CHAPTER XVII
 FERAL.

"Master Cyril can tell you all about it, for he spends a rare sight of his time there; he'll take 'ee there and show it 'ee—Margery, give the gentleman some more tea. Where be 'ee eyes, lass?"

They were gazing alternately at Eliot and Cyril; and Margery was so absorbed in her contemplation of them that she started, and knocked over a tea-cup. Both Eliot and Nora put out a hand to save it, with the inevitable result. The tea was spilt. Eliot looked at Nora's hand fixedly; it was, alas! too small for a boy's but it had got very brown and somewhat rough by exposure to the strong Lonaway wind, and her occasional amateur work in the quarry; so he looked away again, doubt and perplexity in his eyes. Fortunately for Nora, Hodges monopolised the conversation, and she was not obliged to speak again until the supper had been finished.

"Now, do 'ee light your pipe, Mr. Graham," said Hodges heartily. "I can see some good tobacco," he added, with a laugh and a wink; for smugling, in a small way, is not quite extinct, at Lonaway at any rate.

Eliot filled his pipe, lit it, and went to the door, saying to Nora as he did so:

"I suppose you know every part of the island?"

"Oh, yes," she said, also going to the door, and leaning against the side, with her hands thrust in her pockets. She looked so like a boy that even her father might have been deceived; but her face was still uneasy, still tormented by doubt.

"You said you didn't know Bye-Gibby?" he remarked, as casually as could.

Nora shrugged her shoulders; she was afraid of committing herself; and waited for something further.

"I thought you might have known or heard of some of the people near there," said Eliot. "For instance, did you ever hear of the Ryalls, an old family there?"

The moment had come, and it brought with it an idea which flashed across Nora's mind with the rapidity of lightning.

"Oh, yes," she said, quite easily, "they are a kind of connection of mine."

Eliot uttered an exclamation. "That accounts for it!" he said.

"Account for what?" asked Nora indifferently.

"Why, for your likeness to them," he explained. "You are the very image of Nor—Miss Ryall."

"Am I? I hope she's good-looking," retorted Nora impudently.

Eliot made no response, and was silent for a time; then he said, very quietly—

"Have you heard anything about her?"

"Yes," he said, smoking hard. "She's going to be married. She's in London—no, abroad, by this time. I was up in London lately, and heard of it. That's why I asked."

Nora promptly seized on the opportunity.

"I fancy I did hear something about it," she said, with an assumption of indifference. "Yes, I remember. What's the unfortunate man's name?"

"I don't know," said Eliot. "I didn't hear. He's a rich man, I believe—they say so."

"Luck for her," remarked Nora. "Well, I hope they'll be happy. I've never seen her, so I'm not very much interested. They are only distant connections of mine; she's a sort of cousin, I suppose."

"You might be brother and sister by the likeness," remarked Eliot, "only that you are shorter than she is." He did not know that even a tall girl will look short in male clothing. "You have got the same eyes," he scanned Nora's face, and she held her breath and struggled with the rising colour; "the same mouth, the same coloured hair—only hers is longer, of course."

When Choosing the Material for a washable Frock for the growing child—

MOTHER naturally thinks of the possibilities of the fabric shrinking in the wash. It is therefore a relief to her to know that the fabric will not shrink or lose its charm if Lux is used for its cleansing.

Durability, charm of colour, quality of texture, the freshness of newness—these are preserved to all good fabrics washed with Lux. A packet of Lux—a bowl of warm water—and dainty hands can cleanse delightful fabrics in a delightfully easy manner.

The beautiful pure Lux flakes are whisked into a creamy, bubbly lather in an instant. Gently squeeze this cleansing foam through and through the soiled texture—then rinse in clean water and hang to dry. Lux cannot harm a silken thread. It coaxes rather than forces the dirt from the clothes.

Packets (two sizes) may be obtained everywhere.

and strangely enough, your voice is like hers, only gruffer."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed Nora, with a laugh. "I hope she really is good-looking!"

"She's the prettiest, most beautiful girl I have ever seen," said Eliot; and he turned away his head, and therefore did not see the flush which suffused Nora's face.

"Do you care for a stroll?" he asked presently. "I got rather cramped in the boat. By the way," he added, as they walked down the path, "Captain Marks sent all sorts of kind messages to you. You seem to have got the right side of him, my boy. He was talking about you nearly all the way across."

"He's a good sort, is the Captain," remarked Nora. "I shall get him to take me for a cruise, with him."

"What are you doing on the island?" inquired Eliot. To her immense relief he had fallen into the tone of a man addressing a lad much younger than himself.

"Oh, just fooling about," she said. "I'm waiting for Hodges and Shuffley—that's the man who runs the quarry—to make up their minds to pay their rents."

"Shuffley? That's the man at whose place I am to find a bed while I am here," said Eliot. "You might show me the way."

"All right," assented Nora, with a sense of relief; she would be relieved of the night, at least. "How long are you going to stay here?"

"I don't know," replied Eliot. "Until I'm called back," some weeks, at any rate. I've thrown up my situation at Bysworthy."

"Oh, what did you do there?" asked Nora.

"Managed Sir Joseph Ferrand's stud," replied Eliot. "Did you ever hear of him?"

"Don't remember; may have," said Nora, with a yawn. "Take care how you go; it's dark, and it's rather steep here."

Eliot laughed, and laid his hand on her shoulder. "Thank you, my boy," he said, "one would think I were a fine lady you'd been told to look after."

Nora trembled a little at the touch of his hand, and stepped from under it.

"You don't know the place, and I do," she said impatiently. "There's Shuffley's hut, just below us."

"Right!" said Eliot. "I think I'll go straight down and turn in. Say good-night to the Hodges for me, will you? Very nice people. The girl is rather pretty, too," he added, casually and indifferently enough; but Nora shot a sharp glance at him, and her dark brows came together, as was their wont when she was annoyed.

"Do you think so?" she said. "Can't say I admire your taste. Don't fancy girls with eyes like saucers and hair like tow."

"Eh?" said Eliot, his attention arrested by the sharpness of her tone. "I thought she had rather good eyes; and her hair isn't a bit like tow; more like gold. But I scarcely noticed her."

"You seemed to have noticed her pretty closely," retorted Nora shortly. "That's your way down there. Good-night!"

Eliot stopped and held out his hand; Nora tried to ignore it, but the affection would have been futile. She put out her hand, which was completely absorbed by his.

"You've got a paw like a girl's," he remarked; "yes, it's more like a girl's than a boy's."

Nora snatched her hand away, and crimsoned with what he thought was anger.

"And you've got cheek enough for two boys," she said sharply.

He laughed good-temperedly as she turned away abruptly, and he went down the steep path. She stopped after a minute or two, and looked down at the reading figure. At first her face was darkened by a frown, caused by his praise of Margery; then the frown cleared away, and a smile took its place, and she murmured—

"The prettiest, most beautiful girl I have ever seen!"

