CHAPTER VIII. A Strange Welcome.

"Certainly I will not," Cyril said. "But I think you rather underestimate it, if you'll allow me to say so."

Gulldford Berton shook his head with a peculiar smile. "It was nothing," he said. "Good-night."

He stood at the gate in the wall watching Cyril's strong, lithe figure striding away down the lane; then, bolting the gate securely, returned to the house, and stood in front of the chair Cyril had sat in, and looked at it as if its late occupant were still there.

"Poo! and proud," he muttered, "and handsome as the devil. Just the sort of man to take a girl's fancy. Hum! I don't think you like me, Mr. Cyril Burne, and I—" he paused, and his lips parted slightly, showing his small teeth in a thin, white line, "and I hate you. You may go your way and not interfere, but if you should cross my path and become a nuisance—" He stopped again, and, after regarding the empty chair with a sinister smile for another moment or two, he took up the lamp and the water jug, and went into the room in which Cyril had found him.

Setting the lamp down upon the table, he carefully locked the door and fastened the window-shutters. Then he took a large handkerchief from his pocket, and, potting some water on it from a jug, tied it over his mouth. Then he unlocked the cupboard door, and, taking down two bottles and a test glass, carefully poured into the latter an equal portion of each of the liquids contained in the bottles.

Lastly he got the small phial, and, first holding out his hand at arm's length, to see if it was steady, most carefully and slowly allowed a few drops to fall into the mixture.

Whatever this last chemical might have been, it worked an extraordinary change in the compound to which it had been added, for it hissed as hot iron hisses in the smith's trough, and the color of the mixture changed from dull gray to bright crimson, then to a vivid green, and lastly lost all color and became like water.

But at this point of its transformation a faint, but penetrating odor arose from it, so penetrating, indeed, that it appeared to make its way through the wet handkerchief, and Gulldford Berton's pale face went deathly white, and he swayed to and fro slightly.

With a muffled exclamation of satisfaction, he skillfully poured the colorless liquid he had concocted into an empty phial, and, having tightly corked it, removed the handkerchief from his face. Then he covered the cork with sealing wax, and, placing the small phial in a padded pocket inside his waistcoat, sank back in the chair and smiled as one smiles who, after infinite toil and trouble, has reached a long-desired success.

CHAPTER IX. The New Companion.

THAT evening, about an hour before dinner, Norah was in her own room, reading a volume of Mrs. Browning's poems, which she had found in the library; that is to say, she read for a few minutes, then her eyes strayed from the book and wandered over the view, and her thoughts wandered also.

Norah had read a great deal, for her life had lacked companionship, and most of her amusements had been solitary ones; but, though love had generally been the theme of the novel or the poem, it had always been a mystery to her.

In all her short life she had never met the one man whose voice had power to raise the strange echo in the heart which proclaims the birth of love. She had, for instance, never fallen in love with the curate or the young doctor, as some girls, for want of a better object, occasionally do; she had not only not fallen in love with them, but she had not given a thought to them after they had left her presence.

But to-night, as she sat by the open window, she found that though Mrs. Browning was delightful, to recall the face and words of the young artist was more delightful still.

She felt sure that it was he whom she had heard on the terrace, and she wondered why she had not plucked up courage and asked him.

How frankly he had spoken! not miming his words and smiling the conventional smile which most young men consider it necessary to assume when they address members of the other sex; and how straight and steady was the look of his handsome, expressive eyes! She wondered whether the earl would make inquiries as he had said, and, if so, whether they would result in Cyril Burne's being asked to dinner; at the thought, the fancy picture of his being seated, say, next to her, or opposite her, Norah's face grew warmly colored and her eyes drooped; but she did not pause to ask herself why the mere prospect of eating her dinner in the company of the young man with the manly voice and straightforward eyes should be so pleasant to her.

It never occurred to her that if not already in love with Cyril Burne, the subtle poison had entered her being; the enemy was already parleying at the gate of her heart.

She was aroused both from Mrs. Browning and her own thoughts by a knock at the door and the entrance of Harman.

"I beg your ladyship's pardon," she said, glancing at the open book; "I'm afraid I've disturbed you, my lady; but I've brought Becca."

Norah gave a little start. She had been so absorbed reading and thinking that she had forgotten all about Rebecca South.

"That is right," she said; "where is she?"

"Outside, my lady," replied Harman, and she opened the door and beckoned Becca in.

The girl entered, and stood eyeing Norah with the expression of half defiance, half curiosity, which had so impressed Cyril, then her black eyes dropped before Norah's kindly regard.

The girl looked prettier at close quarters, Norah thought, than at a distance, and she smiled at Harman with a little nod of satisfaction.

"I am glad you have come, Rebecca—or Becca, as I should like to call you," said Norah.

Becca stood motionless, fingering the lace edging on her dress.

"Curtsy and say 'Thank you, my lady,'" retorted Harman, in an undertone.

Becca made a very slight curtsy, and murmured something that sounded like the words suggested.

"Will you come and sit down here?" said Norah, rather amused at the girl's half-shy, half-fierce manner. She was like some beautiful, scarcely tamed young animal, who fears a blow, and is prepared to retort with a kick or a bite.

Becca crossed the room and seated herself on the low ottoman near Norah's chair, and Norah, thinking that they would probably come to an understanding much sooner if the aunt were not present, said:

"Leave Becca and me to have a little talk, Harman, will you?"

"Yes, my lady," said Harman, and she went out, but paused at the door, to cast a warning glance toward her young niece.

"You know why I asked you to come and see me, Becca," she said; "but I am sure she only wishes to do the best for you. But there," she broke off, feeling that she was getting "peachy," and that if she continued she would probably make this wild young creature dislike her, "I don't want to deprive you of your liberty, and you shall stay just as long as you like."

Becca's face lightened.

Becca looked at her steadily for a moment.

"I should like that," she said, almost to herself; "but it sounds funny," she added, with a candor which amused Norah.

"Does it?" she asked. "Why?"

"Why should you, a lady, want such as me to keep you company?" said Becca.

"Because, although I am a lady, as you say, I am very lonely," said Norah, in her sweet, frank voice, "and I want to have some one I can speak to, and who will talk to me about—well, anything that interests her."

"Is that all—my lady?" asked Becca, adding the "my lady" as an afterthought.

Norah laughed at the naivete of the question.

"Well, I'm afraid that would be scarcely employment enough, unless we chattered all day; but I thought you could help make some of my dresses. That is a very pretty one you have got on; who made that?"

"I did," replied Becca, looking down at it and smoothing it with her hand.

"You must be very clever," said Norah. "I am afraid I could not make a dress to save my life. I have trim-ned a hat and a bonnet, but they were not very great successes.

"It's easy enough," remarked Becca; "I could make that dress you have got on."

Norah smiled.

"I think you could; you have made your own so prettily," she said. "But I don't want you to be always at needlework. 'Are you fond of reading?'"

"Yes," replied Becca, nodding.

"Well, then, you could read to me sometimes, or I could read to you while you are working."

"That would be nice," said Becca, looking out of the corners of her eyes thoughtfully. "And am I to live here, sleep here, at the Court?" she asked, suddenly, her eyes downcast.

Norah thought for a moment.

"Well, I had hoped that you would, but perhaps you cannot leave your grandfather altogether?"

Becca looked up, as if she caught at the suggestion.

"No, my lady; I don't think I could," she said.

"Very well," said Norah; "you shall arrange with your aunt as to how long you shall stay."

Becca's face fell.

"I'd rather leave it to you," she said, under her breath; "she's hard to me."

Norah looked rather puzzled.

"Oh, I don't think your aunt could be unkind, Becca," she said at last; "she seems so fond of you."

"She's hard," repeated Becca, half defiantly, half sullenly. "She wants to chain me up—" She stopped, as if she had gone too far, and her black eyes flashed.

Norah laughed.

"Perhaps she thinks you are a little giddy, Becca," she said; "but I am sure she only wishes to do the best for you. But there," she broke off, feeling that she was getting "peachy," and that if she continued she would probably make this wild young creature dislike her, "I don't want to deprive you of your liberty, and you shall stay just as long as you like."

Becca's face lightened.

FOR HEADACHES, BILIOUSNESS, CONSTIPATION, INDIGESTION

Nearly all our minor ailments, and many of the serious ones, too, are traceable to some disorder of the stomach, liver, and bowels. If you wish to avoid the miseries of indigestion, acidity, heartburn, flatulence, headaches, constipation, and a host of other distressing ailments, you must see to it that your stomach, liver and bowels are equal to the work they have to do. It is a simple matter to take 30 drops of Mother Seigel's Syrup daily, after meals, yet thousands of former sufferers have banished indigestion, biliousness, constipation, and all their distressing consequences in just this simple way. Profit by their experience. As a digestive tonic and stomachic remedy, Mother Seigel's Syrup is unsurpassed.

A Way They Have in the Navy.

Westminster Gazette:—The keeping of the seas by our Navy appeals to each of us in a different manner. Our food table is a marvel; our foreign correspondence is likewise wonderful. We cannot help appreciating the power of our Fleet. A Canadian subaltern told me the other evening that until he came across with his contingent he had not thought much about the Navy. His fleet of transports were conveyed by a cruiser from the Canadian shore, and the word was passed around that he would be relieved at noon on a certain day. Eleven o'clock came, but there was no sign of the new boat. Half an hour later smoke was visible on the horizon, and at twelve prompt No. 2 cruiser had swung round and taken her place at the head of the line, whilst No. 1 turned about. "Uncanny," was his word.

Weakness

Every movement of the body uses up a definite amount of vitality. When you over-exert yourself, or your vitality is undermined by illness, your whole system becomes exhausted to recover its vitality without assistance. Your system is like a plant that is drooping for want of water. And just water revives a drooping plant—so 'Wincarnis' gives new life and new vitality to a weakened constitution. And a wireless that whispered above, like a gnome,
The lappter of London, the boasts of Berlin,
O, it may have been mermaids that lured her from home;
But nobody knew where Kilmeny had been.

It was dark when Kilmeny came home from her quest,
With her bridge dabbled red where her skipper had died;
But she moved like a bride with a rose at her breast;
And "well done, Kilmeny," the Admiral cried.
Now, from sixty-four fathom, a conger may come
And tell you his tale of a drowned submarine.
But late in the evening Kilmeny came home,
And nobody knew where Kilmeny had been.

There's a wandering shadow that stares at the foam,
(Though they sing all the night to old England, their queen.)
Late, late in the evening, Kilmeny came home,
And nobody knew where Kilmeny had been.

