Sweet Eva!

CHAPTER IX.

He knew that Mr. Dennison had been to the Highway House, and that he and Mr. Winterdick had been shut up together for more than an hour in the library; he knew that the two men had consumed a bottle of champagne between them, and that his father had looked years younger after the visit. He also knew that his father had been to London to see his solicitor, and though Philip had not asked a single question, he knew quite well what had happened.

Ruin was averted, and life was to go on as it had been before that fateful night when they had asked this sacrifice of him.

He felt like a man who has committed a crime and who goes in mortal terror of being found out and convicted. Every time he looked at Eva he was sure that she must guess the truth; every time they met he braced himself to meet the worst.

The congratulations of his friends were perhaps harder to bear than anything else. Sometimes when he was smiling and listening to their well-meant remarks he felt as if he must say something to put an end to the farce—to tell them that he didn't care two straws about her—that, if they only knew, it was just a business arrangement between their respective fathers.

But the trouble was that nobody even suspected it. Least of all Eva herself, and young Winterdick felt that it was her trust and ignorance that fettered him hand and foot.

There was nothing to do but go on with it, to make the best of a rotten business, to try and keep her blind to the truth until the end of the chapter. The only one who was getting whole-hearted enjoyment out of the engagement seemed to be Mr. Dennison. He fancied himself exceedingly as future father-in-law to Philip Winterdick. He alluded to him on every possible occasion as "my future son-in-law." He assured everybody that the engagement was the outcome of love at first sight.

He had a vague idea that by so doing he was keeping his solemn promise to Philip that Eva should never know the truth. He chafed his daughter whenever he got the chance.

He rather thought he would like to take her back to the little suburb where he had made his money, just to show his one-time cronies the height of fame to which he had risen. Without telling anyone, he had had a paragraph inserted in the local paper of his old home, in which great stress had been laid on the blue-bloodness of the Winterdicks. He kept a cutting of it in his pocket-case and chuckled over it half a dozen times a day. "I'm going to do the thing in style when you're married, my dear," he told Eva. "Nobody shall say that I didn't give my only daughter a slap-up wedding."

Eva laughed. "We shan't be married for ages," she said. "Father . . . you know—of course, Philip told you about—about the money?"

"Money—what money?" There was a sharp note of inquiry in her father's eyes.

"I mean, that they had lost a great deal," she explained. "He told me that it practically meant ruin."

Mr. Dennison laughed. "Pooh! that's nothing—I know all about it—Philip told me."

"Of course, I knew he would do that."

"Yes—of course! Quite right of him—quite right. But it's nothing serious. In fact, Mr. Winterdick was telling me only last night that they would manage to pull round. Things happen like that where there are large sums of money in question, you know."

"There's nothing for you to worry your head about, anyway," he patted her shoulder. "And I shouldn't talk about it if I were you. The Winterdicks are rather sensitive. Don't tell anyone, my dear—people are so willing to exaggerate."

"I should never think of telling anyone."

"Humph! Well, there's nothing to tell now, as it happens. You'll be comfortable enough when you're married. Trust me to see to that."

So Eva went to her tennis with a light heart. Philip drove over in the car to fetch her, as he had promised, but he brought Foster with him. He had made some excuse at the last moment, and been so obviously anxious for his friend's company that Foster had consented with mild amazement.

Eva was a little disappointed. She had wanted Philip to herself, but she was too happy to mind anything for long, and she laughed and chatted to the two men cheerily.

But somehow the afternoon was not such a success as she had hoped. She only played once with Philip; there were so many people present who wanted his attention. "I mustn't be selfish," she told herself severely. "But—oh, it would be nice if I could just have him to myself!"

There was something else, too, that was worrying her, something of which she was half ashamed and which yet she could not forget.

Philip had not kissed her . . . He had kissed her hand, that was all, and it did not seem right.

"They had been together hardly at all, certainly, and yet her heart told her that had he chosen he could have made the time and opportunity."

It was the one small cloud on her happiness, and, try as she might, she could not disperse it.

She made every possible excuse for him—perhaps he felt shy with her . . . she laughed at herself for such a thought. How could a man be shy of the woman he loved?

She wondered if perhaps she had been too cold and stand-offish; the thought made her cheeks burn.

"I won't think about it any more," she made up her mind. "It will all come right if I am patient."

But she was thinking of it all the afternoon. She played badly, and her partner got irritable.

Eva apologized in confusion, but for almost the first time in her life she did not care if she played or not.

And then a kindly shower came down and soaked the courts, and made further play impossible.

Eva was thankful; she gave a little sigh of relief as she ran to the house with the others.

Philip took her racquet. "I'm afraid we shan't be able to play any more to-day," he said.

She laughed. "I don't mind." He looked at her curiously. "Really! I thought you were never tired of tennis."

She coloured a little. "I am to-day." She paused, then added, with a sudden desperate courage: "I would much rather talk to you."

She could not look at him as she spoke; she almost felt as if she had said something forward.

Philip did not answer for a moment, then he said formally, "That is very kind of you."

The words sounded stilted, and Eva felt as if a rough hand had touched her heart.

This was not the sort of lover she had pictured for herself; this reasved, almost silent man, who was merely formally polite.

She sat very still, staring before her. Philip rose. He had been sitting on the arm of her chair.

"Will you have some more tea?" he asked.

"No, thank you." She tried to speak naturally, but her voice quivered.

He looked at her quickly and away again; his face was grim. "Will you—oh, do have some more tea," he said with helpless impatience.

"No, thank you, really," she rose. "I think I must be getting back; I promised mother I would not be late, and the rain looks as if it means to last."

It was an excuse to get away, and he knew it as well as she did.

He took her cup and put it down on the table.

"Very well—I will drive you home." She protested. "There is no need—it's nothing of a walk. I would rather walk."

His face grew obstinate. "I shall not allow you to walk."

Eva said good-bye to Mrs. Winterdick and the few people who were nearest to her. Without knowing exactly why, she felt as if this afternoon she had touched on the fringe of tragedy.

Philip brought the car to the front door. He had put up the hood. He still wore his fannels, and his sleeves were rolled back, showing his brown, muscular forearms.

Eva sat beside him. Her hands were tightly clenched under the light rug which he insisted that she used.

When they had driven perhaps half a mile Philip stopped at the car. He was perfectly well aware of what the girl at his side was thinking and feeling.

He wanted to try and say something to make her happier; he wanted desperately to drive that set look from her face, but all he could stammer out was: "What's the matter? What have I done?"

She tried to laugh. "What do you mean? You haven't done anything—of course, you haven't."

"Then look at me."

"I would rather not."

There was a little silence, then he half turned in his seat. He put an arm about her shoulders and forced her to look at him.

"There are tears in your eyes," he said, angrily.

"What nonsense! I—" It was no use; the tears were overflowing now, and she covered her face with her hands.

Philip Winterdick looked away from her down the length of the rain-drenched road.

He knew, without any words from her that the first faint doubt was slowly making its way into her heart, and he knew, too, if things were allowed to drift on like this much longer he would be powerless to stop it.

"Look here," he said, desperately. "You're disappointed in me, that's what it is. I'm sorry—I'm afraid I'm not much of a . . . lover. . . . It isn't that I don't feel . . . don't mean . . . things that perhaps another man could say. . . . It's only that—such things—don't come easily to me. . . ."

He broke off. He wondered if his halting explanation sounded as lame to her as it did to himself; he rushed on again anyhow. "Look here—will you take the risk—and marry me; marry me at once, I mean, and then . . . then I dare say we shall get to understand each other better."

There was a breathless silence. Eva raised her face, the tears still wet on her cheeks.