Strange inconsistency of the feminine nature! The pleasure she derived from that little speech of Eliot's effaced for the moment the peril in which she stood, the risk of discovery which still hung over her.

She went back to the farm slowly. As she entered they were discussing Eliot, for whom she said good-night, and Hodges was evidently very much struck by the new-comer.

When Nora came down next morning she was a little nervous; for she knew that she was not yet out of the wood, and that she would have to be on her guard lest a chance word should betray her. Early as she was, Eliot had been at the farm some time, and was in the garden talking to Margery, who stood listening shyly, softly beating her lips with a rose. The little action somehow annoyed Nora, and she almost pushed past them, with a curt good-morning in answer to Margery's gentle greeting and Eliot's brief nod.

She did not come in to breakfast until the others had finished, and Hodges informed her that Eliot had gone down to the quarry and would be glad if Cyril would follow him, as he wanted to talk to him.

"Oh, did he?" said Nora, with a toss of her chin. "I was not aware that Mr. Graham was my master, or that I am at his disposal. As it happens, I have something else to do this morning."

But she went down to the quarry.

Eliot was there with Shuffley, and had taken off his coat and was bearing a hand with a huge boulder. Nora sat on the edge of the cutting, and pulled idly at a tuft of grass as she looked on. Presently Eliot caught sight of her and called out—

"Hi, youngster, come down here!"

Nora flushed, and pretended not to hear him, and he repeated the command in a tone calculated to awaken the dead.

"Thanks; I'm very comfortable here," she called back.

"Come down, you lazy young beggar!" shouted Eliot good-temperedly. "I want you to give us a hand here."

"Not for me, thank you," said Nora. "I've been there before. I know what lending a hand with that granite means; besides, it's too hot."

Eliot shrugged his shoulders, laughed, and went on with his work, and Nora lounged in an obtrusively indolent attitude, and watched them. Presently she heard a footstep; and up came Miss Margery with a can and a basket. Nora rose at once.

"Thank you, Margery," she said amiably. "So kind of you to bring some lunch!"

"It's for Mr. Graham as well," said the ingenious Margery, with her eyes downcast.

"Of course," said Nora pleasantly. "I'm going down; I'll take it to him. Don't you wait. I know you are busy. And I saw a cow in the cornfield." Oh, Nora!

Margery went off to drive away the imaginary cow, and Nora descended, with the basket and the can.

"Oh, you've come now there's something to eat," remarked Eliot, eyeing Nora with the good nature of a giant.

"You don't seem to be too fond of work, Cyril!"

"That can't be so," said Shuffley. "Master Cyril often comes and takes a turn with us. I don't know what ails 'un this morning!"

Nora said nothing, but distributed the food, and sat eating her share in contemplative silence. Shuffley and Eliot fell to again directly after lunch; but Nora held aloof, and presently she rose, and was going up to the level, but Eliot called to her to wait for a minute or two, so she sat down half-way up and waited. He flung himself down beside her, extending his long limbs after the strain, and breathing a sigh of satisfaction.

"Is there any more granite on the island?" he asked.

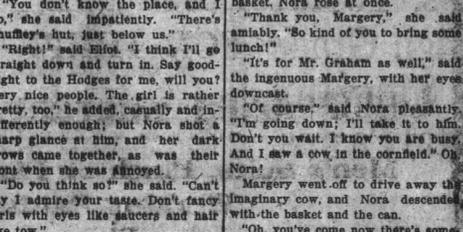

"It's all granite, I should think," replied Nora indifferently.

"By George!" he murmured. "I don't know very much about it, but it seems to me that the owner has got a fortune in this place."

"Oh?" said Nora, as indifferently as before.

"Yes. The thing only wants working properly. At present they are only getting out odd bits here and there, and working in the most primitive fashion. I've seen some quarries worked in Australia; they have steam drills, all sorts of machinery, like cranes; and they might have the same sort of thing here."

Britain Has Another Serious Industrial Situation.

Cotton Trade Wage Negotiations Collapse--English Scientist Predicts Plenty of Sunshine--Turks Massacre Christians--Streets Strewed With Dead.

SCIENTIST'S COMFORTING PROPHECY.
LONDON, June 3. Recent solar eruptions may result in the early receiving an increased amount of sunshine during the remainder of the year, says Sir Oliver Lodge. He declares it probable that the moon soon will be strengthened, and in consequence the Indian harvest will be improved. He even ventured the opinion that electrified particles driven off by the sun may assist vegetation and reduce the amount of frost suspended in atmosphere.

LADY GOLF CHAMPION.
TURNBERRY, June 3. Miss Cecil Leitch retained her title as champion woman golfer of Great Britain to-day by defeating Miss Joyce Wetherell, runner up, in the British ladies' open golf tournament here.

COAL PROPOSALS REJECTED.
LONDON, June 3. The Executive body of the striking coal miners to-day finally rejected the Government proposals for a settlement of the coal strike.

MORE MURDERS OF POLICE.
DUBLIN, June 3. Four constables were killed and five wounded in an ambush by two hundred civilians, at ten o'clock this morning in Kylesbeg Cross, County Tipperary, says an official statement issued here to-day.

PEACE BY VOTES.
WASHINGTON, June 3. The House Foreign Affairs Committee, with Democratic members dissenting, voted to-day to report the earlier resolution for the termination of a state of war between the United States and Germany and Austria-Hungary.

PAPER STRIKE SETTLED.
GREEN BAY, Wl., June 3. The strike of 500 employees of the Northern Paper Mills here, which was settled at a conference of mill officials and union representatives, last night, was announced to-day.

THE UNSPEAKABLE TRK.
LONDON, June 3. The Athens correspondent of the "Telegraph" says, under date of Thursday, "It is reported from Constantinople that new frightful massacres of Christians have occurred in Trébizonde, on the Black Sea Coast of Armenia. The streets are strewn with the bodies of Greeks, he adds."

AN EX-RUSSIAN ENTENTE.
HELSINGFORS, June 3. Finland will shortly receive representatives of Finland, Latvia, and Lithuania to a conference in Warsaw to discuss the question of an Entente of all States which formerly belonged to the Russian Empire, according to information obtained here to-day. Preparations for this conference have been made, it is said.

AN ASSASSIN'S PLEA.
BERLIN, June 3. Walden, in his defence, asserted that his mother, who was murdered in 1915 during the massacres of Armenia, had appeared to him in a vision and expected him to kill Talat Pasha in revenge for the massacre of one hundred thousand Armenians.

ARTICLE X.
LONDON, June 3. On proposal of Arthur Balfour, presiding over a meeting of the League of Nations Committee on Mandates, Article X of the covenant was recommended to be referred to a committee of jurists, to obtain a definition of what relationship exists to the rest of the covenant.

