That telegraphic message of the 13 th is not here.
"With reference to my telegram of the 10th inst., this Government is desirous ... to propose a joint commission, such as that of 1871, with authority to deal without limitation and to prepare a treaty respecting the following subjects:-
"1. Renewal of the Reciprocity Treaty of 1854 , with the modifications required by the altered circumstances of both countries, and with the extensions deemed by the commission to be in the interest of Canada and the United States.
" 2 . Reconsideration of the treaty of 1888 with respect to the Atlantic fisheries, with the aim of securing the free admission into the United States markets of Canadian fishery products in return for facilities to be granted to the United States fishermen to buy bait and supplies and to tranship cargoes in Canada, all such privileges to be mutual.
"3. Protection of mackerel and other fisheries on the Atlantic Ocean and the inland waters also.
"4. Relaxation of the seaboard coasting laws of the two countries.
" 5 . Relaxation of the coasting laws of the two countries on the inland waters dividing Canada from the United States.
" 6 . Mutual salvage and saving of wrecked vessels.
"7. Arrangements for settling boundary between Canada and Alaska."
Now, these were the topics that were suggested in this communication of the 13 th December as subjects for discussion in the Parliament of Canada and the Government of the United States. It will be observed that the Government proposed in this, the treaty of 1854 as the basis for negotiation between the two Govermments on the subject of reciprocity. The Govermments had again and again informed Parliament through a long series of years beginning in 1871, that it was not possible to secure a treaty of reciprocity with the United States upon the basis contained in this first proposition ; and why they should undertake to suggest as a basis for the negotiation that which they themselves stated never could be a busis for a successful treaty, I confess I an unable to understand, except upon the one hypothesis, that, however anxious the Government might he to succeed with regard to some of the other matters, they were merely anxious to allay public feeling, to postpone the public decision, until the elections were over; and then if they failed, or if it became nanifest that they did not desire to succeed in the establishment of reciprocal trade relations with our neighbours, no harm could come to them politically. That is the one inference which may be drawn, and it seems to me the only one that can be drawn, from the proposition, and from what subsequently happened with regard to it. I need not refer to the second proposition. Isuppose the Government areanxious to accomplish that. I should have been sorry to have seen them successful with regard to some of the provisions of that treaty of 1888. I am willing that the Administration should go a long way in establishing freer trade relations, and making liberal commercial arrangements in all those matters referred to in the treaty of 1888 ; but I am not anxious, I am not willing, to see any government, or any party, sacrificing the sovereign rights of this country to the demands of our neighbours, and those sovereign rights were, in my opinion, to no inconsiderable degree sacrificed by the terms of the treaty of 1888, I need not refer to the protection of the mackerel, or to the relaxation of the laws relating to the coasting trade. I may say that the proposition relating to mutual salvage and the saving of wrecked vessels, which the Minister of War when Minister of Customs, fought with so much vigour and success for a long series of years, he supported at Washington. I think I may congratulate the Minister of Militia on the progress which he has manle in that particular, and that he is now prepared to support, as in the interests of humanity as well as in the interests of commerce, a policy which he has hitherto opposed with a great deal of vigour and with a great deal of suceess. Now, the next subject to which I shall refer is at statement mate by a member of the Covernment. It is this :
"Mr. Blaine replied that to endearour to obtain the appointment of the formal commission toarrive at the reciprocity would be neeless, hut that the United States Gowernment was willing to diseuss the question in private with Sir Julian Pauncefote and one or more deicgates from Canada, and to consider every subject as to which there was a hope of agreement on the grounds of mutual interests: if not to risk so grave a step until by private discussion he has satisfiel hime elf that good ground existed for expeeting an agreement by means of a comnission. He added that he would be prepared to enter into private negotiations at any time after th March.
He added that he would be prepared to enter into these negotiations at any time after 4 th Miarcin. This was the communication the liovernment received from Washington as to Mr. Blaine's intentions. Mr. Blaine informs sir Julian Pauncefote :
"I had not a moment to give to the subject until after the dijournment of Congress in Mareh, but after that date I would be willing to respond to your request, to have at full but private conference with the British Mintster and one or more agents from Camada to go orer every point of difference and oonsider every subject unon which a mutual interst cat be founded. If till arreement is reached ath weli: if not no official mention is to be made oit he effort. Above an thinge it is importiant to arvid public reference to the matter. This the President will insist uron.:
Now, this was the understanding in regarl to these initial negotiations. Mr. Blaine said, when he received the propesition which the diovermment submitted: I am not prepared to enter into nerotiations ly the appointment of a formal Commission. Your proposition for reciprocity is sague and may he one exceeingly limited. I to not kuow how you propose to deal with the matter. I donot know what your proposals are. It may be a useless waste of time to mulertake negatiations on such a basis: let us by private and informal intercourse, which is to be kept strictly secret, ascertain whether there is any reasonable prospect of arriving at an agreement before we appoint a Commission for the purpose of negotiation. That was his proposition. Aurl why he wishen to keep it secret is perfectly obvious. Such a proposition as the one contained in the topics for negotiations supplied by the Government is one which might arcuse against it a very large section of the population of the United States, without bringing a singlesection to support the Administration that would entertain it. It was important to know more specifically what it wats that Canada was willing to agree to have reciprocal trade in, and until that should be ascertained, it was most undesirable that the matter should lee put before the people ; becalse the liovermment of the Uniter States would he in this position : there would be a large number of interests prepared to attack the proposition, and no interests prepared to give it their support. That would be the necessary consequence of making public a proposition such as the Government of Canada submitted to the United States. That was not done. The Government did not keep secret these informal negotiations, on the contrary they published abroad that such negotiations were to be had, and of this Mr. Blaine complained, and he certainly complained with goont reason. After that a member of the (inverment said:
"Sir John Mactonald's Government not long ago made a definite proposal to the Washington authorities for the settlement of all existing differences between the two countries, on the basis of the extension of trade between the two cmuntries. It iuvolves partial reciprocity, the enumerated articles to include generally a number of natural products. But the proposition discards any idea of commercial union or unrestrieted reciprocity. Moreover, these propusals were invited and suggested by the Washington authoritie:.
Did Mr. Blaine's suggestion-that if the sulject of reciprocity wasentertained it should bea wide proposal for reciprocity-warrant a statement of this sort? In my opinion, it did not. I hold it to le a misrepresentation of Mr. Blaines statement te say that it warrants the assertion male in the paragraph I hate real. It is further said:
"The Commissioners from Canada and Great Britain start for Washington on the 4 th March, the date of the opening of the new Congress.
The reason was not that a new Congress was to be openerl at that date, but that the secretary of State would have leisure in consequence of the termination of the old one. There is mo statement made by Mr. Blaine that warrants the intimation that negotiations: were to legin on the 4 th of March. and that a delegation was to start on the th March. There is not a particle of the corres. pondence brought down that warrants a state ment of this sort. Mr. Blaine says that before that time he will not have leisure. It is clear that the intention was that the fixing of the date for these negotiations was to lea a matter for future arrangenent. But that was not one acted upon, nor what was represented to the Canadian public. A Minister said:
"The result of the Canadian clections will be known on the 6th March, the day the Commissioners reach Washington. In order that the Commission may have no uncertain sound, Sir Joln A. Mactlonald has decided to appeal to the comerr: and ask for judguent on these proposals of his to the Washington authorities."
What were these proposals? Was there anything definite. on which judgment could be passed! No. It was necessary that negotiations should take place. that conclusions should be reached. that the pullic should know what those conclusions were hefore it would be possible for the public to form a juigment. It should not have leen done before negotiations were begun. If the opinion of the country was required, it was required after negotiations were completed, and the terms agreen upon were known. and it was a mere pretense to dissolve Parliament, under the circumstances, for any such purpose as that set out in this statement. It is impossible it could be se. Sir. John Macdonald shortly after this time issued an address himself. It was elaborate. It discussed the various issues that had leen put before the people. It discussen the policy laid before the country by the party of which he was the head: but there is not in the address from the legiming to the end a syllable with respect to those negotiations that were to take place at Washington. He said nothing in regard to them, and I suppose the reason he said nothing was the understanding with Mr. Blaine that these matters were not to lie made subjects of public discussion. Nor was the fact of the discussion of this question in an informal way to, le made public, unless they reached a conclusion justifying the appointment of a Commission for the purpose of negotiating a formal treaty. When the statement became public, Mr. Baker, a member of Congress, addressed a letter to Mr. Blaine, calling Mr. Blaine's attention to what had in en stated hy the (ioverament or the press of the ciovernment, and asking him what fommation there was for these representations. Mr. Bakers letter is this:
"My Dear Mr. Blanf,-It is reported in the newspapers of Canada and along the northern border of my state, where my constituents are deeply interested in the subject, that negotiations are going on between this country and Great Britain, with a view to partial reciprocity with Canada, including natural products only and not manufactures ; and it is stated that Sir Charles Tupper is on his way here as a commisioner to negotiate for such modifications of our tariff. I shall be very glad if you will enable me to answer my constituents.
" Very truly yours.
"CHAS.S. BAKER."
To this Mr. Blaine on the same date, the ogth January, 189 , addressed the following reply :-
"Dear Mh. Baker, - I muthorize you to contradict the rumours you refer to. There are no negotiations whatever on foot tor a reciprocity treaty with Canada, and you may be assured that no such scheme for a reciprocity treaty with the Dominion, confined to natural products, will be entertained by this Government. We know nothing of Sir Charles C'upper's coming to Washington.

Now, sir, any one who has real the correspondence between the Colonial Office and the Foreign Office, between Lord Stanley and the Colonial Otfice, between Lord Stanley and the Pritish ambassador at Washington, the minutes of Council, and the communication by the Govermment of Canada, will see that in every particular this letter of Mr. Blane is true. There were no negotiations pending. He refused to agree to the appointment of a Commission, he refused to agree that there should he negotiations, until by informal and private conversation with the hon. gentlemen on the Treasury benches he had ascertained what their meaning was when they proposed a reciprocity treaty on the basis of that of 1834 , modified as repuired by the changes that had taken place in both countries in that period of time. Mr. Blaine's view was clearly stated in this letter ; and the Government, from the time that letter was written down to the time that they say they failed at Washington in these informal negotiations, knew precisely what kind of proposition the American Government were prepared to entertain. That that proposition must be as broad and as comprehensive as the Finance Minister has stated to this House, I do not helieve. I think that a treaty of a very different character, withont chese restrictions which he suggested, can be negotiated. I think that he did his best to preventany agreement that his party would be willing to accept. I have no doubt of that whatever, and I say, Sir, that under these circumstances it was of the first consequence that every memorandum, every letter, every communication, every report of matters that took place between the Canadian Government and the Government at Washington, and every report that was made to His Excellency here in reference to this visit to Washington, should have been laid before Parliament before the Minister of Finance undertook to discuss the subject at all. Now, there is in this letter of Mr. Blaine a specific declaration. He declares that no proposition looking to a treaty confined to natural products will be entertained, and the Government knew that before they left Ottawa for Wishington. They promised to go to Washington while the general elections were pencling, they left on this final visit of theirs when the bye elections were pending, and so the Govermment have, by their action in the first instance and in the last, shown what in their opinion was the public feeling on the subject of reciprocity. Strongly, as they believed, the system of protection had taken hold upon the minds of the manufacturing classes: strongly as they felt themselves entrenched by their subserviency, shall I say, to that class; at all events let me say, by their devotion to it ; they still felt that the agricultural population and the commercial classes of this country were interested in freer trade with the neighiouring Republic. It would not do when any number of bye-elections were pending, much less would it do when a general election was pending, to leave the public of this country to suppose that they were not prepared to entertain propositions looking to more liberal trale relations with the United States. On the 6 th Felmuary last year the Minister of Justice spoke to the people of the city of Toronto, and he said in his speech amongst other things, those which I will now read :
" It will be proved to you when the time comes that in response to that Mr. Blaine, whatever his sentiments may be-and I am bound for the present to give him credit for candor-as the negotiations of Newfoundland would not suit the Dominion of Canada for a trade treaty between these two countries, he was willing to make a wide treaty for reciprocity and enter upon separate negotiations with her. That statement being made, we are bound to avail ourselves of that to extend our trade."
That the United States were willing to make a wide treaty of reciprocity, he knew. That statement was male by Mr. Blaine, and he says we are bound to avail ourselves of that to extend our trade. Yes, Mr. Speaker, I think the (iovernment were bound to avail themselves of it, but the Government in the course which they adopted and in the proposition which they made, showed that they were not disposed to make a wile treaty of reciprocity. It was a treaty of a very different char. acter ; it was a treaty that would repuire to be characterized by other terms than as a wide treaty of reciprocity. which they expressed their readiness to negotiate : a treaty the character of which was such that they knew from the time that this proposition was submitted to the British Government to be communicated to Washington, that it would not be accepted. Again the Minister of Justice said :
" The next request from Mr. Blaine was that preparatory to negotiations being entered upon, the Canadian Governmont would propound a basis upon which the convention would eventually proceed. We did so in a document which has been published in the press offering to consider a renewal of the reciprocity of 1854 , with such modifications as the circumstances of the two countries might call for."
Now, Sir, that is a statement which I have no roult is fairly accurate. Mr. Blaine no doubt insisted upon preparatory negotiations before such a proposition was made, but that proposition when made was of so indefinite and of so vague a character that it prevented the appointment of the Commission until the Government of Canada made clear their meaning, until they explained to the Government of the United States how far they were prepared to go and what modifications they were prepared to propose. The Minister of Justice goes on to say :
"It is stated that having made that proposition to Mr .
Blaine without any prospect of its being accepted, and without any prospect of its being eventually entertained, Sir John Macdonald has sprung the elections on the people of Canada under the pretense of his going to entertain the negutiations while in reality the Cabinet at Washington will have none of it. Let me tell you that, so far from that being true, we had the proposition that was submitted to Mr. Blaine : that theanswer that Mr. Blaine made to us was that he was willing to enter on a preliminary discussion to precede the more formal commission: he was willing to enter upon that diseussion and to consider all points embrased in it. but would not be prepared to do so until after the th of March."
Now, Sir, the complaint which I make against that statement of the Minister of Justice is, that at the time it was made there was every reasonable ground for supposing that the criticisin which he was answering, was a well-founded criticism. What does his critic say" That the fovernment had made the proposition to Mr. Bhane without any prospect of its being accepted. Now, did they not so make it? Had they any prospect that it would be accepted: Had not Mr. Blaines refusal to appoint commissioners, his insistance on a preliminary discussion of this proposition, and his letter to Mr. Baker which had already appeared before this speech was delivered-had not all these things made it perfectly clear that the Guvernment were not groing to succeeri, and that when they sought to persuade the electorsof canada tohold their judgment in suspense until the elections were over, and these negotiations had taken place, they were giving the people of Canalia an assurance which they were not warranted in giving them; because there was not any ground whatever for hoping that the Gorermment would succeed in the proposition which it had submitted at the time. The House will bear in mind that these negotiations, which the hon. Minister of Justice discussed so fully and freely in that speech, were negotiations that were to have been kept secret. Whether he felt that they had been already divulged hy the Prime Minister and Sir Charles Tupper, and that he was not making matters any worse by further discussion, or not, I do not know; he has never given as any explanation on that point. How was it that the pledge of secrecy was broken, and that these statements, which were to be kept secret, and about which nothing was to be said if there was no suceess, were fully revealed from the very begiming? Well, Sir, after the elections were over and Parliament met here, the negotiations were made the subject of discussion in the delnate on the Ardiress. in which my hon. friend from south Oxford criticised the conduct of the Government in reference to these matters, and his criticism was answered by the Minister of Finance. In the course of his speech the hon. Minister of Finance said:
"Consequently, when there is an alternative, when the Minister of Justice makes a solemn statement in Toronto, when he gives official utterance, speaking as a Minister of the Crown, as to how these negotiations were commenced, and how they were carried on ; and on the other hand, there is a letter sent by Mr. Blaine to a Mr. Baker asying some things, and not stating others, the hon. gentleman says: 'I believe Mr. Blaine and not the Minister;' I think, if my hon. friend will allow me to tell him so, it would be well for him to trust the Canadian people a little more, and even to trust the Canadian Ministers when they make grave statements on their responsibilities as Ministers of the Crown."

He further said:

"Is the hon. gentleman afraid of his case? Was he afraid that if he waited three or four days, until these papers came down, that he would not be able to make the speech he has just made, and so decided to forestall the Address and get his surmises sjipead throughout the country before thes could have a chance of being contronted by documentary truth."

Mr. Mills (Bothwell).

The hon. member for South Oxford would not wait three or four days until those papers were brought down. Well. the House waited three or four months before some of the papers made their appearance, and when they were brought down many papers of the utmost importance to the proper elucidation of the subject were omitted, ind to this hour the House is not in possession of them.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Will the hon. gentleman allow me to ask him whether he did not complain that the telegram of the 19 th of November had not been brought down? If so, that is a mistake, because I find it is in the lrook.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). The hon. gentleman will see, I think, there is just an extract from that telegram, but there is not is syllahle referring to the propositions of the Government on this subject.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. There is a reference to the telegram, according to the custom in all diplomatic communications, but there is not an extract, with the exception of half a dozen words.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). On page in I find an extract from the telegram of Lord Stanley of Preston to Lord Knutsford, dated I!)th November. Is90, as follows:-
" Have received your telegram of 15 th inst. My Government view with the utmost alarm proposed consention between Newfoundlamd and the United States.
"It affects fisheries interests of Canada as well as those of Newfoundland, and places fisheries and other products of Canada on different footing from those of Newfoundland in United States markets.
"Sanction of Newfoundland Treaty by Her Majesty"s Govermment would materially aid United States policy by placing Canada at disadvantage with neighbouring colony of Newfoundland and producing discontent here.
"Duminion Government respectfully remonstrate in strongest terms agninst signature of proposed convention at Washington;, I will telegraph text of Council Minute when received."
On the next page, I find this telegram:
"Canadian Ministers are prepared to open negotiations immediately, on lines indicated in my telegram of the 19th, provided their representatives at Washington can be conmmissioners associated with British Minister, and empowered to negotiate directly instead of being merely delegates:"
Now, the extract from the telegram of the 19 th does not allude at all to the negotiations. What I complain of is that that telegram contains proposals as the basis of negotiations, and the British (ionermment in their answer say that they hope the negrotiations will not "place imports from this country at a disadvantage, and it is presumed that Canada would wish to retain control over hertariff with a view to possible extension of her trade with the colonies and England." Now, when I take that statement as springing out of the receipt of this telegram, and the other allusion, it is clear that the telegram of the 19 th November must have coutained proposals relating to the basis of negotiations which are not in the extract published. Now, I have said this much with regard to the papers that are brought down, and the suggestions these papers contain are not fully disclosed. I wish now to discuss the subject of the recent negotiations and what I regard as constitutional usages with refer. ence to the rights of Parliament in respect of papers and documents which have been the outcome of the intercourse between the United States and Canada. There are two things to consider, the rights of the Crown and the rights of Parliament. Now, with regard to the rights of the Crown, every one knows that under our constitutional system the Crown is the argan of the Government for negotiation with foreign states. Every one knows that the intercourse between Canala and Great Britain and any foreign state is an intercourse had through the instrumentality of the Sovereign, and that every Minister or ambassidor speaks in the name of the Sovereign in carrying on these negotiations. Now, the practice is that a record shall be kept and a report made to the Minister of Foreign Affairs as the organ of the sovereign in this particular, of every transaction and of every discussion which has taken place between any representative of the Gorernment of Great Britain or of Canada and any representative of a foreign state. Then, after such a discussion has taken place, if any parlianentary action is required or any discussion takes place in Parliament, it is the right of Parliament to have before it all these papers which the public interest will permit to be laid lefore it : and the practice is that if the important documents camot he laid before Parliament, discussion on that subject shall be postponed. I venture to say that the hon. gentiemen on the Treasury benches will not find one instance in a century where such a discussion has taken place in Parliament at the instance of the Minister, without all the papers being puit before Parliament. Let me call the attention of the House to an important rule in this particular, and I will first read an extract or two from Mr. Todd's lwook on Parliamentary ( (overnment. Torld says at page 35 e of Volume I:
"It is unquestionably of immense advantage to the country, that the diplomatic transactions and proceedings of the Government abroad should be freely communicated to Parliament. for thereby the foreign policy of the Crown ordinarily receives the approbation of Parliament, and is sustained by the strength of an enlightened public opinion. This in itself confers an additional weight to our policy and opinions abroal."
Then, at page 439, he further says:
"The rule which forbids any encroachment by Parliament upon the executive authority of the Crown has a further application, to which our attention nust now be directed. It is imperative that Parliament shall be duly informed of everything that may be necessary to explain the policy and proceedings of Government in any part of the Empire, and the fullest information is communicated by Government to both Houses, from time to time, upon all matters of public concern. For it is in Parliament that authoritative statements are made or information given, by Ministers, upon public questious; and no action in Parliament should be based on declarations of policy made elsewhere."
Now it is as much the right of Parliament to know what has passed between any Minister of the Crown and any foreign Government or ofticial, as it is the right of the Crown to know what has passed. This Parliament has a superintemling power over the Cabinet. It exercises a supreme authority over the policy and conduct of the Administration. It is entitled to form a judgment upon all proceedings of every department of the Government ; and to enable it to discharge that duty intelligently and in the public interest, andnot to tike a leap in the dark, not to depend wholly upon a statement made by a Minister of the Crown in the Honse, it is the unquestioned right of Parliament, before it is called upon to discuss any matter of public importance, to have all the papers relating to that subject laid before it for the purpose of enabling it to form an accurate and unbiassed judgment. Let me give to the House a few instances from the practice of the Imperial Parliament, which go to sustain the general proposition 1 have just stated. I am not stating merely a proposition relating to a rule of procellure in the House. I am stating a constitutional principle which enables the House to exercise an effective and an intelligent control over the conduct of every officer of the State, and $0: \rho$ : the conduct of the members of the Administration combined. I am asserting here, in the interests of parliamentary govermment, the maintenance of a principle, which it is necessary to maintain, to enable the House to discharge its duty in this particular. I am not asking that the House shall undertake the work of the Administration. I am not asking that it shall exercise a meddlesome interference over any Minister in the discharge of his duties in his departnent, but I am maintaining that the Honse, as the supreme council of the nation, has supreme authority in advising the Crown on all matters of great public importance, and has a right to overrule every other council of the state in its views : and I am stating what is absolutely necessary to enable it to discharge a duty, which, under the constitution, it is called upon to discharge and which it has a right to discharge. Now let me give yon a few instances. I say this, that there is not an instance in which the covernment ever initiated a discussion aul withheld the papers, in the history of the English Parliament, as far as I know. There are instances where private members have insisted upon discussing a question before all the papers could be brought down, or when it was in the interests of the State that some of the papers should be held back; but when the Govermment have not laid all the papers on the Table of the House, the House has insisted upon the postponement of the discussion. But for a Minister of the Crown to initiate a discussion upom an important guestion of public policy, and to inform the House that he will give it no information except what he chooses togive in his speech, is an unprecedented, it most anconstitutional and improper course to parsue, one that would make it, if acted on generally, quite impossible for the House to discharge throse high functions it is callerl upon to diselharge as a council of the State.
It being six oclock, the speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). I shall now refer to a few cases which I think will go to estaillish the general proposition which I laid down, and which I think is supported by the two citations I made from Mr. Todd's very excellent work on Parliamentary Government in England. The first is a short conversation which took place in the House of Lords between certain noble lords on the subject of the aid that had been given by the Government towards the maintenance of the Colonial Government in the Fiji Islands. Viscount Canterhury moved for copies or extracts of any other correspondence or documents explaining the present position of the colony of Fiji. It was stated hy him that up to that time there had been only three papers laid before Parliament, and that the necessary information for the consideration of the condition of the colony was not before the House. Lord Kimberley, who had been Colonial Secretary, but whose party was not in office at that time, said the reason assigned for the delay in the preparation of the documents was the pressure of work in the Colonial Otfice. It would seem from his statement that application for these documents had been made under a former Administration. Lord Carnarvon said "this only showed the inconvenience of being obliged to speak on a sulject without having all the information necessary to render their statements quite accurate." The discussion wis a mere incidental liscussion as to the importance and necessity of having the ciocuments lefore the House for the further discussion at a later period, hat Lord ('armarron pointed out that some of the opinions expressed were inaccurate, and that theirinaccuracy was due to a lack of the proper information, which went to show the importance of having the information in the hamls of members before the subject was mate a matter of serious discussion. The next case to which I will refer is a motion which was mate for the Berlin memorandum in 1876 . That motion was made in the Honse of Lords by Lord Camphell, in reply to whom Lord Derby, who was then the Secretary for Foreign. ffairs, satid :
" I hope I shall not be charged with disrespent to this House or diseourtesy to any member of it. if I do not in my turn take the opportunits of explainmg and justifying in detail the nolicy which we hare pursued.
Further on in the same speech, Lord Derby said :
"There is another reason why a full discussion is not at present possible-it would require as a preliminary, that the papers relating to what is past should be before your Lordships, and that your Lordsinips should have had time to consider them. The production of these papers, which has often been promised, has been unavoidably delayed; but they shall be laid before Parliament during the present session and in time for a full discussion of them, if such discussion be thought desirable. But to lay them at the present moment on the Table would be premature and inconvenient ; and moreover;, they could only be produced in a very fragmentary form.
There were two reasons assigned for not proceeding with the riscussion to which tie papers related. The one was that the House had not all the papers and correspondence in its possession which would enable it to discuss the matter intelligently, and the second was that, these papers leing largely correspondence with foreign fovermments, the Administration were not in a position to lay them before Parliament. You will olserve, Mr. Npeaker, that this discussion, incidental and brief as it was, was not initiated by the Arministration but ly prisate members of the House, who asked for the pajers in order that a full discussion should be had; and that it was stated that these papers were essential to a discussion of the matter ; that the Minister almitted that, and also that the duty devolved upon him to bring down these papers. Then, in another case that took place in the same year, 1876, Mr. Bruce, who was subsequently a member of the Administration, and who was at that time a prominent member of the House, asked Mr. Disraeli. who was the learler of the House of Commons at the time, "Whether he can fix a day for the discussion of the motion upon the affairs of Bosnia and Herzigovina." This motion had reference to the contemplated acquisition of these two provinces, which had previously been part of the Turkish Empire, by the Empire of Austria, and these papers were asked for in order to have an intelligent discussion on that subject. In reply to Mr. Bruce, Mr. Disraeli said :
"I quite recognize that mychon. friend has a locus standi in this question in the notice he bas previously given; and assuming as a matter of course that there will be a diecussion on the subject even if there may not be one which involses the opinion of the House by a formal motion, I should, under those circumstances, recognize the claim of my hon. friend and endeavour to meet his convenience. But until the papers are on the Table, I think I should hardly do justice to the feelings of the House if I made any arrangements for the discussion of a question of such an important character by a prirate member.
The reason given for not fixing a day for the discussion of the question was that the papers had not yet been brought down. Upon themotion that the papers on the Eastern question should le lation the Table of the House, Mr. Disraeli said:
"All those papers are public records of the fuelings, policy and views of the different countries, and can always poly and views of the different countries, and can always there are confidential communications made by foreign powers, and it is very often highly necessary for the vindication of our course, and as illustrative of nur policy that those documents should be published: but the House will see at once that the ancient custom which has always been observed, of cunsulting foreign powers before confidential communications on their part are laid before Parliament. is a very proper and very wise one. The House will feel that otherwise there would be an end to all confidential intercourse with any foreign power. When we are told that all the Government has to do is to consult the House of Commons, and not under any circumstances to consuilt those who are our allies, the only consequence of such a policy would be that all the papers we could lay on the Table would be documents which the House would soon find were wanting in light and information on many points of the most interesting character.
Here Mr. Disraeli proints out in the first place that a full presentation of the papers may he necessary to a full consideration of the conduct of the diovernment and toa justification of the viewsof the fovernment on an important matter of international concern. But he also points out that before these papers can be laid upon the Table. some of which were of a confidential character. the consent of the foreign fovermment, with whom that communication was hat, should be olotained: hecause if a (iovernment were to assume, without such eonsent, the right to lay papers, under all circumstances, before the House of Commons, a fiovernment would be extremely cautious as to what its public documents would contain. It might he driven to carry on, by private and unofticial communication, through private or unotficial channels, that highly confidential correspondence that is, under present practice, found in the papers of a public character. Now, in so far as any correspondence of this kind may te immature. as the question has not yet been finally disposed of, the Government may find it in the public interest to withhold these papers. But the Government that cloes so must also find it in the public interest, so far as it is concerned, to take care not to initiate a discusssion upon the subject. When they ask the House to consider their conduct, and to pass it in review, commenting upon or approving of the course they havetaken, theyare irsund to put the House in possession of all thesedocuments, and all that information which is necessary to enable the House to form a proper julgment. Now, what I complain of in this case is that the Minister of Finance introduced into his speech a discussion of communications of an infomal character that had taken place with the Government at Washington, a correspondence which was of the highest injortance to the people of this conntry. The hon. IInister has made a statement to the Honse; he has told us what passed in a very imperfect manner, but he has withheld from the House all those papers, all the memoranda, all the notes, or protocols, if any were kept, of the communications that were had, and he givesusno opportunity, except in so far as his speech gives it, of forming an opinion for ourselves. I say that it is treating the Honse in a highly improper mamer, it is treating it with the greatest possible inlignity. The Arlministration sit on these henches aml hold their ofticial position with the sanction of this House. Their continuance in office is slue to the gombill and confilence of the House, but that confirlence should be a rational confidence, and not a superstition. They deny to the House an opportunity of coming to a rational conclusion when they withholl from us that infommation which is necessary to enable the Honse to juige properly for itself. Let me mention another case. When Nir Austin Layaml, in 1sio3, proposed to discuss the invasion of Turkey by Russia, and moved for the papers, Lord Palmerston stated on that oceasion that it would be highly inconvenient to lay those papers before Parliament, amd as the papers could not be laid before Parliament, it would be very improper to call upon the House to discuss the suliject : that the House, before that discussion took place, ought to lee in possession of all the facts, and that it would not le in the public interest to carry on such a discussion in the absence of the necessary material by which a proper conchusion upon the subject could be reached. This was the statement made on that oceasion by one of the tirst parliamentarians of the country, by one who was as couversant with the constitutiomal rights of Parliament and with the constitutional rights of the Arministration, as any man who has, in our day, sat in the English House of Commons. Sir, I do not know that I could quote to the House a higher authority than the one to which I have just referred. Lord Palmerston held the office of Foreign secretary in the United Kingdom for nearly half a century. At a later period, in 1878, during the Russo-Turkish War, the Fastern Question was again liscussed, and the Earl of Granville on that occasion moved for certain papers and public documents, and I will read a sentence or two from a very hrief speech he made on that occasion, and the answer that was given by Lord Beaconstield:
"Enrl Granvint.-I am: quite sure Her Majesty would not desire that a matter of such great importance should be considered without the fullest information having been afforded to the House."
And again:
. I should be gladio know when those papers will be in the hands of members of this House? Ialso wish to know whetber the correspondence will include, besides the correspondence between this country and Rusia, the correspondence with the other powers?
" Lord Bracossfizin- - They will mot be limited to the correspondence between this country and Russia, hut will contuin papers, relating to the proposition of the Congress by Austria."
Lord Peaconstield proposed that Monday week should le a day for the consideration of this message.
"Eabi Gbaxville--I think that will depend entirely on the papers which, I understand from the noble Earl, will not be confined to the papers between this country and Russia; but will include also those between this country and Austria. I think we have a right to know the views of all the great Powers with regaril to whether there should be a conference or not.
Now, these papers were to come down immediately, and it was not until after the papers were in the hands of the House that the Government proposed to fix a day for the consideration of the subject to which the papers alluded. Is that the way in which the House was treated on this occasion: Not at all. Here the Alministration informed the House last year, it informed the country again and again that there was to be an unoticial discussion on the subject of reciprocity with the diovernment of the United States. That unotficial discussion has taken place. The correspondence, the papers that the dovernment submitter-which I will undertake to show must, in the nature of things, be very important-have not jet been brought down. Nir, the Minister in his speech. if he wished ihe House to consider this subject, ought to have stated when these papers would have been brought down, when the House would le put in full possession of everything that was in the possession of the Alministration ; and after he had put the House in full possession of these papers and this correspondence, he might then have asked the House to fix a day, or have proposed himself a time when the sulject should he taken into consideration. But to propose a discussion on the suliject, to unlertake to tell the House what the fiovernment thought, what certain members of the diovermment said to the Government at Washington, and to declare that the suliject now is put at rest forever, is to treat the House, I say, with the greatest possible indignity. The hon. Minister has not dealt fairly and frankly with the House : he has not given to the House that consideration to which it is entitled. when he withheld the papers and proposed himself to remain the master of the situation. Nir. I need not cite any further authorities than those which I have alreaily cited. They are sutficient to illustrate the principle which I laid down before we rose at six oclock, which was contirmed by Mr. Torld, and which is abundantly supported by these authorities. I say that the rule is clear, that it is a highly improper proceeding for Ministers to initiate a discussion in Parliament upon a subject, and at the same time to withhold papers relating to that subject, from Parliament. Let me say again, there is a difference in this respect between a Minister and a private member. If a private member, in face of the fact that the House has not lreen put in possession of the papers, and against the remonstrance of the Alministration, insists upon a discussion, he may express his opinion upon the subject. But the House is not lround to go on with the discussion. It is, however, altogether rifferent with a Minister of the Crown. The information is in his possession, and he must act upon the well-settleal principle that the House is never ready for discussion until the (iovernment are ready to lay before the House the papers which are necessary to enable it to come to an intelligent conclusion. The House ought to be in possession of all the information of which the fovernment are possessel? it ought to have the same opportunity to form its judgment which the Government has, because the members of the (iovernment for all these purposes do not in any respect liffer sofar as their rights are concerned from any other members of Parliament. It is the right of every hon. member, before he is called upon to yote or to discuss a question of this sort, to have in his possession the material which will enable him to form a proper julgment upon the subject. Sir, I have already alluded to the fact that the Minister of Finance, and I may nowsay also the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, exhibited no little pleasure in referring to the circumstance that they had faile. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries said that the failure would lxe satisfactory to the business men of the country: the question was disposed of, in fact it was now put out of the purview of practical politics, and the country might have some rest. Let me, having said this much with respect to the constitutional questiou that has been raised by the course which the Minister of Finance has pursued, say a worl or two with respect to the negotiations asthey atedisclosed to the House in the speech which the hon. Minister addressed to it. He said that reciprocity on the lines iffered ly Mr. Blaine would necessitate discrimination against the importations ame products of the mother country. I am not here going to contest that proposition. I shall be leetter prepared to discuss it when I have at my disposal the same material the Minister himself has. But I wish to call attention to this fact, that the (iovermment have long proposed, and this Parliament has long sanctioned, a policy of discrimination against the United Kingdom. The taxes on the products of the United Kinglom are discriminatory. The Government do not place the industries of the mother country upon the sime footing as those of some other countries. Letmeremind the (iovernment of this fact that. when the products of one country are free and we tax the productsofanothercountry, it is not necessary that those products should be of the same kind in order that the taxes should le discriminatory, in favour of one country as against the other. Does not the hon. gentleman know that when he imports tea and coffee free. that when he exempts them from taxation altogether, he obliges other imports to bear larger taxes or ou such of them as are the subject of taxation? Does he not know that he is discriminating against the United Kingdom and in favour of the countries where tea and coffee are produced? Can there be any doult on that sulject? Does he not know that he seriously affects, by the amount of free importations the imports of the country which are subject to taxation? Has not Spain over and over again complained that Spanish wines are subjected to a higher tax than the wines of France, and is it any reply that the wines produced in Spain are of a different character from those produced in France? There is discrimination. The whole policy of taxation is policy based on the self interest of the Government that imposes it, and it can only be justified on the ground that it is in the interest of the peoplein whose behalf it is imposed. There is not a country in the world. so far as I know, that places all countries on an exact footing of equality. The products of some are almitted without taxation, and the products of some are highly taxel. And the fact that they are different does not alter or change the principle: the fact that one commodity is taxedand the other is free makes the tax discriminatory as much as if we received the articles from exactly the same countries. In another respect it is discriminatory. Take, for instance, woollen products. Sir Francis Hincks years ago showed that the tiex on woollen products of England were higher than the tax on similar prolucts of the United States. We tax certain articles according to weight, and specifically, and also ad calorem, and when taken together the tax on horse blankets is very much higher than the tax on broadcloth, in proportion to their value. So it is in regard to some other articles. The whole system of taxation is unequal, and as Sir Francis Hincks showed the few blankets imported from the Enited states paid in proportion to their value a far lower rate of taxation than correspoming articles from the Cnited Kinglom, because they belonged to a different class. But the whole system of specitic taxes will make it discriminatory and such as exists at this moment. and it is against the products of the Cuited Kingilom. The Minister of Finance said there could not be a treaty of reciproeity with the United States on the part of Canala unless it was a discriminatory tariff against (ireat Britain. What evilence does the bon. gentleman submit to us: Recently the Americans made a treaty with the Wiest Indies. It is not discriminatory. They had concluded a treaty which the hom. gentleman succeeded in defeating. with Newfoundland. That was not discriminatory. I am not prepared to admit that any treaty which does not discriminate against direat Britain camot be made with the Enited states. I am satistien that the negotiations, if carried on by hom. gentlemen who were anxious for a treaty, instead of hom. gentlemen who in all their speeches have pronounced themselves against a treaty, whose supporters in this House since the financial speech was made by the Minister of Finance, have, without an exception, spoken against a treaty of reciprocity, show the spirit by which the party of hom. gentlemen opposite are actuated, anl the spirit in which those hon. gentlemen journeyed to Wishington for the purpose of carrying on those negotiations with the United States would have resulted differently. I think a fair treaty is a possibility. I think that we have before us up th this time no evidence that this subject was fully. exhaustively and adequately consilered by hon. gentlemen opposite in their intercourse with Mr. Blaine. Let me say this, that some preparation for the proper discussion of this sulject is necessary, some consideration of the facts, some careful analysis of the trade between the two countries, some estimate of the possilinity of in increase in conseguence of the change which the Government proposes. One of the statements made by the hon. gentlemen was that Mr. Blaine stiil that a treaty of reciprocity confined to natural prodacts could not have in it any of the elements of mutuality in reciprocity. What evidence is there of that "What answer did the hon. gentlemen make to that statement? What document or memorandum did they prepare when they went to propose a treaty of reciprocity in natural prolucts : what argument did they advance for the purpose of upholling that proposition: How is it. that this is not before Parliament lefor: this question was made a subject of discussion: When I look at our Trade and Navigation Returne I find that there have been imported from the Unitel states into Canada last year $$ 24,(100),(100)$ worth of prolucts that were not subject to taxation at all. How much do we send to the United States free from taxation at this moment? How much of that $$ 24,000,000$ worth are natural products, and what would he the volume of trade hetween the two countries under a system of free trade in natural products? If the hon. gentlemen went to Washington to make a proposition to the Government of the United States, and they proposed to confine reciprocity to natural products, I suppose they went there prepared to show that that proposition was a fair one to the United States. The hon. gentleman told us that Mr. Blaine said it was unfair, but the hom. gentleman did not give to the House a single statement to show that he contended the contrary. He does not lay lefore the House any memorandum of facts by which the offer is justitied and by which an attempt is made to show that it is a fair and proper offer. Now, sir, it steems to me that the fovernment ought to have come to the House prepared to submit to the Honse all the data by which they had fortified themselves, before they set out on their journey to the southera capital. Why is it not in our possession? Why do not the f iovernment give us an opport:anity of seeing how far they acted earnestly and in good faith, or how far they sacrificed the interests of the agricultural and labouring population of this country to a few persons engaged in manufacturing. whose contidence the diovernment have so unremittingly enjoyed? It seems to me that it is clear that the House has not leen properly dealt with in this matter, and that the course taken liy the diovermment is not usial and is not constitutional. I believe that the House is entitled to full information, and that everything that the fovernment hat in their ponstesion ly which they undertook to sustain the propositions which they made to the (iovernment of the Cnited States, and the answers, which they received from the (iovernment of the Unitel States shouh have been at this monent in our hands, and until they were prepared to put these papers in our hambs they ought to have abstained from initiating any discussion upon this subject. Sir, I have stated alrealy that I know a number of gentlemen in this Honse. some of whom are here for the first time, some. after an interval of absence from the House, who refer to the result of these bye-elections as an evidence that the country supports the policy which the Covernment have pursued. But, Sir, what is that poliey: Is it the policy that the Government intended to pursue, or that they sought to persuade the country that they intended to pursue, when they set out on this journey to Washington, or is it the old National Policy, and when a member of the 1 iovermment toll this Honse, that no greater disaster could hefall this country than to permit the free importation of foreign products of the Unitel States, and that reciprocity in natural products would be a calamity: and when that calamity was one of the things which the Govermment by these negotiations, if they were in earnest, intended to inflict on the conntry? Wias it protection or reciprocity upon which the resent elections turned: which was it that these gendemen supported: Did they support the fiovernment in unlertaking to negotiate a reciprocity treaty, or dild they support the Government in opposing negotiations and undertaking to secure the defeat of that treaty? What were the views that these hon. gentlemen were elected to uphold in this House? Now, sir, I have saill that there were potent influences other than those of the popularity of the measures of the Administration which were not without their effect in the elections which have taken place. Let me read a letter which has recently appeared in sone of the newspapers. This letter is addressed from St. Mary's by a Mr. Ingram, of St. Thomas, to a gentienan in that city. It says :

[^23]to-night, and mashap to-morrow it may he allo.K. Hoh yourself in readiness at any time. I will write you when to come if $0 . K$. : if not, I will write sou nogemd. Mr. H. Ber. is not here yet: keep patient.
" luurs in haste.
"Whaste H ingnam."
I suppose most hon. gentlemen will unterstand the significance of a communication of that sort. and that it means a gond deal, I have nomoulot. I draw my inferences, and every hom. gentleman in the House can ilo the same thing. But, Sir, I am of the opinion that the protective policy of the Arministration enjoys, to-lay. in no ilegree, a greater measure of public contidence or a greater , legree of popularity than it did when the generai elections took place in March last.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Mr. speaker, my hom. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Mills), at the conclusion of his very interesting adrless, embeavoured to console hin.self and the gentlemen who sit leside him, by indicating that he had mate a discovery which would explain to thi. House and to the country the reason why every camdidate, with hardly an exception, who has faced the electorate under his banner, has met with defeat during the last six months. He hats enteatoured to descrile that in a letter from which he draws an inference, which he did not patise to explain to the HouseI will not sity which he conld not explain to the House, because the hon. gentleman is ingenions enough to explain anything-hut from which he must have drawn, if he gathered comfort from it at all, an inference which certainly does not appear on the face of the document as lie rearl it to the House. If the hom. gentleman desires to diseuss election literature, if he has any anxiety at all t" discuss before this House the letters which were sent into the different electorates of the country, and to different electors of the country, enconary ing them, in spite of all denonstration to the contrary, to keep up their heart for the goon cause which he helped to lead : he does not need to cite a letter ahliressed to my hon. friend from East Elgin (Mr. Ingram) or to any inoly else- -

An hon. MEMBER. It was his brother.
Sir JOHN THOMPNON. A hrother, perhaps.
Mr. LANDERKIN. One near amd lear.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. He does not need to quote any letters to gentlemen who are near and dear to any member on this side of the House, and he may sive himself the trouble of prolucing correspondence which requires any inference to be drawn. If the hon. gentleman will just turn to the file of letters which are now published, and which bear the names of his own co-conspirators. I might almost call them, and especially that portion of the literature which hears the name of one Preston, he and the members of this Honse will be saved the necessity of drawing any inference whatever as to the methouls ly which campaigns are fought and won in this country.

Mr. LANDFRKIN. Read the letter, please.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Will the hon. gentleman inform me that he has not read the letter to which I have referred, signed by Preston?

Mr. LANDERKIN. I have not.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Then the hon. gentleman has not read the papers during the last month or two, as the hon. gentleman's conduct in this House very often indicates he ought to do. Now, Mr. Speaker. one thing which struck me more than any other in the very admirable and interesting adilress which we have just heart: was the pains which the hon. gentleman took to impress upon the House and the comntry the uncertainty, the ragueness and the inconsistency of the (iovernment policy as it had leeen expounded from time to time. The hon. sentleman begam in that line, he went on in that line. he concluded in that line. He asked us not one question, but a shower of questions as to what our policy was and what we had done since a member of the ciovermment declated that even reciprocity in matural products would not he of advautage to Canala-what we had done at this time, what we had done at that time, what was the policy the country was supposed to have sustained even in the recent be-elections. I conld not help. Mr. ×peaker, asking myself. amidst all this shower of fuestions and parade of worls, what the hon. gentleman's own policy is. The hon. gentleman seeks to tet in concert with a party which farours unrestricted reciprocity, and has put that forward in every campaign in which it has engaged : yet, what is there in the hom. gentleman's speech from begiming to enl, during the hours he has entertainell us this evening, which indicates what his own opinion is on that juestion? The hon. gentleman's friends in time past have taken great credit to him from the fact that he has never committed himself on that question. They have asserted as a reason why he should have the greatest portion of the confindence of the comutrythat limited portion of the contidence of the country which can be divided up amongst the members of the Opposition-that, however grossly many of them have gone astray, he has always been too wise to commit himself on this uuestion. The hon. gentleman hats given us new evidence this evening of his alility to entertain the House for hours at a time in discussing the question: of unrestricted reciprocity. without ever committimg himself to an opinion upon it at all. Now, Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend has dealt with a great many subjects this evening, as to only a few of which I shall detain the House by making any reference. The hon. gentleman hae ilelightel us with a review not only of ancient history, but, to some extent, of fable. Even when he came to touch the question of reciprocity, which we supposed was the one before the House, the hon. gentleman was not satistied merely to begin at the beginning, but he went back to early traditions, and not till after the clock struck six did he venture to begin a discussion of the practical questions before the House. He had learned allusions to the reign of Charles I, and from Charles I he eame gradnally and slowly down until the clock stood at a quarter to six, and then he began to discuss the liast dissolution of this Parliament. Now, I do not intend to legin with Charles I. I do not intend to do more than make a passing reference to the question of the dissolution -in the first place, because it is a bygone guestion, and in the second place, lecause we heard the hon. gentleman last session deal as profoundly and as carefully $w$ ith the arguments which can be addressed to the House on that question, as I suppose any member is able to do. He endeavoured by the hour to persuade the House last session that the dissolution ought not to have taken place; but we did not reply to him, for the very olsvious reason that the [^24]dissolution hat taken place. The hon. gentleman, or at leare his party, stood very much in the position of the prisoner who hal leen imprisoned. as he thought, contrary to liaw, and who, having conmitted some infraction of prison discipline, had been thoged. seeking next day legal adrice as to his rights as an Englishma, he was comfortel for a moment on leing told, by his legal adviser. that $\because$ they conld not do it : $*$, hut the next instant the failure of the comfort flashed upon him when he reflected that they really had done it. The hon. gentleman argned that the House could not be dissolved and his party ought not to have lreen leaten, but in reality the Honse lia! lreen dissolve 1 and his party had lreen beaten. and there was not much use in making any more fuss about it. But, let me say this as to, the rigit to dissolve, and as to the propriety of the circumstances amler which that dissolution took place. If we are to credit the statements made ly the Opposition at that time and for years previonsly. there never was an oceasion on which a dissolution cond be so easily justitied. It is mot. as the hon. gentleman intinated this evening, that we justify ourselves on the gromi that we wished to get the ratification of the comery for reciprocity arrangements: bat it was. in the first place, for this that we alvised a dissolution: We were alont to enter on negotiations for what? The chief executice otticer of the comutry with which we were going to negotiate, had declared in andance that there might le a wide reciprocity treaty. It was olvious, therefore, that the commissioners who would fo from this comutry to negotiate for a wide reciprocity with the United States would go with the dearest interests of this country in their hams: : and, sir, it was all important, when they went to meet the negotiators of that other country, that the latter should not be in a position to say to us: " Wie will not make a treaty with you, hecanse you are a diovernment whose term is about to expire: the treaty we might make with you would i,e one with regaril to which we should have to take the risks of assent and ratification liy an expiring Parliament." The commissioners going with such important interests in their hands. would the weak as clay in the hamls of the other negotiators if they hat to come back to meet a Parliament wiseh had only a few weeks of existence left to it. But if the position taken be the Opposition is correct, our justification is temfold stronger. We had been informed, in :an indirect way it may be, that negotiations would not be unacceptalle to the United States, that a wile reciprocity treaty was in contemplation: and. sir, the late leader of the Liberal-Conservative party did a patriotic act and an act of justice to the comery when, after all the years of discussion that had taken place as to whether recibrocity should be restricted or unrestrictel seeing that the time was about to come for negotiators to go to Washington, he said to the country: Chosse the men who are to negotiate for you: settle once for all the policy upon which this wise reciprocity is to be negotiated. If you want restricted reciprocity, such as we think the country can afforl to give, such as we think will lecionsistent with our position and trale relations, return us to power and we will so to Washington and pursue these negotiations. But if, on the other hand, you want a treaty of unrestricted reciprocity accompanied by discrimination against Great Britain and followed by, as we think, evils which would be a menace to precions interests in Canada, now is the time to select your negotiators. Before that time, every member of this House and every candidate who stool upon the hustings had been challenged by the declaration that the people of the comntry, from one end to the other, were anxious to throw off the yoke of the National Policy, and leclare for the freest possible trade relations with the United States. The members of this Honse, and especially the Government, were told that their tenure of office solely depended upon the term of Parliament, and that the moment the country got an opportunity to speak they would demaml a different set of negotiators. We gave the comutry the choice. Yet when the choice did not fail upon these gentlemen but upon the chieftain wio had led the Liberal-Conservative party with success for so many years, they declared the greatest outrage we coumitted was that dissolution which thus gave the people the choice of their policy. When I said that the hon. gentleman not only went into ancient history but into the region of fable. I was referring to the history of the negotiations which have taken place within che last five or six years, and to which the hon. gentleman's imagination, it may be, or at any rate his bias, have given a peculiar tum. He endeavoured to interweare romance with that history in such a way as to present, when his task was ingeniously done, as he alone coull io it, an alsolutely different narrative from that which the true history presents to this Honse. These fables are not presented once or twice to this House, but on every occasion when these matters come up. They are published in every issue of the press supporting hon. gentlemen opposite, they are put before the public on every platform, until it becomes an absolute article of lielief of hon. gentlemen opposite that their romances are true. Why. one of the statements most current in this country is the statement the hoin. gentleman repeated to-night-of the total inaceuracy of which, I am sure, after the number of times which he has heard it repeated by his own friends on the other side. an! seen it in the press and heard it on the platform, he was unconscious--that is that sometime ago I declared in this House that shrubs, plants and small fruits, though put upon the free list by the Cuired States, must not be put on the free list of this country, and the statement has been made ererywhere, and repeated with as much unction as if it were true, that I declared to the House it would tre treason to put shruls and fruits and plants on the free list.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Hear, hear.

Sir JOHN THOMPSOX. The hon. geutleman from Prince Edward Island who says "hear, hear," is the one who has been most ready to make that statement. I have seen it reported from his lips a dozen times, and I am sure he believes it, although the hon. gentleman has heard me refresh his memory by an appeal to the record more than once in the House, ind I now do so again for the last time. What we were discussing was whether we were bound to put them on the free list by the mere fact of the United States having put them on the free list. Hon. gentlenien opposite were pressing, with great earnestness and force, that we were bound, in consequence of the wording of the statutory offer, to do so, and what we contended was. not that it was treason, in the ordinary sense of the term, to make these articles free, lut that it was treason to the House to act upon the interpretation that we were bound to put thein on the free list. heciause that was not the interpretation we had given the House when the Statute had been passed. But, a few days after came communications from Washington, in which it was intimated not that we were bound to pat these articles on the free list, because the proposition so carnestly pressed on the other side was never adopted at Washington at all or thought worthy of argument, but the representations were: "we supposed if we put them on th: free list, you would do so also," and we acted on that assmmption. Then what we woold not yield, as a diovernment. in answer to the dictation of any comery, we at once yielded on their statement that they assumed our offer to them was in invitation, and that hey had acted in pursuance of it, expecting their action tole reciprocated. The hon. gentleman went on with his little fable a step further, and he declared to us that then followed the McKinley Bill. Well, the hon. gentleman must have realizel that it was a tax upon the credulity of the Hobse to assume that because we put these fruits and shrubs on the free lisi, and then taxed them a year afterwards, the Mckinler Bill was the result. So he went on to elaborate the fable a little further, and declared it was hy thus bringing the attention of Congress to the subject, and hy our threats that we would bring Congress to its knees. the McKinley Bill was adopted. And the hon. gentleman, having made his fable thus a little more plansible, in appearance at any rate, went on lollly to charge the fiovemment with being thus indirectly responsible for that enactment in the United states. The hon. gentleman knows probably that the McKinley Bill was introduced in Congress, adrocated and sustained there as not leing a measure of hosility adopted against Canada. but purely a domestic arrangement in the interests of the people of the Lnitel states: but he knows that it receiven its most etficacious support and strongest argument in the House of Representatives by ytotations from the speeches. letters ami resolutions of hom. gentlemen who sit in this House on your left. Mr. Speaker, who proved that such an act would lea most effective measure of protection to the farmers of the United states, because it would greatly injure the fa:mers of Canada. Under that state of facts. of which I an sure the hon. gentleman must be well informed, I can only suppose that the attack was made upon us of being thus indirectly the authors of the McKinley Bill in order to screen the Opposition from the indignation which this country has felt for some time past at the gentlemen who consciously or unconsciously were really the authors and promoters of that measure, and indicated the way in which it could be framed to injure the interests of the country. Another little fable that has again appeared, and which we used to hear last session, was alout that famous interview in April by Sir Charles Tupper, the Minister of Finance and myself, when we went to Washington in the month of April. We have heard that described as a three minute interview. We were told we had just an opportunity to alight at the residence of the Secretary of State and be dismissed. And the hon. gentleman went on to embellish the story a little further this afternoon by the extror ${ }^{2} h a r y$ statement which surpasses in ingenuity anything yet levised on that side of the Honse, that we had been repulsed lecause faith had not been kept hy this dioverument with the United states and that we hat leen put on a perionl of prohation for misconduct-I am fuoting the hon. sentleman's own words. Now, the statement that we were repulsed le:anse of any breach of faith on our part or that we were placed on a period of prolation for misconduct is just as absolutely false as the assertion to which I have already alluded in reference to the inter iew. It is harlly worth while to state to the House now what that interview was. It was an interview in which the greatest courtesy was shown to us and the greatest regret was expressed, not that we hat to be repulsed for want of exom faithor that we were put on a perion of prohation for miscomiluct, but that the time fixed for that interriew proved to lee inconvenient to the President of the Conited states. That forms part of the reconds which are lefore the House and before the public. and yet the statement is to go to the country, interwoven with the other remarks of the hon. fentleman, that we were repulsed on acconat of want of geot faith on our part and lecaluse we had to lee put on a period of probattion for misconduct. Let me come at once to the assertion of the hon. gentleman, that we committed any breach of faith in this matter. I emphatically deny that any memiver of the Govermment, and particularly the honoured leater whes is no longer with us, was guilty of any breach of faith. shall ask the House to dwell with me, for a short time, on what the hon. gentleman alieges is a breach of faith. The hon. gentleman did me the honour to fuote from some statements which 1 had mate to a large andience in the city of Torouto shortly lefore the last election. He was goonl ellough to say that the statements I made were correct in fact except as to my statement that we had received an intimation from Washington that negotiations would be had with us. The hom. gentleman is mistaken. My statements were perfectly correct. It may le asserted that Sir Charles Tupper admittel that the initiative came from C'analia and not from the United States. That may be coracet or may le a matter of opinion, but we have lefore us the fact that the irst step taken was that. in pursuance of our right as representing the Imminion of Canada, we requested Her Majesty's (iovermment to ask that we should be includen in any arrangement that might be made letween the Cinited states and Her Majestys Government in regard to Newfoundlamel and the answer of Mr. Blaine wis that, while he was not willing that Canada should be included in the treaty with Newfoumdland, he was willing to conchule a wide reciprocity treaty with Camada. We hat a perfect right, based upon that information, to intimate to Her Majesty's Giovemment that, anxions as we were to increase our trale in any direction, we were willing to negotiate with Mr. Blaine, I was therefore perfectly correct in stating that the initiative for the renewai of negotiations in reference to reciprocity actually came from the United States. The hon. gentleman went further, and said that 1 disclosed at Toronto what the negotiations were, but he was good enough to endeavour to temper the criticism by saying that I might be able to pleal that Sir John Macalonald and other members of the Government harl already broken confidence. I do not intend to a:ail myself of any such excuse, but it is a fact, I think, that before 1 xplained this to the people of Toronto, the propos :ls had been pullished in the Canaria ciazette, and, whatever anyone may say in the way of humour, I think it can hardly be said to be secret matter after it has been published there. However that may be, the fact had been already published in the leading newspapers of the country and it was well understood by every one who heard me there liefore I went into the cirs"ussion. But neither I nor any member of the Govarmment nor the High Commissioner can be chargel with any wilful breach of faith in regard to these negotiations, and the House will understand that, when I state briefly what the history of those negotiations was. When the dissolution took place, this is what we had before us, without any indication whatever, either on the face of this paper or any other paper, that there was anything private, secret or contidential about it. In answer to the request that we should submit to Mr. Blatine a busis of proposals on which negotiations might afterwards be conducted. we hal presented that hasis which is set forth in a despatch from His Excellency to Lord Knutsford dated the 133th Iecember, lisow, which the hon. genteman has read, amd the reply to that, which we had no reason to lelieve was contidential, dated the Ind Jamaary, 1891, from Lord Knutsford to Loril Stanley of Preston, was is follows:-
"Minizter at Washington has communicated to the Linited Stares Secretary of State the substance of your telegram of 13 th December. Mr. Blaine replied that to endeavour to obtain the appointment of the formal commission to arrive at the reciprocity treaty would be useless, but that the United States Government was willing to discuss the question in private with Sir Julian Pauncefote, and one or more delegates from Canada, and io consider every subject as to which there was hope of agrecment. on the ground of mutual interests: if not, and to risk so grave a step until by private discussion he has satisfied himself that good ground existed for expecting an agreement by means of a commission. He added that he would be prepared to enter into private negotiations at auy time after 4 th March.
That is to le fomm at page is Sessiomal Paper No. 38 of last session. That was the telegram in the hands of the executive of this comutry, and that gave no indication that while the proceedings of the conference were to be private the fact that the conference would take place was to be pricate. We had leeen told that Mr. Blaine was ready to meet us at any time after the 4th March, and we announced that to the country in perfect good faith. The elections took place shortly before that date, and it was not until the receipt of a letter from Mr. Blaine to Sir Julian Pauncefote, lated the ist.April, long after the elections were over, that we were astonished to find that Mr. Blaine complained to Sir Julian Pauncefote that a breach of faith had been committed. It is true that Mr. Blaine had stipulated for a discussion of the question in private, and se fully understood that what vould take place at that conference would be private. I believe that this is the case in regard to every occasion of that kind. The negotiations are private, and the delegates or plenipotentiaries agree before concluding their negotiations what pari of them shall he given to the public, but we had no reasgu to suppose that the fact that the conference was to take place, was to be private any more than the fact that the negotiations of 18.8 would tahs place was kept private when it wis published in London and in this country before the couference sit at all. The letter of Mr. Blaine to Sir Julian Pauncefote dated 1st April, contained the tirst intimation of complaint on the part of the Washington Giovernment that faith had not been kept. and that secrecy had not been olserved, I include in my explanation the High Commissioner likewise, who had no other source of information than the despatches in our hamds. Sir. when, with surprise and some feeling of amoyance, luring the first week in April, we read Mr. Blaine's complaint dated the lst April. we immediately set ourselves to work to see what ground there was for an assertion on his part that faith had not leen kept with him. aml that privacy had not been olserved. It lecamemyduty tomake some enipuiries into the matter, and I have among my papers a note written to me by the late Premier with which he enclosed to me all the papers in order that I might make a review of them for the purpose of seeing upon what groumd such complaint could possibly In made, and he added an olservation in the language which I just made to the House:
" You will observe that while we understood that the proceerings of the conference wers to be kept private. there was not one word of intimation to us that the fact of a conference going to be held, was to be kept private." Well, Sir, it has cranspired that through an unfortunate mistake in the transmission of the telegram which I real to the House, from Lord Knutsford, a few moments ago, there was a stipulation which was not communicated to us, and it was not untila few diays before the close of the last session of Parliament that we obtainel the real text of that telegram aml saw that a mistake had oecurrel, which mistake led most improperly to the imputation of bid faith heing made against this Government-most improperly and at the same time not unreasonably, in view of the stipulations that were made. It transpired afterwards, on reading that letter of Mr. Blaine of the list of April, that there had been a stipulation that even the fact of negotiations leing on foit or a meeting being appointed, was to be kept private. Sow, if the House will take the trouble to look at that telegram on page 78 they will observe one place at which, the composition of the messiage seems to halt. I will just read a few words before it :
*The United States Government ras willing to discuss the question in private with Sir Julian Pauncefote and one or more delegates from Canada, and to consider every subject as to which there was hope of agrecing on the ground of mutual interests: if not, and to risk so gravea step-"
And so on. There is'a halt in the composition which we naturally supposed was merely due to the error, perhaps, of a single worl in the transmission of the telegran: : but it transpired afterwards that these important worls were omittel :

[^25]imputed to us on the part of Mr. Blaine. I may say that the enyuiries which were set on foot with regard to that telegram: disclosed the fact that the blunder occurred somewhere hetween the despatch of the message from Downing street and its receipt by His Excellency here, and that His Ex cellency did not hear until about the time that I mentioned, what the text of the telegram was, but supposed. as every one of us supposed, that the telegram, as given in the sessional papers, was the ielegram actually sent from Downing strect, as it was the telegramupn which we actel. The matter has been explainel to the fovernment of the United states, and that diovernment is not small enough or despicable enough to undertake to repulse the representatives of this comntry. invited as they practically were by Mr. Blaine's intimation about negotiating a wicle reciprocity treaty, on the ground that we hat broken faitl with him, when what did serur was entirely the result of a mistake. But the had faith of that imputation is specially shown by the fr.et that it was after the publication had been made in the newspapers and on the platform by Sir John A. Macdonald, by Sir Charles Tupper, by myself at Toronto, by my colleagues everywhere else-it was after all that, that Mr. Blaine invited us to meet him on the bith April. the date which he subsequently had to change on account of the engagements of the Presilent. We might have expected that, after that fact had been expanded on the recorals which are published as part of the sessional papers of this House, the House would have heard nothing of the fable that we were repulsed and given but a three minutes interview, lecause we hal broken faith with the Government of the United States, and required to be sent down on a period of probation for misconduct. Sir, if Mr. Blaine had been under tie impression that we had wilfully hroken faith with him and reguired to be put on a perion of probsation for misconduct, it is not very likely he would have fixed a date for our interview, or that subsegi:ently he would have, with many apologies, explained to us his regret that the interview could not take place at the time appointedat the time, to use his own words in one of these despatches, that " we had fixed for the intervicu." Now, the hon. gentleman further endeavoured to put a gloss, it seemed to me, upon the recond, by guoting to the House with great emphasis a letter which Mr. Blaine wrote to Mr. Baker at that period. That letter did duty last session in an endeavour to persuade this House and the country that all we had said upon the subject of negotiations at Wiashington, was untrue. that there was a letter from Mr. Blaine to Congressman Baker leclaring that there were no negotiations on foot for a renewal of the reciprocity treaty in 18it. In strictness, Mr. Blaine's letter to Mr. Baker was correct. The negotiations were not proceeding, but a day hal been tixed when they would begin. In strictness again, the letter was literally correct, because the negotiations were not for a renewal of the reciprocity treaty of 1854 , but for a renewal of the reciprocity treaty of 1854 with extensions and modifications such as might suit the alterel circumstances of the two countries, and including a large number of other questions as well. Mr. Blaine was perfectly right and perfectly within his dity in giving to Mr. Baker a short and decisive answer to his enquiry, and his answer was literally correct, and still was not in the least degree inconsistent with the fact that we had made proposals to him about which he intended to have negotiations in the future, as he eventually had. Now, then, the hon. gentleman told the House, during one of those periods when he was endeavouring to show that our policy was altogether too vague to satisfy the country, or too vague to become a basis for the confidence of the country-that the proposals miade in December, 1890 , were altogether too vague, and that the Ministers who went to Washington must have heen exceedingly silly if they supposed that on such a basis there was any chance of making a reciprocity arrangement. Why, Sir, how could we suppose it to be too vague when three different dates were afterwards fixed by the Administration of the United States for a confer. ence to take place with regard to those very proposals? They were too vague, says niy hon. friend from Bothwell, to be the basis of any rational negotiations; but they were not too vague for Mr . Blaine to tell us that he would meet us to discuss them on 6th April, that he would meet us any tince after the 4 th March, that he would meet us on 12th October, and finally that he would meet us on 10th February, when he actually did meet us, and had negotiations, notwithstanding the vagueness of the proposals, which negotiations extended over six or seven clays. The hon. gentleman declared that we went there for the purpose, of securing a renewal of the reciprocity treaty of 1854 , with such moditications and extensions as the altered circumstances of the country might require, and then he read Mr. Blaine's letter to Mr. Baker, in which he said: "You are quite authorized in denying that a treaty for natural products only will be renewed, and he asked how we conld expect to succeed in our mission. Again I call the attention of the House to the fact that this is the way the record is closed from time to time, and this is the way in which information is given to the public. The letter from Mr. Blaine to Mr. Baker intimated that the reciprocity treaty of 1854 would not be reneweri. Nor did we expect it would be ; but we thought it might be renewed with modifications and extensions which have been pointed out from time to time in both countries as having arisen in consequence of the changed circumstances of trade, changed treaty obligations and changed means of communication. The hon. gentleman declared to us, and he was cheered by his followers when he mate the statement that it was a significant fact that we promised to go to Washington when the general elections were on and that we went there when the bye-elections were on. The hon. gentleman has put the car a little before the horse. The general elec. tions came on because we were under engagement to go to Washington and wished to give and opportunity to the country to pronounce on the policy on which the negotiations should take place; and so far is it from it being.a fact that we went there because the bye-elections were on, this is the fact, that Mr. Blaine was willing to appoint an earlier day, and we might have gone before the bye-elections harl begun, but we intimated to him that in consequence of the engagements then pressing on Ministers, it would be most inconvenient for us to go before 10 th February. My colleagues therefore were able to participate with some effect in the bye-elections which had come off; and we were able not to telegraph from Washington the news to the bye-elections, that negotiations were going on very satisfactorily, and that the electors had better vote for us because we were able to give them reciprocity, but to receive there the glad news that the hands of every man who was striving for the welfare of Canada and British connection were being strengthened by the electors. The hon. gentleman made an extraordinary paraphrase of the mission of the Ministers, to-night. The hon. gentleman speaks of the new colony, which is the facetious phrase he arlopts as applicable to the new members of the House. That is a colony which I hope will increase. It was not so much our colonization efforts which disheartened him as the exodus which has taken place from his own side of the House. The hon. gentleman declared that the new colony in this House looked on with the greatest dismay at my friend the Minister of Finance going to Washington. They looked upon him, he said, as being seduced by some sorceress, and he described the way in which my hon. friend went to that palace of enchantment, the White House at Washington. If the Honse will take the trouble to compare the hon. gentleman's interesting periods in that part of his speech with the expressions which came from his press at the time we went to Washington, hon. members will see that there has been a change. We were not acensed then of being influenced by a sorceress, but every effort to make the mission a failure was put forward with diligence and vigour by the hon. gentleman's press, and by the speeches which his friends delivered. He will see in that stage of our history a unique phase, for it was the nrst time, at all events, in a British country, when a political party endeavoured to traduce the Ministers who went to represent their people and to secure interests for them from a foreign country. But there is no difficulty in accounting for this change of tone. We have every reason tosuppose that those who endeavoured to make our mission a failure, and who asserted, even in the press at Washington under our eyes, that we had come there, not for the purpose of entering into honest negotiations with the United States, but for the mere purpose of humbugging the Secretary of Stateand making political capital out of our mission, imagined their influence was so great that they could for a moment disturb the harmony of the negotiations entered upon. But their minds have changed now that they find that some practical results have been arrived at on this mission, when they heard how we were received and how the mission resulted, they sneer at the palace of enchantinent at Washington. The hon. gentleman in another passage of his speech, which I shall have to refer to in a few moments, spoke at very great length about the want of papers. The hon. gentleman cited a great many precedents from the Imperial Parliament for the purpose of showing us that time and again the absence of papers was made a reason for not going on with a discussion. The hon. gentlenan might have saved hiniself the labour, becanse we would have admitted at the outset that in every Parliannent the absence of papers is made a reason, time and again, for refusing to go on with a discussion. How often does it occur here, as in a great many cases he read from the Imperial records, that on a motion for papers the House is urged into a discussion of a question of policy, and Ministers rise and decline, in the absence of papers, to discuss the question of policy

whict they may involve, anl inform the House that hon. members will be ahle to arrive at a better judgment on the question when the papers are laid on the Table. That is every day practice. The hon. gentleman read a number of instances in which Ministers protested against discussion going on under these circumstances. He has not read to us one instance of a Minister being interrupted in his statement to the House of what had transpirerl on an objection, either by way of order or by way of complaint, of any violation of constitutional usage, on the ground that we heard put forward the other night, and again this afternoon, that the House, forsooth, ought not to be informed as to what went forward elsewhere unless we brought the information down in writing and had in the meantime communicaterl it to His Excellency the (iovernor General. I challenge him now, and I challenge all his friends before this debate closes, to guote me an instance from the records of the Imperial Parliament where a member ever charged a Minister with impropriety for giving information to the House, and desired that he should keep it back until it had heen communicated to Her Majesty and sent by Her to the House. Our position on that question is just what I stated it to be the other night. It is our duty to give the House any information in our possession, and we shall do that whether that information may in the meantime have been communicated to any one else or not. Why, the results of negotiations that take place in the mother country - and they occasionally are conducted by Ministers - are reported to the House by a Minister standing in his place and making a statement of facts, and sometimes, and I have heard of notable cases in modern history, the results of a mission have not been given to the Honse before they have been proclaimed from the house tops even, by the Minister on his return from his mission. Let me say to the hon. gentleman, further, that with respect to the whole boly of precerlents which he quoted, whether applicable or not, or whether in the least degree in line with his objections or not, we have satistied the requirements of every one of them, because we have brought down every shred of the corres pondence, so far as I know. But, the hon. gentleman was not putting the real proposition to the House, for the proposition which he stated the other evening, and which, I suppose, his argument was intended to enforce, was not that we had kept back correspondence, because, he could not assert that, but his proposition was: That a Minister should never make a statement to the House as to what has transpired, until he puts it in writing, sends it somewhere else and gets it sent back bere to be laid on the Table. All that Isay on that subject is, that in the first place, every particle of the correspondence has been brought down, and that as regards any record or memorandun that may have been marle as to ourinterviews, we are just as free to make a statement to the House as to what transpired during our mission to Washington, as if we had never put the matter in writing at all. The hon. gentleman is seeking to avail himself of a most ingenious excuse for claiming to be at a disadrantage in this debate, but it is an excuse which he will find will in no way avail him if other papers should eventually be brought down on this question. Let me call the attention of the House, before I leare this subject, to the way in which this matter about the papers came up originally. Although the House has been for 30 days in session, we have never yet been asked for the papers, except on one occasion. On that occasion, when we were expecting to be interrogated and requested to make a statement to the House as to what transpired at Wiashington, I was asked by the hon. the learler of the Opposition something about the correspondence and something with regard to its secrecy, an I I stated that we had received the full assent of the Washington Govermment to everything being stated that had transpired. The hon. the leader of the Opposition asked if that were in writing, and I said it was. He asked if it would be brought down and I said it would be. I brought down not only that paper, but as I have said before, all the convespondence bearing on the subject, and everything that could in the remotest way come within the region of the instances and cases and precedents which the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) cited to the House this afternoon. I suppose it will not be necessary that I should detain the House, even for a few moments to discuss what the hon. gentleman dwelt upon in the last few moments of his speech, with regarl to discrimination. The hon. gentleman was as ingenious as ustad and as dexterous as usual, but it see:ned to me, that he was only playing with words, when he declared that because we decided to import tea and coffee free in this country, we were discriminating against the country that produced brandy. because we did not import that free also. That was the hon. gentleman's argument. Now, there may be something ingenious and something somul in it , but if there is anything in it, it is simply a play upon words. There may he cliscrimination between the products of different comatries, but he knew perfectly well from the statement which my hon. friend the Minister of Finance male, that the discrimination which is demandel by the United States is something more serious and act:aal than that, and that it means that the stme tariff shall not apply to the same articles if coming from two countries; but that the articles which shall be free to the one shall be taxed. anl taxed to an enormous rate if coming from another: That is the kind of practical diserimination which we are talking about, and refinements about spanish wine as compared with tea and coffe are altogether outside of the question. The hon. gentleman declared that after all he could not helieve that discrimination against Great Britain would be enforced by the United States, because they dil not enforce it with regard to the West Indies. Any one who looks at that matter will see the total difference of situation and of prolucts as hetween the West Indies and this country. The West Indies produce what the Uniteil states reguires and require the products of the United Nitates. It would be utterly unnecessary for the West Indies to discriminate against Great Britain, because on a level tariff even the articles of manufacture which the United States can send them would take possession of their markets. As regards Newfoundland the hon. gentleman's argument was at fault, because the great complaint we had to make against the Newfoundland convention was that it did discriminate against a portion of the British Empire-the Dominion of Canada. It was because we made that appear to Her Majestys (iovermment that Her Majesty's Govermment declined to ratify that convention. If the hon. gentleman wishes to persuade this House or any intelligent portion of our people, that we may be able to get reciprocity without discrimination, because the West Indies got it, and hecause Newfoundland did not get it without discrimination, he has to answer the deliberate statement of his financial leader who declared to the country that his party were prepared to diseriminate : not in the fanciful sense of comparing tea and cotfee with Spanish wine, but in the actual sense of raising the tariff high on English gools and allowing American goocls in free. If 1 am not very much mistaken the hon. meminer fer South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) went a step farther. and said that it would be ahsurd to expect that we could get reciprocity on any other terms: and if my memory does not again disceive me, the same hon. gentleman made a statement very much to the same effect when he spoke the other night in this Honse in reply to the Ninister of Finance. Now, Sir, the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) has endeavoured to meet, as other gentlemen on that side of the House have done, the statement of the Minister of Finance, that the adoption of the American tariff and discrimination against all other countries than the United States, were the only terms on which we could get reciprocity with the United States. He has met that statement with the remark that he does not believe it. It is the shortest and simplest way to satisfy his own conscience and that of his friends. They camot meet it by a word of reason. They could not during the election contestsdeny that these measures were inevitable, at any rate as regards discrimination, and they cannot now argue away the necessity for the equalization of our tariff to the American tariff, any better than they could argue away discrimination then. Here is what the hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) told us the other evening, and when we read it let us contrast it with theargument of the hon. gentleman from Bothwell (Mr. Mills) that he does not believe that these terms would le imposed and that if commissioners went from the other side of the House to Washington they could do a great deal hetter. Here is what the hon. member for south Oxforl (Sir Richard (Cartwright) said in the House:
"Allow me to tell the hon. gentleman "- Was he speaking to the hon. member for Bothwell or to whom:
"Allow me to tell the hon. gentleman that reciprocity, in the very nature of the case, must involve-not discrimination, as he puts it artfully, for the purdose of exciting prejudice algainst it : but every genume reciprocity treaty involves this: If a country is going to give you special privileges, you must give that country special privileges in return. It is of the very essence of reciprocity. It would be monstrous for the hon. gentleman or his colleagues to expect that the United States or any other country, would enter into a reciprocity treaty on any other terms."
The hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) who now says "hear, hear," seeks to pat that on record alongside of his statement, that perhaps discrimination would not be required in the case of Canada, because it was not required in the case of the West Indies, where there was no discrimination at all, and where the terms which the hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) sought to reconcile this country to, were never imposed. The hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) is willing to swallow that pill now. forgetting that a few moments ago he wanted us to accept a story abont getting reciprocity on the same terms as the West Indies and Newfoundand. Mr. Speaker, a good deal has been said in this debate about the way in which the amouncement of my hon. friend the Minister of Finance was receiverl, as to the conclusion which had been come to with regard to these reciprocity negotiations. We are toll, Sir, that that announcement was received with cheers, especially from what the hon. member calls the new colony in the House. Why, Nir, every person who listened to that speech knows that the statement which was cheered was the announcement that we would not accept reciprocity on such terms as were offered. The hon. Minister of Finance had made a statement to the House, that we had not succeerled in arranging for enlarged trade relations with the United states, and the House was silent: but when he went on to tell the House the price at which we might obtain them, and that we had rejected them at that price, there was a cheer in this House as there was it cheerful feeling throughout the country. Put, sir, I can remember very well. for it was not more than twelve months ago, when this House rang with cheers from the other side, including the little colony that has gone into exile, when the hon. member for south Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) declared that the fact that we had reduced our sugar duties showed that we were not independent of the United States, but had to submit to the dictation of that country. I can remember very well, also, when the Blaine-Baker letter was read to this House. and when the hon. gentleman, who professes even to-night to be so much in favour of a reciprocity treaty in natural products if it only could be got, went into raptures when at the close of that letter Mr. Blane declared that the reciprocity treaty of 18 int could not he renewed, and that no negotiations conld le had with regard to natural products alone. I remember many occasions when this House was told ingrave accents night after night by these hon. gentlemen, that this Govermment could not get reciprocity from the UnitedStates, and when the roof shook with applause from the Opposition. And yet we are told that the memhers on this side of the House are not to cheer when they find that their representatives refuse to accept reciprocity on terms which would be not only degrading, hut ruinous to every interest in this country. There is another fahle which we owe to the ingenuity of my hon. friend from South Brant (Mr. Paterson), who spoke during the first night's delate, when his party was under great stress of weather. I never admired his ingenuity more than I did then, when he arose and endeavoured to extricate his party from their confusion by an ingenions-I was going tosay misrepresentation, but an ingenious gloss which he cast over the whole debate when he presented to the Honse as a brand new idea, that what the Minister of Finance had done was to go to Washington and ask Mr. Blaine for some suggestions as to how he might govern this country. We were delighted with the ingenuity which the hon. gentleman evinced; but we have not admired so much the persistency with which his statement has been gravely repeated to the House since. The hon. gentleman's sense of humour was excited at the curious position of his own party on that occasion ; but the statement has been repeated since by hon. gentlemen who really thought he was in earnest. By this time they have even got the Finance Minister down on his knees, representing him as having gone to Washington and gone down on his knees to Mr. Blaine to ask for a hint as how to devise a fiscal policy for Canada. And this is the way they represent what has transpired at every negotiation which has taken place, I suppose, since the world hegan : one side making a proposition, and when the other side declines it, that side leing asked to make a counter proposition. The Minister of Finance, in what. Mr. Blaine calls a free and framk discussion, after that gentleman had declined our original proposition, was asked to make a proposition which, from his knowledge of the conditions of the country, he thought would be acceptable to Canala ; and because my colleague did that, which has been done in every negotiation that has taken place since the world began, my hon. friend is accused of trying to get a hint from Mr. Blaine for a tiscal policy for Canada. I am sure that my hon. friend from south Brant will acquit me of supposing that he intended that story to go down with the intelligent people of this country. One word more as to the allusion of the hon. member for Bothwell to the new colony. The hon. gentlemen leclared that they were in great glee, because the old speeches would do again, and the old songs could still be sung. Sir, the reason for the speeches we have hearl from the other side of the House, delivered with more than usual vehemence and ill-feeling -in ill-feeling which is exhibited by the hon. members that declaration that he answers everything that the Minister. of Finance said by not believing him-the reason is that tie little colony at the left of the Speaker is not able to sing the old songs again. The old speeches will not go down any longer; and when the hon. gentlemen opposite make their appearance before the country again, they are very likely to be asked, not what is the policy of the (iovernment in the string of questions which my hon. friend from Pothwell put to us to-night, but what policy have you got to take the place of that which has gone to wreck and ruin under your eyes within the last few months:

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Mr. Speaker, the hon. leader of the House, who has just resumed his seat after speaking for over an hour, closed with almost the sume question with which he opened his speech. He was asked by my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Mills) what the policy of the Government was with reference to the trade relations between this country and the United States. The hon. gentleman did not deign to tell us what that policy was, but he replied in the Irishman's way by asking, what is the policy of the Opposition? The hon. gentleman started with that proposition and he closed with it ; and from the satisfaction with which his own countenance beamed, and the manner in which his remarks were received by his followers, he evidently considered that when he asked the question, the question was closed. Sir, I think the people of this country will not be satisfied, now that there has been a most lamentable failure in the apparent attempt of the Government to negotiate a treaty whether their attempt was an honest or dishonest one, and on that I have my own opinion and a very strong one-the people of this comntry will not be satistied with asking the Opposition, what is your policy, but they will ask the (iovermment what is theirs. The financial comblition of the comontry is sutticiently serious to justify us in asking the leader of the House not to trifle with it ly asking his opponents for a policy to guide hini, but by telling the country what his policy is. I was somewhat surprised at one statement which the hon. gentleman made to-night, hecanse its historical accuracy I totally deny. He took the position that the convention negotiated between Newfoundland and the United States, which this Government succeeded in preventing the ratification of, provideri for discrimination against Camada and in favour of the United States. Sir, I hold that convention in my hamd: it is in the otficial papers hefore the hon. gentleman: I have read it time and again, and I challenge him or any hon. gentleman sitting heside him or behind him to place his tinger on one paragraph which the ingenuity of man could construe into discrimination against Canada. There is not a worl in the convention, from leginning to end, which justifies the hon. gentleman's statement, and I hold in my hand here, if it was necessary to give further proof, a speech delivered the other day by in hom. gentleman, a member of the Newfommand Government, in which, reading the treaty from end to end he asked: Where is the charge which has been insidionsly circulated throughout (amala that the convention negotiatel with the Unitel states originally discriminated against Cinada: It does not exist. The Hom. Mr. Harvey hass stated so. I have read the concention time aml ayain to see how this rumour could be justified, and I have no hesitation in giving my opinion that there is nothing in the treaty, from legiming to end, which could justify such an assertion. The hon. gentleman iwelt for a long time to-night with the historical part of the speech of my hon. friend from Bothwell.
Mr. TUPPER. I would like to ask the hon. gentleman, with reference to the convention, what was the proposed duty upon flow going into Newfoundland and the revemie tariff on foor from other countries:
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) The Newfomelland statute, which preseribed the duty to come into force, after the convention became a treaty, prescribed a duty of 25 cents per barrel on flour and $$ 1.50$ upon pork.
Mr. TUPPER. What was the duty on flour coming from other countries into Newfoundland? What was the proposed daty, according to the draft convention, on flour coming from the United States at the time the draft treaty was submitted?

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I am realing from the draft treaty :
"When this convention shall come into operation and during the continuance thereof, the duties to be levied and collected upon the following euumerated merchandise imported into the colony of Newfoundland from the United States shall not exceed the following amounts, viz., flour, 25 cents per barrel."

Mr. TUPPER. And the general luty was 30 cents.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I take the speech of Mr. Harvey.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) If hom gentlemen are prepare, to accept the ipse: dixit of the Minister of Marine against the law-

Mr. Foster. Take their tarift and read it.
Mr. DATIES (P.F.I.) If hon gentlemen opposite are prepared to accept the Minister of Marine's ip, diceit against the Newfoundland tariff, as I read it, and as it was purportel, at any rate, to he read hy Mr. Harvey, I have mothing to saty: He stated in his speech that he had telegraphed to, Newfomalland for a rethation copy of the tarift, and that copy he read to the Board of Trade in Halifax. and he gave, aceording to the report of his speech which I have in my hand and which appearel in the Morming chronirle the day follow-ing,.$=-\mathrm{F}$ cents as the tariff enacted by the Newfommand legislature, and the same is put in the convention between them and the Linited states.

Mr. TLPPER. The hom. gentleman will not whect to my errecting him on a very important sulpect, and the conrection is guite consistent with the statement Mr. Harvey hats lately marle. I simply wish to state this, ats a matter with which I am pretty familiar. that. speaking of the draft convention and of the tariff of Newfommand and the subject of discrimination, one must look, ant at the spreech mate in the last few months, but in the year the draft treaty was nerotiated and a revenue tariff existed, and when the Camalian Government interfered on behalf of Camadis. And I state positively, after leoking intol looth the revemse tariff and the draft treaty of that time. and having studied the guestion arrefully, that when the revenue tariff of Newfomilland impesed a treaty on How coming from various cosutries of the world of 30 cents a larrel, the proposial of Mr. Boml in the draft treaty with Mr. Blaine was that the duty upon the flour from the Cuited States to Newfomilland should be e. cents instead of 311 cents. That statement has unt heen contranficted by Mr. Harrey in his recent speech nor has one ever contralicted it.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) The hon gentlenan hats darkened counsel with words. and I will show him the convention, the tems of which provide explicitly that 2.5 cents per barrel shall be charged on How.

Mr. BOWELL. From the states.

Mr. Daties (P.E.I.) The comention is app'e. able to the States alone, but the point is, does th it conventiou prescrile in any of its parts that there shall be diserimination against any other comntry:

Mr. Bowell. Certainly it does.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I say not. I say that the legislation enacted in Newfoundland for the purpose of carrying out that convention declared that: "When the proposed convention between this colony and the United States shall come into operation and during the continuance thereof, the duties to be levied and collected upon the following enumerated merchandise importel into the colony of Newfoundland shall not exceed the following amounts, viz. :-Flour, 2is cents per barrel." So that the legislation which Newfoundland enacted to carry out the convention prescribed that when that convention became a treaty, 25 cents duty should lie the only duty imposed, and therefore there was no discrimination at all. That matter, Isubmit, is beyondany reasonable doubt. I say that when the leater of the House challenged the speech delivered liy the hon. member for Bothwell, he devoted threefourtho of his remarks to the introlnctory or historical part of my hom. friemels aldress. That historical part was leathing up to the proposition be wisheri to sti, mit to the Homse as a constitutional propenition. Anl what was it: It was that when a Minister of the Crowninitiateda discussion uponnegotiations which hall takenplace between Ministersof the (rownami: foreign country, he was bomel to sulmit th the House all the papers. protocols and facts comecteri with them. How dres the hom. gentlenam meet that propesition: Does he wish the House to anderstand, ame this is a matter of importane that while there were protocols and offers mate ami reduced to writing with reference to the puestions. of wreckinge and fisheries, and Alaskal lomularies. and every other matter then and there disenseme. there was nome reduced to writing and mu after made to or by the United states with referente to reciprocitys boes the hom genteman mean to tell! this House and this comutry that, gonge as a iepresentative of the Crown to Wishingtom, a phasi aceredited ambassalor or diphonatist, authonized ly His Fxcellency to speatk in the name of the Qucen: he discussed the matter during four on five days and made no report in writing of His Excellency Wilt the hom. gentleman tell the people ami the Homse that there is no official document in writine exving an accome of what tamspired between himself ani colleagues on the one sine and Mr. Blane and dieneral Foster on the orher? I challenge the hom. gentleman to make the assertion. They havin limought down the other papers. We find that the offers mate by this bovernment to the Cuitend states with respect to each of the suljecte 1 hare mentioned were relucel to writing, as they oneht to, be, so that there wonld he no, misumderstanding on the one part or the other. The hom. gentlemam wishes, his followers and this House to lelieve that there does not exist any ofticial record of his mission to Washington or the offers mate por or con on the subject or any memo. of their own. The unassail. able proposition of the hon. member for Bothwell is this, that the Ministry having challengella discussion upen that question, were hound ly constitutional usage to lay lefore the Honse the fatct.. s, that a discussion might take place. Thes hom. gentleman says he gave no reasons why he din hot believe the statements of the Minister of Finance. When we get the facts as they are, as we believe them to be, in writing, when the constitutional usage is complied with, when Parliament is supplied with the information it ought to have and that some day or other it must have, then we will be able to tell whether the frail memory of the Minister of Finance is correct or not. We are not imputing turpitule to the hon. Minister. and when we say he misrepresented what took place. we simply say that he is like other men, a frail man; and, when we remember what occurred on a previous occasion, we tind that serious differences of opinion occurred letween Canada aml the United States (Government as to what actually did take place. Therefore we say that what the hon. gentleman started out to prove he did prove, and that it remains unassailen, and that the hon. gentleman opposite, notwithstanding the applause with which his followers greeted him, has failed to show one instance in British history where aml, tssarlors went to a foreign country to negotiate a treaty and asked Parliament to discuss their action without laying before Parliament an official record of what they did. The hon. gentleman waxed somewhat warm in regard to an implied imputation that he had not, on a former occasion, accurately represented the attitude of the governments of the iwo countries to one another. The hon. gentleman told the electors at a public: meeting in Perth, held on the 1sth November, 1891, that Camadia had not approached the Einited states, but that the initiation of this matter came from the United States (iovermment. He said:
"The statement the Camadian (iorernment began the negotiations was not altogether true, because the first imimation came early in the year from Mr. Blaine to Sir Julian Patuncefote, the British Minister at Washington, that he was willing to make a reciprocity arrangement with Canada. (Mr. Foster-'Hear, hear, hear.') That was the first thing which intimated to the Government of Canada that such proposals would be acceptable to the Enired States. They wanted no further invitation, but, immediately forwarded their proposals to Wiashington."
sir, is that correct ; is that historical truth ; is that a fair representation of what took place between these two comntries: The matter is not perhaps of the grave importance that it promised at one time :o lie, hecause Mr. Blaine, after an apology had heen mate by Canald's representative, expressed himself as willing to pass it orer, hat we have first Mr. Blaine's statement to Sir Julian Panncefote of Ist April, in which reference is made to the statements of Sir Charles Tupper and the late Sir John Machonali, and Mr. Blaine stys to Sir Julian Pituncefote:
"In view of the fact that you had come to the State" Tepartment with the proposals, and that the subject was then for the first time mentioned between us, and in view of the further fact that I agreed to a private conferenceas expained in wy Minute, I confess that it was a surprise to me when several weeks later during the Canadian canvass, Sir John Miacdonald and Sir Charles Tupper, both stated beforepublicassembljes that an informal discussion of a $r$ ciprocity treaty would take place at Washington after the th of March, by the initiation of the Secrecary of Stute.
"I detail these facts, because I deem it important, since the matter has been for some weeks open to public remarks. to h:ave it settled that the couference was not "initiated" by me, but on the contrary, that the private arrangenent of which $I$ spoke was but a modification of your uroposal and in no sense an original suggestion from the Government of the United States."
And, if there is any possibility of doubt remaining, we have Sir Charles Tupper going as the representative of Canala to Washincton, and auldressing an official communication to Mr. Blaine, in which he uses the following language with respect to that statement:
" I told Mr. Blaine that I wished. in the outset, to recognize the recuracy of the statement contained in his letter to Sir Julian Pauncefote, which I had seen in reference to the initiation of the negotiations regarding reciprocal trade arrangements between the two countries."
Mr. Blaine says that in no sense did any initiation of the negotiations come from the United States (iovermment, and Sir Charles Tupper says that he acknowledges the accuracy of that statement. The hon. gentleman had made statements on more than one platform directly at variance with that fact, and to-might he tries to escape from the unfortunate position in which he has placed himself and the country by saying there was some mistake in the worling of a despatch and that they had not the actual words of the despatch before them at the timé.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I sail nothing of the kind in the speech I made at Perth.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.II.) The hom. gentleman silit some woris had been omitted from the despateh, and he hat not seen those words. The hon. gentleman knows that, in the despatch on which he says he acted, it was stated three times that the discussion to which he went was to be a private discussion ani not an official one. Therefore the hon. gentleman could not have understood, if he real the despatch with the excised words ont, that he was to make this matter public which it was unlerstoonl was to be kept private between the govermments of the two countries. Faith had been broken between the representatives of this fiovernment and the (iovermment of the United States, and the hon. gentleman occupied a most humiliating position when he hat to go to Washington and, through the mouth of Sir Charles Tupper, make an apology for the statement which hat leeen published. But the Govermment had gained a temporary triamph, and they hal to do anything they could to get out of the scrape. The hon. gentleman says it is a small matter, hut, as he has introduced it, I will refer to it agrain, and that is in reference to the proposal to admit certain articles free of duty moder what is called the statutory offer. The hon. gentleman says that the action of the Government was perfectly consistent in the matter. It is within the recollection of every hom. member who was then in the House, that a proposition uats male on this side to meet the offer of the United States Govermment, and that, as the United States had selected certain articles which were to be admitted free of duty, we were bound to reciprocate. The hon. gentleman not only repudiated that with indignation, but he used language, which I think, he ifterwards was ashamed of. When he was twitted with that language afterwards, he attempted to explain it away, but there it is in the Henserel, and what is that language? He says:
"I can only say, if the Crown, haring discretion, uses it in that way, it would use it to betray the interests of the people of Canada."
That is, that to permit one or more of the articles referred to in the statutory offer free into Canada when the United States admit them free into that country, if the Crown used it in that way, it would use it to betray the interests of Canala. Not a week after that-an hon. gentleman says only two days after--the (iovermment, at the dictation of sir Charles Tupper, receded from their lofty position and exercised the discretion he, a few days before, had said it would be a betrayal of the interests of Canadia to exercise. The hon. gentleman tried to evade that by stating that it forced construction had been put upon his language, but the words are there and anyone can real then for himself. I suppose he thought our memories were defective, or that we could not look up tine book again. Now, Sir, I do not propose to follow the discussion on the lines which it has followed for the last hour or iwo, any further. Speaking for myself, I would have been well satisfied to have left the discussion of the question where it was after the hon. Minister of Finance had spoken, and my hou. friend from South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartivright) had replied, but when I reflected upon the importance of the statements which he made respecting reciprocity and the chances of our ever obtaining a reciprocity treaty with the United States, the importance to my own province in particular, and to the provinces knownasthe three Maritime Provinces, I felt I was in duty lomm to present to the House the condition in which those provinces stand, and I promise the House that I will not occupy a moment's time longer than is absolutely neressary to submit a few facts which I think it is desirable the conutry should know with respect to the condition of these provinces. The Minister of Finance took credit to himself that the condition of the comitry was reasonalily prosperons. He intimater to us that the exports were $\mathrm{S} 92, \mathrm{BN}),(\mathrm{OO})$, that this was an increase of $B S,(K M),(M X)$ he vond the average exports of Canala. I think he said, since(Confederation, and $\$ 10,0(O),(X K)$ over the year 1889. Although the hom. gentleman dil unt siy so in so many words, he challenged the admiration of his followers, and challenged their applause by intimating that in some way or another the fiovernment should receive credit for this large export. Fer my part I fail to understand why the Govermment should be entitled to any credit whatever for Canala's exports. The hon. gentleman, 1 know, poses as a medicine man, pretending that he can bring about good crops or bad crops. just as he pleases. The time was when he repudiat ed the suggestion that a Minister could be a thy on the wheel : he thought that legislation could be enacted to make a country prosperous, and he asks that credit be given to the Government for that condition of affairs. Sir. I rejoice as well as he does over the magniticent harvest of last year. It was a godsend to Canada from one end to the other. I rejoice that in the province from which I come, we harl a magnificent harrest. it saved us from a great deal of misery. I believe the harvest in the North-West was one of the greatest they ever had hefore, and it put a large amount of money in the pockets of the farmers. But, sir, I deny-it is not necessary to deny it, everybody knows it--that the Government can in any sense be entitled to the least degree of credit for that. The hon. gentleman might heat his political tom-tom over every wheat-field in Canada, and he might get his lieutenant the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to curse my ion. friend (Sir Richard Cartwright) ly all his gods, and the grain would grow just the sime as ever, and the fisheries would yield up their fruits, and so would the mines. The hon. gentleman is absolutely powerless in the matter. He told us in years gone by that the increase of deposits in the savings banks indicated the prosperity of the country ; but now that the savings banks deposits have decreased, I think some $\$ 3,000,000$ last year, and $\$ 3,000,000$ the year hefore, the hon. gentleman intimates that the fact must not be taken in any way as an evidence that prosperity is decreasing. Well, Sir, I never thought that the deposits in the savings banks afforded any indication of the prosperity of the comntry, buit I to think the withdrawal of those deposits cannot be accounted for entirely in the manner the hon. gentleman suggests. I think in some places that the people have withdrawn from the savings banks the moneys they had deposited there in order to use them for their daily wants. But I would not press the argument arising from the deposits in the savings lank as any evidence of the prosperity of the country, nor viee ver*a. Sir, the hon. gentleman stated that there was another evidence of prosperity, he quoted statistics with reference to railways, he quoted the increase in the mileage of railways and the quantity of produce they had carried, the increase tomning they had carried and the passengers they had carried, and he intimated that that was a capital test of the prosperity of the country. My hon. friend lehind me (Mr. Landerkin) interjected a remark and asked him if those railways were under the management of the Covernment, and he was treated, I thought rather rudely by the Minister of Finance, who retorted that that question was an evidence of sapience of the hon. gentleman from Grey. I thought the question was very aptly put, I thought the questionevidenced astrong appreciation of the facts by the hon. gentleman from Girey, hecause he wanted to show that these railways for the alministration of which the Government were responsible, did not share in the increased tomage carried, or the increased number of passengers carrien, or the increased profits, and therefore that the Government were responsible, for all the other railways were making money and those that were specially under the control of the forerment were losing it, and therefore the fovernment were responsible for the loss. Sir, what is the fact: We discussed it last night. In the history of Canala there never has been a showing one-half so bal as the hon. gentiemen make ont with reference to the Intercolonial Railway. Why, sir, there is this fact with reference to the Intercolonial Railway-hecause when you corner these hon. gentlemen with regard to the conmercial condition of Canala and the exports and imports of Canala, they say: Oh, there is that vast interprovincial trate of which we have no record. There is this fact with respect to the $\mathbf{I n}_{1}$ tercolonial Pailway. that it is the omly large railway in Canada which is strietly interprovincial. If the traffic on the Canalian Pacitic Railway and the traftic on the Graml Trunk Railway have increased, it is very largely due to the fact that those two great railways have comections with the country to the south of us, whereas this Intercolonial Railway is entirely an interprovincial roai, and depends for its business on interprovincial trattic. If that tratfic increases, then the profits of the Intercolonial increase, and if that traftic is at a standstill or decreases, the returns suffer accordingly. Now. Sir, when we see that for seven months ending on the 29 th February last, the deficit on the road reached 5045,000 , I say that the showing is not only appalling in itself and not only an indication of crass and gross mismanagement and extraragance, but it indicates more than that, it indicates what the hon. member for East (irey intendel tosindicate by his question, not only that the foremment were responsilhe for this huge, this appalling deficit, but that the interprovincial tradfic on this road decreased instead of increasing; and the profits have decreased accordingly. That is a serions aspect of the case. One hom. gentleman, a member of the Government, had the pluck, after an examination of that road, to recommend an enornous cutting down in the expenditure and the discharge of a large portion of the staff. When he tried to carry out his recommendation he was taken by the throat, and the matter has gone from that date to this without change. Through the extracagant management of the Government, the deficit is rolling up month after month, and year after year. We had the statement made by the Minister of Railways, only the other day, that up to this monient, he has made no recommendation to Council whatever with respect to the discharge of the surplus number of men, some five or six hundred, it was said, upon that road. Now, the hon. gentleman went further to indicate the prosperity of this conntry. He said that the tonnage of sea-going and inland vessels had risen from $11,646,812$ tons in 1879 to $18,803,648$ tons in 1891. Sir, that is a very satisfactory statement, so far as it goes, on its face, but let us analyze these figures a little and see if they are so satisfiactory as they appear primot facie. As a matter of fact, in 1879 the grand total of sea-going vessels inward and outward, arriving and departing from Canada, was $6,684,384$ tons, and of that mumber $1,028,531$ were Canarlian. In 1891, twelve years afterwards, although the grand total of shipping had increased from $6,684,000$ to $10,69 \%,()(N)$ tous, the Camadian tonnage, so far from increasing in the same ratio, has actually lecreased from $1,928,0 \times 1$ to $1,791,000$ tons. If our exports had been larger than before, the fact remains, according to our Trate and Navigation Returns, that the Cimadian trade is largely passing from Canadian lontoms to foreign loittoms, and that a percentige larger than in 1879 is carried in foreign bottoms and a smaller percentage in Canadian vesvels. These facts cannot be ignored, and I certainly will not ignore them, coming as I do from the Naritime Provinces, because, knowing the terrible, sat and lamentable condition of trade there, I have to look aroum for the cause, and I find one of the effects here. Following out a little more these shipping figures, what will you find? That the tomnage of Canada has decreased at an alarming rate. In 1873 we had $1,073, \frac{1}{6}$ is toms of shipping ; in 18\%\%, 1,310,015, or an increase of $236.29)^{7}$ tons. The Marine lepartment hats always valuel that tomnage at $\underset{3}{ } 30$ per ton, and that will give an increase between 1873 and 1874 of 37,088 ,910. From $187^{7}$ to $188^{\circ}$ which was the last return brought down, for the Marine Department has ceased to pulbish the figures for more recent years, the tomnage declined to $1,130,245$ tons, or a decrease of 179,768 tons, of the value of $55,393,040$. If that loss had been distributed over Canada, it would not have been felt so greatly, but on the lakes and in Ontario Canadian shipping has not lecreased but increased, and the loss entirely fell on the three Maritimes Provinces and the Province of Quebec. The Maritime Provinces, which gained from 18,3 to $187 \%$, have lost, during the last named period, shipping to the ralue of $84,500,000$. If we come now to the ships built in Canada, we find that in 1875 the tonnage was 118,985 , which at 545 per ton, the estimated value of new ressels, wonld give a total of $5 \overline{50}, 354,302$. In 1887 that had fallen to 22,516 , of the value of $\$ 1,113,220$, showing a loss of $54,241,000$; and I may add that three-fourths of that loss fell on the Maritime Provinces. While $I$ an willing to join in the congratulations which the Minister of Finance offers to the House and the country on the increase of the carrying trade of Canada, I am bound to point out that that trade is being more largely carried each year in Norwegian aud British ships, and that our shipping industry has been depleted and destroyed so that it is hardly worth talking about. I have been one of those who have dwelt on the continuous exodus that has taken place from all the Maritime Provinces; I have stated that the people have fled from the provinces as if from a plague, and it has been charged against me by hon. gentlemen opposite that my statements were exaggerated and were not true. We have now the record before us, which shows that we never stated one-half of the true extent of the exolus. There is no part of Canada which has suffered so much as the Maritime Provinces during the last 10 years from the exorlus. I wish to place a few figures before the House in orler that hon. members may understand why some of us from the Maritime Provinces are downhearted, why we so strougly advocate sone change in our fiscal policy, which will lift us from the lamentalsle condition we are in to-day. Take New Brunswick for instance ; the natural increase should have been 65, $\mathbf{0}$ (0) for the last ten years. How many did she increase ? Thirty-seven souls. So New Brunswick lost (6is, (MO), who were driven from her shores, including the flower of her population. They have goue abroarl, not to the North-West, because if they had done so Canada would yet have the benefit of them. They have mostly gone across the line to enrich our rivals to the south. Take Nova Scotia: the natural increase should have been 88,111 . The actual increase was $(1,020$, or a loss to that province of 78,000 . Take Prince Filwarl Island. The natural increase should have heen $21,7 \pi$. The actual increase was 191, or a loss. in ten years, of $21, \mathbf{8 0}$.

Mr. DAVIES (I'.E.I.) Two per cent per year, which will lee accepted as a very fair percentage, and as heing one rather under than over the mark. I have not referred to the immigrants, because there is no appreciable immigration to the Maritime Provinces. There may have arrived some humdreds or perhaps some thousands, lut I place them aside and I take a natural increase of only 2 per cent per ammum, and even then the calculation shows a loss to the Maritime Provinces in the last 10 years of 164,882 . Parallel that if you can in any country possessing half the advantages of Canada ats regards climate and resources. What is the fault". It does not lie in the people. A more thrifty, saving, and hardworking people I have never met in the world. They have inexhaustible resources in the sea, the mines, the forests and agricultural lands; and why then have these people, enjoying acivantages unsurpassed hy any people in the world, fled from our shores as from a plague? A remedy must be found. It is very well for hon. members from the North-West, and I envy their position in this particular, to speak of the increase of population there, which, although it is far below what was anticipated, is an increase to talk abont ; but in the Maritime Provinces we have a depreciation in land values, shipping values and loss of population. This has not been our normal condition. Between 1871 and 1881 we had, not as large an increase as we desired, but there was increase of which we were not ashamed, while from 1881 up to 1891, the period that the gentlemen opposite have been in power, the period during which their National Policy has had full fling, the period during which they have fleeced the people to the full extent, we have lost 164,882 of our people. It will not do for hou. gentlemen opposite to say that the condition of affairs which is prevalent all over the world, of the rural population fleeing to the cities, is the canse of it : because 1 an willing to take the cities in the Maritime Provinces alone, and I am sorry to say that the results are nearly as bad there. Take St. John, Halifax and Charlottetown, the chief cities in the Maritime Provinces, and what do we find there: The great city of St. John, lyius at the mouth of a great river. a city that it was prophesied when (onferleration was being brought alowt, wats going to be the Liverpoes of America, started in lssi with a propulation of io.serm, and its population has declined since then by 3,392. Could ansthing ie more lamentahle than that? The great city of Hatifas which in $18 s 1$ hat a population of 6 ,, 917 only increased 3 ,.51 in the ten years, and the population of the city of Charlotetewn, 11.4.il in 18si. is relucel to-diy to 11.373. The three cities raken together have exactly the sume pmpulation in 1s91 that they had in 1 ss 1 . In other words the entire natural increase of the three cities of the Maritime Provinces for ten years have left these cities and gone abroal to a foreign lamd. While these cities of the three Maritime Provinces have lost 26 (onk) souls. the entire Maritime Provinces have lost $164 . \mathrm{Ss}$. Hon. gentlemen may le surprised at the persistency with which those who cone from these provinces press cery anxiously for more extented trade relations with the United states. but. sir. that surprise would cease to exist if hon. gentlemen looked at the Trade and Xavigation Returns, and examined where the exports ani prollacts of these Maritime Provincesfoum theirchief markets. It is a gratifying fact that our exports to (ireat Britain as a whole have increased, hat does that apply to the Maritime Provinces: No. The ereat province of Ontario which exports su much cheese and such it great quantity of live cattle, finds its hest market in Great Britain for these articles, amd hon gentlemen opposite point the farmers of the whole Dominion to (ireat Britain as their only market. Let us exainine for a moment what the trade returns show with respect to the market of the Maritime Provinces. Take the Province of Nova Scotia, the prolucts of which are more rariel than perhaps those of any other province. She has the largest fisheries of any province of the Dominion, she has inexhaustible conal mines, she has gold mines, she has great quantities of agricultural lands. she grows immense fu:ntities of apples, and she has some manufacturers; and where do her exports go? Out of the total exports of Nova Scotia, amounting to $\$ 9,763,(0) 0)$. (ireat Britain takes $\mathrm{S} 2,269,0(0)$; the United States take $83,463,000$ : the Spanish West Indies, 81,249 . $(0) 0$ : the British West Indies, $\$ 1,393,000$, Neirfoundland, $\mathbf{\$ 6} 64,644$, and other countries $\$ \mathbf{8 8 3}, \mathbf{0 M O}$. If hon. gentlemen would do me the favour of following those dry but interesting figure: for a moment they will see to what they will lear. Take the Province of New Brunswick. That province exports $\$ 7,182.0 \times 6$ worth per year. Where does it $\mathrm{go} \% \$ 3,000,000$ of it goes to Great Britain, the exports to which consists entirely of deals and deal ends ; $\$ 3,648,000$ go to the United States and $\$ 508,000$ to other comutries. With the exception therefore of $\mathbf{S i 0 8}, 0000$, every article that goes from the province of New Brunswick finds its natural and only market in the United States with the exception of deals and deal ends. If there was a part of this Dominion of Canada that would benefit and whose condition absolutely Mr. Davies (P.E.I.) demands broader and freer trade relations with the United States, that province is New Prunswick. What is the use of pointing the people of New Brunswick to the market of England for their produce, when they send nothing there except as I said deals and deal emls. Everything else they have to export goes to the United States: anl if you do not enlarge the market there and knock down the barriers which prohibit the people from trading there, commercial atrophy will continue to exist as I regret to say it does exist in that province. Take the Province of Prince Edward Istand from which I come. We tind that out of $\$ 1,349,0 \times 1$ worth of exports, the United States take 8933,033 , while (ireat Britain takes sifin, (x) , the Pritish 10 est Indies and (Guiana take $\$ 7,0 \mathrm{Mm}$, Newfoumdland $\$ 136.3 .330$ and other countries $\$ 41$.(oni. Of the total exports from the exports of the Maritime Provinces are sent to the United States market. and the next hest market after tireat Britain which they have are the markets of Newfoundlamd and the West Indies. My remarks are male almost entirely from a Daritime Province stamlpoint, amd I trust I will be excused for that. I want to ask, how do the Maritime Provinces stand continentally" We have the Mokinley tariff, almost a prohibitory tariff, between us and the United States: we have the British West Inlies, and what have we done to open up a market there for our people: There is a limited market it is true, but a pretty grod market for Nova Sortia products in the 1 Vest Indies, and the only return cargoes that we possibly could have brought from that comatry in exchange for the surphus products sent there, was ITest India sugar. The hon. Ninister of Finance took care hy his policy to prevent us imperting West India sugar. The West India sugar which we could import was sugar over $1+$ Dutch standarl, and the hon. gentleman placed his duty upon that and prevented us from importing it. and to that extent restricted our trade with the West Indies. We know that the West India Islands have negotiated a treaty with the United States, and I fear very much that the trend of the trale hereafter will lee from the West Indies to the United States, amd that we will hereafter find the West India markets closed against the articles which we formerly sold there. How is it with regard to the Spanish West Indies, to which Nora scotia sent onde and is quarter millions of its products last year? Why, sir, the House knows that a treaty has been negotiated letween the Spanish West Indies and the United States which discriminates against Camala, and that on aud after the ist lay of July next the ports of these countries willbe practically closed to Nova Scotia and to the rest of the Maritime Provinces. And now, Sir, to make matters still worse, our own sister colony of Newfoundland, which offered a very large market for the surplus products of Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia, is discriminating against our products too. What do we find? We find in answer to a guestion which I put the other day, that owing to our conduct-because I cannot excuse our own Government in this regard-our sister colony of Newfoundland is diseriminating against us to a very serious extent. In the year
188., this House, improperly as 1 conceive. passed a law taxing Newfoundland cod fish and other products. That law, in some illegal way which I have not yet been able-to master, was not put into force. I want to ask the Goverument. before this debate closes, how it was that the tariff we then enacted against Newfommilland was never exactel. I do not say that the tariff was just : but the fiovernment did not impose those duties until December last. The law provided that a proclamation cond be issued under certain circumstances: exempting. Newfomalland prohncts from those luties. No such proclamation was everissuel, but the liovernment seemed to take the matter into their own hands and admitted the products of Newfoumbland free for a number of years, while at the same tine they were learling the people of Canada to |elieve that the duties were being exacted. What was the consequence? The hon. Minister of Nilitia was kind enough to hand to me to-day a apy of a circular which was issued from the Customs lepartment at Ottawa in the month of December last, instructing the customs ofticials throughout the Dominion to exact against Newfoumdland the inport duties prescribed by the statute. When we passed our statute, taxing her products. Newfoundland passed a law of retaliation, declaring that guoul those countries which taxed her prombets a discriminating duty should le levied in Newfoumdand. The result is that as we, on and after Devember last have exacted the duties atgainst Newfoumdland products, the discriminating tariff of Newfonmdand comes automatically into force, and this country is now being diseriminated against in regaril to flour, pork, hutter and other articles for which we have hitherto found a ready market in that colony. Sir, I tonk the tronble to make up from the Trade and Navigation Returns, a short statement showing how large that market was, not alone for the Maritime Provinces, lat for the Dominion generally. I find that in 1891 we exported to that country articles to the value of one and a-half million dollars, of which there were 99,438 barrels of flour of the value of $$ 468,0(0)$. Owing to our conduct in taxing Newfoundland products, in aldition to the ordinary duty of 30 cents on flow, there will le in cents a barrel of discrimination added. What chance have we therefore, as against the United States. in retaining the trade of that comery in the face of thisisdiscriminating duty against us? Unless some methot can be discovered by which the unfortunate and unhappy conditions existing between this country and Newfoundland can be changed, and amicable relations established, the trade be. tween the two countries will be destroyed. And, Sir, I do not hold the Government harmless in this regard. I know, from having read the Newfoundland newspapers and the debates in the Newfoundland legislature, that we are not blameless in this matter. There are two sides to the question. When the Newfoundland people found themselves impelled and compelled to pass what is known as the Bait Act, it was stated in this House that the British Government assented to that Act only on the condition that it should not be applied against Canada, and it was not applied against-Canada. But it was found, as they said at any rate in New-foundland-

Mr. TUPPER. Hear, hear.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) The hon. gentleman will not ask us to dishelieve their othicial statements. They found that all their efforts to prevent the sale of bait to the French fishermen of st. Pierre were thwarted, because as they alleged cimadian fishermen carried bait and sold it to the French.
Mr. TUPPER. Do you lelieve that:
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I have the statements of men whom I have huown the larger part of my life, and whon I believe to be incapable of telling an mutruth. I have known sir William Whiteway a number of years, and I believe him to le an honest and straightorwarl man. I have known Mr. Harcey for twelve or fifteen years. and I helieve him to be incapable of making at false statement. I have the statements of these men in the public papers that when France granted an additional bounty in 1885 or 1856 of 1: or 13 shillings to the local tishermen for every fuintal of col-fish they canght, the Newfom of leeing entirely ilestroyed, as those of Xova Scotia would have leen also, unless some means were foum of putting our tishermen and the Newfoumlland tishermen upon an even footing with the wounty-fel st. lierre fishermen. The Xewfomblam Corermment sought to do that by the provision they aiopted preventing the st. Pierre fishermen getting lait. That was evaled ly the Camalian and Newfommdand fishermen selling the bait to the French fishermen contrary to law. The Newfoundland cocermment pomishei their own people, confiscating their vessels, and imprisoning these who hat broken the law: amb if I am to believe Mr. Harrey's statement, they applied to the Canadian Government, asking it to take measures to suppress this illegal trade, and to prevent their fishermen from supplying hait to the st. Pierre fishermen.

Mr. TLPPER. Does the hon. gentleman deny that our fishermen hal a perfect right to sell hait from the Magdalen Islands to the st. Pierre fishermen, irrespective of the Newfoudland laws :

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I do not deny that. I am trying to point out that when the French Republic increased the bounty on coll-tish, changing from a tomage hounty ou ships to a quintal bounty on the fish, it wasfound that the Newfoundlanl fishermen could not compete against the bounty-fed fishermen of st. Pierre, and that in self-defence they had to pass the Bait Act to prevent the French fishermen getting fresh bait ; and it wasfouml that that Act was useless because Canadian fishernen sold the French fishermen the lait, and the Newfoundland Government, in obedience to the promise they had made to the Imperial Government, had not up to that time enforeed the Bait Act against Canadian fishermen. But when they found that Canalian fishermen were selling bait to the st. Pierre fishermen and thus destroying the effiect of the Act, they passed a new Rait Act against Canada to prevent Canadians buying bait.

Mr. TUPPER. That has always been the custom. It is legitimate trade.

Mr. DAVIES (P. E. I.) And it is because Canadians sold the bait they passed the second Act to prevent our getting it at all. 1 only mention these facts to show that this matter has two sides, and that although Newfoundland has been accused of breach of faith towards this Doninion, and although primít farit it is a lreath of faith, still they have a very Ereat deal to say in palliation, if not in justification, of their combluct. I go further and sily, from what has appeared in rhe Newfommand press and legishature. statements have leen made which this fiovemment have to answer. They are t" this effect : that the fiovermment sent hown, two or three years ago. senator Howland, an acoredited aseit from this colong, to treat with Newfommanm. and he gave assurances in the name of Canala that stejs would he taken by (anala to prevent our tishermen from selling hait to St. liare Those statements have heen mate openly and sufar without contradiction. Further it hats Deent stated la Newfommand Ministers that Sir Charles Tupper himself, when apprached on the subject promisel that steps wonhl be taken by the: (amadian liovermment to prevent Newfonmilamil fishermen lwing rained in the matuner I have deseribed. although he withdrew afterwards the promise he marle. It is on those statements the Newfommolland lait Act was passed, and now we find these two kindred colonies engaged in a war of retaliation, and unless some morlus is discovered by which the ill-feeling now existing ran le done atway with. and these retaliatory tariffs on the part of Canata on the one side and Newfommand on the other entirely abolished, the trade between Newfombland and the Maritime Provinces which is assomning such large dimensions will he entirely destroyed. if hat combition to the Maritime Provinces stanl in to-diay" They stand in this position : They have of face the prospect of losing the West Imlia trale, the almost vertain prospect of losing the trate of Havana amd the Spanish West Inties. the loss of the Newfomm!and trale, and the McKinley tariff letween us and the United States. In the face of the fact that heret of ore over iol per cent of the total exports of all the Maritime Provinces have been sent to the Coited states, the hom. gentleman tohe us that we must change our mone of farming and make cheest and send home fat cattle to Englami. The hon. gentleman knows we have tried that time and again. I remember a few years ago when the people of Prince Edward Island invested their capital to the extent of $t: 34,0 \times()$ or $\mathfrak{i}: 3.0,(6 n)$ sterling in the purchase of a large iron ship which we put on the route lretween the Island and Fingland in the hope of opening a trate. We shippent our cat tle for one or two years. We tried to ship our sheep ami other pronlucts, and I am sorry to saty. after it hat heen tried a year or two, it was not fomm profitable, and the enterprise was entirely given up. It is no use denying the fact that our natural trade and market lies in the United states. It may not be so to the same extent with the great Province of Ontario. Fngland is her great market for many products, bat the country to the south is her market for many other products. With regard to the Maritime lrovinces, however, the future is a lark one indeed if we are to le excluded from the British and Spanish West Indies and cut offfrom Newfoundlandand the UnitedStates. We have England for our market, but what are we to send to her from Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick? New Brunswick sends her nothing lut deals and deal ends. Every article taken from the mines of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick and from the sea, except lolosters, goes to the United States, where it finds a good market, and our object should be not to glory and cheer as hon.
gentlemen did when the Finance Miniserv annomeed that the door was closed and there was iow hope of negotiating a treaty with the Ginited States. but to bend our energies to see if we cannme liscover a modus $1, \mathrm{y}$ which the difficulties existing lerween the two countries can le amicably amd satisfactorily arranged. The Finance Dinister showerl lie: wats well satistied indeed to lie able to antnounce that the door was chosed. He was pleased and joyful when he annotanced that the exports of Canada had inereased, but the groat patan of congratulation which he offered to his followers was this, that the door was chosed hereafter against any trade with the United states. that there was no hope of reciprocity. untestricted or otherwise. and that hereafter we were t. reat with England and Englan! alone. It was seen well where the hearts of his followers were. The cheering which greeted his statement with respect to the exports was monderate, but when he amomaced that hereafter we had inetter not discuss the question of reciprocity. the: enthusiasm of his followers knew molmons. The Minister of Railways sat behind hims smiling and laughing, not ashamel to lie prome that the negotiations, whether honest of dishonest I will not for the monent saty, with the Cnited state: proveri to be alosolutely a failure. Hereafter. said the hon. gentleman, our fammers must change their mode of farming, as they must look. nat to the markets to the south of us. but across the seas.and hon. gentiemen opposite eheered him to the echo. They pretembed during the elections in noy pari of the country that they were as strongly in farour of reciprocity as we were, not in uatural product: alome, hut in manufactured poods. almosit to the extent of unrestricted reciprocity: hat in this House I have heard, not one but a dozen, rise. mbe after another, and timel fanlt with rexiprocity. not only in manufactures or manafatemed pros. ducts, but in natural products as well. Hon. gentlemen opposite sain : What art you goins: to do if you hate reciprocity in beef. ar pork. of other natural products: Yon will be rainel: thus showing that these gentlemen were rppesiol even to reciprocity in natural prolnets. following: out the statement, evidently an otticial one, mate by the late President of the Council. when he dechared that the greatest calamity to Camada wonll be the renewal of that reciprocity treaty of isit. When the hon. gentleman went to the Eniterl States the other day to negotiate a traty, what kiml of a treaty did he attempt to negotiate \% H. had it stated to him time and again. his late leater: had toll him, that there was no possible hope of a renewal of the reciprocity treaty of 18:7. He says he went there to discuss the question of umestricted reciprocity. Well, he was a beatutiful commissioner to go on that errand. He had denomuced the scheme of unrestricted reciprocity with a virulence that could not lee excelled or even equalleal by any of his supporters. He had denounced it as a faul, as an impossible policy, as a nebulous theory, as a ruinous policy to Canata, as a grave peril to Britisl connection. The hon. gentleman had hurled all these epithets against this policy, and yet he says he weut to Washington it propose to Mr. Blaine to adopt a policy which would be ruinous to British interests, a policy which was a fad and an unclean thing. What did Mr. Haine say ? He said: You were either dishonest before you came here or you are dishonest now. The hon. yentleman was not a perxoma finter at Washington. He could not be. He had done his little lest to magnify the difficulties between (ireat Britain and the United States when he was Minister of Marine. He had denounced in the strongest language he could muster the only basis upon which he could hope to negotiate a reciprocity treaty with the United States, and then he went to Washington, and he comes lack and says he could not get a treaty frou dear Mr. Blaine, that dear Mr. Blaine conlid not see how he was going to raise a revenue if the treaty were agreed to, and dear Mr. Foster could not see it himself. Why, he knew he was deliherately misrepresenting the propmal of unrestricted reciprocity when he went there, and he did it with malice prepense. He knew, when he stated to Mr. Blaine that the question of raising the revenue was an insuperable ditficulty, that, as has been explained time and again on this side of the House, the adop; tion of that policy did not mean a sudden and immediate abolition of duties on manufactured coopls, that it did not mean the abolition of Cuties in a day or a month or a year. but that it must perforce be a gradual alolition, and that, being a gradual abolition. it would right itself after the first or the second or the third year. that though there might he a loss, not of one half nor of one thich of the revenue, but of some portion of the revemue during that time. still it would right itself. From a political standpoint, the hon. gentleman was dishonest in going there and was dishomest in stating to Mr. Blaine that the question of revenue was an insuperahle difticulty, and that he saw no way out of it. I can only say that he occupied the most humiliating position that any accredited ambassathor ever occupied in the British Empire. He went there after denomeinga policy as disloyal and pretemden that he wanted to carry out that policy. He was either dishonest in opposing that policy before ? . .. cut, \% he was dishonest in alvocating it in Washington. He can take either horn of the dileema which he likes. I camnot see where the dificulty arises in negotiating a fair and honest reciprocity, if men who are honestly and sincerely desirous of negotiating it go there. Does any one suppose that Mr. Blaine is not willing to treat with us on a fair besis?" We know that the reciprocity treaty of 1804 camnot he renewed. We know that the only duties imposed by Camada, during the existence of that treaty between l8ist and 1866, on manufactured goods, amounted to from 12 to 14 per cent, while now they have risen to between 30 and 40 per cent. Does any one suppose that our natural products alone could le the pasis of an interchange between us and the United States? The thing is ridiculous. If we are honest and sincere in the desire to renew our trade relations with the United States we must give and take. We must certainly include manufactures in any such treaty, as everybody is aware except the hon. gentleman, though I believe he wilfully misrepresents the policy of unrestricted reciprocity when he stated that the revenue we would lose offered an insuperable obstacle to its adoption. This result can be attained by those whose hearts are in the business. We do not talk in regard to this matter without some knowledge of the views of the gentlemen across the line. Their conversations have not been limited to those which they have had with hon. gentlemen who have gone to Washington. We have the opinions expressed by their statesmen in Congress, we have their opinions expressed in the press, and many of us have had the privilege of conversing with many of their leading men.

Some hom. MEMBERs. Hear, hear.

Mr. Daties (P.E.I.) I suppose, by the cheer: of hon. gentlemen opprisite, that is considered a crime, and that those hon. gentlemen would not discuss any of these questions with leauling men in the Cnited states if they met them. I have discussed these guestions with them, and I have not fond one of them who is not amenable to reasom. I have found a disposition on their part to negotiate with ns on fair and honest lines. I have not foumd that any of those oljeretions that the Finamee Minister considers insuperable have come from them. They certainly dil not come from Mr. Blaine, but they were suggested by the hon. gentleman and his colleagues with the desire to damn this policy in this country and to make it impossible to be carried out. In fact, the hom. gentleman was mot there in the interests of the people of Camada, but he was there in the interests of his masters, the manfacturers. Hedurst not attempt to negotiate a treaty which was contrary to their interests. But he might have stated to Mr. Blaine: We are representing primarily, the manfacturing industries, we will sulmolinate to them. as we have in Canada, the farming, the mining and the fishing industries, and if we cammot negotiate a treaty in favour of the manufacturing interests. we camont negotiate one at all. If he hail done that. no doubt he would have failed, as he has done. in negotiating a treaty, but he would have saved his consistency, and he sombla have savel us the humiliating spectacle that Canala has presented of Ministers going to Washington in March and coming back after a few minutes interview, and going again in Octoler, and coming back with their thumbs in their monthe and wisin: that no treaty could le negotiated with the Enited states. I say that the spectacle presented is the unst humiliating that could be exhilited in this or any other colony. I warn this Howse that there never has been an act of the Covermment of Canada so calculated to promote disloyal sentiments in this comutry as the step, which the hom. gentlemam han taken. If he satisfies the people of this comutry that his statement is true, if he convinces the perople of the Maritime Provinces that the door is closed, and that while they retain their political autonomy they need never hope again to negotiate a reciprocity treaty with the United states ly which their prolucts can go into that country. he will have done more to generate and promote an annexation sentiment in this country than anything which has ever before taken place. But, Sir, I thank Goll that, in my belief, at least, his statement is not true. I believe that this dishonest negotiation which was gone through with, was understool by Mr. Blaine as well as it is understood ly people in this House. Sir, the record of the hon. gentleman and his party was known in W'ashington before he ever left Ottawa. It was known that he did not intend to negotiate a treaty upon a basis that would be acceptad by the Washington Government, and that he had proclaimed the fact from his place in this House time and time again. It was known that he held power by sirtue of a compact with the manufacturers, that he was to protect their interests. that those interests must he paramount. and that no treaty could le negot iated with a man holding that position. Sir. we do not holl that the door is closed. We have grod reason to know hetter, not only from the onthieial statements made in Congress, not omly from the articles in the newspipers, not only from the constant flow of our people back anlif forth from the Cniteq states. but hy comversations which we. individually, have had-aum I speak for myself, which I, individually, have had-with a large number of leading statesmien of the Unite! states, all which facts cause me to lelieve that it is quite possible for an honest man, who sones there with a sincere desire to promote a fair treaty, to negotiate one in a very short time. Sir, we will have to give as well as to take: there must le justice done to hoth sides. It has been said that the discrimination which now exists, which you have kept on your statute-look as against (ireat Britain, may le inweased. It may be so, perhaps it must be so; in my humble julgment it will he so. But is that going to prevent a treaty when you are convincedand convinced you must be, if you stu:ly the Trade and Narigation Returns-that it woull be a great anil overweening adrantage to canada to have an open market for all her surplus prolucts there: Is the fact that von are going to discriminate more against freat britan than yon do now. going to stop you from negotiating altogether: Are we to legisliate in the interest of Canada or in the interest of the British exporter: Whose interests are going to le paramount if they clash: For my part I have long since male up my mind that when they clash my vote will go for Canada. Sir, when I look at the prosition which we continentally hold to-diayand I speak more from a maritime standpoint than from any other at the moment - when I see that we are exchuled from Newfoundland, exchnted from the spanish West Indies, and practically excluded from the British West Indies-
Mr. FOSTER. Excladed from neither of the two later.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Practically we are soing to be excluded from the West Indies, because trade will follow with the treaty between the British West Indies and the United States, and if the trade is of any value they will get it and not us. I camot predict a very brilliant future for my native land when I reflect upon these things.
Mr. FOSTER. Because you do not see it.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) 1 can see, and 1 wish my constituents couldsee, how the Minister of Railways laughs and sneers at these statements, which cannot be serious to him but which I tell him are pretty serious facts to three or four hundred thousand people who live down by the sea. They toil from morning till night, they spend sparingly, they are people of great thrift, and they deserve a better fate than the hon. gentleman has awarded them. I do not think if they saw the ridicule that the hon. gentleman is prepared at all times to throw upon any proposition which has for its object the opening of better markets for them, he would feel as much flattered as he dires at the present moment. Sir, it is a serious matter for those people $: I$ will not say it means life or death, but I do say it means the difference het ween prosperity and adrersity. The figures for the last ten years show that there has leen mo increase at all in the material wealth of those Maritime Provinces, and so far from the population increasing we have been umable to hold even the ammal increase by $l\left(\begin{array}{l}10\end{array}\right)(N X)$ in the ten years, and if that gres on for the next ten years 1 aisk where will we be? Sir. I know that hon. gentlemen have only one answer to give to our arguments, and it is the effective answer that the bye-elections show that the perple are in fatour of the present policy. That may be true so far as (matario is concernel, it is not true so far as the Maritime Prowinces are comcerned. The elections in the Maritime Provinces tell a different tale. whether you take the Halifas election, or the Kings election, or the Dighy election, or the Queens election or any other: they show that the people are lecoming alive to their interests, and that in the near future they will strike a blow as strong as they cam. hy their votes. in favour of as troad and free trate relations with the United states as is comsistent with the homomr and dignity of this comery:
Mr. DAVIN. I had hoped that we hat arrived at a period when my hon. friends on the oppesition side would lre comrinced that there wats no use in pursuing the policy they have so long pursued: lout after hearisg the hoin. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) ant the hom. member for Queens: P.F.I. (Mr. Davies) it would seem that they are still determined to fight mader the ohl Hatg of unrestricted reciprocity, although that whl Hay has been scouted from one enl of the country the other.

An hon. MEMBER. No.

Mr. DAVIN. My hom friem ayy "no." My hon. friend may sit there in coming sessions, and that colony alowt which my hon. friend from Brethwell was so humorons, may have grown still larger: the sheep of which he spoke may have swelled by fifty or one humbed per cent, aul those goat:that have gone to the barremness prepared for them by the policy of the hon. gentlemen, may be still larger. And yet we hear this cry of mestricted reciprocity, and that cry, even when there was behimel it at certain amount of belief, a certain evilence of faith, was not either a very successful, nor, in my opinion, a very respectable one. And now when it is absolutely a falsetto cry, when we hear it from those benches-becanse hon. gentlemen must say something and have been able to invent nothing else--that cry has passed into the category of ridiculous clap-trap, and I was sorry to see so much time occupied here to-night in re-echoing the doleful soumds we have so often heard from my hon. friend. The hon. gentieman who has just taken his seat (Me. Davies, P.E.I.) was preceded by the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills), and I sympathize with some of the remarks made ly the hon. imember for Bothwell. Neither this assembly nor any other human institution can be expected to reach or even approach the ideal. When speaking of public opinion in Canada he might say the same of England, he might say the same of any country where constitutional government prevails; you might say public opinion is not all it ought to be ; but if you compare public opinion in Englaml to-day with what it was fifty years ago, not to go buck to the time of Charles II, not to go back to the revolutions, you will tind that the state of public opinion in Fugland is intelligent. it is ever realy to grasp all great questions, and it is in alvance of what it was at any other time. I say a man familiar with the history of Canala must know that although pullic opinion, and the organs of public opinion, and this sreat instrument of public opinion that we have here. may not he all that they should lee. yet the organs of public opinion are abler, public opinion itself is more enlightened. and this great representative of public opinion is. $1, y$ the confession and evilence of all persons competent to give an opinion, in alvance of what it was 20 or an years aco. and 1 might stop at a still later perionl. Put the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) hats complained alrout public opinion, and of this Parliament taking a course that he lelieved was inimital to a healthy public opinion, and why? Becanse of the very political sins that hon. gentlemen have heen atconstomed to fall into. I grant that, accord ing to publicists and thinkers, the Finglish Parliament and this Parliament for not approtech the inleal of what the great conucil of the nation should lee. Is all the responsibility with one side or the other: Suppose a member of the conservative party-the hon. member points with a ghostly tinger towards some one on this side- - may happen to take that course which ought to lee taken hy every member of this House at times. Remember he is one of the council of the nation: remember that we are here to take comsel. that it is not our husiness to come here and range ourselves merely in hostile camps and have political jousts. That is not the ideal of a Parliament. The ideal of Parliament is that men shoulh come together and give combel. What will happen: We have seen it happen here at different times. If a member of the Conservative party happens to rise and differ in the least from his own party, diffet in some small detail, ats men of both parties ought to do from their parties, what will he done by hon. sentlemen opposite? Will they approrich the 'illestion sulseyuently in the sane large spirit ? No. They will try amd twist that act to a party alvantage, and seek from a particular and smatl occurrence to draw a general conclusion and make it sweeping effect. I wish to deal very brietly with the hon. sentleman who has just takeli his seat: He commenced his speech by resorting with great cleverness to a style of advocacy that those who have practised in criminal courts are familiar with. I do not think he was very ingenuous. He tried to prove that the reverse of a statement that was made from this side was the true state of the case. But what are the facts in regard to discrimination by Newfoundland? When we got that treaty the Newfounland tariff was 30 cents per barrel on Hour. and the treaty allows $2 \cdot \mathrm{~F}$ cents for United States four. The protest of the Giovernment was hased on that fact, and the Act which the hon. gentleman confounded with this one only came into existence twelve months afterwards. I say for an hon. gentleman sitting within two chairs of a philosophic statesman who takes so large views of things in general as toes the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills), it was hardly a creditable proceeding on the part of the hon. member for Queen's (Mr. livies). But hon. geutlemen around him cheered, and however grossly at variance with the facts the statement might be, hon. gent lemen opposite would cheer. I will $l_{\text {e }}$ vervinief in lealing with the hon. gentleman's argument as to what the Minister of Finance did in giving us the information that was in his lmsom as one of the Ministers who went to Washington. There can le no doubt whatever that it is a well estahished rule that when diplomatic negotiations take plate and protocols come into existence, if a Minister intends to refer to those, and the transactions are completed. the shond le laid on the Table of Parliament. But if you take the most extreme catses. and if you examine the authorities you will tind this: That this position is never surremdered by any fonsermment under constitutional procolure. that it rests with their sense of respmsilility to the country as to whether or not they will at any given time lay the papers on the Table. Of course, they are responsible. But in the present case yon hat really mu diplomatists in Wishington to arrange a treaty. What you had were three Ministers going lown to $W_{i s h i n g t o n ~ a t ~ t h e ~ i n v i t a t i o n ~}^{\cdots}$ and 1 will come to the dispute on that in a minute, and pass rapilly from it tos - of a member of a foreign government to have an informal. a qumesi private discussion as to what might be clone in the way of reciproal trade. As 1 molerstand it. hecause I am not in the confilence of the dovernment in this matter. in regard to the subjects that were definitely ar ranged, amd in regarl to which we have detinite information. We have the papers latid on the Tahle: and in regard to these commmications which passed letween the Ministers and Mr. Blaine amd liental foster, what have we? We have what has again and again been done in the British l'arliament, we hate one of those Ministers. the very hest means of affording information w Pariamemt that conld be ohtamel. rising in his place ami stating what took place between them and Mr. Blatine. The matter is somewhat different from a Minister giving information to larliament about what tork place hetween a diplomatist and the representative of a foreign state, that diplomatist aot leing in Parliament. What we had was ont of the Ninisters who engaged in these conversations with Mr. Blaine giving the House a statement of what took place, andilask hon. memhers what letter means condil parliament have of leing mate acquainted with what took place" The ques tion of what a Slinister is lxomil to do in regaril to information in his possession came up in Istia in the British Parliament. It was about very importint transactions, it was a case where, if ever. the papers ought to have leen laid on the Table. once you grant the argument of the hon. member for Bothwell. But. Sir, when Lord John Manners. and Mr. Pope Hennessey protested against the Govermment referring to the communications that they had hal without laying these communications on the Table, what dnes Lord Palmerston say:
"It is altogether a new doctrine to me that a Minister making a statement from information which has come to his knowledge, is bound to lay.on the Table of the House the document from which that information is derived. I andmit no such principle. It is perfectls true that when : Minister reads a paper he is bound to lay it on the Table.
If the hon. Minister of Finance had come here aml read extracts from so-called protocols, there would be ground for complaining that they were not laid on the Table. But there could have beenno proto cols, aud the hon. member for Queen's (Mr. Davies) used the word, as he usell many other words, in a

Waty that woull make the genius of English literature stare and gasp. If the hom. Minister of Finamee real from some dox:uments. there would be sool gromil for complaining that they were not latid on the Tible : but the reason why it is necessary to lay don-mments on the Table when extmets are reat from them. is lreatuse Parliament should lee face to ficte with the sonrce of the information that is given to it. In this case, we have the rery men here. hetween whon amd Mr. Blane the conversation hall taken place, and you cammot sloult the aceurracy of the statement mate by the hon. Minister of Finamee unless you resort io the extramedinary parliamentary politeness that belones at times to the hon. memper for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) amd which 1 am afrail the hom. and learned member for Queens (Mr. Datvies) fell into to night, amd unless you are goine to siy to a Minister of she lown whostands in his plate with the eyes of the conntry and the eyes of Pathament tipon him, and whose prosition could not lee mantained if he would palter with the truth, that you do not believe him: unless you are going to donit the word of the Minister of Finance. and put his mestion and responsibilty aside, in the face of the fact that if he mis. represented what took place, detection and exposare must ineritably and speedily follow. I any that that sort of thing is not treated properly by speaking satirically of it as politeness. lut that it should be denounced with every invective a man is capable of, becallose it is a degiading thing to this Honse to hear such remarks as we heard to-night from the member for Queens (Mr. Davies). I shall not refer to the point mate ly the member for gueen's in reference to what the Vinister of lustice said at Perth, and for this reason : There is no use whatever in trying to put down the slamiers or the misrepresentations of certain people. You know, Sir, that Mr. Pope, in one of his admirable poems, speaks of a certain insect that has an uncontrollable instinct, hut an instinct necessary for its own existence, to spin collwebs. These cobwels are very unsighty, and so the pret says, speaking of the slimilerer:

> - Destroy his tib or sophistry, in rain,
> The creature's at its dirty work again."

I confess to you, Sir, that I was not surprised that my hon. friend spoke once more about the monstrosity of the Minister of Finance talking about the prosperity of the comntry. It is a clreadful thing that the Minister of Finance, in the face of what we see to-day in Canala, should stand up here and speak of the prosperity of the country. It is a monstrous thing that he should dwell on the increase in the mileage of our railways : perfectly monstrous that he shoulh dwell on the increasein the tomage of our ships: perfectly monstrous that he should sidy one word about the yast increase of our exports or that he shouli refer to the evidences of our prosperity. It was superfluous, and if the hon. gentleman will excuse me for saying so, it was a superfluity of naughtiness, if 1 may borrow a word from Paul, becuuse the country had proclaimeal the conviction of its prosperity so strong ly reducing hon. gentlemen opposite to the miserable account of empty benches that they now make up, that it was perfectly unnecessary for the Minister of Finance to dwell upon the prosperity of the country. We know that when my hon. friends opposite went from place to place, and sent forth their wailings and drapel themselves, so to speak, as political mutes. and went to the funeral of some thing. you may guess what it was, hut it was not our funeral anyway-the country rejected them. We know that the people whose votes they needed, and whose votes they wanted, and whose votes they courted with tears amd wailings, dechared in answer to their entraties: "dientlemen, really in these constituencies the accommolation in the lumatic asylums is gratly limited, and lesone as quickly as rou can." I ami much concerned for mex hom. friemil from Bothwell (Mr. Mills). I have luen a clabler in constitutional law and things of that sort myself, but 1 hase never went, of comser, as deep as that hon. gentleman. In fiat. I should be sorry to go so deep as he. One of the Latie prets tells a brother poet that if he does not get up from his looks he will grow double: and is Lee ton stmdious is no donht attembed with some inconventenes, and to be tow learmed is not ablays a happy thing. 1 confess that I feel for mis friend from bothwell (Mr. Mills), when I set him with something sitting heavily on his mind, rising discontentedly from that seat to which in its intinite merey an all-wise Providence has allotted him. amb looking fundanentally uneasy. I always sompathize with him in such a prisition. He has had tes much learning, he is uneasy in his mime until he gets off his constitutional expression of profomm principles. and I come amd I sit here like a Paul at the feet of camaliel. to learn from him his superion wishom, and I wateh and watch. hut he takes such a long time to get aromal the corners before he gets to the subject-

Mr. MILLN (Bothwell). That sou are fumbar mentally affecter.

Mr. NATIN. No, mot so profomedly ats that. 1 camot pay my hom. friend that compliment : hat I find it hard te get at his proint. At last. as $I$ alt here to-day and tried to make out what my hon. friend was at, though lhad a pen in hand and was taking notes. I conh mot discover what it was. Then I asked myself what he was like, aml I thought he was like an aged hen in a state of metaphysical dubitation as to whether she wonhl lay an egg or not.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Aned you sympathized with the hen.

Mr. DAVIN. Now, Mr. Speaker, there cam he: no question, in my opinion, as to the prosperity of the country. I will not take time at this late hour to go into comparisons : but I have heen visitings some of the constituencies. I was up in somth Perth, which used to be represented by Mr. Trow: whom personally-and I told him so--I atm surry not to see here, though on other grominds I did not wish him to be elected- -

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Explain that netaphysical distinction.

Mr. DAVIN. I went into the Township of Blanchard, and afterwards when I met Mr. Trow, I think at St. Mary's. 1 asked the people: How on earth can these men say that this country is not prosperous, when in this very township there is not a farm house which has not the rank of a villa or a mansion, on which siv) or $\leqslant(10)$ or possibly \$1,000 has been spent in omamentation! let these poor farmers, who are groumd to earth, bled livid or pallid-I believe bled white is the langnage of the member for Nouth Oxford-in that very township sa:e I think fis wore votes for the Conservative candidate than shey hablone in the previons election.

Mr. LaNDERKIN. How many times did you speak there?

Mr. DAVIN. Twice. Now, it is the same everwhere: amil I siy to hon. gentlemen opposite that if they want to see their party grow smaller and smaller they will continue the course which they have pursued for some sears past : but if they want to make an Opposition which will be powerful and effective, they will change their tactics. Now, the pusperity of this country is a fact, notwithstambing the hon. meminer for ionth (oxforel. I am sorry for that hom. member, although merey is for the merciful. I doubt very much if there is much merey in the hon. gentlematas composition. I donbt very much if he would have any pity for political opponents if their ranks were reduced as the ranks of his friends are: amd he is one of the calases of that reduction. He is the embonliment of this ery agrainst the proxprity of the country, and the emberiment of the dislosialty in the ery of umestricted reciprosity which wits so apparent in the list part of the speech of the hon. member for Gueens (Mr. Daries). Why, the hom. gentleman is so disconnted hy that pobiog to-diay that if his party could they would get rid of him: but they camot do it. The commery does not wane him. The most they conh do in the recent hye-elections was to keep him off the platform. What is the career of that hon. gentleman? He has Fone alxme the comatry barking at its prosperity. Tarking at the Conservative perty and the National Policy. He had a kind of political rabies which madehim, so to speak, hite the (onservative parts. Interd, the event reminhs me of fiedismith's hallan on the mad dog. Jon knov that the mat doys hit a man, and the neightours were all very anmious about the mam, feanins that he would take hyimo. phohia and die. All the anxiety was direrted to the man and none to the dog, hut the event showed how much it was mishlirected, because doldsmith tells us that the man recovered from the bite---it was the dog that died. Now, I am obliged to the hon. member for pheens, for almitting that we hath at grom haveest in the Nomph.West. That shows that hon. gentlemen opposite are making progress. But he asks what credit have the dor: crmment for it?

Mr. LatNDERKIN. They ploughed it all.
Mr. D.AVIS. I grant yon that the fiovernment did not plough and the dovermment did not sow: but if the Conservative Covernment, the doverit ment of Sir Johm Matelonahd, of winch this fiovernment is the contimation. had not built the Canadian Pinitic Railway, as the hon. member for South Oxford would not have them, as the hon. member for Bothwell and their late leader, Mr. Blake. would not have them, where would be that magnificent harvest of which the hon. gentleman now admits the existence? If he almits the existence of that harvest, what does it mean? Do the millions which come in for that harvest contine themselves to the North-West: Is it not the nature of money to spreal itself as a river or a lake, and touch all shores of the community? And yet the hon. gentleman asks what creelit have the Govermment for it? I will tell him who has the crealit.

Mr. LANDFRKIN. It is Mr. Dewiner who has the credit: he is the fiovernment of the NorthWest.

Mr. DAVIN. The hom. gentleman is mistaken alout that. I like me hon. friemi so much that I am always sory when 1 cammet astee with him, and the consetpuence is that his remarks doom the to perpethal regret. Sow, Sir, I will not Waste time in leating with the dectrase in the satings banks deposits. That has been dealt with fully in the spece haf the hom. Minister of Finamere so that the answer to the hom. meminer for pireens on that subjert is in the Hemomet. With regatel to shipping. I watut wenint out that the hon. gentleman must hat he hen chasioforty disingemous in what he satil in resarel to the dectease of tomnare of vessels louilt in Cimanda. He trie $\vdots$ : omake out that that, tow, was an evilemace of diminisherd prosperity: yet the hon. ©entheman must have known that withan recent vears the fathon hats grone from timber ships to irom ships baite on the Clyele: he mast have knewn that lame ships are registered in Finglamd why: In order that they may escape municipal taxation. And yet the hon. gentleman. knowing that, spoke as if he were speaking unt in a larliament like this, lut lefore a jurv, in which ease when the trial was aver amd had or hand not got his verdice there would he ne more alonat it. If in parliament when he can be amswered he talks in that way, what would he sity on the hustings: train he spoke alont the census. Well, I am mot wings to take up the time of the Hanse alome that. but I see the eves of my hom. friend from Wellington (Mr. Ma.Mullen) tived on me, amla smike that is chihllike and blam lighting up hiscomuterance. 1 will ask his attention therefore for a moment to a few remaths 1 will make alont the census and the exolus, amb ats he is great on compatisoms of figures 1 will aill his attention to this combarison. Jay 1 point out to the hon. gentleman that he is athally not rasoming when he takes a set of figures for one rear, siy is.C. and compares it with a set for 1 SST. The true compatison would be the figures which we might have shown, hat hon. gentlemen opposite continued in office since 15 SS as compared with those we can show to-day. That wonh her the real comparison, showing the state of the comutry, had the Mackenzie Alministration eontimued in oftice to-day as compated with what it really is under the Conservative regime. Hat hon. gentlemen opposite remaned in power what would have happened? We should have had a latitic Rahimay extending probably : (x) miles west of Wimapeg. Eatst of Wimnipeg we should have had the water stretches: we shouh have mo NorthWest whatever, and the credit of Camalat would not. be what it is to-day. Now. take the cemsus. Does anyborly suppose we have amything to do with limiting or increasing the population? 1 $\mathrm{me}^{2}$ : anybuly suppose that the exolas wouhl not take: place whaterer government was in power?

Mr. MLL. (Bothwell). Ves.
Mr. DAVIS. The hon. gentleman is better informet becanse he knows very well that the natural canse of that exolus is the restless enterprising spirit of a progressive commmity such as curs. As to saying that the cause is to be attributed in any way to the quality of the fiovermment, that shows a rery bid state of perceptive powers, maless

We had a tate of things surh as existed prion to 1s-s when evergholy was show ded in glown and In' attempt mate $(1)$ develop our mamfactures. But I sity this. that with the comutly in a nommal andition we have to accoment for the exolus by the enterprising spirit of restless elacated young men who will if across the line and elswhere too. Neither will I deal with what the hon. gentleman sail atmot shgitr, becallse after all that has been sutheiently dealt with. I want to refer once again th the negotiations at $W_{\text {ashington and to what }}$ the hon. member for Gueen's (IP.F.. I.) satid conreming then. He deseribed the Ministers, especially ihe Minister of Finance, as going lown to Wiashimeton dishomestly. with the view of putting obstacles in the wat of reciprocity, and he went on to say that the Minister was greatly to be blaneed liecallese he showed ditficulties on the Camaliant side in the way of a proposed treaty under discousson. But the hom. gentleman evinenty fails to see that showing there was a difticultyon the (analian side would henoeridence of a disinclination on the part of the Finance Minister to have a treaty. If he had shown ditficulties on the American sifle. that wruld show he was disinclined to make a treaty. (an ally one who knows any thing of our Conservative and Reform politicians donht that every enlightened man in this comatry womblae reariv tomake a treaty with the United states which would be useful to (anada? Nolody dombes for one moment that we would be ready to enter into a traty on the line of the Act of is.it moditied hy present comblions. and moboly dombts that such a treaty could be mate if the Ainericans were willing to meet us half waty or even a dnarter. But, atil: Minister of Finance says, the history of our negat tations shows that to our propersals there are ho comiter propesials, and that when the hamd was stretched gut hy (ianala. no hand was stretched ont to meet us. In fact. the comersations hetween the Finamet Minister and Mr. Baine reveal what might hate heen known from inference and from the political sitnation in the states, the character of the party to which Mr. Blane helongs. and Mr. Blatines own chamacter. and that is that it would he impossille to get a commercial treaty with the Linited states unless on terms this comitry would never sulmit to. I was sorry to hear the closing remarks of the hom. member from Queen's. He talken in a rein of humiliation we have ton often hearal from that side of the Honse. hut which the country bas declaned they will have none of. He satid nothing could more tend to disloyalty than to have it go forth that it is ditticult or impossible to make a treaty with the United States. What would that mean: It would mean lay the fomdation here of at great mation amb are looking humbly, pitiahly. to the United States: Can you imagine anything more contemptible? If that is the position of Camala the sooner we go cap in hamd to Wishington the better and say, as it is impossible for us to do anything without your permission, as you are masters of the situation, let us make the liest arrangement we can for annexation. That is what the language of the hon. mer:ber means, if it means anything. But, Mr. Speaker, the people of this country by their rotes in the past elections have expressed their opinion. When I heard him talk about St. John and abont the effect of our commercial legislation on New Brumswick. I conld not help thinking that there is but one luan from New Brunswick in this Honse. Are the pe:יple of Dew Bronswick all era\%y that they will suppert at liovermment which is destroying their vitality and bleeding them white: Are the people of ianada, belonging to the most enlightened races, with education diffused so thoroughly amonest them. se ntterly lost to their own interests that they will vote for the men who will destroy their prosperity $\because$ The thing carries absurdity on its face. It should be denomaced. I denomuce it this night. It is a pity to have the time of this House taken up,as it isamothas been, hy pomiling at a ery that is entively played out, and waving a bamer that the people will have nothing to do with. There is a member on that side of the Honse whomi greatly honour. He is a man of chivalrons sonlI mean the lealer-and, if he is going to stick to this ery, he will lee in the position of Cadot, the hero of a poem written by Mr. Ianis Frechette, "Le diopuctu íumtome." (iadot was with France When Canala was cenled to Finglaml. He still wated his white Hag over his little fort. A number of Fnglish soldiers summoned him to suremler. and he refused. They were called away. Twenty yeats passed by and still the Hag Hoats idly on its swaying mast, although it has no lomger a meaning. and the mhepper man's chivalry is all wasted ami astray. I say there is not a man on that sile: fighting for umrestricted reciprocity who is mot fighting under a phantom hamer which every sensible man can see has mo longer any meaning. The Opposition commenced by taking a depraved line. First they took marestricted reciprocity. Now they are driven down to commercial mion, and after wardswe will the themselves driven to amexation. and then that colony will wo doulth have swelled very large, and where will the party timd itself: It iniy have lisippeared altogether: But anvay murestricted reciprocity is mo longer a serions ery, and I womb fain hope that even this sesision hom. gentlemen would review the sitmation and oise hs cleat. reatemble. logical eritioism .. criticism that, though it might come from hostile ranks, would ret adrl to the efticiency of that great comucil of the mation for the excellence and effectiveness of which my hon. friend the memher for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) is so anxions.

Mr. WATson. If the Honse has not heen entertained by fats and figures from my hom. friend who has just sat down, it has no doubt been treated to an amusing address. I might have expected from the remarks he addressed to us - 24 hours ago, that he would have given us some information on questions affecting the people of the Nonth-West. but we have heen toll of an animal that changes its colour, and I know of no man who changes himself so rapidly as the hon. member for West Assiniboia (Mr. Davin). We have heard him denombing a liovermment of incompetents, a cal. inet of antiques, and last night we heard him denomeing the (rovernment for keeping up the duty on binding twine, and claiming that, according to the Xational Policy, when combinations were formed, it was the duty of the (iovermment to reduce the duty. I expected to-nighc that, when he had an opportunity of dealing with a larger field, he would hare dealt with different questions, and would have pointed out the advantages which it change of poliey would he to the country, and in particular to his constituents. We have hearl a good deal from hon. gentlemen opposite about loyalty and discriminating against direat Britain, hut on examining the Trade and Navigation Returns, we find that the present Administration is discriminating against Cireat Britain. We find that the amount of duty they levy on dutiable goonds from direat Britain is ex per cent and on dutiable and free yoonls oe! per went. While ongools from the United states which are dutiable they levon? per cent and on dutiable and free 143 per cent. so that they are diseriminating against dreat Britain in the proportion of $1+1$ per cent to $2 \boldsymbol{2}$ ! cent. The Minister of Finamee silys he went to Washington aml applied for a renewal of the treaty of isiot in natural products. Other hon. sentlemen on the other sile say that the farmer would he injured by the renewal of that treaty. The Minister of Finance was tohl, ats we have tohl himi time amd again. that a treaty on that gromad alone comlal not lee obtained. We go follther than that. and say we should ask for free trarle in manufactured gomes as well as in natural products, and I say that, as far as the North. West is concerned. we would be much more benetited by free trade in manufactured products than in natural prohlncts. We have no fear of free trade in natural products and we wish to have free trante in manufactured goonls. The experience of the North-West is that the farmers there have to pay, if not the whole 3.i per cent. at least 30 per cent. on the agricultural implements they use on the farm. The member for Western Assimiboia (Mr. Davin) spoke of the language used hy the member for Queens, P.E.I. (Mr. Daviesi in reference to amexation, when he satil that no language could be used by any member more calculatell to encourage annexation than the language of the Minister of Finance. I agree with the member from Prince Folward Island. and I will give the member for Assimiloia some evidence given hy a gentleman for whom he had great respect, in years gone by. Before the reciprocity treaty of is.ot, there was just such a sentiment as there is to-lay in favour of ammexation. and we know that at present the first lientenant of the Conservative party in Ontario, Mr. Sol. White, is an advocate of amexation. Previous to lint, some of the best men of Canala, some who hold the highest positions to-day were in favour of amexation. No less a person than the Premier of this Dominion was in farour of annexation in 1849 , and other sentlemen who have occupied prominent positions in the Conservative ranks since that date, signed that annexation manifesto. Now, let us ask what occurred to allay that feeling of aneation. We find that just such a reciprocity treaty as we wish to make with the United States reconciled the people of this conיntry to their condition. They were not satistied in ISty when the Hon. Mr. Abbott, the Hon. 1). L. Macpherson, and other prominent men signed the annexation manifesto. Sir John A. Macdonali, in referring to the Treaty of ISist, used the following words :-

" Ender the beneficent operations of the system of selfgovernment which the later police of the mother country has accorded to Canada, in comuon with the other colonies possessing representative institutions. combined with the adrantages secured by the reciprocity treaty of an unrestricted commeref with our nearest neighbours in the matural productions of the two countries all agitation for organic change: has ceased-all dissatisfaction with the existing pulitical relations of the province has wholly disappearea.

So vou see that Nir John A. Macelonald felt that reciprocal trade with the United states. under the treaty of 1 Nith. Was the main ratuse in allaying the feeling infarour of ammexation that existed previnu: to that date. I am satistied that mothing that can be lone by this iovermment to allay any feeling that exists in (imada to-lay in favon of pulitical inion. will havealnetter effect than the renewallof that treaty on a homater hasis. which we know the Amerians are willing to extend to us. The hon. member for West Assiniluia (Mr. Wivin! spoke of the election in South I'erth. probahly becalle the Conservative candidate was successfulin that comenty. I happened to lee in that commty, and I took pains to look up the census to ascertain how the connty stomi with regard to population. I will take the township of Blanchard. Which is pietured tor this House as a township, where the farmers are apparently pros. perous. 1 tind thit in that townshipin Issi, there wats a population of $3.04+$ : in 1891 it wats - ? 9 Mo on an actual loss of 344 . If yon take: per cent as the matural rateof increase -and I think the hom. gentleman will agree with me after seeing those healthy. rohnst perple that the increase ought to he: per cent. as the men in that township are not like the hom. gentleman himself, most of then are marrich men-. if you ahd $?$ percent anmailly to $3,2+4$, it would make. 6ts. So son see the loss in population sutfereal by Blanchard township in ten years is 942, to say nothing about the immigrants that came from other countries. Now, sometimes hom. gentlemen opposite have made a comparison hetween the eastern provinces and the eastern comnties lying along the bor der line in the Enited States. But while the Americans may have lost in their comnties along the bomblary line, we have also lost in the eastern portions of the province of Ontario. But I say that so far as we are concerned, we are satistied that we have a letter country on our side of the line, and the people ought to be more prosperous and ought to remain at home. But if people leave the Eitstern states, where do they go: They go to the Western States. Unfortunately for us in (anata, although our population is increasing in the North. West, it is mot increasing as rapiolly as it should ; there are thousands of young Camadians who leave Eastern Camada to go to the United States. lut it is not for want of room or accommodation in our Canarlian North-West. I think the member for West Assiniboia (Mr. Davin) will agree with me that we have letter natural facilities in Manitoba amd the North. West than they have in Vinmesota or Dakota, and still humdreds of thousambs of our young Camadians prefer to go to the Western States. I think that the National Policy has a great deal to do with it, if it is not the sole cause. Hon. gentlemen opposite have also disallowed our railway legislation. For years those hon. gentlemen would not allow us to build a railway with our own money. Under this National Policy a young mangoing to the North-West has to pay sell a year more to buy the necessaries which he repuires to purchase on a prairie farm, than he would have to pay south of the line. Now, that is quite an inducement to a young man, and it is one of the great reasons why immigrants go to the United Stetes insteal of eoming to (amatat. We have been toll in this dehate that Great Britain is our market. Now, I contend that when we are discussing the tariff there are some articles we may leave ont altogether when you are making a comparison as to where our natural market is. So far as lreef and breadstuff are concemen, both Canala and the United States export those articles to direat Britain, and the British market regulates the price of those articles. But ontside or those two articles, where dowe find the bulk of our products go: Why they so to the Cinted itates, that is our nationa market. Take horses, for example. Since conferleration went to the linited States and omly i.tis to direat Britain. Why is this: Becanse we do not raise the kind of horses they want in (ireat Britain, and if we did raise them, ind if we hat Imperial Fede. ration, aml (ireat Britain discrimmated in favour of her colonies, the whole British market would not consmme the horses we have to export allmatly. A conple of years ago we exported to the Unitel states sone $16,1 \times N$ ) horses, and we time from the trate retmons of direat Britain that last year the total imports of horses into that country only amounter to $13,(n n)$. Therefore, if we hal the British market to ouselves they would not require all our surplus horses for years. We have been forcing these horses into the linited states umder a $\because 0$ per cent tariff, while we had free trade withlireat Britain. Now the Linited Nates impose a specitic duty of $\mathbf{B 3 0} 0$, and our hest horses are still climbing that high tariff wall. although we have free trade with Iireat Britain, showing that the United States is our natural market for horses. Now, I will come to the egg uluestion, which, althongh some people look upon it as a small industry, still is a very important one to many of our farmers. The farmers of Canada know well that their eggs, as a rule, will pay their grocery bills, aml that is a very important item for them. Until 1889 we shipped $12,(0 \times 1), 0 K 1$ dozens of eggs yearly to the United States, and we did not ship any to (ireat Britain. Since the McKinley Bill imposed a duty of five cents a dozen on our eggs, it is true that some of our eggs hare gone to fireat Britain, bat the egg dealers without exception give evidence against the British market for our eggs. the American market still remains our natural market for this article, and we still ship more eggs to the United States, eren paying $\bar{i}$ cents a duty per dozen, than we do to Circat Britain. I have heard it stated that the price of eggs was no lower on account of the MeKinley tariff, that the lowest average price last season was 10 cents per dozen. I think the lowest price under the McKinley tariff has been 10 cents. That does not, however, prove anything. The lowest arerage price paid for eggs in Michigan was 14 cents per dozen, while 10 cents was the lowest arearge price in Canada. One cent per dozen would place them on the market, and this shows a loss of three cents per dozen lecanse we have not the American market. Of sheep, we shipped in $1880244,(000$ to the United States, and $4^{7},(\mathrm{M})$ to Gireat Britain, the duty leing 7 or cents for lambs and $\$ 1 . \pi 0$ for sheep. Of wool, we shipperl to the United States I, (KNO, (MK) Ils., and nome to (ireat Britain, the duty leing 12 cents per llb. It may lee satid that we camont control the McKinley Aet, hint I am satisfied that if proper representations are mate 20 the Americans we can secare a large measure of reciprocity with the linited States, not only to the benefit of the people of (anada but those of the United States as well. bint there are certain matters over which we possess control, and there are certain articles from which we can remove the duty. By taking off the cluty on binding twine we can save our farmers $\mathbf{S} 4 \pi \%$, (uM) ammally and only lose $\mathrm{sh},(\mathrm{nN})$ of revenue. Take lons leing importerl. The duty paid on the importen oil, which is of the value of $840 \mathrm{~s}, 27$ ? , is Si36in, 1:31. On the total of lin,(Kn), (NA) gallons there is three times that amome of laty, or on the IO,OKNO,OKI gallons of oil we retine in Canala under. a strong combination that controls the output, these men put in their pockets on accomit of that only one-third of the taxes collecter on any article gres into the pullie treasury, and that two-thires: find their way into the pockets of the manufacturers, refiners or combinations. Accorlingly, as the member for Assimboria (Mr. Datvin) said last night, not to-night. the diovermment should interfere and reduce the cluties. Coal oil is comsumed almost entirely by the farmers and lahoming classes. becanse in towns and cities the electric light is largely used : and, therefore, these $15,(\mathrm{KN})$, (M) gallons of oil are used ahmost entirely by farmers aml labourers. We were told a year ago that the duty din not increase the price. and during the elections of that time, at the last general election, we were told that everything was cheaper in 1891 than in 18.8. That proves nothing. What we desire to know is what the prices would be if the duties were: removel. When the rluties were lowered on sugar, the people fomm that the Conservative party had deceived them before the elections, because when the laty was reduced on sugar the people got it cheaper: I claim that we can wipe the daty entirely off sugar and be better off for doing so. I shatl he: asked what about the refiners. I would proville not only for them but for the people employed in their establishments, and even then we should be better off than we are to-day. It is estimated that we consume ammally $200,000,0$ (10) llos. of sugar. All our sugar is over 14 Dutch standaril and it is subjecterl to tor of a cent per llo. laty. We have practically shut off all trate with Jamaica on account of this duty. The Americins admit all sugar unter I6 Dutch standard free and sugars over 16 Dutch at $\frac{1}{2}$ a cent per lb., and we therefore impose $\frac{\pi}{i n}$ of a cent more aml do not almit as high grades free. So all our sugar has to be refined before it can be sold to the consumer, for all under No. 14 is unfit for human fool. I say we pay in of a cent wore per (l). for sugar than do the Americans. Take people are employed by the sugar refineries, anil I would pursue the policy of superannuating them, giving each $\sin (x)$ per year during natural life. biof) men at 3 BN) would take $\operatorname{SiN}$ (MK). Then about 12 Mr. Watsos. to satisfy them with a suall amome, but suppose they each received SOD, (rx) a year, that would make $\mathrm{S} 300,(0) \mathrm{N})$, or a total expense of $\mathrm{E}(6),(\mathrm{x})$ to provide liberally to all employed in the sugair industry. $\because(N),(N O),(O N)$ lhs. of sugar at $\frac{\pi}{1 \pi}$ of a cent represents $\operatorname{sl}$, (iNO, (KMO. So by wiping out the sugar refineries and by pensioning the owners and the employes at a total cost of $\mathbf{\$ 6 0}(0)(0)$ yearly, we wonld have sugar as cheap as it is to day and Sl,(XN),(NK) ammally placel in the treasury. Or, if sugar were made free, the people would obtain it at a much cheaper rate than they dos to-day. The hon. gentlemanreferred to the prosperity of railways and it is desirable that these matters should be -liseussed. Railwayshavebeen prosperousin (anada and are prosperous to-day, beatuse they enjoy frec trade and they are alout the only enterprises that An enjoy freetiale. On theother hand, take Canalian shipping. On the great lakes our shipping has not free trade and what is the result \% Only in per cent of the lake trade is carried in Canadian bottoms. No inetter proof of the adrantage that could be atfordeal by reciprocity can be adluced than that which wonll follow free trade in shipping. The member for West Assiniboia (Mr. Davin) mentioned that there were good crops ant he wonlered what the people wouldio without the Conser rative party. One woald imagine that they controlled everything, and that they alone would give subsidies to rail. ways, to harbours and other public works. It minst, however, he remembered that it is the public. momey that is expended, and if a Liberal Government were in power the country would undoubtedly possess as many miles of railway as thereare to-day.

Mr. BOWVLL. Because you would not have at satw-mill to which to build a ratway.

Mr. W.ATsON. The hon. gentleman suggesterl that more miles of railway have been built in Manitoba than would have licen the case if a Liberal (iovernment were in power. But the Lileral Giovermment never restricted railway building, and I am well aware how the people of the NorthWest suffered for years on account of the railway policy of hon. gentlemen opposite. The hon. gentleman spoke of public opinion, and public opinion hat left the Opposition in reduced circumstances so far as numbers were concerned. I have no lonht that before this Parliament is ended that hon. gentlemen will find that the Opposition is a pretty lively corpse. A year ago the hon. member from Assiniboia (Mr. Davin! was not quite as solid a supporter of the diovermment as he is to-day.

Mr. DaVIN. Just as solid.
Mr. WATSON. I do not think so. I think that the hon. gentleman delivered a speceh in this House that rather reflected on the fiovernment which is now in power.

Mr. DAVIN. On immigration.

Mr. WATsON. The speech that he delivered was a general condemnation of the Premier down to the humblest member of the party. There may he reasons for his change. The hon. gentleman as he stated did stump in the county of South Perth, and he claimed to be an Independent thereand to be one of the men who was sufficiently independent when owning and controlling a paper in Regina to criticise the action of the Government. We have heard him state repeatedly in this House that he did not control that paper, hat we timl by the Public Accounts that there are probably certain reasons why he should be a supporter of the Govermment of the day. In south Pertly he boasted of controlling that paper, bat in the House of Commons I think I heard him deny it. However I felt satisfied that if the hon. member for Assiniboia (Mr. Davin) did not criticise the (iovermment, his constituents knowing that he did enntrol it would unt have sent him to represent them in Parliament. We know that he had to pledge himself to the people. He toll us last night that he had to pledge himself that he would declare in thes Homse that the tax on binding twine showd he removerl, and I have no doubt that he hal to plenge himself also to vote for taking the daty off agricultural implements.

Mr. DAVIN. No.

Mr. WATSON. If mot his next neighbour did. I know the hom. gentlematm from Assimiboia ( Mr . Daviny had to pleige hinself on the tenperance 'fuestion: he hat to make several plenlyes to the electors, and that being the case I do not think that he has treated his people well when he comes here to-night and eulogizes the forermment and their policy. I do hope that the fovermment have not done as the Minister of Finance has statel, and have given up all hopes of having at reciprocity treaty with the United States. So far as I am concernerl I would like to see free trade with the world and direct taxation. Some hon. gentlemen whistled across the House, and I feel satistied that if we had direct taxation hon. gentlemen opposite would bot have so much money to spuamider as they have to-llay. Their policy is a system of legalized roblery in taking a man's money out of his pocket when he does not know it. If I have Siln in my pocket, and a highway robber puts a pistol to my heal and says: I want sino, I will prolably give it to him if I think the gun is loaden, lut if I ean get that man arrested he will be placed in gatol; whereas the highway roblery practised ly the manufacturers or combines is protected hy legislation. They take our money and they give us no more in return for it than does the highway robher. I can easily understand that the Dinister of Finance did not want a reciprocity treaty with the Cnited States, for if he got it he would not know what to do with it, and I also believe that hon. gentlemen opposite would not know how to run elections if they had free trade, because they require to have the manufacturers' sulseriptions at their back. I do not believe that hon. gentlemen opposite have been honest in attempting to get reciprocity with the United States, for 1 am of opinion that unrestricted reciprocity could be secured if proper representations were made to the neighbouring Republic. I am satisfied that the people of the Sitates want a great many articles that we produce, that we want a great deal that they produce, and that mutual reciprocity would be advantageous to both. While we have a high tariff Minister of Finance on the Canadian side and a high tariff McKinley on the American side, we cannot expect to reduce the tariff wall. I do hope that the fiovernment will not stand by the statement made by the Minister of Finance, that he had no hope for reciprocity.

Mr. FAIRBAIRN. Yes, we will.

Mr. WATson. I believe that the hon. gentleman from south Victoria (Mr. Fairbairn) will, but l noticed last night that he did not repeat his speech of a year ago on the binding twine guestion. Aot a man on the other side of the House defended the exactions of the forermment in exacting taxes from the people for bingling twine.
Mr. FAIPBAIRN. It was not worth while.
Mr. Watson. Probahly they have had an intimation that the (iovernment will take the duty off twine, and 1 have no donlt that the hom. gentleman from south Victoria (Mr. Fairbairn) along with others was tied up last night by a piece of binting twine and was not allowed to speak. The hom. member for Assiniloia (Mr. Davin,) spoke ahmont the lunatic asylums in some constituencies heing tilleel up, but I felt satisfies after hearing the apeech of the hon. memher to-night that the lumatic asylums in his part of the comitry must have been filled up, and that there was no more rom there. Without further orenpying the time of the House, Mr. Speaker, I will now take my seat.
Mr. Momillati (Huron). I hey to move the ajournment of the debate.

Mr. FOSTER. I wish to call the attention of the House. that hoth last week and again to-night, an arrangement was made with the leader of the $\mathrm{O}_{\mathrm{p}}$ position that we should tinish the delate at a reasomalle hour to-night. Ido not see the lealer of the Opposition here, hut I have no doubt that such information was given to me after consultation with his colleagnes. Therefore 1 think that the hom. gentleman had better go on and make his speech.

Mr. Memillan (Huron). There are two or three of us to speak on this side yet and we ought to be allowed is fair opportunity. If the Honse dees not wish to adjourn we will have to goo on.

Mr. Paterson (Brant). Was the understanding that there should not lee any more dis. cussion, or that we should go into Supply?

Mr. FOSTER. That we should close at an early hour to-night.

Mr. Paterson (Prant). We can discuss the items on supply. When any motion is made to go, into supply the whole matter can he brought up atcain.

Mr. FOSTER. Certainly, if you wish to bring it up.

Mr. Paterson (Brant). That will be in acoordance with the arrangement.

Mr. FOSTER. The arrangement was simply that this debate on what is called the Budget would close to-night at a reasonabie hour.

Mr. MILL. ( Pothwell). I think that the Minister of Finance informed the leader of the Opposition, at the same time, that nobolly on that side would speak.

Mr. FOSTER. I think not. The hon. gentle. man is quite wrong in his information.

Mr. BOWELL. I think the hom. gentleman remembers that he told me that the debate would close to-night when we consented to an early adjournment the other night.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). I know that the Minister did arrange with the leader of the Opposition that the delate should close at this sitting. luat I understoon that the Minister stated that no one else on the opposite side would speak on this subject.

Mr. FOSTER. I think the hon. gentleman had hetter finish his speech.
Mr. MILL: (Bothwell). The hon. gentleman can make his speech at any time on going into supply.
Mr. MoMILLAN. If I shall be allowed to speak on going into supply I would rather speak at another time.
Motion agreed to, aud Honse again resolved itself into Committee of supply.
(In the Committee.)

Mr. MILLi (Bothwell). I notice that there is an increase of $$ 13,339$. Will the hon. gentleman say how this increase has taken place:

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. There are several statutory increases, $$ 1,($ (i) for keepers and $$ 2,3(1)$ an isolated female prison and a new criminal lunatic asylum. But for that there would be a decrease in the estimate. The report which has heen laid on the Table of the House shows a very regrettahle state of affairs as regards the lunatic asylum. It is the only asylum for criminal lunatics in the bominion, and it is simply a large ward in the building occupied for divers other purposes, among others for a flow mill. There is a great want of exercise and employment ; of ontdoor exercise there is none. I think it is desirable alonve all that a lunatic asylum should be provided. It can be constructed on the penitentiary property. If funds were available, I should like very much to erect a prison for female convicts, who are likewise congregated in that penitentiary from all parts of the country. The accommodation for them is only in the basement of the buiding, which is somewhat damp and glowmy, and not at all the kind of place for convicts of that description.

Mr. FLINT. I would ask the dovernment if they contemplate carrying out any of the suggestions made ly the Inspector of Penitentiaries in regard to the establishment of a prison for young criminals. I was very much impressed hy the arguments of the inspector. and I was heartily in sympathy with his views.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I do not propose to take a vote for that service, but $I$ am entirely of the opinion the inspector has expressed, and it is incumbent upon Parliament to make some provision for that. I propose to frame a scheme for an institution of that kind, and have it realy for next session. and ask for a sote for it.

Mr. PATERNON (Prant). Is the decrease in the maintenance due to a decrease in the number of convicts?
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. No; it is a reduction in the ordinary expenses. I do not think the number of convicts is less or likely to be less.

Praythe.

(HARGES AIAANST JUMOE ELLIOTT.

Mr. LISTER. Understanding that objection would le taken to the petition which was presented the other day from Thomas s. Holbs and others, paying that justice may te done with reference to certain judgments rendered by County Court Judge Elliott monder the Electoral Franchise Act, and in relation to certain acts of partizanship alleged by them to have been committed by the said Judge Ellintt, 1 beg to present amother petition praying that the matter may be dealt with in conformity with law am justice. I bey to move, seconded hy Mr. Eilgar, that the petition of Thomas S. Hobls and others he now received and read.

Mr. speak ER. I am inclined to think that this is not a guestion of urgency that would justify the Honse in passing this motion; however, it is for the House to say.
Mr. LISTER. I contend, Mr. Speaker, that it is a question of urgency. It is mefair to Judge Blliot that these charges should stame upon the Table of the Honse minvestigated, if they are to be investigated at all. On Tuesilay last, I think it was, a petition was presentel making certain charges against this judge, and to-day in the regular course that petition would be received and real. But an intimation was received by me that the petition was informal, for the reason that it contained no names upon the page containing the prayer. I, therefore, present to-day another petition, in order that as little time as possible may le lost, and I think, in the interest of Judge Elliott and in the interest of the whole community, that these proceedings should be carrrie! on as rapidly as possible. I think the new petition which I present to-lay should stand, as far as this House is concerned, in the position of the old one, and that it should now be read, and a copy of it forwarded to the judge for his answer. A charge against a judge is, of course, a matter of very grave importance, and the authorities lay it down that it should be proceeded with without any delay, because it is a matter affecting the dignity and honour of the judiciary of the country.
sir JOHN THOMPSON. I do not understand that the hon. gentleman claims this to be at all a matter of privilege.

Mr. LIster. No.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Then that disposes of the question of urgency, which is about the only question. All the mosiness on the Paper is urgent: lint lesides that, the only ground put forward for the claim of urgency is that the matter is urgent to Judge Elliott. The House has other important business to attend to which is equally urgent to other publice functionaries, and I am afraid that Judge Eliott will have to wait his turn. Iagree with the hon. gentleman that this is a matter of very grave importance, inasminch as it affects the position of a judge, but that is no reason why the rules of Parliament should be dispensed with. On the contrary, I think it is most desitable that the rules of the House should be observed.

Mr. LISTER. I move, secombed by Mr. Eilgar :
That the petition of Thomas $s$. Hobbs and others be printed and a copy thereof be at once sent to Mr. Filliott, Judge of the County of Middlesex.

Mr. SPEAKER. This motion seems to me to be in the same postion as the other. The petition has not yet been received.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The olject of this mo-tion-I cannot conceive of any other-is to prevent an examination of the petition for the purpose of seeing whether it conforms to the rules of the Honse. A petition was presented which it was fomm did not conform to the rules of the Honse, and on that. gromel it was askel that the rules be dispensed with. I think it is equally desirable that this petition should be forme to le formal.
Mr. FIDGAR. I do not see why the !rating of the petition shomld not go on.

Sir JOHS THOMPsoN. It has mot heen received ly the House.

Mr. EIMAR. It has not heen receivel, amb, therefore, it is not in that sense hefore the House, but it has been presented by an hon. member, and certainly the House, if it ilesires to expeelite the business, could order the petition to le printed.

Mr. SPEAKER. There is another oljection to this motion which I did not mention at the moment, because I thought the one I mentioned wats sufticient. This is a motion for the printing of a paper, and the ordinary course is to move that it he referred to the Printing Committee and be dealt with by that committee. This is an aldi tional oljection to the one I have already staterl.
Mr. LAURIER. It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that you should reserve your judgment on this point, because I think there are precedents to the contrary. At all events, this is is petition against a judge, and the law is for this Parliament as well as for others; and if the objection is taken, there is nothing to be done but to follow the rules of the Honse.
Mr. LISTER. In the two or three cases which have come before this House since 1867, the asual practice has been to move that the papers be printed and copies forwarded to the gentleman against whom the accusation is made.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. It seems to me that we should not print and send to a person accused a petition which has not been received. For that reason I think it important that the rules should be observed.

PRIVATE BILLS.
Mr. CAMERON moved for leave to introduce Bill respecting the Ontario Pacific Railway Co.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have unt heen funished by the examiner with a statement that this Bill can be presented. and 1 wouldreduire that from the Bill examiner hefore it can be introdnced, it leing a private: Bill.

Mr. I:CULLET moved:

That the petition presented to-lay on behalf of the Cubarg and Northumberland Pacific Railway Co. be read and received.
He said: It is urgent that the petition should be received to-day, as the time expires on Friday.

Ilr. FIMiAR. I wonld like to know whether this is in order.

Mr. SPEAKFR. It is not. strictly speaking, in order if oljection is taken. The only ground I think on which the House wonh receive the motion is that the time is alont to expire.

Mr. ElliAR. As a motion which I had the honour of secomiling has heen ruled out of order. I must take the point of order in this case.

MFNSARE: FROM HIS FXCELLENC'Y.

Mr. TCPIER presented a Message from His Fixcellency the iovernor denemal.

Mr. Ni'FAKER real the Messige, as follows:-.. Stanife of Preston.
The Governor (ieneral transmits to the House of Commons. further papers respecting the Fisheries on the Pacific Coast, including the separate arrangement propoesed to be entered into by Newfoundland with the United States, and also the enforcement by the dovernment of Newfondland against Canadian vessels of the Newfoundand Bait Act.
Govibsmest Hoesf,
Otriwa, ?uth March, 1892.

I. (:R.-ARRANGEMENT WITH (.P.R.

Mr. DAVIES (l.E.I.) asked. What was the amount paid by the (anadian Pacitic Railway to the Intercolonial Railway, for the year ending - elth February. Indr2. on tickets collected on the Canatlian Pacitic Railway hetwen Halifax amd St. John? What was paid for the same year, for car mileage between Halifax and st. Johm, by the Intereolonial Railway to the Canadian Pacitic Railway:

Vr. HAGi(ART. The Candian lacifie Railway extends mo farther east than St. John, and therefore mothing conld be paid on tickets collected on that railway hetween Halifax amd st. Johm. With regard to the second part of the encuiry, the ammont for car mileage between Halifax and St. Iohn paid by the Intercolonial Railway to the Canadian Pacitic Railway, for the year ending 29 th Fehruary, 1892, was $322,371.28$, and the amount receivel for the same time from the Canadian Pacific Railway for the use of cars rumning on that malway was S13,037.

ACTIVE MILITLA.

Mr. HUGHEN moved for :

Returr showing:-1. The corps of the Active Militia of Cansda that have been drilled ( $a$ ) annually: ( $b$ ) biennially, and (c) triennially, in the period 1889-1891 inclusive. 2. The number of qualified combatant officers in eaeh corps. 3. The number of provisionally appointed officers in each corps, specifying those whose period for qualification has expired. 4. The name, length of service and age of each commanding officer upwards of sixty sears of age.
5. The actual strength of, and number of enlistments in, during the year 1891, each of the permanent eorps, loc:ated in Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick.