"I don't want to be married—if you don't," she said.

She was unconscious of the pathos in her voice, but it went straight to the heart of the man beside her; his arm tightened its clasp of her.

"Of course, I want to be married," he said, and his voice was more natural and sincere than it had been for a long time.

Can You Read Coins?

Have you ever taken a good look at a British coin to see what really is stamped upon it? To begin with, there is a Latin inscription: "Georgius V Dei Gra;" (by the Grace of God) "Britt: Omn: Rex" (King of all the Britons) "Fid: Def:" (Defender of the Faith) "Ind: Imp:" (Emperor of India).

There are two other letters on the face of the coin. Look closely at the bottom of the King's neck and you will see a tiny B.M., which stands for British Mint. Some copper coins are made in Birmingham, and these bear a different mark.

Now glance at the back of the coin. The half-crown has a shield showing the arms of England, Scotland and Ireland. The florin has the same arms arranged in the form of a cross, with the sceptres of the three countries arranged crosswise between them. This design has been in use for about three hundred years.

But the most interesting of all is the penny. Here again we have a very old design, for the original model of Britannia was Frances Stuart, a Court beauty famous in Charles II.'s reign.

She wears the helmet of strength; in one hand she holds the shield of faith, and in the other the trident which denotes that she rules the waves: Queen Victoria's pennies had also a lighthouse, symbolising the light of the Church and a ship, meaning that our dominions extended far across the seas; but these two emblems do not appear now.

I'm So Tired

Fatigue is the result of poisons in the blood. So when the kidneys fail to purify the blood one of the first indications is unusual and persistent tired feelings and pains in the back.

Neglected kidney troubles lead to years of suffering from rheumatism or develop into such fatal ailments as Bright's disease.

The kidney action is promptly corrected by use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills—the best known regulator of kidneys, liver and bowels.

Mrs. John Ireland, R.R. No. 2, King, Ont., writes:

"I was a great sufferer from severe headaches and bilious spells. I tried a number of remedies without obtaining any benefit until I was advised to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. These completely relieved me and made me feel like a new person. I am very grateful to Dr. Chase's medicines for what they have done for me, and you may use my letter for the benefit of others."

De Valera Agrees to Autonomy for Ireland.

Would Recognize Sovereignty of the King--Entente Powers Must Come Closer Together--China and Japan in Accord.

DE VALERA'S MANIFESTO.

DUBLIN, Jan. 4. The Sinn Fein publicity department late today issued a manifesto to Irish people in the name of De Valera, accompanied by his alternative proposals to replace the Anglo-Irish Agreement now before the Dail. The manifesto urges that there is opportunity for reconciliation between Britain and Ireland, and asks the Irish people to save reconciliation from being lost through the short-sighted expediency of politicians. De Valera's alternative proposals contemplate association with the States of the British Commonwealth and declare that for "purposes of association Ireland shall recognize His Britannic Majesty as head of the Association." While laying down an independent status for Ireland, De Valera's document is similar in detail to the text of the Treaty negotiated in London. The text of the most important provisions allows as the status for Ireland, that the legislative, executive and judicial authority of Ireland shall be derived solely from the people of Ireland. The terms of association state that for the purpose of common concern Ireland shall be associated with the status of the British Commonwealth, namely the British Empire of Great Britain, the Dominion of New Zealand and the Union of South Africa; that when acting as an associate the rights, status and privileges of Ireland shall in no respect be less than those enjoyed by another competent state of the British Commonwealth; that matters of common concern shall include defence, peace, war, political treaties, and all matters now treated as of common concern among the States of the British Commonwealth, and that in these matters there shall be between Ireland and the States of the British Commonwealth such concerted action, founded on consultation, as the several Governments may determine; that by virtue of this association of Ireland with the States of the British Commonwealth, citizens of Ireland in any of these States shall not be subject to any disabilities which a citizen of one of the competent States of the British Commonwealth would not be subject to, and reciprocate for citizens of these States in Ireland; that for the purpose of association Ireland shall recognize His Britannic Majesty as head of the association; that so far as her resources permit Ireland shall provide for her own defence by sea, land and air, and shall repel by force any attempt by a foreign power to violate the integrity of her soil or territorial waters, or to use them for any purpose hostile to Great Britain and other associated States. The document sets forth in detail in somewhat similar terms to the Downing Street Treaty, particulars regarding coast defence with a list of harbor facilities and an agreement to build no submarines except by consent of the British Commonwealth of States, makes a convention for regulation of civil communication by air, assumes an arbitrated share of British debt and war pensions, agrees to endow no religion, and arranges for the election of a Provisional Government and for ratification. An annex names Berhaven, Queenstown, Belfast and Lough Swilly, as harbors remaining in British care with facilities for coastal defence by air. A resolution added to the document expresses willingness to grant the northeast six counties privileges and safeguards not less substantial than those provided for in the signed document at London in December. De Valera's manifesto to the Irish people commences by declaring that "you are in danger. Influence more deadly to a nation faced by an enemy than plague in the ranks of its army are at work among you." It hints that the instinct for peace and repose is being played upon, and "if you give way you are done." De Valera attacks the press of Ireland, which he says, is urging "you to a stampede as dangerous as it would be disgraceful." He asserts that the Irish people are being asked to approve a treaty establishing British authority in Ireland. He declares that the Irish delegation were "dragged beyond the limit by the threat of war," and says that "you, the people, can relieve the position even at the eleventh hour." Under his alternative plan he hints that the authority of the British King, Cabinet and Parliament would be removed unequivocally. "Do not allow yourselves to be tempted from the straight and honorable path. If you quail at the consequences what will they not ask you to surrender next to this ignoble fear?"

L. G. AND BRIAND RESUME CONVERSATIONS.

GENEVA, Jan. 4. With the air full of talk of an alliance between Britain and France as the only means of keeping the Entente intact, Premiers Briand and Lloyd George resumed to-day the conversations begun in London some days ago. The conversations are continuing with the only public announcement, and the atmosphere during the day was pessimistic. The members of both British and French delegations agree that the situation is grave, and that the Entente powers must come closer together or drift apart.

CANADA'S BUILDING.

TORONTO, Jan. 4. Construction contracts in Canada, according to McLean's record, totalled $240,000,000 in 1921, against $255,000,000 in 1920, and $192,000,000 in 1919. Allowing for price recession the volume of building in 1921 was greater than in 1920.

N. F. Horsemen's Association.

As will be seen from the advertisement in yesterday's paper, the annual meeting of the Newfoundland Horsemen's Association will take place in the Board of Trade Rooms, at 4 o'clock, Monday afternoon, and the advertisement calls for a full attendance of membership, in fact, anyone interested in our true friend "His Majesty the Horse" will be welcome. On Saturday, February 28th, just about two years since the Secretary convened a meeting of those interested in the Horse Racing, with the result that a very progressive Association is now in being, which has already proven its metal by having two regular meets, on "Quid Vidit" Pond, which turned out successfully in every way, one in 1920 and one in 1921, and this year's, the third one, promises to be more interesting to the Horse Racing loving public than either of the previous ones. As will be remembered, last year the game little trotting mare "Sweet Echo" won the Trotting Race, and the native bred pacing mare "May Taunton" won the Pacing Race. This year there are other dark animals who have stepped into St. John's, and who may give a good account of themselves, whilst our good old friend "Howard Mann" will be there to try and make good his error of last year. Another feature of interest this season will be the race for the Howard Mann Victory Bond so very kindly presented by Mr. Harold Macpherson. This Victory Bond is to be competed for by "Howard Mann's" two year old progeny, and there are many, we believe ready or getting ready for the contest. Very likely this will embrace people from Topsail, Outer Cove, Rostellan, Mount Scio, or the Goules, or the city, but it is hard to say who will win. It is now a mighty debate between themselves. We would suggest to the executive of the Horsemen's Association the idea of running the races off earlier, say the last week in January, provided the pond is fit, or not later than the first week in February. Success to the Newfoundland Horsemen's Association in their third year, 1922. May it prove their best.