—Alfred Noyes.

GEORGE STREET ADULT BIBLE CLASS.—To-morrow afternoon the Rev. Mr. Hemmion will address the class. A solo will be rendered, and the singing will be bright and inspiring. Members are asked to attend in large numbers, and visitors will receive a hearty welcome. Service starts at 2.30. Entrance by Buchanan Street.

With the Volunteers.

Yesterday a squad of volunteers under Pte. Fraser had rifle practice at the South Side Range. Some good scores were made at the 300 yards disappearing target. The remainder of the volunteers were engaged at Swedish and Section drill. To-morrow morning the members of the different denominations will attend Divine Service at their respective churches.

Fish Plentiful

But Stormy Weather Hinders Operations.
In a late report to the Board of Trade Mr. R. Fugaux gives an account of the fall fishery between Rose Blanche and Hr. LeCou, as follows:—The total catch is 1,585 qts, with 360 for last week. Fifty-one dorries and skiffs and three boats are fishing, but the latter were operating only part of three days last week owing to stormy weather. Cod is plentiful on the outer bank, but not much inshore. So far the Fall catch has been over an average one and prospects are good, squid bait being plentiful.

In Milady's Boudoir.

THE BUSINESS GIRL'S HAIR.
The other day I had a chat with a little business girl who always manages to look as well groomed as if she had just stepped out of the proverbial band box. Some of the things she told me might prove interesting to other business girls.

I find that the very best hair treatment is frequent and thorough brushing. Many girls are afraid to take out the tangles, because one of two things is apt to happen when the hair is not in good condition—it either falls out plentifully or becomes very greasy. The very fact that the first happens shows how badly the hair needs brushing, so that all the loose falling bits may be got rid of and the new growth underneath have air and space.

Then, again, my hair used to be terribly greasy, but I cured it—by brushing. The reason for this apparent contradiction is very simple. The first strokes of the brush bring out the natural oil secreted in glands at the root of each hair, but long continued brushing ends in dispersing the oil so thoroughly over the whole head that the unpleasant greasy appearance resolves itself into a natural burnished gloss.

Now let me tell you how I brush my hair—I always do it at bed time. Having taken my hair down, I stand before the glass and part my hair in the centre from brow to neck with a comb. Then I brush each half of the head thoroughly with a good hard brush, long, vigorous strokes, from the roots of the hair right down to the tips. Afterwards I part my hair first on one side, then on the other, and finally across the crown of my head, each time brushing some minutes.

Two Zeppelin Stories.

(From the Manchester Guardian.)
Two more stories from a recent Zeppelin raid. When the worst was over, a resident went out into the town to see what damage had been done. In the darkness he heard a group of women talking loudly, and judging them a clue not to be neglected he followed them along an entry into the backyard of a house. The debate never ceased, but he was unable to get the hang of it until one of the women—the most eloquent—appealed directly to him. "Ere," she said, "do you call it fair? 'T' bomb dropped in our yard, an' a bobby's gone and took it away—never even give me a receipt for it. It's our bomb."

The next-door neighbor of a railway guard noticed that that official had a look of intense weariness, and gently sought to find out the cause. "It's like this," said the guard "I hadn't been long asleep when the buzzer went and up jumps the missis, makes the tea, and gives me my breakfast. I got to the station before I found out that the buzzer was for an air-raid in the middle of the night."

HOSPITAL CROWDED.—There is not a single unoccupied cot in the General Hospital at present and a number of outport people are in boarding houses around the city, waiting to be admitted to the institution.

The Triumph of Germany.

WHAT IT WOULD MEAN TO DOMINION OF CANADA.

(By J. W. Bengough.)
When your Parliament's abolished, and your Legislature's gone, and your old accustomed liberties in Canada have flown;
When throughout our wide Dominion there is not a man who dare express a free opinion with the old Canadian air;
When a little bunch of tyrants, in breast-plates made of tin, sit at Ottawa to rule you on Orders from Berlin;
When inspectors poke their noses into everything you do,
And you're strictly regulated on a system through and through;
When you've got to eat and sleep and think as Government dictates,
And nothing is the citizen's, and all things are the State's;
When police officials tell you you can't do this or that,
And to every passing soldier you've got to touch your hat;
When civilians are nonentities, and you have to knuckle down
To the martinet in uniform who lord it over the town;
When your wife must step off in the mud with all the common throng
When pigeon-breasted officers come swaggering along,
When every town and city has its military caste,
And the red-tape of bureaucracy has tied you hard and fast;
When your autocratic bosses have three votes to your one,
And you have to bear a tax-load that weighs about a ton;
And your thoughts about the "War-Lord" you mustn't dare to squeak,
And the guttral German jargon is the language you must speak;
When the papers all are censored in the printing of the news,
And the editors forbidden to express their honest views;
When your schools are made "efficient" in dishonour, fraud and lies,
And your children are transmogrified to traitors, sneaks and spies—
When all these things have come to pass you'll know the War is done,
The decision has been rendered—and Germany has won;
Great Britain and her allies have lost their gallant fight,
And Canada is Germanized, and henceforth might is right.
How do you like the prospect? By those glorious Flanders graves,
Our mothers never reared us to be the Tueton's slaves!
The Day is here; the hour has struck; behold the Hun's mailed fist—
Arise, Canadian freemen, enlist,
ENLIST, ENLIST!

Here From Hare Bay,
Capt. Samuel Collins, of Hare Bay, B. B., is in town disposing of his summer's catch of 640 quintals of fish secured on the Labrador and Straits of Bell Island. His schooner is now undergoing extensive repairs to her bow and rigging, the damage having been caused by an American vessel colliding with his craft while entering the harbour Sunday last.

Captain Collins who for many years has been Postmaster at Hare Bay will shortly vacate that position.

Glencoe's Passengers
The Glencoe reached Placentia at 2.30 last night with the following passengers:—

INFECTIOUS DISEASE.—Five new cases of infectious disease were reported to the Health Authorities within the city limits during the past week—2 of diphtheria, 2 of scarlet fever and 1 of typhoid. The latter is the only malady existing in any outports just now, there being a few persons in Salvage, B. B., reported to be suffering from it.

The Monthly Cheque That Never Fails
Far into the future, as long as she shall live, the monthly income cheque of the Canada Life will come to her door.

A Contrast:
Illustrating a problem which must be faced by many women.

NO. 1—Her brother would like to borrow a few thousand dollars, to be paid back any time she needed it.

NO. 2—She is strongly advised to buy land.

NO. 3—Her father is greatly worried over his business, which needs capital.

NO. 4—Her husband's most intimate friend warns her against making a bad investment, but will not take the responsibility of advising her what to do.

NO. 5—Her sister thinks she should invest in flying machines and make a fortune.

NO. 6—Her uncle has worked out a plan for taking her into partnership in his business.

NO. 7—An "old friend of her husband" offers an investment in oil shares paying 20% dividend.

NO. 8—Not being familiar with the road before her, she longs for the advice of her husband.

The Monthly Cheque That Never Fails

Far into the future, as long as she shall live, the monthly income cheque of the Canada Life will come to her door.

You may have already made provision for your family, but

Consider This:

There is danger of a man leaving large property interests and too little income. Property must be producing income in order to be of immediate benefit to a bereaved family. A weekly or monthly income is the natural thing for most people.

A woman can keep a family together on even a small income, provided it is REGULAR.

Financial problems should not be thrust upon a woman at a critical time.

Ninety per cent. of money paid beneficiaries is lost or spent within seven years.

The hands of unscrupulous men are always outstretched for money held by the unwary.

Large sums of money on hand invite extravagance or unwise expenditure.

Assuming enough left in cash to pay the immediate obligations of an estate, even a $25.00 monthly income will pay the rent if necessary, leaving a woman's mind free on that score, at least. (The Canada Life bases its rates on a $10.00 monthly income, and welcomes applications for even that amount.)

Out of sixteen legatees under the will of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, only four—men of experience and ability—received outright legacies. The other twelve, women and men of less experience, received "incomes."

Economy in the handling of funds is assured by an organization such as the Canada Life, with large funds to invest and properly equipped to handle investments.

What Should You Do?

Take stock of your affairs; adopt the best method of caring for your obligations; find out how to plan your estate.

She Didn't Apologise.

By RUTH CAMERON.

The other afternoon when I called on a friend of mine she answered the door herself in a very short skirt and a brown flannel shirt. While she is a woman whom I greatly admire, we are not intimate friends, and I had with me a guest who is a stranger to my hostess.

It was a situation which would have embarrassed the ordinary woman. Not so this woman. She did not look flushed or annoyed. She did not break into apologies or explanations. She received us cordially and led us into her living room, and then, at her leisure, explained (not apologized) that she had been working in her garden.

She Didn't Say "It's the Maid's Day Out."

She keeps a maid who usually answers the door, but she did not think it necessary to establish this fact by explaining that it was the maid's day out.

Don't you admire that woman? I do.

She had what I consider one of the best of all qualities—true dignity. That is the sort of dignity that made Lincoln capable of being entirely unembarrassed when his Cabinet found him playing leap-frog with his son.

They Had Blackened the Prime Minister's Face.

That is the sort of dignity that Sir William Pitt, the Prime Minister of England, possessed. He had been romping with some of his young friends when his two Secretaries of State called. His niece had just succeeded in blackening the Prime Minister's face with a burnt cork. Yet one of the rompers records how "the tall, ungainly, bony figure seemed to grow to the ceiling while the Secretaries of State bent like willows before him."

True dignity and false dignity are as far apart as the poles.

True dignity is a quality of the soul, not of the spine.

True Dignity is Rooted in the Soul.

It doesn't consist in keeping your back like a ramrod and your manner like an iceberg. It consists, rather, in independence of soul.

False dignity props itself up by explanations and apologies.

True dignity never needs to because it cannot be undignified. It dignifies all that it does.

False dignity is as common as true dignity is uncommon.

True dignity is often found in high places because it frequently carries its possessor into them by its own force, but it is also found in lowly places, for, to quote Aristotle, "Dignity consists not in possessing honors, but the consciousness that we deserve them."

What Are You Doing for that Eczema?

"Nothing; I've about given up trying to cure it."

"That is not wise. Do as I did and you will probably be cured in a short time. I used Zylex and Zylex Soap with it and my Eczema began to improve at once. A couple of boxes cured. You can get Zylex at your druggists."

