FIRST READIN:

Bill (No. I) respecting the Alministration of Oaths of Otfice:, --(Sir Iohin Thompson.)

SPEESH FROM THE TMRONE.

Mr. S[PEAKER latid on the Talle a copy of the Speech helivered by His Excellency the Gowernor deneral to both Honses of finliament in the Nenate Chamber this day, which is ats follows:--

Homouralion (jentlemen of the so muter:

It affords me mueh aratifieation to meet you at the commencement ot the larliamentary session, and to be able to congratulate sou umon the general proverity of the Dominion. and unon the abumant harvest with which Providence has blessed all parts of the country.
The lamented amd untimely death of His Kusal Highness the buke of Clarence and Aromble has aroused a teeline of profomil sorrow. The symbathy with Her Majesty and their Royal Ilighueses the Prince and Princess of $W$ aldes, in their boreavement, which hats prevaileal in the Dominion on this melameloly vecasion, has fond expression in resuetful messages of condodence from my Ministers, from the Prorincial (iovernments. and from many other rebresentative bodies.
The nerotiations with respeet to seal fishing in Behring Sea have been gontinued, with a view to the adjustment, by arbitation, of the ditticulties which have arisen letween Her Majesty's diwernment and that of the Einted States on that subject. Commissioners have been apnointed by both Guvermments to investigate the circumstances of seal life in Behring Sea; to report thereon ; and to sugirest the measures. if any, which they may deem necessary for its proper ;rotection and preservation. The Commissioners are proceeding; with their deliberations in Washington. and the results will shortly be eommunicated to Her Majesty's ciovernment. I trust that their investigations, and the determination of the Arbitrators who are to be appointed, may lead to a just and equit:able settletment of this long pending difliculty.
The meeting which had been arranged with the United States Government for a day in October last, for an informal discussion on the extension of trade hetween the two comitries, and on other intermational matters requiring adjustment, was postponed at their request. But. in compliance with a more recent intimation from that Government, three of my Ministers pruceeded to Washington, and conferred with representatives of the Ahministration of the United States ou those subjects. An amicable understanding was arrived at respecting the steps to be taken for the establishment of the boundary of Alaska; and for reciprocity of services in cases of wreck and salvage. Arrangements were also reached for the appointment of an International Commission to report on the regulations which may be adopted by the United States and Canada for the prevention of destructive methods of fishing and the pollution of streams, and for establishing uniformity of close seasons, and other means for the preservation and increase of fish. A valuable and friendly interchange of views respecting other important matters also took place.

In accordance with the promise giren' at the close of the last Session, a Commission has been issued to investigate the working of the Ciril Service Act, and other matters connected with the Civil Service generally. The report of this Commission will be laid before you during the present Scssion.

The conclusions of the Commission on the manufacture of beet-root sugar will also be laid before you.
It is desirable that the fishery regulations in British Columbia should be examined and revised so as to atapt them better to the requirements of the fisheries in that province. A Commission bas been issued with that (b)ject.

An important measure respecting the Criminal Law, which was lat before you last Session, has been revised and improved, at a result of the expression of views elicited hy its presentation to Parliament, and will be submitted to yon. Yourattention will also be directed to measures for the redist ribution of seats consequent upon the Census returns: the establishment of the boundaries of the Territuries; and the amalgamation of the Departmente of Marine and Fisheries. Bills will also be presented to you for the amendment of the Civil Service Act, the Acts relating to real property in the Territories. and of those respecting the fisheries.

Gentlemen of the Mouxe of Commann:

The accounts for the past year will be laid before you. as well as the Estimates for the ensuing year. These Estimates have been prepared with a due regard to aconomy and the requirements of the public sorvice.

IImomorble Gentlemen withe Senate:
Gentlemen oit the Holne of Commomen:
I commend these important subjects, and all matters affecting the public interests which may be brought before you, to your best consideration. and I feel assured that you will address yourselves to them with earnestness and assiduity.

Sir JoHN THOMPsoN moved:

ADDRES IN ANSWER TO HIS EXCEL IENCY: SPEECH.

The Honse proceeded to the consideration of His Excellency: speech at the opening of the Nession.

Mr. Northrel. In rising to move that a humble Address be presented to His Excellency, in reply to the Speech delivered from the Throne last Thursiday, 1 comidently trust that the same kind indulgence and gencrons formarance by this House Which in times past has always been extemled to those uponwhon hasdevolved the like duty, will not le withheld from me to-day. Did I consult my own feelings, I would much prefer that upon some abler. more experienced and better qualified member of the House than I to discharge it, had fallen the duty which I now undertake. lat. recognizing that the honour which is thus conferred is not upon me, lut upon the worthy constituency which I have the honour to represent. knowing that 1 am expected not to express my own opiniom, but to voice the sentiments to which the East Riding of Hatstings gave utteramee in such thumbering tones a week ago last Saturday. 1 rise with pleasure and with pride, though at the same time with diffidence, to move the adoption of this Aldress. His Excellency has seen fit at the opening of his Speech to congratulate us upon the general prosperity of the Dominion and upon the abondant harvest with which Procidence has blessed all parts of the comotry, imi, inasmuch as in these matters a just comprehension of positive truth can only be attained by a fair comparison lretween the present and the past, I think it will not be out of place for me to ask members of the House to indulge in a retrospect and to compare the condition of the land and the state of the people, the existing circumstances and the national prospects to-day and $2 \overline{5}$ years ago. Indeed this is an exceptionally favourable time for us to make that comparison, as we have now completed our first national epoch and are proceeding with the second epoch of our cenntry, and are daily making its history, whether to the shame or the glory of the country time will unerringly tell. Although the first epoch is closed, and the volume of its history is written, it is not a sealed book, but its patges lie open from which all may learn, as so many Canadians have already learned, lessonsfrom which to draw courage, inspira. tion, and bright hopes-lessons of predictioneverified, of promises fultilled, of obstacles surmounted, of suceess attained, of prosperity realized. We are now at the begiming of the second epoch of our history. For the first time in the history of our country the present Parliament has assembled without the assistance and encouragement of the comsels and alvice of the venerable Nestor who has been called away from us and who has been so happily entitled the Father of Confederation. For twenty-fice years the policy of the country has been mainly fashioned and framed and its destiny guided and controlled by the masterly ham of the late lamented Right Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald. Although for twenty five years his policy has heen attacked, his measures criticized, his motives questioned, and his reputation assailen, still, now that the great leader has been carried to his last resting-place, now that the last political hattle has been fought, the last shot fired, and the smoke cleared away from the field of aution, now that the last how has been struck, I helieve the people of this country, secing with rision unclouded and eye undimmed. Reformers and Conservatives alike, agree that whatever his reputation, that is. the man as he has been described or supposed or imagined by those alrout him. his character, the man is he was, not as he was thought, as he was known to his Maker, not. as he was judged hy his fellows, was pure and unsullied, ant that during his whole political life, from the begiming all along the lines down to its brilliant close, he was ever true to those prineiples which were at once the hasis and the apex of his political faith. love for Cimatia, fath in Camatians, and loyalty to the Crown. But, although we have finished, ass I have satid, the tirst epoch of our history, there are lessons to be drawn from it, there are comparisoms which it is necessary for us to make at the present time in order to understand the position of this country at this time when it. commences its secom epoch. Twenty-five years ago, this comutry consisted of a few scattered prosvinces, with no commmaity of interest, with very little interprovincial communication or interprovincial trade. Eath province regulated its own tariff and was working out its own destiny alongr its own lines, within its own limits, and regardless of the interests of fortunes of the other provinces. At that time there were many clouds looming up on the political horizom. What is the case at pre sent: We have now a great Dominion stretching from ocean to ocean, reaching from the stormbeaten shores of Labridor to the sunny slopes of the Pacific, and we have all these different territories brought intoone and united ly a great work, a marvel of engineering skill, the enty of the world and the pride of Canadi, the Canadian Pacific Railway, which is the result of the policy of this (iovermment. Twenty-five years ago the provinces by the sea had so little interest in the western provinces, and we in them, that, when our friends from the east came to Ontario and Quebec, which were then the western provinces, they were practically unknown to us, while we visiting their provinces were viewed almost as curiosities, but now we are able to agree that at all events we will join with our Reform friends in unrestricted reciprocity in the men from different parts of the country as well as in the trade which has been developed between the different provinces, and we are prond to meet our friends from the east as we know they are always happy to meet us from the west. The only regret or jealousy we have is that we have not the honour of adding their names to the brilliant roll of those honoured names of whom the great Province of Ontario lwasts. If the leader of the Opposition in the late election had visited, as was promised, the east riding of the County of Hastings, although he wonlh have found the overwhelming majority of the people of that riding opposed to his policy and regrettiag that his great abilities. his persuasive elonguence aml his magnetic personality were not employed in the interests of what we consider the true National Poliey, still we would have extendeal to him a srecting worthy of the distinguished leader of a great political party-a welcome fitting to fe extembed to and received by so illustrions a representative of one great linach of our national tree. Thus we find. that during the past twentr-five years, cloul after cloul hats rolled away. Bint at the leginming of this epoch there wis amother cloud to whic! I will refer, and many men helieven it was one of the factors that would temb to the dismemberment of this comity. Nany members of this Honse will remember the racial and religions cries that were then raised, and we were told by thase who should not have sporken thus, that the racial ditticulties which existed in this 1 bominion would prove an insuperable bar to the progress and hammony of the comatry. Thuse who thus sime must have real hat little history, or rean it tolittle effect. If they had looked at the history of the mother lamis they could have drawn lessons from it which would have been irrefutable answers to the arguments that were adranced. Weknow that in the mother land there are three commtries moler one thag and these three, Fngland. Ireland and Scotlanil, united together, form the great and glorions Empire of Cireat Britain and Ireland, which all the world knows, all the world homours and all the worh fears. Not to occupy the time of this House in recapitnlating the history of these varions comutries. let me take one glance at the history of Eaglami. We find there, that callses and circumstances arose somerhat similar to those which existed in Canala : and we find, that as like causes will, umlersimilarcircumstances, produce like results, so the results which followed in the nother land we may fairly expect to follow in Canada. Sir. what is the lesson we can learn in this respect from the history of the mother land? We all know that in Fangland we do not find one aboriginal race, lescendel from one primitive stock, untainted ly intermixture with any other race; but we know that England has been suceessively overrun hy varions peoples. We know that when the Romans visited the shores of England nearly two thousand years ago they found two races there, a light-haired light-complexioned people, and a dark-haired and dark-complexioned people. We know that the Roman people settled in the country and mingled their blood with that of the native inhabitants. We know that after the Roman invasion, successive irruptions of Danes, Norwegians, Saxons and Jutes overran the country, each tribe pouring in its own blood and intermingling with the native races. We know, too, that 800 years ago an invasion took place from the north of France under William, whose followers overthrew the Saxon people and mingled their loon with that of the inhabitants of England. Consequently we find that the people of England to-day pissess the strength, the force. and the vigour of all these peoples who male these varions irruptions into that country, and mingled the best and havest elements of their characters with the stream of Englands hloon. We tind that as England owes her maritime supremacy to-day to the hoosl poured into her reins lys the old sea vikings centuries ago, so here in Canada like canses will produce like results, and we shall tind in our own country that the very fatcor which it was supposel womild make for its dismemierment will lee one of the strongest guarantees of her prosperity and progress. We have here in Camilla, int one original stock sprous from one race, hat we have the retinement, the strength and vigour of the foremost raves of the ohl world. We tind in each race there are certain characteristics. certain features, which make it superior to all others in those respects. sio that the dispassionate ohserver, whatever conclusion he may come to as to the comparative excellence of the rations taces, must alnit that in many respects each has some peealiar excellence which the others do not pmesess. We have the loyal, have anl true Euglishnam. We have the long-healed, camy and shrew Sicotchman, we have the light-hearted, lishearted, have and elomuen Irishnan, we have the man, we have the gat. rivacious. religions and chivalrous Frenchman. all pouring their blood in one common stream to fill the veins and throh in the pulse of the people of Camada. so. Sir. we tind that the very element which it wats prealicted would he a factor of dismemherment, and which seemed to many perple a portentinus cload looming upon the horizon, which sowner or later would overwhelm this comerry, has hecome the strongest guaramtee of our progress. permanence and stability. I think we must all agree that the second epreih of our national history hegins with a lorighter sky aml under more favourable anspices than dial the first epoch twenty-tive years ag'. But, Sir, while it is pleasant to dwell on the prosperity of Canala, weare reminded that not conly in this comatry lut on the other side of the water. Inoth peoples have recei vel a solemn warning, another melancholy intimation, of the uncertainty of life and the mortality of man. That grim spectre. Death, that summons every man somer or later, and whose summons, when received. all must obey, that knocks impartially at the castles of the rich and the cottases of the poor, has entered the home of the Royal family of England. the most exalted in the mother land, and has summoned thence the worthy son of an honouredsire, the grandson in the direct line of succession, of our Gracions sovereign.

"There is a reaper whose name is Death,
And $\begin{aligned} & \text { Aith his sicklekeen } \\ & \text { He reaps the bearded grain at a breath }\end{aligned}$ And the flowers that grow between."
It is buta short time since the glad news was brought to this country that a marriage was arranged between our future Sovereign and a fair English Princess, and we all remember the pleasure which the news brought to the heart of every British subject. We remember, too, that that pleasure was heightened by the fact that those political exigencies and state considerations which sometimes compel exalted personages to give their hands without their heart, in this case happily coincided with the love and affections of the two young hearts, and that this was to be a union of both hands and hearts. But the joy we felt in this country was too soon turned to sadness, for the news all too soon was flashed across the water, that the worthy young Prince was stretched on a bed of sickness. We remember, too, how we waited anxiously from day to day for further news, hoping against hope, dreading the possibility of a loss which too soon occurred. In a short time afterwards the news was flashedacross the Atlantic that the Duke of Clarence and Avondale was no more. Sir, I am sure that this House, and the people of this country, who mourned with those thus called to mourn, will readily endorse the steps that have been taken to convey to the bereaved relatives the sympathy of this House and of the people of Canada. I am sure, too, there was no heart in Canada, young or old, rich or poor, high or low, that did not send out its sympathy and tender its condolence not only to the bereaver family but to the unfortunate Princess, whose cup of happiness was so suddenly dashed from her lips, and who was so soon precipitated from the heights of bliss to the depths of woe. We are also informed that negotiations have been carried on with respect to the seal fishing in the Behring Sea, and that they are being continued with ariew to the adjustment of the various difficulties that have arisen between Her Majesty's (iovernment and that of the United States. The difficulties, as this House is aware, continued for several years, and although I believe the members of this House and the people of this country feel, and the people of the Republic south of us feel, that the day has gone by for the two great English-speaking peoples of the world to go so far, and to so forget what is due to themselves and civilization, as to plunge into war, still, from time to time, clouds dit appear on the horizon, and it was not at times impossible that the outcome of the difficulties might lead to war. But we are pleased to see that these difficulties are in a fair way of adjustment. Commissioners have been appointed to look into the matter, commissioners not only representing this country and the United States, but France and Norway, I believe, and other countries interested in the matter. I believe this House has confidence that the outcome of these liegotiations will be such as to remove for ever any danger of conflict between the two countries. The people of the lower provinces and eastern Canada generally, have but little idea of the value and importance of the seal fisheries to our kinsmen in the west; but, Sir, I find from statistics of the year 1891, that from fifty to sixty vessels were fitted out, carrying on an average from twenty to twenty-five men, and sailed from the ports of British Columbia in order to engage in the seal fisheries. I think it may be proper to refer here to the time when the action taken by the American (iovernment caused a feeling of indignation to run through this country at the idea that our fishermen were being interfered with in what were considered to be the proper exercise of their rights, and then was given an unmistakable proof of the new national feeling which is spreading throughout the length and breadth of the country, for we felt that it was not British Columbia that had been injured, but all the people of Canada, from whatever province they came, or to whatever party they belonged, felt an injury had been done to Canadians. His Excellency has also informed the House respecting a commission of three Ministers who met at Wash. ington to discuss with the authorities of the American Governmentcertain questions in an informal way. On referring to the questions mentioned in the Address we find there are several. The first, I observe, is as to the establishment of the boundaries of Alaska. Probably at the present time it may seem a matter of little importance that the boundaries of Alaska should be ascertained and settled. Such was the idea in regard to the settlement of the boundaries of Maine. Now we know how much more care would be exercised were the question again to arise. I am sure the House would feel that the Government have taken time by the forelock in endeavouring to procure a settlement of the boundaries between Alaska and British Columbia, before international complications of a serious character might arise. There is in British Columbia a country rich in mineral wealth, and every day the question is deferred the greater is the danger ; and I am sure the House will rejoice that at last means have been taken between the Government of this country and the Government of the Cnited States amicably to settle this question. Another question that has agitated the minds of the people of the maritime portions of Ontario, as well as the people of other parts of the province, is the question of reciprocity in wrecking and salvage. We all know that the existing state of the law has for years been a burden to the vessel owners and a disgrace to the nineteenth century. It appears almost incredible that a vessel should be wrecked, and although men were prepared and were willing and ready to save the cargo, the property should be allowed to be lost before the very eyes of those people simply on account of the present state of international law, which prevented them interfering, because they did not happen to belong to the right natiouality. The question has been referred to a commission and it is expected that a satisfactor $y$ arrangement will soon be entered into, the American Government having at last conceded the point contended for by our Government, and at the same time the question of towing and customs should be settled as well. Arrangements, we are informed, have been entered into for the appointment of an international commission to report on various guestions as to the fisheries. Questions have arisen between the two countries owing to waters lying between them. For years our close season in Canadian waters has been rigidly olserved. The Government has done all in its power to preserve the fish for the fishermen ; but to a great extent their efforts have been neutralized by the fact that certain waters and rivers lie partially in the United States and partially in the Dominion, and our regulations have no effect over the American fishermen. So it occurred that while on the one side our fishermen were hampered by these regulations, suitable and proper enough for the preservation of the fish, their effect was absolutely destroyed because the Americans fished alnost without restriction. Within certain quarters, for example, on St. John River, there are strict regulations with respect to the pollution of the streams by the saw-mills; but no such regulations prevail on the other side of the line. In regard to the

Mr. Northrup.

Lake of the Woods a question has arisen of interest to both countries. About the shores of the lake in both countries there have been a number of Indians living, about one thousand in this country, and three thousand in the United States. Our Government recognized the necessity of supporting and endeavouring to promote the interests of the Indians. But unfortunately the buffalo having disappeared, their means of subsistence has rapidly disappeared and the preservation of the fish is, therefore, an important question in the interests of the Indian population. $\mathrm{N}=\mathrm{w}$, however, the American Govermment have agreed with our Government to assist them in regulating the fishing and preserving the fish in the whole lake. No effective measure could be carried out by this Government alone, and this House will rejoice not only that the question of the pollution of the streams, but also this question in regard to the preservation of the fishing in the Lake of the Woods, in which our Indian population are directly interested, have been anicably settled with the Government of the United States, in a manner which will prove in the interest of both parties. No doubt the leader of the Opposition, in referring to this clause with which I have been dealing, will point out that it is quite as remarkable for what it omits as for what it contains. No doubt he will call attention to the fact that it contains no reference to the proceedings in view of freer trade relations with which the visit of the Ministers to Washington has been commonly connected. But, I am sure, the members of the House feel confident that when in due time the Ministers engaged in that duty bring their report before the House, it will be found that the Ministers on going to Washington have carried out faithfully the pledges made to the country, that they have honestly and seriously striven to secure freer trade relations with the United States; and I have no doubt it will be found that in all their negotiations, in all their deliberations, in all overtures made, and in all the discussions and proceedings of the conference, our Ministers have invariably kept a keen eye on the honour of Canada, and I am sure it will be found, and the House will rejoice when such appears, that whatever overtures were made, Her Majesty's Ministers in Canada never forgot that this country is a British colony possessing a loyal people, and that all negotiations must be based on this principle, that we will never discriminate against British goods. In offering these remarks I speak not with the anthority of one of Her Majesty's Ministers, but as a humble member of the House and a member of the Conservative party, who has that confidence in the Ministry of the day as to believe that the policy just mentioned will be the policy carried out by them. It would be out of place at the present time, and I have neither time nor inclination, to enter into a discussion of the question of reciprocity or unrestricted reciprocity. I would, however, beg to remind some of our friends in this House, of this fact, apart altogether from the merits of the question, from the consideration whether the Reform or Conservative policy in this matter is right, that there is not only among the people of the country but among members of this House a misunderstanding of the position of the Conservative party with respect to this question. I speak thus because in recent elections I have known hon. members making representations as to the position of the Conservative party which-for I cannot believe that the position was intentionally wrongly stated-indicated that there must be misunderstanding as to our position ; and if members, who have listened to all the debates, still fail to grasp the position of the Conservative party on this question it is not remarkable that throughout the length and breadth of the country there are people who fall into the same error. As I have said, without going into the question of the merits one way or the other, I should like to remind our friends of the Opposition that we of the Conservative party are as anxious for reciprocity with the United States as they are, that we have proved again and again our desire to obtain freer trade relations, and we have shown practically time and time again our intention to secure freer trade relations if possible. But I wish also to remind the Opposition of the fact, which they seem to forget, that while the Conservative party are desirous of securing freer trade relations with the United States, we fully and clearly understand the difference between reciprocity and unrestricted reciprocity. I would like to remind them that while they point with pride to the fart that in former days there was a reciprocity treaty and that this country was prosperous mider reciprocity, we, the Conservative party, agree that there was a reciprocity treaty and prosperity did reign in that time; but we are not ignorant of this further fact, that there were other causes existing at that time, which do not exist now, which may fully account for the prosperity. For, without professing to enumerate all the causes of difference between that day and this, surely no one can have watched the building of railways and failed to understand the effect on the position of the people of the building of the Grand Trunk Railway, which was commenced at about that time. Reciprocity was secured in 1854, and I can well understand how all the people, Couservatives and Reformers, agreed that reciprocity was necessary, kecause the United States was the natural market, and in fact apart from the home market was the only market, because there were not then means of communication with the sea-board and between Great Britain and this country to enable our people to send their products to another land even if they had so desired. During that time also other railways were built, the Great Western and the Northern. Again, the Crimean war broke out, ruring which thousands of men were called to arms by the great nations of the world, and they had to be ferl, and inasmuch as the North-West was unopened, and the western States had not sprung into existence, and Egypt and the Argentine republic as grain producers were unknown, we found a steady demand for all we could produce. Thus the Crimean war was a cause which existed then and does not exist now. We know, too, that very shortly after that war terminated the great rebellion in the adjoining republic commenced, a rebellion during which hundreds of thousands of the citizens were taken from their homes, taken from their families, taken from the fields they had been tilling, and had to be supported by their respective Governments. It is true that, while through that civil war the demand for agriculture products increased, the supplies fell off. These were exceptional occurrences which would not arise if we had unrestricted reciprocity to-morrow ; but, Sir, it may not le out of place to remind this House that even during the years of plenty, when we enjover not only reciproal trate but the exceptional andvantages to which I have just alluded : even during these years of plenty came the horrilly lean year of 15.5 . There are probaloly some gentlemen present in this House who will rememiner the distress which prevailed during that sear. I hope 1 will not be understomen as imputing for one moment to the reciprocity treaty of that day the evils amd misfortmes of the year 1s.);- I refer to that sadly memorable year in order to show tatat a reciprocity treaty is not a sovereign remedy against all the depression which may prevail in the country, and 1 merely wish to proint out even among years of plenty maler a reciprocity treaty. we had a year of terrible nistress. Now. Sir. without referving longer io this gliestion of maretricted recipros. city. I piss on and call the attention of the House to the notice taken ly His Fxechency of the appointment of a commission in order to incestigate the working of the (ivil Service Act. That is a matter upon which 1 am sure the mempers of this Honse, Opposition as well as liovernment supporters. will unite in praise of the policy of the diovermment. It must surely $\mathrm{l}_{\mathrm{e}}$ a matter of congratulation to all the people of this conntry, apart from their political convictions, that at a time when weaknesses were hiservered in the Civil service the diovernment saw tit to appoint a commission such as that referred to by His Excellency, composent of able men. to investigate the evils existing in the (ivil service, and to point out a remedy. I am sure that not only in this Honse, hut throughout the lengith and brealth of this lani, when the persounc/ of that commission is known, componsed ass it is. of men whose mames are honsehoh words throughout the Deminion. 1 atm sure that the names of the gentlemen compensing that commission are at once a guarante of the sincerity of the Civernment in appointing the commission, and of the completeness atat acenatey of the mamer in which the work of that commission will be performed. In due time the report of that :ommission will. I have no doult, lee laid hefore the Honse, and thenall the members, Conservativesanl Reformersalike, can agree in doing all that the commission proposes, or that their individual experience may suggest.to perfeet the working of our (ivil service. in order if posisilde to atodidany friction or difficulties and any such unpleasmunesses as have oecurred in the past. His Excellency also calls to the attention of the House " that the tishery regulations of Pritish Columbia should be examinell and revised so as to adapt them better to the requirements of the fisheries of that province," and he points out that a commission has been appointed with that olject in view. It may lee necessary only to remind the House that the tish in that part of the country are of a different character altogether from those in our eastern waters: and owing to the peculiar habits of the fish in that country it has been found. by experience, that the practical working of these laws which are suitable and proper in the east are unsuitable and unsatisfactory in the Pacific province. The fish of British Columbia are, I believe, not a sporting fish. They are a fish that fock in great numbers up the mouths of the rivers, and they differ in many respects from the fish in the eastern provinces. Therefore, the Government, protiting by the experience of the past, have decided to issue a commission to draw up regulations whic! will apply as well to the fish of the east as $w$ the fish of the west. So imult this eommission will repart during the present session of larliament. The attention of the House will also lee directed to ${ }^{-}$measures for the redistribution of seats consequent upon the census returns, the estahlishment of the lomadaries of the territories, and the amalgamation of the lepartments of Marine and Fisheries." It is necessary under our law that since the census wiss taken last fear, there shonlhl lee a redistribution of seats. I ain sure that the memlere of this Hense will uphohl the diovernment in an honest attempt to so carry ont the latw of this comitry ats to apply the altered combitions which have arisen maler the census requirements, to the law of the lame. son it to oltatin as homest and reasonalble a stritem of representation as can he devised ly honest men. The establishment of the boundaries of the tervituries is a matter, which. like the extidhlishment of the Inomiary of Alaskit. is properly taken up bey the dovemnent at the present time. The territories referred to atre thase levomi the North. West Temitories, the mondariesof which latterarealrealy provideal forly law. Theamalgamation of the lhepartment of Darine and Fisheries is another ehange whidh is the result of experience. Fommery the departments were one and the same. hot smate years age it was decident, while retaining one Minsister in charge of the whole, to appoint two depaty heats. As at matter of pratical experience it hats leen fronnd that the working out of this sistem of having a domble-heated deputy was mot satisfactory. and the fiovermment. Willings ats they always are, to alapt our laws to the repuirements of this comintr, are reatly to protit liy experience and to give to the people of this conntry the in netit of the special kumbledge they ohtain. They now come amolidly forwand and propose to return to the ohl system. simply lecabuse ly experience it has lneen fomml more sitisfactory than the new one. His Fxcellamey also states, " that a Bill will also le presented for the amendment of the Act relating ta real property in the territories.: The House, no doubt, is aware that in the territories the Torrens system has alrealy leeen introluced. and however ditficult it might he to introduce that system into an ohl settled country such ats the Province of Ontario, I am sure that ill will agree that it is desirahle that in a new country, everything prosible shoull he done to facilitate in inexpensive and easy transfer of real estate. In our own Province of Ontario, it has been found in the interests of the community, that the transfer of real estate should be as nearly as prossible approximated to that of the transfer of personal property, and from year to year laws are framed in that province with a view to oltaining this desirable ent. I lelieve that the members of this House will approve of the action of the Government in taking steps in the early history of these territories to see that the laws regulating real estate are settled on a satisfactory busis. Now, Sir, I am sure that the members of this House, on whichever side they may sit, will agree that there is a rariety of topics suggested by the Speech from the Throne, sufficient to occupy this House in legislation during a session of ordinary length. I am sure that the members of this House, and especially those, who, during last summer, sweltered through the hot months in the committee romms and in this chamber, will weloome any steps to rencler as brief as prossible the session on which ye are now entering. I lelieve, Sir, that every member of this House hats come here atatuted his no other view thain that of legislating in the inter ests of Canada. however we may ditfer politically. and whatever divergence there maty le in our view: as to the methenls of ohtaining that great end. I would $h_{\text {e }}$ sorry to think that there is one member in the Honse who hats come here for any other purpuse than to iecrislate. in order to develop the resonares, to promate the indastries, and to do everything in his power to further the interests of our lefoved comatry. I helieve that the members: of this Houste, antuated hoy that principle. I have much pleasure in moving the following reso-lution:-

Mr. Northrep.

That a humble Adilress be presented to His Excellency the (iorernor (ieneral, th thank His Execllency for his gracious Speech at the opening of the present Session. and further to assure His Excellency-

1. That we receive with much pleasure His Excellencr's expression of gratification at meeting us again at the commencement of the Parliamentary Session, and rejoice that His Excellency is able to congratulate us upon the general prosperity of the Dominion, and upon the abundant harcest with which Providence has blessed all paris of the country.
2 That we share the feeling of profound sorrow a roused by the lamented and untimely death of His Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence and Arondale, and are pleased to learn that the sympathy with Her Majesty and Their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, in their bereavement. which has prevailed in the Dominion on this melanchols occasion, has found expression in respectful measages of condolence from His Excellency's Ministers, from the Provincial Governments, and from many other representative bodies.
2. That we hear with sntisfaction that the negotiations with reriect to seal fishing in Behring Sea have been continued. with a view to the adjustment by arbitration. of the difficulties which have arisen leet ween Her Majesiy's Government and that of the lnited States on that siab: ject: that Cimmisionere have been appointed hy forh dinernments. to investigate the circumstances of seral lite in Behring Sea. to repurt thereon, and to sugyest the measures, if any, which they may deem necessary for its proper protection and preservation : that the commissinners are proceding with their deliherations in Washington. and that the results will shortly he communicated to Her Majestys fiwnrmment : omi that we trast, with His Faxellener, that their investigations. and the determination of the Arhitrators who are to be apmointed. mas iemal to a just and couitable settlement of this longr pending ditie enhy.

3. That we thank His Excellency for informing us that the aceunts for the past year will be laid before us as well as the Extimates for the ensuing year, and that the isid Estimates hare been prepareil with at due regard to coonomy and the requirements of the public service.
4. That his Excellency may rest assured that these important subjects, and all matters affecting the public iuterests which may be brought befure ass, will receive our best consideration: and that we thank His Excellency for the expression oi his confidence that we will address ourselves to them with earnestness and assiduity.

Mr. BAIN (Noulanges.) (Translation.) Mr. speaker, unlike uy hon. friend (Mr. Northrup) who spoke first, and those who occupied my position in former years, 1 have not, in undertaking the important task which is now mine, of seconding the Adiress in answer to the Speech from the Throne, the privilege of asking the indulgence of the hon. members of this House, on account of my youth, or of my leing a stranser to the greater number of them. I fully realize how little equal I am to the task 1 : have had the honour of being intrusted with, and how impessible it is for me t. alo it justice : hat I know that I time muself arain in the minst of ohd friemp of looth sides of the Honse. amel that they will forgive me if 1 camot as 1 might discharge the task which I thought I shomblidecept in the nathe of those who have again honoured me with such at thatteringe token of their contidence, in sembing me hatk wrepresent them in lialiament. My task is not easy after the brilliant spee h which you have just heatri frem my hen. frienh, ami if I only took comasel of my awh juldment. 1 wonhl rest satistied with applanding the finc language ambl nohle sentiments which we have just heath. The tirst patagraph of the spereh from the Throme comgratulates fialiament on the general properity of cimada. In order to ascertain how prosperois a countey is. it is necessary in refer to this great eommeretial barometer. its depesit acoome in the lamks.ame the amonat to the credit of its people in the sitings hanks. It must mot he forsottent that for the form veats which immediately preverlen last. the erops faileol in the greatest part of the commtre: and that all the industries sutfered therefrom. Bint this did not prevent the commereial bank alepmsits: and the deposits in sariags hamkstoincrease yearly. I consibler our conatryasone of the most prosperous in the world. We hive not, it is true, such enlossal fortunes ats ate fomblamong one neighbours and elsewitere. hit, on the or her hathet, there is not tole fomm here such black misery as is met with in those comutries. If we compare the great Ameriean centres with ours, we see that since the inanguration of the National ladiey all the alvantages are on our sille ant any one who risits our cities of rural districts can eomiance himself that our peopple are prosperons and happeg. I may be told perhaps that sur population has not increased as much ats might have been expected. It is true. lat it has heen the satme with our neighlours, and we are not the only ones which were disatpointed hy the last census. They were as much disappointed as we. The fact is that our showingt is lettei than that of the States of New Englame. Where, instead of increasing, the popalation has atetually olecreased. His Fixcellency continues ly rongratriating us for the tirst time for sevezal years, upon the abomblant harvest with which every part of the conntry was blesseal hy Providence. It is a great gratitication for those who are interested in the agriculture, the commerce and the inclustries of the comntry ; and if Providence continues for some rears to farour us as it has during the last, our inhlustries and our commerce will take a new stride forward, and ont prosperity increase as well. We have learned, Mr. Speaker. with a feeling of profomm grief, the premature and lamentable death of the one who, in the natural order of things, wats one Clay to reign over the British Empire, and was to lee our sorereign. I know that. I hat echo the sentiments of the hon. gentlemen of this House, and of the French (Gumlians of the Dominion of Canalia. Whom no other mationality outiloes in loyalty and attachment to their sovereign and the British Crown, when I repeat that which has been so well said by my hon. friemel, the mover of the Alilress. Our most sincere sympathy with Her Majesty and their Koyal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, in their grief mpon this lamentable oceasion, have found expression in all parts of the 1 hominion. Another prositge in the speech from the Throne. Mr. Speaker, refers to the ditticulties which for a number of years have existed in regard to the behring sea. We learn with much satisfaction, Mr. Speaker, that the puestion for some time under discussion letween the fiovermment of Her Majesty and that of the linited States, conceming the fur seal tisheries, is on the proint of an amicable settlement hy arbitration. This will be of great importance as it will remove a source of contention hetween the two mations. It is highly necessitry that this settlement shonh take place. hecanse we have the greatest interests at stake. not only through british Columbia. hut also owing th the fact that every vear a large number of ressels from the eastern provinces go and tish for seal in behring seat. Which they reach by way of (ape Hom, and that a certain number of these resisels have lneen seiged amd combiseated with their contents he the American revenue cuters. It is a well-known fact that the linited Stites were the tims to resent amd protest against the pretensions of the Russians, Who before lses elaimed the exchusive right of tishing in the liehring seat within a humited miles of the shore fs the shores on both side belonged to Russia. it meant the exclusion of all the ither nations from that part of the lacific (hean. However. by a traty made with the lonited states in 1ses. and another with the lititish fiorernment in the same year, she waived her rights. And why were these treaties male: Becaluse Russiat malerstomel that its comtentions were untenahle. However, after having bobght from Russia Alaska amd the neighburing islands, including the Pribyotf aromp, compened of the islanils of st. Feorge and Sit. l'aul. which are the most freguented hy the fur seal. the Americans forbate the entame: of behring sea, although that sea is six or seven hmmed miles wide. Let me tell you, ly the way, that in making this purchase for ${ }^{-1}, 2(n)$ inn, they made as gond a hargain as we did when we lought the territories of the North. West, since the right of tishing for the fur seal on the Pribyloff lislands gives them more than sutficient to pay the interest on the purehase money, while there are, on the other hand, gold mines in Ahaska, one of which yields morethansl, (An),(VA) perannum. Forgiveme the digression. I was saying that the United $\begin{gathered}\text { tatas, }\end{gathered}$ after having hought this territory, hat set up the stme pretensions which Russia hat, iy claming in virtue of the purchase treaty with Russia, the exchasiveright of tishing in the Behring Siea. This is why I im hippy to see that this source of dissension is soon to he removed. And I hope that the investigations to be made and the judgment to be rendered by the arhitrators will bring alout a just and equitable settlement of this long-pemding difficulty. I see with pleasure that upon the invitation of the Government at Washington, our Ministers went to confer with the representatives of that (hovermment, and have reached an amicable arrangement of sereral questions of the highest importance to the country. The first to le mentioned is the determining of the bomilary of Alaska. A few years ago there was an impression that this part of our territories was of no value, and was, in fact, but at country of ice and snow-clad mountains. But the surveys male in that part of our territory estal)- lish that these momtains contain grold and other precions metals, and that the rivess carry gold deposits, and are replete with tish, such as salmon. tront, de. A population of miness and tishermen has found its way to that region to work out its riches, and already a mumber of canning estahlishments are to he found there. In 18sio, Mr. Bayaro, the Secretary of state for the linited states, in a despiteh on this question to the Americian Minister in Lomlon, Mr. Phelps, sitid:

[^2]" Experienceot the difficulties attending the derermination of our admited line of lomadary; ater the necupation of our rerritory and its settement by Chosoringshergiane to the respective thevernments. points to the importance of establishing by natural ohjecte or other monaments. the actath line be ween the teritoryacomired he purehase from Russia, and adjoininz pussessiuns of ller Rritamic Majesty. The region is uow so sparsely necupied that no contlicting interests of indiviluals or juristiction are likely to interfere to the delay or embarmsement of the actuat loeation of the line. It deterred until punalation shall enter and wecupy the territory some rivial comtest of neighburs may again array the two (iovernmente in antaronism. I theretire recommend the appointment of a commission to act joimtly with one that may be appinted on the part of tireat Britaintodetermine the line between our territory of Alaskia and the coterminous pussecsions of (Great lifitain.
There is no dittenter as to the line which follows the one humdred ind fort 9 tirst degree of longitude from the glacial seah dowi to Mount sit. Elias : but there the difticulty legins, to contime as far as Portland canal accorling to the American claim. which would give them the Prince of Wales. Pierce and other ishands, or at far ats the straits of Clarence, aceording to our claim, which would give us those islamls. Difliculty is also met in regaril to the width of the strip of land extending along the coast, and lxomiled by the crest of the monitains the nearest from the coast when not at more than ten marine leagues therefrom, a limitation which we claim to be independent of the indentations of the coast, while the Americuns claim it to be otherwise. Serious studies of the guestion have been mate by Dr. Dawson on our behalf, and Mr. Dall on behalf of the Linited states. Let us now examine the question of shipwreck and salvage. According to the present liw and customs regolations, as there are more shipwrecks on the northern shores of the lakes and rivers which divide us from our neighbours, than on the south shores, I believe that we have the best of it. However, as it is our wish to live in harmony with them, I am happy to see that amicable arrangements have been made for the settlement of this yuestion. We also learn with pleasure that they hove agreed to appoint an international commission to repurt on the regulations on le adopted by the Cuited states and Cianalis to prevent the use of destructive methonds of tishing. the pitletion of our tivers, the uniform clowing of tishing seasems. and on other means fon the preservation and increase of tish. It is an acknowledged fact that norwithstanding all that we may do ererywhere in the Dominion wherever our lakes anil rivers form the lomadary line lerwern the two countries. if our friends of the other side of the line do not take the sime measures that we do for the preservation and the propasation of tish, our eflorts and oar expenditure in that direction will be useless. I might instance the shores of the Amerian Athatic where the absene of resulations hats allawed the destruction of tisheries formerty of great value: The spech from the Therme tells us of the appmintment of a commission to investigate the working- of the (ivil service -ict. Iam sure that the repurt which will be make lo the distin#uisher men who compuse this contmissiom, will he of great and antage in refoming the ahoses which maidexist. 1 mast at the same time congratulate the (owsememt upon the prompt ation they have taken in eqpelling froin the service all these fomm guily of irregularities. Anil 1 ann certain that Thes will comtinue this policy until no dishonest empheres remain: lecatuse it is oi the highest importance for the srand administation of the comery, that the emplores oi the divil service more tham any other chiss of societs. be above saspicion, and they shoulthe thoronghity convinced that no irregubaty wil? le forgiven them. But it is at consoling fate that out of so large a number of emplovis. si few dishomest mes shouli he foum to hate faiked in their duty. We see wery hay in the hast of our thatacial institutions, amd in spite of the strictest contor, emploses hecoming defanters. It is not surprisines therefore, that wectasomally some be fomm in the civil Serrice. and from what 1 know of the service, and the acplatintamee 1 have with a mumber of emphosis. I must sal that as a lunly the (ivil serviee is as homomable and honest asimy we the elass of society. The next paragraph informis us that the repurt if the commission of empuiry into the question of beet-rowt sugat will be submitted to us. It is a question which certanly leserves all the attention of this House and of the comntry. I hope that we will cimtinue 10 protect an inlustry which shonh le a source of great riches to the provinees the soil and climate of which are aldapted to the growing of this phant., and which should he of as great. a henetit to us as it has heen to Fance, iermany and $^{2}$ the other European countries where it has lnecome one of the main industries. It is said that whoever can canse two blales of grass to grow where only one grew lefore is a bendactor of his comtry, and 1 consider that Napoleon the First has done more for Frame, in causing the French to produce their own sugar than in winning all the hattles which made of him the greatest man of -Europe. We also see with pleasmer that a measure corlifying our criminal haw is to be submitted to parliament, hat is the bill was already put before the House last year, and as almost every member is acquainted with it, there is no necessity for further remarks. We also see that measures will he brought hefore the Honse tor the redistribution of seats consequent upon the cemsus returns; for the establishment of the hommaries of the Territories: and the amalgamation of the Departments of Marine amb Fisheries ats a step towards ecomomy and letter alministration. A Bill concerning real property in the Territories in acoordance with the Tomens system, and Bills concerning the tisheries will also be submitten to us. With this programme from the (iovermment, and the public and private Bills that will be presented, we shall hase plenty with which to oceupy our time during the sesisinn. In ennclading my remarks, I mast hery the gardon of my hon. eolleagnes for having gine intio mop a details than 1 had intemed at tirst, athl thank then for their attention.

Mr. I.MLRIER. Mr Speaker. I very heartily tember my comgatulations to the mover anil the secomiter of the Arlabess for the manner in whith they have performed the tasks which they hate assumed. It gives me pleasure to saty to the hom. member for Eiast Hitstings (Mr. Aorthrup), that the suecth which he has deliveren to the Honse this : ffernomis. in my humble opinion. one of the mosi guiet in tone and rich in matter Which it has beon my pleasure to listen to in many years. H. has uiteren sentiments which we womblall bee elan to heatr more frequently uttered on the thon of this Hense-- not heranse we believe they are motsenemally felt, lint. lecanse the more often such semtiments are repeated the greater effect they have in mouling our future desting: At the sime time, it shall bot sumprise the hon. sentleman, I im sure. if I tell him that much as I fime to ithmire: in his speech. I cammot agree in everything he has satid: lut the exceptions which I have to take to his remarks are very few, hecouse in the main I an disposed to agree with what he hats sail. I was surprised. I must save to hear him speak as he dil of the prosperity of this commtry. I was unt at all mprepared to see the statement in the speed of His Excellency, we are aceustomed th that : but, Sir, is it possible that a yoms (analian comblentertain the opinion whidh the hom. gentleman hats just expresserl. that he finds the state of the conintry one tole congratulated upon: Is it posible that the advisers of His Fixcellency, in putting the statement in his mouth that the comutry was prosperous. Were really serioms and sincere? May we mot rather suppose that they were playing a game of hoff. inaçining that they were bound to persist in that assertion : la it mossible that they cian hold such an opinion in the face of the census returns: Why, Sir, the census has heen a revelation in this Honse:--not a revelation, I shomhl say, but a contirmation of the truths which have been uttered again and again on this side of the House, hut which have been as often denien by the ather side - dismissed with lofty contempt as the pessimistic utterances of mere fathlt-finders. After all, thongh it is mot a matter of satisfaction to us, still it is a duty to re-assert that all the statements mate on this side of the House have been verified, and more than verifiel, hy the revelations of the census, in regard to the state of the comatry. In the last decade our population has grown just one bare half-million. We had espected that it would reach five millions or more, but it was found to be under five millions. We have not maintained the natural increase of our population, uor have we kept the immigration which was brought into the country at great cost : and yet we are told, forsooth. that the enomery is prosperous. I want to know the evilences of prosperity. A happy, teeming population would he the hest possible evilence of the prosperity of the coountry ; hat what is the use of talking of prosperity whenome million of Camalians have leserted our shores to settle in another country which is not more faroured hy nature than our own. If wehad kept this million of Canaliams, if we hal kept the immigrants whom we have brought here, then there would bave heen some retson tostalk of prosperity. Prosperity there may be: 1 would not dombt that there is prosperity for some privilered classes: hat prosperity for the toiling masses--sir. it is a mockery to speak of it in the face of such a state of things. Why, sir. our population has increaseal at the rate of conly 11 per cent. A young conntry like (amala, which is able to atford foon, chothing and homes to at least one humbed millions of people, hasnot kept even the five millions which we had anticipated. If (amadat Were an old land, on the eontinent of Earope, then I could malerstand hon. gentlemen opposite claiming that it was prosperous sio long as the people were not starring. But (anada is in Americat (amada has the areatest possihle future lefore it : © mata is bound to have some diay or wher. when it is properly governed and administered, a population of one hundred millions. At the presemt time we shonhdat least hate six or seven millions: hat we have not tive : and vet, farsonth. hom. gentlemen opposite talk of propmerity. Our neishlemers to the south during the last checalle have increased $\stackrel{-}{2}$ per cent. The have kept not only their own promation. but the jomplation which hats come to them frem ahroan. We have been tohd agatin ame again. and I think the hom. member for liant Hastings repeated the statement, that there has been a displacement of population in the linited states. So there hats heen: hint thongh there hits heen a displacement of prpmation in that eomatry, perple moving from one state to amother, the mation as a nation hats suffered mo loss whatever. Under such circumstances it seems tome that hom. gentlemen opmosite. in purposely elosing their eyes to the real state of the comatry. are not discharging the duty which the comitry hats a right to expect from them. The true patriot dues not, like the ostrich. hary his head in the samel and ignore the facts, hat he looks the real situation of the comitry in the face. Anyone who doos that must see thit the present state of the conntry is not sitisfactory, and that there must be reforim. I clam, Sir, that on this occasion. ats on other necasions, the only patriots are fomd on this side of the House. I say it with all camolour, that if hon. gentlemen opposite were at all awake to the cluty of the hour, they would not assert that the country is prosperous; but they woull frankly aimit that for a young country which is boumi to have a great future, it is in a lamentable condition when it cannot retain its own population, and that it becomes the duty of all patriots to seek for some kind of reform. What is that reform to be? That is the question; and much as we differ on one siale of the House or on the other, I am sure that we all agree in this, that the reform which Canadit reguires at this moment is a more extended market for its products. Canada is in the position to-day of a young giant shackled and manacled, not free in his movement, and the only thing he wants is to lee set free from his shackles and to have the opportunity of extending his energies abroad. This is the policy we have been pursuing for years, and, although the policy has not been aceepted on the other side of the House I an a ware that many other hon. gentlemen on the other side have in their hearts heen compelled to admit that the policy that must be adopted is to find markets for our prolucts somewhere. On the other hand, there are many of our colleagues on the other side who, not many days or weeks or months ago, indulged in the hope that Great Britain would alter its policy in regard to trude and that we would find a larger market than we possess, that cireat Britain would depart from the principle of freedom of trade and wond discriminate in favour of colonial products, while the colonies would discriminate in favour of British products. That question has been settled on the flow of the British Pablianent the other day, when the answer wats given that un such hopes could be indulged in, that Britain would lepart from her policy of freedom of trade, so that all the hopes which have been indulged in by some of our colleagues on the other side of the House have passed a way and cim no longer he entertained. It, therofore, becomes the duty of these men who helieve in their hearts that the situation could he amended in that respect. to turn over a new leaf in the look and seek for markets somewhere else. It is minnifest. after what was said the other day on the flom of the Imperial Parliament, that Britain will not depart from her policy of freelom of trale. I ann bound to say, however, that there is gramber in the policy, in the ecomomic policy of Britain which is greater than that of any other comutry: she opens her doors to the whole universe, net minding whether the rest of the universe opens its doors to her or not. But it is manifest at the same time that the dream which was entertained fifty years agohy.fohn: Bright and Coblen as to frectom of trade has not heen realizel. It was expected in those days that mation after nation would follow the lead of Britain aml adopt freedon of trate. Those hopes have not beell rerified. Englamd is the only nation that has a alopten freedom of trade, but, although the dream has not leen realized to the fullest extent, still it is manifest that the idea of freedom of thate is gaining ground. It is coming in a different manner, it is coming by means of commercial treaties. Nations which are protectionists to-day, not beeanse of any love of protection but simply lecause they fear that if they adopted freedom of trade they would give an advantare to their neighhours, are passing legislation which gives freedom of traule to the neighhouring conntries in exchange for the freedom of trade offered by them. For example, we find this in Germany. The German Zollverein is one of the most protective societies to le found on the face of the earth, hat we find that within the last twelve months the German Zollverein has been offering reciprocity of trade to Switzerliund, Belgium and Italy, and, I believe, also to Austria and Spain. Then we have the example of the policy of our neighbours to the south of us, who have extender freedom of trade to all the nations of Southern America, and also to the West Indies. This is also the policy of the Liberal party of Canada. atmit that it is not possible for us to ohtain or accept freedom of trade as we would diesire to have it or as it exists in Eagland. but the policy we have in view is to extend freedom of tracle ly means of commercial treaties with other nations. This is the policy which I believe commends itself at the present time not only to this party but to the most civilized nations of the earth. It is true that on this question we have not heen met with any ravouratle action on the other side of the House. They are Conservative, and therefore slow to adopt new ideas, but there must he something souml in the policy which we have propommeled, seeing that aloutt ten days or two weeks ago they paid a visit to Washington. I do not propose to-ilay to disenss the question of unrestricted reciprocity which does not come within the four comers of the speech from the Throne, and which we will have oecasion to discuss again and again during the session; lont the hon. gentleman stated that we on this side of the House did not malerstand what was the position of the Conservative party in regard to reciprocity. It seems to me that hon. gentlemen opposite do not muderstamd what unrestricted reciprocity is. At all events they profess not to understanil it. or they certainly grossly misreppresent it. The hon. gentlenam, who, I am sure, is a good Conservative, has told us that his party was anxious to ohtain reciprocity in natural proflucts. If he had heen in this House last sessiom, or for some time hefore, he would have known that this may have been the policy of his party in antiquated days, but that it was their policy no longer. Did we not lear. two or three years ago, a Minister of the Crown state on the Hoor of Parlianemt that reciprocity in natural prodacts would be the bane of Canalian famers? That is not an isolate! statement, hat the statement has been repeated on the flow of this House time and again by the rank and tile of that party. Only last session we heard again and again the statement that reciprocity in matural prolucts wonla he the lane of the farmers. Therefore, I ask myself, what is the reason why the Canadian Ministers went to Wishington some little time ago : Perhaps, in their hearts, after all, they do not adopt the policy of their old colleagues or of some one of their followers, but in their heart of hearts they may believe, as must appear twevery reasonable man, that reciprocity in natural pronlucts wonld be beneficial to the Canadian farmers. We are in favour of unrestricted reciprocity on this sille of the Honse; but if we cannot have unrestricted reciprocity we are quite willing to accept reciprocity in natural prolucts, as we ate lesiroms of securing to the fullest poissible extent the alvantages of trade between the two conntries. But if the Government aud their supporters will not grant this country reciprocity on the old lines, if they will to-day, or to-morrow, or at any time, obtain reciprocity even in ever so few artieles, they will have the support of the Liberal party on this side of the House. Sir, we have been told again and again that unrestrictel reciprocity was not possible, that the Americaus wonld not graut it. I would like to grote on this subject from a speech delivered in New York a few days ago by the Hon. Mr. Foster, who holds, as I understand, a high position in the State Department at Washington. After speaking of the tendency and the policy of the American (invermment to establish wide commercial treaties with the different nations, he goes on to saty :

- But, it may be asked, if this be true. why not extend it th our (lanalian neirhbours on the nurth? The first answer is that with uar tropic:al neiphbours, whose products are su dissimilar to curs, reciprocity is a simple matter, hut when we cume to deal with a country having thousande of miles of conterminous territory and with like products and industries, the guestion becomes more complex. Lut this is not the insuperable diffientes. The filet that camada loves not possess the right of neqotiating her cwn treaties, but must have them negotiated for her by a distant power which is controlled by cemomic principles entirely different from thast of hoth the bibited States and (annada, eonstitutes the ehief barrier to any arrimgement.' Sir. though I would not sulsseribe altogether to everything that is said here. I see, however. mo insuperohle dithenty. judging from the language of the American anthorities. to seeming complete reciprosity hetween (anma and the Eniteri States. The diflicilty at this moment is that we have not the pewer to negetiate our own commercial treaties. The pewer to nequtiate onf own commercial treaties is one whid hats been hor chamed be this Honse. As far lack as 1 ss: Mr. lblake intronluced a resolation in faveme of anking the mother comutry to gramt us that power. That motion was voter Gown. some yeats afterwards my hon. friem to my left (sir Bichard (artwright), in INses. if I rememher arirht. or in $18 s$ s, introduced a similar motion. Which was alse soted down. But in view of the eveluts that have taken place, in view of the fact that we are progressing as a nation. in view of the fact that it is hecoming recognized on both sides of the Honse that the table of ('anata mant lee extembed somehow, and that this comatry will no lomere consent to les shut up within its own bomoliaics, it is more than ever opportmia to Nehate and to discoss this question once more, and this question. I may say at onee must be debated at no distant day during the present session. A few days ago three (athadian Ministers paid a visit to Washingtom. This time their visit lastel longer than din their risit of last April. Their present visit. "e are toll in the speech. Was tine result of an intimation from the American liove:mment. I was not prepared for that statement, hut I accept it with a great deal of pleasure indeed. I am glad to hear from the alvisers of His Fixcellency. that the visit which they paid to Washington was male upon an invitation from Washington. This, Sir. is of grow omen, it shows friendship on the part of the Eniterl states: and for my part I deplore the fact that letween (Gmala ami the Enited Nates. letween two countries of the same hlood, of the same langhage, in a large measure, and of similar institutions, there shoulit he any feeling other than one of the elosest friemlship. l'atrintism loos not, mean hostility to any country : patriotism ought to be founded, not upnis hostility to any country, but num the Inoadest and most generous instincts of human nature. While we ought to profess ourselves friends to the Americans, on our side, I am sure, we do not wish to do so with any loss of dignity. The hom. gentleman said a moment ago that he was sure the Canadian Ministers at Washinequen had not done, and would not do, anything det imontal to the dignity of Canada. Sir, I have no doabe of it. but I can tell him that there is no party in the House who would negotiate a treaty with the states, if such a treaty were to imply any derogation to the dignity of Camada. We do not almit on our side of the Honse the view which is often stated by hom. gentlemen opposite, that a treaty of unrest ricted reciprocity wonlil imply derogation to the rlignity of Cimata. Nothing of the kind. For my part. I ann glad that the (inadian Ministers went toll atshington some time ago. They did not. and could not. succed, hecanse the hasis upon which they wanted to negotiate could not he aceepted by the American lionernment. Some time on other, somer or later, and sooner mather than later, if another liovermment were to send a teputation to $\mathrm{W}_{\text {ashingtom chargen }}$ with negrotiating the fullest treaty thit it is possihe to olitain from the Americail incernment. I maty tell hon. gentlemenopposite at once, that if on such an oceasion the Anericanathorities weredisposed to he arrogant or mifiemily, or were disprosel tomake us paty any price at the expense of one dignity for the privileges werlesired, we wouht say: We want mone of it. We would say: We will reman ats we are. and for my part I would turn ahout fice immediately. liut. Sir. it was mot possible for the hom. gentlemen th suceecel, and why: The hon. gentlemen did not want to succeed on the hasis of unmestricted recipurity: they Wanted to negotiate only on the hasis of restricted trate: and is mentioned in the ketter of Mr. Blane to Congressman bater. Which it is useless to cite again to the Homse. the Amerienn diovernment has intimated againame again that they would not negotiate on any other hasis than that of unrestricted reciprocity. Su their misision was hound to fail from the very ontset. Vet 1 am orlad they went. not because I experted they coulil ateomiphish anything in the wity of securing reciprocal tranle, hut simply hecalise I desire to see them open friendly relations with our neighbours. In that respect I am erlarl to see that their mission hats not heen withont some efficect. As a result of that mission we are to have, as I umberstanl, an arransement concluded for settling the bumblary hetween (amblat and Alaska. This is an imporitant measure from every stampoint. It is not likely that that part of the country will ever lee thickly settlen, if settled at all ; hat, at all events. it is open to trade, and it is far preferable that the houndaries between the two nations should be settled now than at a later date after there may possibly have been a collision between tmalers, with all the consequences of such a collision. Sio far the visit of the Ministers to Washingeon ham not heen withont fruit, anl sof far it is of some importance. Then, as another result of the mission of the Ministers to Wiashington, we are to have, at last, legislation for reciprocity of services in cases of wrecking and salvage. Well, this is certainly an important result of the mission to Wishington. There has heen, as I understand, a statutory offer of reciprocity on our part, standing for years; I do not know whether it still exists; if it has been repealed it has been done within a gear or two. But it existed cluring many years, and was never accepterl. Hitherto they have not exerted themselves in having such legislation passed. Once or twice, certainly once, the Bill was introlucell, if I remember rightly, by the hun. member for Frontenac (Mr. Kirpatrick) to establish such a reciprocity on our side of the line, which could be met at any time by legislation on the other side of the line. The Bill did not become law, it was killed by the Ministers; it may not have heen killed openly, but. I am sure that the Ministers never lifted a finger in its behalf. 1 am sure also, knowing the great influence which they wield upon the representation in this House, that if they omly lifted their little finger in favour of the Bill it would have been passel. For some reason or other a Bill similar was killed in a sulserguent session. Now, while they were in Wishington, the matter was discussed with the American (iovermment, and as a result we are to have this humane legislation. because, it must be admitted to be a crying shame to these two civilized nations that such a law has not somer been passed. Then, we are to have a commission to devise regulations for the preservation of fish, and to prevent the pollution of the seas. This is a technieal subject which I do mot profess to be competent to deal with, but I am sure that it is a subject of great importance, and one which must be proluctive of a great deal of goonl, that is, we can have international regulations which will apply both to the Unitell states and to Canada to prevent the pollution of the waters, and to prevent the use of those means of catching tish which are so destructive. so far the visits of the Ministers have leen productive of goonl. We are to have an international commission, and we are $t$ receive a report of a commission of our own- the commission on the Givil service. I will refrain from making reference to that sulject untal we have the report of the commission itself. This is a sulbject somewhat dangerbus to touch on unless we possess full information, and I deem it more prulent at this time to say nothing about it, awaiting the result of the comumission's repor. But 1 am surprised that $I$ am unable to find within the corners of the speech any menion whatever of another commission. which had heen promised with great flourish of trumpets, aul which was to investigate the working of prohilition legislation in foreign comatrics. I havenot heard it word of it. I believe. since. Iuly last. I thought, and everyboly expected, there would he some mention of this commission in the speech: hecialuse, if we remember rightly, this commission had heen appointed to investigate and correct an error which had been committed hy the Minister of Finance in a moment of weakness, aud in a moment of courage he thonght it letter not to persist in his error, but to inform himself on a matter ats to which he had prononnced without having satficient information. But $I \mathrm{am}$ not to judge from what I fail to see before me, I believe the hon. gentleman has had another moment of weakiness in this matier. As to the legislation which is promised, it is of a mild character, and, as was anticipated and suggested by the member from East Hastings (Mr. Northrup), it is conducive to a lorief session. At least there is not much in it which should lead to protracted debate in this House; except one measure,-the measure with respect to the distribution of seats. This is, of all measures proposel, the most important that Parliament has to deal with, because it is the very busis of the system of goverument under which we live. The proper representation of the people, the fair and adequate representation of the people, the fair and adequate representation of everyone, is the very busis of responsible government. The hon. gentleman hoped a moment ago that this basis would be founded on the principle of fairness.

Sir, 1 im glan to hail this announcement, lecanse it will he the first time such a measure was ever bised upon such principles. There never yet was a measure of this kime that was based on the principle of fairness. and we shall see whether on the present oceasion the (iovernment will aut up to the expectation of their follower, whether in the forth. conning measure they will or not follow the old methon of hiving the birits so its to give a chance to the Tories elsewhere: or whether they will distribute the dirits and Tories alike so as to sive a chance for the opinions of the conmatry to be faisly expressed in every section and every division. I am not sure hovever. that the hom. gentlemam has not expected tow mach. I will hot stit he is mislent. I will not renture any prediction, but 1 am glad to hail the informatisi that he. at all events, ex. peets fairness to be displayed, and 1 hope the same spirit will prevale every imember forming the matjority on the other side of the Honse. There is hat one more remark 1 desire to ofler. and it is one of salness. The hom. member fin East Hastings (Mr: Northrup) has refered in fitting tems, in must fitting terms, indeed, to the sinl event which lately shocke:d all British sulijects the world over: ani not ouly British sulijects but all civilizel mations. There is, after all, a miversal brotherhood in the whole human family: It is our misfortume that sympathy is elicited more lig the sadness than hy the jors of life. Nothing. inileed. can le sulder than the leath on the threshold of manhood of whe horn to so great dignity, so fall of hope and survomided ly such love anil affection. Certainly it is one of the mest painful tagyedies of this age. this death of one born to so great a dignity as 1 have sail, of one on the step of the hifidal:altar. To thase to whom he wats so clove it is impusible to offier any comsolation, heceanse this is one of the griefs which camot he consoled on carth : hut it is a melancholy pleasure for us to offer our sympathy. and to say to these who hear his loss to-day. that we, the loyal subjects of Her Majesty: and the future suljects of His Majesty, if he hail livel. share to the fullest extent the hiss they have sustained.
sir , OOHN THOMPSON. Mr. Speaker, if we on this side of the House cammot fully concur in all the remarks which the hon. gentleman has made. I am sure we can very heartily and sincerely concur with him in the congratulations he has extended to the mover and secomler of the Address. Those hon. gentlemen. I agree with him, have discharged the luty which derolved upon them with rare ability and good taste, and we cordially congratulate these two gentlemen or their first appearance this session in the House, the mover of the Aldress representing the young members, and the secomler representing gentlemen who have served with us before and are coming lack with a warm weleome from their friends and soadjutors. I would have liked very much to have gone further and included in my expressions of concurrence and congratulation the leader of the Opposition himself, for, if we except three or four expressions which he used and which I am sure on a little reflection he would be disposed to revise, as, for example, the assertion that the patriots all sat on his side of the House, and, for example, thedenial of theprosperity of this country, and the assertion that hon. gentlemen on this side were sitting with eyes perversely closed to the true condition of the comutry, we might fairly congratulate the hon. gentleman and allow his speech to go, with nothing except an expression of concurrence. biut we are unable to do so for the reason I have just mentioned. Whether perversely or otherwise he insists on stating as His Excellency mentions in his specel, and as we have stated on many oceasions, that the condition of the comntry to - day is a matter for which Canalians ought to be proud and grateful. Whether we consider the economic comalition of our people, their industrial progress, or whether we consider the matters which the hom. genideman in a moment of forgetfulness five minutes afterwarils referreal to in his speech as the progress of this comutry towards nationality, we hate every reason to feel proud of the position this comutry ocenpies, and if the hon. gentleman insists. as he and his party have frequently done. on inseribing on their bamer " war, pestilence and famine," the hon. gentleman will find the stamlard is not one that will rally the someth, the hope ani pride of canada moler it. The hon. gentleman compated Canala to a yomis giant strugerling with all his energy, but manacled hy shackles. hastang the poliey of hom. gentlemen on this side of the Homse, the hom. gentleman singulariy misatpprehended us, becanse we conceive that the policy which he hats urged on the Honse to day, which he and his followers have urged on the country, is mot one that will free the energies of the young giant, hat will compel him to take on new shackles and limit the field of his exertions. In the same breath my hom. friend reterred to the members of this Honse who harl, and perhaps still have. highi hopes that a favourable arrangement may be carriel out hy (ireat Britain, wherehy a preferential marke will he atfinded to the colonies of the Empire, and he invitel those gentlemen, in view of the proceedings which have taken phate in the Imperial Parliament, to turn over at new leat and seek for markets clsewhere. sir, we believe that whether with or withent a preferential market the markets of Great Britain are the greatest markets for the promucts of this comory; and the gentemen upon this side of the Honse who either expect or do not expect that preference will be given to the produrts of the colomies in the British market, are at any rate not willing to sulmit to a policy ly which our people shall jeopardize that market and which shall exclade the products of that country from ours. The hom. the ieader of the Oppusition in this commection read an extract from a speech by dieneral Foster in the United States, in which he referred to the position of this country as regards the power to negotiate her own treaties. The hom. gentleman has studiel that speech in cain, if he hats not fomm that Ceneral Foster's impression of the situation amounts to this: that the difticulty in obtaining a treaty with Camada such as the peopleof the United States most desire, is not mercly the techmicaldifticulty of the right to nogotiate our own treaties. which can be, and hasbeen time and again, conceled hy the mother country: but the peculiar position which Canadia ocenpies in negotiating her treaties as part of the British Empire to which she owes duties, to which she owes allegiance, and to which she is attached by ties of interest as well. It does not become me in speaking on an Address in answer to the speech from the Throne, to go into a minute discussion of that question ; but General Foster may, or may not. have correctly stated the difficulties which stam in the way. He may or may not have magnified them; hut the difficulty which he pointed to, is one which stares hon. gentlemen opposite in the face, even if their resolution with regard to the right to negotiate our own treaties should he carried to-morrow and acupuesced in by the Government of the mother country. I am glad to know, sir, that the hon. gentleman appreciates the results likely to flow from the mission of Ministers to Wiashington. I am glad to know that he regards the fact that an intimation came from the United states indicating that such a visit would he acceptable to the Administration of that conntry, as an intimation of friendliness on the part of that country. I an the more glad to know this. hecanse last session while we were accused of the most dire unfriendliness to our neighlunurs to the south, we were at the same time taunted and giled for having sought an interview, and hating opened negotiations with the Government of that country. I quite agree with the hom. genteman that the expression of any intimation from that fovermment fatouring an interview in which the relations of the two comatries whether ats regards trale, the boundaries of our conntries, the joint tisheries of our conntries, or any other question, can be discussed frankly and fully and a complete molerstanling arrived at as to the sentiments and interests of each country, is an athantageons one, and is likely to lead to increased friendliness, a friendliness which no gentleman on this side apreciates less than the leader of the Opposition, who has spoken so highly of its desirability. Sow, Sir, with regard to the question which the hon. gentleman touched upon particularly as one of the results of our misiom, namely, the guestion of wrecking and saivage, the hom. gentleman has made allusion in our policy in the past. He has indicated that in spite of the measure introluced by the hon. member for Frontenac (Mr. Kirkpatrick), and in spite of the support which that measure reeceived from a large boly of the members of this Honse, including nearly the entire Opprsition, the Bill as then intro duced was opposed ly the Government, or, at any rate, had not received the cordial aid or co-operation of the Government. That is trae, Sir. The question upon which the friends and the opponents of that Bill dividel was this : Whether at the tirst suggestion on the part of the Cnitel states, and without grarantees of the sutficiency of the details of the measure, we shoildatecept that proposal and agree to free reciprocity; or, whether it was not desirable that the progress of the measure should be delayed matil there were inserted the additional safeguarls which the Minister of Customs explained to the Honse as being necessary, and which we will discuss ly-and-hye, but, which I venture to say in advance, have been secured by the negotiatious which the acting Minister of Customs personally conducted. The difference between our policy and theirs is that they propose to give away everything at the first glance and to take the risk of its leing sitisfactory, while the position of the fiovernment was that the matter ought to be the sul)ject of further negotiation, with a riew to secure necessary safeguards in the interest of the industry affected. The hon. the leader of the Opposition has called attention, naturally enough, to the fact that while several royal commissions are mentioned in the speech，as having been appointed by His Fxcellency during the cecess，no mention is made of the commission with regard to prohibition．If His Excellency had mentioned everything in his speech the hon．the leader of the Opposition would have had nothing to say to－day，and we shoald not have had the charm of listening to him as we have done for the last half hour．It was not entirely for that reason that the omission was made，as the hon．gentlemin may well understand．It is not the custom of His Fxcellency in adelressing Parlia－ ment from the Throne to annomace executive mea－ sure：which are in course of completion hut which have not yet been entirely completed．I think that lefore the hom．gentleman＇s ariticisms have reathed print in all probability that commission will have heen appointed and will he prepared to enter on its daties．It would have been more satisfactory if we had been able to anomace the appointment of that eommission in the speech I admit，but the acqui－ escente of certain persons whone services it is desi－ rable to ohtain in conmection with that commission， made it necessary that for a few lays the anmonce－ neent of the commission shonld be delayen．Consi－ dering as I have satiol，that the eriticisms which the hon．gentleman applien to the Ahliess were limited， Were eonurteons，and were such as we conld concur in．With the exceptions of the few instances I have mentioned，I will not attempt to detain the Honse longer with a reply．I camot close withont express－ ing in the fullest sense on the part of the members on this side of the Honse，concurrence in the views which he expressed concerning the calamity which hats hefallen the sowereign of this comentry．Fiery person who has a spark of patriotism or humanity in his bensm must agree with those views． 1 am glat that the hon．gentleman has expressed our feeling in such diggint aml elonfuent terms，for we on this side of the Honse can heartily join him． 1 think it will he the cuty of the Honse at an early stage of the session to manifest on its awn behalf some expression of the profomm sorrow ame sompathy which is felt throughout this country． at the death of the Duke of Clarence．and which I am sure is decply felt hy members on both sides of the Honse，with our soremeign Latly the Queename their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales on the onecasion of this bereavement，－a hereavement which is not theirs alone，but which is the lereavement of the entire Empire．

Sir Johs Thompsos.

Mr. FOSTER. I will bring it down.

HEHRING: NFA NEAL FISHERIEN.

Mr. LAURIER. I call attention to the followsing press despatch which has been received and which has just been plateed in my hamls:-
" Washington, 29h February, 1992.-The negotiations between United States and Great Britain looking to the submission to arbitrition of the long-pending cont roversy between the two countries in regard to the Behring Seit Senl Fisheries reached a favourable condition to-day. Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British Minister, met Secretars Blaine by appointment to-day and sipned the treaty of arbitration on behalf of Great Britain. The treaty is still subject, however, to the action of the British P:arliament and the United States Senate."
I suppose that this treaty will also $I_{\text {u }}$ sulmitted to the Canadian liarliament.

Nir JoH. THOMP:ON. I am not in a position t" make iny formal anmoncement on the subject. hut I stippose the press announcement ats to thetreaty having been signed is rery probahly correct. I am not in a position to say that it has to he agreed to he this Parliament. The hen. gentleman will see that, While this affects very serjomsly certain inhalitants of this eonntry, it does not atfect any of the waters which atre really within our jurishliction. At a later perion of the session we will he able to give detinite information on this point, and I am sure that any representation madeby this (iowemment will reocive every attention at the hanls of the Imperial finermment.

Mr. Mllas (Bothwell). Will the Minister lay on the Talle the documents in reference to the Say!erorl case: I lo not see why they should mot he published in this comitry its well its in the: United Sitates.

Sir JOHN THOMP'SON. The ease is mot concladed, but the doemments now in our pressession will he sulmitted.

Mr. Me.ML:LLEN. I shonlal like to know when the report of the Auditor-dicueral will be laid on the Tible:

Mr. FONTVFR. I sympithise with my hom. friem in his anxiety to have that report, hit I fear that it is not quite complete yet.

.UUMEF ACTING ON COMMMSNONS.

Mr. V'AlLLAN(OURT (for Mr. Dratsif:) asked, Have the fiovernment lieen informed that in the Province of Guehec, Julges Bahy, Datvinlson. Jetti, Mathien amd l'agmelo have set aside their judicial duties in order to undertake political inquiries: If so. what course do the fovernment intend to take in the matter:

Sir JoHN THOMPSON. The dovernment are aware that the julges named in the question asked by the hom. member were appointed to be members of a Royal Commission for making inguiries into matters of great public importance. Two of them being julges of the Court of Gueen's Bench of the Province of puehece were replaced for a short time by assistamt judges. 1 understand that all of them were availahle for oluty in case of necessity cluring the performance of these cluties. The (iovernment don mot comsider that it is necessary for them to take any ation in the matter.

PONTM OFFI(EATSTM. RAYMOND.

Mr. VAlLLANCOURT (for Mr. Delishe: asked, Whether it is the intention of the Govermment to buid a post othice in the parish of St. Raymome, in the Comety of Portneuf?
sir JOHN THOMPSON. That is a question that can hatily be answered until the Estimates are hrought down, inasmuch as no appropriation at present exists for that service.

IRNVILEAE--THE LONDON ELECTION.

Mr: MILLS (Bothwell). I desire to put a motion to the House of which I have not given notice. becaluse, although it may not he a matter of urgency, I think that it is a matter of privilege. I beg to move :

That an Order of the House be issued. directing the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to lay on the Table of the Honse the original list of voters received from the revising officer of the City of Lo: lon, also the list as printed and upon which the recent election in that city was held.
I make this motion hecause I understand that a large number of the names on the list that was sent in by the revising ofticer to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, were struck off, and that the list as printed and forwarded by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, show's that a large number of names were struck off, but that it has been printed with those names on. If that be so-and I am informed by a gentleman who has personally inspected the list that it is so--I think it is at matter requiring the serious consideration of the House. Therefore, with the consent of the House, and without further notice, because it is a matter affecting the constitution of the House itself, I leyg to make the motion that I have just real.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I think the hon. gentleman has not only failed to show it to be a case of privilege, but he has not shown that there is any urgency in the matter. If that combl he: shown I llo not think that any one would lee dis. posed to stamel upon a mere question of whether it Was a matter of privilege or uot. Uimer the dircumstantes, I think the hon. gentleman hat hetter put a notice of motionion the Grikers of the lity. I maty saty this is the tirst 1 hatre haral of what the hon. gentleman hats stated.

Mr. LAURIER. I take it that this is a matter of privilege, this is at matter which lirectly affects the mone in which members of this Honse are electerl. If that he sos. Mr. Npeaker, the notion of my hon. friend remuires mo motice. of course. if the hon. gentleman takes this grommel I take issile with him. But if he thinks that. ats a matter of courtesy, notice shomhl he given lefore he is pres. pared til give an inswer. I wornhl suggest to my hom. friend to let his motion stand till the day after to-morrow:

Sir IOHSTHOMP'SON. I mmst mulhere to that gromml. In any citse. I think it would be letter that we shombl have an opportunity of empuiringe into the facts stated for the first time this afternonn. The hom. fentleman might renew his mention on Thursilay without prejudice to cour right to onjeect to it.

M:- MILA.s (buthwedh). 1 maty say, in reply to the Minister of Justire, that lhink this is a matter serionsly atfecting the comstitution of Parliatment. The ( lerk of the (rown in Chameery is an officer of l'arliament, atad he has certain duties to discharge. If the facts atre ats I have stated, and I have no doubt that my information is strictly aceurate, they are of great importance. I atm informed that the list of voters as forwarded for the City of Lomdon, will show a large number of voters struck off which were inchuled upon the list as printed, amb so I ask that the origimal list may ine laid upon the Table of the Honse, and that the printed list upon which the election was held mat also be lain on the Table of the House. This will facilitate business, becanse I murpose to invite the consideration of the Hontse to further matters connected with this election, which are of a very serious chamater and which. it seems to me, affect the liberties of the people. It would facilitate the business of the Bumse very greatly if this motion were granterl. and this list was latid upon the Table at the earliest possille liate. The Minister of Justice is opposed to that, he does not deny that it is a matter of privilese, he simply denics that it is a question of urgence. Surely it is a matter of some urgency, at all events, if ath irregularity has occurred. If the Clerk of the ('rown in Chancery has not properly dischatged his duty, if he hats sent a list to the printers in one form while it was received hy him in another, I think the sooner the Honse titkes cognizance of that fact, the hetter. It seems to me that a matter of that sort is always. not only a matter of privilege, but alsis in some degree a matter of urgency.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. Althongh it may seem a small matter aml one of form only, I think the motion shoull read that the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, who is an officer of the House, shoulh attend at the Table and bring with him these lists. These papers are supposed to lee now in the custody of an otficer of the House; and I think the motion should read that this officar shoull be ordered to attend the next sitting of the House, and bring with him these lists.

Sir JOHN THOMLNON. The case which the hom. gentleman makes for urgency is precisely one that any member of the House might make for any other matter. I simply repuestel him to let the matter stand orer until the next sitting of the Honse, for the reasom, as I stated, that the mater han not heen mentioned at all. It woulh be inconvenient for the transaction of public lousiness. Whenever a member receives information affecting even a matter of privilege. if he were to rise and found a motion upon it, without giving notice to the Honse, amd without any lecelaration on his own part that it involved greater urgency than any other Insiness which this Honse can lie called upon to transact. I think it would be unwise to estab. lish a precelent of that kind: anil, umber all the circumstances. I think the hon. gentleman has not stated any reason why he is likely tole prejudiced liy the delay.

Mr. LAURIER. I mulerstond from the hom. gentleman when he spoke tirst that he ohjected to the motion becaluse no urgency had been shown. But the moment he puts it on the ground that he has not had sutficient notice, then there is monjection to letting the matter stand until Thursilay:

Sir JOHX THOMIPSON. I atm still of that apinion.

Motion withlrawn.

BOUNTIES ON BEET-ROOT SLGAR.

Mr. SUTHERLAND (for Mr. Komak) asked, Whether any sums have heen paiai under the Act of last session hy way of bounty to the prodncers of hect-root sugar in Canada? If so, when, to whom, and to what amount?

Mr. BOWELLL. Sums of money have been paid under the Act of last session by way of bounty to the prollucers of beetroot sugar in Canadi. These sums were paid at different dates between lith October, 1891 , and $\geq 3$ ril Janlatry, $18!9$, , to Mr. Alfred Dhasy, of Firulam, in the Province of Quebre. The total amount paid is $\leqslant 2,939.85$. The following is a detailed statement of bounty on leet-root sugar paid to Alfred Musy, of Farnham. The latter sum of $S \mathrm{~S},(\mathrm{MN})$ is larger than the others, owing to some little clispute that we had with the manufacturers as to the exact amount that should be paid, or what they call the second and third products.

EMPLOYÉS ON GOVERNMENT RAILWAYS.

Mr. LANDERKIN (for Mr. McMcals:) moved for :

- Return giving the names and addresses of all parties employed by the Government, on or in connection with Government railways in the Dominion, stating the nature of the work engaged in, the salary paid per month or year. and the gross amount paid each employe during the year ending the 31st December, A.D. 1891.

Mr. HAGGART. I beg to remind the hon. gen ${ }^{-}$ tleman that this will be a very, very costly return to prepare.

Mr. LAURIER. It is worth the money.
Mr. Haggart.

Mr. HifidiART. It will take some time to get realy. There are 4,473 regular employes upon the fiovernment railways, and probably from tix) to $\bar{i}(\mathrm{M})$ temporary men employed for short periods on mainterance during the summer season, and at snow shovelling. \&. ., during snow storms in the winter. To get this return up it will be necessany to go through all the pay-rolls in onder to arrive at the amount each man is paid ciuring the year.

Mr. LAURIER. The hon. gentleman in whose name this motion stands, is to-day absent from the House, and after the statement made by the Nin. ister of Railways, I would ask that the dehate he adjournel until the hon. gentleman is present. I move the adjourmment of the rehate.

Motion agreed to, and debate adjourned.

BAIE DES CHALEURS RAILIVAY.

Mr. COCKBURN moved :

That a select committee be appointed to take evidence under oath, and repurt upon any claims remaining still unpaid of the workmen, labourers of the workmen, and of those who supplied board to the workmen and labourers; of the furnishers of building material and other privileged parties, in connection with the building of the Baie des Chaleurs Railway, in the l'rovince of Quebec.
Hu said: Mr. speaker, the remarks which I am about to make are not conceived in a spirit of poli. tieal hostility, nor are they manle with a desire of securing any party aldantage. Lackily, the party to which I have the honour to belong is so deeply enthroned in the hearts and affections, and, I may ald, the intelligence of the people, that that party needs no such adventitious aid.
some hon. MEMBERs. Hear, hear.
Mr. COCKBCRS. I am ghad my hom. friemes so fully appreciate the resultis of the late elections, and I have no doult they will he still more confirmed in their opinion when the returns from the few elections yet to take place are brought before this Hunse. But, Sir, the remarks which I have to make are male in justice to the Ontario Bank, whose action in dealing with the labourers and workmen employed on the Baie les Chaleurs Railwity has been grossly misrepresentel : they are mate in the interest of the Dominion Govermment itself, which passed over to the Ontario Bank the subsidy of sid.onnto which I shall afterwardsallume: they are mate in justice to the poor labourers and workmen employed on this railroad : they are made, I may say, in justice to myself, who gave the promise to the late Premier that the Ontario Bank would see such claims paid; and, I may add finally, they are made in what I conceive to be the interest of public morality itself. The Ontario bank, of which I have the honour tobe a director-
some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.
Mr. COCKBURN. Hon. gentlemen again manifest the same spirit. I say I am proul to be a directer of that institution. I know of no instiantion that carries a prouderor more honourable name, and there are no gentlemen perhaps who would more willingly enter that institution than hon. gentlemen opposite. The Ontario Bank had, in the ordinary course of its business, agreed to make certain advances of a monetary character to Mr. Henry Macfarlane, a contractor, to enable him to complete the fifth and sixth sections of teu miles each of the Baie des Chaleurs Railway; and in return for this engagement to advance money on the part of the bank, on 14th June, 1888, the railway company assigned as collateral security to the manager of the Ontario Bank at Montreal the sum of $$ 70,000$, payable by the Government of Quebec on the completion of those two sections, extending from mile 40 to mile 60 ; all of which, I may say, is fully detailed in the report of the Senate last year on the enquiry regarding the Baie des Chaleurs Railway. As soon as this engagement was completed, the Ontario Bank was careful to give due notice of it to the Government at Quebec ; and, accordingly, Mr. Alexandre Gauvreau, notary public, was instructed to notify the Government of the contract entered into, and he did so notify them. Accordingly, there was paid to the manager of the Ontario Bank on account of this subsidy, and in virtue of this transfer, the sum of $$ 41,454$, leaving of the $$ 0,000$ that had been assigned to the bank, a balance of $$ 28,546$ in the hands of the Quebec Government. The Baie des Chaleurs Railway Company enjoyed the subsidies not only from the Local Government at Quebec, but also in the ordinary way from the Dominion Government, a subsidy, I think, of $$ 3,200$ a mile. Accordingly, on the 12 th of October, 1889, $$ 54,000$ of such subsidies were due to the contractor ; and as these subsidies had been made over to the Ontario Bank for advances to enable the contractor to build the road, the bank was informed by the Department of Railways and Canals that, inasmuch as certain wages amounting to some $$ 13,000 \mathrm{had}$ not been paid to the labourers and workmen on that road, they thought it their duty to withhold the payment until such times as they had the assurance that these wages were paid. Well, Sir, I myself interviewed the Minister of Railways and Canals at that time, the late Right Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald, on the subject, and I suggested to him that the Ontario Bank woull be willing to give a guarantee that they would see that the $$ 13,000$ of arrears of wages were paid to the workmen, provided he would allow the $$ 54,000$ of subsidies to be handed over to the bank as representing the contractor. The following is a copy of the letter, which is found at page 138 of the report of the Senate :-
"Otrawa, 12th October, 1889.
"'To the Hon. Minister of Railways and Canals.
"Sir,-The Ontario Bank understand that there are wages due to Macfarlane's men, for work done for the first 60 -mile section of the Baie' des Chaleurs Railway, amounting to $$ 13,000$. There is payable to the railway company $$ 54,000$, part of the Dominion subsidy. The Ontario Bank is entitled to receive this $$ 54,000$ per Mr. Noel, manager of the Quebec Bank, Ottawa, who is attorney for the railway company, to receive this subsidy for the Ontario Bank. If the Government pay over this $$ 54,000$ forthwith to Mr. Noel to be paid to the Ontario Bank, the bank undertakes to see the above wages to the men paid.
"A. SIMPSON,
"Manager."
Meanwhile I have already staterl that there remained in the hands of the Quebec Government the balance of $$ 28,546$, the balance of che subsidy belonging to the Ontario Bank, which again and again insisted upon its being paid over to them. However, remonstrances were in vain, for the large hearts of Mr. Mercier and his coadjutors were being moved by feelings of the deepest compassion for the unfortunate workmen and labourers whom he graphically depicted as men who were in the agonies of famine and without the means of subsistence for themselves or their families, and he says:

Mr. Cockburn.
" I will not yield to the temptation of saying what I think of those who received the money of the province and of the Dominion for the purpose of building this road, and who failed to do so.,
I think, perhaps, the House may, later on, yield to the temptation of telling him and some others of the manner in which they regard their spending the money of the province and of the Dominion. Then, later on, in the exuberance of his grief, he says:
"I wish everyone of the members had time to read the sad tale which is about to be laid before the House. The relation of the saddest things is to be found therein. Poor labourers with nothing but their work to depend upon, had not, in the month of March last, received their wages for the ten months previous, and these wages the only thing they had to live upon and feed their families. This money, which had been furnished by the province on condition that it would be used to pay these legitimate and privileged debts, had found its way in the pockets of speculators.'
And he might have added : Into the pockets of adventurers. Moreover, Mr. Chrysostôme Langelier, Deputy Provincial Registrar, in his sworn evidence, tells us that the Quebec Government, in their zeal to protect these men, acted as follows :-
" The Government said: Instead of paying that $$ 28,545$ for the company, we will keep it and pay the workmen ourselves direct so that we may be sure that they are paid."
I believe that the zeal which was manifested here by the Government of Quebec in keeping this money in order to pay every dollar to the labourers and workmen employed is worthy of all commendation. When asked :
" Q. Do you know what induced the Local Government to pay the workmen out of the local subsidy the first time?" He answers:
"It was because the Government thought, if they paid the money to the company or the contractor, the money might have been misapplied from its proper purpose, as it was before."
No people were better qualified to judge of such dangers of misapplication of money as the gentlemen who recorded these sentiments. They had great experience in that department of politics, and they have had more since. Let us now see how this truly paternal provision was carried out by the Quebec Government. On 3rd October, 1889, Mr. Charles Langelier, member of this riflebrigade, wasappointed commissioner to enquire into the claims of the labourers, workmen, furnishers of materials and board, and others privileged ; and, after spending six weeks among these poor people, and dealing with their case, in heart-broken accents he reported on the 19th November that the amount required to meet such claims "in full"-I want to call the attention of the House to the words " in full" -would be nearly $$ 29,000$. He then inodestly suggested that the amomnt of $$ 28,546$ which remained in the hands of the Government and which belonged to the Ontario Bank, might be safely appropriated to that purpose. Nay, more -he found the destitution amongst these poor people was so great that he made an interim report and urged upon his colleagues the advisability of appointing Mr. J. C. Langelier, civil service employé (and he might have added, his own brother) as a special commissioner to go down to the spot and pay these poor men, and on page 330 of the blue-book, we find that the commissioner recommends:
"That the sum of $\$ 28,546$ be paid to $\mathbf{M r}$. J. C. Langelier, civil service employe, to be by him applied to the payment, in discharge of the Baie des Chaleurs Railway Company or of its representative:-dedurtion first made of the expenses of the said enguiry, the allowance to the commissioner. his truvelling expenses, and atl other legitimate expenses eonnected therewith- of the amount due to the labourers, to the workmen, to those whostipplied board to the workmen and laboarers, to the furnishers of haidine material and to other privileged parties, in full, conformably to the list annexed to Mr. Sangeliers preliminary report: and that the balance which shall remain after settlement of the clams above enumerated be dist ributed between the sub-contractors and other unprivileqe:l claims pro com io their respective claims.

Sir, while this is the story given to the puhlie when I was in !!uelnec last vear, other facts were divalged to me which have since thecome a matter of publie notoniety, but which were then divalged to me on the express emplition that I shombl make monse of any of the information I hatel received, unless it bore difectly on the sesso,$(X X)$ sulnsily, the history of which I was then investigating. But now that I am relieved fomm any pledge of secrecy, though revelations of the last few days, I think it hat due torall parties. ami to the interests of momality, that I should show what. really has been done with this money. It appears from the evidence taken hefore the royal com-
 Week ago, that on the e-th of Sovember, Iss!, at Warrant was issued hy the assistant-treasurer in farour of John (hrysistome Langelier, and a cheplle was drawn then for sos.ittion the bank's money. The Hon. Honori Jercier kept his eyes steanlily on this warrant. He took the warrant from the treasurer as som ats issued, amh, as it was a Wartant in favome of Chrysostome Langelier, he fave his receipt for it. He then tonk Chrysontime Lamgelier is cheque on the lank of Montreall amel got him to endorse it : then he took this cheque to his own hamk, the Bampe du Peuple, cundorsed that cheque:, and ileposited the money to his own private acennint in that bathk. Well, sir, it was with some ditheulty that these fictswereelicited the other lay, inasmuch as the manager of the bink of Queleec, Mr. Dumoulin, was naturally very averse to revealing matters bearing on the private interests of his clients. However, we were able to tind that this money was taken liy Mr. Mercier ami put to his own private account. Mr. Dumonlin gives us his sworn evidence that out of this money the Hon. Honore Mercier proceenled to pay his own private bills. I ann divulging no secret when I say that at that time Mr. Mercier was what we would tednically call very "hard up," since the whole amoint that he had to his aredit in the bank was $8.28.
Mr. LANDERKIN. Is that the exact amount?

Mr. COCKBURN. Yes, aml that is more than some people have. However, that wasall there wasat that time. Well, he then decided to be very liberal with this money that hat come as a wimlfall into his possession. anil he hrew out a cheque for Sinc.( $M$ ) in pagment of early vegetahles and choice fruits which had heen sent to him ly Mr. Ronmilhace green grocer in gachece. This was the next day after he had oleposited the cherge, and the very same day the inevitable Ernest Pacand appeared on the some and clamed Slons. He left in a manner, by these pore men down by the sea. Then. like an homest man. Mr. Nercier proceeded to do what a good many people are not realy to do. that is. to paty his rent, which was orerdue, and he gave his cheque for $5 \overline{0}$ for one months rent. However. Mr. Dercier seems to have been a man who needed a little reilecissis ofe:ut: he had been browding for a long time wer the troubles and hard fate of these men, and prohably with tears in his eyes he told his frients how careful he had been not to let the bank handle the money, or the company to hamblle the moner. in case anything shoula be improperly spent. He was worn out by his emotions. and he felt the necessity of taking a little trip to New York. No he paid Mr. R. NI. Stockinge ont of this monev. Si-3. 41) for a tirst-class passarge to New lonk, as became the lremier of the Provinete of plueber: It must le satid for him, however, that he wats not a math who wats geving to forget antirely his sal friends down ly the sad sea wates: su he hamien chrysostime Lamgelier a cheque for siz.ans ant of the senc.int. They probathy thought they might manage to pay
 These men haw in astomming leslief in their finamcial power, hecamse we know that Premier Mercier. with a monlerate income managed to live like a prince, and there wats no reason why Pacand might not be alble hy some womberfal stroke of tinanciering
 At all events, that wis all Mr. Mervier gave him. He has mosomer hambeal his cheque amol tohd that gentleman to go ilwin and relieve the sufferings of the heart-broken people than Mr. Pacaturd again came in and chamed his little share, and he received month. Sow we come to the enth. I find the account of Jean Bithean, wi:ho hat heen loing some little repairs to some of the palaces belonging to Mr. Mercier. He was awaded Eloo as part payment of his aceomet: while Mr. Chas. Langelier. who had so skilfully siggrested the little armarement of having a cominisisoner in the shape of his brother to pay these accounts, received sin(m). The goth day of the month is a little dark, inasmuch as the cheques are carefully made payable to bearer: one is given for $\mathrm{El},(\mathrm{ONO}$, another for sin), another for $\$ 26$ and then, as Mr. Mercier was probably in New York, he found it necessitry to have a little more money, and so he drew a couple of thousand for himself. As there is nothing mean about him, he handed to his brother on 5th December a cheque for simo out of this money, and then he generously pays an account that has been deferred for some little time of 3736 . He meets an obligation in the bauk of $\$ 1,(001)$ : then he gives to Mr. Perry for furniture 322, and there is a bill for the Garrison Clul) of Quebec of $\mathbf{3} 269.25$. How much of that sum was spent in champagne of the finest bramlamd in cigars of the best quality to sustain the feelings of his friends, is not for me to say--I was not there: hut I am not surprised that it repuired an expenditure of $\mathbf{2 2 6 9}$. 2 Z to solace Mr . Mercier and his friemls in their atilicted condition. We know that sometimes, even among the leest of men, a little drop of ${ }^{\prime}$ cratur" or a glass of sparkling champagne has a peouliarly exhilarating effect and makes one forget in the meantime the troubles surromeling them. The day afterwards Mr. Mercier paid a bill to Mr. Pacead- Mr. Mercier han got ahead of himat this time-- hut Mr. Pacaud got-登ink out of him that day, and on the sume day E . Morency \&reres, picture frame makers, were paid Sin. 0 of for faming a print of perhaps pretty little Irs. Su-imd-so--we will not give the name -hut at all events that sum was paid for the picture frame. The Merchamts bank recejved $\leqslant 190) .+1)$, ant Dr. Mencier sent to New Vork a draft for Sing tocover up his little expenses, in aldition to siz. (й) drawn previously. Then comesa sum of money. El, 20 (h), for payment of a pair of horses. pe:haps, of which I Will not speak just mow. Mr. I. (. Lamgelier. the commissioner. received a pathey $\leq 2(1)$ : hat he Was a great tinancier, and it is for ins to cletermine what little percentage he might have made on the Slo, an , when gratizule tired these powr starving men to aceept partial proment infoll disehatre of all their clatms. It must be satid for Mr. Nercier that there are some gomi points ahmat him, for 1 timd arain comes up next day amd clatims sion more. Then another one of the family or perhaps the satme member of the illustrious rithe brigiale reacived Sils. the whole accomut leing womid up with the payment of s-at.80, athl slomen, leaving Mr. Mercier with a balance still somewhat in excess of the su. 2 E with which he started when he first seized money belonging to the Ontario bank amil conchaded to devote it to these persomal parposes. 1 think, in view of these circumstances, in view of what I have stated, in view of the fitce that this House is intimately commeeted with this malway, that it released moneys on the: umberstamine that these people were to le paid out of them, thitt Mr. Langelier gave the Bank of Ontario receipns and assuramees that all these claims had been paid, that Sit. (MK) was paid to the ( Dntario liank by the Dominion liovermment, it is our duty to empuire and asertain if in very truth these workmen have received the wages which they are said to have received. I cam only conclude by saying that at more miserable series of petty litrenies, a more wretched prostitution of office, a more lisgraceful betrayal of a sacred trust, a more infamous rohbery perpetrated under the guise of heartfelt sympathy for the poor and oppressed oues, has never yet been recorded in: the annals of any civilized country, and it becomes hon. members of this House to see that signal punishment is metel out to those who have brought such foul disgrace upon our heloved country, ind that these poor labourersand poor workmen who have been so infimously defratuded of their hard-earned wages should not lee left to the temder mercies of hypocritical political adrenturers.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I miderstand from the explanation which the hon. gentleman has given in support of this motion, that the question, as he brings it before the Honse, has two aspects. One is in relation to the Ontario Bank: and the
lom. genteman has explained to the House that it is patitly in cindication of the position and repmation of his bank that he desires this motion to carre. I think, so far as that is comerned, the fatio he has stateel to the Homse, and which I unNerstam appar on the pablic recorts, are sutticient for his purpose, and that it will lee preferable to wait matil the action of the hamk with respect to it. suatantee to the forcrmment is in some way impugned before the motion should lee pressed on that gromat. But it hats a second aspect. upon which the hon. gentleman addressed the House withyreat earnesthess amb fervour, that with resipert to the clams of the workmen themselves, who. 1 muleratand from his remarks, as well as from the litule I know of the case otherwise, hatd some right under the terms of the contract with this coscrument to claim the protection of the laserment in respeet to their wages and supplies. Porhaps it is stating the case somewhat tom strongly to say that they had a right to clatim the protection oi the davermment, but, at any rate, the dowcrmant in such contracts reserves to itself the right at any time, to step in and make payments in the mapaid emploges with a riew to prevent disturhances on the work. Possiby. in conserpuence of sinme vien of that kimi. it wats that the late First Binister mate an artangement with the Ontario, B:mk beysh a portion of the subsidy which hat been cairned hy the company was withheld mat the guaramte of the Ontario Bank was given that the wages would be paid in due course. bat. with regard to that aspect of the cotse. whe ther we consider the position of the mpaid emphosis -if there are any still-..or whether we ressarif the alleged misapplication of the fund. 1 hive to remind the House that the whole matter is lne: The Procincial diavernment, as every memlece of the Honse is fully a ware, has apponited two man commissions, and 1 miderstand that this subinot forms a matter of empuiry for hoth of them. At any rate, it forms it matter of conquiry hy me of these royal commissions. and I believe that the other has taken some evitence on the suloject, and that really it is from the proceedinge of that secomd conmission that the facts have tramspired which the hom. gem thenam referred to this afternom. It wonld. therefore serve nopractical purpose whaterer for the Honse tu enter on this empuiry by a committee now. We may fairly assume thit the anthorities which have lieen constituted hy the Province of guehee will make a full and searthing empuire into such features of the case as appear to call for it, and that in che conurse of time that matter will be properly dealt with. After it has tramipired what the result of the commission has leeen, and how this whole subject has been dealt with, would certainly he a more suitable time, if the House thinks it desirable at all, to alppoint 22 committee to make eluruiry into the sulbject. I think for both reasons: hecanse of the complaint which the hon. gentleman makes with regard to the statements male against the bamk, ami on the ground that the rights of the persons who are alleged to have been umpaid are being enguired into and heing dealt with now by the Provincial authority-I think it would be inexpedient for the House to yield to the motion and to appoint a committee at the present time. At a future time there may presilly le a case for it.

Mr. COCKBLRN. I ley to withtraif the motion.

Mr. LACREIER. I am not at all surprised at the amome mian for Toromto ( (entre (Mr. ( Dochburn). I thought from the first that this motion was simply intended to give the hom. gentleman an opportenity to make the st ump, speech which he hat just ielivered: hat perhaps it would have heen more in aceordance with the effeet he wanted to prombee, if he had gone to Cuchere where there is an election just now pembing and welivered that aldress. The hom. gentemam is agoul French scholar. 1 know, amd whether in Freneh on English he could have explaned to the electors what he has just state.l. hout there is mething new in his remarks, for all these facts have heren ling before the public.
Motion withdrawn.

As to the desinahility of referring these warmats to the Public Accomes Committee. 1 shombly think that probahly the Dinister of Finamo himsidf and the Government will see mu objection. These are extraordinary payments made in extramelinary circumstances detined in the Act, and having heen actually manle and the monev gone out of the pullic treasury it is ohviomsly desirahle and consenient that the should be examined into. if necessary, hefore the ${ }^{\text {commitheon Poblic Accounts. }}$ Frequently when discussions have arisen alout them in supply we have heem whil that it is mo nee discousing them hecause the moner has actually gone or that in amy cate it is not convenient, is it might lead to prolonged and umecessary discussions on the floon, of a chanacter which 1 think would be nuch luyter comblucted in the Public Accomuts Committee. 1, therefore makethismotion, aml I trust there will he an objection to it.
Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, this motion, although a little umusual. may, I think, he very well permitted to pass. 1 , at least, have po objeetion to make to it. This is an appropriation of some kiad, part of which has been expenden, and in that way, it is hefore the Honse, having been brought down aml hail on the 'Talle. I am sorry, however, that my hom. frieul has shown his accustomed lack of generosity towarils us, ami has not allowed for any gool intentions on our part.

Sir RICHARI CARTWRIGHT. I ampraising you for what you have done.

Mr. Fonter. The hum sentleman has attrilinted all to the valuable adrice that he gave us from that side: of the Honse last vear, hat 1 must remind my hom. frient, that the interim hetween the sessions hat been a revy short me, and that presilly hatl it heen lomere and the exigencies of Wiartans might hare heen larger in amome.
Mr. MLDock. I think it wouldowinstractive if we atsu referred th the same committee, copies of the repress om which these warrants were is sued. I am not able at the presemt moment to eriticise these expenditures, hut I woulh call the attemtion of the Homse to the fate that the tirst item for an wats in eesperet of expembliture that wats, I presimes. well known th the dovernment when pirliamemt Was in sessiom. It is matilen "('P.R., Capital. Expenses Spectal Arbitators between dovermment and C.P.R. respectine work in British Columbia." Sow, it would be well for the rovernment to milerstand the trie spirit of the Aet. I cammen see that such inn item an this cam he regarlend maness special circmustances may dischnse it as an mioneseen expenditure and it is the daty of the bovern. ment, if I may ase a the very elegrant expression. to clean uip all such atcomuts with the permission of Parliamemt. and tur to wait until Parliament raint. That appeas to have heen what oecured in this cass. The doverment well knew that these $\cdot$ apenses were pending and had to be: met. :umb, therefore the Homse ought to hase heen askeal to have whed mon that iten when in session. It is perhaps prosibile that the report made lig the Ministers the diovernor in Comeil may faitly exphain the caluse. The Dinister of Finamee will remember that last session he promised to be a very much hetter Minister in future, and that in the reports that were presented to the dovernor(ieneral asking him to assume the exercise of this prerogative. lie would take care to see that the reasmens which moved any Minister of the Crown for this special exercise of anthonity would appear on the face of the report presented to His Excellency. It may the that these reports io, contain all the material which would have allhorized His Exedleney to have issued these warmats, and, therefore. 1 ahstain from criticising them adversely or speaking of them fatourahly, until the reasoms for this expentiture are given. I was not aware of this notice heing on the Paper. and I was engaged in drafting anAdress to the Honse for the pronluction of the reports and Oralers in Conncil on which these were issued. But perhaps the hom. mover of the motion, with the consent of the Honse, would allow an amendment as follows: to insert in the motion after the word "warrants" the following worls: "together with copies of all reports and Orders in Conncil."

Sir IOHN THOMPSON. They are not on the Table yet.

Mr. MULOCK. No, they are not on the Table, and if the point is mised I shall have to make a substantive motion to meet the case.

Mr. FOSTER. Better get the papers first.
Mr. Fonter.

Mr. WLLOCK. Well, I will not make the motion. hut I think the reports ought to cover the undertaking of the Winister last year, or it will he necessary to amem the Andit Act in this respect.

THE LoNION ELECTION.

Mr. MIIA心 (Buthwell) moved:

That the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery do attemal this Honse wifh the original list of vorers received trom the revising wficer of the City of Lumbon, also wif list as printed and tum winch the recent election for that city was held.
He sainl: I may say. Mr. Speaker, that when I hronght this motion to the attention of the Honse two or three days age. I did so as it matter of privilege, amd it secomeal to me to la a matter of importance. There was some loubt expressea as to whe ther it really wis: atmater of privilege or mot. With it view of deciding that guestion. althongh it is not of practical importance at this monent. I womht call the attention of the Honse the the ascussion reference to an ehetion for the (ommty of Vietoria in the l'rovince of Ontario. At that time the law prosided that certain officers shombl be returning atficers. and it was not motil those panties refused unsere or were otherwist prencoupied so that it was impossible they conh serve as returningotficers. that the dinvermment had power to ge outside of those offi : iats amb apmint others. On that mecasion the (iovernment di.l appoint another piaty, amil the guestion ats to why they made such in appointment instead of taking one of the officials designated in the statute, was mande a matter of privilege aml bonaght hefore the Homse for diselnssiom : and it was held that the House. in regarel to the election of its members, had not, hy the refereme of the trial of eontronerted elections to the julfes, in any way inpaited its onjogal authority t" exercise supervision ower the procoedings of the varions officials who were called upon tuact in all election. That was attirmend on hoth sides of the Homse ly the leader of the fiovernment, by the gentenam whomale the motion, and by Nir fohn Mactonah who at that time led the Opposition. Now, it is of the highest importance. it the Honse of Commons is to retain its position as a representative horly, that it shoulal be fairly constituterl, and that those whore returned here shombl represent the electors-should represent those whom the law has entrusted or intends to entrust with the exercise of the clective franahise. I mentioned the matter to the House ats it was stated to me lig a gentleman who had inspected the original list of voters and also the list as printed. I stated that the list as it came from the revising otticer to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery contained a mumber of names which were strack off, through which a pen had been drawn. In the list as it was printed and used in the election, these names were included among the list of voters; and I thought it was importent that the Honse, in the discharge of its duties, and in the exercise of that watchfulness and care which it is necessary it should always manifest for the preservation of the rights of the people and the purizy of the House of Commons, should order the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery to come here and lay on the Table of the House the original list as it was received by him from the revising ofticer, amd also the list as it was printed. Difficulties have arisen to which I shall to-morrow ask the attention of the Honse, with the consent of the House and the lealer of the (invernment. All I propose to do to-day is tocall theat ention of the Honse to the minneer in which. I think the list ought to be male up, ats provided hy the Electoral Franchise Aet. The clanses of that Act which specially refer to the question of the preparation of the lists, ame to the ase which may he male of them when an election is being heli luefore all the appeals are finally $3: 3$ and 3.0 of the Act : and 1 will read those provisions to which I wish to direct the attention of the Honse, so that the Honse maty see how far, if at all, they have been departed from in the preparation of the list, and in the list as printed. By section 2 it is provilel :
"After the lists for the several polling districts in an electoral district have been so finally revised, they shath be certified in the form $E$ in the schedule to this Aet tos the revising officer, and they shatl be kept by him for the purposes of this Aet, and a duplicate of each such list. certitied as aforesain, shall be transmitted forthwith by him to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery at Otawa, who. on rececipt of all the said lists for any electoral disrrict, shall, in the then next issue of the "orncoll" fioserte. insert a notice in the form Fin the sehedule of this Aer, on and after the pablication of which nutice the persen: whose names are entered on the said lists ats voters shall subject to any correction or amendment made by any judgment on appeal, as hereinatior provided for, be helid to be duly reristered coters in and for such electoral district: Provided, however, that in the event of any such appeal, such list:, after the publication of the lat mentioned notice in the ('annely riesetto shall apply to every electinn for such electoral dist riet or portion of any electural distriet, taking place betore sueh appeal hais been disposed of and the result thereot commanicated to the revising officer, subject to the provisions of the Drminion Elections Aet with respect to the counting of the ballot of any voter whose right to have his mame registered as a voter upon any such list and to rote, or the exclusion of whose name from any, such list as a voter is the subject of an undecided appeal."
By section or it is provided :
"After the lists of voters have been so finally revisel. or amended. and corrected on apmeal, if any such appeai takes place, and after they have been certitied and brought in to foree as hereinhefore preseribed and until other liests are, in a future year. as herein provided, revised amended and corrected on appeal, if any such appeal takes place, and are certificed and brought into foree in their stead those persons only whose namesare entered upon such lists as so revised, amended and corrected on appeal as aforesaid. if myy, shall be entitled to vote."
Then by section 2 ( 6 it is proviled that :
"The revising officer shall have power at any court or sitting held under this Act by him, to amend orgive leary: to amend, when he sees fit, amy proceedings taken in reference to any list of voters.:
The law proceets on the assimption that it is of conseruence in order topreserve the rights of electors to give full latitule for the removal of names that shoulal not be on the list, and to secure on the list the names of persons who have the necessary qualication and are entitled to le there. It is assumed that the persoms who are so entitled will not in every case be learned in the law, and that the strict proceedings of law andevidence shall not be enforced against them, and, if any blunder takes place, it is clear from this section that the revising officer shall have power to anljourn his court, to make the necessary amemlment, or to give leave to make the necessary change or alteration in order to bring the party within the provision of the law if he is entitled so to lee brought. Then section 30 of the Act provides as to the lists certified while an appeal is pencling. and it is just at this point, ats it seems to me, that these lists ilo nut comform exater. ly to the latw. There are varions classes of persons in regarel to whom appeals may be pending, who mity lie differently circunstancerl, and I think it is from the provisions of this section perfectly clear that these different chasses of persons are to lie kept distinct. It is also, with regard to this section, evilent that some of itsprovisions areobsemereand it is only hy lowking hack to the Aets which were: in force before the comsolidation trow place that we call see with cleathess perisely what is meant by sombe of the phatses employed in this sectron. It is satill here:

- If: at any time when the revising oftiver is required to fumish or cerify ans list of voters th any uflicer or persom, there is, with respeet fonch list, any appeal pemeling and milecided. or it there is any apmeal with respect to such list in which the deeisen. if rriven. hats not been notified of the revising otticer, the revising atticer shatl furnish such list as then last revised. corrected and certified be him, moring therem the names of all lersuns who have been retained on the list of voters.
I wish to say here lefore realing further, that it will be seen form the pmosions af this section, that the lists as they are sent the therk of the Crown in Chancery are not supponsed to contatinthe names of any parties ahom whom ally dispute has atisen. or atome whom any appeal is penting. he. caluse the provision of this section is that, in catse ath election is about th he held on this list. before there quesians are hispersed of. then the revising onticeer shall aprend these manes, shall mote them on the list, a statement which makes it perfectly clear to my miml, that prim to rhis retum. except ats whe thent elass. these natmes anm not there, and that the list sent th the (leek of the Crown in ( hathery contaths the names of mone of the others, of those persons whose clatims are in appeal. hat only the names of those about whose right to vote there is uo dispute at all. The !norision genes on to sicty :
"Noting thereon the numes of all persoms who have been retained on the list witwers, nowithetanding objection."
There is the first class, the names of all those who hate been retained notwithstanding the proposition to strike them oft-- "The names of all persoms who have heen otruck off he list of voters.," That is the second class-
- And the names of all persons who have applied to be placed on the list of voters, and whose ablications have been retiused.
That is the third class. Now, ats the next panatgraph of this section reals, one wonh suppose that it constituted a fourth class:
"And noting also thereon the names of all persons who have appealed from his decision.
That is ohseure as it stands. but, when we look at the tith $^{\text {thection of the } \text { Act, which has been em- }}$ hrated in this comsolidated Act, the words are perfectly clear. They are these :
- And whose applications have heen refused; and who have respectively appealed from his decisions."
That is. he does not note the name of every person who hats been strack off, or of every person who has applied to gro on and whom he has refused to put on, but so many of those iss are appealed are noted-not all, but those who have appealed to the county judge, from the ilecision of the revising barrister, are noted. This is male clear by the 47th section applying to the precelinge classes and not referring to a distinct class. In fact, to at tempt to give any other interpretation to the statute would be to make it nonsense, and the sth section of the Act. which brings this Act into operation, proviles that :
"The said revised tatutes shall not be held to omerate as new lars but shatl be construed and have effect as a consolidation, and as declaratory of the law as contained in the suid Acts and parts of Acts sor repealed.:

And so on. Showing that it was not the intention of larliament. at all events, to make the law different from what it was hefore, but simply to consolidate all the varions provisions of the law as it stowel at that time : amb so. when we look at the tith section. we see precisely what the meaning of those worts is. Where the list has heen corrected hy the decision of the revising officer, he mist notify the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, who corrects the lists aceordingly. I do not propmese at this moment to enter into a discussion of what has heen lome under this provision of the law : I do not propose to say how far the ratriation of the list as presentel deviates from the form in which the statute intended it shoule lie. or how far that hass affected the proceedings in the election which has taken place. All I wish to don on this motion is to call the attention of the House to the fact that the hists hatee in my julgment, not been printed in the way that the law repuires, and it is must desirable that in matters of this som there should be uniformity of provedure, that the lists as they are preparei in one comstituency should he soppepared in every other constituence: that the law as it is comstrued and applied to, the calse of the vorers list in one constitueney should he so construed and so applied to the lists in every other constituency of the Dominion. It is, I think, of the first conserpuence. lecallse. if a departure from the clear intention of this statute is permite al, and if what has heen done hy the revising officer, or by the Gerk of the Crown in Chancery, as the carse mays be, has given the the clectors a list in a different form from that in which the statute intended, it may have seriously affected the future proceedings that have taken place or which may hereafter take place upon that list. I wish to hring uncer the attention of the House specially at this moment, the fact that it was mot the intention of Parliament, as I miderstamd the privisions of this law, to put upon the voters lists the name of any party that the revising officer has decided to strike off, except as noted for the purpose of the eiection until it was plated there lyy the decision of the comuty juilge. If there is to be an election before that decision takes place, then it must lee notell there by the revising officer with special reference to that election; it must clearly appear that it is the name of a party whose right to go upon the list is yet unleciided. It seems to me, and upon that matter I shall ask the attention of the House to-morros, that these parties whose right to go upon the list is still pending, are parties who are not to he counted in a general summation until the guestion of their right is finally disposed of by the otticer who has power to deal with the subject. However, as I say, I shall not discuss that matter to-day, hut I give notice that I shall do so to-morrow upon a motion asserting the authority of the House to exercise its undoubted right, and to discharge its Mr. Mills (Bothwell).
unloulted duty, hy exercising supervision in this matter.

Sir IOHN THOMPSON. The hon. gentleman refers to the diseussion which took place the other day on the guestion of privilege, and has not yuite accurately statel. I think, the gromm which I took. The hon. gentleman says that my argument was that this was not it matter of privilege, and therefore could not be dealt with at that time: and he cited authorities to show that in 1si.. some motion of the kind was considered it matter of privilege. As I understand our rule and practice a question of privilege may arise with regard to any part of the lusiness of the Homse. or to any part of the proceedings emmected with the election of a member to the House. What I did urge was that the hom. gentleman had nor shown it to lee a case of privilege. It does mot follow hecaluse the guestion relates to the way a revising officer or a returning officer has dischargel his functions, that therefore it is a matter of privilege : nor. on the other ham, daes it follow that lecatuse it is cuite remote from any husiness of that kind, it is not a matter of privilege. But my argunent was that the hom. genteman was hound to state something to the fonse to show that it was a matter of privilege, aml, alowe all, that lefore we shonld distuss the question without any notice he was houml to state to the House why it was urgent: hecanse.as 1 uniderstand it, not all matters of privilegeare to he taken up without any notice whatever. I think, therefore, we will arree pon that print, and the hom. gentleman having come teonsh given me what I thought I was entitled to, as a matter of right, that is. the pristponement of the motion until to-day. I think it is only right that I slowuld state tio the House fully what information I have on the sulject, more especially as the hom. gentlenan wishes to make it a subject of future discussion. and also, hecause some of the facts which I will state to the Honse will not appear from the documents which he requires the Clerk of the (rown in Chancery to lay upon the Table. In the first place, I umlerstorol the hom. gentleman, when he raised this disenssion the "ther day, to refer not at all to the appealed rotes, about which so much has heen sitid in the press and alont which we have got information within the last few days that very few of us hiald lofore, and which certainly I had not, as to the political complexion and the position in other respectsof these appealed votes. I supposed the hom. gentlenam to refer to rotes struck off in the ordinary way, and hy some malpractice or error, printel upon the list which was tinally used for the purposes of polling. Now, under the circumstances, I felt a gooll deal surprised at the statement he made. I was confilent it was inaccurate, and I said it was the first time I heard that assertioni made. I jualge. however, from the remarks of the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) this afternoon. that he had reference principally to those appealed votes, and therefore the statement that I will nake will pat the House in full possession of what was done with regard to that matter. I may say that the hon. gentleman and his friends, when they come to see the documents which will lee placell upon the Table in accordance with his motion, and the other documents learing upon it, will have every reason to admit that whatever was done, whether by mistike or ,etherwise, was done with perfect goonl faith and with a desire simply to carry out the law. Now, the facts are these: That when the revising ofticer sent his lists to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery those lists contained a number of names which the revising ofticer had adjudieated upon, which he had decided should he struck off the list, and in relation to which there was mo appeal. These were all erased in black ink : and no comment whatered was malle. The cotes ahome which there was an appeal and in relation to which the appeal was pending and undetermined, he drew a line through with red ink, and marked opposite the mame "appeal pending," or something of that kind. Now, what follows with regarel to the printing of the lists is this : The Clerk of the Crown sembs the list to the Queen's Printer to le printed in the public printing establishment. When the lists are so printed from the original lists which he semls in, the proof sheets are sent to the revising officer for correction, and coming back corrected hy him, the lists are tinally strack off aceording to any corrections he may have made upon the pronts. The repints are then sent to him, copies are given to the (lerk of the Crown, and to anylondy else who reyuires them, and these lists, as so finally completed and printed. are furnished hy the revising ofticer to the retuming ofticer when the election comes on. Dow ats I said when I diverten to state what the practice was as regards the printing of the lists, the revising ofticer sent the (lerk of the (rown in Chancery the lists with the names upon Which he handaljuilicateel finally. struck off in hatack ink. the others which were the suliject of an appeal. he drew a pen throngh with reel ink, and marked them "subject to a pending appeal," or something to that effiect. The (lerk of the crown received thase lists in that way and sent them to the Printing Bureau for printing: but the printers omitted every name. whethereraseel in hatek ink or marked throngh with red ink, as being subject to appeal. and the proof was sent to the revising officer with all these manes omitted. The revising ofticer wrote to the Queen's Printer, calling attention to the fact that the omission of the names subjeet to pending appeal was not in accordance with the Franchise Act. His view of section 30 was that these cotes, sulject to penting appeal, should appear on these lists. for the reason, in his julgment, and certainly in mine, that they were entitled to appear on the election lists mutil the appeal hat come on and a decision given ly the county julge disallowing the right of the parties to vote. Under these ciremastances, he considered that the list was not correctly printed. and he desired that the Queen's Printer should ob. tain an opinion from my departuent nown the question whether the lists had been properly printed or not. He called attention to section 30 of the Fianchise Act, and said:

[^3]Mr. MULOCK. What is the rate of the letter? Nir JoHN THOMPSON. Ist February is the date on which he returnerl the proof.

Mr. MULOCK. Is that the date of the letter?

sir John THOMPSON. That is the date of the letter from the revising ofticer to the Queen's Printer. The Queen's Printer wrote a letter to the Premier, enclosing that of the revising officer, and requesting the opinion of the First Minister, who was then Acting Necretary of State. The Premier transferred the communication to my department; and my deputy gave the Queen's lrinter in opinion, that, inasmuch as the Franchise Act and the Election Act entitled these parties to vote, they should appear upon the list mutil a decision of the county julde as to their right to vote was remered, but they shouhl le marked and designated in some way to indicate that they are not ordinary soters but simply persons who remain on the list, sulject to an undecided appeal as to their right to vote. Under these circumstances, and withoutany supervision on the part of my department or any other, these names, which had been marked by the revising officer as subject to pending appeals, were inserted in the electoral list marked " $A$, " and a foot mote gave the explanation that all voters so marked "A" were suljeet to pemding appeal. That list so printed was sent to the revisingofficer. who of coursehat to decide whether it was in aceordance with what he deemed to be a correctly printed list. The revising officer certified that to he a correct list, and handed it to the returning ofticer when the polling came on. I regret that when the hom. memher (Nr. Mills) raised the question the other diay. I had no inlea he sought to mise a dischssion on these appeated votes. I said the hom. gentleman semarks took me ly surprise, athe I hat never heari of the matter lefore. I wouli, howerer. have prohably made the same stitement exen if I had known what he referred tw. hecatuse I did not remember, if indeed I was ever aware of the fact, that an opinion had heen asked from my department, I do not disown my responsibility for it---but this circumstance explains what. 1 stated the other day in respect to having been taken hy surprise. I should like to call the attention of the Honse for a moment to the sections of the Act hearing on the question. hecause my opinion is yuite at ratiance with the hon. gentlemans view of the requirements of the law on that subject. The tirst section of the Act hearing on it is No. 21 . It provides that in the event of any appeal-that is, an appeal as to the right to vote-

[^4]Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). How can the hom. Min ister recomeile that argumem with the first part of section 30:

Nir JOHX THOMl':ON. I will go through the varions sections. section 30 . irrespective of comparison with this section, dearly requires the same thing. Hon. erentemen will ofnerve with respect to what I have satid as th this section that it is to le subject to the provisions of the Dmanion Ele :tions Aet as to the comiting of the ballots, and it provides that the exdusion of any voter's name on such list shatl he subject to appeal. Section 30) seems to the, and I saty it with all respect to the argmment which the hon. genteman has presented to the contrany, tomake it clear that the name mast appear on the list until the ippeatherdeciden. This section, ats well as the provision of the Dominion Elections Act. plates it herond lispate that if a certain indivintual has the riglit to vote, his wote must be connten. subject, of ecourse, to final determination hig the eonstituted anthority as to the mane being properly on the list. Section 30 proviles that lists are to lie certiticel while an appeal is pronding-
"If at any time when the revising officer is required to furnish or certify any list of coters to any offeer or person, there is, with respect to such list, any appeal pending and unteched, or if there is any appeal with respect to snch list in which the decision is given, hats not been notitied to the revising officer, the revising officer shall furnish such list as when last revised, correctend and eerffied hy him, noting thereon the names of all persions who have heen rutatinel on the list of voters, notwithstanding objections, the rames of all persons who have been struck off the list of voters, and the names of all persons who have apmied to be phaced on the list of voters amd whose applications have been refused and unting thereon the names of all persons who have appealed from his decision.'
I agree with the hom. gentleman as to the interpretation of these works: ' all persons who have appealeal from his recision :"* hat it is clear that the list which is furnished the revising otticer must, in order to eomply with section 30 . as the revising ofticer himself called to nur attention, contain these names, hecanse the Act satys he shallnote thereon the names of all persons who have appealed form his decision; and suchlist, with the persons names who have appealeal from his lecision appearing thereon shall serve and arail atecording to the provision of the Act, for the election with reference to which it is furnished: but whenever any appeal is olecided. so ats to reyuire the correction of the list, and the formaloriteror judgment has heen served uponhim. he shall forthwith correct the list accordingly. If the hom. gentleman's argument is that those names should not appear on the list, this language of the Act would he alosurd, hecause when the judgment shall be given, as if Juige Filliot, the county Court judge, cleclare that these persons have a right to appear on the list, there would not he any correction of the list, hecause the names would not be there. The Act says :
"And shall forthwith notify the Clerk of the Crown in Chincery of such formal order or judgment, that he may correct the duplicate list in his hands accordingly."
I repeat he would have no gromed of correcting it at all, if the names did not appear there. -

[^5]" Provided, that if the decision in appeal. requirint the correction of any list of voters, is notifed to the revising officer by servies of the firmal oriler or julgment, or otherwise hefore the day of polling, a duly certitied ecpes of the corrected list of vaters, tugether with a copy of the formal order or judgment on appeals as received by him duly certified by such revising officer. shall be furnished before the satid day by the revising officer to the returning oficer fur the molling district. the list of voters fur which has been eorrected now the said appeal which enp shall contain the correction in question, ee rtified ats herembefure provided, in which cise the election shall take phace upon such corrected list if received in time hy such deputy returning stilecr.
Now the hom. sentlenans view is that, under that. the eonrse of procelure where the revising oftieer thinks that mames waght to he struck off, is to leare them off, lat that if the parties have appal. ed, their namoss shall in some way appear on some supplementary list which the revising officer shall furnish tu the returning otticer on leputy returning officer. I would call the attention of the hom. gentleman to the fact that there is mo prower or provision for making any supplementary list. He mast give the list that he has prepared of the voters, and that is subject to correction if the atathority in appeal should lecide that the manes ought to lue renureel from the list. Let me ciall the attention of the House to what I think is con clusive upon the point in the prosisions of the Election Act with regard t., such appeal votes. Nection 70 says:
"In the event of any persminesiring to vote at any chection whose name is registered on the list of voters for any polling district in the electoral district for which surh election takes phace and whose right to have his name registered on such list as a voler and to vote. appeare by the list of voters to be the subject of an undecided appeal under the provisions of The Electoral Franchise Act. or of the Act passed in the session held in the forty-eighth and forty-ninth years of Her Majesty's reign, and intituled: "An act respecting the Electoral Franehise'? the deputy returning officer shall number the ballot of such at person, and shall place opposite to his name in the poll fook, a number corresponding to the number so bated upon such ballot paper:"
Now, what was eventually done, wats to make it appear in these lists that these voters whose names are on the list, were all suliject to an undecinded appeal. The hom. rentlemanis view, which 1 dissent from, is that these names ought not to appear there at all. How, then, are we to understamd the provisions of the Flectoral Act, which says:
"Whose right to have his name registered * * appears by the list of voters to be the subject of an undeappears by anhe.

Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). Then there is no natme to le struck off by the revising officer:
Sir JOHN THOMPNON. Yes: all those which are not the subject of an undecided appeal. If the appeal is taken these names are to appear there.

Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). There are seven days allowed for an appeal : What is the position of the name daring these seven days:
sir JOHN THOMPSON. During the seven days the revising ofticer does not certify the lists to the flerk of the Grown in Chancery, not until he knous whether an appeal is taken from his decision.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). The hon. gentleman will see utiter section $3 \overline{5}$ where all the names to be struck off are to be restoresl.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Subsection 2 of the same section says :
"In the event of ans person desiring to vote at any election whose name has been excluded from the list of voters for any district in the electoral district for which such election takes place, and the exclusion of whose name from such list. appears by the list of voters to be the subject of an mudecided appeal under the provisions of "The Electoral Franchise Act or the Act passed in the session held in the fsth and 48th years of Her Majesty's reigu and intituled: 'An Aet respecting the Electural Franchise; be shall be entitled to receive a ballot paper and to vote."
He would he entitled to receive a ballot paper, hat how can he receive a ballot pitper if he does not appear on the list at all ?

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). He does appear.

sir JOHN THOMP'soN. He does not appear cunless he appears in the way I have mentioned as having heen followed in this case, becanse there could be un suplementary list.
Mr. MILLst (Bethwell). I think he does appear muler section 30, hecanse-"If at any time when the revising officer is required to furnish or certify any list of voters to any ofticer or person, there is, with respect to such list, any appeal pending or undecided, or if there is any appeal with respect to such list in which the decision, if given, has not been notified to the revising officer, the revising officer shall furuish such list as then last revised. corrected and certified by him, noting thereon the names of all persons who have been retained on the list of voters. notwithstanding obiection, the names of all persons who have been etruck of the list of voters, and the mames of all persons who have applied to be placed wn the list of voters and whose applicutions have been refused."
sir JOHE THOMPNON. That is precisely what he did and what I understand the lion. gentleman objected to. because on the list which he handed to the returning ofticer as the list upon which the balloting should take place, ath these names appear as being the suljeets of an umdecided appeal, although, accorling to his argument, they ought to have been struck off the list.

Mr. MILLS' (Bothwall). Would the hom. gentleman excuse me for interrupting by asking him this guestion: There is a thiril class of parties whom he has refused to put on. Now, these are on the voters list as they were voted upon. How do they get there:
Sir JOH: THOMPSON. He must put them on if they are the subjects of an undecided appeal.

Mr. MII.LA (bothwell). And the others are exactly in the same position.

Sir.JOHN THOMPSON. He must umiloubtedly put them on and keep them on, and mark on the list that they are subject to an undecided appeal.

Mr. MLL: (Bothwell). The Minister will see that these sections of the Election Act which he has quoted apply to that class as well as to the other two.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. To all. They appear on the list as sulijects of an undecided appeal.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). They appear on that list only and not on the list as printed.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The hon. gentleman will see that he is bound to put them on the list becanse the law says that if his lecision shall be overruled he has to correct the list.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). That is the list that is voted upon.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. That list which is voted upon must le the same as the list which he sent in. He is bound to leave them all on because he is bound to make the correction if the county court juige decirles against him. The hon. gentleman will see that we can liseuss this case, from the position of there having heen no election held in Lomion at all. suppose there had been no election held in Iomionlet us test the correctness of the tevising ofticers views, that these names are to appear on the lists sent the therk of the Crown in Chancery. What woulhi be the effect if Juige Elliott deciled that $2(N)$ of these names ought not to be put off? According to the hom. gentleman's siews they wonh he then alleel. If the julgerlecined that the revising officer wats right in striking them all off there woulh he no correction to be male, and in the meantime the election having come on, the provisions of the Flection Act that every such individual has the right to roceive a ballot paper and to vote, would he defeated and muratory. The Act says:
"And the deputy returning officer shall receive his ballot paper and shatil number the same and place opposite to the name of such perion in the poll book a number correspondiug to the number so placel upon sueh hallot maer. Every such person it required by the deputy returning officer, the pall clark. one of the candidates. or one of theiragent:, or be any elector present, shall, before receiving his ballot paper ake the wath of qubalification in the form $X$ in the first sebelule to this Act."
Then section ilf, subsection 3 of the Act. says:
" The deputy returning officer shall also in counting the ballots place in two separate envelopes or pareels the two classe of ballot pajers, of persons whose right to have their names registered unon the list of votere and to vote at such election, and of persons the exclusion of whose names trom the said list as voters are respertively the subjects of undecided appals under The lilectoral Franchise Aet."
Although it has no direct comection with the sulb. ject of our argment, 1 diressty the members of the House have this guestion ocearring to them: What re?nerly is there if these persons who are the sulbjects of undecided appeals eventually have no right to vote:

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). If the hom. gentleman will consent we will disenss that on niy motion to-morrow.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I merely refer to it as a matter of explanation. The Act makes clear provision for that to be dealt. with; a provision giving means for a delay until there shall be a recount, and for delaying the recount until the appeals are decided.

Mr. Lat URIKR. That has been refused.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I do mot so understami it, but I will not discuss that to-lay: I merely mentioned the point for the purpose of showing that these provisions seem to quite coincinle with the view I have taken: that these names ought to have appeared on hoth liststhe list as sent to the revising ofticer, and the list furnished by him to the retarning ofticer. I beg to say that while I hatre no recollection whatceer of the circumstances ever having come to my knowledge, personally, at the tine the opinion was given-they may have done so-but I certainly at that time had not the slightest knowlelge of the position of these appeal votes, ats to which side politically they were on, or whether any political controversy could possibly arise about it. My deputy prepared the opinion from his view, and it is my view of what the Election an. I Franchise Acts reduire as to the way of dealing with these names. The revising officer held the same view in writing this letter of the lst February, in which he called attention the fact that we hat not treated his list as he evidently intended it to the treated. and as he thought the Franchise Act requires, and his opinion was further shown when he certitied the list as printed in accordance with his remonstrance, and sent it to the returning officer and the deputy returning ofticers for the polling.

Mr. MILLN (Bothwell). Before you put the motion, Mr. Spaker, I wish to say a word or two in reference to the argument of the hom. Minister of Justice that these names would not le on the list at all ats reguired hy the election law unless they were on the list as priated for the (lerk of the (rown in (hancery. ithink when he atomits that the one chass at all eients would not be there, the class whom the revising officer refused to put there, he gives up all the force of that argument. So that the question simply comes to this, in what way are these names to be put on the list, and at what time? Now, as I understand the provision of section 310, it it pretty clear that they are to be put on at the time when the election is being held:
"If, at any time, when the revising officer is required to furnish or certity any list of voters to any officer or person, there is, with respect to such list, any appeal pending and undereided.'
It is only at that time that he is repuired to fumish the list, amb it is at that time that he is to note on that list the latter two of the three chasses of persens here spoken of. One class he has refused to strike off: they are there and designated. There are wo chesses wot there. By section 3 s it is providen that the comaty juige is toput on those natmes which he thinks shoulh be put on, of the classes struck off--not that he is to strike off some names which have alrealy been struck off. If they are not struck off the list, how can they he put on: if do not think it is a matter of vital consequence, if the class is icsignated to which they helong: but it is of vital consenuence that they shall sulserjuently be recongized ats a class, and that the ofticer shatl comform th the provisions of the law applicable to these particular parties. The hom. Minister of Instice has admitted there is no fourth class. His olservations apply to three classess. and so far there is no dispute. But it doess seem to me that when the revising officer has decided that certain parties are not qualified, and when the law proviles that those whare not qualified shall he simuck off the list. they ought not to be fromel on the list supplied to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, if the law is complien with. They are off the list, and remain off until they are put on by the superior authority of the comenty court julge : then, the list is to he corrected accordingly. As to the third class, they are off, and yet they are entitled to cote: they don unt stamh in at different position from the other two classes, and they camot get on the list except by their names being noten according to the provisions of section sii). The noting of the names of those persoms whom the revising otticer hats refused to put on the list is not. a different moting from that of the names he has decided to strike off: Those whom he has refused to pit upon the list are efually entitled to rote with those he has struck off. If that be so, then the hon. Minister cannot argue that they must be on the list as printel by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, when he admits that so far as one class is concerned they are not there at all until they are put on by the revising officer for the purpose of the election.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I say that they must le there if they are subjects of an undecided ippeal. If I may he indulged for one uoment, I shonlil like: to make clear the point on which we differ. I understand the hon. gentleman to agree that those names ought to appear on the list as handed to the: returning otficer.

Mr. MILIN (Bothwell). I saty that section $\mathrm{Ba}^{\prime}$ provides that they should be there.

Nir IOHN THOMPSON. The hom. pentleman. does unt dispute the right of the persons sol appearing on the lists to vote, I unlerstanul:

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). No. I atmit their right to vote in conformity with the latw, their ballots being marked as the law provides.

Nir JoHN THOMI'sun. My object in asking this question was to call the attention of the House: to the fact that there is practically no difference between us as to the result arrived at. In the list handed to the returning officer as the list for the polls, all these names appeared as the sulijects of an umberided appeal-not in the same way as ordinary voters, hut marked in the way I lescribed tw the House. The hon. sentleman ithonits that those very names onght to have appeared on that list in that Way, and he almits the right of those persons th hare their votes pollen. As 1 understam, their votes were pollen, many of them. sis that as regards the result arrived it they are in exactly the same position as they woild have been if the course proposed hy the hon. semtleman had leeen parsued.

Mr. LAERIER. The difference Metween the: hon. Minister of Justice and my bom. frient is mot very great. It is simply as to how the list is to he printed-whether it is to be printed with the appealed names or mot. If there i to loe an election, the list must be furnished to, the returning otficer with the appealed mames. The difference is not rery great. hut it is important to liy flown at once what is the true lan in this mater. There is no dombt that these appacaled names had a right to rote: that is mot disputed : hat at the same time there is no doult, in my construction of the law. that the comit onght not to take plate mint the appeal is decided. I understand that the returning officer acted differently, and comited those votes.

Nir IOHS THOMIPSON. That wats morenh of the printing of the list.

Mr. LAURIER. I know that the difference between the hon. Minister of Instice and my hon. friemel is not very arcat ; lout it amounts tio this: whether these appealed votes ought to have heen counted, anm in my hamble opinion the view taken by my hom. friem is the correct one.

Mr. MoNCRIEFF. I am very glat to tind, from the remarks marle by the hen. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills), that mo charse of improper conduct is mate in regaril to the return of this list. I thought the other clay, when the matter Was mentioned, that there might lee such a charge; but to-day that seems to bee entirely withirawn, and the fuestion is simply how the appealed vores should appear on the voters list. That is certainly very satisfactory; and the last remark made hy the leader of the Opposition would seem to give us to understand that this is a matter of very little moment.

Sir Johs Thompson.

Mr. LaURIER. No, no.

Mr. MONCRIEFF. I muderstand that both sides agree that those people whose votes were the sulject of appeal were entitled to vote at the election, and the leader of the Opposition says there is not any great difference, the only question heing how the appealed names should appear on the voters' list. Now. by section 30, these names must be notel upon the list. There is no direction given as to the muner in which they are to be notel. Can it le possible to have a plainer way in which to note them than that which was mopted? The name is plateod on the list without any number, and a large capital "A" is placed opposite it.

Mr. MILLs: (Bothwell). What aloont the names the revising ofticer refuses to put on?

Mr. MONCRIEFF. I will answer that presently. The revising officer notes that these rotes which had the letter "A" are sulject to appeal. Perhaps this is the first instance where votes have been kept banging up, so to speak, during an election.

Mr. MULOCK. Unler the Franchise Act.
Mr. MONCRIEFF. The hom member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) asked me what alont names that were never upon the list. In answer to that I refer him to the Election Act, section in), sul)-sections 1 and 2 . The first sul-section refers to the class of votes where an appeal is taken against the votes being allowed. Su'-section 2 applies to appeals against the exclusion of rotes. That is the kind of cases which you refer to. A man wants to be pout on the list and is excluded. He wats never on the list. Sul-section 2 reals :
"In the event of any perion desiring to vote atany election whose name has been excluded from the list of voters for any polling district in the electoral district for which such election takez place, and the exclusion of whose name froun such list appears by the list of voters to be the subject of an undecided appeal."
Now. I will ask you a question in return for the one yon askel me. Yon asked me: What heemes of the woter's name who was never on the list? I ask you: How could the oljection to his name appear, if his name was not on the list? The man's name must be on the list or the reason for his exclusion could mot be given. The leader of the 0 pposition takes a different riew of this. I do not know whether he and the member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) agree, hat the leader of the Opposition said that he hail uol oljection to the otes, that these men were entitled to rote, but that they could not be comated until after the appeal upon them had heen decided. I will answer him ly referring to section $\boldsymbol{3}$ ( of the Act.' Before doing so, 1 may say that I need not take up any time in endearouring to express my views as to whether or not these men are entitled to vote, becallase it seems to be conceled on both sides that, in some way or other, they ought to appear on the list and that they were entited to rote at that election, hecause, as the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) has shown, a man in such a position is entitled to be put upon the voters' list, but has to be noted, and all those wio are on the list are entitled to cote. Now, as to the duties of the officers at the clase of the poll, ly section 56 , sub-section 3 , we find that-"The deputy returning offcer shall also, in counting the ballots, place in two separate envelopes or parcels the two classes of bullot. papers."

There is ur place in thes ter which says that appealed votes are to bee excluded when the cotes are comited up. If you refer also to sub section I of section $\mathbf{5 6}$ you will tind it stated that-"Inmmediately after the cluse of the poll, the deputy returning oaticer shal then the ballot box and proted to count the number of votes given for each candidate."
There is no listinction whatever to be mate in counting these votes. The cluty of the reputy returning otficer is to comut the mumer of wotes given for each camdidite. And what is he to reject : Here is the test :
"1. He shall reject all ballot papers which have not been supplied he the deputy returning uttieer: 2 . All those by which votes have been given for more eandidates than are to be elected : and 3. All those upon which there is any writing or mark by which the roter conld be identified, other that the numberina by the deputy returning officer in the cases hereinbefore provided fire.
My hon. friends well know that the numbering by the deputy returning officer is only done in the chass of cinses correctly mentioneif hy the hom. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills), and that, when a ballot is subject to appeal. the deputy returning ofticer may put any number upnos it that he clanses - 949 if he pleases- anm sto mumber is phaced on the batlot paper for the purpose of identification.
Mr. MULOCK. Real section is.
Mr. LAURTER. Read section 64.
Mr. MONCRIEFF. I will read section is. which says:
"The deputy returning officer shall make out a statement of the arcepted ballot papers. of the number of yotes given to cacch cundidiate, of the ballot papers counted which were deposited by persons whose right to be registered on the list uf voters and tu vote, ind by persons the exclasion of whose names from the list of voters anpeared by the said list to be the subjects of undecided abpeals, as aturesiall."
You will not tind any place in the Act where the deputy returning anticer is to throw ont all the votes which are the subiject of an undecided appeat. Then, the further duty of the returning ofticer, after having counted every vote. with the exception of the three classes that I have named, is to add together the number of rotes given for each candidite.
Mr. MILLLS (Buthwell). The hom. gentleman is discussing a subject which is not before us now.... that is the counting of the ballots and the proceedings at an election.
Mr. MONCRIEFF. I have taken the liberty to do this lrecause after, ats 1 understand, mature deliberation, the leader of the Opmosition laid it down that these votes were not to be comintel at all when the returning otticer was adiling up the votes.
Mr. LAURIER. Nothing of the kind. I said it was important to settle the difference between the Minister of Justice and my hon. frienl from Bothwell (Mr. Mills) as to these votes which are the subject of appeal lwing comoteit until the appeal was decidel.
Mr. MONCRIEFFF Am I mistaken now in saying that you took the position that those votes which were, ws we might say, hung up in appeal, should not be added hy the dephiy returning officers until such time as the appeal le ilecided:
Mr. LAURIER. Nothing of the kind. What I said was the count which took place yesterday should not have taken place until this appeal had heen lecided. That is the point at issue:

Mr. MONCRIEFF. The appealed votes have not heendecided get.

Mr. LAURIFR. Fixactly. Ih you pretend they should be counted :

Mr. MONCRIEFF. Of course I do. I understand your position exatetly. lou say they should not have been connted, and I am taking the gromed that they should have been cominted. If you will refer to a section further on you will tind provision mate for the case of an election taking place when there are penting appeals. That is your case. The latw says, then, that the time for having a recount shall ine extented mutil some six days after the tinal decision is given.

Mr. MULAOCK. Dh you think the returning atticer should:

Some hom. MFMBERS. Order.
Mr. NONCRIFFF. I wats merely following out the line of argument I was pursuing when I was reminded that I wats varying from the question that was at issue between the two sides of the House. Referring, then, to section fil, it says:
"It shall be the duty of the returning officer to add ogether the number of rutes given to each candidate, rom the statements cuatained in the several ballot boxes returned hy the deputy returning officers of the ballot papers counted by them: aud the candidate who, on the summing up of the rotes, is found to have the majority of votes, shall then be declared elected."
Now, I am not going into the question of who is elected in this case : I am merely referring to that section to show conclusively that it would be the duty of the deputy returning officers not to exclude, in their calculation of the rotes given, any votes that are subject to appeal. As the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) says that he will bring the subject hefore the House again to-morrow, I shall be pleased then to consider what he has to say. In the meantime, I think, the position he haistaken in reference to those names which are upon the voters lists and marked subject to appeal, is a construction of the statute that 1 , at any rate in my humble judgment, cannot agree to.

Mr. MULOCK. As this question is to come up to-morrow I shall follow the example of my hon. friend who has just spoken, and not go very fully into it. The revising officer declared that, in his judgment, $2 ? ?$ names, which were sulsequently put upon the list, were not the names of hound fille: voters. He made his retum to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery. He did more than the Minister of Justice sayshe did: he unt only gave the names of the alualified voters. hut he appended at the foot of that list a certiticate enmmerating the number in eath polling sub-division, and his judgment of the gualified voters on that enumeration entirely excluded the $2 \underline{2}$ ? names that are now the suhject of appeal. As has been stated, he also audded at foot note to each list wherein he stated that certain names which he hat struck out, namely, the ie2!! which he had disallowed, were. in his judgment, not valid, hut he stated that they were the sulbject of an appeal. That list he forwarled to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, under the Franchise Act. When he did that is duties as revising otficer were, in my juigment, entirely completed. His power was spent, he had adjudicated, and he had exhausted his powers. Judgment.
had been rendered he him. and that julgment became of record when it was gazetted by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery. The Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, in pursuance of his duties. gazetted that return, publishing in the ricer-7, the notice required hy section ?l and sul)-section 4 of the Franchise Act, which seys:
"The Clerk ot the Crown in Chancery, on receipt of the said lists for anyelectural districts, shall. in the next issue of the Canada Ginzeite, insert a notice in the Form ' $F^{\prime}$ in the sehedule to this Aet.-on and after the publication of: which notice the persons whose names are entered on the: said list as voters shall, subject to any correction or amendment, made by any juigment on appeal. as hereinafter provided for, be held to be duly reristered voters in and for such electural district." Scherlule $\cdots$ B. "referrel to in the Act, sets forthat form of the return by the revising otficer to the (lerk of the Crown in Chancery, and this form contains mo provision whatever for the revising officer setting forth the names that are the suliject of appeal, or setting forth any information exeept such as imdicates who are the voters. Schedule " $1 /$ " sets forth, in the first column, the names in full of the electors. Then, "pposite their name there is a number, and the total number shows the total mumber of electors, according to his finding. The return has to he in that form, and I sulmit that whatever the revising officer phaced in that formother than what the law requires. is simply a nullity. Now. Mr. Speaker, what has followed! Arlmitting that the alvice and opinion of the Deputy Minister of Justice is correct, the Minister of Justice himself has scarcely taken the responsibility of endorsing it.
sir . OOHN THOMPNON. What I said was that I did not wish to be supposed ats disclatming responsibility.

Mr. MUIUOK. At all events, that hats taken place. The revising ofticer, in the tirst place, pronounced against these names. An election has been hell. A portion of these ent) names against whom there has heen an alverse decision, have succeerled in retting their votes into the ballot box -.-or their hallots mather. for we ammot call them votes yet. Now, it is contendel that these votes. which have up to this moment been declared bat, against which there is an adverse judgment, must, nevertheless, be conuted, amd ihe result of Which we all know, and it means the seating of a candialate who, but for these votes. would not he seiated.

An hom. 1 IFMBFR . Ves.
Mr. MULOCK. Well, I may sily, nevertheless, that of the excluiled votes, the votes which are the subject of an undecided appeal. IDs were cast for Mr. Carling, and three were cast in farour of Mr. Hyman. That leaves a majority of los of these rotes in favour of Mr. Carling. Now, his majority, as found loy giving him credit for these 12.) votes, which have been decided not to be votes by the revising larrister, is only 10\%. If the 12.0 votes. Which the revising barrister has said were hat votes, were ignored. Mr. Hyman would have a majority of 16 votes. That is the state of the facts.

Sir TOHN THOMPSON. They will he igmored so soon as the appellate authority decides that they shall be ignored.

Mr. MULOC:K. The point is whether we are going to aid in any way in the seating of a candidate who has not receivel a majority of rotes. Arewe now going to endearour to construe the Act against right and justice, ant give encouragement to those who are seeking to do so? We know what has happened hefore, anl I camnt forget what revising officers have done, and what has happened in this House. I cammot suppose we are going to enconage the making of a return ly a returning officer lefore the county court judge hats dealt with the case. We know what happened in Bothwell. In that case the returning officer ignored the county court judge amd returnel at candidate who had heen defeated, but who, nevertheless, succeeled in holding his seat for a sessinn or more, and was only at last ejected from his position by a decision of the supreme Court. The connty court julge may take this question into his delileration on a recount. But we were told lefore the returning officer made his return he was going to do this. It was stated in the free Proses of Londoni that the returning officer intended to count Mr. Carling in, and now it is in the air that the county court julge intends to count him in.

Some hon. MENBERS. Order.
Mr. MULOCK. Order: The time has come when we must take care of our rights in this House and the country. I am perfectly in orter. I say again, it is generally rumoured that the county court julge has manifested a hias in this case, and that is a bias which may he male arailable to enable the ends of justice to le defeated, and a return to be made here that has no merit in it. Supmose an appeal is taken, and the county court judge delivers his judgment, he may, perhaps, reverse the whole decision of the revising barrister, and in the whole ${ }^{125}$ votes he will find, 1 am told he is going to find, enough good votes to seat Mr. Carling.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON The hon. gentleman will not say that on mere rumour.
Mr. MULOCK. I saty it from my position here as a member of the House. I fully recognize the responsibility of saying it, and I iepeat it. The time has arrived when we must look after our lib. erties here.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hom. gentleman should withdraw that renark, unless he is prepared to present a motion for impeachment.

Mr. MULOCK. No matter. I will not pursue it.
Sir RICHARI) CARTWRI:HT. Do you rule, Mr. Speaker. that it is mot competent for us, if there is ground for supposing there has been mal. administration of justice, to call the attention of the House to it, unless we are prepared to move at motion for impeachment? If so. I should like your ruling taken down, for I cammet concur in it.

Mr. SPEAKER. I did not so umderstand the statement of the hon. genteman. What I understood was that he maile a statement that he believed Judge Elliott would improperly allow those names to be put on the voters' list.

Mr. MULOCK. I saty it is currently rumourea that the judge in this case will find in farour of Mr. Carling ; that he will tind good rotes enough, if it is necessary to do so to seat him. However, in deference to your ruling, Mr. Speaker, I will not press that observation further: but I was abont, to ask the Minister of Justice whether he vould deem it right-

Mr. SPEAKER. It is laid down that-...
"The rules of the two Houses are only intended to protect their own members, and consequently any reflections on the conduct of persous outside cannot strictly be considered breaches of order. But the Speakers of the Enclish Commons now always interfere to prevent as far as they can all personal attacks on the judges or courts of justice. They have alwisy: felt compelled to say that 'such expressions should be withdrawn.' and that ' when it is proposed to call in question the conduct of a judge. the member desiring to do so should pursue the constitutional course of moving an aldress to the Crown.'"

Mr. MULOCK. I will make no further obserrations as regards the action of the judge, and what is further I will withdraw anything I have said. But I wish to put this question to the Minister of dustice, if he will permit me: Does he think it will be hecoming and right that the returning officer shall make his return to this Honse before the county court julge-suppose there is a recount--has given his judgment?
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. That is a subject on which I would prefer to give no opinion. I have always declined to give any advice or opinion to returning officers. I woulil expect a returning otticer, if he had any doubt as to his duty under the law, to take advice, and proceed under it, hut I certainly would not alvise him.

Mr. MCLOCK. Of course, the returning ofticer has his own respoinsibility. He ought to walk according to the law : lint if he exceeds the law and returns a defeated candidate as member to this House he can only, le ejected from his seat after long and expensive litigation at the hands of the candidate who was the choice of the people. In view of what has been done in the pist by returning officers on some occasions. while I commend the Minister of Justice for his cantion, yet I think he owes something to Parliament and the people, and when there is such a case as the present in point he will he doing a public service by seeing that no violation of the law is committed. The hon. gentleman must remember how the returning officer in the Bothwell case ignored the decision of the julge. In this case I do not know what the decision of the judge may be, but surely until that decision is rendered, there should be nio return to this House, supposing there is a recount. The spirit of the law, and I suppose the letter of the law as well, provides that the returning officer should make no return until the judge had decided in regard to these votes on a recount. Does not the Minister of Justice think it to be his daty to control the conduct of any ofticer of this House: I must confess I will be disappointed if the hon. gentleman will not take steps to prevent any wrong being committed: and if there is any return made by the returning officer. either before he should in law do so, or if he should ignore the decision of the county court judge, the responsibility for the act will certainly rest to a considerable extent upon the Administration, if they neglect to take steps to prevent it. I think the Minister of Justice has an opportunity here of preventing an injury being done, and from all that has taken place there appears to he a well-founderl and widespread opinion that whatever the result of the election, the man whom we think has been defeated by the people is to le returned to the House. If that should take place and if the Government should refuse to raise their hand to prevent it, they camot.
after that he relieved of the responsibility for whatever does take place.

DUTIES OF ELECTION OFPIC:IALS.

Mr. MILL( (Bothwell) moved :

That it is the undoubted right and duty of the House of Commons to see that the returning officers and other officials who have duties imposed upon thern in the election of members to this House, act with perfect fairness towards the various candidates, and to hold such returning officers and other officials to the strict discharge of their duties; and this House further affirms that the trial of election petitions by the courts dyes not lessen the authority of the IIvouse over such officials, nor take away the necessity for its supervision.
He said: Mr. Npeaker, I gave notice yesterday, with the assent of the leader of the House, that I wonld to-rlay make a motion in reference to the dutits of this House in relation to the elections which may be from time to time hell. The motion which I now propose attirms that it is the undoubted right of the House of Commous to see that the returning officers and other officials who haveduties imposed upon them in the election of members to the House, should act with perfect fairness to the Various candidates, and to hold such returning officers and other otficials to the strict discharge of their luties. The motion also salys: - This House further aftirms that the trial of election petitions by the courts shoes not lessen the authority of the House wer such ofticials, nor take away the necessity for its supervisiom.". I think, Nir. that the doctrine laid down m this motion is tow clear to andmit of controversy. The House is the judge of its own rights amm privileges. and it is also its duty, its the representative bonly of the nation, to see that those who hecome meminers of the Honse. do so in aceordance with the provisions of the law of the lami. I do not say. Nit, that it is always mecessary that this supervision should express itself actively ; it is sufticient that it potentially exists, called into attivity only when there is some ahose, some disregard of cluty, some miscombluct or malfeasance in oftice on the part of otficials who are repuired to discharge duties in the way prescribed by the law of the land. The subject is an impoitant one. becanse every sleparture from perfect faimess in the discharge of cluties hy an ofticial may affect the results which ought tole accomplished by the exercise of the elective franchise. The effect of such unfairness maty alter the representation in Parliament : and in so far ats it accomplishes this end, the inthence and respect which this Honse should command in the conntry will be serionsly weakened. It must not be forgotten that unier our system of parliamentary government the arministration is always an interested party. But there is one marked difierence between our system and that which exists in Fugland, that here the Ministry as an interested party have it within their power to exercise an amomot of influence, and to exercise that intluence in an undue way, Which is mot open to an Arministration in the United Kingrdom. I sity, Sir, that this power in reference to elections, which is possessed by the Ministers here in a larger degree than it is possessed liy Ministers in the United Kingrlom. requires on the part of this Honse even a more active rigilance than is called for bey the duties that revolve upon the House of Commons in the Linited Kingrlom. In the United Kinglom, the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, when he receives the warrant of the speaker, is reguired to issue the Writ to an otticer appointed hy the law; a permanent ofticial of the House, for the purpose of having an clection in a particular district. It is not open to the Alministration to interfere. The power of Dinisters over the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, their power to interfere with him in the discharge of his duties; so far as the law is concerned, is there no greater than the power of other members of the House of Commons. But, Sir, that is not the ease here. A few years ago, an let was passed in this House repealing the law which named certain officials as permanent otficers of the House for the purpose of holding elections. So long as that law continued on the Statute-book, it was open to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery in Canada to discharge the duty in precisely the same way that the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery in the United Kingdomdischarges his duty. But, sir, by the repeal of that law, the relation between the Aclministration and the Clerk of the Crownin Chancery was very seriously interfered with. The Administration was given a control over that officer in the discharge of his official duties which is altogether makown to the law in the Uuited Kingrom. The result of this is that one of the partie's interesteri in every contest that takes place possesses an undue influence in that contest. The (lerk of the (rown in (handcery camont issule the writ, he camant conform to the warrant issued liy the speaker, unt the Alministration make known to him whom they have appointed as returning otticer for the purpense of holding the election : and so, however desirous he may lie to discharge his daty, in conformity with the spiri: and intention of the Act. his gooid intentions in that respect are frustrated a his $^{2}$ ability to conform the the requirements of the law are remberel bugatory. so long as the Arlminisnation chonse lo refrain from appointing an afficer to holl the election. That heing the case, it is of the tirst conserpuence that l'arliament should watch carefully every step taken in every election which is leing held in any portion of this Dominion. We sometimes hear it satid here that parties are disposed to live and to die British subjects. 1 an not groing to discuss the question of dying hecathis: I supposie most hom. gentlemen like tostay where they are acequanted :and sor, I suppose, they have nu particular ansiety to end their hay: in any harried manner. Bhit. Sir. I may say that those What are anxions to live ats British sulijects in (anarla ought to be anxions to maintain the spirit and principles of British institutions: : and it is not maintaining the spirit and primeiples of British parliamentary govermment to put it in the power of in Alminisitration to ex. ercise an undue influence through the instrmmentatities which are emploged in holling a parliamentary election. The (forernment, 1 say, are always a party to every election contest that takes place: and in the election contest to which 1 im ahrout an refer, the one which has recently taken place in Lomion. a Minister of the Crown was one of the a andilates. That Minister of the (rown was also a party to adrising His Excellency who the returning officer ani the carions rleputy returning otificers, within the constituency, shouldi he. Hon. gentlemon will see, then, that the relation between one candinate and all the ofticials employed holding the election is quite different from the relation bet ween the other camblisate and those officials. So, where these large powers are given to an Alministration, it is of all the more consecpuence to see that the parties who are appointed for the purpose of holding an election strictly conform to the law. I sily, Nir, that Parliament always has the power to protect itself ; and the appointment of an election court, for the purpose of trying controverted elections, does not at all derogate from the power that is inherent in the House of Conimons. So far as a particular class of matters are concerned, it may be important that the House should abstain from taking any action where the corourts are called upon actively to interfere and to adjudicate in reference to litigated matters. That the original authority and right of Parliament is not clerogated from by the substitution of a court of justice for a committee of the House in the trial of controverted elections, was admittel in a discussion that took place in this House some years ago. In that discussion, Mr. Blake said:

" He would be very sorry to believe that the House had been deprived, by the position of the Controverted Elections Act, of its power over returning officers and depuity returning officers-of its power to investigate complaints made against them, and to punish them for improper conluct."

And Nir John Macronald. in speaking in the same debate, said:
"He was glan the hom. member zo propose to ask the House to consider the points $x$ yevd in the petition when the election case was before ann lier rihin… : a' the same time it was not to be suppose dhat the lhouse had abandoned its righ to control, censura and if need be. panish, returning and deputy returning officers."
So that, sin far as the power of larliament is concerned. there can be no question that the power does exist, that this Homse hats inherently in itself the power to supervise the officials it employs to hohl elections in imy constituen ios: and while in some cases it may mot le necessary to intervene it is always proper to olseerve. so that, when there is a serious abouse of anthority, when there is an abuse of othice. this Honse mal use the power with which it is rested in the pulalic interest for the purpose of protecting the riyhts of parties which are affected when the poner can be more convenienty exereised ly this House than hy any other tribumal or party. This is obrious for this reasom. Leet me sulpuser, for instance, that the returning ofti-er should retarn to this Honse a party who hial received a minority of votes, a party who is an alien, at party whin is a felon, and no objection hat heen tiled in the case, no action hat heen taken in the case--cleaty the Honse is not in such at helpless prosition that it could not purify itself amil protect the rights of the electors of the comntry against any intrusion or abmse of that kind. The returning otficer maty commit a fratul upon the Howse, he may return a camdiclate having a minority of votes, and surely it is open to this House to cill on the Clerk of the Grown in chancerv-and it has heen done again and again-to prolluce the return mate amt to insist upon an anembent of the return in atcoordance with the facts. If there he any guestion of law, if there be any question of litigation lectween the pirtises, if no reference is made to the conuts for adjulication. it is open to this Houste to proteet itself against abouse aml against any person who has now right to sit here nuw. just as much as it was in the former history of parliament. As a rule the courts have to consifler questions of law and face, and the conclusions of the law from the facts so stated and proved, but. Where the guestion is merely one of arithmetic and nothing more, I think it is clear that the observations mate by Lord Esher in an important case-the Bangor case which was tried three or fonr years agoare strictly applicalle, and it wouht he a neglect of duty for the House to refuse to rlo justice in the matter and to compel the parties to have recourse to expensive legislation. I do not mean, hy the resolution I have proposed. that this House shall exercise a medidlesome orersight, that it shall use the power with which it is vesten, where the employment of such power is umecessary, but 1 say that, whenever it becomes clear that a wrong is albout to lie clone, that anthority is about to he abused, that the parties who are entrusted with the discharge of important cluties are failing in their duty, the fact that this House is not indifferent to what is being clone, that it is exercising a supervision over its officers, is calculated to have i very important and salutary effect, and when that supervision is exercised with fairness and moderation, Iam certain that such abnses asexisted in the Province of New Bruns-Wick a few years ago, in the catse of an electiontothis House, are not likely to be very frequent, and this Honse will be wived trouble, and the public will lee satred scamdal, if this House holds its whticers to at striet responsibility. I am asserting mome than this. that it is the duty of the otficers of the Honse: to olsey the law. It is ohrious that mo department of (iovernment could be sitisfactorily administered if every ditlerence letween a superior officer and an inferion stificer had to be litigated upon and lecided by a juliaial trihmal rather than by a decision of the superior atticer, athl therefore 1 saly that. Where it is olnions to the commons sensie allal to the sense of fationess of every member of this Honse that a wrong is being donle. the Honse would be dereliet in its dinty to the country if it failerd to evereve the priemer with whichit is rester and toinsist upomrightheing lome. Cesterday the Honse ennsidered abother hoanch of this subject, hot torday I wial agrain refer brietly to the question as to whor are the electors. Whon ane the parties whe are fomm upon the voters list or who shouht he on that list when the election was hell. the soters list as put in the hambs of the depute retuming ntficers, :and how votes should he taken. how :he rmmeration shouble take places, and how, in any matter of omithosersy in regard to the enumeration. it is to he disposed of. These are the questions which 1 propose to ask the House to-laty to comsider ambl disiouss. By section 31 of the Filectoral Franchise Act, it will he seen that there were two dasses of persoms entitled to rote at elections, those persoms alwut whose right to go on the list there wats no conterersy, and these persons ahout whom there were appeats pembing. Of this secomil ciass, there are three epecial classes first. those retained on the list not withstanding an appliation to have them struck off: then those whon are said to be struck off hy the revising othicer against whose decisiom an appeal is hat to the eommty julge: and the third class is those who have applied to he put on the list and Whom the revisimg othiner has refused to put on the list. As I mulerstond the Minister of Justice yesterday, we agreed that the first class shombl lie on the list. that is, the revising ofticer having refused to strike them off. they should remain there. We also agreed that the third class, those the revising officer refused to put on, cooulid not be on the list: but we differel as to the secomd class, those the revising ofticer hatd struck ont the list but in regard to whom an appeal is mate. I umlerstand the Minister of Justice to maintain that those voters, uotwithstanding the fact that they are strack off. are still on the list. I dissent from that opinion. I think there are two of three sub-classes off the list, and that they are noted when the list is reguired for the purpose of election. But if the law was in other respects complied with, therewouldhe nopractical mischief, perhaps, arising from the aloption of one or the other of these contentions. I am informed that in some instances, in the city of homion, in the recent elention, certain parties winose names were on the list and who were the subjects of appeal, insteal of taking the outh $X$ that they are reguired to take under the statute, took the ordinary oath of electors who are not the suljeects of appeal, and it was contended that because their names. Were so printed upon the. list, they had a right to vote upon the ordinary oath heing administered. I mention this as one of the mistakes that arose, and that is likely to arise where there is now proper distinction matle hetween mames that are on the list as of right, athl thense that are on that list ats a mattere of controVersy. The 3 :3nd sertion of this Alet with reference to senters' !ists, shonss how the Act is :" be umber. stond amel interpreted. It can hever he ancumately or probery anterpreted hy lowking at cachindividual section amd malertakine to comstrue that acoording to the strict grammatical improt of the words. ly Statutes, we musi lonk at the whole Aet, comsider every provision of each of these dets, ame son eonstrue them that they may all stand logether. and hest eary ont the intemtion of parliament. Section 33 shows that the chass that is strack off the voters lists maley section 3n, have serem ditys within which to apmeal from the slecision of the revising oflicer withe amaty jutyre, and the reasom of subh it time lexing siven for that appeal is to aliow them being restored the the list. Entil that restomation takes plate it serms wo me that they do not stamd upon the list. Then, if Wre lowk at section and of (hapter $s$. we time the satme limitation on the prosecelings hefore the deputy retaming otheres in making the comut of the votes that hate heen polled. The tirst part of that section purailes:

- Immediately atier the close of the well, the depus. returniag oftieer shatl, in the presence of the poll eleri and the candidates, wr theirarents-and if the eandidates and their arente or ang of them are absint, thentin the presence of such, if any, of them as are present. and of at peast three electors.- open the ballot box and proceed to count the number of votcos given for each candidate: and in so doing he shatl rejeet all batlot papers which have not been supplied by ite deputy returning oflierers, all those hy which vote have heengiven for more candidates than are to be elected, and all thoe uman which there is any writing or mark by which the coter can he identified. other then the numbering lye the deputy returning oftieer in the erses herembefore prosided for.
Then the secomel section provides:
> . The other hallot mapers heing eomuted. and a list kept of the number of votes riven to cach cambidate, and of the number of rejected ballot pabere, all the hathot papers indicating the votes givenf for each candidate respertivels. cxeept as iu this section is hereinatier brovided, shall be put into separate envelopes."
> Now, the exception from that ${ }^{-}$as heremafter provided " refers to the particular class of votes that are in appeal. The thind suld.section reats as follow: :-
> - The deputy remming offierer shall also, in counting the ballots, phate in two separate envelopes or pareels. the two classes of hallot papers of persons whose richt to have their names registered upon the list of voters and to vote at such elections, and of wersoms the exclusion of whose ummes from the suid list as yoter., are reprectively the subiects of undecided appeal."

And it further provides:
" He shall keep a list of each of the said classes of batlots. ${ }^{\text {. }}$
What is the meaning of " keepinge a list of eath class "." Why, Sir, its we sec hefore the use of these words, that he shall enmmerate eath class, not that he shall confuse them indiscriminately by enmmerating them together, but that he shall enmmerate each class of hallots, those almot which there is a controversy or dispute is to the rights of the parties to vote, anil those abont whose right to vote there is mo dispute. Now, when we look at the E8th section we find this enmmeration of the two classes of voters separately and distinctly, still further emphasizen. Nection is says :

- The deputy remming ufficer shall make out a statement of the accepted hallot patpers, of the number of votes siven to each eamdidate, of the ballot papers commed, which were demsited be persoms whose richt to be regist. $\because$ ed ,n the list of worers and to wote."

That is one datss

-     - and by persums the exelusion of whose names from the list of voters anmared by the said lisi to be the subjecte of underided apm:al as atoresad.
Hete the cmanerations of these two clatsess of Votersare still whe kept distinct hy the reputy retumine otficer. If we read this section with the Wonds that are intembel to he supplied. Whisth is the suliject of the tims prealicate, ant which atso is the implied suliject of the see:ond predicate. it wonld read as follows:
- The deputy returning ofticer shall make out a statement of the aceepled Dallot patpers, of the mumber of vores piven 10 each candidate. of the ballot papers counted which were depmsited by nersons whose right to be reristered on the list of voters and to vote. and of the number of votes given to each candidate hyepersons the "xelnsion of whese mames from the list of roters appearel, jec."
So that there are two distinct emmerations, the emmmemation of those whase right or vote is unctisputerl. and another emmeration of those whose right ${ }^{0}$ rote is a matter, of appeal : and these papers ate to he kepe separately. are to he seater up in sepmate patckiges. the comtents of these packiages are to he carefully moted upon the hack of the envelopes ame they ite to he placed in the ballot boxes.and the ballot hoses are to he retmoned with them th the retmong otficer. Now. I ask this question at this print. for the purpose of further showing what construction must he put unon thense provisions of the latw which relate to the dischanere of duties he the returning officer himself. If the returning oftieer wits to conint those biallot: indiscriminately. if he wis to confinse the ballots of these two clasises. Which the depmety returning oftioer is required to keep sepmate. and which he: is instructed in the charest prossible mamer to keep separate, fon what purpose wombl separation lee mate: If the betmoning othicer was not called upon to keep them separate and to make separate arlilitions: of those two different alasses of voters. thense atout whose wotes there is no dispute, and those that whe the sulijeet of contention. Why should the depmote retming officer he reapired io keep them separate: If they were to be allen torether. then those provisions pointing out with such minuteness ani iletail the duties of the depme: returning officer womld healtogether without meaniing. they would be nugatory: they would hate no force. they wodil he perfectly aimiless, accomplishing mothing, simply provisions altogether without objeer. I do not sommerstand the statute. I think they are to be kept sepmate for a specitie purpose. They are to he kept seprarate becanse there are to he separate adidions mate liy the returning ofticer ats well as by the deputy returning ofticer. The next provision of the Aet to which 1 wish to call the attention of the House is section ow. This section proviles that the retmoning officer at the close of the polls. after having receiven all the ballot hoxes, shall proceed to open them in the presence of the election clerk, the candidates, of their representatives, if present, or of at least three electors, and so on: and that the candidate who hats on counting up the votes a majority of the votes, shall be then leclared elected. If yon were to real that section by itself you would saty that the returning ofticer must ahld up those votes and must denlare the candidate having a majority :ifecten. without reference to the distinction that has been made lefore. But if you roal all the provisions of the Act relating to the cluties of the returaing officer, it becomes perfectly obvious that the distinctiom mate is intemfed to le kept strictly in view. Immediately after. in section liz -atall shall embeavor to make this matter clear - you will see that if the ballet hos is lost, if any of the ballot loxes are not returned at the appointed time. Le may penstpone action and wait matil a subsegnent day. dim so in section lis provision is mate for the loss of ballot boxes. But it is important ter read in comnection with this the provision of the law of last year. It immends section (ie) amd it provides as follows as resards the returning otficer :
"In case any deputy retuming otheer has not duly enclosed in the baibot box the said statement of the ballot papers counted by him as required by this Aet. or if for any other canse the said returning officer camot at the day and hour appointed hy him for that purpose asecrtain the exact number of vores given for e:ach candidate, the returning officer maly therennon adjourn tio at future lay and hour the said summing up the number of rotes riven far each candidate, and so from time to time. such adjomrmentor adjournments nut in the apgregato to execed two weeks."
There the duty of the returning ofticer in regarit to comating the votes is set wat : and I daim that looking at what the law intends with respect to these botes that are to he subjeect to appeal, that right to rematin on the list must be deeided liefore a proper return can be mate : and it is perfectly clear from that prowision that the returning officer is not in a presition to smm up the wotes as required ly the latw. ats amemded last session, until the grestion ats to the right of those parties whose votes are in appeal is meeinlerl. Let us furthe : look at the promisions of the Aet on this subject. By section 3.7 of the Eleetonal Franchise Act. it is provided that the julge shath. upen receiving the said motice of appeat, and copy of the decision appealed from, appoint at comsenicit time and place for the hearing of the appeal. What is meant hy his apposinting a comaenient time and place: Dhes it mean an imbefinite tine. a time that you cammot at the moment the appointment takes place ascertain: I lon not think so. I hold that it is clear from the: provisions of this statute that this camoot be the casce. The julge comsidered these matters in Nonember last. (ertain cases were taten hefore him on appeal. He lealt with those cases. He decideal that he would not hear any evilence anew, that he womld not make any investigation for himself, that he would take the evilence as it had heen taken hy the revising ofticer and the rejurt of that otficer, and then decide as to the rights of the parties to go on the list and remain there. That was the course he pursued in dealing with, I think, thirty cases. With respect to those parties who had been put upon the list at the preliminaty revision or at a preliminary stage of the proceedings, and about whom notice has leeen given that those names should be struck out on the ground that the parties were not qualified, the revising otficer was inclined to hoid, in fact he did hold. that the words " unt qualified" were not a sulficient designation of the oljection to the names of those parties going on the list. In the meantime an appeal was hail to the Comity Court judige from that dedision. and the julge expressed himself as follows:--
-. I think the motice was insatid under the Aet. I do not enter into an academic discussion as to whether it was null and void. I think all that I am required to do is to determine whether it was a valid or invalid notice. and $I$ say it was invalid, and my reason for thus deciding is that no grounds are stated by them why the man's name should be removed, and thus it is invalid under the Act. So far as the rest of the appeal is presented for my consideration, I am of opinion that under the 33 ral section my power is contiaced to the action of the revising officer with the list : that is to say, as to the proper admission of names or exelusion of them, being as to somethine which is or should be in the list or which ought not to be in it. It is not said that there is an appeal to the enunty julge as to the proceediugs of the revising officer which would be a comprehensiveterm such as is used in section 06 . I consider that I haye no authority to interfere with the action of the revising officer in amending or aljourning the court to a future time. Whatever may be the intportance of my ruling as to the question whether the notice in question is insufficient or invalid and null and void, as $I$ am pressed to decide, $I$ do so, anil rule as $I$ have said, hat it is invalid under the Aet, and so far the appeal is sustained. but in respeet to my authority to interfere with the revising officer's power fo order amendment or to adjourn the court $l$ lo not contertain the appal."