Week of Prayer.

Historic Address and Whole-souled Singing at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

(I. C. M.)

To put last night's service into a sentence would be to say—a splendid congregation, hearty singing, earnest devotion, and an educational address, full of fact and overflowing with missionary data.

Sharp at 8 o'clock, and as the rich tones of the bell died out, the service was begun, and all the people sang. And why not sing? It was the Doxology which they sang—and the Doxology has in it more of the spirit of the worship, than a dozen of the modern hymns which have found a place in our hymnology. The Pastor of the Church, the Rev. R. J. Power, conducted the service, and did so in a manner that at once imparted dignity, and manifested reverence. One of the regrettable features of some of our modern Church services is the lack of reverence; but last night at the Kirk there was a beautiful spirit which pervaded the entire service, and which made all feel "it was good to be there."

The special topic of the evening was that of "Missions at home and abroad" and the address upon this subject was delivered by the Rev. R. E. Fairbairn, the respected Pastor of George Street Methodist Church. Like Mr. Power, Mr. Fairbairn is with us for the first time at the Week of Prayer, hence we bid him welcome to the circle. For half a century some of us have been attending these annual gatherings, and for more than half that period we have written them up, hence our deep interest in them. And so last night we were pleased to note that the Rev. Speaker came fully prepared to discharge the duty entrusted to him; and from the opening sentence of his address until its closing utterance, there was an array of missionary data that would supply a campaign instead of a meeting.

Beginning with the ancient Jewish Church, "to whom were entrusted the oracles of God," the speaker passed on to the wider field of the Gentile nations, as represented by the Greeks who had come to Jerusalem saying:—"Sir, we would see Jesus." The speaker stated that the request of these men was unanswered. All nations other than the Hebrew nation, were Gentile; and those men were representative of the cry of the great Gentile world, who some years afterward Paul saw in a vision when a man from Macedonia said "come over and help us."

For three centuries the Gospel was preached at the price of life and blood, nor was it until the state adopted Christianity under Constantine that any protection whatever was given to the early messengers of the Gospel. For ten centuries the Church zealously propagated its good work, and under the Popes had nominally Christianized Europe. Such great souls as Boniface and St. Francis Assisi had done great good in their time, and in heaven lands, such as China and Japan, there were to be found indications of their zeal in missionary effort.

Coming down to more modern times the speaker touched upon the missionary spirit of such men as Carey and Morrison, and in all that he said, he paid an equal tribute to those holy and devoted men of God. Such men were wider than the limits of either dates, creeds or sects. They were God's men, and the work which they accomplished was their best monument.

We cannot do justice to the full data of Mr. Fairbairn's address; but this may do as a synoptical resume of the gist of it. The entire address was not only missionary but it was broad-minded and Catholic, and showed to people of narrow vision, that in every age of Church history, and in every branch of the Church there were great men, through whom "the Lord made bare his arm," and by whom the Gospel was carried to the ends of the earth. We thank Mr. Fairbairn for his address, and congratulate him upon his pains-taking preparation.

RECOGNITION.

The care of the teeth is now recognized as a necessity. In fact the large hospitals all over the world examine the patients' teeth and where it is possible put them in good condition before attempting a surgical operation. Experience has shown that the patient has a better chance for recovery with a clean healthy mouth than without it. This ought to convince the most skeptical that care of the teeth is requisite to health.

Many ambitious men and women live only half a life—and don't know it

No person whose nerves are continually irritated, whose appetite and digestion are disturbed, or who doesn't sleep well has more than half his normal chance for success in life. For weakness, debility, anemia and general lack of tone are a serious handicap to anybody.

Those who drink tea or coffee are often sufferers from these conditions. Tea and coffee contain caffeine, a substance which has a decided stimulant action on the nerves.

Each cup of strong tea or coffee contains about as large a dose of caffeine as your doctor would ordinarily give to a very sick person.

You can readily see that the effect of giving this stimulant regularly to a well person might finally have a tendency to make him sick.

If you want to avoid a very common cause of irritation and enjoy restful sleep, good digestion, and the feeling of vigor and robust endurance that comes to healthy, normal people, quit tea and coffee, and drink Postum, instead. It is a rich, satisfying cereal beverage—perfectly delicious!

Order Postum from your grocer today. Drink this fragrant, aromatic beverage and see how much better you'll feel—able to do more without becoming fatigued—as thousands have discovered for themselves.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes. Sold everywhere!

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

WHY THE FIRST YEAR ISN'T THE HAPPIEST.

Once upon a time I made bold to tilt against a certain sentimental tradition that is very firmly entrenched in the human mind—namely that the first year of married life is the happiest.

I dared to say that I thought that in many cases it was the least happy because it was so full of the inevitable adjustments that come when people of different bringing up, different habits, different sexes, come to live together.

And much to my delight I was upheld in my daring by several Reader Friends who were willing to admit that their first year of married life had not been the "radiantly happy year" that sentimentalists claim it should be, and that the later years had been happier.

Don't Try to Judge Your Husband by Yoursself.

The biggest factor in the inevitable adjustments is of course the factor of sex. Men and women feel differently about different things, and react differently to different conditions. The significance of their acts and words should be measured by different measures, and each tries to apply to the other his own standard of measurement with inevitable misunderstandings.

A woman who has been married 20 years and is unusually happy with her husband told me that she could never see a young couple in their first year of married life without wishing she could tell the wife, some of the "big and little things she has learned about men and wherein they are different from women.

Wherein They Differ.

Here are some of the masculine individualities which she has discovered:

"Men are apt to feel at their best at night and grouchy in the morning, especially before they have gotten their coffee into them.

"Men concentrate more than women. That is why they hate to be spoken to when they are reading. Women's work is of such a nature that she is accustomed to thinking of half a dozen things at once ("as soon as the baby finishes his bottle I must call up and order the dinner"), and never gets the habit of concentration as most successful men have it.

"Men hate to ask directions of any sort. Don't know just what this has its root in, but it is true of nine men out of ten.

"Men hate things to be very hot. They cannot stand as hot a bath or as hot food as women.

"Men to not like supersensitiveness. Hurt feelings, especially if ostentatiously displayed, enrage them instead of appealing to them.

Men Hate Tears.

"Likewise men dislike tears. They seldom weep themselves, when they do they pass through a painful and devastating cataclysm instead of finding emotional relief. Consequently they do not understand women's crying and try to prevent it by a discouraging manner. Women often think this manner applies to the subject over which they are weeping rather to the tears themselves and further complications result."

Of course there are men who have feminine attributes and there are women who have masculine attributes. That fact modifies these findings somewhat. But these habits of mind which this woman has sketched are masculine, and the average

Disturb me not, but let me rest in peace
Beneath the soil on which I shed my blood.
Here, with my comrades by my side,
I fain would sleep until the last great trump.
And we will answer to the great Roll Call.
"Here!" in the place where duty called
We wait, and, waiting, rest.
"Tis honor you would do us. But in truth
The nation's honor is already done.
For in the ancient Abbey's silent nave
Mid Britain's noblest dust lies one of us.
Yes, we are honored with him; with his share
The glory.
Wherefore, we pray, let be Enshrine us in your memory. Take up
The tasks we left unfinished. So live
That we shall not have died in vain."
And we
Will wait and rest in sure and certain hope
That out of darkness yet shall come the light.
And Right and Truth and Justice shall prevail.

