hon. meminer for Kent which were subjected to the rather hysterical criticism of the hon. member for south Norfolk. That hon. member professed to deprecate: these observations. The remark of the hom. member for kent to which I suppose he took particular exception was that the volunteer force Was a lisgrace to Canada. Those were the words which he userf. and which seemed to wound the sensibilitite of the hon. member for South Norfolk. IVell, Nir, if those words were intended to describe the personal chatacter of the volunteer force, I think ther would have been greatly to be deprecated. But I , ho not understani my hon. friend from Kent to have been at all discussing the persomal character on the private worth of the volunteer force. I suppose he would say that in that respect they are as respectable and as much respected as thrise siti\%ens who are not in the force. It was not of their private worth or personal reputation that he was speating. He was speaking of the efficiency of the force. He was calling the attention of the Honse to the very latge sum of money voted every vear for the maintenance of that force and the increase of it e efficiency. That being so. the question really is, what is the chanacter of the force in this particular ats a military force looking at the very latge sums of money that are being spent every year in the people of (anado for the purpose of maintianine it: Well, it does seem to me that when We take the criticisms of the General who is in charge of this force, and who honestly, in my opinion. represents its actual condition and state of efficienty. We must all admit that it is not an efficient foree and that its etficiency is not creditable to this cumatry. Now, whence does this inefficiency arise: Why, the hon. gentleman himself points ont it hats arisen in a large degree from the attempt tomake the force a source of political strength to hom. gentlemen on the opposite benches. I do nut pretenil to say that members of the force are being enlisted intes the support of the Aclministration liy their wotes, but that the force has been sent ahont from one place to another, and has been mate a migatomy borly, as much so as a camp of Arabs in the desert, and it has been mate so for the purpose of bringing a certain amount of patronage and securing it certain amount of influence and farour to representatives who support the (iovermment on that side.

Mr. BOWELL. Wis not the same course pursued hy you:

Mr. MILLC (Botinwell). That is not the question. In my opinion it was not done, but whether it was or not it is an improper policy. The fact is it has affectel the etficiency of the iorce, it has led to the misuse of puhlic money, it has added largely to the expense without any corresponding advantage to the force as a force. The hon. gentleman will not dispute that. He will not dispute, for instance, the taking away of the camp from London last year, hecallise it happened to he represented by a Reformer, although the forernment had acquired a camping groumd there, suitable, under all circumstances, tis the force. He will not dispute the carrying om of drill operations at another place which, the Cieneral says, is altogether unsuitable. You are subordinating the interests of the force to the interests of a party. There can be no doubt of that. Fvery page of this report, from beginning to end, shows that to be the case. And, therefore, you have brought the force, according to the report of the commander-in-chief, into a discreditable condition. It has become highly inefficient. It is not properly armed or equipped in any way, and that is the result of subordinating the efficiency of the force and the existence of the force to subservience to a party. That is a most improper state of things. It is one that ought not to exist. It is one every page of the (ieneral's report shows does exist. Ife say to the hon. gentleman who is now at the head of the Militia Department and who will be responsible for the expenditure of n:oney and the condition of the force, that something only short of revolution is required in order to bring it to a state of efficiency and give the public something for the money votel every year.

Mr. TIR WHITT. I have not been present in the House the last few days, and consequently am not aware on which item of the Estimates this debate has originated. I have simply heard the militia discussenl hy the hon. member for Kent (Mr. Campbell) and the hon. member for North Brant (Mr. somerville) who followed. and they forcibly reminded me of a discussion which took place some years ago in the American Senate on the guestion of reorganizing the army. One old senator expressed his disapproval of introducing organs into the service, as his father had "fit" throughout the whole revolutionary war with only a fife and drum. It is ' ${ }^{\text {uite tre }}$, as the hom. member for Bothwell has just remarked, that what roused the ire of the militia officers in the House was the remark by the hon. nember for Kent that the militia are a disgrace to the country. That certainly was sufficient to arouse the ire of the volunteers and the officers who take an interest in the force, and hefore I resume my seat I hope to prove by my experience that the remark is untrue. Now, I can go back as far as the Fenian Raid of 1836, and I will quote an anechote of what actually took place. When Colonel Peacock's columms were marching on Fort Erie, they were marching in a double column of fours. One column was composed of the regular troops and the other of volunteers; and as it is common in the service for one branch to look down on the other, not only the officers but the men of the line all despised the militia force, of course as compared with themselves. So great was the rivalry between those two sections of fours in the marching column, that when the volunteers appeared likely to give way and the victory was in the hands of the column belonging to the line, the mointed officers dismounted and led their men on foot, and the consequence was the volunteers on that occasion proved themselves the better marchers of the two. I remember it for this reason : that a company from my county, known as the "Barrie Rats," were then leading the volunteer column. I have also heard opinions expressed by men from other countries as to the quality of the Canadian militia, which would prove, were not their own actions in the past sufficient to prove, that they are not a disgrace to the country. On one occasion it was my grod fortune to dine with an officer well-known in this country, an officer who has the distinguished honour of wearing the Victoria Cross, Sir Henry Wilmot, and in a speech delivered before the National Rifle Association, referring more particularly to a visit he made to the city of Toronto, when they did him the honour of parading the entire garrison for his inspection, he described them as fine a body of volunteer militia he believed existed in the British Empire. Now, you may take that for what it is worth. That was his statement. He may have said it, as we say some things, lightly, or he may have said it in earnest. My own opinion at the time was that he said it in earnest. I can rememher another occasion very near home. I was at the camp of instruction at Laprairie in 1865, when the Western Battalion, one of the lattalions in camp, was inspected ly Sir Johm Mitchell, I was then carryinga rifle in the ranks, and I can remember to this day with pride the eulogium which was passed on the battalion of which I was a member. Sir John Mitchell, turning to address the right battalion, asked our commander, Colonel shephard of the Welsh Fusiliers: Is this the Western Battalion? Being answered in the affirmative, he said : "They are the finest body of men I ever saw in my life, Her Majesty's Household Troops not exceptel." Now, as to the matter of transport. which was spoken of by my hon. friend the member for East (irey, that question was discussed some years ago in this Honse, and I think the matter was referred to the Deputy Aljutant General of the Ind military district to be reported upon. We, in the town of Barrie, were anxious, like people in many other towns are, to have the brigade camp at our own town, and an effort was made to have the camp brought there, hut upon enguiry, and upon an estimate leing made hy the ralways, it was found to be cheaper to concentrate the forces of the district at Niagara, than to hold the camp at Barrie. It is also known that it is easier to provision the men in large camps than at battalion headquarters, or in small camps, and that is one of the reasons for sticking to the camp at Niagara, in addition to the fact that it is such a magnificent ground. I have never seen its equal excepting on the prairies of the west. The hon. member spoke of the volunteers drawing their pay, and he would lead the uninitiated to suppose that there was a way by which the officers could defraud the Government by entering more men on their list than they had in their hattalion. I have had some experience in the camps which I have attended, and sometimes I have thought they did not deal with us as honourably as we deserved. Every man belonging to a regiment is paraded a certain distance away from the camp, with the horses and everything else. The paymaster, accompanied by the brigade staff, is present, anl every man must be accounted for unless he is on guard, and that is the only exception. Cooks, orderlies, and men of all grades must be present on parade and answer their names, anil every precaution is taken to prevent men being on the rolls who are not in camp. I never heard of the existence of any cases of the kind the hon. gentleman has referred to. The remarks of the hon. member for Kent (Mr. Cainpbell) must be attributable to his want of knowledge of the facts more than to his intention to misinform the House. The hon. member for North Brant (Mr. Somerville) read some affidavits which had been made by a discharged soldier from the Governor General's Body Guard, or as the hon. gentleman so often expressed it, the "G.G.B.G." I have been guilty of several sins of that kind to which the hon. gentleman has referred, and if all the men I have treated in that way were to be paraded in this House and were to give me a character, I am afraid I should not have much character left. At the last camp I over hearlaman abusing the fool, the rations, as not being fit for dogs to eat. I called the guard and had him arrested, and I gave him knapsack drill for the rest of the camp and discharged him from the regiment at the conclusion. I believe fe made some complaints to the Militia Department. but I do not know that any action was taken, hecause I treated him according to his deserts. If people think it is possible to deal with f(0) or onk men, anong whom it is imprssible not to finl some unruly spirits, without carrying out strict liscipline, they are very much mistaken. The very tirst clause in the Red Book is that the tirst duty of a soldier is to oljey.

Mr. FRASER. I only desire to clear away the colouring which has been pat on this diseussion. I suppose the report of the (ieneral has excited all this discussion. I suppose it is leceanse the repert of the General is not very flattering to the ofticers that we have heard so much about it. Nothing has heen said on this side of the House as stromgas what was said by the General in his report, ind it is a just criticism to say that the money we expended has not been properly expendeal. The member for South Norfolk (Mr. Tisdale) spoke with a righteousindignation which was evidently pumperi up for the occasion. My hon. friend from kent (Mr. Camphell) said the militia iorce, if the statement of the General was to be credited, was discrellitable. The hon. genteman who was so indignant at the statement of my hon. friend did not seem to understand the difference between drill and organization. There was no reference made to the character of the men, their nationality, their politics or anything else, but only to the way in which they were drilled and to their organization. The statenents of the member for Kent only referred to the manner in which the money we voied was speut, and the report of the General shows us that the money is not expended in the manner it should be. The Minister of Militia says that is correct. What is there to cause the righteous eyes of hon. gentlemen opposite to rise because the statement is made to which I have referred: Do the militia of this country surpass those of any other country in this world, or do Canadians surpass any other nationality in the world? There is no fear of the militia, noberdy is talking about them; but we do say that when we spend a million or a million and a half every year, there should be tangible evidence that the money is applied in the best manner for the good of the men. One or two statements in this report of the gentleman struck me as extraordinary; and underneath the whole of what is said by hon. gentlemen opposite, I could see that notwithstanding their loyalty, they would like very well to attack the officer who had the courage to tell them the truth about what he foumd in the department. He says:
"Allowances are drawn annually for drill instruction. and for care of arms, tor which the country receives no real value."
That is more than we have ever said :
"They are paid to officers who are incapable of imparting instruction, and who are unable to, give sufficient attention to the arms under their charge."
That is what the General sayz. Now, is it any wonder that in face of a statement like that, an hon. member of this House, where all parties are representen. should deem it his duty to call attention to it *
"It cannot strictly be said that amy system exists for the issue of equipment and clothing. At present many corps are left unprovided with the issues to which they are entitled, while others get more than their share."
That is organzation for you. Now, is it not right that we shoulh iiscuss these matters-not by rising and complaining that somelody has wounied the feeling of somelnody else, but like honest men, sent here to do our huty, by endearouring to find where the fault lies and to seek a remedy for it. Is it not our duty to sce that the funds are applied in the hest interests of the force, to see that the militia is put upon such a footing as that it will turn out with the drum call and forits duty". A good deal has heen said about my hon. friend from brant (Mr. somerville). Well, while there may be a difference of opinion as to whether he should have read these atfidavits. there can be no difference of opinion as to what he meant. Surely, there was nothing to show that he meant to attack the hon. friend from Toronto (Mr. Denison). These atiditvits indicate that money was paid out-and I want to call the attention of the Minister of Militia to this-upon returns made that were incorrect. Surely, that does unt refer to the colonel of the regiment. It is a new thing that the colonel pays out money for these parties. The atfidavits only refer to the parties in the regiment who male up these statements and got the money, because I take it the oolonel only needs to comentersign.

Mr. Bowell. He has to certify to their cor rectness on his honour as an officer.

Mr. FRASER. But everyboly knows that when the statement is brought to him by the proper officer, he does not enduire whether it is correct in all its details. He must take the word of his sub. ordinate as to whether it is correct. The Minister does not know how many hours are pat in by every person in his department : neither can the colonel know who drilled and how long they drilled ; he accepts the statement of his subordinate.

Mr. BOWELL. I do not certify to the work done.

Mr. FRASER. Certainly not. If the Minister had to certify to all the work done in his department, he would never certify to it unless he knew of his own knowledge that all the work was done. It is the same way with a colonel. The colonel cannot know of his own knowledge that every man who is on the pay-sheet has actually drilled his full time. That is all my hon. friend said. He merely said that money was paid out to these parties that should not be paid out, that there was somewhere in the department a loose way of making payments of money-not at all artacking the hon. gentleman himself. I trust the long discussion we have had this afternoon and evening will lead us to consider seriously the statements made by the highest otficer in the force, made with a keenness evidently begotten with Jong training in the greatest army of the world. I hope those statements will not be lightly thrown aside. It is well that our faults should be manfully told us, and I hope that not only the Minister but that every official in the Militia Department, will take to heart the statements made in that report. It is our duty to see that the money that is expended in this country for militia shall be expended according to the niethods taught us liy men trained in the English Army. We need not bother ourselves as to our loyalty, or bravery, or anything else, but if our militia force is properly organized, we need fear nothing; we shall be able if our turn should ever come, to take our stand and do our duty.

Mr. DALY. It is evident from the remarks of the hon. gentleman who has just spoken (Mr. Fraser) and from the remarks of the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) and other hon. gentlemen opposite, that they feel the position in which the hon. member for Kent (Mr. Camplell) placed himself when he made the rery offensive remarks he did a short time ago--not this aftemoon, as the hon. member for Bothwell said, but about two hours ago. Neither did the hon. member for liuys. borough (Mr. Fraser), nor the hon. member for Bothwell, deny that the hon. gentleman from Kent stated that the militia force of Canada were a dis. grace to Camala. Those are the words whichstirred the righteous indignation of the member for Norfolk (Mr. Tisdale), and, like an old soldier, he got up and did his duty in defending the force. The hos. member for Cirey (Mr. Landerkin) smiles, but I want to know if he ever served his country as the member for Norfolk has done? It well hiecame the hon. member for Norfolk to rise in his seat and indignantly hurl back those worls in the teeth of the lom. nember for Kent. Now, if that hom. gentleman had had at knowledge whatever of the militia fore of Camaida, if he hat had any recollection of the diseussion that has taken place: in this House churing the six sessions that I have heen here, he wouk never have got up in the House and attacked the militia force in this man. ner. A good deal hats lieen satid of the repont of the Major-General. Nir, the Major-Gieneral says in his conclusion :

"Powerful in physique, intelligent and eager to learn, the militia at present contains the unorganized element: of a strong national force. Moreover, in the men of the rural militia there exists that capacity for adapting themselves to circumstances, and 'handiness,' engendered by practical acquaintance with camp life, in their ordinary avocations, which is a most valuable quality for a soldier in the field. What is reguired is system and organization in every department.'
Now, I do not think there is any member of this House who has discussed this question, who does not armit that heretofore there has not iseen that organization in our militia system which we could desire, and I for one, as an old volunteer, am glad to think that we have had sent among us it MajorGeneral who has been able to criticise, in this loold and frank manner, the militia system of Canada. I hope with the report that we have before us, now that we have had a change in the commandingotficer of the force, and that we have a change in the hear of the Militia Department, proper efforts will be made to correct defects which have been pointed out. Now another word as to the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Somerville). The last speaker said that the remarks of that hon. gentleman were not directed personally to the member for Toronto (Mr. Denison). I would like to ask him how he could say that in view of the fact that after the member for Toronto had replied to the member for Brant, the member for Brant then rose in his seat and said that although he had those documents in his desk, he never intended to use them until the member for Torontohad risen with his high and mighty military air. Is that not conclusive evidence to hon. gentlemen, that it was a matter of spleen and spite on the hon. gentleman's part, and that the attack was made with a view to get even with the hon. gentleman. We have hat a spectacle which I never desire again to behold in the Parliament of Canada, that a gentleman should rise and read aftidavits not signed, read what the hon. gentleman admits to be copies of attidavits, and thus charge an hon. gentleman with having fraudulently used the money of the country. He camot be conversant or have any knowledge of the responsibility that rests on his shoulders. If he was the man he ought to be, he would make openly the charges that the hon. member had dealt fraululently with the money of the country. But the hon. gentleman's party have not pursued that course, and he, with other members of his party have given vent to renom and slander session after session, and to-day have come here, and in an underhand way, have made an attack against an hon. member and against his hrother, which they dare not make ontside of the House. I hope for the honour of this Honse that the member for West Toronto (Mr. Denison) will not allow the matter to rest, but will bring it home to the meminer for North Brant (Mr. Somerville), and will show to this House and country that no hon. gentleman can be insulted in the way the hon. member for West Toronto has been insulted without making the man who insulted him conluct himself in a manner hecoming a memleer of the House of Commons of Canada.

Mr. somerville. I am rather amused at the forcell indignation of the hon. member for Selkirk (Mr. Daly). We all know what kind of a man he is, and it is no use discussing the member for Selkirk. But I repudiate that my remarks were intended as a personal attack on the member for West Toronto (Mr. Denison). I had no intention of doing so. The discussion was as to the expenditure of public money, and I had with me these atfilavits which had been sent to me for the purnose of having this matter investigated, and I stated in my remarks that these were simply copies of the affidarits. I state now that the originals are in the possession of a reputable law firm in Toronto, and that the gentleman who sent them stated that he had the originals and that these men hal been unable to obtain an investigation before the proper authorities. What else could I do but produce these documents to the House, in order to show that the public money voted had been usel in that way, that a return had not been given of the money spent in maintaining the Governor General's Borly Guard in Toronto. I did not charge the hon. member for West Toronto with having put this money in his pocket-I never dreamed of it ; I did not suppose he had the handling of the money.
Mr. DENISON. You insinuated it.
Mr. Daly. You did.
Mr. SOMERVILLE. I did not.
Mr. DENISON. Youinsinuated it, and did not believe the state, nent.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. I did not insinuate it. I said I had reason to believe that the statements made in the affidavits are true. I ask the committee to read the affidavits again, and find out whether they contain any statements setting forth that the member for West Toronto received any of that money himself. No such statement will be found in the affidavits. It will be foum that the charge made in the aftidavits is that the money was not paid to those men. But the affidavits do not say that Colonel Denison got the money himself. I had no intention to charge Colonel Denison with putting money into his own pocket. I had a right to bring these aftidavits lefore the attention of the committee, and show that there were certain men in the force who believer that money was drawn by some of the othicers of that Borly Guard in Toronto, and that the country received no value for that expenditure. That is the position I took, and I think I was perfectly justitied in doing so. I was not making personal charges against the member for West Toronto. I was emdeavouring to show the House that those men in Toronto had swom that this money was not paid to them, although they were called on to sign the pay-roll, and thus show they hal received it. That is the position I took on the matter.

Mr. HAZEN. It is quite clear to my mind that however much the hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat may sneer at the indignation expressed by hom. gentlemen on this side of the House, at the course taken by him, it has had an effect, and that effect has been to cause the hon. gentleman to take back water, and to now make a statement before the Honse entirely different from his previous attack on the hom. member for West Toronto. The hon. gentleman when he first addressed the committee, declared that he would not have referred to the matter, but for the remarks which the hon. member for Toronto had made. Any one in the House who heard the attack, and heard the affidarits, or what he called atfillavits, but which were not affidavits at all, read, could not help coming to the conclusion that the simple aim of the hon. member for South Brant (Mr. Somerville) was to besmirch the character of as honourable a gentleman as sits in this Parliament, or in any other parliament under the sun. What effect coull the charge of the hon. gentleman have but that? The effect of the charge was that payrolls had heen tampered with, and the inference drawn was that the hon. gentleman was aware that that tampering had been done, that it was known by the hon. gentleman who sits as the honoured representative of West Toronto, and who was in command of the regiment where the alleged wrong-doing is said to have taken place. I repeat, the only influence which any one hearing the allegations for the first time could have drawn from the hon. gentleman's accusation was that the hon. member for Toronto was a dishonest man, a man who, as a colonel of the regiment, permitted wrong-doing, and as such was unworthy to sit in this House. It has always seemed to me that members of this House ought to excrcise a certain degree of care before making charges calculated to reflect on the personal standing of one another. I would ask hon. members if the statements and charges which the hon. member for south Brant made against the hon. member for West Toronto hat not been met in the manner they have been met, whether it is not a fact that every Liberal newspaper in the country would have heradded the information that serious charges had been made against the memper for West Toronto, that the statements made reflected on his homour as a man and at gentleman, and that the charges might possibly he substantiated by evidence. I deem it to be a serions matter to make such a chatge reffecting on the character of a member of this House, and a member who makes such a charge as that withom, as he might do, going to the Nilitia Departmeat and ascertaining the falsity or the truth of the charges. is assmming a most serious responsibility, one which no member should do when his action refleets on the combuct of a brother member, even though his politics may possibly be not the same as his own. I fesire to say that any one who knows the hon. member for West Toronto, who knows his reputation and high character for honour and honesty he hears in this country, would not for it single instant, even if the charge made by the hon. gentleman had not been met, have lelieved that the charge is true. Further than that I may say the hon. memher for Kent, in referring to the hom. gentleman's speech, spoke as though the hon. member for West Toronto were a man whose sole aim and oljeect in his comnection with the militia force was to wear a uniform and co about the streets of Toronto as the hon. member for Kent satid, although I do not muderstand his allusion. marching to the tune of a band playing "Croppies lie bown," or a similar air. I lo not know what the hon. gentleman meant by such an allusion, but any one who is acruainted with the member for Toronto knows that he is a soldier of whom any country or nation might be proud. The hon. gentleman has shown himself to be a soldier on many occasions. We all know tiat when a mere boy he was attached to General W'olseley's staff at the Red River Expedition. We all know that the hom. gentleman went up to the Nile in command of the Canadian voyageurs, and for doing so received the thanks and honours bestowed by his Sovereign and by his Queen. Further than that, I say that I think it was an unmanly thing for the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Somerville) to attempt to besmirch the character of the brother of the hon. gentleman, who does not occupy a seat in this House, but who occupies an official position in the city of Toronto. I sincerely trust that the effect of this discussion will be at least to make hon. gentlemen-I care not on what side of the House they may be-besitate and le careful before making charges of a serious character, and before making reflections upon characters of hon. members of this House.

Mr. LAURIER. Mr. Chairman, it may well le that after the reading of the papers a moment ago, by my hon. friend from Brant ( $\mathbf{M r}_{\text {r }}$ Somerville), that it might have been supposed on the other side of the House.that my hon. friend from Brant intended to make an attack upon the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Denison). But, after the very emplatic disclaimer which my hon. friend from Brant (Mr. Somerville) has made, and repeated again, that he had no intention whatever of impugning the character of the hon. gentleman from Toronto (Mr. Denison), it seems to me, that there should be no more said upon this subject. I am sure my hon. friend from Brant had no intention whatever to convey anything which might be derogiatory $t o$ the character of the hon. gentleman from Toronto (Mr. Denison), and I am sure further, not only in my own behalf, but, also, in the wehalf of every friend beside me, that on this side of the House we have nothing but the greatest respect for the member for Toronto ( $\mathbf{M r}$. Denison), and that we believe him ruite incapable not only of pocketing money, but of doing anything which would be derogatory to an hon. gentleman.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I am sure we all consiler it gratifying indeed to hear the olservations made by the hon. leader of the Opposition, hat I think it is due to the House, and it is due to the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Somerville) himself, that such a statement should come from him.
An hon. MFMBER. He did say so.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I did not see the attidavits read ly the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Somerville)-I think he read them twice-but I was here when he real them, and he read them as atfidavits: and it has been said here that they are not even copies of atfilavits, but appear to be copies of some affidavits in part, and not even bearing signatures. The hom. member for Brant (Mr. Somerville) has disclaimed any idea of attacking the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Denison). So far so gool. That is satisfactory as the hon. the leater of the Opposition has satid: but I listened as well as I conlil to these affidavits and if $I$ am not altogether deceived in my hearing, they contained two statements with regard to the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Denison) which I shall presently mention, and if I am wrong the hon. member for Brant (Mr. somerville) will correct me. One of the statements contained in these affidavits which are now extended upon Hanvarl to be exhibited to the public, was that the pay-list, which had been certified to as correct by the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Denison) in his capacity as a militia officer, was falsified. Another statement which was contained in these atfidavits was that he had procured, by false evidence, the conviction of a man in the city of Toronto, in order to prevent in investigation of a disgraceful charge against himself. It is in vain for any person who understands the English language to say, that having read documents of that kind in the House, it was not intended to attack the character of another hon. member; because the hon. nember who is referred to in these two charges would have no character at all if there were the least semblance of truth in the statements which the member for Brant (Mr. Somerville) read. I rose, not for the purpose of renewing the discussion or making it more bitter, but for the purpose of suggesting to the hon. member for North Brant (Mr. Somerville) whether he should not in view of the statements which have been made by the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Denison), at least himself withdraw these papers and withdraw the charges which they convey.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. As I said before I made no charges against the member for West Toronto (Mr. Denison). I have not these documents in my possession now, and I cannot remember every word that is contained in them, but I do know that the gentleman who resides in Toronto and who forwarded them to me, declared in a letter which he sent that he had the original of all these attidavits in his possession and that they could be produced at any time they were refuired. I do not know that I can sily anything further in regard to this matter. The charge as originally presented was that the money belonging to the (iovernment was not expended judiciously, and that men had been allowed to sign these pay-rolls and obtain money, who ought not to sign them or oltain the money. That was the information that was presentel to me. I lo not know who got the money nor who certified to this matter. All I know about it is that these affidavits were sent to me. and I have presented them to this committee. to show, that accorling to these attilavits, if they are correct. this money hat not been properly expended. I think it is the duty of the Minister of Dilitia to have the men who made these affidavitscopies of which I said only had heen presented to me --examined, so that he may ascertain whether they are correct or not. I do not vouch for the correctness of these afficlarits or copies of attidavits, but they were sent to me as eopies of original atficlavits ly a reputable law firm in the city of Toronto. As I said before, the position I take in this matter is, that I make no charge against anybody. The only charge I mate is that if the copies of the affidarits which I have read are correct, then the money belonging to the people of Canala has not been properly expended.

sir JOHN THOMPSON. The hom. gentleman will see, further, that if he is not making any charge himself, he is enabling persons outside of this House, whose character he camot vouch for, to make a very disgraceful and untruthful charge, from his place in this House, against an hon. member.

Mr. D.AVIES (P.F.I.) I think, in justice to the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Somerville), it must he remembered that when he read the attidavits he distinctly and emphatically said, and repeated it two or three times: "It must be remembered that I do not make any charge against the hon. gentleman from Toronto.

An hon. MEABER. Why did he read them, then:

Mr. DAVIES (P. E. I.) Allow me a moment, please. I have not intervencl in this debiate before. I have been listening to the scolding which has taken place from the other side of the House, and which to a large extent I think was unnecessary. I think that the statement made hy the hon. member from Brant (Mr. Somerville), supported as it was by the leader of the Opposition, ought to be accepted. It was a very frank and a very manly statement, and 1 would add my testimony to that which hias been expressed ly the leader of the Opposition, that the charge having been read and the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Denison) having denied it emphatically, nothing more need be said abont it. If the department think an enquiry is clesimble they can make it, and I am perfectly sure, as my hon. friend the leader of the Opposition is sure, that when the hon. member from Toronto (Mr. Denison) says the statements are false, they will he found to be false. I have the highest respect for the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Denison), and I believe that when he says from his place in this House that these statements are false, his word will be accepted as it has been accepted by hon. gentlemen on both sides of the House. I do not think there is anything to be gained by a reiteration of these remarks by hon. gentlemen opposite. The scolding which the hon. member for St. John (Mr. Hazen) indulged in, did not do any good, nor had it any relevancy to the matter before the House. The hon. member for Brant (Mr. Somerville), however, has not received the crealit he is entitled to for having stated they were imperfect when he real these documents. Although I real them they are imperfect and I know nothing of the facts.

An hon. MEMBER. What did he read them for?
Mr. DAVIEs (P.E.I.) He has told you becamse taey were sent lyy a reputable tirm in Toronto.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Name.
Mr. TUPPER. Would you have real the papers if they were sent to you in the sime way:

Mr. D.AVIES (P.E.I.) I donot kiow the name. What dohon. gentlemen mean liy asking me to name. I do not know anything almot it.

Mr. MoALISTER. If he knew they were inperfect he had no right to use them.

Mr. DAVIFS (P.E.I.) The hon. gentleman read them as he received them, and he stated their imperfections when he read them. Now, I do not think there is any good to le derived from a continuation of the wrangle, because the hon. member for North Prenthas dome as syuarely and as manly as any man could do in making the statement he has made and in repeating it again and again. Now. I rise for the purpose of calling the attention of the Minister of Militia to what I believe is a very wrong system, which we have carried on from year to year in this House with reference to the militia estimates, and which is provocative of a great deal of misspent time. The Militia Department, above all other departments in the service, ought to be absolutely free from political influence. There is uo monopoly of patriotism on the other side of the House. There are as many volunteers in this country who are Liberals in their political faith as Conservatives. We have as great an admiration of the volunteer service as hon. gentlemen opposite. There are men in that service who are a credit to the country and would be a credit to any country. There are men there who when they goto thepolitical booth rote as Liberals, but who when in the ranks know themselves as militia men. But what I want to come to is this : The Militia Department is advised by an expert sent out from the old comitry who knows his duty, and who in the present instance, I am proud to say, is not afraid to express his views; and when he reports to the department, criticising the organization and the manner in which the public money is spent upon it, and suggesting certain changes, I think it is desirable that the hon. Minister of Militia should adopt the plan which has been carried out for many years in the mother country. When the Secretary of the Army or the Secretary of the Navy comes down to the House with his estimates, he submits to the House the policy which heasks them to adopt. If he has any changesto propose, he announces them and asks the House to endorse them. If no change is desirable, he tells the House so : and the members of the House who are conversant with the fact, as many are in this House, are then in a position to criticise. But here we have from the General in charge a large number of very valuable suggestions, and as one member of this House, I want to know how far those suggestions meet with the approval of the Minister, and are going to be adopted. We are voting this money, I respectfully sulnit, in the dark. The expenditure of the money which we have yoted hitherto has met with severe criticism at the hands of the (ieneral. I do not think we should be afraid or ashamed of that criticism. As one member of this House, I would convey my thanks to that officer for the manliness and courage he has exhilited-for it requires no small courage to tell the truth-in stating that while some of our regiments and companies deserve all praise, there are others that deserve ceusure. My hon. friend from Kent, who calls special attention to that portion of the Generals report which refers to the inefficiency of some companies, has been censured on the other side. But we ought not to shut our eyes to these facts, and I do not think the hon. Minister of Militia desires to shat his eyes to then. For instance, take that very statement of the General that the 24th, the Qath and the $\because$ bith Battalions were all very weak, and the ranks were filled with boys of indifferent physifue. It does not follow from that, that all the companies in Canada are included in this reflection. I know that in the province from which I come we have some companies which any general might be proud to have under his command : hut we must not shut our eyes to the blots upon the force. Now, I wish to know which of these suggestions of the General meet with the approval of the Minister, and how many of them are going to be carried out. One very important remark the ©eneral makes with reference to the pay of the militia, satying that the rural regiments do not get fair-play, that they receive a very much smaller share of the money than they are entitled to. On page 4 he seys, with respect to the proportion of vote No. 100 in the militia estimates allotted as pay to each category, that 44 per cent is voted to rural corps and 34 per cent to city corps, or a difference of one-third only in fa cour of rurals corps. With regard to this he says:

[^48]slighest attention to the early portion of the discussion, he would have heard my views on the suggestions made ly the lieneral.
Mr. TUPPER. He was tom much occupied in covering the retreat of the hon. meuler for North Brant.
Mr. BOWELL. Yes, and like the cutte-fish, he left hehind a good deal of mud.
Mr. DAVIEs (P.E.I.) Do you call that mud?
Mr. BOW ELL. Because you attempted to cover up what you wanted to smother.
Mr. LAURIER. Order.
Mr. BOWELL. I am exceerlingly pleased to find the hom. leader of the Opposition and the hon. gentleman at his left so sensitive at the slighest remark which they do not approve of, while on this and other occasions they hurl forth the vilest epithets at hon. gentlemen on this side of the House without the slightest provocation, which we hear and receive as meekly as lambs, though they have no more effect than water rolling off a duck: back. What I say is that had the hon. member for Queen's paid any attention to what I sitid before. he would have heard me framkly state at the beginning, and repeated in reply to the hon. member for Kent, that there were many of the General's suggestions of which I highly approved and would endeavour to carry ont, while there were others which in all probability I would not le able to, carry out, because a sufficient sum of money is not placed at my disposal. Beyond that, I should like to know what the hon. gentleman wants is Minister, charged with the grave responsibility of spending this money and controlling the management of 40,000 or 50,010 men in the country, to do. Does he want me to pledge the Government and myself as to the manner in which the minutiat of the suggestions made by the General are to be carried out? I made a general statement approring most of the suggestions, hat knowing the genius of our people, knowing their habits, I know that some of the suggestions would not be possible to carry out. These are matters which will have my consideration as som as I have the time and opportunity to do it. I will be frank-for I like to speak in this House as everywhere else-this report was onfy put in my hants last night, and it is only a few days ago I read the report of the Major-(ieneral and the Deputy Minister of the department. They have been urging the different officers to prepare statistics, and they were not ready to go to the printers until a few days ago: but I trust, if I live amother year and hon. gentlemen opposite allow me to remain where I am, to be able to speak with a little more authority and knowledge of the details of the, department, and, as my hom. friend next me suggests, a little less like a lamb. A nother misfortme which aftlicts my hon. friend from Queen's is that he is not in the habit of telling, and he will permit me to say so very respectfilly, all the truth in the statements he makes in this House. It is quite true the hon. member for Brant made use of the statement to which the hon. gentleman referred, but he did not do so when he introduced the sulject and read the affidavits. He did so after an attack had heen made upon him by the hon. member for West Toronto, and then he got up and disclaimed all intention of impeaching his reputation and character. That is quite different from the statement made by the hon. member for Queen's. While this scolding match is going on, as the hon. gentleman calls it, let us look at one of the statements. Slater says among other things:

Abstract

" I was tried, convicted and imprisoned for thirty days in the commongaol at Toronto, said conviction and imprisonment being an illegal prosecution, on a false charge, and on a perjured oath, said conviction and commitment being signed, and so on, by a magistrate."

This man Slater went on lefore that to state that the hon. member for West Toronto made that atfidavit and thus accused him of perjury. The information was laid by the hon. member for West Toronto and this affidavit, if such it be, because it is not signel-it may be a true copy; I say nothing of that-accuses the hon. member of perjury. Yet after these charges were positively denied, after it was affirmed by the late Minister of Militia that he made a full investigation into the matter, and found that the statement, the allegations and the charges made loth against the member for West Toronto and the police magistrate, Lieut.Colonel Geo. Denison, were unfounded, still the hon. member for Brant got up and read them over and over again, and then rose and disclaimed any personal reflections. Let me ask the hon. member for Queen's : Supposing I rise solemnly and calmly and read a lot of affidavits accusing him of 'perjury, theft and misappropriation of public money, the truth of which he solemnly denied, and supposing I shouli, after his denial, repeat what I had said, but added that 1 dil not intend to impugn his reputation, though I knew that the charges and allegations I rearl would he handed down for all time to come in the official report, would he look at my action with equal philosophy, and try to excuse my action as he done that of the member for North Brant? I doubt it.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I will not accuse the hon. gentleman of being a lamb or a sheep or anything of that kind; for I know he is prepared to fight onalloccasions; but I would say that he has not answered the just criticism which I gave to him as the head of his department, and which is applicalle, not only to his department but to other branches of the service. I think I may state what is the mind of the majority of the House when I say that when estimates are given in a matter of this kind, the House is entitled to know what the policy of the Government is. Now the hon. gentleman accused me of not being present. H $\epsilon$ could not have usell his eyes because I was here the whole afternoon, and heard him say that some of the suggestions of the Gieneral commended themselves to him and some did not. That is exactly what I want him to tell us, which suggestions commend themselves to the hon. gentleman. Here is a valuable book presented by the General who suggests a number of ways in which our force may be made more efficient. The hon. gentleman approves of some and disapproves of others. Of which does he approve? Surely this House is not to go on voting money year after year and paying a large salary to an efficient General to direct us and recommend what we should do to improve thie force, and then be told by the department that they are not to say what recommendations they accept and what they do not. We find on page 4 of this report there is a suggestion with regard to the way in which money should be paid the city and rural corps. Does he approve of that? On page 6 the General says:
" Under the system hitherto, no data are available on which to base a trustworthy estimate of the cost incilental to the training of the rural militia, but it is my belief that a considerably larger force could be annually trained than has bitherto been the case, without any increase in the vote for drill and training. I aun not prepared at present to recommend any such increase of expenditure." Does the hon. gentleman adopt that recommendation? The House is surely entitled to know that. There is an increase brought down in the estimates, but that was before the hon. gentleman received the Generals report. Is that to be persisted in? Are we to vote $$ 2,0,00$ in adrance of the Gieneral's report.
Mr. BOWELL. When we come to that I will explain

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I do not ask the Minister hastily toformanopinionon these importantmatters. He says he only got the report last night or the day before. All I have to say is that we have been forced into the estimates tor soon. The hon. gentleman should not have brought on the estimates until he had the opportunity of reading the General's report and of forming his opinion. I do not say that all the (ieneral's suggestions are to be swallowed holus bolus. We do not expect that, but we expect the department to examine them carefully and to say which they approve and which they reject. The department should have a policy and be prepared to explain it.
Mr. TUPPER. I think my hon. colleague the Minister of Militia (Mr. Bowell) is rather hard on the member for Queen's. I understand the position of that hon. gentleman, and on the whole think it is rather creditable. He is heartily ashamed of the conduct of his friend from North Brant; he is too much of a man to approve it ; he will fight hard, but there is not a member on the front benches opposite me to-night who would do what the hon. member for North Brant has done. There is not one who would read those miserable. despicable charges against the character of an hon. gentleman. There is not one man who would rise in his place and say he would have done what the hon. member for North Brant has done; and on the other hand there is not a man among them who, if he did so far forget himself and what was due to his position as to make that statement, viho would not, on reflecting, have made the amende honorahle. The hon. member for North Brant, although asked by the gallant leader of the Opposition to retract these charges-
Mr. SOMERVILLE. I never made any charges.
Mr. TUPPER,--to express at any rate regret for having been the mouthpiece of vile and baseless slander against a fellow member of this House. He brought out all that filth and foulness on the floor, and he is ashamed of it now, yet he isnot man enough to stand up in the committee and make full and ample apology such as one gentleman would to another under the circumstances. He knows that to-night he has to learn a lesson, that he has taken a course in this House that not one of his leaders will defend, and none has justified; and the hon. member for Queen's (Mr. Davies), skipping by that unhappy incident of to-night's debate, plunged at once into the General's report in order to occupy the attention of the House.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) You do not want the (ienerals report to ocrupy the attention of the House.

Mr. TCPPER. Certainly not when the hon. gentleman's conduct is at stake, when we are considering whether the hon. gentleman would do what any gentleman would to under those circumstances instead of sitting there and playing the ignominious part he has played to-night hefore this House. I am not surprised that the leater of the Opposition would not undertake to justify the hon. member in making that statement, amd making, as his cool excuse that he rid not make the affidavit, that he did not certify to it, and that, having read it here, he was not responsible for it, that he was not responsille for the miserable and lying slander which was read by him to the House, and would not state whether he was in possession of such information as would enable him to take further action in the case. There is a comrse that the House would take if the hon. gentleman was worth that trouble. Where such a calumny is brought forward and repeated, it is possible for the House to record its opinion of the hon. genteman, and of the statement which he made. Under all these circumstances, I do not know whether, in riew of the full disavowal of the proceedings of the hom. gentleman by the leater of the Opposition, the House will care to follow it any further, hut it is gratifying to tind that no one on the frout benches of the Opposition has taken the trouble to justify the action of the hon. member for North Brant (Mr. Somerville).

Mr. McMULLEN. I have listened the whole evening to this discussion and I have heen surprisel at the imlignation which has been expressed by the Minister of Marine, the indignation which he has assmmed in regard to certain statements which have beer made on this side of the House. The remarks of the hon. gentleman have reminded me of the style of an hon. gentleman who is not here now but from whom the Minister of Militia is a direct descendant--I mean the Minister of Marine. The hon. member for Brant (Mr. Somerville) had locuments in his possession which bore directly on public expenditure, and he showed clearly that, if these statements were true, the money of this conntry had gone in a direction in which it should not have grone. He brought that matter before the House in connection with an item which was before the House, that is the expenditure upon the militia. I heard him say that he made no personal charge against the member for West Toronto (Mr. Denison), but that the man whose case he referred to had undoulstedly suffered very much from the action of somebody. He also stated that the money of the Dominion had been improperly applied by leing paid out in a manner it should not have been if the statements contained in those atfidavits are correct. I think this is the proper place in which these matters should be brought up. If we are to go before the hon. Minister of Militia and suggest that he should investigate such cases, I douht if we would receive a hearing at all. My hon. friend from Brant (Mr. Somerville) has the right, and it is his duty, to criticise the expenditure, and he has very properly criticisel the expenditure in connection with the Department of Militia. I hope this discussion will have a good effect in reference to the expenditure in this Militia Department. I camnot say that the present appearance of the hon. Minister of Militia is likely to become much more warlike than the appearance of the hon. gentleman who occupied that position before; but the present Minister is supposed to be coonomically disposed, and I hope that the million and a quarter which we have been spending will have some better effect than we have seen it have in past years. The report of General Herbert shows that the money has been uselessly spent, and has been squandered. He condemns the expenditure from begiming to end, but, becaluse my hon. friend from Kent (Mr. Campbell) quotes from the denemal's report, an attack is made upon him, and it is said that he is traducing and slandering the militia of the country. He did nothing of the kind. There was not a word which he put before the committee except what he took from the report of Gieneral Herbert, and I hope that the different clauses of that report will be taken into consilleration by the (ioverument, as they show that we are spending a million and a (fuarter on the militia uselessly, and that the force as it now stands is no credit to this country. It is only men occapying such positions as that occupied ly Gieneral Herbert who can make these criticisms fairly. Every remark which has leen made ly my hon. friend from Brant (Mr. Somerville) and my hon. friend from Kent (Mr. Camplell) has been justified hy the report which has been laid on the Table by the Minister of Militia.
Committee rose and reportel progress.

ADJOURNMENT-WEST INDIAN MISSION.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON moved the aljourmment of the House.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Before you put that motion I would like to call the attention of the leader of the House to the correspondence with reference to the West Indian mission that was brought down last year. I think it was stated last evening by the Minister of Finance that the whole of that correspondence was brought down last year, and that the accuracy of my statement to the contrary might be judged in other matters by that fact. I have in my hand that correspondence, and it contains the repirt prepared in Council, the memorandum of the letter that the Minister was to commmicate to the various Governors, and some of the Governors' answers. There is not any accomit of the speeches that were made by the hon. gentleman in various places in the West Indies, that are usually included in these papers, and there is no report whatever that the linister made upon his return to His Excellency or to the Secretary of State. I would ask the leader of the House whether these papers which were not brought down last year, might not be laid upon the Table of the House this session. I camot conceive that there can be any reason for further withholding those papers from the House.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The statement which the Finance Minister made last night was that all correspondence relating to these negotiations had been brought down last session. I think that is correct. I think he was then controverting a position taken by the member for Bothwell in a previous speech, that the correspondence had not been brought down.

Mr. Tupper.

Mr. MILLS: (Buthwell). I did not say the correspondence, I said the papers and correspondence.

Sir JOHN THOMPNON. I do not profess to be verlally accurate, and I assume, of course, that the hon. member correctly recollects his own speech. I am sure I recollect distinctly what the Minister of Finance said, that all the correspondence on this subject had been brought down. I doubt that there is any document remaining not brought down. Put if there is any, it will be bronght down.

Mr: MILLS (Bothwell). There is surely a report of the Minister on his return.
sir JOHN THOMPSON. I am satistiel that there is not. But if there is, it will be brought down.

QUEBEC HARIBOUR ANI) RIVER POLICE.

Mr. TUPPER moved for leave to introlluce bill (No. 66) to repeal the Act respecting the Hathour and River Police of the Province of Quebec. He said: The House will recollect that an amomalous combition of atfairs in reference to the River Police has existed, and din exist for many years in Canada, that is to say, that, while the mumicipalities in general were responsible for the order preserved in the virious ports connected with them, in the Province of Quebec there was for some time before Confeleration and ifterwards a harlour police maintained by the general Govermment in the ports of Montreal and Queliec. I believe the reasons for the existence of this force were in connection with the large extent of woolen shipping which came into these ports, and the large amount of tomage engaged in the trade of those ports, and also in regard to the practice of erimping, which was detrimental to the owners of shipping. In order to protect them, this force was instituted and maintained for many years. The shipping concerned was supposed to pay the tax or expenses necessary for the maintenance of the force. Many changes have oucurred in connection with this trade, and none more remarkable than the decline in the wooden shipping at these ports, and, following very closely the work of the police and knowing that this was a tax upon the ports and was injurious to the foreign shipping going into them, I recommended the abolition of the force in the port of Nontreal. The force in Montreal was abolished together with the tax. Then it seemed to be the almost unanimous wish of the people of the port of Quebec that the police force and the tax should be maintained there ; but, again following very carefully the work of that force in Quebec, I have come to the conclusion that there is no reason for its existence there, and certainly no reason for the federal authorities to be concerned in the administration of the police affairs of that harbour. It was represented hefore that there was a very large harbour there, covering various municipalities, and that the city of Quebec alone could not assume the protection of the shipping at that port. Since then, as hon. gentlemen will see by the report of our agent there, not only has a change come about, but the captains of vessels are thenselves aiding, and abetting the very system of crimping which Parliament tried to keep drown in their interests. So keen has become the comporition that the captains of the ships have themscives mate it impossible for the police to do the work for which the force was originally created. So to speak, they steal men from one another. I helieve, also, that the owners of ships are mostly arerse to this tax and will be glad to have a repeal of the law, which, for the reason I have given, has hecome practically useless. I referred to the report of my department and the report of the agent in order to bear out to some extent the statement which I have mate as to the change in this business of crimping. Not only is there a change in the views of the locality as to the usefulness of this force, but I have a memorial of the Board of Trate of that city in which they ask among other things for the abolition of this tax. That, of course, contioms to a certain extent the position which I take. But even above these grominds, there are perhaps much broader gromuls to which I might invite the attention of the House, namely, that it is an anmalons prisition of affairs that this lanliament should be concerned in the protection of that harbour. he it large or be it smatl. If one monicipality is not able to diseharge its duty in this respect. it is for the consideration of the local authorities, who can give it any protection which is neerlen. There is another consideration, and that is the question as to the jurisdiction of our police force there. As a matter of fact, the local authorities enforce the Act. Our police are merely used as constables, hut the anministration is in the hands of the city of Quebec. I have the operations for the last two or three years very carefully noted and recorden, and they lead me to the opinion that the foree which has been maintained at that city for the last two or three years, is not only a useless holy, in the strict sense of the word, as regards the purposes for which it was originally created, but that it is in the interest of shipping in that locality that the tax should be abolished. I wish to point out that the Province of Quebec, in fact the Maritime Provinces, are largely interested in this question. I am informed, and the Board of Trate confirmed that view in their reguest to have this tax abolished, that the imposition of a tax at the port of Quebec causes the imposition of retaliatory taxes, as it were, in the ports of the Unitel States, upon vessels hailing from those provinces, especially from the Province of Quebec, regardless as to whether that tax is imposed at Montreal or any other port, but simply becanse it is imposed in the Province of Quebec. Therefors, the question is all the more inportant. Vessels hailing from ports where there is no such tax, pay less fees in the United States ports than Canadisn ressels hailing from the ports of that particular province. For this reason I move for leave to introduce this Bill.

Mr. LACRIER. I understood the hon. gentle man to speak of a memorial from the Quebec Board of Trade; has this lreen laid on the Table?

Mr. TUPPER. It only reachen me the other day; it is dated the 6th April. I shall he happy to bring it down.

Motion agreed to, and Bill real the first time.

VOTERN LINTS OF 1s! !

Mr. PATTERSON: Huron) moved for leate to introduce Bill No. ( $\mathrm{iO}_{0}$ ) respecting the Voters Lists of 1891 . He sitid: Many of the lists were not received till the month of Jannary, 1892, and a large mumber are not tinally disposed of yet. The delay arises in part from the fact that last year Parliament extemled the time for receiving atfidavits up to the lith August, and the revising ofticers were hampered and delayed in their work hy the action of this House. Then, as regards the cther ohject of the Bill, it is proposed that there shall he no revision of the lists this year. The diovermment, in deciding on this course, do so with the intention of introducing a measure to simplify the Act and to reluce the expense of the revision of the lists.

Mr. LAURIER. I woull like to ask the hon. gentleman whether these two measures which are foreshadowed are to be introduced this session:

Mr. PATTERSON (Huron). I camnot tell the hon. gentleman until after the Faster recess. It is miler consideration.

Motion agreed to, aml Bill real the first time.

NEGOTIATIONS IVTH NEWFOUNDLAND.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Before the House passes to the Orders of the Day, I wish to recall the attention of the hon. gentleman, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, to the papers brought down with respect to Newfommlland. I asked him some time ag( about certain papers which were missing, important documents, notably one of them, a despatch from Lord Ḱnutsford, I think dated the 11 th Febmuary, which was missing from the papers-Iasked him whether it would be bronght down. The hon. gentleman stated across the foor of the House at the time that he would let me know, and afterwards he was kind enough to mention to me privately that at present he was not in a position, but he hoped to be in a short time, to give an answer, one way or the other. Since I had the conversation with the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, I have gone very carefully over the papers with the view of seeing whether all the facts that we wished to have, can be gathered from the papers that we have now. I must say to the hon. gentleman that $I \mathrm{am}$ of the opinion that it is impossible to form a proper appreciation of all the facts, as they are presented in the existing papers. I think that the House shonll require to have that despatch, it is a most important despatch, not only with respect to the immediate matter which I have before the House, but with respect to the larger matters which are, apparently, embracerl within its scope, if I may julge from the memorandum of the reference that is made in the papers now before us. I have, therefore, to ask the hon. gentleman whether he is in a position to say that this despatch will be brought down? It is dated the 11 th February, and in it an offer is said to have been made by this Govermment through the Imperial Government.

Mr. TUPPER. We all desire thit the fullest information on this subject shall be given to the House, and I believe that in a very short time both of these papers will be latid on the Table of the House. No time has been lost in endeavouring to ohtain the necessary sanction, and I expect within a few days to have the necessary authority to lay the papers on the Table of the House.

THE: WASHINGTON CONFERENCE-THE WENT INDIAN MINSION.

Mr. MILLi (Bothwell). I heg to say that the otticial communications and reports of the recent Washington negotiations have not yet been laid hefore the House, and it is of great consequence that they should be, in light of the memorandum to which my hon. friem for Queen's has referred. It is pretty clear that the hon. gentlemen went to Washington in consequence of the despatch sent by Lord Knutsford to the Government of Canada, and it is very desizable we should have before us any memoramdum, or any despatelh or communications that may have passed. I womld also again call the attention of the Minister of Finance to the fact that we have never had before us yet one syllable of his West Indian mission ; the corresponlence that took place, and his speeches in Jamaica and elsewhere, although mentioned in the press, have never been laid before Parliament : nor have any communications or memoraudum made by him on this subject, been brought under our attention. All the papers that we have had yet brought down to us are those that relate to the iletermination of the fiovernment on the subject lefore the hon. gentleman set out on his voyage.

(In the Committee.)

Mr. CHARLTON. I wish to ask whether this is one of the railway lines which are somewhat affected by bye-election promises; whether the electors of the riding or ridings through which this proposed line is to pass, hare had any promises from members of the Government, or from parties representing the Government, in the bye-elections ? I would also ask whether it is the intention of the Government to grant any subsidy to this road, or whether any promise of that kind is extended in regard to this road?

Nir JOHN THOMPSON. The fovermment has mo information on that subject.
Mr. CHARLTON. Perhaps the Government would be kind enongh to inform us whether there is any intention, on lehalf of the fovernment, bearing upon the prospects of this road, as to granting it aid in the future?
sir JoHN THOMPSON. No application to that end has been considered, and I am not aware that any hats been received.

Mr. CHARLTON. That scatcely answers the question as to the intention.

Bill reported, and read the third time and passed.

GHOBE PRINTING COMIANY.

Honse resolvel itself into (ommittee on Bill
 (Mr. Immes.)

In the (ommittee.)

On section:
Mr. MULOCK. I move to add the following amembment :--

Provided always that every such by-law, and every repeal, amendment or re-enactment the reof, unless in the meantime confirmed at a general meeting of the company. duly called for that purpose. shall only have toree until the uext annual meeting of the company, and in default of contirmation thereat, shall from and until that time only cease to have force.
I olserve that the proposed section gives to the directors powers formerly held by the sharehohders, following in that respect the Companies Clanses Act: but it does mot ald the safeguad contained in that fot, namely, that the exercise of such powers by the directorate shall only have force until the next ammal meeting, when it shall require contimation by the shareholders. So I propose to add the proviso contained in the Companies Clauses Act.

Mr. BoWbeLL. Does not that give power to the directors to amend by-laws anil to act under such amemled loy laws until they are disallowed by a meeting of the shareholders, and is that advisable: I think the general mode of conducting incorporations of this kind is to have the by-laws contirmed by the shareholders before they come into operation: otherwise the directors might in the meantime lestroy the whole property of any eorporation.

Mr. MULOCK. I yuite agree with my hon. friend that the law ought to he as he states. But we are not enacting a new provision of the general law.

Mr. BOWELL. Do you not rather take power from the sharehohers under this provision and give it to the directors:

Mr. MULOCK. I am not in charge of the Bill. some of the sharehohlers have called my attention to this section, by which it is proposed to transfer power from the sharehollers to the , lirectors, following section 13 of the Companies' Clauses Act; and I propose that if they take part of the section they should take the whole of it-the lean with the fat.

Mr. BOW ELL. I know that in some loan companies the directors have not power to amend by-laws until they first derive it from the sharehohlers. I think it is rather a dangerous power to give to directors. The provision araposed in the amendment will certainly protect inie shareholders to some extent, but how far it will jnotect hem in their property in the interim between the time of the passige of a by-law and its disallowance or confirmation by the shareholders, is a question for those who have stock in the company to consider.
Mr. EDGAR. I think the amendment proposerl hy the hon. memher for North York (Mr. Mulock) is a rery proper one, lecause it seems to loring the provisions of the bill into actord, not only with the Companies Clanses Act, but the Dominion Letters Patent Act, the Ontario Letters Patent Act, the Railway Act, and all other Acts of the kind except the Act respecting Loan (ompanies and Building Societies, to which the hon. Minister of Militia has referred. I do not think we conhl midertake to propose, in the case of the private Bill before us, to alter the general law or to make it very different from what the greneral law is: amd what the private Acts are of all other similar companies.

Mr. BOWELLL I am not groing to propose any change, hut I dissent from the proposition laid down by the hon. gentleman. When any Act is before Parliament it is for Parliament to say what its provisions shall be. It matters not whet her they be in accord or not with the provisions of any general law: Parliament has the power to say whether any general Act is correct in principle or not.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). The hon. gentleman is confounding the powers of Parliament with its duties. It has power to do many things it ought not to do: and whatever may be our powers we ought to exercise them in the direction of securing uniformity in private Acts with the general policy of the law. If that policy is formd to be wrong. we ought to iogin with the larger measure and ameml the general Act.

Mr. MaCARTHY. The hon. gentlen'an forgets that this Bill is taking away from the sharehohlers and transferring to the directors the power and authority they already possess. By the earlier Act their shareholders had the power to make hy-laws, and the hon. member for North York tells us some of the shareholders object to being depriven of the authority they holl. Otherwise, of course, no person would object to it.

Mr. MULOCK. I said my attention had been called to the matter.
Mr. McCARTHY. By some shareholders:
Mr. MULOCK. Yes.
Bill amemded, reported, and read the thind time and passed.

ENPORT IUCTY ON NAW-LO(iS, &ッ.

Mr. IVES moved :

That it is expedient to impose export duties on sawlogs and spruce pulpwood, when exported from Canada.
He said: Although the subject which I propose to introduce is of very great importance, I do not intend to occupy the time of the House at any very great length, reserving to myself the right of reply, which I understand I hate. If we for a moment refer to the lumber duties as they stomi in the United states lefore the passing of what is known as the McKinley Act, and compare them with what they are now, we find that the only change made was Sl a thousand on white pinc. The duties remain precisely the same under the Mckinley Aet as they were prior to the passing of that Act, except as to white pine which was reduced from $\leq$ to $\$$ a thonsand. I mention this fact lecause I find that the public have an ermonous impression that considerable reductions were made. It is senerally supposed that the reduction also applied to spruce. so doubt it was expected by the Camadiandiovernment as well as hy the (anamian people that the reduction wonld apply to spruce as well as to pine. But. sir, the only concession made to us. or marte to the people of the Enited States, was a reduction of 1 upon white pine. aml that was the only adrantage, if alvantage it may be callenl. which the people of this comitry ohitaned when they remover the export daty. not only from white pine, hat from all other kinds of loges shingle bolts, de. I find, sir, that the change which our iowernment marle has been popular with no class of the community except the a anufacturers of white pine lumber. I do not know how numerous a boly of men they maty he, but certainly they are comparatively few in number. But if you will camaass the country wer you will find that the remonal of export duties is combemmed and is impopular. with every other lumher interest, with every other manufact iring interest, aml. in fact, with the people generally, and that the only people in the world who are pleased, or who have heen at any tinte pleased, are the white pine men. Now, it is; an ammaly which the other lumbermen have a right to complain of that while the more raluable lamber, lumber which is worth. on an arerage, son a thousimd. is almitted into the United States market at $\leqslant 1$ a thonsam:l, the less valuable lumber. the spruce lamber, worth, perhaps, on an werage, Sl0 a thomand on less, is charged douhle that ammunt. or $\mathbf{S N}_{2}$ a thomsaml. I also complain, not only of this anomalous position which all other lumbermen are put in by the action of our liovernment, but I complain of it becatuse it is against the: interests of all other lumbermen, and is. I humbly believe, against the interest of the country, in favour of not a very numeroms, but a very powerful and wealthy interest, in Canada, namely, the white pine interest. Hitherto the manufacturers of white pine stood with other Canadian lumbermen and worked with them shoulder to shoulde: for the adrantage of the mited inlustry, and for the arlvantage of the country, hat from the time that these gentlemen, owing to the ation of our (iovermment, olitained that enormons adrantage orer their brother Canadians engaged in similar enterprise, from that moment their interest has been antagonistic $t$ o the interests of the rest of the Canadian people, and they are clamouring for the continuation of a state of things which is unfait and unjust, and has always been unfair and unjust to all the rest of the people of this country. But what great adrantage have the white pine men oltained by the removal of the export duties from all classes of lumber hy the radical measure which the Government allopterl: Those of them whose logs are leyond the reach of the American people, that is to say, whose logs are so far up the feadwaters of the Ottawa River that there is no ranger of their being floated, across the Georgian Taty, Take Michigan, sofarup the head waters of the Ottawa River and its tributaries that they camot he hought out by rail-in fact, those lumbermen have an arlrantage, we will say, of $s 1$ a thousand. But the other white pine men who had huilt mills and who hat invested their eapital on the fieorgian Bay and in the Lake Huron section of the white pine $i$ elt of Ontario, have not received any benetit, hate mot enjosed any adrantage : on the contrary, they have had to compete in the log market with the American perople, who enjoy an adrantage of $\leq 1$ a thousand over them in the United States matiket, becanse when they saw their logs and send them into the United States market they have to pay sl a thousam duty to the United States diovermment. The result has been just what is set forth in a letter which, with your permission. I will read. It is a letter from Mr. John Moiles, and is dated sault ste. Marie, 2sth April. 1s?n. He says:
"Salut Ste. Makif, 0st., 28th April, 1891.
" Mr. W. II. Pıemmer, City.

- Deat Sir, - I am afraid we can get no logs to saw at our millom John Ishat this year. Last season we cut 16. $\mathbf{i n}$, got feet, but this year, all the saw-logs in our neighbourbood are going to Michigan. Sibley d Baringer will take from Spanish River about 10, now, (W0 feet. Gates and tie Michigan Pipe Company, 11, NOO, HOW fect. E. Matl, from Spanish River and Manitoulin Island from near Little Current, about lo, 100 , 100 feet. The Emery Lamber Company, from French River, abont 20, (Mn) INKI feet. Mr. Mchace of the Mildrum Bay Mill, is not going to start his mill this season ; he wantsto sell his logs, 4,000 , (0) feet. The Spanish River Lumber Company, for whom we sawed last season, do not want to hire any loge sawed this year, they intend to sell all of their logs that they cannot cut at their own mill. They will have to sell 6, (n) $0,0 \mathrm{mo}$ teet. Cork Brus., Serpent River Mills, have 10, HNO, Hob feet more than they can saw in their mill this season, they intend to sell them to Michigan parties. As you see the above makes figures are very near correct. I have been told that there are a great number of logs going to Lake Erie, but do not know the parties whoare taking them. I wasinsaginaw, Miehiran, a few days ago, and spoke with some lumbermen about towing loges from orer here to Michigan. I said that I did not think this Government would let them take aw:y all the logs free and leave the mills on this side idle. when they charge $\$ 1$ per thousand feet custom dues to let lumber into their market ; they said the Canadian tiovernment would not dare put on an export duty. Sum, if we have to pay duties on oil, sugar. meat and machinery, and sl per thousand feet to get our lumber inty the United States, and the Michigan men get their lus from this country free, and have no daty to pay on anything, we cannot compete with them and will have to shit down our mills. In that case the farmers on the north shure of Lake Huron will lose a good market for their mroduce. When the mill: are running they give the farmers a good home market for everything they have to sell. I hope the Government will put on an export duty early in May before they take away the logs, so we can get sume of them to saw.
- Yours very truly.
"JOHN MOLLES."
Now that letter expresses briefly and forcibly the exact position in which the white pine men of (ianalia are who are situated in that section of conntry where the Americans can float logs by water, or caa car them handily to mills in the Unitel States. I humbly submit to you, and to the jurlgment of the House, that the advantage which the white pine men of the Upper Ottawa have. of oll a thousand, is not sufficient to compensate for the loss sustained by the saw-mill men in other portions of Canada where logs are now floated across the line and sawn in the United States mamfactories. But if there were no other interest, if there were no spruce interest, if there were no public interest : if the people of this country who want a labour market, and the farmers of this country who want a market for what they arise upon their farms, had no interest, yet I claim that the disadvantage to certain sections of the white pine industry is greater than all the adrantages that have heen reaped by the few who have been beyond the reach of the competition of American log loyers. If that is the position of the white pine man, what is the position of the spruce men? The position of the spruce men is simply this: That they are handicapped in the competition with the United States manufacturers by $\$ 2$ per thousand duty upon a product worth upon an arerage $\$ 10$ per thousand, or a duty equivalent to 20 to 25 per cent. The result is, that along the frontier, and not only along the frontier hat wherever our rivers or streams extend in such a direction that they may be utilized for floating logs to the United States; wherever spruce logs can be floated ont of Canada into the Uniten States, and wherever they can be loaled and carried to the United Vitates mills, they are being taken out of the country, being sawn in the United States, and our people are leaving our own country amb going across the line to work in mills where our own lumber is being sawn and mannfactured, and this will increase day by day as the logs lecome scarcer in New Fhgland and as the markets there improve. The result is that all through the Fastern Townships you will find-I am speaking more particularly of the country with which I am specially acifaintedmills closed, which would not lie closed were it not for this anomalous state of things : and where the mills are not closed, where the satw-mill owners own their limits and are independent of the American log huyers, even then so great is the difference made hy the $\$ 2$ per thousand duty, it is more profitable to them to load their logs on cars, send them to the United States and sell them, than to manufacture them and send the lumber to the United States. And if this state of things continues the result will be that the spruce lumber of this country will be more and more, until finally, it will be altogether, manufactured on the other side of the line, and we will have the pleasure simply of making a present to the Americans of our forests and our forest products, because, when you have driven the local mill men out of the field, the price paid for logs will simply be that which pays the farmer for cutting them, without any reference to the value of the logs themselves or to stimpage. This has been the effect on the white pine and the spruce interests. The effect of the reinoval of this duty on pulpwood has been even more disastrous, and the McKinley Act is even more unjust to the pulpmen than it is to the lumbermen. I said a few moments ago that the only change in duties under the McKinley Act was to reduce the duty on white pine lumber. But the McKinley Act increased the duty to the point of prohibition onground pulp, so as to make it impossible to manufacture it in Canadia and export it to the United States, andincreased the duty to $\$ 6$ per ton, or $\$ 90$ per car, on chemical wood pulp manufactured in Canada and sent to the United States. The Canadian pulp nanufacturer, making ground wood pulp, was ohliged to close up his mill so far as the American market was concerned, and had the pleasure of seeing the very timber, which was his raw material that he depended on when he constructed his mill, put on the cars and carried to the United States and mannfacturel into ground wood pulp on the other side of the line. So far as the chemical pulp interest is concerned, the McKinley tariff is not absolutely prohibitory. It is possible under certain conditions to mannfacture and export chemical pulp to the United States and make a living profit. If our mills had their raw material, on which they hat a right to depend, preserved to them, they would he able to get on, and live, and employ a large amount of labour on the manufacture and sale of chemical pulp to the United States. But this is what is happening. The Canadian manufacturer of chemical pulp huilt his mill on a certain river, or with respect to a certain tract of comentry that he looked upon as furnishing a preserve of raw material for his industry. The removal of the export cluties has brought into his reserve companies from the United States, who have built mills just across the line for the purpose of manufacturing Camadian wood into chemical pulp, and they have to carry it ly rail less than 30 miles perhaps from the very mill which was built with respect to those certain reserves of timber ; and our local mills are being rendered useless and are heing thrown into hankruptcy, not because they camot make pulp under present conlitions, hut hecause men on the other side of the line, not 30 miles rlistant, who have no export duties to pay, who take the wood in free, and have not to pay $\mathbf{s i n}_{6}$ a ton import duty into the Enited States, are taking away the lumber and taking it away by thonsands of cords, or even thousands of car loads, into the United States, to he manufactured in pulp mills erected for the express purpose of manufacturing Canalian Wood, and which have no other timber reserve to depend upon whatever. We have, then, this position: That hy the removal of the export luties our people got the alvantage of a reduction of $s 1$ per thousand on white pine, which we will grant was an adrantage to certain of our white pine manufacturers. But while it was an adrantage to certain of them, it was a disadsantage to others, and was in fact an arlantage only to those wlos cannot be reached by the American hayers, or by those who have their mills on the other side of the line, and who are interested in taking white pine there and sawing it. We have had as a result no concession in spruce whatever, but the mere act of the Government has made the white pine men antagonistic to the spruce men, and has left the spruce men to stand by themselves, not only alone hat against the opposition of the white pine interest. So far as ground wood pulp is concerned, it has leen ruined, lecause the increase in the tariff on the other side has rendered it impossible to manufacture and export it to the United States profitably. So far as chemical pulp is concerned, the duties have been increased, its position was made worse, although it is not yet so bad but that it may survive. It is being attacked ly the rest of the lumber being taken away to the United States and manufactured there. Now, Sir, for a moment I wish to call your attention to the fact that when you come to select the one of greater importance, it is not the white pine interest but the spruce interest. The white pine of this country is confined to a comparatively small area. It is confined to the Ottawa, and the Georgian Bay and Lake Huron sections of the Provinces of Ontario and Quelsec. There is noother white pine in the Dominion now of any consequence whatever, and not only is it confined to these small areas, but it is being rapidly exhansted, and very good judges estimate that at the present rate at which pine is leing manufactured, in ten years the proluction will necessarily he limited to one-half the puantity that is now manufactured. That statement goes to show that in ten years hence, one-half the present pine linits will have become fully exhausted, and that the white pine interest itself will, in consequence, become a comparatively unimportant one. Another thing to consider with reference to this matter is the fact that the white pine rloes not reprorluce. Fither some change of climate or some change of natural conditions has prevented the reprorluction of the white pine which, was found in this country when it was first settled. The tree that grows up in the place of the white pine is exceedingly dwarf, knotty, and valueless, so that when the present white pine timber is exhansted the industry will entirely disappear. So far as the spruce interest of this country is comcerned, it is an infinitely more important interest to-day than the white pine interest ever was. Spruce is the timber of the whole Dominion of (amada. It is the prevailing timber of the Maritime Provinces, of the Province of Quebee, of the larger half of the Provinces of Ontario, of ilanitolna, and of the North-West Territories, east of the mountains, so far as that region has any valuable timber of the soft species. In fact, it is the timber of the Dominion, and it has this adrantage orer pine, that it reproduces and that muler a proper and stitable system of cutting, and wise forestry litws, it would he perpetual. . Fverybody knows that spmue, if lumbered properly, and if trees not less than 12 inches on the stamp are cut, it will reproduce in from 15 to 20 years, and be as good in every respect and as well timbered as it was before it was lumbered, and so on for all time so far ass we can judge. Such being the fact you will see, Mr. Speaker, that the spruce timber heing spread all over the Dominion, and having the quality of reproducing, certainly is entitled to the consileration of the fiovernment, and to the consideration of this House, in any policy that may he adopted here. The Provincial Governments have a large interest in this question. The Provinces of Ontario and Quebec especially have been deriving a large amount of money ammally from our pine forests chiefly. That remark applies to a greater extent to the Province of Ontario than it does to the Province of Quebec. That revenue will disappear almost entirely within the next 10 or 1.) years: but if a proper policy is pursued liy this Government and by the Local fovermments, and if proper regulations are adopted in reference to the spruce lumbering on Government lands, so as to protect the forests from destruction by fire, I undertake to say that in 25 years from now the Local Governments of this Dominion will derive it larger revenue from spruce than they have ever derived from white pine, even in the palmiest days of that industry. I believe, Sir, and I know what I am talking about, that the forests of Canada contain the future paper material for the contiaent of America. I know that there is notsufficient pulp material in the United Sitates to last them 10 years, and that from that time onward they will be almost, if not entirely, dependent, upon the spruce forests of Canada to furnish material for the paper industries of the United States. There are 1, ino paper mills in the United States at present, and the quantity of pulp that is consumed by these mills is something enormous. Fou may reckon an average of 10 tons a day for each one of them, and probally still be within the mark. Now, excepting the lass wood and poplar wool which they have to depend upon to a small extent in the Western States, there is no material of this kind of any consequence west of the St. Lawrence River, and from that to the Mississippi River. There is no pulp material of any importance in the United States west of the Sit. Lawrence River, and at the present day 60 per cent of the quantity required is taken from Canada and manufactureil there. East of the St. Lawrence there is in the Adirondacks a quantity of spruce timber still left : there is a small quantity in Northern New Hampshire, and in Northern Vermont, and a considerable quantity in the state of Maine. But, Sir, at the present day, to say nothing about the mills west of the St. Lawrence River, there are fifty pulp mills in New Eingland which are getting their total pulp supply from Eastern Canadia, and which would be ohliged to close up within three months if they could not get the material here to take to the United States for use in their mills. I understa, to say, sir, and I repeat it, that the material for paper on the continent of North America is in Canada and nowhere else, and it is worth taking care of and worth preserving. Infact, it is the main thing that our Provincial Governments have got to look to in the inmediate future, so far as revenue from timber is concerned. The guestion may le asked me: What would be the effect if the export daties are reimposed : When I first put this notice on the Order Paper, I was told by a good many members: If you put on export duties, the Americans will immediately add the export duties that you impose to their present imporit duties, as they have power to do under the McKinley Act. Now, Sir, that is not the case, lecause the proviso of clanse 218 in the McKinley Act says:

" Provided that in case any foreign country shall impose an export duty upon pine, spruce, elm, or other logs, or upunstave bolts, shingle wood, or heading blocks exported to the United States from such country, then the duty upon sawn lumber herein provided for, when imported from such country. shall remain the same as fixed by law in force prior to the passage of this Act."
Therefore the only bad result that would follow would le that the pine duties would go back to si2 per thousand as they were liefore the export duty was removed. That is the only effect it would have until new legislation is adopted in the United states. Now, Sir, what led to the reduction of $\$ 1$ e. thousund on pine? I think the hon. member for North Norfolk could tell us, if he were dis. posed to do so, that what led to that reduction was the fact that certain American citizens, influential at Washington, intuential members of the Republican party, had become owners of large and extenaive timber limits in the Georgian Bay and Lake Huron section of Ontario, and were extremely anxions to get their logs into Michigan, where their mills were without logs, and which they were obliged to get or lose the money they had invested in those mills. Their anxiety to get stock for their mills from the Canadian forest became so great that they persualed Mr. Blaine and the other authorities at Washington to reluce the import duty $\$ 1$ a thousand upou pine on condition that the Canadian fioverment-would remove all export cluties from pine, spruce and every other kind of logs. Now, Sir, if those duties were reimposed to-morrow, the same influence which caused that reduction of $\$ 1$ a thousind would, I think, if our Govermment would stand to their guns, get the duties taken off pine and spruce altogether. If not, we would keep our logs and our lumber, the Americans would get along without us, and we woulh get along without them. Whatever would be the effect upon the pine and spruce log inclustry, of this much I am perfectly certain, that if we had in export duty upon spruce pulpwood, or upon spruce lumber, so as to prevent it being taken to the other side and used as pulpwood, the effect would be that the luty on (anadian chemical pulp and ground wood pulp would come off, and pulp for American paper mills would le manufactured to a large extent in Canala. Because it stands to reason that if the Americans had not that $\overline{\mathrm{S}}$ a ton protection, it would be their interest to bring the sola ash to the wood, instead of the wool to the soda ash. They must have our lumber for pulpwood : they camot do without it ; and if they did not take it, the price of pulp would rise so much in the United States that Canadian pulp could be sent there over the duty. We are not afrail to compete with the Americans in the manufacture of chemical pulp or ground wood pulp. We have the timber here, and they have not; we have just as grool water power as they have; and althongh there are a good many interests in Canada that would sutfer from free trade, that one interest would not suffer and I have never pretended that it wouk. I believe that we can afford to adopt the freest possible trate with the Cnited States so far as the pulp and paper trade is concerned, because we have the raw material. Anyway, whether we can or camot, they must have our spruce to make pulp, or else have our pulp; and if the export duties were put on, we would certainly find the Americans proposing to remove or lower the duties on lumber on consideration of our removing the export duties, or they would see the manufacture of pulp going on in Canadia to a much larger extent than has ever heen dreamed of as yet. I do not ask for mohibitive export duties. I ask simply for that degree of protection by the way of export duty that will put us on even terms with the Americans with whom we have to compete. Now, it takes two cord of pulp wood to make a ton of chemical pulp; so that $\$ 6$ a ton on pulp would lee equivalent to \$3 a cord on wood. This, everything else being equal, woukl put us on an even footing with them so far as chemical pulp is concerned. A duty of eren 52 a cord would put a pulp mill upon almost every water power in the Eastern Townships, and afforl an enormous amount of labour within that section at least of the Province of Quebec. If the Government are disposed, for the reasons which 1 have very imperfectly stated, and for other reasons, to reimpose the export duties, they should le put on in such a way that they can be removed partially or altogether whenever the United States show a disposition to meet us half way, and to reilnce or altogether remove their import duties. I do not propose this as a retaliatory measure in any respect. I do not see how the Americans can find fault with our putting our own manufacturers, as much ats possible, on even terms with theirs by means of an export duty protection to correspond with their import duty protection. If we were to go further and make it prohibitive there might le some complaint, hut so long as we make it only sufficiently protective to give our own people fair-play and equal conditions with theirs, and impose it in such a way that it may be reduced or taken off altogether whenever their import dnties are reduced or taken off altogether, I think it would he fair ant just, and I do not think it could fairly lee complained of liy the American people. But whether it can or camot be, this much is certain. that the principle that actuates the Govermment at Washington is the interest of the American people and that only; and the principle that must actuate the Camadian (iovernment is the interest of the Canalian people and the Camalian people only, without any reference whatever to whether their policy is popular in the United States or not.
Mr. CORBOULD. I cannot allow this oppor. tunity to pass withont saying a few words on behalf of those engaged in the lumberingindustry in British Columbia. As you are aware. Sir, that inlustry is second to none in the Dominion of Camada in its importance : hut those engaged in it are placed at a disudrantage so far as the eastern market is comcerned. Although the American duty on white pine has been reduced to $$ 1$ per thousiam, still our Douglas fir going into the United states is not classed as a pine. int under the heal of " not otherwise provided $f(r, "$ and a duty of se a thousand is imposed upon it. Althongh our fir logs are admitter free, the American pitch pine, coming from the United states, is used in making car sills and for similar purposes als our Douglas fir is used for. The pitch pine from the Unitel States leeing almitted free into Canada, our lumbermen camot compete with it in the eastern markets, and I think that a duty should be placed on the pitch pine coming from the United States similar to that imposed on our Douglas fir going into the United States. This would give those eligaged in the lumber interest a fair chance to compete in the eastern market with the lumber coming from the United States, and I hope the Minister will see his way to imposing this duty, which I do not think would be considered in any way a measure of retaliation, as it would only be placing the two interests on the same footing. I think that all the British Colambia members in the House will back me up in what I have said, so far as our lumber interests are concerned. It was intended that a deputation from the lumbermen in British Columbia slould wait upon the Minister upon this subject. I was in hopes they would be here before this motion catne up, but unfortumately as yet they have not arrived. I, therefore take this opportunity of expressing their views and the views of the different members for British Columbia.

Mr. CHARITON. The hon member for Sherbrooke has my sympathy in the fact that the spruce interests did not receive concessions under the McKinley Bill similar to those received by the pine interests. It is in matter of regret to everywody interested in the welfare and prosperity of Canada that this should sot have been the case: and were there any method by which we could surely place them in a better position than they now oceupy, 1 should be in farour of adopting it. Bat I have very serious doubts as to the propriety of adopting the measure proposed by the hon. gentleman as a remedy for the grievance under which the spruce interest labours. When we come to examine the thing critically, it will be found that to take the course proposed, would be likely to bring about disaster: The hon. gentleman informs us that the Mckinley bill made no change in mitigation of the lumber duties except with reference to white pine. We will find that, in addition to white pine, a change was made in the duty upon pine claphoards of all classes. A change was made in the duty upon pickets and palings from 20 to 10 per cent ad ralorm. A change was made also in the duty upon shingles, from 3 3 to 20 per cent, so that five mitigations of the American duty are made in place of the one stated hy the hon. gentleman. He tells us that the removal of the export duty was an act on the part of the Gorermment popular only with the white pine interest. I must take issue with the hon. gentleman on that point. I quite well remember when the hon. gentleman who at present fills the position of Secretary of state, strongly protested agrainst the imposition of an export cuty on elm logs, and the result of his protest was that the duty was not imposed. I remember that on account of the opposition to the export duty on oak logs, that duty was removed; and I ani ready to assert to-day that the imposition of a duty on pulpwood would be unpopular with thonsunds of small farmers who have pulpwoon, and would not see the propriety of being obliged to hold the wool without a market until the pulp mannacturers were ready to huy it at their own prices. The hon. gentleman tellis us that the only kind of lumber which received any mitigation of its hurdens in the McKinley Bill was the most valuable kind, and that it was worth on the arerage $\$ 20$ per thousiand. This is, Mr. speaker, as yonare well aware. in exaggerated statement of the average price of pinc. The quality of pine that is actually benefited hy the mitigation of duty to $\$ 1$ per thousand is the coarse, cheap grade which conld not be manufactured with profit, but which at present can be manufactured and leaves a margin of prefit. That coarse grade can be manufactured and sold under the reduction of duty, which formerly was left to perish ly fire or rot in the woods. He tells us that the white pine men oltained an anomalous advantage under this law. Well, the white pine men did not ol. tain this. The white pine men were passive in this matter as well as the spruce men. It simply happenerl that the spruce interests of Maine and other New England States, under the nanagement of Mr. Reid, and Mr. Dingley, and Mr. Blaine, succeeded in resisting successfully the movement in farour of a reduction of duty. The five articles I have named were the only ones that benefited, under the provisious of the McKinley Bill, from the reduction of the duty. The white pine men did not obtain this advantage, but it came to them without any motion on their own part. The hon. gentleman tells us that an immense movement in saw-logs is taking place on Lake Huron, that the mills there cannot obtain stock to saw, that the logs are all leing sold to the American market, and he read a letter from Mr. Moiles informing him, that the mills from that side cannot oltain logs and that all the logs are being towed away. Well, I am informed that this self-same Mr. Moiles has made a contract to saw several million feet of logs on the Canadian side at John Island, and I think. that is somewhat inconsistent with the statement made ly my hon. friend. I happen to know something about this matter. In fact, the firm with which $I \mathrm{am}$ connected is placed in a position where we have to choose between sawing logs on the Canadian side and towing to the Anerican side. They made a careful calculation in the matter. We do not own a mill, but have to satw our logs, and the result is this: If, we tow our logs to the American side, we save the payment of $\$ 1$ per thousaml duty; but on the other hand we mast pay a tow bill of $\$ 1.50$ per thousand feet, incurring besiles a narigation risk equivalent to at least 7 gents per thousand, making se2.enas actual cost-risk of towing the logs over. When we place our lumber on the other side, we leave it at a point where we can get freight at $2 \overline{5}$ cents per thousand cheaper to Chicago and Buffalo than from the Canadian side if sawn there, so that the net loss in towing to the American market and sawing the logs there is $\$ 1$ per thousand. No man will build a millon the Anericanside to tow logs to from Canada. Millmen having mills in Michigan will tow their $\log$, but there is no other inducement to tow the $\log s$, and it is correct that the disadvantage of towing logs to the United states to saw them there is 81 per thousind under present conditions, taking risk of towing into consideration. The hon. gentleman speaks of logs going to Lake Erie. There is only one firm towing there now, and they are towing what is called long timber, spars and timber of that kind, but the volume of trade in that region has been diminishing year by year for many years, and is almost about to cease. There is only one firm left in Canada that is towing logs there now, and I believe this year that firm will tow only two rafts of about $\bar{\sigma}, \mathbf{( 1 ) ( 0 , 0 \times ( )}$ feet. The hon. gentleman informs us that the advantage arising from the repeal of the export duties and the reluction of the American import duty accrues exclusively to the white pine lumbermen of the Ottawa Valley, that the lumbermen of the Lake Huron listrict do not take the same riew in regard to the adrantage. I think I know something about the feeling and interests of the lumbermen of the Lake Huron region, being one of them myself, and I do not believe that 5 per cent of the lumbermen of the Georgian Bay and Lake Huron district are not opposed to the imposition of the export duty. A deputation waited on the Government some two years ago asking them to remove this duty, as it prevented our getting free lumber from the United States. They have also been down recently; and I am safe in saying that the trade there are unanimously opposed to the duty as much as the lumbermen of the Ottawa Valley are. In fact, it is almost the unanimous feeling of the lumbermen from the Ottawa Valley to Rat Portage. The hon. gentleman tells us that spruce logs are being towed out of the country very rapidly. The Trade and Navigation Returns of last year would perhaps give a better idea of this than any assertion of the hon. gentlemans, and I find that last year the amount of spruce towed out of the country was $28,000,000$ feet, that is up to the 30th June, 1891. The total amount of logs given by the Minister of Customs as having leen towed out from 13th October, 1890, to Ist Janlary, 1892, was $43,(\mathrm{MNO})(\mathrm{KMO}$ feet of pine and $28,000,000$ feet of spruce. While in this way we exported to the Cinited States $\mathbf{8 8}, 000,000$ feet of spruce logs, we imported from the United States sereral times as much. Perhaps the hon. gentleman is not aware that an enormous trade in spruce is established, and has loeen established for years with the northern portion of the State of Maine, and that the spruce from that region passes down the River St. John in New Brunswick and is converted into lumber ly Canadian mills.

Mr. IVES. By American operatives.
Mr. CHARLTON. Probably he is not aware that our export of spruce logs to the United States is a mere triffe to what we import. The hon. gentleman says that the duty on pulpwood is 86 a ton. According to the Mckinley Bill the duty on mechanical pulpwood is si.. 50 a ton, on chemical pulpwood unbleached sid at tom, and on chemical pulpwood bleached 57 a ton.

Mr. IVES. I said chemical, not mechanical.
Mr. CHARLTON. The wool pulp chemically treated is sulject to a duty of sia ton dry weight, but the great mass of pulpwood which is converted into pulp is a woor which is ground without being treated chemically. That is the great mass of the wood which is exported in this way. The hon. gentleman proceerled to state that pulp mills were erected on streams-aul I presime there is one on some riverinhis own locality-ame that the pulpwood on those streams was being taken ont of the country and the mill was liable to be left without stock at some future time. I suppose the hom. gentleman desires that there shall be a chance given for capitalists to erect pulp mills, and that the Government shall enact a law allowing them to hold the raw material in reserve until they are ready to buy it. He would not only permit them to hold their limits, which they have a right to do hecause they belong to them, but he woull prohibitanybody eise from entering into the purchase of pulpwool. That is what the hon. gentleman means. that the raw material, which ly Divine right belongs to the proprietor, shall not be couverted into money, but that the owner shall be prevented from turning it into cash and shall be compelled by a legislative enactment to hold this raw material until the pulp manufacturer is realy to buy it at his own price. As to his assertion that spruce forests might be made perpetual by the enactment of proper forestry laws, by preventing the cutting of timber under 12 inches in ciameter, every practical man knows that the result of leaving the smaller timber standing is generally that it is destroyed ly fire. The large timber is cut down, and the limbs and refuse feel fires and the small timber is destroyed. There is not one case in a hundred perhaps where tracts have been cut over in that way in which the timber continues to grow, hecause a fire gets in and then the timber is killed.

Mr. MILLS' (Bothwell). These forests do not belong to us.

Mr. CHARLTON. No, they do not. They belong to the provinces. The hon. gentleman tries to convey the idea that we have an absolute monopoly in this matter, and that, if we can make regulations and the United States have to sue to us for their material because we place an embargo on their oltaining it in this way, they will go dowil on their knees to us. He asserts that there is not exough wood pulp material in the United States to last ten years The assertion is utterly absurd. There are enormous quantities of this material in the Adirondacks, there are enormons quantities in New Hampshire, there are enormous quantities in Maine, in Michigan and Wisconsin. There are great quantities scat tered through other states, Minnesotia has immense quantities, and if the Americans turned their attention to the illimitable forests of the south, they would be able to obtain all they wanted. There is an interest in the United States that would welcome the imposition of a duty apon pulpwood as an enactment that would serve their own interests by making their forests of timber more valuable for the purpose of converting the wood into pulp. We have not a monopoly of this, weare simply supplying the demandnow, tosomeextent, hecause wehave superiorgeographical facilities and transportation facilities for reaching the market of some sections.

Then, the only effect of putting back this export duty would be to raise the duty upon lumber to 82 per thonsand in place of $$ 1$ as at present under the McKinley Bill. Why, says the hon. member, if the duty were reimposed, the same influence would force off the duty on pine and spruce lumber that succeeded in getting this provision made under the Mckinley Bill in INs.9. He refers to the interest of the Michigan men, men who have invested to some extent in timber lands in Canada. Now, when the McKinley Bill was unler consideration this same interest in Michigan petitioned Congress. What did they ask: Did they ask for the removal of the duty on lumber? Did their conduct and their views on this occasion give the slightest reason to suppose they would ever favour the reduction of the duty on lumber, or the removal of the duty ? On the contrary, these petitions were poured in from Michigan, Wisconsin, northern Ohio, from Minnesota, and from all the lumber regions in the vicinity of the great lakes. This is what they asked for :

> " That in case any foreizn countre shall iupose an export duty upon logs, shingle-bolts or other kinds of wood, that may be designed for, or used as, the raw material of any American saw-mill, mill, or factory, than the sawn lumber, shingles or other manufactured product of such kinds of logs, bolts or wood as may hare an export duty imposed upon it by such country, shall. when imported from such country, be subject. in addition to the regular duty provided by law, to an additional duty equiralent to the amount of such export duty, and that such additional duty shall be imposed upon anis article that might otherwise be upon the free list."

Now, Mr. Speaker, whatever influence that interest may possess, it will use its influence, in casean export duty is reimposed, to get Congress to add the export duty to the import duty. Now, my hon. friendfeels aggrieved because the white pine interest is enjoyinganadrantage that the spruce interest isnot enjoying. I am sorry that is the case. I wish the spruce interest were enjoying the same advantage; but if my hon. friend's prayer is granted, if the export duties are reimposed, of coursehe will have companions in misery, for the white pine interest will be obliged to pay $\leqslant 2$ a thonsand in place of $\$ 1$ as at present, and to that extent he might be gratified, but it would not bencfit him. He might find the next step in the programme would be that he had invited disaster to himseif. I do not suppose his position would lee improved if the export duty that might lee imposed on pulp goods, was added by the Americans as an additional duty upon his pulp. I do not suppose that the spruce interest would be greatly benefited if, in place of paying $\$ 2$ a thousand as at present on their lumber, they were obliged to pay the $\$ 2$ a thousand plus the export duty upon spruce logs. That was $\$ 1$ per thousand, and they would pay three ; if the export duty was $\$ 2$, they would pay four. It is for this reasou that I feel nervous about this matter, not that I do not sympathize with the hon. gentleman, becruse I would be in farour of adopting any measure that would afford relief to so important an interest as the spruce interest ; but because I feel convinced that the adoption of this measure would invite disaster, and that disaster would come; becanse the sure result of the reimposition of the export duty will he that the American Congress will add that reimposed export duty to the import duty, whatever it may le. Now, we do not want that, I am sure the hon. gentleman does not want it, the pine interest does not want it, nobody wants it, and we do not want to enter upon a policy of irritation that will be calculated to produce results of this character. There isonefeatureabout this case that we want to bear in mind. The American Government and the American Congress are debarred ly constitutional provision from imposing an export duty; they camot inpose an export duty at all, and if they desire to retaliate for the imposition of an export duty by a foreign power upon articles imported into that country, they mist do it indirectly. Now, the condition of trade letween these two cotintries is one that, perhaps, many of us are not aware of : the condition of trade in logs is one that Anserican public men were not aware of, I believe, until late years. I think the first incestrgations made in reference to the matter were made by the American consul who preceded the present one, Mr. Hotchkiss, who was a lumberman, and who himself investigated this matter and ascertained that the export duty of logs from Canada to the United States was less than the imports of logs from the United states to Canada. I wish to lay before the House and the Govermment some figures bearing on this point. I will take the seven years from 1884-85 to 1890.91 . I will give two tables showing the exports of saw-logs from Canada into the United States during that period, and the imports of saw-logs from the United States into Canala during that same period:

Suw-log imports, United States to Canada.

But there was a branch of this trade which the Trade and Narigation Returns do not cover, and that was the trade from the state of Maine down the Sit. Jolin Riser to the Province of New Brunswick. At one time I moved for returns showing the volume of that trade, and as I was unable to get the information from the fiovernment I sent to the secretary of the Fredericton Brom Company who gave these following statistics an to the iolume of that trade for the series of years commencing in 1884-85. This gentleman gives the quantity of pine, spruce and cellar logs brought from the sitate of Maine in each year, estimating the ralue at $\mathrm{SN}_{\mathrm{N}}$ a thousamo, which, I am told by New Brunsuick lumbermen, is probibly an under. valuation :

| Year. | Feet. | Value. |
| 1834-85 | 90.000,000 | $\times 720,000$ |
| 153i-84 | 99, (M0, 1/WI | 792, ( $\times \mathrm{M}$ |
| 1886-87 | 101,50, (x) | 812, O |
| 1887-84 | (9, 0 (x), (XN) | $792, \mathrm{~mm}$ |
| 1585-84 | T8, M00.0n | 624.1(\%) |
| 154!1-90 | I(M) 1000 , (XX) | 8 Com |
| 18S0)-91 | 92,500,0x1 | 741, (\%n) |
|  |  | 5,30, (1M) |

Mr. Forilter. Is that what passed through the hoom?

Mr. CHARLTON. That is what passed through the loom from Maine, accorling to this authority. This return was mate before the returns were completed for the year 1890, and he estimated the amome for that year at $1(X),(X N), O K)$ feet. Now for the succeerling year. $1890-91$, I averaged the six previous years, which gave a result of 02, . 0 ( $)$, $(H(x)$ feet. The total value of $\sin , 28(1,(N X)$ of the logs imported into New Brunswick from the state of Maine, is in aldition to the $83,198,000$ worth that we imported into other parts of Canada from other parts of the United States, as shown by the Trale and Navigation Retums : so that our total imports have heen $88,468,(6) 0$, and the excess of imports over the export of logs during the seven years has been $\mathrm{s}, \mathrm{l}, 79,900$. Now, sir, if this is the case I wonld ask, what justice there is in the imposition of an export duty". If we have been receiving nearly three times as many logs as we have been exporting, it is a little invidions to impose an export duty upon logs when the American dovernment is delorred from retaliating in kind by a constitutional provision. I find in analysing these returns that our exports of logs last year muler the operation of the free list, was less than our imports of logs as shown by the Trade and Navigation Returns, without any reference to our imports from Maine. Last year our exports amounted to 592,0 , 0 and our imports to Shin, (No, as shown by the Trate and Navigation Retums, and during the three last years the amonnt does not vary materially. so I cannot conceive there is any great necessity, even with the increasing volume of trade, for the action which the hon. member for Stanstead (Mr. Ives) asks. In brief, then, we are importing from the United States vastly more spruce than we are exporting, for we have imported from the United States, in seven years, spruce and other logs to the value of eight and a-half millions against three and a-quarter millions exported, and, umder all the circumstances, there is un call for an export duty. It would be a most natural thing for the United States, leing in possession of these facts, as they are, to say that the imposition of this duty, in the face of the fact that they are sending us a larger guantity of logs than we are sending to them, is most unjust, aml they will retaliate as best they may, and the most natural form of re-taliation-probably the only form they could alopt under the circumstances-- would he to add whaterer export duty they chose to alopt to the import duty collected, leaving us to choose whether we would pay little or much or nothing at all.

The exceptional position in which the pine interest is placed is deserving of a few words at my hands, and I think I am not abosing confidence, if I mention the part which yon. Mr. speaker, and myself, took in this matter. We all, of course, felt a very great degree of interest in the discussions on the Mckinley Bill. Our hopes rose and our hopes fell. We hoped at one time to get free lumber, and I think we would have got it if the export duty had not been in operation. It was used with great adroitness hy the American lumbermen to resist the demand for free lumber, and that was the reason, probally, why vee did not get the concession. It wasunderstord, information was received here, that if the Canalian fiovermment would otficially promise to remore the export duty in the event of the McKinley Bill reducing the lumber duty $$ 1$ per thousand, that provision would he inserted in the McKinley Bill. Whether the information was correct or not I do not know, but we believed it was, and you will remember, Mr. Speaker, that you as a representative of the lumhermen on one side of the House, and myself as a representative of the lumbermen on the other side of the House, waited upon Sir John Macelonall with respect to this matter. We placed before Sir John Macilonald the facts that the export duty, in all human probability, was inimical to our interests in so far as its effects had heen to lessen our chance to get free lmmber ; that we lielieved if the Govermment of Canada would make an official promise to reduce the export duty in consideration of the lumber duty heing reducen Sl per thousami, it would be done at Washington, and by Nir John Macdonald's direction, you, Sr. Speaker, placed a question on the Notice Paper, and that question was luly asked, and it was answered hy Sir John Macdonald on hehalf of the Canalian (iovernment. I have the record here in Manserd. It occurred on May 19, 180.1. The question was asked ly Mr. Bryson, in your alssence, Mr. Speaker, from the House :
"Mr. BRYSON. lefore the Orders of the Day are ealled, with the permission of the House, I would like to ask a questiou which has been put on the Notice Paper by the hou. member for North Renfrew (Mr. White). The question is this: Whether, in the event of the United States Conkres reducing the import duty on sawn lumber to $$ 1$ per thousiand feet, the Government will remove the export duty on pine and spruce logs? It is very importanc that this question should be anewered at the present moment.'
This is the answer:

[^49]not bound ly the promise it made, although the language of the answer, as contained in Hausaid, would have boumd the Government to remove the duty, as there was the reduction in lumber duties and the answer did not specify what the reduction should be. But the spirit of the understanding was that the duty on spruce should be reduced, with the reduction on pine. Such was our expectation and hope, and all the interests of the country felt disappointed that this was not done. But the guestion arose, what should be done under the circumstances. Here was a chance to remove from one great industry a tax which bore hearily upon it, and if that step was taken, and if the duties were so relieved, it would not prejudice the interests of the other, the spruce interest, but leave other interests precisely where they were if relief was afforded to the pine interest. Sir John Macdonald and his Ministers decided, and very wisely decided, in my opinion, to remove the export duty, and to relieve the most important branch of the lumbering industry from a burden that pressed seriously upon it. No less than $\mathrm{SOO},(000,000$ or $900,000,000$ feet of white pine lumber are exported from this country to the United States, and to secure a reduction of the burden of $\$ 1$ per thousand means something like StM(), (К) annually.

Mr. IVES. $$ 800,000$ or $$ 900,000$ ?

Mr. CHARLTON. I am referring to the quantity that goes to the United States, not that going to the South American and other markets. This Bill went into operation on 6th October, and our Government issued the order removing export duty on 1lth October, and in doing so they acted in consonance with the general interests of the country and the lumber trade, and at the urgent solicitation not only of the pine lumber trade but of those who had been opposed to them-they acted according to the wishes of the entire pine lumber trate. The effect of this action on the lumber trade has been a salutary one, as I said a few moments ago; it has enabled the white pine lumbermen to market coarse grades of lumber in large c guantities, which hitherto had proved unsaleahle and worthless. It was not the valuable pine timber that was worth $s=20$ per thousund that had been so much benefited by the removal of the tax, bat the trade in the poorer qualities, and the great hulk of the timber was becoming of poorer quality, first, because it had been cut out, next, because of the second cuttings, and also because fire had raged through extensive limits ; and all the inferior grades, all those coarse grades which otherwise were worthless and added nothing to our wealth, were specially benefited by the reduction of this duty.
The impression obtains very often that pine is growing scarcer, that our command of the American market is more and more assured every day, that, in fact, we have control of that market, and that the imposition of a duty on lumber does not materially affect the interests of Canada, because the Americans will pay the duty. It must, however, be remembered that the illimitable forests of pitch pine in the south, where these pine lands may be obtained at $$ 1.25$ per acre, and for which 5 is an excessive price, forests not liable to destruction by tire, because there is no undergrowth, lands covered by timber which is inexhaustible and which will hardly be touched during the next 50 years-this southern pine is constantly encroaching on the markets of the white pine of the nortli. It has driven us from one market to another, and it has taken the place of all our coarse grades along the seaboard. We meet it in Chicago, we meet it in Cincinmat, we meet it even in Cleveland and Buffalo, and we have a constant struggle to maintain our ground in the markets. We have also to meet the sonthem yellow poplar, and to contend with the fact that twothirds of the finishing lumber used in many sections of the northern states is brought from the south. That has a temdency to depress the value of the better grades of pine, and this removal of a burden to the extent of $$ 1$ per thousand was a great boon to the white pine interest of Cimada, and was a boon that inflicted no injury upon my hon. friend from sherbrooke (Mr. Ives) nor upon anybody else engaged in the spruce trade, because it simply left them right where they would have been left if the dionernment had refused to make this provision and to secure for the white pine interest a reduction of st per thousand in the duty on hamber.
There is now, Mr. Speaker, it Bill lefore (ongress, having for its ohject the placing of all lumber upon the free list. That Bill has a gool prospect of passing, and I hope it will become law. If it hiss not already been reported by the Committee on Ways and Means it soon will bee and it is one of the same class of Bills as the wool Bill, annl other free trande Bills which will undoubtedly pass the American House of Representatives. That Bill provides for placing upon the free list :
"Timber, hewn and sawed, and timber used for spars and in building walls. Timber squared or sided. Wood unmanufactured, not specially enumerated or provided for. Sawed boards, planks, deals, and all other articles of sawed lumber. Hubs for wheels, posts, last blocks, waggon blocks, dc., staves of wood. Pickets and palings, laths. shingles, clapboards, pine or spruce, and logs.

Provided, that if any export duty is made upon the above mentioned articles, or either of them, by any country whence irnported, all articles embraced in this Act imported from said country shall be subject to duty as now provided by law."
My hon. friend from Sherbrooke (Mr. Ives) will see from this Bill and from this last proviso in it, what the feeling in Washington is. He will see that this is a feeling hostile to the imposition of the export duty, and if he is a wise man he will realize how necessary it is to refrain from this irritating policy ; because were'we to impose an export duty, we would ruin whatever chance there is of the passage of this Bill giving free lumber. The hom. gentleman will see that there is a provision in the Bill that if any export duty is leviedon any article enumerated in the list theu every article in the Bill will go upon the dutiable list of imports to the United States. Those familiar with the movement of matters at Washington know perfectly well that the fact that the Canadian Govermment imposel an export duty has been used with great adroitness and effect by every enemy of free lumber in the United States. As I said a while ago, I repeat now: That I believe we were defeated in our hopes of securing free lumber under the McKinley Bill, which proposed to put various raw materials on the free list, by the fact that we had existing in this country an export duty. I say here, Sir, that we have no hope of free lumber into the United States as proposed by this Bill of Congress lefore the Committee of Ways and Means if we reimpose the export duty, because the bare fact of our reimposing
it would dash to the ground every provision for admitting these articles which I have enumerated upon the free list.

A convention of lumbermen met at Washington a few weeks ago, and it included delegates of lumbermen from California, from Oregon, from Washington, from Minmesota, from Wisconsin, from Michigan, from Texas, from Louisiana, from Mississippi, from the Carolinas, from Georgia, and from every lumber section of the United Sitates. It was one of the most powerful and influential delegations that ever appeared in the American capital, and it met there for the purpose of protesting against this Bill which proposed to place lumber upon the free list. If this conntry imposed an export duty they would have made use of that fact, and if we are ever foolish enough to reimpose that duty they will make use of it, to urge it against the Bill, amd it will place in their hands a most potent ind effective weapon for defeating this very measure which we hope to see passed in Congress. In view of these facts, Mr. Speaker, I think I may with every propriety urge my hon. friend from sherbrooke (Mr. Ives) to let this question alone, and to permit the forces which are now working for free lumber to work undisturbed. I think I might ask my hon. friend not to propose thisirritat. ing piece of legislation which would dash our hopes in reference to this matter to the ground. We have nothing to gain in this country by a policy of irritation. 'There is now a strong movement in the United States in favour of free lumber; all the luilding interests and the consumers of lumber are in favour of it. It is easy enough to rally to the canse of free lumber in the United States an overwhelming following if you do not prejudice your case and arouse animosity, and place in the hands of the enemies of the measure some potent weapon whereby they may be able to appeal to prejudice and passion, as you would do if the motion of my hon. friend from.Sherbrooke (Mr. Ives) was granted.

With regard to the question of pulpwood I do not design to go fully into that matter. My hom. friend from Muskoka (Mr. O'Brien) who is to speak, knows a great deal more about that subject than I do, and I will leave the treatment of that branch of the subject to him saving such incidental allusions as I have male on the question.

I will briefly summarize what I have said, by the reiteration of the statement that there is no antagonism of feeling between the white pine and the spruce interest. So far as our influence could he used, we have used it with the desire of securing the reduction of lumber duties all around. We were very sorry when this was not obtained, and we would be glad to see it obtained now. We hope for free lumber, and we believe that a Bill admitting Canadian lumber into the United States free of duty is coming. We deprecate this movement to reimpose the export duty, because we find in it a movement calculated to retard that and to prejudice our chances of securing that great boon. I further deprecate this motion to reimpose the duty, because I believe it invites disaster, which if this step is taken will inevitably follow. I believe from what I know of the feeling in the west, I believe from the movement, as I pointed out when I read this petition sent in 1889 , so widely circulated and numerously and influentially signed, I believe from what I know of the lumber interest of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Ohio, that if this imposition of export duties is carried out, it will almost surely be followed hy the addition of this export duty to the American import duty. The Americans now, as the Yankees say, have canght on to the fact which they did not know a few years ago, that we were selling them about one-third as many more logs as they were sending us. They were formerly not aware of the relative trade in logs between the two countries, but they umlerstand it now, and understanding it they will see in a more glaring light the injustice of the imposition of the export duty. When they see the injustice in that light they will be more certain to retaliate, and if they do retaliate, they must retaliate on the line I have indicated. For these reasons, Mr. Speaker, I hope that my hon. friend will not press his motion, and, even if he does, I hope that the Govermment will not listen to it. I trust that this matter will be allowed to go on as it has gone on. If we are to reimpose this export duty now it would be better athousand times that we had never taken it off, because if we had not taken it off. we would not excite so much ill-feeling as we will do now when after taking it off we impose it again. Realizing as I lo that nothing bat mischief can come from the granting of the motion of my hon. friend (Mr, lies), and that he will bring on the head of the white pine lumbermen, upon the whole lumbering interest of Canada, and upon his own head, disaster, I hope, Sir, without reference to political feelings or anything of the kind, but merely with reference to a great business industry in this country, that the Government will not meddle with this question.

After Recess.

Mr. SPROULE. Mr. Speaker, when you left the Chair at six oclock, the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) was advancing reasons against the reimposition of the export duty on logs. Ainongst other reasons, he said that the lumbermen who were getting out logs could not get them cut into lumber in this country. Well, I do not know what his experience may be, but if he should go up along the Georgian Bay, and call at Midland, where there is a large mill capable of cutting about 125,000 feet of lumber in ten hours, he would find that there would be no difficulty in getting logs cut. That mill, owing to the removal of the export duty on logs, is to-day idle, whereas, a few years ago, it was engaged during the whole season. The hon. gentleman also said that we have nothing to gain by a policy of irritation towards the United States. 1 do not take it that in any legislation here, directed towards the interests of our own people, and calculated to better their condition or improve the country, we can be said to be pursuing a course of irritation towards any country. We are not legislating with regard to outside countries, but with regard to the interests of our own people, and so long as we keep within the hounds of international law and discharge the duties we are sent here to attend to, I do not think there is any justice or reason in the assertion that we are pursuing a course of irritation. If it is in the interest of our people or any considerable number of them, that an export duty should he imposed upon logs, I think we should impose it irrespective of the opinion entertained of us hy any forelgu country. The hon. anteman says that there is now a bill hefore the Enited States Congress to place lumber on the free list, and, therefore, if an export duty were put upon logs in this country, it would have the effect of preventing that Bill passing. There is no gramantee of that Bill passing. We know that from vear to year Bills of a similar character are introfluced into the United States Congress, but up to the present time not one of chem have passed, aml we have no reason to suppose that the bill now before that hody is any more likely to pass. The hon. member also stated that lambermen now take out of the bush a class of timber that wonh not he used if this duty were imposed; in other words, that it is not the better chass of logs which are sent to the Uniterl States, but the coarser grades. I think the hon. gentleman ought to know letter, becanse he is engaged in the lumber husiness himself. I have heen credibly informed hy one of the largest lumbermen of the deorgian Bay that the rery reverse is the case---that some four or tive good logs, sometimes more, are taken out of the tree and shipped to the United States, and the conarser logs are left here because it would not pay to ship them to the United States. It is clear lumber that commands the realiest sale in the United States, and only the best class of logs are sent there. Three or four or tive gool logs are taken out of each tree and shipped away, and two or thret logs left which it would not pay to ship. I am told that nearly one fouth of the lumber is left in the woods in that way, and in a year or two this is destroyed by being worm-aten or by fire. I am told that the Ontario diovernment lose a large revenue from this canse every year, as they are deprived of a royalty on all the lags which would otherwise be taken ont. Therefore, athout one-fourth of the revemue from royalties is lost to the Provincial (iovermment. It is not only in the interest of the revenue of the Province of Ontario, but in the interest of the country at large that weshould notallow this system to go on. The hon. member for North Norfolk stated that there is a losis of about $\$ 1$ to $\$ 1.20$ a thousand in logs sent to the United States, for towing, risk, \&c. If that is the case that much would be saved hy cutting the lumber here. But he sail that the lumbermen cannot lose so much, because it pays them better than it would to pay $\$ 2$ a thousand on lumber. Therefore, on every 1,000 feet there conld be only a loss of $\overline{\text { in }}$ cents if the export duty were put on, and this country would gain a great deal more than that by cutting the lumber here. The hon. gentleman siys he onlerstands that the mills are not idle, but are cutting logs, and he instances a catse where a lumberman told him that he got a large contract for cutting logs during the present season. I can tell the hon. gentleman that if he goes along the north shore of the Georgian Bay and visits Parry Sound or Midland, he will find large mills lying idle, in which there are thousands and tens of thousands of dollars invested, and where thousands of men a few years ago used to be employed. The mill at Midland, which used to cut 125,000 feet every ten hours, and ran frequently both night and day, employing directly and indirectly 300 men, and having about 550,000 invested in plant, is not loing a dollar's worth of work today and is not employing a single man-all hy virtue of the policy of removing the export duty on logs. That industry huilt up the town of Midland, and employed a large number of men who comsumed the prolacts of the country about. There are various reasons why an export duty should le imposed on logs, and I will mention some of them. Consider the large guantity of logs sent out of the country every year. The hon. member for North Norfolk states that there are about sen, (M) logs sent out every year. From my examinatiom of the Trade and Navigation Returns. I du not think that they give us anything like an aconrate statement of the mumber of logs expmoted : at best they give only an approximate estimate. Tou show the rapidity with which our forests are being denuled, I will mention the approximate quantity shipped this year by a few of the lumber companies in the north-western part of Ontario, which I obtained from a gentleman engaged in the lumher imhustry: One company expects in send about.

 (i.(nono(on), and miscellameons dealers about -.... (M), (an) feet. All these companies, it is estimated, will semd out during the present year 020 , and Georgian Bay listrict across the lakes, in logs. A few years ago this was all cut in Camala. Now, we know that the lumber industry has been developing very rapidly. The returns sent to the Ontariofovemment show that all the pine timber. is taken off about 36 townships every year. How long will it he at that rate lefore all the pine timleer is taken out of the country. and one of the most valuable assets of the Province of Ontario is destroyed: There is another feature of the situation which is rery interesting and should not he lost sight of. The streams down which this lumber is hrought all How southward into the deorgian bay and Lake Huron. The timber is brought dowen these streamsas timber is brought down streams generally. We find that the lombermen are extending their operations further north every year, and at the rate they are doing so, they will soon be at the sources of the streamsat the height of land: after which we will have that tine timber, which ought to be kept for the supply of the perple of Ontario, taken off to the height of land, and we will not lee able tobring any more timber this way until railroads penetrate that country, hecanse the streams on the other side or north of the height of land instearl of How: ing southward. How northward to James amd Hulson Bay, ly which route it will have to be shipperl. Our province will thus be denuled of the valuable timher we need at home. This great des. truction we ought inve to allow to continue. If we do not live to feel the effects, those who come after us will, and it hehones this generation to be more careful of that valuable asset which is one of the most important we have. If we let this timber go what loss will it represent to the people? Making atn approximate estimate of the taking out of these logs, I am told by lumbermen that it costs about $\$ 4$. कr) per 1,00 to get themont ; it costs about on centsper 1 , (MW) to drive them down the river, and 51.25 for towing, making in all $86.2 \pi$ per 1,000 as the expense of taking out the logs and putting them on the lakes. Then they are tramsferred to the American side. Now, if this work were all done by Canadians, we would not have so much to complain of, but many of the men Who own these large timber areas are Americans. and these Americans bing their labour and supplies from the other sile. They take these logs into the waters of the (ieorgian Pay or Lake Hurom, and then tow them across to the American sile. Thas that work not only gives employment (1) Americans in Canata but, this duty being off, the logs are sawn be the Americans at home. Our lahouring men are, therefore, shat out of this market for their labour which they formerly enjoyed in the winter seasons. On the American side these manfacture them, oll cents per 1.0 no to ship; them wer, and the incidental expenses amount to 2.)

 If you ald $$ 3$ per I, (MA) for the feeding of the men and the expentiture and other interests involved. that makes Sis.e.) per 1 (MOH lost to the people of Ontario through the manufacture of these logs on the other sile. What does that represent? It represents, on the amount of lumber taken orer this vear; a loss to (Ontarioof $$ 1,320,0(M)$, which is the direct losis, not to mention the losis sustained through the capital involvel in the large mills on this side, in the erection of mills and machinery being unremmerative, through these mills now lying inlle. That means, hesides, a great loss to our farmers and tralesmen, 'recanse when these mills were rumning in Canala the men employed in them spend their money here. whereas mow all that expemiture is male in the United States. It may be said that our Canatians can get employment on the other ville. hat as som as they cross the line they are met by the alien law and sent hack. I know several of these men, who have heen going year after year wer from my district of the country to work in these mills aml lumbering operations, being thrown out of employment on account of the lumber being cut up in the United States. Not only do Americans take their place in getting out the logs in the winter on this side. but they take their place also in manufacturing it on the other side. This is the comition of things we fiml in our comntry: Our mills are lying inlle and our menare out of employment. Mill after mill, which was formerly in full operation, is now lying idle. In the fienrgian Bay and Parry Nound districts. I am told that iwo large companies are shatting up their mills this year, and it is likely that one or two others will follow suit, so that in a short time this great local industry will he destroyed if this thing goes on. In the Midland district and Collingwood, and in the (ieorgian Bay district and other places where large mills have heen rumning for years, to-day these mills exist only in name, and where hundreds of men were employed there are none now at work, all which is broaght about by the remission of the export duty on lumber. In the interests of the settlers, in the interests of the firmers who formenly found a market for their produce, in the interests of all those who require lumber, we ought to have this duty reimposed; and I do not believe that, take the country as a whole, it will be found as the hon. member for North Norfolk, said, that the people engaged in the trade are a unit on the question. I have talked to several lumbermen there, and find they are not a unit. Of course there are men who find they can with less trouble take out the logs and sell them to the United States, and are in favour of free export, men, for instance, like the hon. member for North Norfolk, who are engaged in tha losiness, but there are many others in the trate who hold a different opinion. I do not pretend to saty that the hon. gentleman is solely actuated hy seltish motives. hut when a man's interests are involved. his juldment is likely to le clouled. But there are thonsamls of people in our comatry. Wharedisint erested parties, in so far ats their having any thancial interest in the husiness is comemen, and their views are entitled certainly to be hearil. The duty ought never to have been taken off. I do not think its reimposition wouhl at all influence the United States either in putting on any higher duty or taking it off, because the are homit to have our hamber in any case: and 1 also believe that at present our lamber is going tow rapidly out of our comatry. It may be in the interests of our lumbermen that this duty should he kept off. Some hom. gentlemen. speating on this question, say you are hampering the lumbermen in every "aty possible : you are putting a duty on pork and thus making his supplies dearer, and now you mopose to reimpose the export duty on lumber. But it is most signiticant that every man engaging in timber limits is able to make money out of them, and that very rapidly. The experience of men dealing in such limits is that their value doubles every fom or five years, and we find that limits, which were bought high as sintionmon-rlay. This rapillincrease is shown hy the sales which have heen mate, not only by the Local dovermment hut hy private indiviluals. from time to time. We find that the increase in value has been eroing on very fast cluring the last few years. As a rule. men who have timber limits hold them for a large protit, until they choosie to realize on them, and I lo not see how their interests shouh suffer to any extent ing the reimposition of this luty. I say the timber is being taken away ton rapidly, and it gives emplogment to people on the other side instend of to our own people here, and this is destroying one of the most important assets of the country. We should embawour either to stop it or keep it within reasonable limits. I hope the Govermment will consider the matter and take steps to prevent what I know takes plate along the Georgian Bay amd Lake Huron. I have only spoken in regard to white pine because that is What is principally taken out there, hat I have no loubt the same thing is true in regiarl to spruce and other timber. It wasome of the greatest mistakes that could have been made when the diovernment took of the export duty, and when they put that duty on again the people of the country will be satisfied that they have received a most import. ant advantage.

Mr. OBRIEN. Representing, as I do, a portion of the country which is perhaps more interested in this matter than any other, I deem it right to say a few words on this question ; and, certainly, it is a question that requires more attention almost than any other in comection with the tariff and which requires the most careful consideration on the part of the Government and the House. Is a decided, and I hope a consistent, supporter of the National Policy, I would prevent, if it were in my power, a single pound of raw material leaving this country which could be manufactured within its bounds, provided that, in so doing, I was not doing a greater injury to the country than I was conferring any advantatge upon it. I believe this is one of the questions in regard to which that consideration must arise. It is much to be desired that there could be fomm some practical methol of overcoming the present difficulty, not only becanse it serionsly affects the material interests of the comotry, hut hecause it has placed us in a most humiliating position in regard to the American people. As to the portion of the question which relates to lamber. I think the hon. member for Sherbrooke (Mr. Ives) has hardly made out his case in regard to his representation in connection with the sprace timber interest. I find that we export of pine lumber from this comatry to the United States about $\bar{S} \overline{7},(O(O),(X) O$ worth per ammm, and our export of spruce-because the export to (ireat Britain is not affected-our total export of spruce deals manufactured in this country to the ported which was mot the production of this country. The hon. member for Norfolk (Mr. (harlton) has already explained what they were. The statement of the export of board and plank makes no distinction hetween the spruce, the pine and the other kinds of timber, so that it is impossible to ascertain what quantity of spruce of that dimension has been exported. We find that the total export from New Brunswick of sawn lumber, exclusive of deals, was $\$ 1.50,0 \mathrm{KN}$ ) roughly, and there is no great guantity of spruce exported from any other part of the country. Thus, besides the $\mathcal{S}\left(\mathrm{H}_{\mathrm{n}}\right),(\mathrm{n})$ worth of American timber manufactured at St. John from which the country get the benetit, less than $\sin (0,()(N)$ worth of board and plank is to be set off against the $\$ 7,(\mathrm{NO}),(\mathrm{OK})$ worth of pine timber exported. I think the hon. gentleman has, therefore, failed to make out his case in regard to the comparison between spruce and pine timber. I cannot help thinking that the hon. gentleman must have some other motive to induce him to act in this matter than the interest of the producers of spruce timber. There is one consitleration which has hardly been lealt with, and it is this: On the strength of the abolition of our export duty on logs and a reduction in the rate of cluty on the other side, very large contracts have been entered into in that part of the country which borders upon the United States, the basis heing the present duty of $\$ 1$ a thousind. The Finance Minister must undoubtedly see the great danger which would arise to the interests of this country if that policy were to be changed and we were to put a sudden stop to these transactions, as we would most certainly do if that duty were again put on. When we consider the small amount of the interest affected by the abolition of the duty it would appear the height of madness if, without any previons preparation, we were to bring that trade into danger by such a course, and so affect our home trade throughout this whole Dominion. That point has not yet been touched upon, but it is one of the most important to be considered. I have no special sympathy with the lumbermen-politically I have nothing special to thank them forbut I believe that we ought to do that great and important interest some justice, and I am sorry to say that it is evident that my hon. friend from Grey who has just spoken (Mr. Sproule) is sadly astray in his figures.

Mr. O'Brien.

Mr. SPROULE. I got them from one of the largest lumbermen on the (ieorgian Bay, and he ought to know.

Mr. O'BRIEN. The hom. gentleman says it costs 86 a thousand to manufacture the lumber.

Mr. OBRIEN. Then I must have misumderstood the hon. sentleman. Hon. gentlemen must not be led away by the idea that, when the logs are exported, this comntry gets no benefit from the trate. Taking the most farourable view from the hon. gentleman's stamipoint the figures may be put at 3 to 2 . That is. the cost of getting out the logs amd bringing them down to the mills, wherever they may lee situated, and including the rafting, is far within the mark of $\$ 3$ at thousand, and in giving that figure I am erring in it safe direction. The cost of manufacture is not more than $S$. So that we would get Sis on every thousand and lose sol, and I believe that, in stating that, I am erring on the side of the hon. gentleman. And there is no doult that the sale of limits has bronght a great amount of capital into this country. I was discussing this matter with a lumberman, and at that time I was opposed to taking off the luty, hut I may say that keeping on a duty which is in existence and putting on a duty which has once been taken off on an under. standing that the other side will do a corresponding thing, are two different matters. It is fair to argue that it would be wrong to take off a duty, and it would be equally fair to argue that, when once it had been taken ofi, it should not he reimposed. This gentleman to whom I was speaking satid, liscussing some limits on the (ieorgian Bay, what is the difference: We will get so much for the logs. I said: You may get your $\$ 100,000$ for them and you may go to England or anywhere else and spend that amount, but it does not follow that what you receive will be spent in this country and I would far rather that the amount should be spent on labour in this country than that you spent it elsewhere. We must admit that a great deal of capital has been brought into this country by the sale, the profitable sale of these limits. Thus the contention is not altogether on one side, and, when the hon. gentleman said just now in discussing this question that these American firms who are taking out their saw-logs on the Georgian Bay are importing their own men and their own produce, and taking all the benetit out of the mouths of our own people, he is astray. These men do not import their own labour and for this reason. It $\cdot$ would be rather* absurd, seeing the number of our own men who go to Michigan to work in the shanties and come back when the work is over, that these people should bring them all back and so incur a double expense.

Mr. SPROULE. I know that what I stated is true in my district.

Mr. OBRIEN. In Muskoka and Parry Sound districts, there is not a man who cannot get the work he wants. The men employed and the material used to feed those men are chiefly the men of this country and the produce of this country. Therefore, the statement is altogether incorrect. Of course, some plant and some machinery may be brought over, but as a general thing the cost of producing logs is spent in this country, is spent for the benefit of this country. As I said before, I am not inclined to view the lumbermen with any special favour, but I will say, as a matter of justice to that great interest, an interest which, I believe, employs more labour and consumes more produce than any other interest of Canada, that it is just the one interest in this country, and 1 say it andisenly, which derives the least possible benefit from the protective system now established : there can be uo yuestion about that. I do not think you can point to one single respect in which the lumber interest derives any lenefit from the National l'olicy: if you can, I have never been able to discover it : therefore I think they are entitled to fair consideration. It is a fair argument for them to put forward when they say: You tax everything we use in the manufacture of our material, and yet you are going to expose us to the risk of anotleer dollar per thonsamd hy the course you propose to pursue. Now, I say that, view the lumber interest as you will, that is not giving it fair-play, it is not treating it as you treat any other industry in this comatry, it is not giring it the sume consideration which you give to any other industry that we possess amongst us. You protect the farmer, you protect the miller, you protect the manufacturer, ame I am in favour of loing so, so far as it can be done with general adrantage-you protect our manufacturing industries generally with the exception of the lumber interest, this is the only one you do not protect. Now, my hon. friend talks of the enormons fortunes made in lumber. I believe it is true that large sums of money have been made by speculation in timber limits, hut speculating in timber limits is not carrying on the lumber lasiness. Anybody can speculate in timber limits, a lawyer or a doctor can do that: : but the business of lumbering is entirely distinct from such speculation. From what I know of the lambermen of the Lake Huron district, considering the capital expended, the capital invested, judging from the amount of money laid out every year in carrying on that business, I will venture to sity there has been a smaller protit made in the lumiber industry than in any other industry of this country --I think that statement is strictly within the mark. At any rate, if any men have male fortumes in lumbering, 1 have never come across any of them, but I do know many men who have lost money, and some who have been ruined in that business. So far as the lumber interest is concerned, I think the hon. member for sherbrooke (Mr. Ives) has entirely failed to make out his case. There is another subjeet which 1 wish to mention, it has been alluded to by the hom. member for Grey (Mr. Sproule), and it is one of the guestions which weigh most materially with me in dealing with this subject. I think it is a great mational mis. fortune that there is no Government in this country, Dominion or Provincial, which has yet found a way to protect, preserve and reproduce our pine forests. Every country in Europe, I think, without a single exception, that has a civilized government and that has pine timber to any extent, takes measures to preserve its timber, and they are able to export as much timber to-day as they did three or four hundred years ago. Canada, with all her boasted intelligence, all her boasted civilization, her selfgovernment, &c., is entirely belind the age in this important particular. Neither the Provincial (iovermment nor the Dominion (iovernment think they can get rid of our lumber fast enough as long as they can turn it to any profitable use. Now, with regard to the effect upon the consump. tion of timber by the reimposition of the export duty and the necessary reimposition of the import luty, it will he just this: When the duty was $$$ thousand on the lumber it did not pay Canadian lumbermen, unless the prices were exceptionally high, to export amything hat the lest qualities. Yon must remember that in the deorgian Bay and Lake Huron timber limits--and I fancy the Üpper Ottawa timber limits are in the same category-the amount of timber that is really fit for export is very limited. I do not know what proportion of timber is fit for export, but it is comparatively a small proportion. Now, under the former state of things, when you cut the whole produce of your limit, cut everything before you, you had an immense guantity on ham of very inferior lumber that was not worth as much, even, as the spruce that my hom. friemb says is so much less valuable than the pine timber. That was not saleable in Canada, for the reason that there was in greater quantity of it than the country wantel, therefore that lumber either hall to remain in the wools in the shape of logs, or had to remain in the yard musid. The duty prevented its heing sold in the states, the price would not hear the $S 2$ a thousiml duty: The result was that when a lumberman went through his limits, it heing impossible for him to tell, lorking at the tree, in all cases, whether he was going to make exportable timber or antthere always heing a certain element of chance in it-he cut down the tree: if he got a gool log out of it he took that log, if the other logss were not worth taking for export, he left them lehind. and of course that was so much timber wastel?. On the other hamd, if he did not cut it, he left it liable to the worst enemy of timber, and that is fire. so, that the timber stood a chance either of heing left in the wools to rot in the shape of a prostrate tree, or if it was left standing. it remained subject to damage by fire; the result in either case was an enomens amount of waste in all our timber limits. When the duty was reducel to 81 a thousami, of course there was a much greater proportion of timber that the lumberman conld export. If he under the Eie a chousand duty, he could export
 The moment that dollar was taken oft there was an immense quantity of inferior lumber which at once foumd its way into the American market. I remember meeting one of the largest lumbermen on the Georgian bay shortly after the duty was taken off: He told ne he had just made a sale of $1,(x),(x)$ ) feet to one party of a quality of lumber which, before that, he could only dispose of in the very limited home market, And so it went on. Now, if you reimpose the export duty, and conseruently have the reimposition of the import duty, the limberman will do as he used to do, he will go through the limits and leave an immense quantity rotting in the log, or if he leares it standing, it will be liable to fire, in either case ia certain loss: whereas, even with the $\$ 1$ per thousamd duty he can manage to dispose of everything, he takes all before him. Viewed merely as a commercial transiction it is maloubte:dy het ter that the timber should lee taken dlean off the land than that a portion of it should Ine left to waste. Now. the home member for North Sorfolk (Mr. Chithom) gave us the tigures which he aidl it wnhli cost him to take satw-loges ateross the water. His tigures dififer very moch from the tigures given to me. 1 ann assureal that hags can be towe across the beargian Bay to Michigam and insured against lass, for $\leqslant 1$ a thonsimed. Now. I wats hoping having no sympathy with those sentemen who are tiking away saw-loges. that the resulh of the experiment would be that there would he such a loss in the mafting that they woull give up the attempt to take them acorss. Cule the system now aldinted, the towing covers the insurance, so that a man who takes logs ateross knows that the most it will wost him in the st per themsimul.

Mr. (HARLTON. That shatem of insimance hat ceasell. I gave the corred tigures as the enot.

Mr. OPRBEN. 1 am very glad to hear it. locanse that may possilhy hedp us to fime the way ont of the difticuity. Bial assuming the tigures to be as stated. thein it is guite clear that if the Amerimas. and there is reasm to think they will take this comse becanse their interests pmint in that direction, take off the present duty of $$ 1$, then Camadian and Amerisan manufacturers will stand on the same frotinge and there will he no ol, ject in transporting these logs. (in the whole, therefore. I think. while I deprecate most stongly the extraragamt waste that has been goving on for years in omi forests, while I regret mast deeply that no me has heen sulficienth ingenions anl enterpri.ine to adopt some methon of preserving and restomg one forests, it would be most langerons in the lumber interest to rimpuse the duty. becallse it would leal persiblly to at commercial erisio. at all events to commercial depression, and while it would not only inflict very great injury on the lumber interest. Which is in interest that barely sets fair-play. it womld not have the effeet desired in any single partienlar. The hom. memher for (irey (Mr. Sproule) has saill a gome deal ahome chasing mills in the liecregian bay district. I fan tell that hon. fentleman in this House that if the sid duty were rimposel, for erery nill chsed naw. two on three would he cloved then. It womld "ansis. far gretere lass th the lumbering interest in esery partienlar than be allowing matters to remain as they are al the present monent. so, with the lumbering interest ats now carried on, the neerssary lons of material following the rempusition of the dury, the depression of Finsiness that would be bromght alount. and the falure of the propneed remedy to meet the existing evils, I say it would be at silicilal act to reimprese that duty om satw lans. To come now the the question of pulpwood. It and there is searcely a parallel between the two cases. A pine tree once grone is gome forever. Nature may possibly restore it : we are loing nothing to hefp nature or to take the place of nature. But pulpwonl is restore in a very few years. There are twoprincipal elements in comection with this pulpwonl. One is in regaritoppoplar. Thehom. gentleman wants to place an expmot duty on poplar. So, benctit will acerme ly that proceeding to any single interest. Popher is int manufactured in this country. and the trees ate of ur value for pulp after they hite attained a growth of eight or ten years. as $i$ am informed hy those eng;aged in the trate. Aceordingly, it is a woond that guickly reproduces. itself. There is no prosilble danger of the failure of the poplar, becanse in those parts of the country where it grows it will keep on growing, and in at few years after it has heen cut over it can be cut over again. The satne remark applies to spruce. With reepect to the supply of pulpwool. I believe from the iufomation 1 can obtain that there is pulpwonl in Canala to supply the continent of Americal with paper, just so long as pulpwoent is wanted for the nanufacture of paper. It must he lonne in mind that only a few year: have elansed since this material was introduced for paper mak. ing purposes. Possilly in a very few years some ot her material will conne into vogue which will for atway with the value of our poplit and spruce. Is it to le supposed in this age of invention one particular material will remain as that used for the manufature of paper. or any other article? The inleat is athourd. What will bee the effect of plating a duty on pulpwonal: The hom. member for sherliow ine int. Ives) whld us. very properly. that American manufaturers have established their mills near the boumbary for the purpase of eretting our pulpwome. I suppose that is true. They could get our pulpwond at less cont than their own. But it is iltogether a mistake to suppese that they suffer from any deticience of palpwond theminelves. In Maine, as the hon. nienher for North Norfolk (Mr. (harlton) stated, ani this statement hass heen contirmed to me hy a gentleman whose name only needs to be mentioned to ensure his most perfect credilility, and that an theman assured me of his own hiowledge that in that state there are millions amel millions of cords of pulpwool. So, there heing no deticiency of material. if we impose an export duty, the only result would be that the Anericans irould move theit mills nearer their awn sources of supply, and we wonld lase the value of our own pulpwood entirely. There would le ne more exportation of pulpwoon, ame this wool which restores itself in a few years. would go to leeay without returning one ilollar: into the porkets of the people. And who would benetit: Why, the few pulp millowners we have in this country. What is the preseat price of pmppwonl! It is S. 0 in in my connty. Does the hon. fentleman want to get it chaper than that? Pow: he, who seeks to alvance the industries of this comery and give labour to the people, dexire to drive hamdredis ont of empleyment in order to secure pulpwoen for less than si.on per cord! If that is his ollject - I donot say it is-- his motion is one that on the same footing as pine lumber. if once it is cht it would he gone forever, I almit there would be a great deal more force in the reasoning that we slowh keep it for ourselves. Whenlikeany other (rop, after it haw heen cut down, it grows again and there is no prospect of a deticiency of supply, it is perfeetly ridiculous to talk alout imposing in export duty. The same result too would happen as would acear if you hampered the lumber trade. Large comtracts have been male thongiout the Laturentian regiom, from Ottawa to Sault Ste. Marie. amb are you going at once to pat an end to that trale ? Are yom going to saly to the lakourers, hat no further husiness can be lone: If you do so, you will he simply allowing the material to rot, notwithstanding the fact that if cut it will he restored in a few years. In one township in my own constituency 85,0 , $M$ has been spent among the farmers and halworers in the production of pulpwood. Jet the hon. rentleman who wishes to promote our inlustries, ilesires to prevent the people from getting out any more pulpwood. A more unarasmable proposition it would be exceedingly hatd to find. Canler these circmmstances, I have fuhesitation in saying, hoth ats regats the pine and as regards the pilpwool. that this is a case in which it is not our duty in the interests of the National Policy or in pursuance of the principles of that policy to perent the exportation of that raw material. It is an exceptional catse, as I have proved, and it would he the height of folly for the dovermment to gow stef in and re-enact the legislation which was repealed two years ago. Under these circmo stances. I think the hon, member for Sherhoroke (Mr. Ines) had heater reconsider his motion. There is just one other subject which I will touch upon, althongh it is not surictly germane to this question, hat, perhaps. I may have no other opportmity of referring to it. I sity that we are placen in a nost hamiliating position as regards the states with respect to this particular trade. We are in this position: That we are commercially depentent upen themso far as our export of this particular class of lumber is ancerned. There is literally no other market to which we caln send that lumber. We have no other outlet for it. aml. therefore. We atre at the merey of the Americans and lare not protece our lamber as it was protected by the export dhty. I quite admit that this is a hamiliatting preition. and the only way I find out of it is that we should seck to secure as far as possible other markets than those offered by the comitry the sonith of us. Cufortunately for the deorgian bay district. I believe there is no wher ontet possible for the lumber of the region. atmi I am sorry th think there is not. The quality of the lumber is not sufficiently food to make it worth while to cat the whole of it for export to amother comitry- not even to the Cuited states exepr at the lowest mate of duty: or mollyty at all and the ans of thamspartation prevents them takins it to the seaports for shipment on Finglam or to the West Indies. A large portion of our timber does ambonditedly go to Fnglamd in the shape of pine deals or sunare timber, hat it is only the leest y mality that is exporten in that way, and when the lest timber is taken off the limit the remamber is mo ionger suitable for that trable. There must. however. he a large field for the export of our lumber, becamse we find that the Americans purchase from us somewhere about sil, (MNO, (KM) worth per ammm-...of course it varies aceording to the commeleal eomdition of the conatry, and last year there was comparatively little solif - hat notwithstanding this import of ten or cleven million drollats worth from us, we tind that they in tum camexporthmber of a similarelass, to about the same value. It is evident that they export in some shape ahout the same quantity that they buy from us, amd this shows that there is a large market arailable for our lumber if we could only obtain access to it. It is , then, a matter of very great importance, not only for the manufacturers lut for the fiovermment of this comntry, to try in every possible way todevelopother markets. so that we may he reliever, if possibly we can le relieved, from this our present humiliating position. Although I would he the last man to adrocate legislation in this House that would even seem to be in the interests of our neighbours, yet I think there is great force in the argument of the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. (harlton) in this particular connection. I helieve with the hon. memher for (irey (Mr. Sproule) that we are hound to legislate in our own interests and in the interests of noboly else ; lut I helieve at the same time we must be guided by circumstances, and that we must not rum a principle into the groomd simply for the name of carrying it out. In this case, I helieve that we must almit the exceptions which 1 have endeavoured to establish. Now, Mr. Speaker, moler these circumstances, and looking at the question from the point of view which I have endeavoured to state to this Honse, I think that the fiovermment have no option hut to continue the present condition of things. and I think also that the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. (harlton) has made out a very strong case, because he has shown, and I think. shown with a great deal of force, that there is not only a possibility, but a very strong probability of the present duty in the United Niates heing taken off. If that duty should he taken off, we will to a very great extent have solved this problem, because then there would lie no longer any inducement to tatie this lamber across the lake as there is now. Our manufatturers, and the Michigan manufacturers, would then stand on the same footing, and this is another very strong reason why we should take the alvice given hy the hom. member for North Norfolk (Mr. (harlton), and for the present at any rate, leave this matter remain as it is. I trust, Mr. Speaker, that these considerations will have weight with the Govermment. and that they will avoid arlopting a course in this matter which would, I think, be commercially disastrous, and which, if the motion of the hon. member for sherhrooke (Mr. Ives) were adopted, would interfere sreatly with the lumber industries of this country.

Mr. MediREGOR. Mr. Speaker. I do not wish to take up the time of the House at the present moment, hut, as other hon. gentlemen have spoken of Eastern Camada, I woukl like to give an idea of this question as it affects the people of our western country. It is true that white pine is very materially affected by the increase of the export duty: $\ln t$, sir, there is an interest in Western (anada which would be very largely aml serionsly affected, especially if this export duty were placed upon hard wood. The young farmers of our country starting out in life, buy their property, pay pretty gool prices for it, and commence taking off the loge for the purpose of nataing money to support their families and themselves until they can get the lames clear. We export very largely of elm, white ash, hassworl, buttonwood, and other kinds, and if the export duty of $\$ 1$ per thousand were placed upon that wood, it would be a very great losss to the class of people I refer to, becanse they wonld be, to a large extent, compelled to quit supplying the American market. The wool which is solil to our American neighbours is of that kind, which would otherwise be burned by the farmers and would yield comparatively no profit whatever. The profit that our people make out of exporting these logs groes to maintaining their families while they are making homes in the west and paying for their farms. I might also point out that the larger quantity of this wool is gotten out in the winter, when there is little employment otherwise, and when the farmer and his family have time on their hands. During the winter months they tind occupation for themselves and their teams in this way, and realize a fair protit for their industry. Now, if this duty were replaced upon logs, we would be compellei to give up that trade and we would lose the amount of the duty tenfold. My hom. friend from sherbrooke (Mr. Ives) says the duty would affect the mills in the east, and that these mills would be again employed if the export duty were reimposei. I can tell the hon. gentleman that it is not for the want of the export cluty that these mills are stopped, but it is on account of the McKinley Bill, and this fovernment cammot in amy way repeal the McKinley Act. Even if the export duty were reimposed on logs as hom. gentlemen know, it would not in any way bring back the trale which the present high American tariff has deprived us of. We must remember also that a very large number of our farmers and of the dealers in pine timber and other woods have made arrangements for the trale of the coming seasom, and the placing of the export duty on these logs at this time of the year would be a great injustice to these people, and would in adilition deprive humdreds of working people of a very large amount of remumerative employment. It is also a point that should not lee lost sight of, that a large amomat of the products of the farmer are used hy the people who hamdle these logs. If the duty were reimposed there is no doubt that a very large number of those who are now making their living in the west, and in Muskoka, would be forced to leave our comury and go to the United Niates. We should remember also that there is a large amount of logs and timber imported into Manitolo from the Rainy Lake district amounting to about $\$ 412,000$ worth per year. Ontario alone has imported over $\mathbf{S} 4(0)$, (MK) worth from the same district : and the Rainy Lake district which inclucles part of Mimmesota adjatent to the Province of Ontario, sems to the western portions of that province, also to Manitoba, the logs which enables them to get cheap lumber to build up their new homes in the west, and to reimpose the export duty on logs would immediately increase the cost to the settlers in Manitoba by the risk of retaliatory legislation by the Unitel States. It is the duty of the Govermment to do everything in their power to enable these people to ol taincheaplumberin order to make for themselves good; warm and comfortable homes. We know that the great west is going to grow rapilly, and the country will have the benetit of that grow th, and, therefore, we must help the people there ly giving them cheap lumber, which is one of the mainstays of the country. The hon. meinber for East Grey says that about $222,0000,010$ feet are taken off in a single year, lepleting 36 townships. Now, my experience is that if the timber is good, as we know it is in that northern district, one good township will produce 225 , 000,000 feet alone. Then, the hon. gentlenaan said that the mills on the north shore were not running. What is the reason? It crosts $\$ 1$ a thousand to take that $222,000,000$ feet across the Saginaw Bay into Michigan, and it coste about is cents for Mr. MeGrecor.
insurance, so that a lumberman would have an adrantage of $$ 1$ a thousind at least by cutting the timber in Midland. But those who own the mills have sold their limits and pocketed the proceeds and made a good profit ly the transaction. That is the reason their mills are ille. I feel satistied that the Government know the condition of the country and will not do anything towards placing this export duty on logs at the present time.
Mr. Laverone. I wish to say only a few worls on this question, which interests my constituents. The hon. member for Sherbrooke (Mr. Ives) stated that it was in the interest of the Eastern Townships to reimpose such an export duty on logs. In saying this I think he must be moved by some local interest, and not liy the general interests of the Eastem Townships. There is a large trade done in the shipment of pulpwoon from that district. I know that at one station in the County of (ompton some $\Sigma_{20}^{2},(\mathrm{KK})$ worth of pulp was shipped during the last year, and the business is a large and profitable one for the farmers. In my own constituency a large quantity of that kind of lumber is exported. I helieve that the aloption of such a policy would le equivalent to saying to a couple of pulp mannfacturers: You can have that lumber as cheap as you wish. for the farmers will have to give it to yon at your own price. I think it would be very unfortunate to those farmers if the proposeal export duty should be imposed. I dio not speak of logs generally, hecause I do not claim to be posted with regard to them : but the pulp industry is a very large one in the Eastern Townships, and the dity would help only a few people. If the policy of hon. gentlemen opposite is in favour of reciprocity in natural prolucts, such a duty would le a departure from that policy. I believe the farmers of the Eastern Townships have already been restricted sufficiently in their trade without this fresh restriction, which wonld almost complete their misery. I am pleased to give my vote against the imposition of the proposed duty.

Mr. (illLalor. I was surprised to hear the hon. memher for Last (irey (Mr. Sproule) describe the condition of the people in the dieorgian bay district and Muskoka as very deplorable, thousiunls of them leing in great distress. If anything could be done in the way of legislation to help them out of their misery, I should be sery glad to lend my aid. But with regard to this qutestion of an export luty, the people engaged in cutting and selling logs, I suppose, are Canadians of fair a verage intel. ligence, and I presume the logs they cat and sell Ielong to themselves, and, uotwithstanding the intelligence of the hon. member for Sherbrooke and the intelligence of the Ministry and the intelligence of this House. I presume that these men have only cut such spruce logs or pine or poplar logs or any other kinds of logs as belonged to them, and know how to make the most out of them. In selling these logs they do not enquire whether the man who wants to buy them is an American or a Canadian, whether he is black or white, They have a log co sell, and they want the most they can get for it. I want to know how that is going to le improved on. Certainly, if they have not a right to do that they are not fit to do business, and you ought to appoint guardians for them. You ought to enguire and find out the class of men who do not know what to do with their own property. and take charge of them, and sell their jroperty for them. It appears to mee that this question has not a great deal to do with the lumber business. because the timber lands of this conuatry do not helong to the Dominion, hut to the different provinces. I think myself that if the timber of this country could be husbanded it would he a grool thing : but 1 think that the parties who own the logs which are sold along the frontier or anywhere else know best what to dib, with them, and governments would consult the people's interests best by minding their own maniness imil letting the people mind theirs. An exprit duty is incomsistent with the National pobicy. All the protectionists: I have heard talk have wantel everything possible kept out of the ontany, hat they have wanted everything possible in the commery sent out of it . That is protection ---to make things scaree and dear by not letting furple hring things in: hut as to preventing things going out, this is a new departure in protextive legishation. Wearealways toll that when ohe exports exceed onr imports we are in a very laralthy condition. Sow, they want to prevent us expurting logn. One hon. gentleman wanted all the taw material kept in the comatry. Sup["ise other countries umbertook the same policy, suppose the United states undertook to put all enurnous export duty inn cotton, then all the conten mills in (amala would have to shot down. Why. the talk is complete nomsense. It is undercotimating (analians, free intelligent Canalians. Who sells this wood: It is the firmers, the intelligent farmers, to a large extent. who have certain lumber on their premises: Now. I know that the peopleare learning the lesson regaring the hushanling their forests. It is the case with all new comitries that the people are extravagant when the combtry is all coverel with timber, and with the sue ailid fires they fast deplete it ; but there is bum a proper sense of the value of the timber on the part of the men who have it. Yon might as well prevent people selling their sheep as selling their timber. You want the wool for yom manufaterures and the mutton to eat. and you might is well prevent them selling their sheep as selling their timber. I do sometimes rearet to see the small spruce lumber cut off. the growth of which wouhl he a source of great income, but still those who own it know hest what they do. P'erhaps they are clearing their land for agricultural purposes and are glan to have a market: and the: don not care who comes along, they will seil to the one who will pay the most, and then what difference does it make whether the man is across the imaginary line in the United states or whether he is in Ganda. boes it make any difference to whose mill it goes: All the farmers want is to get the grist, the profit, and we ought to allow hime to do so. I have not much fear of the diovernment putting on an extra duty just now. although we are a warlike people and are !etting really to tight somehooly. That somelooly must be our neighbours across the border, because the Indians are nearly all gone, and we are spending altogether too much on our army to fight them. The half-hreels. I do not think, will try it again, and if they should we are spending too much to manage them. Whereas if it he our neighbours, we are not spending anything like enough to fight them ; and if it is to fight anong ourselves, we will only use the expenditure against each other in civil war. But we are not going to tempt our neighlours much longer. Our relationships with the United States are hecoming better understood by everybody. We camot afford to fight. I would not cow down, no matter what they did, but I would not do a foolish thing because they do a foolish thing. I would not do a miserable mean thing because they do. We are not going to tempt them too much. I do not want to feel dependent upon them, but as I have said God never made an independent man or nation, and the longer we live alongside that nation the morewe will feel our dependency upon them, and to an equal extent, in proportion to population, they are dependent upon us. They huy nothing from is they do not want, and we luy nothing from them we do not want, and the less yon restrict trade the better for all hands. With reference to this export duty. my hon. friend from (irey (Mr. Sproule) spoke of its costing $\$ 2.50$ to manufacture these logs into lumber. Why, you can go over to the Chandiere and you will find that they will manufacture logs for $\overline{\text { an }}$ cents per thousamed. My constituents are opposel to this duty, anll whether they are or not, $I$ am, and I am opposed to an import cuty too. I believe that the more you can get into a comutry, and you will get nothing into the country that people do not want, the better. And the more you can get out of the country and get a fair value for, the better for everyboly. Do not restrict trade. To tride is as natural as io breathe. It is an evidence of civilization, an evidence of progress and of everything that is great and good. We have restricted it long enough, and here we are, during three months of a session, making laws alout trade, when if we would only mind our own business and let the country do what they want to do, there would he no trouble about it at all. If you would remove all obstructionsbetyeen the United States and Canala, there would tre no troulle. Every man in Canada who had something to sell, if he could sell it at home to better advantage would do so, hut if he could sell it hetter alhowal he would do so; and if he sold it abroal, wonld not that help Canadat by bringing in wealth! It is lecause governments will not mind their own business, hint will hamper trade, we have all this trouble. The only country not troubled about the trade question is the mother comitry. There are no two parties on that question there. They bave settled the battle about the trade guestion, and they settled it irrespective of all other European countries, and if I had the power in Canadia, I would do the same thing. I would make this a free country to live in. I would open up and develop the resources of the country more rapidly than they have been. If it were not for these export and inport duties, these high protective tariffs, both peoples would trade and things would go on smoothly and everyborly would benefit. I have no fear that the Government is going to put on this export duty. This McKinley Bill seems to frighten everybody. It never frightened me very much. Of course, when countries resort to this sort of thing, they make it hard to trade. They can put on a tarifif so high that they cannot get over it, and that is consistent, because if we do not want to trade with the people stop it altogether. If to trade is an injury, be consistent and stop it. But let trading go on between those two peoples, and there will be no talk of war and there will be no Minister of Militia and no necessity for throwing away a million and a half of dollars every year. Trading is the most natmal thing in the world, it is the evidence of civilization and adrancement, it is the next thing to religion and hetter than some folks' religion. And yet it is the great question which is agitating Canada and the United Ntates. The same sort of battle is going on there which is gring on here, the most silly fight, the most unprofitable, the most childish contention about luying and selling, about a thing that belongs to the man himself, that nobody else has an interest in, and that will always regulate itself. The moment a man sells his logs to some one who takes it across to make pulp, and he does not make money out of it, he will not go there again. And if the man who bought does not make money, he will not come again. Let the people alone, and then you will see that this country will hegin to advance. We are not advancing now. Why, my hon. friend from Grey's description of the country was a most melancholy one. Jeremiahis lamentations did not hegin to compare with his. It was a most doleful lescription of a large district of comntry in Camada, and that too after we have had the National Policy for fourteen years. And now you are going to help them by making it so that they camot sell anything. Fou have preventer them from getting what they want to eat, and now you want to prevent them from having anything to sell. The whole thing is absolutely alsurrl.

Mr. DEVLIN. The county from which I come is deeply interested in this matter, and the county of Pontiac alsr. I have listened with mach interest to some of the speeches which have been lelivered, and it must he said that the subject is one of exceeding importance. It camnot lee claimed that the tas is absolutely required for revenue, nor can it lee saill that the tax should he imposed for any other industry than the industry which has been referred to by the hon gentleman from Sherbrooke (Mr. Ives). I do not intend to make any extended remarks, but simply to give the views of some of the most prominent lumbermen in the loominion. Not more than a mile away, we have some of the most extensive mills in this Dominion. We know that they give employment to large numhers of men and that their interests are to be very serionsly considered. I received not long ago a commanication from one of the most important Immbermen of this section, and in it he said:
"I feel it would prove a very serious matter to the lumber interests were such a duty reimposed, as it would most surely have the effect of causing the American Government to reimpose their import duty on sawn lumber of $$ 2$ per thousand feet. the same as previously existed, with the possibility of having the export duty on loge whutever that might be, added the reto.
"Of course Mr. Iver' resolution is in the interests of the spruce manufacturers, who no doubt feel that the duty on spruce should have been reduced the same as on pine, and justly so, but I cannot see what he would gain by reimposition of the export logduty, thereby increasing the duty on pine without any corresponding advantage, for as previously stated if the American Government should decide to add the export duty to the old import which they threatened to do, surely he would be worse off than now, and even if the Americans did nothing more than return to the old tariff of $$ 2$ on pine and leave spruce the same as it is now, which would be the least they could do, what would Mr. Ives gain? Nothing, I contend.
"I am sure it would prove a very serious matter all round if this resolution should be carried."
This comes from a large mannfacturing establishment over which Mr. J. R. Booth presides, and I suppose that gentleman understands whereof he speaks. I also haveinmy possession a communication from the lumber firm of Perley & Pattee, and in it I find the following :-
"It would be a most unfortunate thing for us if the Government should reimpose the export duty on logs. Not only would the old rate of duty come into force on lumber going to the States, but it is extremely likely that the amount of such export duty would, be added to it and this would be practically prohibitory."
And from the firm of Buell, Orr, Hurdman & Co., a firm of great importance, giving employment to many hundreds of people, I have this:
"We think it would be a great injustice to the trade to reimpose the export duty on saw-logs. The McKinley Bill passed by the United States Congress provides, thait if this couritry places an export duty on saw-logs. then the duty in force prior to the passage of the McKinley Bill is again placed on lumber from this country, namely, 3 - per thousand feet. instead of 51 , as it now is.

The reduction of the import duty to $$ 1$ per thousand fect has been of great benefit, both to this country and the lumber manufacturers: it has caused the value of timber limits to materially increase, and it has also helped the lumber manufacturers at a time when they greatly needed it.

The reduction to il per thousand feet gives us a new market for the lower grades of lumber, that we could not sell to, when the duty was $$ 2$ per thousand, and also inereases the prices on the better grades that found a market there before the reduction in duty.

It also seems to us that the present time is very inopportune to bring up such a discussion as this, as there is now before the United States Congress a Bill to permit the free entry of all lumber from Canada. If this Bill passes it will be of the greatest benefit to Canada.

The continual agitation of this question, and such uncertainty about the intention of the Canadian Government, makes people rery timid about investing in timber limits, or even entering into the business of manufiscturing lumber. If a firm bought limits at their value to-day, and then Government were to impose this export duty on logs, it would more than wipe out any anticipated profit.

- It seems to us that Mr. Tves's Bill is one benefiting a very few people, and the revenue to the fiovernment is it very small item, in comparison to the amount of mones that the duty, as it now is, brings into the country, and the number and amount of interests to be damaged by the proposed Biti of Mr. Ives."
I have also another communication, luat this is in farour of the attitude taken liy the hon. member for sherhrooke (Mr. Ives). It is a communication from a gentleman who has deep interests in the trade, I refer to Mr. F. B. Eilly, hut we know that he has interests also which would be served by the imposition of an export duty on pulpwood. I contend that, apart from this industry to which I haye just referred, and apart from the interests of Mr. Eildy, and those over which he has control, no other interests would be servel by the measure proposed by the hon. member for Sherbrooke (Mr. Ives). We know that large quantities of this pulpwood are constantly being exported to the United States, and I cammot see that our farmers lose anything by having that market open to them. On the contrary they are benefited. They sell their pulpwood to those who require it in this comntry, and they also sell it to those who reguire it across the line. Our friends who desire to have the tax imposed have already an adrantage over our neighbours over the inder. They have not to pay the freight, and that is a marked alvantage in their favour. Besides, it is a matter deeply interesting to the lumber industry, as is evident from the communications I have real, and we cannot interfere. with the interests of the lumber merchants without interfering in a serious manner with every other class of people in the Ottawa Valley. Attack the lumbermen and you attack the labouring classes, you attack the farmers, youattack themercantileclasses, in fact you throw the whole commerce in this large and important valley into a state of uncertainty. I hope this motion will be voted down, because it is in the interests of the country generally that it should be voted down, inasmuch is it would henefit very few while cansing deep loss to the people generally.

Mr. BAIN (Wentworth). It is not often that I find myself in a position to support the action of the Government, but I do think that, when they removel the export duty on logs in order to benefit the lumbermen, they took a step in the right direction, and I agree with the member for Nuskoka (Mr. 0'Brien) that, whether they were wise or unwise in their action at that time, it would he extremely unwise to take a step back and now reimpose the cluty, particularly in view of our present relations with our cousins on the other side. We find that the lumbermen on the other side are presenting their case to Congress, and, in the same terms as the protectionists are using in this country, are urging that competition with Canalian hmbermen should be withdrawn from the American market, and that the duties on Canadian lumber going into the United States should be reimposed. I think the lumber interest can fairly be left to take care of itself in the way of representing the interests of that section of the commmnity with the Government. There is a large amount of wealth and influence incolvel in the manufacture of lumber in Canata that can gain a realy ear for the representations they may have to make to the Government affeeting their interest. Now, I want to say one word on behalf of what Abraham Lincoln called the common people. You remember, he said long ago that he leelieved the Lord loved the common people because he made a great many of them. My hon. friend from Muskoka (Mr. O'Brien) has put in a plea on behalf of the new settler that has to struggle against difficulties in the willerness of clearing off the forests and bringing the lamd into a state of cultivation. I say it wouk be cruelty in the highest degree to put any difficulty in the way of that settler realizing money out of the timber he has upon his land that is not available for lumber purposes at the time; but for the purpose of enabling the pulp manufacturer to secure his pulp timber at $2_{5}$ or or cents a cord less, to reimpose these duties would be simply cruelty to a large number of citizens that we have induced to settle on the new lames of that region. It is in the interest of these men, to-night, that I want to say one word, and ask that the fiovernment should pause lefore they yield to the groposition of the hon. member for sherbrooke. I think we can safely leave the pulp interest of Canada to take tare of itself : and while I think that the achuission of pulp into the American market free of duty is a question that might engage the attention of our (ioverument in future reciprocity negotiations with the Americans, along with many other questions, with mutual interest to both they and us, I flo feel that for the present it is not in the interest of our people to reimpose these export duties. They belong, it seems to me, to the barbarous laws of the past, that ought to be buried decently out of sight and left in oblivion in this age of our world. I do say that to take from the workingmen of these northem townships an opportunity of getting even 2 ; cents a cord more for their pulp timber, would he exnelty on the part of this Government that I sho d regret very much to see inflicted. I hope the (iovemment will not yield to the proposition of those interested in the pulp business on the (Gunalian side, and reimpose this duty upon the export of pulp timber. With regard to the spruce men, it cloes not affect us in the west to the same extent that it does those in the east. To judge by the expressions of sentiment from my hon. and advanced friend from Charlotte (Mr. (iilmor), we can safely leave those men to the care of the Govermment, because, as was correctly remarked by the menther for Ottawa (Mr. Devin), the reimposition of this luty would place the: spruce lumbermen in no better position that they are now, and it would undoulitedly atfect detrimentally the interests of thousamls of poor settlers on the north shore who have alrealy a hard strugele for existence.

Mr. IVEN. Before the motion is put I lesire to say a few words in reply to some of the speakers who have taken part in this delate. The hom. member for Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) in the course of his remarks, gave us an insight inte, the history of the negotiations which resulted in what he termed the compromise, by which our (iovernment remored the export duties altogether from all all classes of lumber, aml the fmerican forernment did-what! Remover the lumber daties? Oh, no. Make any kind of lamber free: (H, no, but reluced the rluties on white pine one-half, to Ŝ a thousand. He was just enough, Mr. Speaker, to allow you to share with hin the homour of having taken an active and importint part in bringing about that compromise which wats sor arlvantageous to Canala and so ereditable to the Govermment. He says that you, is representing the pine men on this silice of the Honseand I am very glan you did not umdertake to represent any other than the pine men-.and he as representing the pine men on his side of the Honse --approached the late l'remier and informed him-and I presume the information was ohtained hy the hon. member for Norfolk on one of his trips to Washington-that it would be extremely alvantageous, not to lumbermen, but to the pine men, if before the Nokinley tariff were finally settled, all the export duties here were removen, and he told the late P'remier that we would likely get free lumber if the export cluties were removed. He went on to tell us how the late Premier asked you to put the guestion on the piper so he could answer it in smeh a way that the policy of the (iovernment might he known at Washingtion at once. The guestion was, what comse the (anadian (iovermment wonl take if the American (iow ermment would do- what : Reduce the pine cluties to $$ 1$ a thonsamd: Oh. no. but to mate free lumber: and the answer that Sir Johm gave was that if the Americans gave us free lumber the export duties would he removed. Wiell, Mr. Npeaker. 1 remember very well that duestion being put amd the answer that was given; and as a man interested in the manufacture of spruce lumber. I was not very nunch alarmed at the answer. The answer was that if we got free lumber, which, I suppose, included spruce lumber as well as pine lumberbecause I was under the impression that there was more than one kind of lumber. I think the member for Norfolk is under the impression there is only one kind--the answer was that if we got free lumber, the export duties would be removed. That is precisely the position I am asking the Government to take now; I am asking them to undo the mis. chief and the exil that the member for North Norfolk alvised the Government to do at that time, and to put us exactly in the position that whenever the Americans are prepared to give us free lamber then we are prepared to take off again the import duties: whenever they are prepared to give us the free importation of pulp, then we are prejared to take off the duty on pulpwood.

Mr. CHARLTON. I wish to correct the hom. member in one statement. The hon. memher represents yourself and myself as representing the pine interest. Such is not the case, we representen the lumber interest, but as you well know, expecting that the reduction of duties would apply to all classes of lumber, we were not aware that any other arrangenent would be made until the McKinley Bill was published. It was not expected we would get free lumber, but it was expected. and the promise of Sir John A. Macdonald was made upon the supposition that the duties upon lumber would be reduced.

Mr. IVEs. That is not an answer to the guestion. I do not care to be interrupted at this moment. The hom. gentleman, however, has heen kind enough to express his regret that the spruce people were not treated with more fainness and consideration. The hon. gentleman professed to have interested himself on our hehalf on that occasion. I should julge it, by the way these negotiations resultel, that the answer sir Iohn Macdonald made in the House led the lumber. men in Canada to suppose they were not going to be left in an isolated position, that, whatever concessions were obtained for one class of humbermen. and one class of lumber, womld be obtainel for all. The hon. gentleman wail I was quite wrong in stating that 110 change was made facourable to the Camadian lumbermen in the McKinley Bill. except with respect to pine lumber. He corrected me by satying that the tax on claphoards was reduced to si and shingles were also rednced. I find on examining the McKinley tariff that the hon. gentleman was again working for the pine men rather than for any one else, hecause only pine claphoards were reluced, and they were put at $\$ 1$ per thousiml. while spruce clapboards were placed at si.in). Again, white pine shingles were placed at 20 cents per thousand, while all other shingles were left at 30) cents. So I do mot think the hon. gentleman made very much of a point in correcting me, and stating that I had misrepresented the $11 \cdot$ Kinley Bill by saying that pine and pine alone was benctited by the changes then made. He sail that white pine men did not obtain this adrantage, that it cane to them. Well, it came to them, as the hon. gentleman has told us, for he told us how it came to them ; it came by himself, and you, Mr. Speaker, moving the late Prime Minister to make this declaration, which was not followed out and stool by, but materially departed from, as I have pointed out, and that it only made a concession to pine and not to other kinds of lumber. The hon. gentleman then went on to say that so far from its being in the interests of American owners of timler limits in the Georgian and Lake Huron listrict to thoat their lumber to the United states amd saw it there, it would not pay them at all to do so. That may be: But it so happens that nearly all lumbernen, including the hon. gentlenan's own tirm. American owners of Canadian timber limits have mills in Michigan and other parts of the Uniterl states, and it so hippens that all, or nearly all, the pine in that district. as the hem. member for Grey (Mr. Sproule) statel, is floatell to the United States. The hon. gentleman did not have the hardihood to tell us that his company saws its logs in Canada, because every one knows that the greater part are sawn in the United States.

Mr. CHARLTON. I heg the hon. sentleman's parton. They are sawn in Canalia.

Mr. IVE: The hom. gentleman is deeply interested in most of the legislation which is calculated to compel people to be gonn an:l moral, and we would naturally expect that he would not misrepresent any of the facts that are pertinent to the , Mestion under discussion. He told us two or three times over that Canala imported three times as many logs as it exporter. The hom. gentleman is perfectly well aware how the figures are arrived at. He kiows in the first place that the Trate amb Navigation Returns are incomplete, as to the exportation of logs. and he knows in the second place that the large importation of logs that make "p those figures, which he mentioned to-night, and which on many previons mecasions he has given to the Honse, are American logs cut by Amerians in a state in the United states, thoated down a treaty river, sawn on the Ganalianside. lecanse the mill privilege is there, ind atterwards taken into the Cuited states free of duty under a special provision of the American tarift, and of every American tariff that has existed for the last 100 years. He knows that this importation of logs into Canala, which I have heard him refer to in his speeches on two or three otheroceasions is made up almost wholly of the cut in the Aroostionk district of Maine, Hoated down the St. John River, sawn on the Canalian side ly Americans working in Gamala, but living in the Cnited States, and raising their family in that country, and that this lamher muler the American tariff enters the United States free of duty, aml, therefore, has no right to he mentioned iss Canadian lumber and as American logs imported into (anadi. These fatts are well known to the hom. gentleman and to every lumberman in this Honse. The Trade and Navigation Returns do not give an idea of the extent of the expertation of logs from (canada to the United states. There are two companies, who are my immediate neighlours, the Connecticut Lumber Company and the International Company. each of whom in 1591 exported $\overline{7}, \mathbf{O N O}(\mathbf{O N O}$ feet of logs, or $14,(10), O M N$ altrgether, and there is no mention of these exportations in the Trate and Navigation Returns of that year. And the same occurs all orer the D,minion. As soon ats the export duty was taken off, the customs officials, as they saw no special reason why an aceount should be taken of the logs, did not take account of them, and if the Trale and Navigation Returns repesent that we import more loge than we export, the statement is far from the truth. The hon. genteman misled the House, I will not say intentionally, in another particular. It will be remembered that I adducell as one of the most im. portant points of my argoment that the American people are dependent on Canadia tor their supply of paper material. The hon. gentleman, in reply, stated that there was an enomons quantity of paper material in the Adirondacks, Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. I will not argue that question with him. People living in New Fnglant and in the paper business do not say so. They saly the limits are very much worked out, and, as they are in the hands of large hollers. the ordinary buyer cannot secure material. The point to which 1 wish to come is this: The hom. centleman referreal to the illimitable supply of pitch pine in the southern Stateswhich would be availah, for the paper makers of the United States. The hon. gentleman monst know that pulp cannot he male nut of pitch or hard pine, and he certainly was intentionally mislealing the House or was ighorant of the suliject he was talking about when he mentioned sonthern pine as heing one of the resources which the Linted states have to fall back on for their paper material. It is not so. The truth is, as I have stated, that the paper material for this continent is here in canada. The point 1 tried to make was this. that by protecting that material. even to the exfent of the American duty upon pulp, we would secure the manufacture of that material in Canadia and give the laliour to our own people. The hon. gentleman in still arother particular deceived the Honse. He attempted to convey the impression that the removal of the export duty saved to the white pine men st per thonsam apon $\mathbf{8 ( 0 )},(\mathbf{N O}, \mathbf{O N O}$ feet which was mannfactured during the last year. That is to say, $\mathrm{S} x(1), \mathbf{M} 0$, actording to his view, was saved to the manufacturers of white pine last year. He argued in this comnection as if all this lumber were exported to the United States, as if none of it were used in Camada, as if none of it were sent to England or South America: in fact, as if the whole prodnct were exported to the United States. The fact is that if he looks to these same Trade and Narigation Returns which he referred to, he will tind that less than ome-half of the guamity is exported to the United Ntates, and therefore instead of sating $\$(0) 0,(x)$, the sar: ing, according to his own figures, was less than that amount. Later on, the hon. gentleman said that this reduction in luty had not saved anything upon the best grades of pine, iml that the saving was only on the inferior grades. I, therefore, leave it to himself to figure out how much was really saved to the white pine men by this reduction of $\$ 1$ per thousand. The hon. gentleman, and several other hon. gentlemen who have followed him, intimated that what I was asking for in the pulp matter was that the timber of Candia should be preserved to the pulp manufacturers of this country. He says that I seem to have an iilea that the timber on the stream where 1 may have a pulp mill is my divine right, and that the (iovernment are bound to see that nobody else is allowed to come there and interfere with me. Well, Sir, it is not so at all. What I am contencling for is that the pulp material of Cunada, on the principles of the National Policy-which I suppose to be in force in this country-should be manufactured into pulp if possible here in Canada, that the labour should be given to Canadian labourers, and the profits, if any there are, should be given to the Canadian manufacturer. I do not ask that pulpwood on my river should be kept for me. 1 say: Let it be open to all Canadians and let it be open to all Americans too, who will come and manufacture it here in Canala. So far from my having any personal interest in this matter 1 want to tell the hou. gentleman from North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) that I have not the slightest personal interest in it one way or the other. The companies to which I belong and in which I have an interest have their own limits from which they draw their own supply of pulpwood. They are not purchasers of pulpwront, and it will not make one single farthing difference to me whether this policy is allopted by the dovernment, or whether it is not allopted by the dovernment. It only makes this difference, that I want the dovernmment to settle the policy of the country on this point. If the Ciovermment decide they will not impose the duty upon pulpwoorl, then we know where to buill our next pulpmill. We have had one hurned down this winter and are going to rebuild this summer, so that we wish to he guiled by the decision of the dovernment and of Parliament on this question, as to whether we will huild it on the Canalian side or on the American sile. Our limits are just as hamly to enable us to take our pulpwooll south and manufacture it at Stewartstown, in New Hampshire, as to take it north and manufacture it at Saw yerville. or Cookshire. The railway freight is no more, and the expense is no greater. If we are to have no export duty on pulpwood then we can go to Stewartstown and take our pulpwood there and manufacture it into pulp and save 86 a ton. That is not only what we are going to do, but what everybolly else is going to do. To me, personally, it makes no difference whatever, if it is imposed or not, and 1 do not care one lyass farthing, further than that I wish to see the policy of the country settled in this respect. If that policy is to be not to impose an export duty, then let us know it and we will govern ourselves accordingly. If the National Policy and the principles of the National Policy are to le applied to this yuestion, as they have been applied to other questions, and the export duty is imposed and kept there until such time as the American duty is taken off, then we will stand by the National Policy as we have stood by it on all other (uluestions. So much for the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton). I now wish to address a few words in reply to my hon. friend from Muskoka (Mr. O'Brien). He started off by telling the House that he had not a great deal to thank the lumbermen for, and that they had never heen particular friends of his. I should judge that if they read his speech they will also come to the conchusion that they have not a great deal to thank him for. The hon. gentleman undertook to say that 1 must have had some other motives than the interest of the country in making this motion. I do not know whether it is parliamentury or not for an hon. member of this House to make such a statement, but for my part I do not care whether it is or not. I simply wish to characterize it as untrue and as unworthy of the hon. member who made the statement. I have no financial motive as I explained already, and it makes no financial difference to me whether this motion is adopted, or whether it furnishes a hint to the Government to introduce tariff amendments in that direction or whether they do not. The only thing which is impontant to me and to other business men engated in the manufacture of lumber and paper material. is to know what the policy of the fionemment is to be, for some years to come, upon this question. The hom. gentleman says he does not know a great deal about lumbering and that he is nut a lamberman. I can quite believe that. He told us that he looked over the Trate and Navigation Returns, and that he fomm that. whereas last vear we exported S. (MW).ikn) worth of pine lumber we only exported sx:3, (hn) worth of spruce. He says they were spruce deals, and he also says they were sent to the Unitel States: but, in the cance of pine. he takes the total exporter, amol in the case of spruce he only takes the deals and he comfines that export to the Unitel States. Now, as it matter of fact, we do not export sprace deals to the United states to any extent at all, and $I$ am suprised that he fomme even as much as SX3, (an worth sent to that country. It is, therefore, puite tasy to helieve the hon. gentlemani, when he tells us, that he dress not know anything about the lumber business at all. I renture to siy, for the informat tion of the hon. member for Muskoka (Mr. O'Brien), that taking into consideration the local consump. tion of lumber all over this Dominion. and als, the lumber exported, that there were more feet of spruce lumber manufactured in the last vear than there were of pine lumber. I will even go further: I will say that there wass a Greater value of spruce lamber manafactured in the Dominion last year than of pine lumber. The lomber used ly the people of this comatry is very largely spruce lumber. Then owe exports to South Aberiai. to Fingland am the Unitel States are not deals. We do not export spruce deals to the United States. Hut scantling and dimension timber and brards and claphoards exported to the United Nitates amomaterl not to $\mathbf{E s 3}$, (KK), hut to millions of dollars worth : so that before the hon. member umbertakes to instruct us on the subject of exports of lumber to the United States, he had hetter inform himself more fully. He refers to the great unfairness it would lee to people who have made contracts for future delivery, suddenly to make a change and impose export raties. Noborly proposes suddenly to make a change. We would be quite willing to have the change go into effect six months, or eight months, or even a year hence. All we ask is to have the policy of the comuntry settled on this point either one way or the other. Then, the hon. gentleman gives some further information with regard to pulpwool. He tells us that an export duty would be a great injury to the owners of poplar pulpwool. If the hon. gentleman will read the motion, he will find that it does not refer to poplar pulpwood at all, and there has never heen the slightest intention to extend it beyond spruce and pine. He tells us that the dollar per thousand reduction which was obtainel in the American duty has emabled the (anadian lumbermen to dispose of everything in the way of pine lumber, whereas previously they had to leave all the poor lumber in the woods. Perhaps he will tell us how Sl a thousand makes that difference? As a practical lumberman I can tell him that if you could not sell any of the lower grades of lumber before that reduction, you would tind a good deal of it left on your hands, after the dollar a thousand was taken off. Other hon. gentlemen have referred to the hardship that would be done to the poor farmer if this policy were adoptell. My hon. friend from Charlotte (Mr. Gillmor) thinks that the farmer who owns his own wood should he allowed to be the judge as to whom he will sell it to and where he will sell it. That raises the same old yuestion of free trade and protection. The hon. gentleman is a free trader. He admits that he wouli allow the farmer to buy as well as to sell wherever he likes: he would take off the import duties as well as the export duties. Well, we cannot quite slo that. My proposition is simply this: The farmer at the present time gets $\$ 2.50$ a cord for his pulpwood, which the hon. member for Muskoka says is the price paid in liis district. At this rate the farmer is getting only what the labour costs to take out the woonl. and he is getting nothing at all for the wool itself. It is also said that the imposition of an export duty wonld reluce the price at Which the Canadian pulp maker would le able to buy wood. Well, he could not buy it at less than it eosts to get it out and to hand it : hut it is loped, if we alopt the principle of protection, and apply it to this yuestion as we have done to every other. that the development of the industry in Canadia and the competition among our own people, will raise the price to such an extent that the farmer will get not only sufficient to pay for his lahgur, but also something for the wool standing before it is cut. As to the unpopularity of this proposition among the farmers, I quite allinit that it would not he popular for the moment : hat we are here to legislate for the goon of the whole conntry ---for all classes. It is mot profitable to the lumbermen to hare an aditional dollar or two of duty put on pork or 10 cents a bushel put on oats: but they do not make a very great fuss about it. Gou may say that the lumberman ought to be permitted to buy his aits and pork where he can get them the cheapest : hut that is not the poliey of the foovermment : and if we give the farmer protection on oats and pork and all his grain. we may say to him: Fou are not getting more than the cost of your labour for the palpwood you sell to the United States, and if you helpus toe establish in Canarda this industry, it will give enployment to your sons in the manufacture of pulp, and in a year or two we will give you a better market for your pulpwood insteal of leaving you to send it to the United States as you are obliged to do now. This is the whole question. As I said before, the only thing the pulpmen and paper manufacturer: of Camalla ask is fair-play and a fair application of the principles of the ficrernment and the pirty to their husiness as it has heen applied to every other industry in this comentry.

Mr. ARMS'rRON(: Mr. Speaker, before this question comes to a rote. I wish to draw the attention of the House to a matter in which I think the hon. member for .Sherbrooke misrepresented the hon. member for North Renfrew and the hon. member for North Norfolk. He says they represented simply the pine interest. Well, both of these hon. gentlemen declare that they represented the lumher interest of the country. The hon. gentleman also says that it was understond that the duty was only to lee taken off logs and pulp timber when the Americans admitted lumber free. Now, Sir, such was not the declared intention. The hon. member accuses the fiovernment by implication of deceiving the people in that respect. Now, here is what passed on the subject. Mr. White, of Renfrew, put a question on the Order Paper, which was asked in his alsence by Mr. Bryson. The question was:
"Whether in the event of the United States Congress reducing the import duty on sawh lumber to 31 per thousand feet, the Government will remove the export duty on pine and spruce logs. It is very important that this question should be answered at the present moment." The House will remember that at that moment the McKinley Bill was before Congress. Here is the answer of the late leader of the Government, sir John A. Macdonald :
"I will answer that question. In the event of the United States Congress reducing--"
Mark yon, not throwing off-
-" reducing the import duty on sawn lumber. the Gorernment will remove the export duty on pine and spruce lugs. I will take an opportunity of conveying that decision to the proper quarter."
That is the assurance the Government gave. So that the comtry has not been deceived or mislen in any way by the Government. The hon. member for sherl, ooke says that he wants the (iovernment to settle their policy on this question. Why, Sir, it seems to me, from the drift of his motion, that he wants the Government to unsettle their policy on this question. They have settled their policy by throwing off the duty: now he wants them to unsettle it again by reimposing the duty. The hon. gentlemanmade another important admission. He sail that those who supply pulpwoo! and take it either to the factories or export it to the United States barely get pay for their labour, and get nothing for their wool. What does the hon. gentlenam by this resolution propose to do? At present they have two parties competing for their pulpwoor, the American mill owners and the millowners on this side: and he proposes to prevent one of the parties from competing, so as to leave farmers at the mercy of the mill owners on this side. Ona question of this kim, involving the trade policy of the country, the fovernment should have stated at the outset what their policy in the matter is. If they had they would have savedi it great deal of needless discussion, for if the Government had declared it their policy to let things remain as they are scarcely a word would have been said on this side. However, as the matter is in un: certainty, we have to deal with it as it comes before us, we must bear in mind that the present is a peculiarly important time as regards the lumber industry. There is a Bill before Congress to remove the duty from lumber altogether, and allow our manufactured lumber to go free to the United States. And mark this fact that, under the terms of the McKinley Bill, that large reduction, in most cases 50 per cent, was made on all lumber coming from countries which fo uot impose an export duty. Therefore, if this motion were to carry, the effect would simply be to kill, perhaps for many years, the benefit our lumbermen receive under that Bill. I remember in 1890 I had the honour to point out to the Government, when their tariff Bill was before the House and they were going to reimpose the duties we had thrown off goods similar to those that were admitterl free into the United States: when the Govermment were going to reimpose the duty on similar articles coming into this country, we on this side pointed out that it was a direct encouragement to the passage of the McKinley Bill, and would almost certainly have the effect of causing that Bill to become law. The event has shown that we were right. To-day we are met with the same difficulty. There is a Bill before Congress to make lumber free, and if we reimpose this tax on logs we will furnish those who are opposed to that bill the strongest argument for its defeat. The hon. member for North Norfolk says that the Bill now before Congress provides that the lumber shall only be free from countries which do not impose export duties on logs or timber so, that it would be the means of actually defeating the olject of the Bill and rendering the lumber of this country liable to the old duty prevailing before the Mckinley Bill became law. The hon. member for East Grey madea strong plea in fawour of reimposing the duty. He said that our lumbermen formerly took out only the goonl timber and left the inferior, the balance going to waste in the woods.

Mr. SPROULE. I said they do that now, when they are taking the logs across they only took the best, hecause it was not profitahle to take the rest.
Mr. ARMSTRON(: I can tell the hon. gentleman that before the duty was reduced a great part of the timber was left in the wools, and that for the simple reason that the duty which prevailed on the other side prevented our exporting inferior lumber such as is used in farm luidding. As soon, however, as that duty was lowered one-half there was 81 more profit in it, and that was an inducement to the lumberer to get out the inferior wood as well. A gentleman living in that comentry told me that the lumbermen were actually coming back, clearing away the old and getting out logs they had left before in order to take them to the mill.

Mr. SPROULE. I got my information from extensive lumbermen who ought to know.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. With regarl to this question about pulp material, spruce logs to he manufactured into pulp, it has been shown to-night, and that statement has heen corroborated hy those who understand the question, principally ly the hon. member for Muskoka. that in this country there is plenty of pulp timber to supply the whole continent. A gentleman told me to-night, who lives in the midst of the spruce country, that a spruce forest renewed itself in fifteen years, and we know that the poplar wood will renew itself in six or seven years, and if you look at the immense stretch of country where these woods grow, you will see at once that the hon. nember for Muskoka was perfectly correct when he said that we had resources of pulp timber sutticient to supply the whole continent. Now, what is proposed by this Bill: It is proposed that only a certain portion shall be used, ind the rest, so far as we can prevent the sale, shall be locked up. That the people who have the timber shall not make use of it, except such portion as may be used by the pulp mill owuers in this country. The famers are not to be allowed to sell to Americans, but only so much as they can find it sale for in this country. I have been in that Muskoka comutry and have been in most of the newer part of the comitry. The LocalGovernmenthavereserved the pine timber and prevent the poor settlers bringing in revenue or making anything in the shape of profit or anything to help their families out of the pine timber. They have been deprived of that adrantage and the only thing left the settlers is the spruce timber. Now, these gentlemen want to prevent them having a market for that. Now, not only is this true of spruce timber, hat it is true of a great many other kinds throughout the country. The hon. member for North Essex (Mr. Me(Gregor) has drawn the attention of this House to the logs that are sold in the western part of Ontario. Ail along through the three Counties of Essex, Kent and Lambton, there are still considerahle tracts of wooded country, and that is principally wooded with what is known as soft elm. That is largely used for manufacturing purposes. and, as the law now stands, with the duty off the logs for export, the poor settlers on these lamds have the choice of selling to the local mills or selling to the United States. Now, there is a peadiar hardship of their condition. These lands largely went into the hands of speculators. Jen now huy wild lames for from sio to sen an acre. We all know the hardship which there is in going on wild lands, clearing the land up and supporting a family until the land is cleared in order that something may be oltained for sustenance. This motion contemplates compelling these men to sell the timber on their wild landsat a disadrantage and at a reduced rate to the mills in the locality. The hon. member for East (irey (Mr. Sproule) is perfectly comsistent. He has always been the adrocate of the privileges of the classes against the masses. His object has always heen to foster amd protect the interests of the few wealthy against the interests of the many and the poor, and that is the course he is pursuing to-night. I say that the House ought to consiler the interests of the people as well ats the interests of a handful of speculators. and the very object of this resolution is to prevent the poor settlers from having access to two markets and to compel them to sell in only one market, and to sell to that one market at a reducel rate. The hon. member for Charlotte (Mr. (iillmor) saiil he had faith in the diovernment that they would not alopt such a resolution, and I have faith in the Government that they will not take a course which would injure the poor in favour of the rich and against the interests of the people in general.

Mr. ALLAN. I have no desire to occupy the time of the House, but this subject is one of importance, affecting the timber interests of the country and particularly the timber interest of the western peninsula of Ontario, which comprises the principal elm districts of the country. Varions movements have heen inaugurated during the laat twelve years to secure such legislation as is sought for in the motion now before the House. At one time an effort was made by the elin manufacturers to secure an export duty on elm logs, and that is a question which, I believe, is involved in the motion now before the House. In 1830 the people in that section were very much alarmed at the movement which was made in favour of that, not so much from the strength of the movement itself, but from the stealthy way in which the manufacturers sought to obtain the imposition of that duty. It was shortly after the adoption of the National Policy, and some of the manufacturers, by issuing a secret letter, happened to obtain a meeting in the town of Chatham. It happenis that a gentleman who was opposed to the export duty attended that meeting, and he found that there were some present who had been at Ottawa and had seen the Finance Minister and other members of the Government and had urged the imposition of this export duty on elm leres. which was as good as promised to them. but in the letters which were sent out through the country the utmost secrecy was enjoined, and they hopeid to have this duty imposed liy stealth. They knew that, if the people at large knew of their oljeect, it would be defeated. What was the result: They came to Ottawa and a meeting was callen if those who were opposed to the duty. At once telegrams and letters were sent to the representittives of the different constiturencies from Essex to Haldimand, asking them to interview the Government and see that legislation was lelayed until the other side could he hearil. That was ilone. Peritions were widely circulated thro:ghout the comtry, and although it was in the inclement season of the year, in the spring, when the roads were very maldy, one of the largest petitions ever presented to this Honse, outside of temperance petitions, was presented against the imposition of that duty. If the record cian be foum, it will be seen that petitions signed hy ahout lis.ink) names were presented against the exprort duty. ami in aldition to that, one of the most intluential deputitions that ever waited on a Finance Minister, went to him and opposed the imposition of that duty, accompanied ly twenty or thirty member of Pait: lianent. The (iovernment. althongh sir Leomard Tilley, the then Finance Minister. statel at first that it was in aceorlance with the National Police. did not impose that duty. and until a year or tw. ago nothing more was heard of it. I think this should he settled for all time to come. At that time a rast expense was incurred in oriler to prevent its aloption. Petitions could not be circulated in all these counties from Haldimaml to Esses at that season of the year withont great expense. and twenty or thirty men combld mit be sent to Ottawa to protest against it without expense. They were not millmen. It was the wartens of the conaties and the presidents of Conservatives associations and men of that kind who had influence with the (overnment who came to Ottawa on that occasion. Now we find that the very same movement, accompanied by the very same arguments, is leing agitated thy the spruce millmen. It is the same as lefore. The interests of the cometry are to be promoted. They have at heart the interests of the farmer, the mechanic and the lalouring man; if this were true and if they were sincere, their conduct would le worthy of all praise, hut the people neither appreciate their motives nor their action. In Western Ontario, their movements are understood all along the line. Now, even the millmen refuse to take any part in them hecause they know that it is a movement ior self alone and that the people understand that. They, hope, by driving out the exporter of timber the producer will be left at the mercy of the mills which are scattered all over the comntry, and thus they will deprive the poor settler of the market for his logs. Now, wherever railways pass through the countics of Essex and Kent, the poor settler can sell his logs. If it is in the vicinity of a mill he has the choice of a market ; if there is no mill, he cun sell to the exporter, and the result is that a very large trade is being done, this timber is going out of the country, and our forests are being rapidly denuded, as stated by the hon. member for East (irey, but of a class of timber that we can very well spare in the west, of elm trees decaying and dying and which should be cut and shipped as rapidily as required in the interest of the settler. It isfarletterfor thefarmers in that section of the country not to waste the timber but to cat it and get everything they can for it, it is better to have the land cleared up, as that is one of the best portions of Ontario, and to allow the settlers to contimue selling their timber either to the mill men or to the exporter. That is precisely the position in reference to the elm timber. I was talking with it leading lumberman that came to Ottawa the other day, Mr. Ouellette, whose interest, I supposed, would be in favour of an export duty, but he said it would te simply absurd: he stit? he did not trelieve any mill men now would have the cheek to ask it. That is the view he took of the matter. They certainly camnot defend it, hecause it simply means the destruction of the armers market where there are no mills, and where there are mills a reduction in the price of tumber to pretty nearly, if not altogether, the extent of the duty. Now, that is the position so far as the timber districts of the country are concerned. I say it is a policy that camot be defender, it is an mjust policy. If the mills cammot be continued in this country without taking from the settler the logs he has to sell, the fair way would be to come to this Parliament and ask the country to bonus these mills. To take off half the price of elm timber or of spruce timber, and to say that you must lose half of the value in order to enable the mills to rim, would be iniguitous and indefensible, and divested of all disguises is simply an atempt of the mill men to depreciate the price of timber in this country so that they cam run their mills more profitably than they do now. I do not think it necessary for me to say anything further upon the subject. I know this is the feeling in the west without reference to party ; I know that there are no mill-men now who openly advocate such a policy ; it is simply indefensible, and has not the support of the people of the western peninsula of Ontarie.