He said: In bringing this motion before the House. I clo so at the reguest of a large number of militia otficers of Canala. I have received letters from almost every province of the Dominion containing suggestions with regarl to the force, and these suggestions I shall hrietly endeavour to put hefore the House. I may say I have no intention whatever of finding fand with the past management of the Militia Tepartment. The former Minister of Militia and his predecessors foumd themselves, on taking office, fettered, in a certain sense: by the combition in which they foum the department when they returned to othice in 1879 . The policy of the late Minister in encomatoing the force, in developing rifle showting. and in encouraging the militia in every way consistent with the amome of money at his disposial, would preclude my casting any reflections on the department on his account. More than that, the comiluct of the late Minister during the campaign of 185.5 , will for all time merit for him the approsal of the people. The present Minister of Militia is an oll persomal friend of mine. he is new in the office, and therefore I can have no ohjeet in making any reflections on him. I had the pleasure of drilling under the present Minister of Militia nearly a quarter of a century ago, and I know from past experience he is in every sense a thorough militiaman. Nor have I any desire to reflect on the departmental ami staff officers throughout the Dominion. I simply wish to take the cuase as it is and present the ideas of militiat officers, with the sole object of improving the force in any way we can. With the same expemiture. or a greated expenditure if necessary. A slight review of the force may not be out of place. In Istiti, the old ritte companits were reorganized and hattalions formed throughout the Dominion. These conps were drilled during $186 \pi, 1868$, and 18691 , and 19 to $18 \%$ in brigale camps. Then we had the whole force ammally drilled. and it was one of which any young country might le proud. Unfortanately for the militia force, the Reform party came int", power in 1874 , and their policy at once began to show itself. The aim then, and it was successfully carried ont, seemed to be to do away with the rural battalions, limit the city and town companies, and establish a small standing army. When the (onservative party returned to power in 1859 , they found the force almost entirely demoralizen, the olid military schoris closed up, and the force in a very weak condition. The second part of the motion asks for a return of the qualified officers in the force. In the old days of the military schools, we found the militia force well officered by well qualified men. There was scarcely a company which had not all the commissioned officers qualified, and many of the non-com. and even privates. The cause of this is to be found in the schools. Now, in presenting a view adverse to the present system, I do not wish to be understood as saying that our present military schools have not done some good, but I do say that the same expenditure of money might have resulted much more advantageonsly to the force. We find in them that the basis is rank and not knowledge. I shall just illustrate this by taking two brothers, possessed of equal knowledge and proficiency and efual in every respect. One happens to be provisional captain, knowing just as little atoont drill as does the other, who happens to lee a sergeant. These two go to school. What do we tind? We find the one who wears thesergeant's nniform is relegaterl to the sergeant's mess andilrills with the sergeants, while his brother, who wears an rofficer's uniform, messes with the officersanl is given double pey and allowances comparer with the non-com. We find in the school ther wear their different uniforms, their mess is lifferent, and their lorlging is different. One has all the luxuries of an officer, and the other has to put up with the skilly and other discomforts of the private soldier. Bit the greatest possible oljection to the whole is that, on leaving the school. the non-com. has to leave, no matter what his pro ticiency may Ite, with his son-com. certificate, while his brother may acupirea commissioned officer's certificate. Cinler the odd system, one which a great many militia otficers mantain shonld he again revived, the basis was not rank hat militaryproticiency. Whether a man was a provisional captain or a sergeant, all entered the sehool on an equal forsting. A non-eom. ofticer wore the sime uniform as a militia lientenant-colonel. In other womls, they were treated as calets, all aining to acmuire certificates. We found in those days that all men were tanght alike, they all had to jeass the same examination, and certiticates were issued on the hasis of military knowledge and mot of ank. Their umiforms were the sime. There was no full dress regulation in force then. I have a number of letters from military men in the different districts stating that they have been umable to afforl the money for the purchase of full dress uniforms whith are mow reguired for young men coming from these schools. We all rementer that, in the old days, we would see thousamels of volunteers in brigale camps, and scarcely a full dress uniform amongst the officers, and yet those men were at competent to face the music and go to the front as those who can atford to hoy full dress uniforms. I am not saying anything against those who can atford to buy them, but 1 think those who canot should not lee placed in the prosition they are. We hat some excellent men who marched through the trenches at Patoche wearing white kiol gloves, aml we had others whomarched throtgh those same trenches in their shirt sleeres, and those who were in their shirt sleeves were no less able to perform their duty than those who wore kid gloves. Under the old system a mon might apply to enter the military school at any time, and, by applying to his commanding officer and the commander of his listrict, might obtain an entrance. Under the"present system, there is great difficulty for the young men to enter at the time when these military schools are being held, which are the rery times when they are repuired to be busy on their farms. In short under the present system, it is almost impossible for these men to get there at the times which are suitable for them. Under the old system, a student at a military school might board in any part of the city or town where it was held, but unter the present regime the officers and the non-commissioned officers attending these schools are obliged to hoard in the barracks and to undergo all the discipline of the institution. The system of hoarding out allows it much larger number to attend the schools than can uow attend them. One of the chicf excuses offered by those in charge of the schools at present is that they can only take a certain number at a certain time, and when the number of applicants exceeds the amoment of acommonlation, they have to wait until others pass out of the schoml. thus preventing entirely their attendance. Under the ohl system. a man at the completion of his term was allowed sin), and in the ohl days he wa allowed sion, being sin) extra for a first class certificate, but now there is no such alionatnce. I hat the privilege of attend. ing the school umler the oll 2gth Regiment, hut 1 have seen men who have never attemded a school who were duite as suceessful in carrying ont their duties as men who passed through the schools. having passed lefore what we called in the ohd days the Volunteer Boarols. Many of those are in ahe force to-day aml are ornaments to it. At that tin.e they were examined aceorling to rheir pror. ficiency in the fielal, hat that is not carrien on now to the same extent. Then an impetns was given to young men to st udy military business at lome. but now no such impetus is given to at man t., develop his military drill. We find that the number of otficers who patss these schomls is year by year hecoming limited, and at the present time, looking over the militia list. I think it will be foumd that not ome-thind of our othicers are qualified to command an ordinary company. In the oll days. there was scarcely a company that had not every officer qualitied, besides a large number of non-commissioned othicers. I was drilled in the ranks muler Colonel Bowell, the present Minister of Dilitia, hut I held a military school certificate, and 1 remember others did also. There is another matter to which I desire to call attention. and that is ats to the manner in which the camps are comblueted at the present time. Formerly, the corps were drilled ammally, hat, since the ammal dills have been done away with, and a small standing army has been built ap. the result has not been so gomil. It is true that there hats heen an attempt to return. w a certain exteat. to the old system of ammal drilling, hut they leave out the rural corps.amlsome of them are not ilrilled more than once in two years. and sometimes once in three years. What kind of force can be kept up when the men are not taken away for drill none thanonce in three years: They ga home after their brigate drill, and their muskets are put away, and according to the ordinary death rate, many of the volunteers must pass away into another lam hefore they are called upon for the next drill. The hurdens that are thrown on the officers, of taking out the rural corps once in two or three years, are enormous. Only those who have to keep up a rural corps kuow the expense and trouble which it involves to keep that corps up umler this system. I have seen brigide camps, and others have seen them also, in which the commanding officers were stambing aroumd unable to drill their own hattalions, and drill sergeants were sent to instruct them in their daties. Another thing is that we find tos, much interference in the interior affairs of the battalion by the ofticers in command of the camps. It is not uncommon to.see in brigade orders that certain battalions are to parade at such and such an hour in the morning for squad drill, and I have seen strong young farmers called out there and given bulauge stops and extension drill for the coos of their health. That is the way in which the money cotee by Parliament is thrown away. They take up a large portion of their time in teaching them sunad drill, which may be all right in regard to the regular army, hut for the colunteer force you reguire very little of that. The man who can change his feet, form fours, and shoot is quite competent enough in that respect. IVe find very little battalion drill under the present regine in camp, and it is not uncommon to find a laittalion returning from camp without having had one lirigale drill. If such is to continue it wonld lee as well to adopt the old system amil have drill at heallyuarters, or hetter still, disband the whole force and save the money. In these brigade camps there should certainly be some hattalion drill every day, and there should be a large anount of brigade drill as well, and there should be no interference ly the officers commanding the camps with the interior affairs of the different corps. I would like to know where the dignity of an ofticer is who takes a battalion out to attend the brigate camp,and hasoneof these instructorsilrill not only the colone but every commissioned officer in the whole corps. I have often womlered where the dignity of the ofticers of the force was who would tolerate any such interference, or who had not pride enough to adopt some system that would allow their otficers to lecome qualifiel. There is another print to which I will refer. If we are to have a force at all, then 1 maintain that force should be ready to march to the front at any time on 04 hours notice: if we are ever to have any want for a colunteer force in this country, that want will come up suddenly. In the relellion of 1885 , the need sprang up very suddenly, and we were fortunately able to semd a sufficient furce to the front. But in case of trouble with the United States in with any other foreign Covermment, we have instances on record to show us that it will he absolutely necessary that we should be able to plate a very large booty of drilled men in the field on a moment's notice. I helieve that if the present system were continuell many years more the force would become so degenerated that we would not be ahle to put more than fifty or sixty thousumd men in the field in case of necessity; but under a proper system with the same amount of money we could easily turn out three or four humdred thousand men, on a day's notice, ready to march to the front. Many of the corps at the present time have otticers in command who have been in command ever since 186i. Now, there is no oljection whatever to an otficer retaining command, provided he is young and active, and fit for all the duties he has to perform. Many of the older officers finding themselves unfit to assume the fatigues of an active campaign, have retired, and we find that nearly all the city corps change their commanding officers every few years. We further find, unfortunately, that many of the rural corps, although the officers in command may have been good men in their day, are yet but fairly good men. Still a great many of them have officers who take command, not for the gool of the force, but for the honour of the position and the benefits that accrue to them. There is a section in the Regulations and Orders of Canada requiring officers, when they reach a certain age, to be placed on the retired list. I regret that that regulation has been a dead letter, and has not been enforced in Canade at all. Now, there is another point to which I wish to draw the attention of the House, and that is in relation to the permament corps. Either these permanent corps are intenled to be a standing army, or they are intended to give instruction as military schorls. Now, if they are to be the nucleus of a standing army, I think the voice of the comtry will be against the policy of building up a standing army in the Dominion of Canada. If we review the history of nations we will find that when standing armies have been brought face to face with militia corps, the militia corps have inrarially lheen the wimers; in other words, the militia force has invariably proven itself to be superior to standing armies in the field. Now. if permanent corps are to be the nucleus or the rallying point of military schools, then it is proper for us to enguire into the cost of these schools. I find in last year's ofticial report that the sum of nearly half a million dollars was expented on these permanent schools, and only 4t2 certificates were granted : in other words, each certificate cost the country about $\$ 1,2(N)$ during the past year. On turning to the amome paid for drill pay and camp allowances for the militia corps, we find that the sum of a little orer a quarter of a million was expendel for a force of $(t),(x)$, whereas the sum of nearly half a million was expended for these permanent schools. I wish again to point out that it is not my intention nor my wish to make any attack on these permanent schools. The officers commanding them, I believe, are efticient and yool men: but what I do say is this, that the same money might be so employed as to give the commtry a vastly improved system and much letter results. For instance, if we were to return to the ohl system of issining certificates on the hasis of military knowledge. insteal of military tank, we would hate a mach larger number of yoms men attending these schools. At the present time, the attendance is limited to a very few men, necause they have to sleep in the barracks, but if we returned to the old system we could easily have 1.50 to $2(0)$ men in the school. The number in the school of the eyth Regiment when I passed was 21 is men, and not one of them-I make the statement guardenlly-who hal attended school for two months but was fully capable of taking his place in any force-the equal of any officer or man now in the permanent corps. Under the old system which was in vogue in Canalia in former years, we would always have the schools filled with able young men who would train not to put in an easy time or an idle hour, as namy of the men do at present, but for the purpose of acquiring knowledge and fitting themselves for real service. I have spoken with a great many military men in this country about returning to the old system, and I find only four objections urged against it. One is that it would be a loss of dignity on the part of these provisionally appointed officers to stand in the ranks and drill with non-commissioned officers. Well, I maintain that in a country like this we have no business to recognize rank without merit, where all are students. As Bobby Burns has sail :

"The rank is but the guinea's stamp. The man's the gold for $a^{\prime}$ that.'

As I have pointed out, if the office: commandingis a provisional officer and the other is a sergeant, where can there be any loss of dignity in standing side by side and driling with each other ?
Mr. Hughes.

The basis of these sehools should be knowledge. These very same otficers who would scorn to drill in a military school beside non-commissioned officers seem to suffer no indignity in going into camp where a drill sergeant goes around among them and teaches them their duties. Another ob, jection is that sergeants might hold the same commissions as their officers. Thus they my you might have a sergeant holding a tirst-class certificate, whereas the captain or lientenant might have only a second-class or provisional certificate. But if the private knows more than the captain it is the business of the captain to go and get a better certificate. In the old days, we are told that these men passed for the money and not for the love of the force. These men might have had no intention whatever of remaining in the volmiteer force: but they have in many instances allied themselves after a time with the force, and are to-day the best ofticers in it. Another oljection is that the men moler the old system were not trained in mess room etifuette. Now, it may be very necessary to a military edncation to know how to hold one s knife and fork, to know how to handle a napkin, but I do not know that it is an essential part of such an elucation, or that it is so important that an ordinary Camadian with ordinary bains could not learn that lranch in ten or tifteen minutes. These are the only objections Ihave ever heard agrainst returning to theold system. Nir. I lo not wish to take up the time of the House any further on this suliject. I have endeavoured briefly to point out what I consider the drawbacks of the present system, and the superiorities of the old system, which many militia ofticers believe should be again adopted in this country. Ilvelieve that it would be best for the country to resort once more to the old plan. But of one thing I am satisfied, and that is, that the militia force of this country, particularly the rual hattalions, are determined to have anmual chill. The militia otticers who have for years kept up these corps, to a great extent, at their own expense, are determined to make their voice heard in favour of having ammal drill for the militia corps. I believe that all thinking men are in favour of it, and I trust that the dinvernment will take such steps as will enable these corps to have annual drills, so that we may again have a large volunteer force of which the country maty le justly proud.
Mr. OBRIEN. I am very happy to lie able to say that my experience, which is probably as long as that of most hon. members, differs very materially from that of the hon. gentleman who has just spoken, and I cannot agree with him in one or two statements he has made, especially when he lays down a proposition that the force as at present constituted has degenerated, or is in any other way inferior to what it was under the old system. Speaking for the portion of the force with which I am acquainted, I have no hesitation in saying that the active militia in the country never was in so good a condition as it is to-day, either as regards the quality of the men or the efficiency and standing of the officers. I quite admit that the present system of instruction is an expensive one; I quite admit it might be made of very much more general use for the same outlay; but at the same time it must be remembered, when we compare it with the system that existed to which the hon. gentleman has referred, that these schools of instruction were carried on by a line regiment, which set an example and atfiorded the most complete instruction. When the line regiments left this country we had for a short time the system of schools which then existed, before the establishment of the present system was secured, and when this system was inalngurated there was a very great falling off in the puality of the officers and in the value of the instruction given. I have no hesitation in saying, so far as my knowledge of the force goes, that the statement made with respect to the small proportion of qualitied officers is very far from being correct. I know in our district there is not a regiment in which there is not a very much larger proportion of qualitied otficers than is required. aml which does not contain within itself all the necessiny clements of instruction, both as regards discipline and drill. In the camps I have attembed there have not been those ahoses to which the hom. gentleman has called attention, and there has not heen that watste of time which he has mentioned. Such is mot my experience, and if these ahnses prevailed in other ilistricts, attention should he called to it, aml it should be corrected by the proper athorities. 1 almit there is a drawback with respect to the expense necessarily incurred by the ofticers who attend the present sohool of instruction, lont at the same tinac the practical results are exceedingly satisfactory, hecaluse, as I stated, we have a hetter, class of officers for the force to-day than, so far as my knowledge gres, we ever posiessed before. Under the ohl system. in which the lom. gentleman seems to see so much to commend, it is well known that a large nomber of young men went to those schools for the purpose of passing a portion of an idle winter, and olitaining the grant given, and they never had the slightest intention of entering the force or took the least interest in it and a more useless lot of men than were those who passed through those schools does not exist anywhere, so far as 1 know. No one now groes to the school of instruction unless he has a commission. We know we are going to olitain the full benetit for the service of the instruction given, for, as I have said, a man camnot iso there until he has olbtained a commission, and these men possess the necessary equipment to gualify them for the discharge of their duties. It was a stanting complaint, as every one is aware, uider our old system, that the equipment of the officers was exceedingly unsatisfactory. Of course a man may fight as well in his shirt sleeves as in a uniform-I am prepared to admit that; but at the same time it is desirable that officers who have to retain the respect and confidence of their men, should attend to these things which one might almost call the alecencies and amenities required in every other branch of life, and especially where the discipline of an army has to be maintained. Our officers now tome to theircampsin a condition very superior to that which was formerly the case, and in the best rural corps, at all events those with which I am acquainted, the officers have these qualifications, which, although not essential, are exceedingly desirable and without which the discipline and efficiency of the force cannot be maintained. There is one voint on which I heartily agree with the hon. gentleman, and that is the absolute necessity, for the lue efficiency of the force, of the annual drill, and that is an expenditure which will be popular in the country and be well supported in this Honst: If the fonvernment will ask Parliament to make the necessary grant for the purpose. there will he hardly a dissentient voice mased. A proof of the populatity of the force is this: take the worst comblactedregiment in (anadat. and let the Minister attempt to ent it down or do away with it. athe there will be such an ontery that he will he eompellen, as he has often been compellenl. (1) allow arathgements to prevail which. muler other circmmstances, womll not be allowed. That is the lest evirlence of the populatity of the force. Maremer. the expentiture necessary for the force passes directly from the pockets of the perple into the porkets of the men. That is, in my opinion, the ertatessential. It must ine remembered that the conpo of instruction shouhd beresarled and treated by the depatment, not as forming the nuclens of a stamling amy. but simply as shools of instruction. It mast he remembered that we have in this comary to regular trons, and any one who knows what the combition of the force watsat its first formation, especiatly in many of the rural corps. mast be perfectlywellaware that one of the things tolecomsiderenl was that many of the people hat never seen a soldier or hat any illeat as to how he should look. When the regular regiments were in this comatry we had always a type amd pattern set for our men to work up to. aml our men took the full henefit of it. When the regular tronse left. the pesition was rery altered, and in the schomb then estahlished we had moexample and pattern and rule of discipline, which was most essential to be learnel by all who go, throngh a conurse of instruction. When a mangeres to a sehool simply to learn drill his time his wasted, for he needs that genemal knowledge of military matters which is essential. and in these schomes of instuction these ablantages can be procured. without which it would mothe persible for the fore to maintain its discipline. M! own experience entirely differs from that of the hom. gentleman. I saly that sur ofticers sofar as I have knowlenge of them, are thomomgly etficient as regards drill ame discipline. ame if the hom. gentleman from North Victoria (Mr. Hushes) eomes to the camp at Niagama in the second military district, next June. I think he will very materially change his opinion as to, what the quality of the rural hattalions is: at any rate. in the western part of Ontario. I join with him most heartily in inpressing upon the: fonermment the great necessity of increasing the grant for the active force so as to enable the whole force to he drilled every year. That is the main thing that we have to consider now, and when that is accomplished we will tind many other things to which attention shonll be paid. Let us take one thing at a time, and I wonld recommend my friemlsto press that one thing upon the attention of the dowermment. The main thing now isthat we should have ammal drill, which. really considering the amonnt we spent at present. wonld be very little additional cost to the comitry. I contend that there is not a force in the whole world maintained at as cheap a rate as the active militia force of Canada. I saty that it is a force suited to the requirements and conditions of the comiry, and I say that in point of econoniy it leaves nothing to be desired. Twenty-five cents per head per annum of the whole population is t!es actual cost of our active force, including all the excrescences that are planted upon it, and counting the military college, which I look upon as of less value to the force in proportion to the expenditure than anything else. We really get no gexil from the college, never have Got any gron from it, amel fom present appeatanes we are not likely to derive any lenefit from it. That college should lae brought more in harmons with the needs of the force. It is an almimalle school, mo doult, anel if I hat a sons I womblemb him to it. hut it is not an institution which is of any partionlar henetit to the forte.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. It tatinsothions for the active militiat.

Mr. OlBRIEN. I do not know a dowen men in the active force at present who were eqlacated at the military college. I wish we conld get them. hut mafortmately we ammot. I have sugesested a means hy which the military collest might he: hronght into hamony with the ative forme. Ina I Was told that mothing eombl be fome hecallse it would interfere with the examinations. If that is the catse, then it is merely an elncational institution fror the benetit of the public. and if so, is , moghtant whe charged to the active militit. The seat thing for the dowerment to domow. is to give nan ammal drill, ani that accomplisherl. it will leand the way in the first phace to a great many redne. tions: in the expenditure which might then le permitted. It would relieve officers from at ereat deal of trouble athl expense. and it would erive to us what we really repuire: a force which. in twenty-form homs at any time. aceorlins th the intea of the hom. senteman. conld he avalable. Some hon. gentemen talk about the difticulty of getting out our force. How long didit take in iss.t, to pat a rmal lattalion in the tied : The hattalion I had the honour to command wat: lironght fom the extrenities of two large eame ies in tr hours, without any previons motice except the rumomr in the mewspapers. I ann very well satistied and pleased with the comelition of the force. I hatre the greatest prssible contidence in its efficiency, ami in the means be which it could be increased at very little east. I look upon the ecomomical side of it as a most important matter. becanse, of connse in this growing comatry with the enomons expenditure which is required to bee met in the shape of interest on delit and public improvements. We cammot afford to spent a very large sumb on a military force, but the comotry can afford to spend what it does now, and what is necessary to make our militia really and thoroughly efficient. To that print we should direct one attention at present. and that point is one which I would most earnestly press upon the Minister of Militia and upon the (iovermment of this comntry.

Mr. AMIOT. Mr. Speaker, another objection which I have to the military college at Kingston. is that it is really a school of emigration ami nothing else. Our best young men go there, get a thorongh edncation. lecome perfect civil or military engineers, and then immediately leave the country. It is not only a great expenise, but it is also a cuase of loss of population, and I think we should find some way else of utilizing the money expended on it. I will not follow the remarks of my colleagues who have spoken upon the question of camps, now of the necessity of the schools, but I want to draw the attention of the Minister to the fact that the schools have actually become an embarrassment to the militia. We camost get certificates for our young officers without their attent-ing the schools. and our best ofticers are those who have employment in commercial houses, banks amh sor on. and they camot leave that employment the mumher of days uecessary $t$, go to the -chome to get qualified. The comsergence is that those who deserve certificates, and who would whain certiticates from lmards of examiners, canarithtain them. and we aredeprived of theirservices. L.e the tin for my part I will not object, but I would like the regulations which prevent ourofficersoltaining certiticatesutherwise than by the schools, to herepealed. 1 have listened very attentively to what the hom. member from Nonth Victoria (Mr. Hughes) has sain. in his comparison of the old and new systems, ami I entirely agree with him that the old system was be far the more preferable. We ohtained as many officers ats we wanted mader the oh system, and thay were perfectly qualitied for the service. I Beg the hom. Minister to anend the regulations in such a way that lmarls of examiners be given us so as to qualify those of our new otheres who wish to join the force and are able to do it conveniently. I will give the Minister an example. When we went to the North. West we had a very regular service there for three months, anl the greater part of my ofticers and men who went there were perfectly qualified. After all. what is the main thing required for the service? It is that a man knows how torith and knows something of the internal connmy of the foree amb nothing else. It is not necessary that he shomhl know the names of every part of a sum, and every part of a ritte and a cartridge, anl so on. It is not necessary that he should know the sejentific names of ererything he touches in the armorys. but the great thing for a soblier is to he able to take a gon and shoot well, to know how to drill in company, battalion, or brigade, and to know exactly what to do in camp when he receives his onlers. I think that is all we require. The object of the militia force is to have a force realy to help, the eivil authorities when required. Ne want every facility given to our ofticers to receive certiticates when they have got sutficient know lealge for that, and I hope the hom. Minister will see the wisiom of this suggestion. In my own conp: I lave about 10 or 12 otheers waiting until they are enabled to be examined and get their certificates to permanently join the ?th Battalion. As I have already said, I do not olject to the schools, especially to the infantry schools, but I want military lowards of examiners to grant certificates to those who are ready to join the force and who camnot affiord tolose time to go to the schools. These schools are not open during the months of July and August. Those two months are generally the months during which the students at the unirersities might go and qualify themselves; but then the schools are closed. It appears as if the militia is created and maintained for these schools, and not the schools for the militia. Another most extraordinary thing is that a man may have obtained is certificate in 1863 or 1864 or 1865, and, if he has not joined the ranks for a certain number of years, his certificate is amulled. That does not help the militia. When at man has learned once how to handle his rife, how to form fours, and how to turn on his feet, he rememhers these things all his life; and if there should he two or three changes of words in the command, they are easily learned in half an hour's study.

Therefore Ido not see why the ohl certiticates should not remain soml. I may mention one case: that of a man who holds two first-class certificates, and who had the best motes ever given in the school: yet he camot join the force to-lay without renewing his certificate. I hope the Minister, who has a practical knowledge of the wants of the militia, will give his attention to this matter and help us.

Mr. DENLSON. I wish to endorse a great deal that has heen said hy the hom. member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes), particularly in reference to the ohd system. I adrocated the ohl system once or twice in this Honse, and I did so because I sall that the otticers of the Canalfan militia were not qualifying themselves as they ought to do. It is only necessaty for us, as pointed ont hy him. to look wer the list of ofticers to time that a large proportion of them have never taken the trouble to qualify, or for priate reasons have not leen able tor qualify. There is no coult that some of the hest officers in the force are the husiest men in civil life: and their time is sof fully ocempied that they camot put in a course in the schools just at the tine preserilieet for them. 1 understand that some of the schooh. arrange to take classes luring the summer months, while others do not. There is ao clonib that a great many more ofticers would ynalify if the clases were arranged to suit the officers rather than the: schools. The print raised hy the last speaker astothe chanceswhich these schonlshould give to youmgen to qualify is a strong one. If the opportmity were afforded to any Canalian who wishes. to ge to these schools, puiting on his cadet uniform and taking his course, he would atipuire. so far ats I cam see, the same knowledge as those officers who bow go through the schools, and at very mach less cost to himself, and I fancy at a great deal less cust to the comtry. The old system, under which men went in for two or three months. passed the examination and receiven theirson, was probably the cheapest system that could possibly be ahbpted. Conler the present system, the ofticers receire $\leqslant 1$ a day and take a three months course : that makes S! wh wh the comotry pays them. Comer the proposed change. officers going there could be supplien with the callet unifom, which l helieve costs tive or six dollats: they would hoard where they chomse. either with their own people or with some of their frients: they would put in six or seven hours drill a day, and at the end of three months they would receive their certificates, if up to stambard: and all it would cost the comentry would he sin) insteal of s! $\operatorname{si}$. There is no reason why the system adrocated by the hom. member. for North Vietoria (Mr. Hughes), which I have myself airocated in this House, should not be adopted again and grafted upon the present system. I do not say that the present schools shonh $\mathrm{ln}_{\mathrm{x}}$. done away with: I would be very sorry to see that ; but there is no reason why the one system should not he grafted on to the other. There is no reason why ofticers should not be allowed to put on their full dress and mess jackets and attend these schools for three months, and get their certificates; while others, who are not athle to spend so much time and money, should $h_{\text {we }}$ allowed to put on a callet uniform and attend the schools and put in their course. There is un reason why a certificate grantel in that way should not le equally good with the certificate given now.

If the two systems were adopted, the men would be drilling under the same officers and receiving the sime iustructions: the only difference would be that some would hoard at home, and others would sleep in the barracks. As I have pointed out lefore. a good many men in the comutry would lue very glad to give their sons a three months course in these schools: and even though they diil not immediately join the force. yet, if oceasion should redpaire their services would he arailable to the comtry. That, I consider, would le a great gain. The hom. member for Muskoka (Mr. (Obrien) has saicl that none of these men would go into the force. I am quite sure he is mistaken in that, because our experience of the old system was different. Many vouns men who went to those sehools acorquired a knowledge of and a taste for military service, and went into the force. 1 know districts where military cadets who graduated in those schools orgamized companies that would not otherwise have been organized. I am sure that other members of this House will testify to the stme effect. As to the remarks male ly the hon. memher for Bellechasse (Ar. Amyot) almout the difticulty of his otticers qualifying, it does appear to me that those otticers who accompanied him to the North. West and put in three months of active service there, with lots of drilling. ought to be ats well qualified for active ciuty in the fielid as men who attented one of the sclionls for three months. The knowlenge acquired in the schools is supposed to tit them for service: and if those men drilled three months in the field, doing the active duties required of them in our sersice, surely they ought to be as well gualified at the end of that time ats men who went through the schools and han a theoretical knowledge rather than a practical one. Now, the hon. member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) asks whether we are to have a stamling army or not? For my part, I an opposed to a stainling army, for this reason, that all history tells us that where the perple of a country do the fighting they are saccessful, but where a standing amy is established, and perhaps, after that mercenary troops are engaged, there will not he the same alvintage or success as where people tight for their own homes and firesides. Therefore, I think it should be the policy of Canala to encourage our people to drill, and in every way possible to inspire them with a military spirit: and then if danger arises they will lee able to defend their homes and tiresides. Before I sit down I wish to say a word with reference to the drilling of the militia. Ever since I have been in this Honse, session after session, I have pressed on the attention of the dovernment until $I$ am tirel of doing it, the desirability of drilling all the militia of Canada, and doing it every year. At present but a portion of them are drilled. It is really not fair-play to the majority of the rural battalions to put them on a par with the city battalions in one respect, and then to throw them in the shade by providing for them only biennial drills. The city battalions have adrantages the rural battalions have not. They have their drill sheds, they are compact, they can drill at night without any great cost, while the rural battalions have not that opportunity, the men being scattered, and therefore reguire, if anything, their annual drill much more than do the city battalions. I would like to press upon the Government again the necessity and desirability of having all the militia of Camada drilled this vear. It will not cost a large sum. I am sure that the economical Minister we have at our heal now will do it without making it a hurden on the country, and I would again press upon the dovermment the desirability of drilling all the men.

Mr. Bowelid. There am be no pexsible objection tolaying lefore the House the information sought for in this resolution. I frankly confess that I am fully in aceord with a drom many of the suggestions mate ley the mover of this motion. and ly the hon member for Toronto (Mr. Denison). There may le reasons, and those of a monetary character, which may prevent garrying out to the fullest extent the suggestions they have made with reference to drilling the whole inilitia, but that there should be some system alopted by which otticers ox cupying the position such as the otticers of the !th Battaliom, referred to by the Lon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Amyot), shoulal be enabled to obtain their certiticates without leaving the ir homes and attembing the schools for two on three momths, I have no doubt : and it shall be my aim if 1 an spared to preside over this department for any length of time to devise some economical system by which officers in the difterent enips of the Dominion may obtain certinates inatifying them for permament appointments on the staff: I am also in accord, to a certain extent, with the remarks of the hon. member for North Victoria (Nl. Hughes) on what he terms the old system. Prohably I am prejudiced somewhat, hecanse in my more active days in connection with the force that system prevailet, and I should searcely like to say that the officers of that day are not pualified to serve umber the gallant colonel. who spike a few monemts ats. from Muskoka (Mir. OBrien). I recognize this fatc. however, while not agrecing with the hon. member for North Victoria in the democratie sentiments he has uttered, at least not to the full extent, that in all military organizations there must be something like discipline : and that unles: there is discipline and that most rigidly enforcel. I do not believe any force can he effective. particularly when called unin to perform the duties for which they have bamberd themselves together. In the hom. gentleman's self is an illustration of the remarks he made, that if the prisate knows more than the officer the officer should "get out " and the private take his place. I fully recognize the fact that the hon. gentleman, when I had the pleasure of drilling him some quarter of a century ago. gave evidence of the qualities of a good soldier who would ultimately rise to the top of the ladder, and who will not. whenever his services may le reguirel, he fommi wanting either in courage, skill or intellect. or in the performance of his duties. At that time 1 was considered the master, but just now the private is the master of the Minister of Militia, and it is for him and those who support him in this House, if they can control the majority. to dictate what shall be done, not only by the head of the Government, but by the head of the department. However, I think a moment's reflection will show my hon. friend that, as long as the present system prevails, the discipline under present regilations must be continued. I do not know, however, that it should be incumbent upon every officer to furnish a uniform in accordance with the rank he holds, I mean while he is at the school. That entails upon him an expense which. I think, hy some regulation. might be dispensed with. The sugsestion made liy the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Denison). that at these schools of instruction we should revert to a certain extent to the old system. by having one common uniform during drill. might he adopted. and thus avoil the difficulties which have presented themselves to many of the ofticers. I was rather surprisel to hear the remarks made be the hom. member for North Victoria with reference to the drill performed at the camp. 1 may, hovever, say that I am in aceord with him in the riew he has expressed that there is no particular object or necessity for asking the young men, particularly those from the cural sections, to appear early in the moming in orrler to obtain what might be termed healthful exercises in extension drill : but how he ever is to get his men mader comtron or teach them their drill properly without leneinning with what is termed splual drill, is something 1 have not ret leamed. Perhaps my hom. friend may lee able to give mea practical hint which may ine of benetit in the future. I shall be glad tio arail myself of any suggestions from those who have had practical experience in comparing volumter corps. I have long heen of minion, whaterer may be satid of city lattalions. that the battations compused of farmers soms. after a cery few weeks drill in camp or in the drill shed at home. constitute the lest prossible force we can hare. The suggestions which have leen thrown out. iand which I will mot clahmate just mow. Shall have my best attention, anl imything I can dow to make the force mone effective. consistent with the means at the disposal of the department amd with the revenue of the conntry, amom. gentlemen may rest assured will le done. All it requires is money to drill the whole force, and if Parliament and the Finance Minister can see their way clear to ask Parliament which is already asked for, $$ 2 \pi 5,(000)$, we shomb the enabled to plate the whole force uniler camp during the present year. Whether the revemue of the conntry would justify that expenditure I an: not at this moment prepared to sily. I will say. however, before sitting down, that I shall devote some attention to the management, and not only the management, hut the system which prevails at present in the military sehowls, and also in connection with the staff comnected with the whole force, and if 1 ean see my way to suggest to my colleagues any means by which efticiency can tre maintained and expenditure reduced, it shall be my duty to do so.

Mr. HUGHES. In reply to some remarks which have leen male, it affords me a great deal of pleasure to learn that gentlemen of the experience athl standing of the member for Toronto (Atr. Denison), and the Minister of Militia, and the member for Bellechasse (Mr. Amyot) expressel views which are nearly in accord with my own. I said I did not desire the abolition of the permaient corps, but a reduction of its numbers to a minimum anl? the employment of young men of our force instead of those who are simply on the permanent list, with a view to getting a living out of the country. The hon. nember fo: Muskokia (Mr. (Briea) said we formerly had che line regiments to model ourselves upon. I think our experience of the line regiments is that, while they are well drilled. I do not know that the are in all respects to be taken as moneles, and 1 would rather take our own wohnteers into the field than any line regiment that l have ever seen. and I have had the honour and pleasure of seeing and drilling with several of them. I thank the member for Muskoka (Mr. OBrien) for his kimd invitation to me to attend the Niagara camp, but. while I have no doubt the colmaters there are in every respect quite capable, still I believe that the conps to which I hatre the homour to lelong is not second to any corps that is drilled at Niagara. We have sent more men to the Wimbledon teams than any ruat corps in the Dominion of Canala, and I lowk in vain for one man who has heen sent from the comp which the hom. member for Muskokia commands. In reference to the question of discipline to which the hom. the Minister of Militiat has referred, he knows as well as ito that there are two kinds of discipline, the silken glowe discipline and the rusty iron discipline. An ofticer in a city (onps told me that some of those otticers who have recently passed the schools, came to him and asked him: - What is the punishment for men who are inattentive in the ranks?" The whole of that system seems to be of that kind. My system would be just asstrict in regard to disciplime, but more intellectnal. and not have so much of the drill serfeant or the martinet. The hon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Amyot) says that his corps was in the Soth-West for thre months. Well, at the rate of $1 \underline{E}$ days drill every year. it would take an ordinary battalion eight years to equal the three monthe actual drill which that corps had in the North. West. I think we should drop those nomessentials such as extension motions, amdleal with what is essential, anl that is to oltain a rough and realy efficient volunteer corps at a moments: notice.

ENPERINENTAI FARMS

Mr. FREMONT (Tramslation) moved for:

Statement showing: 1. The number and location of the sereral cxperimental farms: 3 . The amounts expended on each of them since the dute if its establisi:ment: 3 . The name of each and erery empiove of euth farm, and a statement of the salary and of any other emoluments received from the Guvernment by each of them.
He satal: Mr. Speaker, the object 1 have in offering the motion which is now in your hands is to calliche attention of this honomahle House to what I believe to be an injustice towands that portion of the population of Camala which speaks the French language. The end proposed by the Parliament of Camada when the creation of experimental farms was deci iod upon, was to further the interests of agriculture in the whole Dominion of Canada, without any diserimination of race. I regret to have to say, Mr. Speaker, that if I am not mistaken in the information which I have, this end has not been attained. No experimental farm has been established in that part of the comutry where French is spoken. I know that the farm which was established for the Province of Ontario, a few miles from here, was also intended for the Province of Quelec, but 1 must say that as far as the latter province, or the French-speaking portion of the population, is concerned, the institution does not fultil the whi....t of its eroitiont. The superion officers of this farm ate all of Faglish orioin: hut there would not he very muth hamen in this if these otiders spoke French. However, they know Finslish only, and eamot give the French fammers the infomation repuired by then: when applien to. Then I mast saty that from twa stanlprints the population hats heen minastly treated liy the Department of Agriculture in regard to this. First. as to pattomage, all the superion ofticers, I helieve, or at heast the great majority of them, are persons of Finglish arigin, who ilw not know the French latounge. They consembenty camont rember the French population the services that it has a right to expeet from them. Sow, these emplones are all instadled. at linge const to the comutry. like litele minees. like lientenath soverns

Mr. BE: HARI). Like prathas.
Mr. FREMONT, and do not at all render the services exprected from thell. The result is that When French-speating firmers apply to them, the answer hats giten lons tu he waited fors. If my infomation is eorrect, there is not even a Frenchi--peakine secretary on the Otawa Fxperimental Fian: so that the French eorrespondence is put asille, and only receives any attention when the Finglish corresponlence is disposed of. In the seocond place. When comes the question of distriloming the docmaents which are printed. the English reports are published tirst and only several months later are the French reports prepared and distributed to the pulblic. Consequently, from all prints of view. is the Frem-h-speakine population eomparison with that portion of the pepulation which speaks the Euglish language. When samples are distrilnted hy the experimental firm, the arculars which accompany them are invarially in the Finglish lamgange, so that in that also is the French peppulation discriminated against. It is with a view of rrawing the attention of the fiovermment to these facts, that I offer the present motion. I hope therefore, Mr. Speaker. ihat the return which will he put before the Honse, will give us the fullest infommation, so that we may know exactly the state of things in this matter.

Sir JOHE THOMPSON. There is mo objection tw bringing down all the papers asked for by the hom. gentleman. I regret that the Minister of Agriculture is not present to reply more fully to the remarks mate hy the hon. member with respect to the deticiency to which the hom. gentleman has referred as to the use of the Prench language and the represemation of the nationality for which he speaks on the statf of these farms. I ann sure that : tis is a defect which will hefore long find a remaly. It is perfectly evident that the reports in regarl to samples sent out from these farms should be sent out in the language understoul hy the people to whom they are ahlressed.

Mr. LANDFRKIN moved for:

Return showing the cost of the revision of the votere' list inthe years 1886, 1884 and 1891, in each electoral division, and the total cost of the three revisions throughout the Dominion.
He sail : I have thonght it was desirable to ask for this information, that it would be of some value to the members to kinw the total cost of the Eleco tomal Fianchise Aet since its int roluction.

TRADE WITH NEWHOLNDHAND.

Mr. D.AVIEN (I'. A.I.) moserl for:

Qupies of all proelamations, reporte to or Ordars in Comm" eil. corresinudence or other dormments under which the mroducts of Canada and Newfomiland have been exchangeid free of luty since the sear lss.j.
He satid: My oljeject in moving this is that. in low ing over the matter, I was mathe to risconer the manner in which Sewfomdland products have heron almitted into the Dominion. I find in the ("ustoms Act of ISRt this provision:
"Fish and other pronuets of the fisheries shatl hee thargeable with. and there shall lee eallected therem. the rates of duty set forth and described in schedule t! t. this Act and set opmsite to each of them respectivel. : provided, that the whole or part of the duties imposed hy this section may be remitted as respects either the United states or the liliand of Newfundand, or hoth, upon proclamation of the dovernor in Council, which may be issuad whenever it appears tor his satisfaction that the cinsernments of the thited States and the lisind of Newtomedland, or either of them, have made ehames in their tariff: of dutics imposed upen artioles imported from Camala, in reduction or repeal of the duties in firree in the said cromtries respectively:"
I was unalle, after searching in the riceatf: and 1 thought I male a pretty exhanstive search-..-or in the Orders in Comucil which have leen publishoral and collected in book form, to tind any proclamattion, or any Order in ('mucil mate shberpuently io the passage of this law, which authorizel the im. portation of these pronluets into (:anmat withomt duty. The law is clear and distinct, so far ats it gres. The duty is to bee extcterl. the duty is specifien, aml the proviso sets out clearly the ciremmstances muler which the duties can lee remitted. My olject, therefore, is to oltatin copies of these proclamations, or rejurts, or (brier in (oumeils, or other authorities muler this statute, or maler any other statute, if there is any other one. or any othire: orrer upon which the (ustomsonficers permit these: grools to be introduced.

Mr. MLLI.N (Bothwell). I think the motion is: of sutficient consergence to have leen inswered hy some hom. member on the Treasury henches. My hon. friend hats called the attention of the Homse to the fact that there is a certain provision of the Customs Act which requires a cluty to be imposenl on tish imported from Newfomidlanl. He hats pointed out the provisions of that Act, and upon what comlitions those duties were to lee removed, and he has called the attention of the (invermatent to the fact that those comlitions so far have not been complied with, and yet the duty has not heen collected. If the fioverninent feel that larliancont hats made a mistake in imposing those cluties. the (iovernment should have come down and opposeal their repeal. The duty of the Alministrition is: not to commit breaches of the law and disregand the law, hat to administer it; and that has not been done. I suppose that if a Minister hats taken it upon himself to give instructions that the cluty shall not the collected, and in consequence of his order officers of the department have so acted, the hon. gentleman has made himself liable for the loss the comatry has sustained in conseruence of the failure to collect the cluties. It ippears to me thatit is important that the Minister of ('ustoms, or the Minister who has taken action in this matter and given instruction that those duties should not be eollected. but that the law should he disregarded, should offer some explanation to the Homse, and some indication or justification of the course which has heen taken.

Sir JOHE THOMPSON. I domot know what question the hom. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) thought should he answered ; hut if it was the point on which the hon. member for Queen's (Mr. bavies) had some doulat, as to where the proclat mation or Grder in Conncil could he fomm, I can only saty that I am under the impression that there is none. If there is such, of cenurse it will he bronght down in answer to the motion. I am very shat indeed to timd that an hon. gentleman, vecupring so prominent a position ats does the hom. gentleman. concurs with us in the view we took of onir ohligation to collect the duty on Newfomilanil fish, an ohligation which our friends in Newfommlind have never leen ahle to appreciate, and they even say it was wantonly imposed for the purpose of injuring their trade.

Mr. MIL.Ls (Bothwell. The daties hate not been collecterl.

Sir JoHN THOMPSON. I am muler the impression they have been.

Mr. MHLN (Bothwell). Although the law inposes the duties, the Department of Customs has apparently given instructions in conserquence of which they have not heen collecterl.

Sir IOHS THOMPSON. Is the hom. gentleman maler the impression that they have never heen enillecten:

Mr. Mllid (bethwell). Ves.
sir 10 HN THONPSON. I think the hom. gen. teman is mistaken.

Mr. NAVIFS (P.F.I.) If the Minister of Justice will turn to the Trate and Niavigation Returns. page 3n:3, he will tind: "Free goonls-the fisheries. Epecial from Newfomullame, tish, cod, halibut, herring. athl all the articles ennmerated." These we contered as free gomes and uo duty charged. The duties may not have heen imposed on the gromme of the ilissatisfaction of the people of Newfoumbliand, hut that is not the point taken ly us. The print taken ly us is that in lis.i the diovernment asked l'arliament to atssent to the imposition of eertain cluties on Newfoumlland prorlucts. Many hom. members thought the Government's policy was wrong, that they were alopting an erroneons course, that they were going hackward. The (iovernment persisterl, ani they carrien their intentions intolaw. Their proprosition lecaune the law of the lam. There was no otticial, nor any person, no matter how high in the Government employ, who has authority to put the law in refiance. It was a law enacted hy l'aliament at the request of the Government themselves, and special powers were taken in the Act that these duties might be remitted umler certain circumstances. These circmanstances have never oceurred. But it is evident that some person has given instructions for the almission of these gools iluty free. I cian understand that for the future Parliament need not go through the farce of passing a law. After this Act was passed in 1885, it was re-enacted in 18.W). Parliament was not then informed that these grools were being surreptitionsly impoited contrary to latw and without a proclamation having leen issued. Pialiament wiss not then informed that the fiovernment hat chosen to werride the litw and usury the power which l'arliament alone possesses, and althongh the lealer of the iovermment attempts to pass this over as an unimportant matter hecause the Newfomilamel people complained of the imposition of the lluty, I think it is a very serions matter. If the dioremment can set this latw at refiance, they can set aside any other law. I catm understand their coming toldarliament and saying : We mate a mistake. we never shomblate passed this Aet. aml we mow desire folare it repeatled: and no donht l'alliament wond have repeated it. While the lith stames an the statutelrok. to tell me it ann le: violated by: mandivilual member of the liovermment. in hey an officer of any elepartment, and that he has the right to ahmit gonds comtrary the the lat. is to make a most extramalinary proposition. I askerl a grastion the other day as to the reimposition of these duties, of rather ats to whether the law wat wow heing carried out, and further, as to whether a proclamation had beem issued, and I was imformed that mosuch proclamation had heen issued. and the present Minister kindly sent to me a circulat issiled by the Customs bepratment giving. by orler of the Assistant (ommissioner, lirections to the (:ustoms ofticers on! and after Ond J)ecember last to exatet these cluties. So it is a matter of departmental regulation. The Customs Depart ment has taken power to thus act contrany to the law. No report wats ever made to ('omeil advising the issue of a proclanation acoromine to the statute, nom was any such proclamation issuel. If this call be clone with regarl to Newfommellanl, it call alsa be done as regards the United Niates amd England, and the authority of Parliament san he set at defiance. I have discharged my duty in bringing this matter to the attentions of the House, and I shall $\mathrm{l}_{\mathrm{c}}$ : somewhat surprised if Par. liament does not express itself pretty forealjy in regarl to this sulbject.

Mr. LAURIFR. It is evident that the latw has been disregatided. The foremment really stand in the position of confessed simmers, I do not know Whether they are penitent simers: hint evidently they acknowledge hy their silence that the charse manle hymy hon. friend is true, that the law hass been violated. My hon. friend who is now Minister of Militia, and who was at one time Minister of Customs, has the reputation of leing a rery good ath ministrator, and eren something hetter than at gonl alministrator, of being a severeone, and a Minister Who stoon firmly by the letter of the law. But in regard to this matter it appears that the department was run by some ome else than himself. The law was disregareled. Where is the authority that has heen exercisel! It is evilent that the hiaty has not been collected on fish coming from Newfoundland. Where is the authority? It is satil there is no anthority for the action of the lepartment. Then the Ninister of Customs, through his officers, has ignored the law in not enforcing the cluties and provisions of the Act. If that is so, there has certainly heen a gross dereliction of rluty on the part of the Minister who presides orer the departinent, and in former timesI do not know how it hats been in regard to the alministration of his present department--the
hom. sentleman has heen rery jealous of the grome name of his administration amd has never allowed charges to be made against him without at once rising, if he had any deience to offer. On the present oxeaxion he hats mot one word to say, and he herels acknowledges that the charge made by my hon. friend is a true one, and therefore we have mothing $t$ o do, if the hom. gentleman declines to speak on the suliject. but to enforce the penalty to which he has mate himself liahle, and sue him in a court of law in order to collect from him the duties which he has neglecteri to collect from the tishermen.

Mr. ! !ow ELLL. I will beat you on the execution.
Mr. I.ACPIER. I think not. If the hom. genthemam has failed to collect these duties, he will be anemable to the courts of law, and since he has failed to find his tongue on the present occasion, he must find it somewhere else.

Mr. BoWELLL. Surely the hom. gentleman will not ask me to discuss a yuestion of so great import ance without having the papers before ne.

Mr. MULock. When the motion was male, I understome the leader of the Covermment to question the action of the hom. member for Queen's (Mr. Davies), that there had heen no remission of daties. Is he satistied now there has been at remission of duties?
sir . IOHN THOMPSON. I never questioned that at all. I underst:ond the hon. gentleman denied that any duties had ever heen collecten.

Mr. MULOCK. I understool the gravamen of the charge was that there hal heen remissions of duties for a number of years without authority of law. That I understood to be the point made by the hon. member for Queens.

Mr. DAVIE (P.E.I.) The blue-lwoks show it.
Mr. MCLOCK. What answer hat the (iovernment to make to this charge: It is certamly a matter of very great concerin. and it is due the Honse and the comatry that the fovernment shonh offer an explanation. If they are not able to do so to day, the delate may lie aljourned for an explanation to be given at a subsequent sitting. I am not prepared to discuss this question one way or the other until the dovernment offer an explanation. It is stated that for some reason, maknown to the country, and illegal in itself, the covernment removel duties which were by law collectable. Has the dovemment the power to enfore or not enforce the Customs Act at its will? We are now face to face with the whole guestion of responsible govermment. Parliament passes an Act which says that certain taxes shatl be levied, and that certain funds shall belong to the people of Canada, anl the lioverument. we are told, has chosen to ignore this Act of Parliament and to over-ride the rights of the people. I do not say whether such has occurred or not, but the charge is made and the Govermment icquiesces in that charge by their silence, and offer no explanation. We are face to face, therefore, with a grave question. Has Parliament ceased to enjoy its rights? The ex-Minister of Customs does not consider it worthy of an explanation. He smiles at the suggestion that it is a grave guestion. Well, if so, certainly the parliamentary institutions of Canada are broken down. There is an entire failure of re: sponsible govermment if the foremment can canse its officers to disregar l the law which has been passed by Parliament, and which has received the sanction of the two Houses and of His Excellency, the representative of Her Majesty. If the facts are as allegen here, I think that the discussion should be adjourned intil the qiovernment is prepared to offer an explanation to the House. Nothing less than that will satisfy the requirements of the case, and nothing else than that ought to be expected. The diovermment ought not, for one morment, to allow a grave question like this to pass in silence without offering such explanations as they can in regard to it. I hope they will not continue to treat the matter in this cavalier-like style, but that they will treat the House with proper respect, and offer such explanations as the circumstances of the case admit of.

Mr. Laterfer.

Sir RICHARI) (ARTWRI:HT. Mr. Speaker, I must saty that I agree with my hon. friend beside me, that if the (iovernment have no explamation to offer to the serions statement made by the member for Queen's, P' E. I. (Mr. Davies) it is a matter. which deserves a little consideration at our hands. As far as I mulerstand the case it is this: Parliament passes an Act by which certain duties are regulated: I believe, also. that power is given to the (iovermment by issuing a proclamation to suspend the operation of this Act, but I understand that that proclamation was never issmed. I umlerstand that no steps were taken to suspend the operation of the Act, hut that nevertheless for a period of four or fice years no attention was paid to the Act of Parliament which this House passed. Well, Sir, all I can say, if they did do that, is, that they have in the first place wholly and entirely neglected their duty, and they hare, in the secomi plate. committed a very grave hreach of the law, ats no doubt the Minister of Jastice perfectly knows. Even if it he an aceidental or careless cmission, it was a rery grave omission to be committed liy the officers of the liovermment, for which they onght to le helh reepmailite.

Motion agreed to.

ANNAPOLIS ANI) ATLANTIC: RAHLWAY COMPAN:.

Mr. FORBES moved for :

Copies of all petitions, correspondence letters. tolegrams and memoranda received since 1887, asking for or referring to the subsidizing of the Annapolis and Atlantic Railway Company or a line of railway from Liverpool and Shelburne to Annapolis, passing through Caledonia.
He said : In making this motion, I wish to take advantage of the opportunity to press upon the Govermment the necessity of considering this railroad and of completing the further subsidizing of the line, by granting a subsidy to cover the balance of the line. The road is about 10.5 miles in length and has heen subsidized for $\overline{7}$ miles, so that there is a subsidy for about 30 miles remaining clue. The construction of this road has been agitated for some years. In 1887, large numbers of petitions were presented to this House asking for a sulsidy in aid of this line, and a charter was granted ly this Parliament and by the Provincial Legislature of Nova scotia, and under the latter charter on the application of the company a sulssidy has there been granted. The company are now tesirons of having a subsidy granted by this fiovermment necessary for the completion of this line, in order that they may approach the Nova Scotia (iovemment and ask that the local subsidy shall be utilizen. They are entitled to the local subsidy as som as they are ahle to show their ability to construct the line, either with or without the assistance of the Dominion (iovernment. This railway will pass from the towns of Shelhurne and Liverpool down to Caleconia and thence to Annapolis. It passes through the finest territory in these connties, right through timber limits of hard and soft woods and along the very lest water systems in these counties. It is proposen that capitalists will build upom the watersheds and upon the streams frwing from the lake. industries of a considerable extent if they had the means of getting their prolucts to the nearest marlet or to the seaboard. The timber limits along the line are of considerable extent, and the mines in the vicinity are being opened up. The County of Gueen's stanuls to-ray second to one only in the Province of Sora scotia for the output of gold. and the supplies necessary for the mines will form a considerable tratice over that line. I kiow that these matters have been pressed hefore this upon the attention of the fovernment, and in 18.01 the late Minister of Railways (Nir John Macalonald) hoonght down a series of resolutions to sulnsidize railwiys, amongst which was the following:-- "For miles of the railway from Shelhurne, in the Comity of Shellurne and from Liverpol. in the County of Queen's, to Amanolis, in the Province of Xova Scotia. to be so contracted for as to secure the construction to buth Shelburne and Liverpool, a subsidy not exceeding 33.201 per mile, nor exceeding in the whole 3240,1 ma)."

When the motion came up later on. the then hom. member for Yarmonth (Mr. Lovitt) referred to the fact that this was only for a subsidy of 7.5 miles, and the present Ninister of Iustice replied to him as follows: -
"This is designed to give them railway communication with Annapolis. and in that w:1 ${ }^{\text {t }}$ they can reach Liverpool. in the County of Queen's. which has a very fiair harbour. Shelburne, which has a magnificent harbour, and Anmapolis. from which stemmers ply to the United States and to the anliacent Prevince of New Brunswick. I know that the western part of Shelburne naturally desires railway connection, not in this direction, but in the direction of Farmouth, but that will be a matter for consideration hereafter. I know it is important to that part of the county which trades with Farmouth, and sends its exports there, but, while that is so, it cannot be expected that one line can accommodate the whole of Shelburne County. nor is that aimed at. The county will receive comection with the general rail way system of the province by the branch which it is intended to extend frou Calediania to the harbour of Shelburne."

Mr. Blake, who was then in the House, said :

"I have no doubt that that portion of Nova Scotia to which this resolution refers, in common with certain other portions which have received assistance at various late sessions, has been very much neglected, and its progress retarded for the want of railway communication. I think it is dceply to be regretted in the interest of the whole Province of Nova Scotia that what I must call the profligate railway expenditure which has taken place in other parts of that province should have resulted in a failure to meet the real wants of the province."
Now, there is no doult that all parties, irrespective of politics. are pledged to the granting of this subsidy to the whole line to Anuapolis, and I desire to impress upon the Govermment the absolute necessity there is for their at once taking the matter in hand. As the old subsidy is about to expire some time during the coning summer, probably when this House has risen, I trust thiat the Government will not only revive it, hit that they will grant a new subsidy for the balance of the roal. Further, I may remark that the present Govermment has been pledged to this suhsily. The hon. Minister of dustice, speaking at Liverpool, in the (ounty of Queen's, on Ixth Felnuary, 1s! 1 , just previous to the last election. mate what the people of the county consider to he a detinite promise, as quoted by the organ of the party in that county, as follows:-
"Sir John Thompson then sooke for over an hour, and claimed the attention of his andience by the earnest manner in which lie set froth the views of the Government on the reciprocity qu'stion, the fisheries and railway matters in Queen s-as to which latter subject he clearly explained why the subsidy for the whole length of the line was not included in last year's Estimates. Two things he certainly made plain to every matn present : list. That the Dominion Govermment had selected the line for construction. vi\%.. :hat from liverpool to Amapelis, and from shelbume to Amapolis-notwithstanding the influence hrourht to hear umon the Government in favour of the Midhand scheme : and End, That the Government granted sif(0), (1) 0 towards the constraction of this line and that the halance of subsidy required would hare been roted at this winter session had not larliament been dissolved.
The other orgati of the party in the county took this portion of the speech ats a positive and distinct promise, hy remarking:
"Now, if the bominion dosermment will fulfilits pledges and grant the babance of subsidy this gession weare certain to get the roid. as it is understood that Mr. Herver will at once commence uperations.
Now, I am not groing tosay that this promise. matle: previous to the elections. was for the purpose of influencing the electors, hecanse I have alwaysalvised the people to accept it as a detinite promise from the (iovermment : and inasmach as the people at cepted it as the policy of the diovermment on that question and felt that they were entitled to the subsidy as a matter of right, they were not led away by any insidious intluences such as might have heen expected irom these remarks. Haul the whole sul,sidy been stanter at that time I believe the line: wrobll, to-ilay, be in operation. as the condition of the finamial markets at the time was such that if the company were able to show their strength. the necessary capital could hate been raised. However, I desire to impress on the fiovermment the alsolute necessity of granting this snlsidy during the present session. I ann informeil by one of the corponators who is now present in the city, that he is negotiating with capitalists who are realy to put money into the enterprise for the surveys and all the expenses preliminary to the more costly work of construction. The Commties of Shelhurne. Annapolis and Queen's are, 1 am proul to say: deserving of the lest consideration of the diovernment of Canala: and on this occasion it would ill-hecome me not to press, with every lever which I possilly cian use, for the granting of this subsidy. If this railway is built, Shellome and Queenis on one side will be placel in communication with Annapolis, from which their prolucts can find their way to the markets of the United Ntates, and from the other side we shall have communication with the othermarkets of the world: and we will look to the Govermment to see that steamers will call at the different ports in order that the products of those counties shall find their way to the most desirable markets.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. As the hon. member has referred to what he supposed to be a promise of mine prior to the general elections of 1891 , I may just say a word or two in explanation. I did not hear or real, matil the hon. gentleman read it in his place, the statement which I was supposed to have manle at Liverpool, amd which he says is published in our organs in the comity. 1 amm not aware at this moment what papers he refers to.

Mr. FORBES. The Liverpool Times.

Sir JOHS THOMPNON. I have seen statements which were supposed to represent what I sitid on that occasion published elsewhere, which I certainly did not recognize as an attempt at at trathful record of what I said. I had the pleasure of anddressing a mumber of the hon. gentlemans constituents, with my colleague the Vinister of Darine and Fisheries: and in the very courteons reception which persons who address assemblages in that comnty always :eceive, I had the honour of heing presented, alongside of my colleague, with an antchess from some of the inhalitants of Liverpool, in Which the necessity of the ralway was very prominently referred to. In my reply I touched on the railway question, only for the purpose of assuring the people of that county that, situaterl as I was then, $l$ was not in a position to make them anly promise with regarl to the railway at all. I preceded my olservations With that very distinct statement. and I called attention to the fact that we were there on the eve of a general election, and that nothing would be hailed with greater pleasure by the hon. gentlemans supporters than the opportunity to make a statement to the effect that I was enleavouring, for the purposes of the electoral campaign, to holi ont a promise of that kind to the clectors of the connts, which I was visiting solely in comnection with the lusiness of the election. But I proceeded to call attention to the fact that it was unneces. sary for me to make any statement of my position or vieus on the question, as they would find them expressed in the Hensinw of the previous session. I then repeated from memory as closely as I conki what had taken place in this Honse, and what the hon. gentleman has read this aftemoon, namely, the olservations which I hat made cluring the precerling session. I then went on to state that in all probsibility a grant would have been made for the remainder of the line if a session had taken place insteal of a dissolution, amd there I let the matter rest, going on to make some general remarks on the policy of the diovermment and that of the Opposition on railway guestions. There is uo gromid for saying that I went to Jiverpool to make a promise, for in point of fact I made none. The hon. gentleman is right in stating, to the extent that Hanscorl supports him, that the diovermment were pleilged to give a subsidy for the remainder of the line to Annapolis. That is to say, we indicated to this House clearly, in bringing clown the subsidy for the line from Shelburne and Liverpool in the direction of Ammapolis, that our intention was not to stop there, hut to reach its terminal point on the Bay of Fundy, which is Annapolis. The hon. gentieman has informed the House that the subsidy is alrout expiring, and it will be a matter for consideration whether a renewal of that subsilly can le granted. The hon. gentleman is of opinion that if the whole sulosidy had been granted, in the session of 1890 ), the road by this time would have been under construction. In that respect, he has been misinformed, or I have been. I have been very muchdisippointed at the abs.
solute want of any attempt at progress on the part of the company which we expected would take up anl proceed with the construction of this roan : aml the information has reacherl me that the excuse put forward for the delay is not that we did not give the subsidy to carry the road all the way to Ammapolis, but the excmise is that we had inchinded the Queen's portion of the road and therehy hampered the operations of the company hy insisting upon the construction to Liverpool when, aceording to the opinion of those commected with the enterprise, the success of the enterprise would not be at all promoted his going there. That is nut the view I entertaneil, lut it is the view put forward hy the company as a reason why they were not able to go on with the enterpise.

THIRI) READIN:

Bill (No. (i) to amemel the (amada Temperame: Amendment Act of Issi. - (Mr. Flint.)

House resumed alljourned debate on motion of Mr. Me.Mullen for:

Return giving the names and addresses of all partices employed by the dovernment, on or in ermection with Government railways in the Dominion, stating the nature of work engaged in, the salary paid per month or year. and the gross amount paid each employe luring the year ending the 31 st December. A. D. 1891.

Mr. Mr.MULLEN. The hom. member for sonth Giey, some days ago, moved it resolution, of which I hat given notice. for a return of names and adrresses of parties employed by the fovermment in connection with (iovermment ralways. My reason for moving that resolution when 1 dill was possilly to reach the important expenditure comected with the Intercolonial Railway. We know well that road has been rumning very serionsly in arrears. so far as the difference bet ween its earnings and its expenditure is concerned. We know that the year before last the loss wer working expenses was something like $\mathrm{S} 3: 0 \mathrm{r})$,(M) . Last year it was something over Sion), (OW), and cluring the present year we have hal intimations given to the House that the loss is about si(n), (NK) a month, orover, which will amount toat least amillion at theend of the year. Now that wehavethiscondition of things, it is umloubtedly the dnty of members of this House to enguire into the entire working and organization of the Intercolonial Railway: On looking over the Aulitor (ieneral's report of the amounts paid, I was rather struck with the enormous staff of officials we keep in comection with this line. My impression is it is high time that some change should be made. It would be better to make a present of this road to the Cirand Trumk Railway or Canalian Pacitic Railway, with the understanding that it shall the operated on scheduled rates not in excess of what is charged by either of those two lines at present, for the country is not only paying interest, over 8,0 , (n), un a year, on the amount of money expended on the road, hut $\$ 1,0)(1)$, (OM) besides as net loss on its working, making in all $\$ 3,000,(0) K)$ a year atctual loss. It will, therefore, lye arlmitted that we camot too soon seriously consider what we shonld do in the face of this enomons loss. Now, I see that the statf of ofticials employed in the heal otfice in Moncton in comection with the operation of the line were paid $\leqslant 121,979.28$ last year. This includes, of comise, those engagel at the station there, as well as those engaged on other portions of the line. I notice we have a general freight agent at $\$ 2,4(\mathrm{~m})$ a year, a general passenger agent at $\$ 2.4(K)$ a year, an eastern passenger agent at $\$ 1,8(x)$ a year. These are four passenger agents in commection with a road that is losing $\$ 1 .(O X O),(M W)$ a yeir. Then take the stomage department. We are paying a man to take care of the stores lought for the ase of the line $\$ 1,9(0)$ a year--simply for receiving the stores and delivering them its repuired. Then we have no less than four travelling auditors who are receiving very large salaries annally. Then we have on the whole line 17.0 stations. Taking the number of men who have loen paid during the year as employes, including station masters, haggage agents and roal men, we have an aterage of eleven and one-fifth men, or $1.99 . \pi$ men altugether. We have paid for advertising sio.in6, iund for printing during the summer of last year $84.5,429.3 \mathrm{~s}$. Looking into some of the items for alvertising. 1 notice we have paid the Monctom Times si,04., We have paid in Montreal for advertising the schedule time of the running trains and other matter, although Montreal is it point at which the rould dees not tonch, and which it dhes not reach within (0) or lin) miles, $\$ 2,017$. (in). In Quelee we have paid si,5efi.91, and in st. John s2.e:s. .5 . The Hamilton Sprefator, a sheet pullisheel at the top of Lake Ontario, got S 33 3 . The entire expenditure in connection with the road has been $83,640,341.94$ and the receipts $\$ 2,974,395.38$, leaving a net lossluring the past year of $\$ 684,9+46.56$, I motice that we have paid in Toronto for advertising alone SO, ©99, and of that the Tormento Empirir has received 81,885 . Then a large amomet has been paid for printing. All this shows very clearly that the manner in which this road is being run is in the interests of the party on the Treasury benches, and that patronage of all hinds is given out in such a way as they think will do most good. In order to enable us to get at the bottom of the expenditure in comnection with this line, and to see if some system cannot be alopted whereby the expenditure can be very largely reducel, I put the notice on the Paper of the motion which was male some few days ago. If we do not make an attempt to get rid of umecessary expenditure in comection with the operation of this road, it will go on and will grow worse. I believe there is nothing to prevent this roal leing run on a true commercial basis, and to make it a paying line, hut so.long is it is operated in the interests of certain miners in Nova Scotia, who get their coal carried at a very low rate-I lelieve the tonnage sate is less than the actual cost of drewing ties conl-as long as that is done, the people of this country are simply paying to keep in operation a road which is a drain on them, and is simply keeping up a coat trade between Montreal and Quebec and New Glas: gow. I do not think this should be continued. If it is, the people should understand how and why the Intercolonial Railway is operated. In order to reach the proper condition of things, I make this motion, and I hope we will have the entire list of the officials, the work they are doing, and the money they draw laid hefore us, so that the country may know why it is asked to comtinue this enormons ex. penditure.

Mr. HAGiliART. I do not inteme to discuss the management of the Intercolonial Railway at the present time, or to enter into any of the givestioms which the hon. gentleman has lrought hefore the House on a simple motion to bring down the papers. I made eurguiries in reference to this matter, and the chief of the department told me it would le almost impossible to furnish all the information asken for in regard to railways alone during this session, amd that the estimated cost would be over $\mathrm{SD},($ (日н). I think the motion which was made by the hom member for Queens. P.E.I., (Mr. Davies) and the retmon in answer to it, will furnish all the information necessary for the full discussion of the subject the hom. genteman hats referred to.
Mr. LAURIER. If the hom gentleman takes the responsilility of refusing this motion, I dromot suppose my hon. frieml will press it any further, lut it is a sad comment upon the alministration of the Intercolonial Railway if it is impossible for the (iovermuent to bring down a list of the employes on the railway without the expenditure refored to by the hon. gentleman and within the compass of one session.

Mr. HAratiART. The motion asks for a great deal more than that.

Mr. LACRIER. The motion asks for the number of the employes, the laboul they perform, and the salary they receive. Of course the motion may lee longer in words, but I umderstand the three things dennumbed are those. and it seems to me that, if it takes two or three months to oltain that information, there must he an army in the empley of the hon. gentlemin.
Mr. HAtiladRT. All I con siy is that I sent the question to Mr. Schreiber, the head of that department, and I received as an answer the statement that it would take nearly the whole session to make the return and that it would cost $\mathrm{s}_{2},(\mathrm{nW})$.
Mr. LAURIER. All the more reasom to have it.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I do not mulerstaml what motion of mine is referred to by the hom. gentleman which he said would cover this. I moved for Reports to Comncil and Orders in Comcil in reference to the removal of employes and appointments and a reduction in the number of the employes. Is that the motion to which the hom. gentleman alludes?
Mr. HAGiARTT. No: 1 was referring to a scheduled motion which you made the other ilay.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) That motion hat no reference to this question.
Mr. HadicaRt. Then an order has been made on the motion of the hom. gentleman in the Public Accounts Committee for the pay rolls, and that will les submitted.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I never asker for the pay rolls. There is no order that I have oltained from the House which embraces the subjectmatter of my hon. iriend's motion at all. The motion I made, and which the Honse was kind enough to grant, was in regaril to the proposed reduction in the number of employés on the road. It is a matter of public notoriety that the late acting Minister of Railways, when he returned from his inspection of that roal, determined that there should be a large reduction in the number of the employis. I moved for the correspondence in regard to that. The hom. gentleman told me there was no, report and no Order in Comacil on the sulject, ami on that statement the motion was withdrawn, hut there was no motion made lig me in this House asking for the information which my hon. friend seeks. It is all very well to say that the pay rolls will be brought down, but that will not supply the information the him. gentleman seeks. We are aware that the otticials at Moncton who have to employ these men know that so many men are employed in the carshops, so many in the workshops. so many as conductors, so many as haggagemen, and so on. They cau he grouped together very easily and there can be no practical difticulty in giving the information atsked for if the chief engineer or the chief manager desire to give it, hut it is known that the chief manager, Pottinger, does not, becanse he has hal in his employment humbreds of men whom the Minister has decided to be umnecessary, and he thinks it is not desirable that the information should be given. hut it is information which the Minister can get in a very short space of time. There is mos use saying that this inwolves an immense deal of lalour. To put down each man's name and to say that he Was employed by day labour or anything of that kind, would involve lahour, but that is not asken for. The idea is to have the different classes of men. the pay they get, amd the work they do, so that we may know whether a man is being fairly paid for the chatazter of work he does.

GOMERNMENT RALLWAYS-ENPLOYÉS.

House resumed lebate on motion of Mr. Mo.Mullen (p. (i92).
Mr. MILLS (Buthwell). I think the motion sul. mitter by my hon. friend from Wellington (MrMoMullen) is one of very great consequence, and I do not think the objection raised by the Minister of Railways is an oljection that ought to prevail with this Honse. There are, no douhn, many persons eniployed on the Intercolonial Railway, and so far as it is possible to judge from the information before us, there is a very mueh larger number than is repuired in the pablic interest, and this fact has heen to some extent contirmed hy the statement of the Minister, which shows that the apprehension prevailing in the public mind in regard to the management of this road is not without foumdation. It is of importance that this House should obtain this information amblemuire into the administration of that particular liranch of the public service. We exercise, to a considerable ex. tent, if we are active in the discharge of our luties, supervision over the efficiency of the allministration of the various public departments. The Public Accomits show that the cost of mamagement over earnings on this road is abont $\$ 1$. (KN), (MNO a year. pe:haps in excess of that amount. That is a very serions condition of things, and it is of some importance to the country that that condition should he remedien. If the cost of managiug the Intercolonial is to be so largely in excess of the earnings, then it may be of some importance in the public mind to determine whether that road is to be kept in operation by the Govermment at this very large charge on the public treasury. Even if the cost of securing the return were as great as the Minister represents, and I think he must be mistaken in regird to the amount, the House might even economise by incurring the expenditure, if, as a result, there conld be a reduction in the actual deficit in the management of the road as exhibited in the Public Accounts. What is the return asked for: The number of persons engaged on the road, the amonut of salaries they receive, the work in which they are engagen; and surely, supposing the number was several thousands, it ought not to employ a man more than a few days to prepare such a return. If these parties were classified, and it was stated that there were so many of this class receiving so much salary, and so many of another class, the work would he still further shortened, and the return might be of such a character as to suggest, not only to the department, but to the House, some means of effecting an improvement in the condition of affairs that has prevailed. It may be that the construction of the short line across the State of Maine, the expenditure of a large sum of money by the people of Canada in a foreign country, and the construction of a road as a rival to the road owned by the Canadian public may have seriously crippled the usefulness and advantage of maintaining this road for all time to come. But, surely, if the amount of work has largely diminished on the road, and if the earnings on the road are not increasing, the cost of management ought not to increase in so large a degree as it has done during the past few years. There was, ats some hon. gentleman sail, it deficit under the administration some years ago, when the road was first put into operation. It was not expected that from the begiming the road would earn as large an amount as it has since earned : but $I$ doubt if there was a deficit if the Pablic Accounts had heen made up during Mr. Mackenzie's Administration in the way they are prepared at the present time. The construction account had been closen, and all the charges incurred on leehalf of the road were placed against the current expenses. That is not so now. I suppose this not he charged against ruming expenses but against capital account, so that the capital accome which formerly amounted to $\mathbf{S 3} .0,0(0 \mathrm{~K}),(\mathrm{OK})$ hat now reached sin), (OX),(NO). It is clear the management of the Intercolomial is in the highest degree unsatisfactory. Whether the hon. gentleman who is now in charge will have courage and vigrour to correct the atomses that have arisen in connection with the road anl repair the mischief done, remains to be seen ; hut whether he succeeds or fails, it does not relieve the House from the duty that devolves upon it, and the first step, necessiary to enable the House to consider the subject is the preliminary one suggested by the motion of my hom. friend. It is of the utmost importance that the House oltain this infomation, and hom. members will then be in a better position todecide as to what shall be the next step taken.

Sir IOHN THOMPSON. The House will have many opportunities this session to consider the managenent of the Intercolonial Railway, but I think most members will agree with me that this is the most inconvenient time that could be adopted for that discussion. Something has been said about the ease with which this return could be prepared. I think what has been said on this subject justifies the opposition of the Minister of Railways to granting this return. The leader of the Opposition, for example, has said that if the return is to occupy the time and incur the expense which the Minister of Railways has indicated, there must be a little army of men employed on the railway. That is undoubtedly correct. In a railway from 1,000 to 1,200 miles long there are necessarily employed, even under the most economical management, upwards of 4,000 men. What the hon. member for Queen's (Mr. Davies) has said, and what the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) has said too, as to the utility of this return. convinces me that what is really desired by the mover of the resolution, at any rate what is desired liy these gentlemen who have spoken in support of it, is not so extensive and expensive a return as that which this resolution contemplates. What these gentlemen have said is, that with a view to a proper discussion of the management of the Intercolonial Railway, and with a view to ascertain whether the number of men employed in the various places is not greater than it might be, it is clesired that the Honse should know how many men are employed at the different ocupations on the roal. The hon. gentleman who movel the resolution will remember that his retmon will comprise a great deal more detail than that, and it is that detail, as I understand it, which in. curs the expense and delay. I make this observation with a view to ask the hon. gentleman whether he will not consider what has heen alvancel from his own side of the Honse, withiraw the present motion, and substitute one for it which will give the information which his friends have state! would be desirahle. There would be no objection, and there would not be any rery great expense to get a return inlicating the number of men employed at the different occupations on the road. But. when the hon. dentleman asks us to give the names and addresses, and the different kinds of work at which each man was employed, he will see that it comprises not only a little army of men permanently empored on the railway, But likewise every man who may have been engaged at temporary work on that railway. For instance, in the winter season, during heavy show storms, men are put on temporarily, and even as regards them it would be necessary to ascertain their names and addresses and the different kind of employment at which they may have leen engaged. The hom. gentleman will perceive that when you come to detail the work of each individual you will require to search the records of the department and to ascertain when "A. B." has been engaged in snow-shovelling, or track-laying, or tearing up decayed sleepers, or cleaning ont the ditehes, and in that way it involves a separate enguiry as to the particular work at which each of these men has been engaged. The hon. gentleman I think will be convinced that to do that reyuires more time than will enable the return to he hrought down in time for any practical discussion on the Intercolonial Railway this session. We have no, desire at all to keep from the Honseany part of the information which will help it to an intelligent july. ment as to the management of the lntercolonial Railuay. We are as anxious as any hon. gentleman on the other side of the House that the railway should be economically conducted, and I should say that we from the Maritime Provinces, who are so much interested in its management, desire alove all things that that management should he satisfactory to the House and to the country. We think that the deficit, as the hom. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) has stated, is not due to the mismanagement of the road and the employment of large numbers of men who are unnecessary. It may be. however, that owing to a partial decrease of business, arising from the competition of rival lines, there are men employed whose services can profitably be dispensed with. If so, I am sure that my colleague the Minister of Railways will act properly and decisively with regard to that question, and he will find no obstruction from his colleagues in that regard. I think it will likewise be found that instead of the comparison being unfavourable to recent management, instead of its being shown as the hon. gentleman thinks, that if the accounts were kept as they were during a former Government it would be found there would be no deficit under a former Government but a large deficit under the present Government; I think it will rather be found that if the accomits were kept as they were formerly kept and sums charged to capital accoment which are now charged to income. the deticit would be far less than it appats to be on the accomes of the department.
Mr. MILL心 (Buthwell). The capital acemut is closed.
sir GOHS THOMPSON. I think not.
Mr. MILLs. It was dosed in Mr. Mackenzies day:
sir JOHN THOMDSON. I am informed he propesed to do that but alamboned it. However that may be, we can discuss it at another time. My recommentation is that the hon, gentleman withlraw the present motion and suhstitute on another nceasion a motion for the different classes of workmen employed on the man, and I fancy that return will not cause much expense.

Mr. Mr.MLLLES. I desire to curtail the expenses connecten with the preparation of this retmon and 1 hate mo desire to throw an enomous amome of work on the Minister or on the department. but I have grave doubts in my mind that the $\dot{H}$ onse can powsess itself with the necessary information to intelligently criticiee the Intercolomial Railway without the return I have asked for. I am willing to aceept the hon. gentleman's sugestion, if he will allow this motion to ge, with the understanding that the information he indicates is to, be furnished in it. If afterwards we time that the information is not sutficient to thoroughly investigate the operations of the whole line. we will of neecssity have to ank the Honse for an order for further information.

FEEON (ANNED LOBATERS

sir IOH.N THOMPSON. In the alsence of Mr. Tupper, I hey to move that the Honse do resolve itself into Committee of the Whole to-morrow, to consider the following resolution :--

1. That it is expelient to impose a fee of - dollars for each license griated by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to cill. preserve or cure lobsters, or keep them alive out of close season in ponds or other places.
2. That it is expedient to impose a fee, at the rate of two cents for each case containing four dozen one-pound cans of lolsters, and one cent for each casecontaining two dozen one-pumd caus of lobsters, to be paid hy the packer (1) the perion directed by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to mark, label or stamp such case.

Motiom agreed to.

BUSINESN OF THE HOLSE.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON moved:

That on Thursdays, for the remainder of the session, Government Orders have precedence after Questious put by Member.s."

Mr. LAURIEP. I have no oljection to offer to this motion. It is an early stage of the session at which to make such a motion, but still I think the light state of the business paper justities it. As the hon. gentlemam. I suppose, takes this step with the view of expediting the business of the session, the House will be glad to le informed as to when they may expect the introluction of a Bill which may prove to be a very serions one, that is, the Redistribution Bill.
sir JOHN THOMPSON. The resolution is moved, as the hon. gentlem:an has stated. with the riew of expediting business, and also in view of the fact that at the present session the colume of husiness in the hands of private members appears to lee less than usual. Fiery day that has been open to private husiness we have had the whole Order Paper passed aml Govermacme hasiness reached: and we thought therefore, although it is somewhat earlier than usual, that we might with alluantage to the whole House ask for an alditional day for Covernment husiness. I amnot in a position th state this evening when the Bill to which the hom. gentemau refers will be brought down, but 1 will give him that int, mation ats som ta I prissihly cim.
Mr. MLLL (Bothwell). Well. Mr. Speaker. I think that is a very unsatisfactory statement. We know right well that it is of the first importance. in the progress of the Estimates. that the legiskition promised be the forermment should he in the hands of the members of the Honse. I have on more than one octavion pointen ont that in England nearly all the legisiation that the covernment pro. pose in a session of seven months is pht into the hands of the Homse during the first three weeks of the session. It is the right of membersto have an opportunity to consider with care the legislation which the diovermment popmese. It is their richt also to have an opportunity of communicating with their constituents upon the rarions measures which the dovernment present to Parlianent. Sow, we are at that perion of the session when at least onethird of it has gone by, and yet the most important measure which the dovermient have proposed t." the Honse this session is not before us. We know that underour onstitutionalsystem the ancient practice was that Parliament did not grant supplies on sulsidies matil they knew whether the crown intendeltoredressthegrievances of the people. What were fomerly called the grievances of the people ars. now embrated in the Speed from the Throne brought down at the beginning of every sessiom. Here are the men who are the committee of Parliament, the men who are not merely the comsel of the Crown but who enjoy the contilence of the Honse, who have promised important legislation. and who are taking a day that lelongs to private members for the purpose of hastening thegranting of supplies when the legislation which they have promised is not yet hefore us. I think it is the duty of Parliament to exercise that precaution which the House of Commons in Eaghand hasalways exercised, anl to see that the measures of redress which the Crown proposes are lefore Parlianent lefore they madertake to any great extent to carry forkard the supplies. That is the rule, and it ought not to be distegarded. I can assure hon. gentlemen on the Treasury lenches that if they have time to spare, they had hetter derote it to getting really the measures which they intend to submit to us, hecanse it is necessary that they should be in oar hands if the business of the House is to be facilitated.
Motion agreed to.

SUPPLY--THE BUDAET.

Mr. FOSTER moved that the Honse again resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Mr. Mr-MILLAN (Humon). Before you leare the (hair, Mr. Speaker, I desire to saty a few words on the Bulget. My reasom for speating on the subject is that it has heen stated freguently during the present session that the farmers of this country. esperially those of the lrovince of Ontario, lig their votesat the hye elections, expressel themselves ats facourable to the retention of the National Policy. I camot agree with this statement. I have heen through at considerable portion of the Western part of the Province of Ontario, and Iam thowonghly convinced, notwithstanding all that has been said, thate the farmers of that part of the province are as anxious as it is prossible for them to he that we should have urrestricted reciprocity with the United states. The hon. Finance Minister has stated:
"This matter is now settled in proint of clearness amd detinitenes. I for my own part regret that it is settled as it is, and I am glad it is settled.
I donot believe that this question is settled in the mamer in which the Ninister of Finance has led the House to believe. I woull just like to ask if the Ministers in going to Washington went with a well-ilefineal scheme-if they went prepared to state exactly how far they were prepared to go: Aconding to the statement that we have received. they declared that they were willing to treat on the lines of the Reciprocity Treaty of is.it, monlified to suit the changed and altered conditions of the commery. I would like to ask how far the changed and altered comditions of the comitry would warrant the $\begin{gathered}\text { andermment in going in the direction of unre- }\end{gathered}$ stricted reciprocity: I believe, Nir, that the sonditions of the comutry to-day would watrant the infoption of unrestricted reciprocity: I further believe that the people of this country atre just as anxions for unestricted reciprocity as they ever were: and I was not the least astomished to hear the: statement of the hon. Minister of Finance that the delegation to Washington had entirely failed. We had been ohl that everything hat been done that tongue or pen could doin order to make the trip of the commissioners to Wiashington of no effect, in order to place the United States diovernment in such a persition that they would not give us unrestrictel reciprocity. Let me ask if it was either the tongue or the pen of any member of the Opposition that put the languinge into the mouth of the Minister of Finance which he told as he used when he went to Wiashington? Was it either the tongue or pen of any man that urged him to ask secretary Blaine if he could propound a system by which the Govermment of Canala would be able to raise revenue under unrestricted reciprocity: Certainly the (iovermment knew before they went to Washington what position the Government of the Uniten States had taken. But we have been told also that if we had unrestricted reciprocity, gur manufacturing industries would be shat up. We have been told that our iron furnaces, our coal pits, our cotton factories, would be shut down, and in fact there would be a stoppage to almost everything in the Dominion. I would ask the hon. gentleman if he considered the statement he was making. Take the iron industries. Up to 1878 they him no protection. Trae, that industry then was not making satisfactory progress, hut has the progress been much more rapid since the imposition of the duty, although that industry is now fostered to an ex-
 are paying st duty in Ganda on every tom of pig iron manafactureal. and the output has only increased lo.(NA) tons since that dinty wats imposed. This surely must indicate that the iron imblustry will mot thrive here maless we have at more ex temad market. Then take the contom factories. Down to the time the Xitiomal Policy was inangumated, we hat one factory, the Haion Mannfacturing Company. which was faily shacessful. hat since the National Poliog that compamy has gone to the wall. Say, further, if I am mot mis. taken, all our cot ton mamofactmping industries have. been acquired by Eaghish capitalists, and I womhl ask who those English manuficturers, who hate bought, our factorice in Canada, shomblie peotected "gainst? Are they to he protected against themselves: Are they to he protemted against the gools they mamfacture in the old comoter and seml to (imata" Ami if those gentlemen can manufacture upen a paying scale in the ohl comatry why can they not compete here just as well: The man material hats to bee parchased and hromght into (amala, and it has to be purchased and hrought into the ohd comatry. I huld that if millownerscammanufacturesuceessfully in direat britain, theyought to he able to manufac ture just as successfully in (imarla, maness there is a combition of things here such ats at one time existed in the British lifinds when the English manufacturers were not emphying the most improved machinery and the very latest methods. At one: perion the silk manufacturers of England wert ahmost driven out of the market by the silk manufacturers of France : and when an investigation took place it was found that their machinery was mot of the most improved sort, so that they had to throw aside the old machinery and get in the leest that conld be foum lefore they conld compete successfilly with their neighburs. I believe that such is the condition of things in Canala in some of our manufacturing industries at least, and that the same remedy would bring alont a similar result. Then we are told that the farmers of Ontario would be reduced to the comdition of those of the Eastern States, had we unrestricted reciprocity and a large amount of grain ami animals allowed to come into Canala. We have no fear of that. In Untario, with the most fertile land on the continent of America, with a more fertile soil than can be found in any state of the Union, we have no fear of competition. Nay, further, what we want is to get the markets of the United States. We were toll also by the hon. member for Inverness, and I was very much amused at his statement, that the exolus from this country had its fonndation from lsist to 186f; when the old Reciprosity Treaty was in force. At that time. he said, there was great intercourse between the two countries, and our people went over to the United states and remained there, and he told us that from 1861 to $\mathbf{1 8 6 4} \mathbf{4 0}$ (0MO) Canalians enlistel into the American army. But the hon. gentleman forgot that from issi until 1889. so, (OMO ammally went ont of Camada into the United states, so that the exmlus which he almitted in several years together omly amounted to H1,ONO, was omly one-half the exombs of a single year mider the National Policy. I wamt to call attention to some of the statements of the Finame Minister. He tells ns now that we are delarred from the great markets of the United states, and that the only thing left for the bovernment to do is to give us adequate protection agains: competition in prolucts of the Western states. Let me give a few quotations to show whether or not the National Policy is really protecting the Canadian farmer. In the Empiot on the 3.3 r d of this month. I fiml the following prices yuoted for fall wheat. spring wheat, barley and oats in Buffalo and Toronto respectively : Fall wheat. in Buffalo, !4c.: in Toronto, ste. to sïc., or a difference of 9 c . in fancour of Buftialo. Spring wheat. in Buffalo. SeceinToronto, secetosic. or or infarom of Toronto. Barley, in Buffalo, sitic. This was a special despatch to the E'mpior in which it was stated that some $(6,0$ (an) bushels of harley had theeln sold in Buffalonat stic. which would make, ateording to the despatch, some alc. in Camadia. or a difference of 3 Bic . in favour of Butfalo. Oats, 3tc. per hushel in Buffalo and 31c. per bushel in Toronto. Now, that is certainly something to be protectel against. I would ask how far this protection afferts the Canadian farmer? I made a little calculation on the subject. Suppose a farmer had 10 acres levoted to fall wheat. spring wheat, barley and wats each. Aecording to the average rate of those grains in Ontario in 1891, the yieh was of fall wheat 29 bushels, spring wheat $2 i$ bushels, barlev $\times 9$ bushels, and oats 40 bushels per acre. Take 10 acres of each of these, and how mach more money would the American farmer get for his ti a $^{\prime \prime}$ acres than the Canalian farmer: We find that the American farmer in Butfalo would take home sibt more than the Canadian farmer selling his produce in Toronto, and yet this is a fair comparison, both of these cities being equally near the seaboird and equally near the frontier. One reason why we do not get the same price in Canada as they do in the United States is that we have Millers Association in the Province of Ontario that meets from time to time and discusses the question as to the supply of wheat to the different mills. There are over 16i) millers who have joinel that association. They have a central buyer who buys almost the whole, and conserguently we have no competition in our own markets. I will repeat a statement which I have made in the House hefore, because, as we are informed, there is a colony of young members in this House, and I want to show them that we have not leen able to hold the markets of Canadia as well as we did lefore the National Policy was imposed. In 1881, two years after the introduction of the National Policy, wheat in Montreal was at $\$ 1.33$, while in New York it was $\$ 1.11$, or 22 cents lower in the United Statesthan in Canala. The National Policy was then fairly commencing. When it had been in operation up to 1886, wheat had fallen 24 cents in New York while it had fallen 48 cents

Mr. McMilas (Huron).
in Camada, showing conclusively that the National Policy has not enabled the farmers of Camada to hold their markets in the stume position as liefore the National Policy was imposed. Then we have been told that, if we had reciprocity: American corn would come into this country: and that in 1878, before the introdnction of the National Policy, while our horses in Ontario were feeding on American corn, our oats were left in the barns and were only worth 10 or 1.5 cents a bushel. and that the same thing would take place again if we had reciprocity. I was sorry to hear this statement from a gentleman who has experience in Canadian atfairs, I mean the member for North Victoria (Alr. Hughes). If he had examined the records, he would have foum that the price of oats in Canala was higher in 1 sis les on st cents a bushel. If he will examine the $\mathrm{V} a \mathrm{a}$. which at that time was the organ of the Conservatice party, he will find that. in December. Asis the price of oats was 7 cents higher in Tirmento than it was in Chicago, and if he will come to $18 s 1$, two vears after the National Policy was imposed, he will tind that gats in the United States were 1 cent higher than they were in Canada. There was also a report handed in 1882 from a Commission which was appointed to report upon the intluence of the National Policy on the agricultural interests of Camala. I have that report at home in a blue bowk. and I consulte i it lefore I came down here. I find that in $1 \times 5$ catswerella cts. higher inchecag, than in Torment, and that was two years before the Sational Policy: was imposed, and in lisi. two years after it wais imposed, the price was within is cents in Chicaso of what it was in Toronto- : tanother proof that the National Policy has mot helped us. Let me sity ., (MK),(KNO bushels entered into (canala and were bushels were hronght inte, the conntry and com-sumed-a clear proof that the statements which have heen made are not home out. We have been also told some things in regard to cattle. There was a report male by the secretary of Agriculture of the United States, and the statement was mate that there had leen sion or slin alvantage for camadians over the Americans in taking their cattle into the British market. I have some experience in that matter. I have shipped large guantities of homed cattle to the English market, and I hal a son 28 years of age who went to the ohd comentry and was going to stay there for a considerable time to look after this matter. I told him to make a careful comparison of the sales of the American and Canalian stock, and to let me know the condition of affairs. He attended the sales at the different markets on the banks of the Clyde and he informed me that he believed from $\$ 1.20$ to $\$ 2$ was all the advantage the Americans gained at the season he was there, hut that a little earlier there would be more alvantage. There is another circumstance that bears this out. A gentleman named Bickerdyke, who is largely engaged in the cattle trade in Montreal, came to Ontario and bought about $7,0 \times 0$ head of cattle. Did he ship them from Montreal? No. The larger number were shipped to Boston and sent from Boston to the British market. It was found letter to send the cattle to Boston and take the cheap ocean freights from Boston to the old country and forego, the advantage of the transhipment, because, while they were paying from boston only 2.5 or 31) shillings freight, we in (anada had to pay from (i.) to in shillings. Then we have been told that the comlition of the railways of Candia is another sign of prosperity. Onr railways are prosperons, and I am happy to know they are. I want to see every industry in the country thoroughly prosperous. but I would enyuire what is the great cause of the prosperity of the Canadian railways, especially the Canalian Pacitic Railway and the Grand Trunk Railway: Why, Nir, it is the measure of reciprocity in railway tratfic shat they enjoy with the United itates that makes them so prosperous. Let me state also that the farmers of this country are feeling a little of the prosperity of those railways. Last winter a grool many hon. gentlemen in this House told us how cheap the western famer could get his produats to the sealwand, as compared with the farmer in the Province of Ontario. A gentleman from Toronto who is largely engaged in the cattle trade, puhlished a letter over his own signature, showimg that a carload of cattle was taken from (hicago to the sealooard, a distance of $1,(M)$ miles, for the sum of Sirl. Last summer I took six or seven carloads from Seaforth, a clistance of only $\mathbf{i o n} 0$ miles, anm it cost mesit percar. I think the fovernment had hetter turn their attention towards getting the farmers of this comotry cheap railway lates. and to give us that meed of justice that we helieve we are entitled to on account of the large sums of money we have spent in assisting to builh these railways. Now. We have been toll that it is impossible for the United states to hecome the market for our produce, and that (ireat Britain is our natural market. We find that in 1891 the imports from Britain to this commry amomed to $542,04 \bar{i}, i 2 h$. We are also told that if we were to have reciprocity with the United States, we shonhl have to diseriminate against 1 ireat Britain. I holl that the present tariff does discriminate against (ireat Britain. There is more than one way of discriminating atgainst direat Britain. On this $542,04 \pi, 026$ of imports from Gireat Britain into Canada, a duty was eollected of $s: 1,114,2 \%$. The imports from the Enited states last year were $\mathbf{3 5 3 , 6 5 5}, 6=0$, or $\$ 11 . \overline{3}(n),(00)$ more than the imports from Great Britain : yet we find that the duty collected on the imports from the United States was only $\Sigma_{6}, 7: 34, \bar{i} 13$; or the luty upon all geods coming from Great Britain is $21 \frac{1}{2}$ per cent, while upon those coming from the United States it is only $14 \frac{1}{2}$ per cent. Then, in respect to free goods, we find that the imports from the United States amounted $t \in \$ 23,895,225$, while from Britain they amounted only to S10, 399,366 . Now, I hold this is a plain discrimination against Great Britain; in fact it is possible for this country, by means of its tariff, to impose a protection tariff against one country, and allow goods to come in free of duty from another country, just as the Govermment wish to favour one comutry more than another, or to lay a heavier burden upon one country than upon another. Then we were told that if the flour and wheat of the United States were to be brought into Canada and turned into flour, it would completely swamp our farmers. But I find that the United States took last year 1,000,000 bushels of wheat from Canada, while Great Britain took $1,006,000$. I am not aware whether our wheat that went to the United States paid a duty ; I have not got the Trade and Navigation Return of the United States. hut surely there is not the least danger of the United Statesswamping us in our own markets with their wheat and Hour. or putting us in a position that we cammot keep our own market. I do not lelieve that what has been said is correct on that point. I find that a statement has breenmade upen the Hoorof this House which will do more to keep settlers from coming into (amata than anything else that has ever heen said in this House. Let me read from his speech lelivered here a few days ago:
"But the day is fast apromaching when it will become the dury of the canalian diovernment to protect our farmers against horses from the western prairies. (on almost any article of farm produce our Canadian farmens cannot compete with the cheap pronlacts of the western prairie farms of the tuited states. There the farmer, when he geeson to his land, fimis it aiready cleared : there is no necessity of fencing it : ats a rule, his house is very cheap: and he is not whlized to indulge in the luxury of expensive buildings. In the ohler provinees of the Tominion, the farmer has in the first instance to elear the land. Which. with stumpage and stoning, occupies several years of severe labour. I am free to say that the fences and buildings un alumst any Ontario or Quebec farms represeut fully the value of any western prairie farm. Further. Sir, in the western states the farmer are not subject to the lons winters that we are here. On the arerame. our farmers have to provide for feeding their stock. six or seven monthe every yar. and it is utterly. imposible for them ta raise pork or eatrle, or animale of any kind, in Canada, !, compete with the chear prombet: of the western states.:
Sir, the author of that language is the hom. nemher for Sorth Vietoriat (Mr. Hughes), that was the gentleman who male this statement. Now, I hoh that mostatement so injurions ever passeel the lips of any Reformer in this Honse, to go ahroad to a foregn comatry. I am a Canalian famer, amb I do not believe this statement to le: correct. I. for one, have a little experience of what can le done in the United States. I have relations living there, we interchange commmications regulaty- and I helieve we are as successful as they are on the Western prairies. I Ielieve that in the Province of Ontario we have more comfortible homes, and we are in a letter prosition than are the farmers of the United States, and give us free trade with the rest of the worlh, and we can eompete with the farmers of the United States or any other comentr. I have no fear of competition from any other country. Now, just toshow what lenefit our farmers would derive from having free markets in the United states, I have picked out a few articlesfrom the Trade and Navigation Returns, with the amount we export of those articles and the cluty that is paid unter the McKinley Bill. Remember that I am dealing entirely with the Province of Ontario, I speak for that province alone, as l have no experience with the Maritime Provinces nor with our great North- West. Let me take the article of horses. We sent to the United States ! , 95 . h horses, and we paid a duty of $$ 298,710$ to get those horses into the United States before the McKinley Bill, hecause most of them went in cluring the three months from July to October before the Bill took effect. Of lambs we sent to the United States 244,996 . We were told by the hon. member for North Victoria that just as soon as the McKinley Bill took effect lambs went up in the United States. Let me state that the McKinley Bill affected lambs very little. The old tariff imposed a duty of 20 per cent upon sheep and lambs, under which a lambs worth $$ 4$ going into the United States paid 80 cents. while, under the McKinley Bill, a lamb worth st only pays 7.5 cents, so that the McKinley Bill toes not injure our export trate in lamhs. To get those lambs into the United States we paid a duty of $$ 183,77_{7}^{\circ}$. I will read a table of a number of other articles that we exported in 1889 and 1890 :

| Articles. | 1889. | 18:31). | Luty, $189 i$. |
| loultry.ini game... lis. | $\begin{aligned} & 11(1,-43 \\ & 51,732 \end{aligned}$ |  | * |

When we take these ten articles we find that the duties charged on them in the United sitates amomited in 1891 to $\$ 3,586,(M O)$, and although we would not benefit to the full amount, yet when we consider that it would taise the prices of what we sell at home as well as what we send to that country, we would be benefited to even a greater extent. While we sent only l,OOO,OMO lbs. of wool to the United States there were over $-,(1) \%, 0(0)$ lhs. raised in Canala, according to the report of the Bureau of Ontario Statistics. Those 5, (ONO),(OQ) lbs. would be increased in price also, and $\$ 6(0),(9)$ duty on those entering the United States would be removed. These items would foot up to the sum of $\mathrm{x} 3, \mathrm{x} 6,0$ org. The daties on fam prodhets amount to $\$ 1,793$, (10), which comes out of the pockets of the farmers of Camalia. Let me refer to two or three items in order to show the large sums taken out of the pockets of the rate. payers, and which go into the pockets of the combines and manufacturers. This is one of the greatest injuries we sustain from a protective system, namely, that very large sums are taken out of the pockets of the people and pass into the hands of the combines. Take sugar, for example. Orer $2(x),(\mu(), 0$ ( $)$ lbs. of sugar are consmmed annmally by the canadian people. or erpul to 44 lhs , per head. The rlaty paid amounts to $\$ 1, G(K),(M O)$. The duty in the Euited States is $\frac{1}{2}$ a cent per pound while we charge of of a cent, and aceordingly we are called upon to pay siok,ono more for that quantity than are the people of the Vnited states. Take linding twine. Only 198,007 lhs. were imported into Canata last year, but it required over $14,000,000 \mathrm{lln}$. to tie the Canalian crop last year, because it was a very large one and required in immense cuantity of twine. While $\$ 0,192$ went into the treasury, no less than s 424 , (on passed into the pockets of the cordage companies. If those companies increase the cost of binding twine 3 or 4 cents per pound a still further burden will be placed on the farmer. Of coal oil we imported, in 1889, $5,0,1,386$ gallons, and we manufactured over $9,000,000$ gallons. That was the means of placing $\$ 10,993$ in the pockets of the oil refiners, while only $\$ 365,145$ went into the treasury. If we take the duty amounting to $\$ 1,600,000$ on sugar, scarcely any of which goes into the treasury at present, and if we take the items of coal oil and binding twine, we shall find that no less than $\$ 2,544,993$ are taken out of the pockets of the people and placed in the pockets of combines and mamufacturers on those three articles alone. Yet we are told that it would be injurious to the farmer to have those burdens removerl. Let us take the crops of last year and make a little calculation in regard to them. We raised bushels, of wheat orer $32,(60,000$ ) bushels. Take half of this as needed for hone consumption amb half as exported. Comparing the prices obtained with the prices prevailing in the United Ntates we find on oats a difference of 3 cents during last year, on wheat is cents, and on barley i.s cents per bushel. Taking 3 cents per bushel on $37,500,(0 \times 1)$ bushels of oats, there was a difference of \$1,02:,000, in cents perbushel on 16,000 ,(ня) bushels of wheat will give $\$ 8(x),(M)$ and 1.5 cents per bushel on $\$, 0 \times 0,(0) 0$ bushels of barley will give $\$ 1,2(H)$, (KNO. On those three articles alone, comparing the prices in the Ontario market and in the markets of the United Nitates, our farmers sustained a loss of $\$ 3,($ К $),(6)$ which they would have secured if we had murestricted reciprocity with the Uniterl States. Fet we are told that we have a loetter warket in Fngland than we can obtain in the Uniter states for our harley, that may lee in the future, it is not in the present. Ihave a statement for 1891 which shows that the price of barley in the United States was $16 \frac{1}{2}$ cents higher than in Ontario, and I have another statement which shows that large quantities of barley which were sent to the English uarket last year were sold only aftel considerable troulle, and I was tohl only the other day ly a grain dealer that losses had occurved on harley sent to the ofd comntry. Canadian barley suitalle for shipment to England was sold at fi; cents per bushel, provided it was average in cuantity, and from my experience we camot fill the linll. We have heen told that we camot succeed with the Americans eren as reyards farming or mannacturing products. The foverument take the most inconsistent position on this question I ever knew. We were told during the recent elections, and it was stated in West Huron by an hon. gentleman who is now on the Treasmy henches, that members of the (iovermment hat gone to Washington to frame a reciprocity treaty, and, further, that the duty on linding twine and agricultural implement. woull he taken off. As hon. gentlemen opposite have not entered into a reciprocity treaty, they might give the people a measure of redress by removing the duty on binding twine from which a very small sum goes into the public treasury. We have heen told that the Toronto market is worth more than the whole market of the Uniter itates. We grant, Sir, that the Toronto market, or the market of any city as large as Toronto, is a great boon to the farmers of the Province of Ontario: but give us umestricted reciprocity with the United States, and we will have the Detroit market which is situated right upon our borders. While Toronto has a population of $180,0 \times 6)$, with the same limits as in 1881, we find that letroit has a population of 205,649 . (iive us unrestricted reciprocity and at least three fourths of the market in Detroit would be served from Camalia. Buffalo, another city lying on our very borders, and in the line of our commerce to the east, with a pripulation of 254,450 , would he supplied with a large amount of our products. Here are two cities that would bring to us a market of something like threeguarters of a million of people. Let us take the dity of New Sork, with a population of $1 . i 13,0 \mathrm{KM}$, and we woulh seme a very large amomu of our pronlucts to that city. If it is a great benefit to have a market in dorouto, the next greatest henefit that can be comferred upon the farmers of the lrovibee of Gntarion is to give them aceess to the markets of the linited state: for their surphes promets. Ronhester. is another city within it short distance of the frontier, and it has a population of 13s.3.3: : Boston hats a popplation of HtionKl: thes cities heing nearly eymal the the mpulation of the lrowince of Gitario, and with free acesss to their markets we could supply them. Let me give some tigures from the Thale and Navigation Returns with respect to our agricaltuabl prometus. The total of our exports from when we lost the Cinited states markets we would fimi markets ehewhere. Both the Minister of Dustice amd the Minister of Marine and Fisheries toll the people of Halifas during the general Hention. that it was mow their duty to find us foreign markets to compensate us for those we lost in the States, and they pointed to the markets of China. Japan. Anstralia, the West Imlies and Englaml. Why, iir, we have hatd the English matket all along and we prize it highly, and while we wish for uncestricted reciprocity, we still wish to retain that market. but the only other comntry mentioned hy the hom. gentleman opposite which takes agricultural products from Ontario was the British West Indies, and they take only $\$ 32,813$ worth, while not one cent of agriculturai products went to any of these other comutries which they told us would supply us with a market. When we send such large ammont of our protucts to the Cuited States rand such comparatively small yamtities to the British uarkets, is it tio be wondered that the people of Ontario wish to retain the markets of the United States: I say that the United States market is the lest market we can possibly have. I might also mention that we sent mostly all of them went to the Uniten States, that the market for eregs has fallen off to a dozen eggs less expo ted last smmate than the summer before, and this meatus an immenseloss to the Cinadian former. We have been toll time and time agais that the dovernment is ant to hame with respec to the lle Kinley Bill. I wond like to review this matter for a fittle and ask how it was whem this tisenssion took place in ISBS. with respect to remi ving the duty from trees. shaths, fruits and shall seeds in aceoriance with the tariff legishation with the ('nite:l states, there was such pressure hrought soh har at the time upon the ('anaklian dinvemment: It was heramse the Mills: Bill wats hrought hefore (ingress, and that a Bill of almast complete non-interomge beiween the stitess and (ianalia if it had hecome the law of the lamb. When the British Minister at Washington fomm that this Bill was Befonc ( 0 , ngress he sent a eommunication to the Colomial Ottice in England. and that commmeations was forwarded to the (ianadiandiovermment. The dovernment at ()tana changed their moliey and reciprocated at one when this mather wats briught moler their notice. The tirst intimation we hat of it here was when the Hom. Peter Mitchell from his plate in the Howse asked the then Promier if any commanacation hand heen received with respect to the duties mot heing removed froas these anaicies on our tarift the Premier stated emphatieally that the (anadian (bovermment wond mot rewiprocate: hut in a few days sir charles Tupper satme down and he thh us that atter he had discussed the question with the Conadiam dowernmemt they passed ath Order in Comed the night hefore to recipranate. and that the Orimer in Coumil dhased with this languige:

- And the Canarling liovermment await further legislation trom the dmerican forernment in the samedireetiom." Sum. Sir. this was done mater pressure from the Amerian fiovernment and alsn mader presure fom the colomial seeretary pressure hoth from Wiash ington and from Englanl. The journats of the United States at that time towk this question ul and discussed it very warmly, say ying that the fionerument of Camata was bot ating in goonl faith with the (anvinment of the leuited stites. Wi. had heon tohd that it was but whigatory on the Canalian (onermone to reviproate in this tarill legislation : but we have the following utterames of Sir Charles Tupper on that question:
"But I may say that the moment the Mills:s Bill was introduced into the congress of the cuited siates. lons hafore the disenssion arose in this llomse. I had the Deputy Ministar engaged in making at comprehelisive statement in refereme to this guestion. in order that 1 might bring it to the notice of uny colleagues as I was bomil to do. beenuse I finand that by an orersight on my part, cansed no donbt be the yarions duties imposed upon me, the aetion of the linitedstates Congress had been lost sight of.'
Here is Sir (harles Tuppers acknowlengment that it was the duty of ('anadat to reciprocate with the (iovernment of the United States. Now, Nir, we find that the Candiam (ionermment, most cer tainly under pressure, did remit those duties. It was only when the attention of the British Conernment had been called to those taxes, amd when a despatch had come from the Colonial secretary. that the Canadian fiovernment consented to remove: the duties from the articles from which the duties had heen remure in the Cuitel Nates five years before. Now. we have heen told that (amida is: prosperous, that the farmers of Ontario are pros: perons, and we have had many signs of that pros. perity laill hefore us. But, sir, there is me test of the prosperity or allersity of the inhahitants of any conntry that is. whether or not they are relieving themselves of the hardens imposel on their property, of whether those burlens are becoming heavier and more griecous to lear. Now, sir, 1 have a statement here showing that the chate Gntiaio, on the lit of lannary, 1 N (w), numbered of an increase. Niw. we may he asked whether the farmers art: the only class in the Province of Ontario who have suffered from the late depression. Le: the murtgages which rest upon the whole commaiaty tell whether the ot her classes are prospermes. I find that the chattel mortgages in the whole mumbered 16,2014 and amomuted to 5.491, ins, and that on the 31 st of December in the same year they amownt, of an increase of $1.64+.7$ mortyages in number and wo less than sidin..is. in amome during that one year. If that shows that the people of the Province of Ontario are in a prosperous combition, I do not know what the reeord of people in allersity could possibly be. Now, we have heen toll that propulation is not a true measure of the prosperity of the country ; but 1 hold that it is. especially in a yomg country. And let me say here that I have loeen astonished to hear hom. gentemen on the Treasury benches and their supporters comparing the population of Creat Britain with the population of (analda. Why, Nir, (ireat Britain is a country with a large surphus prpulation. which emigrated to all conutries in the civilized world to the numbe: of 2.en). ense ammally from 1 ssi. to $1 \times x .4$. Yet they compare that country with a young conntry like Canalda, whose only real want in order to becone prosperous is at large increase in her population. The ant of the machinery of dovernment in this come try at the present time, with its population of only -,, MOO, (KOO, is sufficient to govern a country with a more than was the cost of governing the United States when that comutry hail a population of that size. In the state of Minnesota, which cannot compare with Manitoha, there was a gain from Isss gain of only $92,18 \%$. In Dakota, which we have heard described in this House and lefore the Agricultural Committee as a land of storms and blizrarids, a perfect desert and wilderness, what is the condition of the population: During the last 10 years South Dakota, which is considered to he far inferior to Manitoba, gained in population $230, \mathbf{2} \mathbf{4 0}$, and North Dakota 145,810, while the fertile Province of Manitola, with which nome of these American states can compare, only gained 92,182 , and our North-West only 42,039 . Then, let us see what was the increase in population in the great Territory of Washington, which lies aljacent to British Columbia, and this recails to my mind a statement made in the report of the Minister of Agriculture a few years ags that 10 (KK $)$ people who hat come from the oll country and gone to Manitola and the North-West, where they did not find things its they hat theen represented to them, went in to Pritish Columhia, and when the Cowermment agent followed them there, he foum that they han gone tw Washington Tervitory . In, (KN in one single year. That territory gained in population from Isso to $1 \times!6$. $2-4.27+$ while British (columbia only gaineed 43.303 . Now. sir, let me attempt to give a statement of some of the canses which have lend w this condition of things. We have had a great many canses assigneal for the failure of the come try to invrease in popmatain. I will give you one cause. stated by Selnator Hanshrough of Dakotia, who has just arrived in Wishingten, When he arrived there, he made sime interesting statements: alome the effere of the Nokinley tarift, tumens which was the following:

"Why du the bakotans like the McKinley Bill? Because it gives them such ilecided adrantare hy atfording it higher price for home products. Take the single item of barley. Just across the imaginary line that separates Dakota mad Camada the farmers of that country get only 25 or 30 cents a bushel net for their barley, because they have to pay a duty of $3: 3$ cents a busthel when they bring it on our side to market. Our farmeres sell it 20 and 60 cents a bushel. having no duty to pay. It's the same with botatoes. Our wools, too, have becin in brisk demand at rood prices. Thare sears ago there were 3000 sheern in Nurth Dakota. Now there are 230.100 . Our farmersare increasing the output of wool in liakita, becatuse they get 10 cents per pound more thath the farmers of the NorthWest and Manitoba."
There is one of the reasoms given ly a Cuited states semator why people leave (canala. I came across a report of a speech delivered hy sir Framcis Hincks after he returned to (anala and became Finance Minister. In ISEO, when making his Bualget speech, he said that the delit per head of the people of the Cuited States amomed to s(i) while that of the perple of canada per heal only amomet. ed to sim? ind. The taxation in the Cuited states amomated to S9.e. per hear, and in Camatat to S3.esp per head : and he semed to point to this, that should the taxation of this comatry ever liecome heavier than that of on neighonars. we might expect an exolus. Another eminent statesiman, who held a high position ia the ranks of the ( (an: servative party, Sir Alexamber (ialt, mate a similar statement, namely, that should the day arrive when Camala wonld be heavier tased than the Enited States, we would commence to lonsee popmlation. This prediction hy these two gentlemen has lwen fulfilled to the letter. We have been trold that the trade of canala has heen increased to a considerable extent. Well. I chancel to take up the Trade and Navigation Returns of 18,73 anil 1874, and I find that the gross trade of Cinada in those years compared with that of the succeeding years, as follows:-

| :---: | :---: |
| 1814 | 21.564 .510 |
| 1582 | ¢21,556,34 |
| 1883. | 230,339.826 |
| 1890. | 218,607,340 |
| 1891. | 218,3×4,934 |

 O(0) over the trade of Canada in $1 \times 74$. This chows that Canada is not in that prosperous condition hon. gentlemen opposite would leal us to believe it is. When we go back to 1878 and look at the gross trade of Canada with Great Britain and the United istates, what tale does it tell? Does it show that fireat Pritain is a country Canala has to look to more than any other for a market for her goons: We tim that in 18 os we traded with Great Britain, exports and imports, to the amount of $833,327,-19$ and with the Cnited states to the amount only of $5: 3,576.437$. Pat when we come to 1s9. we find that while our trate with Great Britain hat increased to $591,328,384$ our trade with the United stites had increased t1 $894,524,302$; or while it increased with United States S $30.947,91 \%$, anl remember this wat during the period of the National Podicy. What, then, woild have heen the extension of our trate if the Nittional Policy hand mot heen establishel" I have hall letter after letter within the last few lays, every one of them stating that (amalats only salvation is to have reciporecity with the Euited states. There is a helief all theough western Ontario that the Goverment did not deal fairly with them. The perple feel that the Government went to Washinge ton only that they might be alle to come back and say to the farmers: We went to Washington, we attemptel to get reciprocity, but the davermment of the Cuited states would have none of it. Last vear the Minister of Justice ohd us that he had hoples there was a good ground that a fair reciprocity treaty should be entered into between Canala and the Cnited States. This year we are toh that the Unitel States will not give reciprocity anless ( anala leeomes annexed to them. Against this. however, we have the statement of the President. in his list message to Congress, that they did not want any more territory, as they had all they required, but that what they wanted was extenled trade relations with every government on the continent of America. I helieve, from the nature of the Mchinley Bill, that that is what the Cuited states wants. If om (iovermment knew anything, they knew before they went to Washington that the Bovernment of the Cuited states would not give reciprocity in natural prolucts alone. They twitted us with mot having a policy, hut hate the Govermment a policy? Have they lain down a well-detined policy as to what their views on reciprocity are: If there was a policy ever laid down by them, it was when sir . Iohn Macedonald, in 1880, stated that if we could not get a reciprocity of trale with the United States, we would get a reciprocity of tariffs, an? he added that the (iovernment of the United states would not give another reciprocity treaty monder. the oll lines of 18.54 . I hare a statement here of a number of articles included in the treaty proposed by the late Hon. Gieorge Brown, when he went to Wiashington in isit, but which afterwards fell through. Geat Britain we have been told would not lee willing that Canadia should diiscriminate against her: but I find there is in this treaty a large number of articles in which she would be discriminatei against, and yet the Govcrnment of Great Britain then expressed willingness that such a treaty should le entered into. It was then proposed that the United States and Cananda should interchange the following articles free of duty :-

Agricultural implements, of all kinds, axles, of all kinds; boots and shoes, of leather: boot and shoemaking machines; buffalo robes, dressed and trimmed: cotton grain lugs: cotton denims; cotton jeans, unbleached: cotton drilliuge, unbleached; cotton plaids; cotton ticking: cottonades, unbleached ; cabinet ware or furniture, or parts thereof: carriages, carts, waggons and other wheeled vehicles or sleighs, or parts thereot': fire engines, or parts thereof: felt covering: for boilers; gutta percha belting and tubing; iron-bar, hoop, lig, puddled, rod, sheet or serrp: iron nails, spikes, bolts, tacks, brads or springs ; iron castings: India rubber belting and tubing: locomotives for railways, or parts thereot: lead, sheet or pig; leather, sole or upper : leather, harness or saddlery; mill or factory or steamboat fixed engines, and machines: or parts thereot: manufactures of marble, stone, slate or granite: manatactures of wood solely, or of wood mailed. bound, hinged or locked with metal materials: mangles. washing machines, wringing machines, lrying machines, or parts thereof : printing paper for newspapers : paper making machines, or parts thereof : printing type, presses and folders, paper cutters, ruling machines. page numbering machines and stereotyping and electrotyping apparatus.or parts thereof: refrigerators. or parts thercof: railroad cars, carriares and trucks, or parts thereot: satinets of wool and cotton: steaur engines, or parts thereof : steel wrought or cast, and steel phates and ratils: tin tubes and piping: weeds, of wool solely: water wheel anachines and apparatus: or marts thereof.

The diovermment at that time was willing that the treaty should be entered into, the liovermment of 4 reat Pritain han given their consent to it, and the Hon. (ieorge Brown hat nearly succeeded in negotiating the treaty. They were willing that that treaty should be entered into. and if the British fiovermment were willing and the (iovermment of Canala were willing, certainly they must have seen a way to taise the revenue. Our dovernment did not go down to Wiashington with a well-matured selicme to sulmit to the diovermment of the United states, telling them how far they were prepared to go, hat on the contrary they raised all the objections they could: nay, further, they asked Mr. Blaine if he would show them how to raise a revenue. Can any one imagine anything more hamiliating for Canalia? I have heard that at the time of the National Poliey those gentlemen harl to semd to Washington for a man to come here and help them to get up that National Policy, and now it appears to the worh that our (iovermment is so imnecile that they camot get up a policy of their own. I say they have done more to discredit Canala in the eyes of the world than was ever done by either the tongue or the pen of the Opposition. thoragh those gentlemen used to say that the Opposition. liy tongue and pen. had done as much as possible to frustrate the attempts to oltain reciprocity. From their action the world would imagine that Canada is in a lost condition when she camot raise a revenue. Speaking as a farmer. 1 , for one, have no fear of that, and 1 am prepared to accept unrestricted reciprocity and let the amount which the late Premier of Canala said would have to be imposed on every family, that is sim, he imposed. It would lee a blessed day when that took the place of the present system. If every man in this country knew the extent to which he is robled the country would rise at once and so in for direct taxation. But, through the mis-statements made by the Govermment and their supporters, a great many of the people have been led to believe what they said. We will be told that the people of Ontario still helieve in them, and that, by their votes at the lye-elections, they have said that the (Government are right and the Opposition are wrong. No such sentiment goes through western Ontario. I know western Ontario thoronghly, and, during those bye-elections, we found a horde of men in each constituency whom ui) one knew. They went to the hotels and they did not register their names. They were aftaid to lo known. They never went to a public meeting or addressed a public andience, but they went out after sumset and went away the next monning. If the agent of the dovernment there was organizing them, it was evident that he hat un contidence in them, for he did not put the buonle into their hamls, but, after one of them hat risited a house another was reguired to be sent there the night hefore the election. I know that in 1 est Huron a man went to the house of a resprect athe firmer and offered him $\mathrm{Sl}(\mathrm{K})$ in mones of he and his two sons would wote for Mr. Patterson. Another man went into the house of another firmer the night hefore the election and asked, hat he any cattle for sale " No. he harl me cattle for sate. Hall he any sheep for sale? No, he had no sheep. Then he said that was not his husiness, hut he was out cancassing and he could not saly any more in the presence of a thimelimbividual. The farmer felt so inligmant that he threatened to kick the man off the premises if he did not go. That is what caried those mings. It was not the cote of the respectable electors that returned these gentlemen. I helieve that some of the individuals who were there must be under the pay of this Government becalle they have no risible means of support, and yet we have foum them there, woing out in the cool of the evening and not showing themselves during the day. Yet hon. gentlemen tell us that this is the free aml unbiassed voice of the farmers of Ontario who have recorded their rotes against reciprocity. I say there is no such sentiment in Ontario, and I chim to know that province as well as any hom. member, because. for five years past, I have been groing amomgst the farmers at the Famers' Institutes, and, though that guestion is never hrought up at those meetings, I have found their riews in private interriews, and I say that the feeling is growing stronger and stronger in favour of reciprocity with the United states, and the hom. gentleman will find that out when the perple of western Ontario get an opportunity to show them. Dany voters were led astray when they had the statement that the dovermment were going to Washingten to get reciprocity, and in West Huron they understood that it was to lee unrestricted reciprocity. They were deceiverl, but they will not be deceivel again. I hope the fiovermment will see their way to make some change, and will find some means of giving us the relief we have asked.

Mr. SPROLLE. At this late stage in the lelate ainl after the developmentswhich have taken place, not only last winter but also since in elections, it would seem to be a pity to waste time over a disconssion of a strlject which has accomplished so much for our friends opposite. One issurprised to hear so much said in defence of a policy which may be callerl one of the dead issues of the country, though it has leen presented to us ly the eloquence of the hon. member for Hurom (Mr. MeMillan) and his followers, a policy which has accomplished nothing for them except the decimation of their ranks until now they have a very much smaller number in the House than they hal when they first propounded this policy. The hom. member, who is leaving the chamber I see, says there is no such sentineent in favour of the National Policy in western Ontario as is representel by the supporters of the (iovernment. In saying that, the hon sentleman must discrelit his own educating powers becallse he has been one of the strongest advocates of mirestricted reciprocity, one of the most uncompromising opponents of the National Policy, ant has spent a considerable portion of last summer an? fall in ellucating the people of western Ontario on this sulject : bat the result was that in every constituency in which he had the homour to speak. the election went against him ame his party. Either the people must diseredit the leader and the party, or else the ellucating ability of those who addressed them must le very poor. It reminds me of the story which was tohld of an incilent which happencil when the first engine was driven through the Rocky Mountains over the Cnion Pacific Railway. Buffalo hull stamding on the heights watching the inroarls leeing made ly the White man in his territory, cane down from the momatain and placed himsell on the tratk in fromt of the engine, to tight and to once and for all tinue stop the inrouds on his territory : with heal down, tail erect, ami hack bowed, he mate the charge. The engineer who was driving the train had holl of the lever of the engine. and lowking at the inlignant animal in an ammed way, said: ‥ Well, old loey, I admire your plack, but I think very little of your judgment." We camot help but admire their pluck. hut I think very little of your judgment. certainly the country must think very little of their julgment after the reception their policy hats met with ly the verdict of the comitry. Now, for several years past we have hat from the same gentlemen the cry throughont the comntry that the policy of the Conservative party was not the one the comatry reguired. but that marestricted reciprocity was what Canada needed to cure her commercial and political ills. These men have endeavoured to intluence the people upon every platform and every hustings in the country, they have hed numerons meetings during the campaign of $18: 9$, and during the lye-elections of this summer. which almost amomed to at general election; they have scattered thonsamds of pamphlets and fiy sheets throughout the country, and have asked the electorate to pronounce upon their policy, ind what is the result? The result is that every bye election has gone against them.
some hon. MEMBERS. What about Prescott:
Mr. SPROLLE. It must be a great source of consolation to those hom. gentlemen to hold at comstituency ly some 40 or ou votes which they carrical a year ago by some 40 ). If they can find consolation in that election, I am sure we are willing to let them enjoy it. They have taken every possilile means to edncate the people, not only hy their speeches, but by the facts and figures. sin called, which they have scattered among the electorate of the comntry. I have one panphlet here before me that I got from a friend belonging to a constituency in the west. The cover was labelled "With the Compliments of Mr. Camphell. M.P.," and the pamplet was entitled "Facts and Figures for the Electors," aml was intended to convince then that the National Policy was a great curse to the nation, and that unrestricted reciprocity was the blessing the perple needed. After looking over this pamphlet I thought to myself it was well they labelled it "Facts and Figures." It reminded me of the condition of things in ancient times when Art was so crule that when a picture was made the artist put the name unler for fear it might be mistaken for something else, for instance when a boy drew a picture of a horse, underneath he wrote "This is a horse," for fear some one would take it for a cow or some other animal. If this pamphlet had not been lathelled "Facts and Figures," I an sure the realer would have come to the conclusion that it contained nothing hat fiction. Now everything letween the two cowers of this book is written to convince the people that the National Policy is a mational curse, and that murestricted reciprocity is the need of Canalia to-day. It tells the people that ever since the Conservative party came into power in 15 sis the National Policy hats heen ruining the comity, until the burthens of the people have hecome so great that they can no longer he bone. and the country is growing constantly weaker and more powerless. At the end of the pamphiet they turn round :uml indicate a remedy, and what is the remedy: The remedy is the Butterworth Bill. We have often stated that they went to the Enited states for a policy, and you can find no better evidence of the truth of that statement than is affiorded hy this pamphlet. They tell the people of Camalia that the Butterworth Bill rums upon the stane lines as umrestricted reciprocity, ind that is the remedy for Gandais commercial and political ills. It is nost annusing and interesting to look at our present situation, as it is describel in that pamphlet, because they tell the peeple what they are suffering from, they tell then what they want and they tell thein that they have found a remedy. They tinish up this pamphlet in a very amusing way. It is said that among them is a poet. and he comes from the Province of Ontario, I take it must be so. hecause we find some of his hamliwork in this pamphlet. I will read you a few lines:

*Once to every anan and natinn comes a moment to decide:
In the strife of truth with falsehood, for the good ar evil side :
Sume great canse (iod's new Messiah, offering cach the blown or blight.
Parts the guats upon the left. hand and the sheep upon the right:
And the choice goes by favour. twint the darkness and the light,
Hast thou chosen" D! my people, of this great and happy lamd, Leoking to the future, in whose party thou shatl stand ? ${ }^{\circ}$
Now, they ask the country to matie the division upon the lines they indicated, the country has made the division, and where do they turn np: Oa the left hand of the speaker: hence it is unnecessary for me to ask them to which class of anmals they lelong. But what more do I fiml: In examining this pamphlet that is said to contain notining hat facts and figures and the great remedy, the great panacea, for Camada's connercial and political ills, on the very next page I find an alvertisement of Hamlin's Wizard Oil, which is said to cure rheumatism, neuralgia, headache, catarrh, leafness, toothache and a humdred other diseases. These are the facts and figures given to the farmers of Ontario to cure their physical ills, I suppose. Now, we know what Hamlin's Wizard Oil is, we know that it is only a quack remedy, and by the same parity of reasoning I think the people of Canada will come to the conclusion that the remedy given in this pamphlet to cure Canada's political and commercial ills, is just alout as reliable as Hamlin's Wizard Oil, and is just as likely the cure their commercial and political ills ats the oil is likely to cure their physical ills. Well, the Canalian farmers have taken them at their word, they have julgeel them and sent then to the left haml of the speaker, and they have sent the Conservative party back to the right hand of the Speaker. Now, the hom. gentleman who has just taken his seat told us that in western Ontario there is now such prosperity ats is said in this House to exist, amb he has told us that the trade of Canala has fallen off hetween 1 sis and 1891 , and therefore that is cridence that the comatry wants some change. Now, if the hom. gentlenian had only looked a little further into his figures he would have seen that from the time the Reform party came into power in $18 / 4$ up to the time they left power, the trade of (anada greatly lecreased. In $18: 3$ when the Right Hom. Nir Jolin A. Mathomahd !2s. Then the Mackenzie Bowermnent came $^{2}$ into power and when they left our export trable had fallen to sil.t!1.2n. The total import trate of (aunda in 1503 wats sids,011, isis our import trate was sun, osi, ist, whereas in 18,3 it was $$ 128,011,281$, showing that the export and the import trale of Ganala went lownwarls constantly during the time that the Mackenzie Cosermment was in power, and since 1 isis it has been gradually coming up until it has reached its present great proportions. At the present time our total import and export trade amomes to Sels, (Mn), (ONO, almut the same as it was in 1503, when Sir .lohn A. Macionald and party left ottice. The hom. gentleman who has just taken his seat drew a comparison between the comdition of things in Manitola and the combition of things in Southern Dakota, and he toll the people why it was that southern Dakota had settled so much more rapidly than Manitohat. He drew a comparison to the effecer that the farmers of Dakota would get 2.3 cents a lonshel more for their putatoes, and 30 cents a bushel more for their barley than they could get in Manitola, and therefore that they are more farourably situated than our farmers. I have here a paper pinted in southern Daknta, the very section of comitry ahout which he was speaking. It is healed The Star, Aherdeen, Nouth Dakota, Wednesilay, March 23 rd, 1892. This is what it says aloout the comblition of the people in that comntry :

[^28]Then they go on aml talk aloout another part of the country:
-The Ners culls the efforts of the Star to show the peoplle ${ }^{e}$ the real condition of affairs in the state by publishing the number of mortgage foreclosured 'calamity politics,' and says'it sets upa howl-a wail, that would perhapebe pitiable if there were any one to weep besides the holders of the mortgages on these vacant farms, for in nearly every instance when a murtgage is foreclosed it is becanse the mortgaror has abandoned the land and in most instances left the country: Dur esteemed contemporary proves too much. Why have these men left? This is the marden spot of the world: and the finer ciaims settlers are leaving at the rate of.j.mai a sear."

Where are they going \% Wer to Canala, over to that ionl-forsaken country where they get 25 tents a hashel less for their potatoes than the sell for in the Enited States, and where they get 30 cents a hashel less for their harley. They are learing bakota at the rate of $i,(\mathrm{MN})$ a year and coming over to Manimba and the North-West Territories. Xow. I think when the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Me.Millan), attempts to prove that the farmers from southern Dakota are in a hetter comdition than the famers of Manitobatam the NorthWest Territories. he had better take his proof from some other source than the one from which he took it to-night. The hon. member says that the chattel mortrages in (inada indicated the comoliton of the famers, and he gave a comparison between the namber that existed in the smmmer and the number that existed late in the fall of the same season. No man has a better opportunity of ascertaining the combition of the farmer than has the hon. memher for Huron (Mr. Mc.Millan), becanse, I moderstand, he is an inspector for a loan company. I ask him to look at the reports of his own company for last fall, the previons fall, and two or ihree years lefore that. What does the report say? That the payments on mortgages are satisfactory, that the company has had very little trouble in collecting money, that the payments were better than at any time in the history of the company for a great many years. This, indeen, has been the report year after year, not only of the company which the hom. gentleman represents, but of the different loan companies in Foronto, the Canala Permanent, the liestern, and any of the companies haning money to the (analian farmers, particularly in (Ontario. every one without exception last fall stated that the payments were better than hefore, that there were very few payments behind, that there were very fen forechosures, aml that the companies had verylittle trouble in obtaining their money. The hom. gentleman went on to ask, where did the agricultural products of Canala go: He sain our natumal market is in the United States and mot Englanl. and he gate a few lines from the farm to show that the farmers market is in the United States, and not in England. Take his friend, Mr. Awrey. The hom. gentleman was very unfair during the late elections becanse. in making a comparison hetween the value of the Finglish :narket and the value of the Cnited States market for the Canadian farmer. he took a few ines in which the Canadian farmers would be lenefited by the Canadian market, but he very eonveniently omitted several important lines on wheh mach larger prices are paid in Fag. land, and which shows it to be the only good market the farmer possesses. I have hefore me a comparative statement of the products of the farm sent to the two markets, and that was what the hon. member for Huron professed to give when he stated that we sent to Gireat Britain of agricultural prodacts to the value of $\operatorname{Sin}, 000,000$ and to the United States to the value of $5(0,000,0(0)$. I do, not know where the hon. gentleman got his figures, they are not to be foumd in the Trade and Navigation Returns, and unless he culled them from a very obscure source, or invented them, I camot umlerstand where he obtained them. The Trande and Navigation Returns show that agricultural products of Canala in the following lines-and these lines may be failly said to include all the lines which the (imalian farmer has to sell :-Cattle, sheep, mutton, swine, pork, hacon and hams, beef, lard, tallow, lutter, cheese, poultry, beans, eggs, wheat, harley, oats, pase, potatoes, oatmeal, apples, rye, vegetables, vegetables canneal, horses, hay, hides, wool, hran, seeds, straw, Hourmeal, flax, meats canned, hemp, tohacoo leaf, fruit cammed, were sent last year to direat member for Huron (Mr. Mc. Nillan) gave the value as $\mathrm{S},(\mathrm{MN}),(\mathrm{MO})$. What was the value of similar prollacts sent from this comatry to the United States last year: Omly slo.s:3.(Mn). Surely the market which returned us sol.(MN).(MA) is a more profitable one than the market which brought us back $\leqslant(2,0(M),(M)$ ). These figures show ummistakably that our most important market is England. When Mr. Awrey made up the statement, which was quoted by the hon. member for Huron, he took only these items: horses, sheep: poultry. barley, beans, hay, malt, potatoes. eggs. hides, worl, fias, rye, hemp, tohacco leaf. camed fruit: and these, he said, were the pronlucts of the Ganalian farmer which he harl tor export. These are, however, only a few of the lines which we export with benefit. In these lines to which I have just referreal, as eompiled by Awrey. we exported to the United States the value of by that course of reasoning Mr. Awrey endeavored to convince the Canadian farmers that the Amerian market is the natural market for the Camarlian farmers and that it can be secured by anloptins at system of marestricted reciprocity. It is a most minfair line of reasoning. and cammot be maintained. The hon. member for Huron talked about some of the lines in which the Canadian farmer would le henefited if we had unrestricted reciprocity. He referred to hinding twinc. and said a great injustice Was done inecatuse bimblay twine was not almitted here free. But I was told, and I heiieve it to be correct, that the price of hinding twine is fixed in New York both for the United States and Cianalia. Curestricted reciprocity, therefore, would not leare us better off than we are to-day, because our farmers coull not oltatin it for less than the American farmers. But at comparison of the prices last sea. son in the United States and Canada shows that it is sold quite as cheap in Canala as in the United States. In my section it was retailed at lo! cents: per pound, and it could lee bought in packages of 2.: llas. or low llos., or any quantity. A farmer in Dakota writes me that the twine they constantly use there cost $13 \frac{1}{2}$ and 14 cents for the past season. Surely, then, it would not be beneficial to the Canadian farmer if we oltained American binding twine free of duty when it can be bought here for [10., cents as against 10, 13 and 14 cents in the United States. The member for Huron has informed the House that a great boon would le conferred on our farmers if we got the American market for our horses. For the last 10 years the American horse market hasleengrowing worse and worse. Ten years ago we sent 43.000 horses to the United States, ats compared with $17,0 \times 0$ the year lefore the McKinley tariff came into operation. The fact is the Americans are raising more horses than they want, and electricity and traction power are taking the place of horses to the detriment of the horse trade. We have been toll that there is no demand for Canadian horses here, and it is not worth while raising them. Let me read the following extract from a new:spaper which will be at sufficient argument to this:

" Brlssels Morse Faik.

" Bressel.s, Oxr. March 3rd.-The Brusels monthly horse fair, hed to-day, was the most successful one ever hed. The town was packed with farmers and the marketable horses of all grades were very plentiful. Some fine specimens in heasy draught were offered. One team yas sold for ; 300 . The medium class, general purpose, brought from $$ 100$ to $$ 150$ each, and roadsters about $$ 120$ up. Nearly all that were for sale changed hands. There were twenty buyers present. The next fair will be on the 3lat of March.'
We are told by hon. gentlemen opposite that the horse trade is entirely done in the Province of Ontario, becanse we have not unrestricted recipro. city. but that extract which I have read does unt show that after all we have such a bad market for our horses. I flo mot intend to say much alout lambs. hecallse the price of lambs is about the same as it was hefore, and the Mckinley Bill did not atficet it at all. The hon. memher from Huron (Mr. Mc:Millan) said that we now diseriminate against the mother comutry, and that discrimination combl not lee in oljection to mestricted reciprocity. He attempted to prove his statement by mayg that we brought in more free goonds from the Cinited states than we did from Fagland. It is plain to any sensible man in the House that it is not discriminating against the mother country when we bring in the same line of gooms from inth comatries under the same rate of tariff: The hom. gentleman also told us that cattle were shipped from Boston last year, which were bought in Canala, ame, therefore, that we do not enjoy such an exceptional atd antage in the British market wer the Americans, by reason of the privilege of somding our cattle into England without heing ocherlulen. It is a fact well known to every one who hatis taken any interest in the matter, that the Canadian farmers must suffer very materially if our cattle were placed on the same footing in the English markets as are the American cattle. The hon. member for Huron (Mr. Mc.Millan) stated that he himself is engaged in the cattle trade, and that when his som went over to England with shipments last year, he told him to enquire the difference Letween the price of the United States cattle ans the Canadian cattle in the old country market, and that his son reported that there was a difference of sl.an to $\$ 2$ a head. The hon. gentleman is speaking of the prime fat cattle sent from the United States and the same class from Ganala, but that is not the class of cattle which we would suffer most on account of, if Camada was scheluled in Euglam. We would suffer most in the exportation of our stockers. We sent to Eugland the year before last $1.23,000$ head of cattle and out of this number 90, (n) 0 were stockers, animals which were not fit to be killed or put into the market as beef, but which were sold to the English and Scotch farmers to he fattened by them. The United States exporter's are obliged to kill their cattle when they land in England, and when we put prime fat cattle on the Fnglish market it does not make very much difference, lecause they could be killed on the day they land as well as any other time. The advantage which we possess wer the Anericans is that we can keep our cattle longer in England before disposing of them. For instance, if a shipper of Canadian cattle struck a band market in England he conld keep them until there was a gool market and higher prices, add he would receive the benetit, while the American catthe would have to be killed and disposed of within the time limit fixed by the British Govermment. It is in the line of stockers. which are sent to bughand in large numbers. that we derive the greatest lemefit, from the fact of our not heing scheduleal. The United States cammot ship their stonkers to the Faglish market, because the sootch and Finglish farmers camot loy then as they do our stockers. and put thell out on grass and fatten them. That is where the (anadians reap the adrantare and this means alomit sill to si: a heat. The member for North Wellington (Mr. Mc:Mullen' toh us the other misht that unrestricted recipmocity would not necessarily compel us to be setheduleil in England: he said that we cond have quarantine regilations aroumd Canaila the same as we hate to-day. Let me print out to him hew his argument is entirely wrong in this respert. There are 3 astates in the American mion and in only three of them has plenor-pmenmonia ever been known to exist, but notwithstand ing that the entire United states is scherluleal in the Finglish market. They have quatantine laws aromil every state in the Cuion, and althongh plewropmenmonia has omly been known to exist in three states. yet each of the 36 states is scheduled. and so would Canadia he scheduled also if we had free trade with the C'inted states and the Americans were allowed to semi their cattle in here free. I believe that the cattle trade would be effiectually destroyed if we had unrestricted reciprocity. I do not think that it is necessary for me toreply to the arguments of hon. gentlemen opposite. liecause the pronouncei verdict of the people of canada has been such as not only to convince this House, but to convince every reasonalile man in this comntry, that the policy of the Opposition is mot the policy the comutry wants. Hon. gentlemen opposite adrocated at one time commercial mion, and the people pro. nounced against that : and then they airocated unrestricted reciprocity, against which the people of the comntry also pronounced themselves. They tell us that the National Policy is a failure, hut the fact that the people of the country want it and rote for it is the hest argument to refute that statement. Why was the National Policy first brought into existence? It was to protect the markets of Canala for the Canadian people, and to raise a revenue. Has it been a failure in raising a revenue? No. Has it heen a failure in keeping the Canalian market for the Canadian people? No: becaluse we find that the year lefore the National Policy was introducel we imported $7,387,000$ bushels of corn for home constumption, and the next year we imported only $\because, \mathbf{0}(10,100)$ bushels, showing that the Niational Policy made a market for over j, (M) (K)(M) bushels of corn for the Canadian farmers. The year before the National Policy, we imported oats to the extent of $2,162,000$ bushels and the year after the National Policy we imported only $7 \overline{6}$, (KK) bushels, showing that over $\mathbf{2 , 0 0 0}, 000$ lushels of oats were reguired from the Canadian farmers to supply our own people. more than was required hefore the National Policy was in force. Whatever lenefit the farmers received from that was because of the operation of the National lolicy. The year before the National l'olicy was introduced we imported was intronluced we imported only 14, , $2(4)$ bushels, showing that the National Policy gave the Canadian for their wheat. I think that is the best argment to refute the statement of hon. gememen opposite that the National Policy does not wive a home manket to the Canalian farmer. Now let us take amother important line in which the (antalian farmer is interested, and I will give the Honse the fullowing tigures in commeetion with it:-

We raised the duty on meats to 3 cents a pouml, except upon mess pork, and the first year of the operation of that dinty we find that we imported omly lis,i-2,2lol lbs., showing that there were kept out hy the tariff $1+,(1)$, (MN) Ins.. which hat to be supplied hy the Canadian farmers instead of by the United states. We did not raise the duty to 3 cents upon mess pork and I wonld like todraty the attention of the fiovernment to that particular item, because it is a most important one and one on which 1 think we should raise the duty to-day to 3 cents perpoumel, the same as other meats. The line of pork upen which the duty was not raised sutficiently high is the kind we find coming into this conntry yet. Before the duty was raised we hrought in after the chaty was raised we brought in 11 , (ano, (NX) lls., showing that the duty was not sutficiently high to keep it out, and to emalle the Camadian farmers to supply it to the Canarlian people, insteal of the Americans sending it in here. But the other lines, hacom, hams, shouhlers and sides, were kept out nearly entirely. Beef, salt and fresh, was kept out nearly entirely. They hal the Canadian market to the extent of $14,0(0),(0) x_{0}$ llos. in one year, and if we harl raised the duty to 3 cents a pound all aromm, it would have given us that market and $\overline{\mathrm{O}},(\mathrm{ON}),(\mathrm{ONO} \mathrm{l}$ lhs. more. I have a letter here written by Hately Bros., of Chicago, to one of their operatons in this country in this line, and it proves what we have heand throughout the comntry. This letter says:
" Mf arket very dull. but feeling somewhat firmer. Unless you intend shipping this pork we advise taking a fair profit, as we believe it will ultimately sell at a very low price. The consumptive demand for mese pork has fallen off to almost nothing. Contract pork is not moving at all. of to aimost nothing. Contract pork is not moving at all. barrel. We believe in higher prices generally for provisions, and should not be surprised to see May pork sell again at $\$ 10.50$ or possibly $\mathbf{3 1 1}$, but ultimately we believe it will take extremely low prices, say $: 7$ to $\$ 8$ per barrel, to force our large stocks into consumption.'
Now, if the duty had been raisen to 3 cents per pound or 56 a harrel, to that extent this cheap pork from the western states would le kept out, and the Canalian farmer womld have his own market for pork. We are told that the National Policy has done no gool. The hom. member for south Horon (Mr. McMillan) tells us that whatever it hat lone for the country, it has done mothing for the Canalian farmer. I womld like to ask when his friends ever attempted to ion anything for the Canalian farmer. When the Mackenzie diovemment was in prower there was a duty of 1.5 per cent on manufactured gools, hat there was no dhaty on the pronluctsof the (analian farmer. The Mathemaie Govermment increased this duty or munfactured grods to $17 \frac{y}{3}$ per cent, but left the Canarlian farmerout of consideration altogether. The only panty that ever endearoured to iloanything for the (anadian farmer was the conservative party when it came into power in lsis. When the Conservative diorermment found that the Americans were competine against the (anadian famer in hisomon market and keeping him ont of their market, they put at laty on wheat. prork. cattle. horses and ahmost every other prohluct of the farm which canae from the western states into (amalat. A few lines were left out, and I think we ought to have a duty put on those lines to alont the same extent as the Americans have imposed duties upen them. (1h horses we ought toput about $\$ 30$ a head, hecaluse at the present time thereare thousanls of horses coming into ( amada from the western states and taking the Hanitoha market which ought to be kept for our own famers. The Americans are bringing in their horses at a low price. becanse they are very cheap in Dakota and the other westem states, valuing them at $\mathbf{8} 30$ or $\mathbf{S} 40$ a heal and paying 20 per cent on them, which amomes to almost modaty at all: and in addition to those which the b hing in throngh the customs. 1 am told that they smuggle in many others. Again, we ought to have a duty of is cents: a dozen on eggs. as 1 believe the reason egges are so low in price in the (inanlian market at present is that daring the last few months large consiguments of American eggs have heen brought into Montreal and Toronto and lowered the prices. We should shut out from our market these imerican eggs hy imposing a duty of i cents a dozen upon them, and then we would he treating ourneighbours just in the way in which they are treating us. The tirst party that ever attempted to do anything for the camadian farmers was the Conservative party. It was that party that gained for them the recipracity treaty of 18.54, whatever henefit it may have heen to them. It was that fiovermment that gave them the National Policy, the only protection they ever hal. The Conservative (iovermment legislates for every nationality, class and creed ; it rloes not set class against class : and the voice of the comntry is with us, as is evidenced by the fact that in alumes every election which has taken plate since the general election a supporter of the fiovermment has been sent to this House. If we hal a general election to-lay. and the Opposition maintained their present policy which they have alvocated for the last few years, it is almost safe to say that they would be wiped out of existence. After every general election they have either changed their learler or their prolicy. In 18 - 8 they were defeater, and they changed their leader: in 188: they were defeated, and they changer their policy ; in $18 \times 5$ they began to introluce commercial union, hat they failed to carry the comentry, and their leader left them in disgust: in the late general election they were lefeated again on their scheme of unrestricted reciprocity, and I leclieve that they will shartly change lorth their leanler and their porlicy. I helieve that in a few months, umestricterl reciprocity will be forgoten as completely as those who have heen laid in the graveyards of the country, and then perhaps they will apply for another policy to their ohl friend at ilt Broalway, where they got their present policy. But to-day their ohd leader and their old policy have looth failed: and if they appealed to the country to-day I think they would he without a representation in this House. They are always telling the (imadian people what they are going to do in the future. They are always living in the future insteal of the active present: and when that future comes it brings no more consolation for them than they have had in previons elections. If they do not change their whole policy, if they do not seek for a more patriotic and loyal one. if they slon mot try to get better men into their ranks, insteal of increasing influence and force, they will timd their party growing smaller and mone insignificant. until at last they will scarcely lee known liy the name of a pats in the bominion of (imarla.

Mr. LANDFRKIN. Mr. Speaker, the hom. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) who has just sat down spoke alont the possibility of our cattle being scheduled in Englaml if our policy was in rogue. There is a feeling that if some hon. gentleman had raised the question in the House while the hom. gentleman was speaking, he wouh have heen scheduled, becamse, at one time, we had not a guormin. I like that speech of his; I think I like it better every time I hear it. I have heard it sevead times. I was able to stame it, abthough there were only three of his friends who were welling to staml it to-might. He has collected a gome many facts. and I wonder that his friends would not stay with myself and my leader, and the other hon. gentlemen who are here, to have listened to that speech. once more at least. That :peech may le calculated to do a great eleal of goond in the country: but it loes not seem to take a great holl of his friemels in the House. That is ilhome all the criticism that I will do myself the honour to make upon that able speech. I think I will allow that to go down to history without further olservation. Speaking of the policy of the Liberal party and of the leader of the Libetal party, if there was ever a thane in the history of the Reform party when I was proud of my leader 1 am proul of my lealer to-night. I am not only sanguine abont my lealer. lut am sanguine alont his policy. I believe it is a policy which will prevail in the country and I believe when it does the exodus will cease and those who love and-desire the welfare of Canala will see a relound given to her institutions which every lover of Canada would like to see put in motion to-diay. There is vitality in the policy we alvocate in opposition to the stagnant one we have had for the last eleven years. We were promised that a high protective policy would stop the exolus. Why, Sir. we have lost more people in tell years under the National Policy almost than we have kept in the country. We have spent $\mathbf{B 3 , ( 0 0 ) , ( 0 )}$ ) to bring immigrants to besites the immigrants, as well amd half our natural increase. I have occisionally hearl our friends opposite talk of us as the apostles of blue ruin, because we drew attention to the nmmbers of our people who were leatins one commtry athl to the decay of our industries. Well, let the read the National Policy resolution upon which our high protective tariff was hased :
"Be it resolved that this Homse is of oninion that the welfare of Canala requires the adoption of a national police, which, by a judicions readjustment of the tariff. will benefit and foster the agricultural, the mining the manufacturing and other interests of the Dominion : that sach a policy will retain in Camada thousamds of our fellow countrymen now obliged to expatriate themselves in search of the employment denied them at home.
Was there any hut ruin in this: Has the party Which got into power on this bue ruin erg. the right to turn around amd talk to those gentlemen who laboured in the interests of the conntry, and conducted it honestly, and gave it what we want now, honest govermment: Does it eome well ont of their mouths to talk about blue ruin :
-Such a policy will restore prosperity to our strupsling industries, now so sadly, depressed. will mevent Canala from being made asacrifice market, will cacourage and develon an active interpmincial trade, and moviny as it onght to do in the direction of a reviprocity of tarifts with our neighbours. sufar as the varied interest of Canada may demand, will greatly tend to prorotre tor this country eventaally a reciprocity of trade.
Reciprocity of tarifts. What dial our Ministers meet at Washington the other day? What was the borie that startled them: They met there their offispring. reciprocity of taritfs and then the Minister of Wiar sommied the bugle, and the three giants retreated quickly as they could. The intea of reedprocity of taliffs is the acme of the Niatimal Policy resolution. It is that on which it was built, and When they went to Witshington am? salw their oftspring, that political monstrosity, they hurve: away with all the speed possible: During last session it was with pain and regret to the people of this country that the First Vinister die: 1 After his reath it became inc:umhent on His Excellency the fiovernor 1 ieneral to call upon some one to. leal the Honse. It is sail he called upon the present Minister of Justice. and that hon. gentleman refused, as he states himself, to act as Premier. I will not make this statement on my own authority, but will quote you a letter which If real in the (ittawa ('ifiz"." the other morninge. It appeans some gentleman in (algaty wrote to him asking him the yuestiom, and the hom. gentleman replied, with that jumsprulence which shouh chanaterize a Minister of Instice, and one who once octupied a seat on the bench, from which, aceorling to onr Conservative friends, he mate a descent when he came down into the ranks of the party with which he is now associated, hecause in his early life he was trained muler that great Liberal statesman Joseph Howe, and it is a singular thing the Conservatives camon get a leater of their own growing. They appear to have mo faith in those belonging to their own ranks. hat reeruit their leaders from the Liberal ranks. Here is what the hon. gentleman sail in that letter :
${ }^{\cdot}$ Sir,-Thanks for your kindness in sending me this cutting. The man who would assert that I have been intriguing to procure an office which I have just refused must be a fertile liar or a hopeless fool, and in either case is unworthy of nutice. Any one who supposes that Mr. Abbott. is not actually, as well as nominally, Premier, know: nothing of him or his colleagues. My opinion about the premiership bas not changed. except that I holl more strongly than ever that Mr. Abbott is a man for the place.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. "The man."

Mr. LANDERKIN. "A man" I got from a letter in the Cition.

Sir JoHS THOMPSON. I do not care where Minister of Justice bad a powerfal eonception of you got it. The letter I wrote was " the man for the position," and that is the way it was published everywhere except in the Cition.

Mr. LANDFRKIN. Of course. I actept the hongenteman's statement as to that. and read it as amended.

Sir JOH. THONPSON. You had hetter.

Mr. I.ANDFRKIN. "Mr. Ablott is the man for the place." Now, we heard the Minister of Justice speat last night, and we heard his followers speak of hating great fath in the country. Well, if the Minister of dustice were offered the premiership of the country why did he :efuse it: Hat he lost faith in the cointry or the party hehind him? What is the reason of his refusal! Was he not willing to serve when called upon loy His Excellency? Wis it hecause he lost faith in the country: or , lid he fear the integrity and loyalty of the hoys behind him if he were chosen ats Premier: That is a question for them to decide. After that the (owernor . Went with his lantern into the valults of the senate where he fonm another leater in Mr. Abrott. Who also was brought up in the Liberal ranks. The fovernor did not look further in the House of Commons it may be noticed. He might perhaps have thought that the otiers would not refuse if he asked them, so he went to the Senate, and there he foumi Mr. Ablott. Mr. Abbott Was as Liberal born, and consequently they entreated him to lead the Liberal-Conservative party, hecanse they thought he had been well brought "1p. Then another thing which recommented him tw them and would make him very strong with the Ancrican people was that his views had been some time ago in farour of amexation. That is one thing which commenderl him to His Excellency and the party. It was anmonncel to the country and to the House that, immediately after the session, a reorganization would take place and a rery strong and powerful govermment would be formed. They hat a great many supporters in the Honse. and after the session they went up to P'erth to jubilate with one of their supporters on the completion, I lelieve, of the Tay Canal. A number of the Dinisters were there. It was all right that they should go there amd should make speeches, and 1 find from their own newspapers that they did make speeches there. The Minister of Justice spoke, and I suppose he spoke for Mr. Abmot, the Premier, and he said there would be a reorganization of the Cabinet. I read this in the limpior. 1 maty tell the hon. gentleman that I de not read the Empiore every day. It must have been due to my misfortunes in not reading it every day that I did not see the letter to which he has referred last night. At all events I real the Eimpior on that occasion, and I read the hon. gentleman's speech. I suppose it was a just speech. At any rate it was a moilest speech, but was scarcely what you would expect from a Minister of Justice. He said that the Goverument would meet Parliament with the strongest Calinet that ever met Parliament since Confederation. The reorganization was to be so thorough and complete, and in conjunction with the giants they already had in the Cabinet, other giants were to be introduced to make it the strongest Cabinet since Confederation. I thought over that statement, and I did think that the the greatness of those hy wom he was surrounded. They had a good start. They had Mr. Abloott, who was a Liheral born and bred. They had the Minister of Justice, who was a Liberal until a little while ago: and then the others, I think, were nothing hot the old Conservative material. I think they had a majority of that element. I ran my mind over the men who had hell power in that (iovernment since Confeleration. Not the Liberal Government but the others. Well, Sir John Macdomall is not here : Sir (ienrge Cartier is not here : Sir Alexamler Camplell is not here : the Hon. Thomas White is not here : Sir Inavil Macpherson is not here: the Hon. James Melonald is mot here : Sir A. T. Galt is not here: Sir Francis Hincks is not lere : Nir Leonamel Tilley is mot here. neither is Nir John Rose here.

An hom. MFMBER. Nor Sir Chatles Tupper.
Mr. LANDERKIN. Did I forget sir (harles Tupper : It is wonlerful that I should forget Nir Charles Tupper, sir charles never forgets himself or his family when the estimates are being prepared, but he is mot here. liet the Minister of Justice told the people of (inanla, when they all went up to jubilate at the completion of the Tay (amal, that the (:ahinet they woald form would overtopple all these men whose names I have mentioned, that these men who mave gone lefore were hat pigmies to those who were to come in this session. After that the press in Ontario hegan to get somewhat elated. They thought new hood was groing to be introluced, and then the ery went upthat Mr. Meredith was to be bronght int" the Cabinet in order to givean air of respectability to it. Mr. Meredith was bromed for some time. I do not know whether overtures were male to him or not, lecause the Minister of Justice has not tohl us that, but Mr. Meredith did not come in, and the Premier could only find one member in this House to take rank with those intellectual giants who are now in and that gentleman is the Minister of Public Works. He does. it is true, look something like a giant ami io some extent he topples over some of those who were in lefore. Then they had to go outside the Honse and take in a gentleman who had leeen defeated in his constituency by an overwhelming majority, aml he was to supply all the brains of those gentlemen who had gone before and were no longer here, so as to make the strongest (iabinet since Confeleration. That is Mr. Patterson. I have nothing to say against Mr. Patterson, hut I do not know that I could say as much of him as is implied by the statement of the Minister of Justice, but I may not be as gooll a judge in this mat. ter as the Minister of Justice. Then they refer to the bye-elections. If I were in the fiovernment, I would never mention the name of Lonis Riel or the bye-elections of 189?. I believe that, when the history of those bye-elections is known, it will form the darkest page of Camalian history. I notice that our friends opposite do not jubilate very much over these bye-elections. I think they are afraid of an explosion in regarol to them, and they are like people who stand on the brink of a volcano, and they do not know whether to laugh or cry over the results of those bye-elections. I was in a county where one of those bye-elections took place, and I heard the statement that the Govermment har been reorganizen, that they had kept that dreadful man Mr. Meredith, that fearful man, that terribly bad man Mr. Merelith, out of the Cabinet and hall put Mr. Patterson in, and that, if Mr. Patterson and his friends were defeated, the fovernment would have nothing to do but to take Mr. Meredith into the Cabinet yet. some of the people did not believe that Mr. Meredith wass such a great man as was represented. At any rate, he was selected to work for the ele ation of the member for London, and he was in Lomdon for a week, and during that week he did not appear on one platform to speak in support of Mr. Carling. The people there paid him so much attention that he actually complained of their attentions through the press. And this is the strength which has been added to the party. This is the powerful Government that meets Parliament at this session. Then the last Parliament was dissolved, for what? It was for the purpose of making a reciprocity treaty, and it was said that, immediately after the election. commissioners would go down to Washington and make a treaty which would give the farmers the adrantage of reciprocity. For two days they kept up thecry that they were going for reciprocity. And did it appear on the part of the Government or their supporters that they were in earnest in doing this? Was not this an evidence to the (iorernment that the current of public opinion was running in this direction, and was not this the reason why the Govermment dissolved Parliament in order to keep in the current? What did they do to set the current astray" What did they do to prevent the possibility of entering into atreaty? The Minister of Finance says that Mr. Blaine treated them courteously. The Minister of Finance seemed to be surprised that Mr. Blaine should treat them courteously, and why: Immediately after the dissolution of the House, Mr. Blaine and the President of the United States were cartornel from one end of this Dominion to the other-they were ridiculed and saticised in every possible way, although the fovernment had gone down on their knees, as it were, to the United States, and had dissolved a British Parliament in orter to have the elections before the time Parliament had expired. As soon as they did that they began to cartoon the Presilent of the United States and Mr. Blaine, the Premier of the United states. Is that the way to enter into a treaty with the United States? Is that the way this Ciabinet. composed of giants, wants to make a treaty? Is that the way a Cabinet of the strongest character that has ever held power in this country since Conferleration attempts to make a treaty : Dissolve the House to make a treaty; cartonn the President and Premier of the nation with which they are going to negotiate to make a treaty ; satirise them in every possible way with great, hig flaming posters and cartoons of an abominable character; ridiculing the leading men of the country with which they are going to make a treaty! I am not surprised that the Minister of Finance said he was surprised that they were treated courteously. 1 suppose that is what the Finance Minister had in his mind when he spoke the other day, he supposed these cartoons had not been forgotten on the part of Mr. Blaine, and therefore he was afraid they would be treated discourteously. However, we are glad to know that Mr. Blaine did not do that. Bute there was a time when they went there before.

They went there last spring, they did not make a treaty then, and they dif not stay there long. They did not go far in their treaty, and they did not go far before they found out the ditficulties of making a treaty. They did not get the ear of Mr. Blaine that time. They did not go far before they found out they hat grave difficulties to overcome in the way of making the treaty. There were byeelections coming on, and they delayed the meeting matil after the elections. There was another thing the Minister of Jastice saill last night. It appears that it takes a telegram six months to come from Washington here, or at least. it is six months hefore the Minister of Justice gets them. Yom would almost think the policy of this (iovernment wasa canal policy and not in electric policy, keeping up with the progress of this age. They went down on the loth Felnuary, the hee-elections were coming on. The previons time everything was to be kept quiet according to the wish of Mr. Blaine, but this time everything, so far as our Ministers are concernel. was to be kept quiet, mum was the word. They sail to the people: We are going to get a treaty, we are going to get letter narkets for the people of this country, lut our deliberations camot be made known until we meet Parliament, amd we do not intend to meet Parliament untilafter the lye-elections are over. I understand that the Finance Minister went on a platform and told the people that the Ministers were going to Washington to make a treaty. Well, when they got lown to Washingtom, we have from the Minister of Finance a statement of what they did at Washington. It is in his own worls here, and I will read a little of it just to show you how devotedly they were attached to the desire of getting reciprocity with the Cnited states. In the first place the Minister says:

[^29]Mr. Blaine raised that point, and how did they meet it? The deputation stood there, I fancy, in fear and trembling. Their masters who had sent them there, the Red Parlour, had told them: "Thus far shalt thon go and no farther": and when Mr. Blaine propounded this policy, what we desire, and what we believe the people of this country desire, and they would say so if they had a free opportunity of exp:essing their will-when Mr. Blaine raised the question that he was prepared to talk to them about, that is to stay, reciprocity on unrestricted lines, then they began to shiver, then they began to quake, they began to wonder what excuse they were going to make. We find this proposal of Mr. Blaine was met in this way :

[^30]Mr. splaker. My han friem. I hope is not moine to real the whole of that specth. It refers to a former dobate. Though I am quite willing to give him the utmost latitule, still the hom. gentieman can hardly rean the whole of that speech.

Mr. LANDERKIN. I guite agree with you: I ath rily ering to real a few lines.
"When that noint came up, the Camadian delegation immediately raised the question and discused it fully and freelv with Mr. Blaine as to what would be the necessary ronditions of such a reciprocity. Did it mean that we were to ase taited States prolucts and manufactures preferential treatment in our conntry and discriminate arainst like articles from cireat Britain and from other parts of the world.

Mr. SPEAKER. Order. The hom. gentleman mast not contimue to fuote from a formed delate.

Mr. LANDERKIN. Will yom let me read alout the ditticulties:

Mr. Sl'FAKER. The hom. gentleman may state what he pleases. but he most not rean from a former ielbate:

Mr. LANOERKLN. I just Want to state the ditficulty: I will just give you a syonpsis of the rithenlty.

Mr. Sl户AKたR. Oriler.
Mr. LANDERKIN. Very well. then I will let them deal with the ditticulties themselves. As som as Mr. Blane propesel this, then our Ministers showed their ditticulties. the lions in the way. How was our tariff to he made to assimilate with theirs: How were we to raise the revenue: And then they came down on their marrow bones before Mr: Blaine and said: Mr. Blaine, we never hat much experience in these things. Of course we are the strongest Cahinet that ever met Parliament in Canala since Confeleration, but we have mot hat much experience in reciprocity matters. neither to we know very well how to get out of the difficulties of the reveme. Now, Mr. Blaine, we are British subjects. but we do not think it beneath us to come to you for infornation. Yon know. Mr. Blaine. we are protectionists. just like you are and we are only here to hoodwink the people, and we want your assistance, hecause yon hate hal great experience. Now, this is about the way they approached Mr. Blane. These are the utterances of the statesman himself, although 1 ann not able to real them here to-night ly reason of sour ruling. in order to convine yon of the sommbess of the inferences which 1 draw from them. But I think the people of this comitry can draw their own inferences. and can see clearly that the Ministers went to Washington only to see how they cond prevent any treaty heing made in order to show the people that it was impossible to set a theaty made. And so we are to he excluded from the American markets by reason of their cartoons of the pulbic men and the President of the United states, by reason of all the friction that they can create in order to disturb trade so that the United States may possibly be led to retaliate againsc the trade of our people. I do not belisue there is a member of this Gorernment who desires reciprocity with the United States. I helieve they know full well that it would le fatal to their rule, and that it would he the end of their rule. Reciprocity with the United States would abolish the Red Parlour and the combines, and they live by the means of the combines and the Red Parlour. This Cocermment could not stand for one day under a treaty of reciprority, which would give our perple freer air and hetter markets, and contrilute in every way to building this comontry as a great nation. We now have the English market. anll hom. gentlemen opposite are never tired of telling us what we can sell in that market. Why, wesmld in that market lefore many of the hom. gentlemen opposite were born. We have ahsolute freedom in that market, and we now want to secure a wider market for the pronlucts of the farm. one more convenient, and the value of our pro. ducts would he enhanced by having two market: instead of one. There is the position, there is mo use denying it. They camot masquerade reciprocity any longer. They camon deceive Parliamant in regatiol to making a rearimency treaty any longer, hecause now they have bolted and inwed the dom against it. They camot take adrantage of that pretense. and since the speech delivered by the Minister of Finance many of our people are learing the country, their hopes areblighted hy that speech and any one looking at the Minister would hardly. imagine he could doso much ruin and drive somany people out of the comery, as he has done since his Bulget speech was delivered. I am a British subject. Camalian born. I shomll like to see a British Government here, one that would not take its tirst lessons in political economy from Yankee Blaine or any other Yankee. I want them to live at the forit of the Throne: I desire them to he British: I wish them to copy the tariff of Buglaml and I wish them tohe british in fact as well as in mame. I fonot wish to see our Conmissioners gring to Washingtom aml saying: Dear Mr. Plane, help ns out of our difticulties: do you know any way in which we can mise the revenuc? It is true that the present tariff has been our policy for years. and it was adopten heanse we were in lesperate strats to s.t. into power. Among the Commissioners who went to Washington was the new Minister of Wia, who was pitcheal out of the Customs by the secretars of stite. He was taken down there for the purprose of protecting the other two Ministers. They did not like again to go with the High ('ommissioner. they had to take the heal of the Militia Department. He (Mr. Bowell) rode the Protestant horse, when in Opposition, but as soon as he got into prower he put the horse in the stahle, sull it died of inamition, for he never had it out a day afterwards. He got into power through the influence of those friends, and he has never done anything for those friemds since. except to procket his salary and lank it every year. When their interests were at stake in this Hons: he was found wanting : and the only thing that he: ever did for the order that elected him was to wote for the passing of the Jesuit Estates Act. I can scarcely imagine one who had been a champion of British connection, when he went to Wishington. and the three Ministers stood or sit down before, or at all events they were courteonsly received by the Premier of the United States, saying: Now, Mr. Blaine, do, for heaven's sake, tell us what we are going to do: tell us how we are going to get out of these difficulties. Do you not see the difticulties, Mr. Blaine? We would like to read what they are. Cannot you help us out of them, Mr. Blaine? What are we going to do: Just imagine Mr. Cilalstone or Lord Salisibury acting thas. Look at the dignitied hearing of Lond salisbing at this time and "

Gritish statesmen when negotiating with other nations. And look at our ministerial gi:ants, who We:e to meet Parliament this session, going lown to Mr. Blane. the Vankee leader, and saying: bear Mr. Blatine, we implore you to help us. to -hom us how we are gring to mise this revenne when this armagement has been mado: gon have hat ineat experience, we hate mot heen in l'arliament very long: we hate been very fremilly to immexing our whole comntry the Cnited states: mir Minister of dustice was formerly yom stamling commel in law : as for ourselves, we have other cords that hind us to your great Repulide: camot vom assist us. British sulojects, to frame a treaty? Xi, plan was fomm. The difficulties were insurmomialle amb the Minister of Wiar someded the bugle. and the giant brigate fell into line and heat a hasty retreat from Witshington and came: homme. The treaty is mil. The work they did Wats a comealy : the temmation of it wats a farce. Evervonly kums it there is mo use attempting to disenise it. The day has come when we must pleatk our mimes plainly ami holdly ame tell hom. - entemen opposite face to face what we think alogut these actions. The Minister of Justice litst night attributed to me something of which 1 hiot mot altogether malerstam the meaning. 1 ann not a laweer, and perhaps 1 donot under stamd legal praseology, hat he used lamernage in regand to a word that I used about a letter which I for mot think was courteons from a gentleman ocoupying his position. The Minister of Finathee had andopted the same tone, and the Minister of Marineand Fisherieshastreated me with some liscourtesy. But these matters make modifference with mix relations to them on relations are mos stmaned. I ilonot earewhat they saty, hat I a all the attention of the Honse to these circumstances in order that hom. gentlemen opposite may deal in a more comrteons manner with hom. gentlemen on this side of the House. On looking intopublic: atfiniss I time that in the reomganiang of this diovemment which was to he so strong and in whichevery important int erest was to he represented, the promisesmatehase not heen fultilled. Wehave a very large export trade in tish, in the products of the forest. in the pronlucts of the mine, aml in agricultural amd mannfacturing products, and during the last fonr Seats we exported from these sources simo.(KN).(KN) of pronlucts. In the formation of this (abinet not a single one of these interests has been considered. There is mot a gentleman in the (abinet who represents the mining, the fishing. the forest, the agricultural or the manufacturing interest. The only accession to the power and strength of the Cabinet has heen made in the legal profession, the Cabinet has two more lawyers this year than last year, and this makes it strong. Now it is composed of seren lawyers, one ex-joumalist, an ex-miller, the Minister of the Interior is a surveyor-I helieve in the Pa,iamm-utary Compraion. The Minister of Inlanl Revemue is entered as a judge: Mr. Carling is a brewer-they were tround to keep him in: So there are two retired juslges in the Cabinet now, but there is not a single representative of these large interests to which I have referred. On the reorganization of the Calsinet, representatives of these imlustries could not le fouml on the back benches, and only lawyers could let taken into the Cabinet. It is a singular thing that after the lige elections they mate hut they tonok calle mot to make it known motil after the elections. It does look tole a contimation of the inleat that this was never intemed as a serious thing amb that this wats all done ats a blind to misleat the people. to aet them ont of their regular way of thinking and lead them to forger the fovernment and what the diovermment hat done in the reckless expempliture of the peoples money. Ne were tol:l that when they introntaced the great Xational lolicy it was to stop the exombas from this conntry. I have alrealy toll ron, and you ahrealy know that the census contioms the statement, that the exombs has been greater umber the high profertive tariff than ever it wats at any perionl within the history of ('manla. Now when the diovermment have failed to get a reciprocity treaty I would like to ask them this : They maised the tiaff for the purpose of getting : reciprocity treaty: they failed to get a recipoocity treaty. and I ask the finermment buw will they lower the duties. will they give the commtry a chance to progers when the abject for which they arowedly raved the duty has heen a fathare: Will they tan the perple less than bhey have been axinge them for the last it rears: will they now sive the country a respite from this high taxation, when they ammonce that their mission has failed and signally failed! They talk about our poliog learling to amexation, but if I were a Tory that is the last question I would ever think of talking about, becanse all along the history of that party vou will find that their policy has tembed, and that their party in many instances has openly adrocated annexation. Fiven now a latge colony of their party in the l'owince of Ontarionare eroing atomm amd fiving lectures in facour of immexation. They say that our policy leats ${ }^{\prime \prime}$ ammexation, and they hate quoted Mr. Blake in reference tothat. I, ion. will puote what Mr. Blake says and hefore doing so I would like to say of Mr. Blake, that with the evilence before him. with the evidence of the operation of the tatiff for 1 ? vears. with all these facts hefore him. I think that Mr. Blake. on a question of that chameter, is as eminently fit to julde as any man that can be fomm in Camarlit. Mr. Bhake is a gentleman of such great cantion that he wats almost timid in lowking into the future. hut take him on evidence. and I think that he is an anthority that camot he gramsaid on at matter of that kind. Here is what Mr. Blake sat: about the National Poliey:
$\because$ The Canadian Conservative poliey has failed to accomplish the predictions of its promoters.

Its real tendence has been, as foretold welve yarsano. towards disintegration and manexation, instead of comsolidation and the maintemance of that British comection of which they claim to be the special guardians.

- It has left us with a small population, a scanty immigrationand a North-Westempty still; with enormone additions to our public debt and yearly charge, an extravagant system of expenditure, and an unjust and oppressive tarift: with restricted markets for our needs, whether to buy ar to sell, and all the host of evils (greatily intensitied by our special condition) thence arising; with trade diverted from its natural into forced and therefore less profitable channels, and with unfriendly relations and frowning tariff walls, ever more and more estranging us from the mighty English speaking nation to the south, our neighbours and relations, with whom we ought to be, as it was promised that we should be, living in generous amity and liberal intercourse.

Worse ; far worse ! It has left us with lowered star-dards of pullic virtue and a deathlike apathy in public opinion : with racial, religious and provincial animositics rather inflamed than southed: with a subservient Parliament an antoratic Executive, dehanched constitnencies and corrupted and corrupting clases: with lessened selfreliance and increased dependence on the public chest :and on legislative aids and possessed withal by a boastfu: jingo spirit far enough removed from true manliness. loudly proclaiming unreal conditions and exagyerated sentimente, while actual facts and genuine opinions are suppressed.
It has left us with uar hame tied, our future eommomised. and in such a plight that, whether wostand or move, we must rum same risks which else we might have "ither deelined or encountered with greater promise of sucees.
.- Fet let us never despair of our comery ! It is a goodly land: endowed with great recuperative powers and vast resurues as yet aimost undeveloped : inhabited by populations moral and religinus, sober and industrinns, firtuons and thrifty, capable and instructed-the descendante of a choice immigration, of men of mark and conrage, energy :and enterprise, in the breasts of whose chideren sili should glow the sparks of these ancestral fires."
These atre words of wislom coming from Mr. Blatke. who as a lawyer stands very high, amd who ats one ahle to express his opinion on evidence has perhaps no equal in this country. Protection is fatal to progress. and it has shown itself to he so in this comitry. The census retmons are the proof of that fact. and there is no gainsaying it. It requires no argment to pare that protection has been deadly to enir progress, that it hats tumed out of traile millions of dollars which should have heen left invested in protitable pursuits. It is calculated to molemane the wealth and to destrov the chanacter of the people of this conntry. It is calenkated to louila up a few industries, hat its operations are hurt ful to the great mass of the people of this commtry. One thing is certain, that if the Liberals were in power and could not get reciprocity, they combl lower the taxts. and that wond he a great boon to the people of this country. And if the Liberals should attain to power, and should be able to negotiate a treaty. as I helieve they would: in the negotiation of that treaty the Liherals would not sateritice (analian dignity uor Canadian intergity to the United States, nor ('analian interests to dieat Britain. There is one thing the people of this country can rely upon, and that is. that the hest interests of Canada will he preserved and protected in any treaty which we will make, and if we hal fair-play in this comontry, we helieve we wouk have an opportunity of making a treaty. Jnst imagine, Mr. Speaker, the way in which the Liheral party is handicapped in this comutry. see the improper use that is made of the means that are at the disposal of the fiovermment. Look at the gerrymander, look at their Franchise Act, look at their patronage, look at the semate, look at the public buildings which they use as instruments of comuption throughout the different ridings, look at their railway subsidies, which are calculated, I believe, not to develop the railway interests but to develop the political interests of the party which is now in power. I believe the day is coming when honesty must prevail in the government of this country. I believe that the people of this country will soon get tired of the means adopted by the present (iovermment, and although gentlemen opposite have succeeded in the hye-elections by the use of means dishonourable and dishonest, which when they are well understood and known by the people it will le found that the small majorities have been won by stuffing the ballot boxes of the free people of this country. I believe that it will be disclosed, and that before very long, that bogus votes have been shoved into the loxes, and that the narrow majorities which are hell hy the Conservative camdidates are hell because of the bogus votes which were shoved into the ballot hoxes hy scoundrels who formed the brigade attached to that party. The idea of holding the hye-elections first in one riding and then a few days afterwards in another, was, If lelieve, to hold them just in time to let this lurgade of bill get from one riding to amother, and to allow them to play their nefarions practices in the dark, up and dowin the line. Probably the people will tind out that the money they nsed has leen taken out of the pockets of the perple of this country. Hon. gentlemen opposite will umlerstand the means that havelreen used: there is not a doubt of that. It is becoming known daily: and these things will go on until I hope the peophe will rise in their might and demand that the fiovernment that rules in this British (Gamada of ours will he an honest govermment. and when honfle and ballot-stutting, ame himing of the electoms, will forever pass away from this comatry.

Motionagreed to: and Honse agrain resohen itself into Committee of supply.

Mr. Me.MULLEN. I Want to know wherher the ordinary supples for this penitentiary are purchased hy temder and whether the lowest temler is always accepted. There are several items in atn. nection with comvict chothing on which I womhl like some information.

Sir JOHN THOMP'SON. Temlers for comsict clothing are called for every year in time for the contracts to be made from the lst of luly. The lowest tender has heen accepted in every case since I have been in the department, with the exception of one case in which there was a difference of a few dollars which were accounterl for in some other way. Practically, the lowest tender was accepten?

Mr. MeMULLEN. I would like to know whether circulars were sent to lifferent partics asking them to tenter, or whether they were alvertised for in the ordinary way:

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Wedonot seml aromm circulars for tenders. We advertise in all the principal papers of Montreal in both languages.

Mr. LALURIER. I notice with great pleasure that of late years the adminisi ration of this penitentiary seems to have been placel on a better. footing than it was a few years ago, when it hal reached a stage very close to absolute disorganization. Yet a statement was made to me privately during the recess that the discipline of the penitentiary was not as good as it might be. I say this with great diffidence, and I would not mention it if I did not find in the report of the inspector a confirmation of the statement. The complaint I have heard is that the guardians of the convicts and the officers generally do not present as good an appearance in point of decorum, manners and discipline as might have been expecterl. It was suggested that probably these men were selected far more for political reasons, to reward political services, than for efticiency. Mr. Moylan seems to confirm this statement when he says in his report at pages $1: 2$ and 13:

Mr. Landerkin.
"A great drawback to the work of reformation is the lack of training and of the essential qualifications in the officers, who are placed in charge of convicts, especially the guards. As a rule, these men have no previous knowledge of the duties which they undertake. They are unacquainted with the various phases and peculiarilies of humin character, and least of all, perhaps, with the nature and disposition of those with whom they are to be brought into daily and homrly contact. Their duties are too continuous and varied, as guards, to allow them time to supply the deticiency under which they labour, as regards the atenuiring of the experience, tact and selfcontrol requisite for the due fultilment of the trust eonfided to them. Hence, those duties are generally disCharyed in a perfunctory amd masatisfactory mauner. They ramont help this: they do their best fur the most pitri, acoorling to their lights. It happens, too, not intramently. that officers give had example to the prisuners in their charge by, the display of ill-temper, by the use of anbecoming and eren of immoral language. amiby otherwise violating the rules which they should rigilly observe. All this has a vervinjurious effect upon gooldiscipline, and upon the minds of the convicts, who are not slow in taking adrantage of any wrong-dong by those to whose care they are contided. What is the remedy for this? Clearly, the appointment of men, better qualified by discipline, education and training for a position of such serious responsibility as a fuard or keeper. The present stimdard. in these essentials. is far tor low.
The inspeetor gines on to saty that even though it is not necessary to increase the expenditure to remumerate these men, their inferiority should not he taken as a reasom why that should not be done. Now, it seems to me that this is a valuable sugges. tion. I mather fear, from the statement made to me. athl from what 1 see in the report of the in. speector, that men are selected to be guards from among uneducated perople. Though, of comse, their education need wot he of a very high chamacter, sa, are of the men appear to be wholly meducated. ahsohately mettered. It seems to me that this is not the proper chass of men from whom those otticers ought to be taken. I do not attirm this as a fact, hut I repeat it as it has been stated to me. If Mr. Moylan satys that the charactor of the men selected for guards is not such as would wamant us in expecting that they would properly discharge their duties, it is a matter which the Dinister should take into consideration with the riew of making an improvement in that respect.
sir foHN THOMPNON. I donot suppose the hon. gentlemanintended to apply the remanks of the inspector to ist. Vincuat de Pathl exelusively. In making his ohservations, that ofticer did not conrine himself to any particular place, and with regard to the partionlar persons referred to, I have never heard that there was any distinction to the disulvantage of the officers there as eompared with those of any other institution. (On the contrary, when I visited that place, from all I heard and satw, the condact of the officers appeared quite as goml as that of the staff at Kingston or Dorchester or British (columbia. I would harily inclule Stony Mountain, becanse there the ofticers have the alvantage of superior training, as far ats discipline is concerned. But with that exception, the officers at St. Vincent de Paul are quite as intelligent and as well informed and fit for their dinties as any to be found anywhere else. At the same time I fully agree with the inspector that we cannot get our officers from as well trained a class as we should, but it is not political interference which is the cause. As far as the management is concerned, we abstain altogether from influencing the warden in the selection of his officers. The Giovernor in Council of course has the appointment of the warden and the reputy warden, but the warden alone appoints his guards and keepers, and until the report is published I do not know the names of these officers. I have in fact the greatest hesitation in even recommending a person from my constituency I think fit for the place, as the warden might suppose I was emtearouring to influence his julgment. It is a mistake to say these men are wholly illiterate. The regulations repuire that they shall have ordinary rudimentary edncation, and they are generally selectel on account of being physically qualitied, active. intelligent men, and it is a great consideration they shomb have some knowledge of discipline. I agree with the views of the inspector as to the necessity of men more highy trained heing engaged, men if possible who have been in the momed police or perhaps in the British amy, who at any rate have some traning and notion of discipline: and can give a better example in learing and conduct and langrage than the ordinary labourer can, and it is principally from the labouring class we have to recruit our guands and keepers. But that camoot he done without increasing everywhere the allowance, amd I am determined, if possihle, to ask Parliament to increase the allowance with the vies of the improvement of the force. I explitined to the hom. member fo, Viamouth that I hoped to present next session a scheme for carry:ng ont some of the views in the report with regand to a new refomatery for some of the younger convicts who are matergoing a first sentence and whose numbers I regret to say are somewhat starthing, and with respect to whom we may failly expect, as the inspector indiLates, there will be herter hope for improvement. if they be separated from the habitual combicts with whom they now have w resort. On both these matters 1 hope to be able to present to the Honse next session a soheme which will carry out, as fiur as possible, the views presented in the report, after hon. members have had time to consider them, but I will only be able to do so if the Honse will generously give me an amount large enongh for that purpose.

Mr. LAURIFR. In the remarks I made a few moments ago, I certainty did mot intend to conver the impression that the alministation of the penitentiary does mot compare favoumbly with that of the other institutions. I never heard anything to that effect, hat simply the remark was made wo me, and no doubt that remark will apply also to the other penitentiaries. There was nothing in particular in the remark except that the appearance of the grard was slovenly : and no donthe if there was some military diseipline in the penitentiary, the administration would be better. Nothing more was conveyed to me. but I was struch with the same remark mi de in the report. There is a good deal in what the Minister says as to the money grant not enabling a better selection of otticers to be made, and I am sure the Honse will not begrudge the necessary money in order to put the administration of our penitentiaries on a better footing.

Mr. MeMULLEN. In the Auditor General's Report, page B-12S, I find that moler the heading of rations, apples were bought at $\$ 5$ a barrel, butter, 1,550 lbs. at 20 cents a pound. I cannot unterstand why the penitentiary should pay such an enormous price, especially if these rations were supplied by tender. Take flour, 370 barrels at $8 \mathbf{5 . 8 0} 80$ : lard, 1.080 lbs. at 10 cents per pround. If the hon. Ninister will turn to the Kingston rations, he will find that lard was bought at ! ! at 3 cents. We know that is the retail price, and it is most singular if temders were called for that the retail price should be paid. Molasses, (ito gailons at 4. cents ; pork, $1,440 \mathrm{llos}$ at 109 cents : pease. $2 l$ bushels at $\Xi 1.0 . \pi$, and I venture to say there has not loen that price paid in Canada during the last twelve months. Potatoes. 121 hushels at $\$ 1.50,1 \times 3$ hushels at $\$ 1.0 .7,8$ hushels at 7.0 cents and $s$ at $\$ 1.10$. Tobaceo, 2,422 lbs. at 48 cents. I suppose the convicts reguire something in the way of tobaceo, hat I think there was no necersity for its costing anything like that. Another item I call attentiontois, Richard( iadbois, retiaed, Sision. 86. I would like to know unler what eircomstances that sum was granted.

Sir JOHN THOMPSOS. He was one of the officers of the penitentiary, and that is his retiring gratuity when he left on the fromm of ill-health. He must have had long service to receive that amount, pronably twenty years.

Mr. MraULLF.N. I presmme that the officers in the penitentiaries can be superammated:

Sir JOHS THODPSON. So: mot umler the rank of depoty warlen.

Mr. Mr.MULLFN. ('an the Minister saty that these supplies were furnished after tembers were asked and unler contracts let:
sir JOHS THOMPSON. Ves. I do say so unequivocally. Of course, some of those articles would differ in price according to the season at which they were purchased. For instance, I think the potatoes to which the hom. gentleman has referred were probably seed potatoes. A considerable quantity of potatoes is grown on the farm of the penitentiary. Then as to egrs, egrs are not used in the penitentiaries except for the patients in the hospital or on Christmas day, when a little betier fare than usual is given to the convicts. I Ho not think the price for butter is extravagant, and there is not mach butter used. All these articles have been supplied by contract and after tenders had heen asked for. It is true that there has been a considerable discrepancy in the past in the prices paid at the different penitentiaries. I have enteavoured to remedy that since the list July, my attention having been called to it, and now the contractor contracts to supply the articles, at the option of the dovernment. to one or all of the penitentiaties in the Dominion at the stipulated price.

Mr. MoMULLEN. I am glal to hear the statement of the Minister: and I hope the result will be that some of these articles will be oltatined at a less cost than in the past. I can moderstand that at some perions of the year supplies would cost more than at others, but I do not remember when hatter was worth 20 cents a pound last year. unless it was ereamery butter, and surely the Goverument are not supplying creamery butter to the convicts in the penitentiaries. In the west of Ontario you can get good dairy butter for 14 cents a pound, and in Montreal it is even less.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The hon. gentleman is evidently not speaking from experience in housekeeping in Ottana.

Mr. McMelles.

Mr. McMULLEN. Surely the hon. gentleman does not get the supplies for the penitentiaries in Ottawa:

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. No, hut the prices are higher in Montreal.

Mr. MoMULLEN. There is no place in Canala where you can buy the ordinary commodities, such as loutter, cheese and peas, as cheaply as in Montreal.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I can only say that if the hon. gentleman will get some one to tender. at that price, I will give him the contract for all the penitentiaries in Canada.

Mr. MeMCLLEN. I have seen the pricesquoted in the Empire. If I know the perion when the hon. gentleman sends out his tenters l will get some one to tender. I will not tender myself. hecause that might put me out of my seat, and I am sure that would be a great loss to the Honse.

Mr. CAMPlBELLL. I do mot think it is a wise provision that any person eontracing should, at the option of the fovermment, be olligen to supply all the penitentiaries. That might safely be provided in regard to the penitentiaries in Gintario or Quebee or the Lower Provinces, hat it would be hardly fair to oblige a mantosuply a penitentiary in British Columbia or Manitolna. I think the prices at which the dovernment have heen haying thour are very high indeed, and I would like to hnow when those contracts expire and for what length of time the tembers are callen fors. I ann sure that I could fumish flour or get it fumished at far less prices. Do the tenders expire on the 1st July?