Death of a Ferocious Queen.

On January 5, 1559, the famous Catherine de Medici, Queen of Henry II of France, died at Blois. She was an Italian princess, being the daughter of Lorenzo de Medici, grandson of Pope Leo X., and was born in 1519. In 1533 she married Henry, second son of Francis I. of France and became Queen when Henry ascended the throne in 1547. By her marriage she was the mother of five sons, three of whom—Francis II, Charles IX. and Henry III.—successively reigned. The former was king but for a few months, and on his death was succeeded by Charles, who was only in his eleventh year. His mother was made Regent, and for some years ruled both her son and the kingdom. Such was the influence she exerted over the mind of Charles, that he was unable to refuse anything she advised. It was in his reign that the faithless treaties, most cruel and sanguinary massacres and murders were enacted in the contests with the Huguenots. The most terrible of these acts was the massacre of St. Bartholomew's Day, 1572. After the death of Charles in 1574, Catherine retained her power during the reign of Henry III., a weak and corrupt prince—whose reign was troubled by the intrigues of the Queen Mother, and of the Guises, and war with Spain. Catherine sometimes sided with one party and sometimes with the other, and at last had recourse to assassination to get rid of the Duke of Guise and his brother the Cardinal.

Oil as a Fuel.

A ton of crude petroleum costs from three to four times as much as a ton of steam coal, and gives only about one-third more heat. This being the case, it looks as if coal must surely be the cheapest source of power.

That it is not proved by the fact that almost every week one reads of

This Nova Scotia Woman Hardly Ate Enough to Keep Up

After Suffering For Two Years Mrs. Mulloy Soon Finds Entire Relief.

"What I like best about Tanlac is that it brings relief that lasts; it restored me to health over a year ago and I have been well and strong ever since," said Mrs. Hannah Mulloy, 181 Kaye St., Halifax, N.S.

"When I began taking Tanlac I had been going down hill for two years as a result of stomach trouble. I was eating hardly enough to keep alive and was almost a nervous wreck.

"My condition now is no more to be compared to what it was than a bright sunny day is like a dark rainy one. It is only fair and right that I give Tanlac credit for the wonderful health I enjoy. In my opinion, no other medicine has a right to be compared with it."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

some monster liner being docked in order to be changed from coal to oil burning.

The first great advantage of oil is that you can use it all. You get complete combustion. There is no waste, and there is no soot, no smoke.

There is no dust, there are no ashes or clinker. In a coal-burning furnace the ashes and clinker need labour to remove them.

Oil gives a constant heat. With coal, every time you open the furnace door to stroke you let cold air in, and the steam gauge bobs up and down.

Coal deteriorates by keeping; oil does not. To fill a ship's bunkers with coal is a long, hard and very dirty job.

Oil, on the other hand, is got aboard by a pipe and takes up less space with coal. An oil-fed furnace can be lighted and steam raised in one-tenth of the time as with coal, and with less than one-tenth of the labour.

THE BOOTLEGGERS.

On furtive feet along the street in darkness they are going; from stew and slum they bring the rum that keeps the boneyard growing. They make their rye of poisoned life, of rough on rats their brandy, and he who drinks it wise, methinks, to keep a coffin handy. They fill their vats with old dead cats when they would make sour mashes; and one small drink will put a gink in line for dust and ashes. They make their gin of rusted tin and upas leaves and granite, and he who sips curls up and skips from this our well known planet. They make their booze from cast-off shoes brought in by vampires ghostly, and he who quaffs finds epiphany the goods he's needing mostly. Ah, when you swig a bumper big of bootleg rye or bourbon, your works will split, you'll throw a fit no doc can put a curb on. You'll bite the chairs and fall down stairs and start a roughhouse gaudy, and when you're through the crowder true will sit upon your body. Few, few escape the shroud and crape who drink the bootleg mixture, and with a spade men's beds are made where headstones are a fixture. The bootleg knives are peddling graves, they're selling bottled slaughter; oh, then, with me drink boneset tea, and pop, and milk, and water!

"Defender" Closed 1921 Marine Disaster List.

Another of the Newfoundland fleet was added last night to the long list exacted by Old Ocean during the season of 1921, when the fine schooner "Defender," once crack of the Gloucester fleet, but now sailing out of Port aux Basques, where she is owned by her commander, Capt. Theodore Keeping, went to her doom at the entrance of the harbor about midnight last night.

The "Defender" sailed from Halifax this week with a full and valuable cargo of molasses, pork and general cargo for the Newfoundland terminus. On the voyage Capt. Keeping experienced heavy weather, and on Wednesday night the cargo shifted, the vessel's seams opening up at the same time. Every member of the crew of six worked unceasingly at the pumps in order to keep their craft from going down.

Yesterday morning the wind increased in fury, and piece by piece the ship's canvas began to go. However, Capt. Keeping kept at the wheel and steered his course for North Sydney. He was making for the harbor, but in trying to avoid the dreaded Petrie's Ledges, where so many good ships' bones have laid before, the "Defender" missteered, and before any on board could do anything the schooner crashed on the jagged ledge. The crew finally took to the boats, and not a moment too soon, as the wind suddenly veered around to the northeast. In the blinding darkness, with only the flicker of the revolving light at Low Point to guide the tired out storm-tossed mariners, the boats put off and made a successful landing at Low Point, when the captain and crew wended their way to the hospitable home of pilot Frank McGillivray, where they were made comfortable for the night and partook of food, etc. As one of the men told the Herald reporter who went out to the scene of the wreck, "the kindness of the good people in the McGillivray home was such as could not be improved upon; nothing was too good for us and everything possible was done for us that was humanly possible."

The men left at an early hour this morning in their boats for the scene of the wreck, which is only a very short distance from the Low Point shore. They endeavored to get on board in order to try and save something, but the tremendous seas that swept completely over the stranded ship, accompanied by the blizzard which raged was too much for human endurance to overcome, and they had to abandon their efforts.

Capt. Keeping purchased the "Defender" a short time ago for $12,000, a very low price for such a fine vessel, and he only carried about $7,000 insurance, so that his loss is a very heavy one. The cargo, it is understood, is insured for pretty near its value.—North Sydney Herald, Dec. 30.

Going Home at Night.

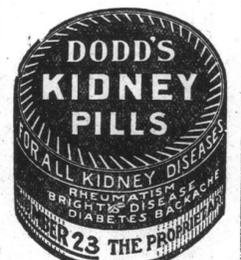

"What the dickens is the matter with you?" furiously demanded the warden of William Sykes. "Kicking up a row like that at this time of night!"

"I only want to go home," said Bill. "Don't be a fool, man!" said the warden, coming nearer to see if his charge was quite well.

"Fool, indeed!" shouted Bill from the other side of the grating. "I'm in my rights."

"Now, look here," broke in the warden meaningly, "you've got seven days' hard. Seven days you've got to do, so you'd better do them quietly."

"You're quite right," smiled Bill. "The old boy gave me seven days; but he didn't say anything about nights; and you can surely trust me to come back in the morning!"

Classic Loveliness.

Are Women As Beautiful As Ever? After a long period the British Museum is open again. There must be many who long to see once more the white-limbed goddess of Ancient Greece. How many women gazing at a perfectly formed Psyche or Aphrodite will wonder regretfully, "Has the golden age of beauty for women passed?"

Yet in England there must be some goddesses still left. A great beauty competition is anticipated to bring out one more to light.