Mr. Fostr.R. Any one who has listened to this debate, which has now continued for so many hours, will have the conclusion pressed pretty strongly upon him that there are diverse interests in comection with this matter. My hon. friend who preceded the last speaker (Mr. Armstrong) said that he thought the policy of the Covernment should be ammounced on this occasion ; and just a few minutes before that he took occasion to say that he thought the policy of the Government had been pretty well settled, and what the hon. gentleman from sherbrooke (Mr. Ives) seemed to wish to do, was to unsettle that policy. So far as the policy of the Government is concerned, it has really been explained to-night by the reading of the records as to what led up to the taking off of the export duty. The Government at that time considered the question and their object was, as was stated in Sir John A. Maclonald's letter, to gain for the sawn lumber of this country a reduction of duty in the United States markets, and to give in exchange for that the export duty upon spruce and pine. That this object was not carried out was certainly not for lack of interest in the spruce industry on the part of the Government. When the McKinley Bill was enacted, as has been stated, it was found that the reduction of duty had not been made upon spruce lumber, hut simply upon pine lumber. The question then considered very carefully by the Government was as to whether it would be gooll policy, under these circumstances, to take the export duty off from pine and spruce logs, and thus get, for a very large part of the lumber industry of this country, access to the market of the Unitel States at less duty than had been enforced previonsly, or than would be enforced provided these export duties were not taken off. It was seen at that time, and thoroughly known by the Government, that so far as the policy of the Administration aml of the dominant party in the United States was concerned, regarding the continnance of the McKinley Bill, it was not probable that any change would take place with reference to the duty on spruce lumber if we refused to take off the export duty and thas give the reduction of $$ 1$ per thousand to the exportell pine. It was considered lest at that time that the export duty should be removed, and thas, while placing spruce in no worse position in the United states market, to gain for the pine industry a better position sof far as taking off that duty wais concerned. That was what led the dovermment to take the action it did, even though only one half hat been given by the American Congress in comparison to that which the dovernment thought would he given. so far the dovernment. does not see that any change has taken place in the position. If we imposed an export duty upon lumber to-day, it would pat the spruce industry in this comentry in no better position, in so far as the American market is concerneal : and it would put the pine industry in the position of having the duties doubled, amd to a certain extent, at least, it would circumscribe the protitable market for pinc, or for certain qualities of pine, in the markets of the United states. There is no doult, as I think every member on either side of the House will readily acknowledge, that the spruce industry was unfairly dealt with in that legislation, and the doveriment, and I think every member in the House, regret that it is so. The whole point for us to consider is this: How can we heip the sprace industry ly reimposing export duties iapon spruce and pine logs, and may it not be that hy doing so we shall injure the pine industry" Therefore, as my hon. friend from Sherbrooke has expressly asked us to declare it, the policy of the Government at the present time, considering the circumstances I have mentionell, and the state of flux, so to speak, of opinion in the United States with reference to lumber duties, the policy of the Government is not to reimpose export duties. In saying this I may add that I have not the least sympathy with the arguments which have been used by some hon. gentlemen in reply to my hon. friend from sherbrooke, in that he was an interested party simply standing up for an advantage to himself. I think that interest is very apt to be a prominent incentive with most men indiscussing these matters, or in asking for reduction or increase of duty ; but my hom. friend from Sherbrooke might just as well have said that the pine men were very deeply interested in keeping things as they are, as for them to say that he wasinterested inchampioning the spruce interest and in desiring to have the export duty reimposed. I think my hon. friend argued his case fairly, and I must say, he argued it well. But although his arguments were good, they do not yet convince me, and do not. I think, convince this Honse, that there is any benefit to be gained at the present time for the industries of which he particularly speaks, by reimposing the export duties on logs. I am sorty to have to make to him this annome hut 1 hope that, taking into consideration all these circumstances, my hon. friend will agree to withlraw his motion and not press it to a vote.

Mr. IVEs. As I said before, it does not make any difference to me individually whether the motion is adopted or rejected. I am glad to hear that the Covermment, having done what I consider a very silly thing have decided to stand by it. Therefore I will consent to withdraw my motion.

(ROWN PROSECUTION: ANJ) SUTS

Sir JOHA THOMPSON moven :

That in view of the prosecutions and suits, criminal and civil. which have been instituted under instructions from the Department of Justice arising nut of the proceedings aml eaguiries before the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections in the session of Parliament of 1891, under the Order of Reference of 11th May, 1891, and also arising out of the proceedings and enquiries before the Public Accounts Committee during the same session, this House deems it advisable and necessary, in aid of the satid prosecutions and suits, to allow to be given in evidence before the respective courts before which the said prosecutions and suits are to be tried, the admissions. statements and evidence given before the said committees respectively by the pirties accused, and by the defendants in the said several suits when testifying before the said committees respectively. And this House also deems it advisable and necessary to order that all clerks and stenographers who were in the employment of the said House attending the said committees respectively do attend, if required, from time to time before the courts before whom the said prosecutions and suits are being tried, and give evidence as to the statements upon oath inade by the several parties accused and the defendants before the said committees respectively, and that the said clerks and other officers do produce before the said courts respectively, all books, papers, exhibits and other documents received in evidence or produced and used before the said committees respectively, and which are necessary in connection with the following prosecutions and suits now pending:-
The Queer against Nicholas K. Comnolly and Thomas Mefreery for conspiricy.
The Queen against John R. Arnoldi for malfeasance in office and false pretenses.
The Queen against Horace Talbot and A. C. Larose for conspiracy and false pretenses.
Crown suits for the recovery of money:
The Queen vy. Larkin, Connolly it Co.
Buntin, Reid $\mathcal{C}$ Co.
The Barber-Elis Co.
Millar & Richard.
MacLean & Roger.
George Low.
Polson Iron Works Co.
Dominion Tyuc Foundry Co.
J. T. Johnson.

AndréSenécal.
H. J. Bronskill.

That in case of further indictments and actions arisino out of the Larkin-Connolly transactions, this House alss deems it advisable to allow the use of the evidence in itg possession in support of such indictments before both the grand jury, and the court and jury in case such indictments are found and go on for trial.
That this House. while wiaiving its privileges in these particular cases, with the view of eliciting all the facts and obtaining substantial justice in the premises, does not in any sense give up its well established and undoubted rights whenever it mar deem it in the public interest herenfteratany time to protect all witnesses examined before this IIouse or any committee thereof in respect of anything that may be said by them in their evidence. and to refuse permission to any clerk, or officer of the House, or shorthand writer employed to take minutes of evidence before the House or any committee thercof, to give evidence elsewhere in respect of any proceedings or examination had at the bar or before any committee of this House.
He said: The House has. of course, hecome aware, although not ofticially informed, that in pursuance of the report of the Committee on Privileges amd Elections alopted by the House last session, prosecutions were instituted against the persons who were concerned in the alleged malfeasance which that committee investigated. In addition, certain persons who were implicated in proceedings which wore enguired into by the Committee on Public Accounts last session were prosecutenl, and others have had suits hrought against them hy the Crown in the Exchequer Court of Comada and other courts to recover sums of money which, it is alleged, they hat improperly received from the fovernment. The tirst of these in order, are the proceedings agrainst Nicholas (omnolly and Thomas Deareevy for conspinacy ; against John R. Arnoldi, for malfeasance in oticee and conspiracy ; against Horace Talloot aml A. C. Larose, for conspiracy and false pretenses ; the ('rown suits for the recovery of money against the firm of Larkin, Comolly & Co., for sums of money which, it is alleged on the part of the Crown, they had improperly received in connection with the eontract for the Léris Graving Dock, Lispumalt. Giraving Dock and Quebec Harhour improvements. There are, also, sums of money sought to be recosered from Puntin, Reisl & Co., the Parher-Ellis Co., Miller & Richard, MacLean & Roger, (ieo. Low, Polson Iron Works Co., Dominion Type Foumlry Co., and J. T. Johnson, in relation to sums of money which it is alleged those persons paid to employés of the fiovermment : and prosecutions against Amdré Senécal and H. J. Bronskill for money which they hat receivel from persons who had dealings with the (iovemment. As I have mentioned to the House, these prosecutions and these suits had their origin in the investigations which took place lefore committees of this House last session. I will refer the House to the clanse of the report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, which is the basis of the prosecutions which have been instituted against the members of the firm of Larkin, Connolly & Co. of a civil char acter, and the criminal proceedings which have been instituted against Nicholas Connolly and Thomas Mcfireery :

[^50]Mr. Foster.
in Council was to adopt an Order on 14th October, 18:1, stating that on the report of the Minister of Justice, referring to this report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, it is recommended that such legal proceetings as may be arailable may be taken against those concerned-aml so forth-as stated in the report of the committee. There is a recmmendation on the part of the Minister that he be authorized to atake such criminal or civil proceedings as he may consider the evidence warrants, and he be authorized to retain such counsel as he may consider advisable in comnection with such proceedings. and also to communicate with the Harhour Commissioners of Quebec and act with them in regard to any civil or criminal proceedings the Harlour Commissioners may deem it proper to take. The Minister also recommends that the looks and papers in the hands of the committee of the House may be retained for the purpose of these prosecutions. The committee submitted the recommendation to His Excellency for his appooval, which was given. Cuder that power, Mr. Speaker. indictments were laid against the two Comollys, Mr. Thomas Mclireery and Mr. Larkin: or. rather. I shoull say, that they were first summoned to appear before the police magistrate of this city for preliminary examination, preparatory to an finlictment being presented to the grand jury at the following assizes. I must remind the Honse that a portion of the clams which the Gorermment have against Larkin-Connolly arises out of the losiness of dredging in connection with the harbour improvements of Quebec, and the claim in respard to that iten would lie in the Board of the Harbour Commissioners themselves. It was for that reason 1 obtaned authority from His Excellency to conmmicate with the Harbour Commissimners of Quebee and act with them in comnection with any criminal or civil proceentings the Harlour Commissioners thonght proper to take, and the result of this commmication wats that the Harbour Commissioners male an assigmment to the Crown which would enable the Crown to institute legal proceedings for the recovery of money alleged to have been improperly paid to that firm in comnection with drelging operations. That assigmment hats only lieen executed very recently, the delay being due partly to defects in the organization of the loard. There were some vacancies it was necessary to till in order to enable the board to entertain the proposition, amb come to a decision on the question as to whether this assigmment should be male to the Crown or not. Before the matter could be investigated loy the police magistrate in this city, certain proceedings were taken in the city of Quelree, which it hecomes my duty to explain to the House, becanse they are intimately comected with the request I am now making to the House. In the course of a crimimal trial in that province, a subpena was issued by the Superior Court of the Province of Quelrec, demanding that certain persons, who were supposed to have the custody of the hooks and papers referred to in the committees report, attend and give evidence lefore that court on the trial of that criminal case, and hring with them, and produce there, the books and papers which are referred to in that report, and which were placed before the Committee on Privileges and Elections, and which this House ordered to he detained in custody for the purpose of the prosecution, and which were, by order of

His Excellency in Council, transferred to my department for the purposes of these prosecutions. These subpomas were directerl, one of them to the Deputy of the Minister of Justice, another to the clerk of the committee, in whose actual possession the books and papers were at the time, ambanother to myself. It was, of course. incumbent on us to obey the subpuenas, am the subponas were oleyell with a view to sulmitting to the court which had the proceedings before it, the clain to withhold the looks and papers for the purpose of the prosecution, lat likewise for the purpose of pressing every claim which we could properly assert in regard to their custonly and possession. With that view the Depaty Minister of Justice and the clerk of the conmit tee of the Honse went to Quelee, in obelience to the sulprena, with the looks and papers. While there. a proceeding was taken on hehalf of the Comollys, which I must mention to the Honse as furnishing one of the reasons why I am making this motion to-day, a proceeding for the purpose of enabling them to recover possession of all those books and papers which were allegen to have heen deposited in the hamls of the committee by Larkin. Comolly: © (o. Under that proceeding steps were taken which, it seems to me, were indirect violation of law and an abouse of the processes of the court under which these steps were taken, and the result of which was, that for the time being the prosecution was deprived of these books and papers. The oftiver having the execution of the writ, seized not only the hoxes containing the books and papers, but the person who had actual manual possession of them, and took them into his custoly. They were sulseguently placed in the possession of an employe of the Comuollys, who claimed them as the guardian for the time being, although he was not appointel by the court : and it was necessary for my deputy to make a special application to the court. which was lased on the gromend that these looks and papers were privileged from seizure, that the hooks and papers which were scized incluted hooks and papers which were not mentimed in the writ which the ofticer was professing to execute, that the Crown was entitled to retain the custonty of these books and pipers, and that the processitself, and the mole of executing it, were an albuse. That was followed by a decision which ordered the hooks and papers to be given up to the custoly of, 1 think, the prothonotary of the superior Court at Quebec. That subsequently was raried on appeal, but the substance of the result was this: That the books and papers which were not strictly covered by the writ, being the books and papers which hal heen put in evidence and which did not belong to the firm of Larkin . Connolly & Co., wereobtained possession of : but that the hooks of Larkin, Comolly & Co., and their papers, remained subject to the ailjudication of the Superior Court of Quebec.

ROYAL ASSENT TO BILLS.

A Message was delivered by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Roil, as follows:-
Mr. Speaker,--
His Honour, Mr. Justice Strong, Deputy Governor, desires the immediate att endance of your Honourable House in the Chamber of the Honourable the Senate.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker, with the House, went up to the Selmate Chamber.

Aml having returnel,
Mr. SPEAKER informed the House that the beputy (iovernor hat heen pleased to give, in Her Majestys name, the Royal Assent to the following Bills:--

An Act respecting the Department of Marine and Fisheries.
An Aet further to amend Chapter ninety-six of the Revised Statutes, intituled An Act to encourage the development of the Sea Fisheries and the buidding of Fishing Vessels."
An det respecting the Belleville and Lake Nipissing Railway Company.
An Act respecting the Nicola Valley Railway Company.
An Act respecting the Manitoba and South-Eastern Railway Company.
An Act to anvend the Act to incorporate the Mekay Milling Company.
An Act to amend "The Canada Temperance Amendment Act, 18sis."
An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money required for defraying ecrtain expenses of the Public Service, for the financial year ending 30th June, 1s:12. and for other purposes relating to the Public Service.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Mr. Speaker, while the result has been that the books and papers which were not put in evidence lefore the Committee on Privileges aml Flections by the firm of Larkin, Connolly & Co., hase thas been obtained, for the purposes of the prosecution and the suit in the Fixchequer Court, there still remained the fact that the books and papers which are clamed hy them are not for the time being accessible to the Crown for the purpose of the prosecution; the trial of which will commence, as I am informed, in athout one week from the present day. The right to the possession of these books anil papers may not be determined before that date by the Superior Court of Quebec, which is charged with the litigation in regard to the matter. Unter these circmonstances, the House will perceise that it is absolutely necessary that the resolation which I have moved should he adopted, in order to give proper facilities for these procedings. The question may be asked: How the prosecution went on in its preliminary stages without the books and papers, and without the resolution which I now move. On the hearing of the preliminary examipation before the police magistrate in Ottawa, a guestion was mased by the persons who had thus obtained by violent means possession of the hooks and papers, as to the right of the (rown to use anything that had transpired in evilence before a committee of this House, am they practically claimed the protection of the privilege of this House against the proluction of any such evidence liefore the police magistrate. After hearing argument upon that question, in order to enable it to le raised before a higher tribunal, the magistrate declined to receive the evidence, and the result was that an application was made to the High Court of Justice in the city of Toronto for an order compelling the police magistrate charged with this investigation to receive that evidence. The division of the court which heard the argument declined to give the remedy asked for on the gromal of want of juristiction ; but one eminent judge gave, without dissent on the part of his brethren, a statement of his opinion on the question which I shall now repeat from recollection : that was, that althongh the court hav not jurisdiction to entertain the application to order the police magistrate to receive the evidence, the evidence was admissible and should be received by him, and that such evidence should indeed be received on the trial, in view of the fact that what was practically clamed by the defemdants was the privilege of the House of Commons of Canada, and that the House of Commons of Canada had ordered the prosecution.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Has the hon. gentleman got that declatation?
sir JoHN THOMDSON. No, I have not ; I expect to have it, howerer, in a few minutes. I telegraphed to 'Pormon for the exact text of it, so as not to be ohliged to rely on the newspaper report, hat I have not yet received it. Lum that the police macistrate received the evilence and committed the accused for trial. The trial was adjourned for a time on the application of the defembant, and is expected, as I have said, to be commenced within one week from the present day. With the view of removing any doubt from the fuestion, in so far as this House can remove any such lombt, I have offered this resolution, and I propose to state briefly to the House what, in my humble opinion, is the prosition in which the matter stands, from the point of view of this House and its privileges. The doult upon the subject has arisen from the fact, that certain rules were inlopted many years ago, by the British Homse of Commons, asserting the privilege of witnesses appearing hefore that House, and those rules apply to this Honse of Commons and to proceedings taking place hefore this House. There hat been a decision come to in the ease of Rex $\therefore$. Merceron, reported in $\because$ Starkie's Misi Pritus cases, at page 366 , in which the chicf justice of that day, afterwards Lord Tenterien, expressed the opinion what the evidence was admissible. The evidence referred to wats this: The defendant had heen compelled to appear before a committee of the House of Commoms, aml had upon examination delivered in a list of certain public houses, with the names of the owners and other particulars. Upon the part of the defendant it was objecterl that since this statement had heen made muler a compulsory process from the House of Commons, and under the pain of incurring punishments as for a contempt of that Honse, the declarations were not voluntary, and could not he armitted for the purpose of criminating the defenlant. But Chief Justice Abbott ruled in the way that I have stated. Thereupon the contest which raged for so many years on matters of privilege between the House of Commons and the courts, wastenewed inconnection with thisparticular subject. I need not delay the House by referring to that historic contest, which was carried on through so many branches of litigation, and with regard to so many questions that came hefore Parliament for enpuiry. But, confining myself to the way in which the contest was waged with regard to this partionlar sulject, I would refer to the fact that on the 2 2th of May, 1818, in consequence of that decision, Mr. Speaker called the attention of the Britisin House of Commons to the matter, and suggested that the House should make some resolution on this question of its privileges. He stated as follows :-
"The House would feel there could not be a more important duty than to protect its witnesses; but it would be impossible to afford them that protection unless the House has some restraint on the manner in which either its procecdings or its witnesses were produced in confidence before the courts of law. All the instances that he had considered concurred in showing that an application had either been made to the House of Commons or to the Speaker for this permission."
sir Johs Thompros.
The Honse will readily understand, when I mention it, and more particularly when I read the authority which expounds it in clearer and terser language than I can devise the foumdation of this privilege. It has long heen one of the most cherished privileges of the British House of Commons, that nothing that tramspines within its walls shall he reported elsewhere, and so strictly has that rule been laid down that nu memberoroticer of the House has been permitter to testify or to repeat what has occurred in the House. Witnesses, even though examined lefore a committee of the House, are presumed to have been examined by the House itself, amd to have been put in the same position as though, as a matter of fact, they had been examined hefore the bar of the House. Accordingly, on the same day Mr. Bathurst moverl the following resolutions-and these are the rules which govern this branch of the privileges of the British House of Commons now, and which, I assume, apply to this House as well :
"That all witnesses examined before this House or ans cominittee thereof are entitled to the protection of this House in respect of anything that may be said by them in their evidence.

That any clerk or officer of this House, or shorthand writer employed to take minutes of evidence before this: House or any committee thereof, do not give evidence elsewhere in respect of any proceedings or examination had at the bar or hefore any committee of this House. without the suecial leare of the Honse."
Some argument may possibly be made--if any hon. gentleman should dissent from the view I an taking, ind from the adoption of this resolution--as to the particular effect of the rules which I have just read; but I submit, as the foundation of all that I have to say on this subject, that the rule of the British Honse of Commons and which, as I have said, applies here, is a rule not in farour of the privilege of witnesses in particular, but a cule guarding the privileges of the House itself. This will he observed more clearly when I remind the House, as there is, perhaps, harily occasion to clo, that the House of Commons, British or Canardian, camot, ly a resolution of its own, vary any of the rules of evidence, or say that a witness shall not he interrogated in a court of law if the law lays such witness open to interrogation. Therefore the House could not do anything more, and is presumed to do nothing more, than declare its own privilege in respect to the evidence given by witnesses testifying hefore the House. From this explanation it will be immediately recognized that what these witnesses would claim, if they should claim to be exempt from giving evidence as to what transpired hefore a committee of this House, would be, not a right of their own, but a privilege that belongs to this House, and this House only. That is more apparent from the second tule that I have read, which forbids any clerk or otticer of the House of Commons to testify as to what passed before the House or in a committee of the House, without the special leave of the House. If it could be supposed to be an absolute right or privilege on the part of a witness appearing before the House, or before a committee of the House, the House could not with any degree of propriety give leave to an otficer or a shorthand writer to testify as to what the evidence of that witness was. But my interpretation of those rules is, I think, clearly lorne out by the fact that the rules themselves provide a means ly which the House can dispense with that privilege, which is, therefore, I contend, to he regarded as a privilege of the House. Inasmuch as these rules bear upon their face the indication that the privilege may be disregarden and dispensed with, I presume I need say little more as to the power of the House to dispense with them. But, if 1 were to suggest at case in which it would lie proper for the House to le called upon to dispense with this rule, this privilege, this protection of secrecy, I would suggest a case which may occur at any time. Let us suppose a committee charged with an important investigation such as this was, and let us suppose that, in the course of the enguiry, a witness who testified here in Parliament lefore a committee, manifestly committed perjury, and the $H$ ouse ordered hin to be prosecuted. He would in that case deserve, of course, the most comlign punishment. But if it were his absolute right to insist on inmunity from the conseguence of his false testimony hefore a committee of the House, the object of the House would be defeaten, and the House rendered powerless lig the assertion of its own privilege on hehalf of the person whom it was actually prosecuting at the time. I am not, for the time being, or infleed at any time, making an aceusation of perjury against the persons concerned in this particalar tramsaction as defendants. On the contrary, I desire to make no such imputation against them. hut am merely suggesting an illustration as to how they stam, they leing in exactly the same position, as regards the propriety of using their evidence, as the witness whose case I have just suggested by way of illustration. They are persons who have been concerned in important contracts with the Crown, whom this House has pronomed to he evidently guilty of a conspiacty, and against whom this House has ordered a prosecution. The particular evidence which led the House to the emclusion that they were guilty of conspiracy was the accounts appearing in their owa books of several of these transactions. These hooks were produced by order of this. House, and when the House ordered that the parties shouhl be prosecuted, and that, for the purposes of the prosecution, these books should he handed over to the proper authorities, Mr. Justice Ross promouncel from the bench that this was a prosecution by Parliament and. therefore, no question could arise as to the privileges of Parliament in this matter. An eminent authority on the law and practice of legislative assemblies--an Anerican anthority-Mr. Cushing, treats of the subject thus:

[^51]the witnes in any other place without the permission of the House. which is never granted provided the witness testifies truly:
The latter, of course, is a mere dictum of the writer. The rest of the extract states in sulstance the ruling of the atuthorities which the author cites in support of his position.

Mr. MILL: (Bothwell). Has the Minister of Justice found a case in which there is an exception to that dictum, a case where a prosecution has been ortered:

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Yes. However, before proceeding further, and inasmuch as that writer states the gromud of the exemption, I want to call the attention of the House to an important distinction, which. I think, exists with regrird to the enguiry which took place last year before the committee of this House, and which, I presume, would mark any enyuiry before a committee of this House in modern times. Sou will observe that the primary reason given by this authority for the existence of such a privilege, such an unusual protection of the witness, is that in an enquiry before a parliamentary committee, or hefore the House itself, a witness has not the ordinary privilege he would be allowed in the ordinary courts. He is not allowed to excuse himself from answering on the ground that his answer might tend to incriminate him, and that, as I shall show the House, is the case in some other, although very few, tribumals. But the foumlation of the principle I have stated is that the witness is not excused from answering on the ground that his answer may incriminate him, consequently he is deprived of the privilege which he has in a court of law. The distinction I wish to press on the House is that, in the enquiry which took place last year--and the same course would be followed, I presume, in any enquiry which would now take place before the House or a committee-every cham that a witness made was allowed with as much liberality as it would be in a court of law. In the committee where these persons appeared and testitied at every stage, when the witness declined to answer, on the gromm? that his answer might tend to incriminate him, his clain to this privilege sas allowed on the stme principles as wond prevail in a conort of law, and therefore the reason o: the privilege, as stated ly this authority, the gromm upon which that privilege rests is entirely gone. The same authority goes on to say :
"The parliamentary law on this subject is declared and emborlied in the following resolutions of the House of 26th May, 1818."
The resolutions I have already read. -
"It will be observed that these resolutions do not in terms prohibit members from giving evidence of the confessions or statemente of a witncss before the House. Tbis circumstance having been alluded to in the debate, Mr. Speaker Manners Sutton took occasion thereupon to make the following remarks:-
". Some cxpressions haring fallen from the learned member which are so directly at variance with the first and most important privileges of this House, that I feel it my duty not to allow them to pass without notice. I understood him to say that it might possibly happen that a member of this House might be required to give evidence in a court of law on what had passed within these walls. Now. I conceive that hardly any doubt can exist in the mind of any honourable member that he is not at liberty to give evidence elsewhere of what passes here, without the direct, or at least the implied, permission of the House. I wish to state this principle as broadly as possible, for if I am mistaken it is high time my error should be corrected.

No honourable member who hears what passes within these walle, and no other person has a right to hear it, can be required or allowed to give evidence in a court of justice touching a matter which he has so heard.'"

The same authority goes on to say :
" If a witness is thas sufficiently protected, so far as the officers and members of the House are concerned, there yet scems to be nothing in the law or practice of parliament which prevents other persons, reporters for example, accidentally, or perbapes even officially present, if not under the control of the House and hearing the statement of witness, from testifying in any court of justice. It the law of Parliament dies not extend to such persons, the only effectual mode of securing the protection of a witness would be to exclude all but members and officers during the examination.
"In the Howse of Lords.... it has been the practice for many years, when the evidence of such witness is about to be taken, to pass an Act. which is agreed to by the Commons, to indemify them in the fullest mamer against the consequences of their cridence."

There is a short passage on the subject in Taylor on Evidence, at page 7 as, Th elition :
"I hold it seems clear that if a prisener,on being examined as witness, has consented to answer questions to which he might have demurred as tending to eriminate himself, and which, therefore, he was but bound to answer, his statement will be decmed voluntary and as such may be sulsequently used against himself for all purnoses unless, he be protected by the secial language of some statute."
Any member who desired to pursue the subject may refer to the 9th ellition of May, page 1-4, and will fiml cited there a somewhat familiar passage in reference to a question between the cours and the House of commons on a matter of privilege. Nir Orlando Bridgeman says:
"The resolutions of either House are not so concludent uron courts of lan but that (with due respect nevertheless. and to their resolutions) we must give our judgment according as we umon oath conceive the law to be, though our opinions fall ont to be contrary to those resolutions or votes."
Lord Chief Justice Willis satid:
"I declare for myself that I will nerer be bound liy any determination of the House of Comonons against bringing an action at common law for a lalse or double return.
Lord Mansfield sainl:
"That in his opinion declarations of the law by either House were alwass attended with had effects. He had constantly opposed thein wherever he hat an opportunity, and in his judicial capacity thought himself bound never to pay the least regard to them."
Lord Demman, in Stockiale $\therefore$. Hansard, sad :
"But having convinced myself that the mere Order of the House will not justify an act otherwise illegal, and that the simple declaration that the Order is made inexercise of a privilege, does not prove that privilege. It is no longer optional with me to decline or accept the office of deciding whether this mivilege exists in law."
Then, om page 15 s of Cushing, there is this passage, which, I think, is very applicable to this matter. In 188!, there Was a Select Committer of the House of Commons appointed to examine into the proceedings of friendly societies. In the course of that investigation, it was shown that certain malpractices had occurred in reference to the Yorkshire Provident Insurance Company. The special report of the committee stating that the state of affairs disclosed by the witnesses put forwarl, shows how serious are the risks to which the humbler class of assurers are exposen, at the hands of unskilful or unscrupulous promoters. On the 18th July, 1889, the Solicitor General reported from this select Committee as follows :-
"Your committee have had before them for examination the shorthand notes of evidence given by Mr. Richard Martin before the Friendly Societies Committee with respect to the Yorkshire Prorident Insurance Company, and the books and papers produced by him, and also a letter addressed to Sir Herbert Maxivell by Mr. Richard Martin, and certain books forwarded by Mr. Richard Martin to the clerk of your committee. Your counnittee having considered the special report of the Friendly Societies Committee, and the evidence and other materials mentioned, are of opinion that such evidence, books, phe $^{-}$ pers and documents should be placed in the hands of the public prosecutor, in order that criminal proceedings may be instituted against the persons responsible for the management of the Yorkshire Provident Insurance Company. -C'omımome .fouruals, 1889, Vol. 144, p. 346."

This resolution was carried on the 23 ral .July, 1889. The hon. member for Bothrell (Mr. Mills) askel me a few moments ago whether I had found any case in which the rule was dispensed with in regari to the privilege of a witness other than when a witness had given false testinony. I submit that this is one of those cases, leceanse the privilege in regard to the testimony given before the Honse would le of no use if the House ordered that the books should he put in the hatnds of the public prosecutor for the purpose of prosecution. It is true that this does not state that these documents were used on the trial, but the privilege was completely gone when they were put in the hands of the public prosecutor for the purpose of the prosecution. If the witness were protected from what took place hefore a committee of the Hoase, certainly he would have been protectedagainst the use of the books put in the hands of the person comducting a prosecution against him. In connection with my remark, that in some other tribunals the same want of privilege exists as exists in a committee of this Honse as to declining to answer a question, I may refer to the case of Reginam. Scott, -Cox , lit, to show that the absence of privilege in answering ia question exists in the Court of Bankruptey, in which there was no privilege allowed the bankrupt from answering any iquestion on the ground that it might criminate him. While that was a statutory provision, that does not affect the question, hecanse it was held in the case that I have just named that the exemption from prosecution clid not follow the fact that the lankrupt was hound to answer ahthough the answer might tend to criminate him. There are several other cases in which this question has been liscussed, but I think not usefully diseusied as far as the purposes which we have in view were concerned, hecause the question turned in those cases on statutory provisions which do not apply to this case. What I have said on this subject extends to the cases mentioned in this resolution. The oase against Larkin, Connolly & Co. is both civil and crimimal, and so is the case against Thomas Mc(ireevy. As regards the other cases I may mention to the House that in regasd to the prosecution against Tallot and Larose, the principal witness for the Crown, one Charleloois, has left the country, and has not only disobeyed his subpoua, but has also forfeited his security, and in all prohability the prosecution cannot succeed against these men without the evilence which was taken leefore the Public Accounts Committee being allowed to be put in. In regard to all these cases, and especially in regard to what took place before the Public Accounts Committee, I am, in making this motion, laying aside altogether any consideration as to what view the prosecuting officer may take as to the propriety of using this evidence. It may be, especially in regard to such cases as the case of Talhot and Larose, in regard to whichi the House of Commons has not actually ordered the prosecution, that the counsel for the prosecution may consider whether he should use the evidence which the persons who are now accused gave in pursuance of a publice enguiry, and that might depend on the goonl faith with which they gave evidence before the committee. I simply ask that any such consideration shall be laid isisle for the present, and, simply that no privilege of this House shall affect the cases. A letter which I have received from the commel for the Crown in this comnection states shortly the recessity for this evidence. Mr. Osler writes me:
"Turosto, 11th April, 1sig.
"The IIon. Sir John S. D. Thompsas. K.C.M.G., Minister of Justice, Otawa.
"Sir.-With reference to the request made by the counsel in charge of the prosecutions instituted by your Department of Justice as the result of the enquiries of last session, and in answer tu the reguest from the Deputy that I should particularize the evidence that I shail require to use I beg to say, in Queen \%. Connolly and Megreev, I shall require to put in the whole of the evidence riven by them before the Committee on Privileges and Elections. I cannot put in extracts, for a defendant is entitled to have the whole amount of his admission put in ; it is to be remarked that neither these defendants claimedprivileges hefore the committerandiMr. Mecireevy was not called by the committee but ealled by his own counsel as a witness in the matter. I may say that the necessity for using this evidence at all arises from the fact that by the action of the defemant Comolly and bis brother we have been leprived of the books, papers and exhibits which were ordered to be detained by the loose of Commens. and that it these books and papers are returned in time for use at the trial I mas le able to do without putting in the admission of the defendants before the committee as evidence.

" Queen ers Arnoldi.

"In this case I may be able to do without the evidence given before the Committee of Publice Accounts. and I have included this case in the reguisition more for the purpose of haring all the defendants treated alike than for any absolute necessity that arises in the case for the use of the evidence. It is to be borne in mind that the defendant in this case did not claim the privilege.

"Queen ve. Talbut and Laruse.

"The principal witness for the Crown, one Charlebeis, is not to be fomd, and we cammot suceeed in the prosecution in his absence without using the evidence giren by Talbot and Larose before the Pablic Accounta Committee. If the Honse of Commons gives its consent to the use of this evidence, I shall, nevertheless. consider with Mr. Kerr, Q.C., the comel appointed by the Ontario Government in comnection with the Crown work at the ensuing Ottawa Assizes. how tar it will be proper for the Crown officers to make use of the admission of Larose as against himself. It may be that he should be treated as an informer who diselosed a frand against the Government to which he had been a party, amd that he should be treated as a Crown witness, though an accomplice in the matter.

With reference to the suits for the recovery of money the litigation bas not yet arrived at the stage of preparing evidence for trial, and our requisition for the nse of the evidence in these cases is with a view of its becoming necessary at the trial, especially in the erose-cxaminattion of the defendints, should they make statementsinconsistent with their forner evidence.
"I have the honour to be, Sir,

- Your obedient sur rant
" B. B. OSLER.'
Thererguisition which Mr. Oslerreferstoin thatletter was sent me on the 8th inst., and is as follows:-
"The counsel in charge of the prosecutions and suits, criminal and civil, which have been instituted under instructions from the Department of Justice arising out of the proceedings and enquiries before the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections in the session of Parliament of 1891 , under the order of reference of 11th May, 1891, and also arising out of proceedings and enquiries before the Public Accounts Committee during the same session, deem it advisable and necessary, in aid of the said prosecutions and suits, to have the leave of the House of Commons to gire in evidence before the respective courts before which the said prozecutions and suits are to be tried, the admissions, statements and evidence given before the said committees respectively by the partics accused, and by the defendants in the said several suits when testifying before the said committees respectively, and they also desire that it may be ordered by the House of Commons that all clerks and stenographers who were in the employment of the said House attending the said committec! respectively, may be at liberty to attend from time to time before the courts before whom the said prosecutions and suits are being tried, and give evidence ats to the statements upon oath made by the several partics accused and the defendants before the said committees respectively, and that the said clerks and other officers be ordered to produce before the suid courts resiectirels, all books, papers, exhibits and other documents received in evidence or produced and used before the said committees respectively.

The following are the prosecutions and suits now pending. and in which it is desirable to use the sad evi-dence:-

The Queen against Nicholas $\mathbf{K}$. Connolly and Thomas Medreevy for conspiracy.

The Queen agamst John R. Arnoldi for malfeasance in oftice and false pretenses.
"The Queen against Horace lalbot and A. C. Larose for conspiracy and false pretenses.
" Crown suits for the recovery of money:
"The Queen ex. Larkin, Connolly d Co.
Buntin, Reid d Co.
The larber-Ellis Co.
Miller di Richard.
Maclean a Roger.
(jeorge Low.
Polson Ircin Works Co. Vominion Pipe Foundry Co.
J. T. Johmson.
"The counsel in charge mity also think it advisuble to lay one or more further indictments arising out of the Lar-kin-Connolly transactions, and theydesire to use the evidence in support of such indictments before both the grand jury and the court and jury, in case such indictments are found and go on for trial.'
I have thought it well, as these questions are not common in this House, and as there is no written rule upon the sulbject here, that while we waive our privilege-as I have asked the House to do, and sul,ject to the consent of the House-to conclude with a declatation which will preserve in fact, notwithstanding anything that may lee said in this discussion, the privileges of the House of Consmons. Hy resolution, therefore, conchates :

That this House, while waiving its privileges in these particular cascs, with the view of eliciting all the facts and obtaining substantial justice in the premises, does not in any sense gire up its well established and undoubted rights, whenever it may deem it in the public interest hereafter at any time to protect all witnesses examined before this House or any committee thereof in respect of anything that may be said by them in their evidence, and to refuse permission to any clerk or officer of the House, or shorthand writer employed to take minutes of evidence before the House or any committce thereof, to give evidence elsewhere in respect to any proceedings or examination had at the bar or before any committee of this House.
I think it will be impossible to find, in the course of an. examination of the evidence which I have referred to as having been taken last session, any reason why this evidence should not be permitted to be used at any stage of these prosecutions or of these proceedings. Feeling confident in that view; I beg to offer this resolution.

Mr. MLLLS (Bothwell). This motion which the hon. leader of the House has asked the House to adopts seems to me a very important motion, and it ought to receive the very careful consideration of the House before it is adopted. It is, Sir, no doubt the duty of the House to examine into grievances, into abuses of various kinds, that may he submitted to it for consideration. The House has to examine into acts of a public character by men in the discharge of public cluties, in the fultilment of public obligations; it has also to enquire into private abuses for which the law does not make provision. Abuses of this sort, however, are very much rarer in morlenn times than they were at an earlier perion. The general rule of evinlence taken before Parliament, or before a committee of Parliament, is as the Minister of .Justice has stated. The rule is compulsory. No party can ask to be excused from answering any question because the evidence that he is cialled upon to give, the fuestion that he is called upon to answer, is self-incriminat ing. That objection or plea may he put forward in a court of justice. It has no place in parlianentary enquiry. I wish to call the at tention of the House to the statement of comnsel in that respect which the Ministel read. because counsel had said with respect to testimony given by several of these witnesses, that they had not declined to answer: although the evi dence would be self-incriminating. That would be a goonl reason for using their evidence against them if it had been given in a court of justice, but no such plea beingeffectiveleforeateommittee of I'arliament, it not being recognized as an ailegnate olbjection by the law of Parliament, the rule, I take it to be well es tablished, is that all evidence given before a parliamentiary committee is evidence given under compulsionami, if he speaks the truth, under the protec tion of the House. There is mo iliscretion. 'There is no consequence that may follow to the witnessas aresult of the answer he mayg give, that wouldhe regarded as an aleguate reason in law: whatever may be the personal action of the committec. why a question should not le answered. That being the case, it is of great consepuence that Parlianment shosuld consider what would le the effect if it agreed with the motion of the Ninister of Justice in its prestant form, in the hroat, comprehensive and sweeping character which that motion presents. Nir, this Honse has certain inquisitorial duties devolving upon it of a very high character, of very great conserfuences, and it would be a lasting injury to Parliament if we were to adopt any rule at the present time, in oreler to reach a eulprit or punish him, that would have the effect of dest roying the power of Par liament as a borly possessing inguisitorial powers. If the notion were once impressed on parties who had done wrong and whose conduct was about to be enguired into, that they were liable, after the examination was over, to lee brought hefore the courts of justice and lee prosecuted in such courts, and condemmed on evillence which they were not at liberty to refuse to give, it is quite easy to see that the power of Parliament to effectually make enquiries would be altogether gone. It would have no power to prosecute enguiries such as that for which prosecution at this time is sought in the courts. A witnessmight, winlerthese circumstances, say before a parliamentary committee : " I decline to answer; I decline to answer, because I do not know what use you may make of the answer I am alout to give; I cannot tell whether you will prose. cute me. I cannot tell beforehand what conclusion you will arrive at, lecause in an important case, prosecution was instituted twelve months after the evidence had been taken, and you authorized the use of the statements made by witnesses for the purpose of criminally convicting then hefore the ordinary courts of law." That is a very serious matter, and when we cunsider the law of Parliament when we look into its provisions, when we see with what jealous care it has protected its authority and prevented the evidence that has been given lefore one of its committees being used in a court of justice, we will see that it is based upon public policy for reasons of state and of great conserguence in the pullic interest which are paramonit in their importance to the condemnation or conviction of any particular individual. I do not admit there is an exception to the rule which the Minister of Justice read from Mr. Cushings work, "Law of Leyislative Assemblies." I think there is no exception to that rule, and I will be able to refer to two or three cases that have come before the attention of the Imperial Pitliament where that rule was recognized, amongst which I may name the case of the East Retford Disfranchisement. The Minister of Justice referred to the case of the King against Merceron, reported in the secomd wolame of the Jimi Prinus reports of Starkie, and which was delivered by Mr. Abbott, who was one of the julges of the King's Bench. The Minister of Justice stated the facts of that case. The party Merceron was the owner of certain public houses. He had committerl a fraul in the discharge of a certain public duty, and he had given evidence lefore a certain parliamentary conmittee, evidence, of course, not taken upon oath, which his comsel said ought not to have been usel, hat which nevertheless was allowed by Mr. Justice Albott to be given against Merceron at the trial. The Minister of dustice said that was the first case where the matter fairly came up. I lo not think so. I think there are many earlier cases, and the rule was settled lefore that time, namely, that what was stated in Parliament was not a matter that could he investigited properly by the courts. This rule was, at very early periods, even in the time of Charles I, over and over again riolated by the courts ; but it was over and over again confirmed by the House of Commons, and was ultimately recognized as the settled law of Parliament. I timl, in a later case, Gilham's case, where sir W'm. Follett wished to quote the decision of Mr. Dustice Abbott in support of his contention, that Mr. Justice Abbott, then sitting as Lord Tenterden in the courts, said that there was some mistake about his judgment in the Nerceron case, that the evidence must have been given before some committee where the witness would not be bound to answer. His Lordship assumed that when he admitted that evidence it hal been given before some committee where the witness would not le bount to answer, thus assuming that it was a voluntary statement and that he need not have made it, and that leing a voluntary statement, which he need not have made, it was properly used against him. But, Sir, this matter came up at a later periol in the case of the Queen es. Garluett, which was argued before the Barons of the Exchequer and was afterwards taken lefore the Exchequer Chamber, anl was very fully considered. The Merceron case was again referred to, and Chief Justice Wilde, of the Common Pleas then, referring to this decision of Mr. Justice Abbott in the case of Queen w. . Merceron, stid:

[^52]the reception of the evidence in Mr. Merceron's case as being a proceeding in Parliament, as an examination before a committee such as that was, would be a proceeding in Parliament."

Now, the assumption of Lorl Chief Justice Wilde in that case was, that if there were a proceeding in Parliament it was uot open to the person to use it hefore the ordinary tribunals, and so we have the rules adopted by the House in the Merceron case which the Minister of Justice has read, and which must be regarded as the law of Parliament in this case: the rale which affirmed the immunity of witnesses before parliamentary committees from heing subject to prosecution or comdemuation upon the evidence which they had given before those committees. Let me now refer to the case of Mr. Elmonds. Mr. Edmonls had been, I think, Registrar of latents. He was about to retire, or had retired from the office, and I think some relative of Lord Westbury was appointed in his place : but when the office of Mr. Edmonds came to he examined it was found that he wats a defaulter to the extent of several thousiand pounds, and the matter was investigated and discussed several times by the House of Lords. The prosecution of Mr. Edmonds was spoken of, and the Master of the Rolls said that it would be an unusual thing to prosecute Mr. Edmonds on the evidence given before the committee, because it was upon his own evidence alone that the defalcations could be established, and the Master of the Rolls expressed the opinion, and in that opinion Lord Sellome concurred, that it would be an improper proceeding to modertake to use his own evidence against him, or to seek his prosecution, since it was upon his own evidence alone that his guilt could be establisinel. In that opinion both the Attorney General and the Solicitor General of the day concurred. I might also refer to other cases, Mr. Speaker. I have not undertaken to cite any authorities in defence of the proposition that all the evidence given lefore a parliamentary committee must be regarded as compulsory, for the reason that there no privilege can be pleaded by a witnessbefore suchacommittee. But, if it werenecessary to refer to any authority, I mightrefer to the case that was cited before our Committee on Privileges and Elections last year, where Colonel Fairman had private notes with regard to the constitution of Orange lodges in rarious portions of Ireland, and he refused to produce his book relative to some matter under consideration of the committee, because it contained a great many private notes. After consileration it was held that he must produce it, and that he could not withhold it on the ground that irrelevant matters were contained in it. When the conduct of the Duke of York and Mrs. Clark was heing investigated by a committee of the House, the Rer. Mr. Williams was called upon to give evidence, and in that case the committee decided that there was no privilege to shield him from answering fully any question that the committee might see proper to put. There are, also, the cases of Jasper Parrott, and Mr. Harlow, and Peter Johnson, where persons were to be prosecuted outside, for the evidence or statements that they had made before a committee of the House of Commons or the House of Lords ; and where Parliament interfered. In the case of Jasper Parrott parties outside accused him of perjury and brought an action against him, and the House came to his protection and ordered the parties who had instituted the action to appear before the House. They hat then to five an assurance that the action would be abandonen, or they would have been punished for contempt. The action in each of these cases was declared to he a contempt of the House. Now with regard to questions of public policy. We have in our statute relating to the subject of larceny, express provision that it party miler certain circumstances shall not he at liberty to refuse to answer questions. We have adopted exactly the same rule ats is alopted in Parliament. Let me call the attention of the House to what our law provides: I refer to chipper l6t of the Revised Statutes, section 7 . It is as follows :-
"Nothing in any of the twelve sections next preceding shall cuable or entite any person to refuse to make a full and complete discovery by answer to any bill ineauity, or to answer any question or interrogatory in any civil proceeding in any court. or upon the hearing of any matter in bimkruptey or insolvence, and no person shall be liable to be convieted on any of the misdemeancurs in the said sections mentioned by any evidence whatsoever in respect of any act done by him, if at any time previously to his being charged with such offence he has first diselosed such act on oath in consequence of any compulsory process of any court of law or equity in any action, suit or proceedinir bimaiz fide instituted by any party aggrieved: or if he has first disclosed the same in any compulsory esamination or deposition before any court upon the hearing of any matter in bankruptey or insolvency."
The rule there is clearly this: It is in the public interest that the truth should he known, it is in the public interest that full investigation should be had, it is in the pablic interest that a party should not be at liberty to refuse to answer any yuestion, and that he must tell the truth and the whole truth. He must disclose in the public interest everything that he knows, hut the statute at the same time provides that when you compel him to testify againsi himself, it deals with him fairly in that particular, that you are not at liberty to use the testimony he so gives in any of these civil proceedings, against him subsequently in a criminal prosecution. That is one case; but take the case of the Controverted Elections Act. You undertake to prosecute or to make enquiry as to corrupt practices: you do not allow a man to refuse to answer, but you insist that he shall answer fully. If he answers fully and fairly the judge may give him a certificate which will protect him against prosecution, but you insist in the public interest that the answers shall be full. fou seek to secure by that, above every thing else, a complete and full statement of what it is important to know ; and youprotect him against prosecution, because you feel that it is of more conseruence in the public interest that the truth should be disclosed with regard to any wrong-doing in connection with the act, than that he should be punished upon his own testimony for that particular act ; and so you say to him: You must tell the truth: you cannot plead that your testimony is self-incriminating and that you must not answer, but the law will not punish you upon your testimony : there must be the independent testimony of some other party before any punishment of you can take place. The law with regard to poisoned grain is the stme. It will not allow a person in an investigation to say : I cannot testify or I will incriminate myself. The law says: Your testimony will not be used against you, but you must disclose everything in connection with the matter. The law with regard to merchandise marks, and the law with regard to gaming houses, are the same. Any hon. gentleman who looks at Taylor on Evidence, section 14.5, will see these cases referred to and the principle which 1 have mentioned laid down. Now, the principle in all these cases is the one which the motion of the Minister of Justice, if taken in its broalest and most comprehensive sense, invarles. It is one thing to say that the evidence may be used in so far as it may the the evidence of other parties than the parties themselves; but is it not going a long way to take the testimony of Mr. Comolly and Mr. Medireev, to convict Mr. Comolly and Mr. Medireevy of conspiracy" Vrin take the testimony of men that you could not get outsicle. Suppose you hat put these men on trial and had examined them in the courte, how far coully you have gene? How far would you have hat the right to go: Are yon geing to saty that yon will go further in their prosecution, in conseguence of their having been examined lefore a committee of the Honse, than you would have sone if no such examination had been open to you? If the mule you propose to alopt in this case is fair, if it is one in the public interest and in acomance with the policy of the law, why should you not make it the law generally and not an exception? Now, Sir, the House has ordered the prosecution : it did that last year: and it is open to hon. gentlemen to orrler the use of the evidence taken hefore the House : hut how far will yom go: Will you gol so far as to sat that the answers which you have compelled these men to give, aml which you conld not have compelled them to give in a court of justice, shall he used against them" For instance, suppose you had questioned Mr. Comnolly or Mr. MaGreevy with regard to the moneys that they received fratudently and improperly; suppose you had put these guestions to them hefore a magistrate, could you have compelled them to answer? Most assuredly you could not. If you had pat them in a court of justice upon trial, you could not have compelled them to answer. Well, are you going to use this testimony, which you have compelled wituesses to give on grounds of public policy, or are you going to allow that evilence to be used as against those parties? The Minister of Justice satys, yes. Well, Sir, if the evidence terminated with the parties-if the rule laid down affected them and them only, and that was the end of the thing, you might say that these men had acted in a most dishonest and improper mamer, and that they were getting no more than they deserver. But if the effect is to effectually destroy all enquiry in this House in the future ; if the effect is that when you next investigate a matter before the Privileges and Elections Committee, the witnesses who appear lefore that committee say: We will not answer; you may prosecute us; you may send us to the penitentiary upon our own testimony, but we decline to answer; what can you do with them? You can send them to gaol for the rest of the session, but that is all. Do you think they would hesitate for a moment as to the choice they would make? Would they not say at once : We accline to answer, and you may do your worst ; you may send us to gaol for the rest of the session; but if you were to prosecute us afterwards and send us to the penitentiary for five years, it would be a much more serious matter ; and so we defy your investigation. I say that you are adopting a policy which may have the effect of destroying parliamentary investigation for all time to come. Now, that is a very serions matter. I ask the Honse to consider, and to consider serionsly this fact, that it is the rule of the English House of Commons, and it is the rule of the House of Lords as well, that there shall not be prosecistion upon the testimony of parties given before the House itself. I have referred you to Mr. Edmonds's case. The reason given in that case for not prosecuting him was that if he were convicted, it must be upon his own testimony; and that it would be an improper proceeding. and contrary to the policy of the law, to itply to persons who were not examined before a pariiamentary committee a different rule altogether. If you shouh say to Mr. Comolly or to Mr. Macireevy, produce your books and we will not use the evilence given hefore the parliamentary committee, that would he another and a different proposition from the one the Minister of Justice has submitted to us. But, I say, that where parties have made a full statement, there is no instance of their having heen prosecated, so far as I know, upern their own testimomy. There is the one case mentioned, the case of Merceron, which was known to have heen an improper proceeding, one not authorized by Parliament; but I find no case where Parliament has athorized a prosecution, or where it has authorized the use of a man's own testimony given before a committee of either House, as incriminating testimony against him. Now, there is another feature of this matter. In all cases where the confessions or oaths given elsewhere have been allowed to be used, against parties upon a criminal proceeding, they are cases where it is presumed the (ath, admission or statement wat volmtary. Take the case of the Queen agrainst Coote, which was decided, I think, in the l'rorince of Quehec. It was taken to the Iudicial Conmittee of the Privy Conncil. Mr. Coote was in charge of a building which had been burned. Nobody had leen as yet accused, but he was examined loy the fire marshals, and suspected upon his own statement. He was prosecuted and convicted on the statement he had made on oath prior to his being aceuseldat all. The judgment in the Judicial Committee of the Privy Commil was delivered by Sir Robert Collier, I think. Sir Robert said every man must be presumed to know the law with respect to his own rights, and when he made the statement it must be regarded as a voluntary statement, and not haring been made unler compulsion, it was admissible. Whether an individual can claim privilege, even after the Honse grantel permission or not, I will not here discuss, becuuse that is a yuestion which will properly come before the courts: but what I wish to call the attention of the Honse to is that, whatever step this Honse takes, it should take cantiously, bearing in mind the fact that the great, the paramount interest it has in view, is the right of investigating into abuses on grounds of public policy. It must not create a powerful deterrent against the discharge of this duty in all time to come, ly bringing men before the committee, compelling them to give evidence, and upon that evidence, given under compulsion, indict them before a criminal court, convict them and send them to the penitentiary. In my opinion, and I bind nobody else by what I say, whenever you do that, you are taking the most effectual step ever taken by any parliamentary hody to render any enquiry or investigation into almses alortive in all time to come.

Mr. TUPIPR. I quite agree with the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) that, in a matter of this kind, this Honse shonld proceed cautionsly, and I think that the position taken in support of the resolution now in your hands, Sir, shows that caution is being exercised. The rule as laid down by, and to which I may again refer, the authorities discussed, which is the admitted rule governing practice, accorling to both hon. gentlemen who have spoken, is that all witnesses examined before this House, or before any committee of this House, are entitled to the protection of this House in respect of anything that may ie said hy them in their evidence, and that no clerk or othicer of this House, or shorthand writer employed to take evidence therein, or in any committee thereof, shall give evidence elsewhere in respect of any proceedings or examination had at the bat or before any committee of the House, without the special leave of the Honse. It goes no further than this, to leave each particular case to stand upon its own particular merits, and to warn this Honse that its each particular case shall he so decided. The cases referred to to-day, begiming with the case of Rex w. Merceron and other cases, vary in their particular features, but it is signiticant, in the long array of cases mentioned to the House so far during the debate, that no partieular case contravenes those principles which seem to be liad down by the authority I have just given. No case commtervenes the position that when this House has reached the stage we have reached in comection with these criminal proceedings, we should then render all possible assistance in having the instractions of the House properly carried out. For instance, the Edmonds case, to which the hon. gentleminn alluded, would have been in point, and his argument would have been in point, had he used that case, and the principles there enunciated, when this House was deliberating as to whether it should prosecute these men or mot. That was a case expressly comnected with the gluestion to which I have just referred, as to whether proceedings should be instituted, and it is authority so far as it goes, to show that the House should be very careful in directing criminal proceedings, when the evidence upon which those criminal proceedings shall depend, was obtained under the powers of this House before a committee of this House. But I call the attention of the House to this improtant feature in comection with the matter now before us, that we have passel the stage discusserd by the hon. member for Bothwell, rightly or wrongly. We have exercised our discretion, wisely or nuwisely, and we have not only ordered that these men be prosecuted, the most of them directly. the others indirectly, but we have, indeed, adopted the very practice now suggestel; and that is this, that the resolution under which the proceedings are being carried on, directed not merely the prosecution of the parties, but the impounding of their books and documents and papers, if my memory serves me right, for the very purpose of being used in the prosecution, so that practically the discretion of this House has been expressed. We have all agreed that a rule which may very wisely be applied in certain instances, giving a.protection that may very wisely le atforded in certain cases, should not be ipplied in this, and that in this case the Honse should not he embarassed in having this law carried out. Many of the cases referred to concern proceedings by outside parties against witnesses and parties who have been before parliamentary committees. These cases, I sulmit, have no application to a case as this, where the Crown is acting practically under the instructions or upon the advice of Parliament itself. Now, the hon. member for Bothwell laid considerable stress upon the policy involved, son to speak, that if Parliament adopted the course of procedure suggested in this motion, it would tend to prevent that frank avowal with reference to facts or circumstances which Parliament would desire before any future committee of investigation. I sulmit that all the difficulties to be raised in the way of a future enquiry we have raised far more effectively by having instituted this very series of criminal proceedings. I say that the step taken last session, then, has loneall the harm, so faras that aspect of the case is concemed, that can possibly he done, hecause we have intimated to witnesses by that procelure and the collse we took, that we will, on the disclosure of serions facts and on the proof of crime or wrongs committed, pat into operation the criminal law in comnection with them. Now, then, so far as that feature goes, we have passed that stage, rightly or wrongly: and the fuestion is now, as I submit, whether there could be a stronger case for obtaining special leave to allow that assistance contemphated in that motion, and to allow the officers who were carrying ont the command and direction of this Honse to have the benefit that the use of this evidence and the advantage this record will afford. It seems to me that no stronger case could possibly appeal to the discretion of the House, and that the hon. gentleman's objections have no application to the present state of the proceedings, whatever application they might have to the question whether we shonld prosecute these men.

Mr. DAVIFS (P.E.I.) I think there is practically a substantial agreement between the gentlemen who have spoken on both sides of the House in respect to the substance of the resolution, but my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Mills) suggested that there were certain protections which the law alwass throws around a man who is compelled to testify in regard to certain facts which may criminate himself, and that any provision in that case has been omitted from the resolution. I think that is the only guestion between the resolution which has been moved by the Minister and the exception taken to it by my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Mills). I think we may start with this fact, that this House should have, and every committee of this House shonld have, the right to insist that every witness shall answer any and every question put to him to elucidate the facts referred to a comnittee for enquiry. That is essential to the privileges and rights that Parliament has heretofore exercised. In every public enguiry that is made, it hecomes necessary to ask questions of witnesses which, if they were asked in any court of law, the witness would decline to answer. Here we do not allow the witness to decline to answer. We do not allow the privileges which prevail in courts of law, and the result is that, if the witness is compelled to answer, if the answer is forced from him, it should not be used against him when he is prosecuted. I take it that the evidence and the looks that the committee which was appointed by this House had before it last session, were, according to the statement of the Minister, improperly withdrawn. I take it that this House will do everything necessary to vindicate its privileges and its rights, and that we will not allowthose who withirew those books from the custody of the House to take any advantage of that withdrawal. It would be monstrous if, because of that withdrawal, those who withdrew those books should escape the consequences of the evidence which would be given if the books were present. They certainly ought unt to be in any luetter position than they would lee if the books were here, but they ought not to be in any worse position. The proposition is, that the parties implicated are to be prosecuted for their wrong-doing, and the House should certainly do everything which is proper to facilitate that prosecution, and to see that everything in the way of books and papers is placed in the hands of the pullic prosecutor, but the House ought to be equally careful in determining that no man who has been compelled to give evidence against himself in the committee, should le convicted by that evidence in a court of law. If we do not put in that proviso, we strike a vital blow at all parliamentary enquiry. What is the sense of the House referring such a matter to a committee and haling witnesses before a committee from ail parts of the country, when, if the witnesses give evidence which may criminate themselves, that evidence may be used against them in a court of law? The great surety we have for eliciting the truth, and the whole truth, in matters before our committees, is that the witnesses know, and parliamentary law lays it down as a certainty, that, if they give that evilence, they will he protecter against any use of that evidence in a court of law as far as they are concerned. I do not think it necessary to go into a discussion on what the lealer of the House has stated the law to be, because it seems to me to be evident that the answers to questions given, under the circumstances to which I have eferred, correspond to the answers which are given to a police otficer by a person he has arrested when he is under luress, that is, that they are not to be used against him on a prosecution, and notwithstanding all the resolutions of Parliament which would compel a man to give evidence against himself, there is noexception to the rule, that when he cloes answer a question, his answer shall not be used against himself in a criminal prosecution. The reference the hon. gentleman made to the case of Merceron was true as far as it went, but Mr. Taylor, in commenting upon it in his book, says:
"Though this case is of little authority on the subject under discussion, as the evidence could not then have been given on oath."-See per Ld. Tenterden in R. v. Gilham 1 Moo. CC. 203.
The general result of the authorities is summed up ly Mr. Taylor in his hook on Evidence as fol-lows:-

[^53]That guotation the hon. gentleman real as the law, but he will see it is largely modified by the footnotes which saly that a large majority of the Irish judges took ia different view of the law in R. 1 . Gillis, 17 Ir. Law R.N.S. 512 . The hon. gentleman has said that no privilege was clamed at the time of the extmination.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I said that wherever privilege was claimed it was allowed.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I was one of the sul). committee that sat on that matter, and, when Rohert Mcireery came before that committee, the first thing he clid was to protest, and he said he would not produce his private books or his bank looks, because they would disclose matters that should not be disclosed, and he was informed by the chairman, the hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. (irouard), that the ordinary privilege in a court of law did not exist here, and the case which has been referred to by my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Mills), as to a member of the Orange lodge in England being compelled to testify before acommittee what took place in the longe room was cited as an-example to show that there was no privilege existing lefore a committee of the House of Commons.

Mr. TUPPER. This was mot a question of privilege.

Nir JOHN THOMPNON. It wats simply a matter in regard to private aftiairs.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I do not put thison any technical ground, and it has been stated again and again that before a committee you camot claim any privilege. I am quite sure the committee clearly expressed it time anll again, amb the chaimman repeated it half a dozen times to the witnesses, and told them, yon can claim no privilegres. Now, I think there is no great difference between the two sides of the House. I think this House, having ordered the prosecution to proceed, is bound to do everything legitimate and fair to further the prosecution, but I think there is a point at which the House ought to stop. I think that the general principle which the wisdom of our ancestors has laid down, and all the courts of law have carried out, that a man making a statement where he is compelled to answer, shall not have that statement used against him in any prosecution against himself, is one that we shonld adopt here; and I think the hon. gentleman's resolution might be modified to that extent. I would suggest to him that we make a provision that no consent which we give now, will justify or authorize the use of the evilence of any man against himself. While the hom. gentleman was speaking I hastily drew up the following as an ameniment:-

[^54]be compelled to doso, without fear that his answer shall be used against himself afterwards.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I will ald but a few words, as I an reluctant to detain the House any longer. I can harilly accept the suggestion which the hon. member offers to me, becianse it would nullify all that is in the resolution. What I propose by the resolution is to avail ourselves of the evilence and statements given hy those parties before the committee. The hon. gentleman will see at once that if I accepted his imendment I would be unable to offer the books in evidence, or the statements of what the lwoks contained, because these books were produced hy these parties and admitted umler oath, in the course of their testimony, to le their looks, to lee their lealger, to be their cash books, to be their journals. If I agreed not to put its evilence anything they have said, I have no evilence to give as regards any of the proceedings before that committee. As regards anything else, or any other person I said I could understand there ought to be some qualification.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). The books can he prosrluced as independent evidence: surely the production of the books of these parties before the committee does not prevent their production before the courts just as if they hat never been before the committee.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The hom. gentleman misapprehends the difficulty which 1 am asking the House, by this resolution, to meet, and that is the non-pronluction of the lroks. If I hat the books here I would not present this resolution.

Mr. DAVIES ('P.E.I.) The hon. gentleman will remember, I think, that all the secondary evidence which he has in his possession, and which was offered respecting the books, was evilence given by Martin P. Connolly, the book-keeper, and that could not, in any sense, he said to be evillence criminating himself.

Nir JOHN THOMPSON. Not all the evidence. Nicholas Comolly was examined at great length upon the books; 1 admit his memory was rery defective, hut he made some very inuortant statements.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) He clid not make any entries.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. He did not make any entries; but if I were defenling him in a civil suit, in the absence of the books, and of the statement maile upon the books, I shouhl challenge all the testimony derived from the books themselves. I think there was a misapprehension as to the use I made of the decision in the case of Rex is. Merceron. I dia not rely on it as an anthority, but for the purpose of introlucing a narrative as to the way in which these rules came to be adopted in the British House of Commons. As regards the argument upon which the whole opposition to this resolution is basel it seems to me to be somewhat overstrained. The argument is that the House will be less powerful in making enquiries into $\mu$ uiblic matters if witnesses know, when they come before these committees or come before the bar of this House, that they are linibie to be prosecuted for what they shall say. My answer to that is that the witness knows that now; he knows that there is in his farour a general rule that the otficers. shorthand writers, se., shall not divalge what takes place: hut he knows that the rule is accompaniel by a proviso, "unless the House shall otherwise order." But, in every other respect a witness coming lefore the bar of the Homse or lefore a committee is practically, as 1 propose to place these parties, at the mercy of the House as regarls the disclosure of what takes place before the liar or lefore the committee. I am strengthened in the lelief that these parties should be placen at the merey of the House in this particuiar. ly the fact that they have committed a wrongfuland violent act, they have deprived this Honse of the evidence which was in its possession. and which was most important for the parposes of the prosecution.

Mr. LAURIER. It seems to me to be agreed on all sides that the general form of the law now existing should be adhered to so far as possible. Under that law it has always been understoon that the witness who comes hefore Parliament or a committee of larliament, is privileged, and shall be protected. I donot know how far the hon. gentleman who has just spoken, controverts this principle, hut to some extent he does controvert it. But if he will allow me to remind him of the rule which has been quoted, it seems to me the proposition is more broad than he makes it. There are two propositions in that rule. The first is :
" All witnessess examined before this House or any committee thereof, are entitled to the protection of this House in respect to anything that may be said by them in their evidence."
Now, that is absolute. They are entitled to the protection of the House. The second proposition is not at all an exception, lout it is a further rule for the protection of witnesses. It reads thus:
"That nn clerk or officer of this House, or shorthand writer employed to take miuutes of evidence before this House or any committee thereof, shall give evidence elsewhere in respect of ans preceedings or examination had at the bar or before any committee of this House, without special leare of this House."
What is the meaning of these two propositions: Simply that a clerk of the House, or shorthand writer, cammot be summoned to give evidence without leave being first obtained. Between these two propositions there is a great difference. The one says that the clerk or the stenographer who takes the evidence shall not even be summoned to appear before another court without leave being obtained from this House itself; and that as to the witness who has testified lefore Parliament, he is entitled to the protection of Parliament, and Parliament shall see that everything that he has stated upon the floor of the House in relation to public matters, and for the information of the public, shall be held sacred and shall not be violated under any circumstances whatever. Now, the hon. gentleman himself, it seems to me, in his gencral proposition, has controverted that proposition, hecause, if I understood him correctly, he based his resolution altogether, not upon general principles which may apply to all cases, but upon the particular feature of this case. That matter, I admit, does not stand in the same position in which it stood when Parliament was prorogued last fall: At that time the House was in full possession of all the evidence adduced before the committee. Now, as the hon. gentleman has stated, by an abuse of the process in a court of law, Parliament has been deprived of one portion of the evidence which hat been taken lefore the committee. A certain portion of the evidence, and the hooks which had served in the trial, camot he hat, and the hon. centleman simply wants to place the parties exactly in the position in which they were when Parliament prorogued sio far so grool : that is substantial law amb reason that every one will approve. It is quite fair, it is just and reasonable, that the men who are accused to-day should not gain any privilege nor ohtain any alvantage by the undue process of law which they have abused in order to deprive the Crown of arailing itself of the evidence which hatl been given against them. Let the hom. gentlenan carry his resolution to the extent of placing the parties in exactly the position they formerly occupied, and as if this abuse of process had not taken phace. But the hon. gentleman is seeking to gin further than that. The resolution goes further than what I have suggested. becanse, after all, if the evidence given, say by Robert Mctireery, or Thomas Mc Cireery, or ly Comolly, is to go in its entiretr before the court, all the admissions which have heen mate may go against them, not only upon the point covered by the books which ate missing, but upon other points as well. In taking the propused action we are volating law and justice. which has always been maintained in all British courts, namely, that mo one hrought lefore Parliament shall incriminate himself. If we depart from that rule we must introluce another rule. The hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) truly said. that if we alopt the system suggested there will be difficulty subsequently in olitaining evidence before this Parlianent. If the Minister of Justice were to restrict his motion, and were, for example, to say that the evilence, so far as related to missing books should apply against these parties, I could molerstand his contention: but there is no restriction proposed. The resolution provides that the whole of the evilence given by amy of these parties shall lee used against them at the trial. I submit that such a course is in ciolation of the principles of justice and equity, and especially British justice, and is altogether antagonistic to British law, to criminal law, to civil law as we understand it in this comntry, and to the express will in Parliament. Of course, if the Government decide otherwise, they must assume responsibility for their action. At all events, I must protest that we have in this resolution a deviation from the well-known rule, that anything which is spoken on the floor of Parliament or: before a committee of larlianent at a public investigation for the sake of truth, which is receiving a severe blow to day.

Mr. OUIMET. Permit me, Mr. Speaker, to ald a few words to what has already been said. It appears to me that hon. gentlemen opposite are advancing the arguments that will certainly he adduced on behalf of the accused when the suit is before the court, namely, as to whether the evidence which will be presented will be admissible against them or not. The only point aske! by this resolution is, that notwithstanding the privilege that exists with respect to evidence taken luefore the har of the House or before any committee thereof, all the evidence taken last year lefore the committee referred to in this resolution, shall be arailable for use in courts, lut within the rules of law.

When this evilence is placed lefore the court, the question will then he discussed as regards its admissilility, either as andmissions on the part of the persons concerued or as secomiary evidence.

Mr. DAVIES (P'E.E.) The objection raised on this side of the House was not that stated hy the hom. gentlentan. It was merely that there should le a limitation put upon the consent, and the consent hould not extemitorany statement made by a witness tending to incriminate himself.
Mr. OUIMET. I saly what we have to do mow is. to decide if it is experient and jublicions for this Honse to rellome its well-known privileges in order that the ends of justice may he attanined in the different prosecutions ordered by this Honse. The first reguest is :
"To:llow tw he giren in eridence before the respective court before which the satid prosecutions and suit: are to be tried, the admissions, statements and evilence given before the said committees respectively by the parties accused. :mid be the defendants in the said several snit, when testifying befire the said enmmittees respectively."

The secomel reyuest is:

"That all the clerks and stenographers who were in the employment of the said House attending the saide committees respectivels do attend, if required, from time to time before the courts betiore whom the said prosecutions and suits are being tried, amd gire evidence as to the statements umon uath maide by the seceral parties accused :and the defendants befire the said cummattees respectively."
All that is askel ly this resolution is, in the first place. to allow the evidence taken before this committee to be sent hefore the courts. where it will be arailed of according to the rules of evidence: in the second place, to permit the stenographers and all employes of the House to give such evidence as is allowed be the court, and mothing else. If we were to go, further than that, surely we wonld be anticipating the decision of the julge. There is mo dimger involved in the course which we are now proposing to follow, for the rules of eridence are well known. If the admissions made ly the respondents when examined as witnesses are to he considered as compulsory admissions, the court will treat them is such. If there is mo just reason to almit secomblary evidence, the evidence as to the contents of the liooks that are now missing will not be admitted. We have nothing to dow with these questions. All we ask is that this House renounce in the present case its well-known privilege that its proceedings shall not be brought hefore the courts, unless the necessity of such proceeding be clearly proved. Here, however, the necessity has been shown. If the Oriler of Parliament for the prosecution of these parties is to be complied with, it is necessary that the permission now asked should he granted ; otherwise, the order of the House will be mullified, and, as the Minister of Justice has intimated, if the Opposition prevents the forernment from obtaining the permission asked for, it would be just as well to say that from the present moment we will discontinue all these prosecutions. The counsel for the Crown have declared that it would be useless to proceed further without having this evidence. That evidence will be taken for what it is worth, and it will le used according to the well-known rules of law. I do not miderstand that any inconvenience will result from the present proceedings, but it is apparent to me that the ends of justice will be promoted thereby.

Mr. MULOCK. It has heen urged that every witness who gives evidence before a parliamentary committec has the full protection of Parliament, and that nothing he says can lee used in evidence against him: in fact, it has been urged that the evidence has teen given under compulsion. If there was a law like that, if Parliament has passend a resolution to that effect, creating a contract between larlianent and a witness, that what the witness said here would not he used agrainst him, I would most religiously alvocate the securing to such wituess all his rights. But I do not construe the rule that has leen cited as going so far. The rule hats been citer, and correctly, ino doubt, that every witness in giving evifence inefore Parlianent or a parliamentary committee is cutitled to the protection of larimanent. What is the rule in courts of law? If we wish to construe this rule we must construe it intelligently. and there is mo better guide for comstruing a rule than that furnisher lyy courts of law. There is mobetter recognizel rule in cont of law than that a witness camot be connindled to incriminate himself. But when a witness steps into it witness lox and is askel a guestion, which, if answered, might incriminate him, what is his duty? The rule of law protectis him, and so he is entitled to the protection of the courts. But supprse he fails to ask for protection, suppose he wishes to waire his right and to answer the question, without first obtaining the protection of the court : the point is, that at that stage he must assert his own right, and if he fails to claim the protection of the court the evilence which he has siven against somelmily else may be used against himself. I would like to ask how you can draw a different conclusion foon a rule of Parliament that does not go any further, and I submit that it does unt goany further. My attention hats been called to the East Retford Disfranchisement case in Pol. 1s. Parliamentary Debates, New Series. In this case a witness refusel to answer certain questions, and the rule of Parliament was in force then as it is now. The witness was at the bar of the House and refused to answer the question, and how did they compel him to answer? Parliament had to real the rule to him and to undertake that he would get the protection that the rule gave him if he chose to ask for it. They did not say that the rule itself gave him protection without his claiming the benefit of the rule, and when at the bar of the Honse he claimed the protection of the rule, Parliament then endorsed the rule again for his protection and he was able to give evidence which could not be used against him. I, therefore, say that in the case we are now discussing there is no decision, in my opinion, which construes the rule in the alleged large and far-reaching character that has been assigned to it. Those witnesses had a simple course open to them, and when they were asked to give evidence before the parliamentary committee, they could have said: We claim the protection of the parliamentary rule ; give us the undertaking of Parliament, and then we will give our evidence. Had that demand been made upon the committee at the time, the committee would have reported the matter to this House and the House would have given its order of protection. However, they chose not to make that demand.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) That is hardly fair, because they were told they were bound to give eridence.

Mr. MULOCK. I was present at most of these committee meetings, and I never hearl it stated that the withesses were bound to give evidence without an order of protection. It may have heen so stated. hat I have no recollectionof it. I remember that they were told that witnesses would be examined touching the contents of books in a certain way, I helieve, however, that these witnesses did not ask for the protection of Parliament before they gave evidence that might incriminate themselves: hat there were stenographers there, and the evidence will show whether they took such a position or not.
Mr. MLLS: (Prothwell). I'arlianent asserted in the examination of persons in reference to the sale of otfices ly the Duke of York and Mrs. Clarke, upon examination of the Rev. Mr. Williams, that there was no privilege to claim, and that a person must answer any question that the committee saw proper toput.

Mr. MLLOCK. The decision which I hate cited in 1 Nos, was ten years subsequent to the empuiry to which my hon. friend refers, and it, therefore, superseded any lecision of the committee of a prion date. At all events, I take the gromad that a witness is hound to protect himself, aml it is not for Parliament to he astute to tind excoses to defeat the ends of justice. Thase who seek to defeat the emis of justice must take their own comese in order to arail themselves of the protection which they can, muder the law, secure for themselves. For my part. menses they can show an undertaking on the part of this Parliament to protect them, 1 for one am in farmur of giving them the benefit of all the evidence that is within the reach of this House and the cotantry.

Motion agreed to.

AD.JOLRNMENT FOR FASTER.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. Speaker, before the Oriers of the Day are called, 1 wish to say that several members of the Honse on lyoth sides have spoken to me, pointing out that if the House would adjourn at 6 odock to-morrow evening until after the holidays, it would afford them an opportunity of leaving for their homes ley the trains which depart before that hour. Nany of the members from Nova scotia and the Eastern Provinces will have to take the train to-morrow afternoon which leaves here at 4.40. If it would meet the views of the fovermment and the Opmosition as well, that the House should adjourn to-morrow evening at 6 oclock, I know that it would meet with the wishes of the majority of the members of this House.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I must say that the adjournment at 6 odock to-morrow evening would meet the views of the majority on this side of the House. It would meet with general approval if it did not interfere with businese.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. In questions of this kind we are always in the hands of the House. I thought, however, that, although the House might not sit rery late to-morrow evening, we could carry on the business until probably 11 oclock.

Mr. MULOCK. All the trains leave here before $11 o^{\circ}$ clock.

Mr. LAURIER. If the hon. gentleman will permit me to refer to a private conversation that I had with him, I stated that I was of opinion that we might sit until 11 oclock, but I have had such a shower of protesting since then, that I think, if the leader of the House will agree, we might adjourn at 6 oclock to-morrow evening.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Under these circumstances, and to meet the views of hon. gentlemen, it is understood that the House will adjourn at 6 oclock to-morrow evening.
It heing six oclock, the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

THE (RIMINAL LAW.

sir JOHN THOMPSON moved secomd rearling. of Bill (No. i) respecting the (riminal Law, He said: I lesire to avail myself of the indulgence of the Honse to move that this Bill be real a secom time in advance of the printing heing done. becanse the Bill is a very large one, and the mere fact of its having been printed and distributed, which will no doult le done this evening, would not have given members time to examine so bulky a measure; and the second reading of the bill amil its reference to a select committee, which I propose to ask for, will somewhat alrance its comsideration. will direct the attention of the members Who are to serve on that committee to the measure luring the Baster recess, and will emable that committee to su promptly to work when the Honse resumes hasiness. I think, however, that I ought, especially as 1 am asking the indulgence of the House on the matter, to state shortly what the wimeipal provisions of the Bill are, because it has received considerable attention in the comatry, as I am reminder every day ly valuable suggestions for its improvement, whichl am still receiving. The objects of the Bill are very tersely expressed in one passage of the report of the Royal Commission which investigated the subject of the criminal law in Englam, in deming the effort at conlitication in a similar Bill in (ireat liritain in these words:
"It is a reduction of the existing law to an orderly written system. freed from needless technicalities. abscurities and other defects which the experience of its administration has disclosed. It aims at the reduction to a system of that kind of substantive law relating to crimes and the law of procedure, both as to indictable offences and as to sumuary convictions."
The Bill is founded on the draft conle prepared hy the Royal Commission in (ireat Britain in 1ssi), on Stephens l Digest of the Criminai Law, the edition of 185\%, Burhidges Digest of the Camadian Criminal Law of 1889 , and the Camarlian Statutory Law. The efforts at the reduction of the criminal law of England into this shape have been carried on for nearly sixty years, and although not yet perfected by statute, those efforts have given us immense help in simplifying and relucing into a system of this kind our law relating to criminal matters and relating to criminal procertire. The contents of the Bill are shown on the first page of the draft. It will deal with offences against public order, internal and external ; offences affecting the administration of the law and of justice; offences against religion, morals and public convenience; offences against the person and reputations offences against the rights of property and rights arising out of contracts, and offences connected with trade; it will deal with pro-cellure and proceedings after conviction. and actions against persons achministering the eriminal law. I may say, as regatds any provisions of our law tonching the subject of evidence, that I have embeavoured to eliminate them from this Bill, with the view of introincing, as I propose to do immeiliately after the recess, a Bill relating to evidence in all matters which are umeler the control of this Parliament. Notice of that Bill is on the Notice Paper. I would further explain that the Bill aims at a conlitication of both common law amd statutory law relating to these subjects, but that it does not aim at completely superseding the common law, while it roes aini at completely superseding the statutory law relating to arimes. In other Wonds, the common law will still exist and be referred to, athl in that respect the corle, if it should be atopterl, will have the elasticity which has been so much desired by those who are opposed to condification on general principles. But it will not provide for the punishment of anything which has been hitherto a statutory offence unless that offence is proseribed hy the tems of the enactment itself. I will call attention briefly to a few dhanges in the law now existing and well understoon which the Bill contemplates. Suhstantially it follows the existing law. It proposes, however, to abolish the distinction between principals and accessories. It ams at making punishments for varions offences of something like the same gade more uniform. It discontimes the use of the word "malice" and the wom " malicionsly," which are now so common in both statntory and common law, and which have been fomel to lead to considerable micertainty and ambiguity, in the arministration of the criminal law hy juries. A few lines from the report of the Royal Commission in Figland will explain that proposition. They say:

[^55]"The distinction between felony and misdemeanour was, in early times, nearly. though not absolutely, identical with the distinetion between crimes punishable with death and crimes not so jumishable. For a long time past this has ceased to be the case. Most penalties are no longer punishable with death and many misdemeannurs are now punishable more severely than many felonies. The great changes which have taken place in our criminal law have made the distinctions nearly if not altogether unmeaning. It is inpossible to say on what principle cmbezzlement should be a felony. and the fratudent misappropriation of money by an agent or the obtaining of goods by false pretense a misdemeanour: why bigamy should be a felony, and perjury a misdemeanour: why child-stealing be a felons, and abluction a misdemeanour. The result of this arbitrary classification is that the right to be builed, the liability to be arrested without warramt, and, to a certain extent, the right of the court to order the payment of the costs of prosecutions vary in a mammer equally arbitrary and unreasonable."

It is proposed likewise to alonish the provisions of the existing latw with reand to remue. We treat the place of trial as a matter of convenience, and the accused maty be tried where he has been arrested or where he may be in consonly. It alob. lishes writs of error and provides an appeal court, which is practically the same: as the old court of Crown cases reserved with larger power than at present. It proviles also for new trials in certain criminal cases, ant comtains a new provision that, in certain cases anl on certain representations. a new trial may he ordered at the instance of the Crown, represented hy the Minister of Instice for the time being. The attention of the public has been directed rery consilerably to one change, which was mooted in comection with the reorganization of the law relating to criminal matters amb criminal procedure. and that is the proposed aborlition of the system of indictment by graml jury. The attention of the Parliament and the public hats been directed to that question very forcibly indeed by a member of the other branch of Parliament, a member to whom, I am sure, both Houses owe a great deal of gratitule for the pains and the care and the attention he has devoted to legislation during the many years of a useful aml honourable life. I refer to senator liowam. He moved in the matter a year or two ago, and it was thought lest that the attention of the public shomlil he drawn even more strongly to the question than it was hy the remarks he mate on the subject in the senate. The result was, as the House may remember, that a circular was sent to all the junges in the country who have criminal jurisilic. tion, and incleed all the officers charged with criminal prosecutions, calling their attention to the change which that learned gentleman thought desirable, and asking their opinions as to its propriety and expediency. It was felt that the opinions of those who are comected with the administration of criminal justice and have its care from time to time would be great assistance to Parliament in framing any change that might be thought desirable; and we have had in response to that, a great number of replies, most of which have been published, and some of which have come to hand since the publication of the return by order of Parliament. The opinions upon that subject ly those who were thus alilressed were very divided indeed. Most of the jullges who are accustomel to alminister justice without juries, in ortinary proceedings, were in favour of the change. The others were divided in opinion, and it is impossible to deny, in view of so strong a division of opinion on the subject, that it seems mawise, in comnection with this measmer, to force that provision on the attention of Parliament at presient. I must saty that I conciar persomally in the opinion expressed in another place by the leamen gentleman to whom I have mate reference. and I think that in many respects the alministrat. tion of justice would be improved if we dispensed with the intervention of gramd juries. I will sity one word as whe thisputed guestion of jurishliction in this matter. 'The proposition was monter! home ago that this mater maty le ieyome the comtrol of this l'anliament, and may he more properly exercised ho the prosineial legislatures. When wis come to deal prationally with the matter. that difference seemin to me to ramish. It is not a pues. tion after all of whether the grand jury forms at part of the organization of the comert or mot, and therefore is minder provincial emotrol. It is a ques. tion whether. incriminal procerlures it is clesimable to continue the exereise of functions by the grame jury and in alopting an amembed eriminal pros. cellure. I take tolne beyond lowht that the pres. tion as to whether we should or ant dispense with the services of the eram! juries, is one which is incluted in that division of the criminal law. I ohserve one criticism which it may le well to notice, as affecting to some extent pullic opinion upon this question. The rireulats which were athlressed to the julges and the prosecolons and attone!s semeral throughout the conantry, han, as whe result, the effect of calling the attention of the grand juries themselves to the question and even from them diverse opinions have come. The criticism to which I refer is this, that it was most unreasomable to expect from the grand jurors any expression of opinion favourable to the diseontinuance of their functions, anel that it would le practi cally like emsulting l'aliament as to whether Parliament should he aholished or not. Speaking from my own experience, which hats been pretty general in the province in which I practised, the contrary is the fact. The grani jurors of that province have nearly always heen in fatour of the diseontinnance of their services, becanse those services they comsider onerous and mimportant. There are two st rong reasoms that incuce me to delay any request to Parliament to atter the law with regard to this system. One is the opinion expressenl by high antimity that, for the present at least, a comtinnance of the functions of grame jurors leanls to a latge boily of respectable persons in the community heing present at the exereise of the functions of the court and leads on their assistance in the exercine of those functions, the result of which is satid to be, and If lelieve it to be, that these persons have their contidence in the system of justice as athministered in this eomatry increaserl, they feel a greater co-nperation and sympathy with its administration ; and to some extent alditional publicity among the lest classes of the comannity is, in that way, wiven to the proceedings in our eonurts of justice. Another consideration which has had great weight with the ju!ges who desire that the change shouh not be made at present, is the uncertainty as to what procedure would take the place of that before the grand jury. I can suggest no other as likely to take its place, except something like this: The reduirement that every person, hefore being tried, should be committed for trial after a preliminary investigation or an exanination $1, y$ some competent anthority: There are many offences, as most members are aware, for Which trial may take place now without any commit. Hent for trial preceding the charge to the grame jury and the application to the grand jury and indictment hy the grame jury. It will be absolutely necessary that we shoulal insist upon a provision, if we should aholish the functions of the grand jury. that every person tried must tirst be committed for trial, and in the secomd place that the complaint, imdictment. charge. or whatever it might be, which womld take the place of a mame jury indictment, should le approved hy the julge hefore whom the trial is to come on.

Mr. LatURIER. This Bill is mot yet, areording to the rules of the Honse, in such a comolition that it should come up for discassion, hut, as I a mere. stand that the hom. gentleman intemes to refer it at once tor a select committere amel as the purport of the Bill is what the hon. gentleman hats just ex planed, that it will not intronduce ang great changes. hat is to put in statutory form what has already existed hy statute mentified by the opinion of eminent jurists, I think it may gro at once to at seamil realing. There are many new featuresin the Bill, hut I think there are none which will startle the comitry or take the people by surprise. Most of the new features are properly based on the changes whic: have taken place in the criminal law up to the present time. There is one feature in the Bill with which I concur, and that is that the hon. gentleman maintains the functions of the gran!l iny. He does that more in deference to pablie. opinion than in accordance with his own tiew. In this important matter of the gramit jury, I am a conservative to the hilt. I believe in the grannl jury. Of conrse, the grand jury has mot the same functions to discharge now that it fomerly hand. In an earlier perion of history, the function of the grand jury was tor review the state of affairs in any Gounty anil point out any alonses that existed. This function is now largely performed hy the press of the country, but the most important functions of the grand jury still remains, and that is the indictment of criminals. I know of no system that can herlevised which offers not only to society hut to the party himself a better protection agrainst umbue persecia tion than the system of a gramd jury. There are a number of otfences which lorder on the thin line Which sefarate criminal offences from others, and I think in these cases the summoning of the grame jury, composed of the leest and most suhstantial mein within a certatin ralius in the community, is the hest grarantee that a man will not have his liberty placeel in jeopardy unless he is justly accused. If the grand jury were to be abolished. and at man had simply to loe left to the decision of the magistrate, I woulil say that the chatracter of the magistrates or the local judiciary would have to he very much improved. In many places persons are appointed as justices of the peace whose: ability and knowlenge are very limited, and if all these matters were to le left in the hamis of these magistrates, the liberty of the sulject might he unduly interfered with. So far, I agree with the conchision of, I believe, the greater number who have been consulted, that the time has not comeand I do not think it will ever come in a free country--that the grand jury should be dispenserl with. I would ask the hon. gentlenan one question, simply for my own information. He states that in the new conle he has dispensed with the word "malice." What does he propose to solsstitute for that important word:

Sir JOHN THOMPsoN. I propose to substitute a new definition of the crime of murder, and new detinitions of those crimes in which the word "malice " was previously useal.

Mr. MLLL心 (Bothwell). Nofar ats my own personal view is concerned. I ampleased that the hon. gentleman has unt dispensed with the constitution of the gramel jury. I ani not going into a discussion as to whether a grame jury is a necessary part of the criminal procedure, liut whatever may be its origin in that respect or whatever boly may have control over the appeintment of a grami jury, there is no donht in my mind as to its importance in the administration of criminal justice. I think the views expressed hy Professor Lieher on this subjert are of very great value and force, and he says that it is important to have a body to ascertain: whether the party accused ought of onght not to be put on trial. The giand jury performs this function, and it also performs another, and that is the enlistment of the people in the alministration of justice. Fven where the intelligence of the people might be greater than it is in Finglam, the administration of justice is less satisfactory where there is no jury sristem. Under this system their sympathies woild he enlisted when it is their duty to administer justice and to take part in that function, because in that case the people are culisted on the side of the law. No doult, where you have questions of disputed facts, questions as to the determination of matters of damage and so on, it is important that the principle of the petty jury should be maintained, and it is also of conserquence that in matters of criminal justice, leoth the petty and the grand jury should ie maintained. You have in the grand jury to assist the judge the best persons in the community, the leest informed and the most law-abiding members of the community. They assist the julge in enforcing the law, and everywhere you find scattered amongst the community those who have taken part in nearly every session of the court, who are there to repel the attacks which may be made against those whose friends have been convicted or otherwise punished : and I say that those persons, both on the grand jury and on the petty jury, standing up for the atministration of the law, should be retained as a matter of very much greater consequence than those who seek the abolition of the grand jurg are willing to admit. The Minister of Justice admits that some other person or hoily would refuire to be invested with the powers and duties now devolving on the grand jury if the latter were abolishen. I do not know who could be rested with that anthority that woul discharge the duties more satisfactorily. I aulmit that you might get some one individual trained in the law who, perhaps, would sometimes avoid the mistakes into which a grand jury might fall. But that is only one matter to be considered. There are the general interests of the public, there is the feeling of contidence of the public, there are the adrocates who assist in the administration of the law who are scattered thronghout the commmity and who do not a little towards upholding the luw as it is administered under the present system. In my opinion it is of very great consequence that the grame jury system should he retained, and I should deeply regret to see any step taken to aholish it, and to substitute something else in its place. It is a popular element composed of the most influential, and. on the whole, anong the hest informed members of the commmity : and these leing men of social standing and influence, being men of motes than a verage intelligence, it does seem to me that it would be a very great mistake amd it would bea retrogressive mberement, it would he the sacrifice of a strong popular element in our system. if the grand jury were abolished and an attempt mate to substitute some persorn or borly in its place.

Sir IOHN THOMISON. I cammot answer very shortly the question put liy the lealer of the ap. position in regarel to the sulnstitution of someother phase for the word " malice." becanse it requires the examination of a number of sectioms. I will give some specimens of how it is poposem to deal with the matter. Rection $\because \boldsymbol{O}$, for example, silys:
"Homicide may be either culpable or not culpable. Homicide is culpable when it consists in the killing of any person, either by an miawfal act or by an onission, without lawful excuse, to pertorm or observe any legal duty or both combined, or by causing a person, by threat:or fear of violence, or by deception, to do an act which causes that person's death, or by wilfully frightening a child wr sick person.
"Culpable homicide is either murder or manslaughter. Homicide which is not culpable is not an offence.

- Culpable homicide is murder in each of the following cases:-
"(if) If the offender means to canse the death of the person killed :
"(b) If the offender means to cause to the person killed any bodily Injury which is known to the oftender to be likely to cause death, imd is reckless whether death ensue: or not:
(c.) If the offeuder means to cause death or, being so reckless as aforestid to one person, and by accident or mistake kills another person, though he does not mean to hurt the person killed:
-(d.) If the offender, for auy unlawful object, does an act which he knows or ought to have known to be likely to cause death, and thereby kills any person, though he may have desired that his object should be effected without hurting any one."
And section 2.3 :
"Culpable homicide is also murder in each of the following cases, whether the offender means or not death to ensue, or knows or not that death is likely to ensuc :
(a.) If he meang to inflict grievous bodily injury for the purpose of facilitating the commission or any of the offences in this section mentioned, or the tight of the offender upon the commission or attempted commission thereof, and death ensues from such injury; or
( $b$.) If he administers any stupefying or overpowering thing for either of the purposes aforesaid, and death ensues from the offects thereof; or (c.) If he by any means wilfully stops the breath of any person for either of the purposes aforesaid, and death ensues from such stopping of the breath.'

And so with regard to all the offences.
Mr. MILLN: (Bothwell). It is still more ditficult to understand.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The rifficulty about malice was that it was used in a legal sense quite contrary to the popular sense.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). still everybody under. stool it.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Nobody in practice understood it but the lawyers. The inst labour of the judge was to get the jury to dispense altogether in their minds with the sense which everybody had put upon the werls " malice aforethousht," and to tell them that what the indictment said abont malice did not mean what everylody in creation except the trainel few, supposed it to mean. The ohject is to use the words in their popular sense.
Motion agreed to, and Bill read the serond time.
sir IOHN THOMPNON. I move that the Bill (No. i) respecting Criminal Law, he referrel to at committee to be composed of members of both Honses, and that the members on the part of this House le: Messrs. Adams, Amyot, Brodeur, Baker, Carroll, Coatsworth, Chornette, Corbould, (Iurran, Delisle, Daly, Dickey, Elgar, Forbes, Fraser, (iirouard, Kirkpatrick. McLeon, Langelier, Monet, Mulork, Masson, Sir John Thompsom ami Weldon.
Motion agreed to.
Mr. SPEAKER. There are more than fifteen members. I observe, on the special committee to whom the motion promses to seml this Bill. It will he necessary to suspend the rule.

Sir John THOMPSON. I beg to move that the rule he suspended in that particular. The committee will require to be a large one, both for the ample examination of the Bill and to facilitate the transaction of its business.

Motion agreed to.
sir IUHN THOMPSON movel that a Message In: sent to the Senate reguesting their Homours to unite with this House in the formation of a loint committee of both Houses to examine and report upon the Bill from the Commons (No. 7 ) respecting (riminal Law, and to inform the senate that Messrs. Allims, Amyot, Broleur, Baker, Carroll, Coatsworth, (hoquette, Corrould, Curran, Deslisle, Daly, Dickey, Edgar, Forbes, Fraser, (iabonard, Kirkpatrick, McLeon, Langelier, Monet, Mulock. Masson, Sir Johm Thompson and Weldon will act on behalf of the House of Commons as members of sail loint Committee should the semate agree to its creation.

sUPPLN--PRIVLLE:S.

Mr. FOSTER movel that the Honse again resolve itself into Committee of Supply.
Mr. DENISON. In referring to a matter that was hrought up the other night in the most contemptible mamer by the inember for North Brant (Mr. Somerville) - Nome hom. MEMBERS. Order, orler.
Mr. DENIson. I will withdraw that word, Mr. Speaker, if it is umparliamentary, but it is rather difficult to know what word to use when speaking of a person of that class.
An hon. MEMBER. Order.
Mr. DENISON. I would like to say that it is a matter hardly worth the while of taking up the time of this House to reply to, but as it has been given a fictitious importance by being brought 'up liere by the member for North Brant, I think it is only my duty to myself and my duty to this House that I should explain the matter as shortly as possible. It may be divided into two parts, one, a charge against myself, and the other a charge against the corps which I have the honour to belong to. All the charges are of the flimsiest character, and I think, Mr. Speaker, as they are allowed to remain in the Hansa, in, that the original locuments should be placed hefore us so that we may be sure that the hon. member for North Brant has not been imposed upon by fictitious documents. However, be that so or not, it is not my purpose to dispute it. I should like to refer to these attilavits somewhat in the order in which they have heen read. The first one is that signed by a man called Charles Black. The items 1, 2 and 3 are practically true : in fact, all of them are true except, 4,11 and 12 , which I should like to real to the Honse. No. 4 is as follows :--
"4. That I was ordered to sign four (4) blank pay sheets, (2) being smaller ones in said camp in said year, said order being given by and in said blank pay-sheets (4) being signed by me in the presence of Capt. Clarence Denison."
No. 11 is ats follows:-.
" 11 . That I now believe that the a foresaid two (2) small blank pay-sheets were officers' pay-sheets and that I had through them being blank, been unwittingly induced t.) sign as veterinary surgeon and for a veterinary surgeon's pay."
No. 12 is as follows:--
"12. That I now believe and that through having been ordered to ride aforesaid horse on marching out parade and also through the pay-sheets being blank, that I have been unwittingly induced to sign for horse allowance ( $\mathbf{2 1 2}$ ) luring said camp in said year."
These allegations resolve themselves into two charges ; that I, or my corps, improperly drew $$ 1$ ? horse pay ; and that we drew pay for a veterinary surgeon instead of pay for a farrier's sergeant. I have obtained from the department the original pay-sheets that were put in,-- and they were there for Black or any one else to see who chose to go to the department for that purpose. I find here the last name but onefarrier sergeant $C$. Black paid from June $2-7$ toJuly 2,12 days at 90 centsper day, 810.810 . Blank column where horse pay drawn. This shows that no horse pay was drawn, and this disposes of that charge: The only officers for whom we drew pay were nine, being six troop officers, a surgeon, an aljutant and quartermaster. No pay was drawn for a veterinary surgem, and we had no veterinary surgeon there. I may also mention as a matter of fact that none of this money passed through my hands. I merely certified that the payments were correct ; I mate none of the payments, and received none, except the small amomit of pay which came to myself. The next atfillavit is one signed also by Charles Black to alout the same effect as the last one, except that it deals with the North-West Rebellion. In that he says:
" 4 . That I signed duplicate blank pay-sheet (2) in two places after aforesaid promotion, and that I now believe that through the pay-sheets being blank that I had been unwittingly induced to sign for a veterinary surgeon's pay."
I have also obtained the pay-sheets for the whole time the corps servel in the North-West, on which occasion, I regret to say, I had not the honour of being present. These pay-sheets show conclusively that no pay was drawn for a veterinary surgeon, the only pay drawn being for the troop, officers, and the staff, which consisted of the colonel in command, the adjutant, the surgeon and quartermaster. There is no veterinary surgeon's pay drawn for time during the whole time the troop was in the North-West. That, I think, conclusively settles affilavit No. 2. Hon. gentlemen can look at these documents and see the particulars for themselves. The next attidarit is one signed hy James slater, the man who went about seeking to procure evilence against us. He says:

- I, James Slater, of the city of Toronto, in the Cuunty of York, do solemnly decliare that on and between Saturday, the 2ith day of September, 1891, and Saturday, the 3rd October, 1891, that to my knowledge the Government of the Dominion of Canatia have been defrauded of certain moneys through the false muster of one R. M. Melville and one John Hardy, in the Governor General's Body Guard, Camadian Militia. satid G.Ir. B. G. being under the ermmanl of and mustered bs one George Taylor Denison, a Lieutenant-Colonel. Cumdian militia, and said two men, R. M, Melville and John Hardy, being residents of the city of Toronto.'
I may sty in reply that both these men put in the whole of their drill, and receired their pay, aml 1 hohl in my hand the receipts for the pay they received. I think that fact disposes of that atfidavit. The next is one by a man name Win. Fenwick, who states ats follows:
" I. William Fenwick, of the city of Toronto, in the County of York, porter, do solemnly declare that:
" 1 , I served three years in the Governur General's Body Guard under the command of Lieut.-Col. George Tayior Denison.

2. About the year 18sin, Lient.-Col. Fred. C. Denison, Governor General's Body (Guard. deducted a sum of money, I think it was sis, from iny cam!, pay of that year, telling me it was for a deficit in connection with a ball given by the Governor Gienemals Body Guard for the benefit of the proposed monument of the men who fell during the North West rebellion, as the proceeds were to yn to said monument after expenses were paid in comnecfion with said ball.
1 may saty, in reply that atfidawit, that it is of rery little consequence whether it was true or mot. If it was true, the action complained of would be done with the consent of the man himself, who male the affidarit. But it so happens that it was not true. I have the different aceoment books where the items are chargel against the men, if any are entered up. I find in 1888 , the year he speaks of, there was no such stoppage against Fenwick: there were the usual stopparges for mess, forage, and so om, but no stoppage for a ball. I have also examined the looks for 1887 and 1889 , as there might have been a mistake of a year. I find no such stoppare for a ball charged against the men in 1889 . The acconnts are signed liy Fenwick. Hon. members of the House are quite welcome to look at these books and siatisfy themselves in regiad to this matter. Even supposing the charge were true, I would not objeet to it in the slightest degree : hut it so happens that there is no truth in that statement. The next affidavit is one of B. Marshman, who swears-I need not trouble the House liy reanling the whole of it-ats follows:-
"I was employed by Lieut.-Col. Fred C. Denison, Governor General's Body Guard, and Capt. Clarence Denison, (i.f.B.G., as a groom during the annual camp of the said G.i.B.B.G., under command of Lieut.-Col. George Taylor Denison. During said unnual camp I was ordered by said Cinit. Clarence Devison to sign two papers, which I have since been informed were two blank pay-sheets, and I was also ordered to answer my name on a parade, which I have since been informed was muster parade for pay.," 1 may mention that the strength of a troop in the Body Guard is 42 men. We are allowed pay for i.: horses and 42 men. This arrangement is made as it would be a useless expenditure to the country to keep a horse for every man, as a certain number of men are reguired for gaard, cook, ofticers' servants, aml so on. This practice has been carried out in order to effect a saring of public money. In regard to uniforms, we have to be as economical as possible. and members of the House will understand that the rough usage which a cavalry man gives his uniform in grooming his horse is more severe than that given the thiform by an infantry man, who performs no such work. But the miform is to last for five years. On this accomnt when a man has put in three years service and leaves we sometimes give his pair of trousers for oreatls to a servant or conk, and thit is all the miform they get, and ats a matter of fact they suarcely need any uniform at all. This B. Marshman says he did not enlist, that he did not sign the service roll. I sent for the service moll, which I now have in my hand, and I find that Benjamin Marshman signed the roll on $\because-\mathrm{th}$ dune 1857. The hom. member for Brant (Mr. Siomerville) satid the other night it would he a very funny thing if all these men were dranken loafers. I do not refer to the aftidavits of Roche and Bryan hecanse they do not atfect the result one way or the other. but it so happens that Bryan and Marshman who mate atfilavits are men who have hoth heen up hefore the Police (ourt in Toronto: Bryan on two oce:sions for crunkemess and Mashman once. so that they are hardly what you cond call the leest type of witnesses you coull procure for thispupose. The atfinavit of Matthew Bryan refers entirely w the North-West and I reget that (ool. Dunn who commanded that tronp is now in Manitoha, so that I hal no time or opportmity to commmicate with him as to the charge manle here. I fiml on tuming up the pay-sheet, which I have before me. that Matthew Bryan went up there as a dismominted man, and that at Wimipeg a horse was purchased, as they had only $3 t$ out of the $3 . \mathrm{i}$ in the troop which must have been assigned to Bryan hecause he rorle in the North- West, and I remember hearing that he was thrown from his horse, He almits himself that he inal a horse, forle says, "nor did I ride said horse shown against my name matil my return to Toronto." This shows that he did viste that horse. I have, howerer, nothing further to sily with regard to that as I could not commanicate with (ol. Dum on the subject, and cam only speak from the pay-rolls which are before me. Now. Mr. Speaker. as to the attillavit of Gen. MeImerny, I may remark that it confines itself to it statement that Magistrate Baxter did not do his duty. That of course is none of my business, and I have mo lesire or intention of entering into that question. If Mr. Slater, or the member for Brant (Mr. Somerville) choose to report Mr. Banter they we perfectly at liberty to do so. The next two affidavits are signed lig Harry .I. (.. Bryne amd Ehlward Roche. I shall not trouble the Honse to read them, but they are merely to the effect that vater went to the store-room and offered to deliver up the arms. I donbt that statement, but whether it is true or not it makes no difference, for the reason that it was Slateres business to loring me the arms, and I had demanded them from him on several occasions. I may refer hack a monent to state that during the drill that year he was perfectly useless, he came there after a prolonged spree, and the doctor said he was rerging on D.T's, so that he was no use to us. I told him after the drill was over to send in his arms, and I took the further precaution of sending a non-commissioned otficer to him with an order to return the arms to store. He vefused the non-commissioned ofticer to do so, and being in no particular hurry about them I wrote to him, and I wrote to him again, and threatened him then that if he did not bring in his arms I would have to prosecute him. I did it for this reason. After the 1 th September in that year his three years were up, and he still held the arms. I had either to allow this man to defy me anll keep his arms, or to go before a magistrate and force him to return them. I can assure you that I was not long in making up my mind which course to pursue. The only other statement I have to make with reference to this, is in answer to his assertion that lie did not get a certificate of discharge mutil a comparatively recent date. The canse of that was this: When I motified him to return his ams I had the discharge prepared and signed and waiting for him to come and call for it, and hand in his arms. He never called for it and it lay there for months aml months, but that was his own fault. It is his hasiness under the rules and regulations to call for the discharge. Now, Mr. Speaker, I do not know that there is a single other point furt her that I can touch upon which has not alreaty heen answered. If any hom. gentleman wishes to make further ellumiries or tor ask for further ex. phamations 1 shall he omly toonghl to give them. hat while I do this, I must syy again what I said the other night, that it was a most improper proceeding, and a most unparliamentary procecoling for any person sitting in this Honse as a member of Pailiament to take the course alopted by the hom. member for North Brant (Mr. Sonerville) the other night. He should surely, when he is attacking the homour of a member of this Howse, have taken a little trouble to satisfy himself of the truth or falsity of these charges. They were all in the department and le could have seen them: the department looked over them and said there was nothing in them. and if he had chosen he conld have formed that out. But instead of doing that he comes to the House with these trumped up atfilatits and the House can see what use he mate of them the other night. The power of some to imagine evil in others is greater than in other persoms. and I think that every hon. member in this House will say that the course alopted by the hom. memher for Brant (Mr. Somerville) was a most unparliamentary one. and one that would not commend itself to any other member of this Honse. I may say that in the city of Toront, where I come from these charges would have no weight, because nobonly would helieve them there: but on accome of their appearing in the press and on account of them going forth through the comutry in the manner in which they have done, they might gain credence in some quarters, and it is therefore necessary for me to deny them. Before I sit down, Mr. speaker. I must thank the hon. the leader of the Opposition for the kind mamer in whichhe received my statement the other night and accepted my worl. I am sure it is only what I might expect from his character and from the gentlenanly instincts that I know he possesses. I do not know, Mr. Speaker, that there is anything else I can add to what I have already sail on this matter.

Mr. COATSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I can harrlly allow this oceasion to pass without saying some words in regard to the unwarrantable attack that has been made upon wy hon. friend and colleague the member for West Toronto (Mr.

Denison). Those of us who have known the hon. gentleman for very many years are surprised indeed that such an attack shond have leen made upon him, because we know that his honour has always been mimpeachable and that his integrity has never been assailed. There are circumstances comnected with this matter which, when they are male known, place the member for North Brant (Mr. Somerville) in a very unpleasant light before the public generally. This list of documents upon which the charge was based is no new thing at all, because I suppose there is hardly a member of this House who did not receive that bill of charges last sessim. There are very few hom. gentlemen here who have not heard of this crank who has been making the charges, and I feel sure that the hon. member for Sorth Brant (Mr. Somerville) who read the papers the other night, had these papers in his hamds last year, amd therefore that he has had abmolance of time for the purpose of investigating them. I feel ansured also that if he haul taken the slightest pains to make an invertigation himself. if he had put himself ahout in the very least degree to ascertain whether the charges were trae, he would have leathed that they were false as my hom. friem has proved them to he tomight. It appears to me, sir, that not only did the hom. gentleman who made the charges, owe something to the chanacter and the standing and the reputation of the hom. gentlemanagainst whom he mate those charges, but he owed something to his own character. It appears to me that he owed something to the dignity that , ought to be felt by every menber of this Honse : and I must say that I feel somery for any man who could so far forget his position ats a member of this House, and therefore forget his prestion as a gentleman- becanse I think every member of this House mght to he a gentleman - that he should so far forget all the finer feelings which one man moht to have towards another, as to ling on these papers- not the original papers. hat only copies of them - such charges as he brought against the hon. member for West Toronto. I would go further. Now that the matter has been so thoroughly explaned, I think that the hon. memher for North Brant owes it mot merely to the hom. member for West Torontr, but to this House and to the comitry, to apologize for the statements he has made and the course he has pursued: and I trust that the hom. gentleman, who has had guite sutficient time for reflection since he brought these charges, will see fit to retract them to-night as pullicly as he made them, and to apologize to the hom. member for West Toronts for having made: them.

Mr. somervilite. I desire to say a few worls with regard to this matter, and to bring to the recollection of the members of the House the occasion when these attidarits were read. It was when the House was in Committee of Supply on certain votes reruired for the militia, amounting to something over $$ 1,2 i 0,000$. During that discussion I saw fit to make use of certain affilavits, which had been placed in my hands, as I stated, by a reputable law firm in the city of Toronto.

siome hon. MEMBERS. Name.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. I will give the name o the firm. It is Dewart & Irving.

Mr. COATSWORTH. They are only copies of the affidarits.
Mr. somprvilles. If the hon, gentlemen will just keep cool, I shall get aloug faster than if they interrupt me. The gentleman informed me in the letter which enclosel the affilavits that he had the original declarations made liefore magistrates in his possession, and that they wonld he placed in my hands whenever 1 required them. So that, so far as I was concerned. I was acting in good faith that the original documents were in the possession of those legal gentlemen in the city of Toronto. and that they could be had at any moment; and they are there still. When the matter came up for discussion I satw fit to hring that first set of declarations before the committee, to show, as I helieve they dill show, that the expenditure on the militia force was not just all that it should bee. After referring briety in the commencement of my remarks to the extratagance of the expenditure on the militia system, I went on to point out some particular instances. Now, 1 consider that it is the duty of every man who seeks to guarl the interests of the public and to look after the expenditures of the comitry, to use all possible means to get at the truth of those expenditures and to see that they are justly and properly made. I had in my possession those atfilarits setting forth certain facts, and I helieved those atfidavits to be true. I believed that I had a right to show to that committee that this expenditure was not legitimate : and certainly it must be apparent to every man in this House that having in my possession those athidarits, 1 had a right to suppose that I had proof of what I stated with regard to thase charges. Now, to make sure of this matter 1 referred to some of the pablic dowments, and in looking over the report of the Department of Militia and Defence for the year ending the 31st December, 185\%. I foum that in Military District No. 2 , Licut.-Col. W. D. Otter, Deputy Aljutiantdeneral, the actual strength present at inspection of the (iovernor (ieneral's Body Guerth was 10 ofticers and if men, and that the inspection took place on the Bn of July. Then I turned to the Auditor (ienemals: Report for the year ending the Bnth of June, 1 sis , which includer the time when this inspection took place, and I formd ly that report that the dovernor General's Borly Ginard was composed of 86 othicers and men. Then 1 turned to the Militia Report again and found the officers composing the diovernor Cienerals Boly Ginard numbered 11, and I foum that the veterinary surgeon was not appointed until the e3rd of December, 1887, so that it was impossible for Framk Alexander Campbell, the veterinary surgeon whose name appears in this report. to iee present at that inspection: and the information contained in the letter which I receivel from Toronto, was to the effect that (ieorge T. Denison was in England at the time of that inspection. If that is not correct, I shonld like my hon. friend-
Mr. DENINON. Certainly it is correct.
Mr. somerville. Well, I also fomd-this was ::fter the dehate the other night-that the hon. member for West Toronto made this statement:
"The man Black imagines that he signed two pay-sheets. What he signed was a pas-sheet and a muster-roll, which are two different things. and, ingtead of drawing pay as a yeterinary surgeon, he drew the pay of a farrier sergeant. If the hom. gentleman had gone to the department he would have found that instead of my having charged for the pay of ten men 1 only charged for the pay of nine men, and that only nine men drew paty."

Mr. DENISON. That means nine othicers.

Mr. somerville. Well, I have shown to the House that ten officers drew pay, by the Report of the Militia Department and by the Auditor (ieneral's Report for that year, and I think I had reason to base some dependence on the affidavit made by Mr. Black. If we are not to depend on the reports which are sent down by the different departments to Parliament--
Mr. BOWELLL. Will the hon. gentleman let me ask him a question: Does the Militia Report state that any mumber of men were paid: loes it not simply refer to the number on the muster roll?
Mr. SOMERVILLE. It is just as I said.
Mr. BoW ELL. I am speaking of the Militia Report.
Mr. SOMERVILLE. It reals: Actual strengeth present at inspection, io afficers and it men : and then we find that, acoorling to the fuditor deneral's Report sti men were pail, which is exactly the mumber mentioned present at the inspection. There are omly 11 otficers in the corps, and there could only have been nine at that time drawing pay. As I said before, the veterinary surgeon was not an. pointed, and learing ont the chicif ottieer who was in Bugland. there were only nine other officers, yet the Nilitia Report shows that ten were paid. I think under those circumstances, I had geod gromed for supprsing and helieving that there was some serions. fault to be foum with this payment of money made Aul, what further contirmed my suspicions was a reference to the Anditor (ienemal's Report of this year. One of the hon. gentlemen who criticised my remarks the other night semed to think it was an mpardonable sin to criticise any one in the House commected with the militia, and that it was a more enormons sin still to criticise any one out of the House comected with the militia. I find, hy referring to the Auditor denerals Report of this year, that a state of atfairs exists with regard to the management of the militia of this country which, no donbt, in some respects, influenced the 1 ieneral, whose report was referred to the other night, in making some of the statements he did, unless his report was written lefore: but, at all events, this is not creditable to the militia force, and it induced me to think that if all the irregularities set forth in this report did oecur, it is guite possible and probable that the statements of this man Black with regard to the money paid to the Governor Gieneral's Borly Guard of Toronto, were correct. 1 will not detain the Honse with reading the names of all the officers who are mentioned in the Auditor (ieneral's report as drawing more pay than was due them and ocapying higher positions than they were entitled to occupy. The following appears in the Auditor fieneral's Report:-

" Audit Office. Ottafa, 15th June, 1891.

" $\mathrm{SI}_{\text {IR }}$-I wish to call your attention to the following overpayments and other irregularities in your annual drill vouchers for the 6 months ending the 31st of December, 1890."

Then follow two or three pages of names, numbering over 90 officers, all the way up to majors and colonels, who drew money, amourting from $$ 3$ to $$ 27$ each, which they were not entitled to drats, and which they illegrally drew, and which the Militia bepartment illegally paid, and which illegal payments were diseovered ly the Auditor General. It is fortunate for the people of canala, in more ways than one, that they have an Aulitor ieneral. Now, these ! 0 men. I believe all otficers, drew sums of money from $s 3 u$, to $50-2$ ach illegally, and the Militia Department paid them. I hope that, muler the management of the present Minister, a ditferent state of atfiairs will be brought aloont. Let me read the reply sent to the Anditor deneral, hy Mr. Wanet, the beputy Minister. to show what he salys with regard to these oner-payments:

" Dept. "e. Militia and Dfferce.  - Otralia, ? th September, 1891.

"Sir.-Adrerting to your letter of 15th June last, ealling ittention to wer-payments and other irreqularities in the anmal drill rouchers for six monthe ended 31 st December, 1s91, I have the homour to inform you that the respective cases have been duly investigated, and that all the officers implicated in sueh irregularities have now been called upron to refund, by deposit receipt to the credit of the Receiver feneral. the amounts which they have been improperly pail. The Minister of Militia and Defence has likewise ordered that stoppages of pay. (1) the amounts overcharged, be male in all cases of officers serving in present or future camps or at annamilith or on other service, where it is shown that the refund has not taken alace.
Now. that is a departmental document. That ought to have sime weight with this Honse in forcing them to the conchasion that I was justified in helieving the statements which were declared by this legal firm in Torento to have been swom to hefore certain magistrates in the city of Toronto. I tho wot think, therefore, that I require to make any apology for having discussed that ghestion as 1 ibid. I think we are here, as I said hefore to discuss the estinates and discover any frauds that may have heen committed upon the foovermment of this conntry, and I was simply discharging my duty, and am not prepared to saty that I 'lid any wrong in discussing this inatter. The hom member for East Toronto hat the hardibood-and it is not the tirst time he has macte remarks about me which were not justifiable not only in this House hut in the Public Accounts (committee last year-... he had the hardihom to say that he helieved I had receiverl these atfilavits last session. Why did he believe that? I tell the hom. gentleman that I nerer sal w these athilavits until they were sent to me this session.
Mr. COATsWORTH. They were all over the House lant Nession.
Mr. SOMERVILLE. The hom. gentleman says they were circulated here last year. Let me call his attention to this fact, that the whole of the attidavits or declarations, whatever you like to call them, which were first presented by me to the Honse were sworn to, one on the IJth January, 18912 , another on the 5 th January, 1892, another on the 8th January, 1892, another on the 30th October, 1891, another on the 8th December, 1891, another on the esth December, 1891.
Mr. COATSWORTH. They were just resworn to make you fresh.
Mr. somerville. Now, I think that the hon. gentleman ought to do me justice and apologize for making this statement, because he had every opportunity to verify it and see what dates were on these declarations, and he stamls up before this

Honse and aceuses me of having documents in my possession last session which never han existence in the comintry at all then, but are all of recent date. Anul I may say further that I had no intention whaterer of reading the other declarations which I did real, and would not have read them had it not leen for the statement male by the member for West Tomonto. He has himself to blane for my hringing up those other declarations, which may possiliby have heen in the possession of the hon. member for East Toronto last session, but which I never satw matil they were sent to me. The hom. member for West Toronto declared that this man Slater was a drunken old soldier, and that he was omly a drmaken loafer. Now, the loast of Britoms has always heen that equal justice amd fair-play should he meted out to rich and peor alike: ami, Mr. Speaker, the sense I have of British justice and fair-play: compelled me to rise and give to this Homse this man slater's statement of the case. I had no intention of presenting that statement at all, because it was first in the list of athilavits: and I turned them over and went on to thase of recent date which lowe strictly and solely upon the expentiture of public money: But since this man slater was charged with this oftence. knowing that he wats an old British soldier. Knowing that he han fought in the British army in lutia, kuowing that he ought to be respected instead of having his character hlackened in such terms as those used ly the hon. member for West Tormto, I dinl him the justice of reading his statement. Furthermore, I have information from members of this Honse and residents of Toronto, who declare that lames slater is a very respectable man, and, that being the case, could you, Mr. Speaker, or any other member of this Honse, expect me to sit silent when I had this man's own defence in my prissession and not present it to, the Honse? I was impelled to do this in justice to that man. I will not now detain the Honse with a recital of his grierances. I have a record of the Toronto police court, setting forth his grievances and showing that he thinks he has been very wrongfully and vers harshly treated in this matter. He silys so in his own athilarit, and it is true that he used very strong languave in that attidacit. I had not read it through before I read it to the Honse, and, had I known that some words were contained in that atfidacit at the time, I do not think I would have real that atfiliavit here, but I think that this man Slater was harshly treated and that I could not be haned for trying to chan pion his canse here, that is. presenting his case to this Honse from his point of view. I do not think there is anything mumanly for it man to stand up in this Honse and declare that he finds he has a reason to regret having made use of statements which he ought not to have marle. I say that, if I had known that these words, where he states that he had been convicted on false and perjured evidence were in that affilavit, I would not have read it. I think I did wrong in reading that statement, and I as freely and cheerfully retract that as I can pos. silhy do in this House. I had no desire, as I said before, to injure any man, any member of this House or any one outsile in this matter. I was seeking to do my duty, and I think I was doing my daty in endearouring to show that the public fuinds had not heen properly expended. I helieve

I had reason to do that and that was the course I took, aud that is all I have to say in regard to it.
Sir JOHS THOMPson. I have just a word or two to say, not to continte the discussion in the manner in which it has proceeded se, far, but to call the attention of the hon. gentleman to a feature of the diecussion the other night of which I think he has lost sight. The hom. gentleman has explaned the circumstances as to how he came to real these papers to the Honse in committee. He was pursuing, he thinks, his duty in making enquiries into certain irregularities in the pullic expenditure, and he has said that, if he had known that the atfilavit which he real contained the statements " perjured evilence "aml " false accusations," he would mot have read that ietfindavit. The House, however, has further to consider that the hon. gentlenam, in point of fact, made, although not upon his own responsibility, two distinct charges against the hom. member for West Toronto (Mr. Denisom). In the atfidavits which he read to the Honse the other day there were two very dis. tinct charges made. irrespective of the words which he wishes the House to consider withirawn. In the first place the acensation made against the hom. member fer West Toronto was that he hand falsely certitied to a paty-sheet for the purpense of flatwing the money irregulaty from the treasury, and that he did that as an officer of the militia. The secoml charge was that the hom. member for West Toronto procured the conviction of this man improperly for the purpose of suppressing a charge against himself. I submit to the giond sense of that hon. member himself, as well as to the opinion of the House, whether it is right that charges of that kind shombl be made in this House and, after the explanations which have beem made by the accused member, shomh not be withdrawn. I think the least we should expect from the hom. member for Sorth Brant (Mr. Somerville) is that, in addition to, what he has said as to these two words in the atfilavit, those two explicit charges should be withdrawn, after the statement which hats been made by the hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Denisom) and the proofs he has produced. If the hom. member does not take that conarse in regard to those charges or does not propose to sulstantiate them, I shall feel it my luty to place before the House a resolution on the sulject.

Mr. LAURIER. I am sure the Honse will the convinced from what fell from the lips of my hom. friend (Mr. Somerville) that he has every intention of doing what is fair as between himself and the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Denison). Perhaps I aim to some extent responsille in this matter myself. In the month of January last I received a letter from this man slater stating that he had been very badly used by the member for Toronto, who, I believe, had been his colonel, that he hat been prosecuted and convicted on false testimony, and further that false certificates had been given in the regiment, and he wanted to place these matters in my hands in order to oltain justice. I answered at once to Mr. Slater that I would be very slow to believe anything wrong on the part of the hon. member for W'est Toronto (Mr. Denison). I have not had very much acquaintance with the hom. gentleman, I have only kuown him as a colleague in this House, but I would not believe that he had misappropriated public moneys or anything of that kiml. At the same time, the hom gentlemanis human, he deals with soldiers, and as this man complained that he was bally treaten, without believing that it was true, without knowing whether it was true or not, I stated in my answer to him that I would le slow to helieve anything against the member for Toronto, hut I said Parliament was opened to him as to any one else, and, if he had a real complaint to make, I would take charge of it. The matter remainel in that shape until I revereal a letter from my friend Mr. Dewart, a young lawyer of Toronto, and with it I received a batch of papers which I placed in the hands of my limn. friend from Brant (Nr. Somerville). I never knew what wats in then untii 1 heard them real in this Homse. The hom. member for Toronto was altogether wrong in chinking that the hom. member for Brant had these papers in hie pmsession last sessim.

Mr. COATSWORTH. The man saw me shortly after my election and slowed me papers, list year, similar to those which were read this session, and I understood that a similar hateh of papers was sent to all the members of the Honse. The member for Lemonx (Mr. Wismen) tells me Mr. Trow had then last year. I certainly understom that every member on both sintes of the Homse was in possession of them list year. I feel sure they have heen simply reswom wime them fresh.
Mr. LAURIFR. Ay hom. friend says that he read these attidavits hastily. He explained the other day, and he explains again to-lay, that he hall no intention of comreying the impression to the Honse that the hom. member for Toront, should le guilty of such a low offence as to apporpriate pulific moneys. He stated that the other day, and he reiterates, his statement to-day. All I umberstond himi to mean the other day was that there had been irregularities in the Militia Department, and also in the regiment in which the hon. gentleman belongs. Irregularities may happen everywhere, bat surely that does not at all imply that the hon. member for Toronto is guilty of an offence. My hom. friend does not at all sisy that he intembed to charge anything of the kind against the member for Toronto. Sow, in face of the repurliation which he has made of all intention of saying anything against the honour of the member for Tormento, it seems to me that his explanation has gone as far as the Honse is entitled to exact. I hope that after such a frimk explanation on the part of my hom. friem, the matter will he allowed to rest where it is.

Mr. LIsTER. I have lowked weer the Inawaid and I fail to find any such charge as the Minister of Justice mentions.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. In the deelaration.
Mr. LISTER. There are mo charges made in the Hansaiol by the hon. member for Brant against the member for West Toronto.
sir JOHN THOMPSON. That is the worst way in which to make charges in the Honse.

Mr. COCKBURN. I regret exceedingly that the hon. member for North Brant (Mr. Somerville) has not considered it his duty, after the explanations that have been made, to offer an unqualified apology to this House and to my brother member for West Toronto (Mr. Denison) for the language which he used and the charges which he made. I am emboldened to think that he will yet do so, from the language that was used in this Honse alout eight and forty hours ago hy the hon. member who has the honour of learling Her Majesty's loyal Opposition. He then toll us:
"There is an unwritten law of Parliament which exvects every member of this House to act as a gentleman; and the conmon sense of the country will expect that if any inember should be guilty of making such a foul charge against another without having strong reasoms for making it, and good evidence to support it, he will not be fit to associate with gentlemen, and he ought to be expelled from the Honse.
These are the work, and they are memorable words, of the lader of the (Opposition, and they do crealit to his heart and credit to those gentlemanly instincts with which he has always combucted the Opposition in this House:. I trust that his follower from North Brant, however hamble he may be, however impervions he may be to such influences-

Some hon. MEVBERS. Oriter.

Mr. (OCKBLRN. I am in order: Nir. I say 1 trust that this gentleman will try, ats far as in him lies, to imhibe some of that spirit which hats heen inculated here only eight and forty hours ago by the hom. gentleman whom he now professes to obey as his leater. Sir, since the debate opened the other evening, I have hat ath opportmity of paying at rumning visit to Toronte, and I can assure you that the chareses made lis the hom. member for North Brant are there regardeal with both ridicule and ahborence. There is no family in Toronto, no family in the whole of Ontario, that stands higher in public esteem than the family of the Denisons. For seventy years they have stood in the front as the defemlers of their comutry, and in every clime, in ('amada, in Britain, in India, everywhere they have heen realy to sheal theib hood and to give their means for the defence of the comatry. They are sprong from a deod, somod stock, they are sprung from the old $\mathbb{E}$. E. Loyalists, and they have never done anything, directly or iminectly, to my knowlealge, of to the knowledge of any one, excepit the hom. member for North Brant, which would hefoul the escutcheon which they have horne so bravely hefore them. Nis, he has tried to explain to us the irregulatity which he alleges to have occarrel with reference to the pay-list. I hold in my hamd the pay-list itself which explains the matter most clearly. I find there the ofticers mentioned as having received pay. with their signatures attached. Hereare the names of the ofticers:
$\because$ Fred. C. Denisom. Captainand Bt. Lt.-Coi.
"/ F. A. Fleming, Lieutenant.
© F. 13. Browning, 2nd licutenant.
"Orlando Dunn, Captain und Bt. Major.

- Win. Hamilton Merritt, Lieutenant.
" Casimir Dixon, Ind Lieutenant.
$\because$ I. I. M. Grasett, Surgeon.
"C. A. Denison, Captain and Adjutant.
"John Sloan, quartermaster."
These are the nine ofticers who are mentioned as having receiverl pay is forming part of the (iovernor fieneral's Boty (iuard. Sir, if hon. members are to be allowed with impunity to make such charges, such lase charges, as have been marle by the hon. member for North Brant, there will be a sensible lowering of the dignity of this House. We shall find that outside, by our own constituents, the value that we are inclined to place upon ourselves, will be that which will be placen on us by them. Sir, if the dignity of this Honse is to le lowered, if membersare to be allowed tofling broadcast unfoumed accusations of this kiml, the result will be that in a few short years we shall finl the tone of this House sensibly lowered. So far, since Confederation, we have striven to maintain it as a House in which gentlemen may fitly associate together. But if charges of this kind are to be bandied about, if an hon. gentleman who has served this country in the east, who has served it on the Nile, who has served it everywhere, and has always been ready, with every member of his family, to serve his country- if such a gentleman is to he treated in this way, what are we to expect will be the future of this comitry: What sacritices can we expect will he made for this country by ome militia men and officers: I trust, therefore, that this gentleman for No:th Brant will duly consider the statement marle by his hom. Learler, and will consider that if he desires to remain at worthy member of this Honse, to lee comsiblereal ly them as fit to associate with rentlemen, to be considered as a person who ought not tole expelled from this Honse, he will rise in his place and tender that ample apolong which one gentleman is supposed to be rearly to tember to another. as som as he has learned that the evitence on which he has malle his charge is totally mafomited, as the cvilence has heen on which he male this charre.

Mr. ('ANEJ. Althongh in motern diass the hon. member for Centre Tomonto (Mr. (ockliara) is a boy with the hoys, althongh he sometimes plays ericket out on the green in fromt of these angust editices, the instincts of the shoommaster survive in him still. It seems to he utterly impossible for him to let slipany opportmity of giving a lecture to someborly. An hon. member hehimi me suggests the wond "scolding." I do not know hut the word molding would be more proper moder present aircumstances. He hat jumperl into the middle of a debate with which he had nothing to do: he hats tried to jump upon an hon. member who has been attacked for looing what he thonght was his duty, and has lectured him, or, ats my hom. friend has siggesten, scolded him. I lo not know what some parts of his remarks had to do with the guestion, but there is one portion of then to which Immst refer. He referred to the family of which the hon. member for West Torongo (Dir. Denison) is a member, to their long existence in Toronto, to their origin, and to the distinction which they have always meriterl in that city. Now, Nir, I ilo mot think we need to be told these things. I think the family of the Denisons are sufficiently well known to the people of Ontario not to need a certiticate eren from the late head master of Upper Camala College. I think they are quite as able to stamal on their own reputation as on his certificate. As for the point at issue, leaving aside this chaff, I think the matter has been taken too serionsly by lonth sides of the House. Since I am as ohd a parliamentarian as any hom. member present, with two or three exceptions. I may be permittel to exprese the opinion that it is impossible to draw rules so strictly as to prohilit members from reading affidavits in the House and asking explanations thereon, simply because they may caist reflections on some member of the House. It woull be utterly destroying our liberties and privileges to draw the rules so strictly. It is altogether unfair and untrue to represent the member who reads the affidavits as having mate the charges himself. He says, for example: I have here an attidavit from a man who is represented to me as respectable and he swears so and so, leaving himself open to the charge of perjury if his statement is incorrect. The member states that he wishes the department in question, such, for instance, as the Militia lepartment, to enjuile into the matter, or he may suggest that the enguiry he made by the House or in some other manner. I do not think these present charges are exactly a proper subject for enguiry hy a parliamentary committee, bat I did not hear all the explanations of the hon. memher for Toronto (Mr. Denison). In my opinion, an anuiry should te made by a poper military court in order to settle the matter once and for ever. I fo not wish to be mulerstoon, as the hon. member knows, as attaching the slightest weight to the atfidetit of slater-I do not know the other men. The hom. memher is also aware that I made no attack against his persomal character, but after so much talk has heen indulged in, the hest way to settle the matter would he to have an rempury which would settle the matter leyom all louht, equecially as it has gone broadeast throughout the conntry. Now, after wasting so much time on the subject, we should acept the retraction made hy the hon. member for Xorth Brant (Mr. Nomer(ille).

An hom. MEMDER. No.
Mr. CASEY: Yes. Iam affaid the hom. member was not attembing to what the hom. member for North Bramt saill. We have already wasted sufticient time on this matter, and I hope this is the last we shall hear of it.

Mr. BOWELL. I do not intem to prolong the delate further than to say that the fullest investigation was male into these charges which have heen referred to in this debate. ind also in the debate which twok place the other liay. After the disctissiom in the House, on proceeding to my oftice yesterday morning I sent for the (ieneral and asked him if these charges were ever investigated. His reply only confirmed the statement made by me predecessor during the disenssion, that they had been fully investigated, that he had taken up the charges strictim, that he had gone fully into them, and there was not one word of truth in any of them. so far as they related either to Lient. (col. George lenison or to the hon. member for West Toronto in this House. I asked him if I was at liberty to make that statement in the House, as no doult the matter would be again referred to, and he said I was. I have made this statement in the hearing of hon. members of the House, in order that we may not again hear the desire expressed that a further investigation should be made. That has heen repeated over and over again. Had there been no investigation, I feel no hesitation in saying that I would have ordered an investigation to he held at once, in orler to relieve the chatracter, if such were necessary, of the hon. member for West Toronto, and brother, whose name has been referred to so often, of any imputation, as I could not helieve it possible that those gentlemen could le guilty of that with which they were charged in what purports to he attidarits. I regret to say that I cannot agree with the hon. memher who hat just spoken (Mr. Casey) or with the lealer of the Opposition, when he says that the hom. member for North Brant (Mr. Nomerville) had made that retraction which I think under the circumstances should have been made. He did, however, make one statement which any one who knows anything of the volunteer force or has had any connection with them, either past or present, is familiar with, the fact that irregularities may occur, arising principally from a want of knowledge of the regulations and orders which govern the force. The remarks which were made by the hon. member for North Bram (Mr. Somerville) in regard to the overdrawing of pay by a number of ofticers would leare the impression on the minds of those who heard him, and those who may real his remarks, that there had been an attempt to swindle, if I may use a common expression, lecause it "ats mothing nore or less if it were dome intentionally. It wats something new to me. but when I lowkel at the Auiitor dienerals Report - and 1 may as well emfess I had not real it before 1 ambld well molerstand how these inregularities ocemred. There are many cases in which a battalion when it turns ont for amnal drill is not complete - 1 have in my eye the lith Battalion of Belleville. In it are a number of young men who would no more think of taking the $$ 3.51$ improperly than the hon. gentleman would think of putting his hamd in his neighlamesperket. I find one acted as captain during the time the hattalion was at camp and had command: his rank in the volunteer force was only that of tirst lientenant, and under the regnlations he was only entitled to a first lientenamt's pay. but as he haid performed the duties of eaptain he no doult thonght it perfectly proper to claim captain's pay. I ann informed that in some cases the pay was drawn with the comsent of the deputy aljutant general of the particular district, under the impression that. having acted in a higher capacity, the officers were entitled to the pay of that rank of the prsition in which they acted. When the Auditor deneral examined the recordtake the case of the gentleman to whom I have referved who only hell the rank of tirst lientenime hat lrew the pay of captain-he drew the attention of the deparment, and on this gentleman being informed that he had received pay to which he was not entitled, he paid lack the amoment. That is the character of all these over-payments that have been made so far as I have been able to investigate them, which has been only during the past few months. 1 make this state. ment in justice to the young gentleman I referred to, and whomi I know very well in my own city, :and I believe the same is applicalle to most of the other wases. It is in this way that irregularities would very naturally oceur, from the fact that the men had not studied the orders and regulations governing the force. I sincerely regret that the hom. member for North Brant (Mr. Somerville), whom I have known for a great many years, had not thought proper, after the explanation which has leen made by the member for Toronto, in which the lealer of the Opposition must know, and the member for West Elgin must also have known, if he had heard it, he proved every statement which had reference to himself individually to be incorrect, and that he had the evidence of the pay-list before him, the original document which he obtained from the department to show that the aftidavits were not correct. io far as these documents are concerned they are, as

I pointer ont before, not atfilavits at all. There the company or the regiment as the case might be ; are some of them not signed and there is no imot attached tosome of the others; hat apart from that altogether, they make serions charges against the honour of the hom. member for West Toronto (Mr. Denison) amd for that reason after the evidence which has heen placed hefore the hon. member for Brant ( Mr . Nomerville), in justice to the member for West Tomonto (Mr. Wenison). and in justice to the Honse, the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nomer. ville) should have mande an unreserved witholawal of the charges, amd I hope he will see his way tolo so yet. One thing struck me in comnertion with this matter, and it is rather simgular. It is that the member for Brant (Mr. Nomerville) said orer and wer again that he received these docmmentsatfirlavits as le called them-- from a reputable law tirm. The lealer of the Opposition says that he hamber them to the member for North Brant, and that he is the dentleman who received them. I leave that little contradiction to be settled hetween the two rentlemen.

Mr. LAURIER. There is nothing to explain in that. Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Bowrifl. It wats a little inregularits.
Mr. LAURISR. It is not an irregularity. I have explained to the Honse in what mamer these papers came here: they simply passed through my hamds and I never looked at them.

Mr. MLLOCK. Not having been present at the flebate of last litiday evening, and not having read the dehate except such as appeared in the public press. I can only perhips imperfectly ahd to what hats alrealy been said. I was struck with something that appeared in the public press with regard to this matter. I saw it stated as a report of the debate in this House, that sergeant slater was a person of loose character, I forget the expression userl.

An hom. MEMBFRR. A rlanken loafer.
Mr. MULOCK. Ves, a drunken loafer l helieve. For some years sergeant slater reportenl his grievance to me. He callen upon me some years ago and marated how he had heen anvicted for refusing to retum stores, and I must say that I felt then that he hal been hardly used in that transaction. My impression from seeing him was that he was a man of honesty of purpose, not desiring to do any one wrong, but of an excitable disposition and of very fixed views. For example, I can remember one of the charges that he thought was a very heinoms one, and which, as at first explained it to me, seemed a very serious one. It was this: He told me that he was engaged to discharge some cluties and that there was a certain regulation paty attached to these duties that he was entitled to, hut that this pay had leen withheh from him. He made himself helieve that the withholding of that money had resulten most seriously in regard to his family, and I think he said that his wife hat almost died from want, by reason of his not receiring the money which he thought it was his right to obtain. Not being familiar myself with the militia law, or the practice which of course at times seems to supersede the law, I male enguiry of some militia officers, one of whom I think was my hon. friend from Frontenac (Mr. Kirkpatrick), and he explained to me that the statutory allowance for such services went to the officer of

that it was for the officer to get the services performen, making such terms as he chose, and that the person who mate the contract with a superion ofticer was only entitlen to such pay as was the result of the agrement : the statutory piay being a fuml placed at the disposal of the superior officer. That may be the law, and no donht it is. hut a person hired to dos these services might form a very inatcurate opinion as to his rights. This man slater hats no dombt drawn that conclusion. He hats suffered very consilerahly hy reason of his imprisom. ment, amil domestic affiction, whicl: he has in someWay combected with the treatment he has received. The conserguence has been. no iombt, that he has heen ower-excited, hut he certainly does impress one who has not han the opportumity of seeing him persmally with the sincerity of his cause. He hats called on me at ond times during the latst two or three years, aml in the few times that I have seen him, his appearance in no way indicated that he Was of at drunken or dissipated disposition. On the contary I have never seen a person in the service more tioly in his dress, and altogether apparently more respectahle than he. I was amazed. therefore. to time that he was describerl as heing so dissipated a chamater. If I had not had the opportmity of seeving him personally and weighing his expressiom. $\bar{I}$ Wonh have been disposed to attach a great deal of inportance to any communications that he shomble have sent me. but having the alvantage of secing him, I must sily that I feel somewhat inclined. while not guestioning his veracity or desire to tell the truth -to puestion the acouraty of his general statement. I donot know that I cinn say anything further in regarel to this matter, except so far as il have been able to discover from what my hom. friemd the Minister of Militia hats said, all these allegations have not been investigated. If 1 minderstand rightly, the atfidarits contain certain charges, anrl the Minister of Militia mentioned that the Major-(ieneral commanding has assured him that he has investigated these charges aml that they ane wholly inaccurate as regard anything chargeable against my hon. friend the member for West Toronto (Alr. Denison) or any of his family. so far as I am concerned I can well believe that without any investigation, and if any word from me were necessary as a vindicationoff the member for Wist Toronto (Mr. Denison) it certainly would be forthooming. My hom. friend the Minister almits that these documents contain other charges than those affecting the gentleman to whom I have referred.

Mr. BOWELLL. They contain a lot of charges.
Mr. MULOCK. Did Major (ienemal Herbert. saty that he had investigated these charges in all their ramifications no matter to whom they referred, and lid he report that they were absolutely without foundation as regards any person:

Mr. BOWELLL. I did not saty that.
Mr: MULOCK. Then certain charges have mot heen investigatel?

Mr. BOWELL. We are not discussing that question at all. We are not liscassing the general charges, but we are discussing the imputations cast upon a member of this House. There will be no objection in the world to give the hon. gentleman the result of the investigation. I merely refer to the fieneral's declaration that after investigating the allegations of these atfilarits, he finds that there was nothing either directly or indirectly that combld reflect on the reputation of either of the two colonels referred to.

Mr. MCLOCK. I mulerstonl that these two ilocments were read learingupon theestimates, amd of "ourse some allegations in these documents had nio) reference to my hon. friend from West Toronto or to any of his friends. Therefore, to some extent at all events they allude to charges not yet disposed of. I understood my hon. friend from North Brant to withdraw any emborsement which he might be supposed to have given to any charges in these documents as against my hon. friend from West Torouto, and, therefore, I was at a loss to milerstand wherein he had not made that amprese. which the hom. Minister of Instice seems to think necessary. Therefore, I would like to know from the hom. Minister of lustice what more he thinks ought to be dome ly the hom. member for North Brant in order to meet the reapurements of the situation.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I thought that was well understow. I thought I dechared that the hom. member for North Brant in my opinion seemed called nom to withdraw the statements, made by him on the authority of these attidavits, in so far ats they atfiected the honour of the hon. member for West Troonto, and to accept the statement which the hom. member for West Toronto had mate in disproof of them. Bat if that form of words did mot contain that retraction, he should use the wiords of the hom. leader of the Opposition, which he was supposed to have usen, but which he hat not used at all.

Mr. MCLOCK. I do not know what took place before I came into the Chaminer, but I thought that the hom. member for North Brant had withdrawn the charges.

Nir IOHN THOMPRON. He side he regretted hating used two words which imputed perjury.

Mr. MULOCK. What other charges are comtained in the documents:
sir JOHN THOMPsON. Certifying falsely to papers for the purpose of getting money, and maliciomsly prosecuting a man in order to sereen himself from it charge.

Mr. MULOCK. There is something detinite now for the hom. member for North Brant to go upon. I must say, with regard to the prosecution in question, that it was in my judgment a mistake. It was an umecessary prosecution, I think. While it may have been considered necessary for purposes of discipline, it seems to me harsh treatment of a goow, houest citizen and soldier. Now, I would say in conclusion, that the hon. member for North Brant was only doing his duty, if he helieved in the truth of these statements, in bringing them to the attention of the House. Perhaps, if it occurred to him he might have adopted some other course, or made fuller enquiry, if he had known, as perhaps those lelonging to Toronto would have known, that Sergt. Slater may not have been as carefnl in the use of language as one ought to be. But, under the circumstances in which he received the documents, coming to him duly aceredited as they did, and in which he, somewhat inadvertently, without great consideration and premeditation, brought them to the attention of the House, it appears to me that he has done all that he ought to be called upon to, do in stating as far as he can wherein these are in error. If he has not coverel the points mentioned by the hom. Minister of Justice in words, I am sure that he will be ready to do so if he feels called upon. But I suppose he is not expected to plead, as in a court of law, with minute detail. I presume it is sutficient for him to say that no wrong was inteaderl. Members of Parliament are often called upon to air grievances: and if every time they do air a grievance which afterwards turns out to be minomded, they are to be bronght lefore the Honse, intimidateri, and threatened with resolntions, what is to become of the rights of the people: The Minister of Justice threatens to do something terrible. He is going to bring a resolution before the Honse. Now, that is a species of intimidation which isunworthy of the hon gentleman. He langhs. Probahly it may be fun to him. because he hat a majority that will dopretty much what he biacs and what he wants them to do. At the same time it is not the way, I submit, to combluct parliamentary proceedings. Members of the Honse ilo not hecome personal gharamons of the correctness of the information which they receive. If it comes to them duly accereditel, endorsed as it were hy the oath of the peopple who send it, and if they have no reason to suppose that it is incorrect, 1 would like to know what their duty is. If there is any class of members in the House whose duty it is to bring grievances to the attention of Parliament, it is the members of the Opposition : and when my hom. friend from North Brant receivel those documents from the hands of my hon. friend the leader of the Opposition, accompanied as they were by a communication from a reputable law tirm of the eity of Toronts, and they impressed upon his mind the existence of a wrong. he was not to hame if he thought his proper course was to do what he did; and now that the matter has been brought to his attention, and a refutation has heen matie. which 1 am sure we all accept, the remarks that have fallen from the hom. member from Siorth Brant ought, I think, to satisfy cevery reasomable person.

Mr. DAVIN. I think, Mr. Speaker, that it is greatly to he regretted that my hon. friend from North York (Mr. Mulock) has spoken in the tone he has on this sulbject. The guestion before the House is not the character of Mr. Slater, nor even the character of my hon. friend from North Brant (Mr. Somerville). The question before the House at this moment is the honour and dignity of this House. It was a serious thing, although the hon. member for North York does not seem to think so, for an hon. member of this House to read-I heard them myself-attidavits grossly lilelling a member of this House, without one word of comment to show that he did not entirely endorse them. But it is a much more serious thing, after the hon. member for West Toronto has shown to a demonstration that there was not a tittle of ground for those gross likels, for the hon. member for North Brant to rise in his place and say that he regretted using one or two words, insteal of frankly and fully withdrawing the libels that were contained in those affidavits. I regret very much that my hon. friend from North York and my hon. friend from West Elgin spoke in the mamer they did. I think, sir, it shows that there is in the House a want of appreciation of what is due to the dignity of this assembly, and I must say this : that no man can have occupied a seat in this Honse for three or four sessions as 1 have done without having seen that there is in some hom. members a desire to libel othe! members of this Honse-a desire to make charges affecting the character of members of this House and tolet them gol lroadeast throughout the country, and in that way to lower the dignity of the House and injure its efficiency. I repeat that the question is one affecting the homourand dignity of the Honse. It is a serious one, and if the hom. member for Sorth brant does not fully withdraw the linellons statements marle in those atfidavits, the House ought not to be satistien.

Mr. somerlille. I would just say, with regarit to the hom member for Assinilomia (Mr. Davin) that when I want to adel to my dignity as a legis. lator. 1 will not wo this scheme.

Some hom MEMBERS. Grater.

Mr. somisRTILIf. I think I am perfectly in orter.

Mr. spratker. If the hom. gentleman wishes to a ild to his retaction he can do so. hat he camme (s) further.

Mr. CHARLTON mover the aljomment of the deliate.
Mr. SoMERTILEE. I would just say the hom. member for (entre Toronto that when I want to learn dignity and lessons as a gentleman I will of to another master than to him, because I think his manner is sin pompons, it would not at all be an acquisition. Now, with regarel to this matter. I distinctly declared, all throngh the delate the other night, when these declarations or atfirmations were leing read, that I repudiated any responsibility for them.

An hom. MEMBER. Why did you real them?
An hom. MEMBER. You said you believed they were true.

Mr. sompritlile. I real them as coming from parties who, I helieverl, ought to be credited, but I have no desire to prolong this delate at all, as you may well suppose, Mr. Speaker. I would just say this: that, so far as I am concerned, I understood that I had, as far as the hon. member for West Toronto is concerned, withdrawn any charges with regard to his character. I had no intention, as I said before, of imputing anything against the character of the hong gentleman. aml I believe it is my duty to say that, as far as he is personally concerned. I am perfectly satisfied with the explamation he has made. I do not understand exactly what the hon. Minister of Justice meant with regarl to my not having withdrawn what I ought to have withdrawn, hecause I thought, when I made my former statement, that I had withdrawn these charges, so far as the hon. member for West Toronts is personally concerned. I wish to say here that I am not driven to this explanation by any of the threats made against me in this matter: I make this explamation ; if it does not satisfy the House I camot go any further.

[^56]Main motion agreed to, and House again resolved itself into Committee of supply.

Militia Clothing and Overeoats.

Mr. CASEY. I see that the deneral states in his report :
"The clothing is fairly good in quality, but the system of isue is open to great objections. It is complicated. expensive and suits nubody. I am of opinion economy and efficiency would be hetter served. were an ammail allowance in money granted the city corps to euable them to supply their own elothing, the responsibility of st rict inspection of such clothing being placed on the inspectins officers."
I would ask for some information as to what is the present system of issue. I notice that the rieneral speaks of the clothing as being omly fairly goonl. (onsidering what has been said ahout the adramtage of hating all the clothing mante in (anala. and considering it is made hy a firm. the lealing member of which is a prominent member of this Parliament in another place, we obght to expeet something letter than failly gene?.
Mr. Bownel. I am not able to answer that question as satisfactorily as I shomblike. I have not heard any complaint about the equality of the clothing for some years. There was a perionl when great complaint was male, but at the last investigation in the Public Accounts Committee, it was shown that the cloth out of which the tmice amd overcoats are tole made is a great deal hetter than that which was importel from (ireat Britain. The suggestion that the city corps shomh be given an allowance with which to purchase their own cloth. ing is not a practical one. hecallse it would desiros: miformity, as there wond be any amount of diversity in colour and cloth. The system of issue is that which hats prevailed for years. The clothing when issued is for tive years, at the expiration of which it is renewed. Hon. gentlemen who have serven in camp must admit that five years is a pretty long time to ask a volunteer to wear his coat if used in camp every year. Of conurse city. corps, which for not attend camp, do not wear out their clothing to the same extent as those volmteers who drill in camp.

Mr. CAsEY. As the hom. gentleman knows, the men in camp have simply to lie on a blanket spread on the gromul, and in wet weather that often amounts to lying in water and being soaken through, on one side at last. It would be goom economy to take some means of making the tents more comfortable anl thas save the clothing. The hon. geatleman recommems that the rural corps should have an issue of clothing every three years, and I think he is going near what ought to be. Certainly if the ruath corps have to go to camp as they din now, they will require new clothes every three years. In the case of city corps which do not go to cimp, of course the case is different.
Mr. MULOCK. Are these supplies ohtaned liy tender or how?

Mr. BOWELL. I understand that temders were asked for the supply of the cloth and the clothing and that they extend from the 1st of Jannary, 1891, for three years.
Mr. MULOCK. Who were the temlerers, and who has the contrat?

Mr. PowELL. The contract for the cloth for tunics was given to the Almonte Woollen Mill Company: that for the tunic serge was given to Doull & riibson of Halifax : for cloth for the trousers to the Almonte Woollen Mill Company and to H. Shorey $&$ Co. of Montreal, and also to Doull & (iibson of Halifax ; the contract for breeches was given to O'Brien it Co., of Montreal, and the contract for chevrons to the Almonte Woollen Mills. These parties furnished the cloth and got the articles made.

Mr. PRIOR. I would call the attention of the Minister to the fact that the artillery is worthy of haring an issue of clothing much oftener than the infantry. As he knows, the artillery have to drill with hig guns and have far more heary work to do than the infautry, and, if the infantry can get along with an issue of clothing every five years, the artillery ought to have an issue at least every three years. A year or two ago the Minister of Militia promised us that he would see that an issue of fatigue clothing was made for the artillery in which they might do their repository drill. As yet, we have not seen any of that fatigue uniform, and I do not know if any has been ordered, but I call the attention of the Minister of Militia to the fact that at present, as 1 know in my own brigade, the uniforms of the artillery are almost unfit to be seen in pullic, and that is not because they have not heen taken care of, but because so much work has heen done by the men wearing them. I hope the Minister will see that we have fatigue uniforms for repository luty, so that we may preserve the ordinary miforms for public use.
Sir ADOLPHE CARON. I think possibly my hon. frienl is soing beyond the promises I made. I stated, and I still beliere, that it would be econony to have fatigue uniforms issued to the artillery, from the fact that to my mind there would be an economy if, apart from the ordinary tunic, that branch of the force had a cheap fatigue uniform served ont to them. I believe I stated to the hon. gentleman on more than one occasion that 1 was in the hands of Parliament, and that, if Parliament would extend the vote so as to enable me to get that fatigue uniform, I would be happy to serve it out to the artillery. I may say to my hon. friend who now represents the department that I think he will tinl, on looking into the different branches of that department, that as a question of economy outside of any other consideration it would pay the department to issue these fatigue uniforms instead of having the men go through their heary gun drill in the ordinary uniforms.

Mr. ALLAN. I understand the hoal. gentleman to say that these uniforms are secured ly contract. I should like to know what mode is adopted to get these contracts awarded. Are firms throughout the country asked to tender, or in what way are the contracts let?

Sir ADOLPHE CARON. As the contracts were given out when I was administering that department, I may state that, upon the full reports of all the otticers of the department, it was considered that it was better in the public interest to give the contracts to firms who, for the purpose of carrying out fully, as they have done, the contracts confided to them by the Government, had gone to large expense to obtain machinery for the purpose. When I was first called upon to take charge of the department, tenders for clothing were called for every year. I can safely say that, by consulting the official records and the blue-books. when that system oltained in Camada, the department lost severely from the fact that men tendered who had no means to carry out their contracts and tendered at lower prices than they could fultil their contracts for, and they failen in that, and the force had not only to be equipped but uniformed, so that at a moment it lecame necessary fortherlepartment atany enst toget the uniforms which the contractors han failed to provide and which we had to furnish to the force. I express this opinion from my experience of 12 years presiding over that department. 1 believe that it is in the interest of the public to award these contracts to tirms who are prepared to invest a large ammont of capital in this expensive machinery which hal to be imported from Englam. The same thing has followed in other countries where this system hias ontained.
Mt. MUlock. Oh, oh.
Sir ADOLPHE CARON. I do not know what the hon. gentlenan is langhing at. In England the namufacturers of uniforms in Pimlico make a specialty of manufacturing not only for the Eaglish hut for continental armies, just as the contractors are making a specialty in Canada under the new regime. But I wish ti, point out that the change was made upon the report of our store inspectors and of the ofticers in charge of that branch. I call say that in my experience of that department, the officers who adrised the Government to adopt that system, are officers in whom we can place implicit confidence, from their great experience and from the manner in which they have conducter the branches to which they lelong. I would still advise that the contracts for five years should be given, subject, of course, to the right of a new Pariament to sanction them.

Mr. Allean. I an afraid the Minister has misunderstoorl my question. I asked what system was adopted in the purchase of this clothing: The hon. gentleman has given an explanation which I think is rather hazy. He says that the clothing is supplied by firms who had the contract hitherto. What I wish to know is, how are the prices arrived at with the firms who supply this clothing, are the people generally, the large concerns throughout the country, allowed to tender? I think this matter ought to le cleared up. I recollect that last year explanations were given on this very subject which were unsatisfactory. I would like to know if contracts are made by tender, when they are let, how they are let, and how the prices are fixed?

Mr. BowELL. I think it is not in probable that the member for Fssex (Mr. Allan) did not understand the explanation given by the late Minister. The present contracts extend from the first of January, 1891, to the first of January, 1894.
Mr. ALLAN. Were they let by tender?
Mr. BOWELL. If my hon. friend will let me proceed, he will, perhaps, be able to understand me. I am speaking now particularly of the clothing. These tenders were advertised for in the newspapers, and the prices given for the clothing were the lowest at that time. After the firms who now have the tenders had heen supplying clothing under contract prices, they were renewed without further tenders, ly the late Minister for the tunity of making fortunes as well as other gentlereason which has been repeatedly given to the committee. It was thought iretter to continue the contract in the hands of those who had been making a specialty in the manufacture of that kind of clothing. That is a point, I know, that is subject to animarlversion by those who think that in every cuse tenders should he alvertised for. so as to give every one an opportunity to tenter. As 1 understand it, all the larger firms were miginally asked to send in temders. In some cases the lowest tember is not always the best. Those who were in the Public Accounts Committee when this matter was investigated a year or two ago, will rememher that contracts were given to parties in this city who tembered at a lower price than those who had previously got the contatct, and had given satisfaction. But acting upon the principle of accepting the lowest tenderer, the contracts were awarded to lowest tenderers, but they failed to supply as good a material as their predecessors. For this reason the late Minister recommemed to his colleagues the adrisability of renewing the temiers for three years, as he indicated. For all the other supplies and necessaries, and they are a rery large quantity in allition to clothing, the following alvertisement was published in the newspapers of the 10th August, 1891 :
"Sealed tenders. narked on the left hand corner of the envelope Tenders for Militia Store Supplies and Necessaries,' addressed to the Fon. the Ninister of Militia and Defence, will be received up to noon of Monday, the 30th of November, 1891.
"Printed forms of tender, containing full particulars. may be ordered from the department at Ottawa, and at the following militia stores, where also sealed patterns of all articles may be seen, viz.:-The offices of the Superintendent of stores at London, Toronto, Kingston, Montreal. Quebec, Halifax, N. S., and St. John, N. B.
"Every article to be sapplied (as well as the meterial therein) must be of Canadian manufacture.
"No tender will be received unless made on a printed form furnished by the department, nor will a tender be considered if the printed form is altered in any manner whatever.
"Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted Canadian bank cheque for an amount equal to ten per cent of the total value of the articles tendered for. which will be forfeited if the party making the tender declines to sign a contract when called upon to do so. If the tender is not accepted the cheque will be returned.
"The department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

A. BENOIT, Capt., Serpetery.'

I do not know a better morle of asking for tenders than this to which I refer. The remarks of my hon. frienl, the present Postmaster General, only referred to the clothing, and he gave reasons for the course that was pursuen.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. We are to miderstand that, practically, the supply of clothing for the volunteers of this country is in the hands of monopolists. As was explained last year by the then Minister of Militia, they hat two or three parties to whom they sent circulars and asked them to tender for the clothing, and all the rest of the mannfacturers of this country were deprivel of the opportunity. He now says that the reason for loing 80 was that these manufacturers have expended a large amount of money in getting the necessary machinery. Well, how does he know that there are not other people in this country who, being aware that large sums of money have been made in the manufacture of militia clothing, are themselves prepared to invest money in similar machinery in order that they may have an oppor-

men have marle them in the mannfacture of clothing for the militia! Fvery one knows that large sums of money were male by the sanford Mannfacturing Company in Hamilton. It is a well known fact that the Mr. Sanford who is the head of that firm, made immense sums of money in furnishing clothing to the militia of this comitry. We rammot get at the bottom of these temlers, it appears, becanse I am inclinel to believe that the manufacturing is still carried on ly the Sianford Company in Hamilton, and that it is merely a change of names, so far as the tenders are concerneal. The Almonte Woollen Company get contracts for the clothing, and they make arangements with the Sanforl Company in Hamilton, as I understand, to manufacture the clothing. Now, I do not think this system of doing business ought to be encomaged. We have in this country a system of rings growing up, which are estainlished for the purpose of getting high prices, not only from the people but from the fiovermment; these rings have succeaded in their object. and this is one instance in which they have succeeder. We have the late Minister of Vilitia standing up here and telling us that there are only one or two tims in this country that are capable of manufacturing this clothing. Well, if that is so, why is it that the diovermment refase to ask for competition from abroad: Why did they not ask for tenders from England: Becanse I was present at the examination before the Public Accounts Committee when the clothing business was gone into, and, if my memory is correct, we hat evilence adhluced that the clothing manufactured in the ohd country was in many respects superior.

Some hon. MEMBERS. No, no.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. We had officers from some of the Toronto regiments, the Qucen's Own, I think, who swore that they would not clothe their companies in the clothing provided by the Dominion covernment, and which was manufacturetkin Can' ada, so they put their hands in their own poekets and sent to England for clothing for their men. If this does not indicate that the officers of those regiments consider English clothing mnch superior to the Canalian article, I should like to know what it iid mean. We have evidence that it is high time that the Govermment should change their methol of contract; but it is in accordance with the whole system of government pursued by the occupants of the Treasury benches. The present Minister of Militia read a few moments ago an anvertisement, which called for other supplies for the Militia Department, and everything has to he manufactured in Canada. I venture to say that not a member of the Government will rise and state that the advertisement was not sent exclusively to Conservative newspapers, and that there was not the slightest opportunity to publish in Liberal journals this advertisement for the public. This is a sample of the whole methot of cloing business pursued ly the Government. They believe in supporting their supporters on every possible occasion, whether it is in the interests of the country or not. I do not think the system of letting contracts for clothing is one that should be followed any longer. The general manufacturers of the country should have an opportunity to tender for militia supplies, equally with a few favourites of the Government, who receive information that on a certain day tenders will be received for clothing Some tenders are accepted for overcoats, others for tunics, and others for pants, and it was shown during the investigation that these contracts were changed around, one firm receiving the contract for tunics one year, and another year the contract for overcoats. What is to hinder these contractors combining-in fact, they have combined-for the purpose of obtaining higher prices from the people for these clothing supplies? I am satisfied that so long as the present course is adopted by this Govermment injastice will be done to the people of the country, so far as this expenditure is concerned.

Mr. CASEX. So far as I can umlerstand from the present Minister of Militia and the ex-Minister, tenders were called for when the last contracts were let.

Mr. BOWELL. Not for the clothing. I said tenders were asked for when the contracts were tirst made in Canada, and that afterwards the contracts were renewel.
Mr. CASEI. How long has elapsed since the first contracts were let?

Sir ADOLPHE CARON. I could not state from memory. After the first contract had been advertised, upon the report of the officers of the department, the matter was submitted to Council, and an Orrler in Council was passed permitting the department to continue these contracts for another year, for which term they had been advertised, and to extend them for a period of three years. These are the contracts under which supplies are now served out to the force.

Mr. CANES. Then these are not the original contracts: I find that some of these contracts are now let to different parties unsler different names. When did this change occur:
Sir ADOLPHE CARON. During a long period of time we obtained the yearly tenders, but during the last three years the policy had been adopted of giving the contract for three years instead of yearly.

Mr. CASEX. Up to that time contracts were let for one year only ?

Sir ADOLPHE CARON. Yes.
Mr. CASFY. Not by tender.
Sir ADOLPHE CARON. Yes, up to last year. Last year it was also by tender, but the Order in Council was passed.

Mr. CASEY. Does the ex-Minister say that the contracts were let for one year only, and that tenders were called for each year?

Sir ADOLPHE CAPON. Yes.
Mr. CASEI. And not merely continued to the sime contractors:

Nir ADOLPHE CARON. No.

Mr. CASEY. Three years ago an Order in Council was passed authorizing the prolongation of the contracts for three years instead of one year. sir ADOLPHE CARON. Yes.
Mr. CASES. When tenclers are called for annually, it is very strange this difficulty did not crop up. The difficulty stated now is that there is only one set of people who can make proper clothing. For some time they asked for tenders every year, and changed the firms romm. It is a very absurd idea to give up buying militia clothing in the cheapest place, which is undoubtedly in the old country. Even if the tenders were restricted to Canadian manufacturers, the amount is ton large to be juggled with in this way. 500, (0) we we voted last year, of which Sis, Mov odd were spent. $$ 80,000$ are asked this year, and contracts for this large sum were quietly continued to the same contractors and new contracts male with them on Ist January last for three years, without taking the slightest trouble to find out whether any other firms could make the gools cheaper. Taking two cloth tunics I find the price is 85 and $$ 6$. The Minister said the contracts were let in Janmary.

Mr. BOWELL S6.0; for artillery, sis for infantry, and 55.58 for rifles.

Mr. CASES. I umlerstood the ex-Minister of Militia to say that the contract had been let at a reduced price, but the figures as given in the Auditor General's Report for last year, coincide with the figures for the present year under the new contracts. One would naturally think that the firms-I believe it is all one combine-which has had the contract for several years, should be able by this time. by systematizing their work, and in consideration of the protits they have already had, to do this a good deal cheaper under the spur of competition. Even 0 cents a tunic for $4 \overline{0}, 000$ tunics would be quite a large sum. I think we camot let this matter go without protest, and I hope that when we criticise these transactions in a friendly spinit-I have reason to helieve that we are not taiking to such deaf ears as formerly-that the Minister of Militia will see in future that it does not occur again, if he has the good fortume to remain in power.

Mr. McMULI.EN. I think that long before this we should have male use of prison labour in making clothing for our militia. We have a large number of prisoners in our penitentiaries and if the fiovernment had taken proper steps to tum prison labour in that direction, we conll have got military clothing made in the past at a very much lesser cost. I see at page 33 of the Auditor General's Report that there are 41 tunics entered as costing $\leqslant 1,373$, or $\$ 33$ each. What tunics were these:

Mr. BOWEL.L. The reputy informs me that there are no tmics bought for the men at that price, and that he can only account for it by it being a misprint. It may possible be 41 dozen, but it is quite evident to my mind it is a blunder.

Mr. MiNULLEN. Did the Govermment agree to take these tunics for 3 years, based on the price of cloth the time the contract was let? The Minister of Militia will understand that cloth is nearly as subject to a rise and fall in price as wheat is. What arrangement was made for the change in the price of cloth during the continunuce of this contract?
Mr. BOW ELLL. None. The contract is for three years and the prices given are for that whole time. I scarcely think that the rise and fall in the prices of cloth is so great as the hon. gentleman indicates. The cloth in these tunics is specially made for the purpose, and the only change that could take place in its value would be a rise or fall in the price of the wool out of which it is made. As in other contracts let for a number of years, the contractor has to consider when he is making his contract the rise and fall in the market and take the conserquences.

If the prices go down it is to his advantage, and if they go up he will lose. I may say now, that it is altogether a misapprehension on the part of the member for West Elgin (Mr. Casey) when he stated that "difficulties arose." No difficulties arose in reference to these contracts, other than those which presented themselves in the inferiority of the clothing which is supplied in compliance with our contract, and that was the cause of the great complaint that the Queens Own made, and very properly made. liefore the committee. It was not the clothing that was supplied by the present contractors with which they found fault, leceause they admitted that that was quite equal to the English clothing. I almit that the cloth could probalily have been obtained a little cheaper in England from the manufacturers who make for the world than in Canaula : but that is a question of policy, on which those who take the riews of hon. gentlemen opposite are puite ready to condemu the Government. For my part I prefer to see it nade in Canada, even though it costs a little more. With regard to the remarks of the hon. member for North Brant, who never speaks without attributing improper motives to those who conduct the affiairs of this country. I do not hesitate tosay that while occupying the prosition 1 do, other things being equal, he may take it for granted that I will always give the preference to a friend, provided it is not ilone at the expense of the cosuntry.
Mr. Memblles. I do not think that any one would objeet to the hon. Minister giving a Canadian manufacturer the preference; but what we object $t o$ is this: that his advertisement asking for tenders, is such as to comvey the impression that tenders would only be accepted from Canadian mamufacturers. By doing that, he places in their hamls-aml there are only two or three of themthe power to state what price the Govermment will hate to pay for the clothing. I remember being present at the investigation that took place with regard to the clothing, and I was glad to see that Canada was prolucing an article that could le creditably worn by our volimteers, as it appeared to be both very well made and of very gool material; but I think it is desiralle to give every one, both abroad and at home, an opportunity to tender; and when accepting the tenders you can if you wish give the Canalian manufacturer the preference. There was some oljection taken to the colour of the cloth, some saying that it did not stand the sun and weather as well as the English material. I would like to know if what is made recently is any more durable in this respect than what we had before?
Mr. BOWELL. My predecessor informs me that the information he oltained fron: the reports of those who have made inspections, is to the effect that the cloth is not only better than that formerly imported, but that the colours stand just as well. A short time ago I made some enquiry as to the colour. The cloth was supposed not to stand the weather as well as the English cloth; but the Patton mills at Sherbrooke have succeeded, not only in making a good cloth, but in dyeing it so that it is nearly if not quite equal to the English cloth in colour-my predecessor says quite equal.
Sir ADOLPHE CARON. My hon. friend will remember that during that investigation it was shown that the colour, as he very properly stated, was not equal to that of the English cloth, but it was also shown that some of the clothing which had been issued in that period was an inferior article, which we had had in store for a numher of years. But since that time the reports sent into the department while I was still at the head of it, indicated that the cloth and the colour were latterly equal to anything which we have imported from England.

Mr. MULOCK. Will the Minister of Militia state the prices at whicli the infantry greatcoats are supplied under the list contract, which was issued in Jamuary, 1891?
 lery, $$ 7.69$; mounted artillery, $$ 11.25$; infantry, 50. 3 : and rifles, 8.73.

Mr. MULOCK. The late Minister of Militia, if I heard him correctly, stated that the last contract was made at lower prices than the former one. He was mistaken so far ats greatcoats are concerned; and my hon. friend from West Elgin says that all the other prices are the same as beiore. Now, it is shown in evidence that the contract for greatcoats, which I think was let in 1888 for three years, was let at the same price at which the contract was let some years before, when the cost of material was somewhat higher. let, notwithstanding the flactuation in prices year after year, the (iovernment continue to give the same prices for these military supplies. My hon. friend the present Minister of Militia, read an advertisement which I at first thought included these greatcoats, and he spoke with great satisfaction of the method adopted for issuing contracts for military supplies; but I find that his observation had no reference to clothing whatever, but that the supply of clothing for the militia is now practically in the hands of a ring; ind the reason assigned is that this ring is able to do the work because it has the machinery. How long, then, are they to enjoy this monopoly? Year after year this ring has enjoyed this monopoly, and has arranged and settled the prices with the Department of Militia, and I have no doubt has been year after year making its contributions to the election funds. I have not the slightest doubt of their friend Mr. O'Brien, and I do not think that any one will pass the Alnonte Mills either. I understood that tunics were formerly made by the Sanford Company. Now, the contract is made with the Almonte Company, but I understand that the work is done by the Sanford Company in Hamilton as before, the Almonte Company supplying the cloth, so that it is just a change of front. It does not appear the same in the public accounts, but the difference is merely nominal, and the same old fraud is leing perpetrated on the country. No attempt has been made to get this work done at fair prices, and the same favourites still control it. Here we have in the Senate a leading supporter of the Administration, under the shelter of a corporate style, reaping enormous profits from the contract for supplying the militia with clothes. We have a prominent member of another firm that supplies the clothing in this House, voting the money, and this inoney which Parliament votes for the benefit of the militia is being unwisely and improvidently expended by the Administration. This is not the way to administer a public trust. The ex-Minister of Militia set at defiance every rule of propriety in the action he pursued with regard to the issuing of contracts. Year after year he relet them to his old favoured friends, without so much as letting the general public know about it, sending out a private circularletter, which, he says, the military men of his department endorsed. I would like to know how they could do anything else. He sent a circularletter to Mr. O'Brien, his political friend, asking what he would supply clothing for, and one to Doull & Co., of Halifax, and another to the Sauford Co. and the Rosamond Co. I believe, if the truth could be got at, that the supply of military clothing is as grose a fratud as there is in the service for the amount. According to the attitude now assumed ly the Government, there never can be a change. Because three or four favourites of the Government say they have machinery for turning out the work, no one else can have any chance and the result is that the same prices have been paid year after year for the last fifteen years. In no other business would we find such a state of affairs, and I do not wonder that the exMinister of Militia tries to withdraw from the discussion under shelter of a newspaper or other shelter, in order not to be obliged to commit himself any further. The militia of Canada ought to know that the moneys voted to them have been largely frittered away by means of these improvident contracts, so that part of the money which ought to be available for the improvement of the force is converted into other channels for the benetit of a few favoured persons. That is what is going on, and what I deplore to learn, is likely to continue under the new Minister. It is well for the country to know that.

Mr. BoWELL. Better wait until I say so.
Mr. MULOCK. The ex-Minister of Militia declared it was a sound policy, he endorsed it up to the hilt. If the present Minister of Militia repudiates it, then there is some hope, and if he will say he does not approve of that course, a great deal of the force of my observations will be lost. But if he allows the ex-Minister to commend this practice as being the best one that can be adopted, of course he is simply carrying on that practice and I do not see why we should have had a chonge in the head of the department at all. I thought when the Government brought about a change that they did it for the public good. I suppose that the old policy was shown to the satisfaction of the Government to need remedy and the Government, wishing to make a change, allowed a man more in touch with business to take charge of the department. I supposed the change was for public good, I hope so still; but if not, the militia of Canada will have a serious grievance against the Administration.

Mr. McMULLEN. Is the person who was inspector of clothing some years ago still inspector?

Mr. BOWELL. Yes.

Mr. McMULLEN. What is his salary?

Sir ADOLPHE CARON. So much per day. He is an inspector of the Mounted Police, and the Militia Department allow him so much per day.

Public Armouries and care of Arms. . . $$ 60,000$

Mr. O'BRIEN. I would like to know upon what principle the drill sheds in the various parts of the country are looked after? 1 find that it costs
$$ 3,000$ per year to take care of the drill shed at Ottawa. There are a number of caretakers there at $$ 1$ per day each. There are apparently six persons employed for looking after the building, besides the expense of wood and coal, and the cost of taking care of the ground, Howers and so forth. The drill shed in my county, at the headquarters of the battalion, costs only $$ 29$ per year, and I should like to understand how it is we have to pay such a large sum for looking after the Ottawa building. It may be all right, but it seems a very large sum, especially when we are not overloaded with money. It seems to me larger than the expenditure on any other drill shed, even in Montreal, and it appears to be strange that so many men and so much material should le reguired for a building of that kind.

Mr. CASEY. I notice that the pay for taking care of armouries seems to be very high in nearly all cases and remarkably high in some cases. As a rule, also, the furthet you go east the larger amount is paid for the care of public armouries although the number of volunteers is not so large as in the west. In No. 1 district, with headquarters at Lonion, and including all the western peninsula of Ontario, only $\$ 1,968$ is paid for the care of armouries. In the next district, Toronto, where there are a very large number of colanteers, \$3,097 is paid. When we come to Kingston, where there are not so many volmuteers, $\$ 4,285$ is paid. In Montreal, with a considerable number of volunteers in the city, 80,335 is paid, while the Quebec district caps the lot with a cost of $\mathbf{\$ 9 , 6 9 1}$ for the care of public armouries. I do not think it can be contended that there are as many public armouries in the district of Quelec as there are in Montreal, with its larger population and its more numerous city corps, and yet more than $\$ 3,000$ difference exists between the two districts, and the district of Quebec costs alout five times as much as the district of London, which I belicre includes as many volunteers. The fact that the late Minister of Militia represented a constituency adjoining the city of Quebec may have something to do with the case. Now, as to the individual prices paid for the care of armouries, I find a number of men engaged at $\$ 1$ a day all the year round. There is not work for a man every day of the year in attending to the arms of a battalion, yet I find that the great bulk of the caretakers of public armouries have have engaged at $\$ 1$ a day. Then $I$ do not understand why some are paid more than others. In the London district, I find that M. D. Dawson is paid $\$ 00$ a month, that is $\$ 600$ a year, and three men are employed at $\$ 1$ a day or $\$ 365$ a year each. Another salary in Toronto of $\$ 600$ is paid to $\mathrm{W} . \mathrm{L}$. Alger. Further down, 1 find in Montreal district John Fletcher is paid $\$ 2$ a day or $\$ 730$, because they reckon Sundays as well as other days, and so on. But the most remarkable payinent 1 find is in Winnipeg, where Major Street receives $\$ 1,000$ for the care of armouries in addition to a payment to J. Mason of $\$ 111$; Col. Peebles, $8500 ;$ J. Sutty, 8507 , and Williams, 8333 . I suppose the payment to Major Street is to enable him to engage caretakers, but I should think even at Winnipeg prices, he could engage a number for that amount. The total amount paid for the $c$ : of armouries was abont $\$ 36,000$. That seenie co have been the amount paid to the caretakers who look after the arms and clean them and put them in the racks, and so on, becanse there was also an amount paid to the officers for the care of arms amounting to $\$ 24,000$. The two items are kept separate in the Auditor General's Report. That payment to the officers is one of the items to which the Major General oljects as being under a wrong heading, and we all know that these amounts go to support bands, or are kept in the pookets of the officers themselves.
Mr. BOWELL. The hon. gentleman has comfounded two things, but it is not his fault because it is the mamer in which it is put in the Anditor General's Report. In the London district James Cothin receives sl a day for this purpose, hut the Keport of the Aulitor General wouh lead you to imagine that Mr. Dawson, at $\mathrm{S}(60 \mathrm{~K})$, was there for the same purpose, whereas Dawson is the superintendent of stores.
Mr. CANES. Then he should not le under this head.
Mr. BowELL. That is not the fault of the department but of the Auditor (ieneral. Then Conroy is a messenger in the brigade office, Pratt is caretaker of stores, and so is Cochrane. Williams takes care of the battery stores. In Londom, the hon. gentleman knows, there is a permanent corps. These otticers are receiving $$ 1$ a day, and $I$ presume are reguired the whole year round. But that is a detail I have not looked into.
Mr. CASEY. If these men belong to the permanent corps they ought to be under that heading.
Mr. BoW ELL. I did not say so. I said there were permanent corps stationed at London, the infantry school, for instance ; consequently it would require the constant attention of caretakers.
Mr. CASEY. The hom. gentleman does not understand my point. Permanent corps have their own caretakers for their owin arms : they look after theirownarms themselves. But these are armouries lelonging to the volunteer force. If these men are caretakers of stores, their names should not be charget under the heading of public armouries.

Mr. BOWELL. In reference to the point mentioned by my hon. friend from Muskoka (Mr. O'Brien), there may le an apparent extravagance in connection with the maintenance of the drill shed here, but I cannot say that it is real. It costs more at headquarters, where there are public armouries, than it does in other localities where there are none, or not so many. The hon. gentleman will understand that the care of the armoury, as in Parrie, for instance, is paid out of the allowance made to the officers. Consequently that would not appear here.
Mr. O'BRIEN. A battalion like mine gets $$ 320$ for the care of their arns. If the corps here were paid in the same proportion, they would get $$ 240$. But as a matter of fact, the drill shed here costs the Government 33,000 . Now, the difference between $$ 3,000$ and $$ 320$ is very considerable. It seems to me that there is extravagance in connection with these large drill sheds. The number of men does not account for it ; the quantity of arms to be taken care of does not account for it; the size of the building does not account for it; evidently there must be some other canse for it. I am quite willing to leave the matter in the hands of the Minister, confident that if there is anything wrong he will put it right.

Mr. Casey.

Mr. CASEY. The drill shed in Ottawa is used for many other purposes. It is used for lawn temis and many other purposes of that kind, and has to be kept in good shape, and the grounds aroumd it have to be kept pretty. I would again call the Minister's attention to the disproportionate amounts in the item for public armouries, pail in different districts. He says that in London these numerous en:ploys are necessary on atcomut of the permanent corps. Coming to Toronto, 1 find that we spend $\mathbf{S 3 , 0 9 7}$, twice as much there as at London. In Kingston the number of volunteers is not sogreat. Here, certainly, no part of the military school cost should be charged under this item, but we have no less than 11 men employed at a cost of $\mathbf{5} 4,28.9$. They have nothing to do with the taking care of the drill shed: they should not have anything to do with the stores, and they are chargel here with taking care of the public armoury. If they are doing something else they are wrongly charged here. It is quite impossible that these men can he kept lusy in looking after the public armoury. Their salaries range from si a day up to s(iM) a year. In Montreal where there are a considerable number of corps, we find $\$ 1,335$ expended, and there are about if or 1.5 men. When we come to Quebec we have something like 20 men employed, costing $\$ 9,7 \pi$, although there camnot be as many city corps as in Montreal, and the men camnot have as many arms to look after, yet the public armouries in Quelec cost over $\$ 3,($ (MO) more than the public armouries in Montreal. It is a very queer combition of things. I may be toh, as I was in the case of London, that these men are not looking after public armouries at all, that they are caretakers of stores, that they polish their gius in the citadel, that they do this and they do that. But unless they are actually engaged in taking care of ams they are framblulently charged umber this item.

Mr. BOWELL. Not fraudulently.

Mr. CASET. I mean to say improperly. It is a false pretense to put them under this heal. We want to know how that number of men can be employed in taking care of arms in Quebec. I iow not expect the Binister can give a full answer to that question at this moment, but when this item comes up for concurrence I shall ask him to give us somefurtherinformation. In regard to the allowance for the care of arms, I am at one with the General's opinion on that point. In speaking of allowances he says :
"Allowances are drawn annually for drill instruction and for care of arms for which the country receives no real value. They are prid to officials who are incapable of imparting instruction and unable to give suficient attention to the arms under their charge. In the majority of cases these allowances are looked upon merely in the light of perquisites attaching to the command of a battalion or company. The, fault does not rest with the officers but with the eystem.'
Now, the late Minister of Militia knows that I have frequently called his attention to the impropriety of making these allowances for doing what really was not done, and paying money which was virtually pocketed as a perquisite by the commander or paid into the regimental fund. The General goes on to point out in what shape these allowances should be made. I cannot let the item for the care of arms pass without referring to it, and hoping that the present Minister will see that no money is paid for the care of arms under that head which is not actually spent in taking care of the arms of the ditferent battalions. If the officers reguire allowances for different purposes, they should le given these allowances undet the proper heads, and frankly for the purpose representerl, for keeping up their battalions, and not under the head of the care of arms or drill instruction.

Military Stores

S40,000
Mr. CANFI. The Major-4 ieneral suggests that fuel should be purchased in larger quantities for all public buildings. Has the Ninister seen that suggestion:

Mr. BoWELL. The suggestion was mate by the Deputy Minister, Col. Panet. He thought it would be more economical if some repartment ascertained the quantities of fuel required for all the public buiblings, amd then tembers were asked for.

Mr. MeVLILLEN. We pay Sor annually for the renting of a building in Winnipeg. Is there no military building there lelonging to the Iosminion: How long hats this payment existed, and is it likely to continue?

Mr. BOWELL. The building was rentel from Col. scott hefore the Nurth-West Relvellion, at a rental of Si(n) per amum, with the right to continue qecupation so long as it was reguired. It is used exclusively as a depot for arms for the militia force. A demand has heen made by Col. Seott to increase the rental to $81,2(2)$ per annum. Te has refused to receive the $\sin$ per month, which has been tentered to him, claiming the higher sum. My information is that the Militia Department can hold the builling as long as it pleases under the contract. Having looked ipto this matter, and an offer having been made to sell the property, at tirst I was inclined to pay the amount asked, Sl $2.0 \times 6$-it is a very large building-but on second thought I was inclined to the opinion that the money would be better spent in erecting a huilding on the (iovernment property near the barracks.

> Orill Instruction. . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . $35,000

Mr. CAisFi. I have only to make the same remarks I made as to arms. Whe have heen promised a rearrangement, anl I hope it will le carried out by the present Minister. I also hope he will look carefully at the (ieneral's suggestions and adopt them, as they are common sense aud practical.

Irill Pay, .....................

Mr. CASEI. Perhaps the Minister will explain the cause of the increase of $\leq 2 . j,(\mathrm{MK})$. I again desire to call his attention to the Major-(ieneral's Report. The fieneral points out that a broad distinction has already grown up between the city and rural corps in Canada. The city corps practically work on the lines of the militia corps in Great Britain, serving without pay, inasmuch as on entering they are asked to sign an agreement to turn over their pay to various battalion funds. The General recommends that they should be recognized as volunteers, as men serving without pay, that the British rolunteer system should be applied to city corps as far as possible. He almits it is not applicable to the rural corps, which should be treated very much as the militia are treated in England. He makes a great many practical suggestions which no doubt, the Minister will look over at his leisure. The fieneral says :
"The rural militia would likewise benefit by such a change. There is, in that category, the best possible material for a national defensive force, and to it the militia system is alone applicable.
"An effect of the existing anomaly is to make both categories of the Militia dependent for their pay, on a single vote in militia estimates, without distinction as to the manner in which that pay is earned.

