The Farmer's Corner.

Liquid Manure.

It is generally known that it is only as plant food. Until dissolved it lies inert in the soil to which it has been applied; but then the salts, in which its fertilizing power consists, being set free, are available for plant food, and in the liquid state are absorbed by the roots of the growing plants. Hence the immediate benefit derived by young plants from the application of liquid manure. A mode of applying it, though on a small scale, is given by a correspondent of the New England Farmer, as follows:

I saw, in a late number of your paper, an enquiry of how much soil to put with a bushel of hen manure to make it safe to put under corn in the hill. I tried this experiment once and but once; the result, I will explain why. I took about ten bushels of manure, in April, put it under corn in a compact heap, added two bushels of ashes and a little unsifted lime, shovelled it over several times, so as to get it well mixed, and put about half a pint to each hill and covered it with dirt, before sowing the corn. The corn came up well, but in less than a week after I found that my manure was killing the tap roots as fast as they reached the soil, and the result was that not one stalk in fifty lived to produce corn, and I lost my corn crop. It being so late that I could not plant to any other crop, I sowed the field between the rows to English turnips, the ground having been previously planted with corn, and I sowed the turnips, not being corn enough to shade them.

The best use to which I can put a small quantity of hen manure is to take a barrel, put in say one hundred, set it in the garden, fill it nearly full of rain water, stir it up well, and when your vegetables are well up, water them once or twice a week with this solution, taking care not to pour the liquid on the plants, but to water the squares or cucumbers. You may use it so without fear of injury, as it will have a good tendency to keep off the striped bugs, though not an infallible remedy. (Plaster of Paris) or flour sifted on when the dew is on, being the best remedy for the same, and to be repeated as often as it is washed off by the rain. When the liquor is exhausted in the barrel, add a little more hen manure, and fill up with water again, using the liquor till the vegetables get so well started as not to require any more of that kind of stimulant. This use of hen manure I find pays well, with my experience with it. If I had more than I could use in the way last mentioned, I should put it on the compost heap with other manure, and spread it broadcast on the land and plow it under.

Cultivation in Season.

With a press of work often cultivation of food crops is put off until the weeds have attained a considerable size, even so as to overshadow the crop. This is a mistake. Every weed not destroyed is sapping the ground of the nutriment that is just in the best condition for the growing plant, but if the weeds are destroyed as it comes out of the ground it has as yet only taken its nutriment from its own seed. Again, a weed that has been where it is, will destroy hundreds of weeds if allowed to remain some time longer each individual weed will require the same effort. Here is where the stroke in time saves ninety-nine out of one. This is most emphatically true in the case of potatoes, and other crops closely sown, which require hand work entirely. In case of potatoes, the plan of hoeing after planting and before they are far advanced is growing in favor. This allows the crop to have a good start of the weeds, and the potatoes are not in the least injured by the hoeing. -Detroit Free Press.

One word of caution as to our relying solely upon gypsum as a fertilizer. Excellent as it is, and as it does something else, or it will finally ruin. Plants require at least a dozen elements in order to grow, and gypsum furnishes only three, sulphur, oxygen and lime. When plaster first came into fashion in this country such were its magical effects that many farmers thought they could sell all their hay and still keep their farms by purchasing yearly a ton or two of plaster. They found themselves deceived. The phosphorus, potash, soda, etc., were in a few years exhausted, and a prejudice arose against plaster which it did not deserve. It was accused of being merely a stimulant to land, and thereby fattening and impoverishing the soil. Rightly used, it is one of the cheapest commercial fertilizers, and it therefore forbids any person to harbour or maintain a prejudice against it, or to refuse to give it the maintenance given to or debts contracted by it.

SPRING HILL COAL.

SPRING HILL MINING COY

HAVING now fully developed their Mines at Spring Hill, and having secured a large quantity of a superior quality and purity of coal, can now offer to customers along the International Railway a first class steam coal in quality, and which, in consequence of the late reduction in freight, must take the place of all other fuel along the line of Railway between Truro and St. John, and at least at the Moncton end of the line. Wood stores are fast giving way to coal between the first named points, and it is probable that the same fact will be observed as soon as this superior coal can be introduced along the line between Moncton and Riviere du Loup.

The International Railway uses this coal exclusively for all locomotives and stations west of Truro.

The coal is mined in the most approved manner to insure its freedom from stone and fire-clay, the round coal of a superior quality, which separates from it all the dust and small coal; the latter is then put through an elaborate steam rotary screen, which produces two sizes of small coal, known as "stove" and "stake" which are perfectly pure coals and entirely free from dust. The superior quality of the above goods is particularly drawn to the "stove" and "stake" which are used in the most approved manner for heating the "Round" may prefer it alone; the latter is unsuited for heating the "Round" or for small engines. The coal ignites very quickly and burns freely, thereby insuring a quick heat with but a small consumption of fuel, which is particularly desirable in summer, in winter, and when large rooms are to be heated, you have simply to add to the quantity used in summer for heating the "Round" or the pot, and a lasting and economical fire is the result.

It is low price must induce all those who consider this point to give a trial. "Stove" Coal is now sold at the Mine at $1.25 per ton, and "Stake" Coal at $1.00 per ton. During the summer months, and before frost sets in, the price of "Stove" and "Stake" will be $2.00 per ton for "Stove" and $1.25 per ton for "Stake". The price for "Round" is $2.50 per ton, at the mine.

Agents have been appointed at all towns and villages between Truro and St. John, and the coal will be delivered to the consumer at the lowest possible price. The price given for car loads, and the consumer will be before ordering what the coal cost him, by adding the I. C. R. freight, and cost of carting to the mine. The agent sells less than a car load may charge an advanced rate for his trouble of carting.

In 1875 the sales reached 55,000 tons, and it is hoped that this year's sales will nearly double that of last year, thus proving the great appreciation of Spring Hill Coal.
