DREAM-LAND.
BY HARRIET J. BERRY.

Last night I lived a life-time
Of happiness untold;
And dull reality to-day
Seems doubly dull and cold.
I did not roam through Tempe's vale,
Or drink Castalian streams,
But trod Affection's Eden,
And quaffed the light of dreams.

Mothought 'twas summer, and the earth
Had put her glory on;
I saw the smiles of sunset,
The blushes of the dawn;
No light was near the blossoms,
No winter thaws to freeze,
Where Fancy planted, planned, and reamed
Her own Hesperides.

There were merry voices blending
In harmony and glee,
And gentle hands were clasped in mine,
Of those that care for me;
While greetings, long forgotten,
Rose from the buried past,
And fell as kindly on my ear
As when I heard them last.

As well-known forms were fitting
Around the circle gay,
I uttered some familiar name,
And all was swept away!
But Hope, the faithless charmer,
Smiled on the shivered chain,
And whispered, now faded quite,
That all should meet again.

Ye who the siren's promise,
In waking dreams, have heard,
And waited till the heart was sick,
And pined with hope deferred,
Go, drink of nature's Lethæ,
And live the night away
In visions "less gleaming far"
Than ever came by day.

Mackenzie and his Prospects.

The electioneering address of Mackenzie to the electors of York, has called forth very conflicting opinions from the press, and it is difficult to find two journals entertaining the same sentiments on the subject. The address has also given us a little insight into the policy of certain parties who have heretofore been hiding their light under a bushel, and concealing their real sentiments as much as possible. We allude more particularly to the "clear grits," who have been called Annexationists in disguise, but who have managed to mystify the people as to their political views, while they have affected to take a lead in the great absorbing question of retrenchment. These gentlemen, if we are to consider the North American their organ, are strenuously opposed to the appearance of Mackenzie in political life, and vie with those who have been distinguished as the High Church party in denouncing him. A number of us unexpected characters, to destroy an erring but repentant old man, certainly appears extraordinary, and we have little sympathy with those who so stultify themselves. It has never been shown that Mackenzie is more a traitor than Lafontaine, or Nelson, or Papineau, all of whom occupy places in the House of Assembly, whilst the first-named is the chief adviser of the Governor-General; but whatever his crimes may have been, the pardon of his Sovereign has been extended, and he is once more entitled to all the rights and privileges of a British subject. We are sorry to see that among those who are determined to deprive him of those rights, the foremost are persons who have either openly avowed their own allegiance, or others who seek by "sapping and mining" to bring about the separation of Canada from the Mother Country. The Montreal Herald calls Mackenzie all sorts of hard names, because he once was a Rebel. Yet the very paper which deals thus harshly with Mackenzie, advocated the overthrow of British institutions, and annexation to the neighboring Republic, for months. Col. Prince, a very powerful man, kicked Mackenzie, who is hardly one-half his size, and ill at the time, out of the House of Assembly, because he was a Rebel, yet a very few months afterward Col. Prince advocated Independence, which Mackenzie, Rebel as he is, and possessed of far more experience than his assailant, will not sanction or support. The "clear grit" North American, a quasi-Annexation journal, without a tinge of the manliness of the Independent, comes out in opposition to Mackenzie, for no reason that we can imagine, except that the latter is determined to support the British Constitution. The different newspapers named, and the gallant Colonel, may not like to have their names arranged side by side with the name of Mackenzie, but looking at events both past and present; which occupies the most noble position?

We have no desire to see Mackenzie in Parliament, indeed we think he may do a great deal of mischief if he gets there, but what can be more indecent than to see persons denouncing a brother mortal, whose only crime is that he has abjured the very principles which they all advocate? Mackenzie may be a very dangerous man and an unsafe politician, but the first stone thrown at him should be delivered by cleaner hands. For our part, we sincerely believe that Mackenzie is in earnest in his opposition to Annexation, and that redeeming quality alone should cover a multitude of political sins. At all events, he does not deserve to be attacked by those who are laboring for the accomplishment of the object in which he was once engaged, but which he now repudiates with all the ability of which he is master. The truth is that Mackenzie is looked upon with suspicion by all parties, because he holds aloof from all, and appears inclined to make a stand on his own foundation, with the expectation probably, that he may regain some portion of the popularity which he once possessed. He can hardly be blamed for this discretion, but political warfare in this country is conducted much on the guerilla system, and Mackenzie is looked upon as a perfect Ishmaelite. We shall be surprised, however, if he does not yet make himself felt by those who have turned the cold shoulder upon him in the day of adversity, and started the mad dog cry the moment he makes an effort to redeem himself.