Sir JOHN THOMIPSON. On the lat Jaly.
Mr. CAMPBELL And they are called for a year.
sir JOHN THOMPSON. For a year.
Mr. (AMPBELL. And then new tenders will he reguired to be put in to the (iovernment about what time:

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. By the 30th Junc. I think, but we advertise extensively.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Could the Minister of Justice tell me about what particular grade of flour is used?

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Strong bakers. I do not know what penitentiary the hon. gentleman has in his mind when he says we pay a very high price for flour. I was under the impression that we got our Hour at a very reasomable rate.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I think the price now paid in this penitentiary is very much aloove the market price.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). I olserve that in the Kingston penitentiary and also umber the one under. discussion we have a vote for a schoolmaster, while in Manitoba we have that combinel with a bospital overseer, and in British Colmmia the vote is for atecountant, storekeeper and schoolmaster. What is the duty of the schoolmaster? Is it to give instruction to some of the younger convicts, and at what time is the instruction conveyed? Is there a day school, or are there classes or what?
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The convicts are formed into classes.

Mr. Paterson (Brant). At night?
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. No, in the day-time, at various hours of the day, and during the time when it would not he reasonable that they should have that amount of recreation, from half an hour to an hour.
Mr. PATERSON (Brant). Is that the younger convicts:
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. All those convicts who are illiterate. In Kingston, the duties have heen distributed among several officers, it being found more convenient there to have the prisoners continuously unler the charge of the guards. At Stony Mountain the schoolmaster is also the hospital keeper, and it is found there to be more convenient to group them all. The duties of hospital overseer there are not very great, whereas in Kingston the hospital overseer has more than he can attend to.
Mr. FIIITT. I see under the heading of St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary, there are certain charges for travelling, but there are no charges of a like kind with regard to the Dorchester Penitentiary.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The penitentiary of St. Vincent de laul is about 13 miles from Montreal, and the warden has frequently to visit Montreal on husiness. Dorchester Penitentiary is in the village. and the nearest city is half a day's journey away.
Mr. Bolfers. I see in the accounts that lamp wicks are charged at 90 cents a dozen, and lamp chimneys 20 cents a piece. I sell these things myself. and I camot understand such high prices.
sir JOHN THOMPSON. There are different sums there. I do not know the reason of the variety, unless some of them are for lanterns which are placed in conspicuous positions about the yard for lighting at night. A large variety of wicks are required, it is a wicked place.

Mr. BOWERS. The very largest wick that would hurn out half a gallon of oil in night, retails for five cents.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. We do not want a wick like that.

Mr. BOWEPs. For that reason these must have been the smaller wicks. I think there is simething wrong in the charge.
Mr. MomLLLEN. It is well that we should criticise these items. It is clear from the quotations given from the Auditor (iencral's Report that a great saring could be made in the expense on our penitentiaries. I am not charging the Minister of .Instice with neglect, but I beliere that the retail price in many cases here, is charged in place of the wholesale price. The tenderers must surely have a loop-hole ly which they can get in such enormous prices as are here quoted, instead of giving the wholesale prices upon which these commodities should be supplied. We have a number of these institutions in this country, and it is only by criticisms of this kind that we can hope to reduce their cost. Last year the Auditor General gave us a per capita cost of the maintenance of those conviets, but I notice his report does not give that this year. I think we should have information by which we can compare the cost of keeping the inmates of these institutions with the cost in other countries. I think the Auditor General's Report should contain each year the pir capita cost of keeping these convicts, and that would enable us to judge whether the ammal charge upon the resources of this country for the maintenance of these institutions, is increasing or decreasing. Last year it cost us something like $s 2.86$ per head for the inmates of the Manitola Penitentiary, which was the highest rate, and the next was the penitentiary which we are now discussing, and to the best of my recollection the Kingston Penitentiary was the lowest. I think the prices here reported in comnection with the items supplied to this penitentiary, are far in excess of what they should be. These temlers and the bills of these supplies. should he carefully investigated in order that we may see if some reduction camot he made.
Mr. Paterson (brant). Perhaps every article is not contracted for separately. There is a great variety of articles that hiave to be contrated for. I see some small amounts like 83 and $$ 4$. Does the contrate cover all the items that we find umder this expenditure, or are they contracted for separately?
sir JOHA THOMP:ON. There must always be some left that camoo be thonght of, but the call for tenders does sis greatly intio details, and it includes all that the warden foresees would be required.
Mr. PATERson (Bant). lerhaps it arises in this way with some of those items. Does the one person temler for all this variety of articles: If so, it may be by areraging theni, one article may be lower, while another article might be very much higher.
sir JOHN THOMPSON. That is the case. For instance, groceries. They tender for sugar, for flour, butter, salt and everything in the grocery line. When a person tenders the prices for which he will supply per pound, the warden supplies the estimates of the 'quantities required, he applies his. quantities to those tenders, and the contract is awarded to the person who appears to have made the lowest tender.

Mr. Mcmulles. Inil one person supply all these items, or were contracts let to several parties? Does one tenderer agree to supply all the different articles:
sir JOHN THOMPSON. No, we keep flour separate: we find it better to do that. In some cases, thinking that the prices that were demanded for flour were too high, we supplied the prison from Ontario. On another occasion I male an arrangement with the merchant who had heen supplying us with flour, whose tender 1 thonght was alto, gether too high, he thought it was not too high, and one made an agreement with me to furnish me flour at the market prices ruling at the time. We paid him at the regular quoted prices in the city of Montreal, making a slight allowance for transportation.
Mr. CAMPBELL. Who tenderel for the flour?
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I do not remember who has the contract this year.
Mr. FAUVFL. What was the nature of the commission of enquiry for which this sum is required to pay Mr. Moylan?
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. That was an enquiry which took place about ten years ago, before I came to the department. One of the commissioners

Mr. Baillairge, the late Deputy Minister of Public Works, hant beell paid, I think, sinot. He had assisted the inspector of penitentiaries, but no allowance had been made for the inspector on the ground that he was already in receipt of a salary. Last year a special vote was made by Parliament equad to half the amome that was paid to Mr. Paillainge.
Mr. PATERSON (Bramt). In the receipts there is rent, s35\%. Is part of the peemises rented?
Sir IOHN THOMPSON. There are two or three cutates in which the otficers are allowed to live on paying a remtal of son a year tach.
Mr. Macmulfix. What was supplied by the Wxom Mandacturing Co., for which an item of s. $4 \pi$ :
sir JOHN THOMPBON. Convict chothing. miforms for gatids and keepers.
Mr. MILL心 (Bothwell). I thought they were all made in the penitentiary:
sir JOHN THOMPSON. This is for furnishing the cloth.

Mr. LALRIER. With respect to the revenue from the penitentiary, dor 1 understand that the revenue is collected from the parties to whom aticles are sold?

sir JOHN THOMPsoN. Yes.

Mr. LAURIER. The officersareallowed to buy from the pententiay:

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Yes.
Mr. MILLA (Bothwell). How do the earnings of the convicts now compare with former years? This seems to be a very small amount. Formerly I think the latour of the convicts was farmed out, and there were contracts made with parties outside for the sale of the prolucts. The motion came to he general here, I think, on the Ministerial side, that it was unfair that a prisoner should he competitor with others ontsile. It was thought that everything except articles recquired for the conviets themselves should be excluded from their occupatiom, and that they should be placed at some employment in which they should not come intw competition with any industry actually in existence in the country. How far is that policy now athered to, and what conrse is adopted in respect to the labour of the penitentiary?
sir JoHN THOMPSON. When I came hato the department the labour of the convicts in the Kingstom Penitentiary was farmed out to a locksmith. It was tather remmerative, so far as the prisoni was concerned. We had some 80 convicts employed hy him at a price which probably paid for their ordinary maintenance, not including ordinary management and prison salaries. There was a statute which declared that this system should cease when all the existing contracts ran out. This contract expired about three years ago, and we gave the contractor notice that under the statute it could not be renewed. We have had some difticulty since in securing employment for the men, and we would have experienced greater difticulty if it had not been for the work caried on there in comnection with the construction of a new imner prison in which there will be more seclusion afforded for convicts both of the worse and better class, with a view to providing them with work in their own cells and keeping them separate. The employment of these convicts, who were formerly engaged at lockmaking, on prison construction has resulted in the building at very little cost to the country of a very fine structure for that purpose. So soon as this building is completed, I shall have to give attention to the furnishing of prison employment to a large number of convicts, and I propose to establish industries which will be carried on with as little machinery as possible, in order to give as much work as prissible to the convicts and interfere as little as possible with outside employment.
Mr. MILLS' (Bothwell). I hope the Goremment will change the policy on which they entered when they passed the statute to which the Minister has referred. It seems a very extraordinary condition that instead of undertaking to make a penitentiary self-sustaining and compelling prisoners by their inlustry to support themselves, we should adopt a policy which will make their labour as little remunerative as possible, so that the burden of the maintenance of the convicts, the dishonest and criminal section should fall on the honest and industrions portion. The law-ahiding and industrious portion of the community are compelled from their inlustry to support those who were lawless and whose liberty was dangerons to the rest of the community. I have not lxeen able myself to unlerstand upon what theory of political economy a Government or Parliament should come to the conclusion that it was really injurions to the industrial class outsile of the penitentiary that those men who, if they were honest and true, would be so many competitors coutside, when in prison should be prohilited from engaging in those duties that were most alvantageons to the public and the least burdensome as regards the mantenance of the institutions. We should undertake to make the penitentiaries as little hurdensome to the people as possible, and if they could be nade self-sustaining that should be done: and the labours in which the prisoners are engaged should be of that kind in which they could find employment in future.
Mr. McMULLEN. I notice that a pair of buffalo robes was charged Sol, three horse blankets SIS, suldle bag, S10. The Minister can hardly consiler these to be fair prices. I never heard of such prices heing paid hefore. Are these articles incluted in the conuact for which temders were askel.
sir Johnthompson. No, they are not. They are articles furnished for the carriage and horses which helong to the prison and are for the prison service. The buffalo robes are for the carriage which goes in and out of the city when required for prison duty. I do not know anything ahout the prices of the articles, I am sorry tos saty.
Mr. MoMULLEN. I howe the hon. gentleman will instruct the officers not to ask him to defend such items another year. These charges are alto: gether beyond reason, and the Opposition would lee acting improperly in allowing such items to pass without protest.

Manitoba Penitentiary
$$ 45,38830$
Mr. Mcmullen. I an glad to notice a very large decrease here, and I would like to know how it has been secured.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. With reference to the salaries, a new oftice, that of assistant accountant and store-keeper has been created at $\$ 700$ a vear, hut this increase has been set off by a decrease of $\$ 400$ on the total salaries; the salary of the present warden is $\mathbf{z} 350$ less than that of the late warden. On maintenance there is a decrease of $\$ 1,420$. It is the intention to grow more vegetables on the farm than formerly, which will reduce the cost for rations about $\mathbf{S} 500$. There is a decrease of $\$ 200$ in the travelling expenses of convicts, and some other deureases on other items. On the repair expenses there is a decrease of $\$ 6,000$, there is not so minch conal or wood estimated for, and repairs to machinery and buildings formerly included are not included this year. There is a rednction on the amount for farm implements, as it is the intention of the warden to grow gats and other such crops.

Mr. WATsON. I am sure the House must be pleased at this report, and I was going to call attention to a few items in commection with the farm, but I suppose as the system is going to be changel it is not necessary. We find that each year there was a large expenditure on the farm for implements while at the same time they were buying large supplies of feeding for their stock in connection with that farm. It always appeared to me there was a great waste in that comection in the penitentiary. I find that the penitentiary bought 3,162 pounds of hutter at $2 \overline{2}$ cents per pound. I have some knowledge of the price of butter in Manitoba and I am alle to buy first-class butter at much less than the average price of 20 cents per pound all the year rounl. In the fall we can get first-class dairy butter for 20 cents per pound. I would like to ask the Minister also if supplies such as beef and mutton are secured by tender, and if the lowest tender is always accepted?
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. We always ask for tenders for these supplies, and we always give the contract to the lowest tenderer, unless he is a person who has a very ball record as contractor, which is sometimes the case. I am under the impression that there is a contract for it, and that it was given to the lowest tenderer this year.

Mr. WATSON. I do not know if I am correctly informed or not, but I think I am. I believe that. tenders were asked for the supply of beef this year, and that the contractor who had the supply for five or six years previously tendered at is cents per pound for beef and 9 cents for mutton; but the contract was let to another man at $\overline{\mathrm{a}}+\mathrm{d}$ cents for beef and 9 cents for mutton. As there are 50,000 lbs. of weef used there, it makes quite a difference in the cost. I have not seen any report that the beef supplied by the contractor for the last six years has not been satisfactory. In fact he informs me that he never had any complaint of his beef from the officers who received it ; but notwithstanding his tender at 5 cents per pound is thrown out, and the contract let at $5 \frac{1}{2}$ cents.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I had some vagne recollections of a difficulty when the tenders came in, and the remark of the hon. gentleman refreshes my memory. The person who had the contract up to the lst of July supplied us with beef at a lower rate and offered to do it for the future. We would not give him the contract for nothing. The meat he furnished was badly furnished in violation of the contract. It was giving us constant trouble, and he made on the supplies furnished us a great deal more money, although his tender was lower, than the present contiactor. Before concurrence I will have the papers brought down and the hon. gentleman can have an opportunity of further looking into the matter.

Mr. Watson. I would like to ask if the heef received under this contract is lealt out to theofficers in connection with the penitentiary it contract prices.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Yes.

Mr. Watson. It appears to me that the Government is going into the retail butcher business in dealing out meat to the ofticers. I have learned that some complaints were made about this beef. but the contractor previous to last July informed me that the best cuts were selected and given to the employes about the penitentiary, and the balance was given to the comvicts. If that is the case, it cannot be surprising if some complaints have been made of the beef furnished to the convicts. I do, not know that the (iovernment have a right togive a contract for beef at half a cent a pound nure than the lowest tenderer offered to furnish it at : becanse the heef hasto undergoinspectionhy the steward, ind if it does not comply with the conditionsof the tender. he has a right to refuse it. Besides, the contractor has to give some guarantee that he will farnish the heef atecording to temider. and 1 do mot think the Government have a right in advamee to julge what kind of beef it will le. If they did this, there would le nothing to prevent them giving the contract to a friend of theirs at one or two cents a pound above what they could obtain beef for from: others. If the papers are hrought down, we shall no doubt see whether any complaint was made to the contractor as to the quality of the heef furmished by him. 1 am informeal that there was no com. plaint.

Mr. ROSS (Lisgart). I wish to say that complaints were continually mate to me during the last three years by the carions officers of the penitentiary, that the meat fumished was ot inferion quality.

Mr. WATSON. Complaints may have Ieen made to the hon member for Lisgar, but 1 do not know that he is the proper officer to receive complaints. If the steward, whose duty it is to receive the meat, passes it. that is all that shombld be required.

Sir JOHN THOMPsON. I do not agree with the hon. gentleman as to the right of a member of Parliament to hear complaints about the management of the penitentiaries. I am much obliged to the hon. member for Lisgar (Mr. Russ) in undertaking to find out how matters are lonked after, and it will assist the management of these institutions if members will visit them as often as possible, and make themselves acquainted with the way in which they are managed ; and it will also have a good effect on the management itself. As regaris our method of obtaining a supply of beef, I am aware that the butchers of Wimipeg object to that very strongly; but I do not care how strongly they think abont it. If it is proper, consistent with my duty to this Parliament and the effective managemeut of the prison or penitentiary, I ann not going to consult the butchers of Winnipeg as to whether it is in their interest or not. The Stony Mountain staff is it little colony about thirteen miles from Wimipeg. The officers have no time or opportunity to leave their duties and go to Winnipeg and buy supplis.

There is ahsolutely no market surrounding the place, the nearest market loing Winnipeg, and if they hatd to go, there for their supplies, we should have very little of their time for prison duties. We therefore mate our arrangements with all our contactors, not only that they should supply what wase needed for the prisoners, hut also what would be required for the officers. The oflicers receive their supplies at contract prices, and the amomet is deducted from their wages at the end of each month. I do not understand that there was a complaint from the convicts in regard to their food. On the contrary. I think they are well contented with it. The complaint is on the part of the prison authorities; who receive the mext. It is not a good answer to say that this heef is sulject to inspection, and need not be taken if it is not aceording to the contract. We do not want to deal with a contractor who emmes tifteen miles from the nearest market. If any of the meats were refused, the prisoners mieght be left withont supplies.
Mr. WATNON. If any complaint was ever made of the neat supplien, the Mines $\mathrm{C}_{0}$, is perfectly right : hut if no complaint was marle, and this man was refused the contract at half a cent a poumd less than the person who grot it, then a wrong was done to the lowest tenderer.

Mr. MeMLLLEN. I see that 21 cents a gallon wats paid for 3 ( KN$)$ gillons of eral oil. I would like to know whether it is American or Canadian cil.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. It is American oil.
Mr. Mr.MLLLEN. It seems to me it is harilly fair to the Canadian industries that American oil shoully be used in our penitentiaries. Even for American oil, $2 l$ cents a gallon seems to be an enormous price. I would like to ask if tenders were called, how many were given. and whether the lowest temder was accepted?
Sir $.1 O H N$ THOMPSON. Tenders were asked and the lowest was accepted. In consequence of our being told last session that the price was very high which we were paying for oil, I took the greatest pains to endeatrour to get it at the lowest price this year, but the result was not very satisfactory. We rejected all the tenders which we received for oil under the supposition that by alivertising in the oil districts of Ontario especially we could get the contract for oil at a very much lower price. But we have not been'very successful. After using every effort of the warlen and inspector, and advertising specially, we have not been able to do letter. The quality of the oil furnished for a time under contract made with the oil producers of Ontario was not sueh as could be used with safety and advantage to the prison at all. It was destructive of lamps, blackened them and gave a poor light, and the warden made a complaint against it.

Mr. Mcmullen. Does the party who tendered to supply the oil live in Winnipeg?

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Yes.
Mr. McMULLEN. Is he a wholesale merchant?
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I will bring the contract down and also the contract we endeavoured to inake this year.

Mr. WATSON. I think that coal oil is received at fair price in Manitoba. Retail we have to pay 35 cents per gallon. This is one of the items the Govermment have to pay one-third anore for than they would have if the duty were off.

Mr. MoMLLLEN. I notice some ather items reruire explanation. There are fowls and turkeys, 333 lbs. at 14 cents.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. These are for the officers at Christmas time.
Mr. Me Mulles. Molasses, 33is gallons at 70 cents here and only 4.5 cents in other penitentiaries.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. This is accounted for hy Dorchester being a great many humdred miles nearer the sea board.

British Columbia Penitentiary.. sins,3st 47

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. In the working expenses there is an increase of $$ 2,9(x)$ accomated for ly increase in heating and lighting, in cementing the floor of the wing, the present gak forors rotting anaty, lumber. &c., to rebuild a new fence. Comder the head of Niscellameons, there is an increase of $$ 4,141$, owing to the intronluction of the hot water. system of heating.

Reqina Gaol.................... 316,32495

Sir JOHN THONPSON. The estimate last year was purely experimental hecanse we weve just beginning to use the gaol and did not know exactly what statf we would repuire. We have been obliged to increase salaries hy $$ 1,690$ owing to increase of Sl(0) in the gaoler's salary, the appointment of a deputy gaoler at 8700 and an engineer at $$ 840$, who is paid for at present by the Department of Public Works. The small increase to the gaoler's salary is in conserfuence of finding immediately, contrary to expectations, the prison full, and the appointment of a deputy gaolor was due to the same cause: The staff was too small, and there was nolody om it who had any acguaintance with prison work, so we sent from St. Vincent de Paul one of our best guards as deputy gater. There is an increase of S400 over last year's allowance for otficers' uniforms. For maintenance the House granted last year the sum of $$ 10,0(N)$ which was unnecessirily large. The working expenses, $$ 5,830$, are made up of wood and coal so,250, light $$ 256$, stable and out-buildings $$ 8(0)$, building ice-house $$ 1,(0) 0$, fencing, de., $$ 3,301$. maintenance of machinery, including oil, tallow, sheet rubber packing, sole leather, &c., $847, chanois skins, pipes, &c., for the kitchen, $100. stationery sin).
Mr. Mcmullen. The one schedule of tenders I suppose, is issued to all parties when calling for tenders for commodities?
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Yes; and when people in the same line combine to keep prices unreasonably high, we get the supplies from another place.

Committee rose and reported the resolutions.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON moved the adjournment of the House.
Motion agreed to ; and House adjourned at 1.05 a.m. (Thurgday).

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Thursday, 31st March, 189:2.
The sirenker took the Chair at Three oclock.
Prayers.

INEPUTYOF THE SER.JEANT-AT-ARMS.

Mr. SPEAKER. I beg to inform the House that the Serjeant-at-Arms has, with my approval, appointed IVilliam Henry Bowie to act as his deputy during his teqmporary absence or inlispusition.

FIRST READING.

Bill (No. $\mathbf{4 7}^{7}$ ) to incorporate the Victoria Life Insurance Company.-(Mr. Cockburn.)

TRANSFER OF SHARES IN CORPORATIONS.

Mr. IVES mover for leave to introduce Bill (No. 48) respecting the transfer of shares in corporations. He said : The principle upon which larliament has proceeded has been to protect corporations, and to protect the creditors of corporations, but has not to any very great extent suited the convenience of business men who desire to make transfers. My amemiment will not at all interfere with the rights of corporations to recognize transfers of stock, nor will it prevent creditors from exercising their rights over corporations, of preventing the transfer of shares where there is double liability, or in cases where there is an unpaid portion of the stock. It refers simply to fully paid-up stock, and provides that a transfer in writing made by the owner of the stock on a power of attorney executed by the owner of the stock shall hind all parties except the corporation, shall in fact make the title perfect in the transferee, subject to the right of the corporation afterwards to disavow the transfer if they have just canse for doing so. If this Bill becomes law, it will enable business men residing at a distance from the headquarters of the company to obtain loans, temporary or otherwise, or to make sales and receive the money without waiting for some days or perhaps a week until the transfer can be entered in the books of the company at headquarters and returned to them. The time has come when the convenience of business men should be considered, and happily, I think, it can be considered without doing away with the safeguards which the law has thrown around the corporation and the creditor.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

ALFRED PINSONNEAULT.

Mr. LAV ERGNE asken, Whether Alfred Pinsonneault, harbour master and inspector of the ChamHy Canal, at St. John's, has resigned his position? If so, has he resigned in favour of his son, a farmer of St. Jacques le Mineur, and has the latter been appointed?

Mr. TUPPER. Alfred Pinsonneault has not resigned his position as harbour master, and does not hold the position of inspector of the Chambly Canal.

CANADIAN TOBACCO.

Mr. GAUTHIER asked, Whether is it the intention of the Government to continue in force the law preventing the cultivator from mannfacturing into cut tobaceo or cigars, tobaceo required for his personal use?

Mr. COSTIGAN. It is not the intention to make any change in the law in espect to the mamufacture or cutting of Canadian tobaceo.

APPOINTMENT OF A POSTMASTER FOR THE IARJSH OF LINI.FT.

Mr. CHOQUETTE (Translation) asked, What are the names of the persons who applied for the position of postmaster of the parish of Lislet, after the death of the lady who hell it, a few months ago? Who has been appointed, and by whom was the person so appointed recommended?

Sir ADOLPHE (ARON. (Translation.) In answer to the hon. member, I have to say that applications were addressed to the department by P.P. A. Bélanger, Phélime Fortin, (: Leclercand Amédée Plourde. The person appointed is Mr. P. R. A. Belanger, The recommendations came from the member of the county.

ENQUIRY INTO THE DEN AULNETS POST OFFICE.

Mr. CHOQUETTYE. (Tramslation)asker, Was an enyuiry asked for with reference to the management of the post office of the village of Des Aumets, in the County of L'Islet, and against the postmaster, Mr. Auguste Dupuis? If so, by whom, and on what grounds; and has the enquiry been granted, or is it the intention to grant it :

Sir ADOLPHE CARON. (Translation.) There was no enquiry asked for in reference to the management of the post office of the village of Des Aulnets, in the County of Lislet.

THE STEAMER A LEERT.

Mr. CHOQUETTE asked, Has an enquiry been held as to the cause of the loss of the steamer Alert, belonging to the fovermment and commanded by Captain Koeing? If so, who was charged with the encuiry, and what has been the result?
Mr. TUPPER. No enguiry has been held into the loss of the A/ert, as that vessel was not lost. She is safe in the harbour at Quebec,

Mr. CHOQUETTE. But an aucident happened last summer.

Mr. TUPPER. Yes, a slight accident happened, but the steamer was not lost.

FRENCH REPORTS ON SUGAR-BEET CULTIVATION.

Mr. LANGELIER (for Mr. Beausoleil) asked, Why the report of Professor Saunders on the cultivation of the sugar-beet has not been translated, printed and distributed in the French language? When members speaking the French language may hope to be furnished with copies in French of the said report?

Mr. FOSTER. The report of Professor Saunders on the cultivation of the beet-root was printed in English and laid on the Table of the House. It is now being translated, and will be printed in French. I may also say that it has been distributed in English to the members and senators.

SUGAR-BEET BOUNTY.

Mr. LaN(isLiER (for Mr. Beabsoleili) asked, Whether the Government intend to continue for some years the bounty sranted for two years for sugar malle from sugar-heet grown in Canada: If so, for how many years"
Mr. FOSTER. I am sorry to say that I cammot give a definite auswer to my hon. friend's question.

LOBSTERS AND WHITEFISH IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Mr. CORBOULD asked, Whether it is the intention of the Governatent during this season to place lobsters or lolister spawin in the waters of the Pacitic in British Columbia: Also, whether it is the intention of the (iovernment to place whitetish in the lakes of British Colmmbia"
Mr. TUPPER. It is not the intention to place lobsters or lohster spawn in the waters of the Pacific this season, nor is it the intention to place whitefish in the lakes of British Columbia this seavon.

POST OFFICE AT CAPST. IGNACE.

M. CHOQUETTIE (Translation) askel, Whether Mr. R. P. Vallee, Conservative candidate at the last provincial election in the County of Montmagny, made application, verhally or in writing, for the opening of a post office at Cap St. Ignace Station in the said county, which had leen promised by the ex-Postmaster General? If so, when? And what was the reply made to his request?
SirADOLPHECARON. (Translation.) Inanswer to the hon. member I have to say that Mr. R. P. Vallée did make application-I cannot say whether verbally or in writing-for the opening of a post office at Cap St. Ignace Station. The reply made by the Post Otfice Department was that when the "pposition to such, as evinced by the petitions received by the department, was withdrawn, then the question of the opening of a post office at Cap St. Ignace would be taken in consideration.

REPORTS

Report, Returns and Statistics of the Inland Revenues of the Dorainion of Canada, for the fiscal year ended 30 ith June, 1891 : Part I, Excise, &c.(Mr. Costigan.)
Report of the Committee of the Privy Council in reference to cases of irregularity in the Civil Service.-(Mr. Foster.)
Sir RICHARD CARTIW RIGHT. When do the Government expect to lay on the Table of the House the report of the Civil Service Commission which was appointed some months ago, and which I understood would be in our hands by this time?

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. That Commission has not yet reported.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Can yougive us any idea as to when we may expect it?

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. We expect to have it before the close of the sessim, but probably not for a month yet.

THE STEAMBOET INSPECTON ACT.

Sir JOHN THONPNON moved secoml reading of Bill (No. 13) further to amenl the steambat Inspection Act.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the second time.
Mr. TUPPER moved that the Honse resolve itself into Committee to comsider the following resolution :-

That it is expedient to imprese a tee of $\mathbf{3} 10$ for each inspection of a barge, boat. batean, seow or undecked ressel required by "The Steambent Iuspection Act."

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I would he glad to have some explanation on the previous item, Bill No. 13, as that Bill and this resolution rum together. The hon. gentleman did not happen to he in when the Bill was called.

Mr. TUPPER. I will make the explanation now. The Bill applies only to these sows. There are very few of them in Cimada, and nearly all on the western coast, where they are nsed for currying passengers and therefore come under the present law, and are subject to steamboat inspection, so far as concerns their safety for carrying passengers. We now pay to the hull inspector a fee of $\mathbf{\Sigma} 10$ for their inspection, and the fee is practically paid out of the Steamboat Inspection Fund: at any rate, we charge payments mate for the inspection which the law now requires. to the steamboat Inspection Fund. That is unfair to the owners of steamships generally who contrinute to this fund. as, according as that fund is latge or small in comparison with the expenditure, there is authority to fix the rate of inspection: so, that as a matter of justice to those interested in the steamlomat Inspection Fund, aml as a matter of administration, it is proposed to take authority to charge the owner of the passenger large, this fee for inspection.

Resolution considered in committee, reforted. and referred to Committee on Bill No. 13.

SUPPLS.

House again resolved itelf into (ommitter of Supply.

(In the Committee.)

Salaries and contingent expenses of the Senate.......................................................
Mr. McMULLEN. I am glad to notice that there is some little reduction in the contingencies connected with the Senate, although any person who may go over the several items will come to the conclusion that there is great room for reduction. I would like to ask under whose charge or supervision are all the different items that are purchaseil and here entered in the list as contingencies for the Senate?

Mr. FOSTER. I think they are in charge of a committee of the Senate, called the Contingent Conmittee.

Mr. McMULLEN. I think some years a there was anattempt made to have an investigatig before the Public Accounts Committee with regao to the expenditures of the Senate, but the committee were not able to get these people before it, in order to examine them. If we are asked to vote these amounts, the expenditure should be made under the supervision of the Public Accounts Committee, and the officers of the Senate should appear before that committee and answer all questions in connection with the expenditure. The committee of the Senate did not feel that their officers should be expected to appear before the Public Accounts Committee. If we are supposed to investigate all matters of expenditure in the country's interest, all officers of Parliament should be subject to the orders of the Public Accounts Committee, and be prepared to give information when called upon.

Mr. FOSTER. That might he very satisfactory wo far as the hon. gentleman is concerned, but we must recollect that the Senate is a body sitting as a part of this Parliament, and that they have the management of their own affairs. They have their Public Accounts Committee and their own methods of auditing and arranging and supervising these matters. We must give them credit for leing able to arrange these details, and also credit for doing so) with due sense of economy and what is necessary for the service. I think the hon. gentleman will not fiml, on examining the expenses of the senate and the Honse of Commons, any more extravagance in that horly than in this.

Mr. MeMULLEN. If we are to be amually asked to vote this sum of money we should have power to investigate as to its expenditure. It is merely making a tool of this House to.ask us to rote money and have no supervision as to its expenditure. I can umderstand that the Senate have their own Public Accomnts Committee and investigate these matters; but they are not directly responsible to the people, as we are; they are the creatures of the Government of the day and are responsible to no one. We are responsible to our wnstituents to see that the public expenditure is kept within its proper limits. How are we to insestigate the pullic expenditure, if it is not made maler the supervision of men under the control of our Public Accounts Committee or the orders of this House?

Mr." DAVIES (P.E.I.) Will the Minister explain the item for carriage of mails, $$ 471$ ?

Mr. FONTPER. It is for carrying the mails from the Senate to the post office and return. There is a similar item in regard to the House of Commons.

Mr. MACDONALD (Huron). Will the Minister give an explanation of $$ 200$ for postage ?

Mr. FOSTER. This item is for postage upon all foreign matter sent from the Senate.

Mr. LANDERKIN. Why were detectives supplied to the Senate last year? I observe they were paid $229?

Mr. FOSTER. That must have been for serving processes in connection with the investigations held.

Mr. LANDERKIN. What investigations?

Mr. FOSTIER. The Baie de Chaleur investigation was held there, if the hon. gentleman's mem ory will serve him for a minute.

Mr. LANDERKIN. Who were the detectives employed? Was it the member for Centre Toronto?

Mr. FOSTER. It may have leen the member for (irey.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. You had better send for the member for Centre Toronto. He seems to know all about it.

Mr. LANDERKIN. I want some more explanation about the letective service.

Mr. FOSTER. I have given a sutficient explanation ; I have given the facts.

Mr. LANDERKIN. I want an explanation in regard to the detectives.

Mr. FOSTER. If the hon. gentleman wants the names of the detectives, he will have to repress his anxiety until I can ohtain the names.

Mr. LANDERKIN. Yes, and the nature of the service performed.

Nir JOHN THOMPSON. In the investigations which took place last year before the committee, it was occasionally necessary to serve subpemas in the case of persons who were not accessible, and for that purpose processes were sent to the province where the persons were supposed to reside. The item is for services of that kind. We do not know the names. The same course was followed in connection with the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Sir RICHARI) (AR'TWRIGHT. I do not see a similar item in our contingencies.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The expense was paid out of the funcls at the alisposal of the committee.

Mr. MULOCK. Will the Minister of Finance explain the item Slif) gratuity, two months salary, to late d. C. Wheeler.

Mr. FOSTER. He must have been one of the officers of the Senate who died, and the customary gratuity was paid.

Mr. MULOCK. I notice here an item of $$ 1,688$ for newspaper subscriptions. I do not think it necessary to have so many sets of newspapers. There is a very excellent reading room attached to the library where all the newspapers of any importunce are a vailable, hut it seems to be necessary to have humdreds of dollars expended for newspapers for each and every department of this Govermment. Why cannot the Senators as well as the members of the House of Commons make common use of the reading room which is common to both? The library is common to members of both Houses of Parliament, and I think the reading room might very well be in the same position and the expense saved.

Mr. FOSTER. That is an old question. The Senators have had their reading room ever since they were a constituent part of Parliament, as the House of Commons has had its reading room. I suppose they might just as well ask why we do not take advantage of their reading room, and thereby save the expense of a large number of papers. This question was discussed some two years ago between a committee appointed by both Houses, but it was not found practicable to make any arrangement about it.

Mr. MULOCK. I do not know that the reading room I refer to outside the Library is specially the reading rom of the House of Commons, but even if it is, there should not he two reading rooms if one will answer. I would not wish to interfere with the rights and privileges of the members of the semate with regard to reading current literature. In fact, I believe that they should he in touch with public opinion, and if it were necessary to expend this money for that parpose it would be well spent. If the Senate will not do away with their realing room, let us do away with ours, and let the one reading room be common to members of lwoth Houses. It is a pure waste of money to purchase two sets of newspapers.

Mr. DESJARDINS (Hochelaga). 1 do not agree with the opinion of the hon. member, because at present the members have great difficulty in getting papers which they want in their own realing room, and sometimes when they go there, they have to cone away and lose time without seeing the papers. If we bring more people into an already overcrowded newspaper reading rom, I do not see how the matter would be improved. I think it is money well spent to have the newspapers for our own use.

Mr. WOOD) (Brock ville). I must express my own opinion upon this subject. I quite agree with the hon. memler for North York (Mr. Mulock). It seems to me to be nothing more or less than a complete waste of money to have two reading rooms, one for the Senate and one for the Commons. Surely one reading room is all that is necessary for that purpose, especially when that reading rom is situated in the central part of the building between the Senate Chamber and the House of Commons.

Mr. SPEAKER. I would say, Mr. Chairman, that I happened to be a member of the committee that was appointel some three years ago, with a view of relucing the expenditure in commection with Legislation, and we found that when we male the same proposition that my hon. friend from York (Mr. Mulock) made, all the senators on the committee rejected it. We could not get them to agree to any diminution of the privileges they have been enjoying for a considerahle length of time, amb, unless we conclude to abandon our reading room, I think we will find it a difficult matter to get the senators to agree to any reduction of the privileges they now enjoy with regard to their reading room. I doubt very much whether they would be disposed to allow us access to their reading room if we abolished ours.

Mr. MULOCK. I move that the item under discussion be redacea by the sum of $$ 1,688.44$. The senate camnot get their reading room without supplies being voted hy Parliament. I do not wish to deprive them of the opportunity of reading the newspapers, but they can very well have that opportunity in the reading room common to both Houses.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I think the observations which Mr. Speaker made are very well worthy of the consideration of the House. The Senate has been in the enjoyment of this consenience ever since the organization of Parliament, and the reading room under the control of the Senate is managed on different principles altogether from those which regulate our reading room. Even if the Senate consented to reduce the expenses of their room they would not agree that the reading room which would then be common to both should be accessible to the public to the extent Mr. Mulock.
it now is. As the hom. member for Hochelagit (Mr. Desjurdins) has stated. there is a great diticulty now during the session of Parliament experienced by members using that reading rom, and occasionally when one goes to look for a particular article he fimbls that sone one las heen so attached to it. that he has taken it a way with him. I think, if we examine the whole subject of the expenditure of the two, Honses, we will find that the expenditure in connection with this House has been much more havish. and is much more amenalle to curtailment than the expenses of the senate. We must not forget that the senate is entitled to be consulted aboin any of its conveniences and privileges just as fully. as this Holse is. The more decoroms way is ti, confer with them. insteal of undertaking, withont the courtesy of a consultation. Wstrike out the item. I think the semate showed, when the last conference took plate a disprisition to meet this House half way, and that this Honse was not willing to go half way. It would be very desirable that we should look to matters in this House lefore madertaking, with a want of courtesy and alhence of consultation, to say that something desired by the Senate ought not to le granted lis this Homee. Let us at least treat the senate with the respect. with which we expect that House to treat us.

Mr. MULOCK. I understand from the speaker that this item of expenditure has now existed for at quarter of a century - in fact. since Confederation. Then, when will it he in order, as a matter of courtesy, to rednce it \% It is clear that the iten should not he in both atecounts. In the Home of Commons account there is an item of sso.(k) for. newspapers, which are within the reach of the Sellate as well as the Honse of Commons. The Speaker says that some attempt has heen made in bring about a common unlerstanding for a reduction, but that it has failed. If it has failed. wh, is to solve the problem: Are we to stand here out of pure regard for what may be ineorrectly regatiel as the rights of the senate, and see the people:money wasted, or are we to proceed as at committe: anditing the pablic accounts, and endeatour to, ascertain where a prudent and wise ecomomy mat be introduced: I donot propose to deprive the members of the senate of newspaper literatur: far from it. I propose to reduce the amomut expenden for newspapers. $\mathbf{8} 4,($ ( $K$ ) or thereahomts. to $\$ \mathbf{\$ 2}, \mathbf{0 N 0}$, not saying whether those papers shall he placed in the House of Commons or in the senate reading rom. When the money is voted, the Committce on Internal Economy will see that it is iprent to the best alvintige, and with due regarl to the convenience of both Houses. When, I again ask. will it be in order, without offiending the dignity. of any person, to move to economize:

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Any day of the sex sion.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. This is not the phece or the time.

Mr. MULOCK. I fail to see that. Weare now voting the money, and 1 do not see that there could be any more opportune time to say whether we will vote the money or not. I to not mean this motion as a slight to anyboly. I do not mean to say at this moment that the newspapers shall mot he:
in one part of the building or in another part, but simply that the amount of the expenditure shall be reduced.

Mr. Paternon (Brant). I miderstaml that this motion is not to le regarded as a reflection on the Senate, because from what the hon. Minister of Justice has said in comparing the contingencies of the two Houses, perhaps the comparison does not show favourahly to the Commons. But I judge from what the Speaker has said, that it has occarred to the commitec in charge of this matter as a very desirable improvement to make. but that some difficulties were fomm in the way. The amendment. as I umlerstamd, proposes a reduction of the amount, the committee being left afterwards to determine where the reduced number of papers shall be placed for the joint use of the Senlate and the House of Commons. I cammot see that it is a reflection on the Senate. Of comrse one would maturally suppose that the room which is situated in the middle of the building, and which is common to loth, would the the proper place ; but I umlerstimul. from a remark which has been made, that a member of the Commons does not feel the same likerty to go into the sellate realing rom that a Senitor feels to come into the reading rom which is appurently for the use of both. I camot sec that it is a reflection on either Honse that that should le known as the realing room of the Senate and House of Commons. This is just at move made in the direction of economy. I should be very sorry, so far as my rote is concernet, to have it interpreted as affecting the dignity or rights or privileges of the Senate; and I believe that the senators themselves, when they understood the motive, would not object to our sitving that much money if it can be done in the public interest.

Mr. FOSTEF. No one objects to the saving of the money if it can well be done : but I think, with my colleague, that the methor adopted is not quite the right one. My hon. friend who has just sat down says that the motion does not provide that the senate shall not have a reading room. Put he will understam that hy simply striking out this inem you would cut off the senate reating room without making any provision for another. The action is not a complete action. As it stands, the motion proposes simply to strike of the realing room of the Semate, an independent and co-mrdinate hranch of this Parliament. It cannot be said that that is justifical, because an attempt was made two or three years ago lig means of a committee, to have certain things done looking to greater economy in both branches of Parliament. Not only was this item under discussion, but a great many others, aml for a gool many days: and I must say here, as a member of that committee, that the committee of the Senate met the conmittee of the House of Commons very fairly. The two committees after a full conference agreed to recomment a number of reductions: but their report was never acted upon by this House. Therefore I do not think that this House is in a position to impute to the Senate a want of desire to economize. This House never had the courtesy to take up that report and pass it. It was so thoroughty imbued with economy that it allowed the report to lie without taking any action upon it. So, if we have an homest desire to economize in both branches, we who hold the purse-strings in a certain respect, should not strike off what belongs to the other branch, without striking off what belongs to ourselves. It would be hetter to move by way of a conference, and in that the Senate, I have no douht, will be guite realy to meet us: and, although it is much in the fashion to carp at the expenditures of the Senate, I am willing to stand hy what I said, that this House is not in a position to throw stones at the other House, becaluse, if there is an extravagant Honse within a radius of $3(x)$ or 600 miles, it may le within a mandius of $5,(K K)$ or $\mathbf{6 , 0}(9)$ miles, it is this very Honse of which we are members.
Mr. EICiAR. The hon. Minister of Finamee is lecturing the Honse for taking advantage of the report mate by thecommittee in favour of economy. Now, 1 ask who is the member of this House who should take charge of such matters? Who has charge of the finances of the House, as well as those of the country: If any member of this House is responsible for neglecting his luty in that matter, surely it is the financial leader of the dovernment. I think, however, that the senators and the members of the Honse of Commons have got along renarkably well in the library for a great many years, and I see no reason why one reading room should not be enough for both. 1 am sure that if we coull. in some way or another, enforce our rules for keeping strangers ont of the realing room, and having it only for the use of members and the press and senators, we would have a great deal more rom there, even with the senators, than we have to day. Asa member of the Library Committee, I have oceasion to know that the library is not nearly large enough for the necessary supply of books in its ordinary growth, and if we could arrange that the room just between the House and the library should be ased as an aldition to the library instead of a reading room, where books of reference could be placel, it would be a great relief to the library.

Mr. SPEAKER. I thiak the hon. member for York should reconsider the motion he has placed in your hamls, sir, for two reasons. First, the senate committee on contingencies frame their estimates and sulmit them to the Government for approval: and it will, I presume, be admitted that the senate committee have carefully considered what the reguirements are before subinitting their estimates for approval. Then, when we take into consideration the fact that there are 215 members in this House who have the right of access to our own reading room, besides thirty members of the press gallery and other ofticers of the House, for instance, the Hansard, to whom we must give access, it will be seen that the accommodation afficided is not so great that we can, with convenience to ourselves and the senators, provide for the almission of members of the senate into that room also. My own impression is that the accommodation there is too limited as it is; and I for one would be sorry to see any action taken by this House which would interfere with what the senators consider a very great privilege, the privacy of their own reading room.
Mr. MULOCK. Did I not understand the hon. gentleman to say that this item had been the subject of conference, and that a common understanding had been arrived at to do away with one of the rooms?
Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman certainly misumderstood me. The advisability of having a common realing rom was discussed. but the ob jections urged ly the senators prevailed, and the committee did not recommend any change to Parliament.

Mr. MCLoc: What was the opinion of the representatives of the Commons from that joint committee?

Mr. SPEAKER. I can hardly say that their opinion was unamimons. At all events, the proposition did mot meet with the farour of the committee, and the report did not contain a recommendation that a joint reading room should be alopted.

Mr. DAVIFS (P.E.I.) If I malerstomed the leader of the House correctly he said that the semators were more disposed to ecomomy than the Commons, and made a proposal to meet the case half way, which the Commons dillnot areept. It would be in order to explain to the Committee what recommendations in the direction of economy the senate suggested which the Commons did not accept. The hom. Minister of Finance said that, as far as this House is concernel, those who have to do with the expenditure of the money are the most extravagant booly in the word. Still I think the committee as a whole are disposed, where they see any extravagance, to lop it off. and they ought to le informed of any proposition which emanated from the senate, so that we may have an opportunity of considering it.

Mr. Foster. The report of the committe was laid before the House three years ago.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) The hom. gentleman who leads the Honse stated just now that the Senate were disposed to meet the Commons more than half way and had made propositions in the direction of economy which the Commons would not accept. What are they:
Mr. FONTER. Yon can see them in the report.
Sir RICHARI) (ARTWRIGHT. Besides that, the Minister of Finance was gool enough to tell us, speaking officially and with authority, that this House of Commons was the most extravagant hooly within a radius of $\mathbf{6 , O X A}$ ) miles. I am quite sure he would not make that statement without goorl anthority, and I am anxions to know what are the particular extravagances he desires to suppress. I would like to know, Mr. Chairman, whether he aims at you as an :annecessary functionary, for instance, as we are almost the only body of our size which has a Deputy Speaker. When a statement is made that we are most extmagrant, and made by the ofticial guardian of the purse, he ought to tell us in what particular, in order that we may join with him in remelying this evil.

Mr. FOSTER. The Auditor deneral's Report will tell you.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) ls it last year's report?
Mr. FOSTER. Three years ago.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). The hon. gentleman seems to have the report clearly in his mind when he makes this declaration, and it will be important to know what are the specific matters to which he refers. This is a new Parliament, and many of the men here do not know what the report contains.

Mr: DAVIEs (P.E.I.) I understoon the hon. gentleman who leads the House to say that propositions came from the Senate in the direction of economy which were declined by the Commons.
sirJOHN THOMPsON. What I said was that when a conference had taken place, the Senate had shown a disposition to meet us half way, and I thought at that time the House was unwilling to agree with the Senate, and the result was nothing was done. I am still of that impression, and I refer hon. gentlemen to the Senate conference.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) What were the particular recommendations made ly the Senate:

Sir 10 HN THOMPSON. I camnot state from memory.
Mr. MULOCK. Can any member of the (iovernment say whether this particular item under discusiom. economy in the matter of newspapers, was dealt with " Did they propose any joint service between the two Honses:
Mr. FOSTER. I imagine that came before the committee.
Mr. MLLOCK. It is reality we are after now.
Mr. FOsTER. You will tind the reality in the report. That came before the committee. The report is there, but it is impossible to recall all the conversations that took place in the committee three or four years ago.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) The report evidently does not emborly the suggestions of the senate in regard to economizing. I want to exteml my right hand to any member of the Senate who is in farour of cconomy. I would like to know if this report was printed and circulated amongst memiers?

Mr. SPEAKER. les, it was printed in the Votes and Proceedings of 1889.
M!. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I confess frankly that I was ignorant of the existence of this report, hut I should like to know who were the members of the committee from this House, and whether any witnesses, were examined.
Mr. FONTER. No witnesses were examinel. The House and the Senate each appointed a committee to sit jointly, and you will ind the report on page 503 of the votes and Proceedings of that year. iossibly, if we hunted through the proceedings of the House, we might find the names of the committee. That report makes 63 different recommendations. It embraces the statement that the committee had this question under consideration and did "not advise any alteration of the present system, inasmuch as the amalgamation wouid require an enlarged room, which, under the circumstances. would require a large expense, and there would be no saving in the staff, one officer only leing now employed for each reading room. Moreover, many of the files of newspaper required for linding in the library are, on account of their careful handling and good condition, taken from the senate reading room." It would do my hon. friends good if they would read over that report and see the result of the conference.

Mr. Momullen. I think some action should be taken on the subject-matter of the report read by the Minister of Finance. I hope this discussion will lead to interviews between the Senate and this House with a view of curtailing the expenditure in both. I was glad to hear the Minister of Financeadmit that theexpenditure on this chamber, which is under the management of the Committee on Internal Economy, is the most extravagant of any expenditure within 6,000 miles. At the sime time he must remember that hon. gentlemen opposite are responsible for the expenditure as they control a majority in this House, and no doult the Speaker is a member of that committee. I am quite willing, if the senators consider it tow far for them to come to the realing room of the House of Commons, to go to the reading room of the Nemate if the room is large enough, and if not I think we should provide accommolation so that the reading rooms of both Houses should be together. We agree very well in the library where both Houses are together, and I do not see why we shouhl not get along in the realing rom as well. I notice that the expenditure of eontingencies in the senate amounts to about $\bar{S}$ (o) a member. I do not know what it is in the House of commons, hut I believe there is room for a considerable saving in both chambers, amd lhink it is high time, notwithstanding the fact that this expenditure has leen in existence since Confederation, that some economy shoulid be exercised. It is evident to members of the House, and to many people in the country, that we conld do without a great deal of the expermliture in that House as well as in this. I do unt find fanlt with the senators for arailing themselves of the privileges they enjoy, but I would be willing to meet them in their desire to ohtain comomy in their chamber as well as in this. We ought to endeavour to reduce the expenditure on contingencies in both Houses. and we shouid commence with ourselves as well as dealing with them, and shonld see if we could not get a general resluction all romme.

Mr. MULOCK. It is clear that the House of lss! did not approve of the joint recommendation of the committee, because it did not alopt it. The committee of that day did not proceed as economically as the Honse desired. Otherwise it is fair to assume that the House would have adoptel the report. The action of the House if it is to be construed as meaning anything, is to be construed as condemmatory of the action of the committee, and I think the joint committee might have got over the very difficulty which they deemed insuperable. For instance, where they say that the throwing together of the two reading rooms would induce a mol, to occupy the one, or at all events more than one room could accommodate, they might, instead of duplicating the papers, if they leemed it necessary to have two rooms in use, assign one set of newspapers to one room and another set to the other. I presume that the newspapers of Ontario are equal to all the rest of the newspapers from all the rest of the world taken into the two reading rooms.
Some hon. MEMBERs. No, no.
Mr. MCLOCK. At all events, a fair distribution conld be mate between the two reading rooms, and you would thus save the duplication of the papers. The report shows that many of those in the Senate are not very much used, because it says that they are valuable for binding purposes on account of their not being very mucla used there. In fact, the whole report convinces me of the wisdoin of the proposition I have made, and I hope the House will adopt it either in regard to the Senate or in regard to the same question when we come to the House of Commons.

Mr. DAVIES (P.F.I.) 'The report to which the Minister of Finance has referred, almost entirely deals with the salaries of the otficers of the two Houses, dinl ats I have no opportunity to form a judgment on that question. I can make no comment upon that. lut it appears that the committee also considered the andisability of amalyamating several departments: which are now separated, such as the law department, the post offices, the aceountant's department amd the reading room, and after considering the whole thing they redommended that no change should be made in any of them. The separate post office, and the separate reading room were to he continned, and that has heen done ever since. I suppose they most hate amsilered the matter. The only recommemlation was with refaral to the stationery, that the amount to be expended for stationery should be limited, and that hereafter it shmilil not be excealed. But I tind that it has been exceerlerl. by this Homse. by thousamls of dollars, aml by the other House hy hmolreds. Now, if that report was adopted and the ofticials whe have comtrol of this expenditure were notitiel of it. it seems to me that they are open to censure for hating exeedted the limit.

Mr. FONTER. Vou have just stated pourself that the report was not alopted.

Mr. DAlliki (l'.E.I.) I sall. if the report was adopted: I did not know whether it hat been or not.

Mr. FONTPER. It wats mot.
Mr. DAVIES (I'E.I.) Then it Was a report merely, hut it was bever jatsied upon.

Nir. FOSTER. The House took noration.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Ceriainly, these recommendation have not heen enforeed by those who have control of the expenditure.

Mr. FOSTER. The senate has gone very carefully into the recommembations regaming stationery.

Amendment (Mr. Mrlock) negitived.
Mr. MeMULDEN. I motice an item here on page 1s?, one deed hox. Sls.a.7. What wes that mean:

Mr. FONTER. That is nsed for holding some documents of importance that hat to be kept.

Mr. 1)EVLIN. I notice an item for ice, S34s.30; who had the contrace for supplying the ice?

Mr. FOSTlER. I emmot say whether that was supplied by contract or not.

Mr. MULoCK. I was going to take exception to the item for postage for the senate, sion. In, you have to stamip letters:

Mr. FOSTER. We pay postage on all foreign letters, and every department does the same.

Suluries, House of Commons.......... .372.400
Mr. McMULLEN. There is a large number of ofticials in comnection with the House of Commons, and I agree with the Minister of Finunce that there is large room here for deductions. There are i number of names on the list that require some little attention. I notice a number of people hanging around the House of Commons, and to be seen in the library and other places. These draw a large amount of money in salaries, and I think we ought to find out what they do in the Howse of Commons before we pass these items. I would like to know whether the statf of otticials in the Honse of (ommons has been reduced:

Mr. SPEAKER. The only reduction that has been made in the permanent staff is that of $\mathbf{M} / \mathrm{s}$. Hurernay, who has ceased to be on the permanent staff. If my hon. friend will look at the Fistimates he will see a large reduction in the items this year. The late beputy serjeant-at Arms. who is now Serjeant-at-Arms, harl a salary of Sl.9W), and the Committee on Internal Ecomomy came to the conclusion that it was not necessity to reappoint an officer at that large salary, and as we now provide for that service ly the priyment of only $33(n)$.there is a reduction of 太ا, (fok) under that heirl. Then Mr. I uremay, who. as I said, has heen droppend from the statf, hat a salary oisl. (MNI. which will now he sat vel. Then, in the matter of the atcomatant. the committee will remember that Mr. Hartuey die:l recontly.and the assistant accomatant waspromoted wo there is a sating of ESO (here. Then the assist. ant accomatant has leen put upon the staff at the minimmm pay of a second-class clert or $\leqslant 1 . \mid(n)$ a ant had prevonoly. So that we hate manle a very large reduction in the expenditure by these changes. But there are allitions and increments "the staff, statutory increases. that are allowed to she members of the statti, amomating to Sl, (MNO. Then the curator of the reating room, whowas formerly proviled for maler the verjeant-at Arms estimate, is now provided for muler the Clerk's estimate, and a reduction hats aho heen made in his salary: that is to say, the former curator had a salary of 8800 and the present one commencesat a salary of storo. Provision is manle in the Estimates for the ensuing year to give him an increment of Sio. So I think my hon. friend will agree that the large reduction that has heen made. is is shown in the Estimates, a reduction of nearly Sl, (OX) in the staff, shows that we have been patying due regard to the ecomo. mies, which I am sure we all desire to practise in comnection with this hanch of the service, as well as in comection with every other branch.

Sir RICHARI) CARTWRIGHT. Who has been appointed Deputy Serjeant-at-Arms ?

Mr. SPEAKER. Mr. Bowie.
Sir RICHARD(ARTWRIGHT. What are his other duties:

Mr. SPEAKFR. He is my private secretary.
Sir RICHARI) CARTIVRIC:HT. I suppose the two duties will not clash. What salary does he receive as private secretary?

Mr. NPEAKFR. He receives sion .
Sir RICHARD) (ARTWRIG:HT. He will he arailable in case of the illness or absence of the Serjeant-at Arms:

Mr. SPEAKER: 「"s.

Sir RICHARI) (AR'TWRIGHT. If I recollect right, there was some difference of opinion between Mr. Speaker ami Mir. Serjeant in regard to the appointment of the deputy: Is the question settled? Because it is as well that we should understand it.

Mr. SPEAKEK. The question is settled. I announcel to the House that the appointment met with my approval.

Sir RI('HARI) (ARTWRIGHT'. If I remember right, the point at issue was whether Mr. Speaker or Mr. serjeant had the right to appoint.

Mr. SPEAKER. No, that was not the point at issue. I fully recognize the right of the serjeant io appoint his deputy, lut I hold that appointment must he mate with the approval of the speaker. and that no ofticer of this Honse can come on the floor of Parliament without the sanction and approval of the speater.

Sir RIC'HARD ('ARTWRICHT. It appears tw me that that is practically taking away the right of the appointment by the serjeant of his repnits. lecaluse if he call appoint no one withont the approval of the speaker, it is perfectly char that he eamot appoint. An appointment subject to actual veto is not the right to appoint in practice however it may be in theory.

Mr. sprethFR. I suppose the hon. gentleman Knows that the senate of the Cnited states has the right to pass legislation and the l'resident has the right to retoit.
 of that: lout I do not think that is on all foras with the right of appointment. I rather thought that the serjeant-at-Arms hat the right, either by law. statute or hy custom - I am not yuite sure which tomake his own appointment, and I shomhl like to have the opinion of the Minister of Justice on that point. My impression. I must say, is that the appointment rests with the Serjeant, but I am speaking of the recollection of the custom which prevailed. not with a distinct recollection of any statute on the suliject.

Mr. SPEAKER. I refer the hon. gentleman to the parliamentary authority usually reoognized in this Parliament : Pourinots Practice, new edition, page 2e23, which says:

[^31]Mr. BORDEN. Perhaps there are more sulordinate ofticers connected with this Honse than we have need of. During a byeelection in my comaty I held a public meeting in a certain oww, and after I hat done speaking I asked any one representing the other sile to speak. I had made a statement with respect to something that happened in this House last session. Up jumped an individual whom I did not know, and contradicted me flatly: He satid he had been present at every single ichate last session, and he knew that the statement I had made was absolntely untrue. I asked him who he was anl what he was doing at the House. He sail he had leen a duor-keeper in the House of Com. mons. I said: Certainly you could not have heen attending to your daties as door-keeper and heard all the debates. He said he had heard them. What I am stating here is absolutely true. If the doorkeepers of the House are engaged in listening to the debates for the purpose of going on public platforms to contradict members of the House, I think we should investigate the matter and dispense with the' services of these gentlemen who are not absolutely reguired to open the door when members come in and out of the House. I mention this because:

it matter which Mr. Sueaker or the Giovernment will not approve.

Mr. SPEAKER. I suppose the hon. gentleman knows there are door-keepers in the gralleries who can hardly avoid hearings the debates.

Mr. BORDEN. This man was not in the galleries, hut in the corridors. His name is Moore.

Mr. SPEAKFR. I do not remember any man of that name on the staff.

Mr PORDEN. He comes from Volfville, N.S.
Mr. DEVLIN. I helieve this applies to the permanent employes of the department who go out and take part in the elections and sometimes remain away weeks at a time. Last session we brought the sulject up, and the late Premier sad it was highly improper for employes to do so, and he would put a stop to it. During the recent provincial elections, we know that employés of the several departments were turned out loose amd allowed to go about for weeks. So the hon. gentheman has not much reason to complain of a doorkeeper when we have to fight an army of officials.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. I untice that a change has taken place in one item of salaries. It brings up the question again of the relative expenses of the senate and this House. We have a large numher of faithful, and I believe hard-working messenrers, who do their duties very well, and during the Fong sessions they attem to their duties very carnestly and attentively. A change has been male in regard to their salaries, by which they are paid so maich per day, whereas in the Senate they are paial ly the session. This is a change with eespect (o) this House. - They have hitherto been paid the same as the senate messengers. I should like to know the reason for making this change, and why our messengers, who have twice the amount of work that the senate messengers perform, should only get a per diem allowance, while the Senate messengers get a salary:

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman no doubt alludes to the sessional messengers. The practice, prior to last session, was that the sessional mes sengers receivel sezo for each session. Last session it was represented to me hy the messengers that, an account of the length of the session, they were entitled to an increase of pay. I frankly confess there was a good deal of reason in the proposition they made. But I came to the conclusion that if they were entitled to additional pay for a long session, as they alleged, at the rate of 52.50 per day, fixing the length of the session at $1(0)$ days, there was no reason why the rule should not work both ways. SoI gave the messengers the option of taking sian for each session, long or short, or taking $$ 2.50$ per day no matter what the length of the session may le. I think. on the whole, that was the most equitable view loth as regards the messengers themselves and the public service, and the Committee of Internal Fconomy wreed with me in that view. The messengers elected to take $$ 2$. 50 per day, which amounted to a rery considerable sum last session, but it may not amount to a very large sum for this session.
Nir RICHARD CARTWRIGH'T. I do not know how much we shall save, but we shall see. I want to call attention to the statement marle by the hon. member for Ottawa (Mr. Derlin) with regard to the interference by paid employés of this House. It appears to me that this is indeed indecent and improper, very indecent, and very particularly indecent and improper on the part of employés of this House, with whom members are continually brought into contact. I can conceive no more improper thing than that the men who are here employed and paid by the puhlic at large, not paid by a particular party, should be allowed to turn themselves into hacks for the benefit of either side. Nuch a proceeding brings about a state of relations between members of the House who meet these employes on the pnblic platform which is exceedingly unpleasant, and which I think members of the Giovernment ought to frown upon and discourage and which I venture to say if brought to the attention of Mr. Speaker he would severely discourage. My impression has been fora long time that fiovermment employés ought not to be allowed to take part in elections. If it is done, most assuredly it will lay the foundation for the introduction of the American system, which I would regret to see introduced into Canada. I have always stated most explicitly that if it came to my knowledge that a Govermment enploye had heen acting in behalf of either one political party, whether it was for me or against me, he must take his political life in his hands and go when his friends go. With respect to employes in this House, such conduct is a very gross violation of propriety. It is quite unfair and quite impertinent for these men, who are the servants of the House of Commons, to be brought into such positions as my hon. friemd mentioned that a doorkeeper of this House was. I think that a due regard to the honour and dignity of this Honse would canse such a person to be dismissed, if he is still in our service. The idea that a man who is a door-keeper here should take upon himself to contradict a member of the House of Commons is-I think the hon. Speaker will admit-contrary to all ideas of discipline and pride.

Mr. FOSTER. He was not a member at the time.

Sir RICHARI CARTWRIGHT. Whether he was or not.

Mr. SPEAKER. Generally speaking I concur in much of what has been said by the hon. member for Sonth Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright), but I do not go to the extent of armitting that an employi: of this House shall be deprived of the right to vote because he happened to be employed in this House.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I have not said that.

Mr. SPEAKER. I venture to express the opinion that none of the permanent employes of this House have, since my occupancy of the office of Speaker, taken part in an election, as my hon. friend from Ottawa has indicated. I would not deprive these people of the right of leave of absence if they wish to go and vote in their respective constituencies. What I understand from my hon. friend from King's (Mr. Borden) is, that the gentleman whom he says contradicted him in the recent bye-election contest, was not a permanent employé of this House, but one of the sessional messengers. I am sure my hon. friend from South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright) would not impose upon me the duty of following those sessional messengers to their respective homes, and dictating to them what course they should take in an election contest which takes place when the House is not in session.
Mr. DEVLIN. I am sorry Mr. Speaker mismaderstood what I saicl. I did not refer to any employis of this House. What I said was that the hon. gentleman who preceded me, and who sooke on the subject, had little reason to complain i: a door-keeper had taken part in the fight, at the distance which he mentions. I said we had greater reaton to complain against the rarious departments over which hon. gentlemen opposite have control, and from which an army of ofticials go out in the comenty fromi which I come, and in other counties, not for one, two or three days, but for weeks; athenting themselves from their oftice, and from their duties to take part in an election. The hon. Speaker, who reads the Ottawa daily papers, knows as well as I do who they are, hecanse their names during election time appar in the reports of such meetings, as having taken part in the fight.

Mr. Ma(DONALD)(Huron). While this matter is up I might say that in our section of the country it is a hatit on the part of the postmasters to gol out during elections and do all they can in opposition to those who are opposed to them. I am here to give the name of a prominent gentleman. Mr. Thomas Cowan, of Galt. who is the postmaster of that town. As soom as there is an election within 300 miles of him, he leaves his business in the town of cialt and goes out in opposition to the Liberal candidate. Last March he went to East Hurom, and did all he could on the election stump against the caudidate there. He went to East Bruce, and then to West Huron. I would like to know if it is the intention of the forermment to permit theseofficials toleave their dutiesand hecome partizans in such a sense as that" I think they should tell Mr. Cowan that if he has hasiness to perform in the town of Galt he should stay there, because it is unfair and unjust to allow officials of that kind to become platform stumpers in elections.
Mir. OBRIEN. I am the last man in this House ever to apply the turnoque argument for any political consileration. but when hom. gentlemen on the opposite sile of the House become so extremely virtuous on the sulject of the interference of officials in elections. I would just like these hon. gentlemen from Ontario to look at home, and if they have an opportunity of giving advice to their leader in the Provincial Parlianent I should be very glad if they would give him the adrice which they are now giving to gentlemen on this side of the House. I say I do not care to apply the tu quorue argument, but as this subject has been mentioned, and as we have so much tirtuous indignation from gentlemen on that side of the House, I say it would be just as well for them to impress upon the lealer of their party in the Ontario Legislature, the exceeding impropriety-I think the rule will apply in one case as well as the other-of officials of the Ontario Government leaving their offices, deserting their proper employment, and travelling at the public expense to take part in Dominion elections. . It is my misfortune to have a constituency in which the Ontario Government is specially powerful, and the persons I have to meet and whose exertions I have to counteract are chiefly officials of the Ontario Government. Gentlemen opposite talk about the

Mr. Speaker.

Franchise Act and all the iniquities connected therewith : but 1 may mention an instance which happened recently, when a division court clerk in the Parry Sound district--he held some other office, too, under the Ontario Govermment which is the reward of political virtue there-left his work, spent from one to two months making up roters' lists, and spent another month or so in accompanying the revising officer to every cont that he held. That was hardly a proper occupattion for a division court clerk. If there is any ofticial in the country who should carefully abstain from interference in politics, it is the division cont clerks. who must have a very considerable amount of personal influence in all political matters, since they know the circumstances of every man in the division in which they live, and they have many opportunities in their otticial position of conferring farours and benefits upon these people. I say that a grosser case can hardly be conceived than that a division court clerk should make himself the political agent of a political party for a Dominion or Provincial contest. This is one of the subjects which gentlemen on the Reform side of the House might very properly consider, and when they are discossing the impropricty ofofficials taking part in elections, I wish they would apply the same rule to their friems in Ontario and speak to them on the matter of propriety upon precisely the same rules as they apply to ofticials of this Homse or this Government, and ask them to cease that sort of political occupation which those officials of the Ontario Government are so fond of indulging in. Officials of the Ontario Govermment who have in their hands the expenditure of a large amount of money can go and say to one settlement: You vote for OBrien and you do not get the expenditure which you are entitled to, but vote for his opponent and you will get it. Talk alout corruption, talk about bribery a why, sir, on a comparatively small scale I would like to know where bribery was ever practised by the Dominion Government to such an extent as the bribery practised by the Ontario Govermment, not only in Provincial elections but in Dominion elections on every occasion where it is possible to exercise it. I am speaking from experience, and a pretty bitter experience too, as regards the Ontario ofiticials. Let hon. gentlemen opposite apply the same rule to them, and when we talk alout the interference of ofticials in Dominion elections, let us understand, if we are to debar officials of this Government from interfering, that the officials of the Provincial Governments are to he equally debarred from indulging in these political practices.

Mr. PERRY. Although I have known public officials on several occasions to stump my county for Government camdidates, I am not aware that one has been dismissed for it, although some of them have leen absent from their duties for fifteen or twenty days. But that is not the case with Liberal officials. In my county there were two officials, who had heen employed on the Prince Edward Is. land Railway for eighteen years, and hecause they were supposed to be Liberals and to have voted for the Liberal candidates, they were dismissed without an hour's notice, although they had in no way neglected their duties or committed any offences, and nothing could be found against them. The superintendent in Charlottetown was nerely instructed hy the department here to dismiss these men promptly, and they were dismissed. Last session I asked the reason of their dismissal several times, but not one word conld I get from the dummies. They had no reason : these men were dismissed for no reason. There was no proof even that they woted for the Liberal condidates, and I defy the l epartment of Railways to give any proof: they merely suspected, and on that suspicion the men were dismissed without a moment's notice. I say it is a shame. Can hon. gentlemen opposite say that they have dismissed one of the men, and there have heen many of them, who stumped my county and made speeches in fivour of the foremment: I believe, if the whole wuth were known, that it would be foum that they were prompted by their masters. But the poor unfortunate firits, because they rote as they think leest, are dismissed. I remember a wharfinger whostole all the inoney he had eollected during two years: but becanse he was a friend of the doremment, his trial occupied a whole year hefore he was dismissed by the department. If he had been a poor unformate Cirit, they would not have allowed the botom of his chair to get warm before they would have lismissed him. In am in favour of allowing otficials to enjoy the benefit of their contictions in politics, with regard to roting for one side or the other as they choose; but they have no right to make use of their positions as public servants in order to stump) the comontry and canvass in favour of the (iovernment and against the Opposition. If they wint to canrass for the Government or any other party, let them give up their ottioe and go before the country as free men, just ats I and my constituents do. It is unfair and unjust. and ats long as this practice goes on, there will he every chance for a corrupt (iovemment to exist in this comery.

Mr. MHLLS(Amapodis). My attention has been called to some remarks mate by the hon. member for Kings (Mr. Borden) while I was out, with reference to an otficial taking part in his election. It would have been well if the hon. member had extended his remarks, and had called attention to several ofticials among his own friends in King's ( ©ounty, who had taken undue interest, and used, as I am informed, undue intluence in the election, on his !ehalf. I have reference to certain postmasters in King's County, one in particular, who was very ardent for the return of my hon. friend, and who canvassed and spoke against the (iovernment, and exerted himself generally in the most ohnoxious manner. My hon. friend knows nothing about that when he speaks in this House abont Ciovermment otticials interfering, but he selects an individual who happened to say something to him at a public meeting. If this idea were carried out, $I$ am sure it would be found that a larger number of Dominion ofticials in King's County and Anmpolis County, particularly in Ammpolis County, who are Liberals, and who held their oftices ever since 1878 , some of them longer, took active part in the elections: but they have not been disturbed. I know of my own knowledge one postmaster, two postmasters, yes, three, who took the most obnoxious part against me in the election. One of them in particular went into the revising courts, and nearly every one who listened to him knew that he was stating a great many things that were not true, in order to put Liberal rotes on the list. Another one, a colonel of the militia, exerted himself greatly in the general elections of 1891. He went so far as to say : "We are going to have Mills out, we are going to defeat this Government.: and we have got American money to do it with." That is what a colonel of militia in a principat portion of Ammapolis County stated, and I can get a solemn declaration to that effect. If we are going to make these charges against ufticials, let us carry them out. I am willing to go into the matter ; and if we clo, there will be a great many vacancies in Annapolis County for me to reconmend my frients to fill.

Mr. BORIDEN. My hon. friend from Annapolis (Mr. Mills) has thought well tointerfere in matters pertaining to King's County, not only here, but during the recent contest in which I was engaged. He familiarized himself, I believe, pretty extensively with the western portion of my connty. However, we will let that pass for the present. I do not see that the remarks which he has offered here are very pertinent to the guestion under discussion. We are discussing a vote to pay the officials of this House. It has no reference whatever to the salaries of postmasters or any other outside officials. If it were in order, I could go beyond the otficers of this Honse, and I combld tell the hon. gentleman that my constituency swamed with Dominion officials. But 1 do mot consider. this the proper moment to bring that matter up. Probahly at some time lloring the session I may have a proper opportunity to diseuss that question. But with reference to a postmaster or postmasters interfering in my behalf in King's County, I lefy the hon. gentleman to name a single posimaster who ever spoke in public or took part in any public meeting in my behalf in the county of Kings in the recent bye-elections. No such thing took place. The postmasters in that county voted, some for, some against me, as they hat a perfect right to do, but in no arse did they actively interfere ; and I will say this, for the officers generally within the county on looth sides of politics, that I do not know of one, except the individual to whom I refer, who took any active part in the elections. Mr. Speaker referred to the fact that that individual was not a permanent official. If I made a mistake with reference to that, it was because I took the individual's word. I asked him who he was, and he said he was a door-keeper. It turns out now that the statement was no more true than the statement he made on the platform, which was a downright absolute impulent falsehood. Mr. Speaker seems to say he can exercise no control over those individuals who are only temporarily employed. I am sorry he has found it necessary to come to that conclusion, because he is offering a premium to such persons to go on in their insolent attacks, and exposes himself to a similar indignity. I do not think it will tend to the elevation of politics that a gentleman, oceupying the position of member of Parliament, may be subjected within a few months by a man whom he has sent here and there with messages, carrying letters and parcels, to the indignity of being contradicted and blackguarded on the pulilic platform. I do not think that will have ia tendency to raise the tone of Canadian politics or keep honourable, respectable men in politics, and Ihope that Mr. Speaker will reconsider his decision.

I can prove every word I have said by the declarations. if necessaty, of a hundred people who attended the meeting, amd I repeat that when a mau hiss conducted himself as this man has, he should not be allowed to continue in the service of the Honse. This man's name is s . E. Moore, and he appears in the Auditor General's Reportas sessional cmphes at $s .50$ per day. I have made some eny uiry, and find this office is a sort of heirloom or family atfair. There is the father and the son. The old man contes one year and the youngster next. Last year happened to be the son's year, this year to be the ohd mans for when I came back I found the wh man on duty as door-keeper.
Mr. SPEAKLK. The hon. gentleman has aceused Mr. Moore of making a false statement when he said he was dom-keeper here last year. My hon. friend is not accurate, hecause he will understand that sessional messengers are employed as door-keepers during the session of Parliament. That is part of their duty. I may go further and say that I do not see on what pretense I could undertake to montrol Mr. Moreres actions during the recess. If any grave complaint of dereliction of duty, for instance, were pade against him, if he hail lreen accused of leaving the service of the House for the purpose of taking part against the hon. member for Kings in the election contest, the hon. gentleman would have some hasis for his argument. But let me print cout that my hon. friend was not a member of l'arliament when this gentleman spoke asgainst himin King's County, but a candidate, and ili. Mowre haul as good a right to speak against my hom. friend as against his opponent. If my hom. friend had been defeated, as many of his coll. leagues were, he would not have been here to accuse this messenger of having taken part in that election. If this man had heen guilty during the session of the comduct charged against him, the case would be different, but during the time when the sessional messengers are occupied about their own business and not umder our control, we have no right te interfere with them.
Mr. BokDEN. Mr. Speaker says the only objection I made against Moore seems to be that he statel what was not true with reference to his position here. That is not all my statement. I say it turns out now that the man was not only stating what was untrue with reference to what I hail fuoted is having owcurred in the House, but stated it falsehoed with reference to the position he ocenpiet.

Mr. SPEAKER. No, he did not.

Mr. BORDEN. That is what I said, and I repeat it. What I complain of is this: I made a statement with reference to the trade between this country and the Spanish West Indies, and I said that the Minister of Finance had last session coincided in my views. This is horne out ly Hansarel. But this individual stepped on the platform, and said I haul stated what was utterly and absolutely untrue, that he hal heard every debate in the House and no such thing happeneld. Now, if Mr. Speaker approves of that sort of thing, I venture to say he would not have approved it if I were supporting the side on which he sits.

Mr. WOOD (Brock ville). Iregret very much to hear the hon. gentleman make that last remark. It seems to me that the remarks of Mr. Speaker are quite in point, and I do not see from his standpoint, how he could take any action at all in the case put by the hon. member for King's. This man is not enployed during the recess, and not being in the employment of the Government then, he had a perfect right to make what use he pleased of his time. whether to take part in an clection or not, and I fail to see how any argment whatever can be based against the action of the Govermment or the Speaker for employing this man and their inaction in not dismissing him.
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGH'T. I think it is not desirable that persons, whether employed temporarily or permanently in this House, should be encouraged to take part in political demonstrations in the way this person is represented to have done ly my hon. friend behind me. It is, I think, reasonable and proper that members of this House should not be exposed to come in contact with persons who have demeaned themselves in the fashion my hon. friend from King's describes this person to have demeaned himself. I do not mean to say there is not a difference between permanent and temporary employés, but I do submit that. as a mere matter of common courtesy among the various memlers of this House. it is desirable that our messengers should not be persons who will come into violent collision with members on either side. I all rather surprised at the statement of the hon. memher for Brock ville and of Mr. Speaker. I think it is a reasomaine proposition that those employed as sessional messengers should be thought to olserve a certain amount of reticence and decorvon when hrought into contact with gentlemen who have heen or are camdidates for seats in this House. That was all the extent to which my hon. friends remarks went. and I do not think that it is desirable and proper that any man who has acted as this man is represented to have done should be reappointed.

Mr. FORBE:. It seems to be very ditficult for the Government to control these men of the name of Hoore. Reference has been made to a man of that name here now, and I might refer to another man of the same name who is the revising barrister in my county.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I think we must comtine ourselves to the othicials of the House umber this item. There will be a subsequent opportunity to refer to any matter of that kind.

Mr. FORBES. The hon. member for Amapolis (Mr. Mills) referred to certain otticials having taken part against him. In the county I represent. the otficials of this (iovermment did that to a much greater extent. As to the statement of the hon. member for King's that the mau may not have been under the control of the Speaker at the time when he nade the remark referred to, I think, when such a matter is brought to the notice of the speaker or the Government, some notice should be taken of it. We find in regaril to this that there is an alternation every year. This year it is the son, and next year it is the father. We are told that the son cannot receive the castigation lecause it was the father who committed the offence, but it should le stated whether the father is to occupy any position again.

Mr. SPEAKER. I have heard of the father's sins being visited on the son, but I never heard of the sins of the son being risited on the father.

Mr. Bories.

Mr. FORBFS. In the town of Liverpool in my county, the lighthouse keeper trook part.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Orter.

Mr. FORBES. I almit I am a little out of order.
Mr. Mo.MULLEEN. I wish to reply to the remarks of the Speaker and the hon. member for Brockville (Mr. Wond). The Speaker referred to the fact that a sessional messenger or clerk is not under the control of the House except during the session, and that after the session it is not to be expected that his taking part in political discussions, either for or acrainst the fovermment, is any breach of decorum. Where are we going to draw the line? Suppose the Irputy clerk of the House, whose duties are largely confined to the session -

Mr. SPFAKER. He is a permanent officer.
Mr. NeMCLLEF. Moore is also a permanent otticer. He comes here every year and he is as much a permanent officer as the depaty clerk, and if you are to allow sessional messengers to come here gathering political information and getting Sis. Bl $^{\text {a day, and then to allow them to go on the }}$ stump and alonse members of the House or candidiates for election, where are you going to draw the line: Why should you not allow the deputy clerk or the clerk of this House to do the same thing. I understool the hon. member for Muskokia tos saly that employes of the Ontario diovernment stated on the public phatform that if the people roted against their candidate they would not get any money for their colonization roads. I should like to know if he hearl that statement himself. I challenge him to prove that he ever heard with his own ears any such statement in his riding. There is In man in this Dominion more to keep the ofticers of his department within proper limits than Mr. Mowat. I clo not know of any otficer of the Ontario (iovernment being allowed to take part in any election with Mr. Nowat's knowledge or consent. The hon. gentleman sugryests to us that we should attem to our own house at home before speaking of these matters here. I am not prepared to justify the improper action of any olficer under the Mowat Government, but I think, before charges are made, there should be some attempt to bring these facts before the Mowat coovermment. and then, if that liovernment should fail to discharge its duty in disciplining its own ofticials. complaint may be mate. I have heard of no case in which ofticials of that diovernment have interfered in elections.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh.
Mr. McMULLEN. I challenge thehon. gentleman opposite to name one.

Mr. HUGHES. Alam Walters ran against Fairlairn.

Mr. Mcmulle... I ask whether the action of that man has been sulmitted to the Ontario liovcrnment.

Mr. MILLS (Annapolis). Ies, it has.
Mr. Mc:MULLEN. I challenge any hon. gentleman to cite one case that will bear in any respect a comparison with the exhibition we had during the last election, of Sir Charles Tupper coming out here, he being the High Commissioner for Canada in England, and travelling from one end of this country to the other while he was paid by the people of this country to discharge the duty of High Commissioner in England. Let he comes here and lectures the people of the Dominion as to what they have to clo, and abuses, in the most violent language he could lay his tongue to, the Opposition in this House, calling us annexationists. I challenge hon. gentlemen to find anything to compare with that exhihition made by Sir Charles Tupper, and yet they have made a charge that the Ontario (iovernment were derelict in their duty in allowing their employes to go upon the stump. I have taken part in elections for 35 years, and I can say that I have never known any Ontario official to take part in an election with the knowlege of his (iovernment.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh.
Mr. Me MULLEN. Take the case of Mr. Cowan, of Galt. He was appointed postmaster, he travels to varions parts-

Sir fOHN THOMPSON. I would ask the hon. gentleman not to discuss these questions now. They can the brought up on a more suitable occasion.

Mr. DEPUTY SPLAKFR. We are on the question of House of Commons salaries. I have allowed this discussion to go on too long, but now I must ask the hon. gentleman to keep to the item. The member for Muskoka was out of order, but we have been out of order for a considerable time, and now I think we should stick as much as possible to the item under discussion.

Mr. FIINT. I have listened very carefully to what has been said in the hope that the committee and the Government would take a stand with regard to this question, and would intimate their disapproval of ofticers of the House of Commons taking a prominent part on the platform in connection with party politics. Now. I must say that personally I have had a great deal of pleasure in the relations I have had with the messengers and ofticers of this House, and I have found them very attentive and agreeable. But I must say it wonld be very umpleasant for a gentleman who had ocenpied the high position of representative of an electoral district, to meet these gentlemen upon a public political platform, feeling, in the tirst place. that they were salaried officials of the country, and in the second place, that he would be. liable to meet them again where their social position, tempomarily, at any rate, would be very different. I think that in the interest of these officials themselves, an intimation should be made that it wouhd le displeasing to the Commons and to the Government if they took this prominent part in politics. In regard to their right to rote, I think it would be in the highest degree improper to intimate in any way that they were not at perfect liberty to exercise their franchise. I think every gentleman in this Honse will armit that it would le an entirely unequal contest hetween a door-keeper, or a messenger of this House, and a man representing, or who might represent a constituency in Parliament, to bandy words upon a public platform as to a question of veracity between one and the other. and this House wonld not be protecting its own dignity if it did not intimate to its messengers and ofticials that if they took a prominent part in politics they should do so at the risk of losing their. positions. I listened with a great deal of attention to the remarks of the hon. member for Muskokia
(Mr. OBrien). Whose position in this House always entitles him to he heard with respect, but notwithstanding the strong tome in which he spone, I fail to gather from him whether he approved or disapproved of this sort of conduct on the part of officers of this House. Although he expressed his regret at heinf whliged to use the th quoqur: argument. yet he dwelt upon that line altogether. Now. if this Hons: were to decide for itself to disapprove of this comluct on the part of its officials. I helieve we can safely leale it to public opinion in Ontario or amwhere else to deal with the local ofticials of each province. It is unfair to these otficials themselves. and it is unlecoming to the dignity of the representatives of the people. that this sort of thing shombl he: allowed to go on, and I regret we have not hat a stronger leclamation from his honour the Spatier in comection with this matter.

Mr. MILAS (Amapolis). If I may be allowed, as there has been a challenge thrown across the Homse. I would state a case that is larger in enormity than the case which is referred to by the hom. member for Sorth Wellington (Mr. McMullen). I will state a case that oceurred in Amaprolis County.

The (HAIRMAN. I must ask the hom. member wot to wamler off into discussion of local politics. I asked the hon. member for Wellington to drop the diseltssion on that subject, and he ilid.

Mr. BRU.VFAU. (Tramslation.) Mr. Chairman. hefore this matter has heen entirely dealt with, I hope I maty he allowed to make a few remarks in Mrler tw explain to the hon. the Minister of Public Works. Whom I see now in his seat. how matters $\therefore$ : in my comaty. As the hon. Minister knows Fery well. there are in my comnty humdreds of public ofticers, and I have to complain here that all these pulli: officers are more or less influenced in election time: not only during ferleral elections, hat also during local elections. In 1888 . when the dovernment assumed the direction of the works which were maler the control of the harbour commis-sinmers--

Mr. DEPUTY $\therefore P E A K F R$. (Translation.) I will anserve to the hon. member that we are lealing with the matter of contingencies, that is the ailaries of the otficers of this Honse. I know where the hon. member wants to come to: he wants to speat about the officers of the (iovernment at sorel. He shall have a later opportunity to speak alout them. As other hom. members of this Honse wete called to order, 1 will ask him to postpone his remarks to a later day.

Mr. BRUNEAU. (Translation). The debate has taken such a wild range that I thought I had the right to bring that question now.

Mr. LAN(iELIER. Mr. Speaker has laid down as a rule that the sessional employes, messengers and others, must stick to their work during the session, but they may do what they please outside the session. That is a reparture from the rule lad down by the previous Speaker, the present Minister of Public Works. Every member who was in the House last Parliament must remember the debates that took place with regard to two French translators, being sessional employés, Mr. Tremblay and Mr. Poirier. These gentlemen were very good translators, never a word of complaint was male as to the manner in which they discharged their duties : as a matter of fact I think they were the very hest French translators we have ever had as sessional tramslators. Still they were dismissed ly the then Speaker-ilthough I admit a great deal of pressure was brought to lear on him-not because they did not discharge their duties in this House faithfully. but because they hat interfered in the election of the then member for Richmoml and Wolfe (Mr. IVes), and hecause one of them had written in the newspapers against the then Secretary of state, Mr. Chaplean. A complaint was malle hy the Necretary of State that one of these tramslators had interfered in his election. and he was dismissed. A few moments ago His Homour, the Speaker, in answer to my hon. friem from Kings. N.S. (Mr. Forbes). satid that the hon. member in whose election this interference took place was not a member of the Honse when the interference tonok place. The very same answer might have been made - -the seretary of State was not then a member of the Honst, when the interference complained of took place during the general elections of lsi-. Sone of the memiers who complatined afterward, were then members of the Honse. With rearard to these two tamslators, their interference was nothing compared with what has taken place during the last election. There was this further in their farour. When they were appointed. it was distinctly milerstond that outside the sesson they would be at liberty to exercise their political rights, and to take any part in politics that they chose, and yet for hating exercised that right they were summatrily dismissed from the service of this Honse. I think that the same rule should be applied to employts of the one side of politics as is applied to those of the other side. As the rule has been alopted by the previous Speaker that the employes of this House should not interfere in politics, either in the general elections or in the lyeelections. I think the same rule should be applied now: and whencer an employe of this House. either high or low. interferes in any election, he should umlerstaml that he talies his oflicial life in his hamds.

It being six orlock the Committee rose, and the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

Mr. Mc:MLLIEN. How many messengers are retainel in connection with the House of (innmons:

Mr. sPEAKER. There are forty-five sessional messengersinaldition to the permanent messengers, of whom there are twelve, including the two night watchmen.

Mr. MeMULLFN. Does Mr. Speaker think it necessary to keep so many messengers?

Mr. SPEAKEPU. The hon. gentleman will observe that the item under which the question of messengers will arise is the Serjeant-at-Arms estimate, which will he the next item.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Before the House rose at six o'clock a matter of some moment was muler discussion as to which I should he glad to have the mature opinions of Mr. Spaker and of the Ministers, too. The point has been raised by my hon. friend near me (Mr. Borlen) with respect to the manner in which we should deal with sessional messengers not employed during tho entire session, but who sitw fit to interfere in elections in a manner referred to ly the hon. member for King's. sulmit that it is not experlient, and it is an indecorous thing that men who have leeen employed in this House, whether temporarily or permanently, should conduct themselves in the manner referred to by that hon. gentleman, and I was sorry before the House rose to hear Mr. Speaker make a statement which could only lee construed, in my opinion, coming from a person in his position, as an encouragement to sessional messengers to conduct themselves in the fashion that has been referred to. I think that is to lie regretted, for, as was pointed out by the hon. member for (Juelece (Mr. Langelier), it wats in distinct contradiction to the action taken hy the late Speaker, the present Minister of Public Works. I will take upon myself to say this: Had the case leen reversed, had it sessional messenger, though employed only for a short space of time, conducted himself towaris a supporter of the (iovernment in the way which the hon. member for King's lescriled this particular sessional messsenger to have conducted himself, I entertain no doult, and I do not think a member of the House does, that that party would never have heen employed again by Mr. Npeaker. I think that the least that should be said should tee that an ofticer of the House had sio comducted himself. No regret was expressenl. We were simply tohl that Mr. Speaker had monathority. which was technically true. I donot desire tocensare Mr. Speaker for refusing to punish him. because he had no prwer to ilo so, but there should be an expression of opinion that no such at:tion should be permitted, and any person who so acted would not again be employed hy the Honse. That much is due to the dignity of the House at large, and that both Mr. Speaker and the fiovernment should do.

Mr. FONTER. I desire to ask a question. Is the comduct complained of that of a persen emphoyed liy the House:

Nir RICHARI) CARTWRIGHT. A person who. for at considerable number of sessions, hats lreen ellnployed as a sessional messenger.

Mr. FONTER. The young man, although last year was employed here as a sessional messenger, was, after the prorogation of l'arliament, no longer connected with this House. He is a young man, who, at that time, was attending Wolfville College, and with respect to his return I think there is no certainty whatever. He is not here now, and is not an officer of the House. I do not suppose that the hon. gentleman will lay down the doctrine that a young man, who was once a sessional messenger and listened to the delsites, after he left the service of the House and liecame astudent at a college, has not an equal right in point of respectability, dignity and position as a citizen to express his opinion at a public meetting, just as much as a gentleman who was not a member of Parliament but a candidate for the honour, who might have been elected or not. Further, the young man had a perfect right, if he found sutficient number of supporters, to have been a candidate in opprosition to the gentleman who was running in that county at that time. My memory was refreshed when the hon. gentleman told his tale of woe, and I remember that two or three weeks ago I received a letter from a gemeleman of great respectalifity and worth in that county, and not a political parti\%an by any means. Writing to me: on other matters. towards the end of the letter he referred to an amusing incident at a public meeting, which the: hon. gentleman who is now the member for King's was addressing. At the emd, a call was made for any indivilual whon wishen in speak in opposition to the camblidate's statements. A lot of Wrolfville bxys, who were there in eompany with this young man, called ont his name, ami called it out incessantly. The young man did uot $u$ ish to rise amd speak, but on íneing called again and again. he simply said that the hon. gentleman, whol was so valiant on the platforn. in telling the people what he hatd slone in facing the Ministers, Wats, in his opinion, never very brave in larliament in making statements when Jinisters were present. It just struck me, whether or mot these twor relations, the: relations of this afternonon and the relation of theletter, were not with reference to exactly the same incilent and the same person. Now, if it was sor. and if these stater wents are true. the yomig man hats just ats gome a right in this clemaroatic comotry of our: to stand on an equal phane with the candidate, lefore the people on the hustings. It would lse different if he were a permament oftioner of this Holase.

Sir RICHARI) ('ARTWRIGHT. That is an evasion of the question. I think. The point was raised hy my hon. frient from, King's Mr. Boralen! as to the exprediency of such a party being elnployed again. I repeat distinctly that it is very inexpealient that men who are here without any clisrespect to them--in a menial capacity. more or less, shouhl, in the intervals hetween their parliamentary eniployment. conduct themselves ats this person has done. This man has been here, on aml off for the last eight years. the father amel son hatr ing taken turns, I understand. hut no doulit he is a useful lebater on the stmmp, as: I gather from the Minister of Finance.

Mr. FOSTERS I do mot think he is a delsiter on the stump. He was just called up at the time.

Sir KICHARI) ('ARTWRI;H'T. He may or may not have leen. The statement matcle hy my hon. friend from Kingis (Mr. Borrlen! is that this person: contradicted him in a very offensive fashom, intimating that he had been making false and improper statements. I do not think it is desirable that parties who do that kind of thing shosuld he regarde! as eligible for employment for sessional messengers, in a relationship which lorings them more or less in contact with gentlemen in the position of my hon. friend behind me. I think it is an objectionable thing, and I think it is slue to the dignity of the Houst that an expression should have been male by Mr. Speaker that he clid not approve of a man employed in that capacity acting in such a way, and who might return again as a sessional messenger. If he has cut comnection with this House for ever and a day, I have nothing more to say. I understool Mr. Speaker, if I interpreted his remarks aright, to lay down the proposition that such demeanour was in no respect a reason why this man should not be employed again as sessional messenger. I consider it is a good reason why he should not lie employed in that capacity, and I think that the conduct of the Govermment and Parliament during the time of the late speaker with respect to the two gentlemen referred to by my hon. friend from Quebec (Mr. Langelier), showed in a very clear manner how very differently these things are regarded when they happen to interfere with the comfort or dignity of gentlemen on the other side. I recollect perfectly well the case of the two translators, and their conduct was in no respect more objectionable, nor were the reasons for interfering with them other than those which did not in the fullest degree apply to the disability of the re-employment of this party. That is my position on the point, and it is not affected by what the Minister of Finance has stid.

Mr. SPEAKER. I do not think my hon. friend has got a grievance, because this gentleman who was alleged to hate made offensive remarks is not in the employment of the Honse now.
Sir RICHARI) CARTWRI(iHT. He has lreen.
Mr. SPEAKER. He has certainly not been employed since this crecurrence took place.
Mr. LACRIER. And will not any more:
Mr. sPEAKER. I do not say that.
sir JOHN THOMPSON. Before we say whether he shall tee employed again or not. I should like to hear his account of what oecurred. This appears to have been a very excited political meeting, and. without in the least legree impugning the accuracy of the hon. gentleman from Kings (Mr. Bordon), I think it wonld be most unjust to express an opinion that this young man is ineligilhe for employment matil Mr. Speaker hears what his side of the case is.

Mr. Foster. That is fair-play.

Mr. LaURIER. Yes, fair-play : that is what we want. It seems to me we need not enybire at this moment whether the young man behaved or misbehaved on that necasion. Are we to understand that the Government allow their employes, or the employs of this House in receipt of public money for work done around these buildiags, to interfere in elections? If they do so, let as knew it. I do not care whether the conduct in this particular case is offensive or not offensive. Is it to be understond that employes of the Government or employes of Parliament are within their rights when they go on the stump in the country? It seems to me that they have no such right and that such conduct should not be tolerated or encouraged.

Mr. Foster. Was he an employe?
Mr. LAURIER. Yes, I think he was an employé. He has been a sessional messenger for years. He is not this year employed; butsuppose he had come hack at the opening of Parliament, are we to understand that under such circumstances when complaint was made against him, he should have beein retained? It seems to me he should not have lreen retained in the service.

Mr. McMULLEN. It appears to me that the Minister of Finance did not catch the point raised by the hon. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard Cartwright). The question was, that this afternoon, the Speaker distinctly led the House to understand that neither he nor the Government could be held responsible for the conluct of sessional clerks during the recess of Parliancent. He led the House to understand that while sessional clerks were here and under the employ of the House they certainly should not le permitted to take such an active part, but that in the interval letween the sessions they could do what they liked. I want to know if the Speaker is still prepared to adhere ou the principle he has laid down: I fancy that if this person had acted in such a way towarils a sul porter of the Government he would reap the same result as was administered to the two Honsoict translators and get bounced with rery little cere mony. I should like to know from the liovern. ment whether they consider it is pradent and pro. per to accept the doctrine laid down he Mr. Speaker, that sessional clerks may lecome puiitical stumpers when the House is not in session. That is the principle the Speaker has laid down. and that is the principle we want decided. If thecior. ermment are going to ine responsible for that. I think it is very strange combluct on their part.
Mr. OLIMET. I think hon. gentemen oppowite have mistaken the ruling they havecited as coming from me when I had the honour of leing Nipaker of the Honse of Commons. The rule was never laid down by me that a sessional messenger.or a sessiomal clerk, or a sessimal translator. conla never during recess work in the elections. The principle that was laid down and the rule that was enforced was this : that these sessional translators, Ining more or less in the service of the hon. members of tili:House, had certain duties towards the members of the House, and if they chorse to take any part in elections they could do it. but they have to preserce that measure of decorum and reepect towards the members of the House to which hom. memiers are entitled. The two gentlemen who were referred to were not dismissed lecanse they had taken part in the general election of 18sb. hit lecause it was complained, and it was established to my satisfaction and admitted by them. that they had been behaving towards a memiker of the fiovernment and a member of the Homse, in such a disrespectful way, using silly lamgarge. and making themselves generally so whoxions. that really they could not remain in the service of the House. I thought it was $t(x)$ bad that members of the House should have to be in constant relations with those men; and the same rule that 1 enforced then I would enforce yet if 1 were Speaker of the House, and I wowld cnforce it not. only on behalf of the friends of the Administration but on behalf of the friends of the $0_{\text {pposition as }}$ well.
Mr. LaNiELIER. What we complain of is that the rule laid down by the Speaker to-lay is not the same rule as that laid down before. The language used by the employe in yuestion was very rough language, giving the lic to a member of ti.is: House. What the Speaker said this afternom was that the man was a sessional employe, and that. after he left the House, he was no longer under the control of the Speaker and was free to use what language he chose towards a member of this HowseThat was the reason I said that the rule laih down this afternoon was different from the rule laidilown by the former Speaker.
Mr. OLIMET. I did not understand the Speaker this afternoon to say that. He said that a sessional employé should not take part in an election, during a session ; but that after the session he ceased to be under his control. The hon. member for Quebec Centre has saill that giving the lie to a candidate is a very rough thing to do. Certainly : hat there are a great many ways of doing that. For instance, a man may say that an hon. sentleman is mistaken or in error, which comes to pretty much the same thing. Noborly will olject to a man stating on the hustings that another man is stating what is not correct, or not true, hut the latter may olject very seriously to le told that he is a liar. While I would dismiss an officer of the House for telling a member that he is a liar, I certainly would not dismiss him for sayiur that the statements he was making were not entirely true, and I understoon that such was the case with the hon. member for King's.

Mr. FLINT. I was in hopes that we would get a stronger expression from the Finance Minister at the conclusion of his remarks. He mate a series of statements which were perfectly correct, and to which no one could take exception: but he either purposely or intentionally avoided the very point which the hon. member for King's and the members on this side of the House are endeavouring to induce the authorities on the other side to reach. that is, that they would be willing to intimate 10 the serrants of this House that such comiuct as hats been descriked ly the hon. member for King's would not meet with their approval. I think that is about as far as we conuld reatsonably ask those who have control of these matters to go. While the speaker was perfectly correct in saying that he had no power over those persons while they were away, yet the authorities of the House have a certain authority as to the character and deportment of those whom they employ. Now. I do not wish to dignify too much the individual who has been mentioned here to-day. becanse, as the hon. Minister of Justice has said. there may be amother side to the story. The man in question may have a rersion which would put his conduct in at rery favourable light. He is not unler our jurisolic tion at the present time. hut I trust that members of this House, or camdidates, who are recognized hy custom as occupying the same social or political position as members, will he protected from being placerl in a false fosition by those who at some time may secupy a different social position from them. Thei.: liability to attaeks of this kind may te very umpleasant to members on this side of the House. Mon. gentlemen on the other side have a prompt and efficient remerly, because the power is in their hands to dismiss offenders of that kind with a snap of their finger : but members on this side have no such remedy. With regard to the employes of other (iovernments, we ought to take as strong grounds as we do with regard to employés of this dovernment. Noborly has any desire to interfere with the proper and legitimate freedom of public officials as electors, but I think that the members of this Househave reason to ask the (ioverument to protect them from insolent conduct on the part of employés of this House, who occupy lifferent positions from themselves.

Mr. SPEAKER. I hope I did not make myself misunderstood this aftemoon, I drew a marked distinction, or desired to do so, letween those who ure permanent employés of the House and those who are not. As the hon. Minister of Public Works has stated, I do not pretend to say that there are no circumstances under which sessional employés ought not to be rejected becanse of their actions in regard to elections during the reness. But let us take this very case which my hon. friend from King s has lreeth discussing this afternom. He never brought the matter to my notice, thongh we have leen in session upwarels of a month. This man might have been employed here without mu know. ing anything at all of the circomstances which the hon. member has allegred : and it cammot lee expecterl that we should refuse to employ a man lecathere of some aumour that he had lreen guilty of impertinent comluct to a candilate in the Province of Sinat Sootia, although the rumour may bot have reached our ears. I do lay down the principle that there is a marked distinction to Ine drawn letween the: $^{2}$ permanent employes of this House, who I think ought unt to go in the stump at all or tathe ang other part in elections than the noere recording if their totes amil mervely sessional employes. who between one session and another hatre. I think, a per. fect right to exercise their privileges ats citizens in any election that may take place. As my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works hats stated. they may lee guilty of conduct which wonld not justify us in employing them at the legiming of amother session. Certainly such conduct. if it occurs during the recess, should be brought to the attention of the Speaker hefore the eommencement of the session. so that he may lee able to act with intelligence with regard to it.

Mr. BORDEN. With reference that point. 1 guite agree with Mr. Speaker. At the lnegiming of the session, some time ago at any rate, 1 spoke to Mr. Dulne, the chief nessenger. almut inis math, amd he tohl me that the man wois mot here but that his father was. 1 . therefore, allowed the matter to drop, as 1 wats not prepared io visit the sins of the son on the father, and if this discussion had not arisen to-day as it has, very likely I would not have referred of is specially. While on my feet. I would like to refer for the moment to the distinction which the hom. Minister of Public Works, our late Speaker. drew. 1t seems to me a pretty nice distinction. He sail that he would punish an ofticial for calling a member of Parliament a liar on the spot. but wonld not punish him if he satid that he wis a liar inferentially. in polite form of speech. He sial there were many ways of saying politely that a man lied. I would put this question to my hon. frient. sup. pose it could be shown to him that one of his officers, while not calling an ex-member of liarlia ment, made a statement which proved that that ofticial was a liar, would he consider it was proper some action should be taken!

Mr. FOSTER. Who would le the julge:
Mr. BORDEN. The public records woull lie. the judge. I repeat, as some members of the Govemment have referred to this matter while I was not here, that I will go lefore a committe.. or any one of the Ministers, and will undertake t., satisfy any one of them that this irdividual toll a deliberate falsehood, and told it in an insultins manner : and I will prove my statement by (omservatives who were present, and by the records of Parliament which I yuoted at the time I was contradicted by this individual, who said he had heard every word spoken during the last session. and that what I asserted was absolutely false. This question may be lookel at from another point of view. It seems there are unnecessary officials employed here, because this man claimed that he had heard all the debates last session, and I was not aware that we had a class of young men here in training to take stump and were paying them for it, and I think it would be wise on the part of hon. gentlemen in charge of this department to dispense with such unnecessary ofticials.

Mr. FRASER. I agree with Mr. Speaker that the matter should be brought to his attention at the opening of the session. Suppose there is an official employed now by Mr. Speaker who took an active part in an election not two months ago, addressed public meetings, opposed a gentleman running in the interests of the Opposition, and supported as best he could a gentleman running in the interests of the Government, what then?

An hon. MEMBER. Give him a position.

Mr. FRASER. Promote him. I think I will be able to satisfy Mr. Speaker of that. Of course this may be one of the regular conditions of life for these people employed by the Government. It may be that the Government employed them for that purpose, and I am rather surprised to hear for the first time that there is really a little backing down on behalf of the Government in this matter.

An hon. MEMBER. No, no.
Mr. FRASER. I am glad some person says " no, no," but I would like to have a clear understanding of the rule of the (iovernment. Of course this occurred in the March election. The hon. gentleman came here, got his position, occupied it, went back during the bye-election and did the same thing, and again returned here to reap the gratitude of the Government which he had earned. If Mr. Speaker says the condition necessary for his dismissal is the knowledge brought to him of the fact, I can assure him that can le given him in a day or two.
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. We have recently, as everybody knows, lost our old and faithful servant the Serjeant-at-Arms, and have appointed the former deputy in his place. I would like to know whether the arrangements made with respect to the new Serjeant-at-Arms are the same as those made with his predecessor. Of course, I am aware the salary is the same, but there were valuable privileges and allowances enjoyed by the late officer. He had, I think, a great number of rooms in this building, and fuel and light, and so forth. What are the arrangements with the present Serjeant in that respect?

Mr. FOSTER. They differ from the arrangements made with the late Serjeant. No perquisites are allowed. The salary is the same as that of the late Serjeant, and he is given a room in the building for the purposes of his office, and that alone.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Do I understand that the Government do not allow the Ser-jeant-at-Arms any residential quarters?

Mr. FOSTER. Nothing of that kind. I said he had but one room, but he has two, a room for his office and a dressing room.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Of course if he is a married man, as in this case he is, he cannot very well reside in the building without inconvenience. I should think, all things considered, an officer like the Serjeant-at-Arms ought to have a reasonable number of rooms assigned to him in the building. I think myself it is quite probable that the late Serjeant had a good many more rooms than the public convenience guite warranted. If I remember aright, I think he had thirteen or fourteen.

Mr. SPEAKER. He had nine I know.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I think he had more, but really I should think we might afford our Serjeant-at-Arms more than an office in the building. He is a gentleman who ought to be here, and I suppose is here for a very considerable portion of the year, probably, at the very least one-half or two-thirds of the year, and it would appear reasonable he should have a fair number of rooms. Four or five ought to be given him. However, that is a matter for the Ministers, the speaker, and the Committee of the House to consider. Still, I think that, having regard to the character and position of the otficial, he ought to have a little more than an office assigned to him.

Mr. McCARTHY. I do not often agree with the hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat, but I wust confess that on this question I think his pretension is right. It does appear to we that the Serjeant-at-Arms. who, as I miderstand, is in charge of the building, and is an otficer of this House, ought to be provided with suitable residential accommodations, and that to give him but one otfice in which to transact his business is by no means sufficient or reasonable treatment. I hope it will be found even yet, on reconsideration, that accommodation-perhaps not to the same extent in character as that which the late Serjeant enjoyed, if he had thirteen or fourteen rooms-ought to be given him. I believe the present Serjeant would not require anything like that number, but he ought to have a reasonable accommodation afforded to him in his position, he being in charge of the building.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRItiH'T. If the mhappy contingensy should arise when he would have to take one or two members into custody, he would not be able to accommodate them.

Mr. FOSTER. Such a contingency conld not arise now.
Mr. KIRKPATRICK. I really think the Ser jeant should reside in the building. He has charge of these buildings and of the messengers, and, being in that responsible position, he should live in the building. He has to be here always during night sessions, and when the House is not in session, he, or some other responsible official, ought to reside here. While I do not think he ought to get as many rooms as the late Serjeant hai, I think he ought to have a sufficient number of rooms to accommodate him, and I suppose that means four or tive rooms. The chief messenger resides here and occupies, very properly, a number of rooms, but he is an officer under the Serjeant, and I think the latter ought to reside here and ought to get quarters.
Mr. LAURIER. Up to the present time the Serjeant-at-Arms has always had a suite of rooms in this building, but there has heen a departure this year, because the present Sergeant is not accommodated as his predecessor was. I do not know who is responsible for the departure, but I suppose the hon. gentlemen opposite must be held responsible for $i t$.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. It was well understood before the vacancy occurred in the office, that when a vacancy should occur, the salary would not be continued at the same rate-a rate which I think the late Serjeant received partly in consequence of a very extended period of public service-and that the residential conveniences and emoluments should also be discontinued, partly because they were supposed to be unnecessary to the office, and partly because these rooms were needed for other purposes by members of the House.
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. It is not by any means on account of the Serjeant himself, but I think it is in the public interest and for the convenience of members of this House, that that officer should reside in the building, and should have an opportunity of exercising that close control which can hardly be exercised by any one not residing in the building. I quite agree with one or two gentlemen who have spoken, that it is very probable the late Serjeant had a much larger number of rooms assigned to him than was necessary, but there is a difference between assigning ten or eleven rooms, and a matter of four or five rooms. I would like to know how many rooms the Usher of the Black Rod has assigned to him on the other end of the building. If I am not mistaken, he has enough to divide up, if we are going to stand on equal rights, with members of the Senate.

Mr. MoCARTHY. It might be convenient to know what has become of these rooms.
Mr. FOSTER. They are still in the building.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). I think the House is entitled to know all about this matter. It has been said the responsibilities resting upon the Serjeant with regard to these matters are very considerable. He has the general oversight and care of the building, and I think in a building so costly as this, and the care of which is a matter of so much public importance, that the House should consider how far the Serjeant can exercise proper and efficient oversight over these buildings if he does not reside in them. It seems to me that the necessity must be very great and very pressing that takes this accommodation away from him.

Mr. SPEAKER. As the House has been informed, the rooms formerly occupied by the Ser-jeant-at-Arms are no longer so occupied. One of these rooms has been allotted to the Government for the purpose of receiving deputations, and I suppose the hon. members of the Opposition who were formerly in the Government, know the necessity of having some place in which to receive deputations. Another room upstairs has been allotted to the Printing Committee, and I think one of them has been allotted for the use of the Whip of the Liberal party; at all events, it has been arranged that a room should be given to the Liberal Whips. Then there is another room still vacant, and it has been reported to me by the Clerk that the chief of the translators would find it very convenient if he could have his staff collected in one room, under his immediate supervision, instead of, as I understand is now the case, doing their work ontside the House, and I am considering the question of allotting that room for that purpose.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. Does that leave all the rooms in the basement?
Mr. SPEAKER. There are two other rooms in the basement unallotted.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. I agree with the hon. member for Bothwell(Mr. Mills) that there should be an officer of rank residing in the buildings who has a close supervision of all the officials of the House in attendance during the whole year. We ought to compel hin to live here, and he should get leave of absence very seldom on account of the important interests entrusted to him. He should be bound to live here and to exercise close supervision over the buildings, and give us some value for his salary.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I think every member of the House feels that there should be a rearrangement and a redistribution of the rooms under the control of the committee. I must express my thanks to Mr. Speaker for endeavouring to give us a small room for the use of the Whips of the party. If the rule is to be acknowledged which has been laid down by the Government and their supporters in the discussion that has just taken place, I suppose we must acknowledge that they have a right to act as they see fit in their appointments and the apportionment of the rooms. At the same time, I think that there ought to be some courtesy extended to the members of the Opposition in this House. The present arrangement is very unfair. I understand there are between 75 and 100 rooms in this House under the control of this committee, and the great majority of these rooms are monopolized by the members of the Government and their supporters, and the members of the Opposition are unable to get ordinary accommodation. When this large number of rooms was taken away from the Serjeant-at-Arms and given over to the use of members of the House, it did appear that one of them might have been allotted for the use of members of the Opposition when, as is well known, the members of the Government and their friends have such a large number of rooms at their service. When I applied to Mr. Speaker, he recognized our right and endezvoured to give us some accommodation. I would appeal to the members of the Government and to that side of the House to see whether or not some rearrangement could not be made in order to give us on this side-I do not say a fair proportion -but some small proportion of accommodation. This is a matter of considerable consequence to members of the House in the transaction of their public business, but no doubt the members of the Government are not aware of the dispositions which are made of the rooms in the House. I think one of the vacant rooms should be allotted to the Opposition.

Mr. SPEAKER. It is proposed to utilize some of the rooms in the basement for keeping the records. I am informed that the bound volumes of newspapers and other records which are necessary for the information of members have grown to such an extent as to require additional accommodation, and I propose to use some of the rooms in the basement for that purpose. I may say that I have been a member of the House since 1874, and I never, until I was elected Speaker, had any accommodation in any room except what I got in No. 16 when it was allotted to the Conservative party, and I could not occupy that very much because members used to smoke in it. I may as well say at once that my theory is that every committee room in the House ought to be open to every member of the House, and that there should be no room allotted to any particular person or set of persons. The room No. 16 has by courtesy and consent of the House been allotted to the Conservative party, and in the same way room No. 6 has been allotted to the Liberal party, but according to my theory there is no reason why the leader of the Opposition should not go into room 16 or any member of the Government into room 6.

Mr. LAURIER. I will go to room 16 with pleasure, but, as there is smoking going on there at present, I may have to stay away for the same reason as the Speaker.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. You are all welcome to come to No. 6.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I agree with the principle laid down by the Speaker, but the Speaker will remember that the party in power has not followed out his theory. The difference between room 16 and room 6 lies chiefly in the fact that No. 6 is used on frequent occasions as an ordinary committee room.

Mr. SPEAKER. No, not now. Other accommodation has been provided for the committees that used that room.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Room 16 was set apart for the supporters of the Governinent, and it is provided with all the necessary material in the same way as a private office, and there are one or two servants of the House placed at the disposal of the members who occupy that room. No such arrangement is made in the interest of the Opposition. I think we might be allowed something in the same direction, and all I would ask is that, before another session, at least one room of reasonable size may le set apart for the members of the Opposition-call it the Whips' room if you likebut a room where the members may be abie to sit down quietly and do some work. Then I think they would be perfectly satisfied if they had a room of decent size of the kind I have mentioned.

Mr. McMULLEN. I am very glad to hear the Speaker make the statement he did as to every room in the House being at the disposal of all the members, and that every member has a right to go into any room in the House. I remember that last session the member for Pontiac (Mr. Murray) went into room 16 and found himself very uncomfortable there, and, though he was not ordered out, the organ of the party gave him a lecture on the subject of his having ventured to enter that room. I hope that in future none of the organs of hon. gentlemen opposite will make the same mistake. Then, of course, if all the rooms in the House are open to every member, the rooms occupied by the Speaker are open to them. We will be under a general invitation to goin and recline in the comfortable rooms which he occupies. He says they are to be at the disposal of all the members, and of course that is a general invitation to take advantage of the comforts to be found there as compared with the other rooms in the House. I hope the Speaker will not be surprised if, when the House is going onat great length, he finds his drawing room crowded with members.

Mr. Speaker.

Committees, sessional and extra clerks,

&c.. ................................ $$ 13,600$

Mr. McMULLEN. When we referred to the sessional clerks before, the Minister of Finance called attention to the fact that, at that time, we were discussing salaries of the House of Commons. We have now reached the sessional clerks, and I would ask the Speaker what the number of these clerks is now and whether he thinks the number is in excess of the requirements of the work?

Mr. SPEAKER. I think at present there are 29 sessional clerks, and it is proposed that, as these sessional clerks drop out, the number shall he reduced to 25 . We believe that is the smallest number we can get along with, having regard to efficiency.
Mr. McMULLEN. I am glad to hear that statement, because I was of the opinion, from the number I see around this building, that there was not enough work to keep them engaged. No doubt the Government has sympathy for men who have got old in the service, but we should get down to the number who are sufficieut to discharge the duties of the House, and that number should not be exceederl. I am glad that we have now got down to 25 sessional clerks. How many extra clerks have we?

Mr. SPEAKER. None. This is the total number, and they are called extra sessional clerks.

Contingencies, House of Commons. . . . $$ 23,100$

Mr. McMULLEN. This is an item which de serves considerable discussion. Last year there were no less than three silk gowns purchased; one for the Hon. Mr. Ouimet, who is not now Speaker, one for the present Speaker and one for the assistant Clerk, at $$ 75$ each. In looking over the record I find that two silk gowns have been purchased each year. During the last three years no less than seven have been purchased, at from $$ 65$ to $$ 75$ each. Is it customary for the Speaker to get a new silk gown every year? The present Minister of Public Works when Speaker had a new one each year. I should like to know the rule. I do not draw attention to this item simply for the purpose of worrying hon. gentlemen opposite, but I desire to show that there is extravagance in comnection with the contingencies of this House.

Mr. SFEAKER. So far as I am concerned, a gown was purchased for me at the public expense when I becameSpeaker of the House. I may say it is now badly worn, but I have had it patched, and the hon. genulleman will not have to complain that I have purchased a new one this year.

Mr. McMULLEN. I should like to hear from the Minister of Public Works.

Mr. MILLS (Annapolis). Perhaps the hon. gentleman would like to know what he has done with the old one.

Mr. OUIMET. The gown in question, which was not unpacked, was placed by me at the disposition of the Clerk of the House, who said he would wear it himself. I wish him good fortune with it.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I hope the Minister of Finance will now retract the statement that we are the most extravagent House of Commons in christendom.

Mr. FOstrer, I will way that the Clerk is prowilent in the matter of gonms.

Mr: OlDMET, I was lett with ath aht ontwith the shemes ami patches.

 what my hon. friemil has said resperting the litrarimas I lio not expert them to devote themselves to methanical work. I wonld be the last man ths make any complaint of the liburams, who have always tieated me with the greatest pasible couttesy. That is not the point 1 make at all. The poiat I make is this: The House pays for a large number of assistants in the libury: and thoush 1 do not ask that extra work should be platerl upon them during the sesvioa, when most of them give a fair amount of work, yet there are six or seven months of the year during whieh the House is nor in session, rani it seems to me ridientous that work which might properly be done by the assistauts during that time. should be pail for every year as extra.

Mr. FONTERS Is my hom. friend at meminer of the Library Committee:

Mr. DAMIFiN(P.F.I.) Ves.

Mr. Fostrek. Then 1 think my hon. friend oceupies a very responsible position, and he has heen alministering a strong censure to himself. That committer ought to know what every item is for. before it comes to the Honser, and if ther think this work can le done hy the regular statif. they ought not to have this item appear in the Kistimates. The House. knowing that they appoint a committee to look after the library, pay sery little attention to these detatils. I think my honi. friend hass heen very lax in this, and I hope he will in future carry out his gool sentiments. I agree with him very larsely. I think that if this work is not of a technical charateter, and if it is within the tange of the assistants. the omght to atteme to during the recess.
Mr. DAVIFC (I'R.E.I.) Outhe face of the hom. dentleman's remarks there is something to he said for the riew he atrocates: hat I hate not hem derelict in my duty in this resame either in the Libmary Committee or elsewhere. I have not failed to express an "pinion on this suljpect on more that Library Committee in myself or to control it. I will remini him that the officers 1 speak of are appointed and pail hy the donemment: and this tote is proposen bey the hom. sentleman himself. I ammot aware that it came hafore the linary comb mittee, or that the committee ever asked the don. ernment to pits: it. I hate artemed mose of the: meetings of the Lihnary (immittee. and it mathe that I am wrons. hat 1 do not remember that the Libary (ommitter at any time repposted this tule ont of place in expressing my views. which I have cone puietly and respeetfully, as to what shombl be lone.

Mr. $\operatorname{Cr}$ (RIVER. I think the hom. gentleman is mistaten in sitying that this matter wits mot sperially brought tio the attention of the Library (committer he the libarian The committee have always felt that a eertain almome of diseretion should he allowel to the heal of that department, and they take it for granted that if a special vote were not necessaty for this purpose, the librarian would mot so report. My hom. friend may le right in saying that some of the clerks in that department have leisure during the recess for doing this kind of work: but those whir are competent to do the work very likely have duties enongh to ocenpy them, even during the recess.

Mr. DAVIEN (P.F.I.) I may beright or wrong. but I hold the opinion, and I have expressed it on several occasions, that there is a very vicious pratetice ramning through all our semvice. Otticials in the different departments assume that they have a certain amomat of work to do, and they do not expect to do any unore. I donot speak of those exceptional men in the service, whose work is leyond all praise. Who are realy w further the interests of their department by working extra hours and doing whatever is necessiny to be dove. But I believe it is generally understond that if at man writes an extra sheet of paper, he should receive extra pay for it. This has been a crying evil in the past. What I comtend is that this work should not he looked on as extra work, and the country should not lee asked to pay for it as extra work.

Mr. N('RIVFR. I would advise my hon. friend to gro ame disenss this matter quietly with the lihrarian, and I think he will get some information on it.

Nir RICHARD) CARTWRIGHT. That is all very well. It is for us, not the Library (ommittee, to lic satisfied with these votes. There are mine peopla: employed in the libary including at general hibrarian and a parliamentary librarian. What the precise distinction is I am not advised: it may he: that the hon. Minister of Justice, who has a sahtle mime, mity lie athleto tell me. As the session fones mot on the arerage aceupy more than four months, cluring whicl: the ofticers of the library are fully emploveal, it appears to me that there is no real reasom why this work should not be done by the seven regular ofiters umber the superintendence of the two chices. I do not know very much as to what groes on when the Honse is not in session ; hut I flo not think thit these gentlemen are very Ereaty werworked in the period between onr rising iond our retmang. It is not yuite enough to sity that the chief himarian thinks it well that they shoulil get extra pay. All the heads of departments are human beings, and do not like to put extrit work on their employes, I suppose : and if the do. they are amenable to persuasion, and may be leal to think that they should get extra paty. I du not think myself that there is work carigh given those people to entitle them to draw a matter of about $\leqslant \boldsymbol{*},(6)(1)$, first and last for this purpose.

Nir.IOHS THOMPSON. It is quite a mistake to suppose that this sum is to he distrihuten among the regulat staff. On the contrary, I mulerstand that, in the opinion of the libarian, extra help will be repuired. The work camon be distrihuted atmong the regular staff and paid for extra except in violiation of the law. The forermment, in bringing down the: listimate, relied very largely on the fact that the libraty is anministered by a very catctul committec consisting of members of hoth Houses, and I presume the work of cataloguing will be carried on in a general way, on such principle as they appore. The (iovernment will be exceedingly gratitied it the committee can find a way to hate the work done by the regular stati and the money sated, which we propose to give to extrat clerks, only in case they are found necessary.

Mr. VAVIES (P.E.I.) Do the (iovermment purchase any books now outside of the grant for the library?

Mr. Fosterk. They do not.
Mr. DAVIES (?.S.I.) Is it in the power of the Lilnary Committee to purchase any special book or give a sulsidy or grant for the publication of any special book? The reason I mention this is lieciause a petition was submitted to the Library Committee ly Dr. Kingsford, last year, who was publishing a history of Canada, asking that his literary labours be recognized by the purchase of a certain number of his books, and the librarian intimated that the amount granted by Parliament, SIO,(MO), was not more than sufficient for the purchase of books actually reguired.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. What we usel to ilo uas to purchase looks occasionally for library exchanges and bring lown a special vote for that. We preferred to discontinue that comese three years ago, and since that time no such purchases have been made. But it has been umderstood that the appropriation of $\mathrm{ElO}(\mathrm{MO})$ is given the committee to liny the books reguired for the library, including looks for exchange, hut that nothing is to lie spent in the way of giving sulsidies to assist in the pul. lication of any work.

Mr. WULOCK. I suppose it is umlerstool that this grant of $s(0,(x)$ is to be expended wholly in the purchase of books and is not to be encroachend upon for any other purpose connected with the libaary.

Mr. FONTER. It camot be.
Mr. MULOC:K. It might he. I Io not know whether it has heen or not. I can see in the Auditor (ieneral's Report some items that are certainlynot for the purchase of loorks.

Mr. FOSTPER. There is the item for eontingencies.

Mr. MULOCK. I was going to suggest that, in order to avoid a misapplication of any portion of the: money, the Auditor fieneral should separate the expentiture for looks from the expenditure: for other purposes. At present, if you will look at the report, piage B-196, you will see, umber the title of $\cdot$ Library dirant for Books," the names of dealers, and then there are some items towards the botom that may. perhaps, not be forthe purchase: of books. For instance, at the bottom of pace 135 you will tind an item of $81,4(k)$ for the Queens: Printer, and other items amounting to ahout the sum of sinct. It might be, that, deducting those, there would still remain $\$ 10,000$ antually expemed in the purchase of books; hat topprevent any doult, a separate account should be kept of this appropriation. There is another point to which I would call attention. The librarian does not seem to think it neeressuly to purchase any looks from lealers west of (ltawa except on an odd occasion, and I donht if he can always buy to the best alvantage in Ottawa and Montreal.

Mr. KIRKl'ATRICK. All the importen hooks he purchatses from the agent in Lomion.

Mr. MULO(:K. If he does so, that is all right, but I see the names of Cimatian merchants in the ateount, and among these there are none of Toronto merchants to speak of.

Mr. SCRIVER. This Sil0,(ON) was strictly appropriated for the purchase of books and is strictly so used. The accounts of these purchases are salbitted to the auditor of the committee. I have been a member of the committee for years past, and have carefully examined the accounts, ind I can say that this sum is levoted strictly to the purchase of books. With regard to what my hon. friem has said, the largest hills are from publishers and dealers in England and the United States.

Mr. MULOCK. Take the next item, si, (MO) to the Lihrary of dieneral History, and turn to the Auditor lieneral's report, B-1! 7 , the first item is for salary, $\sin (1)$

Mr. FONTER. 'That is for a vote helow.
Mr. MULACK. My previous remarks will apply to this expenliture as well. If we set apart Sl. (M) for the purchase of hooks of Ameriean history, the Aulitor Cieneral should furnish a separate account of this item and not mix it up with other items, such as salary or anything else.

Mr. FOSTER. If the hom. gentleman will look at the Auditors keport he will see that is exactly what has been done. The Auditor 1 ieneral has indicated cerery one separately. First. he has grouped the library salaries together. then the contingencies, then stationery, and then the libany grant for hooks muler which appear all those items my hom. friend speaks of.

Mr. MULOCK. Where does this expenditure of St. (MM applas.

Mr. FON"PER. In the item for looks, included in the genemal table indicated moder - (irant for Books.

Mr. MULor'K. There is another item of at special kind.

Dir. FOSTPRE. It is only a part of an item.
Mr. MULOCK. If it is intembed to rote sll, (K) to the Library (ommittee to be expended miscellaneously on books. it shonld the so stated. but the rote is S 10 , (M) for hooks for the gencral library and Sl, (on) for hooks referring to American history. If there is anything in that. the account should lie manle up separately. so that we: can see that the rote hats been expended in that waty, and I do not find that in the Alulitor deneral's Report. The only thing we have on the subject is at prage B-190, and the first item is "Salanies."

Printing, priuting paper and binding. . 870.000

Sir RI(CHARI) GARTVRIGH'T. How is this printing paper olitained? Is it by tender or by special arrangement

Mr. FONTLER. It is hy comtratet, as was explaned last year in the Pulific Accomnts Committee. The large item is the Queen's I'rinter's acconnt for pitper and printing.

Mr. DAVIFS (P.E.I.) Umer this heading I would ask whether the lepartment of Printing is now in a satisfactory condition or not. Is it becatase they are matile to overtake the work that the departmental reports are not presented to the House:. I have heard that they are very much hehind in their work. and that the work costs a great cleal more than it used to cost when we let it hy tenler, irrespective of the interest on the enormous amount we have expended there on capital accont. Which we may count is lead loss. Is there any report from the new Nuperintendent of Printing as to the state of the work! I think we should have it lefore we pass this large amount.

Mr. FOSTPR. That information will come more properly when we reach the vote for the Burean itself. I was informed to-night hy the Superintendent that the departmental reports are being hurried as much as they can he, that he has a very large staff on, and that the difficulty has arisen Ibecause, owing to the late sitting of Parliament, the departmental reports this year came late and all at the same time, and that the voters' lists also occupied the attention of the staff. So far as I know, the Printing Bureau is in a state of efficiency.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I would ask the Minister of Justice whether the relay in tie printing of the Supreme (ourt Reports is owing to the inability of the Bureau to get them out:

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I think it is owing to the pressure of other work.

Mr. NAVIEs (P.E.I.) How long does the Minister expect we will be without those reports?
sir JOHS THOMPSON. The same thing used to occur with the contractors at this season, but I think the pressure of the parliamentary work will be orer in a few weeks. At all events I shall know in a day or so.

Mr. MULOCK. Has any account heon prepared as to the total expenditure on the Printing Bureau, showing whether it costs more or less than the contract system?

Mr. FOSTER. I think this is hardly the proper item unter which to enguire into the cost of the Printing Bureau.

Mr. MLLOCK. We are now asked to rote $$ 70,(\mathrm{Kn})$ for printing, and I think we shouhl know what is the least expensive way of having this service performed and the cost, the wear and tear, the depreciation of plant, all that ought to be taken into consideration in order to tind out whether it costs lens or more to get our printing done under the present system than it did under the oldsystem.

Mr. PATTERSON (Huron). I will look into the matter and bring the information down when my own estimates are before the committee.

Sir RICHARD CARTURIGHT. Is there no more detailed account of the expenditure on that item than is to be found on page $\mathrm{B}-197$ of the Auditor (ienerals Report, or can the Minister of Finance give us any further statement" What does that cover exactly ?

Mr. Fon'lek. It covers all parliamentary printing except the reports of departments. It covers Sessional Papers, Votes and Proceerlings, and all documents ordered to he printed by the committee.

Mr. DAVIFs: (P.E.I.) I understand that when the rotes of the Department of the Secretary of State are heing passed, he will he able to make a statement to the House by way of comparing the cost of printing under the present arrangement, and the cost when we let it out by contract.

Mr. MULOCK. I suppose the Secretary of State could not tell us whether the old trouble between union and non-union labour in the Burean still exists, or what policy has been adopted in that matter:

Mr. FOsTER. There has been no trouble since last session of Parliament.

Mr. MULOCK. I suppose the Secretary of State could not answer to-night whether union or non-union labour is employed in the Burean, but when we come to discuss his department perhaps he will be able to give that information.
Mr. PatTERRSON (Huron.) Yes.
Mr. Fuster.

Allowance to W. Wailace, ex-postmaster  Victoria, B.C.............................. 5240

Sir RICHARD(CAPTWRICiHT. I observe that if nothing else is increasing rapidly in this comntry, the general superammation allowances appear to be going on by leaps and bounds. I see in the line below in our estimates. that you expect to pay S260,(0)0 as superammation in the year shortly ensuing. Now, it dues appear to me that hom. gentlemen are rumning the superammation husiness into the groumd. Selan, (Wh) a year for sumeramma tion in such a service as we have, in a country like this, is a sum which justly excites a goonl deat of amoyance and a good deal of eriticism anong the taxpayers. It cloes seem to me that if we go on at the present rate. We will timd ourselues shortly with a superammation list of three or four handred thousand dollars. $s(0)$ (NM) in a single year is a very large expected increase.

Mr. FOATTER. If my hon. friend will take the table of allowathees fromi year to year, he will timd that in the last two or three years superammations have not been very muntrons. and in every case they have taken place for good cause, on acomut of age, or to secure greater efficiency and economy He will find also that the practice of alding tine has heen almost entirely done away with. For the last three years the practice has lieen not to adol time except in certain cases where services have leen of masual chatacter, and have been rendered hy persons of large technical or other qualitications, and of long service. The vote which is asked for is only a forecast. more a guess than anything else. I imagine that the Civil service Commission which is abont ending its labours, will have something ta say about superammation. and it may be that they may make some recommendations which will henetit this branch of the service.

Mr. D.AVIES (P.E.I.) I ohserve that payments are increasing. as wats to be expected miler the Act, having been in $1854-5$ S101.060, they have gone on until they have now reached $\mathbf{S} 240,(\mathrm{nn})$. I want to remark that the receipts do not at all in crease in the proportion we would expect. In 18, 1 -7 we received for the superamuation fund.
 years we paid ont a very small sum, less than we received, if I mistake not. In 1SOM-91 we received all these years. Whereas, the payments have increased out of all proportion. Probably the great evil underlying the superammation policy is that we do not exact sufficient percentage year by year from those who are entitled to come on the fund.

Mr. FONTER. It is the same percentage.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) It is worthy of eonsider. ation whether the percentage is now suficient. In view of the large imonat required. Solso, M(0). We should consider whether the percentage should not be increased. Do I understand that the (ivil service Commission has been considering this matter and will make a report:

Mr. FOSTER. I camot say definitely what they will report upon. I think we may assume they may.

Mr. DAVIFs (P.E.I.) Have they been asked to report upon it.

Mr. FOSTER. Their instructions cover it.

Mr. INVIES(P.F.I.) The hom. gentleman loes not know whether they have consitiered it.

Mr. FOSTEP. I do not know what they have consideren.

Mr. DAVIEX (P.E.I.) lt seems in fice of the ONO expended, that our receipts are not as large as they should be.

Mr. BOWELL. Originally the percentage was larger. When the law was tirst passed it was, if my memory serves me, 4 per cent, and then it was reduced to 2 per cent.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Why:

Mr, BOWELL. It was thought (ole too great a tax on the employes, and it was thonght that $\because$ per cent would be sufficient. It is difficult to arrive at a definite conclusion and to form a correct idea by looking at the figures. It would be impossible to come to a correct conclusion, unless you had the names of all the parties who have been superamuated, also information as to whether the offices were filled and the amount of salaries of the new appointees. Suppose you superammate a man receiving $\$ 2,0 x($ A promotion may take place, or a new appointment made at at salary of stion per annum. In such a case the new officer would only pay a percentage on Si(k) insteal of $\mathrm{S}_{2},($ (M) , which would hate beell continued to have been paid if the superammated officer han contimued in the service. It is difticult. I repeat, to arrive at correct conchisions as to whether the country really loses or profits by this system of superamnuation. Unless you had full particulars you could not by any possibility come to a correct conclusion on the matter.

Mr. DAVIES (P. E.I.) I would not assume that my opinion was worth a great deal, for I have not sufficiently studied the question. In reading the Public: Accounts I find that we received $8 \mathrm{Bin},(\mathrm{MH}$ or Sity, OKI and it dropped to $\mathrm{S} 34,0 \mathrm{ONO}$. Evidently some change was made. When I desire to ascertain the cause it appears very clear, because when sim,000 were received for 1871-72 the expenditure was sis, 000. Those who were paying the fees complained that they were paying more than they should do. When we reduced the fees we exacted S34,000 in 1872-73 and 836,001 in 1573.74. In those years we paid out $\$ 64,(010)$ and $\leqslant 7,000$ res. pectively. The expenditure has since increased and the receipts have remained stationary.

Mr. FOSTER. We must be superannuating it high class of officers.

Mr. DAVIES (P.&.I.) It is worth considering whether, if we have made a reduction in the percentage chargel years ago, whether it is not now desirable under different circumstances to increase the percentage.

Mr. BOWELL. The remark of the Minister of Finance is literally true. Some superannations have taken place in the Customs Department in Montreal with salaries rumning from $\overline{i l}, \mathbf{6}(\mathbb{M})$ to SO, (KN). The total amount of such salaries received was between $\$ 10,000$ and $\$ 15,000$. They were superammated on the basis of the salaries receiver three years previous. In no case has any officer been appointed to succeed at the same salary. The sum paid is debited to the superammation fund, but really a large sumh has leen sated to the country by the reluctions which have leen made.

Mr. MoMLLLEN. It is quite evident that under the operation of the Act a very large amount has been alled to the drain on the resources of the country. I was glad to hear the Minister of Inland Revenue say a few weeks ago when he attempted to defend the use made of this particular Act, that he helieved that the Government would take up this whole question. It is about time they did. I have here the return the Minister of Finance laid on the Table of the House. It appears there were retired during last vear tifo officers. Last year the mumber wats it. The number of superannuations appears to vary from fill to 6i.7. hut this year it was 6iti. We have at present on the list ini3, on June 30, 1891. The arerage allowance is 5480 : the gross many men have heen retired at an earlier period of life than is considerd necessary. They have been retired at iftand at 49. There has been a large increase in the Post Otfice Department and the Customs Department, no less than $\mathbf{O}(0$ superannuations having taken place in the latter. If a Minister can remore men umder the Superammation Act who have been drawing salaries of $\Xi 3,(0 n)$, and those positions remain unfilled for considerable period, why need they be tilled at all! In the Customs Department there are no less than 10 vacancies, owing to the operation of this Act. Many ofticers have been removed and superannated, and their places have not been fillen hy any appointees. It is a clear proof that there are any number of men in the several depratments who should not be there. If we can in one year superannuate ten men and leare their plates vacant, and still I presume the business of the country is being attended to.

Mr. BOWERS. I find that one man in Victoria, B. (. , was superamuated at se 40 a year when he Wats it years of ate, and another man born in 1853; 1). B. Gordon, of Ottawa, was superamuated in 1SSS, getting Som a year.

Mr. MoMULLEN. The Minister of Customs stated, I umlerstamd. that when persons were appointed to fill vacancies caused by superannuation of otticers, they received less salaries than the persons superannuated. I notice that a Mr. Labonté was retirel last year, and that the person appointerl to his place received the same salary, namely, Sif(k).

Mr. BOWELL. The hon. gentleman was not paying attention to what I said. I said nothing of the kind. I said that there were many cases in which superamuation had taken place, and where the positions were not filled, and I also stated that in many cases promotions had been made in which a smaller salary had beengiven to the person promoted. Where a man receiving five or six hunAred dollars a year is superammuated, the person tilling his place is likely to receive the same salary, lecause in cities like Montreal and Toronto, it is impossible to get men to work for a less salary, and if they did they could not live on it.

Mr. WILSON (Lemox). I think it is time that the Government should take this matter seriously into consideration. There is a very large amount of money paid out every year for superannuation, and if it cannot be curtailed in reference to the parties now in oftice, I think it should be so arranged that persoms coming into the service shouli not be a hurden on the public funds when they retire. I find that during the last 10 years $$ 1,492,984$ were tiken out of the pullic treasury for this superammation fund. I believe that the feeling in the country is very strongly against this, and my own feeling is that it ought not to be continued. It may le true that persons now in the service hate rested interests which we cumnot ignore, lat I think that the Government should make an arrangement with persons entering the service in the future so that they would not become a burden on the public treasury when they leave oftice. I hope that this will receive the serions comsideration of the Giovermment, and that they will le able to propound some scheme which will wercome this difficulty with reference to parties appointed hereafter, if not to those at present engraged.
Mr. MLLOCK. I think the present scheme is not a somed one and I would venture to suggest one that I think would meet the case. I have done so lefore without prolusing any results. I am sorry to say: If there is a certain salary attached to an oftice I believe that the man appointed to that office shoula have a certain amont retained out of his salary, whatever proportion of his salary is deened right. and that this should he fundel for him. allowing him a certain rate of interest upon it and when he leaves oftice he conld draw the money with interest.
Mr. BowELL. Amd if he dies:
Mr. MCLOCK. It would belong to, his estate. That is a system we have recently adopted in Toronto in comection with an institution in which I take some interest, and 1 think it is ghing to give satisfaction. If yon lowk at this list of superannuations yon will tind that men appointed at various ages, some well up in years. have only servel a few vears and are then pensioned off for life. I would like to know is there any system by which a persm entering office is required to hive a medical certificate to show that he is in soon health:

Mr. Bowell. We have to have a doctor's certificate now before the recommendation passes the Treasury Board.

Mr. MLLOCK. When one looks over this list it is surprising to find how som some of these othcers are incapacitated through ill-health. I do not think you will ever get the present system to work properly, lecause a man may succeed in getting a certificate which would warrant you in appointing him, but when he wants to retire he cam easily make out that it is in the interest of the public service that he should retire, and that he is not in good health. There always will be what I may call fraud in this comection. We have, year after year, anl increasing army of annuitants, and there is one soumd way of preventing these frands, and that is to deluct from the salary each year the amount we propose to surrender him when he withdraws from the service.
Mr. McMULLEN. It is stated here that Mr. James Cowan, otticial referee, was superammated last year, and that he was twenty-two years in the service. I think that can hardly be correct. I would like to know if there was any time added to Mr. Cowan's service?

Mr. Winson (Lemaox).
sir JOHN THOMPson. There was no time adided; that is his actual service.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I would like to ask whether in view of the large discrepancy between receipts and expenditures, of $\mathbf{s e 2}(0),(00)$, the (iorernment does not think it would be fair and just to make such an amendment to the law as would provide for a large increase in the receipts " 1 io, not mean to say, of course it wond be possible to make receipts and expenditures equal, but the discrepancy is too large and the pablic will not he: satistied if it continues so in the future. The expression of the hom. member from Lemox (Mr. Wilsom) shows that this dissatisfaction is not contined .. one side of the Honsealone, but is spreading everywhere.
Mr. Foster. I do not think I can say that the Govermment can undertake to proceed in any certain way as to adopting another scheme or as to. heightening the percentage that may be paid. But this much 1 will say, that the fovermment expect that the Civil service Commission will have taken this matter up, and will make a report upon it: and they intend very carefully to consider the whole question in the light of that report. There is plenty of gooel groum for difference of opinion with reference tu the superammation system. I think a great many arguments can be adduced in fatour of it. in the line of real economy : but there is no use of our efoing into that to night. It is at guestion which, from the magnitule it has assumed and seems likely to assume in the future, refuires the attention of Parliantent, and it will receive the attention of the bovermment and afterwath the: attention of Parliament, when the Civil Service Commission shall have finished their latours and made their report.
sir RICHARI) CARTWRIGHT. The hom. gentleman will ohserve one thing, that this superammation allowance has assumed a very serions aspect, in view of the practice which we have adopted, differing from that of the English service, in allowing the average of the salaties to hecome very large. In some of the departments at headquarters, every employe will average $$ 1,2(1) \ldots$ si.3(1) a year. In other countries that is not permittel. They have a superannation like ours, but they do not allow men to be promoted li, seniority as we do, and do not allow the areage salaries to rum up as we do. I have no donht. considering the men who have become qualitien for superamuation during the last few years. that in the course of four or five years, we shall have a and I am perfectly certain that the whole superammation system will be in a very great peril when that time arrives. There is a great deal of feeling, and not munustifable feeling, on this account throughout the country: and if no alteration is made in the system, I doubt rery much if you will be able to retain it, although its aloolition would entail a great deal of hariship upon many cicil servants. It would be better for the Government to take the matter up now than to be compelled to deal with it in obedience to a great popular outburst which might sweep away the whole system.

Mr. Watson. In my opinion, as well as in the opinion of many people in the comntry, the superamnation system is a fraud on the public, and ought to lee abolished altogether. Why should not the civil servants lay up for themselvea like ordinary people. A great many men are superanmuated who are afterwards able to oceupy prositions in active husiness. I have in my mind some superamuated men who are occupying some of the hest positions in commercial life in Canada. The system is simply used hy the Government as a means lyy which they can get rid of otticers for the sake of appointing their friemels to the positions they occupy.

Mr. FOSTER. You camot prove that from the records hrought down.

Mr. WatnoN. I think it can le proved. We hatl such a case in the Province of Manitoba, that of Mr. McMicken, who was superannuated on a large allowance, I think $S 1$, wh ia year, and who was afterwards Speaker of the Lacal Legislature. He lived for 15 years after he was superammated: he only died a yearago. When he has superammated he was a healthy, rohust man.

Mr. Boll ELL. Was his ottice filled by another:
Mr. Whtson. I do not care whether it was or not. If he was not required in the service he should have heen discharged and paid his salary up to date. The liovernment are treating the civil servants as a lot of wards, like the Indians who cannot take care of themselves. It is suggested by my hon. friend that the Government should retain a portion of their salary because they cannot take care of it themselves. I believe they are all intel ligent men, and why should they not be given their pay and be expected to save for themselves like the rest of us in this Canada of ours: The whole system is a fratud, and I think that the Government ought, in the future, at any rate. to use every means possible to curtail this expenditure which is growing every year.

Mr. McMULLEN. The Minister of Finance challenger the statement of the hon. member for Marquette, that the superannuation system was used for the purpose of removing one man in order to give another man his place. I would call the Finance Ministers attention to the very vote before us, $\$ 250$ for Mr. Wallace. Mr. Wallace was the postmaster of Victoria. But it was necessary to find a resting place for Mr. Shakespeare, an exmember of this House, and in order to do that the Government superannuated Mr. Wallace, giving him the full allowance he was entitled to. He kicked vigorously, however, not being disposed to give up the position, and it appears that the Governmeat pledged themselves that each year they would bring in a vote of this kind to supplement his allowance, while Mr. Shakespeare is postmaster, receiving the salary of $\mathbb{S},(40)$ which was formerly given to Mr. Wallace. And yet the Finance Minister has the face to say that the records do not prove the statement of the hon. member for Mar. quette.

Mr. FUsirer. Neither they do.

Mr. McMULLEN. This case of Mr. Wallace is an instance, and I will give another. Here is the case of the postmaster of Montreal, who was drawing $\$ 4,000$ a year. He had served sixteen years and a half, and the (xoverument added eight years and a half to his time of service, placed him on the superannuation list last year, giving him an allowance of $\$ 2,000$ a year, and appointed a new man in his place at $\$ 4,000$ a year. I would like to know if that is not using the superannuation system for the purpose of retiring one man to make room for another. The system has heen abused all around, and the record does prove the statement my hon. friend has marle. There is another case. The postmaster at Toronto was remored in the same way. It is high time this system vas abolished. I do not believe that the civil servants themselves are in favour of it. I belice they would prefer, with the opportunities they now have of insuring their lives at a very moslerate sum yearly, to have the system aloolished. The system has leen alused to this extent that the civil servants find themselves liable to be called on at any time to step down and ont : and if they do not do it quietly, they will have to le forcerl to slo it. They will be forcerl to apply for superamuation, under : medical certificate that they suffer from some peculiar disease in their toe or tinger or head, so as to comply with the formal statute ant enable the (iovernment to retive them and appoint some one in their place. The fact that we have on the list inl 3 men costing us an ammal outlay of $S 241$, (MO) clearly proves my assertion. The Hon. Mr. Blake, when he had a seat in this House, brought in a resolution to abolish the whole system, and proposed that 5 per cent, or 2 ? per cent should be deducted from the salaries and placed to the credit of the civil servants, hearing interest balf yearly. Then, when they had to withdraw from the service, that money wrolld le paid to them or their legal heirs, with accumulated interest. Until then, the money would be kept by the (iovermment as a guarantee of grool faith and of goond service. I hope the Civil Service Commission will bring in a recommentation to abolish this system, and in so doing they will have the support of the country. I fancy we are now losing under it in the neighbourhomd of $\$ 170,0 \times 0)$. which is a net loss, after deducting the amount the officials have to contribute. In connection with the Customs Department, I notice that Mr. Purcell was superanmated last year, and now gets $\leqslant 1,200$ a year as superannuation allowance on a salary of $\$ 1,(60)$ a year, and his position has not been tilled. I would like to know if it is intented to leave the position still untilled, or whether it is the intention of the Gor ernment to replace him.

Mr. IVATSON. The Minister of Militia said that some of these men were superannuated on account of their positions being abolished. There is one case which stands out mote prominent than any other, and that is the case of Mr. Travis, formerly stipendiary magistrate of the North-West Territories, who, after having served one year and a half and proved himself eminently unfitted for the position, had ten years added to his time and was given a pension of 8750 a year. Mr. Travis was well known to gentlemen on the Treasury benches from the eastern provinces, it was a mistake to appoint him, as he was not fitted for the office, and because the Government made a mistake they compensated Mr. Travis for it by allowing him $$ 750$ a year for the rest of his life. I could mention several other cases where men have been retired who are quite capable of performing their work for another 10 or 20 years.

Mr. CAMPBELL. My opinion agrees with that expressed by the hon. member for Lennox. I think the time has come when the Government should consider the question of loing away with superammation altogether, so far as new men entering the service are concerned, for of course the wh men, who have lreen in it for years, bave rested rights we ought not to disturl. With the new men. however, arrangements should be made that in their ase no superannuation will be allowed, and then in a few years we would get rid of the wretched hurden altogether. I do not see an whect at all in carrying out this system. It is not dome hy any husiness corporation, and it is not a hosiness transaction. If you pay a take care of himself and incest his own money, which he can olo better than the diovernment can. The itea of the fiosermment retaining 5,10 or $2 \frac{1}{2}$ per cent is childish. Every civil servant can take care of his wages better than any one else can, and besiles that we have insmance companies, who will insure the lives of any one at a small rate, being organized specially for that purpose. I do not think that the liovermment should go into the life insurance hosiness at all. There has been great abuses in this system. In fact since the Auditor General's Report came down $\leq=(2),(00)$ have been added to the burdens of the people. In some particular cases the system has been more athused than in others. I saw a certain gentleman I could name, in my connty, when the bye-election was held, actively promoting the interests of the Government candidate. That gentleman. I believe, is an ex-judge. He never paid a single farthing into the superannuation fund though he enjoyed a good salary, yet now he draws $\mathrm{Sl}, \mathrm{GM}$ a $y$ year from the Govermment and is also solicitor of the Canalian Pacific Railway, for which he gets a silary of $\$ 1 \overline{\mathrm{~B}}, \mathrm{MO} 0$ a year. Does it not appear to be absurd that a man who can carn Sin, Mo a year should have an allowance thus simldled on the people ?

Nir JOHS THOMPSON. How many years did the hon. gentleman say he served?

Mr. CAMPBFLL. He is comparatively young, amd I do not remember how many years he was julge.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. He only served 25 vears as a judge.

Mr. CAMPBELL. IV as he not paid sufficiently for the services he performed as judge:
sir JOHN THOMPSON. Half the payment was statutory provision, the statute stating that when he served 25 years he should get a retiring allowance, and he was paid a small salary on that account.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I do not think that should be allowed to exist any longer. Of course those who have entered the service under the old law there may be a difficulty to get rid of, but I think the law should be changed so that those who are now in the service should not expect any supcrannuation allowance at all. I think the case of our judges is worse than any other. All our civil servants have paid into the superannuation fund, but the judges do not pay in a farthing, and yet they are all paid a retiring allowance of two-thirds of their silary. Some system should be adopted by which gradually, in a few years, we might get rid of the heavy burdens now placed on the people of the country.
Mr. McMULLEN. The Minister of Justice very abruptly challenged the statement of my hon. friend as to the length of service of Julge (larke. I see here a retiring allowance of 5,2010 to 1 . Travis. I would ask the Minister how many years he was in the service:

Sir IOHN THOMPSON. I so not know how many years he was in the service. I do not remember, but I can tell the hom. gentleman that he left the service hecamse his otfice was abolished, ani the statute umder which he was appointed provided that, if the oftice was aholished, he shombl have a superammation allowance based mot only on the length of his actual service hat with ten years arlied.

Mr. MoMCLLEE. He was fromone amd a half to two years in the service, and yet he gets a superamnation allowance. Accorrling to the statute, ats I understand it. it is necessary for men to serve 10 years to entitle them to a superammation allow. ance, or they have to get a number of years alded. In this case there must have been eight yearadded, hecause I suppose there was no special Act passed to put Mr. Travis on the superammation list. That is one case in which I think the Act has been alnased in order to give a friend of the diovermmemt an easy competence for the rest of his life.

Mr. MoGREGOR. There was another reason why Mr. Travis was superannuated. He was semt to the North-West as a julge, l, ht he was more. fitted for a lunatic asylum. I was in the district at that time, and the actions of that man should have sent him to an asylum instead of putting him on the superamuation list. He walked up an! down the streets of Calgary as if he owned the town. He said: "Take that man and put him in prison," and to prison he went ; and to superan. nuate such a man was not only doing a wrong to: the country, hat the parties who appointed him should be charged with wrong-doing in mating the. appointment. The only three cases of superannuation that I remember in our county were the: cases of able-bodied men. There was William Bartlett, who was appointed in 1874, aml, after 14 years service, being as healthy and strong a man as any one in this House to-day, he was superannuatei. He was a Reformer and hul to make way for someone else. Then there was Mr. Robert Elliott, who was superannuated after a short time and is getting Sion a year now. And there was Mr. Charles 1 . Fortier, who had charge of the customs office at Hamilton, and he was superammated in the prime of life. He has since died of lia grippe, hut up $t_{1}$, that time, up to within a few days of his death, he was as strong as any man in this House or in the service. I have no reason to timd fant if some good system is adopterl, hut, with the present methods of insurance and with the present means of saving money, there is no reason why these men should not prepare for old age as the rest of us: have to do.

Mr. (iILLMOR. It is the first time I have heard that Judge Travis was insane. I have known that old gentleman for 30 or 40 years, and I have never thought him a crazy man. He is now engagerl in literary work, writing on fuestions of law, and he is an able man, an able lawyer. He had no desire to be superanmated. He marle great complaints at being superammated. He thought great injustice was done to him in that. I have seen him here two or three times since he was superannuated. I see some gentlemen here who knew him when he was practising his profession in the city of St John. He is a man of sound mind. I cannot judge of his ability, but he must have been a man of ability to be appointed to that position. I have heard him called an able lawyer, and I think he ought not to have heen superannuated. I read the report of the investigation into his conduct in the North.West, and I do not think he should have been dischargel. I think he was sat upon by a set of men who were determined to disregard the law, and that he was in the right and they were in the wrong.

Mr. Mocirfior. I do not desire to do the gentlemanany injustice. The change of air may have hat some effect upon him, but I was present in the court when he was impeached for his actions in that country, and the question was brought before one of the best judges of the North-West. Sir Donald A. smith will tell you that Judge Taylor. the judge he was tried before, was an impartial judge, a gentleman of great ability, and he found Mr. Tratis wanting, in so much that it was recommended that he should be superannuated or taken off the bench. I have no grudge against the gentleman. He never did me any harm whatever. I should he sorry to do him any injustice, but, when he was in the North. West, if I were upon oath, I would say he was out of his mind. I am glad to hear he is ietter.

Mr. SEMPLE. If there is one thing which should le remedied, it is the superamuation or pensioning of civil servants. We know that many are pensioners on the public bounty. Nearly a quarter of a million is set apart in the Estimates for that purpose every year. The number of such pensioners is increasing. It is not pretended by any means that they do not receive sufficient salary, because they all have large salaries, aml the day's work they have to perform is very short. If they spend a certain number of years in the service they are sure to become pensioners, and consequently do not make provision for the future. Their sole desire is to live as well as they can, and to get a pension as soon as they can. If it was known that public servants after they cease to serve the Government, would have to depend on their own earnings, it would do a great deal to give this class the independence which they need. Mechanics, for instance. ff they do not lay by a few dollars a year during the period when they can work, to make provision for a rainy day, come to be very poor at last, and a burden upon the taxpayers. True, there is provision for such persons in houses of industry, but these houses have to be supported by the taxpayers. I think the sooner this system is abolished the better. I notice on page $240-$ B, that $W$. Brown, Summerside, P.E.I., received $$ 100$. He was appointed 18th July, 1886, and he was pensioned in July, 1883. I think that case requires some explanation.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I think we ought to have some explanation about Mr. Travis. I do not know anything about his merits or demerits, but it does appear to me that if a man is appointed a judge and superannuated in a year and a-half afterwards, there is a strong presumption of one of two things: either that the gentleman has been proved another failure as a judge, and deserved to be dismissed, or that he is treated with gross injustice. I hiak this case requires ex planation.
 the explanation ten tincs, but I have no onjection to repeat it. He was appointed stipendiary magistrate in the North-West Territories, under the Act in regard to that subject, and making provisions for superammation. An investigation was had into a number of charges which were made against him. While that was proceeding. on shortly afterwards, the othice of stipenliary magistrate was aholished, and the comrt erected with the same tenure that the ordinary judges have throughout the bominion, but having very much larger functions than the magistrates had. When the judicial system in that comentry was organizen. it was quite apparent to everyboly that this gentleman was totally untit to he appointed to that court. but that dial not deprive him of the right to com. pensation after the aloolition of his ottice. The other stipendiary magistrates were appointed julges.

Mr. PERRT. I think it is alout time that the Parliament of this comutry should call a halt in the matter of supermmuationi. I think the perple of this country have every desireto pay their servant: for every hour, every minute, every secoml that they work for the country, but when you come to tax the poor ratepayers of this country to pay people for doing nothing, and when they take the people's money and go to England or to Broston. t" spend it, men only tis years of age, you are doing an injustice to the taxpayers. Why, sir, when the Government does such things it would not be asto. nishing if the people came here and discharged all the members of this House and sent them about their business, and elect a new set of representatives, or at least a new (iovernment, who would do justice to the people. I find that the superammation last year cost us $\mathrm{S} 241,110.49$. Now, what is the amount paid by these officers in order to meet that sum? If the (iovernment made up their minds to tax each of these men a certain amount yearly in order to make up this sum, I wonld have no objection, and I say upon such a basis alone can we agree to continue the system of superamnuation any longer. I repeat. why should the people of this country be called upon to pay a quarter of million of money to a few men for loing nothing att all? Why, Sir, it is an unheard of thing. Is there any man who, in his own private business, would pay a servant for doing nothing? Would the Minister of Justice himself pay his servant for doing nothing; would he superamuate a man after serving him 25 or 30 years, or would any Minister of the Crown do it : No, Sir ; and I say that these hon. gentlemen ought to adopt the sime rule in conducting the business of the country that they would alopt in their own private business. They are sent here to protect the rights of the people and to take care of the purse strings. They are not sent here to take money out of the public chest and scatter it among a feu men for doing nothing. It is a shame, it is it disgrace, to have an item like this in the Auditor General's Report and in the Estimates of this country, and it is time for the Government to prepare a scheme which will compel these officials to pay each into the superannuation fund a sum erguiadent to that which they would lne entitlen to take out.

Mr. BoW ELS. In regarid to the case of ${ }^{10}$. Brown, of stummerside, P.E.I., the hon. memere for Centre Wellington (Mr. Semple) would have seen, if he had real the entry more carefully, that it was evidently a blunder: Of course the hon. gentleman could not know that the statement that Brown was in summerside was an error, hat he will see it stated in the fulitor Generals Report that this man Brown was appointed in 1886i and was superammated in 1883, so that this report actually gives a man a superammation of slor? per annum, three years before he was appointed.

Mr. MegREgORR. It is evidently an error in the printing. I draw attention to page is of the Public Accounts. Mr. Brown had served 17 years: he had received $\mathbf{S 3 O O}$ per annum and he was superannuated to promote efficiency and economy in the service, receiving $\leqslant 102$ annually. True. he was only 58 years old, and had not arrived at the age at which he could le superannuated except for the reason given in the Public Accounts. I have a recollection of that transaction, because he was a locker in the Customs Department. The oftice was not silled becanse, from the number of employes, it was not deemed to be in the interest of the service to maintain so large a staff.

Mr. FLINT. I do not like to appear to agree by my silence with the sweeping condemnation of the whole system of superamuation which has been expressed by some hon. gentlemen on this side of the House. Within certain limits the principle is a sound one. I can conceive of a great many positions where persons in the public service at very moderate salaries, and who during a long period of service hecome broken down in health, inight be treated by the country to a reasonable and limited superammation allowance. The principle has long been recognized as a fair one if properly administered. But the great complaint I have, and I sympathize with some hon. gentlemen on this side of the House in this view, is that flagrant cases orcur in which the principle has been abused, where men who have receiven large salaries and have not become broken down in the public service or lived to an old age, have been superammated for one reason or another. I respectfully call the attention of the Government to this, and I ask them to devise some scheme by which these flagrant instances would not appear in the future. It is a great scandal to good government and a great injury to the public service generally, and it creates a feeling among hardworking people when they see the length to which this superannuation principle is carried out. As a personal allusion has been made to a friend of my own, Judge Travis, I may say I very much regret that the hon. menler for North Essex (Mr. McGregor) has conveyed the impression to which he gave utterance this evening. I remember the disturbinces that occurred at one time in regard to the judge, and while I would not go so far as to defend all of the actions and sayings of that gentleman at the time of the troubles, yet at the same time I must state that I have had his acquaintance for a great many years and that he is a person of extraordinary ability. He may have some faults of temper, but is a man of profound learning and extraordinary industry which is to day [^32]recognized very widely in the legal profession. Whether he was qualified for the high and delicate position of a julge may lee opento question. but as to his mental capacity, amd extraordinary industry, amd his legal attaimments I think there can haraly be any question.

Mr. MLLOCK. 1 wish to call the attention of the committee $t 0$ an item of superannuation. It is the case of John Poupore, collector of slide dues at Ottawa. It appears from the report that this gentleman was appointed to the office at the age of tis years. He was in oftice only seren years ant was then superammuated at an annual salary of S8S4, and according to the report he was not then in ill-health, hut he was iq years of age. A note explains that he was retired in order to pro. mote efficiency in the service. Is there any age in regard to these appointments? The diovermment appoints a man who is 6 gears of age to a public office, and after he has been there ser en years, they add ten years to his length of service, in order to entitle him to the superammation Act. In this case there was a gross aluse of the Act and disregard of the public interest. No hon. member would dream of carrying out such a transaction at his own expense. Why, therefore, should it the done ly the trustees of the people and at the public expense:

Mr. SPEAKER. Mr. Ponume was appointed collector of slide and lwom dues, but, at the time he was appointed, he discharged the duty of Crown lands agent for the dovermments of Ontario and Quelvec, the issue of licenses, &e., for the two provinces. About the time his superannuation took place the fiovermments of the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec determined to take those territories into their own hamls. Formerly the three ottices were conjoined, the provinces paying their proportion of the cost of the administration of this particular office at Ottawa. When the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec determined to take control of these branches of revenue which were formerly performed by this officer, it was necessary tor reduce the staff. Mr. Poupore was superannuated and a young man who was in the office was appointed at a much lower salary than Mr. Poupore was receiving as collector of slide and boom dues.

Mr. MULOCK. That may be some little reason for making some exception in this case. But if the Provinces of Ontario and Quelsec had an officer on their hands whon they no longer required, it was for those two provinces to deal with this ofticer according to the merits and claims put forward. This duty did not lie with the Dominion Goverminent.

Mr. SPEAKFR. He was a Dominion officer.
Mr. MULOCK. He was engaged in performing provincial cluties. Who appointed him?

Mr. SPEAKER. He was appointed by the Dominion Government, but by arrangement he discharged duties connected with those two provinces and the Dominion, and issued licenses for the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec. He was a Dominion otficer, however, appointed by the Dominion Government.

Mr. MULOCK. The duties discharged by him were provincial duties. He performed them partily for the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec. I do not see how the Dominion can be called upon to take over an otficer of (hit years, simply because for some reason he could not iny longer lee continued in the service of either province.
Mr. SPEAKER. That was not the fact.
Mr. MLLOCK. I do not see on what theory 10 years were added to his service, and he was made a pensioner on the Dominion for life.

Mr. BOWELL. The law provides that when an office is almolished as in a case of this kind, this action should be taken, and I think the party is entitecl to claim it.
Mr. MCLOCK. Wits the office aloolished?
Mr. Bow ELL. Yes: so far as the Dominion diovernment was concerned they had no longer anything to do with the oftice.

Sir RICHARD) (ARTWRIGHT. Are we to understand that Mr. Poupore was appointed at the age of 6i. years without having previously served. because the appointment of an otticer at that ase who was afterwards to receive a superannuation is all abuse in itself. According to the law every man is entitled to superamnation when he attains the age of (in) years, and if I remember aright. ffer he reaches 6i.he must be superammated. unless the officer in charge reports specially that there are grounds for exempting lim from the operation of the Act. The mere fact of appointing him at the age of 6.5 was an abuse of the Act.

Mr. PERRY. I womld like to know if the late Deputy Minister of Fisheries is on the list for superammation, and if uot is he going tow be? I am not prepared to night to say that it is a wise thing for the Minister to do away with that department, but if the late Depaty Minister of Fisheries is to le superamnated, I say it is a shame. That gentleman is a strong. hearty, healthy man, and I do not know that he is ©0 years of age. I am sure that if he is not required in that department there are other departments where his services would be of use to the country, without his coming here as a beggar asking the country to pay him about $$ 1,000$ a year for nothing. I want to know if he is on the superamuation list ?

An hon. MEMBER. He is on it.
Mr. PERRY. I am surprised to hear that. It would be enough for an old man like nyself who has been fighting politics for 41) years to be superannuated, but I think I am able to fight a goor many battles yet : and the late Deputy Minister of Fisheries is well able to earn his living for many years to come. Even though there may have been differences between the Minister and himself, yet there was no investigation, except perhaps some kind of a one behind the screens, and we have nothing to do with that. He is boarding somewhere here in Ottawa, walking the streets with his cane in his hands, and he is a young man, hardly 50 years of age. He looks as healthy as the Minister himself, he is full fat, and is well able to earn his living for many years to come. He must be a smart nan, he is a good scholar, he is an efficient man, and the people of the country generally do not find fault with the administration of the late Deputy Ninister of Fisheries. I say again a it is a crying shame to superannuate such a man, and put sach an expense on the country.
Mr. McMULLEN. Was the Customs appraiser of Toronto superanmated last year?

Mr. Bowell. No, sir, he was not.
Mr. MoMLLLEE. Has a new appointment been made in Toronto:

Mr. BOWELL. The dry goods appraiser resigned his prosition. and MIr. Davidson was sent from Montreal to Toronto to take his place, and the assistant in Toronto was sent to Montreal.

Mr. Me.MULLEN. I understand that he was a man named Cuthbert, and that he was a jeweller hefore being a dry goods appraiser.

Mr. BOWELL. He was appointed assistant appraiser to be used in any capacity that his services might lne required. At the time Mr. Sergeant left the department, it was necessary some one should he appointed to assist. Mr. Cuthbert was fouml to be a general business man with more than ordinary ability am tact, having been traveller for a commercial house. He had a knowledge as well of the dry gools trate as the jewellery business, ame he hat also knowledge of hardware. so that he was what I might call a generalall romed man. When I removed Mr. Davidsinn from Montreal, he was receiving Sl.f(n) a year. in plate of Mr. Sergeant, who received $$ 1$ (ixix). I substituted Mr. Cuthert for Mr. Datidsom in Montreal.
Mr. Molldelfer. The question was brought to my knowledge by a wholesale dry gonds merch. ant at Montreal who I think is alsi a supporter of hon. gentlemen opposite. He was complaining that the gentleman appointed was a person who had not that extended knowledge and experience in the dry gounds husiness which he should have as an appraiser, and that the appointment was not in the public interest. He looked upon it as singular that a man who had been a jeweller should le appointed as appraiser in an important centre like Toronto.

Mr. MULOCK. Mr. Cuthbert is a worthy citizen of Toronto, hat I never heard of his having any special knowledge of the dry goonds trade. I think he has been carrying on the business of a jeweller in the city for the last 1.8 or 20 years. I cam speak without any doult as to orer 10 years. and 1 think he was manager also for Russell & (io, in the jewellery business. If he did have any knowledge of dry goonds at one time, it is probable that having been out of the trade for so many years, he would not be the leest one in the world to appraise dry goods. While he is a very worthy citizen in many ways, you may find that he will not give satisfaction if he has to attend to dry gooms. There may be enough for him to do in the jewellery line, although 1 fancy that most of the jewellery comes into Canada at night. So that, while I wish Mr. Cuthbert well and know him to be an honest man and a worthy citizen-the only drawhack is that he has not had political light yet-I think he has been appointed on political grounds rather than on his merits.
Mr. BOWELL. The gentleman is not yet appointed; he is only on probation: and if his Enowledge of business proves to be of the character mentioned, his appointment will not be confirmed.
Mr. MULOCK. I would not like to do him any injury.

Mr. BOWELL. I understand that.

Mr. MeMULLEN. How many years is it understool that Mr. Wallace is to get this additional allowance?

Mr. FOsTER. Till he dies. It is just in the same prosition as the superammation allowance.

*ir RICHARI) CARTWRIGHT. With respect to this item. there is one matter of comsiderable importance which I know some hon. mempers who are not present wanted to disenss. that is, the monle in which the diovernment propose to deal with fines amb forfeitures. There has heen a gond deal of complaint, as many members know, on the part of the mercantile commmity as to the way in Which the dustoms law has been administered and as to the enowargement which they allege, righty or wrongly, is given to informers. who they say hate in a foom many cases practically blackmailed some of the importers. It will be recollected that there have heen suits, and a gool many complaints made ats a result of this system.

Mr. FOSTPR. This roteconsistsof a fome many items. and I wond suggest that when we reach the one relating to the ontside service. we allow that to staml with the understamding that the guestion which my hon. friend speaks of can be diseussed on that.

> Salaries and contingent expenses of the Sereral ports in Sura Stotiic......... 114,5 io sir RICHARD CARTWRIAHT. Is the decrease caused hy superamnation or permanent re. duction:

Mr. BoNFELL. Permanent reduction. I can give the lasin. gentleman full particulars if he ilesires. I informed the House last session that I would make fuller investigations to see where reductions could he male. In many cases. superammuations took place and the positions were not filler. In others, services were dispensed with, some with a small gratuity. We also cut down the item of contingent expenses, aml what is called " day pay." At Halifax the relaction by rearangement of the staff amountel to $\mathbf{S 3 , 3 0} \mathbf{w n}$.

Sir RI(HARI)(CARTWRIGHT. In doing that, were you compelled to increase the superammation allowance of any consilerable number of otticers:

Mr. BollekL. Not to any extent.
Mr. Mr.MULLEN. Have any of the ports leen closed during the past year: Looking over the receipts I tind seceral ports of entry where there is not sufficient collected to pay the salary of the collector. Such points shouhl be closed. Are there any cases where the customs receipts are so very low as not to come up to the amount necessary to pay officials?

Mr. BOWELL. There are cases of that kind. There are some ports in the Maritime Provinces and on the line dividing the United States from Canada, in the Eastern Townships as well as in Manitoba, where the amount collected is not equal to the expenditure, but these places must be kept open in order to prevent smuggling. This question has been discussed nearly every session luring the past thirceen years since I have been at the head of the department and a moment's reflection will show the madness of closing such ports. There have been some ports which have been reduced to outports on account of the falling off in receipts. For instance Guyshorough has been made an outport on account of the falling off of the revenue, and Canso where the revenue has increased has been made a port. The same with Medway in Queen's County. Other ports of that character have been closed.

Mr. Me.MLLLEN. I am quite sure I notice some where the amount collected was not up to the expenditure amd shall take an upportunity of hringing them under the notice of the Minister.

Mr. Bollell. Vou are quite eorrect.
Customs, Ontario....................... $\leqslant=01.2: 55$
Mr. MCLOCK. Please explain the cause of this increase.

Mr. BowldeLh. It may seem strange that in almost every province except Ontario and in the North-West there has leen a large reduction. The explanation of the increase in Oitario of $5,2,01$ lies in the fact that ports have increased and the work has increased to a considerable extent. A number of new preventive stations havebeen opened. and otticers had to le appointed along the morth shore of Iakes Huron and Superior and at Port Arthur. The general increases are ats follows:Amhersthurg. Sl(x) increase, accounted for liy the increase in contingencies: Berlin, an increast of Sl(w) to the collector, who dues the whole work himself, and the revenue is increasing wonderfully. Brantford, an increase of sixi, sl(x) given to Mr. tingencies. Brockville, an increase to two clerk: of SIIN each. In (hatham there is Mr. Fellows who has been removed from one port and added to another. Cobmurg, there was anotficer who was paid out of contingencies and is now on the permanent statf, catusing an increatse of Siln). In (ol. lingwond there is a transfer of one officer to that port and an increase of Sin for contingencies. In Cornwall there is an adhlional sin in the salary of one of the othicers. Ginelph, an increase of another Sl(N). Hamiltom, an increase among different ofticers of som. Kingston, an increase of Sill each to three officers. Morrisiburgh, the ohl collectom has heen superamuated, and another appointed and an increase in contingency, making a total of saiva. Niagara, extra pay through the necessity of placing on an additional man luring the summer. Slin). At Ottawa the increases amount to Siok . In Owen Sound, extra pay arising from extra work through steamers making that a port of call, altogether $\$ 30 \mathrm{~N}$ ). Peterborough, an increase to the collector of $\$ 2(00$, making his salary si, $2(0)$. That is a year. In Picton, the increased pay of those not on the permanent staff is $\mathbf{B H}$ ), which may be decreased or increased according to the work done. In Prescott an alditional otficer had to be appointed on account of the extra work caused ly the crossing of the Canadian Pacific Railway and the ferries, but, though it is an apparent increase, there will be a decrease at that port, from the fact that the surveyor, who receivel $\$ 800$, has resigned, and the oftice is not filled and will not. le filled. If it should be foumd necessary on account of extra work in the summer, an additional man may be put on at $\$ 400$ or $\mathbf{3 5 0 0}$. At Port Arthur there is an increase of \$300), arising from the fact that an officer has been appointel in conjunction with the Inland Revenue Department. He is stationed at Rat Portage, but he comes under the port of Port Arthur. At St. Thomas there is an increase of $\Xi(N)$ to one of the officers. At Sarnia there is an apparent increase of S $1,3 \times \mathrm{KO}$, hat that is in consequence of a transfer of lifferent officers along the lakes. At the sault, extra pay during last year amomied to Sixh. In Simeore, the apparent increase is $\leq 2.6 \%$, lut Dover bas been reduced to an outport and the ofticer there who received orerswn) has been superanmated and another man appointed at $\underset{\mathrm{E}}{\mathrm{f}} \mathbf{0}$ ). In Toronto, the appointment of an additional assistant appraiser and the increases to some of the ofticers show an increase of $\$ 3.3(x)$. I can give the hon. gentleman if he desires the names of those who have been appointed. At Wallaceburgh there has been an merease in consequence of the transfer of one man amounting to $\leqslant(6)$. That is the result of attach. me it wimna. The man who was tmasferred iatl Sink amd amother man was put in his place Whe had treen receiving siant. At 1 inimser there wats an alditional man placed on the staff at vir(x) per ammm: making a cotal of the increases in the province of sll. i(m). The decreases are as tollows:-At Belleville one clerk who was receiring sil.(xn) was dismissed. His successur was rppointed at Sish and Sl(x) wasalded to the salary -if the collector, making a net dectease of Sl(W). At - lifton. one of the ofticers who was receiving Eibut was retired amd his plate is not tilled. Bover, as I have already stated, wats reduced to an ontport. It formerly cost $\mathbf{S O}_{2}$ (9in) the othicers had heen transferred to Simere, and the officer there is receiving S(n) per ammm. At fort Erie there is a saving of siln). less contingencies. At tamamorue, less extrapay, Slow. In Iomion there was a reduction i.j the realjustment of the staff amounting to sinno. and at Woolstock there was an appropriation asked for last year of Sinn which was not - 0pended and which is not asked for this rear. making the reductions amome to S4.t.x), amilmak. ing the net increase in the province s.

Mr. MELOCK. Who got the increase in Picton and when was the increase made?

Mr. BoWEL.L. That is exta pay amd not an increase in salary. In that port one otficer retired who was getting seph) per immm, and anwher, Mr. Niles, was appointed in his place, and the extra pay was given to assist the collector and for extea work. There is only one otficer at licton. and the Central Railway terminus is there, and he had to appoint some one to assist him at a cost of ※边

Mr. MULOC'K. Then the officer was allowed Sinn for this extra work:

Mr. Boll ELLL. That may apply also to the outports. There are outports at Wellington, Wel. ler's Pay, at the shipping point of the Central Railway, and also two or three others.

Mr. MULOC:K. Wial the hon. gentleman explain the increase of 830 x at dohoury?

Mr. BoWVELL. Mr. Hageman was formerly paid out of contingencies and he received $\$ 600$, anil there are $\$ 100$ for contingencies, making $\mathbf{\$ 7}(1)$. Deducting the extra pay which hal been given of S400, a portion of which I suppose went to Mr. Hagerman, the net increase is left at $\mathbf{3} \mathbf{3 0 0}$.

Mr. MULOCK. Are the receipts at the port of Cobourg greater than they were?
Mr. BOWFLL. I crould not siy unless I referred to former receipts. but the collections last year amounted to $515,8 \pm \%$. There are only three officers: there, the collector, a derk and a lambing waiter. The station is alonot a mile from the oftice. and they have also to atteml to the work at the prot. There has lneth nualilitiomal otficer admed to the staff at that port.

Mr. MCloch. There has lreen an extra clerk converted into a permanent officer. That is an anhlitional expense. Fommerly you hanla sort of elastic system, an extra clerk whose services could le dispensed with. hat now you have a permanent othicer whose services. I suppose, catn only le dispensed with on the condition of mating him a pensioner for life. Did the requirements of the othere necassitate this change:

Mr. Boll ELLL. The reguirements of the othice necessitated the emplonment of Mr. Hagerman. whether he remained there temperarily it Sin) a month or put on the permanent statf at the same salary. I may siy framkly that 1 am somewhat in accord with the hon. wentlemans opinion on this subject. The plawing of men on the permanent staff-and that is what every one of them demamds - certainly has the etecet which the hon. gentleman indicates. Whether under any new system, either at heminuarters or in the outside service, it wond not be better to have a number of thempainl by the month or hy the year is a puestion for future consideration. The answer to that is whether you wouhl get as good mento remain in the service, becallase if they han mothing to look forward to in the future they would so and come ats they pleased.

Mr. MULock. Will the hom. gentleman say when this change tomp plate that is, Mr. Hagerman from being an extra clerk tolse a permanemt rlerk:

Mr. BOWFELL. I think some time during last year. It was done certainly a long time before the election.

Mr. MLLOCK. I repeat n:y question with regard to Ss. Thomas. Pironto and Lomdon.

Mr. BOWELL. In sit. Thomas, there is omls slon increase : it was given on a preventive officer at Port Burwell, who received sid (K), amd I gave him an ahlitional $\leqslant 1(0)$. He hears the sonorous ami revy oderous name of Batkhouse. In Toronto. deInct salary of $\mathrm{Si}(0)$ which was paid to Mr. Mottiatt. deceased : dednct $\operatorname{si} 1,6{ }^{(1)}$ paid to Mr. Sergeant, who is retired. but not superammated. Then you may add for a successor to Mr. Sergeant, sí, tim) aithough the gentleman who is now performing the work is paid $\mathrm{S} 1, \mathrm{f}(\mathrm{K})$. Still, I take the sime amomet. because I think it is a little emough salay; forr a man in that position. There was an appointment of Mr. James A. Beall, at S(BN), and of Mr. M.Murtney, at $\$ 600$, and an increase given to the sul. collector at the outport of Midland. The hon. gentleman is aware the expenses of these outports are all charged to Torento. There is an increase of $\$ 200$ given to Mr. Fowley, one of the otticers on the frontier : $\$ 100$ to a man named Wilson, and an increase of $\$ 200$ to the salary of Mr. Fleming, Bishier, who has to haudle about $\$ 4,00,0 \mathrm{on}$. Mr. Faterson, who has been made an assistant appraiser, is given 2200 in addition. There is a total inerease in Tomnto of $\$ 1,200$. The total expenditure for that port was $\$ 366,58$, and the collections were 34,0,6,42\%. At London ilerluct the salary of James (irant, resigned, 8600 , and $\$ 1,(000)$ which was taken for a new ofticer but no appointment has been made ret. One of the chief clerks having died a short time since, then Mr. Dreany was appointed at sion. aml Mr. Mchean at Sixh. An increase of SEM is siven to Mr. Tilluat, who is performing the work of chief cherk. The total expenditure at
 I think Mr. Dreany was appointed during the last rear. Mr. Talloot got his inerease when he was promoted after the death of Mr. Kwing. He was promoted on the recommemation of the late Mr. Newburn. Inspector of loots.

Mr. Sl"THFRLAND, l motice there is a seneral increase all along the line. and 1 want to take this maatsion again to call the attention of the Minister to the port of Womelstok. I notice in many cases where the revenme is not nearly as large as it is in Womelocock, that it cost a great Neal more to collect it. amil harolly think that justice has been done to the officess there. Owing to the peeculiar circumstances of the prote as the Minister knows, the work is much haver than it is at many other ports. The otheials are cery aliligent and attentive to their dutiesand there should be some recognition of their service in this general increase all along the line. The Minister is a wate of the fact that there are many other places where the revenue is not as large as it is at Woomstark, hat Where it costs at great deal more tocollect it. I give St. Thomas as an instance, where smaller revenue is collected, but something orer sl. (MW) more is paid for collecting it. At sit. Thomas the public buildings are better, amb there are greater conveniences for doing the work than at the purt of Wenolstorek. While I have no desire to adronate an increase in the expenditure of the department in any way, I think the men at all the ports shouhd be paid on somewhat the same scale, so that justice maty be done at all the ports. In my opinion the officers at Womplask have not leren treated ats well as the otheers in some other ports, taking intu atcount the duties they perform ami the amome of revenme wollecterl. The Minister knows that the matter of anceommondation at Woolsterek has leeen brought ta his attention very often, he knows it is not what it ought to be, considering the large amount of hasiness tone there.

Mr. BOWFLL. Will the hon. gentleman tell me what he means when he siys that they are worse paid then they are at St. Thomas:

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I notice on the list that in some places where less revenne is collected, the otficers are letter paid.

Mr. BOWVLI. Vou said Nit. Thomas.

Mr. SUTHFRLANI). 1 instanced St. Thomas stock it only costs $\mathrm{E} 3,1\left(2 \mathrm{i}\right.$ to collect $\mathrm{S}_{-}^{-},(\mathrm{MNO})$. That is a very material lifference. These officers shonh receive the same pay, at all events, as ofticers whe have less work to perform. considering also that the port yields a larger revenue than does the other. That is reasonable and just. It must be known to the Minister that owing to special circumstances, the work is heary. The distance of the stations is great, and these officers work very hard at night in order to keep up with their duties. I have often seen them working late in order to get out their report. If they are not out early in the morning, they camot get to the station and attend to their duties, and often for want of sutti-cient assistance merthants have lren put to considemble incomenence. I submit that the fats are such as deserve the consideration of the Minister. I simply male this propesition. that when a man does more work than amother occopring a similar position, he is entitled to more paty.

Mr. Boll EL.L. The genemal proposition of the hon. gentleman is correct, ame every one will agree with him. The highest salaty paid at st. Thomas is $\mathrm{S} 1,20(0)$. The collector at ifompiock, who is a very good one receives sil. 3 (h).

Mr. SUTHERLAND. He has been : 10 or 41 vears in the service.

Mr. Bowfel.L. Not quite so longe as that. If the hom. sentleman had applied that remark to the late collector at St. Thomas, he would have leten quite cortect. for he was a very ohd gentlemanwhen he died. I removed him from a small place tos. Thomas, aml he proved a capital eollector. The. work at Sit. Thomas is altogether of a different character. amd much ereater in colume than the work at Wionlstoch. The fact is that some thousamb dollars more may be collected at onfe port than another. but that is momdiation of the work deme. That depends on the muniler of totions at which the ofticers are compelled wattend in order to receige gemals on their arriad. That is the case at St. Thomas, which is perhaps the most thriving town in Ontarion next us Wendstock. I have remosed atticers from prints along the fromtier where rery litle work is now done owing to the construction of railways. ant I have semt some of these officers to it. Thomas at increased salaries. 1 consider that the otficers are paid in proportion to the work at both towns. In regaral to accommondation. I thought a new ofthee had lreen rented for the accommotation of the people of Womatock. I will not argue the yuestion of pub. lic huidings, becamse that may come up umder the publie works. When the hon. gentleman becomes Minister of ( instoms he wall find that it does not follow that where there are the largest collec. tions there is the greatest amount of work. That depents to a great extent on whether the place is a preventive station or a malway centre. It must also be lome in mimi that twe of three outports are attached to St. Thomats, which swell the expenditure, and this circumstance doe: not enter into the calculations as regards Wome stock.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The hon. genteman hats not shown that I was incorrect, although his explat nation as to why increases were not male may be satisfactory. The Minister knows that I simply took St. Thomas as a place close by, amd lesired to be strictly fair in the comparison I made. I ask the hon. Minister to bear in mind that Wiodstench is a more important malway centre than is St. Thomas, and the stations be-ing situated at so great a distance the work is more severe on the officery. I do not complain in regard to the salary paid to the collector. but his assistants do not receive the same salaries as are paid in other places for the work they do, amd the positions they loold. If I had desired to occupy the time I could have shown the Minister that I was thoroughly accurate in my statement, as may le shown by a comparison of the different places, and the number of officers and the amomits paid to each. I consider I made a very fair compurison. I siovalid like the statements I have made, which are all borme out by the facts, to le taken into consideration with a view to doing justice.

Mr. SPFAKER. I have a somewhat similar complaint to make to that brought forwarel by the hon. member for Oxforl (Mr. Sutherdand), with resperet to the outport of Pembapoke. I atmit the ruth of the statement mate hy the Minister, that the amount of revenae collected is not a fair test of the amonat of work performed. but at this partithere is only one otheer at a siblary of sitno. 1 am not asking that the salary of the otheer le increased. but I want te point out that the efticiensy of the service is not what it ought to be. The otherer has :o attend to the railway station, to lowk after parcels coming ly post aind varions other matters. He has to attemi every train that comes in. lucaltise he has not only to wollect duty on those gexuls that atrive by mil. lut he has tosee that datiable gowhs fissing morthward on the line are lexsked after when phasing that particular point. The effect of it is that the ofticer is obliged tolse out of his oftice during a very great pertion of the tinee. Ihope the Miniter will enmsider the necesity of giving some assistance to the oftieer at that partionlar place.