- It appears to have been assumed, that circumstances require the paygranted under that vote to be divided in at propurtion, which bears no relation to the comparative strength of the two categories. Thus in the ciurrent year, the proportion of Vote No. l(n) in the Nilitia estimates. allotted as pay to each category, has heen:
.. The rural corys.... $4+$ p.c. of the whole sum.
$\because$ To city eorps .... 34 av do or a difference of one-tenth only in favour of the rural corps. The disalvantage under which rural corps labour is sufficiently evident, when it is remembered that their established st rength exceeds that of city corps, in the proportion of 3 to 1 . It is a disadvantage. moreover. which is annually increasing, by the creation of new city corbs. A striking instance of this appears in No. 2 Military District, where in the past year the city militia has been inereased by ten companies, representink an annual charge for drill pay of $>3,736$. $\$ 3$. Under the present system, this sum inast be withalrawn from the rural battations, whose aunual quota for drill is thereby proportionately reduced. The only manner in which this defect can be remedied is by separating the two catcgories of active militia (as alreadv suggested), placing the annual vote for pay under sub-heads answering to these cate ${ }^{-}$ gories, and attaching thereto the establishment list of each. This manner of dealing with may is found necessary; not only in England, but in countries where the right of Parliament to control expenditure is less filly recognized."
As the lieneral points out the pay of the rual corps in the Toronto district will be remluced by the amount allowed for the new kilted battalion, and whether the new service justifies this injustice to the rural battalions remains to be seen. I trust that the Minister will readjust the pay-sheet in such a mamer that the rural battalions will get their fair share of it.

Mr. OBRIEN. I would like to remind the Minister that only two months intervenes between the present and the time when the annual drill should begin. It is time that orders should be issued now so as to give an opportunity for those interested to make preparations. It has been a weak point heretofore in the management of this matter that orders have never been issued in sutfi. cient time to allow officers and men to be prepared for their camp duties. Now that the spring operations are commencing they should know who will drill this year, and when they will drill, before engaging in their work. I would urge strongly upon the Minister that this should be attemided to at once.

Mr. BOWELL. I would like the committee to understam that although there is $$ 20,000$ additional in the item this year, it is not for the purpose of drilling more men, but only to provide for the increased amount that has been expended last year. The average number of officers and men in the camp for the last 3 years has been 19,970 and the average cost per annuin $2-4,688. The vote was formerly taken only for $$ 2=0,000$, while it was actually costing about $$ 25,000$, and on looking into the matter, I thought it letter that the full sum shoull be voted by Parliameut. I have deducted that $$ 2 \pi, 000$ increase from other items, so that the total estimate is precisely the same as in other years. I can assure my hon. friend from Elgin (Mr. Casey) that many of the suggestions he has made shall have the consideration of the department during the year.
Mr. Watson. I had hopes when I saw this increase in the Estimates that it was put there at the suggestion of the Major-(ieneral, in whose report I find a great many pratical suggestions to the Militia Department, which I think this House must approve of. I call the Minister's attention to the condition of the three battalions which we have in Manitolia. The 91st and 9.th Rattalions have never been in camp since the rebellion, now seven years, and I think it is searcely necessary to occupy the time of the House ly stating that it is hardly possible to find letter battalions in the Dominion of (anada than the 91 st and the 9 ath. I find on looking over the reprort of Military District No. 10 that the total number of men drilled in the Province of Manitol)a last year was only $42 \overline{2}$, belonging to the! ©oth Battalion. The 91st Battalion has not performed any drill since it was organized. The report of the Aljutant-General says:
" The 01st Batalion has not performed any drill since organized.

The different armouries were inspected and found in grod order.
"Three officers of this corps bave taken first-chasscertificates, and one officer a second.
"Two corpanies, riz., Nos. 4 and $i$, having become nun-effective, their equipment has been returned ints store.

Two new companies will be recommended to replace theu, one at Mciregor, rhe otber at Oaklake, both on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railory."
This battalion has lost two of its companies and that can hardly be wondered at seeing that they have not been drilled for seven years. In respect to the 9isth Battalion the report says :
. This battalion has not been authorized to perform annual drill since being relieved from active service in September, 1885, the close of the North-West Retwlion.

The armouries have been inspected by me. The arms are ohd and unserviceable, the accoutrements are of an ubsolete pattern."
I would infer from the treatment that has been accorled to the 91st and 95th lattalions that the remarks made in this House a few evenings ago in regarl to the management of the militia-not as regards the men-were correct, and that, the management of the force is something to le deplored. I presume that it is of as much importance to have militia in Manitoba as in any other part of the Dominion. but they should be properly treated and enconragel to take an interest in their work. I had hoped that the extra $$ 25,000$ taken this year was for the purpose of allowing these battalions to go into camp. In the whole Province of Manitola there is not a rifle range furnished for either of these lattalions, and the Adjutant-General, in his report, says:
"At present there is no riffe range available for the city corps, the one at stony Mountain. 16 miles from Winnipes, having become unserviceable (a sum of money was applied for from the Government in 1889, to place it in pruper repair, bat was not granted). The range now used belonge to the Winnipeg Rife Club, and the companies have to pay for the use of it out of their private funds. and as there is so much practice going on by members of the association it is seldom they can get the range for practice."
The Adjutant-General suggests that there should be mounted men at different points along the international loundary, and the Minister can easily see without much explanation what an immense service these men would be on account of their being so close to the line. I find that in the report, the 90th Battalion of Winnipey stands high in the estimation of the Adjutant-General. There is not a battalion in the Dominion which stands higher than the 90 hh , and I have not the slightest doubt that if the 91st and 93th Battalions were allowed to go into camp and drill they would stand equally high with the 90th. It was remarked here the other night that probably one of the reasons why some of these battalions were not as good as they might he, was on account of the small pay. I helieve that it would be much better if we reluced the number of volunteers in Canada, and have whatever number of men we shonld have better equipped and better drilled. There appears to be a sort of mock morlesty on the part of the authorities with reference to reducing the militia force. If this House will not vote sufficient to drill the number of men at present on the roll, then only the best companies shoulil le selected for camp every year. We are informed by the Minister of Militia that only 20,000 men went into camp last year whereas we have in the neighlmurhood of 40 , (WNint the volunteer force. It is well understoml that in a great many cases, although an officer may go into camp, often the great mass of the rank and file never go to camp twice, and anything that they may learn in one year in camp can be but of little use to them if their services should be reguired. In reference to the 30th Battalion in the County of Wellington. of which I know something, I find that the AljutantGeneral says:

"This is a fine battalion. The ranks are well filled with men of proper age and physique. This is doubtless due, in part, to the extra allowance of 5 cents a day per nun given by the county authorities in addition to the Government pay:"
Here is an evidence that with increasel pay a lietter lot of men can le got to join the battalions. In reporting on the 4tth Battalion, the Major(itneral says:
"Very weak in numbers, of wretched physique, and officers ignorant of their duties. The district from which this battalion is drawn cannot, apparently, maintain its efficiency."
Of the $\mathbf{3 6 t h}$ Battalion, it is said :
" This battulion did not improve as much as other corps. The majority of the officers were very slovenly in their dress and appearance on parade. The physique of this battalion was bad. Many mere boys in the ranks. It appears questionable, whether the district can maintain an efficient battalion."
Now, these battaligns have been inspected, and I have 110 doubt have been drilled and in camp; and it appears to me a mistake that money shonld be wasted on such battalions when there are gool battalions, composed of good nien and well equipped, reaty to go into camp every year. I hope, as the hon. member for West Elgin has stated, that with a young man now at the head of the department as Minister, and with a new Major-General, we shall have an improvement in the militia. I think the public and this House must be well pleased with the criticisms which have come from our new Major-General. There is no doubt in the minds of those who have any knowledge of military matters that the force has not been in the past what it should have been. We have been spending a million and a quarter of dollars a year and a great deal of that money has been wasted. I hope that the Minister will see that the 91st and the 95th Battalions are allowed to go into camp. To refuse them this privilege is not treating them fairly and justiy. When they were called upon in 188 to go upon active service in the North-West, they went and performed gowl service to the country, but they have never leen allowed to go into camp since that time. The hon member for West Elgin made a comparison between the amounts allowed to the city corps and the amounts allowed to the rural corps, and I find that the Major.(ieneral in his report appreciates the best class of men to be secured for our militia force. Speaking of the rural corps, he says:
" Powerful in physique, intelligent and eager to learn, the militia at present contains the unorganized elements of a strone national furce. Moreover. in the men of the rural militia. there exists that capacity for adapting themselves to circumstances, and bandiness. engenderell by bractical acquaintance with camp life, in their ordinary atvections which is a most valuable guality for a soldier in the field. What is required is ssstem and organization in every department.
The Major-General, from his short experience here, fully realizes that we have in Canada the material to make a very efficient force: he speaks in the highest possible terns of our rural militia ; and I hope that in compliance with the suggestions made in the report of the Major-(ieneral, the rural battalions, particularly those in Manitobn, which have given food service in the past, will be allowed a sufficient amount of money to enable them to go into camp luring the coming season.
Mr. DEs.jARDINs (LIslet). I would like to say a few worls on this item before it is carried. I joined the battalion which I have the honour to command in 1867, and I have attented several district camps to which my hattalion was ordered. I have attended several camps as a staff otficer. I have also followed closely the training of the militia in the camps, and I feel it my duty to make a few remarks suggested by my experience in those camps. With regard to the militia service, as with regard to every other branch of the public service, the olject we have to attain, the problem we have to solve, is how to reach the maximm of efficiency at the minimum cost. We have a permanent force composed of several corps, and with regard to that the gallant ofticer commanding makes some important suggestions in his report. With regard to the orgamization of the nuclens of a permanent force in Canada, my own idea is that all things being considered, subject to the improvements to be made, this permanent force is proving a sat tisfactory success; but the schools of instruction in comection with it are not, I think, so creditable or so satisfactory. I was myself one of the officers in charge of a military school in Quebec under the old system, and I have come to the corclusion that for the supplying of ofticers to our militia the old schools really did better service than the new. They were not expensive, and every year a large number of young men attended them ani received a pretty fair training. Of course there was this defect in those schools, that the men attending them were not doing garrison duty, because they were boarding around in private houses and earning their living, and learning the interior economy at the schools as best they could. But every year a large number of the young men were equipped at those schools and fitted to be ofticers and non-commissioned officers; and a large number of those nien who did not obtain commissions in the volunteer force, or even become non-commissioned officers, would go into the ranks where they were a great help to the recruits who had not had the alvantage of attending the schools. I think that one reason why our schools are not so successful as we expected they would be, is that the expenses are pretty high to the young men who attend them, and I think that this part of the service should be revisel. Pride in the uniform is a good thing, but it should not be in proportion to its cost, buit to the loyal servicedone with it to the Crown and the country. I know a great many young men who are detbarred from attending the schools on account of the expense. Under the ohd system the men attending the schools were allowed it miform, which was not very costly, and on passing their examinations they were allowed $\mathbf{\Sigma}$ in more for a secondclass certificate and sink) for a first-class certificate. Perhaps it will not be very easy to re-estallish those old schools, but I am merely making a comparison. What we want for the success of cur brigade camps, is, of course. well trained otficers, and also a good lonly of nom-commissioned officers. In this country we have to rely for many years on the volunteer system, as we camot undertake any heary expense in organizing a permanent force, and the permanent bonly we have will suttice for many years. The gool-will of the youth of the comutry to enlist is well known, hut we mast bear in mind that the service should entail the least prossilile pecuniary loss on the officers aml men. I am in favour of the brigade camps. They are doing fairly well, and I heartily approve of the improvements which the Cieneral suggests. I would like to make this suggestion: We canmot expect the militia force to turn out for the summer camps for a great length of time, lweanse the number of days lefore harvest time is very small, and I question whether we could increase it much. The suggestion is also made by the hon. member for Marynette that we should have the whole force of $40,0 \mathrm{ON}$ men in camp every year. I do not helieve our financial resources would actually allow that.
Mr. Watsun. I said to reduce the force, but to get all the active militia out in camp.

Mr. DEsJARidIN (LIslet). I would not like to reduce the total number, lécause 1 do not think it is too large, lut would rather have the camp every two years instead. The suggestion I would make is this: I think we conld utilize the winter season for a regular course of training for a portion of the militia. For instance $20,(0 \times 0)$, or hale the total numiser of the force, might ive called out in the district camps in the summer. Then in the winter previous we might call out one officer of every company, one non-commissioned ofticer and a certain percentage of the men, say 10 per cent, and organize thein in procisional battalions where we have headguarters and barrack accommolation, and where they woull undergo a regular course of instruction, siay for forty, fifty or sixty days. Then these men going into the camp in the summer following would supply us with a good staff of instructors and a good guota of well drilled men, who would give an impulse to the whole force in camp. I made a little calculation to show what the cost would be in the winter time of this course of instruction. I am contident there would be no ditticulty in mustering the required number of men at an allowance of say 40 cents per day. Add 30 cents for rations and the extra expense for officers and so on, and you would have 70 cents as the whole expenditure which I am sure would not tre exceerled. - (nN men at this rate would give you an expentiture for in days of Sion, (NO and for Gil lays of Ext.onn). I really ieliere, if the expenditures on the different items for militia purposes were recast and reconsidered, such dimination eould lee malle ats would meet nearly the whole of this expenditure. Thus this system would not increase the amount repuired each year for militia purposes, and could not fail io have a very gool result. Brar young men. of course, travel almut a gool deal and change their rucupations, and we camot have the same men in camp for many years in stacession : lut I time the man who enlists one year will always return to the camp. if not the following year, the year after. if he catn at all do so. In my battalion, out of cight companies strong. 43 non-commissioned rettice:s and men in each. we have always in camp 41) or . $\mathrm{N}_{1}$ men who have heen there for 1.7 or ent years mist. If my suggestion were alopted. you would have at each camp a number of well trained non-commissioned ofticers and men who had gone through the regulat conrse, and who would impart at spirit of discipline and zeal to the whole force. Moreover. supposing you give Q, (MN men each winter a course where you have barackes and drill sheds, yon conh call out in succession the commanding officer and the statf othicers of every hattalion to take charge under the superintendence of the district staff officers, and that would entail a very small extra expense. as the statf officers of every hattalion would he very glad to attend this ammal course and get there a training for the camp in the following year. And by calling out this mumber each winter you would have in a few years several thousind men weil trained whon you conld depend on for the defence of the country. It is useless to expect that we can athimuch to ont expenditure for militia purposes. If Parlanemt were willing to increase the anome, I would le glat. ats a militia otticer, to support that policy. hut I kuow with our tinancial resources we cammot atford to pay very much more than we are expending now: The guestion is, as I mentioned in, commencing. that we should try and solve the problem of olbaning the maximuan efficiency at the least cost to the country, and I think the system which I have suggested, if put in practice, would have very leneficial results and would teml to the greater efficiency of the force.

Mr. WATSON. I would ask the Minister of Militia if we can hope to have Battalion 91 or Battalion 9.7 drilled this year: They hate not been irilled for some years.

Mr. PRIOR. I camot allow this item to pass without referring to some of the remarks of the hon. member for L'Islet (Mr. Desjardins). I know that in British Columbia where " ( ${ }^{\text {" school of }}$ infantry is sitnated, the dovermment are doing what they can. hut at the same time it is not a school where militia officers can get a tirst-class training. It is not because the commanding officer and the other officers under him are not perfectly competent. I helieve there are no better otficers in Canada than they are, but there are not proper appliances supplied to them, and I hope the Minister of Militia will see that they are supplied with all the appliances which should be supplied to a school where the officers of the local militia should receive proper instruction. In Quebec and in Kingston the schools are fully supplied, and the officers who go there get all the instraction which they reguire, ani which they should get when they areattached to a permanent corps. In British Colombia the barracks are good, the climate is good : it is a splendid place, and the physique and the training of the men are good : lout until the otficersare supphed with the proper appliances, until they are supplied with models of ammunition and models of all kinds of things which are used in moniern warfare, it is imposibible for them to give the proper training which is reguired for those who go for a three months. or a six months course. ats the case may ine. There is another thing. Coming as I do from British Columbia, and from Military District No. 11, and looking over the report of the Militia Department. I was struck ley the fact that there was no report from the lepury aljutant-general. That district is supposed to lie one worthy of attention. lecanse there is a deprity aljutant-general there and an infantry school is there though the number of volunteers is not very large. We have emo men, and I think I an correct in wying thev are as good mentas any in the lhominion of Canada, hat still there is uoreport from the deputy adjutant-general. I should like to know why this was left out. I camot le-lieve that he would not report to the department. Ikaow that last year he made rather a lengthy report, showing. I will not say the disgraceful condition of affairs there, hot shom: ing the replomable condition in which the militia of British Columbia were left. I Ionot know whether it was owing to the apathy of the liovermment. hut certainly it was owing to the neglect of somelming that this state of affairs can exist. I know that the deputy adjutant general has reported vear after year as to what was required to put the militia of British Columhia in a decent state of efticience. and last year he reported most fully on that suljeect, but last year nothing appeared as to what was wanted there. Nearly everything he said as to what should be done for the militia of British Colmmbia was cut out. I lo not think that is a fair thing to do. If an officer is put in a position where he is called upon to report to the fiovernment, it is only right and fair that his report should be printed in toto. I was surprised that last year only a portion was printed, but I am more surprised this year to find that there is nothing at all in the report in reference to the militia in British Columbia. I camnot believe that Col. Holmes has not reported to the Militio Department. We have put in our full drills in that province, our men are as gool as any in the Dominion of Cinada, and I cannot see why mo rejort has heen made. In regard to what the hon. gentleman from L'Islet (Mr. Desjardins) hats said in reference to uniforms, I may say that I believe the uniforms now in use are altogether too expensive, and that is one of the reasons why we have so much difticulty in getting officers. I know that in the artillery it is very hard to find young men to take commissions who are not simply willing hut who are able to spend the money reyuired for a uniform. It takes a young man from $\$ 100$ to $\$ 100$ at least to get a uniform fit to appear on parade in, and if it is the case of a captain or a major, it will cost from $\mathbf{8 5 0 0}$ to $\$ 700$ for the uniform and the full kit. If we were to do away with all the gold helts and gold trappings, and were to adopt some plain blue or red uniform, with plain belts and trappings, the efficiency of the force would le just as gond as if we preserved all the gold lace which we have horrowed from the Imperial Army. I hope the Ninister of Militia will see his way, not at once, but gradually, to bring forward some means of altering the present state of affairs, and will see if he camot give the young men of Canada a chance to serve their comntry without having such enormous expense entailed ujen them. I lo not think it is of much use to say anything on militia matters in this Honse as long as the management of the militia is carried on as it is. I am sure that the Minister of Militia and his staff do their leest, but so long as prolitics have auything to do with the Militia lepartment, sio long will the force be in a state of inetticiency. If any one says anything about the training of the militia, a memler who hats a city or a rural corps thinks his corps is going to the done away with, and he lorings his influence to lear on the liovernment. I flo not think politics should be allowed to interfere in this matter att all. We have now a ${ }^{\text {a }}$ eneral who I think every militia man in this Honse will sat umderstanls thoroughly his hosiness, and who is fearless in expressing any opinions in reference to the force openly. and we had better, ass som as possible. leave politics aside in regaral to this matter of the militia. I hope that, with the present Minister of Militia and the present leneral commanting the militia, we shall have a very different report presenten to us next year than we have had presented to us this year.

Mr. (AMPBELLD. I agree with much that has been sail by the hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat. Sio far as the militia is conserned, there shoull he no prolitics in the administration of that department. I am glad to know that both poli tiaal parties are fairly well represented in the militia force, and therefore it ought to be comlucted from a loniness standpoint mather than a political standpoint. Had this course heen pursnedduring the last few years our force would be in a more efticient state than it is now. I look upon the vote we are now disconsing as one of the most important we can have, from a military stampoint. There is no, use in having a militia unless you drill them thoowghly. I notice that the amount for this year is soi, (wnimore than last year, and I am glad that it is so. I see that the report of the Major-dineral lears out what I have myself believel, that this amome of money has not leeen used juliciously in the past, or to the lest possible arrantage. In this report of the Major-dieneral I am glad to corroloorate what has heen said by the hon. gentleman who has taken his seat. that we are favoured by having a man at the head of the Militia Department who is fearless, aml rearly to express his views and give his opinions upon the state of the militia, without any hias. Now, in this report he states:

[^57]Which will enable us to train a larger mumber of men without any increased expense. I believe it is much letter that we shouh have even 10,(nN men properly tained than to have ( $0,(X N)$ half trainel. I know that the system that has prevailed in the western part of Oritario, and I presume throughout the Dominion, of taking a battalion out once in two years, and drilling them for ten or twelve days, is simply throwing away money, because the next time the battalion is taken out you will timd that nearly two-thirds of the men have disappeared, have moved away or gone out of the service. and you have a fresh lot to drill. I think it would better that these battalions should he Itrilled every year, and drilled a longer time than twelve days. Take a less number of men if necessary, hut irill them thoroughly. Also, I do not believe that the present system is right, of giving such a small allowance to the men as iol cents a day. Everybonly knows that you camot get a goonl man, such as you want in the service, to leave his home and employment, and wo for in cents a day. Therefore. I think the system could he remedied in these two ways: First, by drilling the men erery year, a smaller ummber of men if necessary : and secomi, by increasing the pay of the men. si that yon may ohtain a letter class. I alson think that some change shomhl lie made in amother direction. Reference has heen marle to the arms, acoontrements, Ee. I am lwoml to saty that I helieve, with the hon. member for North York (Mr. Mulock), that the system of giving contracts for clothing has been a hage farce ind a frathol. I believe the clothing has cost altogether tow mach, ant that the Militia Department. umler its present heal, should take steps to see if some eomomy camot he practised there. If the expenditure under that head is cut down, we can spend more money for Irill aml make the men more efficient.

Mr. WATsON. I would like to ask the Minister if we may hope that the !日st and !nth battalions will drill this year:
Mr. BowblaL. The matter will depend in a great measure on the dieneral. I know the pratetice is to call out the men one year who were not called out the year before. Why the two battalions to which the hon. gentleman hats callend attention have not been itrilled in camp I am mable to say, unless it lee from the fact, as 1 understaml, that the companies live such a great listance from each other that the cost of transportation would be tom great.

Mr. WATson. The 9.th Battalion, whose headquarters are at Portage la Prairie, can he gos together very conveniently by the Canadian l'acific or the Manitola and North-Western Railways. None of the companies live 80 miles distant : Brandon is the furthest point. They were promised three years ago. and in fact notifierl, to get in realiness, but at the last moment they were informed that they would not le allowed to go into camp. I think that, in fairness to the men of that battalion, they should either be ilishanded or allowed to go into camp. It is not fair to keep these companies for seven years without allowing them to go into camp.

Mr. BOWELL. I helonged to a company fifteen years, and we never went into camp.

Contingencies and general service .... $3.(th)

Mr. (ANEF. I notice one pretty hir item here: alvertising the militia of Canada in the anniversary number of the Toronto Empire, SBM). I do not know exactly what object is to be gained in advertising the militia, although it would be an object to the Toronto Empion. This item inclutes grants to rifle associations. Now, I do not know how it is at present, but some years ago, in this city, there used to be a very peculiar arrangement. hy which the members of each of the two battalions formed a rifle association of their own, and the same individuals joined a third rifle association, and sogot three grants between them. I would beg to urge upon the Minister in this connection what I divl before in connection with the shooting in camps. A liberal allowance of free ammunition should be allowed. not only to the rifle league, as at present. but to riffe associations. Noney might lue saved from ornamental organizations and increased grants given to these associations. In western Ontario interest in riffe-shooting has almost died out. Formerly we had very good associations in every county $\left.\right|_{\text {pittalion and a large one at London, for district No. }}$ 1 , and at that time first-rate matches were held which aroused general interest. Now the money obtainable is not sutficient to induce the men to come out, and in conserfuence rifle-shooting has greatly fallen off. I hope the Minister will carefully consider the measures for stimulating rifle shooting. The grants mate to some of the rifie associations are ve:y small, being only sio or sion, but I olserve the Metropolitan Association of Ottawa receives Slinl.

Dominion Artillery Association . . . . . . . $$$, (0) 0

Mr. PRIOR. I ask the Minister of Militia if he cammot see his way clear to increase this grant a little. It has been impossible for three years to send an artillery team to Shoeburyness. If he will look at the General's Report he will find that the artillery branch of the service is considered most efficrent. Under the circumstances, the ( iovernment might do a little more for that branch. It is impossible to semi a team over for the amount voted, but this might be done on Si 3.000 . This would be beneficial, not only to the artillery but to the country at large. When there is a chance of a team going to shoeburyness, the whole artillery of the Dominion work, and great interest is displayed, because every man wants to get on the team. I hope the Minister will place an additional amount to this rote in the Nupplementary Estimates.

Improved Riffe Ordnance

$\qquad$ .83,000
Mr. CASEY. How many guns will be purchased for this amount? The General's Report says that our ordnance is not in very good condition, and that not a spare gin-wheel is to be got nearer than Woolwich.

Mr. BOW ELL. This item, althought it has been voted for a number of years, has not been spent for some years past. I propose to spend it this year, and endeavour to get one or two guns.

Committee rose and reported the resolutions.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON moved the adjournment of the House.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I will take this opportunity of enquiring of the Minister of Justice whether any information has been received as to the negotiations pencling with the German Empire ? The treaty was about to terminate, if 1 remember rightly, ind some negotiations were reported to have been going on with Her Majesty's Government.

Nir JOHN THOMPSON. We have nothing upon that subject, Mr. Speaker.

Motion agreed to : amd House adjourned at 1.0 . a.m. (lierlnesday).

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Welmespar, 13th April, 1802.
The sipater took the Chair at Three orlock.
Prayers.

NEW MEMBER.

Mr. SPEAKER informed the House that the Clerk of the House hat received from the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, a certificate of the election and return of Isidore Proulx, Esty., for the Electoral District of Prescott.

MEMBER INTRODUCED.

Isinore Protlx, Esq., Member for the Electoral District of Prescott ; introduced by Mr. Laurier and Mr. Watson.

REPORT.

Report of the Postmaster General for the year encling 30th Jine, 1891. -(Sir Adolphe Caron.)

EASTER RECESS.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON moved :
That when Mr. Speaker leaves the Chair at six o. clock this day, the House shall stand adjourned until Tuesday next.

Motion agreed to.

FIRST RFADIN(:

Bill (No. 68) to reviveand amend the Actsrespecting the Ottawa, Wiaddington and New Fork Railway and Bridge Company.-(Mr. Ross, Dundas.)

ORINNANCE PROPERTY IN ANNAPOLIS.

Mr. SUTHERLAND (for Mr. Forbes) asked, To whom do the Government lease or rent the Government ordnance property in the County of Annapolis? In whose nane are the leases made out? What is the amount of rent charged? How much rent is due to date?

Mr. BOWELL. Part of the Government ordnance property in the County of Annapolis, N.S., was, on the 1 st of May, 1879, leased to Lawrence Hall, of Annapolis, N.S., at an annual rental of $\mathbf{i} 34$ l0s. sterling. The amount now due of said rent is $\$ 742.72$. Another portion of the ordnance property in said town and connty was, in 1888, leased to the Marine and Fisheries Department for lighthouse purposes at a rental of $\$ 21.92$, which rent is paid to the 30 th November, 1891. The terms of these leases are still in force.

FISHERY INSPECTOR ROLAN1) FINKLE.

Mr. LANDERKIN asked, When was Roland Finkle, of Bath, appointed fishery inspector: What was his salary for the years 1590 and 1891 : What is his present salary? Has his salary been increased: if so, when was the increase granted: Upon whose recommendation was it granted?

Mr. TUPPER. Roland Finkle, of Bath, was appointed fishery inspector on the lst June, 188 . His salary for the years 1890.91 was sinl a year. His present salary is 350 .

SUMMERSTUWN (ONT.) POST OFFICE.

Mr. SUTHERLAND (for Mr. (itay) asked, 1. What is the amount of receipts of the post oftice of Summerstown, Ont. : 2. What is the salary paid to the postmaster?

Nir AIOLPHE CARON. The revenue of the post otfice at Summierstown, Ont., cluring the year enting 30 th June, 1891 , was $$ 146$; revenue from Ist July, 1891 , to tith April. 1892, S186.9t : salary of postmaster, $$ 40$ per annum.

I. C. R.--TARIFF ON LIVE STOCK.

Mr. WOO1) (Westmorelani) askel, When was the freight tariff on live stock, now in force on the Intercolonial Railway, alopted? In what does it differ from the tariff formerly in force:

Mr. HAliliART. The freight tariff now in force on the Intercolonial Railway was atopted by Order in Councilof the 24th April, 1890 . Take anexample of a distance of 100 miles: it differs from the tariff which was changed by the Order in Council of the 24th April, 1SM), in the following respects:-

Smali Lots lafs than Cak Loains.

In car loads the difference between the present tariff and the one previously in forse is from onehalf to I cent per $1(x)$ pounds or $$ 1$ to $S 2$ per car, equal to from 7 to 1 let cents per head, and this only applies to distances up to (i) miles: over that distance there is a slight reduction.

QUEBEC AND POINTE AUN TREMBLEN MAIL SERVICE.

Mr. LAN(iELIER asked, I. What are the names of the parties who tenderval for the carrying of the mail from Quelse to Pointe an Trembles, in the County of Portneuf: $\because$. What is the amount of the tender in each case: 3. Has the contract been awarded, and if so, to whom:

Sir AIOILPHE CARON. 1 and 2. A. Angers, S494: Elzear Poitras, Sies: Hypolite Brland, Sīt0: Roch Rivard, Sinl : Narcisse Loriot, Sil4; Theodule Dubuc. Sins: Ferdinand Voyer, sisos; Samuel Dussatult, シg(x) ; Octave Nand. Sioki; Joseph Loriot, Ex9; : Jos. Arthur Betard, Som). 3. The lowest temiler has heen accepted.

THE COPVRIGHT ACT.

Mr. MULOCK asked, Whether a proclamation has been issued bringing into force the Aut passed in the $\boldsymbol{s i n}$ d year of Her Majesty s reign, intituled: "An Aet to amend "The Coprright Act," Chapter $\mathbf{6} \mathbf{2}$ of of the Revised Statutes :" If not, what is the cause of the delay in the issle of such proclamation?

Sir JOHS THOMPSON. The proclamation is not issuen. I hope in a very few days to lee able to commmicate the reasons more in detail than I can now.

COBOURE CUSTOMS BUILDING:

Mr. LANIDFRKIN asked : Whether the (iovernment lease any huildings in the town of Colourg for Customs or other purposies: If so, from whom do they lease them, and what rent do they pay yearly'

Mr. OUIMFT. None are leased.

BEET-ROOT SUUAR

Mr. BE.AUsOLEIL moved for :
Statement showing: 1. The quantity of heet-root sugar manufactured in Canada for which a bounty has been granted and paid, in pursuance of the Act passed during the last session of this present Parliament. -2 The names and addresses of persons and companies to whom such bounty has been paid, and the amount paid to each of them. 3. The tutal amount so paid. 4. The total quantity of sugar-beet grown in Canada, and delivered at the beet-sugar factories during the years 1890 and $1 \times 91$, respectively.
He said : My intention is not to speak now on this question. I will only ask the Government to kindly cause the returns mentioned in the three motions I have just made, to be prepared as early as possible ; for I intend to ask for the opinion of the House on the continuation of the granting of bounties to beetroot sugar, as soon as these returns are furnished.

Mr. BOWELL. There is no objection to this motion, but this return will be simply a duplication of the information which has already been laid on the Table in answer to the motion niade by the hon. member for West Ontario (Mr. Edgaij) a short time ago, except that portion of the motion which refers to the quantity of beets that were hrought into the factory. That information we have not in our possession, and 1 am informed that it camnt likely be ohtained from the factory itself, for the reason. my officials inform me, that during their investigation a short time ago, into the mamfacture of sugar from beet-root, they did not find any record of the guantity of beets brought into the factory.

Mhtion ingered to.

Mr. DAVIEN (P.E.I.) mover for :

Return of all petitions, reports, correspmalence, telegrams amb other docaments relatiner to a claim for compensation or damages made by Jobn F. Robertson by reason of injuries sustained by him in a railway accident on the Prince Edward Island Railway in the year 1882.
He said: I wish th call the attention of the hom. leader of the Honse to the facts comnected with this case, so that justice may be lome by the Covernment to the party on whose behalf I am speaking. In 18s? there was a serious accident on the Prince Edward Island Railway, owing to the breaking of an axle in one of the railway carriages. John F. Rolven ison and his wife were passengers on the train on that occasion, and both received very serious injuries from which they were contined to their beets for a long time. Mr. Robertem: injuries were such that for some years he was quite incapacitated from doing lonsiness, and when he got out and about, he retained counsel, and application was made to the dovermment on his hehalf. At the time, the Supreme Court of Cunala had deciden the cases of MeFarlane $\because \in$ the Queen and Mcheod $\therefore$. the Queen, detemining that there was mo liability on the part of the diovermment for injuries sustained by a passenger thavelling by a fovernment train, even if the accident were cansed by the negligence of one of the fovernment employes. The counsel acting for Mr. Rolertson, in the face of these decisions, very wisely did not file a petition of right. There would have been mo use in dong so. because whatever opinion one may entertain as to the correctness of the judgments of the supreme Court, until they were reversed by the lrivy Council they were hinding in Canada. So that the counsel for Mr. Rolertson applied to the fovermment privately. The matter was referred by the Railway Department to the Depart ment of Justice, and the opinion wäs given by the then Deputy Minister of lustice to the effiect that if the accident was cansed ly a latent defect in the axle, of which the employis on the railway had no knowledge and no means of knowing, there was no lialsility; implying that if the accident had been caused by a defect of which they did know, the Govermment would he liable. Mr. Robertson alleged that the axle was broken at the time the train started on its journey, that the employes on the train had means of knowing that, and did not act on that means of knowledge, and therefore were negligent, and that if the railway were the property of a private company it would have been lialle for all the injuries the passengers sustained. However, the opinion of the Minister of Justice, of which I was kindly favoured with a copy last year, went upon the point, that if the accilent was not the result of nergigence, the (iovernment were not liable. In 1587 the Exchequer Court Act was passed, and that Act appears to some extent to have altered the law itself, and it is to the comdition of things arising out of that Act that I desire to call the hon. gentleman's attention. .Julge Burbidge has decided under the statute, that although the (ionermment were not liable for any injury caused to a passenger by the negligence of their employes previous to the passage of the Exchequer Court Act, they are liable since the passage of that Aut. I hold in my hand his decision in the calse of the City of Queber $x$. the Queen. At page 2 oio he gives the text of the loth and lith sections of the Eschequer Court Act, under which he holds that a new lailility arises on the part of the Govermment. After setting out those sections, he says:
" By comparing section 15 with R.S.C., e. 135 , s. 75 , it wiit be seen that the jurisdiction which the court had formerly exercised in refpect of any matters that might have been the subiect of in petition of right is continued with a reneral definition of the esses in which such petitions will lie. By section $16(b)$ the court is given the jurisdiction formerly exercisable by the official arbitrators in respect of claims fir compensation for lands taken for, or injuriously affected by, the construction of pullic works: by section $16(.$, , the jurisdiction firmerly vested in such officinl arbitrators with respect to claims arising out of any death or injury to the person or property on any public work, with a limitation to which 1 shall have icc:asion to refer: and by section 16 ( $($ l) and ( $($ e), a jurisdiction similiar to that rested in the Court of Clains by the Revised Statutes of the United States, section 1159.
Then he goes on to comment aponseveral hanches of the case, and at page 269 he expresses his opiniom in this way:
"I take it howerer, that whatever opinion may be entertained of the point of view from which this question is to be regarded, it is necessary to give the words used in clause $(c)$. ot $50-51$ Vic., c . $16, \mathrm{~s}$. 16 , the meaning that expressly or by necessary implication attaches to them : and I do not doubt that they recngnize the Crown's liability for certuin torts committed by its officers and servants for which a renedy had heretofore been provided by a proceeding on a reference to the official a rbitrators, and for the redress of which it was for the first time by such Act provided that proceedings might be instituted in this court.
"It appears to me. too. that I would fail to give effect to the language of clause (c) if T I limited itsapplication to the special cases where a liability for torts is created by stutute, to which reference has been made. Such cases of statutory liability, as we have seen, fall within and are provided for by clause (d) of the section umder discussion. There is nothing. I think, in the conclusion to which $i$ have come in any way in conflict with the judgments in McFarlane $v x$, the Queen or McLeod ws. the Queen, which were decided under statutes differing very materially from that now under consideration. On the other hand, it is supported by the jndgrents of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council that have been cited."
Judge Burbilge subsequently, in the case of the Queen against Prady, arising out of an accident at Bunt Park, followed this judgment, and from his juigment there was an appeal to the Supreme Court. I heliere, however, the point now bronght up was not decided one way or the other, but the case was settled on another gromal altogether. So far as any judicial decision has beengiven by the recognized courts on the provisions I have referred to in the Exchequer Court Act, the law now stands that the Government, since 1887, is liable for inj:w:se on public works arising out of torts or negligence onthe part of Govermment officials. Now, the position we stand in is this. I take it, Julge Burliilge's decision only affects cases which have arisen sulbsequently to the passage of the law. It does not include, or was not intended to include previons cases, and certainly the case hefore him did not oblige him to make any reference to cases which arose previous to the passage of the law. So that we stand in this position, that if a man suffered an injury or an accinlent on a particular date in 1887 , he has 110 remedy : but if he suffered accident under similar circumstances on a Giovernment road the day after, he would have it remedy. -The hon. gentlenan will see that that would lie a case of gross injustice, which the (iovermment would at once interfere with aunl prevent. Now, in this case there is a question of fact on which the liability of the fovernment ought to depend. Wis or was not the axle which caused the accident partially broken before, so that there would be negligence on the part of employes in sending a train out with a broken axle: If that is fomm to be so by a competent tribumal, then, I submit, this man hats a case which the fiovernment will recognize. In the case of McLeol and the other passengers on the train which suffered the injury, and which was leefore 1880 , before the Robertson case, and in which the supreme Court gave judgnent that the Crown was not liable, the Giovermment, notwithstanding, intervened and paid them very reasonable sums of money. McLeod, I think, got Sli, (MN), and the others sums ranging down to Sl, (XH) each. But in all cases where the injuries were severe, the (iovernment considered that, if not legally liable, they were morally liable, and recognized that by paying something which the parties accepterl. In this case we have a wrong, and we are without remedy simply because the injury happened before a particular lay. If it happened after the Exchequer Act passed, we would have had our remedy in that Act; and I am quite sure, when I bring these facts to the notice of the Minister of Justice, he will see that some recognition of this man's case should he made. That he suffered serious injuries is beyond peralventure. He was a passenger under contract hy a ticket. His wife and he were being conveyed from one point to another on the Government road. The axle broke, the car turned over two or three times, and his wife was seriously hut. fortunately, not permanently injured, and the hushand was permanently injured, in fact, has never been the sime man since, and his case is one which, I think, ought to receive recognition at the hands of the Government. All he can do is to throw himself upon the mercy of the Government. At any rate, $I$ have arlvised him, and I believe his solicitor did, that in his, is in the case of the Queen ex. Mcleon, it is useless to tile a petition of right, and all he should do is to appeal to the mercy of the Crown. To that he has appealed through me, and I respectfully submit his appeal. All the circumstances of the case, and the fact that Parliament has passed a law recognizing the liability of the Crown in certain cases, impel me to the conclusion that this man's case shonld receive recognition, at any rate to this ex. tent, that the fact upon which the moral liability of the liovernment ought to depend, ought to be investigated, and if found in his favour, his claim shonld be recognized ; and I present the case in his behalf. The facts are all in the Department of Railways, and I think they will he found to be just as I have stated them.

Sir JOHN THONPSON. The principle to which the hon. gentleman refers is a very important one, and I desire to say a few words upon the motion before it passes, just for that reason. I presume the hon. gentleman has carefully considered the subject. From the motion he has made today, I should suppose that the case did not come within the principle he relies upon as having been lail down in the case of the City of Quebec against the Queen, but that it comes within the class of cases, in which MeLeorl $\because$. the gueen is the leating one, as to the remenly against the Crown for wrongs arising out of a contract. If so, it will be worthy of consideration, whether that doctrine has not been monlitied or overruled hy the recision of the Privy Council, in the case of the Windsor and Annapolis Railway (ompany against the Queen, in which the same defence was relied upon by the Crown, unsuccessfully with reg:nd to a lease. I do not want to say more upon that point, lecause I may have to argue the other side if this case goes on, but I want to sity a few words upon the puestion of the change of law as represented hy the Fixchequer jurlgment. Now, I think that the section upon which the corse of the City of Quebec: amel the ? queen turns is not intembed to relate so much to the cases of wrongs arising from a contract, although perhaps it covers those as well, as to accidents in the management or construction of public works by persons who have no contractual relations with the Crown. It wis not intended by Parliament to change the law upon that subject. The section which the julge sias did extend the jurisdiction of the court, and the right of the subject before the Exchequer Court, was previously contained in the Public Works Act, and was limited simply to giving power to refer these matters to the board of arbitrators, aml the effect was not to give any right against the Crown, but simply to afford the opportunity of having an investigation. The learned juige of the Fxchequer Court thinks that the Act now gives a remedy against the Crown which alid not exist before, in regard to damages calused by the faulty construction or operation of a pullic work. The contention of the Crown is that it was intended to give jurisdiction to that court only where the right of the subject already existed, and that it was not intemded to enlarge the right. The jurge has further decided that, in a case against the Crown, where there was no contractual relation between the party and the Crown, where it was a case of a lat who was put off the train, he being it trespesser, the Crown was liable. We took an appeal in that ciase, lut the point was not decided. It went off on another point, so we have never had any decision upon this sulbject except that of the Exchequer Court judge. If it should be decided that the law has been changed in that important feature, the matter will have to be carefully considered by the department. The cases which occurred before the present law came into force will have to be carefully considered, and Parliament will no doulit have to restore the Act to the same position in which it was before.
©Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) There is no cloubt that the decision of the Privy Council in two different cases conflicts with the decision which was given by the Supreme Court of Canarla in the case of the Queen is. McLeod, but, while a wealthy man might take such a case home to the Privy Council, this man Robertson is not a wealthy man, and cannot afford to run the chance that, the decision of the Fxchequer Court being one way, and the decision of the Supreme Court the other way, he might succeed before the Privy Council. He has either to sulumit in silence or to be relieved by the mercy of the Government, and it is to that mercy

I am appealing. It seems to me unjust and unreasonalle that, if the Government go into the business of carrying passengers between two points, and if in so carrying them a man is injured through the neligence of their employes, that man should not have a remedy. As a matter of fact, the : : vernment have not acted on that harsh view of the law in other cases. They have always acted upon the merits of the case, as far as I know, and have done justice to the parties on the merits, and in any of these cases which have been brought by petition of right in the Supreme Court of Canada and decided against the suppliant, the Government have said that, although the letter of the law may be against you, we will pay you the damage you have sustainet. I think the Government ought to act in that way in any case of this sort. These are the only two cases I know of. This man Robertson was for years, in consequence of the injury he receivel, unahle to attend to his business, and, though he is somewhat better now and able to move around, he is really injured for life, and I think his case should receive the kindest attention of the Department of Railways. I hope the Minister of Justice will see his way to adrise such action to be taken as will enable this man to try his case somewhere or other, if the Government does not do him justice. It would be a gross injustice if he should be deprived of that right simply on the grounds which have been alleged.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I do not see how the case could be investigatell further than it has leen.
Mr. Davies (P.E.I.) It might he left to artitration.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I would have no objection to such a reference heing made to the Excheguer Court, but it would depend altogether upon the decision in the MaLeod case.

INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY.

Mr. WOOD (Westmoreland), for Mr. MeDoegald (Pictou), moved for:
Return containing a statement of expenditure out of income niade for permaninent inprovements, extensions, additions and betterments, exclusive of works of ordinary maintenance and renewals., on account of the Intercolonial Railmay from 30 th' 'June, 1881, to 1st July, 1891 . The returu to show such expenditure in summary form for each branch of service as nearly as can be conveniently ascertained from the accounts.
He said: In explanation of this motion, I wish to say that the opinion is generally prevalent in the Maritime Provinces that for some years past, under the method of book-keeping adopted in reference to the Intercolonial Railway, very considerable expenditures, which by private companies are charged to capital account, have been charged against ordinary income. This opinion is confirned by the reports of the Minister of Railways. In several of the annual reports, Mr. Schreiber has called attention to the fact that expenditures have been made during the year anil provided for out of urdinary income which could not be properly considered as works of ordinary operating or maintenance. In one report, 1886, he mentions a specific sum of $$ 150,000$, which was charged in this way. We have been unable to gather from the published reports the amount of the expenditures of this nature, and the object of this motion is to ohtain a return which will show the amounts which during the last ten years have been charged to ordinary income, and which might properly be charged to capital account.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell) moved for:

Copy of all reports made by the Minister of Finance relating to his offcial visit to the British West Indies in reference to a more extensive trade with those colonies: also, the speeches which the Minister of Finance made at Kingston and elsewhere in the West Indies on the subject of trade between the British West Indies and Canada. together with any correspondence which may have since taken place upon the subject with the Colonial Office and with the West Indiam authorities.
He said: I make this motion for the purpose of formally calling the attention of the Minister of Finance, and the Minister who leads tie House, to the sulject. The Minister informed us that this correspondence would be brought down, if there was any. I mentioned some of these papers which clearly do exist, and which are not $y$ et in possession of the House.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I made a short explanation the other night about this subject. 1 said I was under the impression that no report had been made by the Minister of Finance relating to his visit to the West Indies in reference to more extensive trade. I am inclined to think that is still the case. However, there can be no objection to the motion being passed. I am sure the whole House will sympathize with the hon. member's desire that any speeches which the Minister of Finance may have made, should be laid upon the Table of the House, because they always contain a great deal of information, and are matters of great satisfaction to the House. I am sure that we shall be delighted to bring them down if they have been preserved in such a manner as their importance entitled them to be preserved, and to be made a part of the records. I do not think that any correspondence has taken place with the Colonial Otfice or with any one else upon the subject. In case there should be any correspondence with the Colonial Office or with the West Indian authorities, it will be brought down.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). I may say, in reply to the jocsoe observations of the Minister of Justice, that there are communications with the Colonial Office that are mentioned in the correspondence brought down last year, that are not yet before us. With regard to the merit of the speeches to which I have referred, we will be better able to judge when we have an opportunity of reading them. That they exist, or did exist, is a fact : what their merits may be we cannot say, and I think it would be premature to criticise them until they are in our possession. Some of us may not have the same faith in the supereminent abilities of the Minister in that particular, that is possessed by his colleague. Our faith in that respect may not be a saving faith, but that possessed thy the Minister of Justice very clearly is of that character. But let me say this further, that I know that the uniform English practice, where speeches are made in connection with a mission, is for these speeches to be reported and communicated as part of the official proceedings. If the hon. gentleman will turnto the correspondence that has, from time to time, taken place between the Governors and the Colonial Office, he will find that is the invariable practice; and I supposed that this Government, when they send an official representative abroad, would, to some extent, follow that same rule and hold him to the onlinary official responsibility. But, Sir, I know that parliamentary govermment has not a great deal of merit in the eyes of hon. gentlemenopposite, and that they enjoy an immunity in this respect not allowed to Imperial officers. So it may he that these papers have never been communicated to His Excellency or to His Excellency's responsible advisers. I assume that the rule here would be the same as it is in the United Kingdom, and that when a Minister goes abroad and acts officially on behalf of any Government, he owes to that Government an extra ministerial responsibility, similar to the responsibility which is possessed by a person appointed to that particular position alone. But if the ordinary English principle of ofticial responsibility has been disregarded here, it is important that we should know it ; it is important that wherever there is a very wide departure from constitutional usage and constitutional principles, there should be a reversion on the part of the Government to first principles, and it is important that the House should take its olservations anew, and ascertain precisely where it stands, and, perhaps, correct the vagaries into which the for: ernment and their officials have fallen.
Mr. Davies (P.E.I.)

Care and maintenance of drill sheds, rifie ranges, buildings, &c.............. $$ 38,000$
Mr. McMULLEN. I notice that Major-Cieneral Herbert in his report recommended that a different course be adopted with regard to the care of arms. The impression I have gathered from reading that report is that a great many of the arms in charge of the volunteers are sacrificed for want of proper care, and for want of proper places in which to keep them. Suggestions have been made with regard to the adoption of improved arms for our volunteers, and if they are obtained I think it is an alsolute necessity that proper places should be provided where they can be stored with sufety. (ieneral Herbert recommends that there should be an otticer attached to each battalion to have the entire charge of the arms, who should be held responsible tor their heing properly cleaned and taken care of. I would like to know whether there is any intention, on the part of the new Minister of Militia, to make any alterations in the direction of General Herbert's recommendation?

Mr. BOW ELL. Although this question was discussed the sther night, and although it is not properly under the consideration of the committee now, I have no hesitation in repeating what I then said, that it is one that will receive my most earnest and careful consideration. I have long been of the opinion which the hon. gentleman has expressel: hut a difficulty always surrounds a change of system, particulanly in the rural sections, where the companies are so scattered, of oltaining proper places at anything like moderate expense. But I can assure the committee that this is one portion of the Major-(ieneral's report to which I shall give my attention, with a riew to effecting the improvement, if it is possible to do so within the means at my disposal.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I was asked by a number of volunteers who called on me before I came to the House, to bring to the attention of the Minister what they considered to be something in the nature of a grievance. Last year the number of men allowed to drill was cut down very largely, to their very great regret. There is a very strong military spirit existing, particularly in the city corps, and the men are very proud of their different corps, in drill, dress parade and everything else, and they called my attention to the fact that they have been allowed hitherto to drill more than their proper guota. In 1889 they were allowed 449 men, in 1890 that was cut down to 321 , in 1891 they drilled 344 or 23 more, which the Militia Department afterwards simetioned, and last year they were cut down to 325 , which they think is far below the number they are entitled to.

Mr. BOWELL. There was a partice that had crept into the service of battalions having more men for drill than provided for in the regulations. The Minister of Militia, whenever his appropriation would allow him to do so, paid the extra expense. In fact, he went beyond his appropriation in almost every case, and allowed it. The present MajorGeneral, being a strict disciplinarian, refuses to sanction the payment of more men than the number provided in the regulations. As regards the volunteers of Prince Edward Island being cut down in number, I fancy that arose from the want of money. For a number of years past we have voted only $\$ 250,000$ for drill purposes, and the cost for the last three years has averaged $52 \% 5,000$. The difference has been paid out of whatever amounts could be saved in the other appropriations. The Auditor General pointel out that that wis not strictly in accord with the rules of Parliament and the Audit Act, and I told him I should endeavour to keep within each individual estimate, if possible, and would cut down the estimate of those items, the full amount of which has not been expended, and and the $\mathbf{S i n}^{2},(0 \times)$ to the item of chill, as that amount was necessary to drill the number anmally drilled during the past years, numbering about $\mathbf{2 0}$, (KO men. Personally, I should be very much gratified if the Government could see its way clear to appropriate $\mathrm{S} .50,(\mathrm{nN})$ more than they do, as from the information I have received, even exercising the greatest ecomomy, it would cost alont $\mathrm{SH}(\mathrm{O}), 0(0)$ to Trill the whole force.

Mr. DAVIEN (P.E.I.) Of course if the hon. gentleman is not proviled withmoney by the House, he camot expend it. I would just like to read the patagraph in the letter I received, in case I have not explained it sutficiently :
" Previous to the present year four companies of the 82nd Batalion, three of artillery, and the Charlottetown Engineers were ordered for drill, whereas this year only four companies were ordered in all, two of artillerv, one of engineers, and one of the $82 n d$ Battation. New Brunswick and Nora Scotia do not appear to have suffered in this manner, because the number called out there is in excess of presious years."
I thought I would bring this to the attention of the committec, so that next year the complaints of these gentlemen may lee attended to.

Mr. SUTHERLAN1). Is it the intention of the Government to furnish helmets to the volunteer force:

Mr. BOWELL. That is another instance where it would require a great deal of money.

Mr. NGTHERIAND. I have brought this matter hefore the attention of the department on several occasions. I believe it is the desire of the officers of the force that a helmet should be furnished. Every gentleman comected with the force will agree that it is in the interests of the militia that these helonets should be furnished. If it is for want of money that they are not procuren, it has been intimated from loth sides of the Honse, without dissent, that we are willing to vote the money. The hon. member for Frontenac pointed out on several occasions how this provision could be made at a very small cost, and I hope the Minister will consider the matter. There is no reason why this expense should fall upon those officers who give their time and money in maintaining the force.

Mr. BOWFLL. How long will these helmets last:

Mr. SUTHERLAND. About ten years.
Mr. BENNETT. If a grant should be made for that purpose, the County Council of Simeoe, who have supplied the men of the Simcoe battalion with helmets, should be reimbursed the cost.

Mr. INGRAM. Is the department in the habit of furnishing the bands of battalions with uniforms?

Mr. BOW ELLL. I understand they are furnished with the regular uniform and nothing beyond that.

Royai Military College of Canada...... $$ 75,000$

Mr. MULOCK. I woull ask the Minister how many graduates there were from this college during the past year? It appears to me that there are 18 altogether. If that is correct, that there were only 18 graduates from this college last year, I would call the attention of the Minister to the financial aspect of the case. During the last year, not having any reference whatever to the capital invested in buildings, either for the college or for any of the staff-and that capital amoments to a good deal-having reference only to the actual cost of maintenance for the year ending the 30th June, 1891, we find that there was expendeal in that way S69,248.4!.

Mr. BOWELI. From that you shouhl reduct the fees paid, and that will show the actual expenditure. The hon. gentleman is correct in stating that the expenliture amonnted to $\mathbf{S} 69,248$, but the ammal subscription fees and payments for issue of clothing, \&c., amounterl to 821,306 , making the total cost of the college, 847.942 .

Mr. MULOCK. No doubt that is correct, but the expenditure for the maintenance of the college was $$ 69,248$, and there were only eighteen graduates. I find that, including the statf, Major- (ieneral Cameron and the professors, there are about eighteen professors, and looking at the Aulitor General's Report, which is my only source of information, I find there are some twenty non-commissioned ofticers and others employed there inarlition to the eighteen profeswors, making at least forty persons who are engaged in carrying on the work of this college. As there were only eighteen graduates last year, and the college cost $$ 69,248.49$, it appears that it cost us $83,847.12$ for each graduate we turned out during the year. I do not think any comment I can make can add to or detract from the startling result I have given to the committee. I am toll that these graluates, hating got the ellucation which this college affords. in large numbers leave the country, so that we are educating them for other parts of the worll. I am told that, whilst it was originally part of the policy in connection with this college that its graduates should receive to some extent inducements to enter the service of Canada, that has not been adhered to. I am told, for example. that, while there is a departmental order that instructors in the permanent corps should le graduates of this college, that orier has not been lived up to, and that men have been appointed instructors to the permanent corps without having first received that qualitication they should have received, that they have been appointerl to instruct, and that, after they were so appointed, they have been sent to the colles!e to learn their lessons in order to be qualified. A couple of weeks ago, I received a communication from a person hearing on this subject, and he enclosed an extract from a newspaper published in Canada, setting forth a number of names of gentlemen who had recently joined the Military College at Kingston, and amongst those are three gentlemen who are described as being at that time instructors in the permanent corps. They are Lieut. C. Fiset, of St. dohn's, Que., Lient. A. V. Fages, of St. John's, Que., and Lieut. A. E. Carpenter, of Fredericton, N.B. These three, accorling to the newspaper extract I have, had the appointments and were at that time engaged as instructors in the permanent corps, and were afterwards sent to the Military College to qualify themselves and to learn how to instruct. If there were vacancies in the permanent corps for instructors, when these unqualified persons were appointed, it seems to me that the department should have appointed those who had graluated, those who had at this enormous expense receivel the instruction which the college supplies, and. should have let others wat until they had oltained their proper technical qualification before they were appointed w these offices. I do not know whether the Minister san infom the committec hom many stailents there are in attemilanceat the college, bint the output shows that the cost of IS graduates is letween $$ 3,(k M)$ and $$ 4($ Mn $)$ a head. I for not know that it is material, nor dees it at all get orer the main feature of this charge-- for l think it most lie eonsidered a chatge of looseness athe extrata Erance... to say that half of the cost is lorne liy the Bathets. Whatever they pay goes into the common fanl. and the athinistration of this college result: in the eros leing it the rate I have mentionerl, no matter who are the paymatsters. This state of affairs, I think, shomld not he allowed to eontime, add I hope that the new brom we have will sweep a waty a litele of the dust that seems to be hovering wor the whole department.

Mr. Boll GiI.L. I have listened withag good deal of interest to the remarks mate liy the hon. member fir North Vork (Mr. Mulock). He seems tobe miler the impression that the amonnt which he says hats leen expemled, is all home by the comotry. He shond have deducted the S 의, 30 which were paid by the calets. It is true that it costs the amomnt per head mentioned by the hon. member to canry on the school. but it does not cost the comatry quite as much as that.

Mr. MULOC'K. How much do you make it?
Mr. BUWFFIL. I did not make the computat tion. But yon may take the sum of SFi,94: instead of 569,948 and divile by the number of graduates. In reference to the appointment of officers to which the hon. gentleman has referred, I can say to him that I have inaugurated a new policy, and refuse positively to appoint any one to a position, either in the infantry schools or elsewhere on the permanent force, until they have atequired that qualification which is provided for them in the military school. An irregularity may have crept in in the past, but it is never too late to mend, and I intend to begin at once in that direction. In reference to the employment of the graduates of that college, it is to le regrettel that we have uot sufficient places to provide for the whole of them : but I find, in looking at the returns which have heen placed in my hands, that out of 17.5 sraduates, lok) are now in the employment of this fiovermment, or in the Imperial Army. I think this is a very impertant fact, becanse it is important, as longas we are part and portion of the British Empire, that young Canadians should have a fair share of the honours that are given in the Imperial Army. The cadets to which I refer, and which have been gazetted to commissions, number: $\boldsymbol{\Omega}$ in the Cavalry, O() in the Royal Artillery, 32 in the Royal Engineers, and 26 in the Infantry, making a total in the limperial service of 80 graduates of our college. This speaks well for their qualifications. As Canarlians, we ought to le proul of the fact that so many of them are employed in that service. In addition to these, 9 ex-cialets have been appointed to commissions in the Mounted Police, 3 are in the Schools of Artillery, $\boldsymbol{\sim}$ in the Schools of Infantry, ani 2 on the staff of the Royal Military College; which, along with the 80 holding positions in the Imperial Army, make a total of 96 cadets, who have obtained permanent employment. In addition to these, one is now Assistant Superintendent of the (iovernment Cartridge Factory one is Arohite in the Faginter ${ }^{\circ}$ branch of the Militia Department, one is on the superior statfi of the college, and one is in the Roval Artillery, making the total number of $I(K):-$ so that they hae been whably well provined for in the Imperial Army and in ond own service. I may ahld that there are a number of these gralnates whone employed in the department of Rathays anm (anals, some on the railuays. ami more on the camals. It has been the policy of the (iovermment to utilize the services of these youg men who have proved themvelves capable and have passed ereditable examinations, wherever we can doss.

Mr. (ASEY. How many hoh enmmamb in the military force:

Mr. BUWEFLL. I lo mot kmen.
Mr. CANEV. Do, yon know if any do:
Mr. Boll EI.L. I cammot spak positiveiy. They all holl commissions, that is. when they pats exanimations they leave the college with the: rank of lientenant.

Mr. CASE: But they are mot atotlly in the ranks of the volunteers:

Mr. Bowtil. Some are
Mr. CASEX. Will the hom. Minister, withonta formal motion, fime wht and have that brought down:

Mr. Bowfil. I will try.

Mr. NULOCK. Fventakingrthe Ministersmonle of lealing with the figures, it appears that the const fer rapifa of each graduate during the past year, was, as I have stated before, $\mathbf{3} 3,8+5.12$. If we di vide that cost between the comintry and the graluates, it appears that the comntry hore the amomit of SO, (i66 per head, and the callets paideach $81,181.10$, so that the cost to the country was at least 59,1666 per head, to say mothing of what eath graduate had to contribute liesides into the common fumd. Ihare not made a calculation as to the total cost of the maintenance of this college since its estallishment : but assuming that it has been romuing for some twelve years at an ammal expenditure of about

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. Longer than that.

Mr. MULOCK. I was throwing off a few years at the commencement when the expenditure must have heen lighter than it is now. I presume that this rate of expenditure was not in full swing for the first few years.

Mr. BOWELL. I think it was entablished in 1876.

Mr. MULOCK. In order not to make an orerestimate, I was making an average calculation, and estimated that this rate of expenditure has been going on for tuelve years; lrecalnse the Minister soys there has been $1 \%=$ graduates of the college since it was established. I was emleavouring to ascertain, in a rough way, what the cost has heen per graduate of these $1 \%$ men. The expense during 12 years, at the average rate of the past year, has been s840,060. In addition, a very large sum has been expended on capital accomnt. So it is fair to saly that the country has spent $\$ 1,(0)(0),(k)$ during this period to turn out $17 \%$ graduates, or, in other words, at a cost of siti, $\overline{0} 4$ per head. If we only took cognizance of those graduates who have continued in connection with Canala, the number $1-\mathrm{I}$ would hate to be relluced one half for those who have dome intu another service. True, it is a service in which we are deeply interested, and I wond not he inclined to criticise that expenditure merely becanse the callets have joined the Imperial service, hat still. for the purpose of umberstanding where our mones goes and where our men go. it is $f_{\text {fit }}$ to hear in minh so far as direct benctit to (and anl: is concemed, if lenelit acornes, from these men remaining in our service in this country, that onehalf of the 1 a have gone away, and the remamer
 That is the position we occupy as regards the maintemance of this college.

Mr. Foxitere. It is a pretty hatel way of calculatime.

Mr. MLLock. It will he fomm, oninvestigating the atcounts, that Ihare been over-liberal. The areage cost will prove to he more than the figures I hare named. I thonght. two or three yearsago. the dinermment were making a very great mistake in expending so large a stan in purchasing a residence for the commamlant. His salary is not sufficicnt to Warmant such an expensive establishment. Sle. (NN Wats pail for the house in the tirst instance a dwelling which was described ats somewhat palatial in its extent. This wats an expenditure on capital aceount which we were in no waty called upon to inewr, and each year we find the Public Acermits burlened with items for its maintenance. Fivery time a public building is purchased for the pablic service there arises an ammal charge for mantenance and repairs. These ald to the invest ment of capital. and these items are a fair charge arainst the institution with which they are comnected. The 1 :overnment are loading down this institution with professoms and instructors. I supprse there is one servant in the college for every two callets, and I presime there are In employes in the college to-day. Will the Minister say how many umlergraluates there are in attendance:

Mr. BoWEL.L. I will give the lon. gentleman the information shortly.

Mr. MULOCK. I will late the matter in this pasition, simply calling the attention of the new Minister of Militia to the aboses that exist there and which demanl his immediate attention.

Mr. DENISON. I wish to say only a worl or two. The hon. gentleman seems to imasine that the men who graduate from tise college all go to the British Army and are lost to Canadia. Of course that is mot the case, because they are merely continuing their education there. They are contimuing it in an excellent school, a practical school. in which they have a chance of serving in all quarters of the globe, and obtaining a practical knowlealge of the duties of a soldier. They do that much in the same way as graduates from our universities go to other universities to complete their studies. All this is done at the expense of Eugland, and causes a real sating to this comntry. These men wouk he only too glad to come back to Canarla if she refuires their services. They do come back, in fact, all the time, and we have them in our military college as instructors. There is one suggestion I brought forward last session, or the ses. sion lefore, which it is desirable the Minister shonld see his way to arlopt, and it is this : the British Govermment gives four commissions to the griduates of the Royal Military (ollege. If the Canadian dovermment would encourage the camdidates by giving four prizes, by way of employment in the Railways and (anals Department, of some other department, where they would be useful, or if, instead of four, they gave two such posi tions, this system would allow those who did not desire to enter the army, at once to step into the Civil service where they would prove useful men. hecause they are highly trained in all matters of an engincering character. I think it would be heneficial if something of that kind were adopted.

Mr. BOWVEL. The mumber of carlets in the college I find to he di3.

Mr. MULOOK. Sothere are 16 or 17 professoms. the commandiant. nearly 20 nom-commissioned otticers amd employes. on wh an areage of two-thirdsof an employe for eath callet. The ex-Minister smiles: it is a langhing matter to him. I an sure, hut mot to the taxpayers.

Mr. Mralld.F.N. I happenen to he in the House when the question of it residence for the commandant was muler consileration. The Oppo sition found very serions fatelt with the proposial to purchase a residence at a considerable distance from the Military college. It was then urge that the commandants residence cond be erected within the grounds of the college, or in close proximity. I understand, howerer, it is two miles distant. Inotice by a reference to the Auditor Ceneral's Report. that street-car fares and other expenses are charged in connection with the residence. It also appeats that the country has furmished the residence and supphied it with necessary articles. At C-2.) of the Auditor deneral's Report, I find items in connection with the residence as follows:-Cooking stove. S85: supplies for the same. S15.17 : stove and pipes for stable, sois: tire guards, $\operatorname{siz}$; fixing pipes, 81.00 : hardwool. 4 cords, 521.60 ; hunch wool, $1 \frac{1}{2}$ cords, 4.38 : coal, 1.5 tons at $56.2 \overline{5}$, $f$ at Then, waterworks, one yar, $\$ 34.41$; gas, at 52 a thousand, $\$ 11.5 .40$ : meter, S2. ( 2 : telephone, one year, 880 . Now, all these items for the commandant's residence in Kingston, have cost us, in addition to his salary, 今ito4.43 for last year. 1 cammot understand why we are called upon to paty all these expenses for the commandant's residence. Wias it an understond arrangement, when he was appointed to perform the duties of his office, that we were to supply all the necessaries of his residence, down to the stove, and the stove for his stable: For my own part, julging from the remarks clropperl from the hon, member for York (Mr. Mulock), I think it is quite clear that this college, from the way it has been run at Kingston, is a white elephant on our hands. It has cost the country altogether tro much money. altogether more than is necessary : and if it can be run in a more economical manner. I earnestly hope that the present Minister of Militia, supporting the character for economy that he has gained, will either wipe it out, or put it on a different footing. The hom. member for York states that there are 18 otticials, and in addition there are 12 to $1 . i$ servants, that makes 30, with some other minor officials in connection with the college. We have only turned out the very limited number of graduates that was stated to the House last year; and the entire number in attendance at the college, the Minister of Militia says, is $6 \mathbf{3}$. It appears to me, that if that institution wats umber proper care and economical superintendence, it ought to be rom for a cery much less sum than it is now. I would like to know from the Minister. what is the salary of the commandant at present?

Mr. FOSTER.
Mr. MovULLAFN. I understond he was engaged for $\leq 4,(x)$.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. The salary is $\mathbf{S 3} \mathbf{3} .2(\mathrm{~K})$, and there was an allowatice of Sx(A) for house-rent and fuel. Then they purchased the house and stopped the Ss(x).

Mr. Mr.MULI.EN. If I mulerstand the hon. member for Frontenat (Mr. Kirkpatrick), they have mot stopperl the furnishing of supplies. How is it that the supplies are all chargerl in the way they are here:

Mr. BoWELL. I am infomed this charge for supplies is an exceptional sum paid for some reason or other. The cook stove was a range that was put in, and the pipes and fixtures, of course, would be in connection with it. 1 understand that he was to lee paid a fixed salary. and that quarters were to he furnished for him: whether it was in the city proper or near the haruacks, was a matter of very little consequence. In fatare I shall take care that these charges are not incurred by the (iovermment unless the commandant. muler his agreement, with the (iovemment, is entitled to them. That is the omly explanation I can give. I remember distinctly the discussion that took place when this residence Was purchased for the commandant, and it was then shown that the rent which had leen paid was more than the interest at $&$ per cent on the amonnt that was paid for the builling, so that as a business transaction it was no loss to the country. The House can umderstand that repairs would have to be made to any residence which would have to be provided for a gentleman like Major Cameron, or any one occupying his position. If he has a superior building, the repairs are not likely to cost so much as would the repairs of an inferior lailding. Under all the circumstances, consilering the matter from a financial stampoint, there is no actual charge upon the country over and above that which we would have to pay under the former arrangement. Whether the school shonh be continued, or whether some attempt should le mate to reduce the expenditure, is a matter which shall receive the attention of the forermment. There are many reasons why the school should be continued, although from an economical point of view it might be argued that the school should be abolished altogether. But if we are to have a school, it must The one that will be a credit to Canala in any part of the world where the cadets may go: otherwise we had better not have any school at all.

Mr. McMULLEN. I am glad to hear the state. ment made by the Minister of Militia with regard to eliminating such charges as are set out in the Auditor General's Report in commection with the commandant's residence. I think it is better, where we engage men in that way with stated salaries, that they should provile these things for themselves. Now, with regard to the honse. The Minister looks upon it as a fair investment at 4 per cent. Any person that has any knowledge of property and of keeping buidings in repair, is aware that it will take 4 per cent at least to keep huilhings in a habitable comdition: and by the time yon pay the insurance and make the necessary repaits to the buildings every year. you will find that yon will not be able to do it for very much less than 4 per cent. For instance, that bilhing cost sil?.(14n), + per cent upon that sum would le $$ 480$. Now. you will tind that it will cost a considerable sum each year to keep that building in such a comdition as that the commandant will be satistien to live in it, and you will virtually have to pay double that sum, or Sebil a year. From all I can gather with regard to the handling of this institution, it ap, pears to be a very expensive omament to ond mili. tia force. and I hope that umler the vigorons and searching insestigation of the new head of the department. we will hate a very much reluced expenditure.

Xit. FLIST. I do not think the Military College presents as gome a record to the comitry as the Dilitia lepartment and the members in this House, who are members of the militia force would like to make it appear. I think the repartment thernselves, or their othicers, must he to a certain extent to blame for this fact. We have positive infomation given to the Honse and to the country concerning this institution. that it is costing from S $40 .(K M)$ to $\operatorname{Sin},(K N O$ a year. This is certainly a sul). ject worthy of note. We have here the report of the Minister of Militia amd Defence, which contains: the comments of the (ieneral Otficer Commanding on the state of our military affairs. That report is recognized on all hands as heing a very searching and raluable one to those who wish tolook into the expentiture and ascertain the condition of the. military service : and I think that the General will receive the thanks of the Govermment and the people for his comments. which are so frank and apparently so fair. I regretted to notice, however, that he was not asked to report on the Military Col: lege. I had a sinceredesire osstuly the affiars of the oollege, for the purpose of information, andin order to assist the Govermment and the Houseas far asi could in reaching sound conclusions in regard to its management. I think it would be interesting and valuahle to the people of this country that, in his next report to the iovermment, the Gieneral should le asked to report on that college. I think it prohable that he hats suffered some inconvenience from the incompleteness of the report placed in his hands by the commandant of the college. Cinsidering that this institution costs us from $\$ 40,0$, 1 to son, (106) a year, the report upon it placed in his hands is certainly very inalequate. The hon. memher for North York (Mr. Mulock) searched in vain through the very few pages of the report to find some of the itenis most necessary to enable him to look into its affairs. I think the commandant of that institution should furnish the Government and the people with a full report of it, along with some supplementary pages learing on its history, so that those who are the friends of the institution, as I claim to be myself, wonld be in a position to defend it if it is defensible, and that we should find there the information which is only now twisted and coaxed from the Minister, I do not say unwillingly, but because he has it not ready under his band. Those who have prepared the eport are certainly blameworthy for nothaving furnished the Ministry and Par!iament with all the requisite information on these subjects.

I low $\begin{gathered}\text { el at the report to ascertain the total number }\end{gathered}$ of students in attembance amb grahating in each class. and the aterage cost of each, but in vain. There is not a secondion a thind class college in the Iominion that will not give a hetter report of its doings. I hope that when we disobss the militia estimates another year, we shall hate such infomation in our hamds in regam to the Military College ats will enable us to reath a eomelusion whether the money spent in mantaninge it is a wise expentithere or whether it is, as it appears on its face to he a waste of money: It appears that each callet Probathly there are pupils in the school who do not take the full eomse, and on this account there shombl be a dednetion: hat owing to the pancity of the information given to us we are really not in a position to judge as we ought to lee.

Mr. CASFM. I camot agree in one respeet with my hon. friend who has just sat down. He says he is a friend of this colleage. I helieve this coillege was institatel with the best of motives. with the intention of turning out a trained and highly-skilled benly of officers to instract our rolunteers and to form the mucleus of a latger bonly of well-traned otficers who should he a wailable in case of need. But, Sir, ahthough that college was instituted during the time my friends were in power, I am compelled to say that experience has proved it to be a costly and useless fad, and I camot call it by any other name. We have had it in operation for fifteen years. and the average yearly number of graluates in that time has been milei a dozen. I have not gone hack through the Public Accounts to see what it has cost erery year. hut this year it has cost the sum mentioned hy the hon. member for North Vork (Mr. Mulock), amoming, after the delluctions mentioned ly the Minister of Militia, to about so, (itio per graluate : and it must be remembered a hat those gralnates have been there four years and have cost alout as much every year as they have this year, making a total of something orer this year.

Mr. MULOCK. Fighteen gradnaters.

Mr. CANES. Well, that increases the cost. The fact is that we are now elucating the soms of wealthy men, and educating them at an expense that would keep them at Oxford or Cambridge ame secure for them a thoronghly gom generaleducation. It is practically a college for the soms of the rich, kept $u p$ at the expense of the tax-payers all over the country, be they rich or poor. The hon. Minister is correct in saying that the cadets have to pay a portion of their expenses; but the institution is so costly in operation that besides the si, bito which it costs us ench year for each graduate, the sums paid by the fathers of those carlets are sufficient to prevent those of morlerate means from sending their sons there. It is the dearest college in the country to the parents of the students, as well as the dearest college in the country to the state. I do not deny that a fair education is given there, though I do not think it gives as complete an erlucation in mathematies as can be got at the Provincial University, at Queen's College, or at several other institutions in the country. But 1 deny that there is any justification for making a present of this enormous contribution of $$ 10,(0) 0$

for each canlet to the parents who are rich enough to semel their sons to that college. it is virtually a present male liy the tax-payer to the parent of the cadet, and the crluation, althongh a very fatir onc. is padid for at an infinitely extravatgant rate ley the comutry. Now, the Minister of Militiat says that a hambred sut of mathondred and serenty-tive carlets in that collere either hold fiorernment pesitions on are in the Imperial Amy. and nearly all are in the latter service. Thus, nearly hatf of those it consts us $\leqslant$ SO.(KN) apiece to educate: are in the Imperial Army. What good does that do us: The hom. member for West Toronto says they will le muly ton ghal to come hatek in case of need. But it does not rest with them to come back. They have to go where they are sent, and if the Imperial dovermment orders them elsewhere they must go there. They are as much attached to the Imperial service as if they had graduaterl at samdhurst or Woolwich. More than that. he said they are. as it were, continuing their education, like the graluate of a college taking a post-gradnate course in another college. Nothing of the kind. That might be true if they entered the haperial Army for a fixed term and then retmmed here into our service. But they leave us for gool, they not mily learn their duties as solliers, hut acquire habit: which untit them to command (analian wohnteers. A man itecostomed for a long term of years to command regular soldiers is not the man we want as hatalion or company officer in (amalla. He shonld not stay longer in the regular service than is necessary to leath the techminte of his profession. anil then coma back and give his services to the comutry which has paid so enormously for his education. No canlet of Kingston should be allowed to accept a commission in the British Army withont signing atn agreement to come back at the end of a certain term of years, and then give his services to the Camadian volunteer force. If this entrance into the Imperial Army were limited to a short period of training like that, noboly could ohject, but I do absolutely protest against the taxpayers of Camala educating men at a cost of Slo, $0(n)$ each to fill positions in the lmperial Army. That army can afford to edlucate: its own ofticers. and it is none of our hasiness to educate otficers for them. The Minister makes a great proint of the fact that some of the ofticers are employed in the Mounted Police. Well, in the last tifteenyears we hal nine otficers, graduates of King. stom, serving in the Ganalian force, and two on the statf of the Dilitary College itself. In return for the millions spent on this college we have elevan otticer: altogether serving on the Canalian force. Then we are toll there are some in the bepartment of Railways and Canals. Well. we did not institute the Royal Military College of Canala for the purpose of elucating engineers to serve in the Department of Railways and Canals. If that college hat any object at all, if it was not a mere fad on the part of somelsely, its olject biats to elucate instructors and officers for our Canadian volunteer force, and in that it has utterly failed. I asked the Minister how many actually hold commissions in the volunteer force. He says they all get a certain rank on leaving the college; hut how many have got commissions: He could not tell, nor could his leputy. It is a pretty state of things that, after all this expenditure, neither the Minister nor his deputy ran tell us whether one or how many of these expensive carlets of the Military College are loing any service in the military force in Canada. The whole thing is an utterly disgraceful failure. If it were really useful, it would not now he, in the fifteenth year of its existence, only turning out 12 graduates a sear. If it hat suited the genius out every year who would take commissions in the volunters and do some service in return for the money spent on them. If you want a military college, why not have one to which volunteer officers could go and get an inexpensive training in drill and mamenvers and other matters which they need for the branch of the force to which they are attached. Youdonot need to give an ofticer of infantry whanteers any elaborate instruction in civil engincering and the use of heary gmis. The training is far alove what is required of any infantry officer in the British Army, and then, what do we do with them: We do nothing. We give them away to the British Army. We let them go to the States, where they get occupations ats civil engineers, and we lonse sight of them altogether. It is a most dis. graceful thing and a sign of the utter failure of the college that after all these years it is turning out so few callets, and the Militia Department does not know what hecomes of any of them except those who have commissions in the British Army and those who are employed in some hranch of our service for which they were not intended when sent to the college. It would le true econsmy and patriotism, even after all we have spent, to shut it up and apply the building to some other use. The whole system should be changed. and it shonld te made a college from which volumteers of this conntry conld he recruited with men highly trained in the duties belonging to their particular brameh of the service. At present it is nothing hat ath aristocratic tirst-class sciool for the sons of rich men, and it is no part of our duty, as the Dominion Legislature, to provide such a school for that class of stulents. It is directly contrary to our duty. It is a waste of publie money. I shall not go into details of the expenditure of the college, hut I wish to impress on the Government what has fallen from the hon. member for Wellingtom (Mr. Mc.Mullen as to the accounts for maintenance and repair. It does seem to me that a college so well built in the first place, should not require, amb, I believe, does not require, suchalarge amome of expenditureammally on repairs.

Mr. McMCLLEN. Did Ceneral Herhert make a report on this college or not:

Mr. Bowtell. The deputy tells me he is not aware whether there was a report or not.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. There is no doubt, whatever, that the statements made by the Minister of Militia to-night, do point to a very grave defect in the working of this college. Of the 17.) graduates to whom he has referred since the establishment of the college, it appears that so have found employment in the Imperial service, and a few more than on have found employment in the Canadian service. My friends beside me are yuite right in stating that that was not the intention of those who foundel the college. That college was founded, as was stated at the time. for the double purpose of supplying a number of trained otticers for our own service in the first plate, aml in the secoml place, it was considered that it might be of very great service that a number of paid engineers should be at the dis. posal of the (iovernment for use in various public works. There are many adrantages to be found in having trained engineers, trained in an establishment like that, emploved on the great works in the construction of which we have heen engaged for a long time. But that college was plamed originally for len cadets, and it was supposed that 24 or 30 would be almitted each yearI think it was 36 the first year and 04 thereafter. Now I understame the total number has sunk to ( $3: 3$. There is no doubt that that mumber is very far lelow what it should le, in view of the estal, lishment now maintained in the college, and I am not altogether surprisel at the criticisms of some of my hom. friends, as to the cost of this institution. Unless we should find that there are a sufficient number of persoms in (analia interested in getting their sons intu this institution to bring up the number to 24 or 30 per ammm, these discrepancies will continue to exist. I have for many years in sisted that the (isvermment should carry out the pledge which nas mate hy Mr. Mackenzie when he inaugurated this college. that a larger number of the gualified graduates should the employed in the Camadian service. The facts stated by the Minis. ter of Militia, though I suppose it is no fault of his, showed very dearly that that implied pledge has ne ee treen carried out. This college has been sending out graduates for thirteen or fourteen years. and in that time we have fomen employment in Canada for only ow or 2.3 out of $1 \overline{0}$. who passed. Learing nut the l(o), I helieve you will tind that .ol or bill of the remaining at have hecome ritizens of the United States. That is wot at all a state of things which comforms. to the inlea umler which the college was founded, amd I may take this opportunity to press upon the attention of the Minister of Militia the advisatility of causing a certain mumber of employments in the military or the Civil service to be placed at the disposal of the department for the lest qualitied graluates from year to vear. We wonld thus derive a very considerable adrantage from this college : hut it is clear that, if the total number has been resinced fron lill to almut (fio, there will lee a great oljection raised on the 'question of the expense of the college.

Mr. MlloCK. I desire to say that, in dran ing attention to this matter. I do not want it to le thought that I was moved ly any hostile feeling towards the college. but simply I was assuming that it was in the pullic interest that a college of this character should be maintained, if it is to le maintained. on an ecomomical hasis, and I feel that, in pointing out any abuses in conenection with that college. I am doing good service to the public.
Mr. BOWELL. The hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) stated that the college was intemded for 120 ). The memorandum I have is that the present number is 63 , but, if the dormitories are provided for, we would have a great many more. We have taken $\mathbf{$ 0} 0$, , (\%) for at few sessions past which has never been used, and I suggest that that might be struck ont altogether mitil we can see whether a larger number can be accommondated at a smaller cost.

Mr. MILA, (Buthwell). Two things repuire consideration in this matter. One is the ecomomic pmint. and the other the use to be marle of these fombs men after they have grallated. Our NorthWeat Police force heing of a semi-military character. there is an excellent oppormaty to sive emphorment to a munber of these men whose scientific tainime would make them very serviceable in con- : bevtion with that force. We know the eminent services which the West Point graduates have rembered in the United sitates, and this force ernhl have alsombed a very considerable number of the Grabates of this collegre as well as the Depatments of Railways and Puhlic Works. It would he of no smatl consequence to the combry, and would for away with a gowl deal of the opposition which this institation has met with of late. if the bovermment were to direct their attention in that direction. and were en enleavorr to secure the employment of these parties in the public service where the pubite: senvice would he benctited liy the experience and information which they posesesed.

Mr. Mr.MCLLEEN. I tindwe phrchased a sword for sill for presentation. I woulal like to know something alout that. I wombl like to know to whom that sword was presenter?. I also see there was an alvertisement in the Ottawa Cifion that (onst Sin). What wats that for:

Mr. BOWFEl. I really cammot tell you what the presentation sworl was for:

Mr. Mr.MULLF.N. I think this item should be helid over until we fimu out why dieneral Herhert hats not reported on: the comblition of this college. What is the use of having a (ieneral if he is not to report on the Military (ollege:

Mr. Bollelf. If you will look at the last paragraph of the Major-deneral's report you will see that he attaches $t w$ it a report mate hy the commandant of the school. There can le no object in holling oner this iten. But I will marle enguiry and inform the committee when we go into conimittee again, why the dienemal has not mate at repent.

Mr. MULOCK. I womh suggest that the item piss and that when the next item cones up, if any meminer desires to refer to the college again, the subject shall be open to disconsion. Is that melerstomel:

Mr. Boll ELL. I do not think that is a grocl way. We have beendiseussing. half the afternom, items that are ahrearly passed.

Mr. MadULILFN. I woula like eask whether it has leen the custom in past years to provide lerats and yachts for this sehool:

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. There are 70 young men there, and they have got tole kept enployed, they must have sources of amusement ame enjoyment to keep them out of mischief in their inle'hours. They are provided with an athletic gymmasitm. Every one who has ever been in charge of a school knows that sources of ambsement most be proviled for the attendants.

Mr. Mr.MULLEN. There must be plenty of yachts and loats for hire in the city of Kingston.

Mr. KIPKPATRICK. This is not in the city of Kingston ; the college is two miles away.

DFATH GF THF HON. AI.FXANIDEF MACKFN\%IF.

Sir IoHN THOMPSoN. Mr. Speaker, I think that the tirst duty which the House owes to its own history and to the comntry, on reassemhling after the vacation, is to motice the great loss which the Honse has sustained. ant which (anada hats sustamed. by the cleath of the hon. member for East Vork (Mr. Mackenzie). If it devolved "pon me to-lay $\cdot$ if it devolved upon anylwory. in-deed- tostate thegreat public services. the estimable chamacter and the worth of the late hon. member for Fiast lork, I would greatly prefer that that duty should have fallen to some of those among whom he served in public life when he was at his: prime. hecanse. when it was my gonil fortune and my honour to enter this Parliament, the hom. gentleman hat ceased to take that active part in pullicaffairs in which. for many years, he occupied so commanding a prosition ind did himself so much honowr and the country such useful, zealous services. Fortumately, however, for me, Mr. Speaker, the history of the comntry supplies what is cleficient in myself in this regaril. The achievements of the late hon. gentleman. his \%eal in the public service, the great position whirh he attained, not only officially in this conntry in eommection with its public affiaits, but in the estimation of the people of Cinanlat. are all part of the records of this country now. I can only say, on behalf of gentlemen who are cooperating with me in this Parliament, that 1 am expressing their sentiments when I state that the services which 1 hatre mentioned and the qualities which I have referred to ewoked from us the greatest esteem-those of us who were in the Honse when he was active in political struggles and those of us who had not then entered on our cluties here-and that we feel ats deeply, ats I am sure hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House must feel, that a great tribute of respect is due to the memory of the gentleman who devoted his great abilities, great zeal and great talents disinterestedly to the service of Canada. We feel, therefore, that it is incumbent upon the House out of respect, not ouly as 1 have said for its own history, but out of respect for the public feeling in Canada, that insteal of transacting the husiness which is on the Order Paper to-day, we should ask an adjourmment, and that the adjournment should take place until Thursday next in order that as many members of the House as feel able to do so may lee present at the funeral obsequies which I umlerstand are to take place in Toronto to-morrow. With these chiservations, Mr. Speaker, which I am sure but very feehly express the sentiments of the Honse , but which are revy corolially given not only on my part hat upon the part of those of whom I am the homble spokesman: I leng to move :

That when this House adjourns this day, it do stand :djourned until Thursday next. in consegnence of the lamented death of the Hen. Alexander Mackenzie. late member of the Qneen': Prive Council of Canala, and out of respect to his memory.

Mr. LAURIER. Mr. Spraker, twelve momths have mot yet elapsed since death removed from amone us the great man who had leen for more servative party, and the most prominent figure in the national life of Camada. His demise was momoned over ly the whole country. friends and fores forsetting the differences of opinion which hated divided them omly to rememher these sreater pualities which commamed miversal athin:ation. This diay we have to ileplore the loss of one who was for many years the chief opponent of sir John Matolonald, and who was in many ways as richly, althongh differently cudowed from himself, amb who was umboubedly in the estimation of all, I lelieve, the strongest chameter whom (imanla has seen for many a day. On this occasion again I am glat to know inleed I knew it even hefore the Minister of . Wustice spoke that all parties, friends and frees alike, unite in a common ann very very sincere grief. Although upon this occasion grief cannot assume the same intensity of expres sion which it assumed on the other occasion, there are varions obrions reasoms for that. It was sit Iohn Mactonaldis seonl lack that he wats struck stambing at his post, that he died in harness, that he was remoned under the very gaze of the pmblic eye from the field of active strife tocternal rest: whereas it was Mr. Mackemies misfortune that he survived for many years his own self. For many years he has heen prostrated hy ilhess : and though his heart continued as warm and his mind as active as ever, his physical frame was fatally shattered. He was condemned to silence, his services were lost to the country, and the public had long heen resonciled to the painfulidea of his death. Therecanlenorlonbt what ever that to one of so strong and energetic a nature. these years of inactivity and of prostration must have heen years of intense suffering and that death whenever it came was looked upon as a relief. At last, in the very hour of Easter day, of that day which in the faith of Christians is the symbol of victory over death, his long imprisoned sonl was released from its shackles, and he now lives forever. Aready the Canalian people appreciate the magnitule of the loss they have suffered : and, indeed, Mr. Mackenzie was a unigue man in his day. Living in an age which was not particularly distinguished for stannch atherence toprinciple, he alwayswas the unbenting champion of right, as fool gave him to see the right. Living in anl. age where success was very often held to be the prinary consideration stlecess was never with him a primary nor even a secondary consideration. He strove for the right as he saw the right, and indeed it is a matter of history that when he was in office he could have conciliated public opinion and perhaps contimued to enjoy power if he had consented to deviate ever so little from those principles of prolitical economy which alone he heild to le true. But on this oceasion his stern charater again asserted itself: he risked everything, and he lost all, and he did it cheerfnlly. sibch eximples are rarely met, if ever, in our own lay : amd to rimd any paralled you have to goback in the lates of Puritan Fing. latnd, when men fonght and hiled for principle, holding any kind of compromise in scorn. Such were the principal qualities which distinguisherl, I believe alove all others. Mr. Mackemies carreer. Indeed, his strong pualities ats a pulbic man are well known. There was. however. another atspect of his character little known to the pulbic and perhaps entirely misoonceivel. but weli kombito those who hat the privilege of his friendship. He was supposed to be stem, cold and migracions: hat the very reverse was the truth. He was richly enslowed with that quant hommer pecnliar to his onn rate. little to be suspected moler a somewhat reticent exterion. hut th which the umrestaint of intimate life acted as a stimulant. aml which then broke forth into copions amel rich fancy. To those who hatd the privilegr of his hoppitality he was one of the most atgreeable of men: amd with that he hat a kind heate a most kind heart indeed, which always reoponded generonsty when por perly appealed to. In many wats Mr. Markenzie was an exceptiomal man. I may say-. and I am sure that in this all will agree ivith me-that he united many , malitios selikon formol together. and which combined male him one of the truest ant strongest chatacters to be met with in (amadian history. I secomb the motion.

Mr. MILLA: (Bothwell). I hes wathe at few olvervations to the Honce on the impurtant sulpeot now lefore us. It was my gool fortme. sir, to he very intimately: commeted with the latemember for Eatst Vork. I knew him liefore I hecane a mem. ber of this House. I enjoyed his contidence and his frienulship durine his public cateer in Parliament : and I am sure, Sir, that when he ceased to be able to discharge the duties in which he took a prominent part in this House, the country felt that it sustained a revy great loss. I lo mot think. Nir, that there has lue en in my day. nor dol know that there was in any earlier perion in Camatian history, a representative of the people in this House who in a larger legree enjoyel thein contidence as a man. I am contident of this, sir, that however much many of those outside of Parliament and those who are representatives in Parliament may have differed from him. mo one fuestioned his high chamacter, his disinterested motives, amd his fielelity to his convictions. whether they were held to lee right or wrong. He implicitly heliceed that that catuse which he espoused. those principles which he advorated, were those which if they comble male suceessfal would best serve the interests of the people of Canala. Mr. Mackenzie in early life hal not the opportumities for intellectual culture and elacation that were enjoyed by someothers: bat nogreater mistake combl lee made than to suppose that he was a man of very great naturalability and nothing more. Idonot think I ever met one of a more retentive memory, or one who was more industrious as atucent than the late member for Fast York. He hat an extramonarily retentive memory, and there were few things emloraced in English historical or political literature with which he was not comversint. Few men sit in this Parliament or have sat in it at any former period, who were twetter informed than he was. All know his very great debating ahility. Few sat in this Parliament when he was in the prime of life and are here now who do not remember his extramolinary readiness as a debater, and few will say that he ever mingleal anything like persomal bitterneso with the subject of controversy, however warmly he may have espoused the side which he believed tio be for the best. I im sure, sir, that all hon. frutlemen in this House, whether they are memhers of the Conservative party or menibers of the Reform party, will feel that the country has lost a representative of extraordinary ability. of very great integrity--a man of verg keen and tender simpathies, whom it will be very difticult to replace in this House for a long time to come.

Honse resolven itself into ( (ommmittee on bill ( Do. (3) to further amend the stembluat Insper:tion Act.-Mr. Tupper.)
(In the ( immittee.)
Mr. TCPMFR. The Bill, as originally presented, has heen reprinted. The changes are not ratical, hut simply the form amil language have leen manle nomre saitable to the c:ase. The first section, which is the same in the original liill. is simply to conform to the resolution of the marine conference: heid in Washington, by provinher that the fot will extend to the use of electricity or gats in navigation. The second clanse is simply for this purpose : *imme time agro it appeared that steamer: were plying letween ports in ('antalat and prots in the United Niates. carrying lassengers. and it was featreal that some of then were not in proper condition. The site:amboat Inspection fet was, therefore made applicable to such steamers. but it hats heen formm that in doing so we obliged onurselves to apply every provision of the Aet in every case thongh such inspection he not necessiny. Thare wis no power in the liovernor in Commeil to make a certain feature of the ship sul,ject on the provisionsof the Act. For instance take the engines and hoilers. we hat to mater the whole shipe subject to the Act thongh the engincer was perfectly efticient athl there Was no necessity to apply that jortion of the let. This atmembinent gives the liovernor in ( onameil power wapply parts of the fet, ame not needlessly embarrass at shif which hats a regularly certiticated otticer. aml su onn. Under the provisions of the ohd det. the engineers repuired to have certificates from us, and therefore the puestion of nationality calne in. which would lead to a very awkwat position of aftiars if we insisted on it. We had no choice: When we time their engineers duly certiticated, accorring to their awn laws, we hate no desire to insist that they should have certiticates fromi us.

Mr. TLDPrER. At present the Board of Finginetes or haspectors must meet whether there is business for them to transact or not, and they mustmeet at a certain place every year, aml all this expense is chareent to the steamboat Inspection fund. It has leeen my effort to keep that expenditure down, as far ats possible, in order to prevent the necessity arising for intreasing the rates on steamers in order to supply moncy which wonld he reguireal. sometimes the rate is $\bar{T}$ cents a ton on at ressel, and it wats originally lo cents a tom, and the amome varies according to whether the expenses are increased or rerlucerl. I foumblast year that I was lomel hy the law to comvene these officers, and their expenses were patid out of the funl. Ender this section, the Minister of Marine and Fishuries will have power to say when and Where the meetings of the losard shatl take plate. That is the only difference:

Mr. WHL. CH , I IN mot altogether appore of this clanse. I think there should he at time named, si, that we should molerstand when they are to meet. I think it is putting great penwer into, the hatuls of this hoard athel into the hames of the (iosermur in Comacil, amb, ats athphing man, I think we shomld hate the duties of engineers presathed in the *et, and all the rules and rearalations atfiecting the steambat interest. 1 slonot approve of putting all the power in the hamls of the boand of the (invemor in (onncil. We do not know what arhituary rules and regulations may be appramed by the brad on he the bovernor in Commeil. and the stemmbat interest might suffer. If it were staterl here inthis Act what they intended torlo: what the daties of the engineers were and what other maters they intembed to decine. this Homse might have an entirely lifferent opinion from that of the hatal or of the diovernor in (osuncil. I think this is putting the shipping interest at the merey of people who perhapsi do not fully umilerstamil the requirements of the day. and at all events it is rery vighe.

Mr. TLPPPKR. I think I call satisfy me bom. friend (Ar. Welsho that there is no danger in this clanse, nor is there any great change made. We fos mot propense to interfere with the advisory powers of the Poard of Inspection, and, as I satid lafore, the pront is to enable us to so regulate these meetings that they shall mot ondur unnecessamily and that the expense levied on the shippinginterest -hall hot therefore be: so large as it would other wise be:

Mr. LACRIER. How many inspeators have you:

Mr. IUPIPER. Speaking froms memory I think there are ten.

Mr. I.AURIFR. And they meet at Muehes:
Mr. TUPPER. They meet at Toronto.
Mr. IVFL.iH. I think the inspectors in the Maritime Provinces are very satisfactory, but I may say that I hope the Minister of Marine will not reduire to abme down here year after year to patch up these Acts. It would reyuire a couple of legal men to decide now what steamboat men have to do. I hope to proolness there will be such amendments matle to the law that ne more will $\mathrm{l}_{\mathrm{s}}$, repuired for twenty years.

On section 4 ,

Mr. (:HABLTON. Why is this power to be delegated to the diovernor in Comncil? It is a very important matter and it should be defined in the Steambat Inspection Act. We are tos, much in the hallit of relegating our powers to the (iovernor in Council. We do not question the ability of the fiovernor in Comeil to do this, hat we think this matter shomid be thoronghly iliscossed and clearly malerstorel, and the views of steamboat men in this House shomhlow given as to the number of lwats Which a steandonat is to be alloweil to carry.

Mr. TCPPER. This is a very inportant provision. It sweeps ont of existence a namber of rules under the enth section of the old Aet. In regarel to the assmmption of this power by the diovernor in Conncil, in ictazal pactice in matters of this kind affecting the na vigation of steanmers aml the equipment of loats for the safery of life. the (iovernor in (onancil, and the Marine Department particularly; are enverned alnost entirely by the opinions of experts. In Enerlame the board of Trade represents ahmost entirely the Marine Department in this respect, and there frequently changes are rendured in connection with the changes in construction and huidiner of vessels. Then, new rules and resulations are issued at onte which govern ali concernel, sulpect th the provisions of the mit. mwisely when l'arliament was embearoming to assume similar powers. instearl of putting the exercise of those powers practically in the hamls of the mathtical alvisers of the Cown by leaving it ta the deeision of the diovernor in Conncil. they put it in the main statute: In my Inief exproriente, we have fomul that, ats to the inspecion of boilers for instance, it catailed a great loss to steamship owners if the rules which applied some yeats ago were still enforcenl, when they did not at all apply to the luilers which are consoructed mos. That view was pressed on the dichermment, anm it was fomml that the existing legislation could grive nos remedy until l'arliament met, and that, eren in regirel to ships construsted acororling to monlem reguirements and accombing to the miles of the Board of Trate in Fughand, they could not get the proper certificate until Parliament here met to comsider the matter. Now, I ventured to comse to Parlianent a year or two ago in reference to that very fuestion. ind Pimliament entusted the fiovermment with that diseretion, and at hatal of steamboat inspectors was allowed to frame these rules subject to the apmoval of (ouncil. Som, insteal of there heing a long nimber of sections, in foree in the stitute concerning the machinery of a ship, the proper provisions are inchaled in the regulations framed umier an Oriter of (onancil, and there has been not only an entire absence of emhatrassment on the part of theowner's of steannships in that comection, lut no langerons conseruences have resulted. Therefore, in that regard, the Marine Department have, partically, umber the Governor in Council, the sime riscretion that is exercisel in these matters hy the Boand of Trade in Fingland. Sow a very strong catse comes up. We give to no one discretion, neither to the Marine Deprartment, nor to the officers of the department, nor to inspectors, and it was found alisolutely necessialy to tie up, as they are now tied up, certain steamersin connection with the River S't. John navigation, which in the opinion of the very eminent and very capable inspector at that port, Mr. Coker, were fittel up with the necessing appliances for the safety of life on those waters, and on tidal waters. For instance, the statute says that the lifeboat on each steamship must lee constructed in a certain way, that it must be a metallic life-hoat : that was a part of the old inles that were in force years ago when that statute washefore parliament, and it was alsofounl in the rules of the British Boarl of Trade. Now, I havebeen applied to, time after time, toallow these vessels to be givel a promit where the oflicer was satistied there were sufficient appliances onl hoard for the safety of life in case of atevident. But I had no discretion. I had to answer that this was a matter under the control of lar. liament, that Parliament had not entrusted me with diseretion in the matter, and I cenuld not, without comsulting Parliament, take the responsihility involved in departing from the law. And so I hail to wait until the law of the comentry was changed. I propose now to give that permission. so that on the inspector at st. John being satistied that a loat is properly eguippe?, with appliances for the safety of passengers, she may be cleareal. If hom. gentlemen object to that 1 shall at once take a difterent stamb, and wait until this P'arliament has formally alopted such a law. Now, then, all I ask Parliament to do in this combection is. that in os far ats equipment with lwats and lifehons is set out in this prorision of the steambat fet, the should put this responsibility on the shome ders of the Narine Department and the fovernor in (ouncil. where the responsilility in reference to the inspection of steambrats and the machinery of steamlwats now lies. I will say, in conclusion, that in this respect we will be doing as is dome in Eng. land where the Board of Trale framed these rules, but unfortunately we dil not follow their example, but put the rules in the shape of a statutory enactment.

Mr. HAZEN. I think the change proposed in this Bill is not only a very proper one. hut a very neeressary one. The Minister has pointel out that in consequence of the law lieing as it is at the present time, the steambat hosiness. and that means the whole of the business on the River Sit. John-... is $\mathrm{l}_{\text {wing }}$ very greatly injured during the present season : the steamhoats are delayed in going on the route thus causing great damage to business in that section of the comutry. Though the Steambnatt Inspection Act has heen on the Statute-hook for some nine or ten years, the fact is that this provision of it has never been strictly enforced. That Act repuires that steamers wer a certain tomage, 1 think and that relates to every steamer that carries passengers on the River st. Joln--shall he supplied with metallic life-hoats and also with buckets manle out of metal. I may say that up to the present time that provision of the statute has never loen enforeen.
Mr. DAVIFs (P.E.I.) Does the hom. genteman mean generally, or specially with reference to the lesats on the River st. John:
Mr. HAZEN. I mean specially with reference to loats on the River St. John. I do not pretend to speak with regard to the others, as 1 da not know. But I say that so far as those boats on the River St. John are concernel, though that Act has been on the statute-book for nine or ten years, up to the present season that provision of the law has not been enforced, and these vessels which have not had metallic life-hoats, anll which have not had metallic buckets, have been allowed to go up and down the river carrying passengers and transacting other business, and have received the certificates that it was necessary for them to receive from the steanboat inspector for the l'rovince of New Bromswick, Infore they were allowed to transact hasiness. Sow, for some reason which 1 do not know, this year the attention of the steambat inspector for the Province of New Brunswick was expressly drawn to this provision of the law, and he wats obliged to tell the owners of these lazats rumning from the eity of St. John up w Federicton, that until they provided their vessels, as required hy law. with metallie life-hnats and lanckets made onit of metal. he would have to withold their certiti: cates, and would mit allow them to start on thoir wyage up the river. The result of that action is that at the present time there are lying in the city of sit. helin. or were a lay or two ago. a number of vessels engiged for hasi. ness of carrying passengers anil freight. freight which wats watiting for them at different powints: along the river, hint they have not been able to proceed up the river and transiat that business which is neeessary to be transated in the interest of the comotry, and which has leeen transacted mader the same combitions for the list nine or ten years. Ererybody who has given attention the matter knows that there is no necessity for hats of that sort to carry metallic life-Inots: : that pror vision is not necessary in the interest of passengers who travel on those loats. My hon. friend from Prince Elward Islam (Mr. Davies) knows that bnats registered under the American Reand Register. or at Lloyds", or under the Burean Veritas, hoats sning to distant parts of the world are allowed how to carry wooden life-boats inst tad of metalliclife-hnats, as they were required to do some yous agh. The provision is antiguatel. it is onsolete, there is no necessity for it, and the passengers atre much saterin the inland waters, and I think in ocean waters also. on boats fitted out with wonlen life-logats insteal of metallic life-lmats. Inecanse in casse of accident womien life-hnats are very easily repaired, while at metallie life-lnoit hat to be sent off to a blacksmith shop on other place where special skill can be ohtained of put it in repair. The same thing is true of metallic buckets: they are not necessary om lward steamers of this somt. Woonden buckets are all that is necessary in case of tire. Further than that. I have heard a gentlemans, experienced in these matters, saty that worden luckets. are preferable in crery case, hecallse in case of accilent they may serve as life-buns and can be thrown out to mein in distress. If they get out of order they can sery masily be repaired by almost. any man capable of using tomls. Whereas it requires a skilled workman to pit metallic: huckets in comdition when they get out of repair. The result of that law is, it being a statutory enactuent, and mo discretionary powey heing leit in the hands of the fiovernor inf onncil, that the business on the st. Johm Riser has this year, to a great extent, been paralysed. Had there lneen a provivion of the sort propereel on the statute-look, people there who are interested in steamers conh have applied to the Governor in Council, and he could have made the necessary change in order to enable these steamboats to go on their way amilobusiness. But the law being a statutory provision, the Minister of Marine was obliged to tell the people who came to him for relief that he had no discretion in the matter, that the law must lec carriel out so far as he was concerned, and that he couldnot change it l, yany regulation of the department or hy Orierin(ouncil. I must siaty that I an pleased to hear the Minister sat that it is his intention, unless oljection is taken to his proposial by the House, not to enforce that reculation for the present : and that if the inspector of steambats there, Mr. Coker-who, as he salys, is a most competent man in every respect--says that a hoat is properly epuipperl fol the safety of passengers, he may allow it to start. thongh it may not have metallic lifeInats and bockets, anticipating that this law will be patsed, as I trust it will be, hy the Honse. These regulations were especially ohnoxious and especiatly harilensome when applied to at river like the st. John. Any hon. gentleman achuainted with that river knows that if a steamer should strike a snag. or a fire should break ont. the ressel could within it few minutes be rim to either bank, and the pissengers could get ashore without danger to life. If a boiler explosion occurred, we all know that metallic life-hoats would be of very little use. There are sarcely any of the river steamiers carrying passengers up the St. Dohn and the different lakes commected with it, hut possess at different points aloug the shore their own loats, or hoats belonging to the company, well equipped with oars. which could he used as life-boats, and these boats may be foum at different points within one or two miles distant of one another, where they are used frortaking passengers and mails from the shore to the steamers. I, therefore, sincerely trust that no hon. gentleman will raise the slightest objection to what the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries has said. that he proposes to telegraph at onee, amp he camot do it toosion. that if the inspector of steanlmats at st. John is of the opinion that the bats now on the steamers and the buckets are, in his jutement, sutticient for the protection of life amb property: he may give the bats certificates and allow them to proceed, although they may not have metallie life-hoats and buckets, which they have never had, although this law has been on the statute-hook for the last uine years. The matter is one of very deep interest to all the river commties in New Prunswick, and to all the people of Nt. Johm. The law. if carried out, will prove generally vexations and annoying there, and all the more amoying becanse for many years it has not been carried out ; for just as the owners are realy to send the steamboats up the river and commence the season's business, the inspector. doing no more than his duty-I do not complain with respect to him, has his attention drawh to this provision of the Act, that umless a stemmboat is provided with metallic life-hoats, which they ate mable to secure at present and which would have to be made to order, and could not, therefore, be procured for months, it cammot proced, and the whole business of the river com ties may thas be paralysed for the whole seatsom.

Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). The speech of the hon. member for st. John (Mr. Hizen) is a singular commentary on the legislation of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, and of the readiness with which hom. gentlemen opposite are ready to give their support to every propasition that the (iovernment submits to this Honse for its consideration. I think the objections just made ly that hon. gentleman show the importance of this House giving sonething more than a holiday to its mind when measures relating to matters of importance are submitted by the various departments of the Gorernment. I think the olservations of the hon.
yentleman show that it is quite time that this House should give a little attention to the discharge of those , luties which devolve upon it 1 respecting the sulgect of legislation. What does the hon. gentlenan say" The hon. gentleman says that this measure which was brought down to the Housely the fovernmentsomeeightyearsago. which was sulmitted to the Honse iml satuctioneel by hom. gentlemen opposite, which received the suiport of the vast majority of the followers of hom. gentlemen opposite, is a meassire that has mot yet been put into operation, and if it havi heen put into operation, it would have practically paralysed the commerce and business of the commtry carried on by means of steamboats. That is thedeclatation which the hom. gentlenam has made. Ishould like to know whether it is not time, if that is so, that this Homse. instead of acting as a mere registering booly, endorsing all measures submitted to it by the Alministration, should give a little attention to its husiness, and exercise something like judgment in the consideration of measures submitted hy the Administration: Xow the hom. gentleman proposes legislation ly telegram. He says that the Minister, with the sanction of this Howse, should telegraph that this law shombld remain inoperative -I am not objecting to the law being allowed to remain as it has remained eight year-for a short period longer, until it is seen what action this Honse will takeonthesulject. But it seems to me a very extraordinary state of things that we are asked every session toamend laws relating to the alministration of affiairs ly the various departments, and we are from time to time assured liy the supporters of the Administration that laws are heing allowed to remain a lead letter muler the statute, that no, attempt has leen made to make them operative, and that if they had lieen madeoperative they would have proved disistrons to the cometry. That is the commentary of the hom. gentleman; that is the statement which the hon. gentleman has made. bid not the hom. gentleman know. did not other hom. gentlemen know, that this measure, if pat into operation, would lee mischievous" Did they not know all ahout the character of the life-boats that were required moder the law " Did not the hon. gentleman from st. John (Mr. Hazen) himself know, in fact he must have known. that if this measure was put into operation the risastrous efficets, which he says are now flowing from it, would have flowed the very moment an attempt was male to olley the law. I think the olservations of the hom. gentleman constitute the most severe criticism that could be passed upon the legislation which has been submitted to this House from time to time hy the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. I think the criticisms of the hon gentleman go to show that those measures which the Minister of Marine, in the discharge of his duties as Minister, has felt it necessary to submit to this House, must have been inadequately considered in the department hefore they were submittel to Parliament for its stanction. It is high time that Parliament should givea little attention to its own binsiness and take less on trust than it has been in the hallit of doing during a few years past.

Mr. HAZEN. J have listened with pleasure. as I always do, to the remarks of the hon member for Pothwell (Mr. Mills): but if there is anything in what he says, and perhaps there is, it refers more particularly to the hom. gentleman than it possibly can to me, hecamse when this Act was hefore Parliament the hon. gentleman was sitting in the House, amd I did not at that time have the honour of being a nember. so the hon. gentlemans uriticism ats applied to me possesses a great deal more force When applied to the hon. gentleman himself, and those associated with him.

Mr. MILIか (Pothwell). We criticised the measure and were voted down.

Mr. HAZEN. While the hom. gentleman's remarks ate intemed to be a criticism on the atetion of the Minister who introduced the measure, while he reflects on the supporters of the liovermment becallese they dil not discuss this legislation when it Wiss going through the House, I do not think-of course 1 cammot speak from recollection, not being here- when the billwent through that this provision received the slightest eriticism from the hon. gentleman or those who weresitting on the opposite side of the Homse at that time. If it is proper to assail the iovermment supporters because they improperly $^{\text {a }}$ allowed this legislation to pass, I think the course must he equally improper on the part of hom. genthemen who allowed the measure to pass withont opposite criticism.

Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). The hom. member had better look at the debates on that question hefore he makes that uriticism.

Mr. H.thEN. Does the hon. gentleman sity that this feature of the measure vats riticised hy himself or by hon. gentlemen opposite? I do not umberstand the hom. gentleman to say so. The hon. gemteman says I hailhetter look at the debates. I may tell the hon. gentleman that he had better look at the debates himself and see what oceured. The hom. gentlenan has not done so, nor have 1 ; and when he makes the remarks he has offered with respect to the Government supporters without taking the trouble to look at the delates, it is equally fair to apply his remarks to himself and those sitting around him. But, Mr. Chairman, further than that, with regard to his criticism of the members on this side of the House I may say that wo far as the River St. John is concemerl, that in the year 188:, when [ believe this legislation was passed, I think without one single exception every county on the St. John River was represented in Parlianent by gentlemen whose political views were not in harmony with those of the Administration of the day. If, therefore, there is any point in the charge that members from that locality neglected their duty, the hon. gentleman is striking a severe blow at those who where associated with him from the St. Johm River comities in the Province of New Prunswick at that time, and who did not endeavour to prevent the passage of that measure. But times have changed. This is not a measure which we want to discuss from a party stami. point, and the little by-play between my hon. friend and myself will be taken for what it is worth, of course. I lesire to sity in faimess to the gentlemen who were in Parliament in those days, that there was a time when the Lloyds, and the BureauV eritas, and the American Record Register, required these life-boats to be of metal. That day has passed, and wool has taken its place ; but at the time this Bill was passell, it was, I think, thought that metal was perhaps letter than wool for a life-boat. The hon. gentleman has stated that I, living in the city of St. Johm. must have known that the Bill if put into operation, would work an injury to our business on the River st. John. I am free to confess that I nerer knew there was such a provision in the Bill, amd further, I desire to saly that the steamboat owners and others interested did not know there was such a provision in the Bill, and it came to them ahmost like a clipp of thumber out of a clear sky when they were informed this year that such was the latw, and that they would he regmired to comply with it. The provision is useless, and I sin. cerely trust there will he no hostility to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries carrying out his idea of allowing the inspector to use his own diseretion until this Bill now under consideration hecomes law.

Mr. WFL, ©H. Mr. (hairman, I pluite agree with the remarks which have fallen from my hon. friemd from St. John (Mr. Hazen). I think the best way to remedy this evil is to alter the clanse in the Steamboat lnspecion fot so ats to allow life-hoats to be mande of wool or suitable metal with life-lines attached. It is quite easy to remedy the defect in the law as it at present stamls, and had I been in the House when this Bill passenl. I would have taken objection to it. As the member for st. John (Mr. Hazen) says, it came like a thunder-clap on them when they were told that they would have to change their life-boats and use metal insteal of woolen ones. suppose a metal life-boat is on board a ship at sea, and it gets damaged I would like to know how was it going to he repaired : whereas if a woolen life boat gets damaged, it is very easy to repair it at sea. The law as it at present stands is a band law, and it shoulal be remedied hy making it optional to use wood or metal. Hon. members in this House may not all be silors, and they may not know the technicalities comected with the business. My hom. friend from s'. John (Mr. Hazen) tinds fault with my hon. friend from bothwell (Mr. Mills) for being in the House and allowing this clause to pass without objection. He must remember that every lawyer is not fully accuainted with life-boats, and I presume my hon. friend from St. John would not himself know so much about them, if some one had not posted him on the subject.

Mr. HA/EEN. That is so.
Mr. WELSH. I thought so. I hope, now that this matter is hrought before Parliament, that the clause will be amended by inserting "wood" or "metal." I would ask hon. members. whether they are sailors or soldiers, whether they would rather depend on a grood metal bucket or on a good woolen lucket.

An hom. MEMBER. It depends on what is in it. Mr. WELSH. I say i would depend on the wooden bucket. Now that this matter has been brought forward, I trust that my hon. friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries will adopt the suggestions offered to him and alter this clanse in the original Act.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Mr. Chairman, I understand that the Minister proposes to amend an Act which his predecessor introduced some eight or ten years ago.

Mr. TUPPER. Sixteen years.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) some criticism has been indulged in by the hon. member for St. John (Mr. Hazen), on the ground that the objections were not pointed out when this Act was introlucel. The hon. gentleman will sere that it was introduced hy the then Minister of Marine. Who stated that it was an Act simply incorporating the regulations adopted by the Buard of Trate in England, and moholy would think of objecting to the measure maler these circumstances. The eriticism which my hom. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Mills) adiministered was. that for a number of years past we have heen deluged with futs. from the Marine Department particularly, amending the statutes in force, and that they were introluced inpmovidently very often, and had not that comsileration given them which the importance of the leqislation justities. I understand that the Act now before us, which is a re-enactment of the regulations of the Imperial Bomed of Trade. is ohjected to ou certain gromils. The hom. Minister does not propose to remove the oljection by substituting "wood" in indation to metal, hut he propuses to repeal the section altogether and vest the power in the fiovernor in Conncil to make regulations in lien of the provisions of the section. I have always been opposed to that kind of legislation, and II think this House ought to panse before delegrating to the fiovernor in Comeil powers which heretofore it has exercisel itself. The Minister will see, if he will turn to the statute before him. that the statutory regulation was not a hard and fast regulation in every particular. In some respects the House delegated a discretion to the Minister, and whether that diseretion is large enough or not I am not prepared to say: hat if the Minister tells us that the discretion is too limited and ilesires to have it enlarged, I would suggest to him to legislate in that direction. I wonld call his attention to the $\overline{\text { th }}$ sub-sertion of the section now under consideration, which says:
"The Minister of Marine and Fisheries may a athorize
the use in individual specified cases of boats of different dimensions from these heretofore specified.
That is confined to the dimensions of the boats, lout if he alsor incorporates the material of which the hoat is huilt he has all the power he wants and Parliament still retains the power which I think it ought to retain. unless very gool canse is shown agrainst it. I submit that as a proposition which ought to be our controlling guide in legislation: prima facie, Parliament should retain the control over all these matters. If a thoroughly grood case is manle out by the Minister. of a department and he shows Parliament that the public interest demands that such power should le delegated to him, well and gooi, but these instances will he rare, ind they should be backed up with very powerful arguments before Parliament should yielil to them. In this case I have no objection to what the hon. gentleman has said. It is evident that natical men on both sides of the House agree that the boats might lee in some cases of wood as well as of metal. He could attain that object hy investing himself with the diseretion which I speak of. I wint to point out to the hon. nember for st. John that this Act does not say anything about the buckets. It loes not give the Minister any power in regard to them. and it does not change the statnory declaration that the buckets shall be of a certain material. Therefore all this talk about buckets is outside the question. If that section of the Act relating to hickets, section 34, requires to be amended, you had hetter amend the Act in tiat direction, or give the Minister power to substitute a different kind of material for metal. All I ask is that you should not contime this, vicious system of withluawing power from Parliament anl resting it in the department. When the law is on the statnte-book, merchants, shipowners, mariners and others have atecess to it at all times and can find out what it is: but if the law is made by the department, it is almost impossible for an average man to find out what it is. These rules amb regulations are suliject to altemation at the whim of the leputy Dinister for the time leing or at the whim of some one who has the: eat of the Deputy Minister, and withont any consultation with those chiefly affected hy it, who wake up some morning to find legishation made by the department which nolmoly knew anything about.

Mr. TUPPER. Of course I do not grulge the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Nills) his opportunity to scold the Minister of Marine aml Fisheries: and altogether the scolding was very goon-natured. But he attempted to put on my shoullers some hame which I thought at the time I would just as soon not have left there. There is uothing so very extramolinary in the fact that the inspectors assmand that there was a discretion in reararl to the: material in these life-lwats. The remarks of the hon. member for Queens. P. E. I. (Mr. Davies). will indicate the reasons for inspectors having hitherto assmmed that these clatuses were bot so hard and fast. He has datwn the attention of the House to the fact that in the Th sulbection l'alliament did lease discretion in the Department of Marine, as to altering all the statutory provisions except as to the material. It said that it was possible to dispense with the provision that a boat should be of a certain length, width and depth: and I think the hom. member for Queens, and the hon. member for Bothwell himself, will atmit that a layman wouhd not be very reprehensible for reading the 7 th section as practically having that effect. But 1 :nay state how this was drawn to my attention. The fact was that the inspectors in Canada atssmmed hitherto that they possessed a diseretion in comnection with the administration of their duties. and it was not known to the department, when the certificate was given, whether all things were complied with, or whether there had heen any incorrect understanding or appreciation of theirduties. There is nothing extraordinary in that, and the moment it came to the attentions of the department that a discretion of this kind was being exercised, then enguiry was made whether the opinion of the inspectors in this particular was correct-not from an amending spirit, or from any whim of a Deputy Minister of Marine. As a mitter of fact, the Deputy Minister had nothing to do with the subject until it cance to him in the orlinary way, that is, on the report of the natutical inspectors of the department, after this subject was brought formally to their notice. These are the facts, and they make alisolutely necessaly an appication to Parliament. The committer have entirely inisumlerstool my position. I am not concerned whose mistake this was, if it is a mistake at all. I have no doubt that at the time it was considered a wise provision, and at the time there was apparent unanimity in its favour. In passing, I find that in 31, 32, 36, 37, 40 and 44 Victoria, statutes were passed on this very subject, and there will he, I do unt care umber what diovernment, frequent applications to Parliament in connection with the shipping law. In the Imperial Parliament you will find an enormous number of representatives of the shipping interest, experts and representatives of the Almiralty, and yet there the statutes are full of ameniments to the Merchants Nhipping Act : and the emplaint made on behalf of the steamboat owners as to the difficulty of finding what the law is, might very often come from the professional man in Eagland. who requires to search considerably to fimd out the varions amentments the shipping Act. But the case of the ship-owner is not so bial. He reseives full notice of all these amemiments from the Board of Trate of England, and they are pat in the most conspicurns places: in fact his attention is called to them time and again. In Canada, we attempt to do the same thing. We publish in the Girioth the rules and regulations, and the Marine Department, to my certain knowledge, follows the sulject up again aud again. The reason this law was to a certain extent inoperative in some districts was that the inspectors assumed, and not unreasonably, that they had some discretion in the matter, and they gate their services to the shipowners who read the law as the inspector for the district real it. The committee have not appreciated the one great question before them now. It is not a novel one. Regardless of the particular merits of metal or woolen boats, and I ann not an authority in either. I am asking Parliament that the Diarine bepartment of this country shall be credited with the same ability to handle the shipping regulations that the Board of Trale possesses Inemel British shipping. It is a proud hoast, and has heen alluded to, that this parliament is able to julge of the shipping interests of Canala as well as the British Parliement is to judge of the shipping interests of (ireat Britain: hut I am asking, if the Marine Department is to he held responsible when difficulties aceur in cemmection with shipping, and something has happened that should not have happened, that that department shall be just as free to meet energencies and follow improvements in connection with the construction and equipment of ships as the sister department, the Board of Trade. to-day, is in England, and I point out to the committee that nome of these things are fomed in the Eaclish statute. They are rules adopted carefully on the idvice of experts, and they are changed, not for a particular ship or a particular case but as oceasion arises for the change, and the Minister of the day or the authorities concerned are then properiy held responsible. It is still free to every member of this Parliament, as it is in Englame, to suggest changes and amendments not apprearing in those regulations, or to attack the existing regulations. I an not asking Parliament to take a new step or adopt a new principle, for, as I have pointed out, Parliament, without any injury to any interests in Canada that I am aware of, did entrust the Department of Marine with this discretion and these powers in comection with just as important, if not a more important, part of the ship, and that is the machinery of the ship, the boiler of the ship, and so on, all requiring the knowledge and attention of experts whom this Parliament pays. Those rules are now made by Order in Council. Again, I would call attention to the argument of the hon. member for Queen's, which, I think, strengthens my position on this, the chief point. He callules to subsection 7 , and he satil that $1, y$ the insertion of a word there 1 coold have accomplished all that 1 desire. Yes, hut by the insertion of the word " material," there is not a particle of necessity for the sul-sections preceding number $\bar{i}$, and therefore in principle the hon. member for Queen's and I are me. But the language 1 would ask for the clanse would be a little ilifferent, becanse the hon. member for Queen's, by ameraling sul-section leases it to the Minister of Marine to authorize the use, in individnal, specified cases. of any kind of a beat he thinks fit. We are one in principles only, I do not wish to go as far as the hom. gentleman. I wish to llot out the power of the शinister of Marine altogether. I leave that, not to the Minister of Marine at all, hut to the (iovernor in Combcil, and the dovernor in Comacil, in these cases. never would ate but on the adrice of men who have a techical knowledge.
Mr. DAVIE: (P.E.I.) The difference is a litte more, hecause Parlianent lays down what should he the provisions gonerning boats carried by steamers generally, and at great many details are gone into, lout they give the authorities having special control oser them the discretion tolimit or enlarge, in imbividual cases, on the responsibility of the Minister, the lengths and brealths larliament has fixed. But the Minister hats taken away the entire section and given the entire power to the (avernor in Council.
Mr. TUPPER. I ippreciate the hon. gentleman: prosition, but in fact there is no difference hetween ns, because 1 say that though Parliament has intimated in No. 6 section 7 , its particular idea of the length and brealth of a life-hoat, the Minis. ter may, ly sul-section, sweep that out by a word. I say, therefore, we are only splitting hairs. I sul, mit if there are hon. gentlenen who agree with the hom. member for Queen's, my position is far hetter. hecause we come then at once to the position which is taken by the Board of Trate in Lingland. and I do not see that there would be any great danger in following the example there, ant placing this discretion, not in $t$ !3. Department of Marine or Ministry of the day, but jusi as we have done in connection with the lmilers. in the Governor in Comecil.

Mr. MULOCK. It appears from what has fallen from the hom. gentleman that for nearly forty years at least, legislators of the old Camada and the Dominion hatre chosen to frame legislation on this suhject in a wholly different way and on wholly different lines. I understand that this is for the preservation of life. Heretofore, not once but every tine the matter has been before the House, it has been considered and pronounced upon by the Honse. The House has not chosen to delegate this important matter either to an individual Minister or the Government of the day. On the contrary, the House appears to have deemed it in the public interest to specify with a great degree of minuteness not often found in legislation, the particular safeguards to be adopted. Now we are asked to ignore all that is suggested by this course of legislation, and to say that the Parliaments have been entirely in error, that they belong to a past age, that they were slowgoing people, institutions not up to the spirit of the times, and that their proper course would have heen to haml this most important duty wer to the dovermment of the day or the Ministers. Fon iny part. I would mather approve of the course that hats taken place insteal of as now appars to be amed at, casting upon the (ahinet the rexumshility involved in the proprosed legislation. The Minister argnes that hecamse sub section i, nection ?! of the steambsat huspection Act authori\%es hin in a particular casee to suspend the ant

Mr. TUPPER. In all cases.
Mr. MLLOCK - in imlividual canes. There is me yeneral delegation of anthority to the Minister, anl to anthorize him to act there ought to be a particular case stated whercin these gencral regulations don mot appland can hambly he intemled to apply. some such case as that ougit to be made when we warrant a Minister in taking to himself the power conferred upon him by sub-section- The Minister argues that heranse sub-section - anthorize him in certain cases th suspend the Act. he therefore. wond have the power. by passing a general Order in Comecil. to suspend the whole Act in all cases.

Mr. TUPPER. I am not asking Parliament to enable me to suspend the det. There will be reg口 lations of comse with reference to life-lwats. The dovemor in Council will make such regulations.

Mr. MULOCK. First of all yon are repealing it.
Mr. TUPPER. Perhaps the hon. genteman does not understand. The dowernor in Comeil may make such regulations ats are deemed alvisable. That is in sulstitution of present regulations.

Mr. MULOCK. This is the law at present. The Ntatute of 4.5 Victomia describes the form of the lifeboat, the material of the life-lmat, the equipment of the life-brate the appliances for lannching her, and so on. Those details are part of the law of the lamd. They are referred to in section en of the steambexit Inspection Act. Section eg, having declared what shall be the proper eynipment, sul-section 7 groes on to say that, in specified cases, the Minister may suspend thase provisions. Now, supposing application is made to him to susjend those provisions, must he not. first of all, be satistied that the case is one within the meaning of the Act or one that Parliament did not contemplate? For example, it might happen if a vessel were plying upon some inland water where these provisions could not, according to theopinion of any man of common sense, be applicable. In such a case perhaps the Minister would feel warranted in suspending the section. Does he contend that unler sul). section 7 he conld pass a general Order in Council relieving all boats from the provisions of section 29? He is asking Parliament to give the Governor in Comeil that power. The Dinister would have to proceed in the same judicial way and to see what duties were cast upon him under section 29 . He would not le anthorized twexercise the power umler sub-section $\overline{7}$ inditrarily, without rhyme or reason. Now, however, the hon. gentleman says there shall no longer he given any hint to the Minister or to the Government by Parliament as to any safeguards, but he says it is to be the Governor in Council, which of course means the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, or, when he is taking a less active part in the duties of his department, the Deputy Minister. That means that Parliament is handing over to an officer who is not respusibie to larliament. hut is simply an ofticial receiving $8+($ (nn) a year, the duty of lealing with a matter which l'arlianent itself should deal with. That is wholly contrary to the opirit of the times and to the legislation of the present day. When the hom. gentlenan refers to Englame, dies he mean th say that the Romat in Cimata is as gome as the Roard of Trate in Englani:

Mis. TLPPER, I say it is much hatter.
Mr. MULOCK. I will not dwell men that becalle our views on that subject are opponed, han we are legiviating for the shipping interests of Camala, and I protest arainst the itsignment of Comail except muler rery exaptiomal arembstances. and I agree with my hom. frimed from Guechi: that the difticulty anh be wot wer at slight amem!memt to sul-section - When this Bill was introndacel, we molerstomen that the necessity for it arose from some difficulty in st. John as t., how life lonats ambl buckets should be huilt, but it appars now that that is only an excose, that that is not the real canse for the intronlaction of this measure, hut is simply a herring lawn achers the trank to livert pullicattention.
Dir. TLDPERE The information fron St. Jom came after the Bill wasintronducel. The ditticulty we found to exist was that these rules were statil tom instead of being made ly Order in Comucil. We could have promptly met the difticulty in st. John if we could have made rules, hut as these were statutory rales, we could not interfere with them.
Mr. MULOCK. We have now before bis the fact that the real reason for this measure is that the hom. gentlenam wants to aggriandize power to himself, and this is an mwarrantable provedure and one which the H ouse should not sametion.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). This subject is very important, and more important on account of the mamer in which the hon. gentleman proposes to deal with it than on accomit of the subject-matter of the Bill itself. I think it should receive the attention of the Minister of Justice, and that it is the Department of Justice, lather than the Department of Marine and Fisheries, which is respomsible for the character of the legislation proposed. There is a very great point of iffference letween the legislation in the United Kinglom and the legislation in Canala as to regulations which are made outside of Parliament, in allowing the Sovereign in Council to make regulations which are to have the effect of lat in the United kinglom or in Canada. We know that in the Linited Kingdom on accoment of the centralized character of the Govermment, Parliament is very severely pressed for time to legislate, and many of the regulations which have been made there hare been justified on the gromed that there are so many matters brought under the attention of Parliament that, unless such powers were had to make regulatichs, it would be utterly impossible to adequately protect the public interest if Parliamentary legislation had to the waited for. But this excuse for allowing departmental regulations or Oriers in Comeil to take the place of parliamentary legislation does not apply to this country because Parliament meets here every year, as it loes in the United Kinglom, and, having intinitely less business to attend to, there is no diticulty whaterer in considering every proposition which experience may suggest to any department of govermment as necessary in the public interest. It seems to me that the proper rule-and it is the rule recognized by those who bave most carefully considered the subject to apply to cases of this kind-is that, where the ciovernment have not the necessary information to submit to Parliament to enable it to make a declatation upon a subject requiring action, the Orders in Council or departmental regulations may be sulbstitutel for parliamentary action until there is accumulated sufficient data to enable the (iovernment to propose to the House such legislation as may be required. Now, in the case before us, there is no indication on the part of the Minister that this is a matter reguiring to be altered from time to time, or at all events more frequently than from year to year, and it is for Parliament to consider it in such a way and to alopt such legislation as to make permanent regulations for the public necessities. The hon. gentle:nan does not propose that, but he states that on the inland waters the requirements of commerce may lee different from its requirements on the open seas, but surely the hon. gentleman must have accumulated the necessary experience and should have a series of resolutions to le embodied in a statute leading in the direction he desires. Why should Parliament le asked to athegate its functions and hand this over to the Cowernor in Council: If the hon. gentleman can sulmit these regalations to the (iovernor in Council, why camot he submit them to Parliament to the embortied in a statute? The hon. gentleman has not, up to this moment, undertaken to sulmit to this Honse a single proposition to show why permanent regulations cannot be emborlied in the law so ts to meet the requirements in this particular. The first declaration has not been made. He has not pointel out that this cannot be done: he has not said that he has not accumulated the necessary datia in the department to enable him to propose legislation. Now, when it was proposed, years ago, in this House, to publish, along with the statutes, the Orders in Comucil and departmental regulations having the force of law, the understanding sas that those were to the published with the statutes in order that Parliament might have an opportunity of seeing how far the Government were superseding, by those regulations and Orders in Councils, legislation on the part of Parliament in the ordinary form. That was the understanding, and that subject was discussed in this Honse more than twenty years ago. It is of the first consequence that Parliament should not abdicate its functions, and that the Government should exercise ordinary industry in accumulating the necessary information to warrant legislation on the subjects before legislation is had. Now, the hon. gentleman says he wants to repeal, not the whole law, but enough of the law to create general confusion. He proposes to ask power, not to make departmental regulations, but to make regulations having the effect of law by Orders in Council, and he proposes to do so by repealing a part of the law by which those regulations are made at the present time. The hon. gentleman does not say that the matter is of such a shifting and changing character that legiskation cammot le hand, hat he asks us to withdraw from Parliament the portion of the power that it now exercises, and to vest it in the Governor in Council without any necessity being shown to justify such action. Surely the hon. gentleman ought not to propose so retrogressive it course as this.
Mr. TUPPER. Progressive.
Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). Surely the hom senteman does not pretend to say that vesting in the Crown the whole power of legislation, and withinawing it from the two Honses of Parliament as parts of the legislative looly, is a progressive measure. The hon. gentleman will not pretem to argne that to supersede Parliament, and to establish so far the principle of alsolute monarchy-
Mr. TCIPPER. I did not say that ; I said it was antiquated to put those rules in the statute.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Are these rules binding as a part of the law? If they are, then there is only one justitication for dealing with them otherwise than hy statute, ame that is, that you have the necessary information to warrant you so to deal. The purpose of dealing with them by Order in Conncil is to give the department the opportmity of accumulating the necessary knowlenge to enable it to propose to Parliament a systematic and wellconsidered regulation. But the hon. gentlenian is asking us to withrraw this power without making out any case. He has alrouly admitted Parliament has the necessary knowledge to deal with the sul)ject, and after ten years he proposes to withdraw that power from Parliament, anl to vest it in the Governor in Conncil. I say it is an improper proceeding, it is wholly contrary to the spirit of parliamentary government, it is a course that ought not to be recognized, and I am surprised to see the Department of Justice acquiescing in it.

Mr. TEMPILE. As I live on the River st. John, I would like to say a word upon this subject. I am sorry to see the opposition that is made to the proposal of the Minister of Marine. His proposial is made in the interest of many steamers that are now loaded in the dock and all ready for transporting freights up the River St. John, but they cannot proceed so long as the law remains in its present shape. It seems that the inspector gave them no notice that he intended to enforce this provision of the law until the vessels were all ready to start ; so that not only is freight waiting to be transported, but the mails also which are destined to places up the river, are delayed on account of notice having beengiven to the owners that they must provide certain metallic boats upon their steamers in case of accident. Now, I have never known an accident to occur on the River St. John, and I have lived there for over forty years. They have always carried wooden boats, which have proved amply sufficient to guard against loss of life. At present, as I understand the law, they have to provide a metallic boat of twenty odd feet, for each steamer ; and in order to launch such a boat in case of accident, the vessels would have to carry double the number of hands they employ now. I think this provision of the law is a very great hardship to the steamboat owners. I would remind the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) that in 1882 when that law was passed the position of affairs has changed in thisHouse. At that time the river counties from St. John to Victoria County were all represented by Liberal members, but now they are all representel by Conservatives. This makes a very great difference in passing laws of this kind for the St. John River. I hope that hon. gentlemen opposite will cease their opposition to this Bill, and allow the Minister to amend it as he thinks best in the interest of the public.

On section :5,

Mr. TUPPER. This provision is made on the advice of steamboat experts. It is considered dangerous for the same person to act in a double capaciicy of engineer and master, or as engineer and fireman, except in cases where the boiler is fired from the engine rom.

Mr. HAZEN. I move that section 34 be hereby amended by adding the words "or wood" after the word "leather" in the fifth line of the section. Mr. Coker has declared that wooden buckets are more desirable than either leather or metal ones, because, in the first place. they are more easily memled, and, in the second place, they would act as life-preservers. On boand of vessels registered at Lloyds and Bureau Veritas woolen buckets are now allowed in place of metal and leather ones, which were used some years ago.

Mr. TUPPER. The hon. gentleman has alluded to what an otticer of my department has told him. Mr. Coker has not done his duty in that respect, for he has not reported that information to me. I will not take the responsibility of accepting this :amendmentat the present time. It may be a very dangerous one, and 1 can see, without possessing expert knowledge, that iis case of fire, wooden buckets would not be so good as metal or leather ones. I can see that at the outbreak of fire leather or metal buckets would be available while wooden buckets might be destroyed. I may, however, be wrong in my opinion. There has been no suggestion made to me with reference to buckets, and before Parliament legislates on this subject, it should te in possession of all information necessary to enable it to arrive at a correct and safe opinion. I am not in a position to advise Parliameut on this subject, as I have not had an opportunity to consult those best qualified to judge. I do not believe that the amendment suggested is in operation under any system where there are regulations in connection with steamboats; and, under these circumstances, I think the hon. gentleman should aliow his amendment to stand, so that I at least may have an opportunity of looking into the subject, as I shall be very glad to do, and he may bring it forward at a later stage.

Mr. CHARLTON. I am sorry the hon. Minister desires to consult his inspector before he makes ap his mind as to whether wooden buckets would serve the purpose on board of vessels. We have in this House members whose opinions are as reliable as any opinion the hon. Minister may obtain from an inspector. The buckets commonly used on vessels are made of oak. They are less liable to destruction by fire than are buckets of leather, the latter being much more easily injured and rendered unsuitable for conveying water than buckets of oak. Buckets usuzlly stand on deck with water in them, and I think the hon. gentleman's fears, that the first thing destroyed by fire would be Buckets full of water, is entirely groundless. I have no dould that in the opinion of hon. gentlemen familiar with the matter; good, solid naken buckets on the deck of a ressel are the best buckets that can be used either for extinguishing fire or for other purposes. It has been urged with great force that they would not only serve the purpose of extinguishing fires, but might be used for life-preservers, whereas buckets of leather or metal are liable to sink. It is the opinion of all interested in the sulject that this change should he made, and it strikes me as little short of an absurdity that the Minister should request that this matter should stand over motil he can consult some person, whoseauthority is nohetter, and whose opinion is, in fact, less reliable than that of the hon. member for Queen's, P.E.I. (Mr. Welsh), who is largely engaged in the shipping business, and who is as good an authority as can he found in the Dominion. Then we have the hon. member for st. John (Mr. Hazen), representing the steambat interest on the St. John River, who undoulitedly has consulted many of those parties, and who spoke knowing their wishes, and he submitted an amendment in their interests, one which will meet the view of every vessel-owner in the conutry, asking that in addition to buckets of metal and leather, wooden buckets should be permitted to be user. It is unfortunate that the hon. gentleman does not accept the amendment without further delay. If the hon. gentleman desires this bill to pass he should not suggest this delay, which is a needless one.

Mr. TUPPER, It is not proposel to pass the Bill through this House at one sitting. I am surprised to hear that it is absurd to be cautious in dealing with an important matter of this kind. I am very sorry I cannot take the hon. gentleman's advice in shipping matters. With all due respect to his opinion, I do not think it is better than my opinion, and I value my own so little that I declared I am not prepared to accept off-hand an amendment of such an important character as that proposed. The hon. member for St. John (Mr. Hazen) may be perfectly right, and the amendment may be a wise one. All I ask is that the House may be placed in possession of the advice of the department, whose officers, whatever may be the value of their opinions, follow very closely subjects of this kind. I certainly object to the amendment being submitted at this stage. There will be another opportunity for it to be submitted. All I urge is, and it will be agreed to by a large majority of members of the House, that we have not sutficient information on the sulbject at present before us. I am not at present stating that the amendment may not be accepted.
Mr. HAZEN. The position taken by the Minister of Marine is a . $\because y$ fair one. His attention not having been called oo the matter, he requests that the amendment may stand over until he has consulted his officers, who have had experience in these matters, and who are able to decide whether such an amendment is in the interests of the shipping business or not. Under these circumstances I will withdraw the amendment at present, with the understanding that I will have an opportunity at another stage to bring it lefore the Honse.
Mr. TUPPER. Certainly. I propose to leave the Bill in Committee, and, therefore, we will come again to consider this amendment.

Mr. Temple

Mr. MULOCK. The Minister intimates that he intends to express an opinion upon this amendment of the hon. member for St. John (Mr. Hazen) at the next sitting of the Committee, and he may give his consent to such a clause as this being in the Bill. If he is going to do that, then the House shall pronounce as to what shall be the material of the bucket but shall have nothing to say as to what shall be the material of the life-boat.

Mr. TUPPER. The argument of the hon. gentleman will be just as forcible on a subsequent occasion, if he defers it. For instance, I might meet the ohjection he is now making by repealing both.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) The only objection I think is this: that the Minister sat in his seat and smiled very pleasantly while my friend from st. John (Mr. Hazen) was complimenting him upon his Bill and showing what an improvement it was on the old Act, and that it was absolutely essential for the St. Johm boats that there should be wooden buckets. I pointed ont that the Bill did not give the power to have wooten buckets at all, and then the hon. gentleman from St. John mored this resolution properly enough, and I was prepared to support it, but the Minister says he will not receive it at all. He should renounce the commendation of the hon. member from St. John.

Mr. TUPPER. I cannot renounce the commendation. I will accept it on the boats but not upon the buckets.

On section 6,
Mr. TUPPER. This clause provides that the inspector who inspects the boats shall collect the fees instead of the chicf customs officer. The Auditor (ieneral has raised the question as to the difficulty of auditing the revenue accounts, and it is to meet his wishes that this change is made.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) As I understand the law now, the fee which the steamboat owner has to pay must be pail to any one of the chief collectors of any port in Canada. If the law is changed and the inspector is made to collect the fee, I think it will be more inconvenient. There is only one inspector for the whole Maritime Provinces, and he may be travelling around in different parts. I do not see how the fee is to be paid to him, while if it is paid to the chief collector the man is at hand to receive it.

Mr. TUPPER. The inspector will find the person who owes the fee. I think that the change will make it more convenient fora steamboat owner, lecause the certificate is not given until the fee is paicl.

Mr. MULOCK. Why could not the certificate be left with the custom house ofticer, and be given to the owner when he pays the fees?

Mr. TUPPER. I am not anxious about this clause if there is oljection to it, and I will let it go if you like.

Mr. MULOCK. The owner may not be present when the inspection takes place, or he may not have the money ready, and he has got to hunt up the inspector to transmit the money.

Mr. TUPPER. Very well ; I will drop that clause.

On section 8,
Mr. MULOCK. I would ask the Minister to explain why in this case he asks Parliament to declare what safeguard should be adopted while in the other case he did not? This section says that the ressel must be provided with certain anchor equipment, steering gear, and so on ; and the hon. gentleman might as well argue that that is a matter of detail which would be fetter managed by this progressive institution the (iovernor in Council than by the Act. I do not wish him to infer from my olservation that I desire these matters also to be transferred to the Governor in Council, but it seems to me there ought to be some consistency in the Bill.

Mr. CHARLTON. I donot understand why the owner of a tug-hoat should be joined in responsibility with the owner of the ressal which it tows, as this action provides.

Mr. TUPIPER. That is the law now. The only change I am making is olstaining authority to charge a fee for the inspection. in accordance with section $\mathbf{8 3}$ of the main Act. A scow carrying passengers must he inspected, but the law omitted to provide for the payment of a fee in that case.

On section 9,

Mr. FLINT. I would like to ask if there is any provision in the original Act that these Orders in Council relating to this subject shall be laid on the Table within a certain number of days after the House meets:

Mr. TUPPER. They are published officially in the Gazefte, and the department, for convenience also, publishes printel slips containing them.

Mr. FLINT. It seems to me that in aldition to that the Orders should le consolidated and placed on the Tuble of the House, as many members do not see the Gazetfe.

Mr. TUPPER. I will make a note of the hon. gentleman's suggestion, and endeavour to meet his wishes.

On the preamble,
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I wish to call the hon. gentleman's attention to a couple of small points which I think he hal better consider before he reports the Bill. He has eliminated the 29 th section altogether, and he takes power to make similar provisions by Order in Council if he thinks fit, while he leaves the 30th section of the Act in force. Now, these two sections relate to subject-matters almost the same. The hon. gentleman gives the Governor in Council power to make regulations with respect to boats, and he leares the regulation with respect to life-preservers as a statutory enactment. I am opposed to his giving the Gorernor in Council power to make these enactments, but if he does it in one case he should do it in both. It seems to me that a man should not be required to read an Act and then an Order in Council before he can ascertain what the law is. I think the hon. gentleman will also have to amend the 58th and the 60th sections. The $58 t h$ section provides:

[^58]Now，after the hon．gentlemans Bill passes，the provisions the non－observance of which will make the master liable to a criminal or civil prosecution， are mate an Order in Conncil．and he should amend the section so as to cover that change．The same remark applies to the foth section，providing for penalties incurred for breach of the provisions of the Act or of the Oriev in Council which shatl be sulistituterl．

SUPILS．

Militia－Permanent Forces．．．．．．．．．．．．．Stin，（nk）

Mr．BOWELL．Before we proceed with this item，I resire to set the committee and myself right with reference to some remarks I made on the items charged to public armouries，and also with reference to the 41 tunics to which the hon．member for North Wellington（Mr．Mc．Mullen）called the attention of the committee．I was under the impression at the time that it was an error．I have learned since that the 41 tunics were purchased for the Pand of the Governor Generals Foot Guards，and that they cost $$ 33.50$ each ；so that it was not an error．I stated also that I was under the impression that the Auditor General had mixed the accounts by in－ cluding the storekeepers＇and paymasters accounts under the head of public armouries，which is cer－ tainly a heading under which these items should not appear ：but I ascertained from the Auditor General that this is the manner in which the ac－ counts were sent for aulit to the department，which accounts for the fact of thei：leing published in this way．

Mr．CASEY．The item now before the House in regard to our permanent corps scems to be of sufficient importance to rerfuire rather more atten－ tion than has usmally been given to it．It was hoped when we instituted these permanent corps that we would not only provide a considerable force of well－trained men ready for any emer－ gency，but also a large number of thoroughly trained instructors for the ordinary battalions of voluntecrs．It seems to me，from the report of the Major－General，that neither of these anticipations have been fulfilled．These corps do not afford any considerable number of well－trained soldiers，see－ ing that nearly half of them are not in the force long enough to have acrquired that thorough train－ ing．I will quote as briefly as possible from the General＇s report in support of these two state－ ments of mine，and I will have to quote almost in extenso because it is so condensed that it will not bear further condensation．In speaking of the actual strength of the drilled men in these corps， the General says ：

That is to say，that almost half the establishment has disappeared laring the year for various reasoms， which he refers to later ：
＂Of men under two years＇Eervice there are $5: 4$ ．or 54.34 per cent．These men with a few rare exceptions are in－ capable of imparting instruction．There remains，there－ fore，ouly $45 \%$ per cent which can be looked to，to provide instructors．Deducting from this number 23 per cent，representing 270 employed as artificers，ofticers＇ servants，bandsmen and others employed on duties not comected with instruction，we have only $17 \cdot 76$ per cent． from which selection can be made of trustworthy non－ commissioned officers，for the administrative work of the permanent corps，and as acting instructors for the active militia．Practically，the proportion is even smaller． Briefly，the result drawn from these figures may be stated thus：

\begin{aligned}
& \text { " Ender } 2 \text { years' service. } \\
& \text { Per cent. } \\
& \text { Employed on duties not connected with } \\ & \text { instruction. } \\
& 5+\cdots \\
& \text { Non-comissioned officers employed in } \\ & \text { the active duties of the permanent } \\ & \text { corps.... } \\
& \text { ゴけ } \\
& \text { Balance nominalis available to furnish } \\ & \text { extra instructors ......................... } \\
& \overline{100 \cdot(0)},
\end{aligned}

Now，Sir，that is sufficiently severe condemmation of the schools and other permanent corps ats at means of providing an efticient force for use in an emergency．thout half are not really efficient men，and the discipline is such as to have a bad effect on men of the active militia sent io these corps for training．He goes on to discuss how many are available for the purpose of instructing the volunteer battalions， $1 \cdot 20$ men in these corps are available for instruction；that is to say，about ten men in the whole force of 910 ，as it stood on the 30th of June last．It appears that more than one－ fourth of these corps are employed in duties not connected with instruction．That is a very large percentage，and，he says，the balance available as instructors is merely nominal since the corps are always below their strength．Of course，if they are below their strength even this miserable percentage of 120 disappears．Those statements of the General bear out my allegation that these permanent corps have failed either to produce and drill an effective and always ready force of trained men or to provide instructors for the active militia．The General goes on to point out some reasons for this state of affairs：
＂As I have pointed ont，a large number of men in the permanent corps are withdrawn from the regular instruc－ tional duties，which consequently fall more heavily on the remainder，and I cannot but attribute to this cause some part of the dissatisfaction with military service， denoted by numerous desertions and discharges by pur－ chase．When，as in these corps，the establishment is re－ duced to the narrowest limits，there is no room for mere show；and in the attempt to maintain it，there has been a serious sacrifice，of efficiency．Steps will be taken to remedy this fault．＂
I hope the General will have the support of the Minister in taking those steps．It appears that in this，as in many other branches of the service，effi－ ciency has been sacrificed for display．The Gentral goes on to point out the lack of uniformity in the system of instruction．He says ：
＂The establishment of a uniform，practical and sound system of instruction，both in dill and administration，is absolutely necessary．；

Anl he adds:

" While I cannot express myself as satisfied with the condition of the permanent force, I must bear wituess to the excellent work it has done in spite of many disadvantages."
The good results achieved, he says, are due to the active exertions of certain officers, while the faults of the sehools are rather owing to the system than to any lack on the part of those who conduct them. In another paragraph, he points out the necessity for a wider and more thorough military instruction of those attending the schools. He says:

Abstract

$"$ My ohjeet is to make the schools of instruction, not simply places for the acquirement of an elementary knowledge of drill, hut centres of military thought. where ofticers of the militia can find encouragement and assistance in the study of military history, tactics, administration and other subjects. I see no reason why volunteer officer: in Canada should not attain the same eminence. as experts in various branches of military knowledge, as many husy men serving in the English volunteers have done.

I shall not quote the whole paragraph. It is all worthy of attention hat not necessary for my argament here. After referring to the disorganized condition of the schools in Winnipeg some time ago and the reformation he has effected in it, he speaks of "C" Battery of Artillery at Victoria, and points out that it is impossible, under the present arrangement, to get the tronps in British Columbia, and drafts have to le made in the eastern provinces to keep the corps up to its proper strength. I think, in riew of the peculiar conditions existing in British Columbia amd the high price of halour there, it wonld bee on the whole cheaper and in other ways preferable to let us recognize the fact that memhers of the permanent corps in British Colmmbia must le paid more than the soldiers who are enlisted elsewhere. If men are drafted from the eastern corps and sent to British Columbia, and riml the ordinary rate of pay so much higher than that they are receiving in the battery, the temptation to desertion must be great, and it would lie leetter to pay a higher rate of wages and to secure recruits in that country. The General refers to desertions and discharges ly purchase, and so on. I will call attention to the figures in this respect showing a most extraordinary state of things, and proving, to my mind, either a grossly bad management or a very bad system which the officers are not able to remedy. The number of those lischarged by purchase last year, that is to say, those who were tired of the service and who managed, either themselves or by means of their friends, to purchase their discharge, was $10: 3$, being more than one in ten of the total force. The number who deserted was 1 m , being about one in six of the total force, and it seems to me that, when the service is in such a condition that one man in six deserts every year, there must be some thing rotten in that service. The total number of those who were discharged by purchase or deserted was 2.5, or more than 25 per cent who disappeared from the force during the year. Certainly, it is evident that the serrice has not been made as attractive as it should have been made to young men with a taste for soldiering. I find, also, that the convic-tions-by court-martial amounted to 128 during the year, showing, on the average, that about one man in seven has been punished for some serious breach of discipline or for insubordination. That is a very serivus state of things. Now we come to look at results as to the actual training of officers, non-commissioned officers and men belonging to the astive militia who attend the schools. We find that only 293 officers and men have been trained in connection with this force of 910 permanent soldiers. That is a very small proportion in view of the expense of these corps and in view of the fact that one of the objects of their establishment was stated to be to secure the training of officers, non-commissioned otticers and men. I canuot hold the present Minister of Militia responsible for this state of affairs except in a technical sense, lecause he has only recently taken charge of that depart:nent, hut I think it is only right to call his attention, and the attention of the House, to the glaring failure of these establishments. I desire also to speak in regard to the expense of these corps. Looking through the Auditor General's Report, which gives detailed aceounts of the expenditure, it seems that no system has l,een followed in the purchase of supplies. We tind that almost every article differs in price at almost every post. It may be that the contracts were let in Kington for "B " Battery, and in Quebec for "A" Battery, and so on, but it is evident that no greneral system was alopted of letting contracts, hecanse I find that the prices for general supplies, inchading even clothing and boots, vary in the different corps. I fimi, for instance, that the price of such a staple article ans coal oil varies from 12 and 1.5 cents in Lombon for the school of infiantry there, to $\mathrm{a}^{2}$ cents per gallon for the Mounted Ritles in Wimipeg. The price of conal oil at different places I find to be 12 cents, 1.5 cents, 20 cents, $2 x$ cents, 24 cents, down to 1.5 cents, 52 cents, and then 32 cents and 35 cents. If coal oil can be had for 12 or 13 cents in London, it can be laid down in any part of Canada for much less than the price here given. Then the price of coal also varies exces. sively. The price in Quebec was \$4.98, in Winnipeg it was \$8.85, and eren in Victoria, which lies almost at the mouth of some of the finest coal pits in the country, coal saries from si.50 to si.j. I do not know whether that is the local price there, but there are certainly great diserepancies in these amounts. I might go into a great many articles, but I will only call attention to the system of buying piecemeal in order to condemn it, and to urge that everything should be bought by contract as far as possible, and in large quantities for the whole force, and that, if the cost of transportation were added, it would show less discrepancies than are shown in the Auditor General's Report. Another question is the cost of water. I find that " C " Battery, Victoria, paid $\$ 151$ for water during the year. The cost of water for the Fredericton infantry school is $\$ 3(1)$ a year. It cost $\$ 367$ to supply the battery at Kingston, and $\$ 450$ to supply the school at Wimnipeg. But in Quebec, under what is called a special rate, we have the enormous sum of $\$ 2,(010)$ for the supply of water to the battery. Perhaps the Minister can explain that, but it seems extraordinary that the cost of water should be about five times in Quebec the cost of water in any other place in the Dominion. As to the provender for horses, hay and oats, I see that the accounts are given for so many rations, as they are called, without distinguishing the hay from the oats. The rations, of course, are so much for hay, and so much for oats. It is impossible from the figures to get at the exact price of hay and oats in most cases; though I see separate purchasers, in some cases, pay as high as S24 a ton for hay, which seems to le an extraordinary price. straw, in most cases, is bought at from sis to 818 a ton. I am sure the farmers in the immediate neighlourhool of these schools must le making very handsome profits, if these things are lought direct from the farmers.
Permanent Forces--Pay and maintenance of " $A$," " $B$ " and " $C$ " Batteries, Schools of Artillery at Quebec, Kingston and Victoria, B.C.... $$ 180,010$

Mr. BOWELL. This question has already heen elaborately dealt with hy the hon. member for West Elgin (Mr. Casey). Many of his remarks deserve a gool deal of consileration, hut on other points he betraysa want of knowlellge of the facts, and I may frankly state that I am in somewhat the same position myself. If the whole facts were known I ams sure the hon. gentleman would change his opinion. Asan illustration, I may say that I am just now informed by the hon. member for Victoria, B.C., that the price which he himself pays for the coal which he uses in his own dwelling, is s. 8 per ton, though he lives only sixty or seventy miles distant from some of the largest coal deposits on the Island of Vancouver. I suppose that is to he accounted for by the fact that a monopoly exists in the coal-fields on that Island, and when we consider the very high rate of wages that is paid in that country, and the fact that there is no competition, we can understand that the coal companies may charge just what prices they please. somewhat of a similar explanation might be made with regard to Manitoba. The hon. gentleman knows that all the coal taken to Wimnipey the fact that there is rery little competition in railways, added to the distance, explains why coalis so high in Wimipeg. My attention, and the attention of the department before I came to it, hat been called to the large amount paid for water supplied in the city of Quelec. It must be borue in mind that that water supply is not contined to "A" Battery alone; other forces are also supplied. 1 think this item inclucles the supply of water to the fort and the cavalry, and indeed to the whole military force in that city.

Mr. CASEY. Who occupies the fort besides the battery:

Mr. BOWELL. There is a cavalry corps and a cavalry school. I am inclined to think that, though it appears to be for the water supply for the battery alone, the item includes the whole service for that city. Probahly the hon. gentleman from Quebec Centre (Mr. Langelier), who was mayor of that city when this arrangement was made, may be able to give some information on that point. This much I do know, however, that the price paid for the supply of water to the different corps and forts in that city, is much lower than the price that is paid by the ordinary citizen consumer. I am not now discussing whether they charge too much, or how far they have to bring the water. The General's report is one prolific of discussion ; he has given a great deal of attention, $I$ have no doubt, to the whole subject. But it is questionable whether the House is prepared to adopt a suggestion, which has already come under my notice, in regard to securing the services of men for the full term in the permanent force. It is pointel out by him, that unless there is some system of pension adopted somewhat similar to that in the regular service, these difficulties will continually arise, particularly in a country like Canada, where labour is searce. If we are to adopt the pension system for all the officers and all the men of the permanent corps, we shall soon have a large charge on the revenues of this country. As to retaining the men on the force in British Columbia, there is some force in what the hon. gentleman has said with reference to the pay. There is no great inducement for men who have gone from Fastern Canada to that province to join the force on: tc count of the higher wages paid in other walks of life. We have not only to consider the rate of wages paid, but the food and the expense of living do not fall upon them any more than they do upon any recruit in any part of the service in old Canadia where living is cheaper. But I repeat, the inducement of higher wages might he such as to lead them to desert or to leave the force. The guestion will receive all the consideration that I can possibly give to the subject in order that we may renied, if possible, the defects that have been complained of by the (ieneral in his report. I camnot, however, concur in the opinion of the hon. gentleman, that this is owing to mismanagement in the department, particularly in reference to the permanent corps, for the very reason which he himself has given, reasons which have been adranced by the (ieneral. A great ditficulty surromend the maintenance of a permanent force in Canada, by reason of the small rate at which men are paid, and the great facilities that present themselves for leaving the force on all ocaasions whenever men think themselves improperly used, or when they have been court-maytialled for crime. Those facilities are so great, that I doubt not the enforcement of strict military discipline will result in the continuons reduction of the force by desertion, or in other ways. I have no good hope of suggesting any scheme by which that can be avoided, unless the country is prepared to pay the men two or three times more for their services than is paid at present. The whole question is surrounded by a great many ditficulties, and I can only express the hope that in the future we may be able, possibly, to carry out many of the suggestions of the General so as to accomplish what he has in riew, and what, I am quite sure, the hon. gentleman from West Elgin also has in riew, that is, to make the force as effective as possible, without making it too burdensome on the tax-payers of this country.
Mr. CASEY. In regarl to desertions, no doubt the discrepancy in the pay of the men as compared with the pay which men get in other employments, has a good deal to do with it. The (ieneral points out in his report that the undue amount of labour continually falling upon the active members of the force in consequence of the withdrawal of large numbers of them as bandsmen and servants from the actual work of the force, must make the service more mpleasant than it otherwise would le.
Mr. BOWELL. Does the hon. gentleman mean the active volunteer force, or the permanent force?
Mr. CASEY. I mean the commandant part of the permanent force as distinguishel from bands, &c.
Mr. BOWELL. The only way to avoid that is to increase the number and make the companies larger, so that you can take from them the bandsmen and the tatigue men, which are taken from all corps. Whea you take the bandsmen and the fatigue men ani the servants from a corps of only 42, you have very few leit to drill.

Mr. CASEY. 1 am not speaking of the fatigue men. My point is that there are so many men employed as bamdsmen, officers servants ami artificers that the number available for fatigue duty is largely reduced, and consequently their tern on the "rosier" comes more frepuently and the men become dissatistien. As to the puestion of pay, a very material adrance would need to the made in pay to secure efficiency. It is possible to obtain very good men for ser(n) per year and "found," especially if you treat them well and make the service pleasint to them. We are at present paying $$ 150$ per year, and if sill more were added, or about Siniman for the whole force, the pay would be sutficient to imince average men to engage in the service. The fact that one man in six has been convicted by court-martial during the year furnished a proof of mismanagement. Such a state of things would not prevail unless there was some misnamagement in the force. Courts-martial are the resulte of niggaralliness towards the force, or werwork or something of that kind in most cases ; they camot altogether be accountel for loy the imnate ""ussedness" of the soldier. The Minister of Militia did not deal with the guestion of purchasing supplies. I lesire to impress on him, and the Honse, the necessity, in order to effect ecomony, of purchasing supplies in considerable ghantities. of securing them from one or two firms in the whole bominion, who would supply the differtant pints, and the purchasing hy this system could le dome much more economically and etficiently than ly the different commanders under the present system. The (ieneral makes a similar suggestion in regatel to puldic bouldings, and the same principle is eynally applicable to the supplies for the different corps. The ouly way to secure these supplies economically is to purchase them in large fuantities and moler the influence of pablic competition, and I hope the Minister will give his attention to this question and arrange a plan for making contracts for these stores by wholesale. With respect to (uuelvec citadel, I do not understand that the cavalry school is situated there. You might ats well convert them into horse marines as to have them drill at Quelece citidel. The whole $$ 2,000$ for water supply is charged in the Public Accomnts to the battery. The Nlinister does not appear to know who else obtained a share of it. As to its being a special rate, it must he a specially high one, for it is four times as high as that charged for any wher corps. Even if two corps were covered, it would still be 'quite as much for each of them as is charged in connection with any two other corps in the eomutry. This item reguires explanation. P'erhaps the Ninister of Militia could explain it.

Mr.MeMCLLEN. It is well that considerable attention should be given to all the expenses in connection with the force, and as we have a new Minister of Militia now installed, he will no doubt be glal to receive every item of information and criticism that can be offered in comnection with the position of the force. I was rather surprised at the remarks of the hon. member for Elgin (Mr. Casey) with respect to coal oil. At Kingston, according to the Auditor General's Report, C-37, we paid $$ 36.11$ for 129 gallons of oil, or at the rate of 28 . cents per gallon. Any one acepuainted with the value of oil during last year will understand that this is an enormous price. Une would suppose it. was American oil. The committee is entitled to some explanation as to why it is necessary to pay such extravagant prices. If it was purchased at retail and charged at the outside figure, we could clearly understand how we were paying such a price. It is desirable that such extravagance should not le repeated. It is alsurl that we should pay as high as it cents per gallon for coal oil, and even in Kingston, where Anerican coal oil can he as cheaply laid down as any point in Canada, Ls cents per gallon for oil for the military college.

Mr. Mc.MULLES. I have drawn the attention of the Minister of Militia to some irregularities with regard to the prices of supplies, mid I would like him to give some idea with regard to the course he intends to adopt in the purchase of supplies in the future.

Mr. BoWELL. I umlerstoon the hon. gentleman to say that he thought the prices paid for some sapplies were too high, and particularly the price paid for coal oil at Kingstom, hut I did not unlerstand him to say that there hal heen any irregularities in securing the supplies. The deputy informs me that in every single instance supplies have leen purchased by tender, and that the lowest tender has been accepted. I can quite understand that the price of coal oil in Winnipey and British Columbia should le high, on account of freight charges, but why that should apply to Kingston 1 do not understand. I can assure the hom. gentleman that the department will exercise strict vigilance over these contracts in future, so that I may be able, when guestions are put to me next session if I shouhd live long enough, to answer the questions in reference to all these supplies. I yuite concur in the remarks made by the member for West Elgin (Mr. Casey) and the member for North Wellington (Mr. Mc: Nullen) in reference to the supplies for all these schools. I think that the suggestion made by the beputy Minister in the report with reference to the coal supply is one that deserves attention. I am in hopes that by asking for supplies for all that may be required for this section of the comatry, and for Quebec as well, we may be able to save some momey by it.

Cavalry and Infantry Schools........ S20, (han

Mr. McMULLEN. I do not wish to detain the committee by yoing into details connected with this iten, but I certainly think we should have the Ministers views with regard to the future, and whether he intends to run them in the same way as the pust. He knows there have been exceptions taken under some heads of this expenditure, and we should like to have his word that he would pay his persomal attention to this matter as well as to the others.

Mr. Boll ELL. This inonves a larger question than I am prepared to enter into at the present time. I think the hon. gentleman entertains riews that are entertained hy some other members of the House, that it wrould be adrisable to almolish some of these schools, that they are not accomplishing what we anticipaten; while others object upon the general principle of doing anything which would have the appearance of estalhishing what might be termed a permanent force. That is a guestion which will receive consideration in the future. I am of opinion that these schools have done a great deal of grood in encouraging a military spirit: and in forming a mucleus aromen which a larger army from the reserve militia might centre, if necessity should require. The question which has arisen will receive my attention, as to whether some means can be adopted hy which volunteer officers may be enabled to oltain their certificatesatalessexpensive rate than they doat present : not, perhaps, byadopting the ohd system which existed, when I passed an examination as well as many other officers who aldressed the House, but some monlified system by which I am in hopes it may be prssible to reduce the expenditure under this heall, and which would be of a more immediate and general lenefit to the volunteers themselves. Further than that, I am not in a position to say at the presem moment. For the information of the committee I may add, that the estimate for these corps is:-For the Cavalry School at Guebec,
 Infantry Company; Lomdon, sti, (N*) ; Toronto,

Mr. OPRIEN. I do not propose to enter into a general discussion of this subject, but there are one or two suggestions that I would like to make to the Minister. I would le very sorry to see any organic change made in the present schools of instruction; but, at the same time, I think great economies might he aceomplished. In the school at present while there is a nominal strength of so many hundred men, there is a deficiency of men for the very purpose for which these schools ane establishel, that is, instruction. The establishment is too much lroked upon as a corps rather tham as a school. While it is very desirable that the corps should le efticient, it is not desirable that the efficiency of the corps should be maintained at the expense of the usefulness of the establishment as a school. For instance, a number of men are taken from off the strength to serve as mess waiters and other kinds of supernumeraries. Of course there must be some men employed in these ways: but I would suggest to the Minister whether it might not he reasonable to make an allowance to the ofticers in lien of servants, so that no enrolled men should be employed for those pur $r_{1}$ oses at all. In short, the enrolled men should he employed solely in the duties of the school, and any fatigues should le either provided by an allowance to the otticers for the purpose, or ordinary men should be employed to do the work. It is absurd to enroll men and teach them their duties as soldiers, and then employ them at all sorts of fatigue duties alout the sehool. The more men there are the more temptation there is to the officers to employ them in those duties that do not belong strictly to their work as instructors. If you had forty men efficiently drilled, they would do all the work that one hundred do under the present system; and if you contined them strictly to their duties as instructors, you could afforl to pay them hetter, and then they would le more likely to stay in the corps. In this way you would accomplish at less cost very much better results than you do at present. Another suggestion I would make is this. The whole school might be turned out into a common or fieh or camp ground in the summer. You would not then be contined to a small mumber for the want of rom : insteal of having twenty men, which is mow the maximum of the school at Toronto, you could have a hundred and instract them at a propertionately less expense. There are many such things that might be done which would increase the etm. ciency of these schools. The primary thing to lee kept in view is that these schools are establisherd for the purpose of instraction, aml the moment you sacrifice the power of instruction to the object of simply having an etficient comps. you at onve depart from the purpose for which the institution was estahlished.

Experimental Farms...................55, 0 \%

Mr. MomLLLES. We require to have some explanations from the Minister of Agriculture with regard to this item. His attention was rey point. edly irawn last year to some expenses combecter with this farm, and I think some general ilea should be given as to whether those expenses are to he continued on the satie seale, or whether the farm is now in such a complete condition that we may hope for a reduction in the future.

Mr. CARLINi: I should he very glad to give any explanations the hom. gentleman may wish or the House may reguire. Ido not think we can reduce the expenditure at the present time. The S7,( $\times$ (x) that was expended last year was harely enongh to carry on the different farms with efticiency ; hut we expect in the course of a few years to lie able to make certain returns to the Receiver deneral that will possilhy reduce the general outlay for these farms. Of conrse, we have omly hat the farms in operation for the last four or five years and there has been a great deal of initial expense that will not have to be repeated; hut I expect the: in the future some additional works will he umiertaken with the sanction of the House, thongh I hope that by means of the returns I have spoken of, we shall lee able to reduce the total expenditure by yuite a number of thousands of dollars. I shall he glad to give any further explanations desired.

Mr. Momullen. I see by the Auditor (ieneral's Report that a very large amount was expended for painting. For instance, W. Howe received S1, 390 for painting roofs, blimds, &c. Is the hon. Minister prepared to say that this kind of expenditure is at an end, or shall we have a repetition of it next year:

Mr. CARLING: I do not expect that that anount can he expended every year, but the hon. gentleman must know that painting will have to be done every four or tive years. The amount charged here is, I suppose, for new work, new buildings constructed on the far:n.

Mr. Mcmules.

Mr. MoMULLEN. I would like to know whether the stallions referred to last vear are still under contract?

Mr. CARLIN(: They are still under contract. We have not cone to that item yet.

Mr. DAVIES (P.F.I.) I think, before we enter upon these estimates for the experimental farm, the hom. gentleman should do what we asked another hom. gentleman at the head of another lepartment to do, that is, give some general idea of the policy of the fiovernment for the coming year with respect to these farms, and tell us what has leen the expenditure in round mombers during the current year, and what have heen the receipts, and what is the deticit. The hon. gentleman ought to be ahle to tell the House what benefit we are deriving from this vast expenditure. I lecidedly object to entering upon these estinates, year after year, amd criticising these little details time and again without an exposition from the head of the department of the policy of the department with respect to it and its working. We should know what we are loing.

Mr. Mr:MILLAN (Huron). What is the reason there is such a large sum in the estimates this year: When the central farm was estahisher, $\$ 130$, (M) was expected to complete buildings, stock and plant. Now, there has been a very large amount more than that expended. It was supposed that $\$ \mathbf{s} \mathbf{4}(0,0$ (N) would establish all the stations along with the central farm. I would like to get some statement showing how it is this amount of $\operatorname{Sin},(000$ appears in the estimates this year. Last year we were toll that the amount then voted was to complete buildinfs on the whole of the farms, and I think the Minister of Agriculture made a statement long ago that $\underset{S i n}{5},(M)$ to $\$ 40,(M K)$ would be the whole annual expenditure. I believe some time subsequent to find sin, (M) asked.

Mr. CARLING. Do I understand the hon. gentleman wants a full statement of the expenditure mate on the five different farms?

Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). What I want to know is, how it is the Government required 575,000 insteal of $33,5,(M O)$ to $$ 40,(M)$, as was estimated at first :

Mr. ('ARLING. I think the hon. member for South Huron and the hon. member for Queen's, P.S.I., are well awate of what has been done in the different farms, as regards the very extensive reports published at the request of this House and distributed in all parts of the Dominion. These reports give a retailed statement of what has been done and what is intended to be done, and I think I can appeal to hon. gentlemen to say that the establishment of a central and branch farms has been a very great service to the agriculturists of Canada. I think my hon. friend from South Huron will know the vast amount of seed which has been distributed to all the leading farmers in the Dominion. Any member of this House who wished to distribute new varieties of seed had only to apply to the chief director of the farm tohave specimens of seed, of oats, barley, peas, wheat and new varieties of grain. The farmers are most anxious for the seed, and it has been distributed in all parts of the Dominion. We have very satisfactory reports from those firmers who received seed as to the benefit it has been to them and the benefit it is likely to he for the whole country. Last year we distributed 4,728 samples of oats, new varieties, that were tested on the farm here and considered to he of the very best kind. These oats, in small quantities of three pounds, have been distributed to all parts of the Dominion to leading agriculturists. We distributed 2,504 samples of barley, $\because, 2$ 응 spring wheat, 9.59 samples of corn, 144 samples of rye, 23:3 samples of potatoes, altogether 12,285 samples distributed to the leading agriculturists ia the different constituencies, and we have reports from a very large number of these as to the results; and the results have appeared, I believe, in the report of the chief director of the central farm. We have also been studying the different kinds of food best suited for the raising of stock. We have heen experimenting with the feeding of cattle, with the feeding of swine, and we also have dairy establishments where we have been making experiments with butter, and we foum that the improvement of butter-making in Canada has heen so great, mainly owing to this, that some $20,($ MN $)$ pommls were exported this last winter and reporten as number one quality, and we expect that with the new system of darying the hutter trade, which had fallen off so moch in (ireat Britain, will be much inc:ased. We som lope to have (ireat Britain as a cleief market for our export of butter. Then, we are experimenting with fruit trees. We have every kind of fruit trees on the farm, and we expect very soon to be able to show what can be done in the way of fruit raising in this particular locality, and also in the rifferent stations throughout the Dominion. We are testing the different varieties of fruit here and in British Columbia, and we are trying to see What success can he met with in Manitoba aml the North-West Territories, and also in the Maritime Provinces. These are some of the subjects we have dealt with, and successfully dealt with, and I believe they are received with very great approval in the clifferent sections of the country where the fams are established, and in this locality especially, where more people have the opportunity of visiting the farm and seeing what we are doing than in any other.

Mr. DAVIES (P.F.I.) I am not competent to discuss, nor have I the intention of discussing the different suljerts the hon. gentleman has mentioned in regard to the practical work of the farm. There are, no douit, gentlemen on both sides of the House who will do that. What I invited the hon. gentleman to state to the House was more the financial part of the operations. I would like to know what has been the total expenditure on all the farms. I would like the hon. gentleman to divide that, and to say what the capital expenditure has been on the central farm, on the Manitoba farm, on the Maritime Province farm and on the North-West farm; I would like him to state what the actual expenditure has heen for the current year on those farms ; I would like to know what the actual receipts have been for the current year, and what has been the loss or the profit, leaving the capital expenditure out of consideration. I submit that, before the House is asked to vote such a large amount as this which is asked, as my hon. friend has pointed out, somewhat in defiance of the principles which were laid down by the Minister when he introducel this matter to Parliament, we ought to know where we stand financially up to date, as to capital expenditure, as to current expenditure, and as to receipts.

Mr. CARLING. The hon. gentleman is asking for a great deal of information which was mexpected. Last year that information was askel for by an hon. member and was brought down. It was then stated what had been the total amount expended on each farm and the ammal expenditure on each farm. That information is now in possession of the House. I did not expect that I was going to be askel for that information now, but I think an hon. nember has asked for certain information to le brought down in which that is included, and that will be brought down in a very short tine, hut I have not that information at my disposal at this moment.

Mr. DAVIEs (P.E.I.) Then, I think it is most unfortunate and most regrettable that the hon. gentleman has not that information at his disposal, and, with due respect to him, I think he ought to have it at his disposal before he asks the House to wote this amount. He ought to be alle to submit to the Honse a proper statement of the receiptsand expenditure of the department for the previons year.

Mr. CARLING. That is not what the hom. gentleman asked.

Mr. DAVIEs (P.E.I.) Yes; but in addition to that he ought to have a proper appreciation of that expenditure in order that we might learn whether the anount asked is too much or too little, and for that purpose we should have a statement of the total expenditure. There is not it man in the House but who will admit the reasonableness of that. The hon. gentleman silys that last year a statement of that kind was brought down. I do not know where it is now, but we should have it hefore us at this moment. Before we were asked to vote this money we should have been plated in full and ample possession of the results of the expenditure of the money we have voted in previons years, and I am sorry the hon. gentleman camot state the capital expenditure up to date as well as the expenditure for the current year. I should have thought he hat these things at his tingers ends, and he should have them. The House should have had before it this information before entering upon the discussion of this expenditure. No doult the discussion of the practical working of the farms will be very interesting, but that is apart altogether from what I have asked as to the financial condition of each of these farms at the present day. If the head of the department says that he cannot state that, how can he expect the individual members of the committee to be able to state it? How are we to know it if the head of the department himself does not know it ! I am interested as a citizen of Canala in all these farms, and I am especially interested in regard to the farm in the Maritime Provinces; and I expected to have received a statement of the capital expenditure up to the present time, of the expenditure during the last year and the receipts, of the number of employes who were engaged, whether the expenditure had been increased or reduced, such a statement, in fact, as a head of a private firm would make to the members of his firm. I say that this haphazard way which has become too frequent, of asking the House to vote $$ 7.5,(10)$ or $$ 100,000$ without that information, is absurd. The hon. gentleman's information should he put in such a form that he could inform the members of the committee, and not only the members but the thousand and one farmers throughout the country who conld refer to Hansard, what these expenditures have been. I do not know whether the expenditure is justified or not. But we all ought to be informed on this sulject, and the hon. gentleman ought to have anticipated this request. It is a reasonable one, and he ought to have been prepared to give the information.

Mr. CARLING. I think the hon. genteman is unfair.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I have no intention of being so.

Mr. CARLING. I do not think the hon. gentleman expects, when an item in the Estimates is called in regard to the Intercolonial Railway or some canal work or other public work, that he should get the information as to the expenditure up to the present time.

Mr. DAVIEs (P.E.I.) I certainly would expect it.

Mr. CARLING. I do not think he would ask the Minister to state the expenditure for the financial year. Every item expended for the tinancial year is in the Auditor (ieneral's Report, and is in the hon. gentleman's band.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) That is for 1890-91.
Mr. CARLIN(:. The expenditure for this year has not heen increased. But I contend that the hon. gentleman is unfair in expecting me at this moment to make such a statement as he asks, when, as I have already stated, an hon. gentleman asker in the House last year the total expenditure from the commencement of these farms up to the present time, and that statement has heen laid upon the Table. A similar statement has heen asked for the present year, and it is being prepared and will be brought down to the House in a day or two. I do not think it is fair to ask that I should have all that ready at any moment.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I want the hon. gentleman to understand that $I$ am not actuated liy any spirit of unfairness in this matter. What İ have said refers to all other departments as well as to the hon. gentleman's. When the militia estimates came up the other night I made the same statement. The hon. gentleman who had that department in charge presented a report from the beneral, making ten or fifteen recommendations, and I said the hon. gentleman ought to be in a position to tell the House which of these recommenlations he was prepared to ask the House to adopt, and if there were any he was not prepared to ask us to adopt, he should give us his reasons why. Does the hon. gentleman suppose that the Secretary of the Navy at home, or the Secretary of the Army, or the head of any of the great spending departments, would come down and ask Parliament for so many millions a year without making a full and detailed statement of the expenditure for the previous year, and the proposed expenditure for the next year, giving the House imple and accurate information with regard to all these matters? The hon. gentleman says that in a day or two he hopes to place us in possession of information which we ought to have before we vote this money. Why, we are not here merely to record the wish of the Government; when we vote money we want to vote it intelligently, vote it on accurate information, on otticial information which we can rely upon and hold the Minister responsible for. I make these remarks in no spirit of unfairness; the principle applies to every department; every head, before he asks Parliament to vote a large sum of money, should lay before us detailed and accurate information with reference to the expenditure in the past, and a full declaration of the policy as to the proposed future expenditure.

Mr. Paterson (Brant). It seems to me that fault should not be found when a guestion of this kind is asked. As the Minister has pointed out, motions are made for the very information asked for by my hon. friend. My hon. friend thinks proper, when a subject like this comes up, that the Minister should be in a position to make a statement similar to that made by the Finance Minister in his Budget speech. If the head of a department were to do that, it would obviate the necessity of calling for these special reports. The Ninister, by giving a statement from year to year, stating, for instance, in what year a farm was establishen, what has been expended on it, and for what it is proposed to expend an additional sum, would le given the House, in a concise shape from year to year, informatien which would be of great henefit to the country, and he would give it in such a way that the press would take notice of it and distribute it to the people. When it is presented in the shape of a retirn, individual members may take notice of it, possibly it may find its way into the press, but it is not made generally known in the way it would be if the Minister made an annual statement in concise shape. In reference to the Intercolonial Railway and other roads, it seems to me reasomable aud natural that there should be given by the Minister in charge of that department, from year to year, a statement letting the whole country know what that roal has cost from beginning to end, what amount has been added to capital account year after year, what the assets are upon that road, what the exrenditure has been, what the deficit has been, &c. This, I understand, is what the hon. member for Queen's, P. F. I., has asked for, and he thinks the proper way would be for the Ministers in the future, not having done it in the past, when we strike an item of this kind, to rise and give a brief statement somewhat like the statement of the Finance Minister with reference to the finances of the country in his Budget speech. It seems to me that it is proper that it should be done, and nothing unreasonable has been askel by the hon. member for Queen's. I think it would be of interest to the country. The Minister himself would find it beneticial ; more public interest would be taken in the matter, and if there is anything in regard to which the management has not been what it should be, the Minister will get the benefit of the criticisms bestowed upon it by the public. The position is not taken against the Minister of Agriculture for the first time, it is not taken in a captious mood, it is taken as a general principle, and it ought to be followed by all the Ministers at the head of spending departments.

Mr. FOSTER. I think I must take exception to the doctrine laid down by the two hon. gentlemen who have just spoken. It is a new doctrine entirely in this Honse, and I think it is a new doctrine in the British House as well. It is an idea which is put forth to-night for the first time, that when the Minister of Agriculture comes down with an item of $57 \pi, 000$, not one dollar of which is for capital expenditure, not one dollar of which is to buy land, or to build a house, or anything of that kind, but is simply a sum which he proposes to expend during the coming year in working out the farmsthat he must take occasion to deliver a set lecture, giving a history of the establishment of the farm from the beginning, telling all the results up to the present time. I do not think chat is requisite, it has never been required ; I think it would introduce a very unwholesome system into the House. The Minister is here to give information upon subjects which are, for the time being, before the House, and it would be altogether gratuitous for him to go over the whole groum in the way the hon. gentleman asks him to do. For instance, the Minister of Railways comes down with a vote for the working of the Intercolonial Railway. If this demand is to be carried out, the first thing the Minister must do is to make a statement giving a history of the Intercolonial Railway from the time it was first started till the present, giving the anount of capital expended each year, the amount of capital expended during the whole period, going over a fieat mass of detail which the House might not wish to hear. It seems to me the only thing that can fairly le asked from the Minister is to discuss at this time what is involved in this ST, (h)0 and how he proposes to expend it. In discussing that point it is germane to discuss the expenditure of the past year, and if the hon. gentleman wishes to know about the capital expenditure, what the farm has cost in the way of capital expenditure, although that item is not under discussion, it is fair for him to ask it. But the Minister cannot be expecte: 1 to keep all these things in his pocket when he is discussing an item of this sort, and no one knows that better than the hon. gentleman. When I come down, as I shall a little later, with the steamship subsidies, the hon. gentleman's theory will demand that I should take up the history of steamship subsidies in this country from 1867 to the present time, what has been expended and what have been the results. I do not think the House requires it, I do not think it would tend to the sharp and quick management of the business of the comntry. The item which is before the House is oneabout which discussion has to take place; any question with reference to that, it is certainly in the province of the hon. gentleman to ask, and of the Minister to answer; and whatever other information on cognate subjects which he may have at his fingers ends. But to ask on an item of $\$ 75,000$, expenses for the coming year, which has nothing to do with capital expenditure, a history of the capital expenditure on the experimental farm may be very interesting, but it is not altogether so pertinent to the question that hon. gentlemen opposite should rise and lecture the Minister of Agriculture because he does not have that information in his hand. We must be reasonable in all these matters.
Mr. Paterson (Brant). I think the hon. gentleman has not made a very strong defence.

Mr. FOSTER. As strong as I could, but I could not compare with the hon. gentleman.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). From the remarks of the hon. gentleman one would suppose that four or five hours would be reruired to give these details. Mr. Foster. I dare say it would.
Mr. PATERson (Brant). That is not required.

Mr. FOSTER. It is not oreguired.

Mr. Paterson (Brant). But it is thought to be a proper thing that such information should be given, and more than that, a Minister fully up in lis department would he able to give off-hand the information now askel for. That the country requires it is evidence by the fact pointed out by the Minister of Agriculture himself, that year hy year, in order to obtain that information, motions have to be made asking for returns showing it. That involves expense, and work on the part of private members of the House. Private me:abers are really looking after the interests of the coumt $y$ and compelling Ministers to do their duty. It is suggested ly the member for Queen's (Mr. Davies) that, without the pressure of independent members of the House, the Minister himself should take sufficient interest in his department, and have sufficient acgiaaintance with it, to voluntarily vonchsafe the information required when the item comes up for discussion, without being asked by a formal resolution, todo so. This luty need not occupy more than a few minutes. Do s the Minister of Finance mean to say that the Minister of Agriculture should not have on his mind, or on a slip of paper, what the total cost of these experimental farms has been from the begiming: Does the Minister of Finance mean to say that the Minister of Railways should not have on his mind the amount of the capital account of the Intercolonial from its inception to now, and also the deficiency between receipts and expenditure on the road for the past year, or two years, or ten years? I think the Minister of Finance will admit that if a Minister understauls his department thoroughly, these are the very points on which he will be expected to give information. The very fact that members have to move special resolutions in order to obtain this information shows the need of the Minister leeing in possession of it, and giving it to the House, without its being moved for ly formal resolution. All the member for Queens (Mr. Davies) has said is, that this is the proper time to give the comntry information on these particular points, all information with respect to the cost of working and the policy to be pursued with respect to these experimental farms. That is all that has been asked. In order to do this, it is not necessary to speak two or three hours. It could be given in the form of condensen information, which would le of value to the country, and which the Minister himself, if he were an efficient Minister over his department, ought to be i: a position to give.