Now. Mr. Speaker. the revising otficer. upon that ruling of the county juige, refused to proceed. He hat anjourned his conrt to a future day and he had giten the parties leave to amemi their notice. hut after this recision her refused to proceed. The Comuty Court julge himself admits that he hal not the power to deal with this question of procedure, that he had no authority maler the A.t to express ann opinion on the subject or to adjudicate on it. and the subject was taken hefore the (court of Queen': Bench. An application was there malle for a writ of manlamus to compel the revising otficer to proceed and to discharge his dhey, which writ was granted. The decision of the whole court wits this: that the notice was sulficient : they dissented from the view taken by the eronty julge: they held "not yualified " wat at sutticient untice. Fivery :nue of these persoms were on the coters lists fior some qualitication or other, and certainly "not qualifiel" meam not Iftulified in the charatere in which they were entered on the list. The Conrt of Queen's Bench therefore hell in the first plate that the motice was sutticient. and in the second place that no appeal is given ly the Act tothecomety julgefrom the revising "fficers: decision. Therefore, that the procecolings lefore the Comnty (c,met julge were roram "on junlior, and so these procee lings heing nugatory were set aside. The revising ofticer acting upon the decision of the Court of Queenis Bench, proceedeal to aljudicate upon these names, and 2 sis of them, all the names that are in controversy, were struck off the voters lists. That wasthe lecision, althongh they are subserpuently printed on the list. There can be no dispute whaterer that the decision wasthat they should he struck off. Sow, there was an appeal from that decision of the Court of Queen's Bench to the Court of Appeals, and the Court of Appeals hell that as the revising officer had acted upon the writ and cheyed the command of the court, that there was nothing before the court to decile, and that they were not called upon to say whether the Court of Queen's Bench had the power to order the revising officer to proceed or not. He hat acted; he could not recall what he had done, he could not undo what he had done, iand the validity of his act would not at all be affectel by the guestion whether the Court of Queen's Bunch possessed this power, or whether it did not. But the Court of Appeals held the untice was sufficient. And so the matter stoond. Now, sir, in the tirst place. when the application was made to the Court of Queen's Pench and the revising officer proceceled with the work of revising the list, an appeal was had: an application was made in the meantiane to the county judge to consider hy way of appeal the lecision of the revising otficer in reference to these names. The comnty judge saill: I will not auljudicate upion the matter at present, 1 will pustpone the consideration of the subject until there is a decision ly the Court of Appeals. There was a decision hy the (ourt of Appeals, and then an appeal was han from the decision of the Cont of Appeals to the Supreme Come of Canala. and when the second application was made the Conuty Court sainl: I will not adjudicate mutil there is a decision hy the supreme Court, inn so there hats been no time and no place tixed to this day for the considecration of these appeals. I wish to call the attention of the Honse. in the first place, to this matter. It seems to me. from lowking at the prowisions of the Aet. Hat it is omly when a yuestion of merit is involved. a question of the right of the party as a coter to be on the voters lists that there is an appeal from the decision of the revisingolficer to the connty Court julse. On a mere matter of procedure - since the revising oflicer is not bound to conform to the ordinary rules of a court of justice, but is given a greater latitule thenable him to make his proceedings effective. in riew of the ahsence of knowledge of the law hy the coters that in that mater he is acting in atecordance with his diseretion, amb a matter of diseretiom camnot be a matter of appeal. It is mot pretembedor at all events it has not heen pretembel -. that these persoms hat any right to he on the list. on that they were in any selsequalified ly law to sote. That was not the contention: the contention was that the natice to strike off hal mot heen sufficiently lefinite, and that contention the come of Appeais. and the (our of gueen's Bench hoth held was an erronenos view. The revising officer proceeded: he heard the evidence so far as there wass evidence to sulmit, and the names of these persons were strack off the moll. Now, if we look at section 64 which provides for a recount under certain circumstances, among other things which are providel for is this:
"That any person voting at such clection, whose mame was included on my list of voters nied at such election, or whose name was excluded froumy such list, and whose right to have his name so included on the said list. or the exclusion of whose name from such list, as the case may be, appeared by such list to be the subject of an anpeat pend ang and undecided under the provisions of the Electoral Franchise Act, and that judyment has been rendered on such appeal deciding that such person was not eititiled to have his name so registered upon said list, or that the name of such person, was properly excinded therefrom, as the case may be."
Now, that is one class of persons, that is one gromed upon which a recount by the County Court julge may be sought, but I ask the attention of the House to subsection $\mathbf{2}$ of this section. which reads as follows :-
"If any such appeal in respect of any person whose name is ontered on the poll book as haviing voted at such election is not decided before the expiration of the said four days allowed for the making of an application for a recount, the time for the making of such application for : recount on the ground of the result of the decision of any such appeal shaill be extended for and until the expiration of six dass atter the decision of any such appeal."
It is unt stated that the recount shall he postponed ; bot the statement is that the time for making such application for a recount--application to whom: why. to the julye - shall he postpuned until the expination of six days after the deesision of the appeal. I would like to know how it is possible for the returning ofticer to make a return during that perionl of time, while the guestion of appeal is malecilen. It is perfectly clear that the party has six days after the appeals are decided to make this application. Now, it it were possible for the returning ofticer to make his return before that perion of time. then it is perfectly obvious that he hais not the six layss tomake the application,--that he would not have H y time, on this gromal, to make the application. He camnot make the application after the return is mate : and it is clear as noonday, that unter these provisions. the returning officer is estopped from making a return until these appeals are decided. I call your attention further, Sii, to the fact that the two classes of voters under section (is are to lee kept distinct. The returning onticer is to enmmerate umder one class those who are entitleil to rote, to whom no exception is taken, and he must make a separate list for those whose cases are in appeal. Now, these two classes camot the fused together in one enumeration, until this question of appeal is lecileal : and that appeal is not to !ee exercised in such a way as to take from the party aggrievel his right to make the application. He is not forced to make his application at once. It is not an application which after it is made is to be postponed. It is this fact which is kept clearly in tiew by this sub-section. that until six days elapse after these appeals are disposen of, the returning officer camot make a return. And why should he : What right has he to put on the list, and were made a subjeet of appeal just on the eve of an election, is it possible that it could be seriously argued that this House has dischargel its duty in so incompetent a way, that it has so far failed to make provision for the proper expression of public opiniom, that these votes could be comonted before it should lee finally determined whether the names ought to be on the voters' list or not? It is clearly the intention of the law that section bil shall not lee read by itself. It mast he real in comnection with what follows. It is not that sole section which decides what are the duties of the returning ofticer. His duties are limited and explained further liy section 61.: they are also linited by section bio, where, if a ballot box is missing, in aljournment is provided for, notwitiostanding the clear ami positive declarations of section (i) : they are further limited by section 63: and they are limited by the amemment of last year, which shows that the votes camot be counted until it is known whether those persons are really entitled to be so counted or not. In conformity with this construction of the law, you have this provision of section 64 :

[^6]interference of the House to protect itself against a grows wrong. I do not think we are called upon to put such a marrow construction on the Act. We must real all parts of the Act toggether ; we must look at its spirit and at the intention of Parliament as disclosed in the Act : and it is clear, in view of these provisions for a recount, that the returning otficer cannot make a return until it is decided whether those parties who have voted, and whose names are in appeal, were or were not entitled under the law to have the elective franchise. Now. Sir, let me real some circumstances comected with the declaration. Mr. Pritcharil is the returning officer in the city of London. Mr. Pritchard, when asked to delay making his declaration in accordance with the anmendment of the law of last year. said
" 1 have no hesitation or doubt in the matter. The question of the undecided appeals is in the hands of the Court of Appeal, and I have nothing to do with it."
Why, sir, he had everything to do with it. Then Mr. Magee, the comsel for Mr. Hyman, said :
"I would call sour attention to the words of sul,-section 2 of section 62 , and if for any other cause, the said returning officer cannot at the day and hour uppointed by him for that purpose ascertain the exact number of rotes, se.., he may therenpon adjourn to a future day."
Now, the number of cotes was not aseertainable, because those parties right to vote was a sulbject still pending. The returning officer opened ballot low number one and declared i3 votes polled for Mr. Carling and ! 0 for Mr. Hyman. Then Mr. Nagee saill:
"I call sour attention to the fact that there are six of these ballots cast for the Ilon. Mr. Carling which were deposited by persons whose right to be registered is disputed.'
It seems that instead of the different classes of hallots being kept separate as provided for ly section is, they were mingled together. Mr. Pritchard. the returning officer, said:
"I may as well state here that 1 have nothing to do with the question of the undecided appeals. I shall simply take the votes that are recorded for Mr. Carling and for Mr. Hyman."
Now, Sir, that is the question of tirst importance that this House is called upon to comsider : Hat he nothing to do with it" Hall he a right to proceed to sum up the good and the questioned votes together? I think it is clear from the provisions of the Act, that he had not to do it, that he had no power or right to make a return until that question was decided. If he made a return, it is guite clear that it could only be a special eeturna return stating that there were so many votes polled for Nr. Carling and so many for Mr. Hyman alout which there was no guestion, and that there were so many for Mr. Carling and so many for Mr. Hyman which were under appeal. But I think, looking at the provisions of the Act of last year, that it is gnite clear that no return of any sort ought to be made : no return such as the law contemplates can be made until it is decided whether these votes are to be struck off the list of those entitled to vote, or whether they are to remain. Until that takes place it is not possible to say with absolute certainty who has the majority of legal votes cast at an election. I am not going to discuss this sulbject further. I have brought this matter to the attention of the House, and have called its attention to the important yuestion of the necessity of insisting that all offieers shall conform to the law and discharge their duties in a fair and impartial manmer. I am informed ly telegram that the county juige has to-day the guestion of the undecided appeals iefore him; and, although in the latter part of November or the early part of December he ruled that he would not take any evidence when appealls were made by the Reform Committee, but would simply decide the question on the evidence as reported by the revising otticer, nevertheless to-day a different rule is to be adopted in regard to the other side. I hope that may prove to be an unfounded statement, or, if it is true, that His Honour may reconsider his determination and may act upon the same rule throughout. I think that the importance of the question justifies my bringing it before the House, and I think, also, that the House ought to accept the proposition laid down, that it ought to aceept this declaration of its rights and duties, because in my opinion the aloption of such a resolution would have a wholesome effect upon the officers of the Homse in the discharge of the very important duties which hate loeen asisigned to them.
sir JOHN THOMPsON. With the exception of one or two expressions in the resolution of the hon. member (Mr. Mills), I think it simply embodies a principle which is familiar to this House and :anout which, I suppose, there can be very little dispute. The exceptions to which I refer I will call the attention of the House to in a few moments, but, laying them aside for the present and considering the hom. gentleman's resolution as affirming an elementary rule as to the authority of this House over ofticers appointed to discharge duties in comection with the election of its members, I have still to ohserve that the attirmation of an undoubted principle may be untimely, and may serve a most improper purpose. It may be that a resolution atfirming that Mr. Pritcharil is the re turning otficer for the city of London, that Mr. Pritchard has certain duties to perform there, and that, if he does not discharge his duties properly, he may be brought to the lar of the House and punished, though it is what un one will deny, may be an interference with an officer who is discharging duties of the highest importance, not only to this House but to the constituency in which the election has taken place, and in that sense it is most untimely and is a proposition which this House should be asked to resist. The hon. gentleman has not attempted in any way to disguise the purpose of this resolution, nor has he claimed that theright of the Honse to supervise an election needs affirmation otherwise than as he thinks it necessary to invoke the authority of the House in order to interfere in a guestion which is now pending in regard to the election in the city of London. The hon. gentleman has avowed that he has moved this resolution, not lecause the principle is in doubt, because he says in the first part of his resolution that the right is undoulted, but it is because the matters which are in question in the London case may give rise to some question in the course of next week. Let me mention now the expressions in the resolution to which a few moments ago I said some exception might be taken, noturithstanding that it is the affirmation of a general principle about which there can be little doubt. These expressions refer to the circumstances which have arisen in this particular case, and the renarks of the hon. gentlenam justify the criticism and the objection that the resolation does not merely attirm" "that it is the muloubted right and duty of the Honse of Commons to see that the returning officers ate with perfect faimess towards the varionscamdidates," but that it proceeds to declare in the most open maniner that it is the duty. and right of the Honse to exercise supervision from time to time over the mamer in which those officers discharge their duties. Let me call the attention of the Honse to the extent to which that principle would carry us. It is admitted that it is the duty and right of the Honse to see that its officers act with perfect faimess, hut is it necessary, as this resolution aftirms, that this House shall supervise the comluct of the officer in every circunstance that may arise, that the House shall step in and declare hy its anthority that, for example, when the returning officer posts his motices, he shall post them in special places and at special times, that, in appointing deputy returning ofticers, he shall appoint those nominated by this House or by some other person outside of this House. or, the clection hating taken place, that we are to supervise the proceelings and to see whether Mr. Hyman or Mr. Carling is - -returned or not tole returned some day next week! If that is necessary, asattimed in this resolution, it may beclaimed to le necessary for this House to step in aul see that the ballots are properly comed and to see that the camdidate this House desires to seat should the returned by the returning ofticer. Why, Mr. Speaker, I need not call the attention of the House. I suppose, at any great length to the dangerous, to say nothing of the incomenient, consequences that would ensue if we were to place the discharge of the duties of these ofticers at the command of the majority of this Honse. Let us suppose the position to be reversel. let us :uppose that the appealed rotes in the city of London hail heen those of woters a majority of whom had roted for Mr. Hyman, and that it was proposed on this side of the Howse, to declare by the authority of this House that if the returning ofticer dared to return Mr. Hyman to this Honse, he would be liable to the authority of the Honse, all of which is vaguely shadowed-not vaguely shadowed but plainly shatowed and outlined in the phrases of this resolution. I conceive, sir, that hon. gentlemen opposite would leclare that it was such an attempt to coerce one of our officers ly the weight of the majority of this House that it would almost justify a revolution. Let me call the attention of the House to another phase of the question. The House has with great deliberation and following high authority, passed an Act to transfer jurisdiction in election cases to the courts of this country. The hon. gentleman states in his resolution, and he hais declared in his speech, that there are occasions in. which this House ought, notwithstanding that, to exercise the juriscliction which is still kept in reserve on the part of this House. He has made that argument to us more than once. Nobody disputes that the power still remains in this House to deal ly a political committee with the rights of the various candidates who contest an election, as was the case in days of old, but nobody of common sense will dispute that the measure transferring that jurisdiction to the courts voluntarily on the part of Parliament, after almost centuries of resistance of the clatim of the courts to that jurisdiction as a matter of right, was an enlightened proceeding, one that tends to conserve the liberty of the suliject, one that secures proper representation in the comatry, and that a reversion to the old method of trying those questions by a political committee woulilnotonly degrade Parlianent hat would roh the constitnencies of thein principal protection. Well, sir, the hon. gentleman iesires us to atfirm, and his argument mate this afternoon expresses a strong opinion, that we should assert contimumsly the right of this House to deal with such cases. He stated that that right is not in dispute. There are many rights in connection with the constitution which are not in dispute. There is the right of the sovereign to perform acts of exceutive administration without the adrice of the Minister, the pewer of the Sovereign to refuse ansent to a statute which has received the assent of hoth Honses of Parliament. but in relation to which, if that right were exercised, it wonld be an outrage on constitutional practice as understond by the comatry. Sir, I say in relation to the powersof this House trideal withelection proceelings. Which powers are kept in reserve, especially with regard to the aftirmation of those powers in times when there are guestions in controversy before any of the officers who are named in the resolution. that it is exceedingly umwise. against every principle of faimess, that the House should interfere hy the covert threat which is contained in a resolution of this kind. There is another gromil upon which the same view can be sustaned, and that is the utter absence of accurate information, amb of competency, to decide tinally on the part of this Honse itself. Hereare, in rehation to what the hom. gentleman has put before us, at least half a dozen statements, which are mixtures of law and of fact : and in some of these the basis is denied, while others are male avowedly upon mere mumor amd without any kind of proof. The hou. gentleman has quoted, for example, a telegran stating that something is to be done by the retuming officer next week before the Connty Court judge : but before six oclock he may find that that telegram wasentirely unfoumerl. For my part 1 decline to believe that the county judge, or the returning officer. on anyhouly else in connection with that election, will do other than his strict duty according to law: I should be rery much surprised if they returned Mr. Carlingor Mr. Hyman othernise than with the view to their strict accountatility for the discharge of the in, portant duties which devolve upon them in this crisis. For my patt, upon the question which the hon. gentleman has raised as to the right of the returning officer to make a return this week, as to the right of the comaty julge to take evidence, or to refuse to take evidence, upon the appealed rotes. I decline to-lay to express any opinion whatever, for the simple reason that if I weretodo so I would not only be prejudging the case which may come before us next week, hut I should be relieving these officers. which I have no idea of doing, of their responsibilities to this House and to the country in the ordinary course of law; I should be expressing an opinion, and aiding the hon. gentleman in putting lefore the returning officer an argument in favour of his adopting a certain course next week, when it may be that he will stand at a future day at the bar to receive the julgment of sir Johs Thomisos.
the House for doing wrong; I should be attempting to guide the returning ofticer in a matter, in relation to which he has dischargel hluties at every step, for the violation of which he is liable by statute to rery heavy penalties: and I have mo idea of putting that returning officer or that judge in the position of saving that the authority of this Honse, or the aththority even of myself, small as that authority may he, stamls hetween himand the: responsilility unker which he ought to discharge his duties. How are we to decide the question which the hon. genteman mentions, when he say:. he is informed that some person took oath $\cdot$ A.. contrary to latw: If it is necessaty for the House to exercise its super ision orer the way in which he performed his duties. how are we to tind out whether the persons took oath " X ," who ought mot to have taken oath " $\mathrm{S}^{\prime}$.....-

Mr. MILLA (Bothwell). No.
sir JOHN THOMBSON. Practically that, becanse, although the resolution sulbsuothing about oath " $X$." that ispart of theargament hy which the hon. gentleman sustains his resolution, it is partly in that riew that the hom. gentleman comes here and anss the House to attim a principle which he salys is undoulted, and yet in respect of which as an urgent matter, the House should express an opinion this afternow. But the hon. gentleman is not in a position to tell us that anylmoly tork oath . . ${ }^{*}$ " who ought not to take that gath.

Mr. MlLLS (Bothwell). 1 may say that the oath " $X^{\prime \prime}$ is the oath which is required to be taken liy parties in appeal. I simply mention the fact that in consequence of the names leing upon the list, it was contembed, and the deputy retuming officers atmitted, that they were entitled to take the regular oath instean of the special oath which is prescribed by the stathte.

Nir JOHN THOMPSON. And the hem, gentlematn is not able to tell us that they did mot take oath $\cdots$.

Mr. MILLCe (Bothwell). Yes, lam.

sir IOHN THOMPSON. The hom. gentleman, I have no doubt, is so informed; but surely there is mothing in the information which has been conreyed tohim, or that he has intimated to the Honse, to induce the Honse to pronomece juigment with regarel to what has heen done with appaled votes, and with regard to the mamer in which they have been left upon the list. The hon. gentleman has made an argument to the House as to there heing no reason why these votes should he kept separate. With regard to all these matters, if it is true that we are to exercise our authority whenever an otficer has done wrong, it is most important that until he has done wrong we should express mo opinion, and no judgment, about the case ; because he would then be in a position not only of saying: Sou have completely relieved me of my responsibility umder the law; but he will be in a position to tell us that we have prejulged his case hefore we have hearlit. Now, the hon. gentlemanhas gone intoother phases of the Londoncase. He has referred to the telegram ahout what the judge is going to do: he has made an argument upon the Act of last session : he has considered all the phases of this question, not only as they have occurred, but as they may possibly come up in the near future. Now, I do not propose to the Honse this afternoon, that we should either athirm the principle which the hon. gentleman asks us to atfirm, or that we should refuse to athiniz it. But I lo think the Honse, while treating as beyond guestion the principle contained in the hon. gentleman's resolution, in so far as it is clear and undisputed, should at the same time decline to express an opinion which will either commit the House to a future julgment in this case, or relieve any person of his responsibility with respect to it. The hon. gentleman referred us to a case which occurred in 1875 , in whieh Mr. Blake and the late Sir John Macionalid both agreed that the power of the House remained intact, notwithstanding the legislation which gave juriseliction to the courts: but I think the hon, gentleman forgot the lesson which that debate conveyed, and it was this : that the leaders of looth sides of the House consented, notwithstanding that the power remained in the House, that the Honse ought to absolutely refuse to interfere with respect to particular cases or persons while they were still in controversy. The position of this case is further illustrated hy cases that a number of us have here. I will not refer to any positive attempt, becanse I presume at the outset that one must acpuit any hom. member of this House of making any attempt in this resolution, or in this dehate, to influence the jutgment of any judicial officer in this comutry: but if it be proper for us, in alrancesof any decision, to take up details of the Lomion ase, which is partly, we are told. hefore the returning officer and partly before the county julge, how is it that last session we did not take up in detail the case of every member who harl an election petition against him, and diseuss its merits, and say, we yesterday received a telegram of certain corrupt practices committed in that gentleman's county, and atfirm hy resolution that we had full authority in these cases, notwithstanding the statute giving jurisdiction to the judges, and stating that we proposed to exercise it whenever necessary : And how is it we did not diseuss the principles of lict which arose on those petitions, and express an opinion by resolution of the Honse, or, at all events in dehate ly the speeches of nembers of high standing in their profession, or high authorities on constitutional questions, for the purpose of guiding the decisions of judges who were to try them" Perhaps, the hon. gentleman, in view of the fact that some of us are still in the position of having our cases before the courts, has still in view an idea of invoking the authority of this House to discuss, if not to decide, the election cases which are still pemaling. We might just ats well do so, we might do so with just as much propricty, and with as much fainess, and with as mach prospect of receiving the respect of the country, as to discuss the London election case. What T propose to the House is the following amendment :-

That all the words after "That" be struck out of the motion and that the following be substituted therefor:While it is the right and duty of this House to enquire into and punish any unfairness or misconduct on the part of any officer who has duties imerosed on him in the election of a member of the House, and while the powers given to the courts for the trial of election petitions does not lessen the authority of the House over any stach officer, the House will. at all tiones refrain from expressing any opinion or taking any action which would involve or implyan interference in any unfinished proceeding of any such officer or which might lessen the responsibility of any such officer or his obligation to proceed with his various duties according to the best judgment in which he is able to form in regard thereto.
One purpose which may he served by the amend. ment is an expression of the principle to which the hon. gentleman referred. The resolution referred especially to returning officers. In so far as it may he proper to attirm a general principle, I propose to atfirm thls principle as applicable to all officers who have luties in connection with the elections. The hon. gentleman mentioned returning officers and all other ofticials simply becanse he proposed to base his argument aml his attack on what one returning officer had slone, or to direct what that returning officer should do hereafter, although I almit he added the words "other ofticials" as well. The expression, in so far as it is proper to make it, that the duties of all officers connected with the elections must he discharged with perfect fainness to the camlidates, is one that should apply to every ofticer charged with duties of that kind, and I have no ohjection to affirming that general principle : hat it will be proper for the Honse, in view of the special circmastances under which this resolution has heen brought to its notice, to ilecline to express the view that the House ought to interfere with respect to any proceenting which is yet untinished on the purt of any such otficer. I have thonght that the more necessary becanse, as I have alrealy mentioned, the hom. gentleman's restution declares. or intimates at all events, the necessity of supervising the discharge of the duties of thoseothicers, aul theexpression " supervise "convegs something more than mere review and something more than mere power of punishment if any wrong shonh be done intentiomally.

Mr. LAURIER. I do not think there is much more fanlt to le found with the annendement than there was fanlt to be fomm with the motion itself. The hon. Minister stated at the opening of his rematks that on general principles he did not very materially dissent from the motion submitted by my hon. friem. I take the same view with regaril to the amenhment, and I do not dissent very much from the position therein laid down. I quite agree that it would not he proper for the House to interfere with any afticer of the House in the proper discharge of his duty. The motion of my hon. friend did not propose to do so. It only covered the general principles, which, as he stated, it is well to recall and re-attirm, for although they are well known, there may be occasions when it is desirable to bring them to the attention of all officers of the House. The answer of the Minister of Justice was that if an officer improperly discharged his duties he was always liable to be brought to the har of the House, and there receive alequate punishment. But the hon. gentleman will agree with me that when the law is ambiguous, and when an officer has a duty to discharge in regard to which he may be macertain as to what course to follow, it would be better to give him adrice than afterwards to bring him to the bar of the House for punishment. I itgree with him that it would he improper for the House under any circumstances, to dictate to the officers what they should do, and how they should discharge their duties, reserving to the House, of course, the power-not reserving it, becaluse it exists as a matter of course-to review the action of the officer. But, Sir, there is an immense lifference, I conceive, between the House interfering with the proper discharge of a duty by an officer, and the other proposition which is this: That when the law is ambngons and the officer is called upon to discharge certain duties of a dubions character, then if the Minister of Justice gives advice with the consent anl with the knowledge of the House, it seems to me that all the ents of justice would he properly met. Let us take the present case. At a certain stage when the lists arere being printen the revising officer, whether he sought advice or not. received the alvice of the Department of Justice as to the mamer in which he should discharge his duty, am he discharged his duty aceordingly, not in the light of his own judgment as I conceive, but in the light of the advice that was given him by the Minister of dustice. He had sent the list to be printed in a certain manner, omitting from that list the names which were subject to appeal : but ineon the alvice which was then tendered him by the Minister of Justice he reversed his action and then he ordered the list to be printed, not as he haddirected it should be printed, hat with the addition of the names which were subject to appeal. Well, we have proceded to another step in this matter. We have reached this stage, that the vote has leen taken, that the names which have been objected to have cast their votes and properly cast their votes: I find mo fault with that. Whether it was done one way or the other the elements of justice require that these woters should be allowed the privilege of recording their opinion as long as their right to do so was pending before a court of justice. We come to this stage : whether or not these cotes are to be counted in the result. The proposition which was laid down by my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Mills), and the proposition upon which the House would have heen gratified to have the opinion of the Minister of Justice, was this: that these votes, though they are recorded, though it can be ascertained for whom they have voted, if they have a right to rote, though their votes cam weigh the balance in the scale, still it would be against all justice that a return should be made in that matteruntilandonly after such time as the courts have decided whether or not they are gualified to vote. This was the proposition laid down by my hon. friend, and this was the proposition which he intends to have recorded, and upon which he wanted to test the opinion of the Houss, and especially of the Minister of Justice. I am sorry, for my part, that the Minister of Justice did not choose to express an opinion upon, or did not even choose to amounce anything more than his opinion. It would not be fair, it would not be right, it would not be law either, that any returns should be made until and only after such time as the conuts of justice which are now in possession of the question have decided and determined whether or not these rotes upon which the election must finally depend, should be counted or not comited. The Minister of Justice, instead of giving an opinion on this point-which is to me a point of so elementary justice that it is not possible to have two opinions on it-remains absolutely silent, and he says: No: we shall not interfere with the discharge of his duty by the ofticer, but if he fails he shall he brought to the bar of the House and made to answer for his delinquency. Would it not be infinitely more proper that instead of reserving to ourselves the right to punish that delinguent officer
-- delinguent perhaps only in judgment, and not in intention-would it not be better to say at once what is, in the opinion of the House, the law on the sulvect and to have this opinion of the House as a guide for him to act upon? The question is: shall we or shall we not have a return in this matter, before the point has heen decided by the courts whether or not these voters which are now in appeal have the right to rote? That is themly proposition after all to be debated here now. The hon. gentleman says that we have to determine it next week. It is true we may have to determine it next week, when possibly gross injustice is done to the one or to the other candidate. There would be no pretension on this side of the House-eren if the majority of these votes had been recorded in farour of MIr. Hyman instead of having heen recorded in fatrour of Mr. Carling, as it is said they have been recorded-there would be no pretension on this side of the House, if the majority of the votes were recorded in favour of Mr. Hyman, to have Mr. Hyman's return postponed until the right of these roters who have passed their rotes had heen determined. Sio.long as the matter is pending it seens to me that there cam be no injustice and no interference with the proper jurisdiction of the officer. to affirm solemnly on the floor of this House-if not by resolution, at least hy the exchange of opinions, which often takes place-that mo return should be made until the right of these voters shall have been determined. siir, this is the only proposition which is made. My hon. friend, in the drafting of his resolution carefully abstained-I will not say minutely--- to go into the particulars of any case, and as I understood my hon. friend, the object which he had in view was not only to attirm a solemn principle, as to which there can be no possible discussion ; bat rather to have at this moment a discussion upon the law as it stamds to day with a view, I do not disguise it, of serving as a guide to the returning officer as to how he should act in this matter. I am sorry to say that the resolution has not been met in the spirit in which it was offered. I am sorry to say that the Minister of Justice, instead of receiving it in this way, hats chosen to reserve the powers of the law to tireaten the returning officer with condign punishment if he does not act as he should act. The trouble is that the"question arises, how should he act: It scems to me his duty is clear, but therearedifferent opinions upon it. As to the amendment proposed by the Minister of Justice, as I said a moment ago, it seems to me to be perfectly unobjectionable in substance. I am sorry to say, however, that it is an evasion of the principle which was proposed to the House, and whic! it was certainly suitable that the House should accept at the present time.

Mr. MONCRIEFF. Yesterday afternom, Mr. Speaker. I detained the House for a short time, in discussing the questions which had been raised by the hom. menber for Bothwell (Mr. Mills), which were in the first place : Who are the proper persons to be counted as voters according to the Franchise Act; andsecondly, the question whether voters who had been entered upon the listasappeal voters, should becountedor not, when the deputy returning officer is adding up the votes in the ballot boxes. If think, Mr. Speaker, that upon thatguestion perhapsenough was said yesterday. I can assure this Honse, at any rate, that whaterer wats saill upon the guestion omly refers to matters that had taken place and had passed, atul that I did not anticipate, nor would 1 for one moment anticipate, what might he the action of any officer of this Honse in the future. Now, sir, can any hon. gentleman who has heard the remarks of the two speakers on the Opposition sile of this Honse come to any other conclusion bat that this motion has direct reference to the election of Mr. Carling in the city of London: Can any person come to any other conclusion than that it is a motion calling for an expression of opinion ly this House as to how the ofticers in London should perform their duties: It is either that, or else it is introluced for the purpose of intimidating thoseofficersin the discharge of theirduties. In either case I leprecate the resolution from the first worl of it to the last. We are asked ly it to assert the rights of this Honse. Who is tampering with the rights of this House, I should like to know? We areasked to indicate to all ourothicers throughout the country that we are going to exercise our powers over them. This resolution is particularly pointed at the returning officer, the revising barrister and the county judge of the County of Middlesex. As such it is a most improper resolution. The first step the hon. member for Bothwell takes is to call for the voters list : and he follows that up with this particular resolution which applies to ne person in the Dominion of Canada other than the three officers in the city of London. I think it would have been much more proper if the hon. gentleman had moved a resolution to the effect, that this House should ate fairly towards all its revising officers and all other officers umder its control. That would have been more in accordance with the way in which this House has aluays acted in regard to its officers. The hon. member for Bothwell, in the early part of his remarks, said that he found "that authority was about to be abused." What does that mean: He referred to the election in the city of London, and to the conduct of the officers there. He said that he foum this resolution to he necessary, and that this House ought to assert its dignity and its powers. Now, I feel that there is no fear whatever that anthority is going to be abused in the city of Lombon. The otficers there are men of the highest integrity. not only the julge, but the revising barrister and the gentleman who acted as retmrning officer: I have every contidence that thase gentlemen will discharge their duties faithfully and properly, and I deprecate any intimation leeing made in this House ly any gentleman on one side or the other, which would indicate to them in the slightest way what this House or any individual member of it thought their duty to be. The hon. member for Bothwell deliberately troik the bull by the horns and told this House that it was impossible for the returning officer in the city of London to declare Mr. Carling elected until six days after the county judge had given his decision on the appealed rotes. I am not discussing now whether he is right or wrong. I do not propose to discuss that, beciuse that would be an indication that I thought the hon. memher was right or wrong. The hon. gentleman asked an expression of opinion from the hom. Minister of Justice on this point, and the hom. leader of the Opposition remarkel that he thought it would be better that the hoin. Minister of Justice should suggest a course by which the returning ofticer wonld know that he, the Minister of Justice, thought that he ought not to return Mr. Cirling in the neantime. Why, Mr. Speaker. I never heard of such a thing hefore. I think. I may venture to say, that if fou were to search through Han.ared for the last twenty years, you would not time such a promosition ever mande on the floor of this Honse during that time. Now. I do not for one moment think that the hom. lealer of the Opposition could have considered carefully the remarks he made, because he introrluced his speech lys stating that heagreed in every way with the amending resolution of the hom. the Minister of Justice: But what did he drift into before he got through? Why, sir, he drifted into the very same argment as the hom. member for Bothwell, contending, that no return should be made by the returning officer of Lomdon until six days had expired after the time the county judge had decided on the appealed rotes. There we find both of them hand-in-glove together, determined if possible, by hook or ly erook, to squeeze some expression of opinion or direction from the hon. the Minister of Justice as to what the returning otticer in the city of Lomdon should do. I amperfectly sure that if the parties in this House changed places tomorrow, and if the hon. leader of the Opposition were on this side as Minister of Justice, he would deprecate, in far stronger language than $I$ have done, any attempt to syuceze from him a direction to any returning officer or comity judge in this Dominion. Now, Sir, I intend not to saly any thing in reference to the votes in the city of London, but simply to meet in a couple of words the contention of the hon. member for Bothwell as to who should have voted at that election and who should be comenter. I would like to call his attention to a misconception or misrealing of section ati which he has alopted. That section provides that at the close of the poll the returning ofticer is to count the number of cotes given for each cambilate in the ballot boxes, and that in loing so he shall reject three classes of papers, and he is to reject mo more. He is to reject those ballots which have not heen supplied by the deputy returning otticer: secondly, atl those by which votes are given for more camlidates than are to be elected ; and thims, all those on which there is any writing or mark by which the voter can be indentitied. Yon will not find in this section or in any other any prowision that he is to reject any others, except, as the hom. member for bothwellcontends, are inferentially tobe excluded in the next sub-section. But I believe that he himself will concede that I ann correct in stating that the section which I have just mentiomen, refers to counting the rotes, whereas the next sul). section, as the marginal note imicates, refers only to what is to bedone with the billots after the votes are coment

"The other ballot papers being counted,"- That is, every other hallot paper with the exception of the three classes I have named ---- "The other ballot papers being counted, and a list kepi of the number of votes given to each candidate and of the number of rejected ballot papers, all the ballot papers-'
That is, after this count has heen had -- - -"all the ballot papers indicating the votes given for each candidate respectively, except as in this section is hereinafter, provided, shall be put into separate envelopes or parcels.
Are they to he put up into separate envelopes before being comoted: By no neans. Every vote in the ballot box is to be counted lefore the separation takes place. and this sulb-section only directs the deputy returning officer what to do with them after hitving heen counted. The hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) asked what was the object of separating the ballot papers, and inferentially from What he said it might be understom that he thought they should not le counted.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). I did unt say that.
Mr. MONCRIEFF. 1 said inferentially.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). I spose of section is and pointed ont that they were to be enmmenated separately.

Mr. MONCRIEFF. You asked what was the purpose of separating those hallots from the others. I will tell you the purpose. Every one is the suh. jeet of appeal, and those votes must go before the judge and have to be decided upon ly the judge of the Comaty Court as to whether the persons who cast them are properly on the list or not. It hats to be ascertained what propertion of those were cast for Mr. Hyman and what proportion for Mr. Carling. If they were not numbered and put in separat: envelopes, there womla he no way of indentifying the voter. or telling what proportion of them was east for the one or the other. Von referred to section is, which says:

Abstract

The depnty returning oflicer shall make out an statewent of the accepted ballot papers, of the number of votes given to cach candidate, of the ballot papers counteil which were deposited by persons whose right to be registered on the list of voters and to vote, and by persons the exclusion of whose names from the list of voters inpeared by, the said list to be the subject of undecided appeals.,

This speaks of the two cliasses of ballot papers, but you will not find any place, though the separation is mate for comenience, where it is directed that these votes shall not lee comited. On the other hamd, it is stated that the rotes in every ballot box are to be countel except in the three classes I have referred to. Section fil directs the returning officer to add together the number of votes given for each candidate acoording to the statements contained in the several hallot foxes made ley the tepaty returning officers from the ballot papers counted by them. The deputy returning offieers are directed to count the votes, and the returning officer is toll to ahll them together. I shomld mot have alluded to this point had it not been alrealy diseussed. These votes have been added up, by the returning officer in the city of Lomion. The hon. member for bothwell (Mr. Nills) igave a resume of the law as to coters' lists, to show how it was amemeed, the different courts the lists were in, and the expressions of the different judges that had leen given in regard to them. In the main, I think he was probably correct. In some matters, I think he has probably been misinformed, but I do not think it necessary to take up the time of the House in going over them. I think the position of the matter at the present time is this, that there are a number of appeals as to voters whose names were on the voters list, and who formed the class of voters that were marked "A" on the list we have had laid on the Table, and that the right of their voting is at present a subject of appeal before the comnty jurlge of the County of Midillesex. What the proportion of those voters who voted for the elifferent candidates is. 1 dor not know, except hy hearsay, and I do not particularly. care, hat it must le remembered that the intention of the hon. gentlemen opposite is to throw some reflection upon the otticers in London, and perhaps upon those woters. I ann not aware that these vores have been ilecided. I mulerstami they are under appeal, amd the julge has a right ${ }^{\prime \prime}$ leal with them according to the statute. I am not aware that at this monent the appeal is lefore the julge. I have not received any telegram telling me what the judye is about tordo a the hom. member for Bothwell claims to have. and if 1 had received one 1 des not think I would make the mistake of stating on the flomo of this House what course I had heard that the juige of the County of Middlesex intemded to take. I do not intend to detain the House further. The terms of the amemelment of the Minister of Justice are entirely in aceordance with my views, as I think that all officers, inclating those of the city of Lomonn. unIlerstand that this House explects that every officer. will fol his duty faithfully and anscientionsly. and will make proper returns to this House.

CONTROVERTED ELECTION.

Mr. SPEAKER informed the Honse that he had received from the Hon. Mr. Justice Palmer and the Hon. Mr. King, two of the judges selected for the trial of election petitions, pursuant to the Dominion Controverted Elections Act, a certificate relating to the Flectoral District of Queen's, N.B., by which certificate George Frellerick Bairl, Esci., is declared to be the dinly elected member to represent the said electoral district. In conformity with Chapter 9, Nection 46, of the Revised Statutes of Canada, he had issued his warnant to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, directing him to amend the return to the writ of the last election for the said clectomal district, by expunging therefrom the name of Gerrge (ierald King. Esq., and substituting in lieu thercof the name of (ieorge Frederick Baird, Ess., as the duly elected member to represent the said electoral district in the Honse of Commons.

He also informed the House that the Clerk of the Honse had received from the Clerk of the Crown in chancery, a certificate to the effect that the writ had heen duly amemled.

NEW MEMBERs.

Mr. SPEAKER further informed the House that the Clerk of the House had received from the Clerk of the Crown in Cinancery, certificates of the election and return of the following mem. hers:---
Of Johs Llarn. Esq., for the Electoral District of Quchec West: and Of Joseph Girocimb. Eisi., tor the Electoral District of Iwo Momitains.

MENBER INTRODUCED).

Fraseis G. Furbres. Esi, Member for the Electoral District of Queen's, N.S.; introduced br Mr. Laurier and Mr. Flint.

FISHING BOUNTY ACT AMENDMENT

Mr. TUPPER moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. $\boldsymbol{J}$ ) to amend Chapter ?fis of the Revisel Statutes, intituled: "An Act to encourage the development of the Sea Fisheries and the louilding of Fishing Vessels." He said: The House may have observed that I laid on the Table the other day a return in compliance with section 4 of the Act relating to the distribution of the bounty. That paper comtained the Orders in Comalil and the regulations under which the bounty for the last fiscal year was distributed. But section 3, which I propose to ask the Honse to repeal, has lieen practically a dead letter ever since it was on the Statute-hook. That section enacts that in addition to the return which 1 brought down, there shall be laid on the Table of the Honse a statement of the mode in which it is proposed to distribute the bonnty in the ensuing year. It has been found in practice impossible, ormost inconvenient, tonlo that, so much so that the House has never required it, nor has its attention been called to the fact that the return has never been made. This can only be ascertained at the end of the distribution, because the amount payable to each man either lessens or increases according to the experience of the department of the number of claims which were found entitled to the bounty during the preceding year. If such a statement were laid before the House, the hauls of the department would be so tied that a distribution made on that hasis in the following season would probably more than swallow up the amount of the appropriation. As the attempt was made last year to keep strictly within the amount appropriated by Parliament for this ohject, I propose now to ask the House to strike out section 3.
Motion agreed to ; and Bill read the first time.

CANADA TEMPERANCE ACT.

Mr. FLINT moved for leare to introluce Bill (No. 6) to amend the Canala Temperance Act of 1888. He said: This is substantially a repetition of the Bill intronluced hy me last session, which passed its secomd reading, but did not reach its third reathing.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

P. E. I.-..sUbMarine tennel.

Mr. PERRY asker, Whether it is the intention of the (iovernment during the present session to cause further survers and bearings to be made across the Straits of Xorthmberland from Prince Edward Island to the mainland, with the view of obtaining further information, with that already obtained, to enable the dovermment to ask for tenders to build it tumel across said stazits with as little delay as possible:

Mr. FOSTER. The dovernment at present has this matter umler consideration.

TIGNISH Wharfinger fees.

Mr. PERRY asked, Whether the Minister of Marine and Fisheries has taken any atton to recover from Benjamin (iandet, late wharfinger at Tignish Break water, Prince Elward Islamd, money; or fees collecten hy him churing the years 1890 and 1891 and not accounted for to the department :

Mr. TUPPER. Action has been taken. A demand has been mate umon the late whanfinger for the amount due, which is about $$ 15$.

THE NEWFOUNDLAND bATT ACT.

Mr. KAULBACH asked, When will copies of all correspondence relative to the Newfoundland Bait Act he laid on the Table of the House? What position has the Govermment of Canada taken to induce the diovermment of Newfoundland to sus. pend the operation of said Act against Camada, and Canadian fishermen: Also, what action has the Imperial Government taken through their Colonial Secretary, as respects Newfomdland's discrimination in said Bait Act against Canada. after having had the assurance from the Newfoundland (iovernment that said Act should not operate adversely against British or Camadian fishermen?
Mr. TUPPER. The correspondence referred to will be brought down as soon as an answer can be obtainel from Her Majesty's Government as to whether a certain protion of it shall be influded in the return or not. The return is all ready, with that exception. As to the second branch of the question, all possible representations have heen made on this subject both to the Government of Newfoundland iul to Her Majesty's Govermment, and a full explanation on that point, as well as the answer to the other branch of the guestion, will be laid on the Table at an early date.

Mr. LAURIER. What does the hon. gentleman mean by an early diate: Has he to wait for an answer from Her Hajesty's Government?
Mr. TUPPER. The delay is simply caused because we have to obtain the consent of Her Majesty's Government to the submission of a certain portion of the documents. We do not anticipate any difficulty is to that, hat we have not yet the permission which we expect to receive at an early date.

(GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS NINCE CONFEDERATION.

Mr. MA('IONALI) (Huron) moved for :

Statement of all (iovermment contracts let by tender from 1st July, 18tio, to lst July, ls91, to contain the following information: 1st. Names and residences of parties tendering for each work; 2nd. The amount of each tender in each case; 3rd. The names of parties in all cases obtaining the contract : 4th. In cases where the lowest tenders were not accepted. the reasons for non-acceptance: 5th. Where deposits were required to accompany each tender, the percentage of amount of tender required. If not, the cases in which it was not refunded, demanded or not received ; 6th. Whether deposits were returned to any tenderer who refused to accept the contract when called on to comply with the specifications upon which his tender was based, the names of the parties, and the reasons for returning deposits.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I think I must ask the hon. member for Huron to reconsiler the motion, which is a very extensive one, and to reflect as to whether the object he wishes to accomplish could not be oltained by some less expensive mode. This return would reguire the examination, classification and copying of some $3(0), 000$ or $4(0), 000$ contracts. There are about $\mathbf{- 0 , 0 0 0}$ or $80,0(0)$ in the Post Oftice Departmentalone, and it would require the employment of a large staff for some years tocomplete this return. I have no doubt there is some information which the hon. gentlemandesires which we could get at more easily and cheaply than the whole of this which he asks by his motion.

Mr. MACIONALI)(Huron). I would bewilling to confine the motion to Public Worksand Railways. I think there is a return bringing that down to 1878, hut I have been unable to find it. If the Minister will consent, I will confine this to those departments.

Mr. SPEAKFR. Then the motion will have to be amended in that way.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Perhaps the hon. gentleman would make some limitation in regard to this. Some of these contracts are very trivial, only for a few dollars, but I presume he refers to the more important contracts. The return to which he refers, which was brought down to 1878, might le continued to the present time, though it would take a long time to do that, especially during the session. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will take a little time to consider whether he could not make some limitoin the extent of the return he desires.

Mr. LAURIER moved the aljourmment of the debate.

Motion agred to, and debate adjourned.

BOUNDARIES OF THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN. I would have desired to proceed with my motion in reference to the north-western, northern and eastern boundaries of the Province of Quebec to-day ; but, for some reason, no doubt a very good one, the members for the Province of Quebec are for the most part away. Therefore, I would ask that it should remain on the Order paper.

Motion postponed.

Mr. Teptek.

EXPORTS AND IMPORTS.

Mr. sU'TherlaNi) (for Sir Richaki CartWRI:HT) moved for:
Return, in the form used in the statements usually published in the Gazette, of the Exports and Imports from the lst day of July, 1891, to the 1st day of March, 1892, distinguishing the products of Canada from those of other countries: and comparative statements from the 1st day of July, 1890, to the lst day of Mareh, 1891.

Mr. Bownel.L. There is no objection to the return, in fact it is a periolical one. I have to repeat what I have said on a number of occasions in the past. that it is impossible to liring cown the returns for some little time. As the House will readily understand, in order to make it complete we must have the reports from the different ports, and until they are received, the return camot be completed or mate out. But the return will he lat hefore the House as soon as the information is received at the department.

Motion agreed to.

RETURN: ORDEREI).

Copies of all petitions, correspondence, vouchers, depositions, inspectors* reports and documents whatsoever, respecting the dismissal of B. Loiselle. Esq., postmaster of the Parish of Ste. Angele. County of Rouville.-(Mr. Sutherland for Mr. Brodeur.)
That the Clerk do lay on the Crable a statement of the number of petitions for Prohibition presenited to the House of Commons during the session of 1891. (1.) Total number of petition spresented. (2.) Total numberot signatures to these petitions. (3.) Number of (1) petitions : (2) signatures: ( (1) Presbyterian Church; (6) Methodist Church; (6) Baptist Church (separate figures for Free Baptists) : (d) Episcopal Church of England; (e) Salvation Army. (4.) Number of (1) petitions: (2) signatures from each Province and each Territory; name and figures for each Province and each Territory separately. (5.) Number of separate petitions from Church, Courts and Temperance Societies, or any other bodies signed by officials, giving name of Church, Court, Temperance Societies, &c., sending such petitions, with number of signatures.-(Mr. Fraser.)

RETURN:--ENQUIRIFS.

Mr. LANDERKIN. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to remind the dovernment that about the midille of last session an Orrler of the House was passed asking for a return of the expenditure in the different electoral districts under three heads, viz. : Public buildings, harlours and rivers, and railways. I wonld like to know when it will be brought down:
sir JOHN THOMPSON. I will ascertain tomorrow and inform thehon. gentlemanhow it stands.

Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). I begto call the attention of the House and the Govermment to the fact that the return I asked for in reference to Speaker's Warrants, writs of election, and the Oaler in Comcil appointing the returning officer, is not complete. There are no canses assigned. I take, for instance, the election in Quebec West. The date of the Speaker's Warrant is the 29 th December, the date of the Order in Council appointing the returning officer is the 9th Felirnary following, and the issue of the writ is on the same date. I notice that the issue of the writ is, in nearly every instance, the date of the appointment of the returning officer, and a very wide period of time has elapsed between the date of the Speaker's Warrant and the Order in Council appointing the returning ofticer. Now, I supposed when I movedmy motion, that where chere was any reason for this delay, it would be assignet.

It may be that in some instances the voters' list was in preparation and was not ready, but the date of the receipt of the roters' list and the date of the printing, it seems to me, ought to be given where those are the justification, and if they are not the justification relied upon, any other reason for this long lapse of time between the issue of the warrant and the appointment of the returning officer, should be stated.
sir JOHA THOMPSON I understand the return called for the reasons of the delay, and if so, the retum laid upon the Table can, of course, only be considered as a partial return. It has not been before the (iovermment or any member of it, and the reasons for the delay require to le assigned by the department. Therefore as soon as we have had an opportunity of examining this return, we will supply the data.
sir JOHN THOMPSON moved the aljourmment of the House.

Motion agreed to : and House adjourned at $3: 5 \mathrm{a}$ ) p.in.

MEVHFR INTROD)U(ED).

Joseph Gimocimi. Esi.: Member for the Electoral District of Two Mountains: introduced by Sir John Thompson and Mr. Onimet.

THE (RIMINAL LAW.

Nir IOHS THOMPSON moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 7 ) respecting the Criminal Law. He satid: This Bill is substantially the same as that introluced last sessiom, but it contains some improvements which have been suggested in consequence of the cireolation of the Bill, and which I will explain to the Honse more fully on the second reading.

Motion agreed to. and Bill read the first time.

WRECKIN: IN (CANADBAN WATERS.

Mr. BOWVELL moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. S) relating to salvage and wrecking. He said: This Bill is somewhat similar in character to that which was introlaced a couple of sessions ago by the hon. memberfor Frontenac (Mr. Kirkpatrick), with the additions for which those who opposed it at the time contemed. It gives to American wreckers and salvage companies the right of wrecking and salvage in Canadian waters, together with all other privileges which are necessary in order to make that right of any use. I might also atd that the American fiovernment, or those who represent that Government, have consented to extend the provisions of their Bill in the line of this measure, which will give the Canalian wreckers the same privileges in American waters that we are giving to American wreckers in Camadian waters.

Mr. LAURIER. I apprehend that this Bill is one of the results of the visit lately paid to Washington by some of the Canadian Ministers. I take this occasion to ask the Govermment if they have, or if they propove to lay on the Table, any correspondence that preceded or any papers relating to what took place in comnection with that visit, or if they are purely informal and not to be presented to the House "

Sir JOHN THOMPNON. There is some correspontence which can he laid on the Table of the House, aml $I$ am able to say that nothing which transpired is predmied from heing mentioned in the Honst:

Mr. IAUPIER. Is there ally writing to that effect. or is it purely verinal:
sir IOHN THOMIPSON. Yes. writing.
Mr. LACRIER. I presume we shall hate it at ath carly day.

Sir.Jolf THOMDPON. Yes.
Motion agreed to, and bill reat the tirst time.

THELOBNTER FINHERIRA.

Mr. TUl'PER moved for leave to introluce Bill (No. 9) tof further amend the Fisherics Act, Chapter 9.) of the Revised Statutes. He salid: There are several clanses of minor importance in this Bill. Its main olject is to provide foir placing the lohster fisheries of Canala moler license. Into that sub. ject, which is a rery important one and requires considerahle explanation, I will, with the permision of the House, enter more fully on the second reading. Heretofore, the policy of the department has been to interfere as little as possible with the deep sea fisheries: anl therefore the license system, which hass been in force so many years in the inland waters of Canada, has mot obtained to any great extent in the sea coasts. We have, linwerer. adopted the license system in cimnection with varions matters, such is traps for cod and mackerel. and tixed tishing engines of different characters, regulating the number and position of the varions engines on the const, in the same way as we enlearour to regulate and control the fisheries of the inland waters. In reference to the lobster fisheries. the department has embearoured in various ways for years to prevent what promised to be a speedy termination of that most valuable and important branch of the fishing industry: We have hat the example of almost every country in the world suffering the loss of this very lucrative industry it conserpuence of failing to ithopt proper regulations, or adopting them too late, Neveral clanses in this Bill have in view the (iovermment taking charge of the lohster fisheries, which are in such imminent clanger of extermination, and permitting no one to engage in that intiastry except under license. Under the ohd regulations we emlearoured to save the lobster tisheries by providing for close seatsons. restricting the tishing to within a comparatively few months in the yeur. That has lone some gool : but we have found by experience that the officers. whom the provisions of the law allowed the department to employ. were wholfy unable to cope with the various attempts made by those interested to evade and violate those regulations. We have found, erery season since I have leen connecter with the Department of Marine and Fishories, that the unvarying experience in the different districts has been that the regulations have leen systematically violated. Many of the packers intended to violate then, but the worse that would happen in their case would be a fine on the occasion of a visit from an officer. It would take an enormous sum to provide officers for all the different districts where this industry is carried on. We have never attempted to do that, and I would not he prepared to ask Parliament, and I io not think Parliament would he prepared to grant, a sufficient sum to make it certain that the regulattions would be rigidly observed; but with the license system it is possible to carry out the law, becanse we can make the licensee give bomols to carry this ont. I will not weary the House further, except to say that many of the sections; relate to the machinery by which we propose to grant licenses. There are nominal licenses to be granted to the fishermen without fee, amel there are lieenses whe granted to the packers with a fee. We distributed a iraft of these regulationsto the various districts interested, and the dispartment has the gratifying information from the majority of those who have communicated with the depaitment on the subject. that the amemelments would have a very gool effect. There are also one or twonecessary amendments to le maie to the Fisheries Act. It. has been found that the section proviting that explosives should not be nsed for the killing of seals, porpoises and whales does not need the use of explosives. and particularly dynamite, which have been very improperly used for the killing of other fish, so that provision hats leeen extemided to prevent the use of explosives in any calse.

Mr. M1LLS (Bothwell). Is that in the deep sea:
Mr. TUPPERR. There is mo special regulation in regard to the deep sea. The suggestion was once made in a State deppateh that some evil-risposed tishermen might try to use explosives on the hanks of Newfomiland in the deep sea, lout that would give rise to a nice question of intermational law, and it might reguire us to wait mutil legislation was abtainerl from all nations on that suliject. However, 1 am mot flealing with any such deep question now. Another point is that we propose to increase the penalties, heciase $\mu$, to this time the regulations have been aluost mugatory lecanse the delinguent finds that it pays better to violate the law and pay the penalty than to oley the law. We. therefore propose to increase the penalties. Then, a decision was given a year or two ago in one of the courts in which the construction of a section was very different from the intention of Parlianent when the Bill was introduced. The court helil that the terms "materials, implements and appliances" did not cover the lonat. itself. There is a clanse here to make that clear and to show that it does cover the hoat. Then there is another perhaps mimportant amembinent, substituting the word "and" for the word "or" in the case where the Minister has been authorizerl to set apart any water for the artificial propatgation of tish.

Motion agreed to, and Bill real the first time.

PILOTAGE ACT AMENDMENT.

Mr. TULPER moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 10) to amend the Pilotage Act. He said : Nome years ago Parliament exempted vessels of sil toms or under from the payment of compulsory pilotage dues, with the view of encouraging the building of vessels of about that tomage for the fishing trade. The vessels that came from Gloucester were about that size, and they had a great advantage over the Canadian vessels on the banks of Newfoimilland and in the fisheries common to both, because of their larger capacity. -We fomil that oir vessels were being huilt of small tomage in order to aroid the pilotage dues, so Parliament fixed the maximum at 80 tons. Since that, howerer, in the competition and rivalry and experience which hasbeen gathered, our builders have increased the tomage, and now it is considered that we should propose to amend the clause which exempts vessels of sio tons hy providing that it shall apply to vessels of not more than 120) registered tons, so that the construction of vessels of a langer class may be encouraged in order to compete with those which some froma foreign comutry.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

FINHIN: VESNELS OF THE UNITED NTATES.

Mr. TUPPER moved for leave to introluce a Bill (No. 11) respecting Fishing Vessels of the United States. He said: This Bill is an old friend, and relates to what is popularly known as themorlu: rivendi. I may state that the only difference between this Bill and the Bill we have heretofore alopted, is that instead of coming ammally to this Honse for the parpose of authorizing the "overnment to issue licenses to Americun fishing vessels. we now propose to clothe the Covernor in Council with porer to issue these anmally. That is the only difference between this Bill in:t the Bill of last year.

Motion agreed to, and Bill real the first time.

MARINE ANI FISHERIES DEPARTMENT.

Mr. TUPPER movel for leave to introduce Bill (No. 12) respecting the departments of Marine and Fisheries. He stid: The olject of this Bill is practically to put the departments as they were in the begiming, and muler one heal.

Mr. LAURIER. Yion acknowledge your mis. take.

Mr. TUPPER. I am not saying that the Gor. ermment is not prepared to rectify any mistakes that experience has shown they may have made. At any rate, in my humble julgment I believe that the consolitation of those two departments under one deputy, and ais they have always been moder one Minister, will not only tend to relieve the Minister charged with the responsibility of administering those two branches, but will be in the interest of the public in every way, and in the interest of efficiency and economy, as the expression goes. That, shortly, is the object of this Bill. We propose to take no, further powers, except to go hack to the position in which these departments were first organizel, so that there shall be one Deputy Minister instead of two.

Motion agreed to, and Bill real the first time.

THF RECENT GERMAN TREATY.

Mr. OBRIEN. Before the Orders of the Day are calleal, I wish, with the permission of the House, to ask the Minister of Finance a question on a sul)ject of some general interest. In the Timex of 26 th February, I find the following despatch from Hamburg, dated 2ith February :-

[^7]nation clause, by whieh Great Britain shares in the recent German Treaty arrangenents, extends also to the British colonies and posstessions, has now been definitely settled in the affirmative. In consequence of an attempted levy of the old duty of $\overline{5}$ mills per 100 kilos by the Atona customs a uthoritics, upon it cargo of wheat just arrived frum India, a telegriphic appeal was at uice made by the receivers to the Imperial Chancellor claiming payment on the reduced treaty rate of 3 m . 50 ph . This has now been answered by the Minister of Finance in favour of the receivers. Inst ructims have at the sume time also. been addressed to the varims browineial muthorities of the Empire, to the effee that the most-favoured-nation clane applies, in its entirety to all British colonies and dependencies."
I would like to ask the Minister of Finance if he is a ware of this, and whether the statements made in this despatch are to le relied upon? I consider the matter of great puinic importance.
Mr. FOSTER. The extract that the hom. gentlemam has just real seems to be a satisfactory answer to his own guestion, if we may rely upon that telegram to the Times, as I think we may. If the hon. gentleman will look at the treaty between (ireat Britain and the ferman Kollverein, he will find that one of the articles read something to this effect : that every favour in tariff duties, either on importations or exportations, which one of the parties may concede to a third party shall lee immediately and unconditionally concened to the other party to the reaty: and another article of the treaty includes all the dependencies and possessionsof (ireat Britain. These two real trgether, I think, make it certain that the item which my hon. friemd has read is a practical proof of that realing of the treaty by the (ierman iuthorities.
Sir RICHARD (ARTWRICHT. I take it for grantel, however, that a special clause would have to be inserted in each treaty. If my memory serves, this point was raised with respect to the treaties with spain and France: aml I think, at any mate, in the case of France, that the British colony did not get the adrantage of the concessions which were made to British merchants.
Mr. FOsTER. Because that was specially exempt in the French treaty.

GOXERNMENT CONTRACTS.

The Orter leing read for resuming adjourned delate on ihe proposed motion of Mr. Matedonald (Huron) for an order of the House for a statement respecting all Govermment contracts let by tender from 1st July, 1s6i, to Ist July, 1891,
Mr. MACDONALD (Hurm) movel for leave to withdraw the said motion Motion withdrawn.
Mr. MACDONALD (Huron) moved for:
Statement showing yll contracts given in the Departments of Public Works and Railways and Canals, exceeding in amount 55,010 , since 30 th June, 1887, to June 30th, 1891. 1. Those nwarded to the lowest tenderer and those given to others, with the amount in each case. 2 . The difference between the price giren and that stated in lowest tender. 3. The reasons for not accepting the lowest tender. 4. Were deposits required to accompany each tender; if so, what percentage of tender. 5 . Were the deposits, or any of thein. returned to tenderers who withdrew their tender, or who refused to accept the contract when a warded them.
Motion agreed to.

RETCRN ORDERED.

Copies of all reports of Ministers of the Crown upon whichany Governor General's warrants have been issued durine the recent recess of Parliament, and of the Orders in Cuuncil authoriring such issue.-(Mr. Mulock.)

STATEMENT OF ESPORT'S AND IMPORTS.

sir RICHARI) (ARTWRIGHT. With the permission of the Honse, I would like to say to the Minister of Militia that I understand that yesterdiay. on an Order which askel for the exportsime impoits leing moved, he intimated it would take a very long time to prepare it. Now, it is possible that if imports, the products of Canadia, are distinguished from those of other countries, it would take: a long time, and although that information is valnable, lifo mot wimt to delay the return tow long, and I would suggest to the Minister--I suppose he is acting for the Blinister of Customs---that it would he convenient to the Honse if the exports and imports, in the formof the statement usually published in the ciavife, were brought down first. and the products at such time as may be comsenient for the department.
Mr. Bowell. I think probably the hom. member did not unlerstand distinctly what I sainl. I said the return was brought down to the 1st Match, and it will he some time hefore information wopld he in the department to enable the (iovermment to comply with the Order of the House. But I have no objection to have the return brouglat down in the manner suggested. for it is important that all this information should be laid before the Homse at the earliest moment.
sir RICHARI CARTWRIGHT. I want the information oltatined by the Customs Department within a few days of the commencement of each month. for its swn use. I do not know whether that information distinguishes productson wot : I rather think not.

Mr. BOWELL. If the hom. genteman will consider the matter for a moment. he will moderstand that a longer perion than a few days is reguired to ohtain these returns. I have lreen compelled to make a similar explanation to the hon. gentleman every year for the last six years. Howerer, the information will be brought awn.

Notion agreed to.
sir JOHN THOMPSON moved the aljonrment of the House.

Motion agreed to: and the House adjouned at 4 p.m.

Ammal repert of the Department of hadian Affairs, for the year ending 31st Decemher. Is99. (Mr. Dewdney.)

ADMASEION OF CANADAN FLOUR INTO NEWFOUNDLAND.

Mr. HU(iHEN moved for :

Return of correspomlence showing the action taken by the Camadian fiovernment to secure the admission of Canadian flour inta Newfoundland under fair regulations.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). The motionas it stands would anthorize the dowerment only to bring down the communications of the Canadian (overnment. I think it is highly desiralle that the communications which passed between the two Ciovermments should be laid lefore the House.
Mr. TUPPER. I might say to the hon. gentleman, that really this motion and all the hon. gentleman wishes and atl the House could desire are practically covered, as I maderstand, by the resolntion adopted last session, because the correspondence respecting flour is connected with the correspomlence touching the fisheries question. Accordingly, all these papers will be included in one return.

Motion agreed to.

THE RETURNS OF POLLING AT THE (iENERAL ELECTION.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell) moved :

That a map of the Dominion be laid upon the Table showing the boundaries of townships, ceunties and electoral divisions in each province, and the number of votes polled in each township for each candidate at the general election in March, 189 I.
He suid: If it is more convenient that separate maps for each province, or any may prepared by the departments of the Govermment should be utilized, that may be done. I ask that this motion he alopted with a riew to requesting the (ioverinment to provide that the map so brought down shall he distributed for the use of members, so that when we come to discuss the foremment proposition for a redistribution of seats, we will have before is at map of the comntry amd the electoral vote pollet, to enable us to give more intelligent consideration to the subject than we would le able to do withriat such a convenience.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I lesire to call attention to the requirements of the Order in regard to townships. I think it wonld be very rlitticult to oltain the cotes of the townships, and I do not know at present any method to adopt to ascertain atcurately the vote polled in any particular township. hecause the dirisions for not run by township, bonnmaries.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). They do so with us. The electoral divisions and townships, I think, in every calse correspond, provided different townships are not put together in the same electoral division.
sir JOHN THOMPSON. sofar ats that can be avoided: but there mity be cincomstances in which the rule has to be departed from for the purpose of making sub-livisions. Then, again, in some of the provinces there is no such, divisions as townships. In Quebec: Nova Scotia and New Brunswick the divisions are hy parishes, and I think the purpose will he served if a map is preparel showing the bommaries of the electoral districts and the commties. and any further information that is available can be given by schedule appended.

M1:. MILL心 (Bothwell). The hom. gentleman will see that the ohject of having the map hy townships and villages, which should he embraced as far as possible, is that if there is to be a redistrihution measure in which county bommaries are to be regarded, it is very important to know what was the electoral vote in the townships. If the (iorermment propose to revert to the scheme of redistribution laid down in 1871 . that parts of different comnties should not be in the same electoral division, then the importance of having the wote in the minor municipalities would not he of so much consequence.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I fancy it will not be so ditticult to procure information as to the electoral cote in the township as it will the actual rote pollert.

Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). It is the actual rote polled that is of conserfuence.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I do not see my oljection to the motion leeing passed as it is, and we will follow it out as far as possible.

Motion agreed to.

RETCRN ORDERED.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON moved the aljournment of the House.

Motion agreed to: and the Honse adjourned at 3:\%1 p.m.

STEAMBOAT INSPECTION.

Ar: TUPPER moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 13) further to amem the Sitemboat Inspection Act. He said: This Bill covers certain questions that have arisen in the management amd inspection of steamboats from time to time. For instance, the improvements that are being marle in the motive powers that are resortedo to, remder necessary some additional language so as to cover ressels where the motive power is other than steam. We use the same language in the definition of a steambrat that has heen adopted in the international confegrence at Washington. Then again, it has been found in practice that following the strict line of the pesem steamboat Inspection Act, it was obligatory upon the boad to hold a meeting, at least one once a year, at certain points, whether there was anything for them to do or not. In view of the desire on the part of the steamboat owners that the expeuses should he kept down as low as possible, and that the rates for the inspection of steamers should also be kept down, it is proposed to change that. provision so as to leave it optional with the boam to meet whenever ami: wherever it isnecessary soan toa roid the necessity of their travelling to various parts of the comitry when there is no need; and when they travel atallit shouldheremembered theirexpenses arecharged tosteamboat inspection. Then there are several other sections which I will fully explain on the second reading ; but I may just mention a proposition to meet the difticulty in commection with lifeboats, and regulations of ocean steamers, and those for vessels on the inlamil waters. It is fommi, for instance, that the regulations were entirely too drastic and would not allow a ressel with a hoat which was. in the opinion of experts, quite sutficient for the purpose of a lifeboat, to sail from port. There is a provision to enable the department to impose a fee for the inspection of barges carrying passengers, and which are subject to inspection, and also several provisions in reference to those barges which carry a large number of passengers, and which, under the present law, must be inspected. As the law now stanls the inspector is obliged, at considerable cost, to travel to certain points to examine these barges. But there is no provision to compel the barge owners to pay any fee, and the expenses comes out of the fund, towards which it is consid ered in fairness these owners of barges, which are towed behind tugs, should contribute their share.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

BOUNDARIEN OF THE PRONINCE OF QUEBEC.

sir HEOTOR LANGEVIN moved for :

Copnes of all corremondence, memorials departmental urders, and Orders in Council respecting the north-western. northern and eastern boundaries of the Province of Quebec, received or passed during the last five vears and not already laid before this House, together with all reports of surves: or explorations ordered thereon by the Government of Camada during the same period.

He saill: In sulmitting this motion to the House, I desite to make a few olservations respecting the measure which was passed three years ago in this Honse, relative to the boundaries of Ontario. At that time a measure was presented by the then First Minister, Sir John Macdonald, on 17th April, when he introduced a resolution. The order was postponed to a subsequent day, when the measure was introduced and discussed. Sir John Macdonalll, in hringing it before the House, said :
"This boundary carries out the decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, to whom was referred the settlement of the boundary between Ontario and Manitoba. Besides establishing that line, the Judicial Committee described a portion.of the northerly boundaries of Ontario, although, perhaps, that was not a portion of the reference to them-we will not raise that point just now; and th at any time a question should arise as to the northerly boundary, they would uphold the judgment then given.:
Then sir John Macdonald continued, and showed that the description of the boundary as determined in the resolution, which was tinally adopted by the House, was exactly, or almost word for word, the decision which was given in Fugland, and that it also followed the award made by the three commissioners. The member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) assented to the measure. Then Mr. Dawson, the then member for Algoma, maile a long speech on the subject, showing his knowledge of it, and at the same time not concurring entirely in all that had been done. Then the hon. member for Hoche. laga (Mr. Desjardins) put, in French, certain questions regarding the boundaries of Quebec, and he womedered why the two boundaries were not settled loy the same measure. I was called upon to answer the hon. gentleman, and I said :
"In reply to the hon. member. I must say that the Government has not lost sight of the petition which has been presented on the part of the Legislature of Quebec, and by its Governmentat various times. The question was discussed with the delegates from the Province of Quebee, but we have not come to a final decision. The difference between us is not great, but still it bas not been impossible for us to come to a perfect agreement before the submission of this resolution before the House on behalf of the Province of Ontario. I do not think it would be to the interest of the Procince of Quebec to discuss the question here at this time. I think that it will be better if the hon. member, having confidence in the Administration, as I know he has, should leave the matter in the hands of the Government, in order that we may during the recess, probably, settle the question. In any case, the hon. gentleman may rest assured that the interest of the Province of Quebec will not be neglected."
The hon. memler for Hochelaga (Nr. Desjardins) then said :
"I trust, at any rate, that the Federal Govermment will not be stopped by every demand which may be made in a non-conversant und ill-considered manner upon the boundary settlement proposed."
The lealer of the Opposition (Mr. Laurier) then said :

[^8]- "The line is precisely the same in this resolution as is staked out on the grounds un to Lake Témiscamingue. This description is approved of by Mr. Deville, the Surveyor (ieneral, and by Mr. Tache as being the proper description under the statute.
" Mr. LAURIER. I merely ask for information. Does the resolution clearly follow the boundary as detined by that commission?
"Sir JOLAN A. MACDONALD. Yes, word for word.
"Mr. LAURIER. With regard to the boundary north of Lake Témiseamingue to James bay, is that satisfactory to the Government of Quebec?
"Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. The Government of the Province of Quebec said: We would rather that the question was left over open until the boundaries of the two provinces are settled, and they said, they would rather enter a formal protest agajust our proceeding at all, but they permitted and allowed Mr. Tache to settle the boundary with Capt. Deville.
"Mr. LAURIER. I do not pretend to be familiar at all with this part of the question, but I understood that the contention of the Quebec Government Was that north of Lake Téniscamingue, instead of determining such a boundary as this, which would have to be laid down on the ground there, they would prefer to have some matural boundary, such as the course of a river.
"Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. No. They admitted that the line must run due north from the north end of Lake Temiscamingue until it strikes James Bay. The report of the Committee of the Legislature of Quebec says that the $i 2 n d$ parallel is the northern boundary, but they suy that line is an inconvenient boundary and an expensive boundary, and they suggested that the Kiver East Main, which rises somewhat to the north of the 52nd parallel, should be adopted as a better boundary than a degree of latitude. We discussed that point a good deal and we made this offer: That the jend parallel, which is stated to be the northern boundary, should be followed, running eastward. They said the height of hand, which they claimed in some portions going castwards, runs to the north of the 52 nd parallel, and we said that we would follow the 5 2nd purallel until it strikes the beight of land, and then follow height of land if it runs to the $53 r d$ parallel and until it comes buck to the 5 gnd parallel. Atter that following the $52 n d$ parallel until it strikes the Nerfoundland coast of habrador, and following that until it comes to Ile an Sables.
"Mr. LA URIER. I take some exception to what was stated by my hon. friend from Hochelaga (Mr. Desjardins) a moment ago, that this award of the Privy Counciland the arbitrators in 1878 granted anything. They dechared what were the existing boundaries merely.
" Mr. DESJARI)INS. I kuow it, was not a grant, but it went far beyond what we claimed.'
'Jhen, Mr. Mills continued to disuuss the matter, and finally the resolution as reported was allopted. Mr. Speaker, during the recess of that year interviews took place between the members of the Govermment of Quebec and the Government of Canada. I was entrusted by my colleagues to meet the delegates of the Province of Quebec, in order to see in the first place, how far we could come to an understanding. The difficulty was not about the boundary between Quebec and Ontario; that boundary is the same as was fixed by the Order in Council in 1791, in connection with the passing of the Constitutional Act, when Quelvec was divided into Upper and Lower Canada, the dividing line being thus defined:
" To commence at a stove boundary on the north bank of the Lake $S$. Francis, at the cove west of Pointe $a$ of the Lake St. Francis, at the cove west of Pointe Bater and the seigneurie of New Longueuil, running along the said limit in the direction of north thirty-four degrees, west to the westernmustangle of the said seigneurie of New Longueuil ; thence along the north-western boundury of the seigneurie of Yaudreuil, running north twenty-five degrees cast until it strikes the Ottawa River, to ascend the suid river into Lake Témiscamingue and from the head of the said lake, by a line drawn due north until it strikes the boundary line of Hudson Bay, including all the territory to the westward and southward of the said line, to the utmost extent of the country commonly called or known by the name of Canada."

We find that in all the documents afterwards, and in the commissions to the Governors when the boundary was mentioned, it was always stated to beinso far as that portion of the boundary line isconcerned. It was always the line coming to the head of Lake'Témiscamingue from the south; from the head of Lake Témiscamingue going due north andstriking the southern point of Hulson Bay or James Bay. Well, that seemed to have been accepted, and was accepted by this Parliament in 1889 when my late hon. friend Sir John A. Maclonald brought the resolution before the House and founded upon it an Ardress to the Queen, to have an Act passed in the British Pariiament. When the discussion came between the Government of Quebec, represented by their delegates to Ot tiwa, and the Government of Ottawa, it was conceded that that portion of the line from the head of Lake Temiscamingue to James Bay was the line that should be admitted to be the east loundary of Ontario and the west boundary of Quebec. I do not think, that on that point there was any difficulty between the two Governments. The main difference of opinion was on the northern loundary, and the contention was this: That at the point where the line coming from the north end of the Lake Témiscamingue struck James Bay, from that point following the shores of James Bay until you came to the $\mathbf{5} 2 \mathrm{nd}$ degree of north latitude, and then the question arose: Shall, we follow the 5ind degree, as stated in the resolution of the Legislative Assembly of Quebec: The $52 n d$ degree of latitude was admitted by the Goverument of Canadi, as well as by the Government of Quebec, to be the most northern point where the boundary of the Province of Quebec should go, but the Government of Quebec represented strongly to the Government of Canada-and I must say, with a good deal of force and reason-that the 52nd legree, if adopted as the northern boundary of Quebec, would be a very difficult boundary to follow ; it would he a purely imaginary line, and you would have to determine that line by putting boundary marks or monuments, as I might call them, all along the line, which would be a most costly undertaking. The delegates from Quebec represented that at no great distance north of the find degree there was a river called the East Main River, which flowed from east to west and which should be the boundary, as it was the natural boundary, of the Province of Quebec. The East Main is a large river, and is, I understand, $\overline{5}, 000$ feet wide at its mouth. It is not a navigable river all the way up, but it is navigable for about 15 miles, without any rapid or any portage. Above this there are certain portages. The river is very long, flowing, as far as is known, from west to east for a great distance, and it was contended very strongly by the Quebec delegates that that river is and should be the natural boundary; that the difference in territory would be very small, perhaps 12 to 15 miles at the very most, and that at the end of the Main River there are other rivers and lakes that might be followed until you came to a point where perhaps you would have to take the 52 nd degree as a boundary, as you might not have a river or lake to go by. However, that would only be for a short distance, and from that point you could easily reach the Labrador boundary of the province by extending a line from Blanc Sablon northwards, Blanc Sablon being the east boundary of the Province of Quebec. I will read a portion of the description of the boundary of Ontario, as adopted by this House :
"Commencing at the point where the international boundary hetween the United States of America and Canada strikes the western shore of Lake Superior, thence westerly along thesiaid boundary to the north-weat angle of the Lake of the Woods, thence a line drawn due north until it strikes the middle of the course of the river discharging the waters of the lake called Lake Seul, or the Lonely Lake, whether above or below its confluence with the stream flowing from the Lake of the Woods towards Latke Winnipeg, and thence proceeding eastward from the point at which the before-mentioned line strikes the middle line of the course of the river last nforesaid. along the middle line of the course of the same river, (whether called by the name of the English River, or, as to the part below the confluence, by the name of the River Winnipeg) up to Lake Seal or the Lonely Lake, and thence along the middle line of Lake Seul or Lonely Lake to the head of that lake, and thenee by a straight line to the nearest point of the middle line of the waters of Like St. Josenh, and thence ulong that middle line until it reaches the foot or outlet of that lake, and thence along the middle line of the river by which the waters of Lake St. Joseph discharge themselves to the shore of the part. of Hudzon Bay commonly known as James Bay, and thence south-easterly following upon the said shore to a point where a line drawn due north from the head of Lake TĆmiscamingue would strike it."
Hon. gentlemen will see that in settling the boundary line of Ontario the Government and Parliament of this country took great care to follow, as, far ats practicable, the rivers and lakes, in orier to avoid a large expenditure afterwards to determine the boundary. Hon. gentlemen know that if the boundary follows an imaginary line, with monnments, &c., there will be, first, a large expense necessary to settle that line, and secondly, dificulties are almost sure to occur--for example, in case of a riot or a murder-indetermining whether it took place on the oue side or the other sile of that imaginary line. Now, when the country is a wilderness, it is very easy to determine the line, even if we have to add a few miles between the sind degree of latitude and the East Main River. The conchasion to which the two (iovernments came at the time was that there should be a survey or an examination of the country there, especially with the view of leating the mouth of the East Main River. That survey has taken place, I understand, though I do not know whether or not the final report has been made. I think a preliminary report was made by the officer in charge, who had great difficulties to contend against when he made that survey, owing to flools, bad weather and fogs. I hope that report is finishen, and that it may be laid hefore us. I trust, also, that the Government will be in a position to let us have a small map, in order that we may see exactly how the case stands ; and, as was stated by Sir John Macdonald when he brought forward the measure settling the boundary of Ontario, I hope that, when the line is determined, we shall not only follow the course of a river, but that if the height of land is between the 52 nd parallel and the 5ist, the line will follow the height of land, and then come back to the 52nd degree, in order to reach finally the end of the boundary by forming a junction with the line from Blanc Sablon. I have another hope to express, which is, that the (Government may be able, and may find it convenient during the session, to bring down a resolution regarding the boundary in the same sense us that presented in 1889, and that during the session we may pass an Address to the Queen, in order that a measure may be adopted by the Imperial Parliament in gool time to determine finally the north-western, northern and north-eastern boundaries of Quelec.

Mr. DEWINEX. On behalf of the department which I have the honour to represent, I may state that there wiil he, of course, no objection to bring down to the House copicesf any reports which have been made on this question. I may state also. for the information of the hon. mover and the members of the House, that about the time the deputation from the Government of Quebec waited upon this (Govermment in reference to this matter, infurmation had reached me through some of the surveyors belonging to the geological branch of my department, who had been surveying in the Hudsin Bay region, that there had been a great error in regard to the location on the charts of the eastern shore of James Bay. So confilent were they that the error was a large one, that 1 considered it necessiary to suggest to the Government that we should send one of our most experienced surveyors into that country in order to determine whether the error was as great as it was supposell to be. I think there is no question, in regard to the northern portion of the shore of James Bay, as shown on the ouly charts we have, which are those of the Hudson Bay Company, that it must he something more than in miles out of the proper location, but the error decreases as it comes south. Howerer, it seemed of such importance-as the boundary between Ontario and Quelec had been defined at that point, and the definition was that the eastern boundary of Queleec should run from Lake Témiscamingue in a direet line north until it struck. James Bay--that it was thought, if the shore line raried as much in the southern part as it did in the northerm part, James Bay might le missed altogether and all the work which had been done aould le useless: so we sent Mr. Ogilvie there, and he went from Temiscamingue to James Bay, and he found the line to strike the southern portion of dames bay. As near as he possibly could, he has defined the position at that point. Of course there is no telegraphic communication and there may be a slight error, but it will be almost unnoticealile. He traversed the shore of James Bay up to the iend degree of latitude, and went on to the mouth of the East Main River and established that point, and he found that the mouth of that river was hearly as was represented on the charts. I mention this to show in what way mydepartment has been connected with the matter. It is shown that the line from the north of Lake Temiscamingue strikes the south shore of James Buy and that the mouth of the East Main River is in the locality it was supposed to be. Mr. Ogilvie also received instructions to make an investigation as far as he could of the East Main River, but the season was late and he had no time to go up that river, so we knew nothing of it except the information we have from what he did at the mouth, and from what he gathered from an Indian whom he met there and whom he believes to be the only Indian on that river. I think it is desirable that some information should be obtained in regard to the direction in which that river runs. On some charts it appears to run in a north-easterly direction, and pretty far to the north, and it is impossible to say from the information we have what it would cost or what time it would take to determine the course of that river and to determine the boundary in the way proposed ly the hon. member, if it has to go to the height of land or to where the ind parallel meets the height of land. As I have said, I shall be prepared to bring down the report of Mr. Ogivie and a plan showing what has heen investigatel.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I ought to express my regret at the ahsence of my colleagues from the Province of Quelec, who, I know, would like very much to speak on this question, hut I am aware that mo menher of the Honse understands this question more fully than my hon. friend who has made the motion, because in one has followed it with more careand interest in the past. We have not admitted that the height of land was not the proper boundary for the two provinces, but I think the state of the case as presented on the part of the Province of Quebec was not so much that the height of land should be departed from as a matter of right, as the fact that it was departed from in the case of the Province of Ontario and that consequently very much enlarged limits were given to that province. The limits given to the Province of Ontario, as every member who followed the guestion will recollect, were not entirely those settled by the decision of the Privy Conncil, which left undetermined a very considerable portion of that boundary. but the olject of this Parliament in concluting the bounciary was to follow as much as possible the principle of that decision amb at the same time to estahlish a boundary which would be a convenient one, and therefore the Allany River was followel as the boundary to the waters of Hudson Bay. The resolutions which were passe:l in the Legisliature of Quebec subsequently, looking to the extension of that province in a northerly direction, asserted it as a right that the boundary of that province northerly should the the oind parallel, amd. when we met the delegates of that province in Council, we were prepared to concerle their contention in that regard, in view of what had been done for the Province of Ontario, and, notwithstinding that we were thus prepared to recommend to Parlianent the adoption of the line which the Govermment of Quebee upheli as the true northern boundary of the province, we found that they came prepared to claim a further northern loundary still, mainly on the ground of convenience, and, as the hon. gentleman has stated, they claimed that the East Main River should be selected as the northern boundary. We found that not only would the delegates from the Provincial Government, on the ground of convenience, ask the adloption of the East Main River, excepting where the height of land gues northward of that, and then giving the province a further extension by following the height of land, but that the delegates desired that the East Main River should be followed up to its sources, and that would involve a cession of territory to the Province of Quebec far beyond what they had ever claimed as a matter of right, and far beyond what would be required, we thought, as a matter of convenience in the delimitation. Perlaps Parliament woukl not attach so much importance to including a large portion of territory which is unsettled and which is probably incapable of ordinary settlement, but we felt that we could not, without grave consideration, concede so much as that demand involved. Of course, as my colleague has stated, the papers will be brought down giving the latest report and showing the extension north from Lake Témiscamingue.

Mr. Mills (Bothwell). I do not understame, from the olservations either of the leader of the House or the Minister of the Interior, that the Government are prepared to deal with this gucstion at the present time, as the necessary geographical information is not jet in the possession of the dovernment. I would therefore suppose that the most suitable time for the discussion of this whole subject will be when the papers come down and when the hom. member for Three Rivers (Sir Hector Langevin) makes his motion hased on the information which they contain. I mean to say this much, however, that I do not think there is any ground for contending, as the representatives of the Province of (Quebee who were in the (iovernment then contended, that the height of limd upon the north of Quebec was at any time ever regarded by any legal authority as the proper bomatary for that province: nor am I prepared to almit what the Minister of Justice has just stated, that the Province of Ontario was enlarged by the decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. On the contrary, 1 think that the decision, taken in connection with the historical facts which led up to that decision. shows that the Province of Ontario was greatly resticted in its lommlaries by the decision which was given. I think it could he shown beyond all room for controversy, aceording to every principle of history and of public law. that what is now called our North-Wert Territory was, before the conquest of canali, embrated within the Province of Canada, and that when the Province of Cpper Canada, under the proclamation of 1791, was extended northward to the shore of Hudson Bay, and southward and westward to the utmost extent of what hall been known and commonly called (ianadia, it embraced everything which France had surrendered as a portion of New France to the fovernment of Great Britain. under the treaty of 1763, west of the eastern loundary. Thein, sir, there is this fact, that is worthy of note, that at no perion of the history of England, and in no state paper, has the Government of England arlmitted that the height of land was the natural loumdary which must be taken into consideration in the settlement of any dispute between sovereign states owning territory on opposite sides. There is not, from the begiming to the end of all the discussions that took place bet ween the fiorernment of Cireat Britain and the dovernment of France upon the subject of lromilaries on the Continent of North America- -and the correspondence is very voluminous-a single instance, in which the English (iovermment almitted the principle that the height of land was the natural boumdary ; and in no case did they admit this in the discussions with reference to the boundary letween Camada and the English possessions on the Hudson Bay, when that subject was in controversy. The reason is obvious : there was another boundary, of far more consequence to the (iovernment of cireat Britain, that was in dispute at the same time, and that was the boundary between New France and the English colonies which lay to the south of New France. Now, the Govermment of England, so far from admitting the principle that the height of land was the boundary, claimed the territory, in consequence of their settlements upon the Athantic, to the shores of the St. Lawrence and to the shores of the (ireat Lakes: and when the (iovernment of France proposed to limit the old colonies of Eingland to the Alleghany Mountains as their western limit, the dovernment of England declined, and they declined on two or three grounds that are stated in the cerrespondence which will lee found collected in a work called "Craig's Olden Time." Now, in that correspomence the (iovernment of Euglamd, resisting the pretensions of France in conseguence of the liscoveries in the Valley of the Ohio, statel this: We do not admit that we are limited lig the height of limh, so long as it is possille for the colonists on the east to cross that height of land and to continne their settlements, it is not an insuperalle barrier against the extension of settlement, and they also said: We claimtogo leyond the height of lam on the Alleghany Momatains, hecause, from the progress of our settlement, which is much more rapid than yours, a reasonable extent of territory may properly be claimed: and in the second place, we clain it because it is necessary to the protection of the colonies which we have establinhed upon the comtinent: and, in the third place, on the ground of contignity. The:efore, low ing at the whole suljeet, and in the correspomilence that has taken place, there was never any such rule recognized in any English state paper as that the heighit of land is a natural houndary. A reasomable extent of territory may be claiment, and in all the correspondence and controversies that the English (iovernment have had with other states, they have alwayslooked to the purpose for which the territory was oceupied in order to determine the extent of territory that might properly be claimed. Then, in the correspondence that took place hetween England and Russia on the subject of the Alaska settlenents of Russia, the Euglish Gowernment pointed out that the settlements were for the purpose of tishing operations, that the coast range offered a suitahle lazrier for the protection of those tisheries, and that not having acguired the territory or made a settlement with the riew of extembling those settlements and occupying the interion of the conntry, ten leagues from the shore was a reasonable extent. If they had recognized the height of land the anast would not have heen the barrier, hut it would have leen the height of land known as the Rocky Mountains lying humdreds of miles in the interior, a height from which the rivers drainel the western slope into the Pacific Ocean ; so that as far as the height of land is concerned, it may properly be set asile as one not to be taken into consilderation in this matter. Then, when we look at what the Gorermment of England did, and the (iovernment of Franch did, we find each undertaking to extend their sovereignty over the country with the view of retaining the for trade. Eagland oceupied the Hudson Bay after 1670, and in 1697 the southern portion of that went into the possession of France under the treaty of Ryswick. That was accordingly established as the boundare, and the boundaries that are now proposed, the Allany River on the west, which has already been accepted, and the Rupert River, or the Slave River upon the east, were spoken of as proper boundaries under that treaty. Well, in 1713, after two or three years war between Englind and France, and the fortunes of war had gone against France, there was another boundary agreed upon, under the Treaty of Utrecht, and two commissioners were to he appointen to carry that into effect. Now, the French proposed that their boundary, they claiming the whole of the Latrador corst at that time. should begin at the Strait of Labrador and le extented in a straight line in a southwesterly direction so as to he midway hetween the French fort on the upper part of the Rupert River. and the Euglish fort that was nearer the month of that river; the middle distance between those two forts was to determine the sonthern portion of the line, and that line was to extend sonthward until it struck a line midway between the French fort on Lake Abitilee and the English fort on the shore of Hudson Bay, which would be about the inst degree of morth latitude. Well, the English drew a line hegiming at Cape Partridge, $58!$ degrees north latitude. and about 2 degrees further south of the French line, and extended it to Lake Mistassin, and through Lake Mistassin to the southern shore of that lake. That proposition was first made to them by the Hudson Bay Company, and they made it to the French Government in 1701, and subsequently in 1711. Now, that was the last proposition made by the Euglish previous to the Treaty of Utrecht. That line was drawn upon the map; it is mentioned in the correspondence that took place het ween Lord Bolinghroke and Mr. Prior. They both said: That map has these two lines drawn upon it, and there can be no great difference between the two dovermments, becanse the Faglish and French commissioners which are appointed to settle the boumlaries, will settle the houndary somewhere between these two lines, not going further north or west than the French line, and not going further east or south than the line drawn by the English. In $1 \overline{7} 14$ this, mind you, was the year after the Treaty of Utrecht was made, and after it was out of the power of either party to vary the terms of the agreement, the Hudison Pay Company made a proposition to England, which England conveyed again to the French Gorermnent, proposing that the line which extended through Lake Mistassin from Cape Partriilge, should be extended to the 49th degree of north latitude, and then run westward along the $49 t h$ paralled. That is the origin of the proposition that the 49th parallel should be the northern boundary, and it was carclessness and ignorance with respect to the matter that led to its aloption as the northern lomolary of the United States and the boundary hetween England and the United States, hecause it was supposed that that was the southern delimitary line of territory belonging to the Hudson Bay Company. But the company never had any such legal claim. The French had never acpuiesced in amy such proposition; the English had never made such a claim, until after the Treaty of Utrecht had been agreed upon, and that treaty, until it was terminated hy war, was equally binding on the two parties. There were various times when it was proposed that some understanding or settlement should be had, that commissioners should be appointed for the purpose of laying down this line. This was not done. The English commissioners who met in 1748.49 suggested at line two degrees further south on the coast of Labrador than their instructions authorized them to demand. Anyone who will read the instructions to Col. Bladen and his associates will see that they disregarded their instructions, and that they made a demand for a larger extent of territory than they were authorized to ask. The result was that, after a gool deal of controversy and correspondence, no settlement was had, and the provisions of the Treaty of Utrecht remained, so far as the estabment of a fixed boundary was concerned, a dead letter. That was the condition of affairs until the conguest, until Canada was ceded; and Canada was cedel to Great Britain with those boundaries which the French (iovermment had claimel, and the extent of territory which the Government of France possessed at that time as Canada, that was all the continent of North America lying nor th of the sources of the Mississippi River indefinitely westward. After that periol we have claims put forward at various times by the Hudson Bay Company. The western limit of the Hudson Bay territory before $1 / \overline{4} 4$ never extended $1(N)$ miles from the shores of the Hudson Bay. The territory midway between Hudson Bay and Lake Wimnipeg was regarded as a portion of Canada which the French surrendered. The French had forts all over the North-West; they had fifty soldiers and several hundred traders in the territory, who were paying rent to the Government of France at the time the surrender took place. So far as the Hudson Bay Company's claim was concerned, it is true that the claim was created in the form of letters patent making conveyance in fee simple of certain undefined territories with the rights and obligations of settlement and colonization imposed on the company. These charters have been the subject of discussions from time to time by the English law officers, by the English Secretaries of State for Foreign Affairs, down to a comparatively recent period. We never look at the terms of the charters to see the extent of the territory conveyed. On the contrary, the rule has been universally adopted by the Lords of Trade and Plantations, and later by the Secretaries of State, of looking at what the companies did on the ground under the authority of their charters. These charters in many cases were given, and this of the Hudson lay Company was one of them, to certain parties who were subjects of the Crown, that had uo claim to the country whatever. They were given because the sovereign had not yet aciquired dominion over the country, and they were given as instruments through which that dominion was to be sciguired. I could give the House several instances of this. Take. for instance, the early charters which extend from the Atlantic const to the South seas. They ran entirely across the continent; hut the Government never seriously regarded the claims of parties under those charters beyond what their actual occupation and reasonable extent of territory in the vicinity of the settlement would convey to them. Take, for instance, the case of the charter or patent conveying Connecticut. It extended to the Pacific Ocean; but two years later a charter was given to the Duke of York conveying New York, which ran right across the territory conveyed to Warwick and others in the Province of Connecticut. This question came before the Lords of the Privy Council subsequently, and they decided the middle distance between the settlements of the two provinces as the western limit of Connecticut and the eastern limit to New York. So at another period a charter was given to Attorney General or Solicitor General Heath, coneying what was called the Province of Carolina, a very large extent of territory. It was given in fee simple. The territory conveyed to Mr. Heath and his associates was subsequently assigned to a certain nobleman and merchants in England. Thirty-two years later the King gave a charter for exactly the same territory to Lord Clarendon and persons associated with him. The question as to the rights of the parties receiving charters covering the same territory came before the Lords of the Council. What was their decision: They declared that due diligence not having been exercised by Mr. Heath and his associates in the settlement of the country, although the conveyance was in the form of letters patent in fee simple, nevertheless no actual conveyance had taken place : that they had done nothing to maintain the King's dominion. and having failed to exercise due diligence, they had lost their rights. The same doctrine was laid down by West with respect to certain charters conveying territory in fee simple in the West Indian Islands. The rule was established-and I could give a number in instances in which it has been recogniz-ed-that these charters being given for the purpose of acpuiring property for the King, other sub). jects of the King were not at liberty to umbertake settlement, solong as due diligence was shown to establish settlement within the limits of those charters; but it did not interfere with the right of any other country to acpuire dominion within the sime territory, if it saw proper. There is anillus. fration of that in the case of Nova seotia and New Brunswick, which were given by Henry IV of France to a Frenchman. They were conveyed by James I, as King of Sicotland, to the Earl of Stirling. They were also conveyed by James I, as King of Englame to a company of merchants in Loudon. Here were three charterscovering the same territory ghanted by two different sovercigns, all in existence, whether one or other of these individuals acquired and right to the territory, depended upon the fact as to which of them first took possession and made settlement, which would uphold the authority of the sovereign by whom the authority was given. So, whether Acadia became Sotelh, English, or French, depended entirely on which of those who hat receiven charters first secured possession amil exercised diligence in making establishments. That being the case, when we look at the Hudson Bay Company amd the French settlement, in order to ascertain the bommary between the two comntries, we are obliged to look at what each has done, at what progress, settlement or slominion has been made under therespectiveauthority of each. That was the condition of affairs down to the time of the conquest. Well, the hon. gentleman who has made this motion refers 1.0 the extension of the houndary of Ontario northward to the shore of Hudson Bay. That, I think, is true. If you look at the papers that were conveyed to the House of Commons when the subject of the Constitutional Act was under consideration with a view of advantage to the Province of Quebec, you will see that the King was anxious to muintain the prerogative of dividing the province. He did not put that in the bill nor was it provided for, but he, having exhansted his authority by establishing a Government, had to rely upon the action of Pariiament to create a a Government other than that which had been already established within the dominion. So, it was proposed to embate, as the correspondence shows, hot only all the territory that was retainell after the treaty of $1 / \times 3$, westwarl to a certain line, but if passilhe to embrace a comsiderable extent of territory that the treaty hall nominally conveyed away, lecause it was said that the Americans had not fultilled their obligations. and that the ferleration was so loosely constituted that it was in danger every moment of groing to pieces. It was intended, therefore, when Upper (imadia was established to embrace not only the whole tervitory to the Hudson Bity, which is actually provided for by paper that the King laid upon the table of the Honseof Commons, but toembrace, as far as possible, the tervitory that hat been comeyed to the United States. Why, in the first Legislature of Upper Camala, the man who was elected for the western district lived in hetroit, and a vast majority of the electors lived in what is now the city of Detroit and roted for the election of that member. Magistrates were apponted and dominion was exercised as far west as the French settlement at the mouth of the Wiscomsin River. Now, the brmudary by the Quebec Act was the delimitary line I have mentioned as agreed upon hy the Treaty of Utrecht. The boumbary under the Act of 1 gai, so far as Ontario was concerned, was a line further north. It was not the intention of the Kingr or of his advisers that Ontario on the morth should be beunded by the line fixed hy the Act of liनt. The Act of 1\%it said that territories were to extend northwards th the southern lroundary of the teritory granted to the Merchant Ailventurers trading in Hudson Bay. As I have said. there were two papers laid lefore the House of fommons with reqaind to the division of the Province of Quethee in 1790. The one paper divides the province by a line rmming north to the lomadary line of the territories granted to the Merehant Alventurers of Huison Bay. That was the line diviling the pro. vince, which hefore had been one province. but when the western portion of that te:ritory came to be constituted into the Province: of Epper Canala, there was another praper that referred to that, anll followed the :able boundaries in precisely the same words matil it reached the southern limitary line of the Hulson Bay territory. It did not stop there, but it went on to the scuthern houndary of Hudson bey. The worls were ditferent. They were intein. tionally different, aml they embraced into the Province of Upper (anada territories lying north of the boumdaries of the territories which hat betore been included in the Province of Quebec. Now, that rule did not apply to the Province of Quelec. I am not making this statement with the view of opposing a more convenient loundary, for I admit that a natural boundary is very much better than an artificial one rumning through such an inhospitable comitry, as much of this country may he found to be. There is no doubt, whatever, that if a natural boundary is found in the vicinity of the iond parallel, the north-eastern part of the Province of Quebec will be cut off and the province will have added to her territory on the north-western portion of her possessions, and so will lose some territory to the northeast. If you begin at Cape Partridge, in the $58 \$$ degree of north latitude, which was the most southern limit proposed prior to the Treaty of Utrecht, and draw that line semthwand to Lake Mistassin, that is the most restricted bommiary that you can legally give to the Province of Quelec unless you apply to, it the rule of acpuiescense which the Privy Comeil applied to us with regard to our western homals. The Privy Council excluted us from the North. West Territory lecause we had acquiested in the exercise of dominion by some other partics for a long series of years. Whether Quebec will lose anything under that rule or not, if it were applied to her, I will not pretend to say at this moment: but I do say, that if you follow the line as suggested by the English, and follow the line that is suggested by the hon. member for Three Rivers (Sir Hector Langevin), you will see that a grool deal of the north-eastem comer of the Province of Quehec will be cut off: perhaps as lane an extent of territory will be adder on to the north-western portion of the province. A more convenient line, no donbt, would he had if we had full information on the subject as to whether the River slate could te taken as the proper boundary, than by our undertaking to establish the line sur gestel in 1711 . I wish to call the attention of the Honse to this, and I an doing so very briefly just now, becanse I have been only able to take a mere hird'seye view of this very large subject. I think that the hom. member for Three Rivers Sir Hector Langevin) will see that the positon which the Opposition are taking now is very different from the position which he and his colleagues tomk with reference to as on this subje:t. The hon. gentleman and those who were then associated with him, repudiated the arhinat tion that sat for the purpose of deternining this matter. The hom. gentleman did all that was in his power, as did also those associated with him and those who supported the (ioverment. to deprive the Province of Ontario of a still larger portion of the tervitory which rightfully belonged to her. 1 am not gring to alopt the hom. gentleman's tactics so far ats the Province of Ontario is concerned. The hom gentleman and his colleagues then complained that my friend and leader who sits now hesinde me had not properly regarded the interests of Quebee in unlertaking to uphold the decision that was given by that arbitation. The hon. member for Three Rivers sees now, that if his proposition is carried out, (quebec has heen put in a better position than she was before ; and she is being pat in that position, not leceanse that she is entitled to the lymulary which she is now asking to establish, but because my hon. friend had agreed to a reasonable and fair settlement of the loundaries of the Province of Ontario. Weare prepared to regard from a perfectly fair standpoint. the claims that are now being made on the part of the Province of Quelec. The hom. gentleman will sep, I suppose, from what the Minister of Interior says, that neither the forermment nor the House is in a position to accept this proposition at this monent, becanse the necessary information with regard to the course ani direction of the river which he proposes as the loundary, is not known, and until that is known I suppose he will not press the House to take a leap in the dark. But there is no doubt whatever, that the interests of Quelec will not be jeopardized ly delay : and what is more, the disposition to deal fairly by the province has not been lost because the hon. gentleman and those who associated with him have in former days modertaken to ileal mufairly by the Province of Ontario. I supposed, Sir, when the hon. gentleman made his speech that he would have made a hamdsome acknowlelgment of his mistake in this particular, and would have heen disposed to apologize for the attempt which had been made to commit a wrong on the lrovince of Ontario. The hon. gentemanhas mot done that : but eventhough he has not done it, so far ats I an concerned I do not propose totakemy revengeon the Prorince of Quebec. Inotice that the hom. Minister of Justice eaid that the House had gone a gronl way heyom the adjudication of the Judicial Commatiee in regard to the bomiary. Well, sir. the Judicial Committee decided he question. following the decision of the arbitration in so far as the guestion was hefore them. It was supposed that the whole guestion would have heen before them: hat at the last moment the fovernment of Camala hacked out as a party. After pressing to re-npen the guestion hefore the Judicial Committee, they world not submit the guestion to the decision of that Committee. sof far as it was one between them aml the Province of Ontario. But the lecision of the Committee indicated very clearly that whenever the guestion should go to them for alljulication. the Albany River womilh be declared to be the homintry of Gutario on the north down to James Bay : and 1 suppose the (iovernment, like Mr. (rockett, saw in what direction the deci sion pointel, an! came down in time, in order to sare their lignity : ame the hom. gentleman, as one of the Ahbinistration. of comrse, did previsely what his colleagues dial in that matter.

Reports from engineers sent to investigate said chamel in 1 s 1 : hith. Cupies of evidence given as to the depth, ynamtitirs, de.

He salid: Before moving this motion, I would like to explain the reasons why lask for it. A nmmer of years ago the fovemment deeided to constract a new channel throngh what is commonly kown ats the Gialops Rippils. I comsider that this work was a of navigation of the st. Latwrence, and therefore. hitel this chamel heen laid out and constructed in the propere mammer. it would have been of great value to the forwamers. When it was decined to construct it, an engineer. Mr. 'Tom s. Rubidge, wats appointed to survey the rapids and atscertain the exact slepth of water throughout the rapirls. After he hatl mande this surrey. he wats appointed to lay out the chamel, and then he wats mate engineer in charge of the works, remaining there from the time they were started matil they were completed, or satid to he completed, and were taken off the contancors hatme. Now, Sir, while these works were being comstructed, the forwarders aml the people of my constituency were led tobelieve that the rook excavated would he deposited in hays or in rleep water. where it would not be dangerons to navigation. But after the works were completell rumomrs were at loat that a great quantity of the rock, instean of heing remosed, was thrown at the sides of the ehamel, and that a large quantity had not been dredged out at all. Now, Nir, the cost of this chamel has been in the neighbourhool of half a million clollars, aceording to the Auditor (ienemal's Report, which was for making a chamel $2(N)$ feet wide and 17 feet deep; and included in this sum is something in the neighbourhored of $\mathrm{S}(\mathrm{O},(\mathrm{ON})$ or $\mathrm{Sl}(\mathrm{N}),(\mathrm{NX})$ for extras in going helow the grade to ensure at depth of 17 feet. I understand that there is a further claim verging on a fuarter of a million clollars now in the department for other extras of some kimi, although what they are is a mystery to me. Now, Sir, that chamel has been rompleted two years, and I would like to state what the experience of the forwarlers with it has been thas far. Nhortly after its completion the barge ('omflor, ownen by the Kingston Forwarding (o., was coming down the river in tow of a thg, aml sthek in what was known ats the north chamel oroldehamel. This, of comese, mate it improssible for other vessels to use the chambel ats they hat heen doing for a great number of years. A few homers afterwards the steamer forerillarame down the river with a raft in tow, and not knowing that the ! 'onflor wis there went ahealmatilit wastondite to thrn aromml, and she was forced either to ran into the harge ame sink it or to make the first attempt to pass through the new chamel. The captain chose the latter altemative, atm the result of his attempt camnot be better explained than it was hy whet appeared in the

- Gaptain diaskin, of the Montreal Tramsportatiom Combans. Was down at the dalops Rupide vesterdayamb while there saw a sipht of a lifetime. The Kingston and Muntreal Cos's barge I 'under is stuek in the north ehamel. and thus navisation is whstructed. Some time ugo the sovernment expended si, (n) No, (No in makine the south channel mapable, but mariners are afraid to take a boat down it. While the cantain was standing at the mapids. he saw the Trime fler approaching with a ruft in tow, and making for the nurth channel. The pilot evilemty not being aware that the Condor was in the way, when he saw her he touk a turn for the south channel, and was thus compelled to make the first altempt to narigate. His feelings can he hetter imagined than deseribed. when he saw he mas a hout to make the first run of this channel and with $\leqslant 50$, ovi worth of timber after him. About halfwas down the tug ram ona ruck, anil slew armund as if she were on a pirot. The raft rushed down and struck her on the stern, wheeling her about, and then went on pulling the steamer off the rocks, and towed her stern first down the rapids. It is not known whether she is seriously damaged. Had the been struck amilships she would have leen smashed topieces. Her escape was a narrow one. The I'ruerller left diarden Island with a raft on Tuesday evening at six and arrived at Montreal at three thisafternoon, makink the fastest trip un record."
This was the first test of the new chanmel, and it Wats mate ly a steamer drawing only 4 on is feet of Water. l'revions to the chammel being made. there was a depth of 9 feet 6 inches in ang part of the rapids, yet here was a steamer drawmg less than io feet that piles up on the rocks when attempting to enter the channel. The next test was in 1891, afterwe hat asked for an investigation of the chamel. The stemm barge Viatuere, with a large in tow, attempted to run the channel, and the result was stated hy Mr. Rubidge in an interview with a reporter of the Ottawa Gi/iarn, which appeared in that paper on the 17 th of October, 1891. Mr. Rulidge saill:
"It is true, there are at present n number of grainIaden bonts tied up at Prescott. on account of low water in the old channel at Gulops Rupids, but there is not the least necessity for then remaining there. The new channel, commenced by the Goverminent 12 years ago, and completed at no little expense of cash and skill, is now uvailable for vessels. It has a clear depth of if feet, and as there are beacons at both ends, is perfectly easy of navigation. To prove the practicability of the channel, I had the big steamboat Niagara tow one of the largest-sized Whitehall barges laden through the channel. There were several pilots on board, and all were sitisfied of the navigability of this channel. Of course it had never been formally opened, and not having been pressed on the notice of the forwarders, they seem unwilling to snmehow haye their barges proceed through it, although the channel is straight and easy to rum.
Now, Mr. Rubidge stated that this was one of the liargest-sized birges. On the contrary, it is one of the smallest barges that navigate the sit. law. rence : and yet, in order to secure its safety ingo. ing down the chamel. the large liovernment tug Wats placed heside the harge : liut, inste:ad of gobing down safely. as Mr. Rnhilge states in this interriew, when they were in the centre of the chamel, from some accilent on other, the hawser broke. and the tug and the barge turned around and went lown harkwards. The next attempt wats mate ley the steanser ()rien, and she did go cown saticly. hut afterwards the captain preferred using the old chamel rather than the new, in fact coming down the canal, one time instead of risking the: new channel. I never heard of the Niet!riet suing down the chamel a secomd time after her tirst attempt. The next text wats male he the steamer (rasero, on the 17th lecember, Is!in. Althomg drawing omly if feet of water, she struck the rocks, and the adptain told me that he hat mo hesitation in saying that his honat struck on rocks which were pile-l up on the site of the chammel when this chammel was mande. Now, Sir, this is the experience of the forwarders with that chamel. Mr. Rubidge tells us that the chamel is st maight. I woulif like any member of this Homse who is acyuainted with any captain who navigates the River sit. Lawrence, to enmpire: alont it, and if they do they will time that it is one of the meanest channels to enter. and to get out of, that there is in the river. It is placed in the meanest pant of the rapids possible.
 Ontoher, Ix! 1 , you will see that Mr. D). (:. Thomson, the manager of the Domtreal Transportation (ompany at Montreal, complains bitterly in regarid to this chamel. If you refer to the Kingston From of 2 Brd ( )etoler of the same year, yon will find (aptain John Gaskinalso complains, and if you refer to the meeting of the (ianalian Matine Association reporter in the Toronto Empior of fth Felmary, 1sion, you will see that the Marine men all complain in regrat to this chamel. Last fall the forwarders vessels were detained at Prescott for days and days at a time, and the $y$ were forcel tos loring an elevator from Kingston to l'rescott and lighten their barges to 8 feet : and though there should be 16 or 17 feet in this chammel, yet they were forced to go down the ohd chamel. and hy these delays great loss wos cansen to them. 1 am satistied that a great wrong has been done ly some parties, lut I wish it to be distinctly malerstood that I am not findine, any fault with the (iovernment. I askell the abting Minister of Railways and Canals, hefore the present Minister took that office, to investigate this matter, and I believe he did everything in his poiser to get at the leottom of the difticulty, and 1 think the present Minister has been doing his best to find out the tronble. I have no fault to find with the (iovermment and am satisfied that they will do all they can to rectify the matter. I therefore hope that they will not object to bring Bown the papers, and that as soon as possible, in order that the forwarders and public may see how this matser stamls.

Mr. HAGGART. I am sorry so hear from the remarks of the hon. gentleman, thet the expenditure which has been made hy the conntry on this camal has not had the result expected, hat I think the hom. gentleman must be misted when he satys that, not withstanding the large expenditure on the Galops ('anal, the water has so mueh derereased. Complaints have heen made that the expenditu: made ly the (iovermment had not hrought alwout the ressilt anticipated. and mis predecessint, the late acting Minister of Railways and (iamals, wrilered an enguiry to be mate into the subject. The repont of the engineers is in the repartment, anm, whike that does mot justify the expectation which the dow. erment haul att tirst. and while the depth of water wats not as great as the engineers had reported to the (iovernment it womble he, still it is to the effier that there is a sutficient depth of water to take downall hats that navigate the camal, that is, ahmot 1.) feet of water. I internd to have a further examination made of this particular work to see what the ar tual lepph is. I can only saty now that the latest reports atre that the chanimel is of sulficient depth, and that, if it were not for the side current, it could be saccessfully ased. I think the hom. gentleman must be mistiaken ans to the extras, hecanse mo payments have heen made in the cases t" which he referved. I will have much pleasine in bringing down all the papers the hom. gentleman ataks for.

(ANADA AND NEWFOLNDLAND.

Mr. WHITE (Shellmurne) asked, Whether the Government have considered the adrisability of enforcing regulations against Newfomidand fishermen fishing in (Gandian waters, similar to those which Newfommdhant enfores igainst (Guadian fishermen fishing in Sewfommiami waters:

Mr. TUPIPRR. The subject covered by this question is receiving the consideration of the fiovernment.

Mr. WHITE (Nhelloume) askel, Whether the attention of the Minister of Marine has been calleed to a letter pulbished in the Montreal Witurss of 9 h Felruary? Is it true that the Canadian Government promisel the Newfomdand (iovernment to divide the proceeds of licenses given in ('amadia to American fishermen, and which licenses were to rum in Newfoundland as well as in cianda, and to return part thereof to Newfomalland" Has the Canadian (iovernment since been asked and has it refused to make such division and return, or is there reason to believe that the Newfoundland (iovernment collected upon licenses granted by them to Americans, recognized in Canada and retainel to the use of the colony, as large an amome for license fees as Canada collected?

Mr. TUPPER. My attention was called to the letier mentioned. After the Washington treaty of 1888 was negotiated, and legislation was obtained for the granting of licenses under the mollus rivendi proposition, the understanding between Newfoundland and Canada was to this effect : that the two Governments would issue licenses to fishermen for the privileges mentioned in the modus mivendi proposition, and that an account of the fees collected should be kept by each Government, and a division of those fees should he made at the end of cath seasom. In aceordance with that understandinge a strict accome of those fees was kept by the bepartment of Fisheries in (antalia, and a copy of each license issued was sent hy that department to the fovermment of Newfomblant. At the end either of the lirst or the seemen seasm, the Newfommand fovermment, having made nu return of the fees eollected for licenses issum liy them, a reguest was madely the (amadian dovermment on the Newfomdlame dowemment for a statement of thase collections and the licenses issued by that ( iovermment. That information was int siven, and on the secome appliation being mate the (iovermment of Newfomdland refused to give the information desiren, as to the number of liecones issited or the amount collected. Comsergently, it has heen impossible to make ang tenter of a division of the proceeds from those licenses, on the part of the Canalian fiovernment : athl, for that reasom, it might be assumedthough the Canarlian diovernment have not dealt. with the last sulject referred to - that the anome collected in Newfomdlaml was lawere. I may say that thave reason to helieve from information ofi. taine: that the Newfomilland dovermment did collect a latger amonnt from the sale of these modn.; rivend licenses. ham was collected by (ianda.

Mr. LACRIER. The hom. sentlenam hats just made a very important statement of which, for m y part, I was ignomat up th this moment, that is, that there was an agreement entered into hetween this (iovernment and the Newfommland Government. and that conrespenimence on the subject followed. It wombld be impertant to the Honse to hate that correspondence. I suppose there will the no oljeection to hringing it down.

Mr. TLP'PER. I think there will be no ohjeetion to laying on the Table the despatehes relating to the subject at once. amil I will select them ani loring then down.

Mr. WHITE: (Shellurne) askel, Whether the attention of the Minister of Marine has heen called to the statememe made by the Hon. A. W. Harrey. a member of the New foundiand invermant. Before the Buated of Trate at Halifax on Monday last:

Mr. TCPIPRR. My attention was called to this staternent, and I regret that I cammot agree with Mr. Harvey in the statement made by hinn concerning the facts of the casc in dispute.

Mr. WHITE (Nhelhmene) asked. Whether the Govermment of Newfomdiam has ever made to the (iovernment of camala any formal complaint of prohluced any evilence that Camalian ressels oh. taining hait in Newfomadland unter the Bait Act of the colony, violated the provisions thereof by selling hait to the French tishermenof st. Pierre:

Mr. TUPPER. With the exception of a genemal allegation that Canadian ressels had violated the provisions of the Bait Act, no complaint or evilence to that effect has ever been made or produced by the Government of Newfomathand or from any other source.
Mr. D.AVIES (P.E.I.) Was that genemal allegation made in a despatch ?

Mr. TUPPER. Yes, hut no instance was given.
Mr. WHITE (Shellourne) asked, Whether the (iovermment of Canala has ever offered the fioremment of Newfoundland to secure the enactment of such legislation as would enalle the cincermment of Newfondland to enforee in Canadian courts the penalties provided in bonls given ly Canadian fishermen, in order to secure lait in Newfomdland. in case the condition of such homds were violated. and hats the dovernment of Newfoundiand erer asked such or any other legislation in this connection:

Mr. TUPIPER. The Comadian (iovernment have on several oceasions informed the bovermment of Newfoundand of their readiness to obtain any legislation enabling the Newfoundland authorities toolitain any remedy mader the bonds contemplated lig the Bait Act, as soon ats Canalian vessels were acoorded the privileges of that Act, and allowed to take out licemses as they did originally.

Mr. LACRIER. Will this correspomence als, le brought down:
Mr. TLPPER. Ves.
Mr. DATIEN (P.E.I.) The hom. genteman did not answer the last part of the question.

Mr. TCPlPER. In reply to the last part of the question. I maty sty that the dovermment of New: foumdand hats not asked for that legislation, hecanse the perioxl was not reached when the assumate of the C'inathian dovermment expired when this legislation was hal which produced the Bait Act.
Mr. WHITE (Nhelhume) asked, Whether the Government of (amala is aware that the dovernmemt of Newfomiliand. When endearouring to oltain Her Majestys consent th the Bait Act passed ly the Legislature of that colomy, distinctly wo. mised that the provisions of such Act shoulil not lee enforcel against ("amadians: Is it a fact that silue the present (iovermment of Newfomilland came into office, such promise hats been riolated continuonsly and that such promise was violated in 1sen, prior to any protest by the Canalian (onemment against the propsed armoment betwen the Chited states and Newfomdland:

Mr. TLPPPER. The (ionermment of Canalia is aware that the dowerment of Newtomilland, when embearouring to ohtain Her Majesty somsent to the Bata Aet passen hey the Legislature of that colong, distinetly promised that the provisions of such Aet should not be cuforced against (anadians, and therefore in this form it was an assmance given by the representatives of that colony to Her Niajesty: oncermment. : and also commmicated iliectly and formally to the Gualian dovernment, that the Bait Act shombl be applied equally to the citizens of Newfomalland and the citizens of Canalla, that there shoula the no difference in its enforeement against our own citizens and theirs. As to the last part of the question, I will not allude to the date, becanse I am not sure at what time the present (iovernment of Newfomalland came into power, hat long anterior to the Bond-Blaine negotiations, that is anterior to the date when the Canadian dovernment learnen of them, which wats in the fall of 189O, and in the heginming of that seasm, there was a complete departure from the position the Govermment of Newfoundlamel had assumed in regarl to the subjects to which 1 have referred. Camadii a vessels were prevented ohtaining licenses on the same terms as those of Newfoundland or of the United States, and at the beginning of the season a tomnage fee was exacted from the Canadian vessels which was not exacted from the others.

Mr. Terper.

Mr. LAURJER. Has the hon. gentleman any record of that?

Mr. TUPPER. Yes. All these points will be included in the papers bronght down. I suppose these guestions have been asked hy the hon. gentleman in view of the statements which were mave hy Mr. Harrey, hecause on some prints the papers we have are at variance.

Mr. IACRIFR. I askeal the guestion becanse it is ohrions that mere verhal statements would not he guite satisfactory when we may have the docruments laid before ns.

Mr. TLUPl'ER. I recognize that, and therefore I purposely mate my reply brief.

Mr: LAURIER. I hope the papers will he brought down at an tarly date.

Mr. TUPP'RR. At a very tarly date.

OOPVRIGHT RECIPRO(ITV WITH THE CEITEIN STATES.

Mr. Bow FiRs asked, Whether it is the intention of the (iovermment to arrange a reciprovity of eopyright with the fiovermment of the Uniten States at an early period?

Sir JOHN THOAMPSON. We think that the enpyright enactments of (amala ahealy give to foreigners all proper facilities. The Conited States has very recently settled its copyright policy. and we have no reason to expect an early ehamge.

Mr. DEN[SON moved:

That whereas the new luited States camal at Salult Ste. Marie is being constructed at a depth if 18 feet. and whereas it is proposed in that conuntry to deepen their canals on the (ireat Lakes to not less than 20 feet, and whereas the proposed increase in depth hat already been mate at the nouth of the Detroit River in the opinion of this House it is expedient that the Soulanges Camal and the other eanals of the hiver St. Lawrence should be deepened to 20 feet.
He said: In moving this motion, I confess that I approach the sulject with some dittidence, as I am not an engineer. nor an I specially acequainterl with matters of this kiml. Sith it hats appeared to me for some years hack that I ought to bring the subject up, in this Honse. and that something ought to le ione towatils lecpening our canals on the St. Latwrence River to a proper amount. When I say a proper amomet. I mean making them of such a ilepth that it will sulfice once for ill, instead of iloing the work piece loy piece as heretofore. I maty sity that hetween the town of Port Arthur and the city of Montreal the only obstruction that exists to a 0 feet natigation, is the insulficient. depth of the Wellame (imal and the cumals on the st. Lawrence River. In making this motion I womblike to saty that it is not an entirely new idea, for I homlin my hami it report to the Hon. Mr. Popre: made by Mr. Rohert ( $\therefore$ Donglass in 1sist. in which he alvocates an enlargement of the canals. As long ago as that late he then showed that in Issis, when the Wellame ('amal had just or harely been completerl, seren vessels patssed throngh which hat to be lightened before they could get through. In Issis, (ie2 vessels had to be lightened lefore they conld (g) through that canal ; and no less thath $1 \overline{1}+11$ ionis hat tor be taken off the ressels. of 2.0 per cent of the whole amount, at a cost of si?, $\overline{5} 5!$. I have also here the opinion of Mr. W. L. Frost, President of the Ogilenshurgh and Lake (hamplain Railway, whos says:
"As to my views on the sulject, in brief, they are that you should deepen the Welland Cunal to 16, 18 or 20 feet if possible ; to stop at 14 feot, while it will help, will not put the route on a level with the Buffalo and Erie Canal, with their tree canals. If the Welland Canal can be deepened to 20 teet, you would command the trade of the lakes, in my opinion. and as you decrease from that point you only come into competition with Buffalo and will only be partially successful. Any increase in the depth is a move in the right direction, but I trust you will not stop at less than 16 feet." Again, in the same report it is pointed out that one great advantage in having the canals deepened to a proper amount is that it would allow a large amount of shipping to come down to the sea which now hats to lie in the harbours of the upper lakes for five or six months in the year, and these ressels would he enabled to trade with the West Indies, or with any other country where they felt disposed to venture. 1 will read the charges, in several comitries, for the carriage of grain by rail-ways:-

Now. Mr. Speaker, I would like to show the enormous amount of commerce that is going on on the upper lakes, and in doing so 1 will lee compelleal to yuote some statistics, which I will ask the indulgence of the House for doing. I have oltainel the mose of these statistics from a very interesting paper written ly Mr. E. L. Corthell, of Chicago, which he read before the Society of Engineers in Canada: it is a very exhaustive report. I would like to draw the attention of the House to the very rapid increase which has taken place in the num. ber of large ships suiling on the upper lakes. In 1859, 36 of the largest vessels on the lakes averaged a tonnage of $\mathbf{7 0 0}$. In 1890, the fleet doing lusiness on the great lakes had increased to $2,0,05$ ) vessels, with a net registered tomage of 826,360 , valued at $\$ 58,120,380$. Since I took these figures from Mr . Corthell's paper, I have learned that the value is not placed so high by the census bureau, which values them at about $\$ 48,809,7$, 0 , some $\$ 9,0 \mathrm{KO},(010)$ or $\$ 10,(000,000)$ less. But those tigures are startling in their enormity ; it is startling to think that in the upper lakes there should be such a vast volume of trade as would require vessels worth $\$ 48,000.000$ to $\$ 78,010,(0) 0$ with which to do it. The Canalian marine, I may mention, in the upper lakes consists of $\mathbf{6 4 7}$ vessels, with a tomage of 132,971 tons, and a value of $\$ 3,989,130$. The total coast and inland shipping of Canaila consists of 7,153 vessels, with a tomnage of $1,040,481$, valued at $\$ 31,213,430$. The traffic through the Detroit River, through which pass the produce and ships of hoth nations. is very large. In 1890 the tomnage was over 23, (ONO, MOM). In the eastern camals it is a little different. While the tomage has increased so enormonsly in the west, and while the tomage of the vessels passing through the canals shows an enomons increase, the tomage roing through the Brie and st. Lawrence Canals las loeen stationary, or has fallen lack; and the reason is. undoubtedly, the insufficiency of water in the canals. On prage $4!$ of his paper. Mr. Corthell says:

- The waterways out of the enstern end of Lake Erie and beyond to the seat, have had no appreciable increase. in tact there has been at decrease during the hast fifteren years. The Erie Canal is carrying nu more than it did many vears ago, und through the Welland and St. Lawrence River camals there has been practically no increase. In $1 \times 83$, hhe tutall tonnage on the Welland Cimail mas 851.959 :

Then he goes on to saty:

"The freight service on the great lakes is 12 Thiper cent of the total freifht serviec rendered by all the railwass of the Luited states. At the average rate of all the freight mared in 1 ssis atacordiny to the statistician of the Cnited States Commerce Commision. 9 ? 2 mille per ton per mile) the cargo carried on the liakes in that year would have cost the shiphers si43,0i9.2. 3 .51. Adnpting $1 \frac{1}{2}$ mills per ton per mile as the a verage cost of liake transmortation. the entire cost for the seation of 1590 was $833,177.540 .710$. The saving to the public, the refore. by water tratispurti-

That is the statement made hy Mr. Cortheil. an eminent engineer, that by having the canals and the Waterway on the upper lakes there was a sating during the year of $\$ 119$, , (nn),(Mn), which would be sufficient, I lare say. tocomplete this work twiceover. The eesist per ton of freight going through the lakes, the Wellamidand. Lawrencelcamalsto Liverpool. is Wont realam thence to Liverpol the enst is isio. 2, and route open 234 days. 1 should like totace the course of a ressel from Port Arthur throngh the lakes and camals to Montreal. Latke superiof, I need harrlly mention, is +12 miles long hy liai wide, and a ressel drawing is feet of water can leave Port Arthur and sail, with minterrupted navigation, for a distance of $20: 3$ miles to the sault, where it will pass through a canal of one mile, and st. Mary's River, which is athout $\mathrm{a}_{\mathrm{a}}$ miles more. The Sault, or st. Marys Camal, was originally huilt in 1852 as a 12 feet canal; in 1 xs 2 the depth was increased to 16 fect, and, as we all know. in lask it was further increasel to 20 feet. I believe it was proposed on our own side of the river to have our canal an 18 feet camal: but the (iovernment very wisely changel their plans and made it correspond with the canal on the other side, and thus they have provided a canal for vessels drawing 20) feet. Passing through Lake Huron, which is 263 miles long by 101 miles wile, the ressel will pass throngh the St. Clair River and lake and the Detroit River, in all about io miles more, and arrive at Lake Erie. The canals in this 72 miles. like at the Sault, have been repeatelly increased in depth. The st. Clair Flats canal was in 1866 proposed to be 13 feet; in 1873 it was deepened to 16 feet, and now the project is completed by a 20 feet channel. The Lime Kiln crossing has been deepened at different periods, for in 1858 it was $9 \frac{1}{2}$ feet, and in 1871 it was increased to a depth of 12 feet, in 1874 to 13 feet, in 1885 to 16 feet, and in 1890 the depth was increased to the standard of 20 feet. Passing through Lake Erie, which is 250 miles by 60 miles, we come to the Welland Canal. This canal, like all the others, has gone through the same experience of enlargement at different times. In 1824, when it was proposed to build it, the projectors looked for a depth of $8^{\circ}$ feet. In 1841 it was enlargeed, and in 1843 it was enlarged to give 9 feet on the sills and $11 \frac{1}{2}$ on the sills in the entrance locks; in 1880 it was enlarged to 14 feet, and is now, as I have alrealy stater, altogether ton small. In fact, the Wellam Camal had not been enlarged to a $1+$ feet canal hefore it was discovered to be altogether too small. I helieve I am correct in saying that the last Welland Camal enlargement was projected for 12 feet, but during its construction the (iovernment satw their way dear to increase it to $1+$ feet, and it was done. After being enlargeel to it feet, so long ago as 1884 the camal was found to be toe small. Notwithstanding this last increase in size. the vessels passing through the canal in 1sss) were obliged to reduce their conable them to, pass through the canal to Lake Gutario. This wats a serious loss to vessel owners. in compelling them to meet his heary expense. Passing throught the 1 elland Canal, 2 fif miles connecting with Lake Cutario, which is 1 !o miles hy it miles, a ressel can sail on to Prescott 2 ? 4 miles, where the first canal on the st. Lawrence is met. I am not quite safe on my ground when I saty that a vessel drawing 18 feet cam sail to Prescott. hecause $I$ am not aware of the exact depth of the St. Lawrence between Kingeton and Preseote, hat I am toll that is feet of water is foum throughout that distance. 1 have shown that a vessel going from Port Arthur to the head of the Prescott Camal can make the passage all that distance, 1.1.is miles, drawing is or elo feet of water, except in passing thongh the Welland Canal which has om? It feet. In comection with the st. Laiwrence. I should again like to point out that the works on these canals have heen proceeded with step hy step. as is the case with the other canals, and have leen enliurged bit by bit. The intembed depth of the St . Laturence canals in 1841 was 9 feet. In 1871 it was decided to cularge to 1 ? feet throughout, and shortly afterwards it was decided that the ultimate depth should be 14 feet on the sill. As to the lachine (:anal, as far hack as 1804 the Goremment of Lower (anailia constructed it 3 -foot channel there. In IS:2l it was increased to 5 feet in depth and $2 x$ feet wide at the bottom, and since that time it hats been enlarged and enlarged. I an satisfied with respect to the new canal at soulanges, that it will pass through the same stages. We are going to construct it with a depth of 14 feet, but before it and the other canals are finished we shall ascertain with respect to this canal, as we have ascertained with regard to every other canal, that we were not abreast of, but behind the times. This, if possible, should be avoided in the future. It seems to me that we should, in building a new camal, construct it of such size and depth as to answer for all time, and this finality would be attained by making it $\mathbf{2 0}$ feet deep. I may be met with the question of the feasibility of constructing $\mathbf{2 0}$ feet canals on the St. Lawrence. I an informed by good engineers that it is quite feasible, that it is only a question of expense. We Canadians believe we have done a good deal in regard to canals, and are doing a gooil deal still. No doubt such is the case; but at the same time we should look at what other countries have done. England has $2,5(0)$ miles of canals: Ireland has 310) miles : Russia 900 miles : Sweden 3(1) miles; two of them being 50 . mile canals. (iermany in 1871 hat.' $1.2=0)$ miles of canals. In Holland they have 9 20 miles of canals ; France has 3,123 miles of camals, on which she has expenden up to 18,2 the enormous sum of and France has now one of the most magnificent internal waterways of any country in the world. The Briere (anal in France, comnecting the Rivers Seine and Lorire is $34!$ miles long. The Caledonia Canal in Sootland has a depth of 2() feet, and the iloucester and Berkeley (anal is 1 bid miles long with a depth of is feet. Then we come to the suc\% (amal, of which it is hardly necessary for me to mention the size ; that camal hats a depth of 2 fifet. In looking orer the work that has heen come in canals in other eomutries, it encourages us here to punsue a policy which will be equal th the fature requirements of the trale of this sereat North-West comatry. It is only necessary to print out the instance which we have now in Fagland, of the great Manchester Ship Camal, to see that the merchants and citizens of Manchester in builling that canal for ovean-going shipping, which will cost. I helieve, sin),(MK), (HN), have fitith in the unlertaking. I think that is conclasive proof that the age of camals has not passed, anel that they are asimportant, 1 may say, isever. Xaw, Mr. Speaker. I shatl give the Hanse some facts at to pmblic op pinion leing in favour of eanals. Last December in the city of Detroit they held, what they callen, a Deep Water Convention emprising engineers and others thonghout the Chited States. and they passed there some four resilutions. They askel Comgress for:

"The speedy eompletion of a chamuel not less than twenty feet deep, amplif sunficient width. between Chic:ago, lulluth, Superiur and Buffalb: scemul, surveys, eximinations and estimates with a riew to the construetion of a waterway throurh our territury of suticient capacity to float vesels drawing tweaty feet of water, connecting the upper lakes with tidewater: third, the improvement of the Itudson River to a natigable deyth of twenty feet from Cussackie to Truy : faurth, libernl appropriations for needed lighthouses, © ©e., to bive added security to mavigation throurhout the entire chain of lakes."
The Chicag, Trib, ,um: published of course in a great railway centre. and on that account. I suppose, opposed to canals. stated a short time ago ats follows, in reference to the Deep Water Convention:-
" It was either to deplete the Treasury ; or a deliberate attempt to make them bay the large expense of diverting the commerce of the Sorth-W est throngh Canada."
Well, Mr. Speaker, I am sure we m Canadia can stand that part of it cery well, and anything we can ilo to convert this conomons tratic of the lakes past our doors and down the St. Lawrence to the sea must be of great benefit to this comutry. I might saty that Toronto is interested in this work, as last year some 2,4107 vessels came into our port ; and, some time ago, a reporter of the Toronto World called upon some of the ship-owners and asked their opinions with reference to this matter. With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I would like to real what a few of them say :

[^9]probably still further reduce their profits, but it would also help them by allowing the vessels to leave for other waters in times when trade is slack here. It was a proposition far ahead of the times, but it was sure to come some time in the future."
"Capt. J. H. Magarty said there was not a vessel-owner in the country who wonld go against the proposition. They wanted the camals deepened. no matter who did it. Ho did not hold the opinions of some people. who seem to think that the decourning of the canals would make every town on the lakes a se:amort."
" Mr. W. A. (ierdes was plad to sce the brighter prospects of the realimation of the vessel-owner's hopes. It was iust what they had leeen working for for years. Not that theg had ever met with opposition. It had niways been Nir John A. Macilonalds desire to improye the camals of thest. lawrence, and he had assured them it would be dune as suon as the money was fortheoming. It Wond give the inter-provincial trade agreat impetus, for vesels carrying flour and arain cargoes to the Maritime Irovinces would be able to bring back coal at a figure far below the Pennsylvania product."
"Mr. William Ince said the decpening of the canals would encourape the building of larger and better-fitted vessels and ats at naturnl consequence the shipping trade Wond lave to assume greater proportions."
Since I put this motion on the I'iper. I had sent to me the sixth ammal report of the President of the Port Arthur Boaral of Trade, and he, also, very strongly alvocates the enlargement and the deepening of the canals. As to the expense of such a great work, I have heen toll by a gentleman who to sl(h),(KM).(MK), but supposing that it cost as much as the Canalian Paciti: Railway, I conteml that it would he of as great an advantage, on the whole, as the Canadian Patitic Railway has heen: and it is mmecessary for me to dwell on the immense henetits conferred on this comentry by that railway. Our ( 'anamian waterways are the property of everylusly, while a railway is the property of the company to which it helongs. Any person who wishes to invest his money in shipping cum make use of our canal system, ind he can derive henefit from the money expenden in improving our waterways. I think that in this matter we should not make two bites at a cherry. We shonld enlarge these camals so as to answer the purposes of our trate for a long time in the future. some may think that my scheme is tow ambitions, but, if it is foum that it would be too costly an operation to carry out at once, there is mo reason why the Soulinges (ianal should hot have its locksconstructen of suchat size that it could afterwards be decpened from $1+$ feet th the depth I am advocating, namely. 20 feet. The soulanges Camal is a new work, and it seems to me a great pity, in view of our past experience, that we shouhl go through again as we have done lefore on this plat, of first building the canals and enlarging then afterwards. It is needless to point out that it would be much more costly to enlarge an old canal, than to construct at first one sufficiently large to meet all requirements. The Canadian Pacific Railway, I mulerstame, is now taxed to its utmost to carry the grain of the North-West to the seahoarrl. Last year that country had a surplus of twenty or thirty million bushels, and we are told that the Canalian Pacific Railway Company contemplate doubling the track between Winipegy and Port Arthur. Even sup. posing that project is carried out, the railway will still be totally inadequate to carry out the surplus grain of that enormous region, the development of which is only in its infancy. I have no doubt that instead of twenty or thirty million bushels, not many years will pass hefore there will he two humdred or three hundred million bushels exported from our North-West. Nome of the finest wheat land in the world is there, and all that is required is the large immigration which we are now hoping for. Then, the mineral wealth of the Sudhury district has only just been disconered, and is now heing opened up: and there is no knowing what vast dimensions the prolucts of those mines will assiume in the future. It is sitid that the most magniticent mickel mines in the world are there Capital is begiming to go in. and the development of those mines must enormonsly increase the trattic of our waterways. This tratfic. which I hope to see promoted hy the deep pening of the camals to an adequate depth, will help not only Kingston, Cohourg. Toronto, Hamilton and all the ports in the upper lakes, lout all parts of the North-W est, liy cheapening transport to the sealonard. Every cent saved in shipping a hushel of grain from Port Arthur to the sea, is practically. a cent added to the price of the wheat of our NorthWest farmers. If our canals are deepened, there is mothing to prevent our maritime friends coming in with their ships and loning a large propertion of the trade of the inland laker. I ann told that it now pays well to transport coal from the Maritime Pro. vincesto Montreal and somewhat west of Montreal : but owing to the want of sutficient dept! of water in the canals, it has not hitherto paid to bring it as far west as Toronto. But with a clepth of is or 20 feet of water in the ranals, 1 am told hy vessel owners who know, that they would ghamanee that the Maritime Provinces would supply Themet: ? ma its district with all the soft coal they repuirend. and do it at at cheaper price than we pay for it now. If we could bring coal from ( Cape Breton to Toronto, there would le a proit in a return cargo matle up of flour and other farm produce for the Daritime Provinces. In that way the inter-pro. vincial trate which we all anxiomsly desire womblat be oproned up. I do not know. Mr. Speaker, that I need say much more at present. I will merely reiterate that here we have one of the most mag nificent waterways in the world, in the path of travel from the great wheat-prollucing country on the west to the buother comntry on the east. Wie have a chain of lakes. with it great river which only repuires the expenditure of some money to be sutficiently deepened to bring past our doors the enormous trate of the west, which now seeks other chamels for the want of this work which I adrocate. I will conchade my remarks ly guoting, again from that excellent paper of Mr. (orthell:

"Government must nuw provide these new and enlarged channels of commerce, or see the vast amounts already expended practically lost. Through its inability or uri. willinguess to meet the demands of commerce, it will inevitably see the greatest commerce of the world diverted from its natural channel and taken out of its domains into artificial channels of its neighbour's territory to enrich and develop a ecuntry lying along these artificial routes. The commercial and financial importance in every way to Montreal and to other cities, both Canadian and Enited States, situated on this enlarged natural waterway, can scarcely be over-estimated."

He goes on to say :

" Direct trade with Europe should be the demand of the North-West and all the country tributary to it. The direct pecuniary advantage to the people should not be estimated at less than $$ 2,000$, (100 per annum.'

Mr. BERGIN. Mr. Speaker, the statement made by the hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Denison) I think amply justifies me in supporting his resolution. I do not propose to enter into a discussion of the commerce that will hee createl, or of the amount of freight that could be carried, and that certainly would be carried, if the lakes and rivers affordel a channel of 20 feet in rlepth. The hon. member for West Toronto has shown the House that from Port Arthur to Kingston there is am ample depth to afford passage to vessels drawing on) feet. I propose to show that at a molerate expenditure it is in the power of the dovernment to give to the commerce of this commtry a chamel which would enable vessels drawing (2l) feet of water to go from Kingston to Montreal. The distance from Kingston to Montreal is 119 miles, of this $\bar{i} \overline{3}$ miles is composed of carious reaches in the river letween the different camals. The canal mileage is 43 miles. From Kingston to the foot of Wolfe Island, a distance of 14 miles, there is a chamel nowhere less than $2(1)$ feet deep. and in some places nearly ${ }^{2}(X)$ feet-at chamel straight and wide, and presenting no difticulty whatever to navigation. From the foot of Wolfe Islaml to Brock ville, adistance of $30!$ miles, there is in the American waters a chamel nowhere less than sol feet deep. That chamel, owing to its crooked nature. is $1 \ddagger$ miles longer than a chamel which could be provided in Camalian waters. But a straight one can be provided hetween those two points. where there is not less than 2 ) feet of water. What would make that chamel mavigable on the Camadian side would be to remove some of the lights, so as to aroid ruming aromul some shoals which are in the way of the chamel as at present used. From l'rescott to the G ahops, alout 17 miles, with the exception of 3 miles of a morth chamel that will require to be provided. there is ample water for vessels drawing is feet. The new chamel in the (ialopss will at present affiord passage to vessels hrawing it feet, and there is no engi. neering reason that I know of to prevent its beiny increaseal to 18 feet. From the Galops, through the Rapide Plat, to the heal of the cornwall Canal there cian be no difficulty in getting is feet for vessels ilescending the river. I almit that further deepening would be required for vessels going up. What would be reguired to be removed in these reaches are some small shoals here and there of no very great size and not likely to cost any very large amome of money. From Comwall to Cotean, 31 \& miles, there is nowhere less than 20 feet of water, and in some places, at all events for a long stretch, sil feet of a chamnel. I admit that vessels have oceasionally gone ashore at Lake St. Francis, and between Cornwall and the Lancaster lights, but, except in the case of a short distance near the Lancaster lights, which could be deepened at very small cost, there is a channel nearly 1,200 feet wide and from 20 to 80 feet deep all the way to Cotean du Lac. The Soulanges Canal will afforl the necessary water, if so l,uilt. from that point to Lake st. Louis. Lake St. Lonis, I have reason to helieve from the statements of the engineers. can lie improved at two or three points so as to give the necessary depth of 21) feet. Thus I have gone over that portion of the river between Kingston and Montreal, and I think that the number of points to be improved are so few and the quantity of rock or other obstructions to be removed is so small in comparison with the great adrantage that it would be to this country to afford passage to vessels drawing this amount of water, that I think we are sustainerl in asking the H ouse to carry this resolution of my hon. friend from Toronto (Mr. Denisom). No one, I think, who has paid any attention to the commercial interests of this commtry. who has pail any attention to the difficulties which have been and are now in the way of the marine of this cometry, in the transport of grain from the west to the sealoward, but will admit that there are other difficulties in the way beside the matural difficulties, that the only difficulties plater in the way of the marine of this comentry havenot heen the rocks and the shoals and the shatlows which exist in the river, but that a great deal of the difficulty is due to the want of kinowledge or the want of attention, the want of stuly anil of proper examination made previons to the constraction of our great camals. I have on the floor of this Honse, three or four years asen, shown in great part where and why these difticulties have arisen. The marine of this comitry require to have the tranle of the comutry facilitated in every mamer possible. The works ilesigned to wercenne matural olstructions ought to he constracted in such a way as to promote, not to himder. the navigation of our camals. Take at present the capacity of the locks in our camals. A tug with iwo or three barges, such as the Comifor, would be mable to get through except with two of three lockitges. The tur and these barges conld not le accommondated in one lock. In a little while, should the camals be enlargel, or when these canals are enlarged and deepened, as is proposed maler the present plan. to If feet, the trate of this country will le hindered in getting to the seaboard from Kingston. When they reach the canals, they will have a or $\mathbf{i}$ or more barges of at least the capacity of the Conilor. Which will then be one of the smaller vessels, and, instead of passing through a camal like the Comwall Cimal, in + homs, they will take from 10 to 0 h hours, am, instead of the thy haring only one lockage, she will have tive or six or eight lockages, accor ling to the number of barges she has in tow. I know it may he objected that these great cargoes of grain will he hrought from the west in propellers. Ido not for a moment eredit that anything of the kind will be done. It will be found that these ressels cammot do the work as cheaply or as etficientlyas it can be dome by barges. and when the trade find that it will repuire such a length of time to get throngh the camal, that it will be such a himdance to them and will increase so much the cost of transportation. they will ery loudly to have the locks increased to the properdimensions. We have hefore us in example that ought to influence us very strongly. We have before us, as has been shown ly the lion. member for Torontn (Mr. Denison), the state of the Sault (Ganal, which was first of a lepth of 12 feet, then enlarged to 16 feet, then to is feet and now to 20 feet, and we have in commection with that a lock that will almost pass a flect through at one time. Now we require on the st. Lawrence Canals and on the Wellaml (amal, perhaps not yuite so large locks as those on the Sanlt Canal, but locks not less than (i0) feet in leugth and from ( $\mathrm{i}_{\mathrm{i}}$ to $\mathbf{0} 0$ feet in width. so as to allow a thy with her consorts to pass through in a reasonable time; and, when I add that in the Welland Canal and in the Cornwall Canal, the gates are closed and the water let into the locks in the same old-fashioned way of years ago, that men are seen there with their breasts and their arms on a bar, walking roond and romad until they are gidly, and working in the old capstan and bar style, I think we may fairly ask the (iovermment toabaimion ihe oldsystem and idlopt a methonl of emptying and tillmg the locks which will occupy a very short time in comparison with this antiquated monle. The lock on the Siault is openen, filled amd emptied in an almost incredibly short space of time, comsidering the size of the work and the magnitude of the lock: and sio it will le, I understam, upon our own "Son" Camal. Then, again. in addition to the hindrance that is experienced in the length of time that is consumed, we have also this further fact, that there are wher caluses of delay. Take the camal at Cornwall. A great deal of time is consumed, and a great many accidents have happenel. for wamt of proper light. On all other canals. I maderstamb, we hate the electric light. -fter the new locks were comstructen at the foot of the Cornwall (ianal, ressels ram upon the pier at the entrance to the lock hecanse there was nothing to show to the marine of this comotry that there was a safe and proper channel on the north side of the st. Regis and Comwall lslame. When that is property beacomed and huoged. as it ought to be a deep and safe chamel of $\because 0$ feet, leading direetly into the lon:k at the mouth of the canal, will he ol tained, and mo accilent of that kind womblid be likely thereafter to newr. Then, again, if an accilent did happen in the camal. it could be remedied in a short tine, for information combla be given to the proper ofticer. Now. it is sery often necessany to send a man twelve miles on horselack, or hy carriage, from the hearl the fowt of the canal where the superintendent or proper otticer may happen to bee. A telephone line costing a few humbed dollars would awod all that difticulty. The locks that have heen constructed on the conwall Canal during the past two or three years are of the size which I have just described, and do mot atforsh, I maintain, proper facilities to trade, but on the comurary are actually a himbrance, and will be a still greater hinnance when they come to use these large vessels. Now, in comection with the tince lost in opening and closing these canals, it should be mentioneil that the cost of the maintenance of these locks might well be considered. At present there is a staff of six men at each lock, whereas if the gates were opened and shat by hydraulic power, one mam, under ordinary circumstances, would be sutficient : and there is no canal where such power could be more adsantageously employed than the Cornwall Canal, for there is a sulticient fall from the banks to the river to enalle this to be done. Under those eireumstances the cost of maintenance would be reduced to a minimum insteal of being, as it is now, the large sum that is reguired for the opening and the closing of the gates. Now, not the least of the benetits to be conferred upon this country ly giving to it a canal of ${ }^{20}$ ) feet, is that upon which the member for Toronto tonched a few minites ago. I refer to the growth of inter-provincial trade, without which this country can never be cemented into the great mation which we wish it to become. It seems to me this great difticulty would lee largely removed by our sending our prolucts to the provinces down by the sea, and ly bringing their products back here and carrying them to the North-West. When we shall have established a proper inter-provincial traule, which this project will tend to establish, when we know our brethren down by the sea more intimately, as our greater lousiness comnections will make us know them, and as they come to know us better, I think that the spirit of nationality for which we all pray, and without which this comotry can aever expect to hecome a great nation, will be fostered and strengthened in such a way that we shall no more hear men talking of " our province," of "my province," hut they will speak of Canadia as at whole, and we shall he known abroad, not as North-Westemers, not as Prince Edward Istamers, not as New Brmswickers or Noval Scotians, but we shall be known as Canalimemy. This motive, if there were now other, onght to induce the Government to sem the best men they cam finm. not omly in Canala, but in England and the Cinited States, to see whether this scheme is feasible. to ascertain whether it is true that the engineering difficulties are se tremenlous that we cannot overcome them. I think the ('anadians, as a people, are guite able to hold thar own with any other people in tie word: I think we are as capable of performing great engine ling works as Americans or Finglishmen. But there always has heen, and there always will lo. 1 fear, a set of men who have no faith in their own people or in their own comery : and if Canala is suffering to-day hecause of unskilled engineering, it is hecanse the commissioners who were appointed to huild these canals had no faith in Camadi, and they sent to the Guited states for men beeatuse they thought the engineers of that comotry had greater skill and would he hetter alle to construct our canals than the engineers of our own comatry. But time has hronght its revenge. True, they are not alive to know it, hut the two athe men who plamed these canals, who preparel, at the instance of the Govermment, plans and specitications, and loeation also, for these canals, were they alive to-day, would find that time had vindicated them, that time had shown that the Americion talent that wats employed was uneyual to the occasion, and that events hail proven to the world that the ability, and the skill, and the genins of these two despised Canalians were of a mature to throw entirely into the shade the ahilities of the American engineers who were employed, and to-day Canada has to mourn many, many millions wasten in the. construction of these canals.

Mr. REID. I must take issue with the hom. member for West Toronto (Mr. Denison) anl the hon. member for Connall (Mr. Bergin). Neither of these hom. gentlemen have carefully tracel the route from Preseott to Montreal and return. The lion. member for Cornwall tells us that he has consulted engincers on this matter, and they say that there are no ditficulties hetween Prescott and Montreal that canmot be overcone. Now, I think if he had consulted the mariners, those who are using the rivers, he would have found that there are a great many difficulties. The hon. gentleman says that after leaving Prescott, and before coming to the Galops Rapids, about three miles of rock excaration wonld have to be done. Now, Sir, that three miles of excavation is solid rock, and julging from the cost of rock excavation elsewhere, it would require an enormons amount of money to, make it. Then the hon. gentleman says there is a chamnel of 14 feet draught in the Galops Rapids, which, by a little more expenditure, can be made narigahle. .If the engineer who gave the hon. gentleman this information would study the matter thoroughly, he will express the opinion that the chamel to which he refers, even if lecpenel, is no grool, and that the construction of it proper chamel there would const an enormous sum. When we come to the Cornwall Canal we have 12 miles to be deepened from 14 to 20 feet. The corst of that work woulid be very great. At several points in the different locks hetween Cornwall and Montreal miles and miles of rock excaration will he reguirel, and I have been informed ly one of the leading forwariers that the greater part will he rock excarations. Coming west from Montreal we have first the Lathine (anal. Then there is the soulanges Canal, the wholelength of which hiss to be excavated. After passing (conwall we come to the Farrans Point cianal, one mile long, which would require to he enlargel. Then we have the Williamsharg Camal. 4 miles. and next 7 miles of Galops Rapiols (anal. The cost of these conlargements will be very large. Not omly so, but hetween Cornwall and Presentt there are a great many points where excavations will have to be male. But apart from all this, I claim that a cargo of grain loaded in Chicago for Montreal repuires to be discharged or handled in order to preserve it. I Delieve the distance is so great that the grain is liathe to "heat," and the slight cost of hamdling it in that way is so beneficial to the grain that it is much better to have it put into liarges at Kingstom. I think that if the locks in the camal were made (ion) feet long, that would be of great assistance, for the reason that the harges anil steamers passing hoth ways are delayed for the lack of increased locking aceommonlition. Time is of great importance to forwarlers. and were the locks larger, the fact that we would then he able to lock through it whole tow, or two on three barges at a time would le of great importance. If the locks on the Wellanil Canal had heen buitt $\mathrm{fin}^{(0)}$ feet long. and those on the st. Lawrence (anals (iCK) feet long with a depth of $1+$ feet, it would still be found adrantageons for vessels to discharge a part of their cargoes at Kingston iund to steam down the river with 14 feet draught. I hold that it would be almost impossible for a large ressel, say for) feet long drawing 20 feet of water, to come up the st. Lawrence between the different ends of the canal, on account of the swift current. Vessels of the length of .(N) or (60) feet could hardly come up the river. Under these circumstances, it would be found necessary to construct one long canal. Again, the Sit. Latwrence canals are constructed along the banks of the river, and they are so crooked that large vessels could scarcely pass through them. I, therefore. think the expenditure involvel would be so large as compared with the benetits which would result, that I do not feel justified in voting for the motion proposed by the hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Denison).

Mr. MACDONELL. Itstrikes me that the way to look at this question is in a practical common-sense light. I do not think the hon. gentleman who spoke first on this subject would for a moment dispute the fact that the expenditure would be large, to carry out the improvements advocate! by him lefore the Honse to-day. But when you look at the system of canals in the Dominion of Camala, and trace them from the time they were proposed until the time they were culargen, you find that the sole argument recognized hy the Govermment was the exigency of trade requirements, which needed that the canai system of the Dominion should he enlarged in order to give facilities for larger vessels. No one will dispute the fact that the enlargement of the canals would the of immense adrantage not only to the marine section of the Dominion, but to the people at large. The fact that the covernment recognizel the necessity- of enlarging the canals is obvions from the canal now in comstruction at the sault, a canal whose locks will le (!nN) feet long and owe bil feet wile, therely elliphasi\%ing the fact that it is clearly in the interest of the carrying trate that the locks shombla be increased in size. There may he a difference of opinion as to the expenditure involved in carrying out this work. I do not think my hom. friend who adrocates the prosecution of this work would say for a momest that such a gigantic mulertaking should he completeal at once. I believe it sam le done in sections; as money comes in, and as money can easily le horrowed liy the dovermnent, eertain portions of the work can he prosecuted. There is a canal now projected om the St. Lawrence not many miles away from here. If it is not possible to deepen that camal to a depth of I! feet. such as the depth of the Sault (Gual, could not at least this be dome-to have the locks of that canal deepened to 19 feet and the rest of the canal made uniform with the other canalls of the Dominion: No one for a moment will dispute the fact. that it is economical to spend the amome of money necesury to carry out this malertaking. For instance. the lacks in the old canal to-day are 2011 feet long. $\mathbf{t}_{2}$ feet wile and it feet iecp. and allows a ressel to go throngh carrying e.min) tons. If we seeme 19 feet of excavation. which I believe will give 20 feet on the mitre sill, we allow a vessel to pass throngh carrying a., (h) toms. The cost of carriage is much less in propurtion than the cost of huilding the ressel amb of deepening the canal. I ann told on grool anthority that the Americans have spent on their system of waterways, from the Detroit River to the heal of navigation, alout $\$ 30,(10 \%),(K N)$; but if they have done so. it has savel to the country at least $\mathrm{S} 1: \mathrm{H})(\mathbf{( N K )},(\mathrm{KNO}$. so if the work proposed ly the hom. gentlemian for Toronto (Mr. Denison) was prosecutel slowly and gralually, and if it dial cost $\$ 80$,(0) (o).(mio, the country generally would be recouped at least double that amount. With respect to the improvement of the navigation of the st. Law rence, I timl that the engineer quoted by the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Denison)-Mr. Corthell declares that the st. Lawrence waterway, outside the canals, could le improved, provided the canals were 16 feet in depth, to allow vessels of that draft to pass through, for alout $\$ 27$, (mx), (Ky). 1, therefore, think the improvement of the St. Lawrence cannot be considered as an insuperable difficulty by any means. I do not think anyone disputes the fact that prosperity in the west is very largely owing to the size of the Sault Canal, through which ressels of very large tonnage can pass. For instance, 1 find that during last year there passed through the Sault Canal alsout 2 , rix), ouk tons toms of erpper, amd 3.anin)(MNO tons of iron ore. With the small camal which was at their disposial previons to the comstraction of the new canal, they could ant in three years have forwarded the immense ghantity of trattic that went through the Sante Cinal last year. It is mow fomm, however. that the tratlic fis so great on the upper lakes that the are obliged to construct another canal, to provide for the immense ant growing trade up and down bet ween Lake Huron and Late Superior. Sir. I have very mach pleasme in supporting the motion of the honi member for Toronto( Mr. Denison), and I trust that in the near future we may see something lone by which the wants of the carrying tatale of this comitry may le met ly the dovernment.

Mr. DADIN. Mr. Speaker, permit me, as a member from a North-West comstituency, to give my supprit to the motion of my hon. friemel from West Toromen (Mr. Denison). I am, Sir, as much upposerl as any member in the House to adding to our delot, and there can he no dombt whaterer that this is a big joh, and that the proposial of my home ann gallant frienl camot le carried out without allining seriously to the deht of Canadi. But, Sir, we know this ilsn: that the most economical thing a cometry, or a firm, or a man can do, is to incur an olligation, if the incurring of that obligation is of a fruitful character and redounds to his or to their income. The proposal of my hom. friem is a propmsial to make our canal system more useful and more fraitisl than it is at present. His first propmsal, ats I understand, is that in lonilding any new eanal such as this proposed Soulanges Canal-

Mr. BERGFRON. Which is mot built yet.

Mr. NAVIN-which is mot built jet. My hom. frients proposial is that in building any new canal yon shomld louild it to the capacity that would look to a canal system capable of accommolating vessels of far larger draught than our canal system can at present accommoniaic. The day must come when our canaly huilt at present will need to le repairen-we know that the repaining of a canal is a very costly undertaking-and when that day comes it would lee just as well to build new camals. The Cinited States engineer who has written the pamphlet which has already heen referred to, cal culates that the cosst of deepening the camal system of Canala to $2(1)$ feet would be from $\mathbf{S}(62,(M),(N X)$ to Sis, (HNO, (AK). That certainly is a large sum, but it need not be necessatrily expented at once. Look, however, at what would be the adrantage to that great country of the North-West, which the people of Canalat are hegiming more and more to see is the future greater Camada; look what advantage a canal system would be that would enable a ship to be freighted at Port Arthur or Fort Willian and to go right through the canals and waterways to the ocean and to the great market of Liverpool. It could not make less than 3 cents difference on the cost of a bushel of grain, and that, with the 201,000,(OX) loushels of grain we have at the present minute to export would put is very large mmount indeed in the prokets of the North-West farmers. As my hon. friend who proposed this motion said, the day is at hand when instead of $20,000,000$ loshels we shall be exporting from the North-

Mr. LAN(iELIIER. Tupper said (ion),(MN),(MM) bushels.
Mr. DAVIN. M non. friend says that Tupper will come when Gind.(MOn),(Mn) hushels will beexporteil from the North West.

Mr. DAVIN. Diy hom. friend asked me to ayy s(M), ixN $),(M(N)$, and he smiles a smile of derision. Mr. Speaker, I think that my friemls of the Opposition have received a severe lessom in hopefulness. I think that recent events might have scared away all their pessimismand left them wiser and more hopeful, though sadider men. Now, Mr. Speaker, the proposal, therefore of my hom. frienil from Toronto (Mr. Denison) is ohe lowing to the titure, and we camot have tos large or ton extensive views of the future of this comutry. I remember ncarlynineteen years ago, being shown aromed these buildings by a man who then held a cery prominelst position in Canalia, and I said, after I hatl lowkel at the three great stractures that make upour forermmental and Parliamentary buildings : The man who hoilt these was on imperial thonghts intent, hut he said to me: What a waste of money? They are altogether tow cossty and tow large for Canadia. I was astmished, and this Honse would the astonished, if I toll who it wiss that made that remark. It so happens that the buildings are not large enough to-day, aut if the right hom. gentleman, the great man who built them, had been allowed his way, as he himself often toll me, instead of having the gromids we now have we would have hal far more cxtensive gromuls, which could have been got for a mere song at the time. Now, Sir, in the same way it may strike a man who looks at our present pensition, ins a very serious thing to comtemplate an expenditure of s(ī̃, (OW), (XN). I would go even further than that, because I want to be perfectly fair, and state that work, because after you had decpenel these camals. I expect that the haibours on the lake shores would have to the deepened also, and that probahly it
 I say that there is hefore us in the future an amonit of commercial activity, an amonat of wealth to be sent to huyers in foreign markets. that would entirely justify a large expenditure. Anyway, we ought not to abamion the inlea of enlarging our canals; and if my hom. friend from (irenville (Mr. Reid) should prove to be just in his estimate of certain difficulties to lee met, even then I should support the motion of my hon. friend. But I hope that the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals will get the opinion of an expert in regard to those difficulties. We have blown away a great deal of rock in the construction of the Camadian Pacific Railway. The history of that railway is instructive by way of illustration. We all rememiner the lions in its path. We had some of the hest engineers in Canada stating that it could never be made to pay. We had some leading politicians stating that it conid not be constructed, and that it could not be run on a paying basis. We had it stated on very high authority that it could not be built within the time. It was buitt some years before the time, and to-day we have that line paying a large dividenl in the very year that it was to have been completed. Now, just as those who could not take a hopeful view of Canaila's future were wrong ten, twenty years ago in regard to the Canalian Pacitic Railway, in the same way those who are doubtful of what the needs of Canada and the North-West would be in regard to our canal system in the near future, will be proved not to have been just or statesmanlike in their views, and that not many years hence. Of course, the immediate and practical proposition of my hon. friend is that any new canal that would make one link in our system of canals should be built deep enough and with eapacity enough to meet the demands of large and just and prudent hopes as to what this country is to le.

Mr. HAG(iART. Mr. Speaker, I wish to say at few words in reference to the interesting discussion raised by the resolution of my hom. friend from Toronto. My hom. friend has not painted in too glowing colours, hat rather the reverse, the great benetits resulting from the waterways which we have at present and from those which have heen constructed liy the United states, along the line of the St. Lawrence natigation. He states that the Mississippi represents an actual cash value to the people of the Enited states of from siono(O), (KM) not an overstatement of the case. The statisticians of the United States state that the henefit acerving to the United States alome from the lake narigation amounts to the sum of $\mathbf{S} 119,(\mathrm{MNO},(\mathrm{ONO})$ : and they estimate that the full value to this comontry of the sie: orway navigation along our great lakes hats described to you the immense lenefit to this country of the construction of the Salli Ste. Maric Canal, and the immense extent of tomalge which passes through it, exceeding that of the sue\% (Ganal. Some of the figures in reference to that trade are really extraorilinary. When you consider that the tomage which ammally passes Detroit alone exceeds that which leares all the seaports of the United States by nearly $10,($ (MO) $)$ (KKO) tons, and is $3,(K K)$, (KM) tons in excess of the immense trattic which leaves the two principal ports of the greatest maritime country in the worlid. Liverpool and Lomlon, you get some inlea of its chomity, and this does not include the trade which passes from Lake Superior to Dichigan and rive revis. But if we look further into this question, what we need particularly to comsider is what proportion of that enormous trattic moves castward. If yon examine the figures, you will find that of every" $2 \mathbf{2}$, (XK) toms of freight which passes Detroit, only about $\bar{i}, 0 \times 1$ arrive at Buffalo. The central point of the great consuming portion of the United States is moving so far westward that very little of that enormous trade comes further eastward than the great lakes themselves. There is another thing to be considered when it is argued that it is necessary for this comutry to increase the length, depth and breadth of our camals. That very guestion was thoroughly gone into hy a commission of engineers appointel for the purpose of enguiring into the trade. There is a medium between the two classes of vessels, the canal boat and the ocean steamer, and the guestion was gone into whether it would be cheaper to enlarge our canals to such an extent that the vessels which crossed the oceancould beutilizell for carrying freight up the Nt. Lawrence, and rior wosel to Liverpool and Lombon: and the unamimous opinion was that it was far cheaper to bring down the pronluce of the west in canal homats of a certain dimension to Montreal, owing to the enomons expense and the number of men re puired to work the large ocean ships. The conclusion arrived at was that for the removal of the tratic of the western States and our own western comery to the sealmarid, a canal of 16 feet depth would be sufficient, and that if a canal of larger size were built, to enable vessels to carry coal west ward and grain east ward. it would not he used by the larger vessels. In any case the expenditure would he enormons. The deepeming of the Wellam Canal alome to 20 feet would reand that is orer and above the anmat repuired to deepen these camals to 14 feet, which will he $\$ 1.0$, $(K N O),(K K)$. In aldition to that there would be required the deepening of the River Nt. Latwrence in long reaches. The hom. member for Cornwall (Mr: Bergin) satil the expenditure on these reaches would be trivial, but the deepening refuired in Lake st. Lonis alone, from the terminus of the Beanhamois Canal to the Latchine (ianal. for 14 ieet mavigation will reguire an expenditure of nearly sl, onn). (ux). What wombl it anome to if we hat ion leepen it 6 feet more: There are numerons wher plates along the St. Lawrence where the channels would also require to be deepened, so that the acthal expenditure on the canals would amonut to ahont addition to what would he reanured to deepen certain portions of the st. Lanwence. Ambl, if this were dome, what would he the use of a depth of 20 feet of natigation: There is not a poet from Port Arthar lown to Montreal that a vessel drawing ? feet of vater could geis into. We would have t., deepen all the ports along Lake Frie and Lake Ontario, and though there might perhaps be some places in the centre of the Sit. Lawrence from Wolfe Island to Kingstom where that depth would le founl, it would be impossible for the ressels there to get to their wharces. This is, mo doubt. a matter of great interest when you consider the inmense trade which is interested on the upper lakes. but you must consider whether this is reguised at all, or, if the additional depthe were given, whether the canals womid he nsed by a larger ineot than those which inaw 14 feet of water. 0 ol feet long and with 4.5 feet hread th of beam. I do not believe it would. I think the ranals as now constructed will meet the needs of the comatry for many yearsto come and that if the depth contemplated ly the hon. gentleman were providen, the ressels that navigate the ocean and come to Montreal would never be used to bring freight from Montreal westward or from Chicago east ward to the ncean. The bon. member for Comwallcomplained of the mamer in which the locks were built on the Cornwall Canal, and of the old-fashioned way of opening and shutting them. I havenot leen long enough inmy de partment to have very much experience of it, but I certainly think the most modern means ought to be used for the purpose of opening and shatting these locks. I hada conversation with the engineers the other day, I think it was on the sulject of the Beauharnois Canal and the new canals that are being huilt, and I am seeing that the most modern appliances shall be usell upon them. The gates are to le opened and shat hy water power and electricity, and will he lighted also by electricity. I will make all the investigation I can in regard to this subject and inform the hon. gentleman as fully as prssilile of the expense and of the engineering ditticulties which wobld be incurred, but, as his resolution asks for an expenditure of nearly El(M), (KA).(KK), I hope he will he satistied with my explanations and will withhaw his motion.

Mr. (HARATON. I am sure we are glad to hear that the donermment does mot contemplate Lupuestionally it wond be desiable to have deep Water mavigation from Montreal ${ }^{(1)}$ Port Arthur, hut there are matng desimable things which are not attainalbe. and I am afmad this is one of the unat. tainathe things which we might clesire. The effect of comstraction of these works, if it were naten taken, would be very largely to allance the commercial interests of another conntry. That country is now proposing to comstruct a line of deep Water navigation for itself, and mo douht, whether this scheme were carried out or not, their project womblath he proceerled with whenever they might feel inclined to dhese.
I shmald not hase risen 10 my feet but for one statement of the hon. Minister of Rathays and Camals. I Wats struck liy the moonsions testimony borne by that hon. gentleman th the enormons alvantages resulting to the commmities on the two sides of the great lakes from inter-state trale. He depicted very graphically the enomous volume of commerce passing Detroit; the enormons volume of tomate passing thenorh the sanlt Ste. Marie Canal : he informed us that the great bulk of that trade expended its force on states, communities and points well to the west, that it was not a through trande, that a very small proportion of that tralle reached Buffialo or passed to the east. He was, in fact, making a statement to the House which set forth in the most striking mamer the fact that the gleat advantages derived from the trade of the lakes are not alvantages in the line of foreign commerce but in the line of an interchange of productions hetween the different states of the Anerican Cnion, a point which has been often emphasized on this side of the House When it has heen stated that we stood outside of the commercial activity of 44 states, that we were not permittel fully to share in that vast volume of commerce on the great lakes which, as he says, exceeds the whole commerce of the suez (:anal from the countries of Europe, Asia and Africa. I have stated on a previous occasion that the inter-state trade was of afabulous amount : but, while our total commerce with the United states amounts to only SM,(MO),(XO), while our exports were less in 1891 than they were in 1866, and while eighteen of the yearshave since elapsed ourexports to them are less now than they were during the last year of the Reciprocity Treaty, yet their inter-state trade amounts to thousands of millions anmually, and we stand outside of that mighty tide of commercial intercourse and that source of commeroial wealth. There is no reason why, if the commercial barriers were stricken down, our exports to the United States should not be $$ 100,000,000$ or $$ 150,000,000 \mathrm{annu}$ ally, instead of only about $$ 40,000,000$ as was the case last year. I hope the hon. gentleman will remember his own statement and that his colleagues will consider it and will begin to realize the vast importance of that trale which the American states enjoy with each other and which we lesire to enjoy with them: that they will realize that if une estrietedeommercial intercourse hetween 44 states has conferred such enormons benefits upon them, amb that in proportion th the extension of the theat ef for the operation of that intercourse. the blessings derived from it have continued to grow greater if, insteal of heing between $4 t$ states. it were between il commonwealths, that is, the 44 states with our seven provinces ahled, we would share in its alvantages and derive untold benetit from ahlmission to a comtinental sphere of free commercial intercourse. I do not know what suceess my hon. frients hat at Wishington.

Mr. (OC'HRANE. Alout the same as you hatl in the constituencies.

Nir. (HARLTON. Very likely we shall hear that they had no suceess at all. But, if so, it was probably hecause they wanted to drive too shatp a hargain. Whether the negotiations are still penting or not, whether we are to have an opportmity of sharing in any of the great bencfits rlepicter? hy my hon. friemi the Minister of Ratways and (imals or mot. I lo mot know, hut I hope his statement will hate weight with the Ministers whore to gro to Wiashingtom, if they are to ge there agran.

Mr. DENINON. After the remarks of the Minis. ter of Rallways and Camals, and looking at all the facts, I will isk leare of the House to withhatw my motion.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Before you put that motion, Mr. Neaker, I wish to say that I do not concur in the declaration of the motion that it is expedient to do these things. The expediency depends not only upon the amomit of the lenefit that the comntry will derive from deeper canals, and from the facilities atforded to navigation, hut upon the actual eost, and I think, Nir, that the arst will he even very much more than $\mathrm{S}(\mathrm{K})$.
(MK),(MK). Howerer alrantageous it might be to the commerce of the west to have the camals deepened. I think this comntry cammot aiford to make so latge an expenditure, at all events, at the present time. I was not a little amused at the olservations aldressed to the House by one of the hon. gentlemen from Assiniboia (Mr. lavin). That hom. gent leman never fails to tell us of his extraordinary sagacity and foresight, when he has an opportunity of addressing himself to the House. The hon. gentleman has told us how he has predicted, and how he foresaw, all the great improvements. and the necessity for them, that have taken place during the past. twenty years. He says an hon. gentleman oceupying a high position told him twenty years ago that these louilings were larger than were refuired, and the expenditure had been rery much greater than was absolutely necessary, but the hon. gentleman in that case, with that sugacity which never deserts him, told that distinguished statesman, whoever he was, that the growth of the country, its increasing wealth and prosperity, would be such as that at no distant day these buildings would be too small for the requirements of the country; and the hon. gentleman prints to the present complition of things as an evidence of his sagacity. He tells us that there will be within a very short time, $600,000,000$ bushels of wheat to come from the North-West Territories to European markets, and that would le, I suppose, at least sixty times the amome that is producell at the present time for the purposes of commerce. Whether the North-West Teritories will produce at an early day (i(K), (KN), (NK) henshels of wheat for the market, besides the very large amount that will be required for home consumption, will depend, I suppose, upon whether it has, at an carly day, sixty times its present population. But, Sir, there is another consideration. There is required. somewhere, a capacity for consumption, and as that capacity lowes mot exist in Europe at the present time, it may be that the hom. gentleman will te ahbe to tell us, with his usual sagacity and foresight, in what particular portions of Europe this very large consuming population is at an carly day to he located: for it is very clear that it is aot only necessary that there should tie a large poppuation to pronluce such an extraordinary amomat of grain for exportation, but it is allso necessary that, upon the other side of the Atlantic. there should he a very large population for the purpose of consunption. Sir, I never knew an occasion where it was proposed to expend a very considerable sum of money, when the hom. gentleman did not show his liberality hy declaring his readiness to give his sanction and approval to such an expenditure. Well, I ilo not kuow what riew the hon. fentleman takes as to the means hy which this expenditure is to be met. I remember that some years ago, when a very distinguished member of Parliament, Sir Alexander Galt, was discussing this question, he pointed out that the expenditure upon our canals had not been a burdensome one, becanse the diminution in the cost of trainsportation had always leen greater than the increased hurdens that were required to meet the interest upan the sum expenden upon those public works: and that, in fact, the principle of free trade was not at all departed from in the imposition of duties and tolls for the purpose of meeting the expenditure that had been incurred. Well, sir, let me say that I believe that the Government have, for some time. departed from the principle of imposing tolls, that is, of putting upon the particular classes of property that have heen benefited by the expenditure, the hurdens which that expenditure renders necessary. I am pleasel that on this sub. jeet, at all events, the fiovermment are preparen to call it halt. that they are not prepared to act upon the somewhat extraviagant views, is it seems to me, of the hom. member for West Toronto (Mr: Denison), who proprsed by this motion to add so large a sum to the public delst as that which would be necessary by the improvements he favours. Not only would a large sum be necessary, according to what I have heard from engineers, for deep. ening the canals, but the effect of the alteration in lowering the level of the hed of the river ly this attempt to deepen the waters that are navigable, would render the water in other portions of the river more shallow and would remder excavation necessary in large sections where such excavation is not necessary at the present time ; in fact, it has been stated that it would lower the level of the whole of Lake Ontario, to undertake to secure 20 feet depth of mavigation in the River St. Lawrence.

Mr. DENISON. Would the hon. gentleman allow me to ask if that is the statement of any engineer ?

Mr. MLLLS (bisthwell). Sis I umiderstoxal from engineers here some years ago. I do not know how far they had made an inspection of the work, hot 1 eertainly have molerstoon that there was a possilinity, ereac, of lowering the surface, or the level. of Lake Ontario if you were to cary on the excavations necessury for a 20 feet navigation in the River st. Lawrence hetween Montreal and Kiugstom. If so, it would render a still larger expenliture necessiny in the harlomes of that lake, still larger than is necessary at the present level of the lake. However. as the dovermment do not propose to engage in this vast enterprise, and to ald, is 1 think, at least one humbred and twenty millimss or more to the public deld of this country: it is not necessary to en into a minute disenssion of the matter. The hom. gentleman for Assiniboia has referred th the fact that our numbers are someinhat fewer on this side of the House than they were last session. That is true, and pity tis tis true ; lint. Sir, there is one consolation which we may lerive from the disasters that have overtaken us, and that is that the hon. gentleman is not likely to be quite sis discontented with his owil side of the Homse as he has heen during the past two sessions. I think that the misfortunes which haveovertaken us have hat a wholesome influence on the hom. gentleman himself. and I have mo donht whatever that he will harrlly single out the Minister of the Interior now for his alserse eriticisms, he will rather direct them to us than to the Treasury benches. The hom. gentleman, I an sure, feels that his great expectations are not likoly to he fulfilled very soon. and is misery loves company. I congratulate the hon. gentleman that he has found company and endearours to :ppear in high spinits under very trying circumstances, and you know that alversity sometimes makes belfellows of very different people --he may now expect eulogits upon his colleague. And the hom. gentleman has found, at all events so far as his feeling of misfortune is comecrned, that he is rather with us in sympathy than with the hom. gentleman on the Treasurybenches. Lamgladto see that the hon. gentleman now is in a more healthful mond, and is directing his criticism to those with whom he liffers and not to those with whom he is, so far as his votes go, however it may le with his speeches, always inclined to act.

THE MANITOBA SCHOOL.

Mr. LaRIVIĖRE: (Trimslation) movel for:

Copy of the judgment of the Supreme Court in the appealed case of larrett pu. the City of Winnipeg, commonly known as the "Manitoba school case."
In moring for this, Mr. Speaker, my intention is not to enter upon the merit of the question itself. My object is simply to cause to be brought before the House another document relating to this importint question. During last session I had the honour of asking for other documents also relating to the same case, and to-day my reguest is that the judgment which has just been rendered by the Supreme Court be also put before the House, so that the hon. members may be in a position to judge the question on its merits. The diticulty is a purely constitutional one, and consequently all the members of this House and the country in senemal are interested in stulying it in all its hearings. The Constitutional Aet of British North America anthori\%es the establishment of a system of separate schools in the provinces where such a system lous not alrealy exist, and the same Act also guarantees the system where it alrealy ohtains. The (onstitntional Act of Manitola alson guanantees the same privileges to the minority in that province: lut the Provincial Legislature has thonght fit to passan Act which is muguestionahly in contlict with the very constitution of the province. This legislation was appaled from. Before the lower court this appeal was dismissen, hit the supreme (burt reversed this decision ly sustaming the - laims of the minority. To-day. I helieve the catse hats leecn carried to the font of the Tlarone, and the Privy Commeil is to le called upon in give its opinion in this provincial lescislation. I repeat that this question is of general interest, and all the members of this House have a right to the information avalable thereon. Therefore I ask that the juifoment recently rembered hey the Supreme Comi le lirought liefore the Hotise. so that wemity he persessed of all the documents melating to this inipertant matter.

ADJOURNMENT-IOBSTTER FINHERIES.

Nir JOHN ITHOMPNON moved the aljournment of the House.

Mr. DAVIEN (I'. F.I.) Before the Houseadjourns. I wish to call the attention of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to the resolution respecting lobster tisheries which he introduced the other da yand which he proposes to move next Wealnesilay. The hom. gentleman introndeed a Bill a few days ago I was not in the Honse then, hut I hat the pleasure of reading his remarks--for the purpose of placing the lohster tisherites of the Dominion under license. a very important puestion which will likely give rise to a goon deal of controversy, and on the provisions relating to penalties he intends to move the Honse into, (committee on Werlncesiay next. The Bill itself is not printed.

Mr. TUPIPER. The hom. genteman wishes: time to eonsider it-

Mr. DAVIEN (P.E.1.) Not muly that. hut I would ask the hom, frentleman to iay on the liable of the Honse before Wednesilay the regulations which the hon. gentleman drafted innl suhmitted to the lobster packers throughout the Dominion last I becember. I notice in the remarks he marle when introlucing the Bill. that he spoke of the fact that these regulations hat heen more or less assented to. in some partienlars fally ansenten to by the lohster packers. I umlerstaml that some of those regulations were strongly lissented from.

Mr. TUlPPER. Hear, hear.

Mr. I)AVIEX (P.E.I.) I mulerstand that the dissent has heen recognized by the hom. Minister amil that he does not propose to confirm these regulations which have heen dissented from. I would ask the Dinister if he would kimily laty on the Tahle of the Honse at an early date the orisinal regulations ats drafted hy him and suhmitted to the lolster packers comventions, as well ats the regulations as he has altered them. and what he now propnoses to pass: hecaluse the operation of the bill will very largely depend upon those regulations which the hom. gentleman has alrealy power hy statute to pass and make them in puint of fact law: I hoper the hom. gent leman will be able to lay them on the Table hefore he proceeds with the resolution of which he has given notice.

Mr. TUPPER. Of course I shalltry tomect the hom. gentleman's wishes in that respecet. Sof fir as the Hraft is concernenl I may saty it was the result of the recommemlations of various ofticers submitten to me. 1 directed that draft to be distributed so as to oltain suggestions for myself. I alluded to that the other day when I said I was gratitied with the number of approvals that came from those interested in the husiness. Of conirse 1 , lo not wish it to le supposed that the lobster packers or the fishermen were any more enamomed with the proposition to restrict their operations than fishermen generally are in that respect. I grite see that it would assist this Honse in the consideration to lay on the Table the original draft athe some of the suggestions that came before me. I will he glad to do so, becatuse, while these regulations shoull he in the form of a Bill, hon. gentlemen will see that coming to the House is largely for the purpose of consultation, as many of these regulations, if not all of them, could be included in an Order in Council, without any reference to the House of Commons. My ohject is to meet, as far as possible, the riews of those commected with the business.

Mr. DAVIES(P.E.I.) Perhaps the hom. gentleman would not object to bring down all the reports: those in favour and those dissenting.

Nr. TUPPER. I will try to give yom all the information desired, if it loes not tike too long to prepare.

Motion agreen to : and Homse adjownen at i. in 1.17.

FSHERY BOUNTY.