Mr. MrylCl.LES. What are the receipts iat barrington. Nowa Scotia?
Mr. Bowfill. Collertions, ミl.azibamdex penses ? 우, 3i-.

Mr. Mr.MLILLEN. I thomght the Minister sid there was no port at which the cose of expenses exereded the amomut receivenl.

Mr. Boll ELAL. On the contrary 1 sam there were quite a number, amil give the reatoms why they were not abolished, amel stated it was generally in the Maritime Provinces on the cosast, amd also in the west, and in the Eistern Townships on the Cinited States lmoder, where it wats nevessary to keep up a kind of protective service.

Mr. MrMUl.LF.N. Duts the Minister know that $C \therefore$. Hagerman, lambing-water at the outport of Neweastle, lives in Neweastle or does he live in Port Hope?

Mr. Bow, ElLL. He must live in Seweastle if there is such a man there. If Newcastle is anout. port the expenses are probably charged to bort Hope.

Mr. Mo.MULILEN. I am informed he lives at Port Hope : perhaps there is not enough room at Port Hope for two or three oftheers. and that he is wharged to the outport.

Mr. BOWFLL. I can tell the hon. gentleman that there is nothing of the kind. There is un such case in the whole $1,(\mathrm{MO})$ ofticers that are attached to the Customs lepartment, aml in no case can he or any other member show that any man has been charget to any other port or outpoit than that in which he does his duty. I am not in the inabit of aloing business in that way.

Mr. MemULLE.N. Are we to umlerstamd that he is a resident of Newcastle?

Mr. BOWELL. If he is not. I know nothing to the contrary, nor am I prepared to say the hon. gentleman's statement is not true. If it is true the man is not doing his duty and it shall low looked into.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). Whe is the athicer at Pelee lisham now:

Mr. Bollifil. Melommick. The smee man ho was formerty collector has beren reinstated.
Mr. PITERSON (Bramt). What Was done wita the man who was apmanted and plismissed?

Mr. Bowfel.l. It is just one of the exses that me hom, frieml from North Cork (Mr. Muleck) re. ferred to. He never was appointed. He was put on temporarily to is, work when Mctormick wats removert te the mimbimi topertorm ather work, and for reasoms which lyate fully to the Homse. last vear. After investigation 1 fomm that Mr: Mé"ormick was at gext otherer, amil minstatert him ami dispersed with the services of the ather.

Mr. PATERSNX (Byano. My revollertion ot it is hardly in that way. I thoughe that sentle. man was remularly appointed, and fanlt was fommi Iecause he hat lx+u diemissed, and the dam was lisputed as 1 remember, and a ceytain amomut was offered. Did he acrept the amment that was onferea be the department, of what was the amenomt givet him:

Mh. How Fill. He was pail at the rate at sf(x) or sink a year for the actual the he was em. plover.

Mr. PATBREON (Bramt. Fiverohing is forely there nown.

Mr. Bolltel.L. I los mot think ererything is lovely. When 1 make the statement that he never was ippointed 1 trust the hon. grentlemam has suthi vient contivence in me a melieve it. Atwhison had never beten appointed. but was plated in the sevvice. temporarily. 1 malerstame the hon. gentleman to donht that.

Mr. PATERSON (Bmat). It is merely my reodlection of what acomred last reat. I think theme was a telegram from the Minister suying that he: hanl treen inppinted.

Mr. Bolle Eld. If the hon. senteman inter. prets "appointment " tomean, that when lanto a collector: put a man on for a certam time. that wasan appointment. But wedo not consider that a man is appointed until the Order in (iomeil is pasised appointing him.

Mr. PATERSON (brant). 1 know the Ministe: of Customs sutficiently well to know that when heas Minister silys he will appoint some one, he sees the appointment is contirmed by ath oreler in Comill.

Mr. Bow Fild. Sot always.
Mr. PATERNON (Bmat). With very mate en. ceptions.
Mr: BOWELL. I oftemsay I will recommend an appointment mader certain circumstantess amd is the circumstances do not justify it l do not do so.

Mr. PATERSON (brant). I venture to think that when the hon. member undertakes to ahminister his department and to make recommemdations to Council that he is alwut as powerful as all the other members of the l'ivy Commeil put together on that point.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHTS I notice that the Minister of Customs, or his suceessom, receutly superammated an ofticer in Kingrion of the mame: of Pigeon.

Mr. Bollell. Ves.

Nir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. 1 know Mr. Pigeon. If fancy he must be man of about 70 years of age, it is true $:$ hut he is a hale and hearty man and well enough able to discharee his duty for some years tocome. What was the reason of super. ammation:

Mr. Boll ELL. From age, and lecanse I was informen that he was mot attembing to his duties as at honsekeeper and messenger shomla do, amblat supposed that he was mable to do it foom his age. That was the representation malle to me. anill superammated him.

Sir RICHARD (ARTWRIGHT. I an mather surprised if those representations were male to the hom. Minister. Who is appointed in his place:

Mr. Jow ELL. I am only spaking from reeod. lection, hut I think a min mamed (Garson.

Sir RICHARD) (ARTWRIGHT. If I am correctly atriseal. Mr. Pigeon, who I should aty is quite eapable torlischarge the duties of the riftice for some years, hats been superammated at the age of 70 a all the man appointed in his phace is lit or (i.).

Mr. Boll ELLA. If that is the casse. I Wats deceived, that is all I can say.
sir RI(HARI) (ARTWRIAHT. If that is the case, the economy in the publice service has in that respect heen pretty seriously interfered with. I suppose you know the age of the officer appointed.

Mr. BOWELL. I can tind it out.
Mr. MULOCK. Jesterday we learned that the (iovernment had allowed tish from Newfoumdand that were lutiable to come into (Gmala duty free. I wish to know whether any such privilege on arbitrary exercise of power hats taken plate with regard to anything lesides fish.

The (: HAIRMAN (Mr. DeNisos). I think it is out of order. We are diseussing the salaries and contingent expenses in the several ports of the Province of Ontario. I do not see what comection that has with the duties of fish from Newfommlland.

Mr. MLLOCK. I am not discussing the tish question ; that was disposed of yesterday. 1 am asking whether any of these officers in Ontario--. --.
The (:HARRMAN. I have ruled you ont of order.

Mr. MULOCK. Perhaps yon will wait till I put. the question. I referred to Newfommland as inn illustration that the Minister might hetter umlerstand what I desire to refer to. It is well known that different rulings oltain at different ports. Not long ago a Toronto merchant informen me that a higher duty had been chargerl, depending, of course, on appraisement, on certain classes of goods, glass, for example, imported through Toronto. than was charged on similar goods imported through at certain other port. While that may depend on the judgment of the appraiser, a still greater injustice would occur if, in other circumstances, the law itself was disregarded. I wish to know whether any record of such cases is kept"

Mr. BOWELL. If the hon. gentleman wants to enter into the general question of the management of the Customs in reference to the orders given to the appraisers under the law, I shall be quite prepared to enter into that question at any Mr. BuWell.
time. But what that has to do with the particular item umler discussion I am at a loss to know. These difficulties with the different apmaisers have occurred ever since there has been it tariff; hat I camot say that $I$ ann realy to enter into that question under the Estimates.

Mr. MULO(K. We are now discussing an item involving an expenditure of nearly $$ 1.06 \%$. 1 h 1 for the enforcement of the (ustoms Act, and I think it is perfectly fermane to this item to ask the question that i have askel. I resire to know whether there has been any anthority given to any otficer of the department to dmit any dutiable: growls free:

Mr. BowELLA. Nos such order has been issmed. If the hom. gentleman refers to the question of Scwfommand fish which was diseussed last might, explanation will be given as promised in proper time.

Mr. MULOCK. Is there a recort kept of duties remitted:

Mr. Boll ELL. Yes. All luties that have remit. ted have been remitted hy order of the Treasmy amd the Fxecutive.
sir KICHARD) ('ARTWRIG:HT. Ender what item does the bon. gentleman propose to discuss the question of the remission of duties or the nomcollection of duties in the matter of Newfommand tish:

Mr. Boll FLL. It will come up when the papers mosed for are hrought down. I never supposed that in discussing the Estimates, we would have an attack mate on the whole policy of the borernment, and I sulmit to the hon. gentleman whether any question of that hind has ever been propumaled or a Minister expected to enter into a deneral defence of the liovermment on any question of policy in (ommittee of the Whole, when passing the Estimates.

Mr. FosTER. I would like to point out that there are very few members present, and the promise was made that this whole question would be discussed? When the papers are brought down. They have not yet been brought down. and it would conduce to the general information of the Honse, who take a strong interest in this question that the debate should be held over until then.

Nir RICHARD (ARTWRI(iHT. There is great comvenience in discussing a subject of that particular chatacter, when you can have question and answer. I think it is only fair, when discussing estimates of a million dollars for Customs to enquire into sucif a matter as the fact that for a period of years a particular duty has not heen collected. I do nost want however to press hon. gentlemen opposite on this occasion, and there is no ohjection, if an item be left over, discussing thematter later. I do not want a series of set speeches nor do I suppose hon. gentlemen want it, if information can be better alotained by short discus. sion and question and answer. We will not go on with the discussion now, it being melerstoml that we will take it up when asked to pass the item of outside Customs service.

Customs, British Columbia..  $$ 51,445$

Mr. BOWELL. There is an increase here on accome of establishing an office at Blaine, a new town on the Sound, where the railway crosses the border, about twenty miles from New Westminster. There is also an officer appointed at Huntingdon, the crossing place of the line which connects with the Canadian Pacitic Railway.

Mr. MoMULLEN. There are three officers in (Chicago at a const of $83,(0)$ ). Why are they employed:

Mr. BOWHLL. They do not cost us anything. They are placed there for the convenience of rail way companies and to facilitate passenger tratfic throughont Ganalia. The diand Trunk Railway asked us to appoint an officer, Mr. Thompson, who has been in the service some years. They pay the money to us, and we pay it to the men. We objected to their paying the men becaluse they would then become servants of the railway instead of being under the control of the department. Mr. Handwell had charge of the station of the Dichigan ('entral, but is no longer there. As soon as the Canadian Pacific Railuay made connection by means of the Wibash Railway, the trattic fell off to so great an extent that the company no longer required him there, amd he has been relieved of dity. Mr. Reid, the third man, is paid hy the Canadian Pacific Ratway. There is also an otticer at Minnesota Junction, Nt. Paul, paid by the Northern Lacitic Railway, and another at Tacoma, paid by the Northern Pacific Railway, in order to superintend the transfer of Canalian foomls from Canada passing in lond through the Énited states to British Columbia.

> Salary and travelling expenses of Inspectors of Ports and travelling expenses of other officers on inspection $$ 19,000$

Mr. PATERNON (Brant). How many inspectors hate we:

Mr. BOWELL. Fiveor six. Noval Scotia onte: New Brunswick and Prince Edward Islam one: Quebec one, extending as far as Kingston, and one from Kingston westmard to Porth Arthur. Also one in Wimnipeg who has charge of the whole North-West, and Mr. Clute in British Columbia, who is also collector at New Westminster and discharges the additional rluties of inspector. Mr. McMichatel, who is tinancial inspector for the whole Dominion, is now performing that work until a successor is appointed to Mr. Mewburn, deceased.

Mr. OBRIEN. Is the present staff of inspectors at all adequate for the work to be done, and is there any real economy in having a small staff as compared with the amount of revenue which may be lost to the comutry by the want of sufficient force : I consider that the country would he hetter served liy having a better staff and the revente would be increased.

Mr. BOO WLLL. I am not sure but that the hint thrown out by the hon. gentleman is correct. There is a very large charge for travelling expenses for the inspectors, and, if they are to lee of any value, it is evident that their value must be conditional on their efficiency, and it is for us a very serions matter to consider whether the area travelled by these inspectors should not be reduced, so that a more constant and hetter inspection might take place.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). I suppose the Minister is not anxious to state who is to get Mr. Mewhurn's position?

Mr. BOW ELLL. Not very anxious.
Mr. PATERBON (Brant). In regard to the position of Mr. Clute, while it may he very well to economize and not have toos !nany officers, it may be possible to give one man too many offices. I see that Mr. Clute is collector of customs and inspector of customs, amd he receives extra pay as an exciseman-in fact he receives pay from tive different sources. The gnestion arises whether he can be an efficient collector of customs and inspector of customs for all the ports of British Columbia, and fill these different othices hesiles:

Mr. MULO(\%. Ts thereayy ditticulty in getting enough persons to fill the vaciancy?

Mr. BowkLL. I have not fomm any.
Committee rose and reported the resolutions.

MESSAGF, FROM HIS ENCELLENOY.

Nir JOHN THOMPSON presentel a Message from His Excellency the (iovernor (ieneral.

Mr. SPEAKER reall the Message, as follows:Stanife of Preston.

The ( iovernor General transmits to the House of Commons supplementary Fstimates of sums required for the strvice of the Duminion for the year ending the 30 th June, 1892 , and in accordane with the provisions of the British North America Act. $186 \mathrm{~T}_{\text {, }}$, he recommends these Estimates to the House of Commons.

Mr. FOSTER moved:
That the Message of His Excellemor, with the Estimates, be referred to Committee of supply.

Motion astreed to.

NUPPLEMENTARY FSTMMATES.

Mr. FONTERR. I may say that $I$ would like $t$, take these Estimates upand pass themand let them go to the Senate and become an Act as soon as possilile, because there are some items there which are stully needed for the work of this House. Our own funls are almost exhatusted in consequence of the long session of last year, aml, therefore, I suggest that we might take this up to-morrow, if the hon. gentleman has no objection.

Sir RI(HARI) CARTWRIGHT. As far as may he, we will be desirous to meet the wishes of the hon. gentleman, but we would like to see these Estimates for a moment or two before making any promises.

Sit JOHN THOMPSON moved the adjournment of the House.

Sir RICHARI) (ARTURIGHT. I understand that the Minister of Finance wishes to proceed with the supplementary Estimates to-morrow: What other Government lusiness will he take up?

Mr. FONTER. The other Estimates.
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Could the Minister of Justice give us any idea as to the time when the Rellistribution Bill will be ready for its submission to the House?

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. No, I cannot. I think I will he able to sity something more cletinite about it next week.

Mr. MULOCK. When may we expect to have copies of the reports on which fovernor lientral's warrants were issued?

Mr. FOSTER. They are being preparen.
Mution agreed to: and House aljourned at 1 a.m. (Friday).

THE LONLON FLECTION.

Mr. SUTHERLANI) moved:

That the petition of Thomas S. Hobbs and others. electurs of the city of London, presented to this House on Wednesday last, concerning theconduct of William Elliott. Esq. Judge of the County Court of the County of Middlesex, be printed in the Votes and Proceedings.

Motion agreed to.
Mr. SUTHERLAND moved :
That the petition of Thomas S. Hobbs and others, of the city of London, be forwarded to William Elliott, Esq., County Judge of the County of Middlesex, for his information.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I ask that this resolution shall not be put, as it is out of order.

Sir Johs Thompos.

Mr. SPEAKER. The motion is out of order.
Mr. SUTHERLAND. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would ask whether the papers concerning the London election have been laid on the Table in accordance with the Address to His Excellency, and, if not, when they will be laid on the Table:
sir IOHN THOMPSOS. I thought they had all heen hrought down. I will see to that.

(ENSUN ANT) STATISTICN.

Mr. MILLN (Bothwell). I would ask the leader of the (iovermment when we may expect the map' which the House agreed should be furnished representing the districts and the cities and municipal and county boundaries:
sir JOHN THOMPSON. It was ordered immediately after the passige of the resolution, and I will ascertain hetween this and Monday.

Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). I would also ask the Govermment as to the proposed report in reference to incomes over a certain amount, whether the Minister will be able to furnish us from the census with a statement of the parties who are receiving an income of more than Sove or Sl,(NO), and the amount of those incomes.

Mr. CARLING. I will make the necessary enquiry, and let the hon. gentleman know on Monday.

Sir RICHARI) (ARTWRIGHT. loes the hon. gentleman know whether any enguiries were made which would enable my hon. friends question to he answered, because, judging from my recollection of the census papers I satw, I doubt very much if any such questions were put?

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). If there has been no such information collected, this census will be extremely defective.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The question the hon. gentleman askel the other day was within what time such information could probally be brought down.

Mr. MLLs (Bothwell). les.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I suppose he hat not particular reference to the census any more than to any other source of information. I will endeavour to ascertain.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). My impression was, when I put the question, that the information was embraced in the census, but there would be a little difficulty in furnishing the information experlitiously.

NATIONALITY OF THE POPULATION.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGH'T. I would like to enquire of the Minister of Agriculture when we may expect information as to the retails of the nationality and birth-places of the population? It is now a year since the census was taken, and I should think that that information ought to be ready for production in a very short time.

Mr. CARLING. The question was asked in the House some two or three weeks ago. I made enquiry and was informed that we would likely have that laid on the Talle of the House by the midrle of April. I expect to be able to do so.

NEGOTLATIONS WITH NEWFOUNDLAND.

Mr. DAVIES (1'.E.I.) I would like to ask the hon. gentleman whether any negotiations are at present pending between this Government and that of Newfoundland with reference to the settlement of the difficulties between the two Governments?

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I can hardly say there are any negotiations with the Government of Newfoundland. There have been communications with the Colonial Office on the sulject of our relations with Newfomilland.

ORDNANCE LANDS--TORONTO.

Mr. DEWDNEY moved second reading of resolution (11th Mareh) declaring it expedient to convey to the Corporation of the city of Toronto, certain ordnance lands of that city.

Resolution read the second time, reported and concurred in.

Mr. DEWDDNEY moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 58) to authorize the conveyance to the Corporation of the City of Toronto, certain Ord. nance Lands in that city.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

SUPPLY.

House again resolved itself into Committee. of supply.

(In the Committee.)

Civil Government-Department of Interior - To pay salary of Chief Clerk from 1st November, 1891, to 30 th June, 1892, at $$ 2.800$.  $$ 1,866$ bi

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I suppose that this is the salary intended to le paid to Mr. Burgess for his services, from the 1st November, 1891, to 30th June, 1892?
Mr. DEWDNEY. Yes.
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I think it is time now we should understand what the Government propose to do with that gentleman. There was apparently a slight difference of opinion hetween two important members of the Government as to Mr. Burgess, when we last had that gentleman under discussion. Now, I think we ought to know whether the views of the Minister of Interior, or of the Minister of Justice are going to prevail, and whether Mr. Burgess is to continue in the position of chief clerk for his many merits, or whether he is, as the Minister of Interior rather intimated, to be restored in all honour and glory to the position which he has so well filled as Deputy Minister of that department. I think now the hon. gentlemen have probably come to an understanding, and we desire to know what they propose to do with Mr. Burgess.

Mr. DEWDNEY. I do not recoilect that there was any difference or conflict of opinion with regard to Mr. Burgess between the leader of the House and myself, when this matter came up before. When the question was asked me what position Mr. Burgess occupied, 1 think I stated that a report of Council had determined that he should occupy the position of chief clerk, but I proposed to recommend that he should be reinstated. Of course, the report has now been brought down, and it indicates what conclusion was come to. This item is to pay the salary of a chief clerk, which has been muprovided for, and upon its being voted it will le paid to Mr. Burgess, who is now in the department, and has been acting, as I said hefore, as Deputy Minister up to the present time, without being alle to draw any salary. After the Order in Council was passed an application was made to the Auditor General for his salary, and the Auditor (ieneral said that as there was no such salary voted by the House, he was unable to sanction it.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRI(GHT. I do not yet quite understand from the hon. gentleman what the Government propose to do. I did not see the report the hon. Minister alludes to. Is Mr. Burgess to become deputy head asain or not?
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The report which my colleague refers to is the report on which his case was originally dealt with, along with other persons in the department. The other lay when the matter was mentioned, I merely wanted to guard against its leing supposed that it had been decided upon to reinstate Mr. Burgess, whereas my colleague had merely stated what his own ciew was.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRI(;HT. I think surely we have a right to know. This is a matter of great public moment. The hon. gentleman has not forgotten that Mr. Burgess and a number of other parties in the Department of the Interior occupied the attention of this House for a considerable leugth of time, and were the cause of the proluction of divers blue-brooks, covering several hundred pages, one of which I have in my hand. Now, I think that the Government at this present. time ought to be able to tell us definitely what they have decided to do with respect to Mr. Burgess, whether they think Mr. Burgess deserves to be reinstated, as was undoubtedly intimated by the Minister of Interior, or whether they think that they will continue him as chief clerk, deeming the reduction a sutficient punishment. I think that is a matter that the House have a right to be informed of at this stage, and that is the point to which I desire to call the attention of the Minister of Justice and the Minister of Interior. We want merely to know what the Government have decided on doing. The question is of very considerable importance, having reference to the discipline of the department, and having reference to the matters which were brought to our attention in the Public Accounts Committee last year. Surely the Government are able to tell us what they intend to do with respect to Mr. Burgess.

Mr. FOSTER. I am afraid my hon. friend has not read the information which was brought down and laid upon the Table of the House. That information is contained in the report of the SubCommittee of Council, which took up the cases of Mr. Burgess and the other employés of the Interior Department. If he had read that report he would have found the decision to which the Government came, and no other decision has been reached. That decision as regards this officer is simply this: That whereas he was at that time Deputy Minister, he should be reduced to the rank of a chief clerk, and that the Honse be asked to vote him, not the minimum salary, but the salary of $\mathbb{S}, \mathbf{, B ( N )}$ as chief clerk. The item at present before the House is to carry out that recoumendation. The recommendation was adopter, and by a minute of Council passed ; it is the dovermment's decision, and no further decision has heen arrived at. Mr. Burgess, as my colleague says, has heen acting as leputy since. What arrangement will be made for a Deputy Minister in the future, is a matter that the tovernment has not considered, and consequently I can make no statement about it.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I uan understand that this is a rote for the salary of a chici clerk; it does not require any explimation to see that. What I say is, that the fovermment ought to he in a position to tell us what they propose to do with Mr. Burgess. Here is a gentleman who was the head of a very important department, and whose condract was censured by the Public Accoments Committee-whose conduct, as I understand, appears reprehensible in the eyes of the Government themselves. We ask to know what they propose to do with this genteman. It was intimated to us very plainly and distinctly by the Minister at the head of the department that, in his judgment, Mr. Burgess ought to be reinstated. The question I put is a very simple and plain one, whether, in making that statement. the Minister of the Interior represents the decision his colleagues have arrived at : and, having been hrought formally to their no. tice in that fashion by the Ninister of the Interior. I think the House are fully entitled to know what the (iovernment have decided on doing, and if the Govermment have not made a decision they ought to make a decision and let us know. That appears to me a very reasonable proposition under the circumstances.
Mr. FOSTER. The Government have reached a lecision, and the decision is that Mr. Bargess shall be a chief clerk, and if the House will rote this salery as of a chief clerk, he shall get $\delta 2,8(0)$ a year.

Sir RICHARI) (ARTWRIGHT. That is no answer at all.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). The Government ought to agree on this subject before they invite a discussion in the House. Now, the leader of the House has told us one story, the Minister of Finance tells us a second, and the Minister of the Interior tells us a third.
Mr. FOSTER. There is no divergence.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Let us see for a moment. The Minister of the Interior suys that it is his intention to press upon his colleagues the reinstatement of Mr. Burgess in the office which he formerly held. This is a frank declaration of his wish, so far as he is concerned. What is to be done with Mr. Burgess in the immediate future ? The Minister who leads the Government in this House says: "I do not know; apon this subject theGovernment have not come to a conclusion." "Oh," says the Minister of Finance, 'the Minister of Justice is mistaken ; the Govermment have come to a conclusion." The hon. gentleman must not have read the return brought down to the House. If he will read it he will see that the Government came to no conclusion. Does the Minister suppose that by an inconsequential statement of that kind he can deceive the House or any member of it? The question is not what is Mr. Burgess's present status. Everyboly knows that. The question is, what is the status the Covernment intend giving Mr. Burgess in the immediate future, and the infornation brought down gives no information on that subject. and the leader of the Government has frankly told the House that they have come to no conclusion. If that be so, what is the use of the Minister of Finance rising and making such a statement as he has just addressed to the House. We all know that Mr. Burgess was reduced to the rank of first-class clerk, that no provision was madefor the payment of suchanofficer, aml that it is about tobe made at this moment. But there is this important consideration which grows ont of the question : if Mr. Burgess is to be restored, then this is a temporary provision for a first-class clerk, and it should be so shown in the Estimates. If some one else is appointer. then there is to be a permanent first-class, clerk added to the staff of the department. That is perfectly clear. If Mr. Burgess is raised to the prosition, unless the Government say that the appointment of a first-class clerk as a permanent officer is a necessity, there is no need of voting this appropriation beyond the time that Mr. Burgess is to hold that office. What does the Goverument sity \% Are they going to make a permanent addition to the clerks of the department, and make a permanent positition for a clerk of that grade. or are they going to restore Mr. Burgess to his former position and make temporary provision for his salary while he oceupies this inferior rank? I say this is a matter alout which the House should lis. informed. I am expressing no opinion on the sub. ject, I do not propose doing so ; but I ask the Government to inform the House what their intentions are in this matter, and they rught not to press: the House to vote an appropriation until they are prepared to state to the House their intentions.

Mr. FOSTER. I think the hon. gentleman has not read the item. If he had read the item, a large part of his criticism would fall to the gromm. The item is: for the salary of a chief clerk from lst November, 1891, to 30th June, 1892.
Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). Certainly.
Mr. FOSTER. It is only a portion of the present year, and this item carries no further than list July:

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). The Minister is well aware that he can take an appropriation only for 12 months at most.
Mr. Foster. I do not take it for 12 months.
Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). For the balance of the year. An appropriation camnot be taken for more than 12 months, and it must expire with the current year. Does the hon. gentleman propnse to address stich an argument seriously to the House: Does that furnish the House with any information as to whether an additional permanent first class clerk will be appointed or not? If we are to have an additional first-class clerk, let us know it; if not, let the hon. gentleman inform the House, so that the House will know precisely what is heing done in the matter.
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. We have a right to know what the Govermment propose to do in the matter.
Mr. SOMERVILLE. It is evident that the Minister of the Interior is more honest in his declaration respecting this matter than are the other members of the (iovernment. He has declared that it is his wish to reinstate Mr. Burgess to the position of Deputy Minister. This is shown by the fact that in the ordinary Estimates provision is made for the payment of a Deputy Minister at a salary of $$ 3,200$ annually. So it is evident that it is the intention of the Minister over that department, at all events, to appoint Mr. Burgess to the position of leputy Minister immediately after 3oth June. I think the Goveroment should inform us what they intend to do in this matter. The investigation which took place with respect to the management of the Interior Department during last session before the Public Accounts Committee reveaterl a state of affairs which did not reflect crealit on the head of the department amm on the Govermment, hecause it showed clearly that the head of the department and the deputy head, if the cridence given before the Public Accounts Con:mittee is to he believed, hat no proper supervision wer the payment of money for that department of the puhlic service. There can be no justitication set up either by the Minister, or any one on hehalf of the department, of the conduct of the officers of the department from 188.7 up to last session. There were irregularitiescluring the whole time, andirregularities which were contrary to the oath taken by the officials of the lepartment, an math which required that they should not be paid for extra services. During the investigation I paid particular attention to all that anampired, ain! I hate yet to le satisfied that the work which was clamed to have been done, was done for the money paid. I am not satisfied in my own mind that the work was done at all, in many instances. But the systemprevailed in the department of clerks making out accounts and getting other clerks to certify to them in order to draw money. That is the impression left on my mind liy the evidence given, and in some cases this was Imrne ont by the evidence. We have the evilence of Mr. Mcrabe to the effect that he had allowed his name to be used on an account for services which he never performed, and which he did not know had been performed. There can be no doubt that these irregularities were of a very grave character, and the pumishment meted out to some of those engaged in the transactions was altogether unequal to the offence committed. Some officers had suffered by that investigation because they told the truth, although they were not so guilty as others mentioned in the report brought down by the Commission appointed to investigate the matter. That Commission has punished some men who should not have been punished, because they came before the Public Accounts Committee and told the truth, and it was in consequence of their haring told the truth that we were able to make a successful investigation of the affair. They were punished by command of, or at the instigation of their superior officers. After reading the report of the Commission, I think the whole object of the hon. gentlemen who prepared that report was to endeavour to make it apparent to the House and the country that this system of irregularities prevailed before the present Government came into office. There was nothing to show that that was the case. It is true one of the witnesses who came hefore the Commission stated that he helieved that he had some indistinct recollection of something of that kind having occurred under the Liberal Administration of Mr. Mackenzie, but there was no evidence to show that any such irregularities had taken place under the Administration which preceded the present (iovermment, and the object of the report seemed to be to convey the impression that that system had heen prevalent under a former fiovernment, and it only came out under the present Government. The fact is there was no reason why these men should not draw extra money until after the passige of the Civil service Act, which was in 1882.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. 186i.

Mr. SOMERVILLF. It is the amended Act to which I am referring. Previously there was a Civil Service Act, hut it did not prevent the drawing of such money.

Nir JOHN THOMPSON. It did. The provision was exactly the same.

Mr. NOMERVILLE. The idea of the Commis. sion was to whitewash the officers and the department, and to enlea rour to make it appear that they were no worse than the officers unler a former Administration, and that those evils prevailed under a former Alministration. That is no excuse what ever. If a former Administration were guilty of irregularities, that is no excuse for the present Administration allowing similar and worse irregularities to prevail. I think the Commission appointed by the Government to investigate this matter have let a great many of these men down very softly. I might just as well say what I think. 1 think that these officers know more than they have alrearly told. I believe that there are men in that department who, if they were to tell all the truth, would shame the head of that department and the Government of this country, hecause I am satisfied they are in possession of facts which have not yet been brought before the public in reference to the transactions that have taken place in that department, and which would enable the public to see that the whole department hat been rotten and corrupt for years past. This is the reason, Mr. Chairman, why these men have heen let down so easily. They have been fined a month's pay because their mouths are to be shut, and because the (iovermment knew that it would pay them to shut their mouths. But I fancy the time will come when we will be able to get at the bottom of the management of the Interior Department, and if the statements I have heard recently can be proven, and I have reason to believe they can, there will be revelations yet brought to light with regard to the management of that department which will startle some of the inembers of the Government themselves; because I suppose that they do not all know the transactions which have taken place there. I believe that the Government are entitled to give us this information, whether Mr. Burgess is to be reinstated in his office or not. A vote has been taken by the Government to pay the salary of the Deputy Minister, and this present vote is only in the name of a first-olass clerk up to 30th June. I think we should know whether this vote of $\mathbf{2 3 , 2 0 0}$ for a Deputy Minister is to be paid to Mr. Burgess or not.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. There is evidently not much use in replying to a gentleman who apparently only debates the subject for the purpose of giving an insult, and that is the position of the gentleman who speaks about whitewashing, and our attempting to justify ourselves by showing that the record of some other Govermment is just as bad. No such attempt has been made, and that is almost the only ohservation I shall offer with regard to his remarks. The Civil service Act which is sitid to have been passed in 1880, was passed in $186{ }^{-}$and contains the same prohibition against the regular clerks receiving extra pay that Civil Service Acts have always contained ever since. In pursuing the inrestigation which was begun by the Cominittee on Public Accounts, the committee of the (iovermment found that the same practices had heen committed by other clerks in the service, and the same penalty was applied to them, as woud be applied by any persons attempting to hold anything like a fair investigation. With regard to the ohjects which the hon. gentleman not only surmises, but endeavours in the most offensive way to attribute to us. I shali lease them altogether unanswered. The persistence, however, which is displayed by the hom. member for South Oxford (Sir Richard (artwright) and the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills), seems to me extraordinary, unless it is based upon some impression in their minds that something is leing kept bick from the Committee. I can quite understaml why they should press for information if they suppose that there was some decision of the Government arrived at with regard to Mr. Burgess which has not been communicated to the House, or if they supposed his case was pending before the Government. The hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) was quite mistaken in saying that I had stated that no decision had been arrived at with regard to Mr. Burgess. What I said was that no decision hat heen arrived at with regard to what the Minister of the Interior had intimated to be his view and wish in the matter.

Mr. MLLs (Bothwell). Will the hon. gentleman excuse me. I did not pretend to say that there was anything in the Ministers statement which showed that Mr. Burgess had not been put in the position of a chief clerk. I understood that perfectly clear; but I wanted to know, was there any decision as to the question whether Mr. Burgess should le restored to the position of Deputy Minister:

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. If that is what the hon. gentleman meant to say, the inference was a little unfair, when he asked the committec to suppose that there was a difference between what I and my colleague beside me said with regard to the action of the Government. What has been done with regard to Mr. Burgess is stated in the words of the Finance Minister, and the committee will see it agrees with what I have said. The only decision arrived at is : that he should be deprived of the position of Deputy Minister and relegated to the position of chief clerk with the maximum salary. It is with a view to carry out that decision that the present vote is asked, and that of course will last only till the 1st of July. As to Mr. Burgess's reinstatement in the office of deputy, no recommendation has been made to the Government, and no application whatever has been made, and it would be impossible, therefore, for us to state what we would decide on any future application which may be made in this matter. At the present moment I have not the slightest knowledge that any such is to be made.

Sir Johi Thompson.

Mr. DAVIEs (P.E.I.) Well, Mr. Chairman, the information which my hon. friend from South Oxford (Sir Richard Cirtwright) asked, has not been rouchsafed to the committee yet. The committee desired to know whether Mr. Burgess, occupying the position of a chief clerk and receiving the pay which the committee are now asked to vote to him. aml diseharging the duties of deputy head of the department, may not be paid the salary of Deputy Minister. The law allows that to lie done, I umderstand.

Mr. Foster. No.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) The practice has been to allow a chief clerk who discharges the duty of a 1)eputy Minister, to receive the pay of a Deputy Minister, and as this House has already voted the pay for a Deputy Minister, can he not receive that pay?

Mr. FOSTER. It cannot be done unless it is votel.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) It has heen roted.
Mr. FOSTER. Yuu have got to have a special vote for it. We camnot pay the difference between the salaries without a special vote of the House.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Although he rlischarges the duty?

Mr. FOSTER. It makes no matter what he discharges. If we decide that the difference is to lee paid it can only he paid when voted by the House.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) And the hon. gentleman does not intend to propose such a vote.

Mr. FOSTER. You do not tind it there, do you?
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I have eyes to see, and I have intellect to understand what is there. I asked the hon. gentleman a plain question and a reasonable question, and that is whether he intends to propose to the House that it shall be paid?

Mr. FOSTER. I will tell the hon. gentleman what I intend to propose when I decide?

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Then the hon. gentle. man distinctly says that he declines to give the information. The House is asked in the face of this report to vote at the rate of $82,8(x)$ per annum to Mr. Burgess for discharging the duties of chief clerk, and whether the Government will ask the House at a further time to supplement that by the difference between this $$ 2,800$ and the salary of a Deputy Minister the hon. gentleman leclines to say.

Mr. FOSTER. Certainly.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Then the House is entirely in ignorance as to whether Mr. Burgess is to be punished or not. The House is asked to vote this money without any information whether an additional vote will be asked for making Mr. Burgess's salary that of a Deputy Minister. The report which the hon. gentleman brought down, and which is in my hand, states, with reference to the case before the House :

[^33]I understand that the hom. gentleman is not only asking that the salary be increased to $\$ 2,800$ from this date, lint that the increase took effect from the day Mr. Burgess was appointed muder this recommendation, so that the recommendation reducing him to the salary of $\$ 2,4(0)$ was never acted upon, is not intended to be acted upon, and his salary is to be $\mathrm{S}, \mathrm{s}(\mathrm{N})$ and not $\mathrm{S} 2.4(0)$. I think that in that view of the case, the House ought to be taken into the contidence of the fiovernment who should state why they do this. There may lue reasons, and I do not say there are not. There may lee valid reasons, but the Goverment have a right to state these reasons to the Honse, tis to why Mr. Burgess was mot left at the salary of se.f(N), to which they reduced him. and why they paid him צ2. $S(X)$ a year from the day he began to discharge the duties of chief clerk. I think the paragraph in the report which my hom. friend from brant (Mr. Somerville) referred to. hats justitied the statement he male that the sul. Committee of Comed intemed, partially to justify these irregularities, by intimating that they had oceured miler a prerious fovernment. The patagraph in the report reads as follows:-
" That from a period dating at least as far back as 1805 a practice began to grow up in the department under which occasional payments for extral work were made to nermanent clerks in violation of the chase.
That is the clanse. They do not state what the evidence was. or that any actual case oceurred; but they say that a practice began to brow up. My hom. friend reminds them that no evidence was offered in the Public Accounts Committee justifying that statement. and if the Committee of Council. were in possession of evidence, in addition to that taken hefore the Public Accomats Committee, to justify it, I think they had a right to give it to the House, and to give the names of all the parties, as well as those attached to the report, who were guilty of irregularities between 1882 and $18 s 9$. It is stated in this repert that during the years from 1882 to 1889 inclusive, this occasional practice became frequent, and under it several permanent clerks received extra payment. Sow. I do not think the House is being treated with that perfect fair-play which it has a right to expect. The Minister of Finance himself was one of the committee who recommended that Mr. Burgess's salary be reduced to $$ 2,4(\mathrm{~K})$. I assume that he had good grounds for that recommendation. He now recommends that that $$ 2,4(0)$ be increased to $s 2,8(0)-$ not from to day, or because of anything that has transpired since-at least he does not tell us so-but dating back from the time when the Deputy Minister was degraded. If he asks the House to vote this sum for the anterior period, I think he has a right to tell the House why he asks it.
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I think a gool deal more. I think we have a perfect right to know what the policy of the Government is with respect to Mr. Burgess. This is not an sffair of yesterday; it has been within the knowledge of the Governinent for at least nine months. The facts known to us now were known to them as far back, I think, as the lst of July last; nine months is ample time for them to make up their minds what they will do with a deputy head guilty of the irregularities that Mr. Burgess was guilty of. What we have a right to know is how the Government regard the conduct of a deputy head who not only permits irregularities to exist, but who is himself guilty of them. This is not a mere question of extra payment. That might be allowed to pass as a venial irregularity. This is a deliberate use of false names, over and ower again, by these parties. Persons who do, not exist or who were not in the employ of the department, were constantly named for a period of years as having done work and received payments. What we want to know is how the (iovernment regard the conduct of a deputy head who permits such thinge to exist in his department. We have a right to know whether they propose to reinstate him or to keep him as chief clerk. To all intents and purposes Mr. Burgess is to-day Deputy Minister of the Interior : he is performing the linties of that oftice: he is acting, as we bave been told by the heal of the department, as Deputy Minister, and is receiring a saliary very nearly commensumate with that which he enjoyed as deputy heal--so, s(o) instead of $$ 3,2(2)$. Cnder these circumstances, the country at large an: this House have a right to know what the Government propose to do, more especially after the statement malleby the Minister of Interior, when he intimated that his view of Mr. Burgess's comduct was that he was a fit and proper person to be reinstated. Now, Sir, I do not know what the reasons of the Minister may be, but I must saty that my hom. friend had reasons for saying that the public would be justified in forming the opinion that Mr. Burgess knew a geat deal which it would be inconvenient to reveal if under the circumstances he should not be reinstated.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not think there is any need for any extra heat alont this matter. I think the report of the committee, and the explanations that have been given in furtherance of it ly the Minister have been fair and frank. The Govermment do not wish to conceal anything, and are not concealing anything. The Government have explicitly stated in the report their opinion of all these irregularities. The Government after full consideration of them, have awaried a certain penaity, ame the report of the committee, indicating what they thought was a proper measure of punishment, has heen brought down and laid lefore the House. The Government, in carrying out their judgment as to the penalties that gught to be infficted on these gentlemen, ask that is certain sum be voted. That carries out their intention and the intention of the committee : and it was recommended to Council, and atlopted by Council. Mr. Burgess had been guilty of lapses, or of conduct such as necessitated punishment, and the Government thought it would be a sufficient punishment that he should be deprived of his high and responsible office of Deputy Minister, and should be reduced to the rank of a chief clerk. At the same time, the committee felt and the Government felt that the degradation in rank, together with the loss of \$100 yearly of salary, was severe enough punishment. Although there may be a point for my hon. friend to hang his contention upon in the worling of the report, the idea was simply this, that we had no power to fix a salary other than the minimum salary of a chief clerk. At the time, it did not occur to me, and I suppose it did not occur to the other membersof the committee, that there was no vacancy of a chief clerkship in that department, and consequently the wording of the report was as it was. But it was the intention of the fiovermment when Parliament met to ask that Mr. Burgess's salary should be placed at $\mathbf{s} 2$, , $s(m)$ instead of the minimum of $\$ 2,4(N)$. As my conlearue has stated. the (iovernment have decided that after aiscussing and considering it. They have discussed and decided nothing else. We come down and ask the Honse to give effect to their decision in this supplementary estimate for the remaining months of the year. We could not do anything else without first coming to Parliament. It is impossible for us to give Mr. Burgess the difference in salary, as my hon. friend intimates we should, unless we cone to Parliament and ask Parliament for the appropriation; and when the full Estimates are brought down next year, the intention of the liovermment will be plainly seen and can be rad from those estimates. The intention of the fiovermment at the present time, frankly and honestly stated as I have done it, is shown in this supplementary report. With reference to other remarks which have been made as to the heinousness of these offences. as to our going lack to lsio and so forth, the Committee of Council extemled its investigations both heyoml the particular persons mentioned and heyond the perion treated hy the Public Accounts Committee. There was nio intention to conceal anything. We simply went back as far as possible in time. and we found certain facts, and set forth those facts without palliating any of them. whether under one forermment or the other. With regrard to the assomption that this was done in order to whitewash Mr. Burgess. and that punishment was not given because there might le something to reveal, I lo not think it is worth while to notice these statements. It is a cheap way to make one appear virtuous by saying that if there were a chance to give evidence in regard to certain things, certain things might be shown. The better way is to show them. But the foverument took the siew that they had to apportion what they thought would be the proper punishment for these offences exposed by the committee. They did not intend, in the first place, to err on the side of excessive punishment. and they did not propose to let any who had been guilty of wrongcloing escape without punishment. So far as the Government are concernel, there was not one single thought as to what any one in the department might know or might not know, when the recommendations were made or the punishments were given to them. Now, there were lapses, and somebody says the fiovernment ought to express its sentiments with regard to those. The Government expressed its sentiments in that report. Its opinion is that such methods were irregular, that they ought to be pmished, that they were contrary to the law, but at the same time none who fairly went through the investigation of the Public Accounts Committee. and no one of the committee who went through that wider and further investigation afterwards, on which our report is based, can come to any other conclusion than that, although the letter of thelaw was violated, andalthough punishment should be meted out to those who violatellit, yet at the same time the public treasury did not suffer ; and I take issue entirely with the hon. gentlemanon thatside whostates it is his conviction that the work was not done for which charges were made. My opinion is that, lack as far as 1875 and even further back, you will find the begimning of the practice which grew more prevalent from ISS: and culminated in ISM) when it was stopped hy the department itself. The committee do not intend to palliate the offence, but the practice did grow up, and the reasons are set forth in the report why it did grow up, hut neither the fiovermment nor the treasury were in any way robled of their due. service was given for the money pail. and hating gome through with the committee from hegiming to end. I have no other than a settled conviction that these clerks did the work aml did grool service for the Government, and that in the eml moner was saved for the treasury rather thatn lost. That view does not prevent the conclusion that there was a wrong system which enght to have heen stopped, but we minst take into question ans well that it was stopped before the investigation of the committee was undertaken, as appears from the report of the committee, hased of course on the facts. Now, with reference to Mr. Burgess. I think that, taking into account his services and chatateter, we must not stand up here and becanse at technical wrong, or at wrong, leaving wut the word technical, has leen committed. sit as murciless jurges in the matter. Fvery one may have a moment of weakness. to fuote the phase used by the leater of the Opposition and which I helieve he platiarises. We must temper justice with mercy, and take into aceount circumstances as they are developed along the whole conrse of these transactions. We will gain nothing for the public, ame we may do violence to our own conscience and sense of right hy leing over severe in matters of judgment : anil as regards Mr. Burgess, I have no hesitation in saying that, taking his chatacter and eomeluct into ilecount from the legiming to the end, although he was guilty of a technical wrong which he ought not to have done, I think his punishment is amply sufficient.

Sir RICHARI) CARTWRICHT. Then the only thing we can gather from all this, putting the three statements of the Minister of Interior, the Minister of Iustice, and the latter statement of the Minister of Finance together, is this : that, practically speaking, all the punishment they choose to inflict on Mr. Burgess is to make him chief clerk for one year and then restore him to his office. Now, if the Minister of Finance will state what the fovermment are going to do, this discussion will come to an end. Of course we can express our opinions to the House, and the country can form theirs as to the course the Govermment propose to take, hut that I think the Minister ought to do. He ought to tell us if he considers that this penalty for a single year of reducing Mr. Burgess to the position of a first class clerk is sutficient. To all intents and purposes, he has tohd us they are going to reinstate Mr. Burgess, as soon as our backs are turned, in the prosition of deputy head, with the old salary of $\mathrm{SB}, \underline{200}$ a year. By putting the statements of the Ministerstogether, I can draw no other conclusion.

Mr. FOSTERR. I am not responsible for the conclusions the hon. gentleman draws. He has drawn before now some very extraordinary ones and has not always found that the people approved them.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRI'HT. That does not affect the facts.

Mr. Foster.

Mr. FOSTER. The conclusion he draws is not correct. He camot either logically or honestly draw any such conclusion from the statement I have made.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) The conchasion cam fairly he drawn from what has been stated by the hon. gentleman's colleague who is in charge of the department whose conduct we are now discussing. The hon. gentleman was asked a question pointlhank hy the hon. member for South Oxford, and he informed the House that it was his intention to recommend that his late deputy, acting deputy in the interim, be reinstated. Nothing can be clearer than that the hom. Minister at the head of the department stated his intention to reinstate Mr. Burgess as deputy head, and I do not think my hom. friem is drawing any illogical or dishonest conclasion when he assumes that the covermment are gring to do what the Minister of Interior said they would.
Mr. LAURIER. Thehon. gentleman has sail that justice ought to be tempered with mercy. That is right and proper, but if the hom. gentleman will set a custom such as this, he has evidently in his mind the intention of applying it by-and-bye. What is the case in hand: It is that of Mr. Burgess, and the hon. gentleman has intimated that in his case justice ought to be tempered with mercy. To what extent? We hal it from the Minister a moment (ass) that for the present the salary of Mr. Burgess is to be reducel to the sum of $32,5(5)$, and he is to le deprived of his rank. At one time it was intended to reduce his salary to $\mathbf{S}^{\circ}, \mathbf{4}(1)$, but the hom. gent 1 man has mate an explanation on that point Which is not very clear. It is only after being pressed again and again that the hon. gentleman inought down the report of the Committee of the Privy Conncil, and in that the intention is expressed of reducing the salary to $\$ 2,4(1)$. This the hon. gentleman explained was simply an oversight, so that the intention from the first must have been to vote the silary of $\$ 2, \mathbf{s N O}$. How long is Mr. Burgess to be reducel? At present he is discharging the duties of deputy head. As far as that is concerned, there has been nothing altered in his position. Deputy head he was by law and by factup toa certainperiodlast fall, and deputy head he has continued to be since by fact though not by law. It must le manifest to the hon. gentleman that there is no other conclusion to be drawn from his words and from the words of the head of the department, and from the action of the department, than that Mr. Burgess is to be restored to his position on the 1st July next. I muderstood the hom. gentleman to say that Mr. Burgess could not be restored because his salary was not voted and the Govermnent would have to come again before Parliament, but the salary for a deputy head has ineen voted, and therefore the Government can at any moment restore Mr. Burgess to the position of deputy head from the ist July next.

Mr. FOSTER. That is right.

Mr. LAURIER. Then why were ive not told that before? Now we are told that the Government have made provision for the appointment of the deputy head. Is it their intention or is it not to appoint Mr. Burgess to the position he occupied ia short time ago, is it the intention to pay him the salary for the work he is now discharging? There is no other conclusion to be drawn from the action of the Government. If the intention of the 1 iow ernment was to degrade Mr. Burgess to the salaty of a chief clerk. the: would have given him the work of a chief clerk. but insteal of that they give him the work of a deputy head, and, in all fairness and seriousness, I say there is no other conclusion to be drawnthan that the Govemment haverecidednot perhaps formally in Council. hut amongst them-selves-that Mr. Burgess is to be restored to his former position on the 1st July next.
Mr. Foster. I am sure the hon. gentleman will take my word that there has been no such decision at all. There hats been uo recommendation to Comeil. there has been no disenssion of the matter, nor has there lren any decision in Comencil. My hom. friembls press me to say what I camoot say. that is. what the intention of the cosernment is. The (iovermment has formed no intention.
Mr. LAURIER. Then they ought to have dome so.

Mr. NOMERVIIIS. I desire to call attention to some inconsistencies in the report presented by the Committee of the Privy (omucil in regard is these irregularities. Clatsie 2 states:
" That from a period dating at least as far back as 180 a practice began to grow up in the department nuder which wecasional payments for extra work were made to germanent clerk: in violation of this clanse of the Civil Serrice Act."
The third clanse saty:
"That during the year 185e tu lss? inclusive, this necasional practice becane frequent. and under it several permanent clerks received extra payments, either in the name of outsider: or fictitious persons. or through temperary clerks for work performed wholly or in lart by themselves.
When we turn to clanse 5 , it is stated be this Committee of the Privy Conncil that the sums paid irregularly to permanent clerks. as nearly as could be ascertained, amount to S9,017.43, from 18.5 to date. I stated hefore that it was evidently the intention of the committee to leave the impression uron the House and the public that this practice had started in $15 \% \overline{0}$, and to shield the present Govermmeat and the present head of the department on the gromed that this practice originated under the Reform Covermment. I have proof here to the contrary, because it is stated that all the amount paid, that is, $59,017.34$, was paid between 1881 and 1891, and they to not find a dollar paid out for these services before 1881. though the report says that the practice prevailed from $18 \%$.

Mr. DAVIEN (P.E.I.) It says it began to grow up in 18\%.

Mr. sombrville. They do not point to at single instance of one dollar leing spent in this irregulur mamer from 185 to 1881 . This report contradicts itself in that way, and shows that it was the intention of the committee to cover up these irregularities and to whitewash those who had committed them by leaving the impression that they had prevailed previous to the present Government coming into office. Now, I will call the attention of the Government to a little bit of the evidence given before the Public Accounts Committee. I might entertain the House for hours in regard to this evidence, but I do not intend to do so. It is very evident that the Government intend to reinstate Mr. Burgess. Now, I will call their attention to one statement made by Mr. Burgess before the committee. I have no prejudice against Mr.

Burgess. 1 helieve in a certain degree he has been a capable ofticial, but he hats done some things which camoot possilly lee sustatined by this House. This was sworn to liy Mr. Burgess. Mr. Bowell asked him:
"I anderstand you to say that to suar knomledge no permanant clerk in your department hats received extra mis?
Aml the answer given hy Mr. Burgess was:
. 1 say, with the exeeption of Mr. Turner who was here this morning. there hats not."
Then the chaimam, that is, the hom. member for Wist Vork (Mr. Wallate), asked:
$\because$ You sucak of the whole deparment! ". $-I$ do.
"Yu du not know of amy other"-No."
This irresularity in regarl to Mr. Turner was one of the most stattling brought out in the whole insestigation. It was shown that Mr. Tumer had drawn 5.444 .8 . that this system of pating Mr. Turner extma money had heen suing on for vears. that he was hating his atecounts eertified to in the matme of a math who was supposed to he called - Weseph Wright, amd it was proved before the committee that Joseph Wright was never a resident of (canala, that he was a distant relative of Mr. Turner, that he was a schoomaster in the states, and visited Mr. Turner ancasionally, hut the accomats were made in Mr. Wrights name, and Mr. Tumer emborsed the cheques in Mr. Wrights: name. The evidence also showed that Mr. Wright had died. and that Mr. Purner had gone on signing the dead mans name tor the cheques in orider to get the money. Mr. Burgess declated on wath that he knew of no other case where the public: monel had been paid for these services except that of Mr. Turner. and here we hate the report of the Committee of the Irisy Council giving us a list of thirty or forty ofticials in the lepartment of the Interior who had heen drawing sums for extra services ranging from 530 and 540 and sioup to S2. $4+4.5$. And yet we are told that this man is an etficient servant, and that he ought to be reinstated. Weare toll by the Minister of the Interior that he intends to reinstate him. let we have evidence to show that this man. as the deputy head of that department, swore that he knew of no irregularities except in this one case of Mr. Turner, and we have the Privy Conncil Committec exhibiting the fact that thirty or forty ofticials in that department had been carrying on this system from 1ssi to 1891 , and that $89,017.74$ had been paid for these services. Now, they can form their own estimate of Mr. Burgesss abilities and capacity to discharge the duties of that office, and if they want to reinstate him, they can do it. I have nothing against Mr. Burgess personally : I ammerely trying to discharge my duty in looking after the interests of the public.
Mr. FOSTER. My hon. friend has struck a mares nest, as usual. Because there is one statement there which says that this practice began to grow up in 187., and thereafter assumed larger proportions, comparatively, from 1882 to 1889 : and because in another part there is a list of those who have received and certified to these irregular payments extending from 1880 up to the date of that investigation, that therefore there is no proof that previous to 1880 money had been paid contrary to the Civil Service Act. Now, the bottom falls out of that entirely when I make this statement : The committee conlii not go back too far, and the committee set the limit hatekward to which they should go for the apportionment of the pumishment, at 1 siso, aml that list is simply a retail of the accoments paid irregularly, those who certified to the:m integularly or the manner in which they were certified 6 , whether it was a temporary clerk or an outsider from ISSO to 18!日. That list is simply to apportion the pumishment over that perion, and for thase persons anly. If my hon. friend will look orer that list he will find that every person who wompfully receiven, or wrongfully certified to. or assisted in, the payment of money between those iwn periols, received his punishment. That is all there is to that. He then makes a point in reference to the evidence given by Mr. Burgess. He attembed that committee : he might have hat the faimess to state: 1 , this commmittee that Mr. ?urgess asked leave to an before the committer again to testify that when he made that statement he had reference to ohe particular case and had not given the whole facts, lint that there were other eases. and he came before the committee and stated them inm askel leave to amem his evidence. I think the sense of fatmess of most hon. gentlenen would lead them to take the amenled evidence ather than the tirst.

Mr. SOMERVILLF. The Minister of Finance is altogether wrong with regard to the reating of this clame in the report. The report says: "That the whole sum thus irregularly paid to permament officials for extra work amomiterl. so far ats can be

Mr. FONTERS. No.
Mr. NOMERVILLE. Ves: I an mow rembine from the report. If you lon not le lieve me I will haml it over to yon.

Mr. FOsiter. Then I would ask leave to amemd that.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. That is just as I rath it before. Then the commitere ofo to show that while the whole amount from 15.5 to date was S 1,017 . they give a tahle to show the sum that wats patil from 1881 to 1891 . Sow, 1 wonld like the Dinister to straighten that out. He accused me of making a statement not loone out by the evidence, and I have the evidence in my hand to show I was right. I would like him to medmit either that my statement is correct, or that his report is not correct.

Mr. DICKEY. I camnot follow the reasoning of the leader of the Opposition when he siys that the dovernment has arrived at the conclusion to reinstate Mr. Burgess after the lst of July. I have heard nothing to-day or on the previous accasion to lead me to that conclusion. I do not think, either, that any fault can be found with the Government in respect of the punishment which they inflicted upon Mr. Burgess. I think no one who knows Mr. Surgess, and the position he formerly filled, and his degradation to a lower rank, involving the los: of a large amount of salary, can come to the conchasion that the punishment is not sufficient for the offence which he committed. At the same time, I desire to say that, speaking entirely for myself, I should be sorry if the Government did reinstate Mr. Burgess as Deputy Minister. It is very awkward to discuss a matter of this sort involving personal matters, to discuss the conduct of a gentleman whom we know personally, and against whom we are very desirous not to sily a single word. But in a matter of this sort we have a public duty to perform, and the impression that the perusal of the evidence taken hy the Public Aceounts Committee last :year, conveyed to my minl. is that Mr. Burgess has proved himself disqualified for the management of a large department. He umbolitedly commived at the illegal payment of moneys, some of them under circumstances which seem rery little creditable-1 do not say that it iavolves any moral guilt, but the very fact that he held the high position that he did. involving large responsililities, calls for a stricter account from him than the same irregularities would call for if they were committed by a man holhing a lower position. We have to consider also that the very fact that Mr. Burgess eomnived at these irregularities, demoralized the diseipline of his department, and brought it into such a state that we have it in evidence that one of the clerks sent a messighe to him that unless he got a certain favorar he would tell something that would make Mr. Burgess ashamed. That, Sir, is at position that no deputy head of a department should put himself in. I think for these reasons, much as I regret saving anything whaterer that would injure Mr. Burgess spospects, so far as my juig. ment goes, these facts disentitle Mr. Burgess to he replaced in the position of deputy heal of the department.

The ( HAIRMAN. I wish to inform the committee that the amended item reats as follows:" To pay the salary of A. M. Burgess, chicf clerk, from the lst November, 1891, to the 30th June, 185). at the rate of $\mathfrak{S z}, \mathrm{s}(0)$ per ammum, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil service Act.

Mr. APMSTRON(: I wish to ask a questionI tind that this provides for the paty from the lst November last. The revelations before the Public Accounts Committee took place, I think, in June. How was Mr. Burgess paid between the end of Jume last aml the !st Norember? Was he paid, or is it the intention to pay him, as chicf clerk, or as leputy Minister of the Interior ?

Mr. DEWINEFI. He was paid at the emd of October, and he was acting leputy Minister up to the end of October.

Mr. ARMSTRON(: The revelations were made in the month of sume, and they were of such a character as, I think, fully justifies the hon. member for Cumberland (Mr. Dickev) in saying that Mr. Burgesses reinstatement would be a rery grave matter. I do not intend to say anything to hurt Mr. Burgess. He is a gentleman for whom I have personally a great respect, but I must say that I think the Government are very severe upon him. They talk about tempering judgment with merey, but I think they have practised it to a very small extent. During these tive months from the time the crime was revealed up to the lst NovemberI suppose it was for fear of shocking him-they have let the thing go on, but paying him his salary, and now they intend to pay him to the end of the year at the rate of $\Omega^{2} 2,800$ per year. Now, I say that is harilly the mercy we ought to expect ; it is not sutticient leniency. Many poor men have had to expiate such conduct behind prison bars and be maintainel at the expense of the country. Mr. Burgess, however, had to pay his own keep and expenses. Inded, the diovermment have not shown him sutticient leniency, for they are groing to make a deduction at the rate of $\mathrm{St}(\mathrm{N})$ per year from his salary. It is a little tow hard ... harsh treatment, as compared with the crime.

Mr. SOMFPVILLLF. I shoull like the Minister of Finance to state how he can strabghten out his report.
Mr. FONTER. It could he easily done if I hat the original docoment here. I shall have to and the original and compare the copy with it. What I suspect is that there is an error in the words "from 1s.-. to date." I think those words should lee "from ISSI to date." That does not controvert the statement that the practice has grown up in is.a.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. It certainly contworts your statement, if it appeats that the whole amomit was patid for from ISSI to $18!11$. because it has not been shown that any money was paid previons to that date.
Mr. Foster. It wats not the object of the eommittee in the table to show what money had heen paid previous to 1880 . The investigation wemt back to 1850 . The amounts that were painl in that way. and the names of the parties to whom they were paid, were limited to the years 1 isso to 1801 .

Mr. MILLA: (Bothwell). Is this report hased ont evidence taken in the Hounc, or did the Commission take evidence:

Mr. FOSTER. The Commission had the evidence taken before the Public Accounts Committee under their consideration, bat there were a gromed many clerks whose names were not brought hefore the Public Accoments Committee. These had to be investigated individually, as they were not investigrated by the l'ublic Accounts Committee. and the Committee of Commil investigated not only thesecalses, hut the eases of those who were brought before the Public Acenunts Commitee. The committee investigated every indivional case, both those that were brought before the Public Aceomits Committee and those that were not.

Mr. MII.L. (Bothwell). I should like to see the evidence of regular payments being made previous to lssi. I do not remember any statement hate before the Public Accounts Committee which warrants the statement that irregularities began in 15\%. One witness, I think, madea statement befure the P'ublic Aecounts Committee which was liahle to that interpretation. ? out he stoutly denied afterwards that his words were rightly understool. So I should like to see the evidence which the Dinister of Finance siys the Commission took.
Mr. MeCARTHI. I have been very much surprised at the answer given by the Minister of the Interior to the question as to Mr. Burgess salary up to Ist Novemier. I have a very distinct recollection that Mr. Burgess was not treated at the time as the other offenders were. They were suspended, and of course their suspension at once debarred them from their saleries. But Mr. Burgess's resignation was offered and was not accepted. I took some interest in one of the offenders, Mr. Henry, whose friends complained very bitterly that his salary was suspended, although his offence did not compare in enormity with that of Mr. Burgess, while Mr. liurgess was drawing his salary by reason of the fact that he had tendered his resignation, which had not been accepted. I enguired into the matter and wats assured there wats no such discrimination being made, that Mr. Burgess's salary had not leen paididand was not to be paid: and I was rery much astonishel to hear it stated to-day that during all that time Mr. Burgess was drawing his salary umder the circunstames I have detailed. I do not desire--lecanse, perhaps 1 am not altogether a fair julge of Mr. Burgess to speak in very strong terms alkout him: but I desire to sty this, that I do hopre. from all I have known about Mr. Burgess and I speak now of matters that are on recorithat the Minister of the haterior will not carry out his intention, and, if he does, that the dovernment will not ratify it. to restore Mr. Burgess as deputy heal of the departmemt.

Sir RICHARD (ARTWRIGHT. I desire to conuire from the Ministen of Finamce whether there is any record with respet to the evidence三iven before this Commission. particularly as to

Mr. FOETER. We took nominutes of evidence. We hat all the withesses hought before us, amt we examinel them ourselves. 1 think. howerer. there were some tabulations mode. If there were. I will lowk into them and ser what they showed.
sir RICHARD (ARTWRIGHT. I presume in that case the evidnace was mot taken under math.

Mr. FOSTER. It was not taken under sith.
Mr. MLL!. (Bothwell). I daw the attention of the Minister of luterion to this fact: On listh March the hom. gentleman said, its will tee foum on page ist of hatureiol, ats follows:
II said he has been acting as depaty bat he has receved ne salary trom the time he placed his letter in my hands until the present monent."
It would seem from the statement of the Minister of Finame mate to-lay, that the hom gentleman was mistaken.

Mr. DEWIDNET. That was my impression at the time I mate the statement. When the matter cante up suhnergently the Minister of Finance atsked me for a memortandan with respeet to the late up th which the salay was paid. I semt to the aceomatam, and he forwardel at memorandum stating that Mr: Burgess hall received his salary up to the emil of Octoler:

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.1.) Then Mr. Burgess rewived his salary as beputy Miniter up the the of Octoler:

Mr. DEWHNEX. Ves.

Mr. BoRDASS. Perhaps the Minister of Finance will state his policy with respect to this matter, in view of the statements manle loy the hom. memIner for Cumberland (Mr. Dickey), and the hon. member for simeoe (Mr. Matarthy, who have rery distinctly stated their views as regards Mr. Burgess. 1 showh like to ask those hon. sentlemen also what they think of the present presition of atflars: They sy that Mr. Burgess should not tee continued as depmty head of the Department of the Interior. But as a matter of fact he is Deputy Minister now, he has been discharging the duties of Deputy Minister ever since this investigation trok place, and as a matter of fact he was paid the salary of the leputy Minister up to lst November last. 1 should like to know whether it commends itself to those hon. sentlemen that the matter can be got round in this way, that Mr. Burgess cam retain his position of Deputy Minister of the department, while nominally a tirst-class clerk at a slightly reduced salary. It doves not seem to me that that can possibly meet the views of those two hon. gentlemen.

Mr. sonerville. When are we to see the original report, hecamse I am interested in knowing whether the statement made by the Minister of Finate is correct, or the report is correct:
Mr. Fostrik. I have not been able to 3 to Comacil and get it yet. I will take the tronllue :" look into it and compare themband see where the error exists.
Mr. somerville. Is the committee to be put into prsession of the document, or is the llinister to do the comparing and report the Honse?
Mr. FONTER. 1 will doit.
To pay the following clerks for part salary which they did not receive irhilit under suspension :-

Sir RICHARI) CARTWRISHT. Sow, wo would like to know with respect to this item, pre cisely what has heen dome with each of these three sentlemen. What patactical panishment was inflicted upon them at all, and what does this vote mean:
Mr. Foxitich. I will tell ony hom. friend just exactly what it is. These three men were men who were brought up before the Pullie: Acomonts Committee, and immediately upon the evilence heing given they were suspended, and the moment they were suspended their salaries ceasen. The amomits of their salaries which aterued while they were umler suspension are the amomes whith are set here opposite their mames. Parliament was in session : it wats impossible to make the inrestigation that the sub-committee of the Conncil made afterwards, and it ran along for a considerable space of time. After Piorliament was through the sub.oommittee went to work and made a full investigation, and they fomel that there were orher clerks outside of those three-although they had not heen brought before the commitiee ani the proof adduced which would have brought gat the facts-- who had heen receiving money in riolation of the Civil Service Act. The pmishment which was inflicted acoording to the report of the committee was an equal pmishment upon alll: that is, the loss of a month and a half: salary. But these three gentlemen from the circmustance of their having heen called before the committee and put under suspenision wouh, if that had been motivel, have had a punishment mequal to the others. They would not only hate been fined a month and halfs salary, but they would also have lost the salaries which would hatre acerned during the period they were under suspension. This is done to equalize the pmishment upon all--luecuuse after all, whether a tictitions name was used, or whether it was the mame of a tempomary clerk that wasnsed, there is little practical difference in the transaction. The money was got in defiance of the letter of the law, and the opinion of the committee was that the pmishment should be equalized.

Mr. Mecarthe.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRISH'S. There $i=$ one statement mate hy the Minister of Finamee wime I hope wats made in a monent of weakness, abal which I trust he will reeonsider. That is, the state. ment that it makes no difterence whether the:e was fram ami heceit or a mere evasion of the law. Now, I think that in our serviee, and in every service, it makes a rast deal of ditierence whether there is a mere evasion of the law in getting a little more moner. or whether that erasion of the law is accompanien by frand and deceit, such as took place in some of these catses, by using false names. I an rew much sumprised indeed to hear the Vinister of Finance saty that the rases are on all fours.

Mr. FONTPER. I did mot sat that.

Mr. Fosirfle. I amil there was little ditiorence.
Sir RICHARDCORTWRliHOT All lamsiy is, that there is a rery wide difference, a difference Which ought to he marked amd visited with a much severer punishment. I hold it mo trithise matter at all that false entries amd names shoulif apparr in the books of the department. I hohe it as a very serions otteme athil 1 am vere tomhtal indeed whether men whe have reomels in the tise of false names, athl whe put names improperly on the backs of chergues are at all the sort of persons who ought to lie entmisted with the care of public affaits: particularly in a department like the Department of the linterior where it is possible for clecks who desire to misombluet themselves to do and to imosent parties. That partom of the hon. semtemans remarks I trust, in the interest of the publie serviee, and for his won eredit and reputations satie. he will recomsider and retract. Now, as far as Mr. Heme. Mr. Turner and Mr. Pereita are concemed, I desire to know from the hom. Minister what work they did, if any, during the perimi of their suspemseon:

Mr. DFWDNEI. They dia mo work. They reported at the ofine orcasiomally. It was not their fant that they did unt do the work.
 my wom. Ihe (haimman, the inters of discipline of my hom. friend, the Minister of the laterior, have been formed and framed on a monlel which I think is hetter adapted for the latitude of the Rocky Momatains than the latitule of Gtawa. We know that there used to be sath that there was a certain place beyond which the kinses writ did not run, and piossibly the exigencies of the situation in Alanitwhat required a very much more liberal dealing with publice servants than we have been acoustomed to here.

Mr. DEWONFS. Viom womh not expect clerks to work if they were suspembed.
sir RICHARD) ('AR'TWRIAHTS. No, hut if men do mo work I think there is good authority for saying they should get no pay. Practically speak. ing, these gentlemen have done no work, and they are to be paid for the time they were eooling their heels abont the streets.

Mr. MULOOK. That is the way they are punished. Sir RICHARD CARTIWRIGHT. Ves. But that is really a dangeroms precedent to lee set in the Civil service. and I shonld not be surprised if others would wish to be susprended on the same terms. one months deprivation of salary ame four nonths holiday. I think we cembld timb outside the laterior not the worst of them either, who would be willing. on these comditims, to ardere to a temporary suspension. I wamt to know, are these gentlemen replaced in the same position as before, or what prositions are they to hohl:

Mr. DFWWNFIS. Ther are all in the same positions ats hery ocuphed hefore.

Sir RICHARD (ARTWRICHT, As to Mr. Henry 1 do iont recollect what wats proven about. him. hut as respects Mr. Pereina Iformed a strong opinion. I had nownmaintance with that sentleman. I have no prejulice of any kime against him: hut he was assistant secretary of the department. amd if my recollertion serves me, it was proved that the dssistant secretary hat been comspicuons for irregnlarities and had ised false names. Now, 1 tell the Minister of the laterior this: that if you pass ofer gases of that kimd, and restore men to high and important positions in the department. after they have heel proved to haverome what Mr: Pereira was proved to have done, that gou are deliberately holding out a preminm wisiconduct. The importance of all this matter lies here. We do not want to punish these ponir people, they eertainly were put to some consiblerahle, aml rather serious penalty hy heing gibheted as they pantically were hefore the Pahlie Acoounts Commite for a longtime. Wie do not wamt to pmish them. but in the interest of the whole (ivil sewice it is necessaty to intliet punishment in men holdiug hiph and important planes in the (ivil service who have bexn proved publicly on have committed the ants that Mr. Pereira aml Mr. Burgess did. It. is on that gromed and mo other that we hatredeemed it necessaly to disensi this matter at comsiderable: kength. Dr. Pereiriz wats ome of the chief otticers in the hon. gentemans department, ami it was proved clearly and distinctly mess my memory is altogether at fatult, that he hat used fatse mames. I dosity, Sir, that it is hishly improper and that it tembe to demoratize, not merely the hom. sentlemans department hut the whole (ivil service that men who have so little regard for their masition as to commit a frame of that kind- for framel it is, notwithstamling the easy mole in which the: Min. ister of Finamee seems to megard it ...shomh hohd high positions in the Civil service of ciamala.

Mr. NoMERVILLEE I think mo ome who was fresent at the investigation will arree that these cases were all alike. I think there was a vast. difference in the criminatity of the tansinctions of the various ofticers of the department. I think that Mr. Heory is fully entitled to he paid. He was among the first withesses to be called, and he showed hy the way in which he gave his evidence: that he had a desire to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, and I believe he dind: ame it was in consequence of the evidence which Mr. Hemry gave before that committee that we were embled latigely to go on with the incestigation. Mr. Hemry was placing himself in a very hard position hy giving the evidence he did: but he told truthfully all he knew in regari to these irregularities, amd think if there is one man in the department who deserves the consileration of this committee and the (iovernment. it is Mr. Henry. I do not know Mr. Heney persomally : he is noi friend of mine: I do not know anything alwat him: mu I was present at the investigation. I helieve he is a deserving man and tried Io disharge his duty. I believe it was shown in evilenee that Mr. Henry simply carried oat the command of his superior officer, althongh he hani on several oceasions resisted the sednctive inthemere of that otficer, and declared that he would no longer (1) that kind of work : and that is the reason the matter came to light. I think there shond be no, hesitation in the committee woting this Sesi. 4s to Mr. Henry. The case of Mr. Percira is a very different oule. Mr. Pereira admitted on oath that he had taken the work him. self out of the department to his own home, that he had mate up the accomits in the name of Ellen binery a person who hat no existence, that he han certified that the accoment wats correct. that the cheque had heen issued to him. that he had drawn the muner in the name of Billen Berry. Now, I am mot a lawyer. but that looked to me a ery much like a criminal transaction. Auhon. memhersays, even if the work was dome. I have domits abom that work leingeloneatall, and I have doubtsialnont luts of other work leing done that was certitiend to by otiours like Mr. Pereian. I think Mr. Pereita sets off very lighty, indeed. His case will hear no comparison whatever with Mr. Henry.

Mr. M.MLLLES. I desire to add a word $w$ what my hom frienl has saing. I wats in the committee furing the investigation, and in my humber opinion Mr. Heary did hot deserve suspension for what he had donie. I think it was very clearly shown, both by his evidence and hy the evidence given afterwards, that it was dome not only under the instruction but under the determined dictation of the deputy heal. I do not know Mr. Henry or anything alout him, apart from secing him come hefore the committeeming give his eridence. But I was surprised to learn that he had been suspended. after the straightforward, upright manner in winch he gatre his evidence. The ease of Mr. Pereina is altogether , lifferent. I can remember the manner in which he gave his evidence. He appeaten virtually whery in the course he hand taken in drawing money for services which hat not been performed by limself, and drawing that money under a fictitions name. I think it is not fail that these three men should lee placeel on the same forting. I think Mr. Henry acted in a dignitied, honomable, upright manner, and in my opinion, did nut deserve suspension.

Mr. Molonitle(Victoria). We all know that various irregularities took place in the Departme:t of the Interior last year, and that the (iovermment suspemied a large number of those found gailty of irregularities. Some of us hat to appeal to our constituents afterwards, and for my own part I claimed a consilcrable amount of credit for the Govermment for the prompt manner in which these men haul been suspended. But if the men guilty of these irregularities are now to be taken hack and paild their wages for doing nothing during the time of their suspension, while they were walking about the streets of Ottawa, I am afraid that we are going to lose a great deal of the credit which we have been taking for the Government. Mr. Burgess ocelupied a high and responsible position, and Mr.

Mr. Somertille.

Pereina as well as he received a high salary. When we timl County (court. Indges getting smaller salaries thim these officials, and when we find these devices to chtain more moncy. I think the Government and the heald of the Department of the Interior should hatre very gome reanoms to advance hefore they ask us to vote money to pay the salaries of these parties for three or four months while they were walking about the streets, while, perhaps, other parties were paid for doing their work. I think before this rote is patsed the Minister should advance very good reasmis to the House before this vote is granted.
Mr. MeCARTHY. So far as Mr. Henry is concernen, I desire to hear my testimony in ablition to what has been said by other members. I tunk pains to incestigate Mr. Henrys case. He was fommerly a constituent of mine when I represented Gardwell, and from the investigation I made. it seemerl plain to me that while andoubtedly he had been guily of an error of junlgment, it wats in wherience to the divection of his sulperion ofticer, Mr. Burges. on whom the whole responsibility should rest. It must me whembered that Mi: Hemry, whose whole offente was int certifying acomants in contravention of the (ivil Service Act, in ohedience to the order of Mr. Burgess, he did aut get a single cent of that himself, or was the hetter of it in any way or shape. During the long session Mr. Henry did un receive hiis sulary. altlangh it appears that Mr. Burgess, hy whose direction the offence was committed. was getting his, and now is to be taken back :and now it seems that Mr. Henry is to le punished liy the losis of one month's starlay. I eertainly think that. Mr. Henry ought to ine paid in full. and 1 make the statenent here in Parliament in order that no stain may rest on his moral chatacter, hecause, although guilty of a techaical offence, he certainly ? was guilty of no moral wrong.

Mr. DENDNET. If Mr. Hemry is to receive the whole of his salary. lecalnse the only indiscretion he committed was in improperly certifying accomes. there are wethers in exiatly the same prsition.

Mr. LACRIFR. Whore they:
Mr. DEWDNES: I do not know at the preseni moment. but I think there were several.
Mr. DADIES (P'E.I.) What wrong did Mr. Henry do but certify the aceomes under the direction of the deputy:

Mr. DEWIDNES: He did not do it maler the direction of the deputy.
Mr. MecARTHY. Yes. it is in the evilence.
Mr. DAVILS (P.E.I.) Last year I examined Mr. Henry's case carefully, and II came to the conclusion that his offience, if offence it was, was very mild indeed. He was chicf clerk at the time, and the irregularity he committed was to sign a cheque at the instance and request, if not direction, of his superior otficer. The evidence sworn to was this (page 20 of the report) :
"When you certified to this account, did you know that the services had been performed?-It was in this way. I was coming in from luncheon about 2 o'clock that afternoon, and 1 knew that Mr. Humphreys had been wanting to get an additional cheque as a sort of remuneration. Ho was getting $$ 1.50$ per day, and the deputy had allowed him to get an extra 50 cents a das or somethins like that. He was to get it in this way about every five or sis mumth: to prevent others in the departuient heing dissatisfied. I looked upon Humphreys as being al better man than many in the department who, if they knew he was getting tiilis additional sum, would probably bring political intluence in urder that they might also get it. I hay mon hesitation in doing it, although $I$ said at the time $I$ did not think it wis right. But I was anxious that he shoull wet some andditional remuneration, I wats coming int o the office about owelnek in the afternoon, when I met Mr. Burzess: I think it was in 188.. He was leaving for the North-W the next day and he said to me-he met me win the tup of the stairs-Henrs. if you make out that cheque iat fivenr of Mr. Humpherss and ald an additional slm. I will al $h^{-}$ prove of it.
Mr. TUPPER. There was no compulsiom.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) So, but the susention made hy the depaty heat was that lie should cer tify the aceount. It was the depmety heal whe surreptithos way : and as Henry thomsh Humphress entithed to alditional remumeration. he aceerled to the request of the depmey hatal.
Mr. PATERNON (Brant). That oll cemte a day war not for himself.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) No, it was for Humpheys ami had been allowed by the depputy heant aind thongh Henry did not think it correct. atill at the request of the deputy he certitied the aromum. He setms to have sufferel for refusiug to er tify eerain will he fomad Mr. Henrys statement of fants, and 1 in, mot think his name ought toln: pulhished with that of Pereimas being at delinequent in the same sense.

Mr. MULOCK. It must heregrete:d hat the sul. (immantle of the Privy Comath have emberomed to ghose wer this very serions offence it the way they have. In that report, from hemining to end, there is not a word of cmatemation for the deception practiceal by the various ofticials in the bepartment of the Interior. I camose conceise of anything more calculated to demoralize a pullic ofthice than for the dovernment themselves th repont, as they have done, with regard to these offences. They in mot renture to sity one word of rebuke in thair whole report tonching these framb. They say they have examined into the matter, and fimb that no loss was necasionel the publichy these fratul. Well. one has no means of knowing to what extent they examined the work done, work which consisted largely of putting in time. How combl the members of the forermment say what anome of time was put in hy the varions clerks at extra work, when that time was pat in at their own houses, or at all events not during oftice hours. The repert is most unsatisfactory, and the conclusiom, is the hom. member for South Oxford says, wfiers at premium for frauds upon the public service. The clerks are not to be punisheal, but have been given sereral months, leisure during which they remlered no service to the comotry whatever and are rewarded, in fact, for this long period of idleness. Why, had they asked for leave of alssence for tive months, on what terms would it have heen granted: They might have got one month, or the regular fixed holiday, at no expense to themselves, but beyond that their pay would have heen stopped during the whole perion of their absence. let in this case men who have put the country, by their actions, to a heary expense, and brought a certain anomit of disrepute on the whole service, are now practically to receive full par: only one nonth being docied during the whole perion of their absence. The forermuent have, in fact, condoned their offences, and are asking Parliament to do so as well. We combly not do a more demoralizing thing. amd I for one decline to be a party to it. I do not womler at the Minister of Interior condoning them. I fail to see how he could do anything else. considering the fact that the transactions wecurred in his lepartment. and that he is to hame wholly, in the first instance, as heal of the department where these transactions oceureei.

Mr. DFWionet. For what year:
Mr. MClollk. For the time the Minister was in office, during which perion the demomalization increased. Gue of his rwa servants would have heen included in the list. had the committere been inclined to the their duty fully. If the sub-committee hand dom their dity, a reference would have heen made to this ly then.

Mr. HEWHNT: Vin were hackgard enough to lo it last year.

Mr. MCLOCK. I call upon the Chaiman to make the Minister of Interion apologize for that wherration.

Mr. DEPCOV (HADRMAN. The language of the hom. senteman is certainly umparliamentary.

Mr. DEWHNEX. Lapologize to you. Mr. Chairman, anil will sily that gentleman was gentleman ennagh to make the ohservation.

Mr. MLAOMK. Anambugy to you, Mr. Deputy (hairman, is not sulticient. I must insist on your repuiming the hon. genteman to withdraw the olvervation.

Mr. WEPCTV (HADRMAN. I understome he lids.s.

Mr. MCLOMK. Then. if the committee had done its duty they wonld have dealt with the Minister of Interion as well by taking evidence of the irregularities emmittel hy this servant of his. I do not womber at the hon. genteman being imligmant and losing his temper. I do not wonder at his displaviily his true character, when hrough face of face with a transation of this kinl. I do not wonder at his use of obserrations which called from yom, sir, and the committee a monent : $\mathrm{g}_{\mathrm{E}}$, the censure of the committee for the violent and unparlianentary language he usel. but I do wimder that his colleagues chose to pass by this transaction in silence and now call upon Pariament to endorse the finding of the committee. I protest against it. I say you are proposing to demoralize the public service in asking us to rewarl persons who have violated the letter and the spirit of the law. There is one releeming circumstance in connection with it. The wrong, the injury to the public credit, and the disyrate to the public service occasioned by these minor officers could not have taken place han there heen an efficient and faithful head of the department. I offer that excuse for these men. That is the only apology that can be oftered, and the proper way to deal with the whole case, of course, would have been first of all to dispose of the head of the department. Then you would put the ase to the root of the tree; hut I say. in orter to le consistent, if you maintain the head of the department in office, you camot do less than reward the men who were unfaithful in consequence of his neglect.

Mr. ARMNTRONG. Thereseems tobea strange distinction made between men who are servants of the dicrernment and men who oceupy positions in other walks of life. I was not a member of the Prublic Accounts Committee last year, lout from what has been staten here to-lay, this man whose case is muler consideration now has been guilty of atn offence for which, if it hat heen committed in a private office, he would not only have been deprived of his pesition but would hate had to atone for his comduct in a public institution probally at haril latsom. What is the pmishment here? A month's salary is deducten, and the interest on it for the time the poor fellows are kept ont of it, and we may be callorl upon in further supplementary estimates to make up for that and the month's salary as well. Is it wo go the comory that this is the standard of morality which the dovernment sets up for its guidance, that the man who in a private position would lee deprived of his situation and placed in solitary confinement at hard labour for months, or it might be for years, is here to be rewarded in this way, or whether we have a law which places all on the sane forting?

Mr. SOMERVILLE. I do not think this item shombly be passed at all. We will review some of the evidence given hy Mr. Percira himself. He is asked:
"I am informed that sou have been in the habit of drawing money; other that yuur sulary. from the department. Is that the case"?-I have.
In your name, or in what other mames have you drawn money?-In the name of Lizzie Exalle.
"Ang others ?-Ellen berrs:
". Any others ?-Nu.
$\because$ Just those two :-Yes.
"Jou knuw Jaty Evalli:?-No.
" Did yon ever draw any money in the name of Incy Evans?-No.
$\because$ Where does Lizaic Evans live ?-She is my wife.
" Who is Miss Berry. Not your wife, too"-That is an assumed name.
$\because$ There is no such person \%-Nu.
" How did you eome tomake ont an account in Ellen Berry's mame?-I wonlal like to make some statement to the committec."
And then the: witness groes on to state some arrangement male hy him with the Deputy Minister.
"How much did yonget that year under the name of Lizzie Evans?-s2S1. In the spring of last yeur, 180), I was very much pressed with work. and I had made application to the Jeputy Minister for some sort of assistance, and I reminded him that my wife had not got the benefit of the whole of what the late Minister had sanctioned to be given to her on my behilf, ind he authorized me to allow her to help me in my work to the extent of a further amount which would aboit cover whit the late Minister had sanctioned."
So you see the Minister of the Crown was aware that this work was being done, and that Mr. Pereira was taking the work out of the oftice under another name.

[^34]tioned in a peculiar way: 'We know who this, man is and that man, and we know who Lizzie Evans is."
This is nice kind of talk to be going around the department. the clerks in the department saying: "I know who Lizaie Evinns is, I know who Ellen Berry is, I know who .Inseph liright is," but no, they could not know who Joseph Wright was hecause .Joseph Wright hial no existence, neither had Fllen Berry: yet this was umber the manarement of a superior officer like the present Minister imb of a superior deputy in regard to whom this committec reported.
"I took unon myself the responsibility, of which this committee will be the julpe, of not allowing my wife's name to appear any longer in the matter, and tha account I made unt moself in Ellen leerry ${ }^{\text {s name.' }}$
He was ashamed to hate his wifes name ased any longer. amd lee sulstituted the nanne of Ellen berry.
"When the cheque was made nut, I endorsed that cheque."
This is the man whom it is proposed to reinstate and to reward.
"There is no such person at Ellen Berry. The work was done by my wife, and I tork the responsibility of making the account out and the chegue in that other name fur the reason which I have explained.
-When you had this work given to your wife, why did you call her Miss Lizaie Fwins?' What was that done for:!-I did not think it was desirable to make it public in ally way that my wife was gettint work.
"For what reasun did you not, if it was honestly earned? Why did you object ;-For one reason I suppose that if it were known, very likely a number of other permanent clerks might ask for the same thing.

- You state that the Minister authorized you to get up did not say it might ger up to gitun). I mas stite that, becatase I have a note with me as to that.
"Whom did you get the information from that you were to he allowed to go up to sit:00?-The Depaty Minister said that he thought thait that authority had beengiven. He was not quite positive on the puint, but he was certainly positive about the amount of ston).
- How rlid you come to draw more than $8400 \%$ - I did it under the authority of the Deputy Minister, because he was under the impression. and I have no doubt he had grod srounds for having that impression, that the Minister had said it might yo up to 8600 ).
"Fou were more interested in this than the Leputy Minister, hut your impression was that it was S400?-NO, Sir: what I said was that I knew that I had something to show it was up to sit( $x$ ), but beyond that I had nothing except the impression, but what I received from the Deputy Minister.
$\because$ Who was present leside the Minister and yourself when this understanding was come to?-Nubody clse was present, "Was the Deputy Minister not present ?-I presume the Deputy Minister had an interview with the Minister, because be conveyed the information to me.
Atter you had had at consulation with the Minister? -I had had several consultations with the Minister iobout it."
Then questions were asked as to the manner in which the work was done.
". What I understand you is, that this work done in the name of Ellen Berry, was done by your wife?-Yes.
"And when she did the work you certified the account was correct "-I did in the case of Ellen Berry.
"Did you select the work, or did your superior officer select it ?-I selected the work.
:Fou selected the work, took it home, and afterwards when it was done, you certified to the account in this fictitious name?-les."
He not only certitien to the areonnt in this fictitious name, but he actually endorsed the cheune made out in the name of Ellen Berry and drew the money. He selected the work, took it home, stated it was performed, irrought it lack, certified that it was perforned in the name of Ellen Berry, had the cheque made out in the name of Ellen Berry, and endorsed the cheque in the name of Ellen Berry, and for this he is to be rewarded by being paid the amount of $$ 183.87$. That is to be his reward, after being reinstated in the department, for being guilty of all these transactions.

Mr. LANDERKIN. I hope the House will give no uncertain sound on this matter. However we may differ on political matters, we should agree upon this principle, that those who are in the departments should give an honest life to the service, and if they are discovered doing that which is dishonest, or savouring of dishonesty, or any violation of the law, their offences, however much you may feel disposed to be merciful to them, should not be comdoned by this House. Give officials to molerstand, and give the (iovernment to understand, that this country must have honest Govermment, and that the officials under them must be honest. I know it is pretty hard for the officials to be honest under this fovermment. I do not know but perhaps the measure proposed by my friend for North York (Mr. Mulock) is the proper one, that the ase should be laid at the root of the tree, and those who will tolerate, those who will comdone in the departments, acts that are prejudicial to the public service, and at variance with the principles of common honesty, should be immediately dismissed from the service. Now, I ama little surprised at the Minister of the Interior losing his temper when speaking after the hon. member for North York. It almost leads one to believe that there is something wrong in the head of the department, becanse when a person loses his temper he loses his case, and when he hegins to call had names and apply offensive epithets to those who differ from him, there is sometime a possibility of a nigger being in the fence. Now, last session we sall the Minister of Public Works, who was charged with permitting some irregularities in his department, crowded out, and the Goverument took a great deal of credit to themselves for crowding out the Minister of Public Works. We saw in the Province of Quebec, when the leader of the Govermment there was suspected of much less grave irregularities, the poople crowded him out. Although the late Minister of Public Works had given long service to this country, he was crowded out of the Government, and the Government took a great deal of credit to themselves for supplanting sir Hector and tilling up his place with another. Although they took great credit to themselves for doing this, I have an idea that, even supposing those charges against Sir Hector were correct, he is a more honest man than any man that is in the Government to-day. But while they were willing to throw him to the wolves, and while he is loyal enough to them to allow the wolves to devour him, it is a singular thing indeed, that others in whose departments conduct almost as bad was discovered, they should continue to preside over those departments. For myself, I tell the Government that I will not support in the department, conduct on the part of any of the officials that is not correct and honest. If there is one thing that I want in public life, there is one thing positive that in the public service I shall contend, I shall fight, for homest Govermment, and I desire the ofticials to be honest, although I know it is almost a physical and a political impossibility to have honest otticials under the present Government.

Mr. MoMULLES. I regret very mach that the Goverment has seen it their duty to take this course with these ofticials. With regited to Mr. Pereira, and in face of the very serions evilence that has been given by himself and comrolonated by others, I think it is very much to be regretted that the House should umbo all the gool work that was done during the last session of Parliament by the Public Accounts Committee. I fear that the Government, before long, will have calluse to regret that they reinstated men who were fomm guily of these very grave and improper acts; it is to be regretted, I say, becanse there was something like $\mathbf{S} 20, O(K)$ of money spent in that investigation that tork place before the Public Accounts Committee. If we are going to condone all past acts of this kind, in this Chamber, and the offences that have been brought to light are to be taken no notice of, I think it is proceeding in a very improper mamer: I care not what sympathy there may be in the hosom of the Minister for thase nell who were shown to have heen guilty of irregularities, or how he may feel regarding them. or thowe depement on them. I say that in view of future efficient and honest service, these men should have borne the consequence of their acts. I am sorry that the (Government havedeciden to ask the House virtually to combone all these irregulatities and these dishonesties, and to cote a sumb money to make up for the loss of time they hare sustaned while they were suspemled from their posts. Now, I was rather surprised at an almission made hy the Minister of Thterior this aftemomin. I ho not wish to deal harshly with any Minister; 1 knיw the enomons amount of labour they have to perform, but still, after hearing him almit betore the Public Accounts Committee last vear. that Mr. Burgess was not receiving any salaty. I ani surprised to hear himalmit mow that, :fter all. he was. It is well that Ministers shonla keep themselves thoroughly pristed upon inestions relating to their departments. so, that members of Parliament may have reasonable grommls to rely upon the accuracy of the statementsof Ministers, instead of being called upon a few months atiterwatils to hear a Minister get up anio ask to be permitteal to retract a statement that was not correct. Now, a gool many irregularities were honght t. light last session in the Department of Interior: evilence was brought before the Public Aceonnts Conmitte showing that there had beensystematicstealing going on-l)ecause it is mothing short of that ...by men whe, were apportioning sut work to he done by their wives and their relatives and it is mfair for this House, it is lowering the digmity of this Honse, to ask it to vote money to pay these men salaries during the time they were susppended. What olject is there in holding a public investigation before the Public Accounts Committee if, when offences are exposed, the Government come down and ask the Honse to condone those offences, and mado everything that has leen done by the Committee of Public Accounts": i itu sumprised that the (ionermment should have the hardihood to ask as to vote the salaries, and I think a gool many people will come to the conclusion that the diovermment must have been in a very tight place when they askel the House to sanction the voting of this money and virtually to condone the offences that have been perpetrated by these people. The public will think that these men were able to hold a whip over the (iovernment, and tothreaten the Minister, in order to compel them to meet their demands. Perhaps some of these men may have been in a position to say: Well, if the Govermment do not settle with me I will make further exposures. I have tales that I can tell that will make matters very unpleasant for the Govermment, and I will tell them unless they reinstate me where I was hefore and pay my selary during the time I was suspenied. I will expose them.

Mr. Momblles. When the Honse took recess, I was expressing my regret that the Gonermment asked the Honse to pass a vote of this kimd, to reinstate this man in the position he held before, notwithstanding the fact that irregularities had loeen proved against him in the Public Accounts Committee. During last session very valuable services were rembered to this comentry by the investigations which took plate before that committee, and I had hoped a lesson would have heen taught the civil servants for many years to come, that if men were found guilty of irregular and improper acts they might count upon receiving punishment at the hands of Covernment and Parliament. 1 wass glad to notice that the Minister of Justice in some of his addresses during recess cindicated the course taken ly the Government with respect to the irregularities brought to the notice of the House and the country, and stated that those men found guilty of irregularities had been deprived of their positions and turned ont into the street. That kind of statement answered the purpose for a time. The bye-elections were brought on, the people were led to believe that the covernment were disposed to do right, that they had dismissed those servants who had been prover guilty, and now we might expect purer, better and more honesi work at the hands of the civil servants, The hye-elections are orer, and those who were proved guilty of irregularities are heing taken back, one by one. This is the first instalment; we have the cases of Pereira and Turner. The other man, Mr. Hemry, did not merit dismissal. I look upon this as being a very serious matter. If in future investigations members of the Civil Service are found who have committed improper acts, to have converted to their own use money or valuables belonging to the Dominion, they can point to the punishment meted out to these men who have been found guilty of wrong-doing. We are establishing a precedent which will he in after years referred to as evidence of the lenient and charitable conduct that characterized the action of the Government towards civil servants. It is a very unfortunate state of things. It is land enough to take these men back into the service but to pay their salaries during the time they were walking the streets and doing nothing is a gross injustice. They have not servel the comotry while walking around the city. To now offer to pay their salaries for time so spent is to offer a premiun on wongdoing. If a civil servant wants a holiday. and his request refusel, all he hats to do is to commit an irregularity. whereupon the will he suspended for six months and receive his salary. It is a very conveniont way of getting a holiday. This, I say, is the first instalment of cases. Ne are begining with the little mes. Perhapsi lefore this House rises we maty have cotes with regarid to some other persons whir have heen dismissed. If we are gring to have a genemal political juhilee of sin-forgiving we had hetter extend it, wot ouly to the civil servauts. hut to those outside who hate been found guilty of wrong-doing. Perhaps there may appear in the supplenentary Fitimates a vote for the hom. member for Three Riners sio Hector Langevin). not only of his sessimal allowance. but of salary as a Minister. That reinstated as the civil serrants in question. What is satuce for one shombl the satue for the other. The fiorernment during the bevelections printed to the fact that the late Minister of Public Works had suffiered for his wrong doing, and that he hati heen punished for the irresularities in his department. I suppose hom. gentlemen opposite trieci to make him a scapegoat for the entire party. As of old : they laid their hamds unon his heail and he was sent away to the willerness. Howerer, he did not stop there, and he is in this Honse again. 1 contend that in order to carry out the policy of merey which the Govermment are extending the these civil servants, they ought togo aheend and gramt a general pardon for all the inipuities committer. If this is the mamer in which hon. gentennen opposite are going to punish wrong-lofing, the somer we have an end to the whole farce the better.

Mr. LANIDERKIN. Their policy is discrimination.
Mr. MoMULLEN. If they do not know any hetter I wond recommend them to go aheal amil bury all the sins that their friends and civil servants have heen guilty of and to reinstate them all in the same position as they were before. In this whole business the comitry has heen deceived and humbugged. I causay that on every plation on which I spoke during the elections, we hat friends of the Govermment there who pointed to the fact that civil servants were turned out of otfice and punished for their misconduct, and that the hon. member for Three Rivers (Sir Hector Langerin) was also mate to suffier for the wrongdoing which had been done. Now, as som as the political show outside of this House is over, we are asked by the cocermment to initiate a policy of reinstaling these men who were guilty, and to compensate them by payiug them their salaries during the time they were suspended. I trust that the country will see that the whole thing is a farce. What is the use of having a Public Accounts Committee at all, what is the use of sulpenaing witnesses from all parts of the Dominion, at a cost of si20,000, totestify before Palliamentary Committees, if after the whole thing is over the Ministers are suing to luing in legislation of this kind and to reinstate these men who have been suspenderl: It is turning the Public Accounts Committee. and the Privileges and Elections (conmittee and the lavestigation Committee into a farce. I think. when the country gets an apportunity of promonaing on the conduct of hom. gentiemen opposite in this matter, they will have their uges open and treat them as they deserve. I find on this list of names, Mr. Senecal. He was foum guily of a considerable a anount of wrong-doing. innl was dismissed. Why should the diavermment single him out for punishment any move than the oilhers, when the others are allowed th go free and when senearls combluct was not muth worse than the others? What is the use of :oing through the farce of prosecuting these men in the courts. when the Homse may the asked later on to reinstall them and perhaps reeomp them for the time they were in jail. If the policy of the dowernment is carried to its fullest extent I have no dombt that the Home will he asked to comsent to a cole of that kind. The comntry has parloned the sine of hon. gentlemen oppriste, and these same genthente are now measming ont to their sulordinates the merey which they reeivel themselves. Merey lugets merey. I anin incline to think the comutry is wh hame for all this. They have pardoned hon. antlemen opposite their iniquities, and if the country had not pirwhed them, the probahilities are that we would mot ie askell to consent to such a vote as this to-night. The electors are responsible for all this, hecalluse if they hat pronouncel upon the dinvernment as it deserved re wroulal not be asken to reinstate Mr. P'ereira tomight. I do nor know whether the country did this in the ahsence of lowndle and everything else, hat at all events the (iovermment secured a parion and now they are extending their mercies. I commend them for their meres, becanse it is in accordance with the way things should be-when mery is gramed merey should he meted out to others. It is athout time. however. that the representatives of the people shomld put a stop, to this kind of thing. and deal with the Givil service of this comutry as it shouht be dealt with. If we had made an example of this man lereina, and of the other men wh:o committed the sime misconduct, the other civil servants of this comontry wonld have quivered in their shoes before they ever dared to do anything wrong. Now they will point to these men is having been dismisent and snspended, and when a convenient scasm came around as having loen reinstalled and remmerated for their wrong-doing. It is a farce, amil hope the comery will make note of the conduct of the (iovermment in this matter. The people were astomided last year at the report of the disgraceful combition of some of the departments and the recorl of some civil servants, but now they are to lee told that these very men are to the estcemed and paid for their iniquities. I feel sorry that the Ministers have felt themselves called upon to ask the House to consent to the passage of an item of this kind, and to begin the parion system so early in the history of this country, even before the trials of some of the persons who have been prosecuted come off. What will the julge and jury say when they see the Government acting in this way? I have no cloubt that they will say: What is the use of convicting these people and semling them to gaol, because, for all we know. the Minister of Justice will grant an order to release them and reinstate them in their positions. Prolably the jury will be disposed to follow the example of the Xinister and deal out merey to wrong-doers. They will think that they should not comvict one man for doing, when others are compensated for doing a similar thing. They will see that the Cievermment alealt mercifully with Mr. Pereita and reinstated him. and they will naturally think that they should lee merciful also. It is my opinion that if the dovermment are disposed to pursue this policy, that we should have a seneral year of political jubilec amel pardon the sins of every man who hats been guilty of breaking the law. Reinstate my respected friend from Three Rivers, comione the ohl erross, put every man baek where he was and hegin everything over again.
Mr. SPROCLE. I would not have said anything hut for at part of the disenssion that tuok place before six oclock. It was stated that in the evidence given before the Public Accounts Committee there was mothing to justify the assertion that these inregularities had taken phate before 18s. I Ihink that statement was male both hy the hom. member for North Wellington, and ly the hon. member for North Bramb. I have in my hand the evidence taken lefore that committee, and I finit that the very reverse is the case. In the examination of Mr. Hemry the following yluestions were asked:-

" Bur Mr: Taylor:

"By looking over the accounts for moners paid. canyou ascertain exactly when this practice was first in opera tion, whether in 1871 when you commenced. or what year after that? Have you any way of reaching that"-II got work in that way in the Finance Department in 1sig.

* Bu! Mr. Fister:

"For what work?-Counting notes.
"That is the practice to-day When did you go into the interior lepartment ?-In 1873.
$\because$ lid you get any extra work in that department.?-I did; prior to the Civil Serviee Act going into effect."
It was, on the other hand, contemben that even thongh this practice was in existence before 1885, it was not illegal, because the Civil Service Act did not prohibit it. I have here: a copy of the Civil Service Act for ISGS, and I find that the provision in that Act is very much the same as that in the present Act. It is in the following words :-

[^35]Again, it is contendel that the oath which these otticerss were obliged to take since the Civil Service Act of 1882 was passed was so stringent that they could not perform extra services and be paid for them without violating it; but I fiml that the oath is exactly the same in the Act of 1868 as it is in the Act of 1873; and if it was a violation of the law in 1888 or in 1890, it was equally so in 1873. I do not cite this as a palliation of the offence; I do not think it is ; two wrongs do not make a right ; but when hon. gentlemen assert that there were no irregularities between 1873 and 1878 , they are not justified, because the evidence brought out the fact that these irregularities had taken place years ago and had continued from time to time until they were stopped last spring. There is another thing I noticed last summer, that many newspapers supporting hon. gentlemen opposite had a great deal to say about the rigorous punishment meted out to the small fry at Ottawa who had been foum :ruilty of certain irrerularities that din not amount to mach, while the perpetrators of great wongs were allowed to go clear. That was what we met with genearly throughont the country, and when we contemled that whitever was done would be consideted aml a suitalle punishment for the offence alministered, it was asserted that these men were punished tooseverely for having done comparatisely little wrong, while others who had committed ereat wrongs were not punished at all. The hon. member for North Weilington asks: Why not let Senecal and Bronskill go insteal of suing them: I think their cases were entirely different. In the one cate lahout was performed for which parties were pail: and although the hon member for North Brant expressed his opinion that that work was never done. we know that all the civil servants who came hetore the committee swore that the work was sone and honestly done, and I think we are justitied in receiving a man's oath and assuming that he is telling the ruth - if not, he is committing an act of perjury, for which there is a severe punishment. Therefore, when the work was done acourling to the usual rates paid for such work, and full value given. the offence was not a very great one. But while saying that, I think that in some instances perhaps the punishment meten out is tor light, in view of the fact that they are public otticers. They are not like persons in priate life. They ought to be made sach an ex. ample of. that others coming after them would not be likely to do the same thing. In regard to $\mathrm{Mr}_{\mathrm{r}}$. Burgess. who is the head of the department. 1 think I hare a right to assume from the evidence that if he did not order these acts, which was a technical violation of the law, to say the least of them, at all events he allowed them to go on while knowing the wrong was heing done, and I think the punishment should be more severe in his case. Certainly I for rone. understood, that from the day he hamed in his resignation, until he was reinstated, he did not receive any paty. I know that I have said so on many platforms throughout the country during the elections: I said it believing it to be correct :anduntil thiserening, Idid not know anything to the contrary. I must say that in my opinion he should have received more severe punishment. But it is evident that these irregular practices prevailed for long time. During the Mackenzie regime men were umler review for irregularities and practices uot exactly of the same nature as these, but irregularities quite as wrong, and were suspended for a time and afterwards taken on again. If I remember rightly, engineers aml other officials were treated in that way in the time of the Mackenzie fiovermment. Consequently one (iovernment seems to have been as much in fault as the other. If becanse men have done some slight injury they are to be turned out entirely, and deprived for the rest of their lives of the positions they have occupied for many years, I think it would be an extreme punishment. While they should be punished, I think there are mitigating circumstances that would not justify a very rigorous punishment being inflicted on these young men who gave value for the money they received.

Mr. somerville. If the last speaker had been in the House before six oclock he would have understood from the report brought in that the committee appointed by the Privy Council had investigated, or professed to investigate this matter more fully than the Committee on the Public Accounts hat done. Of course, the investigation hefore that committee was curtailed, owing to the many other investigations which had to be brought hefore it ; but the Privy Council appointed a committee to investigate this matter more fully, and we have the report of that committee now before the House, and it states distinctly that while it was believed that these irregularities had commencel as far hack as 1875 , still the committee were mot able to find that one single dollar was expended until ISSI or ISs:.

Mr. SPROULEF. May I remind the hon. gentleman that his word was that there was no evidence to sustain the contention that irregularities had taken place before 1Ns.i?

Mr. SOMERVILLE. We have evidence taken biv the committee appointed by the Prisy Council to the effect that no such money was expended until 1881 or 1852 , and that after that time the payments for extra work were commenced. Conseguently the statement mate by the hon. member for East (irey amounts $t o$ uothing, for the simple reason that the fovermment have confuted the statement which he has made. They have confuted the statement marle hy the hom. member for Girey by the evilence they hate prolucel themselves through the committee appointed to investigate the matter. The hom. gentlaman says movevidence was given before the Public Aceounts Committee to show that in some cases no work was done for the money pail. If he will look at page 40 of the Public Accounts Report, he will tind the following evidence produced:
" You state that this man Nelison did not work for this actount dated January gith. 1890. excepting in office hours?-Yes, with the exception of the two Sabbaths, in which I went to his house. We worked for about four or five hours. I took the galleys.
$\because$ Oh, you were reading proof. Who held the copy ?I held the copy.
"And you worked four hours each Sunday?-It might be four five or six. We started at ten in the morning. and I did not come away until half-past three or four in the ifternoon.
$\because$ You were kept continuonsly at work? -Oh. yes.
"But there was no work done for this at all "?-Except during office hours.'
And yet we have an hon. gentleman getting upaml saying it was proved conclusively that work was, done for all the expenditure in this direction. Now, we have the sworn testimony of one of the witnesses that no work was given for the amount of this account, and furthermore. I think we gught to take into consideration the oath which every one of the civil servants has to take before entering on the duties of his office. That rath was read iluring the investigation, and it was read to show that some of the gentlemen who appearel as witnesses, anci who were ofticers of the Interior Department, actually did not remember that they had taken this oath, although it is compulsory ou them all to take it. Now, the oath could not be more stringent than it is :
"I solemnly and since rely swear that I will faithfully and honestly fulfil the duties which devolve upon me as a clerk in the department, and that $I$ will not ask or receive any sum of money, serrices, recoupense or matter or thing whatsoever, directly or indirectly, in returu for what I have done or may do in the discharge of auy of the duties of my said office, except my salury or what may be allowed me by law or lys, an Order of the Gorernor in Council: so help me God."

Mr. Sprociet.

We have the evidence of the (iovernment's own Commission that no money was paid-

Mr. BOW ELL. No.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. Certainly we have. That evidence was read this afternoon, and if some gentleman on the other side will produce the doonment, I will prove it again. It was proven this afternoon. There can be no doult about it. There was no money paid until 1881 or 1882 for these services, according to their own report, and we have to go by their own report, so that no matter what the oath was luring the time of the Mackenzie fovernment, it was not affected by this matter, since no money was paid. I contend that any ofticer of the Government who took this oath and then took part of this money, which amounted to over $$ 9,(M 0)$. for extra services, certainly forgot himself very much when he forgot that he had swom not to doso. My hon. friend from North Wellington spoke about protecting the simers. It would be only dealing ont even-handed justice to all parties if this year were declared a year of jubilee. The (iovernment professed before the committee that they were sincerely desirous of having all these men punished. They were going to see that no infractions of the rule would he allowed to go umpunished, and they boasted all through the country of their intentions. I heard the hon. member for East (irey (Mr. Sproule) declare on the stump that this Government was pure. that it was going to mete out justice to these men. and that they were all to he punished. I hope the hon. gentleman was in the Hoase this afternoon when the hon. members for Victoria (Nlr. McDonald) and Cumberland (Mr. Dickey) aml other hon. gentlemen got up, and declared that while they had amounced on the hustings they believed the fovernment was sincere in desiring to punish these men, they foum that the dovernment was going to stand by these men and forgive them all the errors and sins they had committed in the Department of the Interior. If these men are to be forgiven, we ought to frogive all men guilty of infractions of the law. Ne ought to forgive Arnoldi and Bronskill and senceal and Bradley. We have nothing in this report with regard to Bradley, who was secretary of the Railway Department, and who for one whole year was drawing $$ 60$ a month for his son, who was studying medicine in Toronto and Montreal. Xot a word is stated in that report by the Commission ap. pointed by the Privy Council as to what has heen done with Bradley, and I would like to know what they have done with him. All these men I have mentioned have as good a right to le reinstated as those who have been. They have all been proved guilty. But it seems there is to be one method of dealing out justice in one case and another method in another. The Government should be consistent and treat all alike who are equally guilty. Notwithstanding the statement made by. the Minister of Justice, I repeat that the Gorernment know full well, as I know, that they are afraid of some of these men who holl ottices in the Interior Department. I know, from my own knowledge, that these menare capable of revealing matters in comnection with the management of the department, which would disclose a state of affairs far worse than anything yet divulged hefore the Public Accounts Conmittee, and probally, before this ses. sion closes, we will have an opportunity of enguiring into some of these other irregularities.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I was going to say a word before the hon. member for Brant spuke, but I am glad he has given me the opportunity of meeting the statements he made in this House lefore, that the otticers referred to in the vote have been dealt leniently with, because the diovermment are afraid of something these otficers might disclose. The hon. gentleman has made that remark more emphatic just now by declaring that he knows that to be the case. For one, I know that not to be the case. The diovermment are afraid of nothing which these persons or any person in the public service have to disclose. As the hon. gentleman has given the information that further enquiries may be pursued during this session, and that this vote, which some members on the other side seem to think is tempering justice with a little too much mercy, is designed for the purpose of affecting their testimony, their disclosures or their emduct with regard to such investigations, I make now, on behalf of the Government, the statement that we are not afraid of anything these persons or any other persons in the public service may have to say: and 1 make the statement here that it may reach every person in the pul, ic service, that they are free to disclose anything they can with regard to this (iovernment, its policy, its management of the departments, that they may disclose it anywhere. and at any time they please, and will have perfect immunity in doing so, except in so far ats the consequences of any offences they may thenselves have committed against the public service or against the public interest, may be concerned. They shall receive perfect immunity, and we shall be in the judgment of this House ass to whether we shall have exercised with regard to them any severity whatever for disclosing anything which it may be in their power to disclose and with regard to the disclosures of which we do not care one straw to-night or at any other time. I am glal to say our friends opposite, although excessively severe on those otticers for a time, are becoming more lenient and taking it more contented view of the situation. The hom. memlers for North Brant and North Wellington are in such a forgiving mool that they want all offences condoned and forgiven, with the single reservation made by the hon. member for North Wellington, that while he is willing to forgive all simers he must except the country, and that he camot forgive. Now, Mr. Chairman, I felt some hesitation about saying much upon this question for this reason, that, to say what may be said in mitigation of these otficers" offences seemis, for the moment at least, to appear like apologizing for them and extenuating something which everyboly must conlemn. There is not the slightest doubt as to the statement made ly my hon. friend from (irey (Mr. Sproule) that the practice which resulted in this exposure and this punishment existed for a long time in that department and prevailed very widely in that department. It existed principally in that department because there was some kind of excuse for the employment of the regular clerks at extra work. While it could only be done during extra hours, it could be better done and more cheaply done, hy the regular clerks than by outsiders. Therefore, it seems to have existed more or less for alout 20 years in that department, churing which the extra work was permitted to be done by the regular clerks. lmat withont any rote of Parliament for the services which they rendered. That practice increased of late years, and when we tame to consider the number of persons who would fall unter pumishment for receiving money in this way. we fouml it absolutely necessary to adopt sonic reasonatble limit of time as to the commission of the offence. The investigations of the committee dill not go very far batck, but we fixed ten years as a not unveasonable time in regard to those Who had committed what was then consilered a very renial offence. if it were an offence at all: and the commission of the act wonl have been entirely forcoten if attention had not heen called to it hy this enquirg. Wedid include a mmber who were brought hefore the commitue. but who were shown ly research to hate done just what these persons who are named in this rote have done. I mention this as right and fair to the persons who are named in this rote. I don not apolosize for them, for. when persons are fortidden to take pullic money, thoush they do work for it, it is reprehensible for them to take that money. and it is especially reprehensible to take it in a private or secret way, so that those to whose knowledge it would wherwise come may not he aware of the fact. We were met with this pecaliar state of circumstances. If, during the session. we had dealt with the cases and hat immonced to the House that a month's salary was to be forfeited I think the Honse and the pulifie sentiment of that time wrold have thought that the pumishment was bot too lenient ane, hat the members of the (forernment were pressed with the very onerons work of a heary session, ami we were mathe to take up and pursine the investisation. Which hat only been legun hy the Committee on Prblic Accomits, until the end of the session. Some of these officers hat been suspented at the begimning of the enguiry, some were suspender later on, and some had only recently been suspemied. To say that we should make them forfeit their salaries for the whole period of suspension. and, perhaps the monthis salary beside, would have made the puashment very unequal and unfair. It is not our fault that the delay took place, but it was not fair to make the punishment of those officers so unequal hecause we had not the time to devote to the matter. Having lecided what would he a fit punishment to inflict, we imposed that, and decided to ask Parliament to pass a vote for the salary which was not paid during these unerqual perions of suspension. It has heen suggested that during the bye-elections we pretended to the country that we were dealing more severely with those officials than the facts show. That is not correct, becanse the report of this committee was published at once and commented upon long before the byeelections. I do not think more than 48 hours elapsed after its adoption hefore the newspapers contained the names of the officers and the penalty each would have to suffer. That was long before the bye-elections, and I think the principal point taken in the press, and especially in the Opposition press was that we were dealing with great severity with these offenders, the object being to make it appear that we were allowing other offenders to go scot free. I think the House, in its sound judgment, will comclude that, as regards these officers. the penalty imposed upon them is not toolenient under all the circmonstances. It is said that it is not reasomale to sive these officers pay for a time when they were doing no work. It must he remembered that they are employed by the vear and have no other means of supporting their families, and. When an ofticer is suspemiled for three or four months. during which there is a compulsory idlleness, the loss of his salary during that time might le too great a punishment for the otfence he is supposed to he gruilty of. We have to comsider whether the officer. willing to do his work amd suspended in that way hy our compulsory enfict. Should mot have his ease reviewed and dealt With on fair terms. and I think, if the Honse will consider the matter apart from political feeling, most of the members will comelude that we have not erred on the sigle of undue lenity, and that we shomh not he more severe than we have beet: in depriving these otticers of a months salary.

Mr. MHLLS (Bothwell). I understand the Minister of Justice to say that this system has presaled for ahont $\because 6$ years. and I understom the member for tast drey (Mr. Sproule) to say it prevailed atsearly as is:ï. I donot remember at present in what year this department was organized, hut I do not think it was in evistence guite as carly ats the vear the hon. gentleman mentions. I am uot aware of any evidence of any irregulatities except the evilence taken before the Public -fecounts Committee last year and the report the hon. genteman has submitted to us, and in neither the report of the I'ublic Accounts Committee nor the report the hon. gentleman has submitted to the Honse. is there any evidence of any of these irregularities or corring previous to lssi. I know nothing of what transpired in that department before 1.876 or after isis. hut betwen October of the former and Octoler of the latter year, I do know something of what took place in theilepartment. I kow there were great irregularities in the outside service and the parties who were concerned were dismissed from t.e pablic service, amd this was male known to the public. The information came into my possession shortly hefore I retired from office and wats placeal in the hands of my successor. Those imegulimities were comnected with the Indian service in Manitohat and the North-West. There could hardly have been such transactions as the committee have exposed withont the knowledge of the Deputy Minister for the time leing, and so far as I know the Depnty. Minister who hat leen for many years in office had been very careful. I know that he brought under my notice immediately upon my entering office, a suspicion of mis. management with regard to Indian matters, and as soon as the facts conld be ascertained I hat them incestigated. I an inclined to think if there had been any other irregularities that came to his notice he would have mentioned them. It would be satisfactory, at all events. before we are called upon to discuss any irregularities that took place at an earlier period than those investigated by the committee, that the evidence of those irregularities should be in the hands of the House, if any such exist. Now, let me say with regarl to the observations of the Minister of Justice, that I agree with him that this is, to some extent, a judicial proceeding on the part of the House, and we ought to consider and I think hon. gentlemen on this side of the House have consilered the character of the offences with which the parties were charged, and the extent to which the evidence supports the varions charges. It does seem to me, so far as I remember the evidence that was summitten, that these three parties whose names are given here, and whose salaries are being supplemented by this vote, do not stand exactly upon a fonting of equality, and this rote does not carry ont the view expressed by the Minister of Iustice in the speech which he has just addressed to the committee, that we shouhl deal with M:. Henry, Mr. Pereina and Mr. Turner in exactly the same way. Now, so far ats Mr. Henry is concerned, I do not umlerstand that he ever protited to the extent of a dollar by any irregularity. The charge against him was that he had apposed of a cheque, that he was recommended to approve of by the leputy Minister, that he hal not exhilited sufficient firmness in that matter, and that he had so far failed in his daty to the department. But I don not understand that Mr. Pereinit stands in the sime position as Mr. Henry. I umderstani that Mr. Pereira did give ont work to parties who were not entitled to receive it, that he himself took work from his department as extra work in the name of fictitions parties, and that he received in the name of those parties extra compensation, and that he certified to work that he had himself done moler the name of those imaginary persons. Now, that is a most dishonest transation: that is, in my view, a highly reprehensible proceeding. I low not think from a moral point of view, that there is any comparison between a proceeding of that sort and a proceeding such as the irregularity charged against Mr: Hemry. Now, if that be so, these two parties are not heing dealt with in the same way, they are not heing put upon a fonting of equality, becanse the offence committed hy the one is wholly different in its chanacter from the offence committed hy the other. If that he so. then it seems to me the public service will suffer. I donot see that the public service will suffer very much from the restoration of Mr. Henry. I think his evidence went to show, amd his comluct went to show, that there was no intentional disposition to do wrong, there was no desire on his pirt to persist in wrongdoing. that his conduct on the whole showed that he was disposed. as a public ofticer, to discharge honestly his public duty. Now, when you take the case of Mr. Pereira a wholly different state of mind is exhibited, a wholly different character is presented in the transaction from what is exhibited in the transaction of Mr. Hemry. I submit to the Minister of Justice that in melertaking to deal with Mr. Pereira in the way he is dealing with Mr. Henry, he is at the same time inflicting an injury upona publicilepartment. I yuite admit that a party who is suspended, and who has no knowledge whether he is going to he restored or not, who is without employment for several months, is, in the fact that he is so out of employment and out of office and in a state of suspense, being punished for what he has done. But when, at the end of that periol of time, you take one who is an offender in a very slight degree and put him upon a footing of equality with a man who is a cheat, whose conduct in every particular shows that he is cheat, I submit with all canlour to the House, and without any party feeling or bias in the matter-because we are dealing now with the rights of individuals-as essentially unfair. I submit that Mr. Henry and Mr. Pereira do not morally stamd upon a footing of equality hefore this House, and the payment of the one will not have the effect upon the department that the payment of the other will have. I think that they are in a different position, that they stand in different moral categories, and that while one may fairly, after this lipse of time, receive compensation sul, ject to the reduction that the Minister has mentioned, I do not think that that rule applies to the other: for everything connected with the wrongdoing of Mr. Pereira seems to me to show a character and a disposition not at all desirable in one who oceupies a position in the public service.

Mr. PERRV. It ippears to me that the policy of the dovermment in respect to this matter is to countenance and encourage irregularities on the part of the (ivil service in the departments maler their control. We find that something like S10, (KK) have been drawn from the year 1881 to 1891 irregularly, some of this money has heen drawn under fictitions names: I belicie the most of the money was paid in the name of a persom living in the United states. Some wats pail in the name of a deal person: some was paid in the name of a young man who was at school for 12 or 1.5 months, inis father drawing Sill a month for the time the boy was at school. Well, Sir, these men who have been guilty of these irregularities are all to le forgiven, nay, more, they are to be paid a premium. The fonermment are actually asking this House to pay a premiom to all the wrongedoing they have committed. Have the (iovermment any security that these ofticers will be better in time to come? Have these men gone on their knees and said med "ulpu: Have they confessed honestly, sifuarely and conscientionsly, that they will never do it again ? I say the (iovermment have been trying to saddle this irregularity upon the late Administration, framing a report that this was going on since the year 187 T . It has been shown hy an hon. member on this side of the House that these inproper practices commenced in INSI, and that was acknowledge? by a Committee of the Privy Council. A greater injustice was never perpetrated than that now proposed. These men are all Tories, lat if any impropriety is committed by a (irit, the Minister of Justice will land him in a penitentiary. These men are, howerer, friends of the Covernment, and they can steal money by the thousands, by the ten thousand or fifteen thonsamd dollars, and they are all right. I wish to go hack for a few moments to 188 , a short time ifter the election. We find that an officer in the Govermment sevice, Mr. Ronald Camplell, a prerentive officer in Prince Fdward Island, who had discharged his luties faithfully, and even risked his life to collect money due to the Government, was dismissel from the service. He was a very harlworking man, and after the people had shown their good sense by returning two Liberals, this man was accused of improper acts. A horse must be obtained to put a saddle on. It was stated that MI. Camplell had voted and supported the Liberal candidate. He demanded an investigation. A conurt was arranged for, but he was not notified to attend on the day it was held, and before he knew that his case was being tried, it was over, and in a day or two he was dismissed.

That was the way in which the Goverument administered affairs in Prince Edward Island. But the same measure of justice is not meted out to their Tory friends. Let me now refer to a case that happened not long ago at Summerside, in the county I represent. The postmaster caused an ordinary letter, not a money letter, to be dropped into the wrong box, and a few days after he was dismissed without an investigation being held or a moment's notice given. For what was he dismissed? I suppose to satisfy some hungry shark about Summerside who was hanging about to get the office--a man who wanted to figure roumd this House at the expense of the voters of Prince Comrty. The postmaster must be thrown on one side is a beggar. No superamuation, and even no consideration must be shown him. He did not happen to be in the same political hoat with the fiovernment, and there wasno reward for him ; hehad tobe victimized. I hope, however, this man will be able tolivenotwithstanding all the acts of the present Administration. I will now go a little further. After 5th March 1891, two men in my county, who had worked on the railrcad for eighteen years, who were supposed to have voted for the Liberal candidates, although it was never proved that they attended meetings or voted for the Liberal candidates, were dismissed. The Government did not institute a court of investigation and did not give these men an opportunity to defend themselves. No, they must be dismissed without an investigation. The superintendent of the Island railway said these men must he dismissed promptly. Who gave the order? I am told the chief superintendent in Ottawa. But who prompted him to allopt this action? Was it the Minister of Justice, the Minister of Finance, the Minister of Railways or the Minister of Marine and Fisheries? None of them will admit doing so and assume the responsibility for that action. If men are proved guilty of dereliction of duty let them be dismissed. When men are guilty of a gross misdemeanour--I will not call it stealing, although it seems very much like it-it is time they should be dismissed and an example marle. When the branches of the tree are rotten the trumk must be likewise affected. We are becoming riticulous in the eyes of the world as a people who are not fit to control our affairs, and it is high time we commenced to remedy these evils. Must it he said that we have no men capable and honest to carry on the business of the public departments, that all our goo? men have gone to the United States? I hope we have still a sufficient number left to provide true and honest men to conduct public affairs in an upright and honourable manner. The Government must remember that they are not going to be for ever in power, that a change will occur some time, and if these irregularities are allowel to go unpunished, a succeeding Government can say in defence, that they were simply adopting the plan of their predecessors. I am ashamed of the action of the Government. I am ashamed to think that they are palliating the wrong-doing of their ofticers who are Tories, while down in Prince Edward Island, where our people happen to be Grits, officers are dismissed without reason, and even without having the benefit of an investigation held.

Sir RICHARD Cartwright. Most undoubtedly this particular itein connected with Mr. Pereira should be struck out. I listened attentiveiy to what the Minister of Justice hat to say. He a voided dealing with the real question in hand, which is whether these three parties stand on the same footing, and whether a just conclusion has been arrived at. I have no hesitation in saying, and I was present during a greater part of the sittings of the Public Accounts Committee, that I recollect the impression made on me at the time by the way in which these men gave their evidence. I concur in what hasheen stid in regard to Mr. Henry. He appeared to make a plain and truthful statement. He did not appear to have benefited to any material degree by the irregularities that had taken place, hut his case and that of Mr. Pereira are totally different. Mr. Pereira was distinctly guilty of fraud. Mr. Pereira was distinctly guilty of using false names and causing false entries to lie male in our public accounts, and if I am not very greatly mistaken, using false names on cheques. As I intimated two or three times lefore the recess, I consider that a totally different question from the question of a mere irregularity in receiving a little more money than they were ordinarily entitled to. I attach far greater importance to it by reason of the fact that Mr. Pereina was assistant secretar:. What do the members of the Government do with the head of the department: Practically, as far as Mr. Burgess is concerned, we have heard to-night that his punishment is to amome to this: that he is to be fined $$ 233$, that leing the difference hetween $S, 8(x)$ a year and $S 3$, - (x) for eight months, and that he is to be reinstated on the 1st of duly. I attach no other meaning whatever to the statements made by the Minister of the Interior and by the Minister of Fiance than this, and if that he the intention of the fiovernment, I say that they are deliberately doing all that in them lie to degrade and demoralize our (ivil Service. As they propose to deal with Mr. Burgess, the Deputy Minister, so they propose to deal with Mr. Pereira, the assistant Secretary, who has been proved guilty of fraud ; a fraud which verges close on to a criminal offence, if inleed it is not a criminal offence to use a false name on a cheque. He is not to be punished at all, because I regard the forfeiture of one month:s salary as entirely indequate to the punishment of his offence. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I for one protest against this. I refuse to vote for it and I will divide the committee on the question as to whether Mr. Pereira is to be indeminified after the conduct provel against him in the Public Accounts Committee for his proceedings during the time he was assistant secretary. I will ould, Sir, that it looks very like turning the proceeding of thePublic Accounts Conmittee into a farce, when a month's forfeiture of salary is all the punishment that is to be inflicted on parties proven to have done what Mr. Pereira has done.

Mr. SPROULE. As the question was brought up by the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) and the assertion made that no such payments or irregularities took place during his time in office, I may state that in looking up the Public Accounts of that day, I find that the same system had obtained during the Government of which he was a member. I have before me the Public Accounts of that day, and I will refer to a few cases in the Department of Finance where these payments were made: W. Lord, for extra work, $$ 243$; F. Toller, extra work, $32; F. White, extra work, $3i.

Nir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Were they permanent clerks?

Mr. SPROULE. Yes, they were.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I). How does that appara?
Mr. SPROULE. Some of them are in the department yet. It appears as paid out of contingencies, ind is not voted in the Public Accounts, while the Act says: "No allowance or compensation shall be made for any extra services whatsoever which any otticer or clerk may be required to perform in the department to which he belongs." These gentlemen in the repartment to which they belong were paid out of contingencies for extra work, and without any vote in the Fistimates, and upon the same principle as the men to whom we are now refering. Therefore I think the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) is not strictly speaking correct. I ind in the Customs Department the following entries: J. Biary, extra work. S31s: F. Bennett. extria work S489: (i. W. Crant, extra work, S39 and J. R. Piche, paid in the satne way.

Nir RICHARI) CARTWRI(:HT. You do not tind that they used false names. I dratw a distinction between deliberate frad and exta payment, which I admit is an irregularity that may have occured at various times, although my recollection is that there were different provisions in the Civil Service Act at the time the hon. gentleman refers to than what there are now. I draw a wide distinction, and every man in this House must see there is a wide difference, between receising extra sums and making false entries, aml drawing false cheques and calusing these to appear in the Public: Accoments.

Mr. Boll ELA. . There is a distinction, I admit: but what lunderstool the member for Brant (Mr. somerville) to say, was that no payment of any chamater in evasion of the law, had been made prior to the year 1881 . That is what I understood him to say, and I confess I was somewhat surprised when I heard that remark made, becanse I know that of all men in the House, a gentleman who had given so much study to that question as the hom. member for North Brant (Mr. Somerville) must have leen labouring under misapprehension when he made it. I know my own experience is that when I entered the department it had beena regular practice of paying for extra work, and I put a stop to it. The conserquence was I had for a time a little rebellion on my hands. The work was lehind and the commissioner came tome and told me that theotficers refused to bring up the worl. inless they were paid extra for it. I told the commissioner to tell these gentlemen the work must be done and the returns ready for Parliament. I refused to give them one cent for it, as being contrary to law, and I told them further that if they refused I would dismiss them and get someborly else to do the work. The work was done as I expected it would be, but without their having received extra pay for it. I know from my own personal experience that large amounts had been paid in this way prior to 1881. I do not say they were not paid before the hon. gentlemen opposite came into office, but I sity that the practice had prevailed at that time, and I should not have referred to it now were I not under the impression that the remarks made by the hon. member for North Brant (Mr. Somerville) would lead the House to suppose that no payments of this kind, contrary to the Civil Service Act of 1868, were mate price to 1881 . I remember that before the commitee last year I read the oath which has been now read by the member for (irey (Mr. Sproule), and I also remember distinctly what was said to me at the time by the members of the Opposition. The retort was pointed--I find no fault with it, hut it is unnecessary to repeat it. I say that this is a practice that has been prevailing for years, and I have no doubt prevailed before hon. gentlemen opposite came into office, except perhaps in those departments where the Minister hat personal cognizance of what was going on and put a stop to it.

Mr. NOMERVILLE. I wish to call the attention of the Minister of Militia to the facts. I do not suppose he was in the House when the facts were brought ont as stated in the report of the committee that was appointed by the Privy Council to investigate this matter. I do not know whether he was a member of that committee on not. The report was passed over to that side of the Honse and it has disappeared. I think it should he forthoming now, ami that no member of the House had a right to dispuse of it until the discussion closed. The Minister of Public Works sent over here for it, and he passed it around to some other member and it has disappeared. I think we ought to have it in our possession. The report distinctly states as I have aheady said that these irregularities hatl oceurred from $18 . \bar{s}$ up, and then went on to say that a certain sum of money had leen discovered as having been paid for extra services. and a statement was made showing the years during which these payments were made, and the amount of the payments frotedup to the total sum in the other clanse of the report, setting forth that about $\mathrm{S} 10,(\mathrm{MX})$ hat been pail is this way hetween 1881 and 1891. What other conclusion could any one derive from it? I am basing my statement on the official report made by the Commission appointed by the Privy Conncil. and if we are not to take that report as authentic and if we are not to be at liberty to quote from that, and to believe the statement of facts in it. then I would like to know what we can hase any argument upon. The report distinctly says what I have stated, and I think the Minister of Militia can understand that I have good ground for the statement I have made: that there were no payments made prior to 1881 or 1882 in this direction. I think the hon. gentleman will see that I was justified in making that statement.

Mr. BOW'ELL. No.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. Why not? If the report is correct I was justified in making that statement. Neither the Minister of Justice nor the Minister of Finance have statel that that report is not correct, and, therefore, we must take it as authentic. That being taken as authentic, I have perfectly good grounds for stating that no payments were made previous to 1881 and 1882 in this direction. Now, I think the Minister of Customs ought to accept that and agree with me that I had groumls for making the statement I did.
Mr. BOWELL. If it would not be considered an offensive word, I would zay that the hon. gentleman's argument is disingenuous. He ignores the fact that, according to his own statement, the report stated distinctly that these irregularities existed from $18 \pi^{\circ} \mathrm{F}$ until the time the report was made.

He treats that as a falselowen and neclares the other portion of the report to he true. That is really the position he takes. If the report is to be taken in its entirety, then the hon. gentleman must agree that these irregularities commencel at least as far back as 18,0 and that they contimeed up to the time of the investigation. But he hases his whole argoment on the circumstance that the committee only gives an account of the irregular payments maile in this way from lisil up to the time they made their report. We have a right tosay that the committee meant exactly what they sail, that the irregularities existed from 1sion. but that when they gave an account of the payments made they only gave them from lssi up to the time they maile the report. If the report reads as the hom gentleman says. it would be to that extent self-contratictory, and the inference I wond draw womb he that probably lssi is an error for lssi. Eien smposing the report hore the interpretation put upon it hy the hom. gentleman, that dowes not affect the fact that these irregularities did exist to my knewledere, and the Public Accomess show that they did.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. Then it amounts to this, that the Committee of the Prixe (ommeil dian not perferm their duties.

Mr. MILLS' (Bothwell). The statements read from the Pablic Accounts by hem, member for Fast firey (Mr. Sproule) ido not establish his proprsition at all. In the tirst place, they relate to another department. I mulerstame that these empuiries, which have been reported upon ly a committer of the conacil. relatedomptothe bepart ment of the merior. If they related to all the departments, then 1 mismiderstond the report. What has heen read from the Public Accounts hy the hon. member for East drey dons mot relate to that department at all, but to the Department of Finance and the Department of Constons. It does not appear, nor has he undertaken to satisfy the committee that the parties whose names are mentioned there were any other than extra clerks, and the Act in that particular does not apply to persons who are not on the promanent list. Then, he does not show that if they were on the ressilar permanent list, their employment was uot inthorized by Order in Conncil. What he has read is really no evidence at all of the propusition which he under. took to establish.

Mr. SPROLLE. I think the hon memler for Bothwell has made one mistake. It was in criticismof mystatement that the same irregularities had existed hetween 18:2and 18sis, that the hon. gentlemanassured the House that to hisknowledge during the time he was a Minister of the Crown they hail not existed. Now, I do not think it was material to the argument that I should show that they existed in the Department of the Interior of which he had control. I took the tirst department that came to my notice in the selection of the names that I found, and they belong to the permanent Civil Service. I did that lecause 1 believed the practice was in contravention of the Civil Service Act of 1868, in which the oath was just the same as it is to-day. Then the hon. gentleman suys that there is no evidence that they were not employed by Order in Council. They were permanent civil servants, therefure there was no necessity of their being employed by Order in Council, and the payment was made out of the contingent fund.

Mr. Bowell.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I think that the commit tee have adroitly had their minds taken off the real yluestion before them. The question is not whether in a perion anterior to 1851 or 1882 there had been irvegularities in payments to civil servants. I think the hon. gentleman for North Brant proved this afternoon by reading the Order in Conncil that there had not been irregularities before that time: and the only answer made to him hy the hom. Minister of Finance was that possibly the report of the Committee of Comancil hrought down was not a correct copy of the orisinal.

Mr. Foster. Are you in eamest:
Mr. DACIES (P.E.I.) That is what 1 understood him to saty. I would like to ask the hon. member to corret me now if I am nut correctly repmorting what he said.
Mr. FONTER. I am not whjecting an your report of what I saial. but I do not thisa the hom. gentleman can be sincere in making the statement its to what the Oriler in Conncil, and gloss of the hom. member for Brant, proved.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Not the order in Comanil, but the repurt of the conmittee of the Comacil, which I sity satisfactorily established this fact, that, so far as the moneys which they reported to have been irregularly paid were concerned, they were paid in the period between 1881 amil 1s91.

Mr. Fonter. Fo. but exactly the opposite.
Mr. DATIES(P.E.I.) My hom. frimblead the report, and the answer the hom. sentleman save across the Honse was that, so far is the language of the report is emeerned, it proves exactly what you say, hut 1 imagine it must he an incorrect report.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The very reverse of the statement is male on the face of the report. namely, that these payments were male and this practice continued from $18 \%$, and the names and amomes which are stated in the appemdic to the report are the peyments to the otticers who are to le made the sulpject of pmishment.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) That is not what the report satid nor what the hon. gentleman reand. Nor did the report say these practices contimued in the anterior perion to which we refer at all : but it sail in one of the paragraphs, that they began to arise -whatever that may mean--amd that is the only reference mate in the report to a period amterion to 1851.

Mr. FOSTER. If thehon, gentleman willallow me to real the clause of the report, probably he will change his opinion. Nection $\mathrm{D}_{\text {s says: }}$ "That the whole sum thus irregularly paid to permanent ofticials for extra work amomel, its far as can be ascertainel, to 80,017 from the year lisin to date." That is in the hody of the report.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Exactly.
Mr. SOMERVILLE. That is not the report I real to the House.

Mr. FOSTER. Things have come to a pretty pass in this House when an hon. gentleman, withont seeing the document from which I am reading, will state that is not the report. If that hoin. gentleman has any senseof propriety at all, he will apologize to the Honse. I do not ask him to apologize to me, but I think he ought to apologize to the House. I have heen a long while in the Honse and never heard a more audacions statement since 1 ? have beon in Parliament. This is in the booly of the report. That is the report which was brought down. Sow, then, my hom. friend states that that report proves eonclusively that there were no moneys paill from 18.0 to 1 ssi. Ihave real the report. Hom. gentlemen in this Heuse cam draw their own conclusions as to what it means. The hon. member for Brant, who made the guotation a little while ago, in so ungenerons and uncometeons a way, took the appemix to this report, a tabular statement purporting to be the amomits that were paid to permanent clerks, and the healing of it is from 1881 to 1891 . That is a tahular statement appented to the report. The report of this committee, as I read it, covered from 18.0 to 1831 . The tabular statement "A" purports to be a statement of the moneys paid from 18so to 1s91, and they footed up to spogic.34, the exact sum that is stated here to have been paid from $1 s$ a.j to 1 s.9.

Mr. MILLs (Bothwell. Hear, hear.
Mr. Fositer. 1 am stating the matter fairly ami the hon. gentleman ought to appreciate my fairness My hom. friend who just preceded me, did not, 1 think, state it fairly. I am giving you what the statement of the feport is, iund I am Siving you what is in the appendis in the form of a tahular statement. When that was hrought to my notice by the hon. sentleman, 1 explained that there seemed to be a diserepaney and that there must be something wrong with the figures. The statement in the body of the report I have no dombt is correct and the figures of dates in the appendix Wrong. My hom. colleague, the Minister of haterior, kindly went over to his department and gon the original statement from which this repart to Comucil is made up. The original statement is exactly the same, the figures tot up exactly the satme, but there is written here "extra payment to without further investigation, 1 come to the conclusion that in this, which is a copy of this tabular statement, a mistake is male in putting the tigurs 1sso to 1s91, hecause this is lateded as being from 1san to LSMA. Anyway there is an error somewhere. but it is not an error in the bonly of the report, and it does not contramict the statement at all which was made in the boly of the report, that inregularities of this kind dide exist as far latek as lsa, amb that many payments were made, and I have here a statement, which was hefore the committee and from which these figures were taken, and I have the mames of persons who from 150 B to 1 siso were praid sums in the bepartment of the Interior.

Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). Letus have the amonnts.
Mr. FOSTER. And to which the boty of the repurt refers.

Mr. DAVIEs (1'.E.I.) The hom. gentleman has not read the report in any sense differently from the way it was read hy my hon. friend this afternoon. He read the very same paragraphs and the very same appendix, and he proved that while the boly of the report showed these irregularities contimied from 1875 to 1891 , and while a certain sum was alleged to have been paid covering the whole of that perion, the schedules which are attached giving the dates when the money was paid show that every dollar was paid between 1881 and 1891. That is the statement made by the hon. gentleman and repated by the Minister of Finamee, ami if there is a mistake in the repor: bronght down, he will be at liberty to correct it. But that is not the point immediately before the committee. The point is whether dir. Pereita has heen shown to have been guily of conduct which would not justify us in coting that he be reinstated amd paid his full salary. Now, the plantice comuiry made by the hon. member for Victoria, N.s. (Mhr. Mchonald) has not been amswered. The hom. gentleman plaintively emquired this afternom, ami I thought with a great deal of homesty: What am l to say to my constituents: I went the then in the beedection amb hold them the dovermment were honest and were going to pmish the wromedoers. What am l to say when 1 gro back, iffer tinding that they have nom dome so: In the spreet which the leader of the Honse math this afternomom, he never answered that plamive empuis, and a an very math ennerned for the member for Victoria, X.S. He will be met on every plationm with the statement he made that these people were groing to the punshed, amel he the fact that. instean, the Gowemment reinstated them amb ropaid them all their salaries, barring one month. Xow, Perviza is mot only charsed with the irregularity to which refer. mace has luen made, but with a more serions offeme. Ho is charged with having certitied in acomat in the name of a tictitions person athl with having ohnained money trom the pullic treasury moder false pretemses. Hi certitich the the (overnment that a certain persom, known as Ellen Bery, had done a certain immont of work. That was a false representation, ant he ohtained on that representation a chempe in Fllen Berrys name and endorsed Ellen Berres name on the eheque. There was mon such person in existence. These acts ate certainly iabletensible from any monal stamdpoint. and they cone perilonsly near. if they donot reach, what is known as a legal otfones. How is this going to be justitiod: There is min comparison at all metween the offence alleged to have heen committed by Mr. Homy which may have been inadrertently commition, and, at any rate was of a very trivial character, and the oftence committed hy Pereim. bo not let us get anay into general idisconsions as to whether irregularities were committed maler the oh regine as well as this. Take the question: Are we justifien in replacing this gentleman in the position he formerly wecupied, from which he was suspended? and are we justified, after the leanler of the (iovernment hand pledged his word, that every man guily of wrong-loing should he promished and atter that that statement had been repated by the leader of the Honse time and again, in the House and on the public platform, in doing the very reverse of what was stated! ina here we are tearing and throwing to the wimhs these pledges and promises and reinstating these sentlemen whose conduct 1 have not heari any lom. member on the other side condone. Are they prepared to say to-night that this conduct of Mi. Pereita meets with their ap. provaly If they are unt, what are we to say to the (NO) or $!(M)$ men in the (ivil service who are look. ing to see what view Parliament takes, not the riew of a committee of Comeil may take, biassed as they may he hy considerations of one kind or the other-but what view Parliament takes of condust which has leeen proved upon oath, which is admittel to be indefensille, and which, if it is allowed to go umeproved, will spread like a cankerworm through the service and will eat out of it all that is grool. If this rote is persisted in, I will join my hon. friend in roting against it as heing indefensible.

Mr. sOMFRVILLE. The Minister of Finance tries to make the committee believe that I have endeavoured to mislead it in this matter. He says he has other papers in his possession, and I think we should have those papers in order to get at the facts. I hased my statement on the report which was marle hy the committee appointed by the Privy (ommil, and I contemb that the statement I made before is bome ont liy this report in every respect, and that 1 was justified in making the remarks I did, and that the Finance Minister had no right to make the remarks he did in reference to me.

Mr. FosileR. I will say why I manle that statement. When I real that report, I understoon the hoal fenteman to state that was not the report he read from, intimating that I was not quoting correctly from that report, or that 1 was trying to palmoff another on the Honse. That is what I umlerstomel him to say. and that is what I took exception to. I am not ohjecting to his asine that scherlule in the way of a quibile, of whed, no doubt, it is cipable.

Mr. SOMERVILLEE. If the Finance Minister had read all the paragraphs of the report, he would not have male the statement he didi. He read only one pararaph of the report, and it is necessary wreal the three paragraphs in orier that the whole semse of the argmment may herentat. The paragraphs I rean were as fo?!ows. The second paragraph is:

- That from a perind dating at leat as far back as $130 \overline{0}$. a practice becran to grow up in the department under which oecasional payments for extra work were unde to permanent clerks in riohation of this elatue of the Civil Service A.t."
Paragraph 3 is ats follows:
"That duritig the years 1850-1859 inclusive this oceasional practice lacame frequent, and under it seweral permanent clecks received extrat payments, either in the name of outsiders or tietitious persons. or through temporary cterks. for work performed wholly or partly by themselves."

( latuse it is as follows:

That the whole sum thus irregularly paid to permanent oficials for extra work amounted as fir as can be ascertatined to sinnt from the year 1805 to date."
Then, when I turn to the scheclule, I find that the statement there is that the extra payments from |sS| to Is! 1 to permanent clerks amomated to S 0,017 . showing conclusively that the whole sum paid for these serviees was paid from 1881 to 1891. If the fiovernment choose to bring down reports to this House which are not correct, they are to bame, aml they camot bame the Opposition for taking one of their own reports as being correct. I do noi yet know in what respect it is incorrect. The Minister of Finance says he has some other documents, hut he has not produced them to the committee, thourh he says there were some other payments male between 1875 and 1881. In that case this report certainly camot he correct, and the fiovermment have no right to bring before the committee statements which are not correct. If they are hrought before the committee, the members of the committee have a right to rely upon them, and therefore there can be no justification for the assault made upon me by the Finance Minister. I am striving to do my duty in this matter here. as I was in the Public Accounts Committee, and if we are not to give any credit to the documents produced hy the dinvernment themselves, where are we to get the evidence". Are we to ask the gentleman who formed this committec. Mr. Foster, Mr. Haggart and Mr. Dewdney, to comeand give their evidence: This report is theirevidence. and it shows that my statements are correct. If there is any other information in the hands of the Government, we ought to have it before us lefore this item is passed. This is not a full report, if the Finance Minister has still something in his hamis, and this committee should have possession of the other facts before the vote passes.

Mr. MoNEILL. I wishto give a very short reason for the faith within me in regard to the vote which I shall give if this goes to a division. I do not choose to sit still under the accusation which has heen lourled across the flow of the House liy my hon. Friend from Prince Eilward Island to the effect that those who support this motion appowe of the conduct of these clerks. I think that was a very exaggerated statement to make amb me altogether without excuse. These gentlemen have heen punisheal. My hon. friend said in his remarts that the leader of the House had not stated that they hat heen pmished. Well, if he did not say how they were punished, my hom. friend frem Bothwell (Mr. Mills) told us how they han heen punished, and the hon. gentleman might have heard him say distinctly that in his opinion there had heen a pumishment and a sevore punishment. In other words, these gentlemen had hem suspemed and for months had been kept in a state of mental suspense not knowing whether they were to be employed again or not. I know that is true in regard to this individual whose case we are now discossing, beamse I have met him several times when he was suffering under great mental anxiety. I agree with my hon. friend from Bothwell (Nr. Mills) rather than with my friend from Prince Edward Island (Mr. Davies) in reference to that matter. Now, so far as the charges that have been hrought against this gentleman are concemed, I am quite sure there is no member of the Heuse on either side, who for one moment will defend his conduct: but on the other hand I do not think there is any advantage, and there is certainly no generosity, in exaggerating the misconduct of that gentleman or any other gentleman in the Civil serVice; and when it is said that his offence approaches morally to a legally criminal offence. I think it is going a very long way indeed. We know very well that there was work done and that the money that has been paid was pain for work done.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. No.

Mr. McNEILL. It has never heen denied that there was work done.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. It has been deniei : I have read the documents to show that work was not done.

Mr. MeNEILL. There has been no attempt mate to prove that work was not done: and the course that this gentleman took, however irregular it, was, however improper it was, at all events, was in execution of the work which he was permitted to do. It was admitted that he had the permission of the late Minister of the department to do the work : and while he was guilty of these irregularities we must remember, however reprehensible they were-and no one on this side of the House for one moment will deny that they were reprehensihle-we must remember that he was guilty of these irregularities largely to prevent inconvenience accruing to his chief in the department. One of the difficulties to be overcome was that if any individual in the department got extra work, others would expect the same, and there was an understanding that he should be allowed to do this extra work as quietly as possible. No that while it was altogether irregular, and while it was altogether improper, I think it was a very harsh thing to speak of this man having committed fratud in the sense in which you speak of a crime. For my part. I very much regret that expressions of this kind have lieen made use of in reference to a mamber of civil servants unless they were very much better foumdel than in this catse they are.

Mr. MULOCK. My hon. frienal from North Bruce (Mr. Mo Neill) certainly feels under some emharrassment when he intimates that he is obliged to give a vote in favour of this transaction. He has described it as inregular and improper, and one that had to he carried out as quietly as possible, to use his won worls, I suppose as being one that would not stand the light of day. Therefore I can well mulerstaml both he and other hom. gentlemen feeling embarrassed at leing obliged to condone a tramsaction of this chamater. But 1 desite to haing back the disenssion to the main issue hefore the committee. It is not whether some fonmer Administration from which the people withdrew contidence, did ehe same things. I do not unterstand that the partice of previons governments in their administration of the departments, is to be a precedent upon which subsequent governments shall estahlish policies or carry out methorls of government. The very fact that the fovermment that is said to have dome wrong is defeated, should be in itself a reason for their successors ceasing to deproll upon precedents set by them. I know not, nor do I care, whether any govermment did secret things on not, but we are face to face with the question, not whether a civil servant, as the home anember for North Brace very correctly says, did a legal thing with the sanetion of his chief: it is not a question about an individual, it is a question as to the proper administration of public atfairs. My hon. friend for North Bruce has put the question properly when he suid that these men having done these things with the sanction of their chief, are not themselves the blamable persons, hut those who anthorized them, aye, who practically, hy their acquiescence, ordered the transaction in question, are the responsible parties. T': :- efore we come hack to the ques. tion that the individuals are not the responsible persons before Parliament. The persons accountable to Parliament are the Arministration, not the individuals who do the work. The Govermment of the day is the responsible party, and it is the Government of the clay who in this case is responsible ; it is their trial, not the trial of a few unfortunate civil servants, that is being discussed here. Therefore I cari understand my hon. friend being obliged, being compelled, by the party whip, to stifle his conscience and to vote in support of his chief. He knows full well that he has been coerced, he is not a free man in this transaction any more than my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule.)

Some hon. MEMBERS. Orrler.

Mr. BOW ELL. You have no right to say that.
Mr. MULOCK. Well, we will admit that he is a free man. Let him act as a free man when the time comes. The hon. member for East Grey became extremely virtuous in regard to a previous vote here. He never uttered a word while Mr. Burgess's case was under discussion, but after the item hard passed hefore this committee, then he ventured to express an independent opinion when it would not do any harm to the Alministration. And so we have our friend here asking for absolution in advance for the vote he is about to give. Now, I say the principle involved is simply this: If an Aet of Parliament is passed laying down a certain rule of conduct for the service of the comtry, that rule cannot be departed from except on the responsibility of the Administration, and if it is departed from with the sanction of the Arministration then the Administration is responsible, they are the blamable parties, and it is not the unfortmate individuals whose case we shoull discuss so much as it is the responsibility of the fiovernment. Therefore I return to the statement I made before recess, that in this case, primarily, the present Minister of the Interior is the responsible person, and with him his colleagues who now have mate his cause their own. It was an improper thing for the Minister of the Interior, who was on trial, as it were, in this issue, to have been one of the sub-committee to consider these questions and to pass judgment upon them. When it became necessary to investigate transactions of this character, tonching as they did his alministration, a regard for propriety aione ought to have suggested to him that the question ought not to have heen enpuired into ly himself. He might have allowed the Alministration, if regardfal for appearances, to have insisted that the enquiry should be conducted by persons who were not themselves on trial. Fet we find here that a member of the forernment sits in trial on his own case. If this issue should turn adversely to the Administration, the one primarily to suffer is the Minister of Interior, and we are asked now to pronounce judgment on a report founded upon his judgment, he, in fact, asking the House and the country to whitewash him, to vindicate his administration on a report made ostensibly by him in a judicial and independent character. That is not the kind of a report that ought to have been made, and he saw the weakness of the situation when it became necessary to make an enguiry under such circumstances. The question, therefore, in my jurgment is, whether the Acts of Parliament are to be lived up to or not, whether they can be avoidel, whether the Administration of the day is superior to Parliament. If so, what are we doing here: What is my hon. friend, who boasts so much of regard for British institutions, cioing, when he has demanded that Parliament should abnegate its functionsand let the Administration overridelegislation? Are we but a registry office; are we but echoes of an Administration, that we should stand here and saty that Parliaments mayenact, Int Arministrations will do: What would becone of the laws if the judiciary should ignore them: The jurticiary is the only institution which stands between us and wrone, the only protection we have either in regrad to liberty or property. What is legishation for. and what is the use of a statute-book, if an Administration can ignore it as the present Arministration are now doing? That is the issue involver. I say it is a grave one, and let this Honse condone this transaction and it compromises the honour of the country and the system of adhinistration. For my part, I repuliate all responsibility, for I care not what precertent hom. gentlemen opposite may establish. The cruide for my political conduct in the administration of the affiairs of the coontry is that the Acts of larliament must be lived up to, so long as Parliament allows them to remain on the statute-hook. That should he the guide of every legislator who proposes to be true and loyal to his conntry, and the member for Brace (Mr. McNeill) shoull be the last one under those circumstances to manifest that disloyal spirit and to ignore those statutes that have received the solemm sanction of Pirliament, in farour of a political party of the tay.

Mr. MeNEILLL. I very mach regret that I have fallen so low in the opinion of the hon. gentleman opposite. He has changed his view in respect to my conduct in this House from that he expressed last session, when from the very same seat on the last occasion I spoke, he said he knew me tow well to suppose that for a moment I was actuated by anything else but conseientious convictions.

Mr. MULOCK. I think sotorlay.
Mr. MeNEILL. To-day the hon. gentleman sitys I am not a freeman, but an whipped into line by the party whip. His opinion is that that statement is consistent with the view that I was acting conscientiously. If these are his views, I do not know that a mind so constituted is one that I need deal with rery long. These two views are entirely contradictory.

Mr. MULO(K. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will parlon me, but I must leave the chamber.

Mr. NoNEILL. As the hon. gentleman has found it comvenient to leave, I will not occupy the attention of the House longer.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. I want to call the at tention of the House to this fact. The Minister of Finance made a statement and he based it on a paper he had in ins possession. I have asked the Minister of Finance to give me an opportunity to look at that paper, and I think the committee should be placed in possession of it. I am not a very old parliamentarial and I do not know what is done in these matters ; lut when, in discussing a matter of this kind, a Minister of the Crown producesin this House a paper which forms the basis of his argument, any member has a right to have that paper put in his possession, in order that he may le able, equally with the Minister, to discuss it intelligently. The Minister of Finance had no right to refuse this committee the paper from which he quoted, and before this item is passed we should be put in possession of the information which the Minister said he obtained from that paper. I therefore ask that the item stand until we oltain it.

Mr. Mulock.

Mr. Mr.MULLLEN. It is minfir for the Minister to refuse to allow hon. members to use that paper. I think the member for Brant should be permitted an opportunity to answer the hom. men:ber's allegation by being permitted to use that statement. I desire to ask the Minister of the Interior a guestion: Wias Mr. Pereira patil up to 30th June last for actingas Private secretary wo he Minister of the Interior and superintemlent Gencral of Indian Affairs:

Mr. DEWDNFY. I think that was the case. I am not very sure as to the date. hat 1 think he was patid up to 3uth June latst.

Mr. MeMOLLEFS. I shomblike tw know if Mr. Pereima actually did the work as private secertary, or did amother persen do it:

Mr. INFWINFA. He lid whatever work I gave him to do in that regatol. I cammet say from memory what he didi, becanse he was abting at one time as private secretary for the beparmment of the Interior. and he did work for both lataches of the department. Hedid a certain almonat of work in both these departments.

Mr. MIILS (Buthwell). Then the Minister of the Interion has wo prisate secretaries: one is secretiary commected with the Deparment of Indian Affairsand the other is serertary the bepartment of the Interior:

Mr. InEWINFI. At the timetheapropriation wats made the bepratment of Imdian Athatrs was not commected with the beparment of the Interior, but when they were miten. the right thave two secretaries terminater.

Mr. NOMERVILLE. Is it mot a fact that during a purtion of the time the Minister hat three private secretaries: I am so informed.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant.) I lo not think it is pertinent to thisynestion whet her like irregularities under a previons Arministration would change the comdition of aftiairs: but as a mater of information, 1 would like to know what the law was in that respect. If 1 milerstood the Dinister of . lustice rightly, he said there had l:een no change in the that the law was jusi the same prion as it was suhserjuently.

Sir .JOHN THOMPSON. What I satil was that the prohibition was just as strict in the Act of l8tis as in the Aot of 185.0 agamet regnlar elerks receiving extra payments:

Mr. PATERSON (Batnt.) I wanted to know What his interpretation of the law was. becanse the impression seemed to hate prevailed in the minds of the witnesses before the P'ublic Accounts Committee that it was changed by the Act of lsxig. When Mr. Henry was examined he stated as follows:--

" By Mr. Taylar :

"In looking over the accounts for monevs paid, can you ascertain exactly when this practice was first in operation, whether in 1871 when you commenced, or what year after? Have you any way of recollecting that?I got work in that way in the Fimance Department in $187 \%$.
" Blis Mr. Hoster:
"For what work?-Counting notes.
"That is the practice to-ilay? - When did you go into the Interior Department?-In 1873.

- Did you get any extra work in that department?-I did; prior to the Civil Service Act going intu effect.
" By Mr. Somerville:
"It would not be contrary to law before that Act passed?-No.
" $13 y$ Mr. Tuylor:
" Did you get any extra work in 1874?-I do not know that I did.
$\because$ In 1875"- I cannot say.
"You have no reason to believe you did not, over and above your salary?-I have no reason for believing, but I do not know that I did. In fact, $I$ an almost certain $I$ did not get anything.

Did any of the other clerks?-I do not know; I cannot speak for them.
" You do not know whether they did or did not?-They may have done so.
"By Mr. Pateryma (Brant):
"Would it be contrary to law previous to 1882?-I do not think so.
"But after that it was irregular?-Irregular and illegal."
That was the impression that was on the mind of that witness, Mr. Henry, viz., that it was not irregular or illegal prior to the Civil Service Act of 1882.

Mr. BOWELL. That was the impression of the whole committee until the law was looked up.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). That is a point I do not understand. Bearing upon this question I think that Mr. Burgess took something of the same view, and on page 28 of his evidence he stys:

{ }^{-} \text {Bu/ Mr. Tanlor: }

"But in 1876 permanent clerks were occasionally emploved overtime and paid for it?-I know that some of the clerks of the Interior Department were employed overtime in the Finance Department.
" lis Mr. P'etersion (Brant) :
" But anything before 1852 would not be irregular, so far as those payments were concerned?-I sumpose not : on the mere ground of the law; there was no irregularity in paying those extra clerks."
That impression was on my mind, and it evidently was on the mind of the Deputy Minister administering the affairs of this department, namely, that what was proper lefore 1882 would be irregular and improper after 1882. The Minister now tells us that he was mistaken as I understand. However, that does not affect the question that is under consideration at the present time. The question is that this amount be stricken from the Estimates, and in reading the evidence that was given by Mr. Pereira himself, it dues seem to me that it is case that would be hard to justify. Not only is it difticult to justify the reinstating of him in his position, but still worse the paying of his salary during the time of his suspension. I have no desire to be unduly hard upon any one; hut the testimony of this gentleman was that he selected the work himself, that he took it home, that the work was said to be done by him, and he certified to it, no one else having any supervision of it at all. The question was asked:

It does seem to me that from his own testimony it was a very serious case indeed. When this work was being done, if he thought it was right why hesitate to go on and use the name of his wife for these payments, why change to the name of Ellen Berry? It was claimed that work and value was given for the money; but he says himself that he gave out the work, that he alone certified to the work, and that he did it to the amount of $$ 280$, in his wife's name. He states that subsequent to that, finding it became known in the repartment and that people talked about it, he put the cheque in the name of this fictitious person, certified it was done by her, had a cheque drawn out in her name, endorsed that fictitious name upon the cheque and drew the money. Taking the gentleman's own evidence and giving him all the alrantage you can in reference to it, it does seem that if he is treated in the way the Government proposes it will tend very much to demoralize the public service. I am at a loss to see, after listening to all the explanations given by the Ministers, upon what ground they proceed in this matter.

Mr. sombr VILLE. I think we ought to have the document which the Minister of Finance say: he based his report upon, before we have a vote on this matter.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) The appeal which the hon. gentleman makes to the Minister of Finance is one which should meet with response. The Minister of Finance unlertook to administer a reboke of a severe character, and I humbly submit an unjustifiable rebuke, to the hon. member for North Brant (Mr. Nomerville) for a remark he made across the House. He proposed to answer the argoment that the hon. gentleman had made, hased upon an official return which the Government had brought down, by reading from another official drocument which he satid he helf in his hand, and which was not laid on the Table and has not yet been laid on the Table. The hon. gentleman whose construction of the report was impugnenl, asked the Minister of Finance to send that docmment across the House and the hon. gentleman has refused to do so, so far. Only one inference can he drawn. I do not think it is it courteous thing to refuse, nor do I think it is consistent with the practice of Parlianent to refuse to exhibit the clocument. I do not remember a case in my experience in Parliament-and it is just as long as the experience of the Minister of Finance-in which a Minister of the Crown reading an official document to contradict another official document which had heen previously brought down, refused to give that document into the hands of his opponent. As to its being discourteous I submit it to the hon. gentleman's own sense, and as to its being against parliamentary rules I would submit it to hon. gentlemen who have sat here longer than I have, whether they have ever known a case in parliamentary history similar to that now before the House.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). There can be no doubt whatever of the rule. It is clearly laid down, that when an hon. member undertakes to read from any public document which has not been laid upon the Table, it is the right of the House to have that document laid upon the Table.

Mr. FOSTER. Where is the authority?

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). There is no doubt about the anthority.

Mr. FOSTER. I would like to hear it.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). I will turn it up for you.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). If there be no legal authority I think a sense of what is just and right and manly would, at any rate, lead the Minister to do that.

Mr. FOSTER. May be our sense of what is right and just and manly differs. The hon. gentleman from Queen's (Mr. Davies), in the usual style of fable adopted lately-not lately either-on the other side of the House, says that I read from an official tocument-

Mr. D.AVIES (P.E.I.) I said you read from what you said was an official document.

Mr. FOSTER. I understood the hon. gentleman to say that I read from an official document. If the hon. gentleman says his words were that I rearl from what I said was an official document, that I must deny.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) What I said and what I intender to say was that the hon. gentleman had read from a document which he said had come from the department.

Mr. FOSTER. Well, I am within the judgment of the House. I quite well remember what the words were. The hon. gentleman, as I understood him, said that I had read from an official docmment. I did not read from an official document: I read from a private memorandum which I had in my possession at the time, and from notes from which the report was made up. The hon. nember for Erant may have a very strong liking to exploit the private papers and memoranda of other hon. gentlensen ; he yill not get mine.

Mr. DAVIEs (P.E.I.) Did the hon. gentleman say, or did he not say, that he was realing from a document from the Department of the Interior, and did he not say that it was the original:

Mr. FOSTER. I did not say it.
Mr. MILIS (Bothwell). I understood his statement to be that he was reading from a document which had been prepared in the lepartment of the Interior, and from which the schedule in the report laid before the House was copied.

Mr. McGREGOR. And that there was a difference in the dates.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Whether or no, the case is perfectly clear. The Minister of Finance undertakes to contradict the hon. member for North Brant on the faith of a particular document in his hands, from which he makes extracts. According to all parliamentary usage, there is no doubt that when a Minister of the Crown chooses to produce and quote from a document for the purpose of contradicting another hon. member, the least he can do as a matter of courtesy and fairplay is to give his opponent the means of seeing on what grounds he makes the contradiction. The only inference to be drawn from the action of the Finance Minister is that the document, if put into the hands of the hon. member for North Brant, would contradict the Minister's own statement.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The hon. member for South Oxford has to go a long way from the facts to draw that inference. The Minister of Finance did not undertake to contradict the hon. nember for North Brant from that document at all. He contradicted him from the report.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. He failed to contradict him from the report.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) He failed to contradict him from the report ; he did it from the private document.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Both hon. gentlemen may assert that, but every one who was in the House at the time knows that the Minister of Finance rose in consequence of the assertion of the hon. member for Queen's, P.E.I., that the hon. member for North Brant had proved from the report that these irregularities had not begun at a certsin date. The Minister of Finance declared that the report proved nothing of the kind, and for the purpose of establishing that, read from the report two passages that went back to 1875 . He afterwards referred to the appendix to the report, which he admitted gave some colour to the statement of the hon. gentleman that the report proved what he stated, but he went on to say that the appendix was erroneous, and in doing that made reference to a private document. But he did not use the private document for the purpose of contradicting the hon. member for North Brant at all.

Mr. LAURIFR. Here is the rule laid down-that no member of Parliament is to quote from a document unless he is prepared to lay it on the Table of the House. I quote from May, page 378, the edition of 1883:
"Another rule or principle of debate may be here added. A Minister of the Crown is not at liberty to read or quote from a despatch or other state paper not before the House, unless he be prepared to lay it on the Table. This rest raint is similar to that rule of evidence, in courts of law. which prevents counsel from citing documents which hare not been produced in evidence. The principle is so reasonable that it has not been contested: and when the objection has been made in time, it has been generally acquiesced in."

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. LAURIER. Could anybody suppose, when the Minister of Finance undertook to contradict a document which he himself had brought down as an official paper by reference to another document, that he would not be ready to place that document before the House". If any one had supposed that he would quote a paper with the intention of putting it in his pocket afterwards, objection would have been taken at the time; but no one supposed that. The hon. gentleman now says that he did not quote from a public document, and that he is not bound to place it on the Table of the House. Well, if it is a private paper, what evidence can it have against an official document? Are we to have public documents brought doun by the Govermment contradicted by private papers: This is a procedure which cannot be tolerated is the House of Commons or in any public assembly in a constitutionally governed country.

Mr. MLLS (Bothwell). This document in question cannot be regarded as a private document. It is a document prepared in a department by a Minister of the Crown in his official capacity or by his order, for the purpose of enabling the committee to prepare the report which they have laid before the House, It is a part of the public proceedings comected with the particular transaction which resulted in that report.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. What makes you suppose that?

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). The Minister of Finance said so.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. No, no.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). I beg the hon. gentleman's pardon. I was listening attentively to hinn, and he said that it was from that document that the appendix to the report was taken, and he referred to that document to show that the date on the appendix was a mistake. How do we know that the dates in these two documents are not the same? Surely there is nothing prepared in the department which is not official.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Mr. Chairman, I would like to have your ruling on the point.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I understand that hon. members have been discussing a document that is in the hands of the Minister of Finance. There is only one way of deciding the point, according to the authorities; it is to ask the hom. Minister if that document is a private or a public document. I cannot give any decision until I get an answer to that question, and I now ask che hon. Minister whether that document is a private document or a public document?

Mr. FOSTER. A private document.
Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.
Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I am bound to take the word of the hon. Minister that it is a private document. Now, the authority which we follow on parliamentary procedure in this House (Bourinot) states :
"It has been laid down by the highest authorities that when a Minister of the Crown quotes a public document in the House, and founds upon it an argument or assertion, that document, if called for, ought to be produced. But it is allowable to repeat to the House information which is contained in a private communication. When such private papers are quoted in the House, there is no ruling requiring thein to be laid on the Table."
As the hon. Minister of Finance says that it is a private document, I cannot rule that it should be laid on the Table.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. I think you are justified in ruling as you have done from the authority you have guoted, but I think we should now establish another practice.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I think the point is disposed of.

Mr. somerville. I am discussing this vote. We have this established, that a Minister of the Crown can produce before this House a document prepared by a committee appointed by the Privy Council and attested by them as correct, with their signatures attached, and yet when it is proven clearly and conclusively that that document sets forth a certain set of facts, the hon. Minister is at liberty to say that he has in his overcoat pocket, down at his house or hotel, some statement which will show that the official report is not worthy of credence. If this system of parliamentary government is to he tolerated, we will have these men set up as dictators. A Minister may bring down a blue-book or official report and place it on the Table of Parliament, and then, when it is proven in discussion that statements are made in it of a certain character, the Minister can say he has a little document in his pocket which is of a private character, and which he refuses to produce, contradicting his own ofticial blue-hook. This is exactly the position taken by the hon. Minister ; and if it he correct, we ought to understand that the ciovermment are not responsi. ble to the people. We ought to understand that their blue-looks and official documents are not to be relied upon, but may be contradicted by any private document which a Minister of the Crown his concealed somewhere and which he will not produce. I think that is a very small position for the Ninister of Finance or any member of the (invernment to take. If there were any manliness in the Minister of Finance or the Minister of Justice, they would at once produce this document in confirmation of their statements. If they do not, we are at liberty to think what we like about its contents. We have to accept the public dowuments, but are at liberty to think what we like alout the other. We are at liberty to think that the Minister of Finance has nut cuotel the other document correctly, since he will wot prownee it, and we have the right to assume, in view of his statement, that no depenlence can tre placed on his official document. I do not care whether I am infringing upon parliamentary rules or mot, but make what I believe to be a correct statement in the matter. The Minister of Finance may say that I have insulted him and the Honse, hut I have said what I believe to le correct, and I maintair that his position cammot be justified.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not intem to be insulteid by my hon. frient. I lid not ask him to apologize to me but rather to the House or committee, and now, after this agomizing appeal from him, I think I must relent and ask the page to take this document over to the hon. gentleman.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. I would like to know hy whom this statement, which hats just heen hamed to me, was made up:

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. The hom. gentleman has lyeen tohl it is a private dowment, and I do not suppose he has the right to insist on the name being given of the person who wrote it.

Mr. Somervilles. Now that it is prolucel, we have a right to ask questions alont it. It is in the hands of the House now, and we ought to be informed as to the writer.

Mr. LaNDERKIN. Very likely it was prepared by Ellen Berry.
Mr. Somerville. This purports to be a document showing payments made to permanent. clerks from 1875 to 1591.

Mr. FOSTER. Does not that satisfy you?
Mr. SOMERVILLE. It would suit me better if the hon. gentleman would give a little more information about it. It foots up the same amount as in the report, $$ 9,017.34$.

An hon. MEMBER. Signed by whom:
Mr. SOMERVILLE. Not signell at all.
Item agreed to-yeas, $\mathbf{6 0}$; nays, 39.

II. II. Turner. ............................ $$ 15066$

Sir KICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What are the circumstances comected with the Turner case? No dates heing given, I do not know exactly how much of this $5,+44.56$, which seems to have been pain extria to Mr. Turner, was received for purely extra work. I should like the hon. gentleman to explain the circmastances under which Mr. Turner Was suspended.

Mr. DEWVINES: Mr. Turner was suspemded immediately after the evidence closed before the Public Accounts Committee last year, and the reasom for his suspension is contained in the evidence.

Mr. DEWDNEY. Page 64.
Sir Rl(HARI) (ARTWRIGHT. What I wanted more particularly to know was how Mr. Turner catme to receise solarge a sums as $\mathbf{5} 2,44.66$ for extra work. It is hy far the largest sum in the whole statement subinitted to the House, and I presume there is some explanation to be given why Mr. Turner should have been enabled to obtain so large an amomat as that. Apparently it would appear to be as mach as the man's whole salary shouh have amounted to for five or six years.

Mr. DEWWNES. It extended over a number of yeats, 1 forget how many. He hat been in the service for a momber of years before I took charge of the department. I do not know any of the particulars comuected with his service more that iu regaral to the other clerks, but he lin more work than any of the others.
sir RICHARD) ('ARTWRIGHT. What is his proition?

Mr. IFWIINES. He is in the Accountant's Brameh.

Sir RIC'HARD (ARTWRHCHT. Then, in aldition to his saliary as a permanent clerk, which I supmose might he about Sl,onM, he received this amomet in six or seven years?

Mr. FONTHER. It is an average of 8349 per anmum.

Mr. HAlidiAR'T. It brought his salary up to alout Si, (HW).

Nir RI(HARI) CARIWRIGHT. That would be about on per cent adlitional. Was this a case in which there was any substitution of names:

Mr. SOMERITLLE. We might as well have the information as th these payments. I quote from the report of the investigation lefore the Public Accounts Committee and from Mr. Turner's own eridence as given at page 9 . When he was called and examined, he said he kept the ledgers. The next question was:
*There appears in the Auditor General's report an amount paid to Joseph Wright for extra work $\mathbf{3} 237.50$, and I understand from Mr. Burgess, the Deputy Minister, that you are the party that has got this money?-Yes, I got that mones.
"How did it come that you entered it in Joseph Wright's name ?-In the first place, before my wife died-
"Just a mument. When did your wife die?-Unfortunately, I have lost both. It was my first wife who did the work, and after she died the name of Joseph Wright was substituted for hers. He went to the old country, and I believe is since dead.

When did she die?-About fire years ago. I married again and lost my second wife.
"It was after your first wife died that you substituted Josenh Wright's name for that of your first wife? -Just that.
"How long has Joseph Wright been dead ?-I said I believe he is dead.
"How long is it since he went to the old country? About a year, I think.

- What was he employed at in the city while here? He was not employed at anything.
"Did he live with you?-He did not live with me.
"Was he a man of means?-Well, no; not a man of any great means.
"He must have had some way of living?-Yes: I suppose he had. I only saw him occasionally.
"How often did you used to see him?-Not every often.
"Did he ever do any of this work?-Certainly not. He is a connection of my first wife's. He never did any of the work : that is what suggested it to me.
"Who suggested it to you to put it in the name of some other person?-I do not know.
"It must have been somebody?-I think the suggestion came from Mr. Douglas.
"What Mr. Douglas?-He was at that time the assistant secretary of the department. I think the suggestion came from him.
$\because$ Did you submit Mr. Douglas's suggestion to anybody? - No, sir $\because$ Then you adopted that name from that out?-Yes.
"Here are Joseph Wright's cheques. Who signed the name on the backs of the cheques?-I did.
"̈ Hou put Joseph W right's name there?-I did.
"Have you a power of attoriey from Joseph Wright?No.
$\therefore$ Had you any authority from Joseph Wright to do that?-0h, ves.
" Iou endorsed Joseph Wright's name after his death? - No, sir ; I do not know that he is dead.
"You said he was?-1 said I believed he was : I had heard a report that he was dead.
"Bo I understand you to say that this Joseph Wright had nu existence at all ?-Oh, yes; at one time. I believe he may have now.
"What relationshin did he bear to you ?-He was a distant connection of my wife's.
" Did he do this work for you and you received the mones ?-I did the work, and I received the money.
$\because$ And used his name? And used his name.
"And subsequenitly after he left this countrs, you signed the name of Joseph Wright ?-Oh, yes, but I think only once.

You ay he left this country akout a year and a half ago?-About 15 months ago. I won't say exactly.
"But Joseph Wright did not do any of this work ?-Not any.
"And the work was done by yourself?-I won't say that
"Who did the balance?-The late balance?
"During the last five years?-I did it myself.
" But practically speaking Mr. Joseph Wright, as a person doing this work, had no existence at all. You used his name ?-Yes.
"When he went to the old country, did he give you permission to use his name?-Not particularly.

* But you used his name ?-Certainly.
"Who was Joseph Wright; what was his business or calling? - He was a school teacher, over in the States.
"Was he not residing here ?-No. He came to see us once or twice.
"During the whole of this five years you say Wright visited you only two or three times?- Yes.
" And during the whole of this time, Wright's name has figured on the backs of these cheques?-No; because there hare been no cheques issued for the last fifteen months. You have to take that period off.
" You commenced using Joseph Wright's name about fire years ago?-Yes. I was told it was used for five years, but it is not orer four; it is only three and a-half. "What bank are those cheques drawn on?-The Bank of Montreal.
"To bearer or order?-To order.
"Did you draw this money personally? ? I drew it personally
"Did the bank know you?-I do not know. They always paid the cheques; they always paid my salary cheque tou:
"Will the bank pay cheques here that anybody presents? -I do not know. The cheques may not have been given me at the same time.
"Could you give us Mr. Joseph Wright's present ad-dress?-I think so.
" What is it?-3 Victoria Terrace, Lightcliff, near Halifax. Yorkshire, England.
"I understand you to say he was dead?-I said he might be. If he is not you will hear from him at that address.

That is some of the evidence. I will not weary the House hy realing any more. This money was drawn in the name of a man who taught school in the States and came over here three or four times in five years and visited the man who drew the money in his name, and during the whole time this man signed the chegues with Joseph Wright's name, presented the cheques at the bank, and drew the money, amounting to over $$ 2,000$. If this practice is worthy of the commendation of the Government, and if the gentleman who was guilty of this is to le reinstated in office, of course the Opposition cannot say much about it. The (iovernment must take the responsilility as they have the ruling of this matter. As to the dowoment which has been sent over by the Ministerof Finance, it is impossible to gather any information from this, for the reason that there are no dates given of the payments made to these men. I fancy, from the nameson the list, that theseare the names of men who have nearly all, I believe all, drawn money which goes to make up this sum of 89,017 since 1881 . If the Minister has any other information which would lead this committee to understand that any portion of this money was paid prior to 1881 , I would like lim to present it to this Honse, hecause I think we ought to be put in possession of that information. The Finance Minister now claims, in opposition to the statement made in his own ofticial document, that some of this money was paid prior to 1881. Now, it some of this money was paid prior to that date, he must have some information to lead him to make that statement, and I would like him, for the information of this committee, to give the name of any gentleman here who drew any of this money prior to the year 1881 .

Mr. DEWDNEY. I cangive you from recollection the names of Mr. (layton, Mr. Rogers and Mr. Henry.

Mr. MILLS (Pothwell). I notice that the names of those parties who are on that list are nearly all names of men who have been appointed since 1880 . Now, there is Mr. Steers, one of the names on that list, who was for a short time in 1878 taken into the department on account of his being in distressed circumstances, and he was able to do some extra work for which he was paid day by day. He was taken into the Surveyor-Generals Branch of the public service. That rule would mot apply to him, at all erents.

Mr. DELIDNEY. Why:

Mr. MILLS ( Bothwell). Because he was not one of the permanent civil-servants to whom the Civil Service Act would apply. Now, Mr. Rogers is one of the parties mentioned who, the hon. gentlemen says, received pay prior to 1881 . Mr. Rogers was a witness before the Public Accounts Committee last year, and I think he was questioned with regard to that very matter, and ithink that his statement made before the committee does not bear out that statement. If he has made such it statement it would be interesting to have the evidence before the commissiouers on that subject, and it would be interesting to know for what he was paid.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. I may say that one of the names mentioned by the Minister of the Interior has been erased from this list, that of Mr. Clayton.

Mr. DEWDNEY. Yes, that was for the reason that he drew his money before 1881, at the time these were included in that memorandum. Mr. Clayton, I think, drew his in 1875, therefore he did not come within that memoramiun.

Mr. somerville. Then I am to understand from that statement of the Minister that his name was erased from the document because he drew his money before 1881?

Mr. DEWDNFI'. Yes, he was not finel a month's salary.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. For the reason that he drew his money before 1881. Were any of the others on this list in the same position ?
Mr. DEW DNES. No, none of them.
Mr. somerville. Then, if that he the ease, it must be evident to this committee that Mr. Clayton being the only man who drew this money before 1881 , and his name being struck off, there call be no other names on this list whe drew money previous to 1881 .
Mr. DEWVINEY. They might have drawn it after 1881.
Mr. somerville. That is precisely what we are contending, what I contented all along. I have always said that the Minister of the Interior is the most honest-minded man in the diovermment. I have admired him, and although there were many things to investigate in his department, I have admired his camdon. Why, a session or two ago he got up and Neclareal that he got his Ceological Report printed in Montreal, liecause he could get it done cheaper tham in the Printing Bureau. Now, he has let the whole eat out of the hag. He tells us that Mr. Claytom was struck off this list because he drew his pay lefore 18si. Now, the only deduction to be drawn from that is that every other name on that list is the name of a person who drew the money after Issi. Consequently the contention that I advanced some time ago that there was mo money paid, aceording to the ofticial report mate hy this investigating committee, from 157.5 until 1 sis , was cerrect. Now, if that deduction cam be drawn-and there can be no other-the statements which were made by the Minister of Finance were baseless amil gromilless, and not supported ly the facts.
Mr. MILL.S (Bothwell). I think the committee ought not to pass over umoticed the paper that the Minister of Finance has laid on the Table. That paper shows aceording to the statement just now made by the Minister of the Interior as to those irregularities heginning about the year $18 . \pi$, that when the statement was made up, between $187 . \mathrm{an}$ a 1881 there had been the one payment to Mr. Clayton, and that was a payment of sow, that all the other payments were male since the beginning of 1881, and that paragraph in the report celating to irregularities earlier than 1881, is based upon the one single payment to Mr. Claytom. Then there is another thiag shown, and that is that the appendix to the report of 1881 is a correct statement, both as to dates and as to amounts. The Minister of Finance said that the appendix to the report was erroneous, that the date must be inaccurate, that the commissioners, when they made their report, must have made a mistake, that the House could not rely upon the accuracy of that statement, and that he would give correct statements from the paper which was in his possession from which he said that appendix had been taken. Now thisstatement exactly correspondswith the appendix, except as to the one statement that 500 was paid to Mr. Chayton, which the Minister of the Interior says is struck out in pencil, as we saw it on that paper, hecause it was paid at an earlierdate than 1881. So we have now an opportunity of estimating the whole force and effect and meaning of the statement that these irregularities began at an earlier perion than 1881. The hon. gentleman gives three names of parties that were in the department at that time. I do not dispute that. But the hom. gentleman will see that Mr. Rogers's name and Mr. Henry's name are not struck out, that the amounts paid them are not struck out, and the statement in the appendix to the report he brought down, shows that payments to them were male in 1881, and subsequently to that time, not hefore, hecause if they had been made hefore they would have shared the same fate as the payment maile to Mr. Clayton.

Mr. DFWDDEFY. No, you are wrong there, because some of them had to suffer, and did not receive any money at all, for having certified to those who did receive it irregularly.

Mr. SOMEREILLE. That is another hameh of the subject, and I think the camlid statement of the Minister ought to be accepted. He says that the reason this inan's name was struck out was becaluse he got his money before 1881. That proves conclusively that the type-written document was a correct record, notwithstamling the statement fhat was made by the Minister of Finance.

Mr. TAYLOR. I want to correct a statement made by the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) in reference to Mr. Rogers. If he will look at page 108 he will timd that Mr. Rogers was examined, and Mr. Somerville asked this question:
"Did sou ever get any money for extra work performed? Where?-I received extra money in the department during 21 years."
I go to page 110:
"The custom which you spoke of, and which, in your opinion, was second nature, as you put it, was it prevailing in the department since 180 ? ?-Of giving extra work to permanent men?

Yes.-They used to do it. I used to get extra work in the time of Sir Richard Cartwright, when he was Minister of Finance. There were men who were first-class clerks engaged then in destroying notes. It was confidentini work. They would come on at 7 o'clock in the evening and work until 11 or 1 ?.
" By Mr. Tunlor:
"Did they draw the money in their uwn name"-Their own.
"By Mr. Srmerville:
"There was no necessity for their trying to evade the law?-No: because it was not considered wrong. It was considered right for a man to improve his time, just as, men in the Civil Service use their time for literary work." I read this to contradict the statement made by the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) that Mr. Rogers had not drawn extra piay. The fact is he did draw it from both departments, and he swore it was the prevailing practice for twenty-one years.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Allow me to mention that there was no objection to Mr. Rogers, who was not, if my memory serves me, a clerk in the Finance Department, but a clerk in another department, receiving extra pay for extra work done in another department.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Ves.
Mr. Mills (Bothwell).

Sir RICHARI) (CARTWRIGHT. The statute allowed that to be done. What was prohibited was, that extra work should be done by a clerk in the department to which he belonged. That was the law, which is a totally different thing. It was the practice and the legal practice that a clerk who belonged to one department could do extra work in another department. The prohibition extended to clerks being paid for extra work in their own department, and Mr. Rogers did net violate the Act.

Mr. MILLs (Bothwell). That it was the law and that it was right and proper is perfectly olvious. What was the reason of the law? The reason of the prohibition which prevailed ayainst a man undertaking to obtain extra work in his department was to prevent him remaining idle cluring the hours when he should be employed in order that he might find extra work after hours. That can be established heyond all controversy and has been the practice in some of the departments. The employment of a man after hours in a department to which he does not ielong was no interference with the policy of the law, becanse it did not affect the work in the department of which he was a regular clerk.