THE FATAL IRE.
BOSTON, June 3. The body of a fisherman picked up last night on the High Land Light, was identified to-night as that of George Brown of East Boston. He was separated from his ship's crew when he was on Friday, May 28.

UNEMPLOYMENT IN U. K.
LONDON, June 3. Another very serious industrial situation has arisen by reason of the collapse of the Cotton Trade Wage negotiations to-day. A similar dispute involving the Engineering Trades, and simultaneous additions to the ranks of the unemployed are proving a heavy drain on State resources. At present the Government is paying unemployment benefits to 2,000,000 persons at a cost of £1,000,000 weekly. As the income of the State Unemployment Fund is only £600,000 weekly, and all accumulated funds, together with £10,000,000 advanced to the Treasury, are nearly exhausted, it is stated the Government intends to continue payment on the present scale for only another month. It is understood, the scheme will be modified, increasing the rates of contribution and reducing the benefit payments.

LORD BYNG AS VICEROY.
LONDON, June 3. The appointment of General Lord Byng of Devonshire as viceroy of India to-day, General Lord Byng is the youngest son of the late Earl of Strathmore. Lady Byng is the daughter of the late Lord of Strathmore. Her husband, the late Lord Byng, was the first Baron of Byng in 1819, his title connecting him with the famous battle of the Vimy Ridge, where he commanded the Canadians. After Vimy he was promoted to the command of the third British Army.

VETERANS PLEASED.
TORONTO, June 3. Officers and men of the Canadian Expeditionary Force are delighted with the appointment of General Lord Byng as the next Governor-General of Canada.

Resident Physician.
The people of the Southern Shore, from Bay Bulls to Tor's Cove have just acquired what they have long been desirous of, that is a resident physician in the person of Dr. W. M. Wheelan. Dr. Wheelan is a graduate of the Baltimore Medical College, and comes to his sphere of activities with the best recommendations of his numerous friends of the West Coast and Searston, where he practiced for eight years, and where he and his estimable lady endeared themselves to all. From his headquarters at Bay Bulls, he will attend to the north section of Ferryland district, and perhaps, to Petty Harbor. We wish the good doctor many, many years of success in his new home, and hope that he will make as many and as dear friends there as he has left in Searston and its neighboring hamlets in the district of St. George's.

Clove Trees Scented.
Ninety per cent of the world's supply of cloves comes from two tiny islands off the coast of Africa--Zanzibar and Pemba. Native of the tropics, the clove takes unto itself some of the intense heat of the boiling sun. To pass through a clove plantation in the harvest is to experience one of the most fascinating sights on earth. The high trees--some of them nearly forty feet, and closely resembling the olive perfume bottles, disguised in leaves. The air is saturated, with the delicious scent and for many days afterward your clothes carry the seductive aroma.

Legislative Council.
FRIDAY, June 3. The Legislative Council met at 4 p.m.

The Loan Bill was introduced by the Leader of the Government and passed through all its stages without comment, except that the Hon. John Anderson took occasion to congratulate the Government on getting the money which he hoped may have the effect of establishing confidence in the country.

Shortly after the passing, His Excellency Sir C. Alexander Harris arrived, and the members of the House of Assembly being summoned to the Council Chamber, the Bill was assented to by His Excellency.

The Act is cited as "The Consolidated Loan Act, 1921." The amount of the Loan is for $ million dollars, raised by the issue and sale of securities dated the first day of June, nineteen hundred and twenty-one bearing interest at a rate not exceeding six and one half per cent, per annum from the first day of June, nineteen hundred and twenty-one payable half-yearly on the thirtieth day of June and the thirty-first day of December in each year, the first payment of interest to be made on the thirty-first day of December, nineteen hundred and twenty-one, which loan and securities with the interest thereon shall be chargeable upon and repayable out of the funds of the Colony in the manner hereinafter provided on or before the thirtieth day of June, nineteen hundred and thirty-six.

The purposes for which the said sum can be expended are:
(1) Public works throughout the Colony.
(2) Municipal works in the city of St. John's.
(3) The repayment of moneys paid out of the Surplus Trust Account for naval and military purposes.
(4) The repayment of the bank loan raised for the purpose of the Railway Loan Act, 1920.
(5) The improvement of the Newfoundland Railway.
(6) The general purposes of the Colony.

The obligations represented by securities of the Colony issued in accordance with this Act and all payments in discharge thereof, shall be exempt from all present and future taxes imposed by the Legislature including any Newfoundland Income Tax, and the payment of the interest and the principal thereof shall be made in time of war as well as of peace.

The session adjourned at 5 p.m. until Tuesday next, without further business being transacted.

The conventionalized floral wreath is a pretty evening address.

Family of Eleven Go Mad After Experiments.

From the little-known village of Knechtshofen, Southern Bavaria, comes an amazing story of a whole family of eleven members becoming insane as the result of spiritualistic experiments. For some time past, a builder named Bleck, with his wife and five daughters, have been accustomed to holding a sort of seance at which four young children were also present. Apparently under the belief that they had received from the "spirits" instructions to destroy all material substances in the house they began burning the furniture, including the beds. Then they smashed all the crockery. Neighbors found them preparing to kill the three-month-old infant of one of the daughters, the father stating that he was going to offer it as a burnt sacrifice to the "spirit of pure light." A doctor having declared that the family were suffering from religious mania, all the eleven members were taken under police escort to a sanatorium at Kaufbeuren.

Fads and Fashions.

The well-dressed man carries a colored handkerchief to match his shirt. The envelope pocketbook of faille or moire is embroidered with steel beads. The flannel middie worn with a guimpe and a narrow belt is much in vogue. A sports skirt of heavy white silk crepe has inserts of openwork in blue. The harem veil is being worn. Maille is used to well lower part of face. Smart coats have long flowing sleeves with deep, turn-back cuffs.

A feature talked of for fall is the tunic front with shoulder to hem panel at the back. Fall top coats of English worsted have cape sleeves, shawl collars and narrow fabric belts. Golf knickers are seen at the fashionable resorts. They are generally made of plaid, tweed or knitted wool. A costume which is extremely popular is the black crepe frock and coat with borders formed of ends of georgette ribbon.

A popular trimming is the pendant ornament in pin or other forms. A model of crepe coquette is trimmed with inset bands of Georgette. A sports skirt of heavy white silk crepe has inserts of openwork in blue. The harem veil is being worn. Maille is used to well lower part of face. Smart coats have long flowing sleeves with deep, turn-back cuffs.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

SHELL FACTORY FIRED.

DUBLIN, June 3. The National Shell Factory, which was established during the war for manufacturing ammunition, was set on fire this evening, but the outbreak was eventually overcome. A quantity of stores was destroyed.

NO COMPROMISE.

