smuggling has increased, and is increasing, largely, and that they require more officers to protect the revenue, then I say, that we ought to examine the question, whether the duty they are imposing on tobacco is not too high. In my opinion, it is too high. People pay more for their tobacco, and we get no more revenue. Besides that, I think it is not a fair principle to say, that a man who smokes tobacco should pay so high a tax. Good tobacco can be purchased for 25 cents a pound in bond; you put a duty of 33 cents a pound on that tobacco, equivalent to 156 per cent. It is unjustifiable to put that rate of duty on tobacco. They say, that tobacco is a luxury, and that we are justified in putting as high a tax on luxuries as we like. But tobacco is a necessity, as well as a hundred other things that people use. One man uses no tea; he prefers to drink water. Another man will not drink coffee; he prefers to drink water, while another man says: I do not take tea or coffee; I consider it necessary to life to have a smoke of tobacco. You make tea and coffee free and you put 156 per cent duty on tobacco. This is an unfair distribution of the taxes upon the people of the country. When the 25 per cent limit was reached, I think that was more than could be justified, but when you add to that 56 per cent, I think you are going quite beyond the limit, and experience has proved that you have to employ a large staff to protect the revenue, while you have a good deal more smuggling. Smuggling is demoralizing. They smuggle whisky and tobacco in. The smuggling of whisky is the greater evil, because it encourages the drinking habit amongst those who would not acquire it otherwise. In addition to that, you get the spirit of smuggling abroad. It exists particularly in the lower provinces from the Island of St. Pierre. You have a spirit of lawlessness prevalent, and you have the drinking habit acquired by those who would never have acquired that habit were it not for this liquor being smuggled in. In the case of tobacco, a large additional tax is imposed that the law-abiding people have to pay while the Government are reaping no benefit from the burden that is placed upon the people. I think the Government should reconsider their position in this matter. They should reduce the duty on tobacco. The expenses would naturally cut themselves down, because the hon. Minister of Inland Revenue would not require this enormous staff of detectives that are so absolutely necessary. I believe that the practice is spreading over the country and that it will spread; liquor will be brought from other places, tobacco will be brought in on account of the Government's high taxation. We thought that they were a Government who were going to abolish all taxes. They were free traders, I believe, in theory, and now we find them increasing the duties upon those articles that are luxuries to some and that are really necessaries to others. All those who use the weed find it a very pleasant article, but the Government are grinding those who use it beyond all reasonable limits. But the point is that the regulations should receive revision. The hon. Minister says: What do you propose to do? Well, I do not think that is fair.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. I would be glad to take the advice of any hon. gentleman.

Mr. WALLACE. I know that no one on that side of the House is more gracious in receiving proposals than the hon. Minister of Inland Revenue or more willing to pay attention to them. But we are busy members of Parliament; sometimes we are up all night doing our duty to our country; we have to attend committee meetings, we have to attend to our correspondence, so that we have not time to sit down and figure out a scheme for the Minister who has a capable and clever staff of assistants and who should promulgate his scheme for the consideration of Parliament.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. That is what he has done, but you will not accept it.

Mr. WALLACE. That is what he has done, but that is what we take objection to. My own experience has been similar to that of the hon. member for South Brant (Mr. Heyd), and the hon. member for Cape Breton (Mr. McDougall). We all see that these regulations are harassing and not effective in producing the results they are supposed to produce. I ask the hon. Minister to give his attention to the revision of these regulations so as to make them effective and less onerous upon the people.

Mr. McDUGALL. I would like to say a word in regard to one branch of the regulations to which I referred a few moments ago. The hon. Minister was kind enough to ask me for a suggestion. As my hon. friend from West York (Mr. Wallace) has stated, I think it is very unfair to ask this side of the House for suggestions as to how to improve on the present law. It is the duty of the Minister to suggest these things. I believe that we go far enough when we point out the inefficiencies of the law, the extent to which the present law fails to carry out its object and the extent to which it is an injury to the people who have to meet that law. In regard to one branch of these regulations I may say that my sympathy is very strongly with the small traders, stronger than it is with the people who are more largely engaged in the trade. For that reason I would make a suggestion here in regard to that class of small traders who find it inconvenient and, I may say, impossible, to keep their little stores in the country supplied with tobacco, and with such other articles as they are required to keep with their small means. To be compelled to do without tobacco or buy 25 pounds, which is the smallest package that is put up now of black plug tobacco, is a hardship upon them. I am not aware that there is any smaller package put up. If a preventive officer, or a detective, goes into one of these small trader's store and finds ten pounds of tobacco, he finds that tobacco without the original package, because the man who sold it had to keep the original package himself in order to carry out the law. He could not give the package to the man who bought ten pounds because he had the 30, or 40 pounds remaining, to sell to some other person and he had to keep the original package for that purpose. This is a hardship on the man who has fifty pounds of tobacco to dispose of, because he cannot have the custom of the small trader in the country who only wants ten pounds. I would suggest to the hon. Minister, as a better plan than the present one, and a plan that will work more conveniently with these small traders, that instead of making the small trader liable to the confiscation of that ten pounds of tobacco and to a fine because he cannot produce the original package and cannot produce any proof that the tobacco had paid duty, instead of having the law enforced as against the small trader, that the regulations should be changed in such a way as to let that small trader off when he produces an invoice sworn to, or a certificate from the person from whom he purchased the tobacco. If the officer who finds the document in the possession of the small trader, has any reason to doubt the correctness of the invoice, or the certificate, he has the option then to go to the man whose name appears on the invoice as having sold that ten pounds of tobacco, or whatever quantity it is, to the small trader. He can bring him into court and make him prove, under oath, whether or not he sold that tobacco. That is a regulation that might be somewhat difficult for the Government to carry out, but I venture to say that it would not be any more difficult to carry out than to go through the process, that they have to go through, to prove that a man in whose possession they find ten pounds of tobacco is guilty. If they take the course that the law requires they must subject the man, with whom they find ten pounds of tobacco, to the wrong of taking that tobacco from him and fining him besides.

I do not think there is any member of this House who will maintain that it is proper to have a law that operates so unfairly against the small trader who tries to do an honest business, in preference to some such law as I suggest. Many of these small traders know that they are violating the law, and the tobacco is put away perhaps when the officer comes around. If they could carry on their trade in a proper way there would not be half the fraud which now exists. We all know, as the Minister has admitted, that since the increase of the duty, smuggling is carried on to a greater extent than before. We have only to look at the increased number of people who are hauled up for smuggling to prove that. We find that those who try to carry on business honestly and under the law are not doing as large a business as they did when the duty was lower. If the Minister would adopt some suggestion as I have made, and also reduce the duty on tobacco to what it was before he raised it, he would find there would not be as much loss of revenue nor as much fraud as there is under the present system.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. I have in some places asked the storekeeper to make a solemn declaration where it appeared likely that he was in ignorance of the law. I have done everything I could not to apply the law harshly. My hon. friend said that the small storekeepers cannot buy large boxes of 25 pounds, but the law is perfectly clear that the manufacturers can put up packages of any size from 1 to 25 pounds.

Mr. McDOUGALL. But the smaller the package the greater the price.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. That is very natural. But in order to encourage the practice of putting the tobacco into small packages, we allow a drawback of five per cent on the value of the stamps used.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. member for West York (Mr. Wallace), and the hon. member for Cape Breton (Mr. McDougall) do not live on the frontier as I do, and they are not aware of the extent of the smuggling and the extent of the injury done by the Minister in increasing the tobacco duties, as I am. From Kingston to Montreal the storekeepers along the St. Lawrence and frontier, have practically lost their tobacco business. The people can cross on the ferry boat and by buying even fifty cents worth of tobacco they can save the cost of their fare. The retailers along the frontier have had to give up the tobacco business to the Americans. The Minister asks $15,000 of an increase, and it simply means that he is spending that amount in providing some of his friends with jobs, and taking the increased cost out of the consumers of the tobacco in Canada, who are largely the farmers. Let the Minister reduce the tobacco duties to what they were before, and then the smuggling will be done away with, and he will have no use for this large staff of preventive officers. It is largely tobacco that is being smuggled to-day. There are petty pedlars who cross the frontier, and buy two or three dollars worth of tobacco, and supply the Canadian farmers with it. I know several who are making a little money out of the business.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. Will you give me their names?

Mr. TAYLOR. No, I will not give you their names, because they are political friends and supporters of your own, and you would not interfere with them.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. I do not want dishonest men as my supporters.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Is it because they are Liberals that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Taylor) wants to shield them?

Mr. BAIN. That is too thin.

Mr. TAYLOR. I know that in my locality the men engaged in that business are supporters of the Government. This Government promised to reduce the duties on the necessaries of life, and tobacco is just as much a necessary of life to the farmers as tea and coffee. The hon. Minister increased the duty for the purpose of providing positions for his needy supporters as preventive officers, and these officers are simply interfering with the Canadian storekeepers and not preventing smuggling across the frontier. They may be taking a dollar at Cape Breton, where they are not close to the frontier, and where they would have to smuggle from Boston or St. Pierre. But with us any man may smuggle who pays 10 cents for a trip across the river. He can carry a supply of tobacco back in his pockets, and no one will interfere with him. If my hon. friend wants a suggestion that is practical, it is to put the duties back so that our Canadian merchants can compete fairly with American merchants, instead of offering a bonus to smugglers and then spending $15,000 this year more than he did last year in the preventive service to prevent smuggling. That is the solution and the only solution of the difficulty.

L. A. Frechette, for special translation.... $100

Mr. FOSTER. What is this for?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. We require some one to meet the technical difficulties of translation, in both English and French, in our pamphlets and circulars. We really need a man who is able to handle the two languages correctly.

Salaries of officers, inspectors, assistant inspectors of weights and measures... $46,860

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. I think I must make an explanation in this case. Since I have had the honour of being in charge of this department, I have worked with the hope of being able to make a considerable diminution in the expenditure. In 1896-97, the first year in which I was in charge of the department, the salaries for this service amounted to $56,850. For the last eight or ten years they have averaged about $56,000. In 1897-98, my estimates were reduced to $49,000, a reduction in one year of $7,500. In the following year I reduced them to $42,600.

Sir HENRI JOLY DE LOTBINIERE.

Mr. TAYLOR. I see you are going rapidly back again?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. This year I am asking for $46,860, which is still nearly $10,000 less than we asked for 1896-97. I find that I have been a little too greedy in my reductions.

Rent, fuel, travelling expenses, postage, stationery, &c., for gas and electric light inspection, including salaries in connection with the inspection of electric lighting and the purchase or repair of instruments $9,000

Mr. TAYLOR. I see that this item includes some items of stationery, among which the hon. Minister has purchased a book entitled: "Be Your Own Lawyer," or rather three of them—one for each department. I presume that is in the interest of economy, and I will not comment on it. I see that he has also purchased "The Administration of the Old Regime." I would like to ask the hon. gentleman if he is following in the footsteps of the old regime, and if that is the reason he wanted that treatise? I presume it is the regime of the late Government that is referred to.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It was got for the purpose of contrast.

Committee rose and reported progress.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding) moved the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to, and the House adjourned at 10.40 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

PRAYERS.

FIRST READING.

Bill (No. 145) to amalgamate the Ottawa, Arnprior and Parry Sound Railway Company with the Canada Atlantic Railway Company under the name of the Canada Atlantic Railway Company.—(Mr. Belcourt.)

PROVISIONS OF CHAP. 19, R.S.C.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER asked:

1. Has the Secretary of State, since 1898, caused to be prepared for the information of the Parliament of Canada, within fifteen days after the opening of every session thereof, a detailed statement of all bonds or securities registered under the provisions of chap. 19, R.S.C., and as required by the said provisions ?

2. If not, why not ?

3. If not, will he cause such statement to be laid before Parliament forthwith, covering the cases within the said statute of officers employed in the public service in the Yukon ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The answer to the first branch of this question is "Yes." The others consequently do not require answers.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Would the Prime Minister permit me to call his attention to the answer given by him, and which I know happens to be accurate. If the officer of the department looks, he will see that last session there was no such statement laid on the Table within the period named.

The PRIME MINISTER. The answer which I have given is certainly from the State Department.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I have no doubt. There has been a mistake somewhere.

The PRIME MINISTER. I will call the attention of the department to the remarks of my hon. friend (Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper).

MR. BUSBY—CUSTOMS OFFICER AT SKAGWAY.

Mr. TAYLOR (by Mr. Mills) asked :

Has Mr. E. S. Bresby, ex-president of the Protestant Protective Association, been appointed by the Government Canadian customs officer at Skagway ? If so, when was he appointed and what salary is he to receive ?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS (Mr. Patterson). No person by the name of Bresby has been appointed by the Government Canadian customs officer at Skagway. The only customs officer at present at Skagway is one Mr. Busby. Mr. Busby was for some time acting as Canadian customs officer at Boston and Portland, in the supervision of goods in transit to Canada, his salary being paid by the railway companies. On the 3rd May, 1899, he was transferred to Skagway to perform similar service there. His salary, which is $4.50 per day, is paid by the railway company. This amount includes his living expenses.

JOHN TANNER—CLAIM AGAINST SPANISH GOVERNMENT.

Mr. RUSSELL asked :

What progress has been made in the prosecution of the claim for outrages alleged to have been committed by officers or agents of the Spanish Government against John Tanner, mate of the schooner "Ida," at Porto Rico in 1897, and the claim of the owner of said schooner for her detention ?

151½

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). On the 18th January last a despatch was received from the Secretary of State for the Colonies to the effect that "After careful consideration Her Majesty's Government do not consider the case of John Tanner to be one in which a claim for compensation can be made upon the Spanish Government." This information was duly communicated to the parties interested. Nothing further has been heard from the Imperial authorities on the subject. In view of the foregoing, and in the absence of new facts, it is felt that any further representations would be useless.

POINTE CLAIRE WHARF.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. Has the wharf at Pointe Claire been entirely completed ?

2. If not, then is it the intention of the Government to finish the said wharf immediately ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Yes, the wharf proper is completed. There are repairs, however, required to the approach and shed to be built on the wharf. These will be attended to.

DISMISSAL OF W. A. GALLANT.

Mr. GANONG asked :

1. How long was N. A. Gallant engineer of Point Lepreaux fog-alarm ?

2. Has he been dismissed ; if so, when ?

3. Were any charges preferred against him, and if so, by whom ?

4. Was an investigation held, and if so, by whom ?

5. How long has he been paying superannuation, and how much has he paid in ?

6. Has he been allowed these payments with interest thereon ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). 1. 27 years. 2. Yes, by Order in Council of the 20th May, 1898. 3. The lighthouse and fog-alarm buildings were destroyed by fire owing to neglect of duty on the part of Mr. Gallant and complaints as to the fog-whistle not having been sounded on different occasions were made by pilots and Captain Cook, of the steamship "Springhill," and Captain Pike, of the SS. "State of Maine." Complaints also made of absence from duty without leave. 4. Yes, by F. J. Harding, agent of the department at St. John. 5. For twenty-seven years. Paid $105.52. 6. No.

MILITIA CLOTHING CONTRACT.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER asked :

1. What are the names of tenderers for the contract for clothing for the militia last received ?

(a) Whose tender was the lowest ?

(b) Who got the contract ?

(c) Has Mr. Mark Workman, of Montreal, a contract for clothing ?

(d) If so, what was his tender, and what were the amounts of other tenders, if any, for the same work?

(e) Who recommended him as fit and responsible person for the work, if any one?

(f) Is he a British subject by birth or naturalization?

(g) Is the Government aware whether or no Mark Workman operated his factory for seven days in the week in the execution of a Government contract?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Mr. Borden). 1. The names of the firms who last tendered for militia clothing are:

Messrs. W. E. Sanford Mfg. Co., Hamilton.
 " Marsolais & Monday, Montreal.
 " J. A. Seybold & Co., Ottawa.
 " W. & C. Silver, Halifax.
 " J. W. Peck & Co., Montreal.
 " H. Shorey & Co., Montreal.
 " Doull & Gibson, Montreal.
 " Mark Workman, Montreal.
 " Philip Jamieson, Toronto.

(a.) The department, when inviting tenders, stipulated they should be subject to the provisions respecting "sweating" contained in the contracts that would have to be signed. Two of the firms named above, Messrs. H. Shorey & Co., and Messrs. Doull & Gibson, notified the department before the tenders were opened and scheduled, that they would not sign a contract including the "sweating" clause; their tenders, therefore, were irregular, and were not entertained. Mr. Mark Workman's tender was the lowest for artillery cloth pantaloons, artillery cloth trousers, cloaks and great coats. Mr. Philip Jamieson's the lowest for shoulder pads, and Messrs. W. E. Sanford Manufacturing Co.'s the lowest for all the other descriptions.

(b.) The W. E. Sanford Manufacturing Company put in two tenders covering the same articles; one being the regular tender for a contract containing the "sweating" clause, and the other, an alternative tender for a contract omitting said clause. The latter tender being the lower. This company, however, addressed a letter to the department to the effect that if they were awarded not less than 64 per cent to 80 per cent of the whole value of the contract for which tenders were asked they would agree to accept the lower prices for most of the articles. On examination it was found that under this offer they would receive considerably over 64 per cent of the whole amount, and a contract was accordingly awarded to them. Messrs. W. E. Sanford Manufacturing Company, Mr. Mark Workman, and Mr. Philip Jamieson were awarded contracts.

(c.) Mr. Mark Workman, of Montreal, was awarded the contract for artillery cloth pantaloons, artillery cloth trousers, cloaks and great coats; his contract is being carried on satisfactorily.

(d.) The tenders for clothing furnished by Mr. Workman, were:

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER (Victor).

Names.	Art'y Cloth Pantaloons.	Art'y Cloth Trousers.	Cloaks.		Great Coats.
	$ c.	$ c.	$ c.	$ c.	$ c.	$ c.
Mark Workman	4 35	4 36	8 40	6 74
W. E. Sanford Mfg. Co.	4 45	4 42	8 60	6 80

John W. Peck & Co.		4 60
Philip Jamieson.		4 61½
Marsolais & Monday			9 20	6 85

(e.) No recommendation was required and no one recommended. The certified cheques accompanying all tenders are prima facie, sufficient guarantee of good faith.

(f.) The department is not aware whether Mr. Workman is or is not a British subject either by birth or naturalization.

(g.) The department is not aware that Mr. Mark Workman operated his factory for seven days in the week in the execution of a Government contract.

LACHUTE AND ST. ANDREWS RAILWAY.

Mr. T. CHRISTIE (Argenteuil) moved for:

Copies of all correspondence, contracts, reports, &c., in connection with the chartering of railway companies to build, construct and operate a line between Lachute and St. Andrews.

He said: In making this motion, I desire to call the attention of the hon. Minister of Railways and of this House to the fact that the people of St. Andrews are suffering a very substantial grievance, perhaps I should say a great wrong, in the fact that this railway, which has been largely subsidized, has not been operated for several years. In 1890 a subsidy of $22,400 was granted by the Dominion Parliament to a company on condition that it would build a railway from St. Andrews to Lachute, a distance of seven miles. It was especially agreed and stipulated that the road should be properly built, well equipped, and continuously operated. A subsidy of $36,750 was secured from the Quebec Government on the same condition, and the corporation of St. Andrews also contributed a bonus of $10,000. The road was built, partially equipped, and operated for a short time; but for reasons best known to the parties who were responsible for its operation, the road has not been operated for three or four years, and the people of St. Andrews have in consequence been subjected to great loss and inconvenience. They feel that they have been very badly used in this matter, and they now appeal to the Government, in the hope that the Government will interfere and see that justice is done to them. They feel that these parties which have received subsidies to the amount of $69,000 or $70,000, should be compelled to fulfil their obligation to operate the road. I hold in my hand the conditions of the agreement, which it is hardly necessary for me to take up the time of the House in reading. I may just read an extract to show exactly how the matter stands :

Now, this agreement witnesseth, that in consideration of the cash subsidy to be paid to the manner aforesaid, the Great Northern Railway Company covenants and agrees to and with Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, in the manner following, that is to say :

That the company shall and will well, truly and faithfully make, build, construct and complete a railway from St. Andrews, in the county of Argenteuil, in the province of Quebec, to the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, at the town of Lachute, seven miles in length.

That the company will, upon and after the completion of the said line of railway and works appertaining thereto, truly and faithfully keep the same, and the rolling stock required therefor, in good sufficient working and running order, and shall continuously and faithfully operate the same.

I also hold in my hand a letter from the mayor of St. Andrews, from which I will read a very short extract to show exactly how the people feel in reference to this matter :

Dr. Thos. Christie, M.P.

Dear Sir,—I have read your answer from the Minister of Railways and Canals, and I am surprised.

The sixth clause of the contract, of which I mail you a copy, says that the company, after completing the line, shall continuously and faithfully operate the same.

The Dominion Government granted powers to the Great Northern to build a railway from St. Andrews to Lachute ; they also chartered the Ottawa Valley Railway Company, and the Atlantic and Lake Superior, and they each in succession obtained control of the road, and by so doing led the people of St. Andrews to believe that those companies were composed of reliable men. In this faith the parish voted a bonus of $10,000, expecting that the Great Northern would fulfil their part and give us railway facilities, and you know how we have been treated. The amount is a heavy burden on the parish, and the people feel their position keenly, and we are looking to the Dominion Government to protect us. We know they have the power.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I will not further trespass upon the time of the House, as I am convinced that the Government will do all that can be done to remedy the grievance to right this great wrong ; but I will simply move for all the papers relating to the matter, seconded by Sir Henri Joly de Lotbinière.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). There will be no objection whatever to the adoption of this motion, but I would like to add a word or two in explanation of the situation, which may perhaps not be fully understood by the constituents of my hon. friend or that particular portion of it interested in this railway. The railway was, in the first place, constructed, with the assistance of the town of St. Andrews, by the Great Northern Railway Company, and one of the clauses of the contract provided for its continuous operation. Unhappily, however, some arrangements took place later between the Great Northern and the Atlantic and Lake Superior Railway Company, or the company which is now practically the Atlantic and Lake Superior, under which this piece of road was transferred to the latter. The road has not been operated for a very great while owing to the financial condition of the Atlantic and Lake Superior Company. That company is not in such a position that it can be compelled to carry out this clause of the contract, and by reason of the transfer to it, under the express authority of Parliament, it is doubtful whether the Great Northern Company could be compelled to execute what it contends has now ceased to be an obligation upon it. I have been obtaining the opinion of the Justice Department and doing everything possible to find a means of affording relief to the people in the locality. But down to the present I have not succeeded in satisfying myself that we have any means whatever of compelling the company which now owns the road to operate it. If the company had any means, or were at all responsible, there would be no difficulty, but unhappily they are not in that condition, and a good many localities, as well as St. Andrews, find themselves in a similar predicament. I do not think that any legal provision which could be inserted either in the subsidy Acts or the charter, would provide any remedy. However, my hon. friend is having these papers brought down, and if he or anybody else can suggest any means by which the Government can compel the railway company, which now own the road, to operate it, he will have every assistance on my part.

Motion agreed to.

WORKING EXPENSES, GOVERNMENT RAILWAYS.

Mr. FOSTER asked :

What were the working expenses of the Government railways for May and June, 1898, respectively under the several heads : Locomotive power, car expenses, maintenance of way and works, station expenses, general charges ? What is the same information in reference to the Inter-colonial division of the Government railways ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). The following are the figures :—

Working Expenses of Government Railways and Intercolonial Division of Government Railways for May and June, 1898.

Government Railways.

ENGINE AND CAR MILEAGE.

Mr. FOSTER asked :

Have returns or statements as provided for in the thirty-third clause of the agreement contained in the schedule to Bill 138 been made by the Grand Trunk Company to the Government or Department of Railways? If so, for what months, and where are these returns or statements kept on file?

Do these returns or statements show the combined engine and car mileage of the Intercolonial Railway trains and the total combined engine and car mileage running over each of the joint sections referred to in section 3rd of the above mentioned schedule?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). Returns and statements, under clause 33 of the agreement contained in the schedule to Bill 138, have been furnished the Department of Railways for all the months since the Montreal extension was opened, and are on file in the Department at Moncton, but such statements have not shown the combined engine and car mileage of the Intercolonial Railway and Grand Trunk Railway, respectively, over any of the sections, until the same was received on application to the Grand Trunk Railway on Thursday last by the department here at Ottawa. The statements on file at Moncton contain the accounts for each month, showing all payments made by the Grand Trunk Railway and amounts charged by the Grand Trunk Railway against the Intercolonial Railway. The statement received from the Grand Trunk Railway on Thursday last was for six months only.

MR. A. R. MACDONALD.

Mr. CASGRAIN (by Mr. McDougall) asked :

1. Was Mr. A. R. Macdonald, late assistant superintendent of the Intercolonial Railway, suspended by Mr. BLAIR.

2. If so, at what date was he suspended?

3. At what date were his services definitely dispensed with?

4. Was his salary paid to him while he was so suspended?

5. If so, what total amount was so paid to him for salary?

6. Was any further amount paid to him while he was so suspended, for travelling expenses, board, &c., and if so, how much?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). 1. Yes, Mr. A. R. Macdonald was suspended some time before his services were dispensed with. 2. He was suspended on the 24th of January, 1897. 3. His services were definitely dispensed with on December 31st, 1897. 4. His salary was paid him while suspended. 5. The amount of salary so paid him was $1,590.25. 6. $71.25 was paid him for travelling expenses and board.

Mr. CASGRAIN (by Mr. McDougall) asked :

1. Was an official investigation held into the conduct of Mr. A. R. Macdonald, late superintendent of the Intercolonial Railway, before his dismissal?

2. If so, by whom was it held?

3. How long did said investigation last?

4. Did the Government pay counsel representing Mr. Macdonald?

5. If so, by whom was he represented, and how much was paid such counsel?

6. How many witnesses were heard in the course of such investigation?

7. What total amount was paid by the Government to the witnesses?

8. What total amount was paid to the commissioner, J. E. Bédard, Esq., Q.C.?

9. Was the Department of Railways or the Government represented at such investigation by counsel, and if so, by whom?

10. What total amount was paid to such counsel?

11. What total amount was paid for stenographer's fees?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). 1. Yes, an official investigation was held into the conduct of Mr. A. R. Macdonald, late Superintendent of the Intercolonial Railway, before his dismissal. 2. It was held by J. E. Bedard, Esq., Q.C. 3. The investigation lasted sixteen and one-half days. 4. The Government paid counsel representing Mr. Macdonald. 5. He was represented by Mr. Charles Langeller, who was paid $120, and by Mr. L. B. Dionne, who was paid $40. 6. Ninety witnesses were heard. 7. The total amount paid to witnesses was $310.28. 8. The total amount paid J. E. Bedard, Esq., Q.C., was $408.36. The Department of Railways, or Government, were not represented by counsel at such investigation. 10. Therefore, nothing was paid. 11. The total amount paid for stenographer's fees was $82.50.

DUTIES UPON TOBACCO.

On the Order being called,

That, in the opinion of this House, the present high duties on tobacco should be reduced.—(Mr. Gillies.)

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I will have to ask my hon. friend (Mr. Gillies) to allow this to stand. A number of gentlemen wish to speak upon it, but they are not yet prepared to do so.

Mr. GILLIES. I do not object to the question standing, providing an opportunity be given me to bring it forward.

The PRIME MINISTER. Next Monday.

DISMISSAL OF WILLIAM D. McMILLAN, WOOD ISLAND, P.E.I.

Mr. ALEXANDER MARTIN (East Queen's, P.E.I.) moved for :

Copies of all correspondence, telegrams, petitions, reports and all other papers in connection with the dismissal of Mr. William D. McMillan as light-keeper at Wood Island, in the province of Prince Edward Island, and the appointment of his successor.

He said : I desire to say a few words with regard to this dismissal. Mr. McMillan was dismissed from his position in the fall of 1898. There had been an investigation in 1897. After the investigation was held, Mr. McMillan was kept in his position for over a year. It was assumed that, having been kept in his position that length of time, he would be continued in office, especially because, in dismissing Mr. McMillan, the Government practically dismissed their own appointee. Mr. McMillan's father was appointed to this particular lighthouse in the year 1876, under the Mackenzie Government. Though a strong Liberal he was continued in office by the Conservative party as light-house keeper, until his death in 1896. His son was appointed by the Liberal-Conservative Government to succeed his father. The son served faithfully and well as lighthouse-keeper, and gained high recommendations for efficiency in the discharge of his duties, including one from Commander Spain. Mr. McMillan was not an active politician ; he had only polled one vote in his life. Yet, forsooth, we have been told that he was dismissed for offensive partisanship. He was dismissed like others, all over Prince Edward Island, to make room for the heelers and followers of my hon. friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Sir Louis Davies) and his political friends, and I think it comes with ill-grace, after keeping this gentleman in office a year and three months after the investigation was held, to dismiss him. And that this widow and her son should be turned out of house and home in the fall of the year, at the approach of the inclement season, is a most shameless transaction. And I have reason to believe, from some correspondence which I have in hand, that Mr. McMillan's dismissal was owing to the fact that he would not yield to some pressure which was brought upon him at the local election of 1897 to vote for the Liberal candidates in his district and not for political partisanship. To prove that, I have here a letter from a gentleman living in Mr. McMillan's neighbourhood, dated Wood Island, P.E.I., January 10th, 1899 :

Dear Sir,—I would inform you of the use made of the Dominion Government patronage here previous to the last local general election. During that canvass one of the most active Grit agents told me to inform William D. McMillan, light-keeper at Wood Island, that if his office was worth anything to him he had better come out on the day of the election and give H. C. McDonald, the Liberal candidate, a shove. He said : "It makes no difference to me ; but I'll tell you that's just how it is." I informed him that William D. McMillan never polled a vote in his life at any local election, and that he did not have a vote. He then said : "You tell him to come out, and that will be made all right."

That is, his vote would be made all right, though he had no vote.

Now, sir, William D. McMillan did not go out to the election, and since then he was dismissed. Although his notice of dismissal did not state any reason for his dismissal, I take it he was dismissed because he did not take part in politics.

I presume that is the reason why he was dismissed. If not, how is it that when an investigation was held the year previous if found guilty of offensive partisanship, he was not then dismissed ? One year and a half later when pressure was brought upon him to vote in support of the Liberal party in the local election, he had the manliness to refuse, and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Sir Louis Davies) clubbed him, and off went his head. In this House the Minister of Marine and Fisheries said that he assumed the responsibility of the dismissal of Mr. McMillan. But if the hon. gentleman would allow me to read some correspondence which he had with some of his (Mr. McMillan's) friends down in that province, I think I could show this House that he did not remove Mr. McMillan on his own responsibility, but that he placed the responsibility of his dismissal upon other shoulders altogether, in fact, he placed the responsibility on the shoulders of the Liberal candidate himself in whose interest Mr. McMillan was asked to vote. So it appears that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries had to succumb to the entreaties of the candidate for whom Mr. McMillan refused to vote, he had to accede to the entreaties of Messrs. H. C. McDonald and George Forbes, the candidates who were running their election there in 1887. I have letters here showing that the answer he gave this House that he assumed the whole responsibility, was contrary to the facts. But these letters are marked private, as it appears to be usual with members of the Government to mark letters now in order to cover up some doubtful transaction; but if the hon. gentleman will allow me to read some of them, of which I have a copy, they would prove what I have stated, that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries did not shoulder the responsibility himself, but that he placed it on the shoulders of others. I think this is a case of peculiar hardship. There is, besides, this interesting features in regard to the matter. The gentleman who was appointed to succeed Mr. McMillan. I think I am correct in saying, is over 60 years of age, and the Minister has evidence in his department to show that. I do not know if the rules of the department permit a gentleman over 60 years of age to be appointed a lightkeeper, and, under these circumstances, I do not think he can continue that gentleman in his position.

Mr. COCHRANE. Why do you not read the letters?

Mr. MARTIN. Those letters being marked private, unless I have the consent of the hon. gentleman, I do not feel myself at liberty to read them, but if he gives me liberty to read them, I will do so. I may say that intense feeling has been created in that part of the province by the action of the hon. gentleman. I am sure that his friends down there do not approve of his turning a poor woman and her son out on the roadside in the month of September or October, without anything under heaven to shelter them. I am sure that the hon. gentleman himself must be by this time ready to reinstate Mr. McMillan in his office, and I think he will to some extent redeem himself in the eyes of all right thinking people if he does so. I may say that this is on a par with another dismissal the hon. gentleman has made. Not far from Wood Island there is another lighthouse where the hon. gentleman proceeded in a similar way, and in that case also put a woman and her son out on the road, and in that case also he did it in order to give the position to a friend of his own, to a gentle-

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. member will try to keep to the question raised.

Mr. MARTIN. I am trying to do so, Mr. Speaker, I am trying to follow a line of argument to show that this dismissal is on a line with some other dismissals which have been made in that province, and that they have not been made because of offensive partisanship at all, but in order to provide situations for the heelers of the hon. gentleman, who had raised high expectations in the minds of his followers and his heelers, and when his party got in, he had not places for half of them. In this case, and in some other cases, he has done things which I am sure that he would not do in his sober moments, unless he was pressed very closely by his political camp followers. In order to show that in making these dismissals he was moved with a desire to make room for his heelers, I have only to allude to the appointment of the captain of the dredge "Prince Edward." A competent official who had been in charge of that dredge for some years, was discharged merely to make room for a gentleman who had been useful to the party during the general elections, and the only qualification he had to succeed Captain McDonald on that dredge was that he had been the petitioner in an election petition against Mr. Hackett, who sat in the House for some time. I will read an extract to show the qualification of the successor of Captain McDonald, taken from the evidence taken at the trial of the petition in the case of Mr. Hackett. Here is a question put by one of the lawyers, Mr. Quarrie, to William Sharp Larkins, who is Captain McDonald's successor on the dredge "Prince Edward":

Did you get any whisky for distribution at the last elections?

A. I got a barrel at the station, in Tweedie's name, at Alberton. I got it by an order endorsed to me. Came to order. I took it home, marked "groceries." I cannot say Tweedie requested me to take it to my place. Whisky in the package—3 to 5-gallon kegs—might be 10 gallons. I took this to Tweedie's. This was in May—I think early in May. I delivered it in 48 hours.

It did not take long to get rid of those ten gallons of whisky.

Mr. SPEAKER. I would really like the hon. gentleman to say how this particular election trial is connected with this particular dismissal, because we must confine our debates, especially at this stage of the session, as nearly as we can, within the proper rules of the House. It will not do for the hon. gentleman to go all over the island.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. Speaker, I am merely showing that these dismissals are made in the interest of the party heelers in Prince Edward Island. These followers of the party in Prince Edward Island were led to believe that when the Liberal party came into power every one of them would get a position—

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman, when called to order, must pay some respect to the ruling of the Chair.

Mr. MARTIN. I bow to the ruling of the Chair. As your ruling, Mr. Speaker, is that I must stick more closely to the question, I may say further that a dismissal had been made under that hon. gentleman (Sir Louis Davies) of the light-keeper at Fish Island.

Mr. SPEAKER. Is that this case?

Mr. MARTIN. No; but they are nearly similar cases.

Mr. SPEAKER. I am sure the hon. gentleman perfectly understands that this is out of order.

Mr. MARTIN. All I have to say, Mr. Speaker, is that I bow to the ruling of the Chair. I am not anxious to take up unnecessarily any of the time of the House. All this session, and in other sessions, I have abstained, as much as possible, from going into discussion of these questions. I had expected that the demands of the followers, in Prince Edward Island, of the hon. gentleman who has charge of that department (Sir Louis Davies), would be lessened, and that these dismissals would cease. I find, after two years of the party being in power, it is breaking out again, and that these followers in Prince Edward Island are urging the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries to make more dismissals. After the statement which I have made in regard to the dismissal of Mr. McMillan, I think the only way he can adopt to put himself right is to reinstate Mr. McMillan. As you say, Mr. Speaker, if I were to go over all the dismissals in Prince Edward Island—

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. All the shady ones.

Mr. MARTIN. All the shady ones—it would take up a great deal of the time of the House indeed, and with these few remarks, I will conclude, trusting that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries will reconsider this cold-hearted dismissal of an efficient public servant, whose only sin appears to be that he could not vote for the Liberal candidates in the provincial election of 1897.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). Mr. Speaker, I need not say that there is no objection to bringing down these papers; I would only be too glad to bring down the papers. They will show substantially the information given by me to the House on the 1st of May, when the hon. gentleman put a question to me relating to the dismissal of Mr. McMillan. The hon. gentleman evidently felt that he had no case against the Government, or he would have confined himself to the discussion of this case, and not have wandered away to other cases in the hope of making a case in reference to other dismissals. There was no attempt to arbitrarily dismiss McMillan. An investigation was properly held, evidence taken, and he himself refused to make any statement on oath with the view of contradicting any statement made against him. The commissioner who investigated the case found him guilty of the charges.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. What were the charges?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Offensive partisanship, canvassing against the Government and using offensive language towards the Premier.

Mr. FOSTER. Against the local government?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, it had nothing to do with the local government. He was charged with offensive political partisanship, attending caucus meetings of his own party, and denouncing the Liberal party.

Mr. BERGERON. Is that enough?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. He attended caucus meetings of his own party; he was guilty of offensive partisanship and canvassing against the Liberal party. I was sorry to dismiss him, but there was nothing left for me to do. He refused to give evidence. However, I will be glad to bring the papers down, and the hon. gentleman (Mr. Martin) will see, I am sure, that I am not to blame in regard to the matter. The hon. gentleman speaks of his dismissal because he would not yield to some pressure in local matters. This is the first I ever heard of it, and I beg to say, so far as the local government were concerned, they never mentioned the case to me.

Mr. MARTIN. Will the hon. gentleman state whether this dismissal, for which he assumes responsibility, was made on the recommendation of the Attorney General of the province, and of Mr. George Forbes, the candidates for whom Mr. McMillan refused to vote.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I will bring down all the papers which the hon. gentleman asked for. I assume the responsibility of recommending the dismissal of Mr. McMillan. I have to do that. It was on my recommendation that my colleagues acted. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries assumes the responsibility. The papers will be brought down, and they will show the hon. gentleman what the facts were and whether or not it was one of those cases in which I was justified.

Mr. FOSTER. Are you going to have some more Estimates ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes, I think so.

Mr. FOSTER. We will take it up then.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries whether he has departed from the rule which obtained in the Department of Marine and Fisheries for many years, in my time, respecting the age at which lighthouse-keepers may be appointed. I understand the man who was appointed to succeed this lighthouse-keeper was something about sixty years of age. For obvious reasons in connection with the safety of life, or with the assistance of ships in distress, at that time or in the future, the rules of the service required a man to be forty years of age unless under extraordinary circumstances, and I would like to ask the hon. Minister whether that rule has been departed from.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. There has been no departure from that very proper rule, and I have had, in many cases, to decline nominations sent to me of gentlemen beyond that age.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Was this man sixty years of age ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not know. In this case, the papers came back showing him to be of a proper age, and when my hon. friend (Mr. Martin) brought to my attention the fact—or I do not know that it was not before he brought my attention to the fact—that he was said to be beyond that age, I had an investigation into the matter. I am not sure whether the investigation was reported or not, but, so far as the department is concerned, it was reported to us that the age was correctly given, and an investigation is now being held into that.

Mr. MARTIN. Has not the Minister the information in the department ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I may ; I will look and see.

Motion agreed to.

TORONTO AND GEORGIAN BAY SHIP CANAL COMPANY.

Mr. N. CLARKE WALLACE (West York) moved for :

Copies of all petitions, applications, correspondence, charter and reports with reference to the Toronto and Georgian Bay Ship Canal Company.

St. LOUIS DAVIES.

He said : Now that attention is being revived in the question of our inland navigation, the people of Ontario are beginning to take a lively interest in this matter. Twenty-five years ago the Government intimated that until the Welland and St. Lawrence Canal system was deepened from nine or ten feet on the water sills to fourteen feet, they would not pay attention to other proposed canal routes. That scheme is now about being completed, and next year will see a depth of water of fourteen feet from the upper lakes via the Welland and St. Lawrence canals to the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the Atlantic Ocean. We know that the freight from the western United States in which we have a lesser interest, and the freight from Manitoba and our own North-west in which we have a vital interest, has increased enormously, year after year, for the past twenty years. Twenty-five years ago there was no expectation that there would be such an enormous product of grain and cattle from our own North-west Territories, and indeed at that time the estimates made, applied only to the products of western Ontario and the products of the United States. To-day we find that our own western provinces are producing an enormous quantity of grain, cattle and other products, and we find to our dismay, so to speak, that these products are being carried to the English markets by the United States routes. We claim that we have the shortest, the most direct, and the most natural route, but, because we have not availed of these advantages, either from lack of enterprise or other reasons, we find that not only are American products, but that a large portion of our own North-western Canadian products are being shipped to Buffalo and Ogdensburg, and thence by the Erie Canal or by rail to New York for export to Europe. We believe that if the country takes proper steps we can secure a large portion of that freight for our Canadian route. That idea prevailed years ago when the project of the Huron, Ontario Canal, or the Toronto and Georgian Bay Ship Canal was a live question. But until the Welland and St. Lawrence Canal system was improved and until railroads were built, this project had to take a back seat. Of course we know that railroads are of prime necessity as they reach all parts of the country, and so are better calculated to develop the resources of the Dominion generally. We are now, however, coming to another era in the transportation history of this country, and these schemes that were set aside a quarter of a century ago, are now looming up as practical subjects. This scheme to which reference is made in my motion of a canal or ship railway purposes to cross a narrow neck of land 70 or 80 miles from the Georgian Bay into Lake Ontario by the direct route, or 122 miles on the old route of the Georgian Bay Ship Canal coming up the river and through Lake Simcoe and down a rather circuitous route. If that were constructed there would be only 40 miles of a canal required as there is about 80 miles of waterway of sufficient depth, or nearly sufficient depth, now in existence. Since that ship canal was first proposed science has made great advances. They have improved the system of hydraulic lift lock to such an extent, that it is said, that this project could be carried out for about half the cost it would have entailed twenty-five years ago. A later scheme, however, has loomed up in this ship railway which has received the endorsement of eminent engineers. Mr. Kivas Tully, of Toronto, who was engineer for the Ontario Government for many years; an eminent hydraulic engineer, a man of great ability, has made a report in which he gives his full endorsement to the scheme of the ship railway, by which vessels would be carried on a specially constructed railway from the Georgian Bay to Lake Ontario and vice versa. This scheme would be less expensive than a canal, because in the construction of a canal there is the height of land to be reckoned with, but even that would not be such an expense as should deter Canadians from going into the enterprise, because recent inventions which have been successfully carried out in England and elsewhere have made the cost of such work comparatively inexpensive. Mr. Tully in his report estimated the cost of the canal, for vessels of 1,000 tons burden at $22,170,000. But that has now given way to the project of a ship railway which Mr. Tully at present advocates, and with regard to which he says:

In 1885 the question of a ship railway between Lake Ontario and Georgian Bay was submitted by me to Captain Eades, and his reply was as follows:—

"I have carefully examined the profile and route for the proposed ship railway from Georgian Bay to Toronto, and from the information you gave me personally, and from the result of your surveys over the route, I am not only satisfied that the ship railway is entirely practicable over it, but that it furnishes one of the most remarkably favourable locations for such a construction of which I have any knowledge. The grades are very low, and you will be able to secure a practically straight line from end to end, which will enable you to work the line with a degree of economy which will surprise the public. I should think, from Mr. Corthell's investigations of the cost of transportation on the Pennsylvania and New York Central Railroads, that from 15 to 20 cents per ton would cover the entire cost from lake to lake."

That is the opinion of a gentleman who is now dead, but who had the reputation of being the most successful and most able of all the great hydraulic or canal engineers. There was a charter procured from this Parliament in 1874 by Mr. David Blain, then member for West York, for the construction of such a railway from the Georgian Bay to Lake Ontario. In 1897, the time was extended to 1902. According to the provisions of the Act, power was given "to construct one or more tracks of railway for the purpose of carrying passengers and freight and conveying vessels, barges and other water craft and their cargoes from the upper lakes to Lake Ontario, in the vicinity of Toronto." The cost of a single track, Mr. Tully says, would be $3,000,000, and the distance between Collingwood and Toronto 74 miles. They proposed further on to build three tracks when the business would warrant it. This project, if successful—and we have the opinion of these men that it would be successful—would create a revolution in the transportation of the merchandise of the west, and provide a route through Canadian territory, which is what we all desire to have. With regard to other lines of transportation that are proposed, I have nothing to say, only this, that before an Ottawa ship canal would be completed and made useful, the probabilities, in fact, the certainties, are that the trade of the North-west would have so increased, doubled and quadrupled, that there would be more than ample trade to fill all these lines of communication, and to make them all successful, if they could be made a success. This scheme, with its short route of 74 miles, would shorten the distance from Chicago to the ocean, either at New York or at Montreal, by at least 370 miles. In fact, this estimate was made on the calculation of a ship canal which would be 48 or 50 miles longer than this; so that there would be an actual shortening of the route by 418 miles, which would give an enormous advantage to vessels going this way. I think the matter is one that should engage the attention of the Government, now that they are considering schemes for the development of the country—now that they are more especially claiming to develop the waterways and the railways so as to procure the carriage of our own freight through our own country to our own ocean ports. I think that we in the past have not, perhaps, realized the full importance of this question, or, if we have, we have not been able to accomplish as much as we would desire. This ship railway, if completed for that short distance of 74 miles, shortening the distance to the ocean by 418 or 420 miles, and giving a through route by a line that could be completed in a short time, unlike some of these others that would require almost a lifetime to complete them and make them effective, would, I think, especially commend itself to the people of this country. We are told that the Government are anxious to increase the transportation facilities. We know that the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) has gone round to every place in the country which he could reach, and has told the people that he is anxious to give them every kind of facility they could think of or desire, and that he would help every scheme everybody proposed. This is a scheme that would not commend itself to him, I suppose, because it is a practical scheme—one that has the commendation of engineers of the highest authority, and one that will promote, and rapidly promote the development of the country if it can be accomplished. I therefore move the motion.

Motion agreed to.

BET-ROOT SUGAR PRODUCTION.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey) moved :

That having regard to the large importations of sugar into Canada for home consumption, amounting to 239,670,038 lbs. in the year 1898, at a cost of $4,868,956, and that it has been demonstrated beyond a doubt that the cultivation of the sugar beet in the Dominion is not only feasible but is being successfully grown in many parts of the country at present; therefore, in the opinion of this House, in order to stimulate the farmers of Canada to engage in the growth of this valuable product, and also to encourage the establishment of beet-root sugar factories, a bounty should be offered for all beet-root sugar manufactured in the Dominion during the next ten years, and that the machinery necessary for such plant not made in Canada be admitted free of duty.

He said: Mr. Speaker, in my opinion, it is the duty of the Government to so direct and assist the pursuits of the people that they may be as far as possible self-sustaining and labouring for each other. I think that that is the first duty of any Government in any civilized country, because when this is done, not only will labour be economized, but be as far as possible self-sustaining. Whenever the products of the country from any source enable the people to utilize their labour so that one is working for the other, the people will be kept employed and obtain productive remuneration for their labour, and if it can be shown that a new industry is capable of being established in the country, which will give profitable employment to labour it is the part of wisdom to give that industry every assistance in our power. It is a proposition no one will reasonably deny that it is the duty of the Government to, as far as possible, give assistance to every industry in the country that will employ labour profitably in the interests of the people. That being the case, when we find that the annual consumption of sugar in Canada is about 150,000 tons a year, nearly all of which is brought from abroad, when we find that the nature of our climate and the productiveness of our soil are such as to enable Canadians to employ their time and labour profitably in growing beets for the manufacture of sugar and supplying sugar for the needs of the people at home, it must be admitted that it is the bounden duty of the Government to give that industry every encouragement. There are about $13,000,000 worth of sugar consumed annually in Canada. I assume that if we should succeed in satisfying the Government, especially the hon. Minister of Agriculture

Mr. WALLACE.

(Mr. Fisher), that this sugar could be profitably made in Canada, providing the Government give a little assistance to the industry, there can be no doubt as to the wisdom of giving that assistance.

The question may fairly be asked: Are the soil and climate of Canada suitable for the successful growth of the sugar beet of average good quality? And then comes the question: Will the beet yield sufficient sugar to keep up the industry? For the purpose of answering these questions, I shall take up a pamphlet, which I have before me, written by Mr. Robert H. Lawder, who has given more attention to this subject than any other man in Canada. He has been endeavouring, by every possible means in his power, to promote that industry, and succeeded in getting the Government to commence the experiment of raising beets in the country and having the beets analysed, to determine whether the percentage of sugar they yield will warrant the industry being gone into. I take up that pamphlet, and may say here that I feel extremely grateful to the writer, because there is a great deal of information contained in it that could not have been available to me had he not kindly furnished me with everything in his possession bearing on the subject.

Have the experiments already made been such as to justify the statement that beets can be grown successfully here and that they contain a sufficient percentage of sugar to justify their growth? Let me give a synopsis of the reports of the Department of Agriculture, which show that during the years 1889, 1890 and 1891 experiments were made in the cultivation of sugar beets in the different sections of the province of Ontario, average samples of which were forwarded to the laboratories at the Experimental Farm at Ottawa and the Ontario College Farm at Guelph for analysis by the professors of chemistry. Among other experiments the Ontario agricultural experimental farm cultivated one acre of sugar beet in each of these years. In 1889, Mr. C. C. James, a professor of chemistry, analysed and reported on 26 samples obtained from the farm there and from different parts of the province. In 1894 he reported on 117 samples. In 1891, his successor, Mr. A. E. Shuttleworth, analysed and reported on 32 samples. Nearly the whole of the expense of distributing and collecting and analysing the roots was defrayed from the liberal grants of money obtained through Hon. Chas. Drury, Minister of Agriculture to the province of Ontario.

The result is shown by the following table, which gives separately the average for 1889, 1890 and 1891, and the average of these three years together. In 1890 the 26 samples analysed show that the beets averaged two pounds two ounces, which is a fair size. They gave 18.95 per cent solids in juice, which is a high average, and 14.35 per cent sugar in juice, and sugar is successfully made in many countries where the average is between 11 and 12. The average 75.70 purity of juice.

The following table gives separately the averages for 1889, 1890 and 1891, and the average of these three years together:—

	Number of Samples.	Average Weight.		Solids in Juice.	Sugar in Juice.	Purity of Juice.
		Lbs.	Oz.	p. c.	p. c.	p. c.
Average of results for 1889.....	26	2	2	18.95	14.35	75.70
" " 1890.....	117	1	4	17.12	13.58	79.32
" " 1891.....	32	2	2.8	16.76	13.53	80.35
	175	1	13.6	17.61	13.82	88.46

Following this, Mr. Lawder gives a table showing similar averages of the Ontario experimental farm product, comparing these averages with the Ontario average, in which the Ontario Experimental Farm product is included:

	Number of Samples.	Average Weight.		Solids in Juice.	Sugar in Juice.	Purity of Juice.
		Lbs.	Oz.	p. c.	p. c.	p. c.

Mr. Lawder proceeds to say:

The analysis of this year's product sustains the conclusion of former analyses, that the percentage of sugar in Ontario would, under proper cultivation, be as high as in Europe.

In support of his conclusion, there was a three years' average of 16.01 per cent sugar in juice, with a purity of 83.27, in the Ontario Experimental Farm product, grown under proper cultivation; and the Ontario average was 13.53 per cent in 1891, against 13.58 in 1890, of sugar in juice, with 80.35 in 1891 against 79.32 in 1890, purity.

In regard to the yield per acre, there is difficulty in obtaining reliable data. Calculation for one or two areas are not satisfactory. In the Ontario Experimental Farm, the average, 19.9 tons per acre, may be calculated as possible; the lower average for the province being due chiefly to non-compliance with some of the conditions of cultivation, indicated by the large beets and the great amount of green matter on many of the samples shown.

In looking over the averages from other countries, I find that it is very much lower than this. If I may be permitted to cite a few facts in regard to the way these experiments are carried out, it will give the idea that suitability of soil and climate are not confined to one section alone. I find here that the first experiment was carried on at Dunnville, the second at Deseronto, the third at Dunnville, the fourth at Stratford, the fifth sixth and seventh at Goderich, the eighth, ninth and tenth at Hastings, the eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth at Oshawa, the eighteenth, nineteenth and twentieth at Harwood, the twenty-first, twenty-second and twenty-third at Plainfield, the twenty-fourth at Cobourg, the twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth at Peterborough, the twenty-seventh at Marden, the twenty-eighth at Guelph,—and so I could go over the whole list and show that these experiments were carried on at places scattered all over the province of Ontario.

Mr. PRIOR. Any in British Columbia?

Mr. SPROULE. I have no figures here respecting experiments in British Columbia, but know that that province does raise fine beets. In all parts of the province of Ontario and in many parts of the province of Quebec, where the experiments have been carried on, it has been demonstrated beyond the possibility of doubt, that beets can be grown of average size, of good quality. The average yield per acre is between eleven and fifteen tons—probably twelve and a half tons per acre is a fair average. The percentage of sugar in these beets is over 13½, which is higher than in Germany, where it does not go beyond 12 per cent. The purity of the juice in the Canadian beets, an average of 83 per cent, is higher than in Germany, where the average is 79 per cent. In every one of these experiments it is shown that the beets raised in Ontario and Quebec are as valuable for the production of sugar and afford the growers as reasonable a hope of a profitable return for their labour as is the case in any other country. Now, with regard to the yield of beets in Ontario, the experimental farms showed a yield of over 18 tons, and, in one case, 19 tons per acre. Some individual farmers raised as high as 15½, 16½ and 17 tons. Considering that our yield per acre is greater, that the percentage of sugar is higher, and the quality of the juice better, it seems plain that our farmers could engage as successfully as the Germans in the cultivation of this crop. And there are other reasons why we should be more successful than the Germans. The land engaged in the cultivation of the beets in Germany is worth about $10 per acre per year of rent, whereas in Ontario it would not be worth more than from $2.50 to $3.50 per acre. While human labour is cheaper in Germany than with us, it is found that the great expense in the cultivation of the fields is in the use of animals—horses—and the work of horses can be had here more cheaply than it possibly can be in Germany. The probability of success here is indicated by the fact that while in Germany they can sell their grain at higher prices than we can and raise quite as much per acre, they abandon the cultivation of grain and turn attention largely to the cultivation of the sugar beet. Why is this? Because the beet gives them more than double the returns for their labour that would be yielded if they devoted themselves to the cultivation of grain. I have here some facts and statistics with regard to the cultivation of the sugar beet in Germany:

Germany furnishes the most complete statistics of the beet sugar industry that are obtained from any country. It is not only the largest but the cheapest producer, and affords reliable data for comparison as to the cost of beet sugar as compared with cane.

I may say that a memorial was sent to the Minister of Agriculture asking him if he would recommend to Council that assistance be given to this industry, and one of his reasons for refusing, as I understand, was that we could not compete with those making cane sugar. The following are some of the statistics of this industry, for the campaign—that means the season of 1897-98:—They had

Mr. SPROULE.

402 factories in operation. The area of beets under cultivation was 1,092,935 acres; the quantity of beets worked in tons of 2,204½ pounds, was 13,697,891. They produced, of sugar, 1,852,857 tons. The quantity of beets worked for factory was 31,723 tons. The weight of beets required for 100 pounds of sugar was 738 pounds. Yet the Ontario beets will turn out more than that. The quantity of sugar obtained from a ton of beets was 298 pounds, the percentage of sugar obtained being 13.53. Ontario, as I have said, has shown a percentage as high as 17½ and an average of 14½ per cent. The cost per acre of beets and manufacture of sugar was $73, and the cost of all the sugar produced at the factory was $79,784,255. Now, this shows most plainly that they could not employ their labour in that country to better advantage than in carrying on that industry, and the result is that they have gone into it to the large extent that I have already mentioned. I find that this industry is being transplanted to this continent. In the United States they have ascertained that their country is suitable for this culture and they commenced business there a few years ago. The report of Dr. H. W. Wiley, to the Secretary of Agriculture, which he gave a short time ago, shows the total quantity of beet sugar made in the United States in 1897 to have been 45,245,835 tons. The average yield of sugar per ton of beets of 2,000 pounds, was 232 pounds, which is below what it is in Germany where they are manufacturing beet-root sugar successfully. The average percentage of sugar in other places is 11.6, while ours runs as high as 13.53. The report goes on to say:

This is a less percentage than is obtained in Germany (12.84 in 1897-98), but considering the newness of the industry in this country, it is sufficiently encouraging. Reliable information shows that there will be in operation in the United States, in 1898, 17 factories, new factories being located: In Utah, 1; California, 4; Oregon, 1; Michigan, 1; New York, 1. It is safe to say that at least 80,000 acres will be planted in beets during the season of 1898. The yield may be expected to be nearly 8,000,000 tons and of sugar about 90,000 tons. The enlargement this season is not less than 70 per cent.

That is what they are doing in the United States. I may state that experiments have been carried on in Manitoba also, and the climate and soil were found to be admirably adapted for the cultivation of the sugar beet, the same as they are in Ontario. I believe it may be taken for granted that any land that will grow turnips will grow sugar beets also. We have been growing sugar beets so many years in Ontario that every person knows that to be a fact. I may say that at the present time there are hundreds of farmers actually growing sugar beets in Ontario, to feed them to their cattle and their swine, as well as for other purposes. This year I know some farmers who have one, two, and even three acres in sugar beets, and year after year they find this one of the most successful roots that they can cultivate.