Mr. TUPP'ER movel that the Honse resolve itsslf into Committee on Bill (No. i) to amend Chap. 96 of the Revised statutes to enconage the develop. ment of the seat tisheries and the building of tishing: ressels.
Mr. DACIES (P.E.I.) I was not here whell the Minister moved the socomel realing of this Bill, and I can omly say that I pegret that the home gentleman has seen tit to introduce it. As I gather from the renarks of the hom. sentleman in introlacing the measime, he introluced it heramse a certain clanse in the Bill as it now exists is practically ohmotec. Ineatuse the thirel section of the Bill which he secks to repeal provides for the distribution of sish, (NK), or, ats 1 think it was inereased last gear. of shoin, (KNO. with the provision that the mate in whish that is to he distributed shall he sulmitten to Parliament cach year. and that the money shatl nen hee distrihnted matil Parliament has approcel of the monle of distrihatiom, and that further. after the disuribution has taken placee an account of the distribution sladl Lue lain lufore Parliament so that Parlianent may sete that its instructions have hem carried gut. The hem. gentleman mew properees that the previons and. if the Homse actedes to the propmition of the hom. gentleman and passes this Bill. The slepartment itself will have the sole comteol wore the: distribuion of that homs without asking the comsent or assent of barliament to the monle of distrihution. Weli, sir. I womh suhmit to this Homse that the hen. gentlemen is taking al step in the wroug dire tion." My awn humble julgment is. not that the enntwit that this Parliament mow pressesses shombl be alnolishect, hut that the "onntrol should he made mone effective. Why, sir, it has bueen charged in this Honse almost erer since I hecame a member of it. that the distribution of this money is mate ath chgine of pulitioal wronglloing.
Shme hom MEMBERS: Hear, hear.
 that nentiment. It is well known. It may mon he rery crelitable to the Alministration anil th the fovemment for the time leing in power: it may not he very creditalle to any leading politician who is responsible for it, that large smus of pullice meney should he yearly distributed in the fom of a lomins, or the moile and mamer of the distribution shombl twe male subservient to political interests. sir, that has heen the case in times sone hy, and if 1 malerstand the Aet aright, the third seetion of which the hom. sentleman seeks tor repeal, the motive and ohject in passing that Aut were to keep the distribution of this money so moler the cont rol of Parliament that. if pussible, political exigencies should he eliminated. Now, what hats been the case: I think I can state without fear of eomitatdiction that for years back there hats mot ineen a Dominion election hell in the spring or winter of the year. hat the distrihution of this money hats been lecreed hy the department to be made just at that time when it would help most the ministerial camblidates. Just before the election takes phace, down come the cheques, and the cilluassers for the: Conservative party go romin :ansassing through the districts with these cheriness in their hands, and it is generally considered to be a pretty effiective moile of Cansassing. Sir. I donot think Parliament intended that; I do not think it isfor the benefit of the pullic service that it should le contimued. In some years you will timl, notwithistanding the immense anome of latwou which we are told is involved in the simaine and distribution of these cherges. that if an election takes plate as early as Fehruary, the cherges are there in time, in every district through. out the Matitime Provinces, for distributionamenge the roters. If the election takes place in Mated, the: rherges are clelayed matil March. If at ha:al electiong as hats heen the rase takes plater in Somat sentiat, as it rlicl. I think. twor on three geats are. in the month of Nay. you finm the - hequise not issucal in Fehruary, or Mardi, of April. han issined just before the lowal cleotion in May. For what phrpore? Well. hecathse we ate members of Parliament we hate not remonaced whe emmand sense amb we khow for what purpore that i- donde. we kinw very well that it is for the purpose of wrons-loings of improperly inthencing the election. Now, the hom. sentlemins sity that he hats unt :mhnitted an l'alliamsent. ant Parliat. murnt has not exictent from the Winister for the time hefing the statement which the . Aet reguires. We.lo. Pailiament mat have heen dereliet in it: duty in that respert. $\mathrm{B}_{\mathrm{m}}$ I think the fatmers of the Aet hed atemi oljoect in view. I think the: l'arlianment. and I himk that the hon. gemteman world ine legishating nane in the puline interest if. instemp of reprating the sertion entirely. he manle it mone stringent aind declatred that this distrihntion shond take plate on or hefore a certan periond in emelh peatr. That wombl. to some eatent at least. iliminate the: political element from the distribution of this momer. Merito when it is lone moler the circmostances and with the motice which I feat hater animated those who contorlled it in times grome hy it ceases to be me: itorions. The hom. gentlematn mow asks Ins tureproal that setetion of the: A.t which preserihes that : hee mole of alistribution shall le sulmitterl to Parliament heforehami, and atfer the distribution is erer he will. in the following session, suhnit a statement of the mamber in which the distribution hats been mate. That part of the Act. as it will then staml. will erive Parliament no effective control whatever. The momey will he distributed ats the Blinister for the time lecing sees fin. in the mone that he wishes. in the mone that he helieves will hest subserve party interests, irrespection of the interests of the comitry. I say larlianment should mot surventer, even if it had not luen mate heretofore ant atfective political engine. Parliament shondel mot survender the control which the section now proposeal to be rejealeal gives them. that is, the contioh and letermination of the monle in which this large smm of money shath he pearly expemed amomg the tishermen. I will nut oveupy any furthe: time but will sumit these few olselvaitioms to the Honse, believing ets I do that the principh: that the hon. gentleman emborlies in this repeated clamse, is a biad one, amb that the results will he vicions, and calculaten to perpethate and amplify the evils which heretofore have chatracterized the clistribution of that money:

Mr. 'TUPl'PR. The hon. gentleman has shot pretty wide of the mark, as he very often does, in the criticism he has advanced upon this Bill. It is yuite clear to me that the hon. gentleman, in his ilesire to liscover political objects solely upon the part of the covernment, has failed to give that consideration to this short Bill now lefore the Honse that certainly he shmuld have given hefore makine the charges which neither he nor any other membe: in this House cian sulostantiate. The hom. member for Queens, I'.E.I. (Mr. Davies) hits stated to-lay. only a little more lounly. and a little more emphatically. hat with nu more novelty. the charges that have been mate from time to time in this Honse during the last two or three sessions: : and on catch of these: occasions the Hanse, anl the hon. members who were then perent. will rememher that I letiel the hon. genthemen making those statements. $\mathrm{m}_{\text {a }}$ suhntantiate them. I threw that challenge atoross the fome, and hom. gentlemen were dumb. The hrom sentleman hats mide these charges from that periox in eference to the fund heing managed for party purposes. hat for these charges 1 am ofad to siay there is mot a restife of fommation. The objert that 1 hat in view in the early distribution of the In⿻unty, was to meet the expressel wishes. the expressed ilesire. urged most stremonsly by the members form the Varitime Provines mhelialf of the tishermen, that in order torbitain that heneti! whid it was desinable to oltain from the distribution of this lwonty. the distribution shombla minle eatle. From the time When it was ascertained that there condel he: ath cally dist ibhation of that hamty, dewn to the present time, I have never had ocoasion to give instructions in reference to lyedections concernins the: distribution of that homity in facome of patrtientar comoties ats against others. lint umber wencoal instrustims and maler gememal lirections. mesticers have gone to work and hate suceceled in meeting the wishes of the lishermen su its to make it posisible that the distribution of that hount: should take phace in winter insteal of summer. is Was slome herctofore. Now, if the hom. gentleman knows : mything alont the ristrihution of this homaty he must know that the late distribution Whieh towk place up to two veats abo. Was the canse of dissatisfaction in all the tishing emmentes of the Maritime Provinces: and instemi of the hom. gentleman being generous emmgh to-day to congratulate the $\begin{gathered}\text { invermment an having leen able }\end{gathered}$ tomeet the wishes of the fishermen, healvancesthis miserahle imputation and unfair insinuation in reference to the conduct of the Department of Marine and Fisheries in the management of that matter. So far as the distrihution is concerneal. I may say: without a desire to brast. that the management has been more suceessful than 1 suppused possible: when-I milertook to meet the clesire of the tishermen for an early distribution. None of these charges, I ann glail to say, that the lam. gentleman hats mate to-diay, can he substantiaterl. I saty he is not in possession of any cridence to substathitite then, and if he is in possersion of such evilence it has come to him late in the day. for he is only too willing amb too free to bring forward charges that have heen formulated: I never denied that in the administration of this fund an ofticer may do wrong and an irregularity may oceur. I have known of irregularities myself, and I have punisherk those whohave attempted to defraud the country or the tishermen in this respect. I have directed that stringent measures be taken, whether it was a fisherman who resorted to fraud to obtain that isounty or an otticer, and I challenge any hon. member in this House or out of it to show that in deciding claims to that bounty I ever acted on political

cromms, or ever endearomed to ascertain the political complexion of the individual pressing a claim for payment which may have been remied. I maty state that in the administration of this fund, the first steps taken are instituted by officers of this department, amel to a certain extent ate indepemient of me. I have of necessity to leare the distribution or settlement of numerons rlaims to responsilile ofticers, who are instracted wict upon rules well detined anil clearly haid down. These rules are published. they are inotorions. they are lain upon the Table of the House:they are on the Table of the House uow. and they are known to all who care to stady this guestion. The mamer of the distribution is no seeret, amd mo effort has been taken to make it a secret. Cumer these rules the distribution takes piace, and the cases sulmittel to me are mainly for non-compliance, or disputes as to claims under investigation: and in the distribution of these moneys I have heen guided solely ly my interpretation of the statute inm the Order in Conncil umeler that statnte: and ly no other comsideration whaterer. The hom. gentleman (Mr. Davies) made the mistake of sugEresting that the moly desire I had in pressing this measure before the Hunse was to rid the stitute of inn ohsolete clatuse. The fare of its being olisolete gives force to the argment in Banure of the :utoption of the bill. But it was mot the only argument 1 advancel. nor the onily, reasm I gatre to the Honse. I gate to the House spee:itically another reason, and I press it now, and that wats, that this clanse. which the hom. gentleman in his argument confused with another. innd read with another clanse which I propose to leate on the statute: is now mot merely wholete, hat is a clanse which has stom on the sitatutehrook without compliance heing mate with it. without any hom. gentleman asking that compliance be made with it. It is a clanse which would leat to great inconvenience. and what is of more importance. of great loss to the tishermen amb those interestel. if we were strictly to comply with it. Before attempting to comply with that clanse and with the strict letter of it. I come to Parliament and ask. not hecatise it would rid the department of any tronble, not hecause it would rid the conntry of any expense, but chiefly in the interest of the fishermen themselves, that, in order to the proper adoninistration of this statute, the Government and the department should be left free to meet the wishes of the fishermen. 1 am not able to say whether I stated it previously, hat 1 desire to saly now, that in the management of the funds from 1880 iown, it will be foum, if hon. members look at the Oriters in Council adopted under provision 2 of the main Bill, that those Orders in Comncil ind those regulations took effect in the fall of the year, insteal of in the spring. Every hon. gentlemain knows that Parliament sits in the winter and spring, not in the fall of any year. So that if a strict compliance were made with that provision, we wonld be in this position : that having arrived at the time for the reception of claims, when it became our duty to define the manner and mode of distribution, we would be compelled to act on the Orier in Council laid on the Table and approved by the Honse at the previous session, no matter how inconvenient it might be, and whatever might be the ditticulties placed in our way. I put it to the hon. gentleman who attacked the Bill-

Iecanse I wish him to understand that in this matter I an plealing the callise of the parties interested in the fumb, and of the fishermen generally, so that we may lee able to meet their legitimate wishes and expedite the distribution of this money--that with the next clanse standing, with which strict compliance is made, the hon. gentleman's olject is gained, pullicity in this matter is secured: and, if any individual is lefraudel, any hom. gentleman seeing that statement as to the mamer and mome in which the bounty was distributed a year previons, conald raise the question during the parliatmeniary session, before the vote for next year's bounty was granten, and conld suggest a remely, and if there were irregularities amber the olid method, then he cond explain to the House the manner in which thase difficulties cond be overcome. Ido mot wish to remore any proper check or remove a guard against ahnies: but I tell the hom. gentlenan that all he desires in tomnection with this matter, namely, the oversight of Parliament in regarl to the mule of distribution. can he secured, becallose we have plated on the Table of the Honse the Order in Comacil showing the regulations, ime also a statement as to the manner of distribution. That is necessary muler section 4 , which I leave in the main Act, anel if that is not sulficient this session ow in any other sulseduent sessim, then it is open to athy hon. member to attack the system and suggest a better plan. In the meanwhile, all the information that Parlianent has desired has been given, all the information that Parliament could desire hats hern given. and his measure did wot come up to serve those paltry or improper purposes which the hom. gent leman sugests: but I dare sity, sine that point oevers to him, he will aceept this explanation from me. that this Bill is introluced at the suggestion of the officers who are charged with carrying on the work. When my attention was callei to the fact that the chanse in inuestion was not complien with, I directed that a retum le male in compliance with sections 4 and 5 . so that I could present it within 20 days of the opening of Parliament. The ofticers comnected with the distribution then urged that not only wats seetion 3 olsolete hat unnecessary an.! served no useful purpose, but tied the hamis of the department in regarle to the distribution of the fuml. When claims came in during the fall it might he foum that the fund was larger than was repuired, if paid at that rate, and yet we would be unable to meet the changed comdition of affiaiss that had happened since last session, and in this regard it proved a great inconvenience. We would lee compelled to ilistribute a fuml at the same rate that had obtained during the preceding year, no matter whether the circumstances were the same, or whether the claims were greater or less. This Bill is simply for the purpose of getting rid of that ditficulty, by laying before Parliament cach session all the material that is necessary to enable it to exercise that supervision which it is only right that Patiament should be able to exercise over the distribution of all sums of money.

Motion agreed to. and House resolved itself into Committee.
(In the Conmittee.)
On section !,
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) The hon. gentleman, I submit, has not attempted to grapple with the facts as: 1 plated them hefore the Homse, hat hats set up a number of straw men and then set to work to knock them down. He talks at some length almut his dispusition to suppress indicilnal frauds when practised in the distribution of this money. I have never myself made any charge against the hom. gentleman that he has tacitly or otherwise lent himself to these individual fratuds. 1 sof further, and 1 say that 1 do not believe he has done anything of the kind, and I never heard of at charge matle ly anybonly in this Honse or out of it that he approved of such a fratul. Then, why does he set that upand discoss it, and say that he has exerteal himself to prevent individual framds: I suppose he would do so : I have contidence enough in lim to helieve that he would. That was not the charge I made. The charge I made was that the menle of distribution was mate subservient to politieal interests, and that when elections came on the time for dist rimuting the money was selecten as the week anterior to the election. That statement of mine is true, and the hon. gentleman knows that each gelleral election that pisses this practice is carrieal sut.

Mr. TCPPPER. I ask the hom. gentleman whether he does not think that to be firaudulent combluet : the distributing of this money for political purpuses:

Mr. DATIE (P.E.I.) I think it is very highly improper combluct.

Mr. TEPD'ER. But not fratudent.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.E.) Not framblemt. I do now think it is the intention of this Honse to plate in the hamds of the Minister of Marine slinn,(14M) which can be used for political purjoses in this sense: that its distribution is dejemient unn his whim and is made to take place more or less just before an election. The home genteman tried to make the Honse helieve that he had intronceed a system of early distribution. I am in faverar of that. I nerer objeeted to an early distribution of the mones. The earlier the hom. gentleman can distribute the money the letter, but what I was seek. ing to do wats to make the time of distribution it permanency. either by statute, or to leave it as it is now. under the comtrol of Parliament. The hon. sentlenam does not make it a permanency and he: witholraws it from the control of Parliament, so that hereafter it is left solely and entirely to the Minister hinself. Xi,w let us see luow this thing will work. Parliament appropriatel larliament decrees that the Covernor in Comeil shall determine the times and the instalments in which the money shall le paid. Parliament goes on to declare that an Oriler in Comocil or something equivalent to it shall be laid lefore Parliament ami anlopted, and the sulseguent vear a return of what hass been done shatl be placed hefore this Honse. So we have an anterior control and a control sul. sequently when the facts are laid before us. We have the power to direct in the first instance how it is to be appropriated, and the power to comemn if not appropriated as directed. What is the lion. gentleman now doing in this Bill: He is learsing the clause in by which the fovernor in Council shall have power to fix the time and mode of distribution, and he declares that hereafter it shall be amnecessary to lay that before Parliament.

Mr. Davies (P.E.I.)

Mr. TCPIPER. Clanse + enacts that we shall still place that before Parliament.

Mr. DATIES (P.E.I.) Certainly : lant clamse + relates to the previons distribution, and clanse:3 relates to the numle in which it is proposeen to listribute it.
Mr. TUPPER. That is what 1 sity is incomvenient.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) That is the whole ;wint of difference between us. I contend that when Parlianent has voted money and vestel in the (iovernor in Conncil power to tix the tine and mode of distribution, that the Order in Conncil shall he laid before it. hefore the money is expender. Parliament retains its control and dices not comfer on the diovernor in conneil the power to ilo what Parliament should itself dr. The Ministerof Marine propuses to take that prwer away from the Honse. and I am opposed to it. I amp prepared to support any well-considered measmee which the hom gentleman may hring in, fixing the distribution of that money at as early a time ese experience shows it may he dome, but let that time le fixed.

Mr. TCPPRER. It is practically now fixest on le dome hefore the list of Narch.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Let the Minister decre: that ly statute and then we will knew what shombl Ine donie.
Mr. TUPIPR. The hom. gentenan will be ghal to hear this piece of information. I succeeded in loing that last year, and it wass stated then that the distrihution was on acemme of the genemal elections. The hom. gentlenan will see as leetween man and man that that was mot the parpose. Secanse this year the distribution took place at the same time, amb so far as I can make it a permanemey 1 will dos so hy alopting the sune system. If the sane phan is carried ont which the hom. gentleman will see discussed in the Auditor (ieneral: Report: sor long as Parlianme approves of that we cant distribute the meney lefore the lat March every year.

Mr. DATIEN (P.E.I.) The hom. ementleman will see that the two, instances to which he refers only bear out what I hate said. Last year the momey was distributed hefore the lst March, and the general election happened to lee on the th Marel.

Mr. TUPPER. How do you account for the distribution before the lat Mareh this year?

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) This year the byelegtions took place.

Mr. TUPPER. We will have hy-elections every year.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E. I.) The hoin. gentleman towk care to distribute the money before the by-elec: tions, so that the statements I male in the Honse are not ill-considered statements but facts, and the hon. gentleman and the hon. member for Inverness (Mr. Caneron) knows that to be the fact.
Mr. TUPPER. The hon. gentleman is not serious in stating that it is a fact chat the lomuties were distributed before the by-elections. I can yuote him some elections which took place before the distribution.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Will the fom. gentlenam state that the distribution did not take place right in the throes of the elections: I know one case where some of the distributors went to the meeting, and placing their hands on the bounty cheques, stated : No matter how strong the arguments of the other side may be, I have arguments stronger than these in my pookets.

Mr. TUPPER. (iive me the names.
Mr. DAVIES(P.F.I.I.) Tcould give youthe names twi. Let us see whether the proposition involved in this Bill is one to which Parliament onght to give assent or not. As the law stands Parliament has retained control over the distribution of this money: Of comrse. in the hands of an immaculate purist like my hom. frieml, as he claims to be, wo wrong would he done : but supposing at man not so immaculate abil pure as the hon. gentleman got there. what a great poiitical wrong might le done.

Mr. TCPPRER. If the hom. gentlenam opposite sot there.
Mr. DAVIEN (P.E.L.) This is a very serious matter: it is no liaghing matter when it sum of money representing a sum of $1fith, (KKO) shomht he placed in the hames of at Minister for distribution. atil that he should have the power of determining the time and the manner in which the money should he distributed. If Parliament chomses to accele to such a proposition, of course nothing more call be satid or done. The hom. gentlenam is all-powerful, I an aware, just now, hint at the same time I think Parliament will be slow to adopt these amendments, which are not in the publicicinterest. which are in party interest and which will prejudice the distrilution of this very money, hecause the hom. sentleman knows well, that if he goes on to use this maney in the future as he has done in the past. there will he an agitation one of these datss for a repeal of the luminty altogetler, which will certainly be an minopular thing in the Maritime Provinces and will not receive very many votes there. If. is the hom. gentleman says, he is guided liy the adrice of the otticers of the department, I think he hats acted hastily and in a mamer that I do not lelieve Parlianent will approve of. 1 think that he should not only leave the clanse as it is, but make it more stringent hy fixing io date on which or lefore which the distribntion must take place, aul to that extent the difticulty will be eliminated.

Mr. TCPPERS. I am sorry that the hon. gentemang gave expression to the suggestion of his present supporters from Ontario, that the lonunty should le suppressed altogether.

Mr. DACIES (P.E.L.) I did hot give expression to an opinion. I said, that if you went on in your present course the bounty might loe olone awaty with.

Mr. TUPPER. The hom. gentleman gave at little life to that excuse that there was frand connectell with the distribution, and the hom. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) must be delightell that he has almost antally ita the hon. member for Queen's (Mr. Davies) in lis threats against the bounty. I wish to correct the hon. gentleman ugain, if he will allow me, in reference to a misapprehension on his part. In the first place, the hon. gentleman camnot press so strongly on the attention of the House-as he has pressel some arguments in reference to the regulations,- - the great value of section 3, since he has not met the statement of fact I gave. that since 1882 there has never heen a compliance with it, and mo hon. gentleman has erer suggested there should lee. What hetter argument, that the chanseisnot required. than that sucha vigilant representativeas the hom. gentlemanisin this House never directed attention to it since $188 \%$. The hom. gentlemanis unfair in his remarks as to the distribution. $I$ gave the statement as to what we were able to do with an experience from l882 down to the present in comnection with an early distriluation of the bounty. When the hon. gentleman suggested that as a general election ocenrred in March, 1s91, and as the distribution took phace on or before the Ist of March amd was nearly all completen by that time, excepting outlying district s-- that it was solely for political purposts. I very frankly tohd hiin that in so far its enlearouring to win the contidence of the people liy meeting their wishes wherever it wats proper to ilo so was a political ollject. I had that desire: lint as to any effiort heing made simply for the general elections. I denied it in totos and I told hin that the suggestion wats made to me long anterion to any thought in the mind of any manas th when the general elections would take place. That suggestion came from the provinces interested. anl I met it: and our experience last year has shown that it was part of a well-considered plan. allopted in the interests of the fishermen. ". have the early distribution made ammally. Now. I ami athle to assume larliament that so long is we are permitted to act on the novel plim adopten in 1891 and continued this seasme, which is fully discussed in the Abditor sencral's Report, I anin yuite confident that the distribution can be made every year on or hefore the lst of March. But if the hom. gentleman wishes to cripple the hand of the department. I can tell him that we shall be face to face with this difticulty. that if we complied with clanse 3. we should int le able to make a distribution until we got statutory inthority and had our plan approved ly this Honse in the following winter, after the seasm's fishing was all over.

Mr. FRASER. There dews not appear to be much difference het ween the arguments of the wo hom. gentemen. But what I would press om the Minister is that the plan alopted in 1891 should he made binding. Although the hom. gentleman says that the distribution will be made in March. yet at some time it will lee foum that the werworked otticials of the department will not be able to get out the bounties until May or June if there happens to be an election in Nay or June. I think the late of the distribution shonh le definite. It is a cruel act to the fishermen who need this bounty. to send it to them simply when there is an election. I can see a good deal of forre in what the hom. gentleman says as to repealing the section: and if he will make the Act lefinite by providing in it that the bounty shall be pailo on or hefore a certain date, there would be no trouble about it. I think the fishermen themselves should know when they are going to get the bounty. Let it le March, or May, or June, giving the Govermnent full tine. so that there will he no similar scenes enacted in future. I hive had to meet the same dilticulties in my constituency. I think we should holl the elections without taking advantage of the fishing lounty or any other influence of the kind, leaving men free to exercise their better julgment. Now, the Minister has male the statement of his intention, and so far as he is concerned, that binds him: but let it le made detinite by the prorision of Parliament, and then repeal the seetion, and we shall have a grood Act.

Mr. TUP'FR. No other pledge could le given than that which 1 bave given. Cp to the year before list it wiss fonind impossible to distribute the bomity until ofure, at which time many vessels had gone to sea, amd when they came back the Iomuty was of companatively little use to the tishermen. It was simply alided to their surphes eamings, amd was not spent as well perhays as it wonld have been at an earlier periond. We fomme that it waspuite impossible to gorover all the chams. mumbering $30,(0 N)$ or $+(1)$ (MK). anl make out and listribute the sohedules, by means of tempmary clerks. But under the plan adopted last year., practically a bounty was given to the regular cierks for working overtime and on comblition that they world have this work done hy a celtain time. Parliament sitnctioned the paying of these men for overtime: and the plan alopted liy the department gate them an inlucement not to earn so mach an hour. hut to make their hours as short as possible. by doing a great deal of work in a comparatively lirief perion, It was a trememons strain upnob them. but they have undergone that strain for the reward offered them. So long, therefore, ats you cell get a regular statf to work that har for the perionl repuiren, so longe will it be prossible for the Minister to give the assurance that there will be an early distribution year after year. lane I do not suppose that any Sinister would be prepared to say to farliameni that he womh compel those trained officers in his department to work as late and ats long every year as is necessary in order to do this work. although they hate done it. and I helieve will continne to ilo it for the consideration given them: and solong as that plan is appowen. it is not only possihle. lint the intention, to distribute the bointy at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. DAVIES (P. B. I.) sofar as the hon. gentleman has succeeded by any departmental arrangement in facilitating the early distribution of this loounty, I think the discussion has shown that it meets with generat approval. We all agree that the distribution should take place as early as the department is able to get the checjues ont, and I have no doubt that the hom. gentleman has done lis share in furthering that olject. But the point is this: the hon. gentleman is withlrawing from Parliament the control it prosiesses by the thind section : he has assented to the suggestion that the cherpues should he distributed lefore the lst March : he leaves it to the fovermment to determine the time when the instalments shall he paid: let him consent that a provision should be mate in the Act, that the distribution shall take place not later than the lst of March.

Mr. TUPPEF. I have given the reason why it is impossible to hime the department or the forermment as to when an unknown quantity of clams shall he met.

Mr. DAVIFN(P.E.I.) 'That ohjection does anot apply to the suggestion I an making. The second section provides:
"Such grant shall be appropriatel for the eaid purposes nt such times and by such instniments in each year as the Governor in Council directs."
The Governor in Council this year and last year lirected, and expects in the future, that the bounty shall lee distributed before the 1st of March. Then, let it he provided that the distribution shall take place within a fixed clate-not later than the lst or the loth or the lith of March, or even the e3th, if the hom. gentleman assures us that that is as early as it can be done.

Mr. TLIPI'ER. That would not meet the hon. gentleman's wish. The appropriation is not what we are rliscussing, lout the distribution. The hon. gentleman will see that it is not the apmopriation which is concerned. but it is merely an allotment for us to distribute in a certain mamner.

Mr. D.AVIFS (l'.E.I.) I take the meanine of the secomi section to be that this money shatil he appropriated, which I molerstamel we beguivalem. to the distribution of it at the time and in the instalments the fovernor in (onncil maty decide.

Mr. TUPPEK. The provision practically is that we are not todistribute that $\leqslant(t i n)($ man withont an Order in Comeil. The moment that Orver in Commeil is passed, the department is free. but the Oriev in Commeil has never yet directed the department to make the distribition within a certam time. lecanse it is impossible to tell the diovernor in Conncil. as it womlal he impossible to tell farliatment, how long it would take a certain mumber of men at a certaill rate of speed to make that distrihution. I made what wats practically a bet with the otficers of the clepartment, and they took the risk of ilistibloting this homity within a certain time in order to earn the money, hat it wonld he rlifficult to put that in a stathte, because you would have to find your men every year instend of gettime. as I have done, volunteers form the regular semvere:

Mr. DAVIES (I'F.I.) I do not stee any ilioticulty in it. When your alnit that there should be an arbitary date every year when the money should be distributed, amb the hom. geptleman has shown that for two years that distribution hats heen completed hefore the Ist of Nareh, I ilo not see why a date shombl not lie tixel.

Mr. TUPPER. I did mot. sity that the: whole distribution hat taken place: by the lst of March, hut the hulk of it.

Mr. I)AVIES (F. E. I.) If experience has shown the hom. gentleman that it is slifticult to get it clone by that date, then he might extend the date tifteen or twenty days longer, hat he should give Parliament some assurance thiat the date will not be left simply to the diseretion of the liovernment for the: time being.

Mr. TUPPER. It might be that, mo matter whether we were negligent or not, a man might not receive his lumaty liy that date, and then he wonlal not le entitled to it.

Nr. INAVIES (P.E.I.) The hom. gentleman is retining the point. heciause he sends out these patyments hy cheque from the heal ottice, aml therefore there need le no delay.

Mr. TUPPER. But suppose we were derelict in our cluty:

Mr. DAVIES (P.F.I.) I conld not suppose that. The hon. gentleman says he has succeerled in doing this lefore the lst March this year and last year, loy the application of liligence and other qualities. and being supportel hy a volunteer staff. What he has done in the last few years he can dos in the future, and I sulmit that, if he thinks that would he ruming the time rather close, he might extemal the time.
Mr. TUPPER. For what olject ?
Mr. WAVIES (P.E.I.) so that Parliament may hate an assurance that the money will be distributed ly a certain time, insteal of leaving it to the discretion of the (iovernment, because, as l have shown, it maty be used for political purposes.
Mr. TUPPER. Then you might make the risher:nen sutfier for the neglect of the department.

Mr. DAlIES (P.E.I.) There is mo reasen for that, if the chaques are sent out hy it certain diate.
Mr. TLEPPER. I think the ohjection the hom. sent leman mate is thoroughly impracticable, and I for not think he hats met my criticism. That limit of time would only have one consengence. No doult an effiort would be male to comply with it. lut in the event of fiilure it would punish the very people we want to assist.

WRECKINGM (CANADAN WATERS.

Mr. Bollelif moved secoml realing of bill (No. S) respecting aid hy Unitel States wreckers in (Gmamian waters.
Mr. CHARLTOS. Would the Minister allow this to staml for a few days: I understand that some parties in the west desire to commmoniate with him on the suljeect.

Mr. Boweld. Will Friday do?

Mr. CHARLTON. I am not sure whether that will give sutficient time or mot.

Motion poist pomed.

PILOTASE ACT AMENOMENT.

Mr. TUPIPER moved seemal reating of Bill (No. IO) to ament the Pilotage Act.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.l.) Will the hom. gentleman explitin this Bill?

Mr. TUPPER. The hom. genteman was mot present whon I explaine 1 this Bill before. Some time ago larliament exempted all vessels of not more than a tomage of 80 tons in order to encourage our fishermen of the coast to huild larger craft. The vessels had heen built very small in order to escape pilotage dues, anil the effect of that provision has leen, as reported to me, to encourage our fishermen and small coasters to haikd up to 80 tons. Now, their competitors are building larger craft, and in oriter to encourage a healthy rivilly. it is said that, if we slightl; increase the tomage, our fishermen will be enesmaged to build as fine craft as come from the ciloncester ports. That is the reason why I ask to make the limit lig) toms insteal of sotons. In the St. Lawrence all craft are exempt up to eirl tons, so that it does not affect them, and in several states of the Union they have eicouragel the building of these smalleoasters.
Mr. HAZEN. I io not desire to delay the passage of this Bill, bat as a number of people in the Maritime Provincessud some of my constituents have written to me asking for information concerning this Bill, I would ask the Minister to let the Bill stand until we have had an opportunity of hearing from those who are more especially interested in its provisions. At the present time 1 anm not in a position to say whether I shall suppore it or not. until I get more information.

Mr. TUPPER. If the House will take the secoml realing to day, I have moobjection to let the Bill stand before it takes another stage.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the seomil time.

ORDNANCE LANDS TORONTO.

Mr. DEWINNEF moved that the Homse resolse itself into Committee to consiler resolution (March llth) respecting conveyance of certain Orimance Lamls to the Corpmation of the City of Tormio.
Mr. LAURIER. Would the hom. gentleman tell us what are to be the combitions of this transier?

Mr. DENONES: The Orelame band which is the sulpect of this resolution, was tansferred to the Agrieulture Department in 1500 , and has heen in their orecupation ever since: it pectane the property of the dovermment in lisia. The (ity of Torronto made applisation for this lam. I helieve, for the purprise of a sattle market, and the valuation of the preperty was male by experts, ant the (avernment agreeil to sell it prowiled barliament would give the necessiaty inthority. The hom. gentleman knows that Oribance lands can only he sold by pullic auction, maless with the special consent of Parliament to the contrary. The bill which I propuse to submit to the House explains the whole dircunstances and also descriles the limits of the property. There were two valuations made, one by Mr. Whitney and one ly some other party, at siz.(Kn) and sit, (кN) respectively. The Bill proposes to sell the properiy to the mumicipality of Toronto for sit,onk).

Notion agreed to, and Homse resolveel itsindi intu Commitlee.

(In the (ommittee.)

On paragraph I.
Mr. LACRIER. As I maderstonel the hom. gentlenan, all the comblitions muller which this land is to he tramsferred, are set forth in the bill. Mr. DEWDNES. Ses. hey are all in the Bill.
Sir RI(HARDCARTWRIGHT. That may le, but it is convenient that we should know enemally what particular property you propme to deal with, what is the extent of the land, and for what pur. pose you desire to convey it to the Compantion of Toronto.
Mr. DEWDNE: That is explainel in the preamble of the Bill. The Corporation of the (ity of Tormino reguives the lands for the entargeneme of a market, known as the Western (atele Market, and applied for the gramt of said lamds, and hate offered to give the sum of $\mathrm{Sif},(\mathrm{ON})$.

Mr. DEWINES. So it is ; 1 was miler the impression it was Sj, (ok). I have a plan; which I will lay on the Table, showing the locatity of the property, if necessary. There is nearly five acres.
Mr. KIRKPATRICK. This laml, we all kmow, is held liy the comutry in trust for certain purposes. It was transferred ly the Ordnance Board of the Imperial ciovernment to Canada upon trust for certain purposes, and it is not in our power to give away the land at all. The statute relating to the Ordmance lames of the eomery specities that if any laml of this kime is sold it must he sold hy public nuction, except in cases of leases, or in cases where a lronimial doncrament may reyuire it for prorincial uses. This is not either of those cases. therefore I think that, as it is proposeel to deal with it hey special Act, we onght to have some knowlelge and some information ats to how this ralue is arrived at. At the present monent we do not kitw the quantity of hathl or the value, set we are called upon to say that it is expedient to transfer it th the (ity of Tormate. Now, the (ity of Toromos has no more right to that hamb at an umler- valuation than any other town or city in the comutry. athl we ought to take care that this property, which is helid in trust for the purposes of the iefene of camala, is carefully guarded. If there is a valuation. if we are to give it at a fair vahation. of canse there can be ne objection. hom 1 think that hefore passing this resolution we onght to have some evidence of that vahation.

Mr. DFNLSON. I quite agree with what has heensain her the last speaker athent the need of carefully glaroling the interest of the pullic. This batid. I silppusec. hats been orecupied for twents years he the: Immigration Department for sheds and other donermment purposes. It is not used now hy the militia of Toronto in any way, and has not heen for a great many years. The cat tle market which adjoins the lame hiss ontgrown its present site: ami the city reguires more land for the enlargement of the market. The eattle tranle with kingland has increased so much of late years that the city absolutely refuires more land for the purpenes of this market. As to the value of the land. I may mention that the covernment ohtaineel the most reliahle persom that could be han in the (ity of Toronto to value the land, a man who has heen in that husiness forty or fifty seats-1 refer to Mr. Whitney, a man who stams at the very head of his hasiness or profession, and one who has the contidence of every citizen of Toronto. In addition to that, I umberstanl that the city als, hand a valuation made ly Mr. Manghan, a most respectalle citizen of Tormito, and one in whom we all hatre contidence. Mr. Marghan, I helieve, assessed it at $$ 3,(X N)$ on $$ 4 .($ MN $)$ less than the ralue phater upon it ly Mr. Whitney. hut I understand Mr. Whitner"s valuation is the one the fovermment propuses to act upm. I regret. Mr. Chairman, that any opprosition should lee mate to the passage of this resolution. becanse the land is wanted very hatly hy the city. If the land was used by the militia in any way, I would be just as strongly opposed to selling it as is the hom. member for Frontenac (Mr. Kirkpatrick). We have another piece of groum, the Carrism Common, and the city has made orertures from time to time to the dovernmant to get it from us. hut I have vigoronsly opposed anything of that sort. I fancy that the hon. member for Frontenace has in his mind the Garrison.Common, which is used hy the militia, but that is quite a different piece of ground from the one mentioned in this resolution.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. Ny hon. friend lmas misumiderstome me. I row not oppose the sale of this Orduance lami, lout I said we wanted to get evidence of its real calne, we do not want to be acting in the dark. We are asked to give our assent and to declare that it is experlient to trans-fur this land to the (ity of Toronto, when we know nothing about its approximate valuation, we do not know whether this stm is more than its value. or whether it is only one-tenth of its value. We: want to hear the cridence of its value.
Mr. DENDNFS: I find I was in error in stating that one valuation was for s(bi, (10N) ann another for s $\mathbf{S}(\mathbf{t},(\mathrm{NN})$. I tind ly another memorandum I have here that a valuation was made by Mr. Paytom, of the London and Ontario Incestment Company, placing the lamd at s4., (MNO and build. ings at situ(ONO. Messtrs. Whitney di Non were askell to make a further valuation, and they placeed the value at $8: 92,(X X)$, incluting louildings: and S. P. (KM) was the amomit arrangei with the manici. pality of Toromes.

Mr. LAURIER. The proposition of the hom. member for Frome enac (Mr. Kirkpatrick) seems to be a perfectly fair one. The hon. gentleman surgests that all the information be laild on the Tablo. of the House. so that the committer: may le in a prsition to pernse it hafore the: resolution is prassed.

Mr. WEWDNES: I have no ohjontion to that course being taken.
 convenient course would he. expecially as explanations have heen satisfactory. that the resolution should he passed, and the Bill not proceded with until the docaments are on the Trable.
Mr. LALRIER. That will be perfectly satisfactory:

CNITED STATEN FISHIN: VFSNFLS.

Mr. TUPPER moved second realing of bill (No. (1) respecting fishing vessels of the United states of Americal

Mr. LAERIER. I had hopeal that the hom. gentenan would have given the Honse some reason for departing from the course that has been adopted with respect to this Act. The hom. gentleman, in introducing this measure the other day, simply statell that it was a measure for the purpose of conveying to the (iovernor in Council the power to issue these licenses to American fishing vessels. But, if my memory serves me, he failed to pive any reasom why there shoald lie a departure from the policy which we have hitherto followeol. The policy we have pursuel with respect to this measure has been simply this: since the treaty of $18 s s$. the Parliament of Canada has chosen to revive the mondux riwemfi from year to year. hy which we hate escapeal the difticalty which has arisen in consequence of the interpretation of the Convention of is1s. The legislation was certainly very proper: it has always met the consensus of opinion on lwoth siles of the Honse, and I fail to see for what reison we should now tre called upm for sest such extarordinary pewers in the Order in Comacil. There seems to he no allequate reason why these powers should be rested in the (iovernor in Conncil: indeed, I think they should be kept strit:dy under the control of Parliament, so long as the lifficulty exists inetween the Unitel States and lamada as to the interpretation of the Convention of 1 sis . It appears to me preferable to keep the matter in aldeyance as it is, that is to say. to have tenponary lesislation from year to year on the sulject, and that the (iovernment shombld ask from year to year the power to issue those licenses, rather than to vest at one anl forever in the fovernor in Comacil the privilege of issuing those licenses. This measure is of a permanent character. while the Act has been for years temporary in its character : in other words, the Act passed yearly was kept in force simply while the present difficulty hetween the two comitries remained unsettleal. If the ditticulty is terminated, there is mo longer any nevessity for this legislation, and muless the hon. Minister can adduce goos reasom why he shombl depart from the course he has followeil since issa, it seems to me the wiser policy to pursue is to allhere to the present system and not rest such lage powers in the Governor in Conncil.

Mr. TCPPER. Inanswer to the hon. gent lemanis enyuiries as to the reasom for changing the form of the Bill, I may say that it hats been found necessary to a $e$ in the maner indicated nearly everyear. certainly hast year and previons yeas b iefore parliament met. Enited itates fishing vessels would reach our ports sen roult to the tishing hauks.and would ask for these privileges, and it hecame incumbent unn us either to grant or refuse them. Then the cheasion came to comsider what policy shombid ine adopted for the whole seasom, hecanse, obvionsly. we conth not make rules for the early fishermen starting for the hanks that we would bot apply afterwath. Acvordisgly, as the hom. gentlenan will remember, the Governor in Comenci anthomized my deparment $w$ issue interim licenses, suljeet to the Act leing alopted at the next Parliantent, and from force of circumstances the rule acted on was that now emluntied in this Bill. Si, in reference to the other remarks of the hom. gentleman, as to this leing a permanent insteal of a temporary measure: it is true that this Bill vests anthority in the d iovernor in Comucil to stant these privileges. Dint we do not place ourselves in the position of having to anmend or repeal an Act on an oceasion when it might lo desirable to take some other comrse in the manage ment of our relations with our neighbous aver the tishery yuestion : and I think in every way, and especially so far as our international relations are concerned, it is more desirable that we should have this power and that there shonld be a discretionary pwer to "ais extent rested in the covernur in (bomeil, instead of a statutory obligation interfering somewhat with the provisions of the treaty of sisis. There is really in pratice bie very great difterence propnsed in this Bill from the course we have been following the last few years.

Mr. DAVIEN (I.E.I.) The Honse will rememher that this bill had its origin in the propersition mate by the plenipotentiaries of © t reat Britain when they met in Washingtom some yearsaga. If 1 recollect aright, the provisions of the annual Bill which has been intronluced ever since were permissive, and not compulsory. The objection which the hom. gentleman suggests as possilhe, could not arise under the former bill. The forernow in Comacil is not bound to so act, and if circhunstances render it mulesimble, they need hot do sio. The objection to the Bill is that formulated hy my hon. leader. It is one affecting our national obligations and rights, and it is highly desirable that Parliament should not designate to a committee of Combil matters over which it shoult, alowe all others, retain control. The hom. gentleman remembers that year after year, when the Bill has been intronuced, the House has been given to hope that some arringement wond he made which would render the passiage of this Bill another year unnecessary. We gave the iovernment theselarge comcessionsiat the time of the Washington treaty, becanseit was thonght that reasonable time should bealloweri for the United states Senate to consider that treaty and consider our oljections, and it was never comtemplated in the first instance that the measure shonla be mate permanent. So far as 1 am persomally concerned. I have never felt or expressed the slightest opposition to granting these concessions, font I helieve that may not he the general opiaion of Parliament. It lioss seem to me that in a matter atfecting our international rights and ohligations ani privileges, Parliament shomld he: alloweed to retain the control of it. in the sense that the bill shomhla not he passed for more than one year, and from year to year, and that it is undesinalite to delegrate these pwows to the Conernor in Comatil.
Mr. TUPPER. As 1 miderstami the healler of, the Opposition suggested that we shouhd alopt a standing metsure.

Mr. LACRIER. Nat at all.
Mr. MILLs (hothwell). Mr. Speaker. it seems to me that this legislation is niot such as the Honse rught to enconages. and that it would he right and proper to harea parliamentary committee to enguire into and report upon the whole suljeet. The hom. gentleman knows, and the Honse knows, that we never admitted that the Americans have any legal right to the concessions that we make ly this Bill. These concessions were mate in consentuence of contemplatednegotiationsof what it was inppoused woull at an early date be consammated, but there are mo negotiations pending, and there is ny prospect of any immeliate settlement of this suliject. and unless weare prepared toalamolon our rights saltogether in this matter to the Americans, anil to allow the: Conermment of the Cinited States tio make such a claim within our territories as they think proper. I believe it is time that we shonld aseertain precisely what our rights are that we are prepared w stanil hy, and that we will insist upon maintanning as against them. sor far as I am concerned. I an realy to deal liberally with the neighbouring Repallic in everything relating to our commereial relations with them, fut with regard to our sorereigu rights I would not surrender to them a piece of territory if it were fit for no other purpose than for the fishermen to dry their nets upon. I am disposed to maintain our rights, and to ascertain these rights to their full extent. Look at the difference hetween the comblat of will Bosernment in this matter and the combuct of the neighlmoring Republic with regaral to, another matter in ilispute. Take the case of their claim to sovereignty over the Behring Nea. Here is a looly of water that is four thousand miles in width. It is part of the open ocean that has lneen recognizel from the time of its discovery until the time that Russia put up a certain pretension, as leeing a part of the open sea, equally open to the ships of all mations. Now, within the past few years, the Government of the Unitel States claimed a sovereignty orer that sea, and they have seivel our vessels, they hare contiscated the property of seal-hunters in the open seab, far heyond the limits that international haw usually recogimes, and this new pretension, this pretension contrary to the ancient pactice, and contrary to law. has been allowed to go practically into operation, and is continued down th the present hour. Well, sir, on our eastern const there are lanl-locked hays, and what is the pretension of the Enitel States with regirld to these: The pretension is: that if a hay is more than sis miles wide, that that portion which liesat a greater distance than three miles from the coast is a part of the open sea and is equally accessible to the ships of all mations for every possible purpuse. They do not almit any such right with regard to the laml-locked hays upon their conast. They assert this pretension as against us, and they assert it as fommed upon a treaty that molertakes to enme ciate the very terms that are usually recognized by writers on intermational laws, aud which they themselves say are beised upon the principles of international law. when it is simply a deelatation of what the law is with regand to these matters. The hom. gentleman is making very large concessions hy the continanace of this rule.

Mr. TCPPPER For a price.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). For a priee. Such a price. The Americans are not making any corres. ponting concessioms.
Mr. TCPIPER. They have mothing correspmat ing to sell. We sell them these privileges.
Mr. MLLL天 ibothwell). They do not pretend to give you license wer the dispuited waters of the Behring sea, upon the like terms. They make no corresponding concession, and it seems tome that we are just in this prosition : that we are asserting our leggil right which we are trying to keep alive , but which we have not the comage: to assert effectively. That is onr $p$ osition and the hom. gentleman proposes hy this Bill practically to make this a continums pricy. It is an longer to be a temporary arrangentur until negrotiations are hard, hat a permanemt armagement. It is a species of atpuies cence in the pretensions of our neighlomurs, maler which in the "ourse of a few sears, they may set up a right. I do mot think this is is soon julicy, nor do I think it is a policy that this Honse ought to enconage. We went yuite far enongh hefore, further than I think we should have gone. It is not hy illiberal trade arrangements, it is not by hastering on the election phatform that we are going to maintain our rights. They have got to be asserted in amother and more eflestive way, and I think this can be done perfectly comsistent 1 ith goolwill towards our neighmonss and with henefit to our own interests.
Sir JOHN THOMPson. Mr. speaker, I guite agree, and 1 ann sure every member of the fiovernment agrees, with the views expresseal hy the !omi. gentlemen opposite : that this is a concession to the United States on lehalf of their fishermen, and that it is one that we are by no means loound to inake. I guite agree also that any concession of the kind ought to he temporary, but I disagree with our frienils opposite when they say that the Bill proposes to make it a permanent concession, and I likewise differ from them when they say that we are surrendering any right whatever which we possess in regard to our fisheries. On the contrary, Nir, when we require the fishing vessels of the United States entering our ports for the purposes named in this Bill, to take out licenses from this fiovermment, and to porehase that license from this (iovermment. I say that instead of surremering any right to the fisheries we are apholiding that right : ind every license to it fishing vessel of the United states strengthens the claim of Camala to the sovereigity of our tishing gromils. I feel lonund to take issue with our frients: onposite when they emontend that in any respect we are. ly an Act of this kind. surremlering the soremeignty of our tishing territomies. There are two or ihree pactical views to take of this guestion whish 1 think hate been overlowked for the moment. One is, that this is a very convenient mole of alministering our sovereigin rights in these fishing gromals. We preserve as it hatessid, our sovereignty : lint at the samet ime anl to the utmost extent that is compatible with the rights, of wur wwn tishermen in these tishing eromils, we admit foreighers: but we repuire them to take the licenses for two reasions---in the first place in order that their vessels may be watehed and inlentified, and pmathing presented: and serondly: in order to estahlish it fund which will to some extent, if not entirely. pay for the policing of thase waters. That has heen the pactical result during the last few years. The propposes of convenience have leen servel, and the fumb which has heen realizel from this somere. while not to be comsidered ade guate compensation for the rights which have been grantel under it. has heen a source. nut of revenue, but of income almest, if not entirely. sutficient to meet the police expenses which devolio upon us in guaring those waters for the henefit of our fishermen. As to the guestion of comenience. the print to the considered ly the Homse. irrespective, at the moment, of whether negotiations are proveceling on this subject on not, is that the conses should the alopted and comtinued for some time to come which is most convenient for the alministration of our rights in those fishing gromels. I think everyone will agree that this methorl prevents collision: and if there are not at present on font negrotiations to be settle? with regard to the fisheries. there are other intprortant guestions het ween (amadia and the Cnitenl States which are pressing for a solntion. In ciew of these gluestions. it is very desimalle that :unything that might interrupt eqool feeling and genl neighlumurhool should if possible be avoidel, while: at the same time we preserve as the hom. member for bothwell desires that we shomh, our sovereign rights. There are guestions. such as that relat. ing to Pehring Neat. ami questions with regard to the Athantic fisheries, misettled, and more or less the sulijects of ocasional negotiations. We desire that the most friendly settlenent of all these fuestions should le arrivel at : and the way to promote frienilliness between the two comntries is to a aroid collision by assenting, for a time at least, to the slight sacrifices involved in the adoption of the modnus riv: undi for the administration of our fishing rights. The hon. gentlemen who have spoken against the bill seem to entertain the view that this measure will delegate powers to the Covernor in Comoil to make permanent this Act which has hitherto leen ammal. That is a mistake, becanse practically the Bill reruires that there shall be in ammal proclamation of the modna riormif. The first chanse provides that the 'liovernor in Comacil may from time to time issue licenses, hut it goes on to say that the licenses shall be goonl for a year only: annl this Parliament, sitting ammally, cenn at any time give the foremor in Council instructions to discontinue the morlos rimuli. But the practical incomenience of the passage of an Act ammally by parliament is this: thei carly in the year, even as early as the month of Jamany, we received enyuiries from Wiashingtom as to whether the monlus rirruli is to he continued in force for the current year. The fishermen of the United Niates reguire to kinow that before they leave their homes, becanse if they have to return to their homes for supplits and tainship. ment, they must, when they go ont, provide themselvesolifierently from what they wondonherwise ilo. If we have to answer every vear that the Aet hats expirenl, and that the session of larliament has to be awaited before it can be renewed, the result is (0) put off these fishermen withont any definite answer, unt il they have departed for their fishing froungs. Decause it is likely to be a month later Defore Parliament meets and at Bill can be patssed and assented to: su that, as my eollearue has explatineal. the $\begin{aligned} & \text { iorermment is obliged, for the sake }\end{aligned}$ of convennence amd in order to matintan the policy of friendliness which this Parlianent has instruceil it to ohserve, to exercise the powers which this bill has conferven, hy authorizing our ottioeers to issule lieenses to those fishing vessels, subject to the approval of l'arliament when it meets. Wie think it better to take power to proclaim the mon/u: ribumli year after year, and even then it will comtinue to be maler the control of liarliamemt each session.

Motion agreed to. and Bill rean the secomd time:

HEPAR'TMENTOFMARINFANDFINHERIEN.

Mr. TUPPER moved secomd reating of liall ( No. 1:) respecting the lepartment of Marine and Fisheries.

Mr. LAURIFR. Is that a measure of ecomomy or expediency?

Mr. 'IUPPER. Economy and efticiency.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the secomil time, and House resolved itself into (ommittee.

(In the Committee.)

Mr. TLPPPR. The principal change is in the schedale. which enumerates mactically all the sulijects indministered lig the two dejart!nents.

Mr. DAVIFN (P.F.I.) I had not the pleasure of hearing the hon. gentleman when he intronluced this Bill. I have the pleasure of supporting it. becanse it fulfils the prophecies made at the time the hon. gentleman or his friems intronluced the measure dividing the department. We know that the department originally existed as the Marine amd Fisheries Department, with one deputy head, ann that it was conducted with eonsilerable economy under that deputy. We thought that no reasonable excase was giren for dividing the department, and I think 1 heard it stated pretty frepuently on this side that it would probably suit the exigencies of the Goverment to re-muite the two departments. How much has loen pail to the leputy Minister of Fisheries in salary, and how much in superanmuation, so that we may ascertain how much the comntry has paid for the little freak whieh the Govermment imblyed in a few yeats ago in divid. ing the repartment:

Mr. TLPPER. I think the division took plate in 18S., and since that time the Deputy Minister sl, $\mathrm{N}(\mathrm{n})$ previously as an ofticer in the service.

Mr. D.AVIFiN(P.E.I.) Hal hee a secretary:
Mr. IUPP'FR. Nut matil lant year, when oue of the officers wats given all alditional $$(10)$ for ater ing as his secre:ary. The superammation allowance is Sl.f(x) .ndt or st, ink). He hats given the conntry twenty yeats of his service, anm when ath ottice is atolished the practice, as the hom. fentleman knows. is to superammate the oflicer instead of cutting him oft altugether.

Mr. D.AVIEN(P.E.I.! I shombl havethomoth that the gentleman superammated, heing ingoof health and in the prime of life. shmblh have heen assigned some other ofticial lluties in the department, so that the combtry would have had some benetit for the Sl.ink which will le: paial to him ammally during life. I mulerstand he is a gentleman under in veats of ise.

Mr. TLPPFR. I never asked him so deliatte a question.

Mr: OAVIEN(P.E.l.) At any rate he is in the prime of health, and I helieve he never showed any; fiailure of mental rigom. Did! molerstame the: hon. gentleman to sity that this genteman was superamuater simply licatuse of the change in the deparment, ambler for wer reason:

Mr. TLiPl'ER. The Oroler in Council states that, it having heen decided to ainolish this oftice in the interest of etficiency aml exomony, it is recommended that this officer shond be superatnmaterl.

Mr. DAVIES (P. F..I.) I mulerstomit that there was some charge bought against that genteman. and that there wats an investigation by a (ommittee of Comncil. that a rejomt was mate, which it wats understood outside was mot unanimons, in regatal to that, and I think the Honse is entitled to finl information on the subject.

Mr. TUPPRR. There were charges marle agrainst the Deputy Minister of Fisheries, involving some irregular cominct. I investigated these myself and bronght then to the notice of the fiovernment, and they were examined into again, aml the conclusion of the diovermment wats that, while: irregulatities hal existed in the clepartment amber his direction, and for which he was responsihle, they were not of so graze a character or so serions: as to remer any extraminary action necessary in comnection with the case, aml considering his lomg periond of service during which his comduct as an ofticer hat been all that was desimable. Perhats: under these ciremmstances, as these charges of irregularities were not deemed to be of verg serious moment, the hon. gentleman woull not consider any further notice necessary to be taken of them: but, of comrse, if he should ilo so, he catn have all the information bionght clown.

Mr. DAVIEN (P.F.I.) : Would ask if the homgentleman as the head of the department, concurred in that conclusively?

Mr. TUPPFR. As the hom. gentleman is aware, I am not at liberty to state what the action $i$ of the individual memsers of the (iovernment Was.

We tomk executive action, and, unless I concurred in that, of comrse I should not be here.
Sir RICHABD (ARTWRIGHT. Will the homgentleman inform the House whether any number of years were addel to the service of this ofticer, or whether his superammation was simply hased on the perionl he served?
Mr. TCPIPR. It was simply haseel om his service.
Mr. MrMCLILEN. Were the charges to which the Ninister hats referred, charges of irregularity that oucure recently, or were they in regaril to irregularities of sime years ago?
Mr. TEPIPER. They came to my notice and. speaking from memory, I think covereal a perion of colly abrint a year. The moment they came to my nutice, I went into them.
Mr. M.MCLALEN. 1 know that a committer invertigated certaincharges in comnection with the duties performed by the gentleman referreal to when he was the accomentant of that department.
Mr. TLPPPER. The Public Accounts (ommette dealt with that. I helieve, and it wiss before 1 was comected with the department, but I think that the Depmey came out of that stainless. I am not sutticiently familiar with the details to speak pnsitively, hor I never heard any expression of opinion on the part of larliament alverse to the Dejuity on acceome of that investigation.
Mr. Mo.MULIAN. I rememher well the incestigation, and I remember that he did not come ont of it in such a way as would warrant the Honse in comelnding that he was not implicated to a very serions extent. The matter was allowed to go at that time though irregularities of a very grave kind had ocemreel. That was pessed over then, but it seems that, instead of having the pmishment he deserved meted out to him. he was toll to go up higher and was made Deputy Minister, and that warning was not sutficient. but it appears that since then he has not performed the daties of the office to which he was appointed without getting into trouble in regaral to something else. I do not think it is slesirahle. if we are to continue in force the superrammation system. that men whose career has mot been of such ia chanacter as to show that they have performed their cluties faithfully should be put on the superimmation list. I think it is wrong to have such a list at all, but certainly men who lave not performed their duties with care and economy and attention should not be put on the retiring list and allowed to live for the rest of their lives at the expense of the comitry.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I remember the incestigation my hom. friend has referred th; and I remember that the Deputy Minister of Marine appeared before the Public Aceronts Committee at that time, claiming that the expenditure of a very large sum of money which hand taken place in that repartment had never been andited, and he claimed that it should be anditen. I would ask the hon. genteman, as I understame the health of that Deputy Minister is such that the comitry camont hope for his long retention in oftice, whether. Vefore the superannuation was granted to the leputy Minister of Fisheries, thase expenditures which had taken place some years before and which involves so large an amonnt of money. Were audited or not?

Mr. Tripes

Mr. TCPPER. All I can tell the hon. gentleman is that some years igh the lheputy Minister of Narine spoke to me on that sulject, and at his instance it was brought to the attention of the Treasiny Board. Of course, I am mahle to saly what steps have leent taken, hut I sposke to the Deputy again some time ago, and foumd that hewas now perfectly satistien ats to the position of the atconnts. I am mahle to sily whether an amlit took place or not.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) The IEputy Minister of Marine may have luen satistieal, lat Parliament ought not to ife satisfied until some investigation of that expenditure takes place. We are unt ighomat that charges were made and were handien almout amongest the officials in regard to this ex. penditure. Personally, of conrse, we know nothing: as to this expenditure Evergiining may hate. been perfectly right or it may not have heen perfectly right. but it was alleged by some of the ofticials that everything was not perfertly right. At all events these moneys were not spent umber that check aml superrision under which all pulli, monevs are now generally spent. I think a lump sum was coted and was inot acominted for th the anlitor or to amyme else.
Mr. FOSTERS. A great many arcomats were mot aulited.
Mr. DAVIBN(P.E.I.) But it seems that this expenditure was not under the comt rol of any thind person who could andit and cheek it. It was in the hamis of two or perhaps three persoms in the Marine Department. The result was that charges and comiter charges were made and suspicions were ahroal, whether just or minast I do not know. At any rate it amounts to this, that if the beputy Ninister now is satistied he wess very much dissatisfied a year or two aco and expresseel that dissatisfaction lefore the Public Accounts Committee in very strenuons hangarge.
Mr. TUPPER. It is omly fuir to the late lepury Minister to say, that when Ihal a conversation with the late Deputy Minister of Marine and Fisheries. he never gave ine reason to suppose that while the Deputy Minister of Fisheries wats muler him, ats arcomitant, he had misappropriated any funls. As that sulject had come up in the Public Accoment: Committee, he felt uneasy, in the event of his death and of other dischosures oecurring, lest he shomh not have an opportunity before he died of having such an andit as would prevent any such possibility aris. ing, but on no ceceasion dial he give me any ground. for suspecting that the leputy Minister of Fisheries had been guilty of other irregularities in respect of money. While I an mot in a position to sity how it was that the action of the Treasury Boaril was taken. I am quite contident in stating that the Deputy Dinister of Marine informed me a short time ago that his anxiety in comnection with that matter hal ceased, and the ditticulties arising ont of the want of audit of the late aceomitant: affiairs, had heen adjustel to his satisfaction.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) This matter came up hastily and I had not turned it over in my mind. but my recollection of it is that that sum of money to which the Duputy Minister of Marine made reference, and which he claimed hefore the PublicAccounts Committee shonld be audited hy a puhilic official, had reference not only to expenses in that departurent, but to the collection of tishery revemues, that these moneys were collected and paid in and paid ont, and nolnoly knew anything fhout it : in print of fact, there was no system alowt it.
Mr. TCPPPRR. 1 was not on the committee the hom. gentleman refers to at that time, and I have no recollection of what oeverred.
Mr. DATIEN (P.E.I.) Nor did we know very mach alout it. The facts were as 1 have relateil them to the House, that large sums had leen collected for a series of years and had never been andited. They may be right or they may be wromg. But that diol mot seen proper inokkeeping: it seement that the control which Parliament reguired should be exercised orer the collection and expenditure of money, hail not heen extended to that departrent in the collection of these moneys. 1 think the Public Accomnts ( Committee hanl a pledge given to them at that time althongh 1 will uint speak with albsolute pusitiveness- that the accomint. would he atudited by the then Minister of Marine. the late Mr. Me:celan. anid on that pleige the Public Aceomits (ommittee let the matter rest. I think myself that in a matter involving mang hambreds of thousamis of dollars, the Slinister would he acting in the publice interest to have an amblit made of the collection and expenditme of this money. I want to sity that I would he the last man inferentially to impate to anybuly wromedoing. But in provess of time some of thesie gentle:men may lie, charges may tre made and they may not be here to explain them, and partly on their accome and partly in the pmilic interest, when there is an emomons receipt of momey and an chommons expentiture in any slepartmint, care shomble be taken that the operations shombl he surrombled with the proper cheeks to secure that the money shall be property received and expembed.
Mr. HA\%EN. I feel that some statements have meen made that are not guite fair to the gentleman who hately ocoupied the pasition of Deputy Minister of Fisheries. Any one listening to this discussion and to the remanks of the hom. gentleman from Wellingtom (Mr. MeNullen), Wouht alonost come to the eonclusion that wrong. doing hat heen proved against the Deputy Minister of Fisheries, and that it was in some degree owing to that wrong-doing that he no longer acelpies the position which he held athort time ago. Of comse we have nothing hefore the H omse of an ofticial nature. nue papers unon the matter, and the only statement we have respeeting this matter is that of the Minister of Marine. who says that any irregularity proved against the beputy was of such a very slight character that it is not consilered worthy of punishment in any degree. In view of that statement, and in view of the ahsence of any official papers, it seems to me unfair to reflect in any way upon the conduct of that otticial regarding the charges which were mentioned in the newspapers during the recess. As I understand it, certain charges of irregnlarity were made to the Minister, who incestigated them and referred them to Council : the Council appointed a committee to investigate them, and on a report of the committee, after investigating all the facts, it wasfound that the irregularities, if irregularities they can be called at all, were of the slightest chayacter, and would not justify, and would not warrant the imputation of wrong-doing. I may say that dhoing the last session of parliament, which was my tirst seswion here. I often had oceasion to go to the lepartment of Fisheries alont matters in which my constituents were interested, and I always foum the Depaty Minister most obliging in discharging the luties of his oftice amd. to my mimh, a most etficient officer. I ca:anot help expressing the regret that if an amalgamation of these departments is going io take plate in the interest of the public service, a position in the public service canmo be fomel for this gentleman whom I always foum so miformly obliging, conrterns and efficient in the diselange of his otticial duties. I regret that that gentleman is to he hlamed on such slight fomblation. when we have before ns no information whitever warranting any snispicion of wrongeloing. As I madenstand the matter, this affair that ocemrem a fell years ago and was investigate on in the Public Aceonints Committee. has heendispused of altogether, and there is now ahsolutely mothing to warmant the slightest suspicion of wrong-loing on his part.

Mr. MILALS (Bathwell!. We inate before us at Bill !ropming to almish the Departuent of Fisheries and to mite it again :0 the Deparment of Marine. The hom. gentleman, in propesing a measure of this sort. to some extent at all events, reflects upon the deputy head of the department. The hom. gentlemanis proclectesor in optice askent the Homse to divide the Department of Marine and Fisheriess and to constitute two departments, :and to put Mr. Tiltom at the head of the Department of Fisharies. the Honse complied with the wishes of the Minister. the division tomk place ami a new department was created of which Mr. Tiltom was made beputy Minister. It is innprosilhe to inclicse that if the arrangement hand workel sutisfactorily. if the Deputy Ninister had diselargel his husiness etticiently, the hon. Minister would hase propused. while the beputy is in the brime of life, w mite the departments itul plate them bouth again maler the charge of a gentleman who is nearly fomseore sears of age -ath etticient ofticer. I have un noult, a thownghly upright ofticer, I have no dombt a anoflicer in whom, I helieve, every fonermment and every parliament have hand continlence. believing him to he in every respect a gentlenanof the very highest integrity. I say, when the Minister connes down with such a propusition ats this, to put out of ottice a Depaty Minister who is in the prime of life, and to place the department of which he is in charge under the control of an aged Deputy . Minister, he is himself reflecting upon the efficiency or upon the uprightness of the party who has heen leputy heal of that oftice. The Minister hats also informed the Home that charges were made against this lepmety, that an investigation has taken place. and that those charges and investigation were followed ly the bill before us. 1 am not going to discuss the comduct of the beputy. Minister who is alout to be removed by this legislative proceeding from othice, as the Minister has promised to bring down the papers relating to that investigation.
Mr. TUPPER. No: I made no such promise.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). I understoon the hom. gentleman to say that the papers would be brought down. I think it is very important that they shomid be brought down lefore this Bill is carried, and the two departments are again united into one department. The superamuation of the geatleman can hamolly take place, after these charges have heen made and an investigation hats taken place, withwut D'arliament seeing the papers in order to determine whether that superamuation is a proper proeedure or not.

Mr. DAVIFix (i'f. I.) What has been alleme to this schedule:

Mr. Fociler. It is moler the Pablic: Works Department.

Mr. DAVIFAS (l'.F.B.) It is in commection with maintaining the service now resulated by the Marine lefartment. (atue Tomentine wharf is approathing completion, and last year or the year before plentres were given by the Minister of Public Works that a whatf on the islame side womblako he eompletent. We have expenied a! latre sum of money on the mainland side, and it will he worse than thown away maless the forermment constract the complement to it on the other side. I want to ask the Minister whether he has taken the matter into consideration, whether he has asked an appropriation for the construction of a wharf on the island sile to enable a line of steamers or boats or any other means of commmication to be placed hetween the island and the mainland. I donot know what anount has been expembed in the construction of a wharf at Gape Tormentine, whether it will exceel Sl(N),(NX) or not. But at all event it is a very large simn. The What on the islamd side must of necessity be hailt. or the present expenditure will he lost. I desire to ask the Minister whether he has any policy in regard to the matter, whether he proposes to have this wharf constructed, whether he has recommended its construction in order that a line of steamers may be placed there in summer or winter, or both: We had the subject diseussed last year: but that project seems to be in ahey-ance for the time being. althongh I materstand the Finathe Ninister, in reply to an hon. member, stated the other day that the matter was still maler the consideration of the fiovemanent.

FIRST READIN(i.

Bill (No. 2(i) to incorporate the Nelson and Fort Sheppard Railway Company.-(Mr. Mara.)

NEWFOUNIHAND AND (ANADA.

Mr. KAULBACH askerl, Whether the Government have given orders for the strict enforcement of the bouding privileges in respect to Newfoumdland fish, and are such fish to be stored and re-shipped in the sime condition as when received:

Mr. BolVELL. In .Iuly, 1889, instructions were issued (ride circular No. 315 B) reguiring strict enforcement of the law in respect to the warehousing of foreign fish. In 1)ecember, 1891 , instractions were issued (rinfe No. ine B) in re Newfomdland fish, pointing out that it was sub, ject to the provisions of the Tatiff and Customs Acts then in force. Taking these circulars in conjunction, otficers of Customs have heen informed that Newfomolland fish is subject to the ware. housing law. But it does not follow that warehonsed fish shall be re-shipped in the same comlition as when received, as section $8: 3$ of the Customs Act provides that owners of warehoused groods may sort or repack the same while in hond, in order to the preservation thereof. I have the circular here which I will ham in, as follows:-
"I have by direction of the Hon. the Minister of Customs, to call your special attention to the provisions of Section 89 of the Customs Act as amended by the Act 5 : Vic.. Chap. 14 (last session), and now in torce, which provides that goods entered for warchouse shatl be immediately, after entry, transurted toand placed in the desimated warehouse: and of Section 90 , which proriles that if coods so entered are not duly carried into and deposited in the warchouse, or having been so deposited are atterwards taken out without lawtul permit, se., such goods shall be seized and forfeited : aud to point out that under these provisions of law the practice which has heretofore existed at certain ports, of permitting foreign fish which has been so entered for warehouse to remain on the wharf for the purpose of being further cured, packed or repacked before entry ex-warehouse for consumption or exportation. can be no longer lawfully allowed, but sach fish must immediately, on being entered. be placed in the desiguated warehouses and there secured in the same mamer as any other bonded goods: this, however, does not prevent the packing or repacking of such fish under Cusioms supervision within the bonded warehouse, under the terms of Section 83 of the Act: but no privileges can be given further than within the section hereinbefore referred tu."

Mr. K.AULBACH asked, Whether the Government of Canalat has taken steps to ascertain the amount of duty collected from Canadian fishing ressels upon fishing outtits in Newfoundlamp ports, and has the Ganadian Government notifien the Newfom $\begin{gathered}\text { Nand Gorermment of its intention to de- }\end{gathered}$ mand a refund of all such duties paid by Canadian fishermen on salt and other outfits upon entering the ports of Newfoundland, for the purpose of tishing or preparing to fish in Newfoundland waters, or waters adjacent thereon?

Mr. BOWVELL. No representations have been made to the Government of Canadia that dutics have been improperly collected upon fishing outfits in Newfoundland ports : consequently, no refund has been demanded.

Mr. KAULBACH asked, Whether the Government of Canula has made a reguest for, or received from Canadian fishermen, any statement or evidence as to the truth of the charges made against said fishermen in respect to the alluged selling of bait to the French fishermen of sit. Pierre:

Mr. TUPPER. The Canarlian (iovernment has not been in possession of any specific information on that subject on which such a request could be founder, amd consequently, no such at refuest has been mate.

Mr. KAULBACH asken, Wherher it is the intention of this Govermment to demand from the Newfoundland (Govermment the amounts paid as license fees ly. Canadian fishermen to Newfoundland, during the fishing seasons of 1890 and 1891 ?

Mr. TUPPER. The Canalian Govemment is now endeatouring to obtain through process of law a refund of the license fees exacted hy the Government of Newfommlland from Canatian fishermen during the seasons of 1890 and 1891 .

Mr. LAURIER. Who is the suitor:
Mr. TUPPER. The suit is taken on behalf and with the authority of the fishermen from whom this amomenthas been exacter.

(EANUS-ORI(ILN AND) CREFDN.

Sir HECTOR LANGEVIN asked, Whether that part of the last census showing the figures under the heads of Origin amd Religious Creeds of the population of Canala, will he latid hefore this House:

Mr. CARLINA: This work is poceeling at the rate of about $\because(k)$, (KN $)$ names per day : and it is expected the whole will he tinished about the midhle of April.

LETTER POSTACE-REDUCTION.

Mr. SOMFRVILI.E askel, Is it the intention of the (iovermment to reluce letter postage from 3 to 2 cents:

Sir AlOOLPHE CARON. In answer to the hon. gentleman, I leg to state that it is mot the intention of the (iovernment to reduce letter postage from :3 to 2 cents.

LITTLE MIMINEGANH PREAKW゙ATER.

Mr. YEO (for Mr. Perry) asked, What action, if any, has been taken by the (iovermment with respect to a petition of the fishermen and others of Little Miminegash, P.E.I., praying for a breakwater at that place?

Mr. OUIMET. The matter is umler the consideration of the department.

BOUNTIES TO FISHERMEN--DISTRIBUTION.

Mr. BOWERS asked, Whether it is the intention of the Govermment in future, to distribute the moneys given as bounties to fishermen in such a manner that those fishing in vessels belonging to Digby, Iarmouth and Halifax counties, shall receive a sum equally as large as those fishing in vessels in other counties of the Dominion?

Mr. TUPPER. It is not the intention of the Government to depart from the principle of uniformity which now obtains in connection with the regulations for the distribution of the bounty.

THE SOULANGES CANAI.

Mr. BER(iERON moved for :

Copies of engineers' reports which led to the building of the Beauharnois Canal ; of engineers' reports in farour of the building of the Soulanges Canal, and of reports, letters dec.. from engineers, masters or pilots, objecting to the building of the canal at Soulanges.
He said: In making this motion. I heg leave to give some reasoms why Iask for these papers. Last year when we were going through the Estimates there was a sum of money wantel for the explomtions and engineers' fees in connection with the Nomlanges (Ganal, amounting, I believe, to $\mathbf{$ 3 0 0 , 0 0 0}$. I then objected, as a member of this House, to vot ing such an amount mitil a committee of engineers had been called upon as experts to consider the report upon which the Government based their action in asking for that money. I thenasked that the report of Mr. Monro, upon which the Government seems to base their policy. should he sulmitter to some engineers, either belonging to the statf of the (iovernment, or imy others, who should juige, for themselves and for the public, of the merits of his report. At that time I was answered by the Minister of Customs, then the acting Minister of Railways and Canals, that all precautions had leen taken, and that it was after due study and deliberation during the last ten or tifteen years, that the diovernment had come to the conclasion to accept Mr. Monos report as conclusive and final. still, there seemed to be a doubt at that time, and I opposed the onte. although I had to contend against the covermment, who had decided to alopt the north shore of the river for the canal, amel against gentemen sitting on the Oppusition benches who thought they were helping the then representative of soulanges, Dr. Monsseau ; I happened to be alone in defending what I thought, was the best interest for the country. Since then. we siw not long ago that tenders were called for the construction of the Somanges Canal. Many things have been satid concerning these tenders. and it has been charged that probably politics hat something to dow with them, seeing that they were calle for furing election time. Ineed not tell you. Mr. Speaker. that I never believed those stories. I was convincel then, as I amow, that the fiovernment did not need to take any such steps to cary the Comity of Somlanges. But tenders were asked for. Naturally those more particularly interested, like the people of my comenty and the navigators who pass through the Beauharnois Canal, had a goond deal to say upon the subject, and a lemand was made for a further enguiry hefore the Government decided upon such an immense expenditure. I intend now, Mr. Speaker, to go into the whole question of the construction of that canal on the south side, and of the reports of the engineers in favour of building it on the north side. I am very sorry that I shall have to bother the House, as it may le somewhat tedions to the members, but I am loing it for two purposes, first, because I think it is my duty as representative of the county through which the Beauharnois Canal now passes, and in the second place, and chiefly, because it is a public question of great importance, and I think every member of this House should express an opinion upon it, and at least try to find out whether we are not going to expend an immense sum of money in a work which, later on, may turn out to have been umbertaken without proper study and care. I have here a look which was written in 15,2 ly the hon. member for Jaeq ues Cartier (Mr. (iirouard) who is now sitting in this Honse. It is a complete study of the construction of the st. La wrence Canals, particularly that portion of them hetween Lake St. Francis and Lake St. Loulis. It was written after a careful examination of all the engineers reports, and of everything which might have leen written or said upon the subject. I am sory that every member of the House has not got a copy of this most interesting production. I shath read certain parts of it which hear most directly upon the sulbect 1 ann treating now. This question of building the camals between Latke st. Francis and Lake St. Lonis, began to be diseussed as long ago as 1804 . Naturally it was then iery small. It was carried at a small expense and served the purpose at that time. But the real question of huikling. canals hetween those two lakes originated luring the perion hetween 1830 anl 1844. Public attention was then, as it has been lately, directed to the question, as was evident in the discussion which took place in this House the other day, and it was considerel most important to use in this country the water stretches, the lakes and rivers for which our comatry is noted. Naturally the yuestion of builling canals arose ats a means of orercoming the ohstacles created hy rapids. So between the yeirs I have mentioned this question was very much agitated, and the alministrative authorities of the time became convincel that the future of our comentry depemled largely upon the construction of camals. Surveys were made resulting in our present. chain of canals. I desire now to read extrats from a report prepared hy Mr. (iironard. I may say to those matequainted with the work that Mr. Girouard is a citizen of the county of Beatharnois, and, as he was a leading lawyer in Montreal, he was called upon ly the people, who hatd heard a great deal regarding the contention as to the builling of a canal on the north shore, 6 study the question, and his report helongs to the pablic. Mr. (iirouard says in this work:
"The Hon. Mr. Killaly is reported to have said in 1st? that the first survey in connection with this enterprise had been made about thee years previously by a French engineer, who, after having examined both sides of the river located the work on the south side."
Perhaps there is some ground for controversy on that point: but we know that so far back as isot some reports were made by an engineer from France. The writer continues :
"Three different surveys were made on the north bank of the river in 1833 by Mr. J. B. Mills, with whom were associated Mr. David Thompson and Mr. Samuel H. Kecfer, the latter having been subsequently engineer in chief of the department, under the direction of the Commissioner of Public Works, which included Messrs. Harwood and DeBeaujeau, respective proprietors of Vaudreuil and Soulanges, both of which gentlemen, it is well under. stood, were in favour of constructing a canal on the north bank of the river."
There are some paragraphs here which I need not read to the House, for I wish to detain it as short a time as possible. Mr. Girouard had a controversy with several gentlemen, with Mr. Lanthier, who was the parliamentary representative of Soulanges, and with other gentlemen who were personally interested in the matter, and of course Mr. Gironard was obliged to defend himself; but I will onit those paragraphs which do not have any direct learing on the discussion. The historical part of the record may he summed up as follows
" On the loth February. 183t, a Committee of the Honse of Assembly of Lower Canada adopted Mr. Mills' report : hut it does not appear that any steps were taken to carry it into effect.

It is Mr. Mills's route which the present partisans ot the north shore canal (among whom are Mir. Lanthier, member for Soulanges, and Mr. Harwood, member for Vaudreuil) desire to see adopted by the Dominion Parliament. This route was surveyed under the special directions of Messrs. Harwood and DeBeaujeau (both personally interested in the north shore canai), and was selected without any examination been made on the south side of the river, but was recommended solely from the military point of yiew. which prevailed over all other considerations at the time the survey was made. What weight should such a report hare at the present time, when commercial interests and conside rations are deemed to be allimportant in the examination of public works of this nature?
"In the months of September and Oetober, 1834. Mr. Alesander Stevenson, accompanied by Mr: Trudean, surveyed the south bank of the river at ihe joint request of the Commissioners of Public Works for Lower Canada and the Hon. Edward Ellis. LIis report, made on the loth February, 1835, was in favour of the line of the present Beauharnois Canal. It does not appear that Mr. Stevensou examined the north bank of the river at that time: but he did so subsequently, and in the sume year at the request of Messrs. Harwood and Simpson, and the opinion be gave those gentlemen was, that a canal on the north bank of the river would cost a great deal more than one 'n! the south bank.

In $18 \not \mathrm{~m}^{2}$, speaking of these two routes before the special committee, Mr. Stevenson said: "I have seen Mr. Mills's report and estimate. aud from what knowledge I have of that side of the country, I must say that I cannot approve of the route chosen by that gentleman.'

A sinth survey was made in 1834 for the Seigneur of Beaularuois, by N. H. Baird, a member of the London Engineers Society. He also shared in the opinion that the south shore was the best adapted for a canal, but, going further than Mr. Stevenson, he suggested the propriety of using the small riverst. Louis on the score of economy. This suggestion was not generally approved of owing to the length of the route -15 miles $\leq$ but the superioradrantiges of the south shore were nevertheless acknowledged.

- In 1836. Messrs. A. LaRue and Henry G. Thompson made another survey. under the directions of a special commission, presided over by Mr. Jno. Jones. The examination of the two lakes was entrusted to Mr. LaRue, while Mr. Thompson applied himself to that of the St. Latwrence: and the opnion of thuse gentlemen was not unfarourable to the south shore canal. Their siirrey never having been entirely completed, the Commissiou made no report.
- However, Mr. Joues informed the special committee, appointed in 1842, that his colleagucs and himself had agreed to ${ }^{\circ}$ recommend Mr. Mills's route. from Cotean to the Cedars, and a continuous line along the river bank from, the Cedars to the Cascades. 'The lower part of this route,' Mr. Jones said, 'that is, from Pointe-au-Moulin to Pointe-a-Coulonge, recommended by Mr. Mills, Was condemned by the commission, there not being sufficient water.'

In 1838. Colonel Phillpotts received inst ructions trom Lord Durham to proceed with a survey of the localities in question. This gentleman's opinion was that the canal should be located on the north side of the river, purely from military considerations. 'I am, however, induced to believe. says the colonel, 'that, in any case, it may be found possible to construct a canal on the south shore cheaper than on the north.'

In 1839, Mr. David Thompson was authorized to make a new survey. This also resulted in favour of the const ruction of the present Beauharnois Canal.

In 1841 an estimate of the cost of a canal by the Mills's route' (prepared by Samuel Keefer) was laid before the House of Assembly, the total cost of which amounted to $£ 255,900$. In presenting this estimate, Mr. Keefer stated that if the south side of the river were selected for the location of this canal, a saving of at least f50,000 would be effected. And in 1842 Mr . Killaly stated before the special committee that this estimate was presented with the distinct understanding that the canal was to be located on the gouth side. Moreover, it is well known that Lord Sydenham then recommended the south shore as being the best for the construction of the canal.

Under all the circumstances, and considering the contradictory nature of the various reports submitted, the Government resolved that a new survey should be made, superintended by some disinterested person. This task was naturally entrusted to Mr. Keefer, Engineer-in-Chief of the depariment, i gentleman known to be utterly disinterested one way or the other in the locality. In the month of January, 1842, therefore, Mr. Keefer was instructed to survey both sides of the river, and to report uoon the best route with as little delay as possible. In this survey he was assisted by Mr. Cowley:

'On the 1ith of February following, Mr. Keeter reported to the department, remarking: The best route to unite the waters of these two lakes has long been a subject of consideration with me. You are aware that I assisted Mr. Nills in the surrey of the three routes on the north side, and should, therefore have a perfect knowledge of them: and 1 have now no hesitation in expressing the opinion that Mr. Stevenson's route, or one corresponding very nearly with it, will be found not only the cbeapest. but the hest in every respect.'
'This report was, moreover, confirmed by Mr. Chas. M. Tate, who was instructed by the department to examine the south channel of the river at points lying between Grande Isle. St. Timothée, and Valleytield. In his report Mr. Tate says: 'I beg to conclude with one general observation: Considering the distance between the two levels of water in the lakes, and the extent of the fall which has to be orereome, it appears as if nature had in as singular degree, made compensation for the great impediments in the watercourse, by affording on the land by its side unusual facilities for establishing at a moderate expense, an efficient and permanent artificial mavigation.'
" IVith a view to forming his own estimate of the vabue of the objections raised by the seigneurs of Vaude euil and Soulanges, and by Mr. Simpson, the comty member, against the eontemplated south shore camal, the Chairman of the Buard of Works leemed it his duty to accompany Mr. Keefer over the most important portions of the surveg he was about to make on that side of the river. This was Mr. Killaly's second visit to the locality in questim, his first having been mate in 1840. A most. experienced engineer-familiar with all the features of the north bank of the river-a stranger in the counrry. and therefore free from local prejudices of any kind whatever-Mr. Killaly's opinion was not only worthy of all respect, but of itself it was an authority. He pronounced in favour of the route recommended by Messrs. Stevenson and Keeter. 'I declare,' he said before the special committee, upon the honour of a gentleman, that my firm beliet, after haring anxiously reflected upon this subiect for more than a year, entirely concurs with the opinion of those gentlemen. Consequently on the 1 th .June, 1842. the Exerative Council adopted the route of the present Beauharnois Canal: and, on the same day. the action of the Council wats eonfirmed by the ciovernor in Council."
I also timd here another fact which I will read. It is as follows:-
"The resolution of the Canadian (Govermment having been transmitted to England on the 19th July, was approsed by the Imperial Government on the 2ith August. In his despatch to the Governor Gencral on the subject Lord Stanley, the Colonial Secretary, remarks: 'I contess that it is not without regret that $I$ assent to the sacrifice of the military advantages which would hare resulted from carrying the canal on the north bank: but I am bound to admit that on the grounds stated by von the inconvenience will be considerably less than woild at first sight appear.'
We have also another opinion which is as follows:-
"It may further be stated that in $18 \overline{1} 1$ the Hon. Mr. Langevin reported that the commissioners had declined to consider this question, und had recommended the enlargement of the Beauharnois Canal.: With reference to this canal,' said the hon. gentleman. 'while deelining to consider the question as to whether it should be located on the north or sonth side of the river, the commisioners recommend its enlargement to the standard fixed for the Welland Canal.?
Now, Mr. Speaker, this at all events shows that there has been a great controversyabout the selection of a site for this canal, as to whether it should be on the Beauharnois or the Soulanges side, and until we find some other proof, we must come to the conchusion that the majority of the engineers who had studied both sides of the river at that time, agreed that the cheapest and most practicable route would lee the route on the south shore，that is to saly，the Reauhamois Ganal：If anyone shonh donbit the reports of the engincers，I have other prowf here to show why we shomld follow the example of those who preceiled us and accept the route on the south shore，on acembt of there being a longer perion of navigation there．It must strike every man both in this House and in the comutry，that if we buih a ceanal we shomid lmild it so as in make it as useful as possible and to maintain its ！enefits during as long a seasom of the gear as we can．This authority comtinues：
＂The stevenson line was adopted on aceount of its superiority wer all the propased lines．considered either as fot rade and narigation，or in point of economy．Its entire length being only eleven and one－quarter miles， proves it to be the shortesi route．This fact camot he denied．and was aimilted by，all engineers concrorned， including Mr．Casey himself．The following is a tabular statement of the length of the respective ronte：

| :---: | :---: |
| Entire land route along the north | $1+5$ |
| The Harwoud ronte． |  |
| The Stevenson route or．Beauharnois C | 11. |
| The Beam moute，cia River St．Louis． | 15 |

＂Not only is the distance shortest，hut the number of lock is also less：consequently，n⿴囗十igation through the Beanharnois must be more expeditions than it would be through a canal on the north shore．The Mills＇s route is an admitied impracticability，owing to the st roug river current and insufficience of water at the ravine at Pointe－ an－Moulin ：and a north shore canal should he entirely intand along the bank of the hiviere－au－Moulin：and a north shore canal should be entirely inland along the bank of the river．The following is the number of locks shown in the respective proposed routes：

＂Not withstamhing the siatements made to the contrary by Mesirs．Lanthier．Harwood and Masson．the Beali－ harmois Canal affords longer seasons of mavigation than could be obtained through any north shore canal，because the ice takes sooner and remains longer in the calm shallow bay at the foot of the Cascades．These facts have been proven，nut by inhabitants of $\boldsymbol{S}$ ．Cotique，who londly chanour for the construction of a camal at the Cedurs．but by strangers who are equally samiliar with the pecaliarities of those localities．The circumstantial atfidarit of Mr．Monarque，of Lachine，the evidence of Mr．D＇Aonst，of Montreal，it native of Isle Perrit．Mr． Guellette，of Lachine，one of our oldest pilots．of Mr．J． 13．Anger．president of a powerfinl forwarding company－ one of our uldest and most experienced river navigators， and highty interested in canal improvements－（publish－ ed in the Wineres）－will dety the combined statements． contradietions or denials of my opponents．＂
That was w：iten in the year $1 \mathrm{~s}_{\mathrm{i}} \mathrm{O}$ ，and it was the opinion of the engineers then．I wish now to re－ mark about the construction of locks．At that time the iflea was that the deepening of the canal would not lie to the extent to which it is found necessary to－day to deepen it to．In the south shore camal they intended to make less locks than there are in the Beauharnois Canal，but any man of common sense，whether engineer or not，can see that if they conki build a canal on the north shore with a certain number of locks，they could do the stanc thing in the south shore．There was before this commission many questions，and the one which particularly refers to this case was as follows：－
＂To the s3rd question asked by Mr．Lanthier，then member for suulanges，before the special committee： －What do you think is generally the difference of time in the breaking up of the bordage ice on the north and the south side in the spring and in the formation of the ice in fall！＇Mr Dellitt said：＇That the matigation is open

two or three weeks longer on the Beauharnois side in the fall．and opens two or three weeks carlier in the spring． The fact was also established by Messrs．Manuel，leduc． Lat rocque and others．

In a comparative statement of advantages and disad－ vantages of the two river banks．Mr．Keefer observed，on the 10th October．18t？．＇that a canal on the south side． can be navigated two or three weeks more every season than on the north sille．＇In his report dated lith February of the same year．Mr．Keefer states，in alluding to the south shore：＊The line is continnous and away from the－ river．free from the disturbing causes of ice and high water，
＂What does Mr．Mills himself say on this important point？It is generally alseed，＇said he，that the st． Lawrence is open two or three weeks earlier in the spring and later in the fall than the Ottawi－The St．Jawrence passing through a more southern latitude．＇This accounts for Mr．Mills recommending the river ronte and con－ demning the inland route on the north shore of the river．＂
Mr．Mills was the gentleman whe locateri the camal on the north shore from military considera－ tions．Now．Mr．Girovard，in writing this，wated to furnish all possible proofs of his statements．and he has given the following dates of the opraing of the Lachine．Beanhamois and（inmwall camals． respectively，as follows：

We can see from this statement that with regaral to the opening of marigation the Beatharnois（anal has always heen．if not ahead of the others，yet never behind them．Now，I want to call attention to a very important point．Last seasom，principally in the fall．We read a great deal in the newspapers about the lowness of the water in the st．Lawrence． In Montreal we sall what I do not remember ever seeing before，the steamer Laprairie，crussing from Montreal to Laprairie，leing compelled to stop her trips very early， 1 think in Octoler．The Com－ wall Canal could not take vessels drawing more than $s$ feet of water，and the canals above the Connall could not take vessels drawing more then 8 or 9 feet of water．But a very i：nportant point is that there has always been the same height of water on the sills of the Beauharnois Canal．The papers from which I will read show that the navi－ gators－and I do not know one who is not opposed to a canal on the north shore－testify that they have never had any trouble in taking through the Beauharuois Canal any vessels drawing 9 feet of water．Mr．Girouard＇s statement of the compara－ tive depth of water on the upper mitre sills of the three canalsmentionediat lowest waterisas follows：－－

Mr. Vibotarly groes on to say:
"Alluding to the water level of the Lachine and Beauharmois Canals in 1871, the Hon. Mr. Langevin ubserved : -From the month of September, the St. Lawrence River was so low that the gates of the guard lock had to be kept giened during the day until the close of mavigation to admit the greatest possible flow of water to supply the canal and mills. According to the report of the hon. Minister it would appear that no suarcity of water was felt in the Beanhapnois Canal, for he states that 'the working of this canal was efficiently maintained throughwut the season, not withstanding the low water of the St . Lawrence. This report was based upon that of Mr. Sippell, our worthy superinteuding engineer, who expresed hinself in the following mure precise terms: --. The low water in the St. law rence River had no effect on the efficient working of this canal. which was supplied with the full Iraught of 9 feet on the sills throughont the vear, except at the lower entrance, where there was a difficulty which has since been remored.
Now. hefore I leave this repori. I want to say one wow alout the cost of the camal. I find that it is shown every where in the estimates that the cons of the north shore canals has been heavier than the cont of those on the sonth shore. Not only did the lieanharmois Canal cost less in price than the other camals in proportion, but the cost of mantename has heen a great oleal less than on any other canal on the St. Litwrence or the Uttawit :
$\because$ On the lat Juls, 1S60, the entire cost amonnted to ©l,611.t24, of which sum Talleytieli and Isle-rux-Chats, and $\mathbf{3} 254.80-$ for danages by inumdation of farms at Hungry Bay. Up to the same piriont (lst July, 18i7.) the Lachine Canal had cost s. 2.58 ,, 552: the Cornwall Caual, s1.933.152; the Willia!nsbure Canals. $\$ 1,320,665$. All these canals were constructed atout the same time; and, with the exception of the Lachine and Williamsburg. they all met with nearly the same difficulties. The Williamsburg Canals happened to be singularly fisvoured by the grent natural alrantages presented by the river bank, which will account for the comparitively how cost of their construction."
Many years before the report of the present engineer was mate, we find this:
"But the inferiority of the north shore as compared with the south, is still more forcibly exhibited in the opinion of Mr. Mills himself, who considers it to be impossible to construct by land a canal along the ravines or on the river bank."
That is a report of Mr. Monro. Mr. Mills favoured the construction on the north side for military considerations. Mr. Monro preferred the same side for wher considerations, but there is an answer from Mr. Mills which replies to Mr. Monro beforehamd :
" Above the Cedars. the banks are from twenty to thirty feet high, composed of clay, with some veins of sand, frequently sliding off in rery large bodies, showing the destruction which would be consequent upon constructing a canal along or nearits foot, or upon the top. Here also. below the Cedars, it would be impossible, with any reasonable expense, to maintain a canal, either upon or at the foot of the bank of the river, on acceunt of the great bodies of it which frequenty slide into the ravine.
"Mr. Mills's friend (Mr. Wright) also observes : 'The shores are a formation of clay and loam, underlaid with yuicksand, which occasions, yearly, very considerable ing a guard lock about where the Canadian Atlantic Kailway bridge crosses the canal.
'Mr. Trudean next says, quoting from Mr. Monro's report: 'that to the ordinary difficulties to be met with in dealing with the Beauharnois Canal, whether by way of enlargement or by the construction of an entirely new work, there is superadiled one which has been revealed by test borings, de.
"Referring to these borings made in the entrance to the canal and along the line of the canal to St. Timothy, Mr. Monro says: The general characteristic of the excavations may be described as consisting of layers of boulder stones and clay, overlaying what appears to be a mixture of guicksand and clay in varying proportions, dec.' And Mr. Monro adds: 'It may not be quicksand. but experiments made with this material proves that it does not stand at any slope, howerer fat, under witer. © $\boldsymbol{E}$ :
Now I cannut understand by what freak of nature a layer of this suhstance has been placed along the line of the Beauharnois Canal, from St. Timothy westwards. and just in such a position that thourh this canal has been sunk to a depth of from ten to twelve feet, and ressels have been passing through it for over forty-five vears. and dredging has been done in it on different oceasions.yet this wonderful material was never discovered or known to cause any tronble."
Now, Mr. Speaker, this is a very serious point. if it is trne. Here is a fiovernment engineer saying there is quicksand, that it is inpossible to dredge that place and to keep it at a certain depth, becanse it will fill up again. I said last year, and I repeat now, that at proper exitmination was not male. Men were sent there who were not engineers, men who were paid sig. ina day, and who were picnicking there insteal of doing their work.

Mr. DAVIFS (P.E.I.) Where?
Mr. BERGERON. At the head of Valleytied.
Mr. D.AVIES (P.E.I.) When.:
Mr. BERAFRRON. When Mr. Monros report was manle, olout two summers ago. Now, here is another engineer who says under his signature that it is true.

Mr. ©(RIVER. Who hats lived there all his life.

Mr. BFRtiFRON. les. and who knows the Beauhamois Canal from legimning to end, who knows the character of the earth through which it mas, and who knows that there was hardly any alrélging between Valleytiell and st. Tinothy. where DIr. Monro sitys there is quicksind. I sity if that is true, is it not enough to raise a donlot in the minds of the fiovermment and to callase them to, hesitate lrefore expending six or seven million dollars: They ought to do what I asked them to do last year, that is, to employ three or fonr competent engineers to see whether Mr. Monro's report is correct. If they find it to be true, everybouly will be satisfieal : if it is not true, the Government of this country will have performed their duty towards the people of this country as gmardians of the Dominion treasury.

Mr. LaURIER. Aml to the County of Beanharnois in particular.

Mr. BERGERON :

"But when we have to sink that canal four or fire feet lover Mr. Monro makes out that it is of such a nature that be cannot calculate what the probable cost may be to make an entrance channel though it, but supposes, or guessos, perhaps, that it might cost a million and a quarter dollars.
tion has 80 far been made, but I wonder what he calls the Montreal Cotton Company's works, the paper mills, and hundreds of wells that have been sunk along the line of the Beanharnois Canal? And has not the Canada Atlantic Railway Company constructed one of the finest bridges that span the St. Lawrence from Cutean Landing to Clark's Island at Vallestield, without ever experiencing any trouble from that wonderful substance, which I presume must be quicksilver-not quicksand-for Mr. Monro, says it may not be quicksand, and I know of no other material than quicksilver which will not stand at any slope, no matter how flat ander water, ind that might be bulged up in the centre of the channel by weight on the sides. How is it no trouble is anticipated from that extraordinary material on the north shore, for it mast exist there also, as Mr. Mouro sitysit has donbtless caused the land slides which have taken place along the north shore of the St. Iawrence between Cotean Landing and the Cascades-:"

The very same thing you heard a moment agre. When I was realing from engrineers reports of ISth anl 1s4. -
"-just close be and parallel with the proposed new canal. Yet not even h himis given of any dread of its causing trouble there, though it cannot be possible to claim as good a knowlenge of the line to be excavated as exists with regard to the Beauharnois Camal.
" On the south shore there are not ores ten or twelve square miles of laml to be drained under the Beanharnois Canal. whereas on the north shore there are three rivers.'
Now, here is a very important point in this discussion. There are three rivers to he interfered with, if I may say so, thee rivers which thow into the st. Lawrence. Any hon. gentleman who may visit that place will find that the water is nearly on a level with the railuay track which blocks w! the River Delisle. Nr. Nonro proposes, in his report. to construct immense tulees through which to carry the water undergrommel almot 2.5 fect and hring it up again, so that it maty reach the st. Lawrence. If torday the water forms the station and the whole village of Cotean, what will be the case when it has to go through that immense tunnel which will be crooked by its nature? I hate heard competent men say that the intea was perfectly absumel, and that if the forernment go into the work they will lew oljliged to stop it after spenting a large amount of money. and after giving out contracts which will have to leve cancelleal. This is what Mr. Sullivan siys:

- Mr. Monro calculates to drain one hundred and eighty square ailes of territory, but I think he might add to that as much more as is drained on the south side altogether, and he would not be over the mark. And then there is the River Ronge, about half the width of the former, and the River a la Graisse to be passed under the canal to be built on the north shore, besides any uther drains and watercourses there may be. but Mr. Monry calculates about the same cost, for culverts on eateh side. if I urderstand him correctly."
Now, Mr. Speaker. to show you how this report of Mr. Monro has been minle, he calculates that it is going to cost no more money to drain these three rivers, one of which drains a land surface of 180 sfuare miles, than it has cost on the sonth shore for culverts and elrains which have leeen made and paid for, and ground and damages which have been settled. Does not that show that this report ought to be examined liy competent engineers to see whether it is correct I I lo not ask for anything improper, 1 only ask that biefore we go to such iul expenditure we may be sure of what we are iloing.
"On the Beauharnois Canal the deepest cutting does not exceed twenty feet, whereas on the north shore s depth of over thirty-four feet vill have to be sunk on the very first mile, beang the full depth of water required, more than the greatest depth on the south shore, and a great part of this is solid rock. The right of way for the Beauharnois Canal is owned by the Govermment in great part, and any that would be required for enlargement would be but a strip entailing no damages more than the actual value of the lend, with the exception of that part from the basin up to Knight's Point, should that line be adopted, but even there the right of way would be required along a line that could be purchased at a rery monlerate price: I would say ahont inirty-five thonsami dullars, for which amount I would renture the purchase. On the north shore, there is a valuable church to be demolished on the very outstart. and then there are orchards and a nursery. before you come to Mr. Beatudet's mill privilege, which I understand has been arranged for at forty thousand collars, it I am rightls informed, and this ou the one-sisth part of the length of the canal, so that I am of opinion, when tive right of way is chtainet and all expenses attending it paid. Mr. Monros estimate will be more than probably dumbled, if it does not be trebled.

Along the Beauhamois canal the buildings exist for sulerintendent. lockmen. de.. which is a considerable item. and there is the stone in the locke. with :he adrantage that all the material required for the reconstruetion of the canal can be laid down un the spot without any cartage."
There are along the beatuharmosis (ianal three on from stone guarries from which have been taken all the stone necessiny for the construction of the present camal. aml where an unlimited fuantity may yet be obtained rery easily for enlarging or deepening the canal. Mr. Mono says:
$\because$ It the canal be buitr on the north shore the Beauhar mois cianal conth thea be utilizel for hydrantio power.but Mr. Monro knows well that by hiliting the new line in rear of Vallestield, from the basin to Kinight's Point, anil ahore referred to, the fall power of the canal could be utilized with a water head of over wenty feet thusgiving all the advantages to be derived from the canal on the morth shore, without the very sreat disadvantage of learing at useless canal as a burden on the government, entailing a considerahle yearly expenditure without auy return, but more probably claims for damages:
Sow. I may say here that we do not look upon it from that point of view: we look upon it as a work of a higher importance. We have ahready to-day at Valleytield water power for ten or fifteen facto ries, anll it is useless to offer ats a reason for taking away the canal, that the people can have water power to any amomat, because they have alrealy font as much as they cam utilize. -
"Mr. Monro says the ent rance from Lake St. Framie to the proposed north shore camal would be in a convenient, sate and easily approached bay-Macdonald's Bay.
This is a point to which 1 call the hon. Minister's a-ention. This is an engineers report, and I will at a later stage reat the opinions of navigators in regand to entering foulanges (inal with a sonth west wind. -

- Here very little ice forms.

There is no ice there because there is tow mush current. We can inagine what the position would he of at tow hoat with eight or ten barges when there is too much current to allow the ice to take. -

As to the latter statement he is right, as its being at the very head of the rapids. no ice forms in such places, but so soon as structures are built to still the water the catse will be quite different, and its being so near to the head of the rapids will greatly increase the risk of vessels apmoaching. particularly in westerly or north-westerly winds. being blown down them. Mr. Monro ways the westerly crossing to the Beauharnois Canal is one of danger. in the face of the fact that ressels have been crossing there since the canal was built, about forty-six years urover, wit hout any accidents ever haying happenel. The only danger on the south side is of ressels being blown ashore, but on the uorth they would be blown down the rapids. Which would be the worst " Mr. Monro says the canal on the north shore will aroid the double crossing of the river abuve and below the three rapids: well, that wight be a plausible reason if it shortened the distance, hut Mr. Monno knows well enough that it does not, but much the contrary, for the Beauharnois route is over a mile the shorter, and when a ressel has to go to the centre of the stream it does not matter which side she crosses to after, aud Mr. Monro knows also that the channel from the font of the Beauharnois Canal to the first lightship in Lake St. Louis is the deepest and safest that can be had. There are shoals on the north ehore line that will have to be dredged and that may always be a source of danger, whereas the beanharnois route is almost a straight line. and I would wish to ask the Board of Trade and all persons concerned iu the st. Latrence mavigation, how they approve of lengthening the distance between Montreal and al points west of Beauharnois by two uiles on the round trip, but Mr. Monro loes nut say anything of this in his report.

Mr. Monrosays that the experience of sereral years shows that the formation of ice is certainly no greater a barrier to navigation on the north than on the south shore of the eastern entrance of the caual. Well, as to that statement, the writer of this can say that in the spring of the year $183 \times$ he was commissioned by the Valleytield Town Council to report un the state of the ice on both the north and the senth shores, that is to say, at the entrance of the proposed new canal at the foot of the Cascade Rapids, and at the entrance of the Be:aharnois Canal from Lake St. Louis, whep having visited and examinerl on both sides he found that the steamer Bohemian had pasied through the Beanharnois Canal to Mont real in the latter part of April. and made her return trip again. whereas what is called the Bruet du Loup was found on the Ilth of May to be a solid island of ice completely blocking narigation on the nurth shore, and three days later. on the 14th, it had not yef foated off. the truth of which statement can be rerified by Captain Baker, of the li,hemion, and by Mr. Plante, then mavor of Valleytield. and Mr. Baker, unayor of Beanharnois, besides seyemathers who visited the localities with the writer.
This is a known fact. it cambot lat denied: I do not know how an engineer of renown, a man who wants to maintain his reputation, could make any such statement. It is well known by every one livimg neat Beamhamos that the ine leaves the foos of the Beanhamois (amal alout three weeks before it leares the foot of the Cascales. where it is proposed to locate the entrance to the new soulanges ( anal.

- It is a well-known fact that what is called the Bruet du loup is an island of ice that forms each winter at the foot of the Cascades, between the waters of the St. Lawrence and the Ottawa, grounding into the bottom, and completely Llocking navigation in that direction, until the waters of the 0ttawa rise high enough to float it off after the rays of the sum have lightened the top part, as is well known to captains of yessels passing up and down in spring time. And it will be easy for the fiovernment to verify this fact next :pring, liy sending disinterested persons to the locality:
This is a gool time to timl out. The (iovermment should semb down engincers and ascertain whether the report of Mr. Momro or the statement of Mr. Sullivan is correct, and to tind out where the ice lies, and he will then know whether it was on the south or the north side of the river. -
- It will doubtless be said that I am an interested party and that what I state should be taken rum (1rano salis," That is stated hy Mr. Sullivan, as he is mayor of Valleytiehl.
-* but that is just what I want, as I am stating facts, and I want them to be taken for what they are worth and no more. All we ask for in this district, and we believe we are only asking what the country desires, is that the whole subject be submitted to an independent and impar tial conmission of engineers, to decide which is the most farourable route, before millions of money be spent in building a new canal, taking from people along the old one their acyuired rixhts, and leaving that canal as a useles: burden on the country, and the people along it in particular : and, at the same time, needlesaly destroying particular: and, at the sen seven hundred and a thousand acres of az fine land as is in the country, which alone would represent a capital of half a million dollars anuihilated.
-. A clance at Mr. Monro's estimates is sufficient to show what reliance may be placed on them when making a comparison of the probatole cost of a canal on either side. When the building of six or seven culverts on Beauhar nois Canal, draining about ten or twelve square miles of territory, can be estimated to cost as much as the culrerts ou the Soulanges Canal, draining about twenty-five times the area, an idea can he formed of the balance of the estimates.
Mr. Sullivan further says:
- With regard tu the entratnee chammel there is not a man in Valleytiell who is not satistied that Mr. Monro's extimate is ton high. amd that the quicksamd theory is a farce, in ats far as having the effect ascribed to it by Mr. Monro. I will ask any man of common sense if he can believe, or if he dues not think it absurd. even admitting there were puicksibl in some phaces, that it would have any such effect as aseribed to it by Mr. Monro on a channel three hundred teet wide, or that it could possibly bulged up in the centre of the eanal from weight on the sides. Before terminating. I wish to say a word about a remark made by Mr. Mouro in his report regariling the construction of the dam at Valleyfield. Now, Mr. Monro should know that all damsges, past, present and finure, hare been paid for on the Beauharnois Canal.and the splendid water powers created by that dam remain and are a source of revenue to the government. paying a pretty fair interest on the capital spent. And I will ask Mr. Monroor any other person who has visited the cotton factory, the paper mills, the water works at Valleyfield. if the wone: spent on that dam was not one of the best investments ever made by the Government for the country? What returncalin the Government ever get for dainages that it will surely have to pay for on the nortn shore".
We know that all these danages on the sonth shore have been paid. that every clam has been settled: and if the diovernment were going to rleepen the canal. half the expense would be sived, lecause the only outlay involved would be that for construction. But in regarel to the soulanges (anal on the north shore we shall be called upon not only to paty for construction, but for all land and other damages. and I know what they are, for luring the last lin years I have heard this guestion of damages cansed to the people by the construction of the Beanharnois Camal. The Treasury Board should know that very nearly $S(X)$, (KN ) have been paid as actual damages calused hy the construction of that canal. But the amount has leen pail, it camot be called for again, while the construction of a canal on the north side would involve claims for damages alonat twenty-fice times as great, since the area to be drained is alwont thirty five times greater than that inamed by the camal on the south shore. I stated I would read opinions from some narigaters, and 1 have such opinions here. I will read them and give the names of these people and the number of years they have been navigating, and I think that, although weare not engineers we pride ourselies on being men of common sense, and we will admit that those who have leen navigating there for years, some as long as 48 years, ought to know something about the locality. I have the following statement :-
"We, the undersigned, from long experience in navigating the St. Lawrence. are of opiniou that it is a great mistake on the part of the fovernment to build a new caual on the north side of the River St. Lawrence, through the County of Soulanges. instead of deepening the present Be:uharnois Canal, as we feel certain there will be many causes of delay to shipping on the north side that do not happen on the south.

He know-notwithstanding what engineers may say to the contrary-that the largefield of ice which accumulates at the foot of the Cascades, particularly in severe winters, will always be a cause of delay to the opening of navigation. This field of ice is known around the locality under the name of the 'Bruèt du Loup' and is the cause of the delay each spring in putting of the lightships on Lake St. Louis, as can be proren by referring to the date of the placing these lights.

The captains and pilots of Kingston can prove that they have often made two and three tripe through the Beanharnois Canal. with tows of barges. before these lighte could be put up, as well as we the undersigned hare often done. It is also well known that the entrances of the Beauharnois Canal are easier of access than what they can possibly be made on the north shore, more particularly in fog and smoky weather, which often lasts for months on Lake St. Francis and Lake St. Louis. There will always be danger in such times, particularly at night, to enter the Soulanges: Canai irom Lake st. Francis. on acconnt of the strong current and proximity to the head of the rapids, and on accoint of the countercurrentsand the reets at the Cascales, and it will be dangerons to pas: tows of barges so that it will be found-when too latethat vessels will have to lie up at great lose and delay to shipperz. Vessels now cau leave the foot of the Beauharnois Canal at any hour and steer by compasis as the channel is not less than half a mile wide and from $t$ weuty-fire to over fifty feet in depth, and the current is an adrantage without being much of hindrance on the return trip. as adrantage is taken of the stillest water. This channel is a straight one for over twelve miles to the first lightship on Lake St. Louis.

There is also a straight course of fifteen miles to make the western entrance to the Beauharnois Canal, and notwithstanding anything that may hare been stated by engineers to the contriry, we congiderit one of the easiest entrances to be made. rith tows of barges, of any of the canals on the St. Lawrence. We are of opinion that the surest way for the Goverument to act in this watter. is to submit the question to an uninterest ed staff of enginetr: and a delegation of captains and pilots. before commen:ing actual work on the new eanal.

These are gentlemen who have treen narigating the Waters of that part of the country. They are res. pectable men, men whohave no interest fint those of navigating, and I think that althoush there is at question of engineering involvel, it would lee nur lowering the dignity of the engineers if they accepted the recommendations of men like these whose names I have given. There was a meting of the Board of Trade in Trronto when this matter was discussed, and a resolution was presented there signed by a number of navigators, most of whom come from Kingston, which is the great inland maritime port of Ontario. This is what these gentlemen siy :
"Wo, the ondervigned masters of vessels, captains and pilots, interested in the navigation of the St. Larrence River, have learned with surprise aud regret that the Dominion Gorernment have decided on building a new channel on the north shore to be called the Soulanges Canal, instead of deepening and enlarging the Beauharnois Canal : and it is our firm convietion that the construction of the said canal will be often a cause of serious delar and danger to narigation.

- From experience we know that the Beauharnols route is at least two miles, on the round trip. shorter than any line that can be had on the north shore, and it is the straightest that can be had between Lake Si. Francis and Lake St . Lonis deep water channels. We further know that the course from Lake St. Francis to the entrance of the Beauharnois Canal is a straight course which we can steer by compass even in foggy or smoky weather, particularly if extended to Knight's Point in rear of Falleyfield. which we can never do to make an entrance on the north shore, on account of the proximity of the entrance to the heal of the rapids.

"The eastern entrance to the Beauharnois Canal is in a straight line from the first lightship on Lake St . Louis, a distance of over 12 miles where the channel is nearly half a mile wide all through and from 25 to 50 feet deep.
"Whereas on the north side the chanuel will be a crooked one through reefs and shoals. Where there are eddies and counter currents, which will make it very difficult to pass with tows, and impossible to steer in foggy or smoky weather, which often lasts for months on these lakes $\because$ This we are certain will often be a cause of serious delas to shippers.
"We call also state that we have known two and three trins to have been made through the Beauharuois Canal. from Aingston to Nontreal, before the lightships could be placed on Lake St. Louis, on account of the large field of ice which remains on the north shore and blocks what will be the entrance to the Sonlanges Canal.

We know also that errors have been committed in the construction of the Cornmall and the Galops Canals. and for that reason we would urge on the lhominion Government to submit the mater to an indenendent siaff of engineers, or to such an engineer as Mr. Walter Shanly, before they commence the construction of the Soulanges Canal."
I have sent weach member of the House a copy of the plans of the Peauharmois (anal on the north shore. It was reported by the engineers last year that they were building the canal on the north shore to make it a straight canal, hat any rentleman can see from the plan that the line which comes from Villeytield to Knight: Ploint. would make the beanharmois Canal straighter than the Nonlanges Canal, which latter makes half of the circle. This is what these gentlemen refer to when they siy that it is a straighter canal tham the other side. These gentlemen contirm in this document the opinions which I have real from the navigators of ralleytield and the County of Beanharnois and I will give the names signeal to this petition as a protest against the construetion of the soulanges Camal. The names are as follows:-

[^10]These are must of the navigators, either masters or pilots, who sitil on that part of the river, and they are very much interested in havins a short canal, and a canal on which there will tre no danger to their lives or property. Sow, to show that the ice leaves the south shore much somer thim the north shore. I will real the following attislavit:-

- We, the undersigned. living at Melocheville, deelar: by these presents that we have observed each spring the breaking up of the ice at the foot of the Beatharmois Canal on the south shore as well as at the foot of the Caseades on the north shore of the river. After these ubservations we certify that the Beanharnois (anal at the ent rance and the foot is intariably free of iee at least fifteen days before the breaking up of the ice on the north side of the river at the foot of the Caseades: and that in case the dooernment shonld construct on the nort h side the projeeted canal called the Sonlanges Canal, it would happen that the opening of this eatnal in the spring woald only take place fifteen das: after the mening of the Beanarnois canal. We make this declaration comsciemtiously heliering the same to be true.
This is signed hy Frediric Momaryue: a pilot for 4.i years : Thérilule Dankt. a pilot for 은 years: Hormielas Monaryuc. a pilot for In vears: Filmomd dimulx, a pilot for ! years : Datit? Alel latemamle. a pilot for lid years. I know most of the pilots, and 1 know thein to le all honourable wen. who for no consideration would saty this mless they helieved it to be true and in the public interest. I said at the commencement of my remarks that some prople had talked alout this canal project leing hrought forward for election purposes. I saly I do not helieve that. because it seems to me that the diovemment were as much interested in keeping the support of Beamharmois County as in gaming that of Soulanges.
some hon. MFMBERS. They had thet already.
Mr. BER(:ERON. Well. I for nor suphose the bate Premier would hate been willing to storitice me in order to gain another supporter. As a matter of fact. Soulanges comity was lost in spite of the canat, and I carried my commy by wer ;ank majority. Therefore. I olo not helieve that the election had anything to do with the camal. ffterwards, temters were called for, though I see that there is some Haw in them, and the contract is not ret granted. During the last local election an ohd farmer in my county sitil to me: . It is perfectly foolish to call for these remders: the people here do not believe in them. Wecallse- 1 sprak as it farmer for thirty years-we never commence to ligy a litch at the top, and the fact that the Goos. ermment are calling for temders to legein work at the head of the canal shows that they are not very serious about it." Now, L. Monitronidor Commero', on the ennd of January, 1N!2, published the following editorial:-

" A Usefll Cindertanivg.

"If we are well inforned, the Government has ar last decided to buid the Soulanees Canal on the north shore of ithe St. Lawrence, between a point near Macdonald' Point and another point not far away from Vaudrenil. This new canal will be 14 ft . deep, and, it we are to believe the lake navigators, it will be at once useful and econumical and will complete to adrantage the Et. Lawrenee system which unites the lower part of the river and the sea with the upper portion.

- This work ought to have been undertaken long ago, and wheu the question of extending our relations. with the west and the ports of ourgreat lakes came up. this undertaking ought to have coue uppermost in the public mind.

But nothing equals perseverauce accompunied by a patriotic spirit. When he was a meusber. Mr. J. Bain devoted all his energies to the solution of the problem

Which intercsted the commercial morld in England amd the Cuited States as well as in Canada. and. to-day, the question has taken a most promising aspere.

- In April. 1590. a lengthy memorial on the subject was submitted to the Prime Minister of Canada. Sir John A. Madedonah. The anthorities were at ance st ruck with its importance, as is the ease with all questions of public interest: but, to continne the parallel, it wet with opphsition arising from different motives, whith delayed its execution.

The above-mentioned memorial showel the advantage derived from the Sulanges Canal. which would do away with the risks and langers of the actual journey from the St. Francis Lake Channel and the entrance of the Beanharnois Canal: if this work be executed, vessels. when leaving than chamel, on tise north of the river. wili have but as small distance to po wer before reaching the lueks, and that in an almust straght line. This is a great advantare the value of which will not estape any one interested in the lake navization and in the extension of the tratic on the purt of Montreal. Freight rates will be materially relaced owing to the lessening of the risks and the shoriening of the trip. It is extually to be noted that the two ente of the Soulanges Canal offer reseds natural harbours which.ateretain seasoms ai the year. will be most welcome to them.
$\because$ Erershing being takeninto consideration. tilisenterprise can he carried out at a less cost thath the butding of almost any mber canal. as the character of the seil vasthy diminithes the amomi of work to be done.
W. will not mention here the likeal advantages accruing to the region throush which this canal will run: nolundy entertaimsany doubt alwout them.

Any undertaking which has for its object to develop our resurees is worthy of the approbation of the commercial wroth.

I would beg leate to write a feor lines in suar next issue so as to gire some small scraps of information to the aut hor of the article reterred to.

After hating serionsly gone into the subject I am led to think that, if the writer had no personal interest in the building of the canalia sunanges, it wats only his ignorauce of facts and places which could make him write such a letrer. or else he got his infornation from parties interested in the euterprise. The alowstementioned article siys:- If we are correctly informul, the Government has decided to build. at hast, ile Soulanges Canal on the north shore of the St. Lawrence between a poiut near Macdonaldis Point and another nue tiar away trom Vaudrenil. "Allow me to saly that this point so very near Vaudrenil is, on the contrurg. as fir from it as it could pusibly be. lying. as it dues. at the five of the Cascades.

As to the questiou of economy the enclosed phan will settle that by showing you that the c:anal by the north shore will lengt hen the jourues by miles a trip more than would the Beauharuvis Canal. Suw. regardingtheadvantages which are said to be derived from the buildiug of the Soulanges Canal, I leave you to judge of them in giring you the opinion of the pilote and captains of king-ston-in opinion which wasespressed before a meeting of the members of the Canadian marine in Turmito, on the Srd instant :

- We.the undersigned captains and pilots. have learned with deep surprise and regret of the decision of the Gorernmeut respecting the Soulanges Canal. Being perfectly scoquainted with the river, we are unanimous in thinking that the canal by the north shore will never give as muck satisfaction as the Beanharnois one.

poosible su effect an exa rance by the weit of the canal without rumbing the risk of ranning ashere or being dritted into the rapids, whilst it is easy to reach the canal by the sunth shore in a direct line, by mesns of the com-pas:-
$\cdots$ Thirdly, the east ent rance of the Soliances Canal being situated at the fint of the Cascogles, a place noted tor is whippols, undercurrents and shoals, and where the shathel is narrow and crooked, it will be iruphesible to reach it by nisht or in fogge weather, with tugs towime barges behind them. "n the contrary, by the sonth side. any one can leave the frot of the canaliat any time at night or day, a straixht course of over 12 miles in length. half a mile in breadih and trom sis to at feet in deptis stretehing before him.

The Cornwalland Calops Canats vive us a sad example of the errons which ean be committed by engineers of reputed capacity : and, however. these ernors fall into insisbifieance compared with the bluders we can furetell in relation with the construction of the Soulanges Canal.

I do not think I shall detain the Honse any longer. Exery hon. gentleman here will molerstami the position which I aceupy in this matter. and I want immediately to make everghuly amate that it is not at all for the sitie of getting votes on simply for the sake of the comnty 1 represent, that I make these remarks. It is simply on public arommis. I am comvinced that the builling of at cataal on the north shore is an expemiture which we cammot know the end of. On :he south shore we hatie alreany a beantiful camal, which every natigator says is the lerst eyuipped amel the best mamaged of any canal on the sit. Lawrence. There has never lnen any washing of the water as in the case of the Comwall Canal or of the upper canals in Ontario. This canal is built throngh the centre of the farms. it is detp: it is well lomilt in gomat, solid lame. Fiverything connected with it on eiuh side is in Exal condition, amd the liovermment possesses int of (i) feet of land on each sille of it. All the coll. verts are in time elass order. and all the other structures are in the hest comdition. The beathhamois Camal costs less every year, as we cath see by the blue-Inosks, and it is theleest in the whole system of canals on the st. Lawrence. The plan whichl have put in the hands of every member, shows that the feanharnoisfanal. hya very smallexpenditureat Valleytiehl, can le male shorter than the soulanges Canal. It seemstome--Iam notanengineer, but speaking from at common sense standpoint -that common sense shonlal come into the consideration of this public work. Is it posibible to believe that thebuikling of a $1: 5$ miles canal in new land, where you have to arrange for the crossing of three natural rivers and where gon have to pay for all the lami you take, can cost less than it would to enlarge the Beauhamois (inal? I can hardly believe that ams engineer could say so. last year I asked wiat I think was very simple ant very reasomable, that, before the 1 iovermment pledged itself to an expenditure of six or seven millions on this new canal, it shoulal put the report of Mr. Nonro before the engineers of this coluntry. I do not say that I have no confidence in Mr. Monro, but I think that, if there were a board of engineers before whom his reports could le examined and scrutinized and where people could express their opinions, the Soulanges Canal would not be built on the north shore, but the Beanharnois Canal would lee enlaryed and deepenet. I heardleforeto day adisension dur inte this sesion in reference to the dievpeninge of damals. I did not take any part in that dise olssion Invause, after hearing the Minister. I thought whatever I could siy woulh mot amonnt to anything: but, if we are to bet the leatutiful system of canals we have and are tos deepen them in 1.5 or 1 ti feet. I think we shouhl for that withous sacrificing the property we already pusises.

Mr. BAII (Noulanges). Mr. Spaker I have heard with pleasure the remarks of any hom. friend from Beanharnois (Mr. Bergeron) on the motion he has placeal inyour hamhs. He says that thisyuestion has not receivel the comsideration it deserven. Hemust have forgoton that for a great mamber of gears this yuestion has leen lwfore the public. Fien in the tirst diats of the colong: the French mate their camals on the morth shore of the St. Lawremce, amb later on the Figglish Diowernment enlarged those canals. In 1634 Mr. Mills manle a report foconerable to the north shome athe after alopting the policy of endarging the camals to 12 feet, the (iovermment ardered surveys to be mate. Mr. Baillairge, the enginere made survegs in 15.2. Is.:Band ingt. amimande a repmort showing that the eanal conlel $\mathrm{I}_{\mathrm{r}}$ linilt on the north shore at less - Xpense than the enlargement of the Peathamois Citnal would eost. though, of ermise, the depth was at that time intemied to be 12 feet and not 14 feet. Since then. the difticalties as en enlarging the Deanharmos (ianal have become greater, ami the alvantages of the north shore increaterel in propition. After 15.2 the fiovermment thonght fit not to continue as mpidly as was propesed the enlargement of the camals. lezamse they were then engraged in the construction of the (ianadian Pacific Railway, which swallowed up a eonsiderable part of the resources at the dispmal of the dovermment, amel. therefore, that question Niss left in abrelamee till lately. In ISRE I asked the late Hom. Mr. Pope. then Minister of Railways amd Camals, if he wonlil be goxal enough to order a survey to le made on lnoth sides of the river so as to determine on which sile the camal erouhl ine most conveniently and cheaply constructed. He told me then that ass som as the Wellamd Camal whecompleted he wombl semd the engineer in charge of that canal to make an examination. This engineer was a gentleman of great experience, one who bad been eighteen years on that canal. and who knew all that could ine known with regard to the enlargement of camals to a depth of 14 feet. My hon. friem from beatuhamois says this question has not received the consideration of any other engineer hut Mr. Monmo. I may sily that the late Mr. Page, who was then Engineer-in-Chief of Cimals, gave it his most serions attention, and he was favourable to the construction of the canal on the north side. Moreover, the present Chief Fingineer of Railvaysand Canals, Mr. Trudean, whoisalsa a distinguished eugineer, amd a very careful one. has fiven his approlation to the reports of Mr. Nonro. Fot only that, hat last year. when a disienssion trok place in this House, wy hon. friend the Minister of Militia and Defence, who was then acting Minister of Railways and Canals. told this House that Mr. Shanly, the engineer, had spoken to him amal told him that he highly approved of the project of contructing the canal on the north shore. This queston, asmy hon. frieud says, is uot a seetional one. It is not a guestion whether that canal should lue cone strueted in the (oumty of sombanes or the Comuty of Peamhamosis: lut it is a mational question of the greatest importance. beranise it is of the gratest importance that our "aterways shouhl fre connstructed with all the improvements that it is possilbe tw make in our intand navigation. This subjeet has not ley-n sprung upen the diovermment, as hass leen intimated. hat they have eronsidered it during a great number of Vears. Mr. Moner.
 after carreful considetation that the (iovermment derided to cronstract the cantal on the north shore. One of the reasons for constructing it on the morth shore is that it is cheafer to comstruct a new camal than to enlarge the ohl one. Mr. Mommo. in his report to Mr: lage, sils with regarel to the endargement of the Wellamd Camal:

Is matter of fice: the experience of other canals has iniluced you te alopt the prineiple, whererer at all pracionble. of takingan entirely new route for entaranment. As for example that selected tor the Wellamd Canal berween Thurohd and Allanhurg."
My hon. friemd from Pambarmois said that a athal on the north shome wouhl le longer than one on the south shore. In the tirst place I may say that the whantage of comstmetine the amal on the morth shome is, firstly, that it is in a straight course with the line of navigation, becalne the deep Water chanmel is on the morth shome of latee Sit. Frameis. The distance os the entrance of the camal would ise only sul feet form the shore, whilst to enter the beamharnois Camal an artiticial chammel woull have to le male one mile and three-quarters longe from the deep-water chammei to the entrance at Falleytiehl, at a cost estimated by Mr. Mondo of that chamel is comprased of monder amd chay, and underlying that is a leal of puicksimel which will allow of mose whatever. Not only does Mr. Momro say this. but his report is comeurred in hy Mr. Truitean, the Chief Engineer of Cimals. He rily:

- To the ondinary difficulties to be met in deating with the Beanharnois Canal. whether by way of enlareemem or by the constrution of an entirely new work. there is superadded one which has heen revealed be test borings. a large number of which have been made in onder to aseertain the nature of the material to be excavated.

Referring to the borings made in the line of the channel at the fallerfield entrance and also along a line surreved to Kuight's Point to the westward of the present entrance, as well asin the Beauharnois Canal itself as far as St. Timothy, Mr. Monrosays:

The general character of the excaration may be described as consisting of layers of boulder stones and clay overlying what appars to be a mixture of quickiand and chay in varvins propartion."
Mr. Sulliman in his letter siys that Mr. Mouro does not know whether that suhstance is quicksand or not. It may he silt : but at any rate experienced engineers say that it will not allow of any slope. Mr. Trudean gres on to say:

- In many cases the drill after penetrating with diffculty the crust of boulders. stones, dic.. rent dorn freely to a depth of about 2 f feet below low water mark, showing a soft and unreliable bottom. Experiments made with this material proved that it does not stand at any slope, howerer fiat. under water. To attempt its remoral to the depth required to obtain a channel suitable for a 14 feet na rigation in such a position, would be a formidable if not impracticable undertaking. The amount which would certainly slide in from the sidescould not be eren conjecturall estimated. whilst it might prore impossible to maintain the required depth at any cost. To keep ressels off the contiguous shoals in heavy weather, it would be wirisable to protect the side of the channel with piles on cribwork backed up by the excaration frum the cut-bnt the ener of smoh a fian erouht not be approximately estinated.

Au element of matertainty is thas introfluced, the effects of whith in working ont : l te basis of at 14 teet navigation it would he immosible to forecast. It must be noted that no test of actual construction or excaration has so far been mathe, the height of water requisite to ensble ressels to appriach the preseut Vallevfid eutrame having bewn secured by the equstruction of dams elosing the south channel of the river and therehy raising the lerel of the water athote: an omeration which entailed the pavment of compensation for tomed lames to the extent of arer St(1). 4 mk .
Now, with resarl to this artiticial chammel. Mr. Pider. who had a perfert knowletge of our inland mavigation, silys in his repart of lasu), spatims alouth a depth of 12 feet:
"At prionds of low water, or indeed at any outher time, ressels drowing thelve fect of water, as contemplated for the enlerged seale of navigation, could not erass Purt Lonis Flats. Comspuneuty the morth chanmel must be used for at le:st two miles helow MeKite's Point, mhere acourse may be steered of fully six miles comards the light situated sbunt one and one-thind miles abore the head of Keanhamois Canal.

- From opmasite lirosse Point to within abeut ? (00n feet of the canal entrance fa distance of one and one-thind miles), the present chanme! is in many places narruw, intrieate and diffientt to navigate, even be the class of ressels now ustd.

This locality, it may be stated, is open to the sweep of westerly mimes, hence the matermay, to be all times serviceable, shomid the uearly straight. or at all events have flat. easy curves and be from sillosion teet wide, and hare a depth of not lest than from thirteen and a half to fourtrell teet al low water mark.

Now, suppose that ressels had to mavisate that namom chammel across the lake with a fall sweep of wind: buth Mr. Monro and Mr. Page sig that in such circumstamees the hanger to our navigation would he very great ineletel: whilst on the north shore reviels have a free chammel amd can immediately enter the camal. Nomeover, at the other end of thecamal, at Melondeville, the lnottom isaltogether rexh, amd the whole excavation would have to lee made in rexk. Nomwner, mo pescible harlmor ean le. manle at the foot of the Peanharnois Canal, lmandse the lmotom is solid rexk, and thetwore cribs woulel have to le constructed to secure resisels in a storm. Mr. Monro in his report suy:
"The entrance from Lake st. Lauis is formed by two short piers, amd affords but scanty nceommodation for vesiels and barges, the nurth pier being onls 336 feet in length, whilst the sonthern pier is emoked and is built for the moit part on roek in vers shallow water. The battom of the channel lesding to the entrance leet is roct with only about 10 feet of water over it at low stages of the lake. It ic, therefore, evident that the present works woulit be of little, if any, service in the formation of a harbour suitable to the wants of narigation on the seate now comtemplated.'
On the north shote the harlmour of Cotean Lameling is one of the lest harbours at the entrance of any canal in Canala. With respeet to this harbour Mr. Trucleausays:

Mr. Apaker. it is a well known fact, that when the rivet is fogety, reseels comming down Late st, Frameis hate to stop at the month of the Comwall Camal entil the fexs derios up. Me. Nomer in his repurt sils:
"Fremall 1 have been able to leam from these practivally engaged in the St. Lawrence navigation, it appears to be the almost manimous opinion uf capaains and plots, that the eanal between Lakes S. Lauis and St. Fraucis should be construeted on the north shore, largely on sceount of the manifest adrantagy of placing its western entrance at Macdonald's Puint in the mexition proposed, where the head of the eansl ean be made with ease in the beaviest weather: and unce fairly in, there rould be no difficulty in descending to the level of Iake St, Louis, with all convenient speed and salety. The locks at the Casiades end being in astraight line, it will doubtless be fomm practicable to introme the cable towing ssstem si this phace, and thus lesen the danger of aceident to the gates, which so frequently ocurs when vesels are permitted to use their own stean in such a pavition. It ss th be remarked that, towands the west, about haffof the whule length of the sanal is a straikht line, while the curve around the bent at Cotean du Lace is of such larse radius as to offer no obstruetion to the rapid transit of vessels"

Another point which is in favour of the camal on the morth shome is that it would be lmilt in a math shorter time, and with less expense than the Prauhamois (amal comble endarged at, betamse the work couls? be presecuted both summer and winter, while, as ererghody tows, the enlargement of existing camals dan onfy be done in winter amd any work of that kimel that is Aone during winter is mot somud. and is of grest danger to mavigation. Mr. Trulean in his repmart asas:

- To enlarge the canal and at the same time to keep it open to na cigation during the summer months is attented with grave difficulties.

The building of struetures in the winter seasou should the aveided if pasible. It would be preferable and less coatho in most cases, to build an entirely soparate work."
Acoonding to all the eminent authorities, the camal on the north shore will cost a great deal less money than would a eamal on the south shore. The ealeudations made by Mr. Nomon and his statf of engineers, show that this would be the case, and that the difference in the cost of the work would he verycomsiderable. It is as follows:-

Severtheless, it is sald that the lest way to have prace is to be prepared for war, and in this commection it is of the graatest importance that oner line of najupition should be completerl on the north shore of the St. Lawrence. My hom. friend says: What would a matter of three mikes do to prevent our friemels from the other side coming orer * If thave three miles comsisted of prairie or sadid gromul there might be some reasom in that, but as it is thiee miles of water it makes a great differeme. Nevertheless, it would be agreat adrantage to ns to have ourline of commmbicationinsucha position that it would never be cut oft, and the only way of preventing that is by milling the lime on the north shore. Why, Sir, in the United States the construction of the Niagara ship eamal is allowated at it is thequestion of matiomalelefence. Asit is cheaper to cary freight in large vessels than in small ones, and as the temtenoy of the day is to enlarge vessels. I believe it would be good policy to construct the canal where it would cost least to enlarge it when necessary. At present we are not prepared as a country to grant the amount necessary for the work, but I have no doubt that the time will come before long when it will be necessary to deepen our canuls to a depth of 18 or 20 feet. In a memorandum which I presented to the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals in 1890, I said:
"As it is cheaper to carry freight in large vessels than in smaller ones, and as the tendency is to enlarge ressels continually, it would be good policy to prepare for the future wants of the country: and as it will probably be necessary to enlarge and deepen our canals to 18 feet before 25 years, the canal should be constructed where it would be possible to do do that work for the least outlay." My hon. friend said that they do not want any more water powers on the other side of the river, but I believe the construction of the canal on the north shore would not ald materially to the country's debt, because the Beauharnois Canal could always be used for water powers, and instead of being a burden on the country, it would become a source of revenue. Mr. Monro, the engineer, has made plans with regard to the development of those water powers, and he says:
"Although my instructions from Mr. Page were to investigate this question of the St. Louis and St. Francis canal, mainly, if not exclusively, from an engineering standpoint ; still I may be permitted to say in conclusion that looking to the ine vitable result that if the north shore canal is built of the enlarged dimensions, the present Beauharnois Canal will in a short time be of little or no further use in connection with the through navigation; still its great capacity of development for hydranlic power especinlly towards the weetern end, would, if properly utilized, doubtless result in this canal ceasing to be a charge upon the public revenue, somewhat in the manner suggested in the numerously sigued memorial sent to me recently for report."
This question, as I said before, has been agitated for a number of years, and in 1873 petitions were sent to the Government by a number of the principal merchants, forwarders, vessel owners and marine insurance agents of Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton and other cities of the Douninion, and also from the bourds of trade of Montreal, Toronto and st. John, in favour of constructing the canal on the north shore. As the railway system of the North. West will certainly centre at Port Arthur, I lelieve the products, not only of our own NorthWest, but also of the American North-West, will come down the St. Lawrence; and I believe that the (jovernment should do everything in their power to improve the navigation of that river by every possible means. TheSt. Lawrenceroute, being more northerly and therefore colder than the route rid the Erie Canal to New York, will always enjoy the preference of the carrying trade of both the American and the Canadian North-West. My hon. friend read a letter from Mr. Sullivan, whom he calls an engineer. I do not know whether he is an engineer or not. I have known him as a land surveyor only, and a great many land surveyors style themselves engineers. I do not believe, however, that this gentleman has ever constructed any canals, and, therefore, I do not see how he can know a great deal about them. Mr. Sullivan in his letter saysthe culvertsand the bridges on the Beauhamois Cunal could be used on a new canal. There is only one culvert that could be used; the others would have to be destroyed. Besides, in enlarging the Beauharnois Canal, the culverts could not be built in winter, when it is impossible to make good masonry, but would have to be constructed at great cost to the country in

Mr. Bain (Soulanges).

April before navigation opens. Mr. Sullivan also says in his letter that the bridges on the Beauharnois Canal could be used because the locks would be of the same width as formerly. Well, if he were an engineer he would know that a lock which is 45 feet wide at the bottom must gradually be made larger towards the top, and, therefore, a bridge which would be sufficiently long for a canal 10 feet cleep would not do for a canal 16 or 18 feet deep. Mr. Sullivan further says that Mr. Monro estimates the cost of the culverts on the Beallharnois side to be the same as those on the Soulanges side. Mr. Monro estimates the cost of the enlverts and bridges on the Beauharnois side at $$ 215,000$ and on the Soulanges side at $$ 150,000$, a difference of $$ 65,000$ in favour of Soulanges ; but in that estimate the question of culverts on the River Delisle is not mentioned. In the same letter Mr. Sullivan says that there would be three rivers to cross. He has never been in that section, or he would know that there is only one river to cross: that is the Delisle, the Rouge is only a creek, and La Graisse is only an inlet. Mr. Sullivan thinks it is a costly work to pass over the River Delisle; but that section has been let, and it does not cost much more than a section where there is no river. The only gain from an engineering point of view that would be made in enlarging the Beauharnois Canal, is that an excavation of 900,000 square yards would be avoided; but when we come to consider that all the work done there would have to be undone and rebuilt again, it certainly would be cheaper to construct a new canal altogether. Now there is another question of which he speaks in his letter, and that is in regard to the rock on both sides. He says there is more rock in Soulanges. It is not so ; there are 205,000 yards on the Soulanges side and 339,000 yards on the Beauharnois side, making a difference of 134,000 yards in favour of Soulanges. Mr. Monro in his report says that :
" The diversion to Knight's Point involves so large an expenditure that an estimate has also been made of the expergement following the present canal to its head, and deepening and widening the channel through Valleyfield; also continuing a channel one and three-quarter miles to deep water. This line is objectionable in many respects, and as will be seen will cost about as much as that via Knight's Point. It appears therefore that there are no good reasons why it should be adopted."
Mr. Sullivan in his letter also speaks of the lengthening of the canal. The length of both canals is the same. The Beauharnois Canal is 12 miles long, but with the addition of $1 \frac{3}{4}$ miles of subaqueons canal it would be 13 miles long, while the canal on the north shore would be the same length. It being nearly six o'clock, I beg to move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to, and debate adjournet.

CANADIAN WHITE PINE.

Mr. WEs. With the consent of the House; I would like to move:
That an Order of the House do issue to the Director of the Geological Survey of Camada, for a map of Canada showing the areas of white pine timber, respectively, now standing, and that the map be latid upon the Table of the Honse for the information of members.
I only ask to more this with the umamous consent of the House.

Mr. NPEAKER. I think the Rules should not be violated, even with the umamimous consent of the House, unless there is some special reason why it shonlil be done.

Mr. IVEs. There is a special reason which I will explain. I have a motion on the paper with reference to the export duty on logs, and it is very important that this information which I ask for. and expect to obtain by this map, should be latel hefore the members of the Honse lefore the motion comes lown.

Mr. LatURIER. I do not object to what the hon. gentleman asks, but we are only in the early part of the session, and I think it better to follow the usual course.

$\therefore$ SLECT STANUING COMMITTEFS.

Mr. BoWVELL. With the consent of the House, I lesire to submit a motion that certain members be adried to the Standing Committees. I do this for the reason that the list is about being printerl, and it will be well to have it as complete as possible. A number of new members were not placed on any committee, and in order to remedy this omission and with a view to make other changes suggested, I submit the following motion with the ayproval of the leader of the Opposition :-
That the following members be added to the Select Standing Committees :-Banking and Commerce : Messrs. Bain (Soulanges), Bovell, Turcotte, Carling, Dyer and Baird ; Standing Orders: Messrs. Bain (Soulanges), Dyer; Public Accounts: Messrs. McGregor and McKay; Agriculture and Colonization: Messrs. McGregor, Turcotte, Carling and Dyer; Printing: Mr. Sutherland: Railways, Canals and Telegraph.Lines: Messrs. Bennett Turcotte, Carling and Baird ; Miscellaneous Private Bills: Mr. Bennett; Expiring Laws: Mr. Bennett.

Motion agreed to.

NORTH-WEST TERRITORIES ACT AMENDMENT.

Mr. McCARTHY moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. ${ }^{27}$ ) further to amend the North-West Territores Act. He said : The Bill which I have the honour to introduce deals with two subjects: one, that of duality of language in the North-West Territories, and the other the sulject of elucation. The question of the languages, or of the cluality of language in the North-West Territories, was very fully discussed in this House two sessions ago, and, as hon. gentlemen who were members of the House in that session, and who are still here, will remember, it ended in a compromise resolution, which was passed at the instance of the Government and acquiesced in by the great body of gentlemen, I do not think by all those constituting the Opposition. That compromise I did not aecele to, nor do I now think it was at wise one. It may have been, perhaps, a political necessity, but I do not think that in the interests of the country it was a wise and judicions result. Before that time, the law was, and had been since 1876 , that the French language as well as the English should be ofticial in four different matters. That is, it was permissible either to use English or French in the dehates of the Assembly which was constituted for the NorthWest : it was compulsory that the proceedings of the Assembly should be recorded in loth languages: it was permissible to use looth languages in the courts; and it was compulsory that the NorthWest Legishative Council, as it then wats, should publish the ordinances they passed from time to time in both the languages. The compromise which was agreeal to, and to which I have already made reforence, provided that after the then coming and since happening election in the NorthWest the councillors for the North-West should have power to say how their proceedings should lee conducted, and they should have authority to declare that the proceerlings of the Assemhly might he recorded in either one or both languages, hut so far as the courts were concerned. and so far ats the publication of the laws were concemed, the old provision remained. So that, although I do not think it is generally molerstood throughout the comntry, if there is an evil in the preservation or in the permission granted, or rather in the compulsion placed on the people of the North- West to use the two languages, that evil still exists. I did not complain, I do not knowany hody e:mplaned, of the fact that members of the Legislative Assembly might speak in both languages or either language, or in any language. That was a matter, I think, which might he left to the Assembly itself. What I did complain of, and what those who thought as I did felt to be wrong, was that in the North. West Territories it was mate compulsory on the people to adopt the two languages; in other words, that the French language should stand, so far asthe North-West Territories were concerned, on a par with the English language. I do not intend to do more than briefly state the history of this question, which will enable the House fully to understand it; and I need only aldress those members who were not present two years ago, in regard to this double language question. In the early diays in the French province, now the province of Quebec, there was the right claimed, and I do not think it was an unreasonable right, by the gentlemen elected to the Legislative Council of that province, to speal: in their own language. It was impossible for them, probably, to speak in Englisis or any other language, and the request was conceded, not as a matter of law but of right, to address their fellow members in their own language. I repeat that that appears to have not been at all an objectionable request. But the difficulty that arose from that proceeding led in 1840 -and I do not desire at this stage of the discussion to introdace anything of a controversial character, rememberinw the relouke administered to me on the last oceasion by the leader of the Opposition- to the perpethation of race distinctions which unfortunately, owing to circumstances, existed in Canadia. In istl, in the bill uniting the two provinces of Epper and Lower Canalia the French language was prohibited. That Act remained in force for six or seren years when its repeal tork place in Fngland. on the petition of the Parlianent of Ohd Canala, and then again the French language berame permissive. At the time of Confederation an Act was passed which declated that the French danguage should staml, so far as this Parimanent was concerned and in the matters referred to in the statutes and in the comts of Canada, on in equality with the English langage : and so the law stom in the Province of Quelec. But that law did not extend to the Prorince of Ontario, and, of course, it had no reference to the Province of New Brunswick or Nova Scotia, nor dial that law apply to the Province of Prince Exward Dland when it became part of the confeneracy, wor to the Province of British Columbia. It was, how ever. nufortunately as I renture to think, mavle a part of the law of the Province of Manitobat when a constitution was granted to that part of the North-West. and in 185\%. When an amembment took plate to the North-West Territories Act, it wats made compulsory also in the North-West Territories. And so it remainel without question until I had the homour to bring the matter before the House a session or two ago, when, after a long and rather acrimominus discussion, the compromise wats arrived at to which I have referred. Now that promise was not carried into law matil last year, l, hut in the North-West Territories Act of last session, when very enlarged powers were granterl to the perple of the Territories, this particular provision to which I refer was cnacted and is now to le found on the statute. The proposition is to eliminate that, to repeal that clanse, and that is all, Sir, that I can say in order to make perfectly plain what the oljeet of the Bill is with regard to the duality of langmages. I have mentioned that it deals also with the subject of elucation. Vow, the genius of our constitution is: that the subject of ellucation belongs to the Local Govermments, the provincial boolies. That is the general scheme of the British North America Act, and it is apon that basis that province after province which has been added to the Dominion, has been entrusted with the ahsolute and exclusive control of legislative matters. But between the old provinces of Canada there was an arrangeu:ent come to at the time of Confederation, by which, as we all know, separate school privileges were made perpetual so far as the constitution could make it perpetual upon the people of the Province of Ontario. I am not dealing with that guestion in the slightest degree. Of course we all know that this Parliament has no power to deal with it. It is an Imperial Act which this Parliament has no power to alter, change, or amend. But, when in 1895, the constitution was first conferred upon the North-West Territories, there was a clatuse with regarl to ellucation engrafted in that constitution. It is peculiar in this way: that it is not to le found in any other of our statutes or constitutions, and it cmacted as follows:-

Mr. Mecakriy.
"The Lieutenant Governor in Council shall pase all necessary ordinances in respect to education; but it shall therein always be provided that a majority of the ratepayers of any district or portion of the territuries, or of any less portion or subdivision thereof, by whaterer name the same is known, may establish such schools therein as they think fit, and make the necessary assessment and collection of rates therefor; and also, that the minority of the ratepayers therein, whether Protestants or Roman Catholics may establish separate schools therein."
That, the House will perceive. comfers upon the majority of every particular locality the right to retermine what the school is to he. The linguage is very wide indeed:
"May establish such schouls that they think fit."
Then the minority, no matter how suall. may put up a isal separate school in any locality whether that minoity be composed of Roman Catholics on Protestants, and they are free from the necessity on obligation of supporting a general sehool. I renture to say -and I do so, of course, merely speaking for myself and with no desire to raise a contro. versy-that no, more mischievons provision is to be found in any Act of Parliament. If there is any part of the Dominion where sehools ought to be not separate, - I am not desiring now to maise the question which divides us upon that point. I an merely speaking with reference to the sparseness of popula tion in the North-West--it is in the North-Wet Territories. It seems to be an exceedingly unfortunate provision where there is a small population. that there is a provision made for two schools, one of the majority, and one of the mimority. I contemd that if there is any part of the bominion where that provision onght not to be compulsory, it is in the North-West Territories. Now, we allidedery largely to the powers of the North- West Territories in the last session of this Parliament. We have conferred upon them. I think I im right in saying. almost every power that the ordinary constitution confers upon Provincial Legislatures. We have not given them power to amend their own constitution: wedid not give them power to borrow mones; we did not give them power to manage or to sell the public lauds, nor was the power conferred upon that hody for the estahbishment or maintenance of hospitals and so on, but there were enormons powers comferred upon them - power of direct taxation, power towards the estallishment of territorial offices;and the appointment aml payment of territorial officers, the estallishment and maintenance of prisons and municipal institutions, in the territories: power to impose licenses for shops, saloons, taverns, and anctioneers and incorporation fees and so on, power to solemnize marriage in the territories, and power over territorialandeivil rights. Yon will, therefore, see that we added very largely to their powers. but we did not enlarge their powers nor did larliament remove the restriction with regard to education. That was left untouchel. Now the proposition is to confer upon that boly the power to deal with education as that hody may see fit, not by any meins to say there shall not be separate schools, not to interfere with them in that sense, but to see that the legislative assemblies of the territories upon whom we have conferred every other power that can he conferred upon legislative assemblies, may deal with the matter of education, as they are conpetent to decide other matters. These are the provisions which I desire to see incorporated in the law, and therefore 1 move, seconded by Mr. Denison, for leave to introduce this Bill. I may add one word further. It is with some regret that I intrude this question upon the House at this time. I quite see, Mr. Speaker, that the proper opportunity to press these amemdments would have been during the last session of Parliament when the sulject of the alded power to the constitution was conferred upon the North-West Territories. I can only say in excuse for not pressing it then, that I was not here at the time the Bill Was before the House, and when I left the country on other business connecten with my profession -becamse when I left there was practically no Goremment-I had every rason to believe that nothing would be done daring the session, except to pats the Siuply Bill and prorogue Parliament. I was assured when I got to London: I was assured hy the High Commissioner, that he understood also that no further business would be done.
Mr. DAVIFN (P.F.. I.) Does the High Commissioner speak fro the (iovermment:

Mr. MrC'ARTHX. Well, I think that he hat some information. He gave me to molerstand that my opinion was correct alrout the husiness of the Honse. He gave me to understand that that was the proglamme, anil I thought so myself when I left here, and he corvoborated my opinion. Howerer that may he, while I would prefer that this question would not come up session after session, notwithstamling. I had thonght that nu great mischief had heen ilone by the delay becatuse the language question was not at all hefore the last session of Parliament. This Parliament has in no way practically pronounced upon it, and the guestion of education was brought to the notice of the Honse last session by my hon. friend from Huskeka (Mr. OPrien), as I leamed from the realing of the debates. with approtest and an intimation that at an early date it would be brought before Parliament : so that I lo not think much ham has been None by the delay of one session.

Mr. LaRIVIFIRE. Mr. Speaker, I am not surprised that this question should have been raised once more in the House by the hon. member who has just spoken (Mr. NeCarthy). He is only following the course that he has adopted in the past. and perhaps he is only pleasing the friends who have retained him in a case which is similar to the one that we have now before the House. We know rery well that some tronble is now perding in the Province of Manitoba upon this rery same question. That trouhle has been raised in the province by the visit of the hon. gentleman at a time when the question was not before the people at all. Following the same course, the hon. gentleman; thongh haring nothing to do with the representation of the North-West in this Honse, mach less than I have, because I am much nearer the people who are affected by the legislation that he complains of-is again trying to raise this question of religious aml national feeling. We have ahready settled that yuestion. Two years ago it was brought before the House, and the legislation of last session was the result of what the hou. gentleman has termed it compromise. It was a compromise, and it should he treated as such. What was abandoned at that time as oine of the rights of the people of the North. West was abineloned as a compromise, so that the questiou should remain at rest for all time to come. It was decided then that we should give to the North- West Comeil the liberty of deciding whether their proceedings should be conducted in one or both of the two languages which were then otticial. We know what has since been done by the majority of that comeil whorlo not understand the French: that language has heen abolished. When this question is raised it is always contembed that though certain privileges may be granted to the French-speaking population of the Province of Quehec aml the (atholics of that province, those privileges should not he extended to the rest of the Catholic of the French population of the Dominion of Canada. When it is stated that the privileges which exist in the Province of Quehec do not exist elsewhere, 1 answer that when the conferlemation Act was entered into, those privileges were well guareled on hehalf of the French and Catholie population of the Dominion. Hate we not the two languages in this Parliament: Are not the Dominion law: printed in both languages: Aml is not that in pursmance of the arrangement entered into at the time of Conferleration: Why should we refuse to the hamdful of French people in the North. West the same privileges as those enjoyed hy the FrenchCimatians of the l'mance of gurbec: Why should not both populations be treated alike? We have twolealing languages in this bominion: why should they not both lee placed on the same forting: Jores it injure angone that 1 speak French or that I get the laws of the comitry printed in my mother tongue: Should we disregard rights anil privileges for the sake of a few dollars and cents: Put, Mr. Speaker. that is not the reason at all. The reason is that curtain gentlemen. certain parties, wish to excite public feeling in some parts of the lmminion: beatase they have nothing else hy which to raise themselves above the level of the common people, they adopt the ways of the demagogne, in the hope of making themselves appear to be of some eonsequence.

Motion agreed to. and Bill real the first time.

FORTIFICATIONS AT ESOUIDALT

Mr. PRIOR asted, I. Whether the attention of the (iorermment hats been called to the discusision that took plate in the British House of Commons. a few days ago, in regard to the fortitications that are proposed to he huilt at Espuimalt. British Columbia: 2. Is it a fact that the Imperial Govermment have signified their willingness to supply the guns and plans of fortifications, and that the Canadian (iovernment is asked to build the fortifications and to supply the men for taking care of and manning the guns? 3. Is it a fact that the Cinadian Government has refused to erect the fortitications? t. In case the Canadian Govern ment has not absolutely refused to build the fortications, is it their intention to shortly ask Parliament for a swo with which to erect the satid fortifications:

Mr. BoWVELL. The subject-matter of this question is now receiving the consideration of the fovernment. The information, therefore, asked for must le considered for the present contidential.

POST OFFICE AT STADACONA.

Mr. FREMONT asked, Whether it is the intention of the Government to open a post office in the village of Stadacona, in the district of Quehec?

Sir AlOOLPHE CARON. In answer to the hon. member. I. have the homour to say that an application was made to the department for the opening of a post office at Stardacona in 1889. The result of the enguiry then made hy the Department in order to ascertain whether a post office was necessary at that place, was not such as to justify the opening. of such an office : but the Govermment is now making a new enguiry, the result of which may be more farourable.

PONTMASTER AT CAPE ST. IMNACE NTATION.

Mr. CHOQLETTE asked, Why has the dovernment mot yet appointed a postmaster for the oftice opened at Cape st. lgnace Station: Does the dovernment intend to appoint one in the mature:

Sir ADOLPHECARON. In answer to the hom. member I must state that the post office at st. Ignace has not been opened for the reason that according to the representations made to the department there appears to be a difference of opinion as to the necessity of opening a post office at that place.

Mr. CHOQUETTEE. Am 1 to mulerstand that the dincernment refuses now to open a prost oftice at the station?

('LAIMS OF NORTH-WEST SETTLLERS.

Mr. MoMULLEN asked, Whether any satisfactory settlement of the difficulties that existed hetween the settlers on the Walrond Ranch Companys territory and the settlers thereon, as intimated by the Minister of the Interior in his reply to charges preferred against the company last session, as follows:-" Where persons got these large tracts of land for ranching purposes, it has leen foum that when settlement comes in a different policy has to be pursued. and now that this country is being opened up by railway both north and south of Galgary and that settlement is likely to rush in there, I believe a change will have to le made shortly in that respect, and I trust it will be made in sufficient time to do justice to the two young men whose cases were specially brought before the House by the member for Wellington." If no satisfactory settlement has leen made with those settlers that have claims and were rejected by the company, why not?

Mr. DENDNEY. The case to which this question refers is no doult the case of the lunbar family, who are settlers on the Walrond Ranch. The father of the family, as the hon. gentleman is aware, having been a settler before any lease was issued, obtained his homestead. The dispute is as to a claim made by two sons of Mr. Robert Dumbar. An effort was made after the last session of Parliament to bring about a settlement between the leaseholders and the Dunbars, but the terms demanded by the latter were so exorbitant as to render the negotiations abortive. Negotiations are now going on, and are making satisfactory progress, in the direction of making such arrangements as will enable the Government to grant homesteads to actual settlers on all ranching leases. When these are satisfactorily completed the Dunbars will be dealt with in the same way as other settlers.

(iEAR AND TACKLE INSPECTOR.

Mr. LÉPINE (for Mr. Curbas) asked, Whether it is the intention of the Government to appoint an inspector of gear and tackle on vessels in the pritt of Montreal before the opening of navigation :

Mr. TUPPER. The Act under which such an appointment can take place comes into force on the Ist April. The Government will probally clothe one of the existing officers with the power of inspecting gear and tackle in adrition to his ordinary duties.

COMMERCIAL RELATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Before the Orders of the Day are proceeded with, I would ask the leader of the House whether his attention had been calleal to a cablegram dated the 9th March and parporting to report a speech of Sir Charles Tupper lefore the London Chamber of Commerce, in which he is reported to have said:

- It would not be long before the people of Camadit would show their loyilty to the integrity of the British Empire, by striking the United States a vital blow in return."
I would ask if, in making this statement. the High Commissioner of Canala foreshadowed the policy or hat the concurrence of the tiovermment of Ganala:

Sir . HOH N THOMPSON. Of course we have read the telegram in the paper, and we were satisfied that the High Commissioner had not made such a statement. I saw is telegram from the High Commissioner a short time ago in which he said that, if any such statement were reported to to have heen made ly him, it was erroneons, as he had not made any such statement at all.

THE SOULANGES CANAL.

House resumed aljourned debate on proposed motion of Mr. Bergeron for:
Copies of engineers' retorts which led to the building of the Beuuharmois Canal: of engineers' reports in favour of the building of the Soulanges Canal, and of roports, letters, &c., from engineers. masters or pilots, objecting to the building of the canal at Soulianges.

Mr. BAIN. Mr. Speaker, at six oclock yesterlay evening I was speaking on Mr. Sullivan'sletter which the hon. member for Beauharnois (Mr. Bergerm) had quoted in regard to the length of the Soulanges Canal. Mr. Sullivan also stid that there was no, quicksand at the bottom of that artificial channel, becanse none was foum on the line of the canal during the excaration. Well, the gentleman who was employed to make the borings, and who has had great experience in this kind of work. found the guicksand, and found it before the depth required for the deepening of the channel to Valley: field. On the north shore the quicksind is fouml at a depth of from 80 to 100 feet, but the great. question raised by my hon. friend was in regard of the ice. On that. Mr. Monro, who has been residing in the county since Janmary, 1889, and has had every opportunity of observing that important question matter, says in his report :

[^12]this mint, some per:ons alleging that narigation nome earlier on the north shore, while otbers is unhesitatingly affirm that the ice is clear from the south side a fortuight earlier than frum the north shore. From what I can learn, and hare obserred, it appears that the time tor its leaving from either side is so variable that both parties may be right if they found their conclusions on particular seasons. It is, however, quite certain that when there wis a navigation to Cascades wharf, the recurds between 1846 and 1853 showed that steamers arrived there in ench of those years earlier than the opening out of the channel to the fuot of the Beauharnois Canal."
"This statement is corroborated by a large amount of evidence apparently trust worthy. It appearsalso certain that in severe winters anchor ice grounds on and around the shomis which lie between the Ft. Jeiwrence and the Hhawa off Cascader Point, and remains there until some time after the main chamel is clear. The dates at Which those ice fiehls leave are various and uncertain. but their presence does not seem to interfere with in deep witter chanmel of entrance to the canal, as will be seen on examinimg its position as laid down on the man. This Epring, I carefully obsersed the novement of the ice on both sides of the riper. It cleared from the lower entrance of the lieamharmois Canal about the loth of April, and from the Ota wia opposite Citscates Point about ten dars later. On the 15th April, a steanwer broke throngh the iere :it Villeyfield in order to get into the head of the Beauharnois Canal : and there is no doubt that an eni rance could have been effected to the foot of the old Cuscades Caral by similar means at the same date, the ice in both platces being rery rutten. My investigation of this question leails me to the conclusion that as regards the time of opening or closing of narigration on eitherside of the river. the western entrance to the Beanharnois Canal wonld naturally freeze up eariier and remain blocked later than either one side or the other at the lower end, where the ice would move out with the spring rise of the river ; whereas it is firmly helil in the area of still water created by the dams at Clark's Lslamd and Falleytield.

It also appears as if no rule could be arrived at as to tine probable movements of the ice where the catuses of its formation, the fluctuation of the water, the direction of the currents of the river, fic., are ever varying. The phenomena of no tho winters are alike, but there appears to be no reason why a canal constructed on the north shore of the St. Lawrence in the position proposed should remain closed by iee atter the usual period of the commencement of mavigation : whilst it is probable that the current created at the foot of sucka large channel by the continued discharge of water from it would have a great. tendency to keep the lower ent rance clear.
Now, the point which my hon. friend tried to make Wias, that the whole aight of way on the other side haul been bought and would cost hardly anything, whilst the whole right of way would have to be lought on the north shore. Br. Sullivan, in that celebrated letter, says that the right of way will be very expensive because a very expensive church has to be buaght. Now, the fact is that that church has already been bought and paid for ; the whole cost of that church, together with a lacge lot of land and all the property belonging to the church, have been bought anl paid for by the covernment at at cost of $57,(0) 0$. Now, another point was raised with regard to the mill of Mr. Beandette, which was estimated to cost alout $\$ 40,0$ Mo. I am sure, sir, that half that money, even less than half, would buy that mill, but if the canal was made on the south vide from the foot of the Beauharnois Canal, it would leare the Melocheville mill in the same position as Mr. Beaudettes mill. I contend that the Beatharnois Canal could not be deepened. The Beauharnois Canal is partly in the ground and is partly coustructed with hanks. The banks might be elevatedand made higher: but it is to be remembered that the bauk ononeside of the canal would have tobe destroyed. Every one acquainted with canals which are constructed by means of banks, are aware of the dangers attending navigation on account of leaks, and the lreaking of the banks on the sides of the canal. Now, on the Sonlanges Canal the whole canal will be in the aromal, and there will be no necessity for any hanks at all: so there will be no danger with regarl the lireaking of the banks, and consequently no leaks and no damages done to the fanmers of the smrounding country. Sow, another contention of Mr. Sullivan wats that there is an abmandence of stone on the Beauharnons side, and that it would not be necessary to bring it from a distance. Well, I may say that the stone there is worth mothiag except for rip-rap along the canal, and that all the stone for the enlargement and construction of at mow canal on the other side would have to be bronght from a distance; the same as for the north shore canal. But there is another question to be considered. If, as is the opinion of a certain number of men whe are interestel in the tade and natigation of this comery, it will he necessary to decpen our canals hefore many years to a depth of 20 feet, that would be imposille on the Bealahnois side except by the construction of an artiticial chamel three miles long, which would have to be mate across Lake st. Francis so ats to obtain a b 0 -foot navigation. The chamel necessary to oltain a $1+$ foot narigation would le only one and three-quarters of a mile long, but to ohtain a 20 foot navigation the chanmel would have to the three miles long, at least. In the letter of this Mr. Sullivan, who is the authonity which my hom. friend from Beamharmois cited all throuch his speech, that gentleman says that the canal does not terminate at Yandreuil. Well. if that semteman was acquainted with the commtry, he wombl know that this camal terminates in the comety of Vaudreuil. He has also given us letters from captains, pilots, \&e. Well, these men are captains and pilots of small vessels, and a great many of them live near Valleyfied and are interested. I suppose, in any kind of canals. They hate never navigated the large class of ressels which will be used in the future when our canals are deepened to 14 feet. All the argments of my hon. friend were based upon it panphlet. which was prepared hy my hon. friem from Jaciples Cartier (Mr. (iirouard), who was bom in Beauharnois, and to whom the people of Beauharnois applied for a defence after Mr. Lanthier, who had taken a great deal of interest in this question, had written a pamphlet. The hom. member for Jacpules Cartier, who was not a member then. wrote a painphlet in answer to that one ; but as he is not an engineer, I consider the pamphlet is not worth the opinion of the distinguished engineers who have studied the subject for many years. My hon. frieml said something ahout election stories. Well, I have heard some of those election stories myself, and I can assure the House that they were very far from lreing true. This canal question was decided by the Government lefore the election of 1891, and after it had lieen decided, I was defeated. I also saw in the papers that a great number of men had leen employed this year in the County of Soulanges during the election. Now, no more men were employed than were necessary, anl than are usually employed, but the Govermment engineers thought that they should continue the test pits so as to be able to give out contracts for other sections of the canal; and a few test pits were made. It was easier to make them in winter than in summer on account of the ground being frozen, as it was not necessary to prop up the sides of these test pits. I may say, in summins up my atguments, that the alvantiges of the Noulanges (imalare that it would be in a straight course with the line of navigation : that it womblollow the deep water chamel on the morth side : that it Wonlel sate the crossiug from the north side. chammel of lake st. Frameis. $\mathrm{f}_{0}$ the head of Valleytielh. ateross the lake and from Molacheville ti, Lathine : and thit on the north side the hamburs are letter. Doreover. a canal comstmeted on the morth shore would be cheaper and safer. and hetter adaptel to the wants of nor future marigation. hecaluse it conlal he deepelaed at a less const thath int the other side: Moreover. it wonld not be subject to the danger attending narigation in the enlargement of sanals. such as has leeen the ease on the (onnwall (ianal, and other canals which have loeen deepened and endarged. This phestion. Mr. Speaker, was decided after very long and carefnl consideration hy the liovernment : it Wats decided after several reports had leen made by eminent engineers, and I think that no better eonclusion cond have heen arrived at than the one they emborlied in their report. I hope that the tinemment will complete. With the least prossible delay. the enlargement of war camals, which are of vital interest to the trate and commerce of the country and that before long we will have a 14 ferot nariyation from the lakes to the city of Montreal. jection to loringing down all the papers amel reports of engineers on the interesting subject of the moting movel hy my hon. friend from lieanharnois iMr. Bergerom!. That was whe of the first questions that were monted when I came to this Honse abnit $-{ }^{(1)}$ vears ago. The hom. gentleman then representing the (omnty of Noulinges usen to get. up) nearly every session animake an argument in favour of a c:amal through his comaty rumuing to the (itscanles. We have had inmunemalle petitions to the -lepartment frompersonsinterested in the canal, from nearly all the mariners is the comatry. from the Bhateis of Tramle of Montreal ami Kingston. and places that are most interested in the carrying trate of the st. batwence-all advocating the line Which has heen allopted be the diovernmemt. The ohjections which were makle by the meminer for Beathamosis (Mr. Bergeron) to the lonation of the athal. I think principally centre in two or three paints. One of themis. that the port of entrance ont the north shore of the sit. Latwrence is not so goon for the purpose is the one on the somth shore:-Fialleytielal. The simreys of our engineers show that the chamel hetween Presentt and Nontreal follows the north shore, and for all purposes of navigation the entrance on the north shore is fat hetter than that at Valleyfield. This is the catse for two or three reasons. One of them is that as the channel follows the north shore a ressel has to cross from the neighlourhood of Coteath direct to Vialleyfield in order to effect entrance to the Beanharnois Camal, ami in some seasons of the year when the wind is in certain directions and very boisterous, it is perhaps a little flangerous. Another oljection is that atcording to surveys, which the member for Beauharnois says have not been completed. it is almost impossible to secure It feet navigation at the entame into Valleytieli. The reason is set out by the engineers in a report read by the member for Peatharnois, and also hy the member for sonlanges, which shows that inmediately under the river lenl. Which at present constitutes the entrance, is a liyer of looulders and indurated elity, and this would have to le removed for the purpose of acepuiring accommolation for 14 feet ressels, particularly looking forward to the day when the hom. member for stoulanges hopes we will have a $\mathbf{2}$ (1) font navigation, amel further under. this clay ame lomhlers there is a formation of quicksand through which tools sometimes drop ofig feet. I have lee natsiaredhy the engineers in the department that in orver to make the entrance to Vitle ytiehl. or a point immerliately alone it, of use for ressels drawing 14 feet. excaivation would he reguired for nearly two miles, which womld. in fact, renter the: Peathamosis (imal on the somoth side mearly the same lenght as the camal on the north side. If my memory serves me rieght, the length of the Soulanges Ganal will he latiz miles. The lensth of the present Peamharmois Comal from its entiance at Palleyfield to its exit into the St. latwrence is 10 miles. and the subatueons excalations necessary to ohtain an entrance into Vialleytield woulel adil two :nikes to the distance. Another reason assigned hy the member for Beatharmois in opposition on locating the canal on the north site is that it will hate tio cross three little streams. The hom. gentleman says that parties who have travelled in that section When the snow wats melting in the spring, fomml the whole cominte flowede and it would le imporssible for at small iqfleduct umber the camal to carry away the water, and the work of chanage would le: of such ath expensive chatacter as to oblige the: diovermment to abamlon the camal altogether. I have heen assured loy engineers who have examined that point that the puantity of water is known. that the extent of combry inained by those chree little crecks is well known, and there is ample provision for the passiage of water under the canal, and there need he nu danger apprehembed on that acoonat. The hon. gentleman states also that thecamal on the south site of the Kit. Latwrence operns at a much earlier period than wonh the eatnal ont the north shore. As to that I do not know why there shombl he stich a difference in the climate between two sections of eountry only a few mile:s apart. Any person acegnainted with river navigation knows that in a canal forming the comnectinge link leetween two lakes. the ice prisses away at : much carlier periond on the camal than it does in the: latkes alone ami below: that is to sity, that as regards Lake St. Francis alove the Beauharnois Cinal and above the proposed sonalages (iamal, the probabilities are that lnoth of the canals would he open and tit for navigation long lofore the ice hand passell from the lake alowe. The hon. member for Coulanges stated, and ohjection was taken to his statement, that the port at the entance to the Soulanges Canal is open for havigation much earlier. than at Valleytieh. The engineer reports that this is the case: lut that I do mot thimk makes the slightest alifference whatever. becanse neither the. one camal nor the other could be used for navigation matil looth Lakesst. Lonis and st. Francis were tit to he navigated. Another objection made by the hon. member for Peatharnois, and it wrold he a serious objection if true, was that, on atcount of the Ottawa opening at a date much later than the St. Lawrence, the ice coming down the first mentionend river piled on the shoals lying in the immediate neightourhond of the Cascades and remained there for a long period, and that this would remiter at canal on the north shore useless for a long time, claring which the canal on the south shore could lee used. That question, if the hon. gentleman will real the report of Mr. Monro, has been fully answered. Encuiry has been mate into it principally ly those who navigated the river from Montreal to the Casundes from 1846 to 1 sio3-ot, and they deelared that that portion of the river into which the Soulanges (anal will delonuch at Lake Sit. Lonis hail been open long anterior to the part of the river where the leanharnois Cinal enters into the lake. The: olservations of engineers within the last two or three yeats, excepting one period mentioned, contirm this opiniom, that the ice passes away at the Cascates at as early. if not an earlier periond than it cloes at the entrance of the Beanharnois (amal. From the reports of the engineers, then, it appears that there are difticulties in regard to the entrance at Valleyfield, that the ditticulty of excavation at the entrance from Lake St. Francis is almost insmmountalle. The engineers show an expenditure of $\mathbf{S v}(n),(M N)$ to $S 1,(000$,( $x$ ( $)$ fort hat work alone would he reguired, and with this they think it would be diticult to aceomplish the object. If it should the desired to increase the depth of the canal at any time from if feet to 18 or 2) feet, they consider the obstacles on the south shore would $l_{\text {e }}$ almost insummontable. The camalon the rorth shore can be built for three-quarters of at million to $\mathrm{El},(\mathrm{OX}),(\mathrm{QK})$ cheaper--so I am informed hy the engineers---thith the cost for which the Pranharnois Canal coukl be enbiggen. or the altermative scheme of a canal from Knight's Point, a shortalistanceabore Villeytieh, ionhllwe carriedont. Fither of the two plans proposed the enlargement of the Beatuharnois Canal, or the substitution of another entrance at Knight's Point would be largely in excess of the estimated cost of the building of the new canal on the north shore, and the hailding or enkarging of the Beauharnois Canal on the sonth shore conhld not be clone in summer and winter contimuonsly as it could be on the north shore. and such work would seriously interfere with the navigation of the canal. For these reasons, on account of the cheapness, on account of the narigalile chamel passing hetween Prescott and Montreal leing on the north shore of the St. Lawrence, and for other reasons. the foremment has found that it would be better and cheaper to build the canal on the north shore. I trust that after the hon. member for Beathamois (Mr. Bergeron) gets the reports and plans of the engineers, that he will be satisfied. He will see, if he looks at the report of Mr. Monro. that over l(o) test pits were chag at the Valleyfieh entrance. Mr. Shanly, Mr. l'age and Mr. Trulean, the head of the department, have recommended the aduption of the north shore route. and when the hon. member for Beanharnois gets the papers I think he will be convinced, its we were in the department, and as the fiovermment was, that the selection manle by the (iovernment is the best in the interests of the comintry.

Mr. BFRGERON. Mr. Speaker. I thought that perhaps some other gentleman might speak upon this notion, but before it is passed I wish to reply in a few worils to what has been said by the Minister of Railways and (anals and ly the hon. member for Soulanges (Mr. Bisin). So far as the remarks of the member for Soulanges are concerned. there is uo use replying at length to him, because he has ruoted entirely the report of Mr. Monru and has dealt altogether with that report, which I am contending against as not correct. However, 1 am bound to reply to the remarks of the Minister of Railways and Canals, who seems to be well versed on the same report of Mr. Mouro and to take his opinion from that report. I contend that my remarks are contimed by the speech of the Minister of Railways ame fimals. He has lased himself solely on the report of the engineer, Mr. Monro, and in fact the whole Honse of Commons, combprising 21.5 members, seems to be asked to rely on the report of this engineer without corvolnative evidence. My demanil is that the report of Mr. Monmoshouh be considered and placed before a board of competent engincers for corroboration. I do not believe that Mr. Monros report is correct. and the difference letween us is that the Minister of Railways and (anals and the member for Noulanges (Mr. Bain) take that report as being entirely correct. The Minister of Railways stys that the persons engaged in havigating that water route are in favour of the Noulanges (dual. The hon. member is not rery much responsilile for his opinion, hecause he has only oceupied the portfolio for a few months, and the Minister of that department has been changel ten times at least since this question was mooter. The hon. Minister says that the shippers have atsked for the soulanges Canal. 1 contend, not that the Minister of Rail ways and Cabals did not say the truth, lout that his information is not true. and I contend further that the shippers are opposed to the Soulanges Canal. The Minister of Railways and (Gunls says that the entrance of the Beatuharnois Canal is dangerous, but he only says so lecause Mr. Monro says that, but the majority of engineers and of shippers are against this opinion of Mr. Monro. I tell the Minister again that when he bases his argument that the north shore canal will be of the sime length as the south shore canal. he is taking his information from Mr. Monro, and that Mr. Monro is not correct. The south shore cimal is shorter in every shape and form than the morth shore camal.

Mr. HAliaiART. Ierhaps the hon. gentleman has misumberstood me. I said the length of the canal on the north shore would be $13: 3$ miles and the length of the Beauharnois Canal is 12 miles. That, added to the subapueous excavation which would le necessary to enter the port of Vallegfied. would add two miles, which would le 14 mikes and would be in excess of the canal on the north shore.

Mr. BERGRRON. That is only a question of detail : that is only one of the routes, and since they have decided to put the canal on the north shore they have selected three lifferent rontes. We have been speaking in this House of Commons of economy. The halls of this chamber are filled with talk about economy, and I contend that if economy is needed the BeauharnoisCanal is two miles shorter, coming down and going up, than the camal on the north shore. If the Government want to make a canal two miles longer on the south shore, they can do so, but I contend that the Peauharnois Canal can be enlarged and deepened in the same place as it is to-day, and you can have a canal two miles shorter than the proposed Sonlanges Canal. Now, alont that question of bringing in the ressels to the western entrance. There is not a boatman, nor a master of a ship. nor a pilot, nor a member on the Government side of the House who can say that it will not le more dangerons to bring a tow of harges to the entrance of the north shore canal than to bring to the entrance of the Beatahamois Canal. At the entrance to the Beanhamois Camal there is no current, whereas at the entrance to the proposed Soulanges Camal there is a great deal of current, and everyhody knows that. It was only the other day that I staw a master mariner, interested in narigation, who toll me that it was impossible to bring a tow of harges to the hean of the soulanges (amal. if there was the least southwest winl, hecanse the tow would be blown into the rapids. The hon. Minister of Railways and Camal says he has the report of Mr. Momro to show that it is untrue. I say that the report of Mr. Monro camot be correct, and what I ask is that that report may be pat before competent engineers, men who know what they are talking abont, and then we shall ascertain whether Mr. Monro is correct or uot. Now, in regard to my statement about the flooding at Cotean, neither the hon. Minister nor the hon. member for Soulanges (Mr. Bain) have answered it. What I sain yesterday, and repeat to-day, is that the water at Cotean Lambing is at the height of the ailway. There are three rivers there, and if they are forced into narrow channels, the water will rise above the railway lefore it reaches the it. Lawrence. The only answer we have from the hon. Minister is that Mr. Nonro says that my statement is not correct. That is the fiovernment's only ground for proposing to expend $S s,(x, n),(n) 0$ for this work. Who is Mr. Monro: He may le a very goonl engineer : but 1 sulmit that we are not here for the pleasure of anyboily. We are here to do our cluty, and I ask that lefore we accept Mr. Monro's report, we should place it before other engineers to ascertain whether it is correct or not.

Mr. IAAURIER. It isatcepted.

Mr. BER(iFRON. Whether it is accepted or not, it is better to turn back and olstain something more serious than that report hefore going aheat blindly into such an enormons expenditure. I think the (iovernment should do that, and I will tell you why. There has been talk enough in the country about these expenditures being manle to win a contest. I never believel that, and I do not lelieve it to-day; but people uill believe it if the Government, instead of placing the matter before competent engineers, go ahead on the basis of Mr. Monros report and incur an expenditure of $$ 8,0000$,OON. In regard to my statement about the ice at the Cascades, the same answer is given. The hon. Minister of Railways aml Canals, for whose judgment I have a deep respect, says it caunot be true, because Mr. Monro says it is not true I say it is true. I know it ; I have been there. I am not an engineer, and I haveread to the House a statement of about fifteen pilots, honest and respectable men, who say that at the Cascades the ice remains jammed for three weeks after it has gone from the south shore. The hon. Minister says he cannot understand how there can be such a difference of temperature within three miles. I can say like him, I do not understand it, but it is so. If the Minister believes the report of Mr. Monro on that point, I do not. From ING: Alown to 180 N . Where were the reports of Mr. Monro? He has fomme that in one year the ine went from the north shore as scomias from the sobth shore : but if he hat taken the swentern veats from $15-3$ to 1 Nam. he would have found that that was uot so. Mr. Monro knew very well that it was mot so. He made his report, aml he foumd some very goonl Ministers to lelieve it. Now my hon. friend from Sonlanges says that the entrance on the Beabharmois (inal at Valleytieh will enst from sion, (MN) tu Sl,(MN).(MW) : ant the hon. Minister of Railwaysamt C'anals says the same thing. Germ what ilo they base their calenlations: Upon Mr. Mommos re-port--always the same thing. I know that Mr. Domor siys that : I read his report last year: hut I contenl that that report is not correct. This is not a guestion of having the camal in my comoty: The people of my eromty do unt care for the camai for themselves : lut as a matter of puhlic policy, the builling of a camal on the north shore woull hea uselessexpenditure of money, and I amaskingsimply that the report upon which the invermment hase their caleulations, should lef put before competent engineers. The hon. Minister has spoken of Mr. Shanly. I can say that I myself spoke to Mr. Shanly on this: sulject when he sat in this House. anil also in Montreal. He is one of the men who built the Beanharnois (imal, and he: hats always sitid to me that the idea of huihling the canal on the north shore was perfectly absurd. The hom. Minister says that he has Mr. Shanlys report. leet us see that report, and we shall then see whether Mr. Shanly statement in writing is the same as his verbal statement to me. So far as Mr. I'age is comcerned, I do not want to speak of those who are gone. We shall hate the ohl gentleman looking down from almoe on the soulanges Canal which I hope will never Ine built. Mr. Trudean, we know, fatours the north shore, and like the fiovernment. lee bases his opinion on Mr. Momros report. Now: I do not want to detain the House on this puestion. and I do not intend to speak alout it anv more. I hive done my duty, not so much to my county, as to the House and the country. I io not want to see the day when the liovernment will come to me and say : : After all you were right : if we hat followed your alvice we would not have made this mistake.

Mr. LAUCRIER. There ate few men in this House I am sure, who, after having listened to the vely elaborate discussion which we have hat yesterday and to-diay on this question, would te in at position to say whether the location of the canal should be on the south shore, as contemied by my hon. friend from Beanharnois, or on the north, ats contended by my hon. friend from Soulanges. There seems to be contlicting testimony on louth sides. The statements presented ly the hon. member for Beauharnois are weighty, and certainly deserve attention. I do not understand that the hon. gentleman contends that the proper lacation of the canal is on the south shore, thongh that seems to le his opinion. But he makes the complaini, and the very serious complaint, that the Government propose to build another canal upon insufficient data. That is, I understaml, the position the hon. gentleman takes.

Mr. BERGERON. Hear, hear : that is it.

Mr. Bergeron.

Mr. LAURIFR. He does not saty that the camal should be built on the south shore or on the north shore. He simply sitys that the fiovernmert are proposing an expenditure of Sx, (M).(MX) based on ant erroneons report, amd that they should have more information than they hate. There is a great deal to he said on hehalf of that contention. If my hon. friend from beanhamois (Mr. Bergeron) has spoken acemately. aml I have no donatit that he has with the great attention that he has given to this case, the Government seemed to have taken action on insutficient information. I do not blame them for eonstructing a cuanal on the north shore. lnecause I am not sufficiently informed on the sulbject, but the contention of my hom. friend from Feanharmos is that the fioveriment have arrived at their decision on insutficient blata. It appears tor the that it is rather late in the day for my hom. friend to raise that point.

Mr. BERGERON. I made it last year.
Mr. LAURIER. The time to make the oljection wats when there was an election coming on. My hon. friend should have opposed the ministerial cambidate in the County of Soulanges amb shomhl have said that the forernment wascommitting the sufficient diata, and no doubt his influence would have been felt, and I believe the (iovernment would have heen forced totake his viewsintoconsideration and perhaps to staty their hamd. But it is rather late in the day now for him to ratise the olpjection. He says he hopes the camal will not he lmilt. but the contratets are alrealy given.

Mr. BERABRRON. Sot yet.

Mr. LAURIER. Alsout the time of the election the tembers were asked for, and I think the contracts hate been let.

Mr. HAligiAR', Two are awarded.

Mr. LACRIER. Two of them are awarderl. The other is $k e p t$ in abeyance. At all erents, it is rather late in the day for my hon. frieml to raise the point now, and I hope we will not have to come to the conclusion that the Government have acter wrongfully. If afterwards, however, it turns but that the statements male by my hon. friend as to the impracticability of this canal are correct. it will be evident that the (iovermment have taken a rery serions burden on their shouhlers and will te cntitled to severe censure, and I am afraid that my hon. friend from Beatharnois will not he entirely free from that censure.

Motion agreed to.

PIERS, sc., IN PRINCE COCNTY. P.E.I.