LONDON, June 3. The Executive body of striking coal miners to-day finally rejected a Government proposal for the settlement of the coal strike. Lloyd George at a Conference Saturday last, with mine owners and Executive body of miners, handed them proposals for a temporary arrangement, intended to lead to a permanent scheme for the solution of the coal strike. These temporary proposals provided for a gradual scaling down of wages, until they should reach an economic level, which the coal industry was capable of sustaining, based on a grant of 10,000,000 pounds from the Exchequer, and the surrender by owners of standard profits for three months, in districts in which Government assistance might be required. Lloyd George indicated at the time that the grant would not be given until arrangements for continuing the agreement had been arrived at by the contending parties.

ANOTHER DEADLOCK.

LONDON, June 3. Another deadlock seems to have been reached in the coal dispute with the notification given by the miners Executive, to Premier Lloyd George to-day, that various mining districts have rejected Government proposals for a settlement. Almost at the same time, mine owners communicated to the Government a statement of their position, again steadfastly refusing to agree either to a national pool or to a national settlement of wages, but making some minor concessions such as the creation of Conciliation Boards, with a neutral chairman, whose decision would be final for settling a standard wage and the ratio of wages to profits. This standard wage would provide the basis for settling disputes of wages. It is understood that the miners Executive is preparing for the convocation of a National Delegates Conference in London the coming week, with a view to obtaining a new mandate for negotiations.

ACQUITTED.

BERLIN, June 3. Salomon Teitlian, the Armenian student who in March last, shot and killed a Turkish official, was acquitted in the Assize Court here to-day.

MORE PERES.

LONDON, June 3. Earl Curzon, Foreign Minister, has been created a Marquis in the King's Birthday honours list, published to-day. Lord Birkenhead, Lord Chancellor, is made a Viscount. H. J. Dalziel, who recently resigned from the Commons, Sir Alwynn Fellows, former Minister of Agriculture, and Sir Marcus Samuel, formerly head of shell oil group, are raised to the peerage.

CADETS ON TRIAL.

DUBLIN, June 3. Eighteen auxiliary cadets, charged with looting in Antrim on February nine, whose trial opened here Saturday last, were acquitted by the court martial hearing the trial to-day. Four of the men are still held, however, for trial in connection with charges arising from a subsequent raid.

NOT MUCH IMPROVEMENT.

WINNIPEG, June 3. There is not much change from last week in the wholesale trade throughout Canada, according to a weekly review of trade conditions, issued by Credit Men's Trust Association. Some improvement in retail trade is announced.

MURDERLIST.

DUBLIN, June 3. While a cricket match was in progress on Trinity College grounds this evening, six pistol shots were fired from Nassau Street, which strikes the grounds. Miss Katherine Wright, a spectator, was shot in the breast and killed.

FRUSTRATED BY POLICE.

BELFAST, June 3. An attempted jail delivery this evening was frustrated by the quick arrival of police. Members of Sinn Fein, disguised as officers, drove to the jail and demanded the keys.

AMBUSHERS KILLED.

CORSE, June 3. At Ballyhoery, County Donegal, yesterday, a party, believed to comprise half a dozen men, fired on police in a motor car. Two ambushers were killed when police returned the fire. A youth with his neck broken was found in the ruins of a bridge across the river Swanekill, demolished by explosives.

INDUSTRIAL TIE-UP.

MANCHESTER, June 3. Virtually half a million operatives in the spinning and weaving sections of cotton mills will cease work to-morrow, owing to the fact that it has been impossible to arrive at an agreement with cotton spinners and manufacturers association over a proposed reduction of thirty per cent in wages.

BRITISH REINFORCING.

OPPEL, June 4. Fighting between Germans and Poles continues in vicinity of Schmissow, about five miles northwest of Gross Strahlitz. The British are gradually reinforcing their troops in the plehiscie area, bringing in fresh soldiers and many tanks.

WILY GERMAN.

PARIS, June 4. Pen-Germans are trying to organize in Eastern Hungary, a movement favorable to fusion with Germany, says a despatch from Budapest to the Hungarian agency here.

BITTEN TO DEATH.

ATTOWITZ, Silesia, June 4. Draconic steps have been taken by leaders of the Polish insurgents near this city, to prevent plundering. Firing squads are busy every morning, and several times recently, six men have been executed at the same time, for various reasons. In spite of this severe discipline, Poles continue riot.

ing. A young German was captured near this city yesterday, and bitten to death by Poles. The food situation in the industrial district near here is serious. The Poles assert that they will not fire on the British, and do not intend to fight the Allies, but declare they will not surrender their guns unless the Germans disarm first.

LOYAL TO KING.

ATHENS, June 4. King Constantine was given an enthusiastic ovation by the people of this city yesterday, when he went to the Cathedral to attend services in commemoration with the celebration of his name day. All Greek provinces sent despatches to the King, expressing their felicitations, and expressing their loyalty to him.

A LITTLE ENTENTE.

PARIS, June 4. Take Jonescu, Minister without portfolio, to the Rumanian cabinet, will arrive in Belgrade to-day for the purpose of negotiating a treaty of alliance between Rumania and Jugoslavia, says the Echo de Paris. Jugoslavia has already concluded such a treaty with Czechoslovakia, and the impending negotiations, if successful, will result, the newspaper declares, in the definite formation of a "little entente."

"Nude" Paintings Ripped Up.

A millionaire's taste in art, which caused a complete blocking of the pavement on one side of Fifth Avenue, New York, for several days recently, led to proceedings in the police court, in which the Society for the Suppression of Vice figured as complainant. The defendant, an art dealer named Vanbrink, told the court that he placed on view in the windows of his shop a collection of pictures which he had purchased from the executors of the late Guy Phelps Dodge, trustee magnate. Mr. Dodge, said Vanbrink, had a great enthusiasm for the beauties of the female form, and had amassed Europe for pictures portraying it under various conditions. He admitted the passers-by had developed an enthusiasm for the pictures which was not accorded to others he usually exhibited in his windows, but he denied the society's suggestion of indecency. The case was ended by the strong hand of one of the society's vigilance agents ripping up the canvases in open court by direction of the magistrate.

Deserved to Be.

(From London Tit-Bits.)

He was an enthusiastic Scot, and he was arguing with an Englishman over the merits of their respective countries. Military prowess, brilliance in invention, engineering, travel and employment-building had all been passed in review, and the Scot had won hands down. Eventually the Englishman sought refuge in literature.

"Well, take literature," interrupted the Scot, "there's Robbie Burns, Walter Scott, Stevenson, Hugh Miller, Barrie—that's just mentionin' a few at random—'s Scots."

"Yes, yes, but wait a bit," protested the Englishman. "There is one greater than all these put together—William Shakespeare. You wouldn't suggest he was a Scotsman, would you?"

"Well," thoughtfully responded the Scot, "I would precisely see that. But the man's intelligence was almost warrant the inference."

The Danger of the Rat.

The rat carries bubonic plague. This, however, is by no means the only activity which classifies him as an undesirable. He also spreads trichinosis, certain varieties of tape-worm, infectious jaundice and "rat bite fever." He has been accused of causing attacks of food poisoning, and of transmitting ring worm to the horse. He is, moreover, one of the most persistent destroyers of property known to man and there is not a single useful task which he performs to justify his existence.