It is often stated that the beauties of antiquity used no adventitious aids to loveliness. But research has proved the contrary. Secrets of whitening the skin, dyeing the hair, and so on, were known and jealously guarded by the B.C. belles.

What a joy the smooth limbs of those marble women are; how exquisite their features! And yet, like ordinary people they must have had to contend against petty disfigurements.

Who can imagine those exquisite creatures marred by a disfiguring growth of hair on face or arms? And how did they remove such blemishes? Modern women, of course, use phenol, a drug which, dissolved in a small quantity of water, is applied to superabundant hair. This paste bleaches and kills the hair, which can then be painlessly removed, leaving the skin clear and smooth.

This method is vastly superior to electrolysis in speed, painlessness, and effect. The whole process can be completed in ten minutes, a great consideration with the busy woman of to-day.—Pearson's Weekly.

Rome.—The Italian Government has authorized a loan of 200,000,000 lire ($10,000,000) to a society which has been organized to utilize the vast water power available in Cantania, in Southern Italy. It is expected to develop electrical energy to the amount of about 300,000 horse power by utilizing natural basins along the rivers and that this will enable the development of many industries. About 500 communes are expected to derive benefit from this great hydro-electric enterprise which eventually will require about $25,000,000 capital.

The Growth of the Press Agent.

Twenty-five years ago, the Press agent was known to newspaper men as the general distributor of circus tickets, and as the facile chronicler of the wonders of the jungle and the romances of the fat woman. He kept reporters apprized in gorgeous fashion of the coming of new plays and took a kindly interest in recovering actresses' lost jewels. For the rest, he left the reporters to go their way unaided to get their news as best they could, and to present it with that approximation to truth that comes from the detached appraisal of conflicting statements and dug-out facts. He was the scarcely recognized poor-relation of the journalist.

To-day the press agent belongs to a numerous, well-recognized and well-paid profession. His handsomely furnished office is next door to that of the president of the great corporation; he is the consultant of the organizers of great philanthropies, the mouth-piece of political leaders, the window-dresser of government departments. He lays upon the desks of the leading newspapers every day enough copy to fill their pages, news, editorial and advertising twice over. And he succeeds in getting enough of this printed to earn his salary to the satisfaction of his employer, to establish his own importance in the eyes of publicity seekers, and to color effectively the picture of American life its supposedly spontaneous movements presented to the American people.—North American Review.

Woman Novelist's Idea.

Winnipeg.—Mrs. Neville L. McLung, novelist and M.L.A. for Edmonton, repudiated the report upon her arrival here from England that she had advocated an empire marriage office. "I was quoted quite inaccurately on the question of establishing a government matrimonial bureau to introduce English girls to Canadian men," Mrs. McLung said. "What I suggested was that the women's institutes in both Canada and England co-operate in the matter of introducing English girls to eligible Canadians seeking wives, but that the whole matter be conducted without publicity, the institutes merely filling the role of a kind friend," she explained. "The best references on both sides would be required," Mrs. McLung added, "and as well, the young people have an opportunity to meet and get acquainted before the marriage was arranged finally."

A Calamity Averted.

A Scotsman and an Englishman Were wont to meet on Christmas Day. For this had always been their plan. Friends from their boyhood's days were they.

They dined together just the same. And when the Christmas beef was cleared, Served in the mist of brandy fume, The Christmas pudding next appeared.

Whilst eating this the luckless Scot Was almost choked, because, alas! Three penny pieces, quite a lot, Were hidden in the plummy mass.

"By Jove! A narrow shave, indeed! How awful if the coin had gone!" Exclaimed his friend. The Scot agreed.

Contentment in Poverty.

There is a sort of poverty that is of the Devil; it means squalor, famine, and disease. I hold no brief for such poverty, or for its forbears, or for its offspring. There is, too, an elegant sort of "straitened circumstances" that means giving up one of the automobiles and the better brands of cigars; it deserves few tears. But between these limits exists the province of true poverty, in which more than half of us always live—and usually wish we did not, and see no reason why in a free America we should not emerge from it. This is the province of skilled laborers and of most professional men; it includes the men who run their own furnaces and the women who "do their own work" but not other people's. From it comes the bulk of the support of the movies, the public schools, the Ford car, professional baseball, and the church. On the whole, the wealth and the comfort of those whom I describe as truly "poor" is slowly increasing; but unless new sources of wealth are tapped for a population that remains stagnant, there can be no very sudden increase of wealth or comfort for the "poor" as a class. Yet most of the increase in happiness of the nation, if each individual is to count for one and only one must come within this class, for the obvious reason that it includes most of the population. I am not at all sure that the bulk of the population is conspicuously more happy to-day than it was one hundred years ago, or three hundred years ago. But I am confident that the "poor" have in their possession or within their reach enough assets for happiness to make Croesus look foolish.—North American Review.

Poison for Dinner.

There are many animals and birds which are quite unharmed by the stings of insects, or even the poison of the most deadly snakes. Ducks love to feed on bees, which they will swallow in dozens without any ill effects. The same immunity is shared by another bird—the bee-eater, and apparently by the death-head moth.

The South American ant-eater makes tasty meals of ants of the most poisonous kind. He goes to a hill and proceeds to scratch a hole in it with his powerful fore-claws; then, lying down, he pushes his long tongue into the breach. The ants swarm on to the waiting tongue, and as soon as it is nicely covered, he owner draws it in.

The aim of Simmons was to take into the organization as many officials as possible, in order to permit the Klan to carry on its work of profit-making and terrorism without fear of prosecution. They hoped really to create an "Invisible Empire" within the United States of America.

Only the recent publicity given to the working of the Klan has killed this movement.

Private Army and Flying Service.

A year ago Simmons wrote: "Among the Klan's most appreciated and loyal members now are members of Congress, State officials of various States, and court officials. There not only has been no clash with the authorities, but there has not even been a hint of such."

Investigation showed that the Klan agents were making desperate and not unsuccessful attempts to enrol chiefs of police, policemen, county sheriffs, official prosecuting attorneys, foremen of grand juries, postmaster and judges all over the country.

An attempt was made to enrol officers and men on the reserve list of the American Army, and there was movement to found a branch order called the "Knights of the Air."

These schemes were started in order to provide a private army and fly both schemes were frustrated.

How far this whole Ku Klux Klan movement would have gone but for its timely exposure, one hardly cares to imagine. But facing investigation as an unlawful body, and threatened with a Department of Justice inquiry as a treasonable and criminal organization, the Klan's day is done.

Lincoln Shot Well.

His Humor Shone Brightly at Test of Spencer Rifle.

The Scientific American gives a true story of Lincoln contributed by Mr. Christopher N. Spencer, now 88 years old, who was the inventor of the practical first repeating rifle. Red tape was as much in evidence during the Civil War as in the late war. Through the influence of James G. Blaine and President Lincoln, the new arm which did much to crush the Confederacy was adopted. Mr. Spencer's account of the test is a true contribution to both biography and history. He says:

"On the way the President stopped in front of the War Department and sent Robert to ask Mr. Stanton, the Secretary of War, to come with us. While we were waiting Mr. Lincoln told us some good stories, and noticing that one of the pockets of his black alpaca coat was torn, he took a pin from his waistcoat and proceeded to mend it, saying, laughingly: 'It seems to me that this does not look quite right for the chief magistrate of this mighty republic.' Robert reported that Mr. Stanton was too busy to accompany us. 'Well,' said the President, 'they do pretty much as they have a mind to over there.' The target was a board about six inches wide and three feet long, with a black spot painted at each end. The rifle contained six 50-calibre, rim-fire, copper cartridges. Mr. Lincoln's first shot was to the left and five inches low, but the next shot hit the bull's-eye and the other five were placed close around it.