The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) wished to be satisfied whether we can grow sugar beets and manufacture sugar from them and compete successfully with cane sugar. Now, I take the following countries where they have been making sugar from cane. I find in Java it costs £8 12s. 6d. per ton; Sandwich Islands, £8 4s. 4d.; Queensland, £8 15s.; Egypt, £9 10s. 11d.; Barbados, £9 15s.; Trinidad, £10 19s. 11d.; Demerara, £12 18s. 10d.; French Antilles, £14 6s. 9d. In Robisdorf, Germany, where beet-root sugar has been successfully cultivated, it only costs £9 6s. 3d., which is lower than in any one of these countries except the first three. These figures prove that beet-root sugar can be made successfully and compete successfully with cane sugar that is made in any other part of the world. In countries where they have been manufacturing cane sugar they are now turning their attention to growing beets, and find it more successful to make beet-root sugar; they find the profits are quite as large and in most cases larger than they have received from the manufacture of cane sugar. Now, when we come to examine the United States where they are making beet-root sugar, we find they are succeeding very well. There is no doubt that their experience has justified them in going into that industry in many states. I find in a publication in Michigan, called the "Sugar Beet," of January, 1889, the following facts:—

The Wolverine Sugar Company, of Benton Harbour, capital $200,000, has been incorporated. Prominent in the localities where arrangements are being made for the erection of factories are: Bay City, Pontiac, Benton Harbour, Cairo, Mount Clements, Rochester and Saginaw. In most of these places contracts have been made with farmers for large crops of sugar beets. Monroe, Lapeer, Ann Arbor, East Tawas, Richmond, St. Clair, Alma, Detroit, Port Huron, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, Wayne, Utica, Flushing, Sebawaing, Ypsilanti, Owosso and Sad Axe also are agitating for factories. Farmers seem to realize more and more that they must have some other crop than the staple product. It is stated in the press that Bay City had to canvass ten counties last season to obtain sufficient acreage of beets for the season's operations, but this season can better obtain their full supply from the county in which the factory is located.

In New York they have two factories, one at Rome and one at Binghamton. They are also starting factories in several other localities in New York. In Oregon they are agitating for several factories there. In Illinois they are building two factories at the present time. In Nebraska they have two factories in operation, and are thinking about several others. In New Mexico they have one in operation.

It gives the history of these factories. In Wisconsin they are preparing to erect four or five factories at the present time. In Minnesota they have erected some, and are erecting more. In Iowa they are preparing to erect two factories. I find from this statement generally that the business is going on rapidly in almost every part of the United States. I will give you the results of the operations of one factory in Watsonville, California, which has been going on for some length of time. I may mention that the operations in California are no more successful than they are in Michigan, right across the border from Ontario. During the ten years from 1888 to 1897 the total number of acres cultivated was 57,238—I am now speaking of Watsonville, California. In 1888, 2,100 acres were in cultivation; in 1891, 1,443 acres; in 1896, 11,017 acres. Now, the average number of acres in those years was only 572, and the average yield per acre was 10.84 tons, which is a low average. The smallest yield per acre was in 1890, 6.13, and the largest was in 1896, 14.6. In this country the yield has reached as high as 18 tons per acre. The average price paid for beets was $4.47 per ton. The lowest price paid was in 1896, $4 per ton; the highest price was $5 per ton. The average price paid per acre for beets was $49.58. Now, that was given for the purpose of enabling the farmer to determine whether he can profitably cultivate beets for $49.58 an acre. The experiment made in California justifies the conclusion that there will be an average return to the farmer of between $50 and $60 per acre from the cultivation of these beets, taking into account the percentage of sugar in the beet, the yield of beets, the number of tons and the success of the cultivation. The campaign began on August 29th, 1897, and continued until December 29th. They only ran their factories for an average, for the whole period, of one hundred days, hardly that, the campaign that year being 118 days. In the year 1890, it was as low as eighty-two days. The raw sugar produced, when they ran 118 days, was 14,888 tons; where they ran 170 days it was 19,528 tons; where they ran eighty-two days it was 2,127 tons. The tons of beets used to one ton of raw sugar produced was 7.4; average tons of beets worked daily, 1,075 tons. The ordinary factory would work an average of 500 tons of beets a day, but if you increase the machinery and use 1,000 tons of beets a day, which you could easily do at a small additional cost, you would get a larger consumption of beets, a larger output and a larger profit. The average weight of raw sugar worked daily was 144 tons. The result of the experience of ten years justifies the conclusion that sugar beet can be cultivated successfully, that the farmer is enabled to get a return of $49.58 per acre from the cultivation of the beet, and that the manufacturer has got a return as high as 49 per cent on his money. I think this justifies the conclusion that the business can be successfully carried on. That is the history of the industry in the United States.

What profit would it be to Canada if the industry were established in this country? It would have the effect of putting a larger amount of money in circulation in this country, and it would give employment to hundreds and thousands of our people in Canada, that would enable them to supply themselves and their families with the necessaries and comforts of life. It would open a field whereby the farmers of Canada would realize a very much larger return for their labour than they are enabled to do in the ordinary pursuits in which they are engaged to-day. There is no doubt of that, because it becomes plain when you make a comparison. If a farmer has a successful crop of oats, with an average yield per acre, he will not get as large a return as that which I have mentioned. An average crop of oats, at 30 cents per bushel, will amount to $9.90 per acre. Assuming that the straw is worth $2 more, that would make $11.90 per acre as the most that he will receive. If he raises wheat, it will yield probably $14 to $18 per acre, and if he raises pease, it will yield about $13.50 per acre. If he turns around and raises beets and gets $55 or $60 per acre, then, I submit, that he will be satisfied that he has made a much larger profit than he could in other lines of agriculture. But I will be told that it requires more labour to cultivate the beet than it does other crops. I admit that it requires more labour, but it is largely in machinery and horses; the machinery will always be available and the horses he has, so that he could put them to useful account. It is said it takes up all the profits to market the product. This is the only additional item of labour to which he will be subjected. After carefully investigating this subject and inquiring into a great many experiments which have been made, I can give the following figure as indicating the cost at which it has been found, in California, sugar beets can be successfully cultivated, of the highest quality, and marketed within a reasonable distance of the farm. It will only cost $35 an acre. At the lowest price which beets have realized in the markets where they have been sold—in Germany, if you like—$4 a ton, the farmer would realize $50, $55 or $60 per acre, after all his labour is paid for, when the cost of his machinery is taken into account, together with the cost of his time, the cost of marketing. After all these things are paid for, he has a profit of the difference between $35 and $50, or a profit of $15 per acre over labour and everything else. If a farmer could realize this profit out of his labour he would turn his whole farm into it. It is susceptible of demonstration as anything can be, that if the average farmer in the country turned his attention to cultivation of sugar beets, if he had a market for them, that is the return that he would get for his labour.

Mr. SPROULE.

There is no doubt about that, because it has been proven beyond all possibility of dispute. But it is said that this cannot be done unless we have the factories. It is true it cannot be done unless we have the factories. It has been said that it cannot be done unless we can give assistance to the factories for a few years. That is admitted. The first few years the farmers who go into the industry unacquainted with its special requirements, there are items of loss. It requires intelligent labour to carry it on, and until they have qualified themselves by the experience of a few years, it will require some assistance. During the first few years, it will not be quite so profitable to them, and they will not go into the cultivation of the sugar beet as largely as they would otherwise. The result will be that those who are engaged in the sugar beet industry will find that they are obliged to aid the farmers by distributing the seed free for the first few years, and that they will require to buy all the beets that are raised, whether bad or good, in order to encourage the farmers to produce a product of a high quality, but in a few years, after this is done, the farmer will be enabled to go on himself and get a large return without assistance being given in this way.

No country has succeeded in establishing a sugar beet industry without assistance being given by the state in some way. I will take some of the countries where it has been established. In Germany, Belgium, Austria, France, Hungary, Russia, and in the United States, they have assisted it, and the industry is being successfully carried on to-day. It is said that there is a necessity for the bounty, because no man who has money to invest will be likely to invest it where he can get no assistance when he might invest it in another country which gives assistance to this industry. The state of Michigan gave 1 cent a pound bounty for all the sugar manufactured in the state on condition that the farmer should receive $4.50 a ton for his beets. Hardly a state in the Union but what gives assistance to this industry. California, Oregon and Nebraska give assistance, and Illinois proposes to do so. It has been the universal experience with all new beet sugar factories that there are many difficulties in starting the business. There is, first, the difficulty in inducing the farmers to engage in the cultivation of beets.

Mr. COWAN. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) said, that in the state of Michigan they pay a cent a pound duty on beets.

Mr. SPROULE. I think I said, a cent a pound on all sugar manufactured from beets grown in the state.

Mr. COWAN. I think the hon. gentleman said, that they gave a cent a pound duty on the beets.

Mr. SPROULE. I thank the hon. gentleman for correcting me, if I said that. They pay a cent a pound on all sugar of a certain grade, and containing a certain amount of saccharine matter, as determined by the polariscopic test. To accomplish this, special inducements have had to be offered to farmers, such as grants of seeds free of charge, payment of the freight on the roots from outlying stations to the factory, and agreement to accept all the stock, irrespective of quality. The first item will cost about $5,000, the second item $15,000 or $18,000. The third item will vary greatly. It is absolutely necessary to give aid for a few years to this industry, but the aid need not be continued after that, because the farmers will get to understand better how to raise these beets, how to grow a larger crop to the acre, how to get a larger percentage of sugar to the beets, and how to house them and deliver them, so as to obtain a larger return. That has been the experience of the past in all these countries. I say, that Canada is bound to give some assistance to this industry, for, otherwise, we cannot hope to get it established in this country.

The question is a very important one, as to whether this industry will be established in Canada, if assistance be given. I have the authority of Mr. Lawder, who has taken a great deal of trouble in this matter, and who has submitted a proposal in my county—and he and his men were there to look into the situation—that they will establish a factory, if this assistance is given. Experts who have thoroughly investigated the province of Ontario, as to its suitability for the purpose of beet-growing, state that, after five years, they will be able to manufacture sugar as profitably without a bonus as they would be able to do in the first year with a bonus of $1 per hundred pounds. Mr. Lawder says, that the conditions in Ontario appeared so favourable that definite propositions have come to him, both from Great Britain and Germany, that they will establish beet sugar factories in Canada, if the proposed bounty be granted.

Mr. COWAN. Who is Mr. Lawder ?

Mr. SPROULE. Mr. Lawder is a gentleman in Toronto who has brought out two or three representatives of Scotch firms, several years in succession, to look into the quality of the beets grown in Canada, the percentage of sugar obtained from them, and the conditions with regard to climate, soil and everything else. They have made a similar examination in the province of Quebec, and, notwithstanding the unfortunate results of the operation of the Berthier sugar factory, these gentlemen have offered to establish a factory in Quebec, and in the county of Grey, at Owen Sound, and other factories elsewhere, at any time that a bounty is granted. They are willing, indeed, to establish one or two factories in Ontario.

and factories in Quebec, if the Government will only guarantee a fair bounty on the amount of sugar they turn out ; not a perpetual bounty, but a bounty for a very few years. The class of factories proposed to be built are such as will have a capacity of about 500 tons of beets each day of twenty-four hours ; the buildings are to be of the most substantial character and as nearly fire-proof as possible ; the machinery is to be of the very best description found in any factory ; the buildings and machinery to be of such construction as to admit of extension to a capacity of 1,000 tons daily ; extensive cattle-sheds are to be built in connection with the works, capable of containing 3,000 head of cattle, to be fattened on the residuum of the beets. Each factory is estimated to cost about $500,000. The enlargement and extension of the works, including cattle-sheds, will cost $225,000 more. They would employ a large number of men, and they would expend at least $500,000, chiefly in the locality where they have established these factories. This, I submit, would be a great boon to the people of the country.

The question, as to what amount of assistance they would want, is a very necessary one to put in this connection. We have a standing offer from one German and two Scotchmen, who are already engaged in the business, that they will start these establishments, if the following assistance is given. They would need a bonus for the first year, say 1900, of $1 per hundred pounds on refined or granulated sugar of a good average quality. Practical men, largely engaged in the beet sugar industry in Europe, advise that it is useless to expect foreign capital to be furnished to the industry here, unless a bounty is granted to carry it over the first few years of risks and difficulties. As these difficulties diminish every year, they suggest that the bounty should be on a sliding scale of 100 pounds of 100 degree sugar for :

$1.00	$0.75	$0.50	$0.25	$0.25

Average for the five years, 55 cents per 100 pounds. An advantage of the sliding scale is, that the earliest factories, which incur the greater risk, will get the larger bounties, while other companies, which may wait until the success and practicability of the industry are ascertained, with little less risk, and get less bounty. This is a lower bounty than is given in most other countries, and we have the example of the United States before us, where they gave a bounty, and have successfully established the industry.

Mr. COWAN. Would that bounty cease in 1905 ?

Mr. SPROULE. They say they would be satisfied to allow it cease in 1905, because they believe that after that, in view of the improved quality of beets, the larger crop, the larger scale of manufacture they would enter into, and the consequent larger profit, they would require no further assistance. Now, what would be the advantages to the people of Canada? It would require thirty large beet sugar factories to turn out what sugar we consume in Canada annually. If you take the lowest average of $500,000 for each factory, it would give you an expenditure of $15,000,000. It would give employment to labour to the extent—I was going to say, of hundreds of thousands, but certainly to the extent of tens of thousands of people. It will increase the consumption of coal, lumber and lime, and, therefore, give a market to the producer of these articles. If we have thirty factories running, say for one hundred days in the year, and using 500 tons of beets a day, they would consume 1,500,000 tons of beets in the year. This, at a cost of $4.25 a ton, which is a very low average, would return to the farmer directly in cash $7,500,000. One of the important considerations in connection with this industry is that about 60 per cent of all the money expended in it goes to the farmer who raises and delivers the beets. It would mean the fattening for each of these factories of at least 3,000 head of cattle during the season, or what they call the campaign. That would enhance the value of cattle in the country, and in that way also secure a largely increased return to the farmers. But would culture of beets be more profitable to the farmer than the growing of grain? Most assuredly it would, because if the farmer had a yield of 15 tons to the acre, which the Ontario experimental farm demonstrated would be quite possible, with intelligent labour, and if he sold the product at only $4.25 a ton, he would get a return of $63.75 an acre; whereas oats yield from $9 to $10 an acre, wheat from $14 to $18, and pease from $15 to $16.50 an acre. I have gone into the question with sufficient care to convince me that the figures I have submitted are fair averages. I have taken them from the report of the Bureau of Statistics of Ontario. What is the result? Wheat, with an average yield of 25 bushels to the acre, and selling at 70 cents a bushel, would produce $17.50 an acre; put the straw at $2, which would bring the figure up to $19.50. Oats, yielding 33 bushels to the acre, and selling at 30 cents a bushel, would produce only $9.90 an acre; allow $2.50 for straw, and you would have $12.50. Pease, at 25 bushels to the acre and selling at 60 cents a bushel, would produce $15 to the acre; add $1.50 for the straw, making $16.50. And these figures are to pay for labour, profits and everything. Then turn round and take an acre of beets, producing $63.75 an acre, out of which to pay labour and to give a profit as well. Therefore, if beets can be successfully raised in Canada, and if we had a market for them such as could be obtained if the Government granted the assistance asked for—for we have the standing offer of these people to come to Canada and establish the industry—is it not worthy of the consideration of the Government whether it would be not only the part of wisdom but their imperative duty to give this very moderate assistance to secure this very important industry for Canada. There is not a part of Canada where sugar beets have not been successfully grown. In British Columbia, in the North-west Territories, and in Manitoba they have been successful. In Ontario they have been pre-eminently successful; also in the province of Quebec. All that is wanted is a market to consume the product of the farmer, and the Government have it in their power to start the industry, which would give employment to labour, promote the distribution of money in the country, and especially benefit the farming community. Is it not worth their while, then, to give this industry the encouragement asked for? I think the Minister of Agriculture a short time ago said that there might be some justification in giving assistance to industries which have been established under the fostering care of the National Policy, but that there is no excuse for giving assistance to a new industry. Now, I hold that that is not correct. I would be as ready to support the starting of any new industry, if the conditions were such that after that industry were properly established, it would continue to grow and prosper in a few years without assistance, as we are to give a bounty to stimulate the production of iron. Look at what we do for other industries; and here are the great bulk of the population of the country, the farmers, struggling without any direct material assistance, while the Government have it in their power to give them that assistance by supporting the manufacture of beet-root sugar. I ask them to take the subject into their careful consideration; and, if they do, I feel confident that they will submit to the House a proposal, if not this session, at least next session, for the purpose of encouraging the establishment of this industry in the country. I feel as certain as that I am standing here to-day that if this industry were successfully established it would yield the largest return to the people of any industry in which they are engaged. After being assisted for the first few years, it will be self-sustaining. Therefore, on behalf of the great agricultural classes of this country, I ask the Government to take this matter into their serious consideration, notwithstanding the failure in the province of Quebec, which, if I had time, I could show was not owing to any conditions of soil or climate, but to other conditions which were in their nature accidental; for the beet sugar industry can be as successfully carried on in Quebec as it is in Germany and the United States.

Mr. ELLIS. The hon. gentleman has given us an account of the bounty-raised sugar in the United States. Would he be kind enough to tell us what proportion it bears to the total consumption in this country ?

Mr. SPROULE. I have not got that, as I was getting the figures at such great length. The first factory was started in California only ten years ago, and there were only four factories in the United States three years ago ; but the development from that time to the present has been such that to-day they are producing from five to ten per cent of all the sugar they consume, and they expect in a few years to produce from 75 to 100 per cent.

Mr. COWAN. I would like to ask the hon. gentleman a question. I was not in when he commenced his speech. Did he or can he satisfactorily explain how it was that the beet sugar bounties which were granted by this Parliament in 1891, and under which one or two large factories were started in the province of Quebec, which were also, I am advised, assisted by the Quebec Government, did not make these factories a success ?

Mr. SPROULE. I am informed that they suddenly went down for the want of capital.

Mr. MCGREGOR. The percentage of sugar in the beet was not as strong as it is with us, in the west.

Mr. SPROULE. The figures I have given show it is quite strong enough to warrant the industry being carried on successfully.

They had one or two unfortunate years, and the banks suddenly came down and practically closed them up ; but, if they had had sufficient capital, they would have gone on and succeeded.

Mr. MACDONALD (Huron). Do I understand the hon. gentleman to say, that a farmer cultivating beets, after paying all labour and expenses, would have a net profit of $15 an acre ?

Mr. SPROULE. Yes, at $50 an acre, which is a low price.

Mr. MACDONALD (Huron). Then, if there are such profits in the business, why should the people be called on to pay a bonus ?

Mr. SPROULE. Because we cannot get any markets at present without assisting those by bounty who erect the factories, for the first few years.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER (Cape Breton). I was in hopes that some hon. gentleman on the front benches would have favoured the House with his opinion. I am sure that the House is very deeply indebted to my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) for having so carefully studied this question and placed it before us in such a clear and convincing manner. I am sure that those who have followed him, have arrived at the conclusion that he has not only given this question a great deal of investigation, but that the facts he has brought forth are such as to demand the careful consideration of the Government, who are, necessarily in a position to give efficient aid and support to such a measure.

I do not rise to attempt to add anything to what the hon. gentleman has so well said, because he has covered the ground so completely as to make that unnecessary. But it does seem to me that, taking the immense consumption of sugar in this country and the large expenditure of money sent out of the country to bring the sugar in, we ought to be in a position to deal with a question of this kind in such a way as to greatly promote our interests. When I asked my hon. friend, what the results were of the experiments in Manitoba and the North-west, I did so because it appeared to me that there was no part of the Dominion more calculated, from the character of its soil and the rapid growth of its products, to generate a large quantity of sugar in the beet root. There is no class of immigrants that could not very soon acquire all the skill necessary, under competent instructors, to enable them to use their labour more profitably than by engaging in other enterprises which require more knowledge of agriculture than such a simple process as the cultivation of the beet root.

A very pertinent question was put by an hon. gentleman opposite, who asked why, if the facts stated by the hon. member for East Grey are so clear and conclusive, former attempts in Canada—and attempts that received some aid from the Government did not result more successfully. There may be two reasons. There may be that stated by the hon. member for Essex (Mr. McGregor), that the western country is more fit for the growth of that product, because of the greater percentage of sugar to be found in the beet root cultivated there than in that grown further to the east. Then, there are the financial difficulties. Every person is well aware that, however valuable an enterprise may be which requires a considerable amount of capital, it will fall to the ground unless that capital can be obtained, so as to operate the industry in such a way as to give it every opportunity for becoming a success. However, I think sufficient has been said by my hon. friend from East Grey to convince the Government that this is a question well deserving their attention. Anything that will promote the great agricultural industry of the country—the greatest of all industries in the country—demands the most careful attention of this House and the Government. And, if it should be found that there is a large field for the creation, by a moderate amount of Government assistance, in the first instance, of a great industry that would extend over large sections of Canada and be profitably carried on, the Government ought to give the subject their careful consideration. While on my feet, I may draw the attention of the Government to another important fact, which, no doubt, has not escaped the attention of the hon. Minister of Finance in connection with this sugar question.

The hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) brought forward a proposition some time ago for the purpose of promoting trade between Canada and the West Indies, and if possible relieving the West India Islands of the difficulties that have overtaken them in consequence of the cane sugar being placed at such a disadvantage by the competition of bounty-fed sugar. Of course, it was dealing with this subject from an entirely different standpoint from that from which it was regarded by my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule). The proposition of the Minister of Finance was to give certain advantages to sugar grown in the West India Islands over that which was grown in foreign countries, for the purpose of supplying Canada and at the same time in improving the condition of that part of the British possessions. Now, that policy, to a large extent, has failed, and it has failed mainly, I think, because the United States, adopting the principle of countervailing duties on bounty-fed sugar, are in a position to give a much greater preference and advantage to the sugar grown in the West India Islands, or to cane sugar, than is given by us. The time, I hope, will come—although it is a very controverted question—when Great Britain will feel it to be necessary to take steps to meet the difficulty that has overtaken the West India Islands and other countries raising cane sugar, and, if necessary, will adopt the same principle of countervailing duties that has been adopted in the United States of America—that is, putting an additional import duty equal to the bounty that is given in the country of production. I draw the attention of the Minister of Finance to this matter as one that seems to be of a good deal of importance, because Great Britain has almost been obliged to promote reciprocal trade between the British West Indies and the United States of America, in the endeavour to relieve those islands from the deplorable condition into which the sugar industry has been forced by the competition of bounty-fed sugar. Now, I think it is a most unfortunate thing that Great Britain should be in a position that she does not adopt other and different means to meet that difficulty, but should take any steps to promote reciprocal trade relations between the West Indies and the United States of America that, in fact, make that portion of the British Empire dependent on a foreign country rather than upon some other portion of the Empire. I mention that particularly at this moment, and draw the attention of the Minister of Finance to it, because I feel there are no countries in the world that ~~could~~ better be able to have reciprocal trade arrangements with each other than

Sir CHARLES TUPPER.

Canada and the West Indies. Everything that the West Indies require to import—I am speaking of the great bulk of their imports on better terms, in my judgment, than they can obtain it in any other part of the world. Therefore, if measures cannot be taken for making the political relations closer between the British West Indies and Canada, I would say why should we not be in such a position as to give such advantages to the West Indies—buying as we do such an enormous amount of cane sugar—and secure from them reciprocal trade advantages and thus draw these important parts of the Empire much closer together? I believe this is a subject well worthy consideration of my hon. friend the Minister of Finance and of the Government; and I am quite certain that those who know the effect of close commercial intimacy between different countries are well aware that there is some danger—there is a great deal of danger, in my judgment—in the British West Indies being thrown upon a foreign country like the United States of America for the purpose of establishing such commercial relations as will relieve them of economic difficulties; danger that the close commercial relations may lead at no distant day to political relations, which no one, I am sure, would wish to see established between any portion of the British Empire and any foreign country. I do not intend to occupy the time of the House longer, but I felt that the time was not inopportune to draw the attention of the Government to this matter. The import of sugar into Canada is large, and I have no hesitation in saying will rapidly expand. The present extremely progressive condition of Canada, the immense prosperity that now attends every section of this country is such as to lead us to believe that we must rapidly increase in our population, and not only that, but, with our rapidly-increasing wealth, the consumption of sugar will be infinitely greater than it is to-day. I believe, therefore, the time has come when the Government may well turn their attention to this question, not only the question as touching the great agricultural interests of the country which my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) raised, but also the question of the depressed condition of the British West India Islands, to see whether with our great and rapidly-increasing consumption of sugar, we cannot adopt such measures as will greatly conduce to the still greater prosperity of the country.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). Only with regard to that portion of my hon. friend's (Sir Charles Tupper's) remarks that relate to the West Indies do I wish to say anything. I am sure that we all appreciate fully the importance of cultivating the most intimate trade relations with the British West Indies. The Government, I am glad to say, with the unanimous approval of the House, manifested their good-will towards those islands in the amendment they made in the tariff. I would not go so far as to say, with my hon. friend, that the preference given to the West Indies has been a failure.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I did not say that it had been entirely a failure, but that, to a large extent, it had failed.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I admit at once that our expectations in regard to it have not been as fully realized as we could wish; but I think it will be found, when the figures are published, that there is some improvement in the West India trade. And, even if there had been no improvement, it is some satisfaction to know that the state of decline that had set in was checked by the operation of the preferential tariff. It is, however, a fact that the advantage given by the United States to cane sugar under their system of countervailing duties, really amounts to more than our preference. But as my hon. friend admitted, this question of countervailing duties is one of the most controversial subjects in the political economy of the day. So far is this true that in England, in regard to the British West India sugar question, it is stated by some eminent authorities that even if England adopted a system of countervailing duties, it would not meet the difficulties in the West Indies. However, I wish to say to my hon. friend that the attention of the Government has been called to the fact, we have observed from time to time the manifestation of a desire on the part of the business men of the West Indies to establish closer trade relations with the United States. We have been watching that movement very closely, and I can assure my hon. friend that nothing will be left undone on the part of the Government that we can reasonably do to inquire into that matter, and to see that whatever is possible for the cultivation of better trade relations between Canada and the West Indies should be done with all possible despatch.

Mr. JAMES McMULLEN (North Wellington). I think the House fully appreciates the extended statement the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) has made on this very important point. For my own part I am quite willing to encourage anything that will tend to improve the condition of the farming community, and I am sure the Government have an eye open in that direction. Still, I think that in this matter we should go slowly, and only take a step in advance after careful study of all the facts. I admit that a number of these establishments have been recently built up in the United States. They have there, of course, a very large population in the first place; and in the next place, they can afford, perhaps, to take larger risks in going into these ventures than we can. We are not in a position in this country to go into this business until we are sure of our ground. For my own part I would have no objection to a bounty system encouraging any industry. A bounty is not, in my opinion, a protection, for the simple reason that if you encourage the production of any commodity out of the general revenue of the country, every man in the country has to contribute; it is an additional tax upon every taxpayer. My hon. friend the leader of the Opposition would grant a bounty, for instance, on the production of pig iron, when every man in the country has to contribute a certain percentage to the production of pig-iron; while if you merely protect it by duty, then it is only the man who uses the iron that pays the duty. So a bounty is a very different thing from a duty. I would have no objection to encouraging a system such as is proposed, if we can go on sure and certain ground, knowing that it is to be an advantage to the farming community. But before the Government venture a step in this direction, I think they should make a thorough and exhaustive investigation into the results of these institutions, for instance, in Michigan, and fully satisfy themselves with regard to the condition of their success, in order to find out whether we are in a position to take advantage of our conditions in this country in a way that we may fairly hope for success. The Government should not jump to the conclusion that the establishment of institutions of this kind would be in the interest of the country, and thus induce farmers and others to put their money into them when, after two or three years, the whole thing might collapse. I fully sympathize with any effort in the direction of helping the farming community, and I would gladly vote for any reasonable scheme that would promise any fair means of success. I do not say but that the production of beet-root sugar in Canada may eventually be found to be a desirable industry. As the hon. member for East Grey has told us, a good many of these industries have lately been built up in the United States, and I think it would be well that our Government should take steps to gather all the information available with regard to the working of those institutions, and if, after careful deliberation, they found facts justified them in so doing, then would be the time for the Government to take steps for the purpose of starting that industry in Canada. I am glad the hon. member for East Grey has presented his statement to the House, it is worthy of consideration, and I am sure both sides of the House will be willing to join in any movement that will improve the condition of the farming community.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Mr. Fisher). The leader of the Opposition rose a few moments ago, saying he was sorry that nobody on the front benches had taken up this question. I am glad that I did not speak on the question before the hon. gentleman himself undertook to do so. He advocates the principle set forth in this motion, of establishing the beet sugar industry in this country by the aid of a bonus or bounty; then he went on to draw attention to the fact that the West Indies were not yet able to supply us with the sugar which we annually consume, which we have to get from abroad. The hon. gentleman must be well aware that the present condition of the cane sugar industry in the West Indies is due to the existence of the bounty-fed beet sugar industry in other parts of the world, and while he is asking us to do what we can to aid the interchange of commodities between Canada and the West Indies, the only commodity which the West Indies can possibly send us, to any extent, being cane sugar, he is supporting a measure here which, if successful, must necessarily do away absolutely with any chance of our importing sugar from the West Indies. The two positions seem to me to be so utterly inconsistent that I must suppose the hon. gentleman himself was not aware of it when he spoke. However, this is beside the question. I was very much interested in the proposition laid before the House by the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule). He has evidently made a great study of this question, and has carefully investigated one side of it. The hon. member's remarks carry me back in memory to a period some 25 years ago, when this question was first brought before the farmers of the province of Ontario. At that time the industry was pointed out in the same roseate hues to the farmers and to the capitalists with which the hon. member for East Grey has surrounded his subject today. The result was that in the province of Quebec a large number of capitalists and a large number of farmers were induced to put their money into the erection of factories and the production of beets for the purpose of making sugar. The hon. gentleman himself has alluded to the failure there. I, perhaps, am a little more familiar with the facts in regard to that failure than he is, or than the majority of the members of the House may be, and it may not be out of place for me to give a brief history of that experiment. As a matter of fact, between 20 and 25 years ago, something like $2,000,000 were invested by capitalists in beet-sugar factories and in the production of beets in the province of Quebec. That money was absolutely and entirely lost, the people who put their money into that enterprise lost every cent of it. The reasons for that were pointed out at the time and they seemed obvious.

Mr. McNEILL. How much did my hon. friend say?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. In the neighbourhood of $2,000,000 were altogether invested in the factories and in the production of the beets. There was one factory at Farnham which cost nearly $500,000. There was another at Berthier which cost something like $350,000. I am speaking from memory, but I think that was the amount. There was another factory at Coaticook, and there were similar sums invested in another factory, the exact locality of which I do not remember at the present moment. In addition to these sums, which were invested in buildings, machinery and organization, the farmers of the country put a great deal of money into the cultivation of beets, most of which money was lost. I think, at the time it was said, that, in that enterprise, in the course of the few years it was continued, about $2,000,000 was sunk and absolutely lost. At the present time there is not a single beet sugar factory running in the province of Quebec or in the Dominion of Canada. There are no sugar beets raised for the purpose of being manufactured into sugar in the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. SPROULE. There would be a great deal of them raised, if they had factories to consume them.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The Farnham factory was resuscitated by Mr. Musé, who came out from Belgium thoroughly conversant with the industry, who, after running it for about two years without making any money, gave it up, and left the country. Mr. Scaife undertook to resuscitate the Berthier factory, and failed. Mr. Scaife was thoroughly acquainted with the operations connected with the manufacture of beet-root sugar and with the cultivation of the beets. Since that time no efforts have been made to resuscitate the industry.

Mr. BERGERON. It was Mr. Lefebvre who was at the head of the enterprise at Berthier.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes; I think Mr. Scaife was the manager of the factory. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Bergeron) is quite right. Mr. Lefebvre was at the head of the company which undertook to work the factory. I had forgotten his name at the moment. The fact is, that some seven or eight years ago, after earnest attempts to run this industry successfully in the province of Quebec—attempts which were founded upon information gathered from all parts of the world by Mr. Barnard and others, attempts which have been carried out by men thoroughly acquainted with the industry in every way and shape, men who had come out from the countries where it is successfully carried on—the enterprise has been a failure. It is nearing six o'clock, Mr. Speaker; but before you leave the Chair: The hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) has intimated, in the general trend of his remarks, and at various places in his remarks, that there is no place in the world where the beet sugar industry is carried on without substantial aid from the government of the country.

Mr. SPROULE. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fisher) will excuse me, he has misunderstood what I said. What I said was, that it was never started in any country without substantial aid at the beginning.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I will supplement what the hon. gentleman says, by saying, that there is no place on earth to-day where it is being carried on without substantial aid from the government of the country in which it exists. The hon. gentleman pointed out—and the remark which he has just made shows the trend of his argument—that, if the industry is aided at its inception, it may become self-supporting and self-sustaining; but the hon. gentleman cannot at the present time point to any country on the face of the earth where this condition of affairs has been reached.

Mr. BERGERON. I think this condition has been reached in France.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Bergeron) is entirely wrong. France is to-day paying large bounties for export.

Mr. BERGERON. But the help of the Government has decreased a great deal on sugar, other than export.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It has; but it is, at the same time, very large indeed. I have some figures to show the bounties paid at the present time. The American Consul at Ghent states the present bounties per ton in different countries as follows:—

Germany, 6.03 to 8.44; Austria, 7.24 to 8.85; Belgium, 7.90 to 11.39; France, 21.71 dollars.

Mr. BERGERON. Francs.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The statement I have does not say. They are given as dollars here.

Mr. BERGERON. It is francs.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The last amount, then, should be $4 and some cents.

Mr. BERGERON. That is on export.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes; but the hon. gentleman will not pretend to say, that, though it was on export, it would not be a substantial aid to the industry.

Mr. BERGERON. The help from the Government has been decreasing every year.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I can only state that the information I have received is, that there is no place to-day on the face of the earth that I have been able to find, where this industry exists without substantial aid from the government of the country.

Mr. BERGERON. In speaking of France, I spoke of beet sugar for export, and not for home consumption.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes; but that is substantial aid to the industry, and, as a matter of fact, without that aid the industry could not exist. It being Six o'clock, Mr. Speaker is about to leave the Chair; but I hope to be able to go on with this subject further.

It being Six o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

HURON AND ERIE LOAN AND SAVINGS COMPANY.

The House again resolved in committee on Bill (No. 74) respecting the Huron and Erie Loan and Savings Company.—(Mr. Beattie.)

(In the Committee.)

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). All the sections of this Bill were passed some days ago with the exception of section 2, which was left over in order that it might be made to conform with similar sections in other Bills. I move to add the words:

Provided that the company shall not invest in or lend money upon the security or stock of any other loan company.

The promoters of the Bill are satisfied with this amendment, and it will dispose of the Bill.

Amendment agreed to.

Bill reported, read the third time, and passed.

CANADA PERMANENT AND WESTERN CANADA MORTGAGE CORPORATION.

The House again resolved in committee on Bill (No. 75) to incorporate the Canada Permanent and Western Canada Mortgage Corporation.—(Mr. Osler.)

(In the Committee.)

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). In this case also, all the clauses of the Bill were passed excepting clause 6, which was held over in order that the clause might be made to conform with the proposed Government Bill, since introduced in the Senate, dealing with this matter generally. The promoters have agreed that that clause in the Government Bill shall be accepted. I therefore move that the following clause be substituted for section 6:—

The company shall have power to carry on the business of lending money on the security of, or purchasing or investing in, mortgages or hypothecs upon freehold or leasehold real estate or other immovables, the debentures, bonds, stocks and other securities of any government or of any municipal corporation, or school corporation, or of any chartered bank, or of any incorporated company, if incorporated by Canada, or any province of Canada or any former province now forming part of Canada, but not including bills of exchange and promissory notes, provided that the company shall not invest in or lend money upon the security of the stocks of any other loan company.

Amendment agreed to.

Bill reported, read the third time, and passed.

EDMONTON AND SASKATCHEWAN RAILWAY COMPANY.

The House resumed in committee on Bill (No. 93) respecting the Edmonton and Saskatchewan Railway Company.—(Mr. Oliver.)

Mr. OLIVER. When the House was before in committee on this Bill, an amendment moved by me to clause 7 was discussed.

On section 7,

Mr. THOS. O. DAVIS (Saskatchewan). I have pleasure in supporting the amendment which has been moved by the hon. member (Mr. Oliver) for the reason that I believe that prior to granting railway charters, this Parliament should give protection to the people who have built up towns and invested their all in property there. In the case where what we call Boomsters go west when a charter has been granted, and locate a town-site ahead of railway construction, I do not for one moment say that it would be well to compel the company to build into that town site, but where people have built up these towns years in advance of a railway, I think they should be protected. This has a good deal of bearing on the development of the west. If people who build up towns are not protected, by compelling the railway company to run into these towns, there will be no inducement to them to invest their capital in permanent buildings at points in the North-west Territories. In a country as large as that, it is impossible to have railways at all points before settlement goes in. In the territories, the railways in every case have followed the settlement, and the railways have found before them good large healthy towns, with public buildings, with fine stores and churches. The people who get a charter for a railway in the North-west are getting a valuable franchise; and even if they are not getting a subsidy, they should be compelled, in the case of a town like Fort Saskatchewan, which is an incorporated town, to build the railway into that town. This clause says: "a point in or near the village or settlement of Fort Saskatchewan." What does that mean? The settlements in the North-west Territories extend for 50 miles around a town; so that if the railway only came to within 12 or 15 miles of the town, its promoters would be complying with this provision. Then they would come and negotiate with the people of the town, who have put their capital there, to get a portion of the town before they would come in. That has been the case with many towns in the North-west. It is the case with my own town. The railway came to the edge of the town, and its promoters then came in and negotiated with the people, telling them that if they did not give them a large share of their town, they would build another town close to them, after getting more money and lands from this country than would build the road. As the people did not want to be ruined, they agreed to the terms of the railway company, and gave them about half the lots in the town. I take it that this is a case of the same kind. They have the clause worded in a vague way, so that they will not be bound under it to come into the town. Now, there is no reason in the world why they should not build the road into the town of Fort Saskatchewan. There is no obstruction in the way; the town is built on the south side of the river, the country is level, and there are no ravines of any consequence. Across the river there is a settlement of French people, who have been there a great many years, and who have built up a small town, which is connected with Fort Saskatchewan by a ferry. All the trade of the surrounding district settles in Fort Saskatchewan. Therefore, I submit that these people should be compelled to build the railway to that town, and the hon. member for Alberta is only doing right in moving this amendment. Some gentlemen who are opposed to this Bill have tried to make out that Fort Saskatchewan is not a town. I can say that it is a town—an incorporated village, with fine buildings, which have been built a great many years. I hope that hon. members on both sides of the House will see that the people are protected in this matter.

Mr. HENDERSON. When this Bill was before the Railway Committee, its promoter was unable to state that the character of the country was such that it was possible to build the railway into the village of Fort Saskatchewan. For that reason the committee decided, at my suggestion, to change the wording of the clause from "in or near the village" to "as near as practicable to the village of Fort Saskatchewan." But as the promoter of the Bill desires to strike out these words, and make the clause read "in the village of Fort Saskatchewan," I am satisfied to adopt the words he suggests. He is taking the responsibility of saying that it is possible to build the road into the village of Fort Saskatchewan; and, as he, being the promoter of the Bill, takes that responsibility, I will certainly vote for it.

Mr. G. E. CASEY (West Elgin). My hon. friend who has just sat down is naturally misled by the peculiar appearance of this case. The hon. member for Alberta (Mr. Oliver) is the promoter of the Bill, in the sense that his name is attached to it as the introducer. But in saying that the railway can conveniently or practically go into Fort Saskatchewan without unnecessary cost, he is not speaking for the promoters of the Bill. The people who are interested in the building of this railway, who intend to build it, who are financing with that object, are opposed to this. It is such a very unusual transaction for a gentleman who introduces a Bill to move amendments to it contrary to the wish of those for whom he is supposed to be acting, the railway company that wishes to be incorporated, that I am not surprised that my hon. friend from Halton (Mr. Henderson) is misled by the surface appearance of the matter. As a matter of fact, the railway company for whom the hon. member for Alberta is supposed to be acting, for whom he did act when he introduced the Bill, claim that it is impracticable without very undue cost, without a cost which is not justified by any of the circumstances of the case, to get actually into the village of Fort Saskatchewan with this road; and they are totally at variance in this respect with the hon. gentleman who has charge of their Bill. They are quite satisfied with the decision of the Railway Committee to accept the words suggested by my hon. friend who has just spoken; and I am here to ask him to adhere to his former decision as a member of the Railway Committee. This matter was doubtless threshed out in that committee. I did not happen to be there, but such matters are usually threshed out in that committee, where both sides are heard, and where a correct decision is much more likely to be reached than in the House on an evening like this, when very few members are present. My hon. friend from Saskatchewan (Mr. Davis), and my hon. friend from Alberta also, found fault with the word "settlement," speaking of it as if it were intended to make the matter very vague, and to allow the railway to go anywhere within the neighbourhood of Fort Saskatchewan. Well, I do not think any court, or anybody else, construing the language of a Bill, would give that word the vague and wide meaning which these hon. gentlemen refer to. There is no doubt that the word "settlement" is intended to be a synonym of the village of Fort Saskatchewan. At all events, that was the intention of the real promoters of this Bill, the railway company. They desire to come as near as they can to the existing settlement. If the word "settlement" is thought to be too vague, I do not see any objection to striking that out, and leaving it simply "the village of Fort Saskatchewan." If it is an incorporated village, as my hon. friend from Saskatchewan says—I did not know before that it was—that will be definite enough, for the company are prepared to say that they will come as near as practicable to that village. Now, my hon. friend from Saskatchewan is not, I think, correctly informed when he says that there are no obstacles to the railway coming to the actual settlement on the river. According to the Government map which I hold in my hand, there are obstacles in the shape of streams, which form large shallow coulees, extending for a considerable distance on both sides, and which would require either to have trestles or to be bridged, and in the shape of muskegs and great inequalities of the ground. The natural course of the railway passes not far from the outskirts of the village of Fort Saskatchewan, which appears to reach about a mile back from the river, according to this map. I do not know that the promoters can say how near they can come without encountering these obstacles; but it is their intention to come as near as they can in order to establish the connection. What they ask is to be relieved from the necessity of going into a little town plot, as the amendment of the hon. member for Alberta would compel them to. According to this map, which is drawn to scale, it appears that to take the route suggested, the company would have to cross a coulee, 650 feet broad and several feet deep in one place, and 15 to 20 feet deep in another, and another coulee 750 feet wide, in order to go into the village of Saskatchewan.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. How far are these coulees from the town?

Mr. CASEY. The nearest would be about a mile and a quarter from the corner of the town plot. To go to the town plot they would have to cross these coulees down near the river, where the coulees are deeper and broader. Their intention is to go into the country where the coulees are not so broad or deep and turn into Fort Saskatchewan as near as they can. But to compel them to go into the village would involve them in very considerable and unwarranted expenditure.

Mr. CLARKE. How near do they propose to go?

Mr. CASEY. They think they can get somewhere within a mile and a quarter or a mile and a half of the river, and probably half a mile or a quarter of a mile from the outer edge of the town, and within perhaps half a mile of where my hon. friend wants to force them to come. Of course, I am speaking in general terms. They do not profess to bind themselves to do this, because their route would depend on a later and more accurate survey, but it appears from the map they can go near to Fort Saskatchewan without any great expense. If they are forced, however, to actually go into the village, they will have to divert their line over a country where it is very expensive to build. If this condition should be inserted in the Bill, they might put a little spur into Saskatchewan, but that is not what they want. They want to get the trade of that place as fully as possible. So much for the intention of those who really wish to get this charter. No doubt, my hon. friend would wish to please his constituents who live in Fort Saskatchewan, but I think we can go too far in forcing railways to go into every man's backyard, and this matter might well be left in the terms in which the Bill was amended, as suggested by the hon. member for Halton.

Mr. HENDERSON. I desire to place myself right in the matter. I was guided by the best information we could get in the Railway Committee, when this question came up, and this seems to be the only solution we could find out of the difficulty. But I beg to draw attention now to the fact that the clause, as worded, is not in the shape in which the Bill was amended or proposed to be amended, by the Railway Committee. The intention was that before the resolution was printed these words, "as near as practicable," should be inserted before the name of each town or village which the railway was to pass, and there are four other places besides Fort Saskatchewan. We have not the Bill before us now, as it was intended to be amended by the Railway Committee, and I think action should be deferred and the Bill sent back to the committee, as it is important that the intention of the committee should be carried out.

With regard to the other point, I will only say that if the provisional directors thought fit to place this Bill in the hands of an hon. member who is not in sympathy with them and in that manner mislead the House, I am not responsible for that. The moment I discovered that the promoter of the Bill was in favour of striking out the amendment, I thought there was no reason why I should oppose it, because I thought he lived in that section, and three of the directors lived in his own district, and that that was the conclusion they had arrived at, and the whole scheme was feasible.

Mr. CASEY. In this particular clause, the amendment has been made. The Bill has not been reprinted.

Mr. HENDERSON. The amendment should be made to apply to the four other places.

Mr. CASEY. As far as I understand, the promoters are willing to have that correction made here without any reference to the Railway Committee at all. They agree, in that proposal, to insert the words, "as near as practicable," at all these points. I would remind the House that these companies have to negotiate for funds, and this company is at present negotiating for the moneys required, and is anxious to make a start this summer. Every day's delay, therefore, counts, and this would mean a postponement for a week and thus lessen their chance of getting funds.

Mr. CASEY.

Mr. DAVIS. I wish to draw attention to the fact that in the maps at the registry office all the land within twenty miles of the town are described as the settlement.

Mr. CASEY. On this official map the surveyed town plot at Fort Saskatchewan is described as the Fort Saskatchewan settlement, limiting the terms to this actual spot—two miles one way and five or six the other.

Mr. DAVIS. If any one will look at the plans in the registry office, he will find that within a circuit of twenty miles is described as a settlement.

Mr. CASEY. Leave the word "settlement" out.

Mr. DAVIS. But we are fighting for the principle that where these towns were established these corporations should be forced to go into them. Unless you do that you will never get a town built in the west at all before the railways are built in. I understand that the Minister of Railways has a Bill to amend the Railway Act in this particular, but that would only apply to a road already built. He would force the railway companies to establish a station in a town, but not to divert their roads so as to enter the town. The hon. member for West Elgin (Mr. Casey) said that the hon. member for Alberta had been trying to please his constituents. That is all the greater argument in favour of the amendment. All the people of the constituency the hon. member represents wished to have this thing done. He has been in that country and knows this town, and he has seen these ravines that the hon. member for West Elgin speaks of. I know all about the Saskatchewan, and I know that there are no such obstacles to railway construction as my hon. friend (Mr. Casey) mentions. The gist of this thing is that there is a good crossing of the Saskatchewan River, the best crossing in that portion of the country, and the idea is that if the railway will only cross there a large town is going to be built up, and they want to get the town site. They evidently want to get the land outside of the town and ruin the investments that are made at the present time. I hope that the people who are there will be protected.

Mr. FRANK OLIVER (Alberta). I wish to correct a very specific statement made by my hon. friend from West Elgin (Mr. Casey) on the strength of having in his hands a Government map. But, in the first place, I may say that in the Railway Committee, it was not that I was not able to assure the committee as to the formation of the country there, but I was not sure as to the extent of the limits of the town. It is because I have received information by telegram and now by mail as to the actual limits of the town, that I presume to bring the matter before the committee of the House, and take up their time for a few minutes. I hold in my hand a Government map showing the settlement of Fort Saskatchewan and the surrounding country, and I have to assure the members of this committee that when the hon. member for West Elgin, holding in his hand a map, pointed to a mark saying that was the surveyed village of Fort Saskatchewan, he was pointing to a place which, according to this map, is not less than four miles from the surveyed village of Fort Saskatchewan. When he says this part of the settlement is Fort Saskatchewan town site, he says what is not the fact by about four miles, and I have the map here to prove it. I am sorry that the hon. gentleman would so far mislead the House, or attempt to do so. In regard to the creek valleys, I say again, on my responsibility as a member of this House and as representing the people of that country, that there are no natural obstacles to prevent the road being built into the corporate limits of Fort Saskatchewan. I ask this House to treat my word as quite as credible as a pencil mark on a sheet of paper brought here by a gentleman whom they do not know and who has not the responsibility before this House and before this country that rests upon me. Any gentleman coming to this House and claiming that natural obstacles exist, should have the report of an engineer on that point.

Mr. CASEY. Here it is—the report of a Government engineer.

Mr. OLIVER. I say these gentlemen have not the report of an engineer, and it is my word as a member of this House, if you like to put it that way, against the word of a gentleman who is not a member of this House, and when it comes to a question of that kind, I ask this House if I am not of sufficient credibility for them to believe my word. This expression "at or near" a village is the weapon with which railways hold up villages and destroy them. I have here the town plot of the village.

Mr. CASEY. What map is that?

Mr. OLIVER. The map of the incorporated village of Fort Saskatchewan.

Mr. CASEY. By whom is it issued?

Mr. OLIVER. By the town site company.

Mr. CASEY. Is that a Government map? Will the hon. gentleman tell me from the map in what section and in what township that town site is?

Mr. OLIVER. It is referred to here as lot 11, Fort Saskatchewan settlement. There is no question of getting into the valley, we only ask that they be compelled to build into the town. We do not ask anything impossible. I may say that I was not sent here by railroad incorporators to forward their interests against the interests of the people. I am sent here to uphold the interests of the people. So far as the interests of railway incorporators are in accord with those of the people, I support them also, but no further. I ask the House to protect the investment of one roller mill of fully $20,000. Another roller mill is being built by the farmers of the district, involving a similar investment. There are three general stores, a large hotel and other general business places. There are also two churches. This is a well established village, the beginning of which was put there 20 years ago. It was not put there for speculation or to head off the railroad.

Mr. CASEY. Who owns the town site?

Mr. OLIVER. A number of people own it.

Mr. CASEY. Is it not owned by Ellsworth Bros.?

Mr. OLIVER. Not that I know of. It is like every other town site, it is an original claim which has been cut up into town lots and bought up by private parties.

Mr. CASEY. My information is that this village or town site, which is an incorporated village, was owned by speculative gentlemen who have been holding it for years and trying to boom it, but not very successfully. This alleged town plot at Fort Saskatchewan is not co-terminous with and does not mean the same thing as the old town settlement along the river bank. That settlement on both sides of the river is several miles long and about a mile deep and this village site is about the middle. There is a considerable stream running down through it. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Oliver) talks about the use of maps and attempting to mislead the House. The hon. gentleman must take it back. I have shown here the Government map drawn to a scale. What he cites is an advertising prospectus got up by speculators to boom the town site.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Chairman, I ask your protection.

Mr. CASEY. The map I have shown was issued by the department in 1893.

Mr. OLIVER. May I ask the hon. member for one moment—

Mr. CASEY. To interrupt me—no. The only map I have called attention to is the Government official map. The one the hon. gentleman is showing is one published by the owners of the town site. I see on his desk another small map which looks like the Government map on a small scale. The map which I have shown is drawn on a scale of 40 chains to the inch, and shows the width of all the gullies, drains and so on to be crossed. I will not go into the detail of the whole matter, but I will remind the House that all the essential facts of the case were before the committee. As my hon. friend from Halton (Mr. Henderson) has pointed out, the committee reached a clear decision, and if the hon. member for Alberta (Mr. Oliver) wishes to buck against—to use a slang phrase—parts of the Bill which he was asked to introduce, that is no reason why the House should go with him. His professions of alone representing the people and “having all at stake” are pardonable in a young member of the House; they would not be pardonable in an old one. My only interest in the matter is to see fair-play done to the gentlemen who are going to put their money into this thing, and to have it fairly constructed.

Mr. OLIVER. I wish to say, again, that I hold in my hand a part of the Government map of that settlement and district, received from the Deputy Commissioner of Public Works of the North-west Government, upon which is marked the particular part covered by the town site. I say, again, that the map shown by the hon. member for West Elgin (Mr. Casey) does not show any part of the town site of Fort Saskatchewan, nor anything within 3 miles of that town site. The map itself says, that it is a map of part of Fort Saskatchewan settlement only. The hon. member, I say, has been deliberately attempting to mislead the House.

Mr. CASEY. I must ask the hon. gentleman at once to take that back. I insist upon that rule being enforced. There is a limit to the cheek which is allowed in this committee.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I think the hon. member for Alberta (Mr. Oliver) is going a little too far.

Mr. OLIVER. Well, here is the map I hold in my hand. The hon. gentleman holds a map in his hand.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman said, that the hon. member for Elgin had “deliberately attempted to mislead the House.” I do not think that expression should be used in this House, and I would like the hon. member to withdraw it.

Mr. OLIVER. I beg the Chairman's pardon, and I beg the pardon of the hon. member for West Elgin. I do take it back, so far as the rules of Parliament require me to do so. I merely ask the members of the House to compare the two maps.

Mr. CASEY. There is no excuse for the hon. gentleman in thinking that I wanted to mislead the House. The map that I showed you shows the Fort Saskatchewan settlement.

Mr. OLIVER. Does it show the town site?

Mr. CASEY. I do not wish the hon. member to interrupt me any more, or to give me any more cheek. I say, the Government map shows the Fort Saskatchewan settlement. There is nothing on that map to show—

Mr. OLIVER. I ask, if the hon. member is allowed to use the word “cheek” in respect to myself.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. It is not a very polite expression.

Mr. CASEY. I will take off the “cheek.” The Government map shows the Fort Saskatchewan settlement; no Government map shows any town site at all there. How am I to know what particular spot of that settlement, about 4 miles long, these people choose to call a town?

Mr. RICHARDSON. I participated in this debate the other evening, and I think the members of the committee will agree with me that, after all, this is not so much a matter of maps as it is a matter of justice to the people of that town site. I have already told the committee the experience of many towns in the North-west and the way in which they were treated. I was able to show that, even in my own constituency, no less than four towns were held up by the railway company, and were absolutely side-tracked, and new town sites were purchased by the company in order that they might procure the advantage of the sale of town lots, and entire towns were compelled to move bodily over to the new town site. I was able to point out to the committee that, even in the case of Winnipeg, that great city was once threatened with being side-tracked by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. I think that this committee should profit by the experience of the past and protect these pioneers, who certainly have vested rights in that place. They have invested their money, they have built saw-mills and churches, and it is only fair that, inasmuch as this charter says the road is to run at or near this place, that we make it specific, and compel them to run to this town. Surely, it is a fair proposition that this committee should accept the words of the hon. member who represents that district. The hon. member for Alberta (Mr. Oliver) has assured us that he has visited that district; he gives us his word of honour as to what he knows about the conformation of that country, and I think it is only fair that this committee should accept his word. We are not here to protect the interests of these railway promoters, but the interests of the settlers, and I think it is only fair that we should accept the word of the hon. member for Alberta, and put it in the bond that this railway should run to the village of Saskatchewan.

Amendment (Mr. Oliver) agreed to : Yeas, 40 ; Nays, 23.

Mr. HENDERSON. I think the intention of the Railway Committee should be carried out, and that this change should be made all the way through the section. The chairman and the clerk were to have the words inserted, so as to make it apply to the various towns and villages mentioned in the section.

Mr. CASEY. But the hon. member will notice that we have now negatived what the Railway Committee did : we have struck out the words "or as nearly as practicable to," in this clause.

Mr. HENDERSON. But only in the first instance, not in the others.

Mr. OLIVER. I would like to support what the hon. member has said about his motion in the Railway Committee, and which was adopted by the committee. The reason I did not take any active steps to follow out that motion in the rest of the clause was because there has not been at these other points the same investment of capital that there was at Fort Saskatchewan. I did not recognize the necessity of fixing on a point of location so rigidly at those points at Fort Saskatchewan.

Mr. HENDERSON moved, in amendment to section 7 :

That the words "as near as practicable to" be inserted in place of the word "near" in the third line, before the words "or near" in the fourth line, before the words "or near" in the sixth line, and before the words "or near" in the seventh line.

This is to carry out the decision of the Railway Committee.

Section, as amended, agreed to.

Bill read the third time, and passed.

IN COMMITTEE—THIRD READINGS.

Bill (No. 110) respecting the Hudson's Bay and Yukon Railways and Navigation Company.—(Mr. Oliver.)

Bill (No. 115) to incorporate the Sudbury and Wahnapiatae Railway Company.—(Mr. Dymont.)

SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES, 1899.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding) presented to the House a Message from His Excellency the Governor General, transmitting the Supplementary Estimates for the year 1899.

Mr. SPEAKER read the Message, as follows :—

MINTO.

The Governor General transmits to the House of Commons, supplementary Estimates of sums required for the service of the Dominion for the year ended 30th June, 1899, and in accordance with the provisions of "The British North America Act, 1867," the Governor General recommends these Estimates to the House of Commons.

Government House.

Ottawa, 9th June, 1899.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE moved that His Excellency's Message, together with the Estimates, be referred to the Committee on Supply.

Motion agreed to.

STRIKE OF THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY TRACKMEN.

Mr. CLARKE. I understood it was the intention of the right hon. the Prime Minister to lay on the Table of the House to-day, certain correspondence which had passed between him and the management of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, respecting the dispute between the company and their trackmen. I do not know if the right hon. gentleman has done so. I also wish to ask, has any reply been sent by the Prime Minister to the request of the Trackmen's Union, asking him to interfere with a view of settling this strike ?

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The trackmen have placed in my hands a request for interference on their behalf with the Grand Trunk Railway Company. At this moment, negotiations are going on with the railway company, and I think it would be preferable not to bring down anything on this subject until these negotiations have been concluded.