Mr. CARLIN(: I am sure there is every desire on the part of the Agriculture Department to furnish all information, and to hold back nothing with respect to the experimental farms. Reports have been hrought down yearly. Last year a report of 300 pages was submitted to the House by the chief director of the farm, giving every particular about the management of the central and four other experimental farms in the Dominion. The Auditor (ieneral's Report, which has been lirought down, contains every item of expenditure from 1st July, 1890, to lst July, 1891. Hon. members are in possession of that document, and also the information which that hon. gentleman asks.

Mr. Paterson (Brant). All the Honse would, therefore, like now would be for the Minister to state what information was contained in that report last year. As the hon. gentleman says we are in possession of it, he, as Misister, will know all alrout it.
Mr. CARLING: The hon. gentleman assuredly does not expect that I can, at a moment's notice, place my hands on the papers hrought down to the House, giving the total capital expenditure up to the present time. That was given by the department to the H onse, amd it is in its possession at this monent. The hom. member for Queen's (Mr. Davies) asks for similar information to that brought down last year, as to the total expenditure, on each of the farms. That information, I believe, is in the hands of the House: if such is not the case, it will be supplied in the course of a day or two. It has been truly said by the Minister of Finance, that this item of $5 \%$, (0x) is for the ammal expenditure, and it is not on capital accomint. Last year, 1390.91, the expenditure was nearly sis, (ox), and it was found after very careful enquiry that we camot dowith less for the coming year. We hope we will be able to combuct the farmas efficiently in 1892-93 as we did in 18:61)-91 within the estimates we are now asking. I am sure the reports sulmitted to the House and the conntry are as full as those of any department, and the hon. gentleman has only to take up the report of the chief director of the experimental farm of last year to obtain all the information required. A similar report for the present year is now in the printer's hamls and will be distributed to the members in the course of a very few days. We have endeavoured to push it forward as rapilly as possible, but of course it is impossible to secure for it precedence at the hamls of the printer.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) If I wanted a complete vindication of the position I have taken lefore the Committee to-night, I have it in the remarks of the Minister. As was stated by my hon. friend from Brant (Mr. Paterson), if the head of the department ought to know anything at all, he ought to know what the expenditure has been up to date, what the expenditure of the past year has been, whether there has been a net deficit or surplus, and he ought to be able to tell Parliament whether he hopes that the coming year will be for the good or for the bad. What does the hon. gentleman say? He says: Any hon. gentleman, if he reads $3(1)$ pages of the report brought dowin last year, and if he goes down to the printing office and reals the manuscript of 300 pages more which I hope will be printed in a few days, he will have all the infomation. I believe that it is not the intentiou of the hon. gentleman to treat this committee with disrespect, but he must see, in the very fact that he alone has had that manuscript in his possession, that he is himself the only person who knows the result of the working, and the expenditure for the past year. That very fact is conclusive to show that before he asks the House to vote the money for the current year he should tell us what these other 300 pages embody. I say that his answer is treating Parliament with disrespect. I am aware that we have fallen into a careless system in this Parliament, but I deny the accuracy of the statement made by the Minister of Finance that such is the practice in England. Any man who follows the Hensard Dehates in Fingland knows, that when the Army or Nary Estimates, or when Mr. Chaplin comes down with his Agricultural Estimate, or when any other Minister comes down with an estmate, he aluays makes a full and complete statement to the House.

Mr. FOSTER. On the item before it.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Not on the item alone, becasse there is no particular item, but it is upon the expenditure commectel with that department, the expenditure that he is trustee of. Parliament votes money in a lump sum, and Parliament appoints a man to control that expenditure, and Parliament has a right to have a report from that Minister. Before Parliament is asked to vote money for the coming year it ought to know what the Minister has done with the money entrusted to him the previous year. That is done in England, and if it were not done they would not get shrough their estimates at all because they are much more jealous there of voting money than we are here. I do not propose that the hon. gentleman should give a history of all the business since it began.

Mr. Foster. That is what you asked for.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E I.) Not at all. What I asked him to give was a statement of the capital expenditure of each farm up to the present date; the current expenditure and receipts for the past year on each farm, showing whether there has been a deficit and if so, how much on each farm. The Minister of Agriculture must know these particulars, and I suppose the Minister of Finance does also know then, but there is not a gentleman outside of the Covernment, who can at the present moment state whether the Minister of Agriculture intends to appropriate any, and what part to capital expenditure. We have in our hands here a brochure purporting to be a report of the Minister for the coming year. I went through that report in order to, glean, if I could from its few pages the information which I thought I would get from the heal of the department, but there is no such infermation in it. There is not a word in that report to show what the expenditure has leen on any one of the farms. It is bald and meagre, and retlects little credit on the department that got it up. 1 repeat the protest 1 have made on this vote, and I say it is neither fair nor right that the hon. gentleman should ask this money to be voted until he is prepared to make a proper explanation to Parliament. He himself says: I have the information in manuscript form, and I have sent it to the printer, and after you vote the money you can see it for yourself. That, I contend again, is disrespectiful to Parliament, and the hon. gentleman sees that he has given a complete answer to his own argument on the position I took when this debate commenced.

Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). I do not believe that we have ever had a complete statement of what the real capital expenditure on this farm has heen. I have called time and again for it, but it never has been forthcoming in this House. It is fresh in the memory of every hon. gentleman present that last year Ifought the Minister of Finance and the then Postmaster General to get a certain statement. The Minister of Agriculture was not in the House and could not come into it at the time, but I never could get a correct statement of the amount of money spent on capital account. I hold that if the farm is to be of full benefit to the farmers of this country, we should know what has leen spent on fencing, draining and road-making. The work of the farm proper should be kept by itself, as well as the work of the horticultural department, and the experimental department and the other departments, so that we should know what has been spent on eacl. It is true that we have the Auditor (General's Report, but that gives a lump sum for labour and other matters, and there is no detailed account. I have always believed that on a farm like this, that the farm proper, apart from the experiments should come very close to paying its own expenditure. I want the Minister of Agriculture, and the cievernment, and the Honse, to mulerstand that I ann not opposed to the farm; but I want the accounts of the farm to be kept in such a mamer that any intelligent farmer in taking the report can tell how much labour has leen spent on a certain quantity of land and how much has been spent to bring about the results in each department. Then with respect to the sending out of grain. I graut that it is one of the greatest benefits-a benefit that we can perhaps hardly estimate-that the farmers are deriving from this experimental farm, but I camot understand how it réguires such a large number of men to do the work. Although we did send out over I2,(KN packages, that could le accomplished if two men put up 010 packages each during the 150 days of winter, and that would not be too much work for them. We have a statement of some 39 men kept on this farm, a number of teamsters, and 19 labourers kept all the year round, 313 days. We ought to have a statement of what these men are employed at. The Minister makes up the dairy department along.with a statement relative to the farm, but the two ought to be kept separate. I do not want to have those two departments mixell, because there is a vote of $$ 20,0,0)$ for dairy purposes which we will discuss when it comes up in proper time. Last year I isked and I ask again, that the capital expenditure on the farm should be given, as well as the amual running expenditure. It is impossible for the farmers of Canada to derive the benetit that the farm is calculated to give unless these things are presented in such a way that a practical farmer can understand them when he gets the report. The work of all the men employed on the farm is mixed up together. Each of these men should have his own department, so that the country could get a statement of the cost of each.

Mr. CARLING. If the hon. gentleman will look at the last report brought down to this House, page 50 , he will find the annual expenditure of each farm.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) That is for last year, not. this year.

Mr. CARLING. This is for 1890-91. He will find there so much spent on horses and harness, so much for cattle, so much for implements, drains, tiles, blacksmithing, seed grain, stable manure, exhibition expenses, and so forth.
Mr. McMillan (Huron). Will the Minister state how much of that is for permanent improvements or capital? How much for actual annual expenditure?

Mr. CARLING. I do not eonsider that any of this is for capital expenditure. The capital expenditure is made by the Department of Public Works. On page in the hon. gentleman will find the items of expenditure for the central farm, and on page 51 the items for each of the other farms; and every item of expenditure has been brought down in the Auditor Gemeral's Report to the very latest diate.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Cau the hon. gentleman now state what the capital expenditure is on each farm?

Mr. (ARLING. I camnot saty at the moment. The information was asked lefore, and is in the possession of the Honse at the present time.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). Can he say what the expenditure of last year was in comparison with the expenditure of the previous year? That is in the report at present in the printer's hands.

Mr. CARLING: The expenditure will reach the sum of $37,0,000$.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). For all the farms:
Mr. CARLIN(i. For all the farms.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Kxactly Sid, (nno, no more, no less:

Mr. CARLIN( F . The hon. gentleman must know that nothing is kept back from the House. Everything is brought down in the proper way, throngh the proper hamels.

Mr. SIRROULE. I think the hon. member for South Huron (Mr. McMillan), and the hon. member for Queen's (Mr. Davies) must he hard to satisfy, after the information which has been given to them and the country with respect to these farms. Last year we voted money to distribute throughout the country 300,000 copies of the report, which gives the veryinformation these hon. gentlemenare asking for. I do not think the country is so ill-informed of what is going on at the experimental farm as to feel that any injustice is being done by our voting this $S 7 \pi,(x)$. At present we are asking tha ${ }_{i}$ 100,000) copies of the report now in the printer's hand be struck off for distribution throughout the country. The hon. member for South Huron is, I believe, connected with the experimental farm at Giuelph; at any rate, he was one of the commissioners appointed to look after it ; and I would ask whether he gave the information in the report on that farm which he asks for to-night in regard to the experimental farms of the Dominion? Ithink not. It is true, part of it is given. It gives the labour of all the students, and it states how much was paid for that labour, and how much certain lines cost; but in the aggregate that farm cost $\$ 37,(00)$, while the various farms of the Dominion, five in number, and carrying on much larger operations, are only costing $\$ 75,000$. Considering the great work that is leeing done, I do not think the country willgrumble at that expense. Formy part, I think the only thing the country has to complain of is that a larger sum is not voted for this object. When we consider the valuable work done, we must admit that this is the hest money spent by this Parliament. One item will afford an illustration of the benefit the country receives. Mr. Robertson, who was before the Agricultural Committee, announced to us no longer ago than today, that, by means of new information, they were able to tell the cheese-makers how they could get one-twentieth more cheese out of the milk than they have done in the past. What does that mean? We sold over $\$ 9,000,000$ worth of cheese last year, so that it means in round numbers an increase of S40), 000 on that single item. The same information enables the farmer's to make butter such as thit which last year was shipped from Ontario and sold at from 24 to 25 cents is pround, and when we remember that, by virtue of the operations carried on there and the information given, we are louilding up a valuable trade in England, I think we should not grumble at the expense. There is a very strong demand for more instructors to extend their operations, especially in the diairy line. I know from my own knowledge, there are applications from different parts of the country to send instructors to different points which they have not been able to reach yet. Applications have been made to the Minister of Agriculture to send these men, but the complaint is that not sufficient money has been voted to do so. Not to siay anything of the experiments in feeding and raising new varieties of grain and potatoes and other products, if you take the one line of cheese, you have a return to the country of ten times the cost of the farms. It would be leetter if we extenderl their operations and roted more money for this purpose than albuse the llinister of Agriculture and the Govermment for expending what they have.

Mr. MeMULLEN. We do not for a moment wish to be placed in opposition to the grant for the experimental farm. The hon. gentleman need not fancy he is going to create the impression in this House or the country that we have any desire whatever to frustrate, in the slightest degree, the beneficial operations of the farm, but we want the farmers to benefit by these operations to the fullest extent, and we criticise the expenditure of the people's money so that they will get an arderuate return. The year before last when the discussion of the expenditure was before the House, the Minister of Agriculture was not able to give the committee the report of the agricultural farm hecause it was not then printed, and though we sat the whole night discussing the question, he refused to forego the passage of the item until such time as that report was brought down. The First Minister then came in at six oclock in the morning, and urged that the demand of the Opposition for the sulomission of the report was a reasonable one, and the item was dropped until the report was laid on the Table. We are now in the very same predicament as we were thea. With regard to the remarks of the Minister of Finance, who took exception to our asking for a statement of the expenditure on capital account, if the Minister will real the item he will find that it is for the establishment and maintenance of the experimental farm. What does he mean, then, ly telling us there is no money intended for the establishment of a farm there? Why put it that way if he did not intend it? I notice that we have spent $$ 1,341$ on the establishment of a dairy. Now, the expenditure last year was $$ 75,000$ and that $$ 1,341$ was included in it. Will the Minister say he intends to spend a sum equal to that on the dairy for the next year? Is that an expenditure on capital account? Will he tell the committee that he is going to spend the same sum next year? The two items are clearly mixed. I would ask the Minister of Finance, who railed at us for asking something umreasonable, whether, if we were discussing instead an item for the construction of a post office or other public work, we would be refused the details of the expenditure? Why, the Minister would give the committee every item of information. Have we not the same right to have the details of the expenditure on the Government farms as in the case of any other public work? Notwithstanding the fact that there are items in the account submitted to the House last year for expenditure on capital account, is he prepared to say that we have closed the capital account? Has he no intention whatever of expenting any more money on capital account? Is he not going now to ask the House to vote for an expenditure in connection with capital account:

Mr. CARLIN(: There is no item in this $5 \%, 0(0)$ to be expended on capital account. If there is anything more to be expended on capital account, it will come down in the estimates of public works. There is none in this money we are asked to vote.
Mr. McMULLEN. Turn to page 203 of the Auditor (ieneral's Report and add up the items expended on dairying. I notice for the plant he has paid $$ 1,341$. Is that ammal expenditure or on capital account?

Mr. CARLING: There was a special item voted in the supplementary Estimates last year for dairy building and appliances, which was not included in the sin, (\%).

Mr. MomULLEN. It is included here.

Mr. CARLING. It was a special vote in the Supplementary Fstimates not included in the genemal votes for the experimental farm.

Mr. Mc:MILLAN (Huron). If the hon. member for North Grey will look carefully over the report of the dinelph farm he will find the expenditure on the farm proper is kept hy itself, he will find the expenditure on experiments kept by itself, the horticultural department ly itself, and he will find in that report, motwithstanding the large amount of student labour-iund the hon. gentleman has drawn on his imagination in saying there are $3(0)$, for there was never more than 100 in the college at one time -he will find that the professor of agriculture gave a statement that he had run the farm proper and haid a surplus of S1, $\mathbf{3 0 0}$, notwithstanding the fact that some $: 4,000$ of student labour had been applied to that farm, which cunnot be applied economically. With respect to the agricultural farm, the hon. memher for EastGrey (Mr. Sproule) has mixed up the two items. There are $\$ 20,(0)$ last year voted for dairying exclusive altogether of the $\mathbf{8 7 5 , 0 0 0}$ for the farm, so that they bear no relation to each other in the estimates. And I would ask, whether or not any of the butter manufactured in the experimental dairy was sent to the English market?

Mr. SPROULE. If I understand anything, it appears to me that the information is precise on every subject, as it is given in this book. The question was asked by the hon. member if any of the butter had been sent to the English market. If he had been in the Committee on Agriculture he must have heard Professor Robertson say they had been sending it there all season, and he stated where it was sent, how it took in the English market, and what probability there was of making a very important market there for this product. As regards the mixing up of the two items of expenditure, I do not think I said anything about that. It was the general work of the farm that I referred to, and the items of information that the hon. member asked for are in the report. I have the report before me, and if the hon. gentleman turns to page iol he will find, with all the details, that the aggregate expenses of the central experimental farm amounted to 84,801 ; the Maritime Province farm, 86,093 ; the Manitoba farm, 810,478 ; the NorthWest Territories farm, $$ 8,072$; and the British Colum:bia farm, 89,204 , and then the total is given, showing an aggregate expenditure last year of $$ 79,448$. I do not think anything in the shape of book-keeping could le plainer than that. I also think it is rery clear as to the cost of the experiments, the feed, the labour and so on.
Mr. ARMSTRONG: I wish to take exception to the remarks of my hon. friend from East (irey (Mr. Sproule). I repuiiate the inlea that any hon. gentleman on this side of the House has ever ob. jected to the work of the experimental farms, or has tried to belittle the operations carried on there. But I submit that the question of the cost of carrying on these operations is a fair subject for criticism, and hon. gentlemen on this sile should not be blamed for exercising what is not only their right, but their luty of subjecting these items to the sererest criticism. I agree thoroughly with the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule), the chairman of the Agriculture Committee, as to what he has said in regard to the experiments that Professor Robertson is carrying on. I thought his evidence given to-day before that committee was of great importance and value, but that is not the guestion now before this committee. We are now asked to vote $\$ 75,000$ for the establishment and carrying on of experimental farms, and the hon. gentleman will find that an additional sum was asked last year, and is asked this year, of $s(2), 0 \times 0$ for the dairy experiments, so that that has nothing to do with the matter which is before the committee. I think the Minister has not met the question which was raised by the hon. member for South Huron (Mr. McMillan) who said that, when these farms were estallished, the Minister male an estimate which he said would not be exceeded as to the cost of supporting these farms. Now we find that double that amomet is askel for. The hon. yentleman to-night asked, and reasonably asked, for an explanation as to why this additional amount has been incurred. No one on this side has said that there was anything wrong in the increase, but we have a right to know the reason for that increase, and we insist upon knowing the reason. The Minister tried to answer hy saying that a large quantity of seed had been sent through the country, but that does not aceount for more than a very small part of that expenditure. A very liberal estimate of the expenditure on seed would be sici() or $\$ 700$ or $\$ 800$. Then the Minister said they were making dairy experiments. The same oljection lies to that statement as to the statement of the member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) because for this an additional sum of $\$ 20,000$ is asked. I submit that the hon. gentleman ought to give some explanation on the point which has been raised. It is an explanation we have the right to demand, it is one which the House wants and the country wants.

Sir RICHARD CARTVRI(iHT. I think, iefore this is alopted, the Minister ought, in all conscience, to have given us the report on the experimental farms. There is no subject which is attracting more attention, or which deserves to attract more attention, than the progress of these experimental farms. In this report which I have had placed in my hands, I find a solitary page devoted to the subject of experimental farms. The hon. gentleman tells us there is a report being printed which will be submitted in a few days. Under the circumstances, I think it will appear to every reasonahle being that that report should he placed in our hands before we are called upon to discuss this subject. More than that, every one knows that the position of our farmers in various parts of the country has been seriously affected hy recent legislation in the Cinited states. In this report, I notice that the hon. gentleman makes a very short allusion as to how two-rowed barley is likely to succeed in Canada. A very small quantity has been sent forward by the department, some 300 or $4(x)$ bushels, and that has leen very well receivel by the English farmers. I would like to know what are the prospects of introlucing two-rowed barley in Canadia? If it were possible to do that successfully, it would relieve our farmers from many of the difficulties they are now suffering under, but we require more than the very meagre report we have here. Many farmers of high standing have told me that under our climatic conditions, it will reruire an extremely exceptional year before you can hope to produce that duality of barley in fit condition for the English market. That is a sulbject of tirst rate importance, and we would like to hear from the Minister of Agriculture the opinions he has received from the various professors who have experimented on this quality of barley and what conclusion the department have come to on that very important subject. If it shoull prove, as the hon. fintleman seems to indicate, that we can substitute the two-rowed barley, for the variety which has been ordinarily cultivated here, we should be glad to know it, and I would like to have the information in regard to it, and also as to the various experiments which have been conducted under the Department of Agriculture as to the shipment of eggs and other produce to England. On these matters the report of the Department of Agriculture is dumb. There are only a few lines as to two-rowed barley. I think the Minister of Agriculture should be in a position to give the House a general résumé of the experiments which have been carried on in that direction by the officers of his department. Nothing is more important to us thin to find how far we can supply the markets which we have lost in the United States by other markets in England. I hope the report on this subject will be very fnll and exhaustive, and I think we should have that in our hands before we disciuss this item.

Mr. CARLING. I have information from Professor Saunders, director of the experimental farm, that wherever six-rowed barley can be successfully grown in Canada, two-rowed can be successfully grown. I have now in my hands a report made hy an expert in the old country as to the two-rowed barley that was sent over there. We sent over 400 bushels of two-rowed barley, properly cleaned as required by the English maltaters. The expert says:
". The stability I have proved to be exceedingly good, indicating soundness of material. The extract was equivalent to 87 pounds per quarter; and, coupling all the preceding facts with the judguent I formed of the malt, irrespective of its use, I assay its value 3 sis. to 36 s . per quarter. I may say that had I wished to obtain $a$ greater extract, so as to attain the maximum amount possible, I could readily have increased it, but I deemed it, under the circumstances, preferable to secure quality rather than quantity. The beer after racking has remained entirely satisfactory, and the very numerous people who have tasted it have been almost without exception of opinion that it is extremely good. Should you wish to have fuller and wore complete notes of a more technical class, either as to the nature of the water employed in the brewing and of the malt itself, I shall be happy to place them at your disposal. I assume the above report is sufficient for your present purposes, and I have much pleasure in testifying, as a practical brewer, to the value that good malt of this class would prove to the brevers who understood its use."
36 shillings per quarter is equal to 02 cents per bushel. We have ascertained that barley can he shipped from the city of Toronto, or any other point in Ontario, to the consumer in England, covering all expenses, for $2 \bar{i}$ cents per bushel of 48 pounds, which would leave 6.) cents per hushel net to the farmer. Now, this is a report from a very competent man, who values the barley at 3 in to 36 shillings per quarter, and we have information that we couhl sell millions of hushels of the same quality that we sent over. Part of that barley was grown on the experimental farm, part of it near (iananoulue, amd some of it in western ('amada. From all the information we have, we believe that if the farmers will take care of their groumd, will properly clean the seed and see that it is well harvested and well cleaned, tit for the maltster, and such as they prepare in Englami, we can always realize goon prices. But all our farmers have not been so particular in cleaning their barley and in putting it through the threshing machine. A great deal of our barley is cut in threshing, which makes it perfectly useless for malting purposes. If our farmers would take greater care in getting clean seed, and having the ground well preparel, and having the barley well cleaned, there is no difficulty whatever in getting a good price for it; and unless they do that, they will have to take an inferior price. Six-rowed barley is not in great demand in England ; it is not so heavy, it is not so plump, as the two-rowed barley, hence the desire of the Einglish maltsters to have two-rowed barley in preference to six-rowed barley. But unless it is thoroughly cleaned there is no use sending it to the Finglish market. The English people want a good article, and they are prepared to pay a good price for $i t$.
Mr. PATERSON (Brant). What is the average per acre grown on the experimental farm, and on the other farms?
Mr. CARLING. The two-rowed barley on the experimental farm has varied from something like 30 to about 70 bushels per acre, according to the soil. Two-rowed barley has yielded 3 or 4 bushels per acre more than six-rowed barley, and if our farmers would see that nothing but good seed was put into the grounid, and if their barley was well harvested and well cleaned, they would be sure of a good market.

Mr. McMULLEN. I got two-rowed barley year before last, and sowed it in the same field, with the same manuring and same attention as the sixrowed barley, and my experience has, been this: It will pay any farmer in Canada to grow sixrowed barley and pay 30 cents a bushel to send it to Buffalo to market rather than to grow tworowerl barley and send it to Fngland; it will not yield within one-third of what six-rowed barley will yield. I an talking from personal experience. It has got to be sown earlier in the spring than six-rowed harley, it takes a longer time to grow, and the result is that you cannot reap it in time to preserve the colour the same as you can with the other harley. Everything considered, I maintain that any man can sow six-rowed barley with the expectation of paying 30 cents a bushel to get it to the American market, and he will make more per acre than by sowing two-rowed barley. I have it in my barn now, and there are people all around me who will not sow it because they are satisfied it camot be grown successfully, at least in our section of the country. The statements of the Minister that it yields from. in to 70 bushels an atre is a surprise to me. I would like to have the name of any man who will say that he has grown in) or 60 bushels per acre of two-rowed barley.

Mr. TYR WHITT. I have also had a little experience in growing two-rowed harley. I have grown it for three years. I legan with ten acres three years ago. In that year the experiment was not satisfactory. 'The last two years I doubled my acreage and the result has been most siatisfactory. The secomd year I soll the growth of my crop as seed for 7 on cents per hushel, and the last year I could have sold my entire crop, had I kept it, for seed, but solil on the market for . ol cerits i bushel in the fall when the ordinary larley was only bringing $4:$ cents. During the past three years it has been grown hy a great many farmers in my neighbourhood, and the result has been precisely the reverse of the experience of the hon. gentleman. Last year my whole erop averaged 45 bushels per acre, and I have heard of many other crops in the neighbourhool which were said to have turned out 50 hushels to the aure, although I had no opportunity of verifying the statements.
Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). Less than three weeks ago I was talking with one of the largest grain dealers in western Ontario, and he told me that he did not know a single buyer that had bought barley to send to Fngland, who had not lost heavily upon it. He said that while it was true that tworowed barley could be raised, and he could get some samples, he could not oltain a sufficient quantity. This was the experience of a man who had been in the grain trade for over 20 years. This is not the first time thatattemptshave been made to raise two rowed barley here and export it to the old country. I know that two shipments were made several years ago. They were sent to the old country market, lut the shippers lost heavily on them and never tried future shipments. I have no doult but that grain buyers have done their very best to establish a market there, but they have failen, anil have lost money. With respect to the yield of the tworowed variety : I have tried it for three years. One year I got a little more of the two-rowed than the six-rowed, but for the other two years Idid not get a crop within five or six bushels to the acre of the six-rowed, although they were planted in the same field. Another great drawlack to the two-rowed larley is that it is 8 to 10 days later than the sixrowed.

Mr. WALLACE. I think the experience of the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) is not the experience of the farmers throughout western Ontario, especially in the part of the province in which I live, because the miversal testimony there is that the two-rowed barley, which the hon. gentlemen opposite seem so anxious to decry and prevent being grown here, vields from six to ten boshels per acre more than six-rowed barley.

Some hon. MEMBERs. No, no.

Mr. Wallace. I am quoting from farmers, and I can give the names of 20 farmers whose testimony is in that direction.

Mr. Mcmlllen. Well, give us the manes, and we will put them down.

Mr. Wallace. Mr. Chas. McNeill, Vellore P. O., 20 acres, yielding more than in hushels per acre, which is many busheis in excess of the sixrowed variety. The hom. gentleman can write to Mr. McNeill and ask him to verify that statement : also to Mr. Andrew MiNeill. Mr. Charles Mc Lean, Vellore P. O., is another. I , biserve that the hon. gentleman is not taking down the names.

Mr. McMlldeN. They will appear in Houvard.

Mr. W aLLace. Mr. Mclean, who is a next daor neighbomr, has even a letter record. Others include Sum. MeClure, Elder's Mills P.O.: Lochiel Cameron, Elder's Mills P. O. : and Wim. Faar, Woorlbrilge. With respect to the statement of the hon. member for South Huron (Mr. Mc.Millan) that grain luyers lost money on two-rowed barley, I refer him to Mr. Dundas, of Lindsay, who informed me that he had gone over to the old country and returned from there last Jannary; that he had made sales of every bushel of two-rowed barley he could get at very profitable figures, and he would be prepareal to buy all the two-rowed barley he could purchase during the next season. He also stated that there was an excellent demaml for it in the old country: that the barley had been very satisfactory to the purchasers there, and very satisfactory to himself, although he has paid froin 4 to 6 cents a bushel more in (anada than was asked for six-rowed barley. If these are facts, they prove that two-rowed larley is more productive than six-rowed barley and that the price is higher. I can easily understand the motives of some hon. gentlemen opposite who are doing in this Honse what they have keen doing all over the country, trying to prevent the farmers increasing their prosperity. I remember in May and June last, when the prospects of the agriculturists were very dark indeed, it appeared as if the darker the prospects of the farmer the brighter were the faces of hon. gentlemen opposite. In this way, as in all others they saw their prosperity in the depression of the farming interests, and they are pursuing the same course to-night.

Mr. McMULLEN. The remarks dropped by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Wallace), in regard to members of the Opposition, are quite untrue. There are no hon. members who would be delighted to see the faruers prospering so much as would members of the Opposition, and the only reason we find fault with the policy of hon. members opposite is simply because it is ruining the farming community and pauperizing them. With respect to two-rowed barley, the hon. member for York (Mr. Wallace) has spoken from what he has heard. I spoke from what I know and from my personal experience. He has only given what some other people have told him, and perhaps they have not told him all the truth. I know that two-rowed barley recuires to be put in much carlier in the year than the other barley, requires a much richer soil, nore attention, amd is a harder crop to raise. Moreover, it will not come out so early as the sixrowed harley. It will yield one-third per acre less than the six-rowed variety. I am prepared to prove that by positive experience, hecanse I sowerl it on the same ground, cultivated it in the same way, and gave it the sime general attention, and $I$ am prepared to give testimony before a committee that the two-rowed will not yield within one-third of thesix-rowed. In somesections the wo-rowerlmay be sown with alvantage, and I shall rejoice indeed, if we can raise it successfully and find for it a good market in Britain or elsewhere. What we want is to secure the raising of grain by the farming community in a way that will tend to enrich them, because they want it banlly enough. That is my experience $u$ ith respect to two-rowed barley, and I speak by the book, while the hon. member for York (Mr. Wallace) hats only stated what he has heard.

Mr. CARLING. The report of the department states that 10,015 farmers in different parts of the Jominion furnished the results of their experience with two-rowed barley, and reported that it yielded $3 \frac{1}{3}$ hushels per acre more than the six-rowed. Specimens of barley were sent with the report. The evidence of the 10,015 farmers should he equal to that of the hon. gentleman, who is not a farmer.

Mr. McMillan (Huron). From what report is the hon. gent leman reading:

Mr. CARLINA. From the experimental farm report.

Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). Of this year:

Mr. CARLING. I am reading from last year`s report, page 42. I may say to the hon. gentleman that the yield this year has been better than last year and more favourable.

Mr. CHARLTON. I am sure all hon. members will be pleased to hear that the experiments that have been carried on in the growth of the tworowed barley, have proved so successful. There is no person in this House, no person in the country desiring the welfare of Canada, who will not rejoice that a new species of industry is to be added to our other industries, a new production is to be added to the other productions of the comntry: I was struck with a remark made by the hon. member for West York (Mr. Wallace), with respect to the superior advantages derived from raising tworowed barley. He informed us that in the experiments made, which had proved successful where he lived, farmers had realized from this barley 4 cents, 6 cents, and in some cases 8 cents per bushel more than the value of six-rowed barley for export to England, and that, by engaging in this business of fostering the growth of tworowed barley, we were able to secure a price for that production ranging from 26 cents down to 22 cents less than we could secure for the six-rowed barley, which was raised with so much ease, if we had free access to the American market. That is according to the statement made by the member for West York (Mr. Wallace). We once had a market in the States for millions of bushels of barley, it was one of the leading agricultural proluctions of this country, but now we are struggling to introduce the growth of a grain which may or may not be adapted to the country, in order to supply the loss of the American market to our farmers. The best statement made in the House to-night as to the advantage of raising this barley for export is, that we are getting a few cents a bushel more than we are getting in the United States for the six-rowed larley, even though there is a duty of 30 cents a bushel on it, which by so much lessens the price to the (anadian farmer. Hon. gentlemen had better turn their attention to securing our natural market for the kind of barley the country is adapted to, and which can easily lie sold in the United States. Our friends on the opposite side are amusing the people of the country with this talk of two-rowed barley, just as they amused them for a couple of years with the talk of reciprocity with the United States. They dis: solved this House a year in adrance of the time, lecause they wished to refer this treaty to a Parliament which was not a moribund one.

Mr. FOSTER. Speak to the item.
Mr. CHARLTON. I am spenking to the item. I advise the Govermment to cease amusing the people by will-o -the-wisps, and to get down to the principle of securing for the people of this country the natural and protitable markets that they should enjoy and can enjoy again, instead of amusing them with this talk alont two-rowed barley on the English market : a market 3, mon miles away, as compared with the market at our doors.

Mr. SPROUL.F. I suppose the hon. gentleman is accusing the fiovernment of amusing the people of Canala with will-o-the-wisps, the same as he amused the people of Buffalo a few days ago. I wish to refer to the statement made lyy the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) that the two-rowed barley realized about one-third less bushels per acre than the six-rowed barley, and also to his statement that if we are to get a yield from the two-rowed barley it must be sown at a much earlier period, and that the seed must be clearer amd the ground in a better condition. If the hon. gentleman will take the experiments given in this report, where the two different seeds were sown on the same ground at the same time, and treated in the same way, I think he will admit that he is mistaken. Return for six-rowed barley:

This shows that in every case where the six-rowed and tworowed barley were sown on the same day and in the same soil, and got the same treatment. the results have been the same of the two-rowed barley. The member for North Norfolk (Mr. (Chatiton) seemed to wander off on the National Policy and unrestricted reciprocity and the British market, but it is not necessary now to answer him on that subject. I know that Mr. Stopes, who was before the Agriculture Committee, gave most specific information upon an experiment with two-rowed harley made in England, and the information he gave was that Canadians could grow the two-rowed barley, and if it wete of the same quality as he tested, they could realize, according to the time they sent it to Fngland, from aid to 89 cents a bushel. Surely that would pay much better than by exporting six-rowed barley at from 4:3 to $\bar{i} \%$ cents a bushel. In every instance which was given to the committee the yield of tworowed barley was quite as much as the yield of the six-rowerl larley, and it commanded a higher figure in the English market than the six-rowed sloes in the United States. All the reports which have been presented to the committee show that the experience has been that an important trale can be clone in that line by the Canadian farmer.

Mr. Mc.MULLEN. I wish to draw the attention of the Minister to the report he has in his hands, and from which he quotes. He says there were ten or eleven hundred reports sent in last year, hut I find he has only printed 15 or 20 of them, and I fancy these have heen the lest ones. If he will turn to page 41 he will find the following tiable:--

The Minister stated to the House that the experience was that it yielded from 40 to $: 50$ hushels per acre, and the member for West York (Mr. Wallace) says that it yielded in his case 4 in bushels an acre. I ask the hon. gentleman to turn to this report and he will find that there was only one yield of 4.5 bushels per acre in the case of one sample sent to British Columbia. I hope the Minister of Agriculture will say something in defence of his own report, because it is quite clear he was trying to mislead the House.

Mr. SMITH (Ontario). I am more than surprised at the hon. members of the Opposition telling us that two-rowed barley will not answer in Canamla. In the section of the country where I live it has worked admirably, and the crops last year were in every way sitisfactory. In 1890 I sowertsix acres. 1 canmot say that the result was altogether what I would have liked, but that was perhaps my own fault. In the following year I sowed 21 acres, and I got i 2 bushels to the acre, of a very fine sample, and it was sent to the old country. I do not yet know the result of that experiment, hut I have no donbt that it will answer the purpose of malting in England as well as the six-rowed barley does in the Cnited States. I ann not surprised at the remarks of the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. MeMullen), bacause for some years past, ever since I have heen in this House, he has been treating this House and the country to similar remarks. His only hope, it appears to me, is that the farmers of Canada will see alverse times, to help his party into power. I have faith in two-rowed barley, and I intend to increase my acreage of it this year, believing that it will continue to pay me as well as it has done in the past.

Mr. (ARLIN(i. I stated that from information I had received from the chief director of the farm, the yield on the experimental farm was from 30 to 70 bushels to the acre. I have a communication which was sent to the farm by Messrs. Hogg & Co., of Beaverton, along with a sample bag of two-rowed barley that yielded 60 bushels to the acre in 20 acres. This sample was sent to England as a specimen, and the price realized there was 35 shillings per quarter.

Mr, McMULLEN. I may have misunderstood the hon. gentleman, but I understood him: to say that the reports received of the proluct of tworowed barley showed that the yield in the country was from 30 to 70 bushels to the acre. I would like to enfuire what quantity was sent to Englant?

Mr. CARLIN(i. We sent 400 bushels.
Mr. McMULLEN. Where was that purchased?
Mr. CARLING. Part of it was grown on the experimental farm, part of it in the district of Gananofue, and part of it further west. Five or six different lots were collected from so many farmers, brought to the experimental farm, cleaned, and sent to the old country. It weighed $52 \frac{1}{2}$ pounds to the bushel.

Mr. McMULIEN. Will the hon. gentleman give us the names of the farnners from whom he purchased it?

Mr. CARLIN(i. I cannot do that now. Mr. Pike, of Markham, was one.

Mr. HEXiHES. I am very much surprised that the success of tworowed barley in Canala is at all dombten. It is true, the year before last a great many farmers sowed it tor thickly and too late, and the crop did not slo itself justice. But the experience of last year. I shouhd imagine, would satisfy the most pessimistic men of the Opposition. In Victoria Comeny, south as well as north, there were humireds of acres sown with it. One farmer, Mr. . John Dimes, of Oakwooh, had 80 acres, of which 10 or $1 . \mathrm{i}$ acres yieliled 7.5 bushels to the acre. It was all sold at 510 cents a hushel. He had 40 acres of six-rowed barley, which yielded from 30 to 3.5 hushels to the acre, and lurought nearly fo cents a hushel. Mr. Willian Cannon, of Oakwooh, hat about 2 . MKO bushels of tworrowed barley. I could give the names of forty or fifty farmers in Victoria Comnty who grew two-rowed harley successfully in large $\mathrm{p}^{\text {uantities. It was a very amusing sight to }}$ see the famers coming to market with their harley. When one saw a grod, honest Conservative face coming along, one knew that he hal the British or "Tory" two-rowed barley: lout when a dark (init combtenance was seen approaching. one knew that he had the Jinkee or " wirit six-rowed harley. The Hagg Bros. of Oakwood. purchased thousands of lushels of tworowed barley to sell again for seed. amd up to the present time they have lisposed of nearly all the seed they could purchase in that locality at rery satisfactory prices. We are told that fireat Britain is not the natural market for this harley. Why the Americans are themselves shipping barley at the present time in large quantities to England. For a number of years they have grown more than they reguire for malting purposes. Any one who has studied the markets and the crops of the United States knows that for years the ammal product there has largely increased. The reports of the American Secretary of Agriculture indicate every year a large increase in the yield, and a corresponding decrease in the price. I understam that Mr. Matthews, of Toronto, has established a malting house in the old country for six-rowed barley, and is going to test the question of placing six-rowed Canadian barley on the English market in the form of malt. The objection is made to two-rowed barley that it requires to le sown early, hut the farmers of Canala are intelligent enough to attend to that. This harley does not need any richer ground than the other. Mr. Dames grew hoth on the same farm, and his yiell was from 30 to 40 rowed per acre, and he received an average of from 10 to 12 cents a hushel more for the tworowed than he did for the six-rowed. It is a cleaner crop to handle than the six-rowed, is easier to raise and just as easy to sitve. I remember years ago in Darlington Township in Durham, and also in Ontario County two-rowed barley was grown and grown successfully, but the farmers abandoned it owing to the fact that the maltsters could not mix it properly with the six-rowed barley. However it has come in now, and if farmers can heep the seed free from the six-rowed barley. I am satisfied they will have one of the most productive and valuable crops in this country. We have heard this same cry of " failure" from the Opposition before. I remember when guite a young lad reading their speeches in opposition to the cattle trade with the old country, which started some years ago. It would never succeed they said and the American market was the only one we had. I am satisfied that in a few years our barley will he as successfal ats our cattle shipments, noit only two-rowed hut sixrowed.

Mr. MoMILLAN (Huron). The United states exported from Atlantic ports 160 , (hx) bushels of barley, and from Pacific ports $\mathbf{2} \mathbf{4 8}$, (0x) bushels last year. That was all that was exporten from the United States, according to the British agricultural reports of 1891 . Julging by these returns, our barley will have to be of leetter guality than the average marketed now in the British markets. In 1889 the highest weekly average was 21 s . Bi. and the lowest 19 s . oll., and the arerage for the year was $2 . \operatorname{sis}$. 10n. In $18(0)$, the highest weekly average age was 2 Ss. Sl. If we could grow barley and semil it to the British market equal to the arerage of harley grown in other comeries aml in direat britair. it would only bring us is cents per bushel. when we derluct $2 \%$ cents for senting it there: ami I hold we cannot send barley equal to the averase placed on the British market. In $185 \pi$ - 88 I siomel in the filasgow market three weeks, and examinel their harley very closely, aml I assure you. Sir. it. is of a quality I never saw equalled in Camada. I find that there are seven teamsters. Are they ongagen the whole year on the farm:
Mr. CARLIN(i. Yes.
Mr. Mr.MILLAN (Muron). They have $\overline{7}$ teathe. How many are kept occupied:

Mr. CARLIN(i. They are woining teams and the team that drives the huss to the city every day.
Mr. Mr.MILLAN (Huron). I find there is com. siderable teaming done besides that. I find los days teams engaged on the farm amomiting to sis.i, besides the teams that belong to the farm. What are they engaged doing:

Mr. CARLING. They were engraged during the busy season. The hon. gentleman will understand that in a farm of 400 or $\mathbf{D ( A )}$ acres, if we want to get work rapilly done we must employ extra teans for a short time.

Mr. MrMILLAN (Huron). At what?

Mr. (ARLING. Seeding or ploughing.
Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). I run a farm myself of 401 acres. I keep three teams, and I crop $1=21$ acres, and keep ahead with the work. Of course experimental work may require an extra team. hat I think six teams ought to do all the work of that farm.

Mr. CARIING: I think you will find that the teams of the central farm all work as steadily and as long as on the hon. gentleman's farm.

Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). I see that 19 labourers are employed over and above the teamsters and cattle men and gardeners. I find that 7 teamsters are engaged the whole year, and los days' teaming besides, and 4 cattle men, and besides these there are 19 labourers.

Mr. CARLING. I am told by the chief director that 6 of these men are looking after experimental work, some are employed in distributing seed of which we send out many thousind packages, and some are looking after cattle.

Mr. Caring.

Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). There are 19 men besides the cattle men and the gardeners and the teamsters. What have the 19 lahourers todo?

Mr. CARLINA: Some of them are weeding and assisting and doing experimental work on the farm. I camot give particulars of every man's work. Fivery man employed does his work thoroughly as well as any man in any part of the country.
Mr. Mc.MILLAN (Huron). Is that staff kept up during summer and winter?

Mr. CARLING. There is a less maber during the winter than in the summer.
Mr. Mr.MILLAN (Huron). This shows the ne ${ }^{-}$ cessity of what I stated, that the farm proper shomid tee kept apart from the experimental and horricultural deparment. It would give greater satisfiction to those engaged in conducting the fatm and to the farmers of the country. If this fatm is to le of any guide to the farmers, it should be combucted pretty much on the lines the farmers themselves have to follow with regard to their own farms: to be a guide to the farmer, we should know every item of expenditure. I hold that on an experimental farm such as this, while there should be a sutficient ammont of stuff lought for what is distiluted amongst the farmers in order to keep up the fertility of the soil, the proper course would the that which is pursued by suceessful farmers, and that the manure ought to le made on the farm which is to be put on the farm.
Mr. Mr-MCLLEN. I see that the ammunt last vear expended for lalmourers alone who were Ensigeel on this farm was $$$ is, 2sti. The Minister should give some alditional infrimation as to the reastn why such an enormous amount is paid for lahurr. and whether he intends to continue that enmons expenditure on the farm next year.
Mr. (ARLIN(: This expenditure for labour includes all the labour on the farm with the exception of the heads of the different branches.
Mi. McMLLLEN. The Minister is mistaken. The Auditor General's Report at page B--212) gives the different officers and assistants and so on, and then the lalourers are given and the amount paid for the labourers amounts to $$ 15,286$, apart altogether from the officers and the assistants.

Mr. CARLING. The name of every one of the lahourers is set out and what he does, such as teamster, gardener, stableman, and so on.

Mr. McMilleaN (Huron). There is a certain amount here for drugs and chemicals. Where are they purchased?

Mr. CARLIN(: They are imported from (iermany.

Mr. McmillaN (Huron). There is a large quantity of hay and straw here. I see that 15 tons of hay were bought. I think there should be some experiments mide in regard to keeping horses on grain and straw. There should not be any more animals kept than the farmi can properly keep. A year ago, I saw a large amount of straw lying outside, and I am afrail it had not been properly taken care of. Then I find there is a waggonette, and I should like to know where that was purchased. There is freight on that waggonette of \$33. The waggonette itself cost $\$ 468$. Then there is carriage and waggon supplies, $\$ 134$, and six robes for the waggonette, $5 \mathbf{5 1} .50$. This waggonette and the other things seem to have cost nearly sion). Where did this come from?

Mr. ROWAND. We had a statement last year that certain experiments were to be tried by which an animal would be kept on each acre of land.

Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). I should like to have an answer in regard to the waggonette.
Mr. CARLING. I suppose the same thing was done on this farm as on the fatm in (iuelph, in which the hon. gentleman is interested, that a waggonette or omnibus is used for going backwards and forwarls to the city to carry officers and people comnected with the farm. I think that is done on the farm the hom. gentleman is connected with, which he says is conducted in such an economical manner, and which I think cost nearly $$ 63,000$ last year.

Mr. McmillaN (Huron). We are not discussing the Guelph Agricultural college, but I want to know where this waggonette was purchased. They have students at the farm at cuelph, and I have yet to know any part of the civilizell world where students get such a cheap education as they do there.
Mr. SPROULE. I misht call attention to the fact-
Mr. Mr.MILLAN (Hurom). I have askell for an answer to my question.
Mr. SPROULF. Is the hom gentleman the only one who has a right to spatk on this subject:

Mr. CHARLTON. I rise to a point of order.
some hon. MEMBERS. Order.
Mr. ('HARLTON. My question is whether it is in order to entirely disregard questions asked iny members and treat them with contempt?
The Chalrman (Mr. Desisos). The hommember for East (irey (Mr. Sproule) has the floor-
Mr. SPROULE. I did not understand the hom. member for Huron (Mr. McMillan) had asked a question-
Mr. MeMillan (Huron). I asked where it was bought.
Mr. SPROLLE. I umlerstool the hom. gentleman to say that the agricultural farn at Guelph was run upon proper principles. He also discussed manure and a waggonette and some other things, an.l he said we would not find any institutions to equal the one at Guelph.

Mr. CHARLTON. He has not hat an answer to any of his questions yet.

Mr. SPROULE. I find that at (iuelph the cost of the garden and lawn was for foreman's salary, $\$ 499$; assistant, $\$ 449$; second assistant, $\$ 216.90$ ); teamster, $\$ 300.25$; labourers, $\$ 1,183.34$ : and all this to keep up the lawn, and yet that is an institution which is kept up on such tine principles. The item of labour is alrout the same as it is here. Then the total expenditure for mantenance of this establishment which is run on principles different from those here, which is much less expensive, which covers less area, where far fewer experiments are made, amounts to $\$ 4,37$. The expenditure on the farm proper is $\$ 4,75460$, and on experiments $\$ 3,265.20$. Then the experimental dairy costs $\$ 600$ for labour, besides the salary of the assistant, and the amount expended for instruction is $\$ 1,187.94$, making an aggregate net expenditure for maintenance inall departments of $\$ 37,2227.94$; and that is run under a commission of farmers, of which the hon. member for Huron is one. Then we hatve the amounts for seeds, fertilizers, manures, livestock, waggons, salaries, maintenance, furniture, even down to binding twine, for which $\$ 39.10$ was expended. For repairs andhlacksmithing, $\mathbf{s} 4$, 0 ) ; furniture, $\$ 43 ;$ i.nplements, $\$ 293$. Advertising, printing and postingare paid on the same expensive scale. So the hon. gentleman has no right to say that in that college farmers get instruction cheaper than in any other place in the country. I find that they had last year, 146 students insteal of 300 , as 1 erroneously stated when I spoke before. In my julgment the province pays a very large amount of money for the returns it gets from that college. It appears that there was only one team of horses for 146 stulents, I think that team must lrave been ploughed to death. And all this is done under the able management of a brard of experiencel farmers of which the hon. member for Hurm is one. I think that he is hardly in a position of criticise the management of the experimental farm here. Any one who will read these two reports must come to the conclusion that the hon. member for Huron is not so great an expert in farming as he pretends to be.
Mr. Mc.MILLAN (Huron). I am glad to learn that the hom. gentleman has been stulying the report of the Guelph College. I want to know from the Minister where this waggonette was purchased?

Mr. CARLIN(: It was purchasel from Morelame © Co., London, Ontario. It is a very good calriage, and very cheap.

Mr. SPROULE. The hom. member for Huron complains of the expenditure for labour on the experimental farm. I want to remind him that at Guelph they pay El, , (NX) for labour in keeping up a lawn.

Mr. EDIVAPISA. As diversity is the spice of life, I propose that we discuss a humane question, and take up the item for dehorning cattle at the farm.

Mr. ROWANI. I have not yet got any explanation from the Minister of the result of the experiment of setting apart 40 acres for the keeping of a certain number of animals. We were told they were trying the experiment of keeping one animal on one acre.
Mr. CARLING. I am told that 2:5 head of cattle were kept on 40 acres for ten months.
Mr. CASEY. How about this waggonette? The Minister sail it was a good and cheap one. I know perfectly well that for the price paid for this waggonette, you could get a first-class covered carriage.
Mr. CARLING. How many would it carry ?
Mr. CASEY. It woull carry six.
Mr. CARLING. This carries sixteen.
Mr. CASEY. Oh, I see, the Government are ruming a van to the farm. It must le a sort of circus waggon to run to and from the farm. Perhaps the Minister will not object to repeating his explanation as to this waggonette for my benefit, as I was not present when he gave it before.
Mr. CARLING. It is used just as waggonettes are used in other institutions; it runs between the experimental farm and the city, two or three times a day, to convey people comnected with the farm to and from the city, and also to convey packages.

Mr. CASEY. I do not see how it can be made useful to the farm, although it may be convenient for the otticial staff. I look upon it as an unnecessary piece of extravagance. The difficalty we hate experienced in getting information from the Minister only emphasizes what I said the other night as to the injulicionsness of throwing upon the director of the experimental farm other taportant duties. I have no doubt that gentleman is a very able man, but no single man can do more than he is supposed to lo, and the consequence is that a great deal of what he is supposed to do must be done in a slip-shod mamer. Now, it is proposed to load him with other duties as Commissioner at the Columbian Exhilition. I am afraid that next year we shall have even more difticulty in getting information alonat the proceedings at the farm than we have this year.

Mr. Me.MULLEN. In my opinion the experimental farm is conducted in the most extravagant way. The hom. member for direy (Mr. Sproule) stated that on the agricultural farm at Guelph something over $\mathrm{sl},(\mathrm{OH}$ was expended for labrur, but here we have $\$ 15,200$ expended for labour. The Minister satys that this waygomette is run from the experimental farm to the city twice a day. I notice that over som is paid out for cala-hire in comection with the farm. How is it that there is so much cal)-hire when there is a waggonette run twice a day between the farm and the city". Now, any person realing this report from leginning to end call cone to ano uther conclusion than that money is uselessly expemded. We are anxious that the experimental farm should le a success, we are anxions that the farmers may get the benefit of the experiments mate there : but as the hon. memher for Hurm (Mr. McMillan) has said, if they are going to benetit by thrse experiments they must be conducted in some degree according to the usual custom of omr farmers throughout the Dminion. If the Giovernment operate that farm in a way far different from the way in which farmers rui their farms, the experiments camot be of mach value in the way of giving farmers an ilea of adrantages io, be derived from adopting a particular system of agriculture. The only advantage the farmers have had so far has been in the samples of seet semt out and also from some experiments in dairying. These are all good in themselves, amel it is to be hoped that the farmers will benefit by these experiments, but while we are willing to encourage anything that will tend to enlighten the farmers and help, them to develop the resources of their farms, weare not willing to continue an munecessary expenditure. There is an expenditure of sin, $\mathrm{B}(\mathrm{K})$ on labour for the experimental farm alone, in addition to all the teamsters and ofticials and attendants. The extravagance displayed is absurl, and should be cut down at once.
Mr. Mcmillan (Huron). I see an item for stabling horses, 21 weeks. Where were the horses when we paid for stabling?
Mr. Carling. These horses come in from the farm and stay in the city part of each day, when they are stabled, especially during the winter months.

Mr. CHARLTON. I see the cost of maintenance of the farm is $\mathbf{5 3 9},(\mathrm{KX})$ in round numbers and the revenue is $\$ 2,400$. Is this a correct statement of the sale of the products of the farm: The discrepancy is a very great one.

Mr. CARLING. The hon. gentleman will understand that the hags of grain sent all over the Dominion are not chargel for ; that samples of wheat, barley and oats are sent to farmers in the different provinces for the purpose of improving their crops and giving them better varieties. We do not sell any, hecanse we desire to improve the value of our cereals.

Mr. (:HARLTON. I can understand that the farmwould not be a revenue-making establishment, and my enguiry was simply for the purpose of getting information. Is a record kept of the quantity of grain, seeds, and plants distributed, and can their value at a fair market rate be arrived at:

Mr. CARLIN(: A record is kept of all the seads sent out, aml a report is secured from each farmer as to the results.

Mr. MPCMILLAN (Huron). 1 understand there is an engine and grinder on the farm. How is there an item for sio3 for grinding :

Mr. CARLING. The grinder was ont of order, Was broken, and had to be repaired.

Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). I keep a large numher of horses and cattle, hat I have not spent one cent for grinding fool for many years. If this farm is to be run economically, a similar line should be followed. There is an item of $$ 40$ for gravel. Is that the cost of the gravel, of the cost of drawing it:

Mr. CARLIN(i. The cost of drawing it.
Mr. Me.MILIAN (Huron). This work could be done during the winter when the horses were not otherwise engaged.

Mr. CARLIN(: They are engaged then in draw ing manure, of which we cammot get sufficient.

Mr. MeMllLAN (Huron). With respect to the revenue, I observe Stifi for berries, of which Mr. Porthwick paid $2063. How is it so many herries were sold to this gentleman? Is there any opportunity given to all parties to parchase berries, or how are they sold?

Mr. (ARLiN(: Two or three of the leading fruit dealers are written to, and those whogive the highest price receive the berries.

Mr. MeMILLAN (Huron). I have a letter in my possession making great complaint with respect to certain parties receiving all the benefit. I hold that every person should have an opportunity to buy berries on taking a certain quantity, and that it is not just to sell all to one or two firms, and not allow others the chance of competing. There is an item of sizs for cattle. What kind of cattle were they?

Mr. CARLIN(i. They were bought to experiment with.

Mr. MoMILLAN (Huron). Then there is an item of 5474.70 for milk. At what price was the milk sold?

Mr. CARLINi. Five cents in winter and four cents in summer.

Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). There is an item of $$ 1.2 .0$ for butter. Liast year the promise was made that part of the butter made at the 0ttawa dairy would be carefully packed and sent to the English market. Has any been sent there?

Mr. CARLIN(: No, not from the experimental farm dairy.

Mr. McMILLAN (Haron). Was all the butter sold here? I have no fanlt to find with selling the butter, but weare seeking to establish a good market for our butter in England, and a good guantity should be sent there. We have no guide as to the quality of the butter mamufactured, so long as it is sold in the local mathet. But if we hatl a quality established in the English market, we would be able to make a comparison. In future, a certain quantity should be sent there.

Mr. ('ARLIN(: 20 , (x) pounds of hatter, which was mate in Canala under the supervision of the dairy sommissioner, were sent to England this year.
Mr. Mr:MILLAN (Huron). What price was ob)titined:

Mr. (ARLINi. IO. shillings per cwt., which Wis equal to ${ }^{2} 4$ cents per pound net.

Mr. Mc:MJLLAN (Huron). I helieve that it is in the interests of the country that we should have all this information. I think that the ereameries in the west which are not under the care of an inspector, get something like 24 and $2 \pi$ cents for their butter. There are a good many things here that are rather expensive. I find sis for making a plan of the farm, and for survey and plan of drain, stio. If there was a goon practical manager on the farm he should be capable of doing all that himself.

Mr. SEMPLE: While giving the fovermment redit for the distribution of seed glain, set it must be remembered that we have a very ingurfect knowledge of the operations of it last jear, on account of the report not being lefore us. However, we can see in the Auditor (ienemal's Report that the expenditure has heen very large and extravagant. The:e was mo doubt there was a mistake manle When so many stations were put in operation in different parts of the comntry. I notice that for the experimental station at Agassiz, British Columbia, there was an expenditure of $57.73: 34$ and the revenue derived was only $50.0 \%$.

Mr. CARLING. That farm has just beem established.
Mr. SEMPLE. I find that among the salaries there is one Dun Lee, a ('hinaman I suppose, who laboured 804 days and received $$ 818$. Another remarkable item I find is, an item for the rent of a horse $$ 240$ for twelve months. I would like to ask how the Chinaman put in so many days work, and also some information about the horse?
Mr. CARLING. I am toll the Chinaman was the only man who could read or write English, and he signed the pay-sheet for the others. With reference to the horse I think it is a misprint and that it should read rent of a "house" instead of a "horse."
Mr. SEMPLE. I have made a calculation and I find that the hay appears to have cost about 546.42 a ton, which seems to be an extraordinary figure. Taking into consideration the enormous expense of that station and the small return from it, I would ask, does the Minister intend to keep the British Columbia station up:

Mr. CARLIN(: The station at Agassiz has only been established for two years and we were not able to raise the hay required. I am told by the director that we never paid higher than $82 \pi$ a ton for hay. It is of course the intention of the Govermuent to keep up that station at Agassiz, as it is a very important station. It is one of the most important stations in the Dominion. We want to show what can be produced in British Columbia. It is soling to be one of the best fruit districts in the Dominion, and I fancy there is no place in Canalla where such a variety of fruit can be grown as in British Columbia. Fruit will be one of the chief articles producel there, although we will raise goonl stock and other articles which are of interest to that part of the Dominion and the country generally:

Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). I see that Slls is charged for papers and magacines for the central farm, and si3.2.) for papers. What kiml of papers are they"
Mr. (ARLIN:. They include all the horticultural imil agricultural papers : also chemical papers and jontrals that may be reguired for the use of the ofticials.

Mr. SEMPLE. The expenditure on the farm at Indian Heal was $810,82 x .25$, and, leaving out the grain raised, the revenue amounted to only S449.45. It is well known that in a comntry like the prairie province no experiment is required to teach farmers grain growing. Every farmer who has practical experience understands it.

Mr. CARLING. Has the hon. gentleman read any of the reports of the Indian Head farm:
Mr. SEMPLE. I have the cost here.
Mr. CARLIN(: The hon. gentlenan says that it is of no use to experiment there. I would ask if he has read the report": If he has, I think he will change his opinion.
Mr. SEMPLE. We do not need an experimental farm to teach the first principles of grain growing. These farmis are well enough for testing the best kinds of grain to be grown : but the expenses of this farm at Indian Heal compared with the small revemue, make a very bad showing. The Brandon farm. too, leaving out the grain, yielded only $$ 10.11$ of revenue.
Mr. CARLING. If the hon. gentleman looks at the reports, he will see that part of that money was spent for stock for the farms.
Mr. SEMPLE. It is true, if we had the report of last year before us, we could discuss these matters more satisfactorily, and we might not reguire so much explanation. All we have to go by is the Auditor General's Report. Taking the three farms, the Agassiz, the Indian Heal and the Brandon, they represent an expenditure of $$ 27$, 979.26 and a revenue, learing out grain, of only $$ 232.61$. This shows to my mind that a great mistake has been made in establishing so many experimental farms in different parts of the country.
Mr. CASEY. It is all very well for the hon. Minister to say that we should look at the report. My hon. friend who has just sat down has looked at the Auditor General's Report, and he finds that a large mount has been expended and very little revenue received. The hon. gentleman asks the reason for this expense, and he is asked ly the Minister why he does not look at the report. The hon. Minister should know that he is asking us to look at a report which he has not yet laid before us. In his leisurely, placid, indifferent mamer, he has allowed matters to jog on from the 30 oth of June until now withont laying the report on the Table.

Mr. CARLINT. Our report is made up to the 31 st of December.
Mr. CASEY. It is a long time since the 31st of December.
Mr. CARLINi:. It takes some time to print it.
Mr. CASEY. That is not the reason it is not on the Table. The hon. gentleman has been too much occupied with experimental voters' lists to pay attention to the experimental farms since the 31st December last; and in the usnal slipshod way in which that department is carried on, we are here discussing the management of the farms for the past year without having the materials for that discussion. We have two amateurs ruyuing the experimental farms- an amateur Minister of Agriculture, whose former business has certainly given him no aptitude for the position he holds, and the director of the experimental farms, who most have accuired his practical knowledge of farming since he lecame director. The whole business has been experimental--we have an experimental Minister and an experimental director, and the result has been a lavishing of money to very little use. I venture to say that if a committee of representative farmers were allowed to go through that experimental farm and expressed their unbiassed opinion of it, it could only be the same as that which I now express, that the whole thing has been a costly and wasteful piece of experimenting from begimning to end. There has been a lavish expenditure on buildings for officials amd farm purposes, costing twice as much as they ought to cost. There has been a great deal of pottering experimenting with wild grasses, and with such weeds as lambs yuarter, which grows in everybody's garden--all sorts of fads and tiddle-faddles, over which there is a great deal of chuckling in the reports. There has been a perfect deluge of copies of this report of 18!6, which I have read carefully, and I honestly say there is not in that report as much information of practical use to a farmer as he would find in six months subscription to an agricultural paper. Look, for example, at the experiments on barley---two-rowed barley yielding from 16 to $27 . \frac{1}{2}$ bushels to the acre. Does anylody suppose that these yields, collected from the produce of a-tenth of an acre, can be taken as a guide to the proluction of those kinds of barley on ordinarily good land and with ordinary practical treatment? Everybody knows that a very large part of that farm is almost entirely untit for agricultural purposes. I knew it long before it was purchased, and had many a walk over it. I have seen the potatoes nearly uncovered by a strong wind, so light is the sand in which they were plantel, and this practical Minister of Agriculture or director chose this sand heap as the place to make a practical experiment for the benefit of average farmers on average land. As to the Brandon farm, I think the Minister ought to le able to explain why it was necessary to expend this $\$ 11,000$. Not having a report, we must draw on the immense sources of information lodged in the heads of the two gentlemen who are furnishing us with information to-night.

Mr. MomillaN (Hurm). I see they have a thresher now on the Indian Head farm.

Mr. CARLIN(: A tread thresher.
Mr. Mcmillan (Huron). I see that there is Slia hesides paid for threshing. I see that there is a certainamomet of furniture paic: for. What is that for?

Mr. CARLIN(i. That furniture was hought for an oftice and for a room to entertain strangers.
Mr. CASEI. I find experiments made in spring wheat with the parpose of introducing new and more productive kinds of wheat. 1 timd a great number of varieties of spring wheat experimented on, one of which brought the tremendious return of four lushels to the acre. The highest return was 204 hishels to the acre, and not one of the samples weigheil 60 lbs. to the bushel while some weighed as low as $\mathrm{m} \neq \mathrm{l}$ los. Amongst those were lihite and Red Fife, two kinds of spring wheat known to farmers for generations and which, owing to the absuril location of the farm and the kind of culcivation received, produced the tremendous return of 1 s : bushels to the acre in the one case and 12 llbs. to the bushel and the other 36 l 1 l s. Can anything be more absurd than $t_{6}$ conduct a series of experiments for the purpose of showing people that two kinds of wheat they have grown for years can be made to produce such absurd results? Any medium farm in the bominion could show better results than are shown ly this attempt to instruet our farmers is to the kind of wheat or anyother grain they should use. Another experiment was with wheat sown in drills $2 \underline{1}$ feet apart. I do not guite see the advantage of making experiments in growing spring wheat in this manner. If the results of this farm are to be of any use, the crops there must be cultivated as they would be in practical farming and should show results which a practical farmer could imitate, and not in rows $2 \underset{2}{2}$ feet apart. Nine varieties of wheat were sown in this mamer on sand lowe which was manured in the spring of 1890 with from 18 to 20 tons of stable manure per acre. Fach variety ocoupied 6 rows, covering a space of one-twentieth of an acre. These 9 specimens in 6 drills of $2 \underline{2}$ feet apart produced, with the 1 sto 9 ) tons of stable manure per acre, the following results: Camplell's Triumph yielded of bushels per acre. This was Campbe!!'s triumph but not Professor \$aunders's triumph. Ladoga produceil i $\ddagger$ bushels per acre and it weighed aif lbs. to the bushel. Red Fern yielded at bushels per acre and so on, the highest yield for any variety being $s$ bushels to the acre. What, in the name of common sense, thas the meaning of these experiments: Wheat planted in drills like Indian corn could not yield any sort of reasonable crop per acre and would not afford any results which would be of imy use to anybolly. It was one of the fiddle. fallle experiments tried there for what reason I camot imagine, excepting to furnish material to fill out a report. Even with this hand culture of these kinds of spring wheat, it was impossible during $189(0)$ to raise wheat.up to the standard weight on the molel farm. Experiments in rye I shall not refer to, out of regard to the feelings of the Minister of Finance. Experiments in winter wheat have also been conducted on this model farm. The idea would not oceur to anybody less thoroughly practical than the Minister and the learned director, of trying experiments in winter wheat in this neighlwourhool. Everyboly knows that this section is. not fittel for growing winter wheat. To spend money, time, energy and science in struggling with the prollem of raising winter wheat, in this Lamentian country, is something which could only have occurred to the extremely great mind of those who are conducting the farm. Ifind that the yields were better than those of spring wheat, but still nobody can suppose any results obtained in this peculiar climate of Ottawa would be of any use to farmers even 15 or 20 miles from this most favoured spot. I need not go on to the experiment of mangles, turnips, and so on, as they do not show anything which every farmer does not know from his own experience. The managers of this farm have breen going, child-like and blandly, over experiments made scores of years before. They have been repeating old experiments, which every farmer has to make in the conrse of long cultivation. Experiments in beet-root are of a certain value, as the cultivation of this root is not much gone into and not much known in this conntry. Experiments in the growth of grain are of very little value. I was over that farm last summer at the time when the crops were ripe 1 am thoroughly satistied, if the farmers of Canada got no bette: crops than those I saw on the motel farm, which is supposed to be the beacon light for the whole Dominion, the practical farmers could not live. It was simply an exhilition of how poor crops could be riised li,y scientific management on a poor piece of grouml. These results are not emborlied in the book which is here, which does not contain the results of last summer's operations.

Mr. Mc.MILLAN (Huron). I see there was grain sold from the Indian Head farm. Was that for seel?

Mr. CarliNi. Most of it has been sold tor seen to the farmers in that neighbourhood.

Mr. MoMILLAN (Hurom). What system is adopted in selling this grain?

Mr. CARLINi:. It is charsed at from 5 to 10 cents a bushel more tham the ordinary price of grain.

Mr. MomildaN (Huron). Is the quantity limitel?

Mr. CARIING. To one bag.
Mr. FEATHERston. The other day, in the Committee on Immigration and Colonization, we had a very interesting address from Professor Saunders on experiments, and I think these experiments are very necessiry, and I think the people should have the aivantage of these experiments. While we were discussing the question, we found that some of the members from the Province of Quelec thought they had a grievance because they did not get a distribution of seeds from the farm in proportion to their population, but Mr. saunders showed them that they get a due proportion. Now I find that we in Ontario have a grievance, and the hon. member for North Victori: (Mr. Hughes) has shown that the Conservatives have the preference in regard to the two-rowed barley. He says the (irits are growing the six-rowed barley, and the Conservatives are growing the two rowed barley. I think some localities are hetter aulapted for this than others. Those who have been growing two-rowed barley have been giving their special attention to it, with the results which have been shown here to-night. The hon. member for West York has statel that Mr. McNeill. in Vaughan Township, raised 45 lushels to the acre. I know that in my constitueney not far from this place. we have had six-rowed barley grown to the extent of 46 bushels, and in another case it ateraged it loshels. You camot tell which is the best from that, though it would appear that the two-rowed barley is best adapted for the English market, although it is only for feeding purposes becaluse it is a larger and heavier grain than the sis-rowed. I am sorry that our harley is going there simply for feeding purposes. I ann satisfied that our rats would sell for as moch as our harley acoording to weight, so that we are not gaining any advantage that we would not have ly growing sats or peas or com for feeding purposes. The hon. member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) tohl us that the Grits sid that Englam was not the proper place in which to sell our cattle. He is the first from whom I ever heard such a statement. Fifteen years ago I was one of ten who started to ship cattle to Englam. Six of us were Grits and four Conservatives, but we did not disagree on political ruestions, lout went in to make money ont of it, and we did make money out of it. We did not get assistance from the diovermment. We did not ask or require assistance at that time, an! it was only last year that we got any assistance in the shipping regulations which they then passeal, and for which we are grateful to them for:
Mr. MULOCK. I see that at Indian Head and another farm in the North. West, you have heen sowing seeds of trees. Will the Govermment say what suceess has atteuderl that enterprise:

Mr. CARLING: I am informed that the mative seeds have succeeded remarkably well.
Mr. MULOCK. Do yon mean native th the North-West?
Mr. CARLING. Native to Manitoha.
Mr. MULOCK. Have you not tried seeds of any Ontario trees:
Mr. CARLIN(: I am told that $2(\mathrm{~m})$ or 3 m$)$ varieties have been tried, but none hate sncceeded so well as the native tree.

Mr. MULOCK. What do you mean ly mative?
Mr. CaRliNG. Manitoba maple, Manitoba ash, and Manitola elm. A number of the seeds were obtained and cleaned and distributed to the different farms in the North. West, to see how they would turn not.

Mr. MULOCK. Are the seeds referred to in the report of the Auditor General only the seeds of Manitoba trees, or do they include Ontario seets:

Mr. CARLING. These seeds were all from Manitobe and the North-West.

Mr. MULOCK. I see that yon have lreen experimenting with oak. Is that Manitola oak or our own oak ?

Mr. CARLING. Manitolki dak.
Mr. MULOCK. Is that good for timiser:
Mr. CARLING. It is quite a large tree.
Mr. Featherston.

Mr. MULOCK. I think it would be well to have experiments with the various woods found in. our Canalian forests. For example, take the black walnut. The black walnut is supposed to le a tree that will only grow in hottom lands or where the climate is comparaticely :nild : hat I have reason to know that that is an entire mistake. I find that it grows in northern latitudes in the Province of Quebec. I think it would be well for the experimental farm to make the experiment.
Mr. CARLING. I an toll by the director that the black walnut tree is succeeding very well here. There are a number of them at the experimental farm. We have sent both trees and nuts to the North-West, but they have not succeeded so well. In Prince Edward Island they have been much more suceessful.
Mr. MULOCK. Whether the North-West is favourable to the cultivation of the black walnut or not, there are parts of eastern Canada that are favourable. In the western states it is becoming a regular industry, and the same may be said of some parts of the eastern States-not with reference to black wannt so much as to the softer kinds of wood that are used for pail timber, &c. For example, in Massachusetts and other New England states where the original supply of wool for manufacturing purposes is exhansted, manufacturers have aloptel, a regular system of growing their nwn timber, In ten or fifteen years its grow th is sutficiently large to make timber for use in manmactures. I think the time has arrived when the iovermment might very well direct theattention of our farmers in that direction. Plack walnut itself is a most profitable crop, it is a yery rapid growing tree, and the wood in the tree is worth at least fifteen times as much as that of pine. It is worth in the tree perhaps $$ 30$ a thousand. as against pine in the tree which is not worth more than $s t$ a thousand. I think a great deal of attention has been given by the people to the south of us to the cultivation of trees for these purposes, and we camot do better than follow such a good learl. If black walnut is cultivated for the purposes of timber, it must he growu under certain conditions, which, of course, the department will ascertain before they embark in any such enterprise. I think, that the farmers who can afford it will find that there is far more money in growing walnut than in growing grain or anything else. There are spare bits of land on almost every farm, that could le utilized for the growing of trees, which, perhaps, could be of very little use for anything else. Take, for instance, the Muskoka district, and the rocky districts between here and Peterborough, the lanil there is of very little use for agriculture, but it might be very valuable for the purpose of growing trees. Whether or not trees of this kind will flourish in the North-West, they certainly will in older Canada.
Mr. BOWELL. Have they been tested in the Muskoka district?
Mr. MULOCK. Not to my knowledge.
Mr. BOWELL. I kunw they grow in the southwestern section of Ontario.

Mr. MULOCK. The Minister states that they grow at the farm, and Mr. Joly, the late Premier of Quebec, is cultivating them with great success somewhere in the vicinity of the city of Quebec. I understood that they grow well as far north as Barrie, so the experiment might be extended.

Mr. CARLINi. We are experimenting with all the different kinds of forest trees here, and at all the other experimental farms. We have four or five humdred varieties of forest trees, including walnut and chestnut now under experiment.

Mr. MULOCK. It would be well to bear in mind, if you are soing to grow your trees from nuts at the experimental farm here and then transplant them, that it is not giving them a fair chance. A nut bearing tree is very difficult to transplant, as a rule. While the experiment might he suce essful if commenced with nuts, it might prove wholly masuccessful if the trees were transplanted. Now, I wish to ask a guestion with regard to Lalloga wheat. I observe that the Government gave some attention to the cultivation of Lailoga wheat in the North-West. The Minister will remember there was a gool deal of difference of opinion amongst millers and grain men as to the value of Ladoga wheat as compared with sicotch Fife. It was advanced as an argument in favour of Ladoga wheat that it matured earlier. I would like to enguire whether the reports that you have in regard to Ladoga wheat in any way throw light upon the controversy that existed some years ago. The Minister will remember that the millers' section of the Toronto Board of Trade passed a resolution disapproving of the efforts of the Government to enconrage the growth of Luloga wheat in lieu of Scotch Fife, whilst I believe the similar section of the Montreal Board of Trate pronounced in favour of the Ladlogia wheat. I would like to know how the controversy has been settled.

Mr. CARLIN $:$. It has never been recommended in the department that Ladoga wheat should replace Red Fife; but it has been found that the Lanlogia wheat will stand the climate in some parts of the North-West better than the Red Fife, and it matures some ten or twelve days earlier than the Red Fife. It is very mush songht after in the district of Prince Allert and in the northern part of Manitolk. We are now experimenting with a car load of Rell Fife and a car loud of Ladloga wheat, at Toronto. Our chemist has tested it at the experimental farm, and he shows clearly that there is as mach gluten in the Ladoga as there is in the Red Fife. Bread, made from Lailoga wheat, is considered equal to that made from Red Fife, although somewhat darker in colour. Experiments with it have also been carried out throughout Ontario. We find that the yield of Ladoge is not so much per acre as the yield of Red Fife, but it answers this purpose, that it ripens earlier and has succeeded in the North-West where Red Fife has not; it is well thought of, and has been asked for by many fiumers in the North-West. Altogether, I would not recommend that it should replace Red Fife, because there is no better wheat than Red Fife, but it is more suitable than it in some districts.

Mr. MULOCK. I understand that one difficulty arises from the fact that the two-rowed burley cannot he malted with the six-rowed.: I have heard it suggested that the difficulty can be overcome and a good market for our six-rowed barley obtained in Liverpool, if we can get some maltsters there to take it up and malt it. English maltsters have become so accustomed to the two rowed that they are averse to experimenting with the sic-rowed. But, surely, if all that is necessary to get a market for our sixrowed is the securing of some firm to malt it, it is a difficulty that can be overcome. There is a pretty settled conviction that we are endeavouring to grow two-rowed barley which will sot grow in Camada. I know the Minister points with sitisfaction to the reports, and I only wish they were borne out by the average experience of a few years. But it must be borne in mind that last year was especially facourable for cultivating two rowed barley, that the season was a long growing one, that the ripening season was postponed to the end of July, and the grain was not dried out. It is not likely in twenty years that we shall again have as favourable a barley season as 1891; and, of course, the character of the season benetited all kinds of grain crops. While I would not wish to diseourage the two-rowed barley enterprise if likely to be successful, I feel that we are undertaking a task which is destined to be a failure. When the July sum comes the growing time of harley is at an end, and then filling takes place. In England they have it long season, and thus their barley grows to be heary, 56 pounds or orer, but it is not so in Canada. The six-rowed is a lighter variety, and seems, on an average, to be the best we can raise. I happened to have a conversation with an old experienced farmer not living very far from Toronto. He raised barley, not for market, but to sell for seed, and heis a little more than an orlinary farmer in that way. He is, indeed, one of the best farmers in Canala, and he obtained the gold medal of the province, on one occasion, for his farm. I shall have no objection to giving the Minister his name. if he desires it. This farmer assurel me that he had been growing tworowed barley for 20 years for seed purposes, and only once had it cone up to the weight of 56 lbs. That is an experience which tells us pretty plainly that we are net going to be able to raise two-rowed barley of the weight reguired for the English market. Therefore, I think the Government would be acting wisely if they could manage to secure facilitiesfor malting our six-rowed barley, which we can cultivate to adrantage here, and thas surmount to a certain extent this barley difficulty. I am not aware whether barley can be malted here and exported to England, but a person in the trade made the suggestion to me, which I give to the Minister, that we should endeavour to arrange for our six-rowed barley being malted in England.

Mr. CARLING. 20,000 (quarters of six-rowed barley have been shipped to England this winter, and it is being tested by English maltsters. When the test has been made, we shall be able to ascertain whether it is suitable for the English market. 1 am of the opinion that it will not suit the trade in the old country, beeause the two-rowed variety gives a much better yield, contains a larger quantity of saccharine and makes a larger quantity of beer than does the six-rowed. I have spoken to American brewers and they prefer the two-rowed, but theycannot get it in quantity except in California. I consider the two-rowed is the best barley, taking everything together, for it gives the largest yield and brings the best price. The difficulty is to get our people to make the chavge. They have been growing the six-rowed so long that our Canadian barley is nothing to what it was 20 or 30 years ago.

I am satisfied, I repeat, that the two-rowed barley is of the best quality, is the best suited to the English market and also to the American market. It is to be remembered that two-rowed andsix-rowedcannot be brought into the sume malt-house withont keeping them apart, because they will not malt together, and if malted a very inferior article is produced.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). Have any experiments been made on the North. West farm with re. spect to the growing of the sugar-heet?

Mr. CARIIN(i. Fxperiments have been marle on the central farm this year, and they have proaluced from 20 to 30 tons per acre in small plots, of a very good guality, averaging quite as much saccharine as the beet in Germany and France. The average is about 14 per cent of sugar, which is about the general average in (iermany:

Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). I approve of the action of the fiovernment in sprealing seed barley, and I believe so far as this barley question is concerned, that it would be well for the fiovermment to spend $$ 12,(0)$ or $$ 1 \overline{2},(100)$ during the coming year to appoint some individual to bring the barley to the British market, and have it thoroughly tested. That would decide at once whether we could raise two-rowed harley for the English market. I would like to know how the silo is succeeding at the central farm, and whether they have tried anything but corn" In some parts they have tried oats, peas and clover.

Mr. CakIING: I beliere they have tried mats and clover and mixed feed, but none of them has given the satisfaction that corn has.

Mr. MeMILLAN (Huron). Has the silo been a thorough success at the farm this season:

Mr. CaRLIN(i. les, it has lreen a thorough success.

Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). I see in the report from the professor on dairying that he believes ensilage was as good cut two inches long is shorter. The loest silo ensilage I have ever seen. Was half an inch. Has the tuberculosis among the cattle on the farm been erarlicated?

Mr. CARLIN(i. It has been thoroughly cralicated.

Mr. MULOCK. Was an investigation mate its to its origin?
Mr. CARIING. Mr. Mcbachern, the chief veterinary surgeon, was bronght up to inspect the cattle and his instructions were carried out. The origin of it has not leen ascertained yet.

Mr. MULOCK. What breed of cattle did it break out in?

Mr. CARIIN(: Different breeds, one shorthorn and Jersey, and Polled Angus.

Mr. FEATHERSON. Do you remember which was the first affected?
Mr. CARLING. I think it was the Shorthorn. He had been on the farm two or three years.
Mr. MULOCK. The explanations of the Minister are very unsatisfactory. Nobody could tind fault with him because disease broke out under the circumstances mentioned, but I think it was his clear duty on the immediate discovery of the disease to have at once instituted an enguiry as to its cause and origin. We are told now that this disease manifested itself shortly after the tirst animal was affected, and the inference is that these animals acpuired it through having come in contact with these riseasel cattle.

Mr. CARLING: Suspected cattle were at once isolated, no stock has been sold from the farm, but some have been shipped to the other farms in the North-West. There has been no development of disease in those sent away or in any of those remaining.
Mr. FEATHERSTON. I remember that last year, when some of us were risiting the farm and examining cattle, we came to the conclusion that this one Shorthom bull was in in mhealthy condition, and we so reported to some of the officials. He was slaughterel twoweeks after our visit. My hon. friend from south Huron (Mr. Mc:Millan) told them that he believel the animal harl tuberculosis, and I understand that the slanghter of the animal proved that he was correct. I would like to know whether those that took the disease were stahled along with this animal, or were they with the milch cattle in the other stable.

Mr. CARLIN(: The bulls are all kept in a separate linilding, and I ann informed that none of the other bulls have had the disease.

Mr. Ma:MILLAN (Huron). I understood that two Shorthom cows also had it. Were they purchased from the sinte herd as the bull?

Mr. CARLING. One of them was, and the other was purchased from another herd in a differ. ent part of the comintry.

Mr. Mo.MILLAS (Huron). I must say with respect to all the animals besides those that were destroyed, that the greatest care minst beexercised or there is not the slightest cloubt that the disease will break out again. That animal was very far gone last year, and I have heard that he was used is a breeding animal in the spring.

To promote the Dairying Interests of

Mr. Mo:MILLAS (Huron). There is at Mr. Dillon who has leen paid for services from the 4 th of May to the 30th of June. What was he engaged in:

Mr. (ARLINI: As travelling instructor, visiting cheese factories.

Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). There were four or tive engaged in lecturing and giving iustructions?

Mr. CaRLIN(: Yes.
Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). Did they go to the factories and see the milk manipulated as they went around lecturing?
Mr. CARLINti. 'They went to the factories and lemonstrated how to treat the milk.
Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). I believe myself that is the most thorough and most beneficial methorl, to go to the factories and creameries and show how the work should be done. There is more benefit derived from money expended in that manner than in any other manner I know of.
Mr. SPROULE. I think it would be advantageous if the Government would increase the vote for this purpose. I know that applications have leen made for these instructors from different parts of the country, and the Minister refuses to send them because he has not the money to pay their expenses. They are doing a very valuable work, which the country appreciates and which the farmers want, and I think we ought to supply the necessary money to carry it on effectively.

The Haras National Co., for the use of 0 stallions for the Experimental Farm. 86,000
Mr. MiMILLAN (Hurm). I suppose these horses are kept to improve the stock of the country for export purposes. Now, we have heard a great deal alout (ireat Britain heing the best market for (canalian horses. I have examined the records, and I find that for the last three years Great Brituin has imported only l, (r) 6 horses more than she has exported. I believe myself, that we can never establish a thoroughly successful trade in horses with (ireat Britain owing to the long voyage across the Athantic. (iermany supplies the largest mumher for the British market, and Denmark also sup. plies a large number. Before the passage of the Ickinley bill the Unitel States imported $2 \overline{2},($ OM horsesmore than they exported, hat after the passage of that Bill, that number has been reduced to is,onk. The horses used at the experimental farm are not the kind to improve the breed of the country, neither for carriage horses nor for farm horses.

Mr. FEATHERSTON. I would like to ask if these horses are eligille to enter for the Chicago Exhilition under the standard regulation there latil down:

Mr. CARLINi, I am not able to answer the hom. gentleman's question.

- OFFICIAL DEBATES.

Mr. DEs.JARDINS (Hochelaga). (Translation.) I heg to move :
That the First Report of the Select Committee appointed to supervise the official Report of tie Debates of this House, during this session, be concurred in.
Mr. Speaker, in accordance with the suggestion of the Debates Committee, this_ report recommends the appointment of Mr. Desjardins, shorthand writer, to replace the late Mr. Marceau.
Mr. LANGELIER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to call the attention of the House to a most important question. This report, I understand, suggests the appointment of Mr. Alphonse 1)es. jardins as French shorthand writer at a salary of $$ 2,000$ a year. I have nothing to say against the gentleman personally. He is very well known in Quebec, is quite respected, and I am sure that, if all that is necessary were to publish a summary of the debates of this House, there would be no ciuestion in reference to him. The gentleman referred to has been publishing the report of the dehates in the Legislative Assembly of Quebec, but that was only a summary and was not the same thing as we have here and for which we pay. In Quebec they had only a summary, and after each speech was reported, the report was handed over to the member who made the speech to see whether it was a fair summary or not. But that is not what we want here or what we pay for. We pay Se, (WM) a year for each shorthand writer. Two thonsimd dollars for a session is a very big salary, we must admit, amd I was mader the impression that Mr. Desjarrlins, although a very respectable man and a very competent man to pub. lish a summary of the proceedings, was not a shorth:und writer. I did ask the hom. member for Hochelaga (Mr. Desjardins) if the committee, or if he himself, understanding the French language, was aware whether Mr. Desjardins was a shorthamd writer or not. He stated that he was relying on the hom. memher for Cardwell (Mr. White).
Mr. DESJARDINs (Hochelaga). The hon. gentleman has twice made ia statement which is not exact. I sail that one of those who mentioned Mr. Desjardins as being qualified was the hon. member for (ardwell (Mr. White), but I said I had relied on several members who knew Mr. Desjardins better than I did, lecause I dill not know him or his ability as a stenographer, hut the testimonies I received from those whodil know him were such that the committee manimonsly thought they were justified in appointing him. As to the testimony of the hon. member for (arduell (Mr. White), I only mentioned him as one of the newspaper editors who were supposed to be an authority on the matter, and I did not confine myself to that testimony. Before recommending the appointment of Mr. Desjardins, the committee enquired as to his capacity and gualifications, and the conclusion was, from all we knew of him, that he was one of the best qualified men we could appoint.

Mr. IANGELIER. I must sily that that is not the fact. When I first spoke to the hon. gentleman on this subject I was not quite sure in reference to Mr. Desjardins qualifications, but I have been to Quebec twice since then, and have taken information from those who know him, and I am told that Mr. Desjardins cannot write more than $\mathrm{jo}^{0}$ or 60 worls a minute, which is completely insufficient to take slurthand notes of the speeches in this House. If we pay $\$(\mathbb{O N O}$ a session for the shorthand reporter of the French delates in this House, we have the right to get the best work for our money, and there is no lack of good shorthand reporters in the French language. There are some in Quebec who can write easily 200 words a minute and there are some in Montreal, and those I spoke to told me it was yuite out of the question to suppose that Mr. Desjardins could do the shorthand reports of this House. If you want abridged reports it is all right, but I think it should be the first duty of the committee to ascertain whether Mr. Desjardins is able to write at least 150 words a minute, because that is the least rapidity at which a shorthand writer should write in order to report the debates of this House. I am informed thist the committee have not done anything of the kiml, and do not know what he can write or what ae can do in that respect. They simply give him a pension of $s 2,(x M 1$ a year. When the Delates were established, it was never understood that we were to give a pension of $\$ 2,000$ a year to a friend of the fiovernment. I am told that the reason why more competent shorthand writers have not lreen appointel, is that they do not belong to the fioverment party. If the reporting of the delates is to become a matter of covernment patronage, we should know it at once. In that case we might waste our money, but we should know that we are loing it. I repeat that the reporting of the debates in French would be a faree if it were to be done by men not able to write more than on or for words a minute.

Mr. DESAULNIERs. (Translation.) Shouh the question raised ly the hon. member for Quelee (entre (Mr. Laugelier) have a good result, 1 would le much pleased, as the French Delates of the House of Commons would gain importance therehy. I have known personally the gentlenan newly appointel to the statf of the French Debates, Mr. Desjardins, while I was a member of the Quebec Legislature. I know personally that this genteman took down verbatim every one of the speeches pronomeed in the House, although he wats only whliged to give a condensed report of them. I would not praise him leyemd his due, but I know a former member of the Quelsec Assembly, Mr. Gagnon, who while he was a Minister in the Mercier (iovermment, conjplimented Mr. Desjardins from his seat in the House. I do not wish to say more than I should. I do not like to weary the House with my speeches. But I would like to see the French Debates maintained even at the cost of heary expenditure, if necessary, as an entonargement for those who dare to speak French in this House. Now, Mr. Speaker, since the Debates Committee have chosen a new stenographer, I believe-and I am sure that I am right-that Mr. Desjardins will he alde to do justice to those who will have the courage to speak French in this House. I believe le will be able to tald down verbatime every worl they say. I wish to ald a word with regard to the French trarslation of the Delates. As well as his colleagues, the chief translator, Mr. Beaulien, has a drising task which knows no respite. Has not the House of Commons the means of paying, for the French Debates, offirers who shoulid not le overburdened and who should not each one have to do the work of several men: I speak in French. I express my opinion. I am not an orator, but as to the Debates. if the House wants them, let us have them translated. It is a step in the right direction to adopt the report of the Debates Committee. If we must speaik English and cease enjoying the privilege granted us by the constitution of using our mother tongue, let us know it, and we may then do well to abolish the Hansard altogether, both English and French.

Sir ADOLPHE CARON. I fully agree with the hon. member for Quelec Centre (Mir. Langelier) in his statement that we should have the very west shorthand writers to report the speeches which are pronounced in French in this House, and I am quite etertain that the committee who have charge of this important branch of the service of the House of Commons, would not have undertaken to select Mr. Desjardins or any other gentleman to report the speeches which are delivered in French without taking the necessary information and getting the recommendations which were considered to lee sutticient as to his qualifications as a shorthand writer. I am told by members of that committee that the hon. member for Cardwell (Mr. White) who, as we all know, has vast experience in these matters. has gone to the trouble of ascertaining for himself the qualifications of Mr. Desjardins, and I am infomed that from the information he has reveived, he is fully convinced that Mr. Desjardins is quite competent to fill the position which the committee have assigned to him. I am, moreover, informed that Mr. Desjardins, during the ten years that he practised stenography in the Local House of Quebec, took down verbatim inshorthand every word of every speech delivered by any hom. member who spoke in the Legislative Assembly, but his means of pullishing the so-called (Quelec Legislatise: Honsard were very limited inleed. He had to rely upon his own means to publish the report of the speeches as they apperved. or as they were reported in the Legislature of the Procince of Quelec. Then from the full notes which he had taken in shorthand he mate a rexume or synopsis of the speeches which had leen delivered, reserying to limeself the dis:retion of publishing in extem:o omly the most important of those speeches. Now, I ani quite certain that Mr. Desjardins, from all the information which 1 have heen able to collect, is fully competent to perform the duties which have been assignel to him, ann that he will do justice to the position in which he has been placed. I have no doubt that all the gentlemen who compose that committee, and who attach just as mach importance to the correct publication of the speeches delivered in French assf the speeches delivered in English, have taken pains to satisfy themselves that Mr. Desjardins is just as well qualified to report French speecles as the Eaglish reporters are qualified to report English speeches.

Mr. LAURIER. The fact that Mr. Desjardins has been selected by the committee is hardly evidence of his competency, if we may judge by the remarks of the hon. member for st. Matrice (Mr. Desamlniers). The hon. member for st. Maurice has referred to the translators who also are appointed hy the same committee, and I understand him to say that the work of tanslation is done, not by these seven or eight men. who compose the staff, but by two men alone, inferring thereby that these two men might be competent and that the others were not so. As to the qualifications of Mr. Desjardins I have nothing to say, because I have no knowlealge, but we cannot attach much weight to the argument of the Postmaster General who says, that because he has been selected by the same committee who selected the translators he must therefore be competent, in view of the statement made by the hon. member for st. Maurice. I have been disposed to approve of the nomination of Mr. Desjardins, because I understood that the president of the committee had personally satisfied himself of his gualifications. I understand now, however, that he recommends him without having taken the troulle to enquire personally into his gualificationis.

Mr. Lavielier.

Mr. DESIARDINS(Hochelaga). Ihave erquired into the qualifications of Mr. Desjardins since objection was raised hy the hon. member for Quebec (Mr. Langelier), and from the testimonies I have received I have no doubt that he is well qualified.
Mr. LaNGELIER. From whom did you receive the testimonies?

Mr. DESJARDINS (Hochelaga). From sereral members of the Local Legislature whohave seen him at work. Since that time he has been practising stengraphy, and from all the information I can gather he is well qualitied. I do not know how to t the any better means of julging his fitness.

Mr. LANGELIER. How many worls a minute can he write?

Mr. DESJARDINs (Hochelaga). I know he can write fast enoughto perform the work sitisfactorily,

Mr. LAURIER. It would have leen a very simple matter to test him hefore the committee.

Mr. DESJARDINS (Hochelaga). I think the testimonies we received from those who have seen him at work, are worth as much as that of the member for Queljec West whoknows nothing about Mr. Desjardins's yualifications except fromi hearsay.

Mr. CHOQUETTE. (Translation.) There would lee a very easy way of settling this question. Personally 1 have not the slightest objection to Mr. Desjardins: but, as well as the hon. inember for Quelrec (entre (Mr. Langelier) I also have gone down to Quebee since the report was presented to the Honse, and have heard sereral people speak of Mr. Desjardins. Quebec law yers and stenographers toll we that he could not take down one humdred words a minute. Now, if he does not write one humdred words a minute he is hardly capable of taking down evidence in is court of justice, much less is he able to take down the debates in this Honse. As I said in the begiming, I have no oljection to his appointment, but I think a way of solving the difficulty would he to submit him to an examination. If he should not prove competent let him not be appointed: if he be so. then apposint him. As to what the hon. member for St. Maurice (Mr. Desaulniers) said of the French Debates, he is perfectly right. I am ready to rote for the complete alolition of the Hamsaril in looth 1 ngyuages.

Mr. DESAULNIERS. (Translation.) I have a persomal knowledge of Mr. Desjardins's competency, and during the nine years that I have heen a member of the Quel毕c Legislature, I know that this gentleman took down all the speeches verbatim As to my other remarks concerning the French translators of the Debates, I would not say that they are unable to fulfil the cluties of their position, for I know some of them who are excellent translators ; but I maintain that several of them, among others, the chief, Mr. Beaulien, have a task heyond their strength, and surely this is not justice.

Motion agreed to on division.

IN LAND REVENUE ACT AMENDMENTS.

Mr. COSTIGAN movel for leave to introduce Bill (No. 71) further to amend the Inland Revenue Act. He said : The first section of this Act amends section 7 of the present Act.' The present Act is applicable to all parts of the Dominion except the North-West Territories and the District of Kee.
watin. We propose to change that, and the amendell law will be applicable to all parts of Canada except Keewatin. the North-West Tervitories coming under the provision of the license system.
Mr. LAURIER. What part of the Act:
Mr. COSTINAN. The whole Act. There is a proviso as follows:-
"Provided further, that the Minister of Inland Rerenue mayy, where for any reason he deems it in the public interest to do so, refuse to isue any license authorized by this Act.".
The present Act provides that all parties applying for a license, who have complied with the rules laid down, can insist upongetting alicense. It was thought in the interest of the revemue that the Minister should have power to refuse a license,- for instance, when the applicant had alrealy forfeited a license for violating the law. Then there is a change in section.i of the Act of 1891, with regard to the leottling of spirits. That Act restricts the bottler as to, what he may put upon the bottle. We timd it neecessaty to go further and to make it obligatory that he shall put upon the hottle the name and aildress of the hottler. The other change is with respect to section 9 -it of the Inliand Revenne Act, regarding the manufacture of cigars. As the law now stands cigars may be mannfactured in packages of three or six of upwards. It is proposed to change the law in this respect, athl declare that while cigars may he put up in packages of three or six or mowe, they shall not he sold from the factory in lots of less than $\mathrm{l}(\mathrm{N})$. The reason for this change is that the extemsion of the privilege un!er the present law has enathed manufacturers to do a retail husiness. These are all the changes in the Bill.
Motion agreed to, and Bill rean the first time.

MENSAIF FROM HIS EXCELLEN(:

Mr. FOATER presented a Message from His Excellency the fovernor feneral.
Mr. SPEAKEK real the Message, as follows:Stanley of Preston.
The Governor General transmits to the Honse of Commons. acony of a despatch which he has received from the Right Honourable the Serretary of State for the Colunies in reply to an Address to Her Majesty praying that Her Majesty would take such steps as might be neeessary to denounce and terminate the provisions contained in the most-favoured-nation clanses of the Treaties with the German \%ollverein and the Kinglom of Belgiam.
Gotersurst House.
Ottana, 2lst April, 1392.
(rimp.)
Canada-General.
Lord Kintuxforil to Lorid Stanley of Prexton.
Dorning Street, 2nd April, 1892
My Lori.-I have the honour to inform you that Her Majesty's Government have given very careful consideration to your despatch, No. 276. of the 22nd October, 1891 , in which you transmitted an Address to Her Majesty from the Senate and House of Commons of Canada in Parkament assembled, praying that Her Majesty would take such steps as might be necessary to denounce and terminate the provisions referred to (in the Address) in the Treaties with the German Zoll verein and the Kinglom of Belgium.
2. I duly laid the Address before Her Majesty, who was pleased to receive it yery graciously, and to command that it should be referred to the Departments of Her Majesty's Government which are concerned with the subject-matter. This has been done, and it is now my duty to communicate to you the following reply:-
3. The two clauses referred to are Article XV in the Anglo-Belgium Treaty, and Article VII in the AngloZollverein Treaty, and the undioubted effect of these two clauses is to prevent lower duties being eharged in British Colonies on the importation of goods the produce of the United Kingdom, than are charged on similar goods the produce of Belgium or Germany. Moreover, under the most-favoured-nation clause contained in most of the treaties in foree between Great Britain and foreign states. this privilege which is enjoyed by Belgium and German goods in the British Colonies, is extended to the goods of all the rarious countries parties to those treaties.
4. The Parliament of Canada desires the abrogation of these clanses on the grounds, amongst othere, that the are incompatible with the rights and nowers subsequently conferred by the British North America Act upon the Parliament of Canada for the regulation of the trade and commerce of the Dominion, and that their continuance in force tends to produce complications and embarrassments in such an Empire as that under the rule of Her Majesty, wherein the self-governing colonies are recognized as possessing the right to define their respective fiscal relations to all foreign nations, to the Mother country and to each other
i. In so far as the right here claimed consists in fixing rates of customs duties applying equally to all foreign nations, the Mother country, and the British Colonies, Her Majesty's Government do not contest the statement. But if the statement is to be taken as extending to a claim of right to establish discriminating treatment between different foreigu mations or against the Mother country or in favour of particular colonies, Her Majesty's Government are obliged to point out that the slaim is stated too broally : for no such general right has hitherto been recognized, norisit clear that it would be admitted by foreign countries.
6. It is unnecessary now to examine the question whether a self-governing colony is capable, with the assistance of Her Majesty's Government and by negotiation in the usual diplomatic course to enter into special fiscal arrangements with a particular foreign state, or the question whether such a colony is competent without inperial legislation. similar to the "Australian Colonies Customs Iuties Act. 1872,"to grant discriminating duties in favour of particular colonies. For these questions, important as they are, may be dealt with independently of the Anglo-lbelgian anil Anglo-Zollverein Treaties, to which the Address of the Canadian Parliament specifically relates.
7. I have to point out that the denunciation of these two Treaties would not of itself confer upon the Jominion the freedom in fiscal matters which it desires to obtain. and I am disposed to doubt whether the extensive changeg that would have to be made have been fully realized in putting forward this proposal.
S. Many of the Commercial Treaties entered into by this country contain most-favoured-nation clauses. and these Treaties apply in many instances to the Mother country and to all the colonies. In order, therefore, to confer upon the Dominion complete freedom in its negotiations with foreign powers it would be necessary to revise very extensively the existing Commercial Treatics of the British Empire, and a great break up of existing commercial relations, of which Canada now enjoys the henefit. is involved in the suggestion.
9. Within the last year the ssstem of Central European Tariff Treaties has been inaugurated, and under that system it is more important than ever that this country should not lose the benefit of the clauses in the Belgian and Zollverein Treaties which secure most-favourednation treatment in tariff matters to British produce and manufactures, including the produce and manufactures of Canada and the Colonies generally,-clauses which it might be dificult to secure in any new convention
10. It should be borne in mind that the Dominion of Canada has already a trade of some importance with Central Europe. Taking Germany alone, imports into Canads reached more than three quarters of a million sterling in 1890 ; exports to Germany had increased from a very small amount to $£ 100,000$. This export trade includes cereals, meat and cheese; and in all these afticles considerable reductions of duty are made by the new treaties.
11. For these reasons, which I feel sure will commend themselves to the Parliament of Canada, Her Majestr's Government have felt themselves unable to advise Her Majesty to comply with the prayer of the Address which sou have transmitted for submission to Her Majesty.

Mr. PFRRY. Before the Orders of the l)ay are called, I wish to draw the attention of the Minister of Finance to the fact that the papers which the House ordereal to be brought down with respect to the Prince Edward Island tumel have not yet heen laid on the Table. The Minister said they would be brought down at an early perion, and that the proper time to discuss the question was on the Estimates. So far they have not been brought down and I have heard nothing of them, and I must admit that I am desperately afraid the session will slip away before the hon. gentleman will fultil his promise. Does he actually intem to bring down the papers or not:

FINHIN(: VENSEL心 OF THE UNITED sTATEN.

Honse resolved itself into Committee on bill (No. 11) respecting fishing ressels of the Lnited States of America.

(In the (ommittee.)

On section 1,
Mr. DAVIES (l'.E.I.) I should like the him. gentleman to state whether the introluction of this Bill in a permanent form is the result of any conversation that took place between the Canadian delegates and the Necretary of Ntate at Washingtom.

Mr. TUPPER. None whatever. It hail no reference whatever to this.

Mr. DAVIEs (l.E.I.) The hom. gentleman hats no other object, in introducing the Bill. than that of saving the tronble of introlucing it year by year:

Mr. TUPPER. As I explained to the Honse lefore.

Mr. DAVIEN (P.E.I.) The hom. gentleman wil recollect that when the Bill was first intronluced very strong assurances were given to the House that the Bill introduced would be of a temporary character. I am the more induced to recall this assurance because of the statements which were made in the carly period of those troubles arising out of the application of the United Ntates to have the right of transhipment and purthase of hait. The hon. gentleman will very well recollect that it was then intimated by the present leader of the House, and by the present Minister of Finance, who at the time was Minister of Marine and Fisheries, that if we permitted those privileges to be conceded to the United States fishermen, it would le practically surrendering the whole question, that it would le giving them a hasis of supplies, and if we permitted them to make our ports the basis from which they could carry on the tisheries, we would be practically surrendering to them the whole fisheries question. I did not share in the views which hon. gentlemen then advanced, lut I should like to have had a more formal recantation of that prophecy so made by themselves on that occasion, when they are now practically conceding in permanent form all that which they sleclared that time would, if granted, prove ruinous to our fishing interests. I notice also that the leader of the House stated a short time ago, if I caught his remarks aright, that the amount we receive from those licenses almost equalled the expenditure in that respect. My curiosity was so much excited that I looked up the gaestion in the Public Accounts, and I found, as a matter of fact, that we received $\mathbf{S 9},(16)$ in 1891.

Mr. TUPPER. $$ 14,080$ for 1 SOM. It amounted to $89,(0 K)$ or $$ 10,(00)$ last year.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) The amount shown in the Public Accounts as received for licenses under the modus riveudi is $s:, s i /$. It is quite evident to the House and the country that this sum falls immeasurahly short of the expenditure in that regard, aml, therefore, the statement of the learler of the House I take this cecasion of rectifying, so that there may not be any misapprehension on our part. If the issumption on which he based the celebrated despatch some years ago is correct, and on which it was contended that this concession would ammunt practically to a surremler of the whole of our fishery rights, we stand in this pitiable position : that torlay we are passing a Bill permanently to provide for those concessions for a sum of $\mathbf{S k}_{\text {, }}(\mathrm{KK}$ ). Su, MKO S 10, , MMammally, and that, if thestatements of hom. gentlemen opposite are to le accepted as true, weare giving the Americans practically the whole tisheries of the North American continent. I myself took occasion to object to these statements. at the time hecause I thought they were exaggerated and far-fetched, and not consistent with exact facts; but I take this opportmity of recalling that to the House and to the comutry, so that it may he known what we are doing in this respect.

Mr. OBRIFN. Mr. (haiman, when this Bill was introluced for second reading oljection was taken on the other side of the House to the proposal to enact this law so as to make its operation dependent upon an Orier in Council. I fully sympathized with the oljection that was then tiken, and I think it is an mnfortumate thing that this Honse should delegate such an important power to any (iovernor in (ouncil, or to any forermment that may be in power in this com try. It seems to me that a matter of such great importance as this should not pass out of the eontrol of Parliament. I think that this Howse should have an opportunity of expressingits opinion at least once a year, as to whether this impurtant concession should or should not be renewen. I think there is a tembency in all om legislation to have a great deal too mach Govermment ly Order in Comeil, and this Bill is carrying the principle to a much greater extent than it has leen carried on any previous occasion. Not only that, Sir, hut it dues seem to me that an Act of this kind is to a great extent establishing a precedent which we may find it much more difficult hereafter to set aside. So long as we pass this Bill every year, so long as the comsent of Parliament representing the comatry is reguired for this concession, the comintry and the Honse knows what is heing done, and no precelent is laid down and no vestel right established. If we pass a Bill of the kind now before the Honse, making it so far as this House is concerned a permanent concession, I believe we are making a great mistake, not only as regards our own constitutional rights, but also as regards this very important concession to the United States. I ani sorry that the Govermment are proceeding with this Bill in the form in which it was originally introduced, because I believe that the objection is well founded on both the gromils I have stated, and it is one which ought to prevail. Of course, if the focernment are determined to proceed with the bill in its present shape, I suppose that anything which $I$, or any member of the Honse may say, will have very little effect. I for one do protest most strongly against giving a concession of this kind to the gentlemen who may sit on the Treasury benches in such am importimt matter as this and I also protest against doing what I think may fairly lie considerel as giving a colour to the establishment of a vestert right, in a matter which we have always proclamed and held to the a special privilege of our own.

Mr. TUPPER. There is. I submit, an entire mis conception of this measure and its ohject, and I say that in view of the remarks which have just been adidessed to the committee. The hom. memher for Queens (Mr. Davies) has alluded to this as involring a permanent concession. That I consider an extramodinarily strained view to take of the Bill before the $H$ onse. So far from being a permanent measure or comstitnting a permanent concession, the preamble of the Bill and its language shows that it is simply vesting in the diovernor in Comesil in any year, that whicl! larliament hats authorized then to do withont objection or division for two or three years. on the mere statement that for state reasons it was deemed expedient to grant this. It might appear from the remarks of hom. gentlemen that this was an extrambinary request to make to Parliament. but I may mention ats it comes to my mind at the monent. a case in point in the English Parliament ; a Parliament which is just as jealoms of its right ats listinguisherl from the rights of the Crown as any Parliament can be. Last year, without my hesitation. the Imperialfovernment ohtained from Patrianent the authority, in the Behrins sea matter in which this country was interesten, to take a certain position umler an Oriler in Comeil, not merely for one year. but to continue it if they thonght fit by order in Comecil. That was the institution of what is known as the molns rior, whl in Behring sea. The Order in Comeil passed, as we know, limiting that matil 1st Mu, hut now, without consulting the Imperial Parliament at all, the English (a, vernment by Order in Comencil may further continue that arrangement. Incidentally, the dovermment of this conntry is placeal in the position of assuming in the interests of (analal. in comection with the alministration of a most delicate trust, the protection of the fisheries, the adoption of a certain policy from time to time. The (iovermment has statel, when asking for this power, that forohvious reasons it is far better that there shall be power to take the position which Parliament has assentel to in the past, without coming to Parliament and explaining exactly the reasons. I again sulmit that the control of Parliament is in no way interfered with. This power of the Governor in Comencil is not for all time to come to adopt any policy or to commit Parliament to that policy. It has only power to introluce a certain policy in reference to dur relations with the United Sitates. in the protection of the Atlantic tisheries for a year and for no more. If Parliament comes to the conclusion, or if the public opinion of the country is so shaped that there is objection to the continuation of that policy, there is nothing in the adoption of this Bill that fetters the action of Parliament. Wecause Parliament can say at any time that there shouh be or should not be a renewal of the relations. Let me call the attention of the House to the fart that the papers laid on the Table of the House show that we are in the very milst of negotiations on very important sulbjects with the United Stite: Alministration, some of which relate to the tisheries, and if there were a reason before, there is just asstrong a reason mow for bringing into force the policy that has heen alopted, and without any injury th the interests which are concerned in this matter.

Mr. LALCRIER. I submit that the home gentleman has siven mo satisfactory reasm for asking the Honse to depart from the policy which we hace hitherto purseel with regard to this mater. I wohb remind the hom. gentleman that this Aet which we have passed ammally, is in comserpence of an abmormal state of things existing hetween Camala and the Linitel states. After the failure of the Washingtom Treaty in Isss. it was deemed advisable to alopt the momer. riomeli which was sugested he the British (ommissioners, and accepted by the American (ommissioners: : ant from year t" year afterwarls we have renewed that privilege. Now. we do that simply lecalnse we are satiotied, until our present relations with the Linited states with regand to the fisheries are reviserl. to relimpuish some of the privileges which we enjon under the convention of lisk. For my part. While I am desirous of maintaining the most friemily relations possible with the United states, aml at seeing this fet continued every year. I ohject very strongly to giving the forermment power to issue the licenses as a permanent part of our policy. I think it is right and proper that the American fishermen should molerstamb that it is after all a privilege which we gramt, amel mot a right.

Mr. TCPPER. Hear, hear.
Mr. LAURIER. Then, if von authorise the Govermment every year to give that privilege-

Mr. TUPPER. The preamble says that we simply grant the privilege when it may he expedient.

Mr. LAURIER. Then, if it ceases to be expedient. the liovernment will have to come back with a bill to repeal the law which will be on the Statute-hook, whereas by continuing the system which has hitherto prevailed, of having ammally an Act on this sulject, the American fishermen will understand that the privilege is one for which application must he mate every year to the fiovernment and people of Canada. To lepart as far as is proposed by the Bill is, I think, almost equal to renouncing the privileges of the Convention of ISIS. $I$ do not sily that it womld not be wise to revise that convention: I think it would be; but since we have not done that, and the two countries are not agreed to reconsider the Convention of 1818 , I think, in the interest of policy and the protection of our own rights, we had letter continue the system of having an annual Act, instead of adopting this measure.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I am sorry that my hon. friend from Muskoka (Mr. O'Brien) should suppose that the Government is entirely proof against the force of any suggestions that may be made for the improvement of the Bill. I presume that any political feeling that existed in regard to this question at any time is now gone from it, and I am sure that we should be very glad to aceept any soand suggestion for the improreurent of the measure, amd for making our relations with foreign fishermen on the fishing grounds more agreeable and peaceful than they are, at the same time preserving our rights as fully as we can. I do not see. however. I confess, that my hon. friends ohjection to the Bill, on the fromid that it is legislating by Order in Council, is a very strong one. I can unlerstam the force of that oljection. and I an disposed to defer to it very often when the sub. stance of an enactment is proposed to he framed by the fovernor in Comncil. Virions considerations may govern such a proposal. Occasionally we find that an enactment requires more precision than is possiblefor the House at the time : technical information may be required; and upon these gromis it may be that Parliament prefers to leave the atoption of the precise form of the ena'tment to the foremor in (ouncil. who may lee advisenl on it from time to time lo in ofticers technically qualifien. It may he that from time to tiate elasticity is required-that an Aet requires to he applied to certatin subjects or not applied to certain subjects, and that the best means of securing flexibility is hy leaving the Act to be brought into force of curtailed by Order in Council. But with resame to this Bill. the committee will see that all the provisions to be brought into force are contained in the Bill itself. It is simply left to the (iovernor in Comeil to say whether from rear to vear the status shatl le continued. We are not fixing the terms of the enactment by Order in Conncil: the terms are tixed by this House : and there is simply power given to the (iovernor in Conncil to say whether those terms shall be continued from one vear to another without coming to Parliament for a special enactment. Now, there is, I sulmit, gool reason for that-the reason that was presented he the Minister of Marine and Fisheries the other day. As a matter of fact. ever since this enactment was adopted by this Parliament, the (iovernor in Council has been obliged hy the nature of things to exercise his authority in advance of the assent of Par. liament, for the reason principally that the outit for the American tishing ressels has to be hegun very early in the year, before this Parliament can meet. Enless the tishermen know early in .January whether they are to have the privilege of calling at our ports for hait and supplies, and for transhipment, the privilege is entirely useless to them loy the time a statute can he passen by this Parliament : and from year to year we have to say in advance, taking the risk of Parliament suctioning our action, and taking into consideration the circumstances existing at the time, whether the privilege of these licenses shall be granted to American fishermen. That being the state of things, we are simply requesting Parliament to authorize the Gorcrior in Council so to say in advance of the sitting of Parliament. It is not as if the proclamation were permanent. On the contrary, the licenses to be issued under our proclamation will expire every year, and when this Parliament meets in January, or early in February, and ascertains that in the meantime these licenses have been authorized by proclamation, we are entirely in the hands of this Parliament to say whether the Act shall be continued or not, whether the proclamation shall be renewed for another year or not. We are simply taking power in the meantime to say, at the only time when it is of the least ralue, whether or not these licenses shall be continued for the coming season. I should he very sorry for one to adopt any measure on this sulject which shouk ippear, much less be, a permanent surrender of our contentions with regard to the treaty, and I do not recognize this Bill as hating that effect at all. The hion. member for Queen's (Mr. Davies) is correct in saying that my colleagnes and myself took very strong grounds on this subject. and I have not to withdrat one single worl I said or wrote on that subject on former icecasions. What I saill with regard to the interpretation of the Treaty of 1818 I stand by. and I say now: as the hon. gentleman says I said then, that to arlmit that what is given hy this bill is a matter of right to the fishermen of the Enited states, notwithstanding the Treaty of 1818, wonld he to give away the whole protection of that treaty. But there is the greatest difference in the world between selling, even for a small and inalequate price, a right to a neighbour, and concening that that right helongs to him ly virtue of the instriment that he formerly clamed under. On the contraty. I contend. as has been fully expressed in this House on former occasions, that our rights muler the Treaty of lisis are strengthened from year to year by the fact of the fishermen of the United Ntates taking out these licenses, and purchasing that which, down to lsss. they clamed they had a right to under the Treaty of IsIS. It may lie, as the lealer of the Opposition says, that it might lee well to revise the Treaty of lsis. We have always expressea our willingness to revise it. We have always taken the prosition that whenever a new bargain is desired, we are prepared to disulass the terms, but not to surrender the interpretation which has been held on the part of tie British Government and the dovernments of the provinces and of Canala, ever since the treaty was made. It is true, as the leader of the Opposition hats said, that in 158s, when a somewhat musual state of things existen, an misnccessful attempt was made to settle all the questions relating to our Athantic fisheries. Biut both sides recognized the fact that our failure to settle matters in 1858 was not a permament failure, and there is no disposition on the part of either conntry to abandon faith in our yet reaching a friendly adjustment. There is no disposition on the part of either (iovernment to refuse to sit down and revise the arrangement of 1818 , and events since 1888 indicate that yuestions even more important than this may be settled from time to time, hy friendly conference between the two comerries, and that, therefore a settlement of these questions relating to the Atlantic fisheries may be reached without unfriendly feeling and without any very consideralle delay. I think that the state of facts now existing with regard to the seal fisheries, in the Pacitic indicate that that result may be had, and $I$ am sure anyborly who has considered the question fully will realize that it is best for all of us, in the meantime, to provide a means of administering our rights in the fishery grounds in a way that may not give offence, $b_{n}$ & the peace, or create undue disturbance, and the. is better we should submit even to parting temporarily with our rights from year to year for an inadequate consideration, as $I$ admit this is. provided we keep intact our assertion of the interpretation which we have stood hy so long, and which I hold now is just as important for the interests of the country as in 188.7, 1886 or 185: when these questions were all more burning and of more pressing importance than they are torday.

Mr. CAsES. The hom. Minister pointed to the necessity of preserving fool relations with the United States, and in that respect the House is entirely with him The only ynestion is whether this Bill does not inwhe such a survender of our rights as may injurimsly affect our future nesotiations with that conatry with regarl to the tisheries. The hom. Minister thinks this measure is saved from being a survemler be the fact that we charge something for the use of our ports hy American fishermen, am that the selling of these privileges saves the principle to which w.. still adhere. Now, I think with my leader, who hats already pointed ont the difference. that if you allow American tishermen to obtain these privileges every year. without regarl to any temperary state of circumstances such ats those which existel while neg, tiations were penting. they will ace, mire the habit of coming to our ports for the privileses, and believe they have a right them on the payment of a very small fee : and we know how prompt American statesmen are in taking alvantage of anything that has become castmary, even although it maty not have been admitted in principle. I way that the constant use of our fisheries from year to year. not under at moldus riownti, but unler a permament Act of Parliament, will impress on their mimls the ideal that they have the right to use these privileges, if not for nothing. at least on payment of a small fee. This impression will reach Washington and atfect our relations. In the second place. I understone the Minister formerly, in his correspondence on this subject, not only to contend for the principle that American tishermen should not use oulr ports in those waters, but further, that if they were allowed to ase them or any terms the danage to our fishermen would be tremendonsly great. Now, the danage to our tishermen causeid ly the competition of these American fishermen will be just as great, whether they pay a license of $$ 1 . \pi$ or or in free. Whatever may be the force of the Minister's contention that we are not surrendering a principle, the fact remains that we are surrendering the interests of our fishermen, by allowing competition on the payment of a trifling fee. How he will make that consistent with his former utterances, I do not know. As to the question of principle, it seems to me that although. perhaps, the fee charged may save the absolute principle and may save our right to maintain that we have never admittel the contention of the United States on this sulject, it is a surremder of the principle to this extent : that it is admitting that this House is willing, for in indefinite time whether negotiations are pending or not to allow the entrance of these fishermen on certain terms. It is as complete a surrender of the right to fish after paying a small fee as could possibly be made except ly a formal treaty. There is a very great distinction between annually empowering the Government to make such an arrangement and putting it into a permanent

Act of Parliament. The Minister of Marine says you can come down next year and repeal it. But that is a very different thing from leing in a position to start de noro and say whether you will renew it or not. It is a different thing to repeal an Are phated on the statutes as the embonliment of the policy endorsed hy this Honse, and to refuse to remew an arrangenent mily male for one year. The hom. sentleman must see the lifference himself and kurw that his argument was utterly wanting in that reepect. There is no comparisom between the power to renew an annal arrangenent and the pewer to repual an Act deliberately placed on the statute-benk without limitation as to time. The Ninister of dustice hats made a very just distinction hetween the guestion of terms and the question of policy. He hate printed ont that it is for Parliament tosay whether they approve of the policy of admitting Amernams on such terms. and then it pros perly lics with the fiovernor in Comacil to tix the exact methon of gramting a license and the way in which it should ine put in force. That is a cery proper distinction. But be the Act we are asked to pass we will pledge Parliament for an indetinite periond, and 1 object to pledging lariament for the finture, withont regary to circumstances to a policy. I object wiving the dovernor deneral in Conncil power to decide on the question of the poliey at to whether these terms should he granted every yeat or wot. The Homse is asked to divest itself of the power to change the policy and is puttine it into the hames of the dovernor in Comcil, amil that I think is quite sufficient to justify the renarks of the hon. member for Muskokat. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries let the cat out of the hag in his reply to the hom. nember for Muskoka. He said it was aldisable, in comserguence of negetiations now yoing on or which might he going on, that the dovermment should have the power without explaining their reasoms to larliament, to adopt this policy and comtinue it from year to year or stop it when they pleased. He saill it might not be alrisable to explain all the reasons to Parliament. I do not think that is a contention that is very flattering to the Howse. I think the Honse still feels that, whatever the details of the measure mity bee it shouhd ine consulteal as to a certain line of policy, amb that it is a very unwholesome precelent to allow the Governor in council to deecide on the line of policy to be followed from year to year. As to the negotiations. I was quite interested in the remarks male hy the Minister. First we were told that we were on the eve of negotiations, and then he told us that we were in the midst of negotiations. We have leen led to hope that the trate negotiations and the fishery negotiations would be carried on at the same time. It would he very interesting to the House to know whether any negotiations are going on at to these two questions, on as to the fisheries question separately. Since the hom. Minister says we are in the midst of negotiations, I think he shouk go further and say when the negotiations commencel, whether there is any hope of arriving at a satisfactory conclusion, and so ol.

Mr. WHITE (Shelburne). In comsidering this Bill, we ought not to lose sight of the fact that, a very large number of our fishermen are employed in American vessels and form an important part of the crews of Linited states fishing vessels. It is an every-day practice for a captain with some of his crew to go over to (iloncester or some other fishing port in the Linited states and then to sail with their vessel to the Maritime Provinces and get the balance of their crew. Every year, much earlier than this, these vessels come down the coast and ship their erews. Hitherto there has heen a great deal of mevertainty anong the tishermen ats to whether they would be able to get on lowid these ressels in mot, and to avoind the ditticulty. they ef $^{\prime \prime}$ to the Linited Ntates, paying their passage there and ship on hoard these ressels. whereas, if miore certainty were intronluced into the monle in which these licenses are issued, these people cond remain in their own homes until the American ressels came there and shipped them. This Bill, I think, contains mo release of our rights, hat enables the cisvermuent to meet the difficulties to which I have referred. The Minister of Justice has stated that very freguently applications have luen made to the dovermment, and that they have often issued licenses, even hefore the Act was passed authorizing it. an: these applications often proceed from our own perple.

Mr. DAVIDs, (P.E.1.) I have heard the prineiple of this Bill defended on many gromels. but the one sugrestell hy my hon. frienl from shellurue (Mr. White) has at least the merit of novelty. If I umberstood him correctly, he contemed that it was desirable to emborly the principle we have leen assenting to year after year, while still keeping control of it, in ann Act vesting it in the (iovernor in Commeil in a pernament form, because the fishermen of the Martime Provinces have been in the habit of going to (iloncester and hecanse there would be more certainty about it then. So this is a Bill to facilitate the exonlus from the Maritime Provinces to the fishing centres of the Unitel States. I lo not think that the suggestion will he accepted by the dovernment whare promoting the Bill. There is no use denying the fatt that this is a grave and serious departure from the practice which we have alopted for years past, and whether Parliament assents to it on dissents from it. it is well to thoroughly understand it. When, in 1ssi, the Chamberlain- Bayard Treaty was alopted, it contained ao provision comceding these privileges to the Uaited States fishermen at all, but a protionol was added to that treaty and it was suggested that, pending the ratitication of that treaty ly the Cnited states Senate am in order to remove all possibility of ill-feeling and misunderstanding leeween the two nations while the Senate was considering the treaty, we should concede to the United States fishermen certain privileges we had theretofore denied them. That was the origin of these concessions, and that protoco, went on to say :
" Under these circumstances, and with the further object of affording evidence of their anxious desire to promote good feeling and to remove all possible subjects of controversy, the British plenipotentiarics are ready to make the following temporary arrangement for a period not exceeding two years, in order to atford a modus vivendi pending the ratification of the treaty."
That was the origin of the proposition. It wis in the first place recommenden to Parliament because it was temporary, in the second place because the period was arbitrarily fixed at two years, and in the third place becanse it gave breathing tine for the ratitication of the treaty by the Senate and would prevent any misunderstanding or friction during that time. But the hon. gentleman who now leads the House and his friends stated that they were careful not to recede from the practice they had adopted in previons years of arbitrarily excluding the Americans from their privileges. The Minister now says that this is not a permanent Bill. It is a permanent Bill in this sense, that heretofore the Bills with this object have been passed fon one year only, and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries has hatl to come hack each year and say why he asked for an extension.
Mr. TUPPER. Was not the tirst Bill for two years:
Mr. DAVIEN (P.E.I.) Yes, for the special ohject and the special purposes which 1 have stated. Every vear since that time the hom. gentleman has been obliged to come to the House and explain why he wished this provision contimued for another vear. Why was this done and what reasons were given for this extension: It was because the hom. gentleman hoped and continued to hope that there would he a commercial treaty negotiated between this comery and the Cnited states and that, in view of that great anil desirable ,bject, it wats eminently poper that we should continue to concede to the United states fishermen the privileges we hat given them for a temprary and specitic purpose only. It was in the hope and on the gromen that this cancession would promote amicable feelings and further the oljeet that we were supposed to hate in view, that larliament, year after year, assenten to these concessions. Bat is that the gromid which the hon. gentleman takes now? There sh we stand to day? The hom. leater of the Homse sitys he acheres to the interpretation of the treaty which he grave in 1ssid in seremal of his despatches. But the hom. gentle. man did more than that. In the despatches which he pemed previons to lsass. he not only liad down what he perceived to he the interpretation of the treaty of 1 sis. but he lail hown several propositions, one after the other. importing that it was absolutely essential for the protection of the North American fisheries and the reservation to our own citizens of the rights which we had under the treaty of 1sis, that the Americams should be excluded. We dil not differ on hoth sides of this House as to the interpretation of the treaty: we did differ as to the policy of the Covernment in carrying it out. 1 need not read to the House the worls of the hon. geut leman. because almost everyboly recollects them. but he stremonsly argel that to concede these privileges to the Americian tishermen would he. in effect, giving up the whole guestion. Now, the hon. gentleman, if I understand him aright, propesies, of a large extent, to take from this House the controlling right of determining from year to year whether we will renew this concession, and to vest it in the coremor in Council. Now, the hon. gentleman stated in his lespateh, as afterwards adopted and made a Minute of Council :
"But that which Mr. Phelpscalls 'literal interpretation,' is by no means so preposterous as he suggests, when the purpose and object of the treaty come to be considered. While it was not desired to interfere with ordinary commercial intercourse between the people of the two countries, the deliberate and declared purpose existed on the part of Great Britain, and the willingness existed on the part of the United States, to secure absolute and free from the possibility of encroachment the fisheries of the British possessions in America to the people of those pusisesions, excepting as to certain localities, in respect of which special provisions were made. To effect this it was merely uecessary that there should be a joint declaration of the right which was to be established, but that means should be taken to preserse that right. For this purpose a distinction was necessarily drawn between the United States vessels engaged in commerce and those engaged in tishing.
Then he goes on to saly:
"The fisheries could not be preserred to our people if every one of the United States fishing vessels that were accustnoned to swarm along our consts could claim the right to enter our harbours. to post a letter, or send: telegram, or buy a newspaper. to obtain a physician in case of ilfness or a surgen in case of a cident to lamd or bring off a passenger. or even to lend asizitance to the inhabitants in fire, flood, or pestilence, or to buy medicine. or to purchase a new rope.

Nir JOHN THOMPNON. That is a quotation.
Mr. DAVIES (I.E.I.) That last is aquatation. The tirst part I real is the hom. gentlemans own language, vi\%:
"The fisheries could nut be preserved to our people if every one of the United States tishing ressels that were accustomed to swarm alone our coasts could cham the right to enter our harboars.:
Now. I want of bing the House to the point where we are to-day. That policy was alopted, and with very poor results. Then came the treaty for at temporary and spectifi; oljecect alone, and under that treaty the monln. riomeli went into operation for two years. Then we extenled it in the hope that it might be manle the means of conciliating public opinion in the states, anll a basis on which negotiations might be malle for more extended trade relations. Now, if I understoon the statement of the Minister of Finame the other day, all possible hope of ohtaining trade relations with the United states has heen ahambomed hy that side of the Honse to-day. We stand in this position: that we are re-chacting this law, anil are divesting Parliament of its control wer this question, and are giving to the fovernor in (ouncil sole and ahsolute control over these matters, and so we are giving up. from their standpoint, the shightest hope of negotiating any treaty whatever, We do not stand in that position on this side of the House. We have a strong hope. and a well-groumbed hope. that when the proper time comes and the proper men are at the hehm, we can negotiate a new treaty. While. therefore, it would not be impolitic for us to renew the mon/ne riermeli from year to year, retaining ly Parlianent its ahsolute control over it, I think my self, that side of the House having abondoned all hope of negotiating any treaty with the states, that we occupy a most extraordimary position. Therefore, so far as I ant personally concemen, I protest against the policy which takes away from this House the control it ought to keep, and surremders that control up to the (iovernor in Council for the time heing, in a matter affecting national rights and intermational obligations.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. The hon. gentleman has made a long speech against the measure, and tinally winds up by asserting that he does not oppose keeping the monlus riventi in force from year to year. He thinks that is quite right and proper, so that, after all, his argument is not against keeping the modu. rivemi in force, but simply against the fiovernment. Now, the argument of the hon. member for Muskoka (Mr. O'Brien) against transferring from the Parliament to the Governor in Council the power to make laws by Order in Council, has much force in it. I think there has been of late years too great a tendency in that direction. We have now actually a volume of Orders in Comacil having the force of law, as large as the volume of the statutes. I think this tendency is to be deprecated in many respects. These Orders in Council that are issued always have reference to matters of domestic concern. to regulations comerning the managenent of the departments, and matters of that character. But this matter is of great importance. it is of international concern, and I think it is important that the sense of Parliament should he oftained upom it yarafter sear. and therefore the Order in Comeil should not be passed secretly without our kowing anything athur it. The Minister of Justice in the remarks he hats mate to the Home has given good ratsons why the (iovernor in Comacil should have pawer to issue these licenses in this particular case, foranse the decision to issue them should be amonnced early in the year lefore Parliament assembles, and sometimes, from varous canses. the sessions of Parliament begin late in the vear : amb, therefore, the doverno in Conncil or some other atuthority, should have the right to issine these licenses. I think that reason has much force in it: and the ohjection of the hom. sentlemen opposite to give the conernor in Conncil hispower. would be overcome if we put in this Bill a clanse reguiring that this decision of the dovernor in (Guncil shombla to forthwith commumicated to looth Honses of Parliament if then in session : if not in session, then within ten days from; the commencement of the next session. That will call the attention of Parliament to this important international matter, and will enalle Parliament to pass an 'phinion upon it from year to year as it may think desirable. At the proper stage of this Bill I inteme to more a clanse to that effer:t.

Mr. MILLS: (Bothweli). 1 think this is a very important measuse and nught to receive the very careful tomsideration of the Honse. I have listened to the olservations adlressed to the House on the subject by the Minister of Justice, and I have been unable to see that the issue of these licenses is in any sense a recognition by the Anerican dovernment of our exclusive right in the tisheries, or indeed a recounition of our sovereignty in the disputed portion of the fisheries. Sir. I would like to know if an American fishing ressel were to come into the waters of Canadia, or what we regart as such, and into bays more than six miles wide, and were to keep more than three miies from the coast, whether the (iovernment would feel themselves at liberty to enforce the Canadian view as to Canadian sovereignty against that ship. If not, then it appears to amount to this, that permission has been granted to the American fishermen to come within three miles of the coast under this license, which they would not have, in their estimation, if no such license were issued. Now, in what way does the obtaining of a license hetter our prosition: In what way is it a recognition of any dispaten claim existing hetween the Government of the United States and the Government of Canada \% It seems to me there is a great deal of misapprehension on this subject, and that misapprehension is in no little degree created and perpetuated by the observations which are annually addressed to this House upon the subject, by the hon. gentlemen upon the Treasury benches. I repeat again that the issue of licenses to American fishing vessels is in no way a recognition on the part of the party who receives that license of our pretensions in the waters which the Ahatican (iovernment hold do not belong to us, and if they are not a recognition in those waters, then those licenses do not in any degree accomplish the olject which the hon. gentleman has in view. There are many grounds on which the Americans have set up claims to joint interest in the fisheries on the Allantic const of Canada. One claim they put forward is, that they were colonies at the time that Nowa scotia was acyuired from France and at the time the Treaty of Utrecht and the Treary of Versailles were agreed to and ratified: and that, having assisted in the acyuisition of the territories upon our Athantic coast. and in obtaining eomtrol of the fisheries, they have a joint interest and property in them, and that this joint interest and joint property were in some degree recognizeri hy the Treaty of $12 \pi 3$. I do not almit that that is a somil contention. I thope no (anadian on either side of the House will be ready to admit that that is a soumd contention. Why, the British army assisted in the comquest of the valley of the Ohio. the British army assisteci, and the British treasury assisted, in obtaining prosession of that vallev from the Crown of France: and when the Treaty if $10 \mathrm{~s}: 3$ was made and boumdaries were estahlished, those territories which had heen acquired by the mother combly and ly the colonies went to the colonies, and those territories which now form part of Canadit and the rights incident thereto remain a part of the British prossessions. The Cnited states, upon the gromal of jointlyassisting in the acguisition of these fisheries, can no more set up a claim to joint sovereignty than we can to the ralley of the Ohin. There is mo distinction between the two achuisitions in this respect, ind the Treaty of $18: 33$, which settles the bomdaries letween what remained to (ireat Britain and what was acpuired hy the UnitedStates, also settled the limits of the respective rights of the two comatries. Bat when we look at the historical events that happened prior to the American revolution we will see how the erroneons view respecting this question, which has always had possessio: of the minds of American statesmen, came to lee establisherl. Under the Treaty of 1713 , and again umber the Treaty of 17633 , the French fishermen were excluded from tishing within 30 leagues of the coast, and it was assumed by the Government of the colonies that this rule was laid down in these treaties in consequence of the doctrine that the fisheries were appartenant to the neigilrouring territory, and even the fisheries on the birand Banks and elsewhere must be regarded as belonging to the country which was in possession of the land in the neighbourhood, the bays and harbours from which these fishing operations were carried on. This has been the doctrine of Demmark. It was a doctrine disputed by England with Denmark for two or three centuries before these events happened. The English (iovernment has maintained the view uniformly from the days of Elizaleth, that fisheries in the open sen could not be made dependent or appurtenant to adjoining territories, and the state papers of the time show that in $1 / 13$ and again in 1763 the French were excluded from fishing within 30 leagues of the coast, because it was held to be in the interest of the English Government to protect the shores by a special provision of this sort ugainst surprise and conquest. That was the gromid taken, and not hecanse the fisheries in the neighlourhomi were appurtenant to the lands. That the latter view was the one which took possession of the colonists is shown ly the Treaty of 17 is between France and the new repulicic. There it was expressly provided that the rights to fishing, not merely in the bays on the coast and in the ricinity of the lamd, hut on the Crand Banks, and in the open sea, should he divided between France and the United states, if they comblacpuire possession of Nova scotia and Newfomulanl. It was also agreed that the territory of Newfomulland, in case of conyluest. was to the diviled letween the two comatries, in order that the French might be possessed of part of the island amblatuire a right of sovereignty over the fishing in the open sea, on the Grand Banks, and in the vicinity of the territory which they had acquired. But I say this was not the English view, and it will le ofserved that when the treaty came to be negotiated, the English dovermment denied the new republir any right to those tisheries in consequence of having heen participators in the conquest of Nora Scotia, of Cape Bretom and of Prince Edward Islaml. They almitted a liberty to fish. they denied altogether a right: and the words of the treaty are: They shall have a right to fish in the Ceulf of St. Lawrence, a right to fish on the Gand Banks, and they shall have liberty to fish in the vicinity of the bays and hatbours on the coist of the British possessions. These liber. ties came to an end with the war of 1812-15. The libertits acupired umder the treaty terminated, and the privileges of the Americans on the coasts of the Maritime Provinces rest today on the Treaty of 1818 . What 1 think it is always important to bear in mind is that there is mo detingition given of " bay "or "harbour" in that treaty. It is assmmed, ind the American representatives and American counsel before the Hal. ifax Commission admitted the point, that " hay" and "hartour" and "coast" meant there what they mean acoording to the general rules and principles of international law. There is no declaration that a bay, to become an exclusively British water umler the provisions of that convention, shouh lee a hay not more than six miles wide. There is no statement of that sort. Weare obliged to look at the rules of international law to see what waters aljoining the coast are part of the possession of the sovereign who holds the land, and the extent of the lay or harbour on the Athantic coast of Canada camot be any less than it would be if similar waters were upon the coast of any other sovereign state. When we look at the Cuited states we find they claim juristiction and sovereignty oner Chesapeake Bay, which is over 12 miles in width. They claim jurisidiction and sovereignty over Delaware Bay, which. at its entrance, is is miles in width. They clain jurisdiction and sovereignty over Cape Cod Bay, which is more than 30 miles in width. They claim jurisdiction and sorereignty over Pamlico sound and Albermarle sound, which are large boolies of water very much more than six miles wide at their entrances. Now that heing so, it does seem to me to be of the first conseguence that we should do nothing that would in any way leave the impression upon the minds of the American public that we abandon any portion of our rights which under the rules of international law might fairly be claimed by us. A landlocked bay very much wider than six miles may fairly be claimed. It may be necessury in the public interest to claim it. It may be clamed because it could be commandel from the shore hy modernartillery to a much greater extent than formerly. It may le claimed also becanse it may be a matter of necessity to the maintenance of the sovereignty of the state that the ships of any wher state should be excluded from thene waters. The rule which applies to an ordinary coast line does not in this respest apply to waters that are lam-locked. You have to-day the Govermment of the Cnited States undertaking to uphold the doctrine that we cannot claim the sovereignty of hays more than six miles wide ; and you have that same forermment undertaking to olitain control of a portion of the open sea that is more than $2,(M K)$ miles in extent. I do not say that that claim is a lefensible claim: it seems to me that it is a preporterons one: but the fact remains that there are large borlies of waters noon our coasts wer which we have clamed a sovereign jurishliction, amd which claim you are prevented from raising, in some measure at all events, ly the constant renewal of this morlus riomiti. I have said before, Sir, and I siy it now, that I am ready in consiler the provisions of the Treaty of hisis as they would be practically moditied liy the monern policy of marigation. The od narigation laws have disappeared, and since 1849 a difterent policy has prevailenl throughout the Empire, and tri some extent it may he that these provisions of the Treaty of lsis are not any longer capable of heing aljusted to the monlern redurements of commerce. The telegraph and the railway have come into existence since that time and the relations of these fishing operations to commerce have mulergone changes. You impose certain obligations unter the provisions of the Treaty of 1818, as a matter of effective police. You can only justify their antimance today upon the gromod that they are necessary to an effective police now. I ho mot think that is so. Certainly the restrictions that were recently imposed with regard to commercial matters seem to be extremely rexations: but whether that be so or not, it is a guestion altogether separate and distinct from the question of the sovereign rights of this country, and while I am prepared to agree to a hroad and liberal poblicy with regard to matters of commerce, I an not willing in the smallest degree to comcede any sovereign right or to compromise any sovereign right of this conntry in dealing with the neighbouring republic. Now, Sir, that is what I complain was done under the Treaty of 18ss when there were concessions made that onght nut to have been made. I woult like to know whether the hay of Fundy is not as mach within the exclusive juristiction of Canala as the Chesapeake Bay is within the juriscliction of the United States: Do not we own the territories on hoth sides of the Bay of Fundy? It is true there was a question raisel years ago and deciled by the arbitration of Mr. Bates, but the decision of that yuestion did not take away from us any rights which we prossessent. The hon. gentleman is establishing by this Bill a modus: rivend which will be permanent in its character. It takes away from this House that yearly supervision which it has exercised heretofore over the subject, and it permits rights to grow up by acpuiescence. The hon. gentleman says: Why, we are protecting the comuty against the doctrine of acyuiescence when we require a license : but, sir, 1 repeat again that the hon. gentleman does not require a license, and will not undertake to enfonce this law against ressels coming in hays, say ten miles wide, and keeping more than thre miles from the const. Unless yon are prepared to fo that in the case of every land-locked hay on the const of Sova Scotia and Prince Edward Islaml, your measure accomplishes nothing except to give to the Cnited states a very large privilege for a mere tritte and by doing so you adnit that these powers are not necessary for the purpose of police. It is true, sir, that under this measure a license may be issued which will permit the parties to come within the three miles, hat when an American ressel is in the centre of one of the large bays. carrying on fishing operations four or five miles from the coast, will the hom, gentleman unler. take to enforce the law against that ship which has no license: The hon. gentleman will hot venture to do it. anl in not venturing to do it he is not renturing to do anything to uphold the authority of this comutry as against the pretensions of the Cuited states. It seems to me, Sir, that this measure is one which is calculaten to weaken the rights of Camala in this matter of the tisheries. If a monlus rirmind is establishel it ought to be estab). lisher for a particular purpose. When this was first proposed it was defembed on the groumbs that nerotiations were pending. and that it was neces. sary to conciliate and to allow the Americans this liberty until the negotiations conlil le consum mated. Now there are no negotiations pending. There is no step tiken towards the settlement of the difticulty between us, and yet the liberty of supplies for fishing is to be granted, and a modnur risernli is to he established which is to lead to nothing. The hon. gentleman will see, further, that the modns ciremli that has recently heen established between fireat Britain and the States is a modus ri remeli looking towards pending negotiations. A treaty has been agreed to, a board of arbitration has 7een estallished to, which disputed rights are referred, and these parties are alout to engage in the negrotiations with a view to a settlement of the matter in dispute. This morlne rirwndi is a means contributing to an end in that case, but in this case the moture ifreurdi leads to nothing: it is the end itself. It is not created or established with a view to aceomplish some other purpose. There are no negotiations pending, no treaty toile consummated, and it is simply a lacking down from the position hitherto taken. It is an udmission that you have a right which you dare not defend, and which you are proposing to confer upon the Americans for a mere trifte, which on their part concedes nothing to you of the pretensions which you have hitherto Fut forward. You are in exactly the same position. so far as that is concerned, as if you had concerded to the Americancoverment theirclaims altogether. Your license is a license which they recognize only within the waters which they have not dis. puted to be yours, and which concedes nothing to you with regard to those waters which they. siay are a part of the high seas. It seems to me, sir, that our position is every year becoming weaker and weaker. The hon. gentlemen on the Treasury benches, by undertaking to establish a permanent regulation under which these licenses may le annually issued, are withdrawing the sulbect from

On section $\because$,

Mr. TUPPER. I propose to insert at the end of the first line these words: "On like terms and conditions as those issued under the provisions of this Act." These words were not in the previous Bill, when we were acting in mison with the colony of Newfomdlaul: but without them if the policy at present prevailing in Newfoundlamd continues, American ressels might obtain these privileges there for mothing, and we might tind ourselves allowing United Sitates vessels to enter (:anadian ports on licenses issmed in Newfomadhand for which no consideration was given. To ghard against that I propose to ath these womls.
Mr. IACBRIER. As I molerataml, this amendment is to provide that if licenses are issued in Newfommand free of cost, thes shall not be atecepted in our ports.
Mr. TUP'PER. No. that was never the intention. We co-operated in it plan emboxied in this Act : but since Newfomiliand deciled not to co-operate with us in this policy, it has issued licenses free to United states vessels.
Mr. LAURIER. And you do mot promse to aceept them:

Mr. TUPPPR. No, we wombly not reconnize licenses issited free to United states vessels.

Mr. LAURIER. That is a new departure.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Yes, it is a new departure and an important one, and possibly a very unfortunate one. and I "ould suggest to the hom. gentleman whether it is desirable to proceed with that amendment just now. Onr relations with New. foundland are of such a strained character at present that they should reecive at a very early day the consideration of this House, and I may say that it is my purpose at a very early day to incite the attention of the House to that subject, with a view of seeing whether some morlus nay not be discovered by which the former friendly and amicable relations between us may be resumed. I do not propose to liscuss the matter now. The hon. gentleman wished it for public reasons to remain in abeyance, and I do not wish to precipitate a discussion that might he injurious to the public interest. But if I do not receiveanassurance that it is so. I will, at a very early day, invite the attention of the House to a consideration of those relations. As a matter of fact, the fee which we charge for these licenses is little more than nominal.
Mr. TLPPER. It amounts to about $\mathrm{s}(0)$ on an ordinary vessel, and sometimes to $\$ 2(10)$.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) It amounter last year to $$ 10,0 \mathrm{MO}$ for the whole of the fisheries, and that is a nominal sum for the privileges which we have concerled. I hope there is not a gentleman on either side of this House who would call $$ 10,0(0)$ a value for those concessions. I understand that they are given from other motives and for other reasons altogether. I know that when we came to value these privileges a few years ago, we valued them more in hundreds of thousands of dollars than in tens of thousands, and I would be very sorry to let it go forth that the sum which we charge for them is held to be remuneration for them in any sense or way. It might hereafter cone up against us prejudicially. But assuming it to be, as I take it to be, more in the nature of a nominal fee, intented to secure a recognition of our rights by those who take out the licenses, although it is disputed that it has that effect, we would not be acting wisely, if we refused to recognize licenses issued by Newfoumllaml, perhaps at half-price, or on different comditions: and I take it that it is not desimable just now. in view of the negotiations which I understand are penting. to intronduce a clanse which might possibly teme to alienate further from us the good-will of the people of Newfoundlam, which we all desire to holl. This might he considered sonewhat in the nature of a challenge : and seeing that the feeling is alrealy strained almost to the extent of breaking, it is not desimable that amy thing should be done to increase the tension. Therefore, I ask the hon. gentleman not to press this important change without giving us time to consider it.

Mr. Miss (Bothwell).

Mr. TUPPRK. (If eourse there will be time to emsider it before the Bill is proceeded with tinally. Cerainly, the hon. gentleman labours moler a misapprehension with regard to the motive of the biovermment in introducing these worls. There is wot the slinhest desire to insert them from any hostile spirit. There is mot a hostile spirit existing on the part of the (ionemment of (anala towards Newfommand, in that sense or in any other.
Mr. D.AVIES (P.E.I.) There is thought to he.
Mr. TUPPER. There is mot, unless the maintename of the rights of (imada is thonght to be hostility : and we are embearouring, as the patpers will show, to resume the friendly relations between the countries which existed when there was no misumberstamling. But this measure in no way concerns that important sulject, and the only object in suggesting these worls is to prevent the privileges, which hon. gentlemen opposite have described ass so important and valuable, being possessed hy United States fishermen without their paying even that nominal sum-without their paying one single, solitary dollar. If these hom. gentlemen who have been rliscussing the subject male one point clear, it is that we were not sufficiently valuing the great privileges on our coast. and that for this small fee we were granting trememlous concessions and perhaps injuring onr rights umber the Convention of lsis.

Mr. DAVIES (P'.F.I.) (iiving up, as you called it, in 1s8s, the whole unestion.
Mr. TLPPER. What I want to prevent is a United States ressel going to Newfoumdlam and olitaning free license, which our vessels cannot obtain, and then coming back and enjoying on our consts the same privilege. We never came to Parliament with a proposition like that. What we say to Sewfonmiland is: If you will co-operate with us, we will carry out the original plan, but if yon will not-and you certainly do not if you grant to the Cnited States these privileges for nothing and refuse them to Canadian vessels-it will be impossible for us to recognize those free licenses which may he granted in the colony of Newfommlland. We must put worls of this in!port into clause two, or we wonld be giving privileges to United States vessels without a farthing in return.
Mi. LAURIER. I hope the hon. gentleman will allow the amendment to stand and give the House time to comsider it. For my part, it seems to me by this amendment we are going to check the very object of the bill. This measure is one of conciliation. Hon. gentlemen opposite press this Bill as a measure of conciliation. They are aware of the feeling of irritation which arose in the United States through our applying castoms regulations to American tishermen, under our interpretation of the convention of 1sls. In consequence of this irritation, the Treaty of 185s was, unfortunately, mot negotiated, but the British Commissioners were so mach impressed by the feeling of irritation in the Cnited states, that they at once offeren, pending the negotiation of the treaty, to undertake that the Canadian (iovernment woild not only not golack to the system alopted against American fishermen of subjecting them to vexatious customs regulations, but that for a nominal consideration Anerican tishermen wonh get all the privileres they demamben. Licenses were then issumed hy the Newfounllame and the Camalian (iovermments allowing American fishermen all the privileges renied themby the Treaty ot 1815, and if an American fisherman took a license from the Newfomillaml fosermment he could enjoy these privileges on the eonsts of Canada, and a similar concession was allowed ly the Newfoumland foremment. Now the hon. gentleman is groing to depart from this. He stipulates that if the licenses issue by the Newfoundland liovernment are not exactly on a par with our own regulations, they will mot he recognized in our comntry.

Mr. TUPPFR. The licenses which the American tishermen will obtain from the Newfommlland foremment, on their face and terms, grants only mivileges in the ports of Newfoumdland. They are entirely different from the licenses granted under the moines rir:mhli, as they limit vessels to the ports of Newfommand, so that the Americans can have no reason to urge that they are mislen.

Mr. LALRRIFR. I accept the hon. gentleman's correction, but it only shows the necessity for further argument. Let him give his amendment as a motice. so that we may have time to consiler it before it is alopter.

Mr. TUPPERR. I shall he happy to meet the hon. gentleman's suggestion. We will go through the clanses and let the Bill remain in committee.

Mr. WAVIES (P.E.I.) The hom. gentleman has said that the licenses granterl by the Newfommland Giovernment were being grantel withont fee.

Mr. TLPPER. SoI unlerstand.
Mr. DAVIEN (P.E.I.) Is it by statute that these licenses are issued:

Mr. TCPIEFR. Simply on the terms of an Order in Council, free licenses are granted to vessels of Newfoumdland and the United States on equal terms. There is a bond given that certain provisions of the Bait Act will be recognized.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Does the hon. gentleman state that those licenses are being issued to the American fishermen this year free?

Mr. TUPPER. Ies.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Because my information is different.

Mr. TUPPER. I shall put the hon. gentleman in possession of the information I have. I move that the following clanse le added to the Bill: -

Clanse 3. The authority of the Governor in Council for the issue of such licenses shall forthwith in each year be communicated to the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, if Parliament is then in session, but if not then in session, within ten days of the commencement of next session.

Immigration-Agents in Canada... ....8t(1), 125

Nir RICHARD (ARTWRIGHT. Before we discuss the items of this rote, we ought in all conscience to have a statement from the head of the department in reference to the policy of the fiovernment in respect to immigration. As I have very freguently had occasion to call the attention of the House to this subject, the hon. gentleman must know that his department stands convicted by the late census of having most grievonsly misled-I will not siy deceived--the people of this country by the statements which have been laid before the House during all these years. According to the reports of the repartinent, abrout goo,owo immigrants were brought to Canada during the last ten years. If there he one particle of foundation for these statements, if the slightest dependence is to le placed on the statements which have been made by the hon. gentleman and his predecessors in this regard, then, as I have repeatedly pointed ont, the result has been that in the last ten vears we have lost a million and a-half of people out of Canada; but if, as I suspect, the census returns will show that the whole of the returns made to us by the Department of Immigration have heen based on a huge mistake, to use the mililest term, have leen based on a most. deplorable error, we should have the explanation of the head of the department as to the immigrants who have been settling in Canada. We have also a right to know what policy the diovernment are going to adopt in the future in regard to immigration. On all that, we should have a very full statement from the Minister and from the (iovernment generally hefore they demand from us any sum or sums of money for the purpose of immigration, and I hope the Minister will be prepared to make that statement. I find nothing in his report sherlding any light on the subject. I find there a series of weagre references to what has occurred, but mo explanation and no reason is given to as as to why the department should have heen st, egregionsly mistakenas to the returns they have mate of the immigrants settled in Camatia during the last ten years as the census returns show them to have been.

Mr. CARLIN(: The returns which have heen made to this House as to the number of immigrants settled in Camala were correct and accurate and made by officers of the department. Every year when these returns have been brought down, they have been certitien by the otficers stationed at the ports of entry, amd the same system which has been alopted by the present forernment was followed by the fiovermment of Which the member for South Oxford (Nir Richard (artwright) was a member. We have no reason to doult that the information we have olitainel from our officers and from the collectors of customs in the different ports in the Dominion, is accurate as a record of immigration. Lut not including emigration. With regard to the number of people who may have left the country, of comse we have no record. A record of those who may have left the country his not been kept, and I think it has heen almitted hy the officials of the United States that any attempt to keep a record of the number of people who pass toand frobetween the two countries has been a failure. That has heen admitted by one of the leading members of the (iovernment in the United states. With regard to the immigration policy of the Govermment, it is, so far as I am aware, to continue the same policy which has been in existence for the last few years. The fiovernment are offering every inducement they possibly can to intending immigrants to this country. We have alvertised the advantages of camarla on the continent of Europe and also in (ireat Britain, and there has been no time since I have had the honomrof being at the head of this department when we have had a better prospect of immigration and of obtaining a good class of immigrants, than we have this year. Last year we endeavoured to let those of our people who hal gone to the western States know that we had alvantages to offer in Canada that were better than those they had in the western States, and I am glad to say that last season we had hetween 2,000 and 3,000 settlers who came in from South Dakota, North Dakota, Nebraska and other parts of the western States and the chances are that this year we will have a very large immigration from the Unitell States. The number of immigrants that came in last year was very satisfactory, and, considering all the ditticulties we have had to contend with in the North-West, in the past. I am ghad to say that the people seem to appreciate the offers we make, and, as 1 have said, we expect a veny large immigration' this year, not only from Europe, but also from the United states. I think the hom. genteman is aware of the inducements that the (iovernment offer to intending settlers. To every head of a family taking up 140 acres, a bomus of sill will he given and a bomus of sis to every member of the family over twelve years of age. That offer is now made, in addition to the l(i) acres of land, to immigrants coming from lireat Britain and Ireland : and although not many have, so far, taken advantage of that lileral offer, we have reason to believe that in consequence of the information given to people in the ohl country a large number coming in this year will take alvantage of it and become settlers in the North-West. I have information from all parts, from Iceland amd from direat Britain, and from the continent and from our agents in the United States, that this year a very large number of immigrants, will come into our country. I might state that the dovernment have decided, after very full consideration, that it would he wise to transfer the immigration hameh of the Agriculture Department to the Department of Luterior. Nearly all the immigrants that come to this country go to the west for the parpose of taking up free homesteads and free grants of land. As the Department of Interior has a large staff of ofticials comnected with the lands in the Dorth-West, including a land commissioner. land guides and land agents, able to give every information that immigrants may require, it is thought well to make this transfer, and by doing so we hope to save a good deal of money.. Instead of hating two statfs, we will have in the future hat one staff, who, with some additions, will be able to discharge the duties that will devolve nom them. That is one of the changes that has been arranged and will be carried out. I believe that the efforts of the department and of the Government will he devoted tos doing everything that can be done to alvertise our country, and to show the adrantages we possess over almost every other country; and we hope that in consequence of the publicity that has heen given, and the inducements that are offered, a very large immigration will timl its way into our North-West, and that that comntry will soon be filled up with a rugged and industrious population.
sir RICHARI) CARTWRI(:HT. Well, Mr. Chairman, this is precisely uhat we have been told time after time for the last ten years, alnost verlois. iprosisimisis : and with the statement I holdinmy hand I must say the hon. gentlemandoes himself verylittle credit. and does his lepartment no credit at all, if that is all the explanation he has to give to us of the fact that whereas his department alleged that $\mathbf{8 8 6}, \mathbf{O N O}$ ) immigrants were brought into Canala within the last ten years, our census returns show that our total population has only increased by $\therefore(\mathrm{O}),(\mathrm{OK})$. The hon. gentleman tells us that he has no means of ascertaining, and his department has no means of ascertaining, whether it was true or false that the immigrant settlers in Canada in 1886, and so on. Well, sir, if that is all the explanation the hon. gentleman has got to offer us, he would do infinitely hetter to save the $s(2(1),(1) 0)$ which he now propuses to expend on immigration. The hon. gentleman's policy and the policy of his friends has reeulted in this : that, while they claim to have bronght ssif,(ян) immigrants into (Gmada, we will find when the census returns aceording to nationality are laid before us. that of the ssiocon, people who have heen brog git here more or less at our expense, have remained in (analia. I had hoped that the hom. gentleman and the Ciovemment, having considered this questiom, would have leen prepared tor sulmit to as some rational explanation of what has ocenreed, and also that they would have been prepared with some hetter policy for the future. Their policy hats been a total and ralical failure from start to tinish. They have hronght no immigrants of any value to this country, except a feik who have displaced our native population. I believe that if the results of the immigration policy were examinel, it would le foumd that the only immigrants who have come to Camala and hate renained here, of a class whom we desire to have in Canada, are persims who come in without any reference whatever th the lmmigration Department. The examination I have heen able to make into the guestion leads me to believe that, almost the entire number of inmigrants which are alleged to have been bromght here by the tionernment, have heen bronght more or less at the instigation of the varims transportation agencies, railroal and steamboat companies, and the have had un sort of intention of staying in Canalia, hut lave made Camada merely a temporary halting place lefore they proceedenl to the United States. That, I helieve, is to a great extent the whole history of the expenditure that has taken place, amounting to several millions daring the past ten years. bint there is another side to this question which the hom. gentleman hats entirely ignored. Sow. I have often contended in this Honse and elsewhere that we are committing an atrocions viece of folly in lringing immigrants from foreign comutries, at a great expense to the people of Canama, who, to all intents and purposes, such of then as remain here, simply thrust our own people out of employment, or simply drive our own people over the borler. I will he far more disposed to assist the dovermment with a grant if they would use it for the purpose of keeping our own people in our own country, and promoting the settlement of the North. West by our own countrymen from the older provinces, in place of bringing European immigrants over here. It appears to me at this present moment to be a monstrous piece of absurdity for us to pay for the introduction of European immigrants here, while at the same moment it was known to every man in this Parliament that tens and humdrents of thousands of our own people are yearly leaving our ohler provinces and secking homes in the United States. I submit that the true immigration policy for the Govermment to pursue is to direct their attention to facilitating the settlement of our own people from older provinces in the NorthWest Territories. I have no objection whatever to men from any other country, men of good health and good habits, coming and settling in our own country : but I have the strongest objection toseeing our own people driven out of this comitry, as they are heing driven out, and seeing them replaced by a wholly inferior class from the more or less patiperised comatries of the old world. I do not know what result is likely to arise from the proposed transferrence, of which the Minister speaks, of a banch of his department to the Department of the Interior. 'The mole in which the Department of the Interior has been managen up to the present time, is not calculated to inspire with implicit confidence the members of this House in the wistom of the proposed change. Up to the present time the Departanent of the laterior hats been neatly as unsuccessful ats the Department of lmmigration in promoting settlement in one conntry. The results of the sale of land in the North- West, the results of settlement in the North-West, the extent to Which we have deprived ourselves of all coutrol wer that territory, are anthing but reassuring. On the whole I an inclined to think, if that is to he the policy of the fooverment, they will dof for better to place the money in the hames of the Local diovermments in the North-West. They have, at all events. a direct strong personal interest, soto speak, in promoting the settlement of this country, and I am inclined to think they would exert themselves to the best of their power to promote it. I douht very much whether the Department of the Interior. although it may have certain conveniences such as the hon. gentleman hies alluded to, is likely to make any more of a success than the Department of Immigration has done in the way of settling up, the North-West, amd so far I must say that all we are at present achieving by this expentiture is simply to bring a number of people, more or less unfit for settlement in Camarlia, into this comatry. They drift to our large cities and towns, and there, as I have seen, and as everyborly who has had anything todo with the charities of these large places know, they form a section of the population of a very undesirable class. There is a small part who norloubt form lesirable citizens, but a very large number of then: indeed are men whom Canada could io very well without, and who at the very hest are exceedingly inferior to the people who are daily and hourly leaving under the present Administration. I must say that I think that the whole of this money we are asked to vote. judging the future liy the past, is likely to be entirely wasted maless most rarlical changes are introduced by the dovermment in the mole of andministration.

Mr. CHARLTON. I wish to offer a few remarks, before this item passes, upon the policy of the Government in securing immigration. If we bring immigrants into this conntry it is necessary, as a preliminary step, to take measmes to promote their welfare and comfort, and the policy of the Government should be one comlucive to their prosperity, and one calculated to make the country a desimble one for them to live in, one calculated to assist them when they come here to make progress in the accumulation of property, and a policy that would minister to the necessities and wants of the citizens. That there is something wrong with the condition of affiairs in this conntry is evidenced by our census re. turns and the various sources of information open to us with respect to this matter. We have, as the hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard (art wright)

sail, a very unsatisfactory exhibit made by the last census returns. an exhihit which I am sure must strike with pain every member of the Honse to whichever side he belongs. The increase of a little less than 12 per cent in our population in the face of the fact that we had received Rsio.(nn) immigrants dluring the ten years, is a very startling revelation. We 'started at the commencement of the decarle closing in 18!n, with a population of $4.824,($ KN). The natmal increase of population in a country like (anada I estimate at $2 \pi$ per cent, which is a low estimate. The population of the Cuited states increased over 30 per cent during each decale from $7=30$ 1830): the natuma increase of population hetween 18:30 and 1840 was $2!3$ per cent and a fatation over, and the matural increase in population hetween ISto am lsiol was wer og per cent. So I assmme that our natural increase is at least 2.5 per cent in ten years. If that is the case we should have added tion whatever. But in aldition to that matural increast, we have received ssid, (Kh immigrants, or we have received 3 ( 0,0 (KM) more immigrants that our total inerease of population daring ten vears. and this makes mo allowance for the lifference hetween the birth rate and death rate of these immi. grants. Which in ten years would have swollen that number by anomo at least. This, however, is not taken as an element in the calenlation. When we come to amalyse these figures we find that we hate lost $380(0$, (HK) -- to saty mothing of the difference between the hirth rate ami the death rate of the immigrants we have received. so that, alling the natural increase, we have lost to he more correct, $1,4(30,0 \times 0$. Whis is a comelition of things that reguires consideration. A young commtry like this with malimited resourees, with millions of acres of fertile limds not yet hought under cultiration, with enormons mineral resources, with enormons timber resources, with the best fisheries in the world, with a gool geographical position, one of the provinces having the best commercial position on this continent with respect to the other common-Wealths-with all these social, commercial, and climatic conditions, and with an energetic and virtuous population, I say that, unter all these circumstances. to present such a showing as we do. with a paltry increase of $\quad$ ollt, (KK) in ten years, an increase of less than $1=$ per cent, calculating that during that time we received from the old world $\mathbf{x s} 6, \mathrm{MH}$ immigrants, it is a state of things that requires most serions consideration. It is time th stop anl see what is the matter. This is not a party question: the life of the nation is at stake. If this condition of things is to continue it is no use to talk of party squabbles and party divisions, hecatuse we shall soon have no coantry muless we can remove the evils now existing and in progress, which threaten to destroy the commonity. Something has to be done. We are not going to cure this great evil ly the voting of a supply of money to induce immigrents to pass through this country on their way to the United states. We must do something to keep our own citizens here. Wie must do something to keep immigrants from the old world who come here, and unless we can do these things we might as well close up our experiments of creating a nation here. What has to he done: The hon.

Minister tells us that he has taken pains to inform immigrants that we offer greater inducements here than do the western states. Have we greater inducensents to offer? I saw a statement the other day given by the owner of a consigmment of harses at Suspension Brilge. He was sending several carloads through to New York to be sold for use on ice waggons in that city. He shippeal them from Irwa, and he could place them in New York at prices which would cuable him to pay s.is per head more in lowa than !ee conld in the Province of Ontario. The freight from lowa to New York is sife per horse. The freight from Ontario to New York is 85 and the laty $$ 30$ per heid, making a total of sin, and the freight from Iowato New York heing only 810 , the adrantage possessed by the lowa farmer was equal to S2. on each horse. Now, that is what is the matter. The states are practically our only market for horses, for sheep and for barley. It was show here last night that tworowed harley can be sold in Fugland for 4 to $s$ cents per hashee more than six-rowed harley would bring for export to the thited Yiates, but the fact was mot denied that six-rowed barley with the duty taken off, could le sold for expert to the states for -2 cents a bushel moreat this moment than two-rowed barley would hring in England. We are languishing in (anala becalnse we are exchuleal from our natural market. and becanse we are shat ont from our communication with the great commonwealths on this continent. We are deharred from the market ingfor markets in the West Ludies and thronghont the wiohl.

(In the Committee.)

Mr. CHARLTON. Mr. Chairnam, at the time the Chair was sacated at six oielock I wats engaged in making a few remarks on this proposel yote for promoting inmigration into ( ana lat. The object of promoting immigration is to increase the propulation of the country, therely developing its resources, adding to its wealth, and adding to the greatness of the country through the inerease of numbers and pronluctive capacity and power. While we are thus engaged in the business of promoting immigration, the Covernment are pursuing a policy that is at the same time driving away the population of the country. I took the liberty to call the attention of the House to certain facts in comnection with the increase of population in this country: or rather, to speak more properly, with the loss of population in this country; hecuuse the increase of population has been very small, not as great as the natural increase, leaving out of the question the immigration into Canada. I pointed out that the loss of population between Issi and 1 s91 had been, in round numbers, $1, \mathrm{oM}(\mathbf{O N O}$ souls, that our population according to the census returns hat increased FOH, (NK) in roum numbers, and that it was clamen that we had received an immigration of $\mathrm{SS}(\mathrm{CHN}$ sonls. I pointel out also that the natural increase of the prpulation during that period was nearly l. low,onk souls, and that we had lost our natural increase. and had lost very nearly $3 \mathbf{3 N 0},(\mathrm{KN}$, of the immigration besides the natural increase. Now, Sir, the census of the United States, in 18so, disclosed the fact that there were at that time $\overline{19} 9$, (KN ) mative-lom ( andulians living in that comitry. It also gave the number of children of these native-lom Canalians, bom in the states, at 93ti.ch3. Epon the same basis of calculation, the momber of children of mative-horn (anadians in lation lost to this comentry in the last decale, the T19.(A) that were in the states at the commencement of the decale-of consise their numbers hand diminished by leath during the periond since. but that lose han been more than compensiten for hy the children bern in the states of immigrants that had sonle from this comotry to the States, and which are not accounted for amb add to that the number of children in the states in 18:O. bern of Camalian parents, we have a less to this comery from this source of :3.ont, (xN) souls. If this calculation is true, and I helieve it is, hand there been no exmlus, the jopmation of Camala to-day into aceount the graud hildren in the states lom of chilhren of (anadian parents. We do not take into accome the las to this country of immigrants leating Camada for the states in all these years since Comfederation and before. We do not take into acecont the children of these immighants lorn in the states, and who worlh have been born, we may assume. in Comada, hat the immigrants who came to (anala remaned here. It is suseeptible of mathematical ilemonstration that if there had been no exchus from this comintry of native-horn citizens or of foreigners who came here from the ohd world to make their lomes in Canada, the prpulation of this country would he 9 , (KK), (M0) souls, and we are to-might discussing an item for getting into this comitry immigrants, while the people of this comatryare leating by thonsands. Weare attempting to fill a harrel hy pouring in at the spigot and leaving the bumghole "pen. The result is that we hate eot in Canada less than half the population we would have had if the exolus from this comutry hat not been as it has leen.

Now, what is the matter: Perhaps I might answer the questionsomewhat differently from ny hom. friend the Dinister of Finance. and the answer I should give to that yuestion, if 1 gave a truthful answer, would, in my opinion, retlect somewhat upon the Minister of Finance aud his colleagues. I do not wish to be offensive to them, but we must deal with facts as they exist. There are several things the matter. The whole policy of the Government for years has been of a character to proluce this result. We have disgusted the people of this country with the character of the policy of its Govermment : our cierrymander Bills, our Franchise Acts, the corruption and lowolling that prevail, the National Policy and many other things, which have had a tendency to drive the population out of this country. P'eople hecome lisgusted : they see the lebt piling up: they see the taxation from custons increasing : they see the inordinate increase in the expentiture : they see the Government car rying out the policy of inibing constituencies liy Act of Parlianent at wholesale. and bribing them by me us of armies of boothers at retail : they see the corruption pervaling every department of the Government : and onr people are leaving the country in disgnst. It is useless to talk of relleming this country by appropriations for immigration. ats long as these giant exils drive the population from the country. Now, the National Policy, so far as fiscal reasons can he assigned, has pronducel very grievons results in this comutry. It has failed to redeem one single promise mate in its lehalf when it went into operation, not giving us. for instance, a home market - -

Mr. Fositer. I la not like to intermpt the hom. gentleman. I know that has disensision is pleasant to himself, amd at another time it might be quite in order: but I donot see that it is in orler to-night, on an item for immigution, to for into a disenssion of the seneral prolicy of the Govermment.

Mr. (CHARLTON. This opens a wide tiehl. Here is an appopriation for the purpose of ahding wh the population aml prosperity of this comatry. Am I to be told that it is out of order te point wit that while we are embatoming tobring penple into the comotry the dovernment are pursuing a policy which tends to drive them out: surely the point of orler taken hy the Minister of Finatace is not well taken in this instance.
Sow we will gro on to diecuss the puestion. how We can increase the population and poroperity of this country. We will som point out to these hon. gentlemen the mistakes they have manle : we will gon on toxhort them to alopt an etficient police for retaning and increasing our popalation: and all this will he strictly in order. The National Policy, I was about to sity. has heen, not a pro. moter of immigration. lut a great immigration aremt for the country acoss the line : and if our frients opposite wish to er out of the business of acting as inmighation agents for the United Nates, there are certain things they want to do. Of course, an appropriation for bringing immigrants to pass throngh our comantry to the United States is one thing: but they had better adopt some plan to retain those people when they arrive here, and it is quite in order to discuss that. As I was about to saty, the National Policy has been-

Mr. CHAIRMAS (Mr. Sprorle). I think I must ask the hon. gentleman to contine himself to the item under consideration. which is a vote of Sl, Ho for agents at Montreal and Quebec.

Mr. (CHAPLTON. We are dealing with the whole subject of the immigration appropriation.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. I think that an ohl parliamentarian like the hon. member can hardly excuse himself by saying that he is dealing lirectly with the question of immigration, when he is discussing the National Policy.

Mr. CHARLTON. Well, Mr. Chairman, if you upon your honour as a gentleman and in your position as chairman of this committee, will risk your reputation by asserting that the National Policy has nothing to do with peopling this country or Mr. Chariton.
driving penple from this country and has no bearing on the puestion before us to-night, then I shall have to sit down. But I think I am in order.

Mr. ('HAIRMAN. I must say that is my ruling. whether I am sustained hy the House or not

Mr. (HARLTON. Very well, we will pass to another suliject, the subject of taxation, which may possibly have some learing on the guestion of retaining our population or offering inducements to people to come and settle in the comory. Under the customs law of this comatry-

Erme hon. MEMBFRRi. Order.

Mr. (HARLTON - we have taken out of the packets of the people by enstoms taxes in the last ten years, ser. (nnd.(nn).

Mr. (HAIRMAN. I think the hom. gentleman is wandering into another suliject which is just as irrelevant to the question as the one he left.

Mr. CHARITON. Very well. Mr. (hairman. we will take up another subject. I must confess that I am sumprised that an ohil member of this. Honse. in attempting to deal with the question muler dischssion, and in pointing ont facts entirely pertinent to the case, should be rubed out of order in the arbitrary manner in, which you hate ruled me out on this iecasion.

Some hon. MFMDRERis. Order, order. Apolo si\%e.

Mr. (HARLTON. I will apologize to the ex tent that I flo mot suppone the chairman would le intentionally ablitrary hint he has ruled me out in a manner which I holif. from my stampoint. to be abhatary. Sow, sir. I come to amother feature of the $\begin{gathered}\text { invernment's policy which umboubterly has }\end{gathered}$ very sreat intluence upon the question of the desir. ability of this comutry ats a plate of residence, that is the policy which places the settler, the labmer and the pronlacer at a ereat disadsantage in the cost of evergthing they have to purchase. Fion in. stance, when the purchaser spends so. $2 .-$ for coal oil, he gets only a ilollar`s worth. When the farmer Wishes to purehase hathed wire he pays El.:H for a dollars worth. When he purchases binding twine, the policy of the diovernment compels him to pay $\leqslant 1$. qu for a dollar's worth. If he wants to $^{2}$ loy a fork, he pays Sl.jif for what he would get for a dollit but for the polieg of the (iovernment. If he wants to hay spades he pays $\$ 1 . \sigma 0$ where he wouh ntherwise only pay a dollar. He payssl.on for a dollar's worth of inails. sl.3: for a dollar's worth of cotton, Sl.3.i for a dollar's worth of earthenware from 81.41 t $4, \$ 1.81$ for a dollares worth of woollen goonls, and so on. I will not weary you, as you may think me out of order, by groing extensively into this matter. When the farmer settles his store bill at the ent of the year he pays $\$ 140$ for what he would get for Sl(o) hut for the policy of the Minister of Finance. The result is, that during the past ten years the people of this country have had bably twice as much more in incidental taxation to private interests, or a total of $54 \mathrm{~F} 4,(\mathrm{OH}),(00 \mathrm{n}$ incidental tax added to the direct tax. This amounts to \$100 per heal for the last ten years for every man, woman and child in the country from direct and indirect taxation; and that has something to do with thequestion of peopling this country, and promoting its prosperity, and it is the policy pursued by hon. gentlemen opposite which has brought this country to the condition it is now in. It is that policy which has shut it nut of its natural market. It is that policy which has piled on the shoulders of the people these inordinate burdens. It is that policy Which has rall up our deht from sion, (KN), (MNO to s.e 34. (MA)(OMO. and has increased our expenditure which has increased the customs taxation from hes increased our delot, taxation, anm expenditure from three to five times as fast as the population has increased. It is that poliey which has a hearing ? per peopled lis millions or become almost ileprpulated. It is that policy which has a hearing on the question whether we will be able to retain the innmistrants bonght liy means of the appormiations the dowernment call on us to make. of whether ther will mly arrive here of drift away be the million as they have done hitherto, and help to swell the greatuess and the resources of another nation. It was perfectly proper to allule to these matters in connection with the diselussion of the item we have mader consideration to-night.

Mr. CHARMAN. If the hom. gentleman wishes wappeal against the ruling of the (hair. he has at right to do so, hut he hats no right to retlect upon it.

Mr. CHARLTON. I deny that I have, either directly or indirectly, reflected upon your ruling. sir. unless you eonsiler yourself responsible for this policy. I have been talkiug ahme the genemal policy of the comatry, almout the particular question of the properity of the country, and the means to arare it. in order to ascertain whether we will he able to people this conntry or not.

Mr. Fositek. Tell us about the Buffalo interview.

Mr. CHARLTON. If the hon. gentleman will get the itemand real it. I will tell him. I chalFenge him top proluce that itell and real it so that we may have it in distussion now.

Mr. Foster. Pull it out of your vest procket.
Mr. (HARLTON. I chailenge the Minister to read it.

Mr. Bow ELL. Can you mot repeat it?
Mr. (HARLTON. I read it once and my memery is mot as goon as that. Idiselaim anything inore than a serious desire to have that matter placed lefore the Howse. As reference has been mate to it by the Ninister of Finance, let hin produce the article and read it.
Mr. FOSTER. You want to get it in the Hatusarel.
Mr. CHARLTON. Nome but a cowarl would make allusion to a thing and refuse to give a gentleman upon whom imputation has been cast the chance to refute it by withholding the charge to which he alluden.

If the Government desire to promote the population and prosperity of this country, let them retire the monopolists from power, and let them give attention to the interests of the farmer iand the lahourer. The results of their policy with regard to the natural markets of this comntry are very strikingly set forth by a comparison of the Trade and Navigation Returns with the United States for a period of years. In 1866 our exports to that country were $840,000,000$ in round numbers.

In lsal they were Sth,omo(xn). Now, Sir, taking in round numbers last year, our exports last year were less than in 1xisic.
Mr. ('HAIRMAN. I must ask the hon. gentle. man to confine limself to the item.
Mr. LACRIER. Are we to miderstand that upon a guestion of this kind, when the fiovermment are asking an appropriation for immigration. the Honse is not at liberty to disctuss all questions Which have a hearing upon this prolicy: It seems to me this ruling is not in atcond with the rules of the Honse, as I understand them. At the opening of the committee to-day the hon. member for south Oxford repuired, what is always given in England and seldom in this country, from the Minister in change of these estimates, a general statement of the poilicy of the comutry. This is always done in Fayland. No, Minister there would dream of asking the Homse to cote an appropriation such as this unless he gave detinitely the tasing for urging the expentitare. The hon. member for south $0 x$ forel invited such an repowe from the Covernment. The Minister of Agricalture gave it, and now the whole sulpect is in order, and it seems to me the ruling of the chair would contine us within ureasmahle limits. Weare disensing the policy of the dovernment with regarl to immigration, and anything hearing on that subject is in order.
Mr. (HADRMAN. I mulerstand it would he quite in ortier to disenss the immigration policy of the Covermment, but not the commercial policy.
Mr. P:DCAR surely. in dincussime a large item, the money to be prent in bringing immigrante to this country, we onght to be able to show reason why we think it is wasteful to expemi money in that direction when the field is onpen in ot her directims. If we malertake to show that ba malent comse in other directions this money will be savenl. which under this proposil will lee wastel, we ought to be allowed to itr so. Discussioms in committ se will be utterly useless if we are to lee gateded hy the Chair in discussing the general policy of the dowermment on an item like this.
 on this side, and 1 am sure nome on the part of the Chair, to gay any hom member. The hom. member for Sorth Sorfoik has a wide scope in dealing with the guestion of immigration. which, every one wust andmit, opens up a discussion to a great extent of the policy of the dovernment, bat the difference between the two sides of the House as to the soope allowel the hon. member is this: His contention is, that because we have asked a vote for immigration, he can open up every question concerning the human race. So far the hom. gentleman hass been good emough to contine his olservations to the history of Camala, including questions past and present, and every phase of the policy of the dooernment, but the same logic that sustains him in doing that would sustain him in coming to the history of any other country and discussing the policy of every country in the globe. We do not want to restrict the hon. gentleman unduly, we do not object to his discussing anything bearing on the question of immigration, but let his discussion be governed by some rule which will enable us, some day or other, to arrive at an end.

Mr. PATERNON (Brant). It will he rememhered that the hon. member for South Oxford asked for an explanatory statement from the Minister with reference to the policy of the f (overnment in immigrationmatters, and it was thoroughly matersteond that the discossion was to he at general one as tw the policy of the (incermment. We are disenssing items under the heading of immigration, and the item following this is Sim, (MN) for inmigration expenses. It was thought, howeser, more comemient that the genemal question shombl be discussed now, after we have hail the statement from the Minister With reference to their police as regards inmigeration. Fom that stampoint. ing hon, frieml has heen pointing out hat war immistation policy has hetwa total fatures aml that unless certain reforms are intronaced in other departments of omr poliey this expenditure will he useless. That is the masis on Which the discussion is procee ling. amd I mist sat. if you were to athere as strictly as yom dial. Mr. (hatman, to the idea which I think was in yome mind, that we were lise wssing this one item, it wond le impossilhe to hate any renemal lisension at all of the immigration policy. Furly. Winisters will nor tate the point that at no period in the passage of these estinates are we to have the oppontunity of a genemal disenssion of the diovernment policy in regand to immigation. That wats the resire expressed by the hom. member for somth ( $x$ ford (sir Richam (artwright), and 1 would suegest to the Minister that it would tend to promote and to ex. perlite hasiness if that were some, becanse he may lepend upon it that, if the $:$ hatir should mule that this feneral disenssion is inopportune at this time. these puestions will have to he worked in at some other time and perhaps in not so comrenient a way. Gentlemen will not foreso their maloulted right wo diseuss this matter, if not now. at some other time, when the disenssion might he less effective. That. I think. is the view unler which my hon. friend was proceding, and possibly the Minister and the Chairman might agree that we shonh discuss the general policy now, ame that the Chaiman should review his decision that what we are dis. cussing is the salary of the atent at Queluce.

Mr. FOsTEF. There ate two things which have heen stated on the other sile whichi cammot allow to gr unchallenged, and which I donot want to be malerstorod as assented to on this sile of the House. The one is the statement that we objected to the comrse pursued by hon. gentlemen becanse it was eetting warm for this side of the Honse and that the unpalatable truths which the hom. gentleman, in his opinion, was bringing forwarl grated very harshly on the ears of hon. gentlemen on this side. The hon. gentleman neerl not lay that fattering unction to his soul. We have heard all this before. We have heard those statements from year to year, we have lived unler them, and we think we shall still live under their repeated infliction. It is not that we are afraid of having facts brought out. The other assertion is that we are afraid of a general discussion upon the immigration policy. IVe are not afrain of a general discussion of that policy, and while these items are proceeding is the time to take the general discussion of that policy, but what we oljected to, and what the Chairman properly ruled upon. Was that my hon. friend for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton), in professing to discuss the general immigration policy, was altogether travelling out of the record.

Sir Johs Thompsos.

Mr. LAURIER. No.

Mr. FOSTYR. I will appeal to my hon. friem himself. The hon. gentleman who prowoked this debate says he was in order in going into certain matters in order to show that our policy of immigration and the expentiture for immigration was futile umless certain changes were male, arl two of these things which he was discussing were the Pational Policy and the keeping of rhis country from what he calls its natural markets in the Cnited states. He went on to assert that he had a perfect right. in discussing the immigration policy, to discuss the Natomal Policy. which is a question of tariff, athl to disenss onir relations commercially with the Unitelstiates, which is a question outside of this altogether, heaanse they had a remote hearinse ni this suliject.

Mr. LACRIER. A direct bearine.

Mr. Foster. Well. a direct bearing that is stronger still. Where womh my hom. friemd have him stop: If he call discuss these matters aml justify their disenssion on this vote, he can discuss anythins in the wite world. He can disenss wherher it is opportane now on declare that this Honse and this comury had no contidence in the prevent diocemment. He can disenss whether or not it is hetter that we shombl remain an integral part of the British Fanpire. He can disconss whether or not we should become a part of the Vinted States. He can justify the discotssion of all those on the gromud that they have a remote commetion with the question male rlelate, le callse he might contemil that if it is hetter for us to become a part of the Conited States it would temd to keep sur peophe here, ami, if it is hetter wo cease our comnection with Gireat britain. he might aty we womh have greater inducements for himeins peaple here and retaining them in Canalat. All we ask is that the rule of proper discussion shambl le earried out in committee. While we have no whjection to fair discussion of the immigration policy, while we would weloome one single pertinent siggestion from that side of the House as to any hetter system of carrying out that policy, which we have not had from that side during the hours discussion which hats taken place and wonld pobably not have doring two or three hours discussion to-night, still the subject itself shombl not he departed from. The hon. gentleman was simply making an attack upon the party regarding erertain lines of policy entirely outside of the phestion before the committee. No person would weleome more than myself a temperate, fair, reasomable disulassion of what is the best thing to do in commection with the immigration policy, and the wishlom of gentlemen on the other side of the Homse, if they would just simply contine it to this one topic and give us their suggestions and endeavour to show as what shoald be the right methoils of immigration, womld le welcomed hy every member on this side and certainly by me. The item under discussion is item 76 , which is a vote for the salaries of agents in this country, and, if one place letter than another can be fomm where the general policy conk he discussed it would he item i9 of $$ 150,(4 n)$ which is the general vote for immigration purposes, where, of course, the general policy of the (iovernment should be properly detined and debated. I am not, however, raising the point that we should not now discuss the general inmigration policy, but let us diseuss the immigration policy and not the tariff and other matters outside, becanse, if we do, each side making assertions and the other rebutting them, we may discuss the sulject for six weeks ant eet no nearer to a conclusiom.

Mr. LAURiER. I am glad to hear the hon. gentleman say that he is willing to receive any good suggestion as to the best immigration policy to be pursued.

Mr. FosickR. Yes, hut we camot get any.