"Now," said Mr. Lincoln, 'we will see the inventor try it. The board was reversed and I did somewhat better than the President. Well,' he said, 'you are younger than I am and have a better eye and steadier nerves.'"

To Climb Mount Everest.

THE LEADER OF THE EXPEDITION

London, (Associated Press)—Brigadier-General Charles Granville Bruce, who, despite his 55 years, has accepted the leadership of next year's ascent of Mount Everest, is a man of remarkable attainments. He was shot through both legs in Gallipoli and, he himself describes the event, "he rolled down the hill like a shot rabbit," but, being an irrepressible optimist, he recovered. His personal strength is such that he could at one time raise and hold out at arm's length a well grown person as he sat in a chair. Stories of his strength, his practical jokes and of other more serious exploits, are common property throughout northern India, where he has commanded a Gurkha regiment for years. His passion has always been mountaineering. More than once he brought one of his Gurkhas home with him. One he took with him to Switzerland, where the Gurkha's uncanny skill in scrambling up impossible places produced great shaking of heads among the Swiss guides who had never before seen anything like it. Should he be compelled to leave the final peak to younger men, his vigor and thoroughness as an organizer and his experience as a leader of men will be invaluable, his friends say.

Truth About the Hooded Terror.

The later history of the Ku Klux Klan, that dreaded American Secret Society, by an American who has investigated its mysterious workings.

(From Pearson's Weekly)

"The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan." This name was once the dread and terror of thousands of American citizens.

In the year following the close of the Civil War, the original Klan was formed in the Southern States, the name being chosen in imitation of the sound made when the old-fashioned army rifle was cocked—"Ku-Klux-Klan." Rapidly this secret society became an organization for terrorizing the negroes and those whites who only sympathized with the latter's newly-won freedom.

Burnings, lynchings, and tar-and-feathering marked the trail of these ghostly night-riders as, clad in long, flowing white robes, with conical hoods with slitted eye-holes, covering the face, they scoured the countryside.

The National Government eventually suppressed the Klan, but now it has been revived with all the terrorism of former times.

No Questions May be Asked.

To-day's "Klan" has proved to be a gigantic financial swindle, which has already netted its promoters at least a million pounds, through the clever stirring of the passions of white against black, white against yellow, creed against creed, and nation against nation.

William Joseph Simmons, who in turn has been a preacher, and a professor in a small self-styled "university" in the South, organized the up-to-date Klan in 1915 with thirty-four of his friends as members. Now the Klan is active in forty-five of the forty-eight States of America, and has a membership of more than 500,000.

Each member pays an entrance fee of ten dollars, which means that the inner ring of the Klan has had roughly two million pounds to play with, and no questions may be asked under penalty of death to the inquisitive Klansman.

In addition to the entrance fee, the Klan chiefs make a fat profit from the sale of the white uniforms. These are cheap cotton affairs which cost about four shillings each to make, yet members are forced to buy them through headquarters for twenty-six shillings.

In the last year alone there have been 152 recorded cases of masked lawlessness, among these cases being four killings and one horrible mutilation.

The best side-light upon the justice of this wholesale terrorism is furnished by the private character of one of the chief officials of the Klan (next to Simmons himself)—Edward Young Clarke.

This man was expelled from membership of a Methodist church in 1919 on eight charges—lying, extortion, fraudulent and unjust dealings, improper handling of funds, false and malicious slander, inordinate ambition, and hypocrisy and treachery. He made no appeal against the Church's action.

Since the publication in America of these facts, Clarke has resigned his official position in the Klan, but not his membership in the organization.

Why the People Join.

It may well be asked, why on earth people join the Klan. The answer is three-fold. First, there is the childishly mystic, nonsensical combination of titles, ritual and dress.

Second, there is the appeal to race hatred.

Third, the force of fear—the fear of not belonging to an organization which boasts that its members, and only its members, are patriotic citizens.

Simmons, as head of the order, is styled the "Imperial Wizard of the Invisible Empire" and his headquarters in Atlanta is known as the "Imperial Palace." The members of the Klan are Knights, Clarke, second in command, is called "Grand Kludge," and a Mrs. Tyler is head of the women's division, the members of which are called "Kluxters."

Simmons wrote a "bible" for the Klan, which he called the "Kloran." Of course, secrecy about the Klan has been one of its great lures, and Simmons was very indignant when ex-

America's Only Peer.

Lord Fairfax to marry Scottish bride. America's only peer, Lord Fairfax, of Cameron and Maud, will shortly marry the only daughter of Mr. James McKelvie, of Duckley Park, East Grinstead. This adds another element of romance to the history of one of the most interesting families in the peerage. In 1908 a Commission of Privileges of the House of Commons reported the succession of Albert Kirby Fairfax to the Scottish peerage title, and thus created "America's only peer." Although Lord Fairfax is now naturalized, the family have been settled in Virginia for many generations, and are among the most exclusive people in that State. At one time a bank clerk, and later a stockbroker, Lord Fairfax is now a member of the firm of Bonbright & Co., in London and New York. He belongs to several clubs in London, including the Carlton and Bachelors', and the Metropolitan, in New York. The family's connection with America began in the time of the sixth baron, who inherited from his mother, early in the eighteenth century, between five and six million acres of land in Virginia, as well as the English estates. He was also natural beauty that he decided to settle there, handing over his English possessions to his brother. The story of the Fairfax settlement inspired Thackeray's famous novel, "The Virginians." The ninth, tenth, and eleventh barons were all American citizens, and none of them took the title, or allowed any reference to it. Twelfth of the line, the present Lord Fairfax first came to England for King George's coronation, which he attended by special request of the Scottish House of Peers. After a stay of two or three years, during which time he was welcomed everywhere, he returned to America, declaring, as it was reported, that "his stay in this country had made him more American than ever." Vast estates inherited by the sixth baron, in the management of which George Washington is said to have taken part, were confiscated during the Civil War, and in the troubles of that period large quantities of family papers and public documents were destroyed. A little over 50 years ago the present peer has spent a considerable portion of his life in England, and has a home in London, at Old Burlington Street. Although he has no seat in the House of Lords, the choice of his fellow Scottish peers may send him there at any time. Mr. McKelvie is a wealthy Scottish coal owner and exporter.

Manitoba Beaver Farm.

Beaver farming can be promoted to a source of revenue amounting to $500,000 annually to the farmers of Manitoba, according to Col. J. G. Rattray, commissioner of Manitoba Provincial Police. He states that the deprivations of beavers on private lands can be checked and the colonies transformed into valuable beaver farms if the farmers utilize the existing statutory regulations for their preservation. Closed seasons on beaver have resulted in the establishment of many new colonies of these valuable fur-bearing rodents. He has demonstrated that the beavers will thrive well in settled districts. There has been great interest shown throughout the western provinces recently in establishing beaver ranches.

The Movies Are Dope.

The movies are worse than a sedative—they are dope, pure dope, the most deadly ever invented. Only shadows appear on the screen, moving with an abruptness, a haste, that leaves no time to wonder why they move at all. The films give something to look at, nothing to think about, and something to look at without thought, stupefies, hypnotizes. Vacancy of mind prepares for the hypnotic state and, starting at the screen, the modern lotus-eater drifts easily and placidly into the land where it is always afternoon, achieves Nirvana far sooner than the Hindu Yogi starting and starting at his middle. It took centuries to develop the art of cookery, and to-day America lives on cold storage. It took centuries to develop the art of musician, and to-day our pride is in canning his music. It took centuries to develop the art of the painter and the illustrator, and to-day we throw it to the camera. It took centuries to develop the art of the dramatist and the actor, and to-day we waste it on the films. It took centuries to develop the art of education, and to-day we turn it into play. The small minority, however, desperately it may cling to art and thought, will have but a meagre chance against the large majority hurrying along the shortest cut to that Earthly Paradise where no alphabet need be mastered for no one will read, where art and thought will be remembered only as the sad foibles of the sad generations who lived before the blessing of the movies had fallen upon mankind.—E. R. Pennell.