Search back into the dawn of recorded history, and it will be found there is no one known to man which has not waged against the rat. Twenty centuries before Christ, the cat, which is the rat's great enemy, was a domestic animal in Egypt. The hand of the Pharaohs was the granary of the world, and the cat was the protector of the grain against the depredations of rodents. The cat-goddess Bast was a powerful deity, and temples and sacrifices were consecrated to her and to the animal which she represented. The members of an Egyptian family in whose house a cat died were required to shave their eyebrows; and anyone who killed a cat was regarded as a murderer, and was put to death. The Book of Samuel mentions the prophetic offerings which were ordered against plague as "five golden images of the ephraim (Hemorrhoids) and five golden images of the mice (rats) that marred the land."

Later the Greeks and the Romans regenerated the animals which protected them against rats. They had martens and snakes especially trained for ratting purposes. The Indian mongoose was and is greatly appreciated as a destroyer of rodents. Throughout the Middle Ages laws were passed for the protection of cats.

The two most common species of rat are the brown and the black. While it is often held that the black one is the carrier of plague, it is interesting to note that it was this same black rat which was said to have been first known to Europe, and that it was the brown one coming in from Asia, which virtually exterminated it.

Brown is combined with tan in crepe de chine heads.

Cordovan and brown have replaced gray in hosiery.

A Treatise on Drink.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—Apart from the two or three pleasures with which "Moderate" a correspondent replying to my letter of Wednesday, indulges himself, the fundamental difference in the two letters is one of opinion. His states a view without adducing any proofs, while I do likewise. Therefore with both of us it is simply a statement of opinion. My opinion is that the majority of those who signed the petition for moderation of the Prohibition act, and indeed a majority of the country, would vote for total abolition of liquor, and for the same reason that they signed the petition. "Moderate" thinks that such would not happen. Thus we differ.

Now, I attempted to analyze the psychology of those who signed the moderation petition. I stated, first, that they were mostly men who had voted for Prohibition, but had since been disillusioned by the application of the principle. Supporting the principle of prohibition, most of them because it was a moral matter, they were sickened and disgusted over the way that principle was applied. For example, there was discrimination in the supplying of liquor. The only qualification needed by a man wanting liquor was that he have sufficient money, or that he have the necessary social distinction. It progressed slowly, and in its early stages, painlessly. The gums become soft and bleed easily, then they grow sore and become inflamed. Pus forms at the roots of the teeth and they loosen in their sockets. When the disease reaches this stage it usually extraction is the only remedy.

Alcohol creates its own thirst. That is to say, when a man has drunk one glassful, he wants to drink another because the first one has given him the appetite for it. Then he wants to drink three, and so on till he is drunk. One drunk makes him want to get drunk again, and so on. The more he drinks the more he wants to get drunk. It is the same in the smoking of opium. The more one wants to smoke it, until eventually it gets to such a pass that the individual has no more chance against the opium than a snowball has in an oven. Even so it is with alcohol—and for the same reason, it is a narcotic, the fundamental difference in the two cases being that of alcohol only. Alcohol is bad for the same reason that opium is.

Therefore, the presence of one glassful of alcohol is an insistent incentive to possess another. Therefore, if you are going to cut out drunkenness you have to cut out liquor. While there is liquor there is going to be drunkenness. Society should stand for drunkenness no more than it should stand for arson or murder. The three of them are fundamentally the same; the difference is one of degree of horror and heathenry. Anything which conduces to the development of the finer, the nobler, the aesthetic senses of man, and tends to make him a more civilized creature, stands justified. Anything which conduces to the development of the lower instincts, the brute, the beast that is in each of us, that tends, I say, to the subjugation of the finer feelings and the elevation of the barbaric, savage, stonage instincts, stands condemned. Development of sensuousness over sensuality is the ideal of civilization—in civilization. Therefore, alcohol, which represents the elevation of the flesh over the spirit, which represents enthronement of sensuality and the debasement of sensuousness, is bad, is unjustifiable, and should be ruthlessly crushed.

Anything that is unsocial is immoral. Drink is unsocial, because it makes an individual a less desirable member of society. Therefore it makes him unsocial. Therefore he is immoral. Therefore the thing which makes him immoral is itself immoral. Anything which is immoral should be eliminated. Killing, war, and generally the taking of life, are immoral, because they are unsocial. Government, religion, education, love, art, music, literature, are moral—because they are social, and tend to the civilizing of society. Alcohol should be classed with killing, wife-beating, child-murder, and other criminal pastimes. As a matter of fact, they are nearly synonymous.

In Canada, the other day, they had a referendum over the subject of liquor, and a majority of the provinces voted for total abolition. I think the day will come when all Canada will be bone-dry. Newfoundland must be made bone-dry.

Yours sincerely,
J. R. SMALLWOOD.

ENCOURAGE HOME INDUSTRIES.

The cry "Encourage Home Industries" is one which every political party in Newfoundland has made use of since the establishment of the first manufacturing concern in St. John's...

Memoranda submitted to the House of Assembly by Mr. Bennett, from the Colonial Cordage Company, Limited, which gives figures of comparison on the cost of manufacture of lines and other fishing material.

Particulars of cost of manufacture of one dozen fishing lines, together with the duties payable by this Company.

Table with 2 columns: Item, Amount. Includes Paper, Burlap, Labor, Mill supplies, Overhead expen.

The above figures show a penalty to the extent of 2 1/2% on the local-made article in its own country, whereas the foreign-made comes in free of all duty.

1st.—Duties collectable under the new tariff if the industry continues, estimated above. 2nd.—Indirect gain of revenue on amount paid for a flat, viz. 45c. at an average duty of 8%.

Or roughly 25c. for every dozen lines made in the country. The average output of this Company exceeds 30,000 dozen per annum.

THE COLONIAL CORDAGE CO., LTD. MEMORANDUM. The local manufacture gives employment to many Newfoundlanders, the imported article gives none.

MAYOR MAKES STATEMENT. In reference to the statement made by the Municipal Council that they would close down all Relief Works today, we are informed by Mr. Mayor that the amount of $50,000 which had been allocated by the Council for the purpose, had been over expended and the Council had absolutely declined to expend any further amounts for Relief Works.

COUNCIL NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR RELIEF WORKS. In reference to the statement made by the Municipal Council that they would close down all Relief Works today, we are informed by Mr. Mayor that the amount of $50,000 which had been allocated by the Council for the purpose, had been over expended and the Council had absolutely declined to expend any further amounts for Relief Works.

Prohibition is the Law of the Land.