Mr. PERRY moved for :

Statement showing the amount of money expended by the (iovernment of Canada in the gears $1590-91$ on piers. breakwaters, &c., in Prince County. P. E. I. : the amount expended on each of these works, the work let by contract and to whom let; also showing the total amount voted during said jears and the amount not expended.
He said: 1 desire to draw the attention of the 1)epartment of Public Works, and the House in feneral, to the fact that the Department of Public Tiorks do not expend the money on the public works in Prince Edward Island which is voted by this Legislature. I find that, in $I S M 0$, voted for repairs, piers amd breakwaters in Prince Eilwatil lslame, and out of that only Si.(KX) was expendenl. What hiss become of the other Sis, (KKI)? No doultt the province has been charged. and hon. members opposite freguently charge that Prince Edward Islaml receives large amounts of money. No doulst those amounts look large. lout I think they are small, and then we find that only alout one-half of the amounts roted from year to year are expented. Wits there no breakwater or pier or wharf in Prince Edward Island that reguired repairs to involve the expemliture of this sin, 0 (no): Why. at Tignish, it would require $\mathbf{S i}_{2} 0,0$ (1) 0 to make that harbour angthing like a decent harbour, and that is a harbour of refuge for the fishing ressels of Gloncester. New Brunswick, aml others. There are a large number of vessels that come into that harlmourfom Tracatie, from Pokemouche.from Shippegan. from Carapuet, and from other places. On the eve of a storm these fishermen come to that port. and the entrance is then hocked so that our small local hoats have to move up in oriler to make room for these ressels. We know that the catches of matekerel are generally made in the morning, but When our small mackerel lwats wat to get out. under these circumstances they ammot get out until is or 4 bolock in the afternoon. The fiovernment onght to see to this. There is room enough breastwork huilt thereacross the marsin and drenged in order to allow these lonats to pass up towards the bringe and so to allow the smaller lomats to get out. Then. in Cisemmpec harbour the 1 iovermment hate neither a wharf. nor a pier, nor a loreawater. There is only a railway wharf there, except some: wharves that are kept up liy private enterprise or by the Laval dovernment. Then, when we go to Malperpue, there was rom there to spend si, 0 ( 0 ( $)$, and there is room to spend $\$ 30,000$ in Summerside, the cippital of Prince County, the county which 1 have the honour to represent. When the dovernment was asked to spend some money there, the reply was that they hat no money to sjeme. The perople of summerside and the people of Prince Connty do not support the present Ciovermment, and therefore they have no money to spend there. Summerside is the place where Her Majestys mails are lamded rluring the whole time of navigation, and get the (iovernment steamers have no wharf there, but have to go to private wharves or to those luilt hy the Local (iovernment. On the other haml, at Point du Chêne in New Brunswick, on the other side of the straits, there are Dominion Govermment wharves that have cost $\mathrm{Si} 1(0),(10(4)$, while in Summerside not a single clollar has been spent to accommolate the whole of the shipping of Prince County: The harlour of Summerside, if not the: first, is, perhaps, the secomel harbour in the Province of Prince Eduard Island, and the people who are large contributors to the revenue of the conntry have a right to a fair share of the public moiney to be expented there, in order to facilitate their great traffic. Bint. Sir, they are tired of asking. It seems the Department of Public Works could not see their way clear where to expend this $5 \mathrm{~g}, 000$. I conteind that the people of Summerside have a goon] right to ask for a breakwater. If a breakwater were built at the entrance io Simmerside on the north side of the lighthouse. I claim that navigation could lwe kept open three weeks later in the fall and open three weeks tarlier in the spring, because the passage wouhl create more current, ame I think the ice would not take so early in the fall ats it dowe at presemt, and it would clear out much earlier in the spring. I do not suppose the (iovernment is going to cote us any money. I have haved up the Estimates laid on the Table and 1 fail to see chat me olollar is to ke appropriate to improve the natigation in the harbour of summerside now. nor do 1 expect that the diovernment will do anything for that comoty. meless, perhaps. in a moment of carreleseness, when they to not think of what they are doing. Now we come to West Point. West Point hat a wharf buid there some gears ago, when something like tive or sis thousaind dollars was expended to build it. My colleague here at my right (Mr. Yeo) kuws somethingalmout that. Fecause he was in the Lonal Parliament and used his influence to get it built. This Wats a sreat benetit th the people of West Point. They live far from railway aceommondation, and they made use of this wharf to ship their pronluce to Pointe da Chene, and thence to its destination to some prort in C'amala or the United States. Now, the bovernment took possession of the wharf some years aes: they took possession of the shore. and what is the result? The result is that they never expendeel one doliar on the wharf. the whole wrok was destroved. amil has leen carried a way. When I asked here a few years age from my phace in the House of the Minister of Prublic Works, what he intended to do, he said it was not the intention of the fiocernment to relailh. Why, Sir. the leses farmers of West Point asked me some time ago if 1 thought it was proper for them tor turn to amid open a sulbseription to get money, to ask the people to pur their hands into their pockets and raise money to luild the wharf. I told them: dent lemen, 1 think you are mistaken: I think the first thing to No is to apply to the ciovermment of Canala, to, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, to get a license from him in order to enable you to build sour wharf. But the people could not to it, hecause I understand the dovermment have not only tiaken the wharf bint they have taken the ground. and if the people undertook to buid a wharf there without the knowledre of the diovernment they would le trespassers. That is the way it stands today. 1 do not see a single dollar in the Estimates to enable the Minister of Puldic Works to repair that wharf or to build a new one. A few years ago. in answer to my yuestion, he said that his engineer had made a survey and a report, and that the report recommended that the wharf shoulat be huilt on the someth side. at a cost of $\mathrm{sl} 10 .(\mathrm{nO})$. Well, I supprose the diovermment got frightened at the prospect of expending sillo,(nn). But they are not aftaid to ask this country to vote money to commeuce a work that my hon. friemd from Beatharnois (Mr. Bergeron) siys will likely cast $\mathrm{S},(\mathrm{ONO},(\mathrm{ONO})$, and he has toll us that this work will be guite useless. Bit I can tell him that my constituents in West Point stand in this position : that every dollar expended there will not le useless, because it is loudly needed. But 1 suppose it is there as in other parts of Prince County, becanse the people do not support the (iovermment they must be pumished in this way. Well, if the Government expect that the electors of Prince County are going to vote for them after such usige, they are every much mistaken. The more of such usage, the less chance the Govermment will have. Xow I will leare hat plateaml come to Miminegash breakwater. I am rery glay to find that I have friends in this Honse, is well as in the semate, supporters of the Covernment, who have lousied themselves in regard to thi- matter : they have waitel upon the Minister and askerl him to place a sum in the Estimates sutficient to l, uild a break water at Miminegash. I du hope and trust that thase gentlemen, who are (conservative menilers, will succeed. We know well who they are. They are not the members from Queens (comity. Because the members from that county are sominl likerals. They must he the two members from hings comen, and those two gentemen never salw the break water. They know so little abmar it that they asked for a new hreakwater at Miminegash. The breakwater there was hailt in 150 s. in the last year of the Mackenzie Atministration, to whom the tishermen of that place ase this great lonom. Now. these two entenem han better attend to the wamts of their own comstituents: they have ne, insiness to trespass on my comaty. 1 would like to see them there as visiting strangers, but they have ne, right to come and try to take the ground from miler my feet in the comety 1 represent. They are trespassing on me privileses and I hope and trust they will attend to all the breakwaters and piers in their own county which reguire to be locoked after, and when they have sot atl they can set from the dovermment they will not have one: cent tow mach. With respect to this hreakwater at Miminegash, two years ago the Honse of Comimons votel 3 . $\mathbf{6}$ (ko to repair it. Well, sir, there was at contrate entered into. No tenders were askel for until late in Deceminer. in Is (9), on the ere of the general election. At that time the Minister asked for temlers to do certain works, amd a certain gentleman, I believe of the name of MacAlonald, iunl a very gool Tory, happenel to be the suceessful tenderer and agreed to to the work forSo, ind within seven monthe, as the Minister of Public Works tohd us last year. Well. Sir, he deposited his money, and he asked for an extension of time, hut the ciovernment did not grant it. The elections were then over, and there was inי longer any need of holding out the bait to the electors. The farermment cambliates had been defeated, and nothing in the wide world conld be done to redeem the two Tory camdidates. Therefore the work must lee stopped. It reminuls one strongly of the Stairs \& O Hanly transation on the Esiumatt docks. After he had siguel his temler, he was told he was tuo low. He had lreen tohl that he had better give up the contract. The depresit he hat made with the department was returnea, anid he was toll that his contract price wats tox low, that he would lose money, and he wats allised to give it up. In accordance with the recommendation, he did so. He wantel an extension of time. Why could not the dovernment have grantel it? The time has reen extended. and the wharf is not yet built. Money has lien uselessly expended, and the result is that the people of the locality suffer from want of aceommolation, aml during the spring most of the work constrncted might le carried away by ice. Have the (iovernment gained inything? No. What has become of the $(3,-10(1)$ ? I asked last year how much of the $\mathbf{3 3}, \mathbf{3 1 0}$ had been expendeds: I was tohl that $\delta(3 i d)$ had heen spent on the breakwater, and shis had lieen given to the inspector. Mr. Peккт.

What hass leen done with the halance? In answer to my enguiries the excuse was mate that the diovermment had not sutficient money to enter into a contract. No new erontract, at all events, has Ineen entered into. I believe it is not the intention of the department to ask for tenters. If it wiss their intention, it shouhl have lxeen lone long ago. Why could mot alvertiseluents for temers have heen inserted at the close of the last sesision? It appeats that the Minister of Public Works hat not time to attend to it. The diovernment have nut time to clos what the comity expects of them: hut when and election is going on in Nevat Seatia or Sew Branswick. Guelse of Ontario, we timl these gentemen. like thying birels, thonk there hy the -iozen and seare. They attenil meetings amitry to persmale the proplie lig follse promises, promises which they never inteme to cary out, that they shoull give the fiovermment their support : the: hambug the peaple and induce them to vore for bovermment camblibates. That is one of the chief reasons why such a sweep has heen mande at the hye-dections. When we atsk them to attemel is their husiness, to give us a fuid fure ifoo. to reowup us for the so, (x) a sear we paty them the $y$ ate not to be foums. they sit like dinmmes, they camot nove, they act like men who dos not meath to ilo what is right. I am not sointer spatio of Queenis County, for the representatives are well able to speak for their comonty, but I merely speak for the coming I represent. Thedidermment is not giving a reasomable share of the public money in orter to maintain the public works of my abunty. Is it proper to vote money each vear and leaive it unexpeniled: If the system of taxing eath porince according to its publie works were alopted. it conll be demonstanted in tive minutes that Prince Ealward Island fatils to get its proper amel lawful share. But the islame is part of the Dominion, and whatever improvements are carrien out there atre inot for the lemetit of the islame alone, 1 , for the alvantage of the people of Ontario alsor, for the henetit of the tratelling agents who conme down to the ishand try ing to intronduce articles and sell them to the islambers. The improvements are in fact, ats much for the leenetit of people outside of the island as for the benetit of the perople of the ishanl themselves. I lesire to ask the dioverument if they intem in catry out this poliey which they have inamguted: if they intend to do justice to the islami : if they inteni to follow out the principle of voting money vear after year and not expending more than half. imd then allow the matter to drift along during two or three years: I want to he assured hy the diovernment that this moner is gongetole expended. When you read the Fistimates, you are apt to come to the conchasion that the island is getting its fair share of the public money, hat when you come to the expenditure you fime that the money voted has not leven expended. 1 might mention a gonel pany other works in my count of minor impmitance but it would be tedions for me to contimue further. 1 hope the foverument will learn a lesson from what I have satid. My remarks may stem a little hitter, hat they are made in the interests of my comoty, and I will receire eredit for what I have said from the people of Prinee Edward Islamel.

Mr. DAVIES (P. E. I.) I takp advantage of the present opportmity to call the attention of the Minister of Pulbic Works to one or two public works in my county which I bronght to the atttention of his predecessor, last year ame the gear Inefore. Althongh I hal not the express promise that they woulit ine attemided to, yet the language used gave me to amberstamd that the forermment woulil expent sutheient money to place them in proper order. On the north side of Queen's Comety, right in the centre of the lest tishing groumel. are sithated the two harlmurs of Rustion amd New Lomion. So far as hustion is concerned, a lreakwater. Was hailt eight or ten years age which has Imeen of very great ahrantage to the plate, and it. hat heen kept in rem fair repair. With respect to New Lamolon there were sume new works re!uired and repueted upon. The hon. gentleman will timel in his department a very excellent Faphort from Mr. brown, whe wits sent is the islami some rears ago, in which he recomamended certain works as leinge essential in oreler tomake the hartrour what it should $\mathrm{ln}_{\mathrm{x}}$, a proper harinaur of refuge to the tishermen, amd capahle of allowins small sehooners to enter and take anay pronhace. I understond from the late Minister that the latter wats muler his comsideration, in fiact. ine saill st more than once, and the dovermment did huild a small hreakwater ont onte sibe of the hartome. lout there still remains to lee earried but the works which Mr. Brown reparted ats essential in onder to make the present expenditure lemeticial. I will pressom the hon. Minister the impertance of examining that rejmer, ani if he call suceced in ohtamings money from his colleagnes, the suggestion math. hy engineer brown shonlil be carried out. (In the south side of the ishamd there is linette hatinour. which my hon, willagne many times has hameht to the attention of the Honse: and I lare sity he will take ancasion to speat oi it when he is in his sesit. I will not refer io it further. except to sity that there is a cappital repert on that harlmur in the lepartment. I want to call the hom. Ministers at tention tu Wimnl lishand hreakwater. It wats combmented some years ago ley the Lacal lionermment.

 it and expencled some muney upon the breat water. and they have sone on rear after year expenting money buen ihat hreakiator, on a system that I have protested agatinst time amd agrin: that is, voting from Sl, (hM) to pembed lie day work. The hom. Minister might as Well take the money ame show it into the sea as to expent it that way. The hreakwater has been for vears untinished. A dredge was sent some gears agro and did effectual work as far as it went. It enabled a schomer to come alongside the lreakWater so as to enable the people to ship their prorducts. 1 Went there alonut eighteen momiss ags amd mwing to a fearful stom the hreakwater was in a rery dilapidated comblition. The hallasting hats lueen washed out. allil it was impossible for a man to drive a horse atmil cart down the loreakwater at all. The loreakwater was in such a condition that the expemditure of : 1 , Mini by day's work was ahsolutely un gand at all. The money might as well be in the publicex. chequer, and better, lrecause there were no heneticial results_lerived from it. As I satil, the hreakwater is opposite licton and Pugwash, in a ihicklysettled portion of the comatry, as the people, if they hat anything of a harlour there-as it was the intention of the fiovermment to build such a harbour

- would loe enabled to trate with the perple on the uerth coist of Sova Somia, and quite a lange trade could be carried on. There is no railway within so or +11 miles. They have ne natural harlmor there from which to ship their produce, and I do not kuw any class of penple who raise such fair crops as they do, and whe are so deprivel of the anhantages that might result from the sale of the crops if the had facilities for shipmemt. The Ninister of Pablic Wiosk has reports in his depart. ment upon this matter. The (iovernment some years ago huilt a brak water there, which had the etfict desired at the time but it is now in a terribly dilapidated comblition, amil I myself have seen that the men whe brought their pronluce inat schomer had to carre it on their lateks until they landed it in the catits. I ieel for the people in that lineality. 1 laid the :atiter as fairly ats 1 could lefore the former Minis. ter of Public Wiorks: but nothing wat done. 1 know that claims are mate by a large number of perple in the Inminion. ame that tach thinks his flam is the strongest, but I hoper that in this caste the present Minister of Public Works will do something to renove the ditizulties under which the people there latwar. I was prepared to wait-leing in oppusition until my turn cume in order to do sumething for this breakwater. I have been waiting a sund mang gears, and I trust now that the present Minister of Public Works will take the matter into his consideration. 1 ann quite sure that it 1 comh onee ser him down there and show him the condition of things, and how the farmens are deprivel of the means of exporting their profiuce, that he would tre ansious at once to take my case into consideration amid do something in fatour of it. 1 amb sure the Minister sill reall the reports in his depurtment. amil know that, if he doess his sense of fairplay will induce him at once to put that breakwater in proper repair. I do not wish that the hon. zenteman shonhl pursue the former puliey of the cepartment in this respeet. I hold that Slo(kn) spent now and again on this work is 1 ne seocl. but if the hom. gentleman shomble see his way clear to wote the amoumt which his engineer has reprrtedassutficient toput the hreak water in proper comdition. he will be conferring a great lwenetit on a very layge section of our people.

Mr. OLiMF:T. 1 must first sigy that 1 am thankful for the cernest lesson that has heeng given to me by the hon. memleer for Prince (Nr. Perry). 1 suy that it was a very earnest lesson, hecause the hom. genteman spoke in such a tone as to deeply. impres me with the very great importance of the grievances which he is continually bringing up year after sear in this Honse. 1 may sur, Mr. Speaker. that when the papers are broaght iown, 1 ams sure the Honse will see that Prine Edward Island has been pretty fairly dealt with hy this Covernment sille it came into porwer in ISTs. Curionsly enongh, 1 happeneel to cpen a lo lrok comtaining the Estimates of Na, oth and, looking at what was rotend. 1 see that in $150.3 .-60$ only 54,120 was votel for Prince Ed ward lsland hy his friends the Liveral party of which he was a great adminer at the time: while the Esti mates of the present year containan item of $\leqslant 14,000$ for Prince Eduarth Ishand.
Mr. DAVIEN (P.E.I.) Will the hon. gentleman permit me for a moment to correct him. At the time the Minister of Public Wiorks speaks of, Mr. D.are (P.E.I.)
the piers and wharres of Prince Edward lslame were repuined at the expense of the Linal diovernment : so that there was ne reasom for that wote at all. but the Makenzie liovermuent spent sio. (MW that gear in construting the hreak water at Souris.

Mr. OCDMET. That was for imecial works, ami if 1 should opent the accomest of the department since, we would set rhat under the presemt liovemmem cervertensive works have heen constractedin Prince Eiluardlslami. lampuite sure thar when the Supplementary Estimates come down we will ste that Prince Eilward lishad is not mone forgetten tham any other part of the lhominion.

Me: DATIFN (P.E.L.) Hear, hear.

Mr. OCINE:T. I may ahd to what 1 haie hemen sayige that as to the works at Miminesath the information that 1 hane had from the deperment. ami from the pipers I examined. dine wot quite coincide with what has heen sain hey the hom. mem. ler from Prine (Mr. Perry). He says that :hecontact was not given luctase the perple of that comaty wrmand him, and that the contrateor was prevanted to withhraw his temiey on atorom of it letine the low. The infermation 1 have had from the deparmem is that the contractor himself refused to sign the contratt when he was ankenite Now so, for the reason that the siguing of the contraet thall heen deliayed for some months after the cleetions of 1801 . This will show that the department is met open to the accusation of giving contacts only for political purpuses and to serve their friembs during election tunes. If the diovernment hat wished to influence that special coment, the contract wouli have beren given at once and the work pros ceeded with. lim I suppose the compliment may ine paid as the peophe of Prince Eilward Island that they abumot lee comininced that the dovernment ate as corrupt as the hom. gentleman would wish them to believe. becanse they have not yet realized from past experience that if they elected membersfarourable tothe Civernment the would receive greater favours than they have reveived while represented by hom. gentlemen opposite. I cam assure my hon. friend from Prince Eilward Island that so far as 1 amm concerned that province will be treated juse as well as all the other provinces. As to the representations which have leen manle hy my hon. friend from Queens. 1 mayy tell him that the case of the Winal lshand lireak viater is just now under my consideration, in consequence of representations that have heon manle to me in my othice hy his hon. colleagne. and we will try to dio what is fair towards that work and towatids the people of that part of the island. He has stated correetlys enough that those people are entitled todue consideratio n from the Coverument. Inewase they are far away from any railway commmanation. 1 agree with the hoin. genteman when he says that it is not the policy of the ionermment to spend money piecemeal. or in sumall sums: on puldic works aud perhaps on some future occasion 1 may loring forward a plan imdicating my view. that public: moneys should lee expenden on permanent works which wonhi be acheloumes on the eronst so ats to serve as harhames of cefuge for the fishernen. In that way, I think the perpple will le much berter semed. this policy will have to be ancepted hy the hon, members represent. ting the Mantime Provinces ami they will hatero or Sl, (M) on purve lanal works. The papers will Ine brought fown. amt they will show that the money has leyen expended bubati fith. ame that mo injustice has ever been ione of Prime Filwari lshat by this fovermment.

Mr: PKRKl'. In answer to the hom. Minister of P'ublic Works, I whis to siv that hat vear when I asked whether tembers ham lecen called for new works at Miminegrash breakwater, the Minister of Public Wiots amswered:
"Tenders were asked for by pablie adrertisement dated the 10 h of lhecember. 1840. fir extemding am strengeth compleied within swen months trom the date of the "contrict."

That, 1 am sure, was ample time tor the completion of the contract: hut when the Hobtse was in Supple the Dinister of Finathe informed ume that Mr. Miacolomald had given up the contaner lneamse the time was tem shot. I sity that when he refuser to sign that contract, amd hambugsed the tishermen, the dovermment were wrons in giving him hack his depmsit. They shombl have retained that as chamages for mon-fulfilment of the comtanc: It :he time the Cioverment of Mr. Mathenze was in power, the liovernment of Cimata had sot charge of $2-0$ wharves and piers in l'rince Eifwam lekand as they have now. These works were very well provided for by the Provincial iovermarmi, who used to spend sionoma a year in kerping them in repair, whereas this fovermment is spending only Sti, man a year. The hom gentleman tells us that We shmalil get no more meney now than we did then. It is to $\mathrm{la}^{2}$ supposed that we are stambing still, that we are not progressing : yet we time these hon. gentlemen telling us every day how prosperous we are. I contemd that the peosple of Prince Fdward lilam ane taxed sis per head per vear mone than we were unter the Dackenzie Alministration, amd therefore we have a visht to expect an eymiablent for that incerased taxation at the hames of the present (inermment.

THE PCBLIC LANDS.

Mr. EIMBAR movel for:

Return, in tabular form, of all persons, companies and corporations to whou have respertively heren soles, granted or leased, in Manitoha and the Nortli-N Hest Territories of Canada, more land than one section or tit0 acres. The return to give the foliowing information:-
(a) The 1st column to contain the name of the province leased, the number of yeirs yet unerpired. the total numben of acres swh. Kersedami licensonl, the tutal of cohmas 4. ${ }^{6}$ and E resmerively:

The retura io he sceompanied by a map, on a sate at not less than - miles to an meit, showing sil the survered and sululivided portions with the lands sranted and shd for settleusent. coloured light brown: the leased hames. green: the liceused lands, umber: the lamds srateed ami sold to companies sund corpurations, purpu: : end the lands still remaining to the Crown. lake real: with the number of acres of each chass figured on the map. Simela map shall alob imbicate the minway reerves, the referres ion Indians and furesi parks, shid shatl show ath lines of railivay buite or mater comatraction.
He sibid: The revarn for which I am moving will. 1 think, attiond a great cead of very valuable intor mation. Wer all know in a semeril Way that harge trats of the puhtio domatin in the North- West that consislerable trates hate loreta leatsed or granted to priate indiviotashs. The tirst part of the return asks fors atazebuent of all cases in whed more than one seretion of biflaters has heyn granted or leased to any imlivifinal or corporationg. The seromd pirt asks far a map on arompatiey this return. Which if it wan he prepared witheat tom gerest cost of ditioulty, will. I thinh. he ai alde vary at a slance what lamh in the Nortin- IVest hate Ineon gratated, what reserved. What leased. amb What arestill opento settlement. I haveleft ablamk in the propesed rermon. which I worid like to sill in to suit the viens of the hon. Vinister of the Interior. as to the sate ob whoh the map shoudit be mate. If it were manle on a seale of six miles to the inch, that wonh sive one inch tor ewh syuate township. However, perhaps the Minister will see what smbe wonhi le mosi convenient. I shouht think it would ine convenient, if they had maps in the Wepartment shoming the different clasives of hamds this map womh inelmie, amd if they were all put in one amd coloured ditiereutly, that would be a grat wonemience tai the members of this Honse. In reference to the wording of the residution, I have use the words " licensed lamis" as distin. Eushed fivm " leased hamk." hat perhaps the termi" leasend lamds" would lee sufficient. amd I Wonh suggest the colouring of the map in regaril to the other lands, though, of couse: the limels Which remain in pasisesision of the Crown need mot lat coloured lexatuse all the others wonld be coloured.

Mr. HENWNFI'. The retamasked for by the hon. gentleman who has moved this reselution is. as he says, a very impartant one, amel it wond le very interesting as well ats very useful if it were compilen, but the hom. gentleman must know that this is a very heary umiertaking and will occupy a very long time to prepare eren the tist portion of it. The luaks from which these retmens nomhid have to be taken ame in use every day hy the otheers of the slepartment, ami it would be very incomvenient imberl if these lowaks: hat to be ntilized for the purposes of this return during othice hous. The only men who conle do this work satisfactorily are the permane:at otticers of the department, and, as hom. gentemen know, they are precheled by the Civil Serviee Aet from doing any extra work after office houss, 1 mention this only to show how long it will take to bring this retmm ilown to the Honse. if the hon. gentlemandesires it shouhl he prepared. 1 dio not see much objection to the first protion of the motion. With regard to the second portion, I really think that, if the hom. sentleman consider: it in idl its bearings, he will find that he is asking rather too much for me to promise. The last map Which was issued from sur department two or three months ago, was drawn on a scale of 12 miles (1) ath inch, and it was about the si\%e of the (herks tahle. To do what the hom. gentleman has asked properly. would repuire a map twice that size, that is. is miles per inch, imel that wombl take at lons time to prepare, at least tive or six monthe. The information the hon. gentleman asks as to the survered and sublivinted por-matp which hats atrealy been prepared. This work is always kept prosterl up, and this map I exhihit shows everything up to the first of this month. It showed every township that has loeen subdirideil ia Manitoha amb the North. West. as well is in the Ratwist ibelt of british (onlumhia. There is a fresh issile of these maps every month. (onseghently the hom. enteman will not reguire that infmontion. Then he desines to have shown the leases painted in green. and so om. There wouk le no objection to this. and hot mach labour wohld be involved, hat these are eontinually changing. and it would he ahsurd to go to the expense of a map of this kind. Which would ine of no ase after a certain date. The lamis and leases are constantly heing given up, and the vailwity lants are being changed eontinually, so that a mapor this kind would he of very little use. Then. we have issuci fō̄il patents of hand, and it would refuire at weat leal of lalmur to show these on the map. If there were any other means hy which we could ohtain what the hon. gentleman rempires, other than what he proposes, whether he giving the mips we hate alrealy and placiner the sulsequent information on thein. or in any other way. I would be very glad to do it, hut to prepare a miep for that special purpose I ath afratid would $l_{\mathrm{n}}$, utterly impossible.

Mr. EDCAR. I think the hom. Minister must have misumderstond me if he thought I desired to accomplish anything ont of his reach. I am glad to hear him say that the return can be mate, even if it takes some little time. As to the map, he says there is in existence me recently made. lify should not that he utilized for this purpose: He satys it is a map on a scale of 12 miles to the inch, amb as large as the table. I atm sure that will he a very goml map and we need not have another. Then he tells us that he hats a mat, which shows the lamels granted and sold for settlement.

Mr. DFWHONEY. No. I did not say that. I said all the lames sublivided. A great lead of that territory has not heen surveyed yet.

Mr. BinidR. As far as the map is concerned. I think a cony of the latrge map to which the hon. genteman refers would answe. rery well, and 1 think the objection that the ralway reserves are continually changing is noreason why we shonal not see what they are on the map up to the date when the return is mate. The laying down of the Indian reserves, and the forest parks, and the lines of railway on this map, will be a very goon thing to have done. I do not want to propose anything out of reason to the department, but 1 would like to know what other part except the grants the Minister thinks wouli be ditticult to put on this map that is in existence. I think a map of that kind wombl le very useful.

Mr. DFWIONEY. I am satistied that on our present map all the railway lines are shown.

Mr. EDBiAR. But not the ralway reserves:
Mr. DEWONES. So. the ralway reserves are not shown. They emold he shown dery easily on any of our maps. Of course the leases conlil he shown without much difticulty, lout to show all the lames patented would lee ingorssible.

Mr. EDDAAR. With the permission of the Homse 1 will leare out that part. I see there is a lifficulty in that respect.

Mr. DENDNES. If the hom. member wil conce to my oftice we can arrange it hetween char selves, and I think I will he ahle to satisfy him.

Mr. EDM:AR. I accept the suggestiom.
Mr. LAUKIER moved the adjommont of the ilebate.

Motion agreed to. and dehate anljommed.

THE LONIONX ELEETTION.

Mr. ANTHER. As a matter of privilege, 1 beg to move:
That the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery do attend hefore this House forthwith, with the return of the last election in the City of London, in the Province of Ontario, tugether with all poll books and all other papers, letters, documents and memoranda which may have been transmitted to him hy the returning officer and received by him since the despateh of the writ of election, and copies of all letters sent by him to the returning officer.

Motion agreel to.
Mr. LISTER. In commection with the previous; motion, I heg to move for :

1. Copies of the voters' list for the Electoral District of the City of London upon which the recent election for such district wis held. ${ }^{2}$. Copies of the judgnent given by the revising officer on objections taken to the names of Lewis Allin, S. F. Glass and James P. Moore and 220 others on said voters' list, and which ?29 names were subsequently struck off the said voters' list by the revisinge officer, on the hearing of the objections, but which were nevertheless printed on the said voters list is the subject of an appeal, together with copies of the notices of objection to such names and copies of the evidence taken before and decision given by the revising oftiger on each such name. 3. Copies of all proceedings in appeal taken to the County Court judge from the judgment of the revising officer on any or all of such cases, together with any judgment or decision given by such. County Court judge thereon. 4. Copies of the judgment of the Queen's Bench Division. High Cuurt of Justice, matario, in the matter of an application to said court for it mandamus to gaid revising officer in respect of the said rotes or any of them, together with eopies of the judgment of the Court of Apyeal (Ontario) in respect of the same inatter.

Mr. SPEAKER. I am inclineal to think that this motion, realing it from the Notice Papere ats 1 do, is not one of the character that the hon. gentleman can press as a guestion of privilege. The other motion, I think, is one which properly enough might be presented on the ground of privilege: lint this motion, which is one for prepers, ought to he mowed. 1 think, when it is reached in its proper orver on the Notice Piper.

Mr. DAVIE: (P.F.I.) I mulerstam, Mr. Speaker, that you do not give any decision. but merely express an opinion. I think that if you look at the practices and precedents. you will finl that my hom. friend is perfectly right. There is no distinction in principle leetween an Oreler of this House made to an ofticer over whom the Honse has control. for certain papers affecting the privileges of the House or the seat of a member. and a motion for an Ahlleses to His Vixcellency praying him to lay hefore uscertain papers. The oliject of hothmotions is the same: it is to olititin materiats on which action may le taken ly this Honse with resperet : the seat of a member, which comes distinctly and properly within the range of those questions khownisipuestionsof privilege:and therearesmanyprecerlents for this that I cannot conceive of wiohe. friend heing raled out of order. I rook occasion to look through the Euglish precerlents to-day, and I fiml that in all cases where the seat of a member is affected. motions of this kimi are reccived---not movel sulstantively in any di. rection, lout merely for the purpose of ahtaining matueriats by which the Honse may for:m all opinion on the catie. My hon. frieud his moved that an Order of the House be issued, and it has heren granted to him. instructing the Clerk of the cown in ( hancery to proluce eertain papers before us: Int when these papersare before us, another notation would have to be mate on them. This is merely a formal matter, at any rate. When my hom, friend gets the materials which will inform the Honse of the facts, then I suppose he will le prepared to make some sulstantive motion, which may or maty mot he alceptahle to the Honse. for ennuiring into those fatets. But, as I umerstami. he is now movine for papers to inform the House of the ficts with respect to the seat of a member recently elected. Who has tatken his seat: and therefore it is not only distinctly a question of privilege, but it comtes within some of the cases which have ahealy heen established. I would call your attention to the general rule lad down in May, at page 2 Es :

[^13]leges of the Honse, they have alwas instantly heard him. The latter part of this statement, it need scareely be said is limited to hreaches of privilege committed during a discusiont. ar so immediately hetore it, that no earlier onportunity of making a complaint had arisen; as. for example, an insult or assant upon a member, or any suddenact of disorder. In such cases, debates have been interrapted by eomplaints of breaches of privilege. Blat in other gases. equally atfecting the privileges of the Honse. but of liss immeniate uryency, the matter is ordinarily brought forward, without notice, at the commencement of mblic business. Such priority is conceded on the asemmption that the carliest opportunity hats been taken for bringing such a question before the Honse. which preedales previous notice ; and that the dignity of the Honse demands its immediate consideration.'
Then he goes on to saty. at pare obll :

- It has heen said that a question of privilege is. pros onery, out not admitting of notiee: but where the circmistances have been such as to enable the member to sive motice, and the matter was nevertheless lmin fide a question of privilege, precedence hats still heen conceded in it.
lon, Sir. hate atrealy ruled that the matter on which my hon. frienil is moving is a question of privileare. The House has passed a resolution that an atticer appear hefore it with certain papers. The question heing one of privilege, and the House hating made that order. 1 respectfully submit that if it is neeressury to ohatin other papers in order to inform the Honse of the facts bearing on the question, my bon. friend is entitled to move for them without notice, the subject-matter of the motion being a question of privilege. The practice hias loen carried further in this larliament than in Fincland. Those who were here from liss:3 to lss- will remember the case of King's Comnty, P.F.I. . which was proceeded with withont notice. The same was ilome in the case of Queens, N.B. following the precedent of the Muskoka case some years previously. In every case the House has assented to questions affecting its privilegres or the seat of a member leing proceeded with at once. It will take some time to get these papers, amd ats the question affects the seat of a member, it seems clesirable to have the facts before us, to enable the Honse to vindicate its privileges.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I suppose mobsely floubts or misumberstamls the rule which the hon. gentleman has referred to, that matters of privilege may ine dealt with without notice, especially in cases of urgency: But I muderstood the hon. gentleman to say that he had precedents covering this catse. If so, he has omitted to mention them. The cases which the hom. gentleman has referred to, and which were dealt with in this House, with regarl to King's, P. F.I. andQueen's, N. B., involved questions relating to the performance of duties by ofticers of this House, who were muler the inmediate and summary jurisoliction of the House. In those cases, or in any other cases of that class in which the hoon. gentleman says we have extended the Finglish rule. I think we have not extenced the Finglish rule. We have been quided by the fact thit the proceerlings and conduct of a returnjuy ofticer were under review. In the New Brunswick calse the ultimate olject of the motions mate was to hring to the bar of this House the returning otficer, either for the judgment of this Honse for the manner in which he had discharged his duties, or to recquire him to amend his return. The same was the case in regard to King's, Prince Elward Island. With regard to the motion which the hon. gentleman has just made, that the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery attend this House with the pipers. that oomes within the same rule, the Clerk of the Crown being an otticer of this Honse. But, Mr. Speaker, there is nothing. I think, to justify the hom. gentleman's argument that becanse the motion affects the seat of a member it shonld therefore have priority and he proceeded with without any notice. The hon. gentleman states the proposition that coerything that affects the seat of a member of this House is a matter of privilege. and thence he argues that erery step that may he taken relating to the seat of a member may be treated as a matter of privilege and be prowender with without notice. In other words. Without the slightest notice to this Houst: a member may rise and move that amother member's seat be vatated. I do not think there is anything to justify a principle of that kind. on to justify a motion withont notice for an Andiess to His Fixcellency for a document tobe furnished by a person who is entirely beyonl the control of this House. Fien if it were su. I think it would be ton important a step to take withont anaice. It is guite as mach a matter of privilege with us that the: House shoull he informeal what is the business before it, athl what procecolings are to he taken to assail gur stats.

Mr. LaURIER. The hon. gentleman has just lat down a proposition which, if true may warrant the conclusion he hats drawn from it. He says that anything that affiects the seat of : memleer is not a matter of privilege. I have always malerstond the rule to be that. if anything was hrought to the attention of the House affecting the seat of a member. it was a matter of privilege and should be proceeded with at once. and yout, Mr. Speaker, have alleady so ruled. My hom. frieme has mate a motion which is the first step towards the proceeding affecting the seat of a member. What is the use of the motion which has been carried unless it serves to bring to the attention of the House semething that will affect the seat of the member: If that proposition is correct, and it seems to me it camot be successfally controvertel, anything comected with that as a matter of privilege must be proceeded with, and, in that case, the other motion of my hom. friend is also in order.

Mr. SPFAKER. In reference to the motion which has been passed by the House that the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery shall attend, dec., on looking at the precedents, I came to the conclusion that that motion could be taken up out of its order, that is, because it was a command to one of our officers to appear with documents that might atfect the position of a member of this House ; but I have carefully examined the precerlents, and I do not find any to justify a motion on the Notice paper ordering certain papers to be producell. some of which are not in our custonly at all, being taken in the nature of a question of privilege and justifying its being taken out of its ordinary course. That is my conclusion, though of course it is for the House to say whether I am correct or not.

Mr. LAURIER. I would ask you to reserve your decision on that until Monday:

Mr. SPEAKER. That is the decision I have reached. If, on further examination, I find I ann wrong, that will be another matter, but I have examined our own precedents and the Finglish precedents as well, and 1 have not found any case where such a motion as this has been allowed to be taken out of its corvise. I suppose that some of these papers will he prorluced by the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery when he appears here. It seems to me that the other papers are not of such a kind as to justify my ruling that the motion for them should be taken out of its ordinary course, and particularly because I do not think the question would be prejucliced loy its not being taken out of the ordinary course, as no doubt it will he reached on Monday next.

Sir JOHN THONPSON. As to the order for the (lerk of the Crown in Chancery to appear forthwith, I suppose it will he impossible to carry that out to-ray.

(ANADIAN CATTLE IN RN(iLANU.

Mr. LANDFRKIN. I would call the attention of the (iovermment to a cablegram which was placed in my hands showing that Canadian cattle had been seheduled in Fingland, and the dealer in Liverpool has telegraphed to the elealer in Montreal to see to this. This cablegram is dated the 17 th, and it is at matter of great importance, so that I would be glad if the fioverument can tell us how the matter stamils.

Mr. TUPPER. In comnection with the part of the cattle traide which is concerned with the department over which I preside, that is, the shipping of Camadian cattle, I have had no intimation that such a thing has happened. I was handed at private Iespateh when I was coming into the House, of the purport the hon. gentlemin has statel, but it appeared to imply rather that the prices had been affected ly a possible fear that this scherluling would take place. but I have reason to doulit the truth of this because the most cordial relations exist between my department and the department in England as to the shipment of cattle, and we have no intimation from the English diovermment that such it thing is to take place.

Mr.' LANDERKIN. This should be made known in the interests of the shipper ats well as of the dealer, amd it would be well for the fiovernment to lay this before the House hefore it aljoums to-day.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I melerstand that the hon. gentleman is interrogating us in reference to some private despatch which we have not seen, aml conseduently about which we camoot say anything.

Mr. LANDERKIN. This despatch is dated Eilinburgh, and stys :
"Diseased stoek markets. Exercise great caution."

THIRD RFADIN(iN.

Bill (No. E) further to amend Chapter 9 of the Revised Statutes, to encourage the development of the sea fisheries and the building of fishing vessels. --(Mr. Tupper.)

Bill (No. 12) respecting the Departments of Marine and Fisheries.-(Mr. Tupper.)

SUPPLY.

Mr. FosilkR moved that the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed tor, and Honse resolved itself into Committee.

(In the (ommittee.)

Inspector. .................................. . si., ino
Mr. McMULLFF. I notice that the office of inspector has been abolished.

Mr. FOSTER. We had up to lately two financial inspectors whose dhty it was to inspect, the Government Savings Bimks under the Finance Department, and the lost ()ttice Siavings Hanks. For some time past we have alopted the policy, in the less important of these, upon the death or resignation of a keeper of one of these hanks, of transferring it to the Post Oflice Department, and that hats gramally lessened the mon her of banks maler our control. Mr. Tims his. therefore, heen superathnuated, and we propose from this time out, to do with one inspector.

Sir RI(:HARI) (ARTWRIAHT. What amouht did Mr. Tims receive:

Mr. FONTER. Sisun , I think. I forget what his age w:s. No allitions were made to his time. He has leen in the service since (inferlemation.

Sir RICHARD (ARTIVRIGHTM. How do you oltain the salviug here of si(0):

Mr. FONTERS. Mr: Graham was superammated last year, and the sal ring is in commection with appointments consequent upen that superammation.

> Country Savings Banks, New Brunswick, Norad Scotia, and Prince Edward Sslaud-Salaries ............. sin, ino

Mr. MoMULLEN. Could the Finance Minister state how many of these are in existence. What number have been remorel cluring the last year, and are they decreasing, of is the mumber remaining about the same:

Mr. FOSTERR. During the last year, I think there has been hut one transter. We do not make the transfers arbitrarily. hut only as vacancies oceur by death or resigmation. Year hefore last, several important transfers were male. No addition is heing male to the number of banks umber this management, and the transactions, so far as income and outgo are concerned, are shown in the fictafle reports.

Sir RICHARD (:AR'TWPIGHT. How much have the deposits in the sarings hanks heen reducer since the list of July:

Mr. FOSTTER. 1 will give the hon. gentleman the deposits and the withdrawals from the lst of July up to date. The deposits have heen 86,7 in3, excess of withctawals over the deposits in the eight months have been just about $$ 800,(00)$. This shows a decided change for the better, that is, so far as we are concerned, in these last eight months, as compared with the year period for the three years preceding.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What has been the reduction in the Post Office banks?

Mr. FOSTER. In the Post Office the receipts were $$ 4,622,982$; the withdrawals, $54,701,713$; it has been almost ia halance, the deposits being within $\mathbf{$ 8 0 , 0 1 0 )}$ of the withdrawals.

Sir RI(HARD)CARTIVRIGHT. Them, the total withlrawals all told are about $S(0) 0,1 \times n):$

Mr. FOSTER. SB(M),(MK).
sir RICHAKD) CARTWRIGHT. SBOM,(x) in one and sing, (ON) in the other, as I understanh.

Mr. Fostrer. The total makes about an even SS(M), (HK). Taking the whole of last year, 1890-91, the withirawals exceeded the depmsits hy pretty

Sir RICHARD) CARTWRIGHT. Thisisacomrenient time to ask another question. The hom. gentleman stated to the House the other day that vaions rates, ranging from 4 per cent to $4 \frac{1}{s}$ per cent, most of which. I presume, expires within a few months.

Mr. FONTER. On the lat of July.
Sir RICHARI) (ARTWRIGHT. I would be glad to hear from the hon. gentleman what the policy of the diovermment is with respect to this sim of $$ 10,(M O), \mathrm{MN})$, which is maturing within a few months. Boes he propose to renew it, and. if so, in what shape: on does lie propose to negotiate a new losin:

Mr. FOSTER. I maty siy in the tirst place, with reference to the gross sum which is now on tempurary loams, in round numbers, slo. © (NO. (KN). that it wats not all contracted for the purposes of the current year. As my hou. friend knows, last June. I think, when he asked me. I stated across the House that we hat about tsono, (Mo), I think, on temporary loans, and towards the end of the year an alditional $t: 200,000$ was taken on temporary loans: so that for the purposes of last year about $\pm 1,($ nh $)$ (KN $)$ was taken on temporary loans. The remainder has been loaned during the present year and all expires, as I said, on the lst of July next. I camot sity now rery definitely what will be done at or near the expiration of the periods of the temporary loans. The reasons which largely influencen me in not making a permanent loan last year, still exist on the London market, and it is a question which will have to be decided within or about the time, as to whether it is hetter to renew or continue the temporary loans for another year, or go upon the market for a permanent loan. It will depend on the indications of the market at the time. I may say that. so far as I can see them now, 1 would lie rather in favour of not going on the matket for a permanent loan, but would rather be in farour of contimuing these for another year, mintil the condition of the market had hecome more fatoorable.

Sir RICHARI CARTWRIGHT. As I inderstand, the withdrawals from savings banks have not altogether been stopped?
Mr. FOSTER. No.
Sir RICHARDCARTWRIGH'T. They amount to about $\$ 100,000$ a month, perhaps a little more. So hy the lst July, if they do not diminish, there will be six0,000 more to be provided, and of course something to be provided after that date. I note in ardition, that the hon. gentleman expects to redcem $\$ 2,178,000$ of lelst that falls due in 1892-93, and he also asks for about $\$ 3,000,000$ for capital expenditure on railways and canals. These sums together amount to between $85,000,0$ (K) and $\$ 6,000,000$. It appears to me to be a rather questionable policy, having $\$ 10$, $000,(000)$ floating loan, to increase it by $\mathrm{Si}, 000,(100)$ or $8(6,000,000$. That may possibly be much more to the detriment of the public credit than to contract a loan, even on slightly unfavourable grounds. If the hon. gentleman hid no debt to redeem, if he had no capital expentiture to pay and no probable deficit on sinking fund aceount, I do not know that it would matter so much : but it is quite clear that he will have a good many millions to provide for.

Mr. FOSTER. There will he something more to be provided, io doubt: but my remark holds good even in that event, and we shall have to lepend on the temper of the market. If we go with a permanent loan at an unfivomable time, we shall have to stand the loss for a lengthy period. If we take a temporary loan, until there is a more favourable market, even if we pay higher interest in the end. it is more adrantageous. The whole matter is being rery carefully considered: we are taking the hest of alvice, anil we shall have to be governed, I suppose, by the advice given us.

Sir RICHARD( $A R T W R I G H T$. In connection with this matter, I should like to ask the Minister whether it is the case, as was stated, I do not know on what authority, in some of the English financial joumals lately, that from some cause, probably from the collapse of the firm of Baring Bros., it considerable portion of the 3 per cent loan had been thrown back on the hands of the Govermment. I shoull like to know if that statement is correct ?

Mr. FONTER. That is not the caise.
Sir RICHARI) CARTWRIGHT. Then I understand that no portion of the 3 per cent loan is in the hamds of the fovermment, either directly or indirectly:

Mr. FONTER. Not gne dollar of the : $:$ per cent loan issued has come back.
Sir RICHARDCARTWRI:HOT. Bint the whote was stated to have been issued.

Mr. FOSTER. No. the whole was not issued. We took power to issue so much, but we issued one million less.
Sir RICHARD (ARTWRIGHT. Then the Government were authorized to borrow $\{4,(00), 000$ :

Mr. FOSTTER. $\pm 1,00,000$ less wis issueil than was authorized.

Sir RICHARI) CARTWRIGHT. Then you issued only $\ddagger 3 .(6)(0,0 \times 0)$ :

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHTT. Then $\mathrm{t}_{\mathrm{t}},(4 \mathrm{n}$, , OOO remains on hand unissued?

Mr. FOSTER. $\mathbf{f l}, 000,000$ remained unissued.
Sir RICHARDCARTWRIGHT. I was under the impression that the loan was only $\pm \downarrow,(K N),(M N)$.

Mr. FOSTER. $\pm 5,000,(0)$ were authorized, but $\mathbf{x} \mathbf{4}, \mathbf{0 0 0}, 000$ only were issued.

Sir RICHARD CARTUPIGHT. Then the statement quoted is entirely unathorized "

Mr. FOSTER. Yes.
Sir RICHARI) CARTWRIGHT. And no portion of the loan remains in the hands of the fromernment?

Mr. FOSTER. Not a dollar.

Cummission for payment of Public Debt. $$ 36.20$ os 0 as Mr. Mr:MULLEN. Is this paid to agents as eommission on payment of interest:

Mr. FOSTER. Ies, it is paid to our agents.
Mr. MoMULLEN. The Minister stated that one contract with our finameial agents wonld expire shortly. When loes it expire?

Mr. FOSTFR. Ist Jannary next.
Sir RICHARI CARTWRIGHT. The Minister, 1 suppose, is able to give the House some information as to what he is groing to do. Do you propose to continue the present financial arrangement with Bating $&$ Co., or is it intended to make any alteration:

Mr. FOSTER. The notice required under the arangement, one years notice. was given, so that we are placed in a position to make a new arrangement prior to lst Jamuary, 1893. Steps have aheady been taken looking towards a new armangement. I am not in a position to state at present what will be the result.
sir RICHARD CAR'TWRIGHTS. I may remind the committee that when we appointed the High Commissioner in London, it was distinctly stated from the other side of the House that the intention was to effect a large saving in the management of loans through the agency of that gentleman. That was at that time the policy of the Govermment. On that point the hon. geutleman can inform us, no doult, as to whether it is the intention of athe fowemment to utilize the High Commissioner more than his services have heen mate available of late, or whether they propose sabstantially to contimue the ohl arrangement.

Mr. FosTER. I may state to the committee that we use the High Commissioners services as far as they can lee mate properly arailable; but I :ippose the hom. gentleman will agree with me that the matter of raising and managing loans on the Lomion market is a very delicate and very dithoult one, and I an not prepared to state that we are going to make an arrangement which will remer it unnecessary for us to have aceredited agents.
sir RICHARI) (ARTWRIGHT. I will not disprate the wishom of the conclusion: but it was not the conclusion foresharlowed when the question was up as to the use of our High Commissioner.

Mr. MoMULLFN. When the question of the High Gommissioner wats lefore the House. I remember the First Minister stated that we would he able to utilize the High Commissioner's services in paying interest on the mational debt, and in that way a large amount would be saved to the comontry. On that assmance the House gave its consent, without further eriticisn, to the appoint ment of the High Commissioner, and passed the itelus for salary and expenses. After that, the Minister of Finance stated that a contract had Teen entered into with a party in London to act as finamcial agent for payment of interest on the public delit, and that nutil the contract expired it would not le possible to utilize the High Commissioner for that purpose. That contract will expire on Ist January next. While I agree with the Minister of Finance that it is not possible to negrotiate lons in Lonton through the High Commissioner, his ottice aml his staff ciu lie utilized for paying interest on the mational delt. A very large amonnt coull be saved in that way. We thil that no less than $\mathrm{s} 3(0,0 \mathrm{~m})$ is paid to the timancial agents simply for handing over to bondholders interest for the half year on their securities. The High Commissioners ottice can be well used for that purpose. and it comsiderable sum sutued to the country, and anyone reading the reports must come to the conclusion that it would he casy for the High Commissioner's office to perform that duty, without any alditional expense or additional staff.

Brokerage and Commission on purchase: for Sinking Funds........... S12.441 Si

sir RI(CHARI) CAR'TWRICHT. What is the total amount of this 3 per cent loan for sinking fund purposes:

Mr. FOSTER. I cammot give you the information just here, but 1 will take a note of it.
Si: RICHARD (ARTIVRIGH'T. 1 want to know exactly how it has heen invested in the 3 per cents up to the list of January.

Mr. FOSTER. I will give you the information later.

Sir RI(HARI) (ARTWRIU H'T. Also. I would he glad to know from the hon. Minister in what fashion this very large purchase of sinking funds. amounting to ahout $f(H),(K)$. sterling, are now made. Ilho are the commissioners at present for the sinking fund :

Mr. FOSTPER. For the guamateed loams, the trustees are : the High Commissioner of Canada. Lord Revelstoke and the two Unier secretaries. of State for the Colonies and the Foreign Otfice. For the unguaranteed loan, the trustees are: the Receiver (ieneral for Cinala, and the agents, baring Brothers, and Glyn, Mills, Currie & Co. For the: Hritish (oblumbia loan, which is a small matter, the trustee is Sir Rohert Veorge W ynilham Herbert. K. (.).

Nir RICHARD(CARTVRIGHT. What arangement has leen mads with these gentlemen? I presume the agents were sufficiently well paid by the bookerage amd commission. Are you paying the other gentlemen specific amounts for their services:

Mr. FOS'leR. I do not think so: I lomot timl any amount for it.
Sir RICHARD C:ARTWRICiHT. Perhaps mot. but I would he obliged if you would eninire. I would be glad to know what the arrangement is. 1 would also like to know in what methol this large sum anomang to $\therefore$ the purchase of the sinking fund. Are the commissioners of the agents in the halit of alvertisimes to know at what rates they can ohtain it. or th they just simply ing to the market and buy from their brokers:

Mr. FOSTER. They purchase at the market rate through their lnokers.
sir RICHARD (ARTWRIGHT. In open market?

Mr. FOSTER. I think so.
Sir RICHARI) CARTWRIGHT. Are yon quite sure :

Mr. FOSTER. That is my impression.
sir Rl(HARI) ('AHTWRIIHT. Well, I will empuire later on about that. They have managed among them to preserve the most extmondinary uniformity in the purchase, I olserve, for a very long period of time.

Mr. FOATER. Socks have heen very even of late.

Printing of Sominion Notes

$\qquad$ Sti,00 (0)
Mr. SOMERVIILIF. Might I ask the Minister of Finance if the new contant has been marle with regatel the thinting of Dominion notes:

U:. FosTER. Ves. I may say that tembers were insited amd that the new contract has virtually heen given. It is engrossed and reanly for sighature, amd will be signed in a day or two.

Mr. sonler II ILF. Wias there more than ons tembler:

Mr. FosTRR. Two tenders.
Mr. © OMERVILIE. Did the lowest temderer get the comtact:

Mr. FositER. The lowest temderer : matically the lowest temleres.

Sir RICHARD) (.ARTITRIGHT. Practically : That may offer rom for wide ditference of opinion. I would ask the Minister. are the sinking fumls all hehl in stock, or is any part of them heh in lumels?

Mr. FOSTER. There is a difference as between ghamanted and unguaranted loans. For the guatanted loans, dehentmes and stocks are hehl. and guite a large proportion of what is held are dehenture:. These are held by the bank of England in trust for the trustees. With reference to the unguaranteed loans, the debentures are bought and cancelled and turned into inseribed stock, and the cancelled debentures and the certificates are sent here to Ottawa. The debentures are bumed, acemrling to the Audit Act, and the certificates ineld by the Receiver General, and this stock camnot Ire transferred without deed of trinsfer and presentation of the certificate, so that everything is safe.

Governor General Secretary's 0 ffice..... $$ 10.5620$
Mr. FOSTER. I mily say that there is nothing abnomal in this. The only increase outside the statutory increase being Slow for the messenger. He has heen a very long time in the service, and his long services have been recognized in this way.

Mr. MoNULLEN. What was his salary before?
Mr. FOSTHR. S5(\%) I think.
Privy Council Office. 338,523
Mr. FOSTER. There are three statutory increases at 850 , two promotions from third-class to second-class, involving increases of Se2(x) and S3in), and the appointment of two new clerks, one at 5350 anil one at $S(X)$; the total increases being $\$ 1,600$. The decreases include $5(0)$, the difference between the salary of a second-class clerk and a third-class clerk promoted; 8380 , the difference between the salary of a clerk who resigned and that of his successor: $\$ 200$, the difference in the payment of messengers : and $57 \pi$ in the salary of a chief clerk; making a total decrease of $\$ 1,3 \mathrm{jin}$ and a total net increase of \$295.

Sir RICHARD CARTURIGHT. What led to the need of additional officers:

Mr. Foster.

Mr. FOSTER. The work of the Priry Comeil Otice hat increased very rapilly, as the recorls show.

Sir RICHARD ('ARTWRISHT. In what respect:

Mr. FUSTRER. Nore dociments and mone tramsuribins. In the other departments-- in my repart ment. for instance- the number of ofticers is not increasingowing to an efficient heal and an equally efficient leputy hean. but the work has greatly inereased. It is so in all the departments. and an increase in the work of the various departments matually callses an increase in the lriny commor, through which the drouments from all the departments have to pass.
sir RICHARI) (ARTWRIUHT. The infer. ence to le dawn is that the deputy head of the Prive Comucil is mot equally etficient, hecanse the increase of work there requires an increase of onticers.

Departurent of Militia and Wefence...stis.512 50

Mr. PATERNON (Brant). I see there is a de. erease in this rote, and aiso in that of the Customs Department. Is this supposed to be accomplished hy the reconstruction of the (abinet: If so, perhaps there could be another reconstruction all romal which would result in further economy.

Mr. FOXIER. I will give the explanation. from which the hom. genteman can draw his won inferenue. There were nine statutory inereases amounting to 8 tion, aml one at sso..no. Then there is a lecrease of sion in the salary of a thind-class clerk, and $\vdots 5$ in the salaty of a chief clerk: the net decrease loings sisi.ant.
' Department of Priming and Stativnery..............................s르, 442 g Sir RICHARD (ARTWRTGHT. We would like some explanatien of the changes insolved in this reluction.

Mr. FOSTER. There are thirteen statutory increases, sion, also one at sun and one at sin; a new appointment, $\mathrm{S}(x)$ : and an addition to the salary of Mr. Roxborough, who performs the cluties formerly performed by Mr. Bronskill : making the total increases 51,395 . The decreases are the salaries of two chief clerks at $\$ 1,0$, 0 each, ambl those of two secomi-class clerks, $\$^{0}, 600$. Then, there was a salary twice roted for $1891-92$, which drops out : making the total decreases $\operatorname{si}, \mathrm{i}(x)$, and the net lecrease 86,30 .

Nir RICHAR1) CARTWRIGH'T. Who are the two gentlemen who are dropped?

Mr. FONTER. Mr. Bronskill and Mr. Senécal.
Mr. SOMERVILLE. Is Mr. Roxhorough paid the same salary as Mr. Bronskill received !

Mr. FOSTER. No. He formerly receivel $$ 1,350$, and he gets $$ 200$ additional.

Sir RICHARI CARTWRIGHT. Am I to umderstand that it is now possible to discharge the duties of this office with 21 clerks instead of 25 who were employed under the former regime". It strikes me that there must have been some extravagance in that department, when we find it possible todecrease the staff by nearly 25 per cent. My own conviction is that the functions of this lepartment might easily have lreen discharged withont the gentlemen who have disappeared, and with great pulsic allvantage.

Mr. sOMFRVILLE. Is the place which was fonmerly heh by Mr. Senecal now filled:

Mr. FOSTER. Ves, Mr. McMahon tills that otfice at the salary he had.

Sir RICHARI) CARTWRIGHT. Are we to umlerstand that these reductions are to lee permanent or only pro trimpore.

Mr. FOSTER Oh, yes, permanent.
Mr. SOMERVILLE. Is the position which Mr. Me.Mahon formerly heli, that of assistant superintemlent, filled?

Mr. FOSTER. No. I do not think it is. I think he simply performs the additional duties, keeping his salary and place.

Department of the Interior.......... $80.15,1+00$

Mr. SOMFRVILLE. When maty we expect the report of the Commission appointeil to incestigate certain affairs in comection with the lnterion Department:

Mr. Fostien. That is the report of the comsmittee of the Privy Conncil who were appointed to investigate the irregularities in the luterior Depart. ment: The report has been made amd has been emborlied in an Order in Council.

Sir RICHARI) (ARTWRIAHT. Vndoubtedly we are not in a position to discuss the details of Civil fovernment. until we have that report. When can it be laid on the Tiable:

Mr. FOSTER. I think there is no whjection to lay it on the Table.

Sir RICHARI) (ARTMRIGHT. When sall that be done:

Mr. FONTER. Before we come to comurrence.
Sir RICHARD (ARTWRIGHT. Concurrence is generally taken in the last days of the setsion.

Mr. FOSTER. I think we can lay it on the Tible next week.

Sir RICHARD (ARTWRIAHT'. Some of these items should be allowed ws stamd over, so that we maty le able to discuss them intelligently after the report is laid on the Table. This report may contain, and I hope it will contain, sons important recommendations and information as to the working of the Civil Service. We have found great irregularities to exist, as was supeabommantly proven last session. and it is important thet we shoull have some report hefore us from these gentlemen who are experts chosen for the purpose, so that we may see if any means have presented themselves to them by which the departments can let kept in better order. and ats to the recomstruction of some of the departments. I have always thonght that our system was very vicious, that we had ton many tien of mediocre ability who were well paid, and too few good men who were poorly paid. We might leare wer one of these items in order to affiord an opportunity for discussion.

Mr. FOSTER: It might take place on the vote for contingencies.

Sir RICHARI) CARTIWRIGHT. I understand that this discussion will not take place until we have that report ?

Mr. FOSTER. les.

Mr. D.AVIEN (P.E.I.) I Woult like to know from the Minister of the Interior how his department stands. We mulerstome that the Deputy Minister was suspended, or was in such a position as to relieve him from the discharge of his duties as deputy. I understand that he has been re-ippointed to the department, and we ought to know what his position is and what pay he receives. lecause that is not known to the House. The hon. gentlenan should state what position the late deputy recupies. whether he was suspemied, whether he has been reinstated, what position he ocupies now, what salary he is receiving, and whether he is to he reinstated in his former position.

Mr. DFWWNEY. The Deputy Minister was never suspended. hat for a certain time he did not attend to the duties of the department. He placed a letter in my hands stating that, if 1 thoaght his resignation shoull te accepted. he was willing to hamil in his resignation. I lid not consider that his position was such that I shoulol accept his resignation. amh. comsequently, ifter the report of the sub-committee of the Privy (obincil was mate he retumed to hiss luty, at my repluest, and he has been acting as deputy ever since. As som as the report asked for ly hon. members comes down. they will see the prisition he oceupies.
 he has never heen suspemberl, that he has never ceased to be depmety or to get the pay or dischatge the work:

Mr. DFWUNES. I sail he has been actine as deputy, hut he has received no salary from the time he plated his letter in my hambs until the present moment.

Mr. N:AVIF: (P.F.I.) boes the hon. gentleman mean to say that the resignation of the Deputy Minister was placed in the Dinisters hands and not accepted. that this gentleman did not attend the attice for a short time. Int at the Minister's suggestion came back to work aml accepted his oll position? If course, if he is doing that, he is receiving his old pay.

Mr. DEWWNEL. If the report were brought down. hon. gentlemen would see where the complication has arisen.

Mr. DAVIEN (1'.E.I.) ('amot the hom. gentleman tell us now what the complication is :

Mr. DEWDNEV. A recommendation was mate that the deputy should be reduced to the rank of a chief clerk.

Mr. DAVIEN (P.F.I.) On what grouml:
Nir IOHN THOMPSON, On the grounds which appear in the report of the committee.

Mr. DEWIDNEF. But it was foumd there was: no provision for another chief clerk, and consequently there was no provision for his sidary, so he has received no salary from that time to this. pending a reconsideration of the matter.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Then I understand you have uo deputy at present? The Government propose to reduce the deputy to the position of a chief clerk, but I presume they intend to have a deputy head of the department?

Mr. DEWDNEI: Yes, but it was foume that there was no provision for another chief clerkship and conserfuently he did not receive his pay, but I asked him to continue to act as ileputy, as I had a right to do under the Act.

Mr. I)AVIFS (P.E.I.) If the committee degraded the deputy to the rank of chief clerk and then the Minister asked him to work as a chief clerk, he should receive the pay, but I do not see that the hon. gentleman is asking us to vote the salary of a chief lerk, though he is asking us to rote the salary of a Deputy Minister. It appears that he must be intending to pay this gentleman as Deputy Minister. I shonld like to know if it is his intention to ignore the recommendation of the committee and to asi the House to vote the salary for this gentleman as Depucy Minister?

Mr. INEWINES. It is not my intention to interfere with the report of the committee at all ; hut what I slo intend to do is to ask that the deputy may he reinstated in his old position.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Before that is done, I suppose. by the rules of the department which authorize the Minister to pay a clerk who is doing the work of an inferior ofticer, if the deputy has been appointell hy the Minister as acting ileputy, if he has been called upon by the Minister to discharge the duty of a deputy, although he is degraded to the rank of a chief clerk, he will nevertheless be entitled to the salary of deputy.

Sir JOHN THOMPNON. There is no rule of that kind. There is merely a rule that it may be awarded under certain circumstances, but nobody is entitled to it.

Mr. SOMERVILIf. Has the late Deputy Minister been drawing a new salary for some months past since the investigation before the Public Accounts Committee?
Mr. DEWDNES. I said a few moments ago that he has not drawn a dollar since he wrote me that letter.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. Will the Minister explain to whom the Deputy Minister's salary has been patid?

Mr. DEWDNEEY. It has been paid to no one.
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. As I understand it, the Minister informs the House that after all that has passed, it is his intention to recommend his late deputy, or his acting deputy, or his interim deputy--I do not know what Mr. Burgess is just now-but it is his intention to recommend him to be reinstated in the full power, and pay, and perquisites of his former office.

Mr. DEIVDNEI. Jes, that is my intention.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I do not propose to discuss the matter, because we are not in possession of the information on which we could properly discuss it. The Committee of Council must have had some facts to go on, or they never would have taken the responsibility of degrading a depaty head down to the position of chief clerk. That may be assumed prims facieby the House. Now, if the Committee of Council acted in that way and degraded this gentleman down to the position of chief elerk, I want to know why the hon. gentleman is asking Parliantent to vote his pay for that office, or if he is going to ignore that recommendation for the past as well as for the future, and to pay his deputy head in defiance of that recommendation? I am not saying whether it is right or wrong; I do not know the facts. I want to know from the hon. gentleman what the facts are, ar:l what his intentions are, and this is the proper tine for him to tell us, without any evasion.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. There has been no evasion, if the hon. gentleman will allow me to add a word to what my colleague has said. My colleague has not evaded the question. The facts are as he has stated : that on investigation, following the investigation by the Pablic Accounts Committee, the Council decided that Mr. Burgess should be deprived of his otfice and made a chief clerk. The Auditor (ieneral has oljected that no chief clerks salary was provided : the chief clerkships in that department were all filled; he could not, therefore. get the salary of a Deputy Minister hecause he had Been depriven of that otfice, and he conld not get the salary of a chief clerk becanse that was not provited by Parliament. I submit to my hon. friend that there will be time enough, when we ask the House to vote his salary, to discuss whether that salary is appropriated or not. In the meantime, nothing has been received from the committee, because the case has not come before Council. My colleague is stating his own riews as to the position Mr. Burgess occupied.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I admit there was perfect frankness on the part of the Minister as regards the future, because he said it was his intention to reinstate, so far as he could, this gentleman in the position of deputy, and he was asking the House to vote his salary.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Not now.
Mr. DAVIEN (P.E.I.) But, from the statement of the Minister that he intends to recommend the reinstatement, we assumed, until the lealer of the House intervened, that he was speaking the mind of the Government. I was desirous of getting some other information as to what rate the hon. gentleman proposed to pay Mr. Burgess for the work he has been doing as chief clerk.

Mr. DEWDNEY. I have not made upmy mind what recommendation to make with regard to that.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. Has the late deputy ever acted as chief clerk? Has he not all along discharged the duties of Deputy Minister?

Mr. DEW DNEY. Yes. He has never acted as chief clerk, because there was no chief clerkship vacant to appoint him to. If he had been appointed chief clerk, I should still have asked him to carry out the duties of deputy head.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. In reality he has discharged the duties of deputy head.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The duties of deputy are very often discharged by a chief clerk when the deputy head is absent. Every clerk has to do the duties assigned to him.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) After all said and done, it is rather making a burlesque of the enquiry and the report of the Committee of Council, because it is a rather important function which they assume of interfering with a gentleman occupying such a very high position as deputy head, and degrading him. Then we find the head of the department quietly but very determinedly ignoring that report, and reinstating the gentleman in the position from which he had been degraded. I am not saying whether the original recommendation was correct or not, but I do mean to say that there appears to he a most marvellousdiscrepancy between the action of the Minister at the head of the department and the action of the Minister who reports on his deputy.

Mr. DEWDNEY. I consider that the public, the department and the Giovernment would suffer if I had to dispense with his services.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Your colleagues on the Commission did not think so.

Mr. McMULLEN. DoI understand the Minister to say that Mr. Burgess was discharged from the position of deputy head, or only that he sent in his resignation! Was not Mr. Hall acting as deputy head some time during last session ?

Mr. DEWDNEI. I said, for a short time, while that letter of Mr. Burgess was held by me.

Mr. McMullen. How long has Mr. Hall been discharging the duties of deputy head?

Mr. DEWDNEY. Perhaps a month or six weeks.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I really think that before we proceed with this discussion as to the Department of the Interior, we ought to have the report of the Committee of Council before us. It is quite evident that though there may be no contradiction between the First Minister and his colleague, there is a strong conflict of opinion, and we ought to have an opportunity of judging for ourselves on what grounds the Minister at the head of the department dissents from the opinion of his colleagues, and my hon. friend intimates his intention of overriding that. Be that as it may, I think we really must have the report of the committee, because the question is one of great importance. I was present myself during the investigation which took place at the Public Accounts Committee, and I must say that there appeared to have been, for it long period of time, very great laxity of discipline in the control of that inportant department. It has swollen, as the House will see, to enormons proportions, it has great interests committed to it. My own judgment in the matter, primit farie, would rather be with the Committee of Council, hut I would like to fortify my opinion by knowing the reasons which induced the hon. gentlemen to arrive at their decision, and I trust the Minister of Finance will let this item stand until we get the report of the Committee of Council.

Mr. FOSTER. I quite agree with my hon. friend that he should have an opportunity of seeing that report in connection with the Interior, when it comes down. But there is no salary being voted here for Mr. Burgess or any other person ; and whatever may be the outcome of that discussion, I suppose that my hon. friend will not deny that there must be a deputy head, and he must have a salary.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. We do not deny that.

Mr. FOSTER. It is admitted that the officers are necessary, and whatever the result of the discussion may be upon the report, it will not affect the position of certain officers who are necessary in the departiment.
Mr. SOMERVILLE. I must have misunderstood the Minister of the Interior when he answered

Minister of the Interior. Whether the House shoult vote that appropriation or not. might depend entirely on the decision of the Government in the matter. A conclusion should be reached by the fiovermment before they are in a position to ask Parliament to make an appropriation. It seems to me that this item shoulh stand untila different practice has been adopted. From the facts elicited by the Public Accounts Committee which came hefore the House to a iery limited extent, imded, we know that Mr. Burgess was suspended, wwing to the irregularities in the payment of permanent cierks for extra services, contrary to provisions of the law. Is it the intention of the liovermment, in the restoration of this deputy to his original position, to alter the law and to authorize that to be done: We ought to ascertain if the diorermment intend to allow permanent clerks to neglect their ordinary duties in order that they may do work after hours for an extra allowance. It is important that the House should know wat the determination of the dior. ermment is, and if this House is to exercise effective supervision, we shonly know what the views of the foremment are on this matter, not while the riews of the iovermment are in the clouds. hat after they have come to earth. I think the fiovermment must decide this matter before they ask an appropriation. It is preposterons to come to the committee and siay: We want this appropriation, although we have allowed the ottice to remain vacant for six months, on the plea that it is for an ofticer after lst July: If the iepartment was one just created there might be some excuse for coming to the House and asking for an appropriation. of course, the fovernment might not have been able to secure a suitable ofticer, and wished further time. But mon such statement is minle now. The otice has mot been filled. The department is not properly organized: it has not been properly organized since the report of that Commission was made. It has leeen unorganized or imperfect ever sinee, and the fiovernment now comes and asks the committee to make an appropiation for an imperfectly organized department, when they see the comlition it is in at the present times. In eny opinion, the committee is not discharging its luty, is not exercising sufficient control over these matters, unless it calls upon the Govemment of perform its duty before asking an appropriation for this office.

Mr. FOSTER. I think the hon. gentleman is scarcely consistent in his reasoning. He spent tive minutes in trying to impress on the committee the fact that during six months, or thereabouts, this department has been imperfectly organized. The hon. gentleman found fault because there has not been a deputy head, and then he complained becatise the Government has asked an appropriation for the purpose of perferting the organization. The hon. gentleman wishes to know if it is intended that permanent clerks shall be paid for extra services, and before an appropriation is voted he desires thatinformation. The hon. gentleman wasinformed, he believes and knows that whatever punishment was put on Mr. Burgess by making him a chief clerk in the department was punishment for doing that very thing, and that is proof which is plain enough and certain enough that the Government does not intend that permanent clerks shall be paid for extra services. If Mr. Burgessis name was here as deputy head amd the amount was being roted in that way for salary, the hon. gentleman's objection would le gool, that before this amome was appropriated the report should be brought down ami discussed : hut evergone knows that to have a depart ment well organized and carried on there must he a deputy head, or some one doing the work of the deputy head, and we are simply asking for that rote and that organization. I think it is retined reasoning to ask that this item should stamd for mo hetter cause than that assigned.

Mr. FRASER. I see the force of the argmant of the Dinister of Finamec. But this is really a vote for Mr. Burgess. becanse the Minister of the Interior, the head of the department, says he is brumel to restore him to his old prosition. Hat not the Minister specifically stated that it was his determination that Mr. Burgess shouhl he restored -and the (iovermment dill not repuliate the statement-I would have had uo tronble in the matter, and I would have looked upon it exactly as the Minister of Finance has done. I have nis objection that this deputy should be continued. If the Government found they made a mistake in deprsing him in the first instance. and if the report of the Commission shows that he acted wromely, and they accepted that report. I am homed in silmit that the (iovermment sall their mistake amb admited that this Commission knew more about. this department than they dil. The Minister of Jnstice stated that Mr: Burgess Was suspembed only until the Commission reported, and the (iorermiment now seems to think they were wrong and he should le restared. Owing to the stuhbonn fight of the heal of the department and his determination to restore this cluputy, irrespective of the: fiovernment or anyone else, this rote is sulistantially made a vote for this particnlat deputy.

Mr. SOMERVILILE. Were not other ofticers in the department. Besides the Deputy Dinister, degraded for the same reason that the deputy was degraled: I would like to ask him at the same time, if all the ofticers whose conduct was investigated luefore the Public Accounts Committee have been reinstated: We know some men there who had for years been drawine money in the names of dead men. There were also officers of the department drawing salaries under tictitious names, in the names of men and women who hand no existence. Now I would like the Minister to state to the committee if all these men have leen remstated. and if it is not a fact that some of the officers other. than Mr. Burgess have also been degradeal.

Mr. DEWDNES. No other officer was degramed from the position which he then oceupied, ann they are all still in the service of the department.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. Were the shlaries of some of the officers not reduced:

Mr. DEWDNEY. The wataies were not reduced, in any case.

Mr. SOMERVILILE. Was not the sulary of Mr. Nelson reducel ?

Mr. DEDVDNEY. The salaries were not reluced. but they were docked half of their silary for two months.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRI(:HT. The Minister of Finance has brought up a question of considerable importance, in the discussion of our Estimates.

The yuestion which is hefore us at the present time is this: We are called upon to vote $$ 9,0,100$ for the Department of the Interior. This is the proper time-a time set apart by custom and usige in Parliament to discuss the proper administration of that department, and it is for that reason-not with any view to hamper or detain the House--that I desire to have the information which the forermment have obtained from their Committee of the Privy Council as to the doings of the former hean, ani the gentleman. who, as I understand, is to le the future head of the department. That information is distinctly germane to this item, and I think we ought to have it. I repeat that this is the special time at which that information should tre in the hamls of the House.

Mr. DAVIEs (P.E.I.) The question, as 1 umderstand, is, that the hom. gentleman was asked to allow this purticular vote to stand, so that it might Ine discussed when the report comes down. Perhaps this would be the letter item to allow to stamd.

Mr. FOSTEK. All right. let it stand.

Qffice of the Comptroller of the NorthWest Mounted Police

Sir RICHARD (ARTWRIIH'T. Before that resolution is adopted. I may say that I notice that the increases are statutory, and 1 am not going to discuss that question. Let me ask, is this under the control of the Minister of Justice or the Department of the Interior?

Mr. FOSTER. Cnder the control of the I'resident of the Privy Council.

Sir RICHARI CARTWRIGHT. I was about to ask for some information with respeet to certain proceedings that I see have taken place in the North-West in reference to the officer in charge of the Mountel Police. We may as well have the information in comeetion with it now, and also information as to what policy the ciovernment inteand to adopt with regard to that force. The force is to a large extent thoroughly military, and there is some sort of anomaly in it being under the control of a thoronghly civil department. I shall he glad to know what information the leader of the Honse, or wherer is in charge of that department, has to give on these two subjects.

Mr. FOSTER. I suppose that would come up equally as well on the vote for the service itself. With reference to the ontcome of the Commission, I believe its labours are ended, but the report is not yet before the diovermment. With reference to the policy, that we can discuss more fully when we come to the rote for the main service, hut I think I may say here, that the ciovernment have in contemplation a gradual and prudent diminution of the force.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I had reference to the question of policy as to what department this should be under, and in connection with that I may say that I would be glad to understand to whom this investigation has been referred. Has it been conducted by civil officers or has any military officer been associatel in any way in the investigation.

Mr. FOSTER. Julge Wetmore was the commissioner, and he has carried it on solely.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I have no desire in the least degree to impugn the capacity of the hon. julge who has charge of the investigation: but whether he is an able judge or not, is not altogether the question. It appears to me that in an investigation into the doings of an othicer in charge of the force, it would have been expedient that one or more military men should have been associated with the juige. I am rather surprised to find that the matter has heen wholly conducted by the civil authorities. The civil authority is an excellent anthority, I have no doubt, in weighing the relative merits of the evidence submitted. but in a matter of this kind I think it would have heen in the interest of the service if some militiry man of note and eminence should have been associated with the judge: for questions will arise as to military discipline which no ondinary civilian could he expecterl to be intimately acquainted with.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I think the House will be in a better position to juige of that when the report is laid on the Table, and when we see what the nature of the charges is. I can express the highest opinion of Judge Wetmores competency, and in the faith the pullic would have in any enguiry he should manage. I think the House also will assume that contidence when they receive his report. and that they will come to the conclasion that he was thoroughly competent to carry on the investigation. I am quite sure that we will disenss the matter with more satisfaction when we have the paperts.
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I am not proposing to discuss the report. I am merely raising the question as to the policy of investigating matters relating to the disuipline of a military fore wholly hefore a civil conmissioner. It appears to me that was a very questionable policy, to say the least of it. I think it would have been hetter if a military man had heen associated with the judge. When will this report he laid on the Table of the House! I presume we will not discuss the affairs of the Mounted Police mutil this is really.
Mr. DAVIN. Mr. Chairman, unfortunately military law does not apply to the Noith-West Mounted Police, and 1 do not think it would have been the least advantage to Judge Wetmore to have had a coadjutor of a military character. He had to enquire into certain charges that were not really cognizable at all by military law. I wish that military law did apply, and if so many of the evils that were complaned of, and in Consequence of which that Commission was established, couli not have existed. I had something to do with the comducting of the enquiry before Judge Wetmore. and I must say, that so far as I saw, he is a thoroughly capable judge and entirely impartial, as I would expect any judge in this comntry to be. But the charges are not charges which can be judged ly military law-I wish they were. Some of the charges, if judged by military law, would at once call forth the strongest condemnation, because they would be a pulpalle violation of the established laws in military hoodies. But the Commissioner of the North-West Mounted Police has a power exceeding the power of the Commander-in-Chief of the British army, as I have pointed out here; and as the military law does not apply, I do not suppose it would have been of any advantage to have had a military coadjutor. I hope, in common with the hom. gentleman, that we shall sonn have that report. The evidence, I may say, has heen of such a character as 1 think to justify Parlianent in expecting an early report, and early action on the report. The evidence before that Commision has been more conclusive and more full than we could possibly have expected, and I camot myself possibly anticipate any other than one conclusion. and that is the conclusion consonant with the proposition that has been more thin once laid down by myself in this Honse.
sir Johs THOMPsON. The repert is not expected for tive or six weeks.

Sir RICHARI) CARTWRICHT, Are we to maderstand that it cammot be hurried up any somer ?--lecause that will hring it to a mather late perion.
Sir IOHN THOMPSON. 1 will ascertain more detinitely by Monday.

\text { Ofice of the Autitor (ieneral.......... } 386,03 \text {. Ex) } sir RICHARI) C.AKTWRIGHT. Was there any special reason why the Auditor General's Report could not be bronght down when Parliament met?

Mr. FOSTER. We were in session very late last year.
Sir RICHARI) (ARTWRII:HT, That would not affect his work.
Mr. Foster. It did affect it.
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The reason I put the question is this. Toall intents and purposes the Auditor Generals Report has been converted into the Public Accomnts: and unless some arangement can be made for placing that report in the hands of Partiament about the end of Jamary, when I hope we shall meet in future, our work would le wholly at a standstill. This little brohhure which we call the Public Accomuts has practically discharged its functions. Therefore I desire to know if there is any likelihood in the futurs of the Auditor Genemal's Report leeing delayed as it has been on this occasion, or whether this is purely an exceptional wewrence?
Mr. FOSTER. I think this is purely exceptional. I had a conversation with the Anditor (ieneral about it, and he gave me as the chief reason the lateness of last session, and stated that he would take steps to have his report brought out in normal years in good time. I hope that I shall not offend the sensililities of my hon. friend from North Wellington, when I say that the Auditor General hopes in future years not to have it so large as it is this year.

Department of Customs.  $36,505

Mr. SOMEREILLE. Is it owing to the fat thixt that department has gone into other hands, that a decrease is brought alout here? Are we to have more rigid economy than we have had?

Mr. FOSTER. The statutory increases, and the increases from the promotion of two third-class clerks to the second class, amount to $$ 1,095$. As against that, the salary of one chief clerk, amounting to 毅,250, is dropped, and there is a decrease of $$ 30$, being the difference in the salary of a thirdclass clerk and that of a new appointment. The net decrease is $$ 1,65 i$.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). It was generally supposed that the Minister at the head of that department was one of the most economical we had, amd it is surprising to find that there is to be a saving in this department. I see it has worked in both ways, because the Minister who has changed places has made a dectease in the new department as well. Perhaps the acting Minister of Customs will explain how he can do the work now with a chief clerk less than was there in the time past.

Mr. BOWrLL. In the reorganization of the department, the commissioner was superamnated. the assistamt commissioner was promoted to the commisionership, the accountant, who was a chief clerk, was made assistant commissioner, and the accountant's branch of the department hereafter, as provided for in these Estimates, will be carried on by two tirst class cletks, one to take charge of the expenditure and one of the income or revenue depurtment. Sow the work is being done by one firstchas clerk and one secoul-clase clerk, but it may lee that in a short time the latter will be promoted to a tirst-class elerkship. In dividing the work in that way, with the supee cision of the commissioner and assistant commissioner. I did not deem it indvisible or necessary in the interests of the service that a chief clerk should be appointed. The third class clerk to whom the Minister of Finance has alluiled will be lrought in at a lower salary, and in this way the saving will be effecterl.

Mr. somerville. Then we are to maderstaml that all these foonomies were made by the ex-Minister of Customs and not hy the new Minister.
Mr. Bowfll. I do not desire to cake any credit to myself in comnection with the decrease. These arrangements took place lefore the change was made. When the new Minister returns and takes charge of the department, he will tind it as now arranged, and no doubt he will administer it as economically as I have done.

Mr. Paterson (Brant). 1 understand that these economies have been the result of the superammation of the commissioner?

Mr. BOWELL. Yes, and no doubt that will balance the account. The commissioner was over 70 years of age and had servel alout 3 3 years, and if anyone was entitled to a retiring allowance, I think he was. I camnot speak too highly, from the 13 or 14 years' experience I have had of Mr. Johnson, of his ability and integrity. Without any exception, he is an officer in whom anyone conlil place the most implicit contidence. I never knew him in that time to deviate from what he considered to he his duty.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) He almost bordered om stubbormess.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). I see there are two second-class clerks more and two third-class clerks less. I suppose that is owing to promotion :

Mr. BOWELL. Yes.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Then after a while there may be two more chief clerks.
Mr. BOWELL. That could not be this year, unless an appropriation for them was made.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Certainly : but what the hon. gentleman speaks of now as a matter of saving and economy, there being only one chief clerk now instead of two, may possilly only be a temporary comolition of things which may te changed by promotion.

Mr. ROWELI. That does not follow: Youare nct going to cross the floor within a sear, and consempently it will not take place.

Mr. MaMCLLLEN. There was some investigation in regarl to the customs in Montreal. Is the Government going to lay that report before the House: There was an incestigation as to some irregularities or reorgamization in Montreal.

Mr. BOWELLL. That does not come under this heading at all. That would be a very proper question to put when we come to the general Estimates aml are asking for a rote for the Montreal oftice: but this is the inside service. The only investigation that took place in Montreal was in order to see what economies could he effected by retiring the ohler men and allowing the younger men to do the work as they were doing, as I stated last year. When the hon. gentleman comes to that pirt of the Fistimates, he will find that from $\sin$, (10) to sls, (MM) less is asked for the port of Montreal this year, as the result of that investigation, than was expented or asked for the year before. This was purely a departmental report, and is not of a character generally laid before Parliament. There may be no ohjection to laying it before the House. but all the hon. gentleman will find will he that an otticer is tox old and his work could loe done by someone now in the service without any increase of cost, and that some othicials at Point St. Charles or at the Camadian Pacitic Railway station or somewhere else could be dispensed with.

Mr. MeMLlles. We will reach these items in a few days, and las anxions to know, before we seached them, whether it was the intention of the disvernment to present that report to the House. We have heard to-day that important reports have been made which should be laid before the House. I do not wish to put a question which would trouble the hon. gentleman, but I think these reports should le in the hands of the House.
Mr. BOWELL. I say frankly that I did not intend to lay that report hefore the House. 1 did not comsider it of a nature to lay before the House. There are scores of reports of that character in reference to various ports, but there may be no objeetion, if the House desires to have it, where they are not contidential.

Mr. MeMULLEN. I think such an important report should be laid lefore the House. If Parliament is to deal with the affairs of the comery in an intelligent way, it is desirable that all the information in the hands of the Govermment, or furnished to any department by any committee, should be laill lefore the Honse. We are labouring in the dark. What is the object of these investigations? No doubt the hon. gentleman thinks it is the duty of the Minister to deal with these Commissionsand the House has no right to know anything about them. I say the people's representatives have a right to incestigate these matters.

Mr. BOWELLL. It is umecessary for the hon. gentleman to get so excited or to fight a shadow. I did not object to laying this report before the House, but 1 may tell the hon. gentleman that, if every inspector's report is to belaid on the Table, the heal of the department will not be so likely to receive the information he should receive in connection with the customs or any other deparmaent. This was not is speeial commission: if it were, 1 think the argment of the hom. member for Wel. lington would be quite correct. This was an ordinary inspection by the officers of the deparment. such as is made whenever they visit a port. There are many things in these reports that it womld not be adivisable to lay on the Table, becanse if an inspector or an othicer does his daty faithfully. he will make statements in reference to the management of an oftice. which the probvibilities are ten to one that he would not make if he knew they were to be made public, beeanse it wonld bring him into contact with merchants and the affairs of almost every importer in the country: 1 think a moments reflection will concince the hom. gentleman that miless it is a special case, amd he wants special information, as a rule these reports should not he laid upon the trable.

Department of Marime ...................in, is

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Does the hon. gentleman expect that he will le able to make a permanent sating in that department?

Mr. TLPPER. I think ultimately there will he a saring in the fusion of the two hameles.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.1.) There is apparenty a decrease of $$ 4,(10)$ in in th hanches.
Mr. TUPPER. There have leen racancies of highly-paid ottieers, and their places, will be tilled by lower class otticers.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.1.) Will the hom. gentleman state, when he gets the department reorgamized on the basis he proposes, whether there will let any saring, anl if so, what, in its alministration :

Mr. TUPPER. I am not in a pesition to state the exact amome, but the amalgamation of the two branches will, in my opinion, retluce the statti. In the first place, we do not reguire two depury heads. Then with reference to the correspomdence brancin and cont ingencies hranch. I think there will be a sitring effected of a not incomsiderable sum.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) An accomatant:
Mr. TUPPER. So, the accomant's hameh will practically he repuired. We have not a very heary staff in either the Marine or the Fisheries. and the accountants work is so distimet that 1 think it will always le kept as it is. Indeed, I may say that the otficers in looth hanches doa great deal of the work, and now work continnomsly after ordinary homs.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Then, if we allow for the superamuation allowance of the late lepity Minister of Fisheries, there will practically lo no saving at all to the commery.
Mr. TUPPER. I sey the oppesite. 1 am only giving my opinion. I say the fusion of the two departments wild emable us ultimately to manage the correspondence of both ilepurtments at a less cost than at present. The contingent accounts, I think, will necesstrily be reducel by the amalgamation.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) lowes the hom. gentleman think the saring will amount to the amount of the superanmation?
Mr. TUPPER. Oh, yes.

Mr. PATRRNON (Brant). Woes the hon. gentleman remember the year when these departments wore liviled:

Mr. TLIPlPRR. In IRs.i.

Mr. PATERNON (Brant). Does the hom. gentleman feel any regret that he should ever have done so, in face of the protests of the (Opposition, at a losis of some St. (KA) during the pist yeats:

Now, here is an otficer who was dismissed last vear, and we are asked to cote a salary to pay another man t" till the satne place, although another man has not been appointed. If we had the reprost of that (rmmission it might show us whether it was necessary that another man should he appointed in that position. We are asked in the meantime, virtually, to put the cart before the horse, and to go and vote salaries in face of the fact that the Civil Nefrice Commission has been appointed to investigate the positions of all the civil servants. I think that while that report is in the printers hands it is a very irregular proceeding for us th go on passing these items.

Mr. FON'TER. Does my hon. friend suggest that we shomld pass none of these items until we get the report of that ('ivil Service Commission.

Mr. Mr.MLDLI.F.N. The hom. Minister should Ie a little more prudent, in view of the clisclosures made last year, instead of rushing us into Committee of Suply and asking us to puss items in face of the fact that a report of vital interest to this Honse and the country has not yet been placed in the hamls of the members. IVe should have that report to guinle us hefore we pass any more of these items.

Mr. SOMERVILLI: There are a number of other employes in the P'ublic Works Department whose conduct was investigated liefore the Public Acconnts Committee, and who, I lelieve, were either suspended or dismissed from the service. I think we anght to have the information contained in that report hefore we are asked to vote this money. We ought to know whether these men are still suspended or have been reinstated.

Mr. UULMFI'. Every one of these men have heen dealt with according to the recommendation of the committee.

Mr. DAVIFS (P. F.I.) Have other men been appointed in their places, and if so, who?

Mr. Trppris.

Mr. FONTER. They were dismissef, and have left their offices.

Mr. SOMERVILLF. It is currently reported that ia number of them have been reinstated.

Mr. OUIMET. Mypredenessor, the acting Minister, has taken back Mr. Dionne as a teluporaty officer, after an investigation hefore a matgistrate, ant he had been acyuitted. That is the only one who has been taken biack. I may state to the hon. gentleman that, heing guite new in the department, I have not been able to ascertain the full particulars of that case. It was considered that as Dionme had been acyuitted by the magistrate after an investigation, it is only fait that we should give him a chance to be reinstaten.

Mr. LAURIER. If he is not to Mame. he should be reinstated in his office insteal of heines made a temporary cleak.

Mr. DAVIEN (P.E.I.) I mulerstome the report of the committee was against Mr. Diomme. and he: Was prosecuted hy order of the Treasury Buari. The mere fact that the preliminary examination before the magistrate resulted in his getting clear. as it were is no evidence that he is guilty or not guilty. It is true he was discharged at that preliminary examination : I should he very sorry w say that he was guilty of the crime chargel--1 $1 /$, not know that-but the mere fact that he was sin discharged does not establish his imoneence. He may have heen discharged for thirty on forty reasons. such, for example, as that evilence wits not forthcoming : lut if he stands reported on as guilty of dereliction of eluty, the Honse is entitled to know why he is reinstated, and whether the particular charge agrainst him failed to lee established.
sir JOHN THOMRSON. The charge lefore the magistrate was unsuccessful, ani there wats every reason to believe that he ought to stimi in the position of a person against whom there was really no evidence of the crime from which he was dischatged. He was fairly entitleal. so far as that offence was concernea, to reinstatement. There had, however heen looseness in his comblact and irregularity in another sense, and it seemed proper not to reinstate him, but to take him on trial as it temporary clerk.

Mr. DAVIES (P. F.I.) it seems io me rather a curions comrse to adopt. I can hardly conceive the (inverment malertaking to prosecute an otticer until they were fully satisfied that there was a clear primat farie case against him. A report was made against this officer in the first instance. The Government alopted it, and then ordered hin to be prosecuterl. If prosecation was improperly instituted, a very great wrong was done the officer.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Sometimes witnesses swear differently at different times, as in this case.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Then if the (iovermment came to the conclusion that the prosecution was improperly commenced and the charge could not be sustained, the man shouhi inave leen reinstated.

Sir JOHN IHOMPSON. We do rat propose to reinstate him for the present.

Mr. LAURIER. If he is not reinstated in his office, the only inference to be drawn is that. notwithstanding that Mr. Dionne was discharged by the magistrate, still there was reason to pelieve that his conduct was not satisfactory. I would infer from the report of the committee which inrestigated the case, that his acts have not warranted the conficlence of the (iovernment in him.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. There were no new facts brought hefore the committee which investigated the case. We thought that the evidence given before the l'ublic Accounts Committee was sufficient to show that it was rlesirable, in the interests of the service that he should not he reinstated.

Mr. DAVIES (l'.E.I.) What satary is he now receiving:

Sir JOHN THOMIPNOS. He is now receiving $$ 1,(M M)$ a year.

Mr. DAMIES (f.t.I.) What was his salaty hefore:
 goon accountant, and quite capable of being a very etticient otficer.

Mr. PATERSON (Bramt). His employment is merely tempmary now:
sir IOHN THOMPSON. Ves.
Department of Railwas and Canals. . 54.310
Mr. SOMERVII.LF. Who is now secretary of the department?.

Mr. HAGAART. The deputy heml is at presont performing the duties of secretary.

Mr. NOMERVILLE. Wis the former seeretary dismissed from the public servite:

Mr. HAG(iART. Yes.
Mr. DAVIEK (P.E.I.) Who is now tilling Mr. Page's place:

Mr. HAGIiART. Mr. Trulean is acting as dematy heal and chief engineer of the canals, the appointment having been given to him about two rears ago. Only one salary is paid for hoth offices.

Mr. SOMERVILLAF. Who is filling the position of secretary, in place of Mr. Bramley:

Mr. HAtiliAR'T. It is mot filled. No one is tilling the position.

Mr. Mr.MULIAFS. How long hats it been vacant:

Mr. HAdiaAR'T. Since Mr. Bradley wins dis. missed.

Mr. D.AVIE: (P.E.L.) Who is discharging the duties:

Mr. HAG(iART. I inswered that lefore. The deputy heal is acting as secretary.

Mr: MeMULLEN. My object in asking this question was to ascertain how far it was necessary to appoint an officer to take the place of the gentleman who was dismissed. It appears that the deputy head is discharging the several duties of deputy heal, engineer and secretary. I think it would be well to continue him, and give him only the salary of deputy head. When one man is able to do the work of three men, it is apparent that there is little for each of the three officers to do when appointed. Have all the several duties devolving on the deputy as engineer, as deputy head and as secretary, been efficiently performed during the last six months?

Mr. HAGGART. The deputy head, some time hefore I was appointed to my present office, was appointed as chief engineer as well as deputy head, and his salary was increased to $\mathbf{S 6 , 0 , 0} 0$ a year. He is at present supervising the duties of secretary ; perhaps some one else in the office is doing the work, hat he has made himself responsible for it.

Mr. DAVIES (P. F.I.) Is it the intention to appoint another secretary?

Mr. HAGidiAR'T. I intend to appoint another secretary.

Sir RICHARI) CARTWRICHT, I notice in the Aurlitor 1 ieneral's Report that our attention is called to some proceedings comected with railways and canals which require consideration. If I understand the difference of opinion between the Department of Railwaysand the Auditor (ieneral correctly, it appears that consiiterahle sums of money have heen whanced to different contractors for works that have not heen excented. I should like to know from the Minister on what groumb these advances hate been manle and whether the Auditor General has stated the matter correctly to the House, hecatuse it apparas to me that the Auditor (ieneral is correct in saying that in making alvances for work that is not performed the door is opened very wide to all mamer of aboses. and there mast be rery great ditficulty in exercising proper supervision over expentiture if the Aulitor (ieneral is overridhen, as he appears to hate been by the report sulmitted.

Mr. HAfiliART. I suppose the hon. gentleman refers to three items: one to Davis & Son, si(1),(MA), another to Ishester & Reid, and a thim item.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIAHT. There is a further payment to bavis.

Mr: HACi(iART. If the hom. gentleman will discless this question at a future time. I will have full information in ny possession.

Sir RICHARD) (ARTWRIGHT. It is a question of policy, as to what the diovermment have been domg in the way of making alvances.

Mr. HAGi(iART. The matter is not within my personal knowledge, because I was not at the hear of the department when these alvances were made, except, perhaps, the last one, to Ishester & Reid. That, howerer, was not an adrance ; it was payment of money due under contract.

Mr. INEPUTV SPEAKER. I think the hon. gentleman should not discuss this question under this item.

Nir RICHARI) (ARTWRIGH'T. I cannot almit that it is not our right to discuss very fully a question of policy connected with alministration when such an item as the present comes up. I claim we have the right to do so, and I intend to exercise that right. This is the proper time and place to discuss the general question as to whether adrances shoull be made by the department for work not actually done. I do not propose to discuss the details of the matter; that I am willing to leave over. But the guestion that has been raised by the Auditor lieneral is a question of principle of the broadest sort: Whether the Govermment of Cinada are going to make advances for work that has not been performed? That is the question which he raises, and that is the question which I sulmit comes fairly enough in connection with this Department of Railways and Canals. The details will be lefore us when we come to consider the special item for which this advance may have been made.

Mr. HAGGART. As to the remarks of the hon. gentleman in which he states that an amount was paid for which there was no work done, I may say that no knowledge of that has come to me since I have been head of the department, and it is but justice to me to gire notice of it. On another item I will be able to give the information.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Let the item stand.
Mr. HA(idiART. How can this vote affect the question at all. There are looitems afterwards on which the matter can be brought up.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. There can be no ob, jection to pass this item.

Mr. LAURIER. Very well.
Committee rose; and it being six oclock, the Speaker left the Chair.

> Office of the High Commissioner of Canada-Salaries......................... si, 334

Mr. MaMULLEN. I would like to know from the Minister of Finance, when he expects the report of the High Commissioner to he laid on the Table of the House?

Mr. FOSTER. The report of the High Commissioner has heen receivel, but 1 have thought it better that it should be printed for the information of members, and it is now in the printing office.

Mr. McMULLEN. This is in accordance with the proceedings of this afternoon in general. We have been first passing items and then the information which Parliament should have, before voting the money, is promised afterwards. I think this item should le left over until we are in possession of the report. so as to see the duties devolving upon the officers in the Loudon oftice. There is considerable expense attached to this office, and I think we should have all the information before us before we are asked to pass this item.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not think my hon. friend should be unreasonable in this matter. I do not see how the information he would obtain in the report would throw any light upon the question of passing this item, for the salaries of the officers of the High Commissioner in London. If the question of the policy of retaining the otfice of High Commissioner were before us, and there were information in the report bearing particularly on that question, I could see the force of the objection. But that I understand is not a question that would come up at this stage.

Mr. MeMULLEN. The hon. Minister will admit that the duties performen by the High Commissioner in England are a proper subject of discussion in this House. If we are to discuss intelligently the expenditure, it is necessary that we should have before us all the information regarding the luties performed ly the High Commissioner. The question of the continuation of the office altogether depends upon the value of the services rendered by him to the country: and the moment that the House considers that the services remlered are not worth the expenditure, I fancy that it will dispense with the High Commissioner and his staff.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not think this is the proper time to discuss that question of policy.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Under what item womld the hom. gentleman propose to discuss it?

Mr. FOSTER. If we are going to disenss that question, I think it should be brought up in another way than under an item for the necessary expenses of the ottice.

Mr. LAURIER. Is it mot a good opportunity, when you are asking for the salaties:

Mr. FOSTER. It may he a good opportunity, but I do not think it is customary.

Mr. sOMERVILLE. Is it understool that these otticers of the High (ommissioner are paid the salaries when they are absent on husiness not connected with the office:

Mr. FOSTER. These officers, I understand, are not alisent on lusiness not eonnected with the High Commissioner's work. It is possible that some of these officers may have to do the business. of the office outside of the office itself : but these gentlemen give their whole time to the duties of the office, and are paid accordingly.

Mr. somerville. I suppose that the Minister of Finance will agree with me that if the head of the office follows such a course as that, it is altogether likely that those under him do likewise. If he turns to page 218-1) of the Aulitor (ieneral's Report, he will find that the High Commissioner set a had example to his officers, having been paid $\$ 10$ a day for 78 days' travelling expenses out to this country, as well as $\$ 243.33$ for his fare from Liverpool to New York, $\$ 266.65$ for his fare from New York back to Lomion, and $\mathbf{S 2 4 6} 6.65$ for other expenses, details not given. Now, if the High Commissioner is allowed to desert his office, being paid his salary and all his travelling expenses, in order to come out here to engineer the elections for the party to which he belonged before he became an office holder, then I suppose the officers under him would be entitled to do likewise. I think we ought to have particulars in regard to these matters.

Mr. FOSTER. The items are separately detailed in the most explicit way. Under commercial agencies, Sir Charles Tupper has been paid his passage out and back, and the regular subsistence, and my hon. friend knows quite well that sir Charles Tupper visited Washington on two occasions last year in connection with the Trade Delegation.

Mr. LAURIER. Is that the price you pay for your electioneering agents?

Mr. FOSTER. My hon. friend knows that they are paid hetter than that.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. I would like to know whether there are any outstanding accounts not yet settled in connection with this trip:

Mr. FOSTER. There are none.
Mr. SOMERVILLE. I understand that Sir Charles Tupper incurred a bill of about $$ 1,($ MN) for railway travelling which has mot yet been pail. At least, that statement was made in evidence at an election trial.

Mr. BOWELL. There wats no evidence thatit was incurred on account of the fovernment.

- Mr. SOMERVILLE. Do the (iovernment expect to pay this bill?

Mr. BOWELL. They do not. The aceount came to me when I was acting Minister of Railways, and I refused to recognize it.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. Then, if the Government refused to pay that account, I think they ought to refuse to pay the other expenses of the High Commissioner.

Mr. LAURIER. It is impossible to regard this payment as anything but a simple outrage.

Mr. BOWELL. Oh.
Mr. LAURIER. Ies, nothing else. Sir Charles Tupper is an ambassador to England, and it is a disgrace for a man in his position to descend into the political arena and stump the country as he has done. We discussed that last year and were overruled ; but no one expected to find this year that Sir Charles Tupper was paid $$ 10$ a day while electioneering for the Government. If the negotiations at Wiashington had had anything to do with his visit, there would be nothing to say ; hut it is simply a blind to say that he was here for the purpose of negotiations at Washington. When Sir Charles Tupper delivered ten or twelve mblresses in different parts of the country, and then claims $$ 10,000$ from the people, $I$ say it is a thing the people ought not to stand.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) 1 think we ought to have some expression of opinion from the Government with reference to this class of expenditure. I do not believe the Government themselves will lefend the action of Sir Charles Tupper in this matter. So far as his coming to this country to take part in international negotiations at Washing. ton is concerned, no objection has leen taken, but, while holding a diplomatic position and ostensibly holding the reins between parties, he descended into the political arena and took part in political discussions. He opened at a meeting in Halifax, where he abused the members of the Opposition with all the force of which he is capable. Then he tried to reach Prince Edward Island, but fortunately or unfortunately, as the case may be, he was prevented by the weather. He then travelled all the way to Toronto and delivered a party harangue in that city, and so he went throughout the country, and we find that he is paid his expenses, not while going to Washington on this international matter, but when he was engager in this party warfare in Canada. What is the difference between Sir Charles Tupper and anyone else who enters into the political arena? The distinction is against Sir Charles Tupper, because common decency should have prevented histaking this course. It is impossible for one of the great parties in the country to have any respect for our High Commissioner when he has descended into the political arena in this way. It is had enough to have to pay him 510,000 or $$ 12,000$ a year, but we are asked to pay his expenses when he is brought here to abuse his political opponents, when he is taten from place to place to support the party in power. The money is spent now and cannot be recalled, but I think we have a right to a declaration from the Government that this evil course will not he followed hereafter. I do not believe that any hon. gentleman on the other sile looks upon this expenditure as anything but an outrage of the worst kind. as it has been described by the leader of the Opposition, and when the people of the comntry are called upon not only to pay Sir Charles Tupper's salary in England, but also to pay his expenses as a political stumper, curried from place to place to denounce his opponents, they will say that it is an outrage. I think, therefore, we shonht have some statement from the liovernment in regaril to it.

Sir JOHN THOMPNON. The best way of meeting the desire of the hon. gentleman is to state what occurred with respect to Sir Charles Tupper's being called to Canada. It is not correct to say that he was imported into Canata for the purpose of abusing his political opponents. At the time he was summoned to leave England and to come to Canada, the prospect of negotiations at Washington was very imminent, and then, so far from his being imported for the purpose of taking part in the general election, there had been no dissolution of Parliament and a dissolation was not resolved on though it might have been regarded as possible at that period of the parliamentary term. The late Premier desired Sir Charles to come. not only to take part in these negotiations, but also to consult with the foovernment as to trale negotiations with other countries, in which he had previously taken part, and to inform the Govermment with respect to them. Sir Charles had hardly arrived at New York when the dissolution took place, and after that a later time was appointed when he and the delegates who went with him would be met at Washington by the Secretary of Statefor the United States. Thecircumstances which delayed the visit of those who went to Washington wereexplainell to the Houselastyear. TheSecretary of State, even at the late date at which he eventually fixed the meeting, was unable to meet those from Canada at that date, and Sir Charles Tupper, after waiting from day to day expecting that a day would be fixed in place of that which had been fixel, went to Washington to see whether it was possible that the date of the conference could le fixed or whether, his business in England being urgent, he should return there. The circumstances have already been fully explained, and I think it is unnecessury for us to say what course we will pursue in the future, because we simply meet the statement of the hon. gentleman by saying that Sir Charles Tupper was not imported for the purpose of the elections but in comection with these negotiations, and that, when he was smmoned. the elections were not necessarily imminent at all.

Mr. I.AURIPR. The statement of the Minister of Justice is not, I think, chatacterized by his usual accurace. I see here that Sir Charles Tupper charges his expenses at 810 a day from the enth . lamuary to the lith April. I assume that the enth danuary wats the day he left England.
sir IOH. THOMPNON. No: 1 think thet is the date of his arrival in New Sork.

Mr. LACRIFE: I think that must hate been the bate of his leaving Finglamel. Parliament was dissolven at the end of Jannary, and, moreover, if Sir Chatles Tupper hat left England for no other purpmee than whegrotiate with our neighhours to the somth, the moment he took alvantage of his presence hete to stef down from his position ats ambassalor of (ianadia and to enter upon the political arena. in all decency he should not charge the comitry for the stumping he did then. If he came here simply as an amhassador, there would be nothing more to say in regard to him than in regard to those who accompanied him to Washingtoin. They were discharging their duty to the comntry and no one has any fanlt to find in regard to them. hat there is a great difference between the position of Sir Charles Tupper and the position of those who accompanied him. It was their right and privilege to ahliress the electors and to give their opinion to the electors on the guestions at at issue, but, as far as Sir Charles Tupper is concerned, there is not a man in this House who values the dignity of his office who call sanction such a charge as this.

Mr. PATERSON (Bmant). My impression is that the lealer of the House is mistaken in what he says in regrarl to why Sir Charles Tupper was summoner to this country. My impression is that last year we secured the frank idmission that he was sent for to give his ainl in the election. I speak subject to correction. but I have sent for the IIn.u.caid.

Nir JOH: THOMPSON. The First Minister of that dat took the whole responsibility upon himself ami admitted that he asked sir Charles Tupper to address his constituents in Kingstom. I am stating the facts. however, when I saty that when sir Charles Tupper was called to this country the dissolution had not been decided on.

Mr. D.AVIFS (P.E.I.) The hon. gentleman has contined his reply to the statement that Sir Charles was not imported. as it is said, for the specific purpose of entering into the elections. Whether he was or not, we are not in a position to prove just now: we are houme to take the hon. gentleman's statement when he says that he was not. Assuming all that to be true, what answer has he got to make to the statements of the learler of the Opposition that he did come here, and when he ame he entered into the fray, that he had special cars placed at his disposal at the public expense, and travelled from one end of this Dominion to the other in special cars? He travelled in as special car to Toronto over the Govermment road, and then over the other roads at the public expense, for the purpose of delivering violent political diatribes against his opponents. It is alosolutely and utterly indefensible, and the hon. gentleman knows it well.

sir fOHN THONIPSON. I have merely to saty that that question was very fully discusied hatst session.

Mr. Mc:MULLEN. It would be necessiry to disenss such questions every session. If hon. gentlemen opposite are determined to perpetuate this kind of thing it will devolve upon the Opposition to see that this question is plainly brought. before the House and hefore the country. It appears that Sir Charles Tupper is sufficiently harefaced to ask this country to submit to an improsition of this kind, paying him Sild a day to cover travelling expenses. while at the same time he chatges, I see hy the way, for his car fare. S26i. While he is crossing the Athantic I am quite sure his fare on the steaner inchuled meals and attendance, and he atill goes on drawing over all that sio a day in addition $t$ ohis salary. It appears to me that the hon. gentleman has constituted himself a kind of political belshazaar who assumes all the dignity, and the position, and the responsibility of the one who lived years ago. Now, I do not think this is a matter to be langheal at : it is a matter that concerns the people's burdens. If hon. gentlemen opposite are prepared to assmme the responsibility of saying that the expenditure of these items is to continue in the future as it hats in the past, then it will only devolve upon us to bring it more forcibly lefore them year after year, until we either shame them into discontinuing it or deprive them of their positions and put other better and more economical men in their places. Now, last year the Finance Minister promised, or at least he gave a kind of illea. that it was the last time he: wonld ask us to rote a sum of money to keep Professor Fabre at l'aris.

Mr. FOST'ER. I promised no such thing.
Mr. MoMULLEN. There was a statement made that some alteration would le mate in the office.

Mr. FOSTlER. None at all.
Mr. MoMULLEN. I think you will have to turn up $H$ ansanorl on that question.

Mr. FOSTER. Som have to turn it up a long while before you find that.

Mr. MoMULLFN. Well, we can refresh the hon. gentleman's memory, because there was a long discussion about it. Howerer, we will take one item at a time. Now, with regarl to the High Commissioner, I contend that we should not proceed with these items at all. Last year I carefully read over his entire report, and I saw nothing in it that would warrant this country in continuing to pay the services of that gentleman in London. mess it was some very flattering remarks that he made with regard to the peculiar Havour of Canadian poultry that we sent over there. He said it was so very sweet and that it had such a kind of will taste, that it would be very attractive to Englishmen, and he thought that we would have an immense market in England for Canadian poultry. Now, for bringing that before the people of this country, we are paying him the magnifi. cent sum of 815,000 a year.

Mr. FOSTER. That is better than writing a bal letter to the Ecomomist.

Mr. MoMULLEN. I contend that this charge of slo a rlay, when he came over to Canada, is an mreasonable charge and one that we should not be asket to pay. If he had acted courteonsly, amd treated his opponents with that courtesy which one gentleman should extend to another, it would not le so bad. But as my hom. friend in front of me says, he abused his opponents in the most violent mamer, with everything that he could lay his tongue to, while all the time he was quietly draw. ing out of the treasury of this Dominion our money ats well as the money of hom. gentlemen opposite. they were paying a special train to take him about the comitry. It is an insult to the Opposition of this House to ask them to consent to a continnation of an expenditure of this kimu.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). Last vear I see this is the information I got with reference to this mat ter:

- Mr. Paterson (Brant). Perhaps the question is roo broad to ask whether Sir Charles Tupper was brought out at the request of the Government. But we will narrow the question down. I see that Sir Charles Tupper held a meeting in Kingston, at the close of which he said, according to the supplement of the Eimpire:

 Volnody here reirets it mone drephly than the hamble siviant of sit

 Sir hohn only showed that he thinks of the romitry brepore hinseld. Hr

"Some hon. MENBERS. Hear, hear.
Mr. PATERSON (Brant). I yuite agree with that. I know that Sir John would receive the warmest reception from a great many of the elpctors of Kingston. But here is the point I am at:

 ina single duty ta the cobltry, Aphatase That is why thave the

 Fupire

$\because$ Might I ask the First Minister, did the IIigh Commissioner tell the truth to the people of Kingston: did he say truly when he sail that Sir John Macdonald had sent him to that meeting and had sent a message with this gentleman who is a leading ciril servant of this country" That is a question that can be very casily answered, and if the First Minister will favour us with :t reply, then perhaps we might be able to follow it up with enguiries in other directions.
"Sir JOHN A. MACDONALI). Well, Mr. Chairman, I cannot resist the seductive tones of my hon. friend, and I may answer him: Sir Charles Tupper did go there at iny request. and he made the peech at my instance, and I fancy that his speech must have had a cousiderable influence, because in the previous election I was elected by a majority of seventeen, and after Sir Charles Tupper made this speech I was elected by a majority that only wanted seventeen of 500 . You see I was pretty wise in my generation in asking Sir Charles to go there and make a speech for me.
"Mr. PATERSON (Brant). You would be wise if you stopped him at that point.
"Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I will go a little further. and I will say that Sir Charles Tupper cane out from England to give us theadvantage of his, skilland influence and elonuence, at my special request."
Now, all that skill and influence and eloquence were not intended, I think, for the mission at Washington; I think it was to le used in another part of the gloles, if think it was to be used at Kingston, in Nova Scotia and other places. I find also that when we came down to other accounts, the question was askenl with reference to the contingencies of sir Charles 'lupper at that times, and I asked this guestion:
- Mr. PATERSON (Brant). With releremee to these contingencies, I wish to ask for information to which I think we are entitled. When the High Commissioner was taking his tour thruugh Canada, it was stated in the press that he travelled by special train. I would like to know whether that was the case, and if su, what was the cost of that train and out of what fund it was defrayed?
"Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD. I ammot aware that any of the High Commissioner's expenses were paid out of the public service, but I will enguire."
That is about what tramspired last year with reforence to this matter, and it would appear that the then First Minister thonght that some of the items: would not again aphearr in the Pablic Aceonnts. But it appears they are still in the Pablice Aecomots, and that is why information is lefons asked for.

Mr. Mc.MCLLEN. On page If $4 \pi$ of the Auditor (iencral's report these items are detailed. They are increasing every year. The postage of the London othice of the Wigh (ommissioner is ssizis, or about $1(k)$ per month. (an ther Winister of Finance give any explanation of this item.

Mr. Fos'reR. I think that is all umbasomathe, considering the amome of correspmolence amd number of docmments that are pested at the High (ommissioners oftice. We must reorllect that immigration literatare which is meant for a certain portion of deat Britain and for the continent is: all posted at his office. Lmmmerable letters are received for information as to different parts of Camada. Pimphlets are kept at his office, aml these are sent out in reply. I have no doubt at all as to the perfect legitimaty of the item for correspondence and postage. This is what the Hish Commissioner writes this year with respect to the increase in that item:
" Resperting the item for postare and stationery, the work of the office is inereasing. A further sum for pristage and stationery is required. The utmost comome will be exercised in this expenditure compatible with efficienes. but an extra sum is considered absolutely necesary. The increase in correspondence necessitates an additional amount for poitage, and our quarters post oftice acount is increasing."
The High commissioner is not engageai in writing letters simply for the purpose of paying postache on them. I suppose the hon. :nember for Welline. tom (Mr. Mc.Mnllen) has samely an ideat of the number of letters that come from all parts of Gireat Britain to Lomion asking for information. and this information must he supplied.

Mr. Mr.MULLES. Is the statement rad to le foumd in the High Commissioner's repurt :

Pir. Foster. Not at all.
Mr. MrMLLLFA. I remember last year lowking over the Migh (ommissioners report in order to ascertain what work is performed in comnection with immigration. In order that members can discuss these items intelligently, the High (ommmissioners report should he in our hamls.

Mr. SOMERVILI.E. Last yeay when a discussion took place regarding contingencies in the High Cornmissioner's office, the Minister arreed that the $$ 2,000$ pitid for contingencies shomil tre added to the High Commissioner's salary.
Mr. FONTER. The hon. gentleman is mistaken, as was the hon. member for Wellington.

Mr. sonfrillef. When Parliament first roted it sum for contingencies, it was understood that the High Commissioner would pay certain amounts, such as those for the Botanical Garden and the Colonial Institute out of his personal expenses, but these are all inchuled in the item for contingencies. I understoon last year that the Minister of Finance agreed that this $$ 2,(\mathrm{OWH}$ was really an aldition to lis salary of $$ 10,000$, and in future it would be so paid in the Estimates. The amount of $S 2$,(MN) paid for contingeicies strikes me as being an aldition to the High Commissioner's salary. I desire to call attention to one item in the contingencies-distempering the High Commissioner: room, $14.60). I suppose, that means disinfecting the room. At what time did disinfecting take place? Was it after his visit to this country, after he had associated with members of the ciovermment?

Mr. Foster. I am not certain, but I think it was shortly after several members of the Opposition paid a visit to his office.
Mr. Memulden. There is an item of so0.30 for "Women of the Day."

Mr. FOSTER. That is contemporary literature.
Mr. somfrrilles. I should like the Minster of Finance to carry out the agreement respecting the $\mathrm{Sa}, \mathrm{OMO}$.

Mr. FOSTER. I should like the hon. gentleman to show the agreement.

Board of Examiners, Civil Service Act, $$ 3,000$

Mr. McMULLEN. Can the Minister give some idea with respect to the duties performed by the Civil Service Examiners last year. How many candidates are on the list, how many have receivel certificates, and how many were added last year?

Mr. FOSTER. I cannot give the hon. gentleman the number, but I will bring him the information. We hold one examination each year, besiles the promotion examinations, which are for quite a different purpose. I suppose the usual crop of candidates came up for examination.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I do not understand that this covers the expenses of the promotion examinations.

Mr. FOSTER. It covers everything.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) There must he humdred's of candidates who have passed the civil service examination waiting a chance to enter the service.
Mr. FOSTER. Thousands.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I thought about 800 . The question was considered in the House, and it was received somewhat with approvel as to othe desirability of discontinuing these exaiainations.

Mr. FOSTER. We have dropped one examination.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) It is holding out false hopes to young men in the outlying provinces when 1,000 or 3,000 candidates have already passed, and when there are so many more on the lists than there will be vacancies for some years to come. If that is the case, it seems to me to be a perfectly useless expenditure, if not worse, for it raises hopes which caunot he realized.

Mr. FOSTER. At first we had two examinations per year, and after the candidates amounted to a good roumd number we dispensed with one. It might be a question as to whether an examination every other year might not now be sutficient. I do not think the fiovermment, as a Covernment, have consilered the guestion, but it might be well worth consideration. All those who have passed are not actual candidates for civil service positions. A number have taken positions elsewhere, and have found oceupations which they would not relinguish even though civil service positions were offered them here, and it is not quite fair to assume that all those who have passed the examination are waiting for office. Then again it seems a little harsh to prevent anyone who comes up during this year say, from having a chance to get a diploma which he may wish to have and which may at any time entitle him to fill a post as a vacancy oecurs.

Mr. MoMULIEN. I know several young men in my riding who have passed the civil service examination, and in several cases they have heen waiting two, three and four years, expecting that possibly the time may arrive for them to get an appointment. I think it is wrong to encourage young men to pass an examination in the hope that they may get an appointment when there are so many on the list. The Minister of Finance says that there are about one thousand waiting, and I suppose there are aloout that number alogether in the inside service, and these thousind men are pressing on the representatives from their constituencies, who are in favour of the (iovernment, getting an appointment. There are a great many of them who are hoping and waiting and urging on their representatives to try and secure them an appointment. It wonid be very much better, as the Minister of Finance said, that the examinations should be held every two years if necessary or every five years, and thus give these young men to understand that they should not look forward to the hope of getting an appointment in the civil service. I think it is too bad to keep so many of them waiting in expectancy of such a position.

Governor General's Office-Contingencies.. $$ 12,500$

Mr. McMULLEN. In looking over the items of the contingencies of the Governor General's office, I find that there are a great many items that are continuously growing. It was supposed at one time that the $$, 000$ given to the Governor General would suffice for all the travelling expenses. This year I find that there are $$ \pi / 50$ about, paid in addition for the travel of his staff. If we keep on from year to year adding to this, the travelling expenses will amount to an enormous sum. I think we should have some distinct understanding as to what that $$ 5,000$ given to the Governor General is intended to cover. I find that on page B-66 of the Auditor General's Report, there are several amounts charged for the travelling expenses of the Governor General's staff.
Mr. FOSTER. The $$ 5,000$ is for the travelling expenses of the Governor General, and if my hon. friend will look at B-86 of the Auditor General's report he will see an amount for $$ 714$ for expenses incurred for the carrying of despatches which have to be carefully looked after. Then there is a clerk or orderly who is at Quebec for a certain time during the year to look after the Governor General's departnient there, and his expenses have to be paid. The item for travelling expenses to Washington and New York is for the carrying of confidential despatches which are not given to the mails but are sent hy a private confidential mes. senger.

Mr. McMullen. I notice on B-8s of the Auditor (ieneral's Report that (ieneral sir Fred. Mid dleton drew travelling allowance to the amount of $S(M)$ and I would like to know what was that for?

Mr. Foster. That was for his travelling expenses hone.

Mr. MoMULLEN. He has not then employed in this comntry?

Mr. FOSTER. No: but we hat to pay his expenses going home. We paid his expenses out here, and we always pay the expenses of the generals back again.

Mr. Mc.MULILEN. Well, if he is sent lack for the last time I suppose it is all right.

Department of Finance and Treasury Board-Contingencies
$9,001)
Mr. Mcmullfan. I see that last year the very large amount of 35,400 was spent in travelling expenses.

Mr. FOSTER. Yes: the expenses last year were heary, as shown on page B-90. I will mention the chief items. There are the travelling expenses of the Deputy Minister who went home to Eagland in comnection with the raising of the temporary loan. There are also the travelling expenses of the Assistant Inspector and Inspector of savings banks, who have to travel through all partsof the Dominion. The expenses of the Superintemdent of Insurance are also includen, though they are not an ultimate charge on the Consolidated Fund, being paid by the companies themselves. Then, there are the travelling expenses of the Minister himself, which this year are very large.

Mr. DAVIES (P.F.I.) The hon. gentleman does not anticipate another trip to the ifest Indies:

Mr. FOSTER. No. I ilo not think the expenses are extravagant when you consider the number of miles travelled and the length of time owecupied. Then, there were the travelling expenses to W:ashington.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). At page B-91 I see that $$ 1,4(0)$ of unforeseen expenses are charged to commercial agencies. What was the expenditure for the trip to Janaica ?

Mr. FOSTER. Yes : the West India Islands trip; and also the Washington trip. The expenses of the trip to Washington this year are also charged to commercial agencies.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). That is not the intention of that vote, is it?

Mr. FOSTER. The intantion of the vote was never thoroughly carriedout, though it is at present. But as we had not a surplus in the strictly proper appropriation, I thought it just as well to take the money out of that vote.

Mr. McMULLEN. I notice that while the expenses of the Finance Minister to Washington are charged to commercial agencies, those of Sir Charles Tupper are charged to miscellaneous charges. How is that?

Mr. FONTER. It really makes very little difference, I suppose, to what they are charged, as they all come out of the same pocket.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). Of course it is public money, and in that respect it loes not make any difference. But the vote for commercial agencies was intended to facilitate our foreign trade.
Mr. FOSTER. These items are perfectly correct, then?

Mr. PATERsod (Brant). That was not the object of the vote. The oljecet was to establish new lines of trade. and the Finance Minister should not lose sight of that.
Mr. Foster. That is very true.
Department of Agriculture-Contingencies................................... 320,100
Mr. MeMULLEN. I wish to draw the attention of the Minister of Agriculture to the amount spent in this department for travelling expenses of the Ottawa officials, amounting to $\$ 1,600$ ). There are charges of the Minister's private secretary amounting to $\mathbf{S i O l O}_{0}$ or $\mathrm{S}(\mathrm{O})$, for being in attendance on the Minister at Lomilon luring December, February and March, last year. It is singular that we should have to pay such an anount for the expenses of his private secretary at that particular time.

Railways and Canals Department-Contingencies
        \($ 8,000\)

Mr. somerville. The Finance Minister will recollect the discussion that took place last year on the item involving the amount of subscriptions to newspapers for all different departments, aud I think he will agree with me that there was an understanding that sonething was to he done to reduce that expenditure. Now, and for years past, there has been a separate reading rooin in every department, and a large sum of money has been required for this. Last year we spent $$ 9,183.88$ in furnishing newspapers fror the different departments. I would ask the Minister if he has done anything yet in attempting to reduce this expenditure. Last year it was suggested that it would le proper that the reading room here should loe used by the employes of the different ilepartments.
Mr. FOSTER. I think the hon. gentleman is right in part. I stated that an attempt had been made for two or three years back to reduce that expenditure, and, if the hon. gentleman would take the average expenditure of three years ago and compare it with this expenditure, he will find that it has leen materially reduced. They used to spend $\$ 700$ or $\$ 800$ or $\$ 1,000$ for newspapers in various departments, but last year an Order in Council was passed on my recommendation providing that the amount to be expended on newspapers and books, and technical magazines required in the departments, should be limited to $\$ 500$. That is being rigidly carried out, so that next year no one of the departments will spend more than $\mathbf{3 5 0 0}$.

Care and cleaning of Departmental  Buildings...... ...................... $$ 27,000$

Mr. McMULLEN. How is this money expended? Is the work done by day's work or under contract?

Mr. FOSTER. Under this item is included nearly all the help in the different departmental huildings at Ottawa. It is umder the superintendence of an officer in my department who is charged with the whole matter. This includes the charwomen and carriers and so on, who are in at way permanent, receiving so much per day. I helieve this is very carefully managed. Fomerly it was left to the different departments, amd afterwards it drifted partly into the Public Works Department. While part of it remained with the other repartments. hat now it is muler the Treasury Board and is mamagen ly :an otheer in my department.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. SPEAKER. In accordance with the wish expressed by the hom. learler of the Opposition, I have looked further intos the question that was discussed on Friday last, respecting the right of the hon. member for West Lambton (Mr. Lister) to anticipate a motion on the Notice Paper as at question of privilege. If the House ssill permit me. I will read a memorandum which I have made in regard to the matter. Prima jarie, a question affecting the seat of a member of the House is a question of privilege ; but the practice of Parliament goes to show that it must le urgent in character. and demand the immediate interposition of the House. In the Camadian Commons such questions have been made without notice: for instance, in the Muskoka and West Peterlorough case in 1873, the Kings Comuty, P.E.I., case in 1883, and the Queen's County, N. B., case in 1887. In all these cases urgency was the essence of the guestion, and the House was asked to interpose imnediately without notice. Also, in the cases that occurre? in $15 / 5$. of members alleged to be public contractors. the House acted immediately on the state. ments made hy members of the Homse, showing that the cases were matters of urgency In the cases above cited a reference to the lonmals will show that the Howse had the information in its prssesion, and was able to come to a conclusion ofl a ghestion of privilege. In the case now unler ansideration the hom. member for the liest Riding of Letmbon has not shown iny fuestion of ugency. The hom. member gave notice on Puesilay for the consideration of his motion, not on Thurstiay as the rules permitted him to do, and on which diay it would in all probalility hate been reached in due course on the Order Paper, but for Friday, which heing a lavernment day, preclude:l the pussilifity of its leeing reached in the ordinary comse. I may, perhaps, with the permission of the Homse, cite one or two decisions in the Faglish House of commons which seem to me to have some learing on the question of privilege. On the lith of February, 188\%, Mr. Cowan catled the attention of the $\mathbf{H o n s e}$ to a breach of its privileges in the matter of the election in the north riding some weeks ago, wherein he alleged that two peers hat sulstantially supported a camblilate. Mr. Speaker Brand ruled that as the hom. member had allowed a considerable time to elapse, instead of hinging the question forward at the earliest possille monemt is a guestion of wrgency, he had therely lost his claim to deal with the matter as privilege. Then, with reference to motions for new writs, on the 2 th of March, $185 \mathbf{O}$, Mr. Ledouchere asked Mr. Speaker whether he combl move, as privilege, for a new writ for Northamptom in place of Mr. Bratlaugh, disalled from sitting and coting in the Honse by the resolution of (ith of Marich. 1sse: secourly, whether in regard to a petition iresented this day from electors of Northampton, having regard to the proceedings of the Honse in the matter of the Middlesex election of enth of April, $155!$, he: was entitled, as a matter of privilege. to move that the electors of the Borough of Northampton 1 n : -heard at the Par. Mr. Speaker stid:

"Motions for new writs are ordimarily made without notice. and have precedence as concerving privilege. Such motions are founded upon certain events which have recently caused vacancy-as, for example, the death of a member, his acceptance of office, or the report of election judges. In such cases the re are obvious reasons for giving precedence to a motion for a lew writ. The grounds are clear and of recent occurrence, and the seat ought not to be left vacant, in the interest of the electors. But none of these reasons are apparent on the present oceasion. The motion, indeed, can scarcely be proposed with the serious purpose of inducing the House to issue a new writ for Northampton; but, like a similar motion of the hon. member on the 21 st February, seems rather designed to raise a discussion. indirectly or irregularly, upon the claim of the juinior member for that borough io take the oath. For these reasons the motion of the hon. member is clearly not entitled to privilege. With rekard to the second question of the hon. member. I have to say that there are standing ordery with rexard to petitions Which were not in existence when the Middlesex petition referred to by the hon. member was heirs. On that account there is no ground for dealing with a petition of that kind stated as a matter of privilege."
Now. having in view these decisions, and having in riew the fact that the hon. member for West Lambton has not stated in his place in the Honse that he proposes to attack the seat of the honi. member for London, I am of opinion that sufficient urgency has not been shown to justify me in giving precealence to the motion as atuestion of privilege.

HRITINH COLUMBIA INDIANS.

Mr. PATERGUN (Bramt) askerl, Why was section 93 of the Indian Act. Chapter 433 of the Revised statutes of Canada, not included in the porclamation dated 12 th dannary, 1892, which extends sections Nos. 8:3 to 9.2 of that Act to the hands of Indians in the Province of British Col. umbia:

Mr. DEWDNES'. The provisions of section !3 of the Indian tet suppose such a condition of advancement to exist among the members of an Indian! band as would admit of any member thereof becoming enframchised, should the band agree to that step heing taken by a member. The department is not aware of such a condition of matters existing in any band in British Columbia; and it was, therefore, considered prudent to not extend the provisions of section 93 to the British Columbia Indians. Were this to be done and any band to grait under that section permission to any members thereof who might elect to do so, to become enfranchised, friction woull occur between the Department of lindian Affairs and the Indians composing the hand in question, if an applicant for enfranchisement shoulil, after sewing the usual term of probation, prove to lee incompetent and the department be consequently obliged to reject him.

Sir ADOLIHE (ARON. (Translation.) Mr. Speaker, in answer to the hon. member. I have the honour to say that the member for Montmagny (Mr. Choquette) having written to the PostmasterGeneral on the $\bar{y}$ th Ociober, 1801 , a letter stating that a certain resolution passed by the municipal council of Cap St. Ignace, opposing the opening of the new post otfice, was an irregular and worthless resolution oltained by indirect means, the Post-master-General accepted as true the assurance so given by the member for Montmagny, and wrote the letter of 9 th October. The information mentioned in this letter having lieen asked for, a new resolution was passed on the ith of October by the municipal council of Cap St. Ignace, aml reached the department on 12th Octoler. This resolution conclules as follows:-
"This council thinks proper to reaffirn its protes ${ }^{t}$ against the opening of a new post otice within the limits of the municipalits. This council hopes that the Post master-General will be pleased to take this protest by the

Mr. HAlaniAR'T: In answer to the hom. gentlemath. I might say that the dovernment is mot awate of it.

Mr. FREMONT asked, Whether it is the intention of the Govermment to take any steps cluring the present session to carry ont the promises made by the late Sir Johm A. Macdonald, on the flom of this House on the 17 th April, 1884, as to the construction of a mailway bridge at or near Quelece to connect the Intercolonial with the Canadian Pacifle Railway, surveys for which were made?

Mr. HAGiaAR'T. In answer to the hon. gentleman, I might state that on reading carefully over the remarks of Sir John Machonalil in the House on the 17th April, 1884, I find no promise made by him as to the construction of a railway bridge at or near Quelec, and the policy of the Government is the same as stated by Sir John Macdonald on that oceasion.

FXPORTS OF FARM PRODUCE.

Mr. MrMUSLEN moved for :

Return showing the quantity of the shipments in the following lines from Canada, froin 30th June, 1891, to 29th February, 1892, and the country to which shipped:-The number of horses of all kinds: the number of lambs: the cu:intity of eggs: the number of bushels of barley; the quantity of malt; the number of tons of hay: the number of bushels of potatoes; givius the quantity shipped to each country, and the total shipments in the several lines.

Mr. BOWFLI. I womld suggest to the mover of this resolation the propriety of changing the word " lambs." to " sheep." There is no distinct entry in the Trade and Navigation Returns as to the quantity of lambs exported from? the comintry I would alsos suggest that if the hon. member desires to have the information at as early a date as possible, he shonk either make the motion read from the Blst December latst, or from the 3lst of March. If he makes it read from the Blst of March, of course it would be deliyed until the puarterly returns are receivel. If he is content to accept areturn to the Blst I lecember, we shall lee able tolbring it down at an carly perionl. I make this suggestion in order that the House maty lee furnished with the particulars. and to point ont that as these returnss are manle puarterly they will not fee mate again mat the Blst of Mitreh.

Mr. Me:MLILIEN. We will take it from the 3lsa December, and we can morer afteruarals for the three months retum until the Blst of March: with the change also of " lambs" t" " shetep.

Motion, ats amended, agreed to.

WHITE PINE TIMBER.

Mr. IVFEN moved :

That an Order of the House do issue to the Director of the Geological Survey of Canada, for a map of Cauada showing the areas of spruce, and white pine timber, respertively. now standing. The said map to be laid on the lible of the House for the information of members.

Mr. DEWDNES. I would say that I have a communication from the Director of the Fieological survey in which he states that there is not suftirient diata toindicate the area of white pine or spruce timber. But I hold in my hand the only map on record in the Geologieal Museum which shows the limits of the areas of timber as they are deseribed in the report (pages t6t to 469 ) published by Professor Macoun on Camadian plants. But all the additional information that it is possible to bring down. of course 1 will be very glat to furnish.

Motion :greed to.

FMPDOYEN ON THE INTERCOLONIAL RAILIVA:

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) moved for:

Repurts to Council and Orders in Council since the last session of Parliament, relating to the employes on the Intercolonial Railway, or to the salaries of any such employés or their dismissal.
He said: I would like to he permitted to amend that resolution-because the word "dismissal" may not properly describe what I mean to get atby adding the words "or the reduction in number of such employés.

Mr. HAGidAR'I'. There are no reports to Council or Orders in Council on the subject, since the last statement.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Then it is not worth while passing the Address.

Mr. HAGGAR'T. The hon. gentleman must have heard a report of contemplated reduction. But I have mate no report to Comacil as yet, amd me Order in Council has been passed on the subject.

Mr. DAVIEs (P.E.I.) As the Minister tells me that there has leen wo report to Comucil. amd no Orter in Conncil, of conse 1 donot want to go through the form of passing the Aldress.

Motion withdrawn.
Mr. DAVIEN (P.E.I.) moved for:
Return of all correspondence, tolegrams. papersreports, orders and other documents relating to the intended dismissal of a number of Intercolonial emploves at Moncton, Halifax or other places on the Intercolonial Railway, since the last session of Parliament.
He said: I would ask the committee to allow me to add the words ${ }^{\circ}$ or reduction in number of sheh employes" after the word " hismisial."

Motion, as amended. agreed to.

AMERICAN BEEF ANO PORK.

Mr. FORBEN moved for:

Return showing the quantity of American beef and pork taken out of boud by Canadian fishermen since the imposition of the duty by the Canadian Government on beef and pork imported from the United States.

Mr. BOIV EI.L. It will be impossible to bring down the information asked for be this return. from the fact that the record of American beef atmil pork taken out of bond by Camalian fishermen is not kept on record in the department at Ottawat: and even if an attempt were mate, we would have to apply to all the ports in the Maritime Provinces in order to ascertain the information asked for. aml have an examination made by the officers of all papers and invoices filed during the last 20 years, which is the period during which this duty has treen in force. The hon, gentleman, therefore. will see the utter impossibility of oltaining that information, especially when it is remembered that during that period many of the Custom houses of thedifferent ports have been burnt, and the papers destroyed. I am very sorry to say that one of our most expensive builiings, together with all the. papers, except some invoices and other papers that were in the vanlt, Was consmmed in the city of Nt. John on Naturday. involving a loss of nearly half a million dollars. From the statement 1 have made, the hom. gentle. man will see the utter uselessness of passing a mo tion of this kind.

Mr. FORBEN: 1 do I understand that it would be utterly impossible to ascertain the quantity of beef and pork imported and taken out of hond by Canalian fishermen?

Mr. BOWELL. The hon. gentleman will see that the motion covers a perion of 2 , years. for it asks for a return during which a duty was imposed on those articles.

Mr. FORBEN. I would limit it to the last three years.

Mr. BOW ELLL. Fiven then the information could not be obtained unless we applied to the-different ports : and in that case we could not obtain it where the papers had been destroyed, as was the case on Suturday night at St. John.

Mr. FORBEN. If I cannot get it I suppose 1 camot have it. Do I understand from the acting Minister that it is impossible to obtain the quantity of beef and pork consmmed by our fishermen and taken out of lond?

Mr. Boll ELL. If amy person asked for an ex port entry for beef or pork he could obtain it. The export might be mate for tishermen or for ot her purposes, but we would not have any recorlas to whether such meat was consumed lay the fishermen or not. Fiery person has a right to ask for an export entry. Gut there is no special record kept as to its comsumption or what hecones of it other than the fact that it leaves the comery.

Mr. LAURIER. As it appears to be impossible for the fincermment to bring down the information asked. my hon. friend had letter witholraw his motion. and amemel it as suggestell hy the: Dinister.

Motion withhrawn.

(ONTRACT ALIFN LABOOR IN (`ANADA.

- Mr. TAYLoR moved secomel realing of Bill (No. 4) to prohibit the importation and migration of foreigners and aliens under contract or agreement to perform labour in ('amada. He said: In rising to move the second reanling of this Bill. I Wish merely to say that it is the same Bill l introduced two years ago, which was referred to a -pecial committee of the House, empowering the committee t" semi for persons ant take their vidence as the the extent of the injustice perpetated hy a smilat Bill which is in foree in the Enited States. This bill is an exact cops of that placed on the Statute-book of the Linted states. That committee heard evilence. and mate the following report :-
-. Your committee find on examination, that the bill is similarin all respects to a bill pasied by the Congress of the United States in 1885, and amended be that body in lseis.
"Your committee have had before them witnesses from different points alone the frontier, and find from their evidence a copy of which is amexed hereto, that the American Alien labour Law hats been entorced in sueh a way as to compel many of our people to relinguish their employment in the United States or to remove with their fanilies and reside there permanently while eitizens of the United States are permitted to work in Canada every day, and to return to their homes on the American side cvers night, withour interference of the Canadian authurities.
- Your committee recommend that the sttention of the authorities at Washington be directed to the oppresFive application to Canadians of the American Alien Labour Law, and to allow of such representation being made, and to afford time for its due consideration, recommend that the further consideration of this Bill be postponed until next session : and if some suitable measure for yranting relief to Canadians from the grievance complained of be not passed in the interval by the American anthorities, that your committee recominend that a bill dealing with this question be introduced next session and taken into consideration."
That was the report of the committee. The Bill was introllucel next session, but at the request of the dovernment it was allowed to stand over, peming negotiations that were then going on between the two fovermments. I have not seen the correspondence that has passed between the two fiovermments in regard to the Bill. if any has passed: lut I know that, inulging from newspaper reports from points all along the line, the Americans are still enforeing their Act to the great injury of very many Canadians. It is now high time that we hat a similar bill on our Statute-book. I am a protectionist. I helieve in reciprocity, if we can get it; reciprocity in tariff and the same reciprocity in labour. If we camnot get that reciprocity, let us have it in law. Let us place an Act on our Statute-book, as the Americans have done. I have several clippings bere bearing on the question. One is from a it. Cathariues paper of 2nd February, which saly:
$\because$ Buffalo, Feb. 1.-Inspector DeBarry was motified this noon by the Customs-house officiads at International Bridge of the arrival of Willian Dunn, a ship carpenter. from St. Catharines. Ont. Cpon investigation the inspector learned that Dum came here last Thurshay and got employment with the dry dock company on Ganson street. He was to begin work to-day. Mr. Le Barry communicated with the company and informed them that Dunn could not legally work here until he immigrated with his family to this country as prescribed by law. The company refused to perfect the agreement with 1 mom until he complied with the reguirements of the law. The inspector then deported the man to Mer Mitjesty s domain.'
1 have another clipping from the lort Huron Hereth of etith April, Which describes how three joung laties, who han lreen employed at Port. Huron for a number of years, had lee on ohliged on leave their emplovment of remose with their families to the Conited states. I have alsor a parasraph in regand wa clergyman with whom many members of the Honse are well alopaintert. Rev. IV. W. Carsom. It is as follows:
" Detroit, Jann - At the ammal meeting of the congregation of the Jefferson Avenne Presbyterian Chureh, held last night, after the varions repors had been wesented, the rrustes reported that the eall to the pastorate extended to Rev.W.W. Carson, of Kingstom, Omt . . was ean celled on account of the Alien Labour lan w. Immediatels after the adjourmment the chairnan informed the menbers that the fact shouhd be miderstood that Rev. Mr. Carsom was not the mator of the chareh. When the cali was extended to him, and it was found that his case was corered by the Alien Labur Law, it was immediarely withdrawn. Shonld the reverend rentleman take up his residence in the tinited States and become a citizen of this country another eall to the pastorate might lee extended to him, but otherwise the laws of the eomery would be strictly athered to by the chureh."
That is how they leal with clergymen as well ats with lahomers. I hate amother extrat here :
"Tro Roman Cathotic clergmen banded from a stemmship at Philadelphia on Tuesiay: They were Rev. Dr. Minkenburg and Rev. Dr. Luentgarutt, and had come to this continent to deliver lectures on natural philosophy and theology in mmber of leating cities. The authorities detained them under the eontract labour latr, as aliens entering the comitry under contwet to compete with mative labour. Fimaly it was decided that their case did not come under the provisions of this law, and they were released. They will carry buck to Europe with then strange ideas of United States justice and hosinitality. The idea that thes should even have been arrested coming for the purpose they did. suggest. reflec:tions by, no means complimentary to the age amd the cumbry:"
Another extrate satys:
" Laist Monday two respectable-looking young mechantes from London, stonecutters by trade, went over to Por: Huron, hating heard that there was a good demand there for stonecuters. They earried valises containing some presonal effects, one having his tools. On arriving at the wharf the Customs officer would not allow them to lamd and ordered them back to Canada. They returned. but thinking that the objection to their landing in the tnited States was owing to their having valises. they lett them in Sarnia and went over again. They were similaty. treated, and had to return to Sarnas. In company with some acaunintances from this town they tried on Tuesday for the third time, and, we are informed, effected a handing, but before they had gone any distance up the street -were followed by the Customs officer who threatened to arrest them and put them in the lock-up unless they returned to Canada at once. Of course they had to return once more. We are informed, on sood authority, that they had made no contract to work for amyone in the States, and did not know where they could get work: all that they had heard was that stonecutters were scarce in Port Huron."
Now, hy the evidence that was prolluced before the committee, a copy of which I have in my hand, it was proved to the satisfaction of the committee that hown in New Bromswiek several hmmireds of persoms are crossing from the Únited States chill, Working in oun cotton factories daring the day and returning to their homes in the United states at night. I presume that this same state of affairs is in existence now, as it was then, aml there is mo interference with it by the athorities or by the people of Comada. So far we have been willing to meet the people of the linited states fairly amil to hate reciprocity in habour, hut sos far as 1 cim learn. there has heen mo move male on the part of the lohed states aththorities tormemd their latw shas t. matke it not apply tom (iandians living on the (imanlian side wha may crass over to the Conited States to iln work amd retarn tor their homes at night. (anadians atre hriven back from the states. while our latws permit the people of the Niates to combe here in the morning, to work all day and return home at night to their families. We have wot or far insisted on them loringing their families to this combtry, ant callsing them tolnecome residents in order that they may obtain work. I do think that it is only justice for the people of ('anata that we shonhl but sutfer these innlignitios amy longer. Therefore, I have introltued mi bill ion the thind time, and I purpsese pressing it in a division.

Mr. FRASER. Mr. Speaker, I wish wenter my porest against this Bill. in the first place on generail principles, amd secomilly, becathe of special cases that I know of myself. If there were any argments necersaty whif we shomhl not pass this bill. It hink the mover himself has given them to us. If this "ere a Bill to interfere only with our neighlanors to the somth of us. 1 comld umierstamel that it was introninced on the principle of leing a retaliatory me:sime: hit when the hon, gentleman comprises in his bill all foreigners and aliens, then he simply strikes at one of the rem best methonds by which we call get people to this comntry who wonh iesach our people that which they gonot know themselves, ats we can teach those who come here that which they don not know when they arrive. I think that this bill might perhaps be the natural serpuence of the census recently taken, amb if shombl pass the Honsee. I have no donbt that the results will he: - $\cdot$ on more striking in the next 10 fears than during the last 10 pears. Oll gemeral principles I "plnse allything like a measure that keeps ont from wir country trained amil experiented mon. I will give one or two examples of how the Bill would injure our people in Cova Scotia. When the glass works were opened in the town of Sew diasgow, we hal mot a man who knew anything about glass working, hut we hat enongh enterprise to put money into the bosiness, and so the secretary of the company Was sent to visit Belgium, and Austeia, and Bohemia. to obtain skilled labome. He male arrangements with some of the very hest glass-blowers that coulai begot, and he bronght them to this country. What was the ettect of these men coming here: In the tirst place the works were established and put on a sound fommation and the hoys and young men in New diasgow were tanght by these skilled tradesmen, si that in a year or two we conld ilo without their services if they wishel to go elsewhere. If such a latw as is proposed by my hon. friemil from beeds (Mr. Taylor) had been in existence at that time our glasis works would never hatre heen estahlished. Then again, we are starting very extensive iron Wotks in Dew dilasgow, amt where have we th go for a manager : a man who can baili the smelting works and cary on the hasiness. We have ongio to Philadelphia, amil no man is foing to leatio. a goal situation there umbess he is certatin of something hetter: he is not coming to this conntry to take chances of whatever he may get. An arrangement hats to leve male with this man lufore he leaves philadelphia. The result in this case also is that our own young prople when tanght hy a skilled man of this timel, a man of reputation in his business, will he able whry on the inilustry. if this skilled manager should seek employment elsewhere when his term with the company in Dew dilasgow expires. We started steel works in New (ilasgow amf we got some experiencen men from langland and elsewhere, and the manager of the company hemagh in poung men to the works belonging to the town, and they obtainerl the experience, so thit now they catl dio the whole work themselves. If this bill shonh lecome law, what are you going to do in Cimadia When voll watht to stait a Gusiness in which mo (ianaliam has ever luen engragel: Must fom mot of neressity go to a foreign conintry to ger the men who umlerstam the business: If this bill hat leeen the law of the lami. some of our best imhlustries woulh never have heren stated. Anyway, I am sure that the mover of the Bill dones not wish that some men who come to this comutry moder a eontract to do work for a concern like the ones 1 have mentioned, shombly gatek aml be able ${ }^{\prime \prime}$ report the same impressions of Camanla ats the hom. gent leman read that these two clergymen hat when they were not allowed to enter into the Cnited States. skilled labour is a commodity which every comatry ought to le promed to gain, insteal of trying to ilehar it from eoming here. There are ben in every walk of life whom gon cannot bring to a strange conntry without a speeial agreement. beciatise sheh in atgreement is a gatamte to them that they can remain in the country for a vertain number of rears. Are the steed vorks in New (ilasgow to be lost, and will the iron works in Dew (idargow he lost to this comatry, simply becallse we are going to keep out of the conintry a few experienced workmen in order to spite oin neighbours to the soith of us: If the people of the linited states adopt a poliey that is not in aceordance with the leest principles of national life, are we to follow them: I am sure that the hon. gentleman from leeds iMr. Taylors. if he took in moment's considetation, would see that there are some men whom Camanla ought to be prond to get into the comitry to teach onr people. The matter will right itself atterwards. You will tim. Mr. Speaker. that skilled labour when it is in the comotry, will so teach the young men of C'mandia that they will afterwams be able to do the work themselves. These men whom this Bill seeks to keep out of (anamlat will he teathers for us. The Fill of my hon. friend will simply have the effect of keeping out all skilled labous: 1 am opposed to this bill on acosunt of the special cases that 1 have maned, and even if they were not enough, I anm opposed to it on ageneral principles. Perhaps I may not carry with me the opinions of this House. but I helieve in opening our cloors to the whole world. We have a large comontry to be tilled up, and 1 womh put no restriction on any man from any comutry coming here, except those who are sent anay from the comitry in which the have lived heranse: they have broken the laws and ate: nut allowed to staly there. With our vast minetal wealth amb our vist comutry to be inhalited. this Bill might be the tirst step in lirecting a how at poper immigration. I hope that this Honse. amb I speak especially for the plate from which I come will not comanit itself to the getmeral principle of keeping these men int from one country. If the: honl. gentleman wishes to make our neighburs to the somth of as feel haily, and if he wishes to prereolt ally of them coming in here, there might be anme print in the Bill, althongh. even then. it womh stike al our industries in New dilaseow and I would he still opposied to the meanome. I don unt helieve that this Parliament shomble follow the wrons methohs of ans eomuty: I do mot helieve that we. with our hroat views, shomh petss any bill luecallse another eomitry is shortsighted enomigh wo anact it. in the interest of fations within the combny itself. upon which the party in power depronds foi its political existence. Therefore 1 am opposed with all my heart to the passinge of this Bill.

Mr. splatolef. I thimk the hom. member has W:asted a goon deal of his timet in discossing a Bill which he hats not real. If I read the Billenvectly. the ith clatuse proviles for just such eases ats he hats refored to. Where new industries ate to he estahlished, and skilled labour cammot le ohtained in (:amala tor cary them on. That rlanse reats as finllow: :

- Nothing in thi Aet hall he su const rued as toprevent any citizen or subject of any foreirn contre, temporarily residiner in cranalia, either in private or official capacity. from entaging under contract or otherwise, persons not rovidents or citizens of C'abalat to act asprivate secretaries servantsurdmesties for such foreigner temporarily resibitur in Canalat ats atoresaid : nor shall this Aet be en ounstrued as tri precent any person or persons, parneership or eorpmation from engaging, under contract or arreement, skilled workmen in forcien cuntries to perfirm lalmur ins camala in or unon any new industry not at presen: "Etablisined in Canada, provided that skilled laturit fur hatt parpuse: wannor be otherwise obtained.:

 that this bill wrimb shut it sut. thoush it is guite alear that provision is mate :n the Bill for such a -ase. But we komw that (imadian citizens are wory day shat out of the labour market of the finted states. on the most trivial pretexts : and l do not sere any injustice in our retmming the compliment by bissinge such a bill as the present one. We know. tow, that lateremumbers of Americans are engaged in cimala. That ocemes in my part of the comatry, where many men are brought in from the Cnited states for the purpose of taking out loge and timber in the (ierorgian Bay district--work that could be performeal guite as well by Canadiats. These people are hought in uniler contract. While if one of our people is taken to Michigan to perform the same kind of labour, he is shut out hy the Alion Labour Law. It is mfair and unjust to our own people : and while our persple are shut out of the Vinited Nates in that way, I do uot think there will be any injustice in our passing a law to mete out to them the same treatment is they do to as.

Sir ofoHN THOMPsoN. I will ask the very carefulatention of the Honse to this Bill, hecanse I am aware that it is supported somewhat enthusiastically by the representatives of a considerable number of persoms in this eomutry or I might more properly saty hy the representatives of a large class in the combiry: I am perfectly anate-ans the hom. gentlemath wh: has introlnced the bill hats reminded the House this afternoon - that the committe: appuinted to investigate this sulaject illo years afor gathered a gomel deal of evidence tentin: to show that the people of this comatry, expectially onr people near the horvers of the Uniten states, havefrom time to time leen subjecterl togreat inuonrenience and hardship ly the operation of the law of the lonited states relating toralien habour comtracts. It was. I think, at first supposed bey the committere, perhips, tow, ly a a of the Honse. that the operation of that law wats intentional as rearams C'amalat, amil think that before the disenssion was eomelheled the Honse wats eromineeri that while the bill was probahly we specially amed at Camatia, it fully eomprehembeal the kinh of immighation from (ialiadia, and which wats employed in the Linted states along the boralen line muler "atmor engacements. But, Nir, Ihave to atok the grave consideration of the Honse tor this question: whether we are grints to improve the position of wor people who, have sutfered that inabmenience lis atn alortive attempt to intlict the like incomenicace u!om our metghmons: I maintain that we are bot. 1 am mathle to see how any working people in districts meighourines to the Enited States will he in the least degree lemetited hor the passigge of ath Act of this kind in this Parliatment. The operation of the Alien Latome Law of the linted states will he as rigosons, notwith. standing this futile ateempt on our part to inflict an injury upon their people. 1 am sure that the prilicy of congress on this subject would mos he in the laist degree affected hy the operation of this Bill. We have to expect ins mitigation in the operation of their law, and no anmendment of their law in the direction of the amelionation of their relations to our lahoming people from the passatge of an Act of this kinh. They have in their own emmtry a very alombintly supplied labour market: they have a very large population: ann their policy in some resperts ats regateds immigration is: directly opposite to that which is desimathe for us. In every session of congress we see that the attempt is male to restrict rather than to encomarase immigration, whereas in every session of our. Parliament members are aceupied with the grave consideration of how to conhance the How of immigration insteal of embeatroning to restrict it. I, therefore, think it is mest umesimalile. in the interests of any class in this conntry espevially unlesinable in the interests of these who have complained of irritation and oppression calused hy the Alien Labour Law of the United Sitates. amil most undesiathle in the interests of the country with reference to its settlement-that any class of wonking people should be excluded fiom the cominty. I am aware that the attention of Parliament has: frefuently leen called to representations of labomorganizations against the intronluction, by diovernment ain of workingmen,or of other classesof perpule, who would he likely to settle in cities and comperte with ourown working people. But even that, while it may le arguable, is totally listinct from an attempt to exclude that kind of people from the country when they propose to come here withont the aid of the (iovermment at all. I agree with the hon. member for Guyshorough (Mr. Fraser) that this country is not so full of population that we can atford to close our downs against any class who are willing to come here to carn their living, and I chink we ought to he very careful how we legislate against the introluction of such a class. Notwithstanding theolservationsof my hom, friend from East firey (Mir. Sproule), there is a goond ileal in what hats heens said by the hoin. member for filyshorough © Mr. Fraser) as regards the establishment of new indus: tries. If we refer to clanse $\overline{5}$ of the Bill, we shall find that while it attempts to meet the point he raisel, it does not meet it in a very cffective manner. The chanse proviles that this Act $\because$ shatl not prevent any citizen or subject of any foreign conutry, temporarily residing in Camada, from engraging any persons not residents or citizens of Ganalla. to ate an private seepetaries, servants on domestics for such foreigner temproraty residing in (ananla ats aforessaid:" hut it seens to prerent a resident of this comatry from importing i fomestic servant, although there has never been any representation male to this Parliament that the intronduction of that class of persens into the conntry is unlesirable, but on the comtrary Parliament has frepuently coted aid wimbluce such persoms to come to the comatry. The next provision is that the Act shatl not he comstruedi $\cdots$ sit ato present any person or persoms, partuership or corprotation from engaging. under contract or agreement, skilled workmen in foreign countries to perform lathour in Canala in or unon alay new inlustry not at present estahlishled in (sema ia." That hits reference omly to the establishment of a new industry. wot one at present established: and there is a prosiso further that skillem latnour fio that purpose camot he otherwise ohtained. so that if an industry is mot entirely new, the akilleal labarur camot be imported from abowal. If. in the instance put, of the glass works, or iny or her industry of that kind, an extension is (o) lie made of those works or works of a like kind estal. lisherl. say in a different section of the comutry, it will he impussilhe toge athroal and import theskilleal workmen, hecanse it is an industry already estah. lished in the eomutry, or a hranch of one already estab). lishesl. Afurtherproviso is that the provisionsof this Bill shall mot apply to professional actors, artists, lecturers. singers. or to persons employed as personal or domestic servants ; and it ie provided that mothing in this Act shall lee comstrued as prohibiting any indivitual from assisting any member of a famiay, or any relative or personal friend, to migrate from ing foreign comery to Camada for the purpose of settlement liere. In the list of professional persoms allowed to come into the country under engagements. we hare simply actors, atists, lecturits and singers.
Sir TOHN THOMPSON. All the features of the American law which have been exploited in their courts for the purpose of making their enactment the laughing-stock of the civilized world are left in this Act. A minister of the Gospel or a clergymin of any denomination whatever comes under the provisions of the Alien Labour Law, so that we camot allow such persons to come into this country even to preach the Gospel. It will prevent : lawyer coming from the United States to attend to professional interests, or the interests of a client who lives ont of the country hat hats husiness in our conts. even to instract the Canadian comsel in charge of the case. io that, notwith. stancling that the provisions of section 5 were undoubtedy intended toameliorate.to some extent.the Alien Latmor Law, as it is generally kown in the United states, it is quite ineffectual. and hears all the blemishes which have heen formol in the law of the Cuited States, except perhaps that in which donestic servants are referred to, where I see the exemption is larger than I supposed it tolne at tirst. In the Enited States the indestries of that comury are greatly developed and there is hardly any cecupation in the world for working people which is not to he: fomen there. In that comntry. skilied workmen are to lee fomud in every hatheh of emplogment. hat in this comutry as has alrealy heen pointed out, we are seeking to establish new inhlustries, we are seeking to increase those we have abld yet the people who are mast competent to anate chem ami to make them successfulare hot twhe impurted. hut if we extablish such inhlustrics at :all, after 13 or It years effort to increase them, we are to trust them to utterly incompetemt men, or clse we are to sulject the persoms who may import competent men to all the dangers of a trial for mishlememour, and we are to pat upon him the harden of proing that, hesides the imbustry leeing a new one, skilled laknour of that kind is ner to le fomm in the conntry. The provisions of section bue make it at mistemeanour. in offence pmishahle hy a bery heary penalty, ats we shall see presently. for any person, in any manner whatserever, to prepay the transportation. of in ally way assist or encomate the importation or migration of any alien or aliens, any foreigner or foreigners into (chatala, under wontaict or agrement, parole of special. express or implied. male previons to the importation or migration of stoch alien of aliens. foneigne on foreighers. to perform lathor ur service of ang kind in Cinala. So that the farmer desirine farm latmorers to goto the North Wiest Territories where we have such abmulame of hand, or to ger to Manitola, who semls to our own agents, of our own Commissioner in (ireat Britain. Che intimation that he has employment reach for such people and is willing to engage them, is mable to engage the services of these agents to provire immigrants of that kind, becaluse he will subject our agents to a very heary penalty for having enconaged sach persions to cenne into the comatry. The contract is to he made void lis seation i. Accorling to that section. it shall lee ntterly woid and of mo effect. Ender section 3:
" For every violation of any of the provisions of seetion one of this Act, the person. partnership, company or eorporation violating the same by kunvingly assisting, encouraging or soliciting the migration or importation of any alien or aliens, toreigner or foreigners into Canada. to perform labour or service of any kind under contrati or agreement, express or implied, parole or special. with such alien or aliens, foreigner or foreiguers previous to becoming residents or citizens of Canada, shall forteit and pay for every such officne the sum of one thousand diollars, which may be sued for and recorered by the Dominion of Canada, or any person who shall first bring lis netion therefor. including any such ulien or foreigner who may be a party to any such contrict or agreement, as dejots of like amount arre now recovered in any competent court of the Dominion of Canada."

Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). May a foreigner sue?
sir JOHN THOMPson. Ves. I suppose, thereiore, if two persoms have violated the Act, one of them can collect the penalty ; or possibly any one person so imported can himself collect it. He will recover against the person who assisted him. He will sue Mr. Dyke in Liverpool, or Sir Charles Tupper, for having assisted or encouraged him to cone to the country. The fourth section provides:
"The master of any vessel who shall knowingly bring within the Dominion of Canada on any such vessel, and land or permit to be landed from any foreign port or place any atien, labourer, mechanic or artizan who, previons to embarkation on such vessel, had entered into contract or agreement. parole or special, express or implied, to pertorm labour or service in the Donimion of Canala, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour, and on convietion thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars for each and every such alien, labourer. mechanic or artizan so brought as aforesaid, and may also be imprisoned for a term not exceeding six monthe at hard labour."

Under section $\overline{5}, \mathrm{I}$ would like again distinctly w call the attention of the House to the fact that the burden of pronf would leapparently upon the person sued to show. bot only that the industry was a new one. but that the labour could not be hat in this country: and I should like to know how that could possibly be investigated in a country so large as this. An cmpleyer of lalmor. desiring to establish a new industry. being sued for the penalty, would have to rum the risk of its heins proved that somewhere in this country persons whom he never heard of, or who never exercised their skill in the comutry. possessel skill, atecording to their own accome, it might he, and were able to discharge the duties for which he employed foreigners. Altogether, I think the Bill is one which, while it may be framed closely on the lines of the legislation of the United states, we would not liesitate to condemm wherever we fomi it. The American Act it self isone which has prowoked a remonstrance. 1 think the manimous remonstrance, of the committee which incestigated the subject, and I should suppose it would inot be in accordance with the desire of that committee that an Act which they resenten as harsh, extreme in its provisions. almost harbarons in its operations agamst halomers along the British line, should be copied by this Honse. At any rate the Bill is one from which we can expect no redress, as far as the operation of the law in the United States is concerned, and 1 fail to see what good it can do in this country. I intinated, when I commenced my renarks, that the Bill was stipported by the representatives of a very momerons class in the comitry. I am aware that a number of persons in the country desire a passage of a similar law, in the interest of working prople and labour onganizations. I am sure that this Parliament has ilways been willing to give that class of persons any proper legislation for the legitimate encomagement of their organizations or for their effectual working, and will give them any fair and proper protection for their labour, bat they camnot expect this Parliament to give them legislation which will close the doors against foreigners who are willing, at their own expense, to come to this country and earn their living like the rest of us. I will, therefore, conclude by moving that the further consideration of this Bill le deferred until this diy six months. I would call the attention of the House, although perhaps I ought not to make too much of that, to the circumstances comnected with our present relations with the United States. I am convinced that, whatever the result may he of the negotiations which are in progress as regards matters which are still unsettled letween the two countries, there will he a desire on the part of the United States to make a friendly adjustment of those differences with us, provided that no interest of the other country is sacrificed to any considerable extent. Pepresentations have heen male with regard to the harsh operation of the Alien Labour Law which exists in that comntry, amb. though it would he absurd for me to say thit we have any hope or expectation as to what the result of our remonstrances may be, because the Alien baht. our Law is not the policy of any particalar Administration in the United States, fut is a law passed les Congress and it isCongress alone that cam malertakic to shape the policy on that subject. still I do think that, even from that point of view in regatd to our relations with that country, if this Bill were felt to be eren the slightest sting liy them, it would he unwise to alopt it in the present stage of negotiations bet ween us and in the unsettled state of some affairs hetween the two comatries. However, what I bise my motion on, irrespective of any semtiment which we may feel as to the harsh treatment of our citizens under this law, is that this Bill if passed will not ameliorate the comdition of affairs in any degree, that it will not have the same effert that remonstrances on the part of this Govermment would have, and that it will not in any way impore the position of our people in that regard.

Mr. LAURIER. While I agree with the hom. gentleman that the Bill is of an illiberal characten which shonld not be encomaged mater ayy arcumstances, I do not think the hon. rentleman has really addressed himself to the tiesk of dealing with the question which is before the House. I did not understand the mover of this Bill to recommend it in any way to the Honse on its merits. Int simply as a measure - I will not saty a retaliatory measure -but as a measure called for by the chatacter of of the legislation which has taken place in the Laited sitates. 1 did not milerstaml the hom. gentleman to defend the proposition of his own Bill upon its own meriss, hut simply lecause he thought it was necessitated from the illiberal character of the legislation of the United states upon the same sulbject. As I understoonl, he would not propose such legislation if it dill not exist onthe other side of the line, and the only excuse he made for introducing it was that we were to meet the Americans on the salne ground as we were met by them. That is a measure of reciprocity, but it is not a recipro. city of friendliness, but a reciprocity of retaliation, aceording to the way in which he puts it. It was pointed out to us two years ago, when a similar measure was before us, that the legislation of the United States was not designed especially against Canada, but was against the world at large. It was pointed out that the prolicy of the United States is. as has been stated hy the Minister of Justice, aml as sir John Macdonald stated at the time, not tw, encourage immigration but to curtail immigration. and that this measure was not designed against Canada in particular. The proposal then was that a friendly conference on the sulject should he hat with the United States Government. The maitter was referred to a committee and considered by them, and the committee reported :

[^14]Law, and to allow of such representation being made, and to afford time for its ciue consideration, recommend that further consideration of this Bill be postponed until next session.'
The Minister of Justice has just told us that representations have been made at Washington against the oppressive character of this law, but it seems to me that the most important occasion to make such representations to the Government at Washington has been lost. I presume such representations were made ly correspondence, but some days ago, we had a delegation of the Canadian fovermment groing to Wiashington, and certainly that was the most convenient time to make representations against a law which, while it was mot intended against Canala particularly, still in practice has leen curried ont against Canada. The comespondence has leeen brought down as to what took place at Washington on this occasion, and among the matters which were bought to the attention of the American fovernment by the Camalian commissioners I fail to see anything in regard to this matter. This vital subject appears to have been omitted from their representations. I am sure the hon. member who moved this Bill will agree with me that the occasion when represtatations could have been male to the authorities at Wiashington would have been when our commissioners had been there dise issing varions matters at issue between the two countries, aml it seems to me that, if they had marle those representations then, they would have hal a better opportunity of heing heard, and of securing a remedy. Of conse there is an exil in connection with this. Though the legislation of the United States in this regamel was not designed against Canada, still, as the hom. gentleman has conclusively shown, its effect has been against C'anadi, hut I think the best method is not what he proposes but by negrotiation with our neighlours.

Mr. RICKMAN. The prineiple of protecting the interests of our labouring people--the whole working community in fact--is one which should receive careful attention, and it is one which, in riew of the way in which this matter is dealt with in the United States, deserves strong support here in Canarla. According to the Alien Laloour Law now in force in the States, contractors are debarred frou importing foreign labour to carry on their works, and everybody knows how this law has been made operative to prevent individuals in Canoula from crossing the boundary line to work in the United Sitates, while leeing resilents of this country. The ultimatum has been that such men must trunsfer themselves hatg ande! bargage and hecome homit tide citizens of the Republic, or else they cannot lee allowed to work there. However much we might feel disposed to condemn such a principle and such a law in the abstract, when brought face to face with the fact that they are being carried ont against labour in our own country, it t:aturally suggests retaliation. The yuestion arises under these circumstances: Should not something be done to protect our workingmen and mechanies in a mamer similar to that which prevails across the line: If the United States law works against Canadian labour and assists labour in that country, there seems to be no reason why a similar law should not work in the interest of labour here. As far as $I \mathrm{am}$ able to judge, $I$ am inclined to think the measure introluced by my hon. friend is a fair one in the interest of anl improtant element of our population.

Mr. MoKAY: I comsider that the policy of protection, which is now the policy of this comntry, should be applied to the workingmen just as much as to the employers. We have inmumerable cases where citizens of this comntry have gone over to the United states anl secured employment. and then they have heen toll that the laws of that comntry preventel their remaining there unless they were citizens. In the city I have the lionour, with my colleague, to represent, we have many cases where men have gone to Buffilo and other places. aml have been told they conld not be employen unless they moved their families and became citizens of that comatry. During the sittings of the committee two sessions atgo, we hat immmerable cases brought before us, showing that. While this was the case with our citizens along the border, citizens of the United States were allowed to work freely in this country. At the same time our citizens on the border were forbiden from working in that comotry. That has happened at Fort Erie, at Port Huron, Niagara Falls and at Windsor, and many other places on the frontier. Railway emploves, of which there are a great many in those places who were working in cities on the opposite sile, were told that to ohtain employment in that country they must give up their tevidence in Canata amd become residents of the United States. There was one case in the town of Welland, of a lady who hat a position on the other side, and had to abandon it on account of this law. This law has been in existellce now for some years, and as time has rolled on we timd that it is heing more rigidly enforced, and is now applied with more rigour than it has been at any time heretofore. 1 do not consider the Bill, which has heen bronght. in by the hon. memleer for Leeds and (irenville (Mr. Taylor), to he in any sense a Bill of retaliation; I consider it rather in the direction of the protection of our workingmen. I do not think that the Bill will temd to prevent immigration to this country. There is nothing in it to prevent or forbid any person coming to this country of his own free will in order to secure employment or to retain it, so long as he does not come under contract. I think the intention of the Bill is rather to prevent workingmen coming over here in large numbers, muler contract, to displace our own workingmen. For these reasons I intend to support the Bill now before the House.

Mr. EDA:AR. I im very glad inleed that the hon. member has hrought in this Bill. I agree with a great deal that he has stated alonat the barbarons character of the Act of Congress to which he refers, and the hardships to which it subjects our citizens. But the reason why I am glad he has brought in this Bill is in order that the Parliament and people of Canadia may show that they are not actuated by the same feelings as actuated the Congress of the United States when they passed that Act. I hope both sides of the Honse will show that they are able to rise above those sentiments of retaliation which they might naturally feel at tirst thought, but which our cooler judgment should forbid us to indulge in. I think this Bill is a vegy extraordinary one. For instance, in the sixth paragraph, to which no reference has yet heen made, I find that it is proposed to make the collector of customs at every port in Canada.a julge, amb a juror. amd a policeman. The Bill silys:
"The collector of enstoms at any port in Cianada. in case he shall be satisfied that an immigrant has been allowed to land in Canada contrary to the provisions of this Act, shall canse such immigrant. withina period of one vear after landing or entry, to be laken into custody and returned to the eonntry from whence he e:ame, at the expense of the owner of the vessel.
The idea of coolly proposing in this Parliament legislation of that character. 1 eamot mulerstand. To phace it in the power of any collector of customs at any port in Canala, unon being satistied of certain comblitions, to arrest an individual and place him in chatondy and expel him from (abada- why. sir, I think the hom gentleman camont have been serions in akking the Homse to pass a clause of that kint.

Mr. NES. 1 think the time w:ll eventaally come when a motion for the six months hoist of a Bill of this kind will not preval in this Honse. It is true that the law of congress referved to is har biowns. and I may say. indecent. But we must mot farget that the Cnited states is the ofominant prow on this continent. and that smaller powers. such as our own. camot afford to be more moral than the United states. especially in puestions at fecting our own people and our own tate interests. If we camot have reciprocity in one way. we have fot to have it in another. If the dominame nation is not alowe petty atacks of this chatacter npon sur people, contraty to principle, contrary to decency, and contrary w julgnent. it may hecone necessaty eventually for us to respond in the same mamer: Although I amprepared to-lay to vote for the anembent, I will not promise what I may do in future if our covermment do not suceced in prevailing upon the American (iovermment witigate very considerahly the grievances that our people complain of, and whichare expressed in the Bill now hefore the Honse.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). The hom gentlemanremints me of a church member who, being subjecten to atgrat provocation, said: "I helong to a society that leclieves in falling from grace, and if you do nit stop your impoper combluct and olservations towarls me, I shall fall and then I shall give you a thrashing." And so the hon gentleman says, although at the present time he is not prepared to, support so harbarous a measure as that which is now hefore the House, yet the time may come when he will support a measure just of this sort. If we camot afford to be any hetter than our neighlours, and if our neighbours choose to adopt a barbarous policy, we must be just as barbarous as they are. Well, Sir; I do not subseribe to that doctrine. I do not think that the Bill of the hom. member for Leeds and (irenville (Mr. Taylor) is a necessary bill under the existing circuinstances, and I camot conceive a state of circumstances in which it would ever be to the adrantage of Canala to alopt such a measure as the hon. gentleman has submitted. I do not agree with the hon. gentle. man's statement of the facts. I do not agree that the American Bill, whatever may be its character or its provisions, has been applied to anyboly in this country in the rigorons way that the hon. gentleman supposes, and that the extracts which he read would lead us to believe. The extracts whicin the hon. member has read to the House are representations of the exceptions aml not of the Mr. Eidear.
rule. If the hon. gentleman were to go to-day to the town of Windsor opposite Detroit. anil go down to the ferry at sevell oclock in the morning, he would fimb every morning two or three humdred people crossing from Windsor to Detroit to engage in their daily ocenpation : and at six riclock in the evening he wrould finl them again at the ferry on their way hack. son it is not a fact that persons are prevented from residing in Canala, and entering into contracts with persme residing in the United states. I have mo doulte that if a company were to mulertake to come int., Canala aml engace persms here to go actoss the lorder and to lalow in the Cnited states, imperti. ments would he put in their way muler the Act. But so far as I know there never has heen amy ohstacle pat in the way of a party residing on the Canalian side of the horder. going orer the other side and entering into a contract with a party there to engage his services. The Bill of the hon. gentlemian would go very much further than the American Bill, ats it has been interpreterl. The Bill of the hom. gentleman wouh prevent exers clergyman who resides in the United States from arosing the border and engaging as pastor of a church or congregation on the Canadian side of the line. A clergyman assumes that he is acting mile a divine commission, and that so far an his vecation is concerned, he is not anmenalle the lan of any particular conutry. He goes where he pleats. Every day you will find church assonciations madertaking to semd missionaries to China, Japan and farther Lndia: :anl if the forermments of those comutries were to act in the way in which the hon. genteman proposes to act in this Bill. they would be justitied in madertaking to expel every one who crosses their borders. The hom. gentleman would regitud that as a most barbarens. species of persetution, one agailist which christen. dom should enter its protest : and yet the hom. gentleman proposes to place restrictions in the way of the varioms religions bolies or denominations: sending a minister from another country int, Canala. or preventing him voluntarily coming here, if there is any arrangement or agreement that he shall ate as pastor of any charch or ellgage as missonary in imy particular district. When I look at this Bill Ifind it would contravene what I suppose to be all important matter of pulilis: policy, not simply on this side of this Honsic int on that side of the House as well. Let me suppose, as I think the hon. gentleman himself stated. that the Camadian Pacific Railway Company must be regarded as a great immigration agency : that this railuay has millions of acres of land, and it would be for the interests of the comitry that it shomid engage in the settlement of those lands, to const ruct branch lines, to extend railway facilitics to a pomlation that are not yet in the country ; that in the course of a few years those lands will be subject to manicipal taxation and serious burdens, and if the mailway company has not disposed of then they will have very strong pressure brought to bear on them.s, much so that it will become their interest to secure settlers and dispose of all their land. If this Bill were adopted, the Camadian Pacific Railway com. pany conld not hold out any inducement to parties to come and settle with a view to oltaining employment from the company, with a siew to railway construction, with a view to receiving compensittion in the form of ham. We know that if ithy general sche:ne of immigration were untertaken in the North-West and attempts were made for the settlement of the country by this great corporation-and 1 admit it could do a great leal if it were so disposed-the Bill of the hon. gentleman would place a serions imperliment in the way of any such enterprise. I agree with the observation made by the Minister of Instice, that the Bill of the hon. gentleman would mot be an effective measure. There are humdreds of people residing on the Canadian side of the houndary who are employed on the American side and they continue to resile here. There is no such corresponding number of Americans wanting to obtain employment on the Canalian side of the homler. This makes it, therefore, even if it were mane effective operate against an insignificant number of people, a mere fraction of the number that the American Bill, if it were put into effective operation, would seriously or injurionsly affect. who are residents on the (ianamian side. It seems to me that a very mach stronger position to take is. to urge the American (iovermment to repeal their measure. I almit it is a barbarous measure : I dink it is a measure interfering with those rights which belong to a mann as a man, and it is not in our interests to follow on the line which they have andopten, but it is our interests to adhere to what is a generous, just and fair course, and to press uponom neighlours the propriety of repealing a measure that on moprinciple of justiee, humanity, of fair leating lam be upheh.

Mr. INaRAM. I would not rise to take part in the discussion of this Bill were I not of the opinion that the motion made by the Dinister of lustice will for injustice to a large portion of the people of (:anala inasmuch as sutficient discossion shomld he given it. The lill wits introlaced into the Honse in Lssis. and was refered to a special committee in $18(\mathrm{H})$. Evidence was prodaced before that committee, which, in my mind at all conts, requires legislation of some kind. So far as this Bill is concerned, personally $I$ am mot prepared to saty that 1 would support any such measure, nor am I prepared to say that there are not provisions in it which I would not heartily support. Wlten the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) introluced this Bill the othce day. he allowed it to be postponed until to-lay, at the request of Ministers, and from the remarks made ly that hon. gentleman in moving the Bill, and with the little discussion that has taken place, the motion moved by the Minister of Justice seems to me to he unfair to a large portion of the people. The hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) has stated that if you go to Windsor you will not find the same objections raised there as were entertained in 1888 and 188! when this Bill was before the House. 1 wish to say that I have visited Windsor on many occasions, and have found a very strong feeling in that down against the American authorities for the harsh manner in which they treat the Canadian people. Along the line at Fort Erie and Buffalo the same feeling is met with: at Niagara Falls and Clifton the same feeling is entertianed anong our own people. I think it would be proper for this diovermment to introduce some legislation that would make provision for the protection of our workingmen along the boundary line at such places as I have described. I have read in the evidence alduced before the committee that at $S$. Stephen $\bar{i}(k)$ men atre em. ployen, half of whom reside in the state of Mane. They are permitted to go to this town. work there, amd retam tor the United States at night. This is only one: of the several cases I read in the evitence of that committee : and yet the hom. member for Bothwell (.Nr. Mins) says that such is an exception and not the rule. If all the cases of hardship that our people suffer through this Alien Aet of the United States were known, hon. gentlemen would he surprised there were so man. The hon. memleer for Ginyshorough (Mr. Fraser), who must know as a matter of fact that this Bill has bern hefore the people for three years, rose torday and combemmed every provision of the Bill, when it is quite evident he never read it. I therefore saty that if wher hom. members have wiven the Bill no more comsideration than that, then it is only a matter of justice to a large mumber of our people that this Bill, instean of receiving the three or six months hoist. should he postponed to a later date in oriel that bom. members may arefully real amd study its provisioms. I womlil ask, sir. on hehalf of the representatives of the Latonar (ongress of the Dominion, that this rebate be adjourne matil some time next week at least. in orler to give these genthemen an opportunity of discussing this question with the dovermment on sithorlay next. After that 1 an preparen to rote on this puestion. I will, $^{2}$ therefore move that this debate he allourned. but before the motion is put I would like to refer to a statement made by the hom. leader of the Opposition. The hom. gentleman sitys that the Alien Laboar Law was mot designed against Camala. Well, the hom. the lealer of the Opposition and the hom the Minister of Justice difier somewhat in theiropinionas to that, becanse linnd from the Hansarl of 1 s ( 0 that the Minist er of Instice puten some of the remarks made hy the committee on this reay same bill in Washington, the tembency of which remarks was to show conclusively that the American Congress did design this bill against Canata as against every other nation of the world. I am not in sympathy with the Alien Labour Latw of the Linited states. I am opposed to any sheh legishation ats that lecing placen upon the statute-book of any comatry, but when the Anerican people take such a eourse I have sufticient Canalian home in my reins to stand up for the (amalian perple. I have great hope in the future of this comintry, and I have faith that the workingmen of Canada are prepareal and willing to stand up and defend themselves; willing to stand up for what they lelieve to be fight, and willing to say that they are able to compete with all other workingren on equal terms, no matter where they come from. All our working people want is to be placed upon the same terms with the working people of the Cniteal sitates. I move the adjournment of the dekate.

Notion agreed to, and lehate adjommed.

Administration of Justice-Travelling expenses of Judges in the North-West Territories. 34,000

Mr. McMULLEN. How are the travelling expenses of the members of the North-West Council arranged?

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The members of the North-West Comeil are paid ont of a vote taken ly the Minister of the Interior for the legislative expenses of the North-West Territories. The sessional allowance is fixed by statute amd the mileage I think is fixed by an ordinance of the territories.

Mr. Mr.MULLEN. How is it that a moteof $$ 4,0$ (N) is asked this year, when only about two-thirds of a similar amont was expemied last year?