The Knight of the Pills

You can either laugh or weep over the story of Sir Joseph Becham, Bart.

dead amid his millions, the third richest man in England by virtue of a cheerful, colossal imposition. His pills were innocent as compared with most patent medicines. But the exploitation of them was largely misleading. Their price was grotesque. And his reward was very great. The public eagerly bought his farthing pills for a shilling. A grateful Government first knighted him and then made him a baronet.

Sir Joseph Becham is generally credited with being the inventor of patent medicine exploitation on a large scale. Certainly he possessed an extraordinary imagination. Not only our own Barum at his best ever equalled the hymn-book trick, whereby the purchasers of apparently innocent volumes on Christmas Day to sing the lines:

"Hark! the herald angels sing
 Becham's pills are just the thing."

After the usual American chuckle a sense of appalling waste is the feeling which such a record inspires; and that is the point very vividly brought out in the most interesting literary use that has been made of the patent medicine idea, Mr. Wells's "Tono-Bungay." Mr. Locke is supposed to have based his Clem Sypher in "Sophtimus" on Sir Joseph himself; but there is too much easygoing mellowness in the tale to make the character count. In Mr. Wells's book, unrelated to Sir Joseph or his pills, the tale centres about that marvellous remedy Tono-Bungay, "Health, Beauty and Strength—Like Mountain Air in the Veins," and its extraordinary originator, old Ponderevo, something between an incompetent druggist and Napoleon. The hero of the volume, nephew George, has this to say when the project is first launched and his aid besought:

"The stuff was, I perceived, a mischievous trash, slightly stimulating, aromatic and attractive, likely to become a bad habit and train people in the habitual use of stronger tonics, and insidiously dangerous to people with defective kidneys. It would cost about sevenpence the large bottle to make, including bottling. We were to sell it at half a crown, plus the cost of the patent medicine stamp. A thing that I will confess deterred me from the outset far more than the sense of dishonesty in this affair was the supreme silliness of the whole concern. I still cling to the idea that the world of men was, or should be, a sane and just organization, and the idea that I should set myself gravely, just at the fine springtime of my life, to developing a monstrous bottling and packing warehouse, bottling rubbish for the consumption of foolish, credulous and depressed people, had in it a touch of insanity."

There is a delightful description of the advertising campaign which was devised, "the romance of modern commerce," as Ponderevo called it—"Conquest. Province by province. Like rogues." And, very naturally, as the success grew and public applause followed, Ponderevo half came to believe in the child of his imagination. Mr. Wells apportions the responsibility very fairly; it is made clear that without a credulous, soft-headed public such a preposterous fake could never be put over. As the hero sums up the record at the end:

"It is, I see now that I have it all before me, a story of activity and urgency and sterility. I have called it 'Tono-Bungay'; but I had far better have called it 'Waste.' . . . I think of all the energy I have given to vain things. I think of my industrious scheming with my uncle, of his resonant, strenuous career. Ten thousand men have envied him and wished to live as he lived. It is all one spectacle of forces running to waste, of people who use and do not replace, the story of a country hectic with a wasting, aimless fever of trade and money-making and pleasure-seeking."

Written in 1903, "Tono-Bungay" contains an oddly accurate hint of the state of England's mind as lately revealed under tragic stress. And what is true of one public that is fooled by patent medicines can scarcely be less true of another. The craze indicates not only daring and imagination and unscrupulousness on the one side, but soft-headedness and folly on the other. America has quite as much to learn as England from "Tono-Bungay" and the life of Sir Joseph Becham.—New York Tribune.

Demosthenes and Venizelos.

Fortnightly.—Demosthenes' orations exhibit the almost desperate efforts of a man to strike some spark out of dead matter—to urge, exhort, goad, upbraid, entreat, or shame passively into some semblance of life. Venizelos has much the same task, for his lot, too, has fallen on unhappy times. To be a Greek citizen in the modern era is to be conscious of great humiliations. There has been no one quite like him in the Near East in his grasp of actual and possible conditions, and his far-sighted glance into the future—certainly no politician in Athens who has a title of his ability. The circumstances of the time have thrown up a statesman who seems formed in the ancient mould of an Aristides, formed in the ancient mould of an Aristides, a Pericles a Demosthenes.

FORT VAUX OCCUPIED.

PARIS, Nov. 3.

The French occupied Fort Vaux last evening, after waiting for the cessation of great explosions inside the fort, the war office reported to-day.

The fort was evacuated by the Germans yesterday, and passed again into the possession of the French without loss to them. The Germans gave up the fortress, the statement says, as a result of violent French bombardment and the gradual closing in of French troops. The re-entrance of the French into this position was not contested. The ring of Verdun fortifications is now re-established and is held firmly by the French. On the remainder of the front, the communication says, there were no happenings of importance.

BERLIN SAYS RUSSIAN TROOPS SUFFER SEVERE LOSSES.

BERLIN, Nov. 3.

The Russian troops charged seven times yesterday in an attempt to recapture the positions taken by the Germans on the Narayuvka, southeast of Lemberg. They suffered exceptionally severe losses, the war office says, and gained no successes.

ITALIAN WAR OFFICE REPORT.

She had no appetite, was lifeless and drowsy and her complexion grew pale and sallow. Finally she had to keep her bed and have somebody with her all the time. She was afraid of everything, would get excited and tremble till the bed would shake. As she seemed to be getting worse under the doctor's treatment, mother decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. After she had used about four boxes, improvement was noticeable and it was wonderful to see how much brighter and stronger she grew week by week. She used ten boxes altogether and they cured her. She got fat and rosy and went to school every day with an ambition that she never seemed to have before. I do not hesitate to recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to anyone, for it was indeed wonderful what it did for her."

BERLIN, Nov. 3.
A raid was made by German naval small craft on the shipping route between the mouth of the Thames and Holland on Wednesday night, the Admiralty announced to-day. Several steamers were stopped and searched, and two were brought into a German port. The raiders were fruitlessly shelled by four British cruisers while they were returning.

U-57 WILL ACT AS CONVOY.

NEW LONDON, Nov. 3.
The German armed submarine U-57, a sister ship of the U-53 which recently sank five vessels off the New England coast, is expected to act as convoy for the undersea freighter Deutschland, according to a statement made to-day by Capt. Paul Koenig. The Deutschland skipper added: "I wouldn't be surprised if an armored submarine appeared off this coast while I am in port. You can't tell what the government will do." In answer to questions he said he probably would make his homeward dash within the next ten days. He denied the report that he would go through the Cape Cod Canal, saying nothing was to be gained by this route.

GERMAN PAPERS NOT SURPRISED

LONDON, Nov. 3.
The German newspapers declare they are not surprised by the evacuation of Fort Vaux at Verdun, says a Reuter despatch from Amsterdam, as the intention to abandon it already had been communicated in advance to representatives of the press. They emphasized the German retirement as being purely voluntary and that the authorities no longer considered the fort worth retaining at the price of further sacrifices. The Berliner Tageblatt says: "The measure, of course, is not pleasant sentimentally, but militarily it is justified."

MUCH ADMIRER AND HONORED ENEMY

LONDON, Nov. 3.
A despatch to the Reuter Telegram Co. from Amsterdam quotes the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger as saying, a beautiful wreath for the casket of Capt. Boelke, the German aviator, killed recently, was given by British officers who are prisoners of war at Genbruck, and it bore a gold lettered inscription to that effect. The despatch adds, the telegram from the officers asking permission to present the wreath characterized Boelke as a much admired and honored enemy.

ENEMY TRENCH CAPTURED.

LONDON, Nov. 3.
British troops captured a German trench east of Gueudecourt, on the Somme front, last night and raided German trenches near Arras, says the British war office announcement to-day. The statement reads as follows: "Yesterday evening by a surprise attack we captured an enemy trench east of Gueudecourt and secured our position. During the night we also carried out a successful raid against enemy trenches near Arras."

THE CUBAN ELECTIONS.

HAVANA, Nov. 3.
The result of the Presidential election held throughout the Republic of Cuba on Wednesday, is still in doubt. Supporters of President Menocal, the Conservative candidate, for re-election running against Dr. Alfredo Zayas, the nominee of the Liberals, made claims to-day that President Menocal's re-election would be assured by the complete returns. Incomplete reports of the vote show the Conservatives leading in the provinces of Pinar Del Rio and Santa Clara. The Liberals are leading in Oriente Province, but the Conservatives claim the returns from 57 missing districts will give them a majority in that province. The carrying of these three provinces by the Conservatives would give President Menocal the victory.

Arrange To Build Channel Tunnel, Useful For War.

Would Cost Less Than Two Days' Expenses In Fighting.

Paris, Oct. 6.—(By Mail).—France has taken all the necessary steps to enter into negotiations with England to build jointly a tunnel under the English channel to connect the two countries, the long-talked-of project which the war has revived because it has demonstrated as nothing else could the value of the tube to both countries.

Had the tunnel been in existence during the present conflict it would have been of immeasurable value to England and France for the transportation of troops and supplies.

The plans were outlined by M. Sartiaux, chief engineer of the Nord Railway Company, who is one of the strongest advocates of the project. He said:

"The tunnel will cost 16,000,000 pounds half of which would be borne by England and half by France. Each country would bore half of the tunnel. Well, Britain is spending just now 6,000,000 pounds per day and France 4,000,000 pounds so that two days' war-time expenditure of both countries would more than cover the cost of making the tunnel."

"It is proposed to make two tunnels, one for traffic from France to England, another for traffic from England to France. Some people seem to think a cross-channel tunnel might be a danger, because it might fall into the hands of the enemy. To capture the French tunnel would not be an easy task. The mouth of the tunnel on French soil would be ten miles from the coast, and in order to reach it the enemy would have to capture Calais, and negotiate three intervening hills of an average height of 150 feet."

"The tunnel on the French side would begin its journey under sea at Sangatte. In my belief it would be impossible for an enemy to reach the mouth of the tunnel and get at the electric plant. The motive power could be instantly suppressed and the tunnel immediately rendered useless by filling it with poisonous gas."

"One can hardly exaggerate the services the tunnel would have rendered to England and France had it been in existence when hostilities broke out. During the twenty hours of daily use (for four hours must be deducted out of the twenty-four for upkeep and repairs, etc.) between 100 and 120 trains could have been sent in each direction."

"At 500 tons per train that represents 50,000 to 60,000 tons a day each way, much more than is necessary."

"Apart from the diminution in delay, risks, losses, and difficulties of every nature, the British fleet would have been liberated from one of the heaviest parts of its task and free to serve the cause of the Allies in other directions."