Dear Sir—In the discussions taking place over Prohibition, the fact that Prohibition is the law of this country seems to be completely lost sight of. Whatever may be our opinion for or against it, it is the law and every reasonable citizen must obey the law. One may choose not to obey a certain law, then another man may choose not to obey some other law. If one law is brought into effect by its non-enforcement, respect for all other laws is lessened, and that is why lies anarchy. This law is unique in that it was enacted by the Legislature after the people had demanded it by a larger vote than the Government of the day had received in the General Election. This law is on the wrong "tack." Having committed the enactment of the act to the vote of the people, the Legislature must commit the revocation of the act to a similar vote. Until that is done, Mr. Smith and his friends as good as abiding citizens must demand the strict enforcement of the law and assist in every way. And if these gentlemen of the Moderation Committee, who are out for more booze for the people, are sincere in their belief that what they want, is to have the lid come down tight on that wide open saloon on Duckworth Street. Then let them get the Legislature to repeal the matter to a vote and they will have the pleasure of seeing Prohibition voted down to defeat their votes were counted. Mr. Smith and his friends might be wiser if sadder men. They might find that signing one's name to a paper and voting are slightly different acts in the eyes of the Legislature. It is not the signature that prohibition was not so dead as they imagine it is. The Legislature of 1917 did not make this law in the saloon where the vets of a big dry continent could "booze to their hearts content." The lid had been stamped down tighter than ever. For centuries law-makers and law-enforcers have been trying to regulate the traffic in intoxicating liquors. It is not in moderation, and everywhere the story is the same—"failure." These gentlemen are asking the Legislature to repeal the Prohibition Law and to enact another law which would compel the Government to go to the Boozing Business and compel saloons which under the Local Option Law voted the saloon out, to have a larger saloon in their midst. It is as if they would regulate the sale so that a man could not well get drunk more than once a week. This is not moderation with a vengeance. Unless these gentlemen have shut their eyes to the teaching of the past they must know that you cannot regulate this business. Have we not got in our very midst? No sooner was the act put upon our Statute books than some citizens began speaking in moderation, and began to break the law. The Government of the day, if they did not encourage it, committed a terrible mistake. It is not the respectable citizens who would respect the law, but the law-breakers, who are the trouble. Let me make my meaning plain. The buying or selling of intoxicating liquors as a beverage is against the law. The man who does either, or who assists those who do either, is a law breaker. His conduct is subversive of all law and order in the community, and is a blow at the very foundations of the Church as well as the State. But that is true of the individual citizen, what will be said when those who have been exalted to the high dignity of rulers of the people become law-breakers? Criticism has been freely leveled against the medical profession for its failure to handle the script problem, but the breakdown of the medical profession, measurable as it is, is a small matter compared to the breakdown of the Government and legislature. There have been happenings in our midst of late which must be giving sober thoughts to Church leaders and thoughtful citizens of all classes. But the most disquieting thing of all is the spectacle of a Government openly flouting its own laws and openly engaging in the liquor business. In the moral sphere St. James tells us that he who is guilty of an offence against one law is guilty of an offence against all law. In this matter of obeying or not obeying the laws of the country we are in the moral sphere. And when speaking of this obedience to law the Apostle Paul says we must needs "be subject—ye conscience make." No wonder the moral fibre of the community is being weakened down, not only in regard to the Prohibition Law, but in regard to all law, human and divine. But, Mr. Editor, where is the moral fibre of a Government that is openly a law-breaker or a Legislature which openly acquiesces? Yours faithfully, T. B. DARBY, June 3, 1921.

Wedding Bells. SHANO-PURCELL. The Rev. W. F. Miller officiated at the marriage on Thursday evening, June 3rd, 1921, at St. Philip's Church, Purcell's Cove, of Evelyn, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Purcell of Purcell's Cove, to Mr. William Henry Shano, No. 2 Co., R.O.G.A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Shano of St. John's Newfoundland. The bride, who was given in marriage by Mr. Richard Purcell, was dressed in brown silk, with a hat to match and carried a white prayer book. The witness being Mrs. Arthur Fraser, R.O.G.A., and Mr. Arthur Fraser, R.O.G.A., as groomsmen. The church, which was beautifully decorated with potted plants and flowers, was crowded to the doors from far and near to witness the ceremony. The organist and choir being in attendance rendered the wedding march. After the ceremony the relatives and friends retired to the home of the bride where a beautiful repast was served. Mr. and Mrs. Shano, who will reside in Purcell's Cove, have the best wishes of all who know them. Ed. Mrs. Stewart's Home—made Bread—April 18, 1921.

W.M.S. in Session at Carbonear.

The Branch sessions continued Thursday morning at 10.30 o'clock. Workers' Conference opened with a message from the President which directed our thoughts to the lessons taught by the lowly, their beauty, purity and fragrance. The beautiful thoughts conveyed in that message we know will remain with us throughout the year. Mrs. Storey then presented greetings from Mrs. (Dr.) Curtis, our Honorary President; also from the Honorary President of the Carbonear St. Auxiliary, Mrs. Canning, who although having passed the age of four-score years, shows her deep interest in the Missionary work. Mrs. Storey then welcomed to the branch Mrs. Snowden, Miss G. Martin and Mrs. A. W. Martin. A talk on the right and wrong methods of filling in reports, by Miss Parsons, was very helpful. Delegates were also reminded of the many things contained in the blue book and the benefits of a larger circulation of missionary literature. The afternoon service opened at 3 o'clock. Devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. John Maddock, and Scripture lessons by Mrs. K. Barnes was followed by a most earnest, inspiring address on the great love of God to man, and prayer by Mrs. Parkins. We were then favored with a duet by Miss Gertrude Penney and Miss Jennie Guy, most beautifully rendered. Reports followed. The Literature department report was read by Mrs. Peters in the absence of the Secretary, Mrs. Currie. Report from the Strangers' department by Mrs. Joyce, and Christian Stewardship, by Mrs. Parkins. A rather unusual break in the regular routine of branch work, was the unveiling in bonds of holy matrimony by the Rev. A. V. Robb, of Mr. John Soper and Miss Marion Kelloway. The Wedding March was played by Mrs. John Duff. The bride was honored by having her certificate signed by the Branch President, Mrs. Lindsay, and the first Vice-President, Mrs. Storey. She was also made a member of the Auxiliary. After this brief interval the branch resumed work, and was favored by a solo from Mrs. W. H. Butt; very sweetly rendered. Mrs. Snowden then led the consecration and memorial service. The names of those who during the year past, had entered into higher service, were read by Mrs. King, of Broad Cove. Mrs. Snowden's address was very effective, the personal touch, the every-day experiences the need of putting first things first, were strongly emphasized and we trust will prove a benediction during the coming days. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, was administered by Revs. A. V. Robb and C. R. Bount. At 8 p.m., a choir recital was given by the "Carbonear Methodist Choir." How much it was appreciated by the branch, how delighted everybody was, how long the memory of such beautiful music so perfectly rendered will remain with us, who can tell? At the close of the recital, Mrs. Bugden, on behalf of the courtesy committee, expressed our gratitude to Miss Field Nidd, Co., for reduced rates; the kind friends of Carbonear for the very hearty welcome given them, and the Social Committee for the banquet served so daintily. The hostesses for the very kind entertainment given; the young ladies who sang so beautifully during all the sessions; the sexton who was so kind and attentive and kept the church so comfortable; the Carbonear Methodist Choir for the splendid recital given; Rev. A. V. Robb for the many ways in which he helped to make the branch sessions a success; the press for so kindly printing our reports, and to all friends who in any way helped. A gift of gold was then presented by Mrs. Storey, on behalf of the Branch, Miss Wagg, as a token of appreciation of her many services, to which she very touchingly replied, saying this would be another link in the chain of love that binds us all together. District Organizers for the coming year were elected as follows: Mrs. John Maddock, Carbonear; Mrs. (Rev.) Howe, Western District; Mrs. D. Osmond, Northern District; Mrs. K. Barnes, St. John's. A very short business session was now held, at the close of which Mrs. R. Duff, in few and well chosen words which we trust may never be forgotten, spoke on our motto, "Not by might nor by power, but by My Spirit Saith the Lord," thus bringing to a close one of the most successful branch meetings ever held. We go to our different homes full of pleasant memories and hoping that Carbonear will again, some day in the future, say to us, "Will ye not come back again?"—J.I.