Dir. LAURIER. The hest immigration policy this sitle of the House can suggest is a revision of the tariff policy of the fonemment. Vou have before you the fact that the present policy, instear] of carrying out the promise which was mate, and keeping the people here. is sembing our won popmlation to the other side by hambreds of thomsamds. Now. now whetambing that, you are asking this Honse to wote nealy sempongh to hing immigrants to this combtry. who, if the present course contimes. will simply lamd at Quelee and pass on to. the wher side of the line. My hon. friend is shoming that the whole system is vicions ame rotten: that it is useless to spend this noney as long as the present comelition of affatirs exists. Is that unt fitir: What hetter proof can you bring to show that the immigration policy of the liovernment is masomed than to puote the results of that poliey duriner the last ten rears: We are willing to bring immigrants from Earope to this comitry, and for that purpose you propose (1) expend segn, (MN ) next year. Now: I manatan that if you expend that amome of money in the Way you propose, it will he simply thrown into the sea, you will derive no henefit from it. If you Wish to make the expenditure of this money fraitful ingood results, yon must reverse the conditions now existing. How is this to be done maless the results of your past policy are shown to the comotry: I would not disouss ammexation upon this question. I would not disenss imperial federation, nor any other of the sulijects the hon. gentleman hats mentionen, becalnse they have a very remote bearing upon the question. But I dos say that the tariff policy of the diovermment has an intimate comection with their immigration poliey, and that it is the reason why we desine to disenss it at this time. If the present (hamman had been in the Chair before six oflock, when this subject Wits opened, 1 think he would have perceived that it wats the whole subject of immigration thate was maler discussion, and not this particular itemat quebec.

Mr. Foster. boes my hom. friend take the position that this vote of $\sin$, (nn ought not to be roted until there is a change in the policy of the comitry:

Mr. LACURIER. I take the position that it is a fair question to discass as long as the present tariff policy is persisted in.

Mr. FOSTER. Does my hom. friend think that if he ratises a large question of poliey like that so long as the present tariff is maintaineal, it is useless to expend this $\mathrm{Sil} \%,(\mathrm{OH})$ ?

Mr. LAUPIER. I say this is a question upon which we require more information, and therefore it is fair to debate it at this moment.

Mr. Foxplef. [hes not my hom. frient think that the letter way woull he to introlnce a resolution on the subject:

Mr. LAURIER. It may be proper to intrantuce a resolution at the proper time. But the hon. gentlemin knows that, accoming op parliamentary practice, the resolution is intronluced on the motion to gon into Committee of supply.

Mr. MCLOCK. The House is asked torote a large sum of money for the purpose of promoting immigration: it is acknowlenlegt that we are in need of population. Now, what is the eatuse of that weed: What hats hecome of the pepmation that has alrealy come in: surely there ean be no more direct ennmection with a proposial whine in popmatien than the comblion which hats catlsed a loss of populition. Now suppose that in the conse of this dinchssion my hon. friend should sue -aed in comvincing the Ahministration that at change of tariff would materially affeet the whole pues tion, what would the (iovemment do: The Minister of Fimathe says: hate shgestions. Why, if he invited suggestions and gate them lue weight, he moht discover reasoms to comsince him that hy changiug the tariff poliey we misht save to the comatry the exponditure of this mones altorether. surely the commercial policy is intmately inter wined with the immigration policy. The chatirman and all the meminers of the Homse atmit that the whole immigration policy is now lefore the committee. If that is the caste we cammo separate it from: one of the canses that makes it necessary to bring this vote hefore the House. If it is admittert, as we contemd, that the necessity of binging this vote lefore the Homse is callsed by a bat tiscal policy. surely this is the time toprint ont the catuse of the evil amd to seek a remedy for it.

Mr. (HAMRMAN. I lo not see any reason for changing the rulines I sitce. The hon. gentleman might, with equal propriety, discuss the timancial policy, the commercial policy or the railway policy of the ligemment, amb wander over a great many subjects irrelevant to immigration. I think it would experlite lneinessamd would he in the interest of the Honse, if the hom. sentleman would contine himself a little more chasely to the puestion.

Mr. (HARLTON. I shall embatour to comply with your request and t" keep a little closer to the qutrition in your extination, althomarh. in ms win estimation, İ was comtining myself to the guestion hefore. Now, I was attemptimes to demomstrate the fact that the tisad policy of this dionemment is in some respects pertinent th this disernsion, ats it is calculated to discourage immigration to this comatry amb to promote emigration fromit. Now. one particular proint with regand th the tiscal prlicy of the lionemment that. I was ahout to allurle to, was this: There hats been on the part of this diovermment, athl on the part of the: American liwermment as well, apparently, a setteal determination to aisconage, and as fat as possible to destroy, trate hetween the Dominion of Canada and the United States. The manifestation of that purpose, so far as our own Govermment is concemed, has a direct bearing upon the question umber discussion: it has a most potential influence upon the destinies and upon the prosperity of this comntry, amd in that respect, and to the extent that it has a bearing upon the prosperity of the country, it is pertinent to the discussion, $t$ is pretinent to the dinestion of promoting inmigra tion to this comers: of increasing our population anl develnping nar resources. 1 wish to print out the haring of that repressive policy upon the interests of the country in diminishing its population and in retarding its growth. I desire to print ome that the trank with Canala and the Ginted Stithe has remaneal stationary for twenty-tive sears, that the ammal expents from this comatry to the ["niten states in 1sal were probally a million less than they were in lstiti.
Mr. CHADRMAN. I must call the home gentle man to order. I lo not think he is resarding the rulinge of the chair. If he persists. I shall have wo call Mr. Spuaker.
sir RICHARH (ARTWRIIHT. ©all the beputy speaker.
Mr. CHARITON. Am I tomblerstand that I must drep this branch of the guestion:
Mr. (HADRMAN. That is me rulinge and I ask the committee an sustatin me in that raling.
Mr. CHARITON. Ame I shall ask the Homse tu surtaian me in my right to discuss this hameh of the ghestion. I dio not propuse to be gageel in this Homer of Commons in a proper ame pertinent diselusion of the puestim, unless the Honsederides that 1 am wrong.
sir IOHN THOMPsoN. The hom, gentleman, I ann sure hearl the discussion which went on at few momentre itho, in which his awn friends indicateed the hearing which might he given the the question under disenssion. I ann sure if he will disens: ang question directly hearing upon the: gnestinn hefore the conmittere the Honse womld be very sory to see him restraned. When this p,int was raiseld the hom, gentlenam was taking a latitule which, as I said lufore would justify the intronluction of amy ghestion at all.
Mr. (HARITOS. I was alment to proceed to demenstrate that the particular line of fiseal prolicy I was speaking of did diminish the population of this comery. did have a lirect hearingeon the yuestion of the development of our resonres and the increane of omr poppulation. I was mot alloweel to reach that print. I would havedemonstrated that it hat a direct hearing, and was a most pertinent illustration. I was permitted to ge so far, and then I was shut off.

Sir JOHATHOMPSON. (irom.

Mr. CHARLTON. I have no desire to occupy the time of the Honse umacessatily. I have no desire to introlace matter irrelerant to the subjeet mader discussion. I have a line laid ont, and I wish toproceed on it to demmstrate certain assertions I hive mate with respeet to the loss of popm. lation. I trust 1 may le allowed to make the statement I desire to make. I was proceeding to saty that the tiscal poliey of this dovernment as it relates to our intercourse with the United States has been of a chatracter to diminish the growth of trade letween these two countries, and that the exports to the United States were actually less now than in 1866 . I intended to proceed from that point to show that with continued free trade the increase of trade between the two countries would have been enormous, that the prosperity of this country from the increase of trarle would have been very great, and that the repressive policy of this Govermment, acting inconjunction with therepressivepolicy of the Cnited siates (iovernment, has been the means of repressing our energies, of driving our population from us. in showt of interfering with our growth. If this is not a matter pertinent to the disconsion of this question, why surely no matter can be. Notwithstimling the effionts to destroy the trade lee ween thesecomntries, on total trale with the Cnited States with Cireat Britain: and had our exports to the Cnited states indreased since lstis in the same proprotion they inereased from lsiot to isibis. under a partial reciprosal tariff. in the place of exporting a value of $s+1$. ons.onn). We womblat hare exported Ween hrought into this counter. in the shape of exports wo the linited states than we have reveived. 1 would ask if. assuming as the that we host Slim.onn.onk of expmet.. through at given line of poliey, that pricicy hats not some hearing on the growth of our properity and on the inerease of pupulation in this comitry? It has more hearing on this question than this cole of Sl!s, (nh) - it has more hearing than wenty voles of that anmont. It is the priticy of the danermment. the poliey of repressime the pulicy that demies this comatry its natural markets. the policy of hostility wom neighhoms, that aceomes in a large measture fir the fact as it shomblue. This is a question of the utmosimportance to this combtry. and it is pertinent. proprer and releant to censider it tonight.

We have a certain line of pronlactions in this amotry for which we time our expent market in the Cnited siates. and I wish in comection with this immigation guestion to show how important it would lee whis comerys, if we had free ad unimpeded acesess to that market, for. not withstambing the policy of repression, we are obliged to sell in that market at great disadrantage to ourselves. I wish to call the attention of the Minister of Agriculture to this branch of the sulject, and he will be then able to judge more clearly its To what poliey it is necessary to pursue in order to promote the interests of the country and to increase its pepulation. And yom. Mr. (Chairman, will appreciate the force of this as a practical famer, althongh you are a professional man, and I will now take the tralle returns and show the movement of trade in certainarticles between this comntry and the linited states and other countries. I take exports of horses, sheep, poultry, eggs, hides. wool, bailley, heans, hay, malt, potatoses, vegetahles and has. Latst year we exported these articles to the United states to the value of s!, $3,3,0,531$. We exported to Great Britain, where there is a free market, whereas in the Cnited states the hars are up and we had to climb, over them. to the value of Sx:30, stio, or twelvetimesasmuch to the Unitel States as to Cireat Britain. During the previous year, when the Mckinley Bill hail not gone into operation, we exported to the United States the value of $$ 14,124,801$, to Great Britain the value of S42; 4 各i, or thirty-four times the value of those articles to the United States as to Cireat Britian. When we talk alwat two-rowed barley, hon. members must remember that we sent to Great Britain last year barley to the value of $$ 3,5,22 \pi$, probably all year barley to the value of sor, 2,0, probably all two rowed barley, and to the United States the Mr. Chablton.
value of $82,849,069$ or thirty-eight times as much to the United States as tolireat Britain, with 30 cents. per hushel luty on that sent to the United States aml the British market free and open. That illustrates the vast importance of securing free access to that market where, notwithstanding all these circumstances, we sold thirty-eight times as much barley last year as in the Britisin market. Of eges, we sold tol ireat Pritain last year the value of 843.3 . 6 iso. and to the United States, in the face of the $\overline{5}$ cent duty the value of $81,07+24^{7}$. All these facts, ami I only refer to them lirietly as illustratine the puint which I ilesire to present in a striking light hefore the Honse, illustrate the main fact I wish to present, that we are delarred from our natural market that. in consergence. our prosperity is impairel, that our people leare us and go th that enntry from which one prolactsare shat out : and if this G avermment wish to promote the prosperity of this comtry, to increase its perpulation, to keep the people who are now dwelling here, and ti) retain the immigrants who come to this bominion. they must alopt a broalder and more liheral puliey, a common-sense trale policy with repect to the other forts-two commonealthe on this comtinent mot moler the British Hag.

I will not detain the House very much longer. I womb have concluded half an home ases. hat hom. gentlemen opposite attempted w prevent me sayus what I wanted to say on this matter. We want to change our trade policy, we want to reath the markets to the south if us, we want i" pay less attenrion to the markets of wher anmiries and more attention to that great natural market of (if),(KN),(RK) Lying alougside of 11 . Last year we were talling abont the trale with the West Indies. Mexico. (entral and Si,uth America. Our exports of animals amil pros. duce to those comutries last year reachel $$ 11.923$.
 of 3334,294 . At the salie time we sent these proiducts to the Vaited states to the ralue of Slldios,(kh). or thirty times as much to the United states as to all these commeries together. In the face of these facts it is ahsurd to talk about devel. oping trate with the Nest Indies, Mexico, Central and fouth America, when those markets are so insig. nificant compared with the United States market. I simply reiterate that the Govermment shomb adopt it commom-sense policy, that they should adopt a wise immigration porice, that they should seek tor run this comentry in the interests of the farmer, the lumberman, the mechanic and the labourer, to govern the comenty so that our people will remain in this country. which is as good as any on the continent, possessing, as it does, rast resources, and all that is necessary toderelop this emuntry and increase its population as rapidly as it should increase, is to adopt a trade policy calculated to promote its interests. Before I take my seat I must reiterate my request to the Minister of Finance to produce the article he referred to, castingreflections on me, and to read it to this House, so that the House may know what the charge is, so that I may know what it is and may he in a position to answer it here as a member of this House where the charge is made against me. I want to know whether the Finance Minister proposes to do this. The allusion is made, and I want to know what it is.

Mr. Bow ELL. It is on recorl that you said that you real it.

Mr. (HARLTON. It is on record that Baron Mamehansen lirel once and tied his horse to a steeple.
Mr. Foster. He has come lack again.
Mr. (HARLTOS. I say that the Finance Minister should real this article, so that I may have an opportunity of answering it here when the House is made acguainted with its character.

Mr. Mr.MClder. If the Finance Minister is not going to defend the statement he made wish regarid to the member for Xirth Korfolk (Mi: (harltom) we will have to proceed with the discus. sion. When the Finane Minister drew the attention of the committee to it question of order. in place of healing with the guestion he went on to outline the divertion in which a disemsionon an important matter of this kime might takeplace. $\mathrm{He}_{\mathrm{e}}$ challenged the hom member from North Norfolk (Mr. (harlton) on a question of order, but in place of discussing that question when he rase in his phace. he went off in every direction he cond think of to outline what he conceived to be the proper discussion of a guestion of this kind. I conten that the whole policy of the liovernment on the question of immigration is before the committee in ermection with this item. Hand we proceeded to pass the item now hefore the com. mittee, hom. gentlemen opposite might chaim that since we hat passed the salaries to agents at guehee and wher points. we had commited ourselves tion. We claim that mow and here is the proper time to criticise the policy of the dovermment on this important matter. The question of our popilation has been referrel to hy the hom. member for North Xorfolk (Alr. (harlon) as one of vital interest. When we come to consider the fact that within the last ten years. maler the heal of immi-people into the conutry, and that we now tind from the cemsus that the are ure here, I am sure the people af this count will consider that we are discharging a sery inportant duty when we are drawing the attelition of the House to this question. I agree in every reference made ly the hon. member for North Noffolk (Nr. (harltom) ts the vicims policy of the dorermment and its exil results on our popalation. When the dioverment make a comutry desirable to live in, and give to the people the necessaries of daily life at the lowest price, and fasilitate people coming to the country ly free grants of land, aml enahle them to oltain comfortable homes. then is the time to seek for immigration: and it is not while you continue a ricious policy in force which imposes taxation upon them and makes them victims of combines and monopolies. The people will mot stay here when they come, which clearly shows that the policy of the (iovernment is responsible for the loss of our population. I am not prepared to say that the policy of the Covermment is entirely responsible for all the exoshas: but still we must remember that when the hom. gentlemen on the Treasury benches were in the Opposition, they charged the exodus on the Liberal Administration, and they promised that when they got into prower they would not only prevent the exodus, but would Wring the people back who had left the country: We now can see that our population increased more in proportion during the Lilneral Administration than it has churing the last ten years, which is a clear proof that the policy of the present firvermment has leena failure. The I.iberal Arminist ation were characterized by the gentlemen of the Alministration as heing flies on the wheel, and chargen with not giving encouragement to the mannfacturing industries... I helieve they ventmed to sity something about the agricultural interest-... hat these very gentlemen have heen for 12 years in power now, and let me ask them has their poliey fept the people in the country ? No, it hats mot. Their policy has been a failure amb our contention is that it shombl he recast. Their policy is like the man that went to the gansmith to get his gin fixed: it wants a new lock, stock and harrel. The whole thing is wrong. I contemi that before we pass the salary for a single agent. amil before we lemo our endorsation in the slightest degree to a contimation of the policy of the (iowermment. it is the duty of the "pposition to draw the attention of the: Honse to the vicions results that policy has had upen the comutry. It is desimale that we should have a complete change in that policy. The Minister of Agriculture has ontlined the course the dovernment intend to pursue for the next year, and he says they are going to give i honns of El 1 l to the head of a fatmily and years who come into the country. I see that last year we patid out a large sum for honnses to agents amb others for bringing immigrants into this country. I contend that the guestion is not so much how ve are going to get the people here, as how we are going to keep them here when they lo conse. We hate spent millions upon millions to bring population into the country, hat the population has vanished. The policy we desire to impress upon hon. gentlemen opposite is the policy that will keep the preople here whein they do come, amd when we have adopted a policy of that kind, then let us inaugurate means to encourage immigration. As my hom. friem has pointed ont, the immigrants have taken advantange of all the offers of bmoses and assisted passages: they have come auross the Atlintic and lamed at Halifax or guchecor Montreal: they have been treated kindly : everything has been fone that could be done to keep them in the country, but they have passed through and passed out at the other end. Now, we wat some system that will prevent the continuous How of these immigrants into the Cinited Sitates, and the only way in which you can keep them when you bring them here is by giving them eviolence that you are going to make them free and independent here by removing from them the exactions of the National Policy, I contemd that the North-West land policy of the (iovernment has had much to do with driving people out of that country instead of attracting them to it. In the tirst place the (iovermment should never have parted with the control of the public linds. Hat they kept then, sulbject to a certain lien in favour of the Canadian Pacitic Railway, so that every man who went there would have a free choice to settle and build his shanty wherever he liked, withont restriction, the country would have heen much more rapidly settled. But, as it is, when men go there to settle and enter on a lot, they are toll that that is Canadian Pacific land; if they go to another they are told that it is some colonization company's lamel, another is Hudson Bay Company s. dinother is sehnol lands. The result is that only a remmant of land is left for perople to take up as homesteals when they on there, so that many become disappointed and liseronraged, and write back to their friends in the ohl comitry, saying: The promises and inducements hehl out to us to come to (ianada have not lieen fultillen, and we would not inlvise yon to come hare : you had hetter go to some country where you will le hetter off than in the (ianadian North-West. That has been the unfortumate results in many cases. Another thing that has reduced our population is this: Vears ago many of our people went to Michigan, Minnesota, Ditkota and other parts of the western States, amd in writing hack to their friemds in (anada these people invariably compare notes as to the prices they hase to pay for goonls ame the prices they get for their prombee. If the man in Michigan took lon) hashels of harley to market and got Est for it, while the man in ('anala for his l(k) hushels omly fot $s t s$, the latter would decide that his brother in Michigath was better off, and that he had hetter go there. I know instances myself where men hate been the means of inducing their brothers to en to the Chited states, simply hecanse the prices they received for their agricultural prolucts were hetter than the prices they received in ('anada. We have heen coixing and appealing earnestly ". hom. gentlenen opposite to honestly seek to whain a treaty that would wipe out the hatriers between the two comitries and give us free access to the Linited States market. The moment they do that they will stop the exomlus. The Canarlian will see that he has os free access to the Americam market as his brother in liakotat. Bat as long as hon. gentlemen opprsite pursue the policy of restriction, and put a harrier in the way of our people obtaining their natmal market, solong will they have the people of this country leaving it and going where they canget the alvantages which they woulh have if these harriers were taken lown. We have heen trying to educate hon. gentlemen opposite, hut they appear tu be murilling to learn. But slow as the people of this comery are learning, I helieve they are learning the truth. I believe they are coming to sece that the policy we are advocating must ultimately preaal.

Mr. Mr.MCLLEN. They would show it lut for the money and the boodling and the political corruption of hon. yentlemen opposite. These hon. gentlemen do not golbefore this country trusting to the popularity of their policy; they trust to the popularity of the clollars which they have in their poskets ; that is the reason they smile over the bje-elections. For these reasons we are justitied in urging upon hon. gentlemen at revision of this whole policy of immigration. We want it recast. Before there is a single dollar granted or an agent appointed, we insist that it is a waste of the peorple's money to spend $\$ 2 \pi \bar{\pi},(100$ or $8300,0 \times 0$ to liring people here to pass on to the Cuited Ntates. The people of this country are heavily enough burdenerl with debt now, without leing made financial slaves for the purpose of increasing the population of the United States. We have done that for the last ten years, becausehon. gentlemen opposite declared that their policy was going to reverse the order of things that prevailed before they came into power ; but it has made matters worse, for ten people leave the country to-day to every one that went formerly. Now. Sir. I want to say a few worls with regard to the province from which I come. The whole move. ment of immigration for a number of years past has been towards the North-West. Every pam: phlet written and sent across the Athantic has leen for the purpose of inducing people to go to our North-llest. Hardly a word has heen said with regard to desirable fowations that can be had for a very reasonable sum in the older provinces. In Nova seotia, New Bromswick and Prince Edward lislan there is surely rom for thonsands, yes. millions. on arable land that would provide them with comfortahle homes. More than that, thereare people in the Province of Ontario, who under the operation of tive policy of hou. gentlemen opposite have become panpers, whose lands have beeome mortgaged, who would like to sell them at a reasmable price. and who would make the hest pioneers in the Sorth-West. Sons, if we conld set instead tenant farmers from the old comitry who would come out with $\mathrm{t}^{2} 2$, , ONO or $\mathrm{t}: 3$, ,000 capital and buy cur Ontario farms, we could send to the Aorth-West our Camalian farmers who would make more successful pioncers than the English farmers ever will. Bat the whole drift of the diovernment has, on the contrary, been to send Werymoly to the North-West. Of course the Canalian Pacitic Railway have exercised a considerable influence in this direction, and you camnot blane them for endeavouring to secure an influx of population where their chief interests lie, but that is all the more reason why we should not lose sisht of the older provinces. In Gntario, Quelece, Dovascotiand New Brunswick that classof settlers would tind comfortable homes, which they would buy out, and enable the Canadian farmers to go to the North-West and develop that comutry. If a poiicy of that kind were adopted, there would he two oljects served. In the first place, it would tend (1) relieve many of the farmers now in tinancial embarrassments in the ohler provinces. hy obtaining for them reasonable value for their lands, many of which are now mortgaged and will erentually fall at a saterifice into the hamds of the mortgagees : and they would thns havesomething to start with in the ※orth-West: which they are better fitted to develop than immigrants from the old comutry. That is a change which should be auloptel. if we are to have an immigration policy at all. Under the operation of our immigration policy in the past. our money has gone and the people have gone. We have neither the one nor the other : aud now. hefore a single dollar is coted, is the time to inaugurate a change coul bring about a different combition of things. We want to show the people of the old commtry that we are going to give them comfortable homes. that every item entering into their every-day use can le foum in Canada as cheap as in the Cnitell States. We want to procure for them the same markets for their supplies and produce as is given by other portions of the continent. We want to give them every opportumity to advance: We want to throw of shackles and restrictions, make this a free, progressive comntry where every man is given the opportunity of selling in the best markets and luying in the cheapest. The people of this generation are not fools. You camont get immigrants from the old country, who do not know how many beans make five. They are not ignorant of the history of their own country: they know what it has suffered under protection : and they are convinced that protection is oljectionable. We know what it has brought this country to. We have a condition of things serimus enongh to be deplored. Take the words used by dohlwin smith when adlressing an important individual of the Australian colonies, upon the guestion of the confederation of those colonies. He said. and I am sure it was with feelings of regret he said it, that he hat to almit that the demoralized comlition, the slough of political comption through which the confederacy of Canala was passinge was enough to deter any colony from entering into a somfeleracy. It is time we should put a stop to the unfortunate condition of things here. one extravagance after amother: me expenditure after another. We have thronghont this comuty evilences of the failure of hon. gentemen opposite. We have railroads which mow remain as exhibitions of folly, in many cases wot paying for the grease on the wheels. We have the railroal built in Cape Breton that has cost the comatry

 We have our Intereolonial Railway with its numerous branches on which the people are losing the operation of that road, and we are paying interest on sin), (Кн).(OK) sunk in building it, or loss in ruming the road. As the legitimate outcome of the policy of hom. gentlemen opposite, there are humirens of men hired on the road who hare nothing to do. 160 were dismissed the other day and $3(x)$ more received notices that in a short time their services would he dispensed with. Sone change will have to take place. Let us hegin now and reform this pernicions policy which has been in operation for ten years. dive the people who come here frecholls: give them every inducement to settle: but for the sake of the taxpayers, let our policy be first to inaugurate a systemi which will keep the people here we have, cimb then we will have no difticulty in lringing others in.

Mr. CAsES. Before this item is passed, I wish to call attention to what is almost al piece of ancient history, and that is the two promises made so long ago that both sides seem to have forgoten them. When we were passing the charter of the Cima dian Pacitic Railway, we were told that it would not add anything the the burdens of the country. We were toll that it would free us from immigration expenditure, as was proved to be the case in the north-western states. There the (iovermment made grants of l and to the railways, and the failways in their turn adsertised for settlers and filled up the country. We all knew this to be true about the north-western states. We all knew whenever ue saw a pamphlet or a poster advertising lands from Kiansas to the Camadian lomolary, that poster or pamphlet was issued in the name of some railway being built in that district and published for the purpose of getting settlers and trattic for their lines. Of course, they not only got trattic for their lines, but were enabled to sell the lands given them by the fovernment. We were tohl that this would be done in the case of the Canadian Pacific Ralway, hut now, eleren years have passel and we find that instead of the Canalian Pacitic Rail. way doing all that wats necessary to alvertise the lanis and thereby relieve the (iovernment, the (iovernment Immigration Department has become to a large extent the advertising department of the Camalian Pacitic Railway. We have given them lands and money to buid the malways, and now we are putting ourselves to the const of advertising those lands in Europe and elsewhere for the benctit of the railway, and, as the hom. member for North Wellington justly remarkel, we are alvertising not only at the expense of Ontario, hint in Ontario. Weare speming money with the effect of inducing Ontario fanners to remove to the Sorth-West, and therely depreciating the value of moperty in that province. 1 suppose it is useless to expect from the Minister of Agriculture any statement as to negotiations letween himself anil the Camalian Pacific Railuay, with the view of that milway assuming the lion's share of the task of alrertising the North-West. When i Minister has mot sufficient energy or willingness for work to attenil to the duties of the Department of Aspriculture. we camot expect him to go outside of the narmonest possible grove for the purpose of making armagements with the Canalian Pacific Railway or anybonly else. And we camot expect that this doverinment should ask the Camadian Pacitic Railway to catry out the pronises male on its behalf by its golfather, sir Charles Tupper, when he towk charge of the measure, eleven years ago. in this House. We camot expect this ciovernment to hold the Canalian Pacitic Railway to any of their atereements or promises. It is more likely that the (anadian Dacific Railway are holding the diovernment to its promises. The compalsion in all deatines between the two parties seems to be on that side. There is another point to which I must call attention, the question of assisted inmigration. We are not only paying bonuses for the importation of adult persons from Europe, which I see have heen very considerable in amomat--though I an not now dealing with the anome but with the principle--but, hesides that, we have heen paying lomuses for the importation of panper chilhren from England. I think, after a good many years experience of this importation of young paupers. tha country at large is not inclined to look upon that trate-for I can hardly call it anything else with great farour. In the first place, the material imported is necessarily of the worst class. Children whose parents are so poor or so vicious that they camot, or will not take care of them, are pickeil up ly the philanthropic societies of Cireat Britain and put in training for a short time there, ami then exported to Canala. Now there may be, of course, and no doubt are, many exceptions to the rule, but the rule is that the children of vicious and mheeilthy parents will grow up to be vicious and mhealthy themselves. The children of such parents are utterly degraded in mind, in body and in morals. It is surely not necessary for a country so rich in resources as Canada to descem to the importation of the offspring of this degraded stock as the basis for a future population. Worse than that, after they are brought here, these children are placed in a position of virtual slavery in the families to whom they are entrusted. No doubt, as I sidid when speaking of the character of these children, there are exceptions, and many of them are received very young into families where there are few or no other children, are receivel as members of the family, and grow up to he goond and useful citizens as far as they can be, considering the breed from which they come: but we have constant reminders in the courts that many of these children are bronght into families where there are other chiddren, where there is jealonsy on the part of the othel: children, where the father or the mother singles them out from the rest of the family and treats them as slaves or pariahs. We have constant accounts in the papers of these children being hrutally nsed. and on the other hand we have accomts of these children turning out very bally, robhing their emplovers, or, as might lie readily, expected on the part of the female children, falling in to rery had courses. Looking at all the circumstances, looking at the very bat material anh at the pactical results of the scheme as far as we havesen, I think the comntry is tired of the importation of panper children. I say that in fannilies of the kind I have meationed these chind. ren leceme slates or pariahs. You camot help, that. The people who put them out have no means of knowing the fanilies to whom they semb them. No doult there is some kind of inspection. but it camot extemi to any practical care taken of the children. We do not wamt the importation of slave labour under cover of philenthropy. We do not need it in this cometry. We are having sufticient trouble to prevent our own children leing taken ont of our own comatry to the Cnited States to desire to import an inferior class in their places. My hom. fiend from North Norfolk (Mr. Charlom) and my hom. friend from North Wellington (Mr. Ne.Mullen) have done what was perfectly right. what was perfectly in order, and what was their duty in pointing out that it was useless to expend mones to get immigrants when we could wo keep our own people at home. Look at the compatative value of the imaigrant and of the young Canalian who is lost to us ly the pricy of this ciovernment which is importing foreigners. The young Canalian is generally a well ellucaten, sturdy, honest man. After the country has paid its share in bringing that child to manhood, how much is he worth to the country? A friend behind me says $s$, 0 (on) is a very low estimate. I should be inclined to domble or trelle it. In the states they estimate that every immigrant is worth SQ,(ox). If an immigrant is worth se, (M, M), what is a mature, grown up young Camadian, ellucated as a young Canadian is and emming from the stock that young Canadians come from. worth? Double it again and call it $\mathbb{S}$, , $(k)$ and yon will not he far off the mark. And now you are every year losing these young Canadians and replacing them either by adult immigrants from another comery or ly patupers from the slums of London. Can we call this a patriotic policy " No. The policy shond be, Canala for the Canadians. Keep Canadians in Canada first and then importother people from outside. The Government have appeared to see that. They are compelled to see it. They are now trying -and the Canadian Pacific Railuay are assisting them to a certain extent-to repatriate the Canadians who have gone to the United States. In the Province of Quebec there are societies that are trying to do the same thing in regard to Canadians who have gone across'the horder. But it is a strange commentary on our immigration policy that we are spending money to loring in foreigners when at the wante time we have to send agents across the line to loring back our own people who have gone there. I sily that the contented settler is the hest agent. The man who writes home to his friends and tells them of his grom circumstances is the hest agent, amel it is far hetter for us to make the immighants we set happand contented thantospend all this money ingetting more. That is worth more than the fiex, (xM) "opies of the famers delegates reports that have been got amd distributen. It is worth more than the f, (NA copies of the Brandom Mail at a cost of Sign). It is worth more than the $2 .$, (NW) coppies of the Sr ra, dimerrien-Concelian. I wonder how many scamdibavians we got by the circulation of that paper. If We make our immigrants happy after they come here. we need expend very little on the salaries of the immigration officers. How much does the tion: I do not know the figures, lont I believe the emomat is rery trithing compared with ours. It is the ralway eompanies whodo the work for them. I say mo mater how much we pay our immigration agents, no matter how many pamphlets we send atroan, the census figures gathoal too, they are guoted hy those who wish to deflect immigration into other ehamels, and those census bulletins give the lie. apparcutly, to everything that is asserted by our agents, or hy our panphlets. 1 say they give the lie apparently, hecanse after all, Canama has the adsantares in soil, and climate, and natural resonrees, that are asserted in those pamphlets: lout in face of the fact that the exodus from Canala has exceeded the immigration into Canada during the pist ten years, what are foreign countries groing to helieve: They say: It is all very well to tell us almout your natural allantages, but we find that more people are leaving your comotry than are soing intoit. What does this mean? If we tell them it is the result of the forermments fiscal prolicy. they camnot go into the minutia of our polities. Ne may say what we like about our products, ahont our farms and forests, we camot make a fatourahle impression on foreign countries as long as the figures show that people are groing out of the country faster than they are coming in. As the hom. member for North Wellington (Mr. Me Mallen) satys, we are getting rid of the people and the money at the same time.

Mr. DAVIES (I'.F.I.) As I maderstand the discussion has, from the outset, tatena somewhat winle same. I want to make a remark or two on this sulbect, of immigration with special reference to the province from which I come. I understand the hon. gentleman at the head of the department has had in his employment whether selected by himself or hy the High Commissioner, I ilo not know, a certain number of skilled farmers known as tenant farmers, that they visited the different Maritime Provinces with a view of seeing whether there was any land open for scttlement, and whether the inducements were, such that they could fairly recommend to their clients at home to come and settle in those provinces. I understand from conversition with several gentlemen who themselves conversed with these tenant farmers, that they were well satistied with the natural condition they foumd there; they thought the climate was good, the soil was gool, and that these two combined conditions were favourable to agriculture, and they were prepared to recommend to their friemds to make the Maritime Provinces their home. But I mulerstand that these gentlemen reported further-and I think the committe ought to have this matter put straight by the hom. gentleman if it is not correct--I molerstam they reported further that although the natural comditions in the Maritime Provinces were faromable to the levelopment of agriculture, still the fiscal comditions overpowerel the matumal conditions, and they would be obliged to recommend to their friends in the old conntry not to come to the Maritime Provinces. Now, when the hon. gentleman for North Norfolk (Mr. (harlton) was making his speech in the early part of the evening, and was interrupted hy the Chair on the gromid that he was not in orler, it struck me he was puite in order, because the very reason wiven hey these agents sent ont hy the department showed that immigration does not flow into those provinces hecause of the artificial tiscal regulations which are enforced at the instance of the bowimment. If that is so, it imbicates a comblion of matters which ought to engage the serious attention of this Honse. If these tenant farmers fomm that neither ond soil, nor our climate, nor other natural comitions. Were unfarourable to immigration, we would hate been obliged to submit in silence, becanse we camont alter any of those : hat when they fiml that all these matural eomditions are favomalle, amd that the only unfavourable comitions are these which have been introluced by the (iovermment of the diay. and that if those mifarourable combitions were changed these men would be prepared to recommend to their friembs to come to this comatry, then I say not only that this point is pertinent to the discussion of the question before the Homse, hat that it is the bommenduty of members to consider it most serionsly in comnection with the very grave facts which are fromb in the census retums regardind the Maritime Provinces. Now, I fiml that the Varitime Provinces, moler the fiscat comitioms in population by over low,own. Now, what has heen the result in the last ten years, when a new fiscal policy was introlnced : The total increase including cities has heen hut 10.010 . The loss in the three provinces during the last ten rears has per cent alone. I say this is one of the moss lamentable. one of the most appalling, facts which ever a free amd independent people had lirought lefore them, and it hehowes this committee triconsider with great attention this solemm ami serious mat teraffecting the future well-heing of our comntry. Sir, while this duestion is heing discussed it would hecome hom. gentlemen whose constituents are more ar less affected by it, whom I see opposite to me, the members of the liovernment and their supporters, either to answer these facts, or to give some explanation showing why they intend to persist in the continuance of a policy which is depopulating one of the finest portions of this Dominion. Now, let us come tordetails. I see before me the hon. member for Albert (Mr. Weldon) a gentleman who occupies a high position in the respect and esteem of this House, and who is believed by his friends to be a pretty able man. Why, sir, we tind him supporting this policy. I find by the census returns that the County of Albert had a total population in 1881 of $12,3(0)$. The natural increase was $2,4(0)$; the total loss in population was 1.35 s , and the matural increase lost be-Sir, lookine at that gentleman's education and position, and the intluence which he wields in his party, I should have expected him either to insist that a change should take place in the fiscal policy which proliced sllch results, or that he should have given some explanation showing that these results are not attributable that policy. I find that in that gentleman's comaty, in the previons 10 years moder a different tiseal policy, the population instead of deereasing. increased ly 1,6 den $_{3}$. Sir, there is the Minister of Finance, whocomes from the Comnty of Kings, N. B., the man who controls the tiscal police of the country. I find that the loss of popinlation in that comety is 9.929 , and the natural in(rease of $\therefore, \boldsymbol{O l ( N )}$ was lonst besides, making a total hoss of $\overline{-i} .2^{-}$. The hom. gentleman is not in the (hamher now, hat these figures were read to him by my hom. friend who sits at my left (Nir Richarel (artwright) before amel from that day to this he hats never assayed any reply, mot to the argument, hut to the fact recorided in the census returns as hoought down by himself. Then we find in the comity represented by the leander of the fovern ment, Antigonish, there has heen a loss of population of 1.04 x , in addition to the natural increase of the Minister of Agriculture mothing whatever to sity in the face of these fatcts: Is this the result of proring ont the money and treasure which has gone rut from his department during the last 10 fears" Lamentable is a mild word to use, it is ilisgratefal to the comotry, disgraceful to the department, and disgraceful, I must say, to the men who propommen the system under which it has taken place, and to which it is to be chiefly ascribed. Take my own comuty, which is the Hower of atl the cominties in regaril to agriculture. Some hon. MEMBERS. No, mo.
Mr. DAVIES (I'.F.I.) I repeat that in regard to agricultural pronlucts and agricultual capabilities it is the flower of all. Its population has decreased $0,1: 32$, and the natural increase, ! $9,0(0)$, lost, gives a dectease of $11,3: 33$ in that comnty alone. If we take the whole St. Lawrence group, (ape Breton, Victoria, Inverness. Antigonish and Pictom-

Mr. (ADERON. Yon cianot take Cape Breton anyway.

Mr. INTIE: (I'E.I.) The hom. gentleman is leaping before lie reaches the stile. I was going to make it quotation from the official records. The hon. member may contralict it: if he does so, he must give some evidence to justify his contradiction. The sit. Lawrence group of counties, containing a population of $123,0 \times 0$ in $18 \$ 1$, has increased its population fis souls during the past 10 years. So that group of comnties alone has lost its increase of ex, MKK people, and that in face of the fact that during those years there has been an expenditure construction of a railway. Although hundredsamd thousamls of men were brought in to assist in builing that road, the natural increase of population of $24,(\mathrm{KN})$ even idid not ocur. These facts have to hee answered-they are not mere statements. I remember some years ago when memiers who came from the Maritime Provinces ventured on their responsibility, and acting on Mr. Davies (P.E.f.) their personal knowlelge marle: statements akin to these in the official records, we were told hy hon. gentlemen opposite that we were decrying the country, that we were exaggerating the facts, that He were mo true patriots and that we were not to be relied upon. I did not blame at that time the head of the department and the leader of the (iovernment for not accepting our statements when they were contralicted hy our colleagues who supported the liovermment in the Maritime Prorinces. Now every statement has been veritied and shewn to le under the mark, and the official record shows that the people are tlecing from those provinces as from a plague, and that the population is $1(6, \overline{3},(\mathrm{KO}$ ) less than it should be, and it would be if they had retained their natural increase. It leehonves the lieal of the department to take this matter into his serious consideration. The populattion is not only depleter, hat in material wealth hats fallen helind until the sitnation to-day is: appalling.

An hom. MEMBER. Oh, wh.

Mr. JAVIEN (P'F..I.) The hom. gentleman who latughs does not know what he is lathghing about, and he does not come from that pirt of the eountry. Dues he know that there has heen an increase in the three chief cities of the Maritime Provinces of only io people during the last ten years: that the value of shipping held hy the maritime perple hats are not taking that pride in the eromery they ought to take, considering its great capabilities ats regarols agriculture, fisl:ing and mining: that the young men who are going from those provinces to the United States are considered to be the flower of the: population of the republic: Daes the hom. gentleman tell me that a fiscal system which drives the rising young men of the country out of it is one to be continmed, and that hon. gentlemen opposite have mothing to saty when these facts are brought before them: We have reached a crisis- - I cammot speak for the upper provinces, for I dornot know how they stand-we have reached a drisis in the history of the Daritime Provinces so great and severe that, unless something is done in the near future, if they continue to believe that statement made by the Minister of Finance that there is mo hope of ohtaining better trade relations with the United States, I repeat to him what I have previously stated, that he will make onehalf of them ammexationists within two years. I rejoice to know there is a better gospel preached, there is a brighter hope for our people, hut it does not come from the men who are dumb, to-night in the face of these facts, and who have mothing to offer the people hat a policy of despair. What is the sense of voting this sum year after year" The Minister stys we have leen inh. ing tos the population in the North-West and are now doing so. But immigrants would go there with. out the fiovermment money, if the Arministration would remove the restrictions of which the member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) spoke and give them fair-play, and give them the best land, and we would have no need to pour out money like water, as the Governanent has leen doing, to induce perople to go there. The best people would go there, as they go to Dakota and other western States, withont these artificial inducements. But whaterer the hon. gentleman may lee cloing in the North-West he is doing nothing in the Maritime Provinces. I do not ask the Minister to spend money to bring immigrants there, because I agree with the tenant farmers who reported to him, and whose report is in his possession, that while the present fiscal system remains, if they came there they would leave in a short time. But he can awaken from his dream and help his colleagnes to make this a cheaper and leeter country to live in, and to secure the removal of the artificial restrictions, when we would obtain people with money in their pockets and energy in their constitution, and hope in their hearts, who would come from the old country, where there is a surplus of population. and make for themselves free am happy homes in that garden down by the sea, a garden once prosperous, contented and happy, but now, I am sony to say, exactly the reverse. If it is the reverse. I charge it on the hon. gentleman and his policy : and if hom. gentemen opposite contimue another 10 years with the policy of despair, there will not he a slight increase of 16 . . hut even that will have been wiped out, for the people will have left the country altogether:

Mr. CAMEROS. It is not my intention to prolong this diselussion hecause I think it has assumed quite a sutficient length alrealy. However. I cannot allow to pass mumoticed some of the ohservations made ly my hom. friend from Queens (Mr. Daties). I a waystake verymachpleavare inlistening to) him because what he lacks in argument he makes up in sound, and on nearly every oceasion that he speaks he must hate a ting at Cape Breton. I would say at this stage that it wats an unfortmate circumstance that the (ascermment did not aceept some of the suggestions made in $18: 9$ by the hon. members opposite. There are no persons in this Honse I helieve who more fully realize the fallacy of the census taken previous to 1891 than my hon. friemls from North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) and f:om Queen's (Mr. Davies). If the suggestions male hy them in Is(N) had heen taken ly the davernment agood deal of the arguments which they usel to-night, and which they have been using on former occations, would have been taken from under their feet. In the same way that their discussions on the National Policy recoil upon themselves every time they raise it in this House, so will their disenssion in reference to the census of the Dominion recoil upon them when the question is thoroughly understoond ly the peopie of this country. My hom. friem from North Norfolk (Mr. (harltm in i8MO, page D3:3 of the Hunsard, stid
" I hope the Minister of Agriculture will not forget the suggestion of the don. member for West Durham (Mr. Blake). It is a most important one: that all absentees' names should be checked. It is of the highest importance that instructions should be given to the enumerators with regard to persons who have left, and who mar have left permanently, although they left but the day before. The errors that undoubtedly exist in the last census render it, to a great extent, untrustworthy-, as a report of the population-in one province at least."

That is the husis of the whole argument. The census which my hon. frieml from North Norfolk(Mr. (harlton) in 1800 characterized as utterly untrustworthy, he now beses his argunent upon. If it were untrustworthy as he sail, why does he now form an argument upon it \% hin order to ascertain the real nature of the suggestion made by him I will refer to what the then leader of the Opposition, the Hon. Edwaml Blake, said. At page -3389 of the Hansairl of 1s! 1 , Mr. Blake satid :
"As the hon. member for Queen's County has said, if a father were asked whether he expected his boy, who had been away some 15 or course the father in the hope of having his son pay him it visit, would say that certainly he expected himi back. The son's mame would be put lown. That is the report Thave received from many parts, and my hon. friend from Quebec (Mr. Langelier) confirms it with regard to that province."
That was the state in Ontario and the state in Quebec, and in orrler to convince my hon. friend from ?ueens, P.E.I. (Mr. Davies) that it was the state in the little province whence he comes, I shall guote an anthority which I believe he camont doult. and that is himself. He saill on that

" Now speaking on matters which came tumy knowledge with regarit to the last census, I noticed that many enumerators, taking, as they said. their returns under instructions from these who appointed them took from the head of the house, not only the mumber of his family and of the servants whe were at home with him. bat the names and numbers of those who had left many years before : the only question heing asked was: Do, you think that he will ever rethon?, Well ever is a bik word, and the father of the honse did not want to banish all hope that some time or wher his son who had left home to make a living abroad. and to be a resident of another countrg, might at some future time return: and in this way the names of hundreds and thousames were put down who had, for all practical purposes. left Canada made a new home for themselves in another country and becone naturalized in the United States.
In 1881, then, according to the evidence of my hom. friemds opposite. there were hambreds of thousands of the people of this Dominionahsent in the United States. and upon that census of the Dominion they base their whole argment. As 1 staterlat the beigiming, it is almest a pity that the fiovermment Tid not alopt the suggestion made hy my inm. frieml from North Sorfolk (Mr. (harlton), for if they han done sio, a different showing woild he made in the last census. His suggestion wats that not only the census would be taken as they had been taken without a time-limit. but also that the names of those who had been absent for it number of years should he taken down as well. If that systeni had heen ahlopted in 1891 it wombl show an increase in the population of the pominionduring the last decade in the same if not in a greater proportion, than previous to that time. In order to show that this would le the case, it is fair that I shombld take the Province of Nova Scotia for an example. In isti. hefore Confederation, the pripulation of Nova soutia was $3330,8.57:$ in $1871,357$.
 hom friemls opposite buow very well that there was no time limit in |Sit|, 18:1 and |S81, and as my hom. friend the senior member for Queens (Mr. Davies) said. humbeds of thomsamds of our perple were alsent in the United states in 18s1, who were enumerated in the census of that year. If they hand been enumerated in the same mamer in 1891, 1 Ielieve the increase of population wombla have been larger than it was in the decade hefore that. Nowa Scotia increased in population between 1861 and 1871 nearly 14 per cent, and hetween $18: 1$ aml 18s1 $1+$ per cent also $:$ and if the census had leem taken in the same way it would have shown an increase at least 14 per cent between 1881 and 1891 also. But the hunireds of thousands of people who were alsent in 1881 continued to be alsent in 1891. and they were not enmmerated as they were not here. The result was, that instead of an increase the ahsinteese for a mumber of years were not emumrated ins in the taking of the former census. If the sugestionmade lo my hon. friend the hom. member for North Norfolk hat heen taken, we would have not only the real population as it is shown by the census of 1 s: 1 . Dint we womblal also hate the prlmlation based on the same system which was adopted of this whole Dominion on the calculation made in reference to Nona sootia, instead of having an increase of hall a million, we would have an inalosent were enmmertited as they were in the previous census. It is perfectly true that gentlemen opposite would tind fanlt anyway. hut that dres not do much hatm. My hom. friemls opposite have heen making capital aginst the Nitiomal Policy, and combearouring to make the people believe that it is the canse of the emiGration from this comery. bit when the census of 1 !日, will he taken. hom. gentlemen oppowsite will have the gromils of their argument tition from umber their feet, as they will time that when the "ensus are taken upon the same hasis ats this sear. the pepulation of this hominion will show a hatger increase than ever hefore was shown since (\%mfederation. If my hon. frionds opposite. comtinne their agitation against the National Police, if thes continue their leception of the people, for it is nothing else. in regard to the exrmbes, it will recoil upon their own heals in the same mamer as their arguments against the National Policy. My hom. frienl from Gueens. P.E. I. (Mr. Daties) kiows as well as 1 dhe that the commencement of the exonlus from Prince Edward Dshand and the Maritime Provinces generally was het ween 1s.it and iskil. I was one of those who errossed the lines during thase ten years. and I remained there for many gears and posisilly I woulh not have recurneel but for the ex. hortations of friemls at home. who felt that it would be a great hose to the comentry if I did nut return. It was during that thime the naclei of the argencies on the. other side were establishel. In [sib] I was in beston, New York and Philadelphiatand other cities, and 1 satw a number of people. from Prince Edward Islimal in the different cities of the United States. The emigration of these people from the Maritime Provinces commenced shortly after lisit during the time of the reciprocity treaty. The youth of this Dominion need to have the facts. explained to them so its to prevent their heing deceived by the fallacies raised by hom. gentlemen oppusite amblly their attempts to throw lust in the eyes of the people. As the hom. meminer for North Wellington has said, many of the people who have gome have been encouraging their friends at home to cross the line, and maless hom. gentlemen opposite discontinue their blue-ruin agitation a great many more of their friembs will leate them. I may relate an incident that oceured in my own experience not long ago. As I was coming up to the last session of Parliament shortly after the general election, I was very sorry to see car loads of our people leaving for the United States. Nome of my oppoinents who were on their way to the city of Halifax to attend the session of the Lowal Leegislature, twitted me a good deal on the train on account of the emigration from our county to the United States. I passed through the car and I ols. served that there were a large number, and I was sorry th see them going: but I olserved further that there was mot a single Lileral-('onservative in the car except one: and when 1 was' witted lig the remark that motwithstanding all 1 hat sitill in fatomr of the National Policy oner people were going away, my answer was a simple ome, amil it was a true one: My friend, I said, for the last fow weeks you and your political friemes have heen leading our people to believe that thes could not live in this smantry: they helieved yon. and mifortunately for the conatry they are lea ing it : the very people who helieved yon and who sup. purted yon are learing. Aul further than that, my puliticalopproment is now in. Michigan seeking his fortane. But l beliere the will come hatk, a sather and a wiser man, amil will timl that he can make at more confortable living in laverness than he can on the wher sifle of the line. A artat many more pesple have left the cometry on atecome of sinch diselussions: an we have heard tonight. Which teml to dis amage ome people from living in this comutry. I helieve that many whe so will return sithler and wiser men, but mifortmately many camort rethrn. thengh I amglad to saty that many who went to that comitry have mate a comfortalie living. SI own impresiom. atter consinderable experience in Parliament, is that we should emulate the perple of the Cinited states. I have hern on the wher sile ons howiness and on pleasure as well: I ath always never hearid amy prown on that side of the line deprectiating his own cometry depreciating it: prollucts, its climate. its soil. its proliey and every thing elve.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.C.) Whom dial yome ever hear do it heres?
Mr. ('Alleron. I wouhlask my hom. frieml if he ever heari a member of congress telling the perple of the Cnited states that the policy of the dioverment of the Cuited states is calculated to ruin the people. Whatever prolicy it may be, it is the lest in the world: whatever part of the Cuited states your are in, it hats the finest climate in the world : evergthing there is setter than it is in any other part of creation ; and if our hon. friemes would omly emulate them a little in that respect, and try to lead our people, eren to miskani then if you will, to take a pride in their comentry, I do, mot helieve so many dirits, as they mostly are, would leave the Haritime Provinces to g." to the Cuited states.
Mr. PERKY. It was not my intention to alliress the committee on this important question until I heard my hon. friend from Inverness (N1). (:aneron) making such erroneous statements as he has leeen making so far as Prince Elward Island is comerneal. If he lorks at the census returns from his own province, he will find that his statements are not loorne out. I contend that from lx.it to 1 latig the population of Prince Elward Island increased and increased largely, and it kept on increasing up to 1881 , when Prince Vidward Island, and Nova Nicotia as well. felt the effects of the mpatriotic administration of the (iovermment which my hon. friend is so willing to support. What is the result slown by the census: The population of Prince Ellward Island, Nova Sontia and New Brunswick has not increasel since 1881. 'To what can we attribute this decrease, if not to the unpatriotic administration of the present (iovermment: From 18.it to 18tifi we saw grool days. I know perple from the United Niates came and setcled in my province and carried on fisheries and other industries there cluring that perionl, giving employment to our people, but since then only the memory of those geod days remain. If the hom. member for lnverness will go to Boston today he will timd a very large population there from his cown province. We can hardly go tive steps in the main street of Boston without finding it man from (ape Bretom, and he will find him a crealit to this country, but these men were driven from their home althongh my hom. frieml will not inhmit it. It is not when we had free tranle from linit to lstio that our population diminished. In those years, when there wat no Chinese wall hetween the lominion ami the Conitei states, when people were allowed to ling some in the cheapest and sell in the dearest market, the people of the lisland made their momey and were emahled to estahlish lanks and other commercial institutions. These were the days of prosperity. hut now this money has disap)puared, prosperity has disappeared, amd discontent hats taken its place, and the people are secking better times in other combtries. It appears that the fiovermment are either afraid or ashamed to have their poliey on the question of immingation properly expmonded. I donot know exactly how many immigration oflices there are in the Hominion hesides what they have in Europe. I low not see why there shomblite so many. There is whe in Halifix. which may be wanted there, one in St. Iohm. X.Is., which may he wanted there, one in Guebec, another in Montreal, one in Three Rivers, one in Hamiltom, two on three in Ontario, many more in the North-West and British Colmmhia, when two or three in the whole bominion womld he quite sutficient. Look at the report of the Audion dieneral last year. It shows nearly ment show that they had any return for this money: (in they show that they have successfully estahlished one immigrant in the North-West on any part of Canala? The census retmons show they have lost in the last ten vears all the immigrants who have come here, notwithstanding the fact that the blue-hooks show we have got !(N), (KK). Not omly have we lost all these immigrants, but we have also lost our natural increase of populattion. If that is not an unsatisfactory state of things, I do not know what is. Vet the hon. member for lusemess will stand here and tell us that we are prosperous and iloing well, that the population of Nowa Sootia is increasing, that the population of Prince Eilward Island is increasing, that the census is all wrong. He has no faith in the blue-hooks or (iovermment returns, hat is convinced that the mischief was done from l8int to 1siti, when the hon. gentleman was hardly old enough to real or write. It would le better if the liovermment, instead of throwing away this to our people, who are going away, in order to indace them to remain here. We are not able to keep our own population here. and as the hon. member for North Wellington has said, the NorthWest is in such a condition that no settler can dare go into it. If he will look to the east he will find the land monopolized by someborly, and if he will look west or north he will see the same result ; and what is left, a small tract of land here and there, only tit for rabits and sumirrels. Does he expect the population from across the Atlantic is going to settle on such lands: I contend that immigrants who hate to be brought out at the expense of the comitry are not the class of people fit to settle here and levelop the remources of the cometry. If there are inducements to the people across the dtantic to come here they will come without our patying their passages. but the fact is that when people come they are disappointed. They see that the state of the country is not such as it has heen represented to them liy our agents at home. and the moment. they find that out they ${ }^{\text {on o }}$ achoss the line and settle in Montana, Dakota, on Washington Temitony or some other parts of the United हitates. The hom. member for Inverness must know that we have now laboming class of people, who are developing the resources of that comitry when we shond hate them here assisting to haild up this comutry. When lid these gro there: Did they so in lsit?

Mr. ('AMERON. A hare propertion of them dial.

Mr. IFRRKY. I do mot know of one emirnant from Prince Edward Island whowent to the Enited States from lisit to likiti, hut I know that many dmericans in that period came and settled in the Islame. The hem. grentlemam knows as well as I do that emigration from Nowa seotia is far greater now than it was from lsity to INiti. We are losing ond population amd yet this dionermment are not taking any steps to keep them here. It is time to ery halt and turn wer a new leaf, if the forernment intend doing anything for the comitry. But What do the dovermment care: They have a strong backing and can vote the money they require, but if they expect the liberal members to sit here as dumb and allow themi to sipuanler one-half the revenne of the comitry withont protest they are much mistaken. It would he better for them to cut down this whole expemblume and lower the taxes. It would he better that they should anljust their tariff so that there will he no iliscrimination against the poorer class. Bat there is no danger of their doing that, they must have a large revemue to spummer on elections, aml while such a system is allowed to be carried on the comitry call never progress.

Mr. BAIN ( Wentworth). I hate listened with consirlerable interest to the disenssion this evening. Perhaps it has not always been contined closely to the question at issue. But I think the most unkind statement in reference to the Minister of Agricultare and his policy made to-night it has been resemed for my friemi from Inverness (Mr. Cameron) to make. When he comes to this House and calmly accounts for the present condition of things hy saying that his friends took the census of INsi, and took so many people who had left Canada, when they were under instructions to number the people of Canada, and that the census now taken really shows the same natural increase in the population, there surely could le no greater testimony to the incompetency of the department presided over hy my hon. friemd.

Mr. (ADERON. Is it true, all the same:
Mr. BAIN (Wentworth). No, it is not. Vom have to take the latter statement of the hon. gentleman in reply to his first statement. He tells the people that to-lay there is no exolus from his part of the comitry.

Mr. (AMERON. I said nothing of the kind. I said there were car londs leaving when I catme: up. Mr. BAIN ( $\mathrm{Nent}_{\text {enth }}$ ). That is what the hom. grentleman sail at the ent of his speech, hat I leave it to the hom. gentlemen behind him if he did not saty in the earlier patt of his speech that the perple hail not left the comatry, but that the change in the numbers which appeared wats in consequence of the wer-statement in the previons censms. The fact is that these gentlemen are in a comer and they know it.

Mr. ('A.MERON. 1 think there is another party in a corner too, amb they are setting smaller every yeat.

Mr BAIS (Wentworth). The fact is that the policy 1 omonnced hy the Minister of Agriculture to-night will wot satisfy any thinking citi\%en of this commty, no matter what his political ereed maty he. These gentlemen tell us. with the calin assumance which chamaterizes my hon. frieml from Inverness (Mr. (ameron), that the reason why people leate this country is that gentlemen on this side of the Honse deery this conntry. I deny the statement emphatically, and I defy them unshow any statement to poore their assertion. We have adways said that the natmal resources of Canarla are engal th those of any conntry in the worhl. The morthern portion of Ditario hats untold mineral resources which are only just attateting attention, and the proof of that is that, while people are flying frommy hom. frient's province as if they were flying from aplague, the population of Algoma hasiloubled in the last tengears. Turn to the resonves of the great pratiephains of the Sorth-Went, and look at the mineral wealth of British Colmmbia, to which attention is now heing attracterl, amd we have always maintaned that we have mmather matural resources in this country; hut we have contenled at the same time that the policy of this forernment was not calculated to increase the prosperity of the country, hat that we were cursed hig the worst Govermment that ever a eivilized country was cursed with. It is because we object to the iowemment of this country that these gentlemen turuaromd an! complain because we ob) ject to the principles under which they alminister our pablic atfinirs, and we point to the returns of their own otticial census and the figures furnished muler the Ninister of Agriculture during the last ten years as evilence that they can neither rebut nor dens. Then they resort to the old plan, when you have no ease abose the plantiffs attomey. It is the ohd, old ery, personal abose instead of argument. What object is there for gentlemen on this side of the Hemse to decty the prosperity or the :olsancement of the country if it were not true: Are not our interestsas mich hound up with the welfare of (anala as those of my hon. friend from Inverness (Mr. (ameron): Ourall is embarked in this country and is incolved in its prosperity, but I tell that hon. gentleman that the last twelve years of his policy have not comluced to the progreas and welfare of this conntry, and no one knows it hetter than hon. gentemen opposite. Now, whatever may be the position of affairs in the older provinces of the country. let us take a glance at what has been clone in the newer territories. What have we done for the development of the resources of the great plains of the North-West, and what facilities have we offered to induce people to go there? If the official records of the depatrment over which my hon. friend presides are of any value, we hate increased the deht of this country $\operatorname{sil}$ (MK), (HN $)$ in hard cash in order to construct the (amanlian Pacific Ratway, and we have wiven that company a land grant besides of $2 l,(n x)$, (OXX) acres. For what? To develop the great matumal resources of this country and induce immigrants to go in there. In aldition to that, we offier a free grant of land to those immigrants, and now the Minister tells us that he is groing to rive to eath head of a family that settles there $\mathbf{s i l} 0$ in cash and to every member of the family Si in cash in aldition, in order to induce settlers to gen in there. Besides that, we have hranch railuays to enable the settler with fatcility to get his produce on to this great thoronghfare. the (amadian Pacitie Railway and in the last ten vears. with all these facilities offered, with all this statf of immigration agencies scattered wer the whole of Europeand throughont the length and hrealth of this Dominion. What hate we done? We have only sheceeded in increasing the population in the whole area extending from Lake Superior to the Pacitic Ocean by 17! (MN) souls all tohl. Is that a result which is satisfactory? I lo not are who the julge is. I saty emphatically it is mot, and that we have not returis for the large expenditure we have made, and that it is time to call a halt. I regretted exceedingly when I listened to the Minister to-night, when he amounced his general policy, to find that it was a repetition of the same old rommi. He proposes to keep up the same agencies, to gon with the same round of alministration, with the aldition of paying this Inoms to settlers who have located in the NorthWest. I say that the facts of the census have at great deal to do with the future of the alministration of our immigration department. If the census retums are of any value at all, and if they are utterly withont value the sooner we know it the hetter, if my friemd from Inverness (Mr. (ameron) can sustain his contention aml lemonstrate that his friends are unreliable in taking these firures, let us know it and let us begin anew on a solid bisis, hut if these figures are of any value at all, the nore money we spend in Emopean agencies mal the more population we draw intro (anada, by so much the more we are increasing the population of the great repullic to the south of us. I remember that, when the Candian Pacific Railway enterprise was presented to this Honse for consideration, one of the strong arguments submitted to the members ly the late Premier was that in the course of a few years we would be able to dispense entirely with oir immigration machinery and that the Canadian Pacitic Railway would become, like the large American railuay corporations who are owners of large tracts of land, one great immigration agency, and we would fill our farms in the North-West with a large agrieultural population. I rememier that we were promised liy the Premier of this Dominion in 1881 that so rapidly wonld the population flow into that country that liy the year ISM), $\quad$ in, (M0) souls wrould settle there in one year, and that in the ten years we would add to the population of the North. West at least half a million. But when the result comes to be brought down alongside with their own otficial figures, declared by the Minister to be correct, we have a paltry addition of $179,(\mathrm{KN})$ souls all toh. There. Mr. Chamman, is about the way in which Tory promises pan ont in performance. I remember another promise that was mate iny Sir John Macelonah to this House in 1850 amil dare saty other ohler members will remember it, and that was that we would have in the vicinity of $\mathbf{S}(6!,(M M),(M X)$ in cash, or morterages as good as cash, in the treasury of this Dhminion, at the emil of the vear 180 from the sale of these lands and the great loweitic Ratway would not cost us anything. I remember that about $\mathrm{S} 3,(\mathrm{KNO}, \mathrm{OK}$ ), of thereabonts, wats to he taken out of that sum for the purpose of surveing the lands and alministering the sales bameh of the department : but I remember also that last year when the tigures were toted up. and the clear result of the managment of those lands was mateknown, and the smphas that we han in the treasury instead of anything in the neighomohood of Sitt. (KNO, (NX) We hat the paltry sum of less that El, (KM,$(K M)$ all told. as the clear result of ten years operations umber this magniticent alministration. I leave it to the most prejuliaed fonservative on the other side to say whether their lom promises have been anything like fultilled in the atminis. thation of the atfaits of the North- West. In the meantime the rest of the popmation of this comotry are carrying the hardens inposed bipon them for the development of those resombes. Hom. gentlemen opposite may sit here and shat their eyes to the facts, lat the facts cammot he ignomed. I say their poliey has not heen a suceess in settling up, the vacant lands of this Dominion. Now. the next question to consider is the remedy for this state of affairs. The hon. the Finance Minister stamels up athl says that he would he very glad to hate us suggest some remenly. I would like to know What we pay him sigh a year for. if it is not to attend to the affiairs of this country. Are we to tind a policy for him: Has he hecome so threadhare in resources, so porerty-striken, that he has nothing to offer except to go om in the ohl growes, in the hope that some gool luck may turn up in the future. that something will occur to change the current, ame we will get along letter: No, Nir, the people of this country will not be satisfied with any sach administration of their affairs. There is one thing evident, amd that is that the expenditure has never ceased to grow, and the fiovermment have carefally kept up the expenditure, whether the people were able to, endure it or not. Now, I say it is time we had it new order of things. If the transference of immigration from the leparment of Agriculture to the Department of the Interior will give us new life and new energy, by all means let us have the transfer marle. But when they come down to us and offer no letter propositions than to go on in the old groove, 1 fear that the difficulty is deejer, and that we will find ourselves groing on in the oll circnit, spending money withont any satisfactory results. There is no doult that the circumstances in which we are placed are peculiar. We are not separated from the nation to the south of us by those differences that separate European nations which have grown up under different institutions, with differences of language, of habit and of custom, that form barriers hetween the nations of the old worh. Here we have to recognize the fact that we are practically one people with the mation south of us. We have the same ideas, the same origin, we speak the same language, and in everything except political purposes we are practically one perople. The difficulty is that the larger nition w the south of us does offer inducements to our young men that we are not able to offer them here. I point out to wor friends opposite that they sleclared when the National Iolicy was inatuguratel that they were going to stop this exolles from (anallat to the Cuited States, they were going to create employment for one people at home, they were groing by that means to secare a manket for the surplas proluets of the agriculturists, atm ley employing our labour in manufactures we world ketp our people at home. But the results show that isstead of keeping them at home we have driven them out of (innala at an accelerated rate : and whereas those gentlemen used to howl themselves homse in complainiug of an exonlus from ('anadia to the C'nited States of 30 , (MK) or $40,(\mathrm{Mn})$ people yearly, they now calmly sit down and saty nothing when their own returns show that we hate lost at least an aremage and they comblly ask us to be content with thinge as they are. I say there is some hims malically lefece tive in that policy and the $y$ have fathed in the highest clegree in fultilling the promises that were maile the electorate of this comntry when they inatmarated their National Policy. in ask if it is not it lesitimate infereme that that policy has not accomplished what they promised it would accomplish, and that it is a ilismal fature as applied to the administration of Camalais affairs. I say that the sooner we set about embeatrouring to fimb a remedy for this comdition of things, the better it will be for the people of canada. for I can come to now other conclusion than that if we keep on at the present rate we will sec our population gradually melting away and leaving our shores for a country where the comblitions are more favoumble for their persomal antrancement. I say this is a matter of deep eoncern to every lover of his eomentry, and it is not to be met in the mamer in which hom. genthemen opposite have met it, by sneering at hon. gentlemen on this side of the Honse, becanse we point out the facts to them. The sooner those hom. gentlemen realize the condition of aflairs and set about fimling a remedy, the better it will be for themselves and the better it will be for the population amd the prosperity of this comatry.

Mr. P.ATERSON (Brant). In asking us to vote this amonint of money, it would seem proper that the Minister should give us reasons why we shoulil do so.

Mr. CARLIN(: This $\leqslant 1, f(k)$ ?

Mr. PATERSON (Prant). The whole item of $519^{-}$, мм which is under discassion at the present time. It is a continuation of the same system, so I would julge, as we are askel for the same amount this year as last year. It seems to me that it should not need so many gentlemen to rise amd point ont the state of the country and the uselessexpenditure of money during the past years, to have caused the Minister to rise and give some explanation, either to state that our policy has not been a failure, that the money we have expended by the humdreds of thousands, and ruming into the millions during the past years, has not been lost to the country, but that it has brought people into the country, and that they are in the eobntry now. In order to do that he wonld have to show where the people are that he alleges were bronght into the country. I notice that the Minister took the aromed that there were alsoolutely ssti.175 people. ass stated by him in his rejorts, hrought into (ienala from foreign conntries in the ten years from lswi to 1s91. Then we have the fatetsalso given to us hey the hon. frentleman's cinpartment that when the propalation of this commiry was commed it wats fonmel there hat leren an incerase of only intank sonds cluring the ten vears. The Mibistar will see. then, leat inger oft of the callenketion the sown.(xn) indditional popplation that we should hate hand hey souls that he says were hromght into this eomor try he him. that are not in lhis cobntry now. It seems to me he shomble state tor ins where these 3su, (Mn) have wrome, and the reatsons that callised the Aleparture of these people. for it surely must strike the Minister of Agriculture that it rammot be at ple into this cometry. if the a are leaving it as fast ats they are homght to it. If his explanation with resperit to this matter he the explamation wiven hy the hom. meminer for Inverness At. (amerom, then I want him tan anw that statement openly on the Hong of the Honse. The Honse while receiving any siatement from the hom. member from Inverness with great respert. heres not look upoll it with that anthority it womld possers it it came from the Minister himself, amil the Minister has the duty devolving upon him. not of leat ving some supporter on the hack benches to give all explanation of this featore. but himself to shom how it is that, leaving ont natural increase of sombokn inside altomether. Bistionk of the prpulation. which aceonding to his statement have been bronght inaterot in the ennentry now. If the hom. Minister will take the statememt of the hom. member for Inverness, that those peophe hat e: not left the cosuntry, that the immigrants have not left the comutry. lint that it is to be ateonomed for by the chatacter of the cellsiss of 1 sin . if he is prepared to take that statement. I want him to make the arowal. In that event I wamt him to endorse the statement of the hom. member for Inverness. to rise in his place and tell the Homse that when I was administering the department, that when the eonnt Wiss supposed to be an honest comint I instructed the men charged with the duty to make framlulent returns, to count men whow were not here, and that those onticials gave me figures to present, that were a lie on their fare- -1 want the hom. gentleman to assume the responsihility of making that statement latid down he the member for liverness. If he will do that, it will relieve us from the ditfienty, and we will he able to give the Dinister credit for some of the $\mathrm{BS}(\mathrm{S}, \mathrm{OK})$ of immigrants, who according to the figures of the department, are not in the country now. I fancy lie will hardly take that pusition, it is a task which any Minister would hesitate to undertake.

Mr. CARLIN(:. Will the hon. gentlemanallow me to correct a statement? The hon. gentleman has mande a statement that I prepared the census for 1881 . I was not in the Government at that time.

Mr. BOW' ELL. It makes no ilifference.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). I was speaking of the head of the department, the occupant of theoffice of Ministerial changes. Last vear the hon. gentleman might have been held responsible lecause of some statements male by the hom. gentleman who representen him here when he was in the other Chamler. I am mot speaking alout Ministers individually, but in regiad to the Minister of Agriculture whose duty it was to don this work. Will the Minister of Agriculture saty that he rave instructions to hare a framblulent acoome male in 1NS1:

Mr. (AMERON. I did not saly anything of the kind.

Mr. Baw FiLL. What the ham. gentleman stated wats what the home meminer for l'rine FitWard Island (Mr. Daties) satil.

Mr. (AMFRON. Heatr, hear. If he satil what. Wats not true. I cannot help) it.

Mr. PATERNON (Brant). The Minister of Finame was not here at the time the hom. genaleman was speriking. hut that would not make any particular difference:

Ir. (ADERON. Nay I quote what I sai.l. It is here.

Mr. PATEREON (Bramt. I know the hom.
 but give the Honse to umberstand that what was stated in that spee-h wats the actual fact?

Mr. (AMERON. No.

Mr. BoWVELLL. Sothing of the kime.
Mr. P'ATERSON (Brant). Ame how the disere patace wats to lo. accomated for wis. that if an homest comat had been mate in 1Nst, there womli he no difference shown between the 1 wo enonts at the present time. Ilerestaril will show to-morrow whether I am mistaken, or whether the hom. gentleman is mistaten in the statement he hats male.

Mr. (AMERON. Will the hom. gentleman allow me. I did hot tind fanlt with the manmer in Which the censas was taken in lSsi or in 1891. I simply stated, in reply to the hon. member for Queens, and another member of the opposition, that the mamer in which it wats taken includen in 1SNI a number of persons who were absent from the comentry. That was the monle in which it was taken. I foumd un fault with it. I suggested it Was a pity it was not taken in the same manner in 1s!1: : ind, if it hat been so taken in 1s! 1 , the: apparent increase would have heen as great between 1881 and 1801 its it was in the former connt. The morle was changed : I did not tind fanlt with one or the other, nor did I say there was anything wrong in either. But I saty if the present system is eontinued. the increase of population will recoil on hon. gentemen opposite just as their arguments against the National Policy on former oecasions have recoiled. That is my argament, and there is no member in this House who knows that it is true hetter than the hom. nember for south Brant : but the hon. gentleman is simply wasting time in discussing the matter.

Mr. PATFRNON (Brant). The hon. gentleman, therefore, regrets that the fraud which he gives us to understand was perpetrated in 1881 was not perpetrated for some reason in 1891, and, if it had been done, there would not have been the present discrepancy. We will allow the Minister of Agriculture to accept the statement that far, if he will. I question rery much if a Canalian Minister will undertake to accept that position in the Honse; lut we will give the hon. gentleman an opportunity to say whether he takes that position in regard to the census of 1881. If not, there are 386,000 of our immigrants who have been brought into this country during the past 10 years who have not heen found here, in aldition to the 800,000 which is the natural increase. I say it is his bounden duty now, when we are entering upon the discussion and consideration of an expenditure of money for the purpose of promoting further immigration to this country, to tell us where these immigrants have gone and why they have left us! I have my own ilea as to ceanses that have proluced it. I lament the fact that they have gone. The Minister hats taken the ground that they were here. He stowel ly his figures to-night and he said there was no misthe in them. He will stand by the census of 1 S91 which the Govermment claim is an honest comut, and be will admit that the people are not here now. He should have some explanation of why they left the country after having come here. That explanation camnot he found in the condition of the conntry. As pointed out by my hon. friend from Wentworth (Mr. Bain) there is no better country, and no letter opportunity for settlers than num our western prairies, and in the western provinces, to sty mothing of the older prorinces. The explanation is not to be foumd in that, and it is for the Minister todeclane, then, what calses have been operating to expel these men from our midst after they have heen bronght here with this expenditure of money. Mr. Chairman, having regard to your ruling I will not be at liberty to inlopt the suggestion of the Vinister of Finance and to give the reasons which in my julgment have led to the removal of these people, nor to suggest changes the legisiation which 1 think will do mach in the direction of tending to prevent sueh a disastrous result in the fature. That would involve touching upon matters which you have rulen may not be introduced in this discussion, lut the Minister himself will not 1 am sure be held to strict order by you, when he attempts to give his explanation of how these people are not to be found in the country. I do hoh it is his absolute duty hefore he asks us (i) pass one single item of this estimate to give us the reasous that in his jurgment hare led to these people learing the country, and if that reason which he gives, is a reason which is foumd in operation still, he will see the force of not asking us to expend one single cent of that money until the causes that led to the expulsion, or the voluntary leaving of this country by those people have heen remedied in our legislation. The fault camot be found as I have said with the country itself. When the member for luverness (Mr. Cameron) volunteered the statement that he had heard gentlemen on this side of the House, of the party to which I belong, decrying this country, ruming down its resources, condemning its soil and condemning its climate, I have to say that the member for Inverness (Mr. Cameron) has made a statement that he will have difficulty in proving. He has made a statement that I defy him to prove in this House. If he means to say that he has heard statements from gentiemen on this side of the House, declaring that the Goverument of this country during the past ten years have not administered the affairs of this country in such a manner as to conduce to its welfare, he certainly can find these statements. The hou gentleman may view the 13 or 14 gentlemen who form the Administration, as the country, but gentlemen on this side of the House only consider them as a portion of the people of this country entrustel for the time being with certain powers which they are bound to use for the lenefit of the penple. If the hon. gentleman has reference to the fact that on this side of the House he has heard denunciations of the fiscal and commercial policy of the Government and of the governing party, he is correct in that. But, Sir, denomeing, and pointing out fallacies in the fiscal and commercial policy inaugurated by hon. gentlemen opposite is not decrying the country, and is not, as that gentleman has alleged, decrying it in its material resources, depreciating its qualities, and generally emleavouring to cast a slur uponit. Sir, the hon. gentleman from Inverness (Mr. Cameron) has ventured upon a statement that he camot prove, and he must understand that when the policy of the (iovernment is arraigned and condemmed from an honest belief that it is not in the best interests of the country, he is not justified in making the statement that the soil and the resources of this comutry were decried by hon. gentlemen on this side of the House. We believe, Sir, that this country is capable of receiving and sustaining, not only the $\mathbf{8 8 6}, \mathbf{O M}$ (immigrants that the Minister said he brought in during the past 10 years, but we believe it is capable of sustaining millions upon millions of people, and we are anxious and desirons of having these millions of people in the country. Hon. gentlemen opposite are also desirous for it. They would not have placed this item in the estimates for our approval unless they were desirous with ourselves of having the population of this country increased, so that we may develop in the elements of national life, and with the strength of a nation. We agree upon that, but we are found face to face with the fact that taking the hom. gentleman's own figares-not trying to make a point against him, but honestly to sit down now when this matter is under disenssion and consider it-we must ask, is there not a leak somewhere : is there not some fault; is there not something that requires a remedy that ought to be applied, while we are going on in our efforts to bring people to this conimtry? loos not that leak, through which our population have left us, require to be stopped : If there is any policy or any legislation enacted by the Govermment that has tended in the direction of opening that door of exit through which these people must have been in a measure forced to go-for, having come to this country, they would not coluntarily leave it except there was some impelling canse- 1 ask is it not the duty of the dovernment now to deliberate upon and to ascertain, if possible, why that has been brought alout, and what is the cause of it so that we may apply the remedy. As I said before, Mr. Chairman, I have my own views in reference to this matter, but your ruling precludes me from stating what I consider would be wise and teneficial legislation in conjunction with this immigration policy of ours, if it is to le continued. I am not at liberty to allude to it, Sir, under your ruling, but the Minister must see that something is wrong and he can give us his views in reference to it. If there is no remedy to be applied, if the same state of things is to prevail, if the immigrants we hope to bring into this country by this expenditure of $\mathbf{5 2 0 0 , 0 0 0}$ are to leave us when they are brought here, then it will be for us to consider what shall be done in the face of the determination of the Govermment that they. will do nothing in any direcion to stop the leak. If they camoot give us an assurance that it will stop of itself, or that they will take means to stop it. is it not a consideration for us to consider whether we shuald not retain this $\$ 200,0 \times 0$ in our own hands, and if we cannot get the population to remain with us, then we can at least save to the people of this country the money which weare now asked toexpend. Now, I think it is not unreasonable that the Minister should give us his views in regard to that-that he should tell us whether he lelieves that these figures honestly represent the population of the country hetween these perions, or whether he believes there was at dishonest count made in 1881, and an honest count made in 1891, and that that will account for it. But even if he does that, I beg him to remember the natural inerease of 800,000 added to the $386,00 \%$ immigrants, and when he puts these together, it will require extremely framdulent figures in 1881 to account for the difference. If the Minister will take that position, it will help us out in a certain measure, thongh it will cast discredit on the department with respect to the census of 1881 . If he camot account for the difference, it is for him to show what good ground he has for expecting that if we expend this $\$ 2(0), 000$ more this year to bring immigrants to the country, they will stay with us. This is the point on which I think it is proper the Dinister shonl give us some information before we consider the inditidual items.

Mr. FOSTER. I move that the committee rise, report progress, and ask leave to sit again. We have been here four mortal hours, anxious to do lusiness and to make some progress in the estimates; but for some reason better known to themselves than to us, hon. gentlemen opposite-

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) That is most unfair.
Mr. FOSTER. As I have not objected to the hon. gentlemen speaking for the last two hours, I think I may be permitted to say a few words, even though they may not be pleasant to the hon. mem. ber for Queen's. Very humbly I would ask his permission to say a few words. For reasons better known to themselves than to us, hon. gentlemen on the other side do not seem willing to make progress in passing the estimates. It is of no use for us to remain longer under these conditions, and, therefore. I move that the committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

Mr. DAVIEs (P.E.I.) I do not propose that the hon. gentleman shall make that statement unchallenged. In the first place, the hon. gentleman has not been in his seat at all during the discussion. He may have been attending to his duties else. where, but he has not been here, and is not com. petent to form an opinion as to the character of the discussion which has taken place. I have sat in this House for as many years as the hon. gentle. man, and I have never listened to a delate more interesting or more instructive than the one that has taken place to-night.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman took part in it.

Mr. Paterson (Brant).

Mr, DAVIFs (P. E. I.) I took very little part in it. I spoke a very few minutes, entirely from the standpoint of the Maritime Provinces. I gave the committee some information, and drew some deluctions which the hon. the Finance Minister might have been lenetited by if he had been in his place. I think the statements made in the House in this debate will he read with a good deal of interest in the country, and I resent the statement that the time of the House has been wasted, and that for some reason we have prevented progress been made in the estimates. We have not prevented progress leing made. We have discussed, as we had a right to discuss, as it was our duty to disconss, the policy involved in the expenditure of a large amount of public money; and in the discussion of that question we showed that for the past ten years the exolus, from the Maritime Provinces particularly, has been so great and the loss of population there so grave, and that the present condition of the Maritime Provinces is so serious, as to call for more than a passing remark from the (iovernment benches. It demands their solemn and seriousconsideration. Wehare pointer out that the continuance of the existing fiscal system would be ruinous, is ruinous, and calls for a change, and in doing this we are to be told by the hom. gentleman that we are obstructing the public business.

Some hon. MEMBERs. Hear, hear.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Does the hon. gentleman think that we are here merely to register the decrees of the Government-- that the Opposition have no duties to discharge? I tell him that we have, and we appreciate them, and we have been discharging them to night.

Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). I think, Sir, that the discussion, so far as it has taken place since I have come into the Honse, does not warrant the observation made by the Minister of Finance.

Mr. TUPPER. You came in late.
Mr. MILLN (Hothwell). Well, Sir, I have heard a portion of the debate, and that portion has been strictly pertinent to the subject before the committee.

Mr. Paterison (Brant). I think the Minister of Marine was not in the House at all.

Mr. TUPPER. I escaped some.
Mr. MILL.: (Bothwell). The hon. gentleman, as usual, is expressing an opinion on a subject with which he is not very intimately acquainted. Now, with regard to the subject, the Minister of Agriculture asks us to vote a very large sum for the purpose of promoting immigration. Is it not the business of this committee to consider whether that is a proper expenditure or not? Are we here simply to vote every sum that the Government choose to ask at our hands without considering whether the proposed expenditure is one in the public interest? Now, Sir, the hon. gentleman has asked for this appropriation for the last ten years in succession. He has had his attention called to the unsatisfactory result of that expenditure in years past, and what answer has he made? What answer has the Minister of Finance or any other member of the Administration made in reply to the criticisms which have been offered from this side of the House? The hon. gentleman in 1885 took the census of the North-West Territories. His department kept an accurate record, so we were informed, of the immigration into that country; and what was the result of that census? The result showed that but one in mine of the poppulation which he stated had gone into the comtry, remained there when the census was taken. Now, has more than one in nine of the imimigration that has heen assistel to this country remained in the other portions of the Dominion? What answer does the hon. gentleman make to that question? What information does he give to this committee to satisfy it that the expenditure is a proper one, or that we are receiving any alvantage from it? I have heard nothing at all. The census shows that there has heen an enormous depletion going on cluring the last ten years in the population of this country. We havelost nearly the whole or the greater portion of the immigration along with the natural increase. Now, sir, the hon. gentleman has only shown, from the census taken in 1885 and that taken in 1891, that we are expending large sums of money every year for the purpose of settling the waste lamls in the neighbouring republic. Well, that is perfectly consistent with the policy which the Administration has pursued for years past. I remember when a certain section of railway was taken from the Giraind Trumk, one of the conditions made in paying for it was that there should be a railway in the State of Wichigan. I remember also that a large sum of the money of the people of Canalla has been spent in the state of Maine, and so it is perfectly consistent with the policy which the Govermment have pursued in other matters that large sums of money should be taken out of the pullic treasury of this country, wrung from the impoverished inhabitants of this comutry, for the purpose of promoting emigration to the neighbouring repullic. That is the course which hon. gentlemen opposite have pursued, and when they are unable to justify an appropriation, they aceuse us of lelaying public business. Delaying what public business? Delaying an attempt to appropriate money from the public treasury for a most improperpurpose. We have askellhon. gentlemen to excuse, if they can, their policy, and they are utterly unable to do so ; and I say again that their policy of expending money without any results is simply that described by Hood as a black job. They are ready to gild the man they can no longer bleach. That is precisely what the hon. gentlemen are engaged in loing. And when the Minister of Agriculture is asked to point out in what way he is going to secure the retention in this country of these people, should we succeed in bringing them here, he is unable to reply. He has up to this hour given no explanation to show that he will succeed any better than he succeeded last year or the year lefore. At the outset he said he was going to hand this business over to the Minister of the Interior, who would accomplish something which he had been unable to accomplish the last ten years. How is the Minister of the Interior going to accomplish these results? Will the hon. gentleman give some reasonable explanation to show that this money will not be wasted as it has been during the past ten years? If he does, he will get his item through, but he has given none, and yet he expects that he is going to obtain this vote without any resistance from this side of the House. What right has he to expect this appropriation?

Why, the most important function of this House in committee is to see, as gnardian of the public treasury, that money is appropriatel for none hut necessary public purposes. All that the hon. gentleman has shown is that for the past ten years he has expended money in bringing people from across the Atlantic, eight of whom out of every nine have gone across the border.

Mr. TUPPER. The motion is that the committee do rise.

Mr. MILLSi (Bothwell). There is more than that. There are very offensive observations of the Minister of Finance, perfectly characteristic but none the less offensive. He has thrown across the House, the insulting olservation that we have for four hours resisted a proper motion. I say we have properly resisted an improper demand.

Mr. FOSTER. Do not get excited.
Mr. TUPPER. There was no reference to the hon. member for Bothwell.

Mr. MILLS' (Bothwell). There was not to me particularly, but the whole Opposition was referred to.
Mr. BOWELL. The hon. zentleman boasteil the other night that hewould not allow us to proceed with business.

Mr. MILLS' (Bothwell). I am delighted to see that those saints on the Treasury benches are waiting for an opportunity to have their rest, and the most patient, the Joh of the Administration, the Minister of War, is getting into a warlike mood just now when he sees that prospect hecoming more distant. I would ask the hon. gentleman just to cultivate patience and preserve his equanimity of which he dues not possess any very extensive siock. The hon. gentleman knows his weakness in that direction, and I would have refrained from making any remarks, but I rose for the purpoise of protesting against the observations ahdressed hy the Minister of Finance to the committee.
Mr. BOWELL. I do not know that it is necessary to continue the discussion for any length of time. As for my equanimity, perllaps if I hal been dining-out and not been listening to the Opposition, I might possibly lear patiently the repetition over and over again of the statements we have heard during the last four hours and preserve my equanimity undisturbed.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Is it because the hom. gentleman is not dining ?

Mr. BOWELL. Let me advise the hom. gentleman not to get so excited. He is very cool on most occasions and perhaps under other circomstances he would be less excited to-night. However, be that as it may, if the hon. gentleman had been here himself during four hours and listened to the discussion, he might possibly have some sympathy for those who had to hear the infliction of listening to the same arguments repeated over and over again.
Mr. MULOCK. You ran away.
Mr. BOWELL. The hon. gentleman conld not have been speaking, or I am sure I would not have gone, but I did go away for a few moments and the hon. gentleman was away at the same time ; and I am sure he will give me credit for this at least, that I have sat as patiently as any member on this occasion, and as I usually do throughout debates, unless called out on business. We have had on this question of voting $$ 1,400$ to an immigration agent a discussion of the uhole policy of the fiovemment. That item is the only one that has leen lefore the House since the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole. I did not take any part in the riscussion of the question at all, though I thought hon. gentlemen opposite were going a long way beyond it. I made up miy mind however that as there was evident determinations on the part of the Opposition that we should not proceerl with business-

sime hom. MEMPERs. No.

Mr. BOW EILL... we might just as well allow the committee to rise, and I suggested that to my hom. frieml. The learler of the Opposition toll us that on this item, they harl a right to discuss everything bearing on the prosperity of the country. Coder that contention, we might have a dehate on the dual language in the North. West. Hon. gentlemen opposite might point to the hon. member for Quebec East, and ask whether the country will ever progress until he is on the Treasury benches, and then it would be in order to ask whether the party could succeed under his leadership, on account of his religion and nationality with the machine politician lehimel him, as reseribed hy the hon. member for North Norfolk. That usulil le just as pertinent as the whole question on which diścussion has taken place to-night. My hon. frienil who generally sits beside me might also bring up the school system and the use of the French language. and ask whether this country could hope to prosper while they were allowed as they are to day. As the Minister of Justice has pointed out, they might conmence with (ienesis and go on to Revelations.

Mr. LAURIER. The conesis is followeiling the Exorlus.

Mr. FOSTER. They cannot pass the exolus.
Mr. BOWELL. At all events, they always stick at Lamentations. They always lament over everything from the creation of the world down to the present time. We have heard the question of the census and the question of the exolus cliscusse! most exhaustively by the memler for south (Naford (Sir Richard.Cartwright) over and over again, and I will ask any member of the House who has listened to this four hours' discussion whether a single inlea has leen advanced which has not leen many times laid before the country by the member for South Oxforl. If there was no other idea on the part of hon. gentlemen than to ohtain some information which they required, I would ask why there should be this reiteration for four or five hours with no other pur. pose except to kill time. The hon. member for Queen's (Mr. Inavies) says he spoke for a few moments. His few monents are of a very elongated character. His few moments consisted of about an hour.

Mr. DAVILs (P.E.I.) Oh.

Mr. BOWELL. He spoke for three-quarters of an hour to-night at least. It is true that we had a little hadinage amongst ourselves and did not listen to him very attentively because he was advancing nothing new. If the olject of the hon. gentleman was only to seek information, the first speech or two would have answered all the purpose, but it would seem to le carrying out the threat made by the member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) not a fortnight ago that he would olsstruct business if certain things were not done. If the hon. gentlemen on the Opposition lenches are determinen to olsstruct husiness, they should intimate it in the beginning of each session of the House, and then we would meet and adjourn immediately after 3 o'clock, and go home and sleep and come back refreshed the next day. That would le better for all of us. We conld then attend to our departments, aml the hom. gentleman conld stuly and prepare speeches for the future.

Nir RICHARI)('ARTWRICHT. It does appear to me, from his language and demeanour, that, if my hon. frient has dined well, the hon. Minister has dined lexter, or perhaps, as an hon. gentleman suggests to me, he has not dined at all, and that would account for his impatience. However, I want to refer to a mater apart from the dispite between my hon. friend from Queen's Mr. Davies) and the Minister of War. I want to call the attention of the fiovernment, and particularly the attention of the Minister of Agriculture to this: When a Minister comes to laliament to ask for a large appropriation of money, it is the practice in England and it onght to bee the practice here, that an explanation in sufficient and reasonable detail should le offered to the House of the doings of the department during the past year and the policy of the Government in respect to that department, and how the diovernment intends to arminister the sum of money which they ask. The Minister of Agriculture gave us, I must say, a very meagre and stintedaccount of what he intended to do. and the circumstances disclosed to the House by the census returns show that there was the st rungest possible reason for expecting the (iovernment to account for the extraordinary discrepancies between the statements which have heen made. for many years by the department over which that gentleman now presides and the facts revealed to us. We would have been utterly recreant to our duty if we hal not insister on that information being given. I say to the Minister of Wiar that there could not le anything more necessary to le explained to the people of Canada than the canses which have led to our losing a million and a half of persple in ten years. Could there be imagined anything in the discussion of which this Honse could better afford to spend three or four hours than the causes which led to that extraordinary result " If hon. gentlemen on the Treasury lenches do not know the fact, they should be informed of the fact that all over the world, wherever Canada is known, great attention has been given to the fact disclosed in this census, and it is of the greatest importance to us that some reasonable explanation should be given from the Treasury benches which has not yet been given, of the causes which have led to this extraordinary state of things, and I entirely dissent from the statement made by the Minister of War or the Minister of Finance that any attempt has been made to obstruct business on the present occasion.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). The Finance Minister at the commencement of this discussion took exception to some remarks which were not considered pertinent, and sought to have them ruled out of order, and the Chair did so rule. Since then the discussion has leen entirely confined to the item before the committee. Very few Ministers have been in their places. In fact they were all out except the Minister of Agriculture. Fven the Minister of Marine, who knew all that had taken place, did not come in until I had nearly finished my remarks.

Mr. TUPIER. I came as som as I knew you were speaking.

Mr. Patersion (Brant). Yet he seemed to know all that had taken place in his absence.

Mr. TUPPER. I could well imagine it. I have heard it all before.

Mr. PATERNON (Brant). We are not here to aleal with imaginings. The Minister was alosent, hut I was in my place all the time and I know whether the liscussion was within the proper lines or not, and I appeal to the chairman to say if I did not speak to the resolution and contine myself to the immigration policy of the Government. Any remarks outsile of that were in reference to what had been said by the member for Ivemess (Mr. Cameron), and they also bore on the discussion. The Finance Minister desired to limit the rlelate at the outset, nos Minister has attempted, mone apparently leing able, to answer the questions which have been put to them, and now, wishing to get out of the dilemma, the Minister of Finance wishes to throw upon the Opposition the charge of obstruction, and, therefore, he moves that the committee rise. This proves one of two things. Fither the Minister of Finance is inclined to act in a haloyish manner, which I could hardly suppose, or he considers himself to le a sort of dictator in this House. Simply lecause some estimates have been presented t.) this House and that the Opposition do not quietly sit in their seats and perhaps venture to ask a question now and then, he is to lecture them, he is to move that the committee rise, he is to show resentment, he is to show temper and le petulant, Well, Sir, we do not propose to le put in any such position. The discussion has been one that the country will say is requisite, and when the country knows that while this discussion was going on Ministers were out of their places, not for minutes but for hours, when there was no attention leeing paid to the subject under discussion, when but the one Minister who is at the head of the department was in the House, when he never rose to answer a question, or make a statement, or to give the slightest information, I believe the people will say that the Opposition were not obstructing business, but they were discharging their simple duty. But when it is known that the Ministers opposite neglectel their posts and failed to give the information asked for when money was being voted, in face of the revelations we have of the non-effect of the previous millions that have heen spent. I venture to say the people of the country will reprohate that Ministry and their silence, whether it is proluced by incapacity or any other cause. Thehon. gentleman calls upon the committee to rise. If he wants togn home for the purpose of consulting with his colleagues to see if they can devise some means by which they can give the explanations required by the House, if they require a night's deliberation and the calling of a council in order to ascertain how it is possible to make out where this 386,000 immigrants have gone, lesides the 800,000 of native population, that they may explain these things before asking for $$ 200,000$ more to go down the same stream-if that be their object, why, the proposition to aljourn will, I have no doubt, be concerled by the Opposition. I think the Finance Minister hias no right to complain of the manner in which the discussion has lreen carried on liy the Opposition. I think that every member who has spoken has only spoken once to-night, and none of the speeches have been long. I am now speaking to the motion to adjourn, hut I say that on the resolution lefore the House none of the members of the Opposition have spoken more than once. The Minister of Finance says that when one or two speeches were made on the opposite side that was enough, and that the memlers of the House should know enough to hold their tongues. Nir, the members of the Opposition donot recognize that their views are to lee expressed by any one or two members in this House. (ientlemen opposite may be content to sit mute and chumb, if they see fit, but the members on this side of the House mean to avail themselves of their rights to disenss these questions. The Minister of Finance, in attempting to dictate to the House by any exhibition of petulancy or crying of a baly, will not deter members from exercising their rights. They refuse to he toll that when they exercise their proper rights. they are following a line of olstruction. Speaking for myself, I can only say that when the Minister of War suggested there was an understanding that this item should be delayed. he is entirely mistaken. I do not see how he arrived at that conclusion. My own opinion was that a large amount of hiscussion of this question would take place on the general policy of the fovernment. I told the Minister of Finance, through the chairman at that time, that while he might strictly draw a line with reference to separate items when they came up, it would conduce to the quicker transaction of husiness to allow the discussion to go on in a general way at the outset. There is nothing to le gained in the way in which the Finance Minister proposes to dispose of the business of the House : and if he wishes to assume the responsibility of moving that the committee rise when members are prepared to go on and do husiness in a legitimate manner, then I take no exception to his motion.

Mr. CAMERON. I think it is hardly fair to charge us who have been taking part in this discussion, with trying to obstruct the business of this House. I ain one of those who have taken part in this discussion, and I was trying to convince my hon. friends opposite that the arguments which they used relative to the exolus from this country, and relative to the National Policy, were discouraging to our people and caused niany of them to emigrate from the country, while they had discouraged those who left the country years ago, from returning to Canada. I was challengerl hy the hon. member for South Brant (Mr. Paterson) to produce any proof that the arguments used on that side had a tendency to produce that unfortunate result. Well, I neel not refer to the price of barley in the United States compared with the price of barley here, I will not refer to the several discussions which have occurred year after year in this House and in the country; I will simply refer to some remarks which have fallen from the hon. member for Wentworth (Mr. Bain). He said that our friends to the south of us, meaning the Americans. offered perple greater inducements than we were able to offer them here. He will not deny that he marle that statement. He said that in the hearing of every person in the Honse except the hon. member for Buthwell (Mr. Mills), who has heen enjoying himself in another place. He sail that the comitions are more favonable on the other side of the line than they are in Canada. Is this not encouraging cur people to leave the country : Are these remarks not frequently made in this Honse ami more frequently in the country? When will ent great statesmen from the grand Province of Ontario cease to use utterances that are calculated to depopulate the Jominion of Canala: I lelieve the expressions of holl. gentlemen opposite will have their effere when the proper time comes. I have only to say that many of the words which my honourahle friends put into my mouth were never uttered hy me. They said that I denied that I sial there was an exalus from the comotry. I did not do anything of the kint.

Mr. MULOKK. Yon sall they were leaving ly cat loarls.

Mr. (AMERON. I satid they were leaving hy cat loads, and I pronluced proof that they were aill (irits but one. I have no hesitation in sitying that the arguments used hy hon. gentlemen opposite will have their effect. We, at all events, endeavour to make the perple believe that we (anadians can live under the existing policy of the diovernment, or under any dinermment in this comotry, whether right or wrong. The arguments which we allace are calculated to make our people remain at home, but all the arguments used by hon. gentlemen opposite, during the mumber of years I have had the honour of leing a member of this Honse, have tender tordrive the perple ont of the country. My oun oldopponent left for Michigan some weeks ago. He discourageal himself to such an extent that he left the country. But he will come back, and I have no doulbt that Hargraft and rther dirits who have left the country will adopt the same course.

Mr. CARLIN: I have no desire to occupy the time of the Honse at this late hour except to say a few worls. At the commencement of the dehate 1 stated the liovernment's immigration policy for the coming year. That prolicy has leen the same as the jolicy of the diovernment precerling it, the policy of the Government of which the hon. memler for Buthwell was a member, and it is the intention of the fiovernment to continue the policy that has existed for the last few years, and to improve it as much as possible by holding out greater inClucements to the perple of Europe aml the Cnitel siates to come to Canada. But I must sily that what we have han to contend with as an inmigration department have loen the speeches made by hon. gentlemen on the Opposition sille, umpatriotic speeches, unworthy of true, loyal Canalians. We hive had those speeches furoted in pipers in the western States, in papers in the eastern states, in papers in Europe, all going to show that this is a country untit to live in, that we are going to ruin, that we have nothing but ruin and decay in this great country of ours.

Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). So you said in 1sis.
Mr. CARLING: The hon. member for South Brant and the hon. gentleman for North Wentworth have challeugerl us to show any speech made ly hon. gentlemen opposite which was detrimentai to the interests of this country. I happen to have a few lines of a speech made by a leading member of the Opposition in a flourishing town in west Ontario, and I was surprised that any hon. memleer on either side of the House or any true patriotic (analian would make use of such language in regard to the country of his aloption. I will read the speech manle in that western city of Ontariob by a leading member of the Opposition, and I do so in answer to the request maile by the hon. member for south Brant and the hon. member for North Wentworth.

Mr. BAIN (Wentworth). Name the man amd the town.

Mr. CARLINi. This is what Was satil by the hon. gentleman who male the speech :
." Trade is stagnant. Stocks of many kinls have liminished in price. Agriculture is greatiy depressel. Lamis have fallen in value. The farmer is overwhelmed with debts. He is no longer the free man that he once was. To many there is nothing left but the sir and light. The fences are going to decay, and the huildings are out of repair, for the cocupier is giring up the struggle-the land cannot be redeemed. The fires in new factories have gone out : the looms in the conton mills: are silent : the emploves bave been dismissed, and at every railway station from east to west machinery and industrial appliances lie rusting-the supply exceeds the demand. What does it all proclaim? Cinital misdirecterl and lost, lahour unemployed, expectations disappointerl, hupes blishted, hearts sore from pectaniary losses. ment financially embarrassed urgently calling upon the Government to do something to save them from financial disaster."

Mr. MILL.か (Bothwell.) All true.

Mr. (ARLIN: That was a speech mate ly a former member of the Reform (iwemment, the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) at Hamilton. I ask this House, and I ask the country, in viell of a speech like this I have read, circulated in Finglanh, Ireland, in sootland or in the western Siates, and delivered to our young men in this. country, is it any womler that some of our people, who may have confidence in the hon. gentleman and in the party he represents, leave the country and seek homes elsewhere than in our own great North-West? I have no desire to take up the time of the House, hit I do say the diovermment have had more to contend with respect to people coming here and our retaining them in the country, from the speeches made by hon. gentlemen opposite and the articles written in their papers, than anything else.

Mr. NILLx (Bothwell). The hon. gentleman has read a sieech mate by me in Hamilton a little more than a year ago, 1 think. I now atfirmi that there is not a statement in that speech which is not true. The hon. gentleman and I are looth residents of the city of Lomdon. The hon. gentlemar knows how miny mannfacturing establishments came into existence after 18\%s. The hon. gentlemen kuows that not one of those establishments is alive to-day.

Nome hon. MEMBERS. No, no.
Mr. MLLs' (Bothwell). That is true. The hon. gentleman knows that every one of those establishments is closel. Where is the establishment of John Elliott? Where is the machinery that he sent to the North-West? It was lying precisely, is I said, rusting on every platform and going to decay at every railway station thoughout the whole North-West Territories, because he was deceivel liy you as tu the poppulation. What is true of that m cuufacturing estad ishment is eyually true of others.

some hom. MFMPERs. It is not true.

Mr. MILLS: (Bothwell. I say it is, and if a committee is , given me. I will estallish it in this Homse hecomi guestion.
sime hom. MF.MBERs. It canant be done.
Mr. DENINON. Doves that apply to manufactories at Tormint:

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). I should like to know whether all the cotton mannfactories are in operation to-liay. I should like to know if it is not true that there is invested in cotton mills in Camada a sutficient amount of capital and machinery to manufacture for 12., (MA), (MW) of people. Where are the mot combinations formerl to-lay? Have we not a number of these estalishments closed : have we not others operating, not on full time, and the profits dividellanomg those that are idle as well as thuse in operation? Is not every statement in that respect true?

Some hom. MEMBERS. No.
Mr. Millis(liothwell). Hon. memherssily,"no": I say, yes. Is it mat true that agricultural property has ile preciated in value?

some hon. MEMPERS. No.

Mr. MILLsi Bothwell). Hon. members may say " bu," but there is mot a loan conapany in Canadia a.day. hut knows that it is true. Do, the hon. gentlemen wish to discredit their own testimony ly shouting "m" in answer to a question of that sint? Let me call the attention of the hon. gentlemen to the resolution proposed by their leater in sisis. The hoia. gentleman was not in office then, and what representations dind he and his friends make of the country when their opponents were in oftice: Did they say it was prosperoms; did they not any there were tenis of thousandsleaving Canada, lrealuse they could not find employment at home. bid they not publish abroad that there were tens of thousinds of (camadians who were fed at soup kitchens at all the varions cities of the country ?

Mr. TUPPER. That is true.

Mr. MILLS: (Bothwell). The hon. gentleman said "it is true," but I tell him that is a slander upm the country, that is an mpatriotic declaration that was puhlished abroad all over the continent of America and all orer the continent of Europe, and it was against just such statements without a particle of fommation, that the dovermment of Mr. Mackenzie han to contend. Is there an hom. gentleman in this House who has forgotten the statementsmade with regard to the cries that were heard from every part of the country "John A. will you come over and help us." The Minister of War knows what representations he made as to the condition of the com try: but he never said it was unpatriotic then to make representations of this sort.

Mr. BOWFLLL. You never heard me say one word against the country ?

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Ah ! You say "against the country." Weare not speaking against the country; what we are denouncing, are the fies on the wheel. It is the incompetent men who nccupy the Treasury benches whom we are denouncing. We say we have a gool comontry, hut that no country was ever so scamdalonsly treated by men entrusted with the discharse of puilic duties as Canada has been by the hon. gentlemen who sit opposite. We tell them, sir, that if they will get out of their places. the country will at once begin to prosper. There is nothing that stands in the way of the prosperity of Canadia to-day except the hon. gentlemen who oweupy the Treasury lenches, and who declare their inability to frame a pullic policy that will promote the public interest. Why, sir, they are calling upon hon. gentlemen on this side of the House to give them some suggestions ly which they may be able to shape out a policy. They have gone to 1 iashington, they have consulted Mr. Blaine, they have travelled all over the continent in search of a policy and so far they have not succeerled. These hom. gentlemen say: Oh, it is highly unpatriotic to say that the country is not prospering under us, hut it was highly patriotic when we were in Opposition for us to say that the comutry was mot prownering under you. It was a proper thing to put in a resolution, it was a proper thing to vite upon, it was a proper thing to cancass this country on from one end to the other. It was proper when we were in Opposition to declare that the country was in a calamitous comdition, that the people were on the verge of bankruptey, and that tens of thousands were fleeing from the country every day: What do the reports of the Bureali of statistics of the Enitel States now show? They show that during the perion of MaceKenze's Administration that on an average 23, ,now a year left Canada, and that on an average $1(M),(M N)$ leave every year siace the present dovernment came into power. The hom. gentlemen opposite came into oftice and the young men of Camada fled feom the conntry as if from a pestilence.
An hom. MEMBER. They are coming back.
Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). Lrok at the American statistics for the States of Massachusetts and Vermont. and Maine and Michigan and the NorthWest country, and see if they are coming lack. Fyerything shows that the exolus is continuing. We si': the Minister of Agriculture now, when he is taking this appropriation for immigration, what assurance cay he give the House that the money will not le wasted as it has been wasted for the last ten years. The hon. gentleman answers us hy saying we are pursuing the same policy as you did. Wie called you thies on the wheel when in otfice, we saill you were incompetent men, but now our defence is that we are doing just as you did 13 years ago. If we did wrong when in isttice, why did you follow our example and why did you not adopt a different policy?
Mr. CARLING: Nowe did.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). The hom. gentleman justified himself a woment ago hy saying it was the same policy.
Mr. CARLIN(: I said the immigration policy.
Mr. MILLs ( $\mathrm{B}_{\mathrm{s} \text { othwell }) \text {. There is this difference }}$ between our position and yours: When we were in office we succeeded in retaining four-fifths of the people we brought here, and you have succeeded in running out eight-ninths of those you bring here. I say, Sir, that this difference is due to the fact that the Government have taxed the people of Canala to death. They have taxed the men out of the country, they have depreciated the value of agricultural pronlucts and diminished the income of the farming pupulation, and they have done so in the interests of the Red Parlour, and the Red Parlour sustains them, and they sustain the Red Parluur, and si long as there is a copper in the pockets of the farmers of this comery the friends of the ciovermment will not le permittel to want.
(committee rose and reprorted progress.
sir JOHN THOMPSON mover the adjourmment of the Honse.

Motion agreed to; the Honse adjourned at 1.2 .15 a.m. (Naturlay).

IVRIT INsUFI.

Mr. SPF.AKER. I have the honour to inform the House that I have received information of a vacancy in the representation of the Electoral District of the Fast Rioling of the County of York, Ontario, ly the demise of the Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, and I accordingly issued my warrant th the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to make ont a new writ for the said electoral distriet.

CIVIL SERVHE COMMISSION.

Mr. MeMULLEN. Will the Minister state when the report of the Commission which sat on the (ivil service will be laid on the Tathe of Parliament:

Nir JOHN THOMPsON. The report has not been receiverl yet. I am informed it has not yet leen male, and it is, therefore, impossible to state the day when it will le laidl hefore the House. The Bill on the Paper in the name of the secretary of Nitate is intended toprovide some temprary amend. nents in case the report should le receiced when it would he tor late to take up any larger measure.

BRITISH COLLMBIA QUARANTINE.

Mr. PRIUR. Before the Orlers of the Day are proceeded with. I would ask the fovernment if they hate received any infomation in regard to quarantine matters in British Columbia ? I have leen informed that last Monday the Empiess of Jopoli, a steamer sailing from Hong Kong, China, came intes the harlour of Victoria with small-pox on I ward, also that the quarantine officer there landed some ils Chinese passengers and that the accommodation whs totally unfit for any large number of invalids to be treated. I would like to ask if this is correct, and also whether the Government do not think they should put the duarantine station there on a goorl fonting to deal with a large number of invalids? Now that these steamers are running regularly from China and Japan, every precaution ought to le taken to have that guarantine station in a proper shape, so that no delay may be caused to the steamers, and that the passengers may be so treated as to prevent the diseases from spreadin; over the cogintry.

Mr. CARLINli. The ship mentioned did arrive at Victoria with over EM) Chinamen, and there was a case of small-pox on troarl. The whole numher were quarantined, and are fuarantined at the present time. The question of putting the quarantine at Albert Head is now leing considered hy the liovernment, with a view of putting it on a goonl forting and preventing the spread of disease.

U. ․ ALIEN LABOUR LAW.

Mr. LANi $F$ FLIER. I would call the attention of the liovermment to a very important question which is referred to in this morning's paper. There is information there from which it appears that abont 20 French (anablian labourers were stoppel by the American customs authorities at Ronse's Point and were taken lack to this side of the frontier. It would appear that there was no justification whatever for that, becanse these men were not hired lint went to that country to leok for latour. I shoulil like to know if the foremment have taken cogmizance of this matter, and what action they propose to take in regard to it, lecanse if what is stated is true, it is a very serions outrage.

Sir JOHN THONPSON. We have no intimation in regard to that except what we have eleriverl from the statement in the newspaper. If the facts as they are stated are correct, no doubt we shall have liefore long some representation on the subject, because it is a very extraorelinary action on take unless the Alien Lalour Law was violate? leefore the entrance of these men into the States, or some violation of the amendment of 1891 took place.

NE(ON1) RFADIN:.

Mr. J. L. PAINE.

Mr. McMLLLEN asked, Whether one J. L. Payne was in the service of the diovernment from the 3ril of February, 1s91, until the Tth March, 1891: If so, what services did he render, where did he perform such services, and what amount was he paid therefor? Has said J. L. Payne been in the service of the fiovernment since 30 th June, 1891 ? If so, tor what periols, what services did he reuder during such periols, and what amount was he paid therefor:

Mr. CARLING. Mr. J. L. Payne was in the service of the Department of Agriculture from 3rd February, 1891, to 7th March, 1891. His services consisted in the performance of the duties pertaining to a special clerk, and during the period stated in the question, he was employed in London, to which place thegeneral correspondence of the Department of Agriculture was sent while the Ministerwas there. He was specialiy qualified for his work. His pay was *3 per day. He was also in the service of the department from 9 th October, 1891, to 31st March, 1892, performing work as a special extra clerk, and was paid at the same rate as above stated.

LAKE ST. JOHN ANI) CHICOUTIMI RY.

Mr. FREMONI asked, Whether it is the intention of the Government to take any measures to ensure the construction of a railway from Lake St. John to Chicoutimi and St. Alphonse, which will serve the needs of three-fourths of the population of the Saguenay district, who-are now from in) to $\overline{7 \pi}$ miles distant from railway communication :

Mr. BolleLL. Measures have been taken by the dovernment towarls ensuring the construction of the railway from Iake Nit. John to Chicontimi. By il Vic., chap. 3, and i? Vic., chap. 3, sulssidies are granted in aid of this road to the extent of $\$ 3.2(K)$ jer mile, amoming to $\mathrm{s} 1 \mathrm{tan}(\mathrm{MK})$. For the construction of the first secition of 30 miles a contraut is male with the Quebec and Lake Nt. John Railway Company, and they have applied to enter into a contract for a further 21 miles, representing that they are prepared to proceed with the work.

BRIIMEN OVER THE ST. LAWRENCE.

Mr. FREMUN'I asken, Whether any representations have been male ly the Imperial to the Dominion fiovernment as to the danger in the event of war, of railway communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific leing severed by the destruction of the brilges over the Sit. Lawrence at Montreal, lwoth of which leing in close proximity to the frontier? And, if sw, has it heing pointel out to the Imperial authorities that a railway lirilge at or near Quebec minter the guns of the (itadel on one side, and of the new Leivis forts on the other, would be perfectly safe from attack?

Mr. BOWELLL. No such representations have lreen mate to the Canarian Government hy the Imperial fiovermment, conseduently they have not been answered.

('APE BRETON RAILWAY.

Mr. MrMCLLE.N asked, Whether the lands chosen by the locating engincers of the Cape Breton Railuay for terminal accommonation at North Nydney, have leen purchased and paid for? If so, what juantity of lands have been appropriated and What price has lreen paid therefor and to whom paid! If any ehange has taken place in the location of terminal accommodation on what property has the terminus leen located, and how many acres purchased and at what prices aud from whom purchased?

Ir. BOWELL. The lands chosen for terminal accoummolation at North Syiney have been expropriated, but they have not been paid for. No change has taken place in the Iocation of terminal acconmonlations, but the town of North Sydney now asks that the terminus le established at the ballast wharf insteal of at the Imrie wharf. There are $3: 31$ acres expropriated at the town wharf for terminal facilities, the value is placed by the ofticial land appraiser at $$ 5,000$ and by an otficial referee of the Exchequer Court at $$ \mathbf{8 , 0 0 0}$.

PROCEDURE-NOTICES OF MOTION.

On the order being called for the motion of Mr. MeCarthy, the same was asked to stand at the request of the (iovernment.

Mr. CASEX. I would like to call attention to the rule which requires that motions should be diropped if not gone on with when they are called, except when the (iovernment asks them to stand. This privilege on the part of the (iovernment should not be exercised unless they are prepared to give reasons for so doing. It appears to be customary for some member of the (iovernment tu call "stand" whenever a notice given by one of their supporters comes upiuring that gentleman's absence from the House. We of the Opposition have not the same opportunity of using the privilege granterl to the liovermment under the rule, and I think the rule should be enforced unless the diovernment can give satisfactory reasons for asking the motion to stand.

Gir JOHE THOMPNON. I am sure we have always resired to make use of any privilege of that kind as mach in favour of one side as the other, as in luith cases it is only done by courtesy. I im quite willing to join in the request to have any motion stand for a member of the Opposition who has any reason to offer to the Honse why it ought to stancl. In this case, as the Minister of Railways, who has heen unwell for some days, is ahsent, and this motion ielates to the lusiness of his department, it was evilently necessaly that the motion should stand.

PUBLIC: BUILIHNCiS IN VICTORIA, B. $\therefore$

Mr. PRIOR moved for :

Copies of all correspondence between Mr. Gamble, the resident engineer in British Columbia, and the Public Works Department, Ottawa, in regard to the Custom House and Post Office buildings in Victoria, B.C. Also, all reports by the above-named ufficer on the said building:Also, all correspondence and reports from Mr. E. II. Fletcher, post office inspector in British Columbia, in regard to the Post Office building in Victoria, B.e.
He said: By this motion I am asking to have the corresponilence between the engineer of the Public Works I Department and the Government brought down for the purpose of seeing the opinion of that gentleman in regard to public buildings in Victoria, B.C. For the last three or four years my colleague and myself, every session, have spoken in regard to the necessity that exists for having new huidlings erected in that place. I do not think it is needful for me again to give any statistics of the business clone at that port, hecause I have given them every year and they do not seem to have had any great effect on the Ministers. However, the necessity still exists for having new buildings. The present buildings in Victoria were put up many years ago when the town was a very small place indeed, and every hon. member in the Honse knows that Victoria has grown very rapidly within the last few years. The revenue from Victoria is over $$ 1,200,000$ a year from Customs alone. I am informell by the civil servants who are stationel in those buildings that it is almost impossible for them to carry on their work on account of the inadequate size of the structures. I think the post office cost something like $$ 40,0(M)$, and the custom house a similar amount ; and any hon. member will readily see that the town is entitled to public buildings more in keeping with that amount of revenue than the buildings at present existing. The reason I make this request, Sir, is not solely because I wish to have the money spent in Victoria, although I do say we have a perfect right to look to the Government to spend that amount of money, but my object in desiring proper buildings erected is that public business should be facilitated and carried on in a manner suitable to the requirements of that city. I feel convinced myself that the Ministers who have been out there and who have seen this place will admit that we should have such buildings erected there as would be a credit to the city and to the Dominion. I only hope that these Ministers who have leen there will use their influence in Council to ensure that an appropriation will be inserted in the Supplementary Estimates sufficient at least to make a commencement on these public buildings, which are so much needed in Victoria. I, therefore, move this motion, seconded by Mr. Mara.
Motion agreed t 4 .

Motions to stand.

On the Orier being called for the motion of Mr. McCarthy relative to commercial interests hetween the United States and Canada.
sir JOHN THOMPSON. The hon. member for Simene (Mr. Mc(arthy.) intimated to me that he would le here at toclock. He is detained in the court until then, and under these circumstances I will ask to let the motion stamd.

Mr. MULOCK. I suppose it is understoon that any hon. gentleman who has a motion und who intimates to the dovernment beforehand that he will not, camot, lee present, will be accorded the same treatment?
SirJOHN THOMPsON. I said more than that. I said we would le glad to ansk the same for any gentleman on the opposition side who had a good reason to offer, whether he intimated it beforeliand or not. I diil not ask that it should le intimated Ineforehand.
Mr. MLLOCK. The reason ascribed here will, I suppose always he a gool reason: that a gentleman is occupied in the supreme Court.

NORTH-WESTASNEMPL RENOLUTIONS.

Mr. BAVIN movel for :

Conies of all resulutions and memorials passed by the North-West Assembly at its last session and addressed to tie dovernment.
He said: Mr. Speaker, some of these resolutions relate to matters that I think have heen already satisfactorily dealt with hy the ciovernment, but there is one resolution in regard to inmigration that I wish specially to press upon the attention of the ciovermment and upon the attention of this House. Auy one who reviews the history of the proceerlings of this covernment and of the Government that preceded it, will, I think, come to the conclusion that they have not erred in overzeal for the promotion of immigration. Several things have undoulitedly combined to that effect; the principal of which is, that there has been in the cities a strong and influential party influencing elections, who were opposed to assisted immigration. Well, Sir, the time came when a wise policy was adopted by the Govermment of Cauala, and that policy was this: Only to pay for results; but, in my opinion, that policy has fallen short of what was needed ly the Dominion of Canada because of unwillingness on the part of both sides of this House to supply the money necessary for the promotion of immigration. Thw listom ammian tion in the Cinited states lats bech :hat immigration moved on from one basis; a basis along the Pacific conast, a basis stretching down the whole length of the original states that broke away from England. Here in Canada we have had to proceed upon a different hasis. First you had a short territory in what were callel the Lower Provinces; then you had Quelec, then you had Ontario, and there you had the great lakes stretching hetween Ontario and the territories, and that has necessitated that in Manitoika and the territories we should proceed upon a perfectly new hasis. That has male migration difficult for us as compared with what it was in the States. The point, therefore, I make is this : that if you are going to people Manitola and the North-West Territories as you ought to do. and as rapidly as you ought to do, you must make you basis there and act from there; and the little Parliament in Regina has asked that a sum of money should be devoted to their use to deal specially with immigration. Now, sir, what is done by the other provinces? Ontario, New Brunswick, Quelree, Manitolba, has each its agent or agents who are all active in promoting immigration into these provinces, and as a fact we can state the amount of work that has been done in promoting immigration into Mauitoba by the very energeticandable man whonow controlsimmigration for that prorince. You have that man.with a number of agents in various partsof Ontario for instance, and theyare doing work that he himself can measure. He cin tell exactly the amount of work they have done, and show the money value which that province has got from those agents. Now, what we in the North-West say is this: (iive us the means of doing precisely the same thing for the North. West as has been done for Manitola. What we need to do, in orler to make Canalla sposition secure in the future, is something large in the way of promoting immigration. There is no reason why, if you lring in 2n.(W)Oimmigrants, youshould not bring in a million. You have a vast field in Europe to draw from-in (iermany, in Scandinavia, in Scotland, in England, in Irelanil: and if that fichl is properly exploitenl, there is uo reason whatever why, in a year or a couple of years, you should not bring a million of immigrants to this country.
Some hon. MEMBERs. Hear, hear.
Mr. DAVIN. I hear scoruful cheers from hon. gentlemen around me.

Some hon. MEMBERs. No.
Mr. DAVIN. Are they not scornful ". Then hon. gentlemen agree with me: If that million of are properly and fruitfully expended, because from that moment you secure the future of Canada, and I will tell you why. Suppose the bringing in of the million men within a year or two should cost $\mathbf{S 1 0 , 0 0 0}, 000$, does it not strike every man of sense that that money is far more fruitfully expended than if you got a million of men in by the same expenditure spread over ten or fifteen or twenty years? The fact of getting them in within a short time not only gains the result of the expenditure of $\$ 10,000,000$, but it secures for the country the best immigration agents we can possilly have, namely, successful settlers. Now, Sir, in the past we have been trop tard. As the Minister of Agriculture knows, we have in the last two years been getting most admirable settlers from l)akota, but with reference to lakota we have heen trop; tavol; if we had begun there a year earher we should have had far better results. Now, what we want with regard to Canada generally is a large immigration movement. Without that, you camnot build up in ( anada what we all want, a nation ; but with our vast resources, amd our magnificent waterways and harbours, there camnot lee the least doulit that if we make the same effort to secure immigration from the congested districts of Furope that the people of the Enited Ntates have made, we can make the future position of Canaila secure, and that is the only way it can he male secure. So much for the general question. Now, in regard to the particular question of the North-West, it is the great fichl into which we want to pour the immigrants, because even Manitola is getting pretty well filled, as well as the other provinces; hut in the North-West you have a country that can sustain a humbred million people, and that comatry, Sir, is the future hacklone of Cimala. Make the North-West a success, and the future of Canada is secured. I ask, therefore, that the Government here should give the little (iovermment of the NorthWest at once the means of olealing with that probem, which is the great problem for Camala as well as for the North. West. All the other prohems will settle themselves: but if we go on without increasing in population, then failure will he the doom of Canada. Suppose you gave the this year to spend on immigration: why, Sir, El(N), (OM) would he fruitfally expended on immigration to the North-West. Think of our vast harrest of last year ; how much of the returns from that has flowed into the pockets of the people of eastem Canala? Merchants who do business with the west will tell you that their lest customers, those most certain in sending orders and in meeting their bills. are the people of the North. West : and I shy that as a mere matter of prulent incestment, you camot do better than place a large sum in the estimates to be at the disposial of the (invernment of the North. West in promoting immigration. On previonsoccasions I have dealt with the other questions involved in these resolutions, with regard to some of which I think the fiovernment have already done their part; hut this question of immigration, as I have said in this House, is the master question for Canada. It is the question to which the statesmen desiring to buili up a great nation here will apply their whole encrgy; and instead of frittering away our time and spending a few thousand dollars a year upon it, it is something on which we might well concentrate nur attention and so build up a great. a prosperous, and a united Camala.

DECISIONS ON ELEETION PETITIONS.

Mr. GILLIEN moved for :

Copy of the petition presented and filed in the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, under the Dominion Controverted Elections Act, against the election and return of Joseph A. Gillies for the County of Richmond, Nova Scotia, at the general election holden on the 5 th of March, 1891; together with the dates of filing and service of such petition; snd also, all papers and documents in connection with the following proceeding in the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia:-

1. Application to the Honourable the Chief Justice extending the time for setting the petition down for trial. 2. Application to set the netition down for trial returnable before the Honourable Mr. Justice Weatherbe and the Honourable Mr. Justice Graham, but heard by the Honourable Judge Weatherbe, sitting alone, on the 19th day of November, 1891.
2. The order made by the said Judge Weatherbe, sitting alone, for trial of the said petition, fixing the Sth of December, 1891, the date for said trini.
3. The notice of appeal, dated 28 th Norember, 1991, from this decision of the Honourable Judge Weatherbe, to the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, the grounds of appeal being as follows :-
(a) Because there was no jurisdiction to make said order, or the portion thereof extending time.
(b) Because six months had elapsed since the presenta tion of the petition.
(c) Because the time and place of trial were not fixed within six months from the presentation of the petition.
(d) Because the extension of time granted by suid order was not made on application for that purpose, supported by affidavits, and it does not appear from such order, and it was not inade to appear when the same was made, that the reguirements of justice rendered such enlargement. necessars.
(e) Because the respondent had no notice of any application to extend the time for the commencement of the trial herein.
(f) Becanse one judre hats no jurisliction to fix the time and place of trial.
(g) Because the trial of the peition cannot be commenced during the terul of the court at which the julges assigned to try the said petition are bound to sit.
4. The notice of motion on waid appeal for the 3rd day of December. 1891.
5. The appointment by the Honouralile Judge Weatherbe, then senior judge, for a hearing before the Supreme Court on the said srd day of December, 1891.
6. The postpunement of this hearing until a later day.
7. The judguent of the Supreme Court upon this case.
8. The rule of the Supreme court, dated the 19th day of December. 1891 , setting aside the order of the Honourable Judge Weatherbe tixing the date of the trial of said petition.
1f. The date on which the Honourable Judge Weatherbe and the Honourable Judge Graham received a copy of the order of the Supreme Court setting aside the said order of Judge Weatherbe for trial.
9. The date on which the said judges reported to the Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons that the said petition had been beard by them, and that they had declared the election of the said Joseph A. Gillies void, and his seat in Parliament vacant.
1.2. The date upon which application was made to the Honourable Judge Weatherbe to defer the decision in the petition pending the decision of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia on the question of jurisdiction, and the refusal of this application.

Mr. FORBEN. I presume the hon. member desires to have the papers in all these varions petitions before the House. It has come to my notice that different decisions have been given upon the same point by the same bench in Nova scotia, or upon points very similar to one another, and in order that the whole question may be fairly before the House, and that there may lee not an opinion arriver at from one set of facts only, I heg to move that the resolution be amended ly adding thereto, after the last clanse, the following words:--
Also, copies of the several petitions presented ard filed in the Suprene Court of Nova Scotia under the Dominion Controverted Elections Act,against the election and return of Hon. Sir John Thompson, Hon. C. H. Tupper, W. C. E. Kaulbach, Mr. J. B. Mills, Mr. N. W. White, and Mr. Hugh Cameron, for six of the several counties of the Province of Nova scotia at the general election held on the 5th March. 1891 : also, all papers and documents in connection with the rarious proceedings in the said cases in the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I do not think there is any ohjection at all to the adoption of the amendment. I would like to suggest that this amendment and resolution seem to me to contain a good many matters which are probably of no importance in.the fuestion the hon. gentleman would like to discuss.

A copy, for instance, of every petition is asked for, and those are documents which are nearly all alike. I presume it will be satisfactory if the return brought down will contain only one petition and the paragraphs in the others which are different. A good many of the docunents on the file, I sup pose, would not he required for any practical purpose whatever, and I presume there will be no ohjection to our discriminating in making the return.

Motion agreed to.

RETURNS ORINERED.

Return of the amount of crude cotton-seed oil imported into Canada during the year 1891: also the amount of refined cotton-seed oil imported into Canada during the year 1891.-(Mr. McKay.)

- Copies of all papers, letters, documents, correspombence, petitions and resolutions, with reference to the upening of a post office at Capst. Ignace Station, in the County of Montmagny.-(Mr. Choquette.)

PREFERENTIAL TRADE WITH (:REAT BRITAIN.

Mr. McNEILL moved :

That if and when the Parliament of Great Britain and Ireland admit: Canadian products to the markets of the United Kingdom upon more favourable terms than it accords to the products of foreign countries, the Parliament of Canada will be prepared to accord corresnonding adrantages bs a substantial reduction in the duties it imposes upon British manufactured good:-
He sain : The Prime Minister of England, speaking at the Mansion House in November last, mate use of these remarkable words:

- The great subjects of consideration are those treaties of commerce that are to expire next year. The great guestion is what tariff will the various nations adopt with respect to each other. Although with respect to material warfare I think we can hold out to sou the most promising anticipations as far as our present prospects go, with respect to this industrial warfare which has for its weapon protective legislation, and has for its prize the narkets of various conntries, I am afraid we must be content to occupy for a time a peculiar and isolated position. The cause of protection does not sink ; it rises."
I think, Sir, that you and the members of this House, having regard to the high position which the speaker whom I have quoted holds in the councils of the world, will be of the opinion that this is a very grave and serious utterance. The Prime Minister of Eingland tells us that the great guestion which is at present occapying the attention of the statesmen of the worl is the question as to the tariffs which different countries impose, one against another. The warfare which we have to consider at present is, he says, a warfare which has : for its weapons protective legislation, and has for its prizes the markets of the world. Unfortunately, Sir, we in Canala have been too familiar with this warfare for many years past.

Mr. LAURIER. Hear, hear.
Mr. MeNEILL. I am glad to find that my hon. friend so entirely coincides with my liews in that regard. We have had, year in and year out, since is66, a warfare of tariffs waged against us with unremitting and relentless hostility by our great neighbour to the south. For twelve years we took no step, we adopted no measure, to defend our infant industries which lay open and exposed to this unnatural warfare ; and it was not until at length we found that, under the circumstances, this unnatural condition of things must result in the stifling and trampling out of the infant industries of this comntry altogether, that we alopted means foi their protection. When we did so we accompanied our protective legislation with a statutory offer of peace and good-will to our friends to the south, but this war has still contimuen. It is now about a quarter of a century since our friends to the south commenced to wage this war against us, and in place of having received our overtures in the friendly spirit in which they were offered they have, confident in their great strength, comfident in their enormous resources, spurned our overtures, and have, in point of fact, apparently regarded them rather as an evidence of weakness than of a desire for peace and good-will. The result is that we are now face to face with new batteries recently erected against us on that side of the horter. This warfare which has been waged against us is not only such a warfare as has been teseribed by the Prime Minister of Englaml, one which has for its object the mastery of our markets, but it is only too well known that it is designed also to dominate amd control our comntry. I hear some apparent ironical cheer from the other side of the House, but I make this statement, Mr. Speaker, upon what I think is sutticient authority. I think the history of the unhappy comlition of things which exists sutficiently shows us that one of the oljects, at all events, which the (iovernment and people of the United it ates had in liew in waging against us this war of tariffs, was to force us to a political union with then. Their public men have said so. We all of us remember a famons expression of one of their public men when he said that the result of abrogating the Treaty of 1 s86 hal not leeen such as they had expecterl, namely, that they would obtain the fruit "by violently shaking the tree," hut the result hat leen to bring alrout a donsolidation of the British provinces of North America: and just as that result was brought about at that time, so the action which our friends are taking at the prexent day is tending to bring about a consolidation of the outlying provinces of the Empire, rather than, as they had hoped, to induce a disruption of that Empire, and the falling of a portion of it into their arms. I may say in further proof of the statement I make, that Mr. Wiman has explicitly arlmitted the fact that the Treaty of 1886 was abrogated with a view to coerce this country into annexation. With the permission of the House I will just read an extract from a speech of Mr. Wiman's delivered before the commercial lodies of Detroit and Buffalo. He referred to the United Empire Loyalists, and he alluded to them :
"Because there is a tendency in the American mind to feel that isolation and a refusal to admit Canada to the privileges of the markets of the United States will have the effect of forcing them into a humble position as ayplicunts for a political alliance. Doubtless the repeal of the Reciprocity Treaty of 1866 was largely influenced by this consideration."
Now, Mr. Speaker, I think I have said enough to prove the point I was making as to the animis which actuates our friends on the south of the line. in their fiseal policy towards us. But there are many other considerations which point to the same conclusion. I think itowould nọt be inappropriate if I were to read to this House an extract from a speech delivered by a gentleman in the city of Poston, a city of which we have heard something of late, the city which has been selected by my hon. friend the leader of the Opposition and by sir Johs Thompios.
his friend the memler for Nouth Onford (Nir Richard Cartwright) in which to give their views on the commercial relations which ought to exist between the two countries. I think it might be well if I were to call attention to some utterances of another gentleman delivered in that city. That is the city they select in which to deliver their andresses, presumably hecause they feel that the people of Boston sympathize with them and their views. A short time before the hon. member for south Oxford (Nir Richatel Carturight) delivered his famons address in Boston, an address was delivered by another gentleman in that city "hy invitation of prominent citizens there." I believe the gentleman who delivered this address was one of those who welcomed the hon. n:amber for south Oxfomi to Boston on that occasion, and this adrlress was thought so highly of that it was printed hy prominent citizens of Boston and was circulaten in pampher form, in handsome type, and actually a copy of it reached my hands, with the eompliments of the committee, away in the north riding of Bruce. It was thought to be so valuable and of so much importance that it was circulated so wide and so far as the north riding of Bruce. When an athlress of this kind is circulated throughout the length and breadth of Ganada it is evident that it is thought of some value by the lealing citizens of loston, and therefore, with the permisson of the Holase, I will read a few extracts from this address in order that hon. members may see the frame of mind of the lealing citizens of Boston as to this "continental unity," of whien we have heard so much. " (intinental Unity" is the title of this pamphlet.

"Solong as"

said the gentleman who delivered the address, whose name is IV. H. H. Murray :
"So long as Canada remains as she has been and is to ray, compuratively weak in population, in developed resources and in military power, she is not a subject of serious concern to us, scarcely even of thought. But once let her begin to assume proportions of magnitude in those directions : once let us disecrn that her $5,(100,000$ are soon to become $20,000,001$, and those twenty likely to become in the progress of time $40,000,000$, and the great protective principle of our nationality, now lying latent as regards her existence on our borders, would suddenly come to the surface. I do not think I overestimate the Anterican instinct touching the solidarity of this continent when I declare that we of the Republic shall never stand idly by and see a great power built up either on the southern or northern side of us.
" By right of deeds done and blood sherd, of money spent and progress made, by the right of trials numberless hravely horne, of sacrifices beyond count freely offered upon the altar of our uational faith, and, as we believe. on the altar of God, we do solemnly hold. that we have a right to live and grow, unchecked, unhindered, unimperilled by any other flag or power, and that the whole continent, from gulf to gulf, sind ocean to ocean. will, must, shall, in the fullness of time, and we hope by the luw of benevolent attraction, come under the banner of the Republic, of which to be a citizen, we hold, is better boon than to be a king.
"But one thing Canadians must understand, and it would be unwise and unfair for us to conceal it from them, and that one thing is this: that this Republic will never see at great power built up on this continent, either to the north or south of us, under either French or English flags, and take no action to prevent it. Least of all shall we ever assist them to become numerous, rich and powerful, with that end on their part in view. We invite them cordially to share with us the destiny of the continent; to share with us its greatness and its glory, as historically they have a right to do and should be proud of doing : but if they foolishly decline our invitation and undertake to rival us and imperil us by an alien development, then must they look for no help from us, for we shall certainly not help then at all. and we shall as certainly, oppose their prugress to the fullest extent of our power."
Now, these are some of the tid-hits of this admeress which was delivered at the reguest and on the invitation of some of the prominent citizens of Poston, and was sn highly valued that they thought it well to circulate it through the length and Dreadth of Canala for the ellification and instruction of the people of this country. When we add to the facts 1 have laid hefore you the fact that the people on our sonthern border through their representatives in the senate refused to ratify a treaty which their own President, their own (iovermment and their own commissioners declared to be a just and righteons treaty : when you adh still further the fact that on the latitic seatboard they have laid violent hands upon our peaceful ressels pursuing their lawfal avocations on the high seas and carried the?n off captive to their own ports; when, to use the words of Mr. Mowat:
"The proofs (of unfriendly feeling) are to be found in the school books which are in use: in the 4th of July orations: in the tone of newspapers and their European despatches; in the diplomatic dacuments: in the election cries: in the speeches of public men in the Federal and State Legishatures amd elewhere; and in many other ways :'
when we add all these facts and circumstances together, I do not think we have a right to blame Mr. Mowat rery much when he descrihes the people of the United states as a hostile perople. I presume Mr. Mowat did not mean they were hostile in the sense in which France and liermany are hostile, but I presume he meant that they were hestile, not in a military but in a political sense, in the same sense that hon. gentlenen opposite are hostile to those who now occupy the Treasury benches. We donot expect that the action of hom. gentlemen on this side will be very much assisted by the action of hon. gentlemen apposite, hut that, on the contrary, their action will be hostile, and I presume it is in that sense that Mr. Mowat speaks, believing that the United States will use every political means to injure and thwart the interests of Canada. But I ann glad to say that we are not dependent upon them. I ann glanl to say that we canlive without them. They have a great country, they have a vast country, hut we have a far greater country. They haverapoulatiomof ( $63,(X N)$, (KN) of perople, hint we have a country with a puphlation of $3(6),(M O),(M N)$ of people and, if we ald our protectorate territories to that, We have it population of $410,(M)(M),(M)$ of peopple. They have a erreat trade, it is true, hut if you add to it the trasle of the great French Repiblic and trate of all the Russiats and the trale of the vast (ierman Finpire, you will have a trade only onesixtieth part greater than the trade of the British Fimpire. I anhit that weonght to treat our friends on the sonth in a friendly and conciliatory way. I benieve that every member of this Honse, on whichever side he sits, desires to do that, we desire to treat them in that way. lut at the same time in the way in which one honest and manly man would deal with amother. Mr. speaker, we possess more than one-half of the sea-bume commerce of the world. Our Empress Queen is hy common admission the mistress of the waterways of the worlal. We hold almost all the most importint coaling stations in the world. Ours are ly far the greatest wheat areas in the world ; ours are overwhelmingly the greatest wool markets in the worlil. It is sail that in one valley in our Fimpire we can grow more cotton than all the cotton produce of the United states. Ours are the greatest diamond fields in the worlt, and $I$ almost think that we are to day the first country in the world in the prodaction of tea; if we are not the first, we are almost the first. In coal, iron, copper and nickel, we hold our own with all mankinl. We have the greatest timber forests in the world. In sugar growing we hold a gool phace: in tobacco growing we come third, and I have Sir Charles Dilkesauthority for saying that we produce the finest coffiee in the world. Every variety of climate, every variety of soil, everything that we can possibly require we possess in lavish altumbance incour own Empire. We are not, Mr. Speaker, ahsolutely and utterly mendicant, we British subjects. It is not absolutely necessary that we should go cringing and whining to the back door of any for, in prower to bey a little of their trale for dhaty. We are quite ready to trade with them, aul anxions to trade with them, but we will trade with them on fair terms, if you please. To use old Adminal Blakes words: "We are not going to be formed by foreigners." As I have said, we are prepareal to, teat upon fair terms, but only upon fair terns. But now, Mr. Speaker, the trouble of the matter is just this: That while we have these enormons resources, resources which are almost unimaginalle in extent and in value, we have not common action with regard to them. We find, on the contrary, that the produce of our own people in our own markets is taxed just as the produce of the foreigner is. We time that the foreigner who excluiles our goods from his market has ali the benefits in the markets of the Empire that any memher of the Empire has. We say that that is wrong, we say that ought to be changed, and we say that it will be changed. We say that the day is approaching rapidly when a change will be made. anl I hope lefore I sit down I will be able to convince you, sir, and the members of this House, that that day is rapidly approaching. I do not think it is very necessary for me to elatomate to any great extent the argument that it would be of enormous benefit to this comutry if we had preferential treatment for our gools in the markets of the mother country. I do not think it is necessary for me to point out to the farmer the alvantage that it would be to him if he had preferential treatment in the markets of Great Britain for his wheat ant Gats. and for his harley, and for his horses, his butter, his cheese and what he has to sell. I do not think it is necessary for me to argue that it would be a benetit to our lumber interest if we had preferential treatment in the markets of the mother country for our lumber, nor is it accessary to point out the advantage it would be to our tishing interents if we had the same adrantage for our tish. The market of Eagland being our natural market. and heing overwhelmingly the greatest market in the world, I think the truth of the statement that it would be a benefit to us to have preferential treatment in that market goes without the necessity of argument.
Mr. DAYIES (P.E.I.) Do I umderstand the hon. gentleman's argument to lie that it would be beneficial under all circumstances, or, only if we got a higher price for our commodities there?
Mr. MeNEILL. I think, Mr. Speaker, that the mere fact of our having preferential treatment in the markets of the mother country would be a

Mr. Menenh.

Jenefit to us, even supposing that there was not a higher price for the commodity we export ; but I do not saly we would not get a higher price. I say that even supposing there was not a higher price obtained it would hee a benefit to us, because we would have the first place in that market and we would ensure the sale of our gools. Take the case of lumber, for example. Would it not he an enormons andantage to as to have the certainty of a market for the sale of our lumber? Eien supposing that an increased price was not necessarily ohtainel, the surety of the market woull lie of enormous advantage.

Mr. MULOCK. Does the hon. gentlemen say that England is our natural market for lumber ?
Mr. Mr. NEILLL. I say that Englaml is our natural market for the lest lumber we proluce.

Mr. MULOCK. The lumbermen have not found it out.

Mr. MeNEILL. I think they have, and I think my hon. friend has not lookend into the figures on he would discover that they have fomm it out. If the hon. gentlenan will look into the figures he will find that while we sold the year hefore last to the Americans, some $8(10,(0 \times 1),(M K)$ worth of lumber, they exported exactly the same amount of lumber of the same kinl, anl they were acting as middlemen for us except for the worst kinds of lumber.
Mr. MULOCK. Where do all those barges go?
Mr. MeNEILL. I trust my hon friend will hear me and not interrupt. If my hon. frient keeps me talking all the afternoon answering interruptions, as he is in the halit of doing when I get up to speak, it will prolong the discussion a good deal. I was just saying that England was our natural market. I know we are told that the market lying alongside of us is our natural market, just because it does lie along side us. I see my hon. friend opposite (Mr. Lamier) agrees with me and he nods approvingly: Wearetolithat just hecanse the market of the United states lies alongside of us it must be our natural market, so that, when I, as a farmer. take out my wheat or iarkey to sell it, I should go to the farmer next me on the same principle. I can sell him a few bushels of seed wheat or barley, or a cow or at horse, and therefore I am to go to him, hecause he is my natural market as he resides alongside of me. That is the argument of hon. gentlemen on the other side. If my neighbour has ten thousand bushels of wheat and I have only five hundred, still I am to go to him to sell my five humdred bushels because he lives alongside of me. I should like to know from hon. gentlemen opposite why the farming country lying alongside of Canada should lie the natural market of Canada any more than the farm beside me is my natural market. I have just jotted down a few facts for the instruction of my hon. friend which I will give to him. I find that China does not find her uear neighbour, Japan, her natural market. She sells more to the United states than to Japan; and she does not find India with all its teeming populations her natural market although it lies on her border. China sends six or seven times as much of her produce away over the ocean to the United States as she sells to India: and she sells all the way to Great Britain two and a half times as much produce as she sells to Japan, and nearly fifteen times as much as she sells to her neighlour India. Yet it is her natural market lying alongside, and in India you camot say it is hostile tariff which prevents the trade, hecause India is as nearly a free traule country as you can find anywhere. Now let me give some facts with regard to the trade of Japan. Japan sells to North America twenty times as much as to India and sian, and to France ten times as much: and France sells to the United States almost double as much as she does to her neighbour Italy. Belgium sells to the Argentine Pepublic nearly twice as much as to Spain, and fomr times as much as to Norway and sweden. (iermany sells to the Argentine Republic letween two and three times as much as to Russia, four times as much as to Italy and ten times as much as to Spain. So that I do not think that this argument alont the natural market heing necessarily alongside the trader will hold water when you come to apply to it the test of actual experience. Turkey sells to France eleven times as much as to Italy. I might gro on and multiply these instances, but I will conclude them with this fact, that our very innocent neighlwur Brother.J Inathan, whothrough hisemissaries is emdeavouring toteachus that his country is our natural market hecause it lies alongside of us, sells tw the Argentine Republic, Central America, Mexico and Brazil-all his natural markets according to this theory- $\mathrm{S} 38,(\mathrm{OM}),(\mathrm{MNO})$ worth, and to that wnnatural market across the Athantic $\$ 444$, (MOO, (NM). so much for the guestion of the natural market. When our rival finds his markets in Eingland, I do not see why we should not find ours therealso: and it is very satisfactory to find that we are opening up a market there for our products very rapidly. I do not intend to trouble the House with a maiss of figures, hat I will call its attention to one class of tigures for a moment. I recollect that only last session we were told how alsuril it was to think wecouldidevelopa market in England for our horses. We were toll the same with regard to our eggs. I have not the figures to show the growth of the market there for eggs, but I think it is pretty well known to the public of Camada. But I will mention the number of horses sold in England within the last three years, from which you will see the extent to which we are developing our trade with Englani. In 1889 we sold $s 2 \pi,(0 \times 1)$ worth, in 1890 . 866,000 worth, and in 1891 so4n, (MK) worth. No I think we have reason to be satisfied with the progress we are making in that regard. Now, it is gratifying to find that the demand in England for our goods is steadily increasing, while unfortunately the demand in the United States is stewdily decreasing.
Mr. MACDONALD(Huron). How many hores does Eugland import from the whole world:

Mr. MeNEILL. I told that to my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Mills) last session, and my impression at the present moment is that England imports between $45,(N(x)$ and $46,(K N)$. I suppose my hon. frient is prepared to say $15,(1) 0$ or or 17,000 .

Mr. MACDONALD (Hurom). Less than 12,000.

Mr. MoNEILL. My hom. frient is entirely mistaken, as the hon. member for Bothwell was last year, as he would find if he looks into the trade returns more carefully.
Mr. MaCDONALD (Huron). The Trade and Narigation Returns, then, are not correct ?

Mr. MeNEILL. It is the returns of the British Government that I am quoting from, and it will be foum that my statement is correct.
Mr. MomLLLEN. Does the hon. gentleman know that last year we took more horses from England than Fangland took from us?
Mr. MoNEILL. My hon. friend can look at the returns for hinself, and correct me if $I$ am incorrect; but I think it would be better if he would let me finish my rambling remarks in the meantime. I was just saying that the English market was developing, while, unfortunately, the market in the United States is very much the reverse. The demand in the United States for our products is falling away very rapidly. The principal farm product that was taken from us by the people of the United states was barley, and our exports of that product has fallen off within the last two or three years by considerably mone than half, irrespective of the McKinley Bill altogether. As my hon. friend ought to know, and as I suppose he does know, the farmers in the Western states are devoting much more attention to the cultivation of barley than they did a few years ago, with the result that they are raising a better class of barley than they did fommerly; aml the fact that the brewers of the Unitel states are now using an inferior quality of barley enables the farmers of the United States largely to supply the demand for barley there, and it is only a matter of a short time when our larley, with the exception of small guantities of the finest grades, will vanish from the United states market altogether. We have in the mother country, however, a market for our barley which, I am glad to say, is likely to prove much more valuable to us than the market in the United States ever did. I suppose I shall be told that howerer important or valuable it would le for Canda to have preferential treatment for our goods in the markets of the mother country, the mother country will never agree to it. I shall be toll that the mother country will never tax the food of her toiling millions-that is the farourite expression : and that she will never permit the trade of Canada, a mere contemptible fraction of her whole trade, to imperil her trade with the whole world. These are formidable objections, aml, with the permission of the House, I would like to say a word with regard to them. In the first place, ats to taxing the food of the toiling millions, there are two fallacies which are rapidly heing exposed in the mother country. The first is, that an actual increase in the price of wheat must necessarily increase the price of the loaf. The imposition of a small tariff of say tive shillings per quarter, it has heen asserted, would necessarily increase the price of the four-prund loaf. Well, it has lwen found by the test of actual experience, that an increase in the price of what to the amount of five shillings, and even more than five shillings, does not necessarily raise the price of the four-pound loaf to the extent of one farthing ; but furthermore, as the Chairman of the Council of the London Chamber of Commerce recently pointer out-and he is a sufficiently good authority, one would think, being at any rate a pronounced free trader. He said that in France and in Germany, the effect of the imposition of a small duty upon wheat had not been to raise the price of wheat at all. So much for the increase price of the loaf. The second fallacy which is being exposed in England is the fallacy that the cheap loaf for the workingman is necessarily the large loaf. That usen to le accepted as an axion. That fallacy has heen exposed as concisely, recently in England, hy a learding public man there, as it very well can be, when he said : Employment, not cheapness, is the large loaf for the labouring man; want of employment is the small loaf, or, I may add, no loaf at all. It is quite evident that themechanic having con stantemployment at gool wages, and with money in his pocket, can afforl to buy a large loaf even though it be a little dearer, but the unfortunate labouring man out of employment, with little or no money in his pocket, must ife content with a very small one, however cheap it may be. The labouring men and mechanics of Encland have come to understand this, that the first requisite is stearly employment and that cheapness comes second. They look abroad, and they see that the outlook for employment, and steady employment, for them is by nomeans bright. They see that one by one great markets into which their goods were admitted a few years ago are being closed against them.

Mr. DAVIEN (P.F.I.) Oh :
Mr. MoNeILL. I do not understand the inter. ruption of my hon. frient.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I would like to hear the truth of that statement.

Mr. MoNeILL. I wonder that the hon. gentleman should require any proof of the statement that the markets of France, (iermany, Russia and the Cnited States, and all the great civilized countries of the world are being closed against England at the present time. I suppose he knows better than Lord Salishury, but Lord Salishury says so. However, as I was stating, these markets are being closed, one by one, against the products of England, and the workingmen feel that they are unfairly handicapped in the industrial race; for while these markets are heing closed against the products of their industry, the products of these very foreign countries are being poured on the open markets of England. Now, perhaps, hon. gentlemen may be surprised if I tell them that they are being poured in upon the open markets, the products of foreign labour, almost to the extent of one-half the amount of manufactured goods that England sells to foreign countries. What do we see as the condition of things in England to-day? Take the condition of the greatest of all industries in England, that of agriculture, which employs two million hands as against one million hands employed by the textile industry, we see that the products of agriculture in England, aecording to MeCulloch's Mercantile Dictionary of 1845, and the official return of to-day have fallen off to-day to the extent of fifty millions sterling, and that there is an increase in the innportation of foreign agricultural products to the extent of eighty-four millions sterling. And what do we find in reference to manufactures? Do we find that there is such an incroased activity in manufacturing centres as to compensate for this desolating agricultural loss? No, we find nothing of the kind. We find, on the contrary, that the condition of things is most serious with regard to the manufacturing industries of England to-day. We find that this inroad of foreign goods is attacking the very staples of her industry. We find that her jute and linen imlustry, oue of her staples, has been attacked to this extent, that while last year Eng. land exported $$ 8,000,0000$ worth of manufactured goods, she imported actually $$ 10,100,000$ worth, or $$ 2,(M n, 0 \times 0$ more than they exported. We find that the export of cotton manufactured goods has fallen off. We find that in silks the industry has been ruined altogether.

Mr. LAURIER. Then England is going to adopt protection?

Mr. MeNEILL. I camnot tell the hon. gentleman What England is going to do.

Mr. LAURIER. It ought to.
Mr. MeNEILL. I am glad to hear my hon. friend coming round so rapilly to protectionist views. I am giving him facts and figures, and he says they lead hini to the conclusion that England ought to adopt protection. Those facts and figures are incontrovertible, and I hope the hon. gentleman will come over here and support as in our protective policy. But I was going to say, that, so far as woollen manufactures we concerned, we have the samestory to tell. The woollen manufactures importen into England last year amounted to over $\mathfrak{t} 11$,(M), $(x, C)$ sterling, and she ouly exported $\pm 18, \sigma(x),(x K)$ sterling, so that in that great staple of English industry, which has been world famed, we find the foreigner has sent into Fnglami more than half what she has exported. Then, as I have said, the silk industry has been amihilated. The silk looms of Coventry are standing idle, and the foreigner poured into Fingland last year $\$ 11,0 \times 0,1000$ sterling worth of silk manufactured goods. These facts and figures are producing theireffectsupon the minds of the penple of England and they are coming to the conclusion, many of them at least, that some remedy will require to be found for this state of things; and many are turning theireyes to the colonies and theoutlying possessions of the Empire. And what do they find? They find that while there has leen this extraordinary fallingaway in the markets of foreign countries for English manufactured goorls, in the colonies the very reverse has been the case. Even at the time when there was an increase of exports to the United States, to France to Cermany, to Belgium, and to Holland, who are our hest customers among foreign nations, while there was an increase in fourteen years from $\pm=1,0 \times 0,0 \times 0$ to $\pm 81,0 \times 0,0(0)$ sterling or one-seventh of the increase, during that time, of manufactured goods exported to these countries, during the same time there was an increase of from $\mathbf{t}^{\mathbf{t}} 22,(000,000$ to $\mathbf{t} \mathbf{4 2},(100,000)$ sterling or an increase of ten-elerenths of manufactured exports to the colonies. Let us look at this from unother point of view. Let us compare the United States and the five great powers of Europe with Canada and five of the great colonies of the Empire. We find that, while the Uniterlistates takes over of her population of English manufactured goods, Canada takes over 58 per head. While Austria takes 16 cents per heall, the West Indies takes $\$ 11.65$ per head. While Russia takes 31 cents per head, the Cape takes 23 per head. While Italy takes $\$ 1.35$ per head, New Zealand takes $\$ 26$ per head. While Germany takes $\$ 2.06$ per head, Victoria takes $\$ 31$ per head. While France takes $\$ 2.16$ per head, New Soath Wales takes $\$ 31.50$ per head. I do not think, in face of these facts and figures, it is very surprising that we should find Lord Salishury stating that the vital forces of the commerce of the Empire were to be found within the Empire itself, and it is too late in the day altogether to talk about the insignificant trade of Canada or the colonies in face of these figures. I will give an idea of the class of goods that the colonies take from England ly the following statement :-

I think it is impossible for any one to attempt to saty, in the face of those figures, that the trade of the colonies is so insignificant that England would not dream of sacriticing or imperilling any trade she now has for the sake of that colonial trade. I do not think that can be reasonably maintained. The truth of the matter is that this colonial trade is, as Lord Nalishury has said, the trade which gives the vital force to the whole trade of the Empire. Under these circumstances it is not unnatural that one should suppose, on first principles, that something would he done towards strengthening and developing this trade with the colonies by people in Fagland. I think I have said enough to give a primá farie reason for expecting such action to be taken, I but want to give more definite grounds for expecting such action. In the first place I want to give emphasis to the statement of Lord Salisbury that he regards the trade with the colonies as the vital force on which depeuls the whole trade of the Empire. I would also call attention to a newspaper called the London Timex, and I would especially call the attention of my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Mills) to this, because he said last session, when a similar matter was under discussion, that he had taken the Timex for 20 years and could not lelieve that such an article could apptar in that newspaper. I will read a few lines from a leading article in the Times, and I hope they will impress the mind of my hon. friend :
"If the federal idea wakes progress among our colonies, the desire to remain in the Empire of Great Britain vill only give place to an equally strong sentiment in favour of retaining Great Britain in their Empire. Still, there can be no doubt as to their wisdom and even the necessity of strengthening either sentiment byattaching substantial benefits to the union.

- Sir Gordon Sprigs teil us that free trade is not a fetish in the colonies, and that the theories of the text booksare not allowed to stand in the way of any fiseal measure that seems advantagecus. As to the text books they are get ting somewhat out woru even here. Our mudern ecouomists have eo many qualificationst to make in the fine square cut doctrines of the older schnol that the science is rapidly becoming unrecognizable.;
So says the London Time:-
"There is still a considerable amount of fetish worship. but the ideas upon which any comuercial union must rest will not in tuture incur the furions and unreasoning hostility that would have grected them 24 years ago.
This is all from the London Times, I wish to tell the hon. member for Bothwell-"It is getting to be understond that free trade is made for man, not man for free trade, and any change that may be proposed will have a better chance of being discussed upon their own merits, rather than in the light of high and dry theories backed by outcries against the thin edge of the wedge. The British Empire is so large and so coupletely selli-supporting that it could very well afford for the sake of a serious political kuin, to surround itself with a moderate fence."

Just think of that -

" There would of course be some economic disadrantage in a customs union, but if a larger political advantage can be gained, there is no sound reason that we know of Why the transaction should not be regarded like any other in the light of expediencs."
Now, Sir, when we find an organ of public opinion holling the unigue position that the London Time. holds among the journals of the world, a position of dignity and influence which no other journal holds, publishing an article of that kinil, we have pretty good evidence that a wonderful change is passing over the spirit of the British people with reference to this question.
Mr. MIILLS (Bothwell). If my hon. friend will allow me, I would point out that there is a diffierence between the line of argument of the Lomion Times and the one he is now addressing to us. The London Times takes an economic position with a political advantage; my hon. friend is contending for this union on account of its ecomomic adrantages.
Mr. MeNEILL. I am simply pointing out this fact, that a proposition which a few years ago would not have been entertained for a moment, in favour of which a letter har not been inserted in the columms of the Timtw, is now, I might almost say, advocated by the London Times itself-at all events it is not opposed, for some reason or other-I care not what. I say that is a proof that an enormous change has passed over the minds of the people of England. But further than that, we find that since the commencement of last year there has leen an organization established in the mother country for the express purpose of adrocating this policy which I am attempting to place before the House; and we find that while there were but a few memhers of that organization when we met last in this Chamber, there are now over tive thousand members of the United Empire Trade League, and among them there are orer three humbred members of British Parliaments. Is that not another evilence that there is a great change passing over the minds of the people of England in reference to this question: But further, I wish to call the attention of the House to the fact that some years ago when the representatives of the great (conservative party in Jinglanl. the mling party in England, met together in comvention, a resolntion in fatour of such a policy as this was propmsed. There were a thousiand relegates present, and out of the whole number only twelve were fomit to hohl up their hamels against this proposition. I want to siy furthermore that only on the dith of November last another great convention of the Conservative party of the Enited Kinghom was held in Birmingham, and at that emnention this resolntion Was nomenl:

- That the principles adrocated loy the I'nited Empire Trade League. favouring the extension of commeree upon a preferential basisthroughont all parts of the british Empire, will be of the highest collective and individual adsantare : and further, that the provisions of any trenties: imposins limitations upon the full development of trade Fetween the Enited Kinglom and other parts of the British Kimpire should be abruxated.
"And that this conterence express the carnest expectation that Her Majesty's Govermment will see their way clear before the next electoral campainn, to make some decisive decla ration of their intention to endearour to promote mutually-favoring customs,"rrankements bet ween the colonies and the home country."
That resolution was moved at this great meeting of one of the great parties of Englanl, held in Birmingham so late as the month of November last, and there were only five men in the whole meeting who were prepared to oppose it : and the Lomion Timins, in its report of the metting, says that the resolution was carried amid a scene of great enthusiasmand much cheering. Is that an evilence, or is it not. that there is a strong borly of opinion in England in favour of a prolicy of this kind: Sir, I wish to alduce still further evidence in suppert of What I ams salying, and I wish to call the attention of this Howse to what oceurred last gear in Dublin at at meeting of the Associated Chambers of commerce for the Cnited Kinglom, at which were present men representing trade and industry from all parts of the mother comutry. The same matter was hrought up there and the same sulject was discussed. A resolution had been prepared by the Iomion Chamler of Commerce in fatour of such a policy, a resolution had been prepared by the south of Neotland Chamber of (ommerce in favour of such a policy, and these two resogations were blended into one, which wats moved hy the chaiman of the conncil of the Iamion (hamber of commerce itself. This gentleman, in getting up to move the resolution, lescribed himself as an avowed free trader. Now, here is what this atowed free trater satys:
"One of the chief things that our interests demand is that, so far as possible, we shall have open market:. If we cannot get them atnong foreign nations may we not take steps to secure them among the colonial dependencies as the price of concessions to them? I concede that the policy which is suggested will inevitably involve great sacrifices. It will involve the sacrifice. in some meagure. of the free trade policy which has been characteristic of this country in the past."
That from an atowed frectrader, and the chairman of the council of the Lomion Chamber of Commerce. He goes on to say:
"It will involve on the part of the colonies some concession in respect of their protective tariffs that have so far. with one exception, marked their career. That sacrifice minst be great la the cage of growing colonies, in the early stase of whose existence Stuart Mill was understood-I dc not say he said it-to admit that protective duties might be usefully adopted to establish new industries. It may be that sacritice will have to be male by the consumer. Do not let us think that this work can be achieved out of nuthing. * * * With the duties impused on corn in fiermany and France the price of wheat hat not advanced. but ąuite contrars."
However, he says:
" Very many commercial representarives here would have to contemplate the raw material-wom-heing advanced in price.
It just oreurs to me to mention now, what I hat intended to mention previonsly, that so far as the danger of Fngland impensing a tax on the raw material of weol, is concerned, it would seem when one looks into the tigures, ats if that womhl mot the a very terrible malertaking after all : seeing that out of the $\mathrm{t}^{\circ} \mathbf{Z}^{-}$,(NN),(KN) worth which she imports, she only imports $t: 3,($ KN,$(K K)$ worth from toreign comitries. All the rest she imports from her cons Empire, and therefore it weold lee a small matter, the imposing of at buty on foreign wool. He contimuts:
" But the prosperity of colonies might be augmented to suchan extent that the result might he a reduction instead of an alrance * * The lays are a little over in which the chief object in existence was competition and cheapness. That was the doctrine of a school of very high authority, the sehool that gave us free trade. But. men are giving their thoughts to wider aspects, and they no longer beliere that produce by competition-emabling some men scarcely to live, with mo leisure, and under Euch conditions that life is searcely worth living-is the highest objective of social existence. The feeling is growing in the minds of the people that the object of national existence is not the accumulation of wealth, but the wider one of the welfare of mankinl. If it be true that in place of mere competition we can put before the country a noble nnd practical ideal which can be truly realized, then I think even sacrifice: may be justified for such permanent and good ends as the weltare and continuity of the supremacy, commercial and otherwise, of our great Empire. * What is the commercial aspect of the Empire? I say without hesitation, that the colonies and dependencies of England are those who give us not only the most secure portion of our trade, but contribute the largest proportion of it taken as a class. * * I do think by a differential customs tariff, based upon allowances by the colonies, our own ratesgiving our kith and kin advantages in their commerce with us, you will be able to found a custous league which will be able te fulfil all the requirements of their existence, and enable them to leal with the mother country on terms of the mast reciprocal advantage."
This is, as I have said. from the statement of the chairman of the council of the London (hamber of Commerce, an arowed free trader. That resolution was put to the meeting and that resolution was carried unanimously, and the remarks which I have read were received with rounds of applatise when the speaker resumed his seat. I think I have given evidence sulficient to show, Mr. Speaker, that there is a very strong and a very influential boily of opinion in England in favour of the policy which I am himbly endeavouring to advocate here to-day. I think it is impossible for any fair-mindel man to doulit for a moment that there is a reasonable probability of our obtaining that preferential treatment in the markets of England which would Ihe so beneticial to us. Not only to us would it be leneficial, but it would be enormously leneficial to Eingland also. If we are right in supposing it would be beneficial to us, then every man in (ananla would be alle to buy more from Fingland than he does to-day. At the present time the trade of the colonies-I am speaking of the purchase by the colonies of the manufactured goonls of Eingland-is equal to consilerably more than half the amount that is paid to her for her mamufactured gonols by foreign countries. The amount which foreign countries pay to Eagland for mannfactured gools amount which the colonies purchased from England so that you see it is very much more than half. As I have sail, every man in the colonies will be able to buy more from England, and not only so. but England would have a preference in our market, and therefore much more will be purchased from England than is at present purchased, even smpmsing the comblition of our citizens was mot Is.uefited by this preferential treatment. However. that would be a very superticial view to take of this matter, it would ise a very superticial view to take of the adrantage that would acerne to England from this policy, becalnse it camoot be doubtel that there would be a greatly increased flow of inmigration towards these fatoured regions of the world that enjoyed the enormons advantage of preferential treatinent. in what is incomparahly the greatest market of the world. We might naturally expect that the population of the Empire wonld increase at a rate for which we have heretofore no exampl at all. The advantage would act and react, and we must recollect, Mr. Speaker, that we are all of one Empire and that each part of this Empire is able to supply the other part, and all the other parts, with some of those things they require. I am not one of those who think that the interests of this comtry must contlict with the interests of the Bmpire. 1 an one of those who believe that our interests are inextricably woren together. I maintain, Nir. that the mall whosays that the interests of Canala must contlict with the interests of the mother comitry who guards the interests of her offspring all the world over, I say that the man who says so and who thinks so, in my opinion takes a very narrow view of a great guestion. I say, Sir, that the man who goes up and down this country, or who goes up and down Englanl, making the statement that the interests of Canada must conflict with the interests of England, is no true friend. anll can be no true friend of British comection. I saty, Sir, that the man who preaches such a pernicions doctrine as that is seeking with subtle hand to undo the golden links of loyalty and love that bind the Empire together. I care not who he le, whether he lee a Keformer or a Conservative, whether he le lirit or Tory, Canadian or Englishman, he is, as I have ssid, an enemy of the British Eimpire whether he knows it or not. No, sir, I sity that the interests of Canada and England do not conflict in the true sense, in the statesmanlike sellse. The interests of the provinces of Canala conflict in a restricted sense. The interests of the counties in the province contlict in a restricted sense, the interests of the cities and towns and villages of the counties, conflict in a restricted sense, the interest of the individual tradesmen in the villages conflict in a restricted sense. Even the interests of the individual members of a family may conflict in a restricted sense, and gentlenen of the medical profession tell us that the interests of the members of our own bodies conflict in a restricted sense. But, Sir, just in the same sense as the interests of the provinces do not contlict with the interests of the Dominion as a whole, so is it true that the interests of the different provinces of the Empire do not conflict with the interests of the mother country. I wonder what my hon. friend would hare thought if the great and gome man who so very recently passed away fromamongst us: when he oceupied the position which my hon. frienl tills now so worthily and with such satisfaction I am sure to both sides of this Honse: I woider what my hon. friend would have thought if that gool man hard risen in his place and hat said as my hon. friend stid: The interests of Einglamd must contlict with the interests of (canada, and when that day comes my guiding star, and my sole guiding star. shal! be the interests of (canada, first and last and all the time, and not the interests of Eingland at all: I womder what he would hate thought if the Hom. Alexander Mackenzie had risen in his plate in this House and said: The day must come when the interests of the Province of Gutario will emilict with the interests of the Province of Quelnec. and when that day comes. my guiding star, and my sole guiding star, shall he the interests of my own Province of Gutario, anl not the interests of Quebec at all: I womder if the hom. gentleman would have thought that that was a very wise, salutary or statesmanlike utterance on the part of Mr. Mackenzie: I think, sir, that wothing eould le conceived letter calculated to destroy the harmonious conditions which happily exist bet ween the provinces - to show distrust ind diseordamong them, and to shake Comfeleration to its centre. than such utterances as that. delivered hy politicians of weight and intluence. Mr. speaker, the spirit and the frame of mind which induces such an utterance: is foreign to the spirit of British institutions am! alien to the genins of the British race. Not thas, Nir, was the British constitution huilt up. Not thas have British institutions been male so successful and so salutary. Not thus would the nest British statesmanship deal with the prol. lem, should a sall day dawn when the interests of Eugland and of her peerless daughter seem to contlict. Sc, sir ; not thus, hat ly wise comcessiom, hy moneration in coumsel, amil hy reasmalibe compromise in the interests of loth these comentries, whose interests are so inextricably interwowen, woold a solution of the difficulty be sought and ohtained. But my hom. friend says that woulh not lee his policy at all. He says that in that day he would not consider the interests of England at all, but only the interests of Chada : he would leave the people of Eagland to look after their own interests. I think, Mr. Speaker, you will arree with me that this is a new departure in Canalian politics--a leparture altogether at variance with the principles which we have always understosel to underly the political life of this country. This is a platform which I venture to say will not be approved by the loyal people of Canadia. It is very natural that my hon. friend shomid have leen drawn into this position, since he happened to be drawn into a sapport of the policy which of late he has been alvocating. Hardly anything else conld have been expected : lut I venture to soy that if it were possible that such a policy could be adopted and it were persevered in, one result only could flow from it. The children to be lorn of it are discorl, disruption and disaster, imminent and terrible peril for Canada, and the disruption of the Empire for Fingland. That, Sir, is plain. It is surely so plain that a child can see it; because if we announced it to be our policy that we will not consider the interests of Fincland at all. Fingland will therely lee ahsolved from any obligation to consider our interests at all: anil thus. at one fell swowp. in a paroxysm of political insamity, if I may say so. We Hing away all the moral support, all the glory, the prestige, the might, the armies and the ironclads of the matchless Empire of whi h we form a part -.. pretige, might, armies and ironclands, Mr. Speaker, which cost us not so much as one poor cent hot which are to all intents and purposes ats truly and absolutely at the service of every man, womain and chihl whi shat to-morrow morning walk on the streets of Ottawa, as they are at the service of any one of those who thronged at the throbbing heart of the Empire a few short months age to mingle their griefs with ours for the death of one who. how. ever highly we may appreciate his semices here in (anala, foumd them if possible even more highly valued hy the oremost statesmen of the metropolis of the worlil. No, sir, we are one Empire. We have emmon interests, and mothing loat political insanity can drive us asumier: and I for my part an convinced that if this Honse passes the resolution which I have placed before it. and if our action is followed, as I have no doult it will lee followed. hes similar action on the par of the other colonies of the Empire the day will very shorty come When we shall find such prosperity reigning within our Empire as no man has yet lletamed of.

Mr. IFNJARIDINS (LIIslet). Mr. Spater. I have accepted with pleasure the honomr of seconding the motion of my hom. friend from North Bruce (Mr. MeNeill). I am induced to doso by the importance of the question to which this resolution asks the serions consideration of this Honse, and also on account of the good which, I have no dondit. a calm, temperate, intelligent and earnest discussion of this sulject will fos to the country. There is mo dombt, Nir. that whatever may be our views as to the practicalility of the proposition. or the difticulties of working it out, that it is a very tit subject for lelsate, and that it calls for the patriotic consideration of all the well-wishers of the prosperity of Canadia. But, Nir, I think it is proper topreface the few remarks to which I intend to solicit the kinl hearing of this House, with some olservations on the relative importance of internal and external trade relations. Whilst I fully appreciate the importance of extemled foreign trable relations, and recognize that it is the duty of this Parliament to do all it can to extend them, I cannot refrain from noticing that in the discussion of the sulbject, either in this House, in the press or on the public plat. form, many speakers and writers are apt to lose sight of the paramount importance of internal trade compared with foreign commerce. If we were to juige the opinions of some of them ly their utterances, we should be almost driven to the conclusion that they almit of no other criterion of the country's prosperity than the moie or less rapid increase of its external tranle. With due respect to their way of thinking, with due regard to the weight of their opinion, I cannot helpsaying that I consider such a one-sided view of so complicated a question as entirely erroneous. True it is, that especially since the beginning of this century; the foreigncommerce of the nations of the world has very much increased. The cause is not far to seek nor difficult to tind. This happy result, which contributed wo much to the progress, the comfort and the intellectual and moral adrancement of humanity. is the natural outcome of the marvellous development of the means of production, and the consequent increase of the consuming power, and also of the wonderful development of transportation facilities. But if external trade has so much increasel, on the other hand internal trade has wondrously developel under the powerful intluence of the same leneticial canses. In my humble opinion, wes would We taking a wrong view of the gluestion if we were to neglect our duty to internal trade, and devote all our care and attention to external trade. The puhlic gonel demands from us an equally intelligent effort to foster the two great classes of commercial intercrurse, aml not the short-sighted policy of sitcrificing the former to the latter. Statistical science has progressed a great deal of late. Man's mind is apt to get enthusiastic at the sight of hig figures. telling the story of the development of the foreign tranle of the nation. and one so carried away is liable to forget the still more interesting ami important increase of commercial intercourse among the various parts of his own country. A few ciases in foint will not he out of place. When We real. for instance, of the external trade of the United States and ascertain that the great republic to the swuth of us exports nearly Si(MK), (MN), (MA) worth of its prohlucts ammally, we are somenhat appatlen at the hugeness of these figures, hut our icleas of the foreign commerce of our neighlours become solsered somewhat when we reflect that it is small imleed compared with the volume of internal trade. While theexportand import trade combined in roumd figures. the internal trade of the republic twenty times as much. The ssame thing can le told of the other leading nations of the worlif-of France. of Rassia, of Ciermany, of Austria, and of Italy. The country where the disproportion of external trande to internal trade is less marked is Eingland, and this for obvions reasons. England is a great hive of industry, and will continue to le in spite of the foreign competition getting keener every day. It manufactures for all the worli, and hats developen an external trade much larger than any country of the glole. In 1890), its foreign traile of the population, while the C'nited States have only a foreign trade equal to $\mathbf{s i n}_{2}^{-}$per heal. Thus the foreign tranle of England, compared with that of the United States, is nearly four times as large. If we return to (anada, our foreign trade represents an arerage of $\mathbf{s i 2} 20,0 \mathrm{MO}, 0 \mathrm{ON})$ per year. This, for a population of $. \pi,(M O)(X N)$, gives $\mathbf{x} 42$ per head, which is fifty per cent more than the United States. Hon. gentlemen opposite are continually discussing the question of our trade relations, with the view of increasing our trade with the United States. They point to the marvellons grow th of the United States, but when they speak of the external trade of the United States as compared with that of Canada, we have the means of answering them ly showing that our foreign trade is nearly fifty per cent larger per head than that of the United States. Such a large foreign trale for Canada with a population of $\mathrm{i},(\mathrm{OH}),(\mathrm{OW})$ is a pretty satisfactory figure, but when we come to our internal commercial intercourse, wee find that it is at least fifteen times greater than our foreign trale, showing the great importance of cour internal trale. I need not enlarge further on the relative importance of the two great classes of commercial intercoursie, because the history of Canala for the last fifty years conclusively proves that the perple of our country and their representatives in Parliament have iluly appreciated the great national importance of developing onr internal trade. Hence our railway policy, the improvement of our inland navigation, the protection given to our manufacturing, mining and agricultural interests. But, Mr. Speaker, admitting that it is the first chuty of Parliament to do all it can for the development of internal trade relations, of course I fully appreciate also the importance of external trade, and the necessity of eloing our leest to increase our trate relations with as many as pmsiblle of the nations of the word. I need not go into a historical sketch of our efforts to develop, our foreign trale. Those efforts have leen mainly lirected towards the Enitedstates as well as towards England. The result of ourovertures to the United States is well known. I amonly repeating what is known to every member of this House and every citizen of this comntry, when I say that it is no fanlt of ours if our trate relations with the: United States are in the position they now ocenpy. We have been fairly doing all that a mation, with due respict to itself, call dor. to induce a foreign power to improve commercial intercourse. We have clone our share. Cinfortunately, we have not met with a hearty response from bur neighbours to the south of us. They have their own reasons for it. I am not one of those who believe that the United states, or the authorities of the United Niates for the time being, have taken this course of action merely for the purpose of injuring (anada. They have their owninternal policy. They have their own way of looking at their interest, and still I lelieve and hope that, with deliberate consideration, with time, when the question has lreen more fully discussed over there and public opinion has matured, the day will yet come when ue will le in a position to oltain a fair measure of reciprocity with the United States. Fortunately, now we know under what conditions the United States would be likely to entertain the proposal of the scheme submitted to this House and to the country ly hoh. gentlemen opposite, ani, unfortunately, the knowledge of these conditions is such that, in homour bound to our own conntry, we cannot accept them. The three great objections to extended trade relations with the United States according to the system of hon. gentlemen opposite. unrestricted reciprocity. I will repeat though they are now well known. They are dischimination against Eingland, a common sea-hoard tariff, and the conseyuence for us of taxing directly our population to raise the revenue necessatry to carry on the (iovernment of the country. As to the tirst point, discrimination ayainst England we cannot grant. Moreover, it depends also on the supreme and paramount authority of the British Empire, of the Crown, of the Imperial Parliament, and, even if some amongst us were tempted to grant this condition to the United Ntates, they would meet this great obstacle from the Imperial Parliament, which would naturally lead them to ask either for separation from England, or to abandon this wild scheme forever. But I will go as far as this, that, even if England would agree to discrimination against herself, (anada could not agree to a treaty of unrestricted reciprocity which, would impose upon us a common sea-lmatd tariff and direct taxation. These two conditions depend only on ourselves, aml these two combitions we cannot for any consideration in the world accept. Whilst we are in such a prosition in regarol to our trade relations with the Cnited states, and waiting for the time which I hope will come, perhapss somer than hon. gentlemen opposite would like it to come. We are not to stanil still. and it is our duty to do our hest for the extension of our foreign trade with the other nations of the earth. We must not look only to this pretended natural market of the United States, ass if Canala was not able to trade with any other nations of the world. We have alrealy a trale with other nations, with France, 1 iermany, Belgium. Spain. the West Indies, and we are developing at foreign trate. which is increaning every year. Our hest efforts must in. slirected in this way, hut of comrse the greatest market for (atnata is. has heen, and will he in the future, the market of England. It is in this market, it is with direat Britain that we can expect to greatly develop our foreign trale. Iatst year we had an external trade with England to the extent power of incat Britain is a guarantee to us that we: can tind in this market an increasing opening for the products of this comatry. We know very well that the population of fireat Britain as a whole is increasing rapidly. It has mome that dombled simee the leginning of this century, when it starterl. if my memory serves the well. with alonut lis.(MN),(KN) people in the three kingoloms. and that population amounted in 1891 to about $38,($ Mn $)$, MAN people. The increase is mpid. but of course fireat Britain canmot expect to increase its agricultural pronlacts to a similar extent. It is rather lecreasing in that respect. as was proved a little while ago hy my hon. friend from Bruce (Mr. McNeill). The duantity of agricultural pronlucts required hy (ireat Britain will be rapidly increasing, and we may exprect by the development of our great NorthWest to be able to supply the larger guantity of the needs of this great market. I almit the difticulties which are in the way. The hon. mover of the resolution and myself cannot expect this question to le settled at once. I know very well the objection of the British people generally to the taxation of food pronlucts. I have real a great deal about the agitation in reference to, the corn laws, hut a great change has taken place since. The means of transport have been very much improved. (ireat wheat areas have leen frought under cultivation and more are, in a few years, to le brought under cultivation. For my part, I have no doubt that very som the British market could be supplied with all the food pronlucts it repuires from within the British Bupire itself without increasing the cost to the British consumer. I hase this opinion on the know leige, I may say, of every one of the capabilities of our North-West. But, whatever may le our clifferent opinions on this point, I think all must agree that it is very important to let Gieat Britain know what are the view's of this Parliament on the subject, and that is one of the reasons that indaced me to second the motion, and to join with my hon. friend (Mr. McNeill) in asking this House to vote for this proposition.

After Pecess.