I. C. R. EXTENSION TO MONTREAL—PAPERS ASKED FOR.

Mr. FOSTER. As the Minister of Railways is not here, I wish to call the attention of the Prime Minister to the information which was laid on the Table the other day in connection with the 3rd and 33rd clauses of the schedule to Bill (No. 138). On the first day a part was brought down, and on the last day of the session of the House the figures with reference to the terminals were brought down, but the car mileage with reference to the Victoria bridge has not yet been brought down, and the statement is therefore incomplete. I wish my right hon. friend would bring that to the attention of my hon. friend the Minister of Railways. Also, there is one cash statement brought down with reference to the line from St. Lambert to Ste. Rosalie, but there is no cash statement of the maintenance and repairs and operating expenses for the terminals, for the Victoria bridge or for the Chaudière section. I may also state that I have not yet received the engineer's reports with reference to the Drummond road.

The PRIME MINISTER. I shall make a note of the hon. gentleman's request.

DAMAGES BY WATER ON BEAUHARNOIS CANAL.

Mr. BERGERON. As the Prime Minister seems to be taking the place of the Minister of Railways to-night, I wish to call to his attention a serious accident which happened the other day on the Beauharnois Canal, and which will probably entail heavy damages as the water has inundated several farms. I wish to ask that the Minister should take immediate steps to insure that the engineers of the department will ascertain at once the amount of damages to the farms, so that when the time comes for settlement they may be known. On former occasions this has not been done, and there has been considerable difficulty afterwards in arriving at the amount of the loss. If it had been done on previous occasions, as I am suggesting now, it would have been a great deal easier to settle the damages when they came up for adjustment.

IN COMMITTEE—THIRD READING.

Bill (No. 40) to amend the Criminal Code (1892), with respect to combinations in restraint of trade.—(Mr. Sproule.)

Bill (No. 31) to amend the Winding-up Act.—(Mr. Fortin.)

MONTREAL, OTTAWA AND GEORGIAN BAY CANAL.

The House resumed adjourned debate on the proposed motion of Mr. Poupore for an Address to His Excellency the Governor General, praying that he will cause to be laid before the House all petitions, applications and letters in relation to the Montreal, Ottawa and Georgian Bay Canal.

Mr. N. A. BELCOURT (Ottawa). Mr. Speaker, when the question of the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal was under the consideration of the House last session, it was my privilege to offer some remarks on the subject and I did so, I confess, with some enthusiasm. I desire to assure the House, however, that I shall to-night, as I did then, endeavour to treat the project in a serious and sober manner, and if I indulge in a little enthusiasm on the subject, it is because I feel very deeply and very sincerely the great advantages and the immense importance of this undertaking. I can at once assure the House that any statement which I shall make I shall support with authority; and I venture the opinion that when hon. gentlemen compare my statements with the opinions which I shall quote, they will admit that my enthusiasm, if any of it is displayed to-night, will have ample justification. With my hon. friend from Pontiac (Mr. Poupore) I entirely agree, that this is not a question of party politics, that it never has been such, and that it ought not to be such. The question is too important, too far-reaching in its consequences, to be circumscribed by the limits of party politics. I hope it never will be so circumscribed, but that in discussing it we shall always rise above party interests. Like my hon. friend the hon. member for Pontiac, I have no personal motive in this matter. My motives are purely patriotic. I have no other incentive than a desire to do my duty towards my constituents in particular, and towards what I consider to be the best interests of the whole Ottawa valley.

When the matter was up the last time, I was proceeding to lay before the House the advantages, agricultural, industrial and commercial which, to my mind, this project offers. Referring to the first aspect of the question to which I had begun to address my remarks, I desire to say a word or two in addition. With reference to the agricultural features of the scheme, I want to remind the House that it will help in the colonization of fertile lands as large as the whole of the New England States, and as large as one-half of the whole British Isles. This waterway traverses immense valleys, which surround Lake Temiscamingue and Lake Nipissing and the district of Algoma. These districts are tributary to the Ottawa waterway, and there are in that section, I am told, 2,000,000 acres of fertile lands. These lands are sold to-day for 50 cents per acre. I submit to the House, as a reasonable proposition, that if this waterway were constructed and in operation, these lands would increase at least ten times in value, and would be readily taken up, because they are fertile lands. Those who had an opportunity of visiting that district lately no doubt witnessed the immense developments which have taken place. Wheat which was not grown there until a few years ago, is now being largely harvested. It seems to me that if the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal had no other object than the opening up of these vast lands in the interior, and the bringing about of their immediate settlement, this alone would warrant the expenditure in view.

I want to refer for a moment to the industrial advantages which the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal would bring about. It would, to my mind, at once give the greatest impetus to the lumbering and mineral industries of that vast region. There are, as every one knows, millions of cords of pulpwood in the vicinity of the Ottawa valley. The Sturgeon Falls district has already produced a very large quantity of this article, which has become the subject of, perhaps, the greatest industry in Canada at the present time. At the head of Lake Temiscamingue, I am told, there is a practically inexhaustible supply of pulp-wood; and experienced men who have gone into the subject assure me that if a waterway were constructed there would be a saving of from $1 to $2 on every cord of pulp-wood coming down this waterway. I have no doubt that it would lead to the establishment of flour mills, pulp mills, rolling mills and smelters, and that cities and towns would spring up along its course.

The mining development which would follow its construction would be almost as large and encouraging. We all know that the Ottawa valley is rich in all sorts of minerals—iron, nickel, copper, galena, lead, zinc, mica and phosphates, as well as marbles, and other building materials. Quite recently, too, gold-bearing quartz in large quantities has been discovered close to the banks of the Ottawa River, within 15 or 20 miles of the city of Ottawa, and several mines are now being developed and put into operation. With reference to the mining industry, I want to remind the House of a fact, which is well established on the other side of the line, that is, that water transportation alone has made possible the iron developments of Michigan, Wisconsin and Lake Superior. When we remember that the lumbering and mining industries constitute most of the wealth of the Ottawa valley, and when we remember that 75 per cent of the marvellous traffic of the great lakes and the interior of this continent, depends upon the lumbering and mining industries, we shall at once see the tremendous advantages which this waterway would afford to those two industries.

With reference to the electrical development to which some reference has been made I would ask your permission, Mr. Speaker, to refer to the opinions of experts on this subject, which will show clearly the tremendous advantages which industries in general would derive from the development of electrical power along this waterway. I want to give you first the opinion of Mr. T. C. Clarke, the eminent engineer, who, referring to the water powers of the Ottawa, and the benefits to be derived therefrom, in a report made in February, 1898, expressed himself as follows:—

The dams designed by me * * * absolutely necessary to give sufficient depth for navigation, will also be the means of developing and controlling water-power for electrical appliances. I can state unreservedly that I know of no other place in any manufacturing country—Niagara Falls not excepted—where there is such an amount of water-power as this scheme can make available, both for manufacturing purposes and possibly for moving vessels rapidly through the locks. * * * Adding that available on the Mattawa and French rivers, there will probably be, at a minimum, not less than 700,000 horsepower. The average discharge of the rivers would give not less than four times this amount. All this can be made available by the comparatively small expenditure necessary for flumes and the foundations of penstocks and turbines.

Mr. Walter Shanly, whose opinion I quote with a great deal of confidence in a matter of this kind, says:

Its water-power is not only unlimited in capacity, but available to its full extent at numberless stages along the route. By the opening of the projected navigation this great manufacturing agent would be brought into comparative proximity to the granaries of Lake Michigan, and would immediately be turned to account in preparing the cereals of the west for the markets of the east. With such a combination of advantages in possession or prospect it is surely not difficult of belief that the valley of the Ottawa is destined to be not only the workshop of Canada, but one of the chief manufacturing districts of America.

Mr. Higman, who is an authority on electricity, has also given us an estimate of the value of this water power. The figures are very large, and I shall not weary the House with them, but refer the House to what Mr. Higman has said on the subject.

Then, I come to the commercial feature of the undertaking, which is the most important one, because it includes all the others. In fact, the others are mere accessories to it. We know that cheap transportation is the great commercial question of this continent—admittedly the question of all questions. To get to the seaboard the traffic and the produce of the interior is a question which for many years has engaged the most serious attention of economists and men of business and finance throughout this continent. It is a question upon which depends the ultimate commercial supremacy of the two nations that inhabit the North American continent. I venture the opinion that the growth and enrichment of Canada will follow the solving of that problem. A single glance at the map ought to convince everybody that this Georgian Bay route is the quickest and cheapest from the interior to the seaboard. I shall not trouble the House with the figures adduced on a former occasion, giving comparisons of distances from different places, but shall content myself with reminding the House that this route, when constructed, will be from Duluth or Chicago, 900 miles shorter to Liverpool than by way of New York. If it is the shortest and most direct, it must in time, if not at once, become the cheapest, and then the problem of cheap transportation from the interior to the seaboard will be solved. I believe that when this canal is constructed, it will offer the cheapest route from Duluth, Chicago or Port Arthur to Montreal, and thence to the ocean. I have before me the figures given by Mr. Clarke himself as to the cost of transportation from the points I have mentioned to Montreal, and I wish to refer the House to his report, made in June, 1898, on the subject. The result of his figures is that when this route is constructed the grain which now costs from 5 to 6 cents on board ship in the port of New York, will be transported from Duluth, Chicago or Port Arthur to the city of Montreal for 2½ to 2¼ cents, thus reducing the cost of transportation one-half. In 1898 nearly 250,000,000 bushels of wheat reached the city of Buffalo, and only 35,000,000 reached the city of Montreal. We naturally ask ourselves why that is the case. Well, two reasons are given. One is the want of harbour facilities in Montreal. No doubt, that has been a very potent factor in depriving Canada of the trade to which it is entitled, but that difficulty is now in a fair way of being removed. The Government has entered upon, and intends to prosecute with all diligence, the thorough equipment of the harbour of Montreal with all necessary modern facilities. The other reason given is the great influences of the cities of Buffalo and New York. But I submit that when Canada affords the great lakes a cheaper way, the cheapest on this continent, for transporting grain to an ocean port, the influences of these cities will soon disappear. This is not a question of sentiment, but of dollars. It is a question of commerce. Whether the ships sailing on the great lakes fly the American or the British flag, they will seek the cheapest and the shortest route, and that route is the Ottawa River to Montreal. One of the great objections urged against the Georgian Bay Canal is that it would compete with the St. Lawrence canals. I do not think so. A great many experts, men who know and have given the matter their best thought, assert that it will not be a competitor at all, but there is one thing which I think I am safe in saying, and that is that if the development of our North-west goes on, as we have every reason to hope it will, the St. Lawrence canals will, before very long, become utterly inadequate to handle the freight from the North-west, and that traffic will tax to their fullest capacity both the Georgian Bay Canal, when constructed, and the St. Lawrence canals.

On a former occasion I cited to you, Mr. Speaker, the opinions of our most eminent public men in the past—Sir John Macdonald, the Hon. Alex. Mackenzie—and also the opinion of Sir William Van Horne, and many others. I also cited the opinion of Major Symons. I would like now to give the views of a few more prominent men who have delivered themselves on this subject. First of all, I want to call your attention to a very remarkable statement made long ago—remarkable not only because of the deep thought and foresight which it displayed, but because it was made so long ago, and may be called a prophecy. I wish to refer you to the opinion of Sir John Michel, who was at one time commander-in-chief of Her Majesty's forces in Canada. This is what he said, many years ago, when addressing a public meeting in Ottawa:

Mr. BELCOURT.

I believe that the ties which happily unite Great Britain and Canada will be closer drawn by the opening of this route. I believe that the commercial development which would be produced would be incalculable. I believe that America and Canada, and consequently Great Britain, will be so commercially allied by the opening of this route that the grand object of all true lovers of either of these countries would be attained, namely, the certain peaceful dispersion of every little cloud that might arise in the political horizon of North America.

Speaking of the position of the city of Montreal he added:

You are placed in a position held by no other city I know of in the world. You are placed on the only spot on a vast continent which can be made the receiving-house of one-third a continent's exterior trade, and able to despatch that third to Europe. But you are unsafely situated. The grand route to the sea by the Ottawa and French rivers should, as soon as possible, be undertaken, giving you a back-bone of military strength, and bringing to your doors the vast trade of the vaster west.

These seem prophetic words uttered so long ago—words which I trust are about to be verified.

Mr. Walter Shanly also expressed himself at one time in this way:

To those who have made the laws that govern the movements of western traffic their study I leave it to estimate the height to which Canada will be elevated in commercial importance by opening through the heart of the Dominion a continuous navigation, the shortest water communication that now does or ever can exist besides between tide-water, whether in the Gulf of St. Lawrence or in the estuary of the Hudson, and the broadest extent of grain-growing country in the world.

An American engineer, of considerable repute, said the other day considering the Georgian Bay Canal:

My conviction that the Ottawa River offers the best opportunity on the globe for a well-planned ship canal is a fixed one.

Our own press throughout Canada have almost continuously discussed this matter. The "Trade Bulletin," in a recent issue, expressed itself in this way:

One great desideratum in our canal system will be felt until the Georgian Bay Canal is built, and all who have the best interests of the Dominion at heart should put forth every effort to further the completion of this shortest of all water routes connecting the big traffic of the Canadian and American North-west with the foot of ocean navigation at Montreal. Then, instead of doing a business of 38,000,000 bushels of grain in a season, we could easily overtop the 100,000,000 bushels mark, and eventually double it. Imagine the large increase in the number of ocean vessels which would be attracted to this port, and the additional import trade which would arise therefrom. If the present Government were wise they would raise an everlasting monument to their beneficent rule, by lending their aid in commencing the construction of the Montreal, Ottawa and Georgian Bay Canal at as early a date as possible, as it promises to be one of the greatest commercial projects on this continent.

Not only has the Canadian press given the matter its serious attention, but we find that every English paper of importance has, within a year or so, taken it up and discussed it repeatedly. I have read a great number of articles, the best of the great newspapers in England advocating the construction of this waterway. Not to weary the House, I shall content myself with quoting one opinion, which is as recent as the 20th May. I have here an article in "Black and White," a very remarkable article and one which I would ask every hon. member of the House to read. I will only read a few extracts on this occasion. "Black and White" compares the project with Cecil Rhodes's great Cape to Cairo Railway, and states that in the writer's opinion the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal is of far more Imperial importance even than that great railway, and has in it the possibility of greater commercial advantages to England. It then goes on :

The dependence upon the United States of America of all Canadian means of transportation, whether by water or by rail is immaterial, is the most prominent and most serious characteristic of the transit question in the Dominion, and one which makes the construction of any line of communication, which would be identified with the sole authority of Great Britain, of the most supreme importance, elevating the entire undertaking beyond the regions of commerce, and mere economical and ethical qualities of such an object, to a position which is in analogy with the projection and possession of a new Imperial measure for defence. The arrangement between America and Canada is not calculated to be disturbed so long as Great Britain and the United States remain upon terms of amicable indifference ; but the advantages to Canada, even in time of peace, of possessing an inland waterway, immune from any international contingency, are not to be lightly appraised. Nor is such a fatality liable to happen, for the canal has already been the subject of a special commission of inquiry by the Dominion Senate, and something more definite than an interchange of opinions and views has taken place between the War Office and the Federal Government since Canada made representations upon the subject to them.

The anomalous position in which Canada is placed by the exercise with America of a joint paramountcy over the transit of Canadian commerce is owing, in no small degree, to the motives which actuated British policy to surrender Maine to America in the early history of the rise of that Republic to power. By the surrender of Maine an "all-red" line of railway between Halifax and New Westminster, between the east and west, became virtually impossible, since the Canadian Pacific is compelled to cross American territory in the most important, and at the same time most vulnerable, section of its trans-continental route. Thus does posterity reap the sins of its progenitor, and Canadians to-day are bitterly repenting this blunder of an earlier generation.

The completion of the canal should inaugurate an epoch of much greater prosperity throughout the Dominion, more particularly in those parts which are contiguous to the great lakes ; almost two million square miles west of Chicago and Duluth will become dependent upon it. Montreal and Quebec will become distributing centres for trade and freight between the west and Europe, while the difference in time and in the rates of insurance—from which is implied the greater security of the new route—will cause an immense traffic from the grain-growing areas and cattle-raising districts of the North-west to be shipped by the "all-red" canal. Montreal and the adjacent provinces can hardly escape from the prosperity which will accrue from this augmentation in existing trade, while the splendid opportunities which Montreal and Quebec will present as depôts for the commerce of the northern states of the American continent cannot but seriously affect New York.

Such is the opinion of "Black and White." This, I believe, is a fair sample of the numerous articles that are appearing in the press of the mother country concerning the Georgian Bay Canal. My hon. friend from Pontiac (Mr. Poupore) has referred to the great number of resolutions passed by boards of trade and chambers of commerce along the route from the Georgian Bay to the city of Montreal. As representing the Capital I have much pleasure in laying before the House, as requested, the resolution passed by a mass meeting of the citizens of Ottawa, held on the 24th January, 1899, on this subject. I shall not read it, because it is very much on the lines of those that have been already read. This project is not only engaging the attention of the Canadian and English people, but it is also engaging the very serious attention of our friends across the line. Not only is it engaging their attention, but I assert with confidence—and I have a number of authorities to back up what I say—that it has aroused their envy, their jealousy and their dire fear. If time permitted, I could read to the House various statements that have appeared in their newspapers and magazines recently on this project. These would show the House at once with what fear and envy the Americans look forward to the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal. My hon. friend from Pontiac quoted the opinion of the "Tribune." I shall now, with your permission, quote the opinion of a gentleman well known in the United States who has made a reputation for himself as a strong advocate of railways as against canals, a gentleman who does not believe in waterways but does believe in railways. In an article that appeared in the "North American Review," of February, 1898, Mr. Latcha, an authority on the subject, said :

It is not denied, but is asserted, that a ship canal, if built of the width and depth of the Baltic Canal, whether by New York State or by the St. Lawrence River, will greatly benefit portions of the North-west. But is all-important to know what portions of the North-west would thus be benefited and what would be the result of building that canal to our nation at large. To determine this we must go to the foundation of the question at once.

You will see that this gentleman indulges the hope that Canada, including the North-west, will one day be part of the United States. I mention that to show that his opinion upon this subject must be taken as absolutely sincere.

More than one-third of that vast territory is arable,—

Speaking of our own North-west.

—and when thoroughly developed would produce annually from 500,000,000 to 750,000,000 bushels of wheat, while the wheat crop of the entire United States does not now average more than 500,000,000 bushels annually. The Dominion Government a few years ago expended thousands of dollars in transportation and supplies to aid settlers upon those lands. The serious decline in prices of all grains rendered it impossible for the Canadian Pacific Railway to transport the crops from that territory to market at a rate which would leave income sufficient to support the producer. The result was, the settlers who were able to leave deserted the country. With a ship canal, however, which would permit the largest ocean steamers to go to and from the west end of lake Superior,—

Of course, this is an error. The promoters of this waterway do not entertain the opinion that a ship canal of the depth mentioned here is at all necessary.

—wheat could be grown in that vast region and be marketed in Europe at prices which would utterly destroy the wheat and corn markets of the United States; for nothing can be more evident than that if the British North-west produce millions of bushels of wheat in excess of that now grown in the United States, the price of that cereal would fall, and corn would accompany it in its downward course. But that wheat will not seek Duluth for market, much less would it seek Chicago. The Canadian Pacific Railway would extend branches throughout that territory and control the carriage of the grain to water, and their water port would be Port Arthur. That grain would not seek New York city for a market, but would traverse the natural water route to Montreal, which would be the great financial centre controlling that commerce, destroying the grain export business of New York city.

When the writer was building the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic Railway, the Dominion Government began the construction of its ship canal around Sault Ste. Marie on its own territory. At that time, it was repeatedly stated, a principal reason for building that canal was to prepare for diverting the milling business of the North-west to the Dominion side of the Sault Ste. Marie. The vast power which could be developed at that point must be apparent. While our wheat supply comes from Dakota and Minnesota, Minneapolis can control that business. But the day a great ship canal is built from the ocean to the British North-west will see the milling interests removed to the Canadian side of the river, destroying the Minneapolis milling business just as certainly as that of Rochester was destroyed by the development of our western fields.

When the British North-west can raise and ship by canal 100,000,000 bushels of wheat, British capital will build the Georgian Bay Ship Canal, and every ton of traffic from the Lake Superior regions to the ocean will traverse British territory, leaving Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland and Buffalo hundreds of miles from the direct route to the ocean. The bulk of the traffic of the great North-west will be carried on British vessels, manned by British seamen, and destined largely for British ports. The truth of this must be obvious, because it is well known that but one distinctively American steamship line is engaged in carrying the world's commerce between the United States and Europe, while a dozen such lines are operated by British, German, French and other European companies. With free access for British vessels to our great lakes, American shipping would be drowned in those waters; the low wages paid seamen by Great Britain would drive our seamen from our inland seas; the ship-building industries at Detroit, Cleveland and other great lake cities would be seriously crippled or destroyed. But more disastrous than all these, the agriculturist in the United States would be hopelessly impoverished. Our Canadian neighbours are able diplomats and keen business men; they know precisely what they want, and hope and believe they can induce us to bear the cost of satisfying their wants. Thus far their waterway conventions at Toronto, Cleveland and elsewhere have amply met their most sanguine wishes. But should we build that canal before the British possessions become part of our territory, we would perpetuate the monumental folly of all ages, a folly only exceeded by the Trojan's theft of the Grecian horse.

Mr. BELCOURT.

This opinion does not by any means stand alone in the United States. In the April number of the "Anglo-American," under the heading "From the Great Lakes to the Ocean," there was an article by a civil engineer, named Gilmore. After referring to the shortness of the route and the reduction in the rate which this Ottawa waterway will of necessity bring about, this gentleman goes on to say:

These figures proclaim the superiority of this over existing routes more forcibly than could the most impassioned appeal or the most flowery rhetoric. That terse maxim which the sporting man loves to enunciate: "Money talks," is the maxim of business. It has been ascertained that this canal is feasible and will save time. Time is money. Therefore, it will be built; of that there is no doubt. But upon what scale? Shall it be a 14-foot bargeway, a 20-foot ship canal, or a 30-foot waterway for the largest ocean steamer? The cost of this last will be very considerable, and beyond the means of Canada alone at present. The first at least is certain of accomplishment. The advisability of a betwixt-and-between compromise is questionable.

I do not wish to weary the House at any great length with these citations. I have given a number of them because I think the language is much more terse than I could use, and because they express the opinion of men who are absolutely disinterested, and whose opinion should have great weight with us. I find another very strong evidence of the envy, and jealousy, and fear with which the Americans look upon the construction of this waterway. I am sure every hon. member read a suggestion made some time last November, while the International Commission was sitting in Washington, a suggestion which was made in a number of American newspapers, that, in addition to the questions then engaging the attention of the Commission, the question of an International canal was also deserving of their consideration. I have no doubt that the conception of an international canal by our friends to the south was prompted by the fear that this Georgian Bay route would be constructed. I have not the slightest doubt that they feel that, when this canal is constructed, the enormous traffic of the great lakes will be diverted, and brought down by the Ottawa route. It was because they felt they were likely to lose this traffic, that they suggested that a canal should be built by way of Lake Champlain to Montreal, the suggestion being accompanied by another suggestion, that this International canal should be under the joint jurisdiction of both Governments. Another evidence of the danger which the Americans see in the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal, is a suggestion made some time ago to construct a canal from Albany to Buffalo, in order to cover the whole distance by water from Duluth, or Chicago, through to the harbour of New York, and to avoid transshipments at Buffalo and Albany. I submit that every one who will look into this question without prejudice, who will examine it seriously, will be struck with the immense advantages, commercial and national, which it offers to Canada. I was glad indeed to hear the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier), at least on one occasion, express the opinion that this would be indeed a very great and potent factor in bringing through our country the great traffic of the west. The Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte), whose opinion my good friend from Pontiac (Mr. Poupore) quoted the other day, is also of the same opinion. I believe, the Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Blair), on some public occasion, not long ago, also expressed himself in the same way. The leader of the Opposition, and many gentlemen on the other side of the House, also entertain, I know, the belief that this route must, and will soon, be constructed. It seems that the greatest difficulty in the way of the Government at the present moment giving the guarantee which is sought by the capitalists who are prepared to go into this matter, is a doubt whether this enterprise is feasible, and whether, when constructed, it will be of commercial value to those who will invest their money in it. With your permission, I shall briefly address myself to these two points, and endeavour to show that, not only is the canal feasible, not only is it practicable, but that every opinion which can be formed at the present moment is to the effect that this canal will be a paying venture to those who will invest their money in it.

With reference to the feasibility of the scheme, I want to remind you that, as far back as 1830, engineers, like Mr. Shanly and Mr. Clarke, were instructed by the Government to make surveys and to examine the country between Georgian Bay and Montreal. At that time, I believe, a complete survey was not made between Ottawa and Montreal, but a survey was made between Ottawa and the Georgian Bay, and it is embodied in the report made by these gentlemen. That report covers a great many pages. I think that every member in this House is confronted with the difficulty with which I was confronted myself, on account of the matter contained in that report being to a great extent technical. One who is not a professional engineer, is appalled by the figures which are there given. But I am satisfied that there is in that report all the data upon which an estimate may be made as to the cost of the work, and by which a conclusion may be arrived at as to the feasibility of the project. I shall not endeavour, of course, to criticise or go over the items of this report, but I invite the attention of every hon. gentleman who wishes thoroughly to inform himself upon the subject, to the reports of Mr. Shanly and Mr. Clarke. I desire, Sir, to put on "Hansard" the report of Mr. Marcus Smith made on the 30th December, 1898, because it is of very great importance and because, I believe, the report was procured largely to remove the doubt which existed in the minds of some as to the feasibility of the Georgian Bay Canal. In that report, which is addressed to Mr. McLeod Stewart, Mr. Marcus Smith, amongst other things, says:

Estimates have been made for the construction of this work on a scale of 10 feet depth of water on the mitre-sills of locks and 12 feet in canal, river and lake channels. But it is now required that the depth on mitre-sills of locks shall be 14 feet, and in canal, river and lake channels 15 to 16 feet, according as the bottom may be rock or earth.

The question has been raised whether there is a sufficient supply of water and depth in the channels of rivers and lakes to maintain these dimensions throughout the season of navigation?

From my knowledge and judgment I should answer in the affirmative, but for the information of yourself and others I submit the following:—

Then follows a great many figures and details mentioned by Mr. Smith with which I will not trouble the House. He comes to this conclusion as to that part of it:

There is ample depth of water in Trout and Turtle lakes, so that when lowered to the adjusted level of Lake Nipissing there will be more than sufficient depth left for navigation on the scale required.

The excavation for the canal between Lakes Nipissing and Trout, and in deepening the river at the east end of Turtle Lake will be heavy; the quantities can be calculated from the plans and profiles of the Government survey. Thus the great body of water in Lake Nipissing will occupy the unique position of the summit level of the whole scheme, so that its waters can be directed westward to Lake Huron or eastward, co-mingling with those of the Ottawa to Montreal.

On this arrangement Mr. T. C. Clarke remarks: "The waters of Lake Nipissing are sufficient for any scale of navigation for all time to come."

3. The Ottawa River has at any stage a sufficient body of water for the scale of navigation now proposed. The total fall between the mouth of the Mattawa River and Lake Deschênes is fully 300 feet, not uniform, but with stretches of still water, light currents and long rapids.

The banks of the river are generally high and mostly rocky. Taking advantage of this, Mr. T. C. Clarke has arranged the works in a series of high dams and locks to overcome the rapids, so that there are only two places (in the Culbute channel) where rock-cutting and dredging is necessary, except in short approaches to the locks. For the larger scale of navigation now required there will be more of that class of work, but the quantity will be moderate.

From the city of Ottawa to Grenville the latest information we have of the depth of water is from the report of Mr. (now Sir) Sandford Fleming, from soundings made under his directions in 1888. On the longitudinal section of the channel the least and greatest depth of water is given for each mile, reduced to a uniform datum, which conforms to the lowest level of the river, taken daily by the lock-master of the Rideau Canal during a period of seventeen years.

Mr. Fleming states: "There are only five points on the whole distance of 60 miles on which the depth of the channel on extreme low water is under 10 feet, * * * and these shallow parts are limited in length to a few hundred yards each, the whole making an aggregate length of a mile. * * * The material to be dredged is coarse red sand, and finer sand or silt in about equal proportions."

For the depth of water now required there will be, at extreme low water, according to Mr. Fleming's table of soundings, twelve points at which dredging will be required, varying from 1 to 9 feet in depth in short lengths. These may probably be reduced by the necessary enlargement of the locks and canal between Grenville and Carillon for the larger scale of navigation, if the dams are raised a few feet.

From Carillon to Lachine no dredging is shown for a 12 feet depth of channel, but for a 16 feet channel there may be some dredging. This can be ascertained from the charts and soundings of the Ottawa River in the Department of Public Works.

Now, as will be seen by the report which I have just read, which was made as recently as December, 1898, Mr. Marcus Smith, upon his own information, upon the evidence of Mr. Clarke and upon information supplied to him by Sir Sandford Fleming, whom he quotes, says clearly that, not only is the scheme feasible, not only can a uniform depth of fourteen feet be obtained, but that the work is comparatively easy and will not cost a very large sum of money. When the matter was up before the other branch of this Parliament certain gentlemen were examined on this and other points, and considerable information was then obtained. I would invite the attention and the serious attention of the House to the evidence which was laid before the committee of the Senate in 1898. Mr. Marcus Smith, whose report I have just quoted, who was examined at that time, made this further statement:

Mr. BELCOURT.

I am acquainted with this from the very commencement of the surveys in 1858 and 1860. Mr. Walter Shanly, the engineer, commenced the surveys of this work in 1858, and they were completed by Mr. T. C. Clarke in 1860. I know both these gentlemen very well, and I know many of the assistants, as they have been working with me on other work; and I have seen most of the plans, soundings, profiles and so on deposited in the Government office, and they are very complete. They are quite enough to make an estimate both as to the practicability of the work and the cost of construction.

Mr. Smith says the work is feasible, that the plans, sounding and profiles are quite sufficient to warrant him in coming to a definite conclusion as to the practicability of the work and in forming an estimate as to the cost of construction. Mr. T. C. Clarke, M. Inst. C.E., in his report to the Government of Canada, in 1860, says:

In the first place I have to report that the distance between Montreal and the mouth of the French River on Lake Huron (according to the plans furnished me by the department), is, following the line of navigation adopted, 430.76 miles.

That of this distance 351.81 miles are already a perfectly natural navigation, and require no improvement, and that it is perfectly practicable so to improve the remaining 78.95 miles as to convert the whole chain of waters into a first-class navigation for steam vessels, and to reduce the length of canalling to 29.32 miles, or, exclusive of the Lachine Canal, to 20.82 miles.

In a later report, he says:

To improve the navigation of such a river system is comparatively easy, for the greater part is already accomplished.

Then Mr. Wellington, the American engineer, whose opinion I have already quoted, in another part of my remarks, at one time expressed himself as follows:—

The finest place on the globe for a deep-water canal is the Ottawa River route.

Mr. Wicksteed, who was examined also before the committee of the Senate, said:

As to the feasibility of the undertaking, I think there is no question whatever. I was over the greater part of it last winter with Mr. Stewart.

I also desire to call your attention to the evidence given by Mr. Wicksteed before the Senate committee on the same point. I submit with confidence that the evidence I have cited to the House must be looked upon as conclusive, and, it seems to me, that, on that evidence, the Government is absolutely warranted in granting the guarantee which is now asked by the promoters. We have full and complete returns from actual surveys by Canada's best qualified engineers. There are plans, profiles and maps of the whole undertaking, from the Georgian Bay to the city of Montreal, and the opinions of the Canadian engineers are corroborated by the opinions of eminent American and British engineers. We have full details as to the quality, quantity and nature of the work to be performed, and we have full statements as to the nature of the locks, the nature of the dams and their extent and size. We know exactly from the reports of the engineers, the amount and the character of the dredging and its cost. I submit, Sir, that the proper depth of this canal should be fourteen feet. I have cited to you the opinion given by one eminent engineer as to that, and I would also invite your attention to the opinion expressed in the "North American Review" of June last, by another American engineer :

The project for a canal by which lake steamers should be enabled to reach the Atlantic is no new thing, and for more than ten years it has been strongly advocated by those interested in the commerce of the lakes. A number of routes for such a waterway have been proposed, but as yet no survey of any one of them has been completed. Owing in great part to the efforts of the Deep Waterway Association, a body composed of men actively concerned in lake shipping, Congress in 1895 created a Deep Waterways Commission for the purpose of investigating the feasibility of building such a canal "as shall enable vessels engaged in ocean commerce to pass to and fro between the great lakes and the Atlantic Ocean." Early in the year following, the commission reported that such a canal should ultimately have a depth of 28 feet, and that the Government would be justified in undertaking the work. It further recommended that surveys be made for such a canal. Later in the same year Congress appropriated funds for the purpose, and the surveys are now being made. While the Deep Waterways Commission were engaged upon their labour, Congress authorized the Secretary of War to have made an examination and estimates of cost of a canal "of sufficient capacity to transport the tonnage of the lakes to the sea." Whatever the purpose of Congress may have been, the act was less particular in its terms than the one previously passed, and it allowed an investigation into the question of what depth of canal would be best in the light of all the interests involved. By direction of the Secretary of War a preliminary examination was made by Major Thomas W. Symons, of the Engineer Corps. After careful consideration of the subject, Major Symons reported that a ship canal capable of floating a large ocean steamer would not be of sufficient benefit to justify its construction; but that a canal of about 12 feet depth, designed to carry barges of about 1,500 tons burden, such as could safely be towed to any part of the great lake system, would meet the demands of commerce and should be built. Two propositions are thus before Congress: first, to construct a 28-foot waterway from the lakes to tide-water, at a total cost of more than $300,000,000, for the surveys of which the sum of $150,000 already has been appropriated; and second, to build a similar canal of a depth of 12 feet at a cost of about $50,000,000.

There is another question which I presume the Government is desirous of having right thrown upon, and that is as to the cost of the work. Estimates were made by Mr. Clarke and Mr. Shanly, in 1860, when they made their report to the Government. Of course these figures have had to be changed very considerably since, principally on account of the increased depth of water now necessary. At that time it was contemplated to make a 9-foot canal only, but now, in order to be in line with the St. Lawrence Canal system, we must have a depth of 14 feet. Mr. Clarke has carefully and in detail, last year, revised his estimates of 1860, and his revised estimate amounts to $17,000,000. It is true that estimate does not agree with that of Mr. Walter Shanly, but Mr. Shanly's figures are explained in a satisfactory manner, an explanation which I could give the House if time permitted. The figures I propose to adhere to, however, are the figures given by Mr. Marcus Smith. He, last year, estimated the cost of this work, basing his estimate on the details, plans and profiles to which I have referred, at $25,000,000, and the promoters of the undertaking have adopted these figures and are prepared to expend $25,000,000 or $30,000,000 in the construction of this canal. On this question of the cost, I would also refer hon. gentlemen to the evidence given before the Senate Committee, which evidence has been printed and which they can read for themselves. With reference to the other question, as to the commercial value of the enterprise to those who will invest their money in it, I confess it is a matter of great difficulty to me, because I have not the knowledge or the data at my hand upon which to form a conclusion, and even if I had, I would probably be much embarrassed. Further, I wish to remind the House, that the estimate of the revenue which may be and will be likely to be derived from the operation of this waterway, has been made by Mr. Clarke and other gentlemen who are in a position to judge. In their opinion there is no question whatever, that commercially speaking, the venture will be a paying one to those who will invest their capital in it. It seems to me that the opinion of such men as Sir William Van Horne and others, who might, perhaps, be prejudiced against a waterway of this kind, and whose opinion in its favour should, therefore, have the more weight; it seems to me that the opinion of these men should be of sufficient importance to justify the Government in accepting them as conclusive, without going further into the question. To my mind, the Government is not called upon in this case, to guarantee the commercial value of the enterprise to those who are going to invest their capital in it. It would occur to me that all the Government should ask is a reasonable assurance from people who are in a position to know, that this waterway would be sufficiently paying to warrant the people who are investing their money in it to go to that expense. In England, whence most of the capital for this canal is to come, the opinion is very general that this will be a paying enterprise. I would like to remind hon. members that the old maxim "Fortuna juvat audaces" applies as much if not more to commercial matters than to any other human concern, and I might add that perhaps no race on earth has proven more clearly the truth of that maxim than has the English race. Here we have British capitalists who are bold enough to come into Canada and expend $20,000,000 or $25,000,000 in constructing this canal, and, Sir, the men who are willing to go into that undertaking will at once prove the truth of the maxim I have quoted, if any people in the world can.

What is it these capitalists ask? They come here and say: "We are going to build this canal with our own money; we are prepared to spend $25,000,000 in doing so; we do not ask the Government to give us any guarantee at all for the present; the guarantee we ask shall not be operative until and unless this canal is wholly built and put into active operation." The guarantee they ask is 2½ per cent on $20,000,000, only a portion of the interest on the bonds; and I repeat—because it seems to me a very important consideration—that they are prepared to go on at once and in three years construct, equip and put into operation this canal without one cent of public money from the treasury of Canada. It is only when the canal is built, and if built that they ask the Government to act upon the guarantee which they now seek.

I know, Mr. Speaker, a great deal of objection has been raised, and not improperly—on the contrary, with a great deal of justification—against the Government pledging the credit of the nation on behalf of enterprises of this sort, until they have some reasonable assurance of its feasibility and its paying nature. The case of the Chignecto Ship Railway was mentioned the other day by my hon. friend from Pontiac, who pointed out very properly that that case was entirely different from this. In that case the Government bound itself to pay the promoters of the railway a subsidy of $170,000 a year for 20 years. The Government were bound to pay the subsidy provided the people went on with the work. It seems to me that this case is entirely different from that, not only in regard to its commercial aspect and the guarantee asked, but in regard to its prospects of success. Those who sat in the House at the time, remember how assiduously and how strongly certain members fought against the granting of the subsidy to the Chignecto Railway. It was asserted boldly in the House that it was a wild-cat scheme, a scheme condemned to be a failure; and yet the subsidy was granted. But this case is entirely different. We find gentlemen on both sides of the House supporting it; we find the press of Canada, the press of the United States and the press of Great Britain almost a unit in advocating this scheme as offering the greatest commercial advantages to Canada and as being a most potent factor in the development and enrichment of our country. In this case we have the strongest possible evidence, as to the feasibility of the scheme and as to its ultimate success, that could possibly be given. In the case of the Chignecto Railway that was all wanting.

Mr. BELCOURT.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me, for the reasons I have mentioned, that the feasibility and commercial value of this scheme are established, and any one who will with an unprejudiced mind seriously look into it will come to the conclusion that the time has come when the Georgian Bay Canal must be constructed.

Another objection—and I desire to elude none of them—which has been raised against the construction of this canal is that the Government itself should undertake this work—that it should be a Government work constructed and paid for by the Government with public funds. Well, that is a matter of opinion. I do not agree with those who think that the canal should be constructed by the Government; but in this case the question is not a material one, because hon. gentlemen will remember that the Act of incorporation of the Georgian Bay Canal Company provides in section 43 that Her Majesty may at any time take possession of and operate this waterway for the public benefit. I will cite the section:

Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, may at any time assume the possession and property of the said canals and works, and of all the rights and privileges and advantages of the company, all of which shall, after such assumption, be vested in Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, on giving to the company one week's notice thereof and paying to the company the value of the same, to be fixed by three arbitrators or the majority of them, one to be chosen by the Government, another by the company, and a third arbitrator by the two arbitrators; and the arbitrators may in such valuation take into account the expenditure of the company, its property, the business of the canals, and other works hereby authorized, and its past, present and prospective business, with interest from the time of the investment thereof.

So you will see that although this canal may be constructed with private funds, the Crown may at any time step in and resume possession of it.

Before I sit down, Mr. Speaker, I want to call your attention to the character of the men who have taken this matter up in England. I want to cite to you the names of the gentlemen who form part of the syndicate and who have deposited in the Bank of Commerce at Ottawa the sum required, being 10 per cent of the capital authorized of the Georgian Bay Canal Company. A syndicate has been formed with a capital of £50,000, and £41,200 have been deposited by the Lloyd's Bank in London to the credit of this company in the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Ottawa. What better evidence of good faith, and of the determination of these men to go on and construct this work could be given? And when I mention the names of these men, I am sure that the House will be impressed with their solvency, their seriousness, and their ability to bring to successful completion a work of this kind. These are some of the gentlemen who form the syndicate: Right Hon.

Sir Edward Thornton, late British Ambassador at Washington ; Right Hon. Sir Henry Fowler, late Secretary of State for India ; A. L. Jones, of the Elder-Dempster Co. ; R. N. Perks, M.P. for Lincolnshire ; Mr. MacIvor, M.P. for Liverpool, and one of the most influential members of the Cunard Steamship Co. ; Mr. G. G. Blackwell, of Blackwell Day & Co., of Liverpool ; the Marquis of Tweeddale ; Sir Dixon Mackenzie ; Lord Kelvin, of Glasgow ; C. J. Sassoon, of the East India Co. ; Sir Luther Vaughan, Mr. Francis Durant, Mr. Anderson, Lord Provost of Glasgow ; J. T. Reid, Director of the Bank of Scotland ; and others. The House, I am sure, will see at once that these men, having shown their faith in the undertaking by subscribing largely to the stock of this syndicate, are fully competent to procure the funds necessary to carry it to successful completion.

I have, Mr. Speaker, to the best of my ability, and as fully as my limited knowledge would permit, endeavoured to answer the objections which have been urged against this vast project, and to deal with the difficulties which it no doubt offers. The undertaking is too vast, too far-reaching, too important not to have aroused a great many objections, and much enmity and opposition. Not only have objections been raised against it, but that usually effective weapon, ridicule, has been brought into play in order to destroy it. But, Sir, the project, since its inception, has risen above party politics ; it has survived opposition and enmity ; it has stood the test of severe and close criticism, and today it stands forth as the great, national and truly imperial project that it is. I may not have answered successfully all the objections which may be entertained by the Government with reference to the guarantee that is asked ; but I assure you that I have not tried to elude any of them ; and if I have not succeeded in convincing you and my colleagues of the great commercial advantages which will flow to our country from the completion of this great waterway ; if I have not succeeded in getting you, Sir, and my colleagues to share my firm belief in the necessity and ultimate success of the Georgian Bay water route, I trust that I may venture the hope and belief that I have, along with my friend Mr. Poupore, made out such a case that every member of this House will consider it his bounden duty at least to look into the question, and give it his serious and unprejudiced attention. I think I have made out such a case that the Government of the day cannot afford not to give it their prompt and serious consideration, and I have every reason to hope and believe that they will do so. My hon. friend (Mr. Poupore) and myself do not expect anything else from the Government or from any member of this House. All we desire is that the matter should be looked into and investigated ; and I make bold to say that every one who does so will be as thoroughly satisfied as we are that the time has come when the Georgian Bay Canal shall be constructed. I trust, therefore, Mr. Speaker, that the Government will delay no longer in granting to the gentlemen prepared to spend their own money in this undertaking, the guarantee which they ask, and in enabling us to take full advantage of the magnificent natural waterway which Providence has given us—a waterway which in a very short time will divert and put in our control the enormous traffic of the great lakes and of the interior of this continent ; which will at the same time colonize, develop and enrich a large portion of Ontario and Quebec—a waterway which I am sure will make of the cities of Montreal and Quebec the true rivals of New York and Boston, and of the city of Ottawa, the worthy capital of this Dominion. The construction and thorough equipment of this waterway ought not, it seems to me, to be any longer a matter of doubt. Every one who has taken the trouble to look into it is and must be convinced that it must be constructed before long. I believe myself that the time has come for doing it. If we wish to divert the traffic which properly belongs to us, and which nature designed us to have, we must at once be up and doing. Our neighbours to the south, who realize the great benefits of this canal, with their well known prodigious energy and spirit of enterprise, will not neglect to take any and all steps, and will not shrink from the greatest of sacrifices, in order to retain within their own control the great traffic which I believe, if the Georgian Bay Canal is completed, will be surely wrested from them. Let the Georgian Bay Canal be speedily constructed, and the Ottawa and French rivers, which three centuries ago formed the route by which Christianity and civilization were carried into the interior of the country, will become the greatest channel of commerce and of national prosperity on the continent we inhabit.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker, and the hon. members of this House for having listened to me so patiently and for so long a time, particularly on an evening so trying as this. Before I sit down, I again bespeak for this project the serious and earnest attention of the Government and of the members of this House.

Mr. J. B. KLOCK (Nipissing). Mr. Speaker, it is with considerable diffidence that I rise to address this House, and I, therefore, crave your indulgence. Apart from any opinion of mine, I may say that my constituents are very much interested in this great national scheme, and consider it the best means of developing that great northern country, which is a land of unlimited resources. I am a strong and enthusiastic supporter of the scheme, and I regret very much that I do not possess the persuasive powers and eloquence of the gentlemen who have preceded me, especially the hon. member for Pontiac

(Mr. Poupore). These hon. gentlemen have put this matter before the House so carefully, clearly and concisely that very little is left for me to say. I feel, however, that I must say a few words. I do not intend to detain the House very long, and I trust that I shall be able to speak to the point and make myself plain. I shall not refer to statistics or comparisons, for if the Government want any information on this score, I am sure they will get all the information that can be had from the promoter of this scheme, Mr. McLeod Stewart. This is not by any means a new idea. It had occupied the minds of some of the greatest men of the Ottawa valley for almost a century, in proof of which assertion I shall refer to some of the debates of this House. On page 1211 of "Hansard," 20th April, 1885, the Hon. Peter White, member for North Renfrew, moved a resolution in favour of this scheme, and my reasons for referring particularly to these debates are because the men who took part in the discussions of that day were very earnest and knew whereof they were talking. In opening up his remarks, Mr. White said :

In what I am saying I am not offering any new theory or project. This scheme has been spoken of and been before the country for many years, but for several years nothing has been said about it. I believe that at the instance of Mr. John Egan, a former member of the old legislature of the province of Canada, for the county of Pontiac, this question of improving the navigation of the Ottawa was first brought to the attention of the Government, and as early as 1854 work was commenced on the impediment known as the Chats Rapids for the purpose of connecting the Chats and Deschênes lakes. Considerable money was spent in the execution of that work, and it was continued until 1857, when for some cause the work was abandoned.

I am sure it was an oversight of the Hon. Mr. White that he did not explain the cause. In the first place, a very unfortunate thing occurred. Mr. John Egan died, who, I have always heard, was one of the brightest and most far-seeing men that ever lived in the Ottawa valley, and I am of the opinion that that was the reason why the work was delayed. Had he lived for twenty years longer, I feel assured that that great scheme would have been an accomplished fact, and the grain now going by Buffalo would at this very moment be passing down in vessels behind this bullding for the port of Montreal.

Later on the all absorbing question of confederation was taken up, and with it the building of the great transcontinental railway for the purpose of binding all the provinces together. Under those circumstances, it is not a matter of surprise that the Georgian Bay Canal scheme became a dead issue until Mr. White took it up again in the House.

As I have already said, all those public men, namely, the Hon. Mr. Tassé, then member for Ottawa, Mr. Bryson, Mr. Dawson.

of Algoma, and several others spoke strongly in its favour ; and, although they did not carry their views to a successful issue, it was through no fault of theirs, but because the Canadian Pacific Railway and other great public works were in hand, and the country was not ripe for this question. One remarkable thing at that time is, that there was practically no opposition to the scheme, so far as its feasibility was concerned. There seemed to be a little jealousy—perhaps I should not use that word—on the part of those interested in the Trent Valley Canal ; but this does not exist now, and, so far as I am concerned, I shall be pleased, and so would all other supporters of the Georgian Bay Canal, to see that Trent Valley scheme carried out as well. Without detracting from that scheme, or from the Toronto and Georgian Bay Canal scheme, I may say, that these have just one purpose to fulfil, that is, the carrying of the grain ; but the Georgian Bay Canal has several purposes. The Trent Valley Canal passes through a rich and fertile country, where they have railways, while this scheme would not only be of advantage to the grain-carrying trade, but would develop a large and rich mineral and agricultural territory within a very few years. If the country was not ripe for this scheme, when Mr. White introduced it in 1885, I am sure it is ripe for it now ; and I do not think any one would form any other opinion, if he consulted the people of the Ottawa valley. While the Ottawa valley may not be the whole country, it is a very important part of this country. In it I include a part of the district of Montreal. What would benefit the Ottawa valley would benefit all Canada. I was very much pleased, when the Prime Minister stated, at the beginning of this Parliament, that his policy was to lessen the cost of transportation. If he was—as no doubt he was—in earnest, here is his opportunity. Now, let me refer again to Mr. Tassé's remarks. This is what he says :

Trade follows the safest, the shortest and the cheapest routes. This is one of the first laws it obeys. It knows no frontier, no country, no nationality. It may have preference, but not to its detriment. If this contention be undisputed, then those who advocate the construction of the Ottawa Ship Canal have established their case on the soundest possible basis.

I do not think there will be any to dispute that this is the shortest possible route. While I am speaking about Mr. Tassé, I would like to draw attention to what he said about the late Hon. Alexander Mackenzie's remarks on the subject. In 1865, Mr. Mackenzie made a very eloquent speech on confederation. In the course of that speech, he paid the following tribute to the scheme that is now before the House :—

I think it is absolutely necessary for the prosperity of this colony that our canal connections with the upper lakes should be perfected as early as possible. Our canal system must be improved, so as to accommodate the large trade that is coming from the North-west. On the northern shores of Lake Superior we have sources of wealth that are perfectly inexhaustible. We read only the other day that a mountain of iron had been discovered close to the coast, quite sufficient to supply the demands of the world for 500 years. We have in that locality an abundant supply of minerals of all kinds, and unless our canals are made capable of carrying that traffic, it will necessarily find channels in another direction. There is an agitation among a portion of the community for making a new canal from Toronto to the Georgian Bay, and I admit it is very desirable it should be constructed, though I do not think it ever can be; and even if it could be, it is entirely beyond our resources at the present time. I am convinced that the true route for a canal (if a new one should be undertaken) to the Georgian Bay, is up the Ottawa, because that would be giving a great back-bone to the country. If we had a fine canal, capable of carrying vessels of war in that direction, it would be a splendid means of defence, as well as a great highway for the commercial products of the west.

Then he goes on again to quote Mr. Mackenzie. That gentleman and the present leader of the Opposition (Sir Charles Tupper) met at Pembroke. Mr. Tassé says:

There the Liberal leader met a foeman worthy of his steel, that eloquent, that courageous tribune of the Conservative party, Sir Charles Tupper. The two champions of our two great parties vied in their eulogy of the Ottawa valley, and the hon. member for East York used the following language:—

"I am tolerably well acquainted with the geographical features of the Ottawa valley, having for the last fifteen years been actively interested in all the questions which most closely affect its people. The very first year I was in Parliament, I was one of a committee appointed to investigate the question of canal navigation on the upper Ottawa, and from that time I have been perfectly satisfied that the valley presents the greatest facilities of any route upon the continent for the transportation of the products of the North-west to the Atlantic Ocean, or rather, I should say, to the head of the Atlantic navigation."

Now, we have a remark made by Mr. Chas. Magee, the president of the Bank of Ottawa, which, I think, all will concede to be one of the most flourishing institutions we have at the present day. He says, that Montreal should not, in making harbour improvements, lose sight of the fact that the deepening of the St. Lawrence Canal and the construction of the Ottawa and Georgian Bay Canal is looked upon as one of the great public works necessary for the development of the country. The previous speakers have cited the remarks of others, and I could go on doing the same, but at this late hour I do not wish to take up too much time. In view of the facts that we have been able to bring to his attention, I am sure the leader of the Government must concede that this is a scheme which will lessen the cost of transportation. Previous speakers have shown what effect it would have upon colonization. The Government are paying out considerable amounts to assist immigration; if this work goes on, it will do more to increase immigration than all the immigration agents in Great Britain, and it will cost nothing, in that respect, to bring in a hardy class of men, such as we have on the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Rideau Canal, and other canals, who are now among the best of our citizens. Some take the ground that this canal, when built, will injure comparatively young railroads, like the Parry Sound and Pontiac and Pacific Junction. If I thought such to be the case, I should be very sorry to support it; but I hold a different opinion. I believe it will help these railways. It will cause the country to grow and fill up, and the railway will have the light freight and passengers, and in the winter months it will be able to more than make up for competition that may meet it in the summer time. Before taking my seat, I must say this country owes a great debt of gratitude to Mr. McLeod Stewart, the promoter and agitator of this scheme. I trust the Government will assist him in carrying it out. And, when they do commence, I hope they will commence at both ends and in the district of Nipissing. It has been said, that this scheme may cost more than has been estimated. Well, Mr. Speaker, we have Mr. Shanly's report and Mr. Clarke's report. Mr. Clarke's estimate, if I am rightly informed, is about $12,000,000. But you have to take into consideration the advantages now existing for construction. For instance, supplies can be laid down along this proposed canal just as cheaply as they can be laid down at the city of Ottawa or the city of Montreal. At the date of that estimate supplies cost from $25 to $30 per ton to deliver at Mattawa or between that town and Nipissing. Furthermore, explosives are cheaper and more effective now, and electrical power along the line can be used. I am sure that the parties interested in this scheme are business men, and have a full knowledge of what they are about; and knowing the probable cost, and having an experience of the Manchester Ship Canal, I do not think they would wildly rush into this scheme, so that we need not trouble ourselves on that score. Let us give them an opportunity to make their estimate, while at all times we guard the public interests. Now, in conclusion, I may say that I am disposed to support the Government on this measure. It would be an interesting coincidence, Charaplain, the first white man who passed over this route, being a Frenchman, if a French Canadian Premier were instrumental in converting that canoe route into the greatest waterway on the continent. I am supporting it from a national point of view. But while I am ready to support the Government on this measure, I want it well understood where I stand. While I wish to be on the very best terms, privately and publicly, with my Liberal friends, I want them to know that I am a Conservative, and I shall stick to the Conservative party so long as they stick to their principles, that is to say, loyalty to the mother country, protection to our industries, and the development of our resources.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). I regret to be obliged, from honest conviction, to oppose the scheme submitted to this House by the hon. member for Pontiac (Mr. Poupore), and so ably supported by the hon. member for Ottawa (Mr. Belcourt), and the hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. Klock). I have no doubt whatever that these gentlemen are acting from a proper motive, and that they see in this scheme something of national importance that would be most useful to Canada. But those who dissent from their views may properly be asked to submit their objections. If I could be persuaded that at any time this enterprise will prove advantageous to Canada, I would gladly support it, but it is because I do not see either the value of the canal as a transportation route, or as a shorter route, or as a route for national purposes, that I do not entertain the same views as those hon. gentlemen I have mentioned. In the first place, the adoption of this scheme means a very heavy outlay to the Dominion of Canada. The proposal of a guarantee of 2½ per cent on $20,000,000, means that these parties believe it will cost at least $20,000,000. Now, I think that is a very moderate estimate, and that it will be found, in the event of this canal being constructed, that it will cost a very much larger sum. The question for us to consider is, Would the result of that expenditure bring back to the country a return for the money expended? It is true that we are only asked for a guarantee, but that guarantee means an outlay of $500,000 a year for twenty years. But we know by past experience that all these great undertakings, before they are finished, very much exceed the first estimate of their cost. The next consideration submitted to us was the question of the shortness of the route, and one of the great virtues of this route was said to be that it was much shorter than any of the other routes for transporting grain to the seaboard. Now, is it a fact that it is shorter? The hon. member for Pontiac read figures—I did not understand that they were figures compiled by himself, but at any rate he gave them to this House as reliable figures, regarding the length of this route compared with others. He said that this route from the Georgian Bay to Montreal was 430 miles long, fifty-eight miles of which would be canal. But he did not give us a comparison between that route and any others. Let me make a comparison, the correctness of which any one can ascertain by looking up the mileage on the canals and railways we have already. Take the Collingwood route and compare it with the Georgian Bay route. Any point on the south shore of the Georgian Bay would be a common point of distance as between Chicago and Montreal, because it matters very little if you are going from Chicago to Montreal whether you leave the Georgian Bay at Parry Sound, at Midland, at Collingwood, or at Owen Sound. From any of these points the difference in distance is not very much. But we are told that the Georgian Bay route would be much shorter than any of the others, and therefore much more valuable. The hon. gentleman starts out with the statement that it is 430 miles from Georgian Bay to Montreal. Now, I find that by Collingwood, if you examine the route that has been submitted for the consideration of the Government, it is only 409 miles from the Georgian Bay to Montreal, or twenty-one miles shorter than by the Ottawa route.

Mr. POUPORE. If you look at the "Hansard," page 4297 of my remarks, you will see that I quoted the paper read by Mr. Wicksteed to the Society of Engineers at Montreal, in which he gives the distance. I quoted his figures, and they are in the "Hansard." The hon. gentleman says I did not make any comparisons; but if he looks up my remarks he will find that I showed a total saving of 368 miles by the Ottawa route over the St. Lawrence.

Mr. SPROULE. Away around by the Welland Canal. There is no difference of opinion between us there. I said the hon. gentleman gave figures, which I understood were not his own, and I understood he presented them as authentic and correct. I said that he did not give any comparison as to the length of these various routes from the Georgian Bay to Montreal. It is true that if you are compelled to go around by the Welland Canal and down the St. Lawrence, the distance is very much longer. But it is not necessary to do that for the purpose of reaching Montreal from Chicago; we have several routes by way of the Georgian Bay that would be competitive routes with this one, and routes which are shorter to-day; therefore, the comparison made by the hon. gentleman did not prove very much in favour of the Ottawa route. Then, I take the next route, the Midland route. I find that route is only 333 miles long, as against 430. We have large quantities of grain going over that route to-day.

Mr. POUPORE. Do you mean the Trent Valley?

Mr. SPROULE. No, I mean by way of Midland, on the Georgian Bay, and thence by the Grand Trunk Railway to Port Hope, and on down to Montreal. It is only 333 miles, or 97 miles shorter than this boasted route. No one can dispute these figures.