Mr. TAYLOR. Then Mr. Rogers was in the Department of the Interior: a permanent clerk there. If the hon. gentleman will look at page 111, he will find what Mr. Rogers stated in his evid. ence:
"Br, Mr. Paterson (Brant):
"Was the account made out in your own name or ansbody else's in the time of Sir Richard Cartwright?-There was just a pay sheet.
"Was the pay sheet signed in your name. or was it signed in the name of some person else :-I do not think so.
:- Do you believe that prior to the passing of the Ciril Service Act any extra work you did was paid for in the mame of any other person? -It may have been. I did not get ans in my department since. It was only subsequent to the death of my brother in the North-West.

Why did you say this custom grow out of a custom which had prevailed in the department prior to the passing of the Act?-I think Istated what was quite rightthat in the time of Mr. Mills I did one or two little jobs and got paid for them, but not in my own name.
"You did work in the time of Mr. Mills and were paid. not in your own name?-Yes: I was paid in the name of my sister-in-law. She was helping me."

Mr. SOMERVILLE. Read on.
IIr. TAYLOR. If any hon. gentleman wishes anything further read he can read it.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. If the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) will not read it, I will do so. This is a contimuation of the evidence, right after. that read by the hon. gentleman :

"By Mr. Barron:

"In the case of Mrs. Mills she did extra work? - Yes; we both did the work.
"And it was in her name the account was put?-Yes; it was work for the Ordnance Lands Office.
." At that time there was no law against that sort of thing?-I never followed that sort of thing.
"When you say the custom was kept up, the same custom as formerly, that is not exactly the case ?-I think you misunderstood me. I said there was not a custom at all allowing permanent clerks to get extra work. Of course. there might be a number of cases, but I could not answer for them.
"، When permanent clerks got extra, work they got paid for it in their own names in Mr. Mills's time? - Yes.
"Not in anybody else's name?-No.
" Did you never see the statute upon this?-I read it: but it did not interest me very much.
That puts another light on the subject altogether.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) said a clerk could do work only for another department, but this Mr. Rogers was a permanent clerk in his department and he did the work, according to his evidence.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). If the hon. gentleman will look at Mr. Rogers's testimony again, he will see that this man did not pretend to say that he got work out of this department, or that work was given to him surreptitiously or fraudulently. He said that his sister-in-law got work and he assisted her in getting that work. The Minister of Justice shakes his heal, but that was Mr. Rogers's statement made immediately after the committee rose on the day after testimony was given. I asked Mr. Somerville to have Mr. Rogers called and re. examined on the subject. It was not done: but I venture to say that if Mr. Rogers were called today and told the truth, he could not testify to anything else than the work taken out to which he referred was work obtained by another party, and whether he assisted or not in loing the work is a matter about which the department could know nothing. That there was any intention on the part of Mr. Meredith, who was deputy of the department, to give out work to a clerk under another name than his own, or to other than a clerk who was not entitled to receive it, I do not believe ; and the testimony of Mr. Rogers dous not establish any such proposition.

Mr. sOMERVILLE. The testimony of Mr. Pogers is here; the questions were asked by the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) himself, I will real them to show that thestatement made hy the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Niils) is perfectly correct. At page 111. I find the following:-

" By Mr. Tranlor:

- I understood you, whether correctly or incorrectly, to say that during the time of Mr. Mills you had done some work in which your sister-in-law assisted you? -And got pad-yes.
$\because$ In whose name was it paid?-I got the pay in her own name, as well as my memory serves me.
"By the Chnirman:
"I understood you to say that the work was done jointly by you two but it was paid in the name of your sister-in-law?-We both did the work and it was pay for her for work we did.
"- By Mr. McGrenor:
"She got the money, did she not ?-Yes."
some hon. MFMBERS. Goon, reat.
Mr. DEWDNES. I will go on aml real :

" By Mr. Boxell:

" You got the work for your sister-in-law. you assisted her in doing it, she drew the money for the work which the two of you did in your own house ??-Certainly.
"BuMr. Chapleau:
". The work was for her."-Yes.
" And you said that in a certain manner the extras were to compensate you for your brother being killed in the North-West?-We had a great deal of trouble and loss and expense. I acknowledge that I merely used my sister-in-law's name, because,according to custom, I could not get it otherwise; but I did the work, and I would have made it out in my own name, but it was not the custom, and probab!y, the Auditor General would not have allowed it to pass."

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Why, Mr. Chairman, that refers to the time of the hon. gentleman himself. Mr. Rogers was killed in the North. West in 188i, and the hon. gentlemen opposite are responsihe its the Minister of the Interior proves.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. So, Mr. Chairman, it cppears that the work that was done in my hon. friend from Bothwell's time, was done by a lady and she got the money. The work that was done in the time of the present Minister of the Interior was done improperly by this party and put in a lady's name. The irregularity occurred under the present Minister of Interior as he himself shows, and not in the time of my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Mills). I will just read the clause so that there can be no mistake abont it. The clause as it existed at the time is this.
" No allowance or compensation shall be made for any extra service whatever which any officer or clerk may be required, to perform in the department to which he belongs."
The statute, I helieve, was subseruently altered, and for reason, and at the time that Mr. Rogers did work, which he alludes to and got extra pay, he was perfectly within the law and had a right to do it.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The evidence proves the case of Rogers to the just like the other case ; his getting work for his sister-in-law, they doing work together, and he drawing it in another's name. However, I do not see any relevancy to the vote in all this discussion.

Mr. I).AVIES (P.F.I.) I agree with the Minister of Justice that it has no relevancy to the vote, but I cannot help, giving my thanks to the Minister of the Interior for being so honest and candid again. He removed the doubt which the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Somerville) was trying to assert, as to some irregularity having occurved daring the Mackenzie Administration. The Minister of the Interior comes forward aml satisties the committee that it was not done in the time of my hon. frient from Bothwell (Mr. Mills) and he says: "No, it was done in my own time." As far as the vote before the committee is concerned the evidence has been read from hy my hom. friend from Brant (Mr. Somerville) and I can see very little difference between the conduct of the gentleman for whom this rote is asked and the conduct of Mr. Pereira which was rliscussed in the earlier part of the evening. Mr. Turner was not guilty of the inregularity simply of cloing extrat work at extra hours. If that had heen permitted by the superiors of the department, I think the subordinates ought not to be punished, and I think that if that had been his only offence, the withholding of a month's piay would perhaps be sutficient punishment under the circumstances. The facts are that this gentleman not only did extra work but that he did it in the name of a man whom he believed to lee dearl. He made out the account in a dead man's name, received money from the (iovermment under false pretenses, and endorsed the cheque in a dead man's name.

Mr. TAYLOR. The evidence does not prove it.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) He said the man was dead, but he was not sure.
Mr. WALIACE. Mr. Nelson swore positively that when he used his name that he was still alive.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. Iou have got the wrong man, it is not Nelson at all.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Turner, in his evidence said:
" You endorsed Joseph Wright's name when he was dead?-No. sir, I did not know he was dead.
"You said he was? -I said I belicved he was."
so he mate up the accome in the name of a man whom he swears he believed to be dearl. Therefore he received the money under false pretenses. His conduct is just as bal as the conduct of the ofticer who has becti already pronounced against from this side of the House.

Mr. MeMULLEN. The principle involved in this item is worthy the consideration of the House. I contend that in the face of the evidence that was brought before the committee on Public Accounts, showing that he had drawn money in the name of a man whom he believed to be dead, proved that there was fratul. If a man will jeopardize his position by lenting himself tosuch a questionable transaction as has been clearly proven out of his own mouth, he is not fit to be in the Civil service of the country. To reinstate him is bad enough, but to grant him a salary with the exception of one month's pay, is something which this House should not endorse. After the revelations which were brought out in the investigations last year, and after the indignation expressed throughout the comotry, I camos umlerstand that we can so forget our daty to the people as to condone frand at the first meeting of Parliament, and pass such a rote as this now sulmitted to us.

Mr. TAYLOR. I do not want Mr. Turner, whom 1 know very well, to lie under the imputation that he used a dead man's name. knowing him to be deat. If you look at page 10 of the evidence. you will find that Mr. Turner, referring to his wife. swore this :
© When did she die?-About five years ago. 1 married again and lost $m y$ secomd wife.
". It was after your first wife died that you substituted Joseph Wright's name for that of your first wife? -.Just that.
How long has Juseph Wright been dead?-I said I believed he is dead.
"How long is it since he went to the old country?About a year, I think.’
Then on page 11 he waid :
"Who certifies your accounts now? -Since the scrip ceased, there have been none. I have received none of this extra. work for the past 15 or 18 months. I have never received a dollar extra since then."
so that he had no accoment for the previous fifteen or eighteen months, and it was a year previons that $\mathrm{M}_{1}$. Wright hid gone to the old country, and he had since heard that he was dead. Yet tia: statement is male that Mr. Turner had signed the name of a man whom he believed to be dead.

Mr. DAVIES (l'.F.I.) Will the hon. gentleman explain to the committee where is the legal or moral difference hetween drawing money in the name of a man who is deal and drawing it in the name of a man who is alive? Is not the false representation the same? This man obtained money under false pretenses by falsely representing to the Government that a certain man named Joseph Wright had lone a certain work, and he receivel a cheque made payable to Joseph Wright for that work and enilorsed that cheque. Whether Joseph Wright was lead or alive does not affect the offence of evading; the rules of the department by using a third party's name and olbtaining money under false pretenses: and now you are going to condone it.

Mr. TAYLOR. He suys, in his evidence, that Mr. Donglas asked him to substitute this name, and Mr. Davies (P.E.I.) in reply to the hon. Minister of Finance, he gave this evidence :
"Did you sign Joseph Wright's name to these cheques? - Certainly.
"And with bis consent? -And with his consent. " Although you have no written power of attorney ?No."
So that he had the assent of Mr. Wright to sign the cheques.
Mr. Mc:MULLEA. Will the hon. gentleman read question 162:

* When he went to the old country, did he give you permission to use his name "- Not particularly.

But you used his name?-Certainly.
Mr. TAYLOR. If you look at the former part of his evidence, you will see that Mr. Wright went to the old country alont a year previous, and Mr. Turner had not got work for about eighteen months.

Item agreel to--yeas, $\mathbf{2} 6$; nays, 23.
To meet expenditure for rates, taxes, insurance, ground rent, de., of the official residence, and ineome tax on the fligh Commissioner's salary Sir RICHARD (ARTWRIGH'T. Highly objectionahle. This gentleman has not been acting as High (ommissioner at all. He has been ateting simply and solely as hecler and stumper in Canada for the benefit of a political party, and we ought not to be asked to piy rates, taxes, insurance, grombl rent, income tax or anything else for a math who wats not in Englamd and wats not doing his rluty ats High (ommissioner. I oliject i/f foto to the item.

Mr. MILLA' (Bothwell). I think we reguire some explanation with regand to this. Is there not a tixed sum woted for this purpose, I think $$ 4,\left({ }^{(N O}\right)$, out of which the High 1 'ommissioner is supposed on pay his own expenses:

Mr. FOSTER. No.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). My recollection is that he was to receive a salary of sill,o(N) a year, which the fovernment practically increased to $\left.\leqslant 12,(h)^{\prime}\right)$ a year. and he was to receive $S t,(M N)$ a year to cover all other expenses, including those here specially referred to. Now, it is proposed practically to increase those extra charges from $\mathbf{S} 4,(10)$ to $\sin , 2(0)$. These are charges which the High Commissioner had to meet before : and if 1 remember rightly we have a statement in the Public Accounts showing that the High Commissioner received $\$ 10$ a day and travelling expenses for canvassing for hon. gentlemen and their friends in this country instead of leeing in England discharging his duties. It does seem to me a monstrous course to adopt towards an officer occupying the position of High Commissioner. If hom. gentlemen opposite think the High Commissioner is not adequately paid, they ought to have come down and stated that to the House, and asked for an increase in his salary.

Mr. FOSTER. With his usual accuracy my hon. friend has stated this was never paid before by the Government but always by the High Commissioner out of his salary. Unhappily for the hon. gentleman the facts of the case show the contrary. This amount has never been paid out of the salary of the High Commissioner but has always been paid by the Government. The vote is here because the amount has been allowed to lap over from year to year, and I ask this vote now in order that we may not continue as before paying last year's clebt with this year's appropriation.

Sir RI(:HARI) ('ARTWRIGH'T. I tind maler the heal of "('ivil liovermment," $1801-(!)$, item 24 , the following:- " Contingencies, rent and insurance on office, ineom ${ }^{\text {e }}$ tax, fuel, light, stationery, de., and ammut-s. $000-\mathrm{re}^{-}$ guired towards the contingent expenses (water, light, fuel carriage-hire, eabs and railsay tares, of the High Commissioner, and sl, 20 for contingen"ies, rates, taxes, insurance, ground rent. de., of the oflicial residence, including income tax, Slo.050."
Now the hom. gentleman hats Silo, onion alrealy voter for this year and he asks $s l, \dot{O}(N)$ more.

Mr. Fositer. That exactly catries out my statement.
 ample for all purpusies. It is a perfectly monstrous joh. We sive this gentlemanslo.(Kn): we provile him with a residence, the furnishing of which easts stu, (HOK or over: we have heen pitying him for continerencies of one kiad or another sili,(nos).

 strous, particularly in view of the charges male during last election, and in view of the fact that he is omly in Lomion atteminge his chaties almot half the year. I donout regated the hom. sentlemans expianation ass all satisfactory, herabse the sum of $\$ 10,0,011$ is ample, and the extat smm of $\leqslant 1,0111$ entircly unnecessaty.

SIr. FONTPRS. After we have had this genemal statement, Suppose we return to tine quilestion taisedhy my hom. friend from buthwell. The statement read from the Estimates !ears out ex. actly my opinion. For a momber of the preceding ing year's vote. The vore of $\leqslant 1, \underline{2}(1)$ for instame. tatken for ls:llog went to pay the Sl, em which shoulh have heen patid out of the preceding year's vote. and now I am asking this amount in order that we may pay this yeares lates, 太c.., ont of this year"s vore.

Mr. P.ATERSNON (Brant). I quite milerstame the hom. gentleman. Thishas heen roing onfor years, and the fact is, pactically, that we are voting $\leqslant 1, \underline{O}(k)$ to Sir (hanles Tupper for rates of some vears atway hatek which it was not then the intention of lanliament shomblow patid lyy us. The tirst vote of this amonint, which was eridently intemed to meet the expenditure falling due in that year, was devoted instead to the preasiting year. and now we are asked to give a double rote in order to pay for a year during which Parliment never intended that simm shomhil be paid.
Mr. MILLA (Bothwell). No dombt when the (iovermment alopted the principle of paying these money Was applied to a previous year for which no provision had heen made, and now the (iovernment 93, lecause that is already provided for in the Slo,(KX), but some previons years, although it was never intemed that such payment shonlil Tre made. The hon. gentlemin knows that if Sir Charles Tupper took money to pity a previous year's rates, he applied it to a purpose for which parliament had not voted and that hasbeen going on for a series of years, and the hon. gentleman now practically proposes to pay an account that may le seven or eight yeatrs oll. It seems to me that the office, even if it were closely attenided to, is not worth the amount which the people are called upon to pay. The High Commissioner has taken the stump in this comitry to advocate the cause of hom. gentlemen opposite. He has received money for these contingencies, the payment of which eovid only be justified on the assamption that he is in Fingland discharging his duties marked out hy law, hut, insteal, he hits leen here ilefending the canse of the hon. gentlemen opposite, travelline from point to pront, aml receiving a salaty, and, in aldition, tratelling expenses athel slo a diay. A more monstrons proceeding, I venture to siv, hats mot leene pecorden in the history of the commtry.

Mr. PATERNON (Branti. What amome of income is tased:

Mr. Fosterf. I stiplose his income of sllo. (KM) as High (ommissimer. I will timl that out. that, because we cammot he called upen to pay the tax on a private income. It is very important that the Honse should know what the rate is.

Mr. Fostreis. I will get that.
Mr. PATEKNOX (Brant). I thought the Minister would hate had it before he made this properal.

Mr. Foxitele. I hat it, hut I Io mot carry it ronum with me.

Mr. MILI心 (liothwell). Jon onght to carry it here.

Mr. Ma.MULDEF. I see that last Vear the anount of so.ol was entered as income tax. That is abnut tion sterling. It is right the committee $^{\text {a }}$ shonht know what amomat of income that is for: Nir Charles Tupper may hate a very moll larger amount of income than what he receive's from us, and it is not right that we should pay the income

Mr NoMEPVILIf. I shouhl like to know if the Finamer Minister acerpts the explanation from this sifle of the Ilomse in rexard to this vote. He tried to make it platin that this vote was for certain things to which he allabled. hat afterwards it was shown clearly that it was te pay certain arrears of taxes and other matters which had not been voted and which this Honse did not intend to pay. If this is the case the committee onfort to be put in prestession of the information. If we atre to piy Sir (harles 'Tupper $\dot{\prime}, \dot{2}(x)$ for tixses which the Honse did mot intemel shomld he paid out of the pablie treasury, we shomhl know the reason for it. I think as far ats the High Commissioners ontice is concerned, we pay an enormons amomint. During the disenssion last veatr, the Finance Minister said he would take into his serions consinleration the propriety of adding the allowance of $s=$ (nk), which is given to Nir ('harles Tupper in allition to his Sl(0, (XV) salary. to the salary where it ought to appear, because the salary is really $\$ 12,0 \times 0$ insteal of $S 10,(x x)$. 1 think the High Commissioner receives a great deal of consideration from the (iorermment of this conntry, We have evilence of that in the fact that Sir (harles Tupper was sent for to come out to this comntry post haste in order to assist in the general election here, and he was paid handsomely for his services to the Conservative party during that election. For travel alone, from 28th January to 15ith April, he was puid for 78 days at sill a day, Sinco. Then there was his fare from liverpeel to New York, \$243.33: fare from New York to Tomblom, sein): other expenses.
 1 think we treat on High Comimissioner too liberally altogether. For a yomg comntry like this, I think we cammot aftion to so on ineurring these expenses sear after vear to alld to the comfort and convenience of Nir Charles Tupper, who has not leen a faithful representative of this comentry in England at atl, becanse if he were he would remain there and discharge his duties and not come here and take an active interest in party politics in order to keep in place and power the men who mught to be his matisters, hat whose master he is. athl whor kep him in his office in England where he rewives inmense sams of momer which he knows how to wring out of the dincemment of the country because he has rembered them great serviex in coming ont here when there is a genarat ulection. This is not the kind of man who shoth he our Hish Commissioner. We shouh hate a main whe would he alowe being inthencel by pary pulitics, a man who would look after the cinmmet. cial inmerests of the comery and whe would do his duty to Ineh parties. sir charles Tupper is bot the servan of the fovernment. He is the servant of the people of this comutres and he shond do what he is paid to dor and not come here to pereform the luties of a cition and make the comitry pay his travelling and other expenses. in onder that he may ald th the popalarity of the (omservative party and keep in plate and pewer the men who wote the mony of the people for his and thoir benetit. I think this ontrage shombla be stoppech, aml I sumpase the diovernment will continne to serve Sir Charles Tupper in the future as in the past, hecanse he hase served them and is somaxious, for a comsideration of slo a day anl tavelling expenses. tor leave his oftice in Londem, where he is paid ly this comuty to discharge his duties, and to come to) (ianallat to assist the Conservative party. 1 think there shombld te more honour in the Consercative party than to continue that. 1 do not believe that there is any homesty left in that party. There is more honour amo more honesty in the liberal party than to tolerate anything of that kind, ant, if the conservative party hal a spark of honesty in them. they would not centinue to piay this man for services which he has not rembered and which their own hooks show have not heen rendered. He is paid $12.(XX) a year to discharge those daties in Linglimal, and yet he spemds nearly a guarter of a year in Canadia in electioneering, amd the people of Canadia have to pay his travelling expenses and Slo a day because he chooses to come here and work for the Comservative party. I say that no party should be guilty of such contemptible conduct as this. The (Government should be ashamed of their action in this matter, and for paying this money to Sir Charles Tupper, when they know it is dishonest for them to put their hands into the public treasury and pay him for services he does not render to the country but simply to the party that keeps him where he is.
Mr. SPROULE. If he was instrumental in keeping the Government out of the hands of people like that, he would be worth ten times the money.
Mr. McMULIEN. I think this charge is unjustifiable. Sir Charles Tupper gets $$ 12,000$ a year, and he is allowell for his cabin fare from Liverpool to New Sork, amd from New lork to Lomion.

Mr. Fostek. I rise to a point of order. We are not discusing contingencies and travelling expenses, we are discussing the item of $$ 1,2(x)$.
Mr. MILLA: (Bothwell). My hon. friend is perfectly in order. He is pointing out why this appropriation shonld not lie made, and one of the reasons why it should mot he male is that sir Charles Tupper was urot in England hout in this comery, and therefore should not he paid for the time he was absent from his cluty.
Mr. M.MCLDEN. If you ate paying sir (Charles Tuppers contingencies in Lambon, we have a right to enumire wherther he wats in attendance in Lomidon or mot. He hats receiven it the hames of this comary sio a day for extra salary . hecaluse it Was mohing dse but extra salaty -anil then when he comes to this comutry his passage money is paid. :and his fitere is paid ar what in lambon: and in ablition th that, for items that wore mot acomated for at all, he gets seliti : and he gets sion a day hesides that. Xow. that shows that he is arttingi a houble salary, and we are voting at the same time sl to his residemee in Lambon when, daring diree monthe time, ly was not there att all. I bintioe in looking orer thesi items whed th the High (ounmissioner that it is necessury to seareh the Andiyear he was entered ats hathor received a sum imiter the head of immigratinu: He was entereal as having receivel an allowance monder the hat of commercial agent : in another plate he was contreed as having revereal a sum in emmertion with a mission to dipman, or some other phave Now. 1 think it would he much hetter if the Minister of Finance womld include all these items in the salary of sir Chatles Tupper, and if it is to be matie arn taxes, homserent, servints, the disinfecting of his house, and erergthing of that kinh. Weare asked to rote items from time to time amd duplizate thems. I suppose: hon. geatlemen opposite did not want to bring them before the Homse at the proper time, rand he has been alloweol to play dacks and drakes with the money votel by this House, and now we are askenl again to revote a sum that has long hegh past and spent.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). When this Piarlia ment sends a gentleman to Eagland to represent Canada, it is expected that he shall be treated in a mamer hefitting his high position, and the dignity of this country. Parliament, in its wishom, has determined what amount would be requisite for the purpose, and it has increased the original amount, so that no fault can be found with respect to that. We come, then, to consider the fuestion of what you are going to grant supplementary to that, something that was not contemplatel, something that Parliament has never declared to he necessary, because if the salary of the High (commissioner is insutticient, it should be raisel. The fact that it has never been proposed by the Ministers to raise it, is proof that in their judgment the salary is adequate to maintain the office as we would like to see it maintained. What the Opposition take exception to now are such items as are now before the committee. This amount has been included in the past year as an amomat supplementary to the salary, and now in adlition to that, withont any reasinn heing given why it should bedome, we are asked todnplicate this year a vote of $\mathbf{s l}, \boldsymbol{2}$ ()n for gromm rent ami income. There is no use in trying to look at it in any other Way. The explanation of the Minister that one rear hats been lapsing after another, slows not change the fact at all. The fate remains that if there has been a lapse from vear to year, it omly demonst mates that in the first jear it was mot the intention of Parlianent to pay this sum, and if Sir thatles 'lupper used the money voted in sulb. serplent yearsime suaplied it when lialimment di, hot sily it was to be gramted, he was not applying it to the right purpose. So it is inpossible in vew it inany other light than that this sl, $\boldsymbol{E}$ (1) is another st, $\operatorname{Di}$ in in andilition to what was roted for that very same purpose before. When youlonkat it in that lisht it is quite right ant proper for the hom. mesulner for Wellinestion (Mr. McMablen) in come in and low at wher iteans. Fon ant mot omly duphimang this pear and proving a domble ammont linhlie Aecomits, patid him in andition to his salary Sisll while he was megheting his duty instend of attembling toit. yon let his salary tuin on. I do think with thene who hate alrealy expressed the opinion, that a propersense of digenity ablimingendences on the part of Nir (harles Tupper himself, whent to lean him to refnse the acceptance of that Siso. Nir, the Ministers on the Treasary benches hegin to lonk rery grave when a charge is brought up that a civil servant has been fommen the pub. lic platform taking part in an clection when he shouh ha: diseharging his duties, and they would he their comotemances almose inticale that they comsider it wass somethiner they would mot like to dofemb. But whet is that in compatison with this: Where is the divil servant that has wer grone ubion the pmblie phation allowatins the conservative catuse and hathang thatiost the liberals while his salary went on in intawa: Where is one that ever ilill it: Ame get the highest civil serviat that (amathe has. does mot sermple, denes mot hesitate. does not blush. wask it and to take it. amd the Finatace Minister dones not hesitate to ask Parlianent to vote it. The Finance Minister woull blame the opposition if they refused to maintain him in proper dignity, hut here we ohjeet to entertain a rote which is cluplicating amomats. To saly nothing of the offensive part that Sir Charles lupper took in the elections, in allition to that ontrage on public decency, as we understaml it, but outside of that to pay him for iloing that, to pay him for neglecting his cluties while his salary is going on, and on top of all that has lieen sunctioned by the House, to come now and ask us to give him si, $2(N)$, to duplicate that $\$ 1,200$ which he has already hat, is just asking a little too much; so it strikes uts, and that is the reason we appeal against this vote. It is a vote that ought not to be asken, it is a vote the House ought not to sunction, becuuse it is duplicating and roting in addition to the other sums that have been voted to him, this sum of $\$ 1,200$ to which he is not entitled, to which the Minister of Finance has not shown him to be entitled, and the Minister of Finance ought not to ask Parliament to do it, and the supporters of the hon. gentleman behind him ought not to manifest any uneasiness at all when the rote is eriticised, becaluse if they will look at it in all its hearings they will ammit that this labliament deals very genemonsly with its High Commissimer. When we look at the duties of civil servants not to engage in ant offensia emanner in matters political, and when this High Combmissioner, who ought to hee an eximple for the whole service, tork part in these elections, when in adolition to his salary, ant ats an enormity ubove all others. l'arliament is asking us topay hims sillat day in order that he misht thins lower the position heoneupies, while his regular salary is going onthe whole mater is atterly inde.fensible. it must he inlefensible, it seoms to me, in the eyes of all who will lowk at it dispassiomately and without party ferling.

Mr. LANDERKIN. If a loy will hring me: paper l will quote what 1 reat. The statement Wits that our seats were in jerparely heathse someone had comveyen sick people to the pulls amd had hired at cal to idu it.
sir .IOHAN THOMPN(ON. I dit not make such a statement.

Mr. L.ANINERKIN. The Minister of Iustice. 1 believe, hats esemped through the six monthse limit sir JoHN THOMl解O. Thave yet to hear it : I did not know it.

Mr. LANDERKIN. I umterstamel that while the Minister of Justice has escaped umier the six months limit, three members hate leeen unseated in Novia suotia since that perion. It apnears very peculiar that the fovernment can impnet their High Commissioner, pay his expenses amd travelling allowamees, increase his sabary and have him gor round the country and alonse not only the people who differ with him, but also the varions institutions of this country. It is a scandal and shame and should not be tolerated ; and this House is not alopting the course it should follow in meeting these engagements. I believe if a case was prepared, and the Minister of Justice is well y ualified to prepare it, and submitted to the Supreme Court, that boily would not endorse such conduct on the part of the (iofermment. The dignity of the josition should keep sir (harles Tupper from taking the stamd he has dome and it shombl prevent him coming from Fingland and taking part in elections, and acting so offensively. He would not hatrenome so unless such was the wish of the (iowermment. and when the diovermment increase his salary and expenses it is a shame ithe something which the porople shoulal mot tolerate amd which this Honse should not calonse. I am opmosed to this grant. I donnt helieve it shomh be passeel, for it is contrary to the comstirution umler whish we live and it is eontrary to the election law. It is very reprehemsible: it is a tefiance of the (ivil service Act amb a band example to afford to the whole civil service to allow the principal civil servant to datw on the revemues of the eomity as Sir Chames Tupper hats dome. He wats fumished with ath ofticial cat in which to travel from ome end of the comatry to the other. at the expense of the bominion, furnished also with meat. drink and refreshment and an ahlitimal per diem allowance for goning round to ahone those who difiered from him. Bis griag lown on his knees to the railwaty compmaies the enabled the deremment to are free tickets to semp roters from one part of the comatry to amother. He did this on a promise to paiy for them. hat the dionermment afterwards refused to make such parments. I camot express alequately the feelings of eondemmation I entertain in regaril to the appopriation of this ammont. I do not know where this state of things is eromes to cmel. It appears, at all crents. that the High Commis:sioner in the prepatation of the Fistimates never forgets himself. nor dones he forget any member of the family: all of them are kept at the public expense, and are alwaysoring logalty to the institutions of the eomitry:

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). Has the report of the High Commissioner heen printed?
Mr. Fostrer. Ves : I got a copy last night. The report hats heen hrought down.

Mr. L'ATERSON (Brant). Hats the Minister real the report" What does Sir (harles report with respect to his work, from damary to Mand :

Mr. Fow'lliR. I will not take from the: hon. gentleman the pleasure of readine it.
Mr. PATERSON (Brant). It will be interestine to motice his services to Camala during those three months. Does he mention his visit to Essex, which resulted in the Liberals canrying the constituency ly from 700 to sormajority : He might, perhaps. base at claim for the sympathy of the (Opposition on that gromm, amd for the result at Lomdon. Dies he mention that lie referred to the Lnited States, the great nation to the south of us, as an enemy, there, as well as the enemies at home: It will he interesting reading as to what sir Charles did during those three months.

Mr. FOSTRER. I have no doubt you will be a great deal wiser afterwards.
M. PATTERSON (Brant). Possibly so. I have the Minister's statement that Sir Charles reports what he did during danuary, February and Mareh last.

Mr. SOMERVILI.E. I shouhl like to understand how the allowance of sil) per day was arrived at. Did Sir Charles Tupper fix that amoment, or diad the Minister of Finance?

Mr. DEPCTV NPRAKER. We are not on that item.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. I think I have a perfect right to refer to this matier. it has heen referved to before.
Mr. iEPC'TV NLEAKER. If my hom. frieml will allow me to ermark he is not speaking abont. the item unler comsideration.

Alr. SONLERVIILEE Others have spoken ont the same subject.

Mr. WEPCTM NIRAKER. 1 know, hat it must eome to an emi some time.

Mr. PATERNON (Brant). It is stated, as purpose for which it sum has heen already moted. that in fact it is all abolnte present of $$ 1.2(16)$ u the High Commissioner. and the member for Nurth brant i.Mr. Somerville! is stating that the High (immissionce does unt deserve it at omb hambs. and he is allegring as his reasom that we hate alrealy treated the High (ommissioner in a gencoms mamor.

Mr. WElUTY NPFAKLFR. The hon. member for North limut (Mr. Nomerville) is mot speakings on the item before the committee now, amb he is out of miler.

Mr. BADN (Wentworth). Before the item is patsed I think we maty ask the Ministers it they would kimlly tell us what year this amman is really to be paid for. The Amitor dememals Reprent labis year shows the details of this item which wats pailo and we have argin roterl it in the ather exti. mates. I think we all forel that there setmo to he never a time when the Hieh Commissioner is som getting his hand int" the publie terasury some way or other, and under some excuse or other.

Mr. DALS. What about four hamb-..would jou like to have it in the treasiny?

Mr. B.AIN (Wentworth) My hon faicme has taken good care that I should mot hate the opportmity, but I am athle whold it up lafore the Hense: and say it is clean. I have never homed anomal the fiosermment to get my ham in the treasury. I have never gone the the North-West and taken part in any colonization companies or " isms." I have never asked this liovernment, or any where (iowermment for that matter, either one way or the other. tofarour me indivilually. I have paid my: own hills and fought my opjosition fairly anil honestly, and perhapsevery one here camot sity as much.

Some hon. NEMBFRN. question.

Mr. BAIN (Wentworth). If hom. gentlemen opposite choose to raise this guestion they need not object if thay are answered. If they wish to open up the question of eliscussing side issues I will discuss them abong with anybody else. 1 am not afraid of any man in this House, sor of any of these side issues leeing raised, hut I think that gentlemen who live in glass houses shoulil not throw stones. Coming back to the guestion we really have before us, what I want to know is this: It is notorious that the High Commissioner's name turns up, as my frienl from Wellington (Mr. McMullen) stid, in every conceivable connection in the Aulitor General's Report. You camot get into any item in any way indirectly connected with the husiness over in Europe, hat you will time an amonat smuggled in some way in connection with the High Commissioner. Now, in aldition to all these monles of getting expeniliture in for the henetit of the High Commissioner, we are asked this seasom to duplicate another expenditure of $s l, 20$ (h). Laist year it itppears in the Auliton (ieneralls Report, We hate voted it again for the current year, and I thank we maty very well ask what year actually sioner not heen able to secure enongh of plander ont of the treasury, when we pay him a salary in ditional to take ratre of the office and iln the work there: when he is going atound (anadia for 3 months out of the 10 : not ittembing to the interests of Cimalia, not attomding to the interests of the people who pat his salary wer in Lomulon, but who hats desicemied to, I venture to say, a level in pelitical discussion that hats been reached hy a othergentleman whe professes to holel a respesetable prosition in suciety inc anmala. I say under these eiremmstanes I think it is time that this thing should come to an emil. We either hate some tuse for a High (ommissioner in lombon or we have bot. If lie canleave that office and hecome electioneering asent for the Cincermment in Cainalia for 3 monthis ont of the 12 and in aldition to drawing his salary dhare us for taking himbamkwartsamiforwardsimd all incidental expenses, amdigain combly eharge us $\mathrm{F}_{10}$ a day in athlition. I think it is time that the serviess of the High Commissioner shombl le dispensed with. or clie that we shouldgetome who will attemdtothe interests of canamianme not leecome an electionerering agent. As my hom. friend irom Brant remarked. we have had heretofore semions ohjections atratinst the eivil servants leavine their duty and taking part in clections, and junior members of the (ivil Service have heen exposed to pretty severe criticisms in this Honse for doing on a small suate amb in a local Way, what our High (ommissioner is doing all ore the comatry and openly, after a fashion that I renture to say no thinking math on the other sifle of the Honse will in cowl bloen mulertake to justify. If it is going to lee established that our High (ominmissioner, instead of attembing to the interests of a anala in Englaml, is going to he bronght over here as an clectioncering agent of the foremment in this comatry, infl to almse the political opponents of the dowermment who I venture to saty have just atsmuch interest in the Welfare of Cianalat as the High Commissioner hats, I think it is time that the High (commissioner's otfice should be abolished. The question at issue is: For what year is this money to lee paid: It is not for list year, it is not for the current year, and I think we ine fairly entitled to ask for what year it is. sir RICHARD (ARTWRI:HT. I understool that the sum of $\mathbf{S 2},(000$ which was a spectal allowance to Sir Charles Tupper, covered some portion at any rate of this special item. It seems to me that we are duplicating this item. My recollection is that in Sir A. T. Galt's time $\boldsymbol{s t}$, (NO was assigned to him in addition to his salary, for honse-rent and that class of contingencies: and I think that the So, (MO) in addition to the sum we have invested for the purchase of a house for Sir Charles Tupper, fairly represented the greater part of these items here. If it does not what does it represent : There is mu letail given in the Auditor (ieneral's Report, or I wouid not trouble the hom. gentlemin.

Mr. Pos'TER. Norletails have heen given of the SO, (O) It has simply heen paid each quarter and towards the personal contingencies. It has heen the pratetice for sereal years.

Nir RICHARD ('ARTWRISHT. What persomal contingencies:

Mr. FOsTPFR. Other enntingencies that more particularly pertain to the oftice of the High Combmissioner : at great many expernses which my hom. frieml can see the High Commissioner is liaible to.
sir RICHARN (ABPWHIOHT. What sont ?
Mr. Fosicter. Viarinas.
Sir RI(HARD ('ARTWRICHTS. What kind :
Mr. Fositele. I cammot gro intu details. hut there are expenses that necessiarily attach to a man in the pusition of Sir (harles "Tupper ats High Commissiomer. incilent tu his otfice. I imacrine that if my hoh. friend were himself High Commissioner: he would tind that he would not make at fortume ont of the: amomit paid. He woold tind his expenses to he very high. As has heen very traly salial, a representative of (abata mast live in a manner somewhat conresponing to the position of our comatry, and if my hom. friend did that, I think he would have to draw on his private income in orrler to keep up the phsition and meet the necessary incidental expenses of the office.

Sir RI('HARI) (ARTWRI(iH'T. I Ionot think that is an explanation at all. I am simply stating to the hon. erentleman what my recollection is as to the allowance made to as able a man as Nir (harles Tupper. that is, Sir Alexamber calt. We did not allow him all these additional items which the hon. gentleman proposes to allow sir (:harles Tupper: We did allow him st,0M) to eover just such contingencies ats the hon. gentleman refers to. I lo not think the hon. gentleman hits any right to ask for this $\$ 1.2(1)$ and tell us that there are mosterions contingencies, this. that and the other, which he thinks we may umlerstand, hut as to Which mot one particle of evilence is given to the committee. Before we proceed with this item, I think we ought to le informed where the Siz.OW) goes to. If the foremment take the responsibility of saying that they reguire to raise the salary of the High Commissioner, they can if they see fit. having a large majority behind them, overrule ang ohjections which we may raise, and make sir Charles Tuppers salary $\mathbf{S l D , ( O X )}$ or even more, hut it ourht to be rone in that way, and not by a side wind. The sig. (MM) is not secret service, I supprose, or anything that the hom. gentleman needs to conceal. It appears to me that it is for reasonable and legitimate services. Let him state what it is for, and after the $\$ 2,(K X)$ is accounted for we should be informen what the allitional $\$ 1,2(0)$ is for, which has alreaty been granted for 1891, and is now asked for $18!2$ and will be asked for 1893 ; becanse if this is paid it must refer back to five or six years ago when it was not intencel to vote this item.

Mr. SOMFRVILLE. I think the Finance Minister ought to state what year this money is required for.

Mr. FOSTER. It is for the current year.

Mr. somberilite. I mulerstand that that has alrealy been voted, so that it canot be for the current year. I think the Minister of Finance ought tolse candind enough to state what year this additional sum is voted for.

Mr. FoxithR. It is roted for the current year, I hase explained why. Becaluse you see in the has been paid for Sir (harles 'Tupper, it cloes not follow that the si, $\mathrm{O}(\mathrm{x})$ wats not just as 1 have stated in my explanation, vi\%, a sum paid in that year, but paid to cover an expenditure in the previons year. This hats gome on until this year when I iletermined to stop it, aml ask for this ammont, so ats to bring each year's expembiture level with each years services.

Sir RIC'HARD (.ARTWRI:HT. I do not see how that can legally le done.

Mr. FOSTLER. It has been done.
Mr. MILLS: (Bothwell). The hom. gentleman will see that there is an appropriation for the his explanation does not aneomat for it. The omly Wity in which yon can aceount for this emmition of things is that the money was taken by the commissioner and applied for the parment of these expernses in a year hefore lanliament mate any provision for their payment. If the commissionter propuses to use the money voted for this year in patying the expenses of another year. for which wo appropiation was marle. it is mexplanation whatever for the finance Minister to come here and siy that there is noprovision mate for it. It impones an new ohbigation upon us if the commissioner chomse: to take the money we appropriate for this vear and apply it to a prior year. That is his mistake, and unt ours: and the Sininsters proposition practically amounts to this, that he now proposes to make an appropriation for the first time to pay expenses of this chanater that were met otherwise by the High Commissioner several years ago. It is mot taken to pay these charges for the carrent year, otherwise von wonld hate a double appropriation for this partionlar yatr. Now, the hom. member for simuth Uxforal has asked the Minister to state the application of the sogumethat was receiven. I remember very well, when this office was tirst establisheel, that there was an house-rent and all other expenses of the High Commissioner. Whenit was proposed topurchase a house it wats said that this charge would he diminished. It was proposed silseçuently to fix a smaller sum, and that smaller sum was to meet the very expenses that are now being met ly this $\$ 1,2 \pi N$. But practically the proposition lefore us. apart from this item, is that we shall pay the commisisioner a salary of Silo, 010 , that we smath provide a house that cost upwards of $54(1),(6)$, that we shall pay contingent expenses amounting to $\mathrm{Si} 3, \mathrm{~B}(\mathrm{n})$. amd that we shall make an appropriation of $\$ 1,2(0)$ to meet expenses of this sort that took plate some years before. It seems to me that this is an appropriation of which the conntry will not approve, not only the Reform party, but a very large section of the Conservative party will say it is not proper to pay these large sums to a gentleman who, instead of lieing in London to) discharge his duties, was here a latge portion of the time in the interests of the party, and because he served such interests, his cxpenses were paid out of the pullic: treasury instead of by himself. There is no more justitication for paying Sir Charles Tupper out of the public treasury for travelling from one point to another in this country. to attend pullic meetings held in the interests of the Conservative party, than there would be for paying any other individual. The appropriation is a monstrons one. If the hon. gentleman proposes that there shall be a paid egent of the Conservative party to canvass at the genemal election, he had better put it in the Rstimates as such, and if the sill a daty travelling expenses are not enough to charge agrainst the pmblic treasury and $\$ 1,2010$ more are reguired, let the hom. gentleman come down and saly that from this time out that tribute is to le levied on the Reform ats well ats on the Conservative panty for the purpose of furnishing their chief electionecring agent, during the periond of every genemal clection, it large sum of money from the treasury of Camada which hoth political parties alike contribute. The hom. gentleman may wo back as far ats he likes, he will fiml that he will come to a year for which mapmopriattion was male and for which this pesient appors. priation is to ler improperly voted. That is an improper proceeding, an improper and wholly and mujustitiable proveeding. It would he mujustitiat be. eren in the case of a commissioner whollevoted atl his time to the hasiness of his otfice. athl it is still more combemnable when lemambed for a commissioner who is a way from his duties a latere $\mathrm{f}^{\text {mo }}$ tion of his time.

Mr. FONTER. I rise simply to deny what the hom. gentleman insinateal in the latter part of his payment on Sir Charles Tupper for ay other purpose than that sitid here.

Mr. MILLs. (Buthwell). It is impessible it can be for this purjones.

Mr. FOSTER If the hom. sentleman make: that statement ats he insimates it, he makes a statement for which he has ins foumation in fact at all.

Mr. MILAN-(bothwell). And what is that :
Mr. Fos'leR. This iten did not originate with me. It was put in the Eistimates hy the clerk of the Finance Department who is an honourable man.

Mr. MIL.L. (Buthwell). I do not care.
Mr. FOSTER. I know the hon gent gman does: not care.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). What has that to ion with the matter: Here is your accomnt.

Mr. Fostrik. This item was placed in the Fstimates for my approval by the accountant of my department. I asked him for an explanation, amil he gave me that which I have given to the Honse. 1 believe his explanation, I helieve he was mat actuated hy party motive of any kinl. I think he is above that. He simply said to me what I have stated here, that we had leen in the habit of paying the preceding year's charge of $$ 1,2(x)$ out of the succeeding year, and asked me to put this in the Supplementary listimates in order to square the matter up, and not continue paying a precelling year's deld out of a succeeding year's appropiattion. I asked him liow it was possible to pay the past year's delot out of the succeeding year's vote, aml he saill it was done anyway, and it had heen done for years, and he wished. to put a stop to it. The fertile imagination of the hon. member for Bothwell sees in it a political trick. He sees in it some way of paying Sir Charles Tupper for political services. There is nothing of the kind in it.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) That does mot alter the fact at all.

Mr. FONTER. It alters the statement of the hom. member for Bothwell.

Mr. DAVIEs (P.E.I.) There has been an ille. gal appropriation of money specitically roted hy Parliament, through their heing diverted from one year to amother. What officer has the right to ilo that:" In Eugland it would cost him his place. A scruting of all the expenditure in Englam is made yearly, a very minute and carefal semptiny, so that such an illegal appropriation of money conld never take place tiere. Sionneborly hats improperly and illegally taken money which Parliament has votel for one purpose and spent it on another. The hon. genteman's own statement contirms this. and Parliancent has a right to know who it is that has dared to take public money voted for a specitic purpose in a specitic: year, anil apply it to some other purpese in some other year. If Parliamemt chomsests sit inlly ly and let this matter go. we had better surveniler our conscience to the High Commissioner. We camon affion to allow a statement like that to go meliallengen. It is the most serions statement mande since this House wemt into supply. that momeys coted for a specitic purpuse in a specitic year have been, without the authority of larliament, laid out for another parpose in another jear. In some way or other, and "ith the comivance of the department. sir ( harles Tupper ohtained $$ 1: 2(3)$ which the Honse never voten.

Mr. Foster. Notat all.

Mr. DATIES (P.E.I.) The rote of Parliat ment has been set at defiance, and it must have heen set at defiance by the deliberate comivance of some one in the hon gentlemanis deparment. and we have a right to know who the enlprit is, so that the House may, I hope, punish him. Surely we are not to vote money here and when we find that that money has been misappropriated, receive no information from the (iovermmen and make no enguiry about it. I presume there are some gentlemen on the other side of the House who are ats jealous of the rights of the Honse of Commons in regard to the expenditure of money as we are upon this side of the House. It is for their interest that the constitutional right of Parliament to control this expenditure shond the protectel, ind, if they see that the will of Parliament is being thwarted and that the money voted l : Parlianent for a certain purpose is misappropriatel. We should have something to saty in regated to that. This is too serious a matter to le slipped over as the Minister of Finate desires without going laick to the year when the error was tirst made and finding out how the misappropriation took place and who was the culprit. The House ought not to pass this sote until it has this information, and, if the Finance Minister camot now supply that information, he should let the rote stand until he can give the information to Parliament and then let Parliament act against the offender after it has the information to show who the offiender is.

Mr. FLINT. There is a question of principle here. We are asked to vote almut $s(s,(M)$ ) for the High Commissioner's oftice, in addition to the High Commissiomer's salary, and hesides that there is now muler discussion a large amount of money which has heen paid to that gentleman for political services during the last rampaign. If we pass this item, I think any member of the 1 bovernment would be justified in charging to the contingencies of his department his time ami expenses during the last eampaign. I ant not complaining of the salary of the High Commissioner, hecause I think, if we admit that the position should be tillen, the salary should the something corresponding with the pusition, hut we find that we have in lepartment of (invermment in Lomblom which is costing a great leal more thammany of the lepartments inere at Ottana.

Mr. FAIRBAIRN. Dial he not kill a cow:

Mr. FLINT. I think that gentleman is better aumanted with cows than he is with the High Commissimer's oftice. The contingencies of the Privy (ouncil oftice are actually less than the contingencies of the High Commissioner:s othice. I woild call the attention of the committee to some very extravagant charges which seem to me ate maile here. Take the matter of postage alone; we find that the High Commissioner's office is run on a very extravagant scale. We timl that $$ 1 . \sin$ was spent for postage stamps, postarges anl cablegrams. That seems an enomoms sum of money, and a glance orer some of the most lmey departuents of the state here shows that their expenditure is less than this. Apart from the outrigeons principle of charging the cometry with the expenses of a patisan politician travellinit up imb down the cometry, certainly the expronliture apon these contiugencies should lie looked into. If we pass that core, it will he a precelent to enalhe any Minister in the Govermment to plate in the Estimates charges for time and travel in any contested election. I think the opposition are doing only their duty in calling attention to this particulat phase of the High Commissimer:s oftice bist session we had it somewhat heated discussion on this subject. and 1 am sure that many sincere men on the other side of the House must have seen the justice with which the Opiosition showea the character of the issues as presented by sir Charles Tupper. He dian not put the issues between the two parties fairly lefore the country, lut he assumed an offensive ittitude to a party as loyal as himself, and mo dooblt in many constituencies that influcnced the minds of the people against the Opposition and that must intensify the feeling of thrse who now protest against this vote. Phope the Ninister will withdraw this cote which appears to he simply a mode of paying Sir Charies Tupper for his services during that campaign.
Mr. PATERSON (Brant). I think the Minister of Finauce should see that it would be wise for him to withdraw this vote. The member for South Vietoria (Mr. Fairbairn) says the High Commissioner is worth this lecause he killed a cow. Very well. Put that in, Sir Charles Tupper, si, 200 for killing a cow. Then we will know what we are voling it for. As it stanls now it is not right and should be withdrawn.

Mr. RAIS (Wentworth) I see the Minister of Finance seemed to feel aggrieved at the suggestion of the hom. member for Bothwell that this wats really a vote to cover expenses incurred hy the High Commissioner for political services. If the Minister of Finance wishes to escape from the disagreeable conclusion which may he drawn from this. it is necessary for him to give us some more light on the suhject. There must have heen a certain year in which the money was tirst diverted from the purpose for which is was voted hy this House, and wats used for an ohject for which it was not voterl. The hom. gentleman pledges his chat racter that the clerk in his office is an homomable man. Then the Minister should see that it is clue to himself and th that member of his department that he should state honestly what year this diversion of money tirst ocearren, what were the circumstames. how it escapeal the attention of the Auditor (ieneral. inm shmind put us in poss. session of the facts so that we may locate the year When this money was spent. If the Finance Minister insists on passing the fote as it is now presented. I saly that, if the facts arepresented to any popular andience. they will he inevitably forced to the comclusion that this is simply an indirect way of presenting Sir Charles Tupper with $\mathrm{S}_{\mathrm{l}}^{\mathrm{O}} \mathrm{O}(\mathrm{K})$ for his political services. That gentleman turns up in crery section of the Anditor (ieneral:s Report. In one quarter he charges for extra expenditure in one place amd the next quarter he appears in another place. If this thing is to go on it would be better at once to come down and ask for amother ten thousand of an increase to the salary of the High Commissioner. so that we may get rid of the disagreeable feeling in going throngh the Public Accomats that there is an attempt to comeeal the expenses in eonnection with the HighC (ommissioner. It does seem to me that it is not just to the Pinance Minister's ourn position, to saly nothing of the House. trask us to vote this item withont more direct information.

Mr. FONTER. The hom. gentleman who has just sat down, has repeated the aceusation; I have only to meet it in the same way as I slid before. I have given the whole expenditure as it has heen presented to me, and hefore concurrence in the item. I will give all the infomation I can as to what occured. I ean sily, howerer, that it might oceur without any misippropriation at all. lout I a:a certain that Mr. Dickieson would not give the item unless it were a proper item. If hon. gentlemen will allow this to pass, I will make a full explanattion on concurrence as to how the lapse occurred.

Sir RI('HARI) CARTWRICH'T. For myself I would le disposed to accept the hon. gentleman's suggestion, but the hon. gentleman will see himself in the (ivil forerment item that this sum has heen voted in terms for the service of this year. Now, when you duplicate that, it wonld be far hetter to say, if you goon with this, that it was omitted to le voted for some particular year.

Mr. FOSTER. We can do that on concurrence if necessary.

Sir RICHAR1) CARTWRI(; $H T$. In the Auditor General's Report for 1801, I see some of these identical items, or similar items, appear to be included in the comparatively small sum which was paid to Sir A. T. Galt and to Sir Charles Tupper Mr. Paterison (Brant.) in that particular year. I suspect it will be foumd that this really goes back as far as the year 1881.

Mr. MILLN (Buthwell). We have made an appropriation for the present year in the publice Estimates hefore the Supplementary Fstimates are: bronght down. If last year the money was taken to paty the year before if the year before the mones. was taken to pay similar expenses in the previons year, the hom. gentleman must see that it comes hack to a year for which there is no appropriation made, and that heing the case, then this is mot an appropriation for the present year.

Mr. Mr.MELILEN. Is this man engaged in any other hasiness:

Mr. FositFR. He was engiged at that time he did this work in this work alome.
 in any other work:

Mr. PATTERNON (Hurom). This gentheman is not in the Civil service athl has never heen. He was sperially emploged for this partioular work. The money was voted last vear and lapsed.

Mr. LAERIER. Dolmmerstaml the Minister to say that this gentleman $w$ as never in the service before :

Mr. PATTERN()N (Hurom). That is what I am given :u umberstand.

Mr. LAUPRIER. I think the hom. sentleman is mistaken. I think he has been a sessional clerk.

Mr. Mr MULLAEN. I notice that eath year the number of persons who get patid couble paty is increasing rapidly. Fome or five years ago there were (in), now there are $4(N)$. There is one matn, for instance, who rets Se..3ion, and he came hereand serser during a few days that the Deputy (lerk was indisposen, aml for that service he got $\mathbf{s i n}^{2}(\mathrm{k}$ extra. Dy reason for asking with regatd to this man was to know whether he was employed in the Civil service.

Mr. PATTERSON (Huron.) My information is that this gentleman has never heen in the Civil Service. He was specially emploted for this work.

Mr. LAURIER. I notice this item rearls to pay Pierre Chapleatu for proof-reating tist parges of Civil service List (reoote) si? 21. a) ; topay for pronfrealing tis pages of Civil service List, 1891 , Silil. How is it that for the same amount of work of the same character twice the amonnt is paid in one item:

Mr. PATTYERSON (Huron). All these items are combected with work done by the same gentleman. I may inform the committee that it is not intended to give ont any proof-realing in future. It will either be done in the Printing Lepartment, or in the clepartment with which the work is connested, without additional payment being made to the clerk.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Why was not the list prepared in the proper department?

Mr. PATTERSON (Huron). This has not hitherto heen done, but it will he done in future by the regular clerk without extra pay.

Mr. MILLS' (Bothwell). What explanation is there to offer for the fact that the first item is more than double the second:

Mr. PATTER ${ }^{\circ}{ }^{\circ}$ (Huron). The explanation is that in addition to the proof-realing, the list was compiled in French in 1s:9. For the pronfreading alone sil was chargel.

Mr. Mr-MLlLLEN. I notice ly the Civil serviee List of 1 ss:3 that it gives the religion, nationality and province of each civil servant, and the province from which he comes. Why has that heen inopped? I think it is highly desilable that we shomill have it.

Mr. PATTERs(ON (Huroin). If it is frume whe the wish of the House lhave nodonlte the fiovernment will take it into consideration.
sir IOHA THOMPsos. We emelulen some time ing that mo use to the puthic eould he served liy keeping up these distinctions amongst the civil servallts.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Is this gentlentan in your own department:
sir Johs thombson. Yes.
Mr. DAVIEN (P.E.I.) Is he doing elerical work:
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. He is doing the hetter class of clerical work, inlexing and matters of that kinit.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) When did he goto the Justice bepartment:
Sir JOHN THONPNON. Within fone or five months.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) The senteman is an ohl friend of mine, but I malerstoon he was in the (ustoms Department.
sir 10 HN THOMPNOS. He was in the Ratil way Department hut the work he hat heen doing there stopped, and I got him into my department as a temporaty clerk.

Mr. MoMULLEN. I have heard of some peanliarities with regaril to this gentleman and perhaps this is his reward.

EXQUIRIES FOR RETCRNS.

Mr. FliNT. I would call the attention of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to the fact that an Orider passed at my instigation last session, on May 27 , asking for certain returns in reference to the fishing bounty, hats not yet been complical with.
Mr. TUPPER. 1 will leok into that matter.
Mr. SUTHFRLAND. I womblike to know when the other papers referring to the London election will he broug!t down:
Mr. Patterson (Hurom). There has been the utmost expedition ased with in view to olitaining these papers. lint the Superior Courtsin Toronto as well as the revising ofticer and the julge in Lemblon have had to he applied to. and this will lead to delay.

Mr. DAVIEs(P.E.I.) Cemain papers were laid hefore the House in regarel to the question between Sewfomillam and Gaisala the other day. Ihate had the opportunity of going throngh those papers, and I tind one very impentant paper is missing, a despateh from Lord Kumesforl. dated the th Angust, $1 \mathrm{~s}: 1$, containing a propesition which ennanated from the Newfoumblam cowermment for a settlement of these differences. That despateh is not anmeng the papers, and it is impossible to come to anything like a proper comelusion about these matters without that despatch. I would ask the hom. genteman whether it was designedly omitten for a purpose. or whether it will be bronght down? Also, I want to ask the hon. gentleman, as it does not appear on the papers, what is the nature of the proposition which went trom Canala on the th March last, and that the Newfoudhand (iovernment forwarded throngh the secretary of state: There are the two propositions, one emanating from the Newfomilaml Gowernment, and which appears to lee contained in a despatch from Lord Knutsford, of the 4th Augast, 1891 : and the other, it proposition which I assume went from the Camadian (iovernment lately, dated the + th March, and which wats referted to in some of the hon. gentleman's papers.
Mr. TLPPLER. Speaking at the moment, so far as I remember, my inpression is that one or looth of the papers to which reference is male. are waiting for the approval of Her Majesty's Govermment before being hronght down. Thiere are several despatches which are withheld until consent is obtained. I will make enguiry and inform the House detinitely.

OVERFLOW OF LAND AT COTEAU.

Mr. BERGFRON. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to call the attention of the Minister of Railways and Canals to a matter of some importance at the present time: This morning, coming up from Montreal, we came near being delayed at Coteau station by the overflow of water at that place. I suppose there are $\mathbf{2 5}, \mathbf{O N O}$atces of lame covered by water in that neighbourhood. The water almost touches the bridge that crosses the river at Sit. Polycarpe, and in many platees the water comes almosit up to the height of the rails. I think this would be a very goond occasion for the (iovernment to send sonte engineers there amd find out whether the water can pass throurh its natual chamel, and whether the proposeat canal will have the effect of hlowing up the chamnel. The (iovernment ought to take some action at the present moment. At present the farmers camoot claim any damages, hut if the canal is built the dovermment will probably know in a short time at how mach the farmers will estimate the damages for their land being covered hy water.

Mr. HAtidiAP'T. The staff of engineers that surveyed the canal is now there, and they are employed in the construction. There is no doubt that as they are on the ground they will take cognizance of what is groing on in that section of the country. After the debate in the House some time ago, when the hon. gentleman drew wat atention to the ditficulty likely to arise from the passage of Water maler the canal, I asked my engineers for information upon the suliject, and they said they hat manic carefal calenlations, they knew the anaount of country the water drained, and there Wias ample provision, according to their plans, for the passitge of the water under the eamal.

GREAT NORTHERS RAILIVAYCO.

Mr. (iUAY (for Mr. IAathiek) askerl, Whether the forernment have received an engineers report on that part of the railway of the company called the Great Northern Rialway Company; locatell hetween the village of New Blasgow, in the County of Terrehonue, and the parish of Ste. Julienne, County of Montcalm, traversing the pilish of St. Lin, Comnty of LJAssomption? If so, how long has the said report lieen filed, and what is the purport thereof? Have the Government paid to the said company the whole of the subsidy granted for the building of its railway: What is the amount paid and remaining to lee paid? Do the fovernment intend, during this session, to Mr. lbem: हRoN.
grant to the said company a further subsidy for the extension of its railway?

Mr. HAGliART. On the 30th January. 18M), the engineer reported on the first 10 miles out from New Iflasgow, upon which sien. 000 was paicl. On the 17 th banary. 1891, the engineer again reported on the 10 miles i have referbed to, upon which a further sum of $$(1,0 n$ was pail. On the listh Norember, 1 son. the engineer again reported. showing practically no further work done on this 13 miles, and showing work to the value of $$ 2.350$ remaining to be done to complete the 10 miles. The fiovernment hate not paid the whole of the sulsidy granted for hoiloling its railway. The latter part of the fuestion I am mable to answer for the hon. gentleman.

They hat entered into an arrangement with the diovernment to estallish the inilastry of dairy farming and cheese-making, amd the raising of cattle on an extensive seale, and if they hat carried out the terms of that agrecment they would hate heen entitled to get their lamds at ladi the regulation price. They appear to have dome a great ileal in the direction of falfilling the conditions of the agreement, hot not emough to warman a sale to them at half price, and the compromise arriven at was that they were permitted to buy the area mentioned at the regulation price. The lamd wats patented to thei: assignees on the 10th June, 1851 .

POST OFFICE AND BANK DEPOSITS.

Mr. TINI)ALE askerl. Whether it is the intention of the fosermanent to increase the interest upon de: posits in the Post Office satrings hanks to 4 per cent?

Sir ADOLPHE (ARON. It is not the intention of the fiovernment at the present time to increase the interest on such reprosits.

FLECTORAL FRANCHISE: ACT'.

Mr. ©UAY (for Mr. (HoQterte:) asked, Whe ther it is the intention of the fovermment to introduce a measure with a view to suspend the operation of the Electoral Franchise Act, and to provide that no revision of the electoral lists shall take plate this year?

Mr. PATTERSON (Huron). It is the intention of the fiovernment to intronluce such it measure.

Mr. TLPPPER. Speaking subject to correction, on insinetion of the report of the commissioner who conducted the examination -this report being now in phelece for the purpose of litigation pencling there I may state, in answer to the enquiry, that the $A /$ in gromelen at the islame of Antiesonti last seasint, hut sustained very slight damage. An ennuiry was directed to be made, mader the charge of the examiner of masters and mates. (apt. simith of the department. and the result of the empuiry was a full exmeration of Capt. Koeing and the ofticers from any blame. The canse of the srombling of the steaner at that island was the fact that the lonatswain had cut the leadline and tiad it tagether again in orrter to make it seaure, ind hal neglected to re mark the lines Areordingly, the sommbings mate at that particular time were ineorret.

MONCMENT TO THE LATE PREMIER.

Nir JoHS THoMPNoN. It is the intention, so soxm its a vote of Pialiament is ohtatimed.

PONTAAC ANO PACMFIC: JCN("ION R.ILIWA:

Mr. MLRRAY moved for:

Keports, docments, memorials amd correspondence relating to the finthergrant of a subsidy towards the eompletion of the Pontiac Pacific Junction Matilroad.
He said: Mr. Speaker, my ohject in moving this motion is to ascertain ats to whether this road is going to obtain assistance from the (iovernment. The roal, 1 understamd, is in a eritical comdition. When I placeal this motion on the Order Paper I was not in full possession of information which I have since olotained. I desire to ascertain whether the company will oftain from the liovermment money necessary to complete this road. I am not aware that they have directly applied to the bominion (iovermment for aid, but I understand they intend to dosso. I am ratite satistied that if such aid is not obtainel, the road will uot be completed for years. The company seeks a renewal of the charter by a special Act of the Legislature. I think the House and the (iovermment should interest themselves in this enterprise. The people of the County of Pontiac labour unler very great disalvantages. They have given this compuny a bomas of $\sin (0)$ (OX) to assist in the constraction of the road, and they are very much interested in its completion. It is han policy on the part of the dovernment to leave the company in a crippled comelition finameially, if that is its prosition, and I am told it is, becallse it his the effeet of hriving people from the conmery. A direct levy has heen laid on the people. In fact, the sheriff is determined to levy the amomit due on the bmas. It is very well to talk alomt perple heing driven from the country by inect taxation which might he due to unrestricted reeprocity, when the sheriff is now endearming to levy an exenution for $\mathrm{SNO},(\mathrm{KK})$ compons, including interest and costs. While the Dominion forerment has largely aided roads all over the bominion. hereis a road at the doorss of the capital placed in this mafortunate pro. sition. I cem quite mulderstime that the giovernment have assisted balways for the genemal henetit of the comatry to the extent of $s=3, \dot{B}(x)$ a mile. but they have departed from that rite in many instances. Lenking over the reports, I tim there are many catses in which this sulsidy has heen excerded.

All these roads have received for one reasom or other vere liberal grants, and I think the cisemmstances of this importiant romel, the Pontiate and Pacific Junetion, womld wartant the deovermment in dealing with it in a liberal manar. In my opinion, the roall will otherwise remain for a long time untinished. I desire to dratw the attention of the Honse to the fice that the total eash sul,. sidics granted to railways amonat to $846,1+10,9.9 .6$.

 a total of S13.7.aion, (123.3. Taking the population of Pontiac, aceording to the Dominion census. We give situ, (MO) ats the proportion of the whole railway sulnsidies of Cianalia due to the County of Pomtiac. So that considering the Comity of Pontiac, an old county which has contributed largely to the revenue of the old Parliament of (anala at least, and is contributing largely as a tax-paying county to protection, if you will : I believe it ileserves fair and due consideration at the hamls of the fovernment in regard to this particular roal. True, Sir,

I am here as an opronent of the present fiovern. ment. but it cloes not follow, I hope, that justice shonh not he done to that comity.

An hon. MFMBERE It does follow.
Mr. MCRRAV. Well, it should not follow. I know that some queer things have been done by all fiovermments, but here is a case where the Government have an opportunity of showing that they will he influenced in the interests of the people, and not sole ly in the interests of party. I (lo) not say that I have every eontilence in the (iovernment. 1 ditfer with them on the trate ques:tion. hint notwithstambing that. I hope that they will do what is fair and right hy the people I represent. The perple of the Connty of Pontiac hate heen leceived in this matter : they have had great promises held out to them, hat they have leeell misled into roting this sleno(nx). They were led to helieve then that the milwity would lie extembed all through the comanty, hut mow it is only extemden some 30 or 40 miles. Of course this is to a certain extent weir wirn fatult. Hecallase they should have grarded themselves hetter in the by-law. and had I known as much about the true josition of the by-law then as I domow. I might have alvised the prople to oppose the granting of that lomus. However, the unfortumate comilition of attitirs exists. and the guestion is whether it is worth While for the dovermment to take this matter into consideration, and to deal with it as I lelieve they ought to rlo. I would ask the Minister of Ratways, whom I look upon as representing this portion of the lominion in the (ahinet, to take that matter into his serions consideration. I Wombl ask that he shomblasecrtain as fat ats possible the true comblition of affairs there, and that he will act, ats I trust he will, in the public interest in regard to that materer. I has to proppsise, secombed hy Mr. Devlin. the resolution which 1 have placedi in your hanils. Mr. Speaker.

Mr. HAGiailit. Mr. Speaker, there can he no possible objection to lringing down all the paperss and documents in the posisession of the fiovermment with reference to granting sulosidies to this particular linc. I can tell the hon. gentleman all the papers that we have in reference to $i t$. There has leeen an application for a sulsidy, and the usual subsidy per mile was granted for the whole length of the railway from the city of Hull to the town of Pembroke. The only application that we have in the department for any other grant, or any other sulosidy, is for a subsidiy of 2 miles of road to conneet it with Ottawa. Jhe hon. gentleman hits a perfect right to make the lest catse he possibly cean for his constituency, and to show the amonnt of money they would hive heen entitled to if they got a fair distribution. But it is rather a long drawn argument to say that there has leen a certain sum of money granted for mailways all over the country, and to adil to that $49,(0(0), 0(M)$ aceres of land given to the Canadian Pacific Railway and the different railways in the North-West, capitalizing it at 52 an acre, in order to show that Pontiac was entitled to a sum of $\mathbf{S j} 40,0 \times 0$. 1 am frightenel that on the same system of leasoning nearly every constituency in Ontario and Quebec would be entitled to nearly the same sum as lontiac, and at great many of them to more, becaluse a great many of them have not even received the consideration that Pontiac has.

Motion agreed to.
Mr. Mrrkay.

Mr. PIMiAR moved for :

Copies: of the original latters Patent of incorporation of the bominion Cotton Mills Companv (Limited), and of the Supplementary Letters Patent inereasing the capital stock of the sat id company from $s 100.000$ to $$ 5 .(1) 0.0000$. and coppies of all correspondence, petitions, statements and evidevee submitted to the liovernment in support of the issue of such Supplementars Letters latent.

 The ehief applicants were : A. F. (ianlt anill 11 . Monrice, Montreal. They matle: their application in Octoler, and letters patent were ismad on the Esth Nosember, lsoo, incorporating them. Within a month after that. on the ${ }^{2}+\mathrm{th}$ December. Is!on, supplementary letters patent were issued to that company, increasing their capital from sions.(MK) to Sionol, (wn). That company has now acepuired a monopoly in the manufactare of grey cotton thronghout (anama. They have atepuired the Hatifax Cotton Company, of Xorat Scotia : the Windson Cotton Company, of Nova Neotia : the Moncton Cotton Company. New Brunswick: the Hochelaga Cotton Comprany, of Guelece; the Nit. Ames wiming company, of Quebec : the coaticook Cotton Company, of Quelnee: the Kingston (onton Company. of Ontaris, and the Cirey Cotton Company, of Ontario. 'Ihis, I understand, includes all the grey cotton mills in Camada except l'arks is Suns mills in St. John, N.B. That concern is, I believe, in the hamls of liguidators and is leeing operated for the henefit of the creditors, and it is a puestion whether, amh how long, it can stand out against this huge monopoly. The morle in which they operated was, I understand, to use the Hochelacia mills and the Sit. Anne's Spinning Company, with which dhe original promoters of this scheme were comecterl. to depress grej cottons by over-proluction aml cutting prices. They then bught all these mills, paying usually part cash and part honds of the Dominion Company, which hat originally no mills at all of its own. That succeeled so well that the same promoters organized another similar institution for getting control of the coloured cottons in the Dominion. Letters patent were granted to them on the 20th of February, 1892. By the original letters patent their capital was also Sl(0), (XX) ; but within three weeks supplementary letters patent were issued to them by the Government, increasing their capital to $55,000,000$. Now, that Coloured Cotton Company, as I understand, on Saturday last, honght and closed their arrangenents with the following companies:-The ('anada Cotton Co. at Comwall, the Stomont Cotton Co. at Cornwall, the St. Cruix Cotton Co. in New Brunswick, the Dumdas Cotton Co. in Ontario, the Ontario Cotton Co. in Hanilton, the Merritton (otton (on at Merritton, and the Lybster Cotton (\%) at Merritom. They have, I understand, leased the (iihsom mills in New Bronswick for ten years. They are the selling agents for the Hamilton Cotton Co. of Hamilton; and. as in the case of grey cottoms, the only institution standing out against them so far is the Parks © Sions cotton mills of sit. John. N.1s. There is the same process to olitain these mills that was prace tised in the cate of grey cottom. They have run them down, cut: prices, ani at last forted them to come intot this arrangement inself-lefence. Now, what may we expect to be the result to the people of Canalia of this rast combination in one of the staple necessaries of life? We mayy. of course. expect in a short time a marked rise in prices. Now hoult that is what they hate orgamed for. They have not had time yet to increase prices much. But I helieve the fact is that one year afo raw cotem was worth from 4 to $i$ enats a prame more than it is today. while the prices of the mannfactured articles are kept up sis far at the same figure. Of counse it is a momopoly, and there is no law apart from the height of the tariff that will prevent this cominhanation from increasing prices to the comsumer. There is no dioverment regulation of prices and no means that I know of, by which the publie can interfere with them, solongas the customs. tariff remains as it is. to prevent them raising their prices up to the uthenst limit. The st rongest dyy goonls honses in Camala might almost be driven out of lusiness by these monopolies. Suppese they refused to sell to them, or suppese they put onerous terms on their sales. They have the strongest honses at their mercy. Then, 1 believe that the promoters of this combine are also interestell more of less in woollen erowns. They ciun very easily make a combition that any house that wants cottons, and all want cottoms, mbst also buy woollens from them: or anything else that they choose to dictate may he forcei upon their customers. Of course, we know that when divers mills were competing for trale, if gons: when debiverel were fomen to be not acesoring to simple, the purchaser could send them back: but this mighty monopoly can refuse to take hack samples, unless forced to ilo so ly law, and they might coerce their customers by refusing to sell to them. They can, and I suppose will, refuse eredit to all small houses in the trate. As a matter of fact, from ellugiries that 1 have made, I know that there are no wholesale dry goons men in this comutry who dare to eomplain against this thing publicly: their hands are tied: they are coercel, intimidated :and unless the representatives of the penple in Parliament. who are not afraid of the monopoly, let the public understand something about it, it will never be checked or exposed. Of course, i monopoly of this kind coulil only be possible under the fostering influence of the high tariff : we know that. We were promised competition when the high tariff was given to us. For a while we did get competition, and the consumers perhaps got the benefit of it. But we know very well that there was an enormons amount of capital lost, desiroyed, wasted in that competition. This monopoly has established itself on the ruins of those cotton companies. not by investing the origimal capital, perhaps not iof per cent, in many cases much less than 50 per cent of the original eapital invested in these mills. The proprietors have given up control of everything, the competition is done away with, the capital is lost, ind the monopoly exists. Now, there is a possibility in this of enormous profits to speculators. Would the promoters have gone to the trouble of getting two companies patented. with an anthorized paid-up capital of slo,(nn), (кн), without intending to make a handsome thing out of the people of Canada in a short time? That Dominion Cotton Nills (company has heen in existence a little wer a year, and its promoters are tremembonsly interested in sustaining our high tariff. Our tariff puts money into their porkets, and it would he only natmal to them, as 1 am informed they dill. althomesh so young. to contrihute very liberally to the Red Parliur election funds in Montreal during the election, of 1 s:9. They comtrihute freely to the Reel larlour in Montreal. or, in other words, the Montreal Lndustrial Association presided over bis atistinguished member of the other Honse. They ernlit. of comsere easily affion to contribute their shate of that lenign influence which has heen spoken of as having so mysteriously rained hown like the dew from Heaten in so many constituencies at the bye-elentions, and I helieve that they did so eomtribute. Their names have been prositively given to me. I have moved for a return of papers comprising the origimal letters patent of incorporation of the Dominion (onton Nills (company. Limited. amb of the supplementary letters patent increasing the capital stock of the com-of all correspondence, petitioms, statconents and evidence submitteal to the dosemment in support of the issue of such supplementary letters patent, imil I hate movel for them with repect to lwoth these companies. It is a nies scheme certamly for an inemporated company, anil 1 , lraw the attention of the Minister of Justice to it. Suppose this had nothing to do with the cotom company, for a moment. Here is a company which comes amd asks for incorperation with a capital of $\$$ low (Mn), on which, under the terms of the Aet, it has to sub), scribe 01 per cent and pay up 10 per cent. L'inder the terms of the Aet, if they comply with this comdition and satisfy the fovermment as to expenditare :und mmin , fille character of the enterprise, they have no further subseription to make on the new capital, and mo futher payment to make on the new caipital at all. They suliseribe the original $\mathrm{Sl}(\mathrm{N})$,(0) (n) and pay up on per cent on that, and then they get an increase. In these cases they have an increase of fifty times what their original capital was. It has been increased ly the Order in Council. That is a very good seheme. As a professional man, if 1 were alvising a client of the easiest way to get incorporated under the Dominion Letters Patent Act so as to pay up very little, I would tell him, as apparently these people hare heen advised, to apply first for only one-fiftieth of the capital they really require and then, within a month as tinese people did, apply for supplementary patent for increased stock. That would be granted to fifty times the original amount and then they get off with a small subscription and a very small payment down. Another thing, if they had any big object in view such as this, of bnying out the whole industry of the Dominion, they would not have to advertise their large capital. Nolody wonld suppose that it cottom company with siloni,(MX) capital wouh do very mach harm the country, am therefore the notice given in the Gerefte: womld not alarm anyhooly. hat when they apply for supplementary letters patent they do iur require to give any notice in the rine:the at all. These gentlemendid not give any notice. The first thing the public sees is that an Order in Council has heen passed lif the dioncrmment and supplementary patents issurel. the forernment may say that sueh proweding is a matter of ordinary routine maler the Act. which says that :

- After the compactors hate passed the neressary bybaws, ther shall. i: the ir petition for sumpementary berters patent. furnish a cond of such be-laws alme cetahish to the satisfaction of the sererefary of state of of suth wher wificer as is charged by the forrame in commeil to remort thereon, the due passite and aproval of such belaw. and the cepedienas and bent fite character of the intrease, and the soretary of state is homen to keep a reard of any reguisite cuidence in writing, by oath or aflimation or by sobemndeclaration."

The forernment had two warnings of what these perppe were loing when they issmed the supplementary letters patent omly in March last, within three weeks of the issue of the original : amblyoullike to know. hat I do not ask for an answer now, some gool reasom. when the papers are hrought down, why the forermment allowed this eompany to acpuire these extracorlinary and injurions monopolies.
sir fOHN THOMP: $\mathrm{O}_{\mathrm{N}}$. The hon gentleman is right in supposing that we are not in a position this afternom to phace before the Honse the information which he desires, or even to diseluss with mach light the points to which he hats referred. We will be very glad, however, when the papers have leeen brought down, to give the hon. gentleman any opportunity for disenising the course that he supposes has been taken in the granting of these letter's patent. I think the hom. gentleman is mistaken in supposing several of the circumstances that he thinks oceured in regard to the supplementary letters patent. I think he is mistaken, for instance, in supposing that there was no notice given for the supplementary letters patent. The hon. gentleman's argument is principally based on the assumption that the companies who have had these supplementary letters patent intended to enter on arrangements contrary to the general interests of the people of (amada. and he proceerls to criticise the dovermment for giving facilities to these companies for so doing. It would certainly he preferable for us mn this side--1 mean for the members of the (iovermment-hefore entering into amy disenssion of such wrong-loing, or of any possihle fanlt in giving facilities to these companies to increase their capital without proper precantions, that we shomb have better vidence than the statement which hats heen fomm in the press that these companies have acepuired mearly all the cortom factories in the comentes. I do not agree with the hom. gentleman that. beeanse of that. they would have acepuived a mongomy in this conintry. On the entrary, any oblher company combld enter inte comperition with them.

Mr. MIDL心 (Borthedl). But if the matket is not ahlop uate:
sir JOHS THOMDSAN. The market will ser. tainly he inlengate if ble prives are misent, an the hom. gentleman says they will he.

Mr. CHARLTON. But the prices may lo. drop. ped again ahmest immediately.
Sir John THompros. The home sumbenan: argument is that the article will he promaced prattically by ane concern, and that the prices will he: raised to the comsumer. There can be no ditionthy for the other pronlucers to place their gewnh on the market, and if it were estidisishen, ats the hom. genteman seems to assert, that the tarifl was the means of enabling such a company toact יppressively to the consumer, it wonld certainly unt very long remain so. That पllestion wats intronduced io the Honse last gear in regard to ano her mater. and the comery can have iow dombt as to what the wed mot have any misgivings as the friendly. relations of the dovernment with these mamifacturers, if what he calls the Montreal lied Partour has no more tangihle existence and no more palpable effect upon the policy of the fa, cermment than the imaginary Red barlour of Toronto. As to the return for which the hin. genteman has askel. I do not know what this correspondence may be, 保, generally speaking. I kuow the cate whish has heen taken in regard to the issue of letters patent and supplementary letters patent has beeng generally directed to the point that the persoms have ample capital to enable them to engige in the husiness, and that they are solvent and reputable persons as far as on information goes. If they are solvent and reputible persons and have sutficient capital to engage in husiness, it is the first time that we have hearit that the fat of their having a large capital should be regarded with caution in granting them letters patent. The evilence is always preserved in these cirses, becanse it is taken in the way of alepositions, and it will be brought down.
Mr. CASEY. If there is one quality more than another with which the Minister of Justice has leen credited, it is that of applying logic to facts. I do not know that we can any longer credit him with this after what he has stated to-day. He has stated that the buying up of all the cotton factories in the country, if that has occurred, does not constitute a monopoly, and that the market is just as open now as before for any one to start a new factory and put cotton on the market. Surely the hon. gentleman must le exercising his right as an Irishman, and must lee joking with the House when he makes such a statement. Every one knows that, when one article is lought up, or the factories which make it are bonght up, over the whole country, that amomisto monnpoly, becanse every one else can be crushed out. The hom. genteman also says that the omly thing the (iorernment hats to consider in granting letters patent is the amount of capital, and that it is no ohjection that the applicants have a very large capital. Stated in these worls, his position is coir. rect. but, if it is understonel as it was, that this new combination is formed for the purpose of ereating a combine in the sense that word has lately aceruired, namely, a pactical momopoly erated ly luying up all cxisting fatories, then the finvernment shond mot havelent theiraid to it. hme should hate looked at the question of public: polies. and not simply at the guestion of e:pital. Whein they were issuing letters patent. 1 take issue with the him. gentleman on these two gromms. Either his stitememt that the purchase of all the existing fateroties does not amome to a monpoly. must be a joke. of it is wery ermenus. His other statement that it was mot the hasiness of the dowemment to enguire as to what the applicants intented to dor with their capsital, pronided they hanl sutficient capmal, was unsumb and even muconstitutional. In discharging the dity of a diovemment, they shomble empire what the :esults. masy le and whiat the affects may be upon the traike of the comutry. On the tirst print. 1 mpeat that the Minister must he chatines the House or simply making a special pleat on the acond $p^{\text {ninint. }}$ he cevidenty is making the ambmanement of a police, and I have it to the Honse to consider Whether it is not an unsomi poliey to give lethers patent to any company who aply with suthicicnt capital, withomt considerin? the etfiect which the incorporation of the company may have upon the cumbry

Mr. FIMiARS. The Minister of Instice comtends that monice was given of the applicatioms for these supplementary letters patent.

Sir IOHN THOMPSON. That is my impression.

Mr. EDMAR. I think the Minister of Justice is wrong, hecouse, as a matter of fact, it is not required ly the statute, and 1 have fumbl !pon an examination of the ciatorl myself that mo notices were given. Now. I cannot see how it is possible that the Minister of lustice can maintain that the control by these two companies of such vast powers, under the circumstances I have related, does not comstitute a monopoly. There is the member for West York (Mr. Wallace) sitting behind him: I would like to hear his views, as chairman of the committee on Combines, as to whether that is not a dangerous and injurious monopoly to this country. Why, Sir, I remember that his committee condemned strongly, and I do not say ton strongly, the small conibines in watch cases, in eggs, in cottins, in coal, in the grocery guilds; but how weak and unimportant were they compared to this gigantic monopoly that was concluded no later than last Saturday, under the vast powers given by these supplementary jetters patent. How much more important is it that the Huuse should appoint a committee, and that the 1 ioverument issue a R Yail Commission, to enyuire into this. than it was to disenss those few matters that were rakel up by the Combines Committee in ISss. I have sot the condlusion of their report here and I think it was a little prophetic, and I hope the hom. member for West York has not rereled from the views which are embonlied in the ennclusion of that committee's report. manely :

I believe the main object of the Government was to give employment to some prominent political frieuds of the Government of the day : I cannot come to any other conclusion, because I never could see the necessity for this clrelging. I am anxious to know, and that the House should know, why this work was done, who did it, and the amount of money that has been expended.

All these matters $^{2}$ look rery suspicions, and as at result of this work large guantities of lamls were damaged in the upper Ottawa, some of the claims in commection with which have yet to be settled ly the liovernment. So this work hass been mot only a great expense to the comery aul to imbividuals, hat it is oue that is not reguired in the public interest. I trust that as the dovernaent must see that a mistake has leeen made in these expenditures the fact will not le orerlooked, and relief and assistance will be afforded to some substintial undertaking, such, for example, as the Pontiac and Pacitic Jmetion Railway. In offering these remarks I desire to show that large sums of money are wasted, where, as a small amount wisely expended would place the people of the County of Pontiac in a very favourable position and would make them feel that it is desirable to remain in this comntry, instead of leaving it, for, undoultedly, colonization trains are carrying away many of our best citizens, who observe that while great extravagance prevails, necessary expenditures io not receive proper attention. I think it my duty to bring this matter to the attention of the flouse, and I trust these mistaken expenditures of the past will not again ocerr.
Mr. HAdidART. There can be no possible ohjection to the motion of the hom. gentleman, and all the papers and information asked for will he brought down. But when the hon. fentleman states this was a joh dime for politicat purposes. and that the expense was a mseless ome, ami that it wis carrien out for the purpuse of assisting some political framels of ours in that section of the com us. he is altugether in error. I remember when this work was first bromght lefore larliament, for I was a member of the llomse at the time and 1 listened to the delnate on the advantages of this celehnated canal. There were alvomates of the somth side: and the north side, the member for Pontiate (Mr. Nekay Wright) advocating (wnstruction on the latter sile. Howerer, an impression prevailed in this Honse and the comury that the work was nevessary and there was a vote phaced in the Fistimates in its fatciour. biat when the hom. sentleman iniors that the expenditure was used for the purposes of securing politicaladiantige torner party on that section of the comatry, he forsets perhaps the contract was let in $15: 3$ and that the whole oi the expemiture was mate hetween lsaz and lsess and if any political alsamtare aterned. it was secured hy the hom. ementemans friemhs. I can have no oljection to bring down the papers. hut I wish to show the fallaty of the statement of the hom. gembeminn. that the huilding of the canal was carried ont for the purpose of helping prolitical friends, and that the expentiture wats mande for politieal purpuses. If the expenditure was for pritical purpuses, it wals for the purpose of atssisting the hom. gentlemans friemls during its comstruction.
Mr. MGRRAY. I state that. in my (piniom, such was the case, hecause Mr. Heatin wats an supporter of the dovernment then in power, and hy his influme the vote was phacel in the listimates. I was a camblidate for the representation of Pontiate against Mr. Mckiny Wright, and the changes were rume on the appropriation for the cenal to my disadrautage. It had its effect politically. These things look as if there were some kind of a political, suspicions ring about them. I think, Mr. Speaker, I was justified in making the remarks i did. And I think that the hon. gentleman cimmot but see that it great deal of these thinges are done for political effect, and in order toassist (iovernment supporters, not only in Pomtiac hut also in many other places that I might have referred to.  have not heren pinterl. all whichis in contratention of the statute. It dones serem singular that the revision, which hesem last Imme, shomh unt. on the 4th of April in the following gear. le completed. There is cortanly some defeet somewhere which ought to le remeided. I cannot molerstand how. when the tinal revision took plate in December. the lists of four months after are not printed. It leanls to the suspicion that there is something wrong: it hats a tembency to canse people to helieve that the fincermment commine at this, amol. in the interest of the (iovermment themselves, they showhel see to it that no such laxity shombl prevail with regat to the printing of the lists. The other day I went on the Clerk of the Cown in Chatery and lesired the list for the viding I have the homoni to represent. ind was tohl it hat not heen printed yet. This is a state of things which should not exist under the operation of the Act. The Aet is explicit, and eeramy there is a laxity the fowamment should see to. It isimleed very combersome and cammot be kopt in orler mless revised every year. There are defeets which crept into the revision last fear and camnot he got over properly unless the lists are revised each year. An ammal revision is so expensive that it is almost impossible to think of it, but I have been told by revising officers, who endeavoured to do their duty faithfully, that it is impossible to have a proper revision unless it be an annual one. The difficulties that arise when there is mot ammal revision are very great. I cond cite some instances which would hear out what I say. Now, an elestor whose name was on the list, when revised in $18 s i$, died in April of that year, aml the sum inherited his estate. The revision took plate in the ent of $18 s 9$. The sumanes were not the same, but the son inherited the estate amd contimeed to ne:upy it until the next revision. and hisname wiss unt changeal. and when he vorted at the elections his vote was challenged amd he was shopected of having voted improperly hepersomating his father who had died thre or four years hefore. Amother e:ase arose which came miler my notice, wherein two erasins were eomaphed. Whe the owner of a firm. aml the other the soll of a finmer livine atoross the concession. Theome harl lived there eontimatly since INsif, the other in the hegiming of Iss.in had when the elections cante abon the chertor whoh had to be tried for hatinspersonaterl his mamesake whon was out of the comater. The douht wats whether it was he or his consin who remained on the list. (anes of that kime creep into the Set when the revision is mot ammal and give rise to grat dillicalties. There is athother ditherolty whin I womd like to draw the Ministers attentions. It is a fact. That mamy of these ont the lists are mon resiflemt in (analia. Lnthe townshipof Nommany. We ohjerted to almat ! 1 namme on the list and of these. 7 or were in the United states. Then we had a dithenty strikins the names ati. Fliey hat wo real extate : they had heen put on he derlatation. amd we were bable ahmost to have their mames to satisfy it enurt of law. We and hot summum them as they were a thonsatm miles arroy, aml some of them hatel to ter left om. This hrings up the suljevet arain of the resimalitity of esahlishin! the rule of "one man me: vote." That is the maly way in which pon ean weremme dithienties Which theaten te eontinme so bong as the present system lists. It womblhe fair. eunitathes, and just if we ornd only eangaft that on the Bill. The Bill would mot possess those objeectionahle: rlanses it mow prossesses. and foreign voters. living in a foreign laml. who have no stake or interest in the eomitry, wonld not be allowed tome in, when an elecian is howeht on, and vote. Althourg they hate no interests in the country, they get an the lists owing to the operation of the Act, and hecanse of the requirementis the revising officer must have in the way of evidence, it is inpossible for as to remove them. Many of those foregners are on the list and continue to vote and contmol the destinies of the comutry. There are an great many features I would like to see changed in the Aet, hut f do not think it can be made workable mess revisel every year, and then the expense is so great the only remedy is to abolish it entirely.

Mr. PATPTERSON (Huron). One of the canses of the delay in the printing of the lists has been the desire of the liurean to print the reports of the departments in order that they may be laid before Parliament. 'jhe printing of the lists is now being pushed forward, and the remarks made hy hon. gentlemen will receive every consideration.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). The House will receive with gratification the statement of the Secretary of sitate that it is the intention of the (iovermment at an early day to bring down a measure dealing with the elective franchise, hecanse 1 believe the experience of every hom. gentleman on either side of the Howse is that no measure could te worse than the one which is now on the statute-ho;k. I never had any donbt in my mind that it would prove oppressive and highly unsatisfactory, and I think the experience of the seren yearsluring which it has been in operation hats jnsti. fied all the apprehensions of those who, when it was tirst propmeed, gave it a must determinel opprision. The dovernment of this conntry is a Federal (bovermment, and the Federal Leginhatare hats mot, amb cannot vers well have, an effective marhinery for the purponse of preparing a coters list. This sulject was bery fully emsidereal hy the fumbers of the Americat constitution. Whein the subject was maler disenssion in the comvention which framed that comstitution, prowision was made after full disension that the palalification for an deem for the election of a member to the Homs. of Reqresentatives slowhla he exactly the same as the platitication resuired for the election of a member to the mast prpmata heanch of the state Lewislature. That principle was not embentied in omb constitution, but is was embentied in in our stathe, was reafirmed by the statute of 15 : 4 , and emment mutil the election of 1 sis: ats the principle upon which the election of members to this House should take phate. The printiple is in itself an ohtions one. It wats hased upon the assmuption that, in a large comntry corerins at territory shextensive, that it is necessary to intronluce the feleral principle the interests will he so diversitied and the combition and ciremmstances of the population in the different parts will le so different from cath other that what may be a very proper pualitication for the voters for the election of members in one province may not le so convenient or proper a qualification in another. The wealth, the diversitied imbustries of the comury, the different oecupations of the people may render proper a qualiticittion in one province which woid not be proper in another. Wie hate. in this Electoral Franchise Act, discarded in a large degree the principle of giving any representiltion to it person on account of any anmunt of personal property which lic may possess, hut in one important particular we have departed from that rule in the recognition of the qualitication of fishermen. We recognize the boats and tatekle of fishermen as a hasis of yualification for the election of members to this Honse. I am not going to discuss the guestion as to what ought to be the basis of gualification. If we revert to the principle that the qualification for the election of members to this Hunse should be the qualification for the election of members of the Local Legislatures, then it would be for us, as electors, to press these matters upon the attention of the Local Legislitures instead of discussing the matter here. The Local Legislatures possess all the machinery necessing to prepare an effective voters list, and I venture to say you will never have an efficient niachinery so long as you undertake to appoint one person to prepare the lists and also to revise them. That is not done in the United Kingdom. There the revising officer is what his name implies, an ofticer who has power to revise a list, with the preparation of which he has nothing to do. The list is prepared by others, by the parish otficials iu the various parishes of the Enited Kingrom. So here the municipal councils; of the different mumicipalities in most of the pro-viaces--at all erents, in these provinces where municipal comacils exist -were the parties who prepared the lists, and the county julge, until the present Act was intronluced, wais really the revising officer. He revised the list and heard appleals, but with the preparation of the original list he had no concern. I do mot cale how well an ofticer maly he acquainted with the population of the electomal district, his knowledge nust always les an far fromany hinglike perfection that a ver latese number of persons withont persomal application and withont special attentimon their parte may le leftoff the list. Bither they will have to mathe persimal application themselves or some ome who is wither a reperentative or aspires to be a representation must lowk after the list. if it is wapmathen completeness. In the orizinal preparation he the munispal counci, sou have in these councils. in the firsi plate, pursoms whothelong to the difterent politiad parties. It is a tare thing to find a municipat coumeil of tive persons all of whom ate memhers of one pritital party. Their chectins take plate withont reference the their poli. tieal hiats or politiont tealings. atme ser when the preparation of the coters liat takes plate in the first instane. Ineth parties are represemten in that preparation. There is a certain amome of diligence exarcisel which remders the list tempanatively complete from the very hereminis. and the enmplete. ness of the list as it is migitially prepared lie the municipal comed sitting a a comit of revisiom, sates to canlidates, satues thative men of both politiat partice, a very arat deat of tromble amb of expense. 1 trust, when we have the meanme which the (ionemment have pomised as this sessin. in will be a metsure reverting to the prinsindes which governed the preparation in the lisi- for the tirst eqghes vears of the existeme of this Parlianment and this Consederation, principles against which nu serions comphant was made, and which were inexpensive-in fact which relievel the covernment of the Dominion and this Lewislat turefromallexpenses whatever. Sir, I am not going further wanticipate the measure of the Ahministration. hat I believe 1 state the sentiment on that side of the House ats well as upon this, when I say that the present law is found to be expensive, cmmbons, imperfert and oppressive in its charater, at measure that imposes a needless expense upon the representatives in Parlianent, whether the helome to the one side or to the other, and if it he a year in which an election is not inticipatel, in almosi wery case the party that is unrepresenterl in this Honse in a constituency has a very imperfect list at its final completion. That must necessitrily be the case. for without some more efficient machinery that that which the present law provides, hy means of some local otficers who possess the necessary personal knowledge, I think no list can ever be made guite satisfactory. I trust the measure which the Government have promised us will be bronght down at an early date, so that we may have time, not only to discuss the principles of the Bill, hat anple time to consider, before the Bill reaches any final stage in this House, with the utmost minuteness, the character of its various provisions ; for a complete and perfect franchise Act is one in which, not only the members on both sides of this House, bui the public at large, have the greatest possible interest ; it is a measure which lies at the hasis of our political freedom, it is a measure that ourht to he as perfect as it is possible to make such a bill, lecamse the rights amd immmities, the political privilegres and the politiaal freedom of the population in this country, and their control over Parjiament. depend upon the character of the Franchise law in a large degree. I trust that the measure which has been promised liy the secretary of State on lehalf of the dovermment, will he it measure that will prove satisfactory to the Honse and to the comintiv. (ertainly, the Act upon the Statute-bork is ats hat as an det call well be: it is open to as many ohjoctions as any measure that, since (oufenleration. has heen passed into latw, and it is to be hoped that one fairer in its chanacter, fairer to the (1pposition, fairer to the pullic at large, than this cone, will he submitted to the Honse in the promised measure of the Administration.

Mi. (HARITON. I presume that momember of this Honse sittin! upen the (1pposition side hats ever heen called upon to face the ditioulties. trombles and expense attemines upon a revision of the voters list, under the Domimion Firachise law. withont feeling that the hame of political oppression rested heavily upm him: and 1 presume that no member supportint the (iovermment has ever heen placed in like cireumstances who did not feel that he was paying learly for the privilege contages seeured hy this Act. Dy hom. friend from Buthwell (Mr. Mills) says that the law is ans hat as it Well can he: it is an oppressive law, an expensive law. a cumbersome latw. a law that never has worked satisfactorily, and a law that never can work satisfactorily as it is at present framed. I would be sorry, Alr. Speaker, to attribute to the gentlemen upon the opposite side of the House se low a flegree of intelligence as to suppose that they are not perfectly well aware, me: and all, that this is an unjust and oppressive law, and that the only excose for its existence, the only reason for existence, is that it confers upon the (iovermant of the dity an undue and improper political alvantage. I say improper political indrantage, lecanse it is in their power to make an improper use of this law ; the officers who make the revision of the list are their arcatures, they hoh prsition during their pleasure : the lists mate by these oficeers are printed in the diovernment printing oftice here, umfer the supervision of the fovernment, and maty le tampered with at their pleasure, and the perople of this country, those whore argrieved by their action, are helpless, and can do nothing to redress the wrong. It is in their case a matter of sufferance as to whether they shath have justice or as to whether they shall sulmit. This is the chat racter of this law. I feel deeply about this. I resisted the passate of this Act, for months, in this House. We predicted all the evils that would thow from it, the evil of great expense, the evil of cum bersomeness, the evil of two voters' lists and two sets of machinery-all these things we predicted. We predicted that the law would work unsatisfactorily, as it has done, we showed them that the motive that incited the Govermment in the action that it took in regard to this matter, was a desire and a design to secure an unjust politicial advantage. There is not such a franchise law in existence, outside of Canada, upon the broad face of this globe, not one. They profess to copy the provisions of this law from the british law ; they name their chief officer a revising harrister after the otficer under the British law. But, as my hon. friend from Bothwell has pointed out, the voters lists in Englami are mate ly municipal officers. ly the overseers of the poro : the fiovemment revising harrister has nothing to do with making the lists: while in this country he hats autocratice powers with regard to making the lists. In England the lists are mate by the overseers of the porr, hy manicipat ofticers elected hy the people : thene lists are revised by an otticer who is entirely independent of the (iowermment. who is meither appointen by the dovermment nor cen be remover hy the finernment. Int is a juticial ofticer. seerving in at julicial capacity, amd appointed hy the courts of the lamd. and the forermment has mothing whatever todo with the making, or the revision, or the publication. of the list used in that comatry. There is not at British colony, ontsinle of ('imalia, where any such provision exists: there is not an binglish-speatinge commonwealth upon the face of the glohe. Where such provisions exist. Where there are placed. in the hatmls of the dovermment such powers. ats are wielled by the avermment of (ianala in commection with the Iominion Francinise: Act now in force in this land.

Sow. Mr. Speaker. we have had in (imanda. for is years, onv eleetions upon the provincial lists. There never was an ohjection raised to it, there never was an assertion made that they did not work satisfactarily, that they did mot work prosperly, that they dial mot work in the interest of the public. No, Sir. the change was male, uot heratase of oljections to the mode that harl heen pursumel, the change was matle becanse the diovermment desided to make a change. that would plate i:a their hamls powers that they had mot exereised before. that would give to them aldantages that they did not enjoy umber a fair framchise law, ami for that reision they enacted this alnminable, this iniguitons, framehise law. a blot upon our statute-book. a blot upon our record as a comatry, a blot upou the foremment that placed it upon the statutebook, and retains it there despite the protest of the people. Now: I hold that the exercise of the franchise is primarily and properly the exercise of a civil right. The Provincial Leegislatures and Governments of this Dominion have control of civil rights. When a member is elected hy a- riding in a province to take a seat in this House, he comes here to represent that portion of the province from which he comes: he comes here to discharee a civil right in looking after and advancing the interests of this province. If ou: provincial constitutions: were slightly changed, he might be elected to come here by the Legislature of the province; anl the whole borly of the representatives of the province would he just as properly and just as truly representatives of that province in this Parliament if they were selected by the Legislature. as if they were selected by the people. And it is an improper exercise of the civil rights and an infringement on the rights, privileges and immunities of the citizens of the province for the Government to step in and assume the control of the mode in which the members sitting in this House and looking after the interests of that province and representing that province shall be elected. Reference has been made to the course pursued in the United States. (ertainly the experience of that country, the example of that country, for a periond of more than $(\mathbb{O})$ years should be of use to us and considered loy us. The people of the United states lived under the articles of confeeleration for ten years, and in aldition to the experience arising from their long colonial existence they had the benctit of those ten years immer confederation. In the light of the experience thus acquiren, in the light of their colonial experience, in the light of their experience under ten years of confelleration. their constitutional comvention dealt with this guestion of the representation and of the franchise, and ats to what should $1_{\text {we }}$ the gualification of a voter who should be calle upon to vote for a member of the House of Representatives of the United states or of the President or Vice-Pressinlent of the States. They considered the guestion fully for weeks. There were varidus propositions malle. It was proprosed that the United States should almpt the course we have alopted and should fix the gualifiation of a roter and enforee it throughont the Linited States. It was proposed that stite Legislatures should elect memhers of the Hense of Representatives. It was propresel that state Legishat ures shoula settle the momle be which they shomble bected: and the decision tinally arrivel at was, that the most popular form of sutfrage: in every state, on the gualification which was required to enticle the party to a wote in the more numerous branch of the state Leesislature. should be the qualification of a woter thromghom the Enitent States in the elections for members of the Honse of Representatives or of President or Vice-Presi lent. That law has heen in existence for over (100) years, and it has never given rise to dissatisfaction. It never has heen found necessary, as it was not necessary in our case, to have the fioiemment of the Coited States step in and assume the power, and exercise it, of deciding what the framelise should le for its own clections. These clections have cominued to be held on the franchise of the states. Their circunstances differ, as the circumstances of our provinees differ. The pualitieations that may he proper and alvisable in Prince Edward Islam or Sona Notatia maty not be proper in Manitolsa on. British Columbia, and each province is the hest julge as to the gualitications that is mosi proper and ativisible as to who shall wote to represent their interest in this Homse. We have the promise male liy the secretary of State that this matter is maler comsideration. I have spoken of this matier to day freely. I feel warmly on this sulject. I feel that the Act is so outrageously injustifiable and undesirable that the best course the fovernment call alopt is to wipe it out altogether and revert th the condition of things which existed 7 years ago, and which was condueive to individual and public interests. This would relicve every member of the House from onerous lurdens; it would relieve the country of an oppressive and cumbrous system if we returned to the plan we had in force for 18 years, which worked so well both as regards individuals and the Government, for it is the hest course to pursue for the public interest and safe government, and it is eminently desirable that we should revert to the original condition of affairs that existed when the Articlem of Confederation wer eadopted and which continued 18 years.

Mr. WALLACE. I do not agree with amy of the criticisms indulgel in lyy the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. (harlton,) who has just taken his seat. During my political carcer I have had aniple experience of the working of the Provincial Voters Act and the Act passed by the Dominion Parliament. I have no hesitation in saving that. the Dominion Act is the less onerous on the camdidate. ind entails less expense in securing a perfect list : amb, moreover, when completed it is a list mone represintative of the people than is the provincial list. Weall know that the assessors in the varions municipalities are supposed to prepare a list for the provincial roters. But the only duty for which those assessors are paid is that of assessing properties in the varioms monicipalities, and many of them pay now attention th plateing on the list those entitled to vote : and aceordingly, in the rural constitnencies, at all events. many of those entitleal to be placel on the list are omititel. In the township in which I reside. at the last revision lok names were placed on the list after the assessors, the township clerk, and the cont of revision had concluted their sittinge. What olves that mean :Theralitition of thene names reduires that you mast hring evidence before the court which will heacerpted hy the court, $\cdots$ not heansaly evidence. or evidence ly statutory dedaration. is is permitted in regard th the jominion eleetions, hut evidene that will satisfy the julge, and srme of the julges are pretty harid to satisfy, tromble. Culer the Dominion list a man does not need tol lose his diays work. ant travel eight or ten miles to atteml the revision, but he may make a statutory declaration. which he cam do in the evening hefore a justice of the peace or a member of the municipal contil, and that declaration is sub. mitted to the revising officer, amd his name is placel on the list with very little trouble and without any particular expense. In regarel to the provincial list no such means of plating ia name on it prevails, and these who seek to have their names registeren are compelled to attend at their own expense, anl freguently lose a day's work to do so. The experience in my riding is strongly in facrour of the Dominion ats against the provincial list, not only from the fact that the Provincial Govermments are hostile to the bominion (iovernment, but that provinctial legislation has been enacted which has had the effect of depriving various citizens of their right to wote. Take Toronto, for example. One third of the citizensaredisframelised. Threemembers areelectent, anda coter isallowed to cast a vote for two of then:, the third being made a member by Act of larliament. The hom. gentleman proposes that we shall adopt this iniguitous system, instead of that of the Dominion Act. I hold that the Dominion larliament is the proper tribunal to legislate in this matter. The only objection that can We male to the Dominion system is that it is somewhat expensive : but in spite of the additional expense in colvel. I am strongly in favour of the retention of the Dominion Franchise Act, because it represents more fully than the provincial system the opinions of the people, and it enables every man who chooses to have his name placed on the list, if it has been omitterl. The hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) says that the Dominion Franchise law gives an unjust political ailvantage. I would like to know from him how it does rive any suchadrantage? Those gentlemen who are appointed as revising otficers are in most cates the julges of the land. In the County of Fork, we have two julges and one ex-judge: men held in the lighest esteem throughout the county. No man ean say that these gentlemen do not perform their duties fairly anl honestly. Are we to le told that these men, sworn to ilo justice, holding the highest positions in the land, and removed from the political arena and party feelings, are likely to give an unfair decision, while the assessors and those other ofticers who are appointed by the Leseal (iovermment hecause of their strong politieal partisan feelings would make up a fair voters list : I suly, Sir, that hoth siles of politics will get justice and fair-plav from the revising officers appointed by the Dominion diovermment. In the ciase of the provincial lists, when a wrong has been lome by the assessors or township derks, to whom is an apleal mate to set them risht: The appeal lies to these very gentlemen whom hom. members on the wher side of the House strongly combemm as revising aflicets. In some cases it is true we fime that revising officers are not juifres. but in such castes the mens selected are men of high stamling athl repute in the community, men who hate reputations to shsiain. harristers of experience gualified to till the position of revisinge officers, atm in addition th that they are men of probity and rectitule. The results in exery case have shown that the work of these revising cofficers has been well, and carefully and consecientionsly done. The member for Xorth Norfolk (Mir. ( harltom) stated that the porising officers were the ber they are placed heyome the power of the dowermment, and the Govermment is mon permite to interfere with them except for canse. The hom. gentleman might as well say that the julyes of the supreme (ourt. and of all the other eonuts in the lame are creatures of the dovermment. They hohl and un revising officer, so far ats I an awate of, has ever leeth chathred except for canse which comble he justified if necersaty on the thoor of larliamene. The member for North Norfolk also mate the extratorlinary assertion, that members might be semt to this l'airliament elected by the lameal hemishatures. and that these members would be as thoronghly representative as if they were sent by the people. I would like the hom. gentleman to Ining in a bill to carry ont that idea of his.

Mr. (:HARLTON. I satid we would hate to: have a constitutional change to lo it.

Mr. WallatCE. Well, sir, the constitution could he chatheed if it were necessatry, and if this idea of the member for North Norfolk is right, he could proceed still further and try and have the constitution changed and the members of the Dominion Parliament selected liy the Legislatures. 1 venture to say. Mr. Speaker, that he would not succeed very well in his attempt, and that he would not get a very large portion of even the members of his oun party who have been pretty reckless in their policies for the last few years, to follow him in such a wild-cat scheme.

Mr. ( CHARLTON . If the hom. gentleman will allow me, I wish to say that I wats merely using that as an illustration of what might be done; and as an illustration the exercise of the provincial power, the sending of representatives here under a changed constitution, who, if they were sent in that mamer, would be the representatives of the provinces in this lialiament. I was not recommenting it, but merely speaking of it as something that might be done, to illustrate the line of argument 1 was pursuing.

Dr: WAILAAC'F. It just shows what these hom. gentlemen opposite would do if they had the power to do. it. The hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) sitid that this Bill wats an outage aunl wats unjustitiable and indefensible. It is int an ontrage, lint it is an honest anll fair Bill. and it is not indefensihle beganse we hate defended it on every platform, and defended it pretty suceessfully, and, further, we are prepared to inefend it again: at any rate, we will defeme it as agramst the inijuitons Framehise Act of the Pro. fince of Ontario. If we compare the lominion Franchise Act with the lrovincial Framchise Act, compare the mone in which the work is dome, compare the inexpensiveness of the one and the expense necessarily involved in the other, 1 hate vet mo hesitation in siving my opinion in favom of athlitiontal expense of it the timermment of fianala.

Mr. Mr:MLILLFX. I Nesire to say a fuw worls in reply to the hom. member for 11 ext Jork (Ar. Wiallace). In the first phace in regatel to this bill, I think there is mot a man in this (hamber, if he homestly almitted his awn comvietions. hat whos would saty at once that the bill is a cumbrous and expensive one to every man who offers ats a cambilate for Parliament. I know that in the section of the country from which I come, ereat ditliculty has been cxperienced hy menom betin sides of politics in the revision of the voters lists. The fact is, that a ciandidate might just as well ron an election contest as pay the expenses of a revision of the coters' lists. We know perfectly well, anl hon. gentlemen opposite know that, ats a rule, the jugges have heen appointed by the present fowemment, amb we know also that the revising harristers are taken from anongst a number of their most pronomoted supporter's where revising barristers are appointed and are mot juldes. We know that these men sit with their eyes constantly open in the direction of securing fatours from hon. gentlemen "pposite.

Nome hon. DPDBRRS. No.

Mr. Mr.MOLLLES. I am speaking now from the experience of the people in my section of the conntry, ame I know whereof I speak. With regard to myself I admit that I have a very decent respectille man as revising ofticer in my riding. At the same time, there are a great many names on the list in the constituency l represent that should not be there. My hon. friend from Fork (Mr. Wiallace) says that it is an honest law, and that these men can get their names on the list without any trouble at all. In my riding a man made a statutory declaration and sent in the names of fifty young men under the age of 21 to be placed on the list in our township. We struck off in that township fifty eight names at an enormous expense. We had in some cases to subprena the fathers and mothers, and in some instances when they were brought before the revising officer, in order to baffe our efforts they wohll not state whether they were of age or not.

Mr. WALLACE. Will the hon. gentleman permit me to make a suggestion to him: He could have summonel the man who made the statutory declaration and he could have got all the informattion he repuired, instead of summoning sisty fathers and mothers.

Mr. MoMULLEN. No, we could not. I am pointing out the chamacter of the Act in order to show that there are those who are willing to take advantage of its peenliar clatuses. There maty be in same ridings people who wish to use the Act homestly and for a legitimate purpose : hat, wherever our opponents have the opportmity, they take advantage of the Act to do what is wrong. I know that that hats beend done in the section to which I belong. I hold that the municipal officers shomid prepare the voters lists. I do not know a single thwnship in my district which is represented entirely by either Reformers or Comservatives: you gencrally tind that moth sides are representeal. The members of the comacil are not elected from one particular corner of the township only, hat from all parts. Comsequently, when the question arises whether a certain mane should he put on or struck off the list, these men are probably well atequainted with the person and all the ciremustances, and are athle to deede properly what slionid be done. For these reasons, they could revise the lixt more heaply and more efiiciently than it can be donse by the present methor. Fien the revising oftieers themselves in many caste have admittel the cumbromsmess of the proceedings under the Aut. It opens the way for manmfacturing fratudent votes. I know that the hon. member for West York almires the Act. Possilily. if he searchad the lootemm incidents of the revision in his district. he would time that he would nut be here at all hut for the Aet.

Mr. WALLACH. 1 was here umber the old Act loy a very comsidemble majonity.

Mr. M-MCLLESS. I conteme that the proper course is to apmoint ar reve of eath township ox officion revising ottieer for the township, making !: .... a Dominion officer if yon will, ani having an appeal from him to the county jadre, ats at present. My hom. friend refers to the system established in the city of Toronto, D, the Gutario Ciovernment. Surely ur; hom. frienil knows that the Ontario Act could wet beapplied to the Beminion atfairs. It provides for the minomy representation in the eity of Toronto.

Mr. Wallack. It disframehises one-third of the electors of Tormito.

Mr. Mumullen. No, it enfamehises onethird, because it gives them representation which otherwise they would not have. If my hon. friend is so fond of British precedent, surely he would not deny the benefit of an Act of that kind which has leen in force in Liverpool and in other cities of Great Britain. The system is on trial in the city of Toronto, and though it has not heen very long on trial, thus far there has not been it great deal of complaint in regard to it.

It being six o'clock the Speaker left the chair.

After Recess.

Mr. MgMULLLEN. Mr. Speaker, when you left the chair, I was liscussing some provisions of the Franchise Act, and was giving some reasons why we shoulh not continue that Act. In our experience with it so far, a great many riitiaculties have arisen, and a great many candidites have sufferel very seriously from the enomons expenses to which they have heen pot in order to get anything like a fair revision of the list. As hate alreaty been stated, we have at very gend and carefully prepareal woters list in the province of ontirio, umber our municipal system. I do not know that there is the same kinil of municipal system in all the other provinces, hut if the municipaid machinery elsewhere is in as gom a comblition for prontucing it satistactory list ats ours is in Ontario. in may humfle "pinion we eould well and prodently save the come try the enormons sum of moner which is mow hing spent ander the operation of the Fizachise Act. The hon member for West York, when ablressins the Howse this aftemom, objected the Ontario daremment heing permitted on ereate: at Dominion franchise hy a stathte of their own. In regard to, that, when the Franchise Aet was intronlucel in this Homse, I wan well remember the then leander of the dovermant deelaring that one of the reasons for intronucing it was to provide returning oflicers who were mit partisans. He stated that a great many camplaints were made that the sheriffs and registras: throughout the Province of Ontario, heing appointees of the Ontario (iovernment, showeif their political bias in the discharge of their duties as retuming officers: and in order to relies: the party in power from heing hampered, ats they sialin, hom. gentemen opprisite passed this Act. taking to themselves the right of appointing their own returning oflicers in every constitueney. Now. if it was emsidered mininst to hom. gentlemen opposite to have sheriffs and registratsappointed by he Ontariodionemment, act as returnime oflicers, why do they ask as to sul)mit quietly and peaceally the their nominating the most promomued partisatis of their own ats returning otficers: If the argument is groul on one side it is good on the other side, and 1 comtemi that we should rot he sulbjected to the injustices we have suffered in many constituencies owing to the partisan actions of returning officers ame deputy retarning officers. There is another feature of the A:t that undoulteelfy shombl he changed, if the fet is to comtinue in force. These omnilns dedanations ly which a man is permitted to ald athy number of names to a voters list in a manicipality, by making a statutory declazation that they are all cutitled to be put on, is a fruitful source of evil. I hold that if a man is to be permitted to take an active part in putting on other names lesides his own. he should be held personally responsible. In my own constituency, one man alded from a thonsand to twelve hundred names to the list, on a declatation made out by him for each munieipality, which he swore to, signed, and executed accoriling to the statute. Vet although he made this swom declaration, in one of the townships there were no less than sixteen names put on of young men, who admitted under oath before the revising laurister that they were under age. To remove such minors, entails a great deal of expense. In that township we had to employ four or five constahles to serve sulpunats on people represent, for thirty years, whose mames were not Whose evilence we required to have those names removel. In: some cancs different judges take different views of the Act. The first revising officer we hat in North Wellingtom, a gentleman who used to le a member of this Honse, endeavomed to dischamge his dutics fathfully and etiociently, amel 1 belice the present gentleman ocoupying that position hats manle an homent effort to procure an homest, fair list. but despite their goosh-will there is a from deal of matrodidule ditticulty in having such names remover. These young men to whom I hate referred. and whose names were put on hy virtue of a statutory declamation, were sulpmonated, hut when they appared in conrt many of them were not prepared toswear whether they were of ase on mot. The revising officer said: These men have beren put "on by a man who decliared umbe: oath that he believed them all to hee of age, amel I must have some evinence that they are not. In order to satisfy the remming ofticer. We hanl, there fore to sulpmena either the father or mother or some other persom who hand personal kuowledge and was prepared to swear that these gouths werenot of age. Now. 1 hold that it is unteasomalhe and mafitir that meen called to dischatge the cluty of supervisine the lists should hee put to the emormous expense connected with the revision of the lists. and in onder to get wer the slificulty, the oith should he altered se that when a young man comes to vote he will be calleal on to swear that he wes of the full age of twentrome at the final revision of the list. li that ehange were made. the effiont to purt men an muler age would mot he se preat as mow. hecathse mow these perple fandey that if they get on the list. an election may wot come on for at year or two and hy that time they will be able to take the necessary math. Another thing that shouhd be some, if the det is to he kept inforee, is tolate a revision every vear. The tet moloulterlly is and enommonsly expensive husiness. hat if hon. gentlemen upposite ate prepared to defend the expense umber the Act they shoulal be prepared to lefemi the revision of the list every yeat. If you loave the res ision off for two or three years, it leares an enormons anomut of work to be done live the revising harrister. The changes that will take place in a town or village, or even a municipality, in two or three years, are so numerons that when you come to revise the list, the labour is something enomons, whereas if the lists were revised carefullif every year, the amome of work would not be sio great on the revising officer, and womblalso be much lighter on others called upon to take an active part in the revision of the lists. If we are to have it at all. let us have a revision each year. dive every opportunity to those anxions to keep pure and perfect lists. Give them an opportunity every year to see that mames which have no right to be there are expunged, and those which should be on. added. You will thas, year by year, produce a better list than we have at present. On the list on which the last election was helel in my riding, although the returning ofticer, I believe, did his best, whether it was throngh mistakes made in the Printing Bureau or mistakes unintentionally made by the revising ofticer, many men were struck off the list who should be on and quite a number were on who should he off. I know of some men who have been residents of the riding I have the honour to
on. I know one man in particulat who is the owner of three humdred acres in that riding. who has voted there in every election for the past twenty-five years, and yet whose name was not on the list at the last election at all. It is very much to lee regretted that such mistakes shoull take place, mijustly depriving men of their framohise. I anmit that, in the preparation of the municipal lists, such errors might ereep in also, but they are more likely to creep in where there is only one revision every two or three years than where there is a revision covery year. I helieve the time has come when the comitry is ripe for a change in the pualitication of the electors. I helieve the time hats eome when we shonld have one man one vote. As long its we keep the liaw ats it is now. you :He lenum to hate any momber of personations. As longe as it remains in its present state: you will have mumbers of people Who have left (amala completely and beomme eitizens of the Conited states. returning here when an election eomes atomme - menform (hicatra. Detroit and Wisconsin - to rive their votes. It is a hurlesigue tusce these men, whin have become American citizens, coming back to (annala tor vote when they have mot one rertige of interest in the comitre Hom. gentlemen opposite. in the enjoyment of all the prestige of office and all the adrantages they reap fom having possession of the Treasury lenches. shond be willing to wo before the people on fair athe efual terms with this side of the Honse. We have laen serionsly hambicapped. The altemation of the law tork this ont of the hamls of the registhats and sheriffis, and the monle of appointing retuming onticers: left us open to any number of canaalties which temal very serimoly against memlers on this side of the Honse. I hate kaown many cases in which returning otficers have been the presidents of the ('omservative assuciation of the rinling. That is mot a fair state of things. Then there are other hlind partisans who refuse to aceept. hallots which are porfecety gomel, ambl somanage toget those who support hon. gentlemen opposite returnerl to this Honse. I know that in many cases where the juiges are appealed to and these hallots. are reconnted. justice is done, but many men lose their seats becanse they hal not the means of following up a case of that kimd. In many cases the declaration has heen postponed from time to time, and the result has heen that the grazetting hats been post poned, and thas one party hits hal it greater arlvantage than the other in reference to appealing those cases. I am glan to say that there is now a change in that respect ; but, while the Aet permits the appointment of the returning officers and the deputy returning officers farourahle to hon. gentlemen opposite, and while the voters list is pronlucen under the eye and in the interest of hon. gentemen opmosite, giving them a deciden alvantage, I venture to say that there is not a constituene: in the Dominion in which the list is now a fair list and in which an equitable contest is held. I venture to say that on every list as tinally revised there are many names whieh should not be printed there at all. That is a condition of things which is to be deplored. However we may differ politically and on the great questions which separate us on the floor of the House, we should be really to go before the electorate of this country on a fair and eduitable lonsis. We only ask a fair tield and no favomr. hut now injustice is done and we only ask to have the Act amembed in orler to see that equal justice shall be clone, and that we may wo before the electors without being handicappeil as we now are. There is another diftienlty in regard to the Act. It is very well known from our experience that the comaty juiges differ very seriomsly in regaril to the provisions of the Act. We know very well what an exhiintion we had in the lombon election case. The revising harrister held that at notice containing simply the words $"$ not qualified $"$ was vague and was not sutticient in itself to lead him to strike off the name of the voter. On the other hamd, other jndges held that sath a mutice was quite sufficient. I think the Aet should phainly and umistakeably outline the notice which is necessiry to be given, so that there shombl mot he any technical allvantage given to any party to adel or take from the list. In my own riding the revising barrister atecepted notices marked ${ }^{*}$ not qualitied ${ }^{\prime}$ withont repuiring the reason tol be given. and I think he was quite right. I think the man sw, referred to should be present and should show that he is entitled to exercise his framelise, if he he entitled wdosso. But in the anjoining comstitueney, in the south riding of ares, the julge held that son must specify the gromuls om which the man was nut qualifiel. though the juige on the wher side of the comaty line held that the words " not qualifieal" were sutficient. These are some peculiarities of the det Which shonld be removed if the Aet is to be comtinued. But 1 camot see why hon. wentlemen will not accept the provincial lists. The eorurt of last resort is the same in each. If anyone is nut satistien, he can appeal to the erounty julge and have it settled whether he is entitled to vote or not. In our rinling the judges generally take these cases when they are on their division court sircuit. and the cases are so few that the work is casily performeal. If appeals condal be made in such it way for the veritication of the municipal lists. I do not see why we should lot use the municipal lists and save all the trouble and annoyance and copense which we now experience. Now. with regard to the franchise in the United states, it is well known. ats has lueen statend hy the hom. member for Norfolk, that eacli state makes its own framelise, and in England the franchise is produced in a difficent way from what it is here. There it is done entirely under the direction of the court. The courts appoint the revising harrister, who performs his work independent of and outside of prolitical inthaence. If that course werealopted in this comatry. it would he very much better, because, howerer honest and well disposed the revising harristers may ln , hecause our county judges, with very few excep. tions, have emdeavoured to discharge their daties fairly well and withont showing any partisianship-. still we find that we are sabjecten to a risk which we should not be suljected to, as hon. gentlemen thought they were subjected to risks when the sherifts aul registrars were appointed returning othicers. We have the same fear an they had, and we fear that sometimes injustice may be done in the preparation of the voters' lists. Hom. gentlemen opposite should be on an equality with us in this matter, and therefore we claim that the lists should be prepared lyy men who are elected loy the people themselves outside of political parties, men who have no interest in holding ottices or in lede stowing oftice. If yon take these men, you will find that, as a rule. they are not in any comuty all Conservatives or all Refomers. I know the strongest (onservative township in my riding elects a Reformer ats meminer of the county conncila and rion risen : even the strongest Reform township elects two (onservatives as members of the comatil, that shows that polities ate mot the suiding influence in municipal elections. and that men are ather elected for their ahility. for their uprighteness, for their homesty and capability of perf noming etficiently the duties of municipail officers. Now, these men wond he in a hetter pristion to move the voters list, to prouluee at hetter and faiter list, a list that wombld he aceepted with more comtion one of ju:tice by louth parties of this Homse. than a list prepareal be any other buly of men that you can possibly whanin. For instance take a julise who does not live in the riding wher he is calle:1 upon th discharge the duties of revising oftioer more than rnce a gear. how can he tell whether a man has a right tio he on or not: He has to ha suided solely hy the eximener that is othered. and it may take at great deal of time ame at arat deal of expunse io satisty that juelere that at man hats at right to he om. Xow. in order to a waid all the expelne: anl ditticulties commerted with the revision of the list. my opinion is that it should be catirely malateed to the municipalities to produre the list themselves or, if we are: thate a revision at atl. we should chateatour to make it as free from partisall colour, amd just ats fair as we can posisibly make it, so that neither party will feel : leedn prombecol. Now. Itm quite sure that in the recent hye clections, many of the eanstimencies have heen carried against the Refomers simply because the lists have nut heen properly attemded to. Lufurtmately, the duty of revising the list derolves mpon the members, fremently, when they are here in their plateres and in many cases the revision was wor male with that care and attention that it shomble receive. and the result was that in many cases men were brought in to wote who never should have voted and had bil right to vote. Now, I know that during the last revision there were many caves. some in my own rilling. where leeds were matle ont for the pripmese of giving men votes. I know of some notahle instances. on the homatary of ridings, deeds were mave ont of portions of farms on one side amil then on the other for the purposes of getting mein enrollen on the list as electors. I know it was painfully expment in one catse where at man actually went sin far as to make the neceessary declaration that he was the owner and got his name put upon the list, but after he went liefore the court he had to alluit that it was only for the parpose of roting. Now, that is reverting to the old faggot system of Eugland, arainst which we should protect ourselves. While it is right that a state should make provivion that every man who is entitlen to exercise the franchise. may be curolled and has a right to don so, it should not open the door to fraud and imprsition, so that hy a little mandorring a man might be placel upon the voters lists inseveraltownships, andlo allowed to vote in them all. Howerer, if we had the principle of one man one vote, that would largely he done away with. It would not open the door for any injustice of that kind, and I do lope that the law will be altered so as virtually to give to each manthat one vote. If weare not going toabanlon our present liww and alopt the provincial lists, I say we shomh hate a revision each year and keep a perfect list at atl times. What right have the diovernment of at countey to pat off a revision of the lists: I understand it has heen anmonced today that it wats not the intention to revise the lists during the present year. Some great political citastrophe might ocear in this comntry which would necessitate an election next fall. Hon. genthemen oprosite dor wat control eversthing, they cammot pessilhy answer for thinge that may transpire in the comse of three or six months: such changes might take phate as would necessitate an election. Sow. would it not te a hardship if people who were entitleal to sote cond not be plineed on the list, and if many men were on the list who, mught not whe there? If there is any thing that should be a sated trust in the hathels of the biosermment. it is the right of people to exercise their frathelise on ath aceatsions when it is mecessary they should do so: and no (iovermment have a right to say that men shall mot lue emrolled if they are otherwise entitled to be cerrolled. The lists should le kept complete ats far at possible. of that at any moment, if necessity arises for an cleation. the names of men who ite entitled to vote shombld he unon the list, so that they cam exercise their framchise and not be deprived of that satered privilege. In order to do that we have mo right to put off the revision from year to year, and rum the risk that we ridil at the last generai election. At the last eleetions the lists were three years old : many men in this comatry were left off who hath a right to exercise their fratuchise and they were deprived of that right. Many yomg men who had arrived at the age of 21 sears and were residents of this comentry, were not allowed tor rote, but from any fant of their own, hecaluse they had heen put on in the municipal voters lists, they had taken erery step tu secure their franchise, lint owing to the fat that the biovermmemt hat assumed the responsibility of making mo revision, the result was that these men were nut promitted to vote. Now, the diovermant were responsihle for that unforthate state of things, and the prostponement from year to year of the revision of the list was the callese of many men being deprived of their franchise at the last weneral clection. I hope we will not have a repetition of that injustice again. and in order to protect ourselves against it. if we are to have the Act at all, we shoulh have a revision every year.

Mr. siPROLLE. The hon. member for Nom Wellingtom (Mr. Mc.Mullen) has given varions reasomis why the Dominion Franchise Act should be repealed and why we should again resort to the provincial lists for the purpose of our elections. some of his reasons may have a little merit, but many of them have no merit, and if properly analyzed would atford very strong argunents why the present lists should be maintained. The hon. men:her satys that in his expericate, after the revision of last year, maiay names were on the list that should not have been there. I agree with him there. I was told that of the names that were on without any right to be there, at least some were men who had mortgages against farms and had the name of the mortagee put on the list, while the owner's name was left off, becanse it happened to suit their own purpose at the time, and, if $I$ am correctly informed, the hon. member for North

Wellington is one of those men. The hon. memher stys that the principle is wrong because the revising officer camot be trusted. Why can they not le trusted: Pecause, he sitys, they are partisans of the (iovernment ; and as the member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charltom) says, becalluse they are reatures of the forermment. Why are they ereatures of the doverment? Because they have been appointeal julges loy the (iovernment : but the member for Sorth Wellingtom and the member for North Norfolk forget that for both the provincial and Dominion lists the court of final appeal is the same, they are revised lyy the julge. If a revising officer who is not a juige does the duty for the Dominion lists and there is any ohjection to his decision, there is an appeal from him to the julge. and the julge is invariably the revising onticer and discharges the same daty for the provincial lists. The hom. member for Nonth Wellington asks: How can a julge know, how can he deecide in those cases:" Permaph he only visit, the comoty mue a year. Well. surely he visits the ecominty its frepuently for the one lixt as he Hows for the other: he must kinow just is well alout the Dmminion list as he lones anme the provincial list. or. in other words. he must be ats well ite guainted with the people in the comaty fur which he revises the provincial list as he is with the perple in which he revises the Dominion list. The last court is the situc. Sow. these gentlemen beth naised very strong objeetion ${ }^{6}$ this Act. 1 iask them to come down to partienlars. Has the hom. memher for North Wellingtom any ohjection to the revision of the list in his ridity? He says no: he admits that the revising officer embleavoured fairly to discharge his duty. Now. I womlad ask the hom. member for scuth (ireg (Mr. Lamberkin): Have you any ohjection w the revising onticer there: I will centure to sity that the hom. member for someth harey will almit that the revising otficer in his comstituedey did his duty faithfully and homestly, and that he has mo complaint. bioth li.ets are revised by the julges, but in the sae instance the: juige for the district of North Wellingtom decined that the notice " not qualified." was sulficient in all cases where an effort was mate to strike off a mame whereas the revising officer in somb (irey and in Northitreydecided that that was not a fair interpertation of the Act.and that particulargromals shombla be given in the notice why the person was not gnali. tied. We have had decisions given on looth sides to the same effect as that of Dudge Elliott. I remember that our friends suffereal grat lasses leceanse they gate notice which did nut specity the particulat reasoms why the persinis objectel to were not gualitien : and for this reason they were thrown out. Our friends also were ruled ont on the sume gromuls. Both parties were satistied that this was a proper interpretation of the law, and both parties suffered less or more from it. Bhat hecallse the judge in Lombongives the stane decision, he is to be impeached in this House as a partisan of the (iovermment. The hom. member for Sorth Wellington stated that the juike in his calse held that such a notice wass sufficient. Becallse the julges differ on such a print, is that any reason for saying that any of them are partisans or creatures of the (iovernment, anxions to favour the side to which they belong? The hon. member for North Wellington says :hat we objeet to the revising officers and the returning officers because they are partisans of the ciovermment appointed by the (iovermment. Does he forget that the sheriffis and registrars are appointed by the Ontario diovermment? He says that it is clatimed on our side that the sherifts an! registrars are partisisns in the provincial elections. Surely, in all faimess, if hom. gentlemen opposite want partisians on their side, they ought to concede the same right to us. I do not adnrit that the revising otheers are partisams, hat if the argument holds gond on one side, it is equally gool on the other side. With regard to the juiges, the same men atot in regard to looth the provincial and the Dominion lists, and if you andmit that they act fairly in the one case, you must surely also almit that they ate fairly in the other case. The judges have to deal hetween the people in many questions, and I think it is andmitted that in all cates, except in one of two in which our Reform frienis have claimed that the judges ate as partisams, there has beem now comphaint that the juiges do their duties other than faitly and equitality. I dor mot think it heecomes hom. gentemen opposite to talk so lomily against the julges. When the julgers rule against them. it is unfortumate that the hom. gentlemen oppesite have to complain of them as heine creat tures of the cisvermment. Who do wor fathfilly and homestly and righternsly decide puestions between the two parties, becalse they happentobe appointed ly the (boverminent. Whein the revising offieer decillesagainst them, tham hatmay disecharge the same duties in provincial atfaits, they complain that he is a creature of the dovernment. Then, it is held that the Franchise Aet is a baul Act heecanse one man has more than one vote, and the hon. member for North Welliagtom expatiated a long time on the great injustice of men coming from the states to tike part in an election. Did he or his friends refuse the biol men who ame over ty the (iam Trunk Railway to wote for them: If the principhe is wrong did they combem it lig their actions: No: they were as ansions as our friends to poll every vote Sot only were they realy to loring in persons qualified to cote, but they brought men to persomate other men who had no right either to be on the list or to appear at the polls. Then. it is sitid that the Dominimen list is a bad one and the provincial list a gowl one, and that we maght to have mamhond sutfrage. ls it not strame. howerer, that if you compare the provincial list when revised with the Dominion list when revised for the same locality, you will tind the largest. mumber of names on the Dominion list? It was so in our part of the comutry, where everyone almits that the Doninion list, when properly revised, is a mach fairer one than the provincial list. The hon. member for North Wellington says that a young man should go, on the list when he makes it statutory dechanation that he will be of age when the list is revisen, whereas the Act requires him to be twenty one years of age when he makes the application.

Mr. Memullea. The hon. gentleman is mistaken. What I stated was that the oath now sequires a young man to swear that he is 21 years of age on the tinal revision of the list.

Mr. SPROULE. The only difference is a difference of a few months, whether he is of age at the time he applies or at the time the list is revised. It does not make the Act a bad one, lecause the oath provides that he shatl be 21 years of age when he applies insteal of at the final revision. The Dominion Act requires a declaration that he is 01 years of age, but the Provincial Act refuires no declaration whatever.

Mr. MoMULLEN. The hom. gentleman is stating what is not true. It does not reguire a declayation by a would-he voter that he is 21 years of age. Any out cats put a man on the list by stating that he has a right to vote moler the Franchise Act without making any declanation as to his age.
Mr. sprocile. I think he hats to state that he is a British suljeect, that he is $\leq 1$ years of atge and that he is prossessed of the necessary qualifications: and then the opposite sile can object that he is not ol years, and they can make him prove that he is. This has lneen cone in several instances in our part of the cometry: The hom. gentleman for Sirth Sorfolk (Mr. Charlton) said dhat now complaints had been marle against the provinesal list. Is the hom. members memory su shor that he does not remember there were many valid and strong e:omplaints against this list: Dhes he not remember that complaints were made against the dispgualitication of emplosis of the Drominion dionernment, and that under the provincial law a larese momber of peeple who were owners of property were deprived of wotin!: Does the hon semternam not rememiner that a later mumber of lindians were displatitied, although they hand a perfect right te wote: Bues he not rememher that the provinetial assensoms were chaimed to be, mamy of them, stroms partisams, and made their lists more fitvomathle to their fricank tham to their apments: He does mot recollect these matters. but I may remind him that these furnished very strong reasoms in farour of it Dominion franchise and why the list shomble te controlled by the Dominion itself. The next propesition put forward ly the hon. gentleman is that the: list is printed liy the Priming Burean, which is under the control of the corverment, and that, fursometh. they are the ereatures of the lowernment. Does the hom. semteman forget that atter the tirst revision of the list it was printerl at the newspaper oftices throughat the comitry, and the comention then put forward was that it was most objectionalle that the subsidizeel press should print the voters lists. It was then held that surh a list cond not he correct. It was asked how we comill imanine that we conld get a true list made out when it was prepared hy a partisall revising officer and printed by the subsidized press. Now, when the subsidized press nos longer prints the list, objection is taken because the work is lone at the fovermment printing hurean. In order to do away with any danger it was decided to print the list at the Printing Barean. Now the contention is mised, and it appears to be a curious one, that the list prepared at the Printing Bureau camot be a correct one hecanse it happens to le printed at that hureau. This whole transatstion reminds me of the old fable of the wolf and the lamb--an excuse must be male. The wolf said to the lamb: You did so and so at such at time, iand therefore I will eat you up. The reply is: It could not lee so, because I was not born at the time. The wolf then said: Yon disturbed the water in the stream where I was driuking. The lamb, replied: that conld not be the case as I was standing below, aull the water was rmang from you to me. Then the wolf said: fion have done something, and 1 atm hound to eat you up. That is about the size of this case. Hom. gentlemen opposite are lurum toobject to the bominion list no matter whether their oljections are fommed or unfomaded, whe the the arguments are legitimate or illegitimate.

Mr. MII.L.N (Bothwell). The womlerful sheep frem Fiast direy.
Mr. sprovele. I shomblike to revise the pimphlet in which the hom. zentemen opposite plate themselves in the prosition of goats on the left of the Speaker. 1 desire specially to point ont that the names are moremameromsom the bominion tham on the provincial list in our part of the esomtry. and even frients of the Cpposition admit that it was a fiair list. These are sume of the strong ob juetions mised to the buminion Franchise Aet. In were single instance. 1 helieve the same argments would aphly with eynal. and greater force to the provinetial liaw. itul it might be combemed on "rery eromel on which the Dominion list comald he susceptible of combemation. The provincial list is at must mifair ome. It is a list which, in our part of the comery, turns out to be anything hut a correct one. Latre moniners of names are left aff the list and at mumber of names that :hondid he on it are onittel, as heing umber age or pat hodling the Gualitications the were said to hod muth they come down to manhonil sulfige. Even the manhonel suffizuse list dones mot contain so many names as the Domiliom list. The trouble was diamed to be that hon. gentemen appresite went to the election On an imperfere list. and were defeated. Then the list was revisen, and they were again defeaten. It is our interest that the list shomblit to revised every year. becanse four times out of tive with bur present leader amd present policy we would he vietorions and we could hate ne object ion to the list being revised. In almont every case the same argmonts that have heen adlucel against the Dominion Act e:ond he used agrainst the provinctial list.

Mr. MACONALI) (Hurmi, 1 am satistied that if political feeling were alowished you combla nut find two opinioms in this Honse with reppect to the cumbersome chatacter and expense of the borminion Franchise Act. I am satistied that hom. gentlemen who will quietly sit down and discuss the matter will come wo me opinion, I never met a Comservative who diseussed it in a friendly way with another: person who comblimport the Act lis any arsument. The hon. member for arey (Slr. Sipoule) is as well aware as $I$ am that it is an Act which entails large expense not only on the cinvermment bat on borth political parties in the revision of the list. I have been frepuently told hy canmidates supporiting hom. gentlemen on the Treasury benches that they would like to see some other plan in operition in this country by which they would be relieved of this heary expense. The system hats cost the dovermment in round figures $\mathrm{Sl}(\mathbf{( K X )},(\mathrm{KK})$ since the Act was passed in 18s.). It has const the conntry as many hoore dollars through the candidates on both sides. No less than from $\mathbb{S i n}(\mathrm{K})$ to $\mathbf{S i d}(0)$ is required every time the list is revised from each of the respective parties in the riding. A further expense of $\leqslant 4,(1)(x)$ is required by the fiovermment in order to defray the expenges of the printing and other costs. In view of these facts there was never any necessityfor a change from the old system. The hon. meniher for (irey (Mr. Spronle) saill that the local lists were revised ly the same parties as revised the provincial lists. The hon. gentleman knows very well that this is not the case. The comanty judge has very little to do with the leval list. In nine cases out of ten it is settled without any reference to him. Then we have reasom to helieve. that the provincial list is properly revisel becanse rertain partics are interested in it who are not animated ly any prolitical feelings. T:ustees are clected on that list, and special attention is given to these clections. This list is also used with respect to passing li-laws, and erery ratepayer, irrespective of puifitical feelings is in fateor of only thone heing placed on the list who are properly platitited to vorte. In the elections of munieinat comucils this list is nseel, and it is made as perient as pussible. The result is that the diferent interests comtribute to make the provincial list more complete han the Dominion list can exer he mate. Then. it is well known that cauch provinee has different views as to the persons whe should he enframehised. In Gutario, we hate allanced st fat. and have herome sa liheral, that we think exery yome man on attaining his majority hass a right to bee clocheol in the full power of citizenshifp and hoth parties have heot vienge with eath other as to which should give manhorel suthage. If this list wats left in the hamds of the provinces they wombl decide who shomld hee voters, and whether manhernd suffrige: Was the proper gualitication or mot. In Quelece Province, howerer, the peopleare opposeal tomanhenol sutfinge and that province shombly have the right to deecide what yatitication should be latid down as regards young men. Culer the presemt tet one province is handicapped on one side and another province on another. Then. again, in Prince Elward Islamh and british Cohunhia, they have practically manhool suffirage, and they are not able, on aceomit of this Franchise Act. to extemil the stane privileges that they believe to be right and proper in these provinces, to those who vote in beminion elections. I believe it would lie far het. ter in the interests of all parties concerned, that these lists should be placed in the hands of the pros. vinces to be lealt with ats they were previous to 18S. . We hat the local lists in Dominion elections for eighteen years, and I do not believe there was as much complaint of the lecal lists for eighteen years as there has been in regard to the Dominion lists for the last five years. It is well-known also that in some parts of the country the preparation of the Dominion lists are in the hambs of the determined opponents of the Liberal party. I have no complaint to make in rugarle to my own riding. I helieve that owr revising lairister is an honest man, and we have not much tromble in revising our lists ontside of the expense which is attendant upon it ; lut in some cases where there is a strong political partisan as a county court judge or deputy comity conrt judge, we know that there are strong complaints every year from this side of the Honse. I need not give you an illustration. but you have one in the city of London, and I might give youother instances to show the strong party leanings $\mathbf{w}$-hich guide and direct the opinions and principles of some gentlemen holding that office. An hon gentleman who supports the (iovermment stated that we find fanlt with the lists hecause we are beaten ate the polls. That hon. gentleman must remember that there has not been an eleation since Confenleration at which some side issuc was not raised which gave the Conservative party an influence in the comatry. Vou will rememher that at the very first election in 1 sio the mom-political ery was raised. in 1 sise the National Policy ery was ratisen, and in 1 sse the ( onservative party wats afiadid to go to the country Without the liergmamer Act. by which they hived the firits ats they sain, and eat the province into shreds amd patches amil in such a manmer did they carve ap the municipalities, so that they could not be empareal with anything in the heatems above or on the eath beneath. In 1ssi), ihe (onservatives resorted to the Franchise A A in order for give them ath intluence in the country so that they might have an aldantage over the liliceals.

Mr. SPROLiLE: Lawh at the provincial lists.
Mr. MA(IMONALI) (Harom). The hom. gentlematl sats: Look at the porincial lists. When we are disiussing lominion ynestions upon the flem of this Honse it is only hegsing the question to print to the ate ion of the Lacial licgishatures. The guestion before coery member of this House, (ionsempative and lilurat. is whether or mot such a latw ats the Jominion Franchise Act is in the interests of the commtry, rather tham in the interests of the party. If it is nom in the interests of the comotry, it does not matter tos me what the lanal Legislatures of this porince or the other provinces may do. I hold that the Franchise Aet has not heen in the interests of the comotry, and that it is not fatir th the Liberal pitty. It hats not been equitable, and if the principle upon which we contest the various constituencies of the comatry are not fair to both. then I hold that the conservative party is responsible. Fiven many of the sime political creeds as hom. gentlemen opposite have said that it was not rifht to place: the revision of the lists wholly and entirely in the hands of the supporters of the dinvermment. and under the control of persons hohling their otlices from the dovermment. Again, I hold that it is not in the interests of the comutry to spend such large sums of money ats we have spent for the tarrying out of this latw. Last year Slisi, (006) was requirei, but I time that in this year's estimates that sum is to le supplemented by Stin, (HN) which makes sol(0,(NO) taken out of the cotfers of this country this year for the purpose of revising the lists. In adilition to that we maty addatenst of simofereachpolitical party in the varions comstituencies, whith makes altogether sisis!),(KN) which it eosts us every time the lists are reviserl. I hohl, Mr. Speaker', that this is altorether too much money to sperm for the carrying ont of such a law. louring the last tive years we have only hat three revisions, and a large number of the byeelections, and one general election, were run on the old lists without their heing revised. This Act has cost us about $$ 1$, (6),0(0), from the (iovernment and about Sl , (KM), (KN) from both parties who have taken part in ti, e revision during its operation. I ask hon. gentlemen opposite in all serionsmess if they believe that such a system is to the advantuge of our country. I helieve that if hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House put their heads together, they could get up a Framehise Act, perhips a Dominion one, much purer, much more equitahle and less expensive than the one at present on the statute-hook. I hope that strong intinence will be brought to bear upon the liovernment by their own friends, as well as by members on this side of the Honse, sw that they will levote their hest attention ambl julgment to arriving at some comelnsion in placing the Franchise latw either in the hambs of the provincial Legislatures, or hy enacting at new and hetter measine themselves. It is more in the interests of the preople of this comatry, amd more equitable amol just, that we shomid have the satue chance before the people as the conselvatives hate. I trust that some steps will he? taken he the diovernment tor repeal if they will or otherwise tumend this Aet.
 the hom. member for (irey i. Mr. Sproule that the same aththrities dor revise the list for the bomitnion elections, ans revise the lists for the provineial elecetions. Sueh is not the asse. In Dilation it is the municipal comucils who propare the lists, theomes their township clerks. and the julfere has mothing at all to saly it it.  get out the list in the proper way the peophe hatve full power to turn them ont of juwer at the next elections. It matters not what kind of a Dominion list is gotout be the revising harristers, for so longits it antisfies the forvermment they retain these ofticials. Fien after the lamallistsame the assessment mollhave been prepatred hy the township comacil, the revising barristers of the lominion fiovermment have to take these lists ats the fommlation for their lists. Not only that, int the revising harristers in many townships employ the township clerk to get up the lists : why, then, mot take the lists he hats grot out in the first instance, and hate them all revised att one time. In my own ribling, in the eleetion of 1s!e: I have mo hesitation in saying that there were two humbed or three hmmirel farmers disfranchised on atecont of the lists mot being revised for a comple of years before, and a very large mumher who had no right to vote canne into the riding and voted. I hold this is one of the great evils. and we should have the law remedied by all means son as to have only one man one vote, and thereby do away with a great amomit of this trouble. Why, we find at every polling place stamgers coming to vote whose names hatd been put on the lists liy some means, alout whom moboly knows anything, and who declare that they are the individuals mentioned. If we ham, as in Ontario, one man one vote, aml allow a man to vote only in the riding in which he resides, that would do away with a great deal of the personation now carried on. Apart from everything else, the large amount of money spent onght certainly to be a consideration by any fovernment which wishes to govern the country economically. I hold that the voters' lists under this Act cannot be got up as efficiently by a revising officer as by a township clerk; and if there be anything wrong, a judge is more likely to give an independent revision in revising the lists of a court below, made up by another individual, than he would be when he got up the list himself, especially if he is a strong partisan.
Mr. CASEY. The hon. member for Grey has stated that the oftener the lists were revised, the better it was for the Conservative party. That is exactly my opinion. That is exactly what we objec:t to in the Franchise Act, that it is so arranged that the oftener the lists are revised the better it is for the fovermment. Now I happen to know something alout the lists in East Elgin during the late byeelection.

Mr. Mgram. Sodo I.

Mr. CASEY. No doulbt the hon. gentleman does, inecanse his lrother sat with the revising officer all the time the lists were being revised, and supplied him with the necessary information. Not only that, but I have it on good authority, from the agents of both parties in two districts, at leist in the township of Bayham in that riding. that after the lists had been tinally revised by the judge and it had gone back from the Printing Bureau, and after the proofs were rean by the judge, names were left off and put on before it was tinally printed. That is a matter which will require thorough investigation ; I merely refer to it now to show what is possible under the Act. The hon. member's brother, not only gave his whole time to the revision of the list in that riding, but sat with the juige at the reading of the proof, and saw the whole thing through. Of course the other side was represented also, and I do not make a charge that the hon. member or his brother did anything unfair, but merely wish to point out that he had special sources of information with regard to the working of the Act. With regard, however, to the other, point, as to names being left off after the list was fimally revised, after it was printed and the proof read, I think there is room for suspicion.
Mr. IngRAM. The hon. gentleman has insinuatell that myself or my brother had undueadvantage in the preparing of the lists. I beg to say that at the time, in the city of St. Thomas, the representatives of my opponent complimented my brother for the fairness with which he had done his work and ulso the revising ofticer for the very fair mamer in which he had carried out his duty. With regard to the township of Bayham and the two divisions referred to by the hon. gentleman, in comnection with which he said that after the proof-sheets came to Ottawa certain names which were on the list were removed and others substituted, I deny that statement and I challenge the hon. gentleman to prove it. Objections have been made also that certain names did not appear on the list after they returned from Ottawi. The revising officer, when he received the proof-sheets from the Printing Bureau, called my brother who represented me and called also the representative of my opponent, and they both went deliberately over the list. My brother, in my interests and that of the party I represented, took care that none of our friends were omitted, as it was his right and his duty to do. But the gentlemen on the other side, not having atteaded the revision, as my brother had, from the commencement to the end, but having, on the other hand, sent a certain representative to one court and another to another, thus rendering themselves unable to say truthfully that such a name should be left off and such another one should be put on, were at a disadvantage in this respect.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Do I understand the hon. gentleman to say he is now speaking of a period after the list had been revised and printed?

Mr. INGRAM. I say that when the lists were sent to Ottawa, as revised by the revising off. cer---

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Finally revised ?

Mr. INGRAM. No. Then the proof-sheets were sent back in case any corrections respuired to be made, and after the corrections were made they were to be returned to the Printing Bureau.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) And that is the time the non. gentleman says his brother took care no Conservatives were omitted.

Mr. INGRAM. When those sheets were returned to the revising officer, he called the representatives of both parties to court, mind both went over the list with the officer, comparing the proof with it copy of the list sent to the Bureau, and that comparison was made in the presence of representatives of both parties-also from their notes, which, I believe, was quite right. Any names omitted or left on the list by error of the printers, were corrected by the revising otficer in the presence of the representatives of both sides. Now, with reference to the dissatisfaction my hon. friend spoke of, I have heard on many occasions friends of the hon. gentleman charge the Conservative party in the East Riding of Elgin with having stuffed the voters list, but I will tell my hon. friend that by systematic work, by careful attention to the preparation of the lists, we succeeded doing justice to ourselves. I have the names in every polling sub-division, Conservative and Reform. This is prepared systematically. We keep a correct note of every name omitterland added, whetherConservative or Reform, it is not a fact that we stuffed the list or did anything of the kind. With respect to the expense of the voters' list, I quite agree it is expensive, but I do not see that the preparation of the provincial voters' list is any less expensive, while on the other hand much has been said about having the lists prepared by partisans of the Government. I remember a few years ago, when I ran as a candidate for the Local Legislature, I dill my best to get as many of the young men put on the list as I could, but I found some of the frienls of hon. gentlemen opposite trying to prevent those young men from getting on the list, and yet they pretend to be liberal in their views, and to wish to have every one who ought to be on the list placed upon it. As to manhood suffrage, I remember some years ago, when the Conservatives in the Local Legislature of Ontario advocated manhood suffrage and the friends of hon. gentlemen opposite opposed that measure, but finally they were compelled to grant it. The hon. member for Huron(Mr. Macdonald) stated that he believed in the one-man-one-vote principle. I take the other ground. As long as we have a property qualification, I believe that it is not right, but, if we adopt manhood suffrage, I would be in favour of the principle of one man one vote. I trust this will be the last we shall hear in reference to the Elgin lists, because it is not correct to say that the revising officer in that county acted with partiality.

Mr. CASEI. I din not say that he acted with partiality. I simply pointed out the peculiar process which was followed, that one of the candidates was able to see the provfs of the lists, and that. after those proofs were sent down for printing, they were corrected hare.

Mr. (illl Mor. I an very glad to hear that the Government contemplate amending the Frimchise Act. Nearly every one who has to do with politics is pretty well acçuainted with the Eramchise Act of Canalda. I would not like to say ail I think of it. hecause I am afraid I would be offensive and I do not wish to be offensive, hecanse I muderstand the (iovermment are going to amend that Act. I have heard hom. gentlemen opposite say they want to have a fair Act, so that every one who ought to lee on the list should be on it. The whole thing is that everyboly on the Liberal side wants to get erery one bolongige to that party on the list, and every one on the Thry side wants to get every Liheral on the list put off. This is a partisan messure from leginning to end-- there is no donht alout it-and it gives more premiums for party tighting than any measure ever intronduced into the Parlianent of Canaia. I have heen thinking alont this party spirit. Party is the curse of Ganala. Political feeling to-lay is the curse of Canalla. I do. not say that hecanse $l$ happen to be in the minority, but 1 sity it from the experience we all have. that this party feeling blinds us to the best interests of this country, and it muzales us with regard to our duty in these matters. 1 think this Franchise Act is a most imperfect Act. In the first place, the authorities yon appoint of make up the lists are the least qualitied you can possibly imacgine. Vou camot find it revising barrister who knows anything alonit the persons who should go on the list exepet in the locality where he resiles. The only way to get at that is from local knowledge, and that lecal know lelge extends over a very small area. Take the County of Charlotie, which I have represented for many years. I can tell who ought to sote in the parish in which I live, but I camot tell that in the 15 or 16 other parishes where I do not know anything as to the qualification of the voters. We have a very good revising barrister in that connty. He is the county judge. But, when he goes into a part of the connty in which he does not live, he does not know the people there, their sons or their daughters. He has to get the information from the people who are there. When he goes into the parish of St. Gieorge, he has to get the information from somebody living there, and so in regard to every polling subb-division in the county. It is the same thing all over the Dominion. These revising officers are the least qualified persons who could be found, and you could not get anybody to perform that woik properly except some one living in the locality. The best way is the English way, that is to adopt the assessment list. Everyone of 21 years of age who pays the county rates is put on the list, and no one escapes unless he is disqualified for some reason. I am glad to know the Government intend to improve this Act. They can do a great service.to the country if they make this Act uhat it ought to be. It gives the party in power the advantage. I do not mean to say that every revising onticer who is appointed does an injustice. Perhaps the majority are disposed to do what is right, hut the (iovermment can select any villain they choose-it is in their power to do it-but, no matter how honest a man may be, when you find is or'en polling sub-divisions and find that your opponent does not want you to succeed, thought the officers may be honest, they do not want to take a distinct course in your favour. Ithink the Government can afford to be honcst and fair in this matter now. They have a large majority, and they will continue th have it during this parliament, and this Act works hard both ways. The idea that two camblidates should have: to spend hundreds of dollars each in order to get the proper lists male is a prepusterons one. We have heard of sone castes where young people of $16,18,19$ and 20 years of age have been put on the lists. Weil. hunan nature is the same all the way through. Jom will hear the Tories and Liberals alike talking this way-one sass: We got the allumtage: anl then yon will hear the other say : We got the adsantage." There shomblie mon such alvatage given to either side, and there shouth be we such harilen put on any people. If there is anything that ought of be simple. if there is anything thit mught to he cheap, if there is anything that ought $t$, he pare, it is the ooters list, and it ought of le male on the cheapest and simplest and the fairest system that can le aldoptel. I think, Mr. Speaker, that this is a party measure. I was here during the long wecks and monthe that it was being discussenl; it was a party measure from beginuing to emb. I helieve that a gool deal can be said in favour of it Dominion franchise, and I would not find so much finut with it, although I think a provincial franchise is the lest. upon the whole, and the cheapest. If we had manhood suffriage and no other qualification at all as the hasis of registration of roters, then very little hamm conald be done. One party could not take advantare of the other to any great extent. One man one vote is the true priniciple, in my humble npinion. I said, when I commenced my remarks, that party was the curse of this country. It does not require much intelligence to be a goom party man. It does not require any moral principle at all to be a gool party min, and this country is getting tilled up with party men. I do not mein to say that some of them are not intelligent; but I mean that partyism is cursing Canade, and it is making politics a game, not a game of chance, but a game of bluff and of cheek, from one end of Canada to the other. Men are blinded by party; our legislation takes too much the form of party legislation. Of conrse, we all want to succeed, there is no doubt about that; but in this age of the world, and in a country calling itself christianized and civilized, there ought to he fair-play, and when we start out in the race, we ought to be men enough on both sides of politics to let every man start fair and equal in the race. We talk that way, but we do not act that way. We are so blinded by party that we do not give expression to our opinion, the electors do not, and party feeling has gone on until Canada is rotten to the core.

Mr. MURRAY. I desire to express my disapprobation of this Franchise Act. 1 felt the first time it was placed on the statutes, that it was an umecessary piece of legislation. I felt it would be expensive. aun experience must have comvinced everyboly in Canadia that such has heen the result. Now, to say that it has heen fair amd that it has enableal the people of Canalat to exercise their framelise fully, is going leyond the truth. 1 know in my comenty during the past election. the list of 1ss 9 was usel, and a gron many electors were disframehisel. Sow, I do not see why, if we are to have a Dominion Frathehise Act, we should wot have one that would be simplitied in sone way. that would he less expensive, and give everylowly the right to exercise his framehise. There is no, fuestion that is the fet now stamis. and as the lists are now revised, the people are umber the impression that there is too much party comnected with it, becanse these men who are appointed as revising officers ate not only paid high salaties for their semices hut they are supposen to be active partisams. But whether they are partisams or not. such is the opinion of the electors wenerally. As has been remarked here to-night there are many Conservatives who are honest enough to admit that the Act should be aholished. Many imdependent papers, asen (onservative papers, think that the Act should lie abolishei. I am elat that the dovermment intem to change the det, and I trust they will make it more fair and less expensive. The hom. member for Charlote (Mr. (iillmor) made a sery practical speech. He sait that the (iovernment are now pretty strong, they have a large majority in the House and they can afford to be just to their opponents. I am of the opinion that this Act is used as a lever to maintain the present party in power. I take the position that it dues not enable the people to express their opinion freely upon the National Policy or any other guestion. I say that it should be removel from the Statute-hook as speedily as possible, and we should either revert to the provincial list, or alopt some Dominion Fanchise Act that would be more simple and less expensive. There is no yuestion that the Provincial Franchise Act of Ontario is a grood one: it is broad and liberal, and it gives young men. farmers sons and mechanics solis. a right to wote umber a property gualification of $s(1)$ ). Whereas the Dominion Act refuires io property qualitication of slon. I know that in the Connty of Renfrew alone there are humatreds of men who are gualitied umber the provincial lists, that are disyualitied on the lominion lists. It is impossible to say that an clection on the present Dominion list fairly represents the opinions of the people of this country. as many men are disf:anchised lay what I call this infamous Franchise Act. At pres. ent, candidates or mumbers are put to the expense of going round to attend the revision of these lists. Take the county I represent. One of the gentlemen whon I defeated ine the last election, took the trouble to engage men in the different municipal. ities to go aroum and see that all his supporters were placed on the list. I had not the time to go and bother with it. I would like to see every man in the country on the voters' list :-I do not care whether he is a political opponent or not, as long as everybody is on, I would be perfectly satisfied. You can put a man on the list, but the next question is, how is he going to vote? As the saying is, you can lead a horse to water, but you camnot make him drink. I would be cquite willing to leave it tr. the gool sense of the electors how to rote, if only they could all be placed upon the list : I would be satistied with the result, either as a candidate myself, or for the party with which I am in sympathy.

Mr. IHVILE (P.E.I.) I hat mo intention in taking any part in this delate, hecause, although I feel the expense attached to the revision of these lists very much, I never felt any great injustice from the revising officer who, in my county, is the county court julse. I do not think that in those abuties where the county court julge is appointed revising barrister, injustice is done, as a rule. But I could not help rising after the explamation made ly the hon. member for Last Elgin (Mr. Ingram). I have never been able to mulerstand, when hon. gentlemen hehinl me spoke of the grierons injustice which was perpetrated on them from time to time lay the revising officers, how it could he done: I could not believe it possible that a revising ofticer would tly right in face of the statute and act in a mamer which would make him amemable almost. of the criminal law. That man is a swomoficer, and if I minlerstand the hon. gentleman aright anil the explanations he has made to the Honse, the conduct of his revising officer is such that I do not think the (iovernment ever should reappoint him again. Siir, the law provides that there shall be at preliminary list, and that, after certain formalities are gone through, that list shall ine finally revised. That list has to be tinally revisel after the revising othicer has gone the romuls of his district, and it is to be revised in open court, and when it is tinally revised in open contr. where parties on hoth sides have the opportunity of seeing that no injustice is lone, then the revising officer makes his complete list sut and forwards is copy to the (leerk of the Crown in Chanery, keeping a duplicate copy himself : and from that moment his judicial function ceases. I understomi from the hon. memher for Elgin (Mr. Ingram) that this is only ly play, anact in the drama, and that the real revision takes place in secret, long after the proceedings in open court are closed.

Mr. INifan. No. no.

Mr. DAVIEs (P.E.I.) The hom. gentleman need not say " no." I followed him very closely, and I was astomished at his remark : and indeed I asked him whether I understoon him correctly or not. The section provides that the revision of the list shall take place by the revising officer in open court at a time and place amomed. Having tinally revised the list the revising officer is to make duplicate copies. In Last Elgin the farce is gome through of sitting in open court and the revising ofticer mak. ing a duplicate copy, which is sent to the Queen's Printer. Then comes in the real work. My brother, says the hon. gentleman, attends every one of the revision courts, and he ketps his notes-- not the notes of the revising officer-anl when the list comes back from the Queen's Printer, it is amended, altered and added to according to my brother's notes.
Mr. INGRAM. I did not make that statement or anything like it.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) The leader of the House acted very wrongly in telling the hon. gentleman to sit doyn.

Mr. Merkay.

Nir JOHN THOMP':ON. I did not tell him to sit down.

Mr. D.AVIEs (P.E.I.) Will the Minister of Justice leny that he told the hon. gentleman to sit down, and not to anewer:

Sir JOHN 'THOMPSON. I din mot.

Mr. 1)AVIEN (P.E.I.) 1 most distinetly heard the hon. gentleman intermupt ind tell him to say nothing further.
sir oUOHN THOMl'SON. I sibl : that will do.
Mr. I)AVIEN (P.E.I.I Iasked the hom. gentle man whether that was correct, and he was about to answer me. The hon. gentleman is afraid to let him reply.

Mr. INi:RAM. I ann fuite prepareal to take aare of myself in the matter of the voters list or anything else. If the hon. gentleman loos mot think so, and if he will come to the next revision of onr coters list, I will teach him a lesson.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I do not doulst that the hon. gentleman is capable of teaching me a lesson I never imagined for a moment that I conld go to a revising officer and alter, amemd and and to the list finally settled by him. The hon. gentleman could teach a great many lawyers a lesson evidently. We imagined that when this list was finally settlen. all the revising officer had to do, when the printed copy was sent to him, was to have a duplicate copy made, but it appeared that the list was not verified hy the cluplicate copies but by his brother's notes. The alvantage that his bother had was said to bee due to the fact that he attemled all of the revision courts, while his opponent had different lawyers at different courts, and they conld not amend the list as well by those notes. That is the statement of the hon. gentleman, and when he reads Ifansard he will find it to be so. So I do not wonder at the occurences that rake place every year when the revision is mate. If the hon. gentleman's views are brought to the notice of the head of the fiovernment that revising officer will not have the rluty of revising the list at another time.

Nir JOHN THOMPNON. What the hon. wember for Elgin said was exactly the reverse of what the hon. member for Queen's (Mr. Davies) stated. What the hon. member for Elgin said was, that When the revising officer has made his revision, a copy of it, in so far as that statement was concemed, was sent to the Queen's Printer. It was printed; and sent back for correction, and the relising officer corrected that proof in the presence of both parties : but the brother of the hon. memher for Elgin (Mr. Ingram), representing the party to which the hon. gentleman belongs, and some one representing the other side, were present and that proof was corrected in the presence of both parties. Out of that language the hon. member for Queen's made the statement that the hon. member for Elgin had represented that the revision was mere by-play, that his brother did all after the proof was revised.

- Mr. LAVIES (P.E.I.) From his notes.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Upon that the hon. member for Elgin rose to contradict the hon. memher for Queen's. I thought it sufficient for the time, that my hon. friend Mr. Ingram should say that he had been misunderstoon on this point and misrepresented, or whatever else suggestel itself to him: and 1 thourht a lengthy explanation would be better later on in the dehate. So the hom. gentleman's imputation that 1 interfered with the hon. member for Elgin is entirely incorrect.

Mr. DAVIEN (P.E.I.) It will now be in order for the hon. gentleman to rise ant explain in what way 1 misrepresented him.
Sir JOHE THOMPSON. The hom. gentleman will find it in Haniserol.

Mr. ISLIXT. I lesire $w$ offer a few remarks before the debate closes. When I moved for an Order of the House for this return I did not anticipate the discussion would take wo wile ${ }^{\circ}$ a range is it has fone, and I considered that when the report was lirought down anopportmity would be afforded to discuss the matter with the return before us. I think the few observations I mate in opening this discussion have been justitied by the remarks that hiare fallen from members on hoth sides of the Honse. It has been clearly shown that the Fianchise Act is exceelingly combersome and very inconveniont, that it places the camdidates of leoth parties at great and minecessary expense, and then it opens the door widely to epportunities for partisanship wherever it may exist. I have heen gratified, as many members of the House have been gratitien, in listening to the statements male with respect to the manner in which the revising officers discharge their cluty, especially the county juiges, against whom ion serious combplaints have heen made. amb, as regards the revising officer of my district. I can cawarl the same praise to him. But, at the same time, we are aware that where the revising otticer is a strong partisan, and where parties are pretty equally divided in a constituency, there is too much litiga. tion over the placing of names on the list. Each name becomes the subject of a separate piece of litigation: subprenas have to be served, witnesses have to he procured and examined, and there is much contention and delay hefore a name is placed on the list. The late election in the city of Loudon is only a flagrant instance of what can be done when partisanship has reached a particular stage, and where, owing to technicalities, it must always be almitted on lonth sides of the House, at all erents it is almitted by the indepemlent press, that great and flagrant injustice has been committed in connection with that election. There is one matter to which I desire to call the attention of the Honse, and it is one to which I referred last session, and one in regard to which, I think. in the event of any revision of the Franchise Act, the (iovernment should take some steps to see that a state of things to which I am about to refer, does not take place. The hon. member for shelbiune (Mr. White) is aware that I charge that in his ow'n constituency the revising officer is his legal partner, and although I know nothing whatever against the uprightness or capacity of the hon. gentleman'spartuer, yetasa matter of public principleor policy it is not wise either for him, or the hon. gentleman himself, or his constituents, that the revising officer shoull he a partner in business and it close personal ally of the iovemment candidate, or any other candilate. I'he Minister of Justice informed me that the law made no provision either for elismissing or retaining as returning officer the partner of a member of Parliament or of any candidate, I think that in any revision of the Franchise Act there shoull be a distinct proviso that where the revising otheer is a partuer in the hasiness of the cambliate, or of the person who proproses to be a camlinate, that it shomh dispualify the camlidate from romning in that election, lecanse it leares the officer open to very grave suspicion, and leaves the constitnency open to he very serionsly injured in case the feeling, not only of partnership, hut of professional hasiness relation should influence the revising officer to any extent. 1 am aware that the hon. member for thelburne (Mr. White) informed the Honse that in this particular case the relation of partner did mot exist: but I have in my hamds ample proof that it does exist, and I should like to heat from that hom. gentleman what explanation he would make of the open and public business relat tion which is known tosulosist between himself and the erevising harrister. I do not make this complaint from any personal reason, hat I lo so becanse it has been represented to me by gentlemen in that constituency that they do not deem it fair or right that the partuer of the sitting member and of the probable candidate should be the revising barrister. That gentleman is the partner of the present member for the electoral district aljoining my own. Ithink this can scarcely be doubten, hecanse I have moder my hand a copy of an afficlavit made ly that hom. gentleman in litigation in the Province of Nova Scotia, in which he states that this gentleman is his partner. The atfidarit begins in this way:
"I, Nathaniel W. White, of the town and county of Shelburne, barrister-at-law and nember of the firm of White it Blanchari, attornes: for the lefendants, make cuth, de., de.
I have also husiness letters in the hambriting of the hon. member for shelburne (Mr. White) in which the name of the firm of White Blanchard is lithographed at the heal, and the name of the hon. gentleman himself is signed at the lootom. I have also letter heads of the professional firm to which the hon. gentleman helongs, and in which these gentlemen are both stated to lie partners in that firm. I have also a copy of the stamling advertisement of that firm published in the newspaser of the town in which the hon. gentleman resides, and in which both these gentlemen are held out to the world as leeing professional partners. Although perhaps my hon. friend may say he is not to blame in this matter, and that he became a candidate after the partnership existed, yet I say that in justice to him, to his constituency, and to the revising barrister, there shoulh be an amend ment inacle in the law which wouk prevent any relationship of that kind existing between a member of Parliament and the revising barrister of the county which he represents. The great obstacle as has been said by my hon. friend from Charlotte (Mr. (illmor) in regard to our elections is that there seems to be no place in which the strongest partisanshipdoes not existand that from the making up of the electoral lists to the declaration of the poll, the whole machinery is in the hands of violent partisans on one side or the other. I think that it is the duty of the Giovernment of this country, if they wish to pose before the people as genuine statesmen, guided by an honourable desire to see that the will of the people is erfuitably registered, that they should amend this Act on the lines pointed out by some of my hon. friends on this side of the House. It is not for us to indicate the details on which this

Act shoulal be amemed, although many hon. gentlemen have endeavoured to indicate their indiviclual preferences on that point. I think it would le very easy for the diovernment, if they gave attention to the sulbject. to frame a Franchise Act which should le fair to hoth sides, and which would not he open to the charges male against it of being partisan and one-sided, and capahle of leing made an instrument of tyanny in the hands of those who occupy the Treasury benches. Let us have one place in the widerlomain of our political life where partisanship may be excluded. We loast to a certain degree that partisanship is excluded from the bench in this comitry, but we find that owing to the intimate relations lietween the electorateand the judiciary, that charges are made with more or less reason affecting high dignitaries. This must le inevitable, considering their relations to the election law. When we register the will of the people we should have that will registered free from partisan bias. In this particular I have called the attention of the liovermment to the improper relations which some of the revising larristers wecupy with reference to elections. I helieve that when this return is lrought clown it will give the House information which will afford hon. gentlemen further ford for thought. In opening my remarks I said that the great expense of the operation of this Act has resulted in serions injury to goosl govermment. No one can doult that the enormons expense in revising the electoral lists was the reason we had not a perfect list at the last general election. It was estimated ly some statisticia:l, and not serionsly denied, that 100,000 voters whoought to have lreen legally qualified were not able to vote at that election, hecause the list had not been revisel for three years. I know that in one polling section of my county there were 35 names upon the list of elector: who were either dead or who hal removed permanently from the county, and in that small polling section of about 200 votes 3 3in or 40 properly qualified electors were denied the privilege of voting. This unfortunate result, as admitted by the Govermment, is owing to the enormous expense of simb. 000 that would be entailed on the country by the revision of the list. I believe that it is high time that this unfair and expensive law should be wiped from the Statute-look, or greatly amended in the direction of fairness, cheapness and simplicity.

Mr. WHITE (Nhelburne). I should not have risen this evening to say anything upon the question of the Franchise Act had it not been for the attack which has leen male upon me, and upon the revising officer in my county by the hon. member for larmouth (Mr. Flint). It would have been quite unnecessary for me to say anything upon the franchise, because the arguments we have heard to-night, and the statements to which we have listened from the other side, were only it repetition and a rehash of what we heard last session. Notwithstanding the charge made by the hon. member for Yarmouth (Mr. Flint), I have but little to udd now to the truthful statement which I made last session when the same guestion was put to me and to which I still adhere. After that answer was made by me, not withstanding that the Morwin!, Chrouicle, the Liberal organ in the Province of Nova Scotia, day fter day and week after week, hal articles in its columns of the most ahusive character, doing everything prssible to induce some of my constituents to follow up the slander, I am prond to say that not a single Liberal belonging to the comenty put anything into the newspaper either over his own signature or over an anonymous one, critioising the statement I made or finding fanlt with the revising barrister in the County of Shelburne. More thatn that, sir, I hold in my hand a letter written to the revising officer by one of the principal Liberal organizers in the county and an uncle of the late candidate against me. Mr. Thomas Robertson. In it he swys:
$\because$ I have to suy that while I am not at all in sympathy with the expensive and complicated machinery known as the Franchise Act, $I$, at the same time, have no fault to find with the treatment I received at your hands as revising officer during the last revision, either with regurd to the applications sent forward by me for others. or in the two courts I attended at Barrington and Cape Island. In both of these courts I think your ruling was the same, and carried out impartially towards each side. In this, Mr. Andrew Robertson, who attended both courts, concurs with me.'
Mr. Andrew Robertsom is another prominent Lib. cral, and a near relative of the defeated candidate. I have another letter from Mr. T. W. Covert, a Liberal councillor in Barrington, who expresses his perfect satisfaction with the revision, and his astonishment that any one should find fault with the revising officer or the revision. I may say further, with respect to the county, that not only has the revising ofticer done his duty there, not only is the voters list sitisfactory to both sides, lut the returning ofticer has discharged his duties satisfactory. so much so that resolutions have leen passed at public meetings, moved by the candidates of one party and seconded by the candidates of the other party, expressing their eatire satisfac. tion with the manner in which he discharged his duties. I may say more. One-half of the deputy returning officers in the county during the elections were Liberals and one-half Conservatives. and noboly has found fault with the manner in which those gentlemen performed their duties under the Franchise Act.

Mr. DAWSON. I think that all hon. gentlemen who have had anything to do personally with the revision of the lists must agree with much that has been said on this side of the House as to the expensiveness and clumsiness of the present Franchise Act, the difficulty in securing a just list, and the enormous expense attending the revision. Now, this opinion is not confined wholly to hon. members on this side. During the revision in the county which I have the honour to represent, the Conservatives were represeuted by a young barrister from Kingston named R. W. Shanon, who is now the editor of the Ottawa Cifi=e", the Government organ at the capital. After the revision, he wrote aletter to the local Conservative piper, which, with the permission of the House, I will read. The letter expressed his viens of the Franchise Act, and I suppose they are his views to-day. He writes from Kingston on the 23 rrl of October, 1891, to the Kingston Jaily Nons:

[^37]- There is redson in the contention that the basis of the franchise should he identified for every part of the Pominion, otherwise a representative might be sent to Parliament from untario by the rotes of inen who in Quebec or Prince Edward Island would be disqualifien were it not for this difficulty. Were Quebec possessed of a municipal system similsr to ours, and were the qualifications demanded of voters in municipal elections the same in every province, it would undoubtedly be a measure of wisdom and economy to adopt for federal purposes the voters' lists prepared by the municipal authorities.

Muny Conservatives fear the results which might How from leaving their rights as electors to the tender merey of the Grit assessors. They believe that their opponents are inore bigotted and unscrupulous than themselves, that they carry party spirit into all the concerns of social and civic life, and that when appointed to public office they use their position tu furward party ends. This beliefmay not be altogether without foundation: enough instances might probably be found to point a moral or adorn a tale. Yet there is a sense of fair-play in the best of the average man which may be confidently addressed, and may be depended upon to prevent him from becoming incorrigibly dishonest. If every one who desires to see impartial justice practised be public servants will commence by himself taking his stand upon high principle when occupvint a public office, and will make it his own concern to treat friend and foe, Grit and Tors, alike, a sentiment must arise under which a partial and dishonest official will become rare. At all events it would be much easier to watch and prosecute conscienceless assessors, and take the necessary procecding for having their mistakes corrected by the county judge, than it is to operate the present Franchise Act.
"The statute has, it is true, furnished an approximately uniform franchise, but it has failed to secure two other qualities not less important, namely, simplicity and cheapness. The amount of time, labour and expense: demanded for the revision of the lists can scarcely be estimated by those who hare not been actively engaged in the work, and this cost is but poorly repaid by the uncertain, hurried and haphazard manner in which, at the final revision, the business of the court is despatched with:out being transacted.

- If the chastacies to the adoption of the municipal voters' lists are found to be insuperable, it will not, in my opinion, be long before Parliament will supersede the present system by the introduction of universal suffrage, with an easy and inexpensive system of registration.
" R. W. SHANNON."
Now, I camnot agree with Mr. Shamnon's evident distrust of the municipal assessons. He seems to lose sight of the fact that the Iiberals are willing to place their lists at the mercy of the Conservative assessors. The difference between Liberals and Conservatives appears to be this: that while the Conservative principle is a distrust of the people tempered with fear, the Liberal principle is a trust of the people tempered with discretion. Now, we are willing to trust a revision of the list in the hands of the Conservative assessors, and our friends on the opposite sille of the House ought to le willing to trust such assessors as may differ from them in political faith. At any rate, I think Mr. Shamon voices the opinion of all on this side of the House, and I am sure, if they would speak up honestly about it, many on the other side who have had actual experience in the working of the Franchise Act. It is clumsy, it is expensive; the net result of it is inaccurate lists: it fails to enfranchise all those entitled to vote. As a matter of fact it enfranchises noborly whose interests are not looked after by his political friends. Young men especially, knowing the intricote machinery which they must use in order to get their names placed on the list, will not take the initiative step themselves; and unless some friend looks after their interests, they will not be on the list as it now stands. I think some amendment ought to be made, and the most practical one is to abolisls the present Franchise Act.

Mr. FORBES. I had not intemled to make any remarks on this subject. hat I have heard so many members on the fioverument side of the Honse express pride in the revising barristers of their seceral districts that I wish for a few moments, to call the attention of the House to the possibility of unfair practices leeing carried on by these offícials. In the Comity of Gueens, N.N.. We have a perfect daisy for a revising harrister. He not omly revised the lists to suit himself and hasted of it, but after he had finished he terok the public platform amil stumped the county agrainst his opponents, my friends and myself. During this last campaign he met the frients of the Liberal patty on six or seven public platforms in public discussion. I helieve as a whole the Act may le fairly worken, but if you put its working into the hands of improper and unfair men, they may make trememionsly had use of it. and I believe some of them have done so in the County of Queen's. The lists were made up by the revising barrister, and for the first amd only time I know of, great use was made of that section of the law providing that the revising harrister may give " reasonable notice." After the list is made up firom the assessment roll of the comnty, additional names are adhed under the Act. Then the revising officer gets these preliminary lists printed and posts up notice of the holding of the final courts of revision. It then lecomes the cluty of any elector who lesires to have names struck off to give two weeks notice to the revising barrister and also to the elector whose name he wishes to have removed. I was the only person in Queen's County who got the fortuight's notice. My oppment, the unforthanate petitioner, tried to strike my name off but failed. I ambound to say the revising harrister took allantage of the section of the Act allowing him to give reasonable notice and struck off twenty or thirty names in this way. A man gave him a list of names to be added. No objection was made to the applicants and they did not necessarily attempt to prove their yualification, but their names hat leen put upon that list by virtue of a declaration solemnly made by their agents on their lehalf, they being men engaged in mining and lumbering generally. Within twelve hours and even less time of the holding of his court by means of a henchman of the Tory party, the revising officer cansed notices to he server upon those gentlemen who had made the cleclarations, advising them that exception was taken to these fifteen or more names, and that unless proof was given to-morrow morning at 10 oblock they would lee struck from the list. He gase notice that the court would be held at a certain house and then adjourned the court without notice to another place, where he opened the court sharp at 10 oclock. The man on whom the notice had been served appeared, and asked for time to enable him to see those persons and obtain the necessary proofs, and issue his subponas, but the revising barrister refused to allow him any lelay or to accept any excuse, and struck off the names. He clamed this right under the section giving him power to serve reasonable notice. Again, the revising barrister would require extraordinary proof. In one or two cases, men who were on the list on income qualification, and who could not attemi in person, sent witnesses to prove their fualification. One or two of the men whose evidence proved the qualification were struck off, because their witnesses were mable to swear they Were present at the hirth of these mename the oftiver contended that, although the witnesses could swear they halknown the men from infancy toharealways resided in Nova Sorotia, still that was not sufficient to make them proper witnesses to prove the applicants to le British subjects. Sow, 1 hold that the revising harrister of the comnty of shelburne acted minustly in his prosition, and I take evecption to the remarks of the hon. member for shelhmote tonight. Last year that hon. gentleman said: $\because$ He was not a partner of that revising harrister," but this year he justifies the action of the revising otficer. liy saying he has flone it fainly. How can a man do fairly and honestly when he has committed a thagrant breach of the law. looth in spinit and letter ? I clam that the hon. member has mo right to justify the action of the revising officer in the way he has. Clanse 11 of the tet reads an follows:

[^38]Those two sections taken together must surely carry the implication that Parliament intended that in' person who could possibly exercise any control wer the electoral list should have the right to $l_{\text {e }}$ a canclidate for a seat in the House of Commons. I claim that the revising barrister of the County of shelburne is a duly gualitied partner of the member for that county. I hold in my hand an atfidarit sworn to ly the hon. memiter on the gith March, 188is, in which he seys he is a member of the firm of White \& Blamelaril. I may say here that Mr. Blanchard is the revising barrister. I have here a copy of an advertisement in a newspapersigned 11 . © Blancharrl, revising barrister. I have alsora leter signed hy the hon. member for Shelburne himself on a paper healed by himself and the revising larrister for that comity as a firm of lawgers. I have further the atfidacit of the sheriff of the comuty, dieo. W. McLean, of Shellurne, making oath, " that Framk Blancharil, the defendant in this cause and the partner in law of N. W. White," called on me, kc. That was after the lists had leen revised and at the time the lists were leing revised the same condition of things existed. I do not hesitate to say that it was yuite possible and rery likely the revising barrister acted fairly and justly in the ulministration of his duty, and I have no hesitation in alling that I welieve the hon. member for Shelburne would be above exercising influence on his partner in his position of revising barrister: hut I lossy this, that the man himself is capable of teing easily influencerl, not only in conseguence of his position hut owing to the gifts nature has given him. He is a man susceptible to the slighest degree of influence and is a perfect slave of party. He must know that his association with the hon. member for Shellurne would tend to give and could not fail to influence his judgment, no matter how inclined he might be to act impartially, because it was almost impossible for a man to stand in a position like that and act in an unbiassed mamer. When the Act was put on the Statute－book the intention was to have a fair revision：All those who could possibly We lenctited by the action of the revising office： were purposely excluded，not only by the spirit of the Act but its letter as well from leing can didates，amd I claim that the hom．memike for shelhurne should call upon his partner． lefore amother revision is male，to resign his pusition．and if the hom．gentleman does not，it is the duty of the（iovermment to ask that revis． ing ofticer to step down and out．Likewise I would ask the fiovermment to call on the return－ ing otticer for Queen＇s to step downam out of his pesition，though I am bouml to say I think he offset the injury he slid me on the list by the injury he did his party on the platform．I think that the Framohise Act itself is capable of great possibilities of being improperly and unjustly used hy an unfair math．and it is against these things that the lion－ ermment should suard．They shomble see that， when the spirit and the letter of the Act are broken，it is their duty to prevent my repetition of such action．Some hom．gentlemen have spoken in favour of ameming this Act aml preventing these things leing done hy partisum re－ vising ofticers．For my part，I would like to see this whole thing wiped chit．It is a combersome and uselessly expensive Act．In the election of Isal．many joung men who were desirous of casting their wotes were disfanchised．I think the lerad lists at present are carefully mande up hy the moni－ cipal comacils，who are more directly in contat with the people and who know leetter who are qualitied to wote or mot than any revising officer． amd I think they would be better qualitien tomake the lists．I woull also like to see mamhool suff－ rage adopted．I nould like to see every man of twenty one years of age have a right to vote，amb， muler the graml system of ellucation we have in Nova Scotia．every jobug man molerstands the questions of the day，and would be richitly entitled to exercise properiy the franchise．

Mr．（＇HARLTON．I have received at commanical． tion from a gentleman interested in this sulject．I hate just returned after an absence of some days， and I Was looking into the matter a moment ago． If it makes no lifference I would have the case better in haml after a day or two than at this monent．

Motion agreed to，ami Bill real the secoml time．

THE：ILIOTAIFEACT．

House resolved itself into Committee on Biil （No．10）to ameml the Pilotage Act．．．（Mr．Tupper．）

（In the Committee．）

Mr．（HARITON．Perhaps the hom．gentleman will explain the object of section 1.