Express Passengers.

The following first class passengers are on the incoming express due this afternoon:

"Yes, John's Insurance Keeps Me in Comfort"

"He was a far-sighted man. Every time his salary was increased he would put a portion of it into life insurance."

"He used to say, 'A man cannot put his money into a safer place, Martha. And the more insurance I have the more my mind is at peace. I know if anything happens to me you will be able to live comfortably and without worry. The Mutual Life of Canada will send you a cheque every month. You will have no trouble about investing the insurance money. They will look after all that.'"

"And so you see, Mrs. Dann, I live comfortably, thanks to John's big hearted wisdom."

"Well, I wish my husband had had more insurance, Mrs. Wright. I have to work for my living, which is pretty hard at my age. I must keep on knitting day after day to try and make enough money to make ends meet."

Think it over, men. Figure out what your wife would do to keep up the home were you to be called away. Isn't the answer: More life insurance?

And preferably a Mutual Life Monthly Income Policy—because the Company relieves the widow of all financial worry. A cheque is delivered to her every month for 20 years, and should she outlive that time, for the remainder of her life.

Under these policies the assured also participates in the splendid profits earned by the Mutual Life of Canada.

This form of insurance is cheaper than when the claim is paid in one sum. The beneficiary also has the option of receiving the commuted value of the payments in one sum.

Write for further particulars. If you will send present age of yourself and wife (or other intended beneficiary) we will quote you rates, too.

THE DIMMER LAW.

The dimmer law is a thoughtful piece of legislation which requires every automobile owner to put window shades on his headlights and then leave them up all night. The object of the dimmer law is to enable people to drive automobiles at night without being struck speechless in both eyeballs. The dimmer itself is a small, retiring bulb which can be turned off and on without hurting anybody but the driver, who is not able to see whether he is in the turnpike or has strayed into an adjacent alfalfa field. One of the most blood-curdling moments in this monotonous existence is to throw on the dimmers in order to accommodate an approaching car with a driver who is too exhausted to return the compliment, and then edge soulfully into a ditch whose depths have never been sounded by the hoof of man or beast.

While it is generally conceded that the dimmer law is a step in the right direction, there is a growing suspicion that it does not go far enough. How much better it would have been to have attached a short, crisp amendment providing that drivers who fail to use their dimming apparatus shall be electrocuted from the hips up. As it is now, thousands of dimmers are never used for anything except roadside spouting purposes, instead of serving the noble object for which they were designed by a sapient legislature.

If the dimmer laws were observed by everybody who ventures out after dark it would not be necessary to haul off into six feet of ragweed in order to allow some human catapult to hurl himself into eternity at the next box culvert. It is a good law, but it is enforced in the same rigid and unsparring manner as the prohibitory amendment in Maine. And yet every winter the state legislature enacts a trunkful of new laws which we are all in favor of living up to until it comes our turn.

The best way to get around the dimmer law and avoid its noxious effects is to ride in the daytime and rest up at night.

Bell Island--a Denial

We are pleased to learn that there is no foundation in fact for the report, to which we referred yesterday, that a sale is contemplated of the Bell Island iron properties to an American corporation. Sir Edward Morris, whom we have interviewed on the matter, has emphatically stated that there is no truth in the rumours whatever, that the Companies that own the mines would not for a moment consider a proposal from an American concern, and that our own Government would not permit any such transfer in any case. We are very glad to have and to publish these assurances.

We have also been informed that a regrettable aspect of the matter is the wide publication that has been given these groundless rumours, and that they have even been cabled abroad in such a form as to reflect on the patriotism of the country. These things are separable and distinct. If messages of this nature have indeed been cabled abroad, the party or parties responsible should be traced and brought to book; there has been too much of this sort of thing already. Such rumours as have been circulated, however, we cannot condemn altogether, though they are certainly to be regretted, for they reflect a very healthy public spirit and they have had a good deal to excuse them. What is an indisputable fact is that certain parties, foreigners, have lately visited Bell Island and certain mining locations, presumably on business of their own. While that is their own concern, the connection of any foreign interest with any of our valuable mineral deposits is at such a time as this almost of necessity a matter of speculation and comment, which, if detrimental to any one concerned, could easily be satisfied by publication of the fullest particulars to which the public in general is entitled. We say this in justice to the many individuals who have interested themselves in the matter and to ourselves. Now that the rumours in question have been proved to be false, we are glad of any share we have had in the ascertainment and publication of that fact.

Rejected Recruits.

The large proportion of volunteers rejected recently as physically unfit is keenly disappointing. That out of a total of fifty only nine, or less than twenty per cent, should have been accepted is a little surprising. We are told that in very many cases the cause of rejection was the same, the physical defect of flat-foot. This, we believe, is one of the disqualifications which the British Army requirements allow few exceptions. It is a great pity, for it is generally allowed that in the case of our men it does not necessarily stand for a congenital defect and a real handicap, but it does in very many instances to the use of the flat and flexible skin boot. The Red Indian, we believe, is one of the most flat-footed of men, yet it has never been found to interfere with his walking powers, but rather to be the result of them. The matter would not be a serious one if the cases were not so frequent, and it must be a great disappointment to a man otherwise physically perfect and capable of covering miles of hard country without fatigue, to be turned down on the ground that the structure of his instep will impair his walking powers! Or is it the army boot that is the real culprit? It would be interesting to have expert medical opinion on the subject.

Another point suggested by these cases is as to the need of bringing more so long a distance who are at once rejected for an unfitness which is so fundamental and obvious. Could they not, where possible, be first examined by an outpost doctor, who would stand to the medical board here in the relation of the grand to the petty jury, and pass or reject them on broad grounds? If, to take another example, a candidate has very defective hearing, the local doctor might, we think, be empowered to reject him and entitle him to his rejection badge without his having to suffer the greater trouble and disappointment involved in a journey to St. John's and back again.

Tuesday's Grand Dance

Every effort is being made to ensure the success of the dance on Tuesday night next in aid of the Sailors' and Soldiers' Club. There are still some tickets available at Gray & Goodland's, but they should not be available long. An additional object, not generally so well known, is to give as many as possible of our gallant defenders, returned from the front or ready to go to it, a thoroughly good time. That this will be achieved is plain enough when we say that the affair is under the capable management of the Ladies' Committee of the Club. Full particulars will be found in our advertisement. Read it—and buy your tickets while they are to be bought!

Chinaman and His Assailant in Court

The man McMannus, who was out on bail, appeared in court to-day before Judge Hutchings, charged with assaulting a Chinaman Kong Wah and also charged with stealing $16.50, belonging to the said celestial. To the first charge the accused pleaded guilty and was fined $10 or 30 days and costs. The larceny charge was dismissed, there being no evidence to show that McMannus had taken the complainant's money. During the hearing of the assault the Chinaman in describing to the court what happened, said "the boy hit me hard in the face and made me lie down."

"Ponhook" Abandoned; Crew Safe.

Mr. George M. Barr received a message yesterday from an insurance company at London, stating that the schooner Ponhook, Capt. W. Doyle, had been abandoned at sea and that the crew were safe. Shortly after, Mr. Barr received a message from Captain Doyle at Ponta Delgada, Isle of Michaels, Azores, telling of the safe arrival of himself and crew and that the Ponhook was lost at sea. The ill-fated schooner loaded fish at Flat Islands, Labrador, and sailed from there on Oct. 16th for Gibraltar for orders, having on board 3,150 qts. of codfish, valued at about $30,000. The Ponhook was one of the largest of our foreign going vessels. She was built in 1909 by A. W. Hendry, of Liverpool, N.S., was 245 tons gross, 193 tons net, 116.3 feet long, 29.5 feet broad and 11.4 feet deep. She was only purchased by her owners about one year ago and will be greatly missed in the trade of the country.

BOY INJURED BY EXPLOSION.—About 3 p.m. yesterday a little chap named Snow, of Allendale Road, met with a painful accident through the explosion of a rifle cartridge that the child was playing with. It happened that the little fellow was in the act of removing a bullet from a brass cartridge and having half the lead extracted, child like tried to force out the remainder by hitting the cap with a stone, which caused the cartridge to explode. The remaining piece of the bullet penetrated his leg a few inches above the knee severing an artery and leaving an ugly wound. The parents telephoned all over the town for a doctor but with no avail, and securing a cab removed the patient to the hospital.

IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL OF GREEK VICTIM.

PIRAEUS, To-day. Four thousand workmen to-day followed to the cemetery the body of one man who perished when the Greek steamer Angheliki with 350 recruits for the Greek volunteer movement on board was sunk recently near Piraeus by a German submarine. The funeral was held by labor unions from the labor centre during the afternoon. The Entente Allied diplomatic corps sent a wreath for the casket. The French Admiral Du Fournet and the Military Attaches attended the service in full uniform. Detachments of French and British sailors and officers wearing mourning bands on their arms represented the Allied Fleet. The warships in the harbour half-masted flags during the funeral. The arrangements for the ceremony were supervised by the French Naval Secret Police Office. A Venizelist demonstration which had been expected did not take place. No disorder marked the funeral. The families of other victims of the disaster held private funerals during the day for the dead.

ITALIAN SUCCESSES CONTINUE.

ROME, To-day. In the zone from Gorizia to the Adriatic Sea the Italians have captured additional points of vantage from the Austrians and taken 5,498 more prisoners, guns and machine guns and quantities of arms and munitions, according to an official issued to-day.

IN MACEDONIA.

LONDON, To-day. A British official to-day with regard to the operations on the Macedonian front says: On the Doiran front there has been only artillery activity. On the Struma our troops ambushed some enemy patrols near Salmah and took prisoners. Bursak has been successfully bombed by our airmen.

THE GERMAN PLANS.

PARIS, To-day. Important conclusions are drawn from the evacuations of Fort Vaux northeast of Verdun by the Germans. The chief of these expressed the belief that the Germans are considering the west front as now of comparative secondary importance and intend to reduce their operations on the Verdun front to a minimum, and will direct their main energy to a successful campaign against the Roumanians.

The newly established ministry of munitions in Germany is regarded by the military observers there as a result of the Germans having experienced the superiority of the Entente Allies artillery ammunition along the Somme front.

WAR REVIEW.