Canada Has Buffalo Herd

FIVE THOUSAND AT WAINWRIGHT PARK. Edmonton, Alta. — Commercialization of the buffalo at Wainwright Park, Alta., stocked twelve years ago with 750 animals and now having a herd of more than 5,000, is under consideration by the Federal government. The herd is increasing rapidly each year and with the eventual extinction of the animals outgrowing the 100,000 acre park, government representatives are seeking ways to commercialize the surplus animals. A mercantile undertaking would include the sale of meat, robes, mounted heads, and possibly leather and wool. An excellent demand exists for buffalo meat, and all the animals the government cares to kill can be sold at fine prices in both Canada and the United States. Some of the surplus bulls, it is said, will be killed this winter for the market. Buffalo robes are remarkably durable and even with the hardest service will last for years. They were in common use fifty years ago when the remnants of the once great herds were still in existence. Now with the source cut off by the almost complete extermination of the bison, they are rarely seen and command a price of $100 apiece and more. Mounted heads also fetch a good price, running from $125 to $300. The tanning of buffalo hides may develop into an important industry. Experiments made, it is claimed, show that the leather is tough, pliable and practically waterproof. The wool which the animals shed every spring has been manufactured into a strong cloth fabric which has industrial possibilities though of a restricted kind. The original herd of 750 was purchased in Montana from Michael Pablo, a Flathead Indian. A good combination of flavorings for a sponge cake is twice the amount of vanilla as is used of the lemon.

Sea Power and Disarmament.

No nation can afford to send untrained men to fight its battles at sea. In 1904, Russia tried it at the Straits of Tsushima, and lost her fleet. A hundred and nine years ago Capt. Lawrence, one of the most promising officers in our young navy, sailed out of Boston with a green crew in the Chesapeake to do battle against the well-drilled crew of the Shannon. The ships began to fight at 5:50 p.m. and at 6:02 p.m. the British ship captured the Chesapeake by boarding. Lawrence, in his death throes, uttered those immortal words, "Don't give up the ship!" but the green crew hauled down the flag just the same. If our policies can be brought into the rest of the Empire Powers, it will be a splendid achievement for the Conference, and there is probably no other class of people in this land who would more gladly see the sword beaten into the plowshare than the sea-going personnel of the Navy, provided it can be done with safety. We do hope, however, that the agreements reached in council will be conservative so far as our first line of defense is concerned—for it was ever needed at sea, with untrained crews like that of the unfortunate Chesapeake. It will not be the representative who makes unwise agreements at the disarmament table who shoulders the blame. The blame will be laid on the shoulders of the unhappy Commander-in-Chief defeated at sea—and he will be the court-martial.—North American Review.

Noah's Ark From Australia.

One of the strangest cargoes ever brought to London arrived at Tilbury Docks on board the White Star liner Medic, which brought from Sydney, New South Wales, no fewer than eight hundred zoological specimens, many of which have never been seen in England before. They are all natives of Australia and New Guinea, and were shipped by the Zoological Gardens authority of Sydney, Melbourne and Perth, and were in charge of Mr. A. S. Le Souef, one of the directors of the Sydney Zoological Society. They will be taken to Regent's Park. Many of them will remain there permanently, but others will be reshipped to other countries.

Electing in Belfry.

Dating back some hundreds of years, the quaint ceremony of making a mayor in a belfry took place in the tower of Brightlingsea Parish Church, Mr. Thomas Bartlett Howard was elected to the office, which carries with it that of a Deputy to the Cinque Ports. Sir Jurats or assistants to the deputy were also elected, each paying a "fine" of four shillings, and swearing that they would be "aiding to the liberty of Brightlingsea," and would punish and reform unruly and disorderly persons, so that good order and quiet might be ratified. It was mentioned that in 1491 the town of Sandwich had a claim on Brightlingsea as a "limb" of the Cinque Ports, for the payment of 10s. yearly, but the deputy stated that this centuries-old claim was barred by the Statute of Limitations. Notwithstanding that it was "best to let sleeping dogs lie," it was resolved to make the "payment" annually without prejudice.

Fashions and Fads.

A smart coat of black broadtail fastens at the waistline with one button. Decorative belts made of woven braid play important parts on new dresses. A beautiful gown of "Point de Paris" lace has a low girde of satin and pearls. A gown of white and gold tulle is worn with a tulle of black velvet. A gown of black velvet is trimmed with jet and has flowing sleeves of black lace. A French gown of black crepe is trimmed with folds of white organdie in shell design. A wrap of pale rose pink chiffon velvet is lined with satin and collared, with chinchilla. The wring-like sleeves of a draped velvet dress form a wide train which is edged with fur. Long, irregular fringe falls from the bodice of a smart frock, forming a sort of overskirt. A simple white evening gown has no other trimming save many bands of black monkey fur. Pale pink tulle is combined with silver lace to make a charming frock for the younger girl. Afternoon wraps appear with cape backs, huge, fur-trimmed sleeves and straight bellows fronts. A closely fitted jacket of otter has its high collar, cuffs and wide border at the hem of gasselle.

"The Quaker Girl."

GOVERNOR ATTENDS PERFORMANCE.

His Excellency the Governor and suite occupied a box at last night's performance of "The Quaker Girl," the musical comedy which has taken the town by storm. All the performers have now settled down in their parts and there is very little room for criticism from even the most exacting. The chief fault is the tendency of some of the artists to speak indistinctly, but this is not now so marked as in previous performances. What Miss Louise Orr lacks in vocal power, she amply makes up for by her graceful action and her dancing, which would do credit to the most experienced professional. Her stage appearance is excellent and it would be difficult to find an actress more suited to the part.

W. Wallace is already known for his excellent interpretation of comic roles, but in "The Quaker Girl," in which he plays the local comedian for the first time, he has made a reputation which few on the local stage has attained. The rounds of applause that he received are sufficient proof of the extent to which the public appreciates his work. Mrs. Hutton and Miss Kavanaugh portray their parts in a pleasing manner and all the other principals are excellent. Miss Louise Orr was presented with a bouquet last night, after one of her dances, amidst rounds of well merited applause. It is impossible to attempt to do full justice to "The Quaker Girl" within a limited space, and the least that can be said of it is that from every viewpoint, it is one of the best shows of its kind ever produced here. A matinee will be held on Saturday afternoon, when the children will have an opportunity of seeing this delightful musical comedy.

New Council Meets.

The new Municipal Council meets this afternoon at 4.30 p.m., when Mayor M'Cook will swear in his Councillors. Although the new Council has not been gazetted, they are able to take office and transact business according to the new Charter, which states that a newly elected Council shall take office any time after the 1st day of January, succeeding the election.

"Should Illiterates Vote?"

That illiterates are entitled to a vote was the almost unanimous decision of the Cathedral Men's Debating Club last night. The debate was held in the Synod Hall. The leaders were Messrs. H. Smith, H. Noonan, H. Ford and C. B. Hefferton. Other speakers included Messrs. G. Harnett, W. Jacobs, and J. R. Smallwood. Next week's debate will be: "Whether the local banks would be more advantageous to trade than are the Canadian banks."

Prominent Physician Killed.