Nir JOHN THOMPSON. It has beencostomary to take this vote because it is impossible to ascertain exactly the amount that will be required. bast year it took about $$ 2,3(0)$, but that may be increased considerably in a year, through its heing necessary to hold a court for the trial of eriminal offences, special terms, or anything of that kind.

Mr. MoMULLEN. I understood the custom Was that i rote was mot taken for any more money than it was fomd necessary to expend from year to year, ant my reason for asking the question was lecamse the vote wats so mulh in excess of the sum expeimled last year.

Circuit allowances in British Columbia. Si,000
Mr. DAVILS (P.E.l.) Is there any distinction male between the julges of British Columbia and other juiges :

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Travelling is very expensive in British Columbia.

Mr. DAVIEN (P.E.I.) What is the circuit allonance for each juige : Does this include the expenses of the County Court julges:

Sir JOHN IHOMPSON. It does include the tavelling expenses of the County (ourt julges. These expenses are often very high. It is not mucommon for a judge to reguire sh, $\mathrm{s}(\mathrm{x})$ to pay his expernses on a large circuit.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) In what way are they paid:

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The actual expenses which they incur, and they seml their vonchers. In some cases pack-trains have to be sent with the julge. and it is very lifficult to get accommonlation in the country at all.

Mr. MeNULLEEN. I think the mode of pro villing for the travelling expenses of the judges in the North-West. as well as other officials there, is a wrong one. I think it would be better to grant a reasomable mileage allowance, instead of leaving the judges to make out and certify their own accounts. In Ontario each county julge is allowed senk a year for travelling expenses. Why not apply the same principle to all judges in every part of the Dominion: Owing to the facilities now provided by the Canadian Pacific Railway, and other modes of travel in the North- West, it would not be a difficult matter, I think, to fix what would le a sufficient amount to cover the expenses of the juthes there.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Is there a fixed allowance for each judge in Manitoba?

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. They are allowedsis a day for living expenses, besiles their actual moving expenses.

Mr. MeMelifes.

Mr. Me.MULLEN. I would like to know why the judges of Manitolat could not he put under the same rule as the julges of Ontario. In Manitoba the municipality arrangements are now complete, and I think the fovernment might do away with the per dirm allowance, which appears to be pretty large.

Sir JOHE THOMDSOS. The allowance in Mamitola is unt so favourahle to the julges as the allowance in Ontario and the Eastern Provinces, where they are allowed $51(x)$ for every court they hold. For instance, a judge holding a court for five day: in one of the other provinces, would receive slow. whereas in Manitoba he would only receive S3il and his actual travelling expenses, which womh proh. ably not amount to more than S 30 more.

Mr. DFVLIN. I would like to ask the Dinister of Justice if there is any intention of increasing the salaries of the judges. We hat some diseussion last session on this sulject, and I understom that the Minister of I Iustice was opposed to any increase.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I rid mot quite sis. that : but I shall be able to inform the hom. gentleman later. I am not quite able to do so now.

Supreme Court of Canada-The Reporter. . $$ 2,401$

Mr. IAVIES (P. F.I.) I notice liy the press reports of an interview which the hon. Minister of Justice had with eertain gentlemen from the Ontario bar, that he intimated to them that he wooll be disposed to order the Supreme cour rejonts te be furnished free to law libraries. I la not know whether that report correctly describes what he did say, but I would like to ask him if he will do that, and if so I assume that the same favent will be extended to the Maritime Provinces.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The interview wats mot quite correctly reported. What I sail was that there was a proposition hefore the Council, unt dis:posed of, for granting to the law lihraries, which are organized moler statutory authority in the different provinces, the Nupreme and Exchepuer Reports, as they are furnished to the judges, and atso one or two copies of the ammal statutes, and the Pasettr, and the ammal compilation of the criminal law.

Mr. DAVIFN: (I.E.I.) I muderstamd that will le done:

Sir JOHN THOMPNON. I cammot say, as it is not disposed of yet.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) The hon. gentleman, I understand, is rather personally in favour of that. Of course, I understand, if it is clone, it will apply. to other provinces where law societies are incorporated.

Supreme Court-Librarian  81,000

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I propose to make a change. No librarian has been appointer so far, and the books are in charge of a caretaker, who ranks very little above a messenger. The number of volumes is becoming very large and the library very valuable, and I think it ought to be under the care of a thoroughly competent librarian. I do not think it is wise to continue the system we have hal heretofore. I made a proposition in Parliament the session before last, but deferred taking action in view of the opinion then expressed as to the advis. ability of going on as we hal gone before. Now that we have a new library room ready for ocenpation, I think we should have a competent libarian.

Mr. D.AVIEN (P.E.1.) The hon gentleman does not propose to retain the person who has atcted as librarian for some years back:

Nir .JOHN THOUPNON. No.
Mr. DAVIFs: (P.E.I.) What is the hon. gentleman going to do with that officer?
sir IOHN THOMPSON. I propose to superanmate him.

Mr. DAVIES (l'.F.I.) (an the hom. gentleman state who will be appointed:

Sir JoHN THOMPGON. No.

ExchequerCourtof Canada-Additional to Registrar as Editor and publisher  of Reports. $$ 300$

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The reports will he a new series, and the sum of Sik $(x)$ is given to the Registrar of the Supreme Court for supervising and editing the reports of that court. I propose to rive half that amount to the Registrar of the Exchequer Court for acting as editor. I think the issue will not he so large as the issue separately of reports. although the Registrar thinks they will : but for the present I think half the salary ought to sutfice.

Salary of Registrar in Admiralty,  Quebec................................ $$ 66665$

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Why pay him any more then the registrar anywhere else:

Sir JoHN THOMPSON. Only for the reason that the salary has been paid for many years. The fees were abolished last session. I will ask to have that item stand for the present.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I was going to ask the hom. gentleman, with reference to the new Admiralty Court, whether the juiges for whom he has provided a salary will contime hereafter to receive the fees which they have been heretofore entitled to unler the rules:

Nir JOHN THOMPNON. No, the judge receives his salary in lieu of all fees. That is expressly pro. vided by the Act.

Mr. DAVIFs (P.E.I.) I think they are exacting them.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I must see to that at once and have the rules altered if necessary.

Dominion Police.

$\qquad$
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. There is a slight increase here because some extra hands are repuired during the session of Parliament, as we have been asked by the Commission of Internal Economy to provide men to attend the lobbies of the House.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Under what department does this police force come:

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. In the first place it is under a commissioner of police, who is appointed under the statute passed on that subject. He is attached to my department for the purpose of making recommendations to Council and reporting, but the commissioner has the sole right to appoint the officials.

Mr. DAVIEN(P.E.I.) How many men are there in the Dominion police force? Are they all in Ottawa:

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Ves, they are all living in Ottawa amd are all discharging duties connected with the public buildings. The number and the salaries are shown in the return which I laid on the Table at the legimning of the session as reyuired by the statute. I think there are about 2.5 .

Mr. DAVIEN (P.E.I.) Are they all requiren? Sir IOHN THOMPSON. Ves, certainly.
Mr. FOSTER. I propose to ask that the committee rise and report the resolutions. Owing to various causes, the lateness of the last session, the printing of the revised lists and other matters, some departments are behind with their reports, and I ann afraid some of them will not be able to get out their reports until a late date. I hope my hon. frieuls opposite will take that into consideration and will not make any oljection on that account. But, in view of that, I propose that we shall take up first those items in the estimates which are not depentent upon bringing down the lepartmental reports for their illustration. In fact, I think that nearly all the illumination required will be found in the Anditor deneral's Keport, and with that hefore the hom. members all the items of expenditure might be taken up. However, if hom. gentlemen agree to that, we will next take up legislation, in regaral to which there is no report, and then generally such votes as ilo not reguire the lepartmental reports.

Mr. LAURIER. I must tell my hom. friend that 1 think much more of the reports of the various departments than he seems to do. I do not think Parliament would be discharging its daty to the public if memhers did not read these reports.

Mr. FONTER. How many do you real yourself?
Mr. LAURIER. I do not reall them all, but, though I have not time to do that. my colleagues do read then, and, while we will facilitate business ats far ats we cian. I do not see that the hon. gentleman can go on with supply to any extent without these reports being before us. I admit that the session last year was very long, but the hon. gentleman must remember that it was called much later than it should have been.

Committee rose and reported the resobtions.
sir JOHN THOMPSON moved the adjourmment of the House.

Motion agreed to : and House adjommed at 5.5 m p.m.

Mr. LACRIER. I wish to ask the hom. Minis ter of Marine if the papers lerought down the other day in regard to the Newfomdland question inchate the whole of the correspontence ?

Mr. TUlPER. No. The papers I brought down the other day are the papers on which 1 based an answer to a question asked across the House. and which I stated would be prepared in advance of the other papers. The other papers are more volmminons than I understoon a few days ago they were hut they have leen prepared for presentation. and are awaiting the ordinary approval of the authorities lefore leing laid on the Tahle.

SUPPIC - THE BUDCET:

Mr. EOXTER moned that the House resolve itself into committee of supply. He said: In making my finameial statement last year. I estimated that the revenne for $189(1)-91$ would amount to S3s, Sis. F ol. The revenne which athally acerned fell short of that hoy ser9,391, and was distributed as foliows:-

Comparing these items and total revenue with the result of 1889.90 , we find a Customs decrease of S589,6.53, an Excise decrease of $$ 703,268$, and a decrease in Miscellaneous of $$ 27,694$. The decrease in Customs is spread over a number of items, which I will real:

There was a decrease in the sugar duties orer the normal year preceding, ISSS-s! : and if it hat not lreen for the displicement and disturbance which arose conseguent upon the change of sugar duties in the United States and the idea that at:orresponding change would be mate in our own tariff, there is no doubt the Customs duties derived therefrom would have been far larger than they were, insteal of falling, as they did. far short of those of IRss-8!. Excise shows a large decrease of $\mathbf{S 7 0 3 . 2 6 8}$. but that is more nominal than real. The law which makes in necessary that spirits should he kept two years in tank for aging purposes came into efferet the lat of July, 1800, and a large amount of spirits was withdrawn in anticipation, the duties upon which would have amounted to prohably Sino (MO). This would havegone naturally, but for that circomstance. inta the Excise duties of the year weare considering. In the Miscellaneous a small decrease, as compared with the precerling year, is shown, namely, 327,694 . The total decrease amounts to $\$ 1,320,61 ;$. With reference to Excise, the following table shows the course of business for two years :-

This shows that the quantity of spirits taken from bond in 1889-00 amounted to $3,574,799$ gallons. In and the decrease in the acerued duty of $18(4) .91$, as the other articles of Excise.malt. cigars, cigarettes, tohnacol, and snuff, show an increase over the precering year. Malt shows an increase of $$ 31, \pi / 2$ in aceruel duties : cigirs show an increase of $$ 11$, $30^{-1}$ in acerued duties ; cigarettes show an increase of Sll,2n! : and tohatco and snuff an increase of Sla.2-4 in accrued duties. It might be as well to keep up the table which has been presented for several years in our financial statements as to the per capita consumption of liguors and tobacero, as shown hy the Excise reports. The following are the figures:-

IEER CAPITA CONSUMPTION OF LIQUORS AND TOBACCO.

When we come to the expenditures of $1 s(\mu)-91$. which were estimated at $83(6,000,0 \times 6)$, we find that the actual expenditure exceeded that amount by $33+3.2 \%_{i}^{-}$, giving a total actual expenditure of $3.36,-$ 343, $\mathbf{i t i}$. Although the expenditure last year shows an increase of this amome over the estinnate, the expenditure itself is $57,4,26$ less than the expemditure in 18ss-89. The chief items in which there was an increase of expenditure, as compared with the: precerling year, are as follows:-

A large increase took place ofing to the census, for which there was an item of $3202,1: 04$. The next largest item is in the collection of revenue, Railways and Canals, whish shows an increase of $\mathbf{3} 143,316$. The increase in expenditure, therefore as compared with the preceding year, is almost entirely due to the abnormal and large expenditure incurred in taking the census. The decreases were as follows:-

| Interest on Public Debt.. | 72,705 |
| :---: | :---: |
| Charges of Management. | 1,625 |
| Indians | 150,389 |
| Iegislation | 337, 61 |

| Pensions | 3,54] |
| Public Work | 34,95 |
| Railways and Can | 15,10\% |
| Culling Timber | -.13 |
| Dominion Lands | 15,(M)1 |

Decreases took plate in the expenditure on the interest on the Public lebt of sio.jos, due to the retirement of stock hearing 6 per cent, $\bar{\sigma}$ per cent and + per cent and replated by money horowed at about 33 per cent. In Chatges of Management there is a slight recrease of $\$ 1,6 i=5$. In the care of Indiams, there is a large decrease, amounting to $\mathbf{s i 2 0 , 3 8 9}$. In the Nounten Police there is a decrease of 512,114 . As far ats these decreases are concemed, they are permanent as regand: Monnted Police and Imblians amh. in the matter of the Public Delat. so far as the principal involved is concerned, while the increases are largely ahmomal in their character and are not likely to decur again, the celsus being likely to be finished during the carrent gear. Simming up, then, we have ats a revenue for the past year $\mathbf{S} 38,5 \pi!1,3110$, and an expenditure of $\mathbf{S 3 6}$, 343, 5 it. which leaves us with a sumphe on (omsolidated Fund accome of s.2.2:i.7t?. If it were not for the item of Capital Expenditures, this surplas would remain in hamd for a decrease of the deht. but during the past year there was expended on apital account the following anounts:-- (omparing this with the previous veal. Iss!- $(\mathrm{K})$, we find that the expenditure then on capital ac-IS(M)-91, making a saving in favone of the latter year of $\$ 1,3+9,7: N$. The net result, therefore, of the operation of the year, is that we have provided for the ordinaryexpenses andservices of the conantryout of the Consolidated Fumd, we have laid up in the Sinking Fuml, which is of course practically a reduction of the delt, sl, 93s,07s, we have provided for capital expenditures, including railway sulasidies, $54,3 \times 1$, $\overline{2}+4$ and we have been able to do that with all aldition to the delit of only $\sin -5, s / s$. Hon. gentlemen may remember that in 1889, on the oecasion of my first Bulget speech, 1 made a forecast as follows: That I thought the time harl come for equalizing revenie and expenditure, and that, hy the time we enterel 1892, we should have reduced the revenue and expenditure to a balance. and from that time on we should have sutficient as a surplus from Consolidated Revenue Fund to pay the ordinary capital expenditure which was neces. sary for the country from year to year. That fore cast has so far been fultillen, and if it han not been that we took off the duties on raw sugar last year, involving a loss of orer $\$ 3,(\mathrm{NO},(\mathrm{ON})$ in that item of revenue alone, we should have been able to come up to the end of 1892 without one dollat of increase of debt since 1889 , and with more than half a million of decrease in our permanent deht. It may not lie uninteresting to the House to take a review of the four years just past in order to show by a birdseye view the fimancial operations of the comutry during that time. This will readily appear from the following table :-

It will be seen that, flowing those four years, the expenditure on Consolidated Fumd accome has kept remarkably even, being on an average about S3i,000,(KM) each year. On capital account, not inchuling railway subsidies, we expended in 185\%-
 $\$ 4,0: 3,159$; and in 18(0)-91, $8,115, \mathbf{N} 60$ : the annount for $18(M)-41$ being $51,3 \geqslant 1,6(n)$ less than was expended in 188T-ss, which again is in the proper direction. The revenue, also, has been huoyant, rising from $\$ 36,908,463$ in $188 ;-68$ to $538,379,310$ in $1800-91$. There was one deficit incurred contrary to the convictions and the traditions of the party, which oceured in 1857-8s. but which was due to abnommal conditions and amounted to Sillo,0:31: but the subsequent years showed a surplus of $31,865,0,163$ in $1888-89,83,850,593$ in 1859.90 , and $50,235,742$ in $18(4) \cdot 91$. The net delth has remained at about the same figure, and is now $\mathbf{s e}^{2}: 3, \mathbf{N}(9,030$. The net debt increase in the last two years hats been only sonjo, 818 . The net interest paid has decreased from $1885-88$, having heen $88,891,088$ in that year, $58,843,739$ in $1888-89,38,7 \pi t, 500$ in $1889-90$ and Ex, athi, WOS in 18! M-91. That is to say, in the four years the net interest paid has decreased by about $\$ 4(0), 000$. The rate of interest on the gross delst has also decreased continuously as well as on the net deht, and while it stool at $3 \cdot 4 \overline{5}$ on the gross debt in $1887-88$, it is now only $3: 35$, while the interest on the net debt has decreased from $\mathbf{3} \cdot 12$ in the first year to $2 \cdot 03$ in the last year. The net interest $p_{0}$ rapita repuired to carry the debt according to the revision conserguent upon the census statement, was $\$ 1.90$ in 1857.88 and $\$ 1.76$ in 1890)-91. This, in brief, shows the operation of the finances of the comutry during the last four years, and I have no hesitation in presenting it to the Honse and to the country as a conservative statement full of hope and promise as to the ability and the capacity of this comntry, in the first place to keep its expenses fairly within reasonable limits, and at the same time to carry on without undue stint the pullie and necessary services of the country. Coming now to 1s91, !i? the current vear, the receipts up to the 20)th March the emi of the last tiscal year the receipts were Sll,3!6,(MX). But of course there have heen changes which will necessitate my making a different estimate for the time between the eoth March, Is! ! ? and the end of this fiscal year. The expected increase in Excise for the remaining four months, or alout that time. as compared with the like perion of last year, is estimated at $\$ 3.00,0 \mathrm{KK}$, and the ex pecterl decrease in sugar duties for that time is estimated at Sinorokn. So, provided that the thale of the country goes on upen about the same hatsis as last year. and making an allowance for these two items, we may expect for the remainder of the term from the enth March to the lst luly, sll.IG(i, (Hn) of revenue. That, alded to what has acerued up to the enth March, will give for the current year basis of calculation the revenue from Customs path by the people of the comanty this year will be, in romal Which was aloout the amome of actual taxation taken off in the repeal of the duties of raw sreme. The Excise will net, probably, about $\mathbf{3 l}$, (ox), (own more than the pist year. The Discellaneons I have estimated at alow the same. Coming to the expemtiture for 1891-9:2, up to the exth Dareh we hate ex-up to the end of June. Sl3, tio.(NK), which will make a total estimated expentiture for the current year of $\$ 36,(6.50$, MNK , which is just about the same ats my estimate of revenue, leaving a small balance to the good, if we come out upon that basis. That is, the House is to understand that muler present combitions of tatiff and revenue, as long as they remain, we must not expect much surplus. Wै may expect an arerage income of ahont $\$ 36,7 \% 10$. ono. IVe must cut our gamments according to sin cloth, and keep our expenditure within that amome. The estimate for 1892.93 is as follows:-

 So much with reference to that. Last year, as the House ahrealy knows, temporary loans had tw be incurred to the amount of $\$ 7,7 s t, 0, i 6 i 6$. These were, of course, mate for the purpose of meeting redemp. tion of delt, as last year the total addition to the net debt was only some $\mathbf{8 3 , 0 0 0}$. We have rumning now, as the Honse was informed a few days ago, $\$ 9,7 \mathrm{i} 3,333$ in temporary loans. I may take a moment to explain as to the items of redemption which made these loans necessary. First, there hats been the clrain upon the sarings banks of the come try, owing to the change of interest from 4 per cent to $3 \pm$ per cent, and perhaps to other causes more general in their nature. In 1889.90, there was withdrawn from the savings banks of the country $\$ 1,943,892$ more than the deposits, plus the accrued interest for the year. In 18, mont, the sum thus withhrawn wassi, 612,438 , a reduction of ahout S3( 3 ) (KM) : and l estimate that for the current year there will lee nothing withdrawn in exeess of the deprosits, plus the acerued interest, but that rather, from the indications of the last eigit months, we will have a sum to the good, striking a balance between these two items. These, however, make is sum of $\mathbf{3 B}, \boldsymbol{\pi}(\mathrm{O}),(\mathrm{ON})$ which was practically a redemption of deht, and had to lee met and was met out of these temporary loans. For redemption of delit proper, we redeemed in $1889-(1), 83,-75,348$; in $1890-91$, (1tin) will he reteemed, making a total amount of $89,(\mathrm{BO}),(\mathrm{Ki} \%$ for redemption of debt to be met out of temporary loans. Then the capital expenditure, the increase of delte for the two precealing yeats, the net increase of deht for the current year amd the next year, have to be met as well : so that in andition to the sy, $9.33,33: 3$, Which is at present rumning as a temporary loan. prohathly some stin, (MO, (OXO will have to be proviled cither hy temporary or by permanent lown. As I mentioned to my hon. friend who questioned me on this point the other day, whether these temporary loans shall he continued as they are, or as they cain lest be continued, or whether it will be thought alvisable to go upon the market for a permanent lonin to meet ami wipe ont all these temporary loans, will be dependent upon the indications of the money market, amb the present is not a time at which it candetinitely saty what these indications will atrise. To show that whatever may have been the reoluction in the dovernment savings banks in 1889-(9) and $1 \mathrm{~s} 90-91$, it was not due to a diminution in the savings and deposits of the people. I have here a table which I think will give sitisfaction to the Honse. This shows the total :

Deposits in Banks.

This tells us that whereas the year ending May 31, 1801, withessed a derease of orer sibion,(0K) in deposits in the (iovernment hanks the $$$ months of the current vear show an increase of nearly $8(10,(M)$ ) in these deposits, while the total increase in all hanks is, for the 8 months, $$ 13, i 26,980$, and for the 20 months $$ 2,263,461$. Whatever course may he adopted as to these temporary loans it is satisfactory to know that there are indications from the records of the past two years of some trial and difficulty, that in the money markets at home the credit of Camada stamels well. First, our stocks and securities, while participating in the gencral fall which took place a year or so ago, owing to well-known causes, have speenlily recovered and maintained themselves since in advance of the securities and stocks of every other colonial market. I think it is not amiss for me, at this point, to take notice of what 1 consitler a somewhat remarkalle, as it is, 1 am happy to saty, an unprecelenterl, circumstance, with reference to our position and standing in the old comery. Hon. gentlemen know well on this sile of the House that during the last three or four years we have had to meet in the United States of America malign influences emanating from certain persons in (inada, pointing out to those who are not very friendly to us on that side of the line, the way in WhichCanala conld he the most effectually stricken and in what interest.s she might be most especially hurt. And those intimations, sent often direct, sent often through agents, and influential agents, sent fuite as often in the published specehes of hom. gentlemen on the other side of the House, have han their effect, and it has happened that in the legislation which has superrened Camata hats been hit at exactly those prints pointer out in the way I have mentioned. But, Sir, it had not been known previonsly that the scene of operations was to be transferred from this comutry and carried to the mother country, where the eredit and reputation of Canada are of much importance to us, amb contrihute greatly to our prestige amb onr prosperity. But, Sir, it has so been determined and the first attack has been delivered. The time of the attack was a peculiatly opportune one for an enemy to have winged his arrow to a vital point in Comadian repmation and ('anandian credit. It was a time when the mones market in (ireat Britain was peculianly sensitive. It had for two years heen sustaining the strain of losses and liguidations in south Dherica and of liguidations at home and wasagitated by the possi. hilities and premonitions of thancial hariship, and perhaps finameial disaster in different parts of Europe. It was a time when criticism of colomial finamee was much the fashion in direat Britain, and was somewhat unfarourable, owing to the late attempts which have heen made, not always successfully, hy the Australian colonies to float loans on the money market, and which hat in most cases resulter unfarourably to themselves. It wais a time when, as I have stated, Canada herself had tem-which hat to be continued or renewed in one form or another. It was a time when many meritorions enterprises were upon the London market, which, if they could be realized, would tend to the develonment of the resources of Canada in a material degrec. It was a time, too, when owing to the fine and ahmolant harrest of last year emigrants from the various centres of Creat Britain were being led to look to Canama, amd to our North- West partienlanly, as a future home for themselves and their families. It was a time, vhen a friend of Camala, if he had nothing gool to say, would have held his peace, or if he conld have presented one truth to have buoyed up and sustained the position of Canada, would have thought it his cluty to do so. It was a time when an enemy would have dipped his arrow in poison and winged it as straight ats he conh to the vital part of Canadian credit and reputation in the old country. He was wickedly wise ton in his choice of the instrument through which to make his attack. He chose a tinancial paper, one of the first in (ireat Britain which circulates among monied men, and through its utterances and representations has great influence and great weight in determining the minid of monied men towarids any

That is an exaggeration, amb what there is true in it is manle all the more mischievons hectase he puts no fates of comparisom along with the statement he makes. He dectares there lias beell an immense increase: in the aggregate dele of this comentry. The immense increase comsists in this---he is speaking of ferlemal matters, 1 suppose, amil he means ferleral indeloterl-uess-that in lsis the amount per head paid for the feclemal indehteniness was sil.is, whilst in ls?l it was Sl.ibi, an immense increase of just is cents per head during the perion from isös to 18 en. The imports, however, mainly ly larger promluctions for our own home market is a result of tariff legislation, and as a result of the development of our manufacturing industries. Take, for instance, as a matter of tabiflegislation. We find that there is a decrease. in romm inmbers, of $\sin (x),(X N O$ in the importations of pork and pork pronlucts from the Uniterl States in 1 I: $: 1$, as compared with $18: 0$. That does not mean that our people have consumed or produceal less pork promlucts, but it means that the prork prodhets which hefore, maler. lower tariff, came in from the United Nates of America aml displaced or supplied the demam for our own problucts, have been kept out to that extent : and that this demand is uow supplied hy home prodaction to the benetit of the consumer and pronlucer as well. The following table will make this clear: :-

I hate a table here which I will rean, simply to show the trend of trade within the last few yeats, and to give: us hope amd eonticlence that neither the Mckinley Bill not any other of a like nature necessabily bars the carrent of Camala's export trade of the current of its general business. Comparing ISNS with 1891 , our exports of mimals am their pronucts to the United States fell from sir.inn, (0) 10 sit, 316 , ( $(X)$, a lecrease of 43 per cent, whereas the exports of the same products to direat britain rose an increase of $2-$ per cent. The exports of agricultural products to the United Sitates fell from crease of 30 per ceut, while those sent to Finglame all inctease: of $2 \underline{P}$ per cent. If you take the total esports in INSN and compare them with those of 1s 91 , there wats a decrease of 311 per cent in those sent to the Conited states and an increase of 20 per cent in those sent to England.

Mr. P'ATEPSoN (Brant). Are these the products of Cimada alone, or the total exports:

Mr. FONTER. These are the home pronlactions of (:anatha alone. There is annther indication contralictory of this theory or assertion that tande is stagnant in (amada. lt is found in the record of the ralways and shipping of (anata, its shown in the following table:

In 187.5 we had $4, N: 0$ miles in operation : in 1891 we had $14,\left(\mathrm{KN}^{-}\right.$miles in operation. The train mileare in the same time rose from $1 \overline{7}, 68(1), 16$ miles to $40,384,861$ miles, an increase of 145 per cent. The passengers increased from $\bar{i}, 19(1,416$ to $13,164,420)$, an increase of $1 . \overline{3}$ per cent. The freight increasen of $2 x=3$ per cent. The earnings increaserl from sis), 470,034 to $848,139,9810$, an increase of 147 per cent. These figures effectually demonstrate the illowitity of the contention that the trade of Camadat is not on a constant and progressive increase.
Mr. LANDERKIN. The railways are not controlled by the (iovernment.

Mr. FOSIER. That is a very wise and sapient remark, and I earnestly commend it to all my hon. friends on this side of the House. I hope they will not be overcome by its sapiency.

Mr: LANIDFRKIN. I beg pardon. The Intercolonial Railway is controlled by the Govermment.

Mr. FOSTER. Traking also the shipping, which is another branch of our carrying trade, we find that in 1879 the tomnage of vessels in and ont, seagoing and inland, exclusive of coasting vessels, rose from $11,646,812$ tons in 1879 to $18,803,648$ in of $10 \%$ per cent. These too, are ernclusive indicattions of the business and trade activity amblevelopment of this comutry. So that, looking at these indications of the increase of both on foreign and interprovincial trade. the conclusion is forced umon us that there has been a great and progressive increase in. the seneral thale and eommerce of (anata. In passing, I wish to speak for a moment of the different large steamship services of Camala - but ly way of going exhanstively at all into. the operations of the past year, hat merely to say that in the Pacitic const and the West Indies steamship lines. there has huen a comstamt and gratifying increase. both in the passengers carrieil anil in the freight delivered. The steamship service to the West lumies, especially imoing this last year, appears to have given excellemt satisfaction, and to have heen a principal factor in developing a largely increased trade between our comatry and those different islamp. With reference: to the Atlantic: fast stemmship service, luring the patst yair temlers were again calleal for. In answer to our calls but two temlers were receiven. looth of which were, in the opinion of the diovermment, beyond what eould reasonably he expemded hy this countiry for a fast Atlantic service : so that. thongh the policy of the (iovernment has not changed, the circumstances hatre manle it inpossible for us as yet to establish that service. I may state, also, that inacom dancewithmy intimation given in the House last year on an item in the Estimates, I hate this year mate a begimning in the way of estahlishing corresponding commercial agencies in differcht ports and-comutries. somewhat on the comsular plan, without, of course. diplomatic stambing or diplonatic responsibility. At the present time we have as commercial agents in Paris, in livent Britain, in the principal centres of the West Indian Ishands, gentle men whose services are enlisted for the purpose of oiving all possilile information ly corres. ponilence and hig reports, to lie sent to the department and to he published in lobletin form. as to the opportmities that exist for trade and ermmerce between those afferent erountries innl Comala : and I have no donbt that this service will develop gradually into one of great pratetical benefit to the mercantile classes of our rown country and the different countries with which we estahlish trale relations. The feature of the year outside of Cianala has been the wide aratusement of commercial tariffs, and the changed princijie upon which commercial intercourse between lifferent countries is regulatel. Within the last few momths we have hat France moving to alo way with every treaty in which a most-filvoureal-nation clatise was found, giving notice ats to all such which were about to expire, and denomeing thent at the perionl of expiry; and by the lst of .July, 1892, every treaty, with one exceptiom, which runse for another year in milition, that fance hat with other countries, emborlying the most-favourentnation clanse amb carrying the obligations of that clause, will have been done away with. The French Government has legislated in the line of a clouble tariff; -a minimum tariff, sutficient, in its opinion, to protect French inclustries, for it is constructed upon the protective hasis; athl which shall lie granteri to those countries whogive like or compensating eonuessions to France. amb a genemal tariff which is applicalile to all other conntries. Trade arrangements, hased upon the minimum taviff, are subject to denouncement or change, at once or upon a years motice, so that nome of the disturhing and sometimes eminarrassing complications which attach to the most favoured-nation clanse will, after the lst of July next. he in the way of the commerce of France with other conntries. (onseyuent upon this has followed a rearrangement among other Fiuropean commtries, Prussia, AustroHungary, Switzerland and Italy making a treaty anong thellmelves. ly which certain prombets are mutuilly chargeda lower rate of futies, thus stimulating. so far as they conld in that direction, trale among those four great comitries. Then we haveseen the Caitel States of America, by virtue of the thind clanse of the McKinley Act, cintering into a series of treaties with other conntries. Up to the present. time the following have been promulgated ;-with Brazil. with Spain for Cuba and l'orto Rivo, with the British West Indies, with the Dominican Republic, with Nalvador, diermany. France amd Nicaragota, wiving these countries in exchange for certain reducfions amil the placinge of certain articles upon the free list. the kenefit of allowing hides, coffee, sugar and molasses to come into the United States free of lluty. In all these changes. What has been the resilt, so far as (amadian interests and trade are concerned: In the tirst place. I may say that with reference to France, we stand in alont the same prsition as we diol before. We had hefore to paty a surtax. over alld above the rate charged direat Britain. on orir colonial produce exported to that annitry. To- lay we are under the operations of the general tarifi. With reference to the treaty Which has heen armanged hetween Prussia, AustroHungary. Italy amd Nwitzerland, whaterer benetits :ucorue from it by the way of lessening duties, ancerve to Canala as well by virtue of the most. fatoured-nation clanse in treaties with fermany and Austro. Hungary, so that the benefits of lesseneal dutics upon certain articles under their lately arrange: treaty inure as well to the pronlucts of (cinada coming under the same schedule. With reference to the treaties which have heen made hy the United States,as far as Cubamel Porto Rico are concerned. we have the adrantage of the most-favoured-nation treatment until the ist of July of this year. Negotiations are now in progress with a view of having Eontinued to us the same favourable terms: and there is nothing, so far as the tariff of our comutry is concerned, in its treatment of products of Cuba ianl Porto Rico which should indace them to give any hetter terms to the United States of America thanto Canada, as we allow their prolucts in, on the whole, on a more favoured basis than even the United States. With regard to the British West Indies, no discrimination was-I will not say allowed--hat hinterl at in the arrangement of the treaty letween them and the United States of America: and I think we owe to the British West India Islands this acknowledgment of their fair and manly and brotherly spirit, that in making a treaty which they considered to be of very great Irenefit to themselves, and in which considerable pressure was hrought to imhluce them to give better treatment to the goods of the United States than to Canadian and British gools, they adhered to the Colomial and Imperial system of treating sister colonies and the mother conntry on the same basis: as they treat others. With reference to the lomiuican Republic. ass I have stated, althengh our trame with the Republic is not very large, we happen to have the benetit of the most-fa moured-nation clanse. No that Brazil is the only comutry ontside of those I have mentioned in which our pronlucts, for the time being, in certain lintes. arte placed at a disathlvantage is compared with those of the Linited States, and I may say that negotiations are now in progress, which I hope will erentuate in our prodlucts being plated on the same footing as those of the United Sitates in the markets of Brazil. Naturally, this review of treaty arrangemants and their results upon (analia, leids up) the conference which took place not long since in 11 ashington between delegrates of the Cianalian diovernment and representatives of the ('abinct of the United States. with reference to trade relations. The: House is seized of the correspondence and the facts with reference to the steps which hrought about the ultimate and completed eonference ; and on the loth of Fehruary of this yeat. hy appointment of the Neeretary of state, it ielegation from the (imatian (invermment went in 11 itshington aml met the: Secretary of State in conference. I maty saty this, and I think it is nothing more than right tos sity it, that Mr. Blaine: met us with the greatest kindiness anil courtesy: Althourh not in the enjoy. ment of rohist health, and although he was in the midst of the arduons ducies of at session of Congress.in the midst of diphmatic correspomblence of a weighty amb grave character, he gave up his time to the delegation from (anada and for tive successive days met them in full and frank and prolonged conference upon the varions points treaterl of hetween the two. I will say nothing ats regarnls the other points discassed. Which have already heen more or less fully laid hefore Parliativent. hut with reference to the disunssion of the tanle question I think it my duty to make Parliament acyuainted with what took plate and the results therefrom. In conference with Mr. Blaine, the Cianalian delegation proposed, as a liasis for nego. tiation, the Recipoocity Treaty of 18.74, with such monlitications amil extensions as the changerl condition of both comatries might rember necessary and desirable, and pressed the conchusion of a treaty upon that basis. They were met with the reply from Mr. Blane that a proposal looking to a treaty hased upon natural prombets alone had not in it the essential elementsof reciprocity, so faras the United States atre concerned, and consequently they were unable to entertain it. He raised the question, as did also General Foster, who was his coadjutor in the conference, as to whether we were prepared to make a proposal which would go wiler than natural prolncts, and take in and include a general reciprocity in mannfactured articles as well. When that point came up, the Canalian delegation innmediately raised the question and disenssed it fully and freely with Mr. Blaine as to what would lie the necessary conclitions of such a reciprocity. Did it mean that we were to give United States products and manufactures preferential treatment in our country and cliscriminate against like articles from Great Britain and from other parts of the world: and the reply cime, after a fall discussion of the matter, that a reciprocity treaty would have no compensating advantages to the United States of America unless they were: given preferential treatment in our markets, e:pecially against areat Britain, which was their chief competitor in nearly every line of mannfiactured sexnls, that muder any selheme of reciproeity which could lie looked upon faronably by them. the Caited states would expeet to com. pete with Camalian mamufactures in Camadian markets on even terms, but with no others. Well, whein that puint was reached, discussion terok plate as to the difficulties to be met ly Camaia in sul)saribing to a treaty of that kind, and they were fully and frankly laid before Mr. Blaine. They were, in hrief, these : that in going into a treaty of that kind we should stand to lose what we were less able to lose tham the United States of Americia, a considerable propurtion of our revenne : tirst. the eight millions or so which we collected upon the prombets of the Linited states that came into Canala: amel, secomlly, the diminution. whatever it might bee, which would result in the imports from the ontsinle worli owing to the competition and entrance of United States goons free of duty into our comitry. Mr. Blaine raised the guestion whether we hail not other methons of tasation. We explained that we had methons of taxation hy internal revente as they themselves hatl. upm which he remarked that it would be neecesary in a treaty of this kind that these inland revenne laties on liquors and tolmaceos shonh le eynalized : and that immediately hrought up the point that, if they were equalized and if the Enited States were not willing to levei up to our rates. Camala womld stand to lose a large amomet of revenme in excise duties, inasmuch as our rates are mach higher than thase of the United states. We also printed out the grave difficulty which met us in discriminating against the goods of Cireat Britain with whom, ats it colony, we hat close and intinate relations, and the repugnance felt against drawing a corvion alout ourselves against the world with the exception of the United Stater. At this point another question came up. Suppose that Camala were willing to discriminate against the goonds of the outside world and of Cireat Britain on this proposed hasis of at treaty, who should tix the disistimination and what should be the measure of that discrimination? Ame as an illustration the article of wool and of woollens was instancel, in which the duties on the raw material vary in hoth countries as well as do the daties on the mamfactured goods. Mr. Blaine admitted at once that this was at rital print, that the United States hal its policy of protection, of large protection for loth wools and woollengools, and that unless this vital point were guarled there would be no secuity to the Unitel States on the one hand against smaggling along a line 3,000 miles in extent, and no security, on the other hand, for the permanence and preservation of the policy of protection which they, up to this time, had maintained, and which they proposed to maintain, and that he saw no way out of the difticulty unless the tariff of Canala were made uniform with that of the United states. Well, Sir, this question passed on in discussion until we hal pretty well exhausted the subject, when the Canadian delegates, after having presented these difficulties and cancussed them fairly and thoroughly, said to Mr. Blaine: These are our difficulties ; you acknowlelge them. Now, you have had large experience in framing reciprocity treaties and have had much to do in Mr. Fonter.

the stuly and arrangements of recipmoal matters: we lay these points lefore you and we ask whether or not, ont of your experience, you cammot see your way to propose a monlification of this basis in order that we may dinimish, at least to sone extent, the diffienties we are miler ats to lons of revenue, ats to discrimination, innl its to a miform tariff : and, after disenssion of stme time. we receivel an answer from Mr. Blaine, that whilhe acknowledged our difticulties, he was clear in his own mind that now other atrangement wombl he satisfactory to the United States of America. that their mannfactures must have preferential treatment, including, of comse, diserimination against foreign comutries and especially against i:reat Pritain, that there minst be a miform tariff, anil that that tariff must he practically the tariff of the Enited States of Americal. With this remark, we passed on to other points in discussion and we did not thereafter recur to the trate guestion. This is, in brief. a fair and cannlid aceonnt of what tow place at the conference. I think it is only neressary for the to put in brief the results, and they are simply these: that so long as the present. party and the present policy is mantained in the taited states, in one branch or the other of the Legislature or in the Executive, we cramot hope for any treaty with the United states except unom these lines, viz, at treaty which will take in luili matural prolacts and manufactured gexols: a treaty. unlimited in its secope, of which the hasis is a preferential treatment in our market with discrimination expecially against dreat Britain and against other comutries : a treaty that must he acecompanied by a uiform tariff. and this tariff epmalizel with that of the United states of America. These are in brief the results which have been arrived at. Daring years of discussion from the time the old reciprocity treaty was denomeed in 1 sijo to the present time, there have been various inleas put forward. there have been carions platis submittend there have been assertions anl comater inssertions of what could le done, there have leen several propusals made. but up to this date we have been umable to get any one of our proprosals: adoptell ly the Unitel States, or to get one cromiteproposal from them. Now the matter is settled. It is settled in point of clearness and definiteness. I, for my own part, regret that it is settheal as it is, and still I am glad that it is settled at all. I regret that mo moiln. cam le found by which profitable trade relations cond he estahbishiell between these two conntries, without our beine called upon to sacrifite too much of Camadian interests and too much of Camadian mationality. I am glad, however, that from this time forward there need le no lack of detiniteness, for all parties and all interests in Canala may now know exactly the hasis upon which a treaty can be oltained or camot be olltainerl.

Mr. VIILLS (Bothwell). I would like to ask the Minister whether the deputation at Wiashingtom made any report to His Excellency or to their colleagues, on their return, that can he laid lefore Parliament! I think, Sir, it is a very unusual thing to enter into such a discussion on this oceasion.

Mr. FOSTER. My hon. friend is the unusmal feature on this occasion.
Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). Well. Mr. speaker,---

Mr. FOST'ER. The hon. gentleman should mot rise and interrupt me.

Mr. SPFAKER. The hon. member for Bothwell is rising to a point of order.

Mr. MLLL' (Bothwell). I think the rule is, that when a matter of this sort is being liseussed, there shatl be some official report laid upon the Tiahle of the House as a basis for rliscussion. The hon. gentleman has referred to negotiations that have taken place, and no report whatever of those negotiations hats been laid hefore parliament. In the cuase of a British Minister resinling alroand, the practice is for him to make a report of the interview, that report is sent whe Foreign Necretary and is Inought down to larliament. Now, Sir, if the (iovemment, alopt the usual course, instean of sending an asent to select certain members of the (iovernment to go themselves, it is the hosiness of those: members of the Govermment to report to the execontive leiad of the forermment, and it is the right of Parliament to have that report latil hefore them. Now, there is no such report whatever lefore us. We have momeans of jurlging of the statements made by the hom. gentleman except What he sitys in the speech he is and ressing to the Honse. I saty that it is a highly irregular proceend. ing, and lefore the hon. gentleman undertook to make such is statement to the House he ought to have made a report to His Excellency or to his colleagues, amd that rejort should he otficially hefore the Honse.

Sir JoHN THOMPSON: The hom. gentleman has dechared that he is speaking on a yuestion of order.

Mr. MILAN (Buthwell). I am.
Sir IOHN THONPSON. I sulmit whether the hom. gentleman has not eompletely refuted his own statement hy the fact that when he rose the first thing he did was to ask a yuestion of the Minister of Finatnce......-

Mr. MlliLs (Bothwell). So I dil.

sir JohN THOMPSON---upoun which to hase a point of orrler, and he got un reply to that question. Now. Nir, 1 submit to yon whether there is any rule, any pratice. any anthority of any deseription whatever, which restriets a Minister of the (rown from stating that which has transpired on a mission on which he has leen sent by competent authority. There is nothing of the kind, I submit, in the usiges of Parliament ; there is alsolutely nothing of the kind in diplomatic usage, or the practice which prevails leetween Ministers and the Executive. If a Minister of the Crown makes a statement that is not anthorized l,y His Excellency to he mate, or which has not leen communicated to him-if it should have been communicated to him-that is a matter of responsibility between the Minister and the head of the Executive. But it is the right inul privilege of every member, whether he lie a Minister of the Crown or a private member of the House, to give to the House that information on public questions which he possesses, whether anyboily else has had it communicated to him or not.

Mr. LAURIER. The question put hy my hon. friend to the Minister of Finance has notbeenanswered, unless he means to say that he is now making, in his speech, a report of the negotiations which took place at Washington. I sulmit that if the Minister Wantel to refer in his speceh on this occasion to the facts which he is now disclosing, he shonh have first laid them lefore the Homse in the form of a Message.

 I think the statement made ly the Dinister of Finance was perfectly in arder. I know of no more opportune time than the delivery of the Bulget, . leal with these questions with which the Minister of Finance is reading. $H e$ is making statements ats to the result of tande nerestiations letween this Bovermment and the liovern:nent of the Linted States, and I know of no rule of larlanment that would prevent him from making those statements.

Mr. FONTER. I thank the home member for Bothwell for twothings: one, for giving use evenso shonta period of rest : and the other. for his very full indication of his own disturbeal feelings at this time. (iencrally the hom. member for liothwell is thirsting for information. but to-lay he seems to les so full that he dues not repuire furtherinformation. We are never too old to leam, as the saying rocs, hat I am forced to comblule now that my hon. friend is either tow oid th learn, or does not wish to learn any more. I was proceeding to remind the House, when I was interrupten, that we have now acepuired a definitestatement as to the real hasis upon which a treaty with the United Sitites of America was possilile. I was groing on to sity that I was glad that it was settled, although I regretted that it was settlen in that way. For several years the commerce of this country, the husiness of the country, and the prosperity of the country, have heen affected by an argitation which contemphated a very grave change in the commereial and other combiitions of Canala. An agitation was set ma fort which promisel certatin things, aml held out in roseate language a certain propect as the result of what conld lie accomplisheil. and this eomtinnal argitation, and placing before the perple the inlea of great changes from which they were to get great. anlvantages -... Which were impossible of fulfilment -.. cianmot hut have had in detrimental effect upon the lonsiness and progress of the countiy. I ann glal for this reasom that this is now settled, aml that Canalians can now turn their faces to the funure with in clefinite idea of what they have torlo for themselves and what they may expect firm those who live close leside us. For my nwn part I an not at all afraid to face the future, amd to encomer what it has in store for us as to the development anil progress of Cinada. If the Cimandim farmer is to be debarred in great part from a market in the United States for his prolucts. Which market at the best is partial, sectional and variable, he will at least have this satisfaction, that unler due and aleytuate protection he will not be exposed to the great and dangerous competition, in the proclucts of this country, from the great western country of the Unitel States. He can prepare himself to tind a market for his wares in other countries where they get more favourable entrince, and he can especially prepare himself to enter fully upon that almost inexhaustible market which awaits him for all his products in (ireat Britain, our mother land. In that country, alreaily, by force of good quality and by prulence in selection, his apples, his cheese, his wheat, his cattle, his hacon and ham, find large and constantly increasing matrets, and hate to-day secmed a permanent place in the market. and practically overtop all competition. Amed what has heen done for these in the British market, by the same cateful selection, and the same force of puality, can be done for the beans, the barley, the nats, the lambs, the hutter, the poultry, the eggs and all the other great prolucts that the farmer in this country raises. aml of which direat Britain takes large and increasing quantities. If the Canadian manufacturer camot have a fatir entrance into the markets of the Linitel sitates, where he would, of comrse. meet with strong competition from the accumalations of skill amd capital that are there, he rati. at least, moler the shelter of a proper protection. sapply the great and growing home market for mannfactures. and with a stability ensured at home. he can push his wates into those comntries where they find entrance on more favomable tems. I was spaking. sir. a moment arg as to the Einglish market in commection with the farm prolucts of this comatry. I have here a table. in which 1 give the figures in romml mumbers. not going intoparticulars, and I time direat britain in 1 siol imported for comsump) tion in that commery. in quantity, as follows:-

 is a market which is easily reached, and possesses the feature of stahle permanence in that it is sulpeet to. the minimum of home competition, of variation and thatuation in the waty of tariff imposts put upon it from one year to the other, a market mate ap largely from the nonproblucing datsies, in these respects, who are comstantly at work in the hives of busy industry ambare continually callingon this comatry ambother countries like situated for fool supplies, to make that muscle. hawn and sinew with which they do the manufacturing for so large a portion of the wohld. We have in that country, lesides, a discriminating market, where the best wares are quickly taken at the hest prices, and where the material in goosls or money is always at hand to pary for that which they purchase. So, sir, I say we may face towarals the ohl commtry, amb for our varied products, exploit those markets which are sure to proce protitable from their constant, and, indeed, growing demands. And it may also be that, in the near future, considering this war of taritfs, which is taking place the wide world orer, considering the diseriminating benefits which are given by some comitries and denied by others, it may le worth the careful and thoughtfal attention of the diovernment as to whether or not the time is not approaching, if it is not near at ham, when it will become the cluty of this Govermment to hohl out the hand of help to those that helpus, to repay favour with favour aml interest with interest, and to give the lest treatment in our markets to those comntries which afford to us the best treatment in their markets.

Sir RICHARD(ARTWRI(;HT'. Mr. Speaker. am sure that if the Minister of Finance has any sentiment of aratitule in him. he onght to lee extremely grateful to me personally for the apportunity that I atforden him of delivering himself of those very patriotic and glowing sentiments in which he indulged a little while ago. I regret for his sake, not fon mine. he did not see fit to read to the House the whole of the letter unler my name and signature which appeared in the London Eromomist, of 13th Fehruary, hecause then, like the fabled creature of Nhakespeare, his speech womhl have resembled the toan, which, though ugly and renomons, had a precions jewel in its hean. But, as he would mot dos so, and ats my modesty forbids my doing it. I cill omly call rhe: attention of the House to that letter, every sylable of which I stamel by, as I intended to stamil hy it when I calnsed it io he published in the Eiromomist in reply to the fonl slatiders on the Liheral party which the subsidizen press of the hon. gentleman and his paid agents. or our precions High (ommissioner and his gang had heen daily eir. culating to the detriment of all those in this comatry who desire the real prosperity and athlvamtage of the people of Camala. With respect to the first part of the hom. enenteman: speech, that is to say, his finambial statement. I have uoparticular ohjection to make to it. That part of it was monlided rery much on the lines of the Gueen's speech delivered hy His Fxaed lency at the opening of this Parliament: it did not tell us anything that was mew, and it omitted all reference to a great mumber of matters which. at this moment, infe. I think, leserving of the most serious attention of the people. The hon. gentleman gave us hatf a doren columms of Estimates, half a dozen columms of the P'ublic Accounts, half at dozen columns of the Trate and Navigation Report. So far as his statement went, he was. like some of his predecessors of olf, extremely careful with respect to dealing with mint, anise and cmmmin, hat omitted all reference to those weighty and more important matters which, on the present occasion. mifht well have engaged the attention of ihe Minister of finatace of this eonatry. I think we had a right to expect something letter on the present occasion from the hom. Minister. This is not an ordinary occasion. This is the first opportunity we have hal since our latst great decemial stock-taking of testing, in the only and the best way in which it can he tested, the real effects of the policy of which that hon. gentleman has been for years the exponent in Parliament. Sir, facts have been laid hefore this Honse, facts are contained in these documents under my hand, which might well have startled the most callous. which might well have alamed the most stupid man in Canalala. And, Sir, in face of these facts, what do we find on the part of the hon. gentleman and his colleagues: We find a long army of figures having no bearing at all on the more important points at issue: we find fatuons and silly assertions of prosperity, which-if there be one particle of truth in the statements made from year to year by the hom. gentleman and his colleagues, and which are conticined in the documents laid on the Table of this House by their order-show the result to be that the condition of things in Canala is such as has not been paralleled for at least fifty, if not one hundred years, in any English community having the like opportunities which we possessed. To whom does he make these statements of prosperity" He makes them to the people of Canala, whom his own detailed recorils show, as I have proved again and again, to have lost at least one million and a half of their population within the course of the last ten years. He makes them to the people of this Dominion, whose representatives now around me know, that in all but a few favoured localities the value of their property has been diminishing for the last dozen years by leaps and bmands. Perhaps of all men. this hon. gentlen:an is the very fittest man in the Honse to stand up amd make these assertions here, because he represents a province which has suffered mote-ats these very recorrls show-through the results of his foolish and wiaken policy, thin any other provinue in the Bominion : amb becanse, by a curions combination of facts. the identical constituency of Queens Which that hon. gentleman represents-

Some hom. MEMBERS. Kings.
Sir RI(HARI) CARTINRIGHTM-King $\operatorname{sis}$ it the inlentical constituency which he represents has the worst recond of any of the fifteen sublivisions of Xew Brumswick to present to the people. Those rery facts that I hare alluded to ought themselves tw have tanght the hon. gentleman to have spoten in a more monlest tone on the present occasion. I tum. Mr. Speaker, to the records in: my haml, and I timl that in the lrovince of New lb:unswick. with a total perpuation of $3: 2,2311$ souls, the results of his policy is shown in the fact that in the course of the last decale New Bromswick has exactly increaseal 10 somls. New Branswick, with a population of sixty thonsam families, more or less, with a total area not far short of erobono(nk) atres, has Maine ifl sonls in ten gears, and his own particular comstituency, to which I allulerl, having legom ten Sears ago with a population of 14,017 , being entitli. 1 to natural increase of about $: 3$, onk). which onght to have given it a population of $17, \pi, 2 \geqslant 1$. comes out wolay-the hom. Minister of Finances own comstituency -with a $\boldsymbol{p}^{\text {wipulation of } 12,152 \text {, showing a }}$ wal hoss, puttins together the positive loss aml the natmat increase, of $2,36!$ souls on a population of $1 \because .1 .2$.

Mr. FOSTER. What constituency is that:
 own constituency of Kings, or whichever it is.

Mr. FONTER. Look at it again: you had hetter revise gour fignes.
sir RICHARI CARTWRIGHT. I have given my figures. Which of my tigures is it that you deny:

Mr. FONTER. Those that you have read, in toto.

Sir RICHARI) (ARTTWRIGHTC. I will give Sou the time amd opportunity now, and here, of refuting them if you can.

Mr. SPEAKER. An experienced parliamentaian like my hom. friemi knows that he must admeress the Chair.

Sir RICHARD (ARTWRIGHTS. I stamd corrected, Sir, hut I think you might also remark to my hon. friend opposite, that no member of Parliament in his position is well advised or in order in interrupting another menber when he is speaking.

Mr. FOSTHER. I momit that, but I hated to see soug go wrong.

Sir RICHARI) (CARTITRIGHT. Pe consolerl, I have not gone woong. The hon. gentlemans: commissioners of census maty passibly have gone wrong, and I an mot responsible for the atecuracy of their figures. hat these figures which 1 have just given to the House are the exact and literal figures taken from the census retmons laid on the Table of Parliament hy hon. gemtlemen opposite. I repeat. Mr. Speaker, that if the fiovermment reconds be trate - -and be it remembered he has no reisen to donht them--these records show that during the last ten yearshuring which the hom. gentlemanand his friends have alministered the 6 iovermment of (anata, the toral loss of population ahmost equals one man in three of our present popalation, tationg as correct the statement that the fionemment hronght !nflown immigrants to settle in Camalia. I call the attention of the Honse to the combitions muler which this monstrous loss has taken place. Had smoh a hoss necarred in an old comitry, a thickly-populated comitry. even in such a conimtey uo wise statesman womh have passed it with indifference. hut. Mr. speaker, it has ocemred in ('amata, a comutry which contains an almosi molmited atrea of ahsolutely virgin soil, the greater part of whichi at this day is utterly unocoupied. Which is capable of sustatinine not the million allol a half that we have lost. lint is abmolantly caprable of sustaining. muler a wise and homest foremmment, ten times. twelve times, fifteen times, ilye. twonty times our present proulation. There is harily a single pro. vince in this Bominiom, as I said, in which with at wise and honest fovermment, it would mot he possible to find prosperons amd profitalile employment for all this million and a half of people whom the iovermment have driven away. More than that. $^{\text {a }}$ Sot merely have we an ahmost unlimited area to develop, hiat we have. hesides, exposed the ohder provinces in this commonity to almost anexampled sacritices, and we have incurred a most enornoms expenliture, which can moly properly be measured by humdreds of millions of dollars, for the purpose of developing the settement of the comntry. (ireat as the loss in quantity hats heen. there is not a man in this House who hais paid the slightest attention to the character of the exorlus which hats beengoing on for somany years, wholoce not know that the loss in quantity is far indeed from heing the the measure of the loss the people of Canada has sustainet. Sir, it is not the dregs or the refuse of cour people that are going from us; it is the very choice and thower of our population. An enomous percentage of this emigration which I deplore is composed of men between twenty and forty years of age : men in the very prime and vigome of life, and I believe that it is to-day calculated hy Americanstatisticians that there are more New Brunswickers aml more Nova icotians. hetween the ages I have mentioned, to le found in Massachusetts and the sister New Englam states than remain in the provinces which the hon. gentleman and his colleagues represent. Uniler these circumstances, we have a right to expect one of two things from the hon. gentleman. We have a right to expect an explanation of how these things have come aloout, or we have a right to expect i confession that his poliey and the policy of his colleagues has been, as we have all along contended from first to last, a failure and a fraul. Sir, I pause to examine the wretched subterfuges which the subsidized press of the Government, and members of the Government themselves on varionsocasions havehal recourse to for the purpose of diminishing the weight of the facts which they were compelled to place before the country. First of all. I mote that malmost all the oceasions on which they allume to this state of things, their chicf plea is this, that in some insignificant comers of the Linted states, where the soil is less fertile. and from which for many reasoms the people for a long time back have been in the hahit of migrating to some other parts of the Uinited Nitates, a someWhat similar state of things prevails to that which exists in Camala. Sir, if that were true, there is this essential lifference between the two comblitions of things: The eitizen of the United states who migrates from one state to another still remains a ditizen of the United States: he foes not forswar his allegiance or seek shelter muler a foreign thag. but comtinues to swell the resources and to increase the population of the linited states. But how is it with us: Weall know very well that only the smallest fragment of the population we lose finds its Way from one part of Camada to athother part of (amatia. We know that the polioy of hom. gentlemen opposite has resulted in this, that during the last ten yeats they have driven into exile far more than a million of the hest citizens of Her Majesty. But. Mr. Speaker, the statement which these hon. gentlemen have marle, that things are the same in the Cuited states, is not by any means a truthful statement of the facts. It may he true as regards Vermont, Mane or New Hampshire: hut as regards that great groupof states which aljoin Camada, amd which are substantially in the same position as Candda, there is not a particle or restige of truth in the statement. Sir, I will take the case of Massachusetts: I will take the catse of New Jork: I will take the case of Pemnsylamia, Ohio, Michigan and North Dakota: and I invite hom. gentlemen in this House, as well as all Camanians who care to ascertain the real facts of the case, to compare the facts. recorded in the last census of the Uniten States with the allegations so freely mate liy these hon. sentlemen. In ISNO Massachuset ts had a total population of 1, sitionk ; in 1800 this hat risen to $2,2: 38$, (MK). In the corresponding ten years the population of the tive older provinces of Camala had risen So that it is platin that Massachusetts, with a little less than half of our population, gained in per cent more than all the five ohler provinces of Camala, and rery nearly thee times as much as our own magnificent Province of Ontario, which possesses far greater natural resources and far greater opportunities of absorbing a larger population than Mas. sachusetts can possibly show. I turn to the state of New York, and I find that in 1880 it had a population of $\overline{5}, 08 \mathrm{P},(\mathrm{MNO}$, which in ten years had swollen to treble the increase of our older provinces on very much the same population. I take the case of Pennsylvania, which in the ten years increased in propulation from $4,28.2$. (KK) to $.5,2.28,000$. Now, the population of pennsylvania is almost ielentically the sime as that of Camada: and yet in Isen it hat increased by 9760 KM , or treble the increase in the population of all our oller provinces, amd double the total increase of all Canala put together. Ohio increased from $3,19 \mathrm{~S},(\mathrm{ON})$ in $185^{1} 1$, to $3,672,(O N)$ in 1891, a gain of $474,1 \mathrm{MO}$ ). Michigan, begimning with $1,6: 36,0 \mathrm{M})$, increased to $2,0 \mathrm{M} \cdot 3,(\mathrm{MN})$, being a gain of reached $152,(M N)$, being at gain of $1+6,(K N)$. I have called attention to these facts, in order to show how baseless is the allegation mate by these hom. gentemen and their frienls that we need not eoncem ourselves with the facts stated. becallse. when all is satid and done, we are growing in population in the same rationas themore important statesof the Cnited States. Take those states aljobining Canada, mot one whit better than on chicf provinces, and compare the results: and then julge for yourself whether on mot 1 am justitied in saying that it is impossible to show on this comtinem a fair parallel for the failume to increate the population of the comutry which matks on case in Ontario and in (inaala at large ollen. sir. they have a secom plea, which is well worthattention. That pleathas reference to a certatin well known peenliarity of molem life. They urse that they are not to hiane hecanse for man! vears hack there hats beon an monormate tembeney on the part of a larse nomber of on people, in eommon with many in the Enited states and in Fingland. on lesert the combly for the cities. II ell. sir, out of their own mouths these men are emmlemmed. If that temidency loes exist as ome of the mathed features of the present epoch, then leyond all doubt it would hate heen the daty of wise amd prudent statesmen to have endeavoured as far as: they could to check that which has hecome a very mischievos tembency, or, at the very least, mota have wilfully and deliberately legislited in such a way as to increase it. Sir, the policy of this Govemment has been in every shape aml way. from tirst to last, delibemately to injure the agriculeural classes, and deliherately to increase the very tendency of which they complain as springing from a callse which they are unable to control. I am, however, bound tosiay that the case is mot. after all. quite as hatd as the fiovernment's recombe make ont. I havenever believed, as I have statedover and over again in this House, that the statements so lomily. paraded of the successof this (iovermmentin bringing immigrants to Canala had the smallest fonmation in fact. I never helieved that there were $4^{7}$, (kn) immigrants in 1881 . $112,(K M)$ in $1850,13: 3,4 K 1$ in 188:3. IOB, (MK) in 1K84, of s8(i,(MN) in the whole space of ten years ; and 1 make the bovermment at present of this explanation--w. which is good sor fat as it goes, inasmuch as, if my view is comect, it diminishes to a considerable extent the apparent lamentable exolus of our people from (anarlathat for the last tell years the entire of the reports of the Agriculture Department have been not merely erroneous, that little better than a deliberate fratil- that none of these immigrants, or only the merest fraction of them, ever came to this comintry. My own belief is that when we olstain proper reports showing the birthplaces of the ritions inhabitants of Cimanda, we shall find that so far from nealy (MO,(XN) immigrants having settled in this country, probally not 25 per cent, very possibly uot 10 per cent of all those who were bronght here, and who have been paid for at the cost of the people of this commtry, have remainei in Canada, and therefore that the position is really less evil, less mischievons. than the (invermmenit records would indicate. If they choose to assume that explanation, that their officers and colleagnes: have leen guilty of errors, which, under the circumstances, approach to deliberate framis, they are welcome to take it aml make the best of
it. Lowking wer the expentiture of nearly
 I am bemel to sity that my opinom is now, and always has been. that a great proportion of that sum wasnever expenled forpoper immigation purposes at all, hat went to forma pant of the vast cormption fund hy virtue of which, and which alone, hon. gentemes opposite hohl their seats. Nevertheless. making all possible derluctions, there is no iloubt. that the combition is most grave. If you choose to analyee the returns which have been laid hefore us, showing the condition of the ruinalistricts of Canalda, you will tind a state of things which deserved at least passing mention at the hands of the Minister of Finance. I take these provinces in motation, and time that in lrince Edwand Iskam, ont of three sulnlivisions for census purposes, two hage sub. divisions show wo only a hese of the whole matmal increase hat a considerable, aborbute and positive loss. and the rematingrone shows apositive increase iery far helow the natural increase of hirthe and deaths. When I come to New Bromswick I find that ont of tifteen subdivisions, eight show a prositive lons and seven show far below the matural inctease. In Nowa seotia, mo less that eight sumbivisions show a positive loss, nine are below the natmal increase, and one only, out of the whole eighteen or nineteen, shows an increasc. In Ontario we fime thinty-nine sulalivisions show a pesitive loss. forty-twore almost stationary or are helow the matual increase, and out of the whole ninety four or ninety-tive, thirteen alone -almost atl of them eities-..show some increase. In Queher there are twenty-seven sulnlivisions showing a positive loss of pepulation, there are thirty-two which are stationary or below the natural increase, and tive ninly am le fromal which show an increase equal to the natural increase. Now, you will remember that in all these catses, 1 atm supposing that mot ohe single immigrant has been adder to the population. ! am suppesime that of atl these ! MK), (MAY to whom I hate alluded, not one has settled in any of the other pirts of this comitry. I am just simply stating the case as exhibited in the census and fooking the thatmal increase alone. If any considerable immigation came into these provinces. then no doubt the loss of our natural population wonld he even larger than I chase to pht it down. lint, ass it is. the case is bad enongh. supposing the natural inerease in Prince Ellward Island hat lneen equal to that of former years, we have a dead loss in that province of about $27 .(\mathrm{KN})$ sonls: in New brunswick, we would have a loss of $8(0,(K N)$ : in Nonia scontia. a loss of $(O),(X N)$, calculated on the ordinary percentage of matural increase. In our Province of Ontario, we find ourselves confronted with a loss of $3(n),(m n)$; in Quelece we are confronted with a loss of $\geq: 30,0(1)$. While, if yon come to particular constituencies, we find, in the case of the great County of Huron, a loss of $\because(j,(x)$ ) souls on a popnation of id , (ONO) ; we find in (irey a loss of $1=, 000$, on a population of $7(i,(M)$ : we find in Bruce a loss of $16,(\mathrm{MO}$, on a population of $\mathrm{GH}, \mathrm{OMO}$; we find in the Comenty of Oxford a loss of $13,0 \times 0$, on a population of $\mathbf{4 x},(\mathrm{O})$; in Wellingtom, a loss of $D_{5},(00)$, on a population of $-2,(M 1)$; in Norfolk, a loss of $12,(M N 0$, on a population of $37,(1 N O)$; in Pertli, a loss of 14,000 , on a population of $46,(1 \mathrm{MN}$; in four ridings of Miildlesex, a lossof $27,(x \times 1$ on 10:3, (Mx); amil I am very sorry indeed to say that there are many ridings in which the case is considerably worse, hat with the details of which I dow fere it necessary to trouhle the House at this moment. Now, there can be no dombt whaterer to any man who will tike the trouble to study the recoreds of our census, that in the case of New Brunswiek. Nora Scotia and Prince Elward Island our Provinces of Ontarmanl buelwe see theirownfatereflected. Allow this policy of isolation, of excessive taxation, to :0 on to its learimate emol. and hefore we are tels years ohler those of us who survive will see Ghtarion and puebee in the same retrogale comblion in which 1 ams sory to see the Maitime Provimess now placen. Sint it all appears thate no sont of weierht whatever on the hom. gembleman opnosite. Now. I say that this is the direct result, the platin, inevitiable, direct result of the proliog which has directed the atfaiss of the diovermment for the past fourteen years. I say, sir, that thene is mo test of the real progress and allablement of a comatry like uns which can complate fon one moment with the test applien by the gewoth of pepmlation. and when we see ste:h results as thase 1 hate just depicted taking plate in a commtry like this. with such mblimited resomuces and ciblatities for employing a latre popmation, those facts alone condemm, as mothing else pessibly could, the prolicy which has hronght alour these results. Ihave never donhted that we commited a most egregions homer when we were induced, chictly hy the exampleof the Caited states.onapply w ( Bamia the policy which prevaileal there, chictly honght ahout, aseveryone knows, hy the tinancial exigencies arising from their civil war: I hate never for one moment pretembel that I thonght the people of the Caiten States committed other than a verygreat bumber indeed when they commited themselves to a policy of porection. I believe, if they hat the wishom tio athere to their eartier line of policy. they woulh he to-day far more formidalle competitors for the mamifatmes of the world than they are : hom, at the sambe time. I hatre always admitted that there were dircumstances commected with the United states which remberel it prossible and probable that the experiment of protection might lee tried there with less injury to the penple than in alhost any other conntry we can innaine. These comeli. tions are the exact opposite of those which prevail in (anama to-day. Everything here temels to mas. nify and increase the mischicf of a protective policy just ats everythine in the Enited states ten ls to minmise and diminish it. What is om position? Every homan being knows that the products of our vations provinces are substantially similar the one to the other. Everyone knows the varons provinces have sulstantiatly the some climate, are imhabited, to all intents and purposes, hy peoples having the same wants. Evergone knows that the interprovincial trade we have striven so hami to encourage anong them is, through no fanlt of the people but from the geographical necessities of their position, unprofitable, costly amd lifticult, compared with the trade they conld cary on in other quarters. Fveryone knows that on market in itself is small, and that that market is really smaller than it seems to be, by reason of those very geographical difticulties which make intercourse among the several provinces unprofitable. Now, if you turn to the United States, what do you find: Vou find that practically they are a world among themselves, possessing ahost every imaginable variet.y of climate and almost every imaginable variety of proluction, and yom time what perhaps is more important. that among the forty mations who may be saill to compene that Republic, there is to day the most perfect free trade which ever subsisted between any equal number of people in the world, and it would be far truer. it a fair accomat were given. th claim the United States as a prow of the enormons lenefits which acerne to a wontry like that from perfect free trate among a steat number of commmities extending from ocean to onean, and very nearly from the tropics to the Aretic seat ham to chaim it as an exanple of the le enetite of protection. It is a literaltruth, thongh perhaps it may seem a patadox to state it, that such are the marmal allantages of the Cnited states that they might ahloptanalsibutely prohilitory tariff and it would do them intinitely less danage than a monlerate protective tariff would do in a comutry like this. Of conrse. these statements lelong to the A B ( $C$ of political ecomomy, hat to julge ly the utterances that we hear on the other side. to julge he the articles which appear in the sulsidized press of hom. gentlemen opprite, and to julge by the speches of Ministers themselves, these facts hatre never oceurred to their minks. though they actually go to the rery bettom of the question as wh whether it is wise or prulent far Camala to condemm itself to a policy of protection and practical isolatiom. I was not sorry to hear the hon. gentlemain throw some considerable discrealit upon his past protectionist policy. The hon. gentleman, I suppose in a fit of candour, intimated that perhaps the time had conne tol hreak down some of those protective barriers and to admit British grools on comparatively equal terms to compete with Cinalian manufactures. We desire to cherish any gern of grace, however small or slight, and, if the hon. gentleman will bring down a policy to reduce the taxes on British groold and to extenid to British mannacturers the same privileges and rights which the British Covermment and people afford to sur productions going into their markets, 1 am sure I speak the sentiments of all my hom. friemps when I say that we will support him in passing that over the ofposition of the Canadian manufacturers. We hive no objection to free trade with all the world, if the thing be feasible or practicahe. Formy own part, I do not see that at this moment the thing is ruite as feasible as I would desire it to be, and 1 im certain that perfect free trate with the United States, perfect free trade and free interchange with the United States, is of more value to the people of Canala than free trade with all the rest of the world, with the United states left out. But, whether you have free trade with all the world or whether you have continental free tratle with the people of this continent with whom we are geographically comnected, we have ini objection, lint what we contend, and always have contented, is that your present policy, which is aeither continental free trade nor free trade in any shape or form, your present policy of isolation auil excessive taxation is, and has been proved to be, the very worst policy for the settlement and development of Camala that any Government ever cominitted itself to, and I sty again that the census returns from which I have gluoted afford the most ample and unanswerable argument in support of my position. Now, these three facts stand out very clearly at this present moment, although the hon. gentlenan: does not choose to admit them.

First of all, it is clear and plain that Camada has sustained an absolutely unparalleled loss of pmpalation in spite of the most proligions sacrifices and the most promigions efforts which have been made to retain her people here. In the second place it is clear-let the hom. sentleman cavil at my figures as he may what canala is to-day sulject to an enommons burden of taxation, if you take the actual taxation and not simply the nominal taxation, if you take not simply the taxation which is paid intio the pullic treasury, hat if you take the taxation as it really is -one moiety for the so-called needs of (iovermment and the other moiety which is imposed by the cocermment to pay their paymasters, the protectel mamfacturing interestis: and I may ould that. grave as these burthens are. they have been. despite all the hom. gentleman may siny, enomonsly increased within the past year or so by reason of the operation of this socalled Nokinley tariff and the taxation recently imposed by the Cuited states, with this further grave difficulty in our way, that has tax falls with excessive weight on a class of the population already overburdened, hecalse 1 am sure I need not waste any time in attempting to show that the taxation inflicted by the Mckinley tarifi falls almost wholly upon the shomblers of the agricultural population from one end of the Dominion to the other. Well, urder these circmanstances. it is not much to lee womdered at that the hom. gentleman is obligen to stand up to-day and to make pablic confession of the utter failure on the part of the Governnent and himself to redeem any one of those promises with which they have been deluring the Honse and the comitry for so many years. The hon gentleman has toli us ummistak. ably and clearly that he and his colleagues have. utterly failed in their negrotiatioms for resipiocity. He camon deny--he will hardly attempt to deny-. that he has utterly failed in the pledges and promises he made that he would retain our population in this country, and it is at least efually, clear that the hom. gentleman has likewise failed utterly in all his attempts to provile a home market for the products of the people. All of these three things their policy depended upon, all of then? were essential if their policy was to succeed at all.
It heing six oclock, the speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

Sir RICHARI) CARTWRIGHT. Before I proceed to discuss the question of the operation of the McKinley Tariff, I will take the opportmity of puttiog myself right as regards the Ninister of Finamee on one point. I find that I was in error in one respect as regards the position of things in New Brunswick. The hon. gentlemai represents a county which has sustained the greatest positive loss of any county in New Brunswick, but not a county which has sustained the greatest relative loss. I find that he represents the County of King's, not Queen's, us I erroneously supposed : and I find that whereas the County of King's has a population of $2 \overline{2}, 617$ souls, and whereas the natural increase on that ought to have amounted to $\mathbf{6 , 4 0 4}$, so that had it retained its naturalinctease without one single immigrant, it ought to have had, in 1891, a population of 32,021 s:ouls; I find that it has a population of 23,094 , and that I was thus far in error. I representel the hon. gentlesif Richati Canтw (ight. man ats representing a connty which, on a population of $12,(\mathrm{MK})$ ond , had sustained a loss of a little over $\boldsymbol{\sigma},(\mathrm{NO})$, whereas he represents a comity which, on a population of $93 .($ (N) 4, has sustalined a loss, as nearly a ; possible, of ! , (NO sonls. So, Sir, I make the cimenife to the hon. gentleman: he does not represent the county in New Brunswick which has relatively suffered most from his policy and the policy of his colleagues, hut he represents the county which has alisolutely suffered most.

Mr. FONTER. The compensation of having a geod representative

Nir RICHARI) ('IRTWRIGHT. If the hon. gentlemain bohls himself worth $\mathrm{x}, 902 \mathrm{~g}$ good (amadians who have gone to the Chited states, all I can say is that in the opinion of most people of this comutry he estimates himself at a good deal Sow. Mr. Speaker, I desire to speak of a matter Which the hon. gentleman did, inleed, toueh upon, hut which he tomehed upon marvellonsly lightly, which he appeared to consider a mere guestion of ten:proary incomenience which might possibly disturb the hasiness relations of a small portion of the people of this comntry. hut which it was hardly worth the attention of a potentate like him to consider seriously, that is to say, the effect of what is known as the Dekinley Tarifi on the trade and commerce of this cominty with the United States. I desire to call the attention of the House to one most unfomiled assertionmade by the hon. gentleman as regards the McKinley'Tariff. If low down his words correctly-and I am open to correction, if I did not---that hom. gentleman took upon himself to assert that the McKinley Tariff wits the result of suggestions made more or less directly from this side of the House. Sir, there never was-although it is a very strong term-a statement made in this House more utterly devoid of foundation in facts. If there be one man in Canada more than another to whom the worst features of the Mekinley Tariff are directly due, it is to the hon. gentleman, who, many months before that tariff lecame the law of the United States, in spite of warnings over anl wer again repeated from this side of the Honse, lelilerately, hy enactments made here, as I saty, long lefore the MeKinley tariff became law, challenged retaliation on the part of the agricultural interests of the United States, and deliberately - leprived our friends in the United Nitates of all argument, of all chance of modifying the most objectionable features of that Bill. The hon. gentleman's tariff came into effect some time in April or May of the year 18:M) ; the McKinley tariff did not receive presidential sanction, if I remember right, mutil the ath or 6 th of Octoler of the same year : and more to that act of folly than to anything else is it due that there were not large and important modifications in the NcKinley tariti. Sir, when the hon. gentleman tells us that the hostile feelings of the United States were stirred up from this side of the House, has he forgotten, or have his colleagues forgotten, the testimony of a late Finance Minister, now the High Commissioner of Canala, given from his place on the floor of this House, that the course, the impolicy, and the folly of the Govermment of winch he was then a member, had brought the two countries, as Sir Charles Tupper declared in his place, to the very verge of actual war, and over and over again within a hair's breadth of an alsohate prohihition of all intercourse letween Canada and the United States: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry to say that I camot treat the Ilckinley tariff at all as lightly as that hon. eentleman does. Last year we hall a most marvellons escape from the evil consequences which were likely to follow from that measure. You are aware and probably erery hon. gentlematn whom I adhress is perfectly well aware, that last year we were fa coured with a remarkably efool harvest, and hy an extraordinary coincidence- 1 camon call it a providential interposition, seeing that our gain was the loss of a large mumber of our fellow men-while ('amalia rejoiced in an extramolinarily gond haverst and olitained extramonarily good prices therefor, a large portion of the Eiropean world was phanged in lownight famine. It is mot likely, it is mot reasonable, it is aot matmat, that sach a comeilence should oceur again ; and !efore the hon. gentleman tells us, or tells the people of Camalia that this Mckinley tariff is to le treated as a trifting inconvenience. I recomment him strongly to Wait matil one of two more ondinary years have passed over our heads, and when that is dome he: will be able to form something like an ace:mate julgment of what the Mekinley tamitl may really mein th the people of this conntry. Now. Sir. the hom. gentleman has indulged in what I am afradid Imast chanaterize as a rery atsual mis. representation--absum, at any mate, as coming from a cman in his position- of the real value and importance of the Eaglish markets to (imamba. I am very far from alleging that the Fargish market is not one of very great impmrtance and very great ralue; hat I have grot this to tell the hon. gentleman, that he makes. I think. a tremend. ous mistake if he believes that the Finglish market is likely to le arailable to us for all an more than a portion of our products. For a part of our promucts I grant that the English market is probably rery desiable : but there is a very large and important protion of the pronlucts of Ganadia, very large amm important ardicultural prohlucts, for which I tell the hon. gentleman, that whether he knows it or not, the farmers of camadia know it--there camot le found any market in the world for one moment to compare with the market offered by the United States. The hon. gentleman ioll us, and the Honse will hear in mind, that the circumstances of this year, to borrow a word from him, are extremely almormal. that it is not at all likely we shall have a recurvence of such extraordinary circumstances as occurred on this side of the water this last year. The hom. gentleman stated, and he may have stated correctly, we have not the facts which he guoted from his own downments, that in the year just passed our tande, under the circumstances to which I have alluded, did not diminish perceptibly. But the hon. gentleman did not state to the House the faret which is apparent on the most cursory examination, that umler the McKinley tariff the trade of Canala, of all the provinces, and especially of Ontario and Quebec, has sustained a very severe loss. How severe that loss is may hest be judged by a compirison of the Trade and Navigation Returns for 189() and 1891 as regards four or five important articles. What I have to tell the hon. gentleman is this, that under the operation of the McKinley tariff our trade in barley has enormously diminisherl, that our trade in horses has enormously diminished, our trade in hat hat emomomsly diminished. our trate in egs and poult y hat emomously diminished, and the lows on these fise articles the the agriculturists in Combalia must be estimated hy several millions. I do not want to intlict on the Homse very minute details of all the articless on which we have sus.
 the five articles to which I hare allomed. and I think any hom. gentlenan. when he hears what we have sol!! to the linited states in Is:M and what we have sold in lsel. must alluit that 1 anm perfectly justified in stating that in these impurtiant articles of farm prodace. to emo merate mo whers, a sers serions reduction has oevnreet. let the han. gentleman saty what he pleases. in comsepluence of the opmation of the DeKinkey turiff: anil what is perhaps mure to the purpore. Chat there is nor reasomable chance of our ohtatining an copally goond market in any other part of the worlh. I time in ls!n we sold to the

 If that is true on these five articles. $\bar{I}$ ank the Honse to comsider what would probably he the total loses likely to le sustainel ly our farmers if I were to incluile all the vast varieties of other articles. all the vast varieties of ayricultural and amimal products, for all of which every farmer in ( canala times a far letter market in the United States than can le pussility oltainel for them elsewhere. It is interenting to notice what our trable with the lonited States would have ammonted to hat the trade for 1s:9 been left undisterbeel by the operation of the Mekinley tariff. Hand there been an eynal trate for IXEn, and ISSG was by no manner of means our largest year, this result would have followed: cur exprits to the Linted states would have , eeth mather in excess. I fancy, of our exports to any other conumery in the worlh, Great Britain not excepted. As it was, I notice that whereas in IMOW we sold to the United States our wha prolucts to the value of $\mathbf{\$ 3 6}, 112,(\mathrm{KNO}$, in 1891 the value was $\$ 37,0: 22.0 \mathrm{ONO}$ : and 1 olserve that our total trade with the ©initell States is larger than ou total trade with any other country in the world. I untice, also, that the total incrense which took place in 1891 appears to have oecurred in our trade with the United States. ( Our exports to the Dinited States of our own products increased itereased by $\$ 1,395$, (MXO, bullion not includeci. Sir, ! think this lirief statement of the facts onght to show every man in this House that whether or not on a particulat recarabon we hate sustained serions damage from the loss of the American market, yet. muler usual circumstanees in any ordinary yeatr, it wats scarcely prosible for any man to exaggerate the mischief and injury which would be dome " the agriculturists of ( © imadia if the American market should unhappily continue to he: haired to their produets. Practically sipeaking, the omly thing in Which, so far as 1 can see, we are likely to deal on cen terms in the Eaglish market, are wheat, fat cattle, pork pronlucts and cheeses. In atl other resperets I say here. without fear of contratiction from any man whin malerstands the agricult umal interests of 1 :amalit, that the lose of the American market. if we do lose it. would her little shont of an inteparahle calamity to the already orerhurdened farmers of the Dominion. In measuring the amonn of taxes on our farmers, it would $1 x$ well for hom. members to remember this, that they have a double tan to pay hy the llekinley tariff. First, they are taxel to the full extent in almost all cases for the lenetit of the Americian treasury. I grant you the American comsumer sutfiers : hat it is ath equally notorions fact, that while the America: comsame loses, the (canalian comsumer loses likewise. It is an equally notorions fate. that if the American in compelled to pay more for what her purchases. the (amadian farmer is obliged to aceept less. Were and alowe this. it is perfectly plain todemonstration that on all the articles 1 have named the camalian farmer sulfers a double loss, not only on what he piys into the American treasury. lint the reduced price at which he has to dispose of his smphus pronluct: in the home market. In the tirst place the farmer is olligeed to peyy a tax to the Cnited states. and he is also ohligen, in his own market. to take a much smaller price than he otherwise womh hatre. receivel. I say, that if ever there wass a case which deserves special consideration at the hands of the convernment. it is the case of the canalian farmer from one end of canada to the other to-dias. The best that can le said is this: Many of oin farmers must prepare for a total change of system. and I need not tell the House that you canost change the system of agriculture in any conntry withont a comsiderable expembiture of capital, nor neel I tell my friends here that in the case of a vast mumber. of our farmers. it is utterly hopeless and impossible. for them. as matters now stand. to mise that repuisite cappital. What is the combition of thefarmers of cianala! At this present moment thepolicy of the dinermment is to pay hage lomaties: sut of the prokets of the people. out of the prekets of these very farmers, for the purpose of encomars. ing certain petten and special manufacturers. When the Minister of Finance $s$ ated that 1 comb pute the tax paid ly the perple of (ianada at stio). (MXO.OXO), he stated what is perfectly correct. We pay $\left.\mathbb{S i n}^{3}\right),(x \times 1),(x \times 1)$ into our mational treasury for onr mational expenditure, and we are taxed in all human probahility, to a much larger amount for the purpose of promoting the interest of a couple of humdred favoured manufacturers. I will give but a few illustrations of this. Why. Sir, at this very moment the community of Canadia are taxed to the tune of nearly $\$ \mathbf{s}$, (Mx), (AXN) on the article of sugar alone, of which tax only a most insignificant fraction goes into the pullic treasury. The farmers of (anada are compelled probahly to pry at least half of that, and they get absolitely (14) return. Take: the tax on binting twine to which some of my hom. friends have been inviting attention ly their motions on the Order paper. I am not going into a disenssion to-night as w whether the tigures given by my hom. friend from Minguette (Mr. Witson) are exactly ami minutely conrect of unt: but this 1 say to the House of Commons, and this I say to the people of Canada, that here is anwher ciase where the farmers of (anamat are amd the treasary of Canada benetits liy scarcely sti,(NH). Take the article of eabl wil. and yon time that all wer Camalat our people are com. pelleal to pay 응 or $3(x)$ per cent more that they nued piay if they had free tande in that with the Lnited States, amd a rery small amomut i:1 comparisom of that tax fimbs its way into thepublie: treasury. Take the tax on irom and the bounty on irom. Why. Sir, iron is all aticle of prime necessity amil prime consumption on the part of the farmer. Irm in its varions shapes is mosit emomonsly taxed. Irom is subjected in some shateres in whith the farmer uses it to a tax of bil, Tl, athl even as high as sol per cent : and. not content with that enormons tas, the diovermment must plate a homanty on it. to be paitl out of the prokets of the fatmex on every pound of iron produced. I saty mothing of the tax on coal. becallase that only fallis umon the farmer in a companatively small degres: hat it may be well to reminu the House that that tax is virtually doubled by the fact that wer ambl alone the tax on coal, we are compelleal every rear to pay large sums to make grond the leticit in the ruming expenses of the Intercolonial Railway, hecaluse it conveyes coal for the henetit of one of two fatoured collieries at far below prime cost. I ask. as I have a right to ask, what du the dovernment propuse to do, under these circumstances. for the fammers of Canadia: We listened in vian in the hom. gentleman's speech for one single suggestion, one single remark or ohservation, which conld le: construed in any shape or way into signifying cither that the hon. gentleman recognized the position and the extreme severity of the burden laidon our agriculturists, or that he was prepared to take ome step to remove it. Whes he propose to reduce a single one of the taxes which weigh heavily on the farmers: Not he. Does he propose to give our farmers any hounties: They are subjecteil hy the action of a foreign state to a very oppressive taxation indeed. I would like to know, Nir, what merit there is in any man manofacturing cotton or woullen which gives him a greater claim on the treasury than the farmer shomblhave who manufactures heef, or who mamufactures barley or any other description of agricultural prolucts. If the hom. gentlemen opposite are consistent, if the hom. gentlemen do desire to relieve the farmer, the way is open to them. Let them loring down a measure--it will not consort. I grant, with the principles of political ecomomy : hut What are the principles of political economy to them-let them bring down a measure to relieve the farmer from the excessive hurden which foreign legislation has placed upon him: let them bring down a measure to pay him 30 cents per bushel on larley, amd io cents per dozen on his eggs: let them compensate him for the loss on his horses, and then I will suy-not that their course is wise or politic:-but at least that it is consistent and homest : and most assuredly the farmers of Cimada, umler the circumstances, have as goon, and a hetter clatim to be indemmitied that have the manufacturers. (or sho the hon. gentlemen propnse to find the farmersnew markets? Well. Sir, if I an to julse from the statements recently made to us, the opprertunity and the hopes of the fioserment ever finding new markets for our farmers or any looly else, are few and far between. The Minister of Finance to-night was good emongh to give a ilescription of his recent trip to Wiashington and of the success which attemled his eamest amd well-meant efforts to promote a theaty of reciprocity hetween ('anala amb the states: and here 1 have a word to say to the hom. gentleman with respect on the papers which were litiol on the Tiblle of this Honse. In these pripers. from tirst to last. 1, for one. fail to find the: smallest or slightest reference to the trate negotiations on account of reciprocity : not one syllable contained in the diomments, not one word. Hot one allusion $t$ it is latid on the Table of this Honse. Sir, this is a matter of grave importance. The statements marle by the hon. gentleman to-might are very grave and will have. I fear, graver consequences thath he appears to believe at this present moment. If the statements have been duly protocoled. if they have been sul, mitted to Mr: Blaine, agreed to by Mr. Blaine. or by Unted states representatioes aml accepted asa truthful statement of what happened there then. Mr. Speaker. all I have tosay is that, in my opinion, the $\begin{gathered}\text { iovermment were grailty of a grave act of dis. }\end{gathered}$ respect to this Honse amil were ilerelict in their duty in not having inchuded such er potoen or a statement of what happened in the papers laid on the Trable. But, if they have not been submitterl to Mr. Blaine, if they have not been agreed toly him, if it should turio out as it has turned ont hefore: that there are serions misumlerstamlings between our delegation and the representatives of the Linited States as to the construction to be put on this verbally reported conversation which we hat to-night : then, sir, I have to tell the Minister of Finance that he has committed about as impolitice and unwise an act as it is possible io conceive. The hon. gentleman was good enough to tell us that this matter was settled. I doubt if the hon. gentleman erer mate a greater mistake in his life. The matter is not sett led. nor will any such statement as he hats mank:, even if it were enlomsed by. Mr. Blatine, a vail to settle it. I will tell the hom. gentleman what is settled: I will tell him on what point no man in this country need any longer have any donht. That point is the utter disinclination of hom. gentlemen opposite to take any effective steps whatever to bring about a treaty of reciprocity hetween (cinala and the United Ntates. Sir, their whole conduct has been of a piece in this matter. First of all. a year and over asfo we hal these gentlemen obtaining a dissolution under what 1 must characterize as false pretenses. in view of the statements sulsequently made by Mr. Blaine and contirmed by Nir Charles Tupper: After that we had them going down to their mock conference at Washington in April last. And now. Sir, we have had them go down agrain-and for what purpose? Sir, I take the statement made by the hon. gentleman himself, in his place a few hburs ago, and if I am to judge by that statement, the object of his going down to Washington appears to have been to raise all the difficulties that he knew how to raise in the way of any set tlement or agreement with the United States.

He dinl uot go down for the purpose of making any propssition which he entertained the remotest icleat the Ginited siates would accept. He went down, if he had any retinite ohject in view, for the purpose, so fior as I can sec, of bolting and barring the flocr, to the hest of his power, against any other negotiators who might proceed to Wiashington with an homest lesire to negotiate a reciprocity treaty. Why. Sir. on the hon. sentlemans own statement, he seems to have applied himself diligently to obtain a refusal from Mr. Blaine. Was it ever heard hefore that a Comalian Minisuer applied to the Minister of a foreign state to lee tohd how he was to raise a revenue: Was it ever heard before that he entered- for the purpeses. no donlt, of facilitating a trealy of reciprocity with the United siates-into a long. claborate amil minute destription of all the dithenlties that would attend it: That is not the way. Nir, in which reciprocity treaties or any other treaties can ie negotiated. That is not the way in which Lard Elgin and his Ministers sucweeled in ohtaining the reciprocity treaty, to which the hom. gentleman referred, marle in lsitt. Now, Sir. I an afraid that it is quite neenless to invite any facourable respense. These hon. gentlemen's conuse had heen pretty well known in the United States. Their ntterances in this Honse amd out of it, particularly out of it, conhl not possibly have escaped the attention of the Conited stiates. They were published in all their jommals: they were published in all possible phaces and on all possible occasions. Why, Sir, I myself, but one week before the hon. gentleman went down to Washington so earnestly desirons of negotiating a treaty, had the pleasure of hearing him for an hour and a half in the town of Brampton descanting to an atudiene of several thonsand people on the uselessmess of applying to the United States for a reciprocity treaty. Never was there a prophet who took more pains to fulfil his own prophecy than the hon. gentleman. But what are we to expect of negotiators who ${ }^{\text {wo }}$ down to conduct a ditticult and delieate negrotiation with a people like the United Ntates, and who one week lefore have publicly declaved in the freest and frankest manner that they fo not believe in reciprocity, that they do not think it would be worth anything to whe Canalian people if they got it, and that they had not the slightest idea that it would he obtained. Now, Sir, I would like to know who ever expected -- following the hon. gentlemans wwn statement ... that the United States were going to enter into a treaty of reciprocity with us unless we were prepared to ahmit their manufactured as well as their natural proilucts. Why, Sir, it was known perfectly well that it was the idlest folly in the word for any Canalian Minister to go down and talk about a reciprocity in natural prodncts. Allow me to tell the hon. gentleman that reciprocity, in the very nature of the case, must involve-not discrimination, as he puts it artfully, for the purpose of exciting prejulice against it: but every genuine reciprocity treaty involves this: If a country is going to give you special privileges, you must give that country special privileges in return. It is of the very essence of reciprocity. It would be monstrous for the hon. gentleman or his colleagues to expect that the United States or any other comntry would enter into a reciprocity treaty on any other terms.

Mr. FOSTER. How alome the meminer for Huntingdon (Mr. Noriver):

Sir RICHAR1) (ARTWRIGHT. I do mot know that the member for Huntinglon ever lenied that proposition. The member for Huntinglon. being a man of intelligence and sense, unlerstimds perfectly well that the very essence of reciprocity is to give in order that we may get. There can be no reciprocity otherwise. And, moreover, the hom. gentleman and his friends knew perfectly well that the United States would insist, and they have a perfect right to insist, that if they extend the hame of good-fellowship to us, if they give us this great privilege, as great privilege it womld he, we on om part should have sutficient decency and self-respect not to turn Canada into a smuggling hase to the detriment of the lonited states. Now, Nir, l will tell the hon. gentleman that for my part I think he has misumerstood amd serionsly misinterpreted what has passed. Possibly we may he in a prosition to judge of that before we are very much wher. I have no doubt that the United States (iovernment or their representatives would insist on the two things which I have enmmenated : tirst of all, that the reciprocity shomhl he genume, one under which they would olstain monatages as well as give them, and secomily, that we should take care that (amata shouh not be a smoggling hase. Beyond that, for my part, uotwithstanding the statement of the hon. gentleman, I have verygrave fear that he most serionsly misumlerstoon ind has most seriously misrepresentel the whole natare of the conference. And I have no douln at all abomt this, Sir, that any Canalian delegation who wo down there with a clearer and more homomathe record than these gentlemen are able to brieg--any Canadian delegation who are alle to saty to the United States: " while we desire to retain our own antonomy, we are homestly and sincerely desirous of living on friendly terms with you aml giving you something in exchange for what you give us," will not find any insuperable ditticulty in obtaining a reciprocity treaty with the United States.

Mr. WALLACE. Farrer, for instance.
Sir RICHARI) (ARTWRIGHT. I have mo doubt that he wonld make in intinitely letter negotiator than any or all of the gentlemen who went there. Now, Sir, I an slad for one that the hon. gentlemen have shown their hamd at last. All through this controversy we have been hanpered and entangled hy the assertions mate ly their followers, if not by themselves, that they were most earnestly desirous of negotiating a reciprocity treaty. Sir, no man now can pretend that they either elesire or hope to olitain a treaty of reciprocity with the UnizedStates. It is perfectly plain and clear, that so far as these men are concerned, all hope has departed. They cannot, they will not-I do not believe, Sir, that they ever had the desireor thepower-tonegotiateareciprocity treaty on any terms that would be acceptable ; because, sir, I know who stands behind the throne, I know who control this Govermment. I know whi are the men without whom they have no chance whatever of retaining their present place: and, knowing that, I, for my part, never have entertained the slighest lelief, nor do I entertain the slightest belief now, that those hon. gentlemen have the slightest desire at any time to negotiate a reciprocity treaty, at any rate for the admission of American manufactures on equal terms with Canadian. Sir, I think the hon. gentleman has shown conclusively, to-day, to every man who paid the least attention to his speech or his tone or the tone of his supporters when he delivered it, that he, for one, Wis most sincerely delighted when he olotained a refusal from Mr. Blane to negotiate a reciprocity treaty. Now, sir, there is another point to which the attention of the Honse may fairly be callen, as to which the hon. gentleman thenght it expedient to say little or mothing. It has been, for a long time, a very unfortmate feature, indeed, in our domestic economy, that. While we have spent larger sums of moner than. I think, any comity of our size amd pepmiation, almost, has cier spent on great. pablic works, up to the present time the resnlts hate heen simply diststrons. I am mot able, to-day. ${ }^{\prime \prime}$ pht my finger on one single, solitary public work anywhere in (amodia which pays interest on its outlay. I am hardly able io put my tinger on any one public work which does not show an amma! lleficit in the effort to make gool the gitp hetween the achat working expenses and receipts. So it wouldappeat wearegoing, and foing very rapidly, from hat to worse. Sow, I have siven a memo. of the total cost of our malways and cimals and orher public works during the past vear. The hom. gentleman, athenoth he gave us a great many fisures, did not dwell particalady on these, and yet these are ones, I think, which might commam particulatly the attention of this Hotse. I take tirst the Intercolonial Ratway, on which last year we receivel the sum of $82,90^{2-}, 30,5$, and on which arholly and entirely apart from the heary charges on capital acoome, our expenditme amomated to $83,316.2 .31+$, heing a deficit of very little less than Si(n), (NA) on the working of last Pear. I turn to our canals, on which we received Sis:a, 1 : all tohn, and on which ond expenses amomited to Sidis, 934 , being a clear deticit of sies: (HN . I turn th the whole volume of publie works, inchuling the cost of the department, and limi that while our merepts amomated to showing a leficit, over and above interest on the enommous cost of construction, of $81,2,5,549$. It wonll he well if that were the worst. but the Honse will remember that a little while aro, in reply to a duestion put hy me aross the House, the hon. gentleman upposite was grom enough to inform as that. in, I think, a perion of seven months out of the twelve, the deficit on the Intercolonial Railway hat rou up to the amonat of $\$ 1,2(N),(1)$ in the course of a year, if the same ratio hetween recoipts and expenses continued. Sir, it is worth while to go hack for a year or two in this matter of the Intereolonial Railway. In 1889, 1 find that its total receipts amomited to showing a deficit. therefore three years ago, of and its expenses, not incluling the items charged to capital, $\$ 3,481,472$, heing a leticit of 320,100 . In 1s:91, as I have told yon, their receipts were S2, 970,37, , and expenses $83,662,314$, showing u deficit of $\operatorname{sis} 4,900)$. Now, that is a tolerably rapid 1890 , si84, $10 \times 0$ ) in 1891 , and in the seven months of Navigation Returie, I see that there is indeed a small increase. Apparently our returns of imports in a little over $\leqslant(2 l l,(K N),(K N)$ a rather small increase, I must say, secing that it only amounts to one per cent on the colume of tramsactions in the year. But it is moteworthy particularly in this commection, to ohserve where those increases took place. Our increased trade amb commerce with the United States, in spite of the Mekinley tariff, represents the whole $\boldsymbol{s i g}_{0}(0 \times 0,0(x)$ : and if you choose to compare our trate with the United Nates in all the great items, whether it be mines or tisheries or luminer of agricultural problactions or manufactures, you will time that in all, sare the single article of amimal prohnets, the United States are our largest customers, and even take serenty-five or eighty pel cent of all our poolucts, proving completely, is sagain, the enormons importance to the people of this country of mantaining friendly eommercial relations with the people of the United States. Now. I im not making a comparison at all for the puppose of amoring hon. gentlemen, hat I am making it for the purpose of showing what an enormons capaceity of increase there is in the trale of the Gnited states. and 1 wonld just call attention on the fact that between the vears 1890 and 1891 , the total trade of the United states appears to have increased

 call attention to that, as 1 say, not for the purpose of comparing the relative increase there and the relative increase in our cane, hint for the pupose of shewing, what $I$ have often pointed ont to the Honse, the almost unlimited possibilities for the expansion of tade between ns and the United Niates, if omly we comh wham free access to thein markets. I spoke awhile ago of the huge burden of actual taxation now inflicted on the people of Canamba, amb, as lay. it is perfectly clear they are at present ohligred to pay no less that three separate taxes, one stated by the hon. gentleman to-night, to the federal treasmy : amother of at least an egual amomen, of which 1 gave a few samples a little while ago, to the protected manufacharers: and acoin a thind, and a very onerous tax, to the Uuited states treasury, and coupled withit must be taken the loss on their home sales sustained hy the farmers in coinsequence of being deprived of that market. Now, althengh it may somnd a large sum, I entertain no doubt whatever myself that these three distinct items of actual taxation- for they are all actual taxation-have come to equal a shat not math short of $50,($ ON $)$, (NK) a year intlicted upon the people of this comitry: and, further, and what is worse, a large proportion of that taxation is very unequally distributed, amd a large proportion of it restes on the shomblers of the finmers alone, who are at present least able to bear it. There is another consideration which it will be well for hon. gentlemen to bear in mind. The hon. the finance Minister talks about the negotiations between us amd the Unitenl States as heing settled and con©uder. Sir, I am unable to agree with him on that point. My experience, and I think the experience of most men who have paid any attention to the passuge of events in that comntry is this: Either the ginp between us must be closed or the gap will widen. I think the hon. gentleman is leceiving himself and deceiving the House, if he imagines that things will be allowed to remain as they are. I believe he will find either that he will have to come to terms with the people of the United States, or he will find looming in the not distant future what Sir Charles Tupper pointed to not long ago, and that is something nearly approaching to total non-intercourse between Canadia and the United States. And now, having reviewed more or less l,riefly the statements made by the hon. gentleman, and some of the facts which I have myself extracted from our Public Accounts, I desire to spemil a few short moments in reviewing first of all, what the Government of Canada have done for Canada during the past ten or twelve years, and next, what they have not done. Well, what they have not done is easy enough to understand. They have had most extraordinary opportunities given them, they have had most extraordinary means placed at their disposal for the purpose of colonizing and settling that vast tertitory to which we became heirs in the North-West. What have they done there I would like to know? If you were to enter into an account of their transactions there, putting in all the alditions to our capital debt and the amounts charged to consolidated fund, I lelieve it would be fomil that the result of all this huge expeniture has scarcely settleid one family in the North-West for every $$ 10,060$ which has been taken out of the pockets of the people of Canada, and I ahd, from my own knowledge of that comotry, that I believe, if the (rovermment of Canada had hail nothing at all to do with the North. West, if the lands there had simply been left open for settlement, if they hal been left in the same condition as those in North Dakota, there would have beenfarmore settlers in the North-West and Manitoba than are to be found there at this moment. Sir, the hon. gentlemen have, as I have shown, utterly failed in keeping the people of this country in their native land. They have by their own showing utterly failed in conducting to a favourable issue negotiations for reciprocity with the United States. They have not, as far as I could gather from the speech of the hon. gentlemm, heen more successful in finding any other markets for us. and in fact I fear for my own part that some of the few markets we do possess and which are very useful for us will be serionsly impairen or taken away altogether. They have fatiled utterly in making our public works pay even rumning expenses, not to speak of making any retum for the money which has been expend ed upon them, and Ineed not tell the House how completely they have failed to fultil the promises marle by their colleagues and predecessors as to the vast revenue which was to he derived from the NorthWest. In fine, they have failed to keep any of the promises or pledges which they marle to the people of Canadia. That is what they have failed to ilo. But I am bound to say on the other hand that these hom. gentlemen have done a great deal they did not promise to do. I am bound to admit that they have displayed the most extraordinary diligence in bringing together and obtaining by hook or by crook vast campaign funds for their own purposes. I am bound to say that they have displayed extraordinary energy and skill in training up acorps of professional gentlemen who, though perhaps not of so much service in the hurly-burly of a general election, yet when allowed a fair field for their energies, for example in bye-clections, when these are not rushed altogether, but are allowed to take place by twos and threes, so that the brigade may le advantageonsly moved from point to point as political exigencies may require, have proved eminently successful-as, I almit, we know to our cost-in promoting what my esteemel friend the Premier terms the intelligent liscussion of financial questions with the individual electors. And, when campaign funds fail, and when these trained professionalgentlemenare unable to indoctrinate the public with their views on general (questions, the fovernment has taken effective precautions for maintaining due stability against the haphazard decision of majorities. It is perfectly well known that at the last general election in my own province of Ontario the Reform party carried, according to these gentlemen's own returns which are in my hands, a large majority of the popular vote, but, thanks to the precautions to which I have referred, thanks to Franchise Bills and (ierrymander Acts, the Reform party, though they had a large majority of the popular vote, were in a derinled minority on the floor of this Honse. Then Government have also been successful in overcoming the ignorant impatience of taxation. Taking into account the real taxation of the people and not simply the nominal taxation, taking into consileration all that has been extractel from the pockets of the people for the bentit of the manufacturers in the last 14 years, as well as what has gone into the Dominion treasury, I venture to say that these hon. gentlemen and their frients have succeeded in extracting no less a sum than $$ 800,000,000$ from the pockets of the people of Cimada. No doubt they have, inclirectly, done gool to the million and a half of people whom they have driven out of the country, because all the accounts we receive show that most of those persous who have been expelled from this country by evil goverument have prospered, have done well and have thriven in the land to which they were obliged to have recourse. And there is no doubt that hon. gentle. men have done another thing. They have succeeded to an extraordinary degree in concentrating values in certain localities and in a small numher of hands. If they have clone this at the expense of all the rest of the community, why, Sir, you and the House in general know perfectly well that after all they have only acted in accordance with the scriptural precept: "To him that hath shall be given, and from him that hath not shall he taken away even that which he hath." Now, under these circumstances, it is not to be wondered at that the Minister of Finance considers that we are a most prosperous community, that he has nothing to propose, he has nothing to suggest, he sees nothing amiss, nor has he the smallest prospect of improvement to offer. Sir, it may suit the Government of Canala to continue to play the part of the ostrich in this matter, as' they have done long before, but for my part I cannot but regret the statements which have been manle to-night by the hon. gentleman, and more particularly those important statements which he has made showing that he for his part, and on behalf of his colleagues, utterly dispair of coning to any uaderstanding whatever with the United States. I cammot but regard these statements as most unfortmate, and as likely to exercise a most unfortunate influence on the destiny of this comntry. I entertain no doubt whatever, knowing what I do of the feeling of the Sir Riehard Cartwright. people of camala, that the announcement mate to : diay by the hon. gentlemim will, in all human prolability, canse a very great increase of the exodus now taking place. At this present moment throughont (analia there is a very large number of men who are clinging desperately to the soil in hope of an improwement in their cumbition, and they know perfectly well that there is mo reasomahle lowe of any material improvement in their present comblition except through the policy of the Libural party heing adopteil. and except through a ratiomable agreenent being comat to with the linited states. Now. the hom. gentlemian has pratically tatem a way all hope from these peeples and I' fear, if lie ifeses mots. that one result of this ammonement will. heyond all questiom. he enomumsly to inerease the exombo of the people from this cemutry of which we hater already hand snch hamentahle proof. sir. 1 will tell the honi. :enteman another thing. It hats heen mo part of our policy on this side. it hats heen ner part of our desire on this side: whatever the hom. gentleman or his friemels mat he pleaved to saty. to stir up the question of political union. Wur policy to wats the case with the carly Reciprocity Treaty of lsiot. would have provided a cure. womb hate prevented that teeling froms sprading: but fear sery much that the anmoneement the hon. gentlenan has made will have a directly opposite influence on the minds of his followers it leatst. He has male it arte concernen, there is no hope or chance of oming to any understanding with the United states. He and his friends have persistently misrepresenteal the position of the liberal party in that print, and they have persistently dimed into the minls of their own supporters the ilea that practically speaking there is no chance of obtaining reasmable terms with the luited states except hy political union. I do not almit that $:$ we do not ailmit that at all. But I know that the lauguage and the action of hom. gentemen are pronlacing in the mimbs of theirown supporters a strong conviction that way, imel, what is worse, I feat a great many of then are prepareal to take the step with its comsequences. sir, I think if ever amy policy stomel self-comemmen, it is this same policy of isolationame high taxation. Here we are in a country which ought to tee able to support a popmataion has harelly heen settled, in the greatest pirtion of it, for the life time of one ordintry human being, and yet. sir, in that short space of time we have contrived to raise our real taxation to a point egual to, if not greater than. that of the highest taxation levied in the oldest and most thickly settled Earopean comitries; we have contrivel to lose an enormons number of our population-I will not stop; to argne whether it is a million or a million and at half. It is clear, at any rate, that we camont keepany respectable percentage of our own southful population in this country, much less the strangers who come here. Now. Sir, if such have heen the consequences of the administration of those hom. gentlemen in the past, what are they likely to be if we have a few more years of this plumbering and blumdering? It is perfectly clear that unless a goverimnent can show that it promotes the material and moral well-being of the people over whom it rules, that government fails to establish any just claim upon their respect or their allegramee sir. what have these hom. gentlemen lone for the material and moral well-heing of the people of Canalla? The census returns speak trumpet-tongheel as to what they hatro done for their material well-heing, aind the scamdalous revelations of last session, which hate made. to our shame loe it said, the very name of (anada a synnym for senality and corroption thronghomt the whole civilized word, which make men who love their comutry ashamed to call themselves (anallians when they go abroal, speak ennilly loud as to herw they have promoted the mural well-heing of the periphe of Canala. Mr. speaker. I resere to say that diere is no alternative for us now hat to alinit that these same census returns, from which 1 have ghotel to daye are a titting erown th the edifice I have deppicterl just now. They show: ats no other puldie doctuncent erer laid on the fable of Parliament in any comatry erer showed, I resret extremely to sity it. how uterly anl ennpletely ignomance : mil corruption. and mismanage. ment can avail. in the tirst plate. th mullify and destroy the greatest matnoral resiources. and in the secom place. how eaty it is and how likely it is. if these things are allonseal wion machecked and umpunisheel. as they have. 1 :Im sury to say, gone on here for so mainy years, to legratle a nation of free men into smething revy little better than a hande of venal sarfs.

Mr. TCPIPER These gentemen who have listeneel to the hom. member for somth Oxford (sit Richard (artwright) to-lay will. I am sure, forgive me for saying that the impression produced upen my mind lig theargments, ly the ntterancer, and by the desperate phages wer the whole field of this discussion, mate ley that hon. gentemam, make an ohd stony come to my mind, not at all inapporpriate. A celelnated politician was holding forth in one of those comuties hy the seat whicin the hom. gentlenam has given a great deal of his attention of late, and after he got throngh there was naturally a curissity on the part of some as to the impression he hail made, amil one candidate remarked that it was the ohd hash without the grasy. I can make many excuses for the hon. gentieman who has just sat down. I mulerstami thoronghly well why the old tire seems to hate left him. and why he appears is much stramded in this delate as his policy to which he hats for so long a time clang so desperately. The hom gentleman may well complain, is the hon. menher for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) did, that suddenly annl without one worl of warning, the Minister of Finame should expose, in the few erisp, sentences he diel to-day, the utter futility, if wot the alsurdity, of the policy to which hom. sentlemen opposite have for so long pledgeei themselves and pledged the salvation of their party. I consider that after the satisfactory statement made ly the Ninister of Finance, it statement which I venture to say will be intensely satisfactory to the lusiness men of this community, who can read it without party feeling, a statenent so strong and so eminently inlicative of the commercial prosperity of Canada, I am in the julyment of this House when I say the finameial statement was a subject to which the hon. member for South Oxford gave the least attention to-night. I have no doubt the hon. gentleman, who once was Finance Minister, recollects the last Budget speech he delivered, and the last 1 venture to say, that he as Minister of Finance, will ever aleliver in this Honse. and that he wis compelled after fonr years alministration of this conntry as Minister of Finance 0 foce this l'aliament and the comatry with a statenment which I will quote. I ask the attention of the Honse to it particularly, for the contrast hetween that stiatement and the statement of the Minister of Finance of the present day is. I letieve, one of the prime canses of the hon. fentleman's sormo amb disturlance. The member for South Oxford stated in his speech in 187s as follows:--

- It is not often in the commere ial history of any coumtry, that we are called non to chroniche so grear a reluction. not merely in the total volume of our trade. but also in the revenue derived therefrom, as we have seen within the last wo ur three years. Making allowance tor the ahmission of Prinee Edward filand into the Cuion, the total rolume of the tride anil enmmeree of Camadia has in that short interval been reduced bey yery nearly castums alone shows a decrease in that period of some-being that wur trade and comnserec collectively has been duties derived from custums alone have fallem off from S15.3:
Further than that, the hon. gentleman was olliged to andmit and confess that one of the results of his administration-if indministrations are responsilbe for the tinameial combition of the comatre as he now seems to think - was that :
"Whereas a few pears aro, with a total population of srorth of gouls, we funnd ourselves with a population of $4.000,000$ impurting a little over Sat. (f) (h) (h) worth. In other words. the totat imports hate fallen from an arerage
 Hail the imports contimued stationary, ins it was at that time suppesed they womh, the revenne, nnder our present tariff, would. in all probabilits have cunsilerabl: exceeded $\Sigma i=0.000$.ch0, and h:al the reduction which atually took place not exeeded the amonnt eximated 000: while, is the Honse knows, the aetual fact is that our revenue hit: sunk to a sum very little execeding : 322,060 , (1) 10 ."
We remember how unsatisfactory the converse of that statement was to the hon. gentleman tonight. We reniember, for instance, the horror with which he heard the statement from the Minister of Finance that the exports of the comatry were increasing, that the trade of the comatly was steatily increasing, and when my hon. friend alluded to the varions and different signs of our prosperity, the hon. gentleman opposice offered up has prophecies of ruin and of despait: What do hon. wentlemen suppose that when he was Minister of Finance, he, the hom. gentleman felt warranted in saying with the country in that combition, with trade in the state depieted in the language I have read: He concladed that financial statement hy telling the House:
"I venture to say that the reeord submited in the Public Accounts is net at record of which any Government may be ashanned."
If our population has not increased to that extent we would so much desire, if everything is pot as we would have it, surely if that wats a satisfactory financial statement, the hon. gentlenan knows the reason for that trimmphant cheer which greeted the tinancial statement of to-day, and can account in some degree for that half-hearted faint cheer which greeterl the hon. nember for south Oxford from the lienches around him. I do not desire to be personal at all, but, judging from the exaggerated style so pecnliar to the hon. gentleman in lealing with the characters of opponents, or with financial matters or conmercial yuestions, looking aromel the Province of Ontario, not to speak of the " shreis and patches," it is known that among his friemls of those associated with him, the hom. gentlemin is regarded as rather a rangerons anxiliary in political matters. His party were to-lay entitled to a more powerfal utterame from him, to it little more fighting form. to some attempt, at all events, to cheer their hasging and drooping spirits. But it is a difficult matter, as some one has said, to howl very loudly into the month of a commacopia, ame he has endeavoured to shelter himself behind the crops of the country, and expressed delight at the thonght that groml coops will not always be with us as they are troday, and he will wait till we have the weevil. as omr ohd leanler used to tell us, and the putatu hog. The hom. gentleman was: not ashamed to admit the anthorship of a letter, which I am not at liberty totruly designate owing to patianmentary rules and parliamentry constoms. I coull not attempt to equal the eritiaism made of that letter hy the Minister of Finathe : hat a doemment coming from the hon. gentleman must receive even more attention than has heen hestowed upon it, and I wish to remimh hom. fentlemen that when you read the extravagamt language. coarse statements, if I may le allowed to so refer to them, contained in the letter, no surprise need he felt ly any hon. gentleman who is familiar with the methorl of the hon. gemtleman opposite in political conflicts and contests. Ihave tiken the trouble tor select some of the choice words that have fallen from the lips of the hom. menher from South Oxforl. Out of curiosity I manle a short stuly of the aljectives the hom. gentleman uses with such freedon and volubility. For instance. he did not merely denonnce the present policy hut also the great majority of the people of this country, whether in the "shreds and patches" as he describes some of the provinces, or in Untario, his own native province. I intend to read parts of the hom. gentleman's letter if you. Mr. Speaker, and members, will permit me-. if inceed yon will permit the repetition of such language on the floor of the House-in order to give some ideat of the hom. gentleman's litemary style, some inca of the elonuent manner in which he handles his opponents, either with or without gloves. I will call attention to some of the sweet terms he has on varions occasions mate use of. Alluding to his opponents, the hon. gentleman designated them corrupt, dehatucherl, Inihers, rohbers, rogues, infamous, hypocrites, and then he: struck the church and used the term, pious frands: tmrning to his opponents again le called them embezalers, loathsome, impuient robbers, pack of wolies, old poachers, loud-mouthed blatant blockheinls, itlenl blockheads, boodlers. But, Mr. Speaker, I hope the Honse will allow me, ami 1 will give a story for the bencfit of the hon. gentlemen opposite to show that these people who use strong expressions are unfortunately quite a numerous class in every country. On one occa sion a clergyman endeavoured to deal with a man of something of the same temperament as our friend from South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright). He told him there was no occasion to resort to these expletives, that coarse or strong language never increased the force of any statement one wisherl to make, that in fact the statement was all the stronger if it were conched in the language most used by gentlemen. Well, said the ohd parishioner: "I an a phain man, and I am a plain spoken man," and like the member for South Oxford (Sir Picharll (artwright), he said he always calleal a spate a spade, and the parson replied: "Well, that is meason for your calling it a blamkety blank ohl shovel." I hope the hon. member for south Oxford will take that to heart. He is accustoned to the use of vitriol, soto speak, in prolitical life, but he has never killed inyone that I have heard of, nor has he distigured them rery much. I do not know that it would be right for me to say, Mr. Speaker, that lefore I reached the signature of that letter in the Eiomomist, I came to the conclusion that Jack the Ripper was disensereal, and that Jack the Ripper would have his name in full print at the lootom of that document: but it was mot so. Before $I$ allole to the langage that is contained in that article, I call the Honse to witness that the hom. gentleman did not hesitate to say that he stoon hy every word of it. He is mot afraid of the letter nor of the utterances. and he is only anxious for some one to read that letter and to real more from it than the hom. the Minister of Finance dial to-diay. The hom. member for south Oxford (Sir Richard Cart wright! is something like the hry in the story I one heart: atad perhays it was told of him in his earlier days when he happened to be the som of his fither or the nephew of his uncle or something of that sort. It was related on that oceasion that his father or uncle met him in the fied and saw him in a certain condition when he shoulh have been hard at work. Later on some one asked the relative whether his son was a gool man to work or whether he was not afrail to work and the relative replicil: "Why Dick is not in the slightest iffraid of work, for 'I have known him to lie down leside it and sleet for at whole day." The hom. member for south Oxford (Sir Richard (Gartwright) if no one else did. would lie down amd sleep by that letter for a whole ray. Sow, Mr. Speaker, the langlage of this docimment deserves a sreat deal of exnsideration. The language is not choice, but I wish to call the attention of the House to some of the statements that are fome in it. For instance, the hom. gentlemam was not anhamed to saty referring to the poliey of the Canalian Govermment :
- That even in a comparatively short space of time this most ill-idrised police had resultell in a tremendous exodus of the very choicest portion of the ropulation of Canada."
Now that statement the hon. gentleman will stamd by. He can give no prowf that a tremendons exolus of the very choicest portion of the popmation of canala had taken plate in that limited periorl. He makes the assertion hut he has not given a particle of evidence nor will any hon. gentleman who sits hesiles him, I venture to say, attempt to support that statement by reference to pubilic documents or to proofs that will stani investigation in this Parliament. The hom. gentleman has further stated:

I am not eomplaining of the exact language they used, hut I point ont to this House, as showing the animus that inducel the hon. gentleman to pen that statement, that there is no corresponding statement as to the lenefits conferred on the enme try ly this expeniture. Hal the hon. gentleman only guoted his own language : language which was used for instamee ly the hon. member for Hallimand (Mr. Montague) last year. he wonld have heen able in his own words uttered in this House to have given a full justitication for every dollan of the ferleral part of that expenditure. When the hon. arentlemian alluled to this dedot he should have said that it was represented ho these urcat mational works such as the Canalimen Dacific Railway aml the Intercolonial Railway: these responsililities that were mon our shoullers, the responsibilities with which we had to grapple, and which the language of the hom. &entleman showed w re of immense alviantige to this comitry. All reference to that is climinate: in the letter becanse that would uot serve the purpose that ipparently inluced the hom. gentleman to write it. He contimes:
"That in the thirteen years to which he was referring there whs absolutely no inerease at all in the collective wealth of the community:"
That is a statement which I sity is incapalsle of proof. But the hon. sentlem:an was more specitic and he went on to say:
"That two or three cities, and perhape a scure of towns have increased considerably later on. but the great mass of the population, and particularly the auricultural chass. are distinctly poorer and less prospernue than they were twelve yearsaro.
As to that I wish to give some pronf to show the inaccuracy of the statement, anil I call the attentinn of the House to the census bulletin published by the lepartment of Agriculture in which a list of towns where an increase of population hats taken place is given. and insteal of the hon. gentleman's statement heing accurately correct, this is the statement contained in the oftioial census bulletins:
$\because$ In comparison with the growth of eity population in otheremuntries Canadn's urbin development shows favourably. The 23 large cities of England increased their popilation during the lecennium by 142,49 souls: equal to 112 per cent. Loudon increased $10+4$ per cent: Birmingham. 7 per cent : Xewcastle $23^{\circ} 2$ per cent : Cardiff. in $\%$. The increase in the 1,006 urban districts of England amomnted to $15 \% 3$ per eent in the ten years.

- The larger growths in India were : Calcutta, 13"2n per eent: Madras, $10-80$ per cent: with the highest recorided increasp, that of Mirzajur. 46 \% per cent.
"In the United Stites the limit of urban population is placel at 8,000 souls. The highest pereentage of inerease (excluding two or three cities) which hall no existence in $188(0)$ are: Chicago. $118 \%$ : Minueapolis, 2514 : St. Panl. 2001 : Kansas City, $137 \cdot 9$ per cent.
- It will be seen in the tables given below that Winnipeg shows an increase of $221{ }^{\circ} 1$ per cent: New Westminter, $3+2^{\circ} 9$, and Toronto, 88.4 per cent.
- If the nnnexations of territory were disregarded in the case of Toronto. as has been done in the case of Chicago, Torontris increase would be for purposes of comparison with that of Chicago, $108^{\circ} 6$ per cent.
"If all the population in what popularly constitutes Montreal were municipally united, that city would show an iucrease of 46 per cent. Howerer, Montreal with her increase of $39: 5$ per cent (as given below) compares with Boston and its 2560 per cent, and with Philadelphia and Boston and its 23 per cent, and its $23^{\circ} \cdot \mathbf{i s}$ per cent of an inerease.

The city of Vancourer has grown from nothing in 1881 to 13,685 . There is but one instance of $\boldsymbol{y}$ similar growth in the linited States-the City of Roanoke, Virginia."
Now, that entirely meets the point that the hon.
gentleman wished to make when he premed that statement, and, in speaking of two or three cities and a seore of towns he understated the facts, becaluse the towns are numerons where there has heen an increase of population, as the hom. gentleman himself well knows. Again, the hoa. gentleman din not hesitate to state in this letter to the British public that there were :
 currence as mattere now stame."
And he hell up to the reproof of right-thinking people in Fingland, and as a mark of diseredit and reproach, that there were demambs for additional provincial subsilies. and that these were grantenl. What a reflection upon his present leader. who made a largain, uno only with the premier of çuebee. but with the premiers of the varions provinces. for adlititinnal provincial sulsidies: While his leater was making such a liargain, this dangerous auxiliary, the how member for south (oxforit, was denomeing it as one of those "ont ragems demands for fresh hribes." Then, the hem. gentleman sitid furtier :
" Gue hinge, I think. ought tu be clear toath intelligent Euglishmen, and that is. that it is utterls imposible that Canada can prover under her present conditions,-isolatefl, and in danger of beingetill more completely isolated. from trade and commeree with the entire eontinent io which she belongs gengraphically. losing her pop!ulation at the vate of one million and a half in ten years.
I stop not to allurle to what the hom. Minister of Finance dealt with as to the inacenacy of the statement in regard to population: hat I wish to allude to what the hon. gentlemati has dwelt upon to-night, as to the enomons magnithale of our continental trade. The hom. leader of the Op, position at Boston. in December last. stated that in romml munbers that trate amomited to one humited million dollars a year: amb to-day the member for south Oxford took mpour attention by showing that notwithstanding this. Mckinley Bill and other American leyislation since listio, min trale with that comutry was not only valuable. but enormous in extent. Yet he tells the British public that we are so cribbed and contined in our relations with the Cinited States that we are isolated from the trate and commerce with the entire continent. He has to-night proved, if he has proved anything. that that statement to the British pullic was inatecurate and without foundiation. Then, the hom. gentleman, in this letter, after alluding in the mast offensive way to his oppoients, luoth the living and the dead. stated that "the agricultural class has heen simply blen white." The hon. Minister of Finance alluited to it : but I would ask the hon. member for south Oxford to consult the Premier of Ontario and the colleagues of that gentleman who athress large masses of the people of this province on our natal day and at other times, as to whether they would corrolorate his statement, or whether they would not point to their utterances freshly recoriled, giving it the flattest and strongest possible contradiction. The hon. gentleman stated in this letter :
"The duty on sugar is now so arranged, for the advantage of half-a-dozen sugar refiners, that the Canadian consumer is obliged to pay a tax of nearly two millions a year, of which only the most insignificant fraction finds its way into the public treasury."
And yet, we are fresh from the electors, from the consumers of sugar, who gave their votes to men supporting this Aclministration for the very action taken on that guestion at the list session of Parliament. What was the hom. gentleman's own corurse at the time he was charged with the administration of the tinances of tias comutry? so completely did he mismanage that question, so little did he molerstam the sugar trade. that no less a man tham a genteman who sulsegnently became his colleague, the member for the ('ity of Hallifax at that time, the Hom. Alfred lones, denomeed his pricicy on the flom of this Honse, amb charged the hrme member with having driveln away a sugser trade worth three or four million dollars a year from Canadians into the hames of the refiners ann midillemen of the cities of New York anl Bustom. And yet this hom. senteman had the harriboonl to put his pen to a statement of that kimel. and to ask the British pulbi. tw witinlatw their contidente from Canala amb the Administration, hecanse the: had done what has proved to have heen popular in the minds of the vant majority of the perple of this statenemt :
"The sum takea sur of the puckers of the poppe tir the ienefit of :he protected manutacturers, in additiont: that naid into the treitenry is certainly nut less, anll is prohably a send deal more. than sün, ofo, ions)."
Now, Mr. Speaker, to make that statement the hral. gentleman has to alopt the print which hats never heen aceepted by the people of this comatry, that is, that our people pay all the duties. The hon. gentleman has dibated io us upon the duties mar people have :o pay muler American legislation, and he claims thai we also pay the daties ineilental to (amadian lexishation. But let me ask him whether in regiari. for instance, to anthatite coal. his theory is sustianel : When the laty existed on that atticle. the hom. gentleman claimed that there wombld be a reduetion in itsprice. the moment the duty was taken off. The duty was taken off, and the exchequer of tiais combtry lost about half a million dollars at year of revenue: yet to-lay the price of anthatiote coal is higher than it was when the duty was on. Many cother criticisms oucer to us to show that the hom. gentleman was not warranten in making so loold it statement. We know how little his argment prevailen with the ellitor of the Eromomist, whom we tinl pointing out that under the plan of the hom. gentheman himself, the only difference would be that insteal of the Cumalian manufacturers receivins the money taken from the people the Yanke mannfacturers and the United States treastry Would reasive every dollar of it : and the homi. gentlomam dial not deal with that very apt anil appropriate criticism of the paper in which he places so mach contidence. The hon. gentlennan also statenl:
" The tovernment gives the protected manufaturers the power to tax the people for their own purposes. and the protected manufucturers in turn. whenever called unon, assess themelvesin whateveramonnts the liovernment require in order to enable it to carry the elections." That statement is absolutely laseless : that statement the hom. gentleman could not prove; that statement would be contradicted on oath by manufacturer after manufacturer in this comery; and the hon. gentlenan knows it. There is no possible way in which the hon. gentleman could have got information to enable him to make that statenıent. It is alsolutely incorrect from beginning to end. I challenge the hon. gentleman or any of his friends in this House or ent of it, to give a scintilla of evidence ou which any man valuing his charateter or reputation would repeat his statement. The hon. gentleman was uot content with making that hold and reckless statement. but he went on to saly:
" The thing is done openly and shamelessly ly both parties to the transaction. Prior to the general elections of 1882, of 1 sis. and of 1891 . Sir John Mactonald and his colleagues deliberately called the protested manufacturers together. and demanded and obtained from them such sums as ther deemed uecessary for the purpose of debauching the electorate. pledging themselves in return not to alter the tariff to the detriment of the said contributors. which eompact was faithfully carried out and impulently : wwed."
The hon. sentleman will not say that he would dare to put his name to an attidavit containing that statement --an atficlavit for the statements in which he eondil he held responsible in a cont of criminal jurisoliction. The hon. genteman onght to anierstand that there is a difference between making statements in argment. and sitting down in cold binol and pemminte sentences which he camot sup. port.

Sir RICHARI) (ARTWRIGHTS. Every worl of it is true. and you know it.

Mr. TUPIPER. I say the hon. gentleman catnnot prove it. He camnot hy the evielence upon which he mate it. and there is noevidence in exist. ence so far as the people in Camala know : there is no man in (inhalat who has ever seen, so far as the public are aware, a statement from a responsible man that the sentences, as I real them here, are true and correct. The hon. gentleman camot give the evidence now or later ons.
sir RI(HARD) (ARTWRIEHT. Yes, I catl. I hate heard the statement from the manufactures themselves arain and again.

Mr. TCPPPR Aml it wats hearaty evinlence from the manufacturers:
sir RICHARI) CARTWRIAHTS. It was from the men whon subseribed it.

Mr. TUPPER. The hom. gentleman brands all the mannfacturers and the (iovermment of his comatry and every oppomeint on a statement of manufacturess who would tell him the story of their own shame. The hon. gentleman in this erives evidence of his recklessness : he rives evidence that the reckless spirit which was in him when he wrote that letter has not departed from him yet. The hom. gentleman staten to the Finglish public, not ats an argument but as a fact :
". When the Government of any country deliberately abdic:ates its highest functions in fas our of a fers selfivh rings, and permits its Minister of Finance to hecome in the most literal sense. the mere mouthpiece of a maiuficturer's association. in return for the right to hold the proceeds of the robbery for political purnoses. It is ide to expect ansthing from a government or a legislature mlected by such means and under such auspices, except precisely the results with which every uewspaper in Englind and in the Uniter States were ringing during a great part of the past year."
And itobviouslyoceurred to the London press to ask how was it, if this member for South Oxforl was as righteous as he pretended to be, iHel so sensitive in connection with these things, he had not one word to say about his old colleague and cosadjutor, one of the leaders of the Reform party, Mr. Mercier and lis toll-taker Mr. Pacand: It occurred to the press all the way across the sea, where the hon. gentleman thought they knew so little of us, at once on reading this statement, that it was a most extraordinary thing this righteons man had not one word to saly against the chatacter of this man who had been proved to have committed the crime he suspected his opponents of beine guilty of, and which he so recklessly charged against them. Now, then, I say that the omly thing on record we can compare to this clocumemt, the only thing so outageons that I have seen in my short politicall life, is the utterances of that hore centleman on a previons occasion. and the clocument printed anl published by one of his confreres anm alile allies. now the elitor of the Toronto Bhow. That letter went to Lomilon for a hate purpose. It has almost accomplished a batd purpose, as I will show. An actual eomelusion has heen drawn by one of the financial papers, which accepted this miserable hocument as hatinga rest ige of frombation. This statement it.self is on all fours with amd is just as harl as the statements of that infamous man living in Canala notorious as Farrer, the editor of the cilohe. That infamous man wrote lathruage of this kind :
"The imposit ion by the Enited States of a rommage tain on all Nova Scotia vessels. laden whole or in part, with fish, would speedily put aic cont to zeizares and indeed the whole controversy. Whatever conrse the Duited State mas see fit to adopt, it is plain that Sir John's distane:arance from the stage is to the the signal for : movement towards athexation.
The House will see that these hom. gentlemen think a gronl leal alike.--
"The enormons lebe of the Dominion (sin) per heat) the virtual bankrutey of all the provinces exeept Dntario" "-
I give the heal motes of the hom. gentleman's speech to-night in rearling this..-
-" the pressure of the American tarifi upon trale and imdustry, the incurable issue of race, and the action of the natural furese making for the consolidation of the lesece cumbry with the greater have already premared the minds of most intelligent Camadians for the desting that a waits them. and a leader will be forthoming when the hour arrives."
Now, then. 1 allute to the previons utterances of the hon. gentleman himself. He was onte aware that it was a dangerons thing to state eren all the wrorst facts in connection with the tinameial affairs of this eomintry on the Lomden market. In that year, as Finance Minister, Ale went to that market and jont a rosy hue on all the acts of his predecessors in oftice. He complimented them and the comntry on the sucecssful manner in which they had administerel the affiairs of thecountry and huilt the public works of Cimala. But later on, he assmmed his old role, the role he has attempted weakly to-night. and this was the style of the hom. gentleman on the self same subject after having pictured in Lomdon the prosperons condition of affairs. He stated to the elector's in this comntry:
"How, I say, did they prepare to meet these obligations. The thing is incredible but it is true. These old, these wise, these sugacions, experienced and provilent stateswise, these sagacions, experienced and provident statesmen actually prepared to meet this trementous charge on our resources in this fashion.'
Then, he goes on to say how they did it :
"Sir. I have asked myzelf more than once and I now publicly repeat the question: Was this done in shear brutal ignorance and recklessness, or was it done of malice prepense'? Did they design to scuttle the ship after they had plundered her, or was it only the last mad folly of the drunken crew before they ran upon the breakers?';
The hon. gentleman, on another:occasion, is reported to have said that he did not tell the whole case in London, aml he dil not use that statement there, leccause he was not going to cry stinking tish when selling tish on the market. But now the hon. gentleman, shom of responsibility for all time to come, as I helieve, in the comotry, having no fear of responsibility as to the future, rises and is willing not only to cry stinking fish in (anada. but in Lombon, so long as it will aceomplish some fell political purpose. Now. let us see whether this lamyage, absurel as it seems, haseless as we know it to he in cianna, hit the mark in Lomion. The Eeromomist, at paper of tirst-class finameial stame ing, sall through the hon. gentleman's argument at once. They hat studied his statements freguently and morlonity were as familiar with them as we are. So they passed by his vile attacks on his opponents, knowing that he was suffering the bitterness of defeat. and merely pointed out to him the alosurdity of the proposial he hat made for the relief of (ianalia. But another paper, not knowing the hon. gentleman ats well ats the Eabominist doses. the Fimencial strminaiod and letter, accepted the statements ats true, and eronclucled it wats its duty to alviste all who hed (ainalian sedurities to get rid of them as som ats they possibly could. That is the logical result, if result there eosulal be, of the letter to which I have alluled. and from which I have ynoterl. The Honse will allow me. I hope, to show, hecanse the subject is a serions one. how mufortmate it is that any jommal of stambing should, for a mament, be inluced to believe the statements in that letter. That paper satys:
"In short, between Torviem and the neighbouring developments in ringe, trusts, amb comers, Canada has either to sink or swin.;
*ir Richarid. Cartwright calls his opmonents plunderers, and therefore"- Litale knowing the hom. pentleman or his vocat hulary, on the case with which he could bing such statements ont.-- $-\cdots$ and therefore probibly they leserve the name."
And further on:

- Porr Ganda! Once so hopetal and enterprising: once so prond of its trade returns and the pererntages of increase in its population : but it is the way of the world.: And so on, and then the paper moralises, but, after quoting the enormons interests and secmities of Camana in Englame, after showing how healthy those stocks secmed to be and the splemid position they had on Change in Lomilon, this paper says:
". Now the rame is ended, and Canala has foumd it eavier to borrow anil spernd than to pinch ani pas. In the expressive words of Sir lichard Cartwright, the backbone of Canadia. namely, the agricultural clase, have been bled white: .

Later on again, we find :

" The condition of men stirs passion more than sentiment, and if the faces are as set forth hy Sir Richard Cartwright the sooner the hetter for all classes of Canadian securities to be realised. Thus Canada may be suid tw be played out. By the hands of the common enemy, debt, it goes under, it warning a mong ourselves to school boards, county councils, chancellors of the Exchequer, and nationalisers of trams and rails, gas and water, works, land and the instrumente of production generally."
I hope the hon. gentleman is gratified that I have been aljle to find a paper that accepted those statements and that, if they have any influence or effect at all in London, it will not be to appreciate or assist our securities of any kind in that market. The hon. gentleman in his choice language and with the pleasant epithets he can so easily throw across the Honse, alluden to the High Commissioner and his gang, ind in that choice production he alluled to his dead opponent as Sir John and his fellows. That is the style of the hon. member for Nouth Oxforl and the kind of language in which he indulges. If I were inclined to lee cruel, I might ask him for the biography of, not the gang, but of the coatljutors of the hon. gentleman. It is hardly a year ago when we were told that the party to which the hom. gentleman leelongs haasted of this " giang" amongst its leaders-I only use the expression to show how far the '" gnorgi- might le carried :Lamerier and Cartwright and Mills and Charlon and Davies aml Paterson amd Malock amil Mowat and Ross and Fraser and Mercier and Langelier amd Joly amb Suriver and Blair and Fielhing amd (iremway. These were the lealers and controllers of the Reform party and were so christened hy the lorminto a/obe. Which is supposed to lee the orgath of that party and I malerstamd is partly the property of the member for south (Oxford. What woulh he sity if I entered into the history of some of these names. I-will not do it. lecaluse we are all familiat. the electors are all faniliar, with the facts, they are fresh in their minels, amd it would be wrong for me to dwell umnecessarily on themit this stage. We are satistied on this side of the House with the: verifict the people have given on the chatges male hig one side and the other: As I have satil. the hom. gentleman does not spare his cnemies living or dead, hat neither wil he spare his friemis. surely the leader of the Opposition was entitled to some courtesy at his hame. It is true that the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. (harlton) made an uncomplimentary reference to the lealer of the Upprosition, for which I believe he hats apologised, ats he shouh have done, and that he also made some uncomplimentary alhsions to some of the other lealers on the Opposition lenches. int 0 -night the hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard (iartwright). in his anger, in his jealonsy and racre wer the satisfactory statement of the Minister of Finance, alluderl to that home gentlemans statement as tos the prosperity of the country ats fatuons and silly assertionson the part of the dinister of Finance. The Minister of Finance stated amd proved that Cinala was growing developing and progressing, and I ask hon. gentlemen whether the member for South Oxford did not derote: it great deal of his time in a vain effort to prove that Canalla was not growing, was mot developing and was not progressing. He tried to show that the worst fate that conld avertake a comatry was hanging over us. Jet. in boston, in December last, the lealer of the Opposition toll the gentlemen who wereassembled around the banfuet board, and told them truly, that Camala is $\because$ growing, developing and progressing.: That is the report of the hon. gentlenan's speech in the Toronto Gilobe. The statement was eorrect and creditable to Canada, and I wish 1 could enclorse the other statements made on that occasion, lat I regret that I cammot. The hon. gentleman havings alluded to the deplorable contition of this country remders it necessary for me not to weary the minds of hon. gentlemen with statistics, for the statistics or figures from the hlue-hooks given ly the Minister of Finance have not heen gainsail, but to give the House some other authorities of some other Liberal leaders on the subject to endorse the position of the Minister of Finance and the lemler of the Opposition, that Canada is growing, progressing and developing. I will call attention to the statement of an attomey-general, who is, in his political views, in accord with hon. gentemen opposite, as it appears in an English review. Referring to Canalda, he said:
"It has a population of at least $5.1000,000$ and is rapidy growing. It has harye cities and rising towns. The trade is expanding and its wealith aecumulating. It has two of the greatest railmay libes in the world. Canala cannot be charged at home or abroad with lack of national enterprise. Wealth is being rapidly ice cumulatell her the stealy promress of trade and industrics Thinkeare wing up wonderfully well at pros. smun up Canada is prisperous. contented and hanpy?"
The lealer of the liberal Goverminst in Sowa Sootia was attempting to olotain money for his province in London last vear. Fortunately, he was there before the letter of the member for sonth Oxiord satw the light of day, but. speaking in pul). lic, he is reported to have said anm he dind not deny the truth of it when it was hrought to his knowledge - that the comdition of things in Nowa Scorta wis satisfactory, that the combition of trade wats satisfactory. Bint we have the authority of far more responsible men. of far more notathe leaners of the Liberal party to the same effect. We kunw that the lealer of the Liberal fiovermment in Outario, wats stung to the heart by the statements of the hom. member for south (Oxford in the last tight, and in his letter to the pablic press, he provel to the people that cour prosition as an agricultural people, as a meelankal people, as a lathome ing people, was as satisfactory as the comblition of the people of that commtry to which the member for south Oxford deroted so much time to night, and hats devoted so mueh attention fur some vears past. I combl quote stitements of some of the present mempers from (natario where they righty lonested of the splentid progress of Cunadia in commerce and in every branch of industry. If hom. gentlemen talk in this way in bisstom. ame in our own cesuntry, what are we to think of this fearful array of tigures, this eight humlred millions of dollars taken out of the pookets of the people, to which the member for somth Oxforl has referred on the thoor of this Honse: How is it that he alone of all that party hats such an enormous fund of knowlealge lockeil up in his own mighty and gigantic brain? How is it that these facts have not reached the minds of these men with whom he is working? How is it that the leader of the Liberal party has not taken the slightest interest in them, ind evidently does mon agree with him on that sulject, or he could not, even on a festive oceasion, have made the statement that Canala was growing, developing and prospering : But to show the progress of this comatry further, I will ask the attention of the House to it comparative statenient in relation to those matters to which the hon. member for South Oxforl was miee in the haljit of alluding. He has directed our attention to the United States for no other purpose but to keep up is spirit of unrest among Ganalians, to induce Canadians still to believe that matters are not prosperous with our brethren across the line. I have a statement as to the deposits in the sarings banks and charterel banks in Canala and the United States for a certain number of years. First, in the Unitell States aceording to Mullhall :

An hon. gentheman has kindly furnished me with at comparitive stat ement of the pusition of our credit in the Eaglish market, ami he has given me the reasom in that for the letter to which I hise called attention: certainly the letter will no innmose the prition much. Fin instance, I time that in Lamdon on March 2.150 , the chsing price of our delentures wats tat : in 1s!!? on Narch 5 . the price had risentar tho. Hom. gentemen. in reference to this subjert, hate answered that that was due: to the comdition of the meney market more than " the emadition of this comitry. and there is something in that argmemt. of comse. But to test it the fillowing is intersting: - - When we take the position of the Australian coloniess we find that though the credit of those colnomes stond higher than that of Catanlat in lays gone by, under the Reform administration, the relative position has changed mader the present economical eomalitions of Canaina, and moler the administration of its atfairs lig this fosperment. For instance we find that in reference to the securities of New South

 Queenslaml. t:44: Sunth Anstralia, t!nd: while Canalia wass t!3.3. That was the relative crimlition of Canala with those colonies maler the Reform rule. In 1sty, hawever, the order as to credit on ith March was as follows:--Ganda, New south Wiales, Victoria, Queensland iunl South Australia, Camalat being at the top, atecording to the "pinion of the best linanciers of the worlh. Now, 1 come to that favourite topic of the hon. gentleman who has just adilressell the House, the topic that he has almost wom bare, the suliject of the exoins. On a previnus oeceasion I venturel to sity to the House that I had studied somewhat the career of the hon. gentleman as shown ly the parliamentary delates, and I timd that his first uiterances in Parliament indicated that his mind wats given up to this question of the exomeser sine Istion: ever since then he hats heen ennleavomring to terrify the people of the ecmutry ly dwelling on the suljeet and predicting that the exomlus would assume, and that it hat assumed, greater proportions that ever. Still we live, still we prosper, still we grow and develop. The hom. geatleman to-night stirted out, as he started out in the last campaign, on an aryament based on the aceuracy of the census of 1881 . The hon. gentleman could not twit the Minister of Finance or any others in references to the comparative comition of their comnties, unless he started upon the hypothesis that there was an accuate count of the inhalitants of Canada in 1882. But to show to the House the manner of man we have to deal with in the member for Sointh Oxforl, it is only necessary to refer to the Hansaril of 1882. He was face to face with the conlition of affairs at that time, and stated to the people of this eomutry group : Maine, New Hanpshire and Vermontat lange that it was not on the whole an increase of these are not. as it were, considerable states, but able which we need he ashamed. He approbached the comblition of atfiniss at that time in this fashion :
"I doubt that this is eventon farourable riew to take wh the easce, as there is too mueh reason tothink that when we mbe the eensus as onr suide we are resting on a very uncertain basis.
But now his whole policy on this trate question. ats he sats, anill as we have reasom to helieve from the lenget of time which he dwells on the suliject of the exmins, depums on the censms returns of Dise as compared will our present :ethon. He grots oll:
" Canadi, l : hink. of all rivilized comnimes. poseneses abone a census as to which only one certain part is known. allil that is "- Math. Mr. Speaker. What follows.
-"that it is uftery mareliable amm that it is mot an rummeration of the berole that it does nor give the numher of Canadians in fanada but the linalner that are in l'allatla!."

The home mamber hats put them all birck in the emsus af k si 1 in orvor to show the smali increate in comparision with the remsus of lsent. Vet he We:nt wh tw sity :
al far the morle in which that censens was taken was with a delibecrate fradulent intent. It ear it was taken for the purpuse of elidine the terms of the cimfederation Act, anil fodeprive the lrowince of gatario and the Proviace of Xora seot ia of a larue part of the representation wolich ihesare justly entifled. It is a very extroorclinary fact liat the Province of Quebece, a provinee which Was alleged th have been depopulated under my hon. friend, has increased under bhis census twiee an much as it had between 1 thl and 1851 , and the dist ribution at: pobulation involves other circamstances which give the census a suspicions chantacer.
"If that sugresion be unfounded. the hon. penteman has at all erents deliberately inved it by their barhatous: manner of tiaking ite ecusus, a system which I do pot beliere would le tole rated by any other comatry calling itself civilized." Cet thehon. gentlemanhasgone to the Lombonmarket on the hasis that this lma harous eensus, this wholly incorrect consus, thisframhent census, was rightanil conrect. hecanse from that ileduetion he conlin make the picture all the blacker for (iamala and all the Worse for his opponents. The hom. gentleman fomm to-night that some of the statements wonh not lear inrestigation, and he was compelled in the fare of the Minister of Finance to correct statenemes which he har evirlantly been making for same time as regarels the amilition ant prpulation of New Bromswiok. He hats tacken these statements back, and I only wish fie would ate !a a similat mamer in ragard to many statements in that docmment on which I have referred. lint he has referved to a group of states, and he selecten them in order to make the comparison all the worse for his comntry. 1 ask, Mr. Speaker. is it not signiticant in following the argument of the hon. gentleman on this sulbject to find that on all occiasions he has given the conntry and people of this comutry and this House the very worst prossible feature he can carve out of either the American or Canamian ceusas so far as illustrating the position of Conala. The hon. gentloman selects special states for the purpose of his comparison. Let me give one or two arguments which occur to me on this point. One has heen furnisherl to me hy the hon. member. for Cumberkand : but there is another one to which I desire to refer lefore taking up that one: Let me take a group of states, Iet me begin with this the state of ohio, to which the hon. gentleman alluled, and which is one of the most jimportant and popmons states in the Vinion. Taking these together we time their proulation was in the argegate almost the same as the population of (inatia in ISNI, or the heginning of the respective decanles : amb the increase in (:anadio, was greater, eren according to the census of $18!01$, than it was in those different states to which I have allmied. I take this, theefore, as a perfectly fair comparison, these states having the same propilation: and this ereditable fact which I have pointed out I have never hoard statel from the lips of onte of my oploments. Why shonhl we mot take that comforit from at comparisom with the other sirle: But if the hom. gentleman wishes at further compatisen. let me wive him the one mate hy the member for ('umberlimen, me male. I believe. With eomsimerable efferet in the late lye-dection. Taking the it. Lawrenc: and the comaties oneath side of the river.ane set in the: Linitel Sitates and another set in (hitarion. yon hat ve the bisis of a perfectly fatir comparisom. If it is: not fair, it is mafair to (amada for this reasom, that the comatios in the neighboringe states are nearer to the lave centres of population on this contincht, such. for instance, as New Vork. Let us make that comparison, ats having a direct hearing on the larger parte of the argminent which the hon. gentlemin has lorought tomight. its of ohl. in regame to the comition of atfairs in (inamia as :ontrasted with the conlition of atfiairs in the Vnited States. Taking the New lork comaties borderines on the st. Lawrence and the lakes, coming upwairls. we time the following p:pulation ....

There were increases in the city popnlation of Niagara and Erie. The net deerease is ! 0 ? 2 !! There is in the state of New York (iol anomies. ami there is a decrease in e3 of them. Lee us now look at the Lake Ontario group in (anamat That group shows an increase of 88,031 : hut deduct, as I have leilucted for Fiochester, sin, (Mn) for Toronto, aml this qives a net increase of $\mathbf{3 . 0 1 3 1}$ umler the present. tariff laws, constitutions and institutions, as compared with the neighhouring eomaties aceross the moriler, of ! , 24!). That is a satisfactory statement. It is not coily satisfactory, it is full of significance. It verities the utterances recorrlen by Mr. Mowat in Ontario, who, speaking of the people of the Unitel States, saill: "Wिe are not worse iffi than our neighbours." Let me take another group of states. We take Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont. Massachusetts, Rhole Island, Comnecticut, New Fork, New Jersey anil l'emsylvania. These nine states hal a population, in 1880 , of $14,507,405$, in 1800 of $17,4(1), 545$, or an increase of $2,894,138$. I delluct. the ulhan population, $6,2,54,0196$, from $8,976,426$, leaving an increase of $0,722,330$, or an increase in the rural popnlation of $1,1,808$. I will not go on, as I could do. to enlarge upon this point, but I call attention to the fact that the hon. gentleman, in oriler to make his contrast more facourable, has pieked ont certain of the mosst prosperons states of the Union, states that started in the rate with Camada in the possession of every adrantage, with their malway and canai systens developed when ours were only alonat to he umbertaken, in order to presem (Gandia at a disadrantage and remper the picture as mufaromahle as possible to this Dominion. I will detain the Honse for a few moments with a reference to Lowl Jombims report in 18:39. It shows that since that time we have reversed the erder of things as regaris many of the neighboring states. The late meminer for stanstead (Nr. (oolhy) showed the real prisition of the Eastern Townships as compareal with lermont. In these days, while all wats properity and hope om the other side of the line. ewergthing here was terrible, and even as had as the hom. sentleman now pretends the atfaits of Camada are- The report stys:
"On the American side all was activity ath bmote. The threst han been widety chared a exery year manerus setthements wre formed. and thansame of fams were creat did mit of the waste, the commers was intersected by roads : canals und raids were finishect. or in the course of formation! the watys of crommunication and transpur: were crowded with peophe and entiveneld by namerons carriages amd large seambuats. Bridges a arificial land-ing-plices. amil cmmmelious wharves were formed on the lake fromiakes as swom ats wemirel. Townships wer. growink apmace and the stability and masuificence of the ir buildinks might have dome croblit to mpulated centres ot the old wirlit. GIn the British side (fhat is the Canadian sithe) with the exception of:a few favoured spos where some unproweh to ankrican provinerity was aprarent, all wats waste alld desolate. There wats but one railread in all British America, and that one was only fifteen miles in lengh. The ancient city of Mcotreal cuall not bear comparismo with some of the mest recent Amerient cities. The difference was, howerit. monst manitest in the comery districts. Gn the canadian side was a widely seattered pupulation, poor :and apparently menterprising. thourh hards and adustrions. separaled from each other by tracts of intervening forest. withum towns or markets ;allinest withunt ronds, living in mean houses drawing litite more thana rude sulsistence from ill-entivated hand, and secmingly incapable of improwing their combition. In the eastern twouships of Luwer Canada, unon the liorder line. it was a common practice for setters when they wishad to meet, to e:ter the state of Vermomt, and make use of the ruats there for the purpuse of reaching their destination in the British provinue.

- Throughome the fronticr, the market value or land was much greater on the American than on the Camadian side. The average lifferente was notorionsly several humbred per eent', and in sume cases sumouted to orer me themsand per cent. The price of wild land in Yernoont and Sew Hamushire, close to the frontier, was five dollars per acre, anil in the British townships conly one dollar In Canaila a great deal of ham was totally mosaleable, "rean at such low prices while in the sutes property was continually changing hands. Not only was lamd alimust unsaleable. bit it was impusible to ubtain money on mortguge of land. because when a sale was forced there was nio certainty as to the value, sine at the time there might be a perfect glut of land in the market, :am no purchasers:'

Mr. LACRIER. That was the ery of the country.

Mr. TUPPER. If that was the cry of the country we have stopped that ery. We have reversed the whole state of affairs and it is to the Canalian side you must now look for the prosperity that was once hoasted in the States of New Hampshire and Vermont : states which the hon. gentleman considers have not to be weighed in the Dalance when comparing the relative adrantages of Canala with that of the United States. On this sulject much has heen said, and very little new was said to-might with all due deference to the hom. gentleman whin gave so much attention to it. I comsider that he hamalled that subjeet musi unfaily and that he has hamblefl it in a manner in. which it hats mot heen dealt with even in the Linited States. Take denemal Potter's reports on the census of that comerry. Ben where they hat so large a propulation, ho directs attention io thefact that population is not the main thing, hut that the chico thing is the comblition of the population. of the comutry and he refers to the suljeetes which have leen dealt with he the Minister af Finane the trade retmons, the inatfic revedits. the puldic works, and sis on, of the conntry. in arder to asertain whether we are propurens ow whether we are retrogralings bat under free trade: a policy which the hong sent lemam this:ks sw admiat. he, but which her fears to alvinate or anhopt in this eomutry, the same comition of athairs has takem: place as in Camala, vi\%.. the migation from the country to the towns and the ramal puphlation heceming urban. Wie fint, for instanes. in the Timen puts it :
"The decrease of pupmation in maral districs whish marks the census of ls:9 has heem mure or lese cinninnous daring the whe of the present eentury. It as a neeessity of the changes which have taken place in :he: compasition of the workink clasese of the cmuntry, amil is not without ite compupusations to the rural latsenrers themselves: a far more potent cause of the changes we are comsidering hat been the transition trom ayricultural to manuficturing and indust rind supremaes. This hate created new interest and new clasee if workers, athe the process has ahsombed canital as well as latomir from one class of the emmumity ame raustir real them to ofliers. Forreign competition :and the rise in the value of gold combined to irting aboui low prices. Tu these canses atd that of bad sensons, and we have the real "xplamation of the recent atricultural depression. But with new inljustments commeted, the last vestiges of the depressiun will sulpremaey with be of the greatest pain th ifricuiture.
I call the attemtion of the Homse to that statement for the retson that we hear wery dav that the caluse of this meset thel comblition of the rumal popmlation is the National Policy fostering manufacturing industries in this conntry ant taking these peopl: from the farms where they world do so mulh better. 「et wader is free trale policy. every child in this comutry knows, that free trade was primarily for the sitke of the manufaturers and classes. The result has been an attrate tion of the rural pumblation to the manfacturing centres. That is mot peouliar to this comutry, it is mot pecenkiar to the linited sitates. it is common to every cemmery which is able to hoast of manfactures. The Tiun s continnes:
"The attraction of higher wages in towns has, no donbt, led mally to migraie thither from the eommers. who were yut countrelled to do so in seareh of work: but the majurity of thise who have gone to the towns are of the hatter class. In weighing the culuses which are couspiring to reduce the rurat mapuation, however. we must not overlook the syread of education among the working classes of the country, which has led many of them to seek to better their fortunes cither by migration th the towns or by cmigration.
Now every person knows that in this comery ur great difficulty has loeen that we camot keep that Body of men, who are moving in every part of the world, within our own territories as easily ats could the Uiated States : simply because down to 1ssig I believe we had not the means of transporting them to our western territories; whereas, at that time all the western territories of the Enited States were gridironed with a splemlid railway system and haid companies at work competing for these emigrants and bringing them from all patrters of the globe. We are now starting more failly in the race: we are equipped and we are really. and it is in our great west we will see tor-lay per. haps the greatest confindence in that respect in regatd to the future of this comutry and in regard to the properets of future emighation. I am pleased to see that even the Liberal papers of Manitoba have taken but very little stock in the dismal tales and the dolefal acoomes of the comblition of the combtry given hy Refomers on the stmmp luring the last election, hut they recognize their relatively strons position amil the relatively weaker position of the Luited States how. The propects of oll western territories atre so seat and are so much greater than those of the meighburing territories to-day, that there is no doblit in the minds of those best able to julye, as to what the future is that lies before as. I can tell the hon. gentleman also when he talks alont our tariff !eing the canse of the combition of the agricultumal chass, that that is not in my opinion or in the opinion of any candid man outsibe (amadian political life, a fair statement. If he will go to free tranle England, he will tind this rery same probilem grappled with. It is only the other day that Mr. (haplin. a member of the British fiovernment. stated at the Agricultural Congress held at Ely, the ditticulties that have to lee met hy the agricultmal classes. Cufontmately these difficulties exist in the Ginited Ntates and in Canala, lint I helieve myself with the majority of my fellow citizens in this ermatry. that relatively the Canadian famers position ts the best of the three. Mr. (haplin in the month of Jomany last, mate this atmission as the problems facing the English fiosermment in lealing with the eomdition of the agrioultural elasises of Eagland:
" He recognized with pleasure that there were among them a lare proportion of genuine and umistatathle representatives of the elass earning their livelihood by actual haburon the land. (Hear. hear.) They lived in times when the agricultural interest of this country had been masing thrompheriode of severe depression, by which all its members, from landlorls and owners of the band and temant farmers and wecupiers to the chases which gained their livelibood by actual latour, had been sorely affected in a greater or less degree. There was no one comected with the land who had not felt the st min of that depresion, the consennences and the rravity of which could not be overestimated.
And yot weare toll dioy after day that the fall in the price of agrienltural limits in this comntry is due to misgovermment, in spite of the fact that in a country enjoying a free trate fiscal system we find that condition intemsition, and far more mo fawomable to the farmer than it is to the Ciambian famer. Mr. Chapling gets on :
"A mong all the conseruences which were due, or partly due, to the agriculturai depression, there was not one among them, in his opinion, of graver or more serious import to the agricultural interests of this country than the constant migration of the rural population from the country to the towns, which they witnessed so frequently at the present time. Alihough this was part!y due to the depression, there were many other causes which had been or were enducing to these results. There was the great development of the manufacturing industries which in recent years had taken place in this country. The increased demand for labour that they created ind the higher wages that labour necessarils communded, and the increased attraction presented by living in towns conduced to this migration. But the migration was not limited to this country alone. It mighi also be observed in sertain countries on the Continent, ,and notably it went on in the Enited States of Ameriea."

That is the statement of Mr. Chaplin, amd with the fact to which he alludes we are all of course very familiar. I refer to it, however, to show that the hon. femtemans argument on that heal was not candii, and was not fair to the condition of the farmers or the people of Cinama. Now, Mr. speaker, the hon. gentleman said thet popnation was the best test of prosperity in a comory like (amabla. On that point the hon. gentleman could he answered agran from his own speeches. Mem. hers of this Honse who follow his specelhes in the country, neer only refer to the time when he was Finame Minister. to get a that contrandiction of that principle. In the specelhes delivered boy that hon. gentleman ats Finance Minister in $1 s^{-7}$ and 15:7, he again tonted out inis hohby, the exombs, alloding to the migration of the people of Camala to the neighomang states. Bint he anked the people to be of grow cheer. becaluse the trale statistic:s showed that man for man one trale was impmoting ; and he emleavored to nse the argmant which the hon. Minister of Finame has heen ahle to nse with so much force umter the eircmastances this very day. So that on this patestion of the exombs. I think I have shown that the hon, member for sonth Oxford is not a safe guide. that is. if his stambing as Finance Minister sho: ${ }^{\text {a }}$ ingart responsilility to his ntterances. Now, the bon. gentlemans argment, to-night, on the question of trale generally was, 1 submit, an agmuent agamst the very hasis of Coufenleration, minimizing as it did the importance of interprovincial tralle. His argument revealed only too well the trade for which he would give up atmost everything. But I call the attention of the Homse to the fact that in 1sti., when a young man, and in 15.50 , when an ohler and more experienced man, that his voice was liften up in the old Legishature of Camala, and in this very Ifonse, to wan (anamlans against ab, sorption into the United States, and to allocate as cehemently and eamestly as he couhd the camse of interporincial trule and the camse of Camadian Confederation, in order to prevent that absurption taking place, which to-night heaparently wishes to see bronght ahont: and the Confederation which he now patacically denomuces he then regarderl as ate only means by which we combleseape from that absoiption or amexation. The hon. gentleman was admittedly embarrassed by the statement malle hy the hon. Dinister of Finanice as to the result of the negotiations at Washington. He conla not umberstamd, after Mr. Farrers visits to Washingtom, after Mr. Wiman's and Mr. iollwin s:athes visits, all ammexationists open and avowed, why he could not hate been in possession of this information as suon as the Minister of Finance: and, 1 take it, that is the reasim he doulits the accuracy of the version given from the Treasury lienches to-night. But it is not strange to see the hon. gentleman embarassen. We have seen him so often in that condition that it is a faniliar sight. But, Sir, is it not significant that although the hon. gentleman talked so much of our relations with the Cnited States and of continental free trade, reperating all the ohargaments, he omitted to tell this Honse or this country whether he was willing to accept Mr. Blaine's terms? They were not accepted by the Government of the clay; and they would not be acceptable to any wing of the Conservative party in Canala-that is well known. The hon. gentleman spoke alout almost everything comnected with the sulbject, but did not give his own opinion of the conditions laid down hy Mr. Blaine for the market upon which, according to the hon. gentleman, the whole prosperity of this comntry absolutely lepends. I would suggest to his colleaguesthat seeing that they have kept secret tom long what is their own mamer of working out this trade guestion, seeing that they have denied to the Canadian people any information as to the means whereby they could pat into effect a free trade policy- that this is the hour and the day when they should tell us whether they will take the responsilility of aying yes to the offer that hats lee refused by the (ianalian forermment. Sow, the hom. gentlemanis argument that the whole Mckinley tariff is on the shomblers of the cimadian farmers. that they pay all the duties imposed hy it. is. I say achisedly, the argment on which Mr. Mokinley relied for the passage of the agricultural features of his Biil in the House of Representatives. I heard Mr. Mekinley base the agricultural features of his tatifit on the statements made hy Mr. dahbrin sumith ami the hon. member for Sorth Norfolk (Mr. (harlom), quating the statements of thase genile. men. Then, gou have ohy to turn up the press reports of Mr: Mokinle $\because$ s ampatign against Mr. (:maphell for the sovernorship of ohio, to tind that his ammunition for that campaign and his defence of his tariff measure were based on the neterances of hom. sentemen opmosite, who told Mr. Mckinley that the Camadians pay the duties, and comtradicted Mr. Campbell when he assertel that the tariff was a burden on the peaple of the United states. Whether weare respmaible for it or not is a very small yuestion when these facts mect us in the face. Whaterer was in the minds of the framers of the Bill, the argments they usedto hring it into life and to keep it on the statute-book came from the mouthe of hom. sentemenopposite and were such as the hon. membeif forsouth ()xfordmate use of to-night. Then, the hon. gentleman, while objecting to sereral features of the tarifi, sail nothing of eowh, becanse he is apparently making love to the fatmer omls. He said that that duty atfiected the farmer only in a comparatively small degree, affecting other classes mach more. I would like, if the hom were not so late, to say much on the coal gnestion. I say that the examination of that feature of the tarifif will afford the hest possible vindication of the Sational Policy. Experience has told us, in regard to the price of heth anthracite amd hituminous coal, that the argument made by the hon. member for South Oxford is fallicious, that instead of these duties always falling upon the consmoner, the duty on anthracite coal was paid by the coal exporters from the Enited states and not by the Canadian preople, and the lest proof of that is the proof to which I referto-night. Taking the C/olve statement of marbet prices, the Canadian people have gaid more for their coal since the duty was taken off.

Mr. LAURIER. Put it on again.
Mr. TUPPER. The hon. gentleman is aware, from the statement of the Minister of Finance, that we are not so hard up as to require shat amount of revenue, but it is there ready any noment. Whenever we may require half a million dollars, ther, is the article from which we can obtam ôt witn the least burden to, the (imadian.perple. The reason of the increase is that when the cluty was on, all points in Ontario, were made competitive because there was a prospect of the hituminous conal of the Maritime Provinces going further west, hat when that duty was taken off, the Ontario district, then a separate district, went into what wats called the Buffalo district, and those districts ate parcelled out by the owners of anthracite coal, whe fix just such prices as they please. Before that, Ontario was neutral gromil on aceomint of the comal tariff. But I will now touch the ofleer subject of hitumin. ous coal. Sir Henry Tyler has made a statement that the Grand Trumb Railway paid s., (M),(KM) a year in coal duty, owing to the duty of sixty cents at tom, on the coal they consmmeal. I was annazel at that statement, which utterly contradicted all my awn lelicf on the subject, and I commanicated with the manage of the Grand Trank Railwas. Mr. Sareant, hat although months have dapsed. certainly weeks, I have not been ahle to. ., thain from Mr. Sitgednt any widence upm which such a statement could be made. In ls:n all the duty collected ons all the coal actually comsumed liy the dimat Trunk Railway. (:inablian laciti- Ralway, amb wer me clise honght int" this comatis, was only: ss(n),oks. Which shats that the statement if Sir Henry Tyler is nu apmble of beng powed. If it is. $I$ an utterly mable to mondertime upon what such a statement can le hased. I will not go fully into, that yuestiom. althemgh 1 amp pepared to do so, hut I wish twath!e to the chanse of tome regarding that luty. 1 can harilly make it wit. Tonnght it is mos sib bal a tax, apparently becanse it does not atfeet the firmer som melh ats other taxes. lout the lon member for somth oxforet, a few years age, in lssa, for instance, was of the opision that:
"The two most barbirpus taxes even in our present
arbmous tariff-I dubt if it is posible io find two mure barbarous tariff-I doubt if it is passible eot find two more conai ind thour. This tat on coal may he considered as the tax which of all others sets most at detiance erery somal prineiple of political ecomany and of empmon suse. Yon eim conceive ot no tax which is more imletensible, which is more absard, and which is werse in its mratical mperation than the same dats on coal.
The hom. gentleman hat changel his opinion alwut many things, and on the coal guestion 1 sincerely trust he has changed his opinion also. Whether he has or not, let me tell him that the comutry where the price of coal is increasing and where the combinations, so much denomecel under the Nitional Policy ly hon. gentlemen opmsite-- when comsidering the question of binding twine for instance-are thourshing and where coal rings now run the price up or down just as they please is England to-day as well its the United states. Unler the so-called free trade system. I am able to prove that the price of eoal is fixed. not aceording to the laws of supply and demand, but he the coal association. The price fixed in Englam by this combination, a gigantic affair, was six shillings in 1880, it was raisel to eleven shillings in 1890, and ten shillings in 1891, and I ask Sir Henry Tyler, in considering this subject, to be fair to Camada and to arlmit, as the facts will force him to admit, that while he is paying less for the coal consumed by the Grand Trunk to-day under the National Policy than he paid under a Reform Alministration, with no duty on coal, in Eugland the railway companiesare paying more. The price of coal, under the operations of the combine in the mother land. is to- liay leater to the railway companies thatn the price paid to-day in Montreal hes Sir Hemry Tyler for the diame Trunk Railway. And that is a comblition of things under whind the statement comes with good grace from the ex-Minister of Finance. when he states that he hats mot st math to grumble arer in the coal tan as it only atte.ets the famer in a companatively light dergee. Tor make atire that the Engrish prices were corret. (ertainly the ex-Minister of Finamee has mot whehsafed us at hint as 10 the pesition they are now to assume: The hon, gentleman saly we eometed a refusal at Washington. The hom. genteman can harlly have meant that. The hom. gentleman conlid not have gathered that from any statement mate ins the Minister of Finames. 'The hom. the Minister of Finance gave to the hom. gentleman a saceinet aneonnt of a business comversation between two hasiness men, and I lin not think there hats been a hint on the athonity of Mr. Blatine or of angone Who eonld spack with athority in the states, that the delegates from this dioveriment attempted to play with the question or to trite with it. From the outset hoth partics acted with the greatest cambonr, and with too mach cambour for the digestion of hon. gentlenen opposite. The hon. gentlenath says we wouhl prefer Mr. Farrer as a Celegate: 1 would like to know whether with a mask or without one. I was not supprised to learn that the hon. gentleman womld prefer Mr. Farrer as a delegate: If public rumour is correci, that gentleman has already acted as a delegate to Washington on more than one oecasion, mot as a clelegate for the Canadian fiovernment, hut as a alelegate against the Canalian (iovermment and against the interests of the Canailian people. At last, the hon. gentleman got his political fangs, so to spuak, on the Intercolonial Railwat. He left the camals and the great expenditure which has been male upon them in the past and the expenditure which it is intenten to make upon them in the future, and, again thinking of the "shrels and patches," and finding that their grool example has heren followed in Ontario, he Went down to the lower provinces and attackend the most important work in that part of the 1hominion. I have a speech moler my hame delivered hy the hom. gentleman when these deticits did not appear to appal him as they slo to-night. When that roan was of comparatively small extent, when it man only to hiviere lu lamp, and the hom. gentleman, ats Piname Minister. stated that the anticimated deticit was mot less than half a million of dollats. But at that time, when more statesmanlike views prevaled in that party, the hom. geuthemans ohl learler. Mr. Mackenzie, whose present illness I amsure we all greatly meplore, stated as brime Minister that he virowed this great pholic. work. this work se essential to interprovimedial male. this work which was a part of the contitions of comferleration, in a very patrintio sense. I do nom know how the hon. gentleman got the popular vote. becaluse in cominty after county, acoording to the latest returns, we have the popular member, aml I think the hon. gentlemanis statement in that regard is about as correct as his statement as to the population of this comontry as : whole. However, the hon. gentleman reached a climax at the enl. He reached one of the greatest tlights to which he ever has soitred in any tinancial statement, when he alleged that the manufacturers han cost Canada eight humideal millions of dollars in the last fourteen years. That is the hon. gentleman in his position as a thancial alviser. I lope some kind friem will take the trouble to send that statement to some English tinancial journal.

Mr. P'A'TERNON (Brant). He did not state thitt., Mr. TUPPER. I so umlerstood him : bit I have no desire to misrepresent the hon. gentleman.

Mr. Paternon (Brant). I dil not so understand it.

Mr. TUPPER. I hope my ears leceived me, but I was even realy to believe that from the hom. gentlearan.

Mr. MLILLS (Bothwell). Too realy.

Mr. TUPPER. The hon. gentleman is surely unkind to say that anyone is too ready to believe what the hon. member for South Oxforl states. In concinsion. I may say that in every country there are croakers and, mo matter what prosperous condition may have been reached, there are these wiseacres talking of deht, and distress, and misery, and burthens, and soon. No country ever grew to a nation without having scores upons scores of such men. bint no country ever cance to ruin that prerented those mournfal alvisers from taking their seats on the Treasury benches.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). At this late hour of the night, I shall not attempt to detain the House for any length of time, and 1 an sure the hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat will urat accuse me for want of courtesy if 1 do not waste valuahle time in replying to much of what he has stated. Some years ago, and down to recent fears, we were aconstomed in many constituencies in the west to see an old scrap-book lirought out on platforms, containing seraps of speeches reported to have been made by indivihats during the last fuarter of a century. It was known as "Charlie's scrap-hook." In listening to the hon. gentleman, I thought. perhaps Charlie's sctap-book had got lost and someone had found it and given it to the hon. grentleman. The present state and comdition of the country is certainly worthy of some consideration over and beyond the adoption of a tone of abuse amb of vilification as far as possibie towards an hon. member on this side of the Honse. It seems to me, when a financial statement is presenter, it is a time, as the Finance Minister would recognize, and one would think anyone would recognize in a reliberative assembly, to consider carefully the eondition of the country amd to consider any sugeestions which may te offered for the bettering of the condition of the country. That is the duty I suppose that devolves upon us here, and what effect it can hare to quote extracts which, taken ont of their connection, may not mean what the hon. gentleman intends them to mean, bring them into a discussion where they can hear no possible weight, I camnot see, and it can only weaken the position the hon. gentleman takes. The first criticism was that the hon. member for South Oxford had paid no attention to the financial part of the Finance Minister's speech. I think that is not correct. I think my hon. friend did deal with it, he dealt with it in a short way, and he could not help dealing with it in a short way because it was a brief statement of facts the greater part of which all the gentlemen who have studied the Public Accounts were perfectly conversant with. The Finance Minister stated what items had come short in the receipts and what had exceded on expenditure in the Public Accounts that we have. True the Finance Minister tabulated them in a nice, readable way, but they called for no comment. Over and beyoud that he gives us his estimates for the year 1891-92. He estimates that we will receive $\$ 36,500,000$, and if the expenditure is maintained for the next few months until the end of July, he thinks we will have a surplus of that we will have a stationary revenuenot hinting at any tariff changes at all-of waming that it would be well to alopt the policy of confining our expenciiture to ibout that amount. Now, withont enlearouring to disparage the statement at all I think he dealt exhanstively with all the Einance Ministersaidinreference to the finances of this country. He noticed this fact, that the Minister expects that without any changes in the tariff, leaving the same mathinery in operation, there will he a stagnation in this country so great that he will have no angmented revenne at all: he expects that with the same rate of taxation he will have an income for the year to come of $\$ 36$, . 500.000 . hat an increase at all.. 'I take it that if there was to be an increase. coen with the present rate of taxation, it would be due to the increasedprosperity of the comutry. The Minister. howerer, evidenty loes not low for that, and thes we will have to conthe our i:leats so far as expembliture is concerned, to $\mathbf{S 3 6}, \mathrm{non}, 00 \%$. My hon. friend next had recomese to his scrap. Wook, and from that he professed to read some statements that had been made by the member for sonth Oxford some lf years ago, in which he pointed out that the revenue had somewhat disilppointed him. It was quite proper for him tojpoint ont, it seems to me, in gencral keepine with his position of Finance Minister at that time amb as explanatory of it, that the luties were then levied wholly, or almost wholly, upen an ad raforem basis, and that the shrinkage in values in this country - not calused by this fact, not catused by any action of the (iovermment-hut the tarif being levied upon an ul relorem basis. these values had shrunken and the revenue had shrunken somewhit, and the hon. gentleman seems to think that is a matter of reproach to my hom. friend. Well, I cannot see that, nor can I see where injury was done to the country. He hoasts that ly the machinery and the skill that have been made use of by the Finance Minister in extracting money from the pockets of the people by putting on a specific combined with ad ralorem duties, they have, during a period of stagnation amd duluess of trade, nevertheless been able to wring their extra millions out of the pockets of the people. But what credit is that to a Govermment? If, under the operation of the tariff of the member for South Oxford two millions less went into the revenue than he anticipated, not knowing that the decline in value would take place, where was that two millions left? It was left in the pockets of the people. The boast of the hon. gentleman comes down to this, that they have succeeded in devising a scheme whereby, let times be hard, let values fall in consequence, they will wring out of the pockets of the people the millions they want to expend, whether the people are able to pay it or not. Sir, suppose a municipal council seeking re-election at the end of the year, come before the people and say: You ought to return us, the old council, because if you look at the matter, and we can prove it to yon, we absolutely doubled your taxation during our year of administration. Why, Sir, in what position would the reeve and tre council of any municipality be if they went to the people and urged as their clain for support that they had taken double the amount of money out of their pockets hy way of taxation than had heen taiden by the previous council: That is the argument and the position taken by the hon. gentleman opposite. He says: "We have devised a tariff, we have set in operation machinery by means of which, whether the country is poor or rich, whether values are high or low, whether you are able to pay it or not, you have got to give us the millions that we reguire to carry on the (iovermment at the extravagant rate of expenditure we have inalgorated and that we intend to maintain." He next found fault with the hon. member for South Oxford because he hat not made a phucky speceh. It seems to me he was hard to please, for he went on in the next breath to ploote some utterances, or alleged utterances, made by my hon. friend, 1 suppose, on ocasions when he considered that my hon. friend spoke pluckily, and containing a number of endearing epithets that he made use of towards his friends opposite. I suppose he was disappointed, because, having prepared all- these extracts and expecting that my hon. friend would use these expressions, when he found they were not used, it rather took away his thumder. Then he took the bold position that no one would state that a large number of people hail left the country, if I umierstomi him right, for I took the statement down, amd this in the presence of the census returns which have been yuoted, in presence of the facts known to himself, in presence of the fact that when they hring down the Redistribution Bill, they will be forced to recluce the number of representatives in his own province, because of the loss of population in that province. Why, sir, when you have examined statements. such as that, you are not prepared to attach as much importance as the Parliament of Canada would like to be able to attach to the utterance of one that is entrusted with a portfolio in its administration. He gave us several stories, we had heard them hefore. If I might say to him-I do not know how his stories took upon the platform, I do not know whether they conduced to his fame ans an orator-but if he woull permit me, somewhat his senior in public life, to say it, I would tell him that I do unt think they will conduce to his standing or reputation as a nember of the House of Commons. He was bold enough to say that my hon. friend did not understand the sugar question, that when he was in the office of Finance Minister he arranged the sugar question in such a way that it was not in the interest of the country. Sir, he arranged the sugar duties in such a way, at any rate, that the greater portion of the tax went into the treasury of the country. I think if the hon. gentlenan himself and the hon. Minister of Finance wholly understood the sugar question they would see that there is a source of revenue lying open to them right on that very question, without destroying their National Policy, if they will maintain it, and what is that: Well, I will tell them, and I charge the:n nothing for the information. The hon. gentleman evidently had tried to get some tariff hints from Mr. Blaine when in Washington. I will tell him that, assuming to-day that the importation of sugar, in round numbers, is about two hundred million pounds, if he puts if of a cent per pound duty on raw sugar under No. 14 Dutch standard he will geta revenue of $\$ 600,000$ that will go into the public treasury from that source. I will tell him furtber than when he his done that, he has left the refiners of sugar in this country precisely the same amount of protection that the refiner has in that comutry that he says is protected to death. I think the hon. member for South Oxford womlil understand that much about the sugar guestion, and evidently the hon. gentlemen opposite do not uailerstand even that simple proposition, or a worse supposition must be mine, that knowing it, they deliberately neglect the interest of Canada in that respect. Then we have an allusion to the coal duty, and he seemed somewhat nonplassed becanse the hon. member for south ()xford had not said something about coal, but not having mentionel he was fain to take holl of it bolily himself. because he had probably a lot of figures, he had probably got a lot of statistics in order to prove that when the duty was upon anthracite coal it was not the Canadian that paid the duty. but it was the Amerisan producer of the coal: and that if it was reimposed it would not come out of the pockets of our poople at all, and that was one of the fallacies entertained, according to him, by the member for south Oxford. When the learler of the Opposition asked why the leader of the Government did not reimpose it, the hon. gentleman said we did not need the money just now. That would be very kind and consid. erate if those to be bencfited under it were to be our people, but when the people of the United States were to receive the benefit according to him, they paying the, duty on it, we rather think he would consider the Govermment failed in their duty by not reimposing it. I do not propose to read extracts, but I have in my mind is speech delivered by an hon. gentleman who occupied a seat in this House, who was at one time Minister of Finance, and who is now our High Commissioner in London, in which, when introducing his iron duties, placing excessive burdens upon that article which is in such common use among the people, burdens that were grievous to be borne, anid, by way of comfort, that he at one fell swoop swept away half a million of taxation that was upon us by taking off the duty on coal. But he may not have been, as was alleged against the member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) a financier, he may not have understoud these matters and have been entirely mistaken. It was, at all events, the opinion he held at that time, if I am not mistaken, and if I am in error I shall le grlad to acknowledge it, as can be easily found by looking u; the Budget speegh lelivered when the iron dnties were imposed.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). It is not an hereditary opinion.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). No, it has not descended. The hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries addressed some other remarks to the House that I dill not take note of, because I did not think they came into the consideration of this question. for they have been spoken of so long and so often: I refer particularly to the grouping of certain portions of the neighbouring Republic in order toshow that their population had not increased as it should have done. I do not attach importance to this line of argument in (questions of this kind. It may be very well when there is time to discuss such issues and one may be able to score a point in that way. But the whole question must be looked at, a broad view of the whole question must be taken when you are devising means whereby the trade of a country may not only le maintained but enhanced. I ask hon. gentlemen op. posite when they take that narrow view, how is it possible for them to conceive that the policy of isolation and high taxation which they have inauguratel and have endeavoured to maintain can be a policy in the best interests of the people. If it is true that interprovincial trade has benefited the Dominion, of course we arrive at the result that if we cim secure free trade with $\mathbf{6 5 , ( 0 0 0 , 0 1 0}$ instead of half a million, vast benefits must be secured to our people. Hon. gentlemen opposite declare that Canada is prospering : they read extracts from Mr. Mowat and other gentlemen. Who says that Camala has not increased ! The fact stares us in the face that the census shows we have only half a million more population than we had ten years ago. That is better than if we had half a million less. Here is pronf that we have not alisolutely gone lackwards. What we, on this side of the House, hold is that a country like Canada, with its resources and people and nationality, should have increased in population, not half a million, but a million and a half. The question should be, not that the people of Canadia should be ahle to get bread and butter for a few years, that the mortgages should not eat them entirely out of house and home, and that we should be able to keep as many people herealuring the next ten years as there are now. What a low estimate this is to take of this country with its population and resources. In considering this question, we must consider it in the light of what progress ought to have leen made as compared with the progress which has been made. What is there that debars the progress of Canada? Has it not stores of wealth in the fisheries? They are an inexhaustible mine of wealth. Are there not mineral resources locked up in the earth? It is known that Canada is rich in mineral deposits. Is it because we have not agricultural lands? Look at the provinces, not only those by the sea and Quebec and Ontario, hut glance at the millions of acres of fertile land in Manitoba and the North-West awaiting settlement. Look at the wealth of the country locked up in the Rocky Mountains and Selkirks. Look at the wealth in the fisheries of the Pacific, away in the far west. What is the matter with the country? Nothing is the matter with Canada. There is no better country under the sun than Canada. If we have a rugged climate in portions of it, it tends to produce the best and hardiest class of men in muscle and brain. The fault is unt in the country. let the fact stares us in the face that, taking the figures of hon. gentlemen opposite, we are short of a population which ought to be in this country of over $1,000,010$ people at the lowest calculation. Why are they not here? I will not weary the House by going into figures at length, but I point out that we had a population of 4,324,811 ten years ago. Hon. gentlemen opposite will certainly not dispute that proposition.