LONDON, To-day. Violent fighting continues to mark the Austro-German attempts to penetrate the plain of Roumania south of Kronstadt and Hermannstadt towards Bucharest. The stiff defence of the Roumanians is yielding slowly to the blows of the Austro-German artillery and infantry about Predeal, and Berlin announces further progress south of the border for a time. East of Predeal, however, the Roumanians advancing in the Buzau Valley have driven the invaders back over the frontier in the region of Table Butz. They also have taken Mount Sirlul and Taturumio along the Transylvanian border southeast of Kronstadt. South of Hermannstadt in the region of the Rothen Thurm Pass the Austro-Germans have extended their lines and captured an additional 350 prisoners. West of Rothen Thurm and in the Prahova Valley the Roumanians are holding their ground. On the eastern front fighting has taken place east of Kovel in Volhynia and southeast of Lemberg in Galicia. Berlin announces the repulse of seven Russian attacks against the Austro-Germans' position on the left bank of the Narayuvka River near Hallez in Galicia, while Petrograd says the Russians occupied part of their trenches on the west bank of the Stokhad region of Kerslin in Volhynia. Near Lipnicadela in Galicia the Russians have pushed back the Austro-Hungarians in some places. There have been no heavy actions on the Somme front. The French have made slight gains at Sully and the British have taken a German trench east of Gueudecourt.

ON THE BRITISH FRONT.

LONDON, To-day. A war office communication issued last evening says: The enemy this afternoon delivered counter attacks against the trench east of Gueudecourt captured yesterday, but was completely repulsed. During the day our artillery trench mortars bombarded the enemy lines east of Farquissart and in the neighbourhood of Blairville. Yesterday in the course of aerial combats two enemy machines were destroyed.

FURTHER GAINS AT VERDUN.

PARIS, To-day. French forces in the region of Verdun have made additional gains near Fort Vaux, according to an official last night, which reads: On the bank of the Meuse after the capture of the Fort our infantry continued its advance to the outskirts of the village of Vaux and north of Vaux Lake. We gained footing on the crest dominating the village. The enemy did not attempt to counter attack. There is nothing of importance to report on the rest of the front except the usual artillery activity.

From Cape Race.

CAPE RACE, To-day. Wind S. E., strong, raining. S. S. Pro Paria passed in yesterday afternoon. A three-masted schooner was sighted at 9 a.m. to-day bound in. Bar. 29.16; ther. 52.

Train Notes.

The incoming express is due at 3 p.m. to-day. Thursday's outgoing express reached Port aux Basques at 10.25 p.m. yesterday. The local from Carbonar reached the city at 12.30 p.m. to-day.

The War Week by Week.

By OBSERVER.

Though much has happened during the week, the despatches have been zig-zagging with their details and have given us only general results. It is a little comforting to note that the position in Romania has taken a far more favourable turn, while in the West and on the Austro-Italian front the Allies have two brilliant victories to their credit. Read together, the three have a significance which is most encouraging.

By the evacuation of Fort Vaux before Verdun the Germans relinquish the last hold of importance upon the positions won in so long time at so terrible cost. Explain it as they will, the end of all this episode points a lesson which must be plain to the most obtuse German. They will characteristically twist it around to suit themselves and take comfort from the argument that their own failure to break through demonstrates the certainty of a like failure upon our part. Such an argument, unfortunately, loses sight of the difference between falling to burst through and actually ceding ground, and also of the reason why they did cede the ground in this instance. Not to labour a much-debated question, it is plain that if the French and British can take places of such importance as these and at such a low cost, and if they can do it often enough, whether the Germans give ground or actually allow their line to split apart will only be a question of degree. And these conditions are only too likely to be fulfilled as the waste, always in our favour, goes on.

On the Somme front slight advances for the British near Le Sars and for the French at Sully-Sailles are reported, but they are not extensive. They are countered somewhat, too, by a reported slight recovery by the Germans south of the Somme near La Maisonnette. Nothing of importance, really, has been happening, because the weather has precluded large operations. As soon as it improves another attack on a great scale by the Allied forces is not merely possible but probable.

After long apparent quiescence, the Italians have delivered another hard blow against the Austrian lines on the Gorizia front. The most important gains appear to have been made due east of Gorizia in the hilly region of Tivoli and San Marco, though an advance is also reported south near Vallone. It must be remembered that the Italians are now well established on the Carso high ground and fighting has there been for some time in the regular trench fashion. The taking therefore of nearly five thousand prisoners indicates a great victory. Apart from threatening to break the Austrian line and lay the way easily open to Trieste, this should further relieve the pressure in the Romanian theatres. Doubtless the gains made will be followed up vigorously and we shall hear more of this front before winter sets in. With the advent of spring and the fall of Trieste the Italian campaign will take on an importance far greater than that allowed it at present, equal in its possibilities to any other in the wide battle-line.

From the Russian front proper there is practically no news. Berlin claims a victory in Volhynia but like all the other reported engagements there it is probably an isolated one. A great Russian offensive has been predicted, but there are no signs of it at present. Undoubtedly they are engaged primarily in the effort, more important for the moment, of lending aid to the Rumanians. That they are doing so to good effect seems fairly certain.

A week ago the fate of Roumania looked almost desperate. On the one side, Mackensen's victorious troops in Dobruja had taken Constantza and Jeleznava and pressing on had got as far as Hirsova, where they threatened to make a crossing over the Danube. On the other, Falkenhayn had got command of nearly every pass on the Transylvanian border and at Kimpoling had advanced perilously near the vital railway line. To-day the prospect is much brighter. Nothing more has been heard of the Dobruja operations, except that the invaders are firmly held, while on the western front, though at the Rother Thurm Pass the Germans claim a victory, in the Szurdok Pass, the Jull Valley and the passes the Rumanians have not merely checked them but claim to be driving them back. It has many times been pointed out that complete success is almost a necessity to the Germans in this campaign, and the evidently increasing and more confident resistance of the Rumanians begins already to spell its failure. Doubtless Verdun and the Carso have not a little to do with the improved state of things.

Though there has undoubtedly been much hard fighting near Monastir, nothing very definite has been issued about it. The combined Allied forces are engaged with the enemy in the bend of the Tchernia River, as it is called, which crossed, no serious natural obstacles would present themselves before the town was reached. Greater activity than before has been manifested by the British on the Struma front, where they are drawing slowly but surely near the important railway line between Seres and Demitrisar. The latter place is a large centre on which extensive operations by the Bulgarians have been based. If the British can seize this line it is probably as much as they will attempt to do this year. It will put them in a strong position from which to move, when movement again becomes possible, either north or east, as the plan of campaign may demand. All the operations on the Macedonian front have the appearance of small and isolated actions, but their importance is far greater than it seems. The Greek trouble bids fair to settle itself by an open trial by force between Venizelos and the King, which might be the best way out of an impossible situation. Another episode that may well lead to something much larger was provided by the sinking of the British steamer Marina without warning and with the loss of several American lives. When the American election is over on Tuesday next and matters have settled down again we may look for developments in the situation which will be, to say the least, decidedly interesting. Few take seriously the prospect of war between America and Germany and yet few prospects are more easily possible of realisation.

Britain's Greatest War Waste.

Did The Globe "slander" Britain in printing and commenting upon the letter of a Canadian who has given three sons to the Empire's service, and who, discussing the greatest cause of war waste, said: "Canada, for efficiency in war, casts out the drink evil. Is it too much to expect Britain, in fairness, to do the same? Is it not a mockery for Britain to face in her frame? And yet she clings to this social vice of drink after her Allies and her Dominions have renounced it."

The letter and comment upon it aroused wide interest. Strong messages of commendation have been received concerning it, and even stronger messages of condemnation. The pressure upon space is too great to permit the publication of many of the dissenting communications, but a word as to their purport may not be out of place. The writers for the most part declare that the banishment of liquor during the war, or at any other time, is a question of British domestic politics, and that the expression of a desire on the part of Canadians who have themselves outlawed the liquor traffic as a war measure that the United Kingdom should do likewise is a gross impertinence.

Public opinion in this country will not be influenced greatly by this argument. Canada and the other overseas Dominions are equal partners with the motherland in the struggle against Prussianism. That which lessens the military efficiency of the United Kingdom is an injury not to the people of Great Britain alone, but to the cause of the Empire and of the Alliance. Canada has as valid a right in promoting the common good to ask that Great Britain cease to waste money and men by continuing the open saloon as the British Government has to "seize" the Rose rifle and much of the equipment of Canada's overseas force when the war material sent from the Dominion was found to be less suitable than that provided for the British Army.

Canada, it is true, is but a junior partner in the war, and has not yet supplied either as many men or as much money in proportion to her population as Great Britain; but she is a partner, and has a moral right to object to anything that may bring disaster to the Empire or to the Alliance. The real issue, therefore, is one of fact. Does the continuance of the liquor traffic in Great Britain materially lessen the national efficiency? Of that there is no doubt at all. Sir Alfred Booth of the Cunard Steamship Company, quoted in the former article, has shown conclusively that the cost of the food of the people of Great Britain has been increased enormously because millions of tons of food-stuffs have been diverted to the production of strong drink. Not less than 1,400,000 tons of imported materials were brought into the United Kingdom during the first twenty months of the war for the express purpose of liquor manufacture or in the form of liquor. The business-men who have handed themselves together under the title "The Strength of Britain Movement" to eliminate the war waste of the drink traffic, have issued an appeal to the people in these words:

"Alcohol wastes the workpeople's earnings—every day £500,000 flows into the public houses instead of into the National Savings Funds.
"It wastes the time of the temperate workman, and seriously reduces his efficiency when he is at work.
"It wastes the time of the steady, temperate workman, who often cannot get on because workmasters of his are away on the drink.
"It wastes the power of our navy by hindering the completion of war vessels of every grade and delaying urgent naval repairs.
"It wastes the strength of Britain by lowering marksmanship in the army and navy.
"It wastes huge quantities of food products, especially sugar, employed in its manufacture, and consequently forces up the price of food.
"It wastes labor badly needed for munitions, shipbuilding, mil-ling, etc."

Every count in this indictment—which is couched in terms of economics, not morals—can be proved to the hilt. The effect in the shipbuilding and munitions industries is a matter of public record. In a report to the First Lord of the Admiralty, the Captain-Superintendent of the Clyde District, after blaming drink as the cause of delay and bad work, states that he considers the "one thing needed to get the full output is to prohibit the sale of all spirits, and the sale of liquor by the bottle by public-houses, grocers, etc." In his opinion the "total prohibition of the sale of spirits would be the most effective act that could be taken at the present time to win the war." A similar story comes from another part of the Clyde, where the official report states: "We regret to say a number of men are losing a considerable amount of time, mostly, we are afraid, due to their drinking habits."
From the northeast coast comes the official report: "Whole gangs are thrown out owing to the absence of three or four hands. Short of martial law, the only thing is to stop the sale of spirits." Such statements are materially strengthened by the report of the shipbuilders' deputation to the Government, which was unanimous in urging that there should be total prohibition during the period of the war, as an emergency war measure, not only to public-houses, but to all licensed premises, so as to operate equally for all classes of the community.