Mr. POUPORE. Would you have an all-water route ?

Mr. SPROULE. No, you would not have an all-water route that way, but you would have a very much shorter route if you had a canal built by way of Collingwood, where there is at the outside only forty miles of canal instead of fifty-eight.

Mr. POUPORE. There is no 58 miles of canal to be built via the Ottawa and Georgian Bay route.

Mr. SPROULE. I give the figures contained in the hon. gentleman's own statement in this House.

Mr. POUPORE. If that is in my speech it is a typographical error ; and it is not a fact.

Mr. SPROULE. I took it down at the time it was given, and, therefore, I thought it was correct, and I think still, though I have not had time to look it up, that "Hansard" gives it as I have stated, that there are 58 miles to be constructed. According to the papers the hon. gentleman read, there were 58 miles of canal to be built. If you want to have an all-waterway you have only to make a canal from Bradford, at the lower end of Lake Simcoe, to Toronto, a distance of 40 miles.

Mr. POUPORE. My hon. friend; I know, does not want to misrepresent me.

Mr. SPROULE. Let my hon. friend restrain himself, and I will give the figures as they are contained in "Hansard" :

It appears from the report of the surveyors made half a century ago, that of the 430 miles between Georgian Bay and Montreal only about 58 would need to be canalized.

How am I misrepresenting the hon. gentleman ? I understood he gave the figures in the report which he presented to this House as reliable, and I think I should be allowed to criticise his statement as he gave it to the House.

Mr. POUPORE. The hon. gentleman is exceedingly unfair.

Mr. SPROULE. I am not unfair when I criticise the hon. gentleman's own figures, as given by himself.

Mr. POUPORE. If the hon. gentleman will look at "Hansard," page 4297, he will see where I make the following statement :—

The figures given by Mr. Wicksted show that by the St. Lawrence route you have 1,145 miles of lake navigation, 132 of river and 71 miles of canal, making a total of 1,348. By the Ottawa we have 575 miles of lake navigation, 372 of river navigation and 33 miles of canal.

There is your answer.

Mr. SPROULE. I do not object to the hon. gentleman making any statement that he desires. I have not looked into it very closely, and what he says may be correct. I have always understood that there were more than 33 miles of canal to be built in order to open up the Ottawa River. If you make this comparison, if you want an all-water and a deep water route, you can get it from the Georgian Bay for a much less cost and it will be a much better route. Therefore, I say, if the shortening of the route is going to reduce the cost of transportation at all, the arguments of the hon. gentleman is in favour of the Georgian Bay route by way of Collingwood and Toronto. The route from Parry Sound is 380 miles and millions of bushels of grain have been carried over that line by the Canada Atlantic Railway. That route is very much shorter than the one the hon. gentleman is going to have, though it is not an all-water route.

Mr. POUPORE. How many millions of bushels of grain went over that route ?

Mr. SPROULE. Speaking from memory, I would say 8,000,000 or 9,000,000 last year. The hon. gentleman who spoke to-night (Mr. Belcourt) said that the Ottawa and Georgian Bay route would reduce the cost of transportation by 50 per cent. If you have a shorter route than this could you carry grain for less money ? If you have a route owned partly by a private corporation, which must collect canal dues in order to recoup itself for the expenditure which it has made, how is it possible to carry cheaper than by way of Government canals where there are no canal dues at all ?

Mr. POUPORE. By shortening the distance.

Mr. SPROULE. But I have shown that the distance is longer, and if the Government undertook to construct the canal by way of Toronto and the Georgian Bay, as a Government work, there would be no canal dues, it would be doubly an argument in favour of the Toronto-Georgian Bay route as against the Ottawa and Georgian Bay route. I have here the report of the International Deep Waterways Commission, which was appointed by the Governments of Canada and the United States a few years ago, to look into this question and report to their respective Governments how rapidly to increase the trade between the east and west. The commission's report, so far as I have been able to look over it hurriedly, has not a single word to say in regard to this highway. This commission, which was instructed to go into this subject exhaustively, did not consider it worth while to say anything in regard to this route. They did not seem to consider it of sufficient importance to present a report calling the attention of their respective Governments to it. That does not speak volumes for the value of that route. If you compare that route with the route from Owen Sound you will find that the route from Owen Sound is shorter. The routes by way of Parry Sound and by way of Collingwood are much shorter ; the route by way of Midland is 97 miles shorter. How can you reduce the cost of transportation 50 per cent, which was said by the hon. member for Ottawa (Mr. Belcourt) would be the result of the construction of this canal? We want some better figures and some better evidence than have been presented to convince us that that would be accomplished. The hon. gentleman has given us no information as to what it would cost to carry a bushel of wheat from Chicago to Montreal by way of this route, comparing it with all other routes. He gave us nothing but a bare, bald statement which is not supported by any evidence.

Mr. POUPORE. Will my hon. friend allow me one word? I know he does not mean to be unfair, I am sure. He will find the facts and figures in the report of Mr. Thomas C. Clarke. In a supplementary report in 1898, all these facts are there. It requires, of course, looking into them, to understand them. I can understand why the hon. gentleman makes these statements; it is because he has not looked into these figures.

Mr. SPROULE. I admit that I have not. But I know that the hon. member for Pontiac (Mr. Poupore) professed to lay all these facts and figures, in reference to this question, which set forth the evidence in support of this proposition before this House, and if he did not think it worth while to submit these figures that justifies me in not referring to them. I took it for granted that the hon. gentleman had submitted all the facts.

Mr. BELCOURT. I gave the reference at the time that I mentioned the facts. I mentioned the figures and I said that I did not want to weary the House with all the details.

Mr. SPROULE. If these hon. gentlemen did not put these facts before the House they are not in a position to find fault. The hon. member for Pontiac (Mr. Poupore) comes out in a very fulsome eulogy of the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte), which to me was a most amusing thing. It was either a threat or an invitation to be bought—I do not know which. He said "I am not so hide-bound in my politics—this is not a party question—but what I would support any Government, Conservative or Reform, which will take up this work and carry it through."

Mr. POUPORE. That is right.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. gentleman said that he was strongly in favour of any Government and that he was prepared to support any Government that is prepared to take this work up and carry it through. Was it a threat, if they would not take it up, made so as to force it upon them, or was it an invitation that "I am willing to be bought if they will take it up"? I will leave it to the hon. gentleman to settle with the Government. I do not think the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) entertains so high an opinion of this scheme as the hon. member for Pontiac (Mr. Poupore) says he does, because I have here a letter which he submitted to the Liverpool, Eng., Board of Trade, and I have read it over carefully and I do not see in it that the Minister (Mr. Tarte) eulogizes this scheme. He says:

Mr. SPROULE.

Ottawa, May 8, 1899.

Thomas H. Barker, Esq.,
Secretary Chamber of Commerce, Liverpool.

Sir,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of the resolution adopted by the Chamber of Commerce of Liverpool in reference to the project of the Georgian Bay Canal.

That question has been receiving a good deal of attention at the hands of the Canadian public men during the last years. But the enterprise is of such magnitude as to make it necessary to look carefully into it.

The Dominion has built, at large expense, a complete system of canals from the great lakes to the St. Lawrence. That system is now being completed and perfected. The Department of Railways and Canals and the Department of Public Works are actively working in that direction. The River St. Lawrence from Quebec to Montreal is being improved with every possible speed.

Now, the Georgian Bay, on Lake Huron, is very rapidly becoming an accumulating point for western trade. The Dominion Government is completing what is known here as the Trent Valley system, which consists of works of lockage destined to bind between themselves several splendid water stretches. That new waterway will be 200 miles long, and will give communication during seven months of the year between Midland, on the Georgian Bay, and the Bay of Quinté, on Lake Ontario. The Arnprior and Parry Sound Railway has its terminal point at Parry Sound, another port on the Georgian Bay. The distance from Parry Sound to Montreal is about 380 miles. Last year that railway had handled about 15,000,000 bushels of grain, besides a large quantity of other merchandise. Collingwood is also a port on the Georgian Bay. Between Collingwood and Toronto, on Lake Ontario, the distance is 70 miles. The Toronto Board of Trade and a great many far-seeing public men believe that the construction by the Government of a railway connecting Collingwood with Toronto would shorten the distance between the great lakes and the St. Lawrence route, and thereby develop a very large traffic.

I take the liberty of giving you these details, in order to call the attention of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce to the large undertakings that are now under way in the Dominion, in view of diverting to British and Canadian channels as much as possible of the western trade. I may be permitted to add that the port of Montreal, which is the receiving point of that trade, and also the head of ocean navigation, is being improved as speedily as possible.

While I have the privilege of addressing the Chamber of Commerce of Liverpool, I must say that we, on this side of the ocean, cannot understand the reasons why the English underwriters have increased their rates in a way so detrimental to the interests of the Dominion. During the last three years the St. Lawrence River has been made safer than it has ever been before. A careful testing and sweeping of its channel has been carried out under the control of my department. The curves and bends of the river has been widened. Several parts of the river have been deepened. The buoy system has been attended to with every possible attention. I hope, sir, that the chamber of commerce will pardon me for entering into these considerations. But I have thought that perhaps they would be of some interest, as there is such a large trade between Liverpool and the Dominion.

I have the honour to be, sir,

Yours very truly,

J. ISRAEL TARTE.

Mr. BERGERON. Who signed that letter?

Mr. SPROULE. J. Israel Tarte, Minister of Public Works of the Dominion of Canada, and it is dated Ottawa, 8th of May, about a month before the hon. gentleman (Mr. Poupore) made his speech in this House. I wonder the hon. gentleman (Mr. Poupore) did not read that letter to the House when he was eulogizing the Minister of Public Works, and saying that he felt satisfied from what had been said by the Minister (Mr. Tarte) and by the First Minister that they were prepared to carry out this scheme. Shortly after confederation, this was a subject submitted to the Canal Commissioners who were appointed to report to the Government on the best waterways in the country, and these commissioners put this very route on the deferred list as a route that might be available some time in the future history of Canada, but not a route which was worthy of consideration then. The hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. Klock) spoke very strongly in favour of this project, and he did his duty and nothing but his duty, and he has quite as intelligent a knowledge in regard to it as the other hon. gentlemen who have spoken, but he said nothing which might not be said by any member of the House. He read extracts from "Hansard" of years ago, as to what was said by Mr. Alex. Mackenzie and Sir Charles Tupper, at the time an election was going on in an Ottawa River district. They said they thought it would be a great waterway for the country, but in connection with that, it is sufficient to say that there was an election going on at the time. It sounded very much like what the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) would say, if he were speaking today in a county where there was an election going on, and in the hope of inducing the people to vote for his Government. I repeat that the solution of the transportation problem, if it is to be found in any deep waterway scheme, will ultimately be found in the canal from Georgian Bay between Collingwood and Toronto. The highest estimate that was ever made of the cost of this project was $23,000,000. That undertaking, if carried out at all, should be carried out by the Government of Canada, and then there would be no canal tolls to increase the cost of transportation. In my judgment it is a shorter route, a better route and a more direct one from the west to Montreal. But, Sir, with the competition we have at the present day on these various routes, Owen Sound, Colling-wood, Midland, Parry Sound, and all these others, and considering the other routes that are looming up in the future, when you make a comparison of all these there is nothing that can be said in favour of the route now before the House. I am free to admit that the hon. member (Mr. Poupore) presented one argument that perhaps might have something in it. If the depth of water by this route was what it should be, then in the event of international troubles, our navy could be moved through the interior of the country without any danger of interference from opposing forces. We hope at least that through the wisdom and intelligence of the two nations, there is not likely to arise any international complications that would necessitate our requiring any such military route for a very long time to come. It is a very heavy undertaking either for the Government or for any private company. If the scheme were undertaken at all with a view of lessening the cost of transportation, it would have to be undertaken by the Government and the country bear the expense, so that there would not be canal tolls to increase the cost of transportation as would be the case if it were controlled by a private corporation. On the other hand, it does not in my judgment, give the depth of water we ought to have to make transportation as free and as valuable as would be necessary in the interests of this country. The undertaking would involve as large an outlay as the Collingwood and Toronto route; in fact, in my judgment, it would involve a larger outlay, and would not be as valuable a route. In view of these considerations, I think the Government would be unwise to give to this scheme the support which its promoters ask. It is said, that there would not be a dollar required until the scheme was undertaken. We had the same argument presented to us in the case of the Chignecto Ship Railway; and, when people had invested a large amount of money in that undertaking, they came to this Parliament, and said: "It is unfair for us to lose all that money, and we shall be unable to complete the scheme unless you come to our assistance." So it would be in this case. They would find it much more expensive than they expect, and, after they had spent a large amount of money and found themselves unable to finish the work according to the terms of the agreement they had entered into, there would be reflections on the Government and on Canada because they had been allowed to undertake a very difficult, if not an impracticable scheme, and to invest in it a large amount of money, with no hope that they would ever get any return, and they would ask the Government to recoup them for their outlay. We do not want a repetition of the history of the Chignecto Ship Canal in this country. That has been a very costly, but a very important, experience to us, and we ought to profit by it. Therefore, I cannot support this scheme, and I think the Government would be wise to refuse to give it the sanction and support which its promoters ask them to give.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding) moved the adjournment of the House.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

TUESDAY, 13th June, 1899.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

PRAYERS.

I. C. R.—EXTENSION TO MONTREAL—PRESENTATION OF PAPERS.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). I desire to lay on the Table a statement of the combined engine and car mileage covering all the sections; report of Engineer McLeod on the Drummond County Railway; further report of Mr. McLeod on the same road, accompanied by a report from the Deputy Minister; copy of an Order in Council connected therewith; statement of the maintenance and repair charges upon the Grand Trunk lines from St. Lambert to Point St. Charles; statement of maintenance and repair charges upon the Chaudière joint section.

Mr. FOSTER. On that point I may say that I am extremely grateful that these returns have come; but they are not of the slightest use to me, thrown into my face two or three minutes before I have to rise and speak on the question.

The PRIME MINISTER. You know them by heart.

Mr. FOSTER. I never saw them, nor did any one else.

DEPARTMENT OF THE GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 146) further to amend the Act respecting the Department of the Geological Survey. He said: This Bill is for the purpose of making the law what it was supposed to be by the director and officers of the department. The Auditor General raised an objection to the appointment of an officer, who had been appointed about a year ago, on the ground that the appointment was not in accordance with the Act. Upon reference to the Department of Justice it was ascertained that the proper construction of the Act was that a person could not be employed for temporary work in connection with the Geological Survey unless he possessed the full qualifications required for a permanent officer under section 4 of the Act. So that to all intents and purposes the law prevented the director from procuring the appointment temporarily of officers possessed of technical qualifications. This Bill is for the purpose of removing that difficulty, and permitting the Minister, on the requisition of the head of the department, as provided by the Act, to employ persons temporarily who do not possess the qualifications required for permanent officers of the department.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Will the Minister state what specific cases this Bill is intended to cover? What are the names of the officers?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. The name of the officer was Mr. McLeish.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 147) to amend the Act respecting the Department of the Interior. He said: The reason for the introduction of this Bill is almost precisely similar to the reason which caused the introduction of the Bill which I have just explained, with regard to the Geological Survey. The Civil Service Act passed in 1895 recognized the appointment to positions in the service of certain gentlemen who were then in the service; but upon the death of one of them, Mr. Dufresne, who was a computer under the chief astronomer of my department, an attempt was made to fill his place, whereupon the Auditor General took the ground that we had no power to appoint a technical officer except by complying with the regular requirements of the Civil Service Act. We had either to appoint a temporary officer at $400, or appoint him a second-class clerk. We could not secure the services of a gentleman qualified to fill the position at $400 a year, we had no second-class clerkship vacant, and we had no desire to create a second-class clerkship for that purpose. I can perhaps explain the matter better by reading a memorandum from the chief astronomer of the department, explaining the position of affairs with regard to these officers. He says:

There are at present employed in this kind of work (that is, technical work in the office of the Surveyor General) 25 or 30 men at salaries ranging from $600 to $1,500, who were appointed previous to 1895. In 1895 the Civil Service Act, section 47, was amended so as to abolish the class of temporary technical officers. By this amendment and a recent ruling all employees at Ottawa come under the provision of the Civil Service Act as either permanent officials or as temporary or extra clerks. The latter may be continued in employment at the same, but not at an increased, salary, but no others can be appointed to fill vacancies or to provide for necessary expansion, except at the salary of $400. There is no provision for any appointment between $400 and $1,100, the salary of a second-class clerk. The practical difficulties of this are as follows:—In case of vacancy, the salary of $400 is quite insufficient to secure men of the education and training required; otherwise, the only alternative appointment in the classified service, at $1,100 or upwards, would be usually inexpedient in the case of a new man untrained in the office routine, apart altogether from the restrictions upon a permanent appointment which would in the general case make that impossible. In case additional assistance is required for the time being in any branch, no salary can be paid higher than $400, which, as above stated, is insufficient. The business plan of training young men to their work would exactly meet the requirements of the department as to this class of service, but it cannot be followed under the present law; for no young man of education such as would fit him for taking hold of this kind of work would be likely to accept $400 a year, with the chance of rising to $600 after seven years, and no prospect of receiving more, however long he remained in the service, unless fortunate enough to secure entrance into the necessarily limited permanent service. The present law works badly as regards those now in the service as temporaries, for, without chance of increase of salary, a strong incentive to energetic work is wanting.

The cases that arose were first that of Mr. Dufresne, who was employed in the office as computer. He died in February, 1898. Mr. Louis Gauthier, one of the temporary technical clerks, was shortly afterwards transferred from the Surveyor General's office to fill his place, and Mr. Langlois, a surveyor, was at the same time appointed in the Surveyor General's office in Mr. Gauthier's place at a salary of $900 per annum; but under the construction of the law, the Auditor General, backed up by the Department of Justice, held that we could only pay $400 in these cases. We have also a number of these technical officers who have been in the department for several years, and it is impossible to give them an increase of pay under the present rule. At the present time an additional computer is required in the astronomer's office, and we cannot get a man to take that position at $400. The Bill is intended to enable the Minister to employ temporarily in professional or technical work, a person who is reported by the Deputy Minister and the head of the branch in whose branch he is to work, to be qualified for the work.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. As I understand the hon. gentleman's explanation, under the general Act, technical officers can only be appointed at the minimum salary of $400, and he wishes to have the power to appoint them at a larger salary.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. Yes, between $400 and $1,100, and without making a permanent clerkship.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

THE DOMINION LANDS ACT.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 148) further to amend the Dominion Lands Act. He said: This Bill is for the purpose, in the first place, of altering the terms upon which the Government can sell school lands in Manitoba and the North-west Territories. At present we can only sell on the terms of one-fifth cash and four equal annual instalments thereafter. It is the general opinion, in which I quite agree, that a better price can be secured in case a sale takes place, if the terms of the sale could be made more favourable, and the proposition is to amend the law, so that in case a sale takes place, it may be on the terms of ten equal annual instalments instead of five. The next amendment relates to the law authorizing the Government to deal with the half-breeds of the North-west with regard to the issue of scrip. We are sending to the Athabasca district a commission for the purpose of making a treaty with the Indians there, so that they may cede to the Crown territory not hitherto conceded, and which is now being more or less traversed by white settlers. There is a large number of half-breeds in that territory, and it is beyond question that they will require to be settled with at or about the same time that the Indians are dealt with and that no treaty can be successfully negotiated with the Indians unless that is done. The law at present only enables the Government to give scrip on the basis of the half-breeds who were entitled to it on the 15th of July, 1870, and was passed for the purpose of applying to the half-breeds in the immediate neighbourhood of Red River. Of course, that date has no application whatever to the Athabasca district, and we purpose taking power to deal with this question on the basis of giving all the half-breeds who are entitled to it scrip up to the time they are dealt with. The same amendment would enable us to deal with the disputed cases in the North-west Territories, and to give scrip to half-breeds there who have been, since the settlement of 1885, urging that they should be dealt with upon the same principle as that on which we now propose to deal with the half-breeds of Athabasca district.

Mr. DAVIN. I understand the hon. gentleman to say that this Bill would enable him to deal with the claims of the half-breeds, not only in Athabasca but all over the territory. Does he intend to deal with the claims of the half-breeds at Willow Bunch, south of Moose Jaw ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. What I mean is this. The hon. gentleman is aware of the fact that since scrip was issued to the half-breeds, immediately after the rebellion in 1885, there has been a large number of half-breeds there who claim that, as the children born between 1870 and 1885, of the half-breeds who were dealt with in 1885, they should receive scrip as well as their parents, and that is what the Government propose to recognize by taking the authority referred to in the Bill.

Mr. DAVIN. Does the clause dealing with the sale of school lands simply mean that for the future there shall be ten instalments instead of five, or is it retroactive ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. It is not retroactive.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

LAND TITLES ACT OF 1894.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 149) further to amend the Land Titles Act of 1894. He said: This is a matter of detail which has arisen under the Real Property Act of the North-west Territories. Under section 121 of that Act, as amended by section 17, chapter 32 of the Statutes of 1898, there is a provision for the cancellation, alteration or abandonment of plans. Along the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, a number of town plots were surveyed on a much more extensive scale than subsequent settlement and growth have shown to be necessary, and the result is that in the immediate neighbourhood of some of these places, there are large blocks surveyed into town plots, which are of no use as town lots, and it becomes a matter of public policy to provide for the cancellation of the plans so that the lands may be used for farming purposes. A difficulty has arisen by reason of the fact that the court has held that these plans cannot be cancelled under our legislation unless each separate lot is brought under the provisions of the Act and a certificate of title issued for it. The cost of bringing these lands under the Act, in many cases, would exceed the actual value of the land: and this amendment is for the purpose of enabling the plans to be cancelled without going through the formality of taking out a separate certificate for each lot.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

SCARLET FEVER AMONG THE GALICIANS.

Mr. DAVIN. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to call the attention of the Minister of the Interior to a statement that appears in the newspapers of June 8th, to the effect that scarlet fever has broken out among the Galicians at Saltcoats and near Yorktown. Has the hon. gentleman any more definite information than has appeared in the newspapers on this subject ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton). There have been two or three cases of disease dealt with amongst the immigrants, but just at this moment I cannot say whether the particular one mentioned by my hon. friend (Mr. Davin) has been dealt with; but I can ascertain in half an hour, and let him know.

INQUIRY FOR RETURNS.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER (Pictou). Before the Orders of the Day are called, I wish to call the attention of the Government to a return that has been brought down. It will be within the recollection of the House that the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Sifton) stated to me, on June 9th, that a supplementary return or explanation of a matter of some importance had been laid on the Table of the House by him, and, to use his own language, "It was handed to the Clerk, and I saw the Clerk hand it over to the hon. gentleman," meaning myself. I want to say, that that observation had reference to an incomplete return of the correspondence between members of the Government and Mr. Frederick Peters. I had pointed out that a very important date had been admitted in connection with the return. A cipher telegram from Mr. Peters to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Sir Louis Davies) was mentioned as having been received, and what purported to be the reply to that telegram was given, but without date. The date, under the circumstances, was the most important part of the return. I called attention to that on several occasions, and on June 9th the Minister of the Interior made the statement to which I have referred. That statement is incorrect. I was not handed such document by the Clerk, but since then, I was handed a document, which I have here, by one of the officers of the House, as being possibly the document the Minister of the Interior referred to, and it is as follows:—

Ottawa, 3rd May, 1899.

Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper having called attention to the fact some days ago in the House of Commons, that a return which was made to an Order of 24th April, 1899, respecting correspondence between Mr. Frederick Peters and the members of the Government was incomplete in that it did not give the date of the cipher telegram received or the date of the reply, the date of the cipher telegram is the 5th of May, 1898; the date of the reply cannot be ascertained, but it is stated by Sir Louis Davies to be the 5th or 6th of May, 1898. This letter may be shown to any member of the House desirous of procuring the information it contains.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) CLIFFORD SIFTON.

This document was not handed to me by the Clerk. Moreover, it is in no sense a compliance with the very reasonable request I make under the Order of the House. This document, of course, cannot go on the Orders of the Day, and the document I ask for ought to go on the Orders of the Day. I am not myself concerned in it, and I am, for that reason, all the more anxious in the matter. The Order of the House was, that the correspondence should be laid on the Table of the House, and, when the return was made to this Order, these dates were omitted. It was an incomplete return on the face of it, and I called the Minister's attention to the fact and to the necessity, not for the writing of such a letter as this, addressed, as this is, to Sir John Bourinot, the Clerk of the House, but that, in the ordinary course, the Government should cause a supplementary return to be brought down. This is all the more important, because, in some extraordinary way, the Committee on Printing hurried through the report for the printing of the incomplete return. That, of course, has not been approved by the House, nor would it be. It would be obviously unfair to all concerned, because the return is incomplete. If the wish of the Printing Committee were complied with, when the return is printed, the facts given in this letter cannot appear, because this letter is not a return, in any sense. I call the attention of the Treasury benches to this omission and this irregularity, so that the information given in this informal letter may be included in a supplementary return. There cannot possibly be any objection to that. I wish to say distinctly, that I never saw this letter, and, if I had seen it, I would at once have said it was not the document I was asking for. I am not asking for the information for myself, for I know the facts, but for the record, and so that the record may be complete.

While I am on my feet, I want to call the attention of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Sir Louis Davies) to a conversation we had in Supply before his estimates were carried, respecting a return in connection with Inspector Russell. The hon. gentleman made me a promise—and I want to remind him of it—to have the return completed at an early day. I am particularly anxious to have it as soon as possible, and would be much obliged, if the hon. gentleman would give it more than the ordinary attention.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). I wrote to my deputy the day the hon. gentleman called the matter to my attention.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. If the hon. gentleman (Sir Louis Davies) would kindly jog the memory of his officers, I should be obliged. I desire also to refer to the case of the Bauer application. The Minister of the Interior (Mr. Sifton) stated on the 8th of June, the day I handed him the letter of Mr. Bauer across the floor of the House, that he had immediately given instructions to his deputy to see the chairman of the Board of Examiners, and endeavour to meet my wishes, if possible, and he had had no reply. I would be glad, if the hon. gentleman would say, when he expects to deal with that.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton). The matter has escaped my memory, and I cannot give the hon. gentleman a reply at once. As I said, I gave instructions that it should be done, and I will ascertain, and let the hon. gentleman know.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I suppose that the reason why the telegram to Mr. Peters came down undated was as follows:—The telegram received by me from him was in cipher, and I translated it, and gave it to the Minister of the Interior. He gave me his answer, and I telegraphed to Mr. Peters the answer he gave me. I wrote the answer at the foot of his telegram, and did not date it. When I was applied to as to the date, I told Mr. Sifton it must have been either the same day or the day following the receipt of Mr. Peters' telegram. The copy I had did not give the date, but I knew it must have been the same day or the day following, because of some correspondence I subsequently had with Mr. Peters.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. The hon. gentleman (Sir Louis Davies) will see that the point is important. I knew no more what was in the cipher telegram than any other member of this House did. Mr. Peters, who was then intending to form a partnership with me and who at that time had no more partnership with me than the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, happened to have a cipher code with me. In that cipher, as he has explained, he asked the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to use my cipher with him; but on no occasion did he tell me what was in the cipher, nor was it a matter of my business. I told the Minister of Marine and Fisheries what the cipher code was, and that was used. But the date is important, both as regards Mr. Peters' statements and my own statements in this House, and to show that we were not partners in any sense. We were merely friends at that time, intending to form a partnership, but which was not formed for some months afterwards, and I have not been able to understand why, when that matter was fully before the Government, these dates were omitted and were not supplied.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). The reason they are omitted is because my copy does not contain them.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. The return does not show it.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The way it can be supplemented is by letter from myself as Minister of Marine and Fisheries. I regret that my copy does not contain the dates.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I do not quarrel with the contents of this letter. If they come down as a supplementary return, that is all I ask.

POSTMASTER AT NORTH SYDNEY.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I want to ask the Postmaster General (Mr. Mulock) whether a report is true which came to me a day or two ago to the effect that the postmaster of the town of North Sydney, county of Cape Breton, had been dismissed, or was about being dismissed. I am informed that he had been dismissed, and that a successor had been called upon to furnish bonds. If the report is true, I would like to ask the hon. gentleman what is the cause of his dismissal?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Mr. Mulock). If the hon. gentleman will be good enough to renew that question to-morrow, I will make inquiry in the meantime. I am not able from memory to say anything on the subject.

REPORT OF THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE.

Mr. CLANCY. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to ask the Solicitor General (Mr. Fitzpatrick) when the report of the Minister of Justice will be down. I desire to call his attention to the fact that it is some two months late in coming down.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL (Mr. Fitzpatrick). I will inquire and answer the question to-morrow.

I. C. R. EXTENSION TO MONTREAL—PURCHASE OF THE DRUMMOND COUNTY RAILWAY.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair) moved that Bill (No. 133) to authorize the acquisition by the Dominion of the Drummond County Railway, be read the third time.

Mr. GEO. E. FOSTER (York, N.B.) I propose to make some remarks on both the Grand Trunk Railway and Drummond County arrangements, and it may as well be done on this Bill as on the second. I had already, at an earlier stage in the day's proceedings, entered my protest against a method which has become all too common in this House, of a Minister absolutely refusing to supplement his promise to bring down returns of information, and then, at the last moment, just before a gentleman has to rise and discuss the question, to fling some papers upon the Table of this House. It is a way which is not courteous, which has not before been practised in this House, and which, although I am not going further to protest against it at this moment by delaying the Bill. I still treasure in my memory, and I propose to make it one of account if the same thing is done hereafter. No Government that ever I have been acquainted with has, at any stage in parliamentary history, so absolutely and persistently refused to bring down the most necessary information, as has been done in this Government by the present Minister of Railways and Canals; and although a somewhat salutary lesson has been taught him, it would appear as if that lesson was not quite sufficient, and would have to be supplemented at a later date. Having made my protest against this uncourteous and unbusinesslike, and unparliamentary method of procedure, I will come to the question in hand.

After the discussions of 1897, 1898 and 1899, I am not going to weary the House by a historical review of the whole question of the Drummond County Railway and the Grand Trunk Railway arrangements. That has been debated by hon. gentlemen on this side of the House with great ability, at great length, and with great force, and it is not necessary for me to traverse the arguments those gentlemen have made any more than I can help, in pointing the remarks I wish to make. Those arguments, I may say en passant, have not been met, either by the gentlemen upon the Ministerial benches, or by those who support the Government, in any adequate and fair way. Now, as we are coming to the crucial point of the third reading of these Bills, let me ask the House briefly to go with me over certain points; and, first, with reference to the circumstances under which these two matters came before the House. In the first place it will be proper to remember that in regard to these two matters, the purchase of the Drummond County road and the lease arrangement with the Grand Trunk Railway, involving, as it has been stated here, and as the House knows well, a capital sum amounting to in the neighbourhood of $7,000,000, I say that at no period in the history of this Parliament was, by discussion or by resolution, the least hint given by this House, which has control of the expenditures of the country, that such an arrangement would be desirable, or that steps should be taken to carry it out.

The Liberal Government and the Liberal party which, while it was in Opposition, at least, always professed a very great regard for the liberties of the people, the rights of Parliament and the initiative of Parliament, in reference to these great expenditures, went to work on the eve of a session of Parliament and behind the back of Parliament, made this contract, bound the Government and the party which supports the Government, as that party must always be bound by the Government to support a contract entered into without their knowledge or consent, and the reversal of which policy would mean, of course, a change of Government, or at least, a new electoral contest before the people. I say that the first fact that we ought to keep in our minds in approaching this subject is that they entered into this contract without authorization or previous discussion of any kind in this House, that they have practically tied the hands of this House by entering into a contract without having been authorized in the least to do so. This although unparliamentary and unconstitutional in itself, except in matters of urgency, ought to be especially so considered by Liberals who have professed Liberal doctrines, and who have heretofore, at least, been very strong in their criticisms of any lapses from any proper recognition of the rights of Parliament. Again, Sir, I make bold to say to this House that if it will refer to its own experience, to the records in "Hansard," or to the contemporary history of debate in this House and in this country, it will find this second fact staring it in the face, namely, that in the face of these two large operations, involving such a large amount of money as I have stated, there has been an almost utter lack of anything like a technical and proper examination, investigation or reports upon which generally all measures of this kind, ministerial and governmental, are based. I think hon. gentlemen would search the records of this House in vain for the report of any of the technical traffic officers of the Intercolonial Railway going into the question minutely to show this Parliament what would be the probable effect of the traffic arrangements, of the bargain and the contract as far as Government is concerned, and yet, Sir, the arrangement, so far as the Grand Trunk Railway is concerned, ties us hand and foot for ninety-nine years, and practically for all time. One would have thought that an inexperienced Minister would have been anxious to have fortified his position by getting the most exhaustive reports from the technical officers connected with the railway management, getting all the data and facts which they could gather in order to base the conclusion for such an arrangement as he has made upon that data. Nowhere can we find it. We find, in the first place, that the contract was entered in and that up to the day that the contract was entered into there was not even a proper engineering report made to the Minister in reference to the Drummond County Railway, which he proposed to buy out and out from the company. Not even a single engineer's report, while standing in the face of the Government and of the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals was the cautious sentence in the official report of Mr. Schreiber, his Deputy Minister, who said in so many English words: I think such and such in reference to the Drummond County Railway, but I have never been over it, and I cannot speak from experience. If the Government propose to enter into an arrangement to lease or buy the road I would suggest that the right thing to do would be to have an exhaustive examination made of it first. With that standing in the face of the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals and with that before the Government, neither he nor the Government had the proper officer to make a proper investigation and report upon the road until the day that he had practically signed the contract and made it binding on the Government and on the party in this House. These are two very important points. First, in the face of the status and condition of that road it is proposed to buy it and pay for it and to make a 99 year arrangement with the Grand Trunk without having obtained the opinions of men who are versed in railway matters, of men whose lives have been spent in that work, of technical officers who understand traffic arrangements, the movements of freight, and are able to give distinct and well-reasoned opinions upon the effect that would result from that arrangement, such as was being entered into by the Intercolonial Railway upon the terms upon which it was based. If these reports have been asked for, or if they have been got by the hon. Minister of Railways, he has kept them in his pocket with that due diligence and care which he seems to keep everything in reference to matters coming before this House, either concealed about his person or in the pigeon-holes of his department. In the next place, we may mention another circumstance in reference to this transaction. This matter seems to have been sprung very early after the elections of 1896, in which the party opposite made an herculean effort to dispossess the then Government and get the reins of power. In addition to the public professions their supporters made in Parliament and in the country, it was necessary to gain the support of influential men and classes to enable them to gain power. Very shortly after the elections of 1896 the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals embarks upon a negotiation in reference to the purchase of the Drummond County Railway, and this is negotiated with a gentleman named Greenshields, from the city of Montreal. What are the circumstances of the case? Before 1894 Mr. Greenshields, a lawyer and business man in the city of Montreal, against whom professionally I have nothing to say and do not wish to be understood as having the least thing to say—had, in reference to this particular road, the Drummond County, been presented with a gift of $50,000 worth of stock, or 500 of its 4,000 shares, without any financial consideration being given at all. A little later on he becomes the possessor of 800 shares of the 4,000 shares of the stock sold to him by the promoters and directors of the road for $24,000, making him the owner, at that time, of 1,300 shares out of 4,000 shares, or about one-third of the whole stock of the company. Then, Sir, about that time, Mr. Greenshields gets an option for a large block of stock, which option is carried on, and the major part of it is availed of—when? When the contract had been made and signed by the hon. Minister of Railways for the purchase of the Drummond County Railway, when in the end, Mr. Greenshields became the possessor of 1,376 more shares out of the 4,000 at par, according to the evidence, and so became the possessor altogether of 2,676 shares out of the 4,000 shares of stock. Thus that gentleman, interested in this way, interested in so strong a sense financially, seemed to have a complete knowledge of the result and progress of this negotiation, for he was the man with whom the negotiation was carried on. He knew just how long to make his option carry and just when to take the option up, and it was with this gentleman, with this adherent of the party, that the hon. Minister of Railways sat down to make a bargain for the purchase of the Drummond County Railway. Now, Sir, what other circumstances are there in connection with that?

We will go next to the property itself, as to which the remarks I shall make on that point will be better brought out. With reference to the Drummond County Railway property; what was it at the time the Minister of Railways approached Mr. Greenshields in order to effect the purchase. It was a small railroad, which was at that time, and by the very force of circumstances, perfectly isolated. It commenced at Ste. Rosalie, having no connections towards the west; it ended at Moose Park, having no line built from that towards the east. It had some kind of a traffic arrangement with the Grand Trunk Railway, not for practical purposes, but for prospecting purposes, by which it had for a certain rental the right of user on the Chaudière section, so known now, for a period of ninety-nine years. Of itself it was a road which in its isolation was of small value by the very fact of its being isolated. A small road, 90 miles in length with its branch, put in there, between the Grand Trunk Railway line and a blank where no road was built, and with reference to which the Drummond County Company did not seem to be able to get the capital to build the extension. The portion of line that lay there isolated as it was, was by that very fact limited in its value to a very considerable extent. The road was not only an isolated road, but it was an unproductive road; it could not help but be unproductive. Its passenger list amounted to almost nothing. Its freight was confined to two or three of the cheapest kind of freight that could be handled by a road. Not having connections either east or west, it was impossible for its traffic to be anything else but a mere local traffic, and limited at that. Its position was such that the company, not being able to build a connecting line through to the Chaudière section, it was even in a worse plight, so far as the productiveness of its trade was concerned. It is true, that returns are given for the three last years, ending 1897, which shows a net average earning of about $30,000; but no one who has read the evidence and has gone over the history of the road, will, I think, deny the fact that, if the proper equipment had been kept up, and the road had been properly maintained from its revenues, in so far as a road is maintained from its revenues, there not only would not have been $33,000 of a net revenue for the last three years, but there would have been practically no net revenue at all—and I believe that if the matter were thoroughly gone into, it would be found that there would have been a deficit, instead of a net earning, during those three years.

What else with reference to this road? This road at that time was bankrupt, and it is not saying too much to say that. The road at that time owed a large floating debt, and on the 30th June, 1897, I find, by page 98 of the evidence, that the floating debt owed by that road was $298,396. Bonds had been issued to the extent of $1,000,000, and all of these bonds were, I believe, in the hands of the Eastern Townships Bank, which held them as collateral for large advances that were made; practically no more money could be raised on these as a collateral security. So that, with the floating debt it owed, with its stock taken up, as it was, and with its bonds hypothecated for large advances which had been made by the Eastern Townships Bank, mainly, I do not think it is too much to say, that the road in that condition was a bankrupt road. What more do we find? As corroborative of this we find that in 1894 the owners of the road were willing to sell the portion that was built then, for $500,000, and actually gave an option upon it for that. We find that at another period they were willing to sell the completed road at that time, with all its appurtenances and its rolling stock, whatever that might amount to, for $400,000, and had given an option for that amount. These are undisputed points; they are well known; they were brought out in the evidence, and they were sworn to by those who were interested in the Drummond County road itself. The road had practically been built from subsidies got from the Dominion Government, from the Quebec Government, and some slight subsidies from the municipalities. It is a moot point, whether even the $40,000 that was claimed was paid in on the stock, was ever actually paid in at all, or whether it was not one of these transactions, which are so easily made in the changes and interchanges of construction and the like, to make appear as being paid, but which were really not paid in cash. But, granted that one point, I think it may be stated that $40,000 is the outside of the money which these gentlemen themselves put into the road, and that it was built, as to the rest, by the subsidies, which in all amount to something over $650,000, and by the advances which they had got, and for which the bank held the collateral security on their hypothecated funds. I do not think, then, it is too much to say, that the road at that period was bankrupt, and that the then valuation by the gentlemen who owned the road, was a very moderate and very low valuation.

At that point and at that peculiar junction, the Minister of Railways (Mr. Blair) stepped into the ring, and, without a proper engineer's report, without having discussed the matter in Parliament, or got any authorization from Parliament, without having had any indication of what the trend of the view of this Parliament was with reference to that, the Minister of Railways stepped in and proposed to buy that road on a valuation of $1,600,000, and to pay it in annual instalments of $64,000 per year. Now, let there be no doubt about this one point; it was brought out in the evidence: you can bring any actuary you like, and that actuary will confirm this statement. It was provided by the Minister (Mr. Blair) that $64,000 should be paid each year for ninety-nine years, and, under the conditions that the Minister proposed to pay it, that amounted to a then present worth value for the road of $2,049,192. What is that statement, summed up? It is, that for that road, built almost entirely by Government subsidies, the whole cost of which could not be proved to have been more than $1,115,000, which the owners themselves, as to its completed portion, were willing to sell for $400,000, and the completion of which cost a little over $680,000, all told—for that road the Minister of Railways (Mr. Blair) offered to his friend Mr. Greenshields $1,600,000 as the basis of valuation, and proposed a scheme of paying for it which lands into the pockets of Mr. Greenshields and his co-directors $2,049,192.

That is the bargain that the Minister of Railways made under these conditions with his friend Mr. Greenshields for the Drummond County road; that is the bargain that this hon. gentleman (Mr. Blair) brought down to Parliament; that is the bargain that, although it went against their grain in many cases, his followers undoubtedly voted for; that is the bargain that the Liberal party praised, and that is the bargain that the followers behind the Government vaunted as the very best that could be made, and which this country should ratify without a word of protest. That, Sir, was the bargain, and these are the actual terms of that bargain.

Well, Sir, something happened, and what was it? After the matter had been pushed through this House the Senate reviewed it, and came to the conclusion that the bargain was such an extravagant one that they would not implement it. The Senate threw out the Bill. Hon. gentlemen then simulated a great deal of virtuous indignation, but they did not go to the point of putting their virtuous indignation to the test, which could easily have been done by their dissolving the House and appealing to the country on the measure, to see whether or not the business men of Canada were against the Senate or for the Senate in their view of this transaction. That passed, but what happened? In the breathing time that was left, the Minister of Railways, prodded on, I have no doubt, by his more discreet colleagues—and, possibly, by the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright), to whom the bargain must from the first have been very distasteful—the Minister reviewed that first bargain; and he now comes down to this House with an altogether different proposition. What is that proposition? It is, that, instead of paying $64,000 a year for ninety-nine years, which was equal to the sum of $2,049,192, the Minister (Mr. Blair) now comes down with a proposition to pay $1,600,000 in cash, and so there has been saved over $449,000 in cash alone on the transaction of the purchase of the Drummond County road. He saves more than that. Whereas the subsidy standards would make it necessary that for the payment of the subsidy of the new portion, the Drummond County Company should build it up to a certain standard, and whereas that standard is below the Intercolonial standard, which is necessary for the proper working of that line of railway in connection with the Intercolonial, in this second arrangement the Minister of Railways stipulates that the company shall spend, or the Government shall spend for them, $100,000 on the improvements, which is $65,795 more than they would have had to expend to straighten the curves and make the improvements which they promised under the first arrangement up to Moose Park. So that on that transaction alone, the Minister, when driven to it, took out of the pocket of Mr. Greenshields and the company over $500,000 in cool cash in comparison to what the Minister proposed to give under the first transaction; and the same Government, the same party, the same party press which lauded the first arrangement as the height of wisdom and embodiment of genius in the Minister of Railways and Canals, applauds in an equal manner this backdown to the tune of $500,000. The Senate is vindicated. Business opinion all over this country is vindicated, to that extent at least, that the first bargain made by the Minister of Railways and Canals, a bargain made on insufficient data and insufficient information, and forced through this House at the point of the bayonet, was a bargain with regard to which all he had to do was to sit down with the gentleman with whom he made the first bargain, and say to him: "Come now, the country has been roused on this, and I cannot give you as much as that; you will have to knock off $500,000—will you do it"? And he came to terms and knocked it off in a moment. Mr. Greenshields held more than one-eighth the stock, which he got for nothing; an additional one-fifth which he got for 30 cents on the dollar; and knowing that after the debts of the company were paid, he would get his proportion of the purchase money, he procured an option on a very large block of stock for a period which carried him to the point of certainty, after the Minister of Railways should put down in black and white his signature to the contract, which made it firm and made the stock valuable which it was not before. To give the figures: The saving that has been made by this second bargain, with reference to the Drummond County Railway over and above the first, is, on principal, $494,192; and on the betterments of the road, $65,799; being a total of $559,987.

There is another thing that needs to be noted in reference to this road. The Senate declared that that bargain was not a provident bargain, and refused to pass it. The Government and the Minister of Railways considered, and they determined to hold on to the arrangement; but, as the Bill was not allowed to become law, they had to introduce another feature. They came down to this House and asked for a vote of money in the Estimates; and now I challenge hon. gentlemen opposite as to the truth of this statement which I am making. When they came down in 1897 and asked this House to vote $160,000 or thereabouts to enable them to pay the rental for a limited term, the whole arrangement was absolutely based on the statement which was made that it was meant to be an experiment, to prove to the House whether or not it would be wise to implement the whole arrangement, and for the lengthened term. I am not going to trouble the House to read the extracts. They are in "Hansard" of 1897; you will find them in the discussion of June of that year. You will find that the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright), in answer to my own question, made the statement that it was proposed to test the matter and to experiment for a few months, to satisfy the House whether or not it was financially and economically and in a business point of view a good thing to go into this arrangement permanently. The Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) also spoke on the question in that same debate; and his speech all through is based upon the statement which he makes over and over again that this will test the matter, and that we shall know by the trade and the outcome whether or not it will be wise for Parliament to enter into this arrangement permanently. The Minister of Railways and Canals—no doubt we all remember his prophecy—prophesied untold gain from the extension of the Intercolonial to Montreal; and all through he was careful to base his demand for $160,000 on the statement that it was to be for an experiment, and that the renting of the line for a few months would give the House an idea as to trade and income, whether it should be gone into permanently. Not only the Minister of Trade and Commerce, the Minister of Public Works, and the Minister of Railways, but when the Supply Bill had went to the other House, the Attorney General of the Dominion, Sir Oliver Mowat, in that House explicitly stated in so many words that what the House was asked for was an experiment. You will find it on page 809 of the Senate Debates. He says:

I believe the object is this, that hon. gentlemen having doubts, or more than doubts, whether the business to be done would warrant the expenditure, it is felt desirable that there should be an opportunity to us all to know by actual experience how that would be.

There could not be any straighter statement than that, that is, that the Attorney General and leader of the Government in the other House put his plea for the Supply Bill going through, so far as that vote was concerned, upon the ground that it was meant to make a business experiment, and that a few months running would contribute to the knowledge of Parliament as to the results from a business point of view. Now, Sir, that having been carried, the Government and the country having had the benefit of nine, or ten, or eleven, or twelve months—yes, at the present time fourteen months—of running, what do we find when this measure comes up for its final arbitration in this House? We find the Minister of Railways and Canals rising in his seat, and in the first place denying that any business information of any value at all can be given with reference to the Montreal extension, including the Drummond County road; and, next, giving an absolute refusal to bring down any information in reference to it, on the ground, as he says, that it cannot be got. Why, Mr. Speaker, how is it possible that a Government or a member of a Government can escape from themselves, and from the record of consistency and good faith which a Government ought to keep, so far as to ask Parliament, on the initiative of the Minister of Railways, for a vote for running these roads for nine months on the ground that he proposes to make it a test period, and that the business result of those nine months could be stated in the House, and would be a guide to the House in reference to a firm and fast arrangement. And then afterwards, when that money was voted for that experiment, the same Minister of Railways and the same Government come down to the House, which they had led, by that pledge, to vote the money and try the experiment, and tell it flatly and absolutely that it is impossible to give one scintilla of information with reference to the business results throughout the thirteen or fourteen months experiment.

The hon. Minister's own officers very flatly contradicted him in 1898, when in answer to inquiries—and their telegrams in reply will be found in the "Hansard," page 3750 of this session—Mr. Pottinger, over his own signature, and Mr. Schreiber, who was being examined by the committee which sat upon the Drummond County arrangement, both inferentially and almost positively declared that it is possible to give the business results of the Montreal extension, and they were so careful to make it known that that could be done, that Mr. Pottinger sent a telegram over his own signature, on the 13th May, 1898, to Mr. Schreiber, in which he said:

No freight charged on material for Drummond County reconstruction or equipment entering into the earnings of the Montreal extension for March, as per statement sent you.

That was for the month of March. Mr. Pottinger, general superintendent of the whole system, sent in a statement of the earnings of the Montreal extension, and to show that it cannot be misread, he said: I was careful to keep out any charge for freight on materials for the Drummond County Railway construction entering into that account. Why? Because evidently they were proceeding on Sir Oliver Mowat's statement and the statement of Sir Richard Cartwright and the statement of the Minister of Public Works, that that was a trial and experimental period, and that they must be very careful to make the statement correct and keep out the material that should not be counted in in order that Parliament might have the proper information. Yet to-day, when we ask for information before we implement the contract, thirteen months after the road has begun running under this arrangement and auspices, the Minister of Railways absolutely states that it is impossible to tell what are the earnings and expenditures of the extension, and consequently what comparative position the Montreal extension is in.

Now, I come to the Grand Trunk Railway arrangement. You may say of that exactly what we have said of the Drummond Railway. In so far as it was unauthorized by any previous action of Parliament, in so far as it was entered into by the Minister, in so far as the contract was made by the Government and the hands of the Government party, and consequently of this House, tied with reference to the matter, notwithstanding the expense and the long years of the existence of this contract, with all the consequence that this entails, that contract stands on all fours with the other, and I shall not repeat my remarks on that score with reference to it.

Let us come to the arrangements which were made, in the first place, with the Grand Trunk Railway. All the king's horses and all the king's men have not sufficed to draw from the Minister of Railways the frank avowal that consideration has ameliorated the first bargain which he made with the Grand Trunk Railway as it did the bargain which he made with the Drummond County road. One concession, and only one, have we been able to wring from him, and that is that he does not in the second bargain, pay the $6,000 a year rental for the ninety-nine years for the Chaudière section, and that the rental he was to pay on the other section has not been augmented so as to make up the difference.

I propose to briefly contrast the first bargain with the second. Here we find the same lack of any consecutive and well-reasoned method of getting at a basis of information upon which to negotiate. Not yet has the Minister of Railways put before this House the reports of any of his officials charged with going down to the Grand Trunk Railway to examine its terminals, its roads, its bridges, and make some estimate as to the cost and value of those terminals and those portions of the road to be used. It is true that when the investigation was going on before the committee, which Mr. Schreiber and the Minister of Railways attended, the hon. Minister produced a memorandum which, in his office in Ottawa, Mr. Schreiber had made up, giving a set of figures upon no plan at all, including half the value of some of the property, the whole value of some of the rest of the property, and in which Mr. Schreiber made up in this haphazard way a statement of valuations of terminals and divided that into two, and recommended that half the cost be paid at the rate of 5 per cent per annum interest. One would have thought that the hon. Minister, when entering into negotiations for a franchise so costly, so connected with the great franchises of this country, the Intercolonial Railway, that when once the two were joined it was practically impossible they should ever be disjointed—one would have thought that the Minister would have entered into that on some basis of information, that he would have first made an estimate of the cost and values of the Grand Trunk Railway property in the terminals, in the bridge and in the road, in order to have some basis for his negotiations with the Grand Trunk Company. But nothing of that kind appeared. It is sought for in vain in the records of this Parliament. You cannot find the report of an engineer dealing with that subject brought down to this Parliament. All that we have is the fragmentary memorandum which was brought out in evidence before the Drummond County Committee. What is the basis upon which the terminals have been taken? Let us set down, as a basis of this whole arrangement, that whatever we get, no matter whether we pay rent for it beforehand or do not, we pay for the maintenance of it on the basis of car and engine mileage. The rent of the terminals and the rent of the Ste. Rosalie branch and the bridge, and the like, are in the nature of a retainer which you give to a lawyer to ally him to your case, so that he will not take your opponent's, and then, after having paid him the retainer, you will have to pay him the actual expenses and the work he puts upon the case. These are in the way of a retainer to the Grand Trunk Railway, which was to predispose them to give us certain privileges, on a basis of payment for maintenance, calculated on the proportion of car and engine mileage. What is the basis with reference to the terminals? First, the terminals were to be valued; they were valued in the way I have spoken of by Mr. Schreiber. Then half of the cost of the terminals was to be taken, and the Minister of Railways and Canals binds the country to pay in perpetuity 5 per cent per annum upon half of the cost. This is irrespective of the fact that although he paid for half the user in the rental alone, it was not possible that he should use these terminals to anything like the extent that he paid for them; and the fact has been brought out by returns tardily brought down that for the months that have passed the proportion of our user, has been between 6 and 7 per cent. That is, we pay for one-half the cost of the terminals on the basis of 5 per cent, which is an exorbitant rate, and we use them to the extent of 6 to 7 per cent. Now, with reference to the bridge—it was stated in indefinite terms that the bridge cost ten millions of dollars. It was stated somewhere in the evidence that as good a bridge could be put up for six millions of dollars. What my hon. friend appears to have done is to pay a rental of $40,000 for the bridge and to give it in perpetuity. Now, whether the bridge cost the Grand Trunk ten millions when it was built and as it was built, does not enter into this question. The question was: What should the Intercolonial Railway contribute over and above its maintenance for the privilege of getting the user of that bridge? I think a fair estimate would have been on the basis of computing the cost of a modern bridge over the St. Lawrence, and then agree to assume one-half of that cost and agree to pay a reasonable interest on it, say, 2½ per cent. Now, if the Canadian Pacific Railway could build at Lachine a bridge sufficient for the traffic of that great road at a cost of $934,000, it is fair to assume that we could have built a bridge for not more than $2,000,000. Assuming half the cost, or $1,000,000, then the $40,000 per year represents what? It represents $1,400,000, or about one-quarter of the $6,000,000 which the indefinite estimate gave as the price of a bridge, or within $600,000 of the $2,000,000 which would certainly build an adequate bridge across the St. Lawrence at the present time. So far as the bridge is concerned, the charge is not so inordinate as the other branches of the arrangement; still, $40,000 yearly in perpetuity for the bridge, while we use a little less than ten per cent, according to the figures, is an excessive amount to pay, and we should get it for much less.

But when we come to the Ste. Rosalie branch, from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert, we find the Minister of Railways and Canals accepts a basis of $50,000 a mile for the cost of building a road between those points, through a country which railway experts know to be an easy country for railway construction; and upon the half of this he agrees to pay 5 per cent. I do not think that any railway engineer would be found to say that a road could not be built from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert at $20,000 a mile at an outside figure. Why, then, this estimate of $50,000, as agreed to by the Minister of Railways and Canals, and why, in the name of all that is sensible and business-like, should he agree that this country should pay 5 per cent when we know that it can borrow the money it wants at 2½ per cent? Now, with reference to the Chaudière Junction; that is a rental of $6,000 a year in perpetuity, but, of course, under the first agreement, for 99 years. Now, what have we besides that? We have beside that an extraordinary clause in the first agreement, and if hon. gentlemen take the trouble to read that clause in the first agreement, and read it in the second agreement they will see a marked difference between the two. I am not going to read it in extenso, but I will state the difference. The Minister bound himself, under section 55, to pay half the cost of the double tracking of the Ste. Rosalie and St. Lambert road and on all yard improvements and additional tracking in St. Charles and from St. Charles to the station, and to pay for all improvements that the Railway Committee of the Privy Council might judge to be necessary improvements for the Grand Trunk itself, this payment to be on the basis of 5 per cent, and to pay this in perpetuity. But there was another paragraph in that first agreement which is not in the second, and that paragraph bound the Minister to pay at the same rate, 5 per cent, on half the cost of any further expenditure for the efficient carrying on of the business of the road. That was an altogether indefinite clause. That would take in elevators and other improvements which would have to be made to keep up with the progress of the times during the hundred of years for which this agreement would endure. That is left out of the present clause—is one betterment, at least. But, Sir, this is what the Minister bound himself to in the first bargain, to pay $62,500 as a retainer for terminal facilities, to pay $40,000 a year as a retainer for the privilege of using the bridge, to pay $37,500 a year for the Ste. Rosalie and St. Lambert branch—half the cost, at 5 per cent—and to pay $6,000 a year for the Chaudière Junction section. That made in all $146,000, and, at 2½ per cent, that would represent a capitalization, in round figures, of five millions of dollars. Now, the hon. gentleman will say that we get half ownership or interest in the Ste. Rosalie branch; and yet he acknowledged here the other day that all that is only in name and not in fact. If, 50 years from now, or 99 years from now, this arrangement were broken, we would own not a single spike in that property in which he says we have bought a half interest. The thing amounts to nothing more or less than a lease which grants certain privileges so long as the terms of the lease are carried out; and when they fall in no title to the property remains in the Government or the Minister of Railways. So that you may take that whole $146,000 as representing a simple payment to the Grand Trunk Railway for the privilege of getting the user, for maintaining which you have to pay according to the wheelage basis, that is, a capitalization of $5,000,000 represents what we pay to the Grand Trunk Railway for privilege of user, that we may have a right to a user, for maintaining every mile of which we have to pay according to our proportion the mileage as between us and the Grand Trunk Railway.