Mr. Moneill. I thought you denied it on your side of the House.

Mr. Paterson (Brant). I did not deny itI hope the hon. nember as a loyal supporter of the Govermment which took these figures will not deny it. I think the hon. gentleman will not deny that the lowest natural increase in those ten years should be one-fifth added to the population. With the natural increase alone it is apparent that 386,010) people were lost to this country. But that is not all. If we are to take the figures of hou. gentlemen as given by themselves, we find there have been immigrant settlers, said to have come into this country, and to have settled in this country during the ten years from 1881 to 1890 . to the number of 886, 177. Putting the two together you have a right to expect, if the figures of gentlemen opposite are true, that when these people came to Canada and expressed their desire to settle in Canada with its vast resources, and climate right; if there had not been something wrong in its Government, and in its law, you have a right to assume that they would remain in this country which is efual to any other on the face of the globe. You have a right to assume that if everything was right at hone the flower of our population, our youth, instead of going to other countries would settle down in their own, where there are great possibilities for them, and a field for all the energy that they possess. Sir, if our own people had remained, and if the emigrants they professed to have brought here hal remained, there would have leen an increase of $1,251,139$ souls ; but the figures show that there is a bire increase of son, 000 , or $1,200,000$ souls less chan came to this country, anl than were in this country, if we take the figures of hon. gentlemen opposite, and who have left this country which is rich so far as its natural advantages and its material well-being are concerned. It is for hon. gentlemen opposite to say why they have left this country. An excuse was offered by the hon. gentleman who list spoke; he did not venture to say it himself but he professen to read, that the figures of 1881 were doubted as being absolutely accurate ly the hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Carturight). The Minister of Marine and Fisheries did not venture to say himself that the figures were not correct himself. Why did he read what another man stid? Why was he not manly enongh to say that the figures of 1881 were wrong?

Mr. TUPPER. Will the hon. gentleman allow me to say a word?

Mr. Paterson (Brant). Yes.

Mr. TUPPER. The hon. gentleman misunderstood my argument in that connection; I did not state my own opinion, nor was it necessary to do so. I was simply then endeavouring to show the House the animus that influenced the member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) in dilating upon the present terrible condition of the country, as he said; and to show that he was not dealing fair, as I thought, with the subject. I mentioned a fact that he had carefully concealed, and certainly did not bring to the attention of the House. That was, that while he now assumed in his calculation that the census of 1881 was absolutely correct, he almost called it a deliberate fraud in 1891, as having exaggerated the number of people there were in Canada. It was not necessary for me, for my purpose, to say that the census of 1881 was correct or incorrect.

Mr. Paterson (Brant). But it would be very pleasing to me now in my argument if the hon. gentleman would give us his own opinion?

Mr. TUPPER. The hon. gentleman knows what his leader says.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). But I would like to know what the would-be leader of some other hon. gentlemen had to say.

Mr. TUPPER. It is quite clear you are not satistied with the authority of the hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright).

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). Not at all, but I think there is the weakness in the hon. gentleman's argument, that he puts it on to the hon. member for South Oxforl. Perhaps the Minister of Marine and Fisheries might say that the figures as taken by the Government now, represent more people than there are at present in the country. They are taken on precisely the same basis as the last census, taken on the de jure and not the de facto system. But let me cial the attention of the hon. gentleman to this fact. (in back to the figures of the census of 1871 , twenty years ago, and you will find that there were $3,686,5 \%$ s souls in Canada then. surely there would be a simple two per cent per ammom of natural increase added in a population like Canala, and that would have given you an increase of $1,474,637$ souls, whereas your entire increase is but $1,136, \overline{7} 1$ or $33 \overline{3}, 886$ souls short of what you ought to have with a natural increase, to siay nothing of the 886,000 that you claim to have brought into the country by immigration during these ten years. I think I heard the Minister of Justice say that this exolus was during the Mackenzie Alministration. Let him not lay that Hattering unction to his soul, let him look up the figures of the exolus at that lateand compare them with the exodus proved hy the figures of the Government to have taker place during their reign, and I think he will never, in the future, say anything about the exodus unler any previous Arlministration. I ask in all seriousness, if instead of these charges which we have heard, these old utterances of sixteen and twenty years ago that have been given on the election platform, time after time, I ask if it would not have been suitable at this time that the hon. gentleman had recognized the fact that luring the past ten years it is a sad disappointment to the people of this comntry, that they are not able to tind $1,2(0), 000$ sonls, which, if the Govermment count is to be taken as correct, are not to be found within our own borders. We hail a right to expect that the Minister of Finance in dealing with the problem of the welfare of this country, its financial position and its material prosperity, should have made some allusion to that. that he should have endeavoured to ascertain what was the cause, to have pointed it out to the House and to have devised some remedy and marle some proposition by which this drainage of our population might have ceased. Sir, we listened in vain for it from the Finance Minister. He was followed by his lieutenant, but we listened in vain for it from him also. What did we hear from the Minister of Finance? We heard him relating that he had been on a mission to Washington to endeavour to effect a reciprocity treaty with the United States, either for the good of Canada, or for the ill of Canada. We will suppose as honest men that when he went there and mate the proposition that he believed it would be in the interests of Canada to have freer trade relations with that nation to the south of us. As honest men we are lound to suppose that that was the case. Then, I ask, how is it that when he - Mr. Paterson (Brant).
came back and stond in his place in this House, and told us as he did-his face exultant as he told us-that there was no possible hope of that which wothd be a benefit to this country being accomplished, his followers behind him cheered to the echo. I say that such a spectacle ne:er was witnessed in the Canadian Parliament as a Minister going to Washington, declaring that he was going there toeffect a reciprocity treaty and to bring about freer trade relations with the people to the south, which would be to our henefit, and on his return, exultant as he declared, that he not only could not get it, but that nolooly else could get it, and the wild cheers of more than one-half of the members of Parliament sitting hehind him responding to that. Sir, it seems to me it was not creditable to these gentlemen that they should have taken that position. If, on the other hand, I was to suppose that it was possible for sworn allvisers of Her Majesty to enact a farce, to play a deceit, to go to $W$ ashington to pretend to go there with a lesire to procure something, while their aim and object was to prevent it, I can understand why they should smile and why they should he applandeil by their supporters. Sir, the hon. gentleman has on more than one occasion-he did it to-day, though not in as plain words as usual-taken the ground that reciprocity would be of very little value to us. He has taken the ground that that country is not a natural market for the prorlucts of Canada. He has repeated that statement from the platform. He has belittled the benetits that conld be derived from free intercourse with the people to the south, and he and his party have joined together in denouncing a reciprocity treaty even in agricultural products as a bad thing for the farmers of Canada. That position was taken by him in Toronto, where he asserted that the Unitedstates was not our natural market, hut that our natural market was in England, and repeated by their organ, which, on the day just preceding one of the lye-elections, came out with the reasons why the Reform candirate should not he supported, one of them being: "Vote against So-and-so and the flooling of the Comadian market with cheap American prolucts." Now, Sir, that being the view of these hom. gentlemen, Iask what position were they in to go to Washington on behalf of Canala, honestly, sincerely and carnestly endeavouring to bring about a treaty that would be ruinous and disastrous to the agricultural interests of Canada? sir, one or other of these positions is occupied by hon. gentlemen opposite. Neither position is very honourable; I hesitate to make the choice for them, and will allow them to do that for themselves. Sir, I helieve that freer trade relations with the people to the sonth of us would be beneficial to the people of this country. I desire to see these relations brought about, if possible. I lo not believe in paying the price that hon. gentlemen opposite have declared we would have to pay in order to get reciprocity ; int, notwithstanding the statement of the Finance Minister, I am scarcely prepared to believe yet that some one else might not perhaps he able to give more hope that such a thing would be accomplished, than the Government were able to give this afternoon. We have to take the word of the hon. Minister of Finance for it. I can only imperfectly remember what he suicl. I would know it better if I had it before me-if we had it lefore us, as I think we should, some " memo." of what did transpire. The seal of secrecy was not on the hon. gentleman, or else he violated it in his verbal statement. The seal of secrecy was not there, and there should have been on the Table of the House some written communication which would enable the House to know just what did transpire in reference to this matter. But following as well as I could follow words spoken fluently and pleasantly, but hurriedly necessarily, as worls will drop from a speaker's lips, I was unable to see, from what he did say, that there was anythine like an earnest, honest attempt to sit down and discuss the possibilities of securing reciprocity. Why, Sir, from the statement of the hon. gentleman himself, it seemerl to me that he was suggesting to Mr. Blaine all the ditficulties he possibly could suggest. He seemed to say to him: "Why, my dear Mr. Blaine, you know I have got to raise a recenue : how do you think I shall raise my revenue:" And I can imagine Mr. Blaine looking at him quietly, thinking no doubt in his own mind: "Well, my dear friend, I should have thought you ought to have known what you were going to do abont your revenue lefore you ciame to talk to me." But Mr. Blaine seems to have been taken by surprise, and to have said to the Finance Minister: "Hare you no other way to raise a revenue besides putting duties on grools that come from the United States?" And that subject seems to have been dropped. Then, they talked about excise duty, and the hon. Minister seems to have said to Mr. Blane: "There is trouble there; if you have exeise duties. our excise duties will have to he the same as yours; and that subject seens to have terminated there. Then he said to Mr. Blaine,: "If we take down the harriers and make a reciprocity treaty with you, will you let us take down the barriers against all other countries in the world? " And Mr. Blaine said he seemed to think that lacked one of the principal elements of reciprocity. It seems to me that when the Finance Minister made that suggestion, this difficulty would occur to him, that he would be still shorter of revenue when he took down the barriers against all countries. Sir, 1 cannot understand that manner of negotiating. I cannot understand men having a love for their country, and professing their helief, that freer trade relations would be advantageous, going to Washington, apparently not seeking to obviate difficulties in the way, but presenting difficulties, and then hurrying back to deliver the message which the hon. gentleman delivered to-day, with exultant voice and amid the cheering of his supporters behind him. And these hon. gentlemen tell us that we are dumbfounded by his statement. What is there to cause consternattion in the Liberal ranks by such an announcement made by the hon. Minister of Finance, under the circumstances, detailed by himself? I have failed to be struck with the force of it in such a way as to be unable to gatiner my thoughts together and express my views in reference to this subject. But if hon. gentlemen opposite had made up their minds-and certainly they have made up their minds that as far as they are concerned no further attempt will be made to secure free trade relations with the people to the south of us-we were entitled, I think, in the presence of the fact that we are losing our population at the rate we are, in view of the fact that this is not the fault of the country, but is clue to some other reasons, to expect that a gentleman occupying the position of Minister of Finance would have been prepared to point ont some other direction in which in his opinion it would serve the interests of Canadia to move. Hut, Sir, we have listened in vain. He proposes nothing, except that his excessive taxation is to remain upon the people of this country; the exodus is to go on : the burden of the national debt increased by a hundred million by these gentlemen during these very ten years, is to continue. He proposes no relief, no extended trade in any direction. He coolly tells the farmers of Quebec and of Maritime Provinces:
"Cease to grow your hat, which is your protitable crop; raise thorough-bred horses for the Finglish market, and breed fine cattle." That is the way in which he talks to men whose capital is all invested at the present time in their farms, the relief is to come not through any effort of the (iovernment. They are to remain in office worse than Hies upon a wheel, and the farmers of Canadia are to get relief by working out their own salvation, by growing as much as they can upon their farms and sending it to whatever market will choose to take and pay for it. Sir, they tell us that we have the English market, and they rejoice in the fact that we are not tied to the American market, and they exclaim the American market is not our natural market, but the English market is. But we had the English market long ago, and we have it still on the same terms as the American and other nations have, sive in the scheduling of cattle. And if we had freer trade relations with the people to the south of us, secured on fair and honourable terms, we would have the English market then just as free and open as at present. The hon. gentleman rejoiced at being able to point to the fact that our exports to Great Britain had increased and those to the United States decreased. I am sorry to think that a gentleman occupying the position of Finance Minister should state calnly a proposition of that kind, should compare the free, open English market with the American market barred by a duty of 25 to 75 per cent; and should claim that because, forsooth, more of our products are going to the English free market on account of the barriers being raised higher and higher against us in the American market, the former isour natural market and the latter is not. Sir, I by no means undervalue the English market. On the contrary I say cultivate it in all legitimate ways we can, but if you want to make a fair comparison, you should consider what the Canadian. farmers would be able to do in the American market were it as free as the English market is now, and then determine. Take, for an illustration, the egg. I suppose if the United States were to impose a prohibitory duty upon eggs, more of our eggs would go to England than ever and less to the United States, and the hon. gentleman could then point to England, with equal logic, as our natural market for eggs. But would that demonstrate that if the duty were wiped out and the American market made free, our trade would not go there? Our trade returns tell us it would. But the extension of our trade has been crippled by the imposition of higher and higher duties, which prevent comneerce between the two countries. What we say is that if our neighbours will remove these barriers and make their market free, we will still have the

English market as we have it now, and the law of supply and demand would determine to what extent we could use it. The competition would bring higher prices. Would that hurt the country: I do not propose to detain the House at greater length. I have spoken longer than I intended, lout I enteavoured to pay the hon. gentleman who preceded me the courtesy of noticing all he said, and I think I hare alluded to all his principal statements. I have endeavoured to point out that in my juigment the Ministers have failen to show any way by which Canadian trade may le improreil. They have not suguested any remedy, but have simply given a statement of how our finances stand. They have spent a great portion of their time in endearouring to confute statements made by the hon. member for South Oxford in his letter, but have not endeavoured to answer his arguments, simply contenting themselves with a general denunciation of those opposed to them. Then they wounlup with the consoling thought that the Opmosition was van'fuished, that the Opposition hat lost their comrage and were no longer able to maintain their position. Those are things that seem to give joy and delight to hoin. gentlemen opposite. I have not noticed those things: I have not felt them myself. In any position I have taken with reference to this matter, I have emearoured honestly to carryout my convictions. Ibelieve to-day that if you could secure freer trade relations with the perple of the south on fair and honourable terms. Which the leader of the Opposition has told you are the only terms on which they will ever be accepted by him, it would be a loon to this country. I believe there is a vast majority of the people of Ontario, and all other parts of this Dominion who would rather have hearol the Finance Minister say that he thought there was an opportunity in the future of securing freer trade relations with the Americans, than to hear him with exultant voice declare that we need look for no relief in that direction but should be tied up in the future as we have been in the past. There are people who expected that the Minister would give some hope of being prepared to lift the burdens from the people, and I venture to say that on reading his speech they will rise with the feeling of utter disappointment. They will feel convincel that the best interests of the country are not being served by maintaining in power the present Alministration, whoseem to have given palpable evidence that they do not believe that which the majority of the people believe to be in their interest; and when the time comes-I make no prophecy-and the people will again be able to pronounce as to whether they approve of the methods of the Govermment or do not, I have every confidence in the result. In the meantime, what we believe to be right on this side, we will endeavour to advocate by argument and not by abuse, and when the time comes for a final contest again before the people, then, in spite of all the unfair methods which have been marle use of by this Government, in spite of their saying practically who shall he the electorate in each division, then printing the lists in their own Printing Bureau, where by accident or otherwise, so many mistakes necur, in spite of their appointing their own returning officers, and controlling all the machinery of elections, as it is not controlled by any other political party in any country, we will be able to go to the people and ask for their verdict on the arministration of affairs during the past thirteen years ly this (iovernment which has shown no capacity save in the increase of taxation, confilent that the time must come when no artifices or deceit can prevent the people from giving full expression to their convictions.

CONTROVERTED ELECTION- WELLANI).

Mr. TISNALE. I have a motion of privilege of an urgent character which I wish :o bring hefore the House, relating to a seat in this Honse and affecting the electors of an electoral livision-I refer to the Electoral District of the County of Welland. With the permission of the House, inefore entering into the question, I will call attention to such parts of our Dominion Controverted Election Act as, in my julgment, relate to the matters I propose to bring hefore the House ly this motirn. According to the $43 \mathrm{r} \boldsymbol{l}$ section of the Act, lealing with the judge's report :
"At the conclusion of the trial the judge shall determine whether the member whose election of return is complained of, or any and what other person was duly returned or elected, or whether the election was void, and other matters arising out of the petition and requiring his determination-and shall, except only in the case of appeal hereinafter mentioned, within four days after the expiration of eight days from the day on which he shall so have given his decision, certify such determination in writing to the Speaker, appending thereto a copy of the notes of the evidence; and the determination thus certified shall be final to all intents and purposes."
Section 44 provides that in addition to that certificate, the judge shall certify whether any corrupt practice has prevailed, giving the names of the persons who have heen proved guilty of corrupt practices, whether corrupt practices have extensively prevailed, and whether he is of the opinion that theenquiry into the circumstance of the election has been rendered incomplete by the action of any of the parties to the petition. Section $4 \overline{5}$ proviles that:
" The judge may at the same time make a special report to the Speaker as to any matters arising in the course of the trial an account of which ought, in his judgment, to be submitted to the House of Common." be submitted to the House of Commons."
Section 46 enacts that :
" The Speaker shall, at the earliest practicable moment after he receives the certificate and report or reports, if any, of the court or judge, give the necessary directions and adopt all the proceedings necessary for confirming or altering the return, or, except as hereinafter mentioned. for the issuing of a writ for a new election, for which furpose the Speaker may address his warrant, under his hand and seal, to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery or for otherwise carrying the, determination into exccution, as circumstances require."
Section 47 provides that the judge may make a special report to the Speaker. Section 48 enacts that:
" When the judge, in his report on the trial of an election petition under this Act, states that corrupt practices have, or that there is reason to beliere that corrupt practices have extensively prerailed at the election to which the petition relates, or that he is of opinion that the enquiry into the circumatances of the election has been rendered incomplete by the action of any of the parties to the petition, and that further enquiry as to whether corrupt practices have extensively prevaled is desirable, no new writ shall isguc for a new election in such case except by order of the House of Commons."
Then, as to appeals, section 50 proviles :
"An appeal shall lie to the Supreme Court of Canada under this Act by any parfy to an election petition, who is dissatisfied with the decision of the court or a judge:
" From the judgment or decision on any question of law or of fact by the judge who bas tried such petition. Section il, sub-section 3, provides:
" The party so appealing shall, within three days after the said appeal has been so set down as a foresaid, or within such further time as the court or judge by whom such decision appealed from was given or by whom the petition was tried allows, give to the other parties to the said petition affected by such appeal, or the respectire attorneys, soliciturs or agents by whom such parties were presented on the hearing of such preliminary objections or at the trial of the yetition, as the case may be, notice in writing of such appeal having been so set down for hearing as aforesaid, and may in such notice, if he so desires. limit the subject of the said appeal to any special and defined question or questions."
Those provisions, so far as I have been able to umderstand the Act, contained the law which would be applicable to the case to which I propose to call the attention of the House. Now, the facts as shown by the records placed upon the Tahle of the House yesterday are that an election petition was filed against the return of the menler for the County of Welland. The petition was the ordinary petition and containerl two divisions. One asked that the election be aroided by corrupt practices by agents, and the other charged personal corruption against the member. The trial came on before Mr. Justice Rose and Mr. Justice MacMahon on the 10th December, 1891. The court as usual took up first the part of the case relating to corrupt practices by agents. On the second day, three charges were lrought to a conclusion ; the julges retired, and upon their return said that upon one of these charges they aroided the election for corrupt practices by an agent. Immediately Mr. Cassels, who represented the respondent, arose in court and said :
"Mr. Cassels.-I may say that I discussed the matter with Mr. German while your Lordship had retired, and we are perfectly satisfied with the correctness of your judgment, and there is no intention to appeal.
"Mr. Blackstock.-There is no reason to deal with any further agency charges, and I will confine myself now to personal charges.'

Mr. Justice Rose remarked:-

" With reference to the two charges that are before us, judgment is not asked in respect of those?
Mr. Blackstock.-No. In view of the announcement, of my learned friend, I do not ask for judgment on that.', And thereafter, no further evidence was offered on that branch of the case, but the investigation went on in regard to the personal charges, which culninated in a judgment declaring the respondent guilty of personal corruption. On the 29 th December, the court delivered judgment, and the record discloses that they sent the report to the Speaker of the House, and also to the Registrar of the Supreme Court, which report I will read:

" To the Honurrable

The Speaker of the House of Commons
" of the Dominion of Canada:
"We, the Honourable John Edward Rose and the Honourable Hugh MacMahon, two of the Justices of the Common Pleas Dirision of the High Court of Justice. do hereby certify that we held a court at the town of Welland, on the tenth. elecenth and twelfth clays of December. 1891, for the trial of the petition between the aboye parties respecting the above election, at which the said William Manly German had been returned asduly elected. upou hearing the evilente adduced and what was alleged and admitted by counsel for the parties respectively, we found and determined:
. 1. That the said William Manly German was not duly elected or returned, and that the said election was void by reason of corrunt practices, that is to say bribery, which has been committed by an agent of the sad William Manly German, and also the said William Manly German.
" 2. That a corrupt practice has been proved to have been committed by John F. (irnss, financial agent of the respondent, to wit, paying for horses and carriage to convey voters to and from the polls, but it was not proved that such corrupt practice was committed by or with the knowledge or consent of the respondent, and a further corrupt practice, to wit, bribery, was proved to have been committed by the respondent, but no corrupt practice was proved to have been committed by John Ferguson the candidate other than the said responident at the said election.
3. That the following persons were proved at the trial of the said petition to have been guilty of corrupt practices, that is to say, the said John F. Gross and the said respondent.
4. That owing to the fact that judgnent was asked for on only two of the charges other than the personal charges, we have no evidence before us to enable us to say whether or not corrupt practices extensively prevailed at the election to which the said petition relates.
${ }^{-} 5$. For the reason set out in the preceding paragraph we have no evidence before us to say whether or not an enquiry as to whethercorrupt practices extensively prevailed at the said election is desirable, but having regard to the practice governing the enquiry into corrupt practices in election trials we cannot say that the enquiry into the circumstances of the electionhas been rendered incomplete by the actions of any of the parties to the petition.
" 6 . We herewith append and forward a copy of the notes of evidence taken at the said trial.
"Dated this twenty-ninth day of December, A.D. 1891.
(Sgd.) "JOHN E ROSE,
" H. MacMAHON, J."
Appended to the report to the Speaker was a letter explaining that the report was sent to him as well as to the registrar of the Supreme Court on account of some uncertainty which arose in regard to section 14 of the Act amemeling the Controverted Elections Act, and of that letter I propose to read the last clause :
"I beg to advise you that an rppeal has been lodged in both of these cases. In the Welland case the judges wish me to inform you that, at the elose of the judgment unseating the respondent for a corrupt act of his agent, the respondent through his counsel expressed to the court his entire satisfaction with the judgnent and his intention of not appealing therefrom. We mention this as we have not been apprised of the fact whether the appeal is generally on the whole case, or merely on the ground of disqualification of the respondent."
That is aigned by the registrar. The next proceeding in the case is the notice of appeal, which I will also read :

[^16]"And further take notice that the record of the case upon such appeal has been transmitted to the Registrar of the said Supreme Court and set down for hearing by the said court, pursuant to the statute, at the sitting of the said court to be holden at Ottawa on Tuesiay, the 16th day of February, 1892.

- And further take notice that the above named William Manly German, the party so appealing, hereby, pursuant to the statate in that behalt. limits the subject of the said appeal to so much of the judgment aforesaid as qrants that portion of the prayer of the petition which relates to the gersonal charges against the present appellant, and finds and declares the present appellant (the respondent in the court below) guilty of personal corrupt practice at the suid election. and the present appellant will, upon the hearing of the said appeal, contend that the said judement, so far as it declares the present appellant guilty of any corrupt practice persumally; should be reversed and set aside.
The factums and the case presented to the supreme Court also relate entirely to the personal charges and to nothing more. It would seem then from the recorls that, applying to the law to which I briefly referred, there is no question that the Speaker han no anthority, under the circumstances, to issue a writ or take any action in connection with the vatancy that the records show wats created. It would also appear beyond peralventure that by the proceerlings in the court the seat is avoiderl, not only by the deliberate action and julgment of the court hut hy the assent of the respondent : and not only wid he assent to aroidance of the seat, but he undertook through his commel in court that he would not appeal against the decision, and in consideration of that statement the counsel for the petitioner l,rought no further evidence forward upon that branch of the enguiry nor did the julges give judgment on the other two cases which were held to have heen proven. Following up that, the appeal, which, according to one of the clauses of the statute that I rean, cath be limited, was expressly limited to the corrupt practice. From these facts which are now before the House, although technically they were not before it until these papers were brought down, it is perfectly clear that that seat is vacant and is unrepresented, and has been since December last. We tind further that notwithstanding that juilyment, voiding the election and declaring that Mr. derman was never elected. notwithstamling that he concurred in it, uotwithstanding the fact that the appeal on his lehalf was limited entirely to the corrupt practice, we find that a few days ago that gentleman took his scat in this House. I, therefore, move:
That at an election for a member of the House of Commons for the Electoral District of the County of Welland. held on the 26 th day of February and the 5 th day of March, 1891, William Manly German, of the town of Welland, in the County of Welland, Barrister-at-law, was returned as duly elected:
That one Jesse Calhoun Rothery an elector of the said electoral district, under the provisions of the Dominion Controverted Elections Act, duly filed a petition praying in effect, that the election of the said William Manly German should be declared void, and that be himself should be diequalified by reason of corrupt practices committed in connection with the said election, both by the said William Manly German, personally, and by agents on his behalf:
That the said election petition was tried on the 10 th, 11th and 12th days of December, 1891, before the Honourable John Edward Rose and the Honourable Hugh MacMahon, two of the Justices of the Common Pleas Division of the High Court of Jastice for the Province of Ontario, at the conclusion of which trial the said learned justices found and adjudged that the said William Manly German had not been duly elected or returned, and that the said election was void by reason of a corrupt practice committed both by the agent of the said William Manly German and by the said William Manly Germas himself, and the learned judges certified the same accordingly:
That. during the trial of the said petition, and upon the decision of the said learned justices, finding that the said election was void by reason of a corrupt practice committed by anagent of the satid William Manly German. Counsel on behalf of the said William Manly German undertook and agreed that there should be no appeal from such decision, in consequence of which agreement, other charges of corrupt practices, alleged to have been committed by ygents of the said William Manly Cerman, were abandoned:
That, in proceedings by way of appeal from the said judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada haserted by the said William Manly German, the said William Manly Gierman limited the subject of appeal to so much of the judgment of the said learned justices as granted that portion of the prayer of the retition which related to personal charges against him. and found and dechared him guilty of a personal corrupt practice:
That there has been and is now no appeal pending from that portion of the said judgnemt which declared that the clection was roid, and the said Electoral District of the County of Welland is, therefore, now unrepresented in Parliament (all of which facts appear from the pabers and proceedings laid upon the Tathe of the House. pursuant to a resolution of this House pasied on the lith day of March. instant):
That, in riew of the foregoing facts, the House declares that the said seat is yurant: and it is hereby ordered. that the Speaker do aldress his warrant under his hand and seal to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, authorizing the issue of a writ for at new election for the said Electoral Dist rict of the Comnty of Welland.

Mr. LAURIFR. I should like to ask the hom. member for South Norfolk (Mr. Tisidale) if the hom. meabler for Wellaml has had motice of this motion?

Mr. TislnALE. He has hati wo further notice, to my knowledge, than the proceedings in the Honse. I moved for the papers on the $12 t h$, amb they were laid on the Table of the Honse yesterday. beyond that I have given mo other motice of any kiml to anylunly.

Mr. LAUPIER This motion assumes that the seat for Welland is vacant. I ann sure that, so far as I am concerned, it is a question on which I am not prepared at present to offer any opinion. The hon. member for Nouth Norfolk has hat the alvamtage of looking over the recorl, and he has come to a certain conclusion. while we, who have not hat the same privilege, camot be expected to offer any opinion. The only observation I intend to make at-the present moment is, that at all events the hon. Gentleman who claims to represent the Comnty of Welland should have notice and have an opportunity to le heard hefore further proceedings are taken. This is the course usually followed in such cases.

Nir JOHN THOMPSON. I have always asked, when such motions were mate ats a matter of privilege, that they should stand over at least 24 hours in order that members of the House, as well as the member particularly concernesi, should understand the bearing of the motion. I presume my hon. friend will have no objection to that conrse being taken.

Mr. TISDALE. Nome whatever.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. My hon. frieme will notify the House now that he will go on with it to-morrow.

Mr. LAURIER. Apart from that. I assume that, as a matter of justice, the member whose seat is impugned should have notice of this proceeding, and have an opportunity to be heard. There may be two sides to this question. The hon. gentleman has come to the certain conclusion from the facts, but another conclusion may be reached. It-is the invariable rule on such occasions to give this notice.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The better course would be to let the motion stand until to-morrow. The leader of the Opposition can intimate tomorrow what is his view as to further extensionas to how long he desires. I move that the clebate be adjourned.

Motion agreed to, and debate adjoumed.

REPORTT.

Report of the Minister of Justice as to Penitentiaries in Canada--(Sir John Thompson.)

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

Mr. STEVENSON. Before the Orlers of the Day are called, I desire to ask the Government if they will canse the report of the Commission on the Trent Valley Canal to be laid on the Table and printed.

Mr. HAGGART. As I understand there is a deputation coming here to-morrow or the following day on this subject, I will see that the report is laid on the Table immediately.

DOMINION ILLUSTRATED.

Mr. SOMERVILLE asked whether the Government purchased, during the current fiscal year, copies of the Dominion Illastrated recently published in Montreal? If so, what number of copies were purchased, for what purpose were they purchased, from whom were they purchased, and what sum was, or is to be paid, for them?

Mr. CARLING. Two thousand bound volumes of the Canada Illustrated, each volume containing 424 illustrated pages, with a specially printed introduction, descriptive of Canada, were purchased from the Sabiston Lithographing and Publishing Company, of Montreal, at the price of $$ 1$ per volume, for immigration purposes, and distributing in news rooms, institutes and other public places in the United Kingdom.

EXPERIMENTAL FARM REPORTS.

Mr. DEVLIN asked, Whether it is the intention of the Government to have the French reports of the Experimental Farm for the present year ready for distribution at as early a date as the English reports? What was the number of French reports ordered and issued ; also the number of English reports? When were the English reports of the past year ready for issue; also, when were the French reports for the same year published and issued?

Mr. CARLING. The practice has been to translate the English edition into French so soon as it has been put into type and corrected. Fifteen thousund English and 3,000 French were ordered. The proportion being based on the actual number demanded in the two languages to supply the copies to those who had applied for it. The larger edition of 250,000 copies ordered by the House has been printed in the two languages in the propor tions ordered by the House. The date of first issue of English reports was 14th April, and of the French reports, 26th November. This difference in date of issue was owing to the protracted session of the House and the pressure of other work on the translators.

BREAKWATER AT SANDFORD, N.S.

Mr. FLINT asked, Whether the Government has taken steps to secure an investigation as to the condition of the breakwater at Sandford, in the County of Yarmouth, N.S.? If so, has any report as to the state of said breakwater been received by the Government?

Mr. OUIMET. An examination was made, and a report from the engineer received in 1890 . Another examination was subsequently made, and we are expecting to receive the report very shortly.

RAILWAY BRIDGE AT BEAR RIVER.

Mr. BOWERS asked, Whether it is the intention of the Government to fulfil the promise made by the hon. acting Minister of Railways and Canals on 2nd July, 1891, that if piers were necessary to facilitate the passage of ressels through the draw of the railway bridge at Bear River, that the same would be built? Have the Government asked for a report from their engineer on the subject?
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. That is a question we must decline to answer. It assumes certain facts. It assumes that a promise was made by a Minister to build a public work, and we dispute that such was the case.

RAQUETTE PIER, DIGBY.

Mr. BOWERS asked, Whether the Government intend to extend the time for the completion of the Raquette Pier, Digby, or will the bonds of the contractor be forfeited for non-fultilment of contract? Is the overseer, Mr. John Welch,. still receiving two dollars and fifty cents per day from the Covernment? If so, what duties does he perform?

Mr. OUIMET. The time for the completion of the pier at Raquette, Digby, does not expire until 18th May next. Mr. Welch was paid up to 4th November, 1891, as inspector. Since that date he was employed ten days in January, 1892, in examining timber, for which he has been paid. Nothing has been paid Mr. Welch since.

HATCHERIES IN ST. MARY'S BAY.

Mr. BOWERS asked, Is it the intention of the Goverument to place hatcheries in St. Mary's Bay, Digby County, at an early period, so that the waters of that bay and of the Bay of Fundy may be restocked?

Mr. TUPPER. It is not the intentiol of the Government.

CHURCH POINT WHARF.

Mr. BOWERS asked, The amount of money expended in repairing the wharf at Church Point, Digby County, in 1891 and 1892. Has the engineer made any report as to the necessity of any additional work required at said place? Has the Government received any complaints on account of gravel washing around said wharf and closing the channel? If so, will a small sum be placed in the Supplementary Estimates to remedy the same?
Mr. OUIMETS. The sum expended in 1890-91 was $$ 100.81$; 1891-92, up to 29th February last, $453.29. The engineer has not reported that any additional work is required. The attention of the department has been called to the fact that gravel was working around the wharf, and the foreman has been instructed by the resident engineer to remove it. The question is under consideration as to whether any amount will be placed in the Supplementary Estimates.

WESTPORT HARBOUR-CAN BUOYS.

Mr. BOWERS asked, The number of can buoys in or near the harbour of Westport, Digby? The amount paid for painting, keeping in position and replacing, par year? The time such contract expires? Is it the intention of the Government, at expiration of contract, to again call for tenders for a similar object?

Mr. TUPPER. There are three can buoys, and $135 a year is paid for painting, keeping them in position and replacing them. The contract expires on the 1st of April, 1894. The time for a decision as to the renewing of the contract or calling for tenders has not yet arrived.

I. C. R.-PASSENGER CARS.

Mr. Borden (for Mr. Fraser) asked, 1. What amount is paid per day to the Canadian lacific Railway Company for each passenger car running betweeu St. John, N.B., and Halifax, N.S. and how many cars have been paid for during the past year? 2. Are such passenger cars hired because the Intercolonial Railway have not sutticient cars to run between said points? 2. Have the Government given their consent to a large number of the station masters on the Intercolonial to act as agents for the Canadian Pacific Railway Company? If so, are such agents paid for their services by the said company?

Mr. HAGGART. 1. For each passenger sleeping car, $$ 4.9 \mathrm{a}$ each way; for each passenger firstclass car, $$ 4.95$ each way; for each passenger second class car, $$ 3.30$ each way. Number of passenger cars paid for year ended the 29th February, 1892: Sleepers 325 , tirst-class 320 , second-class 363 each way. 2. No ; they are allowed to run through between Montreal and Halifax so as to save passengers trouble of changing cars at St. John. 3. The station musters ulong the line of the Intercolonial Railway east of St. John are required to be neutral between the Intercolonial Railway and Canadian Pacific Railway, selling tickets or billing freight in whichever direction tickets or billing freight in whichever direction the passenger or consignee desire. They are paid by the Intercolonial Railway.

AMERICAN CATTLEIN BOND.

Mr. SPROULE asked, Whether it is the intention of the Government, as intimated in a despatch from Ottawa to the Winnipeg Free Prexs of 17th inst., to allow the establishment of an abattoir in Montreal, for the purpose of importing in bond and slaughtering American cattle, to be exported as dead meat?

Mr. BOWELL, I have not seen the despatch referred to, and consequently cannot give an opinion as to its merits ; but I can inform the hon. questioner that no such permission as that indicated in the question has been given by the (iovernment.
ST. CESAIRE POSTMASTER--MONEY DE. POSITS.

Mr. BRODFUR (Translation) moved for :

Copies of correspondence exchanged between the Government and the Postmaster of St. Césaire, County of Rouville, or any other person, with reference to deposits of money to be made by the said postmaster.
He said: In presenting this motion, Mr. Speaker, I wish to offer a few remarks to draw the attention of the Govermment to the false position which is occupied by the parish mentioned in the motion. Last year we had in the parish of St. Césaire a bank in which the postmaster would make his deposits, either for the payment of money orders or the management of the office. There has been since a change in the administration of the bank, or rather that bank has taken its offices to Montreal, and another bauk has established a branch in the parish. Now, it seems that the postmaster could not get from the Government permission to deposit in this new bank the money needed for its office. The consequence is that when money orders are sent from Montreal to be paid at St. Césaire, the persons to whom these orders are payable, instead of leing able to draw their money immediately at the bank doing business now in the parish, are obliged to go to Montreal to get their money. Evidently this is a false position, and I believe that if the attention of the Government is called to the inconveniences resulting from this state of things, the Post Office Department will soon remedy it, and give an order to the St. Césaire postmaster to make his deposits in the local branch of the bank of St . Hyacinthe, instead of making them in Montreal. It would be much more simple, it seems. Besides, the amount of business is not very large at this post office, and I believe that if it is shown that the inconveniences that I have referred to are detrimental to the people, it behooves the Government to take the means to remove them. I have mentioned one, and I am confident that the attention of the Government having been drawn to the matter, the Post Office Department will instruct the St. Césaire postmaster to make his deposits in the Banque de St. Hyacinthe doing business in that parish, so that the people who may have money orders to cash will not be obliged to go to Montreal to have them paid.

Sir ADOLPHE CARON. (Translation.) I see no objection to the bringing down of the correspondence asked for by the hon. member. The hon. member has shown the facts such as they are. But I am not ready to promise the hon. mover of the resolution that the change he asks for shall be made. Long before I took control of the Post Office Department, a branch of the Banque VilleMarie was doing business at St. Césaire. This branch was later replaced by a branch of the Banque de St. Hyacinthe. When the branch of the Ville-Marie existed at St. Césaire, the deposits of the Post Office Department were made in that bank, but as the Govermment had no account with the Banque de St. Hyacinthe, after the removal of the Ville-Marie branch, the department thought proper to make its deposits with its usual

Mr. Bowers.

Dankers, the Bank of Montreal. I have not examined the question so as to know whether it would suit the department to make the desired change. However, I will say to the hon. memher that I have no objection to bring down all correspondence, and tofurther enquire into the question.
Mr. LAURIER. (Trauslation.) The hon. Minister will allow me to point out to him, that the answer which he has just given is not satisfactory. My hon. friend for Rouville (Mr. Broleur), in making this motion, only wishes to draw the attention of the department to the serious grievances now existing in the parish of st. Césaire, since, as he said, the money orders for that parish cannot be cashed there, but have to le sent to Montreal, as the (iovermment has mo hank at St. (exsaire where it makes deposits. Now, there is at St. Cesaire a brunch of the St. Hyacinthe bank: can there be any reason why the deposits camot le made in that bank? The fovernment is not obliged to do all its business with the Pangue de st. Hyacinthe 1 know : but for the St. Cesaire post otfice business can there be any objection to the deposits heing made in that bank? My hon. friend should take a pride in inaugurating a new régime in the Post Otfice Department, ly giving satisfaction on this print.
Motion agreed to.

DLSMISSAL OF MICHAEL, QUINS.

Mr. GUAY moved for:

Copies of all evidence taken at an enquiry beldat Lesis, in the month of Februars. 18:2, respecting the discharge of Michacl Quimn, a permanent employé in the shops of the Intercolonial Railway at Hadlow. Levis; and of all correspondence bet ween Alfred Drake. Chief Mechauical Engineer for the suid railway at Hadlow, and the railway officials at Moncton, in relation to the dismissal of the said Nichael Quinn.

Mr. HAliciART. There is no objection l,ringing down all the papers on this subject which we have in the department. The information, which we have is that Michael Quinn was dismissed for drunkemness and for using improper lamgnage to the foreman of the shops. The evidence on which his dismissal was bised is not in the department, but I suppose we can send and get it.

Mr. GUAY. (Translation.) If 1 understand well the hom. Minister of Railways, he states that according to the papers in his department, relatiug to this attair, Nichael Quinn was dismissed for drunkemness. I had no intention of speaking on this motion, but after what the hon. Minister satid, I feel it to le my duty to make a statement of the facts. I very much regret not to make this statement in English, so that the hon. Minister may understand me, but I hope that some one within his reach may translate him my remarks. Here are the facts. Michael Quinn is an old man-fiftytive or tifty-six years of age-who has been for a leng while in the service of the (iovernment. On Christmas day last, he was on duty at the Intercolonial shops at Hedlow, and was doing his work there. Mr. Alfred Drake, the chief engineer of the Hadlow shops, came and examined Quinn's work. A quarrel took place, but who conmenced it-Drake or Quinn-I do not know. However, as a result of the quarrel Drake told Quinn to go home. Quinn, who was not altogether without liquor, went home. The next day Drake wrote to the railroad authorities at Moncton, a letter in which he said that he had dismissed Quimn, for drunkenness. However, two days after, Drake wrote to the same authorities of the Intercolonial at Moncton, saying that he was mistaken, and that Quinn was not drunk on the 2.th of December-the day on which his first letter reported him to have been drunk-and he himself requested that Quinn be reinstated in his duties. Matters remained thus until the approach of the last provincial elections, when the friends of Quinnwho are not my political frienls-exercised a consilerable pressure on the Intercolonial authorities at Moncton to have an enguiry made into Quimn's conduct. An enquiry was instituted and several witnessess, five or six witnesses, declared that Nichael Quinn was not drunk on the 2ith of December last. That he was a man of perfectly solver habits, and that if any one was at fault, it was Drake himself, the chief engineer of the Hallow shops. Now, Mr. Speaker, the object of my motion is to estallish, if this evidence is brought lefore the House, that Quim was slandered on this occasion. I must add that my intention is not to throw any discredit upon the conduct of Mr. Drake. lut solely to furnish Quinn with an oceasion to clear himself before his fellow-citizens, from an aceusation of drunkemess, a grate charge which he certainly did not merit.

Mr. HAGidART. I would state, in answer to the hon. gentleman that some time ago representations were made to the department that Mr.Quinn was not drunk as alleged, and a further investigation has heen caused to be made on the subject, but the report or the evidence has not yet come to Ottawa. Whenever the report or the evidence comes there will be some action taken upon it, and I shall be pleased to lay it on the Table of the Honse.

Motion agreed to.

CENTRAL ENPERIMENTAL FARM.

Mr. Mr MILLAN (Huron) moverl for :

Return showing the number of cows kept at the $\mathrm{Cen}^{-}$ tral Experimental Farm between the 1st day of January. 1891, and the list day of January, 18r2; the number of cows of each of the different breeds: the quantity of milk given by each cow ; the quantity of milk to make a pound of butter : the quantity of milk sold ; the quantity of but ${ }^{-}$ ter sold : where sold, and the prices obtained each month: the kinds of food given and the value of the same.
He said: I ask for this return lecause we are not likely to get the report of the Dairy Commissioner before the House rises, and it is of the utmost importance that the information called for should be laid before the country. There is a considerable disposition at the present time among our farmers to engage indairying, and it is very important that they should know the results of the experiments at the Central Experimental Farm in regard to the quantity of milk produced, the quantity of fool consumed, the best market for butter, the prices that can le ohtained, and the best breeds of cows for clairy purposes. I suppose some of the butter has been sent to Britain in order to test the market there.

Mr. CARLIN(: There is no objection to bringing down the information which the hon. gentleman asks for, but I think it will be all found in the report, which is now in the hands of the printer, and which I expect to be able to lay on the Table of the House within a couple of weeks. However, if the hon. gentleman desires to have the information sooner, there is no objection to obtaining it.

Mr. McMILLAN. I would like to ask if the report will give a statement down to the lat of January last:
Mr. (ARLING: Yes. I understand so.
Mr. MeMILLAN. If the report will be in our hamds before the Estimates pass, that is all I would ask.
Mr. CARLIN: I think it will.

SCBMAMNE TLNNFL, P.E.I.

Mr. PERRY movei for :

Correspondence, reports, dic., which may have taken place between the Govermment of Canada and Sir Douglas Fox, or any other engincer. since the lst day of September, 1891, having reference to building a tumel frou Prince Edward Island to the Mainland across the Straits of Xorthumberland.
He sail : This yuestion has leenbrought sooften hefore this homourable Honse and the (iovernment, and the perple of Prince Edward Island, that we expected by this time the dovermment would have settled it definitely and either pronounced themselves in fatoor of building the tumel or rejected the proposition altugether. I was amazed to hear my hom. friend the Ninister of Finance say. in reply to my question, that the matter was still umler the consideration of the diovermment. Why, only a year and a half ago. in Fehruary, 1s91, we were told ly eminent men, ly the High Commissioner for Canada, that this was a guestion rapiolly approathing settlement. The perple were tohi, not only in Prince County, hut all ower Prince Edward Island. that the Cosernment were going to buill the tumel. A promise had loen male in issi that a subway would be built, and the dovernment had even granted a charter to a company to build that sub). way, aul the election was run on that gromml. But senator Howlan failed on that. It wats found that a subway under the Straits of Northumberland was dangerous and it wats allowed to drop, but, in the fall of $18: 50$, all of at sudiden, semator Howlian put himself into correspondence with sir Douglas Fox, one of the most eminent enginters, I mukerstand, in direat britain, amd perhaps in the world, and senator Howlan published a corresipondence het ween himself with Sir Douglas Foxand between himselfand the late Sir John Macdonald, giving the people of Prince Edward lslamd every encouragement that the tumel was going to be built. I suppose, if I could have heard the secret comsels of Ministers at that time, and the advice and command which they gave to senator Howlan, I might be able to make a statement. I suppose he was told : Have you not some influence in Prince Edward Island, camot you drive out that old Perry and that Yeo, and get yourself returnel there: We unlerstand your reputation is gool: we understand that you have been selling reapers there; you have been carrying on some fisheries and have bought fish and have dealt honourably with the people, and no doubt that gives you a great deal of influence; we will give you power to state on lehalf of the Giovernment that we are going to build that tumnel if the people of Prince County will vote against the Liberal candidates. I do not state these things for facts, but I think perhaps my hon. friend the Minister of Finance might have heen the only delegate appointed to wait on the senator in regarel to that. No doubt the senator had these instructions. Sodoult he was told: If you hring us support here, even if you are defeated we will put you back in the senate; but the senator. at a meeting held there, sait. no. he would do nuthing of the kind. lict it was not many weeks after his defeat in Prince Edward Island when he was a semator again. That was his reward for trying to trick the people of Prince Edward Island at the dictation of the fiovermment of Canala. I say the (iovermment have attempted to delule these people. and have attempted to buy the likerties of the people of Prince Eilward Island on false pretenses ly making promises which they will not carry out. which they do not intend to carry nut, amb which I believe they never will carry ont. Past experience shows that 1 ame corrrect. They have dangled this matter before the cye of the people for years and years, and especially before anelection, and 1 believe they intend to use it again whenever an election is about to take place. But they will tind that they have made a mistake. They will fime that the people of Prince Ellward Island, and especially the perple of Prince County, are not to he lought by promises or hy the construction of a tumel even if it cost twenty million dollars. The people of Prince Comoty are tor, honest and tow independent to be hought. So doubt they wonld tre glad if the promises which have been made were carried out, hut they know that these promises have never been carrieal out, and the people of Prince County will not he gulled by any such promises. I hold in my hand a small document, which is a letter from senator Howlan addressed more particularly to the electors of Prince Comnty, hat really to the whole of the electors of Pi ince Edward Island, and dated on harid the steamer Stamlay, the loth Fehruary. 1891. This gives the whole aceome of the negotiations for the building of the tumel. The semator says that he asked Sir Douglas Fox these three questions :
"1. For what sum of money he would give his professional opinion as to the feasibility and practicability of a tunnel.
$\because 2$. For what amual subsidy, payable half-yearly in Londonand satisfactorily guaranteed, contractors could be furnished wcomplete the work.
"3. If in his judgment the total cost would fall within five million dollars.
"In anower to this he wrote me under date of October 10:- If I heard from you by cable upon receipt of this letter. I could probably arrange for Mr. Alfred Palmer to examine the position of the tuanel, and the connecting railways, on his way home from Labrador, where he is at present engaged. For the opinion which you mention, I would suggest the following: That you pay Mr. Alfred Palmer's time at the rate of $$ 225$ per month, together with his extra travelling expenses occasioned hy this detour, with a fee to myself of 260210 . Upon receipt of Mr. Pulmer's report to me, I shall be better able to deal with the second and third questions in your letter.'
"I laid this correspondeace before the Premier, Hon. Neil MacLeod, and the Hon. Donald Ferguson, and they said they wonld guarantee the cost of Mr. Palmer's visit, but I must hold myself respnnsible for the rest, but they would assist me in obtaining the amount from the Dominion Government."
I do not know whether the (iovermment paid that amount or not. Nost likely they did. He goes on :
"And here, let me say, I cannot speak in too high terms of the manner in which both the honourable gentlemen gave me their warm, earnest and hearty assistance in this whole matter, and thus relieved me of a very considerable expense.'
Now, Mr. Speaker, I want the Honse to bear in mind that early in January, 1891, as we are told by Senator Howlan, Sir Douglas Fox had sutficient data to emahle him to pass an opinion as to the feasibility and the cost of building the tumel from Prince Eilwarl Island to the mainland.
"I wired Sir Douglas Fnx: 'Send Palmer.' He arrived, and as the public is already avare. a recognizance was made at both capes, the result of which. Mr. Bain has so admirably given in his lecture, and which is so fully approved of by Sir J. W. Dawson.
"I also formarded to Sir Douglas Fox samples and analyses of brick clays and brick as collected and made by Mr. Bain, with a lot of plans, papers, fce, bearing on the question. He acknowledged the receipt of all these, and said he now had sufficient data on which to form an opinion.
"I cabled him on the 13 th of July to know when his report would be ready, to, which he replied on the 15th: "Repurt ready in ten days.' On the with he cabled thus: 'Huch preter delaying report until Pearson. Hudson River contractor, returns next month. Reply. To which Ianswered on the eath : Yes: but want approximate cost immediately. Government fuarantee might be obtained for six millions. Answer." On the 30th, he answered as follows:-
", 'Sum named should probably eover tunnel.' "
Now, here we have it from the mouth of Senator Howlan himself that sir Douglats Fox, in his tele-Si $\mathbf{S}, \mathrm{OHO}, \mathrm{ONO})$ were sufficient to complete that tumel. Of course, it was a great inducement to the people of Prince Edward Island to support the Government, after they had been for 15 or 18 years trying to persuale the Govermment of (analia either to laild the tumnel or do something else to keep up contimuous com:numication, in winter as well as summer, between the Island and the mainland. Both hranches of the Prince Edward Island Legislature have urged the fiovernment of Canala to pay the sum of $\mathbf{S i},(\mathbf{O X O},(\mathrm{OW})$ to the Govermment of Prince Edward Island as compensation for failing to carry out the terms of Confeleration, but they were refusel. In fact, Farl (iranville says himself that he is sorry that the Dominion (iovernment, up to that time, had taken no steps in order to carry out the terms of Confederation. And, Nir, when they hearl the promises of such an eminent personage as senator Howlan, who could blame them if they were under the impression that this Government was in earnest and sincere in their representations to senator Howlan--because I conteml that he was speaking the sentiments and views of the (iovermment. Senator Howlan goes on to state :
" It will be noticed in $m y$ letter of the 17 th September. that I asked for contractors, dec., to do the work. Since the above cable despatches were received $I$ got the following letter, dated 2lst January, which, I have no doubt, will be read with plensure by your readers, as it establishes the pructicability of the tunuel, and taken in connection with the eablegram of the 30 ith ult., settles the question of feasibility and cost."
Now, Senator Howlan says that the letter I am going to read from Sir Douglas Fox, settles the question of the cost of the tumnel:
"Victoria Maxisions, 28 Victuria Street.
"Westminster, S.W., 21si .January, 1891.
"The Honourable George W. Howelan, Ottara: " Tennel onder Nurthemberland Straits.
"•My Dear Sir,-I have now received through the Assistant Provincial Secretary, the sum of $£ 56.1 .0$ for Mr. Palmer.

- I have been going carefully into the whole matter with him, and have formed a very favourable upinion as to the practicability of the proposed tunnel, and will send you a preliminary report in a few days.
"I ame sorry, however, to find that Mr. W. Pearson, the contractor for the Hudson River tunnel. who would be, in my opinion, the best contractor to employ, is at present in Mexico, so that I have not been able to consult him, as I should much wish to do, before sending in my definite report. I have ascertained that Mr. Pearson will be in New York, in care of Messrs. Pearson Lisons, Hudson Tunnel Works, New York, about the middle of February. and I think it would be a most important step if you could arrange with him on his way home to risit Northumberland Straits so that he may be prepared, on his arrival here, to consult with me, with a view to his giving a tender for the work."
Now, Nir louglas Fox here recommemets that Mr. Pearson be allowed to give the first temer for this work, siging that he was a most competent person and able engineer, and that ly visiting the Island: amd making a persomal examination, he: would then be in a position to give an honest temler to huili that tumel-
"Mr. Pearson is a contractor of the highest respect: bility, and of good experience. I am writing to him direct. suggesting that he should communicate with $y$ ju onthe sinbject.
"Will you kindly cable me what you arrange with him.

- Yours taithfully.

(Sad.) "DUUGLAS FOX.

- I cabled him on the 6 th instant: Will write Pearson as suggested, and I wrote Mr. Pearson to Dew York with a eopy of Sir Doughas Fox's letter, advising him to come and look at the Straits. ete., and make some boring through the ice on each side, and I expeet him to de so before returning to Englame.
"I put all these facts before the Dominion Government, and 1 have much pleasure now in submitting to you: realers the following letter.
Now. it shows that the Senator was aepuaintel with all these facts, it shows there were negoriations going on between the fovernment of Caneda and Semator Howlan: it goes a long way to prove what I stated awhile ago that there were solem orders and solemn commands given hy this diovernment to Senator Howlan when he lefi Ottawa, io come and stump Prince Connty in order to drive out the two gentlemen who were opposed to the present diovernment. I am groing now to reat a letter of Sir John A. Macilonalh, the late leander of the (iovernment, and I suppose the leader of the present diovernment and his colleagues will defer to the opinion of that statesman. Sir John Maedonall wrote as follows:-
" Eaknscliffe, Ottalia, bith February, 1891.
"My Dear Howlas,-In response to your pressing regu, is with respect to the tumel acruss the Straits, I desire to repeat that, under present circumstances, the Cabinet are not in a position to deal with the question. If, us I believe. the country will continue to give us its confidence, the Ministry will under my guidance take the matter up without delay: I understand Sir Douglas Fox is of opinion the schemo is a fensible one., The chief thing still unknown is thi sent of construction."
Senator Howlan told us some time ago that he had received a letter from Sir Donglas Fox, stating that he could construct a tunnel from the mainland to the Islond at a cost of $$(0,0(x),(0 x)$. If Senator Howlan had performed his duty this information would have been sent t:) the (iovermment, and the announcement might have been made that Sir Douglas Fox estimated that the tumel could he built for six millions. But, unfortumately, Nir John Macdonald was told that the cost of building the tunnel was utterly unknown. Sir John Macdonald continued :
"I fully appreciate the nature and extent of the obligation incurred by the Dominion to maintain continuous communication between the Island and mainland."
Sir John Macdonald at that time saw the responsibility which the Govermment undertook in violating the terms of Confederation wath Prin:e Edwaril Island. He wrote further:
"We have tricd to carry this out by the Stanley, but of course she cannot fight against the elements. So if the cost comes within a reasonable amount. such as Parliament feels itself justified in incurring. I shall be prepared to submit the question for their favourable consideration.
" I am, yours sincerely.
(Sgd) "JOHN A. MACDONALD."
We know from sir Douglas Fox that the sum
 John A. Macdonald distinctly stated that if the amount came within reason, he would at once recommend his Cabinet to take hold of the work. But we find they have not done so. Indeed it appears that the Ministers of the present day are not so apt to carry out their promises ats was sir John A. Macdonalit. Senator Howlan continued :
" In conclusion, permit me to say we are now within 'measurable distance' of a solution of the question of daily and continuous communication with the railway system of the Dominion.
'This has takensix years of unremitting attention and perseverance, with no little cost.
'Had Prince Edward Island, four years ago, sent two supporters of the Government of Sir John. A. Macdonald, I have not the most remote hesitation in saying the subway, or tunnel, would now have been completely and entirely finished."
There is the bribe. He tells the people that if they do not vote for the Government candidate, they will not get the tumel or a breakwater, or even yet a breakwater repaired. There is the threat hell over the heals of the people, that unless they vote for diovermment candilates they cannot get anything. I would be ashamed to speak such words before any intelligent constituency. Senator How. lan continues :
$\because$ During all these years what have we received from the Grit party on this island and throughout this Dominion? Nothing but snecrs and contempt."
No Grit members from the Islami had sneers for the tumel. No doult many of us had doults as to the efficacy of a subway. I had doubts as to whether it would he sufficient to carry on continuous transport between the Island and the mainland, but I defy Senator Howlan to show that I even spoke in depreciation of the tumel. I an sure my colleague did not do so, and the member for King's has also thrown his weight in favour of the tumel. Senator Howlan further says :
"I say, therefore, if the people of Prince Elward Island want a tunnel let them support the Government, who are already persuaded, nay more, convinced, of its pructicability, and are not afraid of its cost, but are ready to recommend to the favourable, consideration of Parliament a sum sufficient to build it."
He says the Government were then convinced and satisfied of the practicability of building a tumnel. The Senator concludes as follows:-
"I have done my part, and I trust our people will act wisely and prudenty by doing theirs, in supporting Sir John A. Macedonald ind his parts, who are quite sure to. have control of the purse-strings for the next five years.
"I am, yours truls.
" GEORGE W. HOWLAN.
" On board str. Stanley, Feb. 10, 1891."
That is the mandate which senator Howlan published to the electors of Prince County, and it will be observed that he obtained his information from the Government. that the Government told him how to act, that he was sent there for this special purpose, in order to try and gull the people and induce them, under false pretenses, to vote for candidates running in support of the present Government. He did not succeed; but the Govermment was returned all the same. If it has come to this, that all the electors of Canada must be Conservatives and supporters of the Goverminent in order that people may oldain their rights, I do not want to stand by the constitution. It would le much better for the people of Prince Eiward Island that they should be separated from the Dominion and out of Confederation, and as they were in 1873, a happy people who did not know what a provincial debt was. For, let me tell yon, that at the time we were coaxed into Confeleration, we entered it in order to secure a continuons steam communiation between the island and the mainland. What is the condition of our people now? Every man, woman and child in the island represents a delit of $$ 48$, which is their portion of the net delt of the Dominion. What have we received in return from the Govermment? Nothing lout false promises. Let ns go a little further, and see how they have been dealt with by the Gorernment. Here is a telegram sent from Amherst, on 2 sth Felruary, 1891. It is adiressed to a gentleman, D. Ferguson, Charlottetown, who was rumning as a (iovermment cundidate. It is from sir Charles Tupper, and reads as follows :-

" D. Fergesos, Charlotetown.
"I regret deeply that it is impossible for me to go to the Island, as the stanleyy cannot cross and 1 dare not attempt the Capes. I have satisfied myself that the tunnel can be made for s 56.001 .000 , and you may rely upon all the aid I can give to that important and neecessary work.
"CHARLES TUPPER.
" A mherst, Feb. 28, 1891."
There is proof that there was at that time no conmunication between the mainland and the island, and the very wording of the telegram shows that Sir Charles Tupper could not cross. Sir Charles Tupper could not cross at the Cape! Is his life more precions than that of any one else? We have to do that, and 1 am an older man than Sir Charles Tupper, and I have to do that. It shows that there were no means at that time, and perhaps for several days before and after, of crossing from the mainland to the Island. Sir Charles Tupper sitys:
"I regret that it is impossible for me to go to the Island, as the Stanley cannot cross and I dare not attempt the Canes. I have satisfied myself that the tunnel can be mude for $\mathbf{3}$ i, $, 1.0,0,00$, and you may rely upon all the aid I can give to that important and necessary work.

"CHARLES TUPPER.

sir Charles Tupper says he has satistied himself and he was recently from England and probably had been in correspondence with Sir Douglas Fox. If he had notbeen in correspondence with Sir Douglas, Fox No. 1, he might have been in correspondence with Semator Howlan, Fox No. 2. Now I ask the Gorermment, what does that telegram of Sir Charles Tupper mean? Does it mean that the Government are not going to make a distinct and honest effort to carry out their promises? This telegram from SirCharles Tupper was sent on ti:e 28th of Felruary, and the election took place on the sth of March. Was the telegram sent with the intention of trying to induce the people to vote for the Government candidates? Mr. Ferguson was one of the Government candidates; and I remember well that on the next day after the telegram was sent, which was Sunday, it was read in all the public places in the province. It was copied and sent by special express here, there and everywhere to induce the people. to vote against the Liberal candidates and for the Conservative candidates. It did not have that effect because the people of Prince County are an extraordinary people. As I have said before, they are not to be bribed or blinded by false promises. I give them credit, and I say that I stand here one of the proudest representatives in this Parliament, because I represent, I believe, the most honest constituency that Canada can produce. I ask again, does this telegram of Sir Charles Tupper mean anything? Will the Minister of Finance stand up in this House and repudiate it and say that it is false? Will he tell me what Sir Charles Tupper meant at that time, and will he himself tell me what he meant when he answered me the other day and said that the question was still under the consideration of the Government? What is the meaning of that? Was Sir Charles Tupper brought here for the purpose of going to Amherst and sending this telegram to the people of the Island? Is it for this that he got paid ten dollars a day and bis travelling expenses to and from England? Is this part of the fraud? Was he only representing the Tories? Are there none but Tories in this country? Is not the Liberal party a strong and respectable party, and do they not pay their taxes as well as the Tories? I say that such conduct on the part of the Government is a shame and a disgrace and whenever a country is misgoverned in that way it can never expect to prosper. Canada is not prosperous, although the Minister of Finance told us no later than yesterday that it was. But we know that his own blue-books tell a very different story. We know how the census shows that the people have been driven out of the country. Now, Sir, after all these transactions the matter did not remain there, and Senator Howlan went on a trip to England. He had not been in England for some years, and he put it into the head of some of his friends to hold a meeting in Charlottetown and to vote him $\Sigma(4)$ to send him to England, and he was to do all the rest. He was to satisfy Sir Douglas Fox that the scheme was good; and we have here an extract from a sound Tory paper that collected several hundred dollars last year as pap, and no doubt was bound to fight for the Government. This is what the paper says:

" Important.

"Hon. Senator Howlan, at the instance of the Charlottetown Board of Trade, and others interested in the tunnel, left on Wednesday evening last for London. England. via New York, to confer with Sir Douglas Fox, in order to supply him with necessary information to enable him to draw up, without delay, an accurate estimate of the cost of the tunnel. By Mr. Howlan's personal presence, full information can be given Sir Douglas, with data already before him, so that there will ke no misunderstanding in the matter, and that an accurate estimate may be prepared with a view to calling for tenders. The Local Government are in hearty accord with the move, and have assumed the cost, about $$ 400$, of Mr. Howlan's trip to London. This is an important move, and we trust that it may result in the early inauguration of the work."
Now, the Island has paid $\$ 400$ for Senator Howlan's trip to England, and the Island expects some return for that. The people of Prince Edward Island are not in the habit of paying money without knowing what they pay it for, and the people have a right to know the result of Senator Howlan's mission to England on that occasion. Have the Government any papers to bring down containing the result of his trip? Is there anything to show what Senator Howlan did to enable Sir Douglas Fox to make un estimate? It appears the Government has nothing to show in that respect, and the Minister of Finance told us the other day that the matter was still under consideration. We know that Senater Howlan went to England about the middle of April last, during the earlier part of the session of Parliament here, and we know that any negotiations he could have made were early in May. What has been the result of these negotiations, I ask? We were told here some time ago that the Government were going to vote some $\$ 2,000$ for new borings and new examinations so as to get further information ; but we are told in this communication of Senator Howlan that they had all the information necessary, and Sir Charles Tupper himself, when just lately come from England, told us that he was satisfied of the feasibility of the tumnel. The Government are not satisfied yet. We know that the Goverment do not intend to build it, but they are not honest enough to come forwarl and say so. What I want the Govermment to do is this: Let the Govermment assume an honourable position, an independent position, a position of fair-play to the people of the Island, and state whether they are going to build the tumnel, or if they have given it up. If they have given it up, I will say that they do not intend to carry out the terms of Confederation by building a tumel, which I believe is the only way in which the terms of Confederation can he carried out. If they do not carry out the terms of Confederation in this direction, the people of the Islame have a heavy clam for damages as compensation against the Government of Canala. In 1883 the Government of the Island, led by the Hon. Mr. Sullivan, made a claim of $\mathbf{3}, 0,00,0(x)$ upon Canada for the nonialfilment of the terms of Confederation. They went to England with that claim, and they appeared before Her Majesty's Government there. Of course, they were met there by the influence of Sir Charles Tupper. Sir Charles Tupper did not think at that time that a tumel could be built : he dill not think that the people of the Island had any grievance at all. In fact, he endorsed the whole report-a very partial report, I must say, made by a sub-committee of the Privy Council composed of Sir Alexander Camphell and the Hon. Mr. McLelan. When the delegation went to Englamd they were met face to face by Sir Charles Tupper, fortified with this report in his hands. But I am proud to know that we had a friend at court in Earl Granville, who took a proper view of the application of the people of Prince cidward Island. He said that he was aware that the people of Prince Edward Island had a grievance, and that the (Government of Canada were bound by the terms of the treaty to carry out their part of the agreement to keep up continuous communication between the Island and the mainland in winter as well as in summer; and he was aware that they had not done it. He said that it was beyond the power of the Imperial Parliament just then to interfere and take the matter out of the hands of the Dominion Government, but he would use his influence, and I have no doubt he has used it, to induce the Dominion Government to carry out the terms of Confederation. But it is hard to persuade the Dominion Government to do what they ought to do. I believe they will have the political impudence to hold this matter before the people again on the eve of the next election. I believe that there will be another fox in the field. They may try to mislead the people on the eve of another election, but the people will not be gulled. They expect an honest decision from the Ciovernment : they expect the (iovernment to say whether they will huild that tumnel or not. The question has been long enough in agitation. If the (iovernment are satisfied that the tummel cannot be luilt for less than $51 \overline{5}, 000,000$, I would not ask them to huild it. I believe it would he unreasonable to ask ('anada to buikl a tunnel from the Island to the mainland costing $\$ 15,(M \times 1,(M)$. If the report of Sir Inouglas Fox that it can be built for sis, (YX), (MO is hasell on good information, the Government will he treating the people of Prince Edward Island majustly if they dis not carry ont the work. I expect that they will huild the tunnel and do justice to the people, and the sooner they decide the question the better. I expect that when the papers are brought down we shall have another whack at it, and I trust that by that time the fovermment will be prepared to tell us what they are going to do. Laist session we were told by the hon. member for Centre Toronto (Mr. Cockburn) that the Dominion gained nothing in the way of revenue from Prince Eilward Island, but that the Island had been given this, thatand theother -that, in fact, we were a drain on the treasury of Canalia. Nir, that is not correct. We have been charged improperly with many expenditures, such as the building of the pier at Cape Tormentine and the subsidies to the steamers, although these steamers carry mails from the Island as well as to the Island and take more people from the mainlame to Prince Edward Island than from the Island to the mianlaml. If the (iovermment of the Dominion are so penurious and so mean that they will not acknowledge the rights of Prince Edward Island, let them cut us oft altogether-we have no objection-and place us in the same position that we occupied in 18j3. There is not a man in Prince Edward Island who would not jump at the offer and be glad to get free of the shackles imposed on us by the Dominion Government. I suppose that the Government will tell us that if we do not return supporters of them we are disloyal. I defy my opponents co state on any public platform that the people of Prince Edward Island are not loyal. I do not mean to say that the Tories are not loyal, but I say that the Liberals are just as loyal to the Crown of England as they are, but we olject to being tyrannizel over by the (iovermment of Canada.

Mr. YEO. I hope the (iovernment will see that these papers are brought down, and that they will show that the fiovernment have not lost sight of this rery important matter, so far as Prince Edward Island is concerned, in the construction of a submarine tummel between the island and the mainland. It is a question which I suppose is not very interesting to the members of this House generally: My hon. colleague has gone so fully into the matter, and it was so well discussed at the last session of this House, that I think any hon. member who has given the matter any consideration must admit that Prince Edward Island has a strong claim. Last session facts and figures were alduced here to show that Prince Edward Island is not a burden on the Dominion of Canada, but that we pay considerabiy more to the revenue of the Dominion than we receive in return. But I contend that even if such were not the case, that fact would not lessen our claim. I would ask any hon. member to reul the terms of union between Prince Elward Island and the Dominion Mr. Pekry. of Cinada, and he will find that one of the stipulations clearly expressed is that the Dominion (iovernment binds itself to keep up continuous communication between the Island and the mainland in winter and summer. We know. that some efforts have been made to carry out this agreement ; hut it has not been fultilled. Iuring this winter, which has been one of the most faromable experienced for many years, continuous commmincation har: not been kept up, and for several days there have been no mails either received or taken from the Island. I trust, Sir, that when the papers are placed on the Table of the House we shall see that the Government have been fully alive to the promises which have been made, and that this question will be taken up and dealt with speedily. I was a little surprised to hear from the hom. Minister of Finance, a few days ago, that this matter was still only umider consideration. I had hoped for a more detinite answer. I lan! hoped that he would have been alle to say that some progress had heen male. But it is well to know that it is still under consideration, and I hope it is receiving favourable consideration. My hon. colleague has grone very fully into the details of how the sulbway was originated in 188i. This proposition was not so firmurably received in Prince Fdward Island, and doults were expressed as to the subway giving the benefits we had reason to expect, but when the question of a tmmel was brought forward, when we were led to believe it was practicable and could be constructed for an amount we might reasonably expect the Dominion Government would not hesitate to expend, we looked forward to the work leing taken up as soon as the elections were over. We hat the promise of the late leader of the present Govermment that this matter would be taken up and lealt with as speedily as possihle, and in addition we had the promise of the High Commissioner to the same effect. Sir Douglas Fox, the engineer who has heen consulted in this matter, has expressed the wish that further surveys and borings shouk le made before he could give a decided opinion is to the cost, and it is well known that if these surveys and borings are to be made, they should be undertaken early in the summer, as it is more difficult to do the work at any other season. I trust if the Minister of Finance does not do anything more, he will at least see that a sutticient sum is placed in the Estimates to cover the cost of further surveys and lorings. I hope and trust the matter will not be allowed to stand over until we are on the eve of another election in Prince Edward Island, but that the liovermment will deal with the question as it ought to be dealt with; and if it is found, after the surveys and borings have been made, that the cost of the work is too great for the Dominion (Government to feel justified in the expenditure, it will then leecome a question between the Government and Prince Edward Island as to what compensation should be offered and accepted in lieu of the subway, unless some other means are found of carrying out the conditions of Confederation. According to the letter read from the late leader of the Govermment, he admitted the responsibility of the Dominion to carry out those terms. He almitted the terms of Union had not been carried out, and since then no improvement has been made. I cannot for one moment believe that these promises were made merely to delude and deceive the people. I cannot think that hon. gentlemen occupying high positions would for a moment think of doing that. It is pretty well understood that promises made on the eve of an election must be received with a good deal of caution, but in an important matter such as this, where a treaty has been made and the leader of the Government admits the responsibility of the Dominion and its obligation to take the matter up at once, the case assumes a much more serious aspect. I camnot lelieve that the Government intend to deceive the electors of the Island. I have the interests of my country too much at heart to suppose that they will le treated in such a way by the Dominion of Canada. It is umecessiry for me to tell hon. members the lisadvantages we lalour under in Prince Edward Island, cut off as we are from the mainland for nearly five months in the year, and thus prevented from participating in the benefits which acurue to our fellow citizens in other parts of the Dominion from our railways and canals and other great public works. On those grounds we are entitled to a great deal of consideration ; and although $$ 6,000,(0) 0$ may seem a very large simn, yet when this amount is to be expendel to carry out a solemm contract entered into between Prince Edward Island and the Dominion, the amount ought not to be for a moment considerenl. What I, as one of the representatives of Prince Edward Island, am anxious to see is to have the matter fully decidel. I do not want the minds of the people to be disquieted by the expectation that a tumel will be built if it is not to be undertaken. If the Government say it cumnot be undertaken, the sonner we know it the better. Then we could perhaps devise some means of improving our present means of communication. After all that has been said, it is quite unnecessary for me to say more. I can only express the hope that the Govermment will have those papers brought down and that it will not be shown to this Honse that they are not alive to the interests of the Maritime Provinces. The fact of Prince Edward Island being represented by four opponents of the Government will, I hope, have no weight in the matter, as it is only justice we seek, anil Prince Edward Island has it right to expect from the (iovernment justice, whether represented by Liberals or Conservatives.

Mr. JAVIES (P.E.I.) I do not wish to detain the House and will be very brief in my remarks. I regret that the Minister of Finance should have called out "carried" without giving expression to the intentions of the fovernment regarding this important work. It is in the interests of the Dominion at large and the province I represent that this question should be grappled with and settled one way or the other. It is not in the interest of the people or creditable to the Government that election after election should come round and the constraction of this tumel be continually before the people. The people should be left free to determine the great political issues of the Dominion without having this question drawn as a red herring across the track. I am interested, I acknowlenge, in having an affirmative decision given by the Government. I do not want to press unduly arguments in favour of the construction of the tunnel, and I do not want to press the Govermment to expend the money if they are satisfied the cost is going to be too large, but I cannot forget the fact that, some time ago, the Government, at the instigation of some of its supporters, and in pursuance of the promise of their late leader, endorsed by Sir Charles Tupper, forwarded all the papers in connection with the construction of the work to an eminent engineer in England for his opinion. The Local Government sent a gentleman home at the same time to gise further adrice and facts to that engineer relative to the construction of this road. An engineer in the confilence of Sir Douglas Fox came to the Island and examined the work on the spot. He made local surveys, he was assisted by the information gathered on an official survey made under the direction of the Government. The straits were surveyed, borings were made, and so far as a layman coulh form an opinion, it seemed that the information amd lata necessary to enable the engineer to give his opinion and the Government to come to a conclusion were fairly before them. The engineer estimatel for three different sizes of canals certain sums. A small one amounting, with contingencies and land damages-that is, the necessary approaches-to $\mathfrak{t l}, 0$ on, (HN sterling: a 16 -font tumel, with contingencies and land damages, amounting in round figures to nearly $\pm 3,000,(\mathrm{NO})$, and an is-foot tumel, with land damages and contingencies, ammunting to $\pm 2,2.20,(0 \times 1)$. Well, we went into a discussion upon that question last year, and I am not going to repeat those arguments again or to weary the House with the recitation of the solid and real grievances under which that province has laboured. I might mention in passing, that, while this House has spent money like water in every part of the Dominion for the construction of canals and the constraction of railways, for the subsidizing of railways and of branches of railways, there is one part of the Dominion to which they never voted any money, and that is the province from which I come. When we voted several millions if few years ago for the construction of railways in Cape Breton, no one said any thing against it. In the same way, when large sums of money were roted for the New Glasgow branch, the Picton branch, the missing link oetween Digby and Amapolis, all the money reguired for those purposes was voted without any serious opposition, and wherever the money was required to enable the people of the country to carry their products to market, no question has been raised; and, except in regard to the Trent Valley Canal, no work has been so much dangled before the eyes of the people as this to which we are now referring. The people of Canalia are under the impression that the Dominion has expended the money for the construction of the Prince Edward Island Railway as they have expended the money of the country for the construction of roals in other parts of the Dominion, but that is not so. Prince Edward Island has paid every cent of the cost of that main line of railway, for the whole amount of three and a guarter millious was charged to the Island in the setilement which was made of the accounts between the Island and the Dominion, and the only amount which the Dominion Government has expended has been on that short line to Cape Traverse, amounting to $\$ 275,000$ or $\$ 280,000$. These facts cannot be put out of sight. Prince Edward Island has not had fair-play-I will not say fair-play, but it has not had common justice meted out to it in this matter of expenditure. I do not wish to press this matter unduly, but last year the hon. gentleman told us he was considering this question, and his remarks were made at the close of the debate last year and after sir Douglas Fox's report had heen in the hands of the Government for some time, after the promises made by the late sir Johm Macdonald and the present High Commissioner had been in the hands of the Government, after the people knew what was thought upon this question, what the engineer estimated the cost of the construction at, and all the data were then in the possession of the Finance Minister. The hon. gentleman then sitit?
" It may be posible, and I believe it is true that there are not yet sufficient data for getting at what may be terued the fairly certain cost of the tumel ; and I think it will be the duty of the Government and inm sure it will also be its pleasure, if there is something else needed in order to carry on investigations which will give the data as utarly as possible for a pretty definite and certain estimate of the cost and feasibility of constructing a runnel, to do this if it can be done without too great cost, as I am quite certain it can"
The hon. gentleman did not seem to have any doubt about it: He seemed to le quite certain that it conh be done without too much cost. I make no complaint if the fovernment say that the information they have is not sufficient to express a judgment upon, but $I$ do claim that, in face of such a promise made by the Minister last year, we are not being treated with common fairness. If the hon. gentleman had not the data then, why has he not got it now: This was in the spring of last year. I do not care whether you have Conservatives or Liberals representing the Island in the House, but I do want the Island to get common justice, and, when the Finance Minister made such a statement last year, I think I may say we are being treated with negligence and contempt, and that the (iovernment have not acted according to their promise. Why did not the hon. gentleman obtain the data he required, and propose a vote to enable hin to oltain the information if he wanted to get it? After comparing the probable outlay on the one hand and the probable receipts on the other, the probaible cost of the work and the saring which would be effected by the Government by doing away with the present modes of carrying out the communication, he went on to say :
"That is about the way this matter strikes me; and so far ta the Government is concerned it has done what I have stated, and I think it is prepared to say that if further estimates are necessary to get at the cost of the structure, they will he got ; and after that the Gorernment will seriously and earnestly consider the question as presented in the light of those facts, and ask Parliament to consider it as well."
Now, we ask that this shall be done. So far as I am personally concerned, I have never yet seen the full report of Sir Douglas Fox, but the Finance Minister last year gave us the estimates of the cost of these three tunnels, and then I think he was of the opinion that the sinaller tunnel would not be effective. I share in that opinion. I do not think the small tunnel would be worth considering, in view of the requirements of the Island in regard to taking their goods to market. I think the tunnel should be one of such a size as to enable the people to carry their produce to market. Otherwise it is of no use at all. If the cost of such a tunnel is too much, in Heaven's name let us know it. I do not want to be urging year after year a scheme which is not practical. Let the Govermment say that it is not, and let us drop the matter forever. But I object to their keeping this dangling before the people, to their inaking promises which are not keptand which are madeonly to be lroken, but whichare made before every election. I repeat that this matter ought to le grappled with, and in a statesmanlike way. If the hon. gentleman wants further dita. I think he is hound by his promise and by those of his predecessor and late leadrer, to get the data. If Sir Douglas Fox's report is incomplete, let him take steps to complete it. If, after he has all the datia in his possession, he comes to the honest conclusion that the cost of this work ic beyond the resources of the country, let us know it and have done with it. But I almost despair, in view of the almost negligent way in which this has been treated hy the Govermment, I will say in view of the alsolutely negligent way in which it has been treated, of anything being done at all. Only the other day, when there was a possibility of a bye-election, when my seat and the seat of my colleague were contestenl, while the enyuiry was going on, a public meeting was called at once and the tumel was again dangied before the eyes of the electors in anticipation of the possible elections which were to come. This is no way of carrying on the husiness of the country. I have never yet, either in Prince Edward Island or out of it, assumed a position on this question which is not defensible. I have told them time and again that if the reports of the engineers show this tumel to be so costly as to be beyond what we could fairly ask, I for one will not ask it, but we have a right to a determination, and we have a right that the hon. gentleman shall not call "question," and "carried " to treat it in that cavalier way.

Mr. FOSTER. Don't you want it carried?

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I want it carried, but I want the hon. gentleman to take advantage of the occasion of the motion to express to this House whether it is his intention to carry out what he promised, and if it is not, why be will not do so. I do not want the people I represent to be fooled with, I want common justice done them. That hon. gentleman himself has straightforwardness and honesty enough to know that my argument is correct, and that he ought to state that he is not dealing fairly when he is trifling with this question, and the people have a right to know whether the Govermment are going to take this upon a practical way and complete the work, or whether they have come to the conclusion that it is too costly. Sir, I did not pressit last year very hard ; I acknowledged frankly and freely at that time, that the Government ought to have plenty of time to consider the report made by Sir Douglas Fox, because the amount of money that wonld be required was very large, and one could not ask the Government of the day hastily to come to a conclusion, and I did not press them unduly. My hon. friend from King's County (Mr. McLean) who spoke here last year, in a very able speech presented the case in answer to the speech made by the hon. member for Centre Toronto (Mr. Cockburn) : he presented the case in a way that settled once and for ever the hon. gentleman and his arguments, which were opposed to the construction of this tunnel. Therefore the only question that remained was not whether the Government were under an obligation to build this, if built it should be, for a reasomable sum, lecause they were homm hy the terms of Union to do that --the only guestion that remsined was: Is the cost of the tumel unreasonable or not? I say now that after having had twelve months to consider the estimates made hy that eminent engineer, Sir Douglas Fox, it is time for the diovermment to tell us whether they have comeluded to luill it or not. I would invite the hon. &entleman not to let the question go ly in silence but to give us his frank opinion and his frank intentions.

Mr. FONTER. I have no oljejection to the motion leing carried, and the infomation being brought - lown, at which time I think it will he more in order. to diseuss the question.

Motion agreed to.

RETCRN゙: URDERED.

(ANADA TEMPERANCE ACT.

Mr. FLINTmoved secomd reanling of Bill (No. if) to amemd the Canalla Temperance Amendment Act of 1888 . He silid : I think this is a very favourable opportunity, at this early part of the session, to again bring forward the Bill whichI hat the honour to move the second reading of on 3 ral August last. and which passerl its second reanling in this House: hut failed to reach its third realing, owing to pressure of ciovermment business. In doing so, I will claim the indulgence of the House to make a more lengthy explanation than I did on that occasion, for the sake of those members of the House who have not specially looked into the Canada 'Jemperance Act and not studied the Bill now hefore us. The Canala Temperance Act, I may say at the outset. is not in force throughout the whole Dominion of Canada. It is, unfort unately, in force in a very small portion of the Dominion, and consequently to a large degree the discussion of this Bill will lose interest among those hon. members who represent those constituencies in which the Act is not in force. For the information of those who have not followed the discussion of last year, I will state that the Canala Temperance Act which I seek to amend by this Bill is in'force in ten counties or districts in the Province of New Brunswick, in twelve counties or districts in Nova Scotia, in three counties in Prince Elward Ishand, two counties in Manitoba and four counties in Quebec. With the exception of those thirty-one districts in the whole Dominion the Bill I am now discussing will not lie, and consequently, I suppose, will lose interest to hon. gentlemen who represent those other districts. At the same time, I would ask their courteous consideration to the matter which I lring lefore them. The Canala Temperance Act, which was passed in 180 s wats ant Act to permit certain districts to prohilit within the lormols of those districts the sale of intoxicating liguors, except for certain purposes. When the Act was hrought into force by the popular vore, the restriction in the sale of intoxicating liguors amounted to this : that from the day on which the secoml part of the Temperance Act came into force in any county or district, or so long as it shouhl continue in force, uo intoxicating lifuors should be sohl. speating in a general way, except as follows... and I would call the attention of hon. gentlemen to the exceptions, becallse the Bill which I am intro. ducing deals in a rather tsechnical manner with these exceptious:

" Provided always, that the sale of wine for exclusively sacramental purioses may, on the certificate of a clengyman affirming that the wine is reguired for sacramental purpose, be made by druggists and vendors thereto, specially licensed by the Lieutenant Governor in each province; but the number of such licensed druggists and vendors shall not exceed one in each township or parish, ,r two in each town. or one for every four thousand inhabthants in each city.

- Provided also. that the sale of intoxicating liguor for exclusively medicinal purposes or for boni fide use in some art, trade or manafacture, may be made by such licensed druggist or vendors: but such sale, when for medicinal purposes, shall be in quautities of not less than one pint, to ive reluuved fiomithe premices, a!nd shall be made only on the certificate of a medical man having no interest in the sale, affirming that such liquor has been prescribed for the person named therein: and when such sale is for its use in some art, trade or manufacture, the same shall be made only on the certificate signed by two justices of the peace of the good faith of the application, accompanied by the affirmation of the applicat that the liquor is to be used only for the particular purposes set forth in the affirmation: and such druggist or vendor shall file such certificate and keep a register of all such sales, indicating the name of the purchaser and the quantity sold, and shall make an anmal return of all such sales, on the thirty-first day of December in every year. to the collector of Inland Revenue. within whose revenue division the county or city is situated."
In calling the attention of the House to this clanse, I desire to say that I have repeater this clanse verbatim in the Bill I present, with the exception of one or two words. I have left out the phrase "who shall not lee interested in such sale." In the Bill of last year that phatse was contained and it passed the committee, with strenuous objection from friends on looth sides of the House, who were known as strong friends of the Canada Temperance Act amd strong friemis of the utmost prohilition than can le procurel, but who were of the opinion that the introluction of that clanse was not absolutely necessary. In speaking of that and other points I may say that I have not included in this Bill all the prosisions which a great many friends of the temperance cause were anxious to have included. and I have left them out for this reason, not that I did mot think well of the suggestions kindly made to me from a great many quarters, but because I did not think wise to encumber the proposal I brought before the House with several important suggestions, but which might tend to distract the attention of the House from the point immediately before them, I preferred as regarils legislation on that matter, to have one or two simple, clear and well-defined anemdments passed at a time, rather than to undertake too many, and by confusing the subject be liable to defeat such an amendment as the House might otherwise be inclinel to udopt. This leing the position of the Canada Temperance Act, and it having worked very favourably in a great many districts through. out various provinces, an amembment was brought in during l8S8, which I cannot hat believe had a very clamaging effect upon the minds of the ultra temperance element in those various districts, and tended very materially to impair the efficiency and gool working of the Act. The object of the Act was to prevent the sale of liguors which should be used as leverages. and to suromind the sale of those liguors or alcohol when they should he used for medicinal or sacramental purposes, or ie properly used in some art or trale, with such safeguarils as woull guarantee the pullic against improper use loeing marle of the other terms of the Act by those who should be licensed for that purpose. Ender the original Act, the only persons who could sell alcohol or intoxicating liquors in the districts to which I have referred, were druggists or licensed rendors thereof, specially licensed. The whole turning point of this antmbent depends upen this phrase, that the vembor, under the original Act, must have heen specially licensed for that purpose. The amendment of lass, among other things introlluced a new element into the sale of alcohol and intoxicating liguors. It provided that every chemist or druggist as such, hy virtue of his otfice as a chemist, should he ahle to occupy the position presionsly oreupied by a rendor specialiy incensed. This was deemed by many thoughtful observers a very dangerons provision, hecause, as hon. gentlemen must te very well aware, a large numher of chemists and druggists in various portions of the country were not strong temperance men, were not strongly interested in carefully considering all the siles they should make, and there was great laxity on the part of chemists and druggists who occupied the position of licensed vendors supplying liguors hecause they were chemists. The Act of 1888 introduced this newelement, thata chemist ordruggist hyvirtue of his office as such was placed in the same position as were those who were formerly specially licensed. When we consiler what a special license meant we can see that that in itself necessarily surroumded the sale of intoxicating liguors or alcohol which might be used for medicinal purposes with a very reasonable safeguard, hecause these gentlemen hail to be appointed by the Lientenant (iovernor of each province, and the Lieutenant (iovernor would only act upon the representation of local persons who would certify to those issuing licenses that the vendor was not a person to be entrusted with the dangerous power, from a temperance standpoint, which the Act gave him. The Act of 1888 , in alldition to permitting any chemists or cruggists to sell intoxicating liquors or alcohol, by virtue of his position as a chemist or druggist, proceeded to restrict the chemist or druggist in the sale of many articles which the strongest temperance men in this House would not consider by any means injurious to the public interest, and which they might be permitted to sell without surrounding them with all the restrictions and regulations which this amendment surrounded them with. To make clear the point that I am alluding to, I will read the ameniment of 1888 :
" Nothing in the Canada Temperance Act shall be held to interfere with the purchase or sale by legally qualified physicians, chemists or druggists of the following articles. that is to say:
"(a) The official preparations for the authorized pharmacopoeiss when made of full, medicinal strength and sold only for medicinal purposes."

I may say that in the Bill I am now proposing that clanse is left untomelien.
"(h) Physicians" prescriptions containing spirituous liquors, if sold in quantities of not more than ten ounces at any one time.

This clause I have omitted from the amendnent which I now propose, and for this reason: In the first place, the wording is very minfortunate, and that led to. and mast necessarily lead to, a large amount of discussion and produce a great deal of indefiniteness. I think it was unfortunately worded, and I think it was umecessary, because the Act as I have wordenl it in this Pill covers this irromb in language much hetter calculated to place the veniors in a letter position, letween the public cam those interested in the temperance cause. The Act siys:
" Physicians’ preseriptions containing spirituous liquors."
The "physicians" prescriptions" slo not contain spinituons liguors. The provision in regard to the quantity of ten ounces I have kept in the amemed Act. Clanse $r$ of the Act of INSEsays:
"Any patent medicine. unless such patent medicine is known to the vendor to be capable of being used as a beverage, the sale of which is a violation of the Canada Temperance Act.'
I hateretained this clanser in the measure hefore the House. Clause al says:
"Eau de cologne, bay rum, or other articles of perfumery, lotions, extracts, varnishes, tinctures, or other pharmaceutical preparations containing alcohol but not intended for use as beverages."
I have retained this clatuse in the measure before the House. Clanse realls:
"Alcohol or methylated spirits for pharmaceutical. chemical or mechanical uses.
I have struck out of this clanse the worl "alcohol." Now, if the House will imlulge me I will explain the present position of the druggist selling these articles. The Act of 188 s allows the clruggist to sell all these articles but insists that he should keep at record of them in a look with the name and address of the purchaser, the quantity and name of liguor, the medical man prescribing same, and the purpose for which it is reguired, and the book shall be kept open for inspection by the proposeal county inspector at all times. In the first place this apparent restriction is not a real restriction : it is not a proviso the violation of which can be punished liy any penalty ami it is practically a lead letter. But then if it were not a deal letter I think it is inadrisahle to compel ilruggists or chemists in counties where the Scott Act is in force to keep a record of the preparations of the anthorized pharmacopuia, patent medicine, ean de cologne and other such articles, lecanse none of the articles are at all obnoxious to the temperance community, and I think that druggists ought to be allowed to sell them without the present restrictions in the Act of 1888 . The consequence is that I throw the sale of these articles on the druggists without placing upon them any restrictions whatever, lecause in the first place, the present law does not create a restriction, in the second place if it did create a restriction, I believe it is practically impossible for any druggist to keep a record with any due regard to reasonable business rules; and, in the next place, I do not think it advisable from a temperance standpoint. But when we come to alcohol and spirituous liguors, then I think the full force of the principle of the original Canala Temperance Act should he made to apply to chemists and druggists to the same extent precisely as the original law contemplated to apply to the licensed vendors under this Act. This is the whole sum and substance of the Bill before the House. I provided in this Bill :
" ( $f$.) Spirituous liquors or alcohol for exclusively medical purnoses, or for lona fide use in some art, trade or manufacture; provided that such spirituous liquor or alcohol, when sold for medicinal purposes, shall not exceed in quantity ten ounces at any one time, and shall be removed from the premises, and that the sale the reof be made on the certificate or prescription of a legally qualified physician, affirming that such liquor or alcohol has been prescribed for the person named therein: provided also, that when such sale is for its use in some art, trade or manufacture, such sale shall be made only on a certificate signed by two justices of the peace, of the goowl faith of the application, accompanied by the affirmation of the applicant that such liquor or alcohol is to be used only for the purposes set forth in the application; privided further that the vendor shall file all such certiticates and prescriptions, and shall record every such sale in a book kept for that purpose, siving the name and address of the purchaser, the quantity of liquor or alcohol so sold. the name and address of the physician prescribing it, and of the person for whom it is prescribed, and of the justices whose names are appended to the certificate above referred to, and of the parpose for which the liquor or alcohol is, prescribed; and the said file and book shall be kept for inspection by the inspector for the county or district at all proper times: and the vendor shall make an annual return of all such sales on the 31st day of December in every year to the collector of Inland Revenue within whose revenue division the county or district is situated.'.
Althongh this clanse is some hat lengthy, and my explanation may not have been perfectly clear, i may state that it is the exact wording of the original Canada Temperance Act, as amented in Isss, with the exception of the words:
" That the person preseribing shall have no interest in the sale.
I repeat this clause in order to give it the benefit of all the decisions which have been held on the various points of that Act in the courts daring many years of its trial. Here I may olserve that one great lenefit of permanency of the Canadia Temperance Act arises from the fact that it has stom the test of a grod many trials at law, that every sentence and passage of that Act has been weigherl in courts of law, until these various provisions are now understood and well settled whereever the Act has heen carried through the courts. The reason why the Act has heen repealed in more than one district has arisen from the fact that owing to the weakness of the Act in the part I desire to anathd, many strong temperance people have hegun to. lelieve that it is not likely to carry ont the intentions of its original promoters. Therefore it is that I ask the House to allow the details of this Bill to le thresherl out in a committee, where the verbiage can perhaps be considered more carefully than in a general discussion. The main points of the Act apply to the sale of alcohol and spirituous liquors ly chemists and druggists, the reasonable restrictions originally applied when that sale was in the hanils of specially licensed vendors, leaving those chemists and druggists free and untrammelled in the sale of the articles which were alluded to in clauses $a, b, r$ and $\epsilon$, and which I believe temperance men did not genetally believe to be particularly harmful. There are unfortunately in every community persons uhose appetites have lecome depraved, who will make use of every sort of art and device to procure that which has done them such moral and physical h:um: and hy placing the chemists amd druggists in a position to insist on a proper certificate from a justice of the peace when alcohol or spirituons liynors are required for mechanical purposes, from clergymen in cases where wine is wathed for satramental purposes. or from physicians when alcohol or spirituous liguors are required for medicinal purposes, we are protecting not only the public fat the chemists and druggists, from being improperly charged, loy those who are suspicious of their attitule in relation to this matter, with violating the reasonable intentions of the promoters of temperance legislation. The lrok is to lee open for the inspection of the proper officers at proper times. and ia return is to be made to the collector of Inland Revenue in the district: and thas every public as well as private interest seems to le subserved. I trust and I believe, from the generons manner in which the principle of this Bill was received last nession, that it uill receive the same this session. It is a matter of comparatively small importance to a large number of hon. nembers, and of no importance to a great many more, in whose districts the Act is not in force. But I can assure them that in those communities where the Act is in force, and where the public are anxionsly watching the mamer in which it is administered, this amendment is reynived and will be of a grat deal of lenefit. It will surromin the sale of alcohol and spirituous ligurn's with the restrictions which were found wise and reasonable and prudent in the original Act, and which I lelieve will commend themselvesfavourably to all who have interested themselves in promoting temperance, so far as legislation of this kind can promote it. I think the ground has leen pretty well coverel : and if I have heen at all prolix, it is leceanse last session when this matter was hrought forward, my esteemed frienci, who is not now with us, but who, I am happy to say, has been promoted to a judgeship, and who was for a long time a leader in temperance matters here, did not understand my measure ; bat after discussion was had, and more light was thrown uponit, he threw the weight of his influence and his alility in support of it. therefore move the stcond reading, trusting that the Bill will go to at committee, where all minor points of verbiage can be discussel with greater freedom and perlaps with hetter effects than they conld in the House itself.
Motion agreed to, and Bill read the second time.

SUPPIC-THE BUIMETV.

Honse resmmed adjourned debate on motion of Mr. Foster :
That Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair for the House to go again into Committee of Supply.
Mr: BENNETT. Mr. Npeaker, in rising to address the House, I would crave that indulgence and forbearance which I believe is always extended to young and particularly new members of the House. I have listened, Sir, with I trust lecoming attention, to the Budget debate so far as it has proceeded; and I must say that, looking at it from my point of view, I regret that hon. gentlemen opposite have not seen fit to adrance sone reasons or some causes which might give the general public to understand why they have so greatly suffered in the recent general elections. Scarcely a year has passed away since the
hom. gentemen, thashed with victory--for victory seemed almost within their grasp-ciane before the House and asserted that but for certain reasons they would have been victorious in the tight on the 5th day of March, 1891. Sir, the reasons which were then potent to them are not to-day fortheoming. Notable and remarkable among those reasons was that the voters' lists had not been revised previous to those elections for some two or three years, and as a result, as stated by the hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright), one-tenth or one-eighth of the young men of Canada had not the opportunity of recoriing their votes aftirmatively or negatively on the policy of the then Aiministration of the day. Sir, the voters' lists have since then been revised, and the hon. gentlemen, I will be loound to say, lealt with them with all their usual vigour. But $I$ will say this, though $I$ am not in the secrets of hom. gentlemen opposite, that if they have a political litany, they will add to it a prayer that henceforth they will le spared from a revision of the voters lists. Nir, there has been a revision of the voters lists, and the answer has come back in clarion tones: and it ill-becomes these hon. gentlemen to tell comstituencies which they carried on the 5 th of March. 1891, that they have leen lxought up and led as sheep to the shambles. Sir, 1 suy that is an insult mond a slight to the comstituency which I have the homon to represent-a constituency which on the ith of March, 1891, was led away by the wild ary of free trade, ly the alluring spectacle presentel to it in glowing colours, lint which, on second solver thought, changed its opinion and placed me here as its representative. I say that hom. gentlemen opposite should not go back on those who supported then in Fast Nimeore for many years past. We were also told by the hom. member for West Lambton (Mr. Lister) that if the election had taken place after the ath of March last, the Government of the day would have heen defeated hy a majority of at least 6il. In reply I ask, if a general election were wo take place to-day, do any of the hon. gentlemen opposite think that they would again see the walls of this Parliament: The elections have taken place, and the voice of the people has leen heard clearly and unmistakably. And now, Sir, I too must confess that I was disappointed in the financial critic of hon. gentlemen opposite, for 1 assume that the hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) does hold that position in their ranks. I was disappointed in that he did not see fit to propound the doctrine he would place on our Statute-books concerning reciprocal trade with the people of the Unite:! States, should he once again grace the position of Finance Minister. It may le, perhaps, the hon. gentleman thinks he will never be called upon to fill that position, and therefore dowes not think it worth his while to formulate any proposition. In the matter of trade relations with the United States, 1 am pleased and disappointed that the negotiations have enden in the way they have. I regret that the people of the United Ntates, through their government, have seen fit not to enter into negotiations which perhaps might, on the whole, not be to their advantage or to ours, so that in the future we must need go on as we have gone in the past, each conceding, each forbearing, as from time to time the necessities of the case may reguire. I admit that hon. gentlemen opposite are not responsible for their pessimistic moan ings. Why, that has always distinguisherl the policy of that party, not only since but prior to Conferleration. When that work was taken in hand by the fathers of (confederation, was it not chiefly among the Reform leaders of the day that visions of trouble and disturbance were seen ahead! They told us that all the anticipations which the hon. gentlemen who composed the diovermment of the day hopen to realize would never be realized; they told us we never could possibly build a line of railway from ocean to ocean. Sir, these are now accomplished facts, and these facts to-day speak for themselves and speak most umistakably. Hon. gentlemen opposite have heen long in Opposition, and I concede it must have been to them a bitter disappointment when the victory which seemed so close within their grasp was snatched from them; and when they look to-day at their torn and tattered, aye, I might eren say mangled remmant of a once formidable opposition, I can quite understand they are prepareel to accept anything. What has been the policy of gentlemen opposite: On the pullic platform and in the public press they have from time to time statel that they were prepared to enter into a treaty of reciprocity with the people of the Cnitedstates, and they look back to the era of reciprocity which existed between these two countries from 1804 to 1864 , and institute a comparison, crying out that if once again that could be carried into effect, then once again would he seen in Camada an era of prosperity such as does not exist to-day. Sir, there are changed circumstances existing to-day as compared with those that existed then. Then the western States had not beenopened up as they are to-day. Then the output of grain, heef, and pork was almost nothing as compared with what it is to-day. Then there were certain causes which led to the development of this comntry. There was notably the construction of the Grand Trumk Railway, which involved the expenditure of many thousumd dollars. Also. in addition, it must be lorne in mind that the agricultural trade of the people of the Unitel States was, to a great extent paralysed, by their great internecine war ; and, moreover, it must be borne in mind that the Crimean war, which had onlv just terminated, had virtually stopped the traude of Russia, which is to-day one of the great exporting grain countries of the world. These are reasons which existed then and do not exist to day. Then it must be lorne in mind also that while they point to the fact that there was a vast export of grain from this comutry to the United States, we were then, by way of the United States, shipping large quantities of grain to the maritime provinces : and though that grain doubtless was Ironded, still it showed in the exports from Canada to the United States. Sir, I say that the circumstances have changed so much, that the figures prove most ummistakably that what would have been a market for us in those days is not our market to-day. Let us consider the articles of wheat and flour, and I take the year 1864 as a fair basis for comparison. In that year there was upwarils of $50,000,(00)$ bushels of wheat in store in Chicago, while in 1890 that had swelled to $227,000,000$ bushels. In 1864 there were
there was in stock $13,(N \times 1,(0) O)$ ond bushels, as against $91,($ OOO,OMO in 1890 . Then, turning to the matter of hogs, we find that in 1864 there were. in round numbers, $\mathbf{4 , ( 0 ) ( 0 ) , ( X N )}$ slaughtered in the city of Chicago, and in the west, as against $18,000,(100)$ in 1890 . Surely hon. gentlenen opprsite will not contemd that to-lay there is a market in the United States for the surplus pork of this country: Sir, I hat the pleasure the other diay of being present with a representative delegation which waited on the Minister of Finance-a delegation not composed of Conservatives or Reformers, hut made up of representative men from hoth political groups -.-amd they demonstrated clearly, to the satisfaction of the Minister of Finance, that we in Canada were suffering, and severely suffering, from the importation of pork into this comutry from the United States. If we take the matter of lreef, hom. gentlemen opposite will harily assert from their place, where they can be contradicten successfully, that we can for one moment hope to enter into active competition with the people of the western states in this matter. If we did enter into a policy of reciprocity, our markets would be virtually a slaughter market for their loef, pork, oats and corn. Where would the farmers of this comnty the then as regards their coarse grain? It is all rery well for hon. gentlemen to appeal to, the farmers of this conntry, hecause they know they are the onily ciass to which ciney can appeail with the shadow of a hope of success. They will not appeal to the manufacturing interest or to the labour interests. Certainly not to the labour interests, for these interests will hear in mind the fact that once upon a time a Reform Administration held power in Canala, from 1873 to 1878 , when nought save depression and stagnation stalked through the land, and the reminiscences of that time have been sufficient to relegate hom. gentlemen opposite to where they have been since, in the cold shades of opposition. Now, I do not propose togo into the matter of agricultural products to any great extent : but representing an agricultural constituency, I think it is my boumlen duty to express the sentiments my constituents holed and to which I owe their confidence, for you will bear in mind that that constituency was formerly confirmed in political allegiance to hon. gentlemen opposite. But we are told that there is a vast market among these : $0,(\mathrm{KN}, \mathbf{O}(0)$ people for our products. Hon. gentlemen opposite, however, do not lring out, at they fairly should, the fact that there are only certain portions of the United States to which we could hope to export successfully. Will the hon. gentlemeni tell us that we could hope successfully to ship, to the southern States, aye, even to the western States? We might, perchance, ship to some of the eastern States, but that market would be a little one compared with the market they exclain is lying ready to le opened to us. Again, let us take the matter of butter. I find on reference to the statistics, that in 186i5, there arrived in Chicago and were on store there some $\overline{3},(100),(010)$ pounds of butter, and in 1890 , that had risen to $156,0 \mathrm{ONO},(\mathrm{MNO}$ pounds, and yet, forsooth, hon. gentlemen tell us that is the market to which we can ship, to-lay. Is it not a fact that the people of the United states are shipping to other countries, and does it lie within the hounds of reason that we could have a profitable market where the people themselves are contimally shipping to other lames: The hom. member for south Oxforl (Sir Richard (artwright) went rather extensively into the matter of the census, and 1 take issue with him on some of the prints he made. The census shows that in East simeoe there was a gain of $\mathbf{8 , f o k}$ (in the last ten years, and if hom. yentlemen would take constituency by constitnency, they would find reamons for a lecrease or an increase in the population. The hom. gentleman toxk into comparison certain states of the Union, hut 1 can prove to him that the whole of the Cuited states are mot as prosperous as he imagines, but rather on the other hand. that they are retrograding insteal of adramoing. Take the Inomer comaties of Glengary, Stormont, Dundas, Leeds and Frontenace aml we find that in those comoties there has heen an increase in the population. while on the other side of the river, with an equally stubrions climate and as fairly sown soil, there has heen a lecrease in the popmaitime : and it is notorions that there is ne part of the world which has more decreased in the popmation than the farming districts in some of the eastem states. The figures prove that elearly and umistakally. To retmon to my own riling, we find that every town in the riding has increased in propulation. anl I say it is a fair test of the prosperity of the conntry when towns and cities and villages increase in population. Do hom. ge"tlemen expect that old settled townships are going to intetase: I have a case in my own riding. The only township in which there has inen a decrease in the last ten years is the richest and most populoms townshipin the riding. That provessimply this, that. after the farm has been cleared up, when three or four beys have heen hrought up there, it would be folly or idleness on the part of the parent to divide the farm among them: so some go out to the cities and towns, and 1 am glad to say that in that township many have gome to the great North-West and are doing well there. But, if the hom. sentlemen will make a comparison, they will take the ohler states of $t^{t}$ e Union to compare with our older provinces. Will the hon. gentlemen gainsay the statement that our North-West is developing and advancing: I think we should le proul of our North-West, aml I think that. irrespective of politics, we are all promd of the development of that great country, a country which ten years ags was not exporting a bushel of grain and is now exporting millions of bushels, anl it is imporssible to sity what the output of grain will le in the next two decales. Therefore, if we are not increasing in the oller provinces as much as we would wish, it should be the aim and the olject of hon. gentlemen opposite to come here in an amicable mood lecause I think they have appeared to be rather in a lellicose mood-and to join with the fiovermment in attempting to improve the condition of the country and to promote its prosperity. What is the general prosperity of the comntry irrespective of what we see? Hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House assert that the farmers are in it depressed condition. The hon. member for North Wentworth (Mr. Bain) was present in my riding during the election, though I do not attribute the defeat of my opponent to hispresence there, but I am sure he will not say that in Fast Simeoe he saw any evidence of ruin or devastation, or that the whole country was going to wreck. If anyone will go through the whole province, his experience will he different from that which has been announced by the financial eritic of the Opposition. If that hon. gentleman visits the County of Victoria, he says, you are peeculiarly favoured here and consequently you are prosperons. When he goes to that asylum of refuge, south Oxford, for it is a political asylum for all on the Opposition side of the Honse, he does not feel free to tell the farmers of that district that they are in a pitiable or lamentalle combition. On the whole, the country is fairly properous. and that is shown by the financial statements which are made from time to time: and, moreover, I helieve this country is a cheap country to live in. Perhaps in Ontario the diovernment might improve our comlition in some respects. I lelieve there is a class of immigration that could be directed to our country from the old lam, hecause 1 believe there is a feeling amongst many there arerse to settlement in the North-West, that is on the part of tenant farmers and others who would prefer to settle in Ontario. aml I throw it ont as a suggestion and my opinion. that. if the dovermment would endeavour to direct that class of immigration to this comery they would lee doing a benefit mot only to the immigrauts themselves. hat also to the Province of Ontario. To come down to the matter as it is presented to our view, and to the view of the people of the Dminion in regarl to our relation with the Cnited States, we have at last received their ultimatum. and we know what they are prepared to do.
 selves as lest we cam. From the experience of the past i helieve that we will prosper in the future. and that, ats we have found a market for our agricoltural prolucts in lireat Britain, and that is a friendly market, our interests will grow and will thrive. Let us take the matter as it is placel before us, let us look at nur ine citable destiny as we must. and we have the choice between a polic; of independence, amexation, of following the policy we have followed in the past, improving that from time totime. I do not believe that the people of this country are ready for independence, becanse it would carry with it, such attenlant circumstances that they could not face the dilemma that would ine presented. We are not in a position, I melieve, to undertake the great responsibility that would loe incidental to our condition as an independent people. Moreover and leyoud that, I helieve there is a feeling of sympathy witin the mother laml that will disincline any of us to look forward to making independence our platform or our aim. Then, Sir, in the natter of amexation, I have only to say that I helieve I voice the sentiments of the general public in Canala when I say that they are averse, they are opposed, to any form of amexation with the United States. And in this regard I think we may look upon them as entertaining a desire to force us into mion, because we know they hare always held up as their watchword that ## - No pent up Ltica confines our powers.  > The whole boundless continent is vurs."   The whole boundless continent is vurs."

   The whole boundless continent is vurs."}That principle, I am bomend to say, they have acterl upon to a great extent in the past. Why. Sir, they picked a quarrel once with Nexico, and as a result they became possessors of California. Louisiana was gained by them, it is true, by purchase, but owing to fillibustering expelitions, and I believe by marauders in the state of Texas, they finally became possessors of that also. Therefore, I siy

we have no interest up to the present time, guided as we are by our success in the past, to adopt the policy of annexation. And why should we? Sir, I believe that we have within our country the elements of future success. We have seen Canala grow, we have seen her prosper, we have seen the scattered provinces, with diverse interests, welled and Blemled together in one mighty Confederation ; we have seen them go on day hy day, prospering and thriving, and, looking hack at our past, why should we not look forward hopefully to the future? In our country we have a populous and thriving agricultural class, a class who compare favourably with the agriculturiats of any land umber the sum ; we have manufacturing interests which, I will be bound to say, treat the general public fairly and honestly; for although hon. gentlemen opposite assert from time to time that the manufacturers of this country are making princely fortunes, still I am bound to say that there is no country where, as a rule, prices are fairer, prices are more general. Why, sir, if it is a fact that the prices olbtained hy our mamufact wers for their soonls are so excessively high, how is it that hon. gentlemen opposite-because there are many of them who are wealthy-they do not, with a view to assisting and bettering the condition of the comntry, invest some of this selfsame wealth in our manufacturing industries? But. Sir, that is not the case. I say that comparing the prices of mannfactured gools in this country with the prices of manufactured gools in other countries. competition has heen so fair that it has reduced prices, so that purchasers are not placed at at great disadvantage. Now, I do not propose to exhume old newspaper files. I do not propose to inflict long tables of figures upon the House, letcause I lelieve that, looking failly at the facts, as wayfarers by the path-side of observation, we are able to see within our borders what is going on. Then, Nir, I sily, looking airout us, we must arrive at the conclusion that the people of the country are satisfied with the prosperity that now exists and that has heen clearly establishen, not only at the general elections but particularly at the byeelections which bave recently been held. As a Canalian I am proud of the lam which gave me birth, and I look forward with all the fond anticipations that the forefathers of Conferleration inclulged in its to its future. As a Canarian $I$ am proud of the mother land which guarantees to us freedom, liberty and equality, all that a happy and prosperous people can ask for, ever keeping lefore us, as our beacou lights, progress, prosperity, perseverance and a perpetuation of those bonds by which we are indissolubly linked to the mother lancl.

Mr. McMULLEN. I did not intend to take up the time of the House at this early periol of the dehate in discussing questions of such vital interest to this country as were discussed last evening ; but I find that I cannot, in justice to myself, and the constituency I represent, allow this opportunity to pass without, at least, expressing my views upon the all-importunt guestions that are before this House and the comitry at the present moment. Now, Sir, I was rather surprised at the announcement made by the hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat (Mr. Bennett). He said that he was pleased with the manner in which the Mr. Beniett.
discussion at ${ }^{W}$ ashington had closed, he was satisfied with the results that had leen attained. I noticed last night when the Finance Minister ad. dressed this House, intimating the conclusion at which they had arrived with regard to these nego, tiations, that hon. gentlemen opposite almost unanimously emiorsed and applauled the action of the Finance Minister and the happy results to which he had brought negotiations at Wiasfington. It is quite evident, I think, to the people of this country that the Finance Minister did not go to Washington with a determination to secure a reciprocity treaty at all. He went there for the purpose of trying to prevent a reciprocity treaty being further pressed upon the consideration of the people of this country or upon the people of the United States: he went for the purpose of frustrating completely the possibility of any extemded trade relations being enterel into between that country and Canala. He has eome back, amh henow declares that he is satistied, the negotiations have all closed, and the whole thing has now come to an end, and it has come to that end which is satisfactory to hon. gentlemen opposite, and they now say to the people of this comatry : Rest imil be quiet, he still, you are not going to have any reciprocity yet. just accept things as they are. Now, that is the eonclusion to which they have come. Well. Sir, I rather fancy that he will fimd that the people of this country will not oley the behests of my hom. friend the Finance Minister : they will not he willing to accept his conclusions and to allow the affatios of this country to drift on in the way the a are drifting at the present moment. Withoint making some further and better effort than he has put forth at Wishington, in orler to secure trade relations. Now. it was rather amusing to me to listen to some of the hom. gentlemen opposite announcing from the stump their views and the competition to which the farmers of this country would he subjected under a treaty the some as we had in lint to IRific. They have, on all occasions, printed out to the farmers how they woull he sulject to competition with the prolucts of the United States coming in here under a treaty such as we hat during that period, and that this country would he, as my hon. friend who has just aldressed the House, has de clared, a slaughter marke for the surplus products of the United States. While they have been preaching that on the stump, while they have been telling the people of Camada that they would suffer very serionsly by a treaty of that kinl, at the very sime moment Ministers if the Grown are down at Wiashington offering to the people of the United Nitates a trate arrangement in respect to that very class of prolucts. The Ministers go to Washington and say we are willing to do that, while their stump orators at home go roumd addressing the people, declaring that we would be subjecten to excessive competition if American products were allowed to come into Canada and to compete with our products. I think hon. gentlemen opposite shoull get together and patch up the doctrines, views and ideas that they hold upon the question of trade relations with the United States. They had better either decide to adhere to the view laid down by the Minister of Finance or the Minister of Finance had better decide to change his position and bring it more in accordance with the views expressed by his supporters, becuuse there is a very serious divergence between the two. The hon. gentleman spoke sonething with respect to the impossibility of cur shipping our products to the sonthern States. The hon. gentleman appears to have entirely for got ten the enomous market that is a a ailable within a reasonable distance without going to the south. The year before last we shipped 360,0 , (M) lamls or $1,(X K)$ for every day in the year to the United States. If the hom. gentleman will turn up the statistics of consumption in New York he will tind they consume there alone orer $2,0(x),(0 X)$ lambs a year ; so that we in Canada could not supply more than one-sixth they repuire. That city is not in the southern States; there are, in fact, a number of cities which might be conveniently reachen, in which we could alvantageonsly dispose of a great many of the commodities we raise in this country, and for which our farmers are seeking an opening. I was amused last night to listen to the Minister of Finance quoting the enormous quantities of potatoes importell into (ireat Britain, and in order to fill his nouth with figures of enormous quantities he gave the number of pounls of potatoes imported there every year. Perhaps next time he makes his financial statement he will give the number of ounces, in order to make the numbers larger. I might state to the hom. gentleman for his information that if he will turn up the trade returns of the United states he will tind a very large quantity was imported from Liverpool into New York last year. A friend of mine came over in March last on a steamer from Liverperel to New York which carried 110 tons of potatoes.
Mr. MILLS: (Fothwell). Give the quantity in pounds.
Mr. HeMULLEN. The fact is the quantity in pounds would he a very large amount. I leave the Ninister of Finance to figure out the number of pounds.
Mr. FOSTER. (iive it in drachms.
Mr. Mombllen. The vinister of Finance urges our farmers to ship their potatoes to Liverpool, when they are shipped from there to New Fork, which is twenty four hours run from here, and which market we could obtain under a reciprocity treaty. I contend that while the British market is an open market to us, after all it is the slaughter market of the worll. Hon. gentlemen opposite speak of the British as a free market for the agricultural prolucts of Canala. That market is, however, as free to the Cuited States as Canala except as regards fat cattle, on which we have a little alvantage: but beyond that we have not a vestige of idvantage over the United States or any other country. It is folly to speak of the British market being a free market to the people of Canala when it is free to all the rest of the world. The hon. gentleman said something about our people going to our North-W est. I am very glad indeed that a number of Canadians are going to the NorthWest, but I am exceedingly sorry to have to state that a number of Canadians are still going to the western States. When at home a short time ago I saw three young men learing for Dakota, one of whom was taking a wife with him.
Some hon. MEMBERS. Name, name.
Mr. McMLLLEN. I can give the names. They are Mr. Davis and his brother and Mr. Temple. If hon. gentlemen would like to have the name of the lady, I can give it. They were going to Dakota to settle there. I can say further that I have seen young men, and old ones too, who at the last election cheered the old flag, the old policy and the old man, and within two or three weeks I saw their traps checkel to go to the north-westernstates. They were all ready to go to Uncle Sam's dominions, and yet they were shouting themselves hoarse during the election alsout the oll man and the old flag. These people will come lack no doult to vote at the bye-elections. No doubt the hom. member for East Simeoe (Mr. Bennett) hatl a number of them from the North-West, and though he may not be fully cognizant as to how they got back, he knows they got lack when he wanted them. He siaid something alwout the products of the North.West. We are aware that the North-West has exported considerable products, but the vicious policy allopted by hom. gentlemen opposite with respect to, that comntry is a very serions check to its development. The Govermment sold the lam! to speculators. Aromed Winnipey you may find almost any quantity held to-day hy spe ulators and not a soul living on it: hardly any one knows who holds it. it is held by a number of speculators to whom it was sold. Then the Government established a lot of colonization companies who have locked np, land. Then they gave $2,0,(M x),(0 \times N)$ of acres to the Canadian Pacitic Railway Company, and I contem that, instemd of doing that, they should have made the land sulject to it mortgage of soo much an acre, and controlled the land and given it to the actual settler, and allowed whever wanted to go in and possess the land and cultivate it to have an opportunity to do so. But in place of doing that, what does the man going to the NorthWest find to-day" He steps upon a section and desires to secure it : he is told that it lelongs to a colonization company. He steps upm another section and is ready to take it ; the answer that he receives is that it lielongs to the Canadian Pacitic Railway Company. He steps on another section: he is told that it belongs to the Hudson hay Company. He goes on another section ; he is tuld that he camot secure it, because it was sold several years ago to a speculator. The man goes across the line and settles in North Dikota, where he can get whatever section he wants on which to settle. The abominable policy of this Government in relation to the North-West has cursed that country.

Mr. Wallace (York). Is the hon. gentleman not aware that every even-numbered section of colonization and all other lamds is open to homestead and pre-emption, and camnot be lought ly any individual:

Mr. McMCLLEN. I am anare that certain portions of the conntry are reservel for pre-emption but there are certain sections in which you camot find any land which you can secure. If the Minister of the Interior were here, he would have to admit that even the ranching companies have been turning people off the lands and pulling down their honses. I admit I have not gone into spectilating in the North-West, or else I might le as well posted as is the hon. gentleman. That is one of the unfortmate things commected with the North-West Territories. I do not wish further to refer to my hon. friend who has just addressed the House. I compliment him upou his first effort, which was a fairly goorl one, although it was nothing but the stock amd stale argments which we have been accastomed to hear for several years. I hope that if he is permitted the pleasure and privilege of remaining in this House that he will try to catch up with the questions that are now heing discussed in the country, and not go so far back in the history for his arguments as he has gone to-uight. My hon. friend the Minister of Finance matie some reference in his speech to the reduction of interest. He told us that in four rears the interest on the public delst was reduced $S H(x, O M)$ and he kind of clamed credit for that reluction. We all know that the reduction is because the loans which we held on Lombon market and otherwise, learing large rates of interest have matured, and thiat the rate of interest at which money has heen bormwed in recent years has been less than formerly. This is the cause of that reduction, and it is not on account of any particular efforts whatever on the part of the Minister of Finance. That reduction would have taken place no matter what kind of a man we hat in his position or how stupid he pessibly might le, if he only knew enough to allow the financial machine of this I Dominion to rum it. self. As ohl loms at high interest get catncelled and new ones are issued at a low rate of interest, the rate of interest will fall, and every child knows that. The Minister of Finance told us with regard to the gross interest that in 1889 it was $3 \cdot+10$ per cent and in $1890,3 \cdot 3.2$ per cent and in $1891,2 \cdot 08$ per cent. Then he goes on to give the interest par 1801, sl.76. That reduction is atrihutable to the same callse as I have stated with regard to the gross amount of interest, lecanse if the rate of interest falls the gross amount ${ }^{\prime \prime \prime} \cdot{ }^{\prime \prime}$ rapitn must of necessity decrease. However, the Minister of Finance foes not do us justice in that statement, because he takes the year 1888 and he gives as the firs rapita of that year losed upon the ohl census, while he gives us the 1 "'. rapita interest of 1801 , based upon the new census, and, conseguently, in that way, he makes a little more reduction than if he followed out the other conse. The Minister of Finance also told us last year that the savings banks deposits were reduced by $51,043,892$. Well, Sir, we can go back to the time in this House when hom. gentlemen opposite userl to crow rery loudly over the evilences of prosperity as shown by the increase in the Post Office savings banks. They pointed out from year to year that if there was any one thing above another that is a positive evitence of the improved financial condition of this country, it was the increased sums that were deposited in the savings banks. That was their stock-in-trade aremment for several years. We did not hear it from the Minister of Finance this year, but he turned to the other banks and told us that it the money was not in the savings lanks it was in the other banks of the Dominion. It would seen from the statement presented hy the Minister of Finance that the people are lieginning to lose a little confirlence in the responsibility of the (iovernment of this comntry. They begin to think that, after all, the chartered banks of this country are safer. They have seen so much of the exposures that have taken place in this Honse during the last session, the stealing that has bein carried on, and the evidence of corrupt acts that lave ieen brought to light, that I dare sty a mumber of the people are leginning to think that their little swings in the Post Office savings hanks are not quite sate, amb the result is that last year they have withdrawn $\$ 1,016 n,(K N O$ from the care of the liovernment, for fear, perhaps, they might lose their little all, if hom. sentlemen opposite hy some roundabout was should dip their hamls a little deeper into the public chest. The Dinister of Finance, after giving us some figures with regarel th the exports of our agricultural prohucts, went on to treat on the pues. tion of a reciprocity treaty. I consider that was the most important patt of the hon. gentleman:statement last night. In the tirst place he said:

> "In conference with Mr. Blaine the Canadian delegates proposed as an basis for negotiations the Recinrocits Treaty of 385 with such modifications and extensions as the changed condition of the country might render necessary."

He made that proposition, aml as I have already stated while hewas making that proposition in Wiash. ington. his supporters at home were declaring to the farmers of this country that it would ruin them. In the secoml place die says:
"They were met with the reply hy Mr. Blane, that looking into a treaty bused upon uatural products alone had not in it the essential clements of reciprocits.:
That is the position that Mr. Blane took upon that question and it is in accord with the expressions that nave been made by members on this side of the Hoase, that reciprocity on the hasis of the old treaty could not pressibly be hat with the people of the United States. The Minister of Finance continues:
"He raised the question as didalso (ieneral Foster, wh" was his condjutor in the conference, as to whether we were prepared to meet a proposal which would gro wider than narural products, and take in and inelude a general reciprocity in manufactured articles as well. When that point came up the Canadian delegation immediately raised the question and disenssed it fully and freely with Mr. Blaine, as to what would lee the necessary condition: of such a reciprocity."
These gentlemen who went to Wishington appear to have given so little consideration to this whole question notwithstambing the efforts that have been made to show the outcome of such an arrangement between us and the United states. that they went to Mr. Bhane and atknowlealged to him that they did not know what reeiprocity of an extemided character meant, how it could be brought about, and rather than learn from those who were prepared to tell them at home, they went to the feet of the Linited states diamaliel to ask him to teach them how to make a reciprocity treaty, and they have admitted that when they went there they knew nothing at all alont it. The Minister of Finance further saly :
"The reply came, after a full discussion of the matter. that a reciprocity would not be a reciprocity, and would have no compensating ad vantages to the United States of America unless they were given preferential treatment in our markets, especially against Great Britain, which was their chief competitor in nearly every line of manufactured goods, that under any scheme of reciprocits which would be looked upon favourably by them, the United States would expect to compete with Canadian manufactures in Canadian markets on even terms, hut with no others. Well, when that point was reached. discussion took place as to the difficulties to be met hy Canada in subscribing to a treaty of that kind, and they were fully and frankly laid betore Mr. Blaine. They were, in brief, these: that in going into a treaty of that kind we should stand to lose what we were less able to lose than the United States of America, a considerable proportion of our revenue. first, the eight millions or so which we collected upon the products of the Enited States that came into Canada ; and, secondly. the diminu-fion, whaterer it might be, which would result in the imports from the outside world owing to the competition and ent rance of Cinited States gonds free of duty into our comery. Mr. Blaine raised the question whether we had not other methuds of taxation. We explained that we had methods of taxation by internal revenue as they themselves had, unon which he remarked that it would be necessary in at treaty of this kind that these iuland revenue duties on liquore and mbarens shombla be eyualized."
He gres on to sity :
"We raised the guestion, after a full and thorough discussion of thinge of wur difficultice and presented them plainly. At this point another question came up. Suppose that Canadr were willing to diseriminate against the grods of the outside world and of Great Britain on this proposed hasis of a treaty, who shonld fix the discrimination and what should be the measure of that diserimimation ?"
Now, it is quite clear from the mamer in which all these questions were put by the delegation from this country, that they were put for the purpose of hampering the United Ntates and frustrating the possibility of their accepting any terms upon Which extemben tanle relations conld te secured. The ('anadian Ministers went there with their mouths fuil of arguments in opposition to reciprodity. They presented the lifticult side of the whole problem : but they never mate a single attempt to point a way out of the ditticulties.

Mr. MLISOKK. Mr. Speaker. I summit that my hom. friend is entithed to a little comotesy from the other side.
Mr. Mr.MCLLAFS. I donot mind the actions of the ex-Minister of (ustoms. 1 am accustomed to that kind of thing.

Mr. BOWVELL. Cou are maler the protection of the hon. member for North Fork (Mr. Mulock).

Mr. Mr•MCUIL.F.V. The hom. Minister of Finance says further:

- Well, sir, this question passed on in discussion until we had pretty well exhatistell the sul, iect, when he Canadian delegates, after haring presented these difficulties and canrassed them fairly and thoroughly, said to Mr. Blaine: These are our litficulties: von ackuowledge them, Now, you have had large experience in framing reciprocity treaties and have had much to do in the study and arrangenents of reciprosal matter: : we lay these ponts before you and we ask you whether or not, out of your experience, you cunnot he prepared to propose a modification of this basis in order that we may diminish, at least th some extent, the difliculites we are under."
Now, Sir, it is yuite clear that the (imadian delegation went there to raise all the difficulties they possibly conll, but they offered no suggestion for rensoving any of those difficulties. Then they tumed aromil and said to Mr. Blaine: "You have hat a goobl deal of experience, Mr. Blane, in making tranle treaties; we acknowlerlge our difficultios; the one thing that stamds in the way is the losis of revenue: in making this statenient we almit that reciprocity would lee of decided adrantage to Cinada : and we shall willingly assent to enlarge trade relations if you will show us how to raise the money necessary to meet the demands on our treasury. The money consideration is all that troubles us. The future prosperity of the farming population, or the ruestion of enlargel markets for the manufacturers, does not concern us at all. If you will point ont the way in which we can escape the revenue diticulty, we are prepareal to negotiate with yon. That was practically the proposition they made. But, Mr. Blaine didnot help them ont of the wools. I have no iloult that-he looked upon them with pity, perhaps mingled with a little contempt, istomished that men from another nation would come to negotiate a trale treaty aml confess that they had so little resources in themselves for levising a satisfactory tranle policy, that they had to ask his alvice as to how they could escape the lifficulty. That was virtually the position they took on this important guestion. Now, I contenil that the farmers of this comitry will not allow this matter to rest where it is. Their past experience of the alvantages of the American market was such that they will not lee content to be put off in the wily the Finance Minister proposes to put them off. Those mbantages the farmers of this country are longing to realize again. Linder the reciprocity treaty of IN.i4 fitj we had prosperity in this comaty: but since the inception of the National Policy, twelve of thirteen years ago, the farmers of this country have heen growin! poorer. Notwithstamling the statements manle hy lom. gentlemen opposite. I maintain that there is mot a farming section of this conntry to-diay where the people genematly are in as prosperous at condition as they were some years ago. Jou will timl more mortgages recorded, more farms for sale. The best evidence of the imporerished comlition of any class of men is fomm in their desire to sellout and leave the comontry ; it is pretty gome cridence that they are mot satistied with the comblition of things in the country where they live: :and that is the comalition of the farmers of (imatat to-lay. There are more farmers really and willing and anxious to sell ont than there ever were in (anada before. I can remember when many farmers of this comitry woulh hesitate to put a value on their farm, and hefore you could buy it you would have to pay a fancy price for it. But to-day in any farming distriet in the comatry if you call at any farm house and ask: "Is your farm for sale?" the owner will say "yes," and will he glad to enter into negotiation at onee. That has been the experience for the last twelve or thirteen years, during which theproducts of thefamshavebeenshrinkingin value. Our farmers have not been receiving the prices they did yearsaro. 'There were then many articles which they could sell in the United states at goonl prices. But oo-rlay that market is closed against them, and hon. gentlemen opposite do not seem to have any pity for them at all. The Finance Minister satys: (ientlemen. the thing is now settled and fixed, and you must look forward to the present condition of things remaining just as it is. This reminds me of a story which $I$ heard of a sonthern planter who had moved up to Dakota. His great business was to raise hogs, which in the south he had heen accustomed to feed on corn. But in Dakota he found the frost so strong that it killed the corn : so he made up his mind that he would raise potatoes instead of com. He planted u large quantity, and he deciled that he woulh save himself the trouble of taking up the potatioes by allowing the hogs to go in anong them when they were about ripe, and let them root. A neighlour said to him: "What will you dos when the frost comes: Your hogs will not le able to raise the potatoes then." "Well," sairl he, "that is a problem I never thought of. I suppose we shall have an object lesson of the old adage, 'root, hog, or lie.'" That is what it is going to come to with the farmers of Canada. While the McKinley Bill has frozen the farmers of this comntry out of the American market, hon. gentlemen opposite are not trying to get any other market for them, and I suppose in their case we shall have the olject lesson of root, hog, or die. These hon. gentlemen propose to do nothing, and the result is that our farmers have to sell what they raise in the slaughter market of Great Britain, and take there whatever they can get for it. That is the position we are placed in to-day. Now, to give you some little idea of what the American market has been worth to the farmers of this comutry, I shall give you some guotations of the shipments of produce to that country during the last ten years. We exported to the United States 9,939, , 4 a bushels of barley in 1890, and in that year we only exported to England $2 \overline{2},(\mathrm{ONO}$ ). In 1891 our. exports of barley to the United States fell to just one-half. We only exported 4, i.in, (MK) hushels, and during the same perionl we exported $1: 32,(x)$ bushels to (Great Britain. So that our export of barley fell off, under the operation of the McKinley Bill. which only came into operation the (ith of October, 1891, 50 ) per cent. Now, from 1881 to 1891, we exported to the United states to the amount of $\$ 61,818,512$. We drew charing the same time over $\mathbf{s e 2}(0,000,(0 \times 1)$ in gold for horses. Now, hom. gentlemen opposite say to us we will send our horses to England-that is the market for our horses ; but if you will take the trade returns for 1891, you will find we sent to Great Britain © 94 horses, hut took from fireat Britain in the stane period $1,21 \%$ horses, so that in place of Great Britain being a market for Canalian horses, (anala is a market for cireat Britain, since we take more horses from them than we send them. We sent every year, previous to the passage of the McKinley Bill, from $|x,(x)|$ to $2(0), 0(N)$ horses, and last year, under the operation of that Bill, we shipped to the United States 6,019 horses less than we shipped the year before. Now, I give my hom. friends a statencont with regard to potatoes, and am sory the Finance Minister is not in his place, because he gave us some quotations with regard to potatoes last night. From 1st Octoher to 1st April, 1s91, we shipperl two and a 'fluarter million bushels of potatees. Out of that Ituantity, we sent $1,850,000$ bushels to the United states. in order to get which across, under the operation of the McKinley Bill, we paid $\$ 437,(06)$ duty. Now, what we are anxious for, and labouring to secure, is the removal of that duty. We are anxious to secure that market, for notwithstanding the fact that the McKinley Bill was in force last year, our farmers were compelled to semd their potatoes to the American market and pay ${ }^{2}$, cents duty per bushel, rather than send them to the English market. because in the English market they got the bottom price. What is the botton price? It was arranged at a figure which enabled Englislmen to reship those potatoes to the New York market, and pay 2. cents a bushel to get them in, and sell them at a profit. Still the Finance Minister would advise us to send all our commodities to the English market. Now, I contend, notwithstanding the statement the Finance Minister has made, that the farmers of this comtry are not going to be satisfied with the condition of things as they are now. While the United States are finding better and more extensive markets for their people, the Govermment of Canada are at a standstill. They have no made a single treaty within the last year, or in any way opened up a new outlet for the products of the farm. We have had promises with regard to a treaty leing made with Spain, but we have realized nothing. We are always being promised new treaties of one kind or another, and we get nothing but the promises. We sent the Minister of Finance away to the West India Islands for the purpose of securing a treaty with Jamaica. He went down at considerable expense to that country. He told the people what he was willing to do, and when he came lack here he did the very opposite. He was to admit raw sugar in exchange for their admission of commodities we proposed to send them, such as farm proluce. hut when he came back the sugar refiners said they would never consent to all sugars under 16 Dutch standard coming into the country free, as it would ruin their trale, by catting off a very large amome which they would otherwise realize from the consumers of the country. Thas he hal to come down to 14 Dutch standard in place of 16 . There was a market which we could havegot forsme of ourcommodities, but which, owing to the vacillation of the Minister of Finance, we have lost. Now, we knew well that under the operations of the present tariff, in place of the farmers of this comutry lecoming better off they are getting worse off. We know that five of the largest implement manufacturing institutions of this comntry have formed a combine recently in the production of binders. We know that to-day binders are leing manufactured in this country under a combine, and the farmers will just have to pay the price that combine is disposel to ask, and there will be no reduction. I have no doubt that there are combines on the other side, too, but while they have combines to arrange prices at which they will sell to their own people, they have at the same time reduced prices at which they are willing to sell to exporters, and we want the adrantage of securing that. Another question which has been discussed in this dehate, and one of considerable interest, is the question of binding twine. That was up last year, and there is a notice on the paper this year urging the alvisability of placing it on the free list. I consider binding twine just as mach raw material of the farmer as twine is of the fisherman. The fisherman is permitted to import twine for fishing purposes free of duty. In the name of common sense, why are not the farmers permitted to import twine for their work on the same conditions? Again, I contend that they should be allowed to import corn. If hom. gentlenien opposite would put corn on the free list and place farmers in the position of being able to get a very much greater amount of feed for cattle, that would be a decided advantage, because now it is quite evident that the only outlet they have for their stock is the British market, and the placing of corn on the free list would facilitate the production of fat stock, and thus le it decided advantage. Such acts as these would be in the right direction, but the only object and aim of hon. gentlemen opposite was to give a quietus to this agitation with regard to unrestricted reciprocity. They felt that it was a disturbing element in the country, they felt that the farmers were begiming to realize that some relief would have to come from some source, and I am quite satisfied that had the speech of the Finance Minister been made before sume of the bye-elections, some of the constituencies which sent men here to support the Government would have sent supporters of the Opposition. I know there are hundreds of ('onservatives in this country, now looking forward, hopefully and earnestly, to the ultimate consmmmation of reciprocity with the United States. If hon. gentlemen opposite were not scared that the people of this conntry were sincere in this demame, why did they humbug the people by announcing in March, $18: 1$, that on the th of March they were going to send a delegation to Washington to negotiate a treaty. That was the reason they gave to the comitry for holding the elections at the time they did. They went to Wishington, and they saw, aml they returned. A few moments satisfied them on that occasion. They did not accomplish the object of their mission but they fancy they have struck the nail on the head this time. They have so completely prevented, as the member for Houth Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) said last night, they have so lolted the door, locked it and pocketed the key that they think no further effort can le or will be made to obtain extencled trade relations with that country. There has been it good deal said in this House and outside of it as to the value of lamls. It is for every man to give his personal experionce as to whether there has leen an increase or shrinkage in the value of lands throughout this Province of Ontario. I speak for myself and from my own knowledge. Alront two and a half miles from where I live, there was a farm which thirteen years ago was vahed at $\$ 4,2(n)$. There was a barn there which was afterwarda burnt down. This farm was purchased for $\$ 4,2$ (x). and a mortgatge of $\mathrm{S} 2,2(2)$ and $\$ 2.000$ cash was pain. That farm has heen offered for sale under the hammer since I came to Ottatwa, and the largest amoment hid for it was $s i .7(0)$, though it is in the same condition with the exception of the barn heing hurnt down. That proves that the value of land is not what it was some years ago. tiome gentlemen may say that is not a grod section of country, hut I think they will find it is a very nice country. There are some favoured sections, but I know in the London district and in the Womlstock district farms are offered for sale that never were in the market before, that have remained from year to year and from generation to generation in the same family, and now they are for sale hecause of the unremmerative prices oltained by the farmers and the hampered condition of the farmers in getting fair prices for what they have to sell. For any man to saty that there has not been ashrinkige in the value of real estate is to state what is not true, and. if those hon. geptlemen will consult the money lending associations in Ontario, they will find that they are getting every year more land on their hamis, and are offering lands for sale for less than the mortgaged encumbrance in some ciases. I am very sorry to state that this is the case, and I hope that things may soon lee better than they are now. The Finance Minister spoke of the taxation and of the revenue from the Department of Customs. He stated that the customs taxation was now very little in excess of what it wats in 1878. I find that in 1879 the customs tax amounted to $\$ 12,900,659$, or 83.12 per head, while in $18(\mathrm{M})$ the amount was $\$ 23,968,9$ in 3 , or $\$ 4 .(6)$ per head. There is another thing to be considered. The National Policy has failed to proluce the home market which was promised to the people of this country. That promise has been broken as well as all the other promises. Hon. gentlemen cannot point to a single vestige of Mr. McMllew. all the promises they made to the farmers that has leen fultillen. They pronised a home market t" the farmers, and what do we find? In 185~s we shipped $\$ 32,(N),(0) 0$ of the products of the farm, and in $18(9)$ we shipped $\$ 42,000,(1) 0$, or $\$ 10,(X K),(K X)$ more. Where has the home market been, because the shipments have been increasing every year insteal of decreasing: Hon. gentlemen opposite appear to be very sensitive about discrimination against (iraat Britain. They appear to be in love. with that country. I have no objection to that. and we claim to have as much love for that combtry on our side as they have on theirs. We dor not boast of our loyalty. We do not keep it on the tip of our tongue, as they do, but when any trouble comes it is found that Reformers are just as ready ats Conservatives to defend the privileges we enjoy under British institutions, and that is the lest proof of loyalty. We finl that in 1891 our imports from (ireat Britain amounted to 866 of free goors. Altogether we took from them $\$ 42,047$, , $22(3$ worth. From the United States in the same year. we imported $s=2, T(T), 412$ of clutiable goods and $\$ 23,892,2.5$ of free goobls, or a total of $\$ 23,68.3,6: 5 \%$. We took ionulie the quantity of free goods from the United Niates that we took from Great Britain, and yet hon. gentlemen are yeling that we on this side want to discriminate against the mother country. Are they not doing that now, because their tariff is making us take twice as much free goonls from the Cinitellitates ats from England: Then the duty collected on goods while the duty we collected on imported gornts from the United States, on more gools than we: imported from Fingland, was only si,734.ilt.71. So in reality the gross amount of dutiable goms imported from the United States, is very nearly as large as the gross amount imported from (ireat Britain, while tise duty collected is two millions less than the duty collected on the goots which come from (ireat Britain. Now, to give you a little idea of how the want of unrestricted trade relations affects the province from which I come, I will give the exports aml imports from Ontario. Last year, Ontario imported from the United States dutialle goods to the value of $\$ 15,414,618$, and. free goods to the value of $\$ 10,478,392$, or a total of $\$ 2.5,542,40 \times$. The whole Dominion exported to the United States $53,, 288, \pi \% 2$. Of that export, animals and their products amounted to $\$ 4,316,978$ : agriculture, ${ }^{-7},-$ 291,246 , or a total of the products of the farm of $\$ 11,508,22 . \%$ Prolucts of the forest, $11,7(63,0) .5$ : prolucts of the mine, $\$ 4,(6 \times), 8(8)$; products of the 423. Ontario exported altogether to the United States in 1891, $\$ 20,693,(149$. Of animals and their prolucts that province exported $\$ 2,737,0399$, and of agriculture, $85,389,49 \cdot 2$. That shows how very much interested the Province of Ontario is in the matter of extended trade with the people of the United States: and I contend that we will not have is better condition of things in the Province of Ontario, and I fear in the lominion of (amala, until stich time as we secure better trade relations with those people than we have got at the present time. It is said by our opponencs, and sail with some considerable force, that the American farmer is worse off than the (anadian farmer. They tell us: Why do you want extended trade relations with a country where the agriculturists are worse off than they are in Canala? I admit that is true to some extent, and why is it true? Simply hecause the American farmer has been labouring under the operation of a protective tariff for 25 years, and if the Canadian farmer is subject to the exactions of a protective tariff for twelve years and a half more, lis condition will he worse off than that of the American farmer is to-day. As Canadian farmers we have been pauperised under the operations of this law. As has been truly stated ly the hon. member for South Oxford, there has been a double duty extorted from the people of this country, one luty goes into the revenue and the other daty soes into the pocket of the monopolist, and the result is, as that hon. gentieman showed last night, that our fiovernment, in place of collecting $\$ 36$, , (M0), (NX) out of the people of this country, collect more like $\overline{s i n}, 0(0),(0)$ a year, because the one portion is taken for revenue and the other portion is virtually stolen under the operation of combines and the adrantages given to manufacturers under the operation of the present tariff. Sir, we want to get rid of that condition of things, and until such time as we do get rid of it, we will have no improvement in this country. Now, the exports of the Province of Quebec to the United States last year amounted to $\$ 4,406,7 \mathrm{n}$. I have given yon the exports of Ontario. 1 have here the exports of the other different provinces. Those of Nova Scotia were $\$ 3,463,826$; New Brunswick, $\$ 3,646,333$; Manitoba, $\$ 1,021,61 / 6$; British Columbia, $\$ 3,211,158$. So that when we lonk over these figures it can easily be seen that of all the provinces of this Dominion, the Province of Ontario is the most deeply interested in the question of extended trade relations with the United States. We do not wish for a moment to go on our knees and leg from the Americans the privileges that we want. We claim that we have the wherewith to offer inducements to them to give us those privileges. Hon. gentlemen opposite say they have nailed their colours to the mast, and what are their colours: They say: We will enter ints a treaty with you, the Americans, if you will not interfere with our manufacturing interests. We want to preserve to our sugar refiners the privilege of making $\$ 1,(110,000)$ a year, free from outside competition, and they want to be allowed to inherit that advantage for years to come. We have protected the producers of agricultural machinery, the producers of furniture and of every other article that is made in this country under the benign (operations of a tariff of protection, and we camot allow these people to be interferell with. They are still called infant industries, and they always will be as long as we treat them as infants, hut the very monent you let them stand alone, some of them at least, will get up and show that they can compete with the Americans. But as long as they are protected they will suck at the resources of the people of this Dominion, and they will perform the peculiar duties of barnacles of state, sucking at the people's life blood. Now, we want to put a stop to all that. We suy the peofle have been subjected to that too long, we say it is time a change should be made. The Finance Minister had better not fancy that he has locked the door and put the key in his pocket. He will find that he is not in absolute possession of the entire situation, and that the people of this country will not give up without a struggle, their efforts to get clear of the difticulties that are staring them in the face. He will find, unless he makes some effort to relieve the farming community, that they will begin to open their eyes. A great many of them have leen going to the polls and shutting their eyes to the pernicious effect of this policy, but they will legin to get their eyes open, they will hegin to realize hy harl experience that the National Policy has been robling them, they will begin to realize that this policy is a piece of unjust legislation that has been drawing from them their resources and putting them into the pockets of the manufacturers. I say that the sooner hon. gentlemen opposite realize that the farming community are not satisfied, the hetter it will be for themselves, and the better it will be for this comntry. Now, Sir, I do not wish to touch upon any other point except the all-important point of our trade relations. That is the question of all questions that are before this House and this comntry at the present moment. It is the question that the people of this country are disposel to listen to, and any other question that might be discussed in the Budget debate had better be left to one side. We are willing to hang our fate upon the result of this policy. Hon. gentlemen opposite have thrown out hints that we had better look around for a new policy. We want to annomuce to hon. gentlemen opposite that we cling with mited tenacity to the policy we have already adopted. We are going to stick to that policy. Notwithstimding the fact that the Minister of Finanies says he has closed the door and locked up all hope or any further efforts being made, we are not willing to accept his conclusion. We tell the people of this country: If you are prepared to place us in the position of entering into negotiations with the United States, clothe us with authority and we will open the markets of that country on fair and equitable terms for you in a very short time, and give you a little sip of the advantages you enjoyed years ago when you were under such favourable circumstances for disposing of your products in the American market. Unrestricted reciprocity without any unjust exactions, that is what we are labouring for, that is what weare going tofight for. Hon. gentlemen opposite must not fancy that they are going to scare us into the adoption of something else. If they have nailed their colours to the mast with a determination to make no further effort to secure a treaty, we, on this side, have adopted a different course. We are determined to cling to that principle until we carry it out, to some extent at least. W'e have nailed our colours to the mast also, and we want hon. gentlemen opposite to know, if it is any source of comfort or satisfaction to them, that we are going to fight until the people realize plainly the position they are in ; we are going to fight this battle out to the bitter end until we have convinced the people of this country that it is in their interest to support us in the policy of securing unre. stricted reciprocity with the Uuited States. We are never going to slacken our efforts until we secure for the hampered people of this country the relief of which they stand so much in need. This course we are going to take and follow it out until the end. Mr. Speaker, I have no desire to dwell further upon this subject. I could not permit the opportunity to pass without, at least, making known my views with regard to this inportant question.

I contend it is the duty of every man who represents a rural constituency in which he knows, from his own experience and the intimacy that exists between a representative and his comstituents, the liardships, privations and inconveniences under which the community which he has the privilege of representing is labouring. I know the condition of our people : I know how anxious they are to secure better returns for their farm products, and I can say this, that I beliere-and I helieve it honestly-that if you open up to the farmers of this country the markets of the United States on a liberal basis, so that they can secure for their products free sale in that open market, it will be worth sil per acre for every acre of clearel land in this Dominion: If you do that I contend that the farmers of this conntry in a very short time would wipe out the entire national deht, and be no poorer than they are muler the operation of the present tariff.

Mr. HUAHEs: Mr. Spaker, on rising as a new member to address a few remarks to the House on the questions of the day, I equally with those who hate precerled me, must request the indulgence of members of the House in case I should trespass on any of the established rules and usages which are unfamiliar to a new member. I have been surprised on coming to this chamber, and hearing the trade questions discussed, to find that the members of the Opposition are taking the same view as that which they have been presenting in the rural districts. Those who come from the rural districts expect to find a somewhat different style of speech delivered on these questions as con:pared with those with which we are favoured in the rural districts. But I find hon. gentlemen have nothing new to tell us. It is the same old story we have heard during the recent bye-elections, and during the general elections last year: The hon. gentleman who has just spoken had the honour of visiting the riding 1 represent, not very long since, and the same musical voice uttered the very stme arguments then which he advancel here this evening. I notice that hon. members of the Opposition here, as in the rural districts, are very anxious for the welfare of the farmers, in fact, they go further outside than they do in the House. There they all pose as farmers, or as the farmer's friend. This brings to mind one of those gentlemen when expressing his friendship for the farmers, toll them how he was brought up on the farm, that he had planted the potatoes, and hoed the corn, and done all sorts of farm work, and that he had almost grown up between two rows of corn. A boy on the back seat called out, "A pumpkin." In their desire to pose as the farmer's friend I think those hon. gentlemen are certainly not far out of the line suggested by the boy. We find the same cry used here to-night as is used in the country ; a decrease of population, farms have declined in value and those various other pessimistic cries that have returnen, during the hye-elections, this little colony existing on this side of the House. We find that when those hon. gentlemen lay dowin the policy of free trade between Canada and the United States, they declare they have pinned their colours to the mast and are going to sink or fall by their trade policy. I quite agree with a remark that has fallen from the hon. gentleman that the Government are here to stay. Whoever may see the result of the general elections, unless hon. gentlemen of the Opposition change their policy, will find them sitting where they now are, only in still further reduced numbers. In contrulistinction to their policy, the Minister of Finance has laid before this country a proposition for fair trade with the work. We have seen during the past generation, twenty-one years, a policy pursued of buiding up this Canadian nation, uniting prorince with province, constructing various pullic works. railways and canals amd the final work of constructing Canala is all but consmmmated. There remains but one further link in the great work of construction, and that I hope will soon le accomplished, our union with the sister colony in the ocean; Newfoundlami. The second part of the great national policy is being pursued, the extension of trade within our own borders and with the nations of the world at large. We find on an examination of the policy laid down by the Opposition that those hon. gentlemen invariably refrain from stating the details of their policy. They will tell you how severely the country is sutfering under the present Arministration, they will tell you how hadly oft the farmers are and the ditticulties under. which they labour, but they will never go into details with respect to their policy: and with the permission of the House I will briefly review what their policy means. First, they do not hesitate to admit, and it cannot be denied after the speech of the Minister of Finance, that it involves discrimination against the mother land. The hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. Mc:Mullen) has stated that the supporters of the (iovernment last night applauded when the Minister of Finance male the statement that we could not get free trade with the American people without liscriminating against England and in making that statement the hon. member for Wellington misled the: House. The applanse occurred when the Minister of Finance said that we would not consent to any reciprocity with the United States that involved retaliation against Gireat Britain. The hon. gentleman in the course of his remarks stated that under the present policy we protect various articles, such, for instance, as furniture and linders; and it was time that this protection was stopped. If his policy was carried out, if there was free trade hetween Canada and the United States, not only would those classes lee doubly protected as compared with their protection at present, but they would be protected in such a way that our infant manufactures would be left to the mercy of the great monopolies across the line, and would be wiped out within a short time. There can be no doubt that their policy involves the largest amount of protection with the loss of our inclustries at home. While on the one hand they talk of free trade with the Cnited states, they are, on the other hand, shatting us out from the rest of the world; it is simply free traule with the United States and exclusion from all the rest of the world, and it is the most novel kind of free trade which any politician ever advancen. Their policy would further involve the loss of all the industries we now enjoy, and which we are building up in this country, and in which we are making progress at the present time. I need not dwell on this point ; it is self-evident. Their policy wonld further mean the centralization of the trade of the comntry, not at the ports of Montreal, Quebec, St. John and Halifax, but in New York and boston. It is well known that the American promoters of the scheme of free trade between Canada and the Unitel States are largely interested in the transportation lines which centre in those American cities, and it is one of their plans for building up their own property and their own lines of railway to the detriment of our Canadian roads. It would further involve us in competition with the western farmers of the United States. A precerling speaker has very clearly and explicitly pointerl out some of the ilisadvantages muder which we would labour had we free trade with the United States, but I desire to refer for a few moments to American statistical recorls to show what the trade would mean. At present we are protected from the United States in all articles of farm produce ; and here I may digress to ask the hon. member who preceded me to explain a statement which he made. He stated that in 1878 we enjoyed a free market with the United States and that we then proluced many articles of farm produce which we were not able to prorluce to-day and sell to the Uniterl States. In all my experience of farm prolucts I cannot recollect one article that was produced and sold to the Americans under the old reciprocity treaty that we camot produce and sell to them to-lay. I am sure that the House wall he more than obliged to the member for Welling. ton (Mr. NeMullen) if he would kindly name one article which we produced under the old reciprocity treaty and which we do not produce now. Perhaps the chief article in which we come in competition with the United States is the article of wheat, and when I look at the otticial reports of the United States. issued last year, I find that there were in the hands of the farmers of that country, and for which they were unable to find a market in any part of the world, $1: 6,(M 00,000)$ bushels of wheat. The House can easily understand that if that were turned into flour and solle in our Canadian markets it would greatly reduce the price of our wheat there. The millers of this country are at the present time putting forth extrandinary efforts in orler to secure the entrance of our flour into Newfoundland on favourable terms. If we were exposed to the competition of the Americans in our home markets, the foreign markets woull amount to nothing, because the Americans have cheaper transportation rates than we have as yet, and we would find ourselves undersold in our hoine markets by their cheap westerin products. We find that on the 1st of March last year the Americans had in their granaries, and unable to find a market for it throughout the worll, $970,000,000$ bushels of corn. The hon. gentleman who preceded me (Mr. McMullen) spoke of having American com coming into this country free. There are menin this House who in the clays prior to $18 \% 8$ know that the American corn was fed to the horses in this country, and in the lumber camps in this neighbourhood and throughout northern Ontario, while our farmers had oats in their granaries which they could not sell at more than from 10 to 15 cents per bushel. Fet the Iiberal members in this House would wish to return to the old days prior to 1878, when oats, which formed one of the staple products of the Canadian farmer, were rendered almost valueless. I find also from the official reports of the United States that the oats market is up into the six and seven hundred million bushels every year. Turning to the cattle trade, we find that under our relations with Great Britain we enjoy a preferential trade in the English market, and the Americans themselves, in the interests of their people, are so fully alive to this that the Secretary of Agriculture for the United States has seen fit to make a report to Congress on the suloject. He silys:

> " The greatest hindrance to the export trade in live catthe is the regulation of the British Government requiring that all American cattle shall be slaughtered on the docks within a period of ten days after they are landed. This prevents the owner from holding them until they can recover from the effects of the voynge and until the market is in the best condition for selling. Canadian cattle, which are allowed to enter England without any restrictions, are said to yield the shipper from 310 to $$ 15$ per head more than can he realized from steers shipped from the United States. The effect of this difference in returns is very marked, both upenn our trade and upon the market value of cattle in the United States. If our shippers were able to secure 310 or $$ 15$ per head more for their animals it wonld of course stimulate the trade, and they would be able to pay nearly that amount more for steers purchased in this country. Such an advance in the price of export cattle would have a strong tendency to increase the price of all other kinds of stacks. In this respect, then, the removal of the restrictions would be of the very grentest advantage to American cattleruisers.
> "The removal of the English restriction would also enable our shippers to send a kind of cattle which now cannot be exported at all to (ireat Britain. There is no doubt but that our thin steers, or feeders, as they are called, could be supplied to the English farmers for feeding purposes much cheaper than store cattle are now obtained from Ireland. The vast numbers of this class of our steers which have been thrown upon the market of the Enited States during the last three or four years have so exceeded the supply that prices have cieclined below the cost of production. The inevitable tendency is to force down the price of all meat-producing animals? If the foreign trade would take a considerable number of these thin steers it would be of the greatest benefit in sustaining the prices in this country."

Now, sir, turning again to the reports of the United States, we find in that comontry that the number of cattle is inceasing, not by hundreds or thousands, but liy humireds of thousamds and millions. For instance, the increase in the number of cattle alone in 1890 over 1889 was $2,470,865$ heal in the Unitel States. The increase in the number of swine in that year was $1,301,188$, and last year again the increase in the number of cattle was in the United States 1, 172,3il head over the previous year : and we find also that the average price of these animals is far below the average price in (anada. We find, turning to the hog industry of the United States, that there were $\overline{5}, 602, \overline{7} 80$ animals in the markets in 1890, which was an increase over 1889 of $1,3(010,(000$, hesides $3,105,000$ which died of hog cholera. In 1891 we find that there was an increase of $1,-22,91{ }^{\circ}$ in the hog markets of the United States and an increased ralue in the hog products of the United States of $\$ 30,837,492$. If our farmers had to compete with American farmers in the production of pork, the effect on our trade would simply le ruinous. The deputation which waited on the Minister of Finance the other day was assured that American barrelled pork was heing placed in Canada at the present time at about $\$ 7.50$ per barrel. We find that the export of hog products from the United States amounted last year to $1,300,000,000$ lbs., besides live hogs amounting to 45,000 in number, and this year the hog protucts of the United States, not including the cities and towns, amounted to $\mathbf{3 , 4 7 0 , 0 0 0 , 0 0 0} \mathrm{lbs}$. The official report of the United States in speaking of this matter says:

Abstract

"No account is taken of the hogs killed and consumed by farmers or sold in villages, townsand cities, and which are not packed, as there are no definite data from which it can be determined.'

Now, I will turn to the question of horses. The hon. meminer for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) endearoured to show that Gamalian farmers would henefit liy free trale with the United riates in horses. I im free to almit that in the days that he has spoken of, that is, umler the old treaty of 18int, we lid enjoy a market with the United States for our horses. We all know, Sir, that at that time the American war was going on and horses had a really sitle for cavalry. At that time also the western states were being settled up and the farmers of the east were sembling horses to these states: whereas today, from these same western states, they are exporting horses in thonsands and tens of thousamds. We also know that in the cities and towns of the United States inorses hate been largely used until recent years for street cars, hat other motive power has taken the place of horses, and the number employed in this service is gradually lessening, so that on account of this the demamil for horses has fallen off considerably. If we turn to the official report of the Conter States we find that in 18S! the arerage price per head of horses in the United States was 5 II.S9, in $\mid S(W)$ it wass 8 (is. $S 4$, and last year it had fallen to the low sum of an Sin.0.01 in the United States markets. We find that in place of looking for a market for horses in the United states that it lehoves us to look at home. In turning to our NorthWest you will find that thonsands of horses are ammailly smuggled into that country or brought throngh the castoms. Last year the aggregate value of horses imported intu Canada from the Unitel States was orer sllfiokn. Of course, we sold a large number to the United Niates; but the day is fast approaching when it will become the luty of the Canadian Govermment 10 protect our farmers against horses from tie western prairies. In almost any article of farm produce our Cinadian farmers camot compete with the cheap prolacts of the western prairie farms of the Uniterl States. There the farmer, when he goes on to his laml, finds it alrealy cleared; there is no necessity of fencing it; as a rule, his house is very cheap; and he is not obliged to indulge in the luxury of expensive buildings. In the older provinces of the Dominion the farmer has in the first instance to clear the land, which, with stumpage and stoning, occupies several years of severe labour. I an free to say that the fences and builings on almost any Ontario or Quelec farm represent fully the value of any westem prairie farm. Further, sir, in the western states the farmers are not subject to the long winters that we have here. On the average, our farmers have to provide for feenling their stock six or seven months every year, and it is utterly impossible for them to raise pork or cattle, or animals of any kind, in Canada, to compete with the cheap products of the western states. If you turn to the eastern states, you will find that the farmers there are male poor by the competition of the western farmers. The hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright), who is supposed to represent the financial brains of the Opposition, in his addresses throughout the country, preaches of the desolation that exists in Ontario from the reduced values of farms. Well, I can point him Mr. Huehes.
to the dienesec valley, considered by many to be the garden of Amelica, where farms have heen reduced in value one-third or one-half by the same caluse. It has been remarkable to me why these hon. gentlemen, in passing through the country, have not sought for an honest explanation of the decrease in the value of farm lamis thronghout the ohd provinces. In discussing these matters one might as well he fair: aml I amm satistied that if they hat discussel that matter on a fair basis, amo had not attempted to mislcal the electors, the bye-elections recently held would not have resulted so disastrously as they have done. The hom. member for South Oxford, in his speeches throughont the country, has been asserting that the canse of the deereased value in the farm lamels of this comatry is the financial policy of the tiovermment. Is there an hom. member in this House, or even a schoml hoy thronghout the length amd brealth of the Dominion, who does not know the real canse of that depreciation in value: We admit that there is depreciation, but there is an honest canse for it-the canse of supply and demaml. In our North-West we have millions of acres opened up, and our young men who have anoney to incest or who wish to settle down on farms for themselves, in place of paying the large prices demanded in the older provinces, go there with their stock of implements and take up lam. The conseguence is, that when lamd is thrown on the market here, it floses not find as realy purchasers as it otherwise would. This is the bonest explanation of the depreciation in value, and it is one which involves no reflection on the policy of the fiovernment. Now, these hom. gentlemen tell us that our natmal manket lies alongside of us. It would be just as reasmahle for the hon. member for North Wellington to tell the people of the adjoining county of lirey: Now, gentlemen, we lie alongside of yon, and consequently you are our natural market: we will take our hogs and sheep and cattle and farm pronluce generally over to the county of direy and sell them to you. So also a gentleman from lirey might as well say to the people of North Wellington : Pecanse you lie alongside of us you are our natural market, and we will take our hogs and cattle and proluce and sell them to you. No, sir ; the perple of lroth these comnties, producing similar commodities, take them where they are wanted in our Canadian towns and cities. The city of Toronto alone consumes twelve or fifteen million dollars worth of farm proiluce every year. The market of that city alone is worth inore to the Camadian farmer than the market of the whole $\sin ,(x),(X)$ people to the south of us. These hon. gentlemen are not at all satisfied with the result of the trip of the Ministers to Washington. They complain of it very greatly, and they seem to be distippointed that the mission was not suceessful. They find faalt with the hon. Finance Minister for not suggesting to Mr. Blaine some solution of the difticulty in regard to raising a rejenue. We have had the hon. nember for south Brant (Mr. Paterson) on a visit to North Victoria in the recent loye-election, when the policy represeuted by these gentlemen met with such a cool reception. We also hal the eloguent membert for North Vork (Mr. Mulock) there; we had the great financier, the hon. member for South Oxford, there ; we had various others of the burning and shining lights of the Opposition there ; and these gentlemen were asked again and again to point out how they would raise a revenue in case their policy was brought into effect : and neither dixectly nor indirectly did one of them answer the question how they would raise the revenue. I have read their speeches delivered in various localities, and I have failed to discover where they have presented any solution of that question. Yet they will come here and seek to cast discredit on the Finance Minister because he failed to present as solution of this difficulty to Mr. Blaine. I conceive that it was none of his business to present a solution to Mr. Blaine. We know what the result would be; we know how the revenue would be raised. It would be raised, as I am afraid it will have to be raised in provincial affairs hefore very long-by direct taxation : and I am satisfied that the people will never consent to that. The hon. gentlenen are in the habit. I see, on the floor of the House, as on the political hustings, of misrepresenting the attitude of the Government in relation to the old reciprocity treaty of $18: 54$ - 66 . The present proposal of the Dominion Govermment in reference to that treaty is this, as these hon. gentlemen right well know: A renewal of the reciprocity treaty of 1854, with such modifications as are required to suit the alterel conditions of the two comntries, and with such extensions as are admitted to be in the interest of Canada and the United States-the most material difference ; anll when the hon. member for North Wellington stated that while the Ministers were opposing that treaty at Wiashington, members on the stump in Canada were calling for a return to it, I camot agree with them. I know that in our comnty such was not the case, and I do not believe it was in any other. The chief ery of hon. gentlemen opposite has reference to the condition of the population of Canada. In this matter I would like to see a little more honesty of purpose displayed ly the members of the Opposition. When the census of 1881 was taken they objected to the mamer in which it was done, and said it was not a true representation of the population. In our own locality, gentlemen who were enmmerators at both times, tell me that at that time if a young man were living in Toronto and his home was in Victoria county, he was enumerated at home, and the chances were ten to one he was also enumerated in Toronto, so that in this way I am satistied the difference in the census returns must be very large, and the increase in population is much larger than is shown by the census. However, whether our increase has been substantial or otherwise in numbers, it certainly has been sulstantial in quality. On turning to the reports, we find that the value of inmigrant effects brought into the country last year amounted to $\$ 3,842,901$ as compared with the value in $1876-77$ of about $\$ 686,205$. We find that although in the neigh bouring Republic there has been an increase in population, through immigration, much larger than ours, yet it is of a different quality. I shall take the liberty of quoting from an address recently delivered by Rev. Dr. Banks, of Boston, in which he says, speaking of Boston :
"It seems strange, indeed, to go up and down some of these old, historic streets, and yet never in the coarse of one's walk hear spoken the lapguage of the coantry. In the course of my investigations during the past few months I have found it impossible to do anything practical without an interpreter. Often in entering an old rear tenement house, where filth and misery held riot, I have been astonished at the splendidly-carved ornaments over the doorways and the still-to-be-traced carving on the balnstrade.
"Once these old rear tenements were the abode of Boston's wealthiest und most cultivated citizenship, but the old world tide has come in, and house after house,block after block, and street upon street, have been overwhelmed by the waves of people who speak other languages, and whose habits of life are more foreign than their speech.
"The consideration which causes the most sober thought. among earnest men to-day, is the entirely different class of immigration coming to us now from that of former times.
"In the earlier days of American history it was the intelligent, self-reliant part of the European communities who dared the expense and hardship of the lone sea rovage by a sailing vessel, and faced the exigencies of the new world. The immigrants of those days were mostly farmers and skilled mechanics, who brought with them the habit and prestige of success.

- The rapid incoming of these old world tides has very close relation to the wages of labouring people. Large numbers of these alien labourers who are coming now are little better than slaves to contractors, steamship lines and the professional European jobbers in pauper labour.' They come in direct competition with the native-born and the worthy foreign immigrant-who comes here for the purpose of applying for citizenship and securing a home. At every point of contact with our lathour system they debase it.
"This is very easy to understand when one investigates a little the methods used to encourage emigration to this country: It is now known, beyond a doubt, that prisoners' aid societies in various European countries have beensteadily shipping convicts to the United States. Neither has it been an uncommon thing for criminals to be let off by the courts on the condition of their emigration to Aimerica."
Such is the class of immigration which has tended to swell the percentage of increase in the United States. I repeat that if our increase has ijeen molerate, it has been very sulstantial in quality, and it is well to proceed sluwly in building up this great Dominion, laying a good substantial foundation on which to build up future millions which are certain to be here in a very few years. The hon. gentleman who preceded me took occasion to refer to the mortgages of Cinada. Now, I shall not enter into a comparison of the figures, hut I shall take the liberty of guoting a resolution passed by the recent General Farmers Union of the Sitate of Minnesota, showing that the United States Gorernment deliberately took steps to see that their census enumeration would not be such as to show the actual mortgage indelotedness of the United States. The Minnesota Alliance passed this resolution:
" Whereas, the Act of Congress approved Feb. 22, 1890, provided that the superintendent of the census should ascertain the number of farms and homes which are under mortgage, the amonnt of the mortgage debt, and the value of the property mortgaged; and
"Whereas, the superintendent of the census, for the purpose of concealing from the people the grievous results of misgovernment by the old political parties, has directly violated the above statutes by directing his enumerators to report only those mortgages which are a lien upon farms and homes 'occupied by owners,' and to 'include no valuations of real estate occupied by tenants or hired, nor the indebtedness upon the same, if it may be reasonably avoided': and,
"Whereas, this violation of the statutes renders the census of 1890 , taken at great expense to the people, of no value as a report, either of the number of tenants on land in the United States or the real amount of mortgage indebtedness of our citizens; therefore,

Resolved, that the Alliance senators and members of Congress are respectfully requested to take steps to secure a bona fide census of the indebtedness of the people of the United States, and also to have the superintendent of the census prosecuted at law for his gross violation of the laws of the country."
I would
e: fully point out that when the Govvermnent , ne United States connives at what these farmers are pleased to describe a fraud, there must be something very improper which they are desirous of concealing from the public. I find here in a newspapaper from Dakota, of date March the 16th, 1892, the following extract :-

[^17]" Faulk. Spink. Edmunds, and many other counties make a showing even more appalling than Brown."
And yet the hon. gentleman who preceded me seemed to delight in pointing out that the people were emigrating from the fertile district of North Wellington to the larren district of Dakota. It seemed to point to the fact that the hou. gentleman must have been traversing that riding advertising the territory or the state of Northern Dakota to a very alarming extent. He asks why these people are in the United States. Well, all we can point to is this, that if the western States are not well advertised among the people of Canada it is no fault of the hon. gentlemen who make up the Opposition. Since my earliest recollection in the active field of politics, I find these gentlemen preaching, in season and out of season, the advantages of the western territories of the United States for settlement. They show the difficulties under which the Canadian farmer labours, and point with seeming pleasure and pride to the western fiells of the United States, and we find that the 500,000 odd emigrants who left Canada for the United States during the regime of the hon. gentlemen opposite have proved very successful agents in inducing Canadian settlers to leave their homes and settle out there. The hon. gentleman points to the decrease of the census in various parts of the Dominion, especially the older provinces. The hon. member for East Simcoe who preceded him, very properly pointed out that a number of the young men here who grow up-three or four sons on a farm-emigrate to the North-West and take up land. There is another fact which accounts for a decrease in the population. A number of years ago the old methods of farming were resorted to ly the people. Now you can scarcely enter on a farm in the province of Ontario and the better portions of Canada but you will find improved agricultural implements doing away with manual labour to a large extent, and thus rendering it useless for these young men to stay at home. As my hon. friend from East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) has pointed out, it allows them to pass to the North-West and into our Canadian cities and towns and engage in other occupations in life. The member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) pointed to only two products of Canadian farms that had found a market in the United States. Last year the average price for potatres was 37 cents in the United States, while in Canada it was fully 50 per cent more. Lainbs they do import in large quantities, but, being obliged to purchase these from Canada, no matter what the duty may be, they have to pay it. It may seem strange that in regard to barley and lambs, as soon as the McKinley Bill came into force, the price in Canadia increased, and it is shown that the price of barley in the United States is now the lowest ever known, while in Canada it is the highest that has been known for many years. Owing to the energetic policy of the Minister of Agricul. ture in opening up a market in England for our two-rowed barley we are entirely independent of the United States. Their farmers declare that they must have our barley, and we know now that we can grow a barley which is more productive than the six-rowed which we grew before. In our county, Victorik, we raised an average of 60 to 75 bushels an acre which brought from 50 cents to 55 cents a bushel, as compared with 30 to 33 bushels an acre of the six-rowed barley, bringing from 40 cents to 45 cents a bushel. We can do without the six-rowed barley. It is known at the present time there is a market in Great Britain for six-rowed barley, which is used there for feed purposes, and that malting houses are being established there to introduce the six-rowed barley for malting purposes. I do not know that there is much more that the hon. gentleman who preceded me has referred to. We have already taken the liberty of pointing out that in the visit the Ministers were pleased to pay to Washington recently they met with a very courteous reception, and, whether it was that our friends the gentlemen of the Opposition leamed from the American Government or that the American Government learned from the Opposition that no reciprocity relations would be accorded to Canada, which did not discriminate against Great Britain, it was certainly learned, and it gave tone to the already strong*suspicion that each of those parties was conversant with the ideas of the other. We find a statement sometimes advanced and hinted at by the hon. gentleman who spoke here this erening, that the cities and towns of the eastern States, if we hat free trade, would afford a lucrative market for our farm products. I may take the liberty of pointing out here, in reply to an argument frequently advanced, that the farming lands of the United States are being fairly well taken up and that in a few years the production of the United States will reach the maximum, and then we will reap the harvest in those cities and towns. I remenber in the maps which were put before us in our boyish days that Illinois was considered the far west, and all west of that was represented as the Great American Desert. In that Great American Desert are to-day the homes of tens of thousunds of people. I find here a reference to these districts:
"In a visit to Yuma, Colorado, farmers were found who had fled from the droughts of Illinois, some old men of sixty starting anew on a desert homestead, who had broken the soil deeply with horses and cattle and even cows and are getting wheat yielding twenty bushels per acre, cribbing hund reds of bushels of corn. growing oats and potatoes, hay and vegetables. and converting a former scene of desolation into one of beauty and bloom. Deep breaking, subsoiling and frequent cultivation, processes the very reverse of those practised by the pioneer farmer are the sources of the new prosperity. Colorado agriculture is contesting with mining for superiority in value of production, and her wisest publicists assert that one-third will th 8 year be produced without irrigation."
I could also point to parts where irrigation on a very large scale is being carried on in Arizona and in those other places in the west which were looked on as deserts, but I shall not detain you. In the report of this year, speaking of the same desert and the productive capacity of the United States, the Secretary of Agriculture met the argument that the United States has nearly reached the limit of production as follows:-

immense area of arid lands can be irrigated and made highly productive. Then a considerable area of farm lands is not now utilized in production, and much of the tilled land is not half cultivated. High culture upon a scientific and common-sense basis might increase materially if not double the present rate of yield. It will be time enough to talk of importation of food products when our population is fire times as large as at present. The following extract further enlarges upon this theme: ." With $9,000,000$ farmers and farm labourers, cultivating over $5,0,0,000$ farms, but a third of the land is taken up, but a small part of that is under crop, and the area under nominal cultivation is superficially treated and scarcels up to half its maximum production.',"
I do not see from my view-point what is to be gained by the Canadian farmer in any sense except perhaps in regard to land, by free trade between Canada and the United States. On the other hand, I can see staring him in the face direct taxation and additional burdens thrown upon the land and the farmer. Under our present system of a revenue tariff the burdeus of taxation fall very lightly on the farmer, but under the free trade proposals of the Opposition they will be increased. I am glad to see that the late leader of the Opposition party, the Hon. Edward Blake, bears out that theory, and that I can also refer to him in order to show that the policy which these gentlemen boast they will stand by and in regard to which they hare nailed their colours to the nast, is one which leads to the control of our revenue by the Government of the Unitel States, and ultimately to the control of our country by the United Statesin other words, to amnexation. If the hon. gentlemen choose to nail their colours to the mast, choose to stand by the policy enumeiater by them during the past bye-elections, then I am certain the Liberal-Conservative party of Canada will have no fault to find with them. We find that under the administration of the present Government the country is progressing; we find that our public debt is represented in our canal system, in our public works, and in the splendid system of railways which are found throughout Canada, and other works which tend towards the derelopment and building of this great and glorious country which we are all proud to live in. I shall not detain the House any further at this late hour of the night, and will close by thanking hon. gentlemen of both parties for the courteous hearing they extended to me on this my first effort in addressing the House.

Mr. DAWSON moved the adjournment of the debate.
'Motion agreed to, and debate adjourned.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON moved the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to; and House adjourned at 11.15 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Thursdat, 24th March, 1892.
The Speaker took the Chair at Three o'clock.
Prayers.

NEW. MEMBERS.

Mr. SPEAKER informed the House that the Clerk of the House had received from the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, certificates of the election and return of George Guillet, Esq., for the Electoral District of West Northumberland, and of Arthur Boyle, Esq., for the Electoral District of Monck.

MEMBERS INTRODUCED.

George Guillet, Esq., Member for the Electoral District of West Northumberland ; introduced by Mr. Weldon and Mr. Sproule.
Arthur Borle, Esq., Member for the Electoral District of Monck : introduced by Sir John Thompson and Mr. Montague.

FIRst READING.

Bill (No. 42) to revive and amend the Act to incorporate the Brockville and New York Bridge Company-(Mr. Taylor.)

PETITIONS FOR PRIVATE BILLS.