REBELLION LOSSES.

We have just been treated, and a rich treat it certainly is, with a copy of the Report of the Commissioners under "The Rebellion Losses Act," as laid before the Assembly by order of the Governor-General, on the 8th Aug. last, pursuant to an Address of the House to His Excellency.

The Report is divided into two classes. The first class comprises all the claims on which the evidence has been heard (but on none of which any judgment has been rendered) to the number of 613, as well as the several amounts of the indemnity claimed, and the grounds on which those claims are founded, with the names and residences of the parties. The sum claimed by these 613 parties, amounts to £25,790 5s. 8d. currency.

The second class comprises all the remaining claimants, with their residences, amounts, and grounds of claims. The number of these is 1925, and the sum claimed by them £106,289 14s. 4d. currency. The total amount claimed by the two classes consequently is £202,080, divisible among 2538 claimants. The reader may recollect that the movement started by this infamous Act—which gave rise to the conflagration of the Parliament House at Montreal, with all its public records, its two most valuable libraries, the ill-treatment of English claims, and the grounds on which those claims are founded, with the names and residences of the parties. The sum claimed by these 613 parties, amounts to £25,790 5s. 8d. currency.

LONDON WINE VAULTS.

The wine vaults of London are a great subterranean wonder, and I had the pleasure of visiting them one day through the office of a celebrated wine merchant. The vaults cover between thirty and forty acres of ground, and that too in the most thickly settled portions of the Island city. They lie contiguous to the docks, and are immediately under the streets and cellars of the buildings about the wharves and docks. They were built because of the absence of rooms for storing wines near the dock, and because of the convenience of a general Wine Cellar, where all merchants can store their wines and allow them to be tasted, upon order, and also purchased therefrom. The only method that I know of to gain admission is through an order to taste the wine of a certain cask—of course no one is obliged to taste, or at least to drink, though it is rarely so refused. The order that my friend and I received ran thus:

"Admit bearer and friends to taste cask No. 3421, Oporto Wine."

We entered the vestibule (of what the temperance men this side of the water would call "the hall") and after presenting our order, were each furnished with a tin lamp, attached to a gutter, and a long wooden handle, and commenced descending the steps to the floor of the vault. The name of the cellar we were in was the "East Vault," and covered thirteen acres of ground. The whole space was divided up into streets and blocks—the blocks consisting of solid casks of wine—Scilly, Oporto, Madeira, Sherry, and all the other kinds ever invented. A few little flickering lamps just "made the darkness visible," hanging at a few rods distance from each other, and the low rumbling of the noisy streets above us, sounded like distant thunder. The air was deliciously fragrant with the wine odors, and there was almost intoxication in breathing it.

Away we went, threading passage after passage and turning corner after corner, until our guide stopped short before "Cask 3421, Oporto Wine," and commenced tapping it. My friend looked imploringly at me, as much as to say "How shall we escape tasting?" An inversion of my glass suggested to him an easy mode of escape, and when our glasses were full, while the guide was looking at the cask, it was an easy matter to pour the red wine upon the earth. Looking up and seeing our empty glasses, he asked, "Will you take another glass?" We told him "no," and he remarked that many was the fine lady who took her second glass there.