In face of statements from responsible officials so serious as those presented above, The Globe is unable to accept the point of view of readers who assert that the drink question in Great Britain is an issue that does not concern Canada. The people of the Dominion are fully warranted by the facts in making a strong plea to their fellow-Britons of the homeland to "follow the King" and patriots of the Lloyd George and Kitchener type in declaring that the liquor traffic must not be permitted to stand in the way of the winning of the fight for freedom.—Toronto Globe.

Another Brave Boy.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—The quiet little village of Topsail is again called upon to mourn one of her bravest and best. Private Thomas Druken has sealed his service, he died of wounds in a far-off hospital, "Somewhere in France." Tom left with the 2nd Contingent. He fought at Gallipoli and France and in the glorious charge of July 1st and all through came out unscathed until the fatal October 12th our noble Tom paid the supreme sacrifice; he died that others might live—what nobler way could he lay down his bright young life? There is deep sorrow in the young hero's home to-day, but be it theirs to realize when the bitterness of the blow is passed that he has joined with that vast company of Britain's bravest manhood, that has demonstrated its fidelity to duty.

In his lonely grave in a far-off land he lies at rest and as was said of one who died a century ago: "It's little he'll reck if they'll let him sleep on in the grave where a Briton has laid him."
God rest his heroic soul to-day. A FRIEND OF THE SOLDIER BOY.

THE THOUGHTS OF THEOBALD.

THE APPEAL.

Enthusiasm is infectious. The will, the wish, the effort to get recruits will be in proportion to the strength of the will, the wish, the effort. What is needed is enthusiasm from all classes. These soldiers and sailors are fighting not only for their fellows in their own class of life but for all who are richer and all who are poorer than they are. The greatest impetus that can come to the recruiting movement can come by the unanimity of action of all classes, rich and poor, merchant and fisherman. In the volunteering, all classes are represented. In the Patriotic Funds all have given wonderfully well. But in the life of Water Street, to whose sustenance we all contribute, indeed to which our dollars are necessary, we cannot feel that there are many hearts which throb with the true patriotism that feels it cannot do enough for the Empire. Oh, blind—blind—not to see that all that cramps a man's life, that makes it hard for him to live on his salary, tends to dampen his enthusiasm for anything. What man is there in debt or struggling continually to keep out of debt, but feels his spirit crushed and his natural joy-of-life killed?

How shall we give these men new courage? How shall we share their burdens and by lifting some of the worry of present day existence, get a sight of a people who are at one, and all alive with the strengthening thought that the Flag of Britain waves over a people who feel that the principles of Right, Justice, and Truth are at work in their land?

This result must come. It will mean a revolution in the method of business. It will mean that a merchant's business will be to provide for a nation or a country, and that it will not be his object to make money out of his customers than a clergyman does his work for the sake of the salary he gets.

A merchant who acts thus sets him-

In TRAINING

Thousands of men suddenly called to undergo the hardships of winter training find the sustaining power of Oxo Cubes invaluable for supporting health and strength.

Oxo Cubes have a body-building power out of all proportion to their bulk. Many a young soldier, wet through, and physically exhausted by hours of marching or other duties, has had cause to bless the invention of Oxo Cubes.

Oxo Cubes are so convenient and handy that they can be carried on the person without adding to the weight of one's equipment. A cup of Oxo or an Oxo Cube sandwich enables one to go for long hours.

self nearer the standing of a soldier. We honor the soldier because he holds his life at the service of the Empire. This opinion is based on the fact that with all the pleasures of the world behind him, and only death and his duty in front of him, he will keep his face to the front, and he makes the choice daily and hourly. Is it too much to ask that the merchant will take his share of suffering in order that he may help those that Tommy has left behind him. Food prices are nearing a dangerous limit. Indications of a war-winter are many. For the sake of the Empire, for the sake of struggling families, for our Honour's sake, let the Government take a hand in while yet there is time. The warning I sounded some weeks ago is even endorsed by the 'Daily News' in an editorial on Friday, and it is considered conservative in its views.

FREIGHT RATES INCREASED.

On the top of the rising price of flour, which I am told is now $12.00 a barrel, comes the word that the Reid Co. have increased and in some cases have doubled their freight rates. To do this I understand they have had to get permission from the Government. This same Government gave the Reid Co. permission to raise the freight on flour last Spring by sixty cents or so. Is it possible that the Government have allowed this without a proper investigation of the necessity of these increases? And if the rumour that the "Prospero" and "Portia" are to be taken over for war purposes be true, are we not placed at the mercy of the Railway Company, whose passenger and freight rates are on an average twice as high as the Coastal Company's? It occurs to many minds that the existence of the clauses in the war risk Insurance policies which refer to "Riots, and Civil Commotions" may yet be justified. The best Insurance the Government can take is a direct interest in the workings of the trade of the Colony and in the daily life of the ordinary mortal who is fighting to make life worth living for himself and his family, a fight which is against big odds, and which leaves terrible scars, begets bitter thoughts and makes a man restless and revolutionary.

BELL ISLAND.

The War has brought the idea of the supremacy of the State, the Empire or the Nation, just as you like to call it. It calls for the renunciation not only of our lives but of our material possessions. If we had had more of this idea years ago, when Bell Island was undeveloped, and kept its riches for the benefit of Newfoundland instead of a few men, our public debt would have been reduced by many millions before this, and our finances would not hang so heavily on our shoulders as they do, and as they will do even more heavily in the years to come.

And now there is an opportunity of obtaining Bell Island for the Empire, if not for Newfoundland. The Government will surely do something to prevent its passing into the hands of an American Company which will be friendly only to the highest bidder for its ore. This is a matter of very great importance and if we have any power to interfere it should be exercised.

SILVER SHORTAGE.

The great inconvenience caused by the shortage of silver has been to some extent removed by one firm by the issue of their own script for fifty cents and one dollar. The resources of this firm are beyond question, and its script is as good as gold. At the same time it is a pity that the Government have allowed the shortage of silver to occur if many firms are going to put their script into circulation. The script of some firms would be extremely doubtful and this would cause suspicion of all paper, and create a situation which is not at all desirable in the city. Some not too scrupulous individual might get notes printed and passed into circulation on the chance that some of them might not turn up for months. I take it that the Government are moving in the matter.

"I GAVE MY LIFE FOR YOU!"

Purchaser.—What price is flour to-day?

Merchant.—Twelve dollars.

P.—Is not that very high? What did it cost you?

M.—Well, that is unusual information to give a customer. You see—

P.—Did it cost you eight dollars?

M.—Er—er—some of it.

P.—Don't you think four dollars rather an excessive profit on a barrel of flour?

M.—But you see I cannot replace it at the same figure.

P.—And isn't it time to put up the price when you have to pay more for flour?

M.—But if the market price goes down, I should have to lose, so I am justified in taking the "ups" when I can.

P.—Have you made any losses lately in this way?

M.—No, but—

P.—Haven't you been making more money since the war than before?

M.—Yes.

P.—Do you think, then, that in these days when the Empire is asking for volunteers to give their lives to fight the enemy, it is a time to exact such high profits?

M.—Oh—ah—well—of course business is business, you know.

P.—And yet you can think of the volunteer marching unafraid towards the enemy. Does he say "No—I won't go on. If I lose my life I cannot replace it"? Does he reckon the cost in blood as you do in dollars?

No! Look at the wonderful advance of July 1st. Then why should you, in safety here, put money consideration first? Why should you take every advantage to raise prices and not bother what it costs in deprivation to poor people, never think of the patriotism you quench and the flag you dishonour by acting contrary to the principle of unity, justice and fair play that it represents?

Merchant, when you are willing to die for your Country in using your goods to provide for the people, the last lap in the war will come, and a united people, co-operating, not competing, will conquer under a Flag that stands in our best thoughts for all that is free, righteous and honourable.

Your Boys and Girls.

It is an excellent rule to forbid the reading by your children of any story books outside the school course, except on Saturday and Sunday. The child who is fond of reading is apt to become so engrossed in a book that he will neglect exercise and study for the completion of the book.

But if a strict rule is made and enforced that no reading shall be done through the week except that which is necessary for lessons, the child will find time for fresh air and sleep.

No youngster's sleep should suffer for his lessons sake. Nine o'clock should be bed hour for all school children, with Friday and Saturday nights as the only possible exceptions.

The hours from the conclusion of supper to retiring time should be plenty in which to prepare lessons. Then, too, if the child comes in from play at five or half past, there should be an hour before supper in which to study.

The Day Eclipsed by Brit's Fleet.

London, Oct. 28.—"The day," long the toast of the followers of Von Tirpitz, twinkled on the horizon yesterday, but failed to dawn.
During the night ten torpedo boat destroyers of the Kaiser's fleet mobilized at Zeebrugge under the shadow of the huge Krupp guns that bristle along the Belgian coast. Through the Straits of Dover they dashed and into the English Channel, hitherto the hunting ground only of adventurous U-boats.

"Their mission was to sink some of the transports that carry Britain's troops to the battlefields in France.

"This raid, it seems, was Germany's reply to the French victory at Verdun, combined with the relentless British pressure on the Somme. It has been expected for a long time, and was the first effort to attack the British transport service. But despite the determination with which it was carried out, it failed in all it sought to achieve.

"No troops were lost on the transport and the crew of the destroyer sunk were saved. The only loss of life the British suffered was on the missing destroyer, and of her crew nine have been saved.

"In view of the attempt to-day, it is worth recalling that the British have not lost a single life since the war began in transporting troops across the Channel to France. Large numbers of men have been carried across for General Haig's armies, but all have arrived safely.

"And the failure of the German effort is a tribute to the watchfulness of the British Navy during the foggy nights, the cycle of which has now begun. J. L. Garvin asked recently whether Britain was ready to throw back such a German attack. The answer was given to-day, and has been welcomed joyfully."

Don't Neglect Your Cough.