Mr. MILLS (Ammapolis) moved :
That the time for presenting petitions for private Bills be extended till Friday; the 1st April next, in accordance with the recommendation of the Select Standing Committee on Standing Orders.

Motion agreed to.

THE SEAT FOR WELLAND.

* Sir JOHN THOMPSON. It was understood, when the debate on the question of privilege was adjourned yesterday, that it would be adjourned until to-day, and that if any further matter arose in reference to the position of the menlber, it should be mentioned to-day. 1 understand that yesterday the hon. member for Norfolk, who made the motion, telegraphed to Welland, but I understand it would be about 4 o'clock before Mr. German could receive the message, and therefore, I would like to know if any proposal is to be made on the subject. If the leader of the Opposition is of the same opinion as he was yesterday, that the motion should stand until sufficient time was allowed for Mr. German to come here, I would suggest that the matter should stand until Tuesday.

NEWFOUNDLAND AND CANADA.

Mr. DAVIES(P.E.I.) asked, Whether the existing tariff of Newfoundland discriminates against any and which of the natural productions of Canada; and if so, to what extent and how long has such discriminating tariff been in operation?

Mr. BOWELL. Section 13 of the Revenue Act, 1891, cap. 3, 54 Vic. of Newfoundland, reads as follows:-
"In addition to the duties hereinbefore provided to be levied, collected and paid on goods, wares and merchandize, hereinafter mentioned, imported into this colony and its dependencies from countries, the fishermen of which have the privilege of taking fish on all parts of the coast of Newfoundland and its dependencies, and in which countries duties are or shall hereafter be lovied upon fish and the produce of the fisheries, exported from this colony to such countries, the following duties, namely:-

(ANADA TEMPERANCE ACT.

Mr. FLINT moved that the House resolve itself into ('ommittee on Bill (No. 6) to amend the Canada, Temperance Amendment Act of 1888.

Motion agreed to, and House resolved itself into Committee.

(In the Committee.)

On section 1,
Mr. FLINT. I would state that sub-section a makes no change in the Amendment Act, except that it relieves the druggist or chemist from the necessity of keeping a record. I may say the same of sub-section $b$, which is worled the same as subsection $r$ of the Act imended, the only change in the law being that, in regard to the articles named in the sub-section, druggists are relieved from the restrictions in the original Act. With regard to the last sub-section, that is also subject to the same explanation which I gave in regard to the previous sub-sections.

Mr. MULOCK. I would suggest that in subsection $b$, after the word "which" in the third line, the word " beverage" be inserted.
Mr. FLINT. I am afraid that my hon. friend is a little hypercritical in this matter; the change does not appear to me to be necessary. I do not wish to change the wording of the original Act any more than is alsolutely necessary to carry ont the intention that $I$ had in view.
On sub-section d,
Mr. FLINT. This sub-section leaves out the word "alcohol" that is contained in the original sub-section of the Act of 1888 . With that exception it is the same. Alcohol is taken out of that sub-section because alcohol, more than methylated spirits, is subject to improper use by those who purchase it for that purpose. The alcohol mentioned in subgection $e$ of the Act of 1888, being left out of this sub-section, is placed in the next sub-section, next to spirituous liquors. That is the substantial gain in the Act.

Bill reported.

INSURANCE ACT.

Mr. WHITE (Cardwell) moved second reading of Bill (No. 3) further to amend the Insurance Act. He said: I presume, Mr. Speaker, that, in accordance with the usual practice, the Bill will receive its second reading now, and will be sent to the Committee on Banking and Commerce, where its provisions will be fully considered. I may say that I will ask the committee to make several modifications in its terms, and that I propose to introduce a clause exempting fraternal societies from its provisions. Measures of a similar character have been in operation for some years past in most of the states of the neighhouring country, and have been found very leneficial. The principle of the Bill is in the direction of preserving the mutuality which should exist between policyholders in the same company, and doing away with the discriminations which now too often prevail as between large and small policy-holders.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the second time.

INCOMFS OF THE PEOPLE.

Mr. MILLS (Buthwell). I should like to ask the (iovernment whether it would not be possible to lay on the Table at a very carly day,a statement of the number of persons haring incomes over sinow or $$ 1,000$ in the Dominion :
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I cannot say at the moment how long it will take to get such a return. I will ascertain it.

SUPPLY-THE BUDGET.

House resumed adjourned debate on the proposed motion of Mr. Foster:
That Mr. Speaker do now lenve the Chair, for the House to go again into Committee of Sunply.
Mr. DAWSON. Mr. Speaker, I am sure we all admired the eloyuence with which the young member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) presented his case last night. We also must have admired the frankuess with which he condemned the diovernment for the manner in which they took the census in 1881. His friends will hardly thank him for being so unkind as to question their bonesty in taking the census that year. The Minister of Finance must not blame him for having published the iniquity of the Government in going to Wiashington to propose a treaty which he says is contrary to the interests of the farmers of this country. The hon. member said that the Canadian farmers cannot compete witin American farmers. The Minister of Finance seems to agree with this sentiment, and says that the very treaty which they went to Washington to negotiate would sulject the Camadian farmers to a great and dangerous competition. Neither of those hon. gentlemen have explained to the House or the country how the Canadian farmer will be able to compete with the American farmer when their products meet in a market common to both of them, which is said by hon. gentlenten opposite to be the natural marketfor Canadian products. When the products of those farmers meet in the common markets of England, how will the Canadian farmer be able to compete with the American farmer there? If he cannot compete in the home market, how can he compete in the market across the sea? It was distinctly stated that the Ministers who went to Washington proposed to negotiate a reciprocity treaty on the basis of the treaty of 1854 , with modifications and extensions such as the changed conditions of the country have made it necessary or desirable, and to press for a conclusion of a treaty on that basis. All hon. gentlemtn opposite, speaking of this question, seemed to agree that any extensions of that treaty would be disastrous, and modifications, if we are to accept the words of the member for Norih Victoria, would reduce the items on which reciprocity can be oltained to the single item of the litile Canadian lamb. The hon. gentleman says reciprocity in lambs is the only reciprocity which will be advantageons to the Canadian farmer. We imported from the United States last year 43,000 sheep; we sold them 244,000 . Our Ministers, he says, are prepared to negotiate a fair reciprocity treaty with the United States. It is scarcely fair to expect the Americans to grant us reciprocity in sheep when we sell them 244,000 against 43,000 they send to us. I should think that such a treaty would certainly lack the essential elements of reciprocity. Fancy the Ministers going to Washington and asking Mr. Blaine to show them some way by which the Gorernment of this country could be carried on, when suffering the loss of revenue which we now collect on the imports of sheep from the United States. $\$ 29,949$ was the sum total of the revenue which we collected upon our importations of American sheep; and so our Ministers are in the position that they went to Mr. Blaine and asked him to show some means by which the Government of this country could be carried on without this revenue, or to suggest some method by which this revenue should be replaced. All the hou. gentlemen on the other side of the House who had spoken on this subject seem to accent the fact that the Ministers were received at Washington with kindness and courtesy. Fach speaker refers to this fact as if it were a matter of wonder to him that our Ministers received courteous treatment from Mr. Blaine. Are we at war with the people of the Cnitel States? If not, why is it a matter of wonder that our Ministers should be courteously received there? Is it the recollection of the unkind words that have been spoken so often of their neighbours? Have they so often proclaimed them to be a hastile nation that they now believe their slanders to be true and wonder because their silly vapourings seem not to have exasperated the Americans altogether? The census figures certainly seem to terribly disturb hon. gentlemen opposite, and well they may. They admit that the populations of rural constituencies have woefully decreased. They admit the lamentable fall in the values of lands, and they attempt in many ways to account for this alarming state of affairs. The loss of our rural population is very great. Take the seven counties which form the barley-growing section of the Province of Ontario, and we find that the loss has been very serious indeed. The County of Frontenac, according to the census enumeration, has had an actual loss. since 1881 of 1,548 of its population ; if we add to this the natural increase, which is placed at 20 per cent, we find that that county has suffered a loss during ten years of 4,546 . Leunox suffered an actual loss of 1,412 , phus the natural loss of increase, 3,263 , showing that 4,675 persons have found their way out of that constituency. Prince Edward County has lost 2,152, which with their natural increase, shows a loss of 6,360. East Hastings, exclusive of Deseronto, hast lost 928 in addition to the natural increase, showing that 4,056 have gone away from that constituency. West Hastings has lost 1,263 inaddition to their natural increase, showing a loss here of $\mathbf{5 , 0 4 3}$. East Northumberland lost 990, besides the natural increase, showing an emigration from that constituency of 5,588 . West Northumberland has suffered an actual loss of 2,037, plus the natural increase, showing in that constituency, embracing three townshipe, that ${ }^{\text {j, }}, 433$ people have gone away during the jesit ten years. These seven constituencies have suifered an actual loss of 10,630 in addition to the natural increase of 25,071 , showing that 35,701 have departed from these counties during the past ten years $; 35,701$ in addition to their share of the emigrants who were said to have taken up their aboles in this country of ours. The hon. member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) says that this loss which these constituencies have sustained is not a loss to the Dominion, but merely a displacement of population, and that if we seek them we will find that these men have taken up their abode in our great North-West. The census reveals the fact that the total population of the North-West from Lake Superior to the Pacitic, is only 346,931 , not double the population of the city of Toronto. The total increase there during these ten years ouly amounts to 178,766 , not twice the increase of the city of Toronto. If Ontario farmers have goue in such numbers to the North-West, whither have the immigrants gone who are said to have arrived in Canada? We are told that 886,000 have landed anong us? Where are their homes? Have none of them gone to the North-West: Has the North-West been filled up by the hardy sons of Ontario? If so, I ask again, where are the immigrants who are said to have arrived here, and to induce whom to come here, we have spent a large sum during the past ten years \% It is next contended that the rural population has been absorbed by our cities. Why is it that our agricultural classes are attracted to our cities; why is it they wish to leave the farm and risk the battle of life in the already over populated cities of Canada-over-populated in comparison with the country districts? The reason for it, I think, is perfectly plain; it is the disabilities under which farmers labour, they having to force a great proportion, in many cases the bulk of their products, through the high American tariff. This has so reduced the profit upon their operations that they have become discouraged with their calling, and many of them have been driven in despair to seek a living in the cities of our land. In addition to this tribute to the American treasury they have to pay also an excessive tribute to our own treasury here on the goods imported for their use, and a heavier tribute still, into the pockets of the protected manufacturers of our country. The McKinley Bill has most certainly increased this disability. Is the drain from our rural constituencies to be continued? Are the people to flee from our rural districts and mass themselves in the cities of our country? Surely if this movement is to go on, the danger of it must be apparent to any thinking men. It cannot be in the interest of this country to have our population massed in the cities, draining the agricultural sections of the country and drawing away the people from that industry which above all others is the most important industry of the Dominion of Canada. These attempted explanations do not account for the loss of our people ; our people have gone neither to the North-West nor have they all massed themselves in the cities of our land. Knowing this, other efforts are made by hon. gentlemen opposite and their friends to show where the people have gone, and lately the electors of West Northumberlund were informed that it was nonsense to say that 2,037 actually lost to that riding were to be found in the United States. They said: If you sought for them you would find them peacefully sleeping beneath the snow in the cemeteries of that constituency. They stated that any one who doubted the statement that the population was dying off there, could find confirmation at the hands of the undertakers and "engravers" in that constituency. The Canadians are slowly dying off; no natural increase in our land! Shame I say; shame on men who so libel a vigorous race. Canada has suffered a grievous loss of population, and I think that the matter ought to le spoken about and a remedy suggested by hon. gentlemen opposite. It is not meet that hon. gentlemen sent here to govern this country should sit down in despair, bnd say that nothing can be done to remedy this lamentable state of affairs. There is a natural increase in this country; no person can deny it. I estimate the natural increase in ten years as equivalent to 20 per cent. If you add this natural increase to the population which we had in 1881, and add also the 886,173 immigrants who came to our shores in the last ten years, and then deduct the population as we have it, taken in the year 1891, we find that this country has suffered an actual loss during ths past ten years of $1,246,534$ souls. But if 20 per cent is too high an estimate for the natural increase, take 10 per cent, and we find that Canada sustained a loss during the ten years of 814,000 souls, who have fled from the country overburdened with the questionable blessing of a National Policy. Has nothing been done to attract population to this country? Has nothing been done to find employment for our people here? During the past thirteen years our railways have doubled their mileage. In the construction of this additional mileage, over $\$ 400,000,000$ has been spent during the past thirteen years, graving docks have been built, wet basins constructed, canals dug, custom houses and postoffices erected. Every effort has been made by the Government to attract population here and to find employment for those who are here. And yet, in spite of it all, we find the people hastening in droves out of our country. It is not infants in arms who go, but the very best of our young life. Our stalwart and hardy sons and our noble young women are departing from this country, leaving behind them the infants in arms, to be reared-if the present condition of things continues-to manhood's estate, only to follow those who have gone before to the United States. But some hon. gentlemen-I am sorry to say an hon. Minister of the Crown among others-state that few go except craven Grits, who leave their country for their country's good. Well, perhaps they are Grits, and that may account for the seven constituencies which I have named being now represented by Conservatives. But if they are cravens, at least they prove on American soil that they are more than equal for the Americans, in whose midst they forge ahead to the front, and are to-day leaders of men in their new bome. But I would ask the hon. member for East Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane), whose two sons are in the United States, if he will admit that they are cravens who have left their country for their country's good? That we are driving our young people away is not only apparent to us in Canada, but it is equally apparent to the mother country across the sea. In England it is seen that something is wrong in Canada, and there a remedy has been suggested. The Rerieir of Reriers says:

[^19]We wish these trade barriers removed. We are told that reciprocity can be had, but only by consenting to discriminate in favour of the United States in such articles as may be named in the treaty. And why not consent to such discrimination? Is it true, as we have often heard Conservative orators state, that the only tie which binds us to Great Britain is our trade relation to that country? Are we to sit idly here and see our sons, one by one, drift southward, followed by immigrants whom England entrusts to our care-is our natural wealth never to be developed-because we must not disturb that trade which forms the only tie which, according to the words of these hon. gentlemen, binds us to the mother country? When the tariff law known as the National Policy was proposed many years ago, it was shown that the raising of a high tariff against British goods was a hard blow at the development of trade with Great Britain. It was not framel for the encouragement or development of that trade. I grant that the framers of that tariff held it up as in the interest of Canada. They said that they wished to develop the industries of Canada, and that if it did strike a blow, and a heavy blow, against British trade it mattered not, because it was done in the interest of Canada. It was suggested that this might possibly imperil British connection if the only tie that bound us to Great Britain was our trade relation. The advocates of that policy answered: We framed this policy wholly in the interest of Canada, and if it imperils British connection, so much the worse for British connection. We do not go so far as these hon. gentlemen. We do not believe that the only tie which binds us to the mother land is our trade relation with that country. We believe that the great heart of England beats for us, not solely for the trade we give her. We are her children and the mother heart yearns to see us prospering and able to keep our kinsmen whom she sends among us, and able with their aid to build up a mighty nation here, whose achievements will reflect honour on the stock from which we spring. Our trade relation is not tire only tie which binds us to England. Our deatiny has brought us here. When Great Britain granted to us the priceless boon of responsible government, giving us absolute control over the destinies of this country, she intended that we should sogovern it as to bring about the highest destiny attainable for it. If in the working out of that destiny the trade relation with the old land should in a measure be disturbed, I am sure it will not in any degree inperil our political connection with the mother country, or dim in the least the love which England has for us. Now, that hon. gentlemen have failed to open the American market, they endeavour to belittle it. They endeavour to show us that it is after all of but slight consequence to us. The Trade and Navigation Returns present a different picture. They show that that market is of vast importance, nay, of vital importance to us. Our total exports last year were $$ 88,000,000$, of which the United States took $$ 37,000,000$, while England took $$ 43,000,000$. The Trade and Navigation Returns divide our exports under seven heads. Under every head, except that of animals and their products, we find that the United States took from us more than England. The items are as follows :-

| :---: | :---: | :---: |
| Animals and products...... | $20,991,143 | S 4.316,979 |
| Other farm products........ | 5,254,028 | $7,291,246$  4.600 |
| Produets or mine............ | 2,744,882 | 3,807,786 |
| Forest products ............ | 11,146,282 | 11,763,058 |
| Manufactured goods....... | 2,252,295 | 3,006,423 |
| Miscellaneous............. | 360 | 43,144 |
| Amount short returned at inland ports.. |  | $\begin{array}{r} $ 34,829,436 \\ 2,913,994 \end{array}$ |
|  | $43,243,784 | $37,743,430 |

In the fave of these figures, it cannot be said that the American market is not of tremendous importance to us. It cannot be shown that it is possible to us to open up a market which will replace it in any other country under the sun. I have said our farmers labour under a disability, because they have to force their products, through the American tariff, into the best markets for many of their products. The Minister of Finance says: England is our best market for beans, lambs, eggs, barley and all other products. Well, if England is our best market, why do we uot send our products there? We have had the McKinley Bill in force some time now, yet great as are the restrictions put upon our shipments by it, our goods have not gone seeking any other market in such volume as we are told they have. Take the first item mentioned by the Minister of Finance, the item of beans. We find that last year we sent not one dollar's worth to England, but $$ 493,486$ worth to the United States, upon which, under the McKinley Bill, we paid a duty of $$ 128,759$. The following table will show the volume of our exports of a few items of farm produce respectively to England and the United States, and the amount we paid in duty on said exports to the latter country :-

| Beans | Von | 3493 | $ 129,759 |
| Sheep | 344, 405 | 709,0 |  |
| Egay. | 150,291 | 1.455 .813 | 2010,20 |
| Hers | 156, 9 | 1.215,022 | 2988.710 |
| Potatoes | 1.400 | 1.478.092 |  |
| Barley... | 75,225 | 2,849.269 | 1,437,862 |
|  | $811,164 | -5,945,010 | $3,489,958 |

Under these seven items, the value of our exports to England was 8811,164 against $\$ 8,245,010$ to the United States, on which we paid $83,500,000$ taxes under the Mckinley Bill. Hon. gentlemen opposite contend that the shipper on this side does not pay thisduty. In the old lays they held the contrary opinion. Then they endeavoured to prove, and I think it was an easy matter, that the Canadian shipper paid the duties upon products shipped to the United States. Sir John Macdonald held this view, the Hon. Mr. Colly held this view, so did Dr. Orton, Mr. Farrow, and Mr. (iibbs. All these gentlemen contender that the Canalian shipper of natural products paid the duty levied by the Americans upon gools civossing the line. Hon. gentlemen opposite deny chis contention now, but some of them are frank enough to admit that there is truth in it, and I have myself hearl the hon. meniber for Cumberland (Mr. Dickey) admit that the Canadian shipper of farm proluce pays one-half the duty upon the goods he sends to the United States. The hon. member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) contended it was nonsense to say that the Americans were the natural purchasers of our horses. He said they were cheaper there than here. He said they were smuggling from the NorthWest States into Manitolia and the North-West Territories. Now, I happen to know that a carload of horses was sent from Pontypool, in Ontario, a station on the Canadian Pacific Railway, to Northern Dakota and sold there. Hon.gentlemen oppositesay that we can buy potatoes cheaper there than here. Why, then, is it that the Americans come here and purchase from us to the amount of $\$ 1,500,000$ in a single year? It is said that England is our natural market for barley, If so, why is it that such a small quantity of our barley found a sale there cluring the past year? The Nickinley Bill, they say, is a blessing in disguise, as it will teach Canadians self-dependence and cause them to look elsewhere for markets than in the United States. England is held up as our natural market, the only market to which Canadians have any right to send their products. Yet during the past year we find that this market was not able to tike from us the whole quantity of trade we have lost under the operation of the McKinley Bill. Last year our shipments to the United States of sheep fell off $\$ 248,410$, while our shipments to England also fell off \$141,894. Under the operation of the McKinley tariff our shipments of hay to the United States fell off last year \$546,984, and our shipments to England increased only $\$ 30,687$. Our sales of horses to the United States fell off over $\$ 682,000$, while our sales in England increased but $\$ 138,000$. Our sales of eggs fell off $\$ 718,415$, while they increased in England only $\$ 82,000$. Our sales of barley fell off \$1,733,293 against an increase in England of but $\$ 63,208$. The American market is no longer as profitable to us as it was in the past, and never will be so profitable again until, under reciprocity, we are relievel from the pressure of the Mc Kinley Bill. Our farmers are coolly told now that the Government can do nothing for them, and that they must. seek other markets for their wares. They are told that they can no longer depend on the Govermment for relieffrom their present depressedcondition. All hon. gentlemenoppositearefond of saying that hom. gentlemen on chis side decry the comntry, that they are forever painting blue ruin, and proclaiming abroad that Canadia is a bad place to live in, and that it is not the country which we would fain helieve it to be. Now, the hon. member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) lahoured here last night to show that Canadia was not as favourahle a place for farmers to settle in as the United States. He said that the farmers here could not compete with the Americans, that they laboured under disall vantages which the American farmers did not labour under, and that our farmers were unable to compete with the Americans even in our own market. The Minister of Finance says that competition with the American farmer in the same market would be very injurious to our own farmer. What do these hom. gentlemen mean? Do they mean that the farming people who come from Europe will be labouring under disadvantages if they settle in Canadi, under disadrantages which are unknown to the American farmer? Such language will not encruarage emigrimts to come to us. These are "blue ruin" speeches. We believe that our country is one of rast possibilities, we know that it is. We know that vast stores of mineral wealth lie unused in the bowels of the earth, and that all we require is a market for this mineral, and that this is true especially in regard to iron ore. There is no use for the mineral wealth of Ontario unless we have the American market. Now that market is eat off it is no longer possible for the owners of mines in Ontario to utilize those mines and derive a profit from their busines.s. Their mines are of no more use to them than a sack of gold would be to a shipwrecked mariner starving on a barren rock in mid ocean. We are now toll that we can no longer hope for any improvement, that those who own mines in Ontario must not look upon them any longer as a possession of value. Owners of cedar are told that there is mo relief for them, that the heavy American duty of 20 per cent is not to be lifted, that no arrangement is possible by which that duty will be removed from the cedar. We are told that it is wrong to advocate the policy which is adrocated by the Liberal party, that it is wrong to remove the artificial barriers that have been erected between the trade of this country and the trade of our neighbours to the south of us, people of the same flesh and blood, people largely of the same nationality, people who feel and act as we do. Yet these very men strongly endorse the efforts of capitalists to bridge the natural karriers between the two countries. It is right to construct at enormous cost railway bridges over, and tunnels under, rivers to overcome the natural barriers, but it is wrong to remove the artificial barriers we ourselves have placed hetween these two countries. The hon. the Minister of Justice is credited with saying that our standard is not one that will rally the youth, the hope and the pride of Canada under it, that our policy will not attract the youth of this country. I ask hon. gentlemen opposite if they believe it appeals to the young manhood of Canadians to ask them in constituency after constituency to vote for the Government candidate and they will get a railway subsidy, if it appeals to their manhood to ask them to vote for the Govermment candidate and they will get their harbour dredged to vote for the Government candidate or the mills and factories will be shut down, and they will be thrown out of employment, that they must vote for the Government candidate or the Prince Edward Island tunnel will not be built, that they must vote for the Government candidate or the hridge at Quebec will not be constructed. that theymust vote for the (Government candidate or the railway through North Victoria will not be subsidized, that they must vote for the Government candidate or a post office at Picton will not he binilt, that they must vote for the Government candidate and the harbour at Goderich will be improvel. I do not think it appeals to the manhood of young Canadians to gerrymander the constituencies, in such a way that the people are cheated out of the possilility of expressing their opinions constitutionally through their representatives in this House to say they will hive the Grits so that the Conservative party shall be able to capture a majority of the seats for Ontario when the popular rote puts them in a minority of orer $Z,(0 \times)$. Does it appeal to them for the Government to construct a womlerful engine for the destruction of their opponents and call it a Franchise Act? Does it appeal to the manhood of young Canadians to tie the hands of the opponents of the Government and then bravely say: Stand up and fight us? I think an honest effiort to better the condition of this comatry and to battle for the oppressed should appeal to the minds of young Canadians, and I know that it does in spite of the victories which the prolicy of the Conservative party appears to have won in the heje-elections. Certainly a great change is contemplated by us, and the trate of the country will no doubt be disturbed if the policy of the Liberal party contes into force. We know there are risks to be run, but the plack which carried the Liberals through the battle for representation by population, responsible gorernment and the reforms of albuses in the past, will nerve their arm now to go on and to fight against a policy which is sapping the life-blood of our nation. It is silly to say that there is nothing in the history of the Liberal party or in their policy to attract young Canadians. What we ask is fairplay to enahle the people of this country to speak freely upon the public issues of the day, and not to so arrange matters that the Government may he able to gain a victory in spite of the fact that they have not a majority of the electors of the country at their back. There is nothing in our policy of which we are ashamed. The adrocacy of it is not to be abandoned by the Liberal party. We are not to be taunted by our opponents because of our temporary defeats. Cowardly attacks were made during the by-elections, which amounted almost to a general election. It was said that the Liberal party were in despair, that they would abandon their discredited policy, and it was even stated that the leader of the party had handed in his resignation. If those gentlemen had heard the ringing cheers with which the Liberal party welcomed their leader, they would have known that the firm abiding faith of the Liberals in their leader is unimpaired. There is no intention on the part of the Liberal party to abandon the policy which they have been advocating, and there is certainly less intention on their part to sever the connection which binds them to the noble leader, who will yet. in spite of Franchise Bills and Gerrymander Acts, lead them to victory in this country.

Mr. CRAIti. I iutend to occupy the attention of the House for only a short time. I do not propose to answer any of the arguments that have been adduced by hon. gentlemen opposite; I think there is no need of my doing so. The people of this country, in the bye-elections, have completely answered all the arguments offered in defence of the policy of hon. gentlemen opposite, and have shown that they do not approse of their policy. Now, we have been told that these bye elections were carried ly thoolle, by promises of all kinds. Sir, I think hon. gentlemen opposite are very foolish to deceive themselves in that way. I believe the penple have voted as they did because they are loyal to this country, because they are loyal to the connection with Great Britain, and because, whatever the hon. geutleman who has just taken his seat (Mr. Dawson) may think, the people of this comatry, by a large majority, have determined that there must be no diserimination against the mother country in favour of the United States. 1 propose to offer a few reflections on the Buiget speech, a speech which I listened to with a great deal of pleasure. I thought that speech was a most admirable one because of its hopeful spirit. I regretted to hear, as I did for the first time, that the member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Curtwright) had issued that pamphlet, intending and tending therely to injure the credit of this country. I am satisfied that the speech to which we listened a day or two ago hy the Finance Minister will have the etiect from its hopeful tone and its encouraging statements, of raising the credit of this country. I was pleaised to learn from that speech a fact which many of us already knew. and which the comntry now will learn a whoritatively, that the debt of this country is not increasing. In the elections we hear a great deal ahout the debt of our country. I do not think myself that a debt is an advantage to any country. But a country like this has to have a delt, and I am glad to know that we have something to show for this debt. At the same time I am exceedingly pleased to know, and I believe we are all pleased to know, that the delt is not increasing, but is stationary, and I hope we will soon le able to lessen it. I was also pleased to listen to the statement that the taxes on the people of this country are not increasing. We all know that taxes are no blessing to any country; and $I$ an rejoiced to think that the taxes in this country are so light a burden upon the people, and are so easily loone. Why, Sir, it requires speakers in an election to show the people how they are robbed before they know it. The taxes in this country are not taken out of the people in such a way as to oppress any of them. I am satisfied of this, that the men who pay the principal part of the taxes in this country are men who are abuidantly able to pay them, are the wealthy men of the country, and that the farmers of the country, about whom we hear so much, and for whom such sympathy is expressed at election times, are the men who pay a very small proportion of these taxes. At the same time I am very glad to know that the taxes are not increasing, that the burden of debt and taxation is very little more than it was many years ago, while at the same time we have a great many more public works to show for it. Sir, I was also pleased to listen to the statement that the exports of this country were increasing. While the debt is not increasing, and while the taxes are not increasing, the exports are increasing. This is a sign of prosperity. We might have been prepared to learn that the exports are decreasing when we have heard so much about the McKinley Bill. I wish here to suy that I do not think the McKinley Bill is a blessing in disguise. I am willing to admit that the Mckinley Bill is an injury to this country, and I believe it was partly intended to be so, at least, it was directed in some respects against the products of this country. I do not know that it was directly intended to injure the country, but I do believe that it was intended to remove from competition with the United States farmers certain articles which have been largely exported from this country to the United States. But in spite of the Mchinley tariff, in spite of that wall which has heen built up by the great nation to the south of us, I am pleased to learn that our exports are increasing. Sir, this McKinley tariff wall was not built up by us. Why, some hon. gentlemen talk is if the McKinley tariff had heen made by this Parliament, as if the (iovernment in power at present was responsible for it. Now, sir, we are not responsible in any degree for the McKinley tariff, and as I say, in spite of it, our exports to Great Britain are increasing. I think we sometimes undervalue that market because it is so far away, and we are constantly thinking of what a good market we would have if that wall was taken down between us and the neighlouring Republic. Sir, there is a market in Great Britain with no wall aroume it ; there is a market that is open to the very things we have to export; there is an admirable market where the highest prices are paid, and I think the Government deserve all credit for turning the attention of the people to that market. There is another fact mentioned in the Budget speech worthy of notice, and that is, that the savings of the people of this country are increasing. We might think, from listening to some of the speeches of hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House, that our people were constantly becoming poorer, but when we look at their savings in our banks, when we see that at the present time they amount to over $$ 2(0), 000,000$, I think it would be hard to persuade any one that the people are becoming poorer. I am disposed in this matter to agree with our friend, the Premier of Ontario, who, in an admirable letter, made the statement that the farmers of this country are just as well off, and just as comfortable, as the farmers in the great Republic to the south. I am satisfied that that is the case; hut I will go further, and I will say that I believe that the people of this country generally, from one end to the other, are more comfortable than the people in the reighbouring Republic. Certainly we have not so many millionaires, but I do not know that it is any great loss to be without them. Nevertheless our people generally have money in the banks, they are gradnally improving their position. I know that in the district of country that I represent, the farmers are not the men to be most pitied, because they are as comfortable as any other class of the community. Sir, there was another part of that speech to which I listened with a great deal of interest, and that was the part that related to the negotiations carried on at Washington. We learned then what is the meaning of unrestricted reciprocity. Now, that is something that I have been trying to tind out for a long time. We have been told by some of the members on the other side of the Ȟouse that it did not mean discrimination against (ireat Britain. I do not know that any of them asserted distinctly that it did, but some of then hinted that, perhaps, it might. It was impossible, however, to find out just exactly what it did mean. Now we know from the statement made by the Minister of Finance that it means exactly that, and only that, that if we have unrestricted reciprocity with the country south of us we must have discrimination against (ireat Britain and against every other country in the world. I was somewhat surprised to hear the hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat, say that he was prepared to go in for that discrimination against Great Britain ; I was rather surprised to hear him express the opinion that it was better to have free trade with the United States and to shat ourselves out from the rest of the world. I am not of that opinion ; I believe it would be a misfortune instead of a henefit to us. Sir, I was a little surprised to hear the member for South Brant(Mr. Paterson) the other evening, twitting the members on this sile of the House for applauding that statement of the Finance Minister. He said he had never witnessel such a scene in the House of Commons before-the Minister of Finance saying that there was no chance of obtaining a treaty with the United States, and the statement being applauded by members on the ministerial side of the House. Sir, I applanded on that occasion, anil I will tell you why, and I believe my reason was that of every other member on this side of the House who applauded that statement. We did not applaud because the opinion was expressed that at the present time there was no chance of getting reciprocity with the United States, but we applauded for the reason that the statement contirmed what had been stated by Conservatives on every platform in this country, that is, that unrestricted reciprocity meant discrimination against Great Britain and against every other country except the United States. Sir, that had been done, and it showell we were right in rejecting unrestricted reciprocity just because it did mean that very thing. Sir, a great deal has heen said by some speakers about the Minister of Finance asking Mr. Blaine how to raise the revenue. It has been said that it was very strange for the Minister of Finance to suy to Mr. Blaine: We shall lose this revenue; will you tell us how to raise the amount. I did not, in listening to the statement of the Minister of Finance, gather from it auy such meaning. I listened to the statement, and I gathered from it this meaning: It was said we must have discrimination. In reply it was asked: How, then, are we going to raise the revenue? We shall be very glad to make a treaty if at all possible; but if we enter into such a treaty, how can we raise a revenue? You, Mr. Blaine, will see distinctly that it will be impossible for us to, do it. That is the way I understood the statement of the Minister of Finance, and the way it was meant to be understood. I say here frankly that I am rather disappointed that a reciprocity treaty is not possible at present. I believe a reciprocity treaty made on a fair basis would be an advantage to this country. I have always thought so, I think so to-day, and if I can do anything to aid the attainment of that result I am willing to do it. My constituents are of this opinion, and I agree with them in this respect. But I am satisfied of this, that my constituents will bear out the Government in refusing to enter into a treaty on such terms, which are the only terms according to Mr. Blaine. I am satisfied they will not consent to have a treaty made on the condition of discrimination against Great Britain. Ido not say that is theonly objection to unrestricted reciprocity; I have several other objections to it. I see a great objection in American manufactures coming into competition with our own. I believe that would be most disastrous. It may he asked, why cannot we compete? We might do so if we had manufactories on the same scale. The Americans possess large factories, adapted to supply a large inarket ; our factories are adaptel to supply a small market. It would undoubtedly take a long time to catch up to the Americans, and in the meantime many of our industries would be ruined. That is the view I take of unrestricted reciprocity, and I could not vote for it. But I should be gratified to see reciprocity in a limited sense, such a treaty as we had before, with perhaps some additions: not unrestricted reciprocity, for that would not be for the good of the country, even if it was not open to the fatal objection of discriminating against all other countries. But while we have not been able to obtain a reciprocity treaty satisfactory to this country, yet I do not despair that at some future time the United States will see it to their advantage to enter into such a treaty. I know that the present is an unfortunate time to make one. The Ainerican people are getting ready for a presidential election, a great struggle will ensue, and I do not think we can expect to receive from them due consideration at this time of a proposal for a reciprocity treaty. But I hope the United States will themselves be able to see in a short time that such a treaty would be not advantageous to this country alone, but would conduce to the advantage of the great Republic itself. What should be our attitude to the United States of America? Sir, I do not sympathize with any who speak unfriendly words of that country. I do not sympathize with any one who would endeavour to raise or increase unfriendly feelings on their part. We are here on this continent together. We must live together in peace; we must be friends. Let us do our part to be friends with them. Let us sometimes bear with some things we do not think exactly right from them. They have a difficult task to fulfil, as we sometimes find we have in this country. They have a large mixed population to please, and I am satisfied that things are done sometimes by politicians of which they themselves do not approve, and which the best part of the American people do not approve either. So I say, I believe in the maintenance of a friendly attitude towards the United States; but at the same time, I believe in being firm. This country has rights. This country must stand up for its rights, and this can be done in no unfriendly spirit but in a spirit of friendliness. I believe that if we take this stand, and are firm but friendly, and are friendly but firm, we will not only cominand their friendship but at the same time command their respect. Sir, I believe the true policy of this country is what is called the National Policy, the protection of our manufactures, but not excessive protection. I am not in favour of excessive protection. I believe in just such protection as will encourage our nanufactures, but at the same time I am well aware that there are a great many articles which cannot be made in this country. I would advise that, if possible, our manufacturers should obtain all necessary protection, while at the same time we should lessen the burdens on the people as much as possible. In order to do this, we should be economical. I was glad to hear the Minister of Finance say, that this was the determination of the Government. All hon. members of this House should assist the Government in carrying into effect that determination. We should assist them by abstaining from pressing claims which we do not think the finances of the country will be able to stand. I believe in being economical, but, at the same time, we must carry on public works in the country. They can, however, be carried on in an economical spirit. If we have a policy of this kind : protection to our manufactures, as low a tariff as possible on goods which cannot be manufactured here, the burdens of the people lessened and an economical expenditure of the public money, I am satisfied the people of this country will sustain the Government which carries out this policy. Sir, I believe in a hopeful spirit for this country. I rejoice that the speech of the Minister of Finance was full of hope for this Dominion. I see no reason why we should despair. I believe in speaking words of praise for our country, I regret the hon. member for South Brant (Mr. Paterson) is not in his seat, for I endorse heartily his glowing words in favour of Canada, spoken the other evening. If more such words uere spoken, they would redound to the credit of those who uttered them, as well as to the credit of the people. I rejoice to belong to the hopeful party, to the party which sees that this country has a future before it, and I hope that our friends opposite will at last, after they have seen the results of the elections which have taken place, drop their despairing jolicy, drop their "blue riin" cry to which we have so often listened with regret. If they will let that alone and adopt a policy of hope for the future, they will have a nuch better chance of regaining the confidence of the people of this country, than by maintaining the course they have pursued so long.

Mr. MACDONALD (Huron). Mr. Speaker, I wish to engage the attention of the House for a short time in discussing this question. The Budget debate embraces so many subjects that it is really difficult to discern what line of discussion it would be best to adopt. But the Minister of Finance the other day brought certain charges against the hon. member for South Oxford in regard to statements he had made as to the position of this country, and I do not think I could do better than to follow the statements which he has made. I am in a position to show that the statements made by the hon. member for South Oxford are substantially true. The first statement the Minister of Finance made-and in respect to which he blamed the hon. member for South Oxford-was, that he declared in the document published in the Economist that dur, ing 13 years Canada had trebled her taxation. My impression is that $I$ can show by figures that the statement of the member for South Oxford was within the limit of truth. The Minister of Finance will know from the Public Accounts that the taxation from Customs and Excise in 1879 amounted to about $$ 18,000,000$. Three times that sum would be $$ 54,-$ 000,000 . So that the expenditure must have proved to be $$ \mathbf{5 4}, 000,000$ in order to prove the correctness of the hon. gentleman's statement in the Economist. That taxation is now $$ 30,000,000$ and over, leaving $$ 24,000,000$ to account for. The writer in the Economist did not say that $$ 54,000,000$ was collecterl from the people in the form of Customs duties, but in the form of taxation. It is well known to every one who understands the protective system, that it was inaugurated for the purpose of giving protection to those who are engaged in the manufacturing industries of our country, and before there is protection granted there must be an increased price that must be paid to persons engaged therein, so as to enable them to realize a better position than the manufacturers in other countries who send their goods here to compete with them. I am satisfied that the people of this country pay, not in Customs tax, but in increased price on accomnt of the protective system, far more than $$ 24,000,000$. Take, for instance, the article of sugar. The Finance Minister stated last year that he was about to remove with one fell stroke, to use his own words, three and a-half million dollars of taxation off the shoulders of the people of this country. Now if that taxation was not imposed upon the shoulders of the people of Canada he could not remove it, and therefore three and a-half millions was paid by the people on that single article of sugar. Again, take the article of coal oil. We pay no less than $$ 1,800,000$ more for the coal oil consumed by the Canadian people than the same number of people pay in the United States for "No. 1 water white" of their own coal oil. Then again, if I had time, I might show the extraordinary tax imposed upon the people of this country by the high protective duty on all kinds of hardware ; iron and other things of that kind, and I might go on to roll up a sum which would come to more than $$ 24,000,000$; and this $$ 24,000,000$ added to the $$ 30,000,000$ collected on Customs and Excise, would three times exceed the taxes of 1879. The Minister of Finance suid that the statement of the hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) was not true, but he did not take the trouble to give his reasons for his conclusion, and you must know, Mr. Speaker, that a contradiction of a statement is far different from the confutation of a statemeut. The Minister of Finance gave the contradiction but he did not dare to enter upon the confutation of the fact, because he knew it was impossible to do so. The Minister of Finance read from the letter of the member for South Oxford :
"There exists a very great depreciation in farm lands.".
Is that a falsehood? Is it not a correct statement Will asingle member supporting the Government ge up in his place, and upon his responsibility as a member give us any instance where the value of farm lands in this country has increased during the last ten years? Will he name a few farms that have been sold eight or ten years for a certain price, and will he name the same farms which have been sold lately for a higher price than they sold for a few years ago? I gave a statement last year, which it is not necessary for me to repeat, of a number of farmers within twenty miles of where I live, in the finest county of the Dominion, which were sold eight or ten years ago, and which within three years changed hands at an average reduction in the sums paid for these farms of $22 \frac{1}{2}$ per cent. Will the hon. gentlemen who say that lands are not being depreciated in this comitry give us facts to show the correctness of the position which they take ? If they consult the report of the Burean of Industries, a book published by the Legislatare of Ontario irrespective of party predilections or any thing of that kind, we will find that farm lands, irrespective of improvements have largely decreased during the past five years. When you take that authority, and also actual statements made by responsible parties in regard to the conditions of land throughout the country, we must conclude that the statement made by the nember for south Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) is in every particular true. The Minister of Finance charges the hon. member for south Oxforl with writing in the Economist:
"There has been an immense increase in the aggregate debt of this country."
Now, Nir, that is another fact which is well known to all parties who examine the public accounts of this country. It is well known that the net debt in 1868 was only $\sin 5,(000,(00)$, and that in the first five years of the Conservative alministration it hat increased to $\$ 108,000,000$. It is said that daring the administration of the Hon. Alexander Mackenzie the debt went up by nearly $\$ 40,000,(1) 0$, and therefore the increase was in a larger proportion per annum than it was under the Conservative administration. Let me give you the reason of that accoriing to the statements made up by the authority of a member of the Conservative (iovernment. Sir Leonard Tilley, in his Budget speech of 1873, said:

[^20]Way; altogether a total expenditure of $\mathbf{3 3 3 , 9 8 2 , 9 6 3 .}$ Now, Mr. Speaker, you will bear in mind that $88,967,060$ of this money was voted by Parliament previous to the accession of Mr. Mackenzieto power, and only $\$ 2(1,0(0)$ was spent ly Mr. Mackenzie outside of the necessity of carrying on the engagements and responsibilities placed upon him by the Conservative (iovermment. You will, therefore, see that the expenditure during the Mackenzie administration was not altogether undertaken by him, and Mr. Mackenzie was not responsible for the whole amount of money expended during his term of five years. The Minister of Finance alsotold us that the burden of ourdebt was measured hy the interest. That is not the proper view to take of our debt. It is a vicw which is never taken of it outside of this House. The United States Government does not take that view of its debt, but it seeks from year to year to set by a large sum of money for the purpose of reducing the debt. However, it appears to be the principle of the present (Government to measure the indeltedness by the amount of interest we paty. That debt remains upon us, and is an obligation to pay which we should nieet, because those who come after us must make provision for public works and improvements in the country for which they themselves will be responsible. We must and should set aside a yearly sinking fund, larger ly far than we (lo now, for the purpose of meeting our preselt obligations. The United States has estahlished that system, and within the last few years they have reduced their large indeltedness from a few more years the United States will be paid, and then she will be realy to mulertake new schemes for the progress and advancement of the country. And that is the way we should look upon the public debt of this country, and not, ats was done by the hon. Minister of Finance, by saying that now we paty only sl.fis per head in the way of interest, whereas a few years ago we paid sind. The hon. member for south Oxford was charged with having said that the mass of the people, notably the farmers, are distinctly poorer than they were twelve years ago. Mr. Speaker, I woull not desire to say that our people are getting porer, if I were not in a position ti) say that they are, the farmers particularly. Considering the amount of energy the farmers have put forth in the last twelve or thirteen years, they are not as well off as they should be, and in many respects they are worse off than they were at that time. How is it possible that they can be otherwise? I know that the Minister of Finance will say: There is the pessimist decrying the country, again; but he must remember that his own friends spoke in similar language when they thought it necessary. He will sememier what Sir John Macdonald, Nir Leonard Tilley and Sir David Macpherson said in regard to the condition of the country in 1878; and if the statements made loy us go to the old country and prevent immigration coming here, as hon. gentlemen opposite say they will, how can they justify the language of those men who spoke in a similar strain in 18\% 8? I say it is the duty of both the Opposition and those who support the Govermment, to lork at the facts as they stare them in the face; and if our people are not thriving, as their pluck, energy and pusi would justify, it is our duty to try to ascertain the cause of this want of prosperity, and seek by legislation, or by some other means, to improve the position of our people, so that their prosperity in the future will be much greater than it has leen in the pist. How can it be possible for our farmers to be as well off to-day as they were twelve years ago? Are the crops as gool now as they were then? Are the foreign prices for their prolucts as high as they were at that time? Is the property they own now as valnable as it was twelve years ago? Neither one nor the other is the case. If the crops fail, if the prices fail, and if the lamd has depreciated in value, I ask, as a common-sense question, how can it be said that the farmers are better off to-day than they were twelve years ago? But even admitting that to a certain extent they are better off, is it not reasonable to suppose that a man, after spenting twelve years of his life and energies, should be better off irrespective of any assistance he could receive from the fiovernment? And if by ectonomy, frugality, care and wisdom some have increased the value of their property, they have no thanks to give to the Government for any aid they have received from them. But the hon. Finance Minister again charges the hon. member for South Oxford with saying that the census returns show that Canala has lost, during the last ten years, no less than a million and i-half of people. Well, as to the number being exactly a million and a-half, it is very hard to say. It will depend wholly and entirely upon the percentage we take for the natural increase. The hon. member for South Oxforl, I helieve, took 2 ? per cent per annum. But suppose, for the sake of argument, we take the natural increase in the United States during the last ten years, which I think is fair, being 14 per cent. Now, is per cent of our population in 1881, 4.429, (MOO, is something over 600,000 people who should be added to the population by natural increase. Now, we are told by the report of the Minister of Agriculture -and I suppose it is true-that the number of immigrants who came into Canada during those ten years, expressing their intention to remain here as citizens, was no less than 866,010 . If you add these to the natural increase, according to the rate in the United Sfates, you have $1,486,000$ people added to the population during the last ten years. Now, the census returns show that the actual net increase in the population of Canada during the last ten years has been 504,000 . Deducting 504,000 from $1,486,000$ we have nearly a million people who have left our country and gone somewhere else. I challenge any hon. member opposite, I challenge the Finance Minister, to explain away the statement I have made, and I will sit down while he attempts to explain it. He surely will not say that the natural increase of this country should be less than that of the United States. I have always regarded the natural increase in Canada as much more than that of the United States under ordinary conditions. But taking the natural increase in the two countries to be the same, and the statements in the report of the Minister of Agriculture to be true, I ask where this million of people have gone? If this statement shows the country to be in a prosperous condition, then I do not know what a prosperous condition is. Now, the discrepancy between this conclusion of mine and that of the hon. member for South Oxford is just this, that he has taken the natural increase at $2 d$ per cent per annum, which it has been in some years; and doing that, his conclusion is perfectly just. Then, the hon. gentleman charges the hon. member for South Oxford with having declared that bribery is a pure matter of business routine in Canada. I am rather astonished that the hon. Minister of Finance mentioned that at all, becunse I believe that he understands in his innermost soul that that statement is absolutely correct. Some men may say that this is strong language; but if you consider the whole system upon which the Government has been conducted under the Liberal-Conservative regime, you will find that there has been a system of bribing provinces, bribing municipalities and bribing individuals, for a number of years past. How is this done" The system of subsidizing railways is one by which whole constituencies are bribed: better terms to the provinces is another method; the building of bridges, the erection of post offices and custom houses in various municipalities, are other methods employed for the purpose of securing votes. I know, Sir, that $\$ 16,0$ (0) was granted for a small railway which passed through my own constituency, and no less than four ablehorlice men, members of the fovernment, came to my town for the purpose of rubling it in to me by saying that the former representative of the constituency was the sole person to whom credit was due. Enquire in every constituency and province of Canala, and it will be found that bribery lies at the foundation of the success of the Liberal. Conservative party in maintaining itself in otfice so long. It is true, every word of it. Now, sir, that is not only my opinion. The hon. member for South Oxford was condemned the other day for having sent across the water a statement of the present condition of this country. But it was not necessary that the hon. gentleman should do anything of the kind. The people of England know very well the position of the country, and had expressed their opinion on it previous to seeing the letter of the hon. member for South Oxford in the Economist. Let me give you the opinion of some English journals in connection with this question of bribery. They speak for themselves. The writers are intelligent men; and some of the journals are Tory journals, and I propose to read you a few extracts showing their opinion as to how Sir John Mitedonald kept himself in power for so many years. The London Daily Chronicle says :
"It seems to be possible in the Dominion to secure the political support, not only of individuale, but of whole provinces, by gifts of money. The locality is bribed as well as the member, and the consequent demoralization spreads through all ranks."
Now, that is the opinion of an English paper, and that opinion was expressed before the article of the hon. member for South Oxford appeared in the Economist. Let me read again. The Saturday Reciear said :
"The whole tone of Sir Hector Langevin's apology, and of all that has been said during the enquiry, goes to show that in Canada, though it would be allowed to be wrong to pocket sums of thousands of dollars for one's personal use, it is perfectly fair to bleed a railway company or a firm of contractors, for money to be spent in corrupting the constituencies."
That is another Finglish opinion expressed in regard to the corruption carried on by the Conservative party of this country. Let me give you another opinion, and this is from a leading Tory paper, the St. James Gazette :
"While America is filling up and brimming over and increasing its population by millions, Canada, if not exactly stationary, is increasing very slowly indeed. It had been commonly supposed that, with the great boom in the North-West, Canada would have shown an increase of at least $2,600,000$ or $3,000,000$ during the last decade, and would be well on its was to something like the population of a second-rate European state ; but all such hopes have been dashed by the census. Over the vast territory of the Dominion, which on the map looks as large as Europe and which in fact contains habitable territory enough to hold the populations of France and Austria with ease, there are not nearly as many people as are to be found within the London police district. Canada, with its thousands of square miles of prairie, its mighty rivers, its inland seas, its ports and harbours on two oceans, its mercantile marine its pretensions to be a nation with a foreign policy, and even a navy of its own; ranks, so far as population goes, alongside of Bavaria or Holland or Roumania. The increase of population spills over the border and filis up the northern anil western States of the neighbouring Republic. The men who were born in Canada and should become citizens of the empire, grow up and die under the Stars and Stripes. The fact is not to be blinked. Whether we like it or not, Canada is not doing well, has not been doing well for some time past. It has tried modified free trade, and that has been $\Omega$ failure; it has tried close protection, and that has been a failure too.'
Here is another opinion from a paper called The Speaker:
"He won the general elections of $1878,1882,1887$ and 1891 with large sums voted by manufacturers out of the extra profits which he guaranteed them by a high import tariff. Whole constituencies bave been bribed by the offer of a bridge here and a dock there, and a new post ofice or custom house yonder, to rote for the man who could get the Government to spend 'most public money in the locality, quite irrespective of the general interests of the country.',
Let me still give you another opinion. The Star said :
${ }^{0}$ For 23 years he and his parts had maintained themselves in power without a break by a colossal system of bribery. He succeeded in throttling democracy and in debauching public opinion."
The Newcastle Jourual, a Tory paper, said :
" But it is to the Minister of Public Works the scandal is really traceable, for 'passive connivance'-though too strong a phrsese to meet the view of the majority or of Parliament-is probably as near as so very vague a phrase can be to an accurate description of the 'it's all right, as long as I'm not in it 'sort of sentiment that is at the bottom of a good many scandals in this world."
I think I have given sufficient opinions to show that the English press corrohorate the statements I have made with regard to the system of bribery on which this Administration is constructed. The Liberal-Conservative party have appealed to the selfish side of humanity in the country. They have appealed to their pockets, and as a venal vote stands between the extremes on both sides, they have sought with success to purchase the votes of that venal portion and thus change the elections in their favour. This has been done in the byeelections. The hon. gentleman who is to follow me knows that full well, because he has passed through the county adjoining mine and is aware of the work done by the innumerable boodlers who have no ability except that of paying money for this venal vote; and those very boodlers who worked their nefarious traffic in this County of Bruce moved immediately afterwards into the County of West Huron and there conducted their same boodling plans during that election. The result of these corrupt mancuvres was that they debauched the constituency. Hon. gentlemen opposite say there is a revolution against the free trade policy of the Liberal party. Nothing of the kind. Nine farmers out of ten will agree that free trade with the United States would be profitable to them, but when you bring the influence of money and boodlers to bear upon them, you gather from the ranks of farmers and others sufficient in a close constituency to carry the day.
Some hon. MEMBERS Shame, shame.
Mr. MACDONALD (Huron.) Yes, shame upon the party that would use such means, and I am thankful to the hon. gentlemen for expressing their honest opinions so loudly.

Mr. SPROULE. What became of your men when you got into the courts?

Mr. MACDONALD (Huron). The hon. member for South Oxford was blamed for stating what is known over the length and breadth of the country, that there has been a system of bribery put in force, from the highest to the iowest, in order to maintain the Government in office. Now, the hon. gentieman, having cast away from the hon. member for South Oxford, thought fit to state that the trade of the country was reasonably progressive. I cannot understand what he means by "reasonably progressive." If he turns up the Trade and Navigation Returns and comparesour present trade with that of 1873 , he will find the advance is very slight. Allow me, Sir, to draw your attention to a few figures taken from the Trade and Navigation Returns, and I will ask the hon. gentleman who will succeed me to say if he is pleased with this advancement of trade. We must measure the advancement of the country by our export trade. I notice that the Finance Minister, when he found that the export trade was against us, spoke very forcibly of the home trade, and when the export trade was in our favour he spoke of the export trade; but hon. gentlemen must bear in mind that our prosperity must le largely measured by our export trade, for it is by what we send to other countries and get back in exchange that our prosperity is measured. In 1873, we sent to Great Britain $38,743,848 worth. That was increased in 1891 to $$ 49,280,858$. That is a reasonable increase because the products of this country have increased in that time. Four millions of people have been working in this country for that time, and it would be terrible if the energy of those people would not increase our trade with a country whose markets and ports are open to all we senid them, and yet we have only increased about $$ 10,000,000$ in all those years. Our exports to the United States in 1873 were $$ 42,072,526$, and last year we sent to them $$ 41,138,695$, a slight reduction. Does that show that our trade is increasing, notwithstandingall the energy shownin this country in attempting to revelop it? To France our export trade in 1873 amounted to $$ 631,90^{\circ}$, and, after a great effort on the part of the Government to increase our trade with that country and after great promises in that regard, our trade has dwindled down to $$ 253,734$. Is that satisfactory? We exported to Spain in $1873 $ 25,080$ worth of goods, and in 1891 that had only increased to $$ 67,110$. Then take Newfoundland, our sister colony, which is willing to take a large proportion of our surplus products. In 1873, we had a larger trade with Newfoundland than we have to day. My hon. friend, the Finance Minister, has promised every year that we were about to extend our trade with the West Indies, but instead of that we find that our trade with the West Indies has been reduced from $$ 3,988,493$ in 1873 , to $$ 3,122,770$ in 1891. Is that a satisfactory condition of trade? Does that satisfy the Tories? It does not satisfy the Liberals, and I believe, that if the Liberals were in power, the trade with foreign lands would increase by leaps and bounds. There is one country with which our trade has largely increased, and that is Australia. In 1873 our exports to Australia amounted $\% ~ $ 41,822$, and in 1891 they reached the figure of $8 i 89,100$. But that does not open up a market for the farmers of Canada, because no farm products go to Australia, und there is no market there for our farmers. The markets of the United States are barred against us and all that we send there goes in spite of the barriers which two foolish Governments have placed in the way. My hon. friend goes on to say that the trend of trade is towards Britain, in order, I suppose, to show that Britain is our natural market. He says:

"I bave a table here which I will read, simply to show the trend of trade within the last few years, and to give us hope and confidence that no McKinley Bill or any other of a like nature necessarily bars the current of Canada's export trade or the current of its general business. Comparing 1888 with 1891, our exports of animals and their products to the United States fell from $$ 7,595,000$ to $$ 4,316,000$, a decrease of 42 per cent, whereas the exports of the same to Great Britain rose from $$ 16,010,000$ in 1888 to $$ 21,000,000$ in 1891 , an increase of 29 per cent. The exports of agricultural products to the United States fell from $$ 10,000,000$ in 1888 to $$ 7,000,000$ in 1891, a decrense of 29 per cent, while those sent to England rose from $$ 4,222.000$ in 1888 to $$ 5,254,000$ in 1891, an increase of 25 per cent.'
The hon. the Finance Minister could not but know that there was a cause for the decrease of our trade with the United States. In the first instance he said that the McKinley Bill did not interfere with the trend or current of our export trade, and then he contradicts himself, because he shows that our trade with the United States has been reduced while our trade with England has been increased. The McKinley Bill imposed a very heary duty on our barley, and the result was that, instead of sending to the United States $10,000,000$ bushels as we did in 1889, we only sent $4,751,000$ bushels in 1891. What was the cause of that? Was the trend of trade changed by the McKinley Bill or was it not? Any one with one eye open could see that the trend of trade was changed. Take another article, the article of horses. Previous to the adoption of the McKinley Bill, in 1889, we exported to the United States 16,118 horses. The hon. gentleman says that the McKinley Bill did not disturb the current of trade, but in 1891 we only sent to the United States 9,937 horses. Did not that disturb the current of trade? Where did the horses go? They remain still in the hands of Canadian farmers, and horses now sell for $\$ 20$ or $\$ 30$ less per head than they would have fetchel if the McKinley Bill had not been passed. But. the hon. gentleman said that this Government did not pass the McKinley Bill and were not responsible for it. No one on this side of the House said they did, but we maintain that, if we could get freer trade relations with the United States, the McKinley Bill would have to be removed, and the difficulties we have to contend against would cease to exist, so that we would have the advantages which we have lost under the operation of the McKinley Bill. In order to show how the current of trade has been affected by the McKinley Bill, I may refer to another article, that of poultry. We only sent last year about one-half of what we sent, previous to the passage of the McKinley Bill, to the United States. In eggs we sent over $13,000,000$ dozen previously to the passage of that Bill, and last year we only sent $7,500,000$ dozen, or a little more than one-half. Then in the article of hay, we sent over 100,000 tons to the United States lefore the passage of that Bill and last year we only sent 54,000 tons. Yet the hon. gentlemen will state before the House and the country what the figures of the Trade and Navigation Returns do not bear out, that the McKinley Bill did not alter the trend of exportation from this country. What have the Canadians done with their barley? Have they sent it to the United Kingdom? Not at all. The farmers found that they were blocked out of the United States, and we find that, instead of having 750,000 acres under crop as they had in 1888, last year that was reduced to 550,000 acres, or about one-third, simply because they could not sell the crop which pays the farmer more than any cereal he produces on his farm. Now I want to say something about the expenditure. I look upon the expenditure of this country as being enormous in comparison with our population, and when I compare it with the expenditure of the UnitedStates I am still moreastonished that it takes so much money to govern the people in this country when compared with the government on the other side. The hon. the Finance Minister last year stated in his Pudget speech that there were a large number of payments made by Canada which were not made by the United States, therefore the two expenditures were not comparable. In the estimate that I am going to give I have shown that class of expenditure in Canada which has an equivalent expenditure in the United States, in order that I may bring the expenditures along the same lines in both countries. We were told last year by the Minister of Finance that we paid for pensions $\$ 104,000$; the administration of justice, $\$ 72 \pi, 000$; for the sinking fund, $\$ 1,938,000$; subventions to steamboats, $\$ 321,000$; militia, $\$ 1,280,000$; prorincial subsidies, $\$ 3,940,-$ 000 ; penitentiaries, $\$ 353,000$. Now, he said that these items had no corresponding items in the expenditure of the United States, and therefore it was not fair to compare the expenditure of both countries on account of those expenditures being extra in Canada. If we take out those items 1 have mentioned from the total expenditure of last year of $\$ 36,343,000$, we have left $\$ 27,716,000$, showing that 76 per cent of the whole expenditure is made upon other items of expenditure in Canada. Now, if it is fair to throw up on the one side the expenditures which the United States have not, then it is perfectly fair to throw ont of the account the expenditures which we have not. Now, the following are the expenditures which we hare not in this country : The navy cost the United States $\$ 22,007,000$; military, $\$ 44,583,000$; pensions, $\$ 107,000,000$; foreign intercourse, $\$ 1,649,-$ 000 ; expenses of the District of Columbia over income, $\$ 2,869,000$; sinking fund last year, $\$ 48,104,-$ 000 ; administration borne by the Central Government, $\$ 500,000$, making a total of $\$ 226,702,000$. Now, subtract that from the total expenditure of the United States last year, $\$ 345,831,000$, there is left for the other expenditures of the United States $\$ 119,129,000$, or 35 per cent only of the whole income to be expended in carrying out all the other departments of the Government, or, in other words, $\$ 2$ per heal for the United States as compared with 35.50 per head of the Canadian people. Now, Sir, I challenge a successful contradiction of these facts, I challenge any one to put them in any way that they will not show that we are largely burdened by taxation over that country. Then, again, let us submit another view of the matter. IVe had an expenditure in 1868 of $\$ 13,486,000$; five years afterwards, under the Conservatives, the expenditure had risen to $\$ 3,316,000$, or an annual increase of $\$ 1,466,000$, or 73 per cent of an increase cluring those years. Now, the Liberal Administration came in with an expenditure of $32: 3,316,000$, and five yearsafterwardsthey left power with anexpenditure of $\$ 23,5\left(13,1 \times(1)\right.$, or an increase of only $\frac{t}{t}$ of 1 per cent Now, the Conservatives came in in 1878, and have been in, I am sorry to say, until the present day. The expenditure now is $\mathbf{\$ 3 6 , 3 4 3 . 0 0 1}$, or an increase of 55 per cent, as compared with $\frac{5}{5}$ of 1 per cent under the Liberal Alministration. Still, they tell us they are just as economical and saving as the Liberala. Now let us take another comparison. Comparisons are sometimes said to be odious, but I do not think they should be orlious when they are made in the interest of the country. Now let us see if we expended more according to population under a Conservative Govermment than was spent under a Liberal fovermment. In 1868 we had a population of $3,630,(000$, and a controllable expenditure, for which I hold the late Government responsible, of $\$ 8,324$, (MO), or an increase from 1868 to 1874 of 50 per cent. Now, when the Hon. Alexander Mackenzie came into power in 1874 the controllable expenditure uniler the control of the ( iovermment was reduced to $: 36,543,0(k)$, or 21 per cent of a reluction. Now, the Conservatives came in again, and have been in until the present time, and while they were in, the controllable expenditure rose from $36,543,000$ to what it was last year, $\$ 11,2(02,(K K)$, or 70 per cent of an increase under the Conservative regime. Now, how will this compare with the expendiaure in the United States at different periods? Let us see the economy that has been exercised in the United States; on this economy a large portion of the prosperity and advancement of the United States depended, and the results have been, from that economy, that the United States are going on faster than we are:

Rate-United States. Expenditure according to Popllation.

| Year. | Popula- tion. | Expendi- ture. | Amount per Capita. |
| :---: | :---: | :---: | :---: |
| 1830. | 12,886,000 | $15,141,000 | $\begin{aligned} & $ \text { cts. } \\ & 1225 \end{aligned}$ |
| 1840. | 17,000,000 | 24,313,000 | 150 |
| 1850 | 23,191,000 | 41,000,000 | 180 |
| 1860 | 31,500,000 | 63,190,000 | 200 |
| 1890. | 63,000,000 | 345,000,009 | 550 |

So that in 1890 their expenditure amounted per capita to $\$ 5.50$ as compared with our expenditure per capita of \$7.47. With a large population the United States pay a less per capita expenditure than does our country with a small population. Now, no person will have the hardihood to say that the United States did not progress as rapidly as Cunara is progressing. Our opponents say that Canada to-day is not able to compete with the United States on equal terms ; they say that our institutions are in their infancy, that they still wear long clothes, they are still on the sucking bottles and have to be nursed by the Canarlian protective tariff so as to give them an advantage in the markets of the word. Sir, the individual states of that country compete with every other state in the American Union. There is the State of Michigan, only across the river from the Province of Ontario, a state that is competing successfully with all the manufacturing institutions of every other part of the American Union; still it is said we cannot compete with her. Who are the Canadians who say we are not equal in ability, we are not equal in industry, we are not empal in skill, aml push and energy, to any American that ever stood upon two legs? I ama (anadian, and I believe we are their equals. Have we not machinery at our disposal to manufacture articles as well as they? Have we not raw material at our hands as well as Michigan? Why is it that they can compete over in Michigan in their woolen manufactures, their woollen manufact ures, and every other form of manufacturing industries, with every one of the older states, and keep up their own progress and advancement, and make money: Yon must remember also that a large number of those institutions in Michigan are worked by Canadians who have gone across the river to take positions in those manufacturing industrics, and is not a Canadian on this side of the river equal in energy, push and capacity to a Camarlian on the other side of the river? Still those hon. gentiemen tell us that our industries are in their infancy and that we must throw around them certain protective duties in order that they may inerease and advance and multiply in our country. I never heard such nonsense spoken. I am ashamed of my country when I hear the Conservative blusterers upon public platforms say that we are not able to compete with our cousins across the line. But now it appears that we are not to get reciprocity, according to the statements made by the Minister of Finance ; and the hon. gentleman who spoke last, said that he was very sorry that we were not, he was in favour of reciprocity. . I do not believe, as I have often stated from my place in Parliament, that the Tory party is in favour of reciprocity of any kind. How could I come to any other conclusion? I have met Tory orators upon the public platforms of this country, I have discussed this question with them, and in every case they denounce reciprocity as being injurious to the farming interests of Canadia. I see an hon. gentleman looking at me, who, no doubt, will answer that reciprocity in natural prorlucts would be injurious to Canada. He said it would destroy our pork and fruit interests, our cattle interests, and our butter and cheese interests. Well, if it would destroy these, how was it the Government went to Washington and offered, within the last few months, to negotiate a reciprocity treaty on the very basis which the hon. gentleman said if we got it would destroy the interests of the very parties on whose behalf they pretend to have gone to Washington. In the riding of West Huron during the bye-elections there was on the platform at one of the meetings a Cabinet Minister, the Secretary of State. I heard him say that he was in a position to tell the country that three Ministers hal gone from Ottawa to Washington for the purpose of negotiating a treaty on the lines of the treaty of 1854; and he said: I am in a position to tell yon, farmers, that two articles which will be included in that treaty are binding twine and agricultural implements. Why did the hon. gentleman make that statement to the farmers: Because he knew that the farmers were paying higher prices for binding twine than they otherwise would pay. 1 am simply giving the statements of a Minister made on a public platform; and, in orler tocatch the support of the farming community, he went so far as to say that the Government were in favour of reciprocity. Mr. Montague, who spoke sulsequently, from the begiming to the end of his spech denounced reciprocity in every phase and feature. Here were two hon. gentlemen, one speaking for one section and the other for another section. Ministers went to Washington. Did they go there earnestly desiring to procure a reciprocity treaty": It appears to me the greateat folly, nothing but burlesque in legislation, to say that three ablebodied men going to Washington should ask the man to whom they went, what, in his opinion, was the lrest thing to be done for Camalit, how were we to raise the necessary funds to carry on the affairs of the Dominion. It appears as if the three statesmen could not devise means to raise the necessary fumls, and so they asked Mr. Blaine how he would propose to help them out of the difticulty. Mr. Blaine was further asked how he would negotiate a treaty, and as he hand had large experience in negotiating treaties, perhaps he would he kind enough to instruct the Ministers and inform them what would le the best to do in the interest of Canalla, from which they came. Then Mr. Blaine went on to tell them: If you camot atford to pall down the larriers and realize the blessings of free trade, if you cimont raise a revenue, if your people camut affion to be prosperons, it is not my duty tongive you alvice. I believe all these incilents will yet be worked up in the form of a play. I think you will see these men pictured on the public platform. There will be three Canadian Ministers going down with solemn comutenances,--some of them have faces that are maturally long. One will wear spectacles, and he will he the wisest looking of them all, and two other representatives would be present, asking Mr. Blaine how he woulddo if he were a Camalian? and seated by him would he General Foster, Blaine's coadjutor, ready to give his adrice. This piece would be termed a screaming farce, and it would le given in order to amuse the people at the close of a popular entertainment. I may not le very learned politically, but I never heard such a simple statement as that made ly the Minister of Finance. We want to be in earnest about this matter. I suppose it will be stated that there was difticulty with regard to woollen blankets in regarl to negotiating a treaty. Then the question of tin plates would be raised, in view of a great industry estallished in the States for making these wares, and an objection might he raised on that head. I suppose there would be some talk about tin pans and other articles. This is the most ricliculous and farcical thing I ever heard of. The people would not believe that such statements hiad been made without authority, or without any report being made to the Governor in Council in regard to the conclusions at which the Ministers arrived-we have nothing but the verbal statement of the Minister of Finance delivered in the course of his Budget speech. Would you not suppose that the representatives of $20,(\mu \omega), 000$ of people would have had a secretary to write down the conclusions at which they arrivel, and that Parliament would have received a protocol in advance of the speech delivered by the Minister of Finance. The whole thing is farcical, and no person of intelligence can believe that the negotiations were conructed with the view of obtaining a treaty, or even with honest intent. The Minister of Finance said they had enden, and adilen: I am very sorry they ended thus. I hope and trust that every member of the Likeral party, at least, will place no confidence whatever in the statements made by the Minister of Finance in regard to the impossibility of getting reciprocity with the Unitel States. I am as satisfied as I am that I am standing here this afternow, that if the Liberal party were in power, and if we sent delegates to Washingtom to nerotiate a treaty on fair and honourable terms to all parties, and were willing to give as well as take-iml wherer heard of making treaties with all the adrantages on one side--such a treaty could be secured. But if we were willing to give the same advantages to (ireat Britain and other comotries as we save the United states, and allowed their foods to come in equally as free, what benetit woulid the treaty be to the Americans" None at all. If they gave us a free market for our raw materials and many other articles, they might reasonably expect that we would receive their products upon different terms from those on which we receive the products of any other country. Cnless we go that far it is no use to think of oltaining a commercial treaty, for we could only secure it upon a proper basis, and that is the basis only on which we could accept it. for any country not to surrender its dignity, honour and interests, but to go in a broad-minded statesmanlike mamer and liscuss the whole commercial relations letween the two conntries and arrive at an arrangement that would be fair and equitable between the two comutries.

After Recess.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Before the question that we are now diseussing is put ly the Chair, I desire to offer some remarks on the financial statement presented to the Honse the other day. I think. however, that after the able and eloquent speech that has been delivered by my hon. friend from Huron (Mr. Macdonald), some gentlemen on the opposite side of the House should have felt disposed to rise and answer the arguments which were adranced by him. I certainly expected that the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule), at all events, who is always so ready to stand in the breach, would have made an attempt to answer the arguments of the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Macdonald.)

Mr. SPROULE. There was nothing to answer.
Mr. CAMPBELL. The hon. gentleman says there was nothing to answer, but he evidently means that there was nothing that he could answer.

The arguments of the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Macdonald) were so plain and pat so well that he found it impossible to answer them, and hence he considered it was better for him not to attempt it. The subject which we have been discussing is one of very great importance to the people of this conntry, and one which I think we should discoss thoronghly in order to ascertain if, upon this great and important question, we camot arrive at a hetter solution of the difficulty that stares us in the face than the proposal which the hon. Minister of Finance presents to us. Let me say in the tirst place that the Minister of Finance and the fiovermment have not done what I think they should do. I believe that in the present condition it woult: be wise for the dovermment to consider well the question of whether they camot curtail amd rerluce the expense of government. The Minister of Finance tells us that he estimates the expenditure for next year will he sist, $\boldsymbol{\sigma}(\boldsymbol{f}),(4 M)$, and that the inconse will be abont the same. Now, it appears to met that $\mathrm{S} 36, \pi(\mathrm{O}),(\mathrm{nN})$ is altogether too large an expenliture. anl that we ought to carry on the affains of this comatry just as well. and serve the interest of the conntry just as well, withanexpenditure of a grat deal less money than that. Let us remember that in 189 s the affairs of this conntry were catried on by the Liberal Alministration for an (, (M) . Wie have not a single acre of hand more now than we had then; we have only a bare half million of people more than we hat then, and does it not seem strange that che affaits of the country are now spending $8: 36, \pi(n),(n) \%$ I take the opportunity of saying that, in my opinion, there is no country in this wide word in which it costs the people so much to govern themselves as it does in the Dominion of Cimata. What is this $33(6,500,0(1)$ spent for? It is not to haild our canals, not to bonus our railways, not even to huilil our public works. because we are borrowing money year after year for that purpose. We have increased the clebt of this Dominion within the last ten yearshy about Sl(K), (KM), (KM) to enlarge our canals, and bonus our railways. and erect our public buildings, so that, in order to keep up the machinery of govermment in this Dominion, we are spending $336,0(0),(0) 0$ a year, which means a cest of $8.4^{7}$ for every man, woman and rhild in this Dominion, simply for the purpose of governing themselves. It appears to me. Mr. Speaker, that this is altogether too much, and I leelieve that we could largely reduce this expenditure without any detriment to the public interest. I propose to show a few ways in which I think our expenditures could he reduced. It was stated by the hon. gentleman from Huron (Mr. Macdonald) and he gave anthority for it, that in the United Sates in 1830, with a population of $12,000,000$, their expenses were only sition0,000 a year, While in Canada with a bare $5,(000,(100)$ of of population we are spending $\$ 36,500,000$. In the first place we see that our expenditure on the militia forces in 1878 was only 8618,000 in round numbers, while last year we spent $\$ 1,279,000$ on the service. Here is an increase of just about 100 per cent on the militia service of this country in thirteen years. I believe that a large saving can be marle in that department. I know, for instance, that it was stated here two years ago by Gen. Laurie who then represented the County of Shelburne-and his statement was confimed hy other gentlemen who are conversant with the militia forces of this Donimion--that while we were spending $\$ 1,2(x),(00)$ on the militia only about $\$ 20.0 .01(4)$ went to the men amd the batance went to the ofticials anfl staft: That was the statement of fien. Lamite. a man who was thoroughly conversant with the militia forees of the lominion amd who knew whereof he spoke. I believe that that statement is entirely correct. I hope and trust that our new. Minister of Militia will exercise more caution, and 1 believe that if he does he will find that the militia forces of the Dominion can lee looked after just ats well for about one-half of the money now spent. We are also spenting ahout slow,omia yearom the Royal Military (ollege in Kingston. and I believe that that institition should be wiped ont and the money saved, as there are very few of the great mass of the people of this Dominion wher ever get one dollar's worth of benerit from the Military College. Then take the North. West Momated folice.

 an increase in a few years. I drinot helieve that it is necessary that we shouli kete ten or clecen humbed men in the North-West. It. perlaps, might have heen necessary a few years aso. when the rebellion broke ont, hut torlay I am firmly of the opinion that it lage saving could lee effected in the expenditure in that force. Now with regard to superammation. In 1心-s we spent sionf,omb umler this head, white last year it cost us $\mathbf{S} 2+1$, (MK), and 1 leelieve sinue the pablic actomats were closed on the 30th .buly we have added to our expense in this commection about $\$ 00,0$ more. Sear by year that expenditure is largely increased: I ann not in fitcomr, and have expressed myself on former occasions as not being in favour, of this superamuation at all. I think that it is a fraud and an injustice perpetrated on the people of this comitry and that it shomld be abolished. The civil servants are pail large salaries, and if their salaries are not sutficient to provide for themselves and to lay sutficient for their ohd days, then I contemi that it is right and proper that their salaries shomal be increasenl. But after men have been in the service for ten and twenty years, with large salaries, light duties to perform, and short hours of labour, there is no excuse for continuing to saddle them on the country for ever after, at a large expense to the Dominion treasury. I think it is well that the dovermment shondil consider whether the time has not arrivel for aholishing this system altogether. When it was first introduced in 1873 there was some reason for it. At that time it was proposen that the fund should provide for those who hat grown ohl in the public service, and had become mable to perform the duties devolving upon them. But since then grave alyuses have grown up under the system, and to-day we find that active. stirring, enterprising men in the prime of life have been superannuated in order to provide positions for some of the needy supporters of the Govermment ; and thus they are saddled on the people of this country at an enormous expense for all the rest of their days. I think under this head a very large saving could be made by the abolition of the system. If find that under the head of Excise in 18-8 was spent and in $18918378,0 \mathrm{MO}$. Why should there be such a large increase in this item? If the population of the country han grown very much, we could all understand why that service should cost the country more: lut while the population has increased at a very stuall rate, the expense has increased enormously. Then, civil govertment in 1578 cost only $8(\$ 23,(n \times)$, whereas last year it cons think a very large saving conh be made without at all impairing the efticiency of the service. Then, les a righteous act on the part of the dovernment, they could, by one fell stroke of the pen, as the hom. Finamce Minister statel last year, wipe out an expenditure of $\$ 4(N),(M)(t)$, the people of this country in the preparation of the voters lists. Although we spent $\leqslant t(A)$, (AN) last year in the preparation of the list, yet out of the 21.5 comstitnall, unless possibly the sitting member should die, or unless for aty other caase a vacancy should oceur. We had a hetter voters list prepared ly the municipalities every year, which diduot cost us a firthing, and it is utterly useless to expend such a large amome of money in preparing it list that is not required. Moreover, the preparation of this list not only eosts such an enormons amount of money directly out of the public chest, but as every member of this House knows, it costs the two political parties a large sum in addition. In the county which I have the honour to represent, I venture to say that it costs the Conservative party at least sisho, and I am sure that it costs our side an equal amomet to revise the voters lists. Now, I regret very much that the Finance Minister, when noulding legislation for the country, did not consider these matters ; but 1 trust that before the session choses he will endeavour to reduce the enormous expenditure to which I inave referred. The Finance Minister, in delivering his Budget speech, has been pleised to give us the result of his revent visit to Washington, and I propose to speak a little upon that question, because I think that mo question has ever come before the people of this Dominion franght with such importance to the weal or woe of the people of this Dominion. In my opinion, Parliament could not place upon the statute-book a law of any sort that woud confer equal atrantages uppn the people of this country to those that would be conferred by a measure of ${ }^{\circ}$ unrestricted reciprocity with the people of the United States. The Finance Minister has told us that he for one is glad that the question is now settled. I am also pleased to know that we have now arrived at a stage in the proceedings when we can clearly define without any uncertain sound the position of the political parties on this question. There is no hope or expectation on the part of the Conservative party of any change in our trarle relations with the perple of the United States. The Finance Minister tells us that the matter is now closed and settled. Mr. Speaker, he does not know whereof he speaks. In my opinion he might as well try to stem the Niagara River as to try to stem the tide of free trade. When it has once set in in this Dominion you cannot stop it. The people of this country cannot afforl to go on, as they hare been going on, sacrificing their interests in order to bolster up a few manufactures and to create a few millionaires in this Dominion. The great mass of the people are losing too much. Why, in the connty which I represent, I venture to say and I know wherenf I speak-there is not a farmer possessing a humbed atres of land who does not lose seno a year hy not having free atcess to the markets of the Enited states. Neither the Conservative nor the Reform party call affiond to have the present condition of things contimed. One side can afford it as well as the other; the Reformers can stand it as well as their rpponents: but neither of us can atfiorel it. It is costing us tom much, and in my opinion this, question has taken hold of the prople. and it is going to How on and on matil some settlement is arrived at: and althongh the Finance Minister may think it is closed sof far as he is comeerned, yet the perple will tell him that they are not satisfied and they have not lost hope, and they are lomand that if he camot succeed in changing the trade relations of this country to entrust their affairs to a man whe can and will succeed. He tells as farther that : For my own part I an mot at all afraid to face the future. No, with his nice little fat oftice and hamdsome salary, he is not afrail to face the future. He need wot be afraid: he is all right. What is the matter with him: With his ss,one as Minister of Finance per year, he need not he afraid to face the future : But how about the thousands and tens of thousands of perople of this comatry, the lone and sinew of this comitry, who have not got a handione position such as he has, and who are struggling for the breal they require to feed their families". Are they satistied that this comutry shoulh goon as it has heen guing on for the last 10 or 1.5 years? I venture to say they are not. Then the hom. gentleman throws sut a further hope to us that if the canadian farmer is to be debarred in part from the United states market :

" If the Canadian farmer is to be debarred in great part from a market in the Einited States for his prolucts. which market at the best is martial, sectional and variable. he will at least have this satisfaction, that under due and adequate protection he will not be exposed to the great and dangerons competition, in the products of this country. from the great western country of the United States. He can prepare himself to find al market for his wares in other countries where they get more favourable entrance, and he can especially prepare himself for that almost inexhaustible market which araite him for all his products in Great Britain, our mother land. In that country. already, by force of good quality and by prudence in selection, his apples, his cheese, his wheat, his cartle, his bacon and ham, find large and constantly increasing markets: and have to-day secured a permanent place in the market, and practically overtop all competition."
Why, sir, you would think that for the first time the markets of England were being opened to us. If I am not mistaken, we have had the markets of the old country open to us for the last twenty or thirty years. Have we any more favourable terms for our goods in the English markets than we had twenty years ago? Have we any more favourable terms in that market than any other country? With the exception of our cattle, we enter the English market precisely on the same terms as the United States, France, Germany, South Americo, Africa and any other country in the wide world. England is a free trade country which does not ask where her goods come from or what tariffs other countries impose against her exports. The United States send their cheese, wheat, flour and butter and other goods to England on exactly the same terms as we, so that we have no advantage over them except in the matter of cattle, tat

American cattle being schedulen, while no restriction is put upon ours. Why have our cattle this adrantage: Is it hecause they come from Camada? Not at all. hat solely hecause the cattle of the western states have been diseasen and the English people are afraid that disease will spreal. But if that distase hroke out among Canalian cattle, they would lie selheluled just ats are those of the United States. Suppose we had free trade or reciprocity with the United states, is there any man who thinks for a moment we would give up the right to gnamantine American cattle or the cattle of any ather comentry? Why, the states of the Cuion have: the right to y marantine cattle from one state to another. New York has the right to quarantine cattle from Ohio or any other state : and if we go to the ohd comentry, we will find that one comity has the right to selhedule the cattle of every other comety in England, Ireland and sentand.
Mr. SPROULE. Why donot those states which hate rattle and no disease pet the benefit of the Emelish market:
Mr. (AMPBELLL. Becamse the people of England know that pleuro-pmenmonia has hroken ont in the Conited states and are aftaid to admit their cattle on the same terms as those of Camada where there is uo disease. If we hat reciprocity with the Cuitel states. we would not think for one moment of giving up our quarantine regulations: and if the cattle from the Cuited states which pass through (canalda did not undergo quarantine. our ciattle wombld som be scheduleil. It is solely on actonut of the preantions we have taken to stamp out the disease that our cattle enjoy this privilege of not leing scheduled : and if we hat free trale. we wonld not give up that regulation, and our cattle would still go to Eaglimel free of cluty. The hon. sentleman was pleased to tell us that we wrould timd a market in Eagland for all those things. I ann free to say this, that the old comery is our natural market for mathy things. But our natural market for many others is the Cnited states, as I think 1 will be able conclusively th establish before I take my seat. Englani is our matmal market for our wheat, flour, cheese and other things. We sent solo(MO), (MX) pounds of cheese there list year and not one single pouml to the Cinited states. Whether we could semil any to the United States if there had leen no duty I tim not prepared to sity, hut I do not think we comld to any great extent, hecanse the Cnited States themselves semid $\mathbf{O},(\mathrm{OLO},(\mathrm{NOO}$ pounds to the ohl conntry, their cheese is almitted into England on the same terms ats ours. Then the markets of the United states are our natural market for many others things. Take barley, horses, wool, sheep and other things, for these the American market is our natural market. We sent $4, \boldsymbol{j 0 0},($ MNO bushels of harley to the United States last year, and only $1: 32,000$ bushels to England. Why did we send such a small guantity to Fagland and such a large quantity to the United States? We conll send our harley to England free of duty, yet we sent nearly $\mathbf{5},(100),(0) 0$ bushels to the United States, and paid 30 cents per bushel duty on it instead of sending it to the old comutry free. Do we send our harley to the United States because we prefer to deal with them, or because their money is better than that of the old country? No; but becuuse we get more money there for it.
 hushels there not withstanding the fact that there was a duty of 30 cents a hushel while we only sent 133,(M6) hashels to the old coontry, shows that either the people of Canada did not know their own husiness or that the Cnited States is our matural market. If there was in duty on the larley we send to the Unitel States. I venture to say that there would not lee a single bushel sent to the ohd country. The year before the McKinley Bill was adopted our exports to the United Nates amomed sent a few thousand bushels. There was no duty imposed on birley in Englami, hut our people coulit Net more money hy sembing their barley to the Enited states and paying the duty than they conld hy sending it to Englanil where there was no duty at all. Then, in the atticle of beans, we exporten Dushel to Englame. There wats no duty on heans in Englaml, and yet, notwithitanding ihere was a duty of 41 cents a hashel in the Chited States. our people sent their heans to the Linited states. The Finance Minister stys that our matural market is Euglimil. aml the perple of this :umn y evidently do mot know it, and have been very forlish in semding their pronluets to the Cnitel states. surely the people of Canadia must have learned experience from the number of years they have been sembing their eonds to the Cuited states and paying the duty hecanse they knew where the lest market was. Take away the duty, amd the price of those lxans would he 40 eents a hashel higher to the farmers of Cinala. Then the article of appes is another which we export very largely. The Finance Minister stated very truly that we semb a great many of these apples to the old comtry. We sent :3M,(RNO barrels to England and only aisunn harrels to the Luited States. One narket is free and there is a heave duty on the importation of apples to the other. Why didour people send that ghantity to the Cnited sitates: Because it pail them 1 nest. There is a quality of apple for winter use which every famer knows it wonld not pay to send 3. mp miles away to the ohd comentry, but there are low thasamis of bushels of apples rotting on the gromed in this country hecallse there is mo market for them. Still, even with the high duty which is placel upon them in the Cnited States, we sent them is, (xM) harrels last year. If we hat free trale with Boston and New York and the other American cities, where they do not raise onetenth of what they consume, you would find an aloundant market for all the varieties of fruit which we raise, and the farmers would realize a very large anomut for what they camot send across the ocean. Then what is our matural market for hay? Last year we sent ion,(0)( tons of hay to the United states and 11,850 tons to England. Fagland is not our natural market for haty. There is a duty of $$ 4$ a ton on hay going into the United States, and yet the people of Camada sent that amount to their maket. No doubt our natural market for horses is in the United States. We have a limited market in England for a certain class of horses, lut England does not import all told from the whole world as many horses as we export in a year. England only inported 12,301 horses last year, while we exporten nearly 10,000 horses to the United States alone, and

Vear. Since Conferleration we have exported to the Englame. There is no duty in Englani on horses, and there is a heavy duty on horses going into the Cnited states, and yet our people sent $16,0 \mathrm{MN}$ horses a year to the United States hefore the atoption of the McKinley tariff, though they had to pay a duty of 21 per cent on each horse, and only about 13.7 horses to the old comutry. Now the duty has been raised and yet, with the tremendons duty We have to pay, we actually sent nearly 10.0 Mi horses to the Cnited States and only l.2.3 to the whl country. That shows that one natural market for horses is in the Coniter States, amd we find that our comotry is being Hondeil with horses. In the westerin part of the eonntry the price of horses has gione down enormonsly. There is no demand for them. The class of honses we have to sell is not genemally in demand in the old comotre and the only matret open to us for many years hats been the market of the United States. And, when we are deprivell of that market, our farmers are heine ofermu with horses for which there is monale unless the price is manle solow that they cammot ationd to prey the dinty and semel theminto the lonited states. Then the Minister of Finance told us that we had a great market in Finglaml for woul. Latst dear posund of that went to the ohd colntry. though it would he almitted there free and we had io cents a pound to piay in the linited states. vet We sent more $t$ ban a million of pounds to the Conited Niates. becamse that Wasomr nathal market, amd it was sent there as a husiness mansaction becanse we could get mome money there but. Withstanding the liuty, than we eonlat get in Gnglaad wiahnot having to pay any duty at all. It is the same thing in regaid us sheep. We. sent $-4+(0)$ head of sheep to the United States whers the duty is very high, amb only (1).onk heal to England where they went free. Will any man say that. if these duties were removed and we hand free tralle letween these two countries, it womh not enhance the value of every farm property in Cianda, increase the whtput of the farm. and increase the prosperity of the farmers by inceasing the value of what they have to sell : It costs the fatmer just as much to raise a haskel of hatley of to raise a cow or a horse or to ratise any kimd of grain nomatter what price he gets for it. and, if he gets the last few ents that is chear protit ant goes into his pocket or to the credit of his aceount in the hank. Then, ats to poratocs. That is an artiole we export very largely. Last year we exported to the Uniter states 3,3 oli.(Mn) hushels, on which there was a duty of e.) cents a hushel, and, though they conled gis into Finglame free of any luty, we sent them only $2,2-2$ mashels, and that is what the Finance Minister tell us is our natural market which we shonhl strive to gain. And so far as our fishery pronlucts that we have to sell are concernel, there is not a question that if we had the markets of the United Siates open to us the profits of our tishermen would be largely increased. There is no doubt that our lumbermen would reap much greater protits; the value of our immense lumber regions would he greatly increasen, the wealth and prosinerity of the lumbermen would heenhanced, amithe thensandsamitens of thousands of men who are employed in the lumber mills and in the woons, would enjoy more remunerative prices for their labour lecause the lumbermen themselves would enjoy increased wealth and prosperity. Then. so far as our mineral ressurces are concerned, it would he of immense: and vantage to the people of this conntry if we hand the markets of the L'inted Siates apen to ns for our minemals. It is a well known fact that Camala is the richest comutry in this wide world: it is an almitted fact that there is no conotry so rich in mineral wealth ats the lominion of (antala. We have all the mills and all the resomrees for develop. ing and mining our minemals. Down ly the sete, in aldition to our great tishing resonuces. We hate mines of caal and iron lying alongside cath other, right on the line of railwige and on the sea const. Where they are eisy of access amb comblhe shipped to all pirts of the worlel: and pet the: mills of Lomblomerry. Siova sontia, are mot doing as ninu:h husiness as they onght to do hecanse there is no market for their prolacts. They cathnot semb their gombis to Manitolst or w british Columbia, they cammot even send many varieties to Ontario hecatuse the freisht would eat up the pronit. and it would paty fis hetter tog get those heary articles from the linited states or from the old comitry. We all know that north of take superior we have aseat deal of min. eral Wealth that is altogether molowehperl. Alongs the south shore there are villiges amd tomins springing $u_{p}$ : the villages ane lecoming towns, the towns are lneoming eities, and there is life aml activity, and stir. and hustleg ging on hecanse their mineral resonares are lefing developor, and they have a mather for their goonls: while along the morthern shores of bake siuperior all is solemin and all is desolation. heramse it floes not pay at man to goto work atml spend the fortumes that would he: beressaty to יpren up ami develop those mines and comstract the necessamy milways and facilitios for fretting in and out of the mines: for after he has Wone all this he has not grot a market where he call semil his goxels. The markets of the Dominion are limited. He cammot sell his heary irm gooms exept in a limited area : he cammet sell his coal exerpt in a limited areat. and so it happens that it dones mot piry, aml that is the reason why these mines are not leeing developerl. But once goin throw down the walls amd open up the markets of the linited states, amb immediately there is some ohject before a man to imbluce him to invest his money in dereloping these mines, and the result wonlil he that "mmediately catitial would thow in. and there wouhl he a sreat development of these mines, thonsamls and thonsamls of ment would he employed, and millions of chollars: would he invested in constructing railways to carry that we from the mines to the market, there would he work for our vessels that ply upon the lakes, aml there wonld be immeniately a great impetus siven to the Dominion of Cimada. We hate in this Dhminion of Canata only one industry to-diay that I can recall that is enjoying unrestricted reciprocity. Our ralway system in this Dominiom does enjoy reciprocity with the linited states. Fveryboly knows that the diamd Trunk Railway, or the ('anatian Pacific Railway, or the Michigan Central, that run from the west to the east, have reciprocity with the people of the liniten States. They can load a car at Detroit and draw it through Caniala in houl to Boston, or to Buffialo, or to New Vork, without let or himimance. They can transprot American goods in hond from one American port in the west to another American port in the east. That is the only industry in Canala, that I can remember, that is enjoying reciprocity, and what is the result? Notwithstanding that our milWats are hampered. and himdered, and eramped on atcomont of the ditficulties that stame in their wat. notwithstambing that they have fill cents a tom duty to piy upon every ton of cobal they consume, not withianlines that they have a duty of S 4 a ton to pay upon the pig ion that they consume: and sis it ion duts upon the har iron and romm iron and steel they eonsume, and 3.5 per ecent daty upon the oiks and paints and varnishes that enter into the construction of their cars..$- n o t w i t h s t a n d i n g$ all these things. what do we tind? We time that our milways are gralually improving their comblition, they are iloulle-tateking their roats, the $v$ are increasing their rolling stock, their receipts atre grathally dimbing up from vear to year. they are competing. and competing surcessfully, with the railways that run entirely throbeli Amerian territory, showing that they are alhe to compete smocessfuily with those ramls. ahthongh they have many diffienlties to eonteme with that the Americam mals hate mot. Now, if you compare for one moment war railway system with wur ressels. fon find that motwithstanding that we own half the lakes and half the coast line, fet it :s a lamentalble fact that of all the millions of tons of freight that come down from the west to the easi last year, there was only a hare a per eent of it carrien in (imathian ressels. Why was this: simply and solely hecanse our vessels ion not enjoy the same privilege that our railways do. A ressel camme load at letroit for Butfillo. It camot loal at onte American port and tranship at another American port without first calling at a (amadian prot and liseharging the carego and getting it cleamanes. and the consemuence is that of all the millions of tons that cante down the lakes last rear 3 oner cent were carried in American vessels. Why, we can rememher a few years ago when we hand a great many thourishing shipyarels in this Cinalala of ours. I remember that in my own town, the town of Chatham, we hat a shipyard that employed lind skilled mechamics. Some of the largest propellers that are plying on the lakes within the last few years, were Inilt there. At St. (athatines on the Welland Camal, there were thousamels of men employed in hailding vessels for plying on the lakes. But to-day our own shipyards have disappeareal. the soumi of the hammer is mhearl. the workmen have fone away, and all is desolation and solitule, where hefore were hustle and activity in huiliting vessels to ply on the lakes. simply becanse there is nothing for the ressels to do. But once you open up the coasting trate of this Dominion for (anadian vessels, ant you afford employment for Canadian ressels, and onr C'amadian boys would not have to go away to seek employment in a foreign country. There would he plenty of work for our Canalian boys on our Canadian ressels, plying upon the lakes that separate these two countries. I helieve it would he a great allvantage to the people of Cimada, that it would afford inmense employment to the skilled mechanies, to the ship-buiklers, and a vast amount of capital would the employed in buihling and comstructing vessels to ply upon the lakes and across from one American port to another, if we had the harriers remoret. In many other ways it would le of great adrantage to the people if we had these harriers to trate and commerce removed. But the Minister of Finance told us that in the comference at Washington, it was impossible to procure a reciprosity traty with the United stater: except upon such terms ats they comblant accept. I ann disposed not to plate torn much contidence in the statement that was delivered to this Honse some days age. In the firet phace, I have very litele contidence in a delegration that groes 10 Wishingen to secure a treaty that they do not want. Thev never ranted it, they woild not accept it if it was offered them, and consequemtly any negotiations that took place there simply amonted to a hlind and a great farce. I can imagine them going there-- and hom. gentlemen will motice how fully he has told as almut his matter--and how it wats that our relegrates printed out the lioms in the Way: we raised guestions, we dial this and that. The (ananlian delegates, after having presenterd these difficulties and canvassed themselves freels. and thoroughly sat to Mr. Blaine: My dear Mr. Blane, these ite our ditficulties, you ackandentre them : uow. my dear Mr. Blanes, you have hat harge experience in arrandine reciprocity traties: we never had any reciprocity treatics on frame, and conserpenty orm experience in that respect is very limited indeed, and, my dear Mr. Dlainc. We erme: hure now and ask you ats ath oll man. as a man of great experience in reciprocity treaties. to tell us how to act : we are prepared to atcept a treaty if you can, with yom experience, point out any way to which we can wereome the ditticulties. They comtinned: But, my dear Mr. Blaince, we want yon to give us some information and some help: we are ignomant. as we hate never had any reciprocity treaties to frame, while vou have hav great ex. perience an!, my dear Xlr. Blane. come to owr resune in this our time of neerl, for the hye-elections: are coming on.

Mr. FOSTER. They are over.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Come amd help us in this our need and give us your allice. Jinl members of this House ever hear of a greater farce: The inca of the Minister of linamee of the great Donninion of (amala, with the Minister of Justice and the Ninister of Wiar going to Wiashington amil making such an exhibition. I am surprised such language should have been used hy the hom. rentlemen who went there. It must have heen used in a moment of weakness, which struck them about. that time. I low not think that a delegration gomins to Wiashington to chatain what they did not wath, What they would not le prepareil to accept if it were offered, should receive any continlence in regary to the canses of the failure of their mission. They had, however, a nice trip, it did not cost them anything, but I would not object to that if ther hail exhibited a sincere desire to roltain a reciprocity treaty. They were probably taking private lessoms from my dear Mr. Maine, and these may result in something later on. This, however, is toco serions a matter, for the people cannot afford to continne without a measure that would confer such enormous advantages on them. If hon. gentlemen opposite cannot point out any way ly which to remove these difficulties, they must make way for those who are able to point out the way. Delegates to Wiashingten should not have been the first to mise objections. The Minister of Finance emphasized the fact that we pointed out difficulties and raised oljections. Such should come from another source, and not for those earnestly seeking a reciprocity treaty. Pesiles, they knew very well inefore they went to Wiashington that the people of the Linited Nates would not grant a reciprocity treaty which would embane only natural products. 1 ans enal, however, that the Minister of Finance was kimil enough to say that he did make Americans that offer, becaluse, listening to the arguments ahlressed by the hom. gentleman opposite it is appatrent that maty hom. gentlemen opposite are opposed to a reciprocity treaty even in natural pronducts. Oare hon. gentleman yesterday admitted he wis prepraed to almit corn from the Cuiter siates. although he pointed out that it would injure the raisers of wheat ; and yet that hon. sentleman supportsatiovemment whish proceerled on Wimingiton and deliherately oflered the peophle of :he Cuited states to throw down the wall $\because=$ fir ats natural prodncts were concerned. The dionernanent were willing to sicuifice the fanmers of the lominion. We know that if we hial a reciprocity treaty in natural products, so far its com, hecf and pork are concernen, I believe the prices wouht le a little lower. Our farmers would be a little injured by a reciprocity treaty ; but whatever injury arose on that acernint wonll he comateracter tenfold ly the adrantages that would arise in other ways. But the delegates to Wiashington cleliberately offered to sacrifice the farmers: at the same time they took gool catre not to survemiter one jot or tittle of the National Policy which lobsters uf a few mandacturers. The farmers may go, hat the manfactures mast have all the piretection they now enjoy. I lo not think that would he fair. We should have one law forall and no farour for any. Why shonhl one man be protected at the expense of the entire community : why should one man be able to have a law placed upon the Statute-look, hy which a few men can fleece the whole of Canitila: In this country we want manufacturers who can maintain themselves withont artificial assistance: we do not want a manufacturer who has to he holstered up with 2.5 or 30 per cent duty in corder to cnable him to compete ; if he camot do it himself let him go to the wall and let him turn his attention to something else. I take the gromm that if unrestrictel reciprocity would injure every manufacturer in this Dominion, that it would benefit our great agriculturai classes, then, on the principle of the greater gool to the gieater number, I must still support it. I am glad to helieve, however, that the great mass of our manufacturers would greatly henefit if we had free trade with the States. I know that the great milling industry with which I am more intimately acyuainted would find a lomanza if we had the tariff which now separates us from the Ünited States removed. We wonld be able to sell an enormous quantity of our prolucts in the New Fingland States where they do not raise the goods they require. We would he albe to sell to the city of Buffalo. with its population of 200,000 people, and which is within a stone's throw of the largest mills in Ontario. In the city of New York, with its population of about $1,000,(\mathrm{~N}, 0$ of people, we would also find a market for an enormous quantity of our goonls. I am alson glad to know that in the town of Chathan, in which reside some of the largest carriage mammacturers on the continent, these gentlemen are heartily in favour of free trate with the United states. They say that they are hamdicapped now, that they have to pay $8+$ per tom duty on pig irom. El:3 per ton on round bar iron, 3.i per cent on paints, oils and vamish. ami (i) cents per ton on hateksmith's coal. They are also curtaibed in their markets. They have only the orer-stacket markets of seme of the provinces in Cimatia, but if you find them free trate and enable them to buy the mw material in the cheapest markets, and give them the chances of supplying Michigan, New lork and all the New lingland viates they would he able to compute against the world. We have just ats :gund mechamice, just as enterprising men. amb just ats ample fatilities in Canalatas they hate in any comat:y in the worhl. What occasion hats the (inanlian manufacturers to feat competition with the Sitates when they are mecting the competition of the Siates every diny in the yeat: We neet them on emmon ground in the old country ami in Newfoumbland. ind strely no man wonlh saty that we cammotholl our own in our own country and in our own homes. There is uo place where mannfaturing eal be olone so cheaply ats in this city of (ottana, with its malimited Water power, its magniticent facilitits for shipping in the raw material and the tinisher prompects ont, and its emormons quantity of abmalant cheap lalour. Look along the st. Latwere: atl the way lown, amd there you have unlimitod water power. Take our cotton mills at Dumias :onnwall amd Vialleyfiell. Is there any reason $v: y^{\prime}$ our cotton and Woollen manufacturers shouli sot eompete against the world: They are able to get the raw cotton from the south as cheaply as the manufacturers call in the States. Thei have all the machinery and lalwur neecessary, they have the ability, the push, the vigour, the vim and the capital. and there is no reason why they should not compete with any manufacturers in the wide world. If they hat the United States market for their goods they could double and treble their output and confer innmense advantages on the labouring penple of this community. Throw down the walls and remove the harriers that now alisturb trade and commerce, and immerliately there would be an enormons development of cipital, thousands of men would be employed where there are hmilreds now, the value of property would he enhanced, and I beliere that in ten years the population of this lominion would be doubled. It has been stated by the Ninister of Finance that we can only get reciprocity on certain terms which he has laid down. I do not believe that. I believe that if proper representations are mate to the people of the Linited States that we could ohtain reciprocity on rery favourable terms. As the Minister of Finance told us the United States has negotiated reciprocity treaties with many other countries. They have even male a treaty with the British West Iudia Islames, a colony of England standing in the stme position to Fingland as Canadia does. Is there any discrimination for American goons there and against Finglish goods? If I am not mistaken the British 'gools enter the British IVest India Islands upon the same terms as do the goods of the United States. I believe that the people of the United States want our trade as badly as we want theirs, and you camnot have any treaty hetween the two countries unless it is mutually advautageons. I believe that a reciprocity treaty with Canadia would be a great advantage to the people of the Linited states. They wonld have a market of five millions of people right at their doors, with four thonsamd miles of an imaginary line separating the two comutries, penple ilescended from the same stock, speaking the same language, of the sume religions persuasions, and with their oljects ann aims in life much the same. Surely the trade of tive millions people right at their own doors would he far better than a trade of five millions of peeple with a thousami miles of water communieation separating them. The people of the New England states want to have our cool, our humber. our tish and minerals, and the people of Ohio and New Sork want our barley, our horses, our lambs, and any other articles that we have got to sell them. They can buy them cheapeer from us thim they can from any other ceontry. We want to tranle with them lecanse it pays us to sell our sends to them and it will also pay them to huy their goends from us: and that to my mind is a dear evilence that if proper representations are made: to the perple of the United States, a treaty, and a very farsurable treaty, can lee negotiated letween the two comitries. Now, some of our friembs state that it would lie disloyad, would lead to amexation. would lead to direct taxation, if we secured such a treaty. Now, these are questions which we have to consider. so far as I am concernen, I do not helieve that any such results would thow from it at all. I dlo not believe it is eren necessary for us to discriminate against the mother laml. I helieve a treaty can he arranged hy which the people of Canalia will oltain all the ailvantages that they choose. It must of course be a mutually adrantageons treaty, which will confer benetits upon our neighhours as well as upon ns, and I do not believe there is anything disloyal in trying to in the best we can for this canala of ours. We have all the same object in riew. I take it that every representative of the people here wants to see this fair Canada increase in prosperity and become great, developing its immense resources, increasing its population, iund promoting the happiness of its people ; and if we can best advance these laudable oljects amb ai:ns by negotiating a treaty with the country to the south of us, and removing the barriers that separate us, surely we wond the disloyal to our own land, we would be untrue to our best intereats, if we failed to seek for such a treaty. Why, England has great interests in Canada. Finglamd has to-day eight or nine hundred million dollars invested in this Dominion. Fingland wants to see Canada become great and prosperous, because that insures dividends to those who have their money invested here, and it insures our purchasing a largely increased quantity of goods from the manufacturers of Englaur. I verily believe that if we doubled our population in ten years, as we ought to do, we should buy a very much greater quantity of gooils from England than we do to-day. Although there might be a little temporary fall in our purchases from England, yet in the long run such a treaty would tend greatly to increase them loy increasing the prosperity and population of Canada. Why, it seems to me that the perple of Canada fifty years from now will look back and wonder what kind of people there were in this Dominion in 189.2. Why, what are we doing? Weare spending millions of dollars in removing the natural barriers that separate this country from the United States. Last year, the (irand Trunk Railway Company spent $\$ 3$, , (Kx), (KN) in building a tumel under the st. Clair River. What did they do it for? For ammsement-only to look at it " No: but it was done solely to increase the facilities for transpurting trade lietween the east and the west. Then, go to the Niagaina River, and what do you see there! You finl that capitalists have invested their millions of dollars in building the iron and steel brilges that span that heautifulriver, for the mole purpose of enleavouring to remove the natual barriets to trade and commerce between this comntry and the comury to the south of us. Ant all this time, while the pernple of Canadia have been investing millions of dollars in trying to remove the batriers which nature has placed in the way of trade anl commerce. Howing from the west to the cass, what have our fovernment anl the congress at Wishington been doing: The Congress at Washingtomand the House of Commons at Ottawa have leen engagen in the noble and laudable enterprise of huilding higher and higher olstructions in the way of trate :und commerce, trying to unlo the wark which we have been spending our millions of bollats in accomplishing. It seems to me that that is a foolish and stupid thing for ins to ilo-after spemiing millions of dollars in removing barriers, to turn aroma and maise up other barriers. Why, if we want to have harriers hetween us. we had letter go to work and lestroy the brilges which span the Niagara River, how up the tumel that umdermines the st. Clair River. hlow up the losats, that carry the trains aeross, and sink the schomers that trale letween the two comatries. then we shall have all the barriers that nature has placed in the way, and we shall save ourselves the trouble of raising higher and higher walls to prevent us from trading with each other. But our friends tell us that this would be a disloyal treaty, and therefore oljectionable. In the tirst plate, Mr. Speaker, you know that before that treaty could become law, it would hare to receive the sanction of the Imperial (iovermment and le signed by Her Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria. Surely: that fact in itself is a sufficient gramantee that the interests of the Empire as a whole, anl the interests: of this Dominion, would not be prejudicially atfiected thereby. We are also told that it would head to amexation. Well, for my part I have no sympathy for those whodesire closer political relations with the United states. I know that there are a great many people in this country, both on the Comservative side, and a few on the Reform side-

Mr. LANDERKIN. Oh, not one

Mr. CAMPBELI. Not many, but a few of the weaker sort, who favour annexation. Formy part I do not think it woull have that effect at all, for this reason, because all the comnection we want with the people of the United states is the privilege of buying from them those things which we can buy to adrantage, and the privilege of selling to them those things which we can sell to adrantage. We have a hetter form of government than theirs. In my opinion, our form of government is the best in the world.

Mr. Campbell.

Mr. IVELDON. Hear, hear.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I am glat that the hom. member for Alhert agrees with me in one thing. I believe that our laws and institutions taken as a whole are the hest in this worh. There are many things which we can learn from the people of the Enited States, and protit hy. I certainly think that our laws are sometimes very batly administereal, and our form of government very much almsed, but that is the fault of the Administration and not of the form of gon emment. On the whole, our form of govemment, our laws and institutions, are the best in the worhl, and for my part, I anm guite satistied with them. Now. What are we to gain, after we have free trante with the Uniten States, hy amexation! It zeems to me we will have gained all the alvantages we can possibly hope for hy free trade, withont any of the lisancantages, amd would naturally stam all the more firmly by our own laws and institutions, so that insteal of free tranle lealing to ammexation, it would leal exactly in the opposite direction. We all know that the heand of the Conservative party, whaterer his political views may he now, was at one time very strongly in favour of annexation, as were also many of his colleagues. What opinions they hold now 1 womll not like io saly. hat we know they were at one time in farour of it : but if we had free tracle, the adrantages we would gain woull be such that all desire for amexation womld disitppear like the morning lew before the monning sun, and we would have a contented, happy and prosperous people in this fair lame of ours. Another point male is that it will lead to direct taxation. I do not think there is any langer whatever of that, but after all it is only a question of changing the pocket out of which you take the money. The people will have to pay in either case. and it seems tor me it does not make mach difference out of which pocket the money comes. I helieve, however, that we coull carry on the affairs of the comntry without putting our hands into the pookets of the people at all in the way of direct tixation. I think I have illrearly pointed out many ways in which the enormous expenditure of the crimetry could be cut down and the affairs of the country carried on efficiently at a cost of many millions of clollars less than are now expended. I have no doubt that if the lealer of the Reform party were entrusted with the reins of govermment. as he will he in a very short time, shonh the Conservative party adhere to their present policy of remaining still, he will fiud an effective solution of the difficulty. We know the means which have been adopted to carry the elections by our hon. friends opposite. We need only take up the Conservative organs in Northumberland, Honck, and other comities in which there have have been byeelections, to find the reasons why these counties were carried against the Opposition. Such means camnot be adopted at a general election, and I believe the time will come, and come speedily, when the people will rise in their might, knowing that there is no hope under the present Government of better trade relations with the United States, and insist on their public affairs heng conducted by abler and lietter men than those now in charge. I believe the tide of free trade is rushing with such mighty force that no party can withstand it. Look at the results of the census. Are they not most shameful? Notwithstanding the hundreals of millions of dollars which have heen spent in reveloping ofr railways, leepening our canals, and enlarging our pablic works, notwithstanling the many million dollars spent on immi. gration, this fair 1)ominion had only inereased its population hy a bare half million people in the last ten years. The leantiful Province of Ontario, rich in mineral wealth, with agricultural resources that cammot be paralleled hy any comntry in the world, inhabited bis a frugal and inclustrions people, with all alvantages, situated as it is on the highway of the west and east, that onght to make it advance in prosperity, only increased its population in the last ten years by isionor perple, while the little state to the west. Nichigan, which camot he compared for a moment with the Province of Ontario, increased its popmation fombold. There is evilently something wrong. It eathnot be in the people, nor in the soil, nim in our alvantages and facilities for reaching the markets of the work. It can only le accoment for in one way, ant that is. that the trave policy of this diovermment does not tend to alvance the prosperity of the comitry. We are like a yong giant shatekleil amd hampereil. We are like a city survommed by a great wall, dying from mere inanition and want of commection with the tarle of the ont side comitry. The flower and the youth of our eonntry havegone into a foreign lame. Where withont any means or position they have risen step hy step up the ladiler of success. (io intw the workshops and marts of commepe, ant railway shops, along the lines of railway, and you will find at the hean of these lange concerins (amadians who owe their positions solely. to their skill, comause and ability, and yet we are to le told that Cinatians are not alile to hold their own in their own comatry afoinst foreign competition. This is a slamer ipen the people of Canala. I helieve that free trade will henefit the mechanic, the arti\%an, the miner, the fisherman, the lamberman, and iugriculturist, in fact all classess in this comentry. I helieve the time will som come when the people of this lominion will entrust the atfiairs of this conntry to a set of men who are in sympathy with their views, who will go to $\mathrm{II}_{\text {ash }}$ ington to get a fair and stagightforward treaty accepted which will promote the interests of this Dominion, and I hope the day will speedily come when the men in whom the people of cimatia have comtidence will thats be alle to olitain this great boon which the people of (anama resire.

Mr. DFVLIN. It was not my intention to take part in this disenssion, lut having hearil from two or three members on the opposite side to-day amd yesterday certain charges levelled against the party to which I have the honour to helong, I think it proper to dive at least a short reply to these charges. This afternoon we hearll that the success of the Conservative party in the last election was due to their loyalty, aml we heard another member, as he cast a temder and loving eye on his colleagues, asking what was the secret of the success of their party in the recent elections. No one disputes the loyalty of the great booly of the Conservative party, hit the history of our jarty and of its lealers in the past shows that the change of disloyalty cimmot he laid at our door. They say on the opposite side that the spirit of loyalty that animates them lies at the bottom of their success, but, when the head is disloyal, it is hard to believe that the body is loyal Io not they belong to a party which, after the death of their late leader, invited a gentleman who, by profession, by siguature. by aspiration and by feeiing, is more strongly in favour of annexation to the United states than amyone on this side of the House, to take the place of their leader? They made that hom. gentleman the leader of their party. The cry of loyalty then comes on their part with less grace than it could eome from the lips of members of the Liberal party. Then, we naturally ask: Are we in the british Parliament or a Camadian 1'arliament :Julging from their constant references to the mother comutry, one would think that their only interest was to look to the mother country and to nerlect the Canalian people and Canalian homes. In March last it seems their programme was entire devotion to the interests of the Canadian people, but now we hear of mothing hut devation to the intercsts of the mother country. A profession made by them was that the secret of their suceess was in the policy which they alopted. It may he a poond policy for a diovernment anxions to remain in power to pursue, hat is it a food policy for the country to follow ? What was their policy during the recent bye electioms ? 1 hari the pleasure of risiting the riding of West Northmmerlamd when the election wats taking place there, and we fotim placarided on almosit every fence, Vote for the (ioverment camblidateand the railway loom. The cry was: Vote for the (iovernment candilate and harlour improvements, vote for pullic works, vote for post olfices, wote for the custom house, wote in fact for everything that the diovermment can give except for the policy which has heen held out and pertaps explainel to the people. That is the secret of their suceess, and there are other secrets which should not bee mentioned in larliament perhaps, but which are known by those who have followed the attitule of that party daring the recent elections. I fear not to say that every constituency in which a bye-election took place, was visited not lyy one, two, or three, but liy twenty or thirty outsiders, who went thither not to eduate the people by speech, but to convert them ly other means which should not be mentioned in Parliament. And yet they presumptuonsly ask: What is the secret of their saceess: How is it that they have come here with such a majority? They have managed to get here hy following out the policy which the Conservative party has pursued for the last twenty years. of purchasing constituencies hy means of railways, of pulicic buidings, of offers of distrihution of pullic noneys, and they will have to satisfy the demands marle on the strength of these promises during the next three or four years if they wish to remain in power. Never more astomished in my life was I than when I hearil in the same constituency of West Northumberland, that the dovernment had sent up inspectors to examine a port there, and to lay out certain works which it was proposed to construct. The works were laid out on the ice, the spring came, and the ice passed away with the designs of the works upon it, and nothing further was done until a month ago, when the people were informed that the policy of the Government would be carried out and the harbour works would be completed; and yet here we are usked what is the secret of the success of the ministerial party during the recent bye-elections? We know the secret. Any one with the eye or ear closed could find ont that secret. Further, they have won their elections by vilification of the Iilieral party, hy vilification of our respected and beloved leader in the byeelections of the Province of Ontario. In every way they have tried to crush the Liberal party and its leaders, hut they have not yet succeeded. They have also tried to crush the policy to which we are attached and which we shall follow. Only a year ago or a little more Parliament was dissolved. Why? Because on that occasion the Premier imnounced to the Canalian people that he was aloout completing arrangements for a treaty of reciprocity between Canada and the United States. In March last. the people were not asked to pronounce upon the National Policy, but they were asked to approve of the course the late Premier of Combla had alopted in attempting to hring about thade ralations with the Cnited states. We were informed that these trade relations were alwout to be completed. But what dint we hear the other day from the Minister of Finance? That all such negotiations were at an end, that no treaty of reciprocity would be concluded het ween Camala amel the United Ntates. Such was the information given to Parliament and given to the people of Canada. What a strange eontratiction, what an inmense contradiction, between the words neterel here by the Minister of Finance and the profession of political faith made his his late leader previous to the dissolution of Parliment: Parliament was dissolved in order. that it treaty might he concluled amb approven. and the Minister of Finance comes here and tells us that in reality their only object was to go and find out whether they could have such a treaty. It reminds me very much of a man trying to get into a house hy every means except through the open door. The opell door was there, but he would nut go in by that means. He pretends to have tried hy all other possible ways to get in, and comes lack to tell us that he conid not get int, that house of reciprocity; the door was open, but he would mot walk in through it. sir, we have been assureal that the farmer is prosperons: we have been tohd in the course of this delate that he is perfectly prosperons, that the industries of the country are flomeishing, and that the country itself is in a prosperoms and healthy comdition. I believe that hom. gentlemen on the opposite side who make such statements are beginning to belice themselves that the country is prosperous. hecanse they have said it so, often that they have actually convincel themselves: that such is the case. Sir, without taking up the statistics of the country I would ask them to look aroum and to tell us where is this great prosperity of which we hear so much. If they go across theriver to the neighloming city of Hull they will lee told by the manufacturers of humber that traile, amd the lumber trade especially, is in a state of uncertainty, owing to the policy of the Gevermment. Today a duty of one kind is imposed, to-morrow it may be removed, and perhaps the day after it will be reimposed. The lumber merchants are actually afraid to make investments for fear that the policy of the Government may be such that those investments will prove enormons losses. Sir. with regard to this degree of prosperity of which we hear so much, this measure of happiness, I maintain that the farmer under the existing trade relations hetween Canada and the United States camnot lee in as happy and as prosperous a condition as he would be were the high wall which now exists letween the two comntries removel. How is it to be contenden, for instance, that if he conld sell his barley at 20 cents a bushel more than he can now, that he would not be more prosperous: And if he could obtain S30 more for every horse that he sells, would that not be at least $\$ 30$ to his advantage : Anil, Sir, for every dozen of eggs that he sells, if he could ohtain atents more, amil 40 cents more for a loushel of berins, and $\$ 4$ more for a ton of hay, and is cents more a pound for poultry, would he not be, at all events, benefited by so much the more: It is only a few weeks ago-and this gives an inlea of how heavily the taxation which is now impose: bears upon the agricultural class of Canala-a train consisting of 12 car louls of poultry was shipperl from Smith's Falls, Perth and Brock ville. The value of the shipment amountel to $\mathbf{S i z}(\mathbf{3},(\mathrm{M})(1)$. What was the duty collected upon that poultry at Rouses Point: The dinty was S 8, Tan umon this one train load of poultry shipped from this conntry to the United States. Yet we will he toll, notwithstanding this neary tax, notwithstanding this heary laty of over $\mathbf{S B}_{8},(\mathrm{KO})$ upon one shipment of poultry, that the Canalian farmer is as prosperous as he could he, and if the high wall were removed it would not help him. Sir, the trade of Canala has fallen off largely also. Upon these very articles which 1 have just mentioned, since the McKinley Bill came into operation, the sale of eggs to the Uinited Ntates fell off over siols, (MN), and the increase to Great Pritain was only $\mathbf{E S 2}, 0 \mathrm{MO}$. The sale of hay fell off by Sithi, (NOM, and has only increasel to (ireat Britain by sion,0no . The sale of horses has fallen off over sisis.o(n) to the United States, and it only increased by Sli38, (NO). With regard to the item of barley, the falling off is much more marked. It has been S1, 833,203 , and the corresponcling increase has merely been sim, (000). Still, noturithstanding these alarming figures, we will be told that the farmers are in a prosperous condition, becanse, forsooth, they have the home market. It was pointed ont by the hon. gentleman who precerled me that they had this market even before we lost the American market. We have hial this market since we lost the American market, and no matter what market we may obtain, no matter what market may be openerl out to us, we shall continue to have the Fuglish market. Sir, if reciprocity is not a gool thing, how comes it that hon. gentlemen opposite have gone so frequently to the United States begging for reciprocity? If reciprocity were nota goon thing, how comes it that a promise was made over and over again, not hy the Liberal party; but by hon. gentlemen opposite, that a treaty of reciprocity would be made with Spain? And what has become of that treaty which was promised? If reciprocity is not a good thing, how comes it that they have in laris an official, or I should rather sny an amhessador, whose mission it is to look after precisely those matters affecting treaties of reciprocity? How comes it that the Minister of Finance himself went last summer down to the West Indies? It was not a mere pleasure trip, it was not for his political or any other kind of healih; he went there, I believe, in seareh of a treaty of reciprocity. And how comes it that we send the products of Canala to every exhilition, whether in Europe or in America, and that probably we shall send a large quantity of products to the great international exhibition at Chicago: What is the object of these missions: What is the oliject of the expenditure connecterl with such missions, if not to find new markets? And simply because the forernment in not wish to lose the support of the manufacturers of this comatry, and especially because they lo not wish to lose their contributions, which are so useful in times of election, the people of C:anala must be depriverl of this valuable treaty of reciprocity. That is ahout the state of affairs. I lo not wish to detain the House very long, but before proceeding I wish to quote an article from the Eondon Chomirlo which. speaking of this very question. has the following words:-.
" A more effective method of realizing Sir Charles Tubper's aspirations would be unrestrictel reciprocity between Englam and (ananla. We lo not expect that Sir Charles will agree with us when we aftirm that it would be betier for Cimadia to establish free rade both with America and ourselves. hit it is of the highest impurtance 10 preserve friendly relations with Americn. If we are to ase the Canadian Pacitic Ratimay as a hichway the east, this is an allditional reason why Canalat should aim bot only to strengthen the honds of inion with Fingland. but to maintain such relations with America is will abviate any just canse of Amerienn jealonsy anainst Englamel. America hones to compel the entrance of Canada into the Enion hy the severity of her commereial polies. The best Way to defeat such tactice is noi to he found in intimation. for a nation of five millions cannot wate a snecesifil enmmereial war against a nation of sixty-five millinus, hat in a nolicy of unrestricted commercial interenurse with the rest of the worla."

Here we find an English organ telling us that if we wish to be loyal to Englamd and loyal to ourselves we should alopt this very same policy which is the policy of the Liberal party, namely, unrestricted commercial intercourse with the United states. I think that is an answer to those who claim that murestricted reciprocity means disloyalty. With respect to those who claim that this comentrv is in such a prosperous state, I desire to take this decatsiom to recall the remarks of the member for Alluert (Mr. Weldon) during a diseussion last session. That hon. member, speaking of the State of Vermont, said that there was an actual decrease in population during the last seven years, and he pointed that out as a great evil: ant he also atfirmend that in Maine, out of 1 if comities, 7 had ileclined in population. Speaking of the State of New Fork, he clamed there wiss a decrease in 23 rout of fol comities, and he aldent: "I renture thatyon will find no such startling statement in any of the provinces of "anadia." Remember, he pronombed it a startling statement, becanse there was a lecrease in the population of the State of Vermont and a decrease in $\overline{7}$ counties out of 16 in Maine. Referring to Ohio, he sail that out of 89 counties there was a decrease in 2 N . Referring to Indianat he said that out of 92 comnties there was a decrease in 2.5. He anlded: "To be sure I have read the strongest as illustrating my position, but there are a gevel many other states in which the decline, though not duite so striking, is striking and discouraging indeed." Thus we have the worls startling, istriking and discouraging. How the hon. gentleman must have been struck with the census returns of his own province: how he must have foum them striking, startling and discouraging. But what the hon. gentleman comlemued last year he will be willing to palliate this year, for it will not suit him to state that as striking, startling and discouraging, which last year he pronounced as such. What are the figures our census shows: In New Brunswick alone there was a decrease in $\$$ out of 1.7 counties : in Nora sootia a llecrease ins ont of 19 comaties; in (Hutario a decrease in 39 out of 91 comuties: in Prince bilward lslamd a decrease in 1 out of 3 comnties. The percentage of decrease in the cominties of the states of the United States to which I have referred was os per cent, whereas the decreane in the comenties I have referred to in Canada was $+3 \frac{1}{2}$ per cent, and yet a decrease of $28!2$ per cent Was dencribed hy the hom. member for Albert as striking, startling ami discouraging. How must the hon. gentleman he impressed by the decrease of $43!$ per cent as illustrated liy the returns of certain comities in his own l'rovince' We are further told that another reason for the reverses which the Liberal paty have suffered huring the recent bye-elections Was a letter written hy Mr. Blake. I fail to see what great comfort our opponents can draw from that letter. I find among other passigges the following:-

[^21]As an instance of the loss cansed by the present polic: of the (iovernment 1 will glance at the forelign trade of St. John, N.B., which deelined Sien.i3t4 as compared with the corresonding periond of the previous year. The decline in imports wis duty decline $\mathrm{stO}+\mathrm{ti}$. The import trave of that port for the first four months of the last two and the current fiscal years, stands as follows: 1850 o.9), 73:. I tind here, to use the expression adopted last rear hig the member for Ahert, that these figures art certainly striking, startling and discomacing. Again I comlal quote from the Toronto Mrorleref, which is not a political paper, but simply a commercial journal, and it says:

- Now withstamding the anspicious prognostications and glowing repmite of the crips, the results of the unusually: hountiful harvest have hardly yet hegath to be felt, and from all pars of the Dominion come tidings of business dall and mines suarec."
Is that the evidence bronght forward of the prosperity of the comotry: Is it mot a fact that in almost every mandacturing town there are to has foumil hundreds of memployed men at the street comers: that only a month or two ago in Quelrec a large procession of the unemployell proceedel to the Provincial fiorermment leseeching them to furnishemployment : and that in Toronto unemployed people are to be connted not by hundreals hut liy thousinds: Aml this is the contented. happy, wealithy popnlation, regarding whom we have had such glowing pictures painted ly hom. gentlemen opposite. I camost allow the present occasion to pass without once more expressing the opinion, representing as I do a large and prosperons agricultural ind manufacturing eounty, that we should pronounce in favour of the policy of the Liberal party: which is unrestricted reciprocity. Aml why? Becanse we have every reason to believe that that policy would give better markets for every one. As was pointel out by the hon. gentleman who precerled me, we would have hetter markets in every respect. Our lumber market wouli he in a healthy comlition, the mineral mines of the various provinces would lee developed, and onr farmers would he satisfien. We would certainly get cheaper manufactured goods for the toiler, and what is especially of vast importance to Ontario, there would be a revival of our lake shipping. What is the prosition to-day: Certainly in one respect we have uo reason to complain. We have the wealth of the forest, and the wealth of the stream, and the wealth of the lame. That we do not owe to the (iovernment. Again, as was satid ly other speakers before me, we have an excellent form of government, as free ami imiependent as any minder the sun: and with regarl to the different policies spoken of-ammexation. colonial depentence and independence-.-I believe that, considering all the circumstances and the population we have in (ianalat to-liay. ont present position is satisfactory. We have no reasom to complatin: but if ever it change should come I most join in the sentiments which were expresseal here this afternoon that instead of anmexition political imbependence would be preferahle. I think that the same opinion will he expressed by the vatst majority of the gronger (imblians. We have a free constitution, an unstained history, in excellent reputation as a people, lut we lack an honest Govermment, that want is evilent: it Was mande inanifest last session, amil it is puite pensible that we will have 'pportmities to make it still more: manifest this session. In conserfuence of the mistation policy of the diovermment we have stagnation of trade, and on that aceomut we camon loost of the prosperity which should be ours. We hate tried the Nationallobliey and wehave fonmel that it is a failure: What we ask now is that the policy of murestricted reciprocity should he given a trial. Why shomld we feel its strangers with regard to the people to the sonth of us? They are in common with us in matters of religions persmasion, in feeling. in sentiment and in aspirations. True, they are umber. another hag. but they speak the same languge as we do, they have the same feelings as we have, and our country lies side loy side with theirs for seremal thousamd miles. We have everything tw gain by heing free in our commercial relations with the United States, and every:hing to lose by mantaining an mifriemelly attitme with that comitry. We know, as was pointen ont this aftermom liy a Tory joumal of the city of Otiawa, that these relat tions are far from lecing hamonions. This jommal says that we are actually on the verge of a war with the Cuited States, and that is not the confession of a Liberal paper but it is the statement of the Tory Erwing! Jowiowel of this city. Would it not he better to entertain towards the people of the south of us more kindly sentiments, have with them freer trade relations and enjoy the degree of prosperity which we know exists under their Hag, and which would exist unter ours, if we had murestricted reciprocity.

Mr. PERRI. Mr. Speaker, this sulbjett which we are now liscussing isal very important one indeed. It is not exhansten, and what is the reason that we are not gratified with the opinion of hon. gentlemen on the opposite site of the House on this ques. tion: Is it that the ammonncement of the Minister of Finance the other night, that we are not to expect trale with the United States has so stumed and dumbfounded them or what is it? I do not wonder at gentlemen on the fovermment benches not having the strength to come forward to give expression to their sentiments on this nccasion, because a great many of them, especially gentlemen from the Maritime Provinces, had pleiged themselves on the eve of the last general elections, that they were in favour of free trade with the United States. I an aware that in my province the candidates on hoth sides of politics expressed themselves for unrestricted reciprocity, and I am also anare that they did the same thing in Nova Nootia. In fact, Inelieve the Minister of Marine and Fisheries pledged himself at one meeting that he would give the people unrestrictel reciprocity with the United States. We, howeser, find now that the actions of these gentlemen speak louder than their woris, anh when free tracle is proposed from this side of the House hom. gentlemen opposite vote straight against it. It would seem as if free trate was something like the cable of the Indian when it slippen at the emd he was ashamed anil frightened. I welieve that if before the elections the people hal known that they were not going to get unestricted reciprocity, and that the ionermment were only hypocites, the majority of the electors would have voted the other way. Sime members of the donermment had gone to Wishington during the elections and the people believel that they were going to have reciprocity. I believe that they went there without leing invited, and that when they knockel at the down of the otfice of Mr. Blane they appeared as strangers aml that Mr. Blaine did not know chey were coming. We are toll hy the Minister of Finance that they spent four or fise days in IIashingtom and that they hat a gowel time. I suppose that when the Auditor dienemals Report somes next year we will have reason to helieve they haul a goonl time. Inat I hope there will not be any conkscrews charged in the acomat. I helieve they were self-constituted messengers and that the authority is very questionalile on which they went tw Wishington. I believe they did not represent the majority of the people of Canala but that they mistepresentel them, because it is a well known fict that if the guestion were put fairly and spuarely inefore the electors of the Dominion, they would lee in farour of umrestricted reciprocity. The Minister of Finance maty tell us here that the day is gone ly for unrestricted reciprocity with the States, hat his predictions are just about as reliable as the predictions of Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Leonard Tilley when they stated that, in 1812, , the treasury of this country would receive sion, (mon), (KM) ats proveeds of the sales of laml in the North-West. What is the result? What are the facts? The facts are, that up to this day the revenue oltained from the sale of lamis in the North.West is still less than the expenditure. We were told by no less a person than Sir Charles Tupper, in Charlottetown, P.E.I., in 1878 , that if the comutry would return the Conservative party to power, in less than two years we would have free trade with the United States. Well, the people of Prince Edward Island were very much in love with free trade, having had experience of it from 1854 to 1866, and during those years they were prosperous, they made money by trading with the Americans. In fact, the farmers und tishermen of Prince Edward Island exported to the United States everything they could produce and got good prices for it all ; but after that treaty was abrogated and the Goverument of Canada began to build Chinese walls between the two countries the people of Prince Edward Island legan to grow less prosperous. sir, it is no great womler, hecause most of our exports from the island must go to the Cnited States, notwithstanding the harriers that have been built up between the two comntries. Our potatoses must go to the United ritates, although tased $2 \pi$ cents a hushel: our horses must $g 0$ to the United States, though tavel S30 ench : our lambs must go to the Chited Niates, though taxed it cents each; our sheep manst ego to the Cinited states, though taxed sl.all per head : the conl and mackerel cured hy the tishermen of Prince Eilward Island must go the Cnited states, hecause there is no other market for them anywhere, though they are tixed soz a barrel. We may he asked, why we do not send our mackerel. cinl. potatoes, horses and sheep up to Ontatio: We cammot get a greater interprovincial market than we have alrcady. I remember that five years age a fish merehant of Tignish sent 10 barrels of mackerel to Ottawa. He kept them here three months, and during that time he soh ten mackerel, and he hail tinatly to send the whole shipment to Chicagnamp paty $\mathbf{S i}^{2}$ duty on each harrel lefore he conld sell them. This is the kind of trate we have between the Meritime Provinces and the L:pper Provinces. Of couse the agents of a acricultural machinery manufacturers from ontario conne th Prince Edward Island and sell to wur farmers their machinery which is protected at the rate on 20 or $\quad$-i, per cent, and the eonsumer in Prince Edward lslime pays that mach more for his machinery than he wonld have to pay if there wefe free trade bet ween us and the linited states. When the time of payment comes. thise farmers have to mee their bills for this machinery--lecenuse, let me tell yon. the perple of Prince Eilward Island are an honest people who pay their delts : they pay a humdred cents for every dollar they owe : and notwithstanding the hurlens which this !avernment has placed upom them, when the time comes they have to sell their productions in the Enited Nates market in orler to pay the Ontario manufacturers for this machinery. The people of Prince Edward Island are not aible to sell their putatoes in Canala, or their eggs, their horses, their lambs, their sheep, their mackerel, or anything else that they have to export from the Island. They must find a market fon all these things in the Cnited States: and what is the result: Let me show you one pisture for a moment. We will suppose that a farmer of Prince Edward Islamd hating a farm of ( 6 ( acres of land has :300) hashels of potatores to sell. and I helieve he conlal have that guantity and mach more. He sells them in the United States market. How much duty is he obliged to pay_on these 300 hushels of potatues: The sum of $57 . \pi$. Suppose he sents $3(4)$ dozens of eggs: on them he has to pay Sis. Nuppose he senls one horse : he has to pay 830 on it. suppose he sells 10 lambs: on them he has to pay si.50). Suppose he sells 10 sheep : on them he has to pay Sli. Suppose he lives near the sea and does sone fishing, and sends 10 harrels of mackerel to the United States ; he has to pay $\mathbf{S}^{2}(0$ on them. In all, that poor farmer in Prince Edward Isiand, in order to meet the bills which he owes to the manufacturers of Ontario for his farming machinery and other things, is compelled to sell his produce to the United States market, and pay in one year $\$ 147$ of taxes into the treasury of the United Niates. Is that not a frightful comelition of things: Is it any womber that the people of Prince Eilward Island ery out for free traile with the United States: Where else call they olotain free trade: We were toll liy the Ninister of finance a year or two ago: Send four eggs to Fingland: there vou will tind a market for them ; the people of England want your eggs: they are hungry for them. Well, the experiment was trien, and what was the result? I sali the statement of a large shipper in Ontario, who satid: "I sohl so many do\%ens in Fingland for so mach, hut still it was less than I combl get in the United states: hut I had at certatin guantity left, and, in orler that they should not come back to Canala. the High Commissimer took them to use in his kitchen." That is the Lombon market. We know that the people of Camala are not alle to compete in the supply of eggs for the Euglish manket with the people of France, Italy anll 1 iemmany. Why, sir, egess cam he lamed there in -4 hous. and I suppose less from France, (iermany and other countries, whereas hy the time our exge reach England they are stale and untit for use. Berifles, 1 helieve the English people are far more particular as to the size and the quality of esegs thien the people: of the Uniten states. In England eggs are lought, not by the dozen, but hy the sonre, and the -00 eggs are expected to reach a certain weight. That is not the case in the liniten Ntates. Take up the statistics for the year lson and you will find that while we did not ship one dozen of eggs to Englanh, we shipped nearly se, (nn), $11(n)$ worth to the Unitel Nates. The same results appear in fish and barley. What is the reason: We have always had the English market open to us. We know there is no tariff against us on our exports to the british market, and that we have to meet a high tariff in the Liniterl States. yet we export to the United States in preference to Fingland. Why is it? It is lecause the United States are hamfier to us and more profitable than Englaml. We have been toll that the Americans have become prosperous under protection. I agree in that propesition, hut it must be remembered that the American people.
 themsel wes. Suppose there was protection hetween the cities of Chicagos and New York, how could these people live: We are told that our manufactures here will he destroyed if we have free commercial intereourse with the people of the Uniten States. Can any man be convinced that if $\bar{i},(16 f)$,- are not going to he benetited: It seems to me there can be no disputing the plain fact that the smaller population must enjoy the greater benefit. We have the labour and all the facilities required to make our people prosperous and happy if the (iovernment will only not tinker with our tariff but give the people perfect liberty to trade where they deem best. If the Government will insteml give us the United States market, we will have a happy and prosperous people in a very short time. We are toll also that this will be disloyal and tend to annexation. A more rotten argument Inever heard. I ama (irit and my hon.friends opposite are Tories, I want to buy goods, and if my Tory friends could sell them cheaper, I will buy from them; but because I buy from them, is it to he said that I am going to be a Tory? No; not a bit. With just as much reason is it said that because we desire to trate with the lankees we are hecoming annexationists. Ny hon. friend from Kent said a while ago that although a Liberal he was a loyal subject. Formy part, I would sooner live under the laws of Canala than under those of the United States. I Wats born under the British constitution and I hope to die under it. There is no donbt the diovemment have not carried ont their promises. They have failed in a goom many cases, and I camot say but that perhaps, if I left them alone a little further, they may do such strange things that the people may take it into their heats to put them out of power. They say the people are happy and prosperons and contented, hut take up the newspapers published in this city and yon will tind nu less than $\mathrm{f}_{\mathrm{i}}$ or $\overline{\mathrm{i}}$ deputations waiting daily on the Minister regarding alditions to the tariff or reluctions, which iloes not show much contentment.

(ANADA AND NEWFOUNDLANI).

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Before the Orelers of the Day are called, I leg to ask the Minister of Marine when the papers promised with respect to New. foundland, which are being eagerly looked for by a large number of members, may he expected:

Mr. TUPYFR. The pipers are ready with the exception of the examination which is necessary $t_{1}$ be made. They have been prepared and are ready to be laid on the Table of the House as soon is authority is olstained.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Cian the hon. gentleman tell me-if Mr. Speaker will excuse ine for putting the question now-whether a proclamation has been issued with respect to the admission of Newfoundland goods into Canada, putting a duty upon those goods, and when it was issued?

Mr. TUPPER. I cannot give the exact date of the proclumation issued. But the Act is in force.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I would remark that the fees have not been exacted muder the Act passel some years ago.

Mr. TUPPER. They were not collecten, but instructions were sent to the ofticers to collect them. The Act was not suspemled.

GRANITE-ENPORTS AND IMPGRTS.

Mr. LISTER (for Mr. (inlmok) asked. Is the Government aware that the Unitel States Customs officials compel Canadians. who export manufactured granite to that country, to give in diagram of each separate manufactured piece of granite exporten to that country, attached to the invoice, and the value sworn to before an American Consul ? What means do the Customs otficials of Canala employ to ascertain the value of manufactured granite coming into Canala from Creat Britain and the United States:

Mr. BOWELLL. We are not aware what the Americans do, nor the orders they give to their officials in comection with the articles that are exported from this country to the United States. In answer to the second part of the question, the sime rule applies to that article as to all others. If the hon. gentleman will refer to sections $6 \bar{i}, 68$ and 68 and some following sections of the Customs Act. he will find what the rule is on this matter.

CANADA AND SPANINH WEST INDIES.

Mr. bORDEN asked, Have any and what steps leeen taken to secure for Canala a contimuation of the present arrangement, enling 30th June next, with Spain, by which Canalian products-notahly potatoes, tish aml lumber-are almitted to the Spanish West Indies upon the sime terms as the products of the United States?

Mr. Foster. The matter has been represented to the British Govermuent, and Sir Charles Tupper has been given full plenipotentiary powers, with Sir John Wolffe, to enter into negotiations with the Spanish (fovernment in regard to this matter.

dUTY ON A BRITISH FLAg.

Mr. BORDEN (for Mr. Lavimerkis) asked, Did the fiovernment collect the other day a duty of $$ 52.75$ on a British flag presented hy H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught as a prize to the lest drilled corps of Montreal Cadets?
Mr. BOWELL. The Custons officials at Montreal collected the duty, as it was under the law their cluty to do, but as soon as the attention of the Government was drawn to the fact by the importers, the sum collected was ordered to be refunded.

CANADIAN PACIFIC AND THE INTER(OIONIAL RAILIVAY.

Mr. DAVIES askel, What was the total amome paid by the Canalian Pacific Railway Company to the Intercolomial Railway for the six months ending 31 st December last, for ruming privileges amd station and other acemmomation over the latter raal between St. John and Halifias and its stations? What was the total amome paid lov the Intercolonial Railway to the Camalian Pacific Railway, for the six monthe ending 31 st December last, for ranning trains over the literedonial Railway letween Halifax and St. John:
'Mr. HadidiAPT. The Canalian Pateitic Railway Company pay mothing for ruming privileges and stations or other accommondations wet the Intercolonial Railway hetween st. John and Hallifax, as all trains maning between these points are trains of the litter roal, the fares on which wer that section of rom acerue to the Intercolomial Railway. Nothing is paid lie the Intercolonial Railway to the Camalian Pacitic Railway Company for romming trains over the Intercolonial Railway between st. John and Halifas, as the fares acerve to the Intereolomial Railway, but, as is the regular practice. a car mileage charge is mate for the cars of one road runing on the road of another.

THE KAMOURASKA WHARF.

Mr. CARROLI. (Translation) movel for:

Conies finl accuunts, pay-lists and correspminence in the year ls9n, in relation to the construction of it whari at the villare of Kamuraski, Provinee of (Quebee.
He sail: I regret. Mr. Speaker, to sec that the Hon. Minister of lonlic Works is not in his seat : hut I hope that he will read in the Ifrusaciel the report of the remarks I ann to make on this question. In Issi the forermment decided that a wharf should he built at the village of Kanomraska. The work was commencel very late in the fall, and the result was that what was ilone was carried away by the ice of the spring. For two years nothing more was attempten, until my lamenten predecesisor, Mr: Dessaint. having called the matter to the attention of the then Minister of Public Works, the latter conclunled to have the work resumed. The wharf was to lwe owo feet long. That length has heen reacheil in 1890, hut the liead of the wharf remains to he completel. This work was umlertaken in the public interest, and I hope that the ciovernment will finish it now that it is begun. Kamouraska is one of the most important ports on the south shore of the St. Lawrence for inland nat rigation. It is a very safe harbour, the safest between Quebec and Rimouski, a distance of two humired miles, and I have no hesitation in saying, that with the exception of that at Fraserville, the Kamouraska harbouris the most important on the southern shore. A very considerable business is done there, not only between the village and parish of Kanouraska, but also with the county of Charlevoix, the farmers of which buy the Kamouraska hay and cats, while they bring in their wool in large quantities through the harbour, so that not only the parish and county are interested in the accommolation afforded by this wharf, but the general public as well. My intention is not to make a long speech upon this question, and I have briefly shown that in the public interest the (iovernment should semd to the spot an agent of the Department of Public Works, to aseertain what remains to be done, and to finish these works. which are useless now, but which must he of great advantage as scom as completed.
Motion agreed to.

INDIAN RENERVES IN BRITISH colcmbia.

Mr. BARNARD moved for :

Return showing:-1. The number of Indian Reserves in Mritish Columbia: 2. The lowation of each and name of tribe to whom allotted: 3. The area in arreage of each: 4. The area cultivated on each reserve: 5 . The populaition of each tribe when reserves were first established: 6 . The present population of each tribe: 7 . The nreal (estimared) of pastoral land on each reserve: 8. The number of horses. cat tle and sheep urned ly each tribe; 9. The estimated area of timber land on each reserve.
He saill : Mr. Speaker, in moving for certain information regarling Imdian reserves in British Colmmhia, $I$ do so with the object of having this House placed in possession of information, which I an satistied will show that the time has arrivel for a readjustment, a rearrangement or inauguration of a different policy with regard to these reererves. Uufortunately for the Province of British Columbia, during the Mackenzie Alministration, for the purpree of setting asinle lamels for the henetit of the Indians, took it for gramtell that British Columbia was never to have any white settlers, and that their duty was to give all the valuable limals along the lifferent streans and rivers, and in the rich ralleys, fit for agricaltural purposes, to the Indiams. I may point to such fertile valleys as the Fraser River. Okanagon, Nicola, Thompson and Bridge River valleys which were then reserved for the use of the Iudians. The result is that to -day, when we have a large influx of w!ite settlers, they find the best lands are set aside as ladian reserves ame they camot utilize them. The Inlians have some of the best lands in the country, but they make sery little use of them. It is true that, in some cases, they follow agricultural pursuits and cultivate a small area, lat, as a rule, the greater portion of this Indian land is left uncultivated. There are, I belice e, $\mathbf{f}(\mathrm{K})$ or $\mathrm{s}(\mathrm{K})$ Indian reserves in the Prosinces and if any hon member will take the trouble to examine the map which has heen issued, with Bue report of the superintendent General of Indian Affairs, he will, I think, conclude that a very harge proportion, indeerl, of the lamed in British Columbia has been reservel for the Intians. There are, as 1 have said, 700 or sok Indian reserves, comprising the Indians have. in Obanagon valley, something like 200 acres to each man, woman and chilit in the trile. That valley contains some particularly fine agricultural land, and it has been opened up hately ly the construction of a railway south from the Canadian Pacific. A very large portion of that valley, something like $41,(40)$ acres, is an Indian reserve; and in a province like British Columbia, although very large in area and very extensive in territory, and althongh it has a great leal of good land, yet at the same time this fertile land lies in the different valleys, and the land of the Okanagon valley is particularly rish. The settlers going in there-to-day are, however, unable to utilize this land and the community as a whole suffers therely. If the Indians cultivated the land there would not he the same objection that there is at the present time: hut the lands are not leeing cultivated. I have confined my remarks to the agricultural lands, but, in adlition to that, there is a large extent of grool mining grount on the different streams and rivers of the Indian reserves. These mining lands are now lying idle. The Indian himself cam make no nse of it ; it is of no value to him, and the white man is not allowed to take up any of the gromil withont first. making application to the fiovernment anil having the land surrendered by the Indians to the dovernment and disposed of by the diovernment. It is a difficult matter to induce these Indians to give up any rights appertaining to this land: and although they cammot use it themselves they still insist upon retaining it and in refusing to surrenler it. As one instance 1 may point out, that a short time ago a strong company, financially, was formed in Victoria for: the purpose of mining lfio or 1sio acres of gromal upon what is known as the Bridge River lumian Reserve in our prowince. This gromen is utterly valueless to the fmidians: it is untit for pasture or farming purposes, but it is supposed to contain a great deal of gold, and to take wit that gold mems the expenditure of large capital ame a great deal of time and labour. Notwithstanding that the Indians cimmot make any use of that land, they have refused to surrenler it. The matter has leen placed hefore them and hy a vote of 97 to 15 they refused to surrender, so that it lies there to-diay of mo value to either the Indians or the white inen, and an inportant enterprise has thus, so to speak. heen spuelched. Another reasom for inaugurating some pelicy with regard to Indian lands in British Columbia is that the Indian population is decteasing. At the time that these reserves were set apart the propulation was much larger than it is to-day. La grippe, the measles, and other diseases of that kind have had a very serions effect. and they have dien ont in large numbers during the past two stasons. For that reatorn I think something should the dome by the fovermment in the way of clisposing of these reserves for their benefit. The Indians in British Columbia are not like the Indians of the North-West Territories. They are all industrions, and there is not an ableInclied Indian who is not able to earn his living and who cannot make irom SI.:ill to (82.:50 per day. He does not reguire the land he has in his reserve, unless he happens to le the owner of horses or cattle or sheep. He leaves the land tocarn wages of from $\$ 1.50$ to $\$ 2.50$ per day; and he has no trouble in getting these wages. If this land were disposed of in some waty for the lenefit of the Indians and the proceeds set aside as an Indian education fund, it would, in my opinion, be much more to their benefit than it is at present. It is true that iurlustrial schools have already been established in British Columbia, and they have had a very beneticial effect on the Indians, so that I believe that if the Indian fund were augmented by the sale of these lands, and schools establishel, ant the Indians edlucated in industrial pursuits, ic would be of greater value to them than to have the land lying idle as it is at the present moment. I may mention that right in the heart of the city of Victoria there is an Indian reserve of about 110 acres, and that reserve is worth to-day at least $\mathbf{B l}(0),(0)$ or S400,010. I believe that only three Indians have a claim to that reserve, aml these Inlians have refused to surrender it. The land is practically in the heart of the city, and could be sold and utilized. It would lie a benefit to the city to have the Indians removed, and it would be a great benefit to the Indians themselves to have such a large amount of money set aside for their wants. However, they hare actually refused toabandon that 110 acres in thecity of Victoria. The same thing applies to some extent to the city of Vancouver, where there is a large extent of land in a somewhat similar position. It is not so near the centre of the city as in Victoria, but it is close to it, anl the day is not far distant when it might becone a business portion of the city. That reserve also could be used with alvantage to the Iridians ly disposing of it and providing a fund for their education. If our Indians in British Columbia were likely to cultivate the land, or to become famers, it would be a different matter, but they are not. It is true that the Indian in our province is not provident as a rule, hat he is always willing to work if he refpuires the money. Probably he will spend the money as som as he gets it, but he can always earn a living. I think, Mr. Speaker, that the time has come when it would be adsisable for the ciovernment to consider some policy such as that which has been aloptel to a certain extent in the United states, namely, that of disposing of the lands in the Indian reserves for the benefit of the Indians and utilizing the money for their maintenance and moral improvement, instead of allowing the land to, be idle and lee of no use either to the Indian or the white man. I, therefore, leg to propose, Mr. Speaker, seconden by Mr. Mara, the motion which 1 have placed in your hands.

Mr. DEWDNEY. Mr. Speaker, thehon. gentlemin who has moved this resolution has presented a most important matter for the consideration of this House, in recommending the adoption of a new policy in dealing with Indian property in British Columbia. As an old British Columbian, and knowing something of the Indians in that province, their nature, their character, and the advantages they enjoy, it is not a policy which I could recomment. When we commence to deal with Indian property, Indian lands especially, we have to be very careful. The hon. gentleman started out by saying that the time had arrived when he thought that a readjustment of the reserves should be male, and that some of these reserves should be brought into the market for sale for the benefit of the Indians. For some years past we have had an Indian Reserve Commission, whose duty it has been to adjust the reserves in British Columbia. Theold Commission, which was referred to by the hon. gentleman, did, I think, travel through the country and rather recklessly apportioned lands which they suggested should be set upart for Indian reserves for the southern and more civilized Indisus of British Columbia. Those reserves, although located some on maps and some on the ground, were never accepted as reserves by the Local Government of British Columbia, and a new compromise arrangement was arrived at between the Dominion and Local Governments, by which a new Commission was appointed, which is now at work. The head of that Commission is a gentleman who has been in British Columbia some twenty or thirty years and has a perfect knowledge of the country, the Indians and their wants, and it was agreel that he should revise the locations recommended by the old Commission, and that the Local Government should aceept the recommend: ations which he should make. That work has been going on, aml now a great portion of the more settled districts of British Columbia has heen gone over, and the reserves settled, some of them definitely. A very large number of the Indian reserves are shown on the map which we submitted this year with our report. From the nature and configmation of the comntry, the Indians are scattered in small hauls all over British Columbia, living on little locations, to which they are attached for many reasons, a large number being fishing stations on the coast. We have no less than is reserves in British Columbia altogether ; but the acreage ines not appear to he excessive, because the average per head at present is only a little over 29) acres. In some districts, for instance, the Okanagon district, to which the hom. gentleman referred, the average is necessarily higher, being 230 acres per heat, hecause the Intians there are engaged in cat tle raising and horse raising. In the Kambops district the aterage is 50 acres, and in the Kootenay ristrict 6if acres. In other portions of the country the acreage is mach less, being, in the Lower Fraser and Vancouver lsland, only 7 and $7 \frac{1}{2}$ ateres per heal respectively. I do not think we hate heen too liberal in the reserves we have located. Of course there must necessarily be reserves sitnater close to important centres, such as Victoria and Vancouver, and these have attracted the greedy eyes of speculators, who try, in every possible way they can, to induce the Indians to part with their property. The fiovernment have endeavoured, in every way, to protect the Indians in that regard. Some of their property, both on Vanconser and on the mainlund, is of very great value, and I think that if anyboly should derive a benefit from it it should be the Indians themselves, and when they feel inclined to surrender it, which, up to the present time they have not communicated their willingness to do, the property should be dealt :ith in such a way as to bring about that result. There is also mining property on some of the reserves which is of no use to the Indians; yet, on the very reserve which my hon. friend has mentionel, the Indians have been digging for gold, some of the old women washing it in their baskets, and have been making considerable money in that way. They know that the gold is there, and they attach considerable value to it. As time goes on, and the Indians come to be assured that they will derive as much benefit from the sale of their lands as by retaining them, we might deal with them, but I do not think we should dispose of their property without their consent. In the older provinces, similar applications have been made to me; and where the Indians absolutely refuse to agree to an improvement which the Government knows would be of advantage to them, and the want of which is detrimental to their neighbours, I think there would be an excuse in adopting some legislation to compel the Indians to do what would be of henefit to themselves; but I do not think the time has arriven when we should arbitrarily take their reserves and deal with them ats we please. I am of opinion that we should go on as we are cloing. protecting them in their property and not dealing with it withent their consent. With regaral to the properties mentiomed or others which are of excep. tional value. and which it is detrinental to the Wonla fe willing to asesist throngh their agents in hringing alwot at surember of the properties, which womble feave us free to deal with then: hat 1 do nut think we homble embeatome to fore the hands of the Jomians. hut should comtime to do ats we have done in the pist, protect then in every way we prsilly cam.
 with a cery great deal of what hate lowen saill hy the hom. Ainister of huterior on this suljeet. I am rather sarpmend to hear him sity that the Indian Commissinters. who were tirst appuinten for the honating of the landian reserves in bitish Cohmhia. hat auted recklessly, that they had set taide later areas in those reserves than were repuired. athl sinh who were revising the work. anl, as I muterstoun the lom. gentleman. diminishing the areas the tirst Commission hat athally marked out as aldeynate. and not more than able, mate, for the uses of the Imlian pupulation. Sir, there are several matters to be catrefully comsidered in conneetion with the relations of the hamians of British Cohmmbia to the dovermment of this comatrs, imd the obligations which the devermment of Gamala have uinheraken with reference th that Indiat pupulation. It is woll kuwan hat in the older provinees. on some of the at at leas, the hadians were recogizen ats hating a sort of presessary interest in the ail. It wats recogized that the right of use and ocropation for hutine and tishing purposes belongen 10 the:m in their tribal capacity and that before these were terminaten, Defore their right th wamber wer the entire comitry for these purpeses for which the possession of the comutry hath long been enjoved hy them. was taken away, some comb pensation wats of he given them for the extinguishment of this inperfeet ipecies of tithe. The Crown never rectenized the Indians as hat ving a legal on propmetar interest in the suil. The recergition of the ladian tithe to the extent I have menitioned Was a recomition. in the first instance, based on public: prificy, hat was ultinately regarded ats an equitahle right which a hammene Goverument. lisposel to act failly towards the aloriginal population, conlh not altogether ignore. The fovernment of British Collumbia, in dealing with the Indian popnlation, acted in a way altugether ilitierent from the policy pursued ly the English 1 :overnument in all her colomies, towards the aboriginal population. The British Colmmbia Government, prior to the Linion of Canada, refused to recognize any interest of the Indian population in the soil generally, and in the terms of linion they provided that the Govemment of Canada should deal as liberally with the Indian; population as that population had leen dealt with liy the Government of British Columbia prior to the Union. Now, from the fact that no right of use or oceupation was recognized in the Indians in the entire country, there was no such thing in the conduct of the (Government of British Columbia as the extinguishment of the Indian title. There was no title reangizen. The Indians were perritted to hoold small artas of lame for their own use. lut leyom those limited areas, they were not idmitted to have any interest whaterer, and so, at the time of the Linion. there was no ludian funt, and there could he no Indian fund out of which ans compensation or any gratuity or ammity erold ife paid to the alumgenal inhalitants. In the Province of Ontario, the charges incurred hy the Imdian Departnent are mer out of the lanliain Fuml. There is it large sum invested, through the extinguishment of the Indian tithe ant merely the sale of pertions of the reserves that the Infian prymation do unt we quire but the extinction of the mimith tith. in the whole comity and wion considerable fund has arisen from these sales. from sales of purtions of land expressly reserved. ann thus the Inlian popnlation in the Province of ( Ditatio, and tor some extent in the Province of Quelve, are nor a burden upon the publie treasury. So fare ats the Ludian population in the Proviuce of British Columbia is comeerned. there was mo legal ohligation rest ing on the (iovermment of (analiat to provide for it. .of t.. incur aluy expense with reference to it manintenance or its material on monal progres.  cranment of ( canala came todeal with the halianpopmlation not provided for, and when it came to see hat reserves were made from the territombes of British Columbia for the use of that Indian population, it was their business tosee that these provisimis, relating to reserves, in the terms of the Union het ween British Columbia amd Camada should be liberally interpreted in the interest of the Indian populitioni. It was not in accorlanee with the spirit any more than with the terms of the Union that ans niw fumb was placed at the disposal of the fiovermment of Canada for the use of the Indians that the reserves should be of alequate extent. It was requirel by the spirit and the letter of the Dominion hoserument that the lndian interests should not he sacrificed between the two Governments. Now.Sir. when a Commission was appointed consisting of three, one representing, if I rememher rightly. the Goverument of British Columbia, the seeond the Government of Canala, and the third the lorth, these parties acter, in my opinion. in the tirst instance, in accordance with the spirit and intention of the terms of the Cnion. Lowk at the manner in which we are told the Indians have lealt with the Intian population of the North- West. We have ceengnized their intotest ats hunters and ass fishers in the entire comutry, and in lealing with them we haveextinguished what we call theirright in the soil, aml we have not assumed that they hat no right befond the reserves, we chase to set apiart for them. Xow. when the disermatnt same tolleal with the Anomment of British (olumbia, and when the Ginvermment of British Columbia hat refused to recoraize any lulian title of ocelpation or possession in the soil of British Columbia further than that which might he clamen by any other protion of the population, it was the duty of the diovernment of Camala to see that the Indian population were faily dealt with. and that in so large a provinece iss that of British Columbiat they were non in be stinted in the reserves lain out, that the latuls should he secureal to them at all events for agricultural parposes, and that those shouhal be reserverl son that with orlinary eare ame inlustry the Intians might ohtain for themselves a comforiahbe shlosistence. With regared to lames on the contet o where tishing is the principal industry, the area of hand remuired for the Indian population of conrse was less. and the commissioners apmointen to mark out those reservations were instructed to no:ok wat a less areat for the Indians engraged in ti-hinge than for those who were engaged in agricultural fursuits. Now the Minister informs ns that the whole areat of the lanks set apart for the use of the Indian propulation sol fit--inh he has unt said whe her all the Indians are providerl for yet or mot, hat I apprehemb they are not-the isesage is $\because!9$ iteres to an Indian, amd the Honse will see how very small that areat is in such a large province which so fite is su spursely populated. In the Okinatesu dixtrict the hon. gentleman toll us $2-011$ atres were allowed to each ladian, in Kitmloops: in atres, aml in Kowtenay, foll ateres, while on the Fraser hiver, where the ludians are chiedy tishermen, they were allowed $11 t$ adres amh 7 acres re-- ane tirely. The Honse will see that the tervitory is very limited amd forms late a small fraction of the area of that great province, the langest province in the whole lominion of Canalia. It seems to me that, moler the eircumstances, the Minister of the Interior should he specially watchful that the small territory that hats heen given to the Indians of British Cohmbia should not lee encroathed upon. ani it shoulal be the duty of the Honse to see that to: ilepartment iloces not infringe upon its trust, and loses not permit the white population to obtain from the Inflians any portion of their territories, except in the ordinary way amd after the most cancefal consideration, and also to see that the Inflian reservation, simply becanse it may happen to he in a desirahle location, shonh not be improperly taken from them. One hon. gentleman, who represents a constituency in British Columbia, in antdressinu the House on this suliject, has referred to the Indian reserve in the vicinity of the city of Victoria, amd over and over again attempts have heen mate to get possession of that territory for what would be regarien anywhere else as a very inadequate consideration. It seems to me that the department should be especially ciareful that, if that reserve is put on the market and soln or elisposed of, it shouhl le at its full value, and the fumbs should he invested for the Indians to whom the rights of property actually belong. I loonot unflerstand that that reservation in the ricinity of Victomia has heen survendered to the (rown for disposal. The Minister of the Interion has not made anys such statement. That property is still hell in trust for the use of the Indian population. and I do mot think that any mulue pressure shoulal he hrought to bear upon those lamians to force them to dispose of the land that they hohl. I can well molerstand that the reservation in the vicinity of Victorial womh lee a valatille reservation, and that the lamels, if disperserl of for a valuable consideration, could perhajis: be more leneticially emploged for the use of the city. and towards its extension. hat care shouhl he takein that the property is not satcrificen, that the landian interest is not siacriticen, ambl that the sumds that maty he obtained from the sale of that property, whenever it is put on the market, shonhla be inrested for the use of the ladian popmlation. It is most desiablle that, hefore athothilise is dome her way of restrieting these meseres or dispusiny of any portion of them, this Honse shombl he put in prisicssion of the infomation. and it is omly after. the House has leen so informen that ally salle should take place. The Howse will malerstand that the position in regarl to the Inotians in British Columbia is not at all the same as that in regaril to the Indians in the I'rovinces of Ontario imel Guchere. In the Province of ( $n$ tario the Indians are mo hurden on the pullice treasury. They are supported out of their awn funds. liut in british Columbia the Provincial dowermment has hamied wer to us nothing: we have receiven no momers ant of which We can give the fudians any aill or suppret. The Imdians of British (ohmmbia have up the the presem time been a very eomsiberable ehaige upom the public: treasury. Latrge sums of money have athmatly heen taken out of the public theasma. towarids the matintename and improvement of this Indian population, amd therefore it becomes all the more necessary, when it is proposed that anypretion of the Inclian reservation is tober sohl. to see that a proper diejossal of the receipts is minle, not only in the interest of the Intians hut alson in the interest of the publie treasary. I think the Homse should take care that mothing is ilome that will place: the Indians in a less favomable comdition than they are at the present time: I regret to hear the Minister say that the first commissioners set out the reserves recklessly. 'That was not my view of What they did. I thonght they dealt failly with the Intians amm recognized that the Indians should get fair :ompensation for the lambs set apart hy the British (Solumbia fiovernment, and where the reserves were set apart, that they shombl be eompensatent to a consideral,le extent and that they should receive an amomet of land larger than that which would be repuited to support a similar number of white population, as the Indian population is less skilled in agrienltural pursuits and wonhl necessarily reguire a larger proportion of land than that reguired by a white population, and to give them less than womble given to an enterprising number of white settlers would not be dealing fairly with the Indian popnlation or conforming properly with the terms of Lnion.

Mr. MARA. Eivery British (ohmulnan will :Sree with the propesition latid lown by the Ministers of the Interior, that geonl faith shond be kep with the Indians. The Indians were the first possessors of the soil : they were entitled to the piek of the land, and they were entitled to all the lambs they eomhluse. They cortainly din get the first choice, and they got ath the lame they conll use, and more, too. But the prosition now is this: If, as the hom. Minister of the Interion hats stated, some reserves were made recklessly. that mistakes in the alloting were male, should these mistakes not be rectitied? If it can he shown that some halians received too litule land. amblhat others got tor much. shoulil the allotments not be ergialized be taking from those who sut tow much. and allowing that lame to he settled he whites, and giving the proveeds to those who (int for little: Then. again, if it can be shown that a hamel of Imlians have decreased so that the flamtity of lame they have is ont of all propertion on thase now living, shoula the (iovernment not le in a prostion fostep in amblaty: lou have more lame than yom can use, more lam than you can cultiate. We must take a portion from yomandsell it to the white men, but the proveeds shall gen to you and you will pet the lenefit of it. Now, the very case that the fom. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) has cited. is at revy strong illustation. Here is a large reserve near the city of Victoria that could he sold to-laty for something like three or fome humbed thonsand shllars, and only three Indiams have a vested richt in that valuable piece of lame. These three Indians can say whether that piece of lamel, worth three or four humered thomsamiliollars, shall remain locked up as a reserve, or whether it shall he soll and the money used for the henetit of the Indians. Now, neither the hon. member for Bothwell mor any other member of the House will say that that position is a corvect one. Surely in a case of that kimel the dioverument ought to have some power, or if they feel that it womlle inambisable to take that power to themselves, there should he a proper court to whom it eonlal be referred, to say when an Indian reserve should be sold and how the money should be dealt with. Now, with regard to the acreage, I am not disposed to accept as quite correct the tigures given by the Minister of the Interior. He knows as well as I for that it was very difficult for the commissioners to ascertain the exact population of the different bands of Indians when they were allotting the reserves. I know for a fact that on the Thompson River, as soon as the Indian (ommissioner would he ready to leave Kitmloops, several fanilies would precede him to Whuswap, the siame would be repeated to Npallumeheen, others to Okanagon, therefore after having participated in the allotment given at the first mentioned places, and when he took the heads of families there they would be counted and of course the acreage would appear very much smaller than it really is. Now, my attention has been called to one particular reserve on Fraser River, called Neabiril Island. When that reserve was laid out the commissioner, in his report, stated:
" If they have not in six years from June 13, 1879, sufficiently used this land in the opinion of the Government, the unused portion is to ceasc to be Indian land."
Later, in a subsequent report, he also refers to it and states :

Mr. Minss (Bothwell).
"I put the limit of six years when the assignment must be reconsiilereil."
Now, I have here an attidavit from three men who settled on this lame last vear. I may state that this Seal,idy Island comprises an area of t.ink day, if pilt in the market. 810 and s 20 an atce. These men with a number of others, alnout $\geq$ ( 1 . splatted on the limi. hailt honses ansl cermmenced clearing, hut were orreved oft ly the Indian agent amil policemen. Here is a copy of their attilatit :

These men are all respectable citizens of Vancomver. I merely give this as an illustration to show that the Indians have neither ocenpied nor caltivated their reserves ats they agreed to do, when these reserves were given to them.

Mr. DAVIFN(P.F.I.) Does the hem. gentemen allocate the right of these sfuat ters to hold on to this lame:

Mr. MARA. No. I certainly do not : atmil Ialy that the Indian agent arted perfectly right in ordering them offi-. he conly did his sluty. But what I say is this: That I think the time has arrived when the forermment shonlal look into the guestion to see whether, as the Minister of the Interion almits that mistakes have been made, it is too late to rectify these mistakes. I say that in a case like this it is not right that $4, \mathbf{j}())$ acres of land should be lying idle, untilled and untonched, it piece of land capable of supporting to families, when the Indians virtually refuse to cultivate it. That is the position I take. I think it is well worth the serious consideration of the (iovermment, and I think, if they No look into cases like this and that of Victoria, they will almit that the time has arrived when they should take some extra powers that they do not now possess, to deal with the Indian reserve question.

Mr. PATERNON (Br:ut). The question apparently before the House is one just asking for information and papers. As the Minister says there call lie no objection to bringing these down. we will know then, perhotps, more than what the Minister has alrearly tohd us. But I julge from What he has alrearly staterl, that while there are exceptional cases where large holdings are held ly individual Indims, the avelage is not excessive - 2 acces. I think, he stated to at heal, and that cammot he considered excessive. The hon. gentleman may see some difficulties in the matter, hat I am rery ond indeed, for myself, to hear the Minister saty that he is unt prejareal to move in the direstion of taking greater power to himself to dispose of the Indian lamels withont the consent of the Indians. I can understam that certain individuals, perhaps, might he anxions that the Indians should consent to move in a certain direction, But those Indians have rights, and I should junge from: what the lom. member for lale (Ni. Dara) has said. that the Indians themselves there are very intelligent men. I take it from the fact that the franchise clanses of the hadian Act are leing extembed to them. that they mulerstamil their atfairs pretty well. that they are supposed to be pretty well advanced in civilization and in taking cate of their atfais: and if they consider it is not in their interests to surremer a portion of their reserve in order that it maty lee soll, it seems to me it would be apart from the old British principle and the Canalian principle that the Misister should take power without their consent and in defiance of their wishes, to sell that land for them. There are cases in which certain white men hold property in the vicinity of thickly-populated towns, which they are not using or improving. I have known cases of that kind. It is possible that there might be in British Colum-hia-- though I know nothing of the kind--as well ats in other places -- White men who hold land adjoining a thriving city: It might be oljeecteal, and it might be chargen against such an individual, that he was lacking in public spirit hy not improying those lands, that he was standing in the way of the public good becinse he did not consent to their sale. But the hon. gentleman opposite dioes not preteme that the law should be changed in the direction of permitting the diovermment to take the lan:l from him and sell it for the gool of the community.

Mr. BARNARI). He would have to pay his taxes.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). Ves, there would be that remedy so far as it goes, hut the hon. gentleman kuows how little use is maile of the power of taxation even in cases of that kind. What the hon. gentleman asks from the Minister is a radical departure from Indian legislation, so far as both Cinnalian and British tradition and action are concerned. I understand at present that no land can be soll hy the (rown without the cousent of the Indians being ohtained, and there must be an amendment to the Indian Act to enable this to le sone. There must be first the consent of a majority of the memisers of the band over 21 years of age obtainel, and when they have consented, then the Govemment can dispose of the land in the best interests of the people. As to whether the Minister would propose modifications in the law, under which power would be given the Government to dispose of the land whether the Indians wished it or uot, I was glan to hear the Minister say that he did not propose legislation in that direction at the present time. I am fully confilent that none of the members from British Columbia are seeking to do any injustice to the Indians. Their renarks are not. conclred in that spirit, but I have pointed out to them what I think would be the injury of a departure from the course we have followed in respect to this matter. It may be that with the enfranchising clanses of the Indian Act made applicable to them as they now are, these Indians, who seem to le very well alvanced, julging from the information given as to their capacity; to mantain themselves, may avail themselies of these clathses. It is at their option whether the desire to take the henefit of that Franchise Bill, hut if they consider it to lee in their interest to do so, they will gradually lecome entitled more and more to the management of their own property : and the solution of the matter may come abrot in that way. But to enleavour to force anything, wonld be contrary to the tratitions of legislation, and I was glad to hear from the Minister that he Wrould hesitate before he took any steps in that direction.

Mr. MARA. The Indians do not oloject to selling the lame ; what they do object to is that they will not have the handling of the money.

Mr. PATERNON (Brant). Have they surremberel:

Mr. MARA. In every case where asked to surrender they would be willing to do so, if they could get the money; but what they clo not like is that the money should be left with the fiovermment and funded, they dirawing only the interest on it. They Would sell readily enough if they conld get the money.

Mr. BARNARD. We are all of one accord in regaral to prostecting the rights and interests of the Indians. The only difference of opinion is this: The member for South l3rant (Mr. Paterson) thinks it should le left entirely to the judgnent of the Indian whether it is to his interest that the lamd should be sold. I contend that although the Indian with us is industrious and able to earm his living, and Indian labour is always in lemand, he is not the hest julge of what is in his own interests.

Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). How is it with the white men?

Mr. BARNAR1). We take it for granted that they are, although they make mistakes. I contend the Incian is not the best judge ; that the Government, who are the guardians of the Indian, he being their warl, are in a better position to know whether the sale of the portion of their land is in the Indian's interest or not. The hon. member for Brant has"alluded to the fact that the franchise is to lee extended to them in British Columbia. Although they are industrious and can earn money, they are not educated, and are not dualified, and will not le for some time, to come under the Franchise Act.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Under the franchise clauses of the Inclian Act.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Can they vote in British Columbia now?

Mr. BARNARD. No, I think not. So we are all of one accord. There is no intention on the part of the members for British (olumbia to aldrecate: that Indian rights should he interfered with or that any of his limels shomble ohe otained liy specalators. We conteme that the Indian, whio has the lands. is not the best julge as to whether they shonlal he sohl for the beenetit of the Indians or not, hat that the (iovermment shomblatace themselves in the position to be the julges in that respect and unilize the money received for their benctit. The Minister of Interior sitys that greedy speculators desire to get these lands. No doulit they do: hat these speculators are willing to pay for the land, and the money receiven wond lie usen hy the diovernment for the benetit of the Inliatns.

Mr. IATERNON (Brant). They will hecome still more valuathle as time groes om.

Mr. BARNARD. That is quite tone. But the Indian of the present day will prohathly require the noney more than the Indian of a subsequent date, becanse: in three or four generations there will le very few Imbians left. llisease is making great manges among them, and they are grahally lying off. At the present time the money derived from these lamds will he of greater ahrantage to them than at a future date. Another alvantage from the disposal of these lands is that we procare White settlers, amb thus generally henefit the commmity. The Dinister hats also referred to mining. and he stated that the Indians on a particular reserve were mining anil taking the gold out of the hars of the river. That has heen the crase, hat placer-mining is over now. The Indians clo not mine to any extent. There is no gohl, except that oltained by an expentiture of large sums of money. The land I referred to on that reserve is high bench land, and it will require an expenditure of froms $\$ 2(0)$, (KN) to $5: 30,(\mathrm{MNO}$ to work it, and make it available. The Indians camot possibly do that. A company want to buy it, and are prepareel to pay what the fiovernment consider a just figure. placing the money aside for the henefit of the ludians. I conteml that it will be advantageous to the Indians and the country generally to have the land utilized in that way. The Indians will derive employment from the working of the groumd and the public would he generally benctited, whereas, the land is now idle and is of no advantage to the Indians them. selves. Thirty or forty Indians own this land, and they refused to sell it hy a vote of $2 \bar{i}$ to 19. If the Govermment-were in a position to-day to say that it was in the interests of the Indians that they should realize the value of the land, it would be to their advantage. The Indians are often hiassed by people who entertain feelings of jealousy towards companies who undertake to develop land near them, and are apt to be influencerl by these people who do not appreciate what is in their own interests. I hope the information when it comes clown will be as full as possible.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) There is no cloulbt that a great deal can le said in favom of the view which the hon. gentleman takes, and 1 can well see that the reservation of these lands, at the time the reservations were made, might be equitable and just, but that circumstances may have so changed now that it might be desirable to give power to the department to sell. It seems to me, however, that the danger of outside parties influencing the Indian is more in the rlirection of inducing him to sell innproperly and inprovidently, than imelucing him to withhold his assent to the sale. I remember. four years ago, I wats in the Eniterl States (ongress, and a hill was hefore Congress for the purpose of reinvesting in the State an enomons territory which himl heen reserved for the Indians, hut had heen granted to speculative companies. It was fommat. after the transfer. that these compinites hatd obtaned the lands hy fraturlatent misrepresentations, and that the Jndians hat heen deprivel of a most valualhle property improvialenty and improperly : aml it was necessary to escheat the territory hack to the State. Thit was done hy an Act of the Legislature. It took three or fone days to carry that det through, hecanse the company Wais so large ame so wealthy that it resorted to all mamer of devices to ohstruct this remerlial legislattion. However, the legislation wats carrien throngh. and the Indians hat the lamd reinvested in the State for their henetit. It woull be very awkwaral if anything of a similar kind happened here, aml, therefore, I was very glad to hear that, so far ats the Minister of the Interior was eoncerned, he wombl hasisen very slowly in this matter. I lo not mean to siay that the time may not come when, for the benetit of the Indian, as well as for the henetit of the viate, it will be alvisahle to sell these lamds. It is, howerer, a matter that shonld not he clone hastily: and in which we should procerd in a very conservattive manmer.

NFW BRIIMEF A(PRONS LACHINF ('ANAK. A'T MONTREAE.

Mr. CURRAN moved for :

Return of all petitions of Boards of Trade, railway companies, and documents generally, comecrning the contstruction of a new brilge acrose the Lachine Canal at Montreal.
He said : This is a question which I have brought before the attention of the House sereral times: already, and the last time during the latst session of larliament. The construction of a bridge in the city of Montreal over the Lachine (amal has been agitated for a very great number of years. I spent five years, after my first entrance into l'arliament, in endeavoming to convince the thenengineer-in-chief of the importance, as well as the alisolute necessity of a bridge to relieve the present Wellington street bridge of an amount of the travel and tratfic which has to pass over it and for which it is utterly inaleguate. After five years of representiation, there was a sum of Sin,(MN) put in the Estimates for the construction of a new briche between the Wellington bridge and what is known as Meciee's bridge on the Lachine Canal. Nothing was done with the sim, (N) which hal been voted then, and the engineer-in-chief stated that the reason for not proceerling with the bridge wits that $$ 25,000$ was found to be an insufficient sam to erect the bridge in guestion, and, in conformity with a promise made, the then Minister of Railways ingerted in the Estimates a sum of S 4 i, (00) for a new bridge. Prior to the time for erecting the bridge, the engineer-in-chief of the department died, and another gentleman was appointed to the office after considerable delay. The work was not proceeded with; and the complaints that hat been made Were renewed. The (iovermment hial been meemorializell by the Board of Trade of Montreal, by the (irand Trumk Railway (co., by forty thousand people living on the river side of the Wellington hridge, as yell as by those interested in all the large factories foundries and industrial estahhishments which are located there. I thought it my duty to briag the matter hefore the late Sir John Macilonald, who was Minister of Railways at the time, and during the month of December, is 90 , finding that nothing was being done, although the money hal been roten, 1 wrote him, asking what was the cause of the delay; as 1 had been informed that there was not much prospect of epperations buing commentere. In reply I received from the Prime Minister the following letter:-

"M. Deak Cerras.-I have been disensing with Trudeun the bridec question. He has formed the onvinion Trudenu the bridge uqestion. He has formed the opinion that the Wellington liridge. beink tar too narrov. had better be removelt, and a wider bridge buit with sidewalks. This will involve the building of wider piers. The stane can be prepared during the winter as well as the irun sulperstructure. In the spriug the lock will be cmpty as it is every arring for aboot a month, and Muring that time the pier call be built, and the iron structure if ready. can be placed without delay. The fiet of this subject beine under consideration, is the reason why no steps have beell taken to call for tenders.
" Yours faithfilly.
"JOHN A. MACDONALI).

"J. J. Cerk.s, Esq., M.P."