SARANAC LAKE, Dec. 24.—Dr. Robert Paterson, a prominent physician here, was shot and instantly killed shortly after 3 o'clock this afternoon by Grant Johnson, a former soldier, crazed by shell shock. Johnson fired at Dr. Paterson from a distance of about 100 yards, and the shot went wild. Johnson's home is in Canaan, N.Y. He came here about three years ago suffering from tuberculosis and shell shock. Dr. Paterson was his physician. Recently Johnson went away and it was not known he had returned until he walked into the physician's office, pulled out a gun and fired. Dr. Paterson was taken unawares and had no chance to protect himself.

Opens Fire on Men in Street.

After firing the fatal shot, Johnson rushed out of the office, waving his gun wildly, and encountered Dr. Brown. He aimed the gun at Dr. Brown and fired, but the shot went wild. Several persons, attracted by the sound of the shots, rushed up, Florheim in the lead. Johnson pulled the trigger three times but none of the bullets took effect. Patrolman Jones rushed up to the crazed man and tried to overpower him. Another bullet from the gun barely missed the officer. Johnson, by this time, was nearly surrounded, although most of the crowd kept a distance away from him. Several in the crowd got behind him and he was soon overpowered and his gun taken away.

Bullion Recovered From Laurentic.

Nearly $25,000,000 worth of bullion has been recovered from the liner Laurentic, which was sunk in January, 1917, off the North Coast of Ireland by a German submarine. Operations have been suspended for the winter, but they will be resumed again in the spring, when an effort will be made to recover the remaining $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 worth of bullion which is said to be still at the bottom of the sea. Most bulls are delicious rolled in hot, parboiled cabbage leaves, placed in a crissed pan and browned.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

OVATION FOR PRINCE. RANGOON, INDIA, Jan. 5. The Prince of Wales left here yesterday for Mandalay, Upper Burma. He was given a great ovation on his departure.

LACERATES DE VALERA.

DUBLIN, Jan. 5. The astonishment produced in Dall Eireann by De Valera's sudden production of his alternative proposals to the Peace Treaty, and his announced determination to move them as an amendment to the Treaty, at to-day's session, has turned into anxiety over the probable effect of this move on further proceedings in Dall. De Valera's right to move his proposal as an amendment has been challenged, and it is possible that a critical division to-day may occur on the motion to enable him to carry out his plans. Supporters of ratification express themselves deeply chagrined. Some see in De Valera's action an attempt to rally extreme Republicans to his side, while others profess to regard it as a last desperate effort of a leader, who sees his power slipping from his grasp. Strong condemnation appears in Dublin newspapers. The Freeman's Journal says "Irish people will find no justification for Mr. De Valera's criminal attempt to divide the nation. His alleged alternative is no alternative. It contains all the articles for which the Treaty has been assailed by single orators of Dall, only it is much worse." The newspaper ascribes Mr. De Valera's action to vanity, and adds "he cannot forgive the Irishmen, who made the Treaty, for their success, and for this he is ready to sacrifice the country." He has not the instinct of an Irishman in his blood. It is the curse of Ireland that its unity should be broken by such a man, acting under the advice of an Englishman who achieved fame in British intelligence service." This is an apparent reference to Eirskine Childers. The Journal continues "Irish people must stand up and begin their freedom, by giving their fate into the hands of their own countrymen." The political correspondent of Freeman's Journal writes "De Valera, depending on the loyalty and devotion which centre around the position of eminence in which people have placed him, seems to be arrogating to himself the right of an autocrat. His manifesto struck a hysterical note, and leaves one with the picture of De Valera shrieking treachery in the faces of men like Collins, Griffiths, Mulcahy, McKeown, O'Duffy and others, whose lives have been daily risked for their country. De Valera's name alone seems to make it the subject for serious comments. Griffith's characterization of De Valera's assumption as an evidence of atocracy, which if persisted in would force the chairman of the plenipotentiaries, and those who support him, to quit Dall, was the most serious statement made in the whole course of the controversy. No such situation has arisen in Irish affairs since Charles Stewart Parnell's struggle in committee room number fifteen." Parnell, as head of the Irish Parliamentary Party in the House of Commons, refused to allow a vote on a resolution for his own deposition.

KIDNAPPED CORRESPONDENT.

DUBLIN, Jan. 5. A. B. Kay, correspondent for the London Times, was kidnapped last night by three armed men, while with other newspapermen in a grocery store. The correspondents who gathered for this morning's session of Dall Eireann, demanded the immediate release of Kay, and the punishment of his kidnapers.

How Plants Fight.

Plants fight for their very existence. The honeysuckle coils itself about its foe, and, by stopping the flow of sap, strangles it.

Most plants, however, use their roots for sucking all the moisture in the ground away from their neighbours, and their leaves to shut out the fresh air and sunlight from them.

The nettle is the Carpenter of the plant world. It fights with its leaves, which are pointed at the end, toothed at its edges, and have a rough surface, writes Mr. E. Kay Robinson, in "Nature Lessons with Plants."

What are its ring tactics? It's first aim is to force its way upwards between its opponents, who are so far holding up its growth. To do this, it drives its leaves, which are now folded like a spearhead, straight up.

When they have driven past all the obstructions they spread out forcibly, pushing all neighbours aside. Soon it has cleared for itself an open space in which to grow.

Another great fighter is the primrose. To look at, it seems to be the most delicate and gentle of all wild flowers, but in reality it is a "killer." Given a good start and suitable soil, there is no plant of six times its fighting weight which the primrose may not kill.

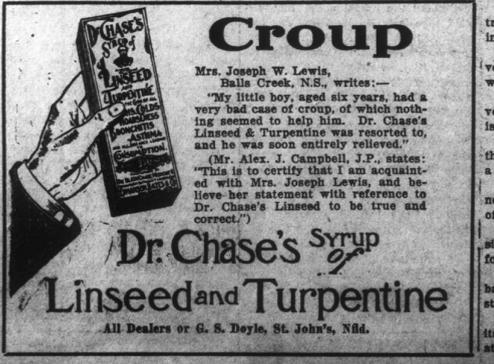

The primrose can fight only on one condition—each seedling must have a space of unoccupied ground to grow in. Then it starts its battle with its neighbours.

First of all, it shoots up its leaves, which are rolled up into the form of a bayonet. When they have played their way through to the air and sunlight they open out and become broad and flat. Then they fall outward, thus effectively screening all the sunlight and fresh air from the neighbours, who die off.

Lord Napier of Magdala.

The death has taken place at Lyndale, Isle of Skye, of Lord Napier of Magdala. Born 77 years ago, Robert William Napier was educated privately, and entered the Army at the age of 15. He saw service in India and Abyssinia, and retired with the rank of Lieutenant-colonel in 1883. Two years later he married the Hon. Mrs. Langham, a sister of the present Lord Macdonald, by whom he is survived. Lord Napier succeeded in 1890 his father, the first Baron, who won the peerage in the Abyssinian expedition, in which he stormed Magdala. There is one daughter, Lady Wyndford. The heir is Lieutenant R. G. Carrington Napier, nephew.

NEW YEAR HONOUR.—The Order of the "Night" of the Garter is bestowed on Jerry in the second Act of the "Quaker Girl." And he doesn't like it a bit.

Croup

Mrs. Joseph W. Lewis, Balls Creek, N.S., writes:—"My little boy, aged six years, had a very bad case of croup, of which nothing seemed to help him. Dr. Chase's Lined and Turpentine Syrup was resorted to, and he was soon entirely relieved."

(Mr. Alex. J. Campbell, J.P., states: "This is to certify that I am acquainted with Mrs. Joseph Lewis, and believe her statement with reference to Dr. Chase's Lined to be true and correct.")