But there was another point—and here I am not upon certain ground, but I must go upon the ground of conjecture to a certain extent. What would these betterments amount to? We do not know. Whatever they were, we know that the Minister bound himself in perpetuity to pay 5 per cent interest upon half their cost. We know for a certainty that one thing that was contemplated was the double tracking of the St. Lambert and Ste. Rosalie branch of the road, which would cost somewhere about $200,000. Anyway, we know that was contemplated, that it was a necessity, and is acknowledged to be a necessity. Now, I will tell you the ground I propose to go upon: With the increasing business of the Grand Trunk Railway system, with its branch lines extending all over this country and into other countries to the west, and continually broadening, and widening, and drawing freight and traffic for themselves, all centering down in the city of Montreal, it is not, I think, unbusinesslike or extravagant to make this estimate, that in the space of 20 years $2,000,000 at least would be expended for betterments and improvements of all kinds. An expenditure of $2,000,000 in 20 years would be about $100,000 a year. Now I leave it to business men in this House if that is an extravagant estimate to make. Let us argue upon that basis, that in 20 years time $2,000,000 of improvements would have been made on all that stretch, and those terminals, and the approach to the yards, and everything connected with it. We should have had to pay 5 per cent upon one-half, or 5 per cent upon $1,000,000, which would then be a payment in perpetuity of $50,000 a year, even if no further improvements were made after that 20 years. If further improvements were made, our proportion of the cost would have to be paid on the further improvements. Now, Sir, if you capitalize that $50,000 at 2½ per cent, it gives you a capital sum of $1,750,000 which you have to set apart. So that there is $5,000,000 first, for what I call the user retainer, and there is $1,750,000 on this conjectural basis of an expenditure of $2,000,000 in 20 years for betterments, on which we have to pay 5 per cent on one-half the cost, which makes up $6,750,000 of a capitalization, independent entirely of the maintenance which we have to pay each month according to the wheelage basis.

But with all that, in the first arrangement the Grand Trunk Railway was still your constant competitor for the whole distance of this extension, because there was no traffic arrangement and no clause in the contract which prevented the Grand Trunk Railway from competing over their own road from Montreal to Lévis. So that you paid this extravagant retainer, you paid this maintenance on the basis on which it was paid, and at the same time you did not provide that the Grand Trunk Railway should not be your active and powerful competitor from Montreal the whole length of that extension down to Lévis where the Intercolonial Railway joins on to both. This then in brief was the bargain that was made, and which was heralded all through this country by the party press as being a mark of great wisdom and as one of the most businesslike arrangements that had ever been made by any Government.

Well, Sir, there was a period given for consideration, thanks to the Senate, and how does the present bargain stand in reference to the other? In the first place, $146,000 is not now being given as a retainer, $6,000 has been dropped off by Mr. Wainwright, by the Grand Trunk Railway. What does that amount to? $6,000 a year less paid under the second than under the first, $6,000 paid each year for a period of 99 years, compounded at 2½ per cent interest, amounts to $3,286,888. My hon. friend laughs.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. What was paid on the Harris land job?

Mr. FOSTER. My hon. friend shall draw even a large herring across the track. If he wishes to investigate the Harris land job, he has the capabilities, he has the papers, he evidently has the time to do it, let him do it. But at the present time it is quite a different thing we are investigating, we are investigating the Grand Trunk Railway arrangement, and although the Minister laughs, I say that by an absolute mathematical calculation it is as certain as that he now lives and will sometime die, as certain as that if the sun rises it will also set, to any one who will make the calculation or have it made for him, that if the $6,000 is not paid, and if it is put on investment at compound interest at the extremely low rate of 2½ per cent, in 99 years it will amount to $3,285,000. Now, the Prime Minister thinks that is laughable.

The PRIME MINISTER. Yes, I do.

Mr. FOSTER. Will the hon. gentleman tell us why he thinks that is ridiculous?

The PRIME MINISTER. No, I will not.

Mr. FOSTER. Then my hon. friend exercises his perfect right to laugh without giving to the rest of us his reasons for so doing. Now, then, the hon. gentleman has in the short time of cogitation which was happily given to him by the action of the Senate, revised the Grand Trunk Railway part of the bargain with a betterment to that extent. But let us take it upon another basis. That $6,000 per year capitalized at 2½ per cent amounts to a capital sum of $210,000, which would have to be set aside in order to produce $6,000 a year. I simply mention the other calculation to show that these sums paid out would, if you go on the line of investment for the time that this bargain extended, amount to an immense sum of money. Now we will take the other calculation. $6,000 capitalized, amounts to $210,000, so there is the present value of $210,000 that is saved by the $6,000 a year less being paid in the second bargain, as it was proposed to pay it in the other. Now, let me take the betterments, and I go again on the conjectural basis, that in 20 years $2,000,000 for improvements would be expended, and $1,000,000 would be our share. The Minister in the former bargain bound the country to pay 5 per cent upon that; in the present bargain he has taken the option of paying 2½ per cent instead of 5 per cent, therefore he has saved the difference, that is 2½ per cent. Now, then, what would be 2½ per cent upon that supposed and conjectural expenditure, take it at whatever you like? If you think it is too much, take less; if it is not enough, take more. But this proportion will always hold, that under the present arrangement the Minister may pay 2½ per cent, whereas under the former he agreed to pay for all time 5 per cent interest on the basis that I took, this would be $21,250 a year saving, and capitalized it would be $740,000. Add to that $210,000 the saving of $6,000 per year, and you have a saving of $950,000, or pretty nearly $1,000,000. I do not believe there is very much to find fault with in that calculation. I cannot believe that business men will tell you, after looking into the great capacities for the growth of commerce in our country, the tremendously wide expansion of the Grand Trunk Railway and its affiliated branches and affluents, and these all centering in the city of Montreal, and almost all passing out over the Ste. Rosalie branch—looking to all these considerations—I do not believe that business men will consider that $2,000,000 of an expenditure in the next twenty years would be an inordinate calculation, that this saving of 2½ per cent interest, in the second agreement over the first, would be $21,250 a year, which capitalized, would be $740,000. I come to another point, which is largely conjectural, but still it has a certain basis to go upon. In the first arrangement the Grand Trunk Railway Company was a full competitor from Montreal to Lévis, inasmuch as it did not bind itself to give over one single ton of traffic to the Intercolonial Railway at Montreal. All that it did bind itself to do was, that if a shipper in the west wanted his freight shipped over the Intercolonial Railway and the transfer to be made at Montreal, the Grand Trunk Railway was to give effect to the shipper's wishes. That was a very small thing, and practically amounted to nothing. It made no difference to him whether it went to Lévis and was transferred, or whether it was transferred at Montreal, provided the Grand Trunk would give as good a rate to Lévis over its line as the Intercolonial Railway would give. The supplemental traffic arrangement which has been made, may amount to a great deal more than this arrangement. Under it the Grand Trunk Railway Company binds itself, in reference to all traffic from the west that originates on the company's lines, to make the transfer point Montreal, instead of Lévis, and that, consequently, the Intercolonial Railway extension shall have the benefit of the traffic from Montreal to Lévis. Does this amount to much or not? I will take the calculation made by the hon. member for Westmoreland (Mr. Powell), which, I believe, will hold good, as it was very carefully made. It is based on the 1897 returns. The 1897 returns show that the receipts from traffic west-bound, passing Lévis, amounted to $201,591, and from the traffic east-bound, passing Lévis, to $420,713. The two, added together, make $622,304. The hon. member for Westmoreland makes that calculation as to what proportion of profit will accrue to the Intercolonial Railway on this extension in respect to the traffic of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, which was formerly transferred at Lévis, and will now be transferred at Montreal. It will be something very considerable. The hon. member for Westmoreland figures that the profit will be $35,000 per year, as the result of the new traffic arrangement, compared with the preceding traffic arrangement under the first bargain. If you capitalize that on the basis of the figures of 1897, at 2½ per cent—and that is assuming that the traffic will not grow—it will amount to $1,219,000. If you take this as a fair basis of calculation, as far as the Grand Trunk arrangement goes, the second bargain, as compared with the first, shows a betterment, capitalized on the basis of 2½ per cent, of $2,169,000. Some of this lies on uncontested present facts, while other parts of the argument lie on what business men and railway men would consider a fair proportion and a fair estimate; but I believe that these estimates that I have taken, that the hon. member for Westmoreland has worked out, will not be found to be inordinate. I believe that it is just as plain as can be that the betterment of the second, as compared with the first bargain, will come to the amount that I have stated. In the face of that, the hon. members supporting the Government and the press of the Government lauded the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals, in every possible way, for the contract which he brought down in 1897, and they called the Senate names because they did not implement the bargain. They also reflected on our wisdom and patriotism because we opposed that bargain in this House. Their argument was, that this is the best bargain that can be obtained, that it is an excellent thing for the country, that Parliament ought to ratify it, and that the Government ought to be sustained in its contract. Now, Sir, a few months of consideration, of calm consideration, under the restraining hand of the Senate, has brought the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals and the Government to acknowledge the fact, which they must acknowledge, that, as between the first bargain that they wished to rush through this House and bind upon the country for all time to come, and this second bargain which they are endeavouring now to have ratified by this Parliament, there is this immense difference, in the first, or Drummond, portion of it, of $559,000, in round figures, actual cash, which cannot be disputed. In reference to the Grand Trunk portion, some of which depends on uncontested fact—first, the $6,000 a year saving—some on partly uncontested fact—the difference that there is between 2½ and 5 per cent on what you pay on half the cost—and some of which is conjectural to a certain extent, as to what will be the amount of difference under the arrangement to transfer traffic at Montreal instead of Lévis—a betterment of $559,000 is shown on the Drummond County portion of it, and a total betterment, under this calculation which I have made, capitalized, of $2,169,000. So much, then, in reference to the two bargains. Where would this country have been, if it had had confidence in the Government, if it had taken the word of the Government and the hon. Minister of Railways as the final word, and if the House had passed that agreement which was brought down in 1897, and put it upon this country for ninety-nine years—yes, and for all time to come? Where would this country have been, if Her Majesty's loyal Opposition had not stood up in this House and opposed it, and if the Senate had not exercised its fair right to revise all the measures that come before this House, on a business basis, and of rejecting that bargain? Where would this country have been? This country would have been saddled with an expenditure for all time to come in excess, by millions, of the expenditure which the wise action of the Senate has reduced to the amount involved in the bargain which we have before us at the present time. Now, my hon. friend (Mr. Blair) will smile, and say, that I have made his position all the more tenable, when I say, that he has got more betterments under this bargain. That does not make his position more tenable; it shows his innate foolishness in making his bargain. It shows the haphazard and unbusinesslike way in which the Minister who for the time being has the money of the people of Canada, put up as taxation, plays ducks and drakes with the finances of this country, and rushes his unwilling followers into arrangements which plunge this country into expenditures of millions of dollars in the aggregate, over and above what he afterwards finds he could obtain the same privilege for, in the interest of the country and its business. It does not let the Minister out, but it is a tremendously strong comment upon the unbusinesslike and injudicious methods pursued by the Minister of Railways (Mr. Blair), and into which course, unfortunately, he dragged after him men of cooler heads and of different impulses, but whom he dragooned one way or the other into following his lead, and committing this patent and absolute absurdity.

But, Sir, it remains now to ask whether the present bargain is a bargain as good as the Minister of Railways could have made. I have no hesitation in saying it is not as good a bargain as he could have made. Even with this lightened burden, he has committed this country—if this is finally ratified—for ninety-nine years and for all time to come, to pay far more than it ought to pay; far more than it ought to pay. Why, on what ground of business can it be justified that when you get the user of little less than 7 per cent of the terminals of the Grand Trunk Railway, you have to pay the full measure of that user as estimated by the car mileage proportions, and then over and above that, pay on the valuation of half the cost, 5 per cent interest for all time to come. In the first place, why should we pay for half the user by way of retainer, when we only use a little less than 7 per cent of it. But the answer is made: "Oh, but our traffic will increase," and the answer follows immediately to that, "so will the traffic of the Grand Trunk Railway increase." Do you mean to tell me that 4,000 miles of Grand Trunk Railway, draining this country to the west, stretching out into the American states, and drawing on these continually increasing productive areas, will not grow at Montreal, and increase with equal rapidity at least to the Grand Trunk traffic taken out of the city of Montreal or brought into it over that extension. And so, if you put the argument to me: True, it is only 7 per cent now, but it will be more later; I say that argument loses its force, because the increase will take place on the whole Grand Trunk Railway system as well as on the Ste. Rosalie branch, and certainly in equal if not in greater proportion. On what rule of finance or business can the Minister of Railways ask that out of the country's exchequer, for all time to come, an obsolete rate of interest shall be paid upon an extravagant valuation—an obsolete rate of interest, which has not obtained in this country for the last twenty years; which, since Sir Richard Cartwright's time, has not obtained in this country, for our credit has grown better and better, until the last loan was placed at 2½ per cent, or all costs and charges taken in, at 2¼ per cent. Yet, the Minister (Mr. Blair) thinks it is a wise business operation, and the Government back him up in saying it is a wise business operation that Canada, which can get money at 2½ per cent or 2¼ per cent, must pay for all time to come on an extravagant valuation, 5 per cent, or nearly twice as much as the normal and present rate of interest.

Again, Sir, what business man will pretend to say that it is a wise transaction when you are going to pay a sort of retainer for the user over the Ste. Rosalie branch, that you shall estimate the cost of that road at $50,000 per mile, making $1,500,000, cut that in two and pay half, though your user is not one-third—not one-fourth at the present time—and that you will then, upon that extravagant valuation, pay 5 per cent interest upon the money for all time to come. It is neither businesslike, nor is it in any way an arrangement which the Minister and the Government of this country should bind Canada to. Let the Minister place what is his fair valuation; let him place what is our fair proportion to pay for our user and be generous in it; let him pay a retainer if he will, but what business method is there in making an extravagant valuation of that kind, and then paying twice the normal rate of interest upon that extravagant valuation for the Ste. Rosalie and St. Lambert branch? Again, Sir, what man of business habits, looking to the future of the Intercolonial Railway and the future of this country, will bind himself for all time to come to pay 5 per cent upon half the cost of any improvements that can be made? True, in the second bargain these improvements are more defined; some of the more objectionable and indefinite ones are thrown out entirely, but after all the Minister has bound himself to pay 4 per cent. Now, I would like to ask the Minister of Railways (Mr. Blair) one question. I have not bothered him with questions during this address, and having had so long a rest, I am sure he will respond very willingly. I think that, in the Grand Trunk Railway Bill, an option is taken to pay 4 per cent interest, or to pay cash for these improvements. I do not think such an option ought to be in that Bill. I think that the cost should be ascertained, and that we should pay our share of the cost in money. I want to ask the Minister of Railways what the Government proposes to do, whether they propose to pay 4 per cent interest when they can get money at 2½ per cent, or whether they propose, as a business man ought to, who has the money and has the credit, to pay the cash when the cash comes due?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I have no hesitation in saying, that so far as my view is concerned, and the recommendation which I would make to Council would go, I would unhesitatingly advise the payment of interest rather than the payment of the principal for any improvements which we may sanction and desire. I should think it would be very unwise; I would think it would be indefensible, for us to pay cash in respect of any additions or improvements or alterations that may be made on the road, representing half the cost, when we have the option of paying interest upon it. The option was included in the contract for the reason that the time may possibly come when the conditions existing in respect to the Grand Trunk Railway encumbrances may be different from what they are today, and when we are paying this interest, will not be affected by any proceedings that would be taken for the foreclosure of the mortgage upon the property, thus losing every dollar we had paid.

Mr. FOSTER. I am quite willing that should go on record. Now, Mr. Speaker, I have pretty well gone through what remarks I intended to make with reference to the financial arrangements of these two deals, and I have but few remarks to make in conclusion. I was going on to state that although the betterment as between the two bargains enures to the benefit of the country, so far from it being a justification of the wisdom of the Minister (Mr. Blair), or of the Government, it is the strongest possible proof that could be had of the unbusinesslike methods which were adopted by the Minister (Mr. Blair) and by the Government in making these first arrangements in 1897. I was then going on to state that because the Minister has succeeded in making these betterments, it does not at all constitute a proof that the present bargain is a good one for this country, and one that Parliament ought to ratify. As regards the terminals, I went on to state that there seemed to be no reason in the world why we should pay a retainer for half the value of those terminals, and that, as a basis of valuation, we should pay in perpetuity 5 per cent interest, when the rate of interest at which we can borrow money is about half of that. With reference to the Ste. Rosalie branch, I said it did not seem to be businesslike or necessary that we should take a railway extending thirty miles through that country, which could be built for \$15,000 or \$20,000 a mile, and, as a basis of valuation, say it shall be valued at \$50,000 a mile, and pay interest at 5 per cent for all time to come on half of that sum. These two things the hon. gentleman is doing. Then, on the betterments, he proposes to pay $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent instead of $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. I do not think it is reasonable that that amount of interest should be paid when the country's credit is on the basis on which it at present rests.

These are the considerations which lead me to think that with reference to the Grand Trunk the bargain is still an indefensible and extravagant bargain, as I am sure it is with reference to the Drummond County road. The fact is, the Drummond County road was built very largely by the subsidies which were paid for it by the Government. That question of subsidy has been already argued from this side of the House, and I do not propose to go into the argument. The object of a subsidy is to enable a road to be built, and to enable it to be operated after it is built, by putting the company in the possession of capital on which they pay no interest, and, therefore, do not have to call on the road for interest to pay on that capital. But when the Government starts and buys out a road, which it has itself subsidized, it is to my mind very questionable indeed whether the Government has a right to pay again to these men the value which was put into that road by the very fact that the Government's money was paid to it.

With reference to this road, another question is raised, and it is a question which will meet this House. Let this bargain be carried out; let the Intercolonial extension be running as a part of the Government road from Lévis up to the city of Montreal, with the Government getting its income, the Government managing the road, the Government being the sole proprietor. How long does my hon. friend think it will be before the province of Quebec comes with a demand upon this Government to pay back to it the amount of money which it gave as subsidies to this local road, which has now become a Government road and is owned as part of the Intercolonial Railway?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Do you think that would be a legitimate claim?

Mr. FOSTER. My hon. friend is a lawyer and would like to cross-examine me. He will not find me in the witness box just at this time. But I will give my hon. friend the benefit of my view upon it; and I will tell him this, that as sure as he is a Minister of Railways, and remains for any considerable length of time in this Government, and this scheme is carried through, and that road becomes part and parcel of a Government road, the province of Quebec will be here with a demand to have that subsidy paid back to it.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Do you think it ought to be paid?

Mr. FOSTER. I will argue that question when the demand comes. But I want to point out to my hon. friend what danger he is courting. He is paying to his political friends at present for the subsidy which the Quebec Government has put into that road, and he will be called upon, I think, before many years are over, to put his hand into the public exchequer, and pay back to the province of Quebec the amount that province contributed to the local road, which road has now been taken over by the Dominion Government. That is a question which hon. gentlemen opposite have to face, and it is a question which they ought to have taken into consideration when buying this road. To say that even $1,600,000 ought to be given for a road which was hawked about under an option of $400,000 for the 90 miles of it then built, when for the building of the succeeding portion about $680,000 have been expended, making some $1,100,000 as the actual cost of the road, I think my hon. friend will agree with me, is making a bargain which the internal value of the road itself did not warrant, and with regard to which my hon. friend could have made a very much better bargain.

But with all these exorbitant payments, where is my hon. friend with his system of roads? He has loaded the Intercolonial Railway with fixed charges which, on the basis of $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, amount under the amended bargain to about \$212,750 a year for rental alone. Outside of that, he has to pay the user expenses, maintenance, repairs, and the like of that, according to the basis of the car mileage. But that is a fixed sum which he has adopted, and he meets that with a still stronger competition at Montreal than he met with at Lévis. Montreal is the point of competition. There the Grand Trunk Railway, with all its great system west, is interested in its own line down to Portland for all oceanic freight. By his former agreement the Grand Trunk was interested in its own line from Montreal to Lévis; and it would have diverted, for the sake of its own line, as much freight as it could over that portion of its line, to have been delivered to the Intercolonial at Lévis for Intercolonial points or for through carriage. But, Sir, that point of competition is now intensified by the fact that under the traffic arrangement the Grand Trunk has ceased to become a competitor as to its line between Montreal and Lévis, and consequently its strong inclination and trend will be to send all this freight which is meant for export, over its line to Portland.

I want to say just one word with reference to the traffic arrangement. The new traffic arrangement which has been made, which I have outlined in part, has another portion to it, and that is the arbitrariness that have been given. On another question the hon. Minister of Railways the other day explained that, and his explanation was simply this: for all freight which originates in the west for ocean carriage the Grand Trunk Railway receives its pro rata proportion for what it carries over the Grand Trunk system till it reaches Montreal. But the Intercolonial, when that freight reaches Montreal, and is then conveyed to Halifax, 837 miles, receives its pro rata proportion for only 425 miles. That is, it agrees to carry it two miles for the price which the Grand Trunk Railway gets for carrying it one mile. To St. John it agrees to carry it 740 miles, and to count the distance as only 375 miles so far as the division of profits is concerned, that is, it agrees to carry about two miles for one mile. That is on all the traffic which is east bound, something is given to the Grand Trunk, because it originated the freight; but, on the other hand, when the freight is originated east and is going west, the Intercolonial Railway carries it over 837 miles from Halifax and then gives it to the Grand Trunk Railway, which carries it, say, 1,000 miles on its own track, the Grand Trunk Railway gets payment for every mile it carries. In the division of the earnings, however, the Intercolonial Railway gets only one mile's pay for two miles carriage, putting it in round numbers. Now, if you take into account the fact that the Grand Trunk Railway, for that through ocean freight, is a road which is in keen and constant competition with continental roads, at Portland, at Boston, at New York, and other points, and that in order to get freight from the west for the ocean passage, it has to put the rates down, as competing with these great and strong lines of railway and steamship transport, and, consequently, that its freight rates must be brought down to the very minimum of what will be the very smallest profit over the cost of carriage, you will see that when you put upon the Intercolonial Railway, on rates as finely drawn as those, the burden of carrying two miles for one mile of freight, you put it into a position in which it is absolutely impossible for it to carry that freight unless it carries it at or below cost. What benefit will that be? My hon. friend, if he chooses to make capital do the work of revenue and income, if he chooses to cover up the loss in that way, may float along for a very little time, but it is impossible for the Intercolonial Railway system to be run for any length of time on freight rates given on such a basis. Every year the competition is keener, every year the Grand Trunk Railway will have to shave its rates closer and closer, to meet its great competitors, every year the rates will be made nearer and nearer the cost, and consequently, you will have the Intercolonial Railway under the detriment of carrying freight at those cost prices, two miles for one mile of pay. That will be not to the good, but to the continual detriment of the Intercolonial Railway.

There is one point in the matter of the traffic arrangement to which I wish to refer; you put the traffic arrangement alongside this Bill. You say that this contract shall continue for ninety-nine years and longer, if not then broken. One of the essential points in the argument is that in the supplementary agreement you have got the Grand Trunk Railway to agree to transfer freight at Montreal instead of at Lévis, which is a great advantage. That is not the ordinary traffic arrangement in which rates play a part and all the like of that, but is a generic feature in this whole thing, and we pay what we pay, if we agree to pay it in the ultimate, because we suppose we have got that concession to run as long as we pay these rentals and these other sums of money. But whilst the contract itself goes on, and our $140,000 must be paid each year for ever, and our maintenance on the mileage basis and our improvements on the basis of half the cost at 4 per cent—whilst these are to run on for ever, within ten days, after this Bill is passed, the Minister of Railways may sit down with the manager of the Grand Trunk Railway and make a further agreement by which the point of transfer will be Lévis instead of Montreal. There is no doubt about that, and that is not as it ought to be. I say that this is a generic part of the scheme, which gives to it very large value, and for which we pay, should be made a substantial and permanent part of it just as well as our payments are. As you cannot change the payments without an Act of Parliament, you ought not to be able to change this feature of the traffic arrangement without the consent of Parliament. I do not see why the hon. Minister did not put that in. It ought to be there.

If it is not to be there, let us know it, and we will find out that we have no compensation such as we thought we had, through that transfer point being at Montreal rather than at Lévis. I think that that is of great moment, and ought to be a part of the contract. That came down to us with the schedule, we passed it with the schedule, but when we come to the Bill we do not find it; but we find instead a provision authorizing the railway company and the Government to change that any moment they like, after the Bill is passed, and after we are committed to these immense payments for 99 years, or in perpetuity. Before the discussion is over, my hon. friends on the Treasury benches ought to consider that point and agree to insert it in the measure itself. If it is intended that we should have this advantage, if it is not a mere makeshift, let it be put in the Bill as a permanency. It is of great moment. We are paying great sums for these privileges, let us have the compensation as permanent as the payments. At least, let us have it permanent this far, that if a different arrangement be made it shall be made with and by the consent of Parliament, and not simply with and by the Minister of Railways and the Government. It may be fair to say that circumstances might arise which would make it necessary to have a change. Then, leave it in the power of Parliament, which will be a good and conscientious judge, just as competent as the Minister and the Government, to make the change. That far, at least, I would like the Government to go on that point. I thank you, Mr. Speaker, and the House for having listened to me so patiently.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). I think, Mr. Speaker, that one would be apt to infer, who had listened to the hon. gentleman's address from the beginning to the end, that the point which he desired to establish was not so much that the arrangement now before Parliament was a bad, an unbusinesslike arrangement, but that it was one which makes against the credit of the Minister of Railways. I rather inferred that the hon. gentleman's greater object was to say something which would reflect unfavourably upon myself personally rather than impress Parliament against the contract now before us. So far as the hon. gentleman may succeed in creating such impression, founded upon facts, without drawing upon his imagination or without, in a reckless or unwarranted way, putting before the House as fact what are not facts, I am perfectly content that the hon. gentleman should succeed. There is, as I understand it, one trouble which greatly embarrasses the ex-Minister of Finance (Mr. Foster). He is deeply concerned to think that the Minister of Railways and this Government should have plunged headlong into this transaction without having availed themselves of the ordinary means of information, without having referred to the officers of the Department of Railways and Canals for their judgment and opinion, and solely for the purpose of carrying out some ill-considered scheme or policy which the Minister of Railways and his colleagues had jointly determined upon.

Now, Sir, I do not imagine that there is any gentleman in this House, I certainly do not imagine that there is any one who, even for the shortest period, has been a member of any Cabinet in Canada, who has not, to a greater or less degree, been convinced of the necessity of making some change with respect to the Intercolonial Railway—extending it beyond the point which was, up to about a year ago, the terminus of that line. I do not think that any one can say, having a belief that that policy ought to have been adopted, that, looking at the question in its several bearings, there was any alternative open to the Government, if it were to act in a judicious manner, than to acquire the Drummond County Railway and make it part of the Intercolonial Railway system. Does the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) imagine that, being convinced, as I maintain this House to-day is convinced, that either the Grand Trunk, that part of the Grand Trunk Railway via Richmond, the South Shore Railway, or, as has been lately suggested, the Canadian Pacific, on the other side of the river, is a reasonable alternative. Nobody has, in this debate, I think, succeeded in establishing that proposition. The proposition we have submitted is the only proposition, so far as the connection between Lévis and Montreal is concerned, which can be supported by facts or argument, or on any business basis. That being the case, Mr. Speaker, what was there in the question requiring more consideration. What was there remaining to require closer critical examination by the Government? We had no alternative but to take the Drummond County line, if we could get it on reasonable terms. Then, the only matter we had to satisfy ourselves upon was: What would be the best terms on which we could acquire the road—buy it or lease it; if buy it, what price; if lease it, what rental? When we came first to Parliament, we told Parliament—and fortified our statement with the evidence of our engineers and officers—that, in our opinion and in their opinion, $1,600,000 would be a reasonable and proper value to put on the Drummond County Railway from Ste. Rosalie east to the Chaudière. Now, the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) to make a point against myself, said, that we had never had before Parliament—and suggests that the Minister had never before him—the opinion of any of his officers. Well, that statement, I must say, is without warrant. I think I can call to the recollection of members of this House the fact that there was put before Parliament—speaking now from memory; I would say, upon the first occasion when this proposition was submitted, in 1897—a report of the chief engineer and Deputy Minister upon this railway. That report was dated the 2nd of February, 1897, some days, some weeks, I think, before the contract was entered into between the Government and the Drummond County Railway. That communication, which I have in my hand, I venture to think is not now produced and will not now be read for the first time; for I think I have heard gentlemen criticising my course and the course of the Government on the strength of some statements contained in this report. What does it say? It is addressed to myself, and is as follows:—

In compliance with your request for information as to the general character of the road constructed by the Drummond County Railway Company from Ste. Rosalie Junction, on the Grand Trunk Railway, via Drummondville and St. Léonard to Moose Park, a distance of 73 miles, together with a branch, of 17 miles in length, from St. Léonard to Nicolet, and also my views as to the standard on which the balance of the road from Moose Park to its junction with the Grand Trunk Railway, near Chaudière bridge, should be built, assuming that the line was to form a section of the Intercolonial Railway, I have to report:

That 73 miles of the road is built and in operation, that the gradients and alignments are favourable, there being only one grade exceeding 53 feet per mile, and that one is 64 feet to the mile. That, with one exception, there is no curve of a less radius than 1,433 feet, and that the one exception is a curve of 955 feet radius.

That the road is well and substantially built, the cutting being 20 feet, and the embankments 15 feet wide at sub-grade. Ample drainage is provided by substantial steel structures resting on massive masonry spanning the larger rivers, and steel-plate girders resting on strong, well-built masonry spanning the streams of lesser magnitude, whereas the general drainage through the smaller rivulets has been passed through culverts constructed of sound cedar timber 10 in. by 10 in. square. The larger portion of the line through the cleared land is inclosed by a substantial post and board fence, whereas on a small portion of the line a wire fence has been erected. The permanent way is laid with 2,600 ties to the mile, with steel rails weighing 56 lbs. to the yard, connected with steel fish-plates.

The road is well ballasted with a very fine quality of gravel, the station buildings are neat buildings of what I consider sufficient capacity for the requirements of the road, and the water service is good.

I think you will agree with me from the description I have given of the works, that a really good road has been secured, fully up to the general standard of railways in Canada. At the same time, I think, you should insist on the 64 feet per mile grade being reduced to 53 feet, in making an arrangement for the acquisition of the road, if such be your intention, which I assume to be the case.

As you desire me to state the standard on which I would recommend the completion of the road to Chaudière bridge, supposing it to be a section of the Intercolonial Railway, upon that part of the subject I would say that the standard should be equal to that of the Intercolonial Railway as it now exists, and that the steel rails should not be less than 70 lbs. to the yard, with passenger, freight and other buildings of approved number, dimensions and design.

Mr. BLAIR.

If these suggestions be carried out, the company will have a good substantial road throughout, the main line being 115 miles in length from Ste. Rosalie to Chaudière bridge, with a branch to Nicolet of 17 miles in length.

Now comes the clause which was criticised two years ago by hon. gentlemen opposite, when they had this report before them:

Should you finally decide to acquire the road, before the matter is absolutely closed, I suggest it would be prudent to have an examination made into its condition. Of course, this season of the year is not favourable for making such an inspection, nor do I think it desirable that it should be made during the spring freshets or when the frost is coming out of the ground, but later in the season, when the road-bed is settled down into its place, and any damage which may have arisen from the spring freshets may be seen, is, to my view, the proper time to have the road looked over.

Before taking action in that direction, I shall await your instructions, as, of course, if an arrangement for the acquisition of the road is not reached, it would be a useless expenditure to send out the inspecting engineer to examine the road.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. What is the date of that?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. The 2nd February, 1897.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. That is after—

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. What does the hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) suggest?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. When did the House meet?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. In March, if I remember well. This report is signed by Collingwood Schreiber, chief engineer. Now, it is true, that the engineer does advise that, before a lease is closed, a more careful examination of the road should be made; but it was not possible at that time to have a better inspection of the road than had been made. We desired to facilitate the matter as much as possible; we thought it well there should be no unnecessary delay; and, moreover, we were not making a transaction with those gentlemen at all upon a basis which required us to make another inspection of this road. We had valued the road, and we were receiving it upon a valuation which was below its cost, much below what would be its cost under any circumstances. We were buying it at a valuation of $1,600,000. We stated to the House that it was upon that valuation we were proposing to pay rental to the Drummond County Railway Company, and upon no other; and we assumed as a matter of necessary inference that a road which had cost this company—I do not care whether part of the cost did consist in subsidies from different Governments—but a road which had cost this company, and would cost, when the extra 43 miles were completed to Chaudière, over $2,000,000, was a road that we were getting at a reasonable price, and so low that we might very well submit it to Parliament at the time we did, without making any other critical inspection of the undertaking. I present this report at the present moment again for the purpose of showing that the Government did not proceed, as the hon. gentleman has stated, without having had any data or any information from our officers as to what their opinion was with respect to the character of this railway.

The hon. gentleman has put forward another proposition which I will take a moment to examine, because it is a proposition which I think, under our parliamentary system, is not a workable proposition. He dwells upon it and relies upon it, apparently, with the idea that it is a strong point, and ought to make an impression either upon Parliament or upon the country. He says that it is a violation, in the first place, of Liberal principles, and in the next place, of constitutional principles, for us to venture to make a contract with the Drummond County Railway Company and the Grand Trunk Railway Company, and submit it to Parliament for their approval; and he says: You are tying the hands of Parliament, you are practically depriving the members of this House who may have confidence in the Government and who support it generally, of the opportunity of exercising their free judgment upon the question, and the result is that if Parliament does not adopt the measure as proposed and confirm the contract, it involves a question of want of confidence in the Government and the Government must go by the board. Well, Mr. Speaker, I see nothing unprecedented and nothing alarming in that proposition. It appears to me that there is no other way in which it would be possible for a Government to come before Parliament than in the way in which we did come before it. Does the hon. gentleman suggest that we ought not to ascertain, before we come to Parliament, the terms and conditions upon which the Grand Trunk Railway Company on the one hand and the Drummond County Railway Company on the other, would agree to convey to us, or sell the property to us? I trow not. Does the hon. gentleman insist that we should come to Parliament without having had an understanding with these companies as to the terms upon which they would agree to convey the property to us? I think not, that surely is not his belief. Otherwise, we should be coming before Parliament to do, what? To give us a free hand to authorize the Government to make any contract they pleased with these companies for the carrying out of this extension. Surely that is not the hon. gentleman's contention. We would have to indicate to Parliament even the identical terms, down to every dollar and cent of outlay that would be involved—that would be imposed upon the country—before the hon. gentleman opposite who has criticised our contract in this regard would be willing to give any support, or would consent to the approval of the proposed policy. Well, Sir, if we have to come before Parliament knowing exactly what the bargain is that we are going to carry out, and if we have to declare to Parliament exactly what the bargain is that we are going to enter into, what different position would we be in than we are in to-day? We would come to Parliament, and we would say: We have come to an understanding with the Grand Trunk Railway, they are willing to convey to us their road upon certain terms; and we desire you to give us authority to carry those terms out. Would not our friends be as much hampered as they are now? Would they be any freer to vote? Would any hon. gentleman in Parliament be any freer to vote for the proposition on the ground that it was not put down in writing, that it was not actually signed, sealed and delivered? Would the position of the friends of the Government or of the Government itself be any different, if they came before Parliament stating that such was their policy, and they expected their friends to support it if the policy commended itself to their judgment? And if they failed to carry it, I suppose no more serious consequences would follow from the defeat of the measure under those circumstances, than such as would follow in the case of a Bill which contained a contract which had been executed by all the parties to it. Further, it appears to me that the Government would be placing itself in an exceedingly weak and awkward position if we were to come to Parliament and say: We have agreed with these railway companies upon certain terms to take these railways over from them, the Grand Trunk Railway upon these terms and the Drummond County road on the other terms; and if we did not have anything whereby the companies would be bound, where would the Government be? What position would we be in? We might get the authority from Parliament, and if we did we could go back to the companies and say: Parliament has now authorized us to make an agreement on these terms, and we would like to execute it. Supposing these companies had changed their minds, having learned of the discussion that had taken place in Parliament, having learned of the suggestions made by hon. gentlemen on the other side, or by our friends on this side as to what ought or ought not to be contained in the contracts, what assurance would any Government then have, that the companies would stand by their understanding with us? We would simply be making ourselves ridiculous before this House and the country; and instead of being condemned for having taken action as we have done in this matter, our course should be approved. We would then indeed be placing our friends in an awkward position, we would then be tying the hands of Parliament, we would be ridiculed and condemned for not understanding how parliamentary business ought to be done, for not taking proper precautions before we had gone through all the trouble and assumed all the responsibility connected with it. I leave, therefore, this proposition so far as the hon. gentleman has laboured it; I leave him all the benefit he may possibly take out of it. I dissent entirely from his proposition. I say, it is not defensible from a constitutional point of view, and it is not a reasonable proposition from any point of view; and I think any Government that would act in accordance with it, would lay itself open to very serious criticism. All Governments do it, all Governments will do it. The hon. gentleman will find, I think, exceedingly difficult to discover any precedent where contracts of this specific character involving terms and conditions so complicated in their nature, have not been brought to Parliament precisely in the way in which this was done.

Now, the hon. gentleman in a general way has taken up the question of the Drummond County and the Grand Trunk Railway propositions, and I think I am not doing the hon. gentleman any injustice when I say that he has not contributed anything new to this discussion. Following him closely, as I did, I was unable to discover that he has brought any fresh argument, or presented any fresh considerations which this House is called upon to consider. Perhaps, I ought to make one or two exceptions in making that statement. The hon. gentleman has presented one or two new propositions, but so far as they are new to us here, I think I shall be able to show that they are inaccurate. I think the hon. gentleman has been making arguments from one or two points of view which are not sustained, either by the contract or by any necessary or reasonable inference that can be drawn from that contract. The hon. gentleman has referred to the terms of the Drummond County arrangement. He has built his argument entirely upon the assumption that the road was not worth $1,600,000. He has built his argument on the assumption that it was a poor, worthless property when we had these negotiations with the Drummond County Railway. In arriving at this conclusion, he has absolutely ignored all the sworn testimony that was given at this investigation, although he has had that sworn testimony in his hands. He has absolutely ignored the evidence of the men who built that road, all the evidence of the employees, of the people who had the handling of the money which was used in its construction from the beginning to the end of the undertaking. He simply passed over the statements made by these people. He simply passed over the statement that Mr. Newton has made, and the statements of others, as if they were absolutely non-existent, and yet he asks this House to accept his argument and to come to a conclusion—I confess I do not know what conclusion he asks us to arrive at, but I presume that his argument was presented with the object of asking this House to arrive at some conclusion, but he absolutely ignored the sworn testimony given by the people who had a knowledge of the whole transaction, and which is entitled to be accepted, as showing what the actual cost of the undertaking was. What was the cost of the road? The cost of the road, as proved in the manner I have stated, was not less than $2,000,000, taking the outlay from beginning to end. I am free to confess that I am not concerned as to where the money came from, nor do I think the Government are concerned as to where the money came from which built this road. I think the reasonable view is this, that the Government, in negotiating with parties for the purchase of a property which it requires and which it believes to be necessary in the public interest, are not required to force these people down to the lowest possible figure, because we feel that we have them in a position in which we can force them to part with their property at less than it cost them. We are not called upon to pursue that course. It may be that Mr. Greenshields is a friend of the Liberal party; it may be that Mr. Greenshields was friendly to the Government. I do not know that it has been in times past regarded as a disqualification for a Government to negotiate with a man if he was a friend, I do not know that it has been considered necessary, in the past, that when they had any property to buy, they should say to their friends: Hands off, keep clear; our sense of purity and uprightness is so great that we will not sit down and negotiate a transaction with you because you are our friend. We will look to our enemies and to our opponents and see whether they have any property to sell to the Government, as we cannot buy from our own friends. I was not concerned as to whether Mr. Greenshields was a friend or an opponent of the Government, nor was I concerned whether Mr. Farwell, who had a considerable interest in that property, was a friend or an opponent. The purchase of this property was a policy which had been determined upon, if we could carry it out within a reasonable cost, and we sat down in our negotiations with the parties interested in the road, and endeavoured to reach a reasonable and fair price at which the Government could acquire this property. I think, notwithstanding all that has been said, that, when we acquired a property at a valuation of $1,600,000 which had cost over $2,000,000, we made a pretty fair business transaction, and one that it does not lie in the mouth of the hon. gentlemen who have attacked this bargain to complain of and criticise. In connection with this transaction, I think that some of the statements made by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster), in regard to the conditions of this contract, are calculated to mislead. He left the impression that we were indifferent as to the character of the road that we were buying. Let me read a clause of the contract of 1897 which will show that we stipulated that this road, when it came into our hands should be in good condition. The second clause of the original contract with the Drummond County Railway, dated in May, 1897, provided:

That the company for the consideration aforesaid, will build and finish according to the Intercolonial Railway standard, the uncompleted portion of its main line at or near Forestdale to the western side of the Chaudière River, subject to the satisfaction and approval of the Government Railway Engineer, on or before the first day of November, 1897, and will lay the road-bed of the said uncompleted portion of its line hereby agreed to be constructed with new steel rails of not less than 70 pounds weight per yard for the said distance, and as part of such construction will make all proper and necessary connections with the main line of the Grand Trunk Railway at or near the west end of the Chaudière bridge to the like satisfaction of the Engineer of Government Railways, and will, in connection with the said construction, construct and finish all proper and necessary station buildings, stations, sidings, switches, tanks, buildings, coal-sheds, cattle-guards, crossings and other necessary appurtenances, as required by the Minister and to the satisfaction of the Engineer of Government Railways, and according to such plans as shall be furnished on the request of the company by the Department of Railways and Canals, so that the said line of railway hereby demised, or intended so to be, shall be fully completed and ready for use and occupation by Her Majesty on or before the date aforesaid.

And then it says, and this is all I shall quote upon this point:

That the company will, in the construction of the uncompleted portion of its line, construct the same to the satisfaction of the Government engineer, and with a uniform grade of 52·80 per mile,—

That is the general grade of the Intercolonial Railway——and, in addition, on the line already constructed, will reduce the grades at Carmel Hill and the St. Francis River to a maximum grade of 52·80 per mile.

So that we not only went into this thing closely and stipulated carefully as to the character of that portion that was to be a new line, but we went back over the old portion of the line and stipulated that there were two grades which had to be reduced and curves which had to be straightened, and we required these grades to be up to the general standard of the Intercolonial Railway. This shows, therefore, that we were not taking this road in the condition that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) spoke of as if we were glad to take it from the owners, and as if we were indifferent to the condition of the road as implied by the statement of the hon. gentleman, our only design being that we should succeed in taking the property off the hands of the owners and getting the price into their pockets.

It being Six o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). Mr. Speaker, in the hasty review I was endeavouring to make of the speech of the ex-Finance Minister (Mr. Foster), I was dealing with that portion of it which had reference to the Drummond County part of the agreement. I pointed out that the references made by the hon. member for York (Mr. Foster) to that subject, had been repeated over and over again, and were to the effect that there had been no report obtained from the engineering staff of the department before this scheme had been embarked upon by the Government, that there had been a much larger sum of money paid for the road than it cost the proprietors; and I was proceeding to deal with the third point in his speech, in which he alleged that a large sum of money had been saved by this later agreement. It was, I believe, quite within the knowledge of every member of the House that there was not an idea suggested, a statement made, nor a fact presented, by the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster), that had not been repeated over and over again, and answered over and over again. There was certainly nothing new in his assertion that half a million dollars had been saved under the contract as it now exists, as compared with the contract originally made. It had been already pointed out to the House more than once that the Government did not start out with any intention of paying the Drummond County Company more than $1,600,000 for that road. That was the value placed upon it, and it was simply a question of judgment, as to whether or not the money was to be paid in cash, or whether or not the property would be leased and a reasonable rate of interest paid as rental. As I have already stated to the House, there might very well be a reasonable difference of opinion on that question. But I shall not repeat myself in that. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) contributed nothing whatever to the information of the House; he stated nothing that was not already talked threadbare, and, if that portion of his speech had been altogether omitted, no information or no argument would be lost that would contribute the slightest value to the discussion. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) then proceeded to take up the Grand Trunk Railway part of the agreement, and I wish to call the attention of the House to what appears to me a most striking and significant fact in this discussion. It is a most striking fact that we have spent all these days debating the agreement by which we acquire the property of the Grand Trunk Railway to get the Intercolonial into Montreal; we have sat until early one morning, and all of another night and morning, and let me ask these gentlemen opposite, who declared that the policy of the Government was utterly indefensible in this regard, what did they devote their chief time and attention to discussing? One night they discussed whether or not I should produce a memorandum which I received from my Deputy Minister upon a subject quite irrelevant, quite unimportant at all events, to the main controversy. It made no difference whether it was determined that the Yamaska bridge was worth $300,000, or one-half, or one-quarter of that amount; it had not the slightest bearing on the real question we had before us. We might have dropped out the Yamaska bridge wholly from the calculation; we might have dropped out the cost of the Richelieu bridge wholly from the calculation, and it would cut no figure in determining as to the reasonableness of our bargain. I shall show, before I sit down, why I venture to make that statement; but I want to draw the attention of the House for a moment to the nature of the discussion which has taken place since we first broached the Grand Trunk Railway arrangement, and I desire to have it known broadcast, if I can, throughout this country, from one end of it to the other, that, when this scheme was under discussion in Parliament, these gentlemen opposite, who were denouncing it in all the moods and tenses as a bargain discreditable to the Government—these gentlemen spent the hours, the days, and nights in debating, first, whether a statement of my chief engineer with regard to the cost of the construction of the Yamaska bridge should or should not be produced, and second, whether or not statements were before the House, or ought to be before the House, as to what was the percentage which the Intercolonial Railway had to pay out of the total cost of the maintenance of the railway acquired from the Grand Trunk Railway, and its proportion of the expenses of maintaining and operating the line.

These are the two questions; and, Mr. Speaker, I am speaking within your knowledge when I say that these gentlemen, who ask to be seriously considered by this country as being opposed to this undertaking, and as having some basis on which to ground their opposition, have entirely occupied the time of the debate on this question by pounding away at these two questions. What is the inference which any one is entitled to draw, which any one is bound to draw, from this fact. It is that these gentlemen would very gladly have put real, substantial arguments before the House, and have urged good and substantial reasons, which would have made an impression in the country, if they had been able to find them. But, Sir, it was because they could find no argument, it was because it was utterly impossible for them to discover any way in which to answer the case put before the House in the Government's proposals, that they were driven to the only other alternative they had, and that they have exhausted the time of the House in these useless and childish discussions.

When they were speaking in regard to the cost of this Yamaska bridge, I said that they were discussing a matter that was entirely in the air. We were not considering the building of a bridge over the Yamaska River nor a bridge over the Richelieu River. These were merely items in the consideration of an alternative proposition that was suggested by somebody, I think by the Minister of Finance, as to whether, instead of acquiring from the Grand Trunk this railway from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert, it might not be advisable for the Government to start in and build another railway. I gave to the House what information I had received from my officers as to what in their judgment it would cost to build another line of railway. What was it I said? I said that my engineers had made an estimate of the cost of building such a railway, and that in their judgment, outside of the land damages, it would cost $485,000. I said, add to that the cost of a bridge at Yamaska, which was estimated at $300,000, the cost of a bridge over the Richelieu, which was estimated at $400,000, $500,000, which was the sum estimated by myself as fair and reasonable for land damages. Land damages must necessarily be paid, and must necessarily be heavy when you consider the character of the country, the towns and villages which you would have to pass through from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert when constructing a new line of railway. What matter whether the Yamaska bridge was taken into the calculation at all or not? What matter whether or not the Richelieu bridge was taken into the calculation? I have shown the House why we agreed to assume that one-half of the railway from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert which we acquired from the Grand Trunk was worth $750,000. The Grand Trunk Railway Company put that value on it, and they had a right to say what they would sell that property for. We could not fix the value for them; we had no power to do so. There was no machinery which we could set to work, no tribunal to which we could appeal, in order to make the Grand Trunk take a less sum than they were willing to take for half their railway. They said: "We value that piece of road at $1,500,000, it cost us that, and we will give you half of it for half what it cost us; if it suits your convenience to pay us interest on the cost in the form of rental, that will suit us; but we want interest at the rate of $37,500 a year, if we are to fix a price on that portion of the line." We had to take it or leave it. I have endeavoured to point out to the House that we could not leave it without throwing away a good bargain. I mean that we could not give up and abandon this policy entirely, when we were able to get all these different sections at the reasonable sum at which we did finally secure them, namely, at $140,000 a year. We could not throw them up without throwing up a good opportunity to secure entrance into the city of Montreal, which would not be open to us to secure in any other way for at least two or three times greater cost than we are actually paying. I pointed out that a fair estimate of the cost of a road from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert would be $1,500,000. Suppose it was only half that amount. Suppose you struck off the cost of the Yamaska bridge and the Richelieu bridge, you would strike off $700,000, nearly half the amount; suppose you struck all that off, and you had only $750,000 remaining, and you built the new line for that sum, viz., $750,000, you would not save anything, but a pecuniary loss would actually fall on the Government by adopting that arrangement in preference to the Government plan. I put this proposition, which I say is not capable of being successfully gainsaid, that if we could build such a railway for $750,000, for half the amount which my engineer estimated it would cost, and had undertaken to operate it as an independent line, we would have made a great blunder and have entailed a pecuniary loss upon the country. I will show you why I say so. You now have the railway built for you from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert, costing us, at 5 per cent interest, $37,500 a year in the whole. Included in that $37,500 is the right to the use of that railway for all purposes of the Intercolonial—not only for the purpose of carrying our trains of all kinds from St. Lambert to Ste. Rosalie and from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert, but for the purpose of carrying over it whatever traffic we may pick up or lay down along the line, whether it be passengers or freight. Some hon. gentleman opposite, particularly the ex-Minister of Finance (Mr. Foster), who is very deft at making calculations seem to be very anxious to get down to figures. Let them ask whether they make any allowance for the fact that we are entitled to do business along that line between Ste. Rosalie and St. Lambert, and that every dollar we earn—and we are earning a substantial amount, an amount not to be despised—goes towards the reduction of the rental we pay for this road. No such allowance is made in the calculation of hon. gentlemen opposite.

But, Sir, I have another statement to present which, I think, will be very conclusive proof of the proposition I have just started to establish. I want to show the House, as I can show it, that it is a most distinct advantage to us to own a railway in concert with the Grand Trunk Railway, rather than to own and to operate an independent line. We could not do any more business over the line, if we owned it entirely ourselves, than we can do owning one-half interest with the Grand Trunk Railway. Not one pound of freight more would we be able to haul on an independent or separate and parallel line, we would not be likely to carry as much, because we would be in competition with the Grand Trunk Railway, and would not be receiving freight at Montreal, as now. But we will be in as good a position, under our traffic arrangement with the Grand Trunk Railway, to do business on that road, though they own one-half—in fact, in a better position—as if we were running and owning an independent line ourselves. While, on the one hand, we are in a position to do as much business and to enjoy to a greater advantage the benefits arising from the user of that line, we are in an improved position, by reason of the fact that the Grand Trunk Railway has to bear its proportion of the maintenance and repairs of that whole line. There is a way in which you can get at the figures with a good deal of accuracy. It is an item of considerable importance, one you cannot brush aside, and, if any one of you were going into the question to-day of building a railway or acquiring a part interest in an existing road from another company, you would, necessarily, take into account the fact that, owning the road yourselves, you would have to maintain and repair it.

If we had built the line, according to the suggestion of the ex-Minister of Finance (Mr. Foster), for the money he says we could build it for, we would still have to maintain it; we would have to put in ties, as they decay—and they decay just as fast, whether you do much or little business—we would have to renew the ballasting, and it requires to be renewed just as fast, whether we do much or little business; we would require to renew the old rails, and though rails may wear out a little quicker by carrying additional tonnage, yet there is not so much difference between the wear of the rails under considerable use, and their life under little use. So that you have to take into account, as a matter of reasonable and proper business calculation, that if you owned the road from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert, you would have to maintain and keep it in repair. There is a way by which we can arrive at what that would cost, and I think the calculation can be made by anybody who chooses to look at the departmental report. If you will look at the Intercolonial Railway Report of last year, Abstract No. 3, maintenance of way and works, you will find what it cost the Intercolonial Railway for the maintenance of its way and works over its 1,202 miles, and that cost amounted to $861,728. The 32 miles of new railway the member for York would build from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert, would have to be maintained and kept in repair by the Intercolonial Railway, and it would cost as much to keep in repair those 32 miles at it would any other 32 miles upon the Intercolonial Railway. If it would, you will find that it will cost $717 per mile for every mile of your railway from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert for maintenance and repairs. Is not that a very considerable item? We do not pay that now under the present agreement. We only pay a fractional portion, because the Grand Trunk Railway pays its share, and that is the larger share. That is not all. You have the station expenses and the station charges of all kinds, and if you turn to Abstract No. 4 of the Intercolonial Reports for the year ending 30th June, 1898, you will find that these expenses amounted on the Intercolonial Railway to $400,164 over its 1,202 miles, which is $333 per mile. You would have the same expenses, if you owned and operated the new railway yourself, because you would have to maintain your stations. I think the proportion of the cost of maintenance of the stations would be larger, but treat it exactly on the same basis as the rest of the Intercolonial Railway, and it would amount to $333 per mile on the line from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert. Add to that rate the $717 per mile of which I have spoken, and you get $1,050, which you would have to pay every year for every mile on the line from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert. One thousand and fifty dollars per mile for 32 miles would amount to $33,600; so, you see that you would have to add, as an annual burden upon your business and the country $33,600 for that one item, if you solely owned that railway. The hon. gentleman ignores these facts; they are of no account to him. Well, you may say, that we are paying a very considerable portion of that now, because we are paying our proportion. Let me tell you exactly what we are now paying, if $33,600 was the amount which we would have to pay, if we owned the line. The road from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert being operated and owned jointly by us and the Grand Trunk Railway, instead of our paying $33,600 a year, we are simply paying, as our proportion of the $33,600, $8,400, because we are only chargeable with 25 per cent, according to the statement which has been laid on the Table. That makes a saving of $25,200 per year which we consider a substantial sum, instead of being foolish enough to embark in railway building and laying down another railway between Ste. Rosalie and St. Lambert, we have been wise enough to make a bargain with the Grand Trunk Railway for a reasonable sum, in the working out of which bargain we save $25,000 per year on the maintenance of way and repair and operating charges, compared with what we would have to pay, if we owned and operated the road ourselves.

The hon. gentleman is very much disposed to capitalize amounts. I would suggest to him that he should capitalize $25,200 a year. You can capitalize $6,000, and the hon. gentleman is modest enough to only capitalize it for 100 years. He is modest enough to say that when this arrangement is reduced by $6,000, we save $3,000,000 of money. That is a striking way to put it, undoubtedly, and anybody who can realize what $3,000,000 is, would undoubtedly be overwhelmed by the weight of the hon. gentleman's argument. It really teaches us how important it is that we should save money on every vote we give. Supposing there was a vote for $10,000, and we could make it $4,000 and save $6,000, I have not the least doubt that in process of time this $6,000 would amount to $3,000,000. Keep that in mind; it is a striking fact but it is not less true with regard to every appropriation we make than it is when applied by the hon. gentleman to-day. Let us capitalize the $25,200 we save by working with the Grand Trunk on their road instead of building one of our own, and what does it amount to? I cannot tell you what it amounts to for a hundred years, for I have not figured that out; but for one year it represents a capital of $840,000. In other words, when you are paying $25,200 more than you need, you are paying 3 per cent on $840,000. Capitalize that for a long period of years, capitalize it for the hon. gentleman's 100 years at 3 per cent, compound it, and the amount that you get as having saved by this arrangement, would far exceed the figures quoted by the hon. gentleman. Now, Sir, when this fact is taken into account, whatever little point there might have been, whatever little strength there might have been in the argument of the hon. member for York is entirely destroyed.

But, Mr. Speaker, I think the House must have observed that the hon. gentleman took a great deal of pains not to discuss this matter very fully; he did not discuss it in the main; he did not discuss it in its broad aspects; he did not discuss it as one would think such a question ought to be discussed. I have stated to the House that we were proposing this arrangement as a whole; taking it roundly, we are paying $140,000, which at 3 per cent represents a capital of about $4,500,000. Has the hon. gentleman undertaken to suggest to this House any possible way in which we could get into the city of Montreal and enjoy one tithe of the advantages we enjoy under this contract for any less sum than $4,500,000. Before he could consistently or logically or with reason, take a stand in antagonism to our proposal, he ought to have attempted to establish one or the other of two things; either that we had no business to attempt to get into the city of Montreal at all or that, taken as a whole, less than $140,000 a year, or $4,500,000 in capital, could have been laid out in some other way which would have brought us to the point that we desired to reach, and would have given us at least some portion of the advantages which have been secured under this agreement. But he never undertook to touch either of these propositions. He has not ventured to say that it was not the best policy for the Intercolonial Railway to be carried to Montreal. He knew that he would have been behind the age if he had undertaken to make such a proposition; he knew that it would not have gained him sympathy in the country or support in this House. He knows that everybody who takes an interest in the Government railway at all believes in the policy of getting into Montreal. So, he ought to have devoted his ability, of which he possesses a very large share, to pointing out to this House in what way it was possible for this Government to reach the city of Montreal, and secure terminal facilities there that would put the Intercolonial Railway in a position to do business, at a less cost than under the present proposal. He has not done that. And why? He has not done it because he could not do it. No gentleman on the other side has undertaken to do it. Somebody on the other side laughs. Perhaps he thinks I am not doing justice to the hon. member for Glengarry (Mr. McLennan). It is true that hon. gentleman struggled valiantly with one or two calculations. He was going to take us to Caughnawaga, and he did get us there. He was to put us across the river, and he put us across at very small cost, at smaller cost, I think, than anybody would undertake to do the job for. He got us to the cattle-yards in Montreal—and left us there. But we are not content to be left in the cattle-yards. Nor are we content to travel seventeen miles further than we are obliged to travel under this arrangement, paying for all the maintenance charged on fifty-five miles of railway with all the cost of operating expenses, which would amount—I have figured it out here—to about $57,750 a year on the present basis of the Intercolonial Railway. Not only are you carrying that added length of seventeen miles upon your back, but you are paying charges and maintenance of operation to the extent of $57,750 a year, when only a small proportion of that sum would fall on you with the arrangement we have made with the Grand Trunk Railway Company. So, these gentlemen have not grappled with this subject. They are absolutely and completely floundered. They have been unable to grapple with the question, and I think I can say in all fairness and moderation that they are absolutely floundered, that they have not a leg to stand upon in their criticism of this policy. Of course, if you say: We do not want to go to Montreal, the whole thing goes by the board. But if they say: It is a wise policy for us to take the Intercolonial Railway to Montreal, then it does not lie within the power of any of them, cute as many of them are, capable as many of them are, to construct an argument of very little material and to make the worse appear the better cause, to take up this case and show even to the moderate satisfaction of an opponent of the policy that we have taken an erroneous course, or that in adopting the policy we have adopted, we have taken a more expensive method of carrying it out than some other that can be suggested.