1 understand that the present engineer-in-chief has different views from thrise entertained hy Mr. Page. The former engineer was of the opinion that he shonld construct a new bridge, and the present engineeritappears from this letter was of the opinion that a bridge with domble tracks, able to accommodiate the tratfic and facilitate the travel, would he a better plan. As I represented myself, voicing the sentiments of the Board of Trade and the othe persons concerned in this matter, I stated that it was a ${ }^{\text {question of }}$ no importance so far as we were comcernel, whether we hat two binges or one. pro. vided that greater accommodation was given. Aow another year has elapsed anil nothing has been done. 1 moderstand that there is not even a plan ready yet, and the combition of affairs at the lridge there is not only an obstruction to the tratfic at this most important point, hut it is a source of constant danger. There are hundreds of vehicles detained at this point at each side of the bridge when it is open for tive or ten minutes to let hoats pass through, and day by day the trouble and the danger to life and limb is increasing there. I take this opportunity of calling the attention of the Minister of Railways to the crying want that exists for bridge accommodation at that point. The matter has been delayed so often and so many promises have heen made, that the people are heginning to despair of ever having justice done them on this really urgent matter. I am satisfied that the letter I have read states fully what may he done, and done without any trouble, during the fortheoming winter. Provision was made, even last year, by the acting Ninister of Railways at that time, who promised me then that the matter would he pushed forward at once. If provision is made for this bridge now, the stone can be cat and everything prepared for building the necessiary piers during the forthcoming winter, and we can have a new bridge there next spring. The cost is really trifling. Parliament lus voted the amount required on three different oceasions. I am satisfiel that my hon. friend the Minister of Railways will see that during the forthcoming winter this mgent matter will he attembed to, and that if we are not to have two bringes there, at all events we shall have one large hridge with ilouble tateks, capable of accommandating all the tratfic at that print, and in that way pur an end to the demani that is leing constantly made.

Mr. HAliadRT. I have no dowht, from the statement of the hom. member, that the hidge which he speaks of is greatly neenled. I must apolugize to him for not leing able to speak authoritatively on the sulbject. as, thongh I sent to my department for the fullest information in regarid to it, I hate not yet got it. I will promise the hon. gentlenan to nake a statement when the item comes up in the listimates, as to when the hridge will the commenced and will probahly he finished : and 1 have no ilonht, from the statement he makes, and the amome asked, that the requirements are such ats to justify bs in proweding with the hindee immelliately, aind comtinuing the work until it is completed.
Motion agreed to.

ARTIFICIAL FERTILIZERS.

Mr. Mc:MILLAN (Huron) movel for:
Return showing the pantity of artificial tertilizers imported between the list of July, 1891, and the lit January, 189?.
He said : Mr. Sperker, I felt at one time that there would perhaps lee some ehanges in the tariff. but the speech of the hom. Finance Minister makes it evident that there is mot much chance of any leing marle this session. But one change shoulh be to place fertilizers on the free list. Ihave heen examining the recorls, and I find that we import into, this comentry only a very smallynantity of fertilizers. That has been given as one reasom why the duty shonld not be removel. I finl. however, that we export a large pluatity of phosphates to the Cnited States, where they are almitted free of chaty, and that class of manures is mamufatured thereand sent back to (anada in small quantities. I also timi that fertilizers can he manufactured more cheaply in Canala than in almost any other commey. At one time there was no estahlishment in the conntry for the mannfacture of sulphuric aciol, whe of the principal ingredients of fertilizers ; lout in Fayclish company has erected works and is now mamufacturing sulphuric acid and fertilizers of the very hest description. So that Canada is in a prsition to mannfacture these ingredients; anll, as statel by the Finance Minister anl the late Minister of Railways, Canada has hetter opportunities than any other comentry for the mamutacture of fertilizers. A exoml many reasons have been given why artificial fertilizers should not be put on the free list. One reason is, that the duty prevents the importation of worthless fertilizers into the Dominion. I do not see why the Govermment cannot have a regulation providing for their inspection. There are in reality, in these fertilizers, only three elements which are beneficial, namely, nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash: and when a fertilizer is analyzed, and we ascertain the exact quantities of these elements in a ton, we can judge of its value as a manure. At present the subject is in an experimental stage. Our experimental farms have not had sutficient. time yet to give us the result of their experiments, though I hope we shall learn something in the next report. Still, a report of the effect of these fertilizer's on one tiell will not give a fair idea of their effect on another fieh. Artiticial fertilizers have not heen used for a great length of time. I think it was only ahout 1842 that phosphates were first used. In the older countries there is still a grood deal of choult as to their value, and that doubt will remain until a large number of experiments are mate. Chemists can tell us exactly the quantity of fertilizing matter contained in any soil ; hut it is only through actual experiment that we can tell what the effect of fertilizers will the on the land. We have been told by the Minister of Finance that we have the hest ieposits of raw material that the world has seen. and we have also been told that we have the Very hest elements for the mandacture of sulphuric acid. He also tells us that the great difference between an industry whenstarted and after it has had years to grow is found in the action of the forernment. Now, the manufacturers of fertilizers have hat protection for the last thirteen years, and they ought certatinly hy this time, considering all the natural advantages they possess, to be in a position to mamufacture fertilizers in competition with any other comntry: Taking into consideration the annomit of calpital invested in the agricultural industries of this country, and their depressed condition for some time past, it is the cluty of the Giovernment to give us all the possible relief they can. I would appeal to the Minister of Agriculture, who must know that in the l'rovince of Ontario at the present time the agriculturists reguire to alopt every means placed within our reach, in order to increase the produce of our farms and to cheapen production. We can do very little in the way of regulating the prices of farm products, but we can do a grool teal in the way of cheapening production and improving the guality of the goods we produce, hy the jurlicions use of fertilizers. It is important to remember that the effect which it farmer will obtain from fertilizers on a low lying field is mo criterion of what their effect will he on high lanh. The effect of fertilizers in light soil, shitable for vegetables, would he no criterion of their effect on heavy clay soil, so that the farmers have to experiment to a great extent, and I hope the Government, seeing we have all the natural products necessary for the manufacture of fertilizers, will remove, as far as pussible, all the burdens placed on agriculturists, as the fiovernment of almost everv other comatry has fomm it necessiry to do. There leeing a very small amount of fertilizers imported into the cowntry, the revenue which would be taken out of the treasury would be very small, so that it camont be on the ground of lack of revenue that the Government does not give us relief. Our manufacturers have had sutficient time given them to establish their industry and have had every opportunity to make it solidi, anm now when agriculture is not to get relief in other directions, which we expected to get, it is the duty of the Government to remove the protection from the raw material and give every assistance possible to the farmer. This is a matter in which the farmers are deeply interested. At present we have got to change the system of farming to a considerable extent on actount of the changes taking place by our exportation of produce to the other side, and we will have to change our use of different manures and use more fertilizers than we have done. After the Government has spent such large sums of money in maintaining experimental farms, 1 hold it is their duty to give us this small measure of relief which will atfect to no extent the revenue of the comntry. It is a neasure of relief which will not allow the manufacturers of any other country to supply this comentry with fertilizers, if the statements are true, which I believe them to be, which have been made looth liy the Minister of Finance and by the late Slinister of Railways and Canals its regards the effect of this tarift, namely, that Canada has the raw material in aboudance of a richer quality than is to be found in almost any other country, so that, with such facilities, our manufaturers onght to be: able to compete against any other comitry in the worh. I hope, therefore, the fiovermment will take this into their consideration, and that the Minister of Agriculture, standing as the representative of the farmers in the (onncil, will take this into his consideration and bring his influence to bear on the Government of the day in order to give us this small amount of redress.

Mr. 130WELLL. I have n" objection to the passage of the motion, shouh the hon. gentleman not he satistied with the information I now give him. The total amount of these fertilizers imported between the dates mentioned in his motion is S5, 84. The quantity of fertilizers is not specitied, but this is the value imported for the six months ending the 31st of December last. I have no doubt that the hon. gentleman will withhaw his motion and not insist on my bringing down in a formal form the same inforliation.
Mr. Mamillas (Huron). I hate no desire to catuse any return to be brought down which is not necessary: Now that we have the information, I hope the fovermment will take it into their consideration and remove the duty on fertilizers. That was the object of my making this motion.

Mr. MULOCK. Before the motion is withdrawn, I think we shoull hear from the Minister of Agriculture, not only upon the merits of the monion itself. lut the winemations of my hons. friend from Huron with regard to fertilizers. One would have expected the hon. Minister of Ayriculture to have mate some observations upon this motion. I am surprised that the acting Minister of Customs, who on this occasion is rather assuming the rolr: of a Minister of Finance in his aggressiveness, should have undertaken the luty derolving on the Minister of Agriculture, and act in this double-hearled capacity. My hon. friend has suggested that the dity on fertilizers should be removed, and I entirely agree with him. Some years ago we had the subject under discussion. At that time, there was a specitic duty of $\$ 6$ per ton on fertilizers; and when it was proposed it should be done away with, or at all events take the form of an ad ralorem duty, the Government and their supporters advocated the maintenance of a specific: duty on the gromen that such was necessary to protect the farmers from being imposed upon. It was said there were cheap and dear fertilizers, and it would not do to trust the farmer to his own intelligence or the machinery of the law to protect him, lut he must he protectenl by a specific duty. They all sang the same tune, until one day the Minister of Customs got up and suggested that it would be a good thing to have an ad ralorem duty, and immenliately the reasons for specific duty disappeared, and they all said it was right to have an ad roloram duty. Now we have had an cul ralorem duty of 20 per cent, which, according to the statement of the acting Minister of Finance, means 20 per cent on fertilizers reaching in value from $\$(2)$ to $\mathbf{s i n}(0$ a ton. So that there is to-day a duty of from $\$ 4$ to $\$ 12$ a ton upon one of the raw materials necessary to the proper carrying on of agriculture in Canada. My hon. friemil has referred to the fact that certain conntries, such as Great britain, admit fertilizers free. Not only does direat Britain do so, but the United States, whom my hon. friends are so fond of initating in many ways, especially with regard to their protective tariff, does the same. The Cnited States. with all their protective fallacies. have never gone so far as to tas the farmers for fertilizing the soil which is to promuce food for man. It has remained for this Alministration to do that monumental act of folly. A few years ago the House was asked to put oin the free list one of the raw materials necessary for the manufacture of fertilizers, sulphuric acia, which enters very largely into the composition of superphosphates, it being necessary in order to make the lime soluble. and, if hon. gentlemen will refer to the debate of the year to which I refer, they will find it stated by the then member for sherbrooke that an industry had heen started there for the mannfacture of sulphuric acid, and that it was so successfulas to be ahle not only to keep out importations but also to export its aciois to the United states. The freight on iacinls is in itself an immense protection. It is a dangerous thing to transfer acids and there is a high railway rate on such freight, so that the cost of the tramsport of acid is of itself a great protection to the Anerican manufacturer. But, according to the statement of the hom. member at that time. the Canadian manufacturer at Capelton was able to export his proluct to the United States at a protit. Yet, if he reimported that acid after the manufacture, he would have to pay 25 per cent od alorim. For an article which enters so largely into manufactures, the duty is decidenly high, amounting to perhaps not less than $\$ 10$ a ton. So, whether the raw material is exported or the arricle manufactured in Canala, the farmer is taxed 20 per cent, or from 84 to $\$ 12$ a ton for the fertilizer which he reguires for the carrying on of his industry. What is the effect of this? Has this duty had the effect of callsing our uwn raw material for the manufacture of fertilizers to le manufactured in Canada? By the Trade and Narigation Returns we find that we are exporting about half a million dollars worth to Fagland of phosphates which are to le manufactured there, to enable the English farmer to compete with us. Our phosphates are heing dryen out of the country. Why? Perhaps my hom. friemis may say it is locamse there is no demand for them here, but the ligher the cost of them the less demand there is for them. If you want to get them into the farmers hands you must make them popular and cheap. Now, there is a larse duty on the raw material and there is no competition for the manufacturer, and there is hardly any manufactured in Canada and practically there is none used by the general farmer. Thus we are losing our raw material, we are losing our natural wealth, and not only is it a loss to the Canadian farmer, but it allows his rivals to successfully compete with him ; and that is what is calleel the Natimal Policy. I suppose that four-fifths of the lalworing population of Canada are engaged in tilling the soil, but they are deprived of the benetits which the soil provides for them, and their rivals are enabled to compete with them successfully in this matter. I do not see how the Alministration can justify this act. A few years ago, when the tax on the acid was estallished, it was declared that it would have the effect of hoilding up the mamufacture in this country. How many years are you going to allow for the working out of this experiment? A great many years have elapsen, and the omly result has been to hamdicap the (iuadian farmer, and to-day the Minister of Agriculture is dumb and does not offer an excuse for this tax. It is the salne sort of tax as that on agricultural implements. Hon. gentlemen pick up the blue-book, and they say : We find we imported four or tive thousiand dollar: worth of artificial fertilizers, and the duty on that is all the farmers pain on this tax. The fact is, of course, that the tax is not paid to the customs house in this case but to the manufacturer at (apelton and elsewhere. I think the time has arrived when the farmer should have some consideration. Gireat considenation is shown to him at election times but. when the Administration is placed firmly in office again. a deat car is turned to the demands of the farmer intil the next election is alout to arrive. Now, with the prospect of an election at a remote perion, let us see whether the farmer will have any consileration from the Administration, or whether they will simply wait until the election is near at hand and then make promises which will som be forgotten.

Mr. IVEN. I would like to correct some of the statements made ly the hom. gentleman, no donbt in good faith. We can hardly expect him to have correct information on agricultural questions. I presume that if it were a matter comnected with the University of Toronto, of which he has the honour to be vice-chancellor, or a matter atfecting education generally, as he is known to be a distinguished scholar. We might receive valuable information from him-at all events he would not be likely to make any statements which were not correct. I understoon him to state that the late member for sherbrooke promisel that, if protection were given to the manufacture of agricultural fertilizers at Capelton, they would be made there, and now he says that that promise has not been fulfilled, and that artificial fertilizers have not been made there as promised. I bes to inform the hom. gentleman and the House that not only has the manufacture of artificial fertilizers been successfully carried on at Capelton, but that it has been extensively carried on, and that an article has leen made there which is rapidly becoming popular with the farmers of my hon. frienl's own province as well as of the rest of the Dominion; that they are making an article there which is received hy scientific farmers and by scientists with great favour, as being far superior for the price to that manufactured in any other country, whether the United States or England. I may further inform him that they can make there ten times as much as they can find a market for, though the market is growing as the farmers find the qualities of the fertilizers which are mate there, If the hon. gentheman were to enuire among his frients, he would find that they are from year to year using this prenluct more laryely and with hetter results. The hom. the Minister of Agriculture has been appeated to as if it were at subject he combld not defend. The Minister of Agriculture can state, and Prof. situmbers can state, that the fertilizers mate in (apeltom hare heen suljece to the sererest possible test on the diovermment firm, and hate proved themselves to be hetter in guality than the fertilizers of either the Cinited states or Gagland. The manufacture of these fertilizers is increasing, the trale is increasing, and the Trade and Navigation Returns pablished liy the diverument show that the want has lneen supplied, otherwise there would 1 ee a larger impurtation. He says they are not exported. I find in the Trale and Navisation Returns of hast year they were exported, amil exprite. to the Cnited States, to the "xtent of four or tive thonsand dollars not much, it is trae, hut it shows they were to he bought, and that their reputation is growing. I merely make these remarks in justice to the late member for Sherbroke, whose promises hate heen amply and fully carried out, and in justice to the imlustry in my own constituency, which I am proul of, and which gives employment to a thonsand men at the present time, and 1 presume that reasom is olmoxions to hom. gentlemen. It always happens if there is any industry in this comntry that furnishes a matket for the poor farmer and employment for labour, it rexes and annoys hon. gentlemen npposite. A thonsand men are heing employed iin this industry in my comstituency: they are leing paid steady and constant wages, and the inlustry is growing. It is employing men here in this Dtawa region, getting out the crude phomphate which is heing shipped to Gapeltom and leing manufitetured. It is giving, prohahly, $12,(\mathrm{NXO}$ cars a year freight to (anadian and Anerican railways; and yet the hon. gentleman has the hardihoon, knowing nothing about the matter, to get up in his place in this House and say that the late member for sherlmowke male promises which have not been carried sut, and that artificial fertilizers are not yet manufactured in (camada.

Mr. MULOC'K. Does the hon. gentleman say that one thousand men are heing employed in his comuty in the mandacture of superphosphates for fertilizing:

Mr. IVEs. I would say a great deal more than that. I undertake to say that this one company, the Nichols Chemical Company, employ a thousand men in rasising the copper ore and reducing it, and getting the sulphur from it, and in manufacturing artiticial manure-not the copper mining, of which this is the principal business, but in their whole husiness, they are now employing and paying over a thousand men.
Mr. LACRIER. In how many counties does this Nichols Company operate?
Mr. IVEs. I say in the one connty of sherbrooke they are employing one thousand men.
Mr. MULOCK. Does the hon. gentleman say that a thousand men are employed in the manufacture of fertilizers: I understand from the quotation I male from Mr. Hall, the late member, that the industry in question is a loy-proluct of the production of copper pyrites.

Mr. Ins.

Mr. SPEAKER. Yon cammot disenss that question now.

Mr. MULOCK. 1 amputing the 1 wom witleman right with his mistakes.

Mr. BOWELLL. I will take the "pportmity of doing precisely what the hon. gentleman has ifule. In his facetions remarks when he rose. he stated that I hal displayed an aggressive chanacter.

Mr. MULOCK. Bellicme.

Mr. Bowthl. Well. hellieose, just as yat please. The motion pertained exclusively the the Trade and Naligation Returns, and :s ex-Minister of Customs. 1 was strictly within my province in giving that information. It is impossible to please hom. gentlemen: when they get infomation they do mo like, then they object ; when they do not get it, then they almine.

Mr. MAC(DONAI.D (Huron). If I umberstaml the question hefore the House, it is not a questiom as to the prosperity of that particular comaty. It is well known that the Nichols Company have been very sulecessful in the development of the particular line of hasiness in which they are engraged. But the question to me is this: Is it rigint to oppose a tax mon the large number of people who consume fertilizers, for the purpose of heneriting and putting large profits into the hands of a few individuals: Mr. Hall, when he was here, told us that the Nichols Company had invested. I think he said. Sl(N),(KNO. Now, umless that they have increasel that investment very much during the last few years, they certainly have not it thonsiand men engaged in this imbustry. I am satisfied now that the hon. gentleman who has last spoken is thoroughly mistaken in regard to the number of men employed in prolucing artiticial fertilizers in his comnty. If it is true. as the Minister of Railways and (anals statend two years ago, that we have every facility in this comitry for prowlucing artificial fertilizers :and sulphuric acin, that we have a greater ahmolance of phosphate of lime than any other comitry in the world, and have greater facilities for pronlucing sulphurie acin than any other comutry in the world, I would ask how many men, in the circumstances, and with these facilities survombling us, can say that there is any necessity of imposing a duty upon the importation of similar articles, thus burdening the people who have to consume them : Hon. gentlemen will say that this is an infant industry. I call to your mind the testimony of the Finance Minister in that discussion twoy years ag", when he said that we were commencing this industry aml it was heing developed. Now, is there anything in regard to the development of artificial fertilizers that reyuires any particular skill that is not to he fonmd in this comotry, or any particular article that we do nint now possess, to the same extent now that we will have twelle years hence: And if we had a protection for this industry four or five years ago and under it this great development has taken place, is it not time now that this infant should le able to waik on its own feet ? When we find every facility existing in this comutry in point of raw material. and every facility for its pronluction, I cammot, for the life of me, understand why an import duty is necesary in order to increase the price to those who are asing that material in their industry. The Minister of Rail-

Ways, in speaking upon this questiontwo years ago, silid:

- In this comintry, strange to say, we have the largest deposit: of phosphate of lime inany part of the world, and that in its purest ant best form. It bas been exported continuously from this comntry to Great Brianin and Germany and other parts."
Now, if we hat this large abombance of phosphates. surely we can finl capital enough to mine them withont allitional protection. But he goes in further and says:
"We have the material for the manufacture of such an article, with the greatest percentage of phosphate of lime lying at our very doors. The other ingredient necessary, of make superphosphate of lime (as is known to every individual who has studied the question) is sulphuric aeid. We were in the habit of importing that and manufacturing it out of the sulphur found in Sicily and in the southern part of Italy. It has been foumb that we have lots of material in our own country-iron pyrites and copper livrites, which contain sulphuric acids-which call be extracted cheaper than hy bringing the sulphuric acid from Sicily to this conutry:
Now, there is a protection, alecording to the state:nent mate by the hom. Dinister himself, which surely ought to be sufficient for our prodncers. The hon. gentleman said that the cost to bring it here womld be equal to that of manufacturing it in this comitry, and therefore, it would not he brought in this comntry and so come into competition with the prolucts manufactured. With our present facilities, it is surely not in accordance with justice tw give $2 \boldsymbol{2}$ per cent of protection to the parties engaged in the husiness. The famers are a rery important body of men, constituting about $\mathbf{b l}$ per cent of onr population, and when they come to Parliament and ask the removal of this duty, the diovermment should listen to that request mande on their behalf. An argument used by the Minister of Finance a few years ago would not hold water, that the Opposition were making a very great noise almat a very small matter. He rleclared that only 오, s(x) hat been paid on duty on agricultural fertilizers. Is that the case: True, the duty is so high mater the present tariff that sulphuric acid is almost prohibited, amd that small quantities of fertilizers are imported. This argument would be stronger still if the duty was increased to such an extent that not one dollar's worth could be imported : indeed, the argument of the Minister of Finance would then he complete, for it could then he salid that the use of the fertilizers did not pay si in duty. But, as has already heen shown, that is not the point. The point is, that manufacturers of fertilizers here, owing to the protection they enjoy, are increasing the prices of their fertilizers to such an extent that the farmers have to pay for them very large prices, irrespective of the small amount of duty that is ammally paid. Under these special circumstances, I helieve it is only right and just that the farmers should receive this small notice and cognizance at the hands of the Government. Another oljection that has been bronght against the arguments alvanced by this side of the House is this, that by giving this protection it would encourage foreign capital to come in for investment in the development of these mines. Does any individual suppose that foreign capital would stay out when all these facilities are offered, when there is an abundance of phosphate mines in the country, and when we are in the very neighbourhood of iron and copper pyrites from which sulphuric acid can be made, and in this way we can manufacture fertilizers cheaper than any other country in the worll: Then, if these fertilizers can be mandactured here at such rates. which I believe to he the truth, why should a duty be imposed in order to prevent articles of the same: character which camot leemanfactured as cheaply ahroal, coming into eompetition: For instance, say that a ton of an artificial fertilizer can he manufactured in this country for soin, amb that a similar article can be manufactured in the Vnited States for $\mathbf{S} 30$. do you stippose that fertilizers costing in the United states sin more per ton would be brought in hereand displace the ('anatian atricle in the (anatian mathet, when theremust be atiteat to the increased cost of manatactare the cost of freight into this comitry: It appears to me that such an argument hats no peint of force in it. If we can manufacture arr article in this comatry cheaper that elsewhere. we require no protection other than the freight necessaly to bing it here. Accordingly, if this protection shombl mot he given it might injure those engaged in that business. but give an opportunity to the farmers of purchasing cheaper that fertilizing material which in very large sections of the comintry they use to a very large extent. Amorher arsument advanced is that the American fortilizers are very inferior, amb our famers are leftambed by the importation of an inferior article. We had a law placed on the statute-hook in 1ssi, which made provision that those articles must be inspected and the band of purity stamped on the barrels containing the fertilizers, and therefore there is a safeguard placed aromit the importation of these articles hy the farmers. If the law is not sutticient. it can be made sufficient by the legislation of Parlianent. Lnoking the whole question orer. I think that the least the (invermment can io in this matter is to remove the luty from fertilizers, and place them on the free list, and I am sure the farmers would rejoice to see this attempt made to meet their requirements. It is well known that the farmers have been compelled to make stremons efforts of late years to make bothends meet. The fertility of the soil is not what it was 10 or 1.5 years ago: the prices of their promlucts are not as high as 10 or 12 years ago, and the fiovermment camot increase the prices receiver hy the farmer, which are govemed ly prices in foreign markets. How can the (iovermment aid the farmer: By placing him in such a position that he may he able to raise his products as cheaply as possible. That result can le obtained in this way: by eatabling him to obtain as cheaply as possible the raw material placed on the soil, in order to enrich it and canse it to bring forth more abundant crops. This is one way in which benetit can be extendeal to the farmer, by giving hini free the raw material used in this way. It is a principle known to the (iovermment, and it has heen carried out largely, that the raw material for manufactures shall be given to the mamufacturers as cheaply as possible. This is proper, right and just ; and why shoull we make fish of one and tlesh of another: If the (iovermment give manufacturers free wool, or free iron and other raw materials, why shouh not the same principle beextended to the farmer, who is as much in need of free raw material, such as free fertilizers, free binding twine, and free corn, and many other articles which he can use advantagenusly? It is nothing but right and just that fertilizers should be placed on the free list, and these advantages extembed the farmers which are extemied to any other class.

Mr. HAliliAR'T. I desite to offer a few remarks in reply to the remarks of the hon. gentleman, whon seems to manifest such an interest in the farming commmaty. He seems to think that this impost is a ilrealful thing for the farmers. Let him look at the Trale amb Navigation Returns for fertilizers, amb he will timd that the total quantity imported into this province was of the valne of si3s.

Mr. MACDONALD (Huron). I answered that argment a few moments ago.

Mr. HAGBiART. That argument was used a few rears ago by the allocates of the policy of the Conservative pirty, which is a revelopment of the manafactures of the comntry. We declared that, of all the countries on the North American continent. Cimada was best suited for the purpose of making artificial manmes; that the articles entering into their composition were fomm in abundance in all sections of the country; that the two articles that principally enter into the composition of superphosphates, phosphate of lime and sulphuric acid, were foumd in such ahmmance here that half a million dollats of phosphates were exported ammally, and a large guantity of iron and copper prites were sent to New Jersey for the purpose of making sulphuric acin. The member for sherbrooke, in the last Parliament, declared that if the principle of protection was applied to that as to other manufactures we would be able to build up in inlustry that would supply our:own farmers with material for fertilizing their soil, and in a few years would furnish them cheaper than it could be imported. What was the statement of the hon. grentleman who spoke a few moments ago, that the effect of our policy was such that at Capelton there hats been established a superphosphate industry which at present was supplying different parts of the community with that important fertilizer, with a hetter artiole and at a cheaper rate than it conlul le lorought in from abroad. From an analysis of fertilizers imported into Ontario and Quebec, the hon, genteman will tind that the superphosphates enter very little into their composition, that it is rather ammonia and other substances. It is well hnown that in the manufacture of fertilizers from bones and hoonl in the United States the principal article is phosphoric acid. There is one mine in my section of the comntry, near Simith's Falls, and another in Capelton, and we are supplying, as fast as the intelligence of the farmers of the country need it. mineral fertilizers for the purpose of improving their farms. As soon ris they have edlucited themselves up to the necessity of using it we are able to supply it in this country. That was the promise marle a few years ago. The hon. gentleman says that the person who first spoke upon the subject is surely intelligent enough to know whether the fertilizer is of sutficient value or not, without inspection ; hat, I believe there is no farmer in the world who can afford the chemical education which is necessary to know whether a fertilizer is of any value or not; whether there is a percentage of one or two per cent more of sulphuric acid or phosphate of lime in it than what is necessary, and which over-percentage may destroy the intermingling of the two acids and, may not set the phosphoric acid free. The ingredients may be there for the purpose of makingan excellent fertilizer, hut the mannfacturing of it may be such that they wonld not le set free and so it would he entirely useless. It repuires the most skilled labour. hecaluse every article of material that enters into the composition of this stuff reguires a chemical analysis to know the proper amount of sulphuric acid necessary to set the phosphoric acid free. It neerls a chemist at every stage of the proceedings to see that the fertilizers are properly mamufactured. I think that the legislation fully justities the statement mate in the House by me when I was acting Minister of Arriculture, that the policy of the diovermant should be to protect that industry in the comntry, one that we have set on foot now, and that we are ahle to furnish a hetter article of this fertilizer at a cheaper price that can le imported into the comitry. Our policy in that respect hats provel a benctit to the farmers of Canadia.

Mr. LAURIER. Mr. Speaker, thisis, in my julsment, a grave and important question, and yet the Govermment are treating it with a levity which is an insult to the common sense of the House. In the first place, I would expect that the Minister of Agriculture world have something to say on this occasion. He should have told us in the first place whether we ought to choose leetween the farmers on the one side or the manufacturers on the other: becanse the question, as it has been placed before the House by the hon. gentleman who hits just sat down, is simply reduced to this: that either the manufactures are to be sacrificel on the farmers have to be sacriticed to the interest of the manufacturers. What is the answer which is matle by the (ioverument in the present instance: It is: Oh, after all, it is not worth making a fuss alwut this duty ; it only amounts to $\mathbf{\Sigma 6}$, (KM) ise half a year.

Mr. BOWVELL. I did not say that. I said that was the total value, but not the duty.

Mr. LAURIER. The total value importel is only $\mathbf{S} 6,(O Q)$ in one half year, or let us saty $\$ 12$ (KM) in a year. Does the hon. gentleman mean to sily, therefore, that this is the whole extent of the tribute which is paid by the farmers: The Minister of Railways has stated that the total value of the duty was something like 8800 ).

Mr. HA(iliAR'T. I said it was sligi in the Province of Ontario.

Mr. LAURIER. Does the hon. gentleman mean to say that this Sl6t is the only tribute paid by the farmers of Ontario for the fertilizers they use? If the only object of the cluty is to raise a revenue, why is it not abolished when the revenue is a mere trifle? It is not abolished simply lecause thereby the farmer is forced to pay a tribute to the mannfacturer for his fertilizers. The farmers of Ontario pay $$ 166$ into the treasury, hut how much do they pay to the manufacture ? That is the question which we have to look into. If the hon. gentleman only derives $$ 166$ in ruty, surely the very first thing he would do would be to take off the duty, because it would not be worth while to maintain it for the sake of the revenue. But there is something leyond that and which we have had explained by the member for Sherbrooke (Mr. Ives). He tells us that there are 1,000 men employed in his county prodacing directly and indirectly sulphuric acid, and it is for the protection of the proprietor of those works that the farmer of Ontario is compelled to pay slifinto the treasury. He is compelled topay that increased price for the benefit of the proprictor of the works at Sherlorooke. That is the summing up of the argument. There is only a smallquantity, it it is true, but the quantity imported does not represent what is consumed. The hom. gentleman knows as well as I do that the quantity which is imported into the Province of Ontario, and upon which sllif duty has been paid, does not in any way represent the fuantity which has heen consumer. There have been large guantities besides that used in the Province of Ontario, and for every pound of that, the farmer of Ontario has had to pay tribute to the manufacturer in Capelton, Quebec. That is the short and long of the argument on this matter. Then, again, we are told by members of the fovernment: Oh, this is anl infant industry. We have lieen accustomed to that. But, when shall this imhustry cease to be an infant: when shall it be a grown up person and be able to stand upon its own legs; when will it he in a position not to need to be propped up by the fiovermment? It scems to me that the statement of the member for sherbrooke (Mr. Ives) ought to show as that by this time at least this infant inlastry might be treated as a grown up person. This infant industry at one time required aid t" ematile it to stand on its legs, hat now it has so iat alvanced that it is not only prolucing Eng the Canadian farmer but for the American market as well. If that infant industry has reached the condition where at the present moment it can not only supply the Camadian farmer hut the American farmer also. and gor into competition with the American commodities, is it not time that we shonld reduce the duty to the same level as the American duty? The rluty should he reduced to the extent that it is reduced in the United States, and the (inadian farmer should lee placed in this matter in exactly the same position as the American firmer. If there is one thing which is more certain than another it is this: That at the present time the condition of the Canadian farmer is a most precarious one, and he has to be helped in every way he can he helped. If there is an opportunity as there is here to relluce to him the cost of this article, which is after all his raw material, there is ample reason that the Govermment should do so.

Motion withdrawn.
It being Six oclock, the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

BINDIN(: TUINE.

Mr. CAMPEELL moved for :
Return showing the quantity of binding twine imported for consumption in the Dominion from the first of July, 1891, up to the first day of January, 1892; the country from which the same was imported, and the amount of duty paid thereon.
He said : In moving for this return, my object is to lay before the House and the country certain facts which will enable it to arrive at a right conclusion as to whether the time has not arrived when the duty on binding twine should be removed altogether. In my opinion, it is a most objectionable duty, as it taxes the raw material which is necessary to enable the farmers of this country to bind their crops. I find, on looking over the Trade and Navigation Returns, that the County of Kent, which I have the honour to represent, is taxed to a very large extent for bincling twine. According to the returns of the Ontario Burean of Statistics, the acreage of the crops that required to be bound in that county for $18(\mu)$, was as follows :-Fall whent, $84,2 \pi 9$ acres : spring wheat, 10 ,243 : harley. $8, i 39$; oats, 3 in, 0 )it ; rye, 1,484: making a total of 103.7 .9 acres in that county alone. Now, we may fairly estimate that three. fourths of that erop, equal to ahout 78,0 M a acres, woulit have to be bomolliv binders. Estimating 2. pomols to the acre, and the difference in price at 3 cents a promed, this is equal to a difference of $7 \frac{1}{2}$ cents an acre, so that the farmers of Kent alone hid to pay the hamlsome little sum of $\mathbf{s i}, 8(4)$ extra on accomit of binding twine. Taking the Province of Ontario ats a whole, the total estimated crop in in the same way that three-fourths of that had to be loond by binders, the result is that the farmers of Ontario have to pay an extra price for their binding twine of over ©on, (hn). Under these circumstances, it seems to me that the fiovernment should have no hesitation at all in removing this duty upon an article of such prime necessity to the great agricultural classes of the comntre, more especially becanse in cloing so they will lose hut comparatively little revenue. Last year the total revenne derived from this duty was only about 8. $6 \times \mathrm{Kn}$, and if by removing that duty they can save to the famers of Ontario alone the enomons s:m of $\leq 2.2,(K K)$ it seems to me that this is a case in which they shoulal take action at once. Now, it has leen satid against removing the duty, that the fammers du not pay it. That argelment was adranced a short time ago in regard to the duty on sugar, hat the event proved that it was not a gool argument. hecause the rery moment the duty on sugar was removed the prise fell to the extent of the duty removed. You remember, also, that for years the Opposition hat been urging the diovernment to reduce the duty on salt, which had enabled the salt manufacturers in the lrovince of Ontario to form themselves into a combination maler the name of the Canada Salt Association, appointing one man to sell the coutput of the wells, ind fixing a scherlule of prices helow which no salt manufacturer was permittell to sell. The Govermment, listening to the remonstrances of the Opposition, and becoming somewhat alarmed at the enormons proportions of this salt combination, wisely, in my opinion, last year reduced the duty on salt by one-half. The very moment the rluties were renduced, down went the price of salt to the amount of that reduction, showing clearly that the duty placed on the article enhanced its price to every one in Ontario who consumed salt. The same rule will follow in regard to binding twine. The moment you remove the luty, that moment the price will go down, and the farmers of Ontario and of the whole Dominion will be able to buy their twine at a much lower price than they do to-day. I think also it is very unfair that the farmers should be treated differently from the fishermen. We know that in the Maritime Provinces the fishermen are allowed to import the twine they use free of duty. For instance, we find that the fishermen imported last year some s424,000 worth of twine free of duty for use in their fisheries. I believe the Government did wisely in allowing the fishermen to buy an article which they absolutely require in the prosecution of their husiness, at the lowest possible prive, ainl in refusing to plate a burien on those people, whose lot we all know is hatd enough.- "Buat why should they not treat in the same way the farmers of Canala, who are prosecuting their bosiness moder a great many difticulties? 1 say it is unfair to discriminate against the agricultural classes in this way. Another adrantage which the fishermen hare ower the farmers is that they are allowed to inloort all the salt they repuire free. Last year their imports of salt. ©n which they paid ne duty at all. amounted to 51.00 (KW), while the farmers of Ontarion are tasen bat cents a barrel on all the salt ther use. which enables the salt manufacturers in Cabiala to increase the price just to that amoment. Now, I saly we shatuld have one law for all, and wo farours for any. No denami has ever come hefore the Parliament of Comana which hats received such support from: the people of Ganala ats that for the almilition of the duty on binding twine. Vom will remember the emorinns petition sent from eno.(nn) farmers of the Province of Ontario which was presented last year by the hom. member for West Litmbtom (Mr. Lister), payying that the (avermmemt wombl remove the duty on this atticle: and this session other petitions have fowed in, scarcely a day passing without some hom member on cither side presenting one or more to the same effect. Sinty it is the luty of the Government to take mote of these petitions, which show the extent to which the people are interested in the subject, and desire relief from this imposition. The hom. junior memleer for Halifax (Mt. Stails), who I helieve is the presilent of a great cordage eombination, stated last year hat bincting twine was sold as cheaply in Canalla as it was in the United states. This statement was clearly shown to be incorrect, and it was clearly shown, from samples and from prices quoted here last year, that the difference wats from o! to 3 cents a permil. It was shown that, when you took a pound of linding twine and measured it, you foum that the American article. being so mueh honger than the Ganadian, it mate ath averaye of 2 to 3 pomads cheaper tham Camadian twine. The hom. juaior member for Halifax argued that Camalian twine was sold as cheap as Ameriean twine. If so, what necessity is there for the tax. Why put e.5 per cent on this article if it cen he manofactured as cheaply in Canala as elsewhere: There is io possilhe reason why we should not manufacture twine just an cheap) in (anada as it can be in any other country, and when we find that a combine has existeal for many years, which takes andantage of the full amount of the tariff, it is the lunuden laty of the (iovermment to step in and relieve the people of this commtry of the enormous luty they have to pay. Fou will remember it has always heen asserted that the people of Cunada do not pay the duties upon these things. That has been statel with regard to sugar and salt, hut the Finamee Minister, a few years ago, when he increased the duties on pork, said that while it would enhance the value to the lumbermen of this Dominion yet he intended to give compensation to the Maritime Provinces ly taking the luty off molasses and com meal as human food, thus showing clearly that he believel the taking thesse duties off would inmediately lower prices and benefit the consumers. I think that, considering the guestion in all its bearings, considering the enor-mons quantity of hinding twine consumed every year in the lominion, and which must lie used if we properly secure the erops, and also recollecting that. cowing to the combine and the: duty upon this article, the price has been atvancerl to the extelnt I have alreanly stated. ami the hariens of the people of Ontario and the Dominion generally increased to such a large anomot. I su think it is time the (iovernment stepped in and relieved the farmers of this enomons lmorlen, more copeocially. when they can do it without loss to the revenue. It the: whole revenue went to the states we might un. derstand the (iovermment hesitating hefore deriolings that they could do without a revenue raised from that smiree, but when we finil that the revenue. amomated only last year to the small sum of EtionNo. ant that hy throwing off the Sid.(nN) we ean relieve the fintmers of a burden of Ef(no, onk erery year, it is the boumlen claty of the dionermment io relieve them of that humen. When this return. which I have moved for comes down. it will give us an inlea of the exact quantity imported since the 30th of Tune, ISO1, and enalle as to decide whether it is not time the (iovermment shomhlstep in and relieve. the peaple of this enormons tan.

Mr. W. ATNON. I hate much pleasure in secomiing this resolution. I think that now is the most opportme time for disenssing the yuestion, as we happen to have two resolutions on the Notice Paper asking the remoral of the duty on himlin: twine. This matter was discussed at length during the last two sessions, amol agreat deal of what wats said then must be fresh in the memory of the Honse to-tay. There can be mo douht mow, if therewas donat a year or two ago, that the time hats arrived when the Giovermment shonh relieve the farmers from this tax from which they arive littleor no revente. and whichis simply imposed for the purpose of henctiting alarge combine now exating an enomons sum from the farmers ereh vear anil giving no value in return. To show that I consider the time hats arrivel, I take the liberty to quote from a speech delivered in this Honse a year agn hy the Minister of Militia, then Minister of Customs. The hon. gentleman then stid :
"The Government are always alive to that which they believe to be in the interests of the consumer as well at: the manufacturer. Whenever they found that the salt industry was controlled to such an extent as to become at all burdensome to the people, they took the first opportunity to reduce the duty. And if it be true that the American eombination for the manufacture of twine has, or is about to secure all the cordage factories in this country and keep up the price, then it will be the duty of the Gorernment to see how far they will go in regulating it. in order to prevent the enlossal fortunes to which hom. gentlemen have referred being made by the manufacturers."
Now I think there is no doubt in the minds of the people of Cinada that a combination hats been formed of the American and Canadian twine ermpanies, and there is no doubt in my mind that they are exacting an enormous stin annually from our farmers, through the protection we give them. Our tariff of 25 per cent means, aceording to the revenue received last year, about $3 \%$ cents per pound I take it for granted that , in of a cent per pound will keep out the Americun article. If such he the case, our manufacturers in Canada will exact every cent they can from the farmers and charge 3 cents more per pound than they ought to. As evidence that a combine has lween formed hy the Nitional Cordage Company and that they have purchaser the corlage factories in Canala, 1 time that the binstion Imily/ Allo eristr, in the course of a fatronalle notice of the National Corlage (ompanys atficirs, says:
$\because$ The company actually has purchased ail the corlage mills in Canda, and the coritage businese of the Dominion Gi Comada is protected by at, tariff wall which enables the hutiness to wurk at a profit."
That shows clearly that the American newsipipers feel that if the Nitional Corlatge (ompany purchase the corrlage factories of (iatanla they will he alle, on abcomot of our sluty, to charge a higher price tham they otherwise coula. We have further evilence that the duty does raise the price on bind. ing twinc. I will guote from the evidence given by Mr. Massey hefore the Combines Committee in this Homse, sime three ferts :go. Mr. Bain, the member for Yent worth, asked him what was the actuai cost, including the duty, of the American article, and Mr. Massey saly:
$\because$ We han to import a large quantit: for the NorthWest lat year. We could not get it in Canada. We lian it down in Manitobat at about the price which we had io bay in Xew Xork, and dinty sudded. It cost us about the duy extri.," Niw. I do not think that any doult can exist in the minls of the members of this House. after reaning the evidence of Mr. Massey, and other evilence which wasproducednefore that commitue. that twine is solh in ('analat at just the duty higher than it is sold in the United states. During the last sessiom I took the troulde to lay hefore this Honse a mamber of samples of twinc. giving the aterage erost in the United states and the arerage cont in ('inhalla, and I proved, I think, successfully -at least I wats mot suceessfully comtralicted-..that my contention at that time was right. We fime that in Maniona this duty is a very heavy tax on the pouple: It is not the same as a daty paid om a himber or a phough, but it is an ammal tas, it has to the lurue hy the people every year their harvest comes remul. I hate marle an estimate of the total quanty of twine nsed in (anablaterery yeat, amd the amome that was used to hine last year's crop. amblallowing that one-fourth of the grain in Cumala was cut he a reaper, and hound otherwise than with binding twine, I fime that hast year it repuired Cupp of Camala. At 3 cents a pouml. that means at mant $8 . \pi n$, , (n) that is exacted from the farmers of (:amalia ly this ohnoximes tariff. I may sty, as I come fromi Manitola, that the people of that prorince and of the North-West suffermore. proportionately, than the people of any other portion of the Dosminion, inasmuch as per copita they are tased in this respect much hearier than the eastern farmer. In the west, when a farmer has 1 till to 2 , (KX) acres of a crop, it hecomes an enomous tax upon him to pay ammatly for his binding twine manufactured in Camala. 3 cents a pomen more than he should pay. Last year we had $1,3(1),(10 N)$ acres of grain cut anil hound with it binder, and if we estimate three poumils of twine per acre it means $3,(4 x),($ (NO 1 poumls of binding twine, and the 3 cents a pomad extra upon the cost of that trine, means an alditional tax upon the farmers of Manitobat of $\$ 110,0(0)$. In the North-West Territories they are affected the same as we are in Manitoha and thronghont the rest of the Dominion, but as I said, they pay, per. capita, a heavier tax than the people in the eastern part of Canala, becuuse their crops are larger per capita. In the North-West Territories last year over $3(n) .(x)$ ances of crop were che ly the hinder. and estimating that three pounds of twine ate repuired per acre, they use ! ma, (ии) pounts. which means, it 3 cents a pume extrat. $\$ 2$, , (xn) that the fimmers of the North-West Territories had to pay for their himling twine in excess of what they ought to pay hy reasion of this tariff. In Manitona anit the Nouth West Territories the people paid $\leqslant 14$. 1 ni more than they shomh have paid for their twine to hind the last years erop with. Now. ats has heen pointed out hy the hon. member for Kent (Mr. (ianhmell), it has loeen contemied hy hom. fent lemen opposite, who are andocates of protection, that the sugar duties would not affect the price of sugar: hit we know that last year when they mate a renluction of the haty of stigar, the price of that artiele fell immediately. as every comsmer in Conala kows well. The same with salt. When the duties were redued, the price of salt inmerediately fell. Sow when we emvider that this commons tax of some stom, (ann) is levied on the farmers of (:anadia for the satie of this sibions) odd of reveme, 1 say it is time that the dovernment shomil remene this sluty on bint. ing twine Last veat we hat an explanation from the member for Halifix (intr. Stairs) whe. I Believe. is latuely interested in binding twine, and that lom. gentemancomblant suce essfully contraliet the statements made in this Honse. He elaineal that his comdage factony in Hallifac was free and indepentent of the American cordage factories: lat it is muw a matter of public notoriety that the National Cordage Company has control if the Comanlian Corrlage Factore and lay this tax loeing set off ats a litile preserve for the :amome of twine manufactured in (canalia. they are able to charge that excessive price. This seat. in last year. I have receivel tigures from the Western States, and comparing them with the prices in Canala. I tind that this year, ats hast rear. the difference in price is ildent the same. I think there can be no fonat in the minds of any hom. member in this Honse, who carefully lowksinto this mater. that we are compelled to pay that extra price for liminge twine. I do not whiect. Mr. Speaker. to the fishermen receiving free the twine they use in their industry, I do mit objeet th that at all : but I say this. that the farmers of Camala have as moch right to receive free the hinding twine that they refuire to bind their crops, as the tishermen have to receive their twine free. Now, as to how the combines work. I find in looking over the report of the Journals of the Honse of 1858 , on page th3, that Mr. Alexamder IV. Morris, of Montreal, manufacturer, gives evidence as to how a combination was formed in Canala, and as to what their operations were. He was being examined liy Mr. dillmor:
"Q. Mr. Connors is in your combination" A. He was in, but there is no combination now. in, but there is no combination now.

- Q. How many were there in the combination? A. Five.
"(2. You would proportion out what each one should make! A. Yes; we each had a stated percentage.
"Q. What proportion of all the quantity that was to be made for Canada did he make? A. On binder twine last year he had a percentage, I think, 10 per cent of the whole. And I think he manufactured about two tons of twine.
"Q. How much did you get last year out of the prool, as you call it, as near as yon can tell? A. I think about $\$ 3,000$ or $; \mathbf{i}, 000$. Perhaps as much as that ; it might be 35000 .
Q. For not making rome? A. No; not making binder twine."

Acombing this evidence there was one factory receiving si, (xn) simply because they ceased making linding twinc. Now, this evidence must be conclusive, as it was given on oath ly a man who knew what he wats talking almout. Last year I gave the values of twine in Canalia and the Cnited States, of varimes grales, and I find there has been little or no change since. There is plenty of evilence to show that on other articles as well as on binding twine, the people of canalia are minastly taxed on account of these combinations being formed. We know, howerer. that the farmers of canala are wakingup to see the manner in which they are heing hedfor the benefit of a few mandacturersof hinding lwine. We timi that Famers Institutes and the Patrons of Industry all orer Canala are sending in petitions to the Honse of Commmen, asking that the duty on binding twine should he removed. When a person figures up the amome that is amnally paid on binding twine hy this extrat cont of ! cents an atre, it is sasy to see how it reduces the value and the protits of a man's farm considerably. I think this is an opportune time to discuss this question lefore the House resolves itself into, Committee of Waysand Means, and I hope the Gonermment will see fit to relieve the farmers of this unnecessary tax, a tax that simply woes into the pockets of the mamufacturers. Lant year the dowernment receivel a revenne on this iuticle of omly siol!re. The total imports last year were leni, 3 si pounds, of the value of $\mathrm{s} 24,696$. The revenue of $\$ 6,192$ went into the pockets of the diovermment treasury, while the value of the twine imported alugether was $\mathbf{S t 2 4},(\mathrm{nW})$. If the dovernment can relieve the farmers of that tax they will be moving in the right direction. If the money were going into our own treasury it would le a different thins, hut at present it is a system of legalized robbery. The anount of $\mathbf{S} 424$. (x) is exacted from the farmers of Canala, while only $8 \mathbf{8}, 192$ is collectel for our reveme : consequently. I say it is only legalizen rohbery, ami I hope the Govermment will give its attention to this matter at the earliest possible opportunity, and will not allow these men to steal this large amount of $\$ 400$, OXA a a year from our farmers. I hope they will see that the duty is removerl from binding twine.

Mr. MasllleaN (Hurm). I find that there is a talk of the cordage companies raising the price of binding twine from 3 to 4 cents a pound. The Chic:ars, Cancelian-American has the following:-

foreign combine is got up for a purpose of skiming the farmers of Canada, it is time that the dovernment took up the !uestion. The only means we have of getting yuit of this matter of having a large amount of money taken out of our pockets for the benefit of foreign companies is to tike the duty of binding twine. Allow that to come into Canada free of duty, and that will beak up the whole comlimation. We have heare a great deal ahnot loyalty, aloout attending to British interests and Canalian interests. but will the (iovernment show their loyalty here where only $\mathbb{S}(6,1$ (M) are zaken for the benefit of the treasury, while the manufiaturers make a protit of some $S\left(\begin{array}{ll}(1),(N A)\end{array}\right.$ : Will they allow the manufacturers to sem in their binding twine free: It is their duty to sive us some reilress, hecanse, if the American cordage companies hare decided to increate the price of twine three or form cents, we will hate to pay the luty and the increase in the price also, and that will be letween Si(x),onh and Sish, (\%) which will he extracted each year from the prekets of the farmers of (imalia in that article alone. We know that in many cases the raw material comes in free of duty. The furniture mandactures are allowed to import their lumber free to the extent reduces the value of hindes to the farmers in this comery. Then, wowl is imported free to the extent of $s$, , 3 ins. 746 for the henefit of the namufacturers of wowllen gennls. and there, again, the farners of this comutry suffer, as our wool is displated w that extent, and we lose 12 cents a pound in the a year. It is certainly the duty of the dovernment to give us this small means of reelress, especially when it is a foreign company into whose porkets this money is goint, and if the dowernment and those behind them are true to their idea of boyalty, surely they will give us this concession ats a means of reilress.

Mr. DATIN. I need hardly say that I do not subscribe to all the propositions laid down by the hom. gentlemen who have preceded me. I venture to say that I have been a protectionist as long as any other man in this Honse. I know that I advocated protection before it was taken up by any party in Camada.

Mr. MILLS' (Bothwell). The Minister of Customs will dispute that proposit:on.

Mr. DAVIN. I did not hear what my hon. frieme the philosopher from Bothwell said. If he would speak up, we might hear him. In regard to binding twine, where you have a combine and where competition has ceased to exist, it is contrary to the therry of scientitic protection to give any protection to that industry, and on general principles, therefore, I hope the Government will consider the suggestions which have been thrown out and will either reduce or take away entirely the duty on binding twine. In the North-West, in the constituency whence I come, and in other constituencies, agricultural constituencies, a great interest is taken in this question, and at one of the last meetings held inmy constituency before I came away, at a very large and crowded meeting, I was asked what I thought of the duty on binding twine, and I had no difficulty whatever in complying with their unanimous request that in Parliameut I would express the opinion that I expressed to them there. Whether or not the taking off the duty on binding twine would reluce the price to the farmer, the very fact that the manufacturers have gone into ia combine or those who have not have given orer or have soll their interest to a combine, is quite sufficient reason for a (iovermment plerlgel to protection to at once take the alarm and deprive that combine of all aid. The argument is used that there would be no use in taking off the duty on binding twine, because the com. bine is not merely a Canalian combine but an international combine, a combine that has its grasp not merely on Canarla, but also on the United states. It is further said that no hope can come from Eneland, because binding twine is not monufactured there cheap enough. cirant all this, we have the history of tariff legislation in the United States before us, and from the history of protection in the United states and from the nature of the case we know this, that a comntry which alopts the true policy, as I believe protection is for a young comitry like Camala or for a comitry like the United States especially in its past history, the fiovermment have to he perpetually on the watch or else the beneficent principles of protection will be used agrinst the interests of the people. The very nature of the case will suggest what has a atually often taken place. What takes place is this: that where a fiovermment places on any article it sutficient protection, further pressure is put on it to increase that protection, and mass it is always on the qui rive it may actually in its desire for the development of the industries of the country enter upon a course directly contrary to the principle that is at the hase of its protective policy. I think it is on the face of it, at all events, probable, that the price of binding twine will be rerluced if the duty is taken off. I say that is probable. I donbt rery much if it would he as much reduced as the hom. gentleman for Marguette says: but I again say that, in order to arrive at it decision, I do not care one fig whether it would he reduced or not, for in principle the very minute you are face to face with a combine, a fovermment pledged to a protective policy is bound to act against that combine. It was successful in regard to salt and although it is said it will not be saccessful in this case, becamse we have an international combine, it is worth trying whether it will be successful or not. Let me point out that what we have at present is this: You have got a combine in Canada controlling a small area comparatively, helged in by a protective wall. Then you have got a large area in which you have also a combine. The combine in the large area is associated with the combine in the small area. What I say is this, that if you throw down that wall, so far as the small area is concerned you increase the chance of competition arising against the combine to the extent of the added area. I deal with general principles because my hon. friends have sufficiently gone into figures in regard to the matter. It inay be said, too, in fact in conversation it has been said to me : Why, in Ontario, when we were discussing this matter, the farmers did not care one pin abont the binding twine. I graut you that may be so. What that shows is this, that the farmers of Ontario have such a clear perception and such a strong grasp of the fact that this National Policy as a whole is beneficent in its operations in this country, they were actually ready to accept that one item against themselves because of the great alvantage they have gained from that policy. The farmers in the North West will make a similar statement. They say, which is a fact : We do not get any alvantage from the National Poliey, but we are not merely ㅇorth. West men, we are Camadians before we are North-West men; therefore we will support this Nitional Policy which is for the general development of the comutry and for Cimada $s$ welfate. And so these Ontario farmers may have felt. But that is no argument to a (iorermment that wishes to deal scientitically with the application of protection to the nation it governs, because they lay down the genemal principle that the very minute in any inlustry a combine derelops, that minute the $i$ iovermment is hound to act. I will growther. I will say this, that if the combine takes such an ohmoxious form ats this combine has taken, international in its character, hamassing not merely a great colomy of $\operatorname{i}$ (HK), (NK $)$, but darken ing (it), (HN), (KN) of people with its malign scheme, I say-I do not aloneate that now--that circumstances might arise when a fiovernment might not merely consider the wishom of removing the duty, but of giving a homs for a certain perion to any two men who would go into the same industry to break up the combine, becalnse, as a protectionist. I say this, there is nothing so, woly protective in its chatacter as this principle, that a fiovemment pledged to protection is hommi to atot against comhinations.

Mr. MACDONALI) (Haron). I was somewhat surprised at the statement male ly the hon. member for Assiniboia (Mr. Datin) that the Niational Policy has benetited the fammers of this country. When I have discussed this guestion on the public platform, I have usually put this guestion: I ask any farmer present, Conservative or Reformer, ow mention where the National Policy has ever put one dollar into his pocket directly or indirectly. During the discussions at many meetings, only at one meeting did a man at the door, ileclave his ability to do so, and he happened to be drunk. I would ask the hon. gentleman if he can point out any particular way in which the farmers are benetited as regards prices, crops or in other direction by the National Policy, and which they wond not have obtained otherwise? Can the hon. gentleman point to any article that is cheaper by the National Policy?
Mr. DAVIN. Yes. Lots.
Mr. MACDONALD (Huron). Does the hon. gentleman know that by his own admission a tariff of protection increases the value of the articles manufactured in the country, and the hon. gentleman knows that during his speech he made that statement.

Mr. DAVIN. No, no.
Mr. MACDONALD (Huron). The hon. gentleman stated in regard to salt, which we manufacture in this country, and for which we have the raw material, that when the tariff was lowered on salt last year the price fell 25 cents per barrel. I might mention also that when the duties on sugar were removed last year, the Minister of Finance said that taxes to the amount of $$ 3,500,000$ were removed. This amount was placed on the shoulders of the people, and if the farmers compose 60 per cent of the population, I ask any man

Let me a-k the bancmatnt why for they allow twine to emme in free wo the bistern Provinces for the nse of the tishemen. The tishomen ate poor, they have at hard life and make very little in the endi and the Govermonat hate ackinowlenged the fact, that if they would alow twine to eome in free the fisherment would obtain it cheaper than if there were a duty imposed upen it. Consequently the diovernment have allowed the fishemen to get in st(N).mn) of twine free of duty. That is also an acknowlengment on the pat of the (iovermment that every article they adnitityee of duty, is cheaper than if it duty were inaposeil. That being the principle in the Wastern Provinces, foes it not enfally apply to the fanmens of Ontario in regard to twine and fentihizers and every otlici article they use: When we

At $6 \frac{1}{2}$ cents per acre, the increaseal price which the operation of the tariff imposed on the people of Ontario amomited to $s=2.5,5 i n$. The total increased price which the farmers of Manitoha and Ontario together had to pay was $\mathrm{S} 323,3$, (K) . Now, if we estimate that all the other Eastern Provinces together would use as much as the Province of Ontario. there would be a tocal of $13, \overline{\mathrm{I}} \mathrm{si},(\mathrm{KO})$ pounds of twine used for hime ing the crops of the Dominion in 1890, which. at 3 cents a pound alditional, meant that $\$ 413,550$ was taken out of the pockets of the farmer, not in Customs taxes, but by the increased price they had to pay to the combined n:anufacturers of twine on account of the protective duty imposed liy the Govermment. In view of these facts, I hope that the Government will look at this matter from a farmer's staudpoint. The Conservative party in this House know that they have not the confidence of the farmers of this country.
Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear. Say that again.
Mr. MACDONALD (Hurou). The Conservatives of this House, Mr. Speaker, know very well that they have not the continlence of the farmers of this comiry. If the votes of the farmers of this conntry were comated to-morrow, I ann satistied that the members of the Lileral party who are sitting here would be foum to have received three-fifths of them. Sir. look at the members on your right, and you will find that the largest mat jorities given to them have been from towns and cities, and in the last general election we hat it popular majority in Cntario of $10,0 \mathrm{CM}$ ).

Mr. FAIRBAIRN. How many farmers on your side of the Honse have spoken of binding twine?

Mr. MACDONALD (Hurm). The hom. gentle. man knows very well that he could not gio into South Victoria iun! tell the farmers there that he is opposisel to the remaral of the duty on binding twine. He knows very well that the Patems of Imlustry thromghout the comery. irrespective of their political leanings. have in large numbers petitioned this Honse for the removal of this duty. The hom. gentlenam whin is comtinnally molesting me, knows well also that the Firmers hustitutes of Ontario, the must respertathe and intelligent henly in the whole emmers, irrespective of party politices: have expresed themselves in fatour of the remenal of this duty.
Mr. FARbalRN. Althuegh I han to eontemd with this guestion, 1 inereased my majority $\because$ On.

Mr. MACDONALD (Hurou). The hent sentleman knows that if he consulted the interests of the farmers. he would fatome removing this burten of $s^{2}+0 .(6 \times)$ from their shoulders, insteal of keeping it for the sake of the siow $\mathbf{8}$ (0) revenue obtained from it.

Mr. FER(iUNON (Leeds). Bash.
Mr. Ma(donall) (Hurm). Why, we hate the figures here to prove that this is the case. Let these hon. gentlemen dare to go among the farmers of the comitry and speak against the removal of this duty, and they will timi that the intelligent farmers will not justif, their action here, but will hohd them responsible, and seml them abont their business at the next general election. Sow, 1 am going to conclute by expressing the hope that the hon, member for Leeds and Grenville (Mr. Ferguson) will rise now and give us some of his elopuence on this sulject. He is a goon interrupter. I do not know whether he is a goon orator or not. but I hope we shall hear now the reasons for his opmsition to us on this subject. I hope the Covernment will take this matter into their consideration and give the farmers relief from this taxation. Do not make them the leasts of burlen, hewers of wood anl drawers of water, as they have heen for many years; but give them an opportunity to make a living it: this country, lest more of them leave and so to the United States. I hope also that the junior member for Halifax, who represents the corlage combination in this country, will now give his views of the matter, and show if he can that it is the interest of the farmers to continue the duty on binding twine.
Mr. MULOCK. Mr. Speaker, I think it is to le regretted that we have not had any expression of opinion from the Treasury benches on this important question. It received somezoonsideration a year ago, and the House then by a limited majority voted down the propesition to put binding twine on the free list. I am not aware that the position of the trade of manufacturing the article in question has materially changed since then. At that time, asto-day, the National Cordage Company of the Uniterl states had captured the trade both in Canalia and the United States. At that time, as today, the farmers of this comentry, in respect of this article, were entirely at the mercy of a corporation, and it happens a corporation of foreign origin, which had succeeded in gathering into its fold all the fiectories of Camala. It was so stated on the floor of Parliament last session, and if any doubt exists upon the subject, all one hats to do is to read as I hate real the last ammal report of the National Cordage Conpany of the United States, and there he will tind the statement that the company has succeeled in capturing, I forget the exact mumler, but all the manufactories of Canala. enmmerating them. Therefore, the position of the farmers of Camala to-day in respect of this article is simply this: that they have to pay whatwer price is exacted from them; they are not free men : and we are told that while we must protect other people, while we must consider the interests of those outside of the country, while we must carry on business in Canada, so ats not to interfere with the trable of England, yet we are disregarding the interests of four-fifths of the people of Cimalia. I congratulate my hom. friend from West Assimiboia (Mr. Davin) on his partial comsersion to somm principles. It has happened that since he left this House last summer, he has received a mamiate from his constituents. The last message he got from them lefore lea ving for (Otta wa was that he must improve his methods in the House-that it would not do to go it blimd as he had done in the past with regard to the National Policy all through. Then he proceeded to congratulate the farmers of Ontario on their intelligence in seeing the matter differently from his constituents. The farmers of Ontario were so intelligent and had such a clear grasp of the National Policy in all its bearings, that they would not allow one single item in it to be interfered with-not they. But at the same time his intelligent constituents in the North-West hat told him that the duty on hinding twine had to be removed, and so he has come down here able to please both. In other words, he tells the Govemment that they should not remove the duty, at the same time he syuares himself with the farmers of West Assinihoia by saying that he has a mandate from them which he must obey. He lays down the proposition that wherever a combination exists the Government should step in and destroy the combination by removing the protection. Well, Sir, I will accept his doctrine, and if the Government accepts it, what becomes of the National Policy? It was only a few days ago that I read in the papers of Canada-and undoubtedly it is a fact, because it appeared not in Conservative papers alone, but pretty generally-that the cotton lords had captured the trade of Canada, and that all the cotton mills of Canada had now been scooped in one combine just as my hon. friend, the junior member for Halifax, controls the cordage industry for Canada. What is to become, if this doctrine of combines is to obtain, of the cotton manufacture? Now, if the consumer buys cotton he has either to pay the price of the seller or go without his cotton, or with a little shorter quantity. What is to become of your oil industry? The oil men have combined, and you cannot buy oil at competition prices. What has the hom. member for East Lambton to say to this docitrine of the member for West Assinibosia. The oil trademust goaceorlingtethis doutrine" What about the sugar trade? The sugar men have combined, and the vendors of sugar have got their prices. What is to become of the glass industry? It is only a short time ago since the manufacturers of glass combined, and it was only the lith of Jannary last that the manufacturers of nails combined again, and issued an order to buyers of nails, that on and after the linth of January last they would have to pay half a cent a pound more for three inch nails and a small increase in proportion on otherkinds. What will hecome of all the great industries, the iron, sugar, the cotton? If this doctrine is to oltain they must all go ly the boatal. If the Govermment alopt the recommentation of the l:om. member for West Assiniboia, if they desire consistency, which of course they do, they will apply this iloctrine in a general way. As to this particular subject under disenssion, I last year presented a case, I will admit imperfectly, but still as well as I kuew how. I was able to tell the Government that, on the most molem calculation, taking the ofticial returns as my hasis, the farmers of Cork County paid at least S10,(HM) extra for binding twine used last year. I wonder that some memiler of the covermment has not got up before this and read the Trate and Navigation Returns, and told us that as the only anome collected last year for twine was $\mathbf{8 i}$,(KN), the whole amount paid by the farmers, by reason of the maintenance of the tax, was $\mathbf{s i}$, (YN), just as the hom. Minis. ter of Railways told us before dimer that sitid; represented all the tax on the farmers of Canada for fertilizers. He was not giving the Honse credit for common intelligence in making that observation, otherwise we would have members of the Government on this question also setting forth as excuse for the maintenance of this tas that it was an infinitesimal one. But this tax does not go to the Government. You have legalized the jumior member for Halifax as a trustee for the cordage combines of Canada. lou have authorived him to collect, in the name of the cordage companies, eis per cent from every farmer in Canada for every pound of twine he uses, and to put that extra $2 \overline{5}$ per cent into his treasury to be distributed amongst the interested parties in that combine. That is the system you have estal, lished. There is a tax collector sitting in this House by the authority of the Government. There is an Act of Prarliament enabling him to collect taxes and not apply them to the public good. That is the position of the trade, and I record my protest here, as I have done elsewhere, against this. system, and as long as we have free institutions, as long as the people have a right to he heard, they have the right to have their voice listened to, and, if their canse is just, to have their grievances redressed. Last session the people presented their humble petitions to Parliament asking to have this evil redressed. It was not: and the consequence was a quarter of a million dollars, at the lowest calculation, was taken out of the pockets of the farmers and placed in the pockets of the combine I have referred to for one year's operations, and we are now to enter on another year's. Is this to continue another year? I think it is due to the House and the country that some utterance should be given by the Govermment on this guestion. They may not give it hecause the appeal is from this side of the House; but if they listen to the appeal from their own supporters, who have given an unwilling support to the measure, they will, at this late hour, recele from the false position in which they have placed themselves-it is never too late to reform-and place on the free list this article most necessary for the proper carrying on of a great industry, and specially entitled to be placed at the least cost in the reach of consumers. Pefore sitting down, I will make another statement, and I will ask the junior member for Halifax to correct me if in error. I am toll that cordage is now being manufactured and exported at a cent and a half per pound less than it is sold to consumers in Camada. Is that correct? Ihave received that information from Halifas. from the constituency the hon. gentlenan represents. If it is true that cordage can be mannfactured in Canada, and exported and sold at a cent and a half a pound or thereabouts less than it is sold to the people of Canada, what tale does that tell?

Mr. STAIRs. I have no oljection to answering the hon. genteman. The case, as he has put it, is not correct. I do not deny that corrlage has heen sold at a lower price for export, but that the same quality of cordage is sold is not correct.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I hat a letter from a Halifax merchant myself in the present month, in which he said he hanl given orlers for manilla rope, and they were quoted for home comsumption, il cents, and for export, $9 \frac{1}{2}$ cents.
Mr. STAIRs. The hon. gentleman would not value his own advice as a lawyer at the same rate as lie would the advice of others, nor, Mr. Speaker, would I. I would ask him to apply the same principle to different articles of manufacture.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Do you deny that they are the same quality"
Mr. STAIRs. Certainly.
Mr. DAVIES (P.F.I.) My information is that they are.
Mr. SEMPLE. If it appears to be proved from the manufacturers standpoint that the farmers have no more to pay on account of the duty, and if it can also be made to appear that the duty is of no conseqnence to the manufacturers, then why not aulopt so reasonable a proposition as to take off this duty on binding twine? The farmers as a lody have petitioned for it, and it is not a party question. The Farmers' Institute, the Patrons of Industry and the (irangers, all of whom are nonpolitical bolies, have discussed this matter on every available occasion, and have petitioned that this duty should be taken off: The organizations of the farmers are unanimous in making this small request that the duty shall be taken off binder twine. It appears, also, from the small amount of duty received by the Government that this is not of much importance to them, the amount being only $$ 6,192$. The only reasonable conclusion is that it is the manufacturers who receive the bencfit, and that the farmers must pay tens of thousands of dollars in order that the manufacturers may receive that adrantage. It is the old story of the few enriched at the expense of the many. In fact, in many pirts of the country on small farms, the farmers consiler the cost of binding twine so excessive that they consider it to be as profitable to hind their grain by hand as to bind with binding twine. It has been very well put by the hon. gentleman who preceded me and who showed clearly that one-fourth of the amount paid by a farme: for binding twine goes into the pockets of the manufacturers. If any pare of the community requires some consideration, I think it is the farmers. The capital invested in that so that, with so large an amount of capital investen, there should le some consideration given to the farmers on a duestion in regard to which they are unamimous. They are different from the manfacturers. If the nanufacturers are not prosperous or realizing ass much as they would like, they come before the House and generally get what they want in order to please them up to their heart's desire. I think, when all the farmers are unanimous in asking for the small matter of justice involved in this matter, they should reveive it. I sitw a statement in a newspaper that it was the intention of the foremment to take this duty oft. They have had the friemlly adrice to-night of a supporter of their own, and they have hard the friemilly adrice of a number of members of the Opposition who have stated what is right aml just: and, when the tariff duties come down, I hope a vote will be taken am that we will know how many of the gentlemen in this House who owe their seats to the farmers will rote against doing the farmers this simple act of justice. It is true that the farmers have a great amount of forbearance and forgive many their transgressions, but I do not think they will always do this. Some people appeal to the prejudices of the farmers, and interested persons have tried to throw dust into their eyes so as to make an issue different from the correct one, but this is doing an injustice to a large number of the people. I didn not intend to speak on this subject, but, as I represent an abricultural community which have held a large number of meetings, all of which have been manimous-mo matter what shade of politics they belong to-in the opinion that this should be done. While beliering an act of justice will henefit and please the farmers and will be a decided move in the proper direction, I desire to express my opinion that this duty should be removed.

Mr. GILLMOR. This has been quite an interesting discussion. My hon. friend from Assiniboia (Mr. Davin) is and always has been a protectionist, but he is opposed to combines. We may have combines withont protection, but we are likely to have a great many more with protection. As to the anxiety of my hon. friends on this side of the House about the farmers, who compose 60 per cent of the people of Canada, I think we need not tronble ourselves very much about it. If the farmers want the duty taken off binding twine, they can have that done at the polls. They can get it if they want it, but they do not want it. They like being skimed. They are like eels; they have been used to being skimned and they rather like it. There is one man only from Manitoba and the North-West opposed to this Government-I think he is a free trader-there are not very many free traders in the House any way, but I think this is one of them-this one has made a great hullabaloo about binding twine.

If the farmers want the duty on binding tivine taken off, they can get it taken off. The bye elections do not inslicate that the farmers do not want protection. I would give them protection until they got sick of it. There is no donbt that this is a most infamons combination, and I should think the fiovermment would look to it. The object of protection is to start new industries and to give work to our own perple. What is the effee of the combination in St. John: There was a cordage factory there whichemployed 30 or 40 or 50 men, but now it is closed ; it is sold out ; not a man gets any employment there. This American combine has bought it up, and so it has the Halifax factory, but 1 believe they are still rumning there. There is one litele cordage factoryinst. John which is not bought ont. Mr. Anderson has been making comage there nealy fifty years, with tive of his own family and rne or two hined men. He still holds on making rope, and this cordage combine undertook to lreak him up and shat him down. In order to do that they put down the price of lath ties to form cents a pomm, less than the material eosts to make it. Because he would not sell out to them they undertook to shat him up loy putting down the price on that article, and they lost thonsands of dollars without getting a cent of benefit, and at last they and to raise their price again. They lost thousands amd thousamds of dollars and failed in their attempt to buy out this small imdustry; they could not bribe him to sell out, though they offered hin atl sorts of inducements. When they could not get him to do it they said: You will hear from us: amd how did that industry hear from them: They hearl from the combine by the combine putting the price of one article of lath ties which they manufactured down to four cents a pound, really lower than the cost of the raw material before it was worked. The fiovermment ought to look after a matter of this kime. They saty they are getting the corlage mamufacturers, hy this protective policy, to make work for the people, to keep the people at home. Why do they allow a great American combine to come over here and hoy up all the manufacturers of Canada: They have a capital now, I helieve, of $$ 17,(0) 0,(00)$, and they are getting control of all the rope, and all the binding twine, and all the hemp that is used in the Dominion of Canada and the United States, and closing up our small industries. Mr. Connors, the other proprietor of that rope manufactory in st. John, is investing no capital, he has sold out, and the men whom he employed have gone somewhere else to find work. I do not know how it is in Halifax; I helieve that is running. but the others have closed up. And so this system has worked. You talk aloout protection! Why, the whole thing is a fraud, the whole thing is based upon seltishness, upon greed, upon theft, upon stealing by law. The whole thing is an appeal to the selfishness of human. nature, from lueginning to end. Every industry that is protected successfully, can combine, and they will combine, and they do combine, and they have combined. And this is a huge combination. I would like to read an article I saw in the papers to show how they combine, and how the hon. member for Halifax was a member of that combine that visited St. John and tried to get that industry to come into the combination-I have leen so informed, I do not wish to misrepresent him, lut I have been informed that he visited that small manufactory carried on by Mr. Anderson, am they promised to assist him liy machinery, because he was making his ropes in a humble way without much machinery. He has continned over a period of more than to years to carry on his industry, and they tried to close him up. Mr. Speaker, my hom. frient from Assiniloria is a protectionist, but he comes down on this tax becalase a combination has igrown out of it. What other industry of any considerable importance has not entered into a combination: Has not the cotton industry gone into a combination: Have not nearly all the manufacturers gone into at combination, and now they are getting protectionists on the other side of the line-they have got tired, or rm out there, to some extent--to come here and stare their industries. I flo not want any Americans capitalists to come in here, if they are groing to be protected, to plumler Canadians. Vio down to the city of Montreal and you will find how they come over. After skiming the people in the United States, they come here anl hegin to make Mother Winslow's Noothing syrup, and that is protected : aml Diamond Inves, and that is protected : amd some sort of lacteal foos, and that is protected ; and all the hmmbugs and nostrums you can think of. They come in here and skin the Canadians: and after making their money they return to the States. Why is not Camadia more of a country than she is: I am a Canadian, and I want Canalla to prosper, lat Canala can never prosper umder protection, Canadal can never prosper unless the restrictions upon her trade are removerl. Why has not Cinada more than tive millions of people: Une hundred years ago (amada, the colonies that did not revolt, started out with as gool material as the United States. Those in the colonies that did not revolt, came into (amadia ia hondred years ago, and where are their lescemdants now? How do we stand as compared with our brethren on the other side of the line? Have we not got a country here that will yet contain teeming millions of peopleand there is no increase. It is no use to talk about progress, and about prosperity in (iamala. It does not exist. True, there is not much porerty, and there are not many people. If there was as many people as there are in the states, there would be poverty and starvation. But there are not many people, and in orler to make your protection a success, you have to keep very few people, mighty few people, you camot keep many under your system. However, protection seems to suit (amala, the people seem to like it, and our friends opposite seem to like it. But they do not say much about binding twine, I think they must have commited themselves on that during the cimpaign. If they have, of course the (iovernment can afford to take that off, they have got revenue enough without it. If the farmers of Canada wainted binding twine free as much as the fishermen of the Maritime Provinces want it free, they would get it. The fishermen wanted free twine, and they got it, and whon the farmers want it they can get it.

Motion agreed to.

RUNNING: PRIVILEGES OVER T'HE INTERCOLONIAL RAILIVAY.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) moved for :
Copies of all letters, telegrams and correspondence relating to the use by the Canadian Pacific Railway of running privileges over the Intercolonial Railway between Halifax and St. John: and copies of all agreements between the Cinadian Pacific Railway nud the Intercolonial Railway, or any department or officor of the Gorermment of Camadn relating to the running privileges given to the Canadian Pacific Railway over the Intercolonial Railway and to the payments to be made therefor : and also, of all agreements for the payments by the Intercolonial Railway to the Canadian Pacitic Railway fir the cars and engines of the latter rua over the Intercolonial Railway.
$=-\cdots-\cdots$
He said : My object is simply to obtain information as to the amomit that I suppose was paid by the Camalian Pacitic Railway for the privileges that were given of rmming over the Intercolonial Railway, and the agreement that was entered into between the two companies. I gatherel to-day from the answer given by the Minister of Public Works to the question I hitul on the Oriler Paper that the Canatian Pacific Railway do not pay anything for these ruming privileges, hut they paty a small amoment to them pur diem per car, for the cars they run. The question I had on the Order Paper was: What is the total amount alrealy paid them? But the hom. gentleman did not answer the question in that way. He merely aswered that they paid ar much per car. Now, I am very anxious to get the facts in commection with their agreement. The combition of the Intercolonial Railway is in a more lamentable state than that of any other public work of Camalit, in fact it is simply appailing. Already, for the seven months of the year, the deficit has been $\sin (x),(M)$ old, or at the rate of sl, (MX), (NX) a year. Either it is heing rum in the interest of the Canarlian Paoinic Railway, and for the purpose of handing it orer holus lolus to the (anadian Pacific Railway at an carly date, or it is heing run at a frightfin rate of extravagance. Now, the late acting Minister of Railways made a pilgrimage into the Maritime Provinces this last summer for the purpose of examining into the combition of the Intercolonial Railway. We have never had his report yot. My motion is for the purpose of getting that report, if report he made, as I assume he diel. But it is within the recollection of every hom. gentleman from the Maritime Provinces that after he returned to Ottawa an order was made--at any rate the newspapers said so-- having for its object the placing of that roat on somewhat of a commerciad hasis. Some tive or six humdred voters who were kept in the paty of the liovermment for the purprose of voting in the elections, were to be dis-missen-so the newsprpers reported. I thought myself that the hon. gentleman, whom I see opposite, the hon. member for Alhert (Mr. Welion), who last year contented very strenuously in this House that the Intercolonial Railway should be placed in the hands of a Commission, apart altogether from politicians, and political acts eliminated from it, and that the roal shonhd be run on a commercial basis,-I thought, jutging from the remarks he made that he would have leen one of the first to support any hon. Minister in reducing extravagance on that romi. He may have done so: I do not know. We shall see; but the newspapers credited him with being one of a deputation that waited on the Government to request the withdrawal of the ohnoxious order removing umnecessary men. He will he ahle to say whether the newspaper reports are correct or not. The newspaper criticisms lead us to believe that from top to bettom this railway is managed and operated on principles antagonistic toemmercialones, that it is to-day rum as a political machine from Moncton to Halifas, that the men are kept there, not becaluse they are required to do the work, hut a very large momber of monecessaly men are kept there, and if it should turn out to be true that the Minister did recommend the removal of $f(x)$ or $\pi(x)$ or even 2.01men, that impression on the mind of the public will be to some extent justified. I am speaking now from newspaper reports entirely. They have not heen contrablicterl. The telegrams came down that orders hat heen issined for the dismissal of a large mumber of men, aml sub. sequently that the hom. member for Albertamiothers waited on the foremment and songht toindace them to withdraw the order : and heyond that Parliament has no information, and I have no information. If these reports are untruse, I shall he glat to have them contrandicted, and if true, I shatl he gland to have the othecial papers so that the Honse maty take cognizance of the matter and diseuss it fully. Ever yonly knows this matter eamot go on ats at present. Exeryboly knows we cammot have the Intercolonial Railway simking $\$ 1,(M N),(M H)$ a year, aml it is rumoured that arrangements mate between the C'analian l'acifie Railway amil the Intereolonial Railuay are entirely in the Canadian Pacitic Railways interests. It is known that the fiovermment permit agents of the Intercolonial Railway at the different stations to he agents of the Canadian Pacific Railway. It is helieved these agents work in the interests of their special employers, and not in the interests of those who perminently employ them. Whether it is so or mot, 1 lo not know : but we do know there must he a leakage of an extraordinary ahommal, amd drealfal character which this road neter could create if fairly operated. Last year the hom. member for Alhert (Mr. Welion) manle a speech in which be clamed that this road should he placed altogether ontsink the reach of politicians.
Mr. WELDON (Alhert.) Hear, hear.
Mr. DAVIES (I'E.E.) The hom. gentleman cheers that statement. He desires the mad to he plated in the hands of Commissioners appointed during life or gond behaviour, in the hamds of a Commission from which political intluenees are to be entirely eliminated. The roan was to he rom the sanne as the Canadian Pacific Railway, on commercial principles, and the hope was imlulged in that if that planwere adopted and carried out, instead of having would be able to meet its expenses. What is the conseruence: There was a deticit of $3360,0 \times 0$ for the corresponding seven months last year and stion),0MO or $\boldsymbol{3} \mathbf{6} 00,(\mathrm{KN})$ for the seven months ending 29 th February last. Everyone must regret that owing to the alssence of proper control, owing to the road being rum in the interests either of the Canarlian l'acitic Railway designedly and wilfully or recklessly and without proper control, this great deficit has arisen, lecause it is not possible to have a deficit ruming up to $81,000,000$ if the ofticials of the road are devoting themselves to rumning it in the public instead of in political interests. In Halifax there are an enormous number of employes who are ready to vote on a proper accasion. In Moncton it is the sime. I hope that when the papers come down we shall be ahle to form a correct opinion both with regard to the arrangement with the Canadian lacitic Railway and the Intercolonial Railway, and the motion will have the effect of inducing responsible parties to make a statement with respect to the newspaper comments in order that we may know whether the Minister did report in farour of dismissing a large number of employes and was checked in doing so owing to the actions of influential supporters in this House.

Mr. WELIDON (Allsert). I feel it proper to say a word or t wo seeing that my name was referred to hy the member for Queen's, Prince Edward Island (Mr. lavies) who has moved this motion. That hon. gentlenan has done ine the honour to refer to a speech I madechuring the last session of Parliament, urging the placing of the Intercolonial Railway in the hathds of a non-political commission secun ed hy statute, with appointments rusning for a term of years, which commission should have control of this railway with the effect that the influence of members of Parliament would le taken away, and the road shonla le managed, not politically, hat on commercial principles. I take occasion to-night to say that while I will mot open an argument on this guestion. I stand liy every worl I spoke in that delate. I spoke my full and free mind. I believed in what I then staid, and a year's reflection and some athitional study of the reports of railwas commissions in the colonies, and especially the report of one of those colonies which has made the experiment during the longest perion, confirmed me in the soundness of my argument last year, and before this session closes I shall endeavour to adilress an argument to the same effect in this House, whether with a heiter result than last year, I do not know. I am perfectly convinced from our experience of this railway last year, that we will soon he driven to make this experiment. I have given careful study to the financial condition of the Intercolonial Railway cluring the year, some study to the accounts, and from what I have leamed, I have not come to the conclasion that the deticit will be as large as one million. but I am told that it will lee very large, somewhat larger, I fear, than last year. I deplore it, as I statel some months ago, and I think it, in considerahle measure, arises from political nanagement. I endeavoured, in the argument I presented a year ago, to point out that this railway appeared in the discussion when Mr. Mackenzie was Minister and when Sir Charles Tupper was Minister, and the latterhon. gentlemans record was phenomenally successful in regard to the reduction of deficit. He wiped out the deficit in two or three years.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) By charging capital account to expenliture.

Mr. WELDON. I will not argue the guestion now; but if it explains any part of it it explains only a small part. I will not as I said, argue the question now, although I am prepared to clo so at another time when that question is more fairly lefore us on the merits. When Sir John Macilonald was Minister and when Mr. Pope was Minister it had but one record. I know that hon. members und Ministers differ from me, but I give as the result of my study of the question, that the cause is largely due to this: that the road has been under both parties and in all times in some degree encumbered and retarded with political management, which I think is relatively a wasteful and inefficient management as compared with the best ohtainable management. I shall say little ahout the question now, because I shall have more to say on it at a later stage of this session. A word with reference to another matter personal to myself. As to the representations that the hon. member from Queen's (Mr. Davies) says he has sent me with respect to my conduct and action with reference to the dis. missals at Moncton-

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) And Halifas.

Mr. WELDON. Yes; I did not know alonat this. In reference to that matter, I feel, howerer, that I should state openly in the House-- whether it le prudent or imprudent I do not know-what I said to the Minister privately, and that is: that I thought that the dismissing of humbreds of men at two weeks notice was a hasty measure. I asked for consideration, and I asked for delay, and I say here now what I said to the Minister then, that in my julgment, based upon the local circumstances of the case, and on some knowledge of the condition of the shops-I speak of Moncton where most of the men were-I say here to-night, publicly, that in my julgment it would he wiser, and in the long run better and much more advisable. if, insteal of dismissing five humberl men, the dismissals were limited to two hundred, and these the less efficient of the men, and if the remaining three hundred were kept employed at repairing cars. which are not now fully employed, and in repairing engines, which are not now fully employed, the system would be better all round, and would be carried out with the result that a large number of men would not be suddenly and somewhat harshly dismissed, and further, that it would allow it shrinkage in the number of employes by death, the removal of restless men who move about from one place toanother, and dismissals for cause. This would accomplish in a few months, or in a year at the outside, about what the Minister is seeking to be accomplished hy his rigorous measure. In the main I am bound to say--and I believe the Minister will corrolmate what I do say-that I felt bound to support him for the reasons given last year. This is my answer to the personal charge. I believe the number of men on the road was large, I believe it will always be large under political management, and I believe the abuse will be twice ds great if to-morrow we were to put the gentlemen across the House into power, and place the gentleman who has spoken in the position of Minister of Railways.

Mr. MULOCK. The hon. member for Allert (Mr. Wellon) has told us in fact that according to some information which the Minister of Railways had, there is a small army of unnecessary employés on the Intercolonial Railway.

Mr. DAVIES' (P.E.I.) Five hundred.
Mr. MULOCK. Yes, a little more than the full strength of an ordinary regiment. Notwithstanding, the member for Albert (Mr. Weldon) thought it alvisable not to have them dismissed summarily, and I commend his goodness of heart for this.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Particularly in view of the fact that there was a bye-election in Halifux.

Mr. MULOCK. The circumstance which my hon. friend reminds ne of, that there was a byeelection in Halifax, in no way, I am sure, affected the opinion of the hon. gentleman as expressed to the Winister. But, unfortunately there are some tax payers in this country who have got to pay the bill for bye-elections in Halifax and so on. I find that according to the Public Accounts there was a deficit on the Intercolonial Railway for the fiscal year ending listh June, 1890, of $\$ 553,392.05$; or over half a million of deficit in one year on a road about $8(N)$ miles in length. And as if that were not enough, I find that for the year closing the 30th June, 1891, that leficit had gone up to $\$ 884,946$. in other words I find that the working expenses of this road under Government management amounts to about 120 per cent of the gross receipts. Ordinarily it is thought that 6.5 or 00 per cent of the receipts of an established railway, represents a liberal allowance for working expenses, but here we have a dovernment railway absorbing all the gross receipts and nearly 20 per cent more. Why, it is worse than the Caraquet Railway. It is the worst showing, I fancy, that ever disgraced a country, and if this were not bad enongh, the tigures furnished for six months enting the lst February last are infinitely worse. I find in the reply to the yuestion put hy the hon. memher for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) that the deficit for the six months ending the 1st February, 1842, was $\$ 371,142$ greater thanit was for the corresponding period of last year. While list year the deficit exceeded that of the previous year hy over $\mathbf{S l}(0), 0(0)$, for the six months of the year not yet completed, the gross leficit is $\$ 64 \overline{0}$,\$43.02 or $\mathbf{S i}_{3}^{7} 1,142.6$ greater than it was last year. Notwithstanling all this, we are told there are on the Intercolonial Railway five hundred men or thereabouts too many. How comes it that this chormous increase happened last year ; how comes this enomons increase during the year of a general election? How comes it that the increase incurred during the last six months aluring byeelections in the Maritime Provinces: There is not a man on the other side of the House who offers an explanation. We are told that it is necessary to tax enormonsly the people of Canada to maintain the administration of the fovermment on that bissis : that it is necessary for the glory of Canada to maintain a tariff policy that enables these things to be done. It is wicked, it is mujustifiable, it is a risgrace to the Administration, and if it is not remedied soon I trust that steps will be taken to remove it Government that is so untrue to the best interests of the country.

Mr. HAGiGART. There camot be the slightest objection to bring down all the pupers asked for by the hon. gentleman in reference to the agreement made between the Intercolonial Railway and the Canadian Pacific Railway for ruming power over that rodd. As you know, we subsidized or assisted the Canadian Pacific Railway for the purpose of having communication between older Canada and the ports of St. John, St. Andrews and Halifax, and in order to allow them to make use of it, we entered into a traffic arrangement by which they were permitted to carry tratfic over our Intercolonial Railway. The agreement is simply with reference to rolling stock. We give the Canadian Pacific Railway the power of running over the Intercolonial Railway. They do not use their own engines, and we pay them the usual rates when we use their freight and passenger cars. The deficit in the preceding part of the year was caused mainly by large almormal expenditures which were made upen the roal at that time. They did amount, as the hon. gentleman says, to an enomous sum ; hut when he sees the expeniliture for the remaining months of the year, he will find that the deficit will not amount to nearly what heexpectsitwill. I hope that from this out the road, under proper management, will show no such enormons deticit as it has done in the past. I hope that the expenditure and the receipts will nearly balance. In onder that this result may be reached, there must he extensive changes in the management of the road: there most he a large reluction in the staff, and a reduction in the number of tatins run. The hon. gentleman accuses us with being intuenced by members supporting the Govermment, not to carry out certain dismissals on the rowl, hit the facts of the matter have been fully explained hy the hom. member for Albert (Mr. Wellon). I do not remember that I had even a conversation with that hon. gentleman upon the subject. A notice was simply sent to the different employes whose services would not he required, under the management which was to ensue for the purpose of greater economy, and with the view of making the receipts and expenditure nearly balance. Some of my frients mged that perhaps the notice was too shomt.

Mr. DAVIEs (P.E.I.) To takeplace before the bye-elections.

Mr. HACinAR'T. No, the hye-elections were over. As to the statement of the hon. gentleman as to the Intercolonial Railway agents being used as agents for the Candian Pacific Railway, the instructions given to them are entirely to the contrary. They are instructed not to ask for freight either for the (irand lronk or Canalian lacific Railway: but when it person, wishing to send gools on the railway, asks for the rates over the different rontes, the instructions to the agents are to give them, and on no account to tout for freight. or passengers over one line or the other. There can be no objection to bringing down the agreeinent, and when it comes it will be found to lee a simple trattic agreement as to the conveyance of freight and passengers along the line of the road.

Sir RICHARI) CARTWRIGHT. We shall all be exceerlingly glail if the hon. gentleman carries out these promises of retrenchment which he makes to the House. We have heard them before, and we know how they hase been carried out before. As to the present condition of the Intercolonial Railway, I will only say this, that, if it can le found possible, as the hon. gentleman seems to intimate, to dearease the number of employés by several humilreils, that is, in itself, ahout as clear evidence as cond he given of the extravagance, and the reasons for the extravagance, in the past management of the roud. As my hon. friend has pointed out, the expenditure on this roarl is out of all proportion. I do not think another case of a railway in which the expeuditure was twenty or thirty per cent above the total receipts has ever been known, and I may remind the House that all the time this huge expenditure on ordinary account has heen going, we have seen very great additions continually made to the capital account of the Intercolonial, which now stands at a great many millions more than it did at the time Mr. Mackenzie proposed to close that account. Then, Sir, I think that the arrangement hinted at by the hon. Minister of Railways between the Camandian Pacitic: Railway and the Intereolomial Railway is, to saly the least, one of a sery extrandinary chatacter. As a rule, it would be very much more to the interest of the Intereolomial Railway that the trattic which passes over it should be carried for as long a distance as possible over the Lntercolonial line, which eomeets with the Gimal Trunk instead of the Canadian Pacitic Railway. What I understand to have heen done by the dovermment of Canala has been this- first of all, largely to sulbsidize a road passing through foreigntervitory. throngh the state of Maine, for the parpone of cutting the throat of the Intercolonial in which we have invested over sinn,(MO),(ЯК), in which they appear to have heen most notahy sucecessfnl, whatever their policy may have heen, for they have sucteded in remlering it about as useless an asset as they prosibly have: and they are now aiding and assisting the Canadian Pacitic Railway --becamse it amomets the that in diverting the thattic from the lutercolomial for the benetit of the Camalian Pacific Railway. As I moderstand these agents along the line of the Interalonial are the paid agents of the dovermment, paid to oblain and conduct trattic on the Intereolomial roal.

Mr. HAti(iART. les.

Sir RICHARI) CARTWRIf HTT. Well, I think it would be for the interest of the people of Canala who own the Intercolonial Railway that the trattie should lee as far as possible drawn along that line, and if you throw it instead upon the (anadian Pacific Railway, you most assuredly deprive the Intercolonial Railway of a considerable proportion of the trattic it would otherwise enjoy.
Mr. HAGiaRT. There is a similar arangement with the (irand Trumk.
sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I understand that. It is in the interest of the people of Camadia that the agents of the Intercolonial Railway should be employell to semd the trattic as much as possible over the Intercolonial Railway, and for that reason ---not for any preference to one road over anotherit is more protitable to send it by the Cirand Trunk. Every hon. gentleman who knows anything of the subject knows that. Sir, the whole hisiness shows in the clearest possible way what we have gained for ourselves by deliberately subsidizing a roal, as we did in the case of the Canadian Pacific Railway, to cut the throat of a road which we own oneselves, and in which we have invested over sin), (КM),(OKN).
Motion agreal to.

STANDIN: COMMITTEFN.

Mr. HOWELL. With the consent of the House, I desire to make a motion to add the members introduced to-day and yesterday to the different committees. I have shown the proposition I propose to make to the leader of the Opposition, who has consentel to the same. I move :

That the following members be added to the Select Standing Committees:-Mr. Boyle. Railways and Canals. Bnnking and Commerce, Public Accounts; Mr. Gillies; Railways and Cunals. Banking and Commerce, Private Bills: Mr. Pridham, Agriculture and Colonization, Expiring Laws, Standing Orders.

SUPPLNーTHE RUDKET.

House resmed adjourned delate on the proposed motion of Mr. Foster, that Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair for the Honse togo again into (ommittee of supply.

Mr. AMYOT. I think it my dity, at this stage of the session.tosay a few words alnont my own position and the conclusions to he drawn ly ine from recent events. You remember, Mr. Speaker, that the ghestion of a revenue tariff amb a protective $t$ miff came up in 187. In 1 isis the late sir John Mace Alomath proposed that a protective tariff should be substituted for a revenue tarift, so as to leal us to reciprocity with the states. Then the people were consulted and declared in favour of protection, and protection beeme law. For the first years thinge went on very well. We saw new industries, mambfactures and so om, but rery som the market was overcrowded, and the manifacturers asked for further protection. Further protection was grantel to some of them, hat still that diol mot suffice. Later on the hon. leader of the Oppesition. follow. ing the intimation contained in sir Jolin Macelen. alits motion, proposed to the cometry that we slould have reciprocity, and made of that porposal the principal plank of his platform. The people were consulted and answered, not by a majority hat ly a large number, that they would like reciprocity and the (iovernment themselves semel anxious to have it. The dovernment went twice to Washington to obtain it, and to-lay we have got the answer from a member of the fovermment that they camot ohtain reciprocity from the states. I have listenemattentively to the lisenssion, and have hearl it said on the left that the liovernment were not serions, that they had only gone to the states to set forth what were the objections to reaprocity. I have considered the matter very serionsly and I camot take that view. It strikes me that if the Unitel States wantel to come into a treaty at all with us, they would say so. They are mit chillren, they know what they want. They are interested in reciprocity, as well as us. They are interested in buying from us as well as in selling to us, and if they are not going to give us reciprocity they must have some reason for it. By looking into, the Mekinley tariff, and theirpress, have convinced myself that the United states will not enter into a treaty with Canada while we are a colony. They want America for the Americans. They want the Munroe doctrine to prevail, and so long as we are a colony of England we will not have reciprosity with the states. That is a very decided matter with them. At adl events, such is my conviction, and I camot understand otherwise how a nation of $\mathbf{6 0},(\mathrm{ONO},(\mathrm{ONO})$ would not be able to say: " Well. we will reciprocate with you." If the United states will not give us reciprocity, what is our position: We have got a protective tariff with which some people are not satistien. But whathave they tolook out for: Will they ask for free trule, and entire free trade, because restrictive free trade is nothing lout protection or revenue tariff! I am one of those who believe that free trade, generally speaking, is for the good of a country, and I even believe this country is sufficiently developed to establish free trade : but both political parties, since thirty or forty years, have ellucated the people to hold direct taxation in horror, and you camot have free trade without direct taxation to procide for the-atministration of affairs. Then shall we ask for Imperial Federation " It is a very fine dream, but I cammot see anything in it. Some will speak of commercial union. I am sure, and all those who have gone to Lomion, liverpool, Birmingham. and all those places, will agree with me, that Enghand will never abiandon her commerce with the whole work for the sake of a few colonies. She would rather lose the hest of her colonies than give up that immense commerce she has with the whole world, and which makes her richmess and greatness. We are therefore in this position, that we have to stick to the actual system or look for a rupture of the colonial tie in order to ohtain reciprocity by means of ammexation, that is commercial mion or political mion with the United States. For my part, I think the time has not arrived when we can speak of anmexation in this House. We are a colony, and a colony we must remain until the erlucation of the pesple in (anada and Gagland will have prepared us for either indepenlency or annexation. As the Americans will not deal with us, we must try to hecome more and more independent of them. We must try to use all the resmarees which nature has griven us. Rapid mavigation approaches to us France and Figgland. We forget too much that there is a great commerce to be done with France. There are Spain amt eren Asia with which we ean fo eommerce. We mast encomage navigation, we must make our harbours safe, we must protect them from the operations of the ship labourers' societies. They constitute a great evil which will, at a given moment, if we donot takecare, prove very langerous, even ruinous. It has ruined one port, thit of Quebec, so that no ressel will stop there now. We must look for new markets for our products, and if we continue administering public affairs with economy and wishom, by the help of enterprises within the measure of means, we will go on in Canala being happy. f great many have gone, it is true, hut if those who remain are happy what can we ask more? We have no war to endure and we are in sutficient numbers to suffice to ourselves. We contend that we are satistied. We live happy here. Let us go on to try and do the hest we can with what we have. At allevents, I do not see that from the left comes any proposal better than to go on with the state in which we are at present. Being of that opinion, 1 helieve it to be my duty not only not to throw any obstacle in the way of the diovermment, but to give them my humble support. I shall le asked: Why ilo you not remain in the ranks of the Opposition, where there is a great role to play? Mr. Speaker, I will le frank. As you know, perhaps, I was Iorn a Conservative. I entered this House a Conservative. In 188i, , lue to the press of both parties, due to some Ministers whom I do not see here now, there was a great movement formed in the Province of Quebee which was called the National movement, about the hanging of Riel. I will not go into any detail. I joined that movement. I see in this House some members who joined it also, and I did my. hest for that movement. It was extended to provincial affairs in spite of me, but the almost unanimous view of the party was that they wanted to fight. in the Local as well as in the Federal Legislature on the basis of that movement. And what has become of that movement? The chief was chosen in our province. I will not :attack him. His party is scattered all over, and he, I may say, is politically dearl in the murl. (an I remain with that party in the province: I do not think so. I did my hest for them: I was with them to the last upon the constitutional issue. Last year, when there was an virquite in the Senate, and I defended them here, atfirming that the affair constituted no offence. the three eminent jurges who were appointed by the Lientenant Governor, or by his order, decided that the Mon. Mr. Nercier knew nothing about the transaction. And what wats the atfitio after all : Nothing. but the execution of the law, and so my opinion was vinlicated. But after that new commissions were appointed ant, unforthately, so many crimes were fomm ont that the fiovernor was justified by the people in taking the constitution into his hamls and forcing out the Ministers. So far as 1 ann concemed I cain no lomger helong to the National movement, and in oni province the National movement is dead. In this Honse of (ommons there was the guestion of the hatnering of Riel, lint the people approver of the action of the liovermment, and that is at lead issue. Then, when the guestion of reciprocity came on, I did my best for that also; but torliay I say in conscience that 1 believe that question is a lead issue. It can no longer be a question before the people hecallase the Šates will not have it. Are we going many more times to the dows of the States with a hasket in our hamds asking for charity: I think, in view of all these matters, I ann authorized to erase from before my title of "National Conservative" the word . Xational" and leave only the word "Conservative." I must say that the leader under whom I served in the ranks of the left I found to be a real statesman. I know, and the country at large knows, his brilliant amd abmanat talents, his energy, his generons character, his perfect honesty and his sincerity, and I will tell you frankly, sir, that, if I thought by leaving his ranks now I would injure his cause in any way or retard for one monent his accession to power, I would rather withdraw from politics than do it : but under the circumstances, when there is such anajority, how can I injure his case : At all events, if it was his desire, I would be willing to open the constituency and give him the opportunity to redeen the county I represent. A party is not composed of one man only, howerer eminent he may be. A party is composed of a chief and an army, and that army must support the chief. What kint of support has the hon. the leader of the Opposition received from his party : At the last general elections, I remember I was fighting in a few counties under his hamer, when the words of the Hon. Edward Blake came, criticising, condemning the policy of the chief of the Opposition. The principal man in the party after the hon. leader in this House condemning the policy of the party, chrowing clespair into the ranks, is that giving support to the chief of the party? That was, perhaps, one of the causes why the Opposition did not come out victorious from the last general election. A party so divided is no party at all. And then we see the chief organ of the party, the Globe, constantly throwing obstacles and preventing the leader of the Opposition in this House from succeeding in his plans. And I am toll that some of those who are expected to become Ministers, when the hon. the learler of the Opposition will he Prime Minister, are the leaders and controllers of the globe, and

We hlo not hear any of them protesting or saying that the ci/ol, is not the organ of the party. And every day in the prowince from which I conte, and fromi which the leater of the opposition comes, we are exposed to the hmiliation of believing that all these articles are directed against that leader hecalase he comes from that province. I say that any party that has such an organ, amid has not the energey to dissociate itelf from it, to repuriate it. is not a party that should have the confidence of those sobldiers who like to tight mader a chief in whom all the members of the army have contidence. One of the reasons why I leave that party and go back to the party of my youth is that I find that that molle leader does not receive from his party the support he deserves. Besides. do we not find in the great Province of Ontiofio constituencies changing the majorities they gave for that party into large minorities, thus telling him, You are not the man we want because you are from the lrovince of Quebec. That, at least, is the impression in the prowince from which I come. And we have seen the Fi/gh, daily telling the people of Ontario-- -though it was bone of their husiness-how hat was Mr. Nercier, and arranging things so that the other pipers which were enemies to the lealer of the Oppositien in this House might conple his name with that of Mr. Mercier. That is another piece of treachery on the part of the gilobe which I camot appore. I would have liked those who sit near the hom. leader of the left to protest in time and to say: It is not our organ, it does not represent our party. For my part 1 resent it, and ardent fighter ins I am generally, I have no heart to remain any longer in the ranks of a party which gave up its chief in that way. I will say nothing against the Opposition in other respects, but I helieve they lack cohesion. They do not seem to have any detinite principles or policy. They seem to live on expediency; they have nothing to do except to invent and multiply crimes, to propose Bills to protect animals, and to impose upon the people the ohservance of the Lords Diay. I do not see much else in their programme. I will idmit with the greatest pleasure that I have found in the ranks of the left a great many eminent citizens and patriots, well learned in all the branches, but taken as a whole, I fo not think that the left, as at present constituted, if they came into power, could do as much good for the country as the right can do now. Now, Mr. Speaker, I know that I will be accused of joining the largest battalion. Here is my answer: In 188.5, on a question of principle, I left my friends on the right. They were then in power binth at Ottawa and at Quebee, and I went into the cold shades of Cprosition. I think I may boast that my convictions have nlways been iny sole master, guided, as I hope, I always have been, by my anxiety to serve my country in the best way I coull. Before drawing my remarks to a close I wish to thank the honoured leader of the left for his constant kinthess to me, for the great service he has always remtered me. I leave the left without having, I hope, it single enemy. All I do is for the sake of my country, which I love, and which I intend to serve the lest way I can.

Mr. Cameron. At this late hour in the evening it is not my intention to detain the House at any very great length: but I deem it my duty to make a few observations in reference to a statement made hy my hon. friend the senior member for Prince (ounty. Prince Edward Islamd. On Friday last, when. I had the bonour of moving the adjourmment of the dehate, it was simply hecause my hon. friend from Prince Eilward Islant made a statement which 1 then helieved, and still believe, was not accurate, and I deem it my duty in my place to correct it. He satid:
"I do not wonder at gentlemen in the dovernment benches not having the strength to come formard to give expression to their sentiments on this occasion, because a great wany of them, especially gentlemen from the Maritime Provinces, had pledged themselves on the eve of the last general elections, that they were in favour of free trade with the Enited states. I am aware that in my province the candidates on both sides of politice expressed themselves for unrestricted reciprocity, and I am also aware that thes did the same thing in Nowa sootia. In fact, 1 beliere the Minister of Finance pledged hinself at one mpeting that he would give the people unrestricted reciprocity with the United States. We, howerer. find now that the actions of these gentlemen -peak louder than their words. and when free trade is proposed from this side of the House hon. gentlemen opposite wite straight against it."
Nos, I have uo, hesitation in saying that su far as I am a ware, no candidate of the Iiberal-Comservative party in any constituency in the Maritime Provinces, declared himself in farour of murestricted reciprocity. On the contraty, at every hustings, so far as I know, the Lileral-Conservative candidates pledged themselves clirectly against any such policy. The basis of the policy on which the Liberal-Conservative party contested the late general election was inlly explained in a dispatch from the (iorernor ieneral of this Dominion to the Secretary of state for the Colonies, in December, 1890. The dispatch proves the earnest desire of the Administration to develop a fair trade letween the United states and Canada, hut it did not contemplate unrestricted reciprocity, commercial union, or annexation. The dispateh reads as follows:-

\text { "Gorernment Holse, Ottafa, 13th Dec.. } 1 s 90 .

"My Lord,-I have the honour to send to Your Iurdship to-day a telegraph despateh in cipher, of which the following is the sabstance:
'With reference to my telegram of the 10 th inst., the Government is desirous to prosese a ionint commission to deal withont limitation, and to prepare a treaty of reciprocity on the following subjects, viz. :-
"(1) Renewal of the treaty of 1854 , with modifications required by the altered circumstances of both countries and with the extensions deemed by the commission to be in the interest of Canada and the United States.
"( 2 ) Reconsideration of the treaty of 1888 with respect to the Atlantic fisheries, with the aim of securing free admission into United States markets of Canadian fishery products in return for facilities to be granted to United States fishermen to buy bait and supplies, and to tranship cargoes in Canada. All such privileges to be mutual.
"(3) Protection of mackerel and other fisheries on the Atlantic ocean and in inland waters also.
(4) Relation of sea-board coasting laws of the two countries.
(5) Relation of the coasting laws of the two countries on the inland waters dividing Canada from the United States.
"، (6) Mutual salvage and saving of wrecked ressels.
"(7) Arrangements for settling the boundary between Canada and Alaska.
"The treaty would, of course, be ad referend"...".
This was the basis of the policy which the LiberalConservative partyadopted, and on which they went to the country in 1891 ; lutanyassertion to the effect that the Liberal-Conservative party adrocated either unrestricted reciprocity, or free trade, or commercial union with the United States, is a statement that is not borne out by the facts. The Halifax Moruiu! Chrowicle, of the 18th November,
Mr. Amyot.

18(K), very failly defines what umrestricted reciprocity means in the opinion of the Liberal party of this Dominion. In fact there are so many detinitions of that policy, that it is very ditficult for a person who opposes it to realize the opinion of those who adsocate it. The Chromirle is a very high authority on the detinition of policies renerally, and particularly on the definition of the liberal policy. It says:
" The Liberal party wants unrestricted reciprocity or free trade with the Enited States, leaving each comery to have any protection it pleases against the rest of the worla. It dues not propose an assimilation of tariffs; on the contrary it distinctly repuliates that idea."
I presume that when the Mornin! Ghomirt, the oryan of the Liberal party in the Maitime Provinces, realizes the proposition which Mr. Blane made to the Canadian delegates at the recent comvention at Washington, it will either have ${ }^{\prime \prime}$ change its detinition of what unrestricted rectprocity means, or abandon the platform which the Liberal party seems determined to alopt and pursue. Those of us who oppose unrestricted reciprocity and commercial mion, feel that the effect of it would be: (1) the adoption of the McKinley tariff for Canada: (2) direct taxation for (ONO) per ammum: (3) the closing of every hast furnace, foumlry, hoot and shoe factory, cotton mill, sugar refinery, iund indeed, almost every manufacturing estahishment ; (t) the transference of the wholesale husiness from Halifax, st. John, Montreal and Toronto to Boston and New Sork: (.)) the closing within twelve months of every conal mine in Novasuotia: (6) the end forever of all hope of Louishurg lecoming the winter port of Camalia. I hope my hon. friends from St. John and Halifax will pardon me if $I$ express the opinion that neither of those great cities is suitable for a winter port for this Dominion, and I claim that in course of time, when the guestion is thoroughly understool in this Dominion, Louishurg will be made the winter port of Canada. (7) The speedy reduction of the agricultural population of all eastern Canada to the same deplorable condition as that in which the agricultural population of New England and northern New York now find themselves,-utterly mable to contend with western competition and overwhelmed with an ever-increasing load of direct taxation. In return for this the only inducement offered ly the Liberal party is Grit rule. People who remember what (riit rule was when we had it, and with what unanimity and alacrity the electorate of the country dispensed with it. can julge for themselves whether that boon is. worth the price Messrs. (iould, Wiman, Longley, Farrer, and others ask for it. There is one other proof which has been lately advanced as to the injurious effect of the National Policy. That proof is based upon the exolus of population. I have examined the increase, slow as it may be, of the population in the Province of Nova Scotia. I find that in 1861 the population was $3330,8: \overline{7}$, in $18 \overline{1} 387,800$, in 1881 440,572 , in 1891450,492 . The increase between 1861 and 1871 was 46,957 , between 1871 and 1881 22,772, between 1881 and 1891 only 9,920 . This is only the apparent increase and not the real one, as I can show from evidence which hon. gentlemen opposite will not attempt to controvert. But coming down to the population of the county which I have the honour to represent, I find the decennial falling off in the increase has also, heen very material and compares to a large evtent with the increase in the whole population. In lstil the population was 19,966, in $1571 \quad 23,415$, an increase of 3,448 : in 1 ssi the population was lation was $2 \pi$, , $a!$ or an increase of 128 . The falling off was greater between 1501 and 1 ss 1 than between 1861 and 1571 in the connty. and the greatest falling off was during the regime of hom. gentlemen opposite. The apparent exombs from the Dominion is not real. The real canse of the loss of increase in population as shown by the census is simply hecause the instructions to the enmerators during the last census were reve lifferent from the instructions given for taking the previons decemial census. Previous to that time there was no time limit for absentees. At the last census enumerators were instracted to take no account of any person who was alsent for ore 19 months. The folly of taking the census on the basis of enumerating all those who had heen alsent for a long periox may be inferrel from expressions of hom. gentlemen ipposite on this yuestion on 1s!9) the member for Quelec (Mr. Latigelier) wid:
"I know that in some cases yome men who had heen absent for years trom Canada and wh did now belome to: Canada in any sense, were stifil returned in the census of 1881 as belouging to Canadat."
The senior member for Queen's (P.E.I.) sailel:
"Speaking of matters shich came to my uwn knuwledse with regard to 1 sis census, I noticed that many enunerators, taking as they said their returns under instruction: took from the head of the house not only the number of his family and of the servants who were at home with him, but the names anid members of those who had lift. many years befiore : the only ofuestion iskel, being 'Du you think he will ever return ?' Well.' ever' is bit bord and the father of the house did not want to banish all hopes that some time or other, his son who had left home to make a living abroad, and was contimuing to make bis home abroad and to be a resident of another country. might return. In this was the names of hundreds and thousunds were put down, who hat, ,or anl nractical purpoets. left Canada, made a new home for themselves and became naturalized in the United States. So far as my knowledge goes, and I took pains to enquire at the time. all these names were entered in the ennmerators' lists and returned as composing a part of the population of Canada. Well, if the same system was folloved in the larger provinces, the total results would be so misleading that mo one could form even an approximate idea of what the population of this country was."
This was the verlict of the senior member for Queen's, of the mamer in which the censns was taken in 1881. In order to corrolomate his statement I may say that Mr. Blake the late Liberal peater sail:

"The information which I received from many parts of the country was that yeople who had been sway 20 years and were permanently away were put on the enumerators' lists. As the hon. member from Queen's has said, if a father were asked whether he expected bis boy who had been away some 15 or 20 years never to come back, of course, the father, in the hope of having his son pay him a visit, would say certainly he expected him back. The son's name was put down. That is the report I received from many quarters."

It is evident upon the reasoning of hon. members opposite that the census of 1861 , of 1871 and of 1881 were misleading to an enormous extent, and that the census taken in 1891 was as nearly correct as it could be made under the circumstances. Now when I tell my hon. friends opposite that the exodus from Nova Scotia particularly-and I believe the same was the caseall over the Dominion -was greater during the period of the Reciprocity

Traty between Isint and IsGit than it was during any time in the history of (analit, they will probat bly think that the idea hat never struck them before. I have une hesitation in saying that the exrulus from No, va Sentia was much liager het ween NSit and latif than it wats during athy perion since that time. There were many reasoms for this. One peecial reasom in Nova scotiat was that during rans hat the right to tish on the sea eonst of Nowa sentia within the thre- mile limit. At that time they had mot anme themselves expriemen tishermein wher mulerstome the natmre of the tishing :arumh on that coast. Now. not only was this a great enise of the evolus during the reciprocity testy. hat there was anther rasion also which existel. int only in Sinat Sombiat but in the other parts of the Dominionas well. The tanle relations which existed between these twosont ioschluring the reciprocity treaty were of sach a chamater that they unt only hal an interchanseof commulities hee ween these twocomatres, but it alsisencomageal the mixing of the peroples from the two sides of the line with each other, amd the emsequence was that a large number of cur people went to the Cuiten stathes then and heanme permanent residents. In 1501 the emsus emamenateal all these poople who left the comatry letween 15:T amblisibi. We hate the evidence of this fact from the assurance given us hy the semior member for Queen's, P. S.I. (Mr. Daties), of the miamer in which the celnsus was taken in his province and from the member from gaeher centre (Mr. lathgelier) of the mamer in which it wats taken in Guelnec, and from the late leatier of the Opprsition iMr. Blake) as to the manner in which it wisis taken in Ontario. It is well known that het te een 1siot and lisifi there existed an appalling Civil Wiar in the United states. Millions of people were calleel from rarions industries in the states, aml therefore a large denaud for lahour was caused lig the taking away of people from their varions venat tions to culist them in the army. This cansed it great demand for labouress from the different provinces of (iunali, and the result wass that the exodus from (imada iluring the reciprocity treaty was so large that it formed a nucleus liy which emigration was encouraged from Canala, from that perion up to the present time. The census were misleading from 1861 up, becanse the exoms between 18:it and 1sibi was included in the census of every year until 1s91. I have therefore no hesitation in saying that if the censuse of 1891 was

When our delegation iskel in the late comemtinn at Wishington. whether the Amerian people ware preparen to abopr reciprocity on the terms on which we went the comatry in 1 s 91. on the hasis of the reepronity which existed between the two countries from is.it to lifig. with such menlifications as the interests of hoth ermutries: demambed since that time they were intomed muhesitatingly that the Amerrian people wouk not agre th ally such recipmosity. In a wowl the Ameritan dovermment refused to alopt any reciprocity which would not assimilate the tiafifl of (:ammia with the tariff of the Einited States. The eren went further and refusen to ayree to any reciprocity which wouh not assimilate the excise duties of (ainala to those of the Conted stites. This wroll callise an immelise loss of revenuc.  mine so that umber unrestricted reciprocity with the United States, I have mo hesitation in satying that the people of this Dominion wrula he ampelled to provide by direct taxation for not less a large reduction ought to lo made in the pulitic expentiture of this Dominion in order to lessen that chormons taxation. But $I$ am one of those who would deplore the day when any (iovermment of this Dominion would curtail to any extent the expenses of the country, whether on railways, canals or public works, which are essential for the distribution of the products of the Dominion, or on harbours or any other public works which tend to improve the condition of our people. Any Government which wrould atopt such a policy as that would fall. The liberal (ioverument endeatoured to curtail the expenses of this Dominion and reduce tasation, as they thought, and the result was that there was a depression all over the lamh, that the people conld not get employnent, and that owing to irritation which the failure of their policy exciterl in this Dominion they were hurled from power: and as long as they advocate undestricted reciprocity, in my julgment they will never gain power in this boninion. There is suth a thing ats history repeating itself. The declaration maice at the late convention at Washington proves conclusively the terms on which the Anerican people will adopt reciprocity with the Deminion of Canala. Nutwithstanding varions offers which have leemmarle by Comala to the Uniterl States from satif up to the present time it is a singular fact that the Chited States never alsance one step or make any reasomable propusition whatever to the bominjon. Now, I agree with my hom. frient from South Onforl (sir Richard (iatwright) in the opinion he expressed in Prince Ederard Island while his party were in power. I think it is most humiliating to the indepentent people of this bominion to be continally linocking at the doors of the Cuitel states for recipmoity, while every sensible man, woman amb chill in this Donnimommst know that there is wit the slightest intention on the part of the American people to gramt Ganala tanle relations on facomable terms ander any circumstances whatever. They are led to believe that if they turn the serew a little further, and bring a little mone pressure on the people of this Dominion. they can force them inte amexation. In this they are unquestionally mistaken. But, as 1 intimated. history repeats itself. This is mot the only cucasion on which our delegates failen at Washingtom. This is not the first oceasion on which mar ablest statesmen failed to make an impression on the American fovemment. I hope my hon. friemis will pardon me if I refer to an agitation which existerl. I beliere in $186 \mathbf{D}^{2}$, to inthenee the American perple to comtimue reciprocity. At that time the agitation was eonducted not by politicians. It is a deplomathe state of things that this agitation has been hurled into the political arena. My own opinion is framkly that this should never have been slone. The agitation for improved trade relations Hetween Canala and the Linited States shonld be carried on between the hoards of trade in various pats of the Jominion and boards of trate in the Uniterl states. I feel that using it as a party machine for such a length of time has been to a large extent a catuse of retarling the consummation of reciprocity with the United States.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). I thought you said it could not lie got.

Mr. CAMERON. I say now without any aloult whatever, that it camot he obtained as long as we are persistently and continuously legging at the Aoors of the Washington authorities for a renewal of reciprocity. If my hon. friend the philosopher of Bothwell had a horse to sell, and an American approached him for the purpose of purchasing it, I do not believe he would say, "My Yankee friend, I have a saluable horse for sale, and I must sell it ; unless I sell this horse in three months, I have a note due at the bank, I expect that an execution will be issued against me, and unkess you hay this horse from me, I have no doubt I shall be a ruinel man-blue ruin will orertake me amd my family.: This is the kimd of :urgment hon. gentlemen opposite have been using with the govermment of the Unitel sitates; and just as the lankee trader would paty the hom. gentleman only a small price for his hoise, of possillly: not buy it at all, so we shall he treated by the Americanfiovernment if we tell them that we camot live withont them, and that the only way in which we can live is by obtaining untestricted reciprocity or hy amexation. This is just what they wath on the other side, and while they hate an ilfot of securing the amexation of Canala to the Coiterl states. so long will they refuse to give us reciprocity on any terms whatever. liefore ! digressed, wing to the intermptiom. I was asking the House to patiently listen to me while I real a patagaph or two from the speed of a gentleman who was attempting on a previous ocasion to secure reciprocity with the Lnited States. Mr. Hoire at that comention, spoke on this question as follows:-..-
"What is that unestinn: Sir, we are here to determine how best we can ilriw tugcether, in the honds of peace. fremblip and commercial prosperity. the three rreat branches of the biritish tamily. (i)hers.) Thse clover lifte ite try-foil leaves to the eveling dew, vet thes draw their nobrishment from a single siem. Thus distinct.and yet united, let us live and fourish. Why should we not? For nearly twio thomsand rears we were one family. Our fathers fought side by side at Hastinges and heard the ceurfew toll. They fought in the sime rinks for the sepulehre of our Siriour -in the earlier and later civil wars. We can wear onr white and red roses without a blush, and glory in the principles those conticts established. Dur common ancestors won the great Charter and the lsill of Rightsestablished free Parliaments, the Habeas Corpus. and Trial by Jurs. Gur jurisprudence comes down from Coke and Minsfield to Murshall and Story, rich in knowledge and experience, which no man can divide. Frow Chatucer to shakespeare our literature is common inheritance. Tennyson and Longtellow write in one language, Fhich is enriched by the genius developed on either side of the Athantic. In the great narigators from Cotterel to Hudson, and in all their moving aceidents by flood and field, we have a common interest. On this side of the sea we have been largely reintirced by the Germans and French. but there is strength in both elements. The Germans gave to us the sovercigns who establish our freedom, and they gave to you industry, intelligence and thrift : and the French, who bave distinguished themselves in arts and arms for centuries, now strengthen the provinces which the fortune of war decided they could not control. But it may be said we have been divided by two wars. What then? The noble St. Lawrence is split in two places-by coat Island and by Anticosti-but it comes down to us from the same springs in the same mountain sides: its waters sweep tugether bust the Pietured Rocks of Lake Superior, and encircle in their hoving embrace the shores of Huron aud Michigam. They are divided at Niagara Falls as we were at the Revolutionary War: but they come together again on the peaceful bosom of Ontario. Again they are divided on their passage to the sea: but who thinks of divisions when they lift the keels of Commerce, or when drawn up to heaven they form the rainbow or the cloud? It is true that in eighty-five years we have had tivo wars: but what then? Since the last we bave had fifty years of peace, and there have been more people filled in a single campaign in the late civil war than there were in the two national wars letween this cuuntry and Great Britain The people of the United States hope to draw rogether the two contlicting elements and make them one peofle. An: in that task 1 wish them God speed! And in the same way 1 feel that we ought to rule out evervthing disagreeable in the recollection of our old wars, and unite together as one people for all time to come. I see around the door the fars of the two countries. Cnited as they are there, I would ever have them draped together, fold within foll, and let 'their varying tints unite and form in hearen's light, one arch of peace," "
These were the introluctory remarks to an argument in favour of a renewal of reciprocity; and the reasons given are that the people of Canada and the United States should live in harmony and peace and renew fair trate relations-not unrestricted reciprocity, not free trade-with the United States. Fair trade is what the Liberal Conservative party of to-day are willing and anxious to oltain if we can only secure it. He completed his appeal in those words:
" Mr. Chairman, I must now touch upun a subject of some delicacy and importanec. It has been urged by Mr. Morrill, in Congress, and by the people of the Unired States, that the treaty ought not to be renewed because it had bred no friendship towards them across the lakesthat in their struggle the sympathies of the provinces were with the south. Well, if that were true in its fullest extent, which it was not, if you had not had one sympathiser among the natire people and British residents of the provinces, it could be fairly pleaded in response that when Great Britain was at war with Russia the sympathies of the American people were very generally with the hatter country. I was in the United States at the time, and was perfectly astonished at the feeling. Russia was at that time a country full of slaves, for the serfe had not been emancipated, and England was at war with her to prevent her aggressions upon weak neighbouring countries. How the American people could sympathise with Rusia was a perfect puzzle at first sight, and could only be explained in the same manner that much of the srmpathy for the South on the part of the British subjects can be explained, and when the Canadians once had a rebellion within her borders, where were the sympathies of the American people then? Were they with the Canadian Government or with the rebels? Why, you not only sympathized with them, but I am sorry to have to say it, gave them aid along the frontier in many ways, and to a very large extent. I am happy to be able to say, that during the whole four years of the late rebellion in the United States, there has not been developed a particle of evidence to show that a single citizen of any British North American province puta hostile foot on your soil. Everything of which complaint can be made has been the acts of your own people, in violation of hospitality and right of asylum everywhere extended to them on the soil of Great Britain and her dependencies. I make these remarks in no spirit of anger, or of excitement, but to show how unfair it is to hold any government or people responsible for the actions in it of a few evil-disposed individuals, as well as how natural it was for sympathy to be aroused in the minds of the people on one side or the other. In our rebellion, when its attention was called to their acts, the United States Government exerted itself to keep its own citizens within its bounds, and all that could have been asked of the provincial authorities has been freely done to prevent any cause of complaint. against them. It is something to be able to say that during the four long disastrous years of war just ended not a single aot of which complaint could be made has been committed by a Canadian.
Not withstanding the false reports that were circulated. I do not believe there was a single intelligent citizen, of my province at least, who did not believe the capture of the Chesapeake, off the cosst of Maine, by rebellious citizens of the United States, was nothing less or more than an act of piragy. And so of the St. Alban's raid. The government of Canada acted most promptly and nobly in connection with that affair, and has repaid the money which rebellious citizens of the United States had carried into their territory from the state bank. As to their harbouring the rebels and extending to them the right of asylum, is there a single American here who would have his government surrender that right?"
And continuing, he said :
"Only a short time ago, I met three British Americans going home on a siugle vessel, after having served three Years in the war, and-huving left scores of their companions behind to enrich the soll. At Washington I met with a brave nephew of one of my late colleagues in the Legizlature of Nova Scoti:, who had held the rank of lieutenant in a Massachusetts regiment, with only one leg to take back to his home instead of two. I met another veteran from my province who had fought in twenty battles, and was on his way home. In my own family and person I have suffered not a little by this unhappy rebellion. I have five boys, and one of them took it into his head to enter your army. He has now been for nearly two years in the 23 rd Ohio Regiment. and had foutht in all the battles in which that regiment has been engaged during that period. He was in both the great batties under General Sheridan, in which General Early's forces were scattered, and the Shenandoah Valley cleared.
This was to show that a large proportion of our people were enlisted in the American army during that time. Those who seemed to know the best siy that no less than $40,(00)$ (imadians were enlisted in the American army between IN(i) and 1864, which proves conclusively that the exorias to the United States from Canada was geater hefore that time than it has leen at any perion since that time. He conclurles in this way
"The man who arows such $n$ sentiment"-
That is the sentiment of anmexation between Canada and the United States, which they were aiming at then as they are now-
" The man who avows such a sentiment will be sconted from society by his best friends. What other treatment would a man destrve who should turn taitor to his Sovereign and his govermment, and violate for pecmiary advantage all obligationis to the country which gave him birth? Jou know what y nu call Copperheads, and at nice life ther have of it. Just such a life will the man have who talks treason on the other vile of the lines. The very boy to whom I have alluded"-

His own son-

-" as having fought manfully for the Stars and Stripes would rather blow his own father's brains out than haul down the honoured flag under which he has been horn the flag of his nation and of his fatherlaud. I do not believe there is a young Canadian in the army who does: not honour his own flag as you honour yours, and they would be despised if they did not. If any member of the conrention harbours the idea that in refusing reciprucity to British America they will undermine the loyal feelings of the people of those colonies, he is labouring under a delusion, and doing injustice to a people whose sentiment of loyalty is as indelible as your own.
Those were the sentiments expressed by the veteran Liberal statesman of Nova Scotia. These are the sentiments which now guide the Liberal-Conservative party of the Dominion. He was in favour of fair trade between Canada and the United States. So are we in favour of fair trade between Canadit and the United States, but we are not in favour of any trade which would place the fiscal policy of this Dominion in the hands of the American people or any policy which would destroy the factories of this Dominion, any policy which would destroy the best interests of the agriculturists of this Dominion, and the interests of the coal miners and the fishermen. I know whereof I speak when I say that the poor farmers of this Dominion-not the bloated monopolists among the farmers but the poor farmers-as well as the poor fishermen aud the poor miners and the labourers and artizans wonld suffer under unrestricted reciprocity with the United States. We have a different conntry here from what they haveron the otherside of the line, and it requires great attention to induce our people to remain at home. Our people, under the cold climate and the disadvantages under which they labour, require words of encouragement and require some hope to be held out to them to remain at home. They do not want to be told, as the hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) said the other night practically: Thank God that the National Policy has been of advantage to the people who have been driven across the line, because there they have enjoyed prosperity and matde homes for themselves and their families. Is that the way for a leading statesman to encourage our people to live at home? I say this question should be dropped out of Canadian politics. I think every sensible man, woman and child on either side of politics will agree that the system of continuously legging for unrestricted reciprocity or any other system of reciprocity should cease, as for twentysix years past we have been knocking at the door of the United States and making advances from time to time, though not one single proposition for fair trade have we received from them up to the present time. I would say to my hon. friend the philosopher from Bothwell that he should call his dogs of political war off this question. It is useless for them to fight over the shadow of a policy which is hell by the American eagle soaring in the heavens. It is just as useless for him to try to take the bone from the great American eagle, or to grasp its shadow which overshadows this Dominion, as to get fair reciprocity with the United States as long as they refuse to grant it to us: and, further, if the young roosters which crow on the other side would discontinue their discussion of a question over which they have no control, it would he better for all concerned. This question is absolutely umder the control of the Americans and if that is so, on this side we are continuously telling our people that wecannot live without some kind of a reciprocity, that this country is going to the dogs without it, that it is impossible for us to live without it so long as this blue ruin howl is used lyy any political party, so long will our people be discouraged to remain amongst us, so long will the immigration agencies in Europe be encouraged to act against Canada by inducing people not to come to this country with all its ruin and devastation, but to goto a country, like the United States, where they will be able to make a living. I hold, with all patriotic Canadians in this Dominion, that any people who are frugal, industrious and honest, can make as good a living here as on the other side; and I say again that I hope the discussion of this fad u: ill cease to occupy the attention of this House after this session of Parliament.

Mr. TUPPER. With the consent of the House I will ask permission to make a personal explanation in reference to the remarks that I made in this debate. The Hansard was perfectly correct in reporting me as quoting, in the speech I delivered the other day, from Lord Iurham's Report. In the excitement of the moment I alluded to Lord Durham's Report as if I were quoting in the language of that report. I wish to say that I made a mistake, I was quoting from a book I held in my hand which refers to different passages of the report, but the language is not by Lord Durham, it is the language of C. J. Koe, who wrote a book entitled "Bonds of Disunion." In citing from the report I gave, of course, his own language, but it was the language of Mr. Roe based on Lord Durham's Report, and not the language of the report.

CONTROVERTEI ELECTION-WELLAND.

sir JOHN THOMPSON. Mr. Speaker, the matter connected with the County of Welland has to be mentioned to-day.

Order for resuming adjourned debate on motion of Mr. Tisdale, (March 23rd) reat.

Mr. (iERMAN. Mr. Speaker, before this motion is put to the House, I would like, with the consent of the House, to shortly express my own reason for sitting here at present, as I am now doing. There is no donbt that portions of that resolution which has been read are, in the main, correct. There was an election trial held in Welland, and at that election trial the judges declared the seat vacant by reason of the corrupt act of an agent. On that judgment being delivered, the counsel for the respondent at that trial stated that he was satisfied with that Jecision, it being done with the belief, at any rate, that no further costs would be incurred in the action and that no further proceedings would be taken. I do not remember-and I do not think it is a fact-that there was any consent or undertaking that no appeal should le had from that decision. The petitioner then went on with the charges for disqualification for personal corruption. It was then found by the judges that a corrupt act had been committed by myself, and I was personally disqualified. An appeal was taken to the Supreme Court, and notice of appeal was given. That notice of appeal, Sir, was not, in any way, limited. It is not necessary, as I understand it, under the Controverted Elections Act to give notice of appeal at all, as the depositing of the money with the registrar of the court where the petition is filed is a stay to all proceedings, and the seat is not vacant until that appeal is finally disposed of in the supreme Court. However, in this case the notice of appeal was given, and not limited to any particular part orany particular portion of the judgments. Subsequently after the case $u$ as inscribed for hearing, a notice limiting the appeal certainly was given by solicitors for the appellant in the Supreme Court. That was done simply for this reason: That had the appeal not been limited it would have been necessary to have printed all the evidence taken at the trial, and in order to avoid the enormons cost of printing all the evidence that was taken at the trial, counsel thought it alvisable to print just such evidence as bore on the matter of dist pualification. as that was practically the only matter which we wished the Suprome Court to pass upon. That notice was given on the 9th of February. It speaks for itself, anl it could not hare been the notice primarily given, because the notice primarily given under the statute, if any notice is required, must be made within eight days after the judgment is rendered, and which eight days would have expired some time early in Jinuary. The matter came up, Sir, in the Supreme Court on an application made by counsel for appellant, which application the julges of the court did not seem desirous of entertaining. It was stated by counsel for myself that we were not claiming the seat, that the argument would only be as to the ruestion of disqualification, and that in his mind no harm could occur because he possibly might have been labouring unler the mistaken idea, as I think, that a writ could be issued. It was then stated by the judges of the Supreme Court, as 1 am instructed and believe, that the fact of our only appealing as to the disqualitication made no difference: that I was the legal member for the Comity of Welland until that appeal was disposed of, and that the fact of limiting it to the question of disfualification made no difference. I have had. Sir, not a juilgment it is true, but an expression of an opinion of the judges of the Supreme Court that I was the member for the County of Welland. I cannot understand on what reading of the statute the trial judges sent out a report to you, Mr. Speaker. They appear to hare been under the impression that there was some ambiguity about the clanse in the amendment of last session, but I myself can see none, a:nd I cannot understand why that report was sent to the Speaker. However, Sir, I think that the fact of the report having been sent to the Speaker, strengthens the position which I take in this matter. A constituency, as I under stand it, is either represented or it is unrepresented. If it is unrepresented, it is the right and the daty of the Speaker to at once issue a writ as soon as that is officially brought to his notice. If it is represented, then the representative has the right, and it is his duty, to take his seat on the floor of this House as the representative of the people. Now, Sir, it remains only to be settled and to be discovered if possible, whether that county is represented or not represented. Knowing that that report went to the Speaker, knowing the expression of opinion by the judges of the Supreme Court, seeing in the Empire newspaper a statement that $I$, with others whose cases were in the Court of Appeal, was entitled to take my seat, knowing that my name was on the division list in this House, knowing that I was recognized as the nember for Welland by the members of the Government, because I was contimuously getting any number of reports, particularly from the lepartment of Agriculture, to circulate through my county, knowing that I was recognized by the members of the Government and by the Speaker of this House, as the member for the County of Welland; J certainly believed, and I believe now that I have a legal right to a seat in this House. I can say more, Sir, that if I have uot a leggal right to sit here. I certainly am not interfering with the legal rights of any other gentleman to sit here. That is the simple statement. I came down here with the intention of taking my seat early in the session, but learning that the supreme Court had adjourned from the Tuesilay hefore Ash Wednesday until the following Monday, and believing that on the following Monday, without having any suggestion that such wouli be the case-b, int believing that julgment would he given in this case on the following Honlay, and desiting to avoid if possible any newspaper criticism or any alverse criticism of any kind. 1 thought it better not to takemy seat pending thedecision of the court, which would, in my opinion. be only for a few days. But when I found that the court had adjourned until the 4th April, then to give judgment, and at the urgent request of the electors of the County of Welland, and believing that I had a right to sit in this House, I came here and took my seat. That is the simple statement of the facts. 1 may be wrong in the law. but it is a legal question, and it seems to me to be one which ought not to be decided by a vote in this Honse at present. However, that is for the House to say. I may be wrong, and if I am, I am willing to alide by the decision of the majority, knowing full well as I do, that what I have done meets with the approvil of the majority of the people of Welland, and knowing further, Sir, that the people of Welland who a year abo returned me by a majority of $47 \%$, are willing merease that majority on the first opportunity:

Mr. MASSON. After hearing the statement which has just been mate to the House liy the party interested, it seems to me that there is very little for this House to decide. The facts almitted by him alone show that so far as the seat for the riding of Welland is concerned, it has beet dectared vacant, and he has consented to that declaration. In face of that consent, it seems to me the height of folly to argue that he is entitled to be present in this Honse. Now, the gentleman in making this statement cavilled with the record on an immaterial point. He said that his comesel at that trial had consented to and accepted the recision of the judge. He did not remember personally consenting. The papers on the Table show that Mr. Cassel was his counsel ; that Mr. Cassel, after the delivery of the judgment which declared the seat vacant, said: "I may say that I had discussed the matter with Mr. German while Your Lordships had retired, and we are perfectly satistied with the correctness of your judgment." That is, not only were the counsel satisfied, but the client was satisfied; and he said: "There is no intention to appeal.: Now, theseare the plain words of the record, and I think it is trifling with that record to say that there was no consent or oo expression of opinion that there would be no appeal. What followis: The counsel for the prosecution, Mr. Blackstock, then said: "There is no reason to deal with any further charges, and I will cenfine myself to personal charges." Following that straight acceptance of the judgment is the straight declaration that the personal charges will be proceeded witlno shirking of the record, no quibbling, but a straightforward statement. Further, I would call your attention particularly to what follows. Mr. Justice Rose said: "With reference to two charges which are lefore us, judgment is not asked in respect to them." There were two cases in which the evidence had been taken pro and con, and they were heid in reserve for judgment if necessary ; and the judge calls attention to the fact that it will lee umecessary in that state of affairs to consider these questions and deliver judgment on them. Mr. Blackstock, on behalf of the petitioner, says: "In view of the announcement of my learned friend, I do not ask for juidg. ment on that." There is as clear an acceptance, as formal contract as can be made hetween man and man, in which the genteman who is chargen, declares by himself and his counsel, both being present in the court. that they accepted the juilg. ment that the seat was racated. Now, I will call at. tention to another little piece of quiblling, because 1 can call it by no other nane, in which the gentleman has stated that there was no necessity of a notice of appeal, and no necessity of limiting. The gentleman was evidently speaking without the record. Had he read the Slst section of the Act in respect of Controverted Elections, he would have seen there that not only was the deposit necessary, but also the notice. The third sub-section of that section provides, that the party appealing shall give the notice, and that he may if he desires limit the subject of such appeal to any special and defined question or questions. Now, the counsel said there shonld be no appeal. The case proceeded, and the dispualitication followed. An appeal was lodged against the disqualification, and what was the form of the notice? We have it in the papers brought down, in the case presented at the supreme Court, in the most emphatic language, and I will read this notice from beginining to end:

"To Messrs. Meredith, Clarke, Bowes, ${ }^{\text {S }}$ : Hilton,
In the face of such a notice as that, limiting the appeal pursuant to the statute in that behalf, how can it he said that there isany question now whether that seat is vacant or not: It had been declared vacant ; the respondent in the court below had consented to that decision, and in pursuance of it and in accordance with the agreement of his counsel, he limited the appeal. But we find that, in spite of that appeal, it is now claimed thai he has a right to take his seat. But we go a step further in the case presented to the supreme Court, as appears from the papers lying on the Table. It will be noticed that all the evidence in relation to the personal charges was omitted on appeal to the Supreme Court, and only those portions of the evidence that relate exclusively to the personal charges. I do not understand by what system of argument or reasoning or quibhling it can le urged that, because a man's name appears on the division roll, becamse he appears to have, by courtesy or otherwise, received papers from various departments of this House or Government, he is entitled to a seat in this House. There are many things which declare a seat vacant. Thereare a few in which, in very emphatic language, an election is leclared roid, and provision is made that a report shall be made to the Speaker, which is final, and which is immediately acted upon by the Speaker. Thereare, however, namerous other cases in which it is not so clearly detined. I would refer you to the authority on parliamentary procedure recognized in this House, page 180:
" A question arose in the session of 1887 as to the powe: of the House to order the issue of a writ when seats are racated by a decision of a court. It was duoubted whether such an order was necessary under the Canadian Election Act. Subsequently Mr. Speaker Anglin took uccasion then to inform the House that, on lonking into the question, he found that the English Controverted Election Act left the power in the Hnuse to order the immediate issue of the writ, on being inforued of the vacancy through the decision of the court. The Canadian statute, on the other hand, made it the express duty of the Speaker to order the issue of the writ. It is now the practice for the Speaker to inform the House immediately that he has given the order for the issue of the writ for the new election, and in all cases not specified by the statute, the Honse has control over the fsue of the, writ, and mas order the Speaker to issue his warrant."
This is really the crucial point in any technicalities that may arise here. The statute lays down that, on certain reports being presented to the Speaker, there heing no appeal and so on, the Speaker forthwith issues his warrant. It does not provide for all cases, and it does not provide, unfortunately, for the Speaker acting in such a case as this, and the Speaker, I would say wisely, upon reseiving the report it is now contended he should not have received, did not act upon it. But there is no direct authority in the statute, if I real it aright, for the sending of this notice to the Speaker in this particular casc. There was an appeal, a limited appeal. The trial judges knew not what that appeal was. There was no notice given to them. The notice was given to the other side of the case. The judges have before them as a fact that it has lneen appealed. What that appeal is they know not, hut what that fact is we know by the papers on the Tahle of this Honse. It camnot be contended that the hon. gentleman who has just spoken and given his explanation to the House did not know it. When the facts, plain to the view of the House, are before them, such as ly laying the papers on the Table, it then is within the province of the House to deal with the matter, and I would refer to the Riel case in 187., quoting from the same authority, page 196. We find that Riel was returned to parlianent during recess. We find that som after the House met in 1875. Mr. Mackenzie laid on the Table the exemplitication of the Julgment Roll of outlawry, and then moverl:
"That it appears by the said record that Louis Riel, a member of this Honse, has been adjudged an outlaw for felons."
This motion having leen agreed to, the writ was ordered to be issued. There is in principle an exact parallel hetween the two cases. There are certain facts which by law marle that seat vacant, the same as in this case. The judges declared it vacant, and the responilent accepts that declaration, and declates that he has no intention to appeal. These facts being proved to this House, it is in their province clearly to pronounce upon them. There are no disputed facts. The gentleman himself did not deny them. He cavils over the form of notice, over the form of agreement, but here is the statement his counsel made in his own presence. I really do think that, after this statement of facts, there is really no room for assuming otherwise than that the seat is racant. It has been declared so by report. That declaration has not been appealed against, and were the appellants in the Supreme Court to-morrow to be judged successful and the appeal allowed to its fullest extent, that would not fill the seat. It could not fill the seat. The seat has been declared vacant. The declaration has not been appealed against, and the seat is vacant to the knowledge of the person attempting to fill it. I do not intend to occupy the time of the House any longer on this question. The facts present a brutal argument, and leyond that I do not think it necessary to go. I do not think that any amount of sophistry or argument can alter the facts. They stand there unchallenged. They stand there in their nakedness, and it cannot in the face of the world for a moment be pretended that seat is not vacant. That being the case, the attention of the Speaker being called to it, the facts being brought before the House, the papers being laid on the Table, it rests with the House to order the writ to issue.

Mr. LAURIER. I have waited for some time expecting that perhaps the Minister of Justice would give his own opinion to the House upon this matter. However, as far as I have a personal opinion to express to the House upon this case, it seems to me to be one which involves matters of fact as well as of law. I do not pretend at all to review the argument which the hon. gentleman has delivered to-day, or the argument which was delivered some time agoby the hon. member for south Norfolk (Mr. Tisdale), but. taking the facts which have been placed before the House to be accurate, the question would follow whether the conclusions which those gentlemen have arrived at are also accurate. There may be occasion to accept or to dispute theseconclusions, buthon. gentlemenareaware that there are iliscrepancies in regard to matters of fact letween the hon. member for Norfolk (Mr. Tisdale) aml the gentleman who claims the seat for Welland (Mr. (ierman). Under the circumstances, I would suggest to the learler of the Honse, the Minister of Justice, that we should follow the precedents which have been established when a seat of an hon. member has leen impugned on previous occasions, and to refer the matter to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. It seems to me to be impossible for any hon. member of this House to go over all the documents which have been brought down from the Supreme Court and other sources, but the Committee on Privileges and Elections, which has always been the instructor of the House in matters of this kind. should, I think, be requested to look into the facts anl the law and report to the House upon them. I, therefore, move in amendment :

That all the words in the last paragraph after the word - facts" be struck out, and that it be resolved that the papers laid on the Table of the House be referrel to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.
sir JOHN THOMPSON. I refrained from rising at the time my hon. friend says he was waiting for me to rise, lecause, although I had followed very closely the observations of the hon. gentleman who claims the seat, I did not understand that he varied any statement of fact which had heen previously made and upon which this matter must be lecided, and I was waiting until any hon. member of the House would challenge the legal principles laid down hy my hon. friend who moved the resolution last Wednesday (Mr. Tisdale) and my hon. friend from Girey (Mr. Misson) who supporten that resolution this afternoon. It appears tome that there is an uncontested decision of a competent tribunal that the seat for Welland is vacant-uncontested, not only because it was accuiesced in by counsel in the presence of the respondent saying that no other result could have been arrived at, and also by the respondent stating that he was satisfied with the juilgnent and did not intend to appeal, but because he deiiberately limited his appeal to the one question of his personal disqualification, as appears by the records before the House. That appears to me to establish that the court decided finally, without appeal, without contest, without the slightest protest from the gentleman who addressed us this afternoon, that he was not elected for the County of Welland. Now the case comes before the Supreme Court on the question of his personal disqualification. That gentleman has stated to us that the judges declared that he had a right to hold his seat in the meantime. Unless I am grossly misinformed, the judges gave no such decision.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). He did not say a decision, but an intimation.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I am informed that the judges expressed no opinion on the argument, but that, when the matter was lorought to the notice of the court and a hearing was sought to be obtained on the appeal in advance of its usual course, or in advance of the printing being completed, this was urged by the counsel for the gentleman who addressel us this afternoon, in the course of the discussion which then took place before the Supreme Court. This is what, I am informel, oceurred. The counsel for Mr. German was urging before the Supreme Court that further time should be given him for his printing. The court were of opinion at first that he should be allowed further time, because the question did not affect the seat, and a new writ might issue pending the appeal, but counsel for the petitioner pointed out that this was not so, and it was only on the solemn assurance given in open court, that Mr. (ierman woull not take his seat, that the supreme Court allowed the indulgence which they did in regard to putting in the appeal look and the factum at a later time. Iadmit that any assurance given by Mr. (ierman, whether lefore the court of first instance or before the Supreme Court here. as to what he would do, does not bind him if he has a right to his seat. I merely make these explanations to the House on my information in opposition to the statement which that gentlemen made, that anything which transpired before the Supreme Court here gave him any right to occupy his seat pending the appeai. I believe the hon. gentleman was not present when the argument took place before the court, and I understand from his statement this afternoon that he depended entirely upon the report in the newspapers for his information as to what took place before the supreme Court. I am, therefore, not at all in a position to charge him, even if I wished to do so, with having wilfully misstated the facts to the House. I contend that that which he supposes took place before the supreme Court of Canada should not influence the julgnent of the House at this time, or at any other stage, because the information which I have, and which, I believe, is accurate and can be confirmed by the records of the court, if necessary, leads to a totally opposite ciew. Now, coming to the point that there is any question as to the decision of a competent tribunal that the seat is vacant and that Mr. German is not duly elected, we have to enquire, I think, why it is that a writ has not been issued. It has not been issued merely because the machinery of the law does not provide for this House getting the information before it as to what the lecision was. In consequence of one phase of the case having been appealed from-not touching the validity of the election of Mr. German at alltu consequence of there heing an appeal upon that phase of the case, the information had not reached this House until the records were brought down in response to a return asked for by my hon. friend from South Norfolk (Mr. Tisdale) the wther day. The House had not the information upon which to order a writ to issue. It seems to we that we possess that information now, and that, provided the farts are not disputel, provided there is no doubt in the minds of the House as to the questions of law involved, the duty of the House is to orier the writ to issue. I do not think there can le any weight attached to the argument presented by Mir. German in the House this afternoon, that if he was occupying a seat here he was not interfering with the rights of any person else. Sir, it is interfering with the right of the electors of the County of Welland to have the seat unrepresented, if that case has reachell a stage when a writ ought to issue. Precisely the same argument might be made by any person, who had never run an election at all, or been put in nomination, coming in and occupying the seat for the County of Welland, lecause it happened to be vacant and because a decision on one phase of the case had not been arrived at. Now, I may suggest to the House two or three considerations which seem to me to throw some light upon the question raised by my hon. friends from Norfolk (Mr. Tisdale) and from Grey (Mr. Masson), and which seem to me to show that their conclusions are sound. In order to see how reasonabie their argument is, and how reasonable their conclusion is, the House has only to consider this question: The supreme Court has reserved judgment on the appeal by Mr. German, until about the th April, and let us ask ourselves what result may follow from that judguent. If the judgment goes against Mr. German, the sentence of dis, ualification remains, and the seat of course is racant. But let us suppose that he succeeds in his appeal, all grounds then for his pretending to keep that seat, are gone. How, then, can he reasonably expect to oceupy a seat ${ }^{\text {in }}$ in this Honse pending an appeal which, if decided in his favour, must remove him from this Honse altogether: Let us test the case from another point of view. Let us suppose. ats might have been the case, that the returning officer had been made a party to this petition, that the petition had been presentel against the sitting member and the returning ofticer, that the judgment of the court declarei that the member had not heen duly elected, and that Mr. German's counsel siid that that was a redsonable conclusion to reach on the evidence, that he could expect no other result, and that he did not intend to assert an appeal, and that he asserter no appeal. But suppose that the returning officer hal been condemned by the court for some misconduct and had asserted an appeal to the Supreme Court, precisely the same state of facts would have ariseu. You, Mr. Speaker, would have had no report from the judges-for 1 am presenting the case on the supposition that the report which was sent to yon, was sent by inadvertence, as it prohahly was-you and the House would have had no record showing there had been a derision, you wonld not have issued your warrant, and it would have remained for this House to send for the records and, finding that there was, as there is in this case, an undisputed judgment, that the sitting member was not duly electel, to have issued the writ for a new election, notwithstanding the fact that the returning ofticer had appealed from the judgment on some nther branch of the case. I find now, however, that the result of my pausing to hear from my hon. friend, the leader of the Opposition. has heen to show me that he does controvert - and I presume from what he said, that his friends do controvert the correctness of these riews, at any rate they dis. pute the conclusion which I have arrived at, in common with my friends from Norfolk and from Grey. I think that the action which this Honse ought to take under the circumstances, is that which we have been accustomel to follow in times past in analogous cases-that it woold be safer, better, and more dignified-and I am sure in this $I$ will have the acquiescence of my hon. friends from Grey and Norfolk-to pass this motion to refer the matter to the Committee of Privileges and Elections. The delay will not prejudice any important interests which may le involved. to any serions extent, it will he following a precedent I have aluays thought was the wisest to follow in dealing with questions ats to the right of members to sit in this Honse, and it will certainly le the lest way to arrive at a delitherate julgment upon a question in respect of which we art all more or less liable to be swayed be prolitical feelings. provided we- do not give to it the care and deliberation which is necessary to secure the thest adrice.

Mr. MILLS (Pothwell. I ampleased to see that the Minister of Justice has concurred in the recommendation of my hom. friend that this matter shoulh go to the Committee on Privileges and Flectims. While I would not like to say one word that would seem to countenance the right of any party to take a seat which he ought not to retain. I im very anxions that this House, in dealing with the question of the right of a member to sit here, should not aet hastily, and should not undertake to deprive by resolution, such as is proposed to the House, the right of any party to remain here, however technical that right may de. It seems to me of the utmost consequence that a majority in Parliament ought not to undertake to exercise arlitrarily the right of declaring a seat racant. Now, I unterstand in this case, that at least one of the judges of the Supreme Court did state that he thought this seat was mot vacant, that so long as an appea: was pending it was not possible for a report to be mate in accordance with the requirements of the statute, by the judges in the first instance, and that until such report was made, the House could not lee seized with the facts until the Court of A ppeals reporteit their conclusion to the House. It seems to ine that where the law has provided a methol of procedure and that procedure is adequate to meet the case, even though there should lee some delay, the Honse should not, from a mere disposition to act precipitately, undertake todeclarea seat vacant that has not alrearly been mate so in law. If any party undertakes to sit in Parliament without having a right to sit here, there is a provision that the seat may be attacked, and his rights to the seat may be ascertainel provisionally, by a proweeding before a properly constituted legal tribunal; and so the House itself is never without a remedy to protect itself against anything like usurpation. There is one consideration for which it seems to me the law has some regard, and which the Minister of Justice, in the observiations he has addressed to the House, has passedover. Mr. German's seat was attacked. The juiges who tried the case in the first instance declared the seat vasant, and declared Mr. German disqualifiel from again being a candidate. It seems to me that where the law gives an appeal, and where the law has provided that there shall be no report during the pendancy of that appeal, even though it is special and limited, the law to some extent protects the rights which belong to a citizen to be a candidate, where he is not legally disqualified, and where it is the desire of the community he should be such. It may be that Mr. German will be vhe choice of the electors in case he is not disqualitied, and the delay of a few days occupied in enquiring into the matter and arriving at a decision, after full investigation of the facts and of the law applicable to the case, is certainly a safer course than for the House to undertake to deal in a very hasty manner with so important a matter.

Mr. TINIALE. I shall occupy the time of the Honse only a few minntes, but I feel that under the circumstances I should say something. My sole olvect in bringing the matter before the House Was the fulfilment of a duty which I folt I had to discharge when I lecame cognizant of the facts. I have no desire in this or in any other case to allow any matter I have brought forward to lave the slightest semblance whatever of undue haste, or of not giving the party who is charged the utmost opportunity for full deliberation. I have, therefore, great pleasure in assenting to the propsition mate ly the leader of the House. I may say that I am ghal to be able sometimes, as in this case, to concur with the hon. memker for Bothwell (Mr. Millsi) in the opinion that when a political party has a large majority. whichever party it may be, they should proceed more cautiously and give greater consideration than if they were the weak party. I hold very strong opinions in regard to an attack made on the privileges of Parliament or the rights of members, and, therefore. any suggestions that could be nade by my hon. frieid opposite I should be glad to aceede to at all times, if thereb, there is any chance of throwing fuether light on the matter. I take hut one exception to what the hon. member for Bothurell has sain, inh I camot allow it to pass without calling attention to it. I do not think there is anything in the argument that where a seat is de jarto vacant by decision of a court of law, and assented to by the gentleman who afterwards took his seat, any inference can le drawn that it was the intention of the law that unier such circumstance he should do so.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). I did not say that.
Mr. TISDALE. I gathered that as an inference from what the hom. gentleman sail. If the hon. gentleman did not say that, I accept his denial, because I would be sorry to have any such proposition passed by this House withont challenging it. I wish to say here that the cause that led me to bring it up was the action of the hon. gentleman himself. Had he seen fit to exercise patience-and I say this simply because I feel a strong duty in this matter-had he. knowing all the facts, seen fit to have remained out of the Honse until this matter was settled, far from me wonld it have been to have made any motion in regard to it, because there would have been no breach of the privileges of Parliament. I shall be very glad to have this resolution referred to the Privileges and Elections Committee, because we shall then have a precedent established. If by any possilility it is provel that a gentleman can, under such circumstances, enter this House, then the election law should beamemded in such a way as to render impossible a repetition of the act by any hon. gentleman on either side of the House.

Mr. McCARTHY. I quite concur in what the hon. gentleman, who has just taken his seat, said as to the impropriety, and it appears to me to be a very grave impropriety indeed, of a gentleman occupying a seat in this House under the circumstances detailed here, and when, even upon his own admission, he came here on the technicality he presented to us, and took his seat. At the same time, I cannot help thinking that we cannot, and should not deal with this question here, but should refer it it to the committee specially charged with the guardiansinp of our privileges and the protection of the rights of members. I confess that I have rery strong doubts, inderd, as to the correctness of the view put forward by the hon. member for (irey (Mr. Masson)-I had not the honour to hear the hom. member for Norfolk (Mr. Tistale)as to whether or not the seat is now, as a matter of law, vacant. It is pure technical reasoning, no doubt, but after all these matters generally are technical, and I loubt very much-and I desire to speak on a matter in which all our privileges are concerned with all frankness-whether, until the Supreme Court deals with this question, there can be a judgment, or any report can be received ly the Speaker of the Honse. The statute proviles that the juiges before whom the election case is tried shall, in case there is no appeal, and it is only in cases where there is no appeal, report to you, Sir. the result of the trial. If there is an appeal, inferentially there can lie no such report made. Now, if no such report can le made on acrount of the appeal. how can this House become seized of the facts. and of the opinions arrived at by the jadges until they are ripened into a judgment. There is this to he said, and I agree on this point with the ion. member for Bothwell. that the rights of members must also be always taken into account. The election was dechared roid on grounds stated by the judges, about which there is no dispute, lut there is the possibility that the distualification of a member may not have been properly arrived at, and he tay be relieved of that disqualification, and it would certainly be a rery hard case if that gentleman had not an opportunity of presenting himself when the writ is finally issued. No it is desirable that this House shouli not act too hastily, and that the case should lee referred to the Committee on Privileges amd Elections, hy which, after it has been considered and enquired into with care and consileration, a report will he made that in future will enable us to act with precision on this subject. I agree also that the law should le amended, not in cases in which the question of disqualification is still in doubt, l,ut. When it is admitted by a genteman that he had not been properly elected, he should not lee permitted to come and assist in the delilerations of this assembly.

Amendment agreed to.

SUPPLI-THE BUDRET.

House resmmed adjourned dehate on the proposed motion of Mr. Foster :
That Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair for the Honse to go again into Committee of Supply.

Mr. MILL: (Bothwell).' Mr. Speaker, it is not my intention to enter into any elaborate discussion or review of the financial statement mate by the Minister of Finance. It is clear, I think, to the House, that the hon. gentleman, with the Government, and those who support him and them, have got back upon their olil grounds. We have had in the speech of the Minister of Finance, the old music and the old instruments with scarcely any variations. The hon. gentleman has told the House, that the diminntion of the deposits in the savings banks are no indication of the diminished prosperity of the country. When the amount in the (iovernment savings lanks increased it was an evidence of the increased wealth of the people, anl when that amount has diminished it is no evidence of increased piverty or diminished wealth. When the crops of the agricultural population are good it is an indication of the wisdom and care of the Alministration, and when the crops of the agriculfurists are hud, it is the fault of Providence, and the Administration ought not in any legree to be held responsible. We are told from the Treasury benches, and by the gentlemen who support the ministry, that industries ought to le fostered. They are well iostered in the Province of New Brunswick: they ought to le fostered orer the entire Dominion: and we are also told that our commercial relations with the United States have recently enjoyed the fostering care of the Alministration. Now, Sir, we are having some new phases in the tactics of the Conservative leaders: we are having a new departure in parliamentary govermment : we are having new constitutional usages introduced and establisherl. and I suppose !efore many years alanse, shoulil the hon. gentlemen opposite continue to administer the Govermment, we will have a complete change in chir parliamentary system. It used to be, and it is still in the United Kingdom, the practice under our system of parliamentary government. that the House of Commons, the ionly which represents the nation, is the most potent council to arvise the Sovereign. It is that lindy which is supposed to exercise a piramonnt intluence over every other institution in the State. But. Nir, this is no longer the calse, so far as the Parliament of Canada is concerned. This Parliament is now supposed to be a mere registering brily, to register the wishes of the Alministration that may be expressed and acyuiesced in. some time hefore final action is taken, if the Administration finds it convenient, or Parliament may be called upon to sanction, as a matter of form, what has already leeen tinally determined. So far as the prerogatives of the Crown are concerned, we are having, in a large degree, a revival of the cloctrine of high prerogative. We are having introluced into this comutry, in the practice of the Government those notions of prerogative that led to the great civil war in the time of Charles the First, and that were supposen to le altogether overthrown by the revolution of 1688. It is true, sir, that the hon. gentlemen on the Treasury benches, are not claiming these extraordinary powers on behalf of the Sovereign or the Sovereign's representative. hut they are claiming then on behalf of that viceroy who exercises authority over the sovereign. and so we are having a parliamentary committee known as the Calinet or Alministration, usurping all these powers that were at one time denied to the sovereign: usurping them in the name of the sovereign to be exercised hy the Sovereign, always upon the alvice of the Government whose advice the Sovereign is not at liberty to disregard. Here, this extraomlinary power is actually in the hands of the Aclministration. It inas been exercised by the Administration, and in a way that diminishes the usefulness of Parliament, and seriously affects the interest which the people take in the conduct of the fiovernment of the country. There is nothing, in my opinion, of more importance in the maintenance of our parliamentary system, and in the protection of the conmmuity against serious abuses on the part of those in authority, than the maintenance of a bealthy pubific spirit in the community. and that canmos :ontinue to exist when the fovemment acts without the sanction of the people's representatives: when they intimate to the representatives of the perple in Parliament and to the electors at lurge. that they may give their mind a holiday. that the diovernment of the country is in safe hamb. that their interests will be properly caren for, and so they need give themselves little or no trobible alwut the combluct of public affairs I notice. Sir. that the $"$ new colony, $\because$ as it has been designated liy the Conservative organs, whoncupy seats on this side of the House supporting the Alminist ration--I netice that the " new colony praise the present state of things. They praise the delegation to Wiashington, not for what they atcomplished, hut for what they failed toateomplish. There has leen a general expression of rejoicing. not lncaanse the fovernment succeerled in doing anything. but because the fovernment did nothing. and lecamise those who went to Wiashington came back alle todeclare that they hal unt succeeded. and that they did not see hefore them any prospect of success. They had the wisiom to fail. ami by failing to protect the farming population against these calamities, which if they hall stleceeded. would have ineritally followed from that success. This has lreen the declaration of nearly every hon. gentleman whohasspokenin support of the Ailministration. One hon. gentleman after another has arisen in the Houseand declared that reciprocity with the Linited States in the agricultural pronlacts of the two conntries, would have resuited in a very serious calamity to the Canadian farmers, aml sa) I have leen ar a loss to understand why these gentlemen shonhl. umler these circumstances, have gone to Washington at all. I am unable to milerstamd why they should have gone there for the purpose of oltaining from the (iovernment of the Cnited States a declaration that they entirely agreed with the Minister of Finatuce-that they did not see how he was to raise revenue if he succeerled, and that he had better maintain the present condition of things. Why should not these hon. gentlemen who have recently come ints Parliament. praise the Administration? They maty say to the diovermment, and to some of the supporters of the Alministration in Parliament, amd some perhaps out of Parliament, that it is " Thou that hast made us, aml not we ourselves, and we are the sheep of thy pasture." These hon. gentlemen sit here by the grace of the Aiministration, and by the favour of some hou. gentlemen whos support the Administration: and there is no doubt that those potent influences which have brought so large a number of recruits to the other side. have proved of inestimable alvantage to the hom. gentlemen who have recently obtained seats in this House. The hon. gentlemen who have spoken in support of the Minister of Finance on this subject find it very difficult to spell free trade and non-intercourse in one word. Punch, many years ago, represented Mr. Disraeli as a chameleon, on which the words free trate and protection were mixed up together. Now, the Canadian chameleon has not been a very active animal, anl there is not much chance of convincing the community that the Government are in favour of reciprocity with our neighbours, and, at the same time opposed to putting the larger number of products, which may be interchanged letween the two countries, upon a free list. The hom. gentlemen who have spoken are, no doubt, pleased. for another reason lesides that of protecting the farmers against the calamity of having a free market in the United states. Theycan use their oll sperches. Those speeches. Nir, are not in danger. The visit to Wishington has not remilereal them ahsolutely useless, and so far as we can julge from what has leen said by the Finance Minister. they may serve a nseful purpose to those hon. gentlemen for many sessions to come. At all events. the will. nodoult. serve them as long as the hon. gentlemen who now oceupy the Treasury henches, continue tosit there. There is to le no further effort at neerotiating a reciprocity treaty with our neighlours across the lorder. The march has taken place: the capital of the Cnited Siates has leen visited : the attempted negotiations have failed. Thediovernment have convinced themselves, and their supporters,and they have convinced Mr. Blaine and lieneral Foster. that there is uo chance whatever of success: amd so this whole business is emlen, and the tiovernment musi remain where they are. They must retain the ode policy, they must sing the old tunes, their friends must support the old lealers. ami wave the ohl hags: and that is their business. They are contined within very narrow limits: their work of investigation and retlection is at anemi : and all they have to do is to elefemd the fortress, retain the hon. gentlemen who support them. and nie the ohlarms for the maintename of the citatel. Well. Nir. I do not exactly see the matter in that light. Whatever may have leen the intentions of the $\mathrm{i}_{\text {iovernment - }}$ and we can hardly suppose now that they were serious or that they ever expected an acoomplish more than they did accomplish-it is pretty clear that their frienis who followedaml appurted them. did not take the same comfortalle view of the situation. as long as the negotiations were theatened. or were in progress. They felt some uneasiness. They were inclined to think that in some way or other, the hon. gentle?nen on the Treasury lenches: had got off the old path, that they were deviating from that course to which the economic orthonloxy of that side of the House required that they shoulit adhere. and that they were in danger of being lost : and they could never understand how it was that those gentlemen should stray sofar away from home as to go to, Washington to negotiate almat a business. which, if it succeeded, would prose so detrimental to the interests of Canada. That was their position. They supposed that somesorceress had got possession of the Finance Minister-- That some false Duassa, who hal mberl herself in garments that did not belong to her and appaared young and beautiful, proved, when stripped of these, to le a very offensive, ohi, deformed individual. like the false Duessa in the "Fairy Queen." Now, Sir, the hon. gentleman, no doult, when he started for Wisshington, played the part of the Red Cross Knight. He got to the White Honse, which was, his friends feared, a palace of enchantment : but somehow, by the interposition of some friemelly fairy. the hon. gentleman was released from his ielusions, and became clothed and in his right mind: and he returned without inflicting any serious injury on the people of Canada. That is, in their estimation, the hon. gentleman's position. I reuember some years ago reading a play in which the hero, called. I think. Sir Pertinax Mcsycophant. was anxious to grow suddenly rich. but was puzzel how to sncceed unlesi he found some rich person who would he realy to marry him. So it appearel that he met an old, toothles, phithisicky, ricketty, rheumatic specimen of humanity whose affections he won in a fortnight, whom he married in a month and huried in a year: and then. with a large supply of money, a sorrouful countenance. and a light hears, he was enalled to begin life anew. Now, the hon. gentleman came kack here, and I ams sure it was a melancholy pleasure to him to tell how he failed. He was very much like Sir Pertinax: and not only did we see the melancholy pleasure with which-no donbt with a melancholy countenance. but with real pleasure at heart--he amomeed to the House the failure of the negotiations, but, sir, the pleasure was not a melancholy one to the - new colony. nor to his older followers. It was perfectly clear from the loud cheers with which the announcement was received, that it was a matter of gemuine rejoicing to them. It was a day of emancipation." They were once more free. They could once more, without any limitationsor reservations. declare themselves supporters of the old policy to which they had athered for si, very long a time. Now. sir. there is not only this feature of the discussion. but there is a larger one. if we look at the circumstances which gave rise to this visit to Washington. It is important, in oriler to understami the whole question, to notice how it legam. as well as how it emped. There nats a disedution of Parliament. ami this dissolution, we were informed, was for the purpose of oltaining popular sanction to the very serious business in which these rentlemen were alout to engage. The re wats ner popular sanction sought by the Government for the Franchise Act. There was me, popalar sanction sought when it was propseel to pat the wards of the liovernment. the unenfranchised Indians of thecountry, upon the list of voters. There was no popular sanction required when it was proposed to andertake other constitutional changes of not less importance. Sir, Parliament is elected for a perion of tive years. The law provides for the continuance of Parliament during that perion. The law has entrusted the Crown with the power of disolution, under certain circumstances. What those circumstances are. is pretty well detined by the usages and practices of Parliament and the Crown, in the mother comery. It is not a power that can the lightly usen. It is a power. says Sir Rolert Peel, $\because$ which never can be employer carelessly without blunting the instrument It is of the first consequence that thosie usages and practices should be regarded by the Government, when altising the Crown. to. ${ }^{\text {Gisolve }}$ Parliament. I am not going into a diecusion of the question whether this wass and in what respect it was, an improper dissolution. I referrell to the subject last year. I have no doubt whatever, that the Crown was ladly advised, and that the prerogative of dissolution wia abused, when that power was exercisell in putting an end to the Parliament which preveled this. Honourable gentlemen want popular sunction for negotiations, the character of which was not disclosed. They asked the julgment of the country on a yuestion which the country was not permittel to know and to understand, and they hoper that the people of this country would regaril that as a serious declaration of principle. Now. let us look for a moment at what Parliament did in former years. and what it did without question, in putting upon the statute- $^{\text {un }}$ book what is callel $\because$ the stan?ling offer." There is a law which declared that the liovernment should at any time, under certain circumstances which are set oit in the statute, enter into negotiations with the Unitei States anmi immediately put a large number of articles. inlicatedin the statute. uponthe free list. This lioverument requiret popular sianction for what larliainent had authorizel it to do. Does the (iovernment requize popular sanetion for what has alrealy, wer and over again. received popular sanction? Most asouredly uot: and it can be hardly sind that the Aimimistration were serious when they undertook to appeal to the comitry; and assignet as a reasion for that appeal, that they required popular sanction for the step they were about to take. The hom. gentleman, the Minister of Finance. says that the cioverament are not responsible for the McKinley Bill. Well, I dissent from that riew. We all remember here the discussion we had in 18wi when a large number of articles had leen put upon the free list by the Congress of the Enited States, and we asked that they should be put upon the free list by the Parliament of Canala. They were natural prometucts. They were such as a large number of our perple had a special interest in. especially those who reside in the Maritime Provinces. A large trade was growing up in them. We were exporters of many of them, yet the ciovermment, at the instance of some of their supporters. coted down the propnsition to put :nese articles on the free list. The financial department of the dovernment was then in charge of Sir Leonarl Tilley. Two years later the diovermment entered into negotiations with the Government of Washington alout another matter, the treaty of Ssts. relating to the tisheries. Sir Charles Tupper. who acted as Commissioner for Canada, cane here. He was, I think. Minister of Finance at the time. He wass at all events, a member of the diovernment. and he presiel upon the fiovernment the netessity of putting upon the freelist these articles. that we had propesell should go on the free list two years lefore. He did so. on representations from Washington. The foverument had deelared against doing that particular act. The hon. gentleman who now leads the House had himself spoken against the proposition not two days lefore : but, at the instance of the Minister of Finance, thematterwas presseliou the attention of the fiovernment. They recedel from the position they had taken, aul put those articles on the free list. These articles remained there hut for a single seazon, and were again put back on the list of dutiable articles, and then the McKinley Bill came into operation. Nou, the (invemment for a series of years, acted upon these representations that hail been made. What were they? Why, they had said again and again: If you permit us to pursue a courageons policy, we will hring the Congress of the United states to their knees, we will bring them to their senses: and Sir Charles Tupper, as a member of the Administration, pointed out again and aygain to this House. making a statement which was not accurate but which was nevertheless made, that the mere threat of putting a duty upon American coal had the effect of inducing Congress to take the duty off Canadian coal. He gave that is an instance of the power Canada had, if she choze to exercise it, of completely altering the tistal polity of the inited states The diovernment pursued this system. talking louily, talking very grandy. intimating what we had power so do. intimating the cowardly, the humiliating position we woulthe in if we failed to exercise our power. and to show the Consress of the Cnited States on indepenlence of them. All this tall talk, and these actious ultimately called attention, whicin was mot lefore attracted. to the relations letween Canalla and the linited states. They sperially called the attention of the Ameritan (ionernment to the matter. and the result was the MeKinley Bill. The McKinley Bill. sir, hand its origin in the poliey ami in the language employed liy the hom. gentlemen who sat on the Treasary lethehes and in thehewspapers supporting them. and the hon. gentlemen who voted with them ami ocenpied seats behind them in this House. Well. on the eve of the last general election, these hon. gentlemen amoumed that they were alont to negotiate a treaty with the Cnitedistates. They were diviled between their support of a treaty and their support of the National policy. They were to leave here on the th of March, they were to reach Washington on the bith. at a perimit when it would le known how great a victory they has achieved. and their hamds woukl be strengthened. so that they could successfully carry on their negotiations with the neighhouring Repablic. I think that the correspondence, to which I shall refer, shows that the represemations then made were not such representations ats ought to have been made to the perple of this country: that they were representations atalle for the nurpose of concincing titose who were dissatistied with the policy of protection, that they were alout to receive relief at the hands of the Administration : that the relations between the Enite:? States and Canala had umlersone change : that the diovermment had almmioned their tiscalpoliey of restrietion. and that they were prepared to treat that policy ds a mere means onam end. In fact, we were coll again and again, at the last general election, that the policy of protection was not alopted as a policy goonl in itself hut as a means to an ent ; that their policy ats the realution of $1 \mathbb{E}$ E in fact declared. Was simply a means of forcing the perple of the Cuited states to agree to freer trale relations, and to freer commercial intercourse, with the people of this country. Son let me call the attention of the House to the correspontience which took place between His Fixcellency and the Colonial Ottice, and the Cioverument of this commtry and the British Embussy at Washington, for the purpose of promsting it letter understaming in commercial mattens letween (iamala am the neighbouring Republic. Before commencing to read guotations from this correspondence, let me siy that. although the Government sent an embasy to Washington a little later than they had promised the people of this country that such a delegation or embassy woud lie sant, that delegation or embassy remained there for a remarkably short perion of tinse : it did so because the Secretary of State complained that faith hat not been kept with him, and these gentlemen were put on probation for misconduct before those negotiations could be renewed. On the 3ril November, 1890 , the Colonial Office informet the Foreign Otfice that suggestions had been receivel from the liovernor General by telegram, and that a reply to these suggestions should be telegraphed to the British

Mr. Milss (Bothwell).

Minister at Washington. if the Foreign Othece approved of what the telegram contanet. The words are:
" With instruetions tu eonsider in what way the wish of Canada to be included in any arrangement may best be made. and io telegraph home for consideration the terme of any convention or arrangement which he thinks ceabl be obtained or is desirable."
This wats done by the Foreigen Dtice on the following day, and on the bith Nowemper the Foreign (othice informed the Colomial Office that they hat received $\cdot$ the substance of a draft ermention from Sir Inlian lanamefote that he ham mivately commmiated to Mr. Baine for an artaneementias of tishingymestionsablastotrade regulations hetween the Enited states and Sewfonmilamd. I am to point out that Sir Julian Patencefote defers replying to the empury ablrestel to him as to the best moke of inchaling Canada in sueh an artamgement until he has disensiel the draft with VIr. Blaine." On the brh Dovemiker, a protest is made hy the (ibmalian liovernment asamst the Newfotimilamil treaty. the the dith Sowemintr, the Cimadian liovetmment was informed by Lond Kmutsionl that - Her Majesty s lievermment will chelay the Newfomalland comvention if Canabian negotiations an le entered upon at once on lines propased ly your Ministers as that lath may proced perif pesisu. Any reciprocity treaty between Camadia and the L'nited 'states would, as previously, Ie framed so ats not to plate imports from this cobuntry at a disultantage, amd it is presumed that Canala would wish to retain control over her tariff with a view to presible extension of her trale with the colonies and Englam." There is a suggestion from the colonial Ottice in (romsequence of a communication received front the dioverument of Canala with reference to the proposals of the fiovermment which have not luen hat lwfore this House. What corresponifente was there, that gave rise to this suggestion? How is it that that communication of the 19th Nowember from the (iovernment of Canala has not been land lefore Parliament? The (invemor Cieneral informs Lend Kmutsford on the same day that "the Camadian Ministers are prepared to open negotiations immediately on the lines indicated in my telegram of the 19th." What were those lines indicated in the telegram of the 19th? Why is it that the contents of that telegram have not leen lain lufore this House, and that the fiovernment have not seen proper to commmitate to Parhiment the proposil which is necessary, to emable Parliament to form a julgment upon the conluet of the Administration? They so on to say: " Provided their representatives at $1 \mathrm{I}_{\text {asshington }}$ coull le commissioners asseriated with the British Minister and empowered to neso-: tiate directly instead of being merely delecates." That is theconditionon which they proposed to undertake immediate negotiations. What were the lines indicated in that telegram, nos a word of which has up to this honr been communicated to L'arliament? We are required, on accomut of the statement of the hon. Ninister, to exercise our judgment upon the combluct of the Aiministration, and the papers which are necesary to enable us to form a judgment npon the combuet of the Alministration are not yet laid hefore Parliament. On the enth Norember. 1 No . Lord Stanley informs the British Minister at Washington that

- We are prepared to arrange for commercial relations with the Unitel States being liberally extended and wish that the United States may be so informed. This Government objects to sending delegates to Washington unofficially, as liable to give rise to misunderstanding, but is ready at once to open formal negotiations with the sanction of Her Majesty's Government.
They also say :
"They would negotiate immediately on the lines indicated in my telegram of the 19th if their representatives ceuld be commissioners empowered to negotiate directly instead of merely delegates."
These are the words contained in the despatch of His Excellency upon this very important subject. On the 4th December, Lord Knutsford, in a communication to Lord Stanley, says :
"With reference to your despatch of the 19th of last month, Her Majesty's Government agree to the Minister at Washington being assisted by one or more Canadian plenipotentiaries, if the United States consent to negotiations."
On the 5 th December, Lord Stanley telegraphs Lord Knutsford :
" May we now make definite official proposals through the British Minister to the United States Government."

That communication shows that up to that time no formal communication, or no proposal, had been made by the Govermment of Canada to the British Embassy at Washington with the view to its being communicated to the Government of the United States. Their communication which they proposed as a basis of negotiations on the subject of reciprocity, was with the Colonial Office. That is contained in the telegram of the 19 th November, which has never been laid before Parliament, but the Colonial Office calls forcantion-that they would notundertake to discriminate against British goods, and that they would not enter into such trade relations with the United States as would make it impossible for them to extend their relations with the mother country, or with other British possessions. On the 17 th December, Sir Julian Pauncefote writes to Lord Stanley :
" I am informed by the Secretary of State (Mr. Blaine) that his Government could not respond to the suggestion of a formal commission until a basis of arrangement had been first reached. He expresses a strong desire to conclude a wide reciprocity treaty."
These were the words used in the despatch of the British Minister at Washington, that Mr. Blaine desired to conclude a wide treaty of reciprocity. He does not limit the (fovernment to any specific kind of treaty except that it ought to be a treaty mutually beneficial and comprehensive in its provisions. Lord Stanley informs Lord Knutsford, on the 13th December, upon what terms the Government are prepared to negotiate. Now, the fact that that telegram of the 19 th is suppressed, and this formal despatch of the 13th December is given, goes to show that the contents of the telegram did not correspond with the contents of the despatch. Let us know what were the Government's first impressions. What were the views, what were the proposals in contemplation as a basis for commercial arrangements with the United States, as suggested in this telegram of the 19th November? The House has a right to know what views the Government entertained on the subject at that time. Now, this despatch of the 13th December reads as follows:-
"I have the honour to send to your Lordshin to-day a telegraphic message of which the following is the substance:"