Mr．TCPPFR．It simply exempts ressels up to 121 tons，whereas the ohl fit exempted vessels up to only so tons．

Bill reported．

Honse again resolved itself into（ommmittee of cupply．

sir JoHS THOMPN（）N．This amomat is tu
 ammal salary was passed in the main Fistmates．

> Exchequer Court-Amount required to complete the payment of printing and > binding and distributing Vol & of the Exchequer Cuurt Reports................iou

Sir IOH．N THOMPSON．In the matin Estimates ＂e reduced the usual item of sl，bon for the Fixche－ yuer（ onurt Reports to Sl，Mn）．limt I find that the state of the printing is such that the other sions will he neterl．The item of seis is to put the Re－ Eistrat of the Excheruer Conrt on the footing of a chief clerk．His salary was tixed hy statute at having elatpeed which would entisle him to at sitary of $S$ ，（KM $)$ if he had entered at $\leqslant i . N(x)$ a lear，we propense to let himgo on as chief clerk until he reaches a salary of SD． $\mathrm{f}(\mathrm{x})$ ．

Mr．DAVIFN（P．E．I．）The wther day I hrought Io the attention of the leater of the Honse the comblition in which the pullication of the supreme Cont Reports is．I find in the statement hrought fown to the Honse，that it is impersible for the reporters to sty when the work in commection with the report will be orertaken．It states that the rate of progress which is now going on，aml with the new material going into the hamis of the printers．it will take a long time lefore the print－ ing is disposed of． 1 do not think this delay is rery creditable to the Printing Burean，and the Minister of Iustice will see that it is a matter of very great importance that the supreme Court Reports shouhl，within reasonahle delay．Ie placeai in the hands of the profession throughout the Dominion．I trust that the matter will le brought to the attention of the members of the foremment who have special charge of the department，and that we will be informed why it is they are so hack． Ward in publishing this report．I do not know whether the Government have considerel whether it would le desirable to take the printing out of the hands of the Burean and give it to private parties， hut，on the face of it，it cloes stem undesirable that we shouhl withlraw any part of the printing from the Bureau which has cost so much money． The existing combition of things is by no means creditable to the Bureau．
sir JOHN THOMIPNON．The attention of the Secretary of State was attracted to the matter hy the remarks made in the Honse a few days ago． and the result has been that the Queen＇s Printer has promised to give his personal attention to the subject of experliting these reports．I have reason to believe，knowing his energy and disposition to advance the interests under his care，that he will lee successfal in completing them at an earlier date than the reporters supposed when they wrote the memorandun to which the hon．gentleman has referred．

reframed from issaing the warrant，although the money was very mach neeted in consequence of the large anomuts that had to lex paid in comection with the investigations which torsk place last session，anl the sulserpuent prosecutions in the courts．

sir RICHARI）（ARTWRIBHT．What dones ＂recouping the comtingent fimm＂mean？There is no contingent fund．

Sir JOHN THOMPSiN．That is evilently a mistake，as there is no ontingen：fumi．It mist have lreen charged to minoreseen expenses．An anditional trade instractor wate regnired，annl I ohtained permission from（omm－il to appoint him．
sir RICHARI）（ARTW PIAHTV．If it is charged to unforeseen expenses．I shomh！think it would le reatsomathe ellomegh．

Mr．Mo．MCLIAFN．I notice that there was a commission of empuiry held list year in connection with this penitentiary for which the inspector of prisons was patid seron extma．What was the nature of that investigation？

Sir JOHN THOMPSON．There was noempury last year．That S20x wats a payment woted by Par－ liament for an investigation which took place $\mathrm{f}_{\mathrm{o}}$ or －years ago，and for which the inspector hat not beon puil．The other commissioner was Mr．Bail－ lairge，who received sinh．The inspector＇s claim to be paid for his services was left in suspense，amal tinally it was decided that he should be paid half the amount paid to the other commissioner．The investigation torok place before latrived in（）ttawat．

Sir JoHN THOMPSON．He clamed the same amoment as the other commissioner．That was not thongit reasonable．in view of the fact that he was partially engaged in the duties of his oftice，and he was conceded half his claim．
Mr．MaMULLEN．It is too much the case with civil servants，when asked to do something outside of the line of their regular luties，to make a demand for extra pay．We should most persistently put our foot down on such attempts on the part of our civil servants，who are well paid，to get adolitions to their salaries．Vir．Moylan gets $\mathbf{S H} 3,2(x)$ a year and his travelling expenses．He is not stinted in any way， and when be is asked to step outside of the line of his regular duties，he makes a demand for sind more， and is allowed send．I notice by the Anditor $s$ Report that the number of those in receipt of extra pay for extra services is rapidly increasing．We have now $f(x)$ or ing of them．I think we should resist votes of money for this purpose．

Dorchester Penitentiary－To provide for maximum salary of Instructors Godsoe and Hogan．．．

sir JOHN THONPSON．The other trade in structors have all reached their maximum．These men were appointed umber circamstances which deferred the statutory increase for nearly two years after their appointnient，the Penitentiaries Act pros． viding that it shall not take effect until one year after the lst of buly following an appointment．
Mr. Tipien.

As these men are faithfin officers, amd ats the maximum is rery small. I thonght it well to ask the Honse to vote the sum necesciry to place their salarv at the maximum.
Manitoba Penitentiary-To provide for the salary of an assistant aceountant alid storekeeper from 1st February.

Sir .JOHE THOMPSON. The semices of an assistant accommtant and storekeeper are very necessary. In aldition to the convicts thereare a considerable mumber of hanaties there, whose aroounts are all moler the care of the accomitant of the penitentiary. For years he han the assistance of a convict, hut this was fommery molesiable: in fact, the convict, although a very fair assistant accountant, mate his escatpe: anil as the accountant acts alon as storekeeper. We have thought it proper to give him an assistant at sim) a Sear.

Mr. Mo.MLLLFN. How many atcomatants are there in the Kingston Penitentiary?

Sir JOHN THONPSON. There is one aceorumtant, hut there is also a storekeeper amd a stewand. At Manitolst one man attembs the doties of looth arcountant and storekeeper.

Mr. MCMLILEEN. The Kingston Penitentiary hats two or three times the number of comviets that Manitolia has, amd I think that one man ought to he sufficient at the latter place. It may lee that the number of hmaties there would necessitate the extra appointment.

Sit JOHS THOMPSON. There is a geme deal more work for the ofticers at Nitony Monntain than those at Kingston. hecanse of the distance of the place from any town. Supplies have to le obtained in latge quantities anme from a comsiderable distance, looth for the officers and the eomricts. The accountant hat considerable training ats an accountant before he went there. bat all the reports I have received from the oftheers show that he needed help.

Mr. Mr.MCLLEN. Who is the akcomatant
Sir JoHN THOMPSON. His mame is Mctowam. He was removed from larchester Penitentiary to Manitolat about tive yeats atjo.

Mr. DAVIFS (P.E.I. 1 Whoisappointed in Mr. Berlson's place?

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Vhr. Foster is still acting.

Mr. DAVIEN (I'.F.I.) Have the fiovermment mande up their minhs whom they are going to appoint? Lisat year we had some discussion about the expenditure on the Manitobis Penitentiary, which was found to exceed very greatly that of other penitentiaries. I lo not know whether the hon. gentleman intends to take any measures to reduce that expenditure in any way.
sir JOHN THOMPNON. The estimates prepared hy the acting warclen for next year show at great refluction.

> Regina Gaol-To provide for sulary of the de-

Nir IOHN THOMPSON. As I mentioned the other evening, the provisions mate in the Fistimates of last year for this prison were purely experimental, lecause we did not know what the mumber of prisoners woull le. Very somon after the gaol wiss opened, however, we fomall it crowided with prisoners who were formerly sent ko, the garal. rakins. The result was that the staff was found insutficient : the reports which 1 receivel showed that it was very desirable that a person should be put on the staff well acyuainterl with prison cluty; and I sent out at once from the penitentiary at St. Vincent de Paul, a guard who was reported to be one of the most efticient otficers there, fo act as leputy gater, amd this is his salary.

Mr. Mr.MClLLEN. What is the average nomlner of inmates there:

Sir JoHE THOMPNON. The current year is the first cear that the prison hastwen in operation. We have. I think, or prisoners, which is all the prison holds. That number inchules two or three lunatics. for whon there is at present no, other place of continement.

Sir RICHARI) (CARTWRI:HT. Is that money Ineing paid. or is it in arrear:

Mr. NPFAKER. This is in consequence of the length of last year's session. We hath three months' session last year in this financial year, and therefore these allitional amomests are reduired to paty the expenses of this session. We had pratetically a whole session in the finameial year is!l-92 last year.

Mr. CARLINi: I really camont give the hom. gentleman the information asked for just mow. hint I will le glad te get it for him.

Mr. LANI:ELIERE I have information from jarties who went to the damaica Fixposition. that they sial a large number of coppies of the Eimpion distributed there. Of course they conhl not tell whether these papers hiad luen luringht amil paid for by the dovermment: and 1 think it would be of great interest to the comuntry to know whether it is af fact that these coppies of the Fimpion were bought and paid for be the Govermment amd listributerl bromelcast in Jaimaica.

Mr. SOMERVILI.E. On page B-थIt. Mr. Brown

 mentioned.

Mr. CARLINA: No. I think I stated to the hon. gentleman that his expenses. all told, except the honorarium that was given, was something letween two and three thonsamd dollars. The honorarimm was voteal hy Parliament last session. These payments were taken out of the vote of sim, (Mn).

Mr. sompRCILI.E. I dos mot exactly milerstamel how Mr. Brown couht Ix petill for his services in comnection with the lamaica Fixhihitien when hewats a member of this Hanse.

Mr. (CARLIN: He was mot paid for his services. but his expenses were paid in comnection with the expmation. and the rote that was given last year was the reward for his services.
Mr. Casfy. He eoullil mot posibly have ex-

The rest of this S3.(Mn) mast hate beenfor Mr. Brownis services.

Mr. CARLISt: The allowance Wat manle for expenses, amd he frew money from time to time for his expeluses in connection with the exhibition.

Mr. (ANEX. Persenal expenses?
Mr. ©ARLINi: Ves : he travelled from onte part of the lhminion to the other, and this was to pay his tavelling expenses. malway expenses, the expenses of going to datmaica, ond also his expernses while there.

Mr. ('ANF. It would It much more satisfac tory if the some course hat heenfollowed with Mr. Brown as in the aase of Mr. Dinnek. Ihetails are given of Mr. Diments expenses: living allowance. so much : fates, so much : pullmans. su much : calks, so mich: liverg, so mbeh ietails are given of all these expenses, amb then he is paid sit a day for so many days. In the case of Mr. Bromn his services and expenses are all lmmped tugether, and vou cammot tell. on the face of this statement, bow much of this has been phid for services amil how much for expenses, and so ons. But it is an undosubted fatet that on the face of these atcomints he was paid for his services. The Auditor dieneral certainly would not put it in that way muless the wouchers showed that some of the chergues were drawn for services as well as for expenses. I hopre the Minister will explain how it is that he came to le patil this sum.

Mr. CARLIN: 1 camunt explain any further. The late member for Hamilton was a very etticient mam. he was employed over 3 (x) days, and his total expenses was :omething like S3.(M) . That wouhl include: his travelling expenses. living expenses. and expenses at lamaioa, and of course, anything that accurred there for which he was responsille as the head Commissioner for Camada.

Mr. CANE:. I No not ask the hom. Minister to give us the details now : I ask him to explain how it was that Mr. Brown came to lex paid for his services while a member of this Honse? That is the way it is entereal here.

Mr. (ARLINi: I stated to the hon. gentleman that he was not paid for his serviees.

Mr. CANEX. The aecounts sily he was.
Mr. (CARLINE: I can only sily that he uatspaid i his expernses for the exhibition.

Mr. Bowlill The hon. sentleman inom West Figin (Mr. (asey) maxt be awate that sometimes errors creep into the Atulitor dieneral's Report. Dne was brought under our notice the other night, which statend that a man had leven superamuated threeyeats inefore he was appointerl. There is mo conolt that it was all moror of the printer.

Mr. ('ANF. That wats a misprint.

Mr: Bollel.l. It might lx. still it wat si worved, and the attention of the Honse wats called to it, and fanlt was foum with the diovermment, although it was a palpable printer'servor. I think the Minister of Agrieulture will sete, on reflection. that this wom " services" should not be there, le. caluse I have a very distinct recollection that when Mr. Brown acepteal the prosition he was given to umlerstam that omly his expenses wete to te paid. and the cote of $S_{2}(\mathrm{~m} M$ ) was asked for hy parliament after he hat ceatised to low a member of partiament.

Mr. (Clisk . It was a very neat arrangement.
Sir JOHN THOMPSiN: les. it pleased all purties.

Sir RlCHARI)(`ARTIRIUHY: I would like to have adetailetl acerume of this revote of sios.

Mr. ('ARLISI: It was chiefly for Intereohonial Railway freight in commerion with the steambeat lines.
 stamd it detes mot inchele amy persomal expenses of the sort we have leten dise hising?
sir JohN THOMPSOS. No.
Sin RICHARD (CARTIVRIEHT. What were the reasoms? I see some charges here for customs -luties an? whariage. I molerstomel that goonls semt to the exhibition were wix atmitted free hy the . Jimbaica anthorities.

Mr. Boll Ei.I. I will empire ame tell wor later ©ll.

Mr. LA.ANiELIER. I Wo not think that the Brown. is a misprint. If gon evompare it with the expenses of Mr. Dimock, Jou will find that Mr. Browns, expenses come tis a great deal more, and I presume that what wats sutficient for Mr. Dimock would be sutticient for Mr. Beown. is they hoth probally livel at the same hotel. The sis, (nn) to Mr. Briwn must le for personal expenses, levanse I see that cablegrams aml cab-hire are charget extra.

Mr. CASEL. It is certainly impossible for his living expenses aml travelling expenses to amommt this was a lump, sum which was given to Mr. Brown to cover these expenses and to have a little change in his pocket lesides. I do not understand how the liovernment gave Mr. Brown this lump sum when he was still a member of Parliament. It appears to me to le very like a liveach of the privileges of Parliament.

Mr. BOWVELI. The hon. member for Queleet (Mr. Langelier) will, fromhisownexperience, know that there is a difference between a man who is seut to take charge of an exhibition of this kind, and the position of the Commissioner who tas :o receire ami in many cuases entertain gentlemen coming there. In achlition to that it must lue understome that Mr. Biown was travelling all over this Dhminion for months lufore he proceteried to lamaica. in order to make arrangements from Halifax to Vameouver for the mansportation of the articles which were sent there. whereas Mr. Dimork proveeledfrom his home at Truro. I think, (w. Jamaica. A gentleman in Mr. Brown's pasition wonh have to spend more than $\mathbf{x i}^{5}$ aclay: When it is mblerstonal that Mr. Bhown was exiupied in (amadafor months inaking arrangements for the exhibition, and travelling from one emi of the Imminion to the other, it will Ine seen that the sum of $\leqslant 3,(M M)$ Was net $t(x)$ mueh.

Mr. SOMERVILLLF. I think weought to know whether Mr. Bhowis sent in a detailed actrmut, or whether it was a lump sum given to him.

Mr. ('ARLINi. There Wins mo lump sum given to him. He drew different sums of money from time to time for his expenses, and it was hilanceel at $\mathbf{S 3},(6 \mathrm{n})$. Considering that Mr. Rrown was at work for several months in the fominion luefore going to. lamaicat amilue pavition which he cmapien in liamaica. I think that the Honse will sete that the sum is a rery molerate one.

Mr. SOMFRVIL.LF. I think we ought to hate an understambing as to whether an aterount was remered for these expenses. In the Public Accomits Ciommittee we can set the eletails of the expenses of the leputy Ministersamh other ofticials: the omly exerption to that rule leeine in the cose of the Ministers of the Crown and the High Commissioner in Landon. I would like to know if Mr: Bivern has sent in a detabled ateonmt, levaluse. if he- is pur on the sime fonatimg as the Dlimisters atml the High Commissioner, we ought to know it. I have mothing to say agamet Mr. Romums qualititations as Commissioner to the damaita Exhibition. lectunse 1 think he was a rety ethicient sentleman for that pesition, hut, at the sime time, we onght to le put in presession of the facts in regrand on this expenditure.

Mr: Bollfill. 1 have just mevived an explam ation of the customs duties which the hom. member for sonth Uxforl (Sir Richand (artwright) called attention to. It will be remembered that there were a mumber of millers who sent over a larse quantity of form, which was laketi into bread and distributed in the exhihition gratuitously by our Commisiomer. There was also liynor sent by Dr. Walker ami some other distillers. That was also clistrihuted and went inte consumption.

Sir RICHARD (CARTIWR1汭T, limatuitously :
Mr. BOWELL.. I think sa. However. 1 am: speaking from a customs stamlpoint, not in regarel to the generosity of the Commissioner or Mr: Walker: On all articles that went into consumption the damaica fiorernment insisted on the duty being pail. I am informed by the aceomitant of the department that ont of this S6ik4. Ht one humired poumls sterling was paid for wharfage. I am also informed that the adrance mate to Vr. Bivown was $23,2(x)$, of which he returneel sivn to the Receiver lieneral, and the rommilsum of $\mathbf{$ 3}, 1 \times 4$, was allowed him to cover his expenses.

Mr. CANEI. I Was not aware that this Commissioner eronceived such a stroke of senius for the parpose of securing a large attenclance at the Canaclian exhibit. Certainly he couli not have struck on a better attraction than free whiskey. | That part of the exhihition must have heren crowided irom the time it was opened matil it thoerd. But 1 home noluxly will tell the Finume Minister alout it. I understamd that the hous. sentleman is not very well at present, and if he heand that the Cimadian exhibit had been the seene of free whiskey, 1 am sure that he would betome much worse. But the hon. Mimister of Agrienture has not answered the question yet whether Mr. Krown has put in a detailed account of his expenses We do not expect him to remember that detailed accombt, but we wish to know whether or not it was put in: 1 also wamt him to tell us, if he can. with sume appresech to detail. what lenetits have aterved to our commerce with the West lndies on atevomt of this exhibition, which chet ussio, (乍m enld:

Mr. CARLIN:. A detailed acomant was mot seme in, nor wats it pasible for Mr. Brown to ketp a detaiked accom of his expenses from the time he commencel metil the exhbition was arte. He is a genteman in whom we had great enor. tidence and he made an excellent Commisioner. We did not tie him down to a detailed account of avey dollar he spent. but we allowed him to draw money ats he needed it to carry out the work entrusted of him. A very excellent report was made to this House by Nir. Bioma last session, and if the hon. genteman will take the trouble to read that report, he will sete that the damaica Exhibition will result very andimtagenesty to the Exminion of Canada.
Mr. CASEL, Of course, we have ahwas hippai considerable quantities of younds to damaica. but 1 anm enguing of the Minister whether. of his knowletge. any increase in the trade has arisen from this exhilitions The report merely paints out how Camada was adrertiset, and what sowel prospects there are for trade. 1 am ashing the Minister whether those prospets have materialized: As is the expenses, it is a most mosual thing not oo require a detailed list of expenses from any commissioner who is sent out at the public expense. The hon. Minister says it would le have for the commisioner to keep an accomut. Why, Mr. Dimock has given a detailed accome of everything paid for him in comuetion with the exhibition, and there are entries in the genemal list even for amomuts as low as sexto. Thy should mot Mr. Brown have kept a detailed accome of his expenses : He has simply heen allowed to draw sexu or (30) from thate to time, saling that it was for expenses, and has benalloweyl, himally, to hamp them all at $\leqslant 3,(0)$ ) to the end of his job, and he has mot luen called upon to tell what he did with the money: This is a most extraorlimary, umcommon anid irregular monle of dealing with a commissioner. experially when that commisioner is a member of this Honse. He has leen allowed to swe whatever he could for himself out of this money, and 1 have no doubt he was able to save a considerable sum ont of it, 1 have every respect for Mr. Brown, but the temptation of save something, when treated that way, would be almost toe much for the virtue of any one of us, if we were allowed to draw on the treasury whenever we wisheel, withont giving any aceome of what we did with the money. 1 think that before he rot the present of s2,0以u he should have beth reyuired to tell what he did with the $\mathbb{*}$,,$(x)$ which he hat already got.

Mr. sOMERVILLE Ithink this is a hati precerleut to establish, experially in veew of the lact that a commisioner will skin be appminted for the Columbia Exhibition at Chicaste lle ousht to know whether the ciovernment intemi to paraue this system in the foture. 1 de mot charge Mr. Brown with leing guity of appropriating say of this money for his own fenctit : hat it is well known that the liovermment require a detailed ater sum of all expenses of this chamater tromath their othicers: and 1 madenstamd. from the whidenve siven lefore the Phble Acymats Committex. that the Aubitor feneral would not sumetion the payment of axpenses without leing furmished with a detailed : tecomar of them. If the dioneroment bave atopped the principle with resard of Mr, Alam Rexnow, the Commissioner to the damaica Exhehiton. that he may be at bikery to spend just what he setes tit one his personal expenses withent rembering an acrumbt. Why should mot the comminsobets to be sent to Chienso he pur on the sime fosetimy ? 1 think it woud le well for the dionermathe in future to insist on a detained ancome of allexpenses In fiete. 1 thank it is the duty of the Amaitor denetal to serthat no such atrwints arv paill withore detaik being furmisheyl.

Mr. MAMCLLLES. I do mot wish to utter at womlagainst Mr. Brown : probelhy ne ketter mate combl have leen cheven to attem that exhbinion on hehalf of Canala. The only thing to te object. eal to is the primiple of allowing expenses of this kind without reymixims a proper acoumat. White 1 Ao not for a monemt impute to Mr. Brownamy improper action, while lam quites sure be is alkive it. as far as 1 know, ambl hatennown him for twentytive vears, it would he very mach thetter in comestion with matters of this kimi that a detailed state-taken to the expenditure amd sn that an expemhture similar outhay in future sears With regand to the remarks of the hom. Minister of Agriculture with resam to Comadian whisker we sent wer there. 1 am not surprised at it. These perple have a perfeet right to semel their liguor to any part of the work, hut that a commision of that himd shoma le used for the parpose of sevuriag a market in that particuker commentity is not. 1 think, in acesond with the genemal sentiment of the commry, sund 1 am certainly astomished that the Minister of Finames. who is imdebed in a srat measume to his temper. :ance principhes for his pasition befome the comers. shonhi acymester in ampthiny of the kind. I womid like in this commection to ask the hom. gentleman if there was any exhibition of ale or lextr abs:

Mr. SomERTILLE. As 1 melentamd the whiskey was given as a gratuity by the distillers.

Mr. CARLING: Thetionernment paid the dury:
Mr. SOMERVILIE. Ami 1 suppane the pehbidrank the whishey:

Mr. M.MILILFN. Was there any exhbition of ale or angthing of that kime:

Mr. CARLNC: 1 ammot prepered to aly. If the hom. gentleman will look at the provedare ino.k. he will ser a list of the articles. Prokably there Nas

Nr. CAski. They were givell us iner, fow:
Mr: CARLINE. I lare sig.

Mr. Mr.MULLFN. I am mot making any reflection on the hon. rentleman, hut I have not read all the report, and thonght the Minister would know whether there was an exhibition of ale or not.
Mr. (ARLING. If the hon. gentleman will reat the report he will get all the information.

Mr. Mr.MULLLF. No, he will mot get it all.
Mr. (ANEY. I will just call attention to the fact that Mr. Brownis predecessor as member for Hamilton, Mr. Witton, wats sent to the Vienna Exhibition in $1 s_{i}: 3$, while a member of the Honse. and was paid nothing hut his hare expenses. That was a precedent which the foremment should have followed in this case, instead of allowing Mr. Brown to draw without limit, amd not call upon him to give an aceount of what he did with the money. That is a precedent which shoull not lee allowed, and I think it would be proper for the Public Accounts Committee to denami from the Giovermment, or from Mr. Brown if the diommant have not got it, an account of his expenser.

Mr. Mr.MCLILEN. What was the original estimate of the estimated cost of the cemsus?

Mr. CARLISt: It is very difficult to makean estimate of what world be the cost. We expected it would cost fully or about the amome we are asking now. The total amount will be about Sien, (N0 0 , inchuling this rote. I expect this will complete the census, anl that all the information will he realy in the comse of a month or two, certainly lefore the lst of luly.

Mr. BAIN (Wentworthi. How som will the first volume of the census, in its completed form, be out:

Mr. (ARLINI:. I think there are alreaty four or five halletins issued, and two more will he published in the course of a few days. I cannot say When the first volume will be coit. The last time the densus was taken it lasted two or three years.

Mr. BAIN (Wentworth). I suppose it will be issued in the same form as lefore, in volumes, from time todime, with the different sections:

Mr. CARLING. Jes.
Mr. CAsFiV. It seems strange that while the popalation tumed ont so much less than expected, the expense shonll turn out so mach more than the estimate, although the payment for taking the census is so much per head.

Mr. CHARLTON. How many volunes will be issued, and are the statistics to he placed hefore the public in the same form as before:

Mr. CARLING. The table will he made alphabetically this time, and the number of volames will he about the same.

World's Columbian Exposition........ $$ 5,000$

Nir RICHARD (ARTWRIGHT. This is an important item as regards the possible effect that may be produced on our trade. What plan is it proposed to adopt, aml what sum will be ultimately required :

Mr. ('ARLING. It will be difticult at present to give the actual sum required. Sin, (MO) of this sum is reguired now for preliminary steps. l'ro.
fessor Nammers, who is chief director of the Experimental Fiam and has charge of all the experimental farms we have now, has been appointerl Commissioner. He was thought to be the mast suitable man for the position, as he has had to clo with nearly all the exhibitions that have taken place. He has had to do with the Plilatelphia and the Indian and Colonial Exhibitions, and is thoroughly up in agricultural matters. He is appointed without salary. He already receives a salary as chief director of the farm and no addition will he made to his satary as commissioner for the work he performs as chief commissioner. He hats already applied to the board of directors for space and has secured a certain quantity, and weare now in communication with the different provinces to get their assistance in making our exhibits a success. I know that it is the desire of the fovernment, and I am sure it will he the lesire of the House, that the Canadian exhibit shall be the best we can possibly make. Our exhihits at Philarielphia were creditable to the Dominion of (auada, and the exhibits at the Indian and Colonial Exhibition did Canala great credit, and I amsure that, under the management of Professor samoders and with the support that will he given to him, the exhihition at (Chicago will lec a credit to the Dominion.

Mr. CHARITON. The hon. gentleman is perfectly eonrect in saying that our exhibition in Philadelphiat in 18 gif was a creditable one. but I doubt whether the exhibition to be made in Chicago will place before the world much evidence of onir pros gress in mandactures since that time. 1 worlal ask if it is the intention of the (iovermment to erect a building in (Chicago as most of the southen states and European powers are doing, or whether it is intended to use the buildings ereeted hy the exhibition authorities:

Mr. (ARLING. It is not the intention of the diovernment to erect a huilding, as I understand sufficient space has heen given us for all the articles that we may desire to exhibit. I think at Philatdelphia we had something like If; (KK) feet, and we have now from (hicago the refusal of I 1 (M), (KN) square fect.

Mr. (HARLTON. . Sin the expense of erecting huildings will not he necessary :

Mr. CARLIN(i. No.
Mr. SOMERVILLE. Does the hon. gentleman intend to pursme the same course in regard to Pro. fessor Saunders that he has pursued in reference to Mr. Brown : Is Professor Saunders to draw on the Govermment for what he thinks fit, or is he to receive a fixed sum, or give an account of his expenses: I mblerstand from the Minister that he is not to receive any salary other than that he now receives, and I think we ought to know whether he will hate to give a detailed account of hisexpenses or not.

Mr. (ARLIN(: I think, under the rule of the Civil Service, and Mr. Saunders being a civil servant, he will have to give a detailed account.

Mr. CASET. The erection of buildings maty be a little extra expense, but it tends to advertise the country a great deal more than a mere exhibit in the interior of the general building. If people see a building with the name of Chili or Peru over it, they lecome interested, and if they saw a buik. ing with the Dominion flag over it as distinguished from the British ensign, they would take more interest in that than if the exhibits were placed in the main hoikling. 1 simply throw this out as a conversational suggestion. I know that in any exhibitions which 1 have heen present at, these exhibits which were kept apart from the main buililing attacted more attention than the others.

Nr. (HARLTON: Has the (iovermment made any estimate as to the probable cost that will he incurred in connection with the exhibition in (hicacra? We have here a vote of Sithon, but of conuse that is only a mere item.

Mr. CARLIN(i. The Supplementary Estimates for 18!2 93 will show what we expect in addition to this vote.

Mr. FFATHERSTON. I should like to know What encomagement the fovermment propose to offer for the exhilition of live stock at Chicagos?

Mr. (ARILN:. The intention is to pay the freight chatges on the cattle that go to Chicago. The question of insurance has heen discussen with the live Stock Association, and I have promised to consider and liscuss that with my colleagues.

Mr. EEATHERNTON. I would like to know What system the ciovermment will adopt in the selection of stock which is to be sent from Canala to Chicago :

Mr. (ARLINi. That question has not been settled. I met a deputation from the Ontario Live Ntock Association in reference to that question, and whether we shall make the selection or whether it shall he mate by the Provincial fovermments is yet to hee conisidered.

Mr. CASEI. Another point is in reference to the appointment of Mr. Saunlers as commissioner to this exhibition. No doubt. Mr. Saunders will be an excellent commissioner, but he has to look after the experimental farms, and who will perform that duty while he is looking after the exhibition ? It will take him nearly a year, if not a whole year. It appears from the statement of the Minister that it took Mr. Brown a year to look after the small exhibition in Jamaica, and certainly it must take Mr. Saunders a year to look after this very important exhibition in Chicago. During that time, he will not be able to give his attention to the experimental farms. It seems to me that this shows the inadvisability of appointing any one connected with the public service to perform any rluty outside of his own position. Let every one stick to his own business. No donlit Mr. Saunders would make a good commissioner, but he cannot be an efficient director of these farms and an efficient commissioner at the same time. I think the fiovernment should have appointed as commissioner some gentleman who had no other duties to conflict with this. There are many gentlemen who are as well acquainted with agriculture as Mr. Saunders, or even more so, because Mr. Saunders has heen more a horticulturist abl a fruit-grower than anything else, and there are others who are acpuainted with the manufacturing interests who might have made as good commissioners as Mr. Saunders. Now Mr. Saunders is to be paid for one thing while he is away performing other duties. He is to be paid for doing duties that he cimnot possibly perform while he is doing other cluties which do not belong to his office. This mixture of responsibilities will certainly involve a loss in one direction or the other. Fither he will neglect his duties as commissioner to attend to the farms, which I think is not likely--bectuse the commissioner's cluties will he the Giore pleasant of the two--or he will neglect his duty as director of the experimental farms to attend ta his commissionership, which is, probahly, the shape the affair will take. I think that the (iovernment have made a great mistake in taking it man who has such important duties to perform in Canada, to represent us at Chicago.

Mr: PATERSON (Brant). Is the Minister aware whether any or all the provinees are taking an interest in this matter, as provinces, and have voted a sum towads it: Has there been any communication, informal or otherwise. with the provinces on this point?

Mr. (ARLINEi. The Necretary of State hats communicated with the different Provincial Governments, informing them that we have been invited by the United States anthorities to take part in the exhibition, and that we have accepted that invitation, and we ask the Provincial (iovernments to join with us in making that exhibition a success. Professor Saunders has been instructed by me to visit the different provinces and consult with the members of the Local Govermments as to what part they will take, and how much they will contribute. It is intended to work in unison with the different Provincial Governments. The exhibition does not come off till May, 1893, aml we are already taking the preliminary steps to see what the Locai fovernments are prepared to do, ạnd I hope to know detinitely in a very few days.

Mr. DALS. I have not been able to hear all that the Minister of Agriculture has said; but I may mention that the (iovernment of Manitobit have already made a grant towards representing that province at the Worlds Fair, and the Legislature of British Columbia have also made a grant. The two provinces united together for the purpose of getting space and erecting a building at Chicago, lut, unfortunately, they were told that they conld not erect a building as they were provinces of the Dominion of Canada, and that Canada alone could erect a building. I sincerely hope that the fovernment will not le niggardly in making the expenditure that will be required in order that Caiada may make a good showing at the Chicago World's Fair. I am satisfied that the position Canadia takes at the fair will do more to promote her welfare than anything that has happene:l since the exhibition of 1876 . I think the Government expended $$(10), 100$ at the Philatelphia Exhibition, and i hope they will give even a larger sum for the Chicago Exhibition, because it will be a larger exhibition than that of Philadelphia, and Canada is a greater country now than she was in 1876, and we ought to make a greater effort than we did in 1876 to place the resources of this great country before the people of the world who will attend the exhibition in Chicago in 1893.

Mr. MoMULLEN. I do not fully endorse the remarks dropped by the hon. member for Elgin (Mr. Casey). 1 do not think a letter man could be found than Mr. Saunders to discharge the duty of chief in connection with this exhibition. I quite agree with the remarks of the hon. member for Selkirk (Mr. Inaly). I think we should make every effort to make a creditable exhibition on the part of C'anada. My opinion is that it is in good hands. At Chicago our country will come into competition with every state in the Union, as well as with the South Americam Rtates. We should spare no effort to make an exhihition that will reflect credit upon Canala, and be the means of bringing before the eyes of the world the commodities we are able to probluce, and the alvancement that our country has made.

Mr. (ASES', I did not say that a hetter commissioner could he foum than Mr. Saumlers, but I wid as goon a one could have been got who had no other duties to perform at home. What I oh, jected to was the appointment of a man as commissioner who had a rery important duty here which he must negrlect in orier to perform the duties of commissioner.

Quarantine-Cattle disease............ $$ \mathbf{S}, \mathrm{MN}$

Mr. ('ARLING: The item voted last year for puarantine purposes was really less than it should have heen, and was less than was asked for by the department. It was thought prossible that we might get along with the amount that was roted. In addition to that, we have had cattle disease in Pictou, N.S., that we were determined to stamp out, and a large mumber have been slaughterel.

Mr. FEATHERSTON. I would like to ask if the dovermment inspectors had to slaughter a great many hogs last year since the returns were made last Iuly:

Mr. CARLINi. Ves. I think a larger number than usual of hogs have leen slaughtered in the west on accomit of hog cholera. We have taken a larger sum this year than we did in previous years.

Mr. HAGGART. I lo not know.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. Supposing that they paid as much, or a little more than we paid, and I rather think they paid a good deal more, it would appear, and it is interesting to know, that the total cost pretty nearly equals the total amount of the award.

> St. John Custom House-Clenring away debris of burut edifice, fencing ground; renting, fitting up sndfurnishing temp.orary quarters for public offices, &cp. $\ldots $, 100$

Mr. FLINT. Has there been an official encpuiry into the cause of that disastrons fire"

Mr. OUIMET. Immediately after the fire took place, Mr. Eurart, one of the architects of the department, was sent down there to make in enquiry as to the origin of the fire, and the extent of the damage done, and also to look for accommodation for the different officers who were engaged in the building. He only returned yesterday and I am waiting for his full report. In the meantime a building has been found to. uccommodate the different departments, for a rental of $$ 3,000$ a year. Immediate steps will be taken to clear away the debris, and 1 am very glad to sty that; according to the summary report before nie, we will be able to restore the building at a cost of alout $$ 100,000$. It originally cost about $$ 338,000$ ). This sum of $$ 4,000$ is 9 reyuired to pay for the enquiry, the clearing of the debris, the purchase of furniture for the different offices in the temporary building, and also to pay the rental to the 1st of July.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHTY I suppose the building is not entirely destroyed?

Mr. OUIMETT. No: the walls will he utilized.

Sir RICHARDCARTWRIGHT. We have hat under discussion once or twice in old times of this House, theexperliency, in view of the large amomes we have lost by fires, of doing one of two things: Either to insure these miscellaneous buildings of ours all over the Dominaon, which I think could he done on reasonably morlerate terms probably in a way that would save a great deal of money: or else make all the more expensive buildings sul)stantially fire-proof. I lo not think nowadays that the rifference in cost would be very great. Hias the Minister given any attention to that suliject?

Mr. OUIMET. Thequestion was brought to my attention, and I was toll that it had been decided that we had so many buildings, that it would be better for the Government to insure themselves. As to the suggestion of the hon. gentleman that all the important buildings to he erected by the Govarmment are to be male fire-proof, the suggestion has already receivel due attention from the department and in fuiure will be followed as much as possible.

Mr. FRASER. I might ask if the dovermment, in insuring their own huildings, placed the amount of the insurance money as a fund to meet losses on such fires as this:

Mr: OUIMET. It might le done in that way, but it would only be a matter of book-keeping after all. There is no special fund provided now.

Mr. BORI)EN. I would like to ask the hon. Minister whether he can give us any informationas to the origin of the fire in the custom-house at St. .John.

Mr. OUIMET'. I cammot as yet.
Mr. BORDEN. Wias there any night watchman in charge of that building?

Mr. OUIMFT. There was, and the building was planned to le fire-proof when huilt in $185^{\circ}$.

Mr. BORDEN. I happened to be at St. John a day or two after the fire oecurren, and it was common rumour on the street that there was no one in charge of the builling, but that the most reckless carelessness prevailed in regard to it : and it was thought that the matter ought to be very carefully investigater. I was also told that although the building was fire-proof, the iron doors dividing the rlifferent sets of offices were not closed, and not the slightest precaution had been taken against fire on the night before the fire occurred. If these statements are true, and I heard them on very reliable authority, some one must have bhundered or have been guilty of extreme carelessness and inattention to iluty.

Quebec Drill Hall-To complete payments to coutractors and architects. $$ 332$ in

Sir RICHARD (:ARTWRIGH'T. What is the total cost of this deill hall ?

Mr. OUIMET. This rote is reguired to pay the contractors the balance which the department acknowledges to le due to them on the contract and on the award that was made to them for extras. The amount claimed by them for extras and damages was $$ 28,000$; the amount recognized by the Government was $$ 1,5(00$, and this amount, added to the moneys now in the hands of the department, will make that up. When this balance is paid, the total cost of the building will have heen 966,722.

> St. Vincent de Paul PenitentiaryAdditional amount required....... $$ 14$, ory

Sir RICHARI) (ARTWRIGHT. What is this for:

Mr. OUIMET'. This amount is necessary to pay for the materials furnished during the year, for which we have no money left from the vote of last year, which. from some oversight, was very limited. It was only sif,(KN) when it ought to have leen $52 x,(x N)$.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGH'T. Does this complete all the repairs which the Department of Justice hare askel for at that penitentiary, so far as the stonework is concerned?

Mr: OUIMET. The main building is all completerl now. This is towards the construction of the lxumdary wall, the completion of which will tinish the woik on the penitentiary.

> Otawa Pust Office. Custom house. dee.To make good damage by fire.............ow Sir RICHARD (ARTWRlGHT. How was that fire calased:

Mr. OLIMET. The fire acemed on the lith of January last in the upper part of the builling, probalily through the negligence of some emplove. Very fortunately the whole builling was not ilestroyed, and this amount will he sufficient to repair it.

Sir RI(:HARD (ARTTWRIGHT. I suppose all empuiry was male. Wias the employi identitied:

Mr. OUIMET'. No: our euquiry could not go any further after we found that the fire originated in a special rom occupied by several employes.

Sir ADOLPHF CARON. I may siy that there was no negligence. We investigated the canses of the fire, and no negligence on the part of any of the employés conld he traced. The fire originated in a room, ind it is impossible to discover how it occurred.

Sir RICHARJ) (AKTWRI(iHT. Is the build. ing supposed to be fire-proof:

Harbours and Rivers-General repairs

Sir RICHARI) CARTWRIGHT. How is this to be expeniled:

Mr. OUIMET'. The amount of $$ 4,(M X)$ was voted last year for genemal repairs and improvements to harhours and rivers. Of that amount, $$ 1,32(6$ have already been expended, and to complete the year a further amount of $$ 3,(X N)$ is required.

Mr. BORDEN. Will the hom. gentleman state the places at which this expenditure is to take place?

Mr. OUIMETS. I could not state exactly. There is St. Mary's, West Morden, anl a number of other places.

Mr. PERRE. I would ask the hon. gentleman if the Government intend going on hlasting the rock in Cascumpec Harbour? They spent already $$ 16$,000 there, and do not seem inclined to do anything further. As I said in this House years ago, the plan the Government adopted for blasting the rock was not a proper plan, as after blasting it they allowed it to remain on the lottom. There is a great deal mone work to be shone there, and it is not fair that this harlonur should he nerelected.

Mr. OUIMFET. Since the hom. gentleman has drawn my attention to the harkour of ('ascmmpes 1. have given instructions to the chief engineer to make a repent. athel in a sery few days I will be in a position to tell the hom. gentleman what the de:partment propose to do.

Mr. PERKI. On referring to the retum which I asked for a few days ago, whiel is now on my

That is what 1 complain of : I belice that the whole of that will not lee expemled. In fact. in Prince Edward Island we have only one drealge, ant it can only do half of what is reguired. I think El. $\boldsymbol{\sigma}$ (x) would cover all the expenses of that irealge. I am not going to blame the present Minister of Public Works for this. I believe that he will do what is right. but I have knawn that crealge not to commence work until June and even later, though it should commence early in May. The Minister of Public: Works must remember that we are paying the captain of that dredge son a month, whether the dredge is working or not. When the ice is away from the straits, he should he ordered to go there at once. I have known the dredge not to commence until the ISth.July, and even in one year not until Octoleer, while the captain was strutting alout the streets of Charlottetown working for the (iovernment candidates. I hope the present Minister of P'ublic Works will not allow such injustice as this to be done to the people of Prince Edward Island. I hope the Govermment will order this dredge to go there as early as possible, and will also senl another dredge there. Perhaps the harbours in Prince Eilward Island reguire more dredg. ing than the harbours elsewhere, but we cannot help that. The Island was not made under our control, and the Dominion of Canada was very glad to get the Island. The Dominion swallowerl Prince Edward Island, and they should do what is fair to it, and I hope the Minister of Public Works will do justice to the people of that province.

sir RICHARD (ARTWRIAHT. Will yon give us a little detail in regirel to this:

Mr. TUPIPER. This is tamler the Aet of last year by which two inspectors were appointed at the port of Montreal, and these inspectors were given a salary of Sl.(MN) each, and the amome we expect to collect from the 2 cents a head rate which has been imposel on the cartle will vover the cost. This is practically to pay for the expenses of the inspectors and the ottice rent for this year.

Sir RICHARD) (ARTWRIGH'T. What are their duties to le:?

Mr. TUPPER. They are inspectors under the Act of last session, to examine amb see that the ship is fit and is properly arranged in order to carry cattle from : Cinatian port to an English port. In this anatter, we are working in accord with the Board of Agriculture in England, and thus we are able to keep up the shipment of live cattle, which was at one time seriously threatened. This provision is intended to make sure that proper stalls are made and that the fittings are all right in order to stand tempestuous weather.

Mr. Mc:MILLAN (Huron). Has a plan lreen alopted by which each stall is male sufficiently wide for the animal, according to the regulations. 0 feet X inches:

Mr. TUPPER. We were not in a position ${ }^{\text {a }}$ apply the law until almost the end of last seasom, but, from the time these inspectors were appointed, I do not think any ships went out without coniplying with the regulations. At all events those were the instructions given, and no complaints have reached me since.

Fisheries Intelligence Burean - Certain persons rt $$ 15$ each for services in comparing and forwarding daily reports.. 3420

Sir RICHAR1) CARTWRI(iHT. What is the precise cluty these men perform:

Mr. IUPPPER. They are alrearly in the service, and that is why their names appear here, in order that we may have authority to pay them. They are nearly all customs officers, and they are on the coast where the movements of the fish occur. They pursue the sime service as is performed in Norway, where they send to the central office daily statements as to the appearance of the mackerel on the coast, and bulletins are published so that the tishermen can govern themselves accordingly. As the hon. gentleman knows, the movement of the fish is variable along the coast. This system has been in force now for two years and has been found to be more valuable each year.

> Fisheries-To provide for allowances and expenses to commissioners............ $$ 1,100$

Sir RI(.HARD) CARTWRIGHT. Who are the commissioners. and what allowances have they been in the habit of receiving?

Mr. TUPPER. They are the commissioners who have lately been holding a very exhaustive enguiry into the fisheries of British Columbia. The nankes of these commissioners are Mr. Higgins, Speaker of the Lacal Assembly. 1 believe, of the Province of British Columbia: Mr. Armstrong, the Sheriff of New Vestminster; and Mr. Wilmot, Superintendent of Fishery Culture, of the Fisheries Department. The tisheries of that province are exceedingly important, and at the instance of people there, this diovermment, a year ago, alopted a system of reanlations. But there has been a great deal of friction in connection with these regulations, and the chief puint that has been raised by those interested in the fishing industry in British (Columbia, was that the experience of alunst all the officers who advised the Government in commection with these matters, was gained in the castern provinces where the habits of the -tish were different. and where the circumstances were unlike those on the Pacific coast. After enleavouring, so far as possible, to obtain full information, the fiovermment deemed it expedient to appoint this Commission of two local gentlemen of high stamding. associated with an otficer upon whose views the liorermment had, to a large extent, depended in connection with the regulations. They have been oceupied about sixty days, and a very large amount of testimony has been taken, which, I have no doult, will be vituable, and is now ready for consideration. This amount is taken to cover the expenses of this Commision.

Mr. DEWIDNES'. This is to complete the cost of education in the North-West. and to pay expenses in connection therewith up to the end of the year. Last year the sum asked for was $$ 119,000$. S100,000 only was roted, and it is found that we shall require this amount in order to carry out the obligations of the present Assembly in regard to their schools. List year I stated that we were under the impression that the amounts paid to the teachers in the North-West were excessive, and that was intimated to the authorities in the North-West during the course of last session. When they received the information it was so late that they were unable to advise the trustees who had engaged their teachers, and therefore could take no means to reduce the salaries. However, during the last session of the Legislative Assembly they passed an amendment to their school ordinance which has reduced the salaries some 20 or 20 per cent. But they were under obligation to pay the indebtedness they had incurred under their former engagement with the teachers, and this is to pay the balance.

Mr. LaNDERKIN. Is this to pay the teachers in public schools ?

Mr. DEWINNEY. Yes.
Mr. LANDERKIN. Are the schools denominational?

Mr. DEWIDNEY. These are public schools, and union and separate schools.

Mr. LANDERKIN. Are all the public school teachers in the North-West paid ly this Government?

Mr. DENWDNEY. Yes.
Mr. PATERSON (Brant). What system of inspection is there for these schools?

Mr. DEIVDNEX. These schools are very closely inspecterl.

Mr. LANDERKIN. Is there no revenue mised in the North-West for the purpose of defraying the expenses of public schools other than that provided by this Government?

Mr. DEWWNES. They have got a general revenue, but the whole of their revenue does not exceed $$ 40,000$, although they expect to raise a larger amount in the future. Conserguently, this House has to make up the balance which this revenue is insutficient to meet.
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. In that case we are paying alout $$ 140 .(100)$ or $$ 1: 01.000$, against $$ 40.000$ raised in the Territories, as 1 understand the hon. gentleman. Now, that seems altogether out of the way to saddle on the people of Canala. What is the number of pupils in the schools the hon. gentleman has under his control?

Mr. DEWDNEY. The number of pupils, according to last return, is 3,700 .

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGH']. And the total cost is about $$ 200,000$ ) ?

Mr. DEWVDNEY. The estimate of this year will be $$ 123,000$.
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. But this is an addition.

Mr. DEWDNEY. It is an addition to the $$ 100,000$.

It being six oclock, the Committee rose, and the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

House again resolved itself into Committee of Supply.
(In the Committee.)
Mr. LANDERKIN. I notice that the Minister informs us that there are 3,700 pupils in the NorthWest and that we spent on them last year nearly $$ 170,000$. That would be an average of a littile over $$ 45$ per heal for every pupil in the NorthWest. Can the Minister explain how we spend so much as this?
Mr. DEWDNEY. I cannot understand how the hon. gentleman makes the amount $$ 170,000$; it was only $$ 100,000$ last year.

Mr. MoMULLEN. What are the number of school inspectors in the North-West ?

Mr. DEWDNEY. At present there are but four, but previous to the last meeting of the Assembly there were two permanent inspectors at a fixed salary of $\mathbf{S i n} 0$ a year and travelling expenses, and others were appointedtemporarily and paid so much for inspecting each school in the outlying districts.

Mr. McMLLLEN. Are the salaries paid by the Dominion, or do the Territories contribute a portion?
Mr. DEWDNFI. In the vote for the NorthWest Government is included the expenses for the schnols, teachers salaries, expenses of Board of Education, and inspectors travelling expenses. The teachers are engaged by the trustees of different school districts, and formerly we paid $7 \overline{\mathrm{j}}$ per cent of their salaries, and the schooldistrictspay the balance. In some districts large and expensive schools have been built by the trustees of the school districts.
Mr. MoMULLEN. Are the inspectors required to hold a certificate of qualitication ?
Mr. DEWDNEY. They are experienced men and hold a very high class certificate. Very great care is taken in their selection, and I think nearly all of them held similar positions in Ontario before they went to the North. West. The teachers have to holl certificates similar to those in Ontario.
Mr. MoMULLEN. Suppose a man is up there and has no certiticate, how does he ol,tain one?
Mr. DEWDNEY. There is a board of examiners to examine and issue certifiates in the North-West Territories.
Mr. Memulles. Is the average attendance at the schools increasing?

Mr. DENDDEY. It is increasing so rapidly that it is difficult to get school house accommodation. The average allowed under the school ordinance of the North.West Territories is very low, and as it has lirought about a very large number of schools, I believe they propose to increase it. It is very clear that the low average of five, as at present in a school district, would be a very great burden on the people of the Territories, and they have heen toll, and I think they appreciate it, that they will be expected to help themselves in that respect more than they did before.
Mr. McMULLEN. I desire that every facility should be given to secure education for settlers going in there, but I think the Government should be very careful in the establishment of schools where there are not sutficient inhabitants to warrant them. Are the schools in Calgary, for instance, under the Dominion Government?
Mr. DEWDNEY. They are under the school ordinance of the North-West. There are public schools, and I think union schools in Calgary. They have one large school with four or five firstclass teachers and some three or four hundred children.
Mr. Mcmullen. What proportion of the sum expended in Calgary do the teachers contribute to the schools?
Mr. DEWDNEX. Hertofore it has been about 25 per cent of the salaries.
Mr. McMULLEN. I think that in a place like Calgary, with a school population as large as they must have now, some change should be made in order to call upon these people to pay more for the elucation of their children than 25 per cent. In Ontario the people have got to pay at least 75 per cent. for their schools. On what principle can you ask the people of the older procinces, who are educating their children out of their own pockets. to contribute all hut $\frac{0}{5}$ per cent of the cost of education in a place like Calgary" I think the Act should he amended to require the people in such a place to contribute more than they do at present.

Mr. DEWDNES. I concur in a great deal of what the hon. gentleman has said. But it is very difficult to make different procision for different localities, as they are all under the same ordinance. I may state that the Legislative Assembly, at its last meeting, reduced the expenditure ilont $\mathrm{Kn}_{1}$ per cent, which means that in future the people will pay 4 , per cent of the cost.

Mr. Mc.MULLEN. I think that wherever the population is sufficiently dense to secure a fair school attemlance, the amount contributed ly the Government should be proportionately diminished. I am glad that the North-West Council has taken a step in the right direction. hat I think they should le asked to go further still.
Sir RICHARI) CARTWRI(iHT. I understond the Minister to sity that the total mumber of scholars was 3.7(0). Now, it does appear to me out of the revenue of the country for the education of 3.700 children is altogether out of proportion and reguires further explanation. St0 per child does seem excessive, wholly irrespective of the proportion we pay.

Mr. DEWDNET. As I said lefore, this matter has been debated in the House on prerious oceasions, and the dovermment have explained that in the early days of the North-West it is necessary to grant more assistance than can lee expected when the country becones more settled and the people more prosperous. We also stated that this assistance to education has a very good effect in the North-West, and has done more than anything else that I know of to make the people content with the country. There is hardly a district or township having any settlement at all which is not able to have a school within reach of the settlers. They have not only contributed about 25 per cent of the salaries, but have taxed themselves for the building of school honses, and in some cases for the sites.
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I do not object to a very hamdsome allowance for the purpose of educating children in the North. West, but $$ 40$ per head seems to be out of all reasomable proportion. What are the average salaries pail and the average attendance at these schools?

Mr. DEWDNEY. The average salaries have been admittedly very much larger in proportion than the salaries in the older provinces. The school ordinance allowed the salaries to be paid according to the certificates. Some instances were brought to the notice of the Assembly where firstclass teachers were attached to small country schools and getting 8700 or $$ 800$ a year. That, however, has been altered. The last report of the Board of Education shows that there were 163 schools with an average attendance varying from six to seven up to 156 . The present ordinance allows a school district to le formed in a locality where there are five children of school age; so that under it, it is possible for a large number of school districts to be formed. There are now an applications for new districts.

Mr. MeMULLEN. I tind, on reference to page D- -2 I of the Auditor (ieneral's Report, that the school grant at Moose Jaw was $\leqslant 2,104$; at Prince Alhert, 83,148 ; at Regina, 83,041 : at Moosomin S2. 6 bit ; and at Calgary, ©3,680-making 515,140 which this lominion contributed last year to these five schools, while the people of the older provinces are struggling to pay for the education of their children almost entirely out of their own prockets. It seems to me unjust that this system should be allowed to continue.

Mr. LANDERKIN. Where are the hearlguarters of the Board of Ellucation in the NorthWest?
Mr. DEWDNFY. It mects at stated intervals at Reginaz.

Mr. IANTDERKIN. What is the annual const of that board?

Mr. DEWDNES. The members of the hoard get their travelling expenses. which I fancy is all they get. They may get a daily allowance also.

Mr. LANDFRKIN. Some of them must travel a considerable distance, because their travelling expenses are very high. Is it desirable to have them so far removed from the centre?

Mr. DEWDNEES. I think so. One lives at Calgary and ont at Moosomin: these are the most distant. Two of the judges of the supreme Court are on the board, Judge Wetmore and Judge Fiouleau.

Mr. LANDERKIN. On looking at the Auditor (ieneral's Report I find that that board costs Sill.. (Mn) a year. It appears to me a very large sum to pay for that purpose, about Sl0,000 for the Board of Inspectors. Those who conduct the examinations, iand, I presume, make the regulations, seem to have different grades of inspectors. Some are paid $\$ 20$ and some are paid 510 . I notice William Rothwell is down on the Auditor ( Beneral's Report as inspecting 61 schools at $\$ 10$ each, 5610 ; expenses, $\$ 396.41$, and on account of services and travelling Sto0 : so that he gets nearly $\$ 1,000$. How long does it take an inspector to inspect a school where there are five children? Do they get $\mathbf{\Sigma} 10$ or $\mathbf{S} 20$ for such schools?

Mr. DEWDNEY. I do not know.

Mr. LANDERKIN. It does appear strange - that we should have to pay these amounts. They have the power to tax themselves in the NorthWest for school purposes, and I do not think we have public schools anywhere but in the NorthWest. Have we any in British Columbia?

Mr. DEWDNEY. No.

Mr. LANIDERKIN. We have heard our eloquent friend describe the riches, fertility and great producing powers of the North-West, but reading this, you would think that the people up there are in a state of pauperdom. Iunderstand it is one of the richest and most fertile provinces in the Dominion, and those who havegone there have gone with a great deal of wealth, like my hon. friend, and are quite able to educate their children without drawing on the resources of the Dominion. If they are not. they should draw more than they do on their own province, and not come to the Dominion, because if they have a right to claim public money from the Dominion, there is no other province which has not the stane right, and the other provinces will exercise that right. For the number of schools out there, it appears to me this outlay is very extratagant. Certainly some economy could be exercised in this matter without diminution to the public serviceor to the public lenefits to the perple of the NorthWest. It appears to me this board which sits five or six days in the year, have taken something in the neighlourhood of $S 1(1,(16)$ from this service. Here is a teacher who enjoys a salary of $\$ 1, \$(x)$ a year. In a public school in Ontario, or anywhere else. I do not know of any teacher getting that salary. I notice that the travelling expenses of the hoard are something enormous. En doubt they have good men on the hoard, but their travelling expenses are exceedingly heary. Here is one inspector whoonly got \$20) for the whole year, the Rev. A. H. Bigonesse. I wonder what church he lelongs to. J. A. Blair gets $\$_{2} 20$ for each school : I. A. Costello gets S20) each school: the Rer. P. Dommean gets sent each: the Kev. James Flett gets $\mathbf{s i n}$ each: the Rev. D. (illies gets sinl each : the Rev. D. (iraton gets Sed each : Mohn Hewgill gets 520 each, and so on. That does appear an enormous sum to pay for inspecting a school, particularly if it has only five children. They would have to make an inspection last a long time to earn that amoint of money. I think it is aloout time that a province like that, a rapidly growing and wealthy province, should have a spirit of independence inculcated among its people by the Government and should assume the functions of government among themselves. The time has arrived when responsible government in every form should be given the North-West, and one of the first functions of responsible govermment is the education of their own childreu.

Mr. MoMULLEN. On looking over the expenses of inspection, I find it amounts to $510,521.42$. I find, also, that there are eleven schools in the North-West, supported by the Govermment at an areage expense of $3,2 \pi 5$. I do think, that seeing the North-West have, under the Act passed last session, got power to tax themselves for school purposes, they should not call upon the people of this Jominion to continue this expensive service. While, of course, it is right of the Government to aid schools that have passed a certain distance, it is an imposition upon the older provinces to ask them to contribute such an enormous sum to schools in towns and villages of the dimensions of those mentioned in the list here, and I hope that the Minister will find it his ainty to stop this drain on the Dominion treasury to the extent now existing for the support of schools in places like Calgary, Moose Jaw, Prince Albert and other such places, which have large populations. whose people are doing well. As the hon. member for South Grey has intimated, that country should be in a position to at least educate their children proportionately well as the other provinces. These eleven schools cost the country 20,325 a year, while the people themselves contribute a mere pittance towards them, and I am surprised the Goverument have in-timaterl their intention, as they have by this cote, we continue this system. As I lelieve this is now the last year. I would like to know if it is the intention of the diovernment during this session to alter the: law sor as to cut down these schools?

Mr. DEWWNES. We do not make the laws with reference to the schools. The North-West Territories Aet gives the Legislative Assembly power (1) legislate with regard to their schools, which they have done. and in ateordance with the ordinances they puy the eorst of the teachers and other expenses entailed hy the ordinances, and we vote the money evely veat. Mr. Hatultain, the leader of the House. is in Ottalla, and is in connection with the fiovermment on the subject of what provision we thall make in the future and what changes we shall make with reference to the grant of sums for the North-West Territories, and after the 30th of Ime the matter will be in a better position. The Leegislative Assembly themselies will then heresponsible for the expenilit tre on the schools, and will have to cut their coat accoreling to their cloth, and I know they are sulficiently alive to see that those large expenlitures camost be continued.

Mr. Me.MLCLLEN In Ontario, I think. a school is to be for every six miles spuare or less. I think, when there is a pepulation in the North. West in any particnlar place sufficient to support a school, say withablwys, the foremment should withdraw any aill umkes it is granted on the school system of Ontario. If they adopted that system, when towns and villates were settled, we would not be called upon to contribute so6. $\overline{\mathrm{y}}$ (k). I think it is an injustice.

Mr. DAVIN. I mather think that my hon. friends are umber a complete misconception as to the merits of the guestion they are presuming to discuss. My hon. friend from Wellington (Mr. M( Mullentalks indignantly as though some wrong was done to the other provinces hy the amount that is paid for schools in the North-West. Now, Sir, in the Forth. West, as it happens, if you take the population and make a calculation on the basis on which money is paid by the Dominion to other provinces, we are entitled to about $$\left(\begin{array}{l}\text { (on) (on) more }\end{array}\right.$ thath we get.

An hon. MEMBFP. Bosh :

Mr. DAVIN. My hon. friend says "hosh," but it is a fact. and. if the people of the NorthWest wish to spend the money they are entitled to on schools. that is their business, but the fact is that in the past you could not have established the school system, the most efficient school system we have in the North-West, without the Government of those Territories paying a large percentage of the cost. Yon had to establish schools in sparsely-settlel districts, at a distance from the centres of population, and it was only by assistance from the Government that you could get teachers to go there. When letters from Europe come to us asking about the advantages to be found in the Territories, we always find that questions are asked as to what religious advantages and what school advantages are to be found there, and it has been of great value to the settlement of the North-West that we have been able to show that in every place where a population has gone in, there was the schoolmaster. My hon. friend from Wellington (Mr. McMullen) points to Moose Jaw, he points to Calgary, and he points to Regina. In both Moose Jaw and Regina the Government own half the town site, and from the increment of value, from the increase in the value of the property of the Giovernment in consefpuence of the improvements mate in these towns by the people, the people cammot get any advantage. We cannot tax the property of the fovernment. What we get now is but a fraction of what the NorthWest is entitled to. and in no letter way could this money be spent properly than in aiding schools. My hon. friend from (irey (Mr. Landerkin) and my hon. friend from Wellington (Mr. McMullen) are taking, in regard to this question, the same attitule that they have taken in respect to other matters. They forget that the money they are roting is money which, if we had full responsible government in the North-West, the Iacal Government would deal with. suppose the Loval forermment of Ontario, out of its own funds, were to give, instead of what it now gives in aill of schools, 30 per cent more, what would that be to this. Honses? It would lee the money of the people of this province, as it would in the Province of Quebee, or New Brunswick, or Nora Scotia, as the case may lee. We do not, in the North-West, arlminister our lands. hat this diovernment administers them, and I say we are getting less by about .0) per cent than we are entitled to, and I do not think the money can be spent in a more fruitful way, or one more calculated to attract immigrants, than in its expembliture upon schools.

Mr. Mr.MULLEN. Fiver since it has herome the hon. gentleman's privilege to sit in this House, he hat lreen a pronounced adrocate of the expenditure of any money in the North-West. no matter for what. If it were for the purpose of boring wells or for any other purpose, my hom. friemiladvocates the expentiture, and speaks so that you would imagine that this Dominion was living on the bounties supplien by the North. West. I think the trend has been all the other way and that the North- West owes the Dominion at least one hundred millions of money.

Mr. WAVIN. Not one cent.

Mr. McMULLEN. I challenge the hon. gentleman to show that. Money has been lavishly spent there, and it is absurd to hear any hon. gentleman say that the North-West is not receiving fair treatment from the Dominion treasury. Eiery man on each side of the House, who has any thought of his home and his family, will say that it is alsurd for us to expend $$ 2,(N O)$ in order to support eleven schools in districts in the North-West where they are duite as capathle of supporting these schools is we are in any of the older provinces. The hon. gentleman speaks very loully, hut his speech, when it is pricked, is shown to be nothing but wind.

Mr. DEVLIN. (Translation.) I believe that my hon. friend at my left (Mr. Mc.Mullen) is in error with regard to this question of pubiic instruction in the North West Territories. We have discussed this question lefore, and many times. I can say to my hon. friend that I agree with him when he says that certain amounts, even large amounts, have been spent for the North-West. That is not to be denied. This money has been spent on material interests; for we nave built at immense cost. as you know, that great railway called the Cauadian Pacific. The Parliament of Canada has voted millions for its construction
Mr. DAVIN. Who gave the land?
Mr. CEVLIN. (Translation.) I think that the hon. member did not fully understand what 1 just said, for I am adrocating as much as it is in my power to do so, the cause he so devotedly pleaded himself a few moments ago. When it is clamed that extraorlinary sacrifices have not been made for the North-West, it is a mistake. Those who like my hon. friend for Assiniboia (Mr. Davin) have gone to the North- West, have made heary sacrifices; they have left countries already settled, and enjoying all the advantagesof civilization: full of courage, and moved by a feeling of patriotism, they have turned their steps towards that new land, and I have no doubt that they often found in their path difticulties hard to overcome; but they manfully met those ohstacles, and happily succeeded in surmonnting them. My hon. friend the member for Assiniboia (Mr. Davin) was one of those brave pioneers, and already his efforts and his merits have been recognized ly the whole country, since he, a settler, has come back as a member of this House for the North-West. Mr. Chairman, you will allow me to say that I consider it as judicious to authorize the expenditure of money now proposed. And why? Because this money is intended to help educational institutions, both Catholic and Protestant; and we see that in the past, it was distributed in proportion to the population. It is just and right that we help those who have gone and settled in the North-West, because they need our help more than any. We spend money, Mr. Chairman, for ports and harbours in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island; for objects much less important than that of the present rote, in all parts of Canada; and it is claimed that we should reduce the little money allotted to an object as noble as that of education! Would the Dominion be the poorer for this expenditure? Not at all. I therefore approve the remarks of the hou. member for Assiniboia (Mr. Davin), and I regret not to to le able to share the opinion of my hon. friend at my left (Mr. McMullen). I most cordially approve the expenditure which is now under discussion, for 1 regard it as in the public interest, for the general good, for the noblest cause which can occupy the attention of a country-that of the education of its children.
Mr. CHARLTON. I wish to make some enquiries of the Minister with regard to the character of those schools aided by the Government of the North-West ; to what extent these schools are denominational, whether the Government uses public funds in aiding schools of a strictly sectarian and denominational character?
Mr. DEWDNFI. According to the report I hold in my hands, which is the latest I have, there are 162 public schools, 27 Roman Catholic public schools, and 11 Roman Catholic separate schools.

Mr. CHARLTON. I notice on page 228-D of the Auditor General's Report, that the grants to schools, Protestant special, are put down at $\$ 833$; that grants to the amount of $\$ 16,740$ are given to Catholic public schools; that grants, in round numbers, to the amount of $\$ 10,000$ are gives to Catholic separate schools, and grants to the extent of $\mathbf{3} 3,(\mathrm{nn})$ are given to Catholic schools special. Now, it would seem that the dispropertion of grants to Catholic schools is very great, and that a very small sum has been gransed to Protestant special schools, and a very large sum to (Gatholic separate schools, to Catholic special schools and to (atholic public schools. Now. I do not know to what extent the dovernment pursues its policy of giving: grants to denominational schools, but iflould very much whether their policy is a wise one. I do not think the Government should take the respomsibility of making large grants to sectarian schools, if it is to aid schools in the Nurth. West at atl. The position the Govermment wught to take. if it is to aid education at all in the Sorth-West, is to atil public schools, without taking the responsibility of establishing and maintaining separate sehools of any character whatever.

Mr. LANIERKIN. The hom. memine for Assinilmia (Mr. Davin) did me injustice in suving that I opposel everything that was for the lenefit of the North-West. On the contary, every wellconsidered measure teming to develop the North West has always had my hearty consideration and support. I do :aot criticise these items in reference to the schools in the North- West. with any ill-will towards the North-West, Inecause in the North. West I have many of my best friemols, aml 1 am as anxious to make the North-West prosperous and flourishing as 1 am any other portion of the lhominion. My criticisms were made in the interest of the North-West, and I believe in the interest of the whole Dominion. I think the policy of the Government in reference to these schools is calculated to sow disaster amb discontent. and emmities in the different, provinces. I wish my hon. friend would rise alove parish politics when dealine with these public questions.

Mr. somerville. The hom. Minister ought to explain these payments made to inspectors. As the hon. member for (ires (Mr. Landerkin) mentioned, one inspector gets selua year, others get $\$ 10$ for each shool, and others set $\leqslant$ sh for each sthool.

Mr. DEWDNFY. All these sabaries and remunerations are fixed by the Board of Education under the ordinance of the North-West Territories, and we have nothing to do with them. We give them a lump sum, and they expend it as they please.

Mr. Somerville. How mamy times are these schools inspected each year?

Mr. DEWDDNEY. I think obly once each year.
To refund to the legal representative: of the late Hou. J. (i. Ross the amount paid by him for timber berth "B," on the Bow River, in the District of Albert:a, this berth being situated in the Rocky Mountains Park of Canada
$4,050
Mr. DEWDNEY. This was a timber license obtained by the late Hon. J. (i. Rass, by competition. in the year 1883, for which he paid the sum of $$ 4,050$. Subsequently legislation took place which covered a portion of the license, and in 1887 the whole of this limit was covered by the Banff Park. He never cut a stick of timber on this liceuse, either before or after the legislation declaring it a public park. Before he died he made application for a refund, and the subject was under the consideration of the dovermment when he diel. Subsequently the heirs applied for it, and this is to repay the amount.

Mr. LANDERKIN. How along ago was this right acquired?
Mr. DEWDNEX. In Iss3.
Mr. LANDERKIN. Why was it not settled before:

Mr. DEWINNES. He never mate application until a short time lefore his death, and after he died. it was sometime lefore the executors came to see us athont it.
Mr. Me.MLLLFS. Is the Minister able to say that the purchase was worth the money that was paid for it:

Mr. DFWDNES. I think it was a very good limit. The Auclair Lumber Company paill a larger amome for a limit alongside of the park.
To pay Dr. A. Jukes for medical services in comnection with prisoners and lunatics confine in in the guaril rom at Regina, N.W.T., from list
July, 1s9n, to 3uth June, 1 sos.

Mr. CHARLTON. How large a number of prisoners and lunatics were contined at this place?

Mr. DEWDNES. I am some to sy a great number. A great number of lunatics are brought there, and after remaining a short time, are transferred to the Lunatic Asylum in Manitola. I cannot say the exact number, but a larger number than people have any idea of.

Mr. somer illate. Dr. Jukes is the chief surgeom of the Xorth-West Mounted Police. for which he gets a pretty stiff salary and why should he get this extrat amome? It is just carrying out the system that is wrowing every year. of giving an otticer, having regolar duties to perform with a salary attached thereto, ther duties to perform and paying him a secomb salary.

Mr. DEWINEEY. It has always been considered extra work. He has previous to this received sico a year for several years. His salary is $$ 1,4(x)$.

Mr. CHARLTON. Are there any extra allowances to Dr. Jukes lesides this extra sel(o)?

Mr. DEWIDNET. No.
Mr. MoMULLEN. This is another item of the number which I have drawn the attention of the committee to where it is entirely wrong that salaried otticers of the Crown receiving good sums annually for their services, should be paill extra for some little duties they discharge. Ir. Jukes has $\mathbf{\Sigma 1} 1,4(0)$ a year and his travelling expenses, and I believe a residence at Regina, and the country should not the called upon to pay him sevo extra for some little services performed by him outside of the ordinary routine of his duty. I am sure that the Minister, if he had a servant in his employ who did a few little chores for him outside of the ordinary routine, would not pay him touble wages for that. Why should we do with the money of the country what we would not do with our own money? This system is growing worse every year, and we have now four or five hundred salaried officers throughout the loominion drawing extra pay in addition to the comfortable salaries they receive. Here is Dr. Jukes drawing it comfortable salary, doing little or nothing, living as he is at the expense of the (iovernment, and simply because he is asked to perform a little service in connection with Regina gaol he asks $s=2(4)$ extra, and it is sanctioned by the ciovernment.
Mr. NoMERVILLE. Is there $a-\mathrm{v}$ regular physician puid for attending prisoners in $t$ : Regina gatel:

Mr. DEITDNEL. No.

Amount required to meet expenditure of Civil Service Commission. (Authority is hereby kiven to pay members of the Civil Service for services in connection with this Commission, not withstanding anything in the Civil Service Act to the contrary.).............................. sinimi
Mr. somerville. What are the particuiars in regard to this vote?
sir JOHN THOMPSON. The work oi that Commission has been proceding during the last two or three months, and will he finished. and the report laid before Parliament before the enl of the financial year. Some of the persons connected with it in one way or ancther are in the Civil Service. One of the commissioners is a member of the Civil Service, and without the authority of Parliament it would lee impossible to make any allowance io him. The vote is taken in orier to provide ior the expenses attending the Commission and the printing of the report and evidence. The evidence is now in the Printing Bureau, and part of it has now alrealy been printed.

Mr. CHARLTON. Does the sum include any allowance to sitaried officers of the Crown:

Sir JOHN THOMPNON. The leputy Minister of Finance is a member of the Commission, and there may be one or two employed in inferior capacities. such as reporting and matters of that kind.

Mr. CHARLTON. What is the leputy Minister of Finance to get ?

Sir JOHX THOMPSON. The amount is mit fixed yet.

Mr. CASEY. There are two objections to the plan of employing civil servants in this capacity, and paying them extra salaries. In the first place, to obtain an impartial review of the condition of the Civil Service at the present time, you ought to have commissioners who are not connected with it, who have none of its prejudices, and who have not red tape on the brain. I do not say that this particular commissioner has, but when a civil servant has been in office for a long time, he generally comes to regard matters connectel with the service from a Civil Service standpoint. What we ought to have is an impartial investigation by gentlemen totally disconnected with this service. In the second place, I hold that all of a civil servant's time belongs to the Government, and it does not matter whether he employs that time in the duties of his office, or in some other duties, he should not be paid extra for such service. I would like the Minister to tell us what points this Commission particularly investigated, whether they have been taking simply the evidence of hearls of departments, or examining clerks and suborlinate members of the Civil Service apart from their superior ofictrs. I would ask the hon. gentleman to give us a résume of the methodemployed by the Commission. I suppose that when the evidence is printed the report will be laid on the Tible?

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The evidence will not le latid on the Table until the report is made; the report will be mate when the evidence is printed.

Mr. (ANEI. Surely the Commissioners who have hearl the evilence are in a prosition to write a report of any kind. I would like the hon. gentheman to wive me the particulars in regard to the monle in which the evidence was taken.

Sir JOHN THOMPNON. As regards the appointment of Mr. Courney on the Commission, I think that the greatest possible advantages are to be derived from his knowledge of the Civil Service. dranting all that the hon. gentleman has said in fatrour of the impartiality of those who are to make an enguiry of this kind, it is important that they shouhd hring to their dhties athorough knowledge of the matters they are going to investigate. Mr. Courtney has not only had that knowlenge from his long experience as deputy head in one of the most important departments, but his comnection with the Treasury board in which he has more or less shpervision over all appoint ments, and over the theoretical organization of the departments, has given him a knowledge which is very complete and thorongh in each department, in reference to the financial interests which are connected with the (ivil service, and which is one of the most important considerations involved. The Commissioners proceeded in the first place by propounding in writing to deputy heals a series of questions. going wer mearly the whole of the subject embraced in the enguiry, searching into the sutficiency of the theoretical organizations of each department, and the over-manning of the departments, if such should be found to exist anywhere: also questions calculated to elicit any suggestions the deputy heals might le in a position to give in reference to the service. They also held a number of sittings at which the deputy heads were examined in pursuance of their answers to these questions, and examined at large on any other points that might suggest themselies in connection with the work of the repartments or otherwise. I understand that evidence was sought for atud ohtained as well from other employes in the Civil service. In addition, the Commissioners themselves visited every depiatment of the service for the purpose of ascertaining, as well as they could by personal olservation, the mode in which the work was conducted, the classitication of the clerks, and the necessity which might exist for the number of clerks they found there. In every way I think, they have made a very complete anil efficient empuiry.
Mr. CASEF. Only in respect to the inside serrice?

Nir JOHN THOMPSON. That is all.

Mr. ARMSTRON(i. I do not want to say a single word against Mr: Courtney, who is in all probability the best um who could be got for the performance of those duties. But I submit that the hon. Minister of Justice has not noticed the point raised by the hon. member for West Elgin. A man who aceepts a position in the Civil Service of Canala is paid liberally on the understanding that his salary is given for all the work that he can do for the country. I understami that Mr. Courtney will be paid his salary as Deputy Minister during all the time that he is engaged is a Civil Service Commissioner. Now, it is utterly impossible that he can perform the duties of the office of Deputy Minister of Finance and the duties of a commissioner at the same time, and I ask if it is fair to the country that he should be paid his salary for work that he does not do, and le paid another salary for work that he does do? It seems to me that this system is creeping into the (ivil service too much. In the investigation held last session, we found that men were shirking their regular work in order to do work for which they were paid extra. Such a state of things is demoralising to the service and unjust to the country.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I agree with the hon. gentleman so far as the mere increase of the cluties of a man's office is concerned: hut I am not able to agree with him in so far as his remarks relate to asking an ofticer to discharge duties entirely beyond the seope of the oftice which he holds. Mr. Courtney receives his silary as lleputy Minister of Finance during the time he is engaged on the Commission : but he discharges the cluties of that othice likewise. The Civil Service Commission has added very largely to his laloours, and I do not think we should be justitied in asking him to perform that work. which is entirely heyond the seope of his duties as Deputy Minister of Finance, without remunerating him for it.

Grant to the International Education

Association.......................... sir RICHARD CARTWRI;HT. What is this for ?

Mr. BOWELL. The Intemational Educational Association is to meet in Toronto during the coming summer, and in connection with it a large number of people interested in educational pursuits are expected to visit this country: Some of those interested in educational pursuits in Canala made application to the Govermment to grant a small sum to assist in paying the expenses which will be incurred in entertaining those people when they arrive in Toronto, and other expenses which will attend their visit. I am under the impression, but I speak under correction, that the Ontario Government have also given some aid to the same object, as has also the city of Toronto. The object of the association being of such a general character, and a wisit of elucationists of this character being expected to result adiantageously to the country, the Government thought they would be justified in appropriating this small sum for the purpose stated.

Further amount for the International  Customs Bureau at Brıssels... .......... . 8500

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What is the purpose of this small amount?

Mr. BOWELL. An international customs burean ineets annually at Brussels to consider the tariffs of the different countries which contribute towards its support, and these tariffs are printed in the different languages and are distributed to the Governments of the contributing countries. Two or three years ago we were asked for one hundred pounds sterling as our proportion of the expenses, and the House voted 3500 . The association was not formed in the first year for which the appropriation was taken, and we find that $$ 50$ is needed in addicion to the sum we have paid for the last year. We do not propose to give amy more, but the broken periml neresitates the payment of this much in order that we may keep faith with those interested.
Mr. somfirilles. What benefits do we derive from this expenditure ?

Mr. BOWELL. The only benefit we can expect to derive is to be furnished amnually with the tariffs of the different countries, or whenever any changes are made in them, we in return supplying our tariti, so that merchants exporting to this countye or our merchants importing from other come tries or exporting to them will know what duties will have to be paid. I think, however, that the one hundred pounds sterling will be very well spent when we consider that we are so often called on to give information in reference to the tariff of almost evers country in the world.
Mr. ARMSTRON(i. Do they publish a table of the tarifts of the different countries?
Mr. BOWELL. Yes, and in the different lamghages. Those sent to us are printed in Euglish, Dnt in some cases they send us the foreign tarittis in foreign languages.
To provide for the parment of a grathity to George Craven. heretofore a warehouseman in Her Majesty's Customsat Montreal, ou his retirement from the service on the list August. 1801, as per terms of Order in Council of the 21 st June, 1891..... S338 10

Mr. Me:MLLLEN. On what basis is this sum: arrived at?
Mr. Bowell. Mr. Craven has been in the service for seven ami one-third years at a salary of sinit. His age is it. He has not been in the service long enough to be superammated, neither is he old enough, but on account of his lecoming nearly blind and otherwise physically unfit-I am now rea-ling the report of the inspactor-for the performance of his duties, he should be replaced by some ative member of the staff. In fact there was another member of the staff doing the duties which he would have performel had he been able. A new appointment being unnecessary, it was thought in the interests of the service and economy that he should be retired on the payment of one month's salary for each year he had served. If the hon. gentleman will took at the Superanmuation Act he will tind a provision for cases of this kind. The man had lecome useless as an otticial, and io was thought, under the circumstances, he was justly entitled to the gratuity proviled.
Mr. McMLLLLEN. I notice he is mentioned as having been retired under the provisions of the Superammation Act, and of course, under the cir cumstances mentioned by the Minister of Customs, no exce,stion can be taken.

> Excise-further amount required for tobacco stamps owins to taking orer stock of the British Amerioan Bank Note Company at expirution of contract.

Mr. COSTIGAN. This was taken over by the department because the contract was about expiring. Tenders had been called for and received, and the question of awarding the contract was under consideration-whether it should be awarded to the old firm or a new one ; and the Finance Departinent advised us to secure these stamps in case of the contract groing to some other persom ami our finding ourselves short. These stamps are available, though of course the amount is larger than required for immediate use, but we did this to protect the service against being taken short, and to prevent the business of the conntry lewing hlex-ked through want of stamps.

Mr. SoMERVILIE. Who hohis the contrate now?

Mr. COSTIGAN. The same parties who han it before, but we could not tell that at the time the tenders were being considered. We were not then in a prosition, nor was anyluoly else, wsiy to whom the contract would lee given. A new contract has however, been entered into with the sime parties. and the stamps we have will all come mino use, amel in the regular Estimates for nest vear a reduction will be made on account of this item.

Mr. somervilde. When wat the stank taken over and the new contritet let?
Mr. COSTIGAN. The stork was taken orer in November or becember, amb the new comtant was signed quite recently.
Mr. Paterson (brant). How hag will these stamps last?

Mr. COSTHiAN. The §li, (ex) woull represent, perhaps, a nine months* supply, hut of comse these: stamps are of different chases, aml each chass will be used acoording to the demand. Some of the stamps may last through a year while other portions will be exhatusted in two or three months. amd in fact some of them are exhansted alrealy.

Mr. SOMERVILI.E. When the contrate was, originally let, did not the contmetors rum the risk of having the stamps left on their hamls which were not required by the dovernment at the expiration of the contract? It appears to me ats if the stamps were taken from the company just tocleam up their ohl stock.

Mr. COSTItiA.N. We diel not cate torm any risk in case the contract went so another company. In such an event, hal we not a stock on ham, they could make us pay any price they asked, layause we could not carry on business without the stamps, and it would take months before a supply combl he furnished by the new company.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. 1 fancy wherer sot the contract would have been able to supply the stamps in a week.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Not for three months.
Mr PATERSON (Brant). Still it strikes me that an arrangement might have been made with the parties that, provided they got the contract. they would wait for their pay for these stamps until they were required, or take them laick. Tlis would prevent the Govermment having a large stock on hand which they do not at present needi, and for which they have to pay ciash.
Mr. Costigan. We did not know who was likely to get the contract at all, and the stock in hand is not excessive, though of course some of the stamps may last a whole year. The regular Estimates will be reduced proportionately.
Mr. SOMERVILLE. Was the contract let to the lowest teaderer?

Mr. CONTIGAN. Ies. I speak from memory, but am quite siotistied the cheapest temer was ancepterl.

Mr. Mr.MLLL.F.E. It appears to me a very prowhar proceding that the lowance of an oh storek of stamps should have been taken off the hamels of those contractors. In some cases. I furey, from the little information 1 have gatherent, certain ditsies of these stamps may not be used for five vears

Mr. COSTlGiAN. 1 do not know of any that may not la used for tive vears. I have stated that theire was not the sume demami for some clases as for others, ami that some may rum over the whole year, and as for the stamps leing ohl, you might as well eall hank bills ohl bills. These are the stamps struck oft for next years business, and we secured them before the expiration of the contract mather than wait after the list of July.

Mr. Mr.MllLLEN. What I gather is that they were virmally the fage end of the old erontract. or the siok-in-trade that remained on hame. These stamps are supplied the diovermment from Sear to year, ami it was necessary to keep lines on hame : bui in some of the lines the company had quantities alsogether in excess of the demani, and the tovermment, by taking the balance of their ohd stanch, put this compme in a position to tender at a very great adrantage for the new contract. Of course by completely straightening up the oit storek, taking stamps that may not le used for two or three veas, and paying over Sl: (OX) for that ohd stock. these people were put in a rery advantageous position to tender for the new eontract.

Mr. CosicIGAN. The hon. gentleman has not all the information. Before the stamps were taken over. We male an investigation in regard to them, *aw that they were correct, anil then they were transferred io my department. There was no alvantage given to the contractor by this tramsac. tion. lereause the instructious to take them over were given long lefore the contract was made.

Mr. SOMERVILLES. But the Government knew the momber of stamps that would be required for one or twoor thre months. If the Government did not Want to give the alrantage to the old contractor. Why diel they not take as many as they required for that time, instead of purchasing SiT,000 worth of stamps, most of which may not be reyuired for four or tive years? It is not a business transaction, and it is not the maner in which any business man would attemi to his uwn business. It is just another instance of the fiovernment favouring some of their own anticular friemds. It is a paralfel case to that which occurred not long ago when the Minister of Agriculture purchased $\leq 2,(0)(x)$ of ohd newspapers from a gentleman in Montreal, and sent them to the old conntry to assist immigration-old newspapers, pictures and poetry, and so on. It is another jol similar to that. The Minister of Agriculture threw away $\$ 2,000$ in that expenditure, and the Minister of Inland Revenue has given these contractors a great adrantage, and has saddlod the country with the cost of $817,(w)$ worth of stamps which wete not necessary at the time, and many of which will not be used for four or five years. I think every head of a clepartment should manage the department in the same way as if he was managing his own business.

Mr. CONTliA.N. I camnot allow the statement (t) Ero on cerord that this was a job, or that ミla, (un) worth of stamps were purchased which could not Ine used for tive yevars

Mr. NOMERVILLE. I did not say that.

Mr. COsTlitaN. What I stated was that the bulk of these stamps were in common use, though some might not le reyuired for some time. There has not been any farouritism in this mater, amil if the department is not comincted acoording to the common-sense views my hon, friend thinks it ought to be, it is much to le regretted that those commonsense views hase not prevailed before and that my hon. friend is still sitting where he is.
Mr. Mr.MLLI.E.N. Did you takeover the whole of these stamps from the previons contractor?

Mr. CONTliAN. Yes.
Mr. Mr.allhb.N. Then there was me selection mate as to what were suitable amd what were not. suitable.

Mr. (ONTliAN. None were taken over but these that were suitable.

Mr. MeNULI.FN. Were any stamps left on the hamels of the contractor?

Mr. COSTliA.N. If there were any that were not suitable they were left.

Mr. MaMLLAES. Was it lefore or after the contraet was let that the stamps were taken over?

Mr. CONTILAN. It was before the contract was signed.

Mr. Mr.MUILLE.S. Was it before the temder was received!

Mr. COSTlliAN. As 1 said before, it was long after the tembers were received.

Mr. MoMULIEEN. The Minister stated that the object was to protect the liovermment against the chance of ruming our of stamps. Now he says it was after the temiers were received, and when they might aceept a temier at any moment that the stamps were taken orer.

Mr. Costlean. No.
Mr. Mc.MULILEN. When Was it:
Mr. COSTliAN. All I ask the hon. gentleman is that he will not use his own words and say that those were the wonls which I used. I said the temderer had no adrantage, becuase he had no knowletge in regand to this. I said the stamps were taken over before the contract was awarded, bectuase we could not be placed at a disadrantage. If the eontract had been awarded to the higher temderer, the hon, gentleman would have been the first to complain.

Mr. Me:MCLLEN. We do not deny that the Bovernment tiol right in accepting the lowest tender, but the committee were lei to believe in the first place that the Government took these stamps because they thought they might run out of stamps, and then the hon. gentleman admits that tenders were asked for and received before the Government took over these stamps. Why was it necessary to take over 817,000 ) worth of stamps, which would be sutficient for nine months, when the contract was about to be let?

Sir RICHARD CARTURRIGHT. I really think my hon. friend's question should be answered. It has not been answermi in such a way as to make this appear a very clear transaction. As I understand, this $\mathrm{S} 17,(\mathrm{MN})$ worth of stamps was not taken over until the tenders were in the hands of the Govermment and the Government knew that the oli company would be the contractors. I must say that, if the dovernment had the tenders in their hands, and then paid this $S 17,0 \times 0$, it is a very peculiar transaction.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I hat some knowledge of the negotiations which preceded this transaction, and possilily more knowledge than my colleague the Minister of Inland Revenue, becatuse he was not in the city at that time. When the call for tenders was mate within two or three months of the expiration of the contract, an enquiry was made in the different departments as to the quantity of stamps which were available in case the contract should suddenly come to a conclusion, as it might, at the end of the term. There was the Inland Revenue Department, there was the Post Office Department, and there was the Finance Department with regard to its treasury notes. Before the tenders were received, the departments concerned were adrised of the call for new tenders, they were advised that the old contracts were not to he continued in force unless the old contractor succeerled in getting it by competition, notwithstanding that he desired it should be contimued without competition. The departments, therefore, were alvised that it would be necessary for them to order a supply of stamps from the contractor, lest, at the expiration of the contract, some delay should take place before the new contract was entered into. It. Was under these circumstances that the Commissioner of Inland Revenue thought it necessary to order a liberal supply, and the precaution was not wholly unnecessary, for this state of things actually transpired. When the call for tenders terminated, and the tenders came in, the old contractor was not the lowest tenderer. At the period of which my hon. colleague speaks as to tenders having been received, the probabilities were that he would not receive the new contract ; but when the person who had made the lowest tender came to realize what was required of him, and the amount of preparation that would be necessary to carry on the work of the contract, he practically withdrew his tender. It was absolutely necessary, under the terms of the old contract, and would be under the new, that he should provide all the cuts and engravings for the bank notes, for all the different stamps required, and that in iddition he should perform the work in the city of Ottawa, in a fire-proof building, with vaults made amply secure to prevent any robbery or theft, and that he should carry it on under proper supervision here. He ascertained that the Inland Revenue Department had a great variety of stamps which were not contemplated when he put in his tender, and on making enquiries as to where he could get the work executed best and most promptly, and how he could meet our requirements as regards a fire-proof and safe building, he put himself practically at our discretion and declared that, as regards the stamps at least, he might need extra compensation ; and he claimed, if I remember aright, that some months ought to be allowed him to make preparations for entering on the work of the new contract. Although we had in view the fact that delay might possibly occur by a new company taking possession of the work, under the circumstances, rather than fall back on the former contractor at what we thought was a high tender, we made a new call for tenders, and stipulated that a certain length of time should be given from the acceptance of the tender, for preparation for commencing work. On a new call for tenders the former contractor got the contract, and at a very much reduced rate. In that way there was a considerable lapse of time, so much so that although, as my colleague says, the contract terminated in October or November, the new contract has only heen signed during the last three or four days. There was that delay, and there was a still greater delay to be feared and to be guarded againist of a new contractor, totally without equipment, without even a building in which to carry on the work, possibly being mable to meet our requirements, and unable to complete the preparations for the beginning of the work within the stipulated time, in the mean time we should he at the mercy of the former contractor. To guard against that, the depart ments were all warned to lay in an ample stock to last them for two or three months if possible.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. I think it must be obvious to the committee that the liovernment have not looked after the lest interests of the country in the letting of the contract. They must have been aware that this contract was about to expire : they knew this a year ago, six months ago, and they knew the ditficulties that would arise with regard to a new contractor taking hold of the work. Under these circumstances it was the duty of the Govermment. looking after the interest of the comntry, to give timely notice to the contractor, to ask for tenders for that work at least one year before they expected to call upon the contractor to perform the work.
sir JOHN THOMPSON. In other words, before it was signed.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. You knew when the contract was going to expire, youknew all the circumstances attending the performance of that work, and it was the duty of the fiovernment to ask for tenders a considerable period before the contract expired, so that all these contingencies might not arise, and that every person might have the same opportunity of tendering for the work. As it was, the fovernment waited till the last monent, when a new contractor would have no opportunity of getting his building ready, or getting the plant necessary to perform the work. Practically, the Govermment decided by their action that the contract must fall into the hands of the old contractor. There was no other course to pursue, because no other man had an opportunity of tendering for this work, for the simple reason that he could not get prepared in time to perform it.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The hon. member is mistaken. There was ample time given, something like four months. But the hon. member will see that a year would not have been sufficient to meet the object he has in his mind. The contractor would not make his preparations, until he knew whether his tender was accepted. If you give him twelve months to consider whether he might put in a tender or not, he is not going to put up the building in that time, or to rent or lease one, or to get his machinery or have his cuts made. The whole question was as to the time required to get ready for the work after his tender was accepted. The facts will show that instead of heing taken at any disadvantage, we have let the contract at the lowest price, and have procured a very considerable retrenchment in the expense of getting this work done.

Mr. Somerville. The Minister does not understand the point I was making. Suppose the contract now existed and was to expire a year from now. In order that fair competition might be secured for that work, if the (iovernment, knowing that to be the case, would ask for tenders now, and in the course of a month decided upon who should receive the contract a year from now, then the contractor, whoever he might be, would have ample opportunity to prepare to do the work. I think the Minister will see that by pursuing a course of that kind, the public interest would be guarded. If this system is pursued, it must be evident that the present contractors are to be the contractors for all time to come. The moment tenders are awardel, then the new contractor would have an opportunity to prepare to do the work, say six months, or eight months, or a year hence. Then every one would be put on the same footing. But as the matter stands now, the old contractor has the advantage over every one, he has the whip hand in this matter, and unless the Government pursue some such course as I indicate when they want to make another contract, they will be in the same position they are in now, the present contractor will have the advantage, and will undoubtedly secure the contract. I think the Minister will see that my position is correct.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I camnot see yet that it is correct. Any contractor competing is allowed ample time. Three or four months ought to be sufficient, to enable him to get all his plans and to lease his building. Ample time was given to this contractor. If that time is allowed, it by no means follows that the one contractor must go on in perpetuity. As the facts turned out the persons who were competing had not the equipment, had not the building, had not the means, and they conld not find the necessary workmen in the country.
Mr. somerville. Who were the competing contractors?
Sir JOHN THOMPSON, I cannot mention the names. It is not under the alministration of my department at all. It is not for want of time that this stock of stamps had to be laid in in the different departments, but it was in consequence of our apprehension that the person getting the contract might perhaps not undertake to make an arrangement within three or four months which was the time allowed him. We wanted ample margin to be perfectly safe in awarding a new contract.
Mr. McMULLEN. If the course indicated by my hon. friend from Brant (Mr. Somerville) had been taken, the Government would be in a better position. If they had advertized eight or nine months prior to the expiration of the contract and decided who should get it, they would accomplish two objects. They would give the man who took the new contract ample time to fill the order for stamps, and protect themselves against a shortage of stamps, and they would not have been called upon to have paid out $$ 17,000$, for the balance of the stock in hand. In place of that, the Government gave such a short notice for the tender that they precluded the possibility of any new contractor complying with the terms hy providing a building necessary to do the work.

Further amount required for duty paid to Excise officers, so that both may include payments to 30 th June, $1892 . $ 2,500$

Mr. Costican. This wote is proposel for the same reasons that a somewhat similar vote was given two or three years ago, and according to the worling of the estimate then, and the supply Act afterwards, it was limited to the chief officers in the larger distilleries and did not apply to officers similarly situated, and having equal claims to it, in large tolateco manufactories. For instance, any one acyuainted with the tobaceo manufactory belonging to Mr. Mcl)onald, of Montreal, one of the largest of the Dominion, will know that hours are fully as long for onticers there as they are in distilleries. The receipts are very great and the reason for giving this extra pay for longer hours are just the same as those in which the House thought fit to vote an amomit to pay the officers in the distilleries. It is not a guestion of finding additional employment and giving extrat pay to comstruct a salary for a civil servant: but the other civil servants of the country have regular hours in which to perform their duty. These men, and they are few in number in the whole Dominion, and contined to this department chiefly, have to be at the distilleries from $70^{\circ}$ clock in the moming until 6 in the evening, and as they have to work during these extra hours, Parliament thought fit to vote the money on a former occasion.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. Is this for the aceommodia. tion of the proprictors of the tolnateo manufactories?

Mr. COsTIGAN. The otticers are there you may say for the acommontation of the manufacturer although he does not look upon it in that light. When I visited Mr. McDonalds factory, and when I complimented him upon the large amount of capital invested and the employment given, he sitid: Yes, I have investen millions, but I do not own anything here, your officer takes the key amd locks ot all up, and I can only get in when your ofticer wishes to let me. It is to accommodate the revenue of the country and to keep a strict guard over it that we keep these officers there from the time the doors are open in the morning until they are closed in the evening, and they follow every stage of the process of the manufacture of tobacco.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). How much did we rote for this in the main Estimates:
Mr. COSTIGAN. This will bring the amome to about sis, 000 altogether.

Preventive service-To repay Mr. W. W.
W. Paige costs in re the Queen $v \%$.
Paige................................... $$ 83.10$
Mr. Costigan. This was a case where an illicit still was found on the premises of a man named Paige. Of course the committee will understand that in our regulations and law affecting the manufacture of tobaceo, cigars, &c., we have a good many cases of the violation of our regulations, and while it is necessary and wise to enforce the law reasonably, we have not enforced it very severely in any case except so far as illicit distilling is concernel. There we make a difference.

The temptation is so great, and it affects so directly the revenue that, in all such cases, we have ordered prosecutions and allowed the courts to decide. In this particular case a representation was mate to the department that this man was imocent, and that he could prove, that although the still was found upon his premises, that it was put there by an enemy of his for the sake of getting him into trouble. I combl not accept that, of course, but I stated that sooner than give an onder to keep up the principle of prosecution in all these cases I would sooner proceed against the man. even if I had douists about his violating the liw, and if he established his imoncence that I would recommend the payment of the costs. I thought this would be better in the interests of the administration of the law than if I dropped the case. I have an extract from the report of the magistrate who tried the case, who says that he is satistied that this man was innocent and that the still was. put there to get him into trouble. The course which I alopted had, I think, a beetter effect than if I recommended that the proceelings shouh be dropperl.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). I don mot know Whether the Minister could drop the case under the law, because the tinding of the still on the place brings the person within the law.

Mr. COSTIGAN. There is mocloulit of that, but if the evidence shows that it is put there ly a thind party he would le the one to be prosecuted.

Commission to Customs officers-further amount required........................ $$ 488$ is Mr. MemCLLEN. What is this:
Mr. CONTIGAN. This is one of those items which looks to my hon. friem ats if they were paid for extra services. As I have already explained, under our law we have authority to ask the services of a customs ofticer, or any other public officer in some of the outports where we have no otficer appointed, and where the receipts would not justify us in appointing a man at a salary, paying the man we thus employ hy a percentage of the collections. We require this much more than we have taken in order to imeet these percentages.

Mr. NuMULLEN. In some of these outports we have collectors of customs receiving salaries of $$ 1,200$ or $$ 1,5(M)$ a year. in some cases more.

Mr. COSTIGAN. If the hon. gentleman will consider for a moment, he will see that in the large and important places where Customs otticers are paid large salaries, we are likely to have officers too. These percentages are allowed in the smaller ports where the customs officers are paid very small salaries.

Mr. McMULLEN. Any person who takes up, the Auditor (ieneral's Report will find in it a list of officers numbering fontr or tive humlred, some receiving as much as $\leqslant 2,3(0)$ or $\$ 2,400$ a year. who have collected sums of money for some service performed ont of the routine of their duties. I think this is a system which should be stopped.

Mr. PATERGON (Brant). At Wimipeg, where Mr. Hesson is, you have your own otficer?'

Mr. COSTIGAN. Yes.
Mr. PATERSON (Brant). In New Westminster, you have your own officer also"

Mr. COSTIGAN. Yes.
Mr. Costigas.

Mr. BoWELL. Mr. Hesson is at Brandon, which is an outport of Winnipeg. The only place that would come in the category is New Westminster, where Mr. Clute received a percentage before the husiness of the place justified an increase in his salary. Uutside of New Westminster the highest salary paial to any of these men is $$ 1,200$, most of them receiving not more than about, $$ 700$.

Mr. NOMERVILLE. When the Government deserve credit they should get it, and I think they are rleserving of credit for this expenditure, which is in the interest of econony.

> Weights and Measures-further anount reguired for contingencies.............. $$ 2,0,00$

Mr. FEATHERSTON. I would like to ask the Minister of Inlami Revenne if it is the intention of the 1 iovernment to comply with the prayer of the petition presented from the milk dealers of Toronto asking for a certain size of milk can for delivering milk in the city?

Mr. (OSTlliAN. The hon. gentleman, I think, refers to the memorial asking for legislation to fix the size or dimensions of the cans used in the purchate aml carrying of milk. A delegation came here with that object in view, and had an interview with the Commissioner in my department. He is of opinion that the act as it now stands covers the case, and the inspectors have been notified by the department to deal with these cans, not merely as packiages hat as means of measuring the contents, and as such they are under the Weights and Measures Act. I may state that the reason for this vote is that the vote of last year was reduced by a little over $\leq 2,000$ with a view to meet the wishes of the Finance Minister, who is always very lesirous to keep the estimates down. We find that we are short that amount, and this vote will keep us within the ordinary expenditure of other years.

Mr. PA'l'ERSON (Brant). What was the object of arlvertising in these different papers ?

Mr. CoSTIIAN. The only advertising we had in the department within the last few years is confined to fertilizers and weights and measures. Outside of that, the only advertising we have consists of small advertisements calling for tenders for ferries, and they are confined to three or four insertions in two or three local papers.

Mr. McNULLLEN. We spent $5006 last year in adrertising.

Mr. COSTIGiAN. Well, it runs up pretty quick, I suppose.

Mr. FEATHERSTON. I put the question rather to find out whether the Government intend taking any action with reference to a petition sent in last week from the farmers in the vicinity of Toronto. The milk dealers send out cans supposed to hold eight gallons, hut they have enlarged them to nine gallon cans, and whe:e they find the old cans are good and sound, but a little battered and punched in the centre, they cut them through the centre and put an iron band around, and stretch them in the middle, se that they will hold a half gallon miore, and the milk dealers are only paid for eight gallons, although the cans hold a gallon or half a gallon more. They ask that the cans come under the Inspection Act.

Mr. COSTIGAN. A delegation came here which represented the case to the department. and went away perfectly satisfied that their interests would be looked to. One of the members of this House introduced the delegates.

Mr. HENDERSON. A few days ago I hat the pleasure of accompanying the deputation to interview the Minister of Inland Revenue, and my hon. friend the Minister gave them a very strong assurance that this matter would be attended to. The deputation went away thoroughly satisfied their riews would receive every consideration, and in a very short time I feel contident they will have no grievance whatever.

Prince Edward Island Railway.  $\qquad$ sinl,(ink)

Mr. HAGGART. There is a very large deficit this year for the last eight months. The expemeliture has been for those eight months 5 as agrainst $8184,808.22$ last year. This is mainly accounted for by the fact that the steamer bringing rails which were to be laid in $1891-92$ was lost, and consequently the rails could not le laid that year. and double work had to be done last year.

Sir RICHARI) CARTIVRI(iHT. Were the mils nsured?

Mr. HAGGART. Yes.

Lachine Canal.

 S19, (m)Mr. HAGGART. When the estimates of IsGI. 02 were prepared, these repairs were not foreseen. They consist of repairs to lock walls, bridge abutments. Humes, banks, &c. There is a long list of details amounting to a total of $$ 18,640$ ).

Sir RIC:HAR1) CARTWRIGHT. What will be the total expenviture for canals altogether in 1s 9.2 :

Mr. HAGiliART. I have a statement made and I will he able to give a full statement on the main Fstimates.
sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. It appears to me that this will bring the cost of the canal up to an enorn:ous amount and the percentage will be very large according to the returns which we receive.

Mr. HAGGART. The amount of Slo,(0K) for the Cornwall Canal is to be struck out. That will come into the next Supplementary Estimates.

Esquimalt Graving Dock, additional amount for working expenses........... $$ 5,000$

Mr. PATERNON (Brant). How does this account stand:

Mr. OUIMET. This is required in consequence of an increase in the maintenance of the dock. The dock has been used much more than we expected, and this iofditional amount is required to provide for a second engineer who has to work during the night, and for the coal which is necessary, and the increased amount of pumping that is occitsioned by the additional use of the dock. It has been used by Her Majesty's ships especially, which were in dock for 94 days, and by other vessels to a larger extent than we anticipated. The amount of revenue last year was $$ 29,000$, and this year we expect it will be about $$ 35,000$. Our expenditure on the dock is about $$ 18,000$.

North-West Rebellion-Militia claims.... $$ 2,100$
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. What claimants are required to be paid under this vote? Have you a list of their names?

Mr. BOWELL. I have not a list here, but I know that claims are constantly coming in for losses during the rebellion. This item refers to sums that have been paid on this account. These claims are investigated in the department and are then submitted to the Justice Department to see that they come within the provisions of the law.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). Vou do not pleal the statute of limitations.

Mr. BOWELL I do not think that applies. There is scalcely a week that dhalus are not coming in.
sir RI('HARD('ARTWRIGHT. But this is a specitic vote. and we ollght to have the names.

Mr. Boll flil. Nome of these claims came in since I have leen in charge of the department. If the House will allow this to pass, I will get the names and submit them later.

Amount required to cover Limprovided Items of $1890-91$.............. $8294,10 \mathrm{~S} 91$

Mr. Me.MULLEN. Will the Minister of Publie Works explain why such a large amoant as $\mathbf{S i n 9 , ( 0 0 )}$ wats left over from last year in his lepartment?

Mr. oUIMFT. It is for general services. These payments were not providerl for, although some of them were alssolutely reifuired.

Mr. MrMULLEN. I think they are mostly lapsed balances.

Mr. OUIMET. Probahly so.

> Pensions-Miss Harriet Friser. $$ 20$ : Mr.
> Roderick Fraser.......................... 150

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHTS. I have forgoten the circumstances under which these payments are made to Mr. and Miss Fraser.

Mr. DEWWDNEL. These items were placed in the Estimates about three years ago. This lady was the daughter of Mr. Fraser, who, I think, lived in Cornuall, and was the discoverer of the Fraser River in British Columbia. The particulars were placed before the House at the time this item was placed in the Fistimates, and I think the House manimously approved of it.

Probable amount required tor Veterans of War of 1812

sir RICHARI) CARTWRICHTY. How many of these old gentlemen are now on the list?

Mr. BoWblaL. We are providing this year for only 30 . If you will turn to the Auditor General's Report, page $24 \mathrm{~S}-\mathrm{B}$, you will find the list of names. One of them I see is 10 years old, and another 104.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). I see that the pensioner who is $10-7$ years old lives in Massachusetts. Do you get some ofticial there to certify that he is alive?

Mr. BOW ELL. Fes. I believe the practice is, before we pay out anything, that a certificate shall be produced that they are living.

Board of Customs and outside protective service-to meet expenditure in connection therewith, including $$ 400$, salary of Commissioner of Customs as Chairman of the Board. . $$ 23,600$

Mr. BOWELL. Before the rearrangement of the officers in the department the salary for Chairman of this Board was $$ 800$; we reduced it to $$ 400$.

Sir RICHARI) ('ARTIVRICHT. The Minister might give us an explanation of how he proposes to use this money. A considerable increase is applied for.

Mr. BOW ELLL. The principal increase in the Poard of Customs, arises from the fact of our having adopted the plan of paying bounties to beetroot sugar makers, and this necessitates the employment of two or three stficials during the whole time that they are working in the factories. The contingencies have also been materially increased, from the fact that we have had to pay our proportion of the expense of the steamer Cruiser on the lakes in the West. I expect that our expenses in connection with the steamer in the East will he much larger during the present year. As hon. gentlemen are aware, with the sif( $M$ ( $)$ that was voted last year, we have purchased a new vessel that was constructed for the Varine and Fisheries service in Lake Huron. It was found after it was built, that it drew too much water, and it was purchased hy the Customs Department to be used is: the protective service in the St. Lawrence; and that will necessitate a larger sum in the way of expenditure to be paid out of this particular vote than has been expenderl in the past. In fact I am inclined to think that in the Supplementary Estimates an additional sum will have to be taken in order to cover that service.
sir RICHARD CARTWRI(iHT. Where is that steamer to be employed that you are going to use?

Mr. BOWFELL. She is to be used in the Lower St. Lawrence for the purpose of trying to prevent the enormous smuggling that has been carried ont for the last few years,

Mr. BAIN (Wentworih). Is it proposed to replace that Cimiser you speak of on the upper lakes:

Mr. BOWELL. Ies, that will be replaced by another steamer which is being built at Owen Sound for the Marine and Fisheries Department. I do not think there will be any expenses attending that ressel so far as the Customs Department is concerned.

Mr. BAIN (Wentworth). Will the (:ustoms lepartment be able to utilize that vessel in any way for their purposes?

Mr. BOWELL. Yes, by making the captain of the vessel a preventive officer of customs.

Mr. BAN (Wentworth). I understood the other vessel drew altogether too much water to be serviceable for the fishing service, the one that was used last year.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). Is Mr. Wolfe clead:
Mr. BOWELL. Yes.
Mr. PATERSON (Brant). Was he replaced?
Mr. BOWELL. No new appointment was made. The office was placed under the charge and management of Mr. McMichael, who was the financial inspector.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. With respect to this detective service, the Minister is aware that there are a good many complaints made as to the mode in which the office is conducted. Has the department altered in any shape the system by which these men are remunerated for seizures, or do they still continue to receive as before the greater part of the sums paid by way of forfeiture? What was the percentage received by ofticers last year, and how much did the Govermment receive?

Mr. BOWFELL. There has been no change in the regulations affecting the distribution of proceeds of seizures. The stme rule prevails, and the same divisions are made under the Order in Council. whicin was passed in 187.5 by the Government of which the hon. gentleman was a member. The question has been discussed repeatedly as to the propriety of changing the whole system, lut from experience, I have great doubts as to the advisability of so doing. I am aware that a great many complaints have been made from different parts of the country, but they have principally come from those who have heen violating the law. There is not a case that $I$ am aware of where the officers have been complained of, except by those who have hal to pay large penalties. There have been cases in which grave suspicion has existed as to improper importations by certain people. The law is inguisitorial. to say the least of it, and where these investigations have lreen made and no wrong has been found to exist, I have failed to tind an instance in which the merchants who have been conducting their husiness honestly, have found any fault. I need scarcely say to the hon. gentleman how easy it is for a person who has violated the law and is pumished, to raise a lace aiad cry against the ofticers for, as they would say, having levied blackmail upon them. All kinds of charges have heen mate in various parte: of the country: and in the investigations which I have ordered, and I caused a number of them to be institutel. I have never yet been able: to find that they have been in a single case enabled to establish the fact that improper actions have been taken by any of the regular officers. Occasionally some of the minor officers in an excess of zeal to perform their duty will do many things that they probably should not have done, but they have generally been reprimanded, and those who took offence at their actions have expressed themselves as quite satisfied. I might tell the hon. gentleman that I have numerous letters from merchants doing business in all sections of the country complimenting in the highest possible manner the officers for the zeal which they displayed, and the energy they have exhibited in putting a stop to smuggling. It is a lisagreeable duty for otticers to perform, and unless they receire some remuneration, and I may add large remuneration, it is not at all likely they would expose themselves to the dangers that leset them in endeavouring to enforce the law against smugglers.

Sir RICHARI) (ARTURIGHT. What wits the total percentage last year, and how was it divided?

Mr. BOWELL. The law gives the power to the Governor in Council to establish regulations for the distribution of seizure money, ani the regulation that was adopted in 18\%\%, gives one-third of the seizure to the informer, one-third to the seizing officer, and the other third goes to the revenue. In looking at the Auditor General's Report you will see the total amount received, and the total amount paid out, but that does not give you a correct view of the amount earned last year, because many of these seizures remain unsettled, and the distribution is not male for two or three years. This arises in many cases from repeated applications from the party who has been fined, and from his friends, for reconsideration; and in other cases we have to go into court in order to confirm the decision of the department. Conse quently there is a very large amount which appears in the Auditor General's Report as having been paid this year which runs over three or four years.
Mr. CAMPBELL. I do not approve of the system of offering a bribe to customs officers to do their duty. I believe that every officer should be made to perform the duty devolving upon him without being bribed to go to a man's place, and hunt through his books to see whether he has been riolating the law or not. I find in looking over the Auditor General's Report that some of these men have been making enormous sums of money for many years. For instance here is Mr. T. J. Watters, of Ottawa, who has a salary of $\$ 2,200$ which is a very good salary for him, and with that salary he should perform the duties devolving upon him without any further compensation, yet his share of the customs seizures last year amounts to not less than $\$ 6,889$ in addition to his salary. Then we find again another gentleman by the name of Mr. Me Michael who has figured in the Auditor General's Report for many years as drawing $\$ 1,(610)$ a year salary, and his share of the customs seizures amounts to not less than $85,248.18$ in addition to his salary. Then we find Mr. O Hara, another gentleman with a salary of $\$ 2,000$ and he figures for the little sum of $\$ 579.74$ in addition to his salary, and so on through the Auditor (ienerals Report, we find these gentlemen receiving large sums from customs seizures in addition to their already good salaries. I do not believe in that system atall. If these men will not perform the duties devolving upon them without heing paid extra, then there are $10,000 \mathrm{men}$ in this country who would be very glad to have their place, and the Minister of Customs ought to discharge these men ai once and give some other men a chance. Besides all that the Minister of Customs may not be aware of the fact that business men are very sensitive on a matter of that kind. Any business man would rather pay a good deal in the way of blackmail than have his books and private papers and invoices gone over by some shark from the custom-house. The system is a most pernicious one and should be abolished altogether. There is no earthly reason for continuing it, and it is simply levying a toll upon the business men of the country. If Mr. McMichael and the other gentlemen I have mentioned desire to prevent smuggling and will not do it for the salaries they get, turn them out and give others a chance. There has not been a year during the last four or five years in which this man Mr. McMichael has not been figuring for $\$ 5,000$ or 86,000 in addition to his salary. I think it is time the system was changed.

Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. I would like to ask the Minister how Mr. Trudel, of Quebce, comes to be down for so large a sum as $$ 9,880$.

Mr. BOWELL. Mr. Trudel is one of the principal detective officers. For the last two or three years he has been on the Lower St. Lawrence, and I can only account for this large sum being paid to him by the fact that he has had an interest in the large seizures of liquors made during that period. This item, however. is not evidence that Mr. Trudel has put all this money into his pocket. The officer makes the seizure, but the department never enquires who the informer is, and we never know who he is unless there is some dispute between the seizing officer and the person giving the information as to the division of the money.

Mr. Paterson (Brant). There is $\mathbf{$ 9 , 0 0 0}$ for the informer as well as for Mr. Trudel.

Mr. BOWELL. The hon. gentleman will remember that I stated last year that liquors had been seized to the value of $$(10),(10)$, and when sold one-third of the proceeds would go to the informer and one-third to the seizing officer. But it must be remembered that these parties are not paid for the expenses they incur in connection with these seizures. In many cases in the Lower St. Lawrence they have perhaps to charter a tug to take them down to make the seizure, the expense of which they have themselves to pay. I do not know that it would le profitable to enter into a discussion of the question raised by the hon. member for Kent (Mr. Camplell). I yuite agree with him when he says that he is opposed to paying a bribe to any one ; but I repudiate in toto the sug. gestion that any bribe is paid by the department to any of its officers to induce them to do their duty. They may be given a premium in the way I have indicated after making the seizures. It is all very well for the hon. gentleman to say that if these men will not do their duty, they should be dischargent. I should like the hon. gentleman to be placed in a position to decide when a customs officer does his duty and when he does not. If he attends to his office during oftice hours strictly he does his duty; and if in addition to that he spends the night watching on the St. Lawrence, I suppose that is not a part of his duty as a custcms officer. As I have explained, this sum is no indication of the amount received or earned by these officers last year. It covers seizures made two or three years ago, in some cases years ago. I am aware that if a man violates the law, if he has been systematically cheating the revenue for years by false invoices, and the customs officials go into his establishment and demand an examination of his books, and ascertain that he has been committing frauds and has perhaps run away to the States, he is very likely to make complaints and use the language repeated by the honmember for Kent, that the officers are blackmail ers, thieves and everything else that is wrong. But where the books of honest men have been investi gated, it being explained to them why this is done, and where no wrong is found, they have written letters, which are in my possession, complimenting the officers on the courteous manner in which their work was performed, and thanking them also for going through the books of other establishments where frauds had been committed and discovered. The Opposition newspapers and those opposed to the system repeat the very language used by the men who have to pay dearly for the wrongs they commit-blaming the officers as blackmailers, thieves and everything else that is vile.

Mr. GIBSON. I have heard complaints in different parts of the Province, from respectable merchants who are doing business in the country and do not require to go to the United States, that though in every custom-house there are appraisers who value goods, merchants are allowed to pass their gools at certain values, and the customs authorities receive duties therem: and yet a day or two afterwards an officer from the custom house comes to the merchant who has entered his gools in good faith and tells him that the valuation is wrong. fii that way tines are imposed upon legitimate merchants. Now, why should not the correct valuations he put on the goods when they are lieing passed through the custom-house:
Mr. BOWELL. The hon. gentleman is quite correct in stating that this complaint is very often male : but the values change so rapidly that it is impossible for an appraiser, no matter how industrious or studions he may he. to keep pace with those changes. Therefore it cery oftell oceurs that goonls have been entered and passed at a lower price than the market value in the comntry from whence they are exported, and it is only in such cases that the appraisers, after discovering that fact. call on the imperters to amend their entries.
Mr. Albson. There is one particular instance I know of, when a very large quantity of sugar was imported at its true valuation.

Mr. BOWELL. Reel's case:

Mr. Gilbson. Yes. A higher valuation was put upon it afterwards, and the customs authorities had to acknowledge their error. but they had no redress at all, because the Government camnt be fined for the acts of their ofticers. They were relieved, however, of the extra duty.
Mr. Bowell. The hom. gentleman is in error. They were not relieved from the luty. There was one case in which the officers put it higher value upon the sugar, and after full investigation that value was reduced, but the price on which duty was paid was greater than that at which the sugar was entered. I have a distinct recollection of the circumstances, becanse the New York agent, who exported it to Canada, visited me once or twice, and threatened to bring the whole force of the army and navy of the United States to exterminate this little colutry, if he did not get his redress. After fuller investigation, it was shown that the islands from which that sugar was imported had no market value, because the plantations were owned by two or three Scotch firms, who would sell no sugar to any one, but sent it to their agent in the United States or Canada. Under such circumstances, the law provides that the correct value shall be arrived at as near as possible by the price in the surrounding country whence the sugar was imported, and the most liberal interpretation was put upon that invoice, but they were compelled to pay the full duty.
Mr. Gibson. But what redress had the importer for the time the sugar was held by the customs officer? After all was said and done, the customs authorities had to reduce, as the hon. gentleman admits, the valuation back to the proper amount.
Mr. BOWELL. His redress was to pay the duty and sell his goods, and then enter an action if he was improperly used.
Mr. PATERSON (Brant). With reference to these seizures, are all the expenses taken out of the public fund or deducted from the penalty before division? For instance, there are the expenses of Mr. Belton, special agent, $$ 436.23$, and Mr. Watters, sich 6.95.

Mr. Bow ElLL. When a seizure is made the expenses are deducted, and the balance is paid to the seizing ofticer and to the Receiver fieneral. Take the case of Mr. Belton. In one case I sent him to Baltimore to examine into the books of manufacturers of duck there, the Mount Vernon Dack Company, who send large consignments of duck to Halifax. The gentleman representing the firm had a long interview with me, and said that if 1 would senci an otticer to Baltimore he would place the looks of the company at his disposal, so that the otticer could see exactly what his business was, and the prices at which he had invericed the duck to Canatia. At the same time, he almitted that he was maty uainted with the provisions of our law, and had been seming duck to Canalla, not at the price at which it was sold, but at a iower price, but he was quite willing to pay the expenses of the trip and also the extra duty it imposed, objecting only to paying any penalty. The expenses would be adranced to Mr. Belton and charged in the account, but the amome would le refunded to the Receiver General out of the seizure male. It is done in the sime way as in the case of the officers in Chicago, st. Pitul, Tacoma and some other places in the United states to whom I referred the other night. These expenses are all charged, but when the railway companies pay ower the money, it is credited to the Receiver (ieneral; and although the expenses appear as a charge on the revenue, the comntry is mot at the expense of a dollar.

Mr. SCRIVER. I have listened to what the hom. gentleman has said with regard to the manner in which the custom-honse officers do their duty in investigating cases of supposed smuggling, and 1 agree with him that, as a rule, their duties are performed judiciously and with proper regard for the rights of the parties affected. While this is true as regards the collectors of customs and the regular officers of the department, it is not always true in the case of detectives. I have known of instances where these men acted in a mamer very arhitrary to say the least, and I think I might appeal to my confrere from Missisyuoi who like myself represents a border county, to endorse what I say. I have known of instances where they have acted in a most arbitrary and unjust manner. Acting upon information they have gone, not to the business places of traders, but to the houses of phor farmers, and told them that because at some time in the past they may have brought a gallon of coai oil across the border or a few bushels of potatoes for seed, and had at that time a horse and waggon or a team worth so much, the officers placing their own valuation on the property, they will have to pay so much for violating the law or be reported to the department. This was done in a number of instances, and I am glad to say that had it not been for the strong sense of justice of my hon. friend opposite, some of my constituents would have suffered wrong. If my hon. friend were in the position which he once occupied, and which I regret to see he has left, I would appeal very strongly to him to exercise his supervision over the conduct of these detectives, and not allow them to pursue the course in the future which they have pursued in the past.

Mr. Gibson.

Mr. BOWELL. Perhaps it will gratify my hon. friend when I tell him, in regard to the detective to whom he referred, that I issued an order that he should be no longer in our service.

Mr. SCRIVER. I am ghad to hear that statement. and I should have expected no less from my hon. friend, because I can say from my place in this House that, whenever I have appeated to him to do what was right, I have always found him ready to listen to reason and to do what was right in the premises.

Mr. CAMPBELL. No donbt we can all speak in the highest terns of the hon. gentleman who was lately the Minister of Customs, but I do not think that the answer he gave me is a sutficient answer to the charges I l, rought. I stated, and I repeat, that a great many of these men are simply wharks--pirates, which, is an hon. gentleman suggests, is perhaps a hetter word-who are going simply for phamer. The more seizures they make the more money they make, and they often gointo the offices of men who are honest traders, who are men who would not be gnilty of a dishonest transaction and deal with them as if they were the dishonest tralers. guilty of smugeling, to when the hon. gentleman has referred.

Mr. Boll ELL. I did not sity that. 1 drew the distinction between the two classes.

Mr. CAMPBLLL. Bat the complaints often come in regard to homest tremers, whis enter their gronls at what they cost, ind you can sec that the whole temdency is to lery blackmail. There is no business man, however honest and pure he may be, who eares to have a person from the Customs Department come in and put his hand on lis hooks and papers and say: These are ours for the present. The very name of it injures his credit, ami he often does give $$ 100$ to hush the matter up and have the man go away. There is no donlt that has oceured orer and over again, and it will oecur as long as this system is carried on. The statement of the Minister that these amounts which appear in the Aulitor General's Report were not for this year is no sign that they were not received this year.

Mr. BUW'ELL. I said they were not earned this year.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Take the case of Mr. Me Michael, who has been receiving $$ 3,(x)(0)$ to siti,(uk) every year. last year I thiuk he received SH,(ONO accoeding to the Anditor Cieneral's Report. In many other cases this occurs, and this is a fair eriterion as to what these men have earned. Then the hon: gentleman proposes that they shall bonus officers in order to induce them to do their daty. These men may be lying along the biaks of the lakes or the rivers and may not be doing their duty, but it is for the department to see that they do their duty. They have inspectors, and if those they have are not sufficient, they should put on a few more, and see that those men perform their duty.
Mr. BOWELL. The duty of the inspectors is to inspect the offices, not to see what the detectives are doing.

Mr. CAMPBELL. If things are being simuggled, you can soon find it out, and can see what your officers are doing. I believe that many of the otticers do not earn their pay. In the town of Chatham we have three men: the late collector of customs who was receiving $$ 1.2(1)$ a year, another at salo, and the third it simio. The third man did the work and the others drew the pay. There is no necessity for keeping three men there, and Mr. Eberts, the thiri man, who receives only Stion, really does all the work of the oftice. If the department looked intos that, they wonld fiml that there is no uecessity for three men there, aml. if that system prevails in other otfices, the reason for the enormons expenditures can be easily seen in regard to the collection of revemae for constoms. I believe the proper system is to do avay with the sharing of spoils, anil, if the otticers do not perform their work. tum them out and put other men in their places.

Mr. MariREGOR. I asree with the hon member for Kent (Mr. Camphell) and the hen. member for Huntinghon (Mr. Sicriver) ats to these detectives or spies who go the rombls of the comery and lery haekmail on the people.

Mr. !:OWELLL. Can the hom. gentleman sustain or prove his assertion that any of these men levy hackmail?

Mr. MctiREiof. I am cone pretry near it.
Mr. BowELLL. I donot think it is fair to acense any man of levying hackmail. which is practically stealing, without heing able to pornluce the prowf. If the hon. gentleman can prove ome case of that kind, I will see that the man concerned shatl hee pmisheal.

Mr. ModRE:GOR. I will give the hom. genteman a case in point. Mr. Alhert Dronillari, who is retting a sthary of shin), seized the scow Mary Ahire on Lake sit. Clair in 1s so1. it heing allegeil that the scow had heen smagegling. It was proved liy four persons who were on the hoat that she took nothing over to the Ganadian sile at alll. Then they stid, we will let her goo on the case of smar. gling, but she had some repairs done in letroit. It seems that she crossed orer to the slry dock there. We produced all the receipts from legiming to end, and then the department said they had very little claim aggainst the beat. Yet this boat wais held over froun some time in August until the fill, and then ran down to Windsor. A mam wats placed on her at the time she was seized, whose wages amomatei to over sit. She rall into at bay near Wimbsor, and $83 more expenses were plated upon her for a caretaker : and yet this poor man, who is not worth 3300 in the worht, is reprived of. his ressel. 1 an prepared to prove that that otficer has gone to one place and saicl: "You had harness brought over here a few years ago, unless you pay me sit I will make you tronble." In the case of Mr. Hackett, in my hon. friemd's comaty, he gave him the sil. He went into another place, Mr. Kumble's store, and said: :"Cnless you gire me $s+100$ I will seize the whole establishment." and the Methodist minister and several other men in the neighbourhooi had to raise the $\mathbf{$ 4 0 0}$ and give it to him. And so he has been going the rounds. He gets from this country sisio. and from seizures last year he got 5750 more, and the year before $I$ understand a still larger sum. Now, we are prepared to pay these men well, to deal with them as they should be dealt with, but the practice of giving them half of what they seize is an incentive to them to do great injustice to many people; especially along the shores. In our town there is no scarcity of castoms officers, men of as high character as any other men in the Dominion. Those are the men who should have charge of that basiness, instead of emploving special detectives for doing such dirty work. I am free to say that the common constailees or the police ofticers would he aboveating atsome of these detectives have done.

Mr. S(TTHERLASI). I am not prepared to take the pasition of some members and comblem the whole systein adoptel by ine department. I know some of the ditheathies that exist, amb I agree wa large extent with the Minister that the system does prevent disinnest dealers from smusgling and defrathing the remace. Howerer. without approving of the strong language nsed hy stme hom. members. 1 still think that the law. ite at perent administered lye these officers, does ereat injustice to manufacturess and merchants.

Mr. Bowfll. Have yon any experience: that the Minister is referving to. hut whiners. I will give an instance, withnt mentioning names. to show how the authority placed in the hambs of these men is sometimesused in :moppresive manner. 1 know a case where in officer genes to a hasiness man and satys to him that he has been guilty of an infraction of the law. The mansays he is notguilty. Now, very few men who are not business men can realize what it means to a husiness man to have his factory or shopl placed under seizure. It means injury or ruin to his eredit. An ordinary business man cumot atford to risk the $\mathbf{1}^{\prime \prime}$ sition in which he nasy stamb with the banks and the merehants with whom he deals, by having his eredit questioned throngh a seizare In the instance I refer to. the othicer. after disenssing the matter, said to him: $\because$ If yon will make a deposit of $\$ 2$, (нn) I will have this matter investigated." That may appear fair enough for the $\backslash$ aister, but it is a very serious matter to a husi uss man who may not have that amount on hand. But eren if he diees. as the Minister well knows, these matters hecome known to the pulbic almost immediately. In the instance I speak of the mamafacturer refinged to make this deposit. and after in investigation the whole matter fell through. There is no toubt in my mind that the man wats perfectly innceent, and that the ofticer hat? no case against him. I think this authority in the hands of the officers is sometimes employed to do great harm to merchants and mamafacturers, and it subjects the Govermment to some very strong statements athd charges being made against them. It may be well to give some preminm to the ofticers in order to make them more active and energetic in their work, hat I must say that under the present system many people have a just cause of complaint. I ann avare that the late Minister of Customs has acequired, after a long experience, rather a hardened view of the chatacter of the masiness men of the comutry. However, I acknow ledge that in cases hrought to his attention he has listened to arguments and reason. But this is the point I wish to make: Although it may be decided, after investigation, that this manufacturer or merchant has not been guilty of an infraction of the law, still he has no remedy for the injustice that has been done him loy the injury to his credit. I know personally that some merchants have a grievance in this respect, and I thiuk the department ought serinusly to consiler whether some other system might he aulopted to prevent fraud, or at least whether the authority given to these ofticers should not be curtailed. At present the fines inHictel upon merchants by seizures appear to them as nothing more or less tham blackmaii. Before the officers are allowed to threaten a husiness man and compel him to make a deposit. a report should be nate to the head of the lepartment. who should decide whether there is evidence suticient to justify action heing taken.

Mr. PATERSON (Bramt). There is ome point Ithink the Minister might explain. Are these epreial letectives authorized hy the depastment to goto an individual and threaten him in the Way we have heard of, and that persom, whether guilty or not, must pay him at certain amount of money to asoid fowther tromble? Are they at liberty to settle cases in that ways amd if they do so, do they make a return of the mener to the department: In the case my hon. frient who sits hesite me referred to. where that has been done. and where the ofticer was disehared and a refund male to the party of the money that this ofticer had taken from him. did that ofticer pay the money into the treasury. or did the eomutry lose the monery?

Mr. Bow ELLL I think the hon. gentleman hats answered his own question. We crould starcely have refundel moncy that we never received. The department has not heen comducted in such a lonse manner as that : no refunt of money has been made: out of the treasmry muless it has first leen paid into the treasury: I know of no case in which ofticens have received money and have not deposited it to the crealit of the Receiver deneral. There may have heen cases of that kind. as there are thefte and frated committed, but we never allow such almse to oecur with the approval of the department. The officers have never received any instructions, either directly or indirectly, nor was permission given them to threaten any man. They have been cautioned against that over and over againa and they have been threatened with dismissal where any case of that kind has come to the knowlenge of the department. As detectives receiving information that certain smuggling has taken place, they very often go to the party who is acensed, and they may say, as the hon. gentleman has alleged: "You have been chargell with doing so-and-so, and it is my duty to seize your horse and carriage or your stock, but if you wish to make a deposit pending the investigation, that will he the casiest way of doing it." Such deposits if matle are at once credited to the Receiver General, and a report made to the department and an investigiation takes place. In many cases where it has been foumd that there has been an infraction of the law of the character indicatel by the hon. member for Huntingion (Mr. Scriver), which would justify the Minister in remitting portions of the duty, it is done. A man may have smuggled coal oil, amb that is a very common ching on the frontier, and the horse or the sleigh or waggon may have heen seized and a deposit made, in order to prevent its being taken away. He makes a deposit of $\mathbf{8 5 0}$ or SiOH , and that is credited at once to the Receiver General. The officers have no authority to keep it, and then when we investigate any such case we punish them sometimes with a penalty of Si or sio in accorlance with the nagnitude of the offence. That is the course which has loeen pursued: lut to suppose that the department would give authority to any officer to threaten merchants or any one clse wouhd he to suppose a system of carrying on Government that would be scarcely justifiable. I do not know the case to which my hon. frient from Oxford (Mr. sutherlani) referred to just now. although I know that I have had some little dealings with the hon. gentleman where he has heen very persistem in trying to get men onf, and afterwards ackuowledged himself that they were not punished as mueh as they ought to be. I think he could tell rou that I used some strong expletives, and, perhaps. unjustifiable ones. in reference to these men, and they were not political friends of the hom. genthenam either. but politieal frients of our own. There maty be cases where an ofticer will he justified in going to the merchant and telling him that he is informeat that he has been smuggling, and ask him to allow his books to he investigatel, to see if the information which he has received is correet. If an informer states that he believes Mr. So-ant-so has beensmugering, it is the duty of the collector at once, either to go himself. or to seme an officer w make an investigat ion. Merchants who have not leen guilty may feel amoyed, as the hon. member for Sorth Oxford (Mr. Sutherlaud) stys, but in many cases where the facts have leea explained to then they expressed themselves quite satisfied. because other people ham riolated the law and had loen punished, and the honest importer is always ghal to know that his guilty neighbour who has Feen taking adrantage of hiim has leen prevented from doing su in future. I do not remember the case of this scow, but I am inclined to think that if the piplers were laid hefore the Honse the facts wrould het he exactly as stated by the member for Essex (Mir. Metiregrer). I have no doult that the hion. gentleman received the complaint, but 1 think he wats incorrectly informed.
Mr. MrCREGOR. Ihave atfidavits on everypoint reguired in reference to that particular case.
Mr. BowliLL. Were there not just as many athilavits on the other side?
Mr. MaRRE:OR. I suppose there were I saw them, hat they were not as strong or as numerous as the ones I got.
Mr. SUTHERLAND. Theremedy 1 would offer to the department is this: A distinction should be male, and the authority given to the officer who makes seizares only to get deposits from partics who may he suspected of hreaches of the law in such calses as he mentions of a horse or a waggon that cond easily be removed in a few hours or days unless they were placel under seizure. But there is certainly no justitication at all for an officer naking a seizure upon mere suspicion, to ask adeposit from a merchant or manufacturer with a large place of business or a large stock of goorls. I would ask the Minister's attention to that, but perhaps as he has given up the department he does not take any interest in it.

Mr. Bowell. Yes : I do.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. So far as honest traders are concerned, this asking of a deposit from reliable men is a certain grievance, and if a change were made in the direction I have indicated it would be a remely that would give great satisfaction. I have alrealy said that it is difficult to offer a mone of procedure that would he an improvement on the present one, although irregularities do exist under it. I think it is of the mode of enforcing the system that we have reasom to complain. I would ask the Minister to point ont where can be found the total amount which is divided amongst the officers, and what expenliture is charged to the combtry, or where a recorl is to le found of the money deporited with the Receiver fieneral:
Mr. BoW EILL. I do not know of any special entry.

Mr. SCTHERLAND. The Minister will see that it is impertant in disenssing this subject that we shouhl know where to finl whether the anome is deducted from the seizure or pail hy the comatry:
Mr. Bowtill. I hatre explaned that half a dozen times.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I do not understand that the Minister was satistied himself that this money had heen paid in. although he said that the instractions were given to do so.

Mr. BowtLL. If the lom. genteman will look at the Auditor dencrals Report he will see four or tive pages of refunts, which can only be pitid out of deposits.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I refer to the expenses.
Mr. BOWELL. If an oticer is going on oluty he will get an adrance to pay his expenses, and if he did not spend it all he would have to refund it. and that would le re-depmited to the credit of the Reveiver (ieneral.

Mr. FRASER. 1 malerstame that certain judgments against ofticiats of the (iovermment have been paid liy the dovernment.

Mr. BOWFLL. There have leeen judgments rembered agsinst the depirtment which hate been pain. but not ageinst officers.

Mr. FRASER. I think there was a case in Nora Scotia in emmection with in officer, Mr. Curless, who was doing a good deal of basiness with the department.

Mr. BoWELL. I have nothing to do with that ; that is in the Excise Department.

Mr. FRASER. I think perhaps there are cases in which the Government do not receive all that is collected. But I only rose to saty that the discussion to-night and the evidence given by the Minister are only further illustrations of the wretched system we have, and I hope that the Minister will take them to heart by sweeping away this whole system, which shonld have no place in a free country.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant). Do I understand that in all cases where these deposits are made the matter is fully investigated by the Minister or the department:

Mr. BowELL. All cases are investigated by the department. The moment the deposit is made the duty of the otticer is to make a return of the seizure, and the seizure paper shows the amount that is deposited. Then the party from whom the seizure is made is notified, and he has a month within which to put in his defenicé, and if within that month he puts in no defence, then julgment is remlered. either remitting or reducing : the amount or confiscating the whole.

Mr. Metiresior. This pour man's luat was seized in August or Neptember last year, and if my statement is correct, I wish to know why it hat not heen sold or returnel?

Mr. Bow ELL. I camot tell. fif the hom. sentleman will give me the name of the vessel. I will ohtain the information for him to-morrow.

Mr. MetiREGOR. The seow Mrecy A/ire. seized in September in Belle River. Lake st. Clair.

Mr. Mavllden. Have wot some of the Inaris of trade promomeed against the system:

Mr. bowell. Not that 1 am aware of.
Mr. Membliden. Has not the Toronto Board of Trade hand the question hefore it and pronounced against the system of seizure?

Mr. BOWELL. Not that 1 am aware of. I do not know that it would change matters if they did. The Batarls of Trate of Toronto and Montreal have pitsised resolutions asking for a hetter system of appraisements in order that the difficulties which arise in tixing values may be arvided.

Committee rose and reported the resolutions.
Sir JOHS THOMPSON moved the aljournment of the House.

INTERCOLONIAL RAILIAY PROPERTY AT ST. IOHN.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) asked, Whether the Government has purchased or expropriated the property in St. John, N.B., known as the Harris property, for the purpoise of the Intercolonial Railway or any other, and what purpose, and what number of square feet are there in the property so purchased or expropriated! If so, has any and what sum been agreed upon or fixed as the parchase money? Wias the property valued ! If so, hy whom, and when, and what was the valuation? Does the valuation or amount agreed to be paid for the property, ambrace the lots known as the De Veber lot and the McIntyre lot? Who was the solicitor employed on behalf of the Government in conducting the negotiations for the purchase of the
"Harris Property" proper"
Mr. HAGGART. Yes, the Government have purchased the property at St. John known as the "Harris Property" for the purposes of the Intercolonial Railway, containing about 216,000 square feet ; the purchase price is $$ 200,000$. The property was valued by Mr. C. R. Fairweather, and also by Mr. Charles F. Everett, as to the land, and by Mr. J. T. (: Mckeani, architect. and Mr. Eilward Bates. lmilder. as to buildings. in October, 1891. Fialuation of fairweather, Mckean and Bates.

 Si49, (iitio. Yes, it ines include the De Veler and Nelntyre lots. So solicitor wast employed.

Mr. BORDEN askea. What is the total cons of the two dovernment wharves at sheet Hartom: Who was the iremseer of the work during comstruction, what was his allowance per day, ame for how many days?
 Mofarlane was the overseer. He was paill si.no per day for was days from the 11 th Fehruary. 1sss. to the ith of Feminary INs9.

ENPORT DETY ON SAII-LOCS.

Mr. RiloER asked, When was the export dasy removed from salw-logs aml other unmanufacturedi lumber exportel from Camada to the United states: What are the diifferent, kimls of lumber that hare heen exported from Camiala to the United states. since the removal of the export duty upon the same, up to lst January, 1892, aud how many feet in loard measure of each kimd of lumber in the loy have been so exported?
Mr. BOWELL. The export duty on pine and spruce logs, shingle lonts and cedar logs, was repealed on the 11th of Octuber. 1890, as per circular and proclamation issucd at that time. which I hold in my hand, and which the hon. gentleman can bave if he desires. The exports of lumber, which formerly paill export duty, have been as follows:-From the 13th of October. 1800, to the lst of January, 1892: pine logs, 43,032, thonsind feet : spruce logs, $2 \pi, 9 t i$ thousami feet; celar logs, mil ; shingle bolts, mil.

CHARGES AGAINST SIR ADOLPHE CARON.
Mr. EDGAR. I suppose it will be the umanimous desire of the House that the motion which I put on the Notice l'aper last Wednesilav should he proceeded with, with the utmost dispatch : and if that is the case, I will, with the leave of the House. take this motion out of its omler ami move it now.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON, I cammot see why it shonhl he the manimons wish of the Honse to take any motion out of its conrse.

Sow, Mr. Speaker, having male that statement, I propose to fomat on it the motien of which 1 hate given notice, and I would like your ruling whether it is so far a d inestion of privilege that I can take it ont of itsordinary place on the Paper. On that print 1 would refer goil to the cases guoted in Bhorinot.
 case which was hrought up in this Honse out oif its order in 1s:ab, upern untice hating heen given by the moner of the resiontion aross the Honse previonsly. I hatre given notice in the most formal presilile way ing pacins my motion in the Votes and Prowedinas iwn days iger. Then. Sir, there wats the Prince Alhert (oolonizationt ompany ease in the yen lsist. in whidh a notice of motion like this Was given, and the hon. gentleman whor is now Minister of Militia immediately took the first wecat sion to call upon the Honse to lave the mitter eomsidereng. Wi comse that wats ilone by the mamimons comsent of the Honse, aml. therfiore. 1 suppose it is mot a precedent on the quesian of privilege. $^{\text {and }}$ thongh it shows what the House has fone. Ihar. ing the same session there was the catse of Mr. Hector Cameron, of licemia, in which the charge made agsainst hian was taken tipasa matter of privilege. Then, there is Mr. Rykerts case in Is!ut. the Tarte-Mcireery ease in 1s! 1 , and the Eatst Northumbertam caise in kion. Then, in May, at cases mentioned where precedence was given to motions on thee gromm of their privilege. He mbutions a case relating to a corrupt agrecment between Mr. OComell and Mr. Raphael in eonnection with the Carlow election. He also mentions the case of Mr. Roeloucks motion for a combittee to empuire into election eompromises. Then, in Mr. Plimsolls case, even an aljonned debate had precerlence over oiner motions, and a little furtheron, where the conluet of a member in ermenection with a joint stock company was in question, though the speaker held that it was clouhiful whether it was a question of privilege, yet, as it affected the character of a member, it wastakenupby consent of the House. In 185!), May says: "Other questions comnected withelectioncompromises wereallowed precedence.: I wish to state, as an ahlitional reason why this shouhl have precedence, that, at the first possible moment I had the information in my possession which satistied me I could prove these charges, I gave the notice. There was not a day's delay. I did it in the shortest possible time, becanse there are some considerations whichatfect thequestion of urgency, apart altogether from the serious character of the chatges. There is, for instance, the length of the session, which is a matter affecting the convenience of members of the House, and if there lo any delay in referring this question to a committee, the session may lee prolonged. I desire to show to the House that when I made these charges, I wanted to have an investigation at the carliest possible opportunity, and I submit the motion can be male hy me, of which I have given notice.

Sil IOHS THOMPSON. 1 presume. Mr. Speaker, the decision you gave the other day, when you laid down the principle soverning matters of urgency which would justify a departure from the rules of the Honse in dealing with matters of privilese, and which cleats the gromed in all these cases. sorerns this. The hon. gentlemam had the choide whether he would comsider it a matter of priviluge and urgency, or whether it shombl he taken up in to usual course, amd decided in favomr of the bater. bey puting it on the Paper to be dealt with in the oridinary way, and mot mutil this moment. when he can only do so miler claim of its being a mater of privilege, amid as he mande a statement on the suloject to the Homse, has he attempted to treat it as a matter of privilege and of urgenes. I suhmit there is nomatter of privilege or urgeney in the motion: and the aguments the hon. gentemian has alvancel as to the convenience of the Honse and the length of the session, ate not argments which can lee used to suppore the plea of urgenes. With regatel to proce dings in former sessions of Parliament, they took phace on matters which were dealt with by the manimuns comsent of the Homse.
Mr. LAt:RIER. The first guestion to be lookeni into is whether this is a matter of pricilege. 1 sub. mit that ally thing affeeting the chatacter or stambing of a meinler of this Honse is a matter of privileye thl the books are manimous on this sulpect. If this is a matter atfecting the chatacter and indeof privilege, and it is of mo consedmener whether nutice was given or not. 1 will call attention to the words of May, page elll :
" It has beensaid that a question of privilege is. properly, one not admitting of notive : but where the circomstances have bern such as to enable the member to pive notice, aud the matter was, nevertheless, buina fill: a guestion of privilere, precedence has still been conceded to it."
We have had a series of prevedents on this question since the year 1 Nas, showing that similar yuestions have lacen treated as a matter of privilege. without any motice, and it is in the interests of all that this motion should be heard at the earliest possible opportunity.
Mr. SPEAKER. We have to consider this question in the light of the rules lated down the other day. In the statement 1 made to the Honse on the Qlst of Match, it will be found that I said: "posimet jarif, a question affecting a seat of a member of the Honse is a question of privilege." We have to consider, first, whether the allegations made by the hon. gentleman atfect the seat of the hon. member in question: amd, from my point of view. I think it is very dombtful whether it comes miler that category, or can be considered a guestion of privilege justifying the immediate interposition of the House. With regard to the precelents which the hon. member for West Ontario has guoted, I think it will be found that in every one of these cuses they were brought up withont notice, with the unanimons consent of the House; and while 1 do not preteid to say that this question could not be brought up with the unamimous consent of the Honse, yet, I think, having been put upon the Notice Paper and not partaking, to my mind, of the element of urgency, it camiot be taken out of its ordinary place except with the manimous consent of the House.

Mr. Ediak.

FINHERIKN DRIPARTMFNT AND F. (CHAR-

 I.FBOIS.
Mr. LALCRIER moved for:

Copy of all correspobidence between F. Charlebois. of Byny Inlet, Jorth (1ntario), and the Fisheries Department eoneerning the mament of a cham for services performed by the said Charlebois for the sid department.
He stid: I would like spewially to call the attention of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to this motion. Mr. Charlebois repsesents to me that ahmut a yar aso he dici some work for the Department of Marine and Fisheries, and that he wats employed bey a person of the name of Fraser, who was an oretser of fisheries at Byng Inlet. He was enploved he him to draw sme nets which Fraser had seized for an infraction of the law. For this he matle a charge of sidi. in). The amonat is ant large, hut is important to this man. He never received his moner. but he applied several times to the department, and 1 tian from the papers phaced in my hamls that the departurent commanicated with the werseer, Mr. Fiaser. who at tirst, when applied of ly this department. stated that he had paid Charlehois, but the department afterwards. I believe, became combinced that this was not true, aud that the man had not heen paill. I do mot know what took place after this, but I umberstamd that Fraser has since not only: left the service of the department but has left the whether the department hoh themselses respansible for the expense which was ineurred hy Mr. Fraser. I would sulbuit this to the consideration of the hon. gentlemam. This man has acted in gool faith. amil if he has acted umber an order of in ofticer of the department. I think he wonh have not only a monal ciom hai a legal claim. It would not be worth his while to go inte a court of law for such a small amomt, but. if he has a momal claim, it should be for the Minister to see that this puor man should not lose the money he is entited to.

Mr. TLIPLRR. On the statement of facts placerd lefore the Homse by the hon. gentlenam, I iquite atree in his conclusion that a clain of that kinal should le paid. The memoramhum plateed in my hands is to the effeet that this man was employed by Fraser, aml, after examimation of his charges, a cheque for the amoment was sent to the officer to pay the man he hail employen. After that Mr. Charlebois wrote to the department saying he hat not received the cheque, and the last conmmication we have is one from Fraser written to the department in Octoler, 1891, in which he states that he had stetled with Charlelmis. From that time down. I believe we have had! no word from Mr. Charlebois. However, from what the hom. gentleman says, it would appear that Mr. Charlebois has not reeeived the money. I will examine into the case, and will see that justice is done.

Mr. LAURIER. Probably, if the hon. gentleman looks into it. he will timil that the cheyue has come back, and that Charlebois has not been pail. I will semd him a letter which will give him some further information on the sulject.
Motion agreed to.

Titic toNinON ELECTION.

Mr. SUTHFRLSAN). In the absence of the hom. member for Essex (Alr. Lister), I would ask that the motion I have on the paper :

Mr. ('H.AKITON. One or twosentlemenon the opposite side of the House desire bele prese:at and participate in the disenssion of the motion which 1 hate on the Paper, aml, if the Minister of Justice has monderetion, 1 will let it staml: otherwise 1 will proced.

Sir JoHD THOMBSON. I thimk the hon. wemteman han better procest.

Mr. (HARISON. Then I Kens to more:
That this lhows expreses the ophinom, in the interest of morality, sond sonrmment and religion, it is of importance to the civilized wartd and of sperial importance to Camada, that the Comandian lepartment of the Cohmbian clesed un Simalay.
As I saill ateross the House to the Minister of. Itas tice that, if he did not permit this motion to stame 1 womh gom with it. I will prowed. althongh perhatps on secomel thonght 1 shouhh have let it elrop for the present. I think it is a matter of impiortance to the people of timanda that the atorom contemplated be this resolutions shomble taken. The question as whether the Columbian Wxhinition at (hicagos shatl be closed of opened on the Land's bay has not vot heen settled hy the Conited States diovermment. If it hat heen settled. amd the decision had been that the exhibition shouh be closed on the Lords Dhy, then any action by the ('analian l'arliament would in. superthons, bint. in the alsence of such action and in view of the possibility that the decision of the V"nited States maty be alverse th the elosing of the exhibition on the Sibluath, I think it is important that the (iosermment of (ianalat should take action in the matter. Cireat Britain, it is unnecessary to sity, is comsidered a Christian mation. There are carions stacutes upon the statute-hooks of Fagham providing fore the observance, under various eiremmstances and to rarious extents, of the hards Day. Amost all the provinces of this bo. minion lave statutes of a similar character, and the permission for the opening of the Canalian portion of the Cohmohan Fxposition on the hord's Dity would be eontraty to the Canalian record on that sulbject, and I am sure would be arainst the feelings amb desires of the great bulk of the (ianalian population. I lo not intend to detain the Honse long upon this question, amd shall refrain from urging at length the reasons why this is contrany to the interests of morality, gooll govermment and religion. That this motion is a step in the interests of religion it is not necessary to argue. That it is a step in the interests of morallity atl experience shows, becallse the ohservamee of the Lord's Dity has proved that it is necessary to the preservation of foond momals, amd it is alsor a step in the best interevis of gexol govermment. Wie know that in the (lhristian home, the observance of the Silhath is the halwark of our public institutions, and forr the sake of the example which our action in this matter womh exert upen the word and it wombl be no slight or mimportant example for the sible of the inthemer it womhe exert upan our own commanity for the sake at taking a position which wombl he detensible before the worhl. I beys to move this resolution.

Sir JOHIX THOMlPBON. Without emering into a eritiocism of the reasoms which are given in the motion itself, in support of the propusition which it puts forwatal for the apponation of the Honse. I think we must all recognize that there are reatsons which might make it flesitable that the spirit of the resiblation shond he araried ont. I think that the comme which hats alreatly beren pursued hedireat Britain at the exhibitions in which she has taken pat comeurrenty with (imanda, Wouhd leal us to suppurt the proposition that our portion of the Clinatyo Fhhibition, in so far at this coomery is comeerne if, shomble if posible, lie elomed on Sunday. That wats the courser which was purslew with regard to the british exhibits at the laris Exhibition. The whibition itself was open, hat the exhibits that rame from liveat britatio, from ('iblada, aml probably fora other liritish colonies, Were covered on sumbay. The same comese was pursued subsegnemty on another oreasion of a like kimul. I shall ask the Honse, however, not to alope the motion as pledging the dovernment on mat partienlar comser, for this reason : that while that is the dispusition of the : one manent, there may In considerations which woblel erevent its being carried ont, amd those consideratoms we are mot jet awate of. Gur exhihits will he, of ateat extent, umiter the coutrol of the mamaging anthorities of the exhihition, and our exhilits are, I helieve, to be in the main hoiding. and we must conform omrselves to such regulations as we timi imperative in that comatry to which ome exhihits atre sent. and in which the exhibition is heing comducted. Suljeect to any unforescern and overriding necessity of that kini, the primeiple to which the resolution refers is one that the forermanent desires to carry ont. I hope that, after this amomerement, the Honse will not. comsider it necessary tosnlopt the resolution, which Womh bimd the fiovermment to amy particular course, althourh we are willing so follow that course, if $p^{m s s i l i b e . ~}$

Mr. (CHARLTON. 1 am quite willings in view of the statement made hy the Minister of .Instice, not to press the motion, although 1 am of the opinion that it would be leeter for this Honse to give an expression of opinion in the matter. I do not think it wonld emikurass the fovermment.

The Honse hias heen reminded on etheer occasions. When guestions like this canne hefore it. of the fact, that in ateceding to such a reumest we atre unlertalining to sit in at juli cial capacity and to comoluct a jumicial infuiry upon it fellow member. I ann sure that every ne:nber will anree with me, that apart from tirst principles, even, and considering merely Views of convenience and ordinary propriety, the House ought to be very carcful, indeed, as to the character and the class of charges with respect to which it will umlertake to exercise such julicial functions and to pronounce oue of its mambers gruilty of miscomluct, or not guilty of miscomluct. The House will at all tinses have regard. I an sure to the general prineiples which are necessary, not only to the independence and security of members in this House as regards their seats. but likewise to principles which are biccessary, with a view to the dignity of the House ami the rights of the constituencies which members represent. I think. Sir, there can be mo donlt of the general pranciples which should guife us upom meeasions of this kime. Obvionsly, to state the ahstract principle as well as one cain, the House has a perfect right to cuguire at any time with regard to the manner in which palite moneys have heen expended by the departments of Covermment. or bey others to whom they have entrusted pulific noneys tor expenditure. That clase of eases in which charges may le mate as to the proper expenditure of public ingene to those to whom it has leern voted to indminister. or who may have heell apporinted liy the Fecentive to andminister it : that clats of cases is altogether aside from the present one. Either of the branches of Parliament which have appropriatel the money, has at all times the right, irrespective of any charge of persomal misecomduct. to enpuire into the manner in which its votes of moner have been administered from time to time. There is in these present charges, of eomrse, no reference to any combplaint of that charracter. There is me allegation of any public momey having been misappropriated or maladministered. I am mentioning that classof cases ats one as to which there would be little doubt as to the course which the Homse wortd be disprosed to take. In the secomd place, Mr. Speaker. the precedents which have heen established, show that the Honse from time to time will take cognizance of an offence allergel to hatre heen commitied hy a member of this House in his capacity as a member of this Honse. Xow. Sir, the listinction letweell a charge of that charateer and the charge which has leen preferred ly the hom. member for Ontatio (Mr. Bidgar), is mot only. I think, a pretty plainone. lout is one which I sulanit this House cught ever most carefully to bear in mind. We have not heen charged here hy the eonstitution with any right. eren, to juilge upou the connluct and the private charater of any member of the Honse. I ammon arguing the question in the alnstract and not making particular reference to any of the charges which are before us. But, speaking of the general principle, we are not charged he the constitution with any right or any power to investigate the personal capasity or the private chanacter of any member of this Honse. (Gi the contrary, the constitution hats provided that the chone of members shall rest, not with this House, hat with the eomstituencies who send members here: and it is omly when a member hetratys his trust by a lreach of his duty as a member of this Honse, Hat the Honse has any right to coruire into his conduct, or any right or any power to iffect his status in the House, liy any resolution affecting his seat and his right to be here. Let us now enguire, Mr. Speaker, how far the charges which the hon. member desires to have submitted to the Committee of Privilerges and Flections come within either of the rules which I have laid down. It is clear they do not come within the tirst, as regarts the administration of public money : beratse the allegations, grouping them tegether, and interproting them as read together. or taking them singly, amount to this: that two companies to which moneys were roted ly Parliament on meveral necasions, and amother company which had ohtained possession of the money given them for the purpose of expenditure, appropriatel a portion of the moneys which bad thus been voted, not for the purposes of their own enterprises, but for the purpose of aiding the hom. the Postmaster (ieneral in his own electiom. and in others in which he was interested and in which supporters of the dovermment were comblidates. Now. Sir. Defore considering in letail what these charges are, or whether they come up to the standard of mathing an aceusation of misconduct ly a member of this Homse in his capacity as a member of this Honse. I wish partienlarly to direct the attention of the Homse to the imiontance of seeing that that rule is strictly complied with by any person who desires this Honse to exercise its jumbial functions. ami to sit and ieliberate upon the conduct of a member. It will not don at all to say that sone charre is implied, that sone charge is put forward which may he capable of one enstruction, anl equally capahe of another construction. The Honse hais to see specially. when charges atre deliberately framed as these have bero. that they bear that plain construction unom the ir face, and that the member who makes them shath not atterwards ine in a prosition of say that he did not inteni to make snelh at charge. hit that he intended to charge some persomal aind private impopriets. or some breath of the clection laws upon the member whon: he acenses. Another ohervation which 1 womil venture to take is. that when aceusations of improper eombluct are made, even agrinst members of Parliament as such, we ought th consider most carefully whether it is imperative upm the Honse to exercise its julicial functions. which we so marely like to exercise. anl which we so marely exercise weil. considering the diersity of feelings, of interests, and even of political passions. which are apt to prevail in an assembly like this. We hate to comsider whether the acensations which are brought forward are accusatioms which some hetter qualitieal tribunal in this cometry is not clothed with powers to determine. If the constitution has ereeted in tribumal in the ewontry which hats jurisidiction wer such matters. and if the lawe which govern us all, ns as well ats our constitnents, give ti, these trihunals a right and a procelure te cary on the investigation, it is most proper that the House should. if possible, decline to exerese any judicial functions on its part. and leave to the tribumal which is quali. fied loy the constituiom and the statutes of this comntry. the power, the right and the duty to determine and investigate the complaint, whether it he of a member who desires to make an aceusation here. :r of any person outside of this House. Now. I shall ask the House to consider carefully what these charges and allegrations are which the hom. member for West Ontario has asked to be referred to the Committee on Privileges and Flections, prefacing what I have to say on that subject by a re-statement of the position which I assume, that if charges ate made involving an iaquiry into the expenditure of moncy voted by this Parliament for public purposes, or if charges are specitically made against a member, of misconduct in his capacity as a member of this House, which would affect his seat or his privileges in this House, I admit that it may be the dinty of the House to undertake such an investigation. Now, the hon. member has stated, in the assertions which he has male to the House, that he is credibly informed and belieres that he can establish ly satisfatory evidence that between the years 188.2 and 1891 the Guebecam Lake St. Iohn Railway Company received subsidies, imoming in the acregegate to upwards of Sl, (x), onn), and that thesesubsidies were coted by this Parliament : that arrandements were mate by that railway company wherely the expenditure of such subsidies was mate by it construction company, and that the construction eompany and one Beemer, and those who assisted him in tinancing these matway works, rece:ived the hencfit of the subsidies: that during the whole of the perion from 1sses to 1891, sir Aholphe Caron was. and still is, a member of the House of commons, a member of the Cinadian (iovermment, aml one of Her Majesty's l'rivy Councillors for (cmata. I may mention in passing --although it may appear a very strict olijection now, yet, 1 mention it now, hecatise it will beeome important when we consiler another hanch of the suliject-that that statement is oblomely incorrect. No person hats been a member of this Homse from 1swit to 1sal. There were proiods during which this Honse ceased to have any members, during which it eatsed to exist.
some hom. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.
Sir .JOHS THOMPSON. Now, Nir, I can intagine nothing more satisfactory for the arguncot which I :m presemting to this (hamber that the ridicuions amb altogether too previons satirical cheering which has just come from the ather side. I have ventured to summit to the Honse that when it mulertakes to investigate a matter judicially. it does not approach it with feclings which generally inspire great public contidence in the acearacy of the decisions at which it arives, or in the purity or disinterestedness of the considerations which actuate the view of the tribunal: anl when I have drawn the atention of the Honse to the inacemacy of one of the statements which we areasked now to adjudicate upon in the Committee on Privileges and Elections, and have told the Honse that the point, although appearing altorether torstrict for the moment, will bear some importance when I conne tostate whyl make it, certain memhers of this lorly who desire the judicial enumiry at the hamds of this House to proceed with great rapidity, are mable to wait until I shall have an opportunity of stating to the House why I consider the point important, but are prepared with a satirical comment hefore I am able to state the argument. Now. Mr. Speaker, let us ro on fora momentand see what the allegrations are further. It is stated :
"That the saidSir A. P. Caron was, daring the whole or the greater part of the said peried.one of the nembers of the said construction company, and thus had means of knowledge of and did know of deatings with the said sub)sidies and thir destination after they were paid orer by the Government to the said railway company.
"That during the said period and while the said railway was being constructed in part by means of saill subsidies, the said Sir A. P. Caron corruptly received large sums of money out of the said subsidice, and from woneys raised upon the credit of the same, and from paries beneficially interested in the same.
"Ihat during the said period out of said subsidies, and out of moneys raised upon the credit of the same, and from parties beneficially interested in the same, harge sums of money were from time to time corruptly paid and contributed, at the request and with the knowlerlge of said Sir A. P. Caron, for election purposes, and to aid in the election to the House of Commons of the said Sir A. P. Caron, and other members und supporters of the (iovernment of which he was a member, and that after some of such lastmentioned corrupt payments und contributions were male, further and other subsidies were granted and paid to the said railway company by the Government of which Sir A. P. Caron was a member.
Now, Mr. Speaker, I sulmit to the House a reiteration of the statement I have alrealy made, that, hefore we are asked to appuint a committee to try a member of this House, there ought to be some eharge made against him of misconluct in his capacity as a member of this House. I assert that, howerer improper it may lef for a member to viohate the Acts relating to elections in this country, that is not a matter on which this. House will willingly deliberate. We have delegiated to the comrts of the conntry jurisiliction over these matters, and I repeat that, when the courts of the comitry have jurisoliction over such matters, it is mbecoming and improper from tiery point of view that this Honse should attempt to resume that jurisdiction anlexercise that authority in another way. I know that this House is repeatedly reminded that in giving jurisdiction to the comrts over election cancs, we have simply given these conts concurrent jurisalietion. I know that every time a party alsantage is to lee gained; whenever an attempt can profitably, from a party point of view. he made to take back the jurisoliction we have given the courts, and to under take to exereise the aththrity of this House or a committee of this Honse wer an election case, an election trial, an election ju!gment, or proceeling, some members of the Honse are continnally remind ing us of our latemt power and insisting that we should exeraise it again. In every other atssemhly that 1 know of where such powers have been delegated to the judges. as the days ablvance, the feeling grow: stronger and stronger in these bodies that umper no circomstances ought they to take batek that authority and exercise that power. but that they should leave to the courts the investigation of all such matters. That feeling is so strong that I am sure the disposition in the British Hoolse of Commons is, if it were necessary to do so, to demule itself of this power in order that it may never he excreised again. by a tribunal so unfit, as the Honse of Commous must lie. to exercise the authority such a trihumal ought tos have in trying election cases. I wish to call the attention of the Honse to a point I mentioned a few moments ago. I sulmit that it ought to appear: clear that the hon. member for West Ontarioneant to charge some offence against the Postmaster General in his cupacity as member of the House. lefore he could ask the House to go on with this investigation. And when I remind the House of what I said with regiarl to the dates hetween lss: and 1891, I wish to saty that I had in view the emphaisizing of this position, that the hon. gentleman who made the charges is not in a position to allege now that these charges maty bear the construction of imputing to the Postinaster (ieneral acts of miscominct as a member of landiament, because in paragraphs $\bar{i}$ and 6 , the hon. gentleman makes it plain that the misconduct imputed hy him was practised in the course of an attempt to become a nember of lialiament, and while seeking to aid other gentlemen also striving to oltain election. But irrespective of this inaceuracy, to which I attach no importance whateverasa mere inacenacy, I wish to impress now upon the House that this is an attempt on the part of the hon. memherfor West: Ontario to investigate bygonce elections which have taken place in this country, and nothing more. Although in the tirst part of his motion, where he mentions the dates 1882 and 1891 , he alleges that the P'ostmaster (ieneral was during all thatt period a member of the House, when he comes on to paragraphs $\bar{a}$ and 6 , it lecomes transparent that what he is endeavouring to clo is, not to issail the conduct of a member of the House as such, hut to investigate proceedings which took place at elections in 18s:2, 1887 and 1801 and the comluct of the Postmaster (iencral during those elections, including his own elections. The charge in paratgraph (i) goes on to saty :
"6. 'That at the request and with the knowledge of said Sir A. P'. Ciaron, for deetion purposes, and to aid in the clection to the llonse of Cummuns of the said Sir A.P. ('aron, and other members and sumporters of the diovernment of which he was a member, and that atter some of such last-mentioned corrupt payments and contributions were made, further and other subsidies were granted and paid to the said railway company by the Government of which sir A. l'. Garon wis a member $\because$. That the Temiscouatat Railway Company was given incorperation by Letters Patent issued hy the Ganadian Government on bih Ootober, 1ssis, anl since that diate the said railwaty eompany has received from the Dominion of Catad:a subsidies to the extent of sbt!, 2ixu-which subsidios were voted by Dialianent on the recomurndition of Ministersot the Cruwn.
"S. That since the (ith October, 1855, and while the said Temiscouatai railway was being eonstructed in part by means of the saif subsitlies, the satid Sir A. 1?. Caron corruptly rueeived large sums ut munes from the persons Whor tron ime torime controlled the shid Temiseouata Kailway Company and the salad suhsidies, or who were beneficially interested in tho sad subsidies.
-9. That also since the said tith Uetober, 18s5. the persons who from time to time cuntrolled the said Temiscouata Ratway Cumpany and the silid subsidies, or who were beneficially interested in the said subsidies, pmid and comtributed 1 arge sums at the request, and with the knowledye of the sis di Sir i. P. Ciron, for elecion purposes to aind in the election to the Honise of Commons of the satid sir A. P:Caron, and other inembers and supmorters of the (iorermment of which he was a member. amb that after some of such last-mentioned corrupt payments ami eont ributions were made, further and other subsidies were granted and baid to the said railwaty company by the govermment of which the said Sir A. P. Carrun was a member.
Now, I have to repeat again that if these gentlemen have any charge whatever to make against the Govermment with regard tos the propriety of granting these subsidies, we are here to meet them, amb this is the place to meet them. If they or inylurly else have accusations to make against the way in which clections have been carrien, or attempteil to he carried, the conarts are open to them, and this House ought not to le open to them, and the House will see the importance and significance of that statement, when 1 come, as I do now, to paragratph 10, where the statemenis made are of so vague a character that I malertake to say no representative assemibly in the world would entertain them. I saly more, I say that if the Act had not leen passed giving the julges jurisiliction to try election cases, this House would not adopt any resolution such as that, and entrust to this Committet the power and duty of trying two general elections. That is what it mmomits to. Why, sir, before the proceclure was alopted of sending these matters to the courts, we had some decorum, we had some regulations as to the way we would try any member's seat, or conduct. We had formalities for trial by an election committee, a petition had to le presented with specitic charges, particulars had to be given, and the members charged with the duty of inguiring into an election, sat as a court trying a specific charge. But here we come to a sweeping allegation with reference to transactions extending over nine years and two general elections:
" 10 . That the said sums of money hereinbefore mentioned in paragraphstiand 9 , as paid and contributed for election purposes, were so used, together with other sums contributed by public contractors with the bouninion Government., and were controlled and dist ributed by the direct authority and with the knowledge of the sail Sir A. P. Caron, in lavisla and illegal ammunts for the purpose of corruptly intluencing the electors, and in the general electributed were so used for the purpose of corruptiy influencing the electors in the following electoral ilistricts, that is to say : The Counties ot St. Milurice. Ohamplain, Léris, Montmoreney, Charlevoix, Kamouraska. I'misenuata, LIslet, Dorchester, Berthier, Purtneuf, Quebec, Gaspe, Rimonski, Montmagny, Bellechasee, tseance amid Megantic, and in (Quebec West, Quebec Centre, Quebee least and Three Rivers."
Then comes the proposition that we shall refer to a committee thase assertions, not even framed with the regularity, with the eare, and with the precision which would be repuired in an election petition, if an election petition were to he tried by this Honse. Weare to refer these charges to a committee for the purpose of investigating and trying regularly an allegation of corrupt practices in the elections of some fifteen or twenty enunties. I have already satil enongh to show that the clatiges do not come within the category of charges which I mentionerl, as those in which the Honse conlat properly exereise its authority and jurishliction. I have ahrealy assured the House that if any charges are framed which do come within that caterery, they will be entertained, and there will he no opposition on this side to an investigation. I have already stated, in sa fir as the fonermment is concerned, that they are here to meet any accusations which may be male in that regard, hint the fovermment are not lefore a committee, and it is uneonstitutional that a committee should sit to try the fovernment of the day. I have only to conclucle hy the statement that of all the ateusitions which have heen made in this Honse, even the accusation which the House declinel to entertain at the close of last session, this accusation is the vaguest that I have heen able to find, and it is one which I think the House ought not to entertain in its present shape. I may say, ly way of safegharl, in reference to future action in such cases, that, if such charges shouhl conte up in any form at any future time, the proposal to refer them to the Privileges and Elections committee ought to be refuser!. We hat a long experience of that committees work last session, and I think it was unamimonsly agreed that the committee is tro large for yuick and prompt and acaccurate deliberation, and that, when any charges of this character are to be referred to a committee it would be preferable, with a view to despatch and eonrenience, to have them referred to a smaller committec, as was done in one case last year. I admit that, in making this wowal, I am taking back what I urged before the House on some furmer ocuasions. It was comsidered that the Privilegus and Blections Committee, containing a number of lawyers skilled in investigations would le the best committec to investigate these matters, but, as the number of that committec has been extended to over to, as investigations of this kind require a long time, the examination of a number of witnesses and of masses of papers, they have to le referred to sulbcommittees, and conserguently it is found that the procedure lefore the Privileges and Eleations Committee recupies a sery long time, ats that committee is too large to deal prouptly with these matters. Howerer, as the resolution now comes lefore the House. I shall ask the Honse not to support it.

Mr. LACRIER. Mr. speaker, there is imileen, as has lneen stated by the hon. gentleman in his opening remarks, an impression throughont the country that, if it member makes at charge against a fellow member, he puts his own seat in peril. The Honse expects from a member who makes a charge against a fellow member that he must have some gronl ant strons reatson for making that charge and it is unguestionable that the common sense of the comitry would expeet that, if any member should be guily of mating such at fom chare against another member, withom having strong reasoms for making it and genal evidence to support it. he would not he fit to assichiate with gentemen and he ousht to he expelled from this Honse. There is an maritien haw of pariament which expects every member of this Honse to at as a sentleman, and that impression has prevale from the year 1 ajo3. when the late sir fobm Mitedemah stated, on the oncasion that Mr. Huntington made his charges, that he womblat hate Mr. Huntingtom expelled from the House. If it that time Mif. Huatington hat mot inen able to prove that the charges he made were trace he would certainly have deservel to tee expelled from this Howse: and I say this in rugard tomy hon. friend lehind me that. if he :ande such a charge as he has made agialnst the Postmaster fieneral without any evidence tor sulstantiate it, if he has been guilty of slamering another member of the Homse, hic is guilty of comluct which sho:3:1 canse him to he expelted from the Honse. and no one in this Honse would aly anything to the enntraty. Pat I was not prepared to hear from the hom. gentleman op posite the langare I have heari from tim. The language of the Minister of Justice is far different when he speaks on the hustings and when he speaks on the floor of this House. Wion the hom. gentleman was lefore the people of this country, and when the dovernment of which he was a nember was assaileal for hriberyaul compuption, for wiming elections by vicious practices, the hom, gentleman was brave. and he stated that he was willing to give a hearing to cerry man who made a change agianst the (iovermment on any of its members, that he was weleome to make that charge and to have it investigatell, that the diovermment was afraid of nothing. When the hom. gentleman is taken at his word, and tharges are naile, how does he answer: He answers by the merest quibbling aul pettifogging ever heard in any court of justice to defend a vicious canse. We have hearl a statement from the hon. gentleman that it is not uur mission to look after the private conduct of members of this Honse. I agree with the hon. gentleman that it is not the duty of any member of this House to look after the private conduct of a fellow member, but the hon. gentlenian will not deny that, if a fellow :nember is clatrged on the Hoor of the House with conduct-not public conduct only, but private conduct-that would disgrace a gentleman, that man should be expelled from this House. Shall I refresh the memory, the defaulting memory of the Minister of Justice, with the example which took place not much more than two momths ago, the example of Mr. De Cohain who has been expelled from the British Honse of Commons for private comduct of a most scambalous natture: Shall I remind him of the case of Mr. Sadleir who, thinty or forty years ags, was expelled from the liarliament of Great Britain for emberaling pablic money: On this mecasion the charges are not alone of miscombluct of a private charater. but of misemmet of the most grievons kind of a public chataster as well. The hom. gentleman sees bo wrong in the actions which are charred against the Postmaster (iencral. The Postmaster Cieneral is charged with hating reveivel momey from a pullic company which han heen sulseribed to that company for a pmilic ent, for the pablic good, and he is charged with having received a portion of that money for emrnpt purposes and th have so applied it. Fet the hom. gentleman satys there is wis wrons in that. Is that correet? The lathat ment of $\tilde{C}^{\text {andadia }}$ is askeal for a sulsidy to be applied. every cent of it. th the builling of a public mailway: That is the sanction meler which lambament gives the noney, that every cent shall he applied in that way for at empany that has mot cuourh money itself tor construct that rom for the pmblic alvantase. Set the hom rentleman tells as that that urney which wats sulscrine! ly Parliament emb be diverter from its intented purposes, amb that part of it can be hamadel to a Minister of the (rown for corrupt parposes, to corrapt the electors, and this is nothing wrong, this is a thing the Minister of Justice is lumad to acepuiesce in and to defend on the floor of Parliament. I did not molesstand exactly the detence made by the hon. gentleman, whether he defended this on its merits, or whether it wats simply hecallase the Postmester Cencral was not then a member of Parliameni. I ask the Minister of Justice if he ever heard such a statement anywhere: The thing is too pitiful to be thought of. Whether or not the hom. gentlemam was then a member of Parliament, he does inot leny that he was a member of the covermment. that he was an adviser of His Excellency the (iovernor (ieneral. amel yet he pretends that at that time he eoull take money from the public treasury, put it in his pocket, and thenapply it to corrupt purpuses during the elections. Sir. if this is the mature of the alorality to which we have come in this comary, let us know it: let us know whether the party in power are willing to assent to the principle laid down by the Minister of Justice that there is no moral wrong in money which is voted ly this Parliament being used for corrupt purposes.

An hom. MEMBER. Pacamil.

Mr. LAURIER. I mulerstiand somelonly to shont "Pacaud." This is the last refinge of those hon. gentlemen. Sir, I have to saty, that I am mot here to defend Pacam. Patam has leen julsed hy the people of Guebee : but, Sir, lacand has done nothing which hias not heen defended to-day by the Minister of Justice. Let us know once for all, whether that is to be the doctrine which is to prevail in this comntry; if it is, I take direct issue against it. Perhaps the majority of the House may yield to the appeal of the hon. genteman and endorse that doctrine. Sir, thongh. in my judg. ment, the electorate has not done its duty in the last election, still, perrhaps the day will come when the measure will be filled up by somelooly : and 1 Helieve, whatever may be the result of the vote which will lot taken to-day, even though this motion he rejected, that Cinalia will be siaved ly the people, if it is to lee satved at all.

Mr. TLPPPER. It is hardly necessary to reply to the speech just delivered liy the hon. leader of the Opposition, ifter he has reserted to the language of the stump to which he refervel, and whith language be apparently had in mind. I would not rise to spatak were it not that I wish to call the attention of this House to the extraorlinary positinn which, so som in these important and scrions proceerlings, the lealer of the (pposition hats ventured to take. Wias his langnage the language of a julve: Did the langnage of the hon. gentleman indicate that he was in a fit and proper state to sit in judement upon the ehamater of a member. Whethei the chatge related to the momal character or the pu!dice chamater of a genteman, who, at at any rate, cilher in this House or ont of it. is entitled to am impartial trial and an impartial investigation? The hom. gentleman so far forgot his position in this Honse and in this comntry, and if I may say so. his claty towards the members of this Honse. that he did not hesitate to sharge the lember of the Honse with having resorted to quibhling and pettiforemin when he venturel :onlissect this charge and the indietment in order to show, as he did show, how far it fell shore of what an indictment and chatre shombe be wen teating with the sul, ject t, which it relates. The learer of the House went wer these varins charges, am the leater of the Opposition wats not able to follow him in reference to the particular eriticism which he mande. except to Hing acooss the House the charge against the lealer of the Howse, of having resorted to yuibhling and pertifogging in order on meet the motion. If there was quibhling athl pettifogering. how is it that the learler of the Opposition sat down without pointing ont to the mentiers of this House wherein that yuibbling consisted:

Mr. (ASED. It was too thin.
Mr. TLPPIER. Hom. gentlemen show by their excitement, and iy their lom jeering, that it woulh have heen a most disgraceful thing, under the circumstances. to remitito them at question as tor the chanacter of any nimber in this Honse: They are not in a fit condition to make the investisation. The spirit displayed by them is most extramolinary. But the hon. gentleman not only assumed the position that members assumed on the smap during the election, lat he ran away to cite at ease which was totally inatplicable to the one umber consinleration. He alluded to the De (obsain case recently before the British Parliament, and I venture to say that mo gentleman who has followed that ciase in the Einglish Honse of Commons, would, on second thought, endorse the position taken by the leader of the Opposition, if he supposes there is a parallel hetween that ciase and the one now before us. The argument in that case tells with terrific effect against the position assumed on the other side, because hon. gentlemen will find, on looking into it, that the case went along for some time outside of the Figlish Parliament, and Parliament took the greatest possible care not to go into the disgraceful and notorious charges against that member of Parliament, until it became evident and indisputable that the member was an outlaw from justice, and fleeing from the courts of the lond. Then the House took up the case of that member as an outlaw from justice, as a man who was afraid to stand his trial in the courts of lat: and the leader of the House troday shows that so far as there are charges contained in the different paragraphs of this motion, the courts of law in Canadia are open to the hom. gentleman and to everyone else, wherein to make their charges. I say that instead of shouting, insteal of jeering, instead of making glib charges acrosis this House, it would he well for hon. gentlemen opposite, since the leater of the Opposition camot do it. to make some show of alefence of the charges coniained in these different paragraphs as a reason why it is right, or proper, or hecoming to this Parlianent that the hon. member should be put on trial. The position taken by the leader of the Wonse to-day is not merely one which concerns the Postmaster (ieneral. The Minister of Justice is stambing up for the privileges of members on losh silles of this Honse, and all that he daimed this Honse shou!d insist upon is that when eharges are lesellal aganst any member, those unlertaking to prefer them and to ask for an incestigation, shall show, first of all, that they are charges which rember impossihle the presence of an bon. gentleman in this Honse, and that those charges are as de:arly ant fully particularized as they wombl he brough hefore any other tribmal in the comatry. The lealer of the Opposition did bot leal. either, with the position taken on this side of the Honse on chis 'puestion, waching the delegation of many of the julicial powers of this Homse to the courts of the comorv. Surely that is mot a matter to put down with eheers aml shouts: surely that is a matier that shombl be deserving, at heast, of all attempt to meet it, hefore any conchasion is drawn upon the question. We know how strong passions atre in this Hotise. we have hal eridence of it today, and for these reasons l'arliament long ago adopied the pratice of semling to the conrts of law to be tried, many of the eases that are involved here. The sting. so to speak, of those resolutions is in the tail. The last paragraph of these resolutions clearly indicaties the object of hon. gentlemen opposite: their object is not to prove on suhstantiate a charge against the Postmaster (ieneral alone, not merely to show that he has beenguilty of conduct unhecoming a member of this House : lent it is a cheap and speedy way of investigating and aseertaining how the Conservative party, all orer the enomous portion of country that is ilefined in pararraph 10 , conducted the elections in $1 \mathrm{SN}^{-}$, and the elections that followed. The secret is disclosed in that paragraph, that is the reason and che object ; and if there was a spinit of fairness on the part of hon. gentlemen, if there was merely a desire to purge this House of the presence of a member who is not fit to sit in it, they would not embanass the case hy bringing a charge forward indicating so much party hias, so many party objects, as are diselosed in the resolutions, and contained in these vague charges. A case has heen handed to me upon the subject to which the leader of the Opposition first directed attention, and it is an important feature of this case, and male more so by the hom. gentleman's attributing so much importince to the supposed respectalility of the member preferring these charges. The hon. gentleman seems to think that, becanse he has assumed a great responsibility, the House therefore should be guilen in the direction which he asks that it should take, and a committee should be gramten. But the Suprense Court, in the case of charge, and name the man, and there will be an Lambers $\therefore \therefore$. Wiondworth in 185S, laid down this investigation granted. opinion through Chief Justice Richards:
"When the nember miakes his statement he exereises the risht of fredom of suech, and in making eharges against gembemen holding official positions, rery great latitude is allowed in the use of vitupreatire lamguage. If the lancuafe nsed is mparliamentary, it may be taken down, and the llouse deciles upon it. It not called ta urder, and the Jonse considers it necressary for its dignity to empilire into the matter. it takes the initiative and appoints a committee, or institutes anenguiry as the case may be. The member has only exercised his rirht of freedom of spece in bringing the matter the attention of the House. The member of the legishature, exereising his right of speech, makes a complaint. If the subject, matrer of his eomplaint turns out on an enguity nat to be true. we havenot heen shown any anthority or preeselent where a member can be charged with heing guilis of at breach of the privileares of the Honse for so doing."