"And do fine ladies come here to taste your wine?" we asked. He replied that they often did so, and that more than once he had helped away a fair creature in a state of "exaltation." There was a secret of the habits of the "upper circles," for no poor men's daughters ever get orders to taste the wine in the London Vaults. We turned away, and just then a party like ourselves came along—a couple of finely-dressed ladies with their guide came, very likely, to select wines for some great feast, or perhaps merely for the gratification of the tasting operation. I ascertained a singular fact from a friend in regard to a certain kind of wine in these vaults; many has been the yearning in the books of the Vaults show sales of more Oporto wine than is made at Oporto! One who recollects that Fort wine at this time was remarkable plenty in all other parts of the world—will gaze upon Oporto—it affords a significant clue to many glaring facts in the wine importing trade.

A MAN BURIED ALIVE.

In August, 1837, at Aquabogue, Long Island, one John Cameron, a native of Scotland, after taking his tea, fell into convulsions, and died suddenly. A doctor, named Wright, was sent for, but was informed that the man was dead, and he immediately went away. The body soon swelled up very much, and by some strange idea the hands were tied across the stomach. The body was interred the day after death, but presented none of the appearances of a corpse, being quite limber. Mrs. Cameron was absent at the time in this city, and did not return for a fortnight. After some years, young Cameron entered the employment of N. Currier, lithographer, corner of Spruce and Nassau streets; and the mother married a man named Falls, a ropermaker, and now resides with him at Yorkville. Lately, young Cameron having prospered in his business, thinking it his duty to have his father's remains more decently interred, and some sort of a monument erected to his memory, had his body disinterred by a man named Aldridge. To the great astonishment of the man and his assistant, it was with the greatest difficulty that they could raise the coffin; and on removing the lid, they found the remains fresh and undecayed, though a little blackened, and the hand behind the head in a strange position, as if the deceased had awakened from a trance, and struggled for freedom. This is the more strange as the hands were tied. The coffin was pretty well decayed, and was very some parts. This discovery led to a great deal of discussion in the neighborhood, and to many strange suspicions and surmises. There appears to be a desire that an inquest should be held, or some investigation that would elicit the facts of this mysterious case. The deceased was thirty-five years of age, and appeared to be in perfect health the day before he was interred. He was fond of stabling birds, and used a large quantity of arsenic for the purpose. It is expected that a legal investigation will take place in a few days.

A HUMBLE PRIMA DONNA.—In the winter of 1846 a young girl, poorly clad, attracted some attention by her singing at the edge of the pavement under the Western Club House at Glasgow. A shawl enveloped her head and concealed her face. She asked no alms, but sung on, accepting with grateful thanks the small gifts of the street passers-by. One night her voice sounded so sweetly in the ears of two German gentlemen, that they gave her some small coin, and hurried on. The rain was falling in torrents. The heart-touching tones of the poor-girl's voice touched them deeply. Suddenly one of them stopped and said, "Do you hear that voice? What beauty and power! Does no one try to save the possessor of such a voice from destruction? Shall a girl with such a gift from Heaven die from hunger or worse?" "Let us see what we can do," answered the other. They returned and enquired of the watchman respecting the mysterious songstress. He knew nothing of her. She did not have a name. She gave him a false address, for she wished to conceal her name. After about a month's diplomatic negotiations, by means of the watchman, the girl agreed at last to visit a benevolent German lady. Arrived there, and putting the jealous shawl aside, a pale interesting face was discovered. The girl gave satisfactory references as to her former life. It appeared that she was a native of Edinburgh; that, having become destitute from the death of her father, the illness of other members of her family, and other circumstances, and not being able to get work sufficient to provide for her family, and being possessed of a good voice—her only family inheritance—she resolved to try to make a precarious living by singing in the streets during the twilight and evening. When she sang to her new friends, her voice seemed to have lost

Scraps.
BURNING THE BITS.
"Please, marm, and what shall I do with the bits of candles?"
"Take them down stairs and burn them in the kitchen, Bridget."
"Oh she started. At night, Bridget called the lady and asked for a candle for the kitchen."
"A candle—why, what have you done with the pieces you had this morning?"
"Faith, marm, I put them in the fire, and burnt them in the kitchen, as ye told me this morning."

