankind and brutality in its worst forms. The German Emperor's god was assuredly not the God. No immoral god could be so god of the honest, truth loving, fair dealing Briton.

In regard to the Emperor's part in making the war Dr. Hutchinson said: "Some I know there are who are attempting to clear the Kaiser of all responsibility for the present war. 'He was in favor of peace,' writes one of his admirers and sympathizers. 'He was over-ruled by the military party.' We have no desire whatever to do him any injustice; at the same time, after a careful study of all the circumstances, we are compelled to differ from those who contend that he is not responsible. If he has been a man in favor of peace as was George or the Czar of Russia, or the President of France, would there have been any war?"

Emperor William had done none of these things. Not a word in favor of peace ever fell from his lips. He was all for war. From reading history the preacher had found that instead of the Kaiser being controlled by the war party he was the director of it. Of the German war party, the Kaiser himself was the head.

Dr. Hutchinson referred to the history of the present conflict and the peace agreements signed by the different countries. He spoke of the erroneous ideas held by the Germans in regard to different parts of the British Empire. The war has already been of religious value to us. It has sent us to our knees. It has pointed us to God, as our Helper and Deliverer.

During the service Miss Audrey Mullin sang "Canada My Home." The National Anthem was sung. Rev. I. B. Colwell offered prayer and the national anthems of some of the countries engaged in the European war were played on the organ.

PATRIOTIC SERVICE IN CHURCH

Eloquent addresses in German Street Baptist church—Germany will be defeated.

A patriotic service with addresses by Silas Alward, and R. E. Armstrong, was held in German Street Baptist church last evening, which has been closed for some time while in the hands of the decorators and painters. Special music was also part of the service, Kipling's "Recessional" being sung, and there was a solo by Miss Amund.

A roll of honor has been posted in the church giving the names of the representatives of families of the congregation who are now serving in the militia. Heading the list are the names of Maurice Daley, George Christensen, Eric McDonald, Phillip Sims and Otto Barabak, who have gone to the front with the first Canadian expeditionary force. In addition to these the young men of the congregation had a good representation of young men serving in the permanent companies organized here.

Silas Alward spoke to the congregation on the causes and issues of the war. He said the words of Winston Churchill to the effect that England would spend her last dollar and last man to achieve victory, illustrated the attitude in which the Empire went into the war. Of the eventual triumph of Great Britain he had no doubt, as the nation was fighting for the god of William of Germany must be a strange one if he was a god of dishonesty, whose pledges were only scraps of paper, whose word was only for nothing, who sanctioned rapine, the outraging of womankind and brutality in its worst forms. The German Emperor's god was assuredly not the God. No immoral god could be so god of the honest, truth loving, fair dealing Briton.

In regard to the Emperor's part in making the war Dr. Hutchinson said: "Some I know there are who are attempting to clear the Kaiser of all responsibility for the present war. 'He was in favor of peace,' writes one of his admirers and sympathizers. 'He was over-ruled by the military party.' We have no desire whatever to do him any injustice; at the same time, after a careful study of all the circumstances, we are compelled to differ from those who contend that he is not responsible. PERSONAL

Bishop Richardson has returned from trip to Winnipeg and is expected here this week to attend committee meetings of the Synod boards. He will probably remain here some time, making arrangements for the city mission work which is to be started here in November.

The Archdeacon Raymond, chaplain of the Artillery, held divine service on Partridge Island yesterday, all the men not on duty attending. The Archdeacon Raymond of St. Mary's and Rev. R. P. McKim of St. Luke's exchanged pulpits yesterday morning.

A Special Thanksgiving Dinner will be served in Bond's Restaurant from 11.30 till 2 o'clock today.

HOUSE DRESSES.
 Business as usual during alterations in the map of Europe will be carried on at F. A. Dykeman & Co's place with no advance in price and whenever possible Canadian made goods will be offered in preference to all others. A special lot of ladies' house dresses made from the most attractive materials that are produced in Canada are now on sale at very attractive prices, 95c. and $1.50 for a porcelaine house dress; from $1.00 to $2.75 for those made from material that looks like wool.

Encourage Home Industry.
 If every man, woman and child in St. John purchased a pair of "Humphrey's Socks" or "Humphrey's Good Year Welt" shoes the increased business would benefit this city.

The Imperial's Holiday Show.
 The Imperial has a very pretty vaudeville offering today in the Solimines children and pianist. Madge Cockburn, Scottish baritone from the London music halls, will be another newcomer. Elsie Marie enters upon her final week. The picture bill includes a two-reel drama, Hearst-Selig war pictures, and two comedies.

A Special Thanksgiving Dinner will be served in Bond's Restaurant from 11.30 till 2 o'clock today.