Mr. DENJARDINS (LIslet). Mr. Speaker, when you left the Chair at six oclock, I was remarking that whatever may be our different views on the question of trade with England, and of the preferential adrantages which the mother comatry could grant to her colonies, at all events, there is certainly no inconvenience, and there may le a geat deal of goonl, in letting cireat Britain know the feeling of this House and the comery on this yuestion. I know the several objections which our friemls opposite are likely to make to the proposition, and which we have often heard from them. Their principal objection is this : That it is no use to seek markets so far away when we have the greatest market at our doors, the Unitel States. On this point, they often speak to us of what they call continental free trale, and they say that our first object, indeed our only ol. ject, ought to the to cultivate trade with the comntries of this continent. Well, siir, I look at this as a very erroneous idea, and, for my part. I sincerely and earnestly believe it would be a very lad policy indeed to place one continent in perpetual commercial antagonism to another. This is contrary to the history of the whole world from legiming to end. Just as nations have always tried to increase their commercial intercourse with one another, the history of the world has continuously shown that the different continents have tried to develop commercial relations ietween them. This was the calse between Europe. Asia anl Africa, before the discovery of this comtinent. Sir, when bohl navigiturs for the first time went on the open se:a, and for the first time braved the fury of the ceean waves, were they not looking oit for increased commerce letween Earope, Asia and Africa? And when Columbus stated on his momentous expeditim, was he not in search of a short passage to lapan and China for the parpose of fostering trale bet ween the castern and western continents of the ohl world? When he came across the seas to the new land of America, which was then the insuperable burrier to his enthusiastic hope of navigating the ocean wer to the Chinese Empire--which is now accomplished by the Camadian Pacitic Railway across this continent-(Columbus little expected that the time would come when American public men would maintain the astounding proposition that it would Ire conducive to the words prosperity and peace to place one continent in a position of commercial hostility to the other. It is not after this progressive nineteenth century has seen the building of the suez (anal, the reeaus traversed by gigantic steamers exchanging the natural aml manufactured prolucts of the different nations of the world, after railways are leading civilization into unknown wildernesses, that continents can be led to adopt such a wild proposition. Sir, it is not after we have, at great cost, established a magnificent highway through our country, not only for the purpose of our internal clevelopment, hint also for the purpose of providing Europe and Asia with easier, cheaper and more rapil means of commercial intercourse-the real north-west passage which was long but vainly sought for by daring explorers, and at last given to the world by the political foresight of our statesmen and the manly courage of our free people--it is not, I say, after this womlerful achievement that we can aceept the erroneous idea of placing the whole continent in a prsition of perpetnal commercial antagonism and rivalry with the rest of the world. Such a policy would le retracing our steps, and trying, almost, togolnack to the times when thenew world was unknown. It is a dangeroms utopia to lelieve that you can isplate one continent trom another : even if you try to do it you can never succeed. The forces of nature are constantly at work against such a preposterons scheme. Steam and electricity have overcome distance, have compuered the fury of the crean waves, and have given us facilities of marine and inlame transportation whichare daily drawing the different parts of the world together. Oceans no longer divide continents hut rather unite them. By the levelopements which have taken place on the continent of America during the last century, we can form an inlea of what the future ought to lre. Bint when I hear this talk alont comtinental tradeas opposed to. commercial relations with the continent of Europe. and when I remember that the two continents of America, just as they are now, have alrealy a tutal trade with the continents of the old world of over two milliards of dollars, I womder how hom. gentlemen opposite can maintain th, this House such a proposition as that. However, the guestion of the extension of our foreign trade will. of conrse. continue to call for the very serions comsile atation of this Homse and comutry. The hom. leader of the $O_{p l}$. sition and his friends have ontee more favoured us lately with their matured thonghts on the sulbject. They have two principal aspirations: the first. in their opinion, is of great practical importance : the second is a more or less remote possibility. They clam that the time has arrived when we should beallowed by England to negotiate our commercial treaties entirely free from any kind of control hy the Imperial Parliament. By taking this important step in the direction of complete political likerty, they aspire to national independence. These aspirations the leader of the Opposition has orenly arowed on the floor of this House, and on the pub)lic platform, in elopuent and enthasiastic words. Sir, with regarl to the power of negotiating treaties, I need not on this occasion ilwell on the very gexl reisoms which must induce us not to press for that claim. Although I will have just now, from a certain point of view, (1) congratulate the hon. memler for bathwell (Mr. Mills) upon his al:anced ideas in reference to the very enlarged measure of self-government which he would so much like Canala to oltain, he will no donlt, kindly allow ne to call his cordial attention to the fact that very often the philosopher is aheal of his times. In the daily activity of his mind, in the large sphere of his thoughts, he is very properly alloweel this latitude of action, men of the times leing all the while thankful to hinn for the light he may throw on the future. If such, however, is the part of the philoswhiter, such is not the rile of the statesman. Of course the statesman is also bound to look to the future, hut he must prepare it by practical statesmanship during the present. Though the hon. leader of the Opposition aspires to, national independence, he will not pretend that this question is within the range of practical politics. If I pause to motice these views of hon. gentlemen opposite, it is for the very plesant reason that they are at last obliged to couple the expression of their ampirations with that of their maturend opinion, that we lave attained to such a wonderful degree of 1 progress that we are fit for mational independence. We know the feeling of the hom. leader of the Opprsition. He deplores that in this country after ein years of trial of the ©ystell of feleration. that, on going aroum the conntry. while he hears a great deal of pride of rice and ereed. yet he sees or hears very little of pride of nationality, I will join issue with the hont gentleman on this point as on many others. I sincerely lelelieve, Mr. Speaker, contrary to what hais been said hy the hon. gentleman, that, for the last $2: 3$ years, and particularly for the last 14 years. since the return of the Conser rative party to power, there has leen rapidly developing in this comntry that pride of nationality which the hom. leader of the Oppssition. for the tirst time in his life. perhaups. was kiuld enough to tell us, the other day, he was longing for. I also join issue with the hon. sentleman on ansther point. I do not deplore the pride of race aud creed in the Dominion of Canala, lout what 1 do deplore is the fanaticism and pre julices of race and creel, and they are two very iifferent feelings. Providence has so decidel that on this free soil of Cantada difterent creeds and mationalities are to live together in happiness, and in contentment to work out their great destiny. For my part, 1 lelieve that the Eaglish Camalian, the Irist' Canadian, the scotel Canadian and the French Camalian can properly cherish and revere the molle and patriotic deeds of the nations from which they sprung. and, at the same time. be not the less devoted are the less loyal to the lat. Iof their liith or of their alloption. for whose prosperity. grandenr and humour it is their sacrend duty to work and to kattle. But. Mr. Speaker, if we have todeplore that perlaps there lingers around the comutry tho mucl of national fanaticism aurl sectional prejurices. are we not fairly entitled to say that hon. gentlemen oppusite are responsible for this deplorable state of things: Have not their efforts for the last -., years tembel to create amd to stimulate this fanniticisisn and these sectional prejudices against Comferleration: The hom. the leater of the Opposisition went a little further. He has been given of late to lofty aspirations, and he nolonger finds that colomial citizenship, is sutficient for hime, or that it ompht to 1 ne sutticient for the people of this comum ry. $\mathrm{H}_{e}$ aspires to natimal independence. We, on this side of the House. have lreell lattling for the last -2) years, audespecially for the last few years against the efforts of hom. gentlemen opposite, and it is cettainly very pleasiut to hear, after these years of denials, anil of lamentation on the ruinons state of the comutry, that these gent lemen are now ohliged top proclaim that Canala has sor much progressed and developed that the world is to prepare to welcome into the society of nations a new Inonn independent peeple with all the promises of strength, of activity. imill of intelligence. Xow, Mr. speaker, I wouli like to know ly what miracle the hon. memivers fur (quelece East (Mr. Liurier) and for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) have sullilenly arisen from the slough of desponal to this unflincling enthusiasn which they exhihit. I woull ask why is it that looking with hope and fondness at the lright prolitical horizm of Canama, the hon. leader of the Opposition is alle to, lehold with enthusiasu! the dawn of our national independence. Sir, it is because for the last 301 years the $u$ orh has witnessed the untiring effiorts of our free people to work out the designs of Providence in this grand land allotted to them for their inheritance. It is lecanse we have realized this great union of the prorinces stretching from ocean to ocean, and embracing half a continent full of resources and populated ly a people full of contilence in the future. It is lecause we have loumid the different provinces more closely together, , a vast network of railways, ly improved inland natigation. liy increased intellectual interconuse. ly developed friemlship, by reciprocal fair-play and respect for race and creed. Aul it is also leciuse we have given the grand example to the world of a yenerous, hiyh -minde. and lileral practice of religions, civil amil political liberty: It seems to me that through the dawn of this rising sum of imlepemlence, as perceived by hon. gentlemen opposite, we all call admire with it very legitimate pride that the wave of fanaticism and sectional prejudices is rapidly reeeding lefore the adrance of progress, leaving in full view all over the length aud lireath of this wide Dowinion the: landmarks of our past nolle work, and the mumistakalle evidence of wor future national greatness. I am sure, Mr. Speaker, that I wice the sentiment of the large majority of the people of this comintry when I express my earnest t elief that it is not aulvisable to mowlify in any such way our present political status. But whatever changes inay le reserved for ins in the future, I hopre that. whether as one of the brightest genss of the Britisht Fmpire, or assa power ful ally, Canada will forever tee the devoted, the logal, the grateful offspring of the great. the glorions. the dear oll muther country.
Mr. hates. Mr. sureaker, I do not rise for the purpuse of making any extemled or protracted renarks on the question now under the consider: tion of the Honse ; but lefore a ' great imprortance-exceeding in importance, I thinik, any that has come before this Parliament dharing its present session--is disposed of, I wimuld like lriefty to place on record my views concerning it. In the first place, I think it omly proper and right that I should extemd my congratulations tol the hom. membler for Nirth Bruce (Mr. Mc:Xeill) who intromucel this resollution to the Howse, for 1 lelieve he is entitled to, the congratulations annd the thauks of the Homse for having brouglit lefore us a suljeet which hats, or at lewist ought tow have, lifteit the House for a time ont of the rut of party discoussion into which it is ter apt to fall : aml 1 think he is deserving of vur congratulations; also, for hating intronloced it in so athle and well consileredi a sipeech as he has made. I would also like to express the surprise that I have felt at not hearing the lion. leader of the Opposition or any of the hon. gentemen prominent on the other sille of the House. express their views.mn this gulestion. In a maitter of such great importance, a matter of policy, one would maturally have expected to hear the views of the elimulunt and humourahle leader of Her Majesty's loyal Oppusi tim.
Mr. MILLS (Ponthwell). Of the fioverment.
Mr. HAZEX. No doult we will hear from the leader of the (iovernment later on. I would alsis, haveexpected that the hon. gentlemenon the Opposition benches would not have let the discussion of this question be taken up wholly hy speaker after speaker on this side of the House, but that they themselves would have taken part in it and have given us their views either as individuals or as an Opposition. However, on thisoceasion hon. gentlemen opposite have seen tit to pursue the prolicy of silence. There is an old proverh to the effect that spech is silver and silence is gollen. Probably it is to follow out the truth of this proverl, that hon. gentlemen opposite sit still and mute. That is not the course usually pursued by hon. gentlemen "pposite. It is not the comse pursued by the hom. member for North Wellington (Mr. NcMullen), or liy the hon. member for West Elgin (Mr. Casey) or hy the hon. member for (Queens, P. F.I. (Ar. Davies) or hy many other hon. gentlemen on that sile of the House, who gemerally give us their views on all pulilic questions whether they are great or small. I would naturally have expecterl, alowe all things, that the hom. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills), who a few eveningsage entertained this House with a most classical and atcademic essay of the question of our treaty rights, wonld not have been backward in giving us the benetit of his experience and alvice on this question, which is of fat greater importance. We are lenomd to believe, Mr. Spaker, that the hon. gentlemen occupying henches to your left hase come to the conchasion that it is not alvisible at the present time to make their views known to the comitry on a matter of this importance. hout that it is more prulent to wait and sec how the proposition is received hy the pulaice Inefore they letine their position upin it. Now, the resolntion which has leen moved hy the hon. member for North Bruce, is one to which I think, from a ('anarlian standpoint. very little if any exception can he taken. That eesolution is to the effect :
" That if and when the Parliament of Great britain and Irelamil admits Canadian products to the markets of the Enited Kinglom upon more favourathe terys than it accords to the products of foreign countrice. The Parliament of Canada will be prepared to nccord Eorresponding adyantages by a reduction in; the duties it imposes upon Pritish mianufactured goods." Lowking at it from the purely (amadian stamponint it appears to me that this is a proposition to which no man in Canada, I care not what his party leaning may he, can offer any serions objection: and I think it will le generally almitted in this country that it would fe an alvantage to the farmers, the fishermen, the lumbermen and the miners of Camala if we were able to seml our pronlucts to age of say 10 per cent against the proshacts of foreign comotries, while we gave direat Pritain a corresponding advantage of 10 per cent over the United states and other foreign countries in the manufactured goods she sent to us. Any hon. gentleman who has paid any atten. tion to the matter knows that (ireat Britain affords a market for everything that canada can produce. From a British standpoint the objection offered to this proposition may le urged that the doctrine of free trade has lecome such an integral part of politicalinstitutions of fireat Brituin, amounting to a tenet of the political reli. gion, if I may use the term, of its people, that they would not listen to any proposition which would involve a tax on the breadstufts or any of the food products which they consume, even if it were for the purpose of drawing the colonies and the mother comntry more closely together, and even if the effect of such action would be to give the manufactured goonls of (ireat Britain an advantage in the markets of Canada and the other portions of the Empire over those of foreign countries. That might lee said from the English stampoint, and it might be said with a great deal of force, because we all know that the policy of free trade is strongly entrenched in the hearts of the British public írespective of party. Yet, any hon. gentleman who has followerl the course of politics in Cireat Britain for a few years past must have olserver that the fair trale nowement has recently made great progress, and that where it was received a few years ago with ridicule, it has to-day got beyomi that stage, and is receiving the serious attention of pulbic men on that sile of the water ; and judging from the progress in the past and from the fact that to-day in whetfied and other mamufacturing centres in England, protectionists. or rather fair traders, are elected to Parliament, there is nu telling how soom this guestion may become. if it has not alrealy hecome. a practical question in the politics of lireat Britain and the colonies. When lireat Britain adopted her free trate policy it was generally believed hy the leaders of that movement that all the civilized comntries of the world which follow her leat, and that very somb free trate would exist all the world over: but the expectations of the statesmen of that day as to the course of events have lreen disappointerl, becaluse we find that with that one exception every country in Europe is to-day a protective country, and the United states. Whith is the greatest competitor of lireat Britain in manufactured gorols, has to-day the highest protective tariff which the world has ever seen. So in that respect it has been dixappointing. It is well known to-lay that in the manufacturing cent res of (ireat Britain the shoe is legimning to pinch, that they find British capital is leing sent to the Enited Sitates and used there, under a protective tariff, to build up the industries of that country, and that the products of those highly protected industries are leing sent across the water to collpetewith the fruitsof the labour of the British workman and artizan. So that while the question to-day is perhaps not a burning one in lireat Britain, the signs point to the fact that the time is coming when it will $\mathrm{t}_{\mathrm{e}}$ serionsly consileren, more seriously than it is to-day, and certainly the period has passed when it was greeted with ridicule. The signs are that it will shortly become an important question in actual and practical politics both in fireat Britain and her colonies. Coming back to Canala, it seems to me there is no (analian, no matter what his party feeling may le, who will not say that such an arrangement, giving Canbila, Australia and the other colonies the adiantage of say 10 per cent against other countries in the markets of cireat Britain would be of inestimable value to the miners. the lumbermen, and the farmers in the Dominion. Now, the answer which may be made, I do not say by hon. gentlemen opposite, lrecause I do not know that they disigree with this resolution--

Mr. I.AURIER. By members of the (iovernment.

Mr. HAZEN-I would say, by any hon. gentleman who does not agree with the resolution, the argument which might be macle would be that it is injudicious and unnecessary for us to try and build up a trade with Great Britain liy means of preferential duties, but that it would be more to our advantage to turn our, attention to the markets of the United States and try and get free almission of our goods there. That is the position which might be taken with a certain legree of fairness, and I may say, as I have always satid, that I am one of those who believe it would be, to a considerahle extent, to the advantage of Canada, conld we make a treaty upon fair and equitalile terms with the people of the United States, provided we could do so without sacriticing national honour or imperilling in any way British commection. Now, I think at present it is useless to talk of getting a market with the United States. We have the statement which has been made this session by the Finance Minister of the results of the negotiations at Washington. That statement which has never heen contradicted from Washington-amid no donbt telegrams have passed between here and Wishington on the subject, yet there is not a worl to show that the statement is not literally and absolutely correct-that statement is. that in the negotiations with the Cabinet at Washington conducted by Mr. Bliaine, the secretay of state, he declared, as the month-piece of the American Cabinet, that the United States would never consent to reciprocity with Canala on any other terms than that the United States should have preference in the markets of. Canada over the producers and manufacturers of (ireat Britain. That is, that reciprocity with the Uniteil States can only be obtained upon terms involving liscrimination against Great Britain in the markets of Canada, incolving practically the assimilation of the Canalian tariff to the American tariff and the assimilation of our inland revenne duties to theirs. That is the position in which the question of reciprocity with the United States stanls to-lay; and being in that position, I do not think there is a loyal Canadian who would say he wants reciprocity upon terms which would destroy our present politicul status and our comection with the British Crowin. If there is any sentiment strong in this country. it is that in farour of the maintenance of British comnection. I helieve that is the strongest sentiment which animates the perple of Canada to-day, and the people of Canala are not willing to puit themselves on record as saying, or offering to say, that the times are so ball, that their circumstances are so straitened, that theyare willing to aceept reciprocity with the United States on the condition of discrimination against fireat Britain, sacrificing what revenue they have from the customs, and imposing on themselves direct taxation. It is true, hom. gentlemen who argue in favour of reciprocity take the ground that we com have it withont discrimmating against direat Britain and without imperilling in any way our British comnection. The leader of the Opposition in this House has always taken that view. When he went down to Boston after last session anl was feted aml lined there by an organization in that city, he expressed that iiew. I huve no dombt that generous hospitality was afforded the hon. gentleman such as is always afforded by the gool people of Boston to their guests, and I have no doubt that the people of that city were pleased with the visit of the hon. gentleman and the remarks he made. But the remarks he made, if we can juige by the press of Bostom, did not impress the pecple of that city as he would have liked to have them impressed, because I find the Boston Jourwal, ia leading organ of public opinion there, the day after the hon. gentleman made his speech in which he said that the United states are our natural market, aml, with a very considerahle disregard of the geography of the country, said that our rivers ran into the United States and theirs into our country-the day after 1 find the Pxistom Jomrual, discussing that speech, said :

> " it means ansex.ation.
> " (Buston Jominal.)
" Sir Wilfred Laurrer in his speech in this eity Tuesday evening protested with much vehemence that there is no necessary connection between reciprocity and annexation. Sir Wilfred, no doubt, sincerelybelieves that the commercial union of the United States and Camada would have no political consequences. His opinion in this respect is flatly opposed to the sentiments that are entertained on this side of the border. It seems to us that the fimerican view of the question is the right one, and that our distinguished visitor is the wrong.

In the begiming, it must be admitted that there can beno reciprocity with Canada until anagreement is reached to maintain a joint turiff against Europe. This is a propusition that is substantially undisputed. and it means that Canada's tariff nust be assimilated to that of the United States. For under reciprocity the two countries would be, for all conmercial purposes, one country, and the maintenance of two rates of duty on any given article would be the cause of endless loss and confusion. It might not be that Canada'ミ tariff would be dictated from Washington, but Washington would certainly have the prepondering vote.
"How wonld England regard the spectacle of her most important colony heavily taxing British manufactured products, while admitting the competing products of her bitterest rival free? Such a siturtion would inevitably lead to a still further estrangement between London and Ottawa. Meanwhile, if the fruits of reciprocity were realized, the American and Canadian people would find themselves drawn into closer and closer social and volitical sympathy through the instrumentalities of increasing commerce. Under all these circumstances, it wonld be a marvel if the munatural political connection between Canada and England could endure a single year.
"The questions of commercial union and political union with Canada are not two distinct. separate questio is. They cannot be disassociated in the minds of statesmen and in the minds of the people. Reciprocity with Canada is a very different thing from reciprocity with the Latin American nations. The latter policy contemplates only the free interchange of a comparatively small number of products-of articles as a rule which ouly one of the two contracting parties produces in sufficient quantities for home consumption. But the products of Canada and the United States are largely identical, and the argument for a free interchange rests on a totally different basis froun the argument for reciprocity with Latin America. Reciprocity as applied to Canada is a misnomer. Commercial union is a better term. And we must face the fact that, with Canada, political union must inevitabls follow. if it does not precede, commercial union. No boding of any such result from reciprocity with Brazil or Venezuela or Mexico." Now, I say it is evident the leader of the Opposition, though no doubt he charmed and interested his Boston atulience, failed to convince them that it was amongst the possibilities that we could have reciprocity With the Unitel States without diseriminating in the markets of Canada against the British prodncer and the British manufacturer. And I would say, with all deliberation, that I believe there are very few people in Canarla, though they would regard a fair measure of reciprocity with favour, who would look with favour upon a treaty, the result of which inevitally must le, from the logic of facts, and the statement of Mr. Blaine, to discriminate against the mother comitry and cause us a great loss of revenue, which can only be made up hy direct taxation and which would eventually lead tos the change of our political status, because, as the Boston fourual of Commorre says, it wonld be incredible that, undersuch an manatural political system, our present relations with A ireat Britain could continue for a single year. Now, tonching the question of reciprocity, I hate always been of the opinion that a fair reciprocity treaty along the lines of the old treaty would be of allantage to some extent to the Dominion of (anata, but it is not the right thing for us in this country to have it go forth to the world or annong our own perple that it is impossi. he for the to make our way and he prosperons withinourselves without having the adrantage of the market of the United States. We all know that, when the McKinley Bill was passeri by the statesmen of the adjacent Republic, there was a general fear that there would be something very much akin wis commercial crisis in Camata. Wie know how poblic speakers on looth sides of politics as well as the pathic press said it woull strike a deally how to the interests of the farmers and producers of canada : but, motwithstanding the passage of that Bill, which has heen in operation for alout two years, we find that during the present year, far from trade languishing and our exports falling offi, for the first ten months of this year, our exports exceeterl those of the previous year bey nearly $\leqslant 1,(K),(O X)$, and the estimate of the Finance Dinister is that for the full year ending the 310th June next. they will exeeed them by abour $S 14,(M(N),(H N)$, and that despite the fact that the McKinley Bill has been in operation diuring that time. and the fear was so generally felt that. in consequence of that measure, there would he no market for our agricultural probluce. In the position in which reaprocity is to day, it seems to me to lee the duty of members on both sides of the House, irrespective of party, to turn their attention to seeing what can le dione by our statesmen ; what markets can be opened up so that we may get a better market for our proluce in (ireat Britain, and l believe this resolution, if carrien, would give it boom to the agricultural interests as well ats to the other interests in this country, and that wecould find a market for almost everything we proluce in (ireat Britain. Hon. gentlemen opposite have always put forward the statement that the United States is the natural market of the Dominion of Canada, and that it would 1 e an untold blessing for the people of Canada to have a market of 65 , (MNo.chx people. I believe the term" "natural" in this comection is a misnomer. Markets are not the result of nature, but the result of the business carried on by men, and, when we talk of the benefits to accrue to us from the markets of $\sin ,(O K),(K N)$ people, we must remenber that we would only have the benetit of a very smail portion of the $6 . \pi,(O)(O),(K)$ as consumers, hecanse a great majority live in the south and west, and the only people we would have to sell our produce to are those of the New England states and the states along the Atlanic seaboard. While that would lee no doubt an adrantage some years in regard to the sale of our potatoes and our horses, I do not believe it would be the great blessing to the agricultural interest that some gentlemen anticipate, because I do not see that the increased market would improve the value of the farm lands in Canala when we find that in the State of New York the value of farm property has decreased 33 per cent in the last ten years, and the exolus from the farm lands in New York has leen so alarming that the fovernor of the state called attention to it in 1890, and the state assessors refer to the decrease in the value of those lamds in their report. Therefore, while I believe there would be an advantage in our having a free market in the United States, I do mot helieve it would have the result of increasing the value of our farm lands to the extent which has been supposed. We send to, Fingland the largest prortion of our lumber. That is the market for oni cattle. In the United States there is practically no market for our cattle, and if the duty were taken off beef, we would have Chicago heef brought into Canada and competing with our farmers. Our beef goes to Eingland. England is the market for the apples of Nora scotia ind for the cheese of Ontario. There is no market in the United states for our cheese, and while the Cuited states produce every year enough agricultural promace for their own people, and are able hesides to export millions of dollars: worth, on the other hand (ireat Britain imports humdreds of millions of dollars worth of agricultural proluce every year, 1 ask any reasonable man if the latter is not the natural market rather than the former: The Cnited States produces more agricultural produce $\mu^{\prime \prime} \cdot{ }^{\circ}$ rapiota than any other country. Sending our goonds to the United states is like sending goods to a middeman, be. canse we send the produce to them, and they send their promuce out of the comery to the extent of millions of doflars a sear. Looking at the question from this standpoint, it seems to me to lee our duty, reciprocity heing at present out of the question except upon terms that I do not believe any loyal Canadian would accept, to devise some other means by which our exports will be increased, and we will get a market for our proluce. By this resolution believe we are taking a practical step in that direction, and, therefore, it has my hearty support : and, as no one has risen to speak against the resolution, I suppose we may take it for granted that it has the manimons support of the whole chamber. something has been said in this Honse at different times to the effect that our alliance with (ireat britain is little more than a sentiment. To some extent that may be true, but, while this might lee an advantage to us in a material point, I think, further, it would appeal to the sentimental side of the people of Canadia as well as to their practical and material side, becallse 1 do not helieve there is any sentiment in the minds of the people stronger than the sentiment that exists in favour of British connection. As I saidit a little while ago in this debate, I do not believe there is any principle which is so strong in this comutry to-day as the sentiment in favour of British comection. I do not believe that any party or any politician in this country can hope for success who ignores that sentiment and is willing to hand over our destinies to a foreign, and, I beliere, in many respects, a hostile country; because, while the McKinley Bill was framed as at general measure of protection for the United States industries, it was, in some respects, framed as a hostile tariff against the Dominion of Canada, else the duties would not have heen placed as they were upon hay, upon egss, upon lerries and upon line, which articles go into the United States from Canada alone. I believe that in improsing that tariff their idea was that it would strike a deadly blow at the interests of the Canadian people, and would force us into such commercial relations with them as would imperil our political statas. but, Sir, that is mot the sentiment, I take it, of the people of this country, that is not the kind of stuff the people of this comatry are made of. They are not going to be forced into any alliance that they do not like. As our late chieftain said in his manifesto on the eve of the last election, this country has existed for hundreds of yoars under the protecting etgis of the British (rown. The people of Ontario and the people of the Maritine Provinces are descended from men who, a humbred years ago, left their happy homes in the New England stites, and all that the world holls dear, and came to New Brunswick and Untario, then little more than a widerness. for the sake of the principles which they held lear, for the sake of their loyalty to British connection and institutions; I say the descendants of those men in Canada to-day are not prepared to andmit that their ancestors made a mistake at that time and that they will be less true in their allegiance to British institutions and to the mother country, than were their forefathers who male such :reat satrifices orer a century ago.

Mr. SKINNFR. Pefore this question is pht to the House I wish to express my views upon it. I atm very glan it has theen introduced, hecanse I helieve that in a very few years this question, and those that are related to ir, will he anong the most vital questions that will be consinlered in the Pabliament of this Dominion. All persons, uo matter whether they agree with this resolution or diffier from it, must be of opinion that our colonial existence is not a pernanent one. The time of colonial life is a time of growth, a time of preparattion for national existence in some form or another. There have been throughout history no people who have always been contented with colonial life, and there never will he in the future. Our people aspire to national existence, as all great peoples do. I recognize that aspimation as among the most lofty of the (anadian people from one part of the country to the other : but I lo mot, therefore, think it is at all necessary that we should lowk forward to a mational life distinct from that of the great Empire to which we belong. I believe our national aspirat tions can be better realized by maintaining a connection with the Empire rather than by a severance feom it. While that may be correct, still Camala must some time or other consider what her future status is going to be. shall we continue as We are, a part of the Empire, although we are no longer a mere colony: Shall we join the Linited States, or shall we hecome independent: The hon. sentlemen who are opposing the forermment at the present time, seem, so far ats we can grather from their specehes and from their press, of the opinion that we should at once strive for independence without settling any of the other questions at all. My view is that, first of all, we should see whether we are not in a position to form a closer connection with the Empire hefore we consider the other question. A little over a humdred years ago, when the colonies, now the United States of Amerjea, were considering their status in the British Empire, Franklin. on behalf of the colonies, proposed to the British diovernment that they should be admitted into doser relations with the mother country, with representation in the Imperial Parliament. The British liovermment of that day would not listen to the proposition, and the result was separation. If the idea of Franklin had heen embraced hy the linvernment of the Empire, the British flag would to-day float from the borlers of Mexien to the Hulson Bay aml from the Atlantic to the Pacitic Ocean: lecannse the people of the cohnies turned away from their mother comitry at that time with a yreat deal of seluctance. I say bow that in view of the changes that have come to pass in Canadian life, we shonld first propose to the Empire, before we take another step, that they consider what they will lowith us, and what we will do with them. Now, this reso lution does not deal with the question of reciprocity, it does not touch the puestion of free trade, so to speak, between us and the mother comntry, but it takes a broaler sweep than any of these cuestions indicate. By this resolution we ask the mother country in effect : What do you think of the proposition that we should draw eloser together in oun trale relations ! f few moments ago some hom. gentleman opposite sang out: We have that mow. Fes, we have free trate with lireat Britain now in almost every artiole we choose to semt there. While that is tive. it does not meet the proposition of this resolution. We want to say tolireat Britain: What ate you going to do with reference to the commercial relations between these two comatries: By this resolntion we reclare in effect to direat Britain, that (amada camot always exist as a colony, but higher questions are arising. and we want to know what you are going to do alwhet it. Hon. gentlemenwhorppose this movement say it ismo use to do that, Great Britain will not eren eonsidet the proposition, direat Britain will never hecome at protective comitry. Well, we will find out what (ireat Britain will say. direat Britain has never yet heen asken, her public men have never yet been called upon seriously to consider the question. Since every other empire that has alomed or affected civilization has passed away, hon. gentle men who oppose us on this morement say this Empire also must pass away, that it mast disintergrate as other comotries have dome. that Canala must go away, that Australia must leave her mother lanl. that the West Intian colonies must fall into the Clnited states, and this great Empire must become a thing of the past. Well, so far as Canalat is concerned we are going to attempt at all events to dosomething else. For ten years this country has been growing up to the ideat of British commection, and of estahlishing a nation here in commection with the Empire. Our people have manle great sacrifices to this end, and it was thought hy the Americans when they di: away with the last reciprocity treaty, that Canama could not succeen, hat since the reperal of that treaty (anada has succeeded as she never did hefore : she hats grown in a manner that no one coulal expect, and she has. so to speak, become a youns nation and is now developing a commerce that is astonishing to all wion are called upon to consider the question and who look upon it from a national or historic point of view. Suppose that the United States should erect a barrier so high and so strong that we could not buy from them nor sell to them, and that there shouh be no trale at all between the two countries, Canarla would even then succeed. Canada will not be heaten down, but will progress, as she has progressed in the past, and in the measure which the energies of her people wish her to progress. We are going he this resolution to saty to dieat Britam that we ate considering this ifuestion, that we want then to consinder it also, and I helieve that the people of incat Britain will he glat of the occasion to do so. The people of Englatul have always leen willing to listen to the claims of the people of her colonies in the past, and why not with reference to this perent question. I combla goo to show if it were necessary. that suppose they did put 10 per cent on all foreign imports such as might be produced in Camala, the perple of Great Britain would not have to pay any more duties upon it. It is prohably not necessary that I should arge in this direction. Let us tatke a few articles as illustation. The colonies can probluce all the wool dirtat Britain reguire, the colonies can prodnce, or soon will !e able to protuce, all the wheat and nearly all the lumber that slae may reguire, and, therefore, it is, that if we are able within ourselves to produce all these things. the nare duty of 10 per cent. or whatever it may he on these articles going to (ireat Britain from foreign comeries, wonld have no other remalt in fact except to give our own perple own own markets. It would be loing for (anala as a part of the Eanpire what om friends on the other side of the House saty would be done for us in comection with the L'nited states. if we were commercially united with that country. We all hmow that so fat ans protective duties operate they so not necessarily raise the price of the article upon which the duty is laid. With the tarift that now protects (amalian industries. We know that cotton was never so cheap in this commtry as it is now fand in fact there is no comnIf in the worlh in which mannfactured cotem is cheapror that in danalat at the present time. The tariff has not increased the price of cotton to the (amadian people, while it has given to our comntry an important manufacture in which rich and poor lenefit alike. The same law worked out will give the same result in regard to the whole Fmpire, if it could extend to the whole Empire in the manner in which I atu endeavoring to show. On the other side of the Honse they soy that fireat Britain will have nothing to do with this, and that she will not in fact make any reply to our suggestions. I do not think that a newspaper always represents public rpiniom, lint it was a very important article that was read from the London Timms this afternoon by the hon. the mover of this resolution. We ilo know that in fireat Britain there is a tendency of throught in reference to questions of this chamacter that was not to be fom there even ten years ago. I believe that When the public: men of lireat Britain come to take up the question, when the Parliament of lireat liritain come to have it actually before it as to what it is groing to do with this Empire, it will not stand silently by and see the Empire dismembered, but it will be prepared, if necessary, to make certain sacritices for the purpose of sustaining the Empire. The people of the Empire have never in the past heen afraid of making sacritices. British hoom and british money has been expended all over the world where the line of civilization has run, amh is it to be stid that even if the people hat to make an economic satritice they wonl be less brave in questions of this character than they have been in the past? I believe they would not, and I am the more conrinced of that for I know that this is for the purpose of perpetuating the Enipire. If Blool and money had to be sacrificed to fomm the Empire, and to maintain it thus far, are the people of Great Britain going to say in a question of this character that they would not lose a little money, if necessary, for the purpose of perpetuating the Empire: Again I notice that the hon. Inemher for Bothweli (Mr. Mills) to-day said across the fioor that it was a very different ilea when Great Britain was called upon to make an economic sacrifice, and that she would never do that. The idea of the hom. gentleman was that Great Britain was too seltish to do a thing of that kind, and that they would never tax themselves a single farthing to preserve the Empire. If it were necessary that the people of fireat Britain should do so, I believe they would tax themselves, but I do not believe, on the other ham, that would he at all necessary.

Mr. MILL心 (Bothwell). My hon. friem is mistaken. When the hom. member for North Bruce (Mr. Me. Veill) was speaking my poim was this: The hon. member for North Bruce (Mr. MeNeill) was realing an article which showed that what the comment contemplated was economically disadrantageons while politically atrantageous: while he Was arguing verystrongly that it was economically advantageons.

Mr. SKINNER. I understami that, but I muderstoon! turther that althongh the hon. gentleman makes it clear enough that that was the meaning of the article in the Lomdon Timers, that he is of opinion that if there was to lee any economic disatvantage to the mother country. that would settle the whole guestion and the mother cenintry wonk hare nothing to do with it.

Mr, MILLS (Bothwell). I will nothing about that.

Mr. SKINNER. I know the hom. gentleman did not say so. but I am :leclaring from the course the hom. gentleman has pursued and from the position the loon. gentleman takes in this comutry--I am declaring from the expressions that the lealer of the Opposition has made in this House and in the different parts of the Dominion, and from what he salid in boston as reported in the press: that he is of opinion that the time has come when the British people will never again make any saleritice for the sustentation of the integrity and perpetuity of this Empire. I say I believe differently, hat I do, not think it woulil be necessary for anything of that kimel to arise. I do not helieve that the people of lireat Britain would lose a cent by adopting a policy of this kind The Empire is too large, the population tor extensive and the tranle too vist for that. If the United States can put walls arounl themselves and say they can live independently, why they are only pigmies in comparison to the, Great British Empire with which we are connected. If Gireat Biritain should, so to speak, erect a tarift around the British Empire as high and as strong as that which the United States have erected aroumd their country, we could live more independently and more prosperonsly than the people of the United States live under their tariff. But that is not necessary. Why, Mr. Speaker, this Empire would include every kind of country umler the sun. We have the frozen country; we have the tropical comitry: we have grown in the Empire a portion of all the products the world is capable of producing. There is India for tea, cotton, wheat and a hundred other things ; there is Ceylon for coffee and tea : there are the great colonies of Australia, New Zealand and the Dominion of Canada; there are the West Inlies lying at our doors: there is Newfoumdland, which has the greatest and most valuable fisheries in the work. Therefore, this Empire has within itself everything for its support, everything that its merchants need to trade in, everything for the purpose of sustaining its people. shall it then be said that if it became necessary, we could not live within ourselves? I believe the time will come when this Bmpire will say, even from a place near the throne, that if the United States or the nations of Farope are going, ly hostile tariffis or in any other way, to aim at the life of this Empire, or at the life of the most extreme or insigniticant of its colomies, the whole force of the Empire shall be brought together, whether by economic laws or otherwise. to sustain the whole. It has been said that this question of independence is forcing itself upon the people of this country. I do mot believe it. If we have independence lowning up at all as a question to be convilered by the people of Canada, it is because of the agitation which hon. gentiemen on the other side of the House have seen fit to loring atom in this comeny. I can understand the idea of having free trade with the Linted states, but I camot understand how homorable men can propose to have free trale with the United states and at the same time to discriminate against the mother comery : and, as was said a little while ago, 1 do not believe, no matter what they may suffer, that the people of this comentry will ever consent to any kinil of a trate treaty, or to free trade with the Cuited states, if to secure it they have to aim a blow at the mother comiry and the other colonies of the Empire. The hon. gentlemen who differ from the view of this yuestion which I am attempting to bring before you, think that because the people suffer, because we may mot he able to make so, much money or to become as prosperoms while cut off fromi the trade centres of the United states, we will kuock under to any proposition they may chonse to make, or, in other words, that we will have free trade at any price. Never, sir, will the people of this Imminion submit to that. We belong to a race of people who never bowed the knee to any nation or to any people and who will never sabmit to being pit down in any other way than by the force of wat : and I helieve that the people of Canada will just as surely maintain their independence and integrity, and their comnection with the Empire in that respect, no matter what the loss may be, no matter what we may suffer by doing so. We will work out our future, mainteining our comnection with the Empire, and continuing to he Canadians whether we may be better off or not. Therefore, I say this is a practical guestion which we are discussing to-night. This is almost the first time, in my experience in this Parliament, that we have ventured to take the step which this resolution proposes. During the few years that I have been here, I have heard hon. gentlemen opposite always sneer whenever the question of imperial federation has lreen mentioned. Why they have done that I do not know. I can milerstand that they might say it was impracticable, that the British people would not have it, or that we had not the statesmen who could work the thing out ; but why they should sneer at it I could never comprehend. It is certainly a desting that we ought to look forward to with pride. To he a mation within the British Empire ought to be the proudest destiny that (anadian or any other portion of the British Empire could look forward to. This is a step in that direction, and it is a step that will be followed ly others: and these steps will he taken not only in (analla, but in Cireat Britain as well: as 1 have sain, the safety and integrity of the Empire will rise above party consilerations and above every other question of any importance. I am, therefore, glad that this guestion has been brought up. In reading a day or two ago a despatch from Lord Knutsford in reference to some trade question, I ohserved that he spoke of a selfgoverning colony. The public men of Cireat Britain will have to understam, and they will soon understaml, that Camada is more than a colony. Camadia is a Dominion : and that denotes a step of growth in Canalian history. But we are not satistied with that. and we are going to take another step towards nationality-towards a national life within the Empire, if the statesmen of England will have it : and if they do not, we cannot help it. If they scorn this offier ind cast ns off, we shall be fome as independent as the Cuited States werea hundred years ago, and we will work out our destiny after that decisicn has been declared. But I am not prepared to believe that the people of Gireat Britain and of the whole Empire will do that until they do it. The word has advancel rastly in a humped years. The British dovermment will, I believe, look at matters differently from what they did a hundred years ago. It would le easier for Canala to be a part of the British Enppire to-lay than it was for Ireland or Wiales a humdred years ago. Now treaties are made hy relegraph. One ambassintor is at Washington. and another with whom he is negotiating is in Lombon: and in a moment, so to speak, the commmications are flasher letween them, so that the world is practically one. Electricity and steam have made possible what was impracticable a humdrel years ago. Therefore, we have no right to argue from the past as to what will ledone in the future. The British people will consider this question, and when this vote is passed to-night, it will have an effect I believe on the British tiovermment. I may say this further, that while hon. gentlemen on the wher side of the Homse keep silent, we shall be able to say to the people of cireat Britain, as the result of this vote, that the Parliament of Canala are mamimons. This will be par +xיr/lomere a calse where silence will le consent. Therefore, we shall be able to yuote, so to speak, in the court of the nation, that the Opposition are with as in this matter, that they have not said a word against the proposition and will not vote against it, and it will go forward as the unanimous opinion of this Parliament. I therefore anticipate, Mr. Speaker, a gool lleal from this resolution passing. I look forward to it as the begiming of the movement. I expect that the question will continue to le agitatel, and I look forward to the time when this whole Empire will he united, and when no alien hand will attempt to haul down the flag which floats so prondly orer us in the relation in which we stand.

Mr. dilld.MoR. I have been much pleased with the specches of $m y$ two hon. friends from St. John, as regards their expressions of loyalty, though they seem to me rather excessive. I lelieve in the unity of the Empire and in the integrity of the Empire. but I fail to see that the Empire camot be united as well under free trade as under protection. Nothing would please me hetter than to see free trade among all the Englishspeaking races. I could understand that. If my lion. friends had marle a proposition to meet the mother country on the same conditions as those on which she meets us, il could unlerstand it. I cond understand their love for fireat Britain if, after (ireat Britain hats openell her ports not only to Camada but to all comntries. certainly to Canada, hecause there is mothing we produce that camot go into Britain free of duty, they would move a resolution in fasonu of free trale. If my hom. friends would move a motion in favour of free trade with Britain, I would rote for it. But we are umbertaking to legislate for too large a community The f(n). (Kni,(NK) people under the British Fimpire are more than we can manage. We have pretty hard work, as it is, to legislate for less than tive millions in (anada. But our friends are so generous they want to legin to legislate for the mother comontry for the fimpire, and they want the mother country to go lack to protection, restriction of trade. They want the mother commtry to go hack on trade matters, after they have harl a thousam years experience of protection, when protection did for them what protection is loning for Canala. After long years of experience of restriction of trade, and of monopoly, England Was in a condition when her people were poor, When bread riots and starvation and elistress prevaled every where, when ships were lyingat anchor with their sails flapping against the masts and rotting in the harlmur, when their spindles were idle; and then they alopted free trade. I am attached to the mother comntry. I am loyal to the British Crown. I am a Briton, but my loyalty does not ooze out in the way the loyalty of some of our frienis does. The fact is their loyalty is loyalty to the Prime Minister, to Mr. Ahott, loyalty to protected industries, and loyalty to a political party. I am loyal to the mother country for the inattles she has fought out for the race. I am loyal to the mother comitry lecanse she has set an example to Canada and to the wide world in everything : and I would as som expect England to goback to Africath slavery as to see her go back to protection. Protection is a seltish, a weak, a sinful thing. It is legislation for the few at the expense of the many. It is legislation for a party, and it is kept up ly proterted industries, and 1 ireat Britain has hand a sad experience of that systemfor humedreds and hundreds of years. They had protection amd protected monopolies. Therewas a guild for everything. This one had the right to make vinegar. another to make hats, another to make lorots and shoes, and for these privileges eath paid into the treasury and the people suffered. Great Britain will never go back to that condition of things because of the experience of which she has had under it. Great Britain alopted free trade from conviction : she adopted it from her experience of the evils of protection : and 1 do not think that she will ever go back on it. There are some that talk fair-trade : there are some cringing spirits that Mr. Sikinder. want to be protected and emriched at the expense of thegreat mass of the people; but the time never will come when the great heart which has fought so many nolle battles for the world will go back on the principle of free trade. What liberality is there in this resolution " What evidence of loyalty to (rreat Britain is there in this resolution: None at all. If you will discriminate in our facomr, they say, we will riscriminate in yours. If you will discriminate in fatour of $\boldsymbol{i},(0 \times 1 .(n)$ of perple against all the rest of the world, we will go in with you. That is the gist of this resolution. Do you suppose she is going to lee hime to the interests of her people ? Is fireat Britain going to le blind to the interests of her nation: Is she going to tax a trade of tinan (OKN,(MK) or alo not believe she is. And in matters of tranle there is none of this sentiment. Why do we trade with (ireat Britain? Is it lecause she is the mother country". Nuch as we are attached to her we do not traile with her any differently from what we do with New Zealand of France or Russia or any other comntry. Men trate with their awn people the same as they do with foreigners. They. trade where they can do the best. and if I want io luy I buy where I can luy the cheapest. Do not you. Mr: Speaker? Do not you, gentlemen on the Treasury benches, do not you, gentlemen from it. John: Why, you will hunt around all over the city to find a store where you will get a pound of tea 2 cents cheaper than anywhere else. Yes, and if there were duties on it you would smuggle it after. that. I want to live to see the time when the example of Great Britain will he alopted by the world, and when the worll will he one universal hootherhoorl. That is the time when poverty will cease to lee, an! men will he hetter oft than they are now with their tariff and restrictions on trade. I know that there are a gool many Liberals who linger shivering on the brink on this trade question. hat I ho not. I am going to follow the mother country example, the best example ever set on the tranle question. and the only one, and it is that which makes her the greatest nation of the worlh, and I hope she will always continue to occupy that proud position. She was not the greatest hation in the workl when a protectenl conntry. Look at the strides England has mane within thirty or forty years since she has alopted free trale: and you need not be afraid that she will ever forsake it. The only trouble in this question is that those who have been in the habit of skiming the people dos not want to lose that privilege. The people in Canada can raise their revenue without taxing trale. If you want (amala to be a rich comntry, let her traile freely. Let our people make money, and then there will be no difticulty in raising iaxes. Of course, this may he unpopular, because the rich men feel they would have to pay more than they do now. Well, who shotild pay the taxes but those who have a surplas? should the men raise part of $\overline{S H}(1),(X N),(0 \times N)$ who can hardly keep soul and hody together, and who work from daylight to dark, as I see them around here, at $\leqslant 1$ a lay, and have to keep their families on that? The country camot prosper when it takes the taxes out of the poor. A few millionaires will be made, and you see a few rolling in wealth and their eyes sticking out with fatuess. Why, you talk almut cotton. Cotton ought to he as cheap again as it is. There is such at surplus of cotton that they have to send it off and give it away in (hina and Japan. If the people in Canada had cotton cheaper, there are 200 men in this Honse who would have more cotton than they possess now. There are many poor people who cannot keep up their window curtains. They have to take them down in order to get them washed. There would tre no surplus of anything if it were cheap enough for the people, and if you want to make it cheap to the people give them free trade and let everybody in this short life, and this wilderness of woe, get some benetit. This loyalty of our friends on the other side is of a kind that I am astonished at. think I an pretty loyal, but I am loyal to Cireat Britain, not because of her aristocracy, not lecause of her wealth, I am loyal to her hecause her statesmen have been unselfish, her statesmen have been intelligent, her statesmen have been true to their convictions, her statesmen have been true to principle. When the time came that a great principle was presented to them, they presented it to the people, and carried their reforms, all the great reforms that bless mankind, or nearly all. Freedom of thought, freedom of opinion. freedom of trade, freedom of press-all these things have been fought out by the mother country. Therefore I have no idea of hurrying up to be a nation. I do not understand that sentiment. We can afford to go a little while longer before we need independence. But my friends here are very loyal. If you will diseriminate in our favour, they say, we will lee glad to continue a part of this great nation, and have a share in her ironclad ships, in the greatest nary in the world, and in all her prestige, if you will discriminate in farour of us and give us some advantage in tralle. That is the extent of their loyalty. We will be truly loyal if you will do something ior us, if you will pay for it. You want to tax the workingmen of Kingland, and they do not pay very much hecanse everything they eat, everything they drink and everything they wear, from the hat on their head to the shoes on their feet, they get as cheap as the world can give it to them. And is not that right? Why should any man be compelled to buy from any other man: There is none of this sentiment in nade. If any one wants to be generous, let him put his hand in his pooket and give, but there should not be and is not any friendship in tratle. Trade is a natural right. It is as natural and right to buy and sell as to breathe and to eat. and this discrimination in favour of one country or another, and this system of protection is an appeal to men's selfishness and greed, and, as I have heard it called, a legalized robbery, and that is what protection is. Gireat Britain will never go back. If she goes back on her trade policy, there is no hope for the work, but she never will. It is that policy that makes her the greatest power in Europe and in the world. It is her principles that have done that. She would not have her navy now if she were a protected country. She would have leen poor and miserable as Camada will be if it holds on to protection. We have tried protection a good while in Canada, and what has it done for us? Throw open your ports. You have tried this side of the Atlantic, and now you are going across the Atlantic. It seems the only free trade you can get on this side of the Atlantic is to the north of us. You camot get it to the south. Canala does not want it unless it canget a partial free trate, which it cannot get. I sympathize with idea of tederation if you could get it on proper principles. It would be a ghorious thing if the English-speaking mations conld loe felerated. But the world was not made for the Eaglish-speaking people. Viol Almighty did not make the world for them alone, lout they are spreating all over the word. I womli like to read to you some tigures showing the advances (ireat Britain has made since free trate was aulopted. In 1840, the foreign trale of the United Kinglom (combined exports amd imports) amounted head of the propulation. In $1 \times$ ix. it anomited to rate of increase. In the linited States the propmrtion of foreign trale to the population is $i+13$ s. per hearl. In France, it was in 18.6 is 3 s . per heal. In Russia, it was in 1sfis, $\mathfrak{i l}$ !!s. per head, The public revenie for the year Istl was E:B, Ninh, sum pressed fir less heavily on the people than did the former. The income tas in 1843, the tirst year of its incilence. yielded for every premy in the so increased that every pemy in the pound of income tax yiehled eit. 04 a, (min). In order to show how the pror were benetited after free trale was inaugaratell, I may make the following statement:The consumption of tea in Istl nat if promds, in 1 xix it was nearly in pounds per head. sugar. under the protective system, was 1.5 pounds per heal, under the free tride system it was 48 pomins per head. That shows yon what free trade dores for the pors. And so in all these articles that were taxed, their consumption of clothing and foxn was just double, and instead of the people starving and suffering for the want of fond and clothing, free trade enalled them to live more comfortably: Some of you. 1 have no doult, were in England when free trade was introduced. I was there then, and 1 talked with the lalouring classes in England and Ireland, and I know something alout how they lived at that time. I was there when the agitation was going on for free trade. when there were little bazairs held all over England, and I went in and made my small contribution to help along free trale. I did not expect at that time, that nearly :0) years afterwards (Gada would go, hack and allopt the onlious principle of protection.

Mr. MACIONALD(Wimipeg). I have listened with great pleasure to the speech of my hon. friend from Clarlotte (Mr. (illmor) as I always do when he rises to speak on the question of free trade. There is a charming frankness and earnestness alout his utterances which are very pleasant in an age like this when weare so muchaccustomed to sham. I also agree with him in being proud of being a British subject, and having a right, as such, to share in the past history of England, But I do not agree with him in reference to the resolution now under consideration, as I most heartily support it, and I hope it will be well received by the Government and by this House. There is no loubt, that at the present time we are receiving. und for many years past, in fact almost from the time that Canada emerged from the nursery, if I may use the expression, we have receivel great benefits from our connection with the mother country. For instance our trank interests as well as those of fireat Rritain and Ireland are lowhed after at foreign conorts by a number of skilfal and trained British ministers. A small army of l3ritish consuls protect our citizens and look after ont commercial interests in all the principal towns and cities of the civilized and semi-civilized world: and if the moral influence of these ministers and consuls is nors sutticient for the purpose, and if any power, civilized or uncivilized, wishes to impose upon us. pinysical force in the shaje of the British army abll navy is at our back, and the party trespassing on our rights knows that he has to face, not a small comntry of tive millions or less of inhalitiants, hut he has to foce the might of Finglaml. This. Mr. -jeaker. is bot a small arlvantage: hut we must renember that in time of need. when we have fonmil it necessatry to raise latge sums of money in the markets of the world, and when the scheme for Which the money has lreen reyuiret: was of such size as to alarm tinanciers, the mother comntry has come to onr assistance by gatianteeing loans to enable us to raise the money for the purpose, whereas we womld not have leeen able to get it at all. ar at any rate. We would have had to pay a much higher rate for it. withont this guarantee. However, we have leconme sonaconstomed to these adrantages. lowking on them somuch as a matter of course that when we ure summing up the credit and debit side of the lealgerand considering theadrantages and the rlisalvintages of our eonnection with Fagland. these are consinlerations that we are apt to owerlonk, and I think we must acknowlerlge that at the present moment the main tie that binds us to the mosher land isthat of sympathy and sentiment. Now. I am aware that it is the habit of many gentlemen in this House, and outside, to langh at sentiment as somiething effeminate. old fashioned. old fogyish, and out of late. But $I$ ann not at all in accord with those who hohl that opinion, for 1 doubt if there is anything which has a stronger influence orer at man's action than sentiment. (If coume, I ann perfectly awart that there is a kind of sentiment. so-cialled. that is not worthy of the name, which can only le treated with contempt : I mean that which you find in the sentimental young school girl who has been realing mawkish pertry and that sort of thing, and whogoes into fits of tears, lecanse, perhaps, the fanily cat has knocked over the fower pot and broken a lily from its stem. That is not the kind of sentiment I am speaking of. I mean the emotion that stirs the souls of brave men. that which makes men willing tos sacritice their money amd their lives, if necessary, in defence of their homes, their conntry, or some great principle. That is not a feeling to be langhed at, it is not a feeling to be despisent. It is a feeling which has proflucerl most of the deeds of which we read in history with pride and exultation, and which more than anything else, more, even than ability and eloguence, shows that there is sumething divine in human nature, and that men are far superior to the brutes of the fiell. Now, sentiment is very strong in this little Canula of ours, ann I think that no one can run counter to it without finding to his cost that he has marle a great mistake. In miy opinion, Sir, the success, the unprecedented success, which the fiovernment camdidates have met with in the recent bye-elections is principally owing to the fact that this sentiment of loy. alty in Cunada has become alarmed. Now, Nir, I do not wish to le misumlerstomi in what 1 am saying. I do not wish to lie thought to hurl a charge of elisloyalty across the House, or even to insinuate that the Reform party as a party are disloyal, for I know very well that such is not the case. I know the vast mass of the Reform party are as loyal ass the ( onnervatives: I know they have been ton well tanght by the late Hon. 1 ieorge Brownaml the late Hon. Alexamier Mackenzie, who solately left us, and whose loss is so much deplored, not to understaml fully the value of british commection, aul the necessity of eloing everything in their power to preserve it. But I do mean to say that there are some gentlemen in the Reform party, some gentlemen occupying prominent prositions in the Reform ranks. who are supposed to be willing, at least. to conuette with the United Ntates, in the hope of oh. taining seats on the l'reasury lenches, and who ate suppensed. infact, tolosk toomuch toourfrienilstothe soath of the line for the sign by which they shall e:onquer. That feeling has come thoroughly aroused in the interval which came hetween the ent of last session and the beginning of this. For sonne fears lefore the general election of $1 \times!) 1$, several learler: of the Opposition. gentlenen of ability and eloquence, stumperl the conntry preaching the doctrine of marestricted reciprocity or commercial union. They, of conrse, showed omly the silver side of the shield, and those who listened to them, hearing the argumentsin favour of that policy only, and not having any one to answer those argunents, were, to some extent, impressed by them. When dissonlution tork plawe, and the camolidates whon were chosen liy the different constituencies to carry the banners of the respective parties in the coming election, went to the conntry. the perople at large, then for the first time, hearil the other side of the story : they leamenl that all is mot gold that glit. ters, that while this systen of unrestricted reciprocity offers some advantages : it alss presents very serious disuivantages: they leurned that there was a fuestion of aliscrimination agranst the goods of the mother conntry in favour of those of it foreign, and as some have described it, it lastile conntry. They learned, noreover, that an arrangement with them could only le male lis saderificing the control of our own tariti, and by handing the regulation of our tiscal policy over to t'se Wishington liovermment insteal of regulating it, as we do now, in Ottuwa; they learned, in fict. that they would be reduced very much to the position in which the Americun colonites were thenselves when they relselled against the British (rown, that is to say, they would le thxed without representation. Of course the Reform party when this was mentioned by the Conservative speakers throughout the country, did not pay nuch attention to it. They thought this was just a little claptrap got up for the purpose of catching votes, hut when after the election was over they read the letter of the former leader of the Liberal party, the Mon. Falward Hlake, in which he took the view that although he was as strongly opposed as ever to the policy, and in fact, to everything else connected with the Conservative party ; yet he was so-utterly at variance with his own party on this question of unrestricted reciprocity or commercial union, that fond as he was of political life, he found it necessary to cut himself adrift from them and to retire to private life rather than support such a policy. Mr. Hlake announcel in clear and ummistakahle terms that the anioption of that policy eould only ent in one thing, and that was annexation: and he more than intimated that if we were going into annexation we han letter make terms with the Niates at once when our hands were free, insteal of waiting until we were tied hand and foot ly the lomels which this commercial union would irring with it. When this letter was read there were mambers of Reformers throughont the comotry. particularly anomg the young men, who thought it was time to go slowly, who thought it was time to consider whither this policy of the Opposition would learl them. They did stop, they did think. and the consefuence was that when the -lections came on they were found either staying at home or recoring their votes for the Conservative camlidates. Now. Sir, it was not only this trale prilicy that cansed so many of these Reformers to leave the ranks of their party. it was also the utter want of faith in their country shown by the leanlers of the 0pposition. It is a fact that they were tired of this blue-ruin cry, tired of hearing that we were rapidly hecoming leygars, while they still felt they had some money in theirpockets, and that they and their neighonims were getting hetter insteal of worse off. They thought they wombld allere to the party which was trying at all - vents to lonild up a mation. and that they Would forsake the party which wishel to hanil it wer to a foreigin state. They thought they would give their allegiance to a party that tried to make (amala a great nation allied to the British Crown. instead of to the party that tried to have (anama wiped off the face of the earth. and to have her represented hy tive or six stars on the American flag. From what I have said Mr. Speaker. yoll will see that I an not inclined to unlerrate the strength of the sentiment which limbs us to the mother country; lut contirmed as I think that tie is, and strong as I think that sentiment is, 1 should not be sorry to see it strengthened, by another tie almost though not quite so strong. that is to siy, the tie of self interest. I think that the aloption of the resolution brought before the House by the hon. member for North Bruce (Mr. Mr. Neill) will go very far to strengthen that tie, and tolbring about a state of affairs that will show to the people of ('analat that it is $t_{0}$; their interest to maintain the connection which has solong existed Ietween us and England. I donnot think that there is any doubt that taking the Dominion ats a whole it would obtain very, very great alvantages, if a policy such as outlined hy this motion were alopted. Speaking for my own Province of Manitolsa, I can saty without fear of contradiction that it would be a inom of the greatest importance to us, because we produce nothing that would not tind a ready market in England. They would take every liushel of wheat we grow. and every pound of beef that we prohluce, whoreas even if unrestricted reciprocity with the States were carried out, instead of finding a market to the south of us, we would simply he flomel by their surplus wheat and beef. It is true that a small portion of our prohuce at present is sold to the United States, but what is sold there is for one of two purposes. It is either sold in some places where from local reasons, where because of the failure of a crop or something similar there is a temporary demand for what we have to sell, or us in the majority of cases, the people of the United Nates hay simply as midillemen to retail it again to England and other European countries. If this is the case they, of course, get the prorfits that mindlemen always ohtain, and our farmers are just so much out of pocket, which, had we this trale arrangenent with the mother country, would le fomm in their puckets insteal of enriching onar neighbums. Now, Nir, thiscuestion is so thoroughly understood in the province from which I come, anil so deeply interesterl are the people residing there in it, that a very short time agro the bararl of Trade of Winnipeg -a thoromghly representative institution. a lwatrel which is composed of level-headerl lusiness men with a keencye t, their own interests and who belong not to the (onservative party alone, but to luoth parties. and I should think to hoth parties in nearly equal proportions: -passed at resolution instructing the delegates that they are semeling to the Trale (ongress which is sumn to meet in Englani, to ilo everything in their power to have some such armagement hrought abnot as is ontlined in the motion mow umler the considetation of the House. They instructerl their delegates not to commit thenselies in any way to imperial ferleration, which they consider ats visionary and not likely to he lorought into practical use for somme time to come at least. hat to devote their energies to having some alteration made by which the mother conntry will diserminate in favour of (:anadia. That shows how this question is viewed in Manitolsa, and under the circunstances I am not astonished that that view is taken. Of course hom. gentlemen opjosite--or rather I should say for I am not justified in salying hom. gentlemen opposite, as only one of them has spoken, and I take it for granted that most of them are in accord with the motion, such gentlemen in this Honse: as are opposed to the motion of my hon. friend from Bruce (Mr. McNeill) will likely urge : It is all very well for you to say that this arrangement would le a gonol thing for us, hut we cannot make it all hy yourselves. We cannot go into at comer and draw out a Bill which would be accepted and passed by the Finglish House of Commons hy which this discrimination will le brought almot. The Parliament of Eugland has something to say about this, and neither the English Patliament nor the Euglish people will have anything to do with it. They may also point to the result of the motion made on this sulject at the opening of the Imperial House of Commons when it was defeated hy an overwhelmningmajority. But. Mr. Speaker, I would point these gentlemen to the fact that everything must have a lreginning, that when the adoption of free trade was tirst preachell hy Arlam Nmith it found very few supporters, that Richard Colnden hal hut few men around him when he umlertook the task of altering the fiscal policy of Eingland. It is true that when the Anti-corn Law League once got a fair fonting it went on by leaps and lrounds until it overturned the protective policy which had bitherto prevailed in Eingland. Why should not i similar thing occur again? It is known that history repeats itself, and it is rather a strange coincidence that the very class by which free trade was carried is the class most in favour of the policy now under discussion. The horny-handed artizans of England are the persons who feel the chief pressure of foreign competition. They are the ones who tind their market curtailed, their wages reduced, and their hours of work cut down by the free, untaxed importation of cheap-manle foreign gooms, aml they are the ones who ate chiefly alvonating a prliey such as that on which I am now speaking. As time goes on, this feeling will. I lelieve, spreal among the artiant of Englaml, and as they are voters they will make their voices hearn: and I should not le astonished if lefore iong we fomal the himilrea members of the House of Commonswho, are at present in favour of giving (analia aml the orhe: colomies preferential duties, vastly increasen in mumber, and able to make more than a fair fight. But. Mr. Speaker. I io not think it is my place to instruct the Faghish Parliament what they ought to do. I think we can fairly leave that to them. All I would adrosate is that we should shou that we are willing to meet them at least half-way, on hohi out tor them the right hand of fellowship, and to say to them. if yon will diseriminate in our fatorir. we are willing ta, do the same in favour of voll. In that way we shall umionhtedly enconrage Gur friends in the mother eomntry. We shall show that the colonies at any rate are in favour of the chance, and that will give them heart, and we all kow that heart and perseverance will accomplish very much. My hon. friend from (harlotte Mr. Gillimory in his very vigorons demmaciation of protoction. satid that lie would lie very glad toshow his loyalty by supporting a proposition for wiping out cluties altogether and returning to a free trale policy-l suppose he meant with the whole worlh, at all events with the mother country. I am atimad that the state of affitios at present existing in Furope as well ats on our own continell, is hatidy such as to induce us to alopt that conarse. We see the continent of Furope, instead of fultilling the prediction mate hy the learling orators of the Anti-f 'orn Law Leagne", that within ten years of the abloption of free tranle in Fingland it wonld le unicersally alopted in Furope, Foing lath to the protective policy, and not only so, but becoming more and more protective. Wie see the C'nited Fitates following in the satme fortsteps. and England almost alone in the worlh fatauring a free trade policy. We see also that the effect of that policy has treen to cramp her manufacturers, and to force her lalsourers to work short hours and some of them no hours at all unler the strain of foreign competition. I do not think these things are such as to indice us to alopt at present a free trable policy in (anada, particularly while ocopying. as we lo. a different position from that occupied by the mother country when she alopted free trale. We must remember that at that time Fingland hat hy a long course of protection brought her manufactures to such a piteh of perfection as to le ahle to manufacture grools at a less cost amb to place them on the market at a lower price than any other comatry in the aivilizen world. It was, therefore, to her alvantage to throw her markets open to other countries, and alwie all, it was her interest to abolish the Corn Laws, so its to olstain free and untaxed lreaulstuffs for the artizans who proluced her manufactured gosis. Her peculiar position has enabled her to maintain the struggle longer than other countrites could ; but I beliere that she is now feeling the pressure put upon her by the protective tariffs adopted by foreign countries, and by her practical exclusion from their markets. Unler any circumstances, no matter what policy may be alopted in England or in our sister colonies, I do not think that we can dol letter than alopt the motion of my hom. friend and show that we are willing to take the first step, in the matter. Then, if we succeed, we shall have the satisfaction of saying that we were the first to move in the direction proposed. and if we fail we shall know that we at least have not failed in our duty, hut hate done the hest we could to consolidate the Eimpire. and especially to advance the interests of (anatia, which ought always tobe our tirst thonght.

Mr. Watson. It was nut my intention to take part in this debate, becaluse I consider that it is encupying the time of the House upon a puestion that is simply absurd. I lo not suppose that any sensible 1 :an on either side of this House supposess, for at moment, that Fhgland womld return to the pricy of protection or discriminate in favolur of (anata; but when the hon. meminer for Winmipes (Mr. Macelomald) says that the Province of Manitolat was oppesed to reciprocity of tranle with the Cnited states lecanse the pronluce of the Cnited States would :ome in and forol that country---

Mr. MA(IX)NALI) (Wimipees). Fixense me. I dill not say that.

Mr. WATN(IN. He saill that if our markets were free to the United States we world he flowled with the promelue of that enmitry.
M. MA('IMNALI)(Wimipers). Precisely. and I say so again.

Mr. WATSON. As a representative of the Province of Manitohat 1 am surprised to hear the lion. gentleman make such a statement, lnecanse in the prosluce which is natural to that province we lefy competition with the worlh. The inlea of saying that we wonld lee fomed with the natural pro. Huce of the Cuited States.-with its wheat, its harley and other grain in Manitolia, where we can pronluce the greatest mumiser of hushels to the acre: of the lest samples in the worll, is absurl. Then, as to manmfactures, we have mone, amil we ask for no protection for them: we have no interest in mannfactures there at all: and if the farmers of Manitolna are tole taxed for the purpose of encouraging hot hornse manufactures we do not want them. The hon. wentleman knows that in the general elections last year the trade policy was not discussed.

Mr. MACIMNALI)(Wimipeg). I won my election on the trarle policy.

Mr. Witson. The trale policy did mot elect a Conservative in Manitobia. Fivery one was elected on the loyalty cry.

Mr. MA(:INDNAI) (Wimipeg). No.

Mr. WATsoN. I challenged any gentlemall who appeared on the stump against me to name any one article proluced in Manitola that could be lenetited by protection, and no one did wr. I challenged any one to name any article in the protected list the duty on which did not injure the people of Manitolsa, and no one named one. We have no use for protection at all. If we had reciprocity of trade with the Uniterl States a year ago, on wheat alone we would have gainel abont $\bar{i}$ cents a bushel. Not that I believe that wheat can be protecterl either in Canada or in the United States, because free traile England regulates the price of hoth beef and brealstuffs. But we would have macie 7 cents a bushel by being able to send our wheat to be milled at Minnespolis, where we would have the competition of seven railroads in freight rates. That the hon. gentleman would know if he consulted the Board of Trade of Winnipeg. To-day we send our beef and brealstuffs to England, but outside of these, where is the market for our natiaral products? Where is the home market to-day which hon. gentlemen spoke so loudly about when they were inaugurating the National Policy ! It is in the Cuited States; it certainly is not in the cities and towns of Canada. For almost all our natural prolucts, our horses, sheep, harley, potatoes eggs and poultry, our natural home market is in the United States. Both Canada and the United States export leef and breadstuffs to free trade England, whose markets regulate the prices. What benefit will you derive, even if such resolutions should pass? I do not expect that any one imagines England will discriminate in favour of Canala against any of the other colonies or any other country in the world. She has had her experience of protection and free trade, and it is free trade which has built her up to the position which she holds to-day. In Canada, take railway transportation, in which we have reciprocial relations with the American roads, and we find that our railways can compete with theirs and secure a large share of their tratfic; whereas if you take our shipping, in which there is no reciprocity, we find that $\overline{3}$ per cent of the trade of Canada only is done to day in Canadian bottoms under the Canadian flag.

An hom. MEMBER. No.

Mr. WATsON. I am speaking of our*shipping on the lakes. Hon. gentlemen opposite taunt us with crying blue-ruin. But if we take the census returns, we will tind blue-ruin there clearly depicted. We will find that we have lost either the immigration or our natural increase. We have in ten years only increased a paltry $\mathbf{B N O}(\mathbf{O N O}$ when our increase should have been 1,810$),(000$. Take the United States right along our border, and what do we find! We find plenty commercial activity, whereas along the Canadian side, you would imagine there was a plague of small-pox which had driven the people out. If we had reciprocity with the other side, I believe that we would swon see as thriving industries here as we find over there. Hon. gentlemen opposite speak of sentiment and dilate on the pride we feel in having England at our hack. We are proud of that ; but in what manner have we treated England in return: We pride ourselves on having the British army at our back : and how have we treated England! The very artizan who is taxed to maintain that standing army, his prolucts we tax in order to keep them out of this country. And we tax them higher than we do those of the Americans. Our average rate of duty on goods coming from Great Britain is $22!j$ per cent and on goods from the United States $14 \frac{1}{3}$ per cent, but yet, still the great party opposite boast of their loyalty, taking good care all the while to discriminate against Great Britain. Take the average of duties, on dutiable and free goods from the Enited States, and it is $14 \frac{1}{3}$ per cent compared with $24 \pm$ per cent against England. Why, Sir, the proposition of the hon. gentleman is an absurd one. We have no objections to it, and the whole House, if it came to a division, would be in favour of it, but does any reasonable man expect that we are going to secure what it calls for. Let us discuss some practical question. To imagine that England is going to diseriminate in favour of Canada against any one of her colonies is, to my mind, absurt. When we on this sile speak of the advantages which the opening of the great market on the other side of the line should be to us, hon. gentlemen opposite say we are disloyal. But, 1 believe, that if they continue to pursue the course they have in the past, if they are going to maintain this protective system for another 10 years, you will a great many amnexationists in Canada, for if the people cannot change their position commercially, they will do it prlitically. I do not accuse the Conservative party of heing disloyal, and I do not think they have any right to accuse ns of disloyalty. We know in whose ranks to find the annexationists. Not one man in the Likeral ranks has ever risen to declare himself in favour of annesation : hut if we lowk to hon. gentlemen opposite we can tind annexationists in the person of their Premier, among their senators, and all along their lime. In the Likeral ranks, however, not one man hats ever risen th any position of prominence who proclaimed himself in favour of amexation. If hon.gentlemen opposite would come down to husiness with hon. gentlemen on this side and go to the Cuited States and make a fair attempt to negotiate a reciprocity treaty, I think such a move would be practicable. We have the English market for our heef and breatlatuffs free. They are trying to force the growth of larley in our country suitable to the English brewers, but so far withont success.

An hon. MEMBER. It is a success.

Mr. Watson. An hon. gentleman behind me says it is. But I know of what I speak. I know that you require to have a soil as heary and in as grod condition to proluce two-rowed barley fit for the English market as to grow wheat : and that leing the case, the farmer prefers to grow wheat. We have any amount of light soil, not under that state of cultivation which would make it favourable to the growth of wheat, but on which we can raise six-rowed barley : and where does that barley go? We exported $4, \pi(H),(N N)$ bushels to the United States and only a few thousand to Cireat Britain. Where do our horses go if not to the United States? Since Conferleration, out of some 315 ,(MN) horses we only sent $\overline{\mathrm{T}},(\mathrm{MW})$ to Great Britain, and the balance found their way to the United States despite their tariff. That is our natural market for nearly all the proluce we have outside of beef and breadstutfs. This resolution is nothing else but a fad, impossible of attainment. The last gentleman who sat down believes that imperial federation is a fad, and I think he is following up in the same line with this resolutionand trying todraw a herringacross the track. We are going to stand by what we think is in the interests of Canada, and that is to secure a market which will give the greatest good to the greatest number. Hon. gentlemen opposite speak of England having had protection until she built up her manufactures. We have had it until we have built up our manufactures to such an extent that they can form combines and trusts for the purpose of increasing prices to the consumer. An American company actually controls our cordage production to-day, and have a little preserve in Canada by which they are enabled to charge 3 cents per pound for binding twine more than what it would otherwise cost. We have sugar rings and trusts, who are even more protected than they were before the reduction of the duty, and as they bring in the raw material free we derive no revenue at all from the taxation they impose on the people. While the Americans only charge a duty of half a cent a pound, we have ${ }^{\text {min }}$ of a cent a pound and shut out all the light brown sugars which would be consumed l,y the farmers and labouring classes. Our refiners have more protection to-day than they had previous to the reduction of duty because they can bring the raw material in free and have entire control orer all the sugars consumed to the extent of ī̈ cents per pound through our restrictions on all sugars over if lhutch standard. If you want to benetit the people by reducing taxes, allow this sugar below 16 Dutch stamsard to come in free, and we will relieve them of a heavy tax withont losing a cent of revenue, a tax amounting to some $\mathbf{S 6},(\mathrm{MN}),(\mathrm{MO})$. But you retain that protection for the lenetit of a few retiners in Canala. Then take the article of coal oil. These men form a combine in Canala and oil is taxed at 110 per cent. It is used almost entirely ley the farming community and the labouring classes, because gas and electric light takes its place in towns and cities, but you find that two-thirds of the tax goes into the pockets of the refiners, hecause there are $15,0,0),(00)$ or $16,000,-$ OWI gallons used in the country, and there are D. (MN),(MO) gallons imported. You could find instances of this all through, and. as my friend from Assiniloia (Mr. Davin) stated the other day, when it can he shown that any manufacturer can form a trust or combine to unduly enhance the price to the consumer, the duty should lee reduced. I hope this side will be heard from. Evidently hon. gentlemen opposite have brought up this discussion in orler to prevent the discussion of another matter which is on the paper. I gave way on a motion which I had on the paper in order to allow the motion which should have been discussed long before this to come up. This question is not worthy of leing discussed, but it serves to kill time on a private members' day. We have only a few days, but I will utilize a portion of a (iovernment day in the discussion of the motion in reference to biniling twine, which I dropped this afternoon. Evidently hon. gentlemen opposite fear the discussion of some of the notices of motion on the paper, and put men up to talk on the idea of Eugland discriminating in favour of Canada. It is ubsurd, and a waste of time, and I will not say anything more about it just now.

Mr. McNEILL. I wish to say a word in explanation. It may be soothing to the feelings of my hon. friend from Charlotte (Mr. Gillmor) and my hon. friend who has just spoken (Mr. Watson) if I utterly repudiate, as I do, the statement that the resolution hefore the House suggests a return on the part of England to the system of protectiou. The Prime Minister of England has stated that he does not consider that discrimination in favour of the colonies means protection. I also desire to repurliate most emphatically the suggestion that has been made that this resolution has been brought up by me in order to take the time of the House. My hon. friend, I think, should hardly have flung such a statement across the floor of the House. He knows that I gave notice of this resolution long ago, and that it has come up in its proper order on the paper.

Mr. DAVIN. The question before the House, as it is on the paper, does not entirely conmend itself to me, although I agree with the idea. The question reads :
"That if and Fhen the Parliament of Great Britain and Ireland admits Canadian products to the markets of the United Kingdom upon more favourable terms than it accords to the products of foreign countries, the Parliameni of Canada will be prepared to sccond corresponding advantages by a reduction in,the duties it imposes upon British manufactured goods.'
That question as framed appears to suggest that there are limitations to lee removed by Great Britain. As a fact we know there are no limitations to le removed, and that the suggestion of the question is that limitations should be imposed. Now, that is a perfectly new idea, und I say it ought to he discussed here, if discussed at all in this practical Parliament, apart from the National Policy, apart from the extraneous questions that have been introluced into it. The question has to do entirely with Gireat Britain herself. It has to do entirely with the interests of Great Britain, and what it seems to me to suggest is. can we show to fireat Britain a reasonable equivalent to induce her to impose what she would call a duty on bread or an embargo on bread? My hon. friend who proposed this resolution showed, I think very cogently and very properly what has been shown in some leading periorlicals in (ireat Britain, that as a fact a duty on wheat has not raised the price of the loaf. If you could raise the cry in England that the price of the loaf would lee raised, it would be simply impossible to have the people of England entertain this proposition, and, therefore, it is of the most vital importance to the proposition of my hon. friend to be able to show that the price of the loaf would not be raised. Now, I grant at the very outset that it seems almost alosurd to lay down the proposition that a duty on wheat will not raise the price of that which wheat produces. Some of my friends here echo that and say it is absurd, but it has been shown in some English periodicals that a small rise in the price of wheat has not raised the price of bread. I am not sure that even that concludes the question. I am not at all sure that, if you show that in a given instance the rise of a few shillings in the price of wheat has not raisel the price of the loaf, you, therefore, show that, if you lay a discriminating duty on all the wheat going into Britain except what comes from Canala and the other colonies, it may not raise the price of the loaf. Then, on the other side, we have to remember that we do not now raise anything like the wheat we shall raise within a few years. I have stated before that we shall be alle to raise all the wheat necessary for the consumption of Great Britain, and, if we can do that, then a discriminating duty might be safely placed on all foreign grain and yet not raise the price of the loaf. The proposition of my hon. friend, which seems, at first sight, absurd nay, after all, be literally true I cast year we raised, in Manitoba and the North-West, $$ 20,000,000$ worth of wheat. Next year we may raise $$ 30,000,000$ worth, and the year after we may raise $$ 100,000,000$ worth. In fact it is incontrovertible that in those vast plains of Manitoba and the North. West we can raise enough grain to supply the world. If we can raise enough grain to supply the world much more can we raise enough grain to supply England, and not raise the price of the loaf. Now, this question is a vastly important one. The moment you go to the English Parliament and propose such a policy as this, the statesmen of England draw themselves up and say : This is a vast proposal, this is entirely new to us. We have progressed under free trade, we have built up a vast commerce under this policy. This is a new thing, can you show to us that it will be of advantage? Now, look at the extent of the British colonies, look at the peculiar position of Europe ; lecause as my hon. friend from Winnipeg (Mr. Macdonald) pointed out, when England alopted the free trade policy this proposition was in het mind, as you will see by the speeches of Richard Coblen aul John Bright : If we can only get free trade we will command the trade of the world. But the world outside were determined not to reciprocate ; and Germany, France, Belgium and Italy have thenselves built up a vast trade and industry under protection. Why, when I was in belgitum in 1887 I saw a thing that surprisedme. I saw there tradesmen's houses exporting eloth goods to Manchester. It utterly surprised me, I thought that Manchester was the chosen home of the manufacture of those goods. Now, Nir, that shows that in Belgium labour is cheaper than it is in England, therefore they can proluce at a less cost. Now, all these commercial questions are founded on the cheapness of lahour. If once the idlea can be grasped by the Chinese that they could overturn this world, I am not sure that they could not make a great stride towards it in consequęnce of their capacity of living cheaply, because cheap labour is the prime condition of cheap manufacture. Now, have not the United States taken the true idea: They say : Here we have in this country boundless resources in lands and mines : we shall take care that every man in this country manufacturer, labourer and merchant, shall be a happy and prosperous man; and so they put on a protective duty. That brings us to the very question before us at this very moment. As my hon. friend from Charlotte (Mr. (iillmor) asked, why may not the time arrive when in this vast British Enpire, where you have colonies touchingevery sea, it would be in the economic interest of that Empire to make such an arrangement as would benefit not merely the outlying colonies, not merely the ramifications of that Empire, but the heart and soul of the Empire itself? I say that is a reasonable question to ask. Now, I lay down this proposition, that evermore human affairs follows economic necessities. You cannot look at the history of the past without seeing that human affairs are controlled by human interests. Although I know that sentiment is a great influence, the primary motive in human affairs is material interest, and unless this proposition can stand the test of material interest, it cannot stand anything. Unless you can. show that this proposition of my hon. friend can atand the test of material, and economic, and personal welfare, that proposition cannot stand. But it is at the present moment, to some extent, an abstract question with a practical face, and you throw it across the broad Atlantic over which the sons of England have come to found colonies and empires here; you throw that proposition across to England, and you say to her: We believe that under this policy you can more closely, more successfully and more progressively unite the great British Empire. I say under these circumstances it is proper for us to discuss the question. Away with the tone taken by the hon. member for Marquette (Mr. Watson), away with that tone of disparagement, and this manner of appealing to our august mother ; and away with much of the discussion we have had ; because much of the discussion we have had has not been ad rem. But what I say is this, Parliament may fittingly deliberate hereas a practical assembly and say to the august mother of nations: We do not want to sever our connection with you, we look forward to a great career side by side with you, and the only way we can look forwaril to that career is by such an arrangenent between your colonies and yourselves as will bind of are closely the British Empire, and will show the world what it has never yet seen, a world-wide empire, bound together by economic and practical hands.
Mr. KENNI. As no hon. gentleman opposite seems disposed to take part in this discussion, I rise for the purpose of expressing very briefly my entire accord with the resolution which is now under consideration of the House and which aims at increasing our trade with the mother country. Whilst offering my congratulatious to the hon. memberfor North Bruce (Mr. MeNeill) for the mamuer in which he has placed this important question liefore us-and I may say that since I have had an honour of a seat in this House, I think we have considered few, if any, more important questions-whilst congratulating my hon. friend upon the manner in which he has placed this important question before the Parliament and people of Canadia, $I$, as a memleer of this House, and as a citizen of Canada, thank him for bringing it so prominently to our notice. The gentlemen who have preceded me in this important debate have dealt so fully and indeed so elonuently with the question, that I realize there is very little for me to say. I hail the introluction of this question upon our political platform and in thispolitical arena, as a happy relief from the blue-ruin cry to which we have had to listen for so many years; I hail it as a happy relief from the unpatriotic speeches which we have been condemned to read which have been uttered by hon. gentlemen opposite is the foreign city of Boston. During the last few years hon. gentlemen opposite, the leaders of the Opposition in this country, have gone to the foreign city of Boston and there propounded a policy for the people of Canada. On the last memorable occasion when the present leader of the Opposition visited Boston, he is reported in the Cauadian newspapers to have uttered the following sentiment :-
"Canada and England have interests apart, and the day will come and must come when Canads and England will have to separate from each other."
I do not know whether that statement has been read before in the course of this debate, but I consider it a very important one. It surprised the people of Canada, and the Hon. Mr. Mowat, the leader of the Liberal party in the Legislature of the important Province of Ontario, considered it incumbent upon him to take notice of it and to some extent to repudiate the sentiments which were uttered in Boston by the hon. leader of the Opposition. I can say, Sir, that in the province from which I come the idea that England and Cansda have interests apart is entirely repuliated, and that we do hope the day will never come when England and Canada will be obliged to separate. Therefore, it is that if it were only to give us the opportunity to pulblicly repudiate the sentiment in the extract I have real to the House to-night, it is well that we should have had this discussion upon the resolution now under consideration. For myself, Mr. Speaker, coming as I do from the busy ways of commerce, engaged as I mm in commercial pursuits all the year round, it seems to me that the question which is now introduced, and which in one form or another has been under the consideration of the people of Canadia for some time past, appears to be beset with certain difficulties, and I am glad to find that hon. gentlemen who have more time to devote to the consideration of this question than I possess are turning their attention to a subject which is of the most vital importance to Canada. It isall the more important, Sir, because the predictions that the gentlemen on this side of the House made as to the result of the unrestricted reciprocity agitation have been veritied. My hon. friend from Charlotte (Mr. (iillmor), who posed as a free trader, stated that his great oljection to the present conditions of things in Canada was the amount of taxation which was imposed upon the people, and yet my hon. friend voted for the unrestricted reciprocity resolutions which were submitted to this House, a policy which would have very much increased our taxation. During the debate in this House upon the unrestricted reciprocity resolutions, and upon the public platforms of Canada and in the press of our party, we told the people that the unrestricted policy which the hon. gentlemen opposite proposed conlil never be obtained unless we agreed to discriminate against the mother country, and to abricate the power which we had inherited and which we hold, of making our own fiscal arrangements. Hon. gentiemen opposite contend that such was not contemplated by the Americans, who were the other party to the bargain. They made certain pilgrimages to Washington and they ciame back with the report that there would le no difficulty in carrying out their unrestricted reciprocity policy, but the organs of the dominant party in the states told them plainly that such a policy as they advocated was impossible, and we since have the statements made in this Parliament ly Ministers of the Crown, that the Secretary of State of the United States had told our representatives at Washington that, as we predicted, the only terms on which we could have reciprocity, were that we should agree to discriminate against the mother country, and to adopt the tariffs which the Americans choose to impose. In other words, that we shall submit ourselves to the whim and the caprice and the urgencies of a foreign nation, a position which is a humiliating one, and yet it is one which these hon. gentlemen opposite, in Boston, and I believe in Buffalo, and on the floor of this House and elsewhere, have advocated not to their advancement politically but rather to their utter dismay. I agree with uy hon. friend from Winnipeg (Mr. Macdonald) that the appeal which was made to the people of Canada in 1891, and which was repeatei so generally at the byeelections in 1892, was fairly and soguarely on the trade question, and on those occasions that we advocated the protection of Canadian labour and the retention of our Canadian nationality. That was certainly the issue put before the people in the province from. which I come, and I believe it was the issue placed before the people of the entire Dominion. I have heard it also on such good anthority that I must believe it to be true that the result of the bye-elections in the Prorince of Outario which so agreeably surprised us coming from the eastem provinces, the shreds and patches, is due to the fact that the people of Ontario now realize fully what would ensue from this unrestricted reciprocity if it could be obtained. The hon. member for Marquette (Mr. Watson) in the course of his remarks, appealed to the House that we should abandon the discussion of such a trivial matter as we are now considering and proceed to the consideration of other questions. He went further. He threw across the floor the insinuation that this discussion had heen purposely prolonged to prevent the consideration of some other notices of motion which were on the paper. I wonder if the hon. gentleman remembered what occurred in this House last week. When I arrived he:e on Thursday last after the Easter vacation, ready to assist in the cleliberations of this Honse to the extent of n!y humble ability, I found the whole night spent and some 200 gentlemen wasting their time here listening to hon. gentlemen opposite discussing largely the cost of a waggonette. The next night wasdevoteal entirely to a talk upon the National Policy when the matter under consideration was the estimates for the Agriculture Department aud the approp riation for immigration. If we were to say to hon. gentlemen opposite that that looked very like obstruction, I suppose they would be very much offended: in fact I am toll, and I read it in the newspapers, that a prominent gentleman opposite who came late to the House that night was very much offended and so expressed himself, at the bare insinuation that such conduct was meant to obstruct, and yet the member for Marquette (Mr. Watson) states here to-night, when we are alvocating a measure of the greatest importance to the people of Canada, that we are wasting the time of Parliament and that we are debating an impractical question. Now, Mr. Speaker, I have simply to say that I am very glad, indeed, that this matter has been brought up, anl that it has been so fully discussed, becanse I hope and I lielieve that if some such arrangement as this resolution contemplates can be established, it will inure to the material advantage of the people of Canala, and will strengthen those ties which bind us in a love-knot to the mother country and to the great Empire of which we form so important a part.

Mr. FOSTER. Before the rote is taken on the motion of my hon. friend, I desire to say a few worls, and very few they shall be. I desire to join with others who have spoken in congratulating my hon. friend on the able manner in which he has placed this resolution before the House and the country, and I thank him also for having done it, for this reason, if not for any other, that it has given us a debate out of the ordinary, in which for a time party politics and attacks and comnter attacks have been pretty well lost sight of, and the thought of the House has been directed to a higher and larger question. I think it is a matter for congratulation when questions of this higher kind can now and then be discussed in an assembly like this. I also thank him for it on account of its value, to which point several hon. gentlemen have already spoken, and which I shall not elaborate further. It has been a little peculiar to notice the broall silence with which the question has been treated

Some hon. MEMBERS. By the Government.

Mr. FOSTER-by gentlemen who are generally forward to speak on most questions that come lefore this House. I venture to say that if anything having the least suspicion of unrestricted reciprocity had heen iupvolved in a proposition brought before the House, hon. gentlemen would have found their tongues, and we would have had the usual flood of eloquence and bubbling springs of enthusiasm which one naturally lonks for in dis. cussions from that side of the House. I desire to state, in connection with this question, first, that although it would be a goold thing for Canada to have reasonable trade arrangements with the country to the south of us, although it would be a letter thing in my belief for Canada, if it could be brought alout, to have the advantage of a proposition of this kind practically carried out, I do not believe that the future of canada, its progress, its development, its prosperity, depend absolutely upon either the one or the other. That is the proposition which I wish to make now, and to make as firmly and as strongly as I can, that it is not because Canada is in extremix that she wants either the one or the other : and if it happens that she can get neither, her future is not therefore beclouded, and her great prosperity is not therefore placed in doult. I wish also to state that I dissent from the doctrine which is frequently put forth in the country and in this House, that Canada at the present time is being hemmed in and restricted in her trade relations-is having a cordon of restriction and exclusion drawn continually more tightly about her, and that therefore she is in a condition which reguires vigorons and active effort in one direction or another in order to insure for her any chance for progress and prosperity. A glance at the circumstances surrounding us is sutficient to place this in a stronger light. Whereare the restrictions? Where is the hemming in process? Where is this cordon which is continually being drawn more tightly about her, which closes her avenues of trade and strangles the business life of the country : Fven in the case of the United states it is not a new thing for Canada to have a tariff against her. Since 1340 a protective tariff has met all Canarlian goods going to the border: since 1883 a very high tariff has met them; and since 1890 they have been met liy a tariff which is in some respects higher and in some lower than the previous one. such have been the relations letween the two countries, however, that Canadian goods have to a large extent found a market in the United States, notwithstanding these tariffs, and until an absolutely prohibitive tariff is placed against them, they will continue to find an entraise to a very large extent in the market to the south of us. If we go a little further south to the West Indies, hon. gentlemen opposite have sometimes asserted that we were being restricted there; but the facts do not bear out that assertion. Not only have we just as free entrance into the markets of the West Indian Islands, as we ever had before, but our position has been actually made better. If it be true in regard to necessary articles of consumption, that the freer their entrance into the conntry of the consumers, the more will be consumed, we stand to-day in a better position in regard to the West Indies than we did before the United States made a treaty with them, for the effect of that treaty has been to lessen the duties on the goods, the produce of this country, which are consumed in those islands, and therefore to enable them to consume more of them, and to require us to send them more. If we go to the Antilles, although the United States has made a farourable treaty with Spain in regard to those islands, the Dominion of Canada is a sharer in the advantage, and gets better terms in that market than it had before. Hon. gentlemen may say that on the 30th of June this advantage may cease, and we may reply that it may cease or it may continue, and negotiations are at present on foot between Sireat Britain and Spain looking to a continuance of the present treaty or the negotiation of a new one. Gioing further south the only country with regard to which Canada has been placed at a greater disadvantage than before is Brazil, a large market, it is true, but between which and Canada the traffic has never been very large. Whatever comes of that clisadvantage we bear, but it is a small thing on account of the smallness of the trade we have had with Brazil. With all the other South American countries, we are on the same footing as before, and at all events our trade with the countries of South America is not a large trade. If we go to the eastern countries, our traffic with the great east, the old east, is continually developing. It is not yet magnificent or immense, but it is developing by large and guick percentages, and gives a prospect of opening widely into lucrative and progressive trade. So much for this continent, and that brief review of it shows that the trade of Canada is not being hampered or hindered on account of the circumstances that exist in this respect. With regard to the old country, the great market of Britain is open to us as free as ever it was, and is opening to us in larger measure and in greater degree than eier before, inasmuch as our products are becoming better titted for the particular uses of customers there, and their excellence is becoming recognized. And when once they have overcome the prejudice, long and hard to overcome, against Canalian goods, they will, by dint of long tenure and durability, be able to hold their own against other goods which had equally to withstand a similar prejudice in the first instance. Instead of finding the avenues closed and our trade hampered, the prospects are of an almost unlimited development of traile in that direction in the great staple articles which we can produce in this country to a very large extent. How is it in the continental countries? The maximum of the French tariff is applied against us at present. We hope it may not be so for a very long while, but our export trade to France has not as yet been large, not so large as we would wish it to be, but even the maximum tariff which is applied against us there on account of our small export trade to that country, does not fatally injure us, and is more than compensated by the benefit we have in other markets in Europe on account of the lowering of rates for staples which Canada produces. Going outside of France, we find that, owing to the treaty arrangenents made between Germany, Austria, Hungary, Switzerland, Belgium and Italy, there has taken place a considerable reduction in certain staple goorls of which Canada has a surplus, and that by virtue of the most-favoured nation clause in the treaty with England with these countries, this benefit inures to us, and our markets are being opened up in that direction. This is proof, and I refer to it just to show, if it were necessary to show, that the position is altogether unfounded and untenable that the markets of Canada are being circumscribed. They are not being circumscribed. They are being developed and they will be developed more and more in proportion, as, having gained a foothold in our own markets, having practically captured our own markets, our people now, with their enterprise and push and energy, are opening up markets in other parts of the world and are devoting the enterprise and energy, which at first were entirely confined to the exploiting of our own markets, to exploiting the markets in foreign fields. Anyway let us come to the practical proof, that is as to whether or not our exports are increasing or decreasing. Are they increasing or clecreasing: They are increasing and increasing largely, and increasing more largely than the trade retums show, because the trade returns show simply the value and not the volume of trade; and if the diminution in price which has taken place from year to year were added to the increase in the value of our trade, there would be shown a very notable increase in the export trade of our country over previous years; and this present year, when the stress and strain of this restrictive process should have weight and force, if it ever should have, in the nine months compared with the corresponding nine months of the previous year, there is an increase in our exports of nearly $\leqslant 12,000,0(1) 0$. I dismiss this trade question with these few observations. Now let me, if you please, give a little attention to two or three points of the guestion in hand. I have tried to make this clear, that Canada is not in oxtremis and therefore bound to look in either one or the other direction for lenefits in trade in order to conserve her trade vitality or keep on progressing and developing, but that is no reason why we should not use every power and energy to get an outlet in both, if possible, or in the mosst heneficial if we cannot in both. The next point to which I wish to draw attention is this: There are certain difficulties in the way of carrying out the proposition of my hon. frienil. I do not wish to say that the proposition is one which will go by the mere reading of it. Neither does my hon. friend. No one knows better than he, for he has studied the ques-tion--and no one will know better than the one who studies it most thoroughly-that before such can be achieved, there will need to be very great changes in public opinion. There will have to be great changes in existing fiscal arrangements; there will have to be great changes in the circumstances and apportionnents of trade, before that proposition can be thoroughly worked out and adopted, involving, as it does, the gigantic undertaking of revolutionizing sentiment on the other side and possibly, to some extent, sentiment on this side ; but the arguments which my hon. friend has brought forward should teach us is that we are not to be discouraged, if it is not this year or next year or the year after, or even longer before the Empire draws itself together in bonds of trade and commerce as wide over the world as the flag of the Einpire floats. But there are ditficulties. What are they? The first difficulty that occurs to one's mind is the force of what is called free trade sentiment in Great Britain, as expressed by the hon. gentleman from Marquette (Mr. Watson), who, out of his wealth of wisdom and long experience, flew in the face of all those who were of a different opinion, and declared that the proposition was an absurd one. No doubt, the force of the free trade sentiment which has to be overcome in the old country is a formidable difficulty, but it is $n 0^{+}$a difficulty which is insurmountable in my humbleopinion. If I read public opinion in the old country aright, I believe that the free trade sentiment pure and simple founded upon what was thought to be irrefutable principles, almost divine in their origin, is largely changing in Great Britain. I believe that there, as the wide world over, partly through processes internal and partly by necessities which urge from without, it is coming to be felt that there is no such thing as a fixed and divine principle underlying trade and that tariff conditions are simply experlients, which must vary from age to age and from day to day and from circumstance to circumstance, and what is a right and good policy in trade matters to-day for a country may, in ten years from that time, not be the policy at all which should be carried out. And so the forces inside and the forces outside are, in my humble opinion, doing very much in Great Britain to-day to make the people reflect as to whether or not it is best to continually work on the line of abstract free trade, or whether there are not larger and greater interests at stake, which will make them revise their opinions, and to a certain extent move them in the interests of their own country and the broader interests of the Empire, of which they areat the same time the heart and the head. SoI do not look upon it as being an obstacle insuperable and incapable of heing orercome that the free trade sentiment in Gireat Britain has been strong and that therefore it will not vary to the degree of making a discrimination in favour of colonial produce in return for a discrimination by colonial peoples in favour of British manufactured goods. The second obstacle which shows itself to one's mind is the protective idea in our own country. They say to you: What does that mean? Are you going back on your system of protection in Canala? Are you going in for free trade: That does not follow. Protection as a systenı in Canada was adopted for a purpose, and it exists to-day for a purpose, but I hold that, while we are not going to destroy the industries which we have brought into being and into successful development in this country by the policy which was forced upon us and which was a wise and enlightened policy for Canada to adopt, competition is a necessary balance-wheel for protection, and the results of protection, and, if we are to have competition, it is not a bad thing that this competition should be British if we can get any compensating advantages on the other side to make it British to the exclusion of competition from other sources. So it is not impossible neither is it a contradiction of the protective policy and the protective system in a reasonable way that we should enter into this agreement and be mutually benefited thereby. Another obstacle is the " mostfavoured nation" clauses. If we give advantages to British goods, we must, by these clauses in the treaties of Great Britain with other nations, give the same advantages to the goods of those countries.

These obstacles exist to tion, but they are not insuperable. Who that has stradien the changes in regard to tariffs in Europe and the changes in opinion in reference to these matters within the last five years is not prepared for greater changes than those which have taken place? In the last ten years the whoie policy of Europe in this regard has changed, and what was considered good policy in making long treaties with "favoured nation" clauses is not to-day considered the best policy, and the nations of Europe are denouncing by wholesale the treaties containing the "mostfavoured nation" clauses, and are obtaining greater freedom than these long treaties gave them in their commercial action. These changes have been brought upon them by great changes in economic development, and by the opening up in the different parts of the world of new producing centres as well as new markets, and the same reasons may create a change in (Great Britain which may lead that country to do, what that country's government is in sympathy with doing, get rid of the clogging effects of those treaties as far as the relations of Great Britain to her colonies are concerned. So these are not insuperable difficulties. Then there is another difficulty. What are yon going to do for reveniue? If you are going to discriminate in favour of British manufactured goods, you will lop off so much revenue. Of course that will be considered, but, if the compensating advantages to the trade of the country should beso greatasisrepresented, wecandowithout so much revenue from that source and get it in another way. That is a difficulty easily met if the compensating effects are in any uay commensurate with it. There is also a difticulty to be thought of, and that is, suppose that (Great Britain and Canada and the colonies of the Empire, at large make this discriminating or this differential arrangement between themselves, it is like raising a harrier against the rest of the world, and will not the other nations of the world retaliate and raise their tariffs against British and colonial prolucts: That may possibly take place, but there never has been and is not to-day any empire in the wide world which is so self-containerl and sufficient for itself as the British Empire and its dependencies. If this were done, and retaliatory tariffs were attempted ly other peoples against such a combination, there is nothing that human beings eat or wear or require for enjoyment or pleasure which is not raised, and raised to the full, in some one or other of the countries which to-day are dependencies of the great British Empire. So, taking these ditficulties into consideration and not taking a rosy view of this matter at all, seeing all the lions in the path, I yet believe that, when this people and the British people and the greater British people the wide world over get their heart and their mind down to this matter, these lions will be found to be but chained, and when this subject is heartily and earnestly taken up, with due consideration of the great inperial and world-wide questions, these obstacles will be surmounted and these difficulties overcome without danger either to the central part of the Empire or to the dependencies themselves. So I am in favour of what my hon. friend has moved. I want it to go as the voice of Canada to Great Britain, as our hand held out to them. The hon. gentleman fromCharlotte(Mr. Gillmor) represented it as a mean and dickering proceeding for us to say to Great Britain : You do so much for me and I will do so much for you, as if that were undignified and unworthy. It struck me that my hon. friend did not make equally strong objection when certain resolutions were introduced by my hon. friemis opposite to discriminate against the goods of Great Britain in toto in favour of goods from the United States. He did not say then that it was a mean thing to do, but he thinks it is a mean thing for as to dicker with Great Britain and to say : You do something for us and we will do something for youn. I think it is a plain business matter, and I hope this resolution will be passed by a strong, round majority. I.et it go to (ireat Britain as the voice of one of its premier colonies, as the voice of this great Dominion, declaring that we are willing to join you hand in hand in business and economic matters as we join you heart in heart in loyalty and sentiments of devotion to the Empire. It will have its effect. It nay not be now, it may be much later when the full effect comes, but Canada will have done its duty, and I as well as others camot but be captivated with the grand possibilities of the prospect. The great British Empire, disjointed to a certain extent with various tariffs and policies in its different parts, is yet the greatest empire in the world. But if you cain hing this idea to work and add the harmony and mity of commercial and trade interests to all the rest. you will have such an empire in its strength and in its prosperity as the world has never seen hefore, and as the world will never see hereafter. This proposition was not put hefore the Honse in order to olstruct business; this proposition has not heen debated in the Honse in any childish or ohstructive spirit. It is a calma cund solver proposition which has leen delated in a calm and sober way, and it has within it the elements of great possible benefit, not only to Canala and to Great Britain lut to the British Empire the wide world through.
Mr. IAVIES (P.E.I.) I fear that the ponderons platitules of the Minister of Finance will hardly be accepted by the hon. gentleman who moved this resolution to-night as compensation for the cold water which the Minister has thrown upon his truly loyal resolution. The hon. gentleman was cruel, maliciously cruel I would say, in allowing my hon. friend from North Bruce (Nil:. MuNeill) and the gallant hand of loyal members who followed him, to exude with loyalty for some five or six hours this evening in stipport of a resolution upon which he contimued to pour buckets of cold water from the time he stooll up until just hefore he closed. Sir, the hon. gentleman was surprised at the ominous silence of the Opposition. It did not strike him as singular that a proposition amounting to a fiscal revolution was proposed by one of his followers and supported by six or seven other followers, and that not a member of the Government rose to lead the House, and tell us what their policy was. It did not strike him as at all singular that they had abdicated their functions in a matter of large fiscal policy, and called upon the Opposition to-night, as they have called upon them time and again, to give them a policy and to lead them out of the wilderness in which their friends seem to think they are wandering. The hon. gentleman's friends have lost their faith in the National Policy ; they are anxiously seeking round for some exit, some way of escape, from the miserable dilemma, from the commercial atrophy which surrounds this country everywhere. And, sir, the hon. gentleman who should lead them, this pulitical Moses who should strike the rock and make the water to flow, looks across the House and asks the Opposition : Can you tell us what we ollght to do with this resolution? Why his position to-night was almost as pitiable as that of the Minister of Agriculture last Friday uight. He did not know what the policy of the diovernment was, and he was afraid that if he did know it he could not explain it. Now, what does the hon. gentleman tell us: He says things are very satisfactory: there is no need of preaching blneruin or singing doleful songs about the condition of this country. Canada is not now hemmed! in nor is Canarla being hemmed in, by the tariffs of any of the surrounling countries. Commercial prosperity, if one cam believe his statements, is aboumding. I suppose the hon. gentleman believes it abounds in the province which he specially represents. I suppose the city of St. John is, in his opiniou, a good example to-day of commercial prosperity, and the Province of New Brunswick, which never was so poor, from which there never was such an exolus before, the commercial metropolis of which is enveloped in a commercial atrophy never felt before, are, I suppose, places which he would especially single out ass examples of the prosperity of this country. We are not being hemmed in. No, Sir, not when Newfoundland, in response to the silly and childish retaliatory policy which the hon. gentleman introduced a few years ago of taxing the trade between that country and this, has put in almost prohibitory tariff upon our exports to that country: and turned the whole trale which should How into Canada, into the United itates chamels. We are not being hemmed in from a country to which we sent a hundred thousand barrels of Hour last year, and to which, under existing circumstances, we cannot send one, a country to which Prince Edward Island and the eastern coast of Nova sicotia, including Cape Breton, exported annually enormous quantities of fool products. which are now to be excluded by this prohibitory tariff which the hon. gentleman's silly legislation has invited and challenged. Fet the hom. gentleman tells his friends we are not being henmed in from Newfoundland. Sir, he calls our attention to the Spanish Antilles once nore, knowing well that on the 30th June next, our equal rights to the entrance of our products into those ports will cease, and that the United States, with the adrantages which they vossess under the new treaty, will take possession of those markets of which we formerly had a large share, and that we will practically be prohibited. He tells us the old story about the Spanish treaty. Why, Sir, I have been 10 years in this House, anil I can never remember a session in which negotiations were not going on at Madrid about this wonderful Spanish tieaty. I expect the results next IUne to be just as they were before. And the West Indies-the hon. gentleman says there has been a new free trade policy introduced there. the consequence of which will be that the people will get their goods much cheaper, that there will be a largerconsumption, and that we willsharein the large exports to that country to supply the consumption. What a speciousargument to come from that hon.gentleman. If that is the effect, why does he not carry it out in the country where he has the power? Why does he not give us free goods here, by taking off
in his heart and soul that he has discovered a policy which is capable of being practically carried out. I admire the hon. gentleman, I like to see him when he rises enthusiastically and presses and forces his points, because he has convinced himself, if he has convinced no one else, that he can reconcile his loyalty to the United Empire with the policy of taxing English goods which he has heen adrocating for years. What does the Minister of Finance offer to my hon. friend? In the first place, a bucket of cold water, by telling him there are certain difficulties. There is the policy of free trade in England which permeates all classes of society, even down to the artizan who umints to get cheap bread; and there will he a great difficulty in overcoming that. Then the Minister of Finance said there was the protective feeling in Canada, which he has supported for the last twelve years to build up the Canadian manufacturers and to the exclusion of the British manufacturers, and you have got to overcome that. Bucket of water No. 2. Then there is a possible loss of revenue, bucket No. 3, and the Minister of Finance said: Possibly that may be modified ly a possible compensating advantage, I could not make out very well what it was. And last of all he says: But if you adopt this policy Great Britain may invite a retaliatory policy from all the world. Bucket of water No. 4. So, sir, the Minister of Finance went on throwing bucket after bucket of cold water, until I looked for my hon. friend from Bruce (Mr. McNeill) to see if he was alive and kicking, as I expected him to jump up and withdraw his policy altogether. Now, Mr. Speaker, what does the Minister of Finance advise as the policy of the Govermment. He says: Carry the resolution by a unanimous vote as a message to the old country and it will cement and unite the great imperial and British Empire all over the world in some love knot. Is this the twaddle that sensible and practical men are to have addressed them by the Finance Minister? What nonsense, Sir. He has proven to the mover of the resolution that the resolution is absolutely ridiculous and not capable of being carried out, and yet he calls upon Parliament unanimously to vote it. Why, Sir, it is positively pitiful, the condition into which the Parliament of Camada is leing dragged to-day by the hon. gentleman advocating a policy which in one breath he says is incapable of heing carried out, and which in the next breath he asks us to pass for some fanciful reason. The hon. gentleman says he is going to cement the Empire. I will show him directly what imperial statesmen think of the kind of cement he offers. I want to address one word of pity, or sympathy rather, to the unctuous and eloguent member for Halifax (Mr. Kenny), to my friend from St. John (Mr. Skinner), and to our pleasant, agreeable and genial friend from Winnipeg (Mr. Macdonald) who supported this resolution under the belief that they were doing something whioh is loyal to the mother country, and which was going to win the approval of the gentlemen on the front benches. What was the surprise of the member from Halifax (Mr. Kenny) when he found the Minister of Finance sitting upon him and telling him that this policy was positively impracticable. The hon. gentleman from Halifax told us, taking up the statement of the member from Winnipeg (Mr. Macdonald), that there was a revolution in public sentiment in this country, that the effect of the policy of the Opposition had only lately heen discovered, and that the electorate by an increased vote had set their face against it. Sir, is that true? Perhaps it is. I remember that an election took place in Halifax a year ago. .I remember at that time when the hon. gentleman preached nothing but loyalty that he came out with a majority of 1,000 votes. He went back to his constituents after the people had had twelve months to think it over, and he came out with his majority reduced 66 per cent. That is the condition of my hon. friend from Halifax.
Mr. KENNY. That is not the condition in Ontario.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E. I.) Then all I have got to say is that I recommend the hon. gentleman to educate the people of Ontario as he educated his own people, and I have no doubt that if he talked to them as he talks to his own friends, the results will be the same in Ontario as they were in Halifax. I like to see my hon. friend from st. Johm (Mr. Skinner) speak as he dill to-night, because he is known to be a loyal man. Why, Sir, I remember a year or two ago when the hon. gentleman pronounced from one of the platforms of Canada, that the Tory party with which he is now allied had done more by their policy to promote annexation than anything that has ever happened in Canala. I was not surprised at the hon. gentleman's speech to-night. He is no political Bourbon, for when it is necessary to change his opinions he cau do it, and more than that, the hon. gentleman can give you as many contradictory opinions in the same spleech as he pleases. He started out to-night with a burst of loyalty. He warned usI did not know whom he particularly addressed, but he looked chiefly towards the hon. member for West York (Mr. Wallace) ; I do not know that he thought the memler for West York was particularly disloyal but he looken in that direction-he warnerl him and he warned this House that come weal come woe, the Canadian people had nuiled their colours to the mast and were going to sink or swim with the mother country. But no sooner had he finished a carefully prepared and well delivered essay on that part of the subject, than he turned round and said: I tell you that if (ireat Britain won't keep us on our own terms, which are reasonable, we will repeat the revolution which brought about the independence of the United States. Such are the arguments by which my honourable and earnest friend from Bruce (Mr. McNeill) has leen supported this evening. I have a great deal of synupathy with him in many things, and I have sympathy with him in the sorrowful condition in which he finds himself placed. Now, Sir, let me address a few serious words to my hon. friend upon his resolution itself. The Minister of Finance, although he does not believe in the resolution, and showed by so many cogent reasons that it was incapable of being practically carried out, said, if not to flatter the vanity of my hon. friend, I do not know what for, let us pass the resolution as a message of peace and to "cement the Empire." That was bosh. I want to ask my hou. friend from Bruce a question or two about his resolution, because I think it was not drawn up by himself, but by some old parliamentary hand, and I will tell him why. The resolution says:
${ }^{c}$ That if and when the Parliament of Great Britain and Ireland admits Canadian products to the marizets of the United Kingdom upon more favourable terms than it accords to the produce of foreign countries, the parliament of Canada will be prepared to accord corresponding advantages."
Nou. if he had stopped there I would have understood the resolution. What corresponding advantages? He confines them and limits them by saying :
"By a reduction in the duty it imposes upon British manufactured goods."
But not by discriminating. The hon. gentleman does not offer the prize of discrimination to them. He will only reduce the duties on their goods on condition of their diseriminating against the rest of the world. Does the hon. gentlenian mean to discriminate against the rest of the world if he gets discrimination in England in his favour? If he does, why does he not say so: Why, sir, I an more magnanimons than he, for I will propose to reduce the duties on goods from England now, out of the abundance of my loyalty and yool-will, whether England discriminates in our favour or not ; and I want to know, Sir, whether that loyal gentleman and I believe he is loval and the dozen or two other gentlemen, who followed him and asserted their loyalty, will back me up in that proposition: Sir, we have talked a great deal about loyalty to Great Britain, and what does it amount to practically? A few years ago you came in, and when you got into power you commencel to tax British goodls as highly us you could tax them. Some hon. gentlemen to-night told us that we owe a great deal to Great Britain ; we have the protection of her anmy and her navy, we live under the agis of her name, and we are proud to le a part of the Empire; but the return of thanks which we have given to (ireat Britiin for all this has been to tax her goods to the attermost. Sir, to day it is a lamentable fact that hon. gentlemen opposite not only tax British goods, but practically discriminate acgainst (ireat Britain. They do not take an article, such as iron or coal or soap, and say it shall pay so much daty when it comes from Cireat Britain and so mach when it comes from the United states. If they did that, I would admire their courage and manliness, if I did not adopt their policy. But they were mean enough to discriminate against (ireat Britain in an underhand way. Their tariff was so framed that on a total of $\$ 42,000,000$ worth of goonls imported from Great Britain they collected $\$ 9,114,000$, or 22 per cent, while on a total of $\mathrm{Sis} 3,600,060$ worth of goords imported from the United States they collected taxes amounting to $\$ 7,734,824$, or 14 per cent.
Mr. O'BRIEN. Leave out the free gools.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) So that upon the total imports from Great Britain, which are $\$ 11,000,000$ less than the total imports from the States, the taxes are $\$ 1,500,000$ more. An hon. gentleman says, oh, that includes free goods. Certainly, it includes free gools. Yon have watched what class of goods come from the States, and what class come from Great Britain, and you have placed on the free list such an enormons proportion of the goods that you know come from the States, that you turn the tables entirely against Great Britain. You allow free goods to come from Great Britain to the amount of $\$ 10,599,000$, while from the United States you allow free goods to Mr. Davies (P.E.I.) come in to the amount of $\$ 23,895,255$. Why do you not apply to the mother country the same measure that you do to the United States in respect of free goods? Why, Sir, leave out the free gooils, and take the dutiable goods alone, and you tax those from Great Britain 4 per cent more than you do those from the United States. The dutiable goois from Great Britain are taxed 294 per cent against $2 i \frac{1}{4}$ per cent on those from the United States. The hon. gentleman sees that he has been acting towards the mother country as an undutiful and disloyal son. Why, Sir, I have sat in this House for eleven sessions, and I have seen Finance Minister after Finance Minister come down with increased tariffs, with the object, they said, not of protecting British goods, or promoting British trade, but of protecting (anadian manufactures: and I have never yet seen one of those superloyal gentlemen who have spoken tonight, and who are bursting with loyalty to the old flac, raise his voice in protest. Oheliently one after another they have recorled their votes, and the higher the tariff has risen the higher they climbed: they got on the top and shouted: I am loyal tis the oll Hag. Let me call the attention of my hon. friend-who I think is capable of leing converted--I hope so--to one or two things in connection with the imports of (ireat Britain. I took the Trade and Navigation Returns when the hon. gentleman wis speaking, and went through them carefully, selecting the tigures showing the imports of woollen manufactures : and althongh it may be tedious, I will read over the taxes which the hon. gentleman voted to place on 13ritish woollen goods and the taxes on the sume character of gools imported from the United states; and the hon. gentleman knew when he voted for the tariff that all these woollen goorls came from Fingland, and would have to come from Englanil; yet he placerl an enormous duty upon them. Let me give him the result, which he may send to England as at message of peace and good-will, to show how much we love the olil flage:

Mr. DAVIN. Question. What has this to do .with the question ?

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) What has this to do with the question, says one hon. gentleman, who is a little more obtuse to-night than he generally is, for he is generally very clear-headed. It has this to do with it : I am pointing out that hon. gentlemen opposite tax commodities which they know have to be imported from Great Britain, and put on the free list those that come from the United States ; and I read a statement of the articles, and I intend to invite the hon. gentleman to-night to support a resolution declaring, not that we will concede to Great Britain a reduction of duties in return for some advantage which we ask her to grant, but out of the abundance of our loyalty and levotion, and in consideration of all she has done for us, what she is doing now, and what she will do in the future for us-in consideration of the fact that her markets are thrown open for all the products we can grow and export-, that for all these reasons and also because they are unnecessary, we offer to reduce or remove the duties upon English manufactures. Sir, we have treated the mother country harshly, cruelly and selfishly. There has been no loyalty, no love, no devotion on our part. Pure and unadulterated selfishness has marked the conduct of this country daring the past twelve years, in its dealings with the mother land to whom we owe so much and of whou we speak so proudly. Do we feel as truly as we speak? If we do, let us show our loyalty in something more than loud phraseology. The hon. gentleman told us he really believed there were evidences in England to show that this policy of his hat some prospect of success. He guoted from a copy of the London Times. I failed to catch myself the special pertinency of the quotation he read, but nevertheless I credit him with gool intentions, and I have no doubt he thought he was quoting something which supported his views. Further than that, he quoted from the resolution moved at the Birmingham conference of the Conservative party held only last fall in England, and he told us that a resolution embodying views similar to those he had expressed here, in behalf of a discriminating tariff in favour of the colonies against the rest of the world, was received with great applanse by that conference as representing the whole Tory party. He would lead us to believe that that was some evidence that the Tory party were prepared more or less to take up this policy. Well, the hon. gentleman, having been in political leading strings so long in this House, and knowing the extent to which even the best minded man in the party will follow their leaders, might have known that while the leaders were throwing this fly at the convention, they had no idea of ever emborlying it in their policy. It was supposed to catch some floating votes. There was not a man of third rate or man of fourth rate or even tenth rate standing who spoke in favour of it. But when parliament met, when the motion for an address in reply to Her Majesty's speech was moved, then came forward Mr. James Lowther, the leader of my hon. friend, seconded by Colonel Howard Vincent with a resolution in the direction in which the hon. gentleman moved to-night. How did it fall? It fell still-born. It got a mover and a seconder. It had a father and step-father, and nothing else. One hon. gentleman told us to-night that there was a majority against it. Nonsense, Sir, there was not a third man to be found in the House. It was ridiculed and laughed out of the House. I hold in my hand both the resolution and the comments made by Sir Michael Hicks. Beach on behalf of the Government. I will quote the resolution for the special bencfit of the hon. gentleman. I was surprised that his political repertoire being so well filled with literature on this subject, he did not give this speech to the House to-night, for I know he was anxious we should have both sides, and surely he was anxious that the Canadian people, who have not the privilege, many of them, of taking the Timex, should know what the Conservative leader of the Conservative party in the Honse of Commons silid when this question was broached there. Here is the resolution :
" Resolution moved by W. J. Lowther in amendment to the Address on speech 'regretting retention in certain treaties of provisions opersting in restraint of the estab ${ }^{-}$ lishment of preferential trading relations smongst the several portions of the Empire,', Nothing could be plainer. It is the hon. gentleman's proposition in a nutshell, freed from the amhiguity he has introrluced into his resolution. Let the first step, he said, lee taken to denonnce those treaties which prevent our establishing a system of preferential trade relations among the several portions of the Empire. And what did Sir Michael Hicks. Beach say :

Abstract

"We are offered what the right hon. gentleman calls a comprehensive commercial policy; in other words a preferential arrangement of a very remarkable character between our colonies and the United Kingdom. I confess, speaking for myself, that I would go a long way if I could secure a Zollverein between the colonies and the United Kingdom, a common tariff applicable to the whole Empire. But this miserable substitute would injure us without doing the colonies any good. Why would it injure us? Becsuse the colonies according to my right hon. friend desire a preference in our market for those goods which they principally seud us. What are those goods? Corn, meat wool (cheers), raw materials of food the cheapness of which is essential to the best interests of this country-(cheers). Supposing a duty is imposed upon those articles coming from foreign countries here, what would be the natural effect? The price would be raised by something more than the duty. If the price was not raised what good would it be to the colonies? We should be in fact rdopting a policy of protection upon imported food for the benefit not of our own agricultural interests-which many of us might be anxious to do something for-but for benefit of the agricultural interest of our colonies (cheers). We should lose in that way and how should we gain? Wonld the colonies reduce their duties on our manafactured goods."

I want to put that question to the Minister of Finance to-night. I think it is his duty to tell this Honse and the country if he favours this policy.

Mr. McNEILL. That is the resolution.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) -
" (Mr. Lowther). They would give us a preference. (Sir M. Hicks-Beach.) You would leave them perfect freedom to impose as high duties as thes chose upon manufactured goods going from this country in competition with their own manufactures-giving a small 10 per cent preference to our manufactures as compared with the manufactures of foreign countries. What would be the good of that? They would take good care to protect their manufactures as against ours, and as agrinst the competition in the colonial market. Why we have these markets already on equal terms, and therefore my right hon. friend's scheme is hardly any good at all."
And wheu the hon. gentleman finished his speech and sat down, the baby fell to the floor still-born, and it has never been heard of since in England; and now the little animal has been brought across the Atlantic and trotted out here to-night. and the poor little puling infant, after being supplied with milk from the super-loyalists on both sides of the House, has had its pror little hrains dashed out with four buckets of cold water ly the Minister of Finance. I do not think my hon. friend really appreciated the importance of the demand he was making on this country. When the hon. member for Assiniboia was speaking alout the quantity of grain we export to Great Britain, I turned up the Statesmen's Year Book of last year to see the proportions of grain supplied. I find that Great Britain imports $13,262,592$ yuarters of wheat, which makes, one quarter being 8 bushels, 105,000,000 bushels. I find that in 1891 the United Kingdom imported $3,633,0 \times 1$ quarters of wheat from her own possessions and the remainder from foreign countries. What are her own possessions from which she imports wheat? What position has Canada relatively to the other possessions that supply this enormous quantity of wheat. The United States sent 4,838,991 quarters; Russia sent 2,910,581 quarters; India, 2,601, 1:\% quarters: and Canada, 634,768 quarters. That is a large quantity, true ; and I hope that my hon. friend will be right in his prediction that in the near future we will largely increase that quantity, but is it not pitiable at present to talk of our ability to supply the English market, when, out of the total of $13,653,000$ quarters, we only sent 634,000 quarters. Why, instead of the few thousand yeople we have in the North-West, we would require to have six or eight or ten millions of people there, and God knows we never will have them there as long as we have a National Policy. I think my hon. friend from Assiniboia (Mr. Davin), great as his faith was at one time, has had it very much lessened of late years in the "cabinet of antiques." It is so late that I will not delay the House with any more tigures, but I will invite my hon. friend to join with me in exhibiting, not a false or hypocritical offer to Great Britain, but an offer to improve and extend our relations with the mother country on a proper basis, and to support an amendinent in the form of a fair and generous offer to Great Britain, something which she has a right to expect from us. I move that all the words after "that" in the main motion be erased and the following substituted instead thereof :
"Inasmach as Great Britain admits the products of Canada into her ports free of duty, this House is of the opinion that the present scale of duties exacted on goods, mainly imported from Great Britain should be reduced."
Sir IOHN THOMPSON. A number of gentlemen who have spoken in this debate, even the hon. member from Prince Edward Island (Mr. Davies) havecongratulated the mover of the resolution which we have been discussing all the afternoon on the manner in which he presented it for the consideration of the House, and I am sure we might well include the hon. gentleman who seconded it in such excellent terms, but I did not rise for the purpose of repeating congratulations which are by this time unnecessary, but for the purpose of mentioning a new cause of congratulation to our hon. friends. They have succeeded, after some hours of debate, in converting a gentleman in the most remarkable manner I have ever witnessed. More than that, it would seem from the resolution with which the speech we have just listened to has been concluded, that my hon. friends have succeeded in converting a whole party in this House in a manner which was never witnessed on the floor of a deliberative assembly on a previous occasion. We have seen a party which. if it has been distinguished for anything in this country for the last six years, has been distinguished for open, blatant declamation against any policy that favoured the mother country, we have seen that party wheel about in the course of one evening and not only propose a resolution to the House on the pretended lasis of favouring the mother country, but hurl all kinds of objurgations against my hon. friends on this side, when they stood by the interests of the mother country and by the interests of the Empire, as having been too weak and undutiful subjects. The men who became converts since $A$ oclock, the men whose policy has changed since dimner, have reproached us with treating the mother country harshly, cruelly and undutifully, and they have discovered that my hon. friend from Bruce (Mr. McNeill) is an undutiful and disloyal son. Another gentleman who spoke this afternoon made a patriotic speech full of ambition, that we should renain in the Empire, to share in the glories of the Empire and in its dangers, and they accuse him of something like disloyalty because he concluded by stating that we desired to accomplish this within the Empire and for the Empire, and that we would only clo it ontside the Empire under compulsion of such a nature as would drive us to stand upon our manhood. That was considered to be so disloyal that the hon. member from Prince Edward Island (Mr. Davies; represented it to mean that, if Great Britain did not give us our own way, we woukl repeat the revolution of 100 years ago. Mark the zeal which distinguishes converts so newly made. They have suddenly awakened to the fact that, while we have been for fourteen ycars stinding by the interests of the Empire and resisting a policy of theirs which, they have to admit, when driven to the wall, would dismenber the Empire in five years, we have been harsh and cruel to the mother country, and that to insinuate that we will only remain in the Empire, while we are allowed to remain in it, is to insinuate that we will repeat the revolution of a ceitury ago unless we get our own way. I might have believed in the sincerity of this new-horn zeal, I might have believed that it meant a genuine though a late abandonment of a policy which has been scouted from one end of the country to the other and which has only been deserted when scarcely a candidate could be elected upon it in any constituency, I might have lelieved in that repentance, though late, if there had not been a ring of insincerity in everything that came from the hon. member for Queen's (Mr. Davies), in his allusion to the mother country, in his allusion to our policy in regard to the mother country, and in almost every expression he used before the House. He spoke in the most exultant manner and taunted the Finance Minister with the condition of things which he supposed to exist in the Province of New Brunswick and in the city of St. John, and he went over half the hemisphere and spoke of the desperate condition of things as to our trade with Newfoundland, the desperate condition of things in the Spanish West Indies and even in the British West Indies, and, when he called it a black picture, he could hardly keep his feet on the floor because of the delight which beamed from every feature of his benerolent countenance. I could not help thinking that if it were a black picture, it was one that the hon. member for Prince Edward Island enjoyed to his heart's content. But the enjoyment of pictures like that is only for the artist who paints them, and we are happy to know that when the hon. gentleman paints a picture it is always so widely different from nature as to be a wretched caricature. The hon. gentleman took us half way around the globe to tell us how our trade had been ruined with Newfoundland, how it had been ruinel with the West Indies, how this treaty with Spain was coming to nothing, as it always had come to nothing when we attemptel to negotiate it for the past twelve years. He declared if there was a bright spot in this dark picture we found it in Cireat Britain where the antiquated policy of protection was utterly abandoned and abhorred. But he forgot that within two minutes he had been showing that that policy, instead of being antiquated, was gradually closing around (ireat Britain, and was leing adopted by nearly every other country in the world. He forgot that it was this antiquated and abandoned policy which was actuating Newfoundland, which was actuating the West Indies, and which governs almost every country in the world. Now, when the hon. gentleman proceeded to address a deliberate argument to this House about the duty of the House with regard to discrimination against British goods, he involved himself and his party in two or three positions which are absurdly contradictory. The hon. gentleman and his friends, with their press, have never tired of making the bold assertion that it is the policy of this Government to discriminate against the mother country. They make use of that argument, not for the purpose of aildressing to the House what his resolution points to, but for the purpose of contending that a policy of direct discrimination, which they propose under the policy of unrestricted reciprocity, is that which is now adopted ly this Government. The Minister of Finance time and again has torn the mask from their faces, and has shown that nowhere in this tariff is there discrimination against Great Britain, and that when they use the word discrimination they are simply playing upon words to deceive the ignorant among the populace, and for no other purpose. But they will try in vain to mislead this House by any such falsification of terms. Sir, the Minister of Finance last session put that as tersely and in as few words as it could be put. He defied them to name a single product coming from Great Britain which was taxed a cent higher than such a product coming from any other country, and if they cannot do that it is vain for them to talk about discrimination. The tariff, as to articles which are to be put on the free list, or as to any other, must always depend upon the policy which it is necessary for this country to pursue as regards its revenue and the conditions of its people from time to time. We have never made, with regard to the mother country, nor with regard to our own people, any secret of our policy in that respect. We have said boldly to the mother country, not that we desired to discriminate against her; but we have said: You, with our consent and by our wish, have laid certain burdens upon us as part of this Empire; we have, to a certain extent, to maintain our own defence, we have to keep up the British institutions which we got from you, and in bearing our own financial burdens, it is absolutely necessary that we should lee the nasters of our own tariff, saving one thing only, and that is that we shall not forget the duties we owe to the Empire by agreeing that any foreign country shall have a preference over you in the tariffs which we make. It is for this country, as it is for every self-governing colony, to say what duties are necessary to be raised in order to discharge the obligations which the mother country has laid upon us, and if the hour comes when Great Britain should say to us: You shall not make this tariff or that tariff, the obvious answer we should have to make would be that this is the lest tariff we can frame in the interest of our own people, under the constitution she had given to us, and if it did not suit the mother country, we would decline to make any other. I repeat that while we are a portion of the Empire we shall never forget the duties we owe to that Empire and to our sister colouies. When I say that we would decline to make any other tariff than that which suits our own people, I do not mean that we shall surrender our right to self-government, or submit to a tariff made elsewhere; but I mean to say, as Sir Alexander (ialt once said, that when a colony was given the right of self-government and charged with the sustenance of British institutions, the colony must be the julge of the tariff which must be made, and that it could be responsible to no other country in that respect. As I have said, we must recognize the sovereignty of the Monarchy of which we are subjects, and our relations to the Empire are utterly inconsistent with the idea of giving a preference to foreign countries, in the markets of this country, over our fellow subjects in other parts of the Empire, and in Great Britain itself. That was what we stood for in our contest with Newfoundland, which the hon. member for Queen's calls childish and puerile to night. That was what we succeeded in pressing upon the attention of the British (iovernment then, and if we had not fought that lattle with Newfoundland, we might have had to fight it afterwards with the British West Indies. In the arrangement with the West Indies made with the United States, they started with this principle : that under no circumstances would discrimination be entertainel as regards the mother country or as regards the other colonies. That luatle fought, and for the time being won as regards Newfoundland, it had not to be fought over with regard to the West lndies; but if we had given way as regards Newfoundland we should not have haid any ground to stand upon when the question came to be considered with regard to the British West Indies. Now, I do not need to point out that this hon. gentleman who has spoken for the last hour, and the party for whom he speaks, have not, by any covert means, or in any secondary meaning of the term discrimination, declared here during this session, and they have avowed everywhere else, while they had the vestige of a hope that the policy of unrestricted reciprocity would help them into office, they have avowed everywhere that that was an essential purt of their unrestricted reciprocity scheme, and that any man would be a fool who thought we could get reciprocity with the United States-without which this country must perish-unless we pledged ourselves to direct discrimination against British goods and in favour of goorls coming from the mother country. What then is the meaning of the amendment which is brought before the House to-night $!$ Is it a sincere change of policy ? Can my hon. friend from Bruce claim that we are, as one time we almost hoped, securing the conversion in platoons on the other side of the Honse, or is it a merely clap-trap to deceive the House and the zountry? Have they hecome conrinced that the British sentiment is still strong in the lireast of the people of Canada, and have they come to the conclusion that they had better appeal to that, even though they were a few months ago rumning strongly in the other direction, in the direction, as the leader of the Opposition pointed out, in which our interests pointed? Well. Sir, it is either that, or it is this, which has actuated these gentlemen in every step they have taken with regard to the fiscol policy of this country. In every resolution they have proposerf, finding there is a disposition on the part of this country to extend its trade and to get something by giving an equivalent, they propose as they have done on so many other occasions. to give what we have to give for nothing. This is the trade policy which these hon. gentlemen recom-mend,-and it is a policy upon which I sappose they would go to Spain to negotiate a treaty as they say we have been trying to do for the last 12 years. They would try the same policy there I suppose and every place else they would wish to get a treaty made. They would say : Don't let us sit down and discuss what we would exchange, but let us start upon the principle that we will give away everything before we begin. That is precisely why these hon. gentlemen played so ridiculous a part in regard to the question of reciprocity with the United States. They declared everywhere, by resolutions of legislatures, and by speeches and by resolutions put before this House on which they staked the political existence of their party, that what they were willing to give the United States was all that we had to give, with nothing in return. In the words of one of their advocates who went to that country and made one of these famous Boston speeches which have been of so much use in the discussion of this question in this country, and have thrown such marvellous light upon the question of unrestricted reciprocity--
"You shall have the rigbt to come among us and take, in a single word, everything."
The policy which is indicated in the resolution proposed this afternoon is, on the one hand, that there is held up a proposal to Great Britain to give discrimination in our favour as part of the colonial empire, to give the colonial empire discrimination in her markets in return for discrimination in ours. The proposal which these gentlemen would have us make is: We will give you a reduction of duty ou your goods without asking for any equivalent in return. Considerable fault was found, in utter insincerity I am sure, with the resolution of my hon. friend from Bruce (Mr. McNeill) because it did not declare that we proposed to givea preference to British goods in our markets. If it does not declare that, $I$ am incapable of understanding language. The words of the resolution are :

they were advantages given to every other country, because the adrantage with which they are to correspond is preferential treatment in the markets of Great Britain and Ireland: so that if the hon. gentleman from Queen's (Mr. Davies) is so desirous now of treating the goods and products of Great Britain with discriminating favour, he will not tind any difficulty in voting for the resolution of my hon. friend from Bruce (Mr. McNeill) which he seems to regard as so serious. As regards the amendment to the resolution before the House, I have nothing to add to what I have said. It is evidently intended to mislead the House, and evidently intended to mislead the country by pretending that it gres on the hasis of discriminating in favour of the mother country while it does nothing of the kind. It throws away the only chance that we have of making to the mother country an offer which many of us believe, that sooner or later she will be disposed to accept ; but an offer which she will be the sooner disposed to accept the sooner we make it to her. The hon. member for Queen's (Mr. Davies) put himself to a great deal of trouble to read statements which were made by prominent statesmen derogatory to the arrangement advocated by my hon. friend from Bruce (Mr. McNeill) and derogatory to its aloption in the mother country. It is something new to me to find a gentleman upon that side of the House or upon this side, who is willing to take the bare dictum of any British Minister as absolutely concluding a great public question in which masses of the population of the whole Empire are interestecl. I think, sir, that is not the way in which changes have leen effected or improvements made in time past, whether constitutional or economic ; but it is rather ly a bold statement of the principles or the rights which are under dis. cussion, a statement likely to elicit respect in the minds of the people of Great Britain. In tines past the people of this country, and of the other colonies too, have never been disposed tole daunted by the frown of a single British̆ Minister. Well, sir, we have the utterances of other Ministers upon this question, and I remember that it is not so very long ago when Lord Salishury, whose rank in the councils of the mother country, I need not emphasize, discussed this question. The declaration that he made was not that the policy was a ridiculous one and would not be entertained by Great Britain ; but he said that the time was inopportune, and he declared that a movement like this nust come from the colonies themselves; and if the colonies desire it, the motion which my hon. friend from Bruce (Mr. McNeill) has made this afternoon is in accordance with the suggestion of the First Minister of Great Britain himself. Now, Mr. Speaker, the hon. memler for Queen's (Mr. Davies) took some trouble to treat the House to a little humour of a rather fanciful and exaggerated kind, with regard to the fate of the resolution which was proposed in the British House of Commons when this matter was under consideration as an amendment to the Address in answer to Her Majesty's speechlat the opening of Parliament. Anyborly who has examined the question with the smallest degree of intelligence would fail to follow the hon. gentleman's argument with any appreciation. Nobody acquainted with parliamentary institutions and parliamentary usages imagines for a single moment that that resolution was put before the Imperial Sir Johs Thompson.

House of Commons for the purpose of being pressed to a division, or for the purpose of seeing how many members would even support it in debate, yet the hon. memler for Queen's (Mr. Davies) was facetious in declaring that a third man could not be found to advocate it. As was the case with other important questions, it was moverl at that eurly part of the session, and at that initiatory stage of the session's business, for the purpose of calling the attention of the Erppire to the question, and not alone the attention of the British House of Commons. That purpose was served, and the wildest visionary having charge of the question and anxious for its adoption, could not have done it a greater injury that to force it to a division at a time which was not opportune, and when it must have been defeated hy an overwhelming majority with even its very lest friends voting against it. There is, therefore, no cause for discouragement in the treatment which that resolution received in the British House of Commons. The Minister of Finance has advised the House to pass this resolution as an indication of the opinion of this Parliament to le sent to the mother country. We will, at least, be able to say that it is an expression of opinion, which this Parliament has a right to make, not only upon its own affairs, but upon affairs of the Empire with which it is completely bound up; and. Sir, we will be able to say likewise, that we are taking the step which Lord Salisbury himself declared should be the initial step in the movement. and ia step, which, if taken by the Parliament of this great country, will not fail to attract the attention of our fellow colonists, and to awaken I hope a lurge sympathetic feeling throughont (ireat Britain and Ireland as well. It will le a resolution entirely consistent with our own manhool and the independence of our own Parliament, and it will not le a filibustering resolution such as the amendment which proposes to give away something and to get nothing in return, and to set up the mere pretense and sham that the policy of to day is a discriminatory policy against British goods, as British grools, insteal of leing as it is a tariff enactment which is perfectly fair, and perfectly free, and perfectly equal in its application as letween the mother country and the foreign countries whose goods may come into competition from time to time in the Canadian market.

Mr. CHARLTON. I do not intend to detain the House at any length to-night ; but I wish to make a few remarks in reference to some of the charges made by the Minister of Justice in the course of his speech. At the outset that hon. gentleman informed the House that the party notel for opposition to the mother country was now in a hypocritical sense professing love for that country, and was offering a resolution to this House, which while professing to serve the interests of the mother country and do justice to her, was a hypocritical one, and in that sense was characteristic of the party offering it. Now, Sir, the party sitting opposite is responsible for a policy which was conceived in a spirit of hostility to Great Britain, which provoked the deepest resentment in Great Britain, and which was presented to this country in a spirit the very reverse of conciliatory. When it was represented that the Nutional Policy would have an effect on our relations with England, the leaders of that party said, in the press and on the platform, that if that policy affected British connection, so much the worse for British connection. Sir, that policy has been a hostile policy to England aud has been recognized as such by the English people, and the party on this size of the House has never failed on every occasion on which that policy has heen under discussion to point out its unfairness to England, and to demand that it shall le changed, and that the burdens imposed on British trade and the injuries offered to British interests shall be removed. If England has had a friend in this Parliament, that friend has been Her Majesty's loyal Opposition. Not a session has peassed but the Opposition has pointed out to the people of this country the grierous injustice done to England by this National Policy for which the party opposite is responsible, which it has brought into existence, and which it is sustaining to this day. We are toll that the utterances of the hon. member for Queen's in criticising the remarks of the Finance Minister in regard to opening up new, avenues of trade for the country, had a ring of insiucerity, and that he referred to the calamities which had befallen some sections of this Dominion in a spirit of jubilation. I deny that such was the case. In a very proper manner my hon. friend pointed out that the policy of the Govermment had leen disastrous to many portions of this Dominion. and in fulfiment of his duty as a critic he did so in a way to refute the arguments of the hon. Min. ister of Finance. The Minister of Justice denies the assertions male on this side of the House that our tariff discriminates against England. sir, it is impossible to deny that. The facts and tigures are before us, and he might as well deny that we have a tariff at all. The fact that the revenue collected on dutiable English goods is 4 per cent greater than that collected on dutiable American goods disproves the assertion made by the Minister of Justice. At the same time the tarift admits a much larger quantity of free goods from the United States than it does from Great Britain. Every one knows that the tariff is hostile to England, and discriminates against England. Sir, we are told that the party on this side of the House proposes to make commercial arrangements by which we shall give something and get nothing in return. I deny it. The Minister of Finance in making this criticism referred, I suppose, to the position of the party on the reciprocity question. Well, Sir, we have never trifled or attempted to trifle with the feelings, the interests or the credulity of the people with regard to reciprocity negotiations. We have never declared to the people that we could obtain a reciprocity treaty on impossible conditions. We have never attempted to deceive the people. We have always professed, if we were to obtain a reciprocity treaty, that we must obtain it on true reciprocal grounds, and that if we wanted to get something we must give an equivalent. These hon. gentlemen, who attempted to get something without giving an equivalent, who recently went to Washington to enter upon a negotiation which they knew was foreloomed to failure, who attempted to deceive this country by making statements which they knew to be false, who professed to be able to get a reciprocity treaty, who professed to have a treaty under negotiation, who dissolved Parliament in order that they might refer it to a House that was not a moribund House, who were all this time making professions that were without foundation, professions which the Secretary of State of the United States denied when these election lolges were brought to his ears, who in carrying out their game sent their commissioners to Washington where they remained only a few hours, who sent them there again a short time ago to propose impossible conditions, knowing that they would simply meet with a refusal ; these hon. gentlemen, having played this game, having made it serve their purpose, seeing it now exposed, and being unable any longer to make it play on the credulity of the people, are taking up another dolge, and are professing to offer to the British people preferences for their goods in this country if England will impose preferential duties against the food prolucts of all countries for our benefit. They are parading this new dorge, assuring the people that they are now going to get another boon, and they will perhaps dissolve Parliament again in order that this question may be referred to a House that is not a moribund House. Sir, we have no reason to suppose that England will concede this privilege, that she will re-enact the corn laws, that she will go back on her policy of half ia country, a policy which has made her the great manufacturing and commercial power of the gloke. The hon. gentleman does not suppose it; the Finance Minister does not suppose it; lut it will be a good thing to amuse the people with. Now, that the reciprocity dolge is played out, they are obliged to raise the cry of despair on that sulject, and it is necessary to have something else to amuse the groundlings with, and this resolution they think will in all probahility serve their purpose. Now, sir, what reamon have we for supposing that England will ever assent to this proposition? What importance does her trade with her colonial possessions bear in comparison with her trade with the rest of the vorld!" What does her trade with Canala amount to in comparison with her trade with the rest of the world! In 1890-91 the trade of England with the United States amounted to $\$ \mathbf{\$ 4 0}, \mathbf{0 0 0}, 000$, while her trade with Canada amounted to only $\mathbf{8 9 1 , 0 0 0 , 0 0 0}$. Will Fingland pay more attention to this $\mathbf{s i n},(000,(0) 0$ trade with Canada than she will to the $\$ 640,(000,000 \%$ In the same year the trade of England with all her possessions, including India, amounted to $\boldsymbol{E 1} 183$,$000,000)$, and her trade with the rest of the world to $\mathbf{t} \mathbf{5} 00,000,000$, the former being only 36 per cent of the latter. The trade of England with the United States is two-thirds as great as her trade with India, Australia, Canada and all the other possessions over which her flag waves. England is not likely to sacrifice 64 per cent of her trade in order to promote the interests of 36 per cent of her trade. She is a great conmercial nation, she has built up her business on commercial princ:iples. Her commercial supremacy rests upon her ability to obtain cheap supplies of food and raw material and everything that forms a component part of her manufactured productions. This proposition is that England shall voluntarily stacrifice the advantages she possesses from her position as the great commercial and manufacturing nation of the globe. There is no human probability that this proposition will ever be entertuined in England, and I repeat that the proposition on the part of the Government is one intended to deceive the people of this country. I repeat that they have deceived the people once. They deceived them on the reciprocity question, and they plainly betrayed to-night that they are hostile to it. Every speaker on that side has denounced to-night reciprocity, and now, forsooth, we are to have the proposition that Englaud shall impose discriminating duties on all the food that she imports for the use of her people for the benefit of Canarla, and that absurd proposition is to be made ly the Parliament of Canada to England for the purpose of securing-what? A mortifying and humiliating reluff. I think that the object of this motion, the object of this movement, on the part of the fiovermment is so transparent that we can do no better than rote it down. I think the reso. lution offered by the hon. member for Queen's is on the contrary a resolution which proposes to grant substantial justice to England and to confer a substantial henefit on the people of Canada. If we wish to show our good-will to the people of England, if we wish to redeem some of the faults of the past, if we wish to make some restitution for the cruel discrimination we have practised against England since 1878, we can do no less than pass this resolution which proposes to reduce the duty on English goods that we may increase English trade and reduce the cost of goods to our consumers. Let us give some evidence of our faith by our works and show truly that we wish to make reparation to England for past faults. Let us show that we are loyal to English interests and ready to do England justice.
Mr. WHITE (Cardwell). Before the notion is put to the House, I desire to address a word or two concerning more particularly this question of discrimination under the present tarift and the question how far the tariff in operation during the period of the Nackenzie (iovernment tended to promote trade between Canada and Great Britain. It is a refreshing novelty to hear from the lips of the hon. member for North Norfolk words championing the cause of trade between Canada and (ireat Britain. We are not accustomed to find him in an attitude of that kind, and I do think that the credit for this eleventh hour repentance is to be attributed, not so much to the resolution introduced by the hon. member for Bruce as to the reselt of the conference in Washington in the month of February last. Gentlemen on the other side of the House have been in the habit of charging that the Ministers who went to Washington then utterly failed to accomplish any object, but they will have to ubandon that position hereafter ind admit that at least the mission to Washington has had the effect of changing their attitade towards our commercial relations with Englanc. I may be allowei to use an apt quotation, which I remember from my school-boy days, with reference to the anendment of hon. gentlemen: Timeo Danao: et donu ferentex, and I do think we should distrust the gifts these gentlemen are offering to us to-day. The hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat, as near as I conlid take down his worls, said that the Liberal party had never failed to point out the injustice of the burdens we imposed under the National Policy on our commercial relations with Great Britain. He basel that statement on the assertion that our present tariff discriminates against Great Britain by the imposition of duties averaging 22 per cent, whereas the duties on goorls imported from the United States into Canada are only 14 per cent. That is perfectly true; but what was the state of things under the tariff in operation during the Mackenzie Government? It was this: The average rate of duty in 1878 upon the total imports into Canala from the United States was 9 per cent and upon the total imports from Great Britain it was 17 per cent, a discrimination of 8 per cent, the same identically as that which exists today. Did I say identically ? Far from it. A discrimination infinitely greater, for this reason : that our imports from the United States consist now to a larger degree than ever before of free goods, whereas from Great Britain they consist to a larger degree than ever before of manufacturel prolucts. Why, these gentlemen who are posing to-day as the friends of trade with Great Britain, enjoyed five years of power, and I think we may fairly juige them by their works. What was the trade of our country when they took hold of the tariff? We imported in 1873, the last year of Conservative rule, $\$ 38,500,000$ worth of goods from the mother country. In 1878, after these gentlemen had been five years in office, we imported only $\mathbf{3} 37,(\mathrm{MOO},(000)$, or a decrease of $\$ 31,0 \mathrm{MO}, 000$; whereas our trade with the United States increased from $\$ 47,750,100$ in 1873 to $\$ 48,600,000$ in 1878 , or three quarters of a million of an increase, as compared with $\$ 31,000,000$ of a decrease in our trade with Great Britain during the period these gentlemen held office. If our tariff to-day discriminates against (ireat Britain, the thade returns do not lear that statement out, because we imported in 1891 sin, (NOO,OXX) worth more of goods into Camada from (ireat Britain than we did in $18 \% 8$, the last year these gentlemen were conducting the affairs of the comntry. The one point I wish to press upon the House is that there was exactly as high a discrimination against imports from Great Britain under their tariff as exists to-day, that our trade with the mother country, in spite of the increase in duties, is larger to day than when these gentlemen left office, and that the diserimination in our tariff, not as against British goods but as against that class of goods which we import from (ireat Britain, is not greater than it was when these gentlemen held office. They know perfectly well, as the Minister of Justice has stid, that they are attempting to deceive the people of this country when they talk of discrimination against British gools in our own tariff. Why is it our imports of free goods from the United States are so large? Last year we imported $\mathbf{S 4},(\mathrm{OMO}, \mathrm{OO}(\mathrm{O}$ worth of raw cotton from the United States. Now, if we impose a duty of 50 per cent on that article, would it promote trade with Great Britain? It would simply have the effect of adding a tax on the people without in any way assisting our trade with (ireat Britain. It is true, I am glad that it is true, that within the last two years we have had duties upon articles of agriculture and beef proxlacts for the purpose of protecting the Canalian agriculturist, but if these goons were made free, we should simply admit more of them from the United states without benefiting our trade with Great Britain in any degree. If the policy proposed were carried out, instead of our importing as we did last year three times as much of manufactured goods from the mother country as we did from the United States, the effiect would be to revert to the condition of things which existed between 1873 and 1878. in other words to increase our imports from the United States and throw the trade which we now do with Great Britain into the lap of the Americans.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. DAVIN. Before you aljourn I wish to call attention to something that struck me during the recent debate. It is the most forcible thing that struck me from that side. It is a blue-book, and, speaking seriously, I doult if language too strong could be used in reference to the conduct of any one who would throw a missile of that kind. It is simply a blackguard trick.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have only to say that I am entirely powerless to prevent these occurrences unless the House sustains me.

Motion agreed to : and House adjourned at 1.20 a.m. (Tuesday).

FIRsT READIN(is.

Bill (No. 72) to incorporate the Winnipeg and Atlantic Railway Company.-(Mr. Masson.)

Bill (No. 73) to incorporate the Montreal Island Railway Company.-(Mr. Curran.)

THE CIVIL SERVICE ACT.

Mr. PATTERSON (Huron) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 74) to amend the Civil Service Act. He said: This Bill is to legalize the employment of temporary clerks. They have been employed heretofore under the Civil Service Act, and the Auditor General has raised the point that temporary clerks should not be continuously employed, and this Bill is to permit their employment temporarily.

Mr. LAURIER. Is it increasing the number of clerks:

Mr. Patternon (Huron). No.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. When the Civil Service Act of 1882 was passed, there were some officers temporarily employed. That Act allowed them to be continued, although they did not pass the examination under that Act; but in au amending Act passed a year or two ago-I think by inadvertence, although I may le wrong about thatthe section was dropped and the clause re-enacted without it. This clause is simply to continue the temporary clerks who were eniployed before that Act was passed, in accordance with the general principle embodied in the Act, not to interfere with persons employed before the Act was passed.

Mr. LAURJER. In other words, to allow clerks to be kept in office permanently, under the name of temporary clerks, without passing examination?

Sir JOHN TKOMPSON. Yes, those who were there when the Act was passed.

Mr. CURRAN. This question was raised when the Bill was first introduced and we went into it fully, the understanding arrived at being that the temporary clerks employed in any particular department before 1882 should be capable of appointment without examination. In the amended Act the clause was omitted. Some very grave acts of injustice have been committed against competent men who have been in the service a large number of years.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) But who were unable to pass the examination.

Mr. CURRAN. A certificate of competency from the clerk's superior officer is required.
sir JOHN THOMPSON. The principal difficulty was as to age.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

REPRESENTATION IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I find that the Bill respecting representation in the House of Commons will not be ready till Thursday.

sUPERANNUATION OF CIVIL SERVANTS.

Mr. FOSTER. I promised yesterday to answer the question of the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen), which is as follows :-
"Whether any of the vacancies caused by the superannuation of civil servants. a return of which had been laid on the Table of the House since Parliament met. have been filled? If so, the name of the appointee and the salary to be paid."

VOTERS' LISTS.

Mr. LANDERKIN. I should like to ask the Secretary of State when the remainder of the voters' lists will be presented? We have not yet received the statement respecting South Grey. The return was made last year ; four months have elapsed, and the list is not yet printed. What is the cause of the delay, and when may we expect to receive it?

Mr. PATTERSON (Huron). I have not the information with me, but I will give the hon. gentleman full information to-morrow.

RETURNS.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. On 14th March I moved for two returns, one in connection with the engraving contract, and one respecting the admission of live cattle. I have mentioned the matter twice, and the Minister has stated they would be brought down immediately.

Mr. CARLING. The information with respect to cattle has been prepared, and it will be brought down.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. When may we expect the papers in comnection with the engraving contract?
Mr. FOSTER. The papers are all ready, and I have signed them. They will probably be brought down to day.

TENANT FARMERS' REPORTS.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Have the Tenants Farmers' Reports yet been placed in hand, and are they ready for distribution? They were promised for the day after the discussion on immigration.

Mr. CARLING. I spoke to the hon. nember for Queen's (Mr. Davies), and told him I had not yet the report of the delegates who had visited the Maritime Provinces, but I had the report of the other farmers' delegates who visited those provinces the previous year. I am not aware of any report from the gentlemen who visited the Maritime Provinces a year ago last spring.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Surely there was a report?
Mr. CARLING. The report has been made, I suppose, to the High Commissioner. Their visit was arranged by him, and the reports would be made to him.
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. But surely they would be transmitted here.

Mr. CARLING. I suppose they will be trans. mitted, but I have not yet received them.

CANADA AND NEWFOUNDLAND.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I want to invite the attention of the Government to a statement made in an Ottawa morning paper respecting the complicated arrangements between the Dominion and the colony of Newfoundland. I see it is stated in the paper that the reply of the Newfoundland Government has lieen received, that is, the reply to the proposal of this Government to a conference looking to the establishment of the statu* quo between the two countries, and that answer indicates certain reasons why Newfoundland would not agree to a renewal of the statux quo. The proposal nade by the Government, and the reply of the Newfoundland Government affect the obligations between the two Governments, and are therefore important, and it is very desirable those papers should be laid on the Table at an early date. This newspaper appears to have full information on the subject, and Parliament should also be advised as quickly as a newepaper should be. We should be placed in possession of this information at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. TUPPER. That will be done.

MAPS.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). When may we expect the maps that were promised?

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I am under the impression that they are prepared. They are being done under the direction of the Minister of Railways, and it is on account of his illness that $I$ am not able to state definitely when they will be brought down. I hope they will be to-morrow; at all events, I will have information respecting them.

UNITED STATES FISHING VESSELS.

House resolved itself into Committee on Bill (No. 11) respecting fishing vessels of the United States.

(In the Committee.)

Mr. LAURIER. I would suggest to the hon. gentleman that he would reach the same object, and perhaps improve the Bill, by striking out section 2 .
Mr. TUPPER. That suggestion is acceptable, and perhaps it is better to do it in that way.

WRIT FOR NORTH PERTH.

Mr. LAURIER. I understood from the Minister of Justice yesterday that the writ for North Perth had been issued.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I said it was being issued then ; I find it was not issued until to-day.

Mr. LAURIER. It is issued now?

ORDNANCE LANDS IN TORUNTO.

House resolved itself into Committee on Bill(No. i8) to authorize the conveyance to the Corporation of the City of Toronto, of certain Ordnance lands in that city.-(Mr. Dewdney.)

(In the Committee.)

Mr. MULOCK. Who has valued this property?

Mr. InFWINNEY. Mr. Whitney was one of the valuators, and the other gentleman was the assessment commissioner, Mr. Maughan.

Mr. MULOCK. Is the amount that was named in the Bill the market value of the fee simple of the land?

Mr. DEW DNEY. I believe that the valuation was made alout nine months ago. I understand it is the fair valuation of the property and if valued to-day that it would have been valued at less than the price agreed upon.

Mr. MULOCK. Is the city to qet the fee simple of the land?

Mr. JEWUDNEY. Yes.
Mr. MULOCK. Then what is the meaning of the section of the Bill which says that the grant is to be made subject to such provisions and condi$t^{\text {ions }}$ as the Governor in Council may deem proper?

Mr. DEWDNEY. I think that part refers to the terms of payment.

Mr. MULOCK. It appears to me that we should know what these conditions are before legislating.

Mr. DEWDNEY. $$ 52,000$, and my impression is it is to be paid in five years, with interest in the meantime at 5 per cent or 6 per cent.

Mr. MULOCK. We ought to see the valuations before assenting to the sale.

Mr. DENISON. I may say that the demand on the part of the city for laud has increased on account of the enormous increase in the cattle trade. The ground they have is altogether too small, and the price I am satisfied is a good one, a larger price than could be obtained to-day, because when this arrangement was made valuation of property was high. If valued to-day, I doubt whether it would bring quite so much because land is more stagnant now in Toronto.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). I must object to the hon. gentleman decrying the credit of the city.
Mr. DENINON. I am not decrying it, but I say I doubt whether the land would bring so much now as it would have brought nine months or a year ago; and I know, as I have said before, that the character of the man who made the valuations stands very high. Mr. Maughan is well known as a man whose character is of the highest, and any valuation hegave would be received with confidence by every citizen in Toronto. I may say the same of Mr. Whitney, the other valuator, and I am quite sure that the hon. member for North York, if he wanted a valuation himself, would not wish for better valuators than those two gentlemen.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). What is the area of this property?

Mr. DEWDNEY. Six acres and a fraction.
Mr. COATSWORTH. It is a little over Sl,0m an acre, and the value was certainly high, as land stands at this time.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Hear, hear.
Mr. COATSWORTH. But that is merely owing to local causes, as the hon. member for Bothwell knows well. Land is notso saleable in Toronto to-day, purely from local causes.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Blue-ruin.
Mr. COATSWORTH. I would like to say with regarl to the second clause, that there are no special restrictions. It is a sale in fee simple, and the terms have been arranged by contract between the Government and the city, and the money is to be paid in tive years with interest at 5 per cent.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). What is the meaning of this clause :
"Subject, however, to such conditions as the Governor in Council deems proper."

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. It is only superabundant caution and nothing else.

Mr. D.AVIES (P.E.I.) The reason special attention is called to this is that the preamble recites:
" And whereas the said market is largely used in connection with the cattle trade between the Dominion of Canada and England, and the said corporation have expended large sums of money, and have used other means to foster and increase the said trade, which is a matter of interest and benefit to the whole of Canada; and, whereas, it is expedient that the said grant be made upon payment of the srid sum of $$ 52,000$, subject, however, to such conditions as the Governer in Council deems proper."
That would imply there are special conditions not attached to the usual grant.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. That would naturally be implied, but the fact is that in other Bills, from time to time, enabling us to sell Ordnance lands, or part with them by free grant, those words are used, and they have been copied in drawing this Bill, but inasmuch as this is a sale at full value, there are really no special terms and conditions.

Mr. MULOCK. The hou. Minister has been good enough to send me the valuation of Mr. Whitney, but not that of Mr. Maughan.

Sir John Thompson.

Mr. DEWDNEY. There was a mistake made in mentioning this gentleman's name as one of the valuators. I did not remember it at the moment, but I find it is Mr. Crosbie.
Mr. MULOCK. What is the property assessed for?
Mr. NEWDNET. I really cannot say.
Mr. MULOCK. I think we should have that information.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). In the preamble it is said that large sums of money have been expended by the city in promotion of the cattle trade. Are we to understand that any portion of the money so expended is to be considered as part payment of the value of the property?
Mr. DEWDNEY. No ; there is nothing paidat all.
Mr. MULOCK. If we are engaged in an ordinary business transaction and selling the public domain for the full value, I can see no object in introducing this argument about the cattle trade which is in the preamble. We are all deeply interested in the cattle trade, and if I were to consider the local interests of the neighbourhood from which I come, I should be doubly anxious that Toronto should make the hest bargain it can, but we are here representing the whole people, and we ought to understand whether the sale is made solely for commercial reasons or whether it involves certain concessions made to the city of Toronto. If $$ \mathbf{$ 2 , 0 0 0}$ be the present value of the property, why insert this argument in the recital?
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Strictlyspeaking, there should be no sale of ordnance property otherwise than by public auction, and we want to have it appear on the face of the Bill why we sell, even for the full value, otherwise than in the usual way.
Mr. MULOCK. That being the case, I will not quarrel with the recital, but it would have been better if this explanation hal been stated on the face of the Bill, that inasmuch as this property is acquired by the city for this special purpose, it was thought advisable to have it valued and sold at what was, in the opinion of the Government, the full market value andas much as would be obtained at an auctionsale. I quite agree with my hon. friend from West Toronto (Mr. Denison) that Mr. Whitney is a very capable man and a thorough expert in this class of business. I do not know whether this caluatien is made by Mr. Whitney himself or by some nember of his firm, because this is not signed by Mr. Whitney but by the firm of Whitney & Son. If the valuation was made by Mr. Whitney, I should have perfect confidence in his judginent. I ask the Minister if this is the opinion of Mr. Whitney hiniself, or of some employé of his firn?

Mr. DEWDNEY. I understood the valuation was made by Mr. Whitney himself. At any rate, he would be responsible for it.
Mr. MULOCK. The Minister must not cone down to us in that way. We are now proposing to sell property, and there is no question of having a remedy against Mr. Whitney. We ought to know whether it was he who made the valuation.

Mr. COATSWORTH. Does not the hon. gentleman know that there are only two members in that firm, and that Mr. Whitney's son does not make valuations?
Mr. MULOCK. If I knew that I would have said so.

Mr. COATSWORTH. The hon. gentleman lived in Toronto long enongh to know.
Mr. MULOCK. The hon. member has no right to say that I knew that.
Mr. COATSWORTH. I only said that the hon. gentleman had lived in Toronto long enough to know that Mr. Whituey is the valuator of the firm, and all valuations are made by Mr. Whitney personally.

Mr. MULOCK. I am speaking to the responsible Minister of the Crown. I desire to know if this was made by Mr. Whitney, personally, or by some other member of his firm or some employe? Was it made by Mr. Whitney himself?
Mr. DEWDNEY. That is my impression.
Mr. MULOCK. It is the Minister's duty to know and not give us his impression.

Mr. DEWDNEY. This is on the ofticial paper of Whituey & Son, and I suppose it is not made without Mr. Whitney's knowledge.
Mr. COATSWORTH. And it is Mr. Whitney's signature.

Mr. FEATHERSTON. I do not think this land is worth as much as the city is allowing for it now. The value of property has decreased lately, and I am sorry to see the city buying that at present, because a few years ago we could have had a larger area of land a mile and a half out on the railway for $$ 40,000$. The reason why the city is anxious to redeem that land is that it may not go outside the corporation. They have a net revenue of $$ 20,010$ a year from that property, and, therefore, it is to their interest to give a large amount for it, but I think it will not be very long lefore the city will have to remove that market as a nuisance to that part of the city.
Section 2 struck out.
Bill, as amended, repurted, and read the third time and passed.

STEAMBOAT INSPECTION.

House again resolved itself into Committee on Bill (No. 13) further to amend the Steamboat Inspection Act.
(In the Committee.)
Mr. TUPPER. I would like to move a clause which has been suggested by the Board of Inspection for the better administration of the Act; it is similar to a provision that obtains in the United States on the same subject. I move that this clause be added :
Sestion 41 of the said Act is hereby further amended bysadding the following sub-section thereto:-

- Every engineer holding a certificate of competency. whethor granted under this Act or under the Act of the Unitod Kingdom relating to Merchant Shipping, who is employed on any steamboat, shall keep his certificate of competency posted up, framed, and protected by glass in some conspicuous place in the engine room of such steamboat, and any engineer neglecting so to do shall incur a penalty of $$ 20$."
The penalty in the States is $$ 100$, but I think $$ 20$ is sufficient in this country. The hon. member for North York brought up the propriety of making an amendment so that there should be consistency in connection with a promulgation of the rules, and several hon. gentlemen in the committee who differed with me on the main question, thought that position a correct one from my own standpoint. My attention was not called to the other portion of the Act at the time, or I certainly would have proposed that to the committee, for it is the principle I advocated in the first instance. In order, then, to take the regulations concerning lifepreservers and life-appliances under the control of the board and the Governor in Council, just as has been done in connection with the boats, I propose this clause :
Section 30 of the said Act is hereby repealed and the following substituted therefor :-
"The Governor in Council may make such regulations as are deemed adrisable with respect to life-preservers or other life-gaving appliances to be carried, by steamboats or by other vessels mentioned in this Act."
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Perhaps the hon. gentleman could tell us why it is necessary, instead of amending the Bill and leaving it part of the Act, to confer this power on the Governor in Council! When the Bill was in committee before I called the attention of the House to the fact that the principle upon which they proceed in England is that the Crown in Council deal with matters upon which they have not sufficient data to deal with by legislative enactment. Now, here is a provision that has been on the Statute-book for several years. The hon. gentleman does not pretend to say that he does not know what ought to he done, what Parliament ought to be advised to do. The measure is not one of ia nature that requires to be altered every few months; and a permanent provision ought to he made by Act of Parliament and not by Covemor in Council.
Mr. TUPPER. I see nothing to change the lefence I made of the Bill when before the committee. Let me remind the hon. gentleman that what I adrocate in this comection does not involve anything unusual respecting the supervision over steamers. I think the Onited States and the mother country afford us very good examples to follow. These rules and regulations concerning the engines, boilers, life-preservers and life-boats, requiring frequent alteration by reason of the improvements that are constantly being made in those appliances as well as in the construrtion of ships, it is thought well not to make a drastic provision by Act of Parliament that cannot be changed to suit changing circumstances except by the formal method of an Act of Parliament, and great inconvenience may occur in the meanwhile. The custom is for the board of trade in the one country that I mentioned, and the board of steamboat inspectors in the other country, to frame rules which have the force of law. We hegan this in 1868, when I find we took these prowers under a former Act. Even in the Inland Revenue Act enormous powers are taken of necessity, and for the convenience of the public, under similar provisions and regulations by Order in Council. I can assure the hon. gentleman, having looked into the lawe of the countries referred to, that there is no new departure. The departure was when this Act was framed and these statutory rules were adopted at that time. I may say that having discussed the subject with the officers concerned, I find they came under an Act of Parliament practically in this way : The chairman having been asked to frame these rules, these rules were submitted and placed in the statute, instead of the Minister at the time asking Parliament to put him in a position to make these regulations effective. We discussed pretty thoroughly this question in committee the other day, and I very reluctantly have repeated the substance of my argument then.
On section 13,
Mr. TUPPER. As we repeal all the rules by this Bill, and as it is proposed that the Rill should go into effect as soon as it is assented to, we shall find ourselves in a position where we will be unable to enforce the necessary safeguards in comection with the shipping interests. It is, therefore, proposed that the Act shall come into force on a future day to he named by proclamation issued by (iovemor in Council.
Mr. STAIRS. A little matter had been brought to my attention which I desire to submit to the Minister. The difficulty has arisen in the case of certificates granted to vessels inspected under this Act. Inspectors have been in the habit of giving certificates, allowing passengers to be carried on those steamships to certain ports. For example, take the case of a steamer inspected and licensed to carry passengers from Halifas to Charlottetown. Such a vessel cannot call in, on an emergency, at any other port and land passengers. At the same time, it might be considered desirable to change the vessel's route from Halifax to Charlottetown to Halifax to Boston. It has been reported to me by owners of some of the steamers that difficulty has arisen in this connection. I should like to ask the Minister to look into the matter and see how the difficulty may be removed.
Mr. TUPPER. This subject has been brought to my attention by the same parties who have, no doulb, discussed it with the hon. member for Halifax (Mr. stairs). I think the difficulty arises from a misumderstanding on the part of the steamboat owners. It is necessary when a vessel obtains a certificate that it should have the right to ply in certain waters. In the case mentioned there would be no difficulty in the owner obtaining a different certificate for a different route solong as, in the opinion of the inspector, the vessel was qualified to ply on that route. It is a inatter of administration, and a question submitted by one of the owners in question was answered, I think, to his satisfaction.
Mr. MULOCK. The Minister promised to deal with the point raised by the hon. member for st. John (Mr. Hazen) with respect to buckets.
Mr. TUPPER. The rules will deal with that matter. In that connection I may state to the House that, in the opinion of the officers of the Marine Department, it would be very unwise to do away with the provision requiring metal or leather buckets. In Fugland there is no provision as to the material of which the buckets shall be constructed, but on every steamer there must be a supply of hose sufficient to reach every part of the vessel. That is a very heavy expense to the owner, and the owners of steamers in Canada are not obliged to follow a rule of that kind. There are certain dangers in connection with wooden buckets. Part of the difficulty arises from neglect to maintain the condition of the buckets. They get out of order in a shorter period than buckets of other material. It is absolutely necessary, in order to keep them iu good condition, that water should le kept in them in order to prevent the hoops from coming off. Experience has shown that when an accident occurs not one-half of those buckets are found in a condition to be used. It was in order to save the expense of putting in a supply of hose that these buckets are required to be of metal or leather. The hon. member for St. John (Mr. Hazen) mentioned that Mr. Coker had spoken to him on the subject. I have made enquiries, and I find that no representations have been made against that provision to the department by the steamboat owners or any of the inspertors. So I think the provision should not be changed, or, at all events, that a change should only be made after very careful enquiry.
Mr. MULOCK. I understood the Minister to say that the rules which would be passed would enable him to decide what the material should be.
Mr. TUPPER. Yes.
Mi. MULOCK. The Minister also told us that, according to the best advice he has at present, buckets of wood are very objectionable. That is a very objectionable power to confer on the Governor in Council. Parlianent should have some say in the matter. Now we are told that we have nothing to do with this important life-saving part of the Bill, but it is to be left to the all-wise Governor in Comncil to decide what steps should be taken. When the Bill was before the committee the memher for St. John (Mr. Hazen) passed eulogies on it because it proposed to deal with this very yuestion of buckets. We could not get him to look at any other feature of the Bill or see anything wrong about it, because we were going to amend the law on the bucket question. Now the Minister has kicked the bucket, and we do not hear anything athout it. Does the hon. gentleman think now it is at grool Bill?
Mr. TUPPER. The case of the hon. gentleman in regard to the luckets, if he puts it seriously, is a fair statement as to what Parliament is doing in regard to the whole sulject, not only as regards the buckets but also as regaris boats. It does not make the case weaker or stronger to mention the extracrilinary powers vested in the Governor in Council respecting buckets, and all the urguments that I used on the one question applied equally to the other, The hon. gentleman admits there is some alvantage in comnection with the changes in these rules and regulations in treating then as I propose to treat them. They would be adopted on the advice of the otficers who are paid by this Parliament to look very carefully into these questions. I take it that the hon. gentleman himself if he were dealing with a grave question of this kind, and had some idea of his own as to what a proper appliance would le, he would be the first man to seek expert advice. I do not say that these experts are always right, but their views will be shown in the regulations of the department, and if they do not meet with public approval it is open for the House at any time to rectify or chauge the whole policy.
Mr. HAZEN. When the hon. gentleman from North York (Mr. Mulock) attempts to be witty at my expense in the House, he reminds me very much of the elephant I once saw in a circus which attempted to dance. The attempt of the hon. gentleman at heing witty is equally ponderous. However, when he does attempt to be witty he should state the facts and he should not try to be witty on evidence that is not correct. The hon. gentleman must remember that when this question was before the House the other day I distinctly pointed out the principal grievance our steamboat owners on the St. John River had was that this law was to be enforced which had not been enforced for eight years previously, and that it was inpossible for them to supply themselves with metallic lifeboats. It is true 1 also spoke on the question of buckets, and if the hon. gentleman will refer to Hansard he will find that I made that a secondary question, but that the question I laid most stress on was the question of metallic life-boats, which I took pains to point out to the Honse were not necessiury for the safety of passengers, at all events so far as the st. Johin River is concerned. This House has confirmed the principle that the Governor in Council shall deal with this question of life-hoats, and if it is safe to intrust to the Government the regulations regarding life-boats, it is even more safe to intrust to them the question of buckets, which is a much less important matter. The Minister of Marine has, however, male a statement that I question. He said that the amendment to the Act passed to-day gives the Government sufficient power to deal with the question of buckets just as they have sufficient power to deal with life-hoats; I doubt that very much. The amendment now adopted is as follows :--
"Section 31 of the said Act is hereby repealed and the fullowing substituted therefor: The Governor in Council may make such regulations as are deemed advisable with respect to life-preservers or other life-saving appliances to be carried on steamboats or other ressels mentioned in this Act."
That only gives the Giovernor in Council power to make regulations concerning life-saving appliances, but I do not think the wording of the section is broad enough to deal with this question of buckets. Section 34 of the old Act stys:
" Every steamboat employed in the carriage of passengers whether by sea, bay, lake or river navigation, shall be provided with and have on board, in some convenient place, not less than 25 sufficient fire-buckets of metal or leather, five axes, and six good and sufficient lanterns, approved of by the inspector: Provided always, that passenger steamboats of more than seventy-five and less than one hundred and fifty tons gross shall not be required to be provided with and have on bonrd a greater number of fire-buckets than twelve, and that passenger steambosts of seventy-five tons gross and under, and steam tugs under one hundred and fifty tons gross, shall not be required to be provided with and have on board a greater number of firc-buckets than six."
That section refers entirely to the precantions against fire, while the amendment refers only to life-preservers or other life-saving appliances. It would be a very strained construction to put on the amendment if it were taken to mean precautions against fire, and I, therefore, would ask the Minister of Marine to alter this section in such a way, or to add another section, giving the Governor in Council power to deal with this matter.

Mr. TUPPER. I think the hon. gentleman's construction is a little strained, but still I see no objection to making it clear beyond dispute by adding the word "fire-buckets."
Mr. McGREGOR. There is now manufactured a pulp bucket which is the best life-preserver and life-protector we have. I have seen it tried and it acts well and answers both purposes. It is light, it is substantial, and it can be used as a lifepreserver, and is a good fire-bucket. As to the metallic boats, I think that the Minister will see that on the inland waters it would he almost imposssible for us to allow vessels carrying passengers out without them. The worden boats have been found very troublesome. I think if we had metallic boats on the fresh waters and pulp buckets to act as lifepreservers and fire-buckets, it would meet the requirements of the case.

Mr. TUPPER. I think that is a very excellent suggestion, and it will be considered. At the time these rules were made, of course these pulp buckets to which the hon. gentleman refers, were not known.

Mr. MULOCK. I agree with the hon. member for st. John (Mr. Hazen) that if we delegate to the Governor in Council power to say of what material life-hoats should be constructed, we might very consistently delegate to them the regulations regarding buckets. I pressed that opinion at the last meeting of the committee in consequence of the member for St. John (Mr. Hazen) insisting upon having a clause inserted in the Bill making special provision for the use of wooden buckets. He was not content at the last meeting to delegate that power to the Governor in Council.

Mr. HAZEN. That is not so.
Mr. MULOCK. At the last meeting, if I heard the hom. gentleman correctly, and I think I did; before we arrived at the proper stage of the Bill he noved an amendment to allow that women buckets should be used.

Mr. Hazen. That is true.

Mr. MULOCK. Then I may congratulate the member for St. John on his conversion, because at the last meeting he was not willing to delegate the question of buckets to the Governor in Council.

Mr. HAZEN. Mr. Chairman, that is not the case; the hon. gentleman might state facts.

Mr. MULOCK. What are the facts?

Mr. HAZEN. The fact is simply this : that I wanter that question of the wooden buckets dealt with, and in order that it might be dealt with I moved an amendment to the Act as it was then. The question as to whether we should deal with it in that way, or refer it to the Governor in. Council to deal with, never arose on the last occasion.

Mr. MULOCK. The hon. gentleman must remember that the Bill introluced by the Minister repeals section 27 of the Revised Statutes, the general Steamboat Inspection Act, and substitutes for the details set forth in the Act such details as may be fixed by Governor in Council.

Mr. HAZEN. As regards life-loats?

Mr. MULOCK. Yes, and delegated all that to the Governor in Council. That was demanded by the Government of the House, and the hou. gentleman conceded the wisdon of delegating that branch of legislation to the Governor in Council, and when, notwithstanding that delegation, he insisted upon the House specifying that woolen buckets might be used, I asked the Minister whether he could not very well deal with the whole subject. It was not consistent to delegate one branch of the life-saving apparatus to the Governor in Council and have the House retain the other, and the Minister said it was a very proper suggestion, and that he would consider it.
Mr. HAZEN. I would not object to that.

INLANI) REVENUE ACT.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I want to call the attention of the House to item 2 , before having it formally called. The Bill is not printed in French, and I can only go on with it by the unanimous consent of the House ; but my reason for asking the House to take it up in advance is this : By a North-West Ordinance passed after the Act of last session, the system of permits in the North-West Territories goes out of operation and in its stead a license system comes into operation. It is necessary to have the Inland Revenue Act extended to the North-West Territories, if possible lefore the lst of May. There are some other provisions in the Bill, but that is the only one calling for urgency.
Mr. LAURIER. As this is a very wide departure from the legislation which has hitherto obtained in the North-West, I cannot consent to the second reading of the Bill at present, as I wish to give the matter fürther consideration.

GEOLOGICAL SURVET.

Mr. DELVDNEY moved second reading of Bill (No. 43) to amend an Act respecting the $D$ :partment of the (ieological Survey (from the Senate). He said: The object of the Bill is only to give power to attach the Geological Survey branch, which is now under the jurisdiction of the Minister of the Interior, to another department, just. as several other branches have been transferred to other departments. It gives the power to the Governor in Council to transfer the survey from one department to another.
Mr. LAURIER. Objection has beein made luring this session, time and again, to the system, now more and more prevailing, of divesting the House of its proper functions in order to, convey them to the Ginvernor in Council. At present the lepartment of Geological Survey is attached by law to the Department of the Interior. Now it is askel to vest in the Governor in Council the power to transfer this department to any other branch of the Executive. If there is auy. reason to make this alteration, let it be made by law. The Minister himself should give some reapon why we should divest ourselves of this power und transfer it to the Governor in Council.
Mr. DEWDNEY. I think that in all the Acts for the different departments to which branches are attached, that clause obtains. Under the Act relating to the Department of Agriculture, the immigration branch may be transferred to any other department by Order in Council, and it has been, under that power, transferred within the last week or two to the Department of the Interior. The Geological Survey branch has always been attached to the Department of the Interior. As the work may be heary, and I fancy it will be from the experience I have had in the last week or two, it is thought that the Interior Department might be relieved of that work. It has not been detinitely decided to which department it should be transferred, and it is only for the sake of con venience this provision is asked for.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). One of the novel consequences that will flow from the adoption of the principle which the hon. gentleman proposes to extend to this lranch of the public service, is that, while we have names given to various departments, the duties devolving upon the Minister in charge may hare no relevancy to the office he holds. We may by Order in Council transfer the Department of Justice, so called, to the Minister of the Interior, and we might transfer the Department of Public Works to the Minister of Justice, and so the functions of the Minister would not be at all indicated by the name of the office he holds. In the neighbouring republic, which is a very large country, and the executive officers of which have duties to discharge not unlike those devolving upon the various departments of the Crown here, there is no changing about from one department of the public service to another. The name which the Minister holds should be appropriate to the functions which the department is called upon to discharge. If this Bill were alopted-and in this respect it does not differ, I admit, from the Bill relating to the Indian Department, and many others-theso-called Minister of Interior might be anything else than the Minister of Interior. You could not tell by the name of the oftice which he held what the duties were which he would be cailed upon to discharge. Iou may transfer to him the Department of Immigration, you may take away from him the management of Dominion lands and Indian lands, you may make him perform the sluties of President of the Council, and yet he is the Minister of Interior still. That is absurd. What we should do is to organize the public service with certain permanent departments and give to the Minister having control of a department a name appropriate to the service he is called upon to perform. I am sure the Minister of Justice would think it absurd if he were given the lmmigration Department and the functions of the Iepartment of Justice were taken away from him, and it is the same thing with regard to every other department in the public service. I am convinced that the present prac. tice is not a satisfactory one. I know that manyparties communicating with various public departments do not know with what department to communicate, because they do not know where the functions of the department as organized by statute are placed, they do not know under what Minister that department may be, because what may be under the Minister of Agriculture and Statistics to-day, may be under another Minister tomorrow:. That is not a satisfactory condition of things. The Geological Department has, no douht, from the heginning usurped duties which were not placed under its control by the British North America Act. There is nothing in the British North America Act to warrant the geological surveys which are being carried on in the various provinces, except in the case of British Columbia ander the terms under which it was admitted ; and I very much doubt whether by Order in Council you could attach to that department duties which are iuconsistent with the British North America Act itself. No doubt we have the control of the geological surveys in the territories, and there has been hn acquiescence in this usurpation of authority, and I am not going to say in that particular the practice ought to be changed, but 1 do say that the departments ought to be permanent, that they should be properly organized, that they ought to be under a head with an appropriate designation, and that there ought not to exist a policy of transferring these departments from one Minister of the Crown to another. In fact, this was called originally, not a department, but the Geological branch.

Mr. DEWDNEY. It was made a department two years ago.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Then it ought not to have been made a department. It ought to le a branch of the Department of the Interior, and so with regard to the Indian branch and the Public Lands branch. They ought to be nothing more than branches of different departments. This means a deputy head for each of these departments, and there may be some manipulation going on, there may be jealousies and disputes in the Cabinet, there may be a disposition on the part of some Minister to grasp more authority than he is now given, and so branches are taken from the department to whieh they properly belong, and are given to another Minister. I do not think that is satisfactory. They ought to be properly organized, appropriately designated, and they should be ander the Minister of the Crown whose name will indicate the duties he is called upon to perform. We ought not to have to look up OrdersinCouncil to see whether a branch is under the control of the Department of the Interior, the Department of Justice, the Necretary of State, or the Minister of Marine and Fisheries.
sir JOHN THOMPSON. There would be a good deal in the olijection of the hon. member if it referred to the Bill. There is very good reason why the main department should le under the control of the Minister while he remains in otfice, and that the public should know who has control over it. But that is not the question now before us. The Minister of Interior has control of the Department of the Interior. That department cannot be transferred to another while he holds the title, and the extent and scope of its powers are defined by statute. It is the same thing with the Department of Justice, the Department of Inland Revenue, the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Marine and Fisheries, and the other departments; but there are certain subordinate lranches-and I agree with the hon. gentleman that they would be more properly designated as branches--which have been created by this Parliament, and which are not necessarily attached to any department but may be attached to one or another. The llepartment of the Geological Survey is one of these. It was erectel into a department a year or two ago with a deputy head, but no Minister, and the duties can be as well attached to the Department of Agriculture, for example, as to the Department of the Interior. There is no misconception on the part of the public with regard to that, because there is nothing in the title of the Minister of Interior to indicate that he has control over the Geological Survey. A person who does not look at the enactments or at the Orders in Council has no reason to believe that this belongs to the Department of the Interior more than the Department of Agriculture. The reason for the present Bill is principally, however, that these subordinate branches have been created from time to time and that Parliament has already adopted the principle of making them transferable. The Indian Department, the Mounted Police Department, and the Immigration Department are transferable. These being transferable, they have been transferred from time to time. The late First Minister chose to hold for a time the direction of the Department of Indian Affairs, and also of the Mounted Police Department. When he took the Department of Railways, he ceased to hold these departments, and they were handed over to the present Minister of the Interior. I think it is desirable to make this Geological Survey Department transferable. Otherwise, all these departments might be grouped under one Minister and might so overloail his department. The same authority was taken to transfer the patent branch, though it has never been taken advantage of, but it is on the Statute-book still. The policy remains, and, if these branches can be transferred to different clepartments, that policy should be made uniform in order to allow the work to be equalizerl and to prevent all these departments being placed under one Minister and overloading lim with work.

Mr. MULOCK. I understand the Minister of Interior to say that whilst it was thought advisable to transfer this service from the Department of Interior, it had not yet been determined where to place it; in other words, the fiovermment have not yet decided how they will use this power. Now, the branch in' guestion has been attached to the Department of Interior for a great many years.

Mr. MILLs (Pothwell). Always.

Mr. MULOCK. It seems singular, then, that it should be necessary, towards the close of a session, suddenly to legislate to enable the Government to pass it round from Minister to Minister. If they are not ready this session to say where it should le placed, I think the proper course for them to adopt is to let it remain where it always has been mutil they can confer with the House and take the advice of the House. Now, these branches, accord ing to the fitness of things, must belong to one department more than to another. For example, I would think that this branch, the Geological Survey, most naturally lelongs to the Department of Interior. It has to do with land, with property, with mineral interests, with our mineral development, topographical surveys, and so on. That being the case, it is more in the line of the head of that department. It may be that at times an economical use of his staff will save money to the country, because this survey might be able to make use, to some extent, of the staff of the department, whereas if you attach it to a department that has not any staff that can be of service to this branch, it means the duplication of the service, so that as a matter of economy alone, the House ought to have a voice in saying where the branches are to be attached. I am sure, this is one of those questions that the House ought to be allowed to puss an opinion upon, so far as to say to what department it should belong. At present the law allows Ministers to be shifted about from department to department, and now weare going to add to that byallowing the various branches to be shifted around; a shuffle may, perhaps, take place at every Cabinet meeting, and we will not know who is responsible for the proper discharge of the public service. The geneal principle of the law is against this course. The general principle of the law enumerates certain departments, it creates responsibilities and powers, and all those responsibilities and powers, going with the department, go to a responsible head. It had been wholly contrary to the genius of our system to allow the duties to be changed from individual to individual, and it is now proposed in this important case to do so, and I think that it will result not only in confusion in the public mind which the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) referred to, but also to an unnecessary expenditure of public money. That being the case, I think that the proper course for the (iovernment to pursue would be to wait until their arrangements on this question are matured. There can be no urgency. This condition of affiairs has lasted from the establishment of the Geological Survey until now. Surely the public interest will not suffer by the matter leing prostponed until another session, and then the House may be asked to give an opinion upon the subject in the only way it ought to give it as a legislative boily. I can only emphasize what has fallen from the lips of others, that there is an aggressive spirit: perhaps not intended but still none the less real; the aggressiveness of the Adninistration to-day is rapiflly doing away, almost, with the necessity of Parliament, it is rohbing Parliament of its powers. We finl the highest power of Parliament leing invarled, we find liberty being taken with the public exchequer, the abuse of power to use the Governor (ieneral's warrant. Now, we have that same spirit breaking out in this aggrandizement of the Council, in a claim that the Executive shall be the legislative power. Parliament cannot too soon awaken to the danger of the situation. I know that the fiovernment have enormons power, and I think they are making an unwise use of it when they are practically setting the people's representatives at naught by the very legislation they are now proposing to Parliament. This is but a developinent of what began a year or two ago, but it has now proceeded at a rate of speed that would certainly have alarmed the oll man who for so many years presided over the destinies of Canada. I ani sure that the right hon. gentleman who was formerly Premier of Canada, would have hesitated a long time before endeavouring to centralize in the fovernor in Council the powers which this present Admininistration seek. I cannot better prove that than by saying that so far as I am aware his Govermment never abused the power to use the Governor General's warrants, or made such an unlimited use of it as was made by the present Administration. It would be wise, therefore, I think, for them to halt in this case before they have created a feeling, as they will, of want of confidence in Parliament itself. This centralizing of power is uholly contrary to the representative system that we are supposed to enjoy, and for my part I deem it my duty, as long as I am supposed to represent the people of my constituency, to protest against this system, and I. therefore, do protest against this proposition. In this particular instance I think there can be no question that the legislation is not warranter, hecause the Government do notknow to-day whether it will be required or not, and there is certainly no urgency, so far as experience goes.

Sir Johi Thompson.

Mr. CASEY. I agree with the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) and thehon. memberfor North York (Mr. Mulock) in most of what they have said about this Bill, both on the general principle and in rexard to the exigencies of this particular department. On the general principle, I think it is wrong that departments of this-importance should be capable of being shifted from one political head to another at the will of the Cabinet themselves. As has been pointed out alreally, it gives an aggressive Minister the chance of obtaining more patronage for his own department. I understand that one of the arguments is that the Department of the Interior is overleaded with work on account of including this Geological Survey. Now, there have been times within all our memories when the Department of the Interior was much more husy than it is now. The hon. Minister of that department shakes his hearl, but I think he will admit that during the period of the hoom in the North. West there was more doing in lands in the Department of the Interior, at all events, than there has been since, and we had nocomplaint then that the department was overworked. Now, when there is comparatively little doing in that line, the Minister complains that he is overworked, and he takes the liberty of shifting this department on to some other shoulders. I say, on the general principle, this mutability of speciad departments is most objectionable, but in this particular case, as the hon. member for North York has pointed out, there is a special affinity leetween the Geologicial Survey and the Department of the Interior. That department deals with all the real estate and landed estate of the Crown, as represented by the Dominion fovernment. That department makes the ordinary surveys of those lands, and it should also he in possession of information respecting the mineral wealth in and under those lands. The two branches of the Survey should go hand in hand; the Dominion Landssurvey and the (reological Survey should he under the same political head, and the work should proceed in harmony, so that between the two the Dominion might know as scientifically as possible the value of the land to le disposed of. The conduct of the Geological Survey hitherto has not been too much in the general interests of the Iominion. The moneys voted to that depart ment have been spent largely in developing private property. At the present time surveys in Nova scotia and other provinces are going on over lands not only the property of the provinces luat of private individuals and corporations engaged in mining. These lands are being inspected and mapped out by the Geological Survey, no benefit resulting to the Dominion in its position as land owner. We are exploring and advertising lands from which the Dominion gets no revenue and which do not belong to the Dominion itself; we are developing private property at the Goverument expense. How it is arrangel as to what properties shail be mapped out, I do not know ; I suppose it must be done with the consent of the Minister, or by arrangement of the Minister with certain parties. I do not know how far investigations in Nova Scotia ure systematically carried out year by year, but I am satisfied that they are conducted in respect to lands which do not lelong to the Dominion, and which we should not be taxed to explore and advertise. These surveys are very much analagous to that performed in England by the ordnance service. They are making careful and accurate maps of the district, noting not only the minerals but also the natural features in detail. In that reapect they are fulfilling the duties that pertain rather to the surveyors' branch of the department as distinct from the Geological branch, unless it were understood that the two branches of the service were run in common. This might be done to a great extent. Officers should be appointed under the I)ominion LandsSurvey who were capable of reporting on the inineral character of the various districts, so that it would not be necessary to go over the ground twice, once to map out the township boundaries and the quarter sections, and again to explore the geological features. If the two services were combined in that sense a large amount might be saved. While this diversion of public money is taking place even under the present management of the department which is responsible for the care of the Dominion lands, I fear that if it were placed under another department, one not directly concemed with the lands of the comntry, there would he even less care taken to limit the operations of this survey to lands the property of ihe fiovernment, which alone should lenefit by these explorations. All the sub-departments of the fioverument should be attached to the political department for which they have the nearest political affinity, and should not be sulbject to continuous changes. I do not attach much importance tos the difficulty encountered by the public of finding out the department to which a sub-department belongs, because sul,-departments cian be reached umder their ow'n names. My hon. friend from North Fork has referred to the aggregate number of Governo General's warrants, lut I think his memory had failed him in regard to the abuse of the divernor General's warrants in the Cabinet which was led by the late Premier. During his management of public affairs some of the most glaring abuses of that power occurred, two years ago and even last year. I believe the majority of the House would agree with me, if the matter were called to their attention, that the executive branch of the fovernment has at present too much power over larliament. The House, without regard to political party, is itself to blame if too much power is placed in the hands of Ministers. Hon. members supporting the Government should pay attention to this matter, and impress their views on Ministers, and insist on their keeping within the old constitutional safeguards.
Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time, and House resolved itself ints committee.