Now. 1 may state, for the henetit of the hom. gentleman, that this was a case where grave innd serions charges hath heen mate in the Legivlature tempted to expel the gentleman who mate those chateges and the eatse went hefore the sumeme Conrt of this conntiy, and the decision was utterly opposed to the position which the hom. leakler of the Opmosition supposes is the prsition of the mover of this resolution to-day. So, whether his position is one of responsibility on not. We must recollect the position and responsibility of the person chargeel, and the position the forermment takes is, that the charges shonld he specific, and be so specitie as to afford exact information ats to what the ohject of the mover is, also as to what the exact chares he desires to prefer are : ant more than that, it must disclose what this resolution ofoes not cliselose that it is an offence against the laws of the !aml, or it is an offence that remers unfit the presence of the member attacken in the larliament of this conntry. If hon. gentlemen opposite are satistied with the way in which the leater of the Opposition has met the lealer of the fiowermment torday. 1 feel guite certain that members on this sile of the Honse are equally satisfied with the prosition taken by the leader of the diovernment. I lownot foreret, either, that the leader of the Gpuesition seens to suppuse that the lealer of the dovernment has justitied a Mr. Pacaud, and the hon. gentleman's answer as to Mr. I'acamel was that the people of the Provinee of Gudiee hatd dealt with him. I should like io know whether the peopple of the Province of puchee have vet dealt with Mr. Pacaud. I mulerstand he remains yet to be dealt with. as perhaps do some others whotigured in that interesting perion of history. But what did hon. gentlemen suppose came from the lips of the lealer of the diovermment to justify Mr. l'acaul or any of his colleagnes in comnection with the great frands and outrageous wrongs perpetrated ly these men, which brought down the denunciation of the Toronto blobe, which, speaking of them, denounced them as public thieves and robbers. Does the hon. gentleman approach the consideration of this case, hy saying there is a charge of public robhery and public thiering in the resolutions:

Some hon. MEMBERs. Yes.
Mr. TUPPER. Then, if he believes that-and this is the point of the whole case-let the hon. gentlemun take the responsibility of making that charge direct. If he desires to make a charge of public robbery and thieving, let him make the

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). We have hat a mather extraordinary line of argument adopted by iwo Ministers of the Crown, in undertaking to burke the investigation into the charges made hy the hom. nember for West Ontario (Mr. Filgary. The Minister of Justice has laid down ecreain docirines hy which the anthority of this Honse is to be limiteil. amd hy which, in the exereise of that limiter aniohority. We ought to he guidel, which, I venture to say, he will not find supported hy any anchority in the Parliament of the Enited Kingolom. The hom. gentleman has umdertaken hy certain propsitions to deprive this House of a lare purtion of that power which it is necessary in the puhlic: interest it shond retain. The hon. gentleman has, in the tirst place, stated that we have mo right whatever. to enpuire into on take any action with respect to the mivate condact of any member of this Honse. My hom. frienl, the lealer of the ( $p$ position. pointer ont that l'arliament had noer and orer againom the other side of the Athantic expelled members in consequence of their private emmhot. It was not simply that the Home had investigated into their private comduct. That was mot the hon. gentleman's proposition. The hom. gentlemin's proposition was that the private character of a member was mot a matter which shotih call for any action on the part of the Homse. My hon. friend met that contention by pointing out that discrealitable comber: comblat that showed that the member was mownthy of being regarded as it gentleman. was combuct which warmented his sexpulsion from the House, amd he cited instances in which that had taken place. But that question shoes not arise in this catse. The hom. Minister of Instice says that the matters contained in the charges mate hy the hon. member for West Ontario (Mr. Eilgar) are matters which, if investigated at all. onght to be investigated by the election comrts of the eomatry. Sir, I deny that altogether. Tise election courts have nothing whatever to do with the considetation of the matters whichare embraced in these propositions. The election conts are constituted for the purpose of enguiring into irregularities conneretel with the clection of the particular person against whom certain specific charges are malle. The power of the election conts deres not go hevom that. The law with respect to these courts is well understond. Why, I have hefore my mind it ease which enedured nos many years ago. where certain charges of miscomblact in the ahministration of pablic affiatis weremale against the member on the trial of an election petition. What was the position taken by the court: It was that that was a proper matter for investigation by Parliament, that it was not a matter with which the court had anything to do. That was the decision of the judge in an important case in the Province of Guebec, and the riew taken by that court was sustained by the Supreme Court on appeal. So when the leader of the Govermment and his colleague undertake to seriously argue that this House is denuded of all its power to encuire into the misappropriation of public money for the purpose of corrupting the electors of this country, because the trial of election petitions has been referred to the courts, I take issue with those hon. gentlemen on that ground. The trial of election petitions is one thing. The nse of puinic money for deliberate corruption of the electors hy a menber of the Administration is a proper matter for enguiry by this House, and is not in the smallest degree restricten in any way hy reason of the trial of election petitions having been referred to the courts. The Minister of Justice has argued that there is nothing in this petition affecting the conduct of the Postmaster deneral as a member of this H ouse. He says, in effect, that the allegations are wrong. because there are intervals bet ween the dissolution of one House and the election of another, during which there is no Honse at all, an that as he was not a continuous memher withont a moment of time having elapsen, there was mo House in existence. the statement in paragraph three is incorrect. 1 am not disposed to answer a quablule of that sort. further than to say this: that legally, the one Honse is in existence, ats detine d hy the constitution and for certain purpoete, matil the other is elected, and the dissolution of the Honse does not in certain emergencies prevent the dissolved Honse, if these emersencies arise, from again heing called together. But, Sir, that is a matter of no consempence. These charges $p^{\text {wint }}$ to a member of this House in his oflicial capacity as a member of the didministration, rather than to his comber as a member of this Honse. What, in effect, are the charges hore made? They point to the fact that the Crown was adrised to appropriate large sums of money for particular purposes and that these moneys were diverted from these public purposes and placed in the hambs of at Minister of the (Hown for the purpose of corrupting the electonate in certain portions of the Dominion of Cinada. Is not that a proper matter for enquiry: Is it open to a Minister of the Crown to take moneys from a pmblic contractor, who has received these moneys from the public treasury of this come try upon his adrice, and to apply this money to other purposes than these for which they hate lieen appropriated: Why, Sir, what has the press of the hon. sentlemen opposite said with regard to events in the Province of Quelee where moneys were voted as sulsidies to railways and were taken up not hy a Minister of the Crown. not lig one holding a pulific position, but taken by a private party and applied for election purposes: What was the position taken there by hom. gentlemen opposite, and hy the servant-the obedient servant 1 will say-of these hon. gentlemen in elismissing the Alministration, in dissolving the Parliament and atling into existence another (ooverment? What are there in the events which the hon. member for Centre Toronto \& A r. (ockburn) brought umder the attention of this Honse in resard to the Province of (unchec that are any less important to the whole people of the Diminion of Canada, than these present charges: If a Minister of the Crown can oltain over sion,onvo that has come from the pablic treasury-no matter whether a railway contractor or a railway company has intervened or ant -and used these means in the party interest, and for the promotion of party purposes in elections, why could not half the money of the public treasury he taken the same way? If there is any value in theargnment of the Minister of lustice it is as good ayainst $\$ 10,000,0100$, as it is against $\$ 100,0 \times 10$. There can be no doubt whatever of that. There is a statement made here that this hon. gentleman, the Postmaster General, is the Minister of the Crown who advised these subsidies leing appropriated to aid thene companies. There is a charge that he obtained a protion of the sulssidy so roited, or its equivalent, from these companies, and used it for his own purpore in his nwn election. and in the elections in twenty-three constituencies in this Dominion. That chatge isspueticicand clear enough. It is also stated that affer some of these moneys: were received hy him this same rentleman alvised the Crown th grant other subsidies to ot her parties. and that from these other sulisidies, moneys were als, oltaineel. If these matters are not to he inrestigated. what change can yon make against an Alministration which can he investigatel! The Minister of Justice has also said that this is a matter which shomid ger to the courts. I would like to know in what respeet the comets have juristiction over a matter of this sort: Why, sir. from the days of Eilwated the Third down (1) the present hour the dovernment and Parliament of Euyland have adhered strictly to the principle, and hate maintaned the right of parliament to inventigate sueh matters. and they have held that the Honse of Commons is the sole lunly that has a bight to combluet these investigations. This is not a duestion for the comers, but it is a gluestion for this Homse. It is not a question for a (ommission ereated he the donemment, sub. ordinate to the bowernment and responsible to the forermment : but it is al question ior the High Court of Parliament, the cont of the people. This is a misitppropriation of the peoples money, and the peoples representitives in this areat Assembly have a right to knew what use hat been mate of these moneys. and whether these charges are well. or ill-fommer. The Minister of Instiee sase that Parliament is an inconvenient lonly for such an investigation. In that comention. the hon gentleman is at tacking our whole parriamentary system. The hom. gentleman is seeking to destroy the power of this Honse a investigate. to restrain. of ascertain, or to punish acts of sum a chatacter as those which are charged in this resolution. I have said that the Homse of Commons is the only hooly which has a right to investigate this mater. A Commission hats bet. Will the Minister of Instice, or will any hon. grenteman print to a single instance where a sulject of this sort has been mitide a matter of cither jublicial investigation, or of investigation by a commisionn appointed by the Ninisters of the (rown. There is not in the whole history of Eaglam?, from the reign of Henry VII to this hour. an instance where such an incestigation liy such a tribunal hats been had. The hom. gentleman camot tind one. and in the very nature of things it is perfectly ohvious that that must he the case. Let us take the case of a Commission, for example. A Commission is a creature of the Administration. It is appointed, not to investigate the conduct of the Government, hut to investigate the conduct of those who are sulordinate to the fiovermment and who are responsible to the Government. If one of these hon. gentlemen sitting on the Treasury benches is charged with wrong-doing, can it he for a moment said that they themselves are the proper parties to advise the Crown as to who shall he appointel to investigate their conduct? To whom is the report to he made? Why, to themselves. Who is to advise the Crown upon that report ? Why, the very gentlemen who are accused, and nobody else. They are the parties who are to tell the Crown whether they ought to be dismissed or whether they ought to be retained, upon the evidence that the Commission has taken. Is it not clear that if these hon. gentlemen hate the appointment of the Commission by whom they are to be trien, that they will make it. so far at they are concernen, a very mereiful tribunal. inleed? Let me say this: That the whole phsition taken ly the Minister of instice is an attack upoin our constitutional system: it is an attempt to degrade ihe Honse and to deprive it of one of its chicf functions. Here are serions charges male against a member of the Administration. The hon. gentleman soes on the public platform and ehallenges investigit tion : he tells the priblic that if any party has any alecusation to make, let him make it, and the fullest and mast minute enguiry shall be hatl. Iy hon. frieml states specifically his aceusations, amed instead of having them refertent the proper committee for their insestigation, the hom. gentleman umbertakes to show that they ought not whe investigated at all. He says that this is an attempt to try entroverted elections, which have been relegateal to the courts, that these aceurations ought to have heen mate during the perion allowed hy law for the filing of election petitions, athe that when that perion foes by notial is to be hat. Von may take half a million from the pablic treasurg and if yon conceal it for the time iseing you will enjoy immanity; larliament has no right to try it. Diarliament might listre the right if the chatge related to any other matter in the world than elections. If misappropriations are mate. if at man steals money and puts it into his pocket, possibly you may investigate that. I do not know: there is some doule whether that conld be investigated or not. from the position taken by the Minister of Justice : hut if the man applies the money to election purposes, you cannot enter that sacred precinct at all. Unless men interesterl in the trial of election petitions chonse to file a petition, you have no redress. Parliament is perfectly helpless. A wrong may be clone in twenty constituencies: half a million of the public money may be stolen from the public treasury and so applied; but if you camot find twenty men in thase constitnencies to tile petitions, the other 19a constimencies have no redress. That is the position taken ly the hom. gentleman. We shall ste whether this House supports so unconstitutional and preposterous a proposition as that which the Minister of Justice has put forward. I apprehend that the people of this country will not be prepared to sustain it. They took the Minister of Justice at his worl : they assumed that he meant what he said; when he told them that.the fullest enguiry would be had, that the Government womlal court enguiry, the brilness of the hon. gentleman and the frankiess of his statement were taken by the public as establishing his innocence. And now the hon. gentleman has kicked down the ladiler, climbed into his hole, and he satys: There I am prepared to remain. Well, Sir, I think that is not a very courageous position for the hon. gentleman to take. If the Government have, is I think the Puiblic Accounts show, made these appropriations to these railway companies with the sanction of Parliament, and if a member of the Govermment has olbtained from these railway companies, from time to time, a part of the moneys so appropriatel, this House is entitled to know it. The country is entitled to know it, intinitely more than it was to know what Mr. Pacaud did with the money he received. If it is right and proper for a committee of the semate to enduire into the concluct of Mr. Pataud amd to ascertain what he did with the money, not from the treasury of the Dominion, lut from that of the Province of Quebec, certainly it is much more right and proper for a committee of this Honse to enquire into what the P'ostmaster General did with the Sillo, (OX) which he received from those railway companies, and which had leeen voted out of the public treasury. Why, Sir. a railway compung gets, 1 suppose, $88,(x)(0$ or sily. l'erhaps the next time they will give Soen (NM), if you grant them sol.(nn or sis,(KN) a mile more. Where is twe the limitations Where is tobe the restraint: The Minister of lustice says yon have no right to make an enpuiry here-. this is not the proper trihunal. We are the representatives of the people, who vote the people's money : and the law sity, the constitution sitys, the history of the country for three humbed yeats siys, that this is the sole tribumal to investigate the subject, and to asceltain what is done with the money. This House is the custorlian of the puhlic trasiary. The hom. gentleman who holds the public inomeys of this country is a mere agent of this House : and we have a right, to empuire, even thongh the enguiry should extend back to ISSO. If a charge of misapropriation of public moneys is made agitinst at man in public life, he is not fit to he there in charge of the public treasury. If he atvised the Crown to make these appropriations, and han an umlerstanling with one of the milway companies participating in them that these moneys or a portion of them shoull go to him, we ought to know it : we are entitled to know it: and, Sir, we are entitleid to know it by an investigation condneted hy this Hense, and combucted solely by this House. That leing so, this motion ought to be carried, and it will hee an admission that there is something wrong, that concealment is necessaty, if the proposition is coted lown. Hon. gentlemen opposite may cheer a dealaration that larliament has not a eontrol over these matters. They may undertake to saty that this a matter which onght to gro to the courts: but 1 say that the courts have no jurisiliction and a (ommission hatre no juristliction. The sole tribumal to whom the Ministers of the (rownare responsible is this Fialiament ; and when a charge is mate against a Minister of the Crown, an investigation oughtean he had in this Parliament. and in report made as to whether the charge is well foumbed or not.

Mr. OUIMIET. Mr. Speaker, the question now lefore the House is a rery importint one, and must le approached not with a partisan but with a judicial spirit. Perhaps I am not sutficiently master of the English language to Warrant me in taking part in this important debate. But as an hon. member of this House who is a colleague of mine is involver in the charges which have been made under the pretext of rindicating the dignity of the House, by which I believe it is intended to take away that hon. gentleman's honour, I think it is n:y duty to take part in the debate, and try to answer some of the arguments which have been adducerl. An hon. member of this House cun be deprived of his seat in the House only for something that would be considered dishonourable, for some act on his part that would canse him to be adjuigerl as unfit to sit with the members of this Honse. In the parliamentary history of England, we see that members have heen expelled from the Honse after, but only after, having been tried aml convicted for something ilishonourable, ow when they were fugitives from justice. Here the only charge made against the Postmaster (ieneral is that, while a member of the House, sabsidies were granted to a certain company, the Guehec:and Lake Ni. John Railway. It is not chatged that he was a member of the company. It is then charged that armagements had been made by that company with another company, aalled the construction company, of which the Postmaster dienemal is alleged to have been a member. It is charsed that he derived some personal protits ont of the money received by that construction company, It is charged then that during the elections of $18 S^{2}, 18 \mathrm{~S}_{\mathrm{F}}$, and 1801 , he received moneys from that company or from Mr. Beemer to assist him or his party in these elections. This is the whole charge. My contention is this: that to warrant an investigation against the Postmaster (ieneral he must be charged with some offence against the statutes or the unwritten lat of honour. He omedht to have heen charged with having conspiserl. before the sulsinlies were eranted, with the parties applying for then, to eret the subsidies, in onder to derive some benetit for himself. This is not charged. sulsequently, when he is said to have defived some protit out of the operations of that construction company, it ought to have been charged that he was a member of that company against the latw, and that these protits, if he ever made any, were made in an illegal or unlawful way. This is not charged. It is alleged that he received some money during the elections. Where is the offence in law that prevents a member of this Honse- -

Nome hon. MEMBFRS. Hear, hear.

Sr. OUIMETS Who is igmorat that money is required to carry on elections:
some hom. MFDBERS. Hear, hear.
Mr. OUIMEI. I have within the reach of my ege people who know it very well, and who have had a very hitter experience of it, and I know very well that I see before me hon. gentlemen in this House who would be very much embarrassed to explain where they got the bomeys required.

Some hon. MFMBERS. Name, name.

Mr. OLIMET. It is very well known that there is a legal use to be mate of money cluring elections as well as in any other cireumstances oí life. If the hon. Postmaster (ienemal received some money, it is not charged that he received it by misappropriating public funds of which he hat the disposal and control. As has been said, if that were the proposition, nobody on this side would defend it. It has been silid that we are defending Pacaud's course. What was the charge against him? The charge against Pacaud and the members of the Mercier Administration was that they had all conspired together in order to have the clispostal ot these subsidies, that they might, even lefore anything was done towarts the construction of that road, divite among themselves the money and apply it to illegal ends. Neither lacaul nor Mercier was condemmed because in this county or the other he was accused of having spent a few dollars. but because it was shown that during that trip to New York everything was arranged between the Premier of (hublec, the contractors ami Pacaud, to appropriate to themselves, in fact to steal, a part of the subsidy. It was because of this that the Liberal; or Nitional, (iovernment of Quebec were wiped out of existence. But here let the hon. member who has made this mastion do as the hon. Minister of Justice has challenged him to do. Let him prefet against the Postmaster General a detinite charge of having misappropriated the public moneys of which he was the trustee ; let him do so in a way as to submit himself to the conseguences which must be incurred by any member whomakes a false charge against a colleague, and we will be realy then to have an enquiry. But we are not going to appoint a committee to do husiness which ought to have heen done in the courts of justice after the elections of 1882,1857 and 1801 . It seems that the experience of hon. members opposite in the court of justice has not been favourable to them, and they ire not inclined to appear again before the courts. They prefer coming here to make a sweeping charge against one of the members of this House, so that they may, if they gret the chance to go before the Committee on Privileges and Elections, fish for evidence, and try to draw the Conservanive party in the mire. Fo sum up, in this long recital of facts there is not a specitic eharge, there is not a charge upon which could be foumled the trial of any citizen of this country, there is not acharge upon which you could bring any one hefore a tribunal of justice. We are ready to defend ourselves and ou: colleagues against accusations of misappropriation of funds : we are ready to defend them against all accusations of ats conilemned by the law, mot only by the law of the land but by the laws of honour, but we are not ready, at the behest of the hon. gentleman opposite. and on rague and general charges, to sulimit the whole party to investigation.
some hon. MEMBFRS. Hear, hear.
Mr. OUINFIT. We are not realy to suhmit to an enpuiry into everything done in the Province of Quelec in about twenty comaties ciuring the elections of 185 : : and I am contident the electors of this comntry will approve our position when we manfully stand up to prevent injustice being done to a member of this House. As I sail, let them come with a specific charge and we will be ready to meet them.

Mr. OBRIFN. I have listened with a very great deal of attention to what has heen said on both sides of the House on this very important matter, and I feel lound to admit that, upon groumds which perhaps it would hardly he fair to call techmical. hut which I think have been fairly sustained on the side of the Govermment and have not been met ly the Opposition, the Minister of Justice is justitied in saying that this motion, as it is now presented. is not one that ought to be sub. mitted to the Committee on Privileges and Elections; but, if I thought that this matter was to end there. and if I thought that some of the seatiments which have leen expressed on this side of the House were to be limbing upon this majority, I would sweep away all such objections and would say that this matter ought to be taken up in the manner proposed. Almitting for a moment the truth of the statements which have been made and which, I am happy to say, have heen so explicitly denied by the Postmaster (ieneral, we find this state of affairs existing. I will eall the attention of the Honse to the grounds upon which the Senate entered last year into the case of the Baie des Chaleurs Railway. The only justification, as I understand it. for their interference in the matter, was that that company had been supported by Dominion subsidies, and therefore the Dominion authorities had a right to investigate it. If that doctrine was true in that case, certainly this House would be justified in considering whether subsidies which it had given, and over which it had control, had been properly used hy the companies now under consideration. If the statements which have been made are true, there has been a gross and ontrageons violation of trust. Are these subsidies the personal property of these companies or of any persons forming part of these companies? Nothing of the kind. The subsidies were placed in the hands of these persons for a distinct purpose, for the hoilding of railways, and not for carrying elections. I sily that, assuming that this House, following the argument of the hon. the Dinister of Justice, thinks the question should not be referred to the Privileges and Elections Committee in its present form, the House should see that this matter does not end with that, for what conclusion can the comntry come to if they believe, and if experience shows that they are right in believing, that, although the question is refused to be dealt with in the manner proposed and upon grounds which the country' will certainly consider to be largely technical, that is to be the end of the business anl this House is to refuse to consider the matter because of these particular points which have been taken? I understand the distinction which has been made between the case referred to in Quebec and this case. I think the hon. gentleman who spoke last (Mr. Ouimet) put the question very fairly when he said that there wos a corrupt bargain made hetween the members of the (iovernment in Quehee and the parties who received the money before the money was granted; but on the broad and general ground that Parliament has a right to see to the proper appropriation of the money it gives to these persons, unt for their own personal lenetit hut for a public purpose, it is the duty of this House to investigate the matter and to see whether any such violation of a public trust has leen committed. What a commentary it is upon our system of subsidies if the public are led to helieve that subsidies are given to companies, not for the trust for which this Parliament intended to give that money, but in order that individuals, whether in the (iovermment or out of the Government, may use those funds for party purposes. It would certainly lead one to come to the conclusion -a conclusion to which I have come long agothat the sooner this system of railway subsidies is brought to an end the better. But we have been pursuing this system and have voted these moneys for certain purposes, and it is our duty to see that these moneys are properly applied. Now, if hon. gentlemen opposite, after all the lessons they have received to-day from the members of the Government, cannot frame their resolution in such a manner as to avoil the objections of the Minister of Justice, they are more stupid than I take them to be.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Will the hon. gentleman state what he conceives the objection to be?

Mr. O'BRIFN. One great objection to the re solution, I think, is its ragneness, and I think it may properly be contendel, as it has been by the Minister of Justice, that there is a distinction hetween one who is connected with the company using public funds, and one who is connected with the company simply as an intermediary, that there was a distinction to le drawn between the construction company and the railway company. There is no doubt that there is a distinction, but how much difference there is I do not say. There is a distinction which may justify the House in considering how far it shonld deal with this matter. But this should also be considered, that there is such a thing as an accessory after the fact as well as a conspirator before the fact, and, if it should $\mathrm{l}_{\mathrm{k}}$. made clear in dealing with the matter as we can deal with it, if some of these particular facts which are alleged are proved, I should see very little dif ference between the gentlemen who previously conspired to ohtain money out of the public fumbs. money which had been granted for a public purpose, and the gentleman who, after the funds had been granted, used his influence, either as a member of the House or as a member of the diovernment, to have these funds used for corrupt purposes.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I would suggest, as the hon. member for south Oxforl is alont to speak, that, with the unanimous consent of the House this delate might he continued after is oclock.
some hon. MEMBERS. No.
Sir JOHN THOMPsON. Of course we cammot do that without unanimous consent.

Sir RICHARD CAR'TWRIAHT. I am afmaid we cannot agree to that. We propose that this matter shall be very fully disenssed. For my own part I could have wished, for the credit of the Parlia ment of Canada, that the hon. Ministers who have delivered their opinions on this subject had preferred, instead of making the pitiable exhibition they have made of themselves, to order their followers to vote down this motion in silence. They would have done infinitely less discredit to the homour of Canada than by the arguments which for the first time in the history of the Canadian Parliament have been advanced by a man holding the responsible position of the Minister of Justice, to strive, in the teeth of every possible rule of law, of every possible principle of common sense, to convince us that the gravest offence which conld be committed by a Minister is one with which Parliament cammot deal. What in the name of wonder is it that $m y$ hon. friend heside me has charged the Postmaster General with? He has charged him in no rague language, but in tems, with being guilty of the most corrupt conspiracy, for the purpose of destroying the electoral liberties of the people of Canaila, of which any adviser of the Crown can le found guilty. That is the charge, mate not vaguely or indistinctly, but with every possible clearness and after every possible notice had been given :

[^39]sums of moneys were from time to time corruptly paid and contributed, at the request and with the knowledge of said Sir A, P. Camon, for election purposes, and to aid in the election to the House of Commons of the said Sir A. P. Caron, and other members and supporters of the fovernment of which he was a member, and that after some of such last-mentioned corrupt pasments and contributions were made, further and other subsidies were granted and paid to the said railway company by the Government of which Sir A. P. Caron was a member."
Sir, I say if that be not a grave offence and misalemeanour, if that be not an offence of which the high court of Parliament, and no other, is called upon to take cognizance, of which it is the expressed duty of larliament to take cognizance, for taking cognizance of which offences Parliament may be said, in the last degree, to exist, I say there is no such thing as an offence by a Minister against the constitution i" rirum "aturí. For my own gart I atm glad that the present (iovermment have at last threwn off all disguise, that we know now what we have to deal with. We have to deal with a ( iovernment by corruption, existing ly corrupt campaign funds got together by these corrupt means. What was the object for which this whole fraudulent system of railway subsidies was initiated? Sir, the subject has been iliscussed from time to time, and with just reason, by this side of the House: we have pointed out, in the first place, that the vast majority of the humbreds of subsidies which have been granted from year to year under pretense of being for the general benetit of this Dominion, were in terms a violation of the British North America Act, that they were grantel by the fovernment for the purpose either of corruptly intuencing intluential individuals, or particular constituencies, who had no right to be benefited out of the public treasury, or for the purpose of aiding friends of these identical sub. sidies in order to oltain corrupt means whereby to influence the electorate and keep these hon. gentlemen in their places. We know now that it was for that purpose the whole system originated. Now, sir, what is the charge? It is charged that for a number of years a series of corrupt acts have been committed by an influential member of the (iovermment : whether they were committed for his own personal or pecuniary adrantage, or whether they were committed for the advantage of the party of which he was a leabler and member. with the olject, as the Minister of Public Works particularly stated-because no other meaning could be attached to his words-of supplying the necessary funds for election purposes, should be the object of the committer to ascertain. That is the offence charged, amd if my hon. friend can make good his statements, it discloses ample evirlence of the existence of a great system of corruption of which this railway subsidy system is only one solitary branch.

It being six oclock, the Speaker left the Chair.

Bill (No. (il) to amem the North. West Territories Act. - (Mr. Dewiney.)

OBSERVANCE OF THE LORDS DAY.

Mr. CHARLTON moved that Bill (No. ?) to secure the better observance of the Lordes day, commonly called sumday. le read the second timie. He salid: The Bill now before the House is the same Bill reported ly the special committee last year, with a slight alteration. The hon. member for East Elgin (Mr. Ingram), who is a railroad man, suggested last year, when the Bill as reported from committee was under discussion, that permission to run one mail train a day on Sumblay was not necessary, because no railwiy in Camada was munning a mail train, and that change has been made. Permission to rum a mail train has been withdawn from the Bill, and with that exception the Bill is as it was reported last year from the select committee. The Bill when referred to the select committee and brought under their consideration. was considerably changed. A number of sections were expunged, sections that were held by members of the committee to come more properly under the jurisdiction of provincial anthority, and the Bill as reported by the select committee and now presented to the House for a secomd reading. provides for the closing of canals on Sunday from the hour of 6 in the morning until the hour of 10 in the evening, with the proviso that this provision may be set aside by Order in Council after lith October in each year. Some criticism has heen indulged in by those in favour of the observance of the Sablath in regard to this concession. It has been asserted that the case has been given away by not insisting on closing the camals for the contire of homs. However, the committer felt that if the canals were closed from (isclock in the morning till 10 ) oclock at night, trattic on the camals would not interfere with the quiet of the Sunday, and with the chance to attend religions ordinances on the part of emploves, and the permission to have the camals open from 10 p.1m. In 6 a.m. Wats one that would not serionsly interfere with the enforcement of the principle of Smmarrest. Amb so thesection withrespect tocanals is dranion in this way. IVith respect to the provision permitting the disiernor in (omncil to set aside the previsions of the Bill after lith Octoler, strong representations were mate as to the injury that misht result the navigation interests of the conntry. near the elose of nivigation, by closing the athals when such might result in disastrous conse. - fuenees to vessels secking winter quarters. It wats the belief of the committee that the Bill with these provisions would prove to be a satisfactory one.

The tirst section is one relating to smmaty newspapers. This. 1 may say is perhapsthempy section of the bill on which members of the committee hats domhts as to its propriety as a part of a latw enacted by the ramathan latliament. The section is as fillow: :
"Wherer thall ow the lards das, "ither as a poprietor, pablisher or manager, engage in the printing, publication or delivery of a newsinaper, journal or periodfual. anll whever shatl on the hords day engage in the sale. distribution or circulation of ans newspaper, journal or periodical shall be deemed to be guilt $y$ of a misdemeanour: Provided, however, that necessary office work may be pertormed after wine oclock in the evening of the hords dias. for the purpose of facilitating the publication of the Monday morning isace of ay daily newspaper."
It was arghed that this matter in regatel to sumday newspapers might more properly he dealt with by leovinctial lagishatures. It was urged, on the other hamel. that the Dominion Patliament hats conten of all questions in regard to the importattion of printed matter into this commery that it has control of the copyright guestion, and the control, in at gencral sense, of the publication yuestion, and it was felt to be in the highest degree desirable that ally brovision with respect to Sumbay news. papers should be a miform provision throughout the Dominion. For that reason this section has been retained, amb is presented to the Honse on its merits, and 1 hope the Holste, in view of all the circumstances, will deem the matter of sufficient inportance to warrant the aloption of this provision. I may sily with regard to this yuestion that in so far as this provision will come in contlict with the importation of American Smaday newspapers. our newspipur puhbishers find the present lativ to he a grievance to themselves, and to be a matter that interferes with their business. That is the case, for instance, at Windsor. There are two newspapers pmblished there. The letroit Sunday newspapers are brought in and sold there, and hesides their demomalizing influence on the commmaty, they have a temdency to depress the business of the newspapers published in that town. Wherever we have towns on the border where newspapers are published, the same ditficulty arises. It is needless to say the publication of the sumday newspapers is a demoratiaing agency of the gravest character. In the United itates, perhaps, nothing has had so potent an influence in the secularization of the Sabhath, amel in the hreating down of religions restraint, amd in making the Sibhath, instead of being a day of rest, a day with all the characteristies of any other day, as the Sumlay newspaper, which is sent by special steamers, special trains, special coaches all wer the country, which is hawked about the streets, and whicin interferes with the quiet of the day, with religious olservances, and which temds to keep the minds of those who read it in the ordinary rut of week-lay oceupation. The Minsister of Jusilice, last session, I believe, expressed himself as having no doubt its to the power of Parliament to pass this Bill as reported by the committere. I do not know that the hon. genteman save any orimon as to its propriety or alvisability, but, if $1: a$ not mistaken. he expressed himself at leeing of the opinion that poner was vested in the House to pass the bill ats presented.
Section 3 relates $t o$ malway tratfic, and it is a matter in which the Ninister of Railways will be specially interested. I maly say with regard to this section, that lhave insited the opinions and criticisms of ralway manarers thoogrhout the comutry. I have han commmoliattions from various managers. I hate incorporated in this section some suggestions of sir . Ioseph Hicksom. I will real the section ans it stamls in the Bill. and point out the prowisions that were shegrested liy the gentleman for wom I have alluded. The section reats :

- Any railway superintendent, traffic manager or person by virtue of whose authority and command railway ears or traine are on the Inonls day loaded at any ralway station in Camada, or despatehed froms such station when loaded or permitted to continue a journey (excep: in the case of live stock and perishable goods) with Canadian local freight,-or any person as aforesaid whe directs local masenger trains to he run on the Lords day (excent one milk train on each road)."
The following provision in the Bill wats surgested hesir Joseph Hickson:--
" And such special trains as are necessary for the purpose of conceving medical aid and means of relief in case's of accident, or to persons injured or athicted with sichnese or of conveging persons to visit dying relations. or for the purpose of conveving the means for extinguishing fire to places requiring such assistance, or for other ater of necessity and mercy, or directs empty cars to be moved from station tostation within the territory of Canada, shall be deemed to be guilt of a misdemeanour: but through passengers trains each way, with their necessary commections. shall be permitted on any trum line of Camada.

Mr. BoWELLL. What is meant by the works "when londed, or permitted to continue a jommey"? Does it mean that a railway train coming acooss the border will be stopped at the border:

Mr. (HARITON. It does not interfere with through trattic: It refers to local tatfic entirely.

Mr. BOWELL. Then, if a car leaves Windsor Saturday night, it could not continue its journey after twelve odlock?

Mr. (CHARLTON. Ves: if it is a tain tamsported on sumblay across the river.

Mr. BOWELL. I mean a local tram, leaving Wimdsor for Montreal.

Mr. CHARLTON. It would not be permitted to continue its journey. It would have to stop at 12 oclock. The frients of sabhath ohservance are somewhat dissatistied with the provisions of section 3. It is clamed by them that the permission to run through pasienger trains-aml there is no restriction in that matter and necessarily camot be-will interfere withthe etficiency of the measure.

For instance in the case of the Camandian lacific Railway it despatches one train each way from Montreal and laneourer on each day of the week except sunday. But other trains are necessarily proceeding over some part of the line on the lords day. On some part of the line there are probably ten through passenger trains raming on the Lords day. It was fom impossible to regolate this matter, and permision has been given in the bill to despatch and ran through passenger trains with their necessary comections. With regard to through freight, it was found in examining the question that it would be almost imposilhe to prevent the forwarding of such freight, hecause they are necersarily in competition with the Aneriam lines, such as the lake shore road south of Lake Erie, the Pemsylvania system, and the Baltimore and Ohiosystem: and in taking freight at Chicago for delivery in New York or Boston, if our own roads are unable to tramsport the freight on the Siblath, they would be placed at $2 t$ hours disadvantage in the delivery of their freight, aml it would be a rery serions matter to them in com. peting for business.

Mr. BoWELLA. It is nome the less wicket, is it ?

Mr. CHARLTON. I suppone it is none the less wicked, but practical consideration led us to think that we must look upon this matter as a matter of necessity in the case of these roals, and we make a provision in sulbection 2 and throw the onns on the American (iowerment. Subsection 2 says:
"At such time as the lams of the limed states shall make corresmonding provision, no through freight in transit from one point on the frontier of the Enited States to some other puint on the suid "rontier shall be allowed to mass over canadian romde on the Lord's day, except live stock and perishable gomids."
As som at the American Covermment will make a provision to prohibit the tramsportation of freight on the Loml's das, then this bill makes a corresponding provision: but until that is done we felt it wombld place our railroads at such a great disadrantage in competing for business, that it could not in justice to them le done. This is the section with regard to railway transportation, a section which I assume is sitisfactory to the railway managers, becatuse it has been placed hefore thein for criticism, and the sugsestions of Sir boseph Hickson with regard to the matter have been ade cepted and embondied in the Bill.

Section 4 of the bill says:

"Excusions upon the Lard's day by steamboats plying for bire or by railway, or in part hy stemboat and in part hy milway, and having for their only or principal object the carriage of passengers for amusement or pleasure, and to go and return the same day by the same steambayt or railway or any others owned by the same person or company, shall not be deemed a lawful conveying of passengers within the meaning of this Aet : and the owner, superintendent or person hy virtue of whose authority and direotion such exoursion is permitted or ordered on the Lord's day: shall be deemed to be guilty of a misdemeanour: Provided that nothing iu this seotion shall be deemed to prohibit the ordiants, ,arriage of passengers anthorized by provincial statute."
These, Mr. Speaker, are the provisious of the Bill: first, the provision with regard to Smalay newspapers, second the provision with regard to the closing of the camals from 6 in the morning until 10 oclock at night on Sumdays except that an Orter in Comeil may set that provision aside after the 15th of October. Third, the provision with regard to railway tratic which necessarily has been confined, so far as the restrictice chatacter is comentat, to local trattic. It permits the operation of though trathe ats at present and he despatching of through trains on the ground of necessit. The fourd pro. تision of the bill is with regaril to steambonat amb railway excursions om Sumbas. These are the fom stibjects dealt with by this fill ats reported by the committer, with the exception that mat mains which wete permitted in the Bill have heen stricken ont, on the suggestion of the hom. member for Eist Elgin (Mr. Ingram) who is haself a malmand mant.

Mr. Boll Elal. Combl son inform the House what the provincial stathte is in reference to the fourth clatuse
Mr. CHARITON. In Ontario it is the same as the provision in this Bill. The wher sections of the bill which 1 now propose are merely sections introduced for the purpuse of making the Bill oper ative. Sow. Mr. Speaker. 1 suppase there ean lne no question as to the peneer of this House to lagis late in this directim. We wete informed by the Minister of Iustice hast sessim that the prower rested with this Honse. This Pathiament has. of course, pawer to enact that there shall he holidass establisherd. It has establisheid he lat of duly atind the Oth May ats holidays, and it can evtemid that power ly dacting that wery serenth day shath be a civil day of rest. This anihunty taken loy legis. latures to establish the sabhath rest is an anthority which is of course hased on a higher law. It re cognizes religions usages, and the authority rests. upon the devlanation made in fiensis, Pad chapter. Brd verse, when donl set aside the serenth as a diag of rest. It was re-established when the declamation was published on Mormi Sinai he the funath reme mandment, when it was said: "six days shath thon lakner and fore all the work. hin the seventh is the Sablath of the loom thy tion : in it thom shate not do amy work." bint the setting apart of the seventh dey for rest is mot ancted hy dewem. ment umon religions gromme. It is enacted as a civil ortinatuce for the puppose of securing rivil and tempomal athantage to the sulbects of the door. ermment, and while the authority tondserve the day. rests upon a higher commandmeme. the anthority is mot necessurily an anthority exercised for the purpese of securine religions observances. In tant that is not the ohiget of the exercise of this authority, because the state deals with it as a civil question. The lambment of (amata is ankerl by this bill to deal with this guestion ats a civil guestion, and mot as a religgoms matter at all. It is a ciril question, because the Bill proposes to secure a day of rest for samitary reasms. it proposes to secure in day of rest for intellectual amil for moral reasoms. The setting apart of every secouth day as a day of rest has a temdency to leal to intellectual aisancement. It gives the lejswe necessary for stuly, it gives the leisure necessary for attending divine worship, it gives the leisure necessary for attending sunday selowls, it gives the leisure neeessary for securing the adrantages of educational intluences, and so, the day may he set apart as a civil holiday for intellectual and momal reasons as it is. Then it is set apart for the purpose of securing the heath and happiness and the prosperity of the people living under the dovemment by which this provision is made, and it is set apatit to secure protection in the rights of constience, freedom to worship Ciond and keep his commandments, as the person who enjons the privileges of the day of rest may wish to ik. It does not force religious ohservances upon the people. Int it puts a person who wishes to enjoy religions principles in a position where he call enjoy them. withont heing forced to work, perhaps comtrary to the dictates of his conscience; ats he might be forced un in if no such provision existed on the statute-hook. It is, therefore, in this commection. a civil provision, made for a landable and necessary purpose, in behalf of the best interests of the people.

It would not ilo, Mr. Speaker, to suggest that civil -overmments have nothing to do with that portion of the ohd Mosatic law, the Ten (ommandments. A portion of these commandments relate toman's moral state and religious or moral laty. The first commambment does, in forbidding him to have any other fiod hut the true fiol: the secomb commandment. does. which forbids him to be guilty of idolatry : the thial commenhment relates to his moral state and his duty to his dod in forbideling profanity: the fifth commandment does becanse it inculcates tilab obedience: the tenth commandment does, heciluse it forbinls covetousness. These tive commamments the civil law has nothing to do with: fiey relate to man's duty to a higher power. But there are five others of these eommamhments which lawmakers are obliged to take cosnizance of, and must supplement with human laws. The fourth commandment, providing for at day of rest, although resting on religions atuthority. is one of those commamlments, and the dowermment is the power ordained by the higher power to provide lans to carry it into effect. So with the erommamlment. which forbids murder. It would not do to say that that commamdment must be left for its enforcement to the ecclesiastical allhorities, and that the secular anthority must not step in and supplement it with a law forbidhing murler and providing for its punishment. The steventh commambment forbinds offences against dhastity. hut it would not do to saty that the diovermment must never enforce that law or supplement it. The eighth commandment forbink theft, and what (iovermment would refuse to make provision against stealing and for its punishment. The nintli commandment forbids the crime of perjuy and the civil law steps in and provides the pronishment. All these commandments, the fomblh. the sixth, the seventin, the eighth and the minth forbin practices with regard to which setalat law must step in and supplement ecelesiastical anthority, movilling machinery for the pminhment of infractions of these laws. Amil this fourth commandment strikes me as heing one the rnforement of which, liy the civil authority, is just as essential to man's well-lueing as the provisions on the statute-book with regari to muraler, offences agrainst chastity, theit or perjury.

I may he asked whether we have any precedents in British history for the enactment of a law such as the one presented to this House to-night. I wonhl answer that we have not one only, but a great number of them. As early as b3.it the British Parliament under Edward III, enacted laws for securing Sabbath whertiance. That law was amended and its provisions extended in 135s, again in 1428, again in 1464, again in lioie, again under Elizabeth in loss, again under Charles I in 1625, again under Charles II in 1661 , and again in 1839 . I doubt whether there is a single English colony which has not laws with regard to sabbath observance. I believe there is only one of the 44 states of the American Union, the State of California, which has not laws with regard to Sumday rest and olsservance. Now, it may he enduired who desires this law, and what classes of individuals are likely to be henefited by it $\%$ I would answer that so far as I have been able to learn, all labour organizations desire this law. Perhaps I may le permitted to give the utterances of some of the leaders of these organizations to back up the assertion 1 make. I gave them last year, and 1 will repeat them from last year's Hansart. Henry (ieorge satys:
"I believe the institution of the Sabbath is one of the greatest benefits that the human race ever had. I believe in the strict enforcement of the law that prevents servile labour being carried on on the seventh das."
P. M. Arthur, the chief of the locomotive engineers, expresses himself thus:

- I am in favour of any movement looking to the abolishment of all Sunday labour other than works of mercy and necessity. It has been repeatedly demonstrated beyond a question or doubt that all Sunday trafic upon railways can be dispensed with without any detriment or injury to the interest of the railway companies. Had I the authority, I would not allow a wheel to be turned between 120'clock Saturday night and 10'clock Sunday night."
Mr. 'I. V. Powderly, chief of the Knights of Labour, makes this observation :
"I believe in Sunday rest. So do the Knights of Tabour." The Committee of the American Federation of Labour, at its session at Sit. Louis in December. 1888, alopted the following resolution:
"Resolved, that the American Federation of Labour is in hearty sympathy with any movement inaugurated by the American Sabbaith Union, the object of which is to lessen the burden of those who toil."
The Brotherhool of Railway Brakesmen and Locomotive Firemen, in July, 188!, passed the following resolution :-
"Whereas the Sabbath was ordained for man; and whereas all history shows the best state of suciety and the highest and best civilization when the hours of the Sabbath were devoted to rest and relief from labour; therefore, be it resolved that we, as railway employes, ask of the general public to forego Sunday travel on railways and the demanding or requiring managers of railways to run Sunday trains for freight traffic. to the end that we, who are willing to give six days and nights of our time to the faithful service of the public and to our employers, may have the hours of the sabbath with our familles at command for the great good and comfort to ourselves from being at home with our families, and for church, Sabbath sehool and other privileges the Sabbath is designed to bring to us."
These expressions show clearly that the labourer is alive to the importance, as regards his own interest, of having secured to him hy law the enjoyment of his sumbay rest. It is needless to say that every Protestant church in Canada, with the possible exception of the Seventh Day Baptists, is in favour of a sumday rest latw. There is a great degree of unanimity on the part of eminent jarists, as to the resirability of the enactment of laws to secure to the labourer the Sunday rest. Daniel Welster made use of this languige:

"The obscrvance of the Sabbath is the bulwark of iberty, because it is the bulwark of morality."

The Commissioners of the British House of Commons charged with the examination of this sulbject in 1833, in their report. statel as follows:-
"It appears in evidence that in each trade, in proportion to its disregard of the Lord's das, is the immorality of those engraced in it."
Chicf Justice Field, Judge Thurman, Chief Justice Hale, such men as Gladstone, D'Israeli, Shaftsbury, Argyle, Bright, Lincoln and Garfield have pronounced in favour of Sunday Observance and Sunday Rest Bills. Perhaps, I may be permitted to give the deliverance of one or two of the jurists I have named in reference to this matter. I will quote the language of Chief Justice Field, of the United States Supreme Court, an authority of great respectalility :
". The Sabbath laws ure not so much for those who can choose their time for rest, as for the protection of labour against capital, for the defence of labour's natural right to a freekly rest dus. The Lord's day is also the people's duy:

Laws setting aside Sunday as a day of rest are upheld, not from any right of the Government to legislate for the promotion of religious observances, but from its right to protect all persons from the physioal and moral debasement which comes from uninterrupted labour. Such laws have always been deemed beneficent and merciful laws, especially to the poor and dependent, to the.labourers in our factories and workshops, and in the heated rooms of our cities; and their validity has been sustained by the highest courts of the state.'
Julge Thurman, of Ohio, has expressed himself as follows:-
" All igree that to the well-being of society periods of rest are absolutely necessary. To be productive of the required advantage these periods must occur at stated intervals, so that the mass of which the community is composed may enjoy a respite from labour at the same time. They may be established by common consent, or, as is conceded, the legislative power of the State may without impropriety interfere to fix the time of their stated return, and enforce obedience to the direction. When this happens some oue must be selected, and it has been said the round of the week presents none which, being preferred might not be regarded as favouring some one of the mumerous sect. into whieh mankind are divided. In a Christian community, where a very large majority of the people celebrate the first day of the week as their chosen period of rest from labour, it is not surprising that that day should have received the legislative sanction. ind, as it is also devoted to religious services, we are prepared to estimate the reason why the statute should speak of it as the Lord's day, and denominate the infraction of its legalized rest is profanation. Yet this does not change the character of the enactment. It is still essentially but a civil regulation."
Now, I have given here the opinions of the leaders of the latuour orgaizations, the opinions of the jurists, the fact that the Protestant churches of this country and of all cometries where Protestant churches exist, are in favour of Sablath obsersance. Sow, I proceed to present what, perhaps, is the most important of the authorities I have to preseut to-night, and I solicit for the quotations I am ahout tr make the attention of my French-speaking friends, both Literal and Conservative, in this House. I am aware some degree of opposition has been manifested towards this Bill by gentlemen from the Province of Quebec, and I think, perhiops, they may find fool for reflection in the quotations I am about to read. I am sure they will respect the authorities I shall quote. I shail quote n:terances of His Holiness Pope Leo XIII, Cardinal Taschereau, Archbishop Fabre, the Bishop of Buttalo, Cardinal McCloskey and Cardinal (iibbons. Pope Leo XIII says:

[^40]being of human life. This law, we say, touches not only individuals, but also people and nations, which owe to Divine Providence the enjoynent of every benefit and advantage which is derived from civil society. And it is precisely to this tatal tendency, which to-day prevails to desire to lead mankind far away from God, and to order the affairs of kingdoms and nations as if God did not exist, that to-day is to be attributed this contempt and neglect of the day of the Lord. They say, it is true, that they intend in this way to promote industry more actively, and to procure for the people an increase of prosperity and riches. Foolish and lying words! They mean, on the contrary, to take away from the people the comforts, the consolations and the benefits of religion : they wish to weaken in them the sentiment of faith and love for heavenly blessings; and they invoke upon the nations the most tremendous scourges of God, the just avenger of His outraged honour."
If anything could be more emphatically calculated to endorse the position this Bill takes as regards the necessity for Sunday rest than the language of his Holiness Pope Leo XIII, I have not found it in all the range of sabbath literature with regard to the observiance of the Lord's day. The next deliverance I will read is from Cardinal Tascherean, who said on the bith of April, Isso
"We mean, O dearly beloved brethren, those pleasure excursions made on sundays and feasts of obligation, on steamers, on the railway, and sometimes in a long train of rehicles. Experience proves that theygive rise to such disorders of intemperance and immorility that we feel obliged to prohibit absolutely, and under pain of mortal sin, pleasure excursions on Sumdays and feasts of obligation. * * Wherefore having invoked the holy mame of God, we rule and ordain as follows:-1st. We forbid under pain of grievous sin, the faithful of this diocese, to take part, on Sundays or teasts. in pleasure excursions, on railways, on steamers, or in rehicles, even when the profit of those excursions is intended for a good work. It is not our intention. however, to condemn the pilgrimages made on those days, provided recollection, piety, and good order be observed,;
Then Archhishop Fabre has phated himself on record as follows:-
"After mentioning the duty devolving upon him to protect the spiritual interests of his flack, the Arehbishop quotes the commandment which makes the due observance of the Sabbath a divine law and mentions the chastisements referred to in Leviticus for the transgressors of this precept. The letter thengoes on to siay that the Sunday rest dues not mean idleness, but pusitive acts of worship towards God, and adds that it to idleness are added profine and dangerous amusements, then (iod is most seriously offended and His wrath is aroused against man Further on, the Archbishop refers to certain abuses which have been introducing themselves in our midst, and says: We denounce again and absolutely condenn the clandestine liquor traffic on Sundays, the entering of taverns, and the more or less numerous gatherings in which young men and fathers of families, victims of the gambling passion, pass long hours, forgetful of their duties. their souls, their God, and exposing themselves, besides, to lose their peace of conscience and their honour. We forbid, in the same manner, on Sundays, those pic-nics and pleasure excursions, organized for the prblic for speculative purposes, and which, as experience shows, are nearlv always oceasions of debuuchery, drunkenness, altercations and licentious conversations. We particularly deplore that kind of amusement recently introduced into this city of Montreal, in which by announcing inoffensive concerts and promenades, the crowd are invited, by lavish advertisements, to throng to a public place, to witness dances, perilous feats, and performances contrary to morals, in a word, what is seen in the lenst molest circuses. Not only have those sights been unscrupulously given on Sundays and holidays, but eren during divine service hours, so as to keep the people away from churches, and make them lose all spirit of meditation. It is time to oppose these disorders by the check of a formal prohibition, which has for its motive the sanctity of the Sabbath, and the obligation which rests with us to wateh over the preservation of public morals.'
Here are three deliverances, two by prelates of the Province of Quebec and one by His Holiness the Pope. Now I want to quote three atterances from Catholic prelates in the Linited states. The first is from the Bishop of Buffalo, whogives the follow ing charge :-
-. ' Remember thou keep holy the Sabbath day,' is God's own command. * We must not only rest from all umnecessary servile work, but we must hear massand spend the day-or, at least, a goonl part of it-in the service of God and refigions duties. * Ours is not, as we have said. a Jewish or a puritanical Sabbath, nor do we measure its ohligatory observance by a sectarian standard or any American or national idea; yet we wuald be sorry to see the respect in which our separate brethren bold the Lurd's day weakened or discredited. God grant that we may never see the sunday profaned here in our own comintry as we have seen it in other lands." Cardinal Me('loskey in 1882 said as follows :-
" We wholly denounce and absolutely forbid excursions or pie-nies ousundays. or after dark, all mooulight excursions, athd all Sunday pie-nics.and we exhort our good peonle who love their church to abstain from any participation in such scandalous, unballowed and disgracenul practices, amd to useall their influence to suppress them."
Cardinal ( ibbons, in 1888, mate this deliverance in reply to a letter which was written to him by the Rev. Mr. Crafts:
"Mr. DFar su,-I have to acknowledge vour estemed farour of the lst instant, in reference to the proposed pasarge of a law by Congress against Sunday work in the Ciorernment mail and military services, dic. I am most happy to add my name to those of the millions of others who are contending against the violation of the christian Sabbath by unnecessary labour. and who are endeavouring to promote its decent and proper observance by legitimate legislation. As the late Plenary Council of Baltimore has declared, the due observance of the Lord's day contributes immeasurably to the restriction of vice and immoratity, and to the promotion of peace, religion and social urder, and cannot fatil to draw upon the nation the blessing and protection of an over-ruling Providence. It benevolence to the beasts of buriden sirected one days rest in erery week under the old law, surely humanity to man ought to dictate the same measure of rest under the new law."
Now, Mr. Speaker, if anything can be more convincing, more satisfactory, more ummistakable than those deliverances from the Catholie prelates and from the head of the Catholic church, from the head of that church in Quelee and from the cardinals on this continent, I have failed to tind it, and, if any (atholic can find any groumd for acting contrays to that, his view of hiscluty is different from my view. An hon. gentleman says I am very kiun, but I am justifying this loy the authority of Catholic prelates whose anthority camot be puestioned hy those who believe in their supremacy. The labour organizations are strongly in favour of this measure, the Protestant churches are also in favour of it, the Roman Catholic Chureh, if it is properly voiced by its prelates and cardinals, is in favour of it, eminent jurists favour it, and I think reason farours it.

It may he asked, not withstanding all these authorities, are sunday laws consistent with human liberty and human rights: can you properly pat a law on the Statute-book which will interfere with haman right and human liberty? I answer that laws are necessary to restrain human passion, and that liberty is one thing and license is another. Yoy must restrain license in order to promote liberty. Although a law in regard to the public health may interfere With the license which would otherwise be granted to a man, it is necessary in the inteiests of liberty, and a law for Sabbath observance will promote the public health. Laws which promote pullic morals may interfere with the action of some men, but they will promote morality and will promote human liberty. We have to compare the condition of affairs in lands where the Sabbath is observed and that in lands where the Sabinath is not ohserved, and we will find that the morals in those lames that observe the Nabbath are far letter than in the lands that do not. Then, the Sabbath rest is an educational agency. It is not in accomdance with liberty that it child should he compelled to go to schobl. In many cases the State steps in and supplements the duty of the parent in this respect, but the Sahbath rest gives anopportumity to elucate the child. aml thus it becomes an educattional agency. The churd ame the Sabbath sehools are educational agencies of the greatest importance, amb, if a law securing the observance of the Lomes day secures these eflucational agencies, it is consisient with every principle of human liberty. Then the sablath liaw is consomant with liberty, hecalluse it protects amd hlesses the home. There is no reason why nations shonh rise and fall or empires should come and go except that morality is not properly olserved and that people fall into licentionsiness and become debased. There is no reason why a nation should mot exist for ever if it obeys dion and keeps his commandments. including that with respect to the sabliath: and and law that proterts the home, that give purity to the home, the reve fromiation of sonciety, the very fomdation of state, is a law that does not interfere with human liberty. Then it is consistent with the principles of human linerty becamse it is calealated to prevent erime. So other atremey is su potent as this in the prevention of crime Ansthing that will prevent erime. that will make society purer, that will lessen the necersity for gaols amd the necessity for criminal legislation. any agency that will ilo this, is an arency workinge in the highest sense for homan liberty and haman well-being. All these things: it law of sahbath observance, a law provinling for the respect of the Sablath, and for a weekly day of rest, will accom. plish. It ministers the highent needs, the highest wants, the highest purposes. allid the highest good of the state and of the nation. Then it is a law comsistent with the principles of human liberty, becanse it promotes the prosperity of the individual and the prosperity of the state. Nothing can be cleaver than that the fiom-fearing. honest. soler, industrions man is more likely to he a prosperous and self-respeeting eitizen than a man who is brought up mater the influence of Sabhath desecration with all the attendant eiremmstances of vicious compray. drinking. $\mathbb{d e}$ : aml in this respect. as well as in others. it is consistent. with the highest principles of human liberty. Ond King David himself has expressed the truth in a few words when he said: "In the keeping of thy statutes there is great reward." There is great reward to a nation, there is great reward to society. there is great reward to every individual in the observance of these commandments that hate come down to us with the authority of (iod. They are calculated to benetit humanity : and the hest momal condition of a people and their inhustrial pros. perity are always found to be inseparable. Compate England, Canaila and United Ntates, with such countries as the Sonth American States, with Mexico, or Italy, or Russia, or Turkey, and this assertion is borne out.

And now, Sir, with regard to the economic conditions surrounding and attending upon this question. Now, labour organizations have striven for the mitigation of the demands of the emphoyers in seeking for a ten-hour law, and they have obtained it. They are now demanding that eight hours shall constitute a day's work; 1 suppose they think that would be a boon to the lalourer, and no doubt it will, if it is gramted. Now, 1 would ask if six days out of seven for labour is not a boon to the lahourer, instead of seven days out of seven.

Mr. AMIOT. What about the Jews?

Mr. (harlton. Well, Moses was the first labour reformer. The Jews went down into the land of Egypt and they had no Sundays there: they had not only to make brick without straw, but to work seven days in every week; and when Moses led them out of the land of Egypt and promulgated the law from sinai, he enacted the first great lahour reform when he said: "Six days shalt thon labour and do all thy work, but the serenth day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy cion. In it thou shalt not do any work."

Mr. AMYOT. That is not an answer.
Mr. CHARLTON. Yes, it is a perfect answer. Now, sunday labonr, looking at it in its economic aspect, means over-production, and it means lower pay for the labourer. An attack upon Sunday rest is an attack upon labour. Sumlay is the poor mans day. Paley, who is an old authority, says:
"The addition of the seventh day of labour to that of the other six, will have no other effect than to reduce the price.
John stuart Mill, who was not troubled very much with the religions aspect of this question, says:

[^41]There is no doubt about it. Sumday labour proves the employers greed, and it provesthat the labourer is a rassial, because the lahourer never willingly latomes the seventh day, especially if he understants that the result of that system of labour is over-production and a reluction of pay. Now, public sentiment may be all right on the labour question, all right on the Sunday rest question, this sentiment may be all right as we tind it is in this comutry: but this is not sufficient umless it is backed up by legal enactment, because the power of capitail, the tendency of capital, the necessities of the labourers, put in the hands of the capitalist a power that must be restrained by legishative enactments. or the lahourer is placed, in a sense, at his mercy. Now, as regards Sunday railway labour, over 40 railway superintendents of the United States have declared that Sunday railuay labour is umecessary; but the difficulty with them is that one camot act independently of the other, there has got to be concert of action, and as concert of action camot be securen, the only thing that will provide a remedy is legislative enactment. If legislative enactment existed in this respect why, then, the matter could be arranged. Now, I have here the report of the Committee of the Senate of the United States, in 1889, on the Sunday Rest Bill. Various parties were exanined by this committee, and this report furnishes a vast amount of useful information bearing upon this question. The Railway Ale of Chicago, in an editorial with reference to a letter written by Mr. Ledyard, Superintendent of the Michigan Central System, remarks :
" Mr. Ledyard" conviction that he and other railway managers are all commititing a fearful mistake in allowing the continuance and rapid grouth of this Sunday labour is held, we believe, by the great majority of railway officers, and it is to be hoped that in their perusal and public consideration of the great problems of railway management they will give that serious, attention to this subject which its imporance demands."
General A.S. Diven, who has heen superintendent of the Railway Erie System, in Jamary, 1888, said :
" (1.) The traffic will be substantially the same per week Whether moved in one hundred and sixty-eight or one hundred and forty-four hours. ('That is in seven days or six.) $\therefore$ (2.) It ean be moved in one hundred and fort $y$-four hours.
"(3.) The extra cost will be fully compensated for by the improved service.
" (4, ) There is no public necessity requiring Sunday service.:
In a recent letter this same authority says:
"There is no validexcuse for railroad traffic on Sunday, either for mails, passengers, or freight. Why should not traffic on our railroads rest with all the other business activities? None of the other great interestsare paralyzed by resting one day in seven, nor would any follow the suspension of raitroad traftic. Is the transmission of mails a necessity? The best and most successful business men I have ever known never open their letters on Sumbay. If there ever was a necessity for the Sunday nail service, it ceased with the telegram. If ever there was a necessity for moving perishable articles on Sunday, it has been removed by the refrigerator car. My article in the chrietion Uriom was intended as a challenge to railroad managers to justify their management. When that challenge is accepted thelieve it, ean be successfully met by men of practical experience."
Hon. Carroll D. Wright, who is a very high anthority on the labour question and Commissioner of Lahour Statistics in the United States, says that the only tailroal men who want to have work done on sunday are those who do not the work but only pocket the dividends. With respect to this question of sumday observance, we all know what is the character of a continental sumday. But it is a remarkable fact that on this subject a reaction has manifested itself in a very marked manner in Europe. There is a reaction in regard to sumday rest in Cermany, Austro-Hungary, Italy, Belgimm, Holland, France and even Russia. In 1885, Aus-tro-Hungary enacted a law which emancipated toilers from sumday work. In 1876, after the Swiss commissioners had visited the Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia, they pointed out, on their return, the great idnantage American labourers derived from alstinence from work one day in seren, as a day of rest, and they attributed to that the adrantage possessel by American lalourers in ingenuity, energy and ability to perform a great amount of work in a given number of hours, and they strongly urged on their fellow-countrymen the propriety of aulopting the sunday rest measure in force in the United States. In 1886, a thousand carpenters petitioned Bismarck in respect to Sunday rest, and an extract from their petition will, I think, be of interest. It is as follows :--

[^42] ingmen have, in order to prevent an infringement with respect to Sunday rest, opposed the opening of the British museum, or places of amusement. If we are in this country to adopt a free continental Sunday, the result will be disastrous.

Some hon. MFMBFRS. Oh, oh.
Mr. CHARLTON. This may not be a matter of great importance to hom. members in this Honse, but it is a matter of importance to the twiler, and to the future of this country, and the treating of this question with levity by men who are called upon to deal with it in the public interest is not seemly. What is the character of the free continental sunday ! It is free from rest, free from religious influences, free from elevating, moral, social influences, free from mental culture, free for the employer to keep the employe at work like a slave seven days in every week. But so far as true freedom is concerned, the true interests of the people, a free Sunday is in no sense desirable.
I will conclude my remarks by making a brief reference to Sunday excursions, whish are dealt with in clause 2 of the Bill. The argument is presented that under this Bill the poor toiler of the city will he unable to get country air unless permitted to go out on a Sunday excursion, and that it is for his physical well-being that he be permitted to do so, The truth is that the tendency of Sunday excursions is just the reverse of restful, that they tend to impair the moral and physical well-heing of the labourer. The Sunday excursion in San Francisco has been discontinued by the railways as a nuisance. The California hoodlum pic-nics terrorize the suburbs; men and women in a condition of drankenness return at night on the trains with the lights turned down. This is the character of Sunday excursions in San Francisco. They are dehasing, temoralizing, and in nine cases out of ten. instead of causing Sunday to he a day of rest. Monday is required to recover from the consequences of sumday. The Catholic sugar planters of Louisiana in 1886 petitioned the Legislature for a Sunday Rest Bill, because Sunday excursions deranged their business, for their employés came back and required Monday to recuperate. The sober, church-going man is ready for work on Monday. The pic-nic devotee requires Monday to rest. One of the largest employers of labour in the United States, Mr. Studenbaker, the owner of the great waggon works at Toledo, says :
"My observation is that clerks and mechanics who spend their Sabbaths in church and Sabbath school work are best fitted for, the duties of the shop and office on Monday morning."
Colonel Fairhanks, the owner of the extensive scale works, says :
"Those who attend church and Sunday school on Sunday are the most valuable in our businese. I can tell the difference between them and others by their work in the shop."
The general testimony is that sabbath observers and church-goers, including labourers, mechanies, merchants and professional men, are in better condition for work on Monday than those who spend Suaday even in comparatively innocent pleasure. Then, why should Sunday excursions be prohibited! (1) Because they rob one class of workmen of their Sunday rest, to minister to the leisure of others. (2) Because such excursions are fruitful of disorder, vice and crime. (3) Because such excursions invade the Sabbath quiet and the morality of the places to which they go. (4) Because they secularize Sunday, and by breaking down its sanctity prepare the way to deprive people of their Sunday rest.

In conclusion, I may point ont to all who may oppose this Sunday movement, that they may consider it a respectable thing to do, hui with whom are they associated? They are associated with the anarchist, they are associated with the infidel, they are associated with loafers, they are associated with the hoodlum, they are associated with the prostitute, they are associated with the drunkard, they are associated with the profane. These are their associates. You find the people of these classes sympathize with the men in this House and the men out of this House who cast a stigma upon this movement. This movement is one that is calculated to benctit labour, to enmoble lahour, and to ennoble the labourer. This is a movement in the interest of the employer and the employe. It is in the interest of the employer to have a clean, intelligent, healthful man to work for him, and it is in the interest of the employe to be that kind of man. It is in the interest of society to have the population of the country lifted up to a higher plane. and this can le done more readily by the influence of Sabbath observance and religious ordinance than by any other agency. This is a Bill amt at movement in the interest of the state, hecause it is in the interest of the State to have a virtuous, industrious, intelligent and sober people, and nothing will produce that result more certainly and more readily, than the enactment by the state of laws securing the observance of the Nabbath as a day of rest, and the honouring of the ordinamee of God. It is a Bill and a movement in the interests of humanity, and of course it is a Bill in the interests of religion. For these reasons, Mr. Speaker. in helieving this bill to be what I represent it to be. I sulmit it to the favourable consideration and to the favourahle action of this House.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Mr. Speaker. I am in favour of the motion that this bill be read the second time, but I would like to call the attention of the Honse, and especially of the hon. gentleman who has moved the Bill, to the observations which I made last session when, at a late period of the session, the House was in Committee of the Whole upon the Bill. The House thought proper during last session to read the Bill a second tine, and to send it to a select committee, the result of which was that a number of provisions which the Bill hat contained were removed from it, I think with the approval of the hon. gentleman himself, is heing provisions of doubtful utility, and in consequence of their being to a great extent almost icientical with provisions adopted by some of the lrovincial Legislatures. The observations which I then male upon the Bill are equally applicable to the measure now before us, in its present shape, aml I do think it would be very desirable that the Bill should again have the care and attention of a select committee for the purpose of considering the manner in which it is framed, as well as some of the particular provisions for it. The hon, memher for North Norfolk (M:. Charlton) is quite right in saying that I expressed the opinion that this Parliament has jurisdiction to enact the provisions which are found here. Although the opinion is not entertained by some members of the House of eminence in their profession I have no doult that we have power to deal so amply with all matters selating to the criminal law, that when we undertake to make anything eriminal we have jurisdiction to do so. When the House was considering the matter last year, the first clause of the Bill relating to the publication of Sunday newspapers was one which we might with great propriety and safety, we thought, leave to the Local Legislatures to adopt if they saw fit. It is a matter relating peculiarly to the convenienceof the inhabitants of the provinces themselves, and the legislatures no doubt will adopt restrictive laws whenever they think the time has arrived for cloing so. In connection with matters of that kind, I think it is going too far for this Parliament to step in and say, that nowhere in Canada shall work be allowed on newspapers within certain hours. I callen the attention of the committee last year, to the fact of the camals being entirely open to regulation by the Governor in Council, without a statute at all, if the pleasure of the House should be signified in that way. I presume that remark hodds yool now. There are restrictions imposed by Order in Conncil and if the public convenience will not be interfered with materially, these provisions may le extended : but it is never necessary in relation to any public work which is under the control of this Parliament to passis a statute restricting the tinte and manuer in which it shall be operated. If the hon. gentleman refers to sub-section? of sextion 3 . in regard to railway trains. he will notice that it is entirely indefinite in this bill at what time its provisions will come into operation. The time when the provisions will come into operation as regards the ruming of freight trains, is such tin:e "as the laws of the United States shall make corresponding provision." It would he impossible for an ordinary individual to ascertain whether the law of that conntry had made comresponding provision or not. I suppose that what the hom. gentleman had in view in drafting the Bill was more complete than he had expressed. The expression "the laws of the United States " would only apply to some federal enactment, and I presume it is the hon. gentleman's wish that if the ruming of freight trains through a state that borters on Canada were prohibited hy state authority, that should likewise be prohilited in Canala.

Mr. CHARLTON. That would all have leen regulated by the Inter-State Conmerce Latw.
Sir JOHN THOMP:ON. Not necessarily. That could be regulated no doubt by the linter-state Commerce Act, and the subject could be legislated on by the federal authority I admit, in so far as trains passing from one state to another is concerned ; but even if the liter-State Commerce Act should he repoalen, as we sometimes hear it may be, the subject could lef fully dealt with ly state authority. Besides that, I presume that the hon. gentleman had in view trains which might not come under the provisions of the Inter-Ntate Commerce Law, but which would lee passing from some part of, for instance, the State of New York into Canada on Sunday. If the hon. gentleman's wish and the wish of the House is, that it should only come into force when there is a felcral statute on that subject, well and good. The Bill, however, is framed in such a way that a person, to be affected by the provisions of it, must enguire what the federal laws of the United States are, before he knows whether he is breaking the laws of our cominry. It would be better. 1 think, if that part of the Act should only come into operation ly proclamation when such legislation is alopted by the United states. I merely speak now as to the way in which the Bill is drafted, and I mal leaving entirely open the question of the principle of the measure, for the Honse itself. It seems to me that the provisions of the thh section. which prevents excursions ly steamboat or railway or hoat on sumday, are to a great extent very materially weakened by the proviso at the end which practically allows that which we declare to he a misidemeanour. to be authorized by provincial enactment at any time. If I have comprelended the provision, the bill goes on to declare that excursions on the Lord's day hy steambeats, and so on. -
"Shall he unlawful and the owner, superintendent or person, by cirtuc of whose authority such excursions are permitted or ordered. shall be guilty of a misdemeanour."
There is a proviso that nothing in the section shall he deemed to prohibit the ordinary carriage of passengers authorized by provincial statute. So that if, for example, at any time a provincial charter should authorize the daily carriage of passengers hetween certain points, that would be valid, notwithstanding that a previous Act of this Parliament his declared it to be a misdeneanour.

Mr. (HARLTON. I may explain, in reference to that point, that the question was raisel as to the transporting of passengers over such routes as from Toronto to the Island. Regular lines of ferry boats run on the sablath, and they carry passengers who might be considered excursionists. It was considered it would harilly do to prohibit ferry loats making regular trips, aren though excursionists might go upon those boats. That is the reason this provision was inserted.
Sir JOHN THOMPNON. 1 am speaking of the mode in which the Bill is frameal. I call attention to these matters, not for the purpose of interfering with the secom reading of the Bill, which the House indicated on the former occasion it preferred to have read a second time, but in order that lefore we proceed to another stage, these matters may le considered. In the mean time I have no oljection to the second reading being taken tonight : and the Bill may then he allowed to stand till to-morrow so that we may consider whether it would not be well to send it to a special committee.
Mr. MeMLLl.EN. I am very glat that the hon. leader of the House has expressell his willingness to have this Bill read a seemed time and sent to a committee. 1 think it well that this House should take a step in the direction indicated by the Bill. The hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton), in my hamble opinion, deserves the thanks of this Honse, and I am sure he will receive the thanks of the christian denomimations outside of this House, for the very able manner in which he has introduced the Bill into this House. He introluced it last session, and although it went through one or two stages it did not become law, and his persistency in again lringing it hefore the Honse is creditable to him. We live on the border of a country which is not $(x)$ ready to respect the salcredness of the Lord's day. The unfortunate war in that country some years ago was the occasion of the introduction of Sunday papers and the rumning of trains on that day, and the people have never leen able to get rid of them from that time th the present. I think our legislation should he in the direction of strictly observing the Lomel's day ats a mation as far as possille. I quite atgree with one of the remarks mate ly the hom. Minister of Justice. It is hard to say where the line is to be drawn, bat if this Bill is sent to a committee and that committee tries to put it into a shatpe to meet the necessities of the catse and the general approval of this Homse, I an quite sure it will secme the mitel thanks of the christian peeple of this bominions and be legislition in the right livection.

Mr. CHRISTIE. It gives me great pleasure to see that the hom. member for North Norfolk (Nr. (hartom) has again introdnced this bill to secure the hetter observance of the sabbath. I believe that this question of sablath observance is one of vital importance to the wellifeing and prosperity of the Dominion: and this Bill, if enacted, will be a great hom to thonsands of employs who ate now deprivel of their smolays rest, that rest which is necessary to restore their wasted and exibansted encrgies and to the them for the elliciemt distharge of their daties during the remaning six days of the week. That is not atl : this lat is necessary in order that they may eujoy the privilege of attending divine worship, and receivang religions instruction. We were toh last session that this Bill was manecessaty. that the Lacal Legislatures hand dealt with the question. amb that seme prowi. sions of this Bill encroacheal on the domain of provincial rights. Sow. I think we have not to look far to see that not withstanding all that has heen done by the Pronincial (a, ermments, aul all that hat heen lome ley this dovermment, there is still a great deal of uniecessary ablbath lahour and a sreat deal of sabhath desectation. There is still ample room for sabhath reform, I do not care whether we look to our railways, our canals orf our Post Ottice Department. It is true, this Bill in some particulars does wot wop yuite sof far as I couled wish. I would like to see the sanctity of the whole day preservel. I think we have a right to ask that the employes of the diovermanent in every department of the public serviee shombl be protected in the enjoyment, not of a half salhath. or any portion of the sablatio. but the whole twent four hours rest : and trust that this House and the mover of the bill will see that it is amend al in that directiom. The tirst section of the Bill is, I think, one of very great importance, prohihiting the publishing and delivering of newspapers on sumbay. It is true, the evil hats not spread very far in Canadia. but it has olltained a foothold, anil modoult it will spreal unless prevented by timely legislation. From what I have seen in the United States, I believe it is impossible to orerestimate the amount of eril which results f:om sumdiay news. papers, and I trust that this section will lee enacted. With reference to the last clanse of the section, I am not quite satisfied that there is any ahsolute necessity why the printers should be permitted to hegin their work at nine aclock on sumbay evening. I think the printers and publishers would be all the better for the whole sundays rest, and I would like to see the Bill amended in that particular. The same remarks apply to the second sectiom, which has reference to the closing of our camals from 6 in the morning till 10 at night. No doubt that would be a great loon, but it would be still better to close them for the whole $\mathbf{2} 4$ hours. I will not further trespass on the time of the House, but simply express the hope that this bill, amended in the direction which I have indicated, will he enacted by the House.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Before the motion is passed, 1 wish to say two or three worls upon it. I am not going to oppose the second reading of the Bill; in fact, I am very glad that the hon. leader of the Honse has consented to its being read a second time. Howerer, I wish to put in a saving clause. I wish to say that there are certain amendments which I deem necessary in the Bill before $I$, for one, can vote for it. I indicated a year ago to the hon. mover of the bill what these were. I toh him that unless the Bill was changed in that respect, I could not support it. The hon. gentleman has not seen fit to change it, and I now say that unless these changes are made, I do not see how I can support the Bill. I listened very carefully to the hon. gentleman's speech to-night, and I must sity I harilly think he siowed his usual candour. He insisted very strongly that the Bill is simply and solely in order to protect men in their civil rights, anid that it hats no religions :aspect. I take up the Bill, and the first thing which catches my eye shows that is not a correct interpretation. The hon. gentleman may say that is only the preamble of the Bill. Weil, we all kuow from experience that the hom. gentleman is strong on preambles, in fact we had his opinion once that the preamble is the strongest part of the Bill. Does the preamble of the Bill say a word about protecting men in their civil rights? No; it gives as the reasons for which the Bill is introduced: "Whereas it is desirable in the interests of religion, and morality, and the public welfare that this Bill should he passed." I need not tell this. House that the public welfare can be promoted in the best way l,y religion and morality, so that the whole motive of the Bill is religions and moral: it is to force men to become religious and moral. If you ask me why I object to that, 1 say that, as a legislator, I have no mandate to legislate in any such way. I have tried carefully to examine into the matter. aml I have nowhere found that it is my duty to seek to promote and pass laws to compel men to be religions. I read the command, as it was given by the Master, to have been given to the church and not to Parliament: "Co ye into atl the world and disciple all nations;" and until the hon. gentleman can show me his manlate, until he can show to me that the charch has declined to carry out her commission, until the chureh declares herself powerless to do it, until she declares she has no faith in the promise of her Master. "I am with you" always to the enl," until she does that I, for one, object to attempting to compel men to hecome religions ly act of parliament. It seems to me that the history of the christian church ought to convince any men of ordinary enlightenment and intelligence of the utter futility, not only futility, but the disastrous consequences, of trying to promote religion by legislation or by the sword of the civil magistrate. I need not tell hon. gentlemen who are familiar with the facts of history, that the palmy days of christianity were during the first three centuries, when the religion of the cross was not only not promoted by legislation, was not only not protected by the sword of the civil legislature, but when every effort of these was made to destroy it. And it was only at the end of three centuries, when the church had become strong enough for governments to patronize it and try to make use of it, that the civil power stepped in and passed laws for its protection. What was the effect of that procedure? I need not tell you: it was disastrous to the church. Why, for long years after that there was no end of legislation, there was no end of edicts and ordinances, and of penalties to enforce these edicts and ordinances and to compel men to be religious. And what was the result: It was the en slavement of the human mind: it was the depriving of men, not only of their civil rights, lint their religious liberties. And if that view of the case be correct. if it be correct that the state is houm to promote religion hy legislation, the state has alsio the authority to preseribe a penalty to enforce obedience to its mandates. The result was that the human conscience wastrampled down. the civil and religious rights of men were tratapled upon, until we find the culmination in the inquisition of spain. Now, the promoter of the Bill will perhaps tell me that wats before the Reformation. How much hetter was it after! Is not the fact known to everyme in this House that if the same things were not perpetrated, it was lwecause men would not sulmit to them: There was just the same disposition to tyramize over the human conscience and compel men to conform to the State's religion by Act of Parliament. Ihave only to refer to that law we heard a great neal about luring the last two years, the first of Elizabeth, which we heard lauled to the skies. with its acempanying Act of Eniformity, and the infamous Star Chamber, molelled on the Spanish inyuisition, to carry out their desires and enfore their penalties. What was the ohject of these and to what nee were they put : Simply to compel Catholies and dissenting Protestants to becone religions according to the iteas of the state aml Act of Parliament. In view of all these facts, 1 think $I$ am justified in insisting leforehand that the preamble of this bill shall be changel. I have no intention whatever of imposing upon my fellow-comutrymen a yoke which neither we nor our forefathers were able to bear. Let me ask the hom. gentleman to be logical. A principle camot he right if you cannot carry it out to its logical conclusion. He says it is in the interests of religion and morality that Sahbath legislation should be passel. In other worls, that men should be compelled to observe the sabbath. Will the hon. gentlenam tike the next logical step? We all know he is a man who keeps the Sabbath strictly. He is a dev cut church-goer, and I have no doubt he believes it is in the interests of religion and morality that men should attend church. If he has the right tolegislate that they shall olserve the Sablath in the interest of religion and morality, he has the right to legislate that they shall attend church on Sumdia. Not only that, but we all know that the hon. gentleman who proposes this Bill is a derout Presbyterian, and no doubt believes in his imermost soul that it is in the interests of religion and morality, thaterery man, woman and child should attend the Presbyterian church. I submit that if we have the power and right to legislate that a man should keep the Sablath, we have the right to legislate that he shall attend church, and my hom. friem has the right to we the third step and see that they attend the Preshy. terian church. Now. if you ask me why I support the Bill. I can tell you in a few words. We know that science, and experience, and olservation, all teach that it is absobilely necessary for every human being to have one diay of rest in seren. I believe there are no two opinions on that point. Now it follows, ats a necessary comsequence, that if it is a matter of necessity, every man, woman and chilh shath ber protected in the enjoyment of that right, amb, mutil we have laws to protect them in that sablath right, those rights will most certainly be infringed upon. That is the sole reason why I support this Bill, and the only ground on whith 1 will support any such legislation. liom may say there are certain kinds of labour in which the sablath camot be observed. Railway thathe has heen instanced, and yet it is a fact that some of the monst influential, some of the most skilfal railway men on this continent amb all over the world have declarel that sumblay labour, as far as the railways are concernet, is not at all necessary. but that in the other hand it is a positive disalsantage. I have here in my hand evidence taken before the senate of the United states on the sulpect of sal, hath legislation and among other eriflence was that given by Mr. Ledyard, the pesilent of the Michigan Cental Railway system, me of the largest railway systems on this continem. He declares positively that a compreny would lone nothing either in trattic or in profit ly ceasing to work on sumday. Hegives it as his firm comviction that it is a great loss to a railway company to compel its empluys to work on the sablath day. He wrote a longs letter to the Railmay A!re and that paper satys editorially in reference to Mr. Ledyards letter:
" Mr. Ledsard's comviction that he and other railway managers are all committing a fearful mistake in allowing the continuance and rapid growth of this sunday labour is held we believe. by the great majority of railway oticers and it is to be hoped that in their perisal and publice cunsideration of the great problems of ralway management they will give that serious attention to this subject which its importance dewands.
Some may say, you have mo right to anere the employes of a railway compamy. that it is a matter of bargain and sale hetween them and their masters, that, if they do mot chonse work wo sumdays, they may leave their position. They camot leave. The livelihood of thenselves and of their families depents upon their work, and, if they ho not conform to the rules of the company, they will have to leave their empleyment. There wat a petition of 4.01 engincers of the New lork Central presented to Congress pleanling for a sum. day rest. They say:
"This never-ending lahour ruins nur health and prematurely makes us feel worn-out like old men, and we are sensible of our inability to perform our daty as well when we work to an excess."
The discussion all through this book betweem employers of latwor and railway ofticials shows that men will do better work in the six days than they can in the seven, if they are permitted to rest on the seventh day. They point to the customs of all civilized mations, and they pledge themselves that, if this boon is granted, provided they are omly w work six days, they will do more and better work than if they had to work seven lays. For this reason I give the Bill my hearty support except in regard to those clatuses which I shall try to have amended. I saty to the leader of the House that I hope this time he will not allow this Bill to he burked, because, if it is the right of every man. woman and child tohave a day of rest, if the sabbath right is interfered with, this House is hound to protect the individuals in the enjoyment of that right. Another amendment which I intend to propose is of a different kind. Youknow very well, Mr. Speaker, that thereare some people whosay that we donot keep the right day. that the Divine command was that "six ilays thou shalt labour and on the seventh day thou shalt rest." while we keep the first day of the week instead of the seventh, and they are not satisfied that that is correct. The hon. geutleman may say that, for certain good and sutficient reasons the day was changed. Those reasons satisfy his mind and they sitisfy mine also, hut there are men in this country who are in no way inferior to the hon. gentleman or to me, who hold that there is no warrant and mo reason for the change of the day. I propose to have a saring clause inserted to protect these people, so long as they ilo not interfere with the rights of others, and I think they have a right to be protected.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the secoml time.

COMPCLSORY VOTIN:.

Mr. AMMOT movel secomd realing of Bill (No. 46) to make voting compulsory:

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. The House had a discussion upon this Bill after the second reading, last year, and after I had made some observations which I intender to be against the Bill, it was supported in two or three places as deserving of further consideration. I cannot say that I have much changed the opinion I formed upon it at the time : and I thought there was a great deal, also, in the arguments that came from other gentlemen after. I had addressed the House against the principle of the Bill. I recognized the wish of the House as then expressed, that the Bill should he more fully considered ; lut understanding that the hon. gentleman proposes that this Bill should go to a select committee, I think it would be well that it should have its second realing-of course on the unlerstanding that we are not necessarily committing ourselves to the principle of the Bili, but desire to have it further examined.

Mr. LACRIER. I think myself with the hon. gentleman that it is guite proper the Bill should be referred to a select committee. but I do it also with the reservation that $I$ do not, for my part, express approval of the principle of the Bill, lut reserve my judguent upon it for a future occasion after hearing the report of the committee.

Motion asreed to, and Bill read the second time.
Mr. AMYOT moved :
That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee composed of Messrs. Tupper, Wood (Brockville), Flint, Earle, Brodeur, Skinner. Fraser, Weldon. Landerkin, LaRivière, and the mover.

Motion agreed to.

High Commissioner for Canada-To the High Commissioner's salary... . $$ 1,200$

Sir RICHARI) CARTURIGHT. When this item was ander discussion in Supply, the Minister of Finance promised to bring down certain information with respect to it. This item is being voted twice for this particular year, and it is quite evident that the money voted must have been in some way or other improperly pain, otherwise this $$ 1,210$ would be available for the service of the present year as voted. The Minister of Finance, when the matter was under discussion, declared that he would make full explanation on concurrence as to how the lapse occurred. If the Minister of Justice, or the Minister of Militia, has no explanation for the item, it had better stamid over until the Minister of Finance is here.
Sir JOHS THOMPSON. The Minister of Finance, through illness, is unable to be here tonight, and he alone can give the information. If the information is insisted on the item will have to staml, but the effect will he that we camot pass the Bill. But if the item is allowed to pass now, the information will be given on the Bill, if that is satisfactory to the hon. gentleman.
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. In that case I will not press the point, and you can give the information to-morrow. But it is well to understand that we want to know in what year the money was first irregularly appropriated.

Further amount required for Miscellaneous expenses-fiovernor General's  Warrant  $$ 6,(4) 0$

Mr. MULOCK. In this resolution are a numher of items that are the subject of dovernor General's Warrants. At an early stage of the session I obtained an order from the Honse for the production of the reports upon which all these warrants were issued. I have once called the attention of the Minister of Finance to the fact that the reports have not yet lreen laid before the House, and I think they ought to be laid before the House before the Supply bill is passen. At what stage will these reports be forthcoming? Certainly they should be latil before the House.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I think the return was brought down.
Mr. MULOCK. Then it must have heen within the last day or two.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. Three or four days ago. If it has not been brought lown, it will he brought down this week. My colleague the Minister of Militia informs me thiat it has not yet heen brought down.
Mr. MULOCK. Then I am not asking anything unceasonable when I urge that these reports should be brought down before the items are finally passed. I asked for these documents in Supply.

Indeed, tlay were moved for at the commencement of the session.

Mr. BOWELL. I will make enquiry and see how far the Clerk of the Executive Council has succeeded in copying them, and, if possible, lay them on the Table to-morrow.

Mr. MULOCK. I will not press the matter further at this stage, but I shall ask that the Bill be not passed before these reports are forthcoming.

> Further expenditure in connection with Franchise Act, printing Voters' Lists, &e

Sir RICHARI) CARTWRIGHT. With respect to the voters' lists, I wish to ask the Minister of Justice, or whoever has that department in charge, who retains custody of the various original documents supplied to the secretary of state hy the various revising officers?
Mr. PATTERSON (Huron). The Clerk of the Crown in Chancery has charge of the original documents.
Sir RICHARI CARTWRIGHT. I suppose he retains in all cases the original documents and furnishes a copy to the printer.
Mr. Patterson (Huron). I believe that is the rule.
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. The hon. gentleman does not know that of his own knowledge?

Mr. PATTERSON (Huron). Nut of my own knowledge.
Mr. MULOGK. The Franchise Act only requires the revising officer to send one list, vi\%, the official return to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, and there is no provision in the Act for the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery sending a copy to the Queen's Printer. Accordingly, the original tevised list signed hy the revising ofticer, is the only document that goes to the Queen's Printer.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I think the sta anent made by the Secretary of State is correct, because the hon. gentleman will recollect that in the London case the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery immediately proiluced a copy of the list sent up by the revising officer, in obedience to the Order of the House.

Mr. MULOCK. I think on investigation the Minister will fiml that my statement is correct.
Sir RICHARD CARTWRIGHT. It is important that this matter should be determined, because the original list should he carefully preserved, and in the custody of our own officer. I should be glad to learn whether my hon. friend or the Minister of Justice is correct as to the matter of fact, and as to what is the practice, and where the original document is to be had. I suppose the Secretary of State will let me know to morrow?

Mr. PATTERSON (Huron). I will give the hon. gentleman this information with other information in connection with the revision of the list.

St John Custom House Fire ..... ... $$ 6,000$

Sir RICHARI) CARTWRIGHT. Have tenders been asked for the new public buildings at St. John, New Brunswick ?
Mr. OUIMET. Tenders will be called for, but the plans are not ready yet.
sir RICHARD CARTWRI(iHT. As I understand the custom house is not entirely destroyed and the greater part of it would be available for the new building.

Mr. OUIMET. The "greater part" might be saying too much. When the architect makes his report we will be able to ascertain if the walls ate all right.

> Amonnt required to provide for payment of claims in connection with Militia services, rebellion North-West Terri-

Sir RICHARI) CARTWRIGHT. With respect to this item no details were given in the Committee of Supply, and the Minister was to give explanations of it now.

Mr. BOWELLL. I think the item ought to be S. , 110.4. The details which I promised the hon. gentleman are as follows:-To pat Lieut.-Col. Jackson for cab-hire at Wimipeg in 1885, while chief pay and supply ofticer and commissioner on war claims. Siti.51): to refund to the same ofticer the amount paid to Brigrade-Major Aylmer, of London, as his allowance at the rate of sison per ammom for performing the duties of beputy AdjutantCieneral of Military District No. 1 , while Lieut. Col. Jacksm was employed on the war claims. Slfs.3n; to pay expenses of the Merlical Boaml of Toronto, in 1sse, in examining pirties who had made clams, slo.!n: : $\mathbf{l}$ '. B. Clelamd, for loss of mules in 18Si, Stia : J. Wilker, for loss of waggon and team hired, $583 \%$. These two clains were submitted to the Department of Justice, which. after examining them, reported that the fiovernment was liable for the amounts. For advertising in the Manitoba Fro Press, 513 : legal expenses, in connection with above clatms, Sino.

Sir RI(HARI) CARTWRIGHT. Were these legal expenses incurred for the two partioular claims mentioned:

Sir JOHN THOMPNON. They are on these claims, some of which were entered in the Fixchequer Court. After investigating them. the department adrised that they should be puinl.

POSTTMASTER AT KENTVILLE, N.S.

Mr. FLINT (for Mr. Bomben) asked. When Was the postmaster at Kentville, N. S., suspembed: Has his successor leen appointed: If not, why not, and when will an apointment be made: What is the salary of the Kentville Post Utfice? By whom have the duties been performed, and what is the total cost of the administration of the office in silaries and otherwise since the date of the suspension of the postmaster:

Sir ADOLPHE CARON. The postmaster of Kentville. N.S., was suspended on the 6th of February, 1s91. His successor has not been appointed yet. The salary is 8840 per year, and the duties have been performed by clerks from the Halifax Post Ottice, namely : W. C. Harris, salary $\mathbf{$ 4 0})$ per year : Miss Eaton, who is paid si per week as assistant ; and si(N) per year is paid for rent of the post office.

LAND PURCHANE IN $\mathfrak{I}$ UEBEC CITY'

Mr. FREMONT askel, I. For what reasons, and at whose request, did the ciovernment put up for sale a certain piece of land leading from tirande Allée, in the city of Quebec, to the Quelee Skating Rink, dud shown in the plans as forming part of a publie street, the said piece of laml leing situated on the east of lot No. 2. on the south side of Cirande Allée, in the suid city? 2. In what newspapers, and for what length of time was the said sale advertisel! 3. Who was the purchaser? 4. Have the dovernment given a definite title to the purchaser: . . If the (dovernment have not as ret given a title, is it their intention to give it?

Mr. IEN DNET. The strip of lamd, 10 feet in width, referred to by the hom. gentleman, was sold to Ihr. W. A. Verge at the doctor's own reguest. The piece of land adjoins the lot already owned by 1hr. Verge, and was fenced in by him some years ago. The land in question does not form part of a public street. Thongh called First street on the plan prepared by Surveyor Tremblay, it was never opened as a street or given to the city. ‥ The sale in question was advertised six times in the Morwing Chouicle. Lo Matin and LSEriurment, heing the full number of insertions of an advertisement which any department may orler without getting a special Order in Council in that behalf. 3. The parchaser was Dr. Verge, who paid *i82. cash. 4. Patent has not yet issued to the purchaser. .. It is the intention of the ciovernment to issue a patent to Dr. Verge.

NSSUE OF WRITS.

Mr. MLLLN (Bothwell). Before the Orters of the Day are called, I would like the Minister of Justice to state when we may expect the information which was promised the Honse some time ago: that is, the reason of delay in the issue of writs after the warrants were receivel by the Clerk of the Crown in Chameery.

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I will hay that on the Table immediately after our vacation.

LONION ELECTION.

Mr. LINTER. I desire to remind the (ioverument that on the 9 lst of March an Aldress to His Excellency was pessed for papers in commection with the London election. Sixteen days have gone and those papers are not yet on the Trable. It is very desirable they should be placed on the Table at once. The hon. member for South Oxford called the attention of the ciovernment to it the other day, and the Secretary of State informed the House that they were leing prepared. I would like to know when they may be expected.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I know the question was asked the Secretary of State the other day. I do not know what is in the Hansard, but I remem. ber his reply being to this effect : that application had to be made for them to the revising officer and that other papers were in his hands and were being prepared, but there will be no delay after the papers have been received. They will be brought down the next day or two, but if they have not been received the ilelay will be owing to that fact.

PCBLIC: WORKs.

Mr. LANDERKIN. I would like to ask the Minister of Public Works if that return ordered last session with reference to the expenditure in different constituencies will soon le brought down:

Mr. OUINET. I will take a note of the hom. gentleman's question and look into the matter.

THIRI) READIN(:

Bill (No. 10) to ameml the Pilotage Act (.Mr. Tupper) reat the third time and passed.

SUPPLC BHLL.

Mr. BOWELI moved secoml reading of Bill (No. (i2) granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money rejuired for defraying certain expenses of the Public Service for the financial year ending the 30 th June, 18!2, and for other purposes relating to the Public Service. He sitil: I hare laid upon the Table a return of the warrants and the reports. of the different Ministers upon which the (iovernor dencral's warrants were issued. In answer to the question put at the last sitting of the Honse, as th the final disposition of the voters lists. 1 am informed that the lists are sent by the revising ofticer to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, and by him are sent to the printer. The printer semis them to the judge. who revises and corrects the lists. They are then returned to the printing office amb then sent to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, in whose oftice they are filed and where they can be obtained at any time. The Finame Minister will make the explanation he has to make with reference to the $$ 1,2(0)$ voted for the High Commissioner's othice.

Mr. FOSTER. We had some discussion the other night about the item of $\$ 1,2(x)$ appearing in the Supplementary Estimates this jear for the contingencies of the High Commissioner. I stated at that time that the object of putting this sum in the Supplementary Fstimates this year was to have the appropriation even with the liability, instead of having it one year in arrear. The rote in last year's Estinates was to pay for the preceding year. The first vote was in 1880-88, s1, 2(1) for contingencies for this purpose, and was only purtly expended. The reason why it was not all expended was, that Sir Charles Tupper came out to this country and only spent a part of the year in Lomdom. In 1888-89, \$1, 230) was roted again and expemed. In $\mathbf{1 8 5 9} 90$ that anome was votedand expended : but in 1890.91 it wasleft out of the Estimates ly etror, and the error was only discovered in the latter part of, the year. As I brought in the Estimates last year, the House will find that the vote reads in this way: "To anthorize the puyment of an over-expenditure in 1880).91, on account of contingencies." Having dropped out of the Estimates in 18:M0.91, it was over-expended, and the amount voted last year was to cover this overexpenditure. Last year, also, by error it was not included in the vote for 1891.92 , and this supplementary estimate for 81,200 is to cover that. There is no irregularity in making the payment out of the vote for that year, becaase it was expressly stated that it was to cover the amount for those years. A question wias askell by the hon. gentleiman as to the amount we paid income tax on for the High (ommonsioner. We moly pay on the sulary he receives, SlO, (Wn).

Sir RICHARI) (ARTWRISH'T. Then this is really left as two distinct votes:

Mr. Foster. The vote taken last year. 1891-92. was to paythe over-expenditure of $1 \mathrm{~S}(\mathrm{O} \cdot \mathbf{9 1}$.
sir RIC'HARD ('ARTWRICHTS. Uniler item tingencies. N(... evidently intemed for 1891.92. I think the hom. gentleman ought to alter the raining of one of these votes, becatuse it appears to be cloblle for the year 1501-02.

Mr. Fosittir. So: it was mot doubled for 1s: 11 ?

Bill read the thind time athl passed.

WREOKIN: 1N ('ANADAAN WATRKN.

 s) respecting aid lis Cnited States wreckers in (inamlian waters.--iMr. Bowell.)

> In the (ommittee.)

On sectionl.

Mr. ('HARLION. Some of the parties who :re interested in Canadian wrecking plant have guestoned whether it will he possible unler the pros. visions of this Bill for the American athorities to restrict the operations of this law by preserving to their own ressels the right of wrecking on the const, while preventing Canadian vessels from wrecking on the American coast. I would ask the Minister whether it is possible that that ditficulty call arise under the piovisions of this Bill:

Mr. BOWVELL. That is not the interpretation which we put "pon the Bill, nor is it the decision arrived at when discussing the matter with the Secretary of State in the United States. The intention of the bill is to give the freest possible latituele to vessels of camadian register in American Waters as well as to those of like chatacter of American register in ( a madian waters. The letters the hon. gentleman did me the honour to seme me from one of the the owners who has wrecking plant in the west, were replied to by my answering that the interpretation we put on the law was that Camalian ressels womh have all the rights and privileges to wreck in American waters that Americam wrecking ressels would have in C!unalian waters. The question was also askel whether Jake Michigan, being an inlamd water of the United States, would have this law applied to it as well. My interpretation of the det. and of the maderstanding we had with Mr. Blaine, was that it would apply to Lake Michigan also. Those who opposed he Bill introluced by my hon. friend from Frontenac last year, and the yearl before, was principally on the gromed that no provision was made for towing wrecks in foreign waters after the wrecks have been raised. When that difficulty was pointed ont to Mr. Blaine, he frankly almitted that, without that right, the privilege of wrecking in foreign waters would le useless : and he promised that, if a Bill similar to that passeal in the United States Congress were passed here, an order would be issued giving the same privilege to Canadian ressels to tow wrecks as was given to Uaited States vessels. Provision is made that this Act shall not go into operation until the Unitel States give the same rights to (anallian ressels in American waters as are given to American ressels in (anadian waters: amd. if at any time that privilege is withdrawn, we will withdraw the rights and privileges which we are giving. There are one or two words which I propose to add to this measure. suggested hy the letter which was Written to the hon. member for Norfolk (Mr. Charlton).
 state to the Hoase some of the oljections which ate considered hy those who own wrecking plant to apply to this bill. At the same time, I frankly confess that the course proposed lis the (iovernment may he satid to hate heen partly forced upon it hy the state of pablic opinion on the subject. It is. howerer. proper to present the objections that those interested in Canadian wrecking plant imge against the measure. It is urged that in making this arrangement. or more properly we might say, this concession, to the fmerican fovermment, we are not gettinge a guid fors quo. hecanse we have execptional anlvantages, as the law has hitherto stoonl. amb it is believed that these alvantages might have: heen used for the purpose of securing further con cessions. The alvantages are brietly these: Ahout nine-tenths of the tomage upon the great lakes is American tomage : prohahly, at least, nine-tenths of the wrecks upon the (ammian eonst ate American wreeks: and under the latw as it existed--and for the combition of that law the Americans themselves are responsible, for they tirst intronluced the policy of restriction-...under the operations of the liw as it existed, Camalian wrecking plant had alrantages over American wrecking plant, in the fact that there were nine times as many American wreeks mpon the Camadian coast, on an average, as there were Canadian wrecks upon the American eckest : and white the American wreck. ers were debarred from nine wrecks, the (amadian wreckers on the American const were debarred from succouring but one. This was an inportant advantage enjoyed by the Cananlian matine companies amd (Gumblian wrecking companies, and that adrantage, of course, this Bill survenders. I donot saty that it is not proper to surremer it, but I do think that the ciovermment might have used the surremer of this great advantage enjoved by the (amatian wrecking companies for the purpose of securing some alditional concession-in fact, they secure no concession in this matter, and they surrender an important privilege. The Canadian wrecking companies, so far from enjoying an advantageous position, will now he placed at a disalvantage.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. What concession do you expect:
Mr. CHARLTON. I had reason to expect the concession of the abrogation of the consting laws entirely upon the great lakes. and the opening up of the coasting trate for the marine of loth countries. That, I think, is something we ought to have insisted upon, because, in the position in which matters stood, we had a decided alvantage over the Americans. Now that the change is to be made the position may be represented as follows: The Canadian wrecking companies will be placed at a disadrantage in their competition with American wrecking companies, for the reason that underwriters and insurance compunies on the great lakes, in ninety-nine cases out of a humdred, will place their husiness in the hamels of American wrecking companies. Canadian wrecking companies will scarcely stamd a chance to get husiness at all. Then the Camadian wreckeris placed at adisadvantage when the field is open, as it is by this Bill, in the greater cost of much of his wrecking phant, which he is obliged to import ame pay luty upon, aml in the greater cost, in many cances, of his coal, upon which duty must be pain. He is hamdicapped by these extia charges, and he is, I repeat, placed in a position where he will receive scant justice in the matter of fair-play from insurance companies. and will find himself at a disadrantage in securing that business: amb, as a result of this measme, I look for the wiping ont of the Camatian wrecking interest. and the loss of the eapital inrested in this business. With regard to the expression here, " Waters eontigoons to the Uniteal States," I am glad to hear from the Minister who has the bill in charge, an assumance that this will apply to the waters of Latke Michigan. I suppose, of course, if it is hell not to apply to the waters of Lake Michigan, our awn (iovermment would not open the waters of the deorgian Biy to the operattions of American wreckers, becatuse the deorgian Bay is as much a Camalian water as Lake Michigan is an American water. Now, with regare to the policy pursued by the (iovermment hitherto in this matter, my hom. friemt the Ninister kuows as well as I do the entire want of fommation for all charges mate by the American fiovernment or her resel owners that they hal beenoppressive and exacting in their ruling. He knows that there really existed moparticular necessity for this law, and that the (iovernment never olenied American wrecking eompanies the right to operate where Camadian plant was not at hand, and that, so far as the marine interests of the two countries is concerned, it was not placed in jeoparily, and it sufferecholoss from the operation of the law: In fact soliberal were the interpretations of the forernment with regard to the matter, that Canadian wrecking companies, in many instances, deemed themselves angrieved hy the readiness of the dovernment to grant permits to the American wreckers.

These, in brief, are the ohjections urged against this bill hy wrecking companies: they urge that under the operations of the ohd law, for which the American fiovermment was responsible, they were placed in an exceptionally favouralbe position, that nine-tenths of the wrecks upon the Canalian coast were American wrecks, and that in opening up this question and giving reciprocity in wrecking, we are voluntarily giving an important alvantage which we enjoy, amlan mhantage which was thrust upon us, if I may use the term, by the American fiovermment: and I donbt whether it would not have been worth the trial to secure from the United States some concession for this surremter of what was an important alvantage placed in our hands. I do not propose to object to the passage of the Bill, but $I$ am sorry that we have not got a little more to show for what was an important alvantage, that we are having in the provisions of this Bill as presented to the House.

Mr. EIDiAR. I have a distinct recollection that in I888, when a Bill like this was under discussion in the House, Sir Charles Tupper, who then spoke for the Govermsent, opposed the Bill which was int ronlused by the hom. member for Frontemat (Mr: Kirpatrick), on the gromal that we shouhl hold it back matil we comh get reciprocity in coasting privileges from the L̈nited states. Now, I wonlal he ghal to learn from dhe Minister of Militia, who has eharge of it at present, and who has recently heen visiting Wishington with great effect, how far he has mate progress in secoring reciprocity in coast. ing privileges with the linited states. I remember, too, that the Uinister of Militia then spoke of the lestruction of nur weecking imductry that would $\mathrm{l}_{\mathrm{s}}$ : callsed by this Bill. I am ghad he hats changed his mind. I did not agree with him then, and I am glat he has come to our way of thinking, aml of course 1 am ghat he supports the Bill. I amsure this is the hour of trimph for the member for Frontenac. This is one of the few things in which he agreed with the majority on this side of the Honse, in poliey, ani he has suceeded in forcing it upon an mwilling fionermment. and I congratulate him. We on this side of the Howse, of conse, not knowing moch about it, have rather ineen looking from time to time to see the hom. member for Frontenat promoted a lite le higher up along the from ministerial henches: and the omly way we can accomit for his great merit not being recognized is that there was a serious difference of opinion between hinn and the (iovermment on an important question of poliey, and this was the only question of policy in regard to which we knew there wats a difference of opinion. Now that that has been removed 1 have and donht we will see the promotion which we have heen long expecting to see on this side of the Homse. Bint, Sit, there is the hon. the secretary of state, what has he gor. to syy to this question: Why. Sir, he hitterly opposed it before, and it appeais that the member for Prontemac, ontside the ( iovermment. has been ahle to impose his poliey upon the fiovermment. and the secretury of state hats had to swallow his policy, and has gnt a sent in the (ioremment in consilleration for it. Sow, this is part of our policy of reciprocity with the Cnited States, and we are athel to congratulate the (iovermment upon taking a step in the right direetion at last, and I hope the Billwill reveive themanimons support of the Honse.

Mr. KIRKPATRICR. 1 am, of course, very glad that this Bill has been brought down and is not only likely to pass the House this year, hut to pass through the other Chamber and receive the Royal assent and become law. For sevemal yeats I have endeavoured to get it placed upon the statute-book. I have given what I thought at the time were goon reasoms for the passuge of the Bill. and I acknowledge that I received hearty support from hom. gentlemen opposite, with the exception of the hon. gentleman from North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton), who has to-day repeated his oljections to the measure. The measure is practically the same as I introduceil last year. This is practically accepting the ofter of the United States (iovernment for reciprocity in wrecking. It is true that the Minister of Militia, who has charge of the Bill, has introduced a clanse stating that the wrecking and salvage is to include the necessiary towing. Well, it may be necessary for some people to hare that particularly stated in the Bill, but I conceive, if we give American citizens the right to come intomur waters for wrecking and salvage parposes, that implies and covers the necessary towing to take the vessel to a piace of safety. Those worts are, therefore, put in, I presume, merely to, make it appear different from the Bill I intronduced. 1 must say this, the member for West Ontario (Mr. Edgar) said that when the (iovermment opposed this Bill previously they did so because they said they wanted to endeasour to make some arrangement with the (iovernment of the United States ly which we would secure reciprocity in the coasting twale. But Ministers went to Wiashingtom, and foum there were insuperable objections to securing such concession, and they very properly gave way ami took what they conld get. They helieved this was a proper law to go into effect even ly itself. and even if un) concession was made on the othen side of the line. On the gromil of humanity they held that on the waters of our inland lakes there dhould be ready means for saving life and ample appliances for assisting in wreeking. All this is very desirable, lut it is more desirable that this measure should pass, because our marine interests on the infland waters mamimously askel for it. They said it was necessitry that vessels shomld hatre the right to telegraph to the nearest port, whether in the United States or Canala, and olitain the assistance of wrecking appliances, without incurring the mmesessary delay of telegraphing to Washington or Ottawa to obtain the permit which has hitherto, been needed. The hom. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) said the Minister of Militia knew very well that this permit had never ineen refused by the Camalian covermment. If it has never heen refinsed, what oljection could there be to this Bill being plated on the statute-book: Exen if this permin was always granted, there were delays of hours and sometimes a day was wasted in telegraphing to secure it. And in the same way it wats necessary, hefore Americans canne into Caind dian waters, that they should telegraph to Wiashington and get authority there. The time lost in forwarding these messages was of vital importance, aid the delay often resulted in reath to some lices on board and a disaster to the vessel of which the seamen were in charge A case oceured in which a ressel saw a wreck, but was ohligeel to pass liy on the other side.
Mr. BowthL. Nolives were lost.
Mr. KIRKPATRICK. Some men were fomel deal on the vessel when the rescuers did go there. All the wrecking companies in this commy except one, that of which the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charltom) hats always hat charge, and in whose welfare he has always shown such an interest, are lesirous of securing the passige of this Bill. From Lake Superior to Lake Ontario all the persons interested in wrecking appliances have asked for this measure. From Lake superior I had a communication stating that if we could not hold our own with the Anericans in this matter. those engaged in the business were ready to go muler. From towns on Lake Ontario there have come communications in favour of the passage of the Bill, and expressing anxiety to engage in the wrecking business in Camalian waters.
Mr. CHARLTON. If the company to which the hon. member refers as the only one that has not desired a change in the law is that at Kingston, he is wistaken.
Mr. KIRKPATRICK. Will you mame another?

Mr. (HARLTON. The Minister of Militia hats a letier from a firm in Port Collome ; a firmat Amhersthurg has also opponsed this Bill.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. The Board of Trade at Port Arthur, and a Mr. Marks, who is one of a firm owning tugs and wrecking appliances, are in favour of the Bill, and have asked that it be passed. I believe this Bill will be accepted with gratitude by the ship-owners and sailors in the inland waters. When the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) argues so strongly against phacing a Bill of this kind on the statute-book, unless some other concession is granted by the American (iovermment. and when he pleads so anxiously for the interest of this Canalian wrecking company, why does he not at the same time think of persons who have other interests in the comntry, when he argaes and speaks in favour of unrestricted reciprocity! He argues against reciprocity in this matter, but in other matters he wants reciprocity, wo matter whose interests are injured. But this is a case where the trade interests desire the adoption of this measure, where the shipowners desire it. where the mariners desire in. and where in the interests of hamanity it should lee granted. 1 am very glad the dovernment have brought down the measure, and I shall be glad to see it hecome law.

Mr. MoGRE:OR. With respect to the remarks of the hon. member for Frontenac (Mr. Kirkpatrick) it is quite true that some years ago it large number of Canadians were in favour of reciprocity in wrecking. But the hon member must remember that some citizens of this Dominion have incurred a heary expense in providing themselves with wreek. ing appliances. At Amhersthury, a very lange amoment of money has been expended on tugs and wher wrecking outit, and the proprietors will lose a large portion of their investment if this Bill should pass. A company has alsi, heen established at Windsor under the belief that the dovermment would retain the law now in force, as they have alopted a stringent policy with respect to wrecking laws. Ther have also incurred a large outlay : and. in fact, they feel they have been very bally usen. It is true it may le asked why should we mot hate reciprocity in this matter when we advocate reciprocity in other matters: But this is only one plank of the reciprocity platform. If we had coasting trade rights in the United states, if we had one ressel as compared with 1,0 MO owned by the Americans, it would be different. They have large insurance companies which control a very large number of vessels, and when wrecking is to le done the work is given to their own wrecking companies. They have the full management of the working of their wrecking companies. Under the present law the Canadians possess the sole right of wrecking in our own waters; and the adoption of this measure will destroy the trade and will canse our companies to lose large sums of money.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). The Ministe: of Militia, when this subject was under discussion before, informed the House that he was realy to support a measure of this sort, if it was not a one-sided measure, and he favoured reciprocal free trade in the matter of coasting trade of the two countries. The hon. gentleman went to Washington. It is to be presumed that his siew on the whole subject was presented and discussel, and the House is entitled to information on the sulject. The Minister has brought down a proposition in his capacity as a Minister which he hats hitherto opposed and litherto regarded as one-sided. I think this is a titting opportunity for the hom. gentleman to tell us what success he has had, and to lay on the Table any papers that may relate to this subjeet, the sulbject as he understosid it, the subject embracing all that he thouglit ought to bee embraced in it, in onder that the House may see how it was that the hon. gentleman did not succeed in attaining his object. Weare entitled to any memomandun or papers upon this subject, and to the report which the hom. yentleman has made, as well as some lefence of the position which the hom. gentleman now takes.

Mr. BOWELL. Mr. Chairman, it would be folly on my part to saty chat I did not anticipate the remarks which have been made by the member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton), as well as the member for Ontario (Mr. Eilgar), and also by the member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills). My ohjection, speaking for myself individually, and speaking on hehalf of the (iovernment, in the past was, because the offer which had heen made was one-sided and impracticable, apart altogether from the principle at stake. We would much mather have entered into mutual arrangements, including the coasting trale buth on the sea coast and on the inland waters. The hom. member for Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) says that we have made a surrender without asking for any return whatever, and he would like to know whether this question was disenssed or not. It was discossed fally, and one of the first lemands we made upon the secretary of state of the American (ionermment, was that it should be eonsidered. The पuestion was asked us at once: Do you propose to exteml that to the sea coast as well as to the inland waters : and our reply was. that we were guite prepared to give it the fullest possible interpretation to enter into arrangements hy which there would lie free coasting, not only on the sea coast, but also on the inland waters. That was oljected to. Then we proposed to contine it to the inland waters, and the argments for some little time fro and ron were on our part in facour of it, and on theirpart agrainst it : Mr. Blaine give many reasons to show that they did not feel inclined to surrender a right to any other eomentry which they considered to le in the interest of their ship-owners. When we found that it was impossible to obtain the freest reciprocity in this coasting and wrecking, then the suggestion was made to the American secretary of state that they should so change and alter their law as to give the fullest rights and privileges to Canalian wreckers and wrecking plant in ti:eir waters, including towing and other rights, which this Bill gives them : and if that were conceded we were prepared to accept it, although it was not all that. we wanted or all that we should like. In reference to free coasting in the inland waters, it was pointed out to Mr. Blaine, that the United States should not be afraid of Camadia with it small population and its comparatively smail tomage, as compared with a country of $(\mathbf{0} 0,000,000$ ) of people and the enormous tonnage that they have: Notwithstanding that argument they declined to make the concession. The ques. tion then arose as to whether we should enter into mutual arrangements by which life and property should te stred, giving the fullest and freest intercourse and entry into their waters. as they would have into our waters; and adding to itthat which we contended on this side of the House should he conceded. and which my friend from Frontenac (Mr. Kirkpatrick) thinks amennts to nothing, and which remark wats cheered by the: member for (Ontain (Mr. Edgar) --that unless that privilege were given it would render negotiations. mugatory. Mr. Blanc acknowledged that unless these rights and privileges were cenceded the Bill would le of no use. sin far as we cond press the guestion of coasting upon the secretary of State it was pressel, and when we foumi we conld not get it we consented to acept the Bill comtaining the provisions now hefore the House. The hom. member for Norfolk (Mr. Charltom) was, I think, quite correct in the statements he made inexplanation of the remarks of the hon. member for Frontenac (Mr. Kirk patrick). There is no wrecking compmy in (analia that han asked for the repeal of the laws as they exist to-lay, wher than that which has its healquarters in Kingston: but on the other hand I do not know of a single ship-owner from Port Arthur to, Montreal, and particnlarly those engaged in the grain trade, who hats not demamded mast earnestly the concessions which we are now giving in this Bill. It is somewhat annsing to those who have given this question any study, to hear members on the other side of the Honse. and particularly the member for West Ontario (Mr. Edgar) and the member for Essex (Nr. Mctiregor), lecturing us upon a change of opinion. when it is known that the first orders to prevent American vessels from assyisting vessels wrecked or in distress in Camadian waters, and that tom of a most restrictive chanater, were issued by the gentlemen now ocenpying the Opposition benches in this Hoase, when they were in pows. The first orter closely restricting wrent:ing in the inlanl waters of cimada, was issued by my predecessor in the Mackengie (iovermment. I have n. doult at the instamee and with the approcal of his colleagues, in 1si... That Order in Comucil had the same force as if it were an Act of Parliament: and han it leen carried out literally, not only the ditficulties. but the dangers to life and property would have acerned, to which my hom. friemd fromis Frontenac (Mr. Kirkpatrick) referred. There has not leen a single case of a character, which hasever come to my knowledge, similar to that which was mentioner by the member from Frontenac (Mr. Kirkpatrick), of life and property having. heendestroyed owing to a refusal on the part of the Canadian fovermment to grant the concession to imerican wreckers maler such circumstances.
Mr. KIRKPATRICK. I did not say it was owing to a refusal.
Mr. BowelL. Because they did not get it.
Mr. KIRKPATRICK. Yes.
Mr. BOWELL. Well, I will go further and say that during 13 years I have had the management of that matter in my departinent, and consequently every telegram and every letter affecting a wreck. or applications for permission for American vessels to save property, has come under my notice, and I know of no case similar to that which my hon. friend has referred to. I was very glad to hear the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) state that in no instance had there ever been a refusal on the part of the Canalian dovernment :
bat, on the contrary, the ciovernment had lreen so liberal, ats almost to render the law ats it stamds on the statute-look nugatory. There was a calse in 187., if my memory serves me right, in which representations we:e made to the department that owing to a refusal on the part of the late dovernment to permit American vessels to ge to the relief of wrecked ressels, that lives had lreen lost. Cpon full investigation it was found that there wats not one word of truth. or anything pertaining to truth, in the complaint which had lieen made. A vessel had been wreckel, hat those who were alive on lnaral were rescoed hy Mr. Mccallum, now a senator, and there was mothing ilone on the part of the Aclministration of that day which led, either to the loss of one dollar's worth of property, or to the loss of life which osecurreal. I hope that the predictions made ly the hom. member for North Norfolk, that the wrecking companies in this comatry will be wipel ont of existence hy the passige of this Bill, will not be fultilleil. We hear continually from that side of the Honse that Comadians are as enterprising, as poshing, anl as capable of competing with the Americans, at any other people in the world. This measure is an illustration of the truth of this statement : and the hom. gentieman, who has made this declaration wer and over again. and is fuite sure that other Canaitian inlustries would not tre wiped ont ly American competition, will surely not expect us to believe that this is the only case in whish the Canadian people are mable w compete with their neighbours. I have a hetter "pinion of camalian saifors than that, and I sincerely hope that the hom. gentleman's predictions will not be fultilled. I do nut know that I need say anything further on this guestion. If there are any other points on which members desire information, I shall tee happy to give it: l hut 1 wish the House to understami that whatever the opinions of the members of the fiovermment, and my own individually, may have been in the past. I do not helong to that class of perple commonly termed Bourbons, who never change. 1 ann puite willing to adrance: I an. quite willing to surrender opinions which I may have held in the past, if I find on maturer reflection that the interests of the country demand a change; and if any man ocelpying the impertant position of a Minister of state does not do that, the somer he vacates his presition the better.
Dir. CHARLTON. There must be something $q^{\text {uite }}$ seductive in the atmosphere of Wiashington.
Mr. BoWELL. Is that the reasom you go there sor often:
Mr. CHARITON. I do not know that I have been there so often as my hom. friend the Minister of Militia, and if I have been, I have not been put so strongly under sommolent influences. The hon. Minister talks quite differently to-day from the strain in which he has talked on this subject hitherto. The Govermment. I suppose, still profess to protect the interests of Canadians. They adopted a policy with regard to wrecking, which called into existence a large amount of wrecking plant, and caused the investment of a large amomint of capital. under the tacit assurance given by the Government that such investments would be protected. A number of wrecking companies have been formed, which have invested money in tugs, steam pumps, living apparatus, hydraulic jacks and all the paraphemalia for carrying on wrecking operations; and when the business has developed under the fostering care of the dioiermment, they suddenly withdraw their protection altogether. The action of the Govermment in this matter is ineonsistent with their position in caring for the interests of the Canadian people.

Mr. BOWELLL. I would like the hon. gentleman to explain what inconsistency means, and then apply it to himself?
Mr. (CHARLTON. I maty have been incomsistent, but I do not propase to he inemsistent to-lay. The hom. gentleman gives us a verbal account of his interview and disenssion with the American secretary of state. He tells us that the Canalian Commission discussed this inlestion with the American secretary. They first proposed that the whole coasting trate of the seaberard, and that of the inlanl waters, should be thrown open, inclading wrecking. That heing declined. they next proposed that if the Americans would open the whole consting trale of the inland waters. we would give them reciprocity in wrecking, and the secretary of state declined the proposition.

Mr. BOWFLLL. No: I sid reciprocity in coasting.
Mr. CHAPLTON. I refer to the proposition made first, of coasting on thesea coast and thenon the lakes, lwoth of which were denien. The Minister of Customs tells us that they got all they could get, anll what wat it: If the result of their visit to Wishington was to surremder an important advantase which we had hitherto enjoved. I do not think it is one on which they need phime themselves very greatly. As the hom. gentleman has almitted, we cecupied a position rery adrantageoms to ourselves in regard to wrecking. On the waters of the inland lakes there was a large commercial marine, ninetenths of which helonged to a foreign power: we possessed one-half of the lake coasts where wrecks were liable to oceur. We hand. in the ation of the American (:overmment, done before the hon. gentleman ocecupied the position of Minister of Customs. precelents for the course we pursued. They first aloptel the policy of restriction ; and the order to which the hon. gentleman alludes as having passed moler the Mackenzie Govermment, was in retaliation for the order issued hy the American Govermment, and was, in the line of the policy adopted ly that (iovermment. We were placel in this position, that on our coasts nine-tenths of the wrecks were American vessels; and following the precelent set by the Americandiovernment, we were entitled to enjoy the adrantage of salvage and wreckage on our coasts. The policy of the Govermment has called into existence several wrecking companies, the investment of large sums of money, and a large quantity of plant and material for carrying on this work. The facilities provided 1 y these companies were ample for all the wants on our consts, and if they did not prove to be ample, the (iovermment were at all times ready to grant permits to wrecking companies from the United States to come in and assist. Now, the Govermment through the Ninister of Militia informs us that having disenssed this question at Vagnington, and having been unable to oltain reciprocity in the coasting trade either on the inland waters or on the sea coast, they gave away the wrecking privilege, the very privilege which the Minister time and again has asserted to be of great adrantage to ( anadia. They could not get anything, so they gave away what we had. They gave away the very leverage we possessed for forcing from the Americans some concession. That is not the kinl of reciprocity which 1 have been advocating. If we have auything in our hands which we can use for the purpose of securing an adrantage fon moselves, it was legitimate on our part to use it. No incorest had suffered in consequence of our enforcing this privilege, and our commissioners in their trip to Washington have stultified their record, they have gone against their own professed principles, and they have surremlereal an import. to Wiashingtom and the Yankees outwittel them. The Minister says they got the privilege of towing thrown in : but that is the very thing necessary to any wrecking at all. They went down to Washington, and they simply got reciprocity in wreck ing. They surrenter the adrantage we have in possessing one-half the coist, in possessing one tenth the mercantile marine, in having one-half or more of the wreckage in our own control, and in having createl companies to attend to it. They have stultified their own record, they have gome against their own principles, they have sacrificed an interest created by their own policy. No that, while 1 do not say that this thing they have done is nothing perhaps in the interest of hamanity, it is mot consisient with their previons record. They have sarrendered an adsantage and got no equivalent, an alsantage we ought to have retainel in our hambs until the Americans were willing to give us something. A concession the Americans should have male is the coasting trade on the inland lakes, and they prolably would have given us this if wehad stool out in the matter. The Ministerof Customs says he hasevery confilence in (cimadianability tocompete with the Americams. But, sir, we are hamdicapped. It costs more for us to create wrecking plant, we have to pay huty on steam pumps, hy hraulic jacks and various kinds of plant imported, which the American wrecking company gets free of duty, and we have, in many cases, to pay duty on cral. Then we have the underwriting influence of the great lakes against the Canalian wreeking companies, which camot get fair-play, and the business will go to Amerian companies, whether they do it cheaper or not and whether they have greater facilities or not. Consequently, the Canadian companies which, relying upon the gool faith of the fioverument, inrested their money, supposing the Govermment would protect their interests, are placed in this position, that their capital is completely wiped out and we have secarednoad vantage whatever in return. The Government have always denied that, so far as the interests of humanity and conmerce were concerned, there was anything in the demand made that there should not le protection to wrecking. They have surrendered the rights and advantages they had in their own hands, and they have got nothing in return. I do not think now, in the light of their own report, and their own press, and the position they have taken in this matter, they have anything to congratulate themselves upon in the result of their visit to Washington.

On section 3,

Mr. BoWELL. There are certain provisious which prevent coasting and also salving goods that are wrecked. This is to provide that the Customs Act shall not interfere with the operation of this law. It was necessary to do that in order to stop a Customs ofticial from preventing, in the exercise of what he might consider his duty, coasting by American ressels in saving vessels or goods.

On section 4,
Mr. Bow ELL. The section reals in this way: "When the Governor in Comeil is advisel that the privileges of aiding any vessel wrecked or disabled in the United states." I propose to make it read: "Aiding any vessel or property wrecked, disabled or in distress in Auerican waters." That makes it in aceord with clause No. I.

Mr. CHARLTON. I malerstood the hom. gentleman to say that by arrangement with the Secretary of state, this would include the waters of Lake Nichigam. I suppose it will also include the waters of Lake superior, at the head of the lake leyond the Canadian Iwmulary line: How would it lie with Saginaw Bay and lieorgian Bay, also under our own exclusive jurisidiction :

Mr. BOWELL. The hom. gentleman did not real my remarks right. I dicl not say that I discussed the question of Licke Michigim with Mr. Blaine. What I said was that the miderstandiug leetween us was that it should apply to all waters contiguons to either country, and that would include Michigan as well as (ierngian Bay:

Mr. (HARLTON. Nio.

Mr. BOWELLL. Execpt what might he urmed inliand waters. We have the right, muler the Treaty of Washingtom, to navigate inland waters, and have the same rights in bake Michigan as they themselves.

Mr. MIILS: (Bothwell). For ten years.
Mr. BOWFLLL For alength of time. If these rights were denied hy the United states, muler the interpretation of their Act, we should at once, I take it, repeal the Aet we have passed, authority being given for that purpose miler this Bill to the Governor in (ouncil. I cammet conceive it possible, under the molerstanding we have had, that the Anerican fovermment would attempt to restrict the operations of Canalian wrecking plant in Lake Michigan or any other waters they could reach. I am sure we should not do so under this Bill, with the mulerstanding we have. If they put a stricter interpretation upon the Act, depend upon it the Canadian Cuvernment will, in cluty lomad, pursue the same course.

Mr. CHARLTON. I am sorry to hear the hom. gentleman say that I was under misapprehension in supposing this matter was mulerstood. I doubt very much whether the dimerican fovernment will consider Lake Michigan, or even Saginaw Bay, as waters contiguous to the lxoundary line of Caniada. Lake Michigan is entirely within Americim territory. It does not approach the Camadian line at all ; and if the Government intend to insist upon the right of wrecking for Canadian vessels in Michigan, I apprehend the measure will le wrecked at the ontset. I do not know that their refusil to ahmit our wreeking vessels into Lake Michigan would necessarily be an injustice which would warrant the Government in proposing to take a corresponding step with regard to Georgian Bay and other waters of Canala which are not contiguous to Americain waters. If, however, the Government insist upon access to Lake Michigan, I trust they will hear in mind also that in Saginaw Bay, the arm of Late Hurom, at the head of which are situated the large cities of Bay City and Saginaw, with their enormous lumbering interests, is one of the most important points on the lake. and they are justly entitled to possess the right of wrecking and trwing. I am sorry this matter is not more explicitly fefined. I am sorry that in this Bill there is not some definition of what the waters are that shall he covered by the operation of the Bill. I am sorry that the thing is left indefinite, and that there is necessity for interpretation of what is meant hy the phrase contained in the Bill. There may be a great difference of opinion, for I question whether the Americans will considere Lake Michigan a booly of water coming under the operation of the Act. However, under the provisions of the Act, we have simply to leare the protection of Canadian vessels in the hamds of the fiovernment, as they take power to refuse to carry the bill into operation until, I suppose. satisfactory arrangements are male with the American (iovernment.

Mr. Bow ELL. The Bill itself states that.
Mr. CHARLTON. The Bill gives the power on the liovermment, hut we do not know what are the views and the intentions of the Government.

Mr. BoW ELL. It is very haml to satisfy the hom. gentleman. I have given the committec every possible explamation amd have stated that we put the widest possible interpretation on this iangnage. and that, muless these rights are conceded to (Guada and to the (anadian wrecking plant, we will unt give these rights to the Americans, and that includes Lake Michigan. Lake Michigan is a water as contiguous to (amadia as our northem waters, such as the deorgian Bay, are contiguons to the Unitel States, and if this term" contignmis" does not apply to Lake Michigan, it does not apply to our waters on the north shore. This diovermment will look closely after the rights of - allanda in this matter.

Mr. Mecirecior. The word " towing ${ }^{*}$ is of very little use unless you include Saginaw Bity. If our boats cannot go into Saginaw Bay and up to Pay (ity and Superior City, you might as well do withont the law altogether. Lake Michigan is eno miles long and 80 miles broad, and it is mot comtiguous to our country. If we do not have the anvantage of towing up the straits, we might as well do away with this law.

Mr. BOW ELLL. I am afraid the hon. gentleman has not considered the question involved in this Bill. He is discussing the question of towing, which is alout the same thing as coasting. A Canadian boat can go into American waters as an American boat can come into Canadian waters, and can take ressels in tow which are going to the American shores as the American tug can take vessels that are coming to the Canadian shore, but they cannot tow vessels from port to port. This Bill only applies to vessels engagen in wrecking or salving.

Mr. McGREGOR. I do not sec that we are getting any advantage l,y this legislation, but we are simply giving away what we already have.

Mr. BOWELL. I am glad to see there are so many protectionists on the other sile.

Mr. Charlitos.

On section $\overline{5}$,

Mr. CHARLTON. The assurance given by the Minister in regard to the carrying of this into effect. I think, we are bound to consider sufficiently satisfactory. The difficulty is that he is giving away a very important vantage ground and has not got a consideration for it. I hope the dovermment will watch our interests keenly. If they can secure entrance to Lake Michigan and Naginaw Bay aml can go to Superior ( ity, that will be an adrantage.

Mr. BOW ELL. It might be well for me to read the memorandum and agreement entered into between the United Niates Govermment and those who were negotiating with them. It says:
"It is understood on the part of the fovernment of the United States that under the Act of Congress approved 24 th May. $18: 0$, relating to vessels wrecked or disabled in the waters conterminoms to the Linited States and the Dominion of Canada, the aid and assistance provided for in said Act includes all necessary towing incident to said aid and assistance, and that nothing in the cousting and Customs laws restricts the salving operations of such vessels and their appliances. Should the Canadian Government enact legisation similar to the Act cited, the Secretary of the Treasury will issue thenecessary instruetions to secure the privileges above stated."
I think, from the reanding of that memoramolum which was accepted by both parties, it will be seen that all the objections mate to the bill ly the hom. member for Norfolk are covered except in regarl to the general principle.

SUPPLC-COMMFRCIAI, TREATIES.

Mr. FONTVE movel that the Honse again resolve itself into Committee of supply.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Mr. Speaker, I am ahout to submit to the Horse a motion of very great importance, a motion which, in my opinion, the House would be wanting in its duty to the country if it fails to support. I am almont to ask the House to declare that the time has come when commercial treaties, in the interests of canada, should he negotiated hy persons whore responsible: to the diovermment of (anada and for whose acts the advisers of the Crown in Canada should lee held responsible to the House of Commons. We have often, within these walls, had drawn for us lnight word pictures of our immense area, telling us how we spanned the continent from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific, and how we stretched from the fertile regions of the temprate zone far into the regions of perpetual frost. We have had presented to us glowing word pictures of the, teeming millions who, at no distant day, are to fill the waste places, and to turn What is now a solitude into fruitful fields, dotted with towns and cities, filled with a busy and prosperous population. But after these delightful anticipations are realized, even our national powers are to remain the same as they are at present : are to remain stationary, our political disabilities are to continue. and our political life and actions are to operate within the limits fixed by the events and by the eonditions of a period long since passed. Though the country may grow to the thought, feeling and stature of manhool, there must le no constitutional growth corresponding with the general progress in wealth and population of the country. I repudiate this doctrine; I maintain that it is one inimical to our progress and opposed to the genius of our institutions. Mr. Speaker, the time has come when the gentlemen on the Treasury benches ought to deal candidly with the Honse : they ought to make their position on this subject of commercial treaties, perfectly intelligible to the House and to the comntry. If I rightly understand them, it is their contention that our foreign trade relations must, as long ats we remain a part of the Empire. continue in other hands than ours, so in their opinion we must choose between British comnection and self-govermment beyond that measure of self-govemment which we already possess. We must consent to leave for ever the regulation of our foreign trade in other hands, or we must submit to being pat out of the British fannily and left to protect ourselves from foreign encroachment. I do not know whether, if this altemative was the necessary result of the pro. position Which 1 maintain, that it would serionsly menace our future prospects: lut I deny altogether that ainy such alternative is hefore us arising ont of this subject. That such an alternative is involved hats been often asserted, but no attempt has ever leen marle to sustain this contention ly mational argment. When repre sentative govermment was demamled liy the people of this colony half a century ago, the sime assertion was marle, the same kind of argument was used, against the demand which was then thought reasonahle. It was asked, how a governor could be controlled liy the Necretary of State for the Colonies, and at the same time follow the alvice of a (olonial Administration: The demand, it was said, was incompatible with the unity of the Empire. and so the Reformers of that day were stigmatized Republicans in search of a pretext for putting an end to British authority on this continent. Such, Sir, was the contention of that perion. No iloult the connection was endangered, not, howerer, from acquiescence in the proposed reform, but from the resist ance with which that reformi was long met. We had reached a state of maturity when it was no longer possible tokeep the people of the country in leading. strings, it wis no longer possible to persuade them tamely to submit to the perpetuation of the political abuses against which they at that time protested. Our fathers were told, as we have been told, of the greatness of the parent state, the alvantages of its protection, the wisdom of its statesmen, the duty of implicit oberlience, and the wickerness of discontent. They were urged to venerate the oll flag, to uphoh the old system, and to staml by the oll families. The advice sounded amazingly like the adrice which, with equal disinterestedness and with equal patriotic devotion, was, a little more than a year ago, proclaimed from the rostrom and reiterated ly the newspapers of hon. gentlemen who now sit upon your right. But in spite of this defence of the ancient system, it was overthrown. The demands for reform were conceded, and the constitutional changes which were long sought by the leaders of the Reform party, were brought into practical operation. Every one in this country, whether in the House or out of it, knows with what effect these changes were brought into practical operation. None of the evil consequences which were confidently predicted, came to pass. Instead of the disorders such as we were told would arise, there was contentment ; the bonds of union between the colony and the parent state were strengthened, the affections of the people everywhere took the place of military garrisons. Nothing perished but the ascemlancy of those who had subordinated the general public interest to their own pecuniary of personal advancement. No doult the men who, for a long perion of years, had become açuainted with, or had become habituated to, a certain official routine, to the exercise of a certain kind of authority, were loth to give up that anthority : they hat confoumed themselves with the political institutions of the country. Such men ion not well see how the machine of government is to be worked without them. They are like the hangman in "Barnaly Rudge" who, when he was conclemmed to death, asked that he might le spared for the sake of the constitution. These men did not see how the affairs of the (iovermment could be carried on in their alisence. Now, these gentlemen do not say they are the state, hat they do regard themselves as a necessary part of its governmental mathinery. ( hur trans-athantic officials who, in the progress of the colonies, are from time to time deprived of a portion of their authority, and who are, therefore, opposed to change, do not, nevertheless, exhibit the same ardour or the same fervour in opposing the constitutional reforms that are demanded, that are sometimes exhibited with less excusable reasons hy hom. gentlemen oft this side of the Atlantic. They do not employ very strong arguments in support of the ancient regime : they donnot use the old man, or misuse the ofl flag. nor think they may successfully resist those who are using their lesst embeavoms to aljust the institutions of the country with the reguirements of their time, and who assiduously lahmur to prevent the functions of government from leing perverted to the service of mworthy objects. Now, Mr. Speaker, I atfirm that we have once more outgrown the limits of the athority with which we have for a long tince been content. Communities, like persons, have their perions of infancy, of youth and of manhoorl. Nations are not formed in a day. The attributes which go to make a people into a mation camot he assumed at will. The sovereignty of states is not a matter of legislation, or of official determination. States grow up by slow degrees from the comlition of depenlency to that of a sovereignty. They are not legislative contrivances called into existence hy the unscrupulous ambition of one class of public men or ly the patriotism of another aml a different class: they are borlies of organic growth. From the dawn of their political life they have vital forces operating from within and environing influences operating from without. which, as they progress in wealth and in population, give them an ever-increasing degree of complexity and create an ever-increasing necessity for an extension of their atministrative, their executive and their legislative authority. They enter the society of nations whenever the time comes that they feel the want, and are prepared to undertake the responsibility which international obligations impose. It is not the intellectual capacity of the people, it is not a high degree of intelligence on their part. it is not high culture, it is not the strength of their moral fibre, it is not their industivial habits alone, or all these together, that determine whether a community is entitled to sovereign authority or whether it is not. These are important factors, no doult, in determining the use which a state will make of the authority which it claims, and with which it is invested. But government is a practical want, and we have no assurance that the powers of government will he wisely used any furt her than the necessity for those powers actually are felt. These powers are limited in various ways: by the pecomiary comlition of the population, ly their physical circmmstances, by their indus. trial progress, by their external relations, political and commercial. Where there is little wealth accumulated necessity compels people whoexereise political power to use their resources in the direction of their most pressing wants. Those which are most severely felt are those which are usually tirst provided for: We do not, nor ought we to seek to clam for a political community power without responsibility. I need not stop to point out the abloses which would lee certain to arise if one govermment were to decide on the measure of expenditure and another govermment were repuired to provide the means hy which these ohligations were to be met. If govermment be matter of growth. it is sutficient that the powers we pos. sess shonhl lie such as to enable us tumeet by pratcical legislation. and by executive anthority, all our wants and all our necessities. It is ont of these phases that a state grows in power, as it grows in the extent of its interest, and that there arises the difference between a territorial and prorincial govermment umder our constitution. It is out of these phases of political glow th that the difference letween a territorial and a state government arises under the constitution of the C'nited States. These distinctions grow out of the eircumstances of the population and are recognized hat are not created hy law. What is proper at one time in a commmity may have been improper at an earlier period, imel it is lecause of this increasing degree of eomplexity, and the corresponding extension of authority which ought to aceompany that complexity, that we sily that one colony of the Empire may rightly claim to lee entrusted with anthority which camiot be fairly clamed by another colony. One of the leest known maxims of the Finglish common law is that a colony of British subjects carry with them into in listant portion of the Queen's lominions somuch of the lat of Fugland as maty be suited to their circamstances. No mater how well informed the members of that community may be, they do not carry with them the whole bolly of the Enghish law. There is much of it they have no use for. There is much of it that is the necessary accinlent of the historical growth of the parent state. There is much of it that grew out of the conlitions of early goverument which do not prevail in the parent state in modern times. So these features, these provisions of the latw, are not carried with the colony. There is no constitutional rule which withholls from a colony of British subjects any particular power or authority which they may reasonably claim, and which they may claim as necessary for the promotion of their interests and the protection of their rights. There may be conditions and circumstances in a new colony of Englishmen or of British subjects so different from anything that exists in the parent state, that there is nothing in the boily of the law which they carry with them, there is nothing in the law which they left behind them, which will adequately meet their wants. But they are not left, under the English constitutional system, helpless. They carry with them not only certain provisions of the law which are suited to their circumstances, but they carry with them as a part of the common law the power to call into exisrence the machinery by which that law may be amemen, by which it may be supplemented, hy which it may be adjusted to their wants and their circumstances. The common law is said to be the perfection of reason, and it would fall very far short of this if a British subject did not carry with him into a new colony that part of the law which confers on him the rights and privi. leges of a freeman, freedom from taxation without his consent, the right to comsel his Novereign either personally or liy representation, the right to give his consent to any change in the law of the province by which he is to lwe governerl. The common law in the United Kinglom does not comfer on the (rown in the colony by settlement any greater authority than the crown has over the subject in the parent state. What the Crown camot do in the parent state withont the aid of the legishature the (rown cimmot dor in the colony without like aid. The Crown camot innpose a tax alone. It camon do solig the aind of the Legislative (ommeil: it can only do so by consent of the party personally or hy his consent through representation in Parliament in the colony assembly. ed. In the very nature of things there are immense fields within the limits of which the colony cloes not legrislate. It makes no attempt to legislate, not becallse the power has been withheld under the authority of the common law, not becanse power has been taken away by any Imperial enactment, but becanse it is shut out by its local and peculiar circhmstances, by the simple chanacter of its wants and hy the interest of the population. If you look, Sir, at the condition of the colony, you will find that the alministration of civil justice largely relates to matters that are of a simple character and are easily umlerstoon. You will find that the expenlitures on the objects of government are in the first instance mostly municipal. There are roarls and bridges to buili, harbours to protect, the education of the chidiren of the commmity to provide for, courts of justice to establish, the mavigation of rivers toimprove, roads comnecting the different settlements of the interior with each other and with the coast, to make. These are usually the matters which tirst occupy the attention of a colony of Englishmen: not lecanse in a new country their rights are more limited than they are in the parent state ; lut because they have fewer political interests. We see in a colony, the state in the process of formation, and the publiceluties, and the public functions of a higher order are of a later growth. There are a hundred things which the sovereign state is callen upon to deal with, lout with which the colony has for a long series of years no concern. Now, this pouer of government increases with the necessities of the population. Power and responsibility, under the English constitutional system of hand in hand, and the same thing may be atfirmed of power and necessity arising from the growth of a colony towards nationality. The tirst of these is evoked hy the parent state for the purpose of upholl. ing and maintaining its superintemlence over the Empire : the seconl, the power arising from necessity, the colony invokes for the extension of its authority and for the rational aljustment of its freedom in accordance with its wants aml with its interests. Power, at the first age of colonial existence, is often wisely exercised by the parent state, which at a later perion, if serious almses are not to grow ap, must le transferred to the colony itself, as a part of the power which is necessary to the maintenance of the principles of self-government. The bountary line letween the authority of the parent state and the colony under our constitutional system, is not it fixed limitary line, but a varying line which alters its position in proportion as the wealth and population of the colony increases, and as the circumstances of the colony are altered. The political horizon of a colony in its infancy is necessarily very near, but as the colony advances in civilization, in population, and in wealth. the prititical horizon recedes, the area embraced within the authority of colonial legislation and fiovermment is increased, and the authority of the parent state over the colonies is proportionately diminished. In other words, the Imperial Parliament and the alministrative officers of the parent state, are lyy the necessities of the colony relieved of a part of their trmst. That is the position. Where the colony hate no interest at all in the subject, or where it had no interest distinct from that of the parent state, the parent state may without injury. or inconvenience, or any sense of oppression, and witliont any clanger of friction, exercise such authority. But, Sir, in the growth of colonies the time comes where the way parts: and a colong may take one road in its interest, and the parent state may continue on the other. It is perfectly clear that whenever that comblition of things arises that the colony can no longer afford, with regard to that particular matter, to allow the authority to remain with the parent state, without having its interests subordinated and sacrificed to those of the superior authority. Therefore, if you examine. Mr. Speaker, the progress of colonial government mule the English constitutional system, you will find that in every case where representative govermment has been entahlished, the theoretical principle which 1 have just stated exactly corresponds with the historical facts. There is no exception ; it is a necessary consequence of grow th under our system, the freer that system is. the lessinterference there is, the more promptly concession is male by the parent state to the wants of the colony, and the more clearly they are laid before the parent state, the less will be the friction, and the stronger the bond of union hetween them. Now, Nir, no one would venture to argue before a judicial trihunal that when a person comes to a point where his interest and his cluty are on opposite sides, that he may be safely left to go against his interests in discharge of a duty. The rule which has been recognized as an elementary rule in the principles of jurisprudence is equally applicable in the armministration of public aftairs. Every one knows that gross abuses would spring up if that rule of law were alolished. Now, this rule, I say, is equally applicable to the conduct of the alministration of the affairs of the state. Experience shows that the rule of fair dealing is more readily applied in private than in public affairs, and that the public conscience is less sensitive than the individual conscience. This is the necessary result from the fact that the individual stands alone against the whole community, and in matters of public interest it frejuently happens that onehalf the community, in political ethics as well as in questions of pullic policy, stands against the other half ; so that rules of upright dealings are more readily applied as letween one individual and another than between any indivilual and the state. on letween one state and another. Public opinion always comes nore promptly to the support of the public: as against the individual, than it does in one state against another. Take the case of some matter in which an imperial otficer is molertaking to act for a province. Is it not perfectly clear that in such a case there is in the tirst place a disposition to maintain things as they are : But, under visinclination to change and that strong interest which the parent state has in maintaining things as they are, a pul)lic wrong is often shiehled liy the ignorance, by the indifference, by the self-interest, by the false pelitical maxims which have become current in the community with regirel to the particular subject which is regarded as a grievance. In the case of one entrusted with authority in the parent state, there comes to the support of that official the public opinion of a very mumerons community-..of a commmity who undertake to maintain the existence of the oftice and the functions of the officer upon the ground that they have existen for a long series of years. And so we frequently find that the lest interests: of a province are hell in cheok by the maintenance of the anthority of some imperial ofticer whose functions ought to come to an enfl, and whose luty shoulil he superseded ly some other in authority. An otticial of the United Kingdom, in the discharge of his duty ahomal, cath never le able to give more than a submolinate place to colonial matters which are not alsomatters of great imperial concern. But. Sir, we are met at this point by the abjection that the extermal relations of all parts of the Empire mast ever remain in the hamls of Her Majestysatvisers at Westminster: that no other rule can le reconciled with the mity anl stahility of the Empire. This, Sir, it seenis to me, is simply legging the guestion in dispute. I deny it. Were the contention well fommed, it woill only prove this, that the destiny of the British Empire is that its colonies shall reach a perion of maturity, amd that the Empire shall then fall to pieces. The doctrine of imperial supremacy and of imperial superintendence was stated about a year ago with great force and preeision hy Lord Nalishury. In disenssing the action of the Imperial diovermment towamls . Newfomilland in its dispute with the dovemment of France, Lord Salishory made these ohservations in lefence of interference by imperial authorities. He said:
"We give them (the Newfoundland people) unlinited power in respect to their internal affairs because they will be the people who will suffer if they make a mistake. Therefore it is right that they should be in such matters independent. But if they make a dangerous mistake in this matter. it is not they who will suffer. It is we who run the whole risk, and they hardly any risk at all. I do not suppose that in case of war with France, the French would take the trouble to invade Newfoundland. And this being our risk, the whole burden and responsibility falling upon us, we should have the necessary power to defend our interests and our fellow subjects, and also to comply with international law, 10 fulfil international obligations, and to satisfy the pledged word of the country."
Now, I accept this statement as a true ethical and constitutional lasis for imperial supremacy and imperial superintendence. It is a pirtial statement of the comitions uniler which that supremacy may give place to colonial sovereignty. It may be superseiled, on account of locel langers or local interests, by local authority. The circumstances under which this transficence of anthority takes place from the Imperial Parliament and imperial offieers to the officers and aththorities in a depenlencr. I shall mulertake to state later. When, sir, we first set out to give practical effect to ond clailn wself-goverment, we confined ond demamds to our iomestic affairs: we limited those demands hy our local interests. We did so hecaase these were sufficient at that time to meet all our governmental wants. They are not such. howerer. ats to mett the wants of a commmoty such as we have now hecome. We have many evilences of this. Why. Nir. what meant that attempt at negotiation with France hy the diovernment of this comatry a few years ago: What meant the almortive negotiations of the (iovemment of Canala with the fionermment of Spain? What meant the demand on the Imperiad iovermment hy the iovernment of this comentry revently, that in the appointment of a commission to negotiate with the United states on the sulject of our fisheries, our eommercial telations, and all other matters of interest existing lee. $t$ ween the two comotries, whish were of common concern to us and to them, the fiovernment of Cimada should he represented. I say, Nir, that these things show that we are no longer a colony such as we once were, that weareno longeraninfantile commmonty, but a state possessing the instincts and interests which belong to a people who must he regarder in some respects as a sorereign people. Do they not show, Sir, that we believe ourselves to be the best guardians of our own in. terests? Do they not show that in respect of all those matters in which we have external relations. We believe that we can do more for ourselves than others candofor us? Sir, what meant the excursion of the hon. Minister of Finance to the West Inties sixteen months ago: It may be that the hon. gentlenan accomplished nothing: hat he hoper to atcomplish something when he set out. It may lie that the strength of the hon. Mi nister of Finance does not lie in the tielh of diplomaty. Whether the hon. Minister went to the West Indian Islames of his own free will. or whether in a moment of weakness he yiehled to the pressing demands and importumities of his colleagues, I do not think it is a matter of much conserpuace to enguire. However this may Ife. the Dinister of Finance set out on his voyage for the purpose of dealing with the relations hetween this country and those West Imdian Islands. If those relations are not very intimate at the present time, the hon. Minister of Finamee ani his colleagues, at whose instance he went, most have thought that it was desirable that those relations shonlh be more intimate. But, sir, the hon. gentleman, in going upon that journey, with the approbation of his colleagues, assumeil that the commercial relations of (Ganala with other countries were matters that properly fell within the jutisoliction of the Government of Canala, anil he acted upon that assumption. It is true that the countries which he visited were British possessions: but, Nir, if it was proper to go to the Island of Jamaical or to the Province of Guiana for the purpose of extenting the tratle of this country, it would have been ergually proper to have gone to Mexico. to Colombia, or to Brazil. It was with the external relations of the country that he undertook to deal. It was not political atfiliation that he was seeking in his visit to Jamaica, but wider markets. It must be assumed that in those visits he songht to promote the interests of the people of Canada, to contribute to their prosperity, and to add to their wealth. What the Minister aimed at, he did not accomplish. The action of the Govemment proved. however, another proposition besides the one which I have immenliately before me ; it proved the further proposition that Canada has not hecome a self-contained country, capable of consuming all. that it call proluce, and of prolucing all that it can consume. This was one of the promises hon. gentlemen mate in connection with their tiscal policy, and this promise has not been redeemed. It has, on the contrary, signally failed. I pats: hy that, howerer. for the present, and simply call the attention of the Honse to the fact, that the story of the wamlerings of this Minister. who sailed over the sea and then sailed back again. has not yet seen the light, This silence is suggestive and ominous. It show's that the Minister feels his political excursiondid not loring the dovemment glory nor the country grain. The Ministers have shown that they did not want closer trade relations with the neighbouring republic. They did not, in the interests of Canada, desire that our people should look to the Cnited States for anything. They hoped that this West Indian voyage would enable them to promise such an extension of trade as would quiet the mutterings of discontent which, previous to the elections of last year, were leing hearl. The hon. gentleman would have preferred negotiations with Russia, China, Timbuctors, or any other comitry on the glole rather than with the comntry on our immed. iate borders. Before his wanderings began, the Whole Amministration, of a large number of them at least. pail a visit to the Maritime P'rovinces. They knew hefore they started that there was discontent : they knew there was distress; they knew there were the mutterings of complaint which precede a coming storm. And so the hon. gentlemen pondered these things in their hearts, and in their eastem ohservations felt called upon to consider what measure of relief, other than reciprocity with the neighbouring republic, they could offer the people of Canadia, which would emable them to retain the confidence of the country. They wereanxious to discover a solution, no doubt. but a solution other than that which most obvionsly presented itself : and so, after this eastern excursion, after viewing the gromm upon our eastem border, the hon. gentleman set out upon this West Inclia royage. He visiterl the Leewand Islands, the Windward Islands, and, if I remember rightly, also the mainland. Fverywhere he failed in his negotiations. The anthorities in these West Indian provinces did not like the proposition of the hon. gentleman. They thought, perhaps, that the hon. gentleman was toro much like Cassius: he had a lean and hungry look: they thought, perhaps, that he offered tos little and wanted too much. The matters, after his explanation, were even more mixed and mulalled than they had heen before: the prospects diminished of treaty arrangements with the West India Islands, which, if fultilled, would have saved the hon. gentleman the terrible humiliation of three journeys to Washington and also relieved them from the necessity they felt under of in-. dulging in a good deal of not very candid talk abont the traitors who are seeking to dismember the Empire by lowering taxation on the products the people consume. The hon. gentleman failed in his West ludian mission, and from hour to hour after he had visited the country the news that came her indicated that failure. There has beell up to this time, so far as 1 know, no altempt to lay upon the Table of this House a full statement of the hon. gentleman's visit to that country in the interests of the public service ; and I have no doubt that if that correspondence and those propositions had been haid upm the Table, it would be seen that the visit of the hom. gentleman to the West Indies was really a burlesque upon negotiations. Sir, had the hom. gentlemen upon the Treasury benches any assurance whatever that there was a semblance of success in this excursion, the fire which burned so brightly upon the Conservative platforms in the hegimning of the election campaign would have contimed to glow mutil the day of the election ; but the hon. gentleman was unable to hold out any hope of success, and so the defence of the National Policy, with which the campaign was opened, was not the subject-matter of discussion on the part of the hom. sentleman and his colleagues and supporters when that campaign closed. If the hom. gentleman had succeeded with a single West Indian province, we would have heard nothing during the campaign of the march upon Washington after the battle, hut we would have heard a great deal of the magnificent achievements and bright prospects flowing from the hon. gentleman's visit to these happy isles. There would have been predictions, vast and vague, alout the unity of the Eimpire, alont the propriety of an imperial tariff, framed specially toexchude the $i$ ientiles from the imperial market and to put them on a footing of inequality, oratall events a tariff specially directed against our Samarition neighlours. But from time to time, the news came that the West Indian officials were opposed to the hon. gentlemanis proposition: From time to time, it was amounced. first, that one and then that aninther of those ofticials were opposed to the schemes of trade which the hom. gentleman had sulmitted to them. When the hon. gentleman set out, he must have forgotten that the allniration for the policy of protection, which, no doubt, he sincerely entertained, and which was entertained by his colleagnes, was a highly artiticial habit of mind. It was like the worship of the toads and the lizards in ancient Egypt, and it was not a condition of mind likely to be met with in men trained in the principles of political economy, men who imbibed their uotions of commercial policy from the mother country. It was not likely that such men would riew with other feelings than those of disgust and repugnance that policy of mutual protection which the hon. gentleman sought to extend over the West India Islands. Before the elections were over, the hon. gentleman and his colleagues ceased to sing paras in praise of the National Policy. They assured the people, in some instances, that it was a means to an end, that it was a temporary and coercive policy entered upon for the purpose of lringing Congress to its senses and of securing from the United states a wider market and freer trade. so what was called the national policy was superseded by what was claimed to be the old policy, the larger policy, the policy which was the end towards which the national policy was but the means, and so we find that these gentlemen half persuaded their followers that this old policy, as it was called, meant Canala for the Camadians. that it meant the National lolicy, that it meant anything that any class of the comemonity might think they would like to have as a commercial policy, aml so, during the progress of the electoral contest. it was anomuced that thare were to le immediate negotiations with the President of the United Ntates, and with the Congress after the elections were over. What for years had been pronounced an impossihility was declared to tre of easy attaimment, and so, immediately after the elections were over, a treaty of reciprocity was tole an accomplished fact. The ith of March was to lee a great day of victory. The Opposition were to be swept out of existence. The ohd party, unler the old flag, aceepting the ohd policy and led by the High commissioner, were to march int," Whashington and these negotiations were to be mo. dertaken : the farmer, despite Mr. Colly, wastohave reciprocity in matural prolnets : the manufacturers were to have protection, and trasts and combines were to be left in the care of the hom. member for West York (Mr. Wallace) : the prohlucer was to get letter pricesfor his somols, and the comsumer was to pay less. and so the electors were asked to stand by the ohl policy. I am not going to enter into a discussion of the old policy contained in the resolution of $18-5$. which, after some years, was brought out to do duty on this occasion. I am not going to show the incompatibility between that resolution and the sulseguent policy, hat what I wish to press upm the attention of the Honse, ami my reason for mentioning these matters, is that 1 may lring specially hefore you the fact that the hom. gentlemen on the Treasury benches, were disposed to mudertake the work of negotiation. They dind not trust to the regular ofticers. They knew that England hat an ambassador at Washington, an ambassador who was jealons of any interference with his functions, and, helieving that what these gentlemen umlertook to do fell within his exclusivedomain, felt perhaps that he had a right to object to the American liovernment against amy persons interfering except those who were specially authorized by Her Majestys icovermmem. Why, then, were these negotiations undertaken? Is it not a clear admission on the part of the cievermment that thiscomery has grown and has wipuired such dimensions and its foreign relations have acquired such a character that its interests are likely to be injureal if they are not dealt with directly hy representatives of the lominion? If that is not the case, why did the hon. gentlemen umlertake these negotiations: There may possibly le another explanation. If the Ministers were to speak frankly, they might say that the farmers of Canada were too much in earnest to permit them to palter with this question of reciprocity. A comdition of things had been reached when lxumas for children and cheap raw sugar for refiners would not sutisfy the great mass of the people. A condition of things had lieen reached when, to use the language of a former Minister of the Crown, it was useless to say that it would be detrimental to the agricultural population to have free trade in matural products with the United States. Conseruently the hon. gentleman felt that they must adopt the principle of reciprocity with the United States or they would never reach the shore without disaster. So they were compelled to abandon the National Policy, to talk reciprocity, to make their memorable visit to Washington, and then they said, this is not enough. We must proclain ome friendliness to the policy of reciprocity, and we must declare that we are prepared immediately to negotiate with the Conited States, and we must say that the Enited states have invited us to negotiate with them, or all the intuences which have been used in the past elections will not be sufficiently potent to enahle us to rach the shore in safety: This was the condition of things. The fommers of the National Policy superstition were wise in their generation. When the day of wath came, they were ready to throw down their altars, where they hat calleil on all patriotic Camadians to bring their offerings and their satcritices for the past thirteen years. I deprecate the motives which have been allegen for this change of policy. If hon. gentlemen had been honest and sincere in endearouring to secure reciprocity, they would never have returned an Canala empty-hamelen. We say that if Camarla is to succeed in this matter, she must act for herself, amb not by another. No matter how friendly the British ambassallor may be, ae acts for another comery, and another (invernment than this, and he can never forget that the parties to whom he is responsible have different notions from ours, and the subject may not present just the same aspects to them that it cloes to us, ania that he is not impelled to master the suljeet which most concerns us, nor is he compelled to consider it from our stampoint. He is not familiar with our circumstances, and never can feel as one of our own people would ior. He is never in tonch with the public opinion of this country, and there are harriers in the way of his ever being so plated. His want of information. his personal indifference, the absence of responsibility to us, his know ledge that mistake and failure will entail upon him no serious conseguences, remder him morally incapable of exeresing in the highest degree that ability and skill which our interest calls for at his hands: and those things which most reeply concern us and which affect our material well-leing must always lee subordinated to the general interest of the Empire for which he will be held to strict responsibility. Now, the Imperial fovermment and the (iovermment of Canada do not take evactly the same view of disputed questions. Take, for instance, the disputes of the Imperial Government with the United states. What they most want is the early disposition of a disagreeable dispute; they want to have it disposed of, they are ready to make large concessions to attain that end. What we want is a permanent recognition of our just rights: and that being so, it is of the first conseguence that we should uppoint the parties who are to have charge especially of our commercial affiars. I saly this because I think that the conduct of the hon. gentlemen, whenever those fuestions have arisen, shows that in practice, whatever they may have proclaimed from time to time, theoretically, on the the floor of Parliament, they have almitted the somndness of the proposition for which 1 contemd: If that lee so, if the imperial officer is not competent, not qualified, from the nature of his position and the nature of his responsibility, sufficiently to care for our interests, we see why it is the hon. gentlemen constantly insist, so far as the British representative at Washington is concerned, that his labours shall always be supplemented and efficiently supported by representatives of the Government of Canada. But no matter for what reason, the fact remains that the Ministers songht to enter inte dirert negotiations at Washington with the Wiashington anthorities : they lid not trust to the Fimbassy, and he their comduct they have atfinmed that the present constitutional mathinery is not andequate to the requirements of a colony such as this.

ofr. MILLA (Bothwell). Vinder the circumstances which 1 have mentioned ass to the practice of the fiovermment in the past, I would ask whether it is not now too late longer to oppose the principle embondied in the motion which I amakout to summit to this House. If it were in order to address myself to the Dinisters on the Treasury benches 1 would sity, that hitherto you have opposed, by your ipeeches, the principles embodied in my motion, hut you haveagain and again practically, though titfully. recognized the sommdness of that principle. Iou were compelled to choose between acting on the principles suggested by this motion, and accomplish. ing nothing leyond preparing a Minute of Council for His Fxcellency to forwarded to the Colonial Office. Sometimes the old course has leen alopted. and a despateh is written upon which no action is taken. It is left to mould in the shadows of the Colonial Utice, where traditional prejudices against every kind of change, are necessarily very strong. Sometimes a venerable ofticial who may have survived from a former generation, wonders why these medillesome colonies are anxions to take charge of part of their own business which has long been entrusted to that department, and which in his opinion they will discharge far less efficiently, and with far less skill, than the business has been managerl by the otficials of that office. If these gentlemen of routine have their way, there never would be any change, hut all things in relation to the govermment of the Enpire amd the powers and duties of colonies would remain as they are now. sometimes where urgent solicitation is made on the part of any colony with reference to foreign matters, the Colonial Otfice commmicates with the Foreign Office upon the subject, and a despatch is written to the British ambassudor of the country with which the colony has indirectly some busi. ness. That clespatch is read to the Minister of Foreign Affairs in that country, and a copy of it is left with him. It may be male, to some extent. the subject of a discussion; but the British Ambassador in all these matters is usually so illinformed that minute discussion is well nigh out of the question. He abstains from making any suggestion lest he might commit some blumder of which the colony will complain, and the matter never assumes a practical or definite form, there is nothing approaching a settlement or a basis of settlement arrived at, and in time the whole sulbject drops out of sight. Now, Sir, I would ask from hon. gentlemen in this House, why we should constantly importune the Colonial Office with reference to matters that specially concern ourselves and of which we ought to have charge ? If they are ever to be satisfactorily attended to, if the matters are to receive a proper solution, one that is required hy the merits and circumstances of the case, we ought to take charge ourselves. I think, Sir, we ought not to be :
suppliants in these cases where we onght to le masters, and where we ought to be masters lecause we are the parties chietly concerned. This principle in no waty differs from the principle of domestic self-government which has been recognized wherever responsible government is established in the colonies from the time of its first introduction. A British ambassanlor in a country almoal has so much to do for which he will be held to the fullest measure of responsibility, that he does not will ingly ald to his lathours and to his puhlic cares. Care and lalxorions stmly are necessary tomaster the problems which await solution even in this country, with respect to our external trade and with respect to the relations of this comentry with our immediate ${ }^{\circ}$ neighbour. An onticer, who is responsible to annther Administration, and who is under the supervision of another Parliament, whose interests are regarded as paramount and whose authority is clamed to be such, is never likely to give to the interests of a dependency, to its external relations, that attenrion and that care which are ahsolutely necessary. I an! of the opinion that those who have most carefully considered this matter will be least likely to dissent from this view. The ancient doctrine, that a colony ought to be known only through the parent state and ought omly to speak through the orgams of that state, is, no ionbit, strong, so far as the external relations of the colonies are concemen, but it is the remmant only of a pelitical system which for the most part has perished. We live here for ourselves and not for the parent state. It is the well-heing of this country of which the Parliament of Canala has charge: we are not charged with looking after the interests of the United Kingdom: we are not called upon to exercise a parental supervision, or to specially emacern ourselves alout the affairs of other portions of the Empire. It is the well-heing of the people of ranata which specially interests us, and when the people of Camada have interests which extend leyond our territorial limits, when our people have so grown and so far approachen! the conditions of a sovereign state as to come in contact, commercially or otherwise, with sovereign states, then it is just as necessary for our well-being that those matters, according to the wellsettled principles of self-govermment, should be under the control of this Parliament, as that our domestic concerns should be under its control. The Imperial Parliament hats no more constitutional right in the nature of things, atcording to any principle of political ethics, to claim in lefence of or for the maintenance of its own sovereignty the control over these matters of domestic concern than it has a right to claim interference with our internal concerns. Sir. it is necessary that we should have control over the negotiation of treaties relating to matters of commerce. It has lween hinted that such a policy would lead to separation from the mother country. I do not think so. On the concrary, I believe it would have the sery opposite effect : at all events, it would be at least a measure of delay. It is no doult another step in the process of political evolution. It is no doubt a step which carrics us forward still nearer to the condition of nationality. It is as necessary to our well-being to-day and the maintenance of self-government in our country as the concession of responsible government with regard to our internal affairs was in the days of our fathers. We have reacheel a point of material growth. of political progress beyon! which we camnot satisfactorily get on without a larger measure of political automomy than has up to this moment been conceded. fion camot put an end to the demand for this power by undertaking to point out what will be the political comsenuence of its possession. Ton camot argue with a view to weakening or lestroving it in the minds of the people of this comery by saying it would lead to such relations. Yon may, by that line of argument. succeed in weakening the ties which hind us to the mother comntry: you may by that line of argument convince a certain portion of the propulation that you are right in your contention: but the vital force which has given rise to this demam, the surromiling circumstances, the industrial growth of the country which presses this demand upom us will not be weakened ly that contention or by any conclusion at which you may arrive. All I ask by the motion which I am alonit to place in your hanls, Mr. Speaker, is that we shall give full play to those vital forces in our comstitution which on acconut of our material grow th and the increasing complexity of society, will impose on us the necessity of a larger power of self-govermment than we have, up to this moment. seen proper to demand. I hate heard it said that if we were to make this demand the Imperial fovernment wonh hever consent to be hell? responsible for treaty obligations to which it nad not been a party: This is a very specions contention, and it is one that reyuires some consideration at our hands. We have, at the heal of our executive authority in Canala, as in erery other dependency of the Empire, the Sovereigni, who is also the sovereign head of the dovermment in the United Kinghom. If treaties are negotiated upon the responsibility of Ministers of the Crown here, and who for these neggiations are held responsible to this Parlianent, those negotiations will be conducted by the same sovereign. There will not be in the form of such a treaty or in its essence any difference from a treaty negotiated, exchangei, and ratified upon theadvice of the Ministers of the Crown in the United Kingilom. If we look fora moment at the political relations which arise concerning foreign affairs we shall see that this demand is not an unreasomable one on the part of our colonies. Suppose a war were to occur between the Cnited Kingiom and a great eastern state, between the United Kinglon and Russia. That war might he one which we thought might have been avoided. It might le that, in our opinion, it ought to have been avoided. It might lee that a full investigation of the sulject would concince us that peace might have leen maintained with honour. But does the absence of any political anthority on our part, of any voice in the conduct of our public affairs, in any way lessen or diminish our danger in conserpuence of that war? Why, the British fovernment might protect our commerce by her fleet on the high seas, but it would only le a general protection, such as would be afforded to the merchant marine of any portion of the Empire upon the high seas. The iefence of our ports and hartours would depend upon ourselves. We would be required to erect fortifications, to equip them and to man them. If there were incasion we would be required to take all necessary steps to repel it. We might be put to very great expense, if a war, growing out of the consideration of matters over which we haveno control and in which we have no special interest, took place. 1 am not complaining of this. 1 am not saying that this is any reason why our obligations should be lessened su far as that particular matter would be concerned: but hon. gentlemen, if they are asked to-day by the Imperial fiovernment to erect fortitications at Namimo or at Victoria on at any other point on the laciite, are not asked to do so because of any difticulties that might arise with the neighlouring Republic. If those demamols are mate it is in consequence of the contlict which is constantly looming up on the horizon leeWeen the parent state and the great Empire of Rinssia. And so in matters in which we have no immerliate concern, we have revolving upon us rery serious responsibilities. I say 1 do not complain of that, becaluse of the rule laid down by Lord Salishury. in the paragraph in which 1 yuoted the chief resprosibility rests with the parent state. That leing so, the principal athority with regard to such matters must continue there, lout. Sir, that Anes not apply to every foreign relation that may arise. There may tre cases in which the colony is the party chiefly concerned: there may be cases in which the interest under discussion is a colonial interest and not an imprerial interest : an! surely where that is the case, it is not unreasomable tosay. that with regard to such matters the negotiations are tole comlucted upon the advice of the Dinisters of that colong, who are responsible to the colony which is chiefly concemen. We say that we trust to imperial anthorities in all imperial matters. We do not question their anthority, we do mot say that where the chief responsibility amd homen devolves apon them, that weonght to over-rule their views or to interfere with their authority. But surely if we trust them they should trust us. This shonlal I e a matter of mutual trust, and the Imperial (iowermment ought to lee as prepared to stand hy amd to uphoh a treaty relating to our civil and commercial matters and negotiated by us, and relating to matters in which we are chiefly concemen, as we are, ats every uther portion of the Empire is, to uphohl the exercise of its maquestioned authority in these matters which chiefly concern itself. Now, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that the time has come when the power to act must, in the case of all the large colonies. acompriny the interest. That, I think, is a safe rule. I think that mistakes are much less likely to be made and ditticulties are much less likely to grow up, amd ill-feeling is much less likely to be engendered. where the sovereign responsibility rests with those who are chiefly affected. The sovereign power to treat and to hind may he exercised by the appointees of the Crown upom the alvice of Ministers responsible to the community which is chiefly interested. The extermal relations of the Einpire might remain mechanged if this principle be fully recognized. I repeat that I accept the rule which I have groted from Lord Salisbury namely, that the party who is chiefly affected is the party who has the right to exercise the sovercign power. Now, letme, hy way of illustration, suppose that war, out of some matter of dispute, should arise between the United King. dom and the United States. Who would be the party who is chiefly concerned: Would it be the United Kingdom that would be likely to be invaled or would it be Canada? Can there be a coubt that Canada would be the party who would chiefly suffer from any contict that might arise: and Camala being the purty having the largest measure of responsilility, the largest interests involved, she is the party that ought to determine what these relations shoull be, and what negotiations should le had to secure a fair and a just settlement, Nir, this, it seems tome. would in no way interfere with the relations which have existed between the colonies aml the mother land. The constitutional development of the colonies no cloubt must bring alonut a change in one respect in the relation of the dependencies to the parent state. That relation is no longer the relation of lond and vassal. It is the relation of friends standing upon a footing of epablity, noi equal ins strength but eyual in rights, and the clominant influence of the mother comitry onght. to depend upon its superior wealth, and its superior mumbers, and uot upon any assertion of sovereignty orer us with regaril to matters specially conceming ourselves. The mion of the Empire in the future must les a mion based not upon the assertion of legislative, executive. or military supremacy. The permanence of the mion and the strength of the mion depends on the ahsence of coercion and of restraint. The strength of that mion depents largely upon the language, upon a common literature, иpon a com. mon system of jurisprulence, upon a common system of comstitutional govermment, and upon the common hopes and aspinations of the people of the rarions commmities with regarl to their progress. These, sir, are, in my julgmeat, far stronger and far more enduring elements of anion than the mere possession of superion legislative or military anthority. It is all essential condition of progress that we must grow intora broaler freedom, and becone possessed of a greater measme of power, aml have greater authority devolving upon us and greater responsibilities. In the nature of things this must be so, unless we, hy our follies or by our vices, put an end to our progress. It is only ly ceasing to Ine a progressive people that we can cease to grow in the direction of a larger measure of authority than we have up on this time possessed. Let us look. Nir, for a moment at some of the recent phases in the relations which the different parts of the timpire have towards each other. Has any one forgotten the assertion of Australia a few years ago that she ought to possess the power of acyuiring new territory. Australia insisted upon the acquisition of New lininea for the purpose of protecting and promoting her future interests: The demand was a novel demand ; it was a new experience to the (olonial Minister, and Lord Derly who was Colonial Secretary at the time, replied : That Her Majesty simperial alvisers must be the sole julges as to whether Her Majesty's imperial dominions should be extended or whether they should not. But Australia contested that principle. She said: That rule is all very well in the great majority of instances; bat she maintained that cases might arise when the interests of the colony are paramonnt, and where that is the case it was the colony that should guide the parent state and not the parent state that should determine what were the interests of the colony. The colonists pointed out that they had upon their northern lorter an immense island containing nearly $3(n), 000$ square miles, and they conld not be indifferent to the occupation of that island in the future. They said: The islands in the southern seas are within the sphere of our dominion : we are opposed to their acpuisition by any Buropean state ; we camnot afford to have established upon our loorder by a great military power a colony which would entail upon us serions burdens to prevent our liberties heing menaced, which wouh not rest upon us at all if these aequisitions were not hat. They impressed on the lmperial diovemment their views, and Pard Derhy ultimately gave way: but he did not do so until the Empire of diermany hat aceguired (in), (WH) squatre miles, more than one-fifth of the area of the Isliund of New (ininea. But this discussion which towk place between the Imperial (iovermment and the grovermments of the dastralian colonies shows the direction in which the greater colonies are growing. It shows that they camon be indifferent. to their external relations, that they are anxious to Watch their opport mities, amb that they have hopes that at modistant day those colonies will become united and grow into a great commonwealth: they are the aspiations born of freedom in the midst of great opportunities, and no one that follows that correspomence can fail tusympathize with the Australian colonies, and to believe that they were altogether in the right. Well, Nir, France achuired the ishands of New Irelamd amd the New Hehrides, and undertook to establish penal settlements there. The colonies protested. They presentell their views to the Foreign Ottice: and the Foreigno Otice became the mere instrument for the pupose of giving effect to the views of the colonies in regaid io these matters. Then, lowk for a moment at the discussion which took plate between binglamd and dermany with regarel to the respective spheres of intluence of those nations in southern Africa. (ape Colony hecome interested in the diselassion, amolits fiovernment and the pross insisted on their right to be hearel with regarel to that matter, on the gromme that it was one atfecting the future interests of that colony, even move than in affected the interests of the parent state. All those discussions, like the action of the diovernment here --although they formerly opposed this principie-have again and again made it clear that the larger colonies have outgrown the principle of local selfgovernment contined to mere clomestic affairs. They have reached the very border line of such authority. Their interests are extending beyond that ; and now the time has come when they must assert their chaim to a larger measure of governmental authority in orter that they maty aljust the functions of the (iovermment to the new circmmst unes which have arisen. Sir, it is in this way that the Empire is growing: it is in this direotion that the authority of Colonial (iovermment is being extembed. Now, I know that there are some hon. gentlemen in this House who subscrile to the eloctrine of inproal federation, and who are looking forward to that as a solution of some of those difticulties which are pressing themselvesupon the attention of the governments of all the larger colonies. I may sioy, after having given that sulbject the best consideration that I have lneen able to give it, that I do not think it is in that direction that the solution of the relations of the different portions of the Empire to each other will be foumi. On the subject of an imperial feleration applied to communities so widely separated from each other as those which constitute the British Empire, there is such an absence of general knowledge with regard to matters of a sovereign and large character, but an acequatintance with which is in the: nature of things lonal, that there will always le wanting some of the essential elements to anything like a systematic and well-organized federal empire. Nir, the rehations between the alifierent portions of the Empire are leing worked ont hy its exigencies. The necessities of each part are working and will continue to work ont. when mot seriously hampereel. a solution upron altogether aliferent lines. There is mot a systematization of a centralized system for the whole Empire. There is a tenteriey to a division of the sovereign anthority hetween the different parts of the Fimpire, all being bound liy the principle of mutual trust amd muthal ohligation to assume that that sovereigh atitherity exercised hy the portions specially afferted will be wisely and properly exercised. Why, sir. let us suppose for one instant that we hath iat inperial federation. amd that this guestion of the extension of tive rights and the allhority of the Empire in the vicinity of Anstmalia were taised : how wonhl the whole Empire, mited in a representative honly what would he best on he dome in that matter than the people of Australia themselves: Why shombl not the whole Finpire take the solution which the people of Australia would ultimately, after due reflection, detemminate upon, withoint insisting upon an unwielily ami combrous organization, the majority of the members of whom must always he ignorant of what is popmsed to he done hy eath particular section. There is no domit, sir, that the Empire is molergoing, it may he slowly, nevertheless it is umbergoing, imasformation. So far as the great colenies are eoncernet, it is assmming the form of a voluntary ferleration, the members of which are simply heli tosether ly that volumtiry union. As the colonies increase" in wealth anil population, they will have in a large and still larger degree distinot exteral relations springing up: aml in my opinion everything points to this solution, that these axtemal relations must lee left to be dealt with hy the parties chiefly comeerned. It is in this way, amm not by a ferlemal mion, that the different portions of the Empire are likely tomaintain their continued relations to eachother. "ihe legal relations maty long remain as they are: hout the conventional govermment must umlergo change. It is, as we know, yearly mulergoing some monlitication: and the changes which take platee must he adapted to the actaal ciremmstances of the Fimpine These new phases are evoled by, minh hevare the matural and necessary outcone of the vital forces which act on the imperial system. The facts of which I have spoken are evilences of this vitality, amd so long as there is no undue interference, in at tempt of force upon the different portions of the Empire some preconceivel notions, these vital forces ure likely to prove sutficiontly strong to adjust the constitutional govemment of every sec tion to the necessary wants of the population. Now, speaking for myself, I say that 1 confidently trust to the strength of that vitality for the wisest and hest solution, and I ask the Honse by this motion to give free play to this principle as applied to our own reauirements. I readily almit that the public oticials of the parent state, who are long habituated to the abminist mation of certain departments of the fiovermment, may not willingly surrender any portion of the power with which they have been long entusteai ; and sa pou may look for opposition to this proposition. But it must not be forgotten that concession is not alway made to conviction: it is as often made to get rid of importunity anl its necessiny worry, as justice was clone hy the unjust judge mentioned in the diespel. The vital growth of our national Govermment camot le impeded ly institutions which have survivel the circumstance upon which their utility depended, it is necessery that a new armagement in this particular should be established. and, once it is established and adjusts itself to its enviromments, the governing of the Empire will, no donht, he more sitisfactory than it is at present. There will he fewer frictions, and everylonly will he realy to admit that the comdition of things intronducen is superior to that which it has supplanted. I ask the attention of the House, for a moment, to the importance of commerce in the eves of Faglish statesmen. See the number of costly appliances which the British Govermment maintain all over the world for the protection and extension of their trate and commerce. There are coaling stations, forts, docks, ships of war, and all these things, mainly for the protection of that commerce. Consider the consular system, now a Inanch of the Foreign Office, collecting information that maty he necessary for the maintenance and further extension of commerce. lou have consuls and vice consuls upon whom rluties are imposed and labours of a very important character which they are repuired to perform. The information which they atre required to collect and report is of the first consequence to the manufacturers and merchants. They make known the chamater of the trade of every port anderery eonsular district. They inform the British publice of the kind of goons that enterintocompetition with Britishmanufacturessand british products in each particular locality. They inform them of the directions in which trade may he extember. Their reports are filled with suggestions ass to the way in which the products of a particular industry may he enabled to maintain their: place in the markets of the work. This is the roal upon which we must enter as far as our in. terests reguire and our circumstances will warrant. It is by making our people acpuainted with the worlits wants, and hy undertaking to supply them as far as they adrantaigeonsly cian, and not liy higher taxes, which will enable them to plunder and devour each other, that this country can le made to grow athl prosper. The first step to lee taken to this end is to have the right to negotiate commer. cial treaties on our own behalf conceded to us ly Her Majesty's Minister's in Westminster. And so, with the view of ohtaining the opinion of the Honse and this country upon this fuestion, I bey to move:

That all the words after the word "That" be left out, and the following inserted instead thereof: "it is expedient to obtain the necessary powers to enable Mer Majesty the Queen through Her ropresentative the Governor General of Canada, upon the advice of his Ministers. to appoint an agent to negotiate commercial treaties with other British possessions or with foreign states. subject to the prior consent or sulsequent approval of the Parliament of Canada."

I use the word "agents" becanse I wish to use as broal and comprehensive a term is possible. It will cover every species of govermment representative abroad, whether he be a commercial or political agent, whether he he a person holding the rank of a permanent otficial or embassador or whether he be a plonipotentiary extraordinary, specially appointed for a specific parpose and the accomplishment of a particular end, and so with these explanations as to the character of my motion, I beg leave to put it in your hands, sir. seconded ly the hon. member for (!ucbec West (Mr. Laturier).

Mr. FOSTTER. I shall promise in the first place not to take up at any rely great length the attention of the House to-night. while 1 attempt to notice some few of the remarks and conclusions of the hom. gentieman who has just taken his seat. The motion comes up in a clifferent way from that at tirst intended ly the hoin. gentleman. There was it seems at first some few traditions of open and honomable battle floating in that hon. gentleman's mind by which he allowed himself to he so far seluced is. to determine to put his motion lefore the House, not in the sinape of an amemoment to Supply hut as a substantive motion, and submit it to the House as the contribution of his thought and his expression of the consideration he had given the subject, with the idea of having allopted what in the end should seem to be in the best juigment of the whole House, the best course for the( overmment and Parliament to take. That which the hon. gentleman gave notice of, not as a motion in amendment to going into supply, but as an open motion, which conll he fairly discussed without partisan bias, without being opela to the objection of negativing the motion of the fiovermbent. and so heing very nearly tantamount to a vote of want of centilence, was in it position where it conld have been amended if, in the julgment of the House, the hon. gentlemans conclusions were not the best am the wisest for the comatry at large. However, he did not persist in his first idea hut withlrew it from that tield of open and homourable eriticism where it was subject to aneme ment by the gool sense of the House acting upon it, ami he has thrown it hefore the House in a position where it must pass or must he rejected is it stands--a right of the hon. gentleman, which I have no intention to deny, but one which I should julge to be not the most statesmanlike proceeding for a person who wished, honestly and openly. to arrive at the wisest conclusion of this matter in the best interests of Parliament and of the country. The hom. gentleman has chosen to make his motion in amemenent to the proposition to go into Committee of Nupply, and it is now before us in that shape. I have listened to his address in its three different phases. For the first half hour he reat an elaborately prepared and closely written essay -..

Mr. MIL.L心 (Buthwell). I bey to inform the hon. gentlemin that. I did not read.