EDISON REQUISITION BLANK

St. John's as it Strikes the Outport Man.

Lest anyone should think that it is the intention to be severely critical of our only city, let me say at the beginning that there is no desire to so criticize. I should like to merely set down how the city appears to the man from other parts of this country—at least perhaps it were better to say from my viewpoint—and there is no intention to criticize any more than if one were to describe a friend as tall or short, lean or inclined to look well. The thing that is borne in upon the consciousness at the first visit to Water Street is the deafening racket of the long carts over the cobblestones. In fact conversation is absolutely impossible while these vehicles are passing as one stands on the curb, and remarks to one's neighbor must be shouted at the top of one's voice. Atlantic Avenue, Boston, is the only street I ever heard comparable with its overhead "L." At night the silence, in comparison with the racket of the day, is most remarkable. Of the hundreds of pedestrians who throng Water Street's sidewalks, all but one per cent. are shod with rubber heels, and though the crowds move up and down one hears only the dull beat and swish of rubber heels, against which my outport leather ones (with a nail protruding worn away by the hard pavement) make so much clatter that for very shame I am perforce obliged to stily stetch them for a moment in some benedict little mud puddle, to muffle their noisy clatter.

The day I arrived there was much mud everywhere, but it was most surprising to me how quickly it dried, and how soon dust began to blow. Neither dust nor mud are the special prerogative of the city, of course, but are slightly more pronounced here than the average outport. It struck me as a bit of a pity—when I watched the boys so industriously flushing the windows and pavements of Water Street, that this care was all bestowed on a portion of one street and the shops were so neglected. I am not attempting to "teach my grandmother to suck eggs"—you know your own business and needs best. I was under the impression from reading the daily papers that there was much poverty in the city. If it exists, and if the army of unemployed one daily sees thronging the Court House and Col-which they are familiar. They do supply many a little bit of gossip of the city, which you will cherish in the back-tyles of your memory to be repeated to an admiring circle of friends when you get "back home." It's a happy little family, after all, only a larger outport in its way. Rather proud because it is a city. Rather touchy if you tread on its pet corns. And so if I have accidentally put my hard leather heels on any of its tender toes, I hope it will be big enough to forgive when I say that it has been quite kind to me, and I enjoy a brief sojourn in its midst very much. Italy's Independence Secured.

On Saturday, June 4, 1859, when Napoleon the Third was Emperor of France, the battle of Magenta was fought in a valley between the French and the Austrians to liberate the Italians in their ancient historic peninsula, that stretches out far into the Mediterranean Sea, from the Austrians of Central Europe, who had taken it and ruled it tyrannically. In their effort the French were assisted by other foreign troops, and remarkably celebrated one was Marie Edme Patrick Maurice de MacMahon, who was a member of an Irish family but had been born at Sully, in France, on 13th July, 1808, and was educated there for the army. Nevertheless, he had served with the British, because these two were allied against the Russians in the Crimean war, in which MacMahon rose to be a general. In the battle of Magenta he came unexpectedly upon the Austrians and defeated them, and therefore was created a Field Marshal of the French army and Duke of Magenta. In 1873 he was elected President of the French Republic, but resigned five years later and retired from political life.

Why Unlucky to Spill Salt.

In ancient times salt was a very scarce and rare commodity and frequently only a very small dish of it was placed on the table. Naturally anyone who spilled this precious commodity felt that he had been very unlucky. Besides, as the ancients regarded salt as an emblem of redemptive power, it was not unnatural that they should have looked upon the spilling of it as an evil omen. The custom of throwing a pinch of the spilled salt over the left shoulder three times to break the "hoodoo" is, clearly a pagan survival of the times when salt was one of the propitiatory offerings made to the evil deities who sent bad luck. De Vinci undoubtedly had in mind the ancient superstition regarding spilled salt when he introduced the overturned salt-seller into his great picture.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

NOBODY HOME.

The other evening we were passing through a rather thickly settled residential part of the town at about 9 o'clock.

Increased Mobility of the Human Race.

The Authorman indicated three machines parked in front of an apartment house. "If it weren't for automobiles," he said, "do you realize that the majority of those people who are out visiting to-night would probably be in their own homes? Look up there," he pointed to several dark windows in the same apartment house, "those probably represent people who have gone off visiting someone else. It really is tremendous, when you think of it, the way the automobile has increased the mobility of the well known human race. Fifteen years ago three quarters of these people who are in someone else's homes to-night would be in their own."

It is an interesting thought, isn't it?

And the next thought inevitably is, does it represent an advantage?

To my mind, it does and it doesn't. The Restless Desire to Go Anywhere!

Where this movement means nothing but a restless desire to go somewhere, anywhere, in preference to staying at home, the increased mobility of the well known human race is rather a disadvantage.

In a story in one of the current magazines the automobile salesman declares that he isn't selling merely a machine, he is selling his customer all the wonderful scenery, the sunsets, the curve of the distant hills, the beautiful old towns that lie within auto reach of home.

I think he might also have added that he was selling her an enlarged circle of friends, for that is what the auto does for all of us.

One Can Come Nearer Making Congeniality The Test.

I don't mean necessarily adding new friends to one's list although, of course, it tends to do that, too, but making it possible to get to so many of one's friends that were formerly inaccessible.

Everyone within a radius of 20 miles becomes one's neighbor, if one so wishes it. One may go to dine with them or even pay an evening call, whereas before one was limited to the people who were within walking distance or conveniently located on the trolley line, and often had to accept propinquity instead of congeniality as the standard of friendship.