A little cold may not seem a dangerous thing—you may feel inclined to let it go on hoping that to-morrow it will be better—but can you afford to take chances? Just as the little insignificant acorn grows if left alone, to the mighty giant oak, that cough if not stopped may grow to a very serious illness. When a Cough starts there's no telling where it will end. You know no doubt, of cases right among people you have known, where serious complications and fatal illness have had their start from a neglected cough or cold. "Don't neglect your cough." Stafford's Phorotone Cough and Cold Cure is what you should take. For sale at Stafford's Drug Store, Theatre Hill, and Stafford's Pharmacy, Duckworth Street. Price 25c., postage 5c. extra.

Solution to Ireland is Nearer Now.

T. P. O'Connor Thinks Irish Struggle Will End Soon—All Are Anxious for Settlement—Liverpool Irish Contributing Good Share of Troops to War.

London, Oct. 21.—John Redmond's debate on the Irish situation in the House of Commons excited more interest than perhaps anything that has occurred in Parliament since the beginning of the war. Mr. Redmond's speech was held, restrained in tone and packed full of facts dispassionately narrated. It was listened to with respectful silence, with few interruptions from the Conservatives. There was an occasional cheer from the Liberal and Labour benches.

The most remarkable proof of the success of Redmond's indictment was the division it brought about in the Commons, which forty-seven Liberals and Laborites voted with Redmond against the Ministry. The big vote of 106 for Redmond was the largest minority yet recorded since the opening of the war against the Ministry.

The Liberal papers back Redmond's case; even so pronounced and faithful a supporter of Liberalism and Mr. Asquith as the Daily News charges the Premier with want of courage of decision in his treatment of the whole Irish question, especially blaming him for his yielding to Lord Lansdowne and other Conservative leaders who broke down the Lloyd George settlement at the eleventh hour.

The most important question of the immediate future, the Home Rule situation, still remains unchanged, yet there are some things that clearly evolve from the debate. First, a majority of the Liberals and all of the Laborites are in favor of putting the Home Rule Act into immediate operation. Second, the Liberal and most of the Conservative members of the Cabinet are ready and anxious to make a second attempt to find a solution of the Home Rule question.

On this point Lloyd George's speech was especially noteworthy. He first promised an entire amendment of the treatment of the Irish regiments and a second point, remarkable from so pronounced an advocate of conscription, was his declaration that England must postpone any thought of conscription in Ireland until Irish opinion was improved by concessions to Irish national sentiment. Third, he made a fervent appeal to all parties in England and Ireland to co-operate in another attempt to make an agreement which would make immediate Home Rule possible.

Much Work Before.

Never have I seen the House of Commons listen with more rapt silence to a speech, as to the simple, eloquent and deeply moved words of Lloyd George in making the appeal. It must be confessed that until the Sinn Fein prisoners now confined in detention camps are released, until the treatment of men now undergoing penal servitude, already somewhat mitigated, is entirely transformed, and early and complete amnesty promised; and until the fiercely expressed opinion of Ireland is further appeased, no renewal of the attempt at settlement of the Home Rule question has much chance of success.

But with the return of the Irish people to their old faith in the Constitutional movement of the Irish party, with strong pressure on the Ministry and a practically unanimous opinion in Parliament favoring an early settlement, there is good ground for hoping that we may see the end of the long struggle before many months, certainly before the end of the war.

The sea-divided Gael, as the Irish orator is in the habit of saying, represents the fact that there is not one, but many Irelands beside the Ireland within the Irish seas. There is an Ireland in the United States; there is an Ireland in the British Dominions of Australia and Canada, and there is another Ireland, of which perhaps not so much is heard—the Ireland in Great Britain. Yet that latter section of the Irish race may well demand some attention. It now amounts to nearly two and a half millions of people.

Let me give my recent experiences of a visit to Liverpool—which is really the capital of Irish nationality in Great Britain—as some indication of what Ireland thinks and feels about the war.

Everybody knows my position; I took it on the first day of the war; I have adhered to it without a moment's hesitation or doubt ever since. To me it has always been, it is, and it will be, a war between civilization and savagery, between Christian and Pagan ideals, between democracy and despotism, between liberty and slavery.

But one might well doubt whether the rank and file of the Irish in Liverpool might not have undergone the same process of disintegration as has come unfortunately on the Irish at home. The ties between Liverpool and Ireland are very close, not merely because a fourth, if not close upon a third, of the entire population of Liverpool is Irish, but because the trade relations between Liverpool and Ireland are so close and intimate that the two cities are in constant inter-communication and intercommunion.

Irish cattle are brought out every week by Irish salesmen; Irish provisions land by every Irish boat; and the distance between the city and Liverpool is so brief and can be done by such excellent boats, that there is a constant going and coming of all the sections of Irishmen for pleasure, for vacation, for visiting friends apart altogether from the close and large commercial ties. It was impossible, therefore to tell beforehand, whether some of the virus of Sinn Feinism and other popular lunacies in Ireland should not have spread to the Irish in Liverpool in these topsy-turvy times.

It would be perhaps an exaggeration to say that there isn't a Sinn Feiner in Liverpool; there are a few; indeed, it is reported that some of the number left Liverpool to take part in the recent rebellion; but they are so few that really it requires some investigation to find them out. At the beginning of the war, perhaps the half hundred or so who adhere to the new doctrine of revolt from the constitutional movement, sought to interrupt the meetings which were held throughout Liverpool by the leaders of our organization, the United Irish League there. But they were confronted quite openly and boldly wherever they appeared.

The Irish in Liverpool are fortunate in having been able to organize their forces with great success. The Liverpool municipality is the only one in Great Britain where there is a distinct Irish party—fifteen in number—with their own chairman, their own secretary, even their own whips, and of course, their own caucus.

The Royal Liverpool regiment has had an Irish battalion for two generations, and during this war it has found innumerable recruits, not only in Liverpool but throughout Lancashire, Lancashire indeed has given proportionately more Irish soldiers to the Army than any other community in the country, with the possible exception of the Irishmen in and about Glasgow, another great centre.

Sunk Religious Differences.

The men and women whom I saw addressing had giving their sons to the war; many of them had lost them. There was a great ceremony at the pro-Cathedral for the souls of the dead soldiers of the Irish battalions. It is significant of the change of the best of the English spirit towards Ireland that the Lord Mayor—himself a stout Protestant and representative of the most Protestant, not to say the most Orange city in England—attended in his robes of office; and he was accompanied by members of the Municipality—including some Orange Tories, even a Jewish member.

They listened with that strange tranquility of Englishmen under criticism, which is always a marvel to those who don't know them, to very very candid criticism of their religion; and to quite a lively survey of English Protestantism under the inspiration of Germans—"from Luther to the Kaiser"—as Father Bernard Vaughan succinctly put it in a speech the next day to an equally mixed audience of Protestant and Catholic English and Irish.

But if I want to recount the thing which impressed me most as to the real feeling of the Irish in Liverpool—I must mention my visit to the schools and the college of St. Francis Xavier, the great Jesuit institution to which so many boys and girls of Irish parentage owe their education.

"How many of you have relatives in the army?" asked Father Parry, the Rector—"a father, an uncle or a brother?" Three-fourths of them held up their hands.

"How many of you have lost a relative in the war?" A third of them held up their hands.

"Do any of you want Germany to win?"

"No, no, no," the denial was rendered the more striking and pathetic because it came in the tremble tones of childhood.

Such, then, is that Ireland which dwells in Liverpool. What German gold may have succeeded in doing elsewhere—what revolutionary insanity may have effected in people elsewhere—what the brutal and cruel methods of suppression adopted after the Rebellion may have succeeded in diverting Irish minds from the larger issues of this perfect accuracy that the Irish in Great Britain remain steadfast to the position which they adopted unanimously at the beginning of the war.

They are like Lloyd George—they want a fight to the finish and the triumph of those principles of the independence of small nations, the principle of Nationality of freedom and of democracy.

Burned to Death at Port Williams.

Old Man and Two Children Lose Their Lives in Fire Last Night and Woman Not Expected to Live.

Port Williams, Oct. 31.—A terrible tragedy has come upon this little village. An old resident and two of his grandchildren were burned to death last night before midnight, a woman is not expected to live and her husband and two other children are seriously burned.

About eleven o'clock last night Harley Isonor, whose home was opposite the Port Williams Baptist Church, awoke to find the house filled with smoke. He hurriedly aroused his wife, rushing to an adjoining room they seized two of the children and managed to get through the flames to the outside yard. In the meantime Mr. Isonor's father, a man of nearly eighty years of age, and two of the Isonor children, a boy of six and a little girl of eight, who were sleeping below stairs, perished in the fire. Mr. Isonor and his wife were so badly burned it was with difficulty neighbors were aroused. It is now feared that Mrs. Isonor will not live so severe are the burns she received.

The origin of the fire is a mystery. It evidently started near the ground, and before Mr. Isonor was awakened the lower portion of the house was nearly destroyed. The old gentleman who lost his life was partially paralyzed and completely helpless.

When Rheumatism It Kills--

Effect of Nerviline on Rheumatism is Almost Magic.

Exposure to wet or cold may bring on an attack. The muscles stiffen, the joints are stiff, exertion brings on excruciating pain.

Often the pain shifts from one joint to another, and this is dangerous, for the heart is apt to be attacked as a rule follows a heart attack.

The pain of rheumatism is rubbed away with Nerviline. This is a swift, lasting cure to cure rheumatism. You can't get Nerviline. It has the power of penetrating force, the cure of pain that is so essential to the remedy. Lots of testimony to the cure. Mr. Lilly's certainty to cure.

Have YOU Tried Gin Pills?

Pain is a warning you must not neglect. Don't say "Oh, it will go off again in a day or two." A pain in the back, or in the sides, means the kidneys are out of order, demanding instant attention, or complications will follow—Rheumatism, Sciatica or kindred ills. Constant headaches point to another need for Gin Pills, which have proved of inestimable value in regulating the bowels as well as the kidneys and the bladder.

WHAT THE UNITED STATES, GERMAN, AND ITALIAN PAPERS SAY ABOUT MR. LLOYD GEORGE'S STATEMENTS.

Mr. Lloyd George's determined warning to neutrals and his affirmation of our determination to defeat Germany has brought out in a remarkable way the world's confirming opinion that Germany is doomed to suffer one of the greatest defeats in history as the result of one of the greatest national crimes.

See how the world approves of Britain's decision. See how furious is Germany as she realises the disaster which she has brought on her own head and for which she now blames Britain.