Mr. FOSTER - in which the statesman was altogether lost in the perlant. He gave the Honse some very important information, some very novel statements, some truths that had not leen previously known, two of which especially struck me, to the effect that nations are not formed in a day, and, further, that colonies, when they leave the mother country, do not necessarily take all the laws of the mother country with them. In the second half hour, the hon. gentleman left the scholarly style which he had previously pursued and branched out into a disquisition on some of the ats of the Government, and one of the strongest points he made was in reference to the personal characteristics of the Minister of Finance. Well, I hope I shall never be so much

at a loss for something to say as to have to take up the time of the House and my own time in criticising the personal characteristics of the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills). The third half hour has been devoted to the evolution of the vital principles which are at work in an Empire such as that of Britain, as affected by certain local and external characteristics in its several agyregations widely diftering from each other, but; in the whole hour and a half that the hon. gentleman has spoken, he has not addressed himself to the practical consideration of the question he has essayed to bring before the House. He has not addressed himself to the practical difficulties that stand in the way, he has not carried nut to practical conclusions the premises he has laid down, and which must certainly carry him in the last analysis just as strongly and logically to, the conclasion that the Dominion of Ganada should have full arbitmment in regard to the question of peace or war, as it would in resaril to the arbitrament of treaties between the colony and the Empire or the colony and outside nations. What is the hom. gentleman's grievance: Noboly doubts that the Dominion of Cauada as it exists to-day, made up of the ditterent provinces which existed a guarter of a century ago, nobody doabts that this portion of the Fimpire has had its growth, has had its continuons erolution, has had its share of progress and derelopment. The hon. gentleman states that, and he takes many words in which to state it. That is kuown to every stulent, even to the most casual student of Canalian history. The hon. gentleman argues that, because there has been growth, because there has been erolution, because there has been development in the past, at this time this spirit cries for still further emboliment. and that the rital fores of Canada to day are in a comdition of dire limitation, straining for the chothing and embertiment which they do not have and which he thinks they ought to have. Where is the grierance? Where among the commercial or industrial or agricultural bolies, is the cry for a further development of the powers of on comentry in the line of treaty making: where is the demand that this comntry should assume the supreme direction of its relations with exevternal comntries in reference to trade treaties: It camnot be foumb. It exists in the mind of my hom. friend and he discusses it in an academie way. in a way that shows that even in his own mind there is no practicability in it. If we are a delating school here, if we are to deliver learned eseays upon these guestions firo and con, it may be interesting, but it camot lee proven that there is to day in this country a grievance on this line, a grievance that refuires the solution which the hon. sentleman has proposed in the motion before the House. We have had our grow th and our development. In oij years there wis witnessed a wonderful evolution in the provinces which were then colonies of Great Britain. In a short time they grew from Crown colonies to self-governing colonies, and then to a Dominion, whichifas practically the supreme control of its own internal affairs: Not only that, but they grew up to exercise the power of settling to a certain extent the relations which this comontry should hold to other countries in the matter of trade, by enacting what should be the tariff upon imports coming into this country, what should be the duties collected on imports from different conntries, and to that extent they settled what shouh be the relations existing leetween this comitry and extemal comotries in regard to tranle ani commerce. They went even further than that, and this Dominion of Canada has legis. lated not only in reference to miform relations with external comitries ats far as tariff duties are concerned, hut it has legislated in the way of a differentiation of duties upon lines which hid heen previously settled in treaties or in trade negotiations with emperial comsent, and the tariff laws of this country of 1818 , $187!$ and $188 s$ bear the marks still of that differentiation, and so Camaila has grown upin these respects, until to-day, as I stated, she is pratically a free ami self-governing power, not only havinu the manatment of her internal affairs, hut also. to the extent that 1 have mentioned, having the power of :letermining What shall he the commereial combitions between herself and the conntries with which she carries on trade and commerce. Now, Sir, there is only one thing left, there is only a single power left, whirh would show the difference between Canala as she is to-day. amb a complete and absolute sorereignty. and that is the power, the imperial and absolute power, of making treaties with other comeries. sulject tomo combitions amd to no control except her own interests as shown through her Parliament :and through her dovernment. But, Sir, when that prisition is reached, I think you come to the position of an alsolute and independent power, and yon are face on face with a change of political comlition, a change of political stitus. to which hon. gentlemen maty shut their eyes, hat which, in the logic of erents, is as sure to follow as night follows the setting of the sum. Now, comes the practical question so far as this dehate is concemed, althongh it is a questionwhichdoes not cause the least commotion in this country, but if we are to debate it and to settle it by a cote of the Honse, the practical ques. tion is this: Are we prepired to take that other step with all the consequences which inevitably follow it? Is there a sutficient motive, a sutficient necessity, a sufficient reason for us to ask for that power and to face those conserguences: Now, in the first place, and to take them up in their order, is there any present reason why Canala should, on the behest of the member for Bothwell, ask this power and press it to a conclnsion? If the imperial power to-day made treaties with other countries which materially and detrimentally affected Canarian interests, amd forced them on us "olem. role"., there would he a reason why we should take some action : there would he not at reason for asking that which my hon. friend hats asked, but there would be a reason for Canada making her voice heard and placing her position fairly and syuarely before the imperial anthority in that respect. But does that condition exist? It does not, the very opposite exists. Time was when direat Britain mare treaties irrespective of the wishes or the interests of her colonies. Those times are gone, never to return, and we have issues enough to-day, without going back a hundred years to find a basis upon which to rest a demand for to-lay. The time has been since that Great Britain has formed treaties with outside nations which materially affected Canala, and which, in the opinion of the British Government, affected Canadian interests wisely and to her benefit, but those treaties were ratified without asking the consent of Canada. Some of those we are hound by to-lay. We had a discussion in the last Parliament with reference to some of them, discussions have leeen raised, in the British Parliament with reference to some of them, lateven that methed of imperial action is not now, and has not for years heen, persisted in : and since 1878 , not to go further hack. (itmada has not only heen in possession of the fact, hut in possession of the diplonatic expression of the fact, that from that time forward Great Britain does not propose to include the colonies in ans treaties without the consent of the colonies thereto: so that if a trale treaty is formed between Gireat Britain anl amy other comery, fireece, Italy, Rommania, a South American comutry, any comtry in which the colonies were included or can be incluled. before the colonies are lound by it, their consent is to be asked hy the British © iovernment, the treaty is to be put before them, the question is to be asked them : Are your interests in the direction of your heing included in this treaty: If so inform us of it, and you will be incluted : if not, inform us of it, and you will not be liable to the terms of the treaty. so that since 1578 , to go mo further back. Canala has heen as free as her own sweet will in so far as she is affected her being included in treaties made be (ireat Britain with other countries. But. sir. Great britain went even further than that. illustrating this growth in sympathy leetween the mother country and the outlying colonies, illustrating the power and force of representation of the life, and feelings, and wishes of the colonies in the central power at direat Britain, illustrating the better and more condial relations existing between the hone comatry amb the outlying colonies. From that time, a step in adrance of what I have just related has taken place, and if to-day direat Britain desires to enter into negotiations for a treaty with any comutry, her colmies are allised of her intentions, and they are asked what representations they hate to make in the matter as to their interests. their desire to be includea, and under what terms and conditions. So that at the present time Camada is, as far as her relation to the mother country is comeemed, in the prition of having the fullest and freest representation of her interests made to the mother comutry, so that no treaty, and no single clause of a treaty, is curried into effect detrimental to Canada, and unler which she is included, without her own consent and free will. But more than that has taken place. It is one thing for the British Govermment to say: We will conclude no treaty without the consent of Canalia as a party to that treaty, but it is guite a different thing for Great Britain to say: When we are negotiating a treaty, or if the people of Canada wish to have a commercial treaty negotiated, we will allow one of their representatives to be accredited on epual terms with our own Minister at the court of that comontry, where, in conjunction with the British Minister, he shall conduct the negotiations. So that we shall have in the future, as we have had in the past, just what the hom. gentleman was so long and so earnest in satying we should have, that is to saty, a man who possesses the knowledge of his comntry, who has the interest of the comntry at heart, but is not bound by the trammels of old country officialism, a man who represents from the heart the interests of Canada in the negotiations, a principle co-partner, a principle (w-intor, in the nerotiations, looking after the interests of cimadia ame embodying in the terms of the treaty what shall be for her henetit and what shall be for the extension of her commerce. Now. I sity these are great adrances over the oblen times. Canatia is placed in a position as gend as she wishes to bee an good as she can be, as a colony. I make that statement ihsolutely, that it places her in the hest prosition she cain be. unlese she wishes to make the denand which will lead inevitably, is it does logically, to at change of political status, to a condition of ahsolute and complete amb sovereign indepentence. These are the step: in alvance in that growth inn progres:- which has taken place of better feeling and greater wenmmity of interest between the mother combly and her colomies. These are steps in that alvance, and this is the position which woday (amada nceupies. What are the allamtages of this pesition: I think they are many. I think it is an and rantage that ans Britist commerce genes everywhereml makes it: entrance into every pert of the worlh, and hats in every port its mechanism of interehange, its active intluences in consulship, in ofticial representation of the Hone (iovernment : in all those lifterent wass.it is of great moment that the commeree of the cohbnies should be British, that the ships of the colony should be British ships, that the pestige of the mother comutry should $\ln$ t what extent the pestige of the enlony ats well. It would the a conseguence, to be very carefully weiphed betone we incured it, as to whecher we shomblake a step which woud sever colonial commerce amb colomial ships from the great hooly of British commerse amd British ships. Again, it is an adrantage whid this country possesses that dieat Britain. With its traned system of diphomacy, with its prestige and power at the come of erey comery in the winh, trained and used to the way: of diplomace. from long centuries of evolution grown inte the beenliarities, grown to know the comditions and the sympathies even of these different powers.. it is if great moment that whaterer Cunala has to press. as she may to-lay press, by her own atementite enoys, may be pressed with the aid and moner the prestige and influence of that tramend diphomatic borly which Givat Britain to-day hats extemding over every part of the word. That is an and antage which is not a light or a small one, and it is chut we should carcfully weigh before we enter unn a course which would deprive us of that alvamiage and throw us back upon our own diphomatic: resources entirely. I an not mentioning here the question of expense. That question wouhl whdoubtedly come up; but if the andantages womld be paramouat, the question of expense would late to be subordinate. It must, however, be borne in mind that if Camada assmues the pasition, is allowed to assume the prosition, of a treaty power, she will have to be responsible for her own diplomacy, she must possess her own diphomatic corps trained for that purpose, with those incibental expenses which necessarily attach to it, and which are by no means small. These are some of the points which will arise when we discuss this question as to whether we will take the impependent stand of negotiating our own treaties, or whether we will proceed in the mamer we are pursuing to-day. I was amused when the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Mills) wats making his remarks. When in the midille portion of his speech he spoke aloont noy trip to the West Indies, about the expedition of the Ministers to Wiashington on two or three different uccasions, alsut the attempts at negrotiation that had been manle with France and spain by the Camadian commissioner, accredited with equal power with the british ambiassalats at those courts, and which the hon. gentleman said hat been abortive, and at the conchasion tu which his argment temblal. On the one hami. he was amtembing that the otticials of fireat Britain are tow entrenched in their ways, that they are tos generally ignomant of this country, that they are ton moch ilisinclined to pat themselies out of the way for the sate of outlying colonies, that they have too high anappreciation of the patamount interests of the mother comatry to make them in any way fit to carry on a negotiation for the extension and trade of (amala. Amp yet. in erery instance where the sons of Canadia, the citizens of ( anadia, aceredited direct from Canadia, mate those attempts at negotiations. some of which, as the hom. :entleman statel, were abortive, so far as re. sult: were concemed, the hom. gentlenam was led to this conclusion: that alnout the worst men you robll possibly semd to combluct those negotiations were Canalians, matives of the soil, who were atceredited liy their own comntry, and who, conseppaintly, might to be thought to know the inter\&ts of oin own eomutry hest. i suppose the hon. sentleman woull meet that by saving that the Wrones men were sen:; fromi (imalit, men of the wronse party, sent by a wrong (ioverument, and that ill this would le edred hey placing anotiner liovermbent in prower and sendinir a different class of men. But the hom. gentleman's argument tenden to destroy what in amother part of his argument he was emblewouring to sustain, that Ganadians were hest calculated to look after their own interests. I entirely agree with the asservion that at: to the commercial interests of Canala, in seeking to enlarge these interests, in secking to have favourable trate relations established with the different comatries of the worle, no men know hetter what is needent thamdoc anadiansthemselves, and gostrongly. fully amialsolutely for the fullest representation of (analian interests and Canadian reguirements in erery treaty which is negrotiated, in every treaty which is concludeal. Under the present system we hare secured that result. Cinder the present system this rery day. Nir Chatles Tupper, our High Commissioner, is acoredited as co-pleniputentiary to the Cont of spain at Madrid, there to comblact part of the negotiations for a new treaty, which it is hoped will be framed, hetween (ireat britain and Spain and direat Britain's colonies and Spain in the interests of Canada. With a full knowledge of her reyuirements and in full commonication with the dovernment in Canala. 'lhat carries out what I have stated, that to-lay we have the fullest power of representation it is possible to possess. I lesire to ask the House to consider for a moment one more print which strikes me at this time. It is this : The hon. gentleman ly his resolution asks that we shall have the sole power to initiate and negotiate our treaties, and that they shall be ratified by our Parliament, by statutory Act 1 suppose, and that this statutory Act shall, as all statutory Acts do, pass the review of Her Majesty s representative here, ani, if necessary, submit to the veto of Her Mirjesty representative here, or of Her Majesty at home.

As I understand the resolution, that is the modus which he proposes. Now, I ask the attention of hon. gentlemen to the difficulty which will immediately occur. Do we not know that so long as the British Empire is a British Empire there must be a seat of sovereign and absolute power somewhere, and that seat can not reside in the colony nor the dependency, but in the Home Government of the mother land. Solong as that Fimpire is bound together as an Empire there must be that one seat of sovereign and absolnte power, and that seat must he as I have said in the mother land. If there is one principle which has been held to by the British diovernment-and I believe held to in the interests of the Empire at large--it is this : That while the British Covermment is willing that its colonies shall have the freest management of their internal affairs and the freest possible control of their commerce and trade, yet, the doctrine has been laid down in the Cape, in Australia, in Canada and in every one of the British dependencies, that in the making of these comdition. there are imperial interests which are to be looked at as well as local interests : and that whatever freedom in the making of tariff laws and in the making of treaties, through and with the co-operation of the British Govermment, have been granted to these different colonies, it has always been laid down as a principle, that discrimination against British gooils in filvour of the goonds of foreign countries will not be allowed; and it has not been allowed at the will of any colony. There have been cases in which Great Britain has, in conference with this or that colony, allowed treaties to go so far as to enforce certain tiariff regulations which might look like disurimination, hat that has been allowed simply because, in the line of articles which were included, the good to the colonies was considered to be great. and the discrimination or want of compensation to the mother country was consislered to be reduced to a minimum. One or two of the Australian colonies in 18.1 made a demand for power to regulate their own intercolonial tariffs and to discriminate, if need he, against British goods, and a long diplomatic; discussion ensuer between Lond Kinherley and the Australian colonies, in which Lord Kimberley laid down-not for the first time, hut in that quarter of the world afresh and anew--the doctrine that the imperial power could not crant to the colonial power such authority as would enable it to discriminate against British goods, even where the colonies alone were concerned, and still less where external countries wert concerned. As an outcome of that discussion, the Legislature of that colony almost unanimously passed a resolution in which it atfirmed the safety of the principle laid down by Lord Kimberley ; and as a result of that, the Australian colonies have ever since subscribed loyally to that doctrine as leeing not only in the interests of the Empire as a whole, but in the interests of the colonies themselves. While they asked for and while they received the power to form commercial treaties among themselves as they thought fit, and to arrange their own tariffs as suited them best; yet under an Act of the British Parliament passed not long since, looking towards the federation of these colonies, and conferring upon them very large powers with reference to their tariff legislation, the principle of non-discrimination against British goods has been borne in mind. So it has been in all diplomatic corvespondence which Cimaila and the other colonies have had with fireat Britain. But how are these things arranged to-day under the present system! To-day Ministers sent by the Governor (ieneral of this comotry as the representatice of the Queen, go to Mashington, go to Malrid, go to l'aris, go to the West. Indies, go to Brazil, of go tw any other comutry, and being in commmication with the British Minister who represents the Home Govermment, they curry on their negotiations. In the course of these negotiations articles are dis. cussed hy the Camatian relegate, by the British Minister, by the (abailian fiovermment, and hy the Home diovernment if necessary, and hefore any ilecided action is taken or agreement reached, that agreement is assented to by all parties, and when it is ratified there is no heart-burning or no clashing of authority. It may be that the colonies might have to give way in some respects, or it may be that the British Government gives way in some respects: but they doit by conference one with the other while the negotiations are pending, and an agreement is reached before the treaties ase ratitied and approved of by the l'arliament of either country. Take the other methor which is suggested to-night. Claim to fourselves and have that clam allowed, that Canadian commissioners shall have sovereign rights, without any commmication with the British Govermment, to go to a foreign conntry, to make a treaty having solely in view the interests of the colony without any regarl to the interests of other colomies or of imperial interests. Let that be agreed to between the commissioners from Canada aml the representatives of power they are making the treaty with. Let it be ratified, if it can be ratified, amd let it lee hronght down and adopted by the colomial legislature, the Parliament of Canalit for instance, and put in the form of a law; then and then only cian the objections of the Home diovermment be made, and then and then only can it be male after the Parliament of Canala has committed itself to a course, to recede from. which would he considered a hunniliation amd a clenial of interests. There you have a chance for difficulties just at the most acute point, and if the Home fiovermment thought that the colonial legislature was prejulicial to imperial interests and could not be allowed, the contest would be set, the battle would be placed in array, and it would have to he carried to the bitter conclusion by the colonial Parliament insisting upon what it had done, no matter what the conseguences might be. Now, Sir, the consenguences that might be, and would be in my mind, would be these: Frery British colony having that power, every British colony who would exercise that power, would be within ten years in an acute state of dispute with the British Government on account of these wider and more diversified ant larger interests; a dispute which could end only in one way, and that would be in the absolute separation of the different colonies from the mother land and the conseguent practical dismemberment of the Empire. I think there is no getting rid of that comelusion in any practical way. fam not going to read despatches of later date, but I conld real despatches under my hand, not a year oh, which have occurred in the Newfoumdland discussions, despatehes which state explicitly the doctrine which I hate just lat down, that neither with Newfoundland nor with any other colony can the British Government allow it to go undisputed and as agreed to, that that colony can make whatever arrangements it likes in the way of a treaty, indifferent to the larger interests of the Fimpire, or to the smaller interests, it may be in some cases, of component parts of the Empire, sister colonies lying near at hand. There is no doubt about that doctrine. Now, sir, I think that is a dangerous thing. If it is as I hold it to be, let us have no deception about the matter. Let us have no more of this doctrine preached by my hon. friend opposite, that if you see a dime in the distance, and it is to your interest to pocket it, pocket it, let the ethical and other considerations take care of themselves. If you think the exchanging of poultry, eggs and other things between us and the United states would be to Canada's material benefit, for the time being, get the benetit, carry ont the arrangement, no matter what may ticke place in reference $t \emptyset$ our allegiance, or the political status or future of the country. I do not subscribe to that doctrine; neither does the Dominion of Canadia subscribe to it ; neither did that hon. gentleman's trusted and much lauded leader subscribe to that doctrine, when he severed his comnection with his party, even though, from long ties of attiliation and sympathy he smothered his letter for the brief space of thirty days until they could gain the paltry alvantage that they begged of him. In that letter he told them to their face: lou went to the country with a deceptive cry; you had a mask upon your foreheads: you sail to this country, it is simply improved trade relations we want, the pivotal point of which was a different political status and I refuse to be a party to that deception ; if we are to canvass this question, we will canvass it on the basis of a change in our political status, and in its true colours. To-lay, Sir, the same operation is going on. To day the gentleman from lothwell is put up here in the name of his party-what to do? To get, Sir, what the leader of the party gave us his sign mannal, and pledged his word before a Boston aulience and the American Republic to gain, as the very forefront, watchword and battle-cry of his party. Sir, these men are not masyuerading surely. We must take them seriously; when they speak they must mean something. They claim to have a party behimd them and to speak for that party. I take them at their clain, and the gentleman opposite spoke for the Liberal party when he satistied his losston audience, and the gentleman from Bothwell spoke for my hon. friend and the Liberal party when today he took the first step in that programme to which the hon. gentleman pledged himself before his Ihston audience. There is logic in the position these hon. gentlemen take. Whether they see it or not, the country sees it, and I propose that this House and the country shall see just a little bit of that now. The hon. gentleman after the last elections, and after the long session of Parliament was over, went down to the city of Boston, as he had a perfect right to ilo; he spoke hefore a select aulience there, us he had a perfect right to speak, and into the ear of the American people, as he had a perfect right to do : and to-night I have a perfect right to put side by side some of the things he said and some conclusions that I propose to draw from then. What was the first thing that the hon.
gentleman did: The first thing that he did, an umnecessary and gratuitous thing, was to summon his native country and the mother country before a foreign tribunal to prefer a false charge against them, and to condemn them before a foreign audience and a foreign people on that false charge. He stated that the conduct of Eugland and Canala during the Civil War of 1861-66 was a "disgrace to the civilization of England and of Canada." Sir, when the hon. gentleman said that he said it with the records of Canala staring him in face, with the archives of the United States telling him that he was giving utterance to what was not true, with the arclives of Cireat Britain bearing full and plain testimony to the unveracity of his charge ; and there are to-day, Sir, in the archives of these countries, the published thanks of the (iovernment of the United States of that day to the Canadian Government and the Gimadian people for the wise, prulent, nentral and conservative course which they took during that civil war. The hon. gentleman had no need to make that accusation, except for one purpose, and for that one purpose I must conclude he bronght it. For what purpose: To ingratiate himself with that portion of the American people who for twenty years have been harping upon the disyraceful and umeighbourly conduct of Canada and fugland during that civil war. But, Sir, he then went a little further, and declared before that same iudience amd in the ear of the American people, that "it is a great, a fatal mistake to make allegiance, British allegiance, the basis of trade." That was one step more leading to the conclusion that his auditors would draw, whose sympathies, rightly from their standpoint. had been for many years entirely enlisted in the direction of the exclusion of British influence from the North Anerican continent. That statement was a grateful one to those perple, and they said, and had a right to say : Here is the leader, and yonder is the party for us, for they do not believe that British allegiance is the basis for trade. He went still further, and in the next place he promised to those people in the name of himself and his party soon to be victorious, that when they came into power, they would give to the United states of America unrestricted free trade : thus carrying out the hon. gentleman's loctrine that it was a great, a fatal mistake, that British allegiance should be the basis of trade. He went still further, and said what was grateful to that same audience, when he asserted that "the present position of Canala camnot last, that even at this day England and Canada have interests totally apart, and that the time will come when in the very nature of things separation must take place." That was another step in the gradual unfolding of his purpose and mind, the purpose and mind of his party as understood liy his audience to eliminate British influence from the North American continent. Aud, Sir, if you wish further proof, let us take another of the hon. gentleman's sentiments which followed:

[^43]Ameriatan nation how he proposed to bring this all about, and it was in this way. He declared it to be the elementary and primary step in his programme, that Canada should insist upon and obtain the privilege and power of negotiating her own commercial treaties. There is the means he proposes to use. If we get the power to make treaties in this country, irrespective entirely of conference with or lependence upon the British Riovernment, and if his party obtain office, he will go straight to the United States and give them unrestricted reciprocity, involving, as it does, discrimination against British goods. He must then settle the question, which will be raised in one moment, as to whether we remain any longer a colony of Great Britain and discriminate her gools and her trade. And when that question is raised and settled, as it can only be settled in one way, when they have committed themselves am the country to that principle, then the last traceof British influence on thiscountry will pass away, and the American Mumroe idea will have full force from the North Pole to the Gulf of Mexico. So I say, that if those gentlemen are not masyueraling in their sentiments, if they mean anything, their programme is mveiled, and it becomes us to consider whether or not the demand for these powers from these gentlemen is one which ought to be acceded to by this Parliament or country. There is still more to show that that is the trend of opinion, not only of my hom. friend who leads the Opposition, but of others in that party. Let us look at matters here at home. To-day the Toronto (ilobe is the gospel of the Liberal party. I make the assertion here to-night that an unprejudiced person may read through the columns of the Toronto Glole for the last three years, and he will find, in almostevery edition, argument, insinuation, open assertion and appeal, all with the purpose of undermining the feeling of this country in favour British connection. And the cilohe to day has for its brains and its inspiration, Farrer, the self confessed traitor, and sir Richard Cartwright, the financial leader of the Opposition in this Parliament. (fo to the Maritime Provinces, and the staunchest paper and the brightest editor they have on their list is Mr. Ellis of the St. John's Gilobe, and Mr. Ellis, one of the foremost men in the ranks of the party, is an out-and-out arowed annexationist ; and scarcely an issue of his paper is sent out to the public that does not by way of insinuation or open argument or appeal, teach separation from Great. Britain and union with the United states.
An hon. MEMBER. What about Sol White.
Mr. FOSTER. Let me call the attention of my hon. friend who leads the Opposition to another fact. If there is one paper in the Province of Quebec which is entitled to be called par excelleme the Liberal organ, the Rouge paper, it is La Patrie. which within five days has come ont flat-footed for amnexation; and there are on the hon. gentleman's side to day men who have come out-and-out in the same rolle. I have in my eye one hon. gentleman here to-night, who, if the papers have not belied him-and this is too important a thing in which to allow himself to be belied without contradiction -has atfirmed his full faith and belief in annexation, not only as a necessity but as a pressing and present issue, and there are others of the hon. gentleman's supporters of the same strain and opiniom. M! hom. frieme from Queens, amp the hen. Erenteman who fenemally sits besidy him, showed in speeches during this session that it was not a remote jole: of their own nor a remote posisibility, that they would rouse the comotry, if possible, with the ary of annexation, and put the hame npon the misileeds and iorches of the Tory paty and the (ioserament. But the logic of their position is the strongest evidence. Hon. gentlemen hate taken ats their political fath that there is no salration in tatule and commereial matters for this comatry except in untestricted reciprocity with the Linited states.

An hom. MFilBliR. Hear, hear.

Mr. Fosicele. They wa not deng that. The hom. gentleman whu sats $\cdots$ hear, heat ${ }^{\text {mind }}$, his "pinion t" the mass. It is the opinion of the Liberal party stated wer and orer atgain that mestrice. eal recipnocity is the omly salvation for Canadat They alluit. these of them who ate honest, that there ean he nu umestricted reciprocity without discrituthation asianst dreat britation. There is mo dissent from that. Fiven the hom. member for indepembence amd cambom- I will not siy it was of Weakness. I think it was a moment of strength-stently denomaced diserimination against Cireat Britain: even that gentleman has relapsed intora chomis: state of litssitude and lespombency and lowes mot eren smmmon up the conare to give his vote against discrimination with the ofle comint which he sor eloguently denomaced. Though helieving it all the time inwardly. hom. gentlemen opmsite never comfersed mationio wheri they are forted tu dosos. that we cammot have unestricted reciprodity without discrimination agmanst (ireat Britain, and the logic: of their pasition forces them th his policy of liscrimination asainst the mother eomaty. Xow 1 do mot bind hon achtemen opposite to my view. They mar have their inleats, hut in my mind. and in the inind of most hom. members on this side at least and in the mind of the great majority of the countre. the two questions of discrimination arganst Gieat Britain and severance of relations between this colony and dreat Britain lie side by side and are imexplicably mited, the one with the other. Then. if umresticted reciprocity with the Conted states is the only way in which (amata can be sared. and if these men are pledged to the commercial salvation of Candia, the logic of the position of hom. gentlemen hrives themi thoroughly and absolutely to this course : that, should the opportunity be ever given them, and this motion result in the achievement of treaty-making power, they womld use this power to make a tieaty of umestricted reciprocity with the Enited States, which would iliscriminate against (ireat Britain. and in so doing would raise at once the question of rela. tions with the imperial power. On this ground alone, it becomes this Hanse to take into account the statements and the position of hon. gentlemen opposite, the statements of their published political faith, the statements of this as their propagamba for carrying it out, and to ask ourselves, in all earnestuess and seriousness, whether we ought at any time, and more especially at this time, to more one step forwand in the direction they desire. I have taken up the time of the Honse longer than 1 in. tended. I havemarle, Ihope, some practical remarks; I have at least set out some things for hon. gentleman to think about. I have not declared, as a brilliant and freshly formulated truth, that nations are not formed in a day, or that colonies, when they come from the mother country, necessarily carry all the laws of that country with them, but I have discussed some few practical points in this matter. I might take occasion to refer to strictures made by the hon. member for Bothwell upon the movements and methods of the Ministers in varions negotiations which have taken place, but I lo not, simply because these explanations have been made, these positions have lieen controverted over and orer again and it is not worth while taking up the time of the House in controverting them again. The general accuracy of the trend of the hon. fentleman's statements on those points may be judged by the fact that he stated that no papers in resard to the West India trip were hrought before the House, or, if they were, they woull show the utter unteasomableness of our propositions. The whole of those papers were brought before the Honse, amd have leen under the view of the House now for twelve or thirteen months.

Mr. LAURIER. When some few moments ago it was my pleasure to listen to the hom. gentleman while he was piling up argument after argument, or perhaps he will parton me for saying sophism after sophism, the scene came back to my mind of the installation of sancho Panza as fiovernor of the Island of Barataria. After a hard day's work, he was allowed to go to dimner, but then he saw a man of sombre garment aml still more sombre mien, with a whalebone wand in his hand. Sancho lanza was blessed with a gool appetite, but, when the first dish was placed before him, the whalebone wand tonched it and it was taken away: so of a second, of a third and of all, were taten away. Then the solemn man explained that he was the court physician and that he had the health of Hiss Excellency in charge, and that he could not allow His Excellency to touch this dish or that dish becatase his stomach was not sutficiently strong. He could only allow him a few wafer cakes and a few slices of quince. Sancho Panza at once commanded that this man shouh be removed or he would crack his skull. The people of Canada are treated to-day something in the same way as Sancho Panza was treated liy the court physician. The hon. gentleman has been piling out argament on argument to show that the Canamian people cannot be trusted to deal with their own atfairs, that the Canadian stomach camot digest such strong fool; Whatever is offered or suggested for the people of Canada must be taken away by the morement of the whalebone wand. The doctor said that this was too strong, or too hot, or too cold, or tonspicy, aml it is so in this case ; but Canada is growing, and, as has been shown by my hon. friend from Bothwe!l (Mr. Mills), the legislative and executive povers oi Canala must grow with the growth of the country. The hon. gentleman has tried to make some fun out of the statement that nations were not made in a day, and he says there is nothing very new in that. I admit there is nothing new in that, but the hon. gentleman would imply that nations are never formed at all. He speaks as if Canada was to remain for ever a colony, but I say that Canada is not :lways to remain a colony. Light as our dependence may he on the mother conntry, that depemlence is not to remain for ever.

If we were to admit that, if we were to say that we were always to remain in a dependent condition we would be the scorn of the woold, and it would be scom well deserved. My hon. friend this afternoon compared the life of a nation to the life of a man, and it would be a truism to say that the life of at man is a series of never ending changes. Changes are going on in the life of man from time to time, from one period to another, and with each period in life new burdens have to le assumed and borne. What is true of the individual is true of the aggregation of individuals who form the commenity. We have a population in this country, not as large as it ought to ine, not half as large as it ought to he, or as it would be if we hal followed a wiser course, hut a population liarger than that of Switzerland, almost as large as that of Belgimm, almost as large as the population of Norway and sweden comlined, and equal to the population of many other nations. We have self.government, we have a constitution of our own, we have interests which are separate and distinct from those which we hold in common with the Empire of which we form a part, gand our energies must seek wider fields abromi. Perhaps the next step may be said to be complete independence, but there is no desire to have complete independence in Canala to-lay. Even with those who, like myself, look to independence as the supreme woal, there remains a love for the motherlaml and is desire to remain in connection with it. but in the nature of things, as I sitid in the speech which the hon. genteman has done me the honour to yuote, our relations must be compatible with our interests. The hom. gentleman stited there was no grievance felt in any part of the comntry. I take direct issue with him on that point. While no one desires to change the allegiance which exists at present, there is a great and growing feeling, not only amongst Reformers, but even amongst Conservatives that the colonial relation must be changed because at present it is unsuited to our wants and is an impediment to our progress. There is no desire to change our allegi, nce, but the conditions of our relations with the Empire must be changed. What I assert now has been clearly proved hy my hon. friend heside me (Mr. Mills). But 1 intend to prove furthermore-not by anything emanating from the Liberal party, because that would be met by the ever serviceable cry of dis-loyalty--what I assert I will prove by the deeds and words of members of the Conservative party, and of course anything emanating from the Conservative party camot le qualified by the epithet of disloyalty. What I assert I will prove by the organzation to which my hon. friend referred a moment ago, the League for the Felleration of the British Empire. I helieve the hon. gentleman himself is a member of that organization; if he is not himself a member of $i t$, several of his colleagues are, and most of the prominent members of his party are also members of the organization. Well, if the hon. gentleman chooses to close his eyes to the unmistakuble manifestations of public opinion, 1 am sure he will not be blind to the lessons taught by a movement of which, if he is not himself a party, several of his colleagues and many members of his party are. Now, I atfirm that the very iden which underlies this organization for the federation of the British Empire, is, as I have stated, the feeling, the knowledge, the consciousness, that colonial citizenship, such as it is to-day, is inferior to British citizenship. There is an hom. member of this House--I am sorry to see that he is not now in his seat-who is one of the most prominent supporters of the administration, who is one of the most conservative of all Comservatives, one of the most unbending of all Tories, I mean the hom. member for North simcoe (Mr. McCarthy). Every friend of imperial federation in this House will achuit, I am sure, that no one in this somutry has spoken with greater authority than the hom. member for North simeoe of the aspirations of the imperial federationists of the motives which animate them. I have endearoured to follow the utterances of that hom. gentleman whenever he has spoken upon this subject, and if I have gathered his views conrectly, the underlying idea in his adsocacy of imperial federation is this very inlea that our colonial citizenship, as it is to-day, is inferior and must he reformed. Speak. irgat Peterlomough in the momel of ommary, 18s:, the hom. member fur simese is reported to have stidl:
 British cifize"nshin.".
"Full British citizenship," this is the infeal which is shared hy the hom. nember for North Simeot: and those who think with him: therefore, in the mind of that hom. gentleman and those who think with him, colonial citizenship at present is inferion and must he improved, as heterms it, to the extent of full British citizenship. If that hom. gentleman had heen in Parliament to years ago. or even i. years agn, he wonld mot then have held the language which he used upon this occasion: he would not have heen satisfied with our citizenship as it then existed, he womld wot have considered it suitable to the wants and repuirements of that date. But as the hom gentleman ohserved on that ocuasion. Canala is growing, Canada is developing, and having reached this stage of progress, he and those who think with him, helieve that the citizenship of Camadia should he improved even to the extent of full British citizenship. This is the opinion, I may say, which is shared by the Hower of the Conservative party in this country. While it is not my yood fortune to agree very often with the member for North Simeoe. upun this oceasion 1 amm glad to say that I altogether agree with him in his premises; I agree with him that our colonial citizenship at the present moment is inferior and must be reformed. But I do not agree with him in his method of secaring that reform: I do mot believe in impetial felcration. Now, it seems to me: that that hon. gentleman and many of his friends in this House must almit that, even if the Canadian people were realy to go to the extent of full British citizenship, whaterer that implies, the English people would not grant them that adramtage, if alvantage it he. The imperial federationists have always contended that they had two things in view, an economic as well as a political reform. As to the economic reform, their hope, I should say their dream, has been that Great Britain would desert the policy which she adopted fifty years ago, that she would abanion freedom of trade and adopt protection, and while adopting protection, that she would discriminate in favour of colonial prollace, and the colonies would discriminate in favour of British proluce. Sir, it seems to me that those who hold that view certainly have the strangest conception of the English character. No one who has a true understanding of the British character can hope that Great Britain will go back upon her free trade policy. The English people are slow to move, but when they have moved they never go back. It is not on record that the English people ever went back upon a principle adopted once for all, and those who hope that she will reverse her policy in this respect, seem to me to be very short-sighted. As to the political reform, I have already cuoted the worls of the member for North Simcoe. What was meant by the plrase "full British citizenship" is further illustrated by that hon. gentleman in the same speech from which I have guoted where he said :
"He said that we in Canada elaim a comection that all should easily understand. He wished to have a roiee in the councilt of the Emp,ire the same as an Englishman, Irishuan or Scotchman."
Upon another occasion, in a speceh delivered in Toronto in the month of December previous, he made use of the following language :-
"As he puts it: What I desire and aspire is to become a subject, with all the rights and all the privileges of a British citizen. equal to the nan who lives in Lo London, and not feel when $I$ go to London that $I$ am a mere colonist." not feel when I go to London that 1 am a mere colonist." Well, sir, with regard to these sentiments I have no fault to find whatever. I dare say that whan a no fault to find whatever. I dare say that when a Tory colonist, whose heart is brimful of loyalty, which he has proclamed on every oceasion, in season and out of season, who hats thrown it at the head of his opponents as his final argument in every discussion, goes to London and finds that no attention is paid to his loyalty, who finds when he walks the street that no one turns his heal to take a look at so much Canadian loyalty, I can understand that that gentleman may feel that indeed colonial citizenship is inferior, and he must wish that there were some place, some rock in the sea, where he could proclaim his loyalty with some chance of being heard. I have no fault to find with such sentiments, but the consequences are grave. If colonists are to be represented at Westminister in the same way that Englishmen, Jrishmen and Scotchmen are represented, then, of course, colonists must assume the duties and responsibilities which are lorne by Englishmen, Irishmen and Scotclmmen, to carry on the wars in which they are alnost perpetually eugaged throughout the civilized and uncivilized world. I think these are consequences before which the people of Canaula will recede. I will not, however, go further with this view of the case. I want to come down to this practical conclusion, which I enunciate at once, and which I stated a moment ago, that even the English people would not grant this so-called privilege if the colonists wanted it. Every imperial federationist in this Honse knows that the conclusion which I now enunciate is the conclusion enunciated by Lord Roseberry at a meeting of the league which took place in the Mansion House, in the month of Norember, 1889. He then statel that every scheme of imperial federation which had been proposed, had been found impracticable, !ecanse it had been found to clash with these three insuperable obstacles.
"1. That the extreme slowness with which public opinion in the United Kingdom noves towards any organic change;
"2. Our institutions, rooted in oustom and tradition, are not suited to any sudden introduction of a new element ; and
"3. The natural colonial jealousy of paternal interference."
Now, this was the general conclusion as to the scheme which has often been debated, sometimes on the Hoor of this House, and to which the hon. gentieman gave his countenance, and to which, even this year, he held out the hand of hope. This is the way Lord Roseberry speaks of this scheme for discrimination by Great Britain in favour of the colonies and by the colonies in favour of Great Britain. Lord Roseberry adiled :
"A zollverein, or customs union, is not prictical inasmuchas the doctrines of free trade are far too deeply, rooted in this country to have hope for any genernl assent.; Lord Roseberry concluded by declaring that the scheme of imperial federation which could be considered was simply that of periodical conferences, renewed from time to time, and bised on the model of the conference of 1887 , clothed with a mission not to make statutes, but with the mere platonic power of passing resolutions. I commend this to the solver judgment of the imperial federationists in this House. Lord Roseberry gave the last blow to the scheme in these words:
"You may be perfectly certain that, whatever your views and whatever your exertions: : imperial federation in any form is an impossible dream."
This is the result-this is the proclamation by the President. Now, therefore, every man must admit in this Honse that the policy of imperial federation is no remedy whatever for the inferiority of our colonial citizenship on so high a place as was intended at one time. It may be that there was a possibility some few years ago of oltaining the adoption of a plan of imperial federation. But, whatever progress had heen made lefore, when Camada adopted a policy of protection, it deliberately killed any proposition for imperial federation. If we had adopted a policy of freedom of trade, if it had been possible for us to give free entrance to British prolucts while those products met in the American markets with the heary duties of to day, we could therely have opened the door to Englaml and found markets for our trade there, because trade begets trale. But, as I said a moment ago, Canada deliberately killed the scheme. Instead of adopting the trade policy of Great Britain, we adopted the American system of protection. We have modelied our tariff ifter the tariff of the American people, and, therefore, in England, the same laws which apply to American trade must necessarily apply to our trade. I am not of those who oppose it, though I never was an imperial ferlerationist, but I always looked with respect at the idea of imperial federation. Certainly there was grandeur in the ilea of uniting the colonies and the mother country into one grand body. I agree with Lord Roseberry that this system is not practicable. I have still a greater one than that. It is the destiny of the colonies to become nations, as it is the destiny of a child to become a man, and while no donbt the idea of separation from the mother land causes a pang in the heart of every oue, yet there is not a child who leaves his father's house who does not do so without a pang, if his heart is in the proper place. There is a grander idea yet. John Bright truly said that England is the living mother of nations, and we may yet hope to see

British communities dotting the earth's surface, which I hold to be a grander idea than that of welding together a gigantic British Empire on the face of the earth. For uy part, that is the view I favour. I say, as I declared in Boston-but the hon. gentleman did not quote that portion of my speech-that I should like to see a commercial alliance of all nations sprung from England. This is the policy I have favoured. But the fact remains, however, that our colonial citizenship is inferior and must be reformed. We on this side of the House proposes a reform. We propose a reform, in the wild realms of fancy, not to take place at an indefinite period in the future, bat we propose a remedy, immeliate and complete, the clothing of this inferior citizenship with power, which, if granted, would le of immense advantage to our plenary citizenship, which would be perfeet in its nature, immediate in its results, which would open new fields for Canatian ambition and would give us a station among foreign nations and meet the proper reguirements of this country. For, in the opinion of all-and I do not think there will be a dissenting roice on this point-what Camada wantsat thismoment is foreign markets. This young country must find somewhere a tiell for nur surplusenergies. We propose to the judgment of the House that our citizenship should be improved just so much as is necessary togiveusastanding amongforeign mations, which will facilitate our obtaining foreign markets. We do not propose to do away with British citizenship, but to remain within those limits, while at the same time we propose to improve and elevate our position as a colony. I was well aware even before the Minister of Finance spoke, that this idea that a colony shall have power to make commercial treaties always was a terror in the mimis of old-fashion Conservatives, but I did not know that the hon. gentleman was so much an old-fashioned Tory. I thought he had some elements of progress in his composition ; but he hats shown he has not, and that he stands just where his party was fifty years ago. We want to improve this citizenship. And why should we not: It was stated, that the power of making treaties is a sovereign power and it would not be compatilhe with our colonial dependence. I have no donlt, whatever, that the idea of vesting a colony with power of negotiating commercial treaties, is it marked departure from the old aceepted doctrine which prevailed in former times, respecting the relations between the parent state and the colony. But, we commenced to revolutionize those old doctrines of tifty years ago, when we obtained the power of self government. I claim that the power we seek to olitain to-day is simply an evolntion of the movement inaugurated fifty years ago. At all events-no, not at all events, hat surely-the power we claim to day is not so wide at departure from the old doctrines as was that power claimed and allowed fifty years ago. The octasiom demands that we should break away from the ohd rusty chains of parental rule, that we should strike out now a bolder course, that we should strike with enthusiasm for higher ground, as Columbus sailed away for lands unseen by himself but confident that beyond the mists, and beyond the limit of vision of his men, there were new and solid lands. This country is young and undeveloped; but I am glail to say, this country has a history. I once hearl the remark made by Sir John Macionald that the history of Canada umder the French regime read like a romance, And everybody must allmit that this is true. There are few pares, whether in fiction or in history, or in reality, which are of more thrilling and absorbing interest than the pages which trace the history of Canada from the time that Jacques Cartier and the colonists of France sailed up the st. Lawrence with the flag of France at the mast head, until the French troops forever sailed away. The regime which followed was very different, in adrance exhibiting a series of successive leaps towards the development of colonial government on the lines of constitutional freedom, which had never leen seen before, never dreamed of before. When Canalat framed and obtained power of (iovermment by an executive responsible to the people of the colony and noi to the Government of the mother comutry, this was a new departure in the history of nations. This was a reform which filled with fear the sonls of all Conservatives and not at few Liberals. When Canada a few years afterwards at one fell swoop disposed of the feudal regime ly reclaiming the rights of the lamdlords, and paill them an indemnity based upon a judicial arbitration, this was it new departure in the history of the word : and, Sir, when Canada and the other British colonies were mited in a conferleration with the approval ami with the consent of the mother lame to form a nation, this wasalso a new departure in the history of the world. Again at the present day when we claim this power of negotiating our own treaties, this also was a new departure in the history of the world. Nodonlt it this moment, it excites alarm, as every sach movement excited alarm before the event, but it will he as other great movements have been, a cause of almiration when it is completed. There is not a comtry on the face of the earth with ever achieved its independence, except at the cost of blood and war and enmity with the parent state. I holl out to my fellowcomatrymen the inlea of independence, but whenever the day comes. it mast come by the consent of loth countries, and we shall continne to keep the good feeling and the gool-will of the mother land. If we are true to our record, we will again exhibit to the world the migue, the unprecedented example of a nation achieving its indepemdence by slow degrees, amd as maturally as the severing of the ripe fruit from the parent tree. Fifty years ago the powers of selfgovernment whicle were granted to us were aleg pate to our wants and regairements of that day, but now I say, we have alvanced in progress ind we must have langer powers. Our wants aml repuirements are no longer contined within the borters of our tervitories. We must have fields ahroal, we must have scope for our energy and enterprise. This is a principle which is not admitted by all in words, lut which is admitted by all in fact. What is the meaning for instance of the mumerons delegations which have been sent from this comutry to distant cointries, to Brazil, to the West Indies and to the United states: There was hut one object in view : It was to obtain a wider field for Canadian energy, it was to obtain markets for Canalian prolncts: and yet at the same time when we were sending in every direction delegations to negotiate treaties, we had not the power to negotiate these treaties. Conld there be a greater anomaly than that: We send delegations upon a mission which they had not the power to perform. That is the reason, sir, ind that is the conclusion of the justification of the policy which we now adsance. The hon. Minister of Finance reproached me a moment ago, that I had stated at Boston that the Camadian people had commercial interests different from the British people. Sir, I said so at Boston, and I saty so now on the flow of this House. Will the hon. gentleman deny that the Canadian people have interests altogether at variance with the interests of the mother country? Why have we a different tariff if we have the same interests as the English people? Why have we not the sume policy as the Fagglish people of our interests are the same? Why have we alopted protection when the English people have adopted free trade? Why : It is hecause the fact must stare every man in the face that our interests are different and camot be served by the sanne tiscal policy. What is true of our internal policy is also true of our external relations. The hon. gentleman stated a moment ago that we hand the benefit of English diplomacy and the benetit of the treaties negotiated hy Eaglamd. Sir, we hand the benefit of treaties negotiaten by England, and at one time it was a bencfit when we hadalmost the same policy as England, hut the moment that we adopted a policy of protection what had been a benefit to us !ecame the reverse of a benefit. Take the case of the Belgium and the German treaties. These treaties were passed in 1862 and 1s6i\%. No complaint, so far as my memory goes, was ever made by the Canadian Govermment against these treaties until the year 1881 . From $1860^{-5}$ to 1881 , no complaints were made, lout in 187!, we hal ithopted it different tiscal policy, we had alopted protection and then we find that these treaties which had been negotiated with a free trade nation were no longer suited to the Canadian people, and forthwith we asked to be relieved of these treaties. We have been asking this for almest 10 years now withont any result whatever. Our High Commissioner made remonstrances, but they were not heded. The Canadian (iovermment made remonstrances, but they were not heedel, and last year Parliament adopted is petition to Her Majesty, at the very instance of the hon. gentleman opposite to be relieved from the effect of these treaties and he has not to thisday receivedan answer. I saly this just to show, Mr. speaker, that our interests are so much at variance with the interests of Creat Britain, that the time has come when we must ask the power to negotiate our own treaties and lecide for ourselves what is hest for us. The hon. gentleman has told us in a casual way, however, that if we adopted the power which is now clamed, we would be relieved of the services of British diphomacy. Is there a Canadian anywhere who would not hail with joy the day when we would be deprived of the services of British diplumacy: What has been British diplomaty to us, Sir. British diplomacy, so far as Canada is concerned, has been a record of failure, and of surrender and sacritice. British diplomacy has sacrificed our lake frontier. British diplomacy has sacrificed our Oregon territories. British diplomacy has allowed the State of Maine to indeut our own country. British diplomacy has sacrificed our Fenian claims, even though at that time the services of British diplomacy had a Canadian negotiator: It is well known, and I will repeat it, that I have no very great contidence in hon. gentlemen opposite, but I would rather have a

Camadian Tory than an English Liberal, for the negotiation of a treaty with a foreign country in the interest of Canada. Those gentlemen opposite are really too timid. They camot expect that (ireat Britain will always do their business. These great strapping young men cannot expect that they will always hang on by the skirts of the old parent. Let them be men and ask the power of men, and assume the duties of manhood. The Minister of Finance referred a moment ago to what I said at Boston. Sir, at Boston I said, as I have just stated, that the interests of Canada were different from the interests of Creat Britain and had to be treater separately. I said further at Boston that the interests of Canada should be dealt with by the Canadian people and not by Euglish diplomats. Now, Sir, in so saying I was perhaps it traitor in the eyes of hon. gentlenen opposite. But I must say with all candour that I saidi something more : I said that allegiance could not be the basis of trade. My hom. friend takes exception to that. He pretemis that allegiance ought to lee the basis of trade, that business is not to be the consideration, hat that the consideration is to be the bloond between the two countries. The hon, gentlenam no doubt would prefer an English shilling to a Sankee dollar: hat formy part I am differently constituted. I am ready any day, whether I am charged with anmexation or not, to take a Cakee: dollar in preference to an English shilling. That is the extent of my amexation. Of course hom. gentlemen opposite are too loyal to subserihe to any such false doctrine as this. The hon. gentleman states also that Mr. Farrer is the editor of the Gilole, and he concludes that I anamannexationist lecause Mr. Farrer is one. Sir, if I were an annexationist I would say so. I would not be so mean with myself as not to hoist my own colours. That is my feelinge as an honest man. I have again and again repeateci that the goal of my aspiration is the independence of Canadia, to see Camada in independent nation in due conrse of time. But it does not lie in the mouth of the hon. gentleman opposite to tell me that I am anamexationist because there happens to be amexationists in the ranks of my party. Do I accuse him of heing an amexationist becanse there are amexationists in his party"

An hom. Member. The Prime Minister.
Mr. LAURIER. The Prime Minister, an hon. gentleman says. At one time, when I silw that Mr. Farrer was an amexationist, I thonght of writing to the Glole, requesting his removal from the office : but it occurred to me that perhaps he was destined to become the Premier of Canadia and the lealer of the Conservative party. Now, Sir, the hon. gentleman stated that La Patrie was my organ, and that it was Rouge of the Rouges. Sir, I think, that those who know me know that I have been more Rouge in my younger days than I have been in later days. I do not claim to have been always of the same mind that 1 an to day. 1 have made some progress; I have altered my views; and I have no hesitation in stybing that there was a time in the hot days of my youth when I was more of a Rouge than I am to-day. But I an a Liberal of the English school, as I have stated again and again, and on this platform I stand.

Mr. FOSTER. What is that?
Mr. LINTER. You were a Liberal yourself nine years ago.
some hon. MEMBERS. Explain.
Mr. LAURIER. The hon. gentleman statel also that at Boston I had sidid that the conduct of (ireat Britain amd of Canada during the American civil war had been maworthy of British civilization. Sir, I would not have been guilty of making that statement in a foreign country if I had not made it again and again in my native land and even on the flow of this House. In the year 1ss9, 1 stated in the presence of the covermment what I stated in Boston, that in my estimation the conduct of Great Britain and the conduct of Gamada had heen unworthy of the civilization boih of direat Britain and of Camali. I stated the same thing at Briston-why: Berause the comluct of (canala had been the cause of the ahrogation of the treaty of 1N:54. Mr. Blaine had stated that the cause of the abrogation of that treaty was the fact that (amadia had heen mufriemdly to the Americans at that time. But I stated also that if such were the feelings of the (amalian people at one time, they were no longer their feelings. I thought it my duty to make that statement, and to add : Whenere Canadian commissioners go to Washington to negotiate a treaty, do not remember the olld sores. but wather look to the fact that you hate in us at the present time a brotherly and a friendly nation. I spoke at Bostom, Sir, aml why ? Becanse in my judgment it is most important that the most friemilly relations should exist hetween Camada and the United States. I statel at Bostom, what 1 repeat, that pat riotism does not rest upon hatred. I am a Comadian almeve all things, hut hecause I ama (analianabove all things, I want to he friendly with my neighhurs on the ather side of the line. Bo hom. gentemen opposite oppose this policy? Sir. from Crery consideration we ought to adopt the resolation mopsued by my hon. friend, and I hope it will he alopted. The hon. Dinister of Finamee has not forsoten that this motion has been male in this House before, and if he remembers the arguments mande on that oncasion by his colleague, the present hom. Ninister of Public Works, perhaps he will feel that after all there is some truth in the movement, and that it ought to receive some consideration of a more friemdly character than he has siven to it. I sity we must adopt this policy, becanse it is a duty to improve our citizenship; hecause in my juldment it is of the utmost consefuence to open new chamels to national activity, new and wider fields to national ambitions, new and higher aims to national enthusiasm. What isto-day, lask, the position of Canala: Whodoesnot concede that the system of stagnation and inaction in which the ciovernment are dwarting every proposition to satisfy national aspiration, is mining away the very basis of Confederation. Where is the mational spirit, the national enthusiasm which we ought to have? Where, I ask, is the pride of the Canalian mame: I vainly ask for it and seek for it through the length and brealth of this country. In every part, fron: ocean to ocean, I tind pride of race and creed, hut nowhere pride of the Canadian name, which ought to be supreme and paramount in the breast of every Canadian. The activity and energy of this young nation are frittered away in useless and even dangerons bickerings of race against race and creed against creed. Sir. for this fatal state of things there is but one remedy : it is to elevate the standard, to show to the young and hopeful that there are nobler aims aml purposes, that Canada has a future, and towarts that future steadily to advance, with faith never waver. ing, with enthusiasm never flinching.

Mr.OBRIEN. Mr. speaker, it is with very great diftidence that I venture to say a word in reply to the hon. gentleman who has just spoken with that elongunce which we all admire, But which few of us can imitate. I wonh not venture to say a word had he mot devoted a large portion of his speeeh to the suljeet of imperial feleration. Now, I donot pretend to say that of all the members of this House who are members of the imperial federation League. 1 am the one hest qualified to mulertake a reply to the hom. gentlemam on that subject. There are other hom. members of this Homse. especially the hon. gentleman to whom the last speaker mate special reference, the hon. member for North simene (Mr. Mc(arthy), who, if present, would much hetter till that pusition than it is possilhe for me to do. But, sir, I would nut like it to wabroad to the people of this comutrs, who have heard so much on the sulject of imperial felleration, who have raken so great interest in it, and who I think $=0$ thoroughly aml wilely appreciate it, that after it was disconsed on that side of the Honse ats it hats been by the hom. gentleman whe has just spoken." some member of that association hewerer homble his prsition in the comntry or in this House. hats mit risen to say a word in its defence Sows, Sir, the hom. gentleman is fond of literary allusions, and I think I am not doing him an injustice when I compare him to one of the greatest characters in monlern fiction, Don Guixote. Dom puixote with all his pecentricities, was one of the noblest characters, and I think among the attributes saining him the highest applanse the hon. gentleman is not unlike him. But on the present oceasiom the hom. gentleman has done what Don Quixote did on a certain oceasion: he has set himself to tilting against a windmill. Now, although not afratid or unwilling to discuss the question of imperial federation. I should like to know by what process of ratiocination the hon. gentleman has arrived at the conclusion that the notion of the hon. member for Bothwell now hefore the House afforded a fitting and proper occasion for the discussion of that very importint sulject. As resards themotion of the hon. member for Bothwell, 1 think the answer of the hon. Ninister of Finance was as complete and as thorough an answer as it is possible for amy man to give. I only take exception to the speceh of the Minister of Finance in one particular, and that is that I think it unfortunate that in our delates it almost seems impossible for us to eliminate the persomal question: and had the hom. gentleman avoided what is the one blot in his speech, I think that not the slightest exception could be taken to his amswer to the hon. member for Bothwell, and I believe that the hon. gentleman who last spoke did not in one particularsucceed inmeeting theobjection which the Minister of Finance put forward. But with reference to imperial federation, the only subject on which I propose to say anything to-night. I would like to point out the vast difference there is between that proposal and that which the hon. gentleman holds out as the whima thule of the Canadian mation. In olden times, the proudest boast a man could utter was "Civis Romamus sum." In montern times. the highest imbition and hope a man can hate is to say "I am a British sulject." Well, imprerial federationists, admit. of course as all must almit that the colonial condition must inevitable be a condition of thansition : they a dhit that the colomial condition in which we are is not as high a status as that of a British subject : that is to say, that while we have all the rights and privileges and are entitled to call oursedues british suljects, while there is nothing in the political or civil status of a British sulbject in any respect which we are not entitled to assume. set there are privileges and powers and mational respumsibilities in which we do mot at present share. But what the imperial federationists say is: we desire to share those privileges and those respmsibilities to the fullest extent, and in aceepting the privileges we are prepared to assume the responsithitite: : whereas the position of hon. gentlemen oppusite is this, that they are prepareal on give up ath the privileges which ittach to the position hut set are willing to ansme the responsihilities. They are prepared to lower the status of the people of this comatre ly cansing them to cease a lee British subifects. í inin glat that the hom. gentleman spoke of imperial federation in the respectful terme he dis. He could not fail, with his mind. to sarap. it he evilently does, the standere of the idea. hut he dwells on the impossinility of ever carrying it into effect. Now. 1 say. without fear of comtradiction, the course of history in this conintry shows that imperial feeleration. in some form or other, is every day coming neater and nearer. and that the day is nut far distant when the people. whether they like it or not, will be cempelled to take the question of imperial ferleration in some way into consideration and anhpt its principles, becanse in mo other way can they posibly continue to exist. Take an example at this moment. We have all seen a reference in the London T"mes to the Behring sea yuestion, in which it was asked: What do the people of England care ahout a few seals in the behring sea : What difference does it make whether they are caught be Canadians or Americans: Why should the people of dreat Britain he taved for the protection of Canadian interests in the Behring sea tisheries, when Canalians do not show us any favour in their markets, although, ours are open to them. That statement may have been put in unnecessarily strong language, language not pleasant to real, hut, nevertheless, who can deny the truth of the proposition, that Fnglam, in this case, is standing up not for any particular adsantage to her people, not for any commercial alvantage, hut for the honour of the British flay borne in those seas ly forty or tifty Ganatian tishermen. Is this a fit time to aise the guestion hrought before the House by the hom. nember for bothwell. when we know that the whole power of of England is standing at our back to protect us. not for any great imperial interest not for any special interest of her own. but lecanse a few (anadian fishermen tind it their interest to catch seal in the Behring sea unler the protection of the British flag? This is not a time to discuss this question, but is eminently the time when we should feel most deeply the adrantages we derive from imperial connection. The main difference between felerationists and those who look to the independence of Canada is this, that we seek to raise our status to the highest any man in the comentry can occupy : and in seeking that status with all the rivileges that belong to it, we assert our remdiness to acept all the responsibilities. That is imperial ferleration in a mutshell. As to the trade guestion. I have omly to say this, that speaking for myself, and speaking for very many in thisHouse, I think. and in this comntry, the time has come, as foreshadowed hy the Finance Minister in his Budget speech the other day, when this country should alter its commercial relations with the mother country lay a relaction of tariff in all those speciallines in which we deal with the mother country: and I for one, differing in some respects with some of my friembs on this side, do not desire to approach this question in a spirit of hargain or sate. I do not wish to go to Fhyland and say: live us preference in your maket and we will give you a preference in ours. But I helieve it would be in the interests of the country to day to go to England of cur own spontianeons notion, and in dealing with our tariff let the people of Englamd umderistand that we appreciate the inmense imperial adrantages we may derive from the imperial eomnection. I leelieve that is the true and proper course for us to pursue. The hon. gentleman sitting lefind the hom. member who has just spoken has put a resolution to that effeet on the Paper. It is faulty, as 1 shall show when it come alf for discassion, but in its: main issue it is one in which I heartily agree : and 1 think the time will come when, with due regard for the finances of the comatry, we may show and in so doing take a further step in the direction of ferlemation. that hy lowering our tariff on British gonls. consistent with the meting of our own obligations, we shall be doing what will he of im. mense henefit, not only to the material hat to the political interests of the comatry. so far ats the National Policy is emermed, 1 sity this, that protection is not a thing to be desired for itself atome. 1 ann not a protectionist in the sense that it is a gend peopleshouh set up and worshipas they dof ree trade. I say that protection, in whatever shape you have it, is a means to an end. It was so devised in the first instance, and as soon as it has answered that emi. we can deal with it as we like. The hon. gentleman said something about the Camadian name, that the Canalian name was minown. The hom. gentleman must bes strangely bind to the signs of the times. He can hardly have looked back to the time of Confederation, becanse if hee hanl, he will nee that an enomons progress hats lreen made since that time under the name of Canalian. At the time of Confecteration, one or two provinces were absolutely hostile to the indea of confederation. I helieve inany of the prople of British Colmuhia scouted the idea of being called Canadians, and I think some Nova seotians, some of the colleagnes of the hom. gentleman or memhers of his party, if they had been comerted to the inleas he now adrocates, are recent converts, hat at the time of Confederation, although we were homind together by a constitutios, we were scattered provinces with scarcely any intercolonial trade or national sentiment. Is that the case to-diyy? Confederation is not so rery ohd, and the union which has been brought about between the diffierent provinces, not only in matters of trade hat also in matters of sentiment, is simply womlerful in view of the slort period which has elapsed. I do not think that any one, looking to the future and julging hy the past, has any reason for apprehension even if our present position continued to exist. The hon. gentleman's aspirations towards (;anadian nationality form one aspect of the question to which we are all bound to pay a great deal of respect and a great deal of consideration. We have three alternatives. I fully arlmit that we cannot always remain in our present position. A change will come whether we like it or not, but it is our duty so to guile the restinies of the country that, in spite of what we may say or do in this House, we should direct opinion in the way which is hest for our material, moral and political interests; and imperial feleration is adrocated as the best means of preventing the falling asunder of the Empire and the formation of a closer union, not by the breaking of the bundle of sticks and hringing the Eimpire back to a state of weakness, but by an idea so great that some people regard it as impossible because of its greatness, to make a complete union of all the parts of the Empire politically, commercially and otherwise. That there are difficulties in the way no one will deny, but that these difficulties can he overcome every one should helieve. Greater difficulties in the history of nations have been overcome time and again, and it is saying little for the honesty ant talent of the people of the British Empire to sity that, having such a great conmon object in view and having such an idea as one worthy of consummation, it would be impossible to tind means to carry it ont. Every day this view is yrowing nearer. The very fact which has been mentioned to-night that a Canarlian commissioner is united with a British ambassador in negotiating a treaty is a step towards imperial federation. What more can we expect than that our commissioner in England should be associated with a British ambassadior in different courts of Europe" We camot see exactly the way now, hat, as years go on. the path will be opened, the step will he taken, and 1 am as confident as that I stand on the floor of this House that, if the people of this country show that they desire imperial ferleration and support it as the people of England are supporting it, it will come about. Then, as to a trade federation, hon. gentlemen say it is impossible. They have not watched the signs of the times. They have not seen that the pressure of the tariffs in foreign countriesagainst Great Britain, in Germany, in France, in Africa, have made the people of England look to the colonies as the legitimate ontlet for their trate. When we look over the trade returns, as I have looked over them with a view to this subject, I find a remarkable fact which will probably come out in some further discussion, that, of those articles which we get from Fingland, we get almost none from the United States. There is almost an absolute line drawn between the articles we inport from England and those we import from the United States, and those which we import from the United States are articles which we ought to import from them and upon which we reguire protection because the countries are very much the same and their lines of manufacture run very much in the same direction as ours. We therefore reguire protection against the country which most closely competes with our manufacturer's. Looking at the present temper of a large portion of the English manufacturers, looking as they do to the colonies and especially to Canadi as the great outlet for their trade, I think that one of the great obstacles to imperial federation is overcome. The question of the tariff is a very small matter in this regard. If we treat the country which gives us a free and open market as the country which it is our interest as well as our duty to trade with, one of the great obstacles to imperial federation will be overcome and the public feeling in Fngland today shows that it has been overcome to a large extent. As I statell before, I had great diffidence in addressing the House for the imperial federationists in the absence of those who were much better qualified to speak on the subject than I am, hut I repeat that great economic causes are working towards imperial feteration, and I have no doubt whatever, difficult as the path may be, it will be surmounted hefore many years are over.

Mr. DEVLIN. Before a rote is taken on this subject. I would like to read a word or two to the Finance Minister in regard to what he said tonight about a portion of the population with which I am allied to a certain extent. Sir Charles Tupper was invited to speak at a clinner in London, England. I am quoting from a report in the Cifizen of Tuesday, ith April, and I fimd that he said this:
" Mr. Pembroke Stephens, in his eloquent but too complimentary speech, has just told you that a quarter of a century ago, I was Prime Minister of Nova Scotia, and liad taken a leading part in the confederation of British North Americau Provinces, and in binding them together by a great transcontinental line of railway. Let me say, that I owed that position to the support I obtained from Irishmen, and that in whatever I have been able to accomplish for my country I am deeply indebted to them, I need not say, therefore, how he:artily I sympathize with the godlike work of benerolence in which this society has been engaged for more than a hundred years, in aiding the destitute and opening up the pathway of knowledge to Irish children.

Further on in the same speech he said:

"When I visited some of the most congested districts of that unhappy country, I could not but come to the conclusion that Irish poverty was at the hottom of Irish discontent, nor could I a void reflecting what change would be effected by trausferring these people from their wretched surroundings to the Dominion of Canada where we give 160 acres of the best agricultural land in the world to every emigrant of eighteen ycars of age.
"There is no country where Irishmen have been more successful in every walk of life as agriculturalists, machinists, tradesmen, contractors and merchants they have been signally successful, while they have adorned all the learned professions and reached the highest positionsin the States. They thus contribute to the national wealth, and at the same time to become loyal upholders of British institutions. The most discontented Irish emigrant finds himself in a country where no grievances could be found. He is his own landlord, enjoys the most complete Home Rule, and casily becomes independent. The result of all this has been shown in the recent elections in Canada, where Catholic and Protestant Irishmen have, with great unanimity stood shoulder to shoulder in sustaining the policy of British connections and no discrimination against lingland as opposed to a policy of free trade with the United States and the prospect of union at no distant day with that Republic."
No loubt Irishmen-because the hon. gentleman referred to them in his speech in a sneering manner -no doubt Irishmen throughout the country will have reason to feel complimented in view of the reference which he marle to them. He referred to them, I think, as a disturbing element in the United States and as the cause of the difficulties with which Figland meets when sheendeavours to bring about treaties of reciprocity. I do not recall the exact words which he uttered, but, nevertheless, there was a sneer in those words, and we know perfectly well that he was brave here to-night when the people arainst whom he levelled his sneer were far away. It was a cowardly thing to do, and, Sir, I take it upon myself, to-night, to alefend those whom he attacked. I would recall to him the words uttered in the capital of Englandly his ows leater aml master. Nir Charles Tupper, pointing to the loyalty of the Irish people. Loyal they are in whatever conntry they may le settled : and if lecanse they were cast awiay from lrelamd on acconnt of the laws prevailing there, on account of pressure, on account of persecution. on account of tymany, and were hiren from that country into the United itates and fomml there a home, it is no Womler that they should le loyal to that home, loyal to the thas of that country, loyal to the interest of that country. Here they are loyal, ton, leoanme they have fomml the protection here that was denied them at home, and when the hon. onentleman sneers at those across the line, he snears at those who live here, amd who have that respect for our brethern across the line that one brother shoulal have for another.

sUPPLY.

Mr. Foster moved that the Honse again resolve itself into Committee of Supply.
Mr. LAURIER. I will take this opportmity of asking information from the leader of the House with regard to two Bills, first of all the Criminal Law Amendment Bill which has been long on the Paper but has not yet been printed and distributed, and then as to the Rellistribution Bill. We are now in the sixth week of the session, and perhaps the hon. gentleman can tell us when we may expeet these measures.
Sir JOHN THOMPSON. As to the Criminal Law bill, I introdnced it with a number of amendments, as I explained at the time, and the printing has not been completed, although the officers of the House and the officers of the Printing Burean hare done all they can to expedite it. I am informed that it will probably be ready for a second reading on Tueslay, and then I intend to propose its reference to a select committee, composed of a considerable number of the members of this House. As to the Redistribution Bill, I think it will be brought down very shortly after the Easter recess, and the information which has been asked for will be ready hy that time, but, I fear, not before, although an ample staff has been engaged in preparing it.

Motion agreed to, and House again resolved itself into Committee of Supply.

(In the Committee.)

Department of the Interior.  $$ 95,414$

Mr. FOSTER. When we were going through the Civil Government estimates, we allowed this item to stand until the report of the Committee of the Pricy Council was before the House. That has leen down for a considerable time, and has been discussed on the Supplementary Estimates, so I suppose there will be no objection to pass this item now.
Mr. McMULLEN. We want to have an explanation as 10 the increases in this department.
Mr. DEWDNEY. They are simply the statutory increases.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). I understand that, when papers are moved for in this House, it has been the practice in the different departments, if there is but one paper of those moved for upon the file, on which there may be thirty or forty papers, to copy the whole file. This adds enornously to the expense though it may le to the advantage of those who have to do the work. It seems to me that is a practice which shonld he corrected.
Mr. DEWIDNEY. It is difficult sometimes to find out exactly what papers are required, and, if the Minister takes the respousibility of selecting he may not bring down the particular paper which is required.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). But if there are forty papers on the file and two are required to be brought down, the selection had better be made before than after the papers are brought down.
Mr. MeMullen. Is it the intention of the Department of the Interior to still keep on the force at Winnipeg that they have had in the past?
Mr. DEWDNEY. As the hon. gentleman kuows, the estimates in regard to the force at Winnipeg is not now before the House, but the vote I shall ask for this year is a trifle less than that which I asked for last year, but the force is virtually the stane.
Mr. McMullen. Can the hou. gentleman inform the committee whether the Civil Service Commission are about to make a report in regard to any material alterations in his department?
Mr. DEWDNEY. That would be impossible for me to say. I have only had a few moments' conversation with the chairman of thatCommission, who stated that he had been through my department and was astonished at the amount and variety of the work done there. He made no indication as to what he proposed to recommend in regard to it, and what remarks he did make were made in a casual way.
Mr. McMULLEN. Has the staff been increasing in the last few years?
Mr. DEWDNEY. No; since I have been here the staff in Winnipeg has renained about the same. The staff at headquarters has been decieasing. Within the last two years the cost has decreased by $$ 17,600$. This year there is a decrease of $$ 3,600$, and last year there was a decrease of $$ 14,0(0)$.
Mr. McMULLEN. I shouhl like to ask if the work now performed in the Interior Department is not considerahly less than it was three years ago:

Mr. DEWVNEX: On the contrary, I think the work has been constantly increasing, but the means we have taken to do the work has resulted in a decrease of the number of clerks. For instance, we have employed a large number of typewriters, which has immensely decreased the amount of clerical work, and that is one cause why we have been able to dispense with so many extra clerks. We have now had in hand for about six weeks: a phonograph, by which we hope to be able to decrease still further the number of officials, if that instrament works as successfully as it now promises to do.

Mr. MoMULLEN. The hon. gentleman has had in his department a man mamed Cross, who is not now in the department, I think. Who has taken his place?

Mr. DEWDNEI. Mr. Cross was a temporary clerk and was dispensed with. He was one of those who are represented in the decrease of $$ 14,0 \mathrm{NH}$. No one has sacceeded him.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) It seems to me, in looking over the expenses in comnection with the alifferent departments, that amongst them the Interior Department does not rank high for economy ; in fact, it would not be going too far to say that it takes a high place for extravagance. I think, in the year 1882-83, when they went clean mad in that department, and when certain statements were brought down by officers in the department showing that they were acting under the impression that the receipts from the lominion lands would be so large as to cover nearly all the expenses of the Government, they inaugurated a system of expenaliture which was consistent with their then expectations. Well, it was no use in those days talking about economy; nolrody talked about it, anyloody who did talk about it was laughed at. But there has been a growing disposition on both sides of the House, of late years, now that we are nearly at the length of our tether, tolop off useless extravagances in all the departments. I would call the attention of the head of that department to the fact, that while they launched out into this extravagant system in 1882-83, they have not yet applied the pruning-knife, there has been no retrenchment whatever. Now, everybody knows that the work in that department is not as large as it once was, nothing like it. I see the sales of land in the North-West are very, very small, not one-fifth, or one-tenth, part of what they were expected to be. The hon. gentleman told us, I think, last year or the year before, that he was enabled to reduce his staff somewhat, but I do not find-1 am not going through all the little items of expenditure-that there is any reduction. Take, for instance, the item of newspapers. You have two branches in that department, and you have $$ 300$ paid for newspapers in one, and nearly $$ 700$ in the other- $$ 1,000$ for newspapers in the InteriorDepartment. Of course it is a very small sum, but it is indicative of the system which prevails in the department. I have gone through all the contingent accounts in the Auditor General's Report, and it seems to me they are all on a par, there does not seem to be any desire to economise. A few years ago the House was shocked at the tremendous amount of travelling expenses which many employés of that department incurred, and which were paid out of the public expenditure. In that regard there is somewhat of an improvement, although I think there is rom for still more. But it cloes seem to me, when we compare the expenditure of that department to-day with what it was in $18-5$, and I think the hon. gentleman will admit there was nearly as much work being done as there is now, that it is out of all proportion, and evinces an absence of economy to be condemned. I think we have a right to expect something better from the hon. gentleman ; I think the scale to which the expenditure in that department was raised some years ago, when these extravagant expectations were inclulged in, should be reduced, not by lopping off a little cheeseparing here and there, but hy applying the pruningknife deep into this expenditure.

Mr. DEWDNEI. I can assure the hon. gentleman that the work in the clepartment has greatly increased, and that if there was any chance of reducing the staff still further I would le only too glad to do it : hecause I have made it my business to look into the matter and have emleavoured to make a reduction wherever possible, and I think I have done it to a great extent, net only in the cost, but in the number of the employes. Of course the Interior Department and the Govermment will he guiderl, to a great extent, ly the Report of the Civil Service Commission: and I shall be astonished if that Commission, after the very close examination they have made into our department-they have gone into every branch of it, and into every sub-branch-I shall he very much surprised if they report in the direction of cutting down the staff to any great extent. If they do it, and if they can show that we can make any further reduction in the number of employés, I shall be very glad to do so.

Mr. FRASER. What proportion do the receipts bear to expenditure in your department?

Mr. DEWIDNEI. I think that will be hetter discussed on the main vote. I have not the information now, but I will have it then.

Mr. McMULLEN. I think the hon. gentleman has got a man named H. H. Turner in his department. I would like to know when Mr. Turner was appointed, what hissalary is, and what he is doing?

Mr. DEWDNEY. H. H. Turner wasappointed in 1885 or 1886 , I do not recollect which at the moment. He has been comnected with the Account ant's Branch as one of the assistant accomitants.

Mr. McMULLEN. Is the hon. gentleman able to say from his own personal knowledge that he is an efficient accountant, that he discharges his duty efficiently:

Mr. DEWINNEY. Ies, I understami he is a most able man; one of the most able clerks we have in the department.

Mr. McMULLEN. What was he doing before he was appointed to the department, and by whose influence was he put in there ?

Mr. DEIVDNEF. I understand that he was a school teacher somewhere in Ontario, but I do not know where.

Mr. Dewdeer.

Mr. McMULLEN. I have been informed that he was put in by the hon. nember for Leeds (Mr. Taylor), and that his abilities are of such a character that he has had a never-ending battle to keep him there. My impression is that Mr. Turner is getting a great deal more than he is able to eara. I observe that his salary was raised $$ 50$ last year, and that he is now receiving $$ 900$ annually. We can easily understand that a Government, either Iominion or Provincial, is subject to le pressed very strongly by those who have personal interests to serve, and friends to serve, to take people into the departments in order to provide for them. It is the duty of any Opposition, whether here or in the Provincial Legislature, to see that these men are not permitted to draw salaries for which the country receives little or nothing in return. I have some little inkling that this is one of these cases. This man was crowded through the doors of the Interior Department, and has leen kept there because there is a member of the Honse anxious to find him something to do.

Mr. DELVDNES. I only know that I found Mr. Turner in the department when I took charge of it, and that he had been in the department some years previous to that time. I do not know under what circumstances he enterel, but the member for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) stated in his place in this House some days ago that he was a friend of his and that he had known him several years. On every occasion when Mr. Turner's name has heen bronght up, he has received the very highest testimonials as to his competence and character.

Mr. McMULLEN. I hope the Commission on the Civil Service will recommend some means of preventing the crow ling of men into the departments. It is desirable that some change should be made in order that a whole lot of otficials whose services are not worth what the public pay for them should not be retained in the Civil Service until they are superannuated under the present law. I hope the Commission will bring in a recommendation that will relieve the Government of the day1 lo not blame hon. gentlemen opposite more than any other Government-from being bored in this way, and being almost compelled to admit unnecessary clerks into the Civil Service.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. gentleman has made a statement that he has been informed that Mr Turner is a very inefficient officer. I challenge that statement. I challeuge that hon. gentleman to produce a statement from Mr. Burgess, or from the chief accountant, or any other leading officer of the department, to that effect, for they will declare that the assertion is contrary to the fact, and that Mr. Turner is one of the most efficient men in the service. I make that statement here, and I will guarantee that every chief officer in the Department of the Interior will agree with what I say. Mr. Turner wasa school teacher before he was appointed to the department, and he has proved himself to be one of the best accommtants and one of the most efficient officers; and if the hon. geutleman has been informed, as he has intimated, to the contrary, all I can tell him is that his information is not correct, and that he did not get it from any officer of the department.

Mr. McMULLEN. The committee will notice that the hon. geintleman does not deny that he is responsible for Mr. Turner having been placed in the department. Of course, if he were an efficient servant, it would be all right : but I have learned that Mr. Turner has been kept there by the persistent efforts of the memler for Leeds (Mr. Taylor) becsuse he is a personal friend, and a friend of his constituents. I merely cite this as an instance of the wrong manner in which officers are forced into the departments and remain there, and I hope the Civil Service Commission will suggest some methon to alter the entire system, and prevent the Dominion Government being compelled to retain officers in order to satisfy hon. members of the House.

Mr. CHARLTON. What number of agencies are established, and has the number been increased during the past year?

Mr. DEWDNET. Does the hom. gentlemau refer to land agencies in the North-West?

Mr. CHAPLTON. Land and timber agencies.
Mr. DEWDNET: The land agencies are the same as they have been for some years. There have been agencies established for the summer months at the Red Deer district, where one of the clerks of the Winnipeg office has heen detailed in order to assist settlers, who went in there in large numbers last year. There has been no increase of agencies, so far as my memory gres, during the last year or two. I have not made any new limd agencies since I came into office.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) I wish to enguire from the Minister whether it is consistent with the views of the department, or is it a fact, that officers of the department are interested in mining and mineral lands in the North-West which come within the purview aul control of the department? If so, who are the officers? Has thie hon. gentleman's attention been called to this matter, and is he able to give any positive answer in regard to it?

Mr. DEWDNEY. I may say that up to a few hours ago I never heard any intimation that any of the officers of my department were interested in any way in public lands or in mines in the western country. But I did hear a few hours ago that an anonymous letter had been written to a member of this House stating that Mr. Burgess was interested in a silver mine in Keewatin. I do not believe there is a silver mine in Ketwatin, for I never heard of it. I can venture the assertion, on the responsibility of my position here, that Mr. Burgess is not, and never was, and I do not believe single otticer of my department is, or ever was, interested in mines in the North-West.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Since the hon. gentleman has mentioned the subject, I may say that I understand a number of prominent officers, speak. ing now merely from rumour that is current abroad, and that ought to be contradicted if not well founded-that the most prominent ofticers in the inside and outside services of the department are interested in coal and other lands lying between Calgary and Edmonton. The public believe, no doubt, that the statement is well founded. It is an equally well-foundel opinion that any such interest, if it exists, is incompatible with the proper discharge of the duties which these parties owe to the public service.

Mr. DEWDNEY. I think the hon. gentleman is quite right in bringing a matter of this kind to the attention of the Honse, and I may say for myself that I have never heard the rumour that such is the case. If there is information on this subject obtainable I should be only too glad if it were brought to my attention, but I do not believe there is a single case of the kind. All the dealings by public servants in public lands since $I$ have been in charge of the department-and they have been only with respect to public lamds-have been cases where otficers have asked permission, which can he done under the Dominion Lauls Act, to purchase a piece of land in the public domain. There have heen one or two applications for small pieces of such land, but that is all. The matter referrell to ly the hon. gentleman has never heen brought to my attention. I have never hearl of the charge that a single ofticer of my department is interested, direatly or indirectly, in coal lands or timber lands.
Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). I would like to ask the Minister further, for I do not think his explanation and denial cover the whole ground, whether, in the companies which have been formed in comnection with mining lanls letween Calgary and Elmonton, or in any timber limits, he knows that prominent officials in iis department are members of these companies:
Mr. DEIVDNEI: I have never heard of the slightest intimation that any one of my officials were in any way connected, either directly or indirectly, with any companies in (algary or EAmonton. or in any part of the North-West.
Mr. Paterson (Prant). What position loes Frank Nelson now ocenpy, and what salary loes he get :
Mr. DEWDNFY. He was reduced to $\mathrm{Sl}, 1(100$ a year, the minimum of his class.
Mr. Paterson (Brant). Is that the result of the investigation?

Mr. DELVDNEY. Yes.
Expenses in connection with Patent hocord..................................... 88 ,imio
Mr. McMULLEN. I see there is a very desirable reduction here. Will the Minister give some explanation of it ?
Mr. CARLING. The contract entered into some years ago has expired, and the work is now done by the Queen's Printer. We find ${ }^{\circ}$ we can do the work as efficiently as it was done under the contract and save $\$ 4,000$.
Mr. MomLlLeN. This bears out the contention which has been made from this side of the House for years past, that the price paid for issuing this record was exorbitant. Will the same number of copies le issued, notwithstamding the reduction of $\leqslant 4,0(0)$ :
Mr. CARLING. The same quantity is issued as before. One thousand copies were formerly printed, but it is now intended to print 2,50 , and to sell them if possible.
Mr. Paterson (Brant). Are there any fees received from sales of the latent hecord?
Mr. CARLING. In future we expect to make something out of it by selling copies in addition to those that are distributed free.
Mr. PATERSON (Brant). Is it sold to any one who desires to buy it?

Mr. Demdey.

Mr. CARLING. Anyone who wishes to become a subscriber at $$ 2$ per annum can have it.

Preparation of Criminal Statistics ..... $$ 4,000$

Mr. Mcillellen. Who is in charge of this branch:

Mr. Carlingi. Mr. St. Denis, who was also head clerk of mortuary statistics, which we have done away with.

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Is any information of a practical kind derived from the pullication of these statistics?
Mr. CARLING. I think so. They are published ammally in accordance with an Act of Parliament lirought in ly the late member for West Durham some years ago. The information is returned hy the clerks of the courts.

Mr. DAVIE: (P.E.I.) Are these statistics gathered from the cities alone or from the rural districts as well:

Mr. CARLING. They are ohtained from the clerks of the courts all over the Dominion, who are paid a fee for furnishing them:
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Do they appear in the hom. gentleman's report"

Mr. CARLIN(. No, in a separate document: an appendix to the report.
Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) Do they cover summary convictions as well as indictable offences?

Mr. CaRLING: The information which has leen prepared for me states that the returns are received from clerks of the courts for indictable offences in one schedule and forsummary convictions in another, si being pain for each schedule and 5 cents for each name. There was expended last year altogether, $\mathbf{$ 3 , 0 8 6}$.

Mr. FLINT. It has struck me, and I fancy it must have struck other members, that the work, much of which I believe is very valuable work, in connection with gathering these statistics, is not apprectated liy the public as it ought to be, and I think the department should invent some means for bringing this information more promptly and more frequently before the public. I very much fear that a large amount of the money and time spent in the preparation of these returns is, for most practical purposes, wasted. If bulletins were issued, say every two nonths, giving well digesterl statistics for the previous two months, and distributed to the press of the country, the information might le made useful to large numbers of persons who watch the course of affiars in criminal matters. We know that many societies, religinus and temperance organizations, and persons of a benevolent turn of mind, are constantly studying the question how the criminal classes may be reached, and watching the trend of criminal matters: and if these statistics could be presented more frequently and directly to the publie through the press, they wouk be of much more value thin they are.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I notice that the vote of 85,000 for health statistics is dropped this year. Are the Government not going to ask for any appropriation for that purpose ".
Mr. CARLING. No. We only voted $8 \mathbf{s}, 000$ to the end of the calendar year. We have not continued the collection of that information.

Vir. MoDONALD (Huron). I think that is a very wise decision, as the statistics were gathered only from certain points in the country, and were always inaccurate.

Salaries-Military Branch and District Staff.  312,401

Mr. McMULLEN. What is the present condition of the staff: Hare there been any changes, and is it intended to keep the staff up as it is at present?
Mr. BOWELL. There have been no changes made since I have leen in the lepartment. No provision has lreen made to fill up the vacancy which occurred during the year through the death of Brigate-Major Lewis, and there is no intention to fill the vacancy. My intention is to give this matter the closest possible attention as soon as I have the time, and I am under the impression I can, without affecting the efficiency of the staff or service, still further reduce it.

Mr. OBRIEN. There is one point in conmection with the staff which it would be well to bear in mind, and that is the advisalility of associating the hearls of the militia department as closely as prossible with the military schools of instruction. The experiment as carried on in Toronto has leen eminently successful, and it is to be hoper the system will bre pursued elsewhere. It is a systems which brings the staff of the school and the permanent corps much more in sympathy with each other.

Brigade Major:............................. 513 .50
Mr. DAVIEs (P.E.I.) Is there a provision in the Act of Parliament enabling majors in the House to receive pay without violating that Act?

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. I remember bringing that very point up when the Bill was brought in by the hon. member for East lork, and it was amended so ats to allow officers to draw their pay and allowance while holding their seats in the Commons. It is the same rule which holds in the Imperial Parlianent.

> Ammunition. including artilleryammunition and manufacture of small arms ammunition at the Government Cartridge Factory, Quebec................ $$ 50,000$

Mr. CHARLTON. Are the Giovernment engaged in the manufacture of small arms?

Sir ADOLPHE CARON. No.
Mr. CHARLTON. What rifle is ased in the service?

Mr. DENISON. The whole force is armed with the Suider, hut there are a few Martini rifles in the country used mainly for practising for the annual matches.

Mr. CHARLTON. Is not the Sinider superseded in the English service and the continental states by more modern and better weapons?

Mr. BOWELL. No doubt about that. It is only a question of expense. If Parliament will give the department a sutficient sum to provide the militia with the improved firearm, I shall only be too glad to ohtain the latest improvement. The hon. gentleman is quite right in saying that the Snider has fallen to a great extent into disuse, particularly in the Imperial Army, but as we do not at present anticipate any difficulties with foreign countries, our volunteers can learn their drill as well with the Snider as any other rifle.

Mr. O'BRIEN. Would it not be possible for the militia to obtain from the Imperial service the Martini rifles now superseded by a later weapon?

Mr. BOWFLL. I can scarcely see the propriety of taking for the Canadian ritte an arm that has been discarded hy the Imperial Parliament. If we are to have any, let us have the latest.

Mr. DENISON. Although the Suider is a very good rifle and stamls its work very well, it has been superseded by others and noticeably hy the Martini-Henry. But that has been superseded by a later weapon, the Lee-Burton, the new magazine rifle, and a very good one, I under:stand. It has been suggested by some riflemen in comection with the Rifle Association, that the Martini-Henry rifle should he purchased in place of the snider. It think that would be a very questionable policy to pursue in view of the fact that in the Imperial service they are considering the advisability of foing away with the Martini-Henry and taking up this new rifle. It would be proper for the Minister of Militia to have reports on these different rifles, and I hope he will place an item in the Supplementary Estimates, or at all events in the Estimates of next year, so that our militia will have a proper rifle in their hands instead of being armed as they are now with a rifle which is practically obsolete.

Mr. CHARLTON. I quite agree with the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Jenison) that, if we are to have a militia force, it should be an efficient one, and should be equipped with the hest modern arm. No doult it would involve a great deal of expense, but we ought to see that the volunteers of Canadia are supplied with the best small arms which are obtainalile. If we ever reguired to put our volunteers on antive service, we would find them equipped with an alequate weapon, and I think it would be an excellent idea for the Minister to olstain a report as to the efficiency of the various small arms, and to gather the information which we should have before deciding, if we do decide, to change the arm now in use. We have an excellent hooly of volunteer soldiers, and it would be a pity, if they were called into service, to send them into the field with an eruipment inferior to that of the foe whom they would be called upon to meet.

Mr. KIEKPATRICK. Theguestion of arming the volunteers with the lest riffe that can be proluced deserves the lest attention of the House and of the Government, and I hope the Minister of Militia will consider it his duty to look into this question. It will require the support of Parliament to enable him to deal with it properly. It will probably reguire the expentiture of $$ 1,000,000$ to arm the militia of Canada with the improved weapon. There are fo,0MO to be armed at a cost of alout $$ 20$ or $$ 25$ apiece. We find that the MajorGeneral writes in the report which has leen submitted to Parliament :
"The arms throughout the rural militia are old and untrustrorthy, and,, moreover, they show considerable want of proper care."
When we have a report of that kind, it is criminal in us to keep these men armed with these rifies and expect them to do duty, in case of necessity, with such weapons. If the country cannot afford to provide the militia with modern rifles, we should disband them altogether. We can expend theusauds amil millions of dollars on other matters, but, when the flower of the youth of our country may le called num to go to the frout, they shomld certainly have proper arms in their hands. Exery one knows that these rifies hare heen in the hamls of our militia for wer 30 years and they are old and unserviceable. When we send our riftemen to England on the Wimbledon or Bisley team, the Militia Department has to, issue the Martimi-Henry rifle to them for practice some weeks before. In a shore time that rifle will cease to le useful lecanse the colunteers in England will he served with the new magazine rifle. I hope the Minister of Militia will take this matter into his serious consideration.
Mr. CHARLTON. At all events, we shomhask the Minister of Militia to olitain information as to the expense and as to what arm we should adopt. It would be going too far for us to decide now what the expenditure should le, hecause we shombl wait until we have the information.
Mr. FRAsER. I think we shoulh move with a great deal of caution in this direction. We should hare a statement of the chameter of the varionsarms in use by the different armies of the world. It is a very striking thing to notice how few nations have adopted similar anms. Of comrse there may le mational prejudices in regard to that. In England itself millions have heen spent in getting first one kind of arm and then another. It would be ahmost folly for a new comuntry to invest $$ 1$ (MW), (NK) in a kind of arm which in one or two years might be laid aside and in place of which we might have to get another. I camot conceive of a reason for such an expenditure muless we were in immediate danger, and were called upon as a nation to fight. What the hon. member for Frontenac (Mr. Kirkpatrick) says might cut two ways. One part of the report of the Major-lieneral is that the arms in use are old, and then he says that the men do not know how to deal with them and look aftep them. or that the officers lo not see that the men keep themin in proper state. I do not think that is the case, or, if it is, it should not exist. But. in a comitry like this, with men who go through their drill who are so much superior to those of any other comitry in the world, men who are not pressed into the service or brileel. the arms they use are of great importance. hut they would he able to change from the use of one arm to another with very little effort, so that we need not go to a very large outlay in order to get a new kind of arm which England may change very shortly. We onght to move very slowly in this matter.
Mr. HCGHEN. Concerning the item in the report of the Major -General as to the poor condition of the rifles in the armouries it must lee remembered that these were the rifles which were issued in 1866 and have been knocked alsont the brigade camps ever since. The sinider rifle belongs now to past history, hut I helieve that, if the Martini rifles were issued to the force in Canada, it would give great satisfaction. So far as the new rifle in use in the British Army is concerned, it is a debateable point whether that weapon will be a useful article ornot. In fact, so far as we have seen it tested in Canala it has not been successful. It throws a very fine bullet, but its range is not superior to that of the Martini. Henry rifle, and it is not so easily understood by the force in general. We tested it here on the ranges at Ottawa, and the drop of the bullet was just as much, the elevation required was just as great, as it was for the Martini-Henry riffe, and if anything, a little more. The trajectory of the bullet was even more than that of the Martini. Henry rifle. However. I do not think it would le well to invest any large sum of money in the purchase of rifles at the present time, unless it is decided to adopt permanently one or other of these arms. I would recommend the appointment of a Commission to test the rifles and report at the next session of Parliament, or at some future time, as to which rifle would be the most suitable for the force in Camada. Concerning the item of ammunition. I would like to make a suggestion to the Minister of Militia. The rifte associations throughout the country find themselves called upon every year to pay large sums of money for ammmition for rifle practice. Through the kindhess and the courtesy, I may say, of the late Minister of Militia the members of the Rifte League were favourell last year, and the vear previonsly, with all the ammunition they requirel. That one act on the part of the late Minister of Militia, although it did not cost the country a very large sum of money. dill more to encourage rifle shoriting in Canada than almost any thing else that could he done. Now, if the Minister of Militia conld see his way clear to relluce the price of the ordinary ammunition used in rifte practice throughout Canala. I am satistied that as the Sinider rifle or the Martini-Henry makes a gool shot-lrecause a good shot with one rifle is a gool shot with another one-I am satistied that a very great impetus would be given to the force in Canada Therefore I respectfully suggest to the Minister of Militia the alvisability of reducing the price of ammunition to the rifle associations and hattalions for practice, in addition to the kindness already extended in giving free ammmition to the Rifle League. I would suggest placing a sum in the Estimates for that purpose, so that the volunteers of the cosuntry may gre ammunition at reasomabie rates.

Mr. CAsEY. I agree with most of what has fallen from my hon. friend who has just taken his seat. I have not had an opportunity yet of seeing the new rifle tested: my hon. friend says he has. But I have grave doubts in any case, even if the trajectory were lower than that of the Martini-Henry, whether a magazine rifle is the best kind of rifle with which to arm our volumteers, or to arm any military force. It has leen found in modern warfare that soldiers fire away their ammunition quite fast enough with the ordinary breech-loader. If they were trained shots and never fired except when they had something to fire at, and after taking deliberate aim, the risk of wasting ammunition would not lee so great. But no regment, not to speak of an army, can be composed of trained shots, and the result is that even with a breech-loader, there is a tremendous waste of ammunition. With a magazine rifle it would be ten times worse, because they woukl be saved the trouble of reloading between shots. Then, again, as to the destructive poser of the two rifles, I know from information that the new English riffe has a very small calibre and carries a very small bullet. I understand it was the idea of those who adopted that riffe, rather to wound than to kill, under the impression that a wounded man was a greater incombrance to his own side than a man whos was killed deal on the spot and required no further attention. That is hardly a humane riew of the subject, it seems to me, although it may le :ery proper from it military point of view, but I fancy that for sheer effectiveness no ritle has yet been incented that will do more work than the Mar-tini-Henry. The Martini-Henry is far from leing a perfect rifle, and the aloption of it in this case was a great mistake in many ways which are too technical to bring lefore the House at present. But at all events, it is an extremely effective rifle at a thonsaml yards, aml that is alont as far as you can see to aim at anything. The great point is as hetween these two rifles that a vast stock of Martini-Henry is atailable, many being perfectly new rifles, and others that have been very little used. They could be oltained at a comparatively low price. I think the estimate of the hon. memier from Frontenac (Mr. Kirk patrick), experienced as he is in rifle matters. is very high as applied to the arming of cur force with Martinis. I am satisfied we can get at full armament of Martinis now, as they have gone out of wise in the British army, and even among the volunters in England, for a very smalker figure than he mentions. They are deal stock, si I think they would le sold to Canalia at slaugh ter prices.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. We do not want discarded ritles.

Mr. CAsty. But the hon. gentleman will remember that they have been held in stock in various depits thronghout Eagland ; there are vast stocks of Martinis perfectly new : they are now dead stock. We are now usini discarded sniders; we are using a great many oll converted Enfields, old gas pipes, that were converted by having a piece of the butt end cut off and the Snider bloek put in. Many of them have been in use 35 years. My hon. friend from (iuyshorough (Mr. Fraser) says that he understands from the report that the only ohjection the the present riffe is they are old and are not kept in gool repair. Age in a rifle, especially in a converted Eutield. implies that the rifle is wom ont and untit for use. These converted rifles. many of them, were usel for years with the old iron ramrol hauging up and down and smashing the grooves every time they were loaded and every time. they were iuspected. and we are using many of them yet, utterly unfit even for target practice, not to speak of using them in the fiell when a man's life may depend on the accuracy of the shooting. Now, the conclusion, to my mind, is that our present arm, as everymuly almits, is totally unfit to cope with moilern weapons, and that as there is an opportunity of getting a large quantity of Martinis at a very cheap rate from the British Government--not necessarily rifles that have been used and discarled, bat the surplus stock of a rifle that has gone out of fashion--we should purchase them for the use of our troops. I would notobject even to having rifles that had lreen used for a short time in the regular service, as they would be none the worst for two or three years use. The MartiniHenry has been trien in all climates and in all circunstances, and has been found to be a useful weapon. It has been triel from the soudan to dear knows where, and has been found to be practically a very useful we:apon, a very easy weapon to handle, and a very goond weapon to shoot with. There is a defect in the stock that makes it rather inclined to hurt the man that fires it, but that is not a defect sufficient to anthorize us in rejecting them. I say it has been fomm to be a practical and useful weapon and successful even in the Sondan in checking those hordes of larbarians whom you could not check in any other way than by killing them off as fast as they came on. They seemed to le utterly devoid of fear, and it was necessary to kill a large number of them to stop their advance, or it was impossible to stop them at. all. The killing of the front ranks proluced no effect on thosebehind. Cnder thesecircumstances the Martini proved an excellent weapom. These are the only circumstances under which magazine rifles would prove valuable, when it is necessary to tire a large number of shots in rapid succession. But we have no sourlanese with whom to fight in Canada. The only possible enemy we may the called upon to meet have no weapons at all egual to the Martini in effective shooting, althongh they may have magazine rifles, which art capable of tiring a large number of shots in succession. However, mondern warfare has come down to twe a matter of sharp shooting at a distance, rather than killing of men by rapill shooting. Taking all these matters into, consideration, I must strongly urge on the Minister of Militia, who takes a real interest in the force, the desirability of applying to the Euglish Covernment and ohtaining the lowest price at which they will dispose of Martinis, which have been laid aside in consequence of the adrption of the new rifle. The hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) spoke of the desirahility of having it trial of new weapons. We need no trial as het ween the snider and the Martini, for everyboly haws the difference between those two rifles. As between the Martini and the Lee-Metford we do not need to make experiments; they have been made in the old country. and we need only apply to the authorities and obtain copies of the reports made on those two weapons. We need not follow their conclusions, but we can get all the information that has been collected. Even if it were proved that the Lee Metford is the most effective, there are very strong reasons against our allopting it. The first, is the cost involved, and the second, is the delay that would occur. A sufficient number have not yet leen made for the whole Pritish army. We should have to wait years before we conld obtain any for our volunteers and then a high price would be chargee, as it is a new and fashionable weapon. Some hon. gentlemen have said we should not alopt either the Martini or the new rifle, because looth of them will he out of fashion in a few years, and it would be necessary to get new weapons. I lo not see the force of that argument. We need not change our rifles every time the British Government changes its arms. If we obtain a rifle to suit our purposes we should keep it. If we were to wait until the ileal rifle was perfected, we should have to wait many years. We are aware that there is a large stock of Martini rittes available, which will be sold at very low prices, and these we know are good and efficient weapons, and weapons with which our volunteers are acquainted ; and if they can be purchased at a reasonable price, this conrse should be allopted, and a certain number of battalions should be armed every year with this rifte until the whole militia : force possesses them.

Mr. PRIOR. As consimerable difference of opinion prevails anong hom. gentlemen connected with the militiat to-lay on this imatter. I think it is slesiralbie that every one comnected with the force shoull ex. press an opinion, and give the Minister of Militia a chance to form an idea as to what are the wishes of the militia force. I heartily agree with the hon. member for Muskoka (Mr. Obrien) and the hom. member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) in what they say as to the Martini rifle. and also, no doubt. I would have agreed fully with the hon. member for West Elgin (Mr. (asey) if I conlithave followed him, hat he became so scientific I coull not follow his remarks. I have no foubt in my mind that the volunteer force of Canala would he perfectly contented if the dovermment could see their way to arm them with the Martini-Henry rifle. It is a weajom coom enourh for the use of any wolunter. One alvantage that may le claimed for it is. that it is a splendid ritle for the rifte range. It is one uot easily put out of order. In this respect it does not resemble the new magazine rifle, which is not fitted to lee placed in the hands of men who are not thoroughly conversant with it. and who also have not tirst-class ammories in which to store them. It would he a great mistake if the fiovermment were persuaded to arm the Canadian force with the new mogazine rifle. It would be far letter if the Honse shouh see fit to grant the Minister of Militia a forod rouml sum of money for the purpose of drilling the whole force every year. If the voluntcers ollatined the Martini-Henry rifle as an arm, I am certain that not only would they le satistied, lont they would make as geopluse of that weapon as they could do with any other weapnin pat in their hathls.

Mr. DAVIE. (P.F.I.) I have not the know ledge to enalbe me to form an opinion of the sul,ject, and I do not propose to express one. But the fieneral's report on this matter is very clear. The fieneral complains that the Snider rifleand cathine with which the militia is armed is an olsolete weapon. He does not conplain so much, however, of it as a weapon as he does of the manner in which it has leeen used. $\mathrm{H} \cdot \mathrm{g}$ goes on to say :
"The Snider rifle and carbine. with which the militia is armed. is at the best an obsulete wespon, but in the condition in which it exists. in most of the regiments of the dition which it exists, in most of the regiments of the Active Militia, it has,"no claim whatever to be clissed as an arm of precision,"
Then he goes on to say :
" For upwards of twenty years they have had the roughest possible usage."
He complains, not so much at the weapon, as he complains of the usage it has received at the hands of those into whose hands it has leen eatrusted. I suggest a remedy, which I have no doubt the Minister will take into consideration, and that is, that certain parties should have charge of the armouries, and be held responsible for the manner in which the rifles are kept. He points out that we have already a large stock of Martinis on hand. He continues:
" A considerable number of Martini-Henry rifles are in store, and it would appear desirable that these should be issued to the perrannent corps, and be gradually introduced throughout the militial duced throughout the militia.
We have the statement of the General that the present rifles are obsolete, and have been ruined by usage, and we have the statement that we have a comsiderable store of Martini which require to the issued. The dieneral calls attention in the following paragraph to a matter equally serious, the lack of proper equipment. He says:
*The equipment in use in the active militia is also obsulete in pattern, and a large probortion perished from age and severe usage. There is not a battation that could turn out in complete marching order on a given day. though many hare, at their own expense, provided some of the most necessars articles, Moreover the equipment dues not exist in store, which it would be necessary to issue in the erent of grave emergency. I have not inspected a single battalion in which the men's boutz would have stood one month's active service, or a regiment of caralry or battery of a rtillery. in which the saddlery and harness could be expected to bear a similar strain."
That is not a very siatisfactory report to receive after many millions have leen expenled luring the last lio vears on the Canadian militia. It isevident that this department reguires the attention of the new Minister. It is not creditable the depart ment that such a report shouh be mate. and we have the statement that we have not a single hattalion that comhlom out in complete marching order. ami if it did. it would le sol hally equipped it could mot last for more than a rlay or so. Then the $l$ ieneral goes on to report :
${ }^{4}$ In the matter of artillery material, the militia is very deficient. The eightcen field hatteries are armed with guns minich are still guen, but there is no reserve of guns, nor is there a ipare gun wheel to be had nearer than $W$ oolwich. of heary guns the Dominion dues not possess a single modern specimen. Of the armament handed orer by the Imperial ciovernment a larce perrion could not le: mounted, and a part could not he fired."
So it appears to me that what the denemal silys is this: We have an onsolete weapon in the hamds of the militia now. that weapem has lween spoiled ly careless amd band management. We have a very fair stock of Martini in store. and they should at once le issued to the permanent corps anil gradnally. intronluced into the militia force. That so far as the ergipment of the volunteers are concerned, it is sisgraceful. and so far as the artillery material is concerned. We are in a condition of alsolnte helplessness. The large part of the ammament handed over to us lis the Imperial diovernment cannot le fired. and a large portion camoot le monnted. The lieneral conclules with a remarkably lucid and fair summiog up of the cendition of the militia in Canada, without that amount of flattery which we tom often have heen supplied with. We have some plain, practical truths toll! us here. and I hope we will att upon then. The Major-General Commandine says:
"The elothing is fairly good in quality, but the system of issue is open to very great objection. It is complicated. expensive, and satisfies nobudy. I am of opimion that economy and efficiency would be better served were. annual allowances in money granted to city corps, to enable them to supply their own clothing, the responsibility for the strict inspection of such cinthing and of clothing accounts being fixed on the inspecting officers. In the case of rural corps, the complete issue of clothing should be made to coincide with the term of the men : serrice. viz., three years."
Of course upon that point I offer no opinion. as the militia officers who are here can say whether they agree with the General or not. However, he points out that the chief defect is not in the pirticular arms supplied in the militia but in their equipment and artillers.

Mr. HAZFN. I am soryy that the hon. member. for Elgin (Mr. Casey), whoadlressel the House, and who is himself, as weall know, an expert marksman, didi not tell of hisown experience and what weapon he usel. at the time he dill the execution which we so often heard of during previous sessions and which wats also mentioned last session. I think that the hom. member for Queen's (Mr. Davies) has struck the nial on the head in his remarks, and that it is utterly useless to make a large expenditure in supplying the militia of the country with betier arms until better provision is male for the cate of these arms. That matter is printed ont in fieneral Herbertis report, as real hy the hon. memlor for Cuetns. Any one who hats paid any attention w the subject knows that in very many of the comotry districts there is really mo care given to the arms: whereas in the cities they have goon armomies and hrill shedssupplied by the Govemment and altogether letter facilities for taking care of their arms. If the force were now armed with an expensive ritte, it would only lee a short time antil it was in the same state in which the Snider rifles are at the present day. It seems to me that lefore goon arms are provided, some neans shomhl he taken to provide an amony at the headquarters of every company in the conntry districts. ithd that some offocials shomid te detailed to make an inspection every year to see if they were kept in proper order, and could be utilized if wanten. Reference has leen mate to the fact that there are now in store in Canada some $1 \mathrm{l} . \mathrm{Wh}$ ) Martini rifles, and it would seem to me a sery proper thing that these $10,0 \mathrm{MN}$ ) ritles should he ristrihuted among the city corps where they wonld be taken care of in the armouries and drill sheds erected in different parts of the country. A comsiderable portion of the militiamen of the comutry would then be arneed with a rifle with which. when they gro to the ritte matches at Wimhertom. they have to shoot. It is an unquestionable disatrantage to Canalian militiamen to shoog at the matches in Canada during the season with the sinder rifle, which is the rifle with which, with a few exceptions, the lifferent competitions are shot : it puts our militiamen at a disadvantage when they go to the old country to find that the comperitions at Wimbledon are shot with a different weapon. These Martini rifles have heen in the militia stores for a long time and have not been userl. I would suggest to the Minister of Militia that it would he a proper thing to distribute them among the city corps so that some use might le mate of them.

Mr. HCOHEN. With reference to the suggestion of the hon member from st. John (Mr. Hazen), 1 must say that the rural corps would object to have city corps armed with a rifle which they would not be armed with also. The member for St. John complains that our volunteers have to compete in the old country with a rifle to which they are not accustomed, but I would remind him that as many members of the rural corps visit Wimbledon or Bisley as do members of the city corps. The sime objection which he points out to the Canadian volunteers competing in Wimbledon would exist as letween the city and the rural corps in Canala, if the weapons were different. We in the rural corps complain that altogether too much attention is paid to the city corps at the present time : not that we object to their privileges, but that we wish to be placed on the same footing. When the orders were issued to go to the front in 1885, the rural corps turned out in as short a time as did the city corps, and they did their work just as effectively in the North-West, although the men had not the opportunity of the sime training as their hrother volunteers in the city. However, the fault with these rifles is not lecause of the bad armouries through the comitry, but it is lecause they are injured in the camps. At the present time. When our men go out, twelve or fourteen are put in a tent, lying on the green swarl, often in the clay, when in camp, and during a rainy night, or when there is a heary dew, at times when the loysget up in the morning they find their rifles lying on the groumd. Solong as they are not supplied with a riffe rack in the tents, this ditficulty will he: met with, and the rifles will contimue to sustain damage. I would suggest to the Minister of Vilitia that he should procure rifle racks to fit around the tent pole, and I lelieve that they could be olitained at a very little cost. If this were done great help would be given to the men to preserve their rifles in good order. The Militia Department does not undertake to furnish the volunteers with boots, and I presume the men come into camp with whatever hoots they happen to use when working at home : so that if the Major(ieneral commanding the forces expects to find our volunteers furnished with military boots he evidently does not know how the boys in Camada are trained up.

An hon. MEMBFR. Nome of them would gobare fosted there.

Mr. HLGHES. Ves if necessary and they make very good soldiers at that. With reference to the lelts I may sity that many of our corps use the helts that were in vogue in the oll Crimean days. In the corps to which I belong we have a number of belts that we keep as part of our museum, and they have the lullet holes through them, placed there in the Crimea, and some of them are marked with the boodstains which the pipeclay camot take off. I would dran the attention of the Minister of Militia to the fact that the old cross-belt and pouch supplied to the corps at the present time is absolutely nseless, anl we, every year, face our Deputy Alju-tant-(ieneral wearing this old archaic antedilurian cross-belt. io far as the corps to which I belong is concerned we never bring them to camp, and it subjects us to an annual roisting, but we pay no attention to it lecause the cross-belt is absolutely useless. I agree with the Major-General that some change should be made in that species of outfit. If we had good rifles and good belts, we would be more comfortable.

An hon. MEMBER. You do not mind resting.
Mr. HUGHES. Not a particle. What we go in for is efficiency with confort.

An hon. MEMBER. Hear.

Mr. HUGHES. All I have to say is that the battalion which I belong to has a record.

Mr. FRANER. There is a feature of this subject which is somewhat more serious than I thought at first. Afer listening to the hon. member for Queen's, and reading what the highest military authority we have has to say about us, I am not just as vain of our prancing soldiers as I was a few hours ago. I hope this debate will not go abroad, or, if it does, we may be attacked by some little bantling South American Republic. I do think that a great deal of money has heen expended to no purpose, if what we heard is true. What have we heen expending this money for: Has it heen really to lay the foumdations of a regular army which would ite a a ailable in case of war. or has it lreen rather for holiday purposes: Have we been serions in our military administration. from the highest otticial down to the lowest 1 know that the men who drill are ready to do their duty. and I would at once give my voice and vote in what the hon. member for simece has said, that there should le ne, distinctions. If this comery should ever have to fight, which I do not believe it will, the fighting will have to be done lig the country lons: there is no doult alout that. they have hat to do it at all times. But, situated as we are. I think we shall not lee called upon to do very much fighting. I think the day of fighting. on this continent at least, except some petty skirmishes in the south American Republics, has gome ly.

An hon. MENBER. What alont the Indians:
Mr. FRASER. I think we have plenty of men wh look after them now, and if they are treated well he the (ioveroment we have not much to fear from them. When we consider the history of the Indians of Canala as compared with that of the Cnited States, 1 ant not afraid of trusting our Indians so long as we treat them well and have an honest administration of Indian affairs. I suppose sometimes it has not breen any too honest, but as honest even as we have it, there is no fear of our Indians. The Major 6 enerals report shows that we have been expending money too freely in the past, but I know that the eagle eye of the Vimister of $1{ }^{\prime}$ ar will look after matters so well that it will not be expenied so lavishly in the future. Whatever we do let it be permanent, not that everybody can be drilled, but if we are going to spend $\leqslant 1,3(x),(0) 0$ every year. let us have something for it that is going to, stand for more than a month in case of a brush. Now, I regret that the brave son of Mars who has just sat dowu has laid aside everything in the way of discipline. Why. discipline, I thought, was the tirst. the last. the lying duty of the soldier. do not think lie ought to have said what he did, knowing that no English soldier was ever heard to siy that such and such did not suit him because it was not comfortable: but his glory has always lreen his obelience. Even if required to appear in a panoply of steel on a July day, he was lound to appear, because as an English soldier it is a matter of very little importance whether he is confortable or not, for the first principle of all soldiers is obedience. So far as our militia in Nora Scotia are concerved, I have not heard mauy complaints. I was prepared to do manful service when I belonged to them, but now that I have passed that age when I cannot loe called upon except as a reserve, I do not know so much about the force ; but this report would seem to indicate that our money has not been spent as well as it might be in giving us results that would be of inmediate benefit. It should be expended so that at a given emergency, not months or years hereafter, but even if a war cloud should burst with the suddenness of a summer shower, we would be ready. I have the greatest possible hope that the Miitia Department as it is now managed will bring about such results as will enable us to sleep all the more peacefully, knowing that there is a hame at the helm that will make our men obey oriers rather than make them comfortable.
Mr. BoWELL. The disenssion to day has been conducted in a manner that will be protitable to the country as well as to the department. The suggestion first thrown out by the hon. member for Guyslorough has a great deal of force in it. There is a constant change of ams in England and in other parts of the world. and it would entail on this country a very heaty expense to be continnally changing in the same way. If there were a prob-. ability of any difiticulties arising that would require a large onthay to secure the hest arms pussible to place in the lands of our volunteers, I have nodoubt the Parliament of Canada would tote it. The hon. member for North Norfolk made a remark which I suppose would suggest itself to any practical mind. that is, that as new improvements are made in arms. we should obtain samples of them in order to test their quality: and to ascertain whether they arefittelf for use in thiscountry. That has lecern done. The latest improvement is that of the Lee-Metford. We have 2.5 in store marked No. I. Since the test of that particular arm in Englam, it has been improved further, and there is now the Lee-Metford No. 2 , which has been spoken of very highly hy military authorities in Fagland, and we have sent for one or two of them in order to ascertain their quality as compared with the No. 1. So we have not neglected the suggestion made ly the hon. member for North Norfolk. The hon. member for Frontenac stated very truly that it wonld cost a very large amount of money to supply the whole force with that arm, even supposing it were proved to be the best in existence, and one that would likely he continued in the service of the British army. At $\$ 20$ each this arm for $20.0(\mathrm{KM})$ men, the number drilled ammally. woulde osi $\$ 4(n),(14 n)$, plus the expense in bringing the rifles leare. Now.if you arm the whole force of about $\mathbf{4 0 , 0 ( 0 )}$, that would involve an outlay of nearly $\$ 1,(\mathrm{KX}),(\mathrm{ONO}$.

Mr. CASEY. That inchules cavalry and ar. tillery:

Mr. BOWELL. Yes the artillery would alsohave to be supplied with the best arms, and we would require to have a surplus on band to replace those which would be injured, as suggested ly the hon. member for North Victoria. Then, in another year or two, there would probably be another invention which wrould supersede the present latest improvement. The distance from (anada to England to-day and the facilities for reaching the English armouries and getting supplies are not so great that we could not afford the delay in getting what we would require, should any difficulties arise, and in the meantime do with what we have. No complaint was made with reference to the arms of our volunteers during the North-West trouble. These arms did good service, but, of course. that is no reason why we should not have a better kind if procurable. I agree with the hon. memker for Guysborough when he said he had no fear of the Indians. I interjected the remark. whether he heard it or not, I do not know, that if the Indians are let alone by the agitators, who expect to make money out of difficulties, we need fear no trouble from them, as their treatment by Canada ever since the revolution and since the war of 1812 has been such that they have no reason to feel otherwise than well disposed towards us.

Mr. MILLS (Bothwell). Convert them into police.
Mr. BOWELL. The time may come when they can le utilized in that way just as well as the Mohawks have leen in Ontario and other trites in Quebec in defencing the conntry. Should such occasion arise, I hope the Indians will be in such a state that they can be utilized as white men. As far as the appropriations placed at the disposal of the department will permit, I would be only too happy to carry out the suggestions of hon. gentlemen, especially with regard to the issue of free ammunition. That has been already done by my predecessor so far as the Rifle League is concerned, and ought to be carried out to the fullest extent possible consistent with the money at the disposal of the covernment. The hon. member for ciuyslmough answered himself, if it be not paradoxical tosay so, for his secondspeech wasa reply to his first. He pointed out that in England a vastamount of money, which might be termed squandered, had breen expended in replacing the arms in the hands of the soldiers by others, owing to their deterionation through want of proper care: and it will be easily understood that in a country like Canada, with rural and city battalions extending over 3,000 or 4,000 miles in length. we could scarcely expect. with the small amount given to those who have to take care of the arms, that the utmost care desirable could be taken of them. I notice in the Gienerals report that among the other practical suggestions he has made, this is one. It is not a new suggestion, but one which I remember being made when I was in the force and on that side of the House, and that is some time ago. He says:
" The only system muder which proper reare can be insured is that now existing in the militia of the Uni ted Kingdom where the caretakers are part of the permanent paid staff of the militia regiments and are amenable to military discipline.
If we have what may be termed an armoury sergeant whose duties shall lee in certain districts to devote his whole time and attention to constant weekly and monthly inspection of arms, and see that they are properly kept, the deterioration in their value would not be nearly so great as it is. Many of the suggestions made by the fieneral are, to my mind, of the most practical character, and so far as pos: sible I shall endeavour to carry them out. The hon. member for Queen's. when he made his remarks, had not reflected on the fact that in the active force boots and underclothing are not furnished by the department. These corps turn out with such boots as they have, but if they were ordered on regular service, as during the case of the North-West rebellion, the Government would supply them with boots of a heavy, strong character which are or should be kept in stock. I am afraid the hon. gentleman was thinking rather of the regular force where, as in Fingland and other places, there is a standing army, or perhaps the permanent force in Canada to which regulation hroots are supplied. I do not know that there are any other points to which I need call the attention of the committee. I canonly say that the debate has been of a character that will not be forgotten by myself while at the head of the department, and anything that can be done within the means placed at my disposal to make the volunteers more effective and comfortable, shall be done. The hon. member for Guyslorough indulged in a little ladinage over the use of the word "comfortable " by the hon. member for. North Victoria. I can tell hime this, that in my experience on the frontier, where I was fomr or tive months on one occasion in active service. I foum that the lest possible way to insure discipline on the part of volunteers and make them nost effective, was never to forget to look after their comforts and wellleing.

Mr. SUTHERLANO. It isto $\mathrm{l}_{\mathrm{se}}$ regretted that the report of the departurent was not lirought down earlier so that we could have had the opportunity of lorking into it lefore lreing asked to vote these estimates. This shows the injustice of going on with the estimates before the reports are brought down. However, I am pleasel to know that we have a dieneral who has submitted a report of a practical nature. It is certainly an ahle report. and one which I have no deulit will be of great value to the volunteer force. Any member of this House who has paid any attention to this matter in the past will not le surprised at many of the clanses, when they remember the debates which have takeu place on the militio tstimates during past sessions aml the great leal of adivice offered to the then Minister of the lepartment by members on hoth sides of the HouseI hope, now chat we have a new Minister of Militia. he will pay some attention aml give some consibleration to the suggestions which are made by those who take an interest in cur volunteer force. I do not at present intend to take up the time by repeating the suggestions which have been made ly members who have spoken. I may say, howeverthat I agree that it is desirati,le that there should be a change in the arms. The Martini-Henry should be farmished. not as the hom, member for St. John (Mr. Hazen) has suggestell, only to city beattalions, but to the rural hattalions ats well. I believe the volunteers who have taken part at Wimbledon in the past have mostly come from the rural battalions, and it would show a larger proportion for the rural battalions if they hat the same opportunities which are given to the hattalions in cities. I do mot think the department should discriminate between lattalions inside or ontside of a city. In a city, they have many alrantages which rural hattalions camot have. I do not agree with the suggestion of the Minister of Militia as to the appointment of an inspector at a salary to inspect the arms and the clothing of the militia. We have now a gool system of inspection. but wee have not the proper means of keeping our equipment in proper shape. Attention has been called again and again to the insutficiency of the equipment. and it is not altogether due to the fact that the Minister had not plenty of mouey at his command to carry out, not possilly radical changes, lut enough money to increase the appropriation for the different corps in regard to these matters which we have se frefuently brought before the House, but which have not been carried out, not for want of means but for want of administration. In many cases, we have known where articles in comnection with the colunteer force were in store at Ottawa and other places when they should have been furnished to the force. The hon. member fos Frontenac (Mr. Kirkpatrick) has often pointed out to the (iovernment and to the Minister of Militia how improvements could be male, and he has been sustained by menhers of this House. I hare felt for a long time that it was useless to make any representation in regard to the militia, as these matters were never considered. I only hope that now, when representations are mate. they will receive consideration from the new. Ninister. I am satisfied that the present appopriation for the militia could sutfice to greatly improve the condition of the solunteers to-lay in regatel to their better equipment, and that they could have many of the comforts which have been spoken of from the appropriation which we now have.

Mr. FRASLR 1 desire to correct a misappre hension. What I sail uas that the history of the Fnglish army showed that immense sums of money hal been spent in purchasing arms which had to be lad aside. That would mot apply at all to our expenditures from year to year. A very small militia is spent on the purchase of ams. Then, as to the comfort, I did not pretemd that soldiers should not have every comfort. lint I said that a soldier should mot eonsider the dothing which is most comfortable, hat should consider simply what is servel to him according to the regulations. I agree with the hon. gentleman that a soldier who is comfortable and well fed will do hetter in the field than one who is not. It was mot in regard to his comfort that I spoke, hat simply in regatel to che expenditure.

Mr. Bow ELI. I supposte the hom. gentleman thinks that a soldier shouhd be well ferl. well clothed and allowed to gramble as much he likes.

Mr. FRANER. A soldier is not allowed to grumble.

Mr. HUGHFs. I'am glan the hom. member for Guyshorough ( $\mathrm{M}_{2}$. Fraser) agrees with me that it is necessary to have the soldiers comfortable.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. I would call attention to a very important paragraph in the report of the Major-deneral, and it is a report that I think we have every reason to he thankful for. It is an able, thorough an:l fearless report. He calls attention to a matter to which the doremment ought to give their attention. It is in reference to the disturl. ances in Hull. He said:
"The companies emploved at Hull included in their ranks numerous emplave of the Government departments at Ottawa. These gentlemen hare been placed in a most painful dilemma. Had they failed to obey the order summoning them to militia duty they would have been liable to heary nenalties under the Militia Act. Having sacrificed personal comfort to pertorm their militia duty. they have been deprived, mader the Civil Service Act, of their salaries for the dase they were absent on that duts."
I do not think that is right. If any employer of labour outside docked the pay of his clerk for the day he was on duty in the militia, there wonld be an outery against him, and I think the Govemment ought to have some provision for these men. Then there has been a great ontery in the force as to not having the whole force drilled each year. On that subject the Major-General says:
" Under the system hitherto followed, no data are available on whieh to buse a trustworthy estimate of the cost incidental to the training of the rural militia, but it is my belief that a considerably larger toree could be annually trained than has hitherto been the case, without any increase in the vote for drill and training. I am not prepared at present to recommend any such increase of expenditure, I am satistied that in the past, the results obtained in the militia training have not been commenfurate with the expenditure.

He also saty:
A further cause of considerable unnecessary expense is the manner in which the sites of district camps are annaally changed.
I chink it is most reprehensible to change the camps from place to place.

An hon. MF.MBER. Kingston.

Mr. KIRKPATRICK. I do not say that Kingston should be the place, but I think the place should be fixed and there shond he some expentiture made which would last and be sufficient for some time. Again, the Major-(ieneralsays:
"The remarks attached to Appendix F show, in men and miles. the amome of unnecessary transport, besides other disadrantages involved this year by this practice. A very, simple calculation will suffice to show its costliness."
1 hope the attention of the Minister of Militia will be given to this, and that he will see that more economy will be effected and a larger number of men will be drilled if a different system is inlopted.

Mr. DENISON. I am sorry that these reports are not pit into our hands earlier because we have ant harl anopportunity to read them, and this is the first time that 1 have seen the report. It appears to me to be an extraordinary thing that any head of a department wonld take such a course with the men under his charge. It seems to me someWhat similar to the course which was taken in regard to some of our force which turned out on the Niagara frontier in IN66. After they came back, some of their employers objected to the men belonging to the force ami, while they took this course after their return, at the time they went they conlld do nothing too much for them. They haded uy trains with hiscuits and other things which they did not want, but afterwamds they objected to their helonging to the militia, and how can you expect that ordinary citizens will not object to that when you find the liovermment of Camalat objecting to their employes belonging to the militia force:

Mr. BOWELL. I wish to make a remark or two with reference to the points raised liy the hon. member for Frontenac. When my attention wats called to the fact that the volunteers who were in the Civil service, were called out to suppress the difticulties in Hull, han not been paid, I instructed the Deputy to prepare a list in order that I might lay it hefore my colleagues with a view to placing it in the Supplementary Estimates and asking Parhament to rote it. The complaint of the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Denison) is not at all to the point. The heads of the departments in which these volmuteers were employed, have no control over that matter. It is an Act of Parliament for which the member for West Ontario (Mr. Edgar) is just as much responsible as is the head of the department ; that Act makes special provision that the employes in the department, not on the permanent staff, shall not be paid when absent from duty, and it is the Auditor General, who is the officer of this House and not of the Government, who refused to pay it. The heads of departments would willingly have paid it if they had had power to do so mider the law. I do not think that the sum amounts to $\$ 20$ all told, and I have no doubt that this House will readily vote the sum when the estimate is placed before them. In reference to the fucstion of camps, I have given that subject some little attention, and will consiler it further, and then decide whether it would be wise to continue the system which has prevailed in the past, of moving camps to different sections of the country therehy absorhing a large amount of the vote for paying transport of the material and passengers' fare, or whether it would not be better to have stated places in the country at which these camps should meet. I have been looking into the matter and I find that in one camp the expense attending each man was two-thirds of the full amount of the pay of each man; in other words, we drill them 12 days at a cost of $\$ 12$, and in some cases transport costs as high as 50 per cent, 63: per cent. and even $7 \overline{7}$ per cent of that sum. I tind no fault with any one who has alvocated that system in the past. The members of Parliament are more responsible for it than the heal of the department. He is constantly importumedand already in my experience I begin to feel some of the pressure myself-to have the camps moved into all sections of the comntry, into some corner or other. That is a matter that will receive the attention of the department and of the Govermment. If it is thought advisable, in order to popularize the force, to spend this extra amount in taking the camps to different sections of the country, why we will continue to do so. If it is thought better that there shall be, as there is in England, regular and stated places in which the volunteers meet to perform their camp drill, we will also enteavour to carry out that system. I may state to those volumteer oflicers who are present, and to the other hon. members, that at present my opinion is in favour of centralizing these camps as much as possible and to place them in such localities as will minimize, as much as possible, the expenditure that is reguired to take them from one section of the country to the other. Those who have an acquaintance with the service know very well that once you have a stated place for the camps to meet, grounds are provided that will last from one year to another, and hence it is not necessary to expend the same amount of money as would be needed in a new place where you wished to take the troops.

Mr. CASES. I am glad to hear from the tone of the remarks of the Minister of Militia that he is attempting to follow out in his new department the course which he followed in his old department, that of attending closely to the business of that department. I feel bound to pay him the compliment, that in his own capacity he understands the business of his department. I think he shows signs of attempting to master this one with equal thoroughness. I am glad to hear what he says about the permanency of camps. I have several reasons for taking an interest in this matter. Last summer a military camp was formed for the first time in St. Thomas, in the county of East Elgin, in which it was then expected and pretty well known, that an election must shortly take place. The formation of that camp involved the expenditure of a lot of money amongst the citizens of St. Thomas, and was one of the chief arguments in favour of my hon. friend who is now the member for East Figin (Mr. Ingram).

Mr. BOWELL. If that will be the effect everywhere, I an afraid you will nersuade me against my better judgment.

Mr. CASEY. Nir, I do not charge my hon. friend with instituting a systematic plan of dragooning voters in this fashion by quartering soldiers upon them. I do not think his policy will result in such an extreme measure, especially after the statements he has made to-day. But this camp was avowedly brought to St. Thomas in the interest of the hon. member for East Elgin. He made capital out of it, and so did his friends. I am glad to see that the Gencral condemns the whole transaction. He says in his note on the St. Thomas camp :
"Grounds wholly unsuitable for a camp. 1,386 officers and men, and 56 horses, besides the whole of the tents, blankets an! camp equipment conveyed 40 miles further than was necessary.
I. H.,
Maj. Gen."

In regard to the camp at Belleville, he remarks :

$$
\text { "No rifle range available with safety. } \because \mathrm{I}_{:} \text {H., Maj.-Gcn." }

In regard to the camp at Farnham he states:
" 792 officers and men, and 155 horses, carried 55 miles further than was neoessary. Tents and camp equipment likewise transported about 60 miles unnecessarily.
". Maj. . Gen."
But the worst of all is the Rimouski camp :
" 698 officers and men, 14 horses and all tents and camp equipment transported $4(k)$ miles further than was necessary, from a good site to a bad one.
I. I . H .
"Mag.-Gen."
I am glat, as my hon. friend beside me (Mr. Sutherland) has said already, that the General conderms this thing altogether. When the attention of the department is called to this, it should be put straight. A great many of these suggestions might he adopted with profit. I hope, after what has fallen from Minister of Militia and the member for Frontenac (Mr. Kirkpatrick) and the member for Toronto (Mr. Denison), that we have seen the last of this system of dragooning, as I may call it, of cuartering camps here and there for election purposes. The General's suggestion should be carried out, that perminent accommodiation should be provided at the most convenient points for collecting troops in that division, without regard to the political effect. I mean to say that the camps should be permanently fixed there. Now, I regret that I have had only time to skim over this report, lout I find that the General urges the same point that has been urged hy several hon. members, namely, that the Martini should be substituted for the Sinder, and that the substitution shoula be gradual. The General says:
"The Snider riffe and carbine, with which the militiat is armed. is at the best an obsolete weapon, but in the condition in which it exists, in most of the regiments of the active militia, it has no claim whatever to be classed as an arm of preoision. A large number are of the earliest mark of converted Enfield rifles."
Which means ahout 27 or 28 years since they were converted, and no one knows how long they have been in service as muzale loading Enfields before then.
"For upwards of 20 years their sights and rifling have been completely worn out. It is no exaggeration to say that in many cases the smooth bore musket would be the best arm."
For upwards of 20 years they have been subjected to such nsage as they appear to have had in North Victoria. However, I do not think I have ever been in any camp where rifles were laid around on the grass inside the tents. The hon. member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) stagests the introduction of a cheap rack to put around the tent pole. When I was a full corporal we got along by standing up our rifles against a tent pole and tying them together with a piece of string; but we did not, at allevents, allow them to lie around on the wet grass. The Gencral says in the course of his report :
" A considerable number of Martini-Henry riffes are in store, and it would appear desirable that these should be issued to the permanent corns., and be gradually introduced throughout the militia. The change must necessarily he gradual, since the issue of good arms is useless. without adequate provision for their care. Under the system at present prevailing, it is idle to expect that rifles, issued to the rural militia, can be kept in good order. Even in cities, where good public armouries and paid Goverument caretakers exist, the condition of the arms is in many cases far from satisfactory, since the caretakers are under no cont rol. The only system under which proper care cim be insured. is that now existing in the militian of the United Kingdom. where the caretakers are part of the permanent paid staff of the militia regiment, and are amenable to military discipline. The commanding officer can then be held responsible for the Goverument property entrusted to his charge."
He then speaks of boots. As I understool the hon. member for North Victoria, his constituents mostly dispense with boots when at home-at all events, the hon. member led the House to understand so. The kind of footwear to which he refers is certainly not likely to wear out. I come now to the question raised by the Minister of Militia. An hon. gentleman suggests that possibly the member for North Victoria may be mistaken in regard to the customary footwear of his constituents, but the hon. gentleman (Mr. Hughes) will have to settle that ynestion with them when he next meets them.

Mr. HUGHES. My majority was 239 .
Mr. CASES. I understood the hom. gentleman to say that only a majority of 239 of his electors go barefoot. It may be that those were the people who voted for him. The Minister of Militia appears favourable to the idea of rearming the volunteers, but he appears to be a little afraid of the expense. I will adopt his own calculation, which is on the basis of the new rifle, the name of which I am completely mixed about, for the memher for Toronto (Mr. Denison) calls it the Lee-Burton and the Minister of Militia the Lee-Metforl.
Mr. DENISON. They are two different rifles.
Mr. CASFI. At all events, the Minister's calculation was based on the new British rifie. If his estimate is correct, that they can be obtained for $$ 20$ each, I am sure the surplus stock of Martinis could be obtained for $$ 10$ each. As the General, who is certainly a good judge of a riffe, recommends the Martini as the rifle for the Canadian volunteers, we need have no hesitation about adopting that rifle gradually, as he says, making a yearly appropriation to arm a certain number of battalions amnually. This riffe has been tried in actual service for many years, whereas the new rifle has not undergone that test. If we have 40,000 men to arm and we could get new Martinis at $$ 10$ each, the total expenditure would be $$ 400$,000 . But it must be remembered that only part of this expenditure need be borne each year. I would suggest that a whole district could be armed with Martini rifles in one year, or a battalion in each district could le armed, or some other similar plan could be adopted by which the supply might be spread throughout the country. There is the :advantage not only that we havea considerable stock of Martinis on hand, but that we have a large supply of ammunition and the machinery on hand to manufacture it. The Minister intimated that while there was no objection to rearming the force it might not be long before another change was made in the arm used in the British arny. But I repeat there is no necessity for our following the newest fashion in rifles. This reminds me of what is seen in prosperous farms in Ontario-old-fashioned reaping and mowing machines lying rusting in the barnyard because some newer pattern has come into the market. The Minister said there was no complaint of the sinder in the NorthWest trouble. He must remember what kind of weapons they were opposing in the North-West. The snider was opposed for the most part by the old long Hudson Bay musket with flint lock.

Mr. BOWELL. No.

Mr. CASEI: That is what was reporter.
Mr. BOWELL. A large proportion were Winchester rifles.
Mr. CASEY. I have leen shown bullets that Dr. Orton took out of patients during the trouble, round bullets fired from flint lock muskets. I have seen these muskets with very recent Tower marks on them at Hudson Bay stores in the North-West. They are still mamufactured in London for trading with Indians. It is true there were some Winchesters used, but there was a very small supply of them. Piapot's Band possessel is considerable number, but they were not in the rebellion. The Indians and half breeds were armed with the ordinary smooth-bore shot-gun, and that is the weapon to which the Snider was opposel, and no wonder under those circumstances it came out favourably. But the Snider really did not do much execution against the Indians, for the number of Indians killed was very small in proportion to the amount of firing done. The hon. gentleman reiterated the expression of the hon. member for Guyslorough (Mr. Fraser), that we need have no fear of the Indians. We have, however, reason to beiieve, judging from the events of a few years ago, that certain reasons will cause the Indians to arise and fight. An Indian rising may occur again. Even if it were not caused by acts of Government, it might be caused by rough characters on the frontier, who were apt to quarrel with the Indians wherever they find them. The Indians up to the present time have not been driven into at corner ly increase of settlement. When population increases as it has done in the western states, and when the Indians are driven into a corner, you do not know what may happen, and it is absolutely essential that our men should be armed with weapons quite as good as those which the Indians can get. We know that the Indian can procure weapons across the frontier, and that no matter what he has to do he can generally find means to provide himself with a Winchester rifle. I consider that the question of free ammunition is one of the most important things for the department to consider. The first thing to teach a soldier in modern times is to be a good shot, and I consider that the issue of free ammunition to the Rifle League is not only a good thing, but that the supply should be increased so that the volunteers could have greater practice at the rifle range. If a man is not really a good shot he is not fit to be a modern soldier.
It being six o clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

SECOND RFADIN(:

Bill (No. (i)) respecting the (ireat Northern Railway Compeny.-(Mr. Curran.)

SUPPLI.

Honse again resolved itself into Committee of Supply.

(In the Committee.)

Mr. CASFI. When you left the Chair at six oblock, I was speaking on the subject of free ammunition, and the necessity of granting larger supplies of it for the purpose of inducing our volunteers to practice. I referred to the beneficial effects of the Rifle League, and I can yuite corroborate all that other members have said in regard to the fact that the issue of free ammmition to the Riffe League contributes much to the practice of sharp shooting. I believe that the Minister now in charge of the Militia Department is inclined to receive friendly suggestions, and I wish to inpress rery strongly upon him that the guantity of ammunition issued for use in camp is fuite insufficient to teach raw recruits anything about riffe shooting, Althongh they are supposed to receive instructions on shooting in camp, yet the instructions they gencrally receive is so small that it is hardly discernible, and amounts to nothing more than the "coaching" received from: fellow volunteers who have been practising for some time. I must urge again, as I have urged session after session, and I hope now not to such deaf ears as I have hitherto addressed it to ; that the first requisite for a soldier in these days is not so much perfection in drill as perfection in shooting. It has been proven time and again since the days of the American revolution that a force of men absolutely untrained in drill, but thoroughly trained in shooting can clemoralize a larger force of the best drilled soldiers in the world. The latest example of this was probably during the Boer war in South Africa. The Boers had no drill or training, but they had good rifles, were practised hunters, and they simply stalked and shot down the best British troops that could he sent against them. It is, I fear, quite impossible to look forward in Canada to the creation of any considerable force of highlydrilled soldiers for a long time to come. This Honse is not prepared to vote, nor would the country sustain us in voting the amount of money required for that. However, we can provide at first a comparatively small force of first-rate shots, and even though they amount to only ten or fifteen thousand men, it would be more effective than our nominal force of $40,000 \mathrm{men}$. If the Minister can see his way to reducing the nominal force of the militia, not by knocking off old battalions, but by striking so many men from each battalion, and spend the money in securing to thempractical and thorough instruction in shooting, with a sutficient supply of ammunition to practice with, we woull be in a much better position to resist any enemy then than we are likely to le called upon to face than we are now. Practically the only enemy we may expect to have to face are our own Indians in the North. West or British Columbia. I say that it would be far better to have a small force of volusteers armed with a good rifle and tanght to use it, not in the way it is used now in camps, but to shoot with it as men shoot at rifle matches when they are competing for prizes. If we had 10,000 men fit to enter for rifie matches and to shoot for prizes, we should be far better protected against any possible enemy than we are with 40,000 drilled and trained in shooting as they now are. If we conld reduce our force to such a size that we could arm it with a first-rate weapon, and make the men good shots, we should be far better off than we are with our present equipn,ent. Then, we are asked to vote $\$ \mathbf{3 0}, 000$ for ammmation. I find that last year $\$ 38,314$ was spent on the cartridge factory, and $\$ 15,3 \overline{3}$ on ammunition in general. I also find that last year $100,0 \mathrm{KO}$ rounds of Snider and Martini-Henry cartridges were sold for \$498. Taking that as a standard of the cost of anmunition, this $s 38,000$ spent on the cartridge factory should have produced over $\overline{7}, 000,0(0)$ cartridges, whereas I find an acceunt of only $1,500,000$ as used during the year : so that there must either be a very qarge store of unused cartridges on hand, or else this expenditure has not produced as many cartridges as it should have done. Perhaps the Minister will be able to throw some light on that subject. Now, coming back to the report of the Major-General Commanding, I wish to call attention to the first paragraph on allowances, in which he says:
*The system under which allowances are now granted to the rural militia, is open to very serions objections; Allowances are drawn annually for 'drill instruction, and for 'care of arms,' for which the country receives no real value."
For years past I have ammully cailed the attention of the Govermment to the fact that this allowance for drill instruction is a perfect farce-that the captains of rural companies have no opportunity whatever of giving instructions to their men, even if capable of doing so, and the 540 has been simply handed over to the regimental fund for other purposes; and if these purposes are thought to be legitimate, the vote should he made under that heading, and not under a false heading. The late Minister of Militia has on several occasions expresserl his agreement with me, and promised to reconstruct his estimates accordingly, but I lo not find it done. The Major-Gencral goes on to saty :
" They are paid to officers who are incapable of imparting instruction, and who are unable to give sufficient attention to the arms under their charge. In the majority of cases. these allowances are looked upon merely in the light of perquisites attaching to the command of a battalion or company."
That I can thoroughly corroborate from my short experience in the volunteers. -
" The finult does not rest with the officers, but with the system, which makes an impracticable demand upon them. Considering the sacrifices made by officers of the rural militia in the performance of their militia duts, it rppears absolutely necessary that certain allowances, in addition to the pay of their rank, should be granted to those who exercise the most important functions. Such allowances should, however, be, the payment for a distinct value received by the country."
Then he goes on to say that he submits elsewhere the outlines of a scheme for the issue of allowances. After speaking of the allowance for recruiting, he suggests:
" A contingent allowance' to captains to meet certain expenses in connection with their companies, which are now unprovided for. This allowance should gradually replace the 'care of arms' allowance. The arms should be drawn by degrees into regimental stores, and placed under the charge of a permanently paid adjutant and non-commissioned officers, who would form the permanent staff of the regiment."
In this particular I must beg to differ from the General, because, if the arms were all drawn to the battalion headyuarters, it would be impossible for members of outlying companies to get rifles for practice except when in camp, and I think it is most important that they should be able to obtain rifles for practice when not in camp. Under our present system they would have only one rifle practice in three years, which is equivalent to nothing at all. I should prefer that the Government would make an allowance sufficient to pay the rent of a small room at headquarters for each company, to contain the armoury of that company, and have them kept there and issued by the athority of the captain to men who wish to attend regular rifle practices. I would urge here again that the privilege of free ammunition given to the Rifle League be extended to the amount of fifty or sixty rounds to all members of rural companies who are willing to attend regular rifle practice under some officer. The question of heary gruns has been dealt with, and I will not say anything about it, more especially as I do not know much ahout heary guns; but I should like to have gone through the whole of the General's report and give my opinions upon it, for my own satisfaction, if not for the edification of the House. As the report, however, has only just come down, it is impossilile to do that. The discussion of ammunition has taken so wide a scope that what I would have wished to say only after further consideration of the report has to be said now, but I hope that I shall have another opportunity of giving a more connected criticism on the whole system of military practice and a few suggestions hresed upon the genins of the Canadian people and their peculiar aptitude for certain branches of the military service. The hon. gentleman brought on the estimates the same day that he laid the report on the Table. I do not say that he did this intentionally with the riew of thwarting discussion: but such being the case, we should reserve one of the items on the militia estimates in order that we may have further discussion on this subject after we have had time to look into the report.

Mr. McGREGOR. I have always believed it a good thing that we should train our young men in the use of these riffes, and would call the attention of the Minister of Militia to the adrantages of having camp exercises in the County of Essex. The hon. gentleman will remember very well when, some twenty or twenty-five years ago, he had the advantage of camping on those grounds. He will remember well the facilities afforded there looth as regards health and in every other respect. If a camp is to be given to any portion of Ontario, the western portion has certainly strong claims at present for it. We have three railroads, the Grand Trunk, the Canadian Pacific, and the Michigan Central entering our town, and we have besides magniticent water communication with other portions of Canada, so that I think that there is no place in which the Government could. hold their camp as cheaply and with as much advantage to the health of the young men as in the County of Essex. It must be remembered that the young men want an outing. It may be said that it costs a little more to move a camp, but it will be an incentive to our young men to attend the camp when they know ly so doing they will become acquainted with different places, because always going to the same place is rather monotonous to the boys, who like a little change. In the town of Windsor, we have electric lights, electric roads and so forth, and a most benerolent people who will meet the Govemment half way.
Mr. CASEY. 1 find that several ofticers in this city, the colonel of the 4.3 rd and several officers of the Guards, have leen compelled to throw up their commissions, as a condition of their remaining in the Civil Service. Colonel Anterson, Colonel Tilton, Colonel White and others have had to make this option. I am informed now that Major Toller of the Finance Department has just been gazettel in the place of Colonel Todll. There is a glaring inconsistency in certain officers of long standing being compelled to throw up their commissions hecause they belong to the Civil Service, while another civil servant is promoted to the colonelcy of the Guards. I do not know whether the hon. gentleman's family comections have toclo with the matter or not, but it is a strange inconsistency which the Ilinister ought to explain.

Mr. BOWELLL. I do not understand what the hon. gentleman means by family comnections. No doubt Mr. Toller is connected with some family:

Mr. CASEY. He is Sir Leomard Tilley's mother-in-law.

Mr. BOWFLL. I do not know that that injures him in any way. Being a marriel man, he has to be someboty's brother-in-law, if his wife has it brother or sister. The rule laid down by Order in Council is that where civil servants have duties to perform which will interfere with their duties as colonels of battalions, they must choose between the two. That matter is left to the discretion of the head of the department to which the officer is attached. When Colonel White was made Deputy Postmaster (ieneral, there was no doubt his whole time would be reguired in the performance of his duties as such, and that he could not divide that time and perform efficiently the duties of deputy head. The same reasons applied to Colonel Tilton, when asked to retire from the Guards by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and also to Colonel Anderson who hal command of the 43 rch . Those who know Colonel Anderson know that not only is he a goonl soldier but that he occupies the position of engineer. in the department, which requires his services constantly. During the very time when it might be necessary for him to be attending to the dutics of his battalion, he might be required to go to some parts of the Dominion on public business, to superintemi the construction of a lighthouse or other important public work. It was deemed by the head of the department that it wass in the interest of the service that he should give up his command, and he did so. As to Colonel Todd, he was in the service, but his duties in the Library were not of such a character as required the Government to ask him to retire. He retired entirely of his own accord. Some difficulty arose between that corps and the department in reference topay, which wasclaimed contrary to the regulations, for theannual drill of themen. Colonel 'Todd's retirement occurred without my knowledge; but, when I made enquiry, I found that Major Toller, who harl been connected with the corps for many years, had succeeded to the colonelcy by right of length of service and in the way of promotion. The matter was considered by the head of the department, and, after fuil consideration, it was decided that, as his labours as comptroller of currency in the Finance Department were not such as to prevent his acceptance of the colmelcy. no objection should be made. The hon. gentleman knows that there are many positions beld by chici clerks or deputy heads in comection with which their presence is required in the department every day in the year, and at all times that the office is open, while there are others which do not repuive the presence of these officials all the time. and that was the case in regard to Colonel Todd and Colonel Toller.

Mr. CASEY. I umlerstand that there was at general rule of the service that officers holding certain positions should not he allowed to take command of a lattalion. I mulerstand now, from what the hon. gentleman say: that it is left to the head of the department ti lecirde. Is that the rule adopted:
Mr. BOWELL. There is me general rule in the service. It is left to the head of the deparment to state whether the particular officer is requiredat all times or not.

Mr. CASEY. I think there should be a general rule that no otticer above a certain grade should be allowed to attend to those duties. I think it would be well that momemer of the Civil Service should be comnected with the volunteer force. Not only is he taken away from his duty to attend parades and drills and matters of that kind. but. if the force were ever really needed for warlike parposes, that is the time when we would require all the civil servants to be here in Ottasa to look after the business of the epuntry. I would be sorry to miss from the volanteer force many members of the Civil Service who have been excellent officers and excellent shots, and I do not mean to say that Major Toller is inetticient for the position of colonel of the Guards, if he can be spared from the position he occupies in the Civil Service. Of course, a grom deal of the work is done after office hours, and if one colonel is to be retired becuuse he is is a civil servant, it is very inconsistent that another civil servant should be appointed to succeed him. I am afraid this will create dissension amongst the colunteers, and good feeling amongst them is as necessiary as the good comfort and the goond fool to which the Minister referred earlier in the debate.
Mr. McMULLEN. I see that equ tons of coal are charged for the cartridge factory at $${ }^{$ 1}$ a ton, with so much for duty. Is this American coal ?
Mr. BOWELL. I do not know. All the coal was purchased by tender. I do not know whether it is American or Scotch coal.
Mr. McMULLEN. Is it American coal or Scotch coal? There is $196 duty paid, and we would like to know whether it is coal from Nova Scotia or coal from the United States?
Mr. BOWELL. Does not the hon. gentleman think that question a little captious? If it were Canadian or Nova Scotia coal, certainly the duty would not be referred to. It must be either English or American coal.
Mr. FORBES. Where is this coal delivered ?

Mr. Bow ELL. In Quebec for the use of the curtridge factory.

Mr. FORBES. Then it is not Nova Scotia coal?
Mr. BOW ELL. Certainly not, if subject to duty.
Mr. FORBES. Why is it that the department does not use Nova scotia coal?

Mr. BOWELL. Since I have been at the head of that department I have always instructed the deputy to accept the lowest tender.

Mr. Forpis. Then I am to presume that American coal, with the duty, costs less than Nova scotia coal:

Mr. BOWELLL. You may presume what you like.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I have been struck with the difference of opinion which prevails between those who are familiar or supposed to be familiar with the working of the militia force. One hon. gentleman wants the militia to be supplied with the best weapons that can be purchased to day, regarnless of expense, even going so far as to aldise of these arms. Then others appear to think that the discarded arus of the British army might be supplied to our men. 1 have always taken the stand that we spend too much money on the militia force. We have been spending for a mumber upon the militia force of this Dominion. We would not object, perhaps, to that expenditure if it was it benefit to the people, if our force was in goon training and in gool condition, but when we tind, as we find to day by the report of the Major-dieneral which is now before us, that it has been a miserable failure, that our force is in nearly every particular a disgrace to the country, and that money has been wasted by hundreds of thousands of dollars yearly, it is time for this Parliament to step in and consider well if some means ammot he de vised by which this enormous expenditure can be curtailed and made productive of better results. We have only to take up the report of the Major (ieneral to find the contirmation of everything I have said. He points out that so far as the training is concerned, it is very inferior, that the city militia acuuire the forms of drill but have no means of learning their practical application. He says that in every particular the rural corps are imperfect and their organization is still more defective. Now, that is the opinion of the MajorGeneral who has thoroughly investigated the force, and has come to that conclusion. Ithink it is most lamentalle that after the enormous expenditure that has been made on our militia force, the Major-(xieneral is compelled to report such a statement as that. Then he speaks about allowances :
"Allowances are drawn annually for drill instruction, and for care of arms, for which the country receives no real value."
Just mark that-

[^44]Is not that most disgraceful that from year to year we have been allowing a state of affairs to go on such as he has reported to this House? Then he speaks about the arms, equipments and clothing, and denounces them in equally strong terms:
"The Snider rifle and carbine, with which the militia is armed. is at the best an obsolete weapon, but in the condition in which it exists inmost of the regimentsof the active militia, it has no claim whatever to be classed as an arm of precision.'

Then he groes on to say:

"The equipments in use in the active militia is also obsolete in patternand a large proportion perished from age and severe usage. There is not a battalion that could turn out in complete marching order on a civen day, though many have, at their own expense, provided some of the most necessury articles. Moreover, the equipment does not exist in store which it would be necessary to issue in the event of grave emergency. I have unt inspected a single baitalion in which the men'sboots would have stood one month's active service, or a regiment of cavalry or battery of artillery in which the saddery, and harmess could be expected to bear a similar st rain."
Now, it is simply ontrageons that after we have been spenting somuch money for a mumber of years past, the Major-lieneral shouht he compellen to report to this House a state of affairs such as here exists. It shows what I have often thought that much of this money is simply waster and syuandered. Then he speaks about barracks. I wish to call particular attention to what he says on this point. He speaks about the harmaksat Kingston:
"Tete de Pont harracks at Kingston, owing to their site, are extremely unhealthy, typhoid fever and diphtheria being of frequent occurrence there."
Is it possible that we have had officers and men at the head of our militia force who have allowed such a state of affairs as this to exist for solong a time: I am surprised that the colonels, and the majors, and the captains who are so rearly to strut aromel in thair regimentals and feathers, have not proclaimed in this House. long before this, that sucha state of thingsexisterl. Thelieneral condemms the force and its management in very disparaging terms. I think that when we receive such a report from a high commanling officer, one who has given personal attention to these matters, it is high time that we should look carefully to see if something camot be done. Now, for my own part, although I do not belong to the militia-

An hon. MEMBER. This is very evident.
Mr. CAMPBFLLL. Still I am bound to saty that the little knowledge I have leads me to lelieve that the alministration of that department has not heen what it ought tobe. I believe that if we desire to have a militia force in this bominion, it shoull lee a force that would be available in case of emergency: But to-day, according to the statements of the Major-(ieneral, there is not a single battalion that is a a ailable in case of emergency. Is that what we desire in this country? Is that what we hate been spending our millions for many long years to accomplish" Certainly not. Now, one great lifficulty with our force is this, that men are taken out to drill for ten or twelve days every two years, I luelieve it is; young men are taken away from their husiness and have to go to camp, and they only get $\overline{\mathrm{ol}}$ cents a day.

Mr. PRIOR. That is big pay.
Mr. (AMPBELLL. It may lee big pay for you, but it is not for many men in this country. Some men would le very dear at that price, while others would he rery cheap. I know ats a fact that the 24th Battalion, about which I know something, find very great difticulty in filling out their ranks when they go to camp; I mean that in many cases when the battalion is ready to go out, it is found that many of the men have gone away and others are in situations and places which it is difficult for them to leave. Besides, a great many of them are poor men, mechanics and labourers, that cannot afford to $g$ o away and spend their time for the pittance they get. Now I think that in order to make this an efficient force we should increase the pay of those men who go ont to drill, we should drill them at least every year, drill a smaller number and give a reasomalie amount, so that they can afford to go to drill. We had better have 10.0 MN ) or 20 , (M) active men in this comntry who would be available in case of an emergenci, than to have, as we have torday on the pay-roll. flown men that are, according to the report of the Major-(ienemal, very inetticient and umable to he used in case of emergency. I think that a great deal tow much money is spent on the staff: the officers gobble up the greater proportion of this appropriation. If you look thaough the accomuts you will find that a large propertion of this money has been spent on the staff aml $t(x)$ little upon the men. In case of an emergency. the men upon whom we have to depend should the thomaghly drilled and male efficient in the arts of war. I think that if a proper system were inaugurated, with one-half the money we are spending torday. we might have a more efficient force thath we have at the present time.

Mr. DFNISON. I am sure it must le. painful to members of the House th hat an hon member get up and anlress the House in the mamer in which the hom. Menber ior Kent (Mr. (ampluell) had just done. We expect that when a nember gets up to adhress the House he knows something about what he is talking. but the hom. wentleman is entirely deficient of any knowledge of the question concerning which he ventures to teach the (ionermment. If he would derote himself tw something that he umderstoon, it would be much letter for the House and sate the time of the members. The hon. gentleman toll us he did not know angthing about the subject. It was quite umnecessary to tell us that fact, hecause it was evident to every member of the House. The hon. gentleman drew a picture of the state of the militia from the report of the General. He seems to forget that the dieneral is here for the purpose of criticising the militia, for the purpose of finding out anything that is wrong with a view to having it set right, and his report is a very gool onc. But the General comes from Englamil where he has heen accustomed to regular troops who are under arms 36: days in the year, and it is umecessary to point out that ow men who put in IO days during the year camot be supposed to be so well trained as nen who drill every day during twelve months.

Mr. ED(iAR. They have good lmots.
Mr. DFNINON. The hoots are supplied hy the men, and the Militia Department is not responsible for them. If they are bad, it is because the men samot afford to pay for better ones The hon. gentleman went on to sat that with all this expenditure there was not a liattalion in the country prepared to go out. Surely his memory is not so short that he cannot remember 1885 , when regiment after regiment was prepared to turn out in 24 hours. The idea of telling this House that not two battalions were ready to turn out is absurd, and I am surprised that any hon. gentleman should rise in this Honse and talk in that faslion. As an old Mr. Campbel.
member of the force it certainly irritates me, as no donlit it cloes every true Canalian in the country, to hear any member rise and abose the militia in that way. I wonder whether the hon. gentlemin has a battalion in his own county : if so, I should like to have their opinion of his speech, hecause, naturally, one would suppose he obtained his opinion of the force from the members themselves. and it must be from the battalion in his own county that he formed his opinion of the militia. If there is any man from whom we might expect an assatult on the militia it is the hon. memher who last spoke, heraluse in that quarter of the country recently there was held an annexation meeting. I hope when the hon. gentleman next addresses the House he will talk about something he understands.

Mr. SOMERVILLE. I agree with the remarks manle liy the hon. member for Kent (Mr. Campleell), that the expenditure on the militia force is probably latwer than this young comntry can maintain, and that it might he greatly reduced. Of course, in discussing this matter, we camnot bring to bear on the subject all the military knowledge, skill and valour possessed by the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Denison), but still we are here as practical men to discuss this expenliture, and I fancy there is evidence that this expenditure is not always senuine. I have personal knowledge of the mamer companies are marle up for camp, and I have evidence in my own locality that during the year members gradually slop out of the companies. - Iust hefore (amp. however, all the hoys possible are induced to go there, in order to olitain the desired numbers, and they go out to have a gool time. Afterwats their daties are neglected and the companies fall away, hat whenever they go out to camp the ranks are tilled hy young men who go out for a holiday and to have a "high old time.". I do not believe the Canadian system of maintaining our militia is one which is in the interests of the country, and the expenditure is altogether too large, and might well he reluced. I hare been led to make these remarks from the fact that some time ago documents were placed in my hands from Toronto attacking this expenditure. The expenditure is large, but if it were all legitimately expended there might he some defence for it. I have here the sworn declaration of a number of men residing in Toronto, which I will real to this committee, and show that in many instances the money roted by Parliament is not lonestly expended in advancing militia interests, and in promoting the interests of the force in this country: I will read one or two of these affidavits. The first one was sworn to in Tromono on the ith January, 1892, and is as follows:-

Now, Mr. Chairman, I have no remarks to and to these atfidavits. The charges made there are of a very serious character, and I trust the Militia Department will see that a proper investigation is marle into them : and if they are foumded on fact, as 1 believe they are, the atficlavits all being sworn to. I think that the gentlemen who have leten guilty of this transaction have shown that they are mot fit men to holn office in the militia of this comntiy.

Mr. DENINON. Mr. Chairman, I think it is only fair that the hon. gentleman from Brant IMr. Somerible) sloould have heard me a little sooner, when I attempted to speak while he was reading those statements, leciause I was going to suggest to him hefore he read these affidavits, which are entirely untrue, that he might have gone to the Militia Department, and he would have seen further that the whole thing is a tissue of falsehoorls from leginning to end, so that he might have sitved himself the trouble of reading these papers. How. ever, as he has real them, I think it is only pooper that I should explain to the House, so that it may appear in Harraral how this matter stamls. In 188:. a man named Slater joined the fiovermor (ieneral's Borly fiuard. His time was out in 1885 , when I ordered him to bring in his arms and accoutrements. He refused to do so, and I immediately wrote to him that by the law and the regula. tions of the department he must bring them in. He still refused. I then wrote him another letter informing him that if he did not bring them in at.
once I would proceed under the Militia Act and he would be tined, as I must do my duty as an otficer of the force. He still persisted in keeping the arms. and I went to the assistant police magistrate and hat him summoned for holding Her Majesty's anms in his possession. He was brought before the mavistrate. He still refused to give up his arms. I told the magistrate that if he woild give them up, I would not proceed any further. ami that would the an end of the matter: but he still refused, aud the magistrate impossed on him a tinc or imprisomment in gaol for thirty days, which term he served. This man stater is a drunken old sollier, who when on a spree imagines all surte of things, and says and does all sorts of things. For instance, he has reported me : he has reported the postmaster of Toronto to the Postmaster dieneral, stating that I caused letters to he interfered with by the letter carriers. He has re ported the lawyer who appeared for him in the case in which I had him finel, reported him to the baw Sinjety, asking them to disrole himbecanse he had given up lis case or sold it to me. He has reperted nealy everybody he conld get near. one after another. He has reported me not only here, but to the Horse tinards in Fingland. I believe he has some to Finglam amd there pressed his case and come Dack again. I think he reported the econeral. I for not know anymoly with whon he has rome in cuntact. that he has not reported.

Sir ADOLPHE CARON. He has repmedme.
Mr. DENINON. Yes, he reported the Minister to the dovernor (ieneral. He has gone about since isso. when I did what I considered my duty, trying to raise trouble and giving me all the amoyance lie pussilhy could. He has grone aromil and got men to make these declaations which have leeen real liy the hom. memher for North Brant to-night. The man Black inagines that he signed two paysheets. What he signed was a pay-sheet and a service roll, which are two different things: and insteal of drawing pay as a veterinary surgeom, he drew the pay of a fartier sergent. If the hom. sentleman had gone to the department he would have foum that instead of our corps having drawn for the pay of tenoticers, we only drew for the pay of nine otficers. and that only nine ofticers drew piy. The whole thing is a tissue of falsehoonds. It is inot congenial to me to be called a forger and a thief, which is practically the charge which the hom. gentleman makes against me. Before making a charge like that on his responsibility as a member of the House, the hon. gentleman should have had decency chough ami respect enough for himself as a member of Parliament, to have gone to the Nilitia Department and satisfied himself as to the facts. I would have thought that it manoceupying the position of a member of this House would have hat some ileas of decency and homar and some respect for the feelings of other people, instead of getting up and reading in this House the false statements of a man who is only a drumen loafer, and by his atction in this House he semuls these statements broatcast throughout Canala as the truth.

An hon. MEMBER. That is what he wanter.
Mr. DENISON. Yes, that is what he wainted. That is a part of the policy of slander which hon. gentlemen opposite are carrying out. I will bring this matter up again unless the hom. gentleman goes to Colonel Powell and finds out the truth, and then comes back here like a man and apologizes for making this charge against me.

Mr. somervilet. These papers were sent to me omly a few weeks ago.

Mr. DENIson. They were mostly published last vear. aul sent broatcant to the members of this House.

Mr. sombrilldie. some of these affidavits were made in danary, 1890 , and they are not all made hy this man silater. He only made one of them: and does the hom. member for West Toronto mean to say that all these men are drunken loafers, as he dechires this man slater to le ?
Mr. DESINON. If you wo the department you can satisfy yourself.

Mr. sombrillite. If these men are not all drumen loafers, hut respectable men, as they appear whe their testimony is entiten to receive as much credence in this Honse as it would in any court. The hom. menluer has not attempted to answer these attidavits. He has set up the defence that this man is a drumen lowifer.

Mr. DENENON. I satil they were false.

Mr. sombriflles. We have had that answer in this Honse kefore. (harges made ayainst memIners of this House and Ministers of the (rown have heen declared to he false, and afterwards when widence has heen pronlacel there has been shown to he some truth in them. I do not think the hon. member for West Toronto has a right to make any such charge against me as he has, because I had no, intention of making use of these papers at all until tonight when this discussion arose on the militia estimates: and when I saw the hom. gentleman rise and talk in such a military style about the way in which the militia of this comutry was managen, I thought it was alome time that 1 slomuld produce these sworn declarations which I had in my possession, and which must have some truth in them or they would not le sworn to. It is true. I have not the originalls in my possession: I have copies : hut the originals ate in the prssession of a law tirm in Toronto, and can be had. The hon. memier for Toronto does not declare that all the men who signed these attidatits are drunken loafers and unworthy of credence. Is Mathew Brvan a dirumen loifer:
Mr. DENENON. What does he charge me with?
Mr. SOMERVILLE: I ammot going to read it Wer again. Are B. "I. George McInerney, do make the following solemn declaration before a justice of the peace at Toronto. Ontario. and I am prepared to do so in any court of justice, viz:
iI was present at the police court of the above city on the 13th of October, 1883, when Sergeant Instructor James Slater, of the Governor Cieneral's Body fuard, was tried on a charge of a breach of the Militia Act, in refusing to deliverup certain arms, accoutrement and clothing when lawfully required to do so, the prosecutor, Lieut.-Col. F. C. Denison, di. (I. B. G.. male use of the following expression when the said Sergeant Instructor J. Slater was put on his defence. viz.: This man clams Iowe him some money. I object to him making any statement in this court that does not bear directly un this case. In fact I consider that Lieut.-Col. F. C. Denison did all in his power to prevent the said Sergt. Inst. J. Slater from making ans defence, and the presiding justice (Ald. Binter) allowed such objection to stand giod by refusing to look at some papers that Sergt. Inst. J. Slater asked to be allowed to show him as a part of his defence, in fact he gave him no chance of making any defence, but foumd him guilty on the unsupported cvidence of Lieut. -col. F. C. Denison, directly he (Ald. Baster) refused to look at Seret. Inst. J. Shater's papers for his defence.
"his, Sergt. Inst. J. Slater's was a remanded case, Which. in the ordinary course of justice, would be the first to be called in court. instead of which the court was adjourned and when it reassembled. he was the only person to be tried, in fact, in my opinion, everything had been done tuprevent the attention of the general public from being drawn to Sergt. Inst. J. Slater's trial. so when his trial commenced there was present in court only twa other spectators in addition to myself, and there was not at reporter present connected with any lucal newspaper: in fact. 1 comsider it nearly equivalent to a rial with closed doors. The followiny remark was also made ase of by Lieut.-Col. F. C. Denison during Sergt. Inst. J. Slaters trial, which speaks for itself, viz. : "This man is not responsible for his actions.' And then Ald. Baxter convicts a man whom the prozecutor states, while on his oath. is not responsible for his actions.

Now, if these atfirlarits are true. amd they beat *Vidence of their truth on their face, leteinse it cannot lie suppesed that six or cight men would gra lefore magistrates amd swear to assertions that were false, it is apparent that this man . later had something tantamomint to injustice done to him. It appeills that he went to the headyuarters of this tronp and wanted to give up his equipment, hut they remsed to aceept it. and he wiss after.
 a poor manl. He was sent to goal for at month. I say it is necessary that this investigation shoulal be carried further, and that the Militia Department shomle see whether any injustice has been done to this man anm whether the other atfindavits which I hate read are correct or not. They are sworn to and we are lommol to accept such evjelence miness we have sombe evinlente to the contary. I am not a milititry man, but I suppose this is the proper place to liming this matter up. I donot want to go to the department atmel to be smubbed by the otticers ot that department. 'This is the proper place to bring this charge, ame this is the place Where the charge ought to have some influence on onr new Minister of War, and, if Mr. Slater has heen mojustly dealt with, he simold le relieverl from the fine which was imposed upom him or shond he recompensed for the injury which wiss done to him hy hisbeing sent to grail. These men who have sworn to the affidarits should he brought lefore the Militia lejpartatent and a proper investigation should the made.

Nir ADOLPHF(:ARON. For once, the Departmient of Militia has inlopted a mode suggested by the hon. gentleman. and, if the hon. gentleman hat considered the serious nature of the charges which he was levelling against an hon. member of this House. possibly he: might have taken the trouble to investigate the chatges he hats now laid them before Parliannent. I ean state that the whole of this matter came lefore the Department of Militia from (ouncil. The chatges were sent to the ionvernor (ieneral and were sent by him to Conncil, and were sent by Council to the department for investi. gation. The investigation was complete and thorough. The Deputy Alljutant ieneral was entrusted with the diaiy of investigating the complaint of Mr. Slater. The complaint was found to be: utterly foumlationless, and. if the hon. gentleman will call for the papers, he will find that Mr. Slatev is a man who is known in that department to be one who makes it his business to complain against every officer under whom he has served. In fact he is looked upon in that department as a crank. The hon. gentleman siays these aftidavits cannot lee all incorrect, but they may have been given on timsy informationsuch as the hon. gentleman had when he made his charges in the case of - Water. He stated that a system was alopted by which young men joined the different corps for the purpose of having a holiday. I think (anamat remembers when, in lisis, it was not a holiday, when the young men of Cimada left their houses, their honnes, their husiness and their families to fight the lattle of Cianaia, nor coes Canaila forget the manner in which they fonght and did their work. Their action at that time attractel more attention to this country than anything which had occurred in our history for fifty years. They were landed abrosal, and I remember, when on the floor of larlianent it was my duty to call upon the House to vote what was reguired upon that occiasion, hon. gentlemen opposite dial not speak alont holidiay solliers, but were willing to trust to the energy, the pluck and the courage of the sons of Canaila to fight under the Canamian flag ami to protect Canala against the alangers which threatened her. If the hon. gentleman beiore attacking a member of this House, would investigate the matter in reference to these charges which were investigatel liy the Department of Militia, he would find that this man slater has made charges as fommlationless as those which have heen ma:le ly other men who are well known in this city of Ottawa. The hon. gentleman once lefore lrought a charge which was given up because it was foumd that the m:n for whom he spoke wats unworthy of crealence. So it is in regard to this man slater, and the hon. gentleman will find that no blame cian be attached to the department, whichinvestigated these charges and fonnd that they were absolutely grommdless.

Mr. NOMFRVILLE. I understand the charge is in reference to this man having been sent to prison for not having given up his arms. The hon. fentleman does not say anything about the other athidavits charging that (iovermment money was misappropriated. He has not shown that any inrestigration has taken place in regard to the charges contained in those affidavits. There are other charges which are as strong against the action of the firvermment as the charges of Mr. Slater, and I trust the present Minister of Militia will start is supplementary investigation and will see whether there is anything in those charges or not. They are certainly serious charges, and I do not make them against the member for Toronto with any desire to injure his reputation at all. I think this is a matter which has to dlo with the expenditure of public money, and this is the proper time to bring it up when we are considering a vote for this very purpose. I ams not myself an officer in the militia of this country. I do not desire to be offensive to the Lieu-tenant-Colonel at all; it is in the fulfilment of my duty that I have read these affidavits, and if the Militia Department do their duty they will investigate, not only the charges made by Mr. Slater, but they will investigate the statements in the sworn evidence that is to be found in that document, bearing upon the misappropriation of mone $y$ belonging to the people of this country.

Mr. TlsinAI.E. I regret very much to hear the hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat reiterate his charge after the explanation of the hom. member for Toronto. I do not think it is in the interest. either of the eountry or of the service. that any hon. gentleman should approach the sulb. ject in this manner. Now, I believe that there are just as grool ofticers and men among the Reformers of this country-and there are some of them in this House-as there are in the conservative party. I am satistiel that the large majority of hon. crentlemen on either side of the House would havehesitated tobringup thischarge. I annequally satisfied that the gentlemen who are serving in the force, Reformens as well as Conservatives, will regret a ery much that the hon. gentleman has thought necessary to hring it up in this manner. He is an old parliamentarian, he is an old public mam, and no man knows better than he that the proper way to bring up this matter is to place it hefore the anthorities of the Militia Department. to make a charge before that department, and not bring it up in this House. If he thinks that money has been spent in an improper way, surely the department is the proper place where he shoull horge his charge. I want him to remember that every otticer in the militia will not only regret his action, hut will comdemn it, because once you rean these sort of attidavits in the House and mention the name of an ho:l. member of the House, or of any otticer of the militia in the way he has mentioned the name of the hon. nember for Toronto, and the story goes broadeast throughout the country an injury is ifone which camot be repaired. Ender the high privileges that members enjoy in this House, he can mention the name of a gentleman in the House, or out of the Honse, in comnection with a charge, which he conld not have done outside of the Honse without heins held responsible for it.

Mr. NOMERVILLE. These enpies are swom athidavits.

Mr. TISDALE. I do not care whether they are copies or declarations, they atre unfair, and may he untrue : but in any case they cast a stigma upoin an officer that no anmont of investigation can afterwards wipe away. I say that when he was told that there hat been an investigation. amd that the hon. member for Toronto had asked for an enuluiry, he should have held his hand. The hon. gentleman makes no charge here, but from his seat in Parliament where he is not accountable in any way, be makes insinuation against these othicers whose names he has mentioned, one in the House and the others out of it. Is that fair-play? Is that the way to treat members of Parliainent or officers of the force, gentlemen who devote their time to the service of the country in the militia? I hope the hom. member will withdraw his language; but if he is prepared to make a charge, let him make it through the militia authorities. He has been told there was a charge, and it was investigated. If there was any pretense that the authorities would not investigate these charges, then he might be justified in coming here and saying he could not get it investigated by the proper authorities. Put insteal of that he reads these affirmations, he says he believes them to be true, but he will not make a charge of any sort, and yet these things are pablished broadcest. I want also to refer to something satid by the hon. member for Kent (Mr. Camplell). I am in the force no longer, hat for fifteen years I was an officer and a private in the force. In those days we trained with difficulty : we had men of he th parties in the force, because I have always insisted that in the militiat there should he no politics. Our battalion was composed of men of looth parties. Now, when an hon. gentleman like the member for Kent stands up in this House aml declates that the volunteer force is a disgrace to the country, 1 want it to be known: I, as one who served, but who serves no longer. Wish to protest against such language. I say that the force we have is an homour to Canada, a force that we shombl he prond of. as equal to any other militia force in the worlh. I was in the old camps at Niaga:a when the force was no better than it is to-diay. We hat English otticers, we had American otticers. we hat otficers from Europe, and althongh we could not claim to be able to go throngh all the military mooments on parade with precision, still they were lond in their praise of the tighting form anl appearance of the brigate, and we hare a force extremely ereditable to those composing it and to the comntry. There were young neen in it that the member for North Brant (Mr. Somerville) sheted at : yes, some of them were latls, they were lath coming from the fathers am mothers of Camanla, of both political parties. Let that hom. gentleman er and try it, and see if it is a holiday, as he says it is. Let him go and live on their fare, it is not such as they get at home. it is not such as he gets at his home- restricted hours. long hours of drill. I have seen the lads when they cane in: most of them are tow tired to go out again, and they lie down in their tents and sleep the sleep of men who have done their duty. One of the best things alout these camps is the fact that only young men of courage and endmance will consent to mblergo the hardships of camp life. Therefore, I want the hon. gentlenan to take back his attack upon the volunteer force. or else I want it published all over this country that he dated to stand up and proclaim that our wohnteers are a disgrace to the country. Sir, at the time of the Fenian Raid. in lstit, there were some men who laid down their lives, young men who left fathers amd mothers chililess, left sorrowing sisters, wives and children umprovided for. and in Toronto and other places in Ontario, their graves are now to be seen where they used to live. Voung men went ont even from our institutions of learning and laid down their lives. They were not drilled, perhaps, in all the movements of skilled soldiers, but they were men Who felt that their lives were none toogood to give up when a horle of robbers came actoss from a foreign country. I have always said, and I believe it, that I have as much faith in the loyalty of the Reform party as in the loyalty of the other party : we have in the ranks of the volnmteers, and always call get grod, soldiers from both parties. Though the drill that the hon. gentleman sneers at is not such as to make fine soldiers and fine feathers, it is sufficient to teach them the elements of war, which, with their true hearts, has made and always will make them serviceable defenders of this country in time of neel. Sir, the milhtia force of this comitry, in days past ind to-day, is not to be ridiculed or sneered at. While our arms and clothing are not such as we could wish, I do helieve that the money we have been able to expend upon them has beea productive of good results. I think the time has come when a change of arms should take place. Although for many years past we have had no foreign enemies we have had internal disturbances from which, without the militia, we would have been in great trouble. We had a disturbance ia my own county when I was commanding otticer of a regiment, and in other counties and some of the cities they have more thanonce leen called out to aid the civil power, so that the militia are useful even in civil affairs. Ami more than that, we have armouries, and arms, and men who are not afraid to take hold of them, and these facts alone are sufficient to prevent disturbances; so that I think we have got something to show for all the expenditure we have made. Criticise the force if you will, but do not ridicule it. Criticise the Minister, eriticise the department, show wherein the men are deticient. lat do not ridicule them. and that is what I blame the hon. member for. Criticise the force, make it better, give them more money if you will, make them even more efficient still, but stop there. I say that the arms we have with the men behind them. have always been found equal to our need in times past, and they have protected us when we needed protection. Therefore I repeat that I regret that the hom. gentleman should see fit to ridicule the militia and to make these assertions with regard to it.

Mr. CAMPBELLL I did not think when I rose this aftemoon to give my views on this great ques. tion I would stir up such a hornet's nest as I appear to have done. I comsider it is the duty and privilege of every hon. member when a guestion comes hefore the House involving a vote of $$ 1,2 \cdot \mathrm{NO}$, (MNO to give his view upon it and criticise the mone of expenditure. In exercising the privilege this aftermon I did so simply leceanse it was my duty, and for doing that the hom. member for Toronto (Mr. Denison) with all his elognence rose and poured out a stream of abuse on my hearl. That hon. gentleman appears to think that no member has a right to say anything about militia afficirs expect his lordly self. He knows all ahout it, and what he does not know is not worth knowing, and no one else knows anything. He alvised me to speak on some subject on which I knew something. What information has that hon. gentleman given this House on militia affairs during the hours in which he has spoken on them? "The hom. gentheman went even further and did exactly what the member for South Norfolk (Mr. Tistale) accused me of doing. He had the impudence to rise and criticise the Major-(ieneral, who is the very head of the Militia Department. The hon. gentleman said the Major (General was in this country for the purpose of criticising the militia, that he came from England, where there is a very efficient staff, and he did not know his business. Is that the position, and is he simply here a critic? Is that the position which the Major-(ieneral occupies in this country, and does it become the dignity of an hon. member, especially of a member who professes to know as much as does the member for Toronto (Mr. Denison), to rise and criticise and abuse the Major General in the way he has done? I believe the Major-General knows more in one minute than that hon. gentleman ever knew or ever will know, and it ill-becomes that kon. gentleman, especially after these affilavits have leen read in this House, to rise and pour abuse on the head of any man in the Honse, whether a militia man or not. The hom. :nember for south Norfolk (Mr. Tistale) rose with all the virtuous imdignation he could summon to his aidand poured his wrath on the devotel :nember for Kent, and accused me of ridiculing the Militia Department.
some hon. MEMBERS. No: the militia.
Mr. CAMPBELL I want to tell that hon. gentleman that $I$ did nothing of the kimd: I did exactly what the hon. gentleman did-I criticised it, and I had a right to do so. Morenver, I did not give my views on the subject, hut I gave the riews of the Major-deneral. and read from his report. What dues the Major-dieneral say in speaking of the rural militia:
"The rural corps are rery deficient in instruction, but their organization is still more defective.
Will the hon. member for Toronte hispute that: Does he say that the Major-(ieneral dues not know what he is talking about? The hon. gentleman would lead us to infer so from what he said this afternoon. The Major-feneral next spoke of the arms. appliances and clothing. which he sail were deficient. He continues as follows :-

- The Snider rifte and carbine, with which the militia is armed, is at the best an obsulpte we:apon, but in the condition in which it exists, in most of the regimentes of the active militia, it hass no claim whatever to be elased as an arm of precision."
He goes on to speak of the active militia, aml says:
$\therefore$ There is not a battalion that could turn out in complete marching order on a given day, though many have, at their own expense, provided some of the most necessary articles. Moreover. the equipment hoes not exist in store, which it would be necessary to issue in the event ot grave emergency."
He further says, and I wish the member for Torontw to note this statement :
" I have not inspected a single batation in which the ment boots would have stood one month's active service. or a regiment of caralry or battery of artillery in which the saddlery and harness could be expected to bear a similar strain."
I ask if anything could be more danaging than such a statement coming from the Major- (ieneral: The arguments I hrought to bear were this: That it was ia shame and disgrace to this Parliament and this comery that after we have spent millions of dollars for many years to perfect this organization, to place the men in grood form and equipment. there should be such a disgraceful state of affair: as is revealed by the Major-General. The argument I adranced was a proper one, and I did not ridicule the men at all, but I brought charges against the management of the department. I contended that the management was imperfect, inasmuch as the men who went out to drill were not paid sufticiently for their service, and were not drilled sufficiently often. Moreover. I tind that the Major-tieneral in speaking alout the camp at St. Thomas sticl :

[^46]- 792 officers and men, and 155 horses, carried 55 miles further than was necessary. Tents and camp equipment likewise transported about bu miles umecessarily.
These extracts are from the report of the MajorGeneral, which is entitled to full credit. Let me take up the case of Rimouski. The Major-(ieneral say's:
" 695 ufficers and men, 14 horses, and all tents and camp equipment, transported tor miles further than was necessary, from it good site to a bad one."
Is it possible that the member for Toronto will saty that the Major-tieneral does not know what he is talking about, that he simply comes here as a critic and does not know his own business: Yet here the Major-Cieneral reports that men have been transported $f(6)$ miles further than was necessary, and from a good to a bat site. The statement is a most damaging one. Now, I ask, who is responsihic for ath this? Why, the very high amplordly Lient-Colonel from Toronto, who has been neglecting his duty; and struts arround on the 12th of July, when they sing "Croppy lie Down" or the " Protestant boys," with all his war paint and feathers on, and who dictates to every hom. member what he should say in this House. That is the kind of high and mighty man he is who pretends to know all about the militia force. Then the member for south Norfolk (Mr. Tisdale) comes to his assistance and gets up a lot of righterms indignation and accuses me of a statement Inever made in this Honse. Take the report of the Majow-teneral commanting the forces, and if it does fout disclose a most scandalous and dix-oraceful state of affairs in this country then I do not know what a disgraceful state of aftairs is. It is the more disgraceful when we have year after year for many years been voting a milliom and a half of follaws to get this militia force into a state of etticiency: I can call to mind when a few years ago in this House General Laurie. the then member for shelburne, as well as the hon. member for Muskoka (Mr. OBrien) who is an athority I believe on militia matters, expressed their opinion upon the militia forces upon the floor of Parliament. They showed that nearly one-half the money that is leing spent on the militia force is simply wasted, and that if we voted half the sum under proper regulations we would have a more efficient force than we have torday.

Mr. BOWELLL. 1 do not propose to enter into the discussions which have tiken place for the last hour. further than to call attention-and I think the member for North Brant (Mr. Somerville) will come to the same conclusion after a little reflection-to what I think the manair mamer in which he has attacked an hon. member in this House, and another gentleman who occupies a very prominem position in Toronto, who has devoted a great deal of time and attention and has spent a great deal of his means on the militia force, and who happens to be a brother of the hon. member for Toronto (Mr. Denison). The declaration of the member for Brant (Mr. Somerville) that he had no intention of wounding the feelings of the member for Toronto reminds me very much of the old story of the Irishman who met a friend and for love knocked him down. The member for Brant (Mr. Somerville) has read declarations here, which if they are true, the member for West Toronto (Mr. Denison) is unfit to sit in this House or to associate with respectable people. If these aftidavits are literally true, then my hom. friend to my right and the police magistrate of the city of Toronto, have committed offences which would rule them out of respectable society and woald if found true, after investigation, have been the means of cansing them to be expelled from the militia force of Canada. Beyond that I do not propose to go. but I leave it to my hon. friend from Brant (Mr. Somerville) to say whether after reflection, he thinks it fair, that without notice, and without moving for the papers in connection with the whole transaction, he should get up in his place and after reading documents damming the character of two men occupying respectable positions in the society in which they move and in the country in which they lise, that he should say then simply that he had no intention of wounding a bother member's feelings. That is, I camlidly confess, a kind of ethics and a kind of reasoning which I donot understand. The hom. gentleman from Brant (Mr. Somerville), says that he did this unpremeditatedly, hat it is quite evident that he intended to make the attack or he would not have been supplied with the ammunition. When I heard the hon. gentleman read these attilavits, they convinced me that there was on the part of the person who mate then an over-zeal to do a wrong, or that he had very little knowledge of the document he had been signing. It struck me that these affidavits had been written hy some astute lawyer who had induced this man to sign them without knowing what he was signing. One athdavit that my hom. friend read, states that the summons and arrest for not delivering up the property of the ciovernment, was in order to prevent an investigation. I would not like to accuse the hon. member from Brant (Mr. somerville) of being so unacquainted with military law or military practices, or the common usages of society, as to suppose that he lelieves for a moment that an arrest for withholding property which belongen to the foremment, could, by any possibility, prevent a military investigation into the wrongs committed ly an afficer of the force. It appears to me, and I repeat what I said, and hooking at the names of some of the commissioners before whom the athilavits were made, confirms my helief that some astute lawyer, for political reasons, prepared the case, and that it was a deliberate attempt, if not a conspiracy, for the purpose of injuring a political opponent. I give that as my opinion, drawn from the papers which are before me. The hon member for Brant, with whom it has always heen my good fortune to be on the very best terms, being old chums as type-setters and printers together, will, on reflection, see that he has made a mistake in the character which he attributed to the affidavit. He must have seen when he real this first affidavit that it is a mere declaration, and that it is not signed. It may have been signed, I do not say it was not; it may have been sworn to, but it bears no evidence of it here, and if he looks at about one-half of the other documents he will tind they are of a somewhat similar kind. I am not prepared to express an opinion as to the character or reputation of the men who signed the documents, because I know nothing about it. It is the first time I have known it beyond having seen the printed document contained in these papers last session, and handed chem to my friend from West Toronto, with the remark" Denison, what does this mean: it is a severe attack upon you.: I understand further that these papers were placed in the hands of an hon. gentleman who belongs to the Opposition, who after making enfuiry into their character refused positively to have anything to do with them. The result of that was that the hon. gentleman who is not in the House now, was reported to the Governor General ly the same man for dereliction of duty as a politician and as a member of the House of Commons. Further, I do not desire to continue this discussion, but I exceedingly regret it for the sake of the reputation of the House, and I think that my hon. friend from Brant (Mr. Somerville) will come to the same conclusion when he reflects. If he desired to make this attack upon a member of the House, if he will permit me to make at suggestion to him, it would have been much letter had he moved for all the papers, and they would have been brought down and laid on the Table. If it were then shown that the ofticers had been guilty of the charges laid against them, and that the Nilitia Department had not punished them as they would have deserved had they been formd guilty, then the hon. gentleman would not only have heon right in attacking the Government for a dereliction of duty, but he would have been justified in laying a charge of impropriety against the gentlemen who have been accuser. That is the course he should have pursued, and that is the course he would like to have pursued if he had been in a similar position to the gentlemen whom he did accuse, or had he been charged with any conduct unbecoming a member of Parliament or a gentleman. However, these are matters of taste. I donot pretend to lay any particular chaim to myself when I was in Opposition, of dealing very leniently with the Government, but yet I will say this: that while I pursued an aggressive course just as my friend from Brant (Mr. Somerville) does - and with that I find no fault whatever, because I like to see a man fight for what he deems to be right, and do his duty in Opposition if he does it squarely-yet when I was in Opposition, I always moved for papers, and had the facts before me before I attacked a political opponent. Sometimes I found myself wrong and other times right, and when I was right I never hesitated to push the sword to the hilt. I find no fault with the hon. gentleman for doing the same thing, but there is a proper way in which to do it in order that an hon. gentleman who is a member of this House shond have some little tair-play, and be forewarned of an attack upon him which would damm his reputation and render him unfit to sit in the Honse, if that which is charged against him were true. I am not going to criticise the hon. member for Kent, who ought to have been a third class lawyer if he is not one, being capable of turning a corner about as fast as any gentleman of the legal profes. sion or as a politician. He was quite right in freely criticising the department, the Government and the force. That is why these reports are laid before the House. Whether he was right in the comments he made on the force itself is quite another thing. That is what my hon. friend from South Norfolk objected to-not the criticisms or the opinions expressed by the MajorGencral. I am not prepared to say that I disagree altogether with what the hon. member for Kent has said in reference to the language used by the Major-General. I am convinced that many of the suggestions he has made, if carried out, would be highly in the interest of the force. The whole question is so broad in its character that when you begin to discuss the formation of these companies, their continued existence, the difficulties in keeping up the strength of the force, the great expense involved. and the time which the men have for making themselves etticient. you can scarcely womber that many changes continually ocemr, necessitating the filling up of the companies from the youncer men of the eomintry. fon cannot expect the ohler men to remain contimnously in the force. There are some who to my own knowledge have been in the force continuonsly ever since the Rehellion of $18: 37$; but, these are exceptions to the rule. Many men move away, of get tired of the service ; but they retain their interests in the force, as well as the knowlenge they have acquired of drill and military tactics, as long as they live ; so that although they may have retired, they are not lost to the country. While I do not care to see the smaller hoys in the force, I like to see the younger mententer it and remain in it for some years, until they hecome sufficiently acrpuainterl with the service as to be useful in case their services should be required. Fair amil legitimate criticism on subject.s of this kind I will comrt while at the head of the lepartment, because, no one man can know all the ditficulties commected with it. Many hom. gentlemen who speak on this subject consider it purely and simply from an economical standpoint, without any regard to the necessities of the force, while others ilo it from a wuch less laudable motive-.political. I tind no particular fault with that : it is the right of every member of Parliament to do so: : but hon. ofentlemen who take this position must not ise surprisel, that if those who do know what they are talking about are disposed to ridicule their statements when not warranted hy the facts of the reports lefore the House.

Mr. SPROULE. As the disenssion on this item has taken a wide range, perhaps 1 shall be pardoned if I say a few words with regarel to the military camps. The Diajor-diencral hats siven several instances wher money was mmecessarily used to transport men to a distance when they could perhaps be better aceommolated nearer at hamel. That is strictly in the line recommembed by the hon. member for North (irey (Mr. Masson) and myself last year and the year before, when we strongly ard vised that a portion of No. - - district should hold its camp at the town of Owen somal, where there is a splendid groumd on a high level, a good place for rifte ranges orerlooking the waters of the bay, and ample means of transport by both water and rail. If a large mumber of the men and horses helonging to No. 2 district had heen taken there insteal of to Niagara, a consideralle amomet of money would have heen saven, and might have been spent to the advantage of the force in other ways. I would like to draw the attention of the Minister to this subject again. No better place can be found in any part of northern Ontario for a camp than Owen souml: and if No. $\because$ district, on at least a part of that district and a part of the ad joining district, were taken there, consilerable money womld be sared.

Mr. MILLSS (Bothwell). I rise to say a word or two in reference to the observations mate by the