Some cynic may add to my statement that everyone within a radius of 20 miles becomes one's neighbor if one wishes it; that sometimes when one's neighbor has the auto and one self stays at home, anyone within 20 miles becomes one's neighbor even when one does not wish it.

There is something in that, too.

Women Freemasons.

In spite of the ban of the Grand Lodge of England—the governing body of Freemasons in this country, of which the Duke of Connaught is Grand Master—Masonry is spreading among women. Numerous "Freemasons' lodges have been formed, in which membership is restricted to women, although men may be introduced as visitors.

Do women know the genuine secrets of Free and Accepted Masonry? They claim that they do. Grand Lodge say they do not, and will allow no regular Freemason to attend their gatherings under pain of expulsion from the craft.

They allege that while these so-called women Masons have got hold of part of the working and procedure that take place in properly constituted lodges, much of their ritual and many of their ceremonies are spurious.

In any case, their meetings are irregular and unauthoritative. The genuine secrets have been well guarded, and no Mason could divulge them without violating his most solemn oath and obligation and rendering himself liable to the severest penalties if discovered. The whole fabric of Freemasonry is built on the assumption that it is for men, and for men only. The admission of women has never been for one moment seriously contemplated by Grand Lodge, the members of which view with horror the mere possibility of such a departure from ancient custom and tradition.

The head of every lodge is known as the Worshipful Master. Do the women Masons address their chief officer as Grand Mistress? It is difficult to know how much of the wording used in the various ceremonies could be altered to make it suitable for women. There is only one recorded case of a woman having been regularly admitted into Freemasonry. It took place many years ago in Ireland, when Masonic meetings were held sometimes in a rather free and easy manner in private houses instead of duly consecrated temples.

The woman in question was Mrs. Norton, connected with the St. Leger family, and the present Viscount Doneraile vouches for the truth of the story.

Mrs. Norton hid herself in the room during a lodge meeting and was only discovered too late to prevent her from hearing and learning much.

To escape from the difficulty thus created it was then and there decided to make her a proper Freemason, and she was accordingly duly initiated into the craft.

Freemasonry in this country has been admirably organized. Grand Lodge keeps an iron hand upon it. Nothing in the nature of religious or political discussion is allowed.

English Freemasonry is quite free from the taint that attaches to it in some other countries of being used for secret intrigues and propaganda of religious or political principles.

Apart from the undesirability of women becoming Masons, it is recognized that there would be danger attending their admission. How many women can keep a secret?—Ex.

Boston College went "over the top" for its drive for $2,000,000.

One of the principal discussions at the National Academy of Science, during its recent annual session at Washington, was "The Problem of Steering an Automobile Around a Corner."

The latest production in motor buses, with body construction similar to that of a trolley car, has electric lights and push buttons, leather upholstery and a safety floor. It seats twenty-seven persons.

"This day light-saving things doesn't make any bit with me at all," grumbled the clerk.

"Why not?"
"Well, the boss used to beat it out in the middle of the afternoon to play golf and then the rest of us could take it easy, but now he sticks around the office until 5 o'clock and has plenty of time for golf afterwards."

The seaweed grows now in Paris, trimmed with the lustrous material sewed on black taffeta, and with seaweed panniers at the hips and ribbons fluttering in the breeze, is said to give a delightfully cooling effect even on the warmest days. Seaweed trimming would seem to be specially adapted for bathing suits.

The president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works says he prefers to ask applicants for employment the following questions:

"How many cents are there in a dollar?"

"How many feet are there in a mile?"

"How many square feet are there in an acre?"

He adds that he wants men with a sense of finance, distance, and surface measurements.

General Decline in Commodities Ended.

Recent increases in the wholesale prices of certain commodities do not indicate a new period of rising values, in the opinion of Herbert P. Howell, Vice President of the National Bank of Commerce in New York. They do, however, show that the violent general decline in raw materials is definitely at an end. Many individual commodities will show considerable further revisions, he believes, but the general movement has reached a level at which manufacturers may do business on the basis of their own requirements, irrespective of the market prices of unrelated commodities.

"Of the twenty-six representative commodities quoted monthly by the National Bank of Commerce in New York in its 'magazine, Commerce Monthly,' Mr. Howell points out, sixteen showed increases in May over the preceding month while four stood still and only six continued to decline.

"There increases must not be contrasted with indications of a new period of rising prices. Some of them are seasonal in character and others reflect a tendency toward stabilization on the part of commodities which in the general decline that began in the spring of 1920 may have fallen below a fair valuation. The increases are important, however, because they demonstrate that the process of liquidation has reached a point where raw materials are beginning to react to conditions in their own individual markets.

"Normally the price movement of every commodity is determined primarily by the status of its own market and that of commodities immediately related to it. Only in boom periods or during violent depressions are prices affected more by the general movement than by these individual factors. What has happened now is a return toward normal conditions. Henceforth, commodities may be expected to fluctuate in obedience to the influences of specific supply and demand. "Many prices have stabilized. This does not mean that there will not be further declines. They may be expected in many lines, and commodities which have not yet been adjusted will receive no support from others that have reached a stable footing. In their decline, they will not force down commodities in which deflation has already occurred.

"Index numbers have not yet disclosed the end of the general price change in the market for raw materials, due to the fact that all such numbers in use contain quotations for a large number of commodities in fairly advanced stages of manufacture and in some cases ready for consumption. There is a considerable lag between declines in raw materials and in finished goods, and when quotations from these two groups are combined the declines in manufactured goods are sufficient to obscure the trend of basic material prices.

Gradual Decline Not Dangerous.

"While the violent general decline in raw materials and related products is over, this does not preclude a slow decline for a period of years. Such a decline would be no menace to sound business. It is perfectly possible in such a period to carry on sound manufacturing and merchandising operations with profit. Gradually falling prices over a period of years would not materially affect the price movement of commodities over such periods as are usually necessary for these operations. The present generation of American business men has been unduly alarmed by the downward tendencies of prices. Rising prices are not necessary to prosperity and a slow downward movement is discouraging only to reckless speculative activities."

Shipping Notes.

S.S. Charlot took on board 150 tons of fresh water yesterday, and resumed her voyage to Hamburg to-day. S.S. Digby arrived at Halifax on Thursday evening and leaves there to-day for Boston. Schr. Olwen is loading codfish at Carbonar for Italy, from Messrs. J. & W. Moores.

Colored ribbon girdles are worn on the frock of black lace.

GEORGE NEAL, Ltd.

THE PANIC OF 1907.

Did not offer opportunities similar to the present for profitable investment. It is true this is the second opportunity since that date to invest in high class securities at fortune-making prices. Don't wait another twenty years for a similar chance but examine closely the investment offerings of to-day in railroads, oils, mines and industrials, and acquire sufficient of these low-cost, high-grade, dividend-paying issues to ensure monster profits when the market commences to register the inevitable advance.