Now, I will not sit down without making a reference to what was said by the hon. member for Westmoreland (Mr. Powell). I am sorry the hon. gentleman is not in his place, because I wish to do him justice, and I find it very difficult to do him justice without reflecting somewhat seriously upon him. The hon. gentleman was asked by me, and asked, I think, in a courteous way, to tell me how he established the proposition, which he had laid down, that for every dollar that we were earning on the Intercolonial Railway for the year 1898 in excess of what had been earned in 1897, we were paying out $1.32—in other words, for every dollar we had earned it cost us $1.32. Here is what the hon. gentleman said in reply:

I find that the total earnings of the Intercolonial Railway in 1897 were $2,866,028.02, and in 1898, $3,117,669.85, a net increase of $251,641.83. Now, compare the expenses. The total expenses in 1897 were $2,925,968.68, while in 1898 they were $3,257,648.51, an increase of $331,679.84. Now, what does that mean? That the Minister of Railways and Canals earned $251,641 additional, and that to earn that additional sum he expended $331,679. What does that mean? That every dollar of additional earnings cost this country $1.32.

And after making this explanation he winds up with this remark:

Now, I leave to this House, I leave to the hon. gentleman's associates in the Government, I leave to his followers behind him, this statement as a fair sample of the statistics he has given us.

Well, Mr. Speaker, I think I am justified in characterizing the hon. gentleman's statement as being extremely unfair and extremely misleading. It does not bear out the statement which he made to this House that for every dollar of extra earnings we paid out $1.32; it does not bear it out because the hon. gentleman is attributing this to the extension to Montreal, and the hon. gentleman knows, he heard me when I made my statement in Parliament, he heard me give the references, he heard me go into the subject in detail. I supplied him with the material by which he could destroy my calculation if it was inaccurate. He knew, therefore, what that calculation was, having that knowledge, I say his statement was unfair, I say it was misleading, and I think I might use a much stronger term in characterizing it. The hon. gentleman knew that he was dealing with the year in which the Montreal extension had only operated four months; from the 1st of March to the 1st of July were the only months in that year in which the Montreal extension was running. He knew, as everybody ought to know, that in referring to the effect of the operation of the Montreal line it was unfair to take the first four months. In the first four months we had scarcely got to work. Everybody knows that business does not spring up in an instant on a new line, under a new system; everybody knows that we require to advertise for a time, and months, perhaps, require to elapse before business men would know that the line was in operation and was extended to Montreal. So it was unfair for the hon. gentleman to make that statement, from that point of view, and it was misleading, when he knew that the Montreal extension had nothing at all to do with the greater portion of the deficit of $209,000 that year. He knew from the statement that I made to Parliament, and the figures which I furnished him in detail, that a sum greater than the difference between the deficit which I showed last year and the deficit which was shown by the Minister who preceded me, was made up by reason of additional expenditures in repairs and maintenance of the Intercolonial Railway. I showed that we spent over $150,000 last year in order to bring the road up to its proper condition in the spring of the year, and thereby doubled the expenditure of that character within the period of 12 months, or within the fiscal year. The hon. gentleman having that knowledge, was grossly and manifestly unfair when he attributed the deficit to the extension to Montreal, and charged against its operation that we were spending $1.32 for every dollar additional that we earned. Now, I leave the hon. gentleman there, I leave him with the inferences which hon. members of this House are fairly entitled to draw from his statements. I do not think the hon. gentleman has done himself a great deal of credit in that connection.

I will now for a few minutes refer to one or two criticisms made by the ex-Minister of Finance (Mr. Foster) upon the Grand Trunk Railway bargain, not at all with respect to the contract as it is now before the House, but with respect to the contract which was before the House a year ago. In this connection I may say that the hon. gentleman appears to take a great deal of comfort out of the fact that the present arrangement is better, in a sense, than that which we originally proposed. Well, Mr. Speaker, I have not been able myself to see that in respect of the terms of the contract between us and the Drummond County Railway, there is much to be said in favour of the present over the former arrangement, nor is there room for a strong opinion one way or the other. That is my judgment, and that is the judgment, I know, of a good many others; that was the judgment of the Government when we had the question before us. It was a question of whether we would rent the railway at 4 per cent upon

Mr. BLAIR.

$1,600,000 or whether we would try to effect a sale upon that basis of value, and under all the circumstances we concluded, possibly not wisely, that it was better to make this arrangement than to effect a purchase. But the hon. gentleman, and the leader of the Opposition as well, were very much concerned because I had been unable, or was unwilling, to acknowledge that the present arrangement was much preferable to the old one. Well, I presume the hon. gentlemen would not expect me to say that unless I was of the opinion that the present arrangement was a better one. If, in my opinion, it was a much better arrangement, I would not hesitate to avow it. The ex-Minister of Finance said this afternoon, that we are coming down now with a better scheme than we had in the first instance, and we are open to the charge of having tried to force through an inferior contract, and if it had not been for the Senate blocking our plans we would have forced it through; but as a result of their action, we are here to-day with a better arrangement. I would not be afraid nor unwilling to acknowledge that the bargain is better if it were better. But, as a matter of fact, as to the Drummond County bargain, I do not see that there is very much difference between the two. I am free, however, to acknowledge that the present Grand Trunk Railway arrangement is in some respects better than the previous arrangement. I would not have tried to improve upon the old arrangement if I was going to be afraid to acknowledge it. I think, perhaps, some of those hon. gentlemen opposite, if they had been in my position, would have insisted in having the old arrangement carried out in all its details, rather than have to acknowledge that they could make a better one. Wherever this contract is better than the other one, I am willing to acknowledge it. I am free to confess that in respect of the reduction of $6,000, which under the old arrangement we were paying to the Grand Trunk Railway, the present one is an improvement upon the first. I am free to confess that when the time came to make a new contract, and when we decided to ask the Drummond County Railway to give us an option to buy at a cash basis of $1,600,000, and when we got the terms of the new contract settled, then I felt we were in a position to say to the Grand Trunk Railway: We think that you have no reasonable ground to add this $6,000 to the $140,000 we have agreed to give you. We think that the Intercolonial Railway have no reasonable right to pay $6,000 in addition to the $140,000 we have agreed to give you. We will not go to Parliament and ask them to give you $146,000 for this rental. As a result, it was agreed that they should accept $140,000. Whether it was in consequence of the action of the Senate or not, it is quite immaterial to me. The hon. member for York (Mr. Foster) asks : Where would the country have been, if the Senate had not defeated this project ? I do not think we would have been in any different position from that in which we are to-day. I might ask : Where would we have been, if the Senate had defeated the scheme under which hon. gentlemen opposite purchased the line of the Grand Trunk at $12,000 per mile, and in addition had to spend a large amount of money after that to put it in proper condition ? If the Senate had defeated that, which it did not do, how much better off would our position have been to-day ? But the argument did not strike the Senate at that time, and the arrangement, as it was presented by Parliament, was accepted. I think the arrangement we presented to Parliament two years ago ought to have been accepted, because it was a good business arrangement. I do not think $6,000 a year counts in the calculation at all. When you have regard to the enormous advantages from the stand-point of the Intercolonial Railway, when you have regard to all that we have secured from the Grand Trunk Railway Company, $6,000 does not cut any material figure in the transaction. I was told the other day, by one of the officers of the Grand Trunk, that they had made a valuation of the terminals in Montreal. They have 43 miles of tracks laid down, and 150 acres of land, with all the buildings and equipment which have been gathered there during all these years, and they say, that the value that has been placed upon that property by expert and competent valuers, is $30,000,000. When you consider that we have access to property of $30,000,000 in value, when we have access to all the tracks, which allow us to go everywhere and anywhere in the city and in the precincts of Montreal, that the business needs of the situation require, what money value can you put upon it, even as respects the business of the Intercolonial Railway ? The Intercolonial Railway has, as I think I have taken occasion to repeat before, is not restricted in its use of these terminals by the fact that its business is not on so large a scale as that of the Grand Trunk Railway Company. We have to use portions of the terminals, perhaps frequently, but not all of them as fully, as the Grand Trunk. We have to turn to one department and another to get to slips to reach the ships and to reach the different wharfs and warehouses, the different junctions and connections where we have to receive and deliver our freights. We require to reach these places as much as the Grand Trunk has to do, though they may send twenty trains to one point to our one. But it is just as necessary for us to get to these points to take one car-load as it would be, if we had to take a thousand car-loads, and, if we were not enabled to reach these points, we would have to pay the cost of carriage in some other way, if we are to do the business, which we can now reach at practically no cost to ourselves whatever. So it is not at all, it appears to me, an extreme view to say, that we are participating to a considerable extent in the value of these terminal facilities which have been placed at our disposal, and which we have the fullest right to use under the terms and conditions of the contract. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) has put forward one or two propositions in connection with the question of rental, the percentage of user, and so forth, which rather indicate to me that he is labouring under an entire and complete misconception of the nature of this contract. I venture to say, he has not used understandingly or to advantage the papers which have been in his hands for all these weeks and months, though he is calling out for more. He has wanted these terminal papers, and, when these terminal papers are before him, they apparently convey no intelligent idea to his mind. He might as well not have seen them at all. In the proposition which he puts forward, he says, that the rental of the Grand Trunk property is of the nature of a retainer ; that, after paying rentals, that is, after you have handed over your retainer, you have bound yourself to pay for the user of these lines and terminals at the rate of 5 per cent for all time to come. I think I have correctly stated the hon. gentleman's position.

Mr. FOSTER. I made no such statement.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I so understood the hon. gentleman.

Mr. FOSTER. I say I did not. The hon. gentleman could not have understood me.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. The hon. gentleman not only said it once, but repeated it three or four times.

Mr. FOSTER. I said, that the 4 per cent was entirely in reference to betterments.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Did not the hon. gentleman say, that we would have to pay for the user ?

Mr. FOSTER. Why should I say that, when I knew that it was not so ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Did not the hon. gentleman say, that these rentals we were paying in respect of this railway were only in the nature of a retainer ?

Mr. FOSTER. Yes.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. What did that mean ? And did not the hon. gentleman say, that we would have to pay for the user afterwards ?

Mr. FOSTER. Yes.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Yes, I venture to say, that, when we consider it, he meant that we would have to pay for the user of the railway.

Mr. FOSTER. Hear, hear.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. "Hear, hear," the hon. gentleman says. I wish to say that there is nothing in any term of the contract which says, that we have to pay for the user of these terminals or this railway after we have paid our rentals, and the hon. gentleman is showing us that he has not turned to account the opportunity he has had of reading the papers which have been in his possession all these months. A retainer is an honorary fee, and after you pay a retainer, you have to pay for the work that the recipient does. After we pay these rentals, the hon. gentleman says, that we have to pay for the use of the road, the use of the bridge and the use of the terminals. Do we? I say, we do nothing of the sort. What the hon. gentleman has done has been to confuse and mix up the contribution which we make towards the wear and tear, with the rental which we pay. He does not discriminate between the two. We pay rental upon the line from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert upon the basis of one-half of the value of the line. We get half of the road, which is ours as well as theirs; but it has to be maintained, and the moment our rental is paid, not one shilling goes to the Grand Trunk Railway Company in consideration of having any use or ownership of that road. The agreement says, that a division shall be made between the Grand Trunk and us of what it costs, after we have the property, to keep the property in proper shape. It is one thing to build a railway, and another thing to maintain it. The hon. gentleman has not discriminated between the two. You have to keep it re-sleepered, re-tied and re-ballasted, and, if need be, re-railed, and it is in respect to the wear and tear that any question arises between us as to the combined car mileage, and it is not in respect to the rentals. When the charges are made up for the month for repairing the waste on the road, making good what requires renewal, the cost is divided between the Intercolonial and the Grand Trunk Railway on the basis of the user of the road, and the only contribution we make towards the user is our proportion of the cost monthly of the repairs, as they are incurred.

And yet the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) undertakes to advise this country and this Parliament that they must not assent to this arrangement because, he says, the $140,000 a year is simply a retainer or a gift, and that you have to still pay the proportionate value for the use of that property which your money has gone to acquire. It must be a very dull man indeed who does not understand this arrangement. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) has not only been confusing the particulars I have stated, but he has been confusing the terminals with the line from St. Lambert to Ste. Rosalie. They are altogether upon a different basis, although used in the same way, and I will show you why. We agreed with the Grand Trunk Railway on the sum of $140,000 as a fixed amount, but we said: A portion of that is for your terminals, including your station at Bonaventure and your 150 acres of buildings, work shops, sheds, tracks and connections. A portion of that is to be considered by way of a fixed rental, not at all based upon the amount we use of it. Any man can tell the proportion we use, in a general sense, as it will depend upon the amount of business we do. This year we may not do much, next year we will do more, in ten or twenty years we hope to be doing an immensely increased traffic, and although our business may double or quadruple, our rent is the same, and the only particular in which our payments to the Grand Trunk Railway will differ from the first year's occupation is that if the Grand Trunk Railway business does not increase as ours does, we would have to pay a larger amount for the repairs upon the portion of the terminals as they are described in the contract, than we did at the outset. Just examine the question of the bridge with me for a moment, and you will see how completely the arrangement has been made is in the interests of the country. We pay the Grand Trunk Railway a sum which we say may fairly be fixed at $40,000 for the use of that bridge, and that represents all the use we can make of that bridge, for there is no limit to our occupation of it. In addition to the $40,000, we pay a small proportionate amount according to the number of cars and engines we send over that bridge, to assist in keeping the rails and tracks in order. Well, hon. gentlemen will see that the rails and tracks are a very small part indeed of that bridge. The Grand Trunk Railway have to keep men on the bridge all the time repairing the iron-work, repairing the stonework, painting it, keeping it in up-to-date shape, and we do not pay one farthing for all that. They have to do it at their own cost. Under this contract, all that we pay in addition to the $40,000 is to contribute a portion towards the proper repairing of the track according to the amount of business we do relatively to the business done by the Grand Trunk Railway Company. Now, supposing we ourselves were to build a bridge across the St. Lawrence—anywhere you like—do you not imagine that the cost of maintaining that bridge, looking after the ironwork and the stonework, painting and repairing it, would be a very considerable item. I know that it would. I know that the bridges on the Intercolonial Railway are a constant charge to us. I know that the steel and iron bridges have to be painted frequently. All these charges with respect to the Victoria bridge are, under this arrangement, borne by the Grand Trunk Railway, and we only pay (according to the returns which have been brought down) 5 per cent of the cost of keeping the track, and the track alone, in repair.

The hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) had a good deal to say on the betterment clause in this Grand Trunk Railway contract, and he tells us how much better it is than it was before. Well, Mr. Speaker, I have been unable to see wherein the very great improvement lies between these two contracts, even in respect to betterment. The basis of the original agreement was that we should pay 5 per cent upon half the cost of any improvements we might make within the area specified in the 35th clause of that contract. I will tell the House why we agreed upon the 5 per cent. It was because the Grand Trunk Railway Company would not agree upon any less rate than 5 per cent, because at that time they were paying 5 per cent themselves for every dollar of money that they borrowed. Would you expect that the Grand Trunk Railway Company would borrow money at 5 per cent to make betterments on the road which we would enjoy the advantage of, and accept a less rate of interest from us than they themselves had to pay. It is a small matter after all, but you see that the position the Grand Trunk Railway was in was such that they could not be expected in reason to agree upon any less rate of interest than was named. If you wish to be fair, you must keep in your mind that at the time the arrangement was made, the position of the Grand Trunk Railway was very different indeed from what it is to-day. Under the present management there has been a marked improvement; they are differently situated in the money markets of the world than they were then, they can borrow money now at a less rate, and under that circumstance, when we came to revise the contract after it had been defeated in the Senate, applying the same argument they presented to us in the first instance, we were able to show them that there was good reason why they should consent to a reduction in the rate of 5 per cent. Look at this clause in a business way; and what do you find? Was it not necessary that some provision should be made in the contract for conditions which would be certain to arise, rendering it necessary that there should be improvement and betterment made upon the line. We had to anticipate the almost certainty of that; we had to anticipate the certainty that the time would come in the course of the ninety-nine years when, in our own interest, it would be necessary that more tracks should be laid down, and that there should be some facilities added which were not in existence when the contract was made. Now, I would like to ask any one, how any safer or fairer provisions could be made than were made in that contract of 1897. In my opinion, except that there is a difference of 1 per cent in the interest, this contract of 1897 is just as good as the contract of 1898. We were making provision there for a condition of things which are certain to arise, and we were making provision that whatever the cost might be, seeing that it was upon the property encumbered by the Grand Trunk Railway that the capital expenditure should be made by the Grand Trunk Railway, and that we would allow them a fair and reasonable rate of interest upon that proportion of outlay. It is apparently overlooked, whether accidentally or otherwise, that we surrounded ourselves in this contract with the most perfect safeguards as fully as it was possible for any person to do in a written arrangement. We provided that it was only when in the opinion of the parties—not of one party, but of all—it was necessary to lay down double tracks at any point on that line, including the line between Ste. Rosalie and St. Lambert, and moreover only when Her Majesty determined to use such works and improvements, and in case the Minister declared that such works and improvements were necessary, and declared that in writing, then we should pay for the use of such works the interest on half their actual cost. So that we simply desire to provide and did provide, to meet the condition of things which it was necessary we should provide for, and which, if we failed to provide for, would have led to interminable trouble in the event of this contract being confirmed. Now, Sir, I think it is only fair to say that was a reasonable and proper provision to insert, when you were entering into an agreement for a long term of years, and when you could already anticipate that the time could not be far distant when just such works as these would become necessary. But, Sir, the present arrangement is based upon a different principle to that of 1897. I do not say it is any better; I do not know that it is a particle of improvement; I doubt if it is any better. We started by paying interest on half the cost of these improvements, if any are made, between Ste. Rosalie and St. Lambert. We have agreed to pay interest at 4 per cent upon the proportion of this capital expenditure, ascertained upon the basis of wheelage. In other words, after it has been decided—and it must be decided with the consent of the Government and the Minister, and he must declare it necessary, and so declare in writing.—the Grand Trunk may proceed to lay down a double track between St. Lambert and Ste. Rosalie, or any part of that line which may be covered by the understanding. After that has been determined upon, then the proportion of the burden to be borne by us as compared with the Grand Trunk is ascertained on the basis of wheelage, and we pay interest on that proportion for all time. That is the nature of the present arrangement, and it is a fair matter for difference of opinion as to whether it is to be preferred to the other, or whether the other is to be preferred to this.

I think, Mr. Speaker, I have in these references touched every proposition which the hon. gentleman who has addressed the House has referred to in this connection, and I think I have shown that the criticisms which he has to-day passed upon the present arrangement, so far as they have been new and have not been repeated over and over again in this House, are easily susceptible of explanation; that the terms of this arrangement are reasonable and proper terms to be incorporated in this agreement; and that, taking the contract as a whole, so far as I can gauge and measure and judge of the character of the discussion on the other side, there has been no effort made, much less successfully made, to show that the proposal which we have submitted to Parliament is not the best that could have been made, and one which is in the true interest of the country.

Mr. R. L. BORDEN (Halifax). I desire to say a very few words with regard to the contract which is now being discussed. So far as that portion of the speech of the hon. Minister of Railways which deals with the Drummond County Railway is concerned, I do not propose to say anything, because I have already placed my views very fully before the House; but I wish to say one or two words with reference to that portion of the hon. gentleman's remarks which relates to the Grand Trunk Railway. If the House is not enlightened in regard to this matter, it is certainly not by reason of any hesitation on the hon. gentleman's part to occupy the time of the House. We might venture to think that if he had spent as much time before this agreement was prepared, in considering it as he has spent in discussing it in the House, we would not have had the agreement of 1897 in the form in which it was presented. Nor would we have the hon. gentleman coming to the House two years afterwards and vainly attempting to assure the House that there is no very important difference between the terms of that agreement and the terms of the present agreement. I will not go over all the points which the hon. gentleman has dealt with so very fully; but when he stands up in the House and says that he for one is not able to determine whether the wheelage basis for the cost of improvements is better than the half-cost basis, and almost in the same breath shows us that in the one case the cost would be almost double what it would be in the other, I do not think the hon. gentleman's remarks need very much refutation. He tells us that the proportion of the user of the Intercolonial Railway in respect of the line from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert is 27 per cent. Ac-ording to the figures he has brought down I do not make it so much; I make it 20 per cent. Under the agreement of 1898 we pay one-fifth of the cost of the improvements, and under the agreement of 1897 we pay interest at 5 per cent on one-half the cost of the improvements. That is one very important matter with respect to which the agreement of 1898 is distinctly better than the agreement of 1897.

Now, the hon. gentleman made a very curious argument with regard to the maintenance of the road. It was rather an ingenious argument, though I am not quite sure I do not unduly compliment him, when I say it was ingenious. He told us that if we built the road, we would have to pay practically the same cost of maintenance, whether we used it much or little, because the cost of maintenance is not very much greater if you have an enormous tonnage going over the road, than if you have a small tonnage. Does he not see that, if his own statement be correct, the Grand Trunk Railway are making a very good thing out of it, because they would have to keep up this road just the same as now from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert. They have exactly the same use of it now as before, and they are saving 25 per cent of the cost of maintenance, which they put into their pockets.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I never said the Grand Trunk Railway had not made a very good arrangement; but I said, that we have also.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I should think the hon. gentleman would have to admit that the Grand Trunk Railway made a very good arrangement. Any one who saw the obvious anxiety of the Grand Trunk Railway to have this agreement carried out, would have no doubt that they considered it a very good arrangement for them. The hon. gentleman coolly tells us, that, if we had to build the road, we would have to maintain the whole thing, whereas now, he says, we pay only 27 per cent of the cost of maintenance. Does not the hon. gentleman see that that very argument shows what a remarkably good bargain the Grand Trunk Railway are making, independent of the enormous rental of $37,500 per year which they are getting for the road?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Seventy-five per cent is the benefit to us, and 25 per cent to them.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I do not understand the hon. gentleman, and am very much afraid he does not quite understand himself. Let us look into the position of affairs a little more closely. The Grand Trunk Railway receives from us a rental of $37,500 for that portion of the road from Ste. Rosalie to St. Lambert. Well, according to the figures he has brought down, I make the user of the Intercolonial Railway about 20 per cent of the total amount of the user of the two roads of that portion. The hon. gentleman may make it, I think, 27 per cent; but I do not see that the figures bear that out.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. The figures show over 25.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I will look at the figures he has brought down, and see whether or not that is correct.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. We pay $18,000 on $73,000.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Let us have the whole thing. So far as the terminals are concerned, in respect of the Montreal terminals our user was as follows:—

November	6·31
December	5·87
January	5·28
February	5·92
March	6·59
April	9·90

Now, from St. Lambert to Point St. Charles is a distance, I understand, of about 4 miles.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. About 2 miles bridge, and 2½ miles is road.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The total is about 4 miles, and the percentage of user for the Intercolonial Railway was as follows:—

November	12·82
December	10·46
January	9·42
February	10·65
March	11·62
April	16·81

From St. Hyacinthe to St. Lambert is about 29 miles, and the percentage of user of the Intercolonial Railway was as follows:—

November	20·90
December	16·20
January	14·88
February	17·02
April	29·73

The hon. gentleman tells us that that means 25 per cent. I have worked it out, and from St. Hyacinthe to St. Lambert, on the figures he has brought down, it is 19·56, and not 25 per cent. If he is correct in saying it is 25 per cent, he has brought down wrong figures. I will now give the rest of it. From Ste. Rosalie to St. Hyacinthe the percentage of the Intercolonial Railway was as follows:—

November	22·13
December	17·13
January	15·69
February	18·39
March	19·49
April	30·70

And the average is not 25 per cent, but 20·59. How the hon. gentleman gets 25 per cent out of those figures, I cannot understand.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. If you will look at the returns brought down, you will observe that the total charges for the period is $73,000, paid by the Grand Trunk Railway on maintenance and other expenses in connection with these sections. Our proportion is $18,000, and that, I take it, is pretty close to 25 per cent.

Mr. FOSTER. That takes the station operating expenses, besides the maintenance, and that is on a different basis.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Of course, that takes it in, but it is exactly the same principle. I say, that the maintenance of the road and the station and operating expenses amount to about 25 per cent of the total cost.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The hon. gentleman is confusing two things. There is one basis for one portion of the cost of maintenance, and another basis for another portion of the cost of maintenance. The one I was dealing with, and on which the hon. gentleman undertook to contradict me, was the proportion of train and engine mileage, and the figures I have given show that it is not over 20 per cent. Now, there is another basis on which some portion of the cost of maintenance is to be calculated, and that is the number of trains passing or leaving stations. I am not taking a proportion of the station expenses, but of train mileage, and the proportion of train mileage is in the vicinity of 20 per cent, very little more or less. I have given the hon. gentleman exactly the proportion for the 4 miles of terminals, and the proportion, as I have computed it, taking the average of the figures he has brought down, is this:

From—
St. Lambert to Point St. Charles.....	11·96
St. Hyacinthe to St. Lambert.....	19·56
St. Rosalie to St. Hyacinthe.....	20·69

And for the short distance from the Chaudière bridge to the siding there, a very short distance—I do not suppose more than half a mile—which we use almost solely, our proportion is 69·50. But, taking the whole line, you will not get 20 per cent.

The hon. gentleman takes great credit because, as he says, we are really saving 75 per cent of the cost of maintenance. What the saving amounts to when analysed, is simply this. We are paying a rental on the basis of half the user—the basis on which his engineer made it up under his directions, and on which he acted—and we are paying for the cost of maintenance on the basis of our proportion of the user. Then, the hon. gentleman who is paying rental on an extravagant basis, so far as user is concerned—that is to say, paying on the basis of equal user, when our user is only one-fifth—tells us, in justification: Oh, you will lose on the rental, but you are making on the cost of maintenance. Now, when you come to analyse that argument, it does not seem to me it affords a very striking illustration of the strength of the hon. gentleman's position; but, such as it is, to use his own language, he is entitled to the benefit of it.

Now, I do not propose to deal with any portion of this Grand Trunk agreement, except in so far as I can endeavour to assist this House by referring to the information which the hon. gentleman has, at last, seen fit to bring down. And I do think that when the hon. gentleman stood up in his place in this House and talked about waste of time, he certainly had an amount of nerve and courage that I have never seen equalled on the floor of this House. He detained this House from eight o'clock in the evening until half-past one on the next afternoon because he would not bring down information which he had promised—

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Will the hon. gentleman (Mr. Borden, Halifax) permit me. I gave the hon. gentleman credit—I did it sincerely—for desiring to be fair. But I am sure he is not trying to be fair now. He knows very well that when it appeared the other night that the hon. gentleman desired a statement of the combined car and engine mileage of the Intercolonial Railway and the Grand Trunk Railway, I told him at once that I had not it and could not get it until the next day, that is, until it could be obtained from the Grand Trunk Railway Company. I said that the Intercolonial Railway had not the figures, and the hon. gentleman knows it was utterly impossible for me to give the information before the time I did. I offered immediately—it was about eleven in the evening, before we had got into the debate and this question came up—I offered and the Premier followed up my offer by making repeated offers of the same kind, but hon. gentlemen opposite would not be content to go on with the business and let their request stand until it could be acceded to next day. I am surprised that he would say that I refused to bring down the information. I could not bring it down, but I offered to do so as soon as it could possibly be obtained.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The hon. gentleman (Mr. Blair) will not find that I am disposed to be unfair, but I am disposed to call the attention of the House to what the actual facts were. I asked on the 28th of May for certain information and took up about a column of "Hansard" to make it perfectly clear to him what I desired. I waited until about last Tuesday night, and then I asked the hon. gentleman if the information was brought down, and he said that it had been. I give him credit for speaking in all sincerity at that time. But when, next night, I found out that the information had not been brought down, I brought the fact to the hon. gentleman's attention. And what took place? The hon. gentleman raised point after point with regard to the matter—

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I beg your pardon.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I beg the hon. gentleman's pardon. He raised point after point with regard to it, and he stated that the proportion of user by the Intercolonial Railway was about 25 per cent. I told him that the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Haggart) had stated to me that different information had been given to him in the House by my hon. friend (Mr. Blair). Now, I did not see at that time, and I do not see yet, if the information was not in possession of the hon. gentleman to give to the House, how he would have any idea one way or the other, except the proportion of expenses—

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. That is the only way I could tell, and I gave it to the hon. gentleman.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Why did not the hon. gentleman give it to us at once?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. The hon. gentleman was offered it and would not take it. He and his friends would not have anything but the combined car and engine mileage, and "Hansard" will show that they were offered and refused.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). What I understood the hon. gentleman to offer to the House that night was not a proportion at all, but simply a statement of what the Intercolonial Railway had paid for operating expenses. If I misunderstood him, I regret it. I did not understand him to offer me or any one else a statement showing a proportion. If the hon. gentleman did offer that or anything else, "Hansard" will show it.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. "Hansard" will show that I offered to bring in a statement to show how much the Grand Trunk had charged us and how much we had paid.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). If the hon. gentleman will recall what took place he will remember that gentlemen on this side offered over and over again to take up other business, go into Supply, to leave aside the Grand Trunk Bill, which was then being discussed; but the only answer we could get from the hon. gentleman was that he would continue to sit and discuss that Bill. I do not want to go over again the events that took place during that long sitting of the House, but I venture to think the hon. gentleman is not in a position to taunt any one on this side with wasting the time of the House or the country.

The matter I wish to bring to the attention of the House, and almost the only matter, was simply this—the hon. gentleman, in making his bargain with the Grand Trunk, appropriated a sum of about $65,000 as the annual amount to be paid to the Grand Trunk for terminals at Montreal; in addition to which we are to pay our proportion of the cost of maintenance. Now, the proportion of user which we make of such proportion of the terminals as we do use is a little less than 7 per cent, about one-fifteenth of the total user. Now, the hon. gentleman, in his speech to-night, said that we used all the terminals more or less. I did not so understand the view of the hon. gentleman when this matter was being discussed before the committee.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I have always said that.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The hon. gentleman produced a statement from Mr. Schreiber, as will be found at page 11 of the Committee's report, in which Mr. Schreiber makes use of this language:

The Grand Trunk Railway property at Point St. Charles, Montreal, must be worth several millions of dollars, but we shall use only a small proportion.

And the hon. gentleman, in his answer to Mr. Powell, at the bottom of the same page, said:

Q. This is for half, or simply the share that the Intercolonial would require of these terminal facilities?—A. That would be on the basis of one-half the value at 5 per cent of such portions of these terminals as he thought he would require to use.

Now, it does not appear that at that time they thought they would use all the terminals, but it does appear that they thought they would use a portion only, which Mr. Schreiber values at $1,239,200. And, again, the hon. gentleman, giving evidence at page 12, says:

Mr. Schreiber states in his memorandum that the line from Point St. Charles to Montreal is worth several millions of dollars, but as we would use only a small proportion he makes the value on that proportion.

Again, at page 13, he says:

Mr. Schreiber has estimated on a basis of part of the cost of such portions of the terminal facilities as we may reasonably be expected to use.

Again, at page 13, he says that they estimated on a basis

Of equal user of such portions of the terminals as we would require to use.

It is abundantly evident, from all these statements, that the hon. gentleman did not then understand, nor did his deputy understand, that they would use all the terminals, but only a portion. What was that portion? It was the portion made up in the statement by Mr. Schreiber, to be found at page 11 of this report, in which Mr. Schreiber estimates that the cost of the terminals which the Intercolonial Railway would require, amounted to $1,239,200. I assume that the hon. gentleman is not paying the Grand Trunk Railway for terminals which he does not use. I have the right to assume that some reliance can be placed upon this statement which the hon. gentleman's deputy prepared, and which the hon. gentleman himself put forward in his evidence before the committee as a statement on which reliance might be placed. What result do you have from that? This result—that the total cost of the portion of the terminals we may expect to use is $1,239,200. Now, the rental which is paid by the Intercolonial Railway, being $65,000 and the user of the Intercolonial Railway, being one-fifteenth of the total, the rental for these terminals on the basis of the user—which must be admitted to be a fair basis—would give you a rental of $975,000 as the total rental for the Grand Trunk and Intercolonial Railway in respect of this property. That is to say, if the Grand Trunk were to pay rental on the same basis as we are paying, the total rental for this property, which is worth less than $1,250,000, would be nearly $1,000,000. I think if anything could demonstrate to this House and to the public that the rental which we are paying for these terminals is an enormous rental, that fact alone is sufficient to demonstrate it. Now, Sir, if anything further were required to indicate to the House that we use only a very small proportion of these terminals, the evidence of Mr. Wainwright, which has already been brought to the attention of the House, would show it conclusively. I refer to what he says on page 56:

I have shown in this plan that it involves the use of 40 miles of sidings, freight-sheds, round-houses and all appurtenances. It is very much like going to a man who owns a palace, with my wife, having married, and asking him to give me his whole house. Of course, I can only use one room, but in a few years there may be a large family. I do not know what proportion will be our use and what will be theirs.

Then, further down, he answers the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals:

I would not like to undertake to say that the user of the Intercolonial Railway, so far as the whole terminals are concerned, would be 100th part the user of the Grand Trunk Railway.

So that you have two things to consider here. In the first place, you have to consider that, of the terminals, which the hon. gentleman says are worth about $1,000,000, our portion would be worth, according to the statement of the hon. gentleman's engineer, $1,250,000 at the outside. Then, you have next to consider that, in respect to that very small portion of the terminals which we do use, our proportion of user, as compared with the user of the Grand Trunk Railway, is as 1 to 15. Then, take into consideration that we are paying a rental of $85,-

000 for user, and I venture to submit again, that the contract the hon. gentleman has made is not a good contract for this country, but, as the hon. gentleman very truly states, it is a most excellent contract from the stand-point of the Grand Trunk Railway. The hon. gentleman seems to lay a great deal of stress on the fact that our user may increase as time goes on. And so the user of the Grand Trunk will increase as time goes on, and, as pointed out by the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals, it is probable that the user of the Grand Trunk Railway will increase in greater proportion than the user of the Intercolonial Railway. What will be the result? If both these roads continue to increase in their business, the terminals will have to be increased, and money will have to be expended, and we will have to bear our proportion of that, and the result will be, that we will pay an increased rental for the increased value of the terminals, under the provision of this contract for that purpose. So, this $65,000 does not measure the real rental which we may have to pay in the future, if our business does increase, as the hon. gentleman anticipates. As I ventured to point out on a previous occasion, the amount which we are paying as rental for this road is out of all proportion to what the Intercolonial Railway receives from the Dominion and Atlantic Railway. That railway has 34 miles of the Intercolonial Railway road, a very good portion of the Intercolonial Railway, a good-paying portion of the road, of which it has exclusive user, and it has 14 miles more of which it has user in common with the Intercolonial Railway, just as efficient a user as that to which we are entitled under this agreement. It has the use of our terminal facilities at Halifax, in addition to this 48 miles of road, and the net amount which we received annually for the last three years from that railway was the sum of $16,682.50, or about one-ninth of what we are paying for the use of 38 miles of the Grand Trunk Railway and the terminals at Montreal. So, it seems to me that the agreement which the hon. gentleman has made, however excellent it may be from his stand-point, is certainly a very different kind of agreement from that to which we had to submit, when we made a bargain with another company.

I merely desired to bring to the attention of the House the result of the returns which it took so long for the hon. gentleman to bring down for our information; and I say, that, having regard to these figures, and having regard to the figures relating to the user of the terminals, I am confirmed in the opinion which I have entertained ever since I first made any investigation into this matter, that the amount of rental which we are proposing by this agreement to pay to the Grand Trunk Railway Company, is a very excessive rental. I think that the matter which the ex-Minister of Finance brought to the attention of the House, with respect to traffic arrangements, is also one which the Government might well take into consideration. The ex-Minister of Finance did not put that matter any too strongly. We are giving the Government, by the confirmation of this agreement, power to make any traffic arrangement with the Grand Trunk Railway which this Parliament could authorize the Government to make; we are placing power in the hands of the Government beforehand to make exactly any kind of agreement with the Grand Trunk Railway concerning traffic that they may see fit to do. Now, if it is proper to bring traffic arrangements of that far-reaching character down to Parliament, I venture to think that it is only right and proper that the Government should insert a clause in this Bill providing that any alteration or modification of that traffic arrangement should be submitted to Parliament, and, unless that is done, I, for one, am not prepared to approve or to vote for this Bill.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Would you vote for it, if we did?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I have already endeavoured to explain to the hon. gentleman as fully as I could, and I think no one in this House misunderstands my position, that, for the reasons which I have already pointed out, I think the agreement which he has made with the Grand Trunk Railway is based on a very excessive rental. Therefore, I would not deem myself justified in voting for it. But apart from that, I say, the hon. gentleman is taking to himself power to make any agreement with the Grand Trunk Railway Company which Parliament could give him power to make; he is taking that power in advance; he is taking it without any control from Parliament. In other words, the Government, by means of the ratification of this agreement, are placing themselves in the position of Parliament, so far as future dealings with the Grand Trunk Railway in respect of traffic arrangements are concerned. I do not know whether the hon. gentleman will agree with that view, but it seems to me perfectly clear. By this Bill we confirm this agreement, and we give it the force of an Act of Parliament. The 40th section recites that Her Majesty has made a traffic arrangement with the Grand Trunk Railway Company, and it also provides that the Government and the company may modify that traffic arrangement in any way they see fit by mutual consent. Then, this House, when it ratifies the 40th section, gives to the Government exactly the same power which Parliament has, to deal with traffic arrangements with the Grand Trunk Railway Company, and it does not seem to be a proper thing to confide to the Government of this country power of that kind with respect to arrangements which, in the ordinary course, are submitted to Parliament. For these reasons, Mr. Speaker, I do not see my way clear to vote for the Bill of which the hon. gentleman (Mr. Blair) is now moving the third reading.

Mr. JAMES McMULLEN (North Wellington). Mr. Speaker, I just desire to say a few words upon this question. I can hardly believe that hon. gentlemen opposite are sincere in their criticisms up to the present point, because, all the time, I see that they are getting worse. The hon. ex-Minister of Finance (Mr. Foster), in his opening remarks, said that there was no instance in the history of this country where a bargain had been entered into by a Minister of Railways and carried through Parliament in the manner in which the present Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Blair), is seeking to carry this bargain through the House and to secure its sanction. I looked up the record to find out how the hon. leader of the Opposition (Sir Charles Tupper), who was Minister of Railways in 1879, introduced to Parliament and carried through a scheme for the purchase of the Rivière du Loup branch of the Grand Trunk Railway, and I find that the course adopted by him on that occasion is on all fours and exactly the same as the course adopted by the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals on the present occasion.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will allow me to explain wherein he is making a serious mistake. My predecessor, Mr. Mackenzie, had obtained the common consent of Parliament to making an arrangement with the Grand Trunk Railway for the purchase of that branch of the Grand Trunk before I took it up at all.

Mr. McMULLEN. I will not challenge what the hon. gentleman says. I am sure he is honest in stating what he has done, but he introduced a resolution himself for the purpose of bringing about the purchase of this road.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Quite so, but after a year's discussion on the subject by the country and by Parliament.

Mr. McMULLEN. No. The hon. gentleman said :

Among the papers submitted will be found a letter from Mr. Shanly, in which he estimated the 119 miles of property the Government had purchased.

My hon. friend stated at the time—

The property the Government had purchased.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Quite so.

Mr. McMULLEN. Upon the introduction of a motion for the purpose of providing the money, my hon. friend arose and spoke of "the property that the Government had purchased."

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes.

Mr. McMULLEN. Very well. He was introducing a resolution upon which he intended to base a Bill for that purpose.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes.

Mr. McMULLEN. Is that not the same as the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Blair) has done ?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The difference is this. The hon. Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Blair) entered into this arrangement with the Drummond County Railway and with the Grand Trunk Railway Company without having the subject brought up in this House at all, whereas I entered into an arrangement with the Grand Trunk Railway Company that my predecessor, with the fullest approval of the House of Commons, had been negotiating for, and with the perfect understanding that that negotiation would be carried out.

Mr. McMULLEN. The hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) is quite mistaken. That the negotiations had been under way before he came into power is quite true, but the question never was before the House. There was never any resolution moved in the House.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes.

Mr. McMULLEN. No. In regard to the purchase of the road there may have been some talk between the parties, but there never had been any negotiations between the Grand Trunk and the Government.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. No ?

Mr. McMULLEN. I will challenge the hon. gentleman to look up "Hansard" and prove that I am wrong.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. It is not convenient at this moment to do so, but I may do so later. I may say that the House had been informed by my predecessor, the Minister of Public Works, that they proposed to open this negotiation, and it was thoroughly understood before by Parliament that we were going on with this negotiation.

Mr. McMULLEN. It may be true that they proposed to open negotiations. Nobody denies that. The question that the hon. ex-Minister of Finance raised was that not a single case of the kind had taken place before, and that there was no precedent for the manner in which the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals had conducted this business. That hon. gentleman said that he should have come to Parliament and get authority to enter into negotiations to make this purchase. I say that there is a case exactly on all fours. The purchase of the Rivière du Loup branch was conducted exactly in the same manner as this has been.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. With that difference ?

Mr. McMULLEN. I just want to compare that purchase with the purchase which has been completed by the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Blair). The Rivière du Loup branch is 119 miles in length, while the Drummond County Railway, that is now purchased, from Chaudière Junction to Ste. Rosalie, together with the branches of this road, has a mileage of 133 miles. The Rivière du Loup branch cost $13,000 a mile, with old iron rails, which the Government of the day agreed to take off and give to the Grand Trunk Railway Company. The hon. leader of the Opposition made an arrangement by which the Government agreed that these old rails were to be lifted up and given to the Grand Trunk Railway Company, and that steel rails should be laid down.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will allow me to say a word. I think it is rather trifling with the House; this matter was fully stated by the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals. It was answered by me, and the hon. Minister has dealt for hours with this subject since, and has never referred to my reply. The whole case has been covered. I say that we had the report of Mr. Schrelber, and that we paid $200,000 less than Mr. Schrefber said a similar road could be constructed for. We had that report referred to Mr. Shanly, who was regarded as one of the greatest engineers in the country, and Mr. Shanly stated that the price we paid for the road was $600,000 less than the real value of the road. Everything has been said in reference to this subject. I have not said a word since I spoke in regard to it early on the discussion, and the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals has spoken at great length on a number of occasions since. It is rather trifling with the business of the House to take up the time of the House with the discussion of a matter which has been completely refuted over and over again.

Mr. McMULLEN. I am only making a comparison. Hon. gentlemen opposite find fault with the purchase made by the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals. They declare that the road could have been built cheaper and they say that $1,600,000 is placing a valuation on the road which is not warranted. I am comparing the purchase that the hon. leader of the Opposition, when Minister of Railways and Canals, made, with the purchase which has been made by the present hon. Minister of Railways and Canals. I want to show that when the hon. leader of the Opposition bought that Rivière du Loup branch he paid $12,600 a mile for it. He will not deny that he paid $1,500,000 for the road. There were no steel rails on it. It was covered with iron rails, and he entered into a covenant with the Grand Trunk Railway Company to take them off and give them back to the company, so that he only got a road bed with some ties on it, and paid $12,600 a mile for it. The hon. Minister of Railways and Canals has got 133 miles of road for $1,600,000, or $12,030 per mile. He has purchased the road for $570 a mile less than the hon. leader of the Opposition paid for the Rivière du Loup branch of the Grand Trunk, without a nail of any kind, yet hon. gentlemen opposite are declaring that there is something wrong about this and that there is some extravagance connected with it. In the face of the bargain entered into by the hon. leader of the Opposition, and in the face of the fact that the cost of the St. Charles branch was $121,000 a mile, I do not think that hon. gentlemen have any warrant for saying that there is any evidence of extravagance in connection with this purchase. I cannot come to any other conclusion than that by keeping up the discussion they are seeking to prove to this House and to the country that the bargain is not a desirable one.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. gentleman has got it now.

Mr. McMULLEN. The hon. ex-Minister of Finance said that the province of Quebec might demand to be recouped for the money they have put into this road before the Government purchased it. We had a little experience in that matter some years ago. We had a little experience some years ago of a similar matter, when the Toronto, Grey and Bruce became part of the Canadian Pacific Railway there was a very strong appeal made by the people of Ontario that the money expended on that road should be refunded because it became part of the Canadian Pacific Railway. A large deputation pressed upon Sir John Macdonald that that money should be refunded, but his reply was, that the Canadian Pacific Railway were not depriving the people of the advantage of that road, that the people would get as good an accommodation as they ever anticipated, and the people could not deny that. Sir John Macdonald told them that if the people were deprived of their accommodation they would have some claim, but since they were not he did not see they had any claim. The same argument would apply to the people of Quebec if they asked the Government for a refund of the money on the road just bought. I cannot see any justifiable ground upon which hon. gentlemen opposite are lengthening out this discussion. I think, comparing it with the purchase of the Rivière du Loup branch, the building of the St. Charles branch, and comparing it with the cost of the construction of any other line, it is a first-class bargain in the interests of the people of Canada, and I believe they will realize in a few years that it was a most desirable bargain for the Minister of Railways to make. The same applies to the arrangement with the Grand Trunk Railway. If we were to cut up the city of Montreal to lay out new lines of railway and to build terminals there, it would cost more millions than any man in this House can form any idea of. The estimate given by the Minister of Railways to-day with regard to the cost of the Canadian Pacific Railway for their terminal accommodation in Montreal, is, I have no doubt, pretty nearly correct. If the Intercolonial Railway were to make a separate entrance into Montreal it would cost a fabulous sum to give it the facilities it now enjoys on the Grand Trunk Railway system of getting into every warehouse where trade can be secured. From this day forward, and during the rest of its history, I look upon the Intercolonial Railway as being placed in such a financial condition that the country will not be called upon to make up its annual deficit. I believe in a very few years it will pay to the treasury of the Dominion, something in return for the many millions that have been sunk in it.

House divided on the motion (Mr. Blair) for the third reading of Bill (No. 133) to authorize the acquisition by the Dominion of the Drummond County Railway.

I. C. R.—EXTENSION TO MONTREAL— AGREEMENT WITH THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY COMPANY.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair) moved :

Third reading of Bill (No. 138) to confirm an agreement entered into by Her Majesty with the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada for the purpose of securing the extension of the Intercolonial Railway system to the city of Montreal.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to occupy the time of the House. I wish simply to put in the shape of an amendment what I spoke of this afternoon with reference to the traffic arrangement. I move:

That the Bill be not now read a third time, but that it be recommitted to a Committee of the Whole, with instruction to add at the end of the first clause of the Bill the following proviso:—

“ Provided, however, that any alteration of the mutual traffic arrangement between Her Majesty and the company referred to in the fortieth paragraph of the said agreement shall, notwithstanding anything in this Act, or in the said agreement contained, be subject to the confirmation of such alteration by the Parliament of Canada, and no such alteration or amended or supplemental contract or arrangement shall take effect unless and until the same shall be so confirmed by Parliament.”

Amendment negatived on division.

Motion agreed to, on the same division as that on the third reading of Bill (No. 133).

BOUNTIES ON IRON AND STEEL.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding) moved that the House resolve itself into committee to consider the following resolution:—

That it is expedient to provide that the bounties on steel ingots, puddled iron bars and pig-iron made in Canada, authorized by chap. 6 of the Acts of 1897, shall on the termination of the period therein mentioned, be gradually reduced during a limited term until they are extinguished, and that the bounties to be paid for the additional term shall be as follows:—

(a) From the 23rd of April, 1902, to the 30th of June, 1903, both inclusive, the bounties shall be 90 per centum of the amount fixed by the said Act.

(b) From the 1st of July, 1903, to the 30th of June, 1904, both inclusive, the bounties shall be 75 per centum of the amount fixed by the said Act.

(c) From the 1st of June, 1904, to the 30th of June, 1905, both inclusive, the bounties shall be 55 per centum of the amount fixed by the said Act.

(d) From the 1st of July, 1905, to the 30th of June, 1906, both inclusive, the bounties shall be 35 per centum of the amount fixed by the said Act.

(e) From the 1st of July, 1906, to the 30th of June, 1907, both inclusive, the bounties shall be 20 per centum of the amount fixed by the said Act.

Provided, however, that if any steel ingots be made from puddled iron bars manufactured in Canada, no bounty shall be paid on such steel ingots.

The said bounties shall cease and determine on the 30th June, 1907.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the resolution before the House deals with the question of bounties on iron and steel. The object of the Government in submitting this measure is two-fold. In the first place, we desire to give a reasonable measure of encouragement to these industries. We have a strong hope, I think I shall be justified in saying a strong belief, that under the policy we have propounded in this resolution there will be a very considerable development of these important industries in the Dominion. In the second place, while adopting this policy and endeavouring to give some encouragement to the industries, we desire to keep in view the fact that the policy of bounties is one which may be well open to criticism, and that it is only to be regarded as a temporary movement, and, therefore, we should look forward to an early day when the industries established under the influence of the bounties may be able to stand unaided; and so we provide for a gradual reduction of the bounties until they are extinguished. I suppose that on a question like this there may be found extremes of opinion. There may be those—I think there are some, perhaps many in Canada—whose views of political economy are so strong in one direction that they would not look with favour upon a bounty system to any industry at all; and no doubt at the other extreme we shall find those who, believing strongly in the policy of protection, would be willing to have a system of bounties as a part of our permanent fiscal policy. Between these two extremes there is the happy medium which we think we have found in the policy which the Government have pursued. That is to say, finding, when we came into power, a system of bounties in operation, we were prepared to continue that system for a limited time, with the desire that the industries which had grown up under that system should have a further opportunity of firmly establishing themselves; and we think that when we extend the system by the present resolution, and fix a time at a comparatively early date when the bounties shall cease to exist, even those who may not generally approve of the system of bounties may recognize in that course a policy to which they could give their support. I think many will acknowledge that it would be justifiable to encourage industries by the granting of bounties, if we could look forward with a reasonable hope that at an early date they might be able to stand alone. It is in the belief that these industries may at the time referred to in this resolution reach that position, that we propose the policy now before the House. We think the policy of a gradual reduction of the bounties is a wise policy, even in relation to the industries which now exist. We have a number of iron establishments in Canada, and if we should abruptly terminate the bounties which, perhaps at the present time, form a large element in their receipts, the results to these various industries might be serious. We think it is in their own interest that we should adopt a system of gradual reduction until the bounties are extinguished; and I trust that those now engaged in the iron industry will see that this is a wise policy. Perhaps it may not be out of place if I call attention to the history of these iron and steel bounties. It was in the year 1833 that the first bounty Act was carried through Parliament. It was then in contemplation that the bounty system should last for six years. The bounty was fixed for two periods—the first three years at $1.50 a ton, and for the second three years at $1 a ton. At that time there were three iron furnaces in operation in Canada—one at Londonderry, N.S., one at Three Rivers, in the province of Quebec, and one at Woodstock, N.B. The Londonderry and Woodstock furnaces unhappily have not proved very prosperous. The Woodstock industry soon ceased operations, and the Londonderry works also have suspended. The Three Rivers furnace has been continued, and has had a fair degree of success; so that of the three that were in existence at that time, two have ceased to exist and only one remains. It was contemplated at that time that the bounty system would lead to the establishment of furnaces at Belleville and at Ottawa; but these projects never seem to have come to any substantial form.

In 1883 the Bounty Act was first passed. In 1886 another Act was passed, whereby the bounty system was extended until 1892, which made a period of nine years from the passing of the original Act. In 1890 another Act was passed, by which the bounty was increased. Instead of being $1.50 for one term and $1 for another, it was provided that for five years after 1892, which would bring the term down to 1897, the bounty should be increased to $2 per ton. Up to this time, the bounty had only extended to pig-iron, but in 1894 the resolutions were so worded as to include not only pig-iron, but puddled iron bars and steel billets. In 1894 an Act providing a bounty of $2 on pig-iron, puddled iron bars, and steel billets was granted to all existing furnaces for a period of five years from 1894, and, in the case of any new furnaces that might be started prior to March, 1897, the bounty was to be for a period of five years from the date at which such new furnaces were started. That brings us down to 1897. In 1897, in connection with the general revision of the tariff, it was deemed expedient to reduce the duties on iron considerably, and compensation was made to this industry, to some extent, by increasing the bounties on iron and steel, with the provision that the bounties should extend until 1902. The bounty provided by that Act was $3 per ton on pig-iron made from native ore, $2 per ton on pig-iron made from foreign ore, and $3 per ton on puddled iron bars made from the Canadian product and on steel ingots.

It is now sixteen years since the first Bounty Act was passed in 1883. If we carry ourselves forward to the date referred to in these resolutions proposed, we find that we shall have had a bounty system in Canada for not less than twenty-four years. After that measure of encouragement, we think it not too much that our iron and steel industries might be established on such a firm footing that they would then need no further Government aid. Not only may we look forward to this reduction of bounties, but I venture to add that, in the interval, we shall be able to still further reduce the customs duties on iron. We all agree that a supply of cheap iron and steel in the country is a very important element in the development of our various industries and the general progress of the country. Whatever method we may adopt to obtain that end, whether by bounties or reducing the duties, it is of the utmost importance that cheap iron and steel should be furnished. I hope that before the time referred to in these resolutions has expired, we shall find the industry so firmly established that, not only will it not require a bounty, but we will be able to make further reductions on the duties on iron.

I have here a statement of the bounties paid from the beginning of the system until the present time. The first statement shows the bounty paid on pig-iron and the number of tons manufactured each year:

Statement showing Bounty on Pig-iron and number of tons manufactured for each fiscal year since the inception of the Bounty.

Fiscal Year.	No. of Tons.	Bounty.
1883-84	29,388 16	$44,089 91
1884-85	25,769 13	38,654 91
1885-86	26,179 19	39,269 56
1886-87	39,717 00	59,576 16
1887-88	22,209 61	33,314 41
1888-89	24,822 42	37,233 62
1889-90	24,373 10	25,697 27
1890-91	20,153 01	20,153 05
1891-92	30,294 08	30,294 37
1892-93	48,420 18	93,896 48
1893-94	62,522 05	125,044 49

1897-98	75,895 38	165,654 25
	546,741 29	$946,875 97

These figures relate entirely to pig-iron. Then, I have a short statement of the bounty on steel billets and steel ingots:

Bounty on Steel Billets and Steel Ingots—

1895-96	29,749 26	$59,498 52
1896-97	8,683 09	17,366 16
1897-98	23,049 43	67,454 03
	61,481 78	$144,318 71

I have, further, a statement showing the bounty on puddled iron bars:

Bounty on Puddled Iron Bars—

1895-96	2,805 58	$5,611 17
1896-97	1,509 42	3,018 82
1897-98	2,615 18	7,705 78
	6,950 18	$16,335 77

Summarizing all these, the bounties on pig-iron, steel billets and steel ingots, and puddled iron bars, the result is as follows:—

SUMMARY.

	No. of Tons.	Bounty Paid.
Pig-iron	546,741·29	$946,875 97
Steel billets and ingots..	61,481·78	144,318 71
Puddled iron bars	6,930·18	16,335 77
Total	615,153·25	$1,107,530 45

This represents the extent of the advantage granted under the various Bounty Acts from the inception of the system down to the present. Pig-iron is manufactured now in Canada by the Canada Iron Furnace Company, of Three Rivers; John McDougall & Co., of Drummondville; the Hamilton Blast Furnace Co., and the Nova Scotia Steel Co., of Ferrona, N.S. Steel ingots and steel billets are manufactured only by the Nova Scotia Steel Co., and puddled iron bars by the Ontario Rolling Mills Co., of Hamilton.

Under the new scale of bounties, which is a system of gradual reduction, beginning with the first year after the expiry of the existing Act, we make the period from the 23rd July, 1902, down to the 30th June, 1903—a little more than a year—the object being to bring it down to the 1st July, which is a very convenient starting point. For that period we propose for the first year a bounty of 90 per cent of the present bounty; for the next year, 75 per cent; for the third year, 55 per cent; for the fourth year, 35 per cent, and for the fifth year, 20 per cent. Converting these percentages into actual figures, we find that the bounty on steel billets and steel ingots, on puddled iron bars and on pig-iron made from Canadian ore—these three have a bounty now of $3 per ton. But, under the new system, the bounty will be as follows:—

The First year of the new period.....	$2.70
Second year	2.25
Third year	1.65
Fourth year	1.05
Fifth year	0.60

After which the bounty shall cease and determine. In the case of pig-iron made from foreign ore, the bounty on which is now $2 per ton, the bounty will be as follows:—

The First year of the new period.....	$1.80
Second year	1.50
Third year	1.10
Fourth year	0.70
Fifth year	0.40

After which the bounty will cease altogether. I observed in the public press a criticism of this policy, to the effect that we are striking a very serious blow at the iron industry, and particularly at that industry in Nova Scotia, in which province I am particularly interested. I am quite satisfied that experience will show that that criticism was mistaken. I firmly believe that instead of striking a blow at this industry, we shall, as a result of this policy, have a very considerable development. I believe that it is a fact that the Hamilton

Mr. FIELDING.