(In the Committee.)

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). I would ask to what department it is proposed to change the Genlogical branch? I understood from the Minister of Justice that if the Department of Immigration is transferred from the Department of Agriculture to the Department of Interior, it. would involve too great a proportion of the executive work of Government on that one department ; and that it is proposed to take this branch from the Department of the Interior und transfer it to some other. I suppose the Ministers know to what department it is to be attached, whether there shall be any legislation in regard to mines, and whether mining is to go along with geological survey or whether it is to be retained as part of the administration of public lands.

Mr. DEWDNEY. The mines administered under the Dominion Lands Act will continue to be administered as at present. With the exception of publishing statistics with regard to mines, the Geological Department has nothing to do with that.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. There has been no decision arrived at as regards the department, but it is in contemplation to transfer it to Agriculture, from which Immigration is taken.

Mr. CHARLTON. I should imagine that before the Government asks the House to consent to an important change of this kind they would at least have arrived at a decision as to what department they will transfer the duties referred to in the Bill. It strikes me that the legislation is immature if the Government have not arrived at a decision.

Bill reported.

THE FISHERIES ACT.

Mr. TUPPFR moved second reading of Bill (No. 9) to further amend the Fisheries Act. He said: There are several gentlemen who take an interest in the chief sections of this Bill who are not at present in the House, and as I anticipate a lengthy discussion on the measure, I propose to take a stage on the Bill now, so as to refer the resolutions which relate to one of its clauses to the committee together with the Bill, and so avoid a repetition of discussion. If that proposition is accepted, I would move the second reading of this Bill, and 1 will afterwards also move the resolutions and refer them to the committee. We can then take up the whole question and discuss it at length.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) So far as I am concerned, I see no objection to that.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the second time.
Mr. TUPPER moved that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, to consider the following resolutions:-

1. That it is expedient to impose a fee of five dollara for each license granted by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to can, preserye, or cure lobsters, or keep them alive out of close season in ponds or other places.
2. That it is expedient to impose a fee, at the rate of two cents for each case containing four dozen one-pound cans of lobsters, and one cent for each case containing two dozen one-pound cans of lobster, to be paid by the packer to the person directed by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to mark, label or stamp such case.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I would ask whether the hon. gentleman is in a position to furnish the House with the information he may have obtained on this subject before he introduced his Bill? It has heen stated to me that the hon. gentleman has had reports from experts in his department, as well as from outside the department, affecting this matter. In a matter which involves such important interests as this measure does, it is very necessary that we should be furnished with all the information possible to enable us to have an intelligent debate and to arrive at some conclusion which will le in the interests of the Government on one side, so far as their interests are distinct from the lobster fisheries, and on the other hand in the interest of those who have their money invested in this industry.

Mr. TUPPER. It is my desire, as shown already, that this matter shall be fully and carefully considered, and in no sense in a party spirit. It was for that reason that I departed from the principle for which I have been contending lately, and sought from the House direct, the authority that I perhaps could have oltained from the Governor in Council. I would be very happy to do as the hon. gentleman has suggested, and to lay before the House some interesting information I have received from Mr. Neilson, who is employed by the Government of Newfoundland, and who has been exceedingly courteous in giving my department a great deal of valuable information on the subject. I have also another report, and I will lay them before the House previous to the matter being considered.

Motion agreed to, and Hunse resolved itself into Committee on the resolutions.

(In the Committee.)

Mr. TUPPER. My object is to save unnecessary repetition of the long arguments that will be advanced in considering this subject. I asked the House to take the second reading of the Bill and then adopt these resolntions, which will, after being adopted by this committee, be referred with the Bill to the committee of the Whole House again. No hon. gentleman will be prejudiced in the slightest degree, because those clauses will have to be adopted and considered again in committee with the Bill.

Mr. FLINT. I presume there will be no assumption that there is any assent on our part to the resolution.

Mr. TUPPER. Not in the slightest. It is simply to save time.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) They will he adopted on that distinct understanding.

Resolutions read the first and second times and reported.

Mr. TUPPER moved that the resolutions be referred to the Committee of the Whole on Bill (No. 9).

SUPPLY-DUTY ON BINDING TWINE.

Mr. FOSTER moved that the House again realve itself into Committee of Supply.

Mr. WATsON moved :
That it is computed that fourteen millions of pounds ( 14.000, , M 0 l lbs.) of binding twine are annuslly consumed by the farmers of Canada in harvesting their crops.
Whereas they are subjected under the present tariff to a duty of 25 per cent ad valorent, having thereby inflicted upon them a tax of $$ 400,000$ and upwards per annum, while at the same time fishermen are allowed to import twine for use in their business free of duty, under which exemption twine to the value of $$ 424,023$ is imported free of duty, and it further appeara that the revenue derived from the duty on binding twine for the year 1891 amounts to $$ 6,192$, and, convequently, a tax of over $$ 400,000$ is imposed upon the farmers of Canads without any appreciable adyantage to the revenue : such taxation being doubly unjustifiable in view of the exemption allowed the fishermen of Carada in respect of twine used by them:

That it is therefore expedient that binding twine should be placed on the Free List.
He said : For the last six weeks, I have had a resolution on the Paper providing that binder twine should be placed on the free list. I allowed that motion to drop last night for the sake of arriving at other notices of motion on the Paper, and I now take the opportunity to move in the direction $I$ have indicated. It is hardly necessary for me to take up the time of the House in discussing this question, as it has already been considerably delated this session, and also during previous sessions, but I find new evidence of the necessity of placing this article on the free list almost every day, and we have had an enormous amount of petitions presented to this House during this session from the Patrons of Industry and other associations, asking that the duty be taken off. I hold in my hand a copy of a petition presented to this House from the Graud Association of the Patrons of Industry in the Province of Manitola, signed by Charles Braithuhite, Girand President, and other ofticers of the Grand Loolge :

" We. your petitioners, members of the Proviucial Association of the Patrons of Industry in the Province of Manitoba, represented by the undersigned members of the Executive Board of the Grand Association for the said province, bumbly showeth :
"1. That the duty now existing on binding twine operates materially to the disadyantage of the consumer:
"2. Your petitioners desire to show that the existing duty has the effect of preventing the increase of the cultivated area;

- 3. That the cost of binding twine, owing to the duty, bears beavily on the farmers in this province.
"Therefore, your petitioners humbly pray that your honourable body will pass the uecessary legislation, at this session of your Parliament, that will have the efiect of removing the said duty on binding twine, and that the said legislation asked for by your'petitioners may take effect without delay.
- And your petitioners will ever pray.
"Signed for ex-Board.
CHAS. BRAITHWAITE, Grand Prex. TAMES BURLAND, Grand Vire Prey. W. C. ©RABAM, Grand Nec.-Treas.

I also tind from the Province of Ontario, from the Ihominion Crange, a petition presented to this Parliament, which was circulated largely throughout the country. This petition goes on to state :
"That the self-binder is one of the most expensive as well as the most useful of agricultural machines, but in its use binder twine is indispensable:
"That from two to four pounds of twine is required to bind the crop grown upon an acre, according to the weight of the crop;
"That the retail price of binder twine during the harvest of 1891 was from 10 to 14 cents per pound, according to the brand :
ing That in the great grain-producing provinces of the North-West and Ontario, the cost of binder twine is an important and ever recurring item each year in the expense of the farm which must be provided for. Unlike the twine in a fizherman's net, which can be used over and over again, and when broken can be repaired, binder twine when once used is done, and each sheaf requires new twine;
"That the operations of trusts and combines are conducted with great secrecy, and much difficulty is experienced in procuring any information respecting them, but there seems to be scarcely room for a doubt, that the supply of binder twine is controlled by an A merican combine, called the 'National Cordage Company, having its head office in the United States, with a branch office in Montreal to supply the Canadian trade, or this same combine operating under some other name;
-We therefore pray, that the duty upon binder twine, imported into Capada, be abolished, and that it be placed upon the free list, as little, if any, revenue is derived from itsimportation, and such an Act would destroy the power of a body of foreign monopolists to levy and collect a tax from the Canadian farmer for their own aggrandizement."
Now, I think the evidence in such petitions we should carefully consider. No oue can doubt that the farmers are entitled to some slight consideration in this matter. There is little or no revenue collected on binding twine, and, that being the case, there can be no objection on the score of revenue to striking off the duty, Objection was raised in years gone by that the binding twine industry was one which had grown up in Canada, and that it should be protected; but we find, and I think beyond doubt it can he stated here, that, so far as Canadians are concerned, all their interest in the cordage company has ceased. There can be no doubt that the facts show that the National Cordage Company of the United States control the cordage interest in Canada. This matter is not only agitating the consumers, but the men who deal in binding twiue. I received a letter yesterday from Mr. Charles Braithwaite, the Grand Presilent of the Grand Association of Patrons of Industry of Manitoha, in which he says:
"We cannot get quotations on binding twine at present, as the dealers are waiting to see what the Government is going to do with regard to removing the duty."
Nhowing that the duty does affect the price of binding twine, that the dealers have not placed their orders yet for binding twine because of the duty. Last year I know a firm in Portage la Prairie that handles both American and Canadian binding twine told me that it was a toss up whether they shoulh purchase American linding twine and pay the duty or should buy Canadian twine. There was little or no difference between the price of Canadian binding twine, showing that they had to pay every cent of this 2.7 per cent cluty on binding twine. This Mr. Braithwaite has been in communication with the manufacturers of binding twine, and he says:
"I bave a guarantee from Belfast, Ireland, with a firstclass rample of twine measuring $; 50$ feet per pound ; breaking strain 70 lb ."
It must be remembered, in considering this binding twine question, that it is not only the price that is to lee considered but the number of feet per pound in the twine, because that affects the value. This Mr. Braithwaite is a practical farmer, and occupies the distinguished position of president of the Patrons of Industry in the Province of Manitola, who number up in the thousinds. I find by comparison that the Red Cap brand, which is a brand which has been sold very largely throughout the Dominion, measures only inis feet per pound while this sample from Relfast gave 500 feet per pound. The Crown brand, which is also sold very largely, measures 400 feet per pound. So this Belfast sample of 500 feet per pound, with a breaking strain of 7o lbs., can be delivered at Halifax for $9 \frac{1}{2}$ cents per pouml and delivered at central parts of Manitoba for 10.2 cents per pound, if the duty were removed, but with the duty it would cost over 13 cents per pound. Now, after the motion which was made in this House last night, we believe we should do all we can to foster and encourage the trade with Great Britain as far as wecan, without making any sacrifice of ourselves, and now we are practically deriving no revenue from binding twine, and if the duty is taken off that article and it can be sold to the farmiers in Manitobs for 104 cents instead of the 13 or 14 cents a pound they have to pay to-day, the Government is in duty bound to remove that duty. Last session, while this matter was under discussion, even the member for Selkirk (Mr. Daly), who voted against the resolution proposed by the member for North York (Mr. Mulock), admitted that the people of Manitoba suffered from this duty on binding twine, but he said he believed in supporting the National Policy all through, but if the National

Cordage Company of the United States was proved to control the sale of binding twine in Canada, then he would hope the Government would remove the duty, and every one else hoped the same. This tax on binding twine bears heavily on the farmers in Canala, but more especially on the farmers in the North-West, because we cultivate per capita a much larger portion of land than is cultivated in any other part of Canada. This is not like a tax on agricultural implements, which may last for years, but it is an annual tax, and if you take 3 pounds an acre, which was the average last year, it runs up to very large figures, because last year in Manitols alone we had $1,300,000$ acres in crop, which, at 3 pounds per acre, gave a total of $3,900,000$ pounds, which, at an extra cost of 3 cents a pound to the farmer, amounts to $$ 17,000$ more than it should have cost the farmers of Manitoba for the privilege of using Canadian binding twine. In the North-West Territories 300,000 arres were under cultivation, requiring about 900,000 pounds of twine, or paying an extra cost of $$ 27,000$. The total extra cost in Manitoba and the North. West last year was $$ 144,000$. Take the small population of Manitoba and the North-West, and you will see that they are, without reason, taxed that enormous sum, not for the benefit of any industry in Canada, but to assist in making millionaires of the members of the National Cordage Company of the United States, who control the sale of binding twine in Canada. There may be some here who may have some interest in that cordage company. I believe the hon. member for Halifax had some interest in it, hut it is well known that the Natioual Cordage Company of the United States control the binding twine in this country. I find that reference is made to this in the Boston Iraily Adrertixer', which, in the course of a favourable notice of the National Cordage Company's affairs, says:
"The company actually has purchased all the condage mills in Canada, and the cordage business of the Dominion of Canada is protected by a tariff wall which enables the business to work at a profit."
They fully realize the benefit which the National Cordage Company have in owning the cordage mills in Cunada, in having this protection, hecause, by having this little preserve of $5,000,000$ people divided off, they can charge 3 cents a pound extra on binding twine. I have carefully prepared, last year and this year, a statement showing the difference of the cost of binding twine in Canada and the United States. I have the figures from the consumers and from the sellers of binding twine, and, in almost every case, the difference in cost is about the difference in the duty, from $2 \geqslant \frac{i}{2}$ cents to 3 cents a pound. Last year we imported 196,358 pounds, of the value of $\$ 24,595$, on which a duty was collected of $\$ 6,190.00$ Divide the value, and that amounts to $3_{1}^{2}$ cents per pound. The one-tenth of a cent per pound is sufficient to keep out the Anerican article, and that gives the branch of the cordage company's institution in Canada the advantage of charging 3 cents extra per pound on binding twine to the furmers of Canada. Taking the statistics of all the provinces last year and allowing 25 per cent of the crop in Canada to be lound otherwise than by binding twine, it would take 14,000,000 pounds of binding twine to bind the sheaves on our farms, so that it means an extra tax paid on account of the duty of 3 cents a pound, or about $\$ \$ 20,000$, and all we received in the way of duty on binding twine last year was $\%, 192$. There appears to be no possible justification for the Government retaining that duty on binding twine. We might hope from expressinns made in this House by the late Minister of Customs, now Minister of Militia, that. whenever the Government were shown that there was any increased price placed on an article on account of a combine or trust or any foreign corporation attempting to control any industry in Canada, then the Government should step in and relieve the people. I find that on the 6th July, 1891, the Minister of Militia, who was then Minister of Customs, spoke as follows:-

[^61]Now, Mr. Speaker, I had hoped that it would not be necessary for any member of this House to rise in his place and offer a resolution asking these duties to be removed, because the Minister of Militia admitted in that speech that so soon as what has taken place, had taken place, the Government would then find it their duty to step in and interfere with the protection on twine, but so far the Govermment have not come doun with a measure to relieve the far:ners of this burden. I hoped, in allowing my motion to stand from day to day and week to week, that the (iovernment would see their way to come down and make a statement to this House of their intention to remove the duty on binding twine and place that article on the free list. Now, after we have heard that in the Province of Manitoba dealers in binding twine will not give quotations to the farmers until they find whether the Government are going to remove the duty, I think it is time to move in the matter. In the session of 1888 there was a committee known as the Combines Committee, which sat in a room adjoining this Chamber for weeks, attempting to drafta Bill to be placed on the Statutebook that would prevent these combinations. That committee never amounted to much, in fact I do not know that it has ever been of any benefit to the people at all. I find on the Journals of the House, page 403, session of 1888, the evidence of Alexander W. Morris, a manufacturer of Montreal. Being examined by Mr. Gillmor, a member of that committee, he gave this testimony :

[^62]Now, Mr. Speaker, that clearly shows that a combination was formed even before the National Cordage Company bought up the cordage companies of Canada, and now that they have all been absorbed by this great National Cordage Company of the United States, I think it is certainly time the Government should move to relieve cur farmers of this burden. To my mind there is no justification for retaining the duty any longer. Now, Sir, as this matter has been discussed at some length on a previous notice of motion asking for a return, and as this House are probably possessed of all the facts that can be produced, and must be convinced by this time that this duty should be remoyed, I do not propose to take up any further the time of the House, and will simply leave the motion in your hands.
Mr. MULOCK. As this matter was pretty thoroughly discussed last session and has been ventilated to some extent this session, I shall only speak for a moment. I may say that I recently received a communication from the Secretary of the Dominion Grange of Canada, and it contains an iteni which I will read to the House, inasmuch as some hon. gentlemen are in the habit of contending that this tax in no way adds to the cost of the material. I remember last session that a number of hon. gentlemen took that ground. They sail that the duty added nothing to the cost, that the farmers were supplied with a better article, and in proof that it did not auld anything to the cost, they turned to the blue-book and showed that none of the manufactured articles ever came in through the custom house, and so they argued that because no money was dropped into the corernment slot at the custom house, none came out of the pockets of the people. Well, unfortunately for this theory, the farmers have come to a very different conclusion, and this House has been flowied with petitions, I understand, from the farming conmunity upon this subject. I think we might allow them to know something about their own business. My hon. friend has cited the evilence of the Girand Loige of the Patrons of In. dustry of Manitoba; my communication, as I said before, is from the Dominion Grange. My correspondent is the Secretary of the Dominion Grange of Canada, Mr. Robert UFilkie, and the paragraph to which I wish to call attention is as follows:-
"I may just say that while the duts on binder twine here is 25 per cent, the American duty is only 7.10 of a cent per pound; that standard twine cost American farmers last harrest 8 cents per pound and the Canadian farmers all up to 12 cents, or say about 3 cents per pound more, which just about makes the amount of the duty."
My correspondent is writing from Ontario, and is giving the cost of standard twine in that province as compared with the cost of the similar article in the United States. It will be observed from the above that the evidence of the Dominion Grange harmouized with that of the Patrons of Industry of Manitolu in the statement they both nyake that the cost is 3 cents per pound higher than in the United States. There is no controversy about this point, that the duty in the United States is only $\frac{7}{8}$ of a cent per pound.

Mr. FOSTER. $\frac{\dot{\text { Ij }}}{}$ of a cent.

Mr. MULOCK. Yes if in the States, while in Canada it is 25 per cent. In other words, the opportunity given to the manufacturer to increase his price by the force of combines by virtue of this tariff is over 400 per cent greater than in the United States. Whereas ;in of a cent is all the tax the American manufacturer can impose on this necessary article, the Canadian manufacturer under our tariff can impose 3 cents a pound, or over 400 per cent more than the American. We talk about protecting native industries. Here is how we are protecting Canadian farmers, who have to meet the American wheat exporters in England and in the markets of Europe. The Canadian farmer is handicapped as against his rival to the south, to say mothing of the English farmer who gets his namufactured articles free of this duty. I wonder that hon. gentlemen opposite who are so solicitous for the welfare of the Canadian people, especially when that welfare is at all in competition with that of the people to the south of the line, do not on this occasion relieve them of this unfair burden, one not only onerous, but doubly so as against the position of our rivals to the south. Last session the Government had all these facts before them, as they have them to day. It is true there were differences of opinion expressed in the House, but I am not aware that there has been any change in the situation. The cordage combine in the United States had last session, prior to our dealing with this matter, acquired the whole manufacturing trade of Canada. That is the condition of things today ; and I fail to understand, with this information, why the Government have not before this solved this problem, and placed binding twine on the free list. Of course, if their contention is sound, that the duty does not enhance the cost to the farmer, we can understand their not taking off the tax. The arguments advanced by their supporters last year must on that loasis be correct, and then I can understand their doing what they did last session, voting down this resolution. But with the evidence supplied to the country last year, how that the removal of the duty on sugar was immediately followed by a reduction in price in Canada, remembering that the Minister of Finance had taken pains to point out that he had taken off $\mathbf{$ 3 , 0 0 0 , 0 0 0}$ of taxes from the shoulders of the people by remoring those duties, I should like to know by what process of reasoning he can prove that the removal of the duty on binding twine would not be followed by similar results. If there was any possible argument in favour of sugar, it is infinitely greater in the other case. For whereas of sugar there were several manufacturers who were to some extent independent corporations, and competed for customers, no one will contend that there is any competition with respect to binding twine in Canada. If, therefore, the prices of sugar fell by the amount of duty removed, which the Minister of Finance asserted last session, much more will a similar reduction of price follow the removal of the protection given to manufacturers in Canada-I will not say to the Canadian manufacturer, but to the American-by an American binding twine combine, which has acquired control of the Canadian market. I cannot conceive of anything more unpatriotic on the part of the representatives of the people than their allowing a foreign institution, citizens of a foreign country, to come here and take advantage of our system to tax our people. We welcome them and their capital, of course, and I suppose we cannot blame them if our institutions permit them to become tax collectors; but the time has arrived when legislation should not allow either Canadians or foreigners through the means of a protective system, to tax the people and put the taxes in the pockets of the American manufacturers.

After Recess.

Mr. sutherland. Mr. Speaker, I do not intend taking up the time of the House discussing this question at length, because it has often been discussed before, and the details connected with it are well known to hon. gentlemen. I hold in my hand the report of the Cordage Company of the Cuited states, and it occurred to me that the report of that company was such that if it were brought to the notice of the (iovernment and of the House, it might have some influence on any action which they may take with regard to the removal of the duty on binding twine. I will avail myself of this opportunity to real a few short clauses from the report of the president of that cordage combination, referring to the groperties controlled by the company:
"The properties now owned and controlled by the company are situated in many states of the Union, and the provinces in Canada, and are 49 in number. Among those owned and controlled by the company including all the milled in Canada and several of the largest mills in Boston and in the west and south-west."
Now, Sir, in the financial report of the company, submitted at the same meeting, I find that the profits on the operations for the last year are $$ 1,406,313.45$; that the dividends paid to th.e stockholders of that combine were $$ 1,3(0), 000$, and I find that another paragraph of that financial report says :
"It is very difficult at this time to give a correct estimate of the profits of the business for the quarter ending 31 mit January 1 feel safe in stating, however, that, after deducting expenses, rentalys and all fixed charzes; these profits will be found sufficient to pay the entire annual dividend of $$ 400,000$ on the preferred stock, and the quarterly dividend of $$ 250,000$ on the com mon stock, besides loaving a large surplas."
Thus the estimated profits of this cordage combine for one quarter of a year, ending the 31 st December, 1891, are said to be sufficient to pay the dividends on the preferential stock as well as todivide $$ 20 \mathrm{in}$ ), (100 among the other stockholders. Now, Sir, while it is the policy of those who favour protection in this country to protect our own home inlustries and to build up manufacturing institutions in Canada, I ann satisfied from the statement which I have now submitted to the House that no argument can be based in favour of continuing this duty for the purpose of protecting our own home industries, pecause it will be plainly seen that all the cordage companies in Canada are under the control of this Yankee combine, and that by maintaining the duty and taxing the farmers and the people in this matter, it is only putting money into the pockets of the American stockholders and controllers of this combination. I do not think that is the idea of the National Policy. I do not think that the Government, or the members supporting this system are desirous of taking the money from the people of this country to enrich these Yankee manipulators. If this is actually thestate of affairs, and there canbe no doubt but it is, it is very desirable that this reso. lution should prevail anil that the Government should consider the desirability of removing the duty from binding twine and thereby reducing its cost to the farmers of the country. It may be argued, and I heard the argument used, that as the Anerican combination controls all the mills in Canada, that therefore the price would not be reduced to the farmers if the duty were taken off. In answer to this I would point out that there are only a certain number of mills controlled by the combine in the United States, that the price at the present time there is lower than in Canada, and that if the duty were removed the Canadian farmers would have the benefit of the competition of the American mills not in the combine. Twine is also manufactured in (ireat Britain and we conld import it from there. It is, therefore, useless to argue that because the combination controls all the Canadian mills that the price would not be reduced to our farmers. I think I have clearly shown to this House and to the Government that this combination having got control of all the factories in this country, and in view of the immense profits they are making out of this institution, that it is desirable from every stanlpoint in the interests of the agriculturists of this country that some action should be taken. A leading supporter of the Government and a protectionist has remarked that a (iovernment pledged to protection is bound to act against combines. I an satisfied that never in the past, nor, I suppose, never in the future will we be able to so plainly show that this is a combination which has full control of the manufacture of the articlewhich we are discussing, and in such a manner as toincrease the price without conferring any lenefit on the country. I hope that it will be considered by the Government that while we may maintain the protective policy here the object was to build up the industries of our own country, but that through some manipulation and comline on the part of those who have control of a certain industry, all the extra taxation on the people of this country goes to the lenefit of capitalists in a foreign country. When this state of affairs exists I think it is time that action should be taken to relieve our people from the hurden. I hope, sir, that this resolution uill carry. I hope that the Government will take this into consideration, and that they will renore from the shoulders of the agriculturists of this country the taxation which they complain of so bitterly. We have hal petitions sent to us from representative institutions of agriculturists, and we have had members supporting the (iovernment in this House state that their constituents are desirous of having this duty remover. I lelieve that the arguments which have been offered in favour of the removal of this duty have been such that it is impossible to resist them, and I hope that the resolution of my hon. friend from Marquette (Mr. Watson) will carry.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, the mover of this resolution has apparently designedly framed it in such a form as to make it as objectionable as possible to hon. gentlemen on this side of the House; even to those who may be inclined to take part with him in his desire to see a change made in regard to this particular article. He prefaces his resolution with a preamble which is based upon an assumption, which, if not capable of disproof, is certainly not capable of proof and has not been proved. He hases his preamble upon the assumption that the price of binding twine in this country has been increased exactly by the amount of the duty levied upon that article. That, Sir, is an argument which has been brought forward upon that side of the House whenever we have discussed anything in reference to the National Policy. I entirely dissent from that proposition. If it were a well-founded proposition, why then there would be very little to be said in favour of a protective tariff, because we have always contended-those of us, at any rate, who are not interested in manufactures, and who believe that a certain degree of protection was, under certain circumstances, and will be under certain circumstances necessary to the protection of our own in-dustries-that the competition which prevails in the country has always been sufficient to keep the prices down to a reasonable figure, and I believe that such has been the case, as has been shown in a viariety of instances.

Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). As in sugar.

Mr. OBRIEN. The hon. geitleman talks about sugar. I am a little antonished that the hon. mem. ber for North York (Mr. Mulock), in endeavouring to support the argument of the hon. member for Marguette (Mr. Watson), spoke alout the duty on sugar, and said that because the duty was taken off sugar and that the price of that article was reduced, that therefore the same thing must occur in the case of hinding twine. The hon. gentleman surely does not require to be taught at this time of day the first principles of the doctrine as to who pays the duty. Surely there is a distinction to he drawu between an article of raw material brought into this country, which this country does not produce, and an article which is manufactured in this country; and until hon. gentlemen opposite learn that distinction, their discussions on the subject of a protective tariff will certainly be attended with very little benefit to themselves or to anyborly else. Now, Sir, the hon. member for Marquette (Mr. Watson), who movel this resolution, assumes in the preamble that the price of the article is necessarily increased by the amount of. the duty, and he goes on to base on that assumption the conclusion that farmers pay a tax of $$ 400,000$ a year on binding twine. Now, his premises, if not disproved, have not been proved, and I do not think they are capable of proof, hecause I believe it has not been and cannot be established that the farmers in the United States get their binding twine at any less rate, the qualities of the various articles being taken into account, than the farmers of this country. There are certain yuulities of binding twine that have been sold in this country at lower rates than any of the rates quoted as prevailing in the United States; but I will not take them as an example. This long document, which has been laid before us in the interests of the cordage company, and which I have no doult states its case as fully and strongly as it can be stated, points out that the price in the Euited states of binding twine in 1890 fell to an unprecedently low figure, a figure below the actual cost of production because there was such competition anong the producers of the article, that the duty levied on it made no difference in the pricewhich effectually disposes of the argument which the hon. memler for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) based upon the sugar duty. Now, Nir, the premises of the resolution being, I say, unproved and unprovable, we can place very little reliance on its conclusion, and, therefore, the whole preamble may fairly be struck out, if we desire to arrive at anything like a satisfactory conclusion on this question. With regard to the duty itself, I think we may safely lay down this proposition, and I lay it down as a supporter of the National Policy: in the tirst place, as I have said before in this House, the National Policy or a protective tariff is not a thing to be desired for its own sake. It is not like a question in morality with regard to a thing which is to be esteemed or disregarded on account of some intrinsic merit of its own. It is simply a means to an end, and as long as it attains that end it should be maintained, and when it ceases to do so, it may be dealt with as something desirable of reformation. With regard te this particular duty I think it is in accordance with the principles of the National Policy to lay down this rule: That the moment an article ceases to be the proluct of an independent Canadian industry, we are justified in dealing with it as being no longer entitled to the benefit of any protection whatever. We so dealt with the article of salt, and I think the evidence is conclusive that this article has passed out of the category of those articles the production of which are indepsendent Canarlian industries; and therefore if we find, or even without waiting to find, that an undue adrantage has leen taken ly the combination which now controls the production of the article, we have a right to deal with it as though it were a foreign prodaction. We should take that course in accordance with the principles of the National Policy, and not in opposition to them. It is not necessary to consider the question whether or not a productive duty should any longer be maintained. It is not necessary at this time to go into the merits of the general guestion of a protective or a free trade tariff. We have to deal with things as we find them. It would be useless to take up the time of the House in the discussion of the effect of the duty on every article mentioned in the tariff : lout in regard to this particular article, I think the (iovermment may well consider whether the time has not now come to deal with the duty on limling twine, which is an exceedingly high one, amonnting to $2!3$ cents per pound. Such a duty may have been justified at the beginning as necessary to give our mannfacturers the coutrol of our own market. I have always understood and contended that one of the objects of the National Policy is to secure for our own industries the control of our own markets, and to prevent them being occupied by foreigners. That has leen sutficiently maintainell, I think, in regard to this industry, and the article having now passed into the category of those which are not entitled to protection, I think the Goverument is not only justified but in duty bound, I would not say to take the duty off altogether, but to make such a reluction as to prevent this combination ohtaining the alvantages they now seek to obtain. As further proof of this, I am told that one factory in the Province of New Brunswick was closed altogether by this company, the owners of the factory having been paid a very considerable sum of money to shut it up. That is enough to stamp the whole combination as one leserving of no consideration at the hands of this House.

Mr. CHARLTON. Quite consistent with protection all around, though.

Mr. O'RRIEN. Well, I am not going to enter into a general discussion of protection. I am dealing with this particular article of binding twine, and I sity that upon the principles of the National Policy the Government are justified in taking into account the circumstances and dealing with it as they dealt with salt. The resolution, as it stands, could not, I think, be accepted by this side of the House even if we were inclined to accept the principle of the resolution, lecause in the preamble propositions are laid down to which we could not give our assent. Therefore, I for one could never support such a resolution. But while I say that, I am perfectly justified and consistent in saying to the Government that I think the time has come when they may deal with this article in the manner suggested, either by a total remission of the duty or ly such a reduction as will at any rate place it on the same basis as the American article.

Mr. CHRISTIE. It is not my intention to oocupy the time of the House except for a moment or two. I simply desire to say a few words in support of the amendment now lefore the Honse, and to raise my voice against that iniquitous system of taxation which has built up and fostered so many of the combines and monopolies which are now preying on our people. If this combine were the only one, it might be tolerated; but the combines are so many that our people, the farmers especially, are being bled at every pore; and the result has been disastrous. Just in proportion as these combines and monopolies have flourished and prospered, the country has become impoverished, the value of property has decreased, and the exodus of our people to the United States has increased. Now, as an illustration of the working of this protective system, I may mention that in the town where I live there was a rope factory. That factory was in existence for several years, the proprietor was prospering, and it u:as a great public benefit to the town. About eighteen or twenty months ago, that factory was leased, I suppose, by this combine, not for the purpose of being run, but for the purpose of being closed. I am informed that the proprietor received $$ 7,500$ per annum for 21 years, and, besides that, a guardian is paid for the purpose of taking care of this closed factory. In accordance with the agreement, the factory was closed, the hands were all dismissed and compelled to seek employinent elsewhere. Not one of the operatives are to be found to-day except the solitary one who is left to guard the closed building, and the closed building remains a standing monument of the disastrous results of protection. Now, Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask who it is that pays the $$ 150,000$ or $$ 200$,000 paid for the closing of that factory, if it is not paid by the farmers and every man who requires to purchase a piece of rope or cordage? That is not all. The farmers are left conipletely at the tender mercy of a combine. There is no competition, and the combines can charge just such prices as they think proper to demand. Now, as I said before, it is not my intention to say anything further on this question, but, as this case came under my own observation, I felt it was a duty I owed my constituents to bring the matter before the House, and I think the time has come when this duty should be removed. I believé free trade is the only remedy.

If we had free trade that would wipe out the whole legions of combines and monopolies that are now preying upon our people.
Mr. McMULLEN. I was rather amused listening to the hon. menker for Muskoka (Mr. O:Brien) endeavouring, in a very flimsy way, to get out of the position he fancies he occupies before the House and the country on this important question. He certainly is quite aware that a notice of the resolution has been before the House since early this session, intimating in clear and distinct terms to the Government that it was the intention of my hon. friend from Marquette (Mr. Watson) to bring this subject before the House. The Government have had ample time and opportunity to remove the duty from linding twine, and they have declined positively to do it both last year and this session. Last night the question came before the House, and the Govermment declined to allow it to stand over, thereby forcing the hon. member for Marquette to take this means of bringing it before the House. The hon. member for Muskoka fancies that because this is an amendment to the motion to go into Supply, it will give him the opportunity of explaining to his people that owing to his being a Government supporter, he will be compelled to vote against the amendment, however much he might beotherwise in favour of it. I doubt very much whether the fimsy excuse that, being a supporter of the Gorermment, in sympathy with their general policy, be was bound to vote against this resolution, brought up in the way my hon. friend from Marquette has been forced to bring it up, will go down with his constituents. I doubt very much whether they will consider this as any justitication for his voting against the very best interests of the farmers, and sacrificing these interests to his party feeling. My hon. friend has referrel to this matter of binding twine in such a way that you would fancy there is no other portion of the world in which that article is made outside of the United States and Canada. If he is under that impression, he is quite mistaken. You would fancy from his remarks that we must come to the conclusion that if the duty were taken off binding twine, our farmers would not get it any cheaper because the American farmers pay just as high prices. I have no doubt they do, and the reason is that a combine exists in the United States as well as in Canada. As my hon. friend from Oxford (Mr. Sutherland) has said, they control no less than forty-nine factories in the United States and Canada. Their report has been read to the House to-night, and it clearly shows that they control every tactory in the United States and Canada. Well, if you remove the duty as far as Canada is concerned, we must. either get the twine from the United States at reduced prices or we will import it from France, Germany, England, or any place where it is to be.got; snd the result will be that the Americans will either have to sell at very much reduced rates or be cut out of our market by the European article. It was rather a striking commentary on the super-loyalist professions of my hon. friend from Muskoka, and a glaring evidence of the inconsistency of his professions when compared with his practice, when we find him averse to taking an opportunity, in this small way, of granting an advantage to England in this matter. He is prepared to say that the Americaus shall continue to enjoy all the privileges Mr. O'Bhien.
they do in Canada of selling twine at the highest figures they choose to fix, and to sink both the interests of the farmer and his loyalty to the mother country in his blind devotion to party. I want him to carry his loyalty only so far as to say that he is willing in this small matter to give the English people a fair show in our own markets, and the hon. gentleman refuses. The hon. gentleman referred to the duty on sugar, and tried to show the House that it could not possibly be argued that berause the reduction of duty on sugar had the effect of lowering the price of that article, the sane result would not follow the taking off the duty on twine. I do not see why the same effect wrould not follow thesame cause. I would like my hon. frienl to go down to the fishermen of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, I would like my hon. frient from Halifax, whe has an interest in the cordage factory the:e, to go down to the fishermen of the Maritime Proviaces, and ask them, in view of the strong agitation to take the duty off himling twine, to consent to forego their privilege, which they enjoy at present, of receiving cordage free of duty, on the plea that the reimposition of the duty would not affect the price. I am afraid they would hardly succeed in inducing these hardy, intellis, ent fishermen to memorialize this House to again put the duty on fishing twine. These men know better. Well, I would ask, if the reimposition of duty on fishing twine would iacrease the prite to the fishermen, why would not the taking ofti of the duty on binding twine lower the price to the farmers? The one thing is just as reasonable as the other. While our friends opposite are very glad to aid the fisherman by giving him his twine free of duty, at the same time they try to persuade the farmer that the price of his twine is not at all increased by the duty, and that he would pay just as muen for it if that duty were taken off. I do not think you will tind many farmers, Sir, prepared to accept thatstatement. On the contrary, about $20,0,1 \times 10$ of thempetitioned this House last yearin favour of a reduction of the duty, and you may depend upon it they were sincere in that memorial. You may depend upon it there is not a man who signed it who did not distinctly understand that he was asking something which would be a benefit to him. However much you may try to pursuade him that the duty does not increase the price, he has so long experienced the taxation to which he was subjected in the article of sugar, and is so well aware of the relief he has gained by the removal of the duty on that irticle, that, as a sensible.man, he has come to the conclusion that if the duty should be taken off binding twine he will get it considerably cheaper than he does now. With regard to this cordage company, I think it is well that the House and the country should realize fully the huge proportions financially that this company has assumed. My hon. friend from North Oxford (Mr. Sutherland) went over some of the items connected with the operation of this institution. Their report is to hand up to the 31st of October, 1891 , which was submitted to the annual meeting of the company on the 3rd of February, 1892. According to that report, their machinery is valued at $\$ 3,143,793$. They had macounts outstanding due them and bills receivable at that date amounting to $\$ 2,65 \overline{2}, 576$. They had cash on hand to the amount of $\$ 540,251$. This made a total asset of $\$ 6,341,620$. They paid a dividend upon the preferred stock of $\$ 5,000,000$ and the common stock of $\$ 10,000,000$. I do not know what the common stock of $\$ 10,000,000$ is, but probably it is what is called in the United States watered stock. The $\$ 5,000,000$ probably covered the whole cost of the institution, and the $\$ 10,000$, 000 is, no doubt, watered stock, by means of which they hold that the whole value is $\$ 15,0(0), 000 \%, \$ 5$,000,000 of actual stock and $\$ 10,000,000$ of watered stock. On the common stock they paid a dividend of 9 per cent. They have real estate, buildings, machinery and leaseholds, amounting to $\$ 17,0 \overline{7}$, . $\quad 300$, making a total asset of $\$ 23,410,190$. The liabilities were : accounts and bills payable, $\$ 4,712,806$; preferred stock, $\$ 3,(000,000$; common stock, $\$ 10$,O 00,000 , making a total of $\$ 19,712, \$ 06$, and leaving a surplus of $\$ 3,706,313$, and, after paying the interest on the $\$ 5,000,(\mathbb{O N}$ of capital stock, they have this surplus. I think that the (foverument should at least place the farmersof Cenadaon the same basis as the farmers of the United states. The duty on binding twine has been rellucel there, and there hasbeen a great agitation in the Enited States on this question. They have reduced that duty to , in of a cent, while the duty in Canada of 25 per cent amounts to from $2 \frac{1}{2}$ to 3 cents a pound. If the action of the United States forced the Government there to come down to io of a cent per pound on binding twine, I say that the (iovernment of this country should to that extent meet the demands of the farmers of Canada. If they did that, our farmers might get their twine for $\dot{2}$ cents or $2 \downarrow$ cents per pound less than they are paying now. That would he a great advantage to them, because the amount of twine which is used is so large that it must be a very considerable saving. In Ontario we have about four million acres of cultivated land, as it is estimated. Taking $2 \frac{2}{2}$ pounds to the acre, at $2 \frac{2}{2}$ cents per pound, that woull amount to $\$ 225,000$, or about a quarter of a million of money that the farmers are losing in this tax. There is another thing. If the farmer hard to pay the duty only once in a few years, it would be a different thing. A fisherman can use his twine for some years, but the farmer, when once he uses his twine in binding a sheaf, loses the twine and he has to repeat the operation every year, and pay the duty again. I contend that binding twine is just as much a raw material for the farmers as the twine used in fishing is a raw material for the fisherman. If you adunit one for the purpose of the fisherman, you ought to admit the other free for the purpose of binding the sheaves, and the farmers are the most important class in the Dominion and have the greatest difficulties to contend with now. This would be a little sop to those who suffer from all the combinations, the implement combines, the plough combines, the harness conbines, the sugar combines, the coal oil combinea, the cotton combines and many others, and, if the Government would commence to release the farmers by taking off the duty on binding twine, it would give them a little encouragement and lead them to believe that the day would come when things would be better than they have been in the past. I have shown that this would result in a saving of a quarter of million of dollars to the farmers if the Government would accept the proposition now before the House. There is another question to which I would call the attention of hon. gentlemen opposite and that is the duty on salt. The fishermen are allowed to bring in their salt free of duty.

Why: Becuuse it is looked upon as a raw material for the purpose of curing tish. Then, is not twine a raw material for the purpose of bringing in the grain, getting it bound and putting it on the market? If you shy it is right and good and expedient to grant the fishermen the free use of sult for the curing of fish, why should you not give the farmers the use of twine irree of duty? Why, when you allow the raw material to he free in the Province of Nova Scotia, should you not also allow it to be free in the Province of Ontario? I would like to hear from my hon. frieud from Halifax on this subject. He is evidently taking notes, and I should like to know if it is any more important to the people of this country to cutch fish than it is to grow wheat. I say we could live longer in this Dominion without fish than without flour, and it is more important to encourage the growth of wheat than to encourage catching of fish. Fish are very nice, and we have some fish that we like very much to eat. The Atlantic salmon are very nice and sweet, but the bread produced from Ontario wheat is also sweet and nice, and we want to produce all we can of that wheat, and to give the farmers all the twine they require to hind up their sheaves free of duty. It is a poor encouragement to the prairie farmers of the North-West to compel them to pay this duty on their binding twine. I think this is one of the most important questions which have been brought before the House this session. We are all well aware of the organizations we have in this country know as Farmers' Institutes and Patrons of Industry, and there is not one of these organizations, composed of both Reformers and Conservatives, that has not unanimously demanded that the duty should be taken off binding twine. It is my impression that hon. gentlemen opposite will not be able to persuade those farmers that it would not be to their advantage to take off this duty. My hon. friend from Muskoka (Mr. O'Brien) will, of course, tell the farmers, as he has told the House to-night, that on account of this motion being made as an amendment to going into Committee of Supply, he had to vote against it in order to show his loyalty to his party, but if the hom. member for Maryuette had made his motion ander other circumstances, he would have voted for it. I will read another paragraph that the hon. member for Oxford onitted to read; I find it in a Chicago paper called the Farm Implement Ner:under date of 2 sth February, 1892. This paper is to be found in the Library, and I would respectfully recommend the Finance Minister to peruse the contents of the 12th page with regard to this combine on twine. Here is the clause I refer to :

[^63]hon. friend. It is not too late in the day for them to accept it. It is better to repent at the eleventh hour than not to repentat all. And they have not yet made any move in the direction of aiding those who are suffering under the operation of this combine. We shall hail with delight any evidence of repentance on the part of hon. gentlemen opposite with regard to the combinations and the restrictions to which the farmers have been subjected. I earnestly hope that this favour, if granted, will le the forerumer of others that will be granted in aid of the farmers of this country who are struggling against combines of twine, combinesof cotton, combines of sugar, combines of implemeits, combines in hats, comlinesineverything. You can hardly put your tinger upon anything producell in this country that is not the subject of a combine. Even the very coftins in which we have to commit our relations to their last resting place, are now manufactured in Canada under the operations of a combine: the very corl with which you lower the remains to their last resting place, is manufactured under a combine. Now, sir, I say that it is time we should put a stop to this abomination, kill the combines, shake them off, release the people from their operations, and restrictions and extortions. There is not a undertaker in the Dominion of Canada to-day who can start business unless he becomes a member of the association that has been formed; he cannot get the necessary supplies to enable him to pursue that calling unless he first associates himself with that particular combination, paying a sum of $$ 30$ or $$ 40$ to get a certificate, after which he is allowed to engage in the business of undertaking. This is another form of the combine that we should strike at as well as the other forms. I am quite sure that if the Government accepts the resolution of my hon. friend, the farmers will appreciate it and be duly grateful therefor.
Mr. FAIRBAIRN. As a farmer and one who knows what he is talking about, I desire to make a few remarks on this subject. Last session I made a short speech on this subject, and when I went to my constituency for re-election, the Reform papers said that I had come to the rescue of the Government, to save the monopolists and the great rings that surrounde? the farmers of this country. I want to say to the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) that until he can prove on the floor of this House that the Canadian farmer is paying more for his twine than the American farmer has done tor the last ten years, he has no case. Now, if I went into his dry goorls store and attempted to teach him about his business, he would tell me to mind my own business; and so I can assure you that I am talking as a farmer now about something that I know. I know nothing of what stand the ciovernment intends to take on this matter. Although I speak as a farmer, and not with the polished tongue of some hon. gentlemen who have been born with silver spoons in their mouths, still I think I know what benefits the farmer as well as any other member in this House. I would also say to my learned friend from North York (Mr. Mulock), who has been down in my riding talking binding twine, that if 1 went into his oftice and told him that he did not know anything about getting up a brief, then he might reasonably say to me: You do not know anything about my business, but I do myself. I want to say also to the hon. member for Marquette (Mr. Watson), that if I went into his machine shop and told him that he knew nothing about machinery-
Mr. Watson. Or on my farm.
Mr. FAIRBAIRN. I do not know whether you are on a farm or not; I understand you are a machinist. The hon member could tell me the same thing if I undertook to instruct him in machinery. I may say that I have given this subject a good deal of study ; it was my duty to give it a perfect study before I gave my last vote and made my last short speech in this House ; and I am able to say that the American farmer has paid as much for his binding twine during the last twelve years as the Canadian farmer. I have affidavits in my possession from six different states of the Union, made tinder oath, and giving the prices of binding twine. These were sent to me last year when I was assaulted by the binding twine ring, and they proved conclusively that we are not paying more for binding twine than the American farmer, consequently the hon. gentlemen opposite have no case. This is a broad question, and as a farmer I have a right to express my views upon it. Perhaps in the last fourteen months I have had more election contests on my hands than most men in this House, and I ought to have a fair idea of what the view/s of the people of the country are on this and other questions. My hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Mills) pointed across the floor of this House the other evening to the Ministers of the Crown, and he said that they were driven from pillar to post to seek a policy. Let me give hon. gentlemen an idea of the policy announced by hon. gentlemen on the other side during the three electoral campaigns in the south riding of Victoria. I can see on the Opposition benches six or seven hon. gentlemen who were in my constituency propounding various policies as the policy of the Liberal party. In my first bye-election on the 18th December, the first bill-head announced that the policy of the party opposite was commercial union, the next that it was tariff reform, and the next that it was commercial union and tariff reform. But the people accepted none of these policies, and I was elected by a handsome majority. The general elections came around, and then they amounced their policy as continental free trade, commercial union or free trade, and finally, at the end of the campaign, it came down to free trade and straight goods. Well, 1 was elected again. I can see three hon. gentlemen across the floor who opposed me in my next electoral campaign, and the placards distributed by their party through the country were headed, " Reciprocal trade and free binder twine." One gentleman spoke for continental free trade and tariff reform, and the other gentleman went for reciprocity and tariff reform, and if that is not evidence of their hunting for a policy on the Opposition benches, I do not know what hunting is. We as Conservatives have but one plank in our platform, and the platform is as broad as this fair Dominion of ours. It is : Canada for Canadians and the National Policy. That is our policy, and that is the policy which the people of Canada have decided upon. If I were a member of the Opposition, and if I got such rebuffs from the people as they have received time and again, I would be ashamed to say I belonged to the party at all. I have come to the conclusion that nothing but fault-finding is the policy of hon. gentlemen opposite. The hon. member for North York (Mr. Mulock) came to my riding last election to oppose me, and he spoke for five hours in that constituency, addressing two meetings for two and a half hours each. I will do him the justice to say that he was different from some of the other Liberal speakers, and he did not call me out of my name. However, he said I was a farmer and a very poor one, but I do not complain very much at that. I may remind the hon. gentleman that in the two places he addressed in my riding for five hours I got 198 majority, and I am thankful to him in part for that. If that is not a fair rebuff to reciprocity and free binding twine, I do not know what is. The hon. member for North Brant (Mr. Paterson), a gentleman whom I know every member in this House respects for his manhood and ability, did my constituency the honour of visiting it, and he so addressed an audience on free binding twine that in that locality where there were seven votes against me at the previous elections I had 64 majority after his speech. The hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright), who was once Finance Minister of this country, went into a Reform hive in my constituency the night before the election. I wish he had come sooner and stayed longer, because in the place where he addressed an audience on continental free trade and free binding twine and all his other policies, I got 18 more of a majority than the most sanguine of my friends ever expected. I have only one complaint to make of that hon. gentleman; I sent him a letter of thanks and congratulation for the benefit he had done me, but he never answered my letter. The hon. member for Huron (Mr. Macdonald) surprised me the other night, and I felt sorry for him, when he stated that the farmers of his country had been boodled and bought and voted against their own interests. I repudiate that charge, not only on my own behalf, but on behalf of my brother farmers, the hard working and honest citizens of Canada. The farmers of this country if they are let alone can paddle their own canoe as well as professional men, and if they have a grievance to be removed they will not go to the doctors for advice, but will appeal to the Ministers of the Crown, in whom they have confidence, to remedy any burden they may labour under. The hon. gentleman also said that the farmers of this country were driven out of their natural market--the United States. Does he not know that the English and European market is the market for the surplus Canadian products as it is the market for the surplus of the United States? The farmer can send all his products to the markets of the great consuming emporium of the old world, and 1 cannot see how it can be argued with reason that the farmers of Canada could get a market in the United States when the farmers of the United States have ten times more surplusproducts to export than we have. When that Chinese tariff wall was put around the United States, intended for the benefit of the American farmer I have no doubt, our Government sent their commissioner abroad to seek for other. markets. We had no more to do with the McKinley Bill than the man in the moon. That was the husiness of the American people and they had a perfect right to do what they thought best in the interests of their country. But when the McKinley tariff was framed our Government did not fold their arms and say that they could do nothing for the farmer, but they sought and obtained other foreign markets which are proving more beneficial to our farmersthan ever did the markets of the United States. I wish to make just one remark to the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen). He said the other night that two-rowed barley was not worth sowing. He said all he could to discourage the farmers of this country from sowing it, instea ${ }^{2}$ of giving the Government the credit of doing the best they could under the circumstances. He asked for names, because he said he had tried it, and it was a failure. Well, I hope he is a better dry goods man than he is a farmer, for $I$ can give him names to-night. I know a farmer who sowed 12 bushels of two-rowed duck-bill barley-I saw the bills and I know the fields, and he had bills for 504 bushels from 10 acres with 12 bushels of seed. If the hon. gentleman can make a better showing than that, hy giving six-rowed barley, I would like to know it. and I think I have grown as much barley as any other gentleman in this House. Now, I am going to give the policy-seekers a few figures, and if it is desired I will give affidavit after affidavit from men who have come from the other side of the line, proving that the American farmer pays more for his binding twine than the Canadian farmer. I am also going to repeat a statement made by the President of the Reform Association of South Victoria. I met him on my way to Ottawa the other day. He had a large farm in Dakota, and he was over here buying horses. I asked him : "What are you at Peterborough for "" "Well," he said, "Fairbairn, I am going to be a loyal man like the rest of you Canadians; I am abandoning my Dakota farm, and I am going to Manitoba where I will meet my two sons, and we are going to break up a large farm and settle down as loyal Canadians." I will give hon. gentlemen his name if they desire it ; he told me I could use it here.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Name.
Mr. FAIRBAIRN. William Ayers, Esq. I sat with him in the county council for many years.

Mr. Landerkin. He was a Tory then.
Mr. FAIRBAIRN. No, he was not a Tory, but he is a Tory now. Now let me say that the quantity of twine manufactured in Canada is overestimated by over $4,000,000$ pounds. I desire to give you some letters from American manufacturers, and some from Canarlian manufacturers, which will show the prices of binding twine in the two countries :
"Faribault, Minn., 4th April, 1892

" Aberdifin, 9th April, 1892.

"DEAR SIR,-In answer to your enquiry as to the prices of binder twine in this territory, I beg to submit the enclosed list of prices, and being in the binder trade I have taken the prioes from the retail sales books for the year named. Our prices aro mostly for time sales, as a majority of our farmers are compelled to buy that way, currency being scarce until after threshing in the fall.

Now, I feel that the position of hon. gentlemen oppogite with reference to binding twine is not a logical one. We have proved conclusively by their own figures that the Canadian farmer pays less for his twine than does the American farmer. It is not to-night that I have learned that, because the necessity was imposed on me of defending inyself in this matter, as the cry raised about my vote in this connection last session was the strongest cry raised against me during the bye-election. I wrote to all the dealers and had all the facts and figures before me, which siatisfied me that my vote last session and my speech was not against the interests of the farmer, and that vote and that speech I have never since regretted. I wish to say that I have no knowlelge what stand the Government intend to take in this matter, but as an individual, if I stood completely alone in the House of Commons, unless hon. gentlemen opposite could prove to me that the American farmer is getting his twine cheaper than the Canadian farmer, I would stand by the position I have taken against all odds. The whole opposition against me at the bye-election simmered itself down to the agitation on the binding twine question. At the first audience I addressed I told my constituents that if they sent me back to Parliament I was prepared to take again the very same stand that I took the previons session. I am contident that I understand this question as well as any professional man in this country, because, I have seen more of it, and I am surprised that hon. gentlemen who never sat on a binder in their life should presume to dictate to the farmers of this country. This binding twine question was a thing I had to contend with, it was that with which the Reformers were going to tie me hand and foot, it was that which was going to prevent me, as a public man, ever holding up my head again; but I am happy to say that my opponent, who is the highest calibre of a man, a man weighing 250 pounds, I tied up so tight with the binding twine, that he and his friends have been scarcely able to shake him loose since. I tell you, if you saw that demonstration in the town of Lindsay with 80 Union Jacks waving in the breeze and every lady and every gentleman with "rosettes" of binding twine in their button holes, you would have come to a clear conclusion that there could not be very much in the policy of the Opposition when it had whittled down to a hall of binding twine. I came here as a supporter of the Government, and it would le a pretty queer vote I would not give in favour of that Government, especially when now I am pretty well acquainted with the Opposition. It is a sad thing to find that the policy of those gentlemen opposite has come down to a ball of binding. twine. I do not wonder at hon. gentlemen getting a little discouraged when all their schemes are brought so low, and I hope that, until they change their policy, they will remain where they are, in Opposition, as they will, unless I mistake the farmers of this country, if their policy is limited to a ball of binder twine. I am here to support a Canadian Government, I am here to support a Government that is not looking for a policy, I am here to support a Government that has an established policy that the people have fallen in line with, and the longer they know that Government and its policy, the hetter they appreciate it, and the late vote shows that to he true. When the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr.

Mills) tells the Ministers of the Crown that they are running from pilla: to post, running to Washington and elsewhere looking for a policy, I think it comes with a very bad grace from him. I now resume my seat.
Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). I am always very happy to meet a brother farmer who knows his own business hetter than any other person. I do not pretend to know so much about my business. I never pinned my faith to the coat tails of an individual or a party. I heard a speech of the hon. gentleman in 1890, and his policy was nothing but to endorse the private and public acts of Sir John Macdonald, and to say ditto to every word. He says that, if we could show that the Americans got their binding twine cheaper than the Canadians, we would gain a point. The hon. member for Nuskoka said about the sime thing. You will rememler the committee that sat in 1888 when Mr. Massey, the implement manufacturer, was brought before the committee, and he stated that he could buy binding twine in the United States, pay the duty, and have it as cheap as he could buy it in Canada. He also said:
"We had to import a large quantity for the North-West last year. We could not get it in Canada. We laid it down in Manitoba at about the price we had to pay in Nora Scotia, and duty added."
That shows conclusively that the duty on binding twine is alded to the cost of the article here. The American farmers are being imposed upon by the combines there, and the combines that bleed the American farmers will bleed the Canadian farmers, if they get the opportunity. Here is an extract in regard to the great cordage trust in the United States:
"The greedy binding twine trust is not satisfied with the enormous profit accruing from last yeer's operations. One million four handred thousand dollars was cleared in 1891 by the trust. That sum, considering its opportuni. ties in the field of legalized robbery, is now regarded as
greatly exceeded this year, and to that end the price of twine for the coming season has been advanced from 3 to 4 cents. Competition has been shut out by the duty. and this is the secret of the trast's unholy raid on the pockets of the wheat growers of the west. But what are the farmera oing to do about it? Knowing that the pro$t$ ection afforded the trust by the Government makes the robbery complained of possible, do they intend to vote for a continuance of the fiscal folicy, that bears so heavily upon them? That is the question."
That is the question with us in Canada as well as with the farmers in the United States, and now that this large trust in the United States has got hold of the cordage companies in Canada, we may expect to suffer more in the future than we have in the past, and, if it is true that they are raising the price of cordage from 3 to 4 cents a pound for the next season, we may expect that they will not give us the binding twine any cheaper. It is one of the most grievous burdens on the farmers of this country. There may be some reason for a dity when the money goes into the treasury of the country, but, when it goes simply into the pockets of a compuny, particularly when it is a combination of foreigners who have bought up all the cordage manufactories in Canada, it is a different thing. I should like to hear if the Government and their supporters are willing, in view of their policy, to allow this binding twine to come in from unother country. We had a letter read by the hon. member for Marquette (Mr. Watson) from a gentleman in Belfast who stated that he Mr. Faikbates.
could send binding twine in here for 9. cents a pound. I saw a statement that it could be manufactured for 8 cents a pound, which would bear out the statement of the hon. gentleman that it could be brought from the old country and laid down here at $9 \frac{1}{2}$ cents a pound. During the last year we imported 196,000 pounds on which we paid something over $\$ 6,000$ in duty, which makes about $3_{1} 1_{1}$ cents per pound on binding twine imported in Canada. That shows what the price of the trine was here because the cordage companies were not going to sell their twine to any extent lower than the price of the twine inported into the country, especially as they had purchased from the cordage company. That is proof that we do not get twine any cheaper than its price in the United States with the duty added. Now, how much money has it cost in the Province of Ontario to lind our crops? In 1891 there were 849,956 acres of fall wheat harvested; of spring wheat, 510,634 acres; of barley, 553,166 acres; of oats, 1,840,636 acres; of rye, 67,867 acres, makinga total of $3,822,257$ acres. But there is a considerable quantity of barley that is not tied, that is cut and put loose into the barn, so that would reduce the quantity of twine to be used. If we estimate that one-half the burley acreage is so cut, that would leave $3,545,674$ acres of grain, which at two pounds of twine per acre would give $7,081,348$ pounds, which at $3{ }^{\frac{1}{5}}$ cents per pound, would give us $\$ 212,740$ that the Province of Ontario had to pay for binding twine. Now, if we deduct the duty paid on imported twine $\$ 1,612$, we find that the Province of Ontario alone, which requires nearly as much binding twine as all the other provinces in the Dominion of Canada, paid $\$ 211,128.44$, which went exclusively into the pockets of the manufacturers. We find that the total quautity of land in the Province of Ontario that is occupied at the present time is something like $21,000,000$ acres, of which something letween 10 and $11,000,000$ acres are cleared land; so that for every 50 acres cleared there is a tax of $\$ 1$ and for every 100 acres of cleared land there is a tax of $\$ 2$ on account of binding twine. Take the County of Huron, one riding of which I have the honour to represent. We find that in 1890 there were. of fall wheat, 44,978 acres; of spring wheat, 9,379 ; of barley 32,386 ; of oats, 94,630 ; of rye, 306, making a total of 181,679 acres, which would employ 363,358 pounds of twine, which at 3 亿多 cents per pound, would make $\$ 12,717$ for the County of Huron alone. But as we cut about one-half the barley and put it into the barn lonse, that would reduce the anount to about $\$ 11,590$ which the County of Huron has to pay for binding twine. Now, 1 hold that is something that ought not to exist. The Government might have some plea for retaining the tax if the money went into the treasury, unless they consider that every article that pays a tax, whether into the combines or into the treusury, has a right to the protection of the National Policy, as was hinted at by the hon. member for Muskoka (Mr. O'Brien). If that is the case, we cannot expect to get much relief from the Government. But I had understood from what has passed in this House, that the Goverument was about to submit some change in the tariff, be it little or be it great. Now, i would have stuck closely to this question of binding twine, had it not been for the chalienge that was hurled across the House by the hon. member for South Victoria (Mr. Fairbairn) whosaid that Britain was the market where the Canadian farmer gets the best returns for his produce. Does he know, as a practical farmer, that barley is the crop to-day that pays the farmer in the Province of Ontario better than any other crop we have raised for a large number of years? In 1891, 4,056,848 bushels of barley went into the United States, upon which we paid 10 cents a bushel. Then there was 922,752 bushels that paid 30 cents duty, so that \$682,536 was paid to get our barley into the United States. Now, they may tell us that the United States export a large quantity of barley. True, they do export a certain quantity, something like 900,000 bushels during 1891. But if they did export that amount, that is an adrantage to us if the purchasers for the United States market will come into Canada and give us a better price to-day than we canget from the British market, although it displaces a certain amount of their own grains? That is our profit and it is theirs also, otherwise they would not come and buy it from us. Now, about horses. We have been told time and time again that England is our best market for horses. I state without fear of successful contra. diction that the English market reyuire very few of our horses. I find that in 1888 there were imported into England 11,505 horses; in 1889, 13.832; in 1890, 19,286, or 44,643 during those three years. Now how many horses did they export during those same years? In 1888 they exported 11,281 ; in 1889 , 13,668 ; in $1890,18,981$, or altogether 43,930 , so that the exports and the imports were very nearly equal, with a difference of only 1,024 in favour of the imports during those three years. These figures are taken from the last British agricultural returns, showing conclusively that Britain is not a market where we can expect to sell our horses with profit. We find that the continental countries of Europe cansupply the British market much more readily and with far lessrisk of loss than, we can. Forinstance, Denmark supplied the British market in 1890 with 2,489 horses, Germany with 12,600 , Holland with 1,575 , Norway with 294 , Spain with 156 , the United States with 364 and Causda with 225, that was the total import of horses from continental countries and from the United States and Canada into England during the year. Now, we find that in 1890 the United States imported 37,675 horses: that was the year before the McKinley Bill came into effect. In 1891 they imported 7,631 horses at $\$ 30$ per head, 7,965 at 20 per cent and 368 at 30 per cent. In all, the United States imported during that year the McKinley Bill came into force, 15,964 horses, showing that there was a falling off in that year of 21,711 horses on account of the change in the duty. The United States exported only 3,110 horses in 1891, which left a market for 12,854 horses in the United States against a market of 1,026 in Great Britain, showing conclusively that the United States is a better market for us than Great Britain can be for our surplus horses. I state from practical experience that we cannot establish with Great Britain a trade so successful and profitable as we can with the United States. The long sea voyage causes great loss, and then we have to pay heavy insurance in transporting our products and animals across the water. Let me say that the United States, instead of increasing their imports of horses during the last year, decreased the number by 157,000 , showing again that that is the market upon which we must rely to a greater extent than any other, for horses. We have been told that Great Britain is our best market for all sorts of grain. I gave a statement to the House this year in reference to this and I challenge its contradiction. In the Empire of the 23 rd of April I find the following prices quoted for fall wheat, spring wheat, and barley, in the cities of Buffalo and Toronto. Fall wheat, Buffalo, 94 cents ; Toronto, 84 or 85 cents ; or a difference of 9 cents in favour of Buffalo. Spring wheat, Buffalo, 9? cents; spring wheat, Toronto, 82 to 86, or a difference in favour of Buffalo of 7 cents. This was a special despatch to the Empire, in which it was said that $\mathbf{7 , 0 0 0}$ bushels of barley were sold in Buffalo at 86 cents as compared with 50 cents in Canada, or a difference of $\mathbf{3 6}$ cents in favour of Buffalo.

Mr. TAYLOR. What has tinat to do with binder twine?

Mr. McMILLAN (Huron). It has got to do with an answer to the gentleman who spoke on that side of the House. Why do you allow license to one when you attempt to circumscribe another; that is the policy of the Conservative party. I hold that the markets of the United States are the most profitable markets we can have, provided we had unrestricted reciprocity, and I believe the day is not distant when the people of this country, Conseriative and Reformer alike, will arise in their might and demand unrestricted reciprocity. There is no country so cursed with party politics as Canada is. Many a Conservative has stated to me within the last three months that he was in favour of unrestricted reciprocity with the States, and that, he would ten times rather have it than allow the Grits to come into power. They are afraid on the other side of the House that if Reformers come into power we will get unrestricted reciprocity, and some hon. gentlemen opposite have a feeling that the Government have not behaved honestly with the people of this country in their late trip to Washington with respect to the question. This binding twine is a grievous matter for the farmers, and it is one that has to be repeated every year. During last year I bought 175 lbs. of binding twine and it took $2 \bar{z}$ lbs. to each acre, or in other words it cost me 9 cents per acre of a duty within a mere fraction, so that I paid \$5.42 duty on that 175 pounds of twine. Erery farmer in Canada who has got improved machinery, and who carries on his farm in a proper manner, has to pay this tax, and it is a burden that comes around every year, and when the twine is used once it cannot be used again. Will the Government take this into consideration, and see that justice is done to the farmer of Canada. Why should the fishermen of the Lower Provinces get free cordage and free salt, and why should the farmers of Ontario be asseseed to contribute to a bounty of $\$ 150,000$ annually, when they are denied the sane privilege as the fishermen have of getting their twine free? I hold that this is a gross injustice. I believe myself, that if the Government do not give us some relief in this matter, that next year'we will be worse pinched on binding twine than in the past, on account of this large cordage company having the whole supply of the States and Canada under their control. I trust that the Government will see their way to remove the duty on twine, so that we can get our supplies from the old country. That would encourage trade with Great Britain, and it would be acting loyally, and gentlemen opposite would not be going against their principles of loyalty or waving the old flag. They would be assistiug trade between the old country and Canada, and that is the only way in which I see that we are likely to get relief. I hope that every farmer in the country will take this into his serious consideration, because I know that the time has come when Conservatives and Reformers alike belipve that the ciovernment should give some relief to the farmers in this matter.

Mr. SMITH (Ontario). I do not intend to detain the House at any length in discussing this question, and I do not know that I would ask that indulgence were it not for the fact that the riding I have the honour to represent is deeply interested in this matter. The National Policy has been for thirteen years under trial, and it has been fairly and fully tested. It was tested with a series of bad crops, and it has been tested by the severest opposition of our friends of the Liberal party. The hon. gentleman who has just sjoken, has on all occasions since I have had the honour of a seat in this House, opposed the National Policy. In fact, Sir, he reminds me somewhat of the minister who settled in his riding a short time ago, and who had not long been stationed there before one of his people died. When the funeral service was over, he thought, as he was somewhat new to the section of the country, that he could say nothing about the deceased, and he believed that it wonld be well, perhaps, to ask some of the neighbourstosay a wordor two about him. After a pause, the hon. member for south Huron (Mr. McMillan) rose, as the hon. member for South Huron can rise upon an occasion of that kind, and he satid: Well, as no one seems to care to say anything about the deceased, I will take this opportunity of discussing unrestricted receprocity and free binder twine. I say, Sir, that the National Policy has been severely tested. The gentlemen in Opposition to-day are attacking it piecemeal as they have leen doing for the last four or five years. They single out one particular article and in that way they try to bring influence to bear, especially upon the farmers of this country, against it. Today they have singled out binder twine, as an object of attack. There can be no doubt that, if the position taken by hon. gentlemen of the Reform party were correct, if it were true that the farmers of Canada were actually losing by the duty on binder twine, then there would be some semblance of force in their contention, and if it were true, the contention of these hon. gentlemen would soon make the farmers rich if they were once in power. But from first to last, during all the days that this matter has been under discussion, they have failed, and failed in every particular, to prove in any way that binder twine is at present, or has been iv years gone by, dearer in Conada than in the United States. That being the case, their whole argument falls to the ground. If we had the duty taken off binder twine, the result would undoubtedly be that this twine, instead of being manufactured in Canada, would be manu. factured in the United States. Controlled as this article is by a large company in the United States, there is no question at all that the whole of the binder twine consumed in Canada would be manufactured in the large concerns in the United States if the duty were removed. I may also point out that this cordage combination, which we heard the member for South Huron (Mr. McMillan) speak about, has an interest in England as well as on the other side of the line. Well, if this is the case, it appears to me that it is in the interest of Canada and in the interest of the farmers, so long as we cannot get the twine any cheaper, that it shall be manufactured in the country. If the duty were taken off, there can be no doubt that on account of the earlier harvest on the other side we would have great dificulty in getting our supplies. We would simply have to depend on their surplus, and our Canadian dealers would he afraid to invest in the article. To day we are manufacturing twine from flax, and I understand that a manufactory of some considerable importance in the western part of Canadu is employing in the neighbourhood of 100 hands, and that it will manufacture this year $\mathbf{3 0 0}$ tons of this twine. This flax is grown by our farmers, and they are to a certain extent engaged in the manufacture. These hands are employed in Canada, and the whole of the money remains in the country. The mover of the amendment has in the North-West the finest land under the sun for growing flax, and if the duty is continued hundreds and hundreds of tons of twine necessary to bind the grain of the North-West would be manufactured there from the flax grownin that country. If that is the case, it would be much better all round that the duty should continue as it is. Hon. gentlemen tell us that we can buy our twine from the mother country, and that it can be laid down here for 9 cents a pound. They know better when they make that statement. It is laid down in New Yors for 12 cents a pound. If we in Canada were paying a so much higher price than we should pay, there can be no question that the twine would come from the mother country, even with the duty left on. Now, allusion was made by the hon. member for South Huron (Mr. McMillan) to the cordage combine of 1888, and he stated that it was conclusively shown by Mr. Massey that the farmers of Canada were paying more for twine than the farmers of the United States. That may have been Mr. Massey's contention, but the difference is so small, amounting to something uider $2 \overline{5}$ cents a ton, that I think the bon. member for South Huron was not justified in making that statement. These are my views on the amendment of the hon. member for Marquette. I have stated them because I did not want to give a silent vote on this question, and believe it is better to retain the duty and to stand by our country when we are not injuring ourselves.

Mr. HENDERSON. It is not my intention to detain the House at any length. I do not think it is necessary to go around the world to gather up something to throw in the face of the House and call it argument in a matter of ihis kind. It seems to me that this question may resolve itself into a very small compass indeed. My reason for making a statement at all at this time is that during my election on the 28 th of January last, I was very much interested in the question of the duty on binder twine, which was a very prominent question in that election. I told the Patrons of Industry, who opposed me on that occasion, that if at any time they would furnish me with any evidence to satisfy me or any reasonable man that by reason of the duty on binder twine it was enhanced in price to the farmers of this country, I should demand of the Government the removal of that duty. Since that time I have not heard from the Patrons of Industry in the County of Halton. In fact, I have not heard that there are any of those so-called Patrons of Industry left. I have not had any petition from them to present to this House asking for the removal of the duty, or any suggestion whateverfrom them in that direction. Thearguments advanced on that occasion evidently so thoroughly convinced them that they did not pay the duty on binder twine and that they obtained it as cheaply as the farmers of the United States, that they are contented that such is the case. Now, I make this statement because I wish to say why I give the vote I am about to give on this occasion. The resolution xhich has been introduced by the hon. member for Marquette was certainly introluced very briefly. I was surprised indeed that he did not advance any stronger argument than he did in support of his contention. In fact, I think he totally failed to support his resolution in auy intelligible way at all. He read a petition from the Patrons of Industry in Manitoba, which set forth, first, that the duty operated to the disadvantage of the consumer, and secondly, that the cost of binder twine, owing to the duty, was higher to the consunser; but he did not advance $a$ single argument in support of these two contentions. He seems to take it for granted that because there is a duty on binder twine coming into this country, the article manufactured in this couutry must be necessarily higher in price. Now, that is certainly not true. If that were the case with binder twine, it would be the case with other things, and I am sure that this House is satistied that that rule does not prevail. For instance, take the case of sugar, which has been mentioned to-night. One of the arguments allcanced, and I think very unfairly advanced, is that by reason of our having a higher duty on refined sugar in this country than the United States have, our people pay a higher price for sugar. My contention is that notwithstanding the fact that our duty on refined sugar in this country is three-tenths of a cent higher than the duty in the United States, we have cheaper granulated sugar, and a better article, than the people of the United States. Now, I do not simply make that statement, because a buldstatement without proof should go for nothing in au intelligent House like this. I remember on the 26 th of September last, when the sugar question was under discussion in this House, quotations were given, I think by the senior member for Halifax, which were not disputed. He stated that on that very day he had received a quotation from New York that granulated sugar was being sold there at $4 \frac{1}{2}$ cents a pound, while on the same day at Halifax it was being sold at $4 \frac{1}{1}$ cents a pound, or $\frac{1}{8}$ of a cent a pound less. Now, I was curions to follow that up and to see whether it was a single isolated case or not, and I made enquiries from the very best a vailable market report to be obtained in the city of Toronto. They are the most reliable men who are engaged in dealing in the article of sugar. On the 3rd October I find the quotation in New York was 4id cents, and in Canada 4-27: On the 10th of October it was the same in New Yort and $4-27$ in Canada; on 14th October it was the same in New York, and 4.27 in Canada; on 17th October the quotation continued the same in New York and in Canada ; and on the 21 st November it was $4 \frac{1}{4}$ against 4 . I find that up to the end of the year, at varions times, and at the end of the year, the quotations of granulated sugar in our Canadian refineries in Halifax and Montreal were in favour of Canadian as against American sugar. Therefore I say that the fact that there is a higher duty on binding twine coming into this country than there is on binding twine going into the United States is no evidence whatever that we pay higher for our linding twine than the people of the United States. Why, if the duty woula make the article higher in price, the same argument would hold in the United States. If 25 per cent duty on binding twine makes it higher to the farmers of-this country than it is in the United States, then seven-tenths duty in the United States would make it higher to the people there than it is in Cantada, and I do not see that we can place any dependence on the argument in either case. so much then for the argument advanced by the hon. member for Marquette who has introduced this resolution. He spoke of a Mr. Braithwaite, and gave quotations from Belfast, but I think you could not rely on binder twine being brought from Great Britain and Ireland when our harvest is going on, lecause we know this article must be put upon the market and sales made in the short space of about three months of the year, and it would not be safe for the people of this country to rely upon getting an article, which is wanted on a few days notice, three thousand miles from home. I do not think, therefore, we can depend on Great Britain for an article of that kind. With regard to the large profits referred to by the hon. member for Marquette, I do not pretend to follow him on that question. But as he introduced the name of A. W. Morris, as an evidence of the profits made in the manufacture of binding twine, I propose also to introduce the name of $A$. W. Morris as proving in the same combine report that we really have our biuding twine at lower rates than the American people pay for it. Mr. Morris's opinion is given in the Combines Committee's report. When the question was asked him: "How do prices of Canadian binding twine compare with the prices in the United States, say for the year 1887 ?" He answered: "I think for the greater portion of the year Canadian prices were very much lower. At the close of the season in the United States there was an arrangement among all the manufacturers and the prices were reduced considerably, but for the average of the year I think the Canadian prices were considerably lower; I mean the prices to the farmer." There, I think, is an evidence from a gentleman whose uame the hon. member ior Marquette gave in testimony, that even if the manufacturers of cordage have made money, the price of twine is cheaper in Canada than in the United States. I trust they do make money, for it would be an unfortunate thing for this country if people who engaged in such industries, which, I understand, are of a very risky character, did not profit by them. They are risky because the raw material they use fluctuates in price very much, I understand, from f25 aterling per ton to $£ 60$ sterling, and it is quite uncertain when a man buys the raw material, whether he will be abie to sell at a profit or at a very great loss. I think, however, if we accept the testimony of Mr. Morris with regard to profits, the hon. gentleman who introduced the resolution must at the same time accept the evidence of Mr. Morris as to the value of binding twine in this country as compared with the United States. He told us, however, that the difficulty in this country is that there are no quotations? This season he says there are no quotations. I am very much surprised at that. I find no difficulty in getting quotations both in this country and the United States as to what binding twine is likely to be sold at during the current year. He tells us that one of the reasons he introduced this resolution so hurriedly was in order that quotations might be given to the farmers in the North-West, as the dealers there would not consent to do so until the action of the Government was known. My impression is that the dealers wut there do not think at all about the action of the Government but are waiting rather for the action of the hon. member for Marquette, because his speech delivered to-day and the speech delivered a shart time ago and the other speeches of the hon. gentleman on inis guhiect, which have been printed and circulated throughout Manitoba to show that by reason of the duty on binding twine the farmers have to pay so much more for it, have the effect of enabling every one of his friends engaged in the business to get one to three cents a pound more for it. I am convinced that is the effect of the hon. gentleman's speeches, though I do not attribute any desire in that sense to him. I believe the farmers of this country are paying more for their binding twine perhaps than they ought to do, just because they are educated by such speeches to believe that the price is really higher than it ought to be ; and the dealers take advantage of this to extract from the farmers of the country a price which they are not entitled to pay at all. The hon. gentleman seconding this resolution put his statement very briefly. He said he had very little to say. I do not suppose he had, and I dare say he said all that coull be said in support of his contention. He seemed to rely chiefly upon some letter which he obtained from Mr. Wilkie, the secretary of the Dominion Grange. Mr. Wilkie had told him that binder twine in the United States was sold at $8 \neq$ cents. Now, I assume, from what the hon. member for North York said, that that was the price to the Grange for very large lots, possibly 100 tons, very large lots at any rate. But $\}$ would like to look at the matter in this way: Standard twine, as I understand the brand, is a brand in which, if it contains anything at all of manila, the quantity is so light that it is scarcely discernible. The Standard brand in the United States to-day is almost pure sisal, containing nothing of the better quality of raw material that enters into the composition of binding twine. At $8 \frac{1}{2}$ cents, we are told by the hon. gentleman -this article is supplied the Grange. Well, I just like to look at it in this way. We are told by Mr. Wilkie also that this is a quality of twine that was sold last year under the name of Red Cap in this country. There is the unfairness of the whole letter. Red cap twine, I believe, consists of about two-third of manila and one-third sisal. Crown twine has about one-half of each. And I say it is unfair to compure a twine which is almost pore sisal with a twine two-thirds manila, and that is what Mr. Wilkie is doing when he informs the hon. member for North York of the price. A short time ago I also received a communication from Mr. Wilkie. I was desirous of getting all the information 1 possibly could, because I was anxions to learn from the farmers what their views are and what arguments they had in support of the contention of the hon. member for Marquette. I wrote Mr. Wilkie, and told him I would be very much obliged to him indeed if he would kindly send me dowin such statements and arguments as he had in support of his contention, as he desired my support in favour of the removal of the duty from binder twine. Now, Mr. Wilkie says this in reply :

" All the evidence I had has been sent to Cttawa."
I listened to the hon. member for North York (Mr. Mulock) and all the argument he used was that duty was imposed : and he said something in regard to the sugar question :
"All the evidence I had has been sent to Ottawa." I presume it was sent to the member for North York. He says:
"It might not be considered legal evidence, but it was circumstantial or corroborative at least."

It may be circumstantial. but I do not think it corroborates very much the contention of hon. gentlemen. It is contented that twine at $8 \frac{1}{2}$ cents, equal to our Crown brand or Red Cap, can be manufactured by the people of the United States. I call attention to the fact that the manila which we use more than sisul, which is generally used in the United States, is sold for prices from $\mathbf{f} 2 \boldsymbol{5}$ up to $\mathbf{t i s}^{5}$ sterling. If we refer to the combines which have been spoken of by the hon. member for Marquette (Mr. Watson), we will find evidence that the manila has been sold for prices ranging from $\mathfrak{t}^{2} 25$ to $\mathfrak{f 4 0}$. Take the mellium price at $\mathfrak{t} 32$ a ton, and you will find that it would amount to about 8 cents a pound. The raw material is admitted free of duty into this country and into the United States. The manufacturers start on an even hasis. It is unreasonable to believe that any manufacturer, Canadian or American, is going to take the raw material, allow for the waste, the doing of the work, and all the rest, for a simple advance of $\frac{1}{2}$ a cent a pound on the cost of the raw material. That is so unreasonable that I do not think any one will accept the statement of the member for North York (Mr. Mulock) or of Mr. Wilkie as to that lueing a fair priceat which binding twine can be sold. Now, as another evidence that binding twine is sold as cheaply in this country by Canadian manufacturers as it is sold to the people of the United States, I will quote again the same article which was read by my hon. friend from South Huron (Mr. McMillan), but I will not read it as he read it. I will read it as it is. I will not change Nova Scotia to New York in order to make an argument, but I will give it as it is in the Combines Report which every one can get, and can see from that whether I am correct or not. I hope the hon. gentleman who introduced this resolution this afternoon, and who made a similar mistake in reading the evidence of Mr. Massey, will not again make the same blunder. Mr. Massey was asked by Mr. Bain :
"What is the actual cost, including the duty, of the American article?-We had to import a large quantity for the North-West laet year. We could not get it in Canada. We laid it down in Manitobas at about the price we had to pay in Nova 8cotia, and duty added. It cost us about the duty extra."

Mr. Henderson.

I believe that now this country is capable of turning out twice as much twine as is required by the people of Canada. Had Mr. Maesey bought this in Nova Scotia, he would have got it cheaper by the amount of the daty, but it cost him the duty extra. But the hon. gentleman reads it in this way :
"We laid it down in Manitoba at about the price we had to pay in New York."
Putting New York instead of Nova Scotia. I hope this is the last time we will have that mistake made. I think we should not go to the United states for names or terms. These evidences are very satisfactory. They are sworn testimonies. They are honourable men. They must be honourable men, because the hon. gentleman on the other side introduced their names as honourable men who should be trusted, and whose word should be accepted as a matter of evidence. Why should we not accept the testimony of such men and give to Canala the manufacture of its binding twine as long as that article is supplied as cheaply as the people of the United States supply it. I am not going to quarrel with my hon. friends on the other side as to the quantity of binding twine consumed, but I think they are a little wide of the mark. think a fair estimate would be about $10,000,000$ lls., but it does not depend upon the question whether the farmers of Canada pay $$ 4100,000$, $$ 300,(000, $ 200,000$ or even $$ 100,000$. If I believed that the cost would be dearer by $$ 10$ in a year to the farmers of Canada than it would be if there were no duty on this article, I would support the resolution which has been moved. But I believe that the duty has not enchanced the cost to the people of this country, but that they are getting their twine as cheaply as the people of the United States, and for that reason I shall vote against the motion in order to give to the Canadians the manufacture of their own binding twine as long as they are prepared to supply it as cheaply as the manufacturers of the United States. I have already said that the raw material is free to the manufacturers of each country. We can manufacture this twine as cheaply as they can, we have as good machinery as they have, we have as good workmen, and we have as good brains to manage the cordage factories, and the manufacturers themselves say they make that article as cheap as the people of the United States do. If that is the case, why should we remove the luty and give up the market of this country to a foreign country? The duty was never put ou binding twine for the purpose of raising a revenue. It is altogether different from the article of sugar. We have been told over and over again that when the duty was taken off sugar, the price immediately went down. Well, was it to be wondered at? Who in this House or out of it ever thought that anything else would occur? When the duty was put on sugar long ago for the purpose of raising a revenue, it was done because it was considered that sugar wasa fit subject for duty, and soa duty was put on raw sugar. But when the Government of the day found, after years of economical administration, that they were able to do without the three million and a half dollars obtained from sugar duties, they removed that duty and sugar went down in price. Now, the raw material of binding twine is free of duty just as well as the raw material for the manufacture of sugur. We have always contended that if the Canadian manufacturers can produce as good an article and as cheaply as the manufacturers of the United States, we are bound to protect them in their own market, and so a duty was put on that article for the purpose of giving the Canadian manufacturers their own market, giving them an opportunity of supplying our owin workingmen, who, in turn will consume the products of our Canadian farms. Now, we want to continue that policy, we want to provide markets for the products of Ontario farmers by those men down east who manufactured binding twine, we want to continue that policy rather than give an open market in binding twine, or in any other coinmorlity, to the foreign manufacturers, so long as that commodity can be supplied as cheaply by Canadian manufacturers as it can be bought elsewhere. I think the Canadian manufacturers this scason will make every effort to supply the articl. of binding twine as cheaply to the Canadian farmers as it could be obtainel if the duty were removed. There are reasons why we should preserve that manufacture in our own country. Our Canadian makers understand the requirements of this country ; they ascertain by a fair estimate what quantity will be necessary, and they make provi. sions for that quantity. Now, on the other side of the line it is not known what quantity will be required from year to year because the extent of the crops is uncertain and variable. If they should have a very large crop their whole supply of binding twine might be consumed, and our own Canadian farmers if we relied on the United States market, might possibly not have enough to bind 25 per ceut of their crops. What a nice condition our farmers would then find themselves in were we to rely entirely upon makers in a foreign country. I understand. besides, that Canadian manufacturers of this article, take all the reponsibilities themselves, they take all the risks; even when they sell at this season of the year, or earlier, they do not fix the price, but they agree that any drop in price will be allowed to the dealer. That dealer sends in his order, and if he fails to sell the whole quantity on account of a shorter crop, the manifacturer takes back the unbroken packages. Now, we could not expect any such consideration from foreign manufacturers. You will readily see the advantage this is to the farmers of this country, because when a dealer is able to buy from the manufacturer on such favourable terms he can sell that article at the very closest profits and not sulject himself to loss by carrying the articles over to another season. Therefore, I say that we hal better remain as we are, unless hon. gentle:men opposite, before this debate closes, are able to show us bow we could do better. It has been contended, I think, by the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) and the hon. nember for South Huron (Mr. McMillan), that the fishermen have certain privileges in the lower provinces that are not afforded to the farmers of Ontario. Now, I really think this little privilege that is granted to the fishermen is almost too trifling for the wealthy Province of Ontario to take notice of. I understand that there is a certain kind of twine used by the fishermen in making nets, that is not manufactured in this country, and which I am told cannot readily be manufactured in this country. A limited quantity of very fine twine is allowed to come in free for those fishermen, and there never has been a duty on it, I am told, from the beginning of the world to this day. These fishermen had this twine free to start with, and the Government did not feel disposed to ask them to pay a duty on an article which was not manufactured in this country. That is according to the principle of the National Policy. If an article cannot be made in this country why then let us admit it free, so that our people can get it at the lowest price. But on the rope and cordage used by these fishemnen which can be manufactured in this country, they pay a duty just the same as other people; therefore there is nothing in the argument of the hon. gentlemen opposite. Now, I desire to draw attention to a few figures which I have obtained with reference to the great question before us; because the real question is: Have we our binding twine as cheap as the farmers of the United States have it? Now, in my own province there is a firm known by the name of Peaker & Runians, a firm that the hon. nember for Peel knows very well, and every statement they make I am quite sure the hon. member for Peel will accept as thoroughly reliable. They live within a short distance of the county I have the honour to represent, and they sell a very large quantity of binding twine in that county. I have had occasion to make enquiries there as to the prices which this firm obtained for their binding twine. I will mention a few figures which have been obtained from their own books; they are no fictitious prices, they are the prices at which the article was actually sold by this reliable firm :

Now, ther is a statement going over five years. I have other statements from various parts of the country and from various parts of the United States. I obtained the services of a gentleman last winter to communicate with a number of persons in the United States whose names I gave him, for the purpose of getting information with respect to this binding twine, and I am glad to place before you quotations which I believe are reliable, and they all go to show this fact, that binding twine in this country is as cheap to our farmers as it is to the farmers of the United States. Now, I want to give a comparison of prices with Minnesota between the years 1887 and 1891. In 1887, sisal sold at 12t ; in 1888, at 14 ; in 1889, at 16, and in 1890 , at 14 cents. Manila sold in 1887 at 16 ; in 1888, at 15 ; in 1889 , at 17 , and in 1890 , at 16 cents. In 1891, sisal sold at 9 cenis and manila at 12 cents. The average price of binder twine to the farmers of the United States from the reliable tables is about as follows :-

|  | Sisal. | Manila. |
| 1887. | $13 \frac{1}{2}$ cents. | 16 cents. |
|  | 14. ${ }^{14}$ | 16 |
| 1890. | 12 ، | 15 |
| 1891. | 92 | 13 " |

Now, these are the average quotations of five different states where this article is sold.

Mr. CASEY. What was the Canadian price of manila in 1891?

Mr. HENDERSON. I will give you for the same five years the price to the Canadian farmer as nearly as has been ascertained.

Mr. CASEY. I asked for that last year.
Mr. HENDERSON. Well, you will get it now. In Canada the prices to the farmers, as nearly as can be ascertained, were as follows:-

Mr. CASEY. Not for manila?

Mr. HENDERSON. Manila would be the highest price and Crown brand is the lowest. I understand there are very few quotations indeed of 15 cents and the bulk of the sales last year were $10 \frac{1}{2}$ to $12 \frac{1}{2}$ cents : that is 102 for a mixture such as Crown brand, although in some cases pure manila used only in linsited quantities was sold as high as 15 cents. We, therefore, see that the prices were lower in Canada than in the United States, as the lulk of the sales for twine used in this country was at $10 \frac{1}{2}$ to $12 \frac{1}{2}$ cents. The Crown brand was one of the most saleable articles in the country last year. It was a good twine, about half and half manila and sisal, and answers the purpose well. With such a comparison of prices as I have given I fail to see that any man can come to the conclusion that by reason of the duty on binder twine the farmers of the country are suffering to the extent of one cent. After looking at the matter fairly and without being carried away by prejudices or feelings of any kind, I think we can only arrive at the one conclusion and that is, that Canada can produce as good and as cheap an article for the farmers of this country as the manufacturers of the United States can furnish for their people. We are told by hon. gentlemen on the other side that no quotations could be obtained this year. I can quite understand that. The hon. member for Marquette (Mr. Watson) had not yet delivered his speech in the House of Commons and conse: quently the quotations were not forthcoming, but I haye no doubt that now they will be forthcoming very soon. Just as soon as the speeches of hon. gentlemen on the other side, telling the farmers that by reason of the duty they will have to pay two or three cents more per pound for their twine; just sosoon as these speeches are scattered broadcast over Manitoba and Ontario, I have no doulst that the friends of hon. gentlemen engaged in the linding twine business will issue their price list, and it may be a high one ton, because these speeches will be quoted as an evidence of why these high prices should le paicl, and the farmers may be made to pay a price for the article which they ought not to pay. I do not pretend to be a prophet or the son of a prophet, but I have been making some enquiries about the probable price of binding twine this year and I will leave the future to verify whether my figures are correct or not. I understand that there will be four brands made in the United States this year. One of them, the standard brind of my friend from North York, will be sold at 11 cents a pound. He quoted it at $8 \frac{1}{2}$ cents, but that is not the price at which it will be sold to the farmers. The price at which the standard brand will be sold to the farmers is 11 cents. A man taking ten or twenty car loads may be able to buy at $8 \frac{1}{2}$ or 9 cents, I do not know anything about that ; but at any rate when it gets to the hands of the farmers it will necessarily cost a little more than it would in large quantities. No man is going to take a 100 -ton lot and sell it at the same price by the 50 lbs. or the 100 lbs . He will sell it first to the man who will buy iot tons and he will make a cent; that man will sell it by 10 tons and he will make one half cent more, and then the man who deals in small quantities of $\overline{0} 0$ or 100 lbs . will reyuire another half cent, so that 11 cents is absout the price it will be placed on the market to the American farmers. They will make standarl mixed containing a small quantity of manila which will be put before the farmers of the United States at 12 cents per pound. That will spin out alout 525 to 550 feet to the pound. They will manufacture what is called manila twine which is made to spin about 600 feet to the pound, and though it may not contain very much manila, it will sell for 13 cents. They have what they call pure manila, although I fear it is not very pure, and it will sell for 14 cents. These are the American yuotations at the present time aud any lion. gentleman can get them the same as I did. Now let us see what our Canadian farmers will pay for twine during the year 1892. The prices and qualities I will indicate to hon. members who are farmers and they can take note of them because, I have no doubt that my statements will be quite verified when the season comes to buy binding twine. At any rate I give you the advantage of these quotations, so that when the dealers cone to you and tell you that by reason of the duty binder twine is going to be dear, you can tell them that you are not afraid, you are not going to buy to-day you are going to wait a little and get the proper prices. In Canada these qualities will be sold to the farmers as follows:-

We have, therefore, the prices in Canada of 11, 12 and 13 cents, as against 11, 12, 13 and 14 cents in the United States. Now, Mr. Speaker, with such evidence as this before hon. gentlemen, what could induce them to vote that the duty should be removed from binding twine, that the manufactures of twine in this country should be closed up, and that the whole manufacture of twine should be transferred to a foreign country, and leave us dependent upon a foreign country for the supply of an article which, when we require, we want to get it in such quantities as we need, and at just such times as it is necessary we should use it.

Mr. CASEY. Mr. Speaker, all the hon. gentlemen who have spoken on the Government side in support of the tax ou binder twine have been giving us the old story. They have not been dealing in argument, but they have been dealing in what seems to be considered as a sort of magic formula on that side of the House to ease their consciences and to quiet the feelings of their constituents who have thought that their interests were injured by this duty on binder twine. It has been used with reference to every article on which a protective duty falls, and it may be applied in the same words to each, merely changing the name of the article. They say: This article is made cheaper and better in Cunada and sold at a lower price here than the United States, therefore we could not endure the competition of the United States manufacturers in this article. You cannot call it an argument, Sir, it has not even the form of an argument. They said thatabout refined sugar; they asserted that we made better refined sugar here than we could import, that it was sold cheaper, and yet they were not willing to have competition with foreign manufacturers. Well, Sir, when the duty on refined sugar came to be reduced, it appeared that the Canadian article did fall in price in accordance with the reduction of the duty. The magic formula was broken in regard to sugar, and these hon. gentlemen do not seem to see that that breaks it in regard to every other article. The great and sacred National Policy, venerated by the Government like the great temple of Diana of the Ephesians, has hall one of its columns broken ; the people find that the consumers have to pay the taxes, and every farmer who buys a pound of binding twine knows that he pays the duty on it just as he had paid the duty on every pound of sugar he bought before that duty was removed. Now, Sir, if it were not that these hon. gentlensen believed the electors of Canada to be utterly devoid of reason, they certainly could not lay before them such a formula as this, that because Canadian binder twine is cheaper than American binder twine, we are afraid to allow competition. The hon. member for Halton said: Why should we give our market to the Yankees by removing the protection from Canadian manufacturers who give so much better and cheaper twine? Why, Sir, if the home manufacturers are giving us better and cheaper twine, how could they fear that competition with the Yankees would give our market to them? Does he suppose that the better and cheaper article of the Canalian manufacturer, is going to le driven out by the dearer and inferior twine of the United States? It is an insult to the intelligence of this House to lay such a preteuse of an argument before us. Now, Sir, The hon. member for Halton displayed a great deal of knowledge of this subject-a knowledge which he did not possess at the time he ran his bye-election-a knowledge which I see him now locking in his desk. He held in his hand the brief which enabled him to tell us exactly, what binder twine was going to cost in the coming seavon. He said: "I have no doubt my statements will be verified." I have no doubt his statements will be verified, hecause, he evidently got them from headquarters. Whether he got then by the back "stairs" or by the front "stairs" we can only guess; but we know that there is a "stairs" which leads to information on that subject, and which undoubt.edly furnished the hon. gentleman with his brief. These stairs are reported to take their origin. in Halifax ; how high they may lead, we may find out later on. The hon. gentleman who used the brief, laughs at the joke; but the brief does not appear to have been in his hands long enough, because, when he referred to the different kinds of twine, speaking of sisal, red cap, and green cap, standard and other kinds of twine, he floundered most hopelessly, and could not stand the slightest cross examination. He got the figures into such a muddle that I doubt if the author of them will recognize them when they appear in Hatusard to-morrow. I think the hon. gentleman to whom I have been referring under several aliases would have done better had he followed his own example of last year, and plead his case in his own words. Now, let us look at the prices set down in the brief. The hon. gentleman gave us the prices of certain kinds of binder twine : standard, mixed manila and pure manila. He has not told us that these are the only kinds to be hat. The prices he gave are evidently the prices tixed by the combine, to which my hon. friend from North Oxford (Mr. Sutherland) called attention in the earlier part of this debate, and to which the hon. member for Halifax (Mr. Stairs) belongs. They are the combine prices for binder twine, and they appear to have been made uniform for three of these grales, both in the United States and Canuda. The hon. member for Halton spent fifteen minutes proving to us that binder twine is cheaper in Canada then in the United States. The figures he gave us at the wind-up of his speech were identical with the prices in the United States, disposing of the argument that our prices are lower. But the hon. gentleman wishes us to forget that the combine, of which the hon. member for Halifax, who instructed him, is a member, does not include all the manufacturers of linder twine in the United Ntates: That combine does control all the mills of Canada, but it does not control or pretend to control all the mills of the United States. What does its annual report say :

[^64]Now, Sir, supposing that this combine, to which all our Canadian mills belong, did charge uniform prices, booth in the United States and Canada, it is anlmitted by them that they do not control all the mills in the United States. Therefore, if you take away the duty on binder twine, you will have competition with those United States mills which are outside of the combine, and that fact alone would materially reduce the price of binder twine in this country. In another line of figures which the hon. gentleman gave, he quoted what he called the average price of twine in the United States with the average price of twine in Canada. Now, an average price means nothing unless you know the proportion of the higher-priced articles used compared with the lower-priced articles. You cannot know whether a farmer buys more of the higher or more of the lower-priced twine. The averuge price is one part of the confusion into which the hon. gentleman has managed to throw the whole subject. Every one who buys twine knows that the figures he gave are not the prices we have to pay. The price last year ran up to 18 cents a pound for the ordinary twine, and insiead of the manufacturers being so obliging as the hon. member says they were, I was told by dealers that at that time of the year when the use of twine was reaching its maximum, they could not get it when they needed it, but the manufacturers stinted the supply, waiting for an advanced price. Now, the hon. member for Haiton says that my hon. friend from North Welling. ton was astray in saying that binder twine could be manufactured at $8 \frac{1}{2}$ or 9 cents a pound. Let me quote from the Farm Implement Neus, which is apparently the official organ of the manufacturers of binder twine, under the head of "A Few Twine Figures." After giving the quantities of twine used in the United States at $100,000,000$ pounds the article states:
"If sold by the makers to the jobbers at 8 cents a pound 1 cent of which was profit, by the jobbers to the retailersat 9 centsand by them to the farmers at 13 cents, as it should, the gross sales of the three would be $$ 30$,$5(10,000$, the gross profits $$ 6,010,0(0)$. Of this latter amount the railroads would have received $$ 500$, 000 for freight."
This newspaper says that the manufacturer can make a profit by selling his twine at anything over 7 cents, and as this is a manufacturer's paper, probably it is putting the price as high as it can be reasonably be put. I have seen during one of the late campaigns a letter which was put in my hand purporting to be signed by a gentleman in the State of Michigan, the head of the organization of the Patrons of Industry in that state, stating that they hal made an arrangement with a large firm of twine makers in the United States, evidently not belonging to the combine, and they had agreed to supply the Patrons of Inlustry with binding twine at $\overline{5}$ cents a pound, and this gentleman offered to lay it down in car lots at $\overline{\mathrm{j}}$ cents a pound, freight paid, in St. Thomas, leaving the consumer to pay the duty. It could be laid down at that price in the County of Elgin, if there were no duty. Hon. gentlemen can compare at their leisure that price with the prices the farmers could olotain it at now. Of course, it would not be so low at retail, nor anything like it, but, if it were introduced in car lots the retailers would not handle it but the farmers would buy in cal lots and divide it. The hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) had his fling at the Patrons of Industry, some of whom opposed him by running a candidate against him at the last election. He sneers at them about their having said something in regard to binder twine during the election and having said nothing since. Of course, he knows his own patrons best. If he thinks they were humbugging when they talked about binder twine during his election, it is for him to settle with them and not for us. I rather fear that a number of Conservative Patrons of Industry preferrel the interests of the great Conservative party and the National Policy to the interests of their pockets in reference to binder twine, however much their pockets might have been affected in any othe: way. I notice that the hon. gentleman is one of the noble band who promised their electors that, if they saw that this tax cost the farmer anything extra, they would vote for its removal. The hon. the Minister of Finance was one of those and the hon. member for East Elgin (Mr. Ingram) was another. I remember, when the Minister of Finance was in St. Thomas supporting the member for East Elgin, he said that, if he found the binder twine interest was controlled by a combine, he would see that the duty should be reinoved and the combine broken up. That took place in the drill shed in St. Thomas, and it was largely on these promises and others similar to those that those hon. gentlemen obtained the support of the farmers and the Patrons of Industry in East Elgin. It is since we last voted on this question that the Canadian mills have gone into this combine, viz., in November, 1891, as shown by the report of the twine combine, and I now call upon these gentlemen to vote upon this question according to the promises they made. I call upon the Finance Minister, now that it is placed under his nose that this is not simply a combine but a Yankee combine at that, to do what he pledged himself to do. I call upon the hon. member for East Elgin (Mr. Ingram) also to carry out his promise on the strength of which he received the farmers votes, and to give value for the votes he did receive. Let them carry out their pledges or let it lee held in future that their Fromises are to be considered as mere pie-crust pledges to be broken whenever they have secured seats in this House. I think this treatment of the farmer which taxes his raw materials, or the implements of his handicraft, while it admits free the raw material and many of the implements and tools used in other callings, is an injustice to the farmer and a proof that his interests are not considered alongside of those of the manufacturers. who can put their hands in their pockets and contribute to election funds. The farners do not form combines, and subscrike for election funds. Let us see how far the Government have carried out the plan of admitting the raw material usel in different trades. We find that, in regard to pottery, China clay is admitted free, crude gypsum and plaster of paris are admitted free, although they enter into competition with our own prolucts. Nickel is admitted free. Ores of all kinds for manufacturing purposes are admitted free. Precions stones in the rough are admitted free. Diamonds unset, diamonds uncut or in the rough are admittel free. That is some consolation for the farmer who has to pay a duty on his linding twine. Salt imported from the United Kinglom for use in the fisheries is free. Salt for the fisherman is free, but nothing is free for the farmer. Hemlock wood is admitted free, oak and tamers' bark is admitted free. There are many farmers who would derive very considerable revenue from the sale of these articles if they were not subjected to foreign competition. Several articles of hickory wood worked so as to be used in the manufacture of carriages, carts and sleighs, are imported by the manufacturers free when used in the manufacture of these vehicles, but the farmer cannot import the parts of a velicle which he may desire to put together himself without paying duty. The manufacturer can import them free, but the farmer has to pay the duty. So with regard to hickory billets and other articles of lumber, our farmers are run out of the market by the cheaper wood imported from the United States. Hides are admitted free, while leather is taxed heavily for the benefit of the tanner who imports foreign hides, so that he may get them cheaper and deprive the Canadian farmer of the profits he would otherwise derive. Wool not specified is admitted free. I would call attention to the inequality of the tariff in this respect, because here is a point at which the farmer could be protected. If a duty were put on all kinds of wool imported into Canada, the farmer would get exactly so much more a pound for wool than he does now, but of course the dear, sweet, kind woollen manufacturers who are so good to the Government about election time must be considered before the farmer, who is merely a clod who raises sheep and goes to the trouble of cutting the wool off their hacks and bringing it to market. It does not matter what price he getz for his wool, so long as the poor dear manufacturer gets his dose of soothing syrup. Therefore, the manufacturer. can receive free all the kinds of wool which enter into his manufactured article while the farmer has to compete against a foreign product. Broom corn, a very valuable article grown largely in my county and the counties west of that, is admitted free in competition with the Canadian article. Esparto grass, and articles the pulp of which is used in the manufacture of paper, are almitted free. Mexican fibre for manufacturing purposes is admitted free. Of course, the raw material for the manufacture of binder twine comes in free, and the hon. member for Halton says our manufacturers make a cheaper twine out of it than is made in the States, yet he is not willing to enter into competition with the United States market. I might go on with a number of other articles, such as cotton yarms of different kinds, and manila grass, and jute and other raw materials; and nets and seines and tishing twine for the use of fisheries-all sorts of raw material, all sorts of special articles designed for the use of special manufactures are almitted free to encourage the home manufactures. But what is admitted free to encourage the farmer: I challenge the Minister of Finance or anyhody on that side to show me an article which is admitted free for the benefit of the farmer. He is not taken into question at all, but is taxed on his wearing apparel from th th 75 per cent : he is taxed $3 \overline{5}$ per cent on binders, and on axes, hay knives, rakes, forks and so on, he is aftlicted with a compound tax, both specific and arl. ralorem, which amounts in many cases to considerably over 100 per cent. It is shown by importers that large quantities of shovels, rakes and axes are imported for the use of farmers, on which this compound tax amounted to 100 per cent or 110 per cent duty, the whole of which is paid by the farmers. I siy this continued disregard to the farmers' interests, this continued hocussing by election promises, which are falsified as soon as a chance occurs to fulfil them, must lead to some action on the part of the farmers calenlated to withstand the combine, I might call it the conspiracy, which is organized against them. I had hoped, when the Patrons of Industry came to the front in western Ontario, that it would be an effective society, that it would put the interests of the farmers as a class lefore the interests of party, that it would make its organized weight felt in this House at the bye-elections and at the next general elections. I regret to see, however, that the Patrons of Industry do not seem to have been as faithful to their class as they were to their party feelings. I regret to see that they have sent from the magnificent County of Halton a gentleman to represent that county nominally on the floor of this House and who has to-night represented, with the aid of official documents, a Yankee combine which has got control of the Canadian twine industry and which is laying its plans to rob the farmers further in the future than they have been in the past.

Mr. LISTER. Representing an agricultural constituency, I feel that upon this question I would not be properly giving expression to the opinions of my constituents, did I give a silent vote. Sir, I have waited until this late hour, twenty minutes after eleven, mainly for the purpose to see whether the hon. member for Halifax, who, I understand, is the owner of one of the most extensive twine manufactories in this comntry, and which, I believe to-lay is one of the great combines which are taxing and oppressing the farming population of this comtry. would speak on this question. We had a right to hear from that hon. gentleman. I molerstand that all afternoon he and the other hon. member for Halifax have been in consultation with the Minister of Finance here, no doubt discussing this very important , fuestion, and I think this House and the country had the right to hear from that hon. gentleman at the very opening of this delate. I think it was an impropriety on his part, to put it in the mildest form, to place those figures in the l:ands of the hon. member for Halton who knows nothing about this question, who, I understand, is merely a merchant in a small town up there, and has no practical experience or knowledge of the question he discussed with such apparent learning. This is an important question to the farmer. That the farmers look upon the tax as a real grievance, there can be no doubt, because for the last two or three sessions we hase had petitions from every section of the comntry against it. Hon, membershere representing constituencies in the Province of Ontario and the North-West, as well ats the Prorince of Quebec, have received petitions from their comstituents, which they presented, as was their Irmaden duty, to this House, asking the Coweroment to take off thi burdensome duty from the famers of this comentry. But the fact is we are paying in this cometry greatly more than they are paying in the United sitates, and it is for that reason that the combine of the United States, controlling the institution of the hon. gentleman from Halifax, and contoolling him in this Honse, opposes the removal of the duty which the farmers of this comatry want removed. I venture to say that there is not a farmer in Canda, if he gave expression to his honest opinion. Who wouh not say that this tax is a burdensome tax and that it whigt to be remover. It is nonsense for hom. gentlemen to argue here that this tax does not incranse the price of the article to the consmum, becallise if it did not ifo so. athd if we prolluced an article equal in fuality to that profluced in the Cinited States, then there could be no oljection whaterer to the removal of the duty. Last year the hom. the Finance Minister travelled through this country trying to get his Govermment supported, and promising to the farmers that if was shown that the mamuacturers of twine had entered into a combination, that moment would the Gorersment remove the duties upon the prodnctions of these :manufacturers. Those were the promises they sade. They have stated in this House, looth with reference to this article and others, that if it ccald lee shown that the result of the tariff was to creute comblinations, the (iovernment would consider it their bounden duty to remove the tax from those articles in order that they might break up and destroy those combinations. Sir, it has been shown here to-night, beyond all controversy, that all the manufacturers of twine in the Dominion of Canada are members of the North American Cordage Company, that the factories here are under the control of a great foreign corporation having twenty ord million dollars at its back, that the concern of the hon. member for Halifax is in that combination, that it has bought out the manufacturer in the city of St. John and closed down the factory, for the purpose of limiting the proluction in this country. That state of things is the legitimate offspring of the infamous system of taxation this country has to day ; and I, in the name of the farmers of the comety of Lambton, call upon the Government to redeem the pledges they made during the last election, as it has been proved by incontrovertible evidence, namely, the reports of those great combinations thenselves, and by hon. gentlemen who sit in this House, that the manufacturers of binding twine in Canadia are members of this combination. It must be a wonder to this House, and it will be a matter of remark in the country, that the hon. member for Halifax was not the first to speak upon this all absorbing question. It is of no conseguence at the present moment to ask whether the price of hinding twine is higher or whether it is lower; the result of the tariff has been to create a great monopoly, that monopoly is controlled by American capital, by American citizens, and it is the duty of the Government to redeenn the promises they made by taking off the duties so as to destroy the monopoly which the farmers of Canala believe to he burdensomeand oppressive.

Mr. KENNY. The hom. genteman who has just taken his seat in the course of his remarks. undertook to lecture another member of this House and to attribute to lim what he was pleased to term an impropriety. The hon. gentlemau said that he considered it was an impropiety that the member for Halifax-I I assume he meant the junior member- had not addressed the House during the course of this debate. When an hom. member unlertakes to lecture another member of this House on an impropriety, he should at least be satisfied that the statement which he himself was making, was strictly accurate. The hom. gentleman has lieen guilty of a greater impropriet y than any other memher of this House during this ilebate, when he stated that the members for Halifax had a conference this afternoon with the Finance Minister for the purpose of discussing the duty on himler twine.

Mr. LIsTER. I asked the hon. gentleman if the junior member for Halifax had not had an interview with the Minister of Finance this afternom.
Mr. KENNY. The hon. gentleman must adhere strictly to what he stated before the House. He stated distinctly that the members for Halifax had a conference this afternoon with the Finance Minister for the purpose of discussing binder twine. Sir, I may not be as competent a judge of an intpropriety as the hon. gentleman, but [ say tiast there is not the slightest foundation in fact for his statement. Neither to-lay, nor on any other day during the last four or five years that I have hal the honour of a seat in this House, have I discussed the duty on binder twine with the Finance Minister, or with any other member of the Government.
Mr. LISTER. How about your colleague?
Mr. KENNY. My colleague will be able to speak for himself when it is necessary. Some of those very gentlemen-I do not know whether the gentlenan who spoke last was one of them-condemned my colleague last year, and accused him of impropriety lecause he spoke on this question in which he was said to be interested. These hon. gentlemen are exceedingly difficult to please. I regret to have to refer in this mamer to the statement of any hon. member of this House, but I think that the courtesy of debate might be observen, and that in referring to each other we should be more accurate than the hon. gentleman has been. Now, Mr. Speaker, to deal more immediately with the question which is before the House, one hon. gentleman opposite, I think it was the hon. memher for Argentenil (Mr. Christie), during the course of his rema, $\underset{i}{ }$, , stated that there was in his county a factory in which binder twine or rope " hal heen manufactured, and that factory was a great public lenefit to the county." I hold to the opinion that every factory in the Dominion of Canala which employs Canadian labour, is a benefit, not only to the community in which it is placed, but to the whole country. Hon. gentlemen opposite have laid down the extraordinary doctrine this afternoon that the duty on binder twine should be removed immediately for the reason that a large amome of American capital has been invested in this comotry in the manufacture of that twine.

Mr. LIster. Oh, no.

Mr. KENXY. That is exactly what hon. gentlemen have contender, that because this American capital has come in here for investinent, in manufacture, therefore we should take the duty off the article they make. They are pleased to term it a Yankee speculation, a Yankee invest ment, as if that was a good reason why this Par liament of Canada, in solemn conclave assembled, should take the duty off binder twine. Hon. gentle men in this House know very well, that, before there was a pound of binder twine made in the bominion of Canada, the Parliament of Canada haul imposed a duty on binder twine. I forget the exact percentage of that duty $I$ think it was very nearly the percentage which exists to-day. I have no doult that that very duty which was put on binder twine, was an incentive to men of capital to invest their money in it, and the result has heen adrantageons to Canada, inasmuch as a large number of people have found employment in that industry. Now that it has largely passed ont of the hands of Canadians, these gentlemen lay down the extraordinary doctrine--they must permit me to call it the immoral doctrine-that healuse this foreign capital has come into Canada for investment anl to give employment, that this is a reasou why this Parliament should remove the duty on binder twine. Not one of these gentlemen has dared to make the statement that there is one Cunarlian less employed in the manufacture of this bincler twine since this change of ownership has takeu place.

Mr. LISTER. The St. John mill is closed altogether.

Mr. KENNY. Does the hon. gentleman mean to say that there is less binder twine made in Canada than before?

Mr. LISTER. That is another matter altogether.

Mr. KENNY. The hon. gentleman cannot show that there is one pound less of twine made, and consequently there are just as many people employed as before, and there is the same amount of money expended in labour. One gentleman has stated, and in fact the resolution cites it as an argument in favour of the abolition of this duty, and the surrender of our National Policy, because that is really what it means: that the revenue which we derive from binder twine only amounts to the insignificant sum of $$ 6,000$ a year. Mr. Speaker, if that argument is to have any weight in this Parliament of Canada, we might for the same reason take the duty off bleached and unbleached cottons which are manufactured now so extensively in this Dominion that the Castoms revenue from these articles is very insignificant. You might also for the same reason take the duty off plain woollen goods, because the ordinary tweeds which are used in this country are nearly all made in the Dominion of Cunda. These gentlemen might contend with as good reason that we should take the duty off these articles, and that we should make an onslaught on the National Policy to please them, because we derive no Customs revenue from such articles. In the same way take the trade in ready-made clothing. There is comparatively little duty paid on ready. made clothing imported into Cunada, and for that reason these gentlemen may argue as logically that we should remove the duty from that article. It is evident then, Sir, that this duty which has been placed upon binder twine was placed there largely to encourage its manufacture within our own territory. The figures which have been submitted to Parliament by my hon. friend from South Victoria (Mr. Fairbairn) and my hon. friend from Halton (Mr. Henderson), giving the prices of binder twine, have not leen refuted by hou. gentlemen opposite. I find that the tigures which have been submitted to the House are actual prices, with the names of the firms which sold the binder twine at these particular prices given as a guarantee that they are correct When we have such accurate and definite testimony as that, it is of infinitely more value to us than any mere wild assertions which hon. gentlemen opposite may make. These figures prove incontestably that during the last five years the farmers in Canada have on an average bought their binder twine cheaper than the farmers of the United States.

Mr. LISTER. That is not so.

Mr. KENNY. I hold that if these figures are accurate, and there can hardly be any doubt that they are, that such is undoubtedly the case. After all, Mr. Speaker, it is very easy to make mistakes in figures and quotations, and these mistakes may occur very unintentionally. Every business nain knows that in the sale of many articles there are what are called trade discounts allowed by manufacturers to the trade, but what hon. gentlemen on both sides of this House desire is, that we shall endeavour to satisfy ourselves that our farmers are paying no more for this important article than are the farmers across the border. To show how easy it is for hon. gentlemen to make mistakes of this kind, I will refer to the debate on this question which took place on 6th July of last year, when a motion was made by the hon. member for North York, on the same line as that which is now under consideration. The hon. member for North York (Mr. Mulock) then stated as follows:
"I am informed on what I consider reliable authority that the prevailing price of binding twine in the States to-day, in car lotds of ten tons is (and he quotes the prices). In Canada in similar quantities (that is in tenton loads) the prices are as follows: Pure manila 14 cents, and pure sisal from 11 to $12 \frac{1}{2}$ cents."
Now, as a matter of fact, I am sure the hon. gentleman did not desire to mislead the House when he made that statement, but as a matter of fact the member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) has given us the prices at which that twine was sold last year to the farmers in Ontario. In the town of Brampton the firm of Peaker \& Runians, which is stated to be a highly respectable firin, state that they sold their manila at 14 cents, and that they sold the Crownbrand at $10 \frac{1}{2}$ to 11 cents per pound. In other words that they sold this twine in Canada last year as cheap to the farmers in small quantities as the hon. member for North York (Mr. Mulock) last year toll us it could be bought in ten-ton lots. Again, the hon. member for Marquette (Mr. Watson) told us in the same debate last year, that "Red (ap, which is twothirds manila and one-third sisal"-I notice there is a disparity between the views of the hon. memleer for Marquette (Mr. Watson) and the hon. member for North York (Mr. Mulock) as to the fuality of these twines, because the hon. member for North York talks about pure sisal, while the member for Marquette, whom I will accept as an equally good authority, but they can settle that between themselves, toll us that there was no pure sisal and that the price of Red Cap in Toronto was 12 cents. Now this firm in Brampton tells us distinctly that they were selling that twine to the farmers at from $11 \frac{1}{5}$ to 12 cents, and that the Crown brand was sold to the farmers from $10 \frac{1}{2}$ to 11 cents. I merely mention this to show how easy it is for hon. gentlemen to make mistakes as to prices. Then again, the Blue Ribbon, pure manila, the hon. member for Marquette told us was selling in To-ronto-I imagine he meant hy the jobbers, because he went on immediately afterwards to quote the prices from the joblers in Chicago-at 14 cents a pound. Now, this firm in Brantford told us that in the same season they sold the farmers pure manila at from 13 to 14 cents.

Mr. Watson. What is the American price?
Mr. KENNY. The American price of pure manila was $12 \ddagger$ cents. I do not desire to question the accuracy of the hon. gentleman's figures, but I have shown that he was mistaken as regards the prices at which these twines were sold last year to the farmers of Ontario. It is just possible--I do not mention it is a fact, because I do not know it as a fact-that he may have been equally mistaken as regards the prices of twine sold in the United States. I have always been in favour of a full and fair measure of protection to our Canadian industries. In the community in which I reside, I have always taken the stand that it was to our advantage, as a people, that we should encourage in every way the development of industries in our own country, and in many cases the result has been that whilst our people have found employment in these various industries, the rest of the community have not been over-taxed. My attention has been directed specially to cotton goods and woollen goods, with which I am more familiar, being my own line of business. The Canadian consumer is buying these goods on as favourable terms as he did at any previous date, and the same is true, I think, of binder twine. I am glad to hear from hon. gentlemen who have evidently taken pains to make themselves familiar with the question, that our farmers whom it is our duty to protect in every way, are paying no more for their binder twine than their competitors, the farmers of the United States. When this question wis brought up last year, it was known to both sides of the House that there were a number of bye-elections pending, and it was imagined, perhaps uncharitally, that the resolution may have been introduced to influence the farmers in the approaching bye-elections. Well, judging from what has taken place in Ontario, 1 am forced to the conclusion that the appeal had not very much influence on the farmers of that province, and to that fact I may prohably ascribe the appearance in this resolution of it reference to the fishermen of the Maritime Provinces, who, it says, pay no duty on the twine which is imported and used by the fishemen. It would seem as if these hon. gentlemen wished to antagonize the farmer and the fisherman -as if their idea was to raise a little sectional cry and set the east against the west-another slight attack on the shreds and patches of the Maritime Provinces, which never receive much favour at the hands of hon. gentlemen opposite. The hon. member for Halton has explained to the House that the twine which the fishermen use is entirely different from binder twine, being made from hemp, flax and sometimes cotton. It has never been manufactured in Canada, for the simple reason that the quantity consumed is so comparatively small that it would not pay to start the manufacture of it in the Dominion. But it is different with binder twine. We import the raw material free of duty, and we have a measure of protection on the manufactured article which has encouraged people to invest their capital in its manufacture : and we have the satisfaction of knowing, on positive assurance, that our farmers are paying no more for the binder twine which they use than their competitors across the border. Now, Mr. Speaker, I have no desire at this late hour to take up the time of the House. The question has been very thoroughly threshed out; but as one who has always been in favour of the National Policy, I desire to record my vote against this onslaught on that policy. The general attack on the National Policy which has been made by hon. gentlemen opposite has signally failed, and it would seem as if they had changed their tactics and had now decided to moke the attack in detail on each outpost of the manufacturing industries of the Dominion ; and to that motive I think we may attribute the resolution which has been under the consideration of the House to-day.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). The hon. gentleman who has just sat down seems to think that it is very important that the tax should be kept on binder twine, and that it is equally important that the tax should be kept off the twine used by the fishermen.

Mr. KENNY. It is not manufactured in Canada.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). And the hon. gentleman I suppose would be equally ready to tell us that if there was no tax on binder twine, that would not be manufactured in Canada either.

Mr. KENNY. Drring the course of my few remarks, I reminded the House that a duty had been imposed upon binder twine before one pound of it had been manufactured in the Dominion of Canada, and that the consequence of the existence of that duty has been that binder twine has been manufactured within our country. I do not know enough about the business to go into the details, but I believe that is a fact.

Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). Well, the facts are precisely as I have stated them. The hon. gentleman says there was no binder twine manufactured in Canada until the duty was imposed.

Mr. KENNY. I said there was a duty on bincler twine before there was a pound manufactured.

Mr. MILLi' (Bothwell). That is precisely what I have said, that until there was a duty imposed upon hinder twine, there was none manufactured in Canada, and the hon. gentleman says that the linder twine used by the fishermen is not manufactured in Canala. There is no tax upon it, and I suppose, that according to the theory of the hon. gentleman, that as long as there is no tax upon it, there will be no fishermen's twine manufactured in Canala. That would be the inference from the argument put before the House by the hon. gentleman? Well, the hon. gentleman and his friends have told us more than that. The hon. gentleman siys that the duty does not increase the price. There is some one pays a daty. There is a duty imposed, and it falls on some person or other, but the hon. gentleman said it does not fail upon the consumer. Well, if that be true, I do not see why the hon. gentleman and his friends do not propose a duty upon the fishermen's twine also, for, of course, if there was a tax upon the fishermen's twine, it would not be paid by the fishermen. The Govermment would get the tax, but not out of its own people. It would le compelling the foreigners who produce this twine, to contribute a considerable stum to the public treasury. That is the argument which has been addressed to the House. We have heard for several years from the Minister of Finance and his predecessors that the imposition of a duty upon sugar did not increase the price of sugar, that it was just as cheap in Canada as it was anywhere else, in New Fork at all events, and that as long as the duty was kept on, the consumer in Canada got sugar as cheaply as he did before. Well, we were told by these hon. gentlemen last year, when it was proposed to take the cluty off sugar, that they were remitting to the people of Canada $\$ 3,000,000$ of taxes which they had before paid. If the Government propose to put it iluty on, it never. falls upon the population of the country, and when they take the duty off, they have relieved the people of a portion of the burden they had to bear before, and so every year we hear from hon. gentlemen opposite the same theory. The senior member for Halifax tells the House that the farmers of Canada get their twine just as cheaply as do the farmers in the United States. I would like to know to what extent the duty may be increased without adding anything to the burdens of the farmer. You have 25 per cent nòw. Can you make it: 50 or 100 per cent? Can you increase it to 200 per cent and leare the price just as it is now? At what point is it that the tax or a portion of the tax will begin to fall on the man who consumes the article. Let us learn something of this system of political economy which is preached daily to the Honse and the country by hon. gentlemen on the other side. Let us know just how much taxes they may feel imposed upon a particular article before the price of that article will be affected to the party who requires it. It would he important to us to know. In some instances they have imposed 50 per cent and they argue that that does not increase the price. They have 2 per cent on the binder twine, and they tell us it does not increase the price. If that be so, why not make it in per cent? If the burdens donot fall upon the farmers, to stimulate the article the Government should impose someting more. It is true they do not get much taxes, because in a large degree they cut out the foreign article, but they get something, and according to their theory they would get still more if the rate of taxation was increased. Hon. gentlemen may address a preposterous argument of that sort to this House and they may get hon. gentleman on that side to prepare figures in order to establish their proposition, but nobody outside the House is so far divested of his rational faculties as to suppose that the imposition of $2 \cdot 5$ per cent on a foreign article will not affect the price of articles which enter into competition with it and are produced in the country. It is true if you add free production, the imposition of duties might not enable the party who produces the article to keep up the price, but great care is taken to prevent over-production. You have a combine. You have gentlemen coming from the other side of the line and investing their money, not in creating establishments, lut in purchasing those already existing. The hon. gentleman asked us if we are opposed to the introduction of American capital here? Well, I say this, that the introduction of American capital, if it is for the purpose of introducing new enterprises, cannot do us any harm and will do us good, if the enterprises rest upon their own merits and are conducted upon business principles, but the investment of American capital in establishments already existing leaves matters as they were before. In this case matters were not left as they were before. The hon. member for Argenteuil (Mr. Christie) has pointed out to-night that the cordage manufactory in his constituency has been bought by these combines and is closed up, and the former proprietors are puid over $\$ 7,(0)()$ a year while the establishment is kept closed. Now, where does that $\$ 7,000$ per year come from? And what are the circumstances which warrant foreigners in coming here and investing their money in these establishments and paying over $\$, 000$ a year to the former proprietors for keeping their establishments closed? There was an establishment in the city of St. John which had been bought by Americans and closel, and I understand the former proprietors are receiving $\$ 1: 5,000$ a year to keep it closed. Who is paying this? Where is the money coming from? Are these men coming to Canada and investing their money in an enterprise where they are making but a reasonable profit and another going to these establishments and closing them and paying the parties from whom they have purchased large sums of money, as a mere gratuity, without any advantage to themselves? Where does the advantage come in ! Certainly there is an advantage somewhere. How is it that these gentlemen who have made these purchases are enabled to close up these establishments and pay the parties large dividends upon the capital which was represented there, unless indeed they are compelling the agricultural population to purchase the products of their enterprise at a higher rate than the actual value. It is not simply the cost of production with a fair profit. It is the cost of production with very much more than a fair profit. There is the cost of proluction and a fair profit on the capital employed and on the capital unemployed. If you undertake to pay out for a manufacturing establishment several times more than it is worth, how are you to get interests upon the capital you have invested? How are you to get a dividend on that capital, unless you are charging for the products of that portion of the business you keep in operation a larger sum than should be paid? That is what is done. We know what combines have done on the other side. We know that the great salt manufacturing establishments in various parts of the United States were closed up by a similar combine and that large sums of money were paid ammually to the parties who had formerly owned them-closed to the public detriment, and the public seriously injured. The price of what is produced shows an enormons increase in consequence, and the hon. gentleman knows that is the case with regard to this particular article. I do not care what the price may be in the United States. I have before me evidence taken last year, which shows that the price in Canada for binder twine is very much higher than it is the United States, but I do not care how that may be. I am looking at this fact, that the capital invested in manufacturing establishments is rendered idle. You have the establishments closed, you have a few of them kept in operation, and on those that are kept in operition you are paying a dividend. Fou are paying a profit not only upon the capital of the business now in operation but also upon the capital of establislments that were bought out and closed, and I say that camot be done unless you are extracting from the population who consume these products a very much larger sum than you ought to obtain from them. That is what you are doing with regard to this article. It may be shown that, apart from this duty, it could be laid down in Can. ada at a rery much lower price. I want to know what advantage there is in the maintenance of industries of this sort by high protective duties when you are imposing upon the community, the vast inajority of the agricultural population of this country, a far larger burden than they would be called upon, apart from your legislation, to bear. I say it is clear that the rule laid down by the hon. gentleman that the imposition of duties has not affectel the price is an absurd one in this case. The closing of the establishments at Argenteuil, at St. John and elsewhere, and the payment of a large dividend on the capital of the establishments so closed, contradicts the statement of the hon. gentleman. It shows that that statement cannot be true. It shows that the statistics read to us as to the comparative prices are altogether erroneous, but, if the United States imposed at one time duties on certain raw materials that were free in this country, if the United States have combinations and trusts which put up the prices far beyond what the market prices ought to be, the hon. gentleman may institute a comparison in favour of the prices in Canaida, but that only shows there is a wrong done elsewhere as well as a wrong done here, and the wrong done elsewhere is no justification

whatever for the wrong which is done by the legislation of which complaint is made, and the tax which my hon. friend by his resolution seeks toremove. Now, what makes up the price of an article? We know that, unless a profit can bemarle, continued production cannot exist. You have the cost of the original material, the amount of capital invested, the cost of labour, the profit on the capital, you have repair and waste to provide for, and, if you impose a tax upon the article, you increase the price by that tax until there is such in production in the country that competition will cut it down. Where can you have competition if you have a combination, when all the factories pass into the handsof that one combination? Theonly competition must be foreign competition, and you put a barrier in the way of that foreign competition by imposing a duty of 25 per cent. The hon. gentleman has not proposed that there shall be a tax on the twine used in the fisheries. He says this is a sectional argument to employ in this House, but I say the sectional argument is created by the action of the hon. gentleman and his friends. How is it possible, if you were to treat the two classes of the population in the same way, that an argument of this kind could arise? It can only arise because you place the article consumed by one class on the free list and tax the sume article consumed by the other class. Why not put them both on the same footing? If the price is not affectell by the tax, there can be no objection to this being done, and the hon. gentleman ought to be the first to propose it. If he has confidence in his own theory, he ought to give it effect not only in regard to the article consumed by the agricultural population, but he should apply his rule to the article consumed by the fishermen. I notice a statement made by the hon. nember for Muskoka (Mr. O'Brien) early in the evening, that he might feel inclined to support the proposition if the motion were not made on going into Committee of Supply. The hon. gentleman is altogether mistaken in regard to the rule of Parliament as to amendments or motions in amendment togoing intoConumittee of Supply. That is the proper occasion upon which to move an amendment or propose a redress for every grievance that can be appropriately corrected in that way. That is the English parliamentary rule, and I venture to say that a few cases will be fouml in the English practice where a Government have treated an amendment to going into Supply as a vote of want of confidence in the Administration. It is the right of Parliament, when the Crown is asking for taxes, to propose the redress of every grievance, the correction of every w rong that may present itself, and which may require the attention of Parliament, so that, when the Finance Minister proposed to go into Committee of Supply, it was the proper oceasion to ask for the removal of any grievance borne by any section of the population. It is only two years ago when I proposed an amendment to the proposal to go into Committee of Supply, and the late Prime Minister accepted it and it was carried by the House. That is the English rule, this is the proper occusion when redress should be submitted to the House, and it ought never to be treated as a motion of want of conficlence by the Administration. The hon. member for Muskoka (Mr. O'Brien) gave that as a reason for opposing the motion. He admitted that the duty ought to be removed, that the article ought to be placed on the free list, and suid, were it proposed otherwise than on going into Supply, he would be prepared to give it his support. I am pointing out that that statement is founded on a wholly erroneous idea of what are the rights of Parliament on the motion to go into Committee of Supply.

Mr. BOWELL. The hon. gentleman should do the hon. member for Muskoka (Mr. O'Brien) justice. That is not the only reason he gave.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). The hon. gentleman is always so perfectly fair in the arguments he addresses to the House that he is beyond all others the hon. gentleman who ought to correct an observation made by me. I will say that the hon. genman objecten to the preamble of the resolution, as he calleel it. But that is not a matter that I am called upon to consider. The member for Muskoka approved of the principle of the resoultion, that this tax ought to be removed, and he gave as his chief reason for not supporting that proposition, that it was moved as an amendment to going into Committee of supply. I am pointing out that it is on going into Committee of supply that such a motion ought to be made.

Mr. BOW ELL. I am extremely sorry that I camnot return the compliment of the hon. gentleman as to fairness in his arguments.

Mr. BAIN (Wentworth). I always admire the frank and open defence that our friends opposite, like the senior member for Halifix (Mr. Kenny), present to this House in defence of the National Policy. I respect a man who comes straight out and says he is prepared to stand by that policy when it is applied to a particular case like this. He sitys that the existence of these duties on hinder twine has created the manufacture of that article in our midst. he attacks the hon. member for Marguette (Mr. Watson) hecanse he points to a large vacancy in the completeness of the National Policy, where $542 \pi, 000$ worth of twine and cordage cones free into Canada, because it happens to be wanted for the use of the fishermen. If the National Policy is so great a benefit to the people of this country, if it is no burden to the consumer of those articles upon which the duty is imposed, why make this gap for the benefit of the fishermen? Why cry sectionalism when we ask that another part of the community be treated in exactly the same way as the fishermen! I would like to ask the hon. member for Halifix how he justifies his position when he says that binder twine is not increased in price ly the 2.7 per cent duty, yet he tells us that it wonld not do to put ia duty upon fishermen's twine, lecause it might not be leneficial to the fishermen. Now, we have learned to-night that there are two very large sections of the farming community who rightly or wrongly believe that the imposition of a 25 per cent duty on twine increases the cost to them. We have the fact that both from the Patrons of Hushandry and from the Grangers, both farmers' associations, petitions have come in large numbers asking that the duty be removed. Side by side with that fact I want to place before you this other fact, that it is admitted by gentlemen opposite that there is now no competition in the production of cordage in the Dominion of Canada, that it is not even a Canadian arraugement. Our friends are very loyal when they are talking before country audiences and waving the grand old flag, but they do not have any compunctions of conscience in becoming a joint in the tail of a great American combination, if they think by that means they can add to their profits. We have the fact which is not denied here that several of these establishments which were formerly running, are now closed up. The hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) asked if the owner of the cordage works at Lachute is paid for doing nothing and is drawing to day $\$ 6,000$ or $\$ 7,000$ a year, where does it come from when their machinery is standing idle and their factories have ceased to produce? And the operatives that used to be employed in these establishments-where are they ? The operatives are scattered somewhere else, while the burdens on the community are still retained. I sympathize with the position taken by the hon. member for Muskoka, because I think there are other gentlemen besides him on that side of the House who realized that this cordage combination is rapidly getting to the position in which the salt operations were within the last year or two. The hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) has quoted to us a long array of tigures. 'I can only say to my hon. friend that when he quotes so glibly from the brief presented to him by these parties interested in the combine, perhaps he is not covering all the facts in the case. It is only a week ago when I was at home that I talked with the only remaining dealer in binding twine that the National Policy has left in that town. I said to him: "W hat sort of prices are you going to yuote for binding owine this year"? Well, he sail: "I have got no prices at all yet. The fact is I have received several circulars from the business firms I usually deal with and they ask me to wait, we are not prepared to give you quotations now, but by no means place your orders with anylooly else; just wait, and we will do as well by you as anylxoly else." That was only one week ago. My hon. friem talks to you to-night with calm assurance as if the market had been open and these gools could have been bought and prices quoted all along. Such are not the facts in my experience in my own county. Now, with respect to the quotations in these extracts that he read from the evidence taken before the Combines Committee in 1888, I must siy that I regret very much the tone in which he presented those olservations. Heretofore we have leen in the habit of accepting each other's statements in gool faith when presented in contradiction to each other's position. But it has been reserved to my hou. friend to get up and tell this House that the hon. member for Marquette (Mr. Watson) and the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Mc.Millan) deliberately misstated the facts in comnection with that investigation. I was myself a member of that committee, and I think my hon. friend has misapprehended the drift of Mr. Massey's evidence. I shall not accuse him of wilful misrepresentation, I do not deal in these lines; but I think that after due examination of Mr. Massey's evidence my hon. friend will come to the conclusion that he ought to retract his statement. Now, I will read from Mr. Massey's evidence a little more in extenso. It was given before that committee when he came, as he said himself, to give evidence in connection with other branches of his business. He was asked to make some statement before the committee by the chairman. I think it was Mr. Wallace. This is what he said:
"What did you pay for twine four years ago before this combine was formed? - I cannot tell back as far as four years ago. This of course is sprung upon me, although I had some figures in coming down on some business with the Government, because we considered it mas a grie rance and an injury to the public in this combination putting prices on the twine, by which the farmer has to pay so much more in proportion to the raw material than he had two or three years ago : and also so much greater than whit we can buy it for in the American market. We can buy the same material that is sold here, the same finished twine, from the Americans, paying a duts of $$ 1.793$ per 100 pounds cheaper than we can buy it incanada. On that we pay the duty.

Are you buying in Canada?- Yes: because we prefer patronizing the home market if we can. But we Say it is an injustice to the public when a combination is formed that will put up the price beyond what they are war ranted in doing in view of the cost of the raw material. Combinations are an injury when they exact extortionate prices from the consumer."
These are Mr. Massey's own words recorded by the stenographer on that occision and they distinctly prove that Mr. Massey objected to the combination that was formed then : a combination not quite so solid as it is now, because there were some establishments ontside of it then, while at present I understand that the American Cordage Company has included all the binder twine mannfacturers in Canadia. Again he gives the figures:
> "But if you can buy elsewhere ontside of this combination at a cheaper rate, what would be your complaint? I say that they have that advantuge: that they get the raw material free and we have to pay the duty on the cord, which they get the benefit of on the cord.
> "If you can buy elsewhere and get a better bargain what is your complaint? - If you are obliged from the combination that would be a different thing. I say we can buy it and lay it down cheaper than we can get it from the Canadians after paying the duts; but then the difference is so small. I will gire you the figures. The Canadian price for pure manila delivered in not less than 50 ton lots is $\$ 12.50$, and then there is a 5 per cent discuunt in 15 days off that which brings, it net $\$ 11.83 \frac{1}{2}$. I do not see any advantage in the rebate because the twine is not used until July and August. The American quotation is $\$ 11.50$, less one and a half discount. That is El1. $30_{i}^{2}$ net. Freight 25 cents total $\$ 11.573$ as against $\$ 11.8_{1}^{-i}$. Take the duty from this, the duty of $1 \frac{1}{2}$ cents per pound on the raw material paid by the American manufacturer, which is not paid by the Cianadian, and it brings it down to $10 \frac{1}{2}$ cents per pound,"

That was Mr. Massey's distinct statement. Then comes the question that my friend from Halton (Mr. Henderson) quoted a portion of to-night to establish that Mr. Massey said just the reverse :

[^65]actions and who spoke whereof he knew, and although he said he was a protectionist hinself, he complained that this combination had unfairly and unduly increased the price of binder twine to the Caudian consumer: To-day we find ourselves in a worse position. At that time Mr. Morris who was at member of the combine gave his evidence to show that one manufacturer, Mr. Conners, drew from $\$ 5,000$ to 87,000 per annum out of the combine, and only made two tons of binder twine the whole of that year. I'hat is one of the results of the prociuction of any line of industry being in the hands of one concern, and I venture to say that those gentlemen who talk to us so glibly and so fluently about binder twine being cheaper to the Canadian farmer, are the very men who will take care that the Canadian farmer does not get an even start with them or anyboly else in the consumption of this article. If they produce so cheaply why are they anxious to keep a $2 \overline{2}$ per cent duty on? At the time Mr. Massey speaks of the American producer was handicapped with a duty of $1 \frac{1}{2}$ cents per pound on his raw material, while the Canadian manufacturer got his free, and at that time we find one man drawing from $\$ 3,(00)$ to $\$ 7,000$ a year for allowing his machinery to stand practically idle. Today we have hal the evidence from the hon. member for Argenteuil (Mr. Christie) that one of the establishments in his constituency is closed up and the operatives turned adrift to find their living as best they could, for these men care nothing for the operatives when it is a question of making money for themselves. They are paid for allowing their machinery to stand idle, and where does the money come from to pay for keeping it inlle if not out of the pockets of the consumers of this twine. It is just such cuses as this that will discredit the National Policy, and I sympathize with an honest supporter of that measure such as my hon. friend from Muskoka (Mr. O'Brien) when he feels that when the manuficture of this article is gathered into one combine, that the farmers are at the mercy of a combination that will have no mercy on them. While these gentlemen argue so fluently that the prices are low, they take particularly good care to retain the duty so that they are not exposed to the competition. If the American combine finds seven-tenths of a cent per pound suffcient to protect them, why doesourCanadian combine demand a $2 \overline{5}$ per cent duty to keep it standing upon its legs? These gentlemen may talk until doomsday, but the farmers feel the difference and they realize it, and socmer or later they will realize that they are leing taken aulvantage of for the purpose of leuefiting one huge monopoly. If that is the line that the National Policy is going to develop in Canada, I say farewell to the prospect of building up the industries of this country, becanse it will inevitably result that production will be simply limited to meeting the particular wants of the community, and when we come to touch the field of export, we will find ourselves handicapped right and left, and the result is that, failing to compete on the foreign markets with other manufacturers, we will simply confine ourselves to find the home demand. I do sympathize with the farmers of the North-West on being taxed to the extent of 25 per cent duty, for the purpose of keeping up this monopoly in binding twine. Notwithstanding the fallacious arguments that my friend from Halton (Mr. Henderson) with his ready. made brief presented to this House to-night, I say that he will fail to convince the farmers at home whether they be Patrons of Industry or Crangers, or farmers outside of any organization, that this sort of thing is in their interest. It is fashionable with certain men to sneer at organizations of farmers, and I admit that in a yood many respects the farmers' organizations have leen clumsy and ineffective, but I point you to the fact that while these organizations may fail, that they are immediately revived in some other form, and that it is an indication when they fail, that there is a difficulty in existence, and that they are not getting fair-play under this National Policy. Sir, I would have leen pleased to have heard from the (iovernment that they would place our farmers on at least an equal basis with the American farmers with respect to protection, and not handicap them to the extent of 25 per cent on this binder twine. If seven-tenths of a cent per pound is sufficient for the American manufacturer against outside competition, it ought to be sufficient protection for the other end of the great big American concern that has reached to Canma, and controls all the cordage manufactures in this country. For that reason, if for no other, I shall have great pleasure in supporting the resolution presented lyy my hon. friend from Marguette.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Wrimsenday, 207th April, 1892.
The spenter took the Chair at Three oclock.
Prayeks.

FIRST READIN(:

Bill (No. i.) to confer on the Commissioner of Patents certain powers for the relief of Carl Auer Von Welshach.--(Mr. Stairs.)

WORK ON YAMASKA RIVER.

Mr. MONET (for Mr. Mignault) (Tranoiation) asked, 1. What is the total cost of work done at the Yamaska River, near its mouth ; for the building o the lock and dam and for the dredging of the said river? 2. What has been the cost of the work of maintenance and repair of the said lock and dam? 3. How many lock-keepers are there, and what is their yearly pay? 4. How many steamers and other vessels passed through the said lock during the course of last year? D. Did the Government receive tolls at the said lock, and if so, what is the yearly anount?

Mr. OULNET. (Translation.) The cost of the lock, the dam and the dreiging of the river was, on the 31 st of March last, $8130,318.06$. The cost of maintenance and repair of the same works was s $14,504.07$. Two lock-keepers are employed there, and their salary is $\$ 40$ per month during the season. As to yuestions 4 and $\overline{5}$, answers to them may he oltatined from the Minister of Inland Revenue.

C. E. W. DOIWELL

Mr. LANDERKIN (for Mr. Bordes) asked, Whether C. E. W. Dodwell was an employe of the Department of Public Works in February last? Anl, if so, in what capacity? Did said Dodwell examine the works at Hall's Harbour, N. s., on or about the 10th day of February last, under instructions from, by direction of, or with the knowledge of the department? If so, were the instructions in writing, and what was the nature of the examination? Has a report been sent in to the department?

Mr. OUIMET. Mr. Dodwell was employed as district engineer. He was at Hall's Harbour on the 10th of February, acting under instructions from my department. The instructions were in writing, and the object of the examination was to determine the possibility of getting rid of the samd bar in the harbour by means of a dam and sluice-way at the head of the harlour. A report has been sent in.

DUTY ON SAW LOGS.

Mr. RIDER moved for;

Copies of all correspondence, memorials, departmental orders and Orders in Council, respecting or in any way relating to the removal of the export duty from saw-logs and other unmanufactured lumber exported from Canada to the United States.
He said: Mr. Speaker, in explanation of this motion I desire to say that although this subject was quite thoroughly discussed following the introduction of the resolution of tine hon. member for Sherbrooke (Mr. Ives), asking for re-imposing an export duty upon saw-logs and spruce pulpwood exported to the United States, yet no information was given ly the Government during that discussion why the export duty had been removed from spruce stw-logs exported from Canada to the United States without securing in return a corresponding reduction in the United States import duties upon Canadian spruce stwnlumber. I hope the papers when brought down will give the information desired, and that they will he fortheoming as soon as possible.

Motion agreed to.

EXTRA PAYMENTS TO PERMANENT CLERKS.

Mr. TISDALE moved for :

Return showing all payments made to permanent clerke for extra work done by them in their owu department and in other departmente, during the years $1874,1875,1876,1877$ and $1878:-1$. The name of each such clerk; 2 . The page of the Auditor Genern's Report on Public Accounte upon which each of such payments may be found ; 3. Department in which said clerk was parmanently employed; & Department for which extrit work was done: 5. Nature of suoh work; 6 . Amount of each such payment : 7 . The fund from which each such payment was made.
He said: In making this motion, I wish to state shortly some of the reasons why I trouble the House with it. During the somewhat lengthy debate which took place in this House some days ago, in reference to the irregularities in the Civil Service, I was somewhat surprised, on reuding the speeches, to discover that hou. gentlemen opposite gave the House and the country to understanu, that there had been no illegalities during the time they were in power : further, that there hal been very few, if my, irregularities : and lastly, that no permanent clerks-at all events none who ought not, under the terms of the Civil Service Act, to have been paid for extra work during the time they were administering the affairs of the country-had received any considerable amount. I was still further surprised to see in the speeches of some bon. gentlemen, that it was doultful if there had leem any Civil service Act at all in force at that time. Now, to set that question at rest, I shall read to the House the clause of the Civil Service Act in ferve during the time of the administration of the hon. gentlemen opposite. It was passed in 1868, and it reads as follows :-
" No allowance or compensation slall be made for any extria service whatsoever which any officer or clerk may be required to perform in the department to which he belongs."
That was not changen until 1882, when it was made to real as follows :-
"No extra salary or additional remuneration of auy kind whatsoever shall be paid to any deputy hend, or officer or servant in the Civil Service of the Dominion, unless such sum shall have been placed for that special purpose in the estimates submitted to and voted by Parliament."
It will be noticed, therefore, that, so far as permanent clerks were concerned, it was illegal for them to be paid for extra services performed in the department to which they belonged; and that was recognized ly the House, and no votes were taken in the House for such payments. Well, Nir, I find, by a cursory examination of the Public Accounts, that permanent clerks were paid for extra services in the departments to which they belongen, not only during one year, but daring every year of the allininistration of hon. gentlemen opposite. I find that in 1875, $\$ 2,136.29$ was paid; in 1876, 82,374 ; in $1877, \$ 2,124,30$; and in 1878 , $\$ 2,685.51$ : or a total of $89,524.23$. These amomats are what I obtained from the contingent fund ; I io not know how many others may have been made. The departments in which these illegal payments were made were the Interior, the Finance, the Customs, the Post Office, the Receiver (ieneral's, the Public Works, the Governor General's Secretary's, the Secretary of State's, and the Inland Revenue; and the grossest and largest irregularities took place in the Finance Department which was under the charge of the hon. member for South Oxford ${ }^{\circ}$ (Sir Richard Cartwright). I have taken the names of just four clerks ly way of illustration: W. L. Orde received $\$ 1,668.40$; J. Barry, \$922.50; T. F. Watters, $\mathbf{2} 516$; and H. J. Morgan, $\mathbf{\Sigma 6 8 5 - - a}$ total of $\$ 3,791.90$ paid to thene four clerks for extra services in their own departments. Last but not least, I find in the Public Accounts of 1874-75 these items:

The hon. Receiver-General, amount prid sundry persons employed in counting and lestroying notes, $$ 6,278.70$; umount pail sundry persons for extra services in savings bank branch, $$ 629$. In 1875 , 1876, 1877 and 1878 there was paid uniler these headings a totul of $$ 21,626.80$; and I find enough to satisfy me that the great bulk of that sum was paid to permanent clerks for extra services in the departments to which they belonged. There is no further explanation-noentriesas to the details, and no names mentionel. I presume that the Government will in some manner be able to trace those payments, and see whether I am correct or not. I am satistied that these are not nearly all the payments which have been male, and I hope the return will disclose them. As so much was said in the discussion the other day with regard to the irregularities in the Civil Service during the administra. tion of this Government and its predecessors, I thought the statement I am moving for would be an interesting appemlix to put in the Hansarol, so that the whole record of the alministrations of both parties in this respect wouhl go to the come try.

Mr. MILLN(Bothwell). The hom: gentleman has asked for a return relating to the years in which another Govermment were in office. Now, I do not know precisely in what year the Act relating to the Civil service came into operation, but I suppose the hon. gentleman does not want a return as to the employment of permanent clerks at a period of time when there was no legal objection to the employment of these clerks. I suppose the hon. gentlenan wishes to ascertain how far the law was violated. I have not the statute before me, but it would be important to look at the year in which the statute came into operation, and make the return legin with that particular period, and extend down to the present time. If we are to have a report, it ought to be a report which would enable the House to see how these irregularitiesgrew up, how they grew up, and when steps were taken toprevent them. It would be important to see who was responsible for them and the extent to which they exist, and the return asked for by the hon. gentleman will give the House no such information. I apprehend the House is not particularly interested as to whether a former Administration did as badly as their predecessors or worse than their successors, but in orler that a comparison may be instituted, in order that information may le had of some practical value to the House, the return for which the hon. gentleman calls shoull begin with the beginniag of the impropriety and extend down to the present time, and I ask the House that the retum asked for by the hon. gentleman should be corrected in that particular ; I ask that it should give us the opportunity of knowing the whole truth, and in order that it may be of value, it should serve that purpose.

Mr. TISDALE. My object is to commence with the time covered by the discussions before the Public Accounts Committee, and that was from the commencement of the Mackenzie administration. That is the reason I fix that time. Last year and this session, in the House and before the Public Accounts Committee, the impression was certainly given that these irregularities and illegal payments, puyments in contravention of the Civil service Act, did not exist during the Mackenzie administration, and for this reason it will be extremely interesting to have a return covering the two periods. Whether or not such a return would justify the action of the Govermment is in matter for people to judge.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). There are foarteen years since 1878 which the hon. gentleman is leaving out, and concerning which it would be equally important to have information as during the few years he has mentioned. It would also be important to have information concerning the few years before those he has mentioned, when the Act was also in operation.

Mr. BOWFLLL. These illegal payments, or what are termed illegal payments, were investigated by the Public Accounts Connmittee from the time this (iovernment took office.

Mr. LAURIER. No.
Mr. BOWELLL. Yes, in a great measure. At the Public Accounts Committee, last session, it was stated boldly that these irregular payments harl heen made by the late fiovernment alone. I read at one of the meetings of the committee the clause of the Act which has leeer in existence since 1868. My hon. friend to my right read that clause, and pointel out to the House, when making his remarks, that such illegal puyments were just as much a contravention of the Civil Service Act prior to 1879 as after that period, and yet the hon. member for Bothwell rose and asked that a return should be made and the law should be guoted in order to ascertain whether, during the period he was himself in office, the same irregularities had existed, thongh my hon. friend had read the clanse to the Honse, which I have no doubt he heard, becanse he usually pays very close attention to what is going on. For his edification I will real it again. It is in the Act 31 Victoria, chapter 34, passed in 1878 :
"No allowance or compensation shall be made for any extra service whatever which any officer or clerk may be required, to perform in the department to which he belongs."
Nuch was the law until the amending Act was passerl. Of course it will beseen, by the reading of thisclause, that it might he held legal to employ a clerk in any other department than that to which he was attached. But the amended Act was passed, in order to prevent what Parliament consiclered a wrong and an abuse of the Act, providing that they should not be employerl in any department.

Mr. MII.Li (Bothwell). What year was that?
Mr. BOWELL. In 188: , 4: Victoria, chapter 4, section 149.

Mr. LAURIEIR. The object of the hon. gentleman, as he has frankly avowed, is to show that these irregularities, which were discusse l last year, have prevailed during the previous Administration. The Minister of Militia stated a moment ago that the whole subject had been investigated, in so far as the present Administration is concerned. I take issue with the statement, which is far too broad. It is not accurate to say that the whole subject has been investigated, in so far as the whole period covered by the Administration is concerned. On the contrary, the investigation last year only referred to a part of the period covered by the present Administration, and to the Department of the Interior almost exclusively. My hon. friend points out that if you want to establish a comparison of guilt, if you want to show that the late (iovernment has been as remiss as the present, let us have a full areturn, and certainly if any seuse of justice is to prevail, if the hon. gentleman's motion is not simply it catch motion, the suggestion of my hon. friend is one that ought to commend itself to his sense of fair play. Therefore he should anend his motion so as to include the whole period since the law has been in existence, that is from the year 1868, and then we will see where the guilt lies and what portion is attributable to one party or the other.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I do not understand from the explanation of my hon. friend from South Norfolk (Mr. Tisdale) that he is seeking to establish a comparison of guilt. I do not understand it is a question of guilt at all. It was alleged that certain irregularities have grown up gradually in connection with the Civil Service by infringement of the provisions of the Act, and it is not a question of guilt in regard either to the previous Government or to this fiovernment. The other night, when the Estimates were being discussed, a particular point was in controversy as to whether such irregularities existerl under any previous Administration, and a number of members of the House, including some who were members of the previous Administration, were under the impression that no such irregularities did exist at that time. The hon. member's information is different from that, and he asks for more light upon it. If any other hon. member desires to have more information on the subject, let him more an amemdment or a substantive resolution, and it will be carried.

Mr. LANDERKIN. I think, if we are $t$, have a return of any value to the House, one which will enable the House to see how the question stands, it will he necessary for this motion to be annended so that we may have an opportunity of seeing whether a departure has been made in any period and in what period. I, therefore, move in amendment that the return shall include every year from 1864 to 1891 inclusive.

Mr. TISDALE. I have no objection to that.
Motion agreed to.

THE LONDON ELECTION.

Mr. LISTER moved :

That a copr of the petition laid upon the Table of this House from Thonas Hobbs and others, complaining of the conduct of William Elliott, Esquire, County Judge of Middlesex, in relation to the revision of the voterg list for the Electoral District of the City of London, be forthwith furmished him for his information and to enable him to make such statement or answer to the charges therein contained as he may deem proper, and that the said petition and sny such answer as the said jadee may make be referred to a special committee of this House, to enquire into the trath of the several allegations therein, with a view of finding, whether such charges should be investigated by a commission.
He said : Before submitting the resolution which stands in my name to the judgment of the House, I shall take this opportunity of simply narrating the facts involved in that resolution. I would call the attention of hon. gentlemen to the fact that on the lat April instant, there was printed in the Votes and Proceerlings of this House a petition signed by a number of the electors of the city of London, and I have no doubt that that petition has been real by every hon. member of this House. I will say furthermore, that if the statements contained in that petition are true, about which I do not pretend at the present moment to express an opinion, that gentleman who is attacked and complained of in that petition has degraded the high otfice of a juilge and by his action he has deprived a citizen of this country of the right which he possesses, of the right which the electors of the constituency have declared he should have, and in his place an hon. gentleman sits who has no more right to a seat than a messenger it the door. Hon. gentlemen are of course aware that the conduct of William Elliott, Fsquire, the judge of the County Court of the County of Middlesex, is involved in this motion. That learned judge has been for many years the judge of the County Court of the County of Middlesex, and his son-in-law, Mr. Fraser, was appointed by the Government as the revising officer for the electoral district of the city of London: Not being a judge under the Franchise Act, an appeal lay from the final decision of the revising officer to the judge of the County Court in matters pertaining to the revision of the voters' lists. On the 10 th November last that court was convened, Mr. Fraser presiding as the revising officer for the purpose of revising the voters lists for the electoral district of the city of London, and the purpose, or one of the purposes for which the court was sitting was to hear and investigate and try the complaint of one $F$. W. Lilley, who had objected to and petitioned against 600 names which had been placed upon that list whicin he contended had no right to be upon the list. Objection was taken by the legal gentleman who was there to support the right of the names of these people to be upon the list, that the notice of objection which had been served in the interests of Mr. Lilley upon the people whose names he claimed had no right to be upon that list, was not sufficient, inasmuch as the words "not qualified" were the words used in the notice. That is to say, the people whose names appeared upon the list, appeared there as having a certain and particular qualification under the statute, and the natice that they were not qualified simply contained the words "not qualified," traversing and contradicting, and putting in issue, the qualification upon which they sought to have their names so put upon that list. Now, the revising officer, as he had a right to do, decided that the notices were not invalid, that the notices were not void, but that they were simply defective; and under the powers which the statute gives him, he had a right to adjourn the court and direct that new notices should be given to the people complained against. Acting within the statute, actingashe had a clear legal right to do, acting as a person a -ishing to decide fairly and honestly between the two parties, would have done, the revising officer declared, as I said before, that the notices were defective, but not void or invalid, and he adjourned the court for two weeks, or until the 27th day of November, and directed that new notices should be given to all the parties complained against. Although I do not think that the revising officer ought to have so ordered, as the court has since said that the notices were sufficient, that they were legal, I think he ought to have proceeded with the hearing of the complaints, lut in the exercise of the discretion which the statute gives him, he adjourned the court for the purpose which I have stated. These notices were all served, 600 new notices were served upon the persons whose names appeared upon the list, and whose yualification was objected to. Immediately after the revising officer had so orderell, those who were acting for the people whose names were complainel against, appealed to Judge Elliott against the decision of the revising officer, holding that the notices were defective, but not invalid and void; they appealed to Judge Elliott against that decision of the revising officer, with the hope, no roubt, that Judge Elliott would decide that the notices were utterly invalid and roil. Now, I may state here that the Court of Queen's Bench in Ontario has unanimously held that there was no appeal to Judge Elliott against that decision of the revising otticer, that it was a matter over which the revising officer had exclusive and final jurisdiction, and that having decided that these notices were defective only, and not void and invalid, there was no appeal, and the cases should have been gone on with and should have been tried by the revising officer without the intervention of Judge Elliott at all. However, an appeal was taken to Julge Elliott against that decision of the revising officer, and of all the decisions that a learned judge has placel on record, I challenge the production of one equal to this. In the tirst place he decides as follows:-

"I am of opinior that under the 33rd section my power is confined to the action of the revisising officer in dealing with the list ; that is to say, as topproper admigsion of names or the exolusion of them being as to something which is or should be in the list or which ought not to be in it. It is not said that there is an appeal to the county judge as to the proceedings of the revising offcer, which would be a comprehensive term, such as is used in section 26 . I consider that I have no anthority to interfere with the action of the revising officer in amending or adjourning the court to a future time."
"Whatever may be the importance of my raling as to the question whether the notice in question is insufficient or invalid and nall and void, as I am pressed to decide I do so, and rule as I have said, that it is invalid under the Act and so far the appeal is sustained, but in regnect to my authority to interfere with the revising officer's power to order amendment or to adjourn the court, I do not entertain the appeal."
He holds that he had no authority to interfere with the revising officer. He again expresses a doubt, as to his right to interfere with the revising officer's power to order an amendment or to adjourn the court ; but he expresses the opinion that the notices served by Mr. Lilley upon these people were invalid. Now, Sir, if that decision had stood, if there had iveen no further investigation of the matter by way of appeal, the result of that decision of Judge Eliiott would have been to leave 600 names upon the voters' list thatit was contended had no right to be upon that list. But as soon as Judge Elliott gave that decision, the revising officerat once refused to proceed with the hearing of the appeals which he had ordered might be heard upon a new notice being given to the people complainedagainst. He notified the parties who were proceeding, Mr. Lilley and of hisfriends, that in viewof the judgnentof Judge Eiliott hefelt that he could not proceed with theinvestigationunder and in pursuance of the order which he made, directing that new notices should be given, and that further consideration of these appeals should take place on the 2 th day of November. Then Judge Elliott havingso held, anapplication was made to the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice in Toronto, and the whole matter was there fully argued, the application being made for a mandatory order compelling the revising officer to hear the appeals under the general notice served, namely, the notice given as a reason for the appeal, that the parties whose names were upon the list were not qualified. Sir, the matter came before the Queen's Bench Division on that application, and I will read from the judgment :
"A notice under gec. 19 of the Electoral Franchise Act, R.S.C., chap. 5 , as amended by 52 Vic.. chap. 9 , sec. 4 , to a person whose name was objected to. for the purpose of having the name taken off the veters' list at the final revision, simply gave ' not qualified' as the ground of objec-tion:-

" Meld, sufficieut.

"The revising officer (who was nota judge) baving ruled that the notice was yalid, the person whose name was objected to appealed from that ruling to the county judge, who held that the notice was invalid, and the revising officer thereupon refused to go ou and hear the complaint. ${ }^{\circ}$ 'Held, that no appeal was given by section 33 of the Act from the revising officer's ruling; and therefore, the proceedings before the county judge were coram non judice.
"A mandamus mas granted."
The julgment of the court is a short one, and I will read it :
"The court held :-
" ${ }^{1}$. That the notice was sufficient.
" 2 That no appeal is given by the Act to the county judge from the revising officer's decision that the notice was valid : and therefore, that the proceedings before the county judge were coram non judice.

An order was issued by the court, in pursuance of that judgment, to the revising otticer commanding him to go on and hear the sppeals of Mr. Lilley and to dispose of them, and the trial of these appeals was proceeded with and 340 names appealel against were, by order of the returning officer, stricken from that list. The respondent, or the persons who were appealed against, then appealed from the deeision of the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice, to the Court of Appeall. After the revising officer had heard the appeals, after he had stricken 340 names off the voters' list, they appealed against the judgment of the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice, to the Court of Appeal of the Province of Ontario. The matter came on for argument and the court therein declined to give a formal judgment, for the reason that the mandatory order directed to be issued by the Court of Appeal had been obeyed and there was nothing for that court to do in the premises. But, Mr. Speaker, I will call the attention of the House and yourself to the fact, that upon that argument, and after the court had expressed its opinion that as the mandamus had been obeyed, there could be no object in giving a judgnent upon the question in dispute; yet at the request, at the urgent solicitation of Mr. Hellmuth, who was acting for the respondent, concurred in by the counsel who was acting for the appellant, at the joint solicitation of these two learned gentlemen, the court was urged in the strongest terms to give an expression of opinion for the guidance of Judge Elliott, before whom another appeal had been taken. I should mention that after the revising officer had stricken off these names, they again appealed to Judge Elliott; that appeal was pending, and for the guidance of Judge

Elliott, on the solicitation of the counsel for all parties stating expressly that that was their object, the court consented, after some hesitation, to give an expression of opinion. I may say that, before this appeal was taken to the Court of Appeal, Judge Elliott had given a judgment upon the second appeal to him from the revising officer, and his language was as follows:-
" An appeal was taken before me on the 20th November last, the question being whether certain notices of the 20th October, 1891, which had been given by one Frank Lilley objecting to certain names being allowcd to remain on the voters' list for the city of London were valid and sufficient to authorize the removal of these names. I then decided that in my opinion these notices were invalid for the reason that no grounds of objection were stated therein as required by the statute. The result of this decision, if carried into effect, would be to retain on the list these persous in respect of whom the alleged defective notices had been given. But this decision was nevercarried into effect, because by a decision of the Court of Queen's Bench the said notices were held to be sufficient, and under a mindate of the said court the revising officer proceeded to deal with these notices on that footing. This decision of the Court of Queen's Bench is now, it appears, appealed against, and the appeal is now pending before the proper appellate court. In this situation of matters, I reserve judgment on the question which is now brought before me as to the retention or remoral of their names until the result of this appeal shall be known. (Signed), W. Elliot, Judge, County Middlesex, 318t December, 1891.'

Tudge Elliott han given this statement upon the second appeal to him after the court had issued its, mandatory order and while there was an appeal pending against the judgment of the Queen's Bench Division to the Court of A ppeal. This judgment, Mr. Speaker, or rather these utterances of Judge Flliott showed that at the time they were penned by him, his intention was manifest that he intended to gire effect to the opinion, or to the judgment it may be, of the Court of Appeal, whatever that opimion or judgment might be. He held the judgment back. he reserved it, he retained it for the purpose of knowing what the opinion of the Court of Appeal was upon the question that had been decided by the Court of Queen's Bench, the Court of Queens Bench having decided that the notices were ralid and that the revising officer should proceed with them. As I said a few moments ago, when the matter came before the Court of Appeal that court expressed the opinion that there was nothing to deal with becanse the order issued by the Court of Queen's Bench had been obeyed by the returning otticer. Now, Sir, on the 25th of January last, an appeal came before the Court of Appeal of the Province of Ontario, and the court dismissed the appeal on the ground that the mandamus lad been obeyed, but, as I have also stated, the court was strongly urged by counsel on both sides to give an opinion as to the sufficiency of the notices for the guidance of the learned judge, who was holding back his judgment until the opinion of the court should be known. This, Sir, is the language of the court :
" Both parties united in requesting the opinion of this court as to the disputed sufficiency of the notices served on the parties whose qualification was challenged, and with some hesitation we have thought that it is better that we should comply with such request."
Chief Justice Hagarty, after discussing the question and pointing out the difference between the English Act and ours, concluded as follows:-

[^66]I think it sufficient to state ' not owner within the Act' or ' not tenant within the Act.'
"The distinction seems made in the Imperial Act as to objection to the nature of the interest, and to the value, as discussed in Simey ars. Dixon. Our Act does not draw this distinction, and I do not think we can hold these amended notices insufficient. They specifically attack the voter's interest, that is, his position as owner or tenant, and his right to that character as defined in the Franchise Act. Under such a notice he would not I conceive be liable to attaok on a merely personal ground, as a post offlce or customs official, etc., etc. The unamended notice appears to me to be more open to argument. It amounts to this: 'You are on this list as resessed on income.' 'I object that you are not qualified.' It may be argued that this is substantially the same as if amended like the other cases. It is in effect: 'you are assessed for income and your income (if any) does not meet the requirements of the Act,' or that you cannot fill the character of one qualified to vote on income. It seems rather difficult to point out a reliable distinction and I feel a difficulty in attempting so to distinguish. I think on the whole that the unamended notice should be beld sufficient."

Mr. Justice Burton said :

" Although it is not usual or desirable for a court to give a mere opinion upon questions not before them in a manner to be enforced by a judgment, I think that, under the circumstances,we may, without impropriety, make this an exception to the rule and yield to the urgent request made to us by the counsel on both sides to express our opinion as to the sufficiency of the original notice of objection which was alone before the Queen's Bench. I abstain from offering any opinion upon the new or amended notice.
"Speaking for myself, I cannot say that I feel any doubt as to the sufficiency of the notice of objection read as a whole.
"The list contains:
$"$ 1st. The name and address of the voter.
"2nd. His occupation.
"3rd. His qualification, whether as landlord or tenant.
"4th. The description of the property.
"To this the complainant in his notice, after setting forth the same particularly, objects that the party so referred to is not qualified.
"If he had added 'as alleged' I cannot conceive how a more precise and definite issue could be framed.
"But surely it cannot be expected that these notices should be framed with all the niceties and formalities of a plea in the old days of pleading where such an issue without the words 'as alleged' could only have been objected to by special demurrer.
"As to the suggestion that the revising officer could under it enter upon the consideration of mother and distinct ground of disqualification, my inclination is against it, although it is unnecessary to venture a final opinion ; but to call in aid again the old system of pleading and the reasoning by analogy upon it, I think it would have assumed the shape of a plea in confession and avoidance -thus: we admit that you are apparently qualified as a landlord, but we set up that you are disqualified as an alien or as one of the parties disqualified under the Act, and posssbly without such an affirmative statement the objection would not be open, but there is much force in the view entertained by some'that looking at the unlimited powers of adjournment and the fact that if qualified the party whose vote is objected to must know it and cannot be taken by surprise, the whole question may be open on the general denial of qualification, the intention of the Act being to afford the greatest facility to purge the list of those not entitled to be upon it."

Mr. Justice Maclennan said :

"We are requested to give our opinion upon the validity of the notices in question, and in deference to that request, I have considered them, and I have no hesitation in saying that $I$ consider the notices sufficient. The notice must be read with the list to which it refers just as a statement of defence is to be read with reference to the statement of claim, and that being so the objection 'not qualified' olearly and distinctly traverses the qualification specified in the list. It is not necessary to go so far as to uphold the present notices, but I am unable to see why such a specification of objections as we have here should not be sufficient to negative not merely the property or other qualifications mentioned in the list, but all the qualifications mentioned in sention 3 of the Act, entitled 'Qualificstion of Voters,' for the voter can never be taker py surprise by any of these objections, seeing that the knowledge in respect of them, sll must be within his own breast. The object of the prongedings of the revising officer is to purge the roll of persons not entitled by law to exercise the franchise, and the attainment of that object should not be bridled or degraded by technical objections or by a narrow construction of the legislation, but should be promoted as far as possible, without doing violence to the language of the enactments. It would be an intolerable scandal if, in an ordinary action in the High Court, such an objection as we have here under consideration could be allowed to defeat the rights of any of the parties, and $I$ diu not see why it should not be legally so in a proceeding concerning the franchise. The very large powers conferred on the officers by sections 24 and 26 of the Act, show that Parliament intended that the administration of the Act should not be frustrated by objections of form."
Now, Mr. Speaker, the extracts which I have read are from the judgments of three of the four judges of the Con't of Appeal in the Province of Ontario. I have shown that it was Julge Flliott's intention to await the judgment of the Court of Appeal leefore he undertook to decide the important matter which had been submitted to him liy way of appeal : and the judgments of these three gentlemen show heyond any guestion whatever that in their opinion it all events the notices which had been siven by Mr. Lilley, complaining of the six hundred names which were on the list and which he contemed should not be there, were sufficient under the Act for all purposes, concurring in the judgments of the three judges of the High Court of Justice. One would have thought, under the circumstances, that the learned julge of the County Court would have had no hesitation in following the dicta of the Court of Appeal and the High Court of Justice. Although I do not contend that he was bound to for so, hecause I recognize that the judgment of the County Court would le, in a proper matter of appeal, it final judgment; yet, sir, in accordance with the invariable practice in this country and in England. I do not hesitate to aver that it was the phin and manifest duty of Judge Flliott to have followed the decision of three judges of a superior court and the expressed opinion of three juiges of a still higher court. But, Sir, he thought proper not to do so, although his own paper, penned with his own hand, shows that before the matterwent to the Court of Appeal it was his intention to follow the opinion of the julges of that court. When their julgment turned out to be against the contention of the respondent, we timd yulge Elliott suddenly determining in his own mind that he will not follow the fudgment of the higher tribunals of the comtry, but that he will give a judgment of his own: he male up his mind not to le governed by those judgments. Sir, for the purpose of delaying proceedings, because events subsequent to that date show that what took place afterwards was merely done for the purpose of delay, Mr. Hellmuth, acting for the respondents, appealeil from the judgment of the court in review to the supreme Court. He gave notice of the appeal, hut nothing further was ever done. No steps were ever taken to perfect it, and I state here that I believe his object was simply to postpone judgment in the case untilafter the election. Whether that object was known to Judge Elliott or not, I will not say ; but, at all events, he took advantage of the delay, and said that while there was an appeal pending before the courts he would not give judgment in the matter. And so the matter stool until after the election had taken place. Sir, two days before the election, Judge Elliott was asked to give judgment, and I state here, on my responsibility as a member of Parliament and for the purpose of showing the intention of the judge, that it can be establishel that he said he would be governed by the decision of his colleagues. Yet he postponed giving judgment until after the election, although he had been asked to give it two days before the election. He was askell by Mr. Lilley's counsel to give judgment, and the request was opposed by the counsel on the other side on the ground that the matter was before the Supreme Court by way of appeal. He was asked to postpone his judgnient, and he did so. The appeal to the supreme Court was never completed, it was never perfected ; there never was, as it matter of fact, anything in it: and on the 2 (th of February the election took place in the city of London. These names were upon the revised list still. Although they had been struck off by the revising otficer, they still remainel upon the list as hond fide votes, and out of those votes that were stricken of by the revising ofticer, numbering 131, 128 voted for Mr. Carling and 3 woted for Mr. Hyman. Striking off those 131 mames, Mr. Hyman had a majority of $\mathbf{1 6}$, previous to the recount before the junior julge of the city, and after that recount he had a majority of ix of the legal votes of the electors of the city of London. He is, therefore, to-day entitled to the seat usurped, I say, by the hon. Minister of Agriculture. He is entitled to it by a majority of 2 L of the legal and qualified voters of the city of London. Sir, hy the grossest act of usurpation that has ever been perpetrated in this or any other free country, he is prevented from taking that seat and enjoying the honour which his fellow-citizens thought proper to confer upon him. On the 9 th of March, after the election hand taken place, after the High Court of Justice hat decided that those notices of appeal were sulficient, and ordered the revising officer to hear them, after three out of the four judges of the Court of Appeal hal declared, at the request of all parties to the proceedings, that these notices were sufficient, after Judge Ellintt had declared that he would be governell by the decision of the Court of Appeal after he knew that without those bat rotes Mr. Carling could not take his seat, he decided, in the face of all this, that those bad votes should be counted, and it is by virtue of those bad rotes, and by virtue of the decision of Judge Elliott, the hon. gentleman holds his seat in this House. Sir, I say furthermore that it can be shown that the friends of the Conservative party in the city of London knew, the day hefore the judgment was given, holding that these votes should remain upon the list, what the judgment of Judge Elliott was groing to be. I state here again that, during the time these appeals were pending before the judge, within in few days of the day in which he gave that judgment, he was taking an active part in the political contest then going on in the city of London. I can prove, and I state it here on my responsibility as a member of this House, and if it is not true I am willing to take the conseqences of my statement, that he was a contributor in the London Free Press, the Conservative organ in that city, of leading articles, letters and correspondence. under an assumed name, favouring the candidature of the gentleman who now sits here as a representative of that city and opposing the gentleman who was then contesting the seat. I say that if these facts are true, Julge Elliott has degraded the high position he fills. He has subordinated his duty as a judge to his feelings ans a partisan, and he has forever destroyed his usefulness as a judge in this country. It is charged that his whole conduct showel that he used the machinery of the law for the purpose of putting his political friend into a place which the people of London declared he should not occupy. He has defied the will of the people of London in a matter of the gravest importance to the state. The dangers which we feared when this infamous act was first placed upon the statute-book are being verified. They are being given substance, if the charges contained in that petition are true. Sir, that gentleman has defiel, as I say, the voice of the electors of Londonly phacing in the seat of the gentleman elected by the majorit $y$ of coters of that city one who receivel the minority of votes. He has done the greatest and gravest wrong that can be done to the citizens of a free country in lefying their opinion and keeping the candidate of the minority in the seat he has no right to occupy. If these charges le true-and their truth can be proved-I Indge Elliott has impaired his' usefulness, nay more, he hats destroyed his usefulness as a julge, aud it hecomes of paramount importance to the people that matters of this kind should be thoroughly ventilated and investigated. I need not here call the attention of hon. gentlemen to the utterances of the independent press of this comentry. Go where you will throughout Canada, and wherever there is an independent newspaper, with leanings to the Govermment. that paper has come out openly and bohlly in denunciation of this act of Julge Elliott as it is possilhe by words. I need only call the attention of the hon. gentleman to an article which appeared in the Eremin! Jourual a short time ago. The first few lines of the article place the matter in a light as strong is it is possible to place it from the standpoint of the independent journals of this country. The article says:
"It is rarely, indeed, that the bench is impeached in Parliament. Judge Elliott, of London, attaing a very unusual notoriets. Intrusted with the dispensation of justcan be placed in the hands of a human being, Judge Elliott is accused of wilfully, deliberately, and for low and mean onds, violating his sacred trust. This which he is accused of doing is a far graver crime than any ordinary felony. If the accusation is proven in Parliament to be well-founded, the petition which a Liberal member, Mr. Lister, offfrs calling for a declaration of Judge Elliott's unfitness to remin on the bench, should neither be disregarded nor dodged ly the Conservative majority."
Now, Mr. Speaker, I repeat that, if the charges contained in that petition are true, if the representations made by 30 or 40 of the leading citizens of the city of London and contained in the petition presented to this House, are true, there is no man, 1 believe, on either side of this House hut must admit that that gentleman is unfit and unworthy to enrole himself with the ermine, that he is unfit to be a julge of any court in this land. The charges made are specific. They are that he has disregarded the judgments of a higher court, that he has shown himself to be a politicalpartisan and that he has subordinated his duties as judge to his feelings as a partisan. I do not know what position the hon. gentleman leading the Goverument intends to take on this question. It may be that they will say that this House has nothing to do with investigating the charges which have been made against this judge. If that is their contention, I at once take issue with them on that statement of the case. We have here the fact that under an old statute he might have heen impeached before the fiovernor in Council. We have the Consolidated Statutes creating a Court of Impeachment which was afterwards abolished by the Revised Statutes of the Dominion of Canada, and that provides that the Governor in Council may issue a Commission for the purpose of investigating charges made against a County Court julge. I say that, as far as these charges are concerned, this House, being the high court of this country, has a right to investigate these charges for the purpose of ascertaining whether there are sufficient grounds for asking the Covermment to refer them to a Commission under the statute, and that is the course I am pursuing to-lay. Although Mr. Bourinot, in his work on Constitutional History, lays it down that it is competent for this House to deal with County Court jallyes the same as Superior Court judges may le dealt with, still the argument may be used, that a peculiar tribunal having been createl to investigate cases of this kind, these charges should be relegated to that tribunal. I repeat that we have a right to ask that these charges contained in a petition which has been laid on the Table of the House should be investigated by the House, and, if these charges are proven, then we can invoke the power the statute gives, we can invoke the action of the court the statute creates, to investigate the charges contained in that provision. I leg. therefore, to move the resolution of which I have given notice.

Mr. MON: RIEFF. I think that the importance of this resolution reeguires that it should have at the hands of this Honse a careful consideration. To deal with a charge affecting one of the judiciary of this country is a subject most delicate in its nature indeed, and I think, as Mr. Bourinot in his work says, in all such matters the House cannot proceed with too great a caution and deliberation, and I hope that both sides of this House are prepared to deal with this question and to investigate it according to the language I lave nsed, with great caution and great deliberation. Ithink, if there is any class of people whom in this country we have a right to be proud of, it is the bench. I presume that at present it is more proper to speak of the bench of Ontario, whose unsullied reputation, the integrity of its judges, the ability they have displayed, are all, I think, matters of congratulation for us, and, if there is anything we have a right to feel proud of, it is the long list of names of the judges of this country who honour and adorn the bench. We have a petition hefore us today the first four or five pages of which set out a history of the facts of the different dates of the judgments and the different applications that were made to Judge Elliott and to the different courts in this province. I presume there is nopersonin this House who dreams for one moment of asserting that an error of judgment is to be a cause of inppeachment in this country. We are to be congratulated that such is not a cause for impeachment, because, if it were, the time of our courts would be constantly taken up in reviewing, in impeachment trials, the judgments of judges which they were revising. Such a course would be absolutely absurd, and every person in this House, I am sure, would repudiate it. There have been, in this House, two or three occasions where matters of this kind have come before it. I will read to you an extract from the remarks of Mr. Blake, when a member of this House, on an application for the impeachonent of a judge, I think the juilge of the County of Kent. In explaining what was an impeachable offence and what action of a julge could be impeached, Mr. Blake said:

[^67]I think this House will agree with me that that is a fair statement of what should justify the bringing of a judge before us for impeachment. Now, the hon. gentleman who has preceded me (Mr. Lister), has taken upon himself ia certain amount of responsibility, and at the same time not a great deal, either. That gentleman, for the purpose of lacking up, I presume, his opinions and this petition, has said that the independent press of this country have assumed to act judicially and have assumed to try Julge Elliott, and have found him guilty and condemmed him in their columns. Sir, I do not think the idea will commend itself to this House for one minute, that because a few newspapers have condemned Judge Elliott, therefore the Honse is bound to condemul him also. Sir, if there is anything disgraceful connected with this London election, it is the partisan and violent articles that have filled the columns of the Reform newspapers since and before the decision complained of was given. The Reform press, prior to judgment being given, attempted, I may say, to burke justice, and by threats to influence the judiciary of the County of Middlesex to give a decision in accordance with the desire of the Reform party. The result of the London election was to place the Hon. Mr. Carling at the head of the poll; I say this without fear of contradiction, notwithstanding the assertions of the hon. member for Lambton (Mr. Lister). Nevertheless, the Reform press, and the London Adrertiser, the press of the gentleman whom Mr. Cariing defeated, have used expressions against Judge Elliott that no man can possibly approve of at the present stage of matters. On the Ist April that paper, in speaking of Judge Elliott's action, said:
"Every slay the press of the country is becoming fully seized of the methods pursued by Judge Elliott and his co-conspirators to secure as seat for Mr. Carling to which he can lay no legal claim."
Stating on their own authority that Judge Elliott was a co-conspirator to defraud the citizens of the city of London of their due representation. Sir, that is a very bold statement to make, and it is one that no person, even on the floor of this House, would dare to make. On the 22nd March, the same paper, in speaking of this matter, describes the Hon. Mr. Carling as the member for Judge Elliott. Perhaps that, may be taken as a joke, but it is not a class of writing that ought to find acceptance in this country. He has also been compared with Judge Jeffries, in 1685. Prior to any investigation having taken place that paper, and others in the country holding the same political opinions, have chosen to speak of Judge Elliott in that way. My hon. friend took a great deal of pleasure a few moments ago in quoting the judg. ment of the Court of Appeal in this case. He must know that the Chief Justice of the Court of Appeal is the Hon. Mr. Justice Hagarty, a man with unsullied reputation and a credit to the bench of this country. The hon. gentleman forgot that the same Chief Justice Hagarty, whose judgment he is to-day quoting against that of Judge Elliott, but a few years ago came under the lash of the same paper from which I have read these extracts. Now, let me remind the House that a few years ago an election took place in the city of London lretween the Hon. Mr. Carling and Mr. Walker, and Mr. Walker defeated Mr. Carling by means that I need not waste a moment's time in attempting to describe to this House. Every member knows it who has read the record. Sir, what did the London Adeertiver say at that time, when Chief Justice Hagarty pronomnced julgment against Col. Walker, disqualifying him? The Adlcertiser of Jannary, 18it, said:
"By special telegram we learn from Toronto that Major Walker has been disqualified by the bench of judges. This prevents him from being a candidate for election to the Honse of Commons during the present Parliament. There were several reasons which led to the expectation that this result would be arrived at. Tweuty years of Tory power have had the effect of packing the bench with violent political partisans, some of whom can ill conceal their leanings in favour of their own colleagues and allies. ". By the assistance of Justices Hagarty, Gwyune and Galt, the Tories have managed to have the most severe penalty inficted upon Major Walker. Let then revel in their short-lived triumph, it will do them little good."
Sir, I think the hon. gentleman who moved this motion might very well have left the comments of his own press alone. Now let us consider this petition. The petition, as the mover statel, sets out the circumstances in detail. For a moment let me call your attention to what the hon. gentleman at the time said : it was as follows:--"I do not at the present moment attempt to express any opinion as to the truth of the petition." The hon. gentleman presented his petition here as it had been presented to him, but in his opening remarks he said that he wished it to be understool that he did not attempt to express any opinion as to its truth. Now, Sir, what is this petition: The first few pages of it'are a detail of the different applications that were made to the different judges. It is true an application was made on the loth of November to Judge Elliott, in reference to the validity of certain notices that had been served by one Lilley. 1 will call the attention of the House to the fact that at this time the trial of the Hyman protest had not come off, and Judge Elliott was not evell aware that the London election would have been upset and a new election ordered, hut at that time, and at the earliest moment when the question was brought before him, he declared that the notice was invalid, that it was not a defective notice, but that it was one that was invalid and thus incapable of being amended. These proceedings took place as you are aware, and after the election the question came back to that same judge to decide upon the validity of this very same notice. What did he do? He maintained his former opinion, he never changed it, he gave the question his careful consideration and pronounced a judgment that is aboundingin authority and in law, and a judgment that is approved of by many a revising barrister, and by a number of the judges of the different County Courts of this country to-day. Before going into the petition any further there are one or two things which I think we have a right to look into. The hon. gentleman who introduced the petition will not, vouch for its truth, therefore let us see what class of persons have signed the petition aeking this House to take the extraordinary step of impeaching Judge Elliott. I look at the list of names on the petition and I find it commences with the name of one Thomas s. Hohbs, and it ends $w$ ith the name of one ( ieorge M. Reid. I certainly am not going to take up the time of this House by referring to all the different names, but I think it would be rery interesting for the Honse to know what part Thomas S . Hoblos took in the election, and I think Judge Flliott has a right to know who his aceusers ate. He has a right to know, seripturally spaaking, whether they are in a position to throw the first stone, and so I will occupy the time of the House for a few moments in quoting from the evidence at the Lomion election trial, which I think will show that this Mr. Hobbs, the purist who leats off this petition, is a man who was nomm when there was a good deal of lager beer and cheese groing. It was such evidence which guided the judges who tried the election petition in declaring that Mr. Hyman had not been unduly elected. I will call your attention now to the evilence of Albion Jones, and I take this from the J/ail as being probably an independent paper :
"Was at two meetings in band room. John Stevenson notified me to attend. He first said I was needed there with the band, and they were engaged. and Hobbs would be responsible. I got there at the first meeting about nine oclock on the 20th of February, the night Sir John spoke in the drill shed. Brown and Hobbs were there. Hobbs had a list of names: called them out and asked how each was going to vote. Hyman was not there then but came in afterwards. Hyman made a speech and said if he was elected it would be for the benefit of the country. Just after he closed refreshments were brought in by Halpin in a clothes basket about the size of the reporter's desk. One basket had bottled ale and the other had glasses. There were somewhere between two and three dozen bottles in the basket. The basket was open and passed close to Mr. Hyman. The basket was shoved under the bench. Frank Halpin and Durkin opeued the keg and it was then passed round. There was a box of cigars brought there to : it was on the desk ; they were passed round. A subscription list was passed round. It was while Mr. Hyman was there. Men simply signed their names. Mr. Hyman did not sign. Thomas Hobbs has it. Mr. Hyman said he could not have anything to do with it now but he might afterwards. I was at another meeting on the 24th or 25th. Hobles was there. I went at eight o'clock. There were speeches made. Hobbs spoke. There were tro quarters of lager drunk that night. It was drunk by all that were there. Crackers and eheese were given with the beer. It was going on when I left about 10.30 . There were 25 or 30 present."