No Time to be Lost.—Now, girls, said our friend Mrs. Bigelow to her daughters the other day, "you must get husbands as soon as possible, or they'll be murdered!" "Why so, ma?" "Why, I see by the papers that we've got a most fifteen thousand post-offices, and nearly all of 'em dispatches a mail each way every day—the Lord have mercy upon ye poor widows and orphans!" and the old lady stepped briskly to the looking-glass to put on her new cap.

Power of a Bushel of Coals.—It is well known to engineers that there is virtue in a bushel of coals, properly consumed, to raise several millions of pounds weight a foot high. This is actually the average effect of an engine at this moment working at Huel Town, in Cornwall. Let us pause a moment, and consider what this is equivalent to in matters of practice. The ascent of Mount Blanc, from the valley of Chamouni, is considered, and with justice, as the most toilsome feat that a strong man can execute in two days. The combustion of two pounds of coal would place him on the summit. The Menai bridge, one of the most stupendous works of art that has been raised by man in modern ages, consists of a mass of iron, not less than four millions of pounds in weight, suspended at a medium height of 170 feet above the sea. The combustion of seven bushels of coal would suffice to raise it to the place where it hangs.

The pyramid of Egypt is composed of granite. It is seven hundred feet in the side of the base, and 500 in perpendicular height, and stands on 11 acres of ground. Its weight is therefore 12,700 millions of pounds, at a medium height of 126 feet; consequently it would be raised by the effort of about 360 chaldrons of coal—a quantity consumed in some foundries in a week. The annual consumption of coal in London is estimated at 1,500,000 chaldrons. The effort of this quantity would suffice to raise a cubical block of marble, 2200 feet in the side through a space equal to its own height, or to pile one such mountain upon another. The Monte Nuove, near Puzzoli, which was erupted in a single night by a volcanic fire, might have been raised by such an effort, from a depth of 50,000 feet, or about 8 miles.—Working Men's Friend.

How Lola Montes made her Fortune.—A somewhat musty proverb says that many people have honors and fortunes thrust upon them. This was true with the celebrated actress and singer, Lola Montes. She was a noted courtesan, and yet hesitated not to visit the fashionable watering places of Baden. There she boldly presented herself at the door of the public saloon in an evening dress, and when forbidden entrance, gave the door-keeper a couple of severe blows with her fist and walked in. Her hardihood did not prevent her from being seated in a wagon between two soldiers, an hour afterwards, and driven to the frontiers of the Duchy. When she was permitted to alight, she looked around, and seeing a young Bavarian officer, who was smoking while waiting the passage of a military baggage-train, she pulled a cigar from her pocket and asked him for a light. He willingly gave it. "Where are you going?" "Oh, yes!" "Alone! then—let's go to Munich!" And thus did her star guide her to the King of Bavaria. Her assurance gave her access to the old King—he was captivated—took her as his mistress—gave her a fortune—and made her Countess of Landsfeldt.

A Novel Race.—A rather novel race, which we were unable to notice in our last issue, took place on the Kingston Course on last Saturday. The race was between a man and a horse, and the bet, which was taken up by Mr. Henry Armstrong, of this city, was, that the horse should run 200 yards, while Mr. Armstrong ran 100. A horse remarkable for his quick start, (a great point in a race of this description), was procured from the Prince Edward District. The race was cleverly won by Mr. Armstrong, who made excellent time, beating the horse about 20 yards.—Kingston Argus.

Corner Kissing.—The editor of the Windsor Journal (United States) learns that "Professors of Dancing" in New York have recently introduced a new style of cotillon, called "Kiss Cotillon," the peculiar feature of which is, that you kiss the lady as you swing corners. The editor never dances, but says he would not mind waving his objections to the amusement so far as to "swing corners," now and then, in this new cotillon!

A Marrying Genius.—There is a man in the New York penitentiary who has had 23 wives. He is 36 years of age and has been engaged in the matrimonial business since he was 16, and has therefore, had a new wife every seven months, getting rid of the old spouse, and courting the new one ad interim. He declares that he will have a hundred wives before he dies if they do not cramp his genius with stone walls.

Lord John Russell was one day last week observed in front of Mr. Maule's houses at Birnam enjoying himself with his children, in sending up paper balloons into the air, and chasing them over the lawn.—North British Mail.