Blast Furnace Company contemplate considerable extensions. At Deseronto, the Messrs, Rathbun, I believe, are turning out iron of a very good quality. At Midland a company are establishing new works. There is some talk—I confess I have no very tangible evidence—of proposed new works at Toronto and Owen Sound. But whether these new works are established or not, those at Hamilton may be relied upon to continue and prosper, those that are already at work at Deseronto will go on and the works at Midland may, I believe, be regarded as a certainty. So that in the province of Ontario, there is a very fair prospect of a very considerable increase in the iron trade.

And, far from striking a fatal blow at the industry in Nova Scotia, I think we may fairly expect a large development in that quarter. The Nova Scotia Steel Company, carrying on its operations at Ferrona, in the county of Pictou, have had a fair measure of success of late, and I think I am correct in stating that they are contemplating the establishment of new works in the island of Cape Breton. But, whether they establish these new works or not, it is reasonably certain that other works will be established there by a gentleman who is already largely interested in the development of the mineral wealth of Nova Scotia. I refer to Mr. Henry M. Whitney, of Boston, who is the head of a great coal company that operates a large proportion of the coal mines of Cape Breton. Mr. Whitney's company was established under an arrangement made when I was Premier of Nova Scotia. The wisdom of the arrangement made at that time was, like all important questions, open to doubt in the minds of some gentlemen. It was strongly criticised in Nova Scotia, and even on the floor of this House the matter was deemed one worthy of very grave consideration. But, whatever doubts there may have been in the past, I think I am right in saying that time has vindicated that policy. The company then established is carrying on mining business in Cape Breton with great satisfaction to all concerned. It has cheapened the production of coal by means of improved methods both of mining and of transportation and by applying large capital which has put the business on a footing previously unknown. And now, as I have said, the gentleman who is at the head of this enterprise, has turned his attention to the iron industry. He has said that if certain bounties were granted for a certain period, he would be prepared to go into the industry on a considerable scale. The bounties we are granting are not those he asked, because he as well as others desired that the whole bounty should be continued for five years. But, while the bounties are not all that this gentleman desired, I believe they will be deemed by him sufficient for the purpose, and I anticipate that, at a very early day, we shall see a very important development of the iron industry there. Cape Breton possesses advantages of a very marked character for the iron and steel business. The great things required in this business are large bodies of ore, large bodies of coal, large bodies of limestone and large capital. It is only by having these in combination that you can make a successful iron industry. There is a very large deposit of iron in Cape Breton, but, apart from that, this gentleman has obtained an option upon and is now virtually in control of a very valuable iron property in the sister colony of Newfoundland, the ore from which is found to blend very well with the native ore, while the Nova Scotia coal is admirably adapted for the work of smelting. Consequently, with the iron ore of Cape Breton available and the ore of Newfoundland so near that it can be brought to the coal at a very small cost, with large capital, and with limestone in profusion, all the elements required for the successful carrying on of an iron industry are combined in that locality, and I have no doubt that if that gentleman and his associates take hold of the matter, they will carry on the business on a large scale. Nor does it end there; for we all know that the establishment of a successful iron business, means the establishment of other businesses that grow out of it.

It may be only a vision, but I am willing to entertain the hope, even though it be a vision, that, as a result of the development of this iron and steel industry, we shall see a revival of ship-building in the maritime provinces, that we may see iron and steel ships built there. Nothing that has occurred in the maritime provinces for the last half century has done more to create difficulty, has been a more serious blow to the development of the resources of that section of the Dominion, than the decay of the industry of shipbuilding. It was a great industry throughout those provinces—not only the industry of building the ships, but the business of owning and manning the ships. Not only did our people build these ships, but as a result of the building of them, our young men all over our provinces grew up to be mariners and sailed over every sea; and, no doubt, to that very fact is due in considerable degree the large measure of intelligence that is usually credited to the people of Nova Scotia. They were people who went down to the sea in ships and did business on the great waters. But, unfortunately, it is part of the history of progress that there is no step taken onward but somebody is injured, however many may be benefited. And, in the great march of the development of modern civilization, the industry of building wooden ships has suffered. As we had the change from wooden ships to iron and then to steel, we have now the change from steel sailing ships to steel steamers. You can now buy a steel sailing ship for what you could have bought a wooden sailing ship twenty-five or thirty years ago. Not having an iron industry, the business of ship-building has passed away from us with the passing of the wooden ship. I think it was Mr. Henry Fry, of Quebec, who was very enthusiastic in his advocacy of building iron ships. He has now passed away, but in his lifetime he expressed a strong opinion that the time was not far distant when Quebec would engage in the building of iron ships. With the development of the iron industry not only on the sea-coast, but in the west, I think we may reasonably hope to see the production of iron and steel plates for ship-building in Canada. With the improvements that are going on, the deepening of our canals, the opening of the Rainy River Railway, and other things that are being done to improve the transportation of the products of Canada, there will be a large development of the iron industry on the great lakes and also upon the coast; and, out of this, I strongly hope we shall see a revival of that ship-building industry which was so important in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island in by-gone years, the revival of which would have such great effect in promoting the prosperity of our country.

This has been happily described as Canada's growing time. Such, I believe, it will prove to be with regard to this industry. The success that has attended the efforts to develop the iron and steel industry in the past has not been inconsiderable. We have several industries established in the country which are now in a very good position. Nevertheless, hon. gentlemen opposite, who were chiefly instrumental in the inauguration of that policy, will, I think, admit that the results have fallen short of what they expected when they enunciated that policy. I believe that the time is more auspicious for the development of an iron and steel industry than for years past, and I hope that with the announcement of this policy—a policy of certainty, because we give certain encouragements for a few years to come—we shall see a large expansion of this important iron and steel industry and that through it much will be done for the advancement of the welfare of the people of Canada.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER (Cape Breton). I have great pleasure in tendering my hearty congratulations to the hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) and the Government for the step which has just been taken. The whole subject, however, has been so fully covered by the speech with which these resolutions have been introduced, as to make it unnecessary for me to occupy the time of the House at any length. I may say, however, that having given this subject a great deal of attention, I some time since arrived at the conclusion that there is no field for the production of a great industry which offers at the present moment greater prospects of success than the proposal of the Minister of Finance to extend the bounty system to the iron industry for a period beyond the termination of the existing Act. I hope with him that the amount of assistance offered will be found sufficient, and I am inclined to believe it will be found quite sufficient to induce the investment of such capital as may be required to establish a great and flourishing iron industry in Canada. I may say that I was a good deal disappointed at the result of the measures that were taken by Parliament in 1887 in regard to the iron industry. But that was easily accounted for by the fact that shortly after that policy was entered upon, as every gentleman who has given this subject any attention knows, the price of pig-iron in Great Britain fell to such a great extent as to render unprofitable what otherwise would have been a very profitable industry. But the circumstances are now entirely changed. It is perfectly apparent that Canada must take the step that is now proposed by my hon. friend in these resolutions of extending such a degree of Government support as will attract the necessary capital, otherwise we must at an early day become dependent, not upon the mother country, but upon a foreign country for the iron that will be consumed in Canada. The consumption of iron in Canada is very great in proportion to the population, it will rapidly increase, and I do not believe that in the very sanguine picture that my hon. friend has drawn, he has in the slightest degree overstated the prospect that exists of not only attracting such capital as will rapidly build up a great iron industry in Canada for the manufacture of iron, rendering us completely independent of any other country, but will place us in a position to take up the question of the construction of iron and steel ships, and probably to attain the same pre-eminence in that field that Canada held, especially in the maritime provinces and Quebec, when wooden ships were the order of the day. I believe that the prospects are entirely favourable for the realization of all that my hon. friend has suggested in this connection. But I may say that I would not be disposed to confine the effect of these operations to the maritime provinces or to the province of Ontario. I believe, having given that subject a good deal of attention, that with the excellent coking coal that is found in British Columbia, and with the undoubted iron deposits at Texada Island and other portions of the province of British Columbia, we will see a great iron industry established on the Pacific coast as well as on the Atlantic coast.

There is another point to which I might draw my hon. friend's attention. The Act of 1897, which is being extended, draws a distinction between iron manufactured from Canadian ore and that manufactured from foreign ore. I quite agree that the distinction should exist between British-American ore and foreign ore, but I hope my hon. friend will agree with me that the term foreign ore ought not to be applied to that of a sister colony, and I would suggest that the term British-American or British North American be substituted for the word Canadian. If that be done it would enable these valuable iron deposits of Newfoundland to contribute much more effectively than would otherwise be possible, to building up a great Canadian industry. I am certain there was no intention on the part of the Government in drawing that distinction between Canadian and foreign ore to apply it to one of the sister colonies, and especially a colony that is of such great importance to Canada as Newfoundland, which I hope will at no distant day become incorporated as a portion of this Dominion. Having made this observation, I beg again to say how gratified I am to find that the Government have taken this step, which I think is going to be so conducive to the prosperity of Canada.

Mr. H. F. McDOUGALL (Cape Breton). I am pleased with the decision arrived at by the Minister of Finance and his colleagues to extend this bounty. I would point out, however, to the Minister that while I agree with him as to the benefits that will be derived from a further extension of this bounty system to the works which are now in operation, I am afraid that the benefit that will accrue to the new works will not be as great as possibly the hon. Minister and other hon. gentlemen might expect. Works that are only just begun, or which will not be begun until this Act passes the House, as the hon. gentleman will see, cannot be established so as to be in full working order at least inside of a year, and perhaps not even then. Any company undertaking a work of this kind have to select their location, complete their surveys, secure their money, and do a lot of work in connection with organization before building. We have only got before us three or four months before winter is on, so that any company will practically have not more than about six months to carry on other operations. In my judgment I do not look for a new work being established even within a year, under these conditions, and that is why I regret that the Minister has seen fit to make the time for payment of the full bounty so short as 1902. If a company begins to organize now they cannot get into working order inside of a year or a year and a half, so that the full benefit will only accrue for a year or a year and a half to any organization that are now just beginning to lay their plans. However, I hope that when it is seen that companies have spent a great deal of money without getting much advantage from the bounty, that something further may be done for them before the time for full bounty expires. Works have been referred to by the Minister which are about to be established in Cape Breton; I understand they are being arranged for to some extent, and I look forward to the predictions of the Minister being, in a large measure, realized.

As to shipbuilding there is no doubt that there is no point in the Dominion of Canada that affords greater advantages to that great industry than Cape Breton, as well as some other points in Nova Scotia, and I venture to predict that as a result of the building up of this chief industry, a great many other iron industries will spring up as a consequence. The hon. Minister of Finance referred to the disappointment at the results of the bounty previously paid by authority of this Parliament. I agree with the hon. Minister in regard to the disappointment we all feel in that regard, and I am quite sure that the benefits that will accrue from this step will be greater. At least, I hope so, and I think there is considerable reason to expect better results. There is this very strong reason, however, that at the time that the Conservative party proposed this bounty system, they did not have the support of the hon. gentleman who have now united with them in this policy. But now the conditions are so changed that people who want to invest their money in this industry will feel that they can do so with greater security, in view of the fact that both parties in Canada are united on this policy. For this reason, I certainly expect better results than those that we had before. I will not, therefore, delay the House at any further length, but I wish to point out to the hon. Minister of Finance that it seems to me that the wording of this resolution does not carry out the object in view:

That it is expedient to provide that the bounties on steel ingots, puddled iron bars and pig-iron made in Canada, authorized by chap. 6 of the Acts of 1897, shall, on the termination of the period therein mentioned, be gradually reduced during a limited term until they are extinguished, and that the bounties to be paid for the additional term shall be as follows.

My understanding of these words is that the former Act terminates the policy of the bounty in April, 1902. I do not consider that this resolution would give, in these words, the power to pay beyond that time, although the lines which follow would give that impression. I would beg to suggest to the hon. Minister that before it is put into the Act that all the words after "mentioned" in that paragraph be struck out and the following words added:—

Be further continued to the 30th June, 1907, subject, however, to the reductions hereinafter provided.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think it is all right as it is, but I will undertake to see that in the bill founded upon this resolution, there shall be no room for doubt.

MR. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, I am sorry that I cannot congratulate the hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) upon the resolution which has just been introduced any more than in 1887, I could congratulate the present hon. leader of the Opposition (Sir Charles Tupper), when he introduced this iron resolution. Free trader as I am, I cannot allow this resolution to pass without at least offering my humble protest. My opinion is that if Canada is to make its best development, the producers of the resources of Canada, who contribute, in the first instance, to the promotion of the development of the country and furnish our large exports, which go to pay our foreign indebtedness, must be placed in the same position, in so far as buying is concerned, as they occupy in regard to that which they have to sell. It would be far more reasonable to give to the farmers of Canada bounties upon their products than to give bounties upon the production of iron. It is not my intention to delay the House for any time upon this subject, but it is perfectly impossible for me to support any legislation of this kind without entering my protest, and I do not intend to do so on the present occasion.

MR. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). I do not rise to oppose the proposition for the payment of bounty because I think this is a step in the right direction. It is carrying out the principle which the Conservative party have long regarded as one of the sound principles of the National Policy. When we look over the figures given us by the hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding), we find that an average bounty of $73,814 a year has brought about the inauguration of this industry, and its development to an extent which, I think, must be regarded as satisfactory to this House and to the country. It is pleasing to know that the bounty in future will be reduced. I have some doubts as to the success of the new enterprises which are to be started up in the near future, and which can only have the benefit of a few years of this bounty, whereas some of the older ones have had the benefit of it for a very much longer period. But I rose more particularly to say that, since the hon. Minister of Finance has been so liberal, and in my judgment, is doing what I regard as right in offering encouragement to the production of iron, I think he ought to go much further and, upon the same principle, give a bounty upon the production of beet-root sugar, because, for every one that the hon. Minister can benefit in connection with the iron industry by this bounty, he would benefit ten of the farmers or agriculturists of the country if he gave them a bounty, and it would not require quite as much money. I am quite sure that, if he did, in a very few years he would find that quite as important industries had sprung up in the country as had sprung up because of the bounty given on the production of iron. I was pleased to hear the hon. Minister of Finance acknowledge, in view of what I have often heard in this House, as an older parliamentarian, perhaps, than he is, that the cause of the destruction of ship building in Nova Scotia and the maritime provinces was that there had been a change from wooden ships to iron ships, and from iron ships to steel ships. We were told over and over again, in this House, in 1879 and afterwards, that the destruction of ship-building in the maritime provinces was entirely due to the National Policy and to no other cause. We were told that by friends of the hon. gentleman, some of whom are here to-night and many of whom are not here, but it is refreshing to hear from the lips of hon. gentlemen opposite the admission that the cause which we assigned was the proper one, and that it was not the cause which they assigned.

Mr. A. C. BELL (Pictou). Mr. Speaker, I have very much pleasure in saying that I am highly gratified indeed to learn that the hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) has determined to continue these bounties on the production of iron and steel. I presume that he has not only weighed this matter carefully, but that he has been in consultation with gentlemen interested, in a business way, in the production of iron, and I hope that the measure of assistance in these bounties will be sufficient to do what is the purpose in view, and that is to stimulate and promote the production of iron in Canada. There is a great deal of force in the remarks of the hon. gentleman from Cape Breton (Mr. McDougall), that the one great advantage which will come to those who are thinking of entering upon this industry, lies in the fact that, so far as the utterances of public men in the Canadian Parliament is concerned—with the exception of our hon. friend from Russell (Mr. Edwards)—there is no difference of opinion as to the advisability and propriety of supporting certain industries in the manner contemplated by this resolution. Consequently, the business men who are contemplating such investments, will have greatly increased confidence, knowing that this matter is no longer a subject of controversy between political parties, but is one to which men of all parties have given their consent, and, therefore, cannot be affected by political changes. The county I have the honour to represent is, I need scarcely say, deeply interested in this matter. In the lower provinces we have now to depend very largely upon manufactures, and we look forward very hopefully to the day when steel ships will represent upon every ocean the enterprise of the sons of Nova Scotia, as wooden ships did in the years past. Our great industry in days gone by was wooden ship-building, and as the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) said, our business was not only building ships, but sailing ships; and these ships brought large sums of money into the maritime provinces.

Mr. SPROULE.

I hope sincerely that the good wishes of the Finance Minister will be realized, and that at a very early date we may see Nova Scotia again occupying a prominent place as a ship-building province. I believe, too, that the leader of the Opposition (Sir Charles Tupper) is not too sanguine, when he says, that he expects to see a great industry of that kind grow up in British Columbia. Our country throughout is rich in minerals, and there is no reason why we should not at an early date assume a leading position as an iron-producing country. We know, from the experience of the past, that every country which has become prominent in the world, produced iron in large quantities, and laid the foundation of her fame in industrial development and commercial prosperity by its production. Canada may hope to attain a high position by that means. I am, therefore, glad the Minister of Finance introduced this resolution, which, for my part, I heartily approve.

Mr. GEO. H. BERTRAM (Centre Toronto). The resolution brought in by the Minister of Finance is of great importance to the country, and it might be debated to considerable extent with profit to the community at large, but at this late hour of the night I shall not detain the House for any length of time. The development of the iron-mining industries of this country is of great importance, and, as has been stated by the Finance Minister, at the date of the expiration of the present bounties proposed in the resolution, iron bounties in Canada will have been in existence for twenty-four years. There is no denying the fact that a great deal of theoretical objection can be made to giving bounties of any kind, but we have to deal with conditions as we find them, and, if we cannot develop our resources in one way, we have to do it in another.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. BERTRAM. I believe that, if there is one industry more than another that requires such assistance in the beginning, it is the mining industry of Canada. I am well aware of the fact that bounties should not be looked upon as being a permanent charge upon the country, and I quite agree with these resolutions, inasmuch as they appoint a time when the development of our iron industries will have to try and get along in the near future without the present system of bounties. At the same time, I believe it will require a certain term of years to bring about that condition. Therefore, I heartily agree with the resolutions proposing to extend these bounties, and I heartily agree in their looking forward to the time when the bounties shall be done away with, because it stands to reason that, if we cannot develop our iron industries within a certain time, with this assistance, we must come to the conclusion that we have not the natural facilities and that we are engaged in a losing game. A few observations on the statement made by the Minister of Finance with reference to ship-building in the lower provinces, may not be out of place from me. This country is placed on an entirely different basis from what it occupied in the past, in connection with this matter. It is a well-known fact that Great Britain was the home of ship-building, simply because she had the capital and the material combined.

Mr. EDWARDS. And free trade.

Mr. BERTRAM. Oh, we will not mind free trade just now. The capital, and the material, and the natural facilities which she possessed, made Great Britain the home of ship-building; but, Sir, I believe the conditions are so changed that, in the course of a very few years, this continent of America is going to become the home of ship-building. I believe that, because the production of raw material required for ship-building, while yet in its infancy, is an increasing factor on this continent, whereas in Great Britain it is rapidly decreasing, and they now require to look to other countries for their raw material for the ship-building industry. I, therefore, believe that the time is very opportune for us to seriously consider the whole question. Now, I shall give the House a little piece of information in relation to the cost of material, which I am sure will surprise those who are not engaged in the ship-building business. I had occasion to buy on this continent some 3,000 tons of material in the month of January last—I know the conditions are not exactly the same to-day, but I believe these conditions will return within a short time. In the month of January last, I purchased 3,000 tons of material for ship-building purposes, and I had quotations from producers of that material in the United States, and also from producers in Great Britain. I found that, in the production of a great deal of the structural material for ships, there was a difference in one class of material of 43 per cent in favour of the American manufacturer, of 32½ per cent in another class; and in plates alone there was a difference of 23 per cent in favour of this continent. This shows that this continent is now becoming the home of the production of ship-building material, and, that being the case, we should try to get ourselves into such a position that we can compete with other countries in that particular.

Mr. ELLIS. Your illustration is a good argument against your theory.

Mr. BERTRAM. I am showing that the conditions have changed in regard to the production of ship-building material. Here is the point I wish to make. If you go into the United States, you see that there is an enormous production of that kind of material, whereas there has been little or no production of that material in Canada. Therefore, if you give some encouragement to the production of that material in Canada, you will bring about in Canada the same conditions that exist in the United States.

With regard to shipbuilding, I have always held the opinion, and I hold it still—I expressed that opinion at the meeting of the British Empire League the other day—that the best way in which we could bring about the establishment of a steel ship-building industry in the lower provinces, which we are all so anxious to have, is, if we are going to have a fast Atlantic service at all, to have the ships for that service built in this country. There is no reason why that cannot be done, and I believe the policy we are now laying down, of giving encouragement to the iron and steel industry, is a step towards that end. All that is necessary for the building of those ships is the material, the organization, and the capital. Therefore, I hope that when the Government again takes up the project of a fast Atlantic service—which seems to be asleep at the present moment, so far as I can judge—they will see that one of the conditions provided will be that the ships for that service shall be built in the Dominion of Canada; for, after all, you cannot have such a large investment of capital as would be required for the creation of a great ship-building plant in the maritime provinces, unless those who established it could see where they could get trade for some years to come. The construction of the fast Atlantic steamers would amount to millions of dollars, and in their construction an opportunity would be given for starting an industry of that kind. As I said before, the question is a large one, and one might speak in detail upon it for a considerable length of time. I rose only to say that I am very glad indeed that the Minister of Finance has brought in this resolution for the purpose of continuing these bounties for a short time, looking to the near future when they will cease. I think it is a policy in the interest of the country at large.

Mr. J. V. ELLIS (St. John). I would not have risen at all to speak on this question, but that I do not desire my hon. friend (Mr. Edwards) to think that he stands alone. I entirely agree with him, and I dissent from the propositions of the Minister of Finance. The whole theory of bounties is a wrong theory, according to the views of free traders. If the principle is sound as regards iron ships, my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) is quite correct in his argument that bounties should also be given for the production of beet-root sugar. In fact, bounties to any industry might be supported on the same lines. If the hon. member for Centre Toronto (Mr. Bertram) is correct with regard to the price of ship-building material, all the Government has to do to secure the establishment of the iron ship-building industry in this country, is to remove the duty from everything that enters into the building of ships; then we can get the material so cheaply that we can restore the shipbuilding industry. I beg to point out that the industry of ship-building did not depend on bounties when wooden ships were in existence. The men who built them, the men who manned them, and the men who sailed them on every sea were, as the Finance Minister said, men who depended not on bounties at all, but on their skill, their capacity and the freedom of trade that existed.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. May I be permitted to remind my hon. friend that the Government did give a most substantial bounty for the building of wooden ships. It was given in the province of Nova Scotia before we came into confederation, and it was continued by the Dominion Parliament afterwards.

Mr. ELLIS. It certainly was not in the direction of a tonnage bounty.

An hon. MEMBER. Drawbacks.

Mr. ELLIS. Yes, drawbacks on some of the material. I have listened with a great deal of pleasure, as I always do, to the Minister of Finance in the glowing picture he drew with regard to this industry; but he failed entirely in his speech, in comparison with the speech delivered by the hon. leader of the Opposition in 1887 or 1888. That speech remains in my mind like some beautiful romance which one reads and carries the recollection of for ever. When the hon. gentleman described the capacity of this country to produce iron—the proximity of the fluxes, the coal and the raw iron—we were charmed by his admirable description, and we could all see wealth rising up before our eyes; but when he passed to another part of his programme and talked of the charcoal iron furnaces, the lights of which would light every traveller to his home, I was almost led to believe, contrary to the views I had always held, that his predictions would turn out to be correct. I hope, although I am afraid I hope without hope, that the propositions of the Minister of Finance will not prove as fallacious as the propositions of the hon. leader of the Opposition at that time, when he was Minister of Finance. The hon. gentleman has given us a reason for the failure of his policy. There must always be a reason for the failure of a policy when it fails. When a policy is not founded on a sound principle it is very likely to fail. I do not intend to lead any particular opposition to these propositions, but I think we are departing from the principles which the Liberal party enunciated when it laid down its platform, and we are conceding too much to the views of men like my hon. friend from Centre Toronto.

Mr. W. H. BENNETT (East Simcoe). Mr. Speaker, the fact that a smelter is now being established in the town in which I live, the town of Midland, and in the constituency which I have the honour to represent, must be my excuse for saying anything in connection with this matter. It is simply to draw attention to one fact that has not been referred to. While we have been successful in the past year in exporting 2,500 tons of pig-iron, it must be borne in mind that that has been in the main iron produced from charcoal, which I understand is very much more in demand than pig-iron produced from coke. In this connection, I wish to say, from information which I have received from the gentlemen interested in the smelter now being constructed at Midland, that the only hope Canadians can have in competing with the United States of America, lies in the production of charcoal iron rather than coke iron; and perhaps the Minister of Finance will be able to state how much of these 2,500 tons was charcoal iron and how much was coke iron. In reference to the matter referred to by the hon. junior member for Cape Breton (Mr. McDougall), I think it would perhaps be fairer to these new concerns if the term were advanced one or two years further, because, owing to the extent of the concern at Midland, I have reason to believe that it will not be able to avail itself of the bounty for some little time. There is one question to which I wish to draw the attention of the Finance Minister and the Government; that is, that in the allotment of the bounties, I believe, if it is possible, before the Bill is brought down, some distinction should be made in favour of pig-iron produced from charcoal. In this there is the production of many other things known as by-products, which affords employment to a large number of men, and must be the means of bringing a large amount of capital into the country. I think I am right in my surmise that in the Hamilton Iron Furnace Company, the coke would be brought from the United States, while, on the other hand, if the pig-iron is made from cordwood, or rather, hard wood, there will be an immense amount of labour required in the making of charcoal, because the contemplated furnace of Midland will have a capacity of some 110 tons a day or thereabouts, and while, practically, employment will only be afforded for 75 or 100 men in the actual work in and about the smelter, still a large number of men will be employed in taking out the quantity of wood they will consume annually, which, it is anticipated, will run to over 50,000 cords per year. I would ask the hon. Minister of Finance to consider whether or not, when pig-iron is produced from charcoal, having consideration to the immense amount of labour taking the wood from the forest, it should not have a higher bounty as against the pig-iron produced from coke. Referring to the question of vessel building, it may be a matter of interest to the hon. gentleman to know that last year there passed through the town of Midland a large number of iron plates, which were going to Belfast for the construction of ships, and which were made in South Chicago, and I believe that the gentlemen connected with the concern at Midland expect the day will come when they will produce on the shores of the Georgian Bay large quantities of plates for that purpose.

Mr. E. G. PRIOR (Victoria, B.C.) It was most gratifying to me, Mr. Speaker, to hear the announcement made by the hon. Minister of Finance with regard to these bounties, and also to hear the hon. leader of the Opposition express himself as thoroughly in accord with these resolutions. That shows that whenever any matter is brought up in this House, that is palpably for the good of the country, it will get the heartiest support of this side. I was very glad, indeed, also to hear the hon. leader of the Opposition call the hon. Minister's attention to the fact that he should not leave out of consideration the needs of British Columbia with regard to this bounty. Every one knows that British Columbia is a large mineral producing country. I might state that the iron ore there is of magnificent quality, and in tremendous quantities. We have not only iron ore of very good quality on Texada Isle, as stated by the hon. leader of the Opposition, but large deposits close to the city of Victoria, and in hundreds of other places all over the province. Most magnificent coke and coal are obtained on Vancouver Island and also in the Crow's Nest Pass. The Crow's Nest Pass Company, as proved beyond doubt, is making as magnificent coke as can be found on the whole continent of America, and we believe in British Columbia that it will be a very short time, especially if we have the assistance of Government bounties, before we shall have large iron works started there. In the last year or two, we have had gentlemen from Wheeling and other large manufacturing centres in the United States, spying out the land, to see what chances there are of their starting works in British Columbia; and several of them have reported that they consider there is everything in that province they can possibly want—the iron ore, coal, coke and fluxes, all of the very best quality. Before long a tremendous trade is expected to spring up with China and Japan, so that it will pay to invest an enormous amount of capital in opening up the deposits in British Columbia to supply that trade with steel rails and other things. I listened with great amusement to my hon. friends from St. John (Mr. Ellis), and from Russell (Mr. Edwards), airing their free trade ideas, and I do not wonder at their doing so, because, to my mind, the policy they advocate is the avowed policy of the Government. But I am very glad to see that the hon. Minister of Finance has changed his mind with regard to the protection needed for these industries. Even if you have the very best materials on hand in British Columbia, you could not possibly compete with the United States. The Americans own their own mines, have large capital invested in these mines, and employ black labour, so that they not only can beat us in our own country, but are sending at present, as the hon. member for Centre Toronto (Mr. Bertram) knows, large amounts of steel rails and castings to the old country. I trust that, if possible, the term of these bounties will be extended, as my hon. friend from East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) asks, so that new concerns will have a little more time to come in and operate under the benefit of the bounties. I shall not take up the time of the House any longer, but I felt it would not be right for me, coming from British Columbia, to let these resolutions pass without expressing my approval of them.

Mr. H. CARGILL (East Bruce). I do not rise for the purpose of detaining the House at any great length at this hour, but it is not very frequently that we have an opportunity on this side of congratulating the Government on any of its actions, and, therefore, I avail myself of the present opportunity for expressing my gratification at the resolutions proposed by the hon. Minister.

I have come to the conclusion that these gentlemen, for the last eighteen or twenty years, have been sleeping, and that they have just now got their eyes opened to a realization of the fact that the only way in which the affairs of this country can be successfully carried on, in the interests of the people, is by pursuing the policy originally introduced by their predecessors. I am very much pleased, indeed, to see that there are only two remaining now to be converted to the ideas carried into effect for the last eighteen or twenty years by hon. members on this side. I believe that these gentlemen opposite very shortly will also be converted, and the sooner the better.

Now, I only hope that the Government will continue on the same lines on which they have started. The hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule), last evening, made a motion asking for a bounty to be given to the beet-root sugar industry. I was very much surprised at the conduct of the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) on that occasion. Last evening when the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) represented, in a very logical and strong manner, the claims which the agricultural community have upon the Government, and asked for a bounty to be given in order to stimulate the beet-root sugar industry, the hon. member for North Wellington got up in his place and tried to define the difference between—

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman has no right to refer to a past debate.

Mr. CARGILL. I bow to your decision, Mr. Speaker, but I know that the hon. member for North Wellington will pardon my reference to him because he and I are on very intimate terms. I have known him for many years, and respect him as a business man; but lately I have come to the conclusion that politically he does not pursue just as straight a course in matters that come up here for discussion as he does in connection with his own business affairs. Now, Mr. Speaker, I promised to be very brief, but I felt that I could not let this resolution pass without commending the action of the Government in this matter. That is my excuse for rising. I believe that the present Government, so far as they are pursuing the course laid down by their predecessors are doing right, but just so soon as they begin to digress from that, I contend they are working against the best interests of the people of this country.

Mr. DAVID HENDERSON (Halton). I also desire to express my gratification with that resolution that has been introduced by the Finance Minister. I am sure that we on this side of the House can pursue no other course and we desire to pursue no other course, than to express approval of the policy to which in the past we were so strongly wedded. While hon. gentlemen were speaking, a little incident came to my mind which I thought had been very aptly illustrated indeed. I had the pleasure, a short time ago of an introduction to a gentleman from the province of the Minister of Finance, a gentleman who succeeded him as Prime Minister of that province. In passing through the corridor behind the Speaker's chair, the hon. gentleman asked me if I ever went into No. 16. I said that I did not know the password "Oh," he said, "the password—adopt the policy of your predecessors." That is just what hon. gentlemen on that side of the House are doing. So, I presume, in a short time we shall all have access to No. 16. At any rate, it seems we are so happy in the resolution that there is no question as to whether it is No. 6 or No. 16; in fact, were it not for the smallness of our room, I would say to hon. gentlemen opposite: Let all come down to No. 6. I trust that this resolution, notwithstanding the position taken by the hon. member for Russell (Mr. Edwards), the hon. member for St. John (Mr. Ellis), will receive the approbation of the House. I am quite sure it will receive the approbation of the country.

Mr. BENNETT. Will the hon. Minister (Mr. Fielding) state how much of the iron is produced with coke and how much with wood?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have sent my figures to the "Hansard" room, and cannot give the hon. gentleman the information at the moment. But if he will deduct from the total quantities made by the Canadian Iron Furnace Company and John McDougall & Co., who are producers of charcoal iron, he can set the rest down as coke iron.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I hope my hon. friend will agree with me in the suggestion that we should not treat the province of Newfoundland as a foreign country, and that when the Bill is introduced it will be in a form to prevent this being done.

Mr. ALEX. McNEILL (North Bruce). I wish to join my friends in congratulating the Government in their course in reference to this question. I am satisfied that the only way in which we can develop our iron industry is by pursuing the course pursued by every other country that has developed its iron industry—and that is to protect the manufacture of iron. I am very glad indeed to find that the Government have adopted that policy. There is one thing I would like to know from the Minister of Finance. I see my hon. friend the Minister of Agriculture has come in, and I observed that these two Ministers were in consultation a few minutes ago after a question by my hon. friend from Grey (Mr. Sproule). I would like to know from the Minister of Finance whether he has succeeded in converting the Minister of Agriculture to his protection views, and whether he could induce that hon. gentleman to give the bounty on beet sugar which we are so anxious to have. I hope it may be so. I trust the hon. Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson) will use his influence in the same direction; I believe that his constituents are a good deal interested in beet sugar production. But I am afraid the Minister of Agriculture is a very strong free trader, and that he would be hard to move in that regard. But we hope for the best. As to what has fallen from the hon. member for Centre Toronto (Mr. Bertram), who always speaks so practically in this House, I do not know that I can accept what he says in connection with the fast line. I should like very much to see an iron ship building industry established here in Canada, and I do not know any reason why we should not have it established. I believe that we can have it if the Government, no matter which party happens to be in power, only pursues the policy of protection to the iron industry. But I hope we have not to wait for the establishment of that iron industry before we get the fast line, because, however sanguine my views may be as to the prospects of Canada as a ship-building country, I do not see how we can build such vessels as will be required for the fast Atlantic service for many a year to come. I notice by yesterday's paper that it is alleged that the vessel to replace the "City of Paris" that was,—the "Paris" as she is called now,—is to be built, not in the United States, but abroad, because they say that vessels can be built more cheaply abroad than in the United States. If they are not able to build vessels of that kind in the United States as cheaply as they can be procured elsewhere, I think it will be some time before we can provide vessels of that kind for ourselves. I should be sorry if the fast Atlantic service were to wait until that day.

Mr. D. D. ROGERS (Frontenac). I would not have risen to say a word but for the remarks made by the hon. member for East Bruce (Mr. Cargill) that there were only two lone members that have offered any objection to this proposal. I have found it not much use talking in this House unless you can have some backing. But if gentlemen would formulate their ideas in the shape of a resolution and divide the House, they would find, I think, a good many more than these two lone members of that way of thinking, and place the agricultural representatives in a tight place. I do not believe in Government pap for any industry in this country. I voted against the Government bonusing the export of butter, declaring that I was against the principle of bonusing. I hold the same opinion now, and believe that all the industries should stand upon the same footing. We have to get along without bonuses in our great industry of agriculture, which is the foundation of all and is most important than all. We do not ask for any Government pap. It is evident to me that these industries could stand upon their own feet a good deal better were it not for the extortionate salaries and the big dividend they clamour for. If people were not anxious to put money into such investments as cotton mills, mortgage and loan companies and banks, if they were satisfied with the reasonable rate of interest that we in the agricultural industry are compelled to be satisfied with, they would not be seeking Government pap, nor should we have two hundred millions in our banks and fifty millions in our savings banks awaiting investment, but this money would be invested in the industries of the country and would be of use in developing the resources of the country.

Motion agreed to.

(In the Committee.)

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. With regard to the observation of the leader of the Opposition about the use of the word "foreign" in this resolution, I hope he will not press his suggestion. Of course, the word "foreign" is not generally used to apply to the colonies. But the bounty is very considerable, having been increased at the time of the reduction of the tariff, and it will probably be found that, owing to the extensive operations that I anticipate will follow the adoption of this policy, we shall be called upon to pay a pretty round sum as it is, and I am afraid that, if we are to adopt the policy of paying $3 a ton upon all the iron made of Newfoundland ore at the beginning, and reducing it gradually under this scale, the demand on the treasury will be much larger than the House will be willing to grant. That question has been thoroughly considered, and I think, on the lines of the present resolution, the object will be accomplished.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I think the difficulty could be got over in the same way that the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the British Government, got over the difficulty, when it was proposed to increase the tax upon colonial securities. The term "foreign securities," used in Great Britain, applied to the colonies, and there was no means by which any tax was imposed on colonial securities except under the clause which said, that foreign securities should pay so and so. But we induced the Chancellor of the Exchequer to change the Bill, so as to exempt colonial government securities, by an amendment to the Act, declaring that the word "foreign" did not apply to the colonies. In the same way, we might amend this Act by simply providing that the word "foreign" should not apply to a British colony. That would meet the case, I think, without causing any material alteration in the policy. I think the Bill would be, from every point of view, much more satisfactory, if it was amended so as not to exclude anything from the Island of Newfoundland.

Mr. PRIOR. Am I to understand that this applies to the whole Dominion?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Certainly.

Resolution reported.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies) moved the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to, and the House adjourned at 12.10 a.m. (Wednesday).

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, 14th June, 1899.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

PRAYERS.

MR. MARK WORKMAN.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER (Pictou). I find that I have unwittingly offended, Mr. Speaker, the feelings of a gentleman of whom I knew nothing, Mr. Mark Workman, concerning whom I asked a question yesterday. I wish to say that I endeavoured to frame that question so as not to suggest that he was not a British subject, or that he operated his factories for seven days. I put the question at the request of a gentleman in Montreal, and in looking over it, I saw, at the time, as I supposed, nothing objectionable. I have a letter from a gentleman, whose credibility I do not doubt for a moment, saying that Mr. Workman has been a British subject of twenty-five years and never operated his factory seven days in the week, and I hasten to make the explanation in order to show that I had no information that he was not a British subject or did work his factory seven days in the week. I was merely asked to put the question.

GAME PRESERVATION ACT.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 153) to amend the unorganized Territories Game Preservation Act, 1894. He said: The purpose of the Bill is to extend the protection now given to the buffalo in the unorganized territories for a further period of two years as to the males and to perpetuate the protection as to the females. The protection given has been found effective, and the buffalo are increasing, and it is desirable the protection should be extended.

Bill read the first time.

THE CUSTOMS ACT.

Bill (No. 154) further to amend the Customs Act (Mr. Paterson), read the first time.

BONDS OR SECURITIES REGISTERED.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER asked:

What officers employed in the public service in the Yukon district since February, 1897, have given bonds under the provisions of section 5, chap. 19, R.S.C., or other statute?

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). It will be impossible to answer this, and my hon. friend will have to move for a return.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. This relates to information which the statute requires should be given to the House without motion at all.

The PRIME MINISTER. This is the answer placed in my hands to a question put the other day. My hon. friend challenged the accuracy of the answer, and I brought the matter to the attention of the hon. Secretary of State, and he reaffirmed the position he took. The question put the other day was as follows:—

1. Has the Secretary of State, since 1896, caused to be prepared for the information of the

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER (Picton).

Parliament of Canada, within fifteen days after the opening of every session thereof, detailed statement of all bonds or securities registered under the provisions of chap. 19, R.S.C., and as required by the said provisions?

2. If not, why not?

3. If not, will he cause such statement to be laid before Parliament forthwith, covering the cases within the said statute of officers employed in the public service in the Yukon?

To which the following answer was given:—

In conformity with the provisions of section 23 of chap. 19, R.S.C., the Secretary of State caused to be prepared for the information of Parliament of Canada within fifteen days after the opening of every session since 1896, a detailed statement of all bonds or securities registered under the provisions of the aforesaid statutes. This statement was laid upon the Table of the House on the following dates:—20th April, 1897; 16th February, 1893; 30th March, 1899.

COMPENSATION FOR DAMAGES ON THE GRENVILLE CANAL.

Mr. TAYLOR asked:

1. Has the Government settled, or do they intend to settle, with Mr. Robertson and other farmers who, it is alleged, have suffered very great damages in consequence of the improvements now being made on the Grenville Canal by contractors Piggott and Inglis; said farmers, it is alleged, having been deprived of their roadway to their farms on the south bank of canal for seven months of the year 1898, as well as from December 1st, or close of navigation, to the 15th of May of the present year, 1899, these farmers, it is alleged, having lost the use of their lands and firewood and suffering great annoyances and damages on account of these obstructions varying in amount from $100 to $150?

2. Have any damages been paid to these several farmers? If not, why not?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). In reply I beg to say: 1. The Government has not settled with Mr. Robertson and other farmers for damage, if any, done by Messrs. Piggott and Inglis, contractors, in carrying on the work of enlargement of the Grenville Canal.

The contractors under the terms of their contract are liable for any damage they may do in the prosecution of their work.

2. Claims for damages such as referred have not been paid to the farmers by the Government, because, if any such damages have been suffered, the contractors are liable; in the second place, although claims have been made it has not yet been learned that the farmers have suffered damage.

I. C. R. PRIVILEGES AT LEVIZ STATION—MR. FELIX PICHETTE.

Mr. CASGRAIN asked:

1. How much did Félix Pichette pay for the privilege of keeping a counter and selling, within the station of the Intercolonial Railway at Léviz?

2. How much does he now pay for the said privilege?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). 1. Mr. F. Pichette paid $520 a year for the privilege of keeping a counter and selling, within the station of the Intercolonial Railway at Lévis.

2. Mr. Pichette now pays $520 a year for the same privilege.

BUOYS IN ANNAPOLIS AND DIGBY BASIN.

Mr. MILLS asked :

1. Has the Department of Marine and Fisheries a report or information to the effect that the different buoys in the Annapolis and Digby Basin are not in their proper places?

2. Has said department any official report that said buoys are in their proper places?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). 1. The department has not received a report to the effect that the different buoys in Digby and Annapolis Basin are not in their proper places. 2. The department has received a report from the harbour master stating that all the buoys are placed in their proper places. A temporary buoy has also been placed at Black Point until an iron can buoy arrives at Digby for Black Point.

AMERICAN FISH TRUSTS AND THE FISHERMEN.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER asked :

1. What licenses to fish have, if any, the following parties : William Robinson, Selkirk Storage and Transportation Company, Ainsworth & Ganly, J. Clark, Charles Noble?

2. Is the Government aware whether or no that these licensees are the paid agents of United States fishing firms which control the fisheries of Georgian Bay and Lake Huron?

3. Are the Government aware that Canadian fishermen complain that the agents of American fish trusts pay through the above means three cents each for Lake Winnipeg whitefish averaging four pounds each, while these fish are sold by the trust for twelve cents per pound?

4. Has the hon. the Minister of Marine and Fisheries any reports showing that in this way United States firms control the catch of fish in Canadian waters and sell Canadian fish at high prices, the catching of which brings but little to the fishermen; and if not, will the Minister obtain reports on the above at an early day?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). 1 and 2. None to any of these parties. 3. The Department of Marine and Fisheries is aware that Canadian fishermen complain that the agents of the United States Fish Trusts pay very low prices for the fish purchased from Canadian fishermen and sell the same at a high price in American cities. 4. There are reports on file to the effect that United States firms largely control the catch of fish in Canadian inland waters, and the department has done whatever could be done to counteract this state of things. The department does not grant licenses to fish now in any of the great lakes in Ontario and only to British subjects in Manitoba and the North-west Territories.

MAIL ARRANGEMENTS, GRAND VIEW, P. E. I.

Mr. MARTIN asked :

Has the Government received a petition from the people of Grand View, in Prince Edward Island, asking for a change in their mail arrangements? If so, what are the changes proposed and asked for? Does the Government intend to accede to the prayer of petitioners? If not, why not?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Mr. Mulock). A petition was received in the department in December, 1892, from the postmaster at Grand View, and a number of others, asking that the mails for Grand View, which are now exchanged with the mail courier on the route between Caledonia and Orwell, be exchanged with Charlottetown in closed bags, and that Grand View be the distributing office for the offices at Murray Harbour Road, Montague Cross, Caledonia, Rona and Iris. The inspector reported against both of these proposals, and the late Government took no action on the petition. On the 25th March, 1895, these matters were again brought to the attention of the department by the postmaster at Grand View, and on the advice of Mr. A. Martin, who, I understand, is the present member for Queen's East, who was consulted by the late Government, it was decided to make no change in the arrangements. In July, 1897, the same matters were again brought forward, and as the officers of the department reported against the changes asked for, the arrangements have remained unchanged.

FERRY BETWEEN BUFFALO, N.Y., AND CRYSTAL BEACH, ONT.

Mr. McCLEARY asked :

1. Has a license been granted to any persons to ply boats or vessels between Buffalo, N.Y., and Crystal Beach, Canada?

2. If so, to whom and when?

3. Does such license grant the privilege of running boats on the Sabbath?

4. If such license has been given, is it an ordinary ferry one?

5. Are the licensees supposed to carry vehicles drawn with horses?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE (Sir Henri Joly de Lotbinière). 1. No. 2. A license has been promised to Mr. Fred. W. Hill, and the department is only awaiting certain information to enable it to recommend the granting of the license. 3. Yes, between the 15th of June and the 30th of September, the regulations require that at least three round trips shall be made daily, between the hours of ten o'clock in the forenoon and ten o'clock at night, unless such trips are rendered impracticable by stress of weather. 4. When the license is issued it will be an ordinary license granted under the provisions of the "Ferries Act." The regulations of all ferries are not exactly similar, but vary according to the requirements of the locality where the ferry is run. 5. The lease heretofore granted did not require the lessee to accommodate vehicles drawn by horses.

LONDON LETTER-CARRIERS.

Mr. BEATTIE (by Mr. Taylor) asked :

1. Are the letter-carriers at London required to walk and not allowed free transportation on the street railway ?

2. Are the letter-carriers of Kingston, which has about half the population of London, provided with free transportation ?

3. Does the Government intend increasing the salaries of the letter-carriers to where they would have been had not their increases been stopped ?

4. Will they receive their increases that have been stopped, in a lump sum, or how ?

5. How many men are temporarily appointed in the post office at London ?

6. Is the Government aware those temporarily appointed men are allowed no holidays ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Mr. Mullock). 1 and 2. Transportation by street railway to the full extent required by the public interest is provided at the expense of the department for the letter-carriers at London and Kingston when on duty. 3 and 4. The Estimates show the increases proposed by the Government. 5. Nine. 6. The Government is not aware that temporary appointees are not allowed holidays.

STEEL BOXES FOR INDIAN DEPARTMENT.

Mr. HODGINS (by Mr. Taylor) asked :

Were a number of steel boxes purchased for use of the Interior or Indian Departments during the past year ? If so, how many ? By whom were they supplied ? Were tenders called for by public advertisement, or by letter ? If by letter, how many parties were notified ? To whom was the order given ? Why were not tenders publicly invited ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Mr. Tarte). Yes, 3,744—2,960 by the Eclipse Office Furniture Company of Ottawa, and 784 by the Office Specialty Company of Toronto. These are the only two Canadian companies known to the department as manufacturing this special article, and were asked to supply the same in consequence.

REPORT.

Report of the North-west Mounted Police for 1893.—(Sir Wilfrid Laurier.)

DEALINGS IN LAND BY GOVERNMENT AGENTS.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton). Before the Orders of the Day are proceeded with, I wish to advert for a moment to a matter that was referred to by the hon. member for Marquette (Mr. Roche) on Friday last. On motion to adjourn the House, he referred to a report in the Winnipeg "Telegram," which stated that an officer of the Department of the Interior named John Harrower had aided in some fraudulent transactions in the purchase of land. The gist of the hon. gentleman's complaint, as I understood it, was that this man being an officer of the Department of the Interior had trafficked in public lands and had done so for the purpose of defrauding the settler. I was quite satisfied when the hon. gentleman made the statement that we never had had an officer of that name and that the man referred to was not and had not been an officer, but I did not care to make a statement of that kind without referring to the public records. I desire now to say that the man referred to is not an officer of a department of the Government and never has been, and, so far as any connection of his with the department is concerned, the story is made out of whole cloth.

THE CASE OF MR. BAUER.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton). My hon. friend the member for Picton (Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper) has asked me once or twice about a man named Bauer who desired certain consideration in connection with the Dominion Lands Survey. I desire to say that at his urgent request I have ordered a meeting of the board to be called for the purpose of passing on his papers.

SCARLET FEVER AMONG THE GALICIAN.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton). The hon. member for West Assiniboia (Mr. Davin) called attention to the report that there had been an outbreak of scarlet fever at or near Saltcoats, amongst the Galician immigrants. I wish to inform the House, that there has been no outbreak of scarlet fever at the place mentioned, but there has been an outbreak of scarlet fever at a place called Strathclair. But it was not brought into the country by the Galician immigrants ; they got the fever in the city of Winnipeg, where they were temporarily stationed.

DISMISSAL OF THE POSTMASTER AT NORTH SYDNEY.

Mr. McDOUGALL. I desire to repeat my question to the Postmaster General with respect to the report that the postmaster at North Sydney has been dismissed.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Mr. Mullock). In reply to the hon. gentleman's question, I desire to say that some months ago, complaints reached the department regarding the management of the post office at North Sydney. The matter was referred to the inspector, Mr. Macdonald, who made an investigation and reported that the general management of the office was unsatisfactory, and occasioned a great deal of dissatisfaction. For these reasons a change of postmasters was decided on, and, I think, has gone into effect.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Who was appointed to the office?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I have not the name at hand.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). Robert Musgrave.

CORRESPONDENCE RESPECTING INSOLVENCY LEGISLATION.

Mr. BERGERON. I would like to ask my right hon. friend the Premier (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) if he will lay before the House the correspondence of the Montreal Board of Trade and other boards of trade in the Dominion, asking for insolvency legislation.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). If my hon. friend (Mr. Bergeron) will move for the correspondence, I shall be happy to bring it down.

Mr. BERGERON. My right hon. friend knows how long it will take to move for a return. I simply ask him if he will be kind enough to bring down the correspondence.

The PRIME MINISTER. Next Monday my hon. friend can move his motion.

INQUIRIES FOR RETURNS.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would again call the attention of the Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Blair) to an Order passed by the House for papers in respect to the transfer or lease of a property connected with the railway at Grand Narrows. The Order was passed, I think, about six weeks ago, and I would like to know when the papers will be brought down.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). I remember the hon. gentleman asking me a question, and I gave him a reply. I will make a note of it.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Before the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) goes away—I am glad to see him able to be in the House again—I would like to remind him that an Order was passed on the 17th of May regarding the production of Mr. Coste's report, and his special trip to the Yukon district.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Mr. Tarte). I remember very well that all the documents were ready, and I do not understand why they are not already before the House. There is no objection whatever to having all these papers brought down.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). My impression is that that report was brought down some days ago.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I know the papers were all ready before I left.

DAMAGES TO FARM LANDS IN LINDSAY.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Mr. Mullock). Before the Orders of the Day are proceeded with, I desire to read for the information of the House a letter from Mr. R. J. McLaughlin, of Lindsay. The House will remember that some days ago the hon. member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) made some observations concerning that gentleman, and Mr. McLaughlin desires to have his connection with the matter of these damages of record.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. member will move to lay that on the Table.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Yes. This letter was sent to the Solicitor General (Mr. Fitzpatrick) and forwarded by the Solicitor General to me to read, as he cannot be present:

Lindsay, June 8th, 1899.

Dear Sir,—I am in receipt of your letter of the 20th of June, referring to certain questions placed upon the Order papers by Mr. Hughes. The following is the statement of the facts in connection with the matter, which I will thank you very much to make public in the House. As charges and insinuations such as Mr. Hughes is continually making in the House are calculated to do our firm considerable injury in a professional way, and we have no redress for, or protection from, malice that exhibits itself in the House of Commons.

About the year 1890 or 1891, the dam at Fencelon Falls was raised 20 inches, and it was alleged by the farmers surrounding Cameron Lake that their low lands had been flooded in consequence. Mr. Hughes had these claims in hand as representative of the constituency from 1892 till 1896, and as a result of his efforts a couple of affidavits have been filed in the department, made by lumbermen interested in the dam, to the effect that the water on the lake had not been raised by reason of the increased height of the dam, but that compensation had been made by deepening the old slide and the construction of a new one. No evidence had ever been taken from the farmers, and the matter had been practically decided against them without their being heard at all. In the fall of 1895 a number of the farmers consulted our firm, and instructed us to take up their case against the Government as solicitors, and to proceed by petition of right in the Exchequer Court. In the spring of 1896 the farmers held a meeting, and all agreed to join together and contribute to the expense of obtaining a settlement, and to retain our firm. This was irrespective of politics. Every one around the lake agreed to come in. We took the matter up, and we insisted on the Government taking the level of the water, and after a great deal of correspondence and a couple of trips personally to Ottawa, Mr. Blair agreed to leave the matter to George H. Pope, the Government valuator, to examine the grounds around the lake, and take the statement of the farmers and make a report. The writer attended with Mr. Pope over every farm in dispute, and took the statement and evidence of the farmers, which clearly established the facts that the average height of the water had been considerably raised and a considerable amount of damage done.

Upon Mr. Pope's report the matter was settled, and somewhere about $1,600 was eventually paid to the farmers in compensation. We acted for the farmers as solicitors, and although we had a great deal of work in the first place in obtaining a settlement, and a great deal of work in having it carried through, as we had to answer the requisition of the Department of Justice as to title in every case, and prepare and procure execution of a great many conveyances, releases, discharges of mortgages, &c., in order to obtain this settlement. Our disbursements in the matter were about $150, and the total amount paid us by our clients was $308, disbursements and all. Our account was considerably more, but it was settled with our clients to their entire satisfaction for an amount which would be an equivalent to 20 per cent on the amount realized. In these matters we acted solely as solicitors for the farmers.

Judge Barron was at that time agent for the Minister of Justice, and acted for the Government in the matter, and whatever fees the Government paid were paid to him with the exception of one case (Suggitt), the final settlement of which was delayed for about a year later than the others, and before which the Hon. Mr. Mills, owing to the elevation of Mr. Barron to the bench, had asked me to act as agent for the Minister of Justice, and in that case the Department of Justice allowed us the ordinary fees for preparing release and passing title. Up to that time we had had no professional relationship whatever with the Government, and never received a cent for professional fees on these or any other matters from the Government.

The Cameron Lake claims that were allowed were: Sackett, J. L. Brown, J. Palmer, T. Moffatt, W. H. Graham, R. R. Graham, M. Graham, William Isaac, R. N. Moffat, Joseph Pearn, W. T. Eade, Adam Potts, N. McIntyre, R. Byrnell, J. Suggitt, and several others that were not allowed.

This was a matter entirely between our firm and our clients, in which the Government had no interest or information as far as we know. We were employed and paid for professional services in the ordinary way, and the amount that we received from our clients was not over the ordinary professional fees. It was the ordinary payment of fees, except that the bill was very much reduced. Our clients were perfectly satisfied, and none of them ever thought or intended that we should do this work for them and pay out a large amount for disbursements in the matters out of our own pockets.

Since the writer was appointed agent for the Minister of Justice here, a year ago, we have had a number of titles to investigate and settlements to obtain in connection with expropriated lands, for which we have received the ordinary Government fees, amounting in all to about $75, over and above disbursements, and in any of these matters in which we have been employed by the Government, our fees have been wholly paid by the Government, and we have received nothing whatever from anybody else; and, in like manner, before we acted as agent for the Minister of Justice, anything we received was paid by our clients and the Government paid us nothing, and we had nothing whatever to do with them.

Yours truly,
R. J. McLAUGHLIN.

I beg to move for leave to lay this letter upon the Table.

Mr. SAM. HUGHES (North Victoria). Before this motion is passed, I wish to say a word. The letter, communication, or whatever it may be termed, which has just been presented by the Postmaster General (Mr. Mulock), bears out on the face of it every charge, every word, that I uttered the other day in the House. I would like to ask the Postmaster General—I have not seen the paper yet, and could not catch what was said—but did he say that Mr. McLaughlin stated that he had entered suit in the Exchequer Court for this money? If so, then I stand here to say that that statement is false.

An hon. MEMBER. He did not say so.

Mr. HUGHES. There was something in it about having entered a suit in the Exchequer Court. The facts are just as I told you. Mr. McLaughlin was the Liberal candidate in the fall of 1895, and he went to these farmers around the lake. These farmers never went to him, not one of them. He went to the farmers and said: Why don't you get the Tory Government to settle these claims around here. That is just what was done. He tried to make political capital out of it, and sought to get votes in the ensuing election by telling these men that they should have their claims. Now, about the settlement of this matter. Not one farmer ever had any claim prior to 1895. The dam was only raised—I will not say the exact year, but the dam was only raised a short time previous to that year, and the interests of the farmers in that community were being well looked after, not the slightest fear of that. Thousands of dollars were paid in settlement of the claims, and not one farthing had ever found its way into the pocket of any friend of the Liberal-Conservative party in that county. I say this is the first instance that has ever come to my knowledge where any money was taken by any person as a political reward in the county in relation to Dominion claims. Mr. McLaughlin states in his communication that these farmers came to him in the fall of 1895. That is untrue; Mr. McLaughlin went to these farmers and canvassed them on political lines. He states that in the spring of 1896 a meeting of these farmers was called. That is not true; the meeting was called after the return of the present Government to power. It was in the fall of 1896 that he met these farmers and made an arrangement by which he undertook to get their claims paid by the Government, he, having the patronage of the riding, and arranging for a commission of 20 per cent in some instances, and more than 20 per cent in others, of the claims. More than that, the Government would not deal with these farmers themselves. That was the point I was getting at the other day. When these farmers would undertake to deal with the Government directly, instructions were given, not only to them, but to any one else who had anything to do with this matter, to the valuers, that they must look to Mr. McLaughlin, and I know that, when these valuers came there, they could not proceed without consulting the defeated Liberal candidate for North Victoria upon this question. I asked the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals, to whom the cheques were made payable, but I have not found out yet. In the letter Mr. McLaughlin has written to the hon. Solicitor General (Mr. Fitzpatrick), he seeks to make some capital by saying, that from 1892 to 1896 these claims had remained unsettled. I want to tell this House and that gentleman that these claims were not in existence in 1892. It was not until 1894, or 1895 possibly, that these people found out that their lands had been flooded owing to the raising of this dam. I know that these claims were being looked into and settled, and that hundreds of other claims were settled all along the line of that canal, and that not a farthing was extracted—I use the term “extracted” advisedly—by any person. We find this gentleman posing in his relationship to the Government as the representative of that riding, and as the gentleman who holds the political patronage there. That is his political relationship to the Government, and he turns around and levies a charge of 20 per cent upon the people. When he attended the meetings of these farmers with the valuers, what was his conduct? His conduct was to try and persuade the valuers to force up the prices as high as possible, so that, after he got his 20 per cent, the farmer would still have a fair value for his land. One of the valuers, I think, was Mr. Pope. If the valuers were doing their duty, what business had Mr. McLaughlin there at all? Has the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals not sufficient confidence in Mr. Pope, a gentleman who, I believe, has valued thousands and tens of thousands of claims for this Government, to go there without having this man hanging around him? If Mr. Pope would give a correct valuation, what, in the name of common sense, was this gentleman doing there? He had no earthly right there. He was there to screw up the price as high as possible, in order that he might get his 20 per cent. If the reports along these waters are true, these farmers are not at all satisfied. They find that this man could not bulldoze and browbeat the valuator, that the valuation he made was an honest valuation. This gentleman either took 20 per cent from the people over and above what he was entitled to, or he took 20 per cent from the farmers off a fair valuation. He stands convicted of having extracted from the farmers this 20 per cent.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the hon. gentleman who has just spoken (Mr. Hughes), if I understood him correctly in stating that the Government would not deal with the claims of these farmers, but insisted upon the intervention of some third party, intending to suggest that Mr. McLaughlin was the third party intervening in the matter.