At which Mr. Justice Ferguson remarkel :
"Is, it possible so much liquor was drank in so short a time."
No, Sir, the person who heads the list of names on this petition was the moving spirit at the lager beer meeting in the city of London. The gentleman whose name closes the list, George M. Reid, was the treasurer of the election fund during that election, and he had charge of the books, and when the election came on these books were all out of the road, so that his Lordship remarked at the trial, that this manner of destroying books which was so frequent at the different elections was something that harl to be stigmatized very severely when the opportunity arose. This same Mr. Reid, in giving his evidence, said:
" Now. do you know who took that box away?-I don't know, it was taken away while I was absent from the city.
. Now, you took up the subscriptions?-Yes.
"Where is the book?-I destroyed it. It was on that condition that the subscriptions were entered in it.
"- When did you destroy it?-Not later than Mayperhaps April.
"Will you swear that you destroyed it before the election petition was filed?-No.
"، Will you swar it was after the filing in April?-No.
" You were trustee of that fund?-Yes.
Mr. Moserifff.
"، How much did you collect?-About $$ 2,000$.
"And what did you do with the money?-I kept no account.
"Now, was there only one subseription book?-Yes.
" How did you destroy it?-I sent it to the paper mill."
There is the evidence of this Mr. Reid who is the last named on the list. Now, Sir, it will be als interesting to look for a monent at the character of a few of the groups on this list. There are four names here-Williams, Macpherson, Ferguson and Sabine-to which I wish to call attention. I ca? very well understand how those who carried around the petition got the signatures. They went into Mr. Pavey's store andasked him to sign it, and he said: Idecline to sign this petition against Judge Elliott but there are plenty of clerks upstairs, and you can go up and get it signed by as many as you want. So they got all the clerks in Mr. Pavey's store to sign it, but not Mr. Pavey himself. Then they went to Mr. Struthers, who is one of the leading merchants of London, and asked him to sign it. He said: I do not want to sign any petition against Judge Elliott, I know what kind of a man he is, but you can get my clerks to sign it. So they went upstairs, and got six of his clerks to sign it : but Mr. Struthers's name is not on the list. Yon can very well see the class of people whose mames have heen brought forward and placed upon the list. Now, immediately prior to the election, a meeting in Mr. Hyman's interest was held of what are called the coloured folks in a certain part of London, at which in or 7.5 people were present. A number were there who hal come from a tea mecting to attend it. The chairman of that meeting was examined at the trial, and here are a few quotations from his evidence :

" The Chairman.

"They began to leave the tea mecting for the beer": When did you think you had enough to start your neet-ing?-A bout $100^{\circ}$ clock.
$\because$ How many?-About 50.
"OYu had speeches and the band played?-Yes.
"What time did Mr. Hyman come in?-About halfpast 11.
"Did he make a speech ?-Yes.
"Who served the beer?-I don't know.
"‘Were the burrels empty?-No.
"When was the word given to attack the beer?-A quarter after 12 was the first $I$ aw any beer.
"Do you mean to say the beer stood in the corner all that time, and that you kept the coloured voters there till quarter past twelve without a drink?-I saw no beer drank before that.

Why was it not tapped sooner?-There were a good many people in the room who were not expected there.
" In fact, the less people the more beer; 24 gallons would not go very far. And you waited till the crowd reduced before the order 'to the taps' was given?-I don't know.
"Where was the beer kept? - In the comer of the platform, near the teacher's deak. I saw it when I took the chair.
"' You didn't sit on the barrel ?-No.
" Were there any other form of refreshments there?A man came in with a basket of pigs' feet pickled.
" Fou did not get anything, to eat at the social?-No. What time were the pigs' feet served ?- They were passed around about eleven.
"What were the order of proceedings? - We had pigs' feet, the band played, and there were speeches ass told you "Did it [the beer] stand there openly in front of the congregation?-There were overcoats on the barrel."
Now, Sir, turning to the petition itself, I find that it purports to make three charges, neither of which is specific, and neither of which, in fact, amounts to a charge. One sets out in detail the proceedings referred to by the hon. member who mored the motion, giving Juilge Ellintt's judgment and the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench. Well, I may tell you that the Court of Queen's Bench gave no written juilgment, but merely decided on the spot that the notices were sufficient. The petition also sets out the views of the judges of the Court of Appeal. I admit that the opinion expressed by the judges of the Court of Appeal is not in accoriance with the views entertained by Judge Flliott prior to the election trial, or his subsequent decision, both of which, by the hy, were the same. Now, this House should hear in mind that the views expressed by the Court of Appeal wats no judgment whatever. It was merely an expression of opinion, given, not at the refuest of Julge Elliott, but at the request of the comsel whom the mover of this resolution named, and I defy any hon. gentleman here, who examines the whole record of Judge Elliott's decision, as well as all the arguments and statements in this whole transaction from first to last, to say that he ever professed or undertook to be guided by or to follow the opinion of the judges of the Court of Appeal. as stated by the mover of this resolution. In no place will you find anything of the kind. Judge Elliott tills it responsille position ; he had considered this matter when it came before him at the first; he leciled that the notices were invalid, but out of leference to the request of the different lawyers engaged in the case, he withheld his decision until the Court of Appeal had expressed its opinion. That court gave uo judgment, and one of the judges, Mr. Justice Osler, said that he would express no opiniou on the question, because it would only be an obite, dictum at any rate. There is another peculiarity of this petition. Though it states that Julge Elliott's opinion is one way, and the opinion of the Court of Appeal another way, there is not a word in it to indicate whether Judge Elliott's lecision was right, or the opinion of the Court of Appeal was right. I suppose that the person who framed this petition, a lawyer in the city of London, must have done it carefully, and must have had all the facts before him ; and yet he could not frame a charge-which would be the foundation of an impeachment-to the effect that Judge Elliott was knowingly and wrongfuily perverse in giving the decision he did. If you will read the petition from beginning to end, you will not find a single expression in it indicating that Judge Elliott's judg. ment is wrong, it nay be perfectly right. It is not for this House to say, and it is not part of my argument to say, whether his judgment is right or not. The question is whether it was given conscientiously or not, and whether or not it comes within the class of cases described by Mr. Blake in the remarks he made which I have quoted. Now, the second charge in this petition is that Judge Elliott has written newspaper articles of a violent and partisan character ; but before passing to that I think it would be only proper that we should for a few monents consider some of the reasons that Judge Elliott himself has given for coming to the decision he did. Now, I must tell you that the Court of Queen's Bench itself is the court that directed the revising barrister to proceed with a hearing of the appeal. They decided that the original notice of appeal was good, and they issued a mandamus directing this revising officer to go on and hear the appeals. Now, only a few weeks after that a similar application was made to the Chancery livision of the High Court of this province, some of the judges of which court had previously directed the issue of a mandamus to other revising barristers in just such cases as this; but when the three judges of the Chancery Division came together, Chancellor Boyd and his associate judges, in the case of the North Perth voters lists, in re Hesson and Lloyd, they held that they had no authority whatever to control the action of a revising barrister by mandamus. To quote a few words from the judgment :
"To assert the jurisdiction now invoked would savour, to my mind, of unwarrantable judicial usurpation, both becruse the revising barristers sittings are not subordinate judicial courts quoad the province, and because these functionaries are officers of Canada engaged in the public work of the Dominion, over whom the High Court of Justice for Ontario has not inherent or statuable jurisdiction.'
Now, you will see that in our own High Courts we find three judges of the Queen's Bench issuing a mandamus to a revising barrister, and we find in the Chancery Division, within at month of this decision, that division refusing to issue a mandamus against the revising officer for North Perth. Under such circumstances, it is almost a wonder that the newspapers have not teemed with abuse against one or other of those courts because they have taken each an entirely different position, three judges holding that there is jurisdiction and the other three holding that there is no jurisdiction whatever in the High Court to make such an order. I would like to refer for a few moments to the Act itself and show the cause of all this trouble. Now, the notice of appeal that was given in the city of London and which is the leginning of all this trouble, was an appeal notice against a number of people who were on the voters' list. The notice did not give any reason of appeal. It sirr.ply, in the column under which a reason for the appeal should have been given, used the words " not qualified." Now, the judge of the County of Middlesex has held throughout that that was no ground or reason whatever, that it might have been just, as well to leave out the words " not qualified" and simply say: "I object to your name being on the voters list." That is the contention. It might be fair to look at a few of his reasons and see whether this contention is not a very reasonable one indeed. If you will refer to the section of the Act, you will see that any person desiring to appeal against another whose name is upon the voters' list, shall give a certain notice in a certain manner to the person whose name he desires to have struck off the list. A form of notice is given in the schedule, marked D. Let me read it:
"I. of the electoral district of under the Flectoral Franchise Act. give notice that I will apply to have the list of voters for polling district number of the said electoral district, for the year liminarily revised, amended to add to orethe case may be.)'
Then follows: "State the name or names objecterl to, with the grounds therefor." It says distinctly you are to give "the grounds therefor." Now, Judge Elliott held that unless some grounds were given the notice would be invalid from the beginning and not even amendable; and in support of that opinion, he quoted an authority which is well worth looking at. He quoted, among several others, the case of Bridges $r \times$. Miller. That was a case under the English Act. which is not exactly the same as ours, but which has very large powers of amendment. The power of amendment in that det reads as follows:-"The revising barrister may correct any mistake which is proverl to be made in any claim or notice of objection." So that in England the revising harrister has power to correct any mistake which is known to have taken place in the notice. By our statute, there is also a very large power of amemdment. The question as stated by Judge Elliott is this: This notice is invalid, it cannot he amended, and he quotes the case of Bridges against Miller, Law Reports, 20 Queen's Bench, page 287. That was a case similar to our own, in which the reasons of appeal had to be given, and the reasons given in that particular case to have the voter's name struck out were that he had not resided at id Clifton Street, Norwich. Well, a person would naturally think that when that notice came before the revising officer, he would allow the party objecting to amend his notice by specifying the particiular qualification wanting. The fact of a person not residing at 12 Clifton Place wouldenot be ground for striking his name off, but if it were stated that he hal not resided there for six calendar months, that would have been a sufficient reason. The revising officer allowed the amendment, and the other side protested. The other party contended, as the Conservative party in London contended, that the notice was bal ali, initio, and they took the case before the Court of Queen's Bench in Englani, which is piesided over by Lord Coleridge. They contended that the revising barrister ought not to have amemled the notice, which was wrong from the begimming. It was argued liy the opposite side that the notice was amendable. What does Lord Coleridge say" He saill:
" I am of opinion that the notice of obiection was bad. In order to be registered as a parliamentary voter, a freeman of Norwich must have resided within seven miles of the city polling booths for six months."
The only insufficiency in that case was the omission of the words: You had not resided at No. 12 Clifton Street, for six calendar months; and Lord Coleridge held that that omission vitiated the notice from the leginning :
"This objection, which is dated August 12 , simply says: - You do not reside at 12 Clifton Street, Norwich.' Take it that Clifton Street is in Norwich, and that the nonresidence imputed is proved, there is still nothing to show that the freeman either has or has not resided for the six months required by law. The objection, therefore, is no objection at all. It has been amended by the revising barrister; but there are limits to his statatory power of amendment. He can ' correct ' $R$ ' mistake, but the defect in this objection is in no sense a' mistake.' The objection is accurate enough in point of expression. Its fanlt is that it is bad, and the revising barrister, in making it good, has excceded his power of amendment. The appeal must be allowed."
In that Justices Pollock and Hawkins concurred, and the notice was held to be bad from the beginning, and the amendment made by the revising barrister was struck out and the names were allowed to remain on the voters' list as if they had never been appealed against. Such is one of the decisions referred to by the judge who has given this question his most careful consideration, and it must be remembered that his decision was formed, not after the seat was vacant, but weeks and months before the election trial came off and before it was known that there would be another election for the city of london. Let us think over this matter for a moment. If no reasons for appeal were to be given, see what a hardship you would infict upon the voter. There are different classes of franchise voters. There are income-franchise voters, there are tenants, there are property holders, all sabject to certain rules under the statute entitled to be cin the franchise list. Take the case of an income voter. The first requisite is that he shall be of age, the next is that he shall be a British subject, the next that he shall be a resident of Canada, the next that he shall have an income of $\mathbf{5} 300$, the next that he has derived that income for 12 months preceding, and that he has leen a resident of Canada for 12 months and is a resident of the polling district. If the words " not qualified" are to be considered a ground or a reason to be given to that man for his name being struck off, see the position in which you put him. He would not know which of all these groumds his rote would be challenged on. It would be just as well to omit the words" not yualified "and simply to give him notice that he isappealedagainst. Can it be supposed possible that Parliament intended that. instead of giving a reason for the objection, the appellants should throw at rate Mawche notice at the roter and simply say he is not qualified. That is the prosition which the judge took, and I think it is very reasonable. A man might be illand unable to come to court. What witnesses has he to semd there: He woid have to send a witness to prove that he was of age. He would have to send another witness to prove that he was a British subject, another witness to show what his income was, and also another witness who could trace him twelve months back and show that he hat received that income all that time. Would it be reasonable to suppose that that would be a proper construction of the statute? Even if you think that this contention of the hon. juige of the County of Middlesex is wrong, and that the notice is quite sufficient, that by no means makes him liable to impeachment, it is sufficient to consider, whether he came to it conscientious conclusion, or whether he was perverse and gave a judgment which was knowingly improper for the purpose of keeping Mr. Carling in his seat. Let me call your attention to section 33 of the Act which provides for an appeal from the decision of a revising barrister to the judge, anl about the midille of the section you will see that it is provided that, when any person desires to appeal from the decision of the revising larrister, it is not enough for him to say he appeals, but he must give at least one reason for appealing against that decision. There is no stronger language in one section than in the other. The one section says he must give his grounds. What are grounds but reasons: This section says he must give at least one reason. Now, when this Franchise Act was being discussed somse remarks to which I will refer were mate on that very question which we are now discussing, as to the meaning of the words that a reason or a ground must be given for the objection. I quote from the Hansard of 188i, page 2361. Let us see what the House said on the subject then. Sir John Macdonald says :
"At least one reason-we cas put it in that way."
"Mr. MILLS. If I nnderstand the First Minister rightly, he proposes to leave it discretionary with the judge to say that if the party proposes to proceed upon any other reason than that expressly assigned, he peed not investigate the matter, and may throw the whole thing out.
"Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No ; I did not say that at all. That is not my intention.
"Mr. DAVIIFS. I suppose the hon. gentleman means by this that there must be a substantial reason for appealing stated ins the notice. Suppose while a man is ont of court for a moment the revising officer strikes his name

Mr. Moncrieff.
off. The man wants to appeal ; he may give us a reason for being on the list, I nwn a property; but what reason would he give for appealing ragainst the decision? He must state that the decision is wrong for some reason.
" Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No man would appeal without haring some reason.
"Mr. BOWELL. Suppose the reason he gives is: I am qualified, Suppose the revising officer says, you are not of age; he says, I am.
" Mr. DAVIES. Fven a Minister of the Crown can be ast ray on this matter. No County Court judge would receive the appeal."
That is what the member for Queen's (Mr. Davies) sitys. Further on, in discussing the sinne section, Mr. lavies says:
" There is a distinction which, perhaps, the hon. gentleman did nut see. The reason for appealing must be part of the notice, and without your reason for appealing your whole notice fitils.:
so that the crime of the county juige of the County of Middlesex is that he has given a decision in actcordance with the common-sense views expressed hy the member for Queen's (Mr. Daties). Now, hating shown, I think, very clearly that the julge has not only not acted in a perverse or wrong mamer, but that he las the weight of authority to hear out the decision which he gave, let me remind you at the same time that there is no allegation whatever made that he has come to a wrong conclusion, so that, perhaps, in arguing as I have done. I may have been taking up the time of the House, because no one will find in the whole of this petition iny charge or allegation of wrong-doing in the decision which the julge has given. Now, the next charge in the petition is that he has leen guilty of writing articles in the public press in the city of London. Every person knows that when a charge of impropriety is made against any one. it ought to be clearly and distinctly made. 1 find it staterl in Bourinot's work that if it is intended to proceed by a petition against a judge all the allegations should be specifically stated so that the julge may have a full upportunity of answering the indictment as presented against him. Now, I would ask any hon. member if there is any indictment here against the julge in respect to the second part of the petition: The secoull part of the petition says that he wrote articles in the newspapers of a political character. Well, Sir. I never knew yet that a julge was prevented from having political opinions upon public questions. I do not think that that is either law or right. I fancy if you polled the whole judiciary in this country, you would hardly find a julge who would hesitate to give you his views upon the trade question of this comutry. Have you ever found a julge yet who considered that his mouth was closed in respect to political matters? Does any man iin this House consider that because a man oceupies a seat on the bench, he ceases to hold any view's on political questions, that he never reads the news. papers, that he never discusses political trade yuestions ? I can see no ground whatever for impeachment in that. Now, the petition goes on to say that he wrote newspaper articles of a violent and partisan character, bearing upon she revision of tine voters listsand upon the political questions of the day. Such an assertion is male in the petition, although the hon. member who moves this motion would not vouch for the truth of it. If the hon. grntleman knew Judge Elliott had heen guilty of writing violent and partisan articles that would be condemned by people of common sense, why does not the hon. gentleman prownee them. when he has only to step but a litte way from this Chamber to tind them?
Mr. DAVIEs (P.E.I.) That is not the clarge.
Mr. MONCRIEFF. I will read the charge:
"The said William Elliott, during the said election and while the said appeals were pending before him, contributed editorially and also under an assumed name to the London Free Press newspaper, urticles of a violent and partisan character learing upon the shid revision of the voters' list and political questions of the day, and particularly upon the said election for the said electoral district and in support of the candidature of the said Carling and against the said Hyman."
That is exactly what I said lefore, he is charged with writing violent partisan articles concerning this election. I repeat that we are the tribual who ought to have an opportunity of judging whether the articles are of a violent or partisan chatacter; and if the writings are to be found within a few steps of where we stand now, they ought to be produced, and the gentleman who moved the resolution ought to take upon himself the responsibility of saying: I pledge my position here, as member of this House, that Judge Elliott wrote those articles. Or, at any rate, he ought to produce the atfidavit of some person of veracity who would say to this House that there was ground for helieving that he did write these articles. The hon. gentleman, at the legimning of his remarks, said he would not vouch for the truth of what is contained in the petition, but when he comes to that part of the petition conceruing articles in the Free Pres., and the files of that paper are at hand, he should at least bring them forward and point out the articles, and let us judge whether the articles were proper to be written by a judge or not. Now, if the judge came here to respond to charges in that petition, he would have a right to know what the articles were that he was charged with writing, so that he might be asked whether he wrote them. The very object of bringing the charge here is, first, that it may be brought to our knowledge, and that we may ourselves judge whether the article alleged to have been written by this man is one that, in our opinion, a julge ought not to have written. But such is not the position. The article is not producel, we have unthing whatever upon which to base an indictment. Charges like this are too vague upon which to base an indictment of the meanest criminal that was ever brought before a court. Now. can you fancy an indictment like this which would stand for a moment? The only conclusion I can come to is this: I have a right to assume that there was no article in the Free Press ever written by Judge Elliott that would not stand the light of day before this House of Commons. I have a right to assume that, because this petition has been carefully drawn, and the best showing that could be made has doubtless leen male by the lawyer for the Reform interest in the city of London who drew up this petition. The next part of the charge is :

[^68]be sent to the julge for the purpose of answering it? It lloes not state the person to whom the language is used, and, above all, it does not state the language itself by which we can judge if it wias improper to be used by a judge. I would call at. tention $t$, the different cases of a similar character that have crome before us. There was a case in reference to Justice Wood, of Manitola ; there was another, I think. in reference to one of the County Court judges. 1 fail to find a petition in any one of these cases that does not specifically and clearly set out the allegation. Even in the case of Chief Iustice Wood, of Manitoba, the very josition that he was in when he made the statement charged against him as improper was set forth, he is alleged to have been sitting in a barber's chair at the time. It was not merely said that he made an improper statement, but the actual statement itself wats given in the petition. No person in this Honse can for a moment undertake to say that the charge made in this case, which is simply that he userd certain expressions, would be sufficient to entitle us to call upon Julge Elliott to come here to give all answer to nothing. lecause that is what the petition really is. I therefore believe. Mr. Speaker, that it would le proper for this House to come to the conclusion that no inpropriety whatever is embraced in the first part of this petition, and that neither the first charge. nor the secoml charge, nor the third charge in the petition is of such a character that we should call upon any person to answer. Unable, as I said, and as we must assume that the framer of the petition was, to specitically allege any charges of improper comduct against the juige, it certainly was an unkind cut indeed to make these general charges without ang specitic allegation against one of the purest anil most conscientinus judges who sits on the bench in Ontario. The parties to this petition, unable to make any suecitic charge that would hold water against Julge Elliott, have cast their imputation in a general way so that it may cut as deep as it likes. Sir, it would not be out of place for me to say, that any person oconpying the position which Judge Elliott does, must feel deeply hurt at the vile charges that are made against his decision in this case. He must feel that he has been stableed in the dark, and wounded by the motion which has been marle to-day against him. I ams sure if Judge Elliott hall an opportmity to speak on the Hoor of this House, he would demand : What charge is male against me : have I done any wrong in loing what 1 did? Neither the petition nor the morer of the petition have charged him with. writing anything improper, and there is not a man in the House who can point to an article which Judge Elliott ever wrote that it was improper for him to have written. If that charge could have been male it is quite certain that it would have been stated in the peti. tion. There is no person in this House who can state what language Judge Elliott used that was improper for him to have used, or upon what occasion he used it, or else it would have been stated in the petition. I say, therefore, that it was an unkind cut to make this general charge to go broadcast to the country, without making any specific allegation against him. I most sincerely hope for the credit of the city of London itself that the action of the political promoters of this petition has neither, as I may say, been born in defeat nor nursed in rindictiveness; but it does seem to me, Sir, that this defeat and the vindictiveness shown is the cause of this judge leing persecuted in the way he is. Mr. Speaker, when this House has deliberated over this matter for some time longer, which it is only proper that it should do with the greatest care and the greatest of cantion, I do hope that in the discussion which follows that party feeling will not at any rate go so far as to seek to comdemn a judge on a petition of this kinel. If such should take place in this House, it would show the wisdom of the Act of Parliament which has been passed removing impeachment trials from the political arena, and from the range of party feelings. I feel that if I shonk come to any other eonclusion but that. I shoulal vote against this resolution.' I should do myself wrong, and I shonld do my conscience wrong. I camot, Sir, in the face of the petition and in the face of the arowal that the nover of it has miatie in this House, farour for one moment the calling of Julge Elliott before the bar to answer charges that are mythically made in this petition, and which I do not believe can be substantiated. I lo not believe that any charge coull he substantiated against the judge which would watrant the general aspersions which have leen mate here. If such specific charges conhl be made. I have no hesitation in saying that I helieve they would have been more particularly set forth in this petition and that we would all hate had an opportunity of julging of the articles that it is alleged were written, and of the remarks he made. Inelieve. Nir, that the good sense of hon. members will canse them to see the injustice dome to Judge Elliot, by this motion.

CHARIES AGAINST NIR AIOLPHE CARON.

House resumed consideration of the preposed motion of Mr. Eilgar, that certain charges of corruption against sir Adolphe P. Caron le referred to the Select Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Nir RICHARI)CARTWRI(iHT. Mr. Speaker, it is, perhaps, just as well that a considerable interval of time has been allowed to elapse between the initiation of this delsate and its present stage. Looking at the great importance of the question suhmitted for the consideration of the House, it is certainly desirable that every member of this House on either side should le in a position to feel that he had considered fully and completely all the issues that are involved in the proper decision of this question, that no man should be allowed to pleal hereafter that he was taken by surprise or that he gave his vote, whatever it may lee hurriedly or under a misconception of the true issues involved in this question : and I camot bat hope that the opportunity for reflection which nas been given to the members of this House will elicit from hoth sides some condemnation of the suhterfuges ly which it has been attempted to diminish the rights and dignities of Parliament and to screen the alleged offender from the investigation which, under the: circumstances, ought moss assuredly to be made into the charges preferred. As I have said, the 'Iuestion is one of the most grave possible character. and surely those of as who recollect the events of the last session, surely those of us who know how gravely the fair fame of ranada has suffered from the revelations which were male of corruption in the various departments of Government, should hesitate before committing this comentry to the still further degradation which I regret to say was prefigured in the speech delivered to the Honse on this question hy the hom. Minister of Instice. Uip to this time, it has heen possible, though with some reserves. for members on the other side to say that at any rate they had not wilfully and deliberately impeded the process of investigation into charges male against members of this Honse. I sily with some reserves, because I cammot at all admit that everything that was dome last session warranted the assertion that the present ioverument have always abstained from wilfully putting olstacles in the way of the investigation of charges against members of the Cabinet. In the first place, I want to call attention to the nature of the charge preferred by my hol!. friend from Ontario (Mr. Elgar) against the Postmaster (ieneral. That charge, which has now leen for more than three weeks on our Journals, sets forth in terms that the hon. the Postmaster (ieneral was instrumental during the periol of time from 1882 to 1891 in procuring large sums of money to he expended for the benefit of two railways, the Quebec and Lake St. John Railway and the Temisconata Railway. That during the whole of that time, if I understand the charge aright, that hon. gentleman was actively engaged in, and profiting more or less from, the receipt of these large subsidies which he, a Minister of the Crown, hal advised to be granted to these railways; that besides, he had corruptly used a large proportion of the subsidies granted by Parliainent for the purpose of dehauch. ing the electors in a large number of counties.

Now, I want the Holise to molerstand that if these charges le proved, that the Minister beyond all question stands gnilty of conspiracy and embezulement, he stanils guilty of more, he stands guilty of having committel this emberalement for political purposes, that leing one of the gravest offences that can prossibly le committed against parliamentary govermment. The charge that is made against the Postmaster (ieneral is, in terms, the charge of treason against this conmonwealth. He, at Minister of the crown, doubly bound, first, as a me:mber of this Honse, and next, as a Minister of State, to see to it that every farthing of the people's money is applied to the object for which it was granted by this House--he stands accused of having conspired to steal the property of the whole people of Canala, and of having used it for the purpose of delathching a large section of the electors. Nir, he stamls guilty, it these charges are proved, of a lereach of trust of the worst possible kincl. Let me ask this House: For what end were these sulsidies granted: They were granted on the solemm assurance of the fiovernment that these railroals which it was desired to assist, were works calculated to adrantaug the whole of this Dominion. Whose cluty was it to see that that money so granted was expenderl as this House had ordered it to he expended: Whose duty hut that of the Minister of the Cown in the first place, and of this P'arliament in the second? On whose allice, I ask again, were granted to these railways: On the direct advice and rexponsihility of the Ministers of the Crown, of whom the Postmaster (ieneral then and now was one. Vow, sir, the allegation is that the Minister, if these charges he provel true. has violated his oath of ottice, amblie is charged clearly and distinctly with emberoling the public funds, and doubling his crime hy the use to which the stolen money has lnen put. That is the charge specifically marle, with full aml ample notice, placed several days lefore it was advancen, in the hands of the fovernment and in the hands of every memler of this House: and, Sir, the Minister of Justice rises in his place to tell us that he sees no hartu in chatges like this : the Minister of Justice of this Dominion catn see no gromm for investigattion, if the facts stated hy my hon. friend are proved hy him to be true, he dares to tell us that in all this he sees mothing which calls for the attention of Parliament. He presumes to talk to us of other courts being open in which actions of this kimd may be more fittingly brought than in the high court of Parliament : he presumes to talk of the vagueness and indistinctness of the charges preferred hy my hon. friend. Nir, it is not the vagueness that troubles this hom. gentleman, it is the fact that these charges are clear, distinct and specitic, involving, as they do. the right of a great many members in this House to cecopy the seats they now hold. That is the reason, and none other, why the hon. gentleman objects to these charges being investigated. Mr. Speaker, for my part, I find it very hard indeed to say which the plea of the Minister of Justice lacks most, whether it is most deficient in logic, or whether it is most deficient in morality. But what it lacks in logic and what it lacks in morality, at least it makes up in downright effrontery. Sir, I hold in my hand two very remarkable declarations, one made a very short time ago by the hon. gentleman himself : another made on a somewhat different occasion by the present lealer of this liovernment. which I will, with your permission, read to the House. Here is what the hon. Premier said in another place, directing his language to the Opposition in that place :

This. Nir. was the declaration of the Premier of this iowermment mo longer than the $\overline{\mathrm{T}}$ th August last, as I find it reported in the Debates of the Senate on the subject of the Paie des (haleurs Railway scandal. That was the virtuous resolution come to and solemmly announced by the present l'remier. And not to be behindhand, a very few months after, we find the present Dinister of Instice unhmriening himself in the following fashion:-
". He (Sir John Thompson) repeated the invitation made elsewhere, that if any one has any evidence of wrong-doing against any official or member of Parlianent, he pledged his honour that the fullest in restigation thould be made and the information used in the prosecuion and punishment of the guilty party. Mr. Abbott's Government was fully deternined and pledged to investigate. root out and punish wrong-doing wherever they found it."
Brave words. Mr. Speaker, most excellent l, rave words. And now that the charge is made. now that the accusation is hrought forward with all possible slue formality liy my hom. friend, this Howse had the exhibition. hut a few weeks ago, of how the Minister of Justice is prepared to retleem his solemm plenge, what interpretation he puts upon the declarations of himself and of his leader. Sir, I am not in the slightest legree disposed to ex. temate the offence alleged to have lreen committed hy the Postmaster dieneral, if he lee found guilty of what my hon. friend has charged against him; but I will say that the Postmaster (ieneral is, in my opinion, the honester man of the two. There are certain cases, and thisis one of them, in which such a defence as was sulmitted to us the other day, is a worse erime, is calculated to do more injury to public morality, is calculated to alegrale the comntry, of which such men are Ninisters, more, even, than the acts which we condemn. Now, Sir, although, to jutge from the silence with which these remarks were received hy his own followers on that occasion, they did not agree with him and I might therefore piss then over more lightly. I will proceed to analyse the Himsy sophistries which the Minister of Iustice was goon enough to entertain the House with on this momentons occasion. He told us that charges such as I have described, charges of that gravity and weight, did not really call for the attention of Parlianent. Let me ask this House, let me ask this country, for what purpose does Parliament exist? Sir, Parliament exists, as I understand it, for these three chief ends : Parliament exists, first, to vote supplies from the people of Canada for the purpose of carrying on the Government of this country. Next, Sir, Parliament sits here at great cost to the people of this country, for the purpose of seeing that these moneys are honestly and properly expended. and for the purpose of punishing any delinquents, be they high or low, whoabuse the trust that Parliament has reposed in them. I would like to know whether the Minister of Justice, or whether any of his friends opposite, will dare to rise in their places and tell us that they consider, that if it be true large sums of money have been taken from these subsidies voted for the construction of these railways and have been expended for the purpose of delauching a large looly of the electorate, that they consider that that money was properly spent, that they consider that a rightful use of these railway sul,sidies is for the purpose of corrupting and lehauching the electorate of Canada. I would rather, for my part, reverse the position, and I would rather ask these gentlemen to explain if they can, what fault can by possibility le greater than the fault which is charged against the inon. Postmaster (ieneral. It strikes not merely at the root of parliamentary government, it strikes at the very foundation of our liberty, and I cannot help hut regretting that a gentleman like the Minister of Justice of whom we once hoped letter things, should have lowered himself and lowered the dignity of his high office hy lecoming, or appearing to become, the apologist forsuch conluct. Sir. I had hoperl, and so had otherson thisside of the House a year ago, that although the hon. gentleman was in exceedingly had connpany, yet that possibly he might have shaken himself free to some extent from the trammels of his evil associations: but in his case as in many others we have to repeat the old adage. facilisest iltwirnsins A ermi. I likened him some time ago to a grey sheep among a lot of black ones, but 1 am sorry to say that his fleece is become of guite as inky a blackness as theirs. I an sorry to say that these evil associations, or it may possibly le the imperative political exigencies of his position have infien him to assume an attiturle before this House, of which I wrould fain hope he and his followers alike are ashamed in their hearts. I tell the Dinister of Justice that the very chiefest end and object of Parliament is to form a court wherein these powerful offenders who cannot be dealt with by ordinary means and ly ordinary courts of law, may le lrought to justice, and where their offences may le exposed. I tell him, further, that the man who denies that that is one of the main functions of Parliament does all that in him lies to bring Parliament and parliamentary government into contempt. Sir, the Minister of Justice talks to us of other courts being open for the purpose of impeaching the Postmaster General for such icts. Where are these courts? He did not name them, nor have I heard any one of those who followed him on the other side of the House undertake to name them. Let him state the tribunal, if he can, which is capalbe of taking cognivance of such acts as those of which my hon. friend (Mr. Edgar) has impeached the Postmaster General. Let him tell us in whose name the action should le brought. Are we to bring it in the name of the Minister of Justice, who sees no harm in these things, so that he may at his convenience and for his colleagues' advantage, enter, I suppose, a nolle pionequi and put an end to the proceedings. Mr. Speaker, it is trifling with this House, it is trifling with this country, to find a gentleman in his position talking to us of being able to try these matters in the election courts. Surely his own experience, surely the experience of the Minister of Finance. surely the experience of the Minister of Marine would have leen enough to teach us what sort of tribumal these election courts are when yon want to indict Ministers of the Crown of inilery and corruption. Three of these hon. gentlemen, if my memory serves, have been imbicted of brikery and corruption: not one of them has heen brought to trial yet, and apparently, julging from what we see. there is the extremest difficulty in bringing any of them to trial at all. Nore than that, siif. no man knows letter than the Minister of Instice that these facts have only come into our prosession within a very short perionl. and that it is the merest mockery to talk now of invoking the dection courts : election courts which have dis. charged their functions for years and vears, and election courts which unler no possible circmastances could le utilized for the purpose of proving these acts which my hom. friend from ©ntario (Mr. Ehyar) hats chargeal. Is the Minister of Instice going to repeat here to us the monstrons incetrine that if these hon. gentlemen are able to cover up their tracks. if these hom. gentlemen are able to conceal from the House and from the conntry the very pretty primks they appear to have been phaying during the late elections, and the precening elections. that therefore, lecause with all the aid and resources of the fiocermment to back them, they can conceal their tracks for a certain time, they are consequently entitled to absolute immmity" Was a more monstrous alsurity ever propounded by either clerk or layman? The Minister of Justice knows well, and we are all of us. I fancy, sutficiently acepacinted with legal proceedings to know that if there is one doctrine leetter known to English justice than another it is: That men who occupy the position of trustees. as the Postmaster Cieneral and his colleagues do in a double sense, cannot under any circumstances plead limitation of time ats a bar to action against a breach of their trust. Monstrous ats the allegation is, that because, as I have said, they have succeeded for a time in concealing their iniquity, they should, therefore, escape punishment and exposiure, it is at least equally absuril to bring the charge of vagueness against the accusation of my hon. friend from Ontario (Mr. Edgar). If ever transactions were phanly and distinctly stated they are stated in this set of charges which I now hold in my hand. fon have the dates giren, yon have the places cisen, you have the modins opuramli fully entered into in every shape, and my hon. friend over and aloreve all that professes to be prepared and ready t". give annple and minute proof of all that he has anserted. I repeat that what these hom. gentlemen -pposite really do fear is uot the indefiniteness, hut the exceeding detiniteness and precision of the evilence which my hom. friend is prepared to submit. Then, sir, to turn to another aspect of this case. I am amazed, $I$ am astonished at the intolerable cowardice which this Gorernment with their huge majority display on an cecasion like this. I condd understand the action which the Government are taking if they were being dealt with as the Premier of one of our provinces was lately dealt with by the Lieutenant Governor thereof. If they had been called upon to plearl their case before a Commission, a hostile Commission, mainly composed of men known to be hostile to them and appointed by a political enemy, then I could have understoon, perhaps, their hesitation at committing their fate to such a tribunal. But what does my hon. friend from Ontario (Mr. E.lear) propose" He proposes to bring his charge lefore a loxdy composel. two-thirds at least, of this gentleman's own most staunch supporters: two-thirls of whom they themselves selected and chose. aceording to the rules of our House. Why. Sir. heforesurh at tribunaldoes any man doubt that the accused party would get the benefit of every possible doult that could be raised in his fatour? Dhes any man doubt that lefore such a tribunal every legal pleat. or every legal (quilb) might sity. which could le urged in his hehalf. on for the purpose of arerting amb balking the investigation. would, to say the least of it, receive its full weight: And jet the dovernment dare not face such a tribunal as that. Mr. Speaker, the evidence is irresistible, the evidence is clear, the evilence is plain : the fiovernment must know that my hom. friemls proofs are of a character that camnot be gainsial or denied. or otherwise it would he their clear interest to court investigation lefore sulh a lowly as that, knowing that if they cond find a Haw in my hon. friends indictment, he could not possibly escape from such a trihual without severe censure and rehuke. Sir. the very climax of absurdity appeared to me to be reached in that part of the speech of the Minister of Justice in which he declareel that he, forsooth. oljected to going lefore the Committee on Privileges and Elections hecause it was a partial tribumal. Consider, sir. his nice seuse of honour - the Minister of Justice had rather go hefore no trilhunal at all than lefore a tribunal which he thinks might. he too partial to himself. That is his reason as given in the speech in Hansarl for objecting to a reference to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. Well. Sir. again I have recourse to the old maxim, rolent; "o", fit iujuria. My hon. friend takes the risk; his is the loss. his the clanger, nobody else's; and the nice seruples of the Minister of Justice surely camot lead him any further, when my hon. friend who prefers the charge and takes the risk is willing to sulmit his case to stich-a tribumal as I have described. Sir, there is a reasm, and I suspect an exceedingly good reason, why the present Govermment object, and object very strongly, to deal with the offence alleged to have been committed by the hom. Postmaster General. We have not sat in this House so long without understanding thoronghly that the hon. Postmaster Gieneral has been for many years one of the inner ring, and thoroughly familiar with all the machinery by which fields were fought and won in electoral campaigis. We have not leen here for so many years. Sir, without knowing enough of the character of that hon. gentleman to know that leing thus thoroughly familiar with all the inner letails of thosecampaigns, he isnot, and I donot hime him for it, disposed to be made the scapegoat and to pay the whole cost of any little delinquencies that may come to light. Mr. Speaker, what my hon. friend has brought to light, and what I know well he will prove if the opportunity is given him, is after all only part and parcel of that colossal scheme of corruption by which and under which Canada has been governed for the last fourteen years. I know well, Sir, and the Ministers of the Crown know well, how the elections of 1882 were won, how the elections of 1887 were won, how the elections of 1891 were won, and how the recent bye-elections, if they will have it, were bought and sold likewise. Sir, we know that the merest comer of the veil was liftel by the disclosures of last session : and I say to this House that if this investigation and the others demamded by the Opposition, he had, we shall see, and all Canala will see, with regard to the monle in which Canada has been governed for these many years perst. that not on this continent, Tammany Hall itself not excepted, has there ever been such ia system of organized corruption as that investigation and others like it would expose. There are many oher forms of corruption and abuse to which this system of railway subsidies has been put. İ do not mean to say that among the humbred or more subsidies granted of late years there may not have been some half dozen, more or less, which lid to some extent redeem the pledges on which they were given, and which may have been for works for the real lenefit of the country at laye. But I do say that, taking the railway sullaidies as a whole, they have heen one of those sources of organized corruption loy which the (iovermment have held and kept their power: and I for my part do not wonder in the least at fin?ling many men objecting to this investigation, knowing as I do how these same railway subsilies have been used for the corruption of members of Parliament, how they have been tolled for the private advantage of members of Parliament, how stock formerly worthless has been made valuable by means of subsidies got ly political intaence, how in many ways they have been usedindebauching representatives and constituencies alike; and it will he well for hon. gentlemen opposite to remember that if they oljeet to these broad statements, as they call them, their refusal to investigate charges like these justities and proves them in the eyes of the public, and in the eyes of every honest man. More than that, sir, there are other and grave consequences which may flow to the people of this country if the ill-advised declaration of the Minister of Justice is sustained ly his supporters. Sir, I warnhon. gentlemen on the other side of the House that although they may tote this motion slown, although they may abuse this majority of theirs got by the means I have indicated, for the purpose of preventing this investigation, most assuredly -and I pledge my honour to the Minister of Justice to that effect--most assuredly the matter shall not end there. Let them refuse, Sir, if they dare. I want to see if there are enough among the 120 or 130 members who support the hon. gentleman to save Sodom from destruction. The number is not great, and I hope to see them staml forward. But, Sir, whether they do or not, I pledge these hon. gentlemen that whether or not they vote us down, they shall not rote this matter down in the public eye. I tell them that these things shall have publicity, and that if they refuse an investigation, all Canada, all Fugland, the whole of the United States, every English-speaking community, shall ring with the tidings of their shame; and Sir, I leave it to them to consider, each and all of them, how they will like it when under these circumstances they find themselves forced to bring actions in courts of law or sit down convicted and dishonoured for ever. Sir, it is easy to see how one evil precedent-brings another. I could harilly have believed that the hon. gentlemen would have ventured this length but for the political exigencies which compelled them, in spite of their own repeated declarations, to refuse last year the investigation asked for by my hon. friend from Lambton (Mr. Lister) into the doings in connection with Section B, and I can easily understand what a lever that refusal has been in the hands of the hon. Postmaster Geutral, and how justly, for the matter of that, from his woint of view, he can plead that if you do, not investigate the misdoings of other members of the Ciovernment, you have no right to investigate mine. Then there is a third consileration which most assurelly ought to have weight with hom. gentlenen opposite. Those hon. gentlemen are continnally talking to us of the superior loyalty of their policy and the superior loyalty of their principles. Well, I have often expressed here and elsewhere my own private opinion of the commercial value of their loyalty, and not many hours have elapsed sinee we had the opportunity of seeing how ill-disposed, when called upom, they were to give effect to their loyalty to the mother country ly touching the pockets of their own supporters. But I would ask the Honse and these gentlemen, and more especially I would ask the adrisers of the Crown, to consider well the sorry position in which they are placing the Crown by the advice they are apparently now giving the Crown to refuse all investigation into charges brought against one of its Ministers. I said a little while ago that the Postmaster General had a double responsibility. He is, in the first place, a member of this House, and in that capacity a trustee of the people of Canada, but he is likewise a member of the executive committee of the Privy Comeil and a swom adviser of the Crown. Now, unfortunately, perhaps, for Canada and for the Crown, the Ministers of the Crown have, to a certain extent, the homour of the Crown in their keeping: and I tell them they have given most evil advice to His Excellency if, is I must presume, liefore they came down here the: other day to make the statement they did, they had advisel His Excellency that it was expedient to refuse an investigation into the conduct of one of his Ministers. I say that they conld do no one thing more likely to bring the honour and dignity of the Crown into disrespect than to give such advice. If they har plotted to destroy the dignity of the Crown, they could do it in no better way. And when we compare what took place under our own eyes in another province, when we compare the action teksen by a deputy of the Crown, unler circumstances not calling in half so extreme a degree for the action of the Crown as those enumerated in the charges brought forward ly my hon. frient, all I can tell them is this, that they are doing their very best to provoke men to make comparisons in no way to the credit of the responsille advisers of the (iovernor rieneral here. I make no comparison. It is not my place on the present occasion to do so, but I can tell hon. gentlemen that in every part of Canada those comparisons are being drawn, and if the dignity of the Crown suffers, it is owing to the evil advice given by these evil advisers. It is to their disloyal and treacherous advice that any injury which may accrue to our present form of government must fairly be traced. But it is not enough that these hon. gentlemen should dishonour the Crown. They must likewise strike at the very root of parliamentary government, they must likewise strike at all public morality besides by this refusal of theirs to have the charges investigatel. If this refusal be persisted in, if, when charges like these are preferred, Ministers of the Crown continue to deny the right of Parliament to investigate them and ascertain on what evidence they have been made, and to inflict a fitting punishment if they are sustained, then we can come to no other conclusion but that the Ministers of the Crown in Canada are prepared to proclaim that it is the duty of Ministers to steal funds wherever the; can get them, to betray their oaths of office, and to use those stolen funds for the purpose of debauching the electorate. For that and nothing else is implied by their refusal to investigate the charges preferred by the hon. member for Ontario. I repeat, and it camot be too often or too clearly stated, that in a case like this, refusal to investigate is of necessity tantamount to a confession of guilt. All men so interpret it, all men must of necessity so interpret it, and all men, I may say, apart from the pledged supporters of the Government in this House, are even now prepared to so interpret it. It is not a question for casuists, but it is lecoming a very practical question whether, if the liovermment of Canada confess, as hy refusal to investigate they do confess, that such are the doctrines they teach and preach, whether io a diovernment like that any allegiance is due. If those charges be true, their parliamentary majority for loug years has been maintained by means which can lee characterized as nothing else than the proceeds of delikerate theft; and I again add that if that investigation he still refused their parliamentary majority is used as an instrument for the comdoning and perpetration of robbery. It may well he said that in Canala, at any rate, parliamentary government is on its trial, and it may be alded that by such a refusal as this the very existence of camadia is gravely imperilled. Men are asking in many parts of Canala why they should sulmit to bear the tremendouslosses they are daily obliged toencounter, when they find such doctrines as this alound, when they find the most ordinary justice is clenied to the members of the Opposition when they bring forward charges of this gravity. Do they suppose that such a course is going to reconcile men to learing quietly these losses? Do they suppose that such a course is going to intensify the feelings of loyalty of the people to the Crown, and make them bear patiently losses which have drivenso many of them to seek a refuge in another land? They may very well ask what useful end such a fiovernment ats this can profess to serve. If Goverument is goom for anything, it is for the purpose of promoting the moral and material welfare of the people. I would ask what moral end such a Government as this can subserve? How they have advanced our material welfare, the records of the last census tell but too well. Last year the revelations then made went a very long way, I am sorry to say, to destroy the respect all men would like to feel for the Government of the country in which they live, and for the Parliament with whose aid that Government administers the affairs of the country. But if this last degradation be inflicted, I tell hon. gentlemen opposite they go extremely far towards destroying the last vestige of national self-respect. If they wish that Canada shall henceforth be known as a country, not merely in which shameful frauds have leen brought to light, but as the one country, perhaps, among all Englishspeaking nations enjoying representative institutious, where such frauds, when exposed, escape punishment and are rewarded with immunity, they have merely to persist refusing this incestigation. They uill not even go through the mere form of justice. They will not even allow my hro. friend to state in detail the reasons and give the proofs on which his charges are based, and finally, we have of all men in the country, the Minister of Justice, the man who is bound by his rath of office to see that no evil-doers can escape punishment, if the prowf only le lorought forward, the man who has pledged his honour again and again that any charge preferreal in Parliament or out of it against any supporter of the liovernment, much more against any colleague, shall receive full and complete investigation: we find him, with these words scarcely ceasin: to vibrate on his lips, rising in his place, leecoming the chief apologist of criminals amd deciding to use his high position and great parliamentary majority for the purpose of thwarting and ilfeating the ants of justice.

Mr. DIChEY. Mr. Speaker. I do not propose to follow the hom. member for south Oxford (Nir Richard (artwright) in the line of argument he has adopted, hut I am sure that he must feel gratified that this motion has heen mate, if for no other reason than because he has had an opportunity afforded him of scattering some of that store of parliamentary vitriol with which he is su lirgely supplied. The hon. gentleman lregan with an attack upon the Minister of Justice. he followed that ly attacking the Conservative party generally, he then male some insinuations which would seem tole intended to intimidate the representative of the Queen in this country, and he wome up with a general denumeiation of our country. Canala, itself. 1 am only glad that his remarks did not seem to excite very much enthusiasn among the gentlemen who sit behind him. I will proceed as shortly ats I can to discuss, I hope in a some what different temper from the hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat, the serions guestion now hefore the House, and 1 hope ifeel the importance of the question, one which is fraught with importance to the Honse itself and to this comitry. There can he mo matter of greater importance on thiscomentry than the purity andintegrity of this Parliamentand its members, and alongside of that we have to consider some other interests which are also involved. We have to consider the rights of the members of this House as indiviluals. and we have to consider the rights of minorities in this House. I propose to discuss shortly the matters involved in this ruestion, and in so doing I would like to state briefly my view of the law in regart to charges of this nature. This is a pure matter of law. It does not seem to me to be a matter for such declamation as we have been treatel to from the other side of the House. It is a purely legal question. A propesition is made to the House, charges are made against an hon. gentleman similar in character to an indictment in a court, anl it is a guestion of law whether this Parliament should enter into the investigation of that charge or not. Now, in the first place, I wish to say a few worls with reference to what charges have in the past been investigated by Parliament when made against its members, and I wish to say that the Minister of Justice, though perhaps not fully stating the law on that subject, was more correct than the leader of the Opposition seemed to think he was.

I understood the Minister of Justice to say that this Parliament was not a court of justice to enguire into the private conduct of its members. I believe that statement is correct, and I would like to read to the House a statement of Mr. Morley, in his Life of Edmund Burke, dealing with the question of privilege as it existed in the time of Furke, and he, a philosophic statesman of great repute in Englamd and a profound thinker, gives his opinion on page 97 of the Life as follows:-
"The bulk of the members in those bad times, as on many previous occasions and some since, could not divest themselves of the idea thut the House is a court of law. The mischief flowing from such a doctrine is sufficiently whvious. The public liberties were as much in peril trom i iese arbitrary assumptions of an oligarchic chamber, as they had ever been from the arbitrary assumptions of an unconstitutional sovereign."
And that doctrine is borne out also by Hallams (onstitutional History, a work which, for absolute fairness and profound thonght, I think any gentleman in this House will admit to be an authority. The hon. the leader of the Opposition was extremely unfortunate in the two cases he selected as instances against the rule laill down by the leader of this Honse. The cases of De Cobain and Sadleir were not cases supporting the leader of the Opposition. As was pointed out hy the Minister of Matine, these gentlemen were expelled from the Honse of Commons for altogether different reasons. The House did not investigate the offences. Mr. Salleir's case was investigated by a commission, and he was found guilty of the offence, but the Hrase hele no investigation into it, nor did it into the case of Mr. De Cobain. As far as I have been able to arrive at a conclusion on this matter, the House has no power to expel a member except for an offence committed in his capacity as a member of the Hruse, or when he is convicted by some outside trihunal of some serious offence such as a felony, or when he is an outlaw and has fled from justice, as in the case of Louis Riel in this Parliament. There is another case, and that is the misapplication of public money: These, as far as 1 have been able to learn, are the only cases in which the Honse of Commons in England has ever exercised its jurisdiction. There is one case to which I will call attention, and that is the case of Mr. (awthorne. In Bourinot's Parliamentary Practice it wats stated that he was expelled from Parliament for conduct unbecoming a gentleman and an officer. If that were a correct statement, it would be going a very long distance, because any one having a seat in Parliament would be compelled to square his conduct day and night with the views of the u;ajority as to what constituted conduct becoming an officer and a gentleman, but investigation shows that that was not the case in regard to Mr. Cawthorne. He was found guilty by a court-martial of disgraceful conduct, and the House based its action on that finding of the court-martial hut made no investigation itself, and he was expelled because he had been found guilty by the court-martial. It is necessary that this House should proceed carefully with these matters. This Parliament of Canada has had occasion more than once to regret action it has taken on matters of privilege. The English House of Commons has also had reason to regret it. We are all familiar with the case of Mr. John Wilkes, who was expelled and in regard to whom the House of Commons was obliged a few years aftewards hy the force of reason to expunge all the minutes in regard to him from their recorls because they were found to be unconstitutional. The same thing took place here in regard to Mr. Lyon Mackenzie, and in Fngland the case of Mr. Bradlaugh was somewhat similar. No that it must be quite clear to the House that in proceedings of such a serious nature as the investigation into the character of one of its members, the House should proceed deliberately. temperately and calmly. I would like to direct the attention of the House to the procedure given in May's Constitutional History, which is quoted by Bourinot with regard to these matters. May says:
" Both Houses of Parliament must act within the limits of their jurisdiction. and in strict conformity with the law."
He is now speaking of expelling members of larliament:
"An abuse of privilege is even more dangerous than an abuse of prerogative. In the one case the wrong is done by in irresponsible body : in the other the Ministers who adrised it are open to censure and punishment."
I want to draw particular attention to the next paragraph where May says:
"The judgment of offences should be guided by the severest principles of law.
No I say that in approaching this question we are not to assume that hecause an hom. gentleman gets up on the other side of the House, or upon this side, and makes a charge, therefore the House is bound to enter into an investigation of that charge. The House has another and a higher duty to perform : it has to regard the precedents that have been established, and it has id duty to the House that will follow it to estahlish, in its turn, good precedents : and this charge of the hon. member for West Ontario must now be investigated in the light of the precedents and in the light of the principles laid down by May and Bourinot. Now, coming to the charge itself, there is, I may say, a legal presumption that it has been made as strong as it could well be made. I am quite sure that the hon. member for West Ontario had the assistance of the many able legal lights that sit close around him. I am quite sure they burned the mid-night oil over this charge: I am sure that every word was carefully weigined and put in its proper place, and the piece of mosaic made as highly coloured as it could possibly be made. The same rule applies in criminal matters in courts of law. Indictments are to be very strictly construed : and a charge of this sort by one nember of this House against another, must be constmed strictly, the language must be taken in the natural sense in which it is written, especially in a case like the present, where it is drawn by a legal gentleman of great experience, assisted no doult by others of equal talent. Therefore, I think the House can, at any rate, congratulate itself that these ciarges are made as strong as possible. There are omissions in this charge which I think tell in favour of the Postmaster General. In the first place, it is only fair that the attention of the House should lie drawn to the fact that there is no charge that the Postmaster General profited personally in this matter: there is no charge that he used any of this money for his personal benefit. Whatever there may be in this distinction, the Postmaster Cieneral is entitled to the benefit of it. The Postmaster General is charged with political corruption, if corruption it be, but not for his own personal benefit. It is also clear from the charge that these subsidies were properly granter to these companies. There is not a word in the charge hinting that the Government was wrong in granting sulosidies to these railways. It is clear these subsidies were regularly paid over to these railways; it is clear that the Quebec and LakeN't. John Railway Company paid the subsidy money over to their contractors; and the wrong-doing, if any, was between the contractors and the Postmaster General. So that as far as that is concerned, we obtain some important admissions from the form in which the charges are drawn. Now, I wish to direct attention particularly to the ninth and tenth charges, and I desire to pointont what is, of course, evident, that in a resolution of thissort which weare invited to adopt in its entirety, the charge is like a rope, it must he judged loy its weakest part. If there is one section containing a serious charge in this indictment which this House should not entertain, then that paragraph must be struck out, or the resolution must be voted down. Certainly it is fair that a man who is put upon bis trial should have some definite information of what he is charged with; he must hare some notice as to what the particular items dharged against him are. Now, we find that this charge covers the period from the year 188:5 to 1892 . It is important to notice that in sections $9 \mathrm{im} / 10$ there is no allegation that the Postmaster General received any of the subsidies; there is simply an allegation that he received money from men who were interested in the sulasidies. Now, it must be perfectly clear thatany stockholder in these companies would be interested in these subsidies. He is also charged here with receiving money from other public contractors; that is to say, if this charge were allowed to go to a committee, evidence could le given of political subscriptions by any public contractor in the Dominion. It would cover all the numerous contracts with regard to post offices, the number of which we heard the ocher day; it would cover every public contractor in the Dominion. Sir; it must be evident to any hom. gentleman that it would be giossly unjust to ask a man to meet a charge of that general character, covering the names of thousands of persons who would possibly be implicated; it would be grossly unjust to ask him to face a charge of that description, covering the general election of 1887 and of 1891 , and all the bye-elections since 1885 up to the present time. It certainly must strike this House to be contrary to conscience to ask a man to stand his trial for everything he has done during all these elections. I wonder how many hon. gentlemen opposite would like to he put upon their trial for everything they had done since 188 up to the present time, without any more notice than has been given in this matter. I think that point alone is quite sufticient to establish the absolute unfairness of charges of this sort. Supposing this were a question of larceny, supposing a charge of larceny was made against some one, committed within the last seven years, and in 21 counties of the Province of Quebec. No court would try a charge of that nature, because, the experience of the criminal lawfrom theearliest days up to the present time, has shown that it is only fairplay to give the accused party ample notice, not only ample notice, but specific notice of the charges made against him, that. lie may not be taken by surprise, but may be able to make his defence. If a resolution of this sort were adopted you might go back, not only six, or seven or ten years, but you might go back 20 or 30 years and make a general charge, that something had been done during that time in election campaigns which caused a member to be guilty of personal corruption, and you might therefore ask that he be expelled from the House. These grounds may, perhaps, be held to be technical, but if technical, they are ouly nominally so, hecause they are founded upon the experience of criminal lawyers the world over. Although that ground would be quite sufficient to show that these charges should not he entertained, I propose to deal with the actual charges that are made, apart from the question of their not being explicit. If $I$ understand sections 9 and 10 of the motion. the substantial charge that is made there, is, that the Postmaster General received money from public contractors of the Government and that he spent that money illegally in elections. In my humble judgment that is not ia charge that this Parliament should investigate, and I will shortly give the House my reasons for so saying. In the first place, is it an offence which Parliament should investigate to accept election- subscriptions from public contractors, independent of how it is spent, and in the next place is it an offence which Parliament should investigate to spend money corruptly in elections: It does not make the matter one whitstronger to say that themoney came from public contractors and was spent in elections. If a wrong is done either in receiving money from public contractors at all, or expending money corruptly in elections at all. Now, Sir, to receive money from public contractors whether it be an act which one should condemn or not, is not now the question. The receiving of money for election purposes from public contractors, is not a charge that this House should investigate. Any gentleman who will look over the precedents carefully will come to the conclusion that this is a charge which should not be investigated in this House.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Hear, hear.

Mr. DICKEX. The hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) says "hear, hear." The hon. gentleman assumes that the public contractors paid the money that they obtained from the Govermment, and that by a scheme hetween a public contractor and the Postmaster General the public money actually went to the Postmaster General. That, Sir, is a thing which Parliament shouki investigate. But we mist remember that is inot the charge that is made here, and the hon. member for West Ontario (Mr. Edgar) best knows himself why he did not make the charge. The fairest way to test the matter is this. What evidence would prove this charge if it were before the committee? That charge would be proved by showing that a man who had a contract did subscribe money to the Postmaster General's election fund, and I ask any hon. gentleman in this Fouse, even assuming it to be true, if that is a matter which we should investigate here? No, Sir, it does not come within any of the cases which I have referred to before as having been investigated by the English Parliament. I may remind the hon. member from South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) that some of his political friends have lately pronounced their opinion with regard to receiving money from public contractors. I believe that in the Ontario Assembly, led by a gentleman who stands pretty high in the morality of the Liberal pirty, and I believe also of the country, he and his supporters in that Assembly declared that it was not wrong for members of that House to receive money from contractors of the Government. Perhaps the hon. memher from bothwell (Mr. Mills) will accept the authority of the Hon. Mr. Mowat as pretty good on the question of political morality. It would be a very serinus thing if this resolution were adopted on that ground, because some person might find out that the hon. member for South Oxford (Siir Richard Carturight) had had an election fund. I suppose I am assuming a very improbable case, lout somelooly might discover that a gentleman who held a contract for a post office in the hon. gentleman's constituency, had contributed to this fumb, and he might charge the hon. member with corruption and ask that he be expelled from the House. hecause he had received money for his election fund from a Government contractor. I ann sure that although the hon. gentleman himself may he perfectly innocent he will have enough regard for those who sit behind him not to introduce any such dangerous doctrine as that. The next pinint is whether the illegal spending of money in elections is a matter which we should investigate in this House. It is charged here, and charged definitely enough in one respect, although very indefinite in regard to time, that the Postmaster General had spent money illegally in elections. That also is a question, Nii, which it is not for us to investigate in this Parliament. For many years the House of Commons in England and the House of Commons here, investigated what was done by members during their elections, and Parliament racated their seats if corruption was found to have 'reen committed during the contest. By the deliberate judgment of this House that power was relegated to the election courts, and the fundamental reason for our relinguishing that power was that the rights of minorities were not safe if Parliament could enquire into election matters and turn men out of the House for alleged corruption in their contests. The hon. member for Bothwell (AIr. Mills) put his case very ingeniously by saying: Oh, if this money goes into an election fund, then enquiry must be stopped, and you must not enter into that sacred precinct. That was a very ingenious way for the hon. gentleman to put his argument, but he camot escape from this dilemma, that if enquiry is allowed into the expenditp: e , either personal or by agents of merneners, at election contests, all that was done by this House formerly in divesting itself of that authority is ineffective, and the House can go back twenty years and invesugate charges of corruption in elections. Does any hon. gentleman suppose that with a strong majority having those instincts, which the hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) seems to have injected in his imagination into the majority on this side, that the rights of the minority would be safe? Suppose that a majority was really vicious, it is quite possible that members of the minority might suffer perhaps unjustly. Instead of being tried before an election court or before a judge, to which he has a right now, he could be taken before a partisan committee, and the minority would then be at the mercy of a Mr. Dickey. vicious majority, just as they were fifteen or twenty years ago, before the election courts were established. The hon. member for Bothwell shakes his head; but if the principle set forth in this branch of the resolution were adopted, it would put the minority at the mercy of a tyrannical majority : anl, Sir, I am rather surprised that the hon. gentlemen opposite wish to put themselves at the mercy of a majority of which they seem to have such a mean opimion as the majority on this side of the House. The only conclusion I can come to is that they think better of us than they say. Now, it may be said to me: Well, if these charges are not specific. why not move an amendment and strike out the part that is not specific? Sir, I camot make the charge against the Postmaster (ieneral. I have no papers, no information in my possession that enables ine to make any statement on which to found a charge against the Pustmaster (ieneral. The information is in the possession, presumably, of the hon. member for West Ontario (Mr. Eilgar), and upon him lies the responsilility of making this charge specific. He must accept the responsibility, and he camot throw it upon me or upon any gentleman on this side of the House. So much for the legal aspects of these charges. I have another objection to them, which is perhaps in its nature more espe: cially political. I do not wish to impute motives to hom. gentlemen opposite, but I must say that the form in which these charges are drawn gives colour to the statement that they are drawn for fishing purposes. Sir, look at the scope of the charges. They include the elections in twentytwo counties in the Province of Quebec. They are so framed that if a coonmittee were granted upon them, every detail of election expenses and election proceedings in every one of those comnties could be gone into before that committee. That is what I call a fishing charge. Now. Sir, I am not here to say that the Liberal-Conservative party is always correct in all its doings during elections. I am sorry to say that I myself stand here as an example to the contrary, hecause I was unseated by the election court. But while I do not stand here to say that I am free to confess that I have no alisolute confidence in the entire purity of hon. gentlemen opposite. Some investigations have been held with regard to the record of the two parties in elections matters. They have not been held before partisans; they have been held before the sworn judges of this country : and, Sir, when the hon. member for Quebec East who leads the Opposition considers that he came into this Parliament a little over a year ago with about 90 members behind him onethird of whom were elected by corrupt means and have since been unseated, I think he is quite right in coming to the conclusion that it is about time to change the venue from the courts to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. Sir, the experience of hon. gentlemen opposite with the courts has been singularly unfortunate. Now, they propose a new procedure. They say : We will investigate you before a commitiee; we will investigate you in batches of 22, and it will be heads we win and tails you lose, because we are not subject to that investigation, we will proceed, because we do not take any risk ourselves, and we will put you to all the trouble we can before that conmittee. Sir, that does not commend itself to my mind as a fair proposition. I have admitted that, so far as I am concerned, I do not propose to say that the Liberal-Conservative party is immaculate : but I will say this, and say it with full confidence and lelief, that in an investigation held on fair terms, the Liberal-Conservative party has nothing to fear in a comparison with the Liberal party in the matter of purity. Sir, these hom. gentlemen have had some experiance in fighting election protests and in paying costs. They propose to try the Liberal-Conservatives now with public funds. They propose to have an investigation at Ottawa, into the elections in $2 \boldsymbol{2}$ constituencies of the Province of Quehec, in one batch, to summon what witnesses they like, and to pay them with public funds. Sir, that does unt strike me, looking at the two parties as contending for mastery in this country, as an eminently fair proposition ; and I defy hon. gentlemenopposite top produce one precedent in England or in Canada, since the trial of election petitions has been relegatell to the courts, of a proposal ever being made to investigate the expenditure of money in constituencies, hefore a Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Such a case could not arise in England, hecanse no member could be chargel there.

Mr. HCKEI. Sir, the virtue of the hon. gentleman from Queen's has bubbled over ; I thought it would. If there is one recompense that one has for leaving one's home and business, and coming here at a loss of money, it is to observe from time to time the virtue of hon. gentlemen opposite. It is a constant object lesson, and if one could forget the past, if one could forget the records of the election courts, if one could forget the little things that have happened in the Province of Quebec, one would be perfectly happy : but these recollections ohtrude themselves sometimes. Now, Sir, if this charge is bad, as I think I have establishel, if it is a charge which this House should not entertain, if it is a charge which is not sufficiently specific to be fair to the accused, if it is a charge which would occupy an intolerable deal of the time of this Parlianent and an unlimited amount of public money, then, Sir, this resolution as it stands should not be adopted by the House. The charges in reference to the Quehee and Lake St. John Railway are a little different. Is it charged that the Postmaster General received money out of the subsidies themselves? It is charged that he received money out of the said subsidies and from money raised upon the credit of the same and from parties beneficially interested in the same. It is not necessary to pass julgment upon that charge. It is not necessary to say whether that charge be sufficiently specific or not. But I would advise the hon. gentleman, if he is reframing his charges, to make his statement with regard to that one more specific. He has here strung together three alternatives: from the subsidies, from moneys raised on the subsidies, and from parties benefically interested in the subsidies. I think that I have shown that the statement that money was received from parties benefically interested in the sulsidies is not a charge for this House to investigate. If he means that the Postmaster General received money out of the subsidies, let him say so. Let him charge that specifically, and then ask this House for an investigation. To hear the hon. member for South Oxford, and the leader of the Opposition as well, one would think that the voting down of this resolution would conclude the matter. One would imagine that if this motion were disposed of by voting it down, there never could be an enquiry or investigation into the matter. If the hon. member for West Ontario desires to make these charges specific, there is ample time and copportunity for him to do so; and if he puts the motion before this House in a shape so vague and indefinite as I have shown this to be, he must take the consequences of being set right ly the House and being instructed to make his charge more definite and bring it more within the precedents and rules of the House. But I do not understand that this matter is concluded at all. Speaking for myself, and myself only, I say that if there are definite charges, within the scope of parliamentary enquiry, to be made against the Postmaster General, not only must they he investigated, but they will be. Pecamse this charge is rejected by the House is no reason whatever that this matter should not take another form and he brought to investigation.

some hon. MEMBERN. Hear, hear.

Mr. DICKFY. I do not exactly understand the meaning of the ircnical cheering of hon. gentlemen opposite. I do not know whether it foreshadows this, that hon. gentlemen opposite are going to shirk investigation and not nake charges. Possibly it may mean that, but time will tell. The members on this side, so far as I know, are willing and rearly and anxious to investigate any legal, proper and definite charge. It matters not to them who falls or what falls as a result of the investigation into those charges, but they do not propose, in order to gratify hon. gentlemen opposite and assist them in their own political schemes, to violate all fair-play and set a bad precedent for all time to come, a precedent which would be capable of being put to bad uses by a vicious majority and made an instrument of oppression to the minority in the future. I may say for myself, and this will be a good opportunity for hon. gentlemen opposite to cheer, that I have confidence in the (iovermment as regards an investigation into these and all similar charges. The Government has established a record with regard to investigations. The country has accepted and endorsed the record of the Government in this matter. The leader of the Opposition admitted that the country had accepted the statement of the leader of the House in the matter of these charges. He ssid that the country had taken him at his worl, and, Sir, a reputation of that sort in this Honse and before the country, endorsed and established by the country, is not to be over lorne by the rejection of a motion each as this, a motion as I have shown which does not deserve the consideration of the House. The hon. member for South Oxford addressed some rather violent observations this evening to the leader of the House, and the leader of the Opposition also favoured the leader of the House with some very strong remarks. I began to think that it was really the leader of the House who was in the box. The hon. gentleman who leads the Opposition said that Mr. Pacaud had done nothing which my hon. friend the Minister of Justice had not justified. I do not know whether on reflection the hon. gentleman is prepared to take back that remark. I regret very much that he thought fit to make it. I regret very much that he thought fit to connect the name of Mr. Pacand and the Minister of Justice at all. It is not a light matter that the leader of the Opposition should make a charge of that character against the Minister of Justice. From the position of the two gentlemen, it is in my judgment a highly serious matter. It would have been very easy for the leader of the Opposition, if the Minister of Justice had said anything of that chamacter, to quote what the Minister of Justice said, but he did not take that course. His statement was absolutely unfounded. Mr. Pacaud's crime, as I understand it, was a bargain ly which he agreerl to pay over a subsidy provided he got a certain portion. That charge is not made in this case nor anything like it : but in any case I defy the hon. gentlenain who leads the Opposition to find one word in the statement of the Minister of Justice to justify the charge made by the member for West Ontario. He simply addressed a legal argument to the House, and instead of meeting that legal argument, the leader of the Opposition took the ground of abusing the Minister of Justice in the way I have said. I think the leader of the Opposition is the last man who should have used Mr. Pacaul as a stalking-horse. I think as a matter of taste he would have done better to have left Mr. Pacand alone. The leader of the Opposition has said that Mr. Pacaud received his punishment at the hamls of the Province of Quebec. That is perfectly true. Mr. Mercier also received his julgment at the hamds of the electorate of the Province of Quelec. Sir, when that judgment was being held, when the Province of Quebec was considering its judgment on that important question, what position was taken by the hon. the leader of the Opposition himself? Mr. Mercier, when he appealed to the Province of Quebec, tried to draw a herring across the trail by raising a constitutional question. The leader of the Opposition followedhim in that effort. The learler of the Opposition invited the people of the Province of Quebec not to condemn Mr. Mercier and Pacaud. If the riews of the leader of the Opposition had been accepted by the people of the Province of Quebec, the leader of the Opposition would not be able to say to-day that Mr. Pacaud had received his punishment at the hands of the people of the Province of Quebec. I do not wish to discuss the issues that were before the people of Quebec at the last election, but I wish to say that Mr. Mercier and Mr. Pacaul had been tried beiore they went to the people, they had been tried by a tribunal to which Mr. Mercier had consented himself. They were then appealing to the great tribunal in constitutional countries, the people themselves, and this country will not easily forget and the gentlemen who sit behind the leader of the Opposition will not forget, that the great weight of the talents of the leader of the Opposition on that occasion was used to prevent the people of Quebec pronouncing a verdict upon Mr. Vercier.

Mr. McMULLEN. That is not true.
Mr. DICKEY. The hon. gentleman no doubt reads the Toronto Globe, and on the 8th March, the day after the election, that newspaper said:
"Men of all class, parties, races and religions joined in the general denunciation of the late Government."
The Globe forgot for a moment that the leader of the Opposition was not one of these. - "We cannot regard the result with unmixed feelings either of regret or of gatisfaction. We do not like to see even the name of Liberalism in Canada associated with defent or dishonour. * The best feature of the situation is that the people of Quebec have undoubtedly acted from worthy and honourable motives. They were determined that whatever other result might follow they would make it impossible for these men to govern the province. They were tired of extravagance and corruption. Their verdict was distiuctly a vote for better, more honest, more economical government. It is the most hopeful sign that has been seen in Canda for years."
In that statement, the leader of the Opposition was condemned hy his own chief organ. By that statement the learler of the Opposition was shown to have stood in the way of an effort to get " better: more honest and more economical govermment," and the leader of the Opposition was shown to have endeavoured to prevent the exhibition of " the best sign that has leeen seen in Canada for years.: I suppose the hon. gentleman exercised his franchise on that occasion, and, although it is illegal to ask him how he voted, I have no doult that he voted as he spoke, and supported the Mercierite camdilate. Now, this may be somewhat irrelevant.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Yes, rather.
Mr. DICKEY. The hon. gentleman says " rather:" It is not irrelevant wheu we take into consideration the spirit the hon. gentleman showed the other day. It all depends upon whose ox is gored. When corruption is rampant in his own party in the Province of Quelsec, the hon. gentleman eudeavours to stitle enquiry, he endeavours to prevent the people of the Province of Quebec from visiting that corruption with the punishment it deserves; but, when there is supposel corruption here in the LiberalConservative party, the hon. gentleman treats us to an address such as we had the other clay. I admit that the last part of my remarks has been extremely political. I have endeavoured to sepitrate it from the legal argument I made, and I hope I have induced some gentlemen in this House to agree with me that an investigation into the charges now as they stand would be establishing a bad precedent and would be unfair to be accused. In closing, I wish to reiterate my confidence that the Government will deal justly but firmly with this matter foreshadowed in this resolution, and to pledge myself to assist in any investigation that I believe honestly comes within proper parliamentary lines.
Mr. EDidAR. Mr. Speaker, I stind here tonight to reiterate with all the emphasis of which I am capable that I am prepared to prove by sworn evidence the charges which I have made and the impeachment which I have levelled against a Minister of the Crown. One word as to the arguments which we have heard against this enquiry from the hon. member for Cumberland (Mr. Dickey). He told us, to start with, that this was a pure matter of law. Perhaps he is satisfied to take that view of it, but I do think that the people in this country believe that there are some very important facts at issue in this case and not a mere quibble of law, as he wishes to make out. He began his speech by treating it as if it were a motion I was making to expel the Postmaster General from the House. His quotations and arguments were with reference to motions which have been made for the expulsion of members. Well, Mr. Speaker, it may come to that later on, but that is not what is before the House to-day. Take the case last year. The charges were made from this side of the House in connection with the Tarte-McGreery matter. One expulsion arose out of that, and there might be out of this ; and there was a case which arose out of that which was not an expulsion from the House but was an expulsion from office, and so that I think at least woukl follow the investigation of these charges. The hon. gentleman told us, to my amazement. that I had made no personal charge, no charge of a personal nature against the Postmaster fieneral. Well, I do not understand the English language if section . is not a charge of a personal nature. I say that :

" During this period and while the said railway was being constructed in part by means of said subsidies, the said Sir A. P. Caron corruptly, received large sums of money out of the said subsidies."
Now, if that is not it personal charge; a specific charge, and a charge of corruptly receiving public money, I to not know how the English language can make it so. He also tells us that this House has no right to investigate a charge of taking money from contractors. Well, that may be so in his view, but I wonder whether the jurisdiction of this House over its own members is any narrower than the jurisdiction of the senate across the way over its members. I wonder whether the leader of the (iovernment did not last session adrocate that that House should investigate the charge of taking money from contractors. They did it, and did it very thoroughly and profoundly. The hon. gentleman also says, just as the Minister of Justice told us the other day, that we must go to the courts to have these charges investigatect. He failell to tell us, I was waiting to hear him tell us, how you could frame a petition before the courts of justice, now or at any time, to attack the expenditure, by a Minister of the Crown, of $$ 100,000$ in 22 constituencies. Then there is another matter, and if he will consider it calmly for a few moments I do not think he will hear any other argument of that kind brought forward in this debate. Out of these 22 constituencies in which I charge and believe that so much money was corruptly spent on that occasion in 1887, the Government, with all their efforts and all their expenditure, were only able to carry seven seats. Well, now, a petition might have been filed against those seven members so elected, but I wonder how petitions could have been filed by us against any of the 15 cases where we elected members. There is only one way, under the electoral law, of raising a petition against a successful candidate, and that is for the simple and solitary purpose of disqualifying him. Now, in those 15 cases there is nothing in my charge seeking to disqualify any of the successful candidates, therefore, no petition could lie for a charge of this kind, it is only made against the Postmaster General. Therefore, to say that we should now, or at any former time, have been relegated to the courts to investigate this charge, is most unreasonable. Now, the hon. member professed himself horrified at the unfairness of our trying in this way to make a one-sided investigation into election matters in those counties. I am sure if it would please him, and if he will only supplement this charge, or if the other side will agree to it in any other way, we will be delighted to investigate all the expenses on the Liberal side in those counties on that occasion. Sir, I would challenge him or them in any way they choose, before even a tribunal appointed by the majority of this Honse, t go into an investigation of our election expenditure at any of those elections referred to here. So that we do not want to have it ex parte only, the hom. gentleman must help us a little to carry out the investigition if he wants it in that light. He challenged me to proluce an English precerlent for a comrse of this kind. Well, Sir, I am sorry to say for the sake of Canada, but proud to say for the sake of the mother land, that I could not get any precerlent of this kind in Eachland. If he wants to know the reason why, let him read the English press and their comments upon the investigation that took place hefore the Committee on Privileges and Elections of this House last year, aml he will timd out why I could get no precelent for any such case as this. Just before he sat down he referred to the fact of the Quebec enquiry: I womler he was not ashamed, after the speech he had made, to refer to the enguiries in the Province of Quebec. Why, Sir, they were not resisted there hy his Conservative friemls. The constitution was strained to make these enquiries, as he knows ; and I can tell him that he and his friends are straining the comstitution to-night to resist this empuiry ; so I think he should not have referred to Quebec. When I brought forward these charges I dill not make any remarks in supporting them on the assumption that they would be, at once acceled to by the House, by the Ministers, and especially by the Postmaster (ieneral himself. I thought then, and I think still, that the Postmaster Cieneral should have felt that these charges were certainly of so serious a character as to demand the most prompt and the most thorough investigation on his own account. Can he say that they are not serious: I suppose if he took the views of the hon. gentleman who has just spoken to-night, he might think they were only matters of law and not serions at all. But I would call the attention of the House to what the Minister of Public Works, a colleague of the Postmaster General's, said ahout these charges the other day. He said:
"These are charges by which, I believe, it is intended to take away that gentleman's honour."
That is the way the charges are looked at by one of his colleagues, a charge which would take away the hon. gentleman's honour. I think the Minister of Public Works was quite right in his view of the charges, and surely a charge that would take away a colleague's honour, ought to be investigated. Now, I noticed shortly after making these charges, an article in the Quelec Chronicle, a Conservative newspaper, almost an organ, as I understand it, of the Postmaster General himself :
" Mr. Edgar has brought a fearful accusation against the Postmaster General which, if proved. Would result in his permanent retirement from public life."
That is the view the Chronirle took of it, and that, I think, is the view the public will take of it, and the casuistry of hon. gentlemen opposite will never persuade the public that that is not the true view. What did the hon. memler for Muskoka (Mr. O'Brien) say? The hon. gentleman very often, in his speeches, gives considerable support to the views on this side of the House, but seliom goes so far as to give us a vote. I suppose he considers his tongue is his own, but that his vote belongs to his party. However, when his tongue got loose the other night, he said, although he is going to vote against this enquiry, I understand:
"If the statements which have been made are true there has been a gross and outrageous violation of trust." " A gross and outrageous violation of trust," and still these charges are too trifling to lee investigated loy a committee of Parliament. Most of us remember, Sir, an investigation which was held here on a comparatively trifling subject. in connection with Mr. Charles Rykert, and which resulted very seriously to him. I do not know that any of us consider that hisopinion of parliamentary homour was too retined, but what did he say about the charge from his place in the House. He said:
"I ask hon. members to give me an opportunity of defending myself before a , committee, where I can have the charges investigated.'
That is what Mr. Rykert said, but a Minister of the Crown to-day in this Parliament thinks otherwise of infinitely more scrious charges. I see the hron. Minister of Militia there, and I remember an:l he remembers, when some years ago in this House, I mate a charge from my place with which his name was commected--the hom. gentleman stood up in his place like a man with the courage which he has, and he demanded prompt investigation aml he grot it, although the repart has never been alopted by the House one way or the other. That showed a sense of honour in another of the colleagues of the Postmaster General. I thought, Nir, that if the Postmaster dieneral himself did not consider this a proper case to investigate, that he would have had colleagnes who would have insisted upon it, but what do we find? I find that the Minister of Justice solemnly stated in his place, on his responsibility as learler of the House, that there was no allegation of any pullic money having been appropriaterl. Why, Sir, what does lie mean ? Were not the subsidies pulbic money; were they not misappropriatel! Oh. I see, Mr. Spraker, what the Minister of Justice means. He knows they are public moneys, but he thinks they were appropriated for their proper purpose when they were placed in the Conservative funl. I see it now, tlrough I never conld see it before. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, from that point of view these public moneys were not misappropriated and the Minister of Justice is probably correct as usual. These cailways which are involved in this charge were aided ly the Dominion and Provincial Governments, and what I complain of is, the appropriation of Dominion subsidies by the Pustmaster General. I remember an occasion not so very long ago, when it was thought that the Parliament of Canada had jurisdiction to follow up and hunt down the expenditure of provincial subsidies of a railway leceause the Dominion also had contributed, or was roing to contribute, something to the same road. What did the leader of the Minister of Justice say in the Senate on the question of an investigation before the Private Bills Committee on the Baie des Chaleurs Railway. Ir. Abbott, the Premier, said last session :
"This Dominion is engaged in a sort of joint account With the Province of Quebec in constructing this road. There are $$ 175,000$ of this public mones which our copartners hare invested with ourselves, which have been diverted from the purpose of the grant, and arewe not interested in finding out what has become of it?"

He goes on to say :

" This matter is one in which it strikes me we are particularly interested, one that it is particularly the duty of this House to investigate, and 1 think that we should insist upon making this enquiry as far as the law and the practice of the House enables us to do so."
I could not use language more appropriate than
this to the present occasion, if I tried for a long time; but I could go a great deal further and say that these subsidies now in question are our sub. sidies, and that we have a ten-fold greater duty to find out what has become of them. The speech from which I have quoted was the celebrated speech in which the Premier wound up by appealing to the public to assist him in punishing the culprits, be they high or he they low, be they rich or be they poor. I do not know whether the Postmaster General can escape from some of these descriptions of his leader, but I would rather have supposed that he was either high or low or rich or poor, and that he should be reached by the strong arm of Parliament. Now, Mr. Speaker, remember that in that Baie des Chaleurs matter there was no misapplication of Dominion furds chargel as it is here: remember that there was no member of the Senate charged with misapplication of these funds and that there is a member of this House charged here: remember, sir, that there was no Minister or Privy Conncillor implicated there: when there is both a Minister and a Privy Commcillor implicated here. The Minister of Iustice also criticised these charges which I now make, and said that they were vague and indefinite. Well, Nir, I wili not repeat what his colleague the Minister of Public Works said abmot them, or what the Quebec Chomicle sail about them, or what the member for Muskoka (Mr. O’Brien) said alrout them, and I will not further argue that he can possibly consider them vague, when the whole independent press of this country, without exception as far as I have been able to learn, has said that these charges are not vague, but that they are explicit and clear and ought to be investigated. Perhaps I had better allow the Postmaster General to draw up these charges himself and let him have them just as he would like them to le. I do not know how else I can satisfy hon. gentlemen on the other side of the Honse. I dare say if the Postmaster fieneral had the drawing of these charges he would limit them, for instance, to the charge that he received from the Licke St. John Railway Company so much money out of the sulsidies, and another charge, that he received from the Temiscouata Railway Company so much money out of the sulsidies, and then he would valiantly disprove those charges. I imagine that these are the charges he would like to see there, from the fact that although there is not a syllable of allegation in $m y$ charge from leginning to end that he received money from either of these corporations as corporations, still, when he got up he told us with a great flourish of trumpets that he had voluntarily received telegrams or letters from the managers of those two companies saying that he had never received any moneys from those companies. Why, Mr. Speaker, nolsoly said he did. Does he inagine that anyborly would think or believe that a railway corporation like that of the Lake St. John Railway, with a board formed, for instance, of representatives of the city of Quebec, would calmly sit down at their board meeting and pass a formal resolution, or that a meeting of shareholders would pass a resolution to pay so much money out of their subsidy to the hon. Postmaster General for himself or his elections? No, Sir, it is absurd, and the hon. Postmaster General when he made that declaration was simply setting up a man of straw and knocking him down again. I think one of the most refined and beautiful arguments that I ever listened to in my life, so delicate that it required the greatest possible attention to catch it, was that of the hon. Minister of Justice, when he solemnly contended that. we could not be said to be charging a member of Parliament with these political crimes, lecause he had not the whole time been a member of this House. That was a most refined and delicate argument, but the Minister of Justice forgot for the monent that his colleague, if not always a member, was always a Minister of State and always a Privy Councillor. and that during the whole of that time he was either a member or a candidate. I would like also to draw the hon. gentleman's attention to this fact, that the election law is levelled against candidates rore than against members, and if he was ouly a candidate and not a member he was much more open to accusation. I do not propose, Sir, to go into the proofs that I am prepared to lay before a committee if I get it, but I would like just to say that I shall be able to prove that when the Postnister dieneral wais a canlidate, in $188 \%$. for the County of Quebec, at which election his agent returned his thtal election expenses of every kind, personal and political, at Sown, the hon. Minister personally -uperintended and directed and authorized the expenditure for that election of considerably more than ten times that amount ; and I suppose that would be nothing discreditalle for a Minister of the Crown to do. Perhaps it would not be discredital, le to Minister or a member of this House, but the statute makes it a misdemeanour and a crime in a candidate. Then, the Minister of Justice contended that we must show, as if I had not shown or offerel to show, that the offence was committed by the Postmaster fieneral in his capacity as a member of this House. I do not know what he means exactly by that ; lint, he cannot perhaps have seen the case of Mr. J. W. Hastings, a member of the English House of Commons, whoon the 21 st of March last, wasexpelled from that House unanimonsly for doing something which certainly he did not do as a member of the House. What was it that he did, sir? I find by the report of the occurrence in the London Times, that Mr. Justice A. L. Smith had sent a letter to the Speaker reporting the conviction of Mr. Hastings. The Timex report does not give the nature of that conviction, but a letter which was read in the House, sent to the Speaker by Mr. Hastings himseif, and which was commented upon and not disputed by either Mr. Gladstone or Mr. Balfour, stated the nature of the conviction. The letter is to this effect :
" I thought it right to plead guilty to the indictment preferred against me, as I did undoubtedly dispose of trust property withont due regard to the provisions of tho will under which it enme into my hands: nevertheless, it was without any intention of appropriating the money to was withoue any intean of use, or of willy defranding any person."
Now, if the Minister of Justice can show that this was done by Mr. Hastings as a member of the House of Commons, he will be a great deal more clever than I give him the credit of being.

Mr. O'BRIEN. That was the judgment of a court of law.
Mr. EDGAR. That is not the point which I am referring to, although I will tell my hon. friend what I think alout that in a moment. What I said was this : I said that in the Hansard report of the speech of the hom. Minister of Justice, you will see that he claims that I did not show that the offence was committed by the hon. Postmaster General in his capacity as a member of this House. I say that that has nothing to do with the matter, and this case of Mr. Hastiugs and many other English cases on which it is foumdel, show that a member will lee expelled from the English House of Commons for an offence committerd not at all as a member of the House, and even for the comparatively venial offence of misappropriating trust moneys unter a will. Now, Sir, surely the trust which the hon. Postmaster (ieneral had of the public funds was infinitely more sacred than the trust which this man had under a will; and if he did what I charge him with doing with those public funds, wiil the hon. member for Muskoka deny what he himself said the other day, that this would be a gross breach of public trust ?
Mr. OBRIEN. Undoubtedly the hon. gentleman is correct so far as that goes: but he cammot avoid the distinction that only in the case in which a felony has heen charged and proved against a member of the House of Commons he would be expellerl -

Mr. ED(iAR. That is not a felony.
Mr. OBRIEL. Suppose the hom. Postmaster General had been tried at an election court and there had been proved grilty of conduct unhecoming a member of this House, this Honse would ine justified in expelling him. But that is a totally different thing from this Honse undertaking to investigate charges which should be investigated in a different court.

Mr. EDGAR. I am very glad of the interruption of the hon. gentleman because it will enable me to clear up that point to his satisfaction. His claim is that we cannot investigate a charge of that kind against an hon. member luat that he must lee convicted by some court outside. Very well. The Sadlier case, which has leen quoted lefore in this debate, is a well-known case. It is not in itself on all fours with the present one. It was a motion for expulsion in the first place, but in the arguments of eminent men who spoke on that case, such as the Attorney General for Ireland and Lord Palmerston, we find the principle laid down, as the House will see by my quotation, that ia man may le expelled on conviction by a court, on his oun confession, or on the report of a committee of the House. In the English Ham.ard, No. 143, page 1402, Mr. Fitzgerald, the Attorney General for Ireland, lays this down as his view of the law. He says in 1i013 Mr. Askill was expelled. The resolution stated that the House had examined several witnesses and found that Mr. Askill was the author of a certain lwok and, therefore, ordered him to be expelled. Now, that was not a court of justice and it was not a conviction. It was an investigation by the House of Commons. In the same volume, at page 140.5, Lord Palmerston, in the Sadleir case, says:
"W We should not take proceedings in the nature of expulsion vithout being abe to found then on soue formal, indisputable ground, such as conviction or confession or a report, after due examination of a committee."
I hope the hon. gentleman now will be satisfied that we have English precedents for examining into serious matters of this kind. We have always done it. It was never refused until last session, when it was refused in the case of the then Postmaster (ieneral, now the Minister of Railways, and that. he will tind, started them, and the dovernment propose to continue and make precerlents in this comatry which he will not find in Enigland, and which were never found in Canada lefore. In another volume of Hansard, the Sadleir case comes up again. remember that was a case of expulsion, that was a stage beyond this; and the arguments that were adranced in favour of expulsion are not necessary for an enguiry into the conduct of a Minister and a member. Mr. Roehuck first moved it, and it stood over, aind then at a later day the Attorney Cieneral for Ireland, Mr. Fitzgerall, movel it himself. He said:
"I have looked into the precedents and they show the right of expulsion may be exercised either for (1) positive crime: (2) offence against Hoase ; (3) acts bringing religion into discredit ; (4) or that were discreditable ; (5) members have been guilty of fraudulent practices; or (6) other acts which showed them unfit to exercise the trust which their constituents had reposed in them."
If proving these charges does not show that the Postmaster (ieneral is unfit to exercise the trust which his constituents have reposed in him, what would it show: The Minister of Marine made a nice point when he said I had not, as I should have, charged his colleague with public woblery. Well, I did not put it in those words, lout in words which I certainly intended to mean robling the public. If it is not public robbery for a member to take money ont of public subsidies, I would like to know what is. Then the Minister of Public Works drew another leautiful defence. He silid that I had failed to set out conspiracy, that conspiracy was not shown in terms in my charge : and therefore it should fail. The hon. gentleman is a lawyer. Does he not know the law of conspiracy" Let him read up his Russell on Crimes, ald he will see it is there declared that "an malawful conspiracy is to be inferred from the acts of the parties." And I have tried to make clear what the acts of his hon. colleague were, and does not Russell go on to say that, " not once in a thousand times can it be otherwise proved $!$ " So I think, if I get a chance to go on and prove these charges, there will be what is under the law, unless the Minister of Justice should change it in his new criminal code, a most abominable conspiracy. The Minister of Public Works was perhaps more candid than any of them. He said that I was trying to draw the Conservative party into the mire, and they were not ready to submit the whole party to investigation. We thus really find the reason why the party is to be called upon to vote down this enquiry. The Minister of Public Works has stated it suuarely and frankly. and I have no doubt it is the real reason. They fear should chey consent to an investigation, the system of corruption of the Conservative party will be disclosed. That part of the charge the hon. gentleman thinks does not only involve the Minister or the Government but involves the whole Conservative party. Well, if it does involve one of the great parties in this country, it calls all the more for investigation. I think the country will believe that if the Minister of Public Works is right in saying that we are attempting to drag the whole Conservative party into the mire by proving the truth of these charges the sooner we do so the better. Perhaps the hon. gentleman is right. Twenty-two counties are involved, only one-third of the Province of Quebec, and one-tenth of the whole Dominion. An:l if that district was attempted to be bought up by S100,OOO, a simple rule of three will show that it woull reguire, what I have no doubt it did, $$ 1,(000,(1) K)$ for the whole Jominion. Why sir, after all the expenditure of $$ 100,0(0)$ in 22 constituencies they only carried seven or eight of them, and I wonder how much it cost them to carry the 130) or so seats they carried at that election. That is perhaps again a proof that the Minister of Public Works was quite right when he thought that this investigation would loring the whole Conservative party into the mire. Now, I think, and I thought that the whole Government as it Government ought to insist upon this investigation, because it is not the matter of the Postmaster General alone. Under our constitution, the whole (iovernment collectively are responsible for the act of a colleague, and they are not going to say or to pretend, I fancy, that they are not the same Gios. ermment, that the shuffie of one or two seats which took plate last summer changes the Covernment. Why, they are proud of being the same (iovernment, with the same policy, amd, if they are the same Government, they have a retrospective responsibility for all the acts of each colleague unless they pullicly and specifically repudiate these acts when they are first brought to their notice. That there can be any doubt of that 1 question. It is important enough, however, I think, to make it clear. Lord Derby, on that subject. of collective responsibility of the whole Cabinet for the acts of a colleague, said, as reported in the English Henvarl, No. 150, on the 14th May, 18iss :
"Now with respect to the liability of all the members of a cabinet for the act of a single member, I wish to say that no man can put forth more distinctly or clearly than I do the constitutional doctrine that every member of the Governuent is responsible for the acts of every other member, whether these acts were previously known or not, provided the members of the Government continued to act together as a Government. Remaining in office and acting together all the members of the Government take upon themselves a retrospective responsibility for what their colleague has done which they can in no way attempt to shake off."
Now the Ministers are absolutely and entirely just as responsible as the Postmaster General is hinself for the weight of these charges, unless and until they have repudiated his conduct and disclaimed responsibility for him and expelled him from the Cabinet. The honour of one is in the keeping of all. There is a name they are accustomed to conjure with on the other side of the House, and I anu sure they will not dispute the view Sir John Macdonald took in a very recent case indeed as to what should be the attitude of his government when charges were even indirectly levelled at them. Sir John Macdonald, as reported in the Canadian Hansard of 1890 , page 450 , when the Rykert case was under discussion, said:
"I can onlystate that if that correspondence in any way, in any phrase or sentence, reflects upon the honour of the Ministry, or of any member of it, we are quite ready to defend ourselves, and to ask for the assistance of the hon. gentlemen opposite in the investigation.
Perhaps these charges do not reflect on the honour of the Ministry or any member of it. I rather think they do. I think the country will say so, and Sir John Macdonalil then said that he would ask for the assistance, as he did ask for the assistance, of members on this side of the House in a committee to investigate those charges. Now, I think and I thought that, for the honour, if not of themselves, for the homour of the Crown that they represent, they would have instantly demanded this investigation. They represent the historic dignity of the Imperial Crown of England, and surely the honour of the representative of that Imperial Crown in this country should have been protected by these Ministers. I am not saying that the representative of the Crown should take this matter into his own hands. I am saying that the Ministers of the Crown should have been the first to protect his honour, and they are his sworn advisers. Then, what is more important, what I feel more strongly about, is that this Ministry represents the honour of the Crown which is the symbol of the dignity and the power and the majesty of the perple of Canala, and it is that which is insulted hy a charge of this kind remaining for a moment uninvestigatell. Why is it that the Postmaster General is defended so strenumsly, so bitterly by his colleagnes? What is the reason? It is a little puarling to us on this side of the House certainly: He is not a man of signal ability. I do not think his friends will say that. He is not a man of vast usefulness to the Cabinet as an administrator or as a debater, but he is a man no doubt of great lwoldness as an operator, and a proof of it is in this transaction contained in these charges. He is not as meek as the hon. member for Three Rivers (Sir Hector Langevin), he is not as meek or as timid as that hon. member. I can imagine the hom. the Postmaster (ieneral saying to his colleagues: $*$ Well. gentlemen, what are you going to do alout it " We will hang together or we will hang separately: " and they had determined to hang together: Why, after all, should they not defend their colleague: looking at it from a political point of view-it short-sighted point of view, perhaps. lut one which commends itself to most men on the other side? They have a majority strong enough to vote down anything they like. Arguments are not necessary. The majority is large enough, and very well under control. I am sure also that the Ninisters and their followers feel now, and often shake their heals about it and say, that the TarteNefreevy enguiry of last session was a great mistake and they should never have given it at all, and they are determined that that mistake shall nut be repeated, that they must put their foot down at last and have no more enguiries. I can understand that position as one that commends itself to their juigment. Besides, nearly all those critical bye-elections are passed and the danger is over for about four years, and hon. gentlemen can do just alout as they please, and trust to the shortness of public opinion to forget all about it before they appeal to the country again. Besides, a man who cam raise the wind for election purposes so well as the PostmasterGeneral, is invaluable to that party, he camnot be spareal: they will have more elections, and they will want him again. How insignificant, after all, were the effiorts proved last sessinn of the hon. member for Northumlierland (Mr. Cochrane)-here and there a miserable $\mathbb{S Q 0 0 0}$ picked up from some bridge tender. His intention was praiseworthy, I admit, and he is to be commended for his good intentious, but he did not go alout it with the hand of a master, as the Postmaster General did, sweeping in his tens and hundreds of thousands out of the subsidies granted to these great corporations. Why, over another case. During that time the hon. gentleman was in the Cabinet and was voting for the subsidies. How simple it would have been for him to leyy a toll of, say, 10 per cent on those subsidics. I am just supposing the case, we have not gone into, the evinlence yet, we will see that nore in detail when we get there. No doult the supporters of the fiovernment will consider. aml eren the Minister of Justice. I suppose, with the casuistry which distinguishes him sometimes, will convince himself, that after all the end justities the means. Aud what is the glorions end that is accomplished by this boodling? Why, sir, it is to maintain the loyalty and unity of Canada to the British Empire, to maintain the old flag and the oll monopolists, and surely that eml justifies a great deal. The means to that end are the votes of public money, and what olject could lee more patriotic than to allow a reasonable and sufficient proportion of those public moneys to filter into the pockets of the Minister aml then be disseminated among the electors for the good of the oll flag " Quite as honest as the Franchise Act, quite as honest as the Gerrymander Act, I do not see much difference myself. But I understand now why they are sticking to it, and going to vote it down; the country will understand it, too. Of course, last session there was an enguiry into the charges made by Mr. Tarte. They were not as direct as these, but there was no yuibbling about them, they were allowed. The present leader of the House was not the leader of the House when that enguiry was begun : but he became leader of the House as the result of that enguiry. The hon. member for Three Rivers (Sir Hector Langevin) was allowed by the majority on the other side to escape with a very narrou squeeze. He was just squeezed enough and hackened enough to puthimout of his place in the Cabinet, and as leader of the House, But he was not blackened enough to put him out of his seat as member for Three Rivers, and so he incekly and mililly consented to retire from the Ministry, continuing to support the Government, grateful for having heen let off easicr than his fr:end Mr. Merireery. Now. ['will not continue my remarks any further. So far as I ann concerned I will leave this matter, as I must leave it, in the hands of the representatives of the perple in this House. I hope yet, before they vote this 'own, they will hesitate longer. ant perhaps see new light: but if they do not, all I can siy is this: that my convictions are so strong, and my knowlelge so accurate, as to the truth of these allegations, that I shall, if the opinion of this Honse is against me, appeal to the people and to the press of the country to see what they think about it. I hope it will not be necessary to do so, but I give notice to all my colleagues in this Parliament that I am not geing to let this thing drop, even if there is a hostile vote on this motion to-night.

Mr. CURRAN. The hom. gentleman who has just resumed his seat, following, as he did, an hon. gentleman who had made a very learned and a very appropriate address upon the value of the issues before the House, has certainly disappointed those who expected that he would make some attempt, at all events, to meet the argument put forth $1, y$ the hon. member from Cumberland (Mr. Dickey), instead of contenting himself with speaking upon a variety of subjects having more or less, but generally speaking very much less, reference to the point at issue, and ocupying the time of this House without any profit or advantage whatsoever. He ended his speech by saying that if this motion was voted down he would appeal to the public of Canada and to the press of Canada. can tell him, speaking for myself, and speaking, I helieve, for a large number of members on this side of the House, that if the charges were brought speritically and in such a manner as that they cond le fairly investigated, an investigation would be granted if those who think as I do have rotes enough in this House to do it. The hon. gentleman has refused to take up the gamelet that was thrown down to him hy the hon. member for Cumberland when he declared that the charges were not specific enongh, that they were subject to very grave ohjections. I supposed that he wonld have endeavoured to show that these charges were sufficient, that they were specific, and were such as an hon. gentleman occupying a seat in this Honse would he expected to meet for his own honour and for his owin dignity. Instead of that. he occupied the time of the House with a dissertation upon the joint responsibility of each and every member of the ciovernment, just as if anylooly had challenged anything of that kind. He spent his time telling us how this House had power to in. vestigate the charges against any one of its mem. hers, just as if anybody had alleged the contrary. Tite only thing that hats heen said in an atverse direction was that the charges should be maide in the same manner that the meanest criminal in this country has a right to demand that charges against him should be made. Sir, we are here in this parliament face to face with what is supposed to le a charge against the honour and the character of one of the public men of this country, and a member of the Arministration of the day. One would suppose naturally that in view of that fact, hon. gentlemen would approach this question with something like a judicial spirit. We are told by the leading members on hoth sides of the House that we are here in our judicial capacity to inve:tigate any such charge as this: but I ask you, Mr. speaker, and I ask those who have been listening to the speeches that have been made, what kind of a judicial spirit has been n!anifested on the other side of the House in this matter. What kinif of a julicial spirit was manifested in the closing remarks of the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Eilgar) when he dragged in everything that could possibly arouse party spirit and party hatred in the breasts of men here. What was the judicial spirit manifesterl by the hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) to-night, a gentleman who commenced his speech some weeks ago in this House, who contimued it at Ingersoll, and who wound it up here this evening. In each and every sentence that he addressed to the House, was there a jurlicial spirit manifested, or was there not merely an attempt maxle to shatter the proud reputation of the hon. Minister of Justice in this country, i reputation which he envies, a reputation which no man on the opposite side of the House has ever yet achieved, and a reputation that has carriel the Conservative flag to victory all over Canada. The hon, member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) attempted to destroy that reputation when he said to-night that the defence made hy the hon. Minister of Justice was worse than the horrible crimes that were imputed to his colleague. The Minister of Justice was told by that gentleman that he hail disgraced his high office, and that he had dergraded himself. In every word from beginning to end of that speech, made by one of the oldest parlianentarians in the country, there was an attempt made at lefamation and vilification of the worst kincl. I am satisfied when that speech goes to the country to-morrow, side by side with the speech made liy the leader of the Opposition the other day, the people will find that there is no desire on the part of hon. gentlemen opposite to see justice done to the gentleman accused here, or to insure that justice to him which would be meted out to the meanest criminal in the land lrought before a court of justice. There is not merely an attempt made to destroy his character, but an attempt to impugn the honestry of the Minister of Justice and to degrade him in the eyes of the people who now hold hina in such high esteem. I will refer now to the statement manle by the hon. lealer of the Opposition a few minutes ago. He saicl:
"The language of the Minister of Justice is far different when he speaks on the hustings and when he speaks on the floor of the House. When the hon. gentleman was before the people of this country and when the Government of which he was a member was asiailed for bribery and corruption, for winning elections by vicious practices the honourable gentleman was brave, and he stated that he was willing to give a hearing to every man who made a charge against the Government or any of its members. that he was welcome to make that charge and to have it investigated, that the Government was afraid of nothing. When the hon. gentleman is taken at his word, and charges are made, how does be answer? He answers by the merest quibbling and pettifogging eyer heard in any court of justice to defend a vicious case."
I like to hear the leader of the Opposition talk ahout bravery, especially with recent history leefore our eyes as to his oun conduct in matters that are now notorious throughout the country. I wonld not have lirought this matter into the debate were it not that it was introduced by the last speaker and others on the opposite side of the House. Lanst year when we had an investigation against the exMinister of Public Works, the leader of the Opposition showed his bravery when he danced the war dance, and set up the war whom, and brantished his tomahawk over the prostrate form of his adversary in politics; and when 1 told him on the floor of this Honse of an investigation that was taking place elsewhere, and of his politital friends that were leing proven to be steeperl to the lips in corruption and robbery of the public fumds of the country, he said: Let the proof be mate, let the charges be established and I will renounce those who have leen guilty of these crimes. Well, Mr. Speaker, the charges have been proved, and not only was the proof made of the miseralle $$ 100,000$ in the Baie des Chaleurs affair, but it was shown that letters of crelit were teeming for fifties and hundreds of thousamels of dollars and that the Province of Quebec was robbed by the band. What was then the position of the brave man who now censures the hon. the Minister of Justice for lack of bravery? Why, in the very opening of the proceedings, he spoke of the conduct of the Lieutenant Governor, whose action brought to light this rascality by which many hon. gentlemen opposite occupy their seats in this House, and he described that action of the Lieutenant Governor as conduct that would reluce the Province of Quebec beneath the position of the republics of Spanish America.

According to the leader of the Opposition it was the Lieutenant (iovernor of Quebec who was degrading the province and it was not the band of robbers, it was not the rascals, it was not those who say to the present day that all they did and all that they stole was for the leader of the Opposition and his friends. Only last week when the constable was at the dow of some of these men that utterance was made, as it was made on the public hustings during the election. The investigation in Quebec provel that pullic honesty was outraged, that public morality haid heen outragen, that honour had been trampled under foot, and that religion had Ireen degraded, but the honourable and brave man who leads the Opposition in this House, and who attacks the Minister of Justice showed his hravery then and fulfilled his promise made to this House and to this country, by starting off to the Province of Ontario and valiantly telling the people there that he was realy to answer for his own sins, but not for the sins of those with whom he had been associated. That was the grand denunciation, that was the display of bravery. He dare not denomee the man who was guilty, because that man had him in his power and he has him in his power yet. Let me ask what was the value of the tanit cast at the Minister of Justice and what was the basis for it? I will guote the words of the Minister of Justice on this very sulbject. He said:
"I have to repeat again that if these gentlemen have any charges to make against any member of the Government in regard to the propriety of granting these subsidies we are here to meet them and this is the place to meet them.'
There he challenged hon. gentlemen opposite if they haul any charge to make in regard to the granting of these subsidies, if there had been any conspiracy in the matter in regard to the giving of these sub,sidies between the Gevernment and any member of the (iovernment, that th:y were prepared to meet them. In another part of that speech the Minister of Justice says:
" I have already assured the House that if any charges are framed which do come within that category they will are framed which do come within that category they will be entertained, and there will be no opposition on this side of the Mouse to on investigation. I hare already stated, in so far as the Government is concerned, that they are here to meet any accusations which may be made in that regard.'
Was this language piain? Was this language yet, in the face of that, we are told that different language was used here on the floor of this House from that used on the hustings throughont the country, and hon. gentlemen opposite expect that the members of this House and the people of the country are going to take stock in such statements so insolently made in such an insulting language. Now, this matter presents itself to my mind in three different phases. The charges as laid refer, first, to the Postinaster General personally ; in the second place, they may lee treated as to the allegations affecting prineipally the elections of 1887, as I understand the reading of the document, although other gentlemen seem to think that they apply to elections extending from 1882 to 1891 ; and thirdly, we are asked to deal with this question by referring it to a committee of the House. Now, the position we tatre is this: we complain of the vagueness of these charges. We say they should be specific and should present a prima facie case of guilt. against the accused. Well, the hon. Minister of Jnstice, whose speech seems to form the theme of all that has been said on the other side, made this statement as to how these charges should lie laid before the House :
"Sir, before considering in tetail what these chargez are, or whether they come up to the standarl of making an accusation of misconduct by a member of this House in his capacity as a member of this House I wish particularly to direct the attention of the Houseto the importance of observing that that rule is strictly complied with by any person who desires this House to exercise its judicial functions, and to sit and deliberate upon the conduct of a member. It will not do at all to say that some charge is implied, that some charge is put fortard which may be capable of one construction, and equally capable of another construciion. The House has to see especially, when charges are deliberately framed as these have been, that they bear that plain construction upon their face. and that the nember who makes them shall not afterwards be in a position to sav that he did not intend to make such a charge, but that he intended to charge some personal impropriety, some breach of the election laws upun the member whom he accuses."
1 propose to defend that position, first by the preceilent costablished by the Lileral party in the Province of Ontario in $15 \%$, and secondly, by the statements mate by hom. gentlemen opposite in their speeches since the beginning of this debate. Let me first refer to the motion male by Mr. Cameron in the Ontario Assembly in 18i2, wherein he asked for a select committee on a general charge in the following words:--
"A select committee to enquire whether any and what corrupt imlucement or offer was malle to the IIon. E. B. Wood, a member of this House, to induce him to resign his position as Treasurer of the Province of Gntario, by the Hon. Filward Blake or any other member of the present Alministration while members of the Opposition in the legislative Assembly, said, eommittee to have power to sent for persons and papers."
Now, it would seem to the non-professional reader that this was very straighforwaral and plain language, that what was meant was stated; but let us see how this demand for a committee was met by Mr. Plake, the party aculnen, who was at the heal of the Goverument. and liy members of the Goverment, who withont leing named were also implicated. In a very elabonate argument hased upon what had leen stid by Mr. Blake, during the debate in the House, the ciloly of the following day said:
" It might be supposed that. on muving this resolution the grounds of the charge would be stated clearly and distinctly to the House. This was the more necessary from the extreme ragueness of the resulution itself. It will be observed. first, that no responsibility was assumed therein by the member making it; secondly, that the nature of the alleged inducement is not specified : and thirdly, that the other members of tie Administration gaid to haye been parties to the transaction are not named in the indictment.
The Glote lays down the iloctrine further:
"Certain principles, perfectly well defined, govern the course of the House under such circumstances. The function assumed is judicial, and it is necessary to provide. as absolutely as possible, in the first place, that the charge shall, if true, be brought home ; and, in the next, that the accuser shall have no chance of going back on his words. if he is found to hare charged his fellow member falsely.
"The very basis of the whole proceeding should be the possession by the Assembly of a strong prima facie (case) of Euilt against whoever may be the offender or accessory to the proceedings complained of. Without this no such charges should ever be made. Eren the meanest felon is entitled to this much at the hands of a grand jury before he can be put upon his trial."
The Globe elaborated the same argument as that put forward this evening by my hon. friend from Cumberland (Mr. Dickey), and went. on to show what principles were involved, and here is what he stated :
"A principle. and a most important one too was at stake. In an Assembly whose procecdings are strictly regulatel by precedent, a very grave responsibility rests upon the Government representing the majority to do or allow to be done nothing that will curtail the privileges or jeopardize the rights of those who or now, are may be at a fiture time, in a minority. Here was a vague charge levelled at five gentlemen by a member who would not say to which of them he expected to attach the stigma of of foul an atet as the bribing of an adviser of the executive to forsake his colleagues in the midst of a crisis when the rxistence of : Government was trembling in the balance. lint suppose that the case were reversed: that the accoser wasa Minister with a strong majority at his back and the acensed some too aggressive member of a weak Opmesition. The charge might be as vague as suited the pmopuses of the accuser : the committee struck with lue regarl to the wishes of the Guvernment: the proceedinm: sission 10 session:-the charge still kept hanging over the unfortunate victim, it might be a general election, and the precedent of yesterday quoted in justification of a refusal to make the indictment so clear and specific that there should be no pretense for evading a decision if a satisfactory answer were forthcoming."
Thas we find that the very ablest man in the party of hom. gentlemen opposite. upon an occassion similar to this, when a eharge was bronght which was certainly far more pointerl, intelligible and easily disposser! of hy way of evilence than that now lovelled at the Postmaster lieneral, attacked the ehatrge on atconnt of its vagneness, fall on the gromml that it womld he majust not to take a legal stami, a stathl that would le consistent with the practice of the British Varliament aml omm own Parliament up to that time, and to preserve in the strictest integrity the rights of every member of the Honse, whether he was a member of the dovernnent or not. So we find in the mouth of their strongest exponent of eonstitutional rloctrine, the rery argument that we are now placing before this Honse ann the conntry in meeting the charge which hats been levelled against the hon. Postmaster Gieneral. Now, will it lee contemed that this charge is more specific than the one presented liy Mr. (ameron: Will it he contended that the Postmaster (ieneral is not entitled to the same protection as the meanest felon in the country? Is it not the duty of this fiovemment, not omly to protect the one who is in a majority here. but inso to hesjtate establishing a precerlent which may be most dangerons in the future for the minority and not in accord with the comstitutional law of Parliament. We have, in the woris of the hon. nember for Bothwell, a justitication of the position taken liy the Minister of Instice. I pointed ont, in my opening remarks, whot the Minister of Justice said, ant? will take the liberty of doing songain. He said that the Honse las to see specially, when charges are deliberately framed, as these hive leen, that they bear tant plain construction upon their fite amd shall not lee susceptible of two or more constructions. Well, We find that the hon. member for Bothwell, with these elanges in his hand, answering the Minister of Justice, told us :
"This House is the custodian of the public treasury. The hon. gentlemen who holds the public moness of this country is a mere agent of this House; and we have a right to enquire, eren though the enquiry should extend back to 188\%. If a charge of misappropriation of public moneys is made against a man in publiclife, he is not fit to be there in charge of the public treasury. If he advised the Crown to make these appropriations, and had an understanding with one of the railuray companies participating in them, that these moneys or a portion of them should go to him. we ought to know it; we are entitled to know it : and Sir. we are entitled to know it by an investigation conducted by this House, and conducted solely by this House. That being so, this motion ought to be carried, and it will be an admission that there is some-

I am prepared to agree with the hom. gentleman that if any Minister or any member had advised the Crown to make certain appropriations, and had an understanding with a railway company to receive a portion of the amounts, we ought to know all the particulars. Into a charge such as that, if brought before the Honse, no fiovermment coulit refuse to grant an enguing. If the charge, oat of which the hon. meniler for Bothwell says he cian wring such an indictment, were properly lain! in unequivocal terms hefore the Honse, there conld le no objection to in investigation. But there is no such charge. With all his legal ability, the hom. gentleman cammot find, from the beginning to the end of this accusation, a single line to the effect that there was an umerstanding between the Post master General and any railway company, whereby he adrined the (rown to make these appropriations on comlition that the company should make lim a participant in the moneys they received. There is no man in this House, including the hon. member for Bothwell, who cin find any such charge in the resolution hefore us. In that respect we have a justification of the statement made hy the Minister of Iustice. But we have more than that. We have not only the fact that two of three hon. members opposite have each given a different construction to these charges, hut we have the hon. member for Bothwell himself saying that he umlerstands these charges to be calpable of two different constructions : and he goes on to say, inspeaking against the approintment of a commision which might possibly le granted in this matter, a sulject to which I shall adilress myself hriefly in it few moments :
"A commission is a creature of the Administration. It is appointed, not to investigate the conduct of the Government, but to investigate the conduct of those who are suh)ordinate to the Government and who are responsible to the Govermment. If une of these hon. gentlemen sitting on the Treasury benches is charged with wrong-doing, can it be for a moment said that they themselves are the proper parties to advise the Crown as to who shall be appointed to investigate their conduct? To whom is the report to be made? Why, to themselves. Who is to advise the Crown upon that report? Why, the very gentlemen who are accused, and nobody else. They are the parties who are to tell the Crown whether they ought to be dismissed or Whether they ought to be retained, upon the evidence that the commission has taken. Is it not clear that if these hon. gentlemen hare the appointment of the commission by whom they are to be tried, that they will make it, so far as they are concerned, a very merciful tribunal, indeed."
So that we have it here, not merely that the Postmaster lieneral stands accused of having conspired with this railway company, but that the whole (iovernment of the Dominion are pointed to ats a band of traitors, to use the words of the loyal knight who aldressed us in the beginning of the evening, and are every one of them upon their trial. We have it from one hon. gentleman that this is a huge conspiracy, a conspiracy in the broalest and worst possible form. But there is no allegation to show that this is a conspiracy. There is nothing to show that the position taken in the first instance liy the hon. memier for Bothwell has any justification, of that the prisition taken by him in the second ease is at all justifiable, and that all the members of the Government are implicated and unable to act in a marter of this kind. It will be satisfactory to all those who have followed this delnate to know that the position taken by the Minister of Justice is justified, not only hy precelent of this country as well as precedent in the mother land, hat hy the utterances as well of hon. gentlemen opposite. There is another point which has been variously dealt with by different speakers, and that is the statement of the Minister of Justice that the secomd hanch of the subject should have been dealt with hy the ele ition courts. He said:
"We have to consider whether the accusations which are brought forward are accuzations which some better qualified tribunal in this country is not clothed with powers to determine. If the constitution has erected at tribunal in the coantry which has jurisdiction over such matters athl if the laws which govern us all, us as well as our constitucute, give to these tribunals a right and a procedure io carry on investigations, it is most proper that the House shouht, if posible. dectine to exercise any julicial functions on it part, and leare to the tribunal which is gualitied by the constitution and the statutes of this country, the power, the right and the duty to determine and investigate the complaint, whetherit he of a member who desires to make an accusation here, or of any person vutide of this House."
Now this worried the hon. member for Buthwell atereat deal, and he replied:

- Cnless men interested in the trial of election petitions chanse to tile a petition, you have no redress. Parliament is perfecty helples. A wrong may be done in twenty constituencies: half a million of the public money may he stolen from the public treasury and so applied: but if swu cannot find twenty men in those constituencies to file peritions. the gither 195 constituencies have no redres:."
Well, it Was the deliberate policy of this Parliament, ats it has leen of the Parhament of Great Britain, that these matters, which had solong occupied the House of Commons with such very unsatisfactory results, should tre referred to a court of justice. But the gentlemen opposite, upon various oceasions, whenever it suited their purpose, have never tired of iterating and reiterating that this Honse had not abuegated its jurisiliction, that it hal concurrent jurisiliction with election courts in such matters, anm that it was not only our privilege but our daty to drive men from this Honse who have been proved guilty of corruption, although these matters shoukd Pe more properly relegateit to the courts of justice. I like consistency. It is a matter of congratulation that the policy enunciated by the Minister of Tustice is one which on this side of the Honse has always heen followed. lut 1 can hardly say there is math consistency in the conduct of hon. gentlemen opposite. Let me remind the House of a case which Wras very willely spoken of and written about throughout the lengthand breadth of Camadia a few years ago. you will all remember that in $188{ }^{-}$ this sile of the House lost one of its most promising members, one of the most promising voung men in Canalis, Mr. Donald Mc.Master, through an election held in the County of (ilengary, where he was opposed hy the late Mr. Purcell who belonged to the other side of the House. That matter was in the courts. Mr. McMaster went before the judge, and proved not merely that corrupt practices had prevailed in that election, but that sums of money umprecedented in the history of elections in this country had been lavished there, aml that he had been defeated through that lavish expenditure. Moreover, he proved to the satisfaction of the presiding juige that the candidate opposed to him had loeen guilty of personal corruption, and not only was the election roided but Mr. McMaster's opponent was disqualified for sever years. According to the present statement of hon. gentlemen opposite, that gentlemin was anfit and unworthy to sit in this Honse. lut his case being brought hefore the Supreme Court, not upon its merits, not upon the merits of the julgment which had ammulled the election and deprived him of his franchise for seven years, not hecause the evidence was riscredited of any one out of the host of witnesses who proved that money had flowed like water and that Mr. Purcell had expended it himself, but on a mere technicality that a few hours had elapsedafter a certain notice should have been given was not given in time, the julgment was reversed on that gromm, and that gentleman came into this House and sat hete by the side of theleater of the Opposition. We knew that the matter had been referreal to the conrts, we knew that the policy of the country expressed through larliament hith consigned those matters to the courts either on the merits or on technicalities, as the case might be, and therefore. when he took his seat. not one man on this sinte took any objection or said: This House hat not abnegrated its right, its concurrent jurisdiction with the courts. and hat a right to expel a man who has been provel guilty of those crimes and offences, and we might have urged that this young and reputable politician who had heen dricen out of public life by those nefarious schemes should have been given his seat and natural right prevail. We did not do so: and the hon. gentlemen opposite say that our concurrent jurisdiction shonh he exercised there: Not at all. They allowed the matter to pass becanse the question har been rlecided in the court. They hat the rote of that gentleman from that day to the end of the Parliament. and yet they have the face to stamd up before this House and say they are honest.

Mr. Bowleld. And they applamed the decision.

Mr. OURRAN. Yes. they will applatulamost everything.

Mr. MULOCh. We draw the line at yon.
Mr. CURRAN. Ont of all the comities mentioned in the motion, we fiud that in Champlain, Montmorency. L'Islet, Berthier, Quehec Comity. Gaspé. Montmagny. Quebee West and Three Rivers, election petitions were filed and they went before the courts. where those who were attacked had the right to file counter-petitions. This is a phase of the question that forcibly struck me the other day. We have had these matters before the court, and now we have all this vituperation poured upon the head of the Minister of Justice because he asks that we shall abide ly the law of Parliament which hats been on the Nitatate-book for years, and which any hon. gentleman whofelt himself aggrieved couli have taken advantage of. We have also had from the member for Bothwell (Mr Mills) a warning that it would never do for this House to have these charges, improperly mate aml lexelled against an hon. member, referred to a committee. I donot know what the intention of this Govermment is, but 1 have my own views as to. what shonld be done with any chitrges properly: male which may le laid before this House. In speaking of that, I will refer the hos. gentleman to the remarks made $1 ; y$ mon. frienit the member for Jacques Cartier (Xir. (iirouar:) the chairman of our Committec on $P_{1}$ ivileges : and Elections last year at the close of the investigation which has been so often referred to to-night. Speaking of the majority and minority reports, he said:
" The eonsideration of this division (a strict party one) which took place in the general committee without any debate. leads me at the very beginning to consider whether the Committee on Privileges and Elections is really the best one that can exist for the protection of nembers of Parliament against whom serious charges are made, like the present one, and at the same time to protect the dignity of the House of Commons. A division adopting the report of the majority took place in the committee on a strict party vote. I am not surprised at that result. It has been the history of the Committee on Privileges and Elections in almost every instance since I have presided over that committee from 1882 to the present time."
The hon. memberfor North Simeoe (Mr. Mc(arthy). speaking on the same subject said :
"It is rery unfortunate that on a question so grave as this, the decision is to be left to a popular assembiy of this kind. It may be that under our system of government, it is impossible that any other or better way could be found, but I think that if the same course that wats followed in the Parmell investigation had been pursued here, if the matter had been referred to three independent members of the bench where we know we could find judicial impartiality, while this House and this country would have been saved the enormous expense of this enquirs, a more satisfactory conclusion would have been arived at."
Now, I an: satisfied that these two gentlemen echoed the sentiment and the honest opinion of every member who followed that investigation from begiming to the end. The subject is one well worthy of deepest consideration. When we consider the enormons expense attaching to the Committee on Privileges and Elections, the time which is taken up by the members of the House in attending the procedings of that committee, when we consiter that an investigation by that committee may so lengthen the session as that members will demand increased indemnity, when we consider the charges that are hacly to be heaped up there, when weconsider the unsatisfactory results of investigations of this kimh, and when we consider that the cometry, especially since the recent investigations in Quebec, will prefer that these investigations be held before homomable and upright juiges who command the respert and confidence of the people, I say that it is high time that the Minister of Justice and his colleagues should determine that the same justice ought to lie meted out to the Postmaster General or to any other member as was meted out to Mr. Mercier:anl his colleagues in the Province of Quebec. There we had a commission of judges, and when questions were put to the witnesses they were ordered to he answered or otherwise, as men trained in the law considered they ought or ought not to be atnswered. But before the Committee on Privileges and Elections we have a hoe and ery raised if a man is not ordered to answer every guestion that may be askel him no matter how irrevelant or improper ; and if a question is put to a vote in that conmittee as to whether any document should be sulmitted, the vote is always a party vote, and on the $u$ hole the result is very unsatisfactory. I have no interest in this matter whatsnever, except the interest that any member of Parliament may feel in seeing the affiirs of this country properly carried ont. I take no stock in the charges and countercharges that are marle here. I approach a juestion of this kind in an altogether different spirit from the one which has been manifested ly some hon. members in this House when an hon. member is laying under an accusation of this kind. We should approach this question in a spirit of sorrow rather than one of exultant anticipatory revenge. We should approach it in a judicial spirit, knowing that the people of this comitry are desirous and will demand that every complaint properly lodged shall be investigatel, either by a committee of the House or by a royal commission appointed by this fovermment. I believe that this Government thoroughly appreciate the responsibility that weighs upon them and that they will properly discharge that responsibility. I think the Giovermment have shown their desire to do what is right in charges of this kind in the past, by having them investigated, either hy a committee of the House or by the courts. They have a record to which they can appeal with pride and satisfaction. The people have approvel of their course in the past, and I am satistied the Govermment will pursue that course in the future, and that when an lum. gentleman makes charges against another member in such a mamer as that they can lee inrestigated, the investigation will he granted. I think the Govermment of this country will meet such a charge against the Postmaster general, either by graming at committee of the House or, what would be still hetter. by appointing a royal commission where a vertict conld be arrived at that would satisfy puhlic opinion. I believe the Govermment to he amxious and desirous of having an honest and fair investigation into all charges properly hrought against members of the House or indiviluals, to use the words of the Prime Minister, he they high or low.

Mr. MULOCK. I will endearour to follow the example of my hon. friend who hats just taken his seat by bringing to hear upon this question that judicial spirit which he doultless thinks he has lone, and which he comments to others. As he portrayed our aluies, I thought what a loss the hench of Quebec has sustained in his decision, which I read in the paper to-day, not to sacrifice himself in that way upon the altar of his country ; and perhaps I was able to discover some reason for the earnestness with which he has come to the rescue of his frient, the Minister of fustice, and given him a certificate of character. Haring, as it was amomed to the world that he had, heen an mosuccessful kicker for a place in the Cabinet, he wishes to let them know that his heart is still true, and that he is still in the market when they choose to buy him. He gives argaments why the motion in question shoulil not lie adopted. One of his strongest arguments, the one that almost caused him to exploile, was his condemmation of the conlluct of the lealer of the Opposition. That was the principal logical defence that he adranced against the granting of this resolution. Having fired his best bolt first, he had little left to say in the end, but that little consisted largely in casting reflections upon the character of a fellow-member of this House, and a fellow-countryman of his own, a gentleman who is no longer in the land of the living to defend himself against the accusations. When he attacked my hou. friend the leader of the Opposition, the principal charge against him was lack of courage. It occurred to me that the hon. gentleman would have manifested prossession of at greater quantity of that article if he had made this charge face to face with the person whom he accused ; but he took advantage of his absence from this chamber to make these observations which were conched in that judicial spirit so apropos of the discussion. But when the hon. gentleman returned to the chamber we find no allusion whatever to his record from that time on. It only flowed from the lips of my eloquent friend when the hon. gentleman was absent from the chamber. The member for Montreal Centre (Mr. Curran) is general endorser for all the members of the Government who protest against the granting of this enquiry. I do not discover that he has advanced anything original, but whatever these gentlemen said, he said likewise. I myself desire to import nothing into this discussion except what is pertinent to it, and I hope I shall carry out that intention with better success than attended the probably well-me:unt efforts of the hon. gentleman who last spoke. I desire to bring nothing but a fair spirit to hear on the consideration of this question. The charge is that a portion of public money voted by Parliament for a specific parpose was diverted for another purpose, and that this misappropriation took place through the connivance of a member of the Cabinet, a gentleman who had been a member of every Cabinet and of every Parliament that had to do with the voting of that money; and as an incilent, but not as the gravamen of the charge, it is said that that money, after being misappropriated was spent illegally and corruptly in other ways. There are two distinct charges, and hon. gentlemen opposite seek to escape any enquiry by centring iheir objections upon the particular resolution which refers to the application of the fund. The first puestion howerer is: Was there a misapplication of the money? If there is anything that the representitives of the people shonld guard it is the public trasury, and I camnot conceive of our having any more responsible duty cast upon us than to ming into the light of day any such transactions as are alloged to have occurred in this case, so that there may be, not ouly punishment for the past, but a warning against any similar occurrences in the future. I maintain that it is not only our privilege, but that it is our duty to trace to their ultimate end the pullic moneys that are roted by Parliament, and should any money roted for a public enterprise be diverted from itsproperchannel, it is due to the people that it should be known, especially if that diversion has heen occasioned by the action of the trustees of the people, the Government of the day, who are responsible for such misupplication. What is the process by which these votes of money are securel? The Government alvises His Exeellency and His Excellency then sends down a message to Parliament to express its opinion upon it. The Government of the day, having a working majority, practically controls the House, and the decision, in the first instance, in Council really controls the voting of the money. Under our system, the Government piactically control the treasury, and surely, if there is a misapplication of the funds ly a member of the Governinent, there can be no clearer duty cast upon the people's representatives than to have this misapplication made known, and, if possible, to have the wrong-loers punished. Now, let us see what lefence the Minister of Justice has alvanced? The first excuse offered is, that there is no allegation of misappropriation or maladministration of public money. Suppose, Mr. Speaker, that it were proved, or suppose, for example, that the Postmaster General were to stand up and say: I do admit that I received, for my own personal use, corruptly, a large sum of money oit of the subsidies that had been voted by Parliament at my refuest and when I was a member of the Cabinet and a member of Parliament to aid a certain railway, and after it was voted portions of these moneys were handed over to me corruptly, and I again ask the Government to ask His Excellency to get more money from Parliament. Now Sir, if the Postmaster General were to make that admission what excuse would any one offer? Woull any one for a moment say that there should the a refusal of an enipuiry under such circumstances? And yet the Minister of Justice has toll us that if we prove every single allegation in this resolution it amounts to no misappropriation or maladministration. If the Minister camot see, and if this House camont see, in such at misapplication of money as that a gross breach of trust, then I can conceive of no diversion of public fumds that could lee so characterizel. The Minister of Justice as a second defence says that whilst these transactions complained of were going on, the charge alleges that the Postmaster Cieneral was a member of Parliament, that that is not true in fact, and for that reason the charges shouhl fail. In reply to that I may point out that substantially the Postmaster General was a trustee from the time he first took office, prior to the initiation of these votes, until the present day. It is true that for a few ond days here and there, in the interval of the three general elections that have taken place, he was not a member of the Honse: lut from the very commencement of these transactions to this moment he was a nember of the diovernment and had a voice in effecting the decision of Parliamient in regard to procuring these pullic funds. It is the veriest technicality-one that does not commend itself to any fair-minded person-that such an excuse ass that should be offered as a reason for not granting this enguiry. The very fact that such it fimsy, tritling excuse as that should be advanced under such circumstances, shows how weak must he the cause of those who seek to burke the enquiry. Another defence that the Minister of Justice adranced is, that the proper place in which to try this matter is the election contr. In reply to that, I would ask what election court or what conrt is there in Canala in which the first charge can be tried? The first charge, practically, is that public money has leen embezzled. I ask iny lawyer in this House to explain to me what court in the land to-day could take up the charge of misapplying this money? If it is within the jurisdiction of the courts, how comes it then that the Minister of Justice has not put the courts in motion, as it is his duty to do, in view of the warnings which are now given him. Suppose such a charge were brought to the knowledge of an employer in his private capacity ; suppose he were informed by some responsible person that his money had been so dealt with by his employé, by his manager, do you not suppose that he would set an enquiry on foot pretty soon? Do you not think that he would say: That charge is specific enough ; I will call upon my employe to make an answer to it. He would say : My employe was entrusted with my money in my absence, and instead of using it honestly he is charged with having appropriated a portion of it to his own use. Do you not suppose that he would prove such a charge to the bottom? Now, who is to look after the proper administration of the people's money except their representatives in Parliament? Hon. gentlemen opposite cannot lee sincere, becanse not one of them, cminent lawyers though they are, has pointed out what tribunal outside of this grand inguest of the people, has juristiction to enguive into such maters. Another defence set up by the Minister of Justice was that the charges were vague. Paragraph 5 is as follows:--

Abstract

"That during the said period and while the said railway was being const ructed in part by means of said subsidies. the said $\xi_{i r} \dot{A}$. P. Caron corruptly received large sums of money out of the said subsidies and from moneys raised upon the credit of the sime, and from parties beneficially interested in the same." It is there charged in plain language that Sir A. P. Caron receivel cormptly large portions of the sulbsidies roted hy Parliament to the railway of which he was one of the controlling spirits at bothends: he was the man to deal ont the money to the railway, ant he hat an interest at the other enl, the allegation being that he ohtainel a portion of those moneys corruptly for his own benetit.

Mr. WELDON. It does not say that.
Mr. MULOCK. I have rean the full text, and now 1 am giving the significance of it. It means that he cormptly obtaned the money and diverted it from the purpose for which Parliament voted it ; and it is immaterial, so far as this branch of the subject is concerned, what he did with it after-wards-whether he threw it into the sea or not. It went into his own pocket corruptly: whether after that he took it out and distributed it for other than his own personal purposes, is immaterial when we are dealing with this branch of the question. Iet, in the face of these specific words, we are told that the charge is too vague. Why, Mr. Speaker, what do hon. gentlemen want? Do they want us to tell the exact number of dollars he took, the exact daty he got the money, the messenger hy whom the money was transferred from the treasury of the railway or construction company to the bank account of Sir A. P. Caron, whether it passed by cheque or by hills or in some other way? These are mere matters of evidence. The substance of the charge is that money was voted hy Parliament for a certain purpose, and that Sir A. P. Caron corruptly obtained a portion of it : and that charge is plain enough and specitic enough for any one who wishes to investigate it. The next contention of the llinister of Justice is that it is unconstitutional for a committee of the House to try the Govermment. That I think is a proposition of law which this House shonld not sanction for one moment-that a committee of this House camot investigate charges against the Government. Why, Sir, it has happened over and over again that committees of Parliament have had to investigate matters affecting the Government. Last session when we investigated the McGreevy charges were we not then investigating charges reflecting on the Government. It is true, the (iovernment chose to repudiate a certain amount of responsilility, as technically they were a new Govermment, and there was only one Minister who was in the long run affected. But seeing that Parliament last session took upon itself to investigate the conduct of one Minister, conld it not take upon itself this year to investigate the conrluct of another or of the whole dozen? If so, with that precedent lefore us, I fail to understand the meaning of the expression of the Minister of Justice when he suys that it is unconstitutional for a committee of Parliament to try the Government of the lay. On the contrary, Parliament itself can I presume delegate to a committee such investigations as took place last year. It did so then, and the point was never taken that the committee hat no power to carry on that investigation. On the contrary, it brought forth results, and those results appear to have the sanction of the law. I presume that the course we adopted last year, had the sanction of the law and will not le repudiated today. Moreover, Mr. Speaker, I wouhl ask whether it is the duty of Parliament to endeavour to abnegate its powers and to say that there is no tribumal anywhere to enguive into wrong-doing if there has been any. I do not desire to sity that there has leen: I am simply taking up the charges and arguing the matter in the abstract. I say that the Parlianent of (anarla, being founded on the principles of the Imperial Parliament, has within itself inherent jurishliction-not a juridiction of a latent character, hut jurisdiction which it is bouml actively to use in orrler on all occasions to investigate such matters as are now inviting our attention. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries came to the rescue of the Govermment as he perhaps deemed it his duty to do, and endorsed the argaments of the hon. Minister of lustice : but he dwelt a little more on one branch of the case. He salid that this was simply an attempt in a cheap way to enquire into the methorls by which the Conservative party carried their elections in 1887; that was his argument. Well, I do not think he could have given the country credit for common intelligence when he presented that flimsy explanation. I think he conld not have heen sincere in offering that as an excuse for the (iorernment's refusal to grant this enguiry. Again hon. gentlemen opposite, plear the statute of limitations. They say, what you should have rone was within the time provided hy the Controverted Elections Act, within the thirty days to have filed a petition in each court for each county where this money went, and threshed the matter ont in that way. But inasmuch as the various persons who fingered the money were clever enough to hide their tracks all these long years, they having outwitted you, there is uow no remedy. That is the proposition. Well, I cannot assent to that. As the honourable and judicial member for Montreal Centre (Mr. Curran) says, the House still retains its concurrent original jurisdiction, and I an sure he will admit this is a most opportune occasion in which to set that jurisuliction in force. Either we have to resort to the jurisdiction of this House for a remedy or there is none, amd the hon. gentleman can choose which hom of the dilemma they like. If they are desirous that the light of day shall lee let in on these transactions and that wrong, if done, shall be punished or that, in case any charges are wrongly mate, the character of the person against whom they are made shall be vindicated, they will be the first to urge thie Government to recede from the false position in which they have put themselves and in which they are putting their loyal followers. If the supporters of the Achministration desire to do the Government a service, they cannot do a better one than to bring it at whe earliest moment from this unsound and unpatriotic position which they have taken, and stand by the rights and liberties of the peeple. The Minister of Justice said that in his action he was not moved by any desire to conceal wrong-loing, but that he felt impelled to defend the liberties of the members of the House. He felt impelled to stand up for the dignity of Parliament. Who is going to stand up for the dignity of the people? Who is going to stand up for the rights of the people? Surely they are to he considered, and if the two are to be weighed, I would like to know whether the rights and liberties of the people are not paramount to those of their servants. Then the Minister of Public Works got into the beat, and he adranced the most extraordinary defence of all. Each one had been searching for a defence and exercising his ingenuity in devising something to add to the record ; and so we have the Minister of Public Works adrancing this doctrine. He said, in so many words, that the only ground on which you could find the Postmaster (ieneral guilty of handling this money would be by alleging conspiracy to rob the treasury. He saill:
"My contention is this, that to indict the Postmaster Gencral as guilty of some offence against the statutes or the unwritten law, he ought to have been charged with having conspired, before the subsidies were granted, with the parties applying for them, to get, the subsidies in order to derive some benefit for himself."
All these essentials must he shown, according to the reasoning of the Minister of Public Works. He must beforehand have conspired with the parties, he himself being one of them, Sir Adolphe Caron, one of the leading directors and corporators of the railway in question, comes down himself, a Minister of the Crown and says: I, an officer and representative of this railway, apply to you, the trusted Minister of the Crown, to give to me, through the railway and myself, a certain sum, and I want you, Sir Adolphe Caron, Minister of Militia, to understand that when I get that public money, as director of the Construction Company of the St. John Railualy, I am going to put some of it in my own pocket. That must be proved to convict him of any corrupt understanding. He must not know as Minister of Militia what Sir Adolphe Caron the railway director had in his mind. He, this poohbah, is to be entirely double in his mind, and what he knows in one capacity is not to be known to him in another. Why, there is no plainer proposition and principle invoived than that if a trustee chooses to bring his trust into conflict witli his personal position, his trust position is paramount and he is responsible as a trustee. He cannot escape responsibility by confusing his two positions. But does anybody suppose that when it is proposed to rob the treasury, the Minister has it all put down in black and white. Is not a wink as grod as a nod to a blind horse? And if this year the promoters of the railway choose to come down to Parliament and obtain througli political influence or otherwise, a grant of a large sum for a certain public enterprise, and if after that, while the money is still in loco penitentice, while the money is still in the treasury or under the control of the Government, any portion of it is intercepted on its way from the treasury to the donee, that interception amounts to a breach of trust; or if you choose to go through the form of putting it into the treasury of the donee, it is after all put there for a special trust purpose, for the construction of a railway, and if the donee, under the control and guidance, as seems to be the case here of the present Postmaster General, gives possession of that money or part of it to the present Postmaster General, then Minister of Militia, I would like to know if that is not a conspiracy after the fact. Yet the Minister of Public Works adds his ridiculous plea to the record. I was much pleased with the general tone of the speech of the hon. member for Cumberland and although he did make a mistake, headmitted with greatsincerity, which pleased usall, that at onestage he had branched off into a political:argument. I would not blame him for that, because we must admit there was some provocation. Neverthless, although he attempted to he fair and temperate in his argument, he was too much of a technical lawyer, and thereby able to pick holes to his own satisfaction in a document which he would gladly see swept away. He maile several points, but the strongest was that Parliament should not appoint a committee to enquire into the private conduct of a member. Assuming that this charge is correct, is the misapplication of public money by a Minister of the Crown a transaction of a private character": I think it is essentially of a public: character. 1 cannot conceive of any transaction being more of a public character than the one in question. A Minister of the Crown obtains control of a portion of the public money corruptly, which money was obtained ly him, which he knew was voted ly the Govemment and Parliament for a different purpose altogether. That is the charge made against the Postmaster (ieneral. It is a charge against him in his pullic character, and so the whole argument of the member for Cumberland based on that defence has to be swept away, I think, as imapplicable to the case. Then the member for Cumberland says that, if the money were properley voted, that wipes out the wrong. I cannot agree with him there. The mere roting of the money or paying over the money does not settle the question. Parliament has a right to know whether the money was properly roted and whether it was devoted to the purpose for which it was intended, and, if we desire to control our public funds and to see that the public money shall accomplish what it is intended for, if we desire to prevent fraud and deception, we never can concede the proposition that the responsibility of Parliament ceases with the voting of the money. The money is voted for a special purpose, and, if it is not devoted to that purpose, the Government is responsible. If the Government calls upon Parliament to vote a larger amount than the public necessity demands, it is responsible to Parliament for that. I would like to know why the Government asked Parliament, as in this case they apparently did, to vote $\$ 100,000$ more than was required for this work. Surely, if the advisers of His Excellency and of this House ask us to vote money for a certain enterprise, we have a right to assume that every dollar of that money is going into that enterprise, and further I submit that any surplus ought to lapse again into the treasury. It is voted for a special end and for that only, and if the money voted exceeds the needs of the case, the Government that misleads the House by carclessness or otherwise is to some extent at all events responsible to Parliament, so I cannot agree to the proposition that all responsibility is over and that there can be no wrong-doing unless it is connected with the corrupting of Parliament or of the Goverument in procuring the original vote ; and yet that is the argument of the hon. member for Cumberland (Mr. Dickey). Then he says we ought to vote down this resolution for the most extraordinary reason of all. He does not say that section . T is not a good section. He practically admits by his silence that paragraph discloses a good charge, but he says that because in his judgment paragraphs 9 and 10 suggest another charge which he thinks ought to be dealt with in the election courts, for that reason he is not in favour even of sending the good charge for investigation ; he would not $\operatorname{lon}$ off what he consilers the superfluous charge, but ie would take adiantage of that to prevent any investigation into the real charge with he considers good and valid. No one can consider that a gool argument. On the contrary, if he is convinced that the charge in section .5 is well alleged, it is his duty to insist on that going to a committee. and, if it is necessary, to cut off paragraphs 9 and 10. Then he says that this is a tishing charge. He says that paragraphs 9 and 10 are a fishing charge. They ire very specitic in their allegations, and I fail to unlerstand why we should be so anxious to prevent the discovery of important evilence to verify these charges if they he true, or to disprove them if not true. I would consider that the lostmaster (ieneral from his place in the House has given an emphatic denial to these charges. He did not think they were rague. What was he denying? He evidently thought he saw a charge. What did he mean when he got up and sail these charges were not true? He did not see any vagueness in them, and he did not think these charges were made against him in his private cappacity. From his place as a Minister of the (rown, he said in fact, I understand the full force of these accusations. Fon charge me with having abusel a trast which Her Majesty reposed in me. Jon charge me with having been one to alstract from the public treasury the large sum of $\$ 100$, (N0). You charge me with having misapplied the money which should have gone to another source, and I have asked the sailways involved and I have their testimony here. How is it then that, while he can see the charge, his boolyguard are uable to see it. Well, if they camot see it, the public have seen it. There are those outside this House who have seen it, and they will not agree with hon. gentlemen who are blind in this instance. The Government, if they are anxions to free their colleague and to have the pledge of honour which he has given to the people approved, will give him an opportunity to prove his innocence? I am aware that he must be presumed to be innocent in the eye of the law until the contrary is proved. I would like to know why the person principally interested sees no vagueness in this resolution while others do. It seems to me that the Government have weighed the chances. I will not follow up the statement of the Minister of Justice who said that any wrong, any stealing of the public moneys is no matter. It seems to me that the Government had weigher the chances and have come to the conclusion that, bad as it was for them to refuse this request, it would now be worse to accord it. I will end with this question. When charges of this kind are made, if Parliament says: No matter what has beed urged, we refuse to investigate, I would like to know what sufeguard there is hereafter for the public treasury? If to-day it is but $\$ 100,000$, which is said to have been misapplied, to-morrow it may be ten times that. Are we going deliberately to establish a precedent that such transactions can take place and receive endorsement at the hands of the Parliament of Canada. If so, Parliament has failed, parliamentary institutions in Canada have broken down, and the people are practically powerless. I. therefore, trust that wiser counsels will yet prevail, that before this matter is disposed of the iovernment will see fit to recede from their position and adopt the only course I think that is now open, the only one that will satisfy public opinion. and that is, a full and open enquiry, whereby all evidence that is likely to cast any light upon these transactions may be given, that the accused, if guilty, may he brought to justive, and if inmocent, may he so declared before the people. Mr. Speaker, I have endeavoured to avoid anything of a passionate character in my remarks upon this question. I feel that it is one requiring us to approach it in a judicial spirit, and in that spirit I hare endeavoured to discuss it. I am inxions, as a member of the House, and for the sake of the House, that the truth shall come out, ame being in that pessition I hope I have brought to lear upon the discussion that judicial spirit with was recommendel by the hon. member for Montreal Centre.
Mr. BENNETT moved the aljournment of the debate.
Motion agreed to, and debate adjourned.
Mr. LAURIFR. As I mulerstand there arequite a number of members on loth sides who wish to take part in this debate. I would suggest to the leader of the House that a day be fixed for resuming it. It comes in its natural order on Wednesiday next at 8 oclock; I would suggest that it come at 3 oclock on that diay.
sir JOHN THOMPSON. I have no objection to that arrangement. I move that the House do now aljourn.

Motion agreed to: and House aljourned at 1.05 a.m. (Thursilay).

SUPPLS-DIPLOMATIC PAPERS.

Mr. FOSTER moved that the House again resolve itself into Committee of Supply.
Mr. LAURIER. Before you leave the Chair, Mr. Speaker, I would invite the attention of the House to the following resolution, for which I claim its most farotrable consideration :-
That it is a necessary constitutional rule that the substance of all communications between representatives of this Government and the representatives of other countries on matters of public concera should be committed to writing and laid before Purtiament as soon as completed, and any attempt by Ministers of the Crown to discuss the subject of such communications without laying them before Parliament is a dangerous infringement on the rights of the people.
He said : The principle insolved in this resolation is such as it seemis to me it is not necessary to atfirm at the present day: yet, if we remember that on a recent occasion this principle was deliberately violated by the Govermment, there is nothing left for Parliament to do on the present occasion hut once more to assert that principle. When larliament assembled in the month of February last, there was naturally great anxiety to know the result of the negotiations which had recently taken place between the commissioners of the Canadian (iovernment and the commissioners of the American Government with respect to the subject of reciprocity. There was a natural anxiety to know not only the result but the nature of those negotiations, the nature of the proposals made and of the objections thereto, and what on the whole was the character of the views exchanged by the two parties. Parliament was dissolved last year upon this very question of reciprocity. The excuse given to the Canadian people for the premature dissolution of Parliament was that the Government desired to test public opinion as to the necessity of a new treaty of resiprocity between Canada and the United States. Naturally, everylouly expected that the first thing the Govermuent would do would be to lay before the House all the papers concerning the negotiations which had taken place, and it was naturally expected that reference would be made in the Speech from the Throne to the subject and that those papers would be promised. The subject was mentioned in the Speech but no promise inade that the papers would be laid before the House. A motion would undoubtedly have been made for the early production of those papers, but early in the session, on the 8th of March, a Bill was introduced ly the Government providing for reciprocity in wrecking between the two countries, and in the course of the discussion I enquired if that Bill was the result of the negotiations which had taken place with Washington. I was answered in the atfirmative. I asked whether there was any correspondence on the subject and was told there was. I asked if it would be laid hefore the House and was answered in the affirmative. Sir John Thompson saicl:
"There is some correspondence which can be laid on the Table of the House, and I ma able to say that nothing which transpired is precluled from being mentioned in the House.
"Mr. LAURIER. Is there any writing to that effect or is it purels verbal?
"Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Yes, writing.
"Mr. LAURIER. I presume we shall have it at an early day?
" $\operatorname{Sir}$ JOHN THOMPSON. Yes."
Some few days afterwards papers were brought down which purported to he the sulstance of the negotiations. To some extent no doubt they were, but what I now charge is that they were not to the fullest extent. There is contained in those papers the proposal of the Canadian commissioners and the American commissioners for a settlement of the boundary line letween this country and Canada. Then there is another proposal for the appointment of a Commission to consider the restrictions and regulations to be adopten for the purpose of securing the preservation of fish and fisheries in waters contiguous to the two comutries. There is also the acceptance by the American commissioners of that proposition. Then there is a proposition mande by the Canadian commissioners of reciprocal legislation in wrecking. This was also accepted ly the Americion commissioners. Then it appeats that the proposial was made by the American commissioners, and accepted ly the Canadian commissioners, for the appointment of a Commission to determine the boundary line between the two cointries in the waters of Passamaquoddy Bay. This is the substance of the papers brought down, but there is not a word on the subject of reciprocity, which must have been the primary matter discussed in those negotiations. There is nothing at all to show whether that subject was discussed or not. But we learned afterwards that it was. In the papers there is ahsolute silence on the subject, leading one to the conclusion that it had been treated simply as a purely confidential one. a conclusion to which I came all the more readily from the fact that it is of record that Mr. Blaine stipulated to Sir Julian Pauncefote when he was approached loy him last year that the negotiations should be altogether irregular and kept confidential, if they did not mature in any arrangement, and be only given to the public in case they did mature in an arrangement. As nothing was brought down of the negotiations which had taken place, the conclusion was natural enough that they had been kept purely confidential, and were not to be disclosed in one or the other country. Yet, Sir, what was our astonishment, when some few daysafterwards, the Minister of Finance in his Budget speech presumed to give to the House the substance, or at least the character of the negotiations. Nota written word has been brought down to show their character, not a written word has been given to the House to show that such negotiations had taken place at all. I need not tell the House that this was a most unparliamentary proceeding, that it was an abuse of the privileges of the hon. gentleman as a Minister of the Crown; and to make the point doubly sure, I will quote the authority of Maty on this sulject. When the hon. gentleman was making his statement, my hon. frimill leside me, the member for Bothwell, at once called your attention, sir, to the matter by raising a point of order. The point of order was ruled igainst him. It is not my object now to go back on this point. It may be that accorling to parliamentary procedure the point of order was not well taken, but if the hon. gentleman on that occasion did not violate the laws of procedure such as they apply to this Parliament, there call he no doult that he violated a far more important law. There can be no doubt that he violated the very principles upon which parliamentary government rests in all British countries. I funte from May, the edition of 1883, page 378 :

[^69]Xow, Sir, it seems to me that the very authority which is here quoted comes very appropriately on the present occasion. The very atuthority which is here guoted is founded upon that rule of evidence and of common sense, I may say, that no man is at liberty to use a public document for the purpose of conveying an argument or stating a fact unless he is prepared to give to his opponents the sulbstance of the authority which he urges. Otherwise there would be no safety in debate, there would be no safety in courts of justice, there would le no safety in public affairs, and the common-sense reason of the rule has been illustrated by the very language of the hon. gentleman, for 1 am prepared to say on this occasion, and I call the attention of the hon. gentleman to the fact at once, that the statements he gave to the House in the parts which he did give were, in my opinion highly coloured, and that in the other part, he did not give the whole substance of the negotiations which then took place. The hon. gentleman stated that one of the first things, if not the very first thing, which had been referred to by the American commissioners was that there should be in any treaty which was negotiated a discrimination by the Canadian Government against British goods and British wares. I think this was, to say the least, a very highly coloured statement. If it was not coloured, I want to know why the papers were not brought down, but in my estimation the statement was coloured, because it is altogether improbable that the American commissioners would have required as a sine quâ non that there should be discrimination against Great Britain. If they had said that they wanted to know whether the Canadian commissioners would agree to the treaty even if it would involve in discrimination in their favour I could understand it, but to say, as stated by the hon. gentleman, that it was a matter which the American Government insisted on as a sine qua non, that there should be absolute discrimination against Great Britain, seems to me to le very harsh diplomatic language on the part of the American commissioners, and to be highly coloured by the hon. gentleman. The hon. gentleman omitted on that occasion to give the full tenor of the conversation. Ido not mean to say that the statement he made is not correct so far as it goes, but there must have been some further statement also. The hom. gentleman has not forgoten that he is not the only one who has spoken on this suljeet. His namesake, (ieneral Foster, the condjutor of Mr. Blaine in the negotiations, spoke in the city of New York on the same subject shortly afterwards. He spoke on the subject of reciprocity lecween Canada and the United States, and. after stating that the difficulties in the way of a treaty of reciprocity between the two countries were very great, yet not insuperable, he went ons to show where he thought the principal difficulty existed in negotiating a reciprocity treaty between the Enited states and Camada. He saill:
"The fact that Canada dues not possess the right of negotiating her own treaties, but must have them negotiated for her by a distant power which is controlled by economic principles, is entirely different from those of the United States, and Canada constitutes the chief barrier to any arrangement so long as other interests than those of Canada control negotiations for commercial relations with such of our neighbours as rucognize American (in it broadest sense) as paramount to European influence on this hemispnere."
This language of General Foster was spoken less than a fortnight after the negotiations which hat taken place upon this veryo subject. He there points out that the primary obstacle to the near tiation of any treaty between Canada and the United States does not concern any guestion of diserimination to which the hon. gentleman alluded in his speech, but lies in the fact that Canala has not at present the right to negotiate her own treaties. It is hard to helieve that, when Gieneral Foster pointel that out as the chief obstacle in the way, there was nothing mentioned on that subject in the negotiations between the American and the Canadian commissioners. For my part, I believe, and unless I am contradicted by the hon. gentle. man I shall persist in believing, that one of the reasons pointed to the Canadian commissioners why the treaty could not be effected was this very reason that Canada has not the right to negotiate her own treaties. Under such circumstances, it seems to me that the rule laid down by May is well illustrated by what has takeu place. The Minister may say that I am doing him an injustice. I do not say that I do not, but if I do he has only himself to blame for it, because he had no right to give the substance of these negotiations unless he was prepared to place the record on the Table, so as to give every man in this House the opportunity of scanning for himself the negotiations which took place, and not compelling him to accept the version which the hon. gentleman chose to give. Far be it from me to charge the hon. gentleman with bad faith, but after all the hon. gentleman is human, and he can be unconsciously biassed like others. It is not because we must necessarily distrust one another, that the law which obtains in courts of justice must also obtain here, but simply because of the obvious fact that the best evidence is always to be tendered and no secondary evidence is to be used when primary evidence is obtainable. The hon. gentleman had in his hand the evidence of the negotiations which took place in Washington, and yet, for reasons of his own, he has refusell to give to the House the substance of those negotiations. What reason can there be for such a suppression of public documents? The hon. gentleman has informed the Honse as fully as he could in reference to the negotiations as to the boundary of Alaska, in reference to the measures to be taken for the preservation of our fisheries, and in regard to other matters of secondary importance, but he has not chosen to give to the House the information upon what was after all the very stibject upon which the Canardian people expected to be instructed, and that is in regard to the treaty of reciprocity. The Canadian people wanted to know. above all things, the proposals which were marle by the Canarlian commissioners to the Americar commissioners on that sulject, and what objections, if any, they had been met with: but, instead of that, the hon. gentleman gives an ex parte statement which it is impossible for any hon. gentleman to challenge, contradict or traverse. I say this is a violation of all the principles of parliamentary govermment. The rule has been as old as constitutional govermment in England, that all such matters must he reduced to writing, and then at the proper time sulmitted to the House. Let me quote the anthority of Todd upon this subject. Todd, at page 35\%, speaks as follows :-
" It is a necessary rule that the substance of all personsl communications between the representatives of the British Crown and the Ministers of any foreign country, upon matters of public concern, should be committed to writing. in order that a fair and complete record of the transactions bet ween Great Britain and other states may be presented in the Foreign Office, and, in due course, submitted to Parliament. The English constitutional system requires that Parliament should be informed, from time to time, of everything which is necessars to explain the conduct and policy of the Government, whether at home or abroad, in order that it may interpose with advice, assistance, or remonstrance, as the interests of the nation may appear to demand.'
Then, Sir, the author continues:
" It is unquestionably of immense advantage to the country that the diplomatic transactions and proceedings of the irovernment abroad should be frecly communicated to Parliament, for therehy the foreign policy of the Crown receives the approbation of Parliament, and is sustained by the strength of an enlightened public opinion. This in itself confers an additional weight to our policy and opinions abroad."
Now, Sir, mark what follows, and this is a quotation that I would advise hon. gentlemen opposite to ponder well :
"On the other haud. it is notorious that the Enclish Evitem of giving publicity to information obtained by (jovernment in regard to occurrences in foreign countries. is riewed with great disfarour on the continent."
This system of publicity, we see, which prevails in the British constitutional system, where nothing is withheld, where everything must be brought to light, never met with much favour on the continent where negotiations are very often concealed.
"A knowledge of the fact thatall information procured by our foreign agents is liable to be made public, militates somewhat against their usefulness, and tends to place them occasionally in an embarrassing position."
Now, the rule is not absolute. The author says there may be occasions when a Minister of the Crown is justified in refusing to communicate to Parliament the negotiations that have taken place. The author goes on to say :
" But a certain amount of discretion must always be allowed to the Government in respect to communicating or withholding documents and official correspondence, wrich may be asked for by either House of Parliament."
There may be occasious, as I said a moment ayo, when a Minister of the Crown would be justified in refusing to Parliament the substance of negotiations, but if the Minister of the Crown will not give to Parliament the substance of negotiations between his Government and a foreign Government, then he is not at liberty to use those communications in delate or argument. But if he uses them, then it is only fair to accept from him that he will give the evidence upon which he bases his argument. Now, here is the only oceasion when a Government is justifiel in refusing to give to the House the substance of negotiations which have taken place: it is when those negotiations are pending. So long as negotiations are pending the Crown ure justified in refusing to give to Parliament the substance of those negotiations, for the very obvious reason that they are still pen ling and might he affected ly a premature ilisclosure. Todd also says :
Now, in the present case the negotiations are no longer pending: they were concluded when the commissioners left Wiashington. If the hon. gentleman had told us at any time that the negotiations were still pending he would he justified in keeping them seeret as long as they remained incomplete. But they have been completed, and, under those circumstances. I submit to the judgment of the Motise that it is the right of Parliament to require that they be laid lefore us, unless we are to revert to the old Star Chamber days. Therefore, I maintain that the Government of the day have no right to keep those papers secret, and they should be submitted to the House. But there is more. These papers which were denied to this House have leen communicated to the British fiovernment, have leen commmicated to Lorl Knutsforl, Secretary of State for the Colonies. That fact has been revealed by the correspondence which was recently laid before the British Parliament on the subject of our negotiations with Newfoundland. Among those papers I find the report to Council signed by the Minister of Justice which was afterwards, on the 3rd March, emborlied in the report of Council and transmitted to His Excellency for communication to the British (iovermment. Here is what I find in this report :
"With further reference to the despatch of Lord Knutsford which transmits these documents. the undersigned note the observation of His Lordship, that, if your Excellency's Ministers should not succeed in obtaining a satisfactory arrangement with the United States, the attitude of Her Majesty's Government in regard to the gignature of the convention will hare to be reconsidered.'
This is an important statement which we may have to discuss at a future date :
"They venture to express the hope that Her Majesty's Government will, at the same time. consider the principal reason.why your Excellency's Ministers have not succeeded in obtaining a satisfactory arrangement with the United States. The record which has been transmitted to the Secretary of State for the Colonies will show Her Majesty's Government that an arrangement with the United States for greater freedom of trade between the two countries and for a settlement of the fishery question was found to be impracticable unless Canada would consent to apply to the mother conntry the discrimination which Newfoundland and the United States proposed to apply to Canada."
So you have here a Minute of Council that the record of the negotiations between Canada and the United States, with, as is alleged, a failure of those negotiations, has been transmitted to the Secretary of State for the Colonies ; and yet while that has been transmitted to the British Government it is denied to the Canarlian Parliament. Now, what reason can be urged why Canada should be thus treatel? What reason can be given by the hon. gentleman for this high-handed proceeding? The Government of Great Britain, to which hon. gentlemen are not responsible, is favoured with a recorl of these negotiations: but the Parliament of Canala, to whom the hon. gentlemen is responsible, is denied the communication of that record. Sir, it is a high-handed proceeding, it is destructive of all the principles of free goverument upon which our constitution rests. Such a thing should not be toleratel in Canada. Hon. gentlemen opposite are aluays speaking loudly of their loyalty to the Crown and to British institutions, yet not a year eliapses hut that those principles of British freedom that they profess to follow, are violated by those who, notwithstanding, always have them in their month.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The resolution moved by the leader of the Opposition has two parts: The tirst is a denunciation of what is styled a constitutional principle--it constitutional rule ; and the secomd is the application of it to a particular case. I claim that the first part of the resolution is a very great extravagance, that the application of it attempterl by the second part is exceedingly minast, and that the remarks by which the hon. gentleman has attempted to support both are about as extravagant as anything that could be given to this House. Now, let us take up the matter and see whether the criticistn I am offering is fairly hased. This resolution states it to be a constitutional rule that all communications between representatives of this Government and the representatives of other fovernments upon matters of public concern, should be committed to writing and laid before Parliament as soon as completed. I think that when the hon. gentleman undertook to ask this House to assert that something was a necessary constitutional rule, he might at least have cited some authority in support of that position : but the hon. gentleman has cited no authority whatever. He has cited a passage from May, to which I will refer in a moment, and which has not the slightest bearing upon this question. He has cited from Todd's Parliamentary Government a rule of propriety, a rule of diplomacy, a rule it may be, or a practice of Parliamant, but nothing approaching the dignity or force or importance of the necessary constitutional rule which it is here asserted to be. The hon. gentleman undertakes, however, in the second part of his resolution to declare, in reference to something which recently took place in this House-for that is the application of the resolution according to the speech he made--that an attempt by a Minister of the Crown, referring to the Minister of Finance, to discuss the subject-matter of such communications without laying them before Parliament, is a dangerous infringement upon the rights of the people. I venture to assert that the rule which the hon. gentleman has yuoted from his authorities alisolutely annihilates the position which he has taken here, and so far from showing that what has occurred in this House has been an infringement of that principle, the authorities cited by the hon. gentleman show that what took place here on a recent occasion was strictly in accordance with principle and with British practice. The British practice which my hon. friend is continually setting up in this House as something which we violate upon this side, and to Mr. Laurier.
which he is so fond of referring, is the branch of British loyalty to which he is most attached, and it is the only one, so far as I can learn, that he has faith in. Let us see what the position is as I understand it to be. It is obviously a rule of convenience, for the sake of certainty, and for the sake of definiteness and permanency, that communications which take place between the representatives of Governments should be reducel to writing, whenever that can be conveniently done. But there is no constitutional rule upon the subject whatever, and even the practice which exists in that regard has grown up in consequence of the fact that (ireat Britain, as well as other nations similarly situated, is represented at foreign courte by diplomatic agents of various grades ani ranks. Those agents are very rarely Cahinet Ministers, and it is most important that the Cahinet should be definitely informed of what negotiations their agents have had, and even of their precise nature and effect. In the case under review the negntiations tork place between Ministers of this country and the Minister of another country, and even the convenience upon white the rule is based does not apply to the same extent or with the same force to negotiations of that character. Let us see whether that is not so. An intimation was given that on a certain day it would be convenient for the Secretary of State of the United States to have a conference with members or representatives of the Government of Canada on a certain list of questions. It was stipulated then that that should be entirely informal and unofficial, and the hon. the leader of the Opposition is quite mistaken even in applying the term "commissioners" to the gentleman who represented the United States. So carefully was it provided that the conference should le informal and unofficial, that the Secretary of State for the United States stipulated that the terms "conference "and "commissioners" should be avoidel, lest there should be any appearance of formality about the matter. If we had not been relieved to some extent of the obligation as regards informality and secrecy it would have been impossible for us to have committed to writing, or to have reported in writing what took place during that interview, because it was stipulatell, as I have said, that nothing should transpire as regards what took place unless it came to some result. Yet this House is asked now to affirm that in a case of that kind, it is a necessary constitutional rule thatall communicationsbetween representatives of this Government and representatives of the other Government should be reduced to writing and laid on the Table of the House. When the lon. gentleman admitted that there were occasions on which discretion ought to be exercised, he restricted his rule too narrowly when he said that the one case was when the negotiations had not yet reacherl a conclusion; because obviously, as I have said, this case down to a certain stage was precisely one in which the communications ought not to have been reduced to writing, and ought not to have been brought down to Parliament. But, Sir, having been invited to Washington, what occurred? An informal but full discussion took place on a programme which had been laid down as containing the subjects of conversation, and it was not until that negotiation was concluded that an understanding was arrived at that what had transpired might be communicated to Parliament. Now, then, the hon. gentleman states that we were greatly at fault when the conferences were concluded, in communicating the substance of them or referring to them in a despateh to another (iovernment. and he declares that such a thing would not be tolerated in Great Britain. The hon. gentleman is altogether mistaken in his comparison. This Government and this Parliament are not in the position of the Government and Parliament of Great Britain, and for this obvious reason: We were there conferring and we were there negotiating in the presence of the British Minister and under his authority, and the first duty that we had was to commmicate to Her Majesty's Goverument the nature of the negotiations which went forward. Haring gone on that confidential mission with the approval of Her Majesty's Government and in company with Her Minister at Washington, notwithstanding the fact, that we were at liberty as far as one diovernment was concerned, to make an ammouncement of what took place at that conference, our first duty was to communicate to the (iovernment which authorized us to be there-hecause we were directly there representing the (iovernment of Her Majesty although the ofticial negotiators were the British Minister on the one side and the American Secretary of State on the other. I say, therefore, sir, that our first duty was to intimate to Her Majesty's Govermment the substance and effect of what took place, as we have done, and as we have been blamed for doing, and, as the hon. gentleman said, would not be tolerated in Great Britain in reference to a foreign fiovernment, and for the purposes of his argament he plates Her Majesty's Government, of which we were quasi representatives there, in the position of a foreign Government. The communication which has been made to the Inperial Parliament -if any has been made, and I am not aware of that at all-has been made by Her Majesty's Government on their own responsibility. Another important point to bear in mind, when this House is askell to censure Ministers for not haviug produced ilocuments to this House, is this: That we have incontestably produced to this House all the documents bearing in any way upon negotiations which came to any result and in relation to which any action on the part of this Parliament is askel. In the course of these negotiations, certain matters which were under discussion, were adjusted, and a definite agreement arrivel at. and it was considered proper for the sake of definiteness and for the sake of precision, which are entirely the foundation of the rule on which the hon. gentleman is relying, that we were asked, or the other side were asked, it is immaterial which, that the propositions regarding those subjects should be reduced to uriting and submitted for mutual acceptance. That was done, and accordingly the arrangements were arrived at with regard to wrecking and towage, with regard to the boundary of Alaska, with regard to Passamaquoddy Bay, with regard to the protection of the fisheries. Those arrangements were reduced to writing in accordance with the constitutional rule which the hon. geatleman states were interchanged and were produced in this Parliament before they were asked for. With regard to other matters as to whish no result was arrived at, no writings were interchanged ; but according to the hon. gentleman's resolution, if I mulerstand it aright, it is a necessary constitutional rule that conversations which result in no agreement or understanding shall nevertheless be put in the form of dipiomatic correspondence, and, 1 suppuse, exchanged bet ween the two countries and laid hefore Parliament. Let us consider whether this which is styled a necessary constitutional rule is any rule at all. Let us consider whether negotiations resulting in nothing should be reduced to writing, as the hon. gentleman asserts in his argument, if not in his resolution. Let us look at the history of other negotiations, and I will take the case which seems to tell the most strongly against me-The case of a treaty actually made ;--let us consider the Treaty of Washington of 1888, or the Treaty of Washington of 1871 . A result having been arrived at, just as in the case of the Alaskia boumdary, the case of Passamaquolly Bay, the question of wreckage and towage and the protection of the fisheries, the result of the negotiations was put into the treaty and made public at once. Were the negotiations which preceded it, I mean, the discussions which took place between the representatives of the two countries, reduced to writing at once? I have no doubt they were. Were they submitted to Parliament? No, sir; but by a simple understanding which prevails in all such cases it was agreed that those records should not be prolluced at all. and they have never seen the light of day in the British Parlianent, in the United States Congress, or here, although here their production was pressed for time and again. Now, when the hon. gentleman states that it is a constitutional rule that negotiations should in all cases be reduced to writing, let him show a case in which negotiations precelling a treaty, conducted by word of mouth, were reduced to writing and produced in this Honse, and he will at least have a precedent for demanding that we ought to do so ; but he will have to do something more before he can show it to be a constitutional rule. Now let us consider the statements which the hoin. gentleman has made with regard to his authorities. Did the quotation from May support his position that negotiations which take place orally between the representatives of two countries shall be reduced to writing? Not at all. May has never written on that subject. He was simply writing on the procedure in Parliament, and when he wrote the dictum which the hon. gentleman read to the House, he was dealing with a question of or ${ }^{\text {ler }}$ in debate, with a rule of debate, and that rule of debate is simply this, that when a Minister or a member quotes from a pullic document he ought to produce it. But the hon. gentleman's necessary constitutional rule for the support of which he invoked May is not that when a Minister quotes from a docmment he ought to proluce it, but that when a conversation has taken place in the course of negotiations, the Minister should reduce it to writing and bring it down to Parliament. When the hon. gentlenan asks this House to adopt a resolution atfirming what he calls a constitutional rule, he ought to show some authority for such a constitutional rule, to show he is not seeking to establish a rule different fron that establisheal by British practice, for which he has so profound a reverence. The hon. gentleman referred to Todd, but he was obliged to read from that authority a guotation which does not refer to a constitutional rule at all, but to a rule of practice existing for the convenience of Parliament, to a rule not referring to negotiations conducted by Ministers at all. It said that in'due comrse the documents which were interchanged should be laid before Parliament-in due course: and Tolld, not satisfied with that effort to avoid a torturing and misconstruction of his authority, goes on to say that a due discretion must he exercised in that regari. What, enguires the hon. gentleman, is the diseretion ! It is to be exercised. he says, in only one case, and that is where the negotiations have not yet been concluded; but he has no authority for that position, which he asks this House to crystallize into the form of a necessary constitutional rule. One can imagine many cases in which a discretion has to be exercised in that regard, and our memory will serve us to cite one. In the very last treaty which we had before this House for discussion, the discretion which Todd refers to was exercised, and the record of the proceedings was withheld. In the megotiations preceling the Washington Treaty of 1871 the same was the gase. We have never yet had the narrative of those negotiations, and now and then some biographical history comes out containing very important and interesting notices of what took place during the conferences that preceded the treaty, not one word of which is to be found in the proticols which have ever heen submitted to any of the Parliaments concerned in the ratification of that treaty. Now let me refer to the cases in which the hon. gentleman asserts that the Minister of Finance violated this important rule. The Minister of Finance and two of his colleagues hall a conversation with a foreign Minister, and he was stating to the House the subject and effect of that conversation in so far as it bore on the question before the House. The resolution asks the House to pass censure upon him on the ground that he put the constitution in great dianger by thus stating to the House what had taken place. On what authority: On the authority which the hon. gentleman read this afternoon, which was read to the Honse at the time the statement was made, and which has not the slightest bearing on this question-the authority that when a Minister cites from a public document he ought to produce that document in order that the Honse should have the sume information that he has-a very sound and proper rule ; but the reason for it does not exist here. The hon. gentleman does not say: You ought, after having had a conversation with a foreign Minister, to put it in writing so that we may know as much about it as you do ; but he says: You ought to put that in writing and l , ring it here, because I do not believe what you said about it.
Mr. MIILLS (Bothwell). Hear, hear.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. And when the hon. gentleman gave the reasons why he did not believe it, I think he satisfied the House that his reasons for not believing the Minister of Finance were anything but creditable reasons to be put forwarl, and anything but creditable reasons to be cheered at this moment by the hon. member for Bothwell.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Hear, hear.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I am glad that the hon. nember for Bothwell agrees with me that it was nothing to his credit that he cheered that statement of his leader. The hon. gentleman had no doubt that this was a very highly coloured statement, because it was in the first place improbable. Well, I do not think it was It was what a great many persons in this country predicted, on high authority in the United states, as not only probable but an absolutely necessary feature of any arrangement which could be entered upon witlí the United States on reciprocity. The other reason he gives is that i report has not been made of it and brought down, and, further, hecause General Foster, not referring to that conference at all and not pretending to yuote one word uttered in it, made a speech on a different subjectaltogether in New lork, two or three weeks afterwards, in which he expressed his opinion that one great reason standing in the way of Canada effecting a treaty with the United States was that we hal not the right to negrotiate our own treaties. That is not in the slightest degree a contradiction of what the Minister of Finance said, anl I am sure no one would be more surprised than General Foster himself at the ingenious twist his language has been given this afternoon. Why, he had not in his mind the conference which had recently taken place, or if he had, he was referring to it different principle altogether. But my opinion is, he had not that conference in his mind when he made that speech, because it would be ill-applied to a conference in which Canadia was actually negotiating for a treaty. We were there practically negotiating a treaty arrangement between Camala and the United states, and we had the great alvantage of the presence of Her Majesty's Minister, so that when we concluded the arrangement, the treaty would not be ours but would be that of Great Britain herself. We have the great advantage that under the constitutional arrangements under which we live and carry out parliamentary government, we not only have the power to negotiate treaties for Canada, but we have in practice the right to make the treaties for Great Britain in which Canada is concerned. That is a much more valuable privilege than the mere right to appear in a diplomatic character for ourselves. If (ieneral Foster really had in his mind the Washington conference of February last, when he used that expression, he referred not to any want on the part of Canadian representativestoassume the diplomatic character in negotiation but to the nature of the treaty arrangements which we were free or not free to make. He did not, I am sure, refer to any technical obstacle as to the carrying on of negotiations, but he referred to the fact that while Canada remains a portion of the British Empire sle must keep in riew her obligations to the rest of the Empire, in making any treaty arrangement. Let me refer for a few moments to the observatione the hon. gentleinan maule with regard to the way in which the papers were brought here. After the conference was concluded, an interchange of views took place as regards the expediency of taking off the seal of secrecy and confidence under which the negotiations were begun; and in so far as Mr. Blaine was concerned, he was asked to say whether anything had occurred which need not be stated here or elsewhere, and he replied that nothing had occurred which need not be made pullic. The House is asked by this resolution to vote censure upon the Government for not producing papers which down to this moment have never been asked for by the members on the other side except in this connection, that fault was found in debate, when the Minister of Finance stated the nature of the negotiations, that the papers had not been brought down. The exception was taken as a point of order, and it was taken afterwards by the hon. member for Bothweil as a point of sub. stance, that such a statement ought not to be made without the record being prorluced and laid lefore the Honse.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). The hon. gentleman himself promised me that he would bring the papers down.

Nir JOHN THOMPSON. If I din, my menory is cntirely at fault, and I will be obliged if the hon. gentleman would refer to the report. But I think he is mistaken. My recollection of what took place is this: The hon. gentleman who leads the Opposition said, at one stage of the discussion on a Bill which was lefore the House, that he supposed the Pill to be one of the results of the visit lately paid to Washington by some of the Canadian Ifinisters, and he took this occasion to ask the fiovernment if they proposed to lay on the Table any correspondAnce or any papers relating to what took place in connection with the risit. My answer was: There is some correspondence which can be laid on the Table of the House, and I am able to say that nothing which transpired is prechuied from leing mentioned in the Honse. The hon. learler of the Opposition asked whether there was any writing to that effect or was it purely verbal, ami I replied: "Yes, there was writing." The hon. gentleman then said: "I presume we shall have it at an early day," and I replied : " Yes." I proluced that writing. I produced the correspomlence which the hon. leader of the Opposition asked for. But he complained this afternoon that there is more correspondence that can be laid on the Table. The hon. gentleman asked for correspondence, and I produced it. As I have assured the House time and again, all the correspondence we have has been brought down. But what this resolution complains of, and what it calls upon the House to censure, is that we have not made a recorl of the conversations and brought them before this House, and the hon. member for Bothwell says that he asked me to produce a record of these conversations and that I promised to bring it down. All I cau say is that my memory is widely astray if that is so. I am not aware of his having made such a request, and I certainly made no such promise. 'i'he correspondence that I agreed to bring down I have brought klown. With regaril to any record which may have been made of the conversations that took place regarding a matter which resulted in nothing and on which the action of this House has not been asked and will not be asked, there is no constitutional rule requiring that to be brought down. It will be brought down whenever it can be, in due course and with due regarl to the cattion which should be exercised as regards consultations with other persons whose rights and interests were affected in that interview. It will, no doubt, be brought down, but the hon. member is somewhat hasty in asking this House to pronounce censure upon the Govermment for not having done so when he has not told us what interests are affected, or that they even asked, down to this, that that record should be laid on the Table. As I have stated, as will have been seen from the observations I have been offering, a great deal of importance is to le attached to the fact that the record the hon. gentleman refers to relates to the reciprocity question alone. It was upon that that his remarks were adiressed to the House, and with regard to that subject, these negotiations not having ended in any definite result which requires the action of this Parliament, no constitutional rule reguires that it should be produced, but courtesy to the House requires that it should be proluced when it can be in ilue course, and that courtesy will be observed. Apart from that, no action ly this Parliament has been called for as a result of those conversations, and the hon. gentleman has no right to ask that the Finance Minister should be censured for the reference he male to these conversations, or that the Government should be censured beratuse down to this monent the record has not been produced to the House.

Mr. MILI.S (Pothwell). I have listened with close attention, and I must say with some astonishment, to the observations adilressed to the House hy the hon. the Minister of Justice. The Minister of Justice says that there is no rule requiring that a record shatl be made of the conversations and of the proceedings or interviews that take place between the representatives of one civilized liovernment and another when they are discussing matters of international or interstate concern, that there is no obligation on the part of Ministers to communicate these interviews to Parliament, and that there is a marked difference lretween the position of ia Minister who undertakes to negotiate and the position of another party who may be appointed on the part of an Ahlministration if he undertakes to negotiate. Well, Sir, I deny that proposition altogether. If the hon. the Minister of Finance had come down and informed the House of the financial circumstances of the country, and had said to the House at the same tinie, I have kept no record of what the Government have paid out or of what they have received; I ask the House to take my statement upon this matter as to what is the present position of the financial affairs of the country, every one would have at once seen how preposterous suchacontention was, everyone would havesaid: We care not how honest the Minister of Finance may be, we care not how great his regard for truth may be, we care not how retentive his memory may be, that is not the manner in which the public affairs of this country should be conducted, that is not the manner provided either by the law or by the conventions of the constitution for the conduct of the public business. Now, the same reasons which make it necessary that there should be proper accounts kept of the receipt and payment of public moneys require that there should be a proper recorl of the transactions of every depart ment of Government, and this rule applies as strictly under the English constitutional system to the proceeringa of the Foreign Office or to the proceedings of any Colonial Government who undertake, by permission or sufferance, to perform the work of a Foreign Office, as to any other department. The reason for the rule in the one case is the same as the reason for the rule in the other case, and the obligation is just as strict in one case as it is in the other. A few years ago a Minister of the Crown in England, Lord John Russell, was sent to Vienna to negotiate with Russia, Austria, Prussia and France with a view to the termination of the Crimean war, but, when he went there, although he was a Minister of the Crown, it was not in his capacity as a Minister but as an amleassador, and he hal in that capacity the same duties levolving him upon as if he had not been a Minister at all, and the protocols of those abortive negotiations show the accuracy of my statement. Then, if you take the case of the negotiation of the Treaty of Berlin, in which not only the Foreign Minister but the Prime Minister went as the representatives of the Government of Eagland, did they come back and say: We bave kept no record of our proceedings, we made no note, we are not in a position to report to Parliament because we are Ministers of the Crown, we stand in a position different from that of an ordinary or extraordinary ambassuidor: Not at all. These noblemen, when they unlertook to negotiate the Treaty of Berlin on the part of the Government of the United Kingdnm, stoci. in the same position as any other negotiators. There was still the same legal and constitutional distmction between their duties as Ministers of the Gown and their duties as representatives of the Crown in those negotiatious as there would have been hat the parties not been Ministers of the (rowu at all. In that respect there was no difference. Thus a record is necessary. Does it depend on the importance of the Minister that there be no record? Are the other Ministers who remained in Ganada during these negotiations of no consequence? Are they inferior persons? Are they men to whom the Minister of Finance, and the Minister of Justice, and the Minister of War are not called upon to account for what they dil? Why, the position of the hom. gentleman is a most untenable one. It is a preposterous position, it is one utterly inconsistent with the principles of parliamentary government and ministerial responsibility. If a party outside had been appointed to conduct these negotiations, no doubt he would be callerl upon to make a report. The Government would not have been satisfied with a verbal communication, with an oral statement from such a representative as to what he said and what was said to him. They would have insisted upon a formal report, upon a memorandum of the interviews that were had, and what would have been the duty of an outside party who might have been appointed to cenduct the negotiations and who would have heen responsible to the Government, as the Government would be responsible to Parliament for his conduct, equally devolves upon these gentlemen if they chose to substitute themselves for the ordinary party who would be employed. They are responsible to the Crown, and it is their duty to report to the Crown, but that is not the end of their responsibility. They are responsible to Parliament. Parliament has a right to know why these negotiations failed, as well as to know why other negotiations succeeded. There can be no difference in that respect. How do we know how far these gentlemen have gone contrary to the well understood wishes of the people of this country? How do we know how far they have sacrificed in our estimation, and in the estimation of the people, the interests of the country in these negotiations? Do the hon. gentlemen deny their responsibility to us and to the country? Do they deny that we are entitled to know what they proposed to the Government at Washington? If thev do, let us know it, because we have yet to consider fully the principles of parliamentary government and minis-