"Mr. Lloyd George's stern reminder comes as a veritable bugle-blast of freedom," says the Montreal Herald. "The Germans' day of judgment is now dawning, and those who attempt to prevent execution of that judgment are traitors to mankind."

UNITED STATES IMPRESSED.

"The interview with Mr. Lloyd George has created the greatest impression in the United States of England's determination to pursue the war to its appointed end," says the New York correspondent of the Daily News. "The greatest display was given to the interview by the newspapers throughout the whole country. It was the most prominent feature of the day, and in this city the Sun and Mail, and the World printed it on the front page with eight-column headlines. The other papers were not far behind these in displaying the interview."

"The United Press telegraphed it to President Wilson at his holiday house at Ashbury Park. The President and Colonel House, Mr. Wilson's former envoy to the various European capitals, who was with him at the same time, read the interview with the greatest interest."

"I understand that the War Minister's words have confirmed President Wilson's opinion that it is useless to intervene or attempt to offer his good services, and incidentally the interview strengthens the President's position, enabling him the better to resist the constant attacks of the hyphenates and well-disposed would-be peacemakers who persistently demand that he proffer his services for peace."

"A deep impression has been made here by the widespread publication of the statement made by Mr. Lloyd George to the United Press correspondent, in which the reason why we cannot consider peace was lucidly explained," says the Times Washington correspondent. "By our friends the declaration is regarded as timely. It will help the President to withstand the new German peace campaign."

"Mr. Lloyd George's statement has quite dispelled the illusion fostered by the German-printed papers here that 'everybody is praying for the United States to take a hand in stopping this stupid war,'" says the Telegraph's New York correspondent.

THE ANGRY HYPHEN.

"The unpatriotic Staats Zeitung—the New York German paper—reveals without any attempt at concealment how bitter is German-American disappointment at the British War Minister's notice to the world to keep their hands off. The Staats Zeitung says: 'We are to accept the words of the British Secretary for War as an ultimatum to the country to close its lips to all peace suggestions at a moment when half the supposedly civilised world is creating upon the European Continent a wilderness, whose population, supposing the war can be indefinitely continued, must become one of withered manhood.'

"We are at a loss to see the unneutrality of calling both parties to a green baize council table in order that Europe and the world may be spared the ultimate horrors of a war fought to a knock-out."

"We have certain interests, too, concerned with the termination of the conflict. We, too, do not want the ghastliness of this war ever re-enacted upon the earth, and to that end may it not be the duty of this country, as among neutral nations must piousness, to voice the sentiments of peace?"

"Germany regards England as her most dangerous enemy," says the Brooklyn Eagle. "She is right. English money has largely financed the war activities of France and Russia, to say nothing of the small Powers. English ships have closed the German ports, kept the seas open to Allied commerce, including military supplies, and moved armed men by the million to the battle fronts. England has sacrificed the flower of her manhood and millions of treasure in a war which her diplomacy labored desperately to avert in the closing days of July and the first days of August, 1914."

NO NEUTRAL WOULD VENTURE.

"President Wilson, by his moral failure to be honestly pro-anything, even pro-American, as the Lusitania affair testifies, has earned the dislike and distrust of ardent pro-Americans, pro-Germans, and pro-Allies in equal degree," says the New York Evening Sun. "He would lose nothing, therefore, by a desperate attempt to better his candidature by a peace Note to Great Britain. Whether he contemplated such a resort or not we shall never know. Mr. Lloyd George, by awakening speculation as to such a possibility, has killed the possibility."

New York Sun: "With the third winter of the war approaching, Mr. Lloyd George says robustly that the fight must be to a finish. The Allies with superiority in effectives and at the very least equality in resources, would not be likely to consider any modification, however liberal, of the German terms of February, 1915. In the circumstances no neutral would venture to tender its good offices to restore peace."

INTERFERENCE ONLY BY INVITATION.

"The occasion for the British War Secretary's warning is not exactly clear, as forced intervention would be out of harmony with the duly declared policy of this nation at the outset of the war," says the New York World (Mr. Wilson's chief supporter.)

"The United States has not had and does not now have any thought of interfering except as its good offices are invited on behalf of peace by the chief belligerents with rational proposals promising the permanency of peace."

"Mr. Lloyd George has always been a hard hitter, and his vigour of utterance does not fall him when he expresses resentment at talk of peace before Germany is thoroughly beaten," says the Philadelphia Ledger. "Mr. Lloyd George makes it only too plain that the President's desire to play the role of harmonizer has provoked suspicion not gratitude."

"He who is not for us is against us—that is the easily understood attitude of the Allies. 'Strict neutrality' in the face of the issues in which the principles of human freedom is involved does not appeal to them as to those who roll 'he has kept us out of the war' as a sweet morsel under their tongues."

THRUST OF BRITISH PURPOSE.

"The grim determination of Great Britain to make no half-hearted use of its new-found strength could have had no better exponent than the stout-hearted Welshman who is now the British War Secretary," says the New York Evening World. "If Thiepval and Cambes needed any commentary, Mr. Lloyd George furnished it."

"All the push and thrust of British purpose, confident at last after long months of lying low and getting ready, can be felt in the vigorous phrases of the War Minister."

"Such a spirit perhaps sufficiently excuses the impatience and resentment with which the War Secretary treats the suggestion of a peace move from neutral quarters."

SOME GERMAN OPINIONS.

The Kolnische Volkszeitung fastens on Mr. Lloyd George's remark about neutrals who now whine because Germany is getting hurt, whereas they shed no tears when British troops bore the brunt of German superiority, and declares that it knows of no such neutrals. "Unfortunately," it says, "we have for a long time been obliged to face the fact that outside our own allies there are very few in the whole wide world who would not be delighted to see Germany's defeat."

"There is something frivolously satanic in this seeking, openly and formally as a sport, the murder of a highly-cultivated nation of seventy millions. Let it be so. It is bitter, but wholesome, to know this truth. It is a question of life or death for the nation. Therefore the solution must be war against England, war with all means. Our equipment at sea is going on well, and our brave bluejackets are burning to gain fresh laurels."

"Germany has neither decided to fight to a finish nor did she desire to fight at all," the Frankfurter Zeitung says. "Germany would have been really glad if her neighbors had left her in peace to pursue the peaceful kultur work, but she had to draw the sword because Russia and her ally, France, supported by Great Britain, left no other possibility but humiliation or war. Mr. Lloyd George's assertion is particularly audacious, because he, like all Europe, knows perfectly well how very much German statesmen tried to avoid war with Great Britain and to facilitate her neutrality."

"Germany will fight to the end, with all her strength, and all confidence."

Girls! Girls! Try It! Stop Dandruff and Beautify Your Hair

Hair stops falling out and gets thick, wavy, strong and beautiful.

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a "Danderine hair cleanse." Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This cleanses the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

Besides beautifying the hair at once, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any druggist or toilet counter, and just try it.

The Munitions Crisis in France.

(Morning Chronicle.)

France, as well as other nations of the Entente Alliance, had her troubles with munitions, in the first year of the war. The curtain has recently been lifted by M. Robert Pinot, who is Secretary of the Committee of French Ironmasters. In a lecture before the School of Political Science he discloses how acute the crisis was, and incidentally furnishes additional evidence that France, as Britain was unprepared for, and hence, did not desire war. On the 17th of September, 1914, General Joffre told M. Millerand, the Minister of War, that the army had practically exhausted its reserve of shells for the 75's. The daily production at that time was 13,500.

General Joffre demanded that it should be immediately increased to 100,000. French industry was utterly disorganized. On the day of mobilization, all the metal workers of military age, all the engineers, all the heads of establishments left their work to join the colors. The works were left with terribly depleted staffs, and were completely thrown out of gear by the loss of their heads; so much so that in certain districts far from the war zone the factories could not be kept going and the furnaces were blown out. Even the arsenals lost much of their staffs and had to reduce output.

Then came the invasion and the occupation of the industrial regions of the north and east. A German authority in January, 1915, estimated that the invasion had paralyzed the defence of France. The output of the iron mines was reduced by 90 per cent. To make matters even worse, only the armament works had the special hydraulic presses for making the 75 shells.

How France solved her problem is perhaps less interesting than another inquiry. It is fairly plain, as the Manchester Guardian thinks, that "the French General Staff made a grave error when it mobilized the munition workers and when it made provision for only a small reserve of shells. The root of this mistake lay in its whole conception of the war of the future. Orthodox military thought in France held that the war would be short. It would be decided by a big battle, or perhaps a few big battles, in which on the French side (and presumably on the German also) only the army reserves would take part. That is the thesis which Jaures attacked in his 'New Army.' Events have fully justified his criticisms and his forecasts. Even in this world of experts there is still room for the man of genius."

When Rheumatism Strikes the Heart It Kills—"Nerviline" the Cure.

Effect of Nerviline on Chronic Cases Is Almost Magical.

Exposure to wet or cold is apt to bring on an attack. The muscles stiffen, the joints swell, and exertion brings on excruciating twinges.

Often the pain shifts from one part to another, and this is dangerous, as the heart is apt to be attacked. Death as a rule follows a heart attack.

The pain of rheumatism is quickly rubbed away with Nerviline. This is a swift, lasting and safe way to cure rheumatism. You can depend on Nerviline. It has the power, the penetrating force, the control over pain that is so essential to a rheumatic remedy.

Lots of testimony to prove Nerviline's certainty to cure.

The following letter is from Mr. E. G. Sautter, Port of Spain, Trinidad: "Last year I was severely troubled with rheumatism. I had it in my arms, shoulders and knees. The pain was at times excruciating, and laid me up so that I couldn't work. I went to Smith Brothers' Drug Store and was advised by the manager to use 'Nerviline.' That was excellent advice. I used Nerviline as directed and was cured, completely cured of every trace of my old enemy."

Once you use Nerviline you'll realize it's different from all the others—that it contains something that gets right "at" the pain the minute you rub it on. The large 50 cent family size is the most economical—get it today, or else the 25 cent trial size. Sold by dealers everywhere.

JU-JITSU! Self-Defence!

(Edited by W. Bruce Sutherland, Specialist in Ju-Jitsu.)

Ju-Jitsu is the general name for a system of physical training which was practised in Japan over two thousand years ago. There are certain points of the body where pressure or a slight blow is sufficient to paralyze a nerve centre or even cause death. A knowledge of such facts and how the different holds can be applied are shown in this book. It describes and illustrates over 250 locks, holds, throws, counters and grips, which can be readily learned and easily practised. 120 pages with about 100 illustrations.