Mr. HUGHES. I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals, if he did not instruct these valuers to go direct to Mr. McLaughlin and consult with him.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I am asking the hon. gentleman a question.

Mr. HUGHES. I am answering the hon. gentleman by asking him another question.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. If the hon. gentleman answers my question, I will answer his.

Mr. HUGHES. Did the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals, or his department, instruct the valuers to consult with Mr. McLaughlin? I know that, when the valuers reached Lindsay, they could not proceed without consulting with Mr. McLaughlin. It seems strange that these valuers should begin by negotiating with Mr. McLaughlin.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. It appears to be impossible to elicit a direct answer to the question I put to the hon. gentleman. It only harmonizes with the general course that the hon. gentleman has pursued in this connection, and I may say, that he does not appear to advantage in this transaction. The fact that Mr. McLaughlin was his opponent in the election contest appears to be the reason why the hon. gentleman is taking the present course. I think it does not add to his dignity.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order. The hon. Minister is imputing motives to me, although I may say, that anything that gentleman may say has no terrors for me.

Mr. SPEAKER. There is really no point of order in that.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I wish to say, that if the hon. gentleman means to say what he has said, what he does not seem to be willing to follow up, that the Government declined, or were unwilling to deal with these claims directly, he is stating that which he is not authorized to say, and which is not in accordance with the facts.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker,—

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order, order.

Mr. HUGHES. May I ask the hon. Minister a question?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Yes.

Mr. HUGHES. Did the hon. Minister instruct the valuers to call on Mr. McLaughlin and negotiate through him for the settlement of these claims?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I certainly did not give such instructions.

Mr. HUGHES. I may say—

Some hon. MEMBERS. Sit down; order.

Mr. HUGHES. This matter will be before the Public Accounts Committee, and we will find out then who is telling the straight story.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. In connection with these claims, the same thing occurred as occurs in connection with all claims for damages against the department. The claims came into the department; we inquired into them, and we sent out Mr. Pope, who has been the valuator in the department for many years. He is not one of my appointees, for whom I am responsible, except to the extent of having retained him in the department, having found him there. I found him a very satisfactory officer, in the main, and I thought he was doing his duty, and, when these claims came in, Mr. Pope was instructed to go down there to see these farmers and judge as to whether or not damages had occurred by reason of the action of the Government in consequence of the raising of this dam, or upon any ground on account of which responsibility could attach to the Government. He went there, in accordance with his instructions. I do not recollect, but it may be, that Mr. Pope, in view of the fact that Mr. McLaughlin was pressing these claims and was acting on behalf of these people, and was able to tell where these people would be found, had an interview with Mr. McLaughlin; but Mr. Pope was not instructed either to confer as to the valuation of this property, or be guided in the slightest degree by Mr. McLaughlin's views or wishes in the matter. I am sorry that I was not aware that my hon. colleague (Mr. Mulock) was going to bring this matter up to-day. If I had been I would have brought to this House a letter which I received a few days ago, immediately after the hon. gentleman had called attention to this matter in the House, and which, I think, would have thrown a great deal of light on this transaction. I wish to say, here, that I do not think the reflections which the hon. gentleman has cast upon Mr. Pope, are warranted by anything that has occurred in reference to this transaction.

Mr. BLAIR.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) did not reflect upon Mr. Pope.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. The hon. gentleman did reflect upon Mr. Pope, if it is possible to use any language which would reflect upon any one. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Hughes) implied that Mr. Pope was induced and was prevailed upon by Mr. McLaughlin to raise the value of the property beyond that which he otherwise would have fixed on—

Mr. HUGHES. I said the very opposite.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS—so that Mr. McLaughlin might get an increased percentage as a result. That is a reflection.

Mr. HUGHES. What I said was that Mr. McLaughlin endeavoured to induce Mr. Pope to bring the price up, and Mr. Pope would not do it.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Mr. Pope has written to me to say—and I shall bring the letter to the House since the hon. gentleman makes the statement—Mr. Pope has written to me to say that Mr. McLaughlin was not concerned at all with him, and that Mr. McLaughlin did not try to influence him, if I remember the letter, in placing a valuation on this property. Mr. Pope did his duty fearlessly and faithfully to the best of his ability and made a report to the department.

Mr. HUGHES. Did the Minister say that Mr. McLaughlin did not try to influence Mr. Pope to raise the price. If he said so, it is not true.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I received this letter from Mr. Pope, and although I did not closely examine it, if I remember it aright, Mr. Pope in that letter entirely exonerates Mr. McLaughlin from having attempted to do anything of the kind.

Mr. TAYLOR. Produce the letter.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I will produce the letter, and it will speak for itself.

Mr. GEO. McHUGH (South Victoria). When this matter was being discussed the other day, I stated that I was quite satisfied that if Mr. McLaughlin had the opportunity to explain matters he would come out of this charge with credit to himself. The more the whole thing is sifted the better Mr. McLaughlin appears, and the more inquiry we have into it the better Mr. McLaughlin will appear in the transaction. That gentleman was charged to-day with going to these farmers in order to make political capital out of the matter. I would like to ask the hon. member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes) if he would not be one of the first to charge Mr. McLaughlin with political corruption, if Mr. McLaughlin had done this legal work for the farmers and charged them no fee for it. But because Mr. McLaughlin charged his clients a legitimate legal fee for doing the work they employed him to do, the hon. member (Mr. Hughes) charges him with political corruption, although he no doubt would also have charged Mr. McLaughlin with political corruption if he charged no fee at all. I am quite satisfied that if the Minister brings down the answer to the question as to whether these cheques were made payable to the farmers or to Mr. McLaughlin, he will find they were made payable to the farmers and not to Mr. McLaughlin. Mr. McLaughlin was dealing with the Government for the farmers as their solicitor. That is the only connection Mr. McLaughlin had with the matter. He received no fees from the Government. He was employed by the farmers to look after their interests and they paid his fees. It is a very natural thing, if people have a claim against the Government or against anybody else, that they should employ a solicitor to take up their case, and it is also very natural they should pay him for his work. All Mr. McLaughlin had to do with this transaction was in acting as solicitor for these men who were seeking redress from the Government.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Mr. Mulock). When I asked the permission of the House to submit this letter, I had no idea that the statement of facts contained in it would have been the subject of any controversy or discussion. I am personally acquainted with Mr. McLaughlin (as are other hon. gentlemen on both sides of the House), and I think you will search in vain in Ontario to find any one who will charge him with not being strictly professional in the discharge of his duties. May I say that the floor of the House is not the proper place to deal with the professional ethics of gentlemen who are not members of this Parliament. There is a tribunal in our province, before which professional gentlemen of the law may be cited if they are guilty of any offence against the rules that apply to them as officers of the courts. And if the hon. gentleman (Mr. Hughes) desired to make a point against the Administration, there is a better way than a discussion here where nothing can be determined. There are the ordinary committees of the House, and if these committees are not sufficient to elicit the truth special committees could be supplied. I think the hon. gentleman will find the Government most willing to place the whole machinery of Parliament at his disposal to get at the facts, so far as they are a proper subject of inquiry at the hands of this Parliament. Speaking as one well acquainted with Mr. McLaughlin, both professionally and politically, I say that I doubt if there is any person at the bar of Ontario to-day who more deservedly enjoys the respect and confidence of his clients and of the public, than does Mr. McLaughlin.

Mr. BERGERON. We have witnessed a very extraordinary proceeding in the House to-day. A few days ago, a member of Parliament, acting on his right, asked a question from his seat, and the Minister of the Crown refused to answer it because he said the question was not put in proper form. To-day a Minister of the Crown answers that very question which should have been answered a few days ago, and he tries to make political capital out of it. If that is allowed to go on, the rules of the House will certainly suffer.

Mr. FOSTER. I would like to ask for my own information: How far it is allowable for a member of Parliament to bring a letter written to him, for whatever purpose, from any person outside of Parliament, make a motion that that letter should be submitted on the Table of the House, and found a discussion on it? It does seem to me if this is allowable, that we can undertake methods of political warfare in this House which I have not seen initiated up to the present time. A Minister has a perfect right to answer a question which has been put to him, and to answer it at the proper time, but it does not seem to me it is regular that any one member of this House—and surely members of the House have the same privileges as the Ministers in that respect—can bring in a letter written by a gentleman outside the House and can read it, and then make a motion to have that letter laid on the Table of the House and found a discussion on it. If that is allowable, it is a matter which can be followed up to the complete disturbance of the whole business of the House. I look upon the proceeding as being absolutely irregular.

Mr. SPEAKER. It strikes me in this way. In the first place this is not an answer to a question, and as I understand it, the adjournment of the House was moved the other day and a charge was made by the hon. member (Mr. Hughes). It ended there for the time being. A letter has been addressed to a Minister of the Crown since then, relating to departmental as well as to personal matters. It would be manifestly unfair and irregular for a Minister to read any such letter, unless there was a motion made at the time which enabled a discussion to take place upon that letter. Therefore, when a Minister of the Crown receives a document relating to a departmental or public matter and desires to submit it to the House, I think it is proper and right for a motion to that effect to be made. For that reason I think that this is in order. I do not think any Minister of the Crown should do that about a private matter. I think if this letter is a public matter it is within the rules, and is, I believe, according to the practice of Parliament.

Mr. FOSTER. For information and further guidance, do I understand that the idea of the Chair is, that a letter can be written by a gentleman outside of this House in reply to whatever a representative of the people inside this House may say from his place? Do I understand that a letter may be written by a person outside who feels that he is aggrieved; written to a member of Parliament and then that it is perfectly proper for the member of Parliament to get up in the House on an occasion like this, and read that letter, and make a motion to lay it on the Table? If that is the ruling, it seems to me we will find that numbers of citizens in this country, feeling that they have been aggrieved, or misrepresented, or that their views have not been properly expressed by some gentleman who has a seat in the House, will undertake to send to private members long explanations and have them read in the House, and have discussions founded upon them. So much with reference to the general question. Am I to understand, Mr. Speaker, that you rule that a Minister of the Crown, on an occasion like this, and in reference to a subject like this, has any other privileges in this House than a private member? Surely that cannot be what the Chair has intended this House to conclude! But his words carry that conviction, at least to me. I beg leave to dispute the assumption that a Minister of the Crown has any rights or privileges in this House that a private member does not have. It does seem to me that this whole business has been irregular.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Mr. Speaker, if there is a point of order, it seems to me it ought to have been taken when my hon. friend made his motion.

Mr. FOSTER. It was raised before the discussion took place.

The PRIME MINISTER. Coming to the merits of the case, apart from the question of order, the question stands thus. The character of a gentleman was assailed on the floor of this House some time ago, and this gentleman wants to put his character right before the country.

Mr. BERGERON. Why did the Minister not answer in time?

The PRIME MINISTER. The Minister did not answer in time because the question was not properly put.

Mr. BERGERON. That does not put this in order.

The PRIME MINISTER. The hon. gentleman forgets some things which it seems to me he ought not to forget. The Minister at the time refused to answer the question which was put by the hon. member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes). Thereupon the hon. member for North Victoria moved the adjournment of the House, and upon that motion assailed the character of Mr. McLaughlin. He has repeated the charges to-day. Mr. McLaughlin puts into the hands of a friend—it does not matter whether he is a member of the Government or another member of Parliament—a letter which will give him an opportunity of vindicating his character; and if the hon. member for York will go back a few years, I am sure he will remember several cases in which this has been done before.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not remember one.

The PRIME MINISTER. I have no occasion in my mind, but I will undertake before the debate is over—

Mr. FOSTER. Does my hon. friend say that there is a single precedent for any private member of the House or Minister of the Crown, on going into the Orders of the Day, reading a letter from a private citizen reflecting upon statements that have been made in the House, and then moving to lay that private letter on the Table of the House? If that is true, I could bring to this House an editorial from a newspaper or a letter to a newspaper or any document whatever making animadversions on members of this House for views expressed which this editorial writer or letter writer might consider reflected upon himself. I would have a perfect right to bring that matter here, and read it and make a motion that it be laid on the Table of the House. Surely nothing but public documents, relating to the public business, may be laid on the Table of the House. I doubt if my hon. friend can find a precedent for this.

The PRIME MINISTER. I do not recall at this moment a case in which that was done in the way in which it has been done to-day; but private letters have again and again been read by members of the House to vindicate the characters of gentlemen referred to in the House.

Mr. FOSTER. There is a way in which the hon. Postmaster General could have put himself in order to read a private letter; but the hon. gentleman, instead of taking the constitutional method of putting himself in order, tried to put himself in order by a practice that has never been adopted in this House.

Mr. BERGERON. The danger is this, that if a gentleman of the name of McLaughlin can defend his honour by writing a letter to a Minister of the Crown to be read here, every member will say, why did not Major Walsh write a letter to some member of the Government?

The PRIME MINISTER. Because there was no occasion.

Mr. BERGERON. This shows that unless the rules of the House are carried out, there is great danger.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I wish to support the point of order raised, by a casual reference to Sir John Bourinot's work. For instance, it is said at page 408 :

Nor is it in order to read articles in newspapers, letters or other communications, whether printed or written, emanating from persons outside of the House, and referring to, or commenting on, or denying anything said by a member, or expressing any opinion reflecting on proceedings within the House.

I have always supposed that that was an elementary rule, and that these letters could only be read or considered, or a motion founded upon them, by the indulgence of the House. For instance, the Prime Minister has referred to that spirit of fairness which sometimes leads the House of Commons to make an exception in the case of a man outside who has been attacked, and who has made some explanation. But, bearing in mind this practice, I was always under the impression, and am yet, that this is a matter of indulgence, dependent upon the universal consent of the House. The mischief which the hon. member for York has pointed out is the real and serious mischief that would result from such a rule being laid down as you, Sir, have suggested, that it is the right of a member either to fortify himself or his arguments or to simply be the mouthpiece of some one outside of the House, by reading a letter, because, if a letter, what is to be the length of it? And if the door is once opened, the speech will not be the speech or the views of the member, necessarily, but the criticisms and arguments of people outside of the House. That is the danger of such a rule, and I notice that in England, even in the case of an attack upon character, the exception, where the House is disposed to listen indulgently, is applied to the case of high public functionaries and officers in the army and navy. At page 420, it is said :

The House will also always be disposed to listen indulgently to explanations in refutation of statements injuriously affecting the conduct of important public functionaries or officers of the army or navy.

I do not remember a case where the House of Commons of England has extended that indulgence beyond public servants; and in the case of public servants, the Minister would exercise a certain discretion in regard to the character of the explanation which he would lay before the House. In regard to other parties, there is no opportunity for the exercise of that discretion; the rule seems to be rigid, and can only be waived by unanimous consent; and the case in which that consent is refused would seem to me to be an extreme case.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I think there is a great deal of force in the point taken by the hon. member for York, N.B. (Mr. Foster); and, for my part, although the mover of the motion, I may say that it was moved more in deference to the suggestion that fell from the Chair than from my thinking the motion was in order. When reading the letter or comments made, I was availing myself of the privilege allowed at this stage of the proceedings, not supposing that there was any controversy; and when the Speaker suggested that I should lay the letter on the Table, I fell in with that suggestion; but I concede that to establish a precedent of that kind would be objectionable from many stand-points, and I myself am inclined to take the view that to move such a motion, unless by the common consent of the House, is not in harmony with the rules of the House.

Mr. FOSTER. I am very glad that my hon. friend comes to that conclusion, but we cannot rest content with anything less than the opinion of the Chair.

Mr. J. COSTIGAN (Victoria, N.B.) I just want to say, that, to my mind, it appears that if we had had more regard for the proper observation of the rules of the House, when this incident occurred, there would be no such discussion as has arisen here to-day. A question was put by, I think, the hon. member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes), and the Minister who was expected to reply, took objection to the wording and form of that question, and suggested that, if amended, the answer would be given. The hon. member refused to modify the question, and the Minister felt justified in refusing to answer.

It has always been a rule of the House that the Government of the day, being obliged to answer all questions properly put, have an equal right to refuse to answer questions improperly put. If the question had been modified that day, the answer would have been given; but what makes it a special case, deserving of special consideration, is the fact that the answer not having been given—for good reason, I think—immediately on the refusal to reply, several prominent gentlemen on this side came to the conclusion that that was an evidence of guilt on the part of the person named in the question. It was, therefore, put before the public, and in "Hansard" the opinion was expressed, that the refusal of the Minister to reply was apparently because he had no answer that would not incriminate the party named Mr. McLaughlin, and the matter went to the country that way, which is very unfair.

The hon. gentleman need not smile, because he was the one who put the contention, that, no matter how improperly a question is put, reflecting upon the character of some person, unless the Government immediately answer it, there is a presumption of guilt against that person. Therefore, you might put a hundred questions upon the paper, implying guilt, and though the questions were evidently improper, if the Government took the ground that they were improper and refused to reply, their refusal would be taken as a presumption of guilt in each case.

It was a bad precedent to establish. As to the point of order raised in connection with the letter just read, I do not wish to anticipate the decision of the Chair, but merely to call attention to what gave rise to what is called the irregular proceeding of to-day. If the rule had been observed in the first instance, there would have been no cause for that discussion to-day.

Mr. SPEAKER. Undoubtedly, this motion could not possibly be in order without the unanimous consent of the House, perhaps for more reasons than one. At any rate, it is not in order, because no notice was given, and, therefore, an objection being taken, I have to rule it out of order. With reference to the suggestion made by me, when the hon. Minister was reading the letter, that he should make a motion, he was just beginning to read it, and I could not tell what was going to follow. I could not see any justification for his reading a letter, unless he made a motion; and, when he made the motion, if the House did not object, he was in order. However, I think it is quite clear that this motion is out of order in its present shape; and, with reference to the way in which a document of this nature might be brought forward or might not be brought forward, I would rather reserve my decision until a case arises when it is absolutely necessary to decide, and such a case has not come up to-day.

Mr. BERGERON. Under the circumstances, in accordance with your ruling, Mr. Speaker, I suppose the whole thing will be struck off "Hansard."

Mr. SPEAKER. I have nothing to do with "Hansard." That is a matter for the Committee on Debates. It is not for me to say what should or should not go into "Hansard."

Mr. BERGERON. But the whole thing will appear in "Hansard," although you have ruled it out of order.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman perhaps should have taken the objection, or perhaps the Speaker should have taken it, at an earlier stage. However, that is my ruling at present.

Mr. BERGERON. Then, according to your ruling, it remains in "Hansard." I leave it to the Chair, whether that is right.

Mr. FOSTER. I hope that the members of the Government will not so mislead the House again.

SUPPLY.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding) moved that the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed to, and the House again resolved itself into Committee of Supply.

Mr. COSTIGAN.

(In the Committee.)

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). As we are very near the end of the current fiscal year for which these supplementaries are brought down, I propose that the House should take up the supplementary estimates for the current year.

Further amount required for printing
Dominion notes..... $10,000

Mr. FOSTER. I think that my hon. friend has not passed, in the main Estimates, his vote for the printing of Dominion notes for the coming year, and there are some returns I have asked for in connection with this, which I would like to have down. I do not propose to make any stand on this estimate, as far as that is concerned, but I would like to ask, how much he took in the main Estimates last year for the printing of Dominion notes.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Forty thousand dollars. This adds $10,000. The circulation has been exceptionally large, so much so that at times we had difficulty in keeping up the supply, and that is the explanation of the increase.

Salaries of agents for country savings banks $650

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We made considerable reductions, and it turns out that we reduced the amount somewhat too much. We reduced the number of our agents, but find it was a mistake. The amounts given show a considerable reduction over the preceding year.

Mr. FOSTER. Is there any increase in the salaries?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No.

Further amount required for contingencies $1,000

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). This amount is in connection with the swearing in of Lord Minto at Quebec. This is usually rather a costly business, and I shall read the items.

Mr. FOSTER. The right hon. gentleman need not read the items, as I see them.

Department of Militia and Defence—
Additional amount required for clerical and other work, $525; printing and stationery, $2,600; sundries, $275..... $3,300

Mr. FOSTER. We would like some explanation of this.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Mr. Borden, King's). On the item of contingencies in the main estimate, I explained that our vote for many years had been too small, and in the main Estimates for this year I increased the vote, and stated that a sum would be required for the current year as usual. This is slightly larger than the vote of last year, but, I think, only $300. Last year the total vote under this head was $10,000 ; this year it will be $10,400. The reason for that is the increase in the account for printing and stationery owing to the large number of orders issued in the military branch by the new General. We have had to increase the cost of printing between $500 and $600. We had also to get additional clerical assistance, because, while the defence committee was sitting last autumn, we had to spare one of our best clerks for them and had to engage the services of another clerk in the meantime.

Mr. FOSTER. My hon. friend (Mr. Borden, King's) must be mistaken in the summing up in some way, I think. I find that in 1898-99, the total estimate for the Department of Militia and Defence on this account was $7,100. If you add this $3,300, you get a total of $10,400 for the current year. For the next year, commencing 1st July next, the hon. gentleman, with the experience of the past and current years before him, is only asking $9,000.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The amount expended last year, 1897-98, was $10,000, and the amount for the current year will be slightly more than that. The amount for the coming year, as the hon. gentleman said, is $9,000, and we hope to be able to get along with that amount.

Mr. MONTAGUE. How are you going to make the saving ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I can hardly explain that in detail to the hon. gentleman. This vote is absolutely required ; it is practically expended now.

Mr. MONTAGUE. How does this compare with 1896 ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. It is about the same, but I cannot give the exact figures at the moment.

Mr. MONTAGUE. The hon. gentleman stated in 1896 that the amount was extravagant.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The annual vote in the main Estimates for a number of years has been $7,100, and that has always been supplemented by a vote in the estimates for the current year, for about $2,000 or $3,000—I cannot give the exact figure. In fact, the expenditure has been between $9,000 and $10,000 a year for the last three or four years.

Department of Inland Revenue—

Further amount required for printing and stationery, $400 ; clerical assistance, $125	$525
---	-------

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE (Sir Henri Joly de Lotbinière). I may explain that this was owing to the department taking from this year's vote $530 incurred during the previous fiscal year. We had to take so much of this year's vote—

Mr. MONTAGUE. On what authority did the hon. gentleman (Sir Henri Joly de Lotbinière) pay last year's accounts out of this year's vote ?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. On the authority of necessity.

Mr. MONTAGUE. That is a new authority which hon. gentlemen in office seem to appear to appeal to quite constantly. I do not think this House will accept that statement as being a reason.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. If my hon. friend thinks I am guilty, all I can do is to admit my guilt and say that I will try and do better another time.

Mr. MONTAGUE. This is not a question of guilty or not guilty, but a question of whether the law shall be observed or not. If the hon. gentleman finds he has an account over from last year, there is a legal way of getting the money to pay it, but that way is not to take money voted by this House for a certain purpose after explanation and apply it to another purpose which the House has never heard of.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. But my hon. friend (Mr. Montague) will see that I am doing better this year. Last year I did not take the precaution of getting a vote in the supplementary Estimates ; this year I am trying to do better.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Before this item passes, I wish to bring to the attention of the Minister a matter which I mentioned to his deputy, in order that it may not be overlooked. Mr. Ryan, of the Weights and Measures office, Halifax, was dismissed in 1896 on the ground of alleged political partisanship. Subsequently, an Act was passed enabling the contributions to the superannuation fund to be paid back with interest at 5 per cent in such cases. I understand from Mr. Ryan that he has received from the department the contributions he paid into the fund, but he has never received any interest. I would be very glad, indeed, if the hon. Minister would make a note of it and see what is the reason.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. I was very sorry he did not write to me. I am going to take a note of it. Is it Mr. Ryan ?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Yes. I mentioned it this morning to the Deputy, and I merely wished to keep it in the mind of the hon. gentleman.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). These things have to pass the Treasury Board. So far as my memory goes, this discrepancy was never brought before the Board. I know the case of Mr.

Ryan. If he has not received the same as the others, it should be made right.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I am only stating what he has told me.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Would the Minister tell me how he got this account passed out of the present year's appropriation? By what power did he get this account paid out of this year's appropriation, and how did the Auditor General come to pass it?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. This is frequently done. I am going to inquire into this matter to see how far we have been breaking the law. But it is not the first time that it has been done.

Mr. MONTAGUE. The Minister of Finance will probably know how it came to be passed.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It would come under the notice of the Auditor General, who is generally very strict in examining these things. I could not answer the hon. gentleman's question off-hand. The Auditor General has passed it, and he, as a general rule, is not too ready to pass any items about which there is a shadow of doubt. However, we will promise to look into it.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I think we ought to allow it to stand. There is certainly no authority for the Government to pay an account of 1897 out of the appropriation for 1898; the Minister of Finance knows that well. It is only a small amount, but it is clearly irregular, to say the least, and we ought to have some information as to why it was paid, and on whose authority. The Minister has no right to pay it, the Council has no right to pay it, and the Auditor General has no right to pay it. This Parliament votes money for certain purposes, and the Government have no right to use it for any other purpose.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton). The hon. gentleman surely knows that it has been the practice constantly to do what has been done by the Minister of Inland Revenue; it has been done as a matter of course. I cannot speak of the practice of the House of Commons in former years before I entered it, but I am satisfied that the hon. gentleman will find by the records that it has been done as a matter of course. I can refer my hon. friend to a case in former years in which a sum certainly exceeding $50,000, I think it was about $70,000, was paid for immigration services out of the vote of one year, although the expenditure had been incurred for the former year. The case was referred to in the Auditor General's Report, as, I think, my hon. friend will find. It was called to my attention last year in a discussion on a similar case in connection with the Postmaster General's department. It has been a matter of discussion in the House before, that accounts have been carried on year after year until there was an enormous accumulated deficit. My hon. friend knows enough about departmental work to know that it is almost impossible to avoid things of that kind, but every Minister should avoid it as much as possible. I find the secretary of my department has furnished me with an explanation like this: That we were $530 short on an appropriation of $8,000 last year, and we had to pay it out of this year's appropriation. Sometimes that cannot be avoided.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I think the hon. gentleman is multiplying cases in which this has occurred. For my part, I know that during the short time I was in the Council, it was an exceedingly difficult matter, quite a process had to be gone through, with a special minute of Council showing the importance of the case, and all that kind of thing, before any such payment could be made. I was inquiring as to the process by which the matter went through, and how the Minister had authority to pay it. He says he paid it because it was a necessity. Other things are matters of necessity, but the Government do not undertake to meet the necessity without a vote of Parliament.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I would suggest, as it is rather desirable that the succeeding estimates should be passed, that we reserve this question, and when we come to the corresponding department in the main estimates, I will see that the information is furnished to the hon. gentleman.

The Department of Finance, including $2,000 to J. Fraser, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act	$150 00
Contingencies—Further amount required..	$300 00

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This increase is caused by the promotion of the gentleman named there, Mr. Fraser. His promotion took effect on the 1st day of October. The other item for contingencies is the general expenditure of that class. This year a little more was expended on telegrams. The sum of $2,848 was expended last year. The appropriation for this year including the present item, will be a little over $3,000.

Mr. McMULLEN. If this gentleman's promotion took place last year, why was not the salary provided for last year? Why should he ask for it now? When I was in Opposition I found fault with this everlasting overriding of the Civil Service Act, and I cannot sanction it now. If the Civil Service Act cannot be lived up to, it ought to be amended so that it can be. I would like to know how it is that provision was not made for that item when the man was placed in that position?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. As I explained on the corresponding item in the main Estimates, this is a case of a particularly capable officer whom I desired to promote, in excess of what the Civil Service Act provides. This gentleman has been for a long time in the service, and has to perform very responsible duties, and I am sure that my hon. friend opposite, who is acquainted with the case, will not raise a question as to his capacity and merits. I cannot, however, subscribe to the views of the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) that in no case shall there be a departure from the Civil Service Act. I think this is an exceptional case; if there is one in the whole Estimates which can be justified, this is such a case.

Mr. McMULLEN. If this was the only item, possibly I might allow it to pass, but I find on every page "notwithstanding the provisions of the Civil Service Act." Now, I have urged for years, and I urge now, that the Government should go to work and recast the Civil Service Act and make it so that we can live up to it, or else abolish it altogether.

Mr. FOSTER. The only way in which you can make a Civil Service Act that this Government will live up to is by abolishing it entirely, and let them have their own sweet wills. The principle my hon. friend argues for is perfectly right, and a Minister cannot raise the salary of a civil servant before he has the authority of Parliament to do it, and the Minister ought not, until he has a parliamentary appropriation, to incur a liability for himself.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is no liability in this case.

Mr. FOSTER. There was a liability incurred, because my hon. friend has, without any appropriation, increased the salary of Mr. Fraser, such increase to date from October, 1898.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Only when we get a parliamentary appropriation.

Mr. FOSTER. But still you have pledged the department to do it, and of course you have forestalled the action of Parliament in that respect. It would be ungracious for my hon. friend's own party not to carry it out after he had really pledged his word, and the word of his department, that this should be done. But if you admit the principle at all, you can go to work and carry it out all over the whole line of appropriations, which will lead to interminable difficulties, and would be directly against the rule, which is, that Parliament must give the Minister money to spend before he undertakes to spend it. I entirely agree with my hon. friend, but when he says that you must amend the Civil Service Act I think he goes too far. He had better, with myself, try and bring pressure upon this Government to live up to the Act which is sufficient for all practical purposes if it were lived up to.

Mr. McMULLEN. I think there are instances in which evil results might follow when civil servants understand that that practice can be adopted in order to secure an increase of their salaries. Every clerk who thinks that he is a man possessing peculiar capabilities which should be recognized, will press upon his deputy head his claim for an increase, and will dance attendance upon him. The result will be possibly that the deputy head will recommend to the Minister that some more recognition be given of the services of Mr. Brown, and, if the application is successful, the deputy head will recommend that, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act, an additional sum be given to this officer. I contend that the system is wrong and rotten, and that it should not be tolerated. If the Act is not felt to be equitable and fair, improve the Act, but let us live up to it.

Mr. CLANCY. It is very amusing that the hon. gentleman who has just spoken (Mr. McMullen) always fails to criticise the Government. He falls back upon the Civil Service Act that his friends have paid so little attention to. If the hon. gentleman would turn his guns on his friends, who sit in front of him, and ask them to live up to the Act in force or repeal it, and substitute something else, he would be doing better service to the people. The hon. gentleman says that it cannot be worked. The hon. Minister of Finance, not long ago, declared to this House that there was a recommendation in regard to his department of those who should have an increase. We heard nothing about Mr. Fraser.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Oh, yes, we discussed it.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman said nothing about a pledge given to Mr. Fraser long ago that he would receive $150, and it seems to me a most vicious principle that a gentleman can extract a pledge from a Minister that he is to receive an advance, while all the others in the department are left in a state of uncertainty. It seems to me a most vicious principle to introduce into the service, and that is the principle of which the hon. gentleman stands guilty to-day. There would be no end to the evil that will arise out of the course the hon. gentleman is now pursuing. Mr. Fraser, no doubt, has had the pledge of the Minister. If he made a pledge he should carry it out, but I want to point out to him the difficulty that may arise from the example which he has set in the department. Any clerk in the office may have a pledge in his pocket that the Minister will advance his salary, while the principle is entirely ignored that every civil servant should be practically independent and that he should receive his increase if he deserves it.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think when the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clancy) discusses a vicious principle he generally has to go to his imagination for it, and that is what he has done in this instance. The hon. gentleman says that I had pledged Mr. Fraser that he was to get this amount. I have made no pledge to Mr. Fraser. The Government and Parliament are perfectly free to give this amount to Mr. Fraser or to withhold it. I recommended it to my colleagues because I believe Mr. Fraser is a capable officer, and because the increase was accompanied by economy. We are dispensing with an officer; an old public official died, and I concluded not to fill his place, but to promote another gentleman, and to give him an increased salary corresponding with the more important duties that he is called upon to perform. I gave him no pledge and I am perfectly free to strike this out, but when I say that the whole effect of this is to give a worthy officer a reasonable income and to promote economy by not increasing the number of officials, I think I make a case that the committee will accept without discussing it further.

Mr. CLANCY. That can always be urged in favour of an official. There is not an official who needs an increase who is not represented as being a very efficient servant, who should receive some advance. The hon. gentleman knows that there are others who have been recommended, but who have not been advanced. The Government have not considered favourably all the recommendations for increases made to them. The hon. gentleman advances a reason for this increase now by saying that Mr. Fraser was an efficient servant. No one says that he is not. No one says that he is not worthy to receive this increase, but Mr. Fraser might receive this on the common ground that the Act provides, instead of the hon. gentleman violating that Act.

To pay P. Mungovan as temporary clerk, from 20th March to 30th June, 1899, notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act to the contrary..... $153

Mr. FOSTER. We would like to have that explained.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The explanation which I have had furnished me is that Mr. Mungovan is employed in assisting the mailing clerks during the session of Parliament, during which time there is a very large number of documents required to be sent out, but at the end of the session his services will not be further required.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I would like to ask the hon. Minister if this gentleman was employed at the request of the Queen's Printer.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I cannot tell the hon. gentleman. The answer that the Queen's Printer has furnished me does not give that explanation. I should reasonably assume so, but I cannot give the hon. gentleman a definite answer.

Mr. FIELDING.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I think the assumption is rather unwarranted. I do not think the Queen's Printer has asked for any assistance. If I remember correctly the staff at the Bureau is about as it was in 1896, at which time the Queen's Printer had plenty of assistance. He not only had plenty of assistance, in my judgment, but plenty in his own judgment. I do not think that the Queen's Printer asked for this assistance.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Of course my hon. friend may have more knowledge of the Queen's Printer's judgment than I have. I telephoned and asked the Queen's Printer for an explanation of this item. Dr. Dawson wrote me this letter, which I have read just as Dr. Dawson has supplied it. Of course, I have no personal knowledge of Mr. Mungovan, and I cannot give my hon. friend any more information.

Mr. MONTAGUE. That is not the question; the question is whether more clerical assistance is required at the Printing Bureau. The Printing Bureau is perhaps the one spot in the Government where, if you once allow political patronage in, you will have the very greatest possible difficulties. I know that when I was in charge of the State Department, my instructions to the Queen's Printer were to run it simply as a pure business enterprise. I think we ought to have evidence as to whether there is any necessity for additional assistance.

Mr. FOSTER. I would like to have the hon. Minister's explanation as to why he has put in the words, "notwithstanding anything in the Civil Service Act."

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I presume that he has no certificate.

Mr. FOSTER. I presume so too. If the course which was pursued in reference to Mr. Fraser, which has been catechised somewhat, was in the opinion of the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) wrong and rotten, this case is not only wrong, but rottener. In this case you take a man who has no qualification, while in the other case you take a man who is well qualified. There are lots of young men in Ottawa who have qualified themselves for positions as writers and as clerks from amongst whom you could pick if need be. But you take an old gentleman who has no qualification and who cannot qualify himself, and you not only employ him without knowing as to whether he is necessary or not, but you employ him against the law which you yourself have put on the statute-book. I doubt that the hon. Minister of Finance can plead that he is "par excellence" a man fitted for this kind of work on account of its high technical character, on account of his deftness of management or anything of that kind. You have gone over the heads of hundreds of young men and young women who have gone to the expense of qualifying themselves under your law, and who could have done the work as efficiently, and I believe many times more efficiently than this gentleman. We should have a reason as to why these young men and young women who have passed their civil service examination have been refused the work and Mr. Mungovan put in their places.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. friend (Mr. Foster) has apparently an intimate knowledge of Mr. Mungovan, and that is more than I can claim, for I know nothing about the gentleman. If he wishes this item to stand, I have no objection.

Mr. MONTAGUE. It is a question of principle, and not a personal question.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). He used to be employed by the ex-Finance Minister.

Mr. FOSTER. Oh, no.

Mr. TAYLOR. This vote is to pay the salary from the 20th of March to the 30th June, and I presume Mr. Mungovan has been at work in the department between these dates.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I hope so. We should not vote his salary, if he were not; but I have no information as to that. If my hon. friend (Mr. Taylor) puts the question seriously, I shall get the information.

Mr. TAYLOR. Well, I can tell the Minister that, during the election campaign at Brockville, this gentleman was doing duty for the Liberals. He was there with Captain Sullivan and the gang, and now we have the Government asking money to pay for one of the gang. This is the first vote of $153 to be asked from Parliament to carry the Brockville election. Mr. Mungovan was there, with his big club, during the entire election, and the Minister should strike out the item altogether.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The item can be reserved. Mr. Mungovan is so well known by hon. gentlemen opposite that I am at a disadvantage in not having the honour of his acquaintance.

Department of the Interior..... $1,415

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I asked, some time ago, what officers were employed in the public service in the Yukon district in February, 1897, who gave no bonds, under the provision of section 5, chapter 19, Revised Statutes of Canada, and I was told to put a motion on the paper. At this stage of the session that means that the information will not be given.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton). That request was made to the hon. gentleman because his question referred to all the different departments; but, so far as my department is concerned, I can tell him now that there have not been any officers who have not complied with the statute referred to.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. That is sufficient for me.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the explanation of this vote?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. As to the $1,000, I may say, that the clerical work of my department has almost doubled in the last two years, and the House will observe that the expense has not increased very materially. My officers inform me that it will take a thousand dollars to close up the accounts for the present year, and pay everything, so that we will not require to draw on the appropriation for next year. Four hundred dollars is required to pay the salary of a young man named Morrisette, who was appointed temporary clerk to take the place of Mr. Grant, a third-class clerk, who retired. We could not appoint a third-class clerk, as the office was abolished, and we could not use the appropriation for a third-class clerk to pay Mr. Morrisette. The remaining $15 is to cover a mistake made in estimating the salary of Miss Mercer, one of the temporary clerks.

Mr. BENNETT. Some time ago, the Minister was asked a question in reference to a Mr. Willison, appointed in the Yukon, as to whether or not this Mr. Willison was a brother or a cousin of Mr. Willison, the editor of the "Globe." Is the Minister yet aware whether this Mr. Willison is a relative of Mr. Willison of the "Globe"?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I do not know whether he is a relative or not. The information I have is, that he was an employee of the "Globe" office for a short time prior to his appointment; but he had spent his life principally as a timber agent, and was specially qualified for that work which he is now doing. I would infer he was a relative of Mr. Willison, but nobody ever told me he was.

Mr. BENNETT. Was this Mr. Willison recommended by Mr. Willison, the editor of the "Globe"?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I have no recollection of having received any recommendation from Mr. Willison, of the "Globe."

Mr. BENNETT. I know a person who accompanied Mr. Willison up there, and my information is, that he is a close relative of Mr. Willison of the "Globe."

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I know he is a cousin.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I am not in a position to deny that. From the fact that he was in the "Globe" office, and the name being a rather unusual one, I would infer that he is a relative of Mr. Willison of the "Globe." If the hon. gentleman wishes, I will write to Mr. Willison of the "Globe," and try and find out.

Mr. FOSTER. In view of the advance notice of the Yukon scheme which was published in the "Globe," I have no doubt it entitled Mr. Willison to have some patronage for his relative.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. Does the hon. gentleman refer to the communications from Miss Faith Fenton?

Mr. FOSTER. Oh, no.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. The Minister seemed to know something about this Mr. Willison, because, when I put the question, he said he was not a brother of Mr. Willison of the "Globe."

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. I do not think I said that.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Yes, and, when I pressed the question further and asked if he was a cousin, the Minister stated that he was not interested in tracing up the genealogical connections of these gentlemen.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I think my hon. friends here are somewhat unreasonable. The fact that this gentleman came from the "Globe" office ought to recommend him to hon. gentlemen opposite, because the "Globe" is such a splendid judge of Cabinet timber, that one of its employees might be supposed to be a judge of Yukon timber.

Mr. TAYLOR. I was going to ask the hon. Minister if the qualifications Mr. Willison obtained in the "Globe" office have fitted him for the position of timber inspector in the Yukon?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. Mr. Willison has shown himself to be thoroughly qualified as a timber agent. I do not think he learned his business in the "Globe" office. He has spent his life almost entirely as a timber agent, and he is specially recommended for that work.

Mr. TAYLOR. Then, may I ask if the son of the hon. member for South Grey (Mr. Landerkin) is employed on the same business in the Yukon?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR. The son of the hon. member for South Grey is a clerk in the Gold Commissioner's office. I understand that he is a very good clerk, a credit to the family.

Department of Marine and Fisheries—

Further amount required for contingencies $350

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I would like to inquire of the Minister whether or not the Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER (Picton).

report of the commission appointed to inquire into the lobster fisheries has been printed?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). It has been in the hands of the printer for some time, and I have hardly allowed a day to pass without sending a messenger to inquire for it. I was told by the Queen's Printer the other day that it would be ready in a short time. He could not inform me as to the exact day. I will take care to have it distributed the moment I receive it.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think the hon. Minister has signified that it is not intended to act on the recommendations of the commission this year.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Not where the recommendations are for extensions.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Some practical men in my own province have addressed to me letters on the subject, in which they have expressed the opinion that it is very desirable that the recommendations should be carried out in their entirety during the present year. I do not know whether the hon. gentleman has stated to the House the reasons which induced him to forego the adoption of the recommendations this year. If he has not done so, I would be very glad to know, for the benefit of these correspondents of mine, what the reasons are that induced him to take that course.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have explained the position several times in the House. It would be quite impossible to bring the regulations into effect this year, because many of the fishermen had gone to fish before the time when the regulations proposed they should begin, and I did not want to take from the fishermen any privileges they had. Before a final decision is made, I would like the report to be in the hands of hon. members. We cannot discuss the matter intelligently without that report, and it is a matter of great importance to the maritime provinces. Therefore, we had better leave the discussion for a few days till the report comes down. I do not propose to take from the fishermen any privileges they have at present.

Mr. McDOUGALL. It seems to me that the delay is a great disadvantage to the fishermen, because the season is far advanced, and in a few weeks it must come to a close.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I may say frankly that so far as the fisheries on the east coast of Cape Breton are concerned, where an extension is recommended, and in some other special localities, I have quite made up my mind that an extension should be allowed till the 1st of August, but not beyond that.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Do I understand that the hon. Minister has decided to extend the fishing season ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Not all round, but for 15 days in one or two special localities, where the lobster commission recommended a long extension—up to the 15th of August, if my memory serves me. I do not give, this year, the full extension they recommend.

Mr. MACDONALD (King's, P.E.I.) I would strongly recommend the Minister to act very cautiously in regard to giving any extension of the season. The localities that have been most fished are the localities that are now in favour for a shorter season, seeing the necessity of it to prevent the total extermination of the lobster. I think it is the duty of the Minister and the department to take every precaution to prevent the fishing out of the lobster. In the localities where it was first being fished, the lobsters have deteriorated in size to about one-third of what they were when the packing commenced. This shows the necessity of prudence in extending the season. In the eastern section of the province of Prince Edward Island, the packers do not favour any extension of the season, knowing the effect of it on the fishing.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not think any extension is contemplated there at all.

Mr. MACDONALD (King's, P.E.I.) I was just going to refer to the western section of the island. They had an extension there. I think, last year, of a few days beyond what they had in the eastern section ; and, if my information is correct, the department rather winked at it. There were people from my section fishing there, and they continued to fish after the close of the season, saying that it was well-known they were fishing, and that they were allowed to do so. That is not right nor consistent with the regulations or laws of the department, and I trust the Minister will not allow that to be repeated. If allowed, it will only result in people in other localities disregarding the law.

Mr. TAYLOR. Is any provision made in this vote for paying $100 to Mr. McCammon, of Gananoque, who has a claim against the Government ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, this is for the telegraphic service.

Mr. TAYLOR. I understood the Minister to say that he would have it in the supplementary Estimates.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I did not say that. I said I would look into it. I called the attention of the accountant of the department to the claim, and I find that it is 18 years old. I put it to one side : I did not decide on it.

Mr. FOSTER. It is old enough to be respectable.

Mr. TAYLOR. A year or two before the late Government went out, the matter was adjusted, and the then Minister, the hon. member for Victoria, N.B. (Mr. Costigan) wrote a letter, settling the amount at $100. Mr. McCammon has that letter, and there is a copy of it on file in the department ; I have seen it.

Mr. BENNETT. If the claim is right, the Minister certainly cannot allege that it is overlooked on account of its age ; because, if he looks at page 16 of these Estimates, he will find that it is proposed to pay Mr. Burke, the postmaster at Burke's Falls, for a period dating from the 1st of July, 1878 ; that is, 21 years back.

Mr. CLANCY. Since the hon. Minister got his main Estimates through, my attention has been called to the dismissal of a lighthouse-keeper at Pelee Island, one Jas. E. Quick. I understand that this man has been 12 or 15 years in the service, and has been a very efficient officer. It is alleged that he was dismissed with practically no notice, and I understand that he is a poor man, and, having been in the service so many years, he has got into a groove, and is unable to make a living otherwise. I would ask the Minister what is the cause of his dismissal.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have no recollection at all, and do not want to controvert what the hon. gentleman said, nor has my deputy any recollection. I will, however, look into the matter.

Mr. CLANCY. Then the understanding is that the hon. gentleman will give me an opportunity of discussing it later ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Certainly, when the supplementaries for next year come down.

Mr. INGRAM. I observe in the "Globe" certain regulations with respect to the fisheries of Ontario, issued by the Attorney General of Ontario. Has the hon. gentleman had anything to do with these regulations ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have not seen any regulations issued by the Attorney General of Ontario, and he has no right to issue any, as the absolute and exclusive power to make any regulations rests with this Government. He may have published our regulations or some regulations with reference to the Ontario fisheries officers.

Mr. PRIOR. I would like to call the hon. Minister's attention to the necessity that exists on the Island of Vancouver for inspectors to look after the trout fishing there. We used to have some inspectors, but I am informed they were taken off.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, there are men appointed there. I appointed one man within the last few months.

Mr. PRIOR. There are several gentlemen there of good standing, living on their means, who have very little to do, and who told me they were willing to act as inspectors without any salary, and as they are keen sportsmen I thought that would be a very good way to have inspectors. Of course, if the hon. gentleman has paid inspectors, and capable men, I am glad to know it, but I was informed that the Government saw fit to stop the salaries of these men.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I think not.

Mr. PRIOR. If the hon. gentleman will look into the matter I would be much obliged. I would like also to call his attention to the fact that some lobsters were put out there some time ago, and we have heard very little about them since. I know that one or two were seen somewhere, which shows that some of them are alive, and I would suggest that Prof. Prince should send some more out or see that a good chance is given to those that are there to increase, by seeing that they are in proper places. Another thing we have been promised is some bass for the lakes. We have plenty of lakes with trout and plenty without trout. I know that bass cannot live in the same lakes as the trout, but it would be a great thing for British Columbia if we could get the black bass of Ontario put in some of the lakes as they are splendid sporting fish. We would also like to have some eastern salmon out there, Restigouche salmon, because although we have magnificent salmon, they will not take the fly, and, therefore, there is no place where sportsmen can get good salmon fly fishing. We have splendid trout fishing but no salmon fly fishing. I do not know whether the eastern salmon would take the fly on our rivers, but would like to see the experiment tried, and so would a great number of gentlemen in British Columbia. I did speak to the hon. gentleman on the subject, and he gave me a little hope that he would do something in the way of having the experiment made.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman did mention the matter to me privately the other day, and I made a note of it and laid it before Prof. Prince. Prof. Prince told me that, as regards the lobster sent out years ago, the department has no information except that some had been seen lately, so that the fact that they are alive is well proven, but whether they have been increasing in number I am not able to say. Prof. Prince said that he would be able to send some salmon out there next year, as requested, and possibly some bass, but the latter experiment would have to be made with great prudence because the bass would destroy any trout in the lakes.

Mr. McDOUGALL. I am informed that Dr. Temple, of Sydney, is in the employ of the Government in connection with some fishery business, and I would like to ask whether any portion of this vote is intended to pay him?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It has nothing to do with it whatever. Prof. Robertson and myself had some lengthy consultations as to the temperature at which fish can be properly kept and exported commercially, and Dr. Temple was requested to make some experiments.

Mr. McDOUGALL. How long has he been employed?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. About ten days.

Mr. McDOUGALL. I understand that the same gentleman was in the employ of the department last year, and made a trip to England.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Not at the department's expense.

Mr. McDOUGALL. The hon. Minister got Parliament to pass a vote of $500 for a service of that kind last year.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. We only paid him $180 towards his expenses out of the $500. I might add that we are not now on the general fishery vote.

Mr. GANONG. I am advised that in 1889 one James Glass was appointed fishery warden of the county of Charlotte. I wish to call attention to the fact that this gentleman has been a United States citizen, at least six years, so that before the next supplementaries come down the Minister can advise us whether this gentleman's name will be in the Auditor General's Report as drawing $286 of public money, although he is registered as a United States citizen. I might add that we have a sufficient number of resident Canadian citizens quite capable to attend to that business in the county of Charlotte without paying American citizens.

Mr. FOSTER. We would like an explanation of these breakages of the Civil Service Act.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Mr. Fisher). The words "notwithstanding the Civil Service Act," come in here, as I have explained before. Mr. Megill takes the place of Mr. Farmer, who was employed as assistant patent examiner, a university graduate, who left the service in consequence of getting a better offer. We got the vote to pay Mr. Farmer, but, as he has left and another gentleman has come in, we have to get the vote to pay the other by name. Mr. Campbell came into the service to do the work of Mr. Bailey, a permanent clerk in the department, who is on sick-leave, and was obliged to leave for six months. We are obliged to get Mr. Campbell on the same terms as the other assistant patent examiner to do this work.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Before this item passes, I would like to suggest to the Minister that, in advance of our going into the main Estimates, we should look into a matter that has been pressed on the department a number of times; that is, the care of lepers outside of the Tracadie Lazaretto. The hon. Minister knows that in the province of British Columbia there are a number of lepers on Darcey Island. Perhaps the hon. gentleman has noticed quite recently a number of organizations have taken the matter up, and, on humanitarian grounds as well as on sanitary grounds, asked that these lepers be removed to the lazaretto at Tracadie. The hon. Minister, I suppose, has not gone into that matter, but he might look into it before we come to the main Estimates.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. This matter has been lately brought to my attention in the way the hon. gentleman refers to. It was brought to my attention a good while ago by one of the representatives of British Columbia—I think the hon. member for Victoria, B.C. (Mr. Prior) corresponded with me on the subject. I have always felt, and I think my predecessors have felt, that these lepers were properly in charge of the provincial authorities, the control of other matters relating to public health being a provincial matter. It is true that the Tracadie Lazaretto is in charge of the Department of Agriculture; but that is in consequence of an arrangement made with the province of New Brunswick at the time of confederation, and it is a special instance, entirely apart from the ordinary rule of this country, that matters of public health should be in charge of the provincial authorities. I have continued to take the same view of these questions that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Montague) and others of my predecessors did. While I appreciate the fact that there might be reasons of a humanitarian character to take particular care of lepers, still,

I doubt whether it would be expedient to make a new departure in that way on account of the Dominion Government.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I quite understand the ground the hon. Minister takes, and it is one which has great weight with one presiding over the department. It is true that matters of public health are left almost wholly to the provincial authorities, but I think, and have always thought, that this is a case in which the Government of the Dominion must eventually act. This is not a thing that occurs every day. It is not like cases of tuberculosis or epidemics. We are not likely to have other cases of leprosy for many years, and I hope we shall never have them. I think that if the hon. gentleman will go into the subject, he will agree with me that, eventually, these people will have to be taken care of in a different way from that now adopted. I do not wish to reflect upon the provincial authorities, but I am told that these lepers are not taken care of, either on sanitary or humanitarian grounds, in a way that they might be. I think that, eventually, they will have to be dealt with by this Government; in fact, I think it is a disgrace to the Government that they are not dealt with. The sooner something is done, the better, and the best thing to be done is to remove them to the lazaretto.

Mr. PRIOR. This is a serious matter, and one that has been brought up, as the hon. Minister says, year after year. With regard to the care of the lepers, although the hon. member for Haldimand (Mr. Montague) has heard that they are not well looked after, that is a mistake. It is true that there is nobody staying with them to look after them, and they have to raise their own vegetables, and so on; but they are housed, and a steamer goes now and again to see that they are not in want. But there is another point to which I would like to call attention. I saw in the British Columbia papers the other day that it was said, that some outside Chinamen had been going across in boats to this island and obtaining vegetables from the lepers. Not being a medical man, I do not know whether there is any danger to the people of British Columbia in that, but, if there is danger, something should be done about it. I agree with my hon. friend from Haldimand that the Government ought to make a special case of these people. There are only five or six lepers on the island, and it would cost the Government little to take them across and put them in the lazaretto at Tracadie. I admit that it would make a precedent, and, if more lepers were discovered, the Government would be asked to take charge of them; but it is a long time since a case was found, and I hope it will be a long time before there are others. This case is causing friction between the Dominion and Provincial Governments. It may be that the provincial government should look after these lepers, as a matter of public health; but I think, and my colleague (Mr. Earle) thinks the same, that the Government might make an exceptional case of this, and take these people to Tracadie. Should new ones be discovered, they could be removed to the lazaretto also. But this would be much better than to leave these five or six miserable wretches on an island by themselves.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not wish to continue the discussion, but I may note one or two points. In the first place, some cases were discovered and sent to Darcey Island within the last couple of years. This is not a case of merely a few people, who are dying off, but it is a case where new cases are sometimes found, and—

Mr. PRIOR. Brought over from China.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. They are found in British Columbia. Of course, I do not know whether they are brought from China as lepers, or whether they develop the disease in British Columbia; but they have been found in British Columbia occasionally, and they are sent to this island, when found. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Prior) speaks of vegetables raised there being distributed. It is clearly the duty of the local health authorities to see to that; it is not in any way the duty of the Dominion Government. In fact, I do not know whether, constitutionally, we would have power to deal with the matter.

Mr. MONTAGUE. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Prior) was merely illustrating the necessity of action.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Quite so. I received a complaint that these people were badly treated, that complaint coming from a source that seemed to me to make it worthy of attention. I wrote to the quarantine officer at Victoria, Dr. Fraser, and asked him to send me a confidential report. I did not feel myself authorized to make an official inquiry into the matter, but, having an officer of my department there who would be quite competent to give an opinion in the matter, I asked for his report. Mr. Fraser wrote me a letter which indicates that these people are not by any means so badly off as has been represented. They are few in number. They are supplied with food regularly and systematically, with clothing, with some slight luxuries in the way of tobacco and one thing and another. They are visited at stated intervals by the local physician who has charge of them. Lands were given them and houses, they have garden tools and utensils, so that they are quite able to take care of themselves. Several of them who are not in an advanced stage of disease are able to take charge of the others who are in a more advanced stage. They are able to raise vegetables, and look out for themselves. The reports that have gone abroad with regard to maltreatment are not founded on fact; I say this in justice to the local guardians, so that there may be no misapprehension as to the position of affairs.

Mr. PRIOR. I may say it would be impossible for the provincial government to keep people from going there if they insisted on going, without keeping a guard there. There is a large island on which they may circulate. A good many vessels pass there all the time within a mile or two of them.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Is the Postmaster General in a position to give us any information now about the mail service to the Yukon?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. There is an item later on in these estimates which will bring that up.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Could not we get the information on this item?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. If the hon. gentleman prefers it now. Will he let me know what he desires?

Mr. McDOUGALL. The Postmaster General knows that I brought up the question the other day on finding some mail matter returned to me from Victoria. He told us there was no mail service for parcels until the ice broke up, and further arrangements were made for bringing such matter into that country. A great many people besides myself are interested in the same way. We hear of complaints from day to day that anything larger than an ordinary letter is being returned from the dead letter office. Nobody in Canada seems to know whether anything beyond the weight of an ordinary letter can be sent to Dawson City; that is the information we want.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. There is a contract for carrying the mails between Vancouver and Skagway that covers all mail matter without exception. There is another contract for carrying mails during the period of navigation between Lake Bennett and Dawson City, and that covers all mail matter as well. We have a special officer at Skagway who, by arrangement with the United States Government, is given posses-slon of the mail matter for Dawson City, and he sees that it is conveyed across the White Pass to Bennett, and despatched through to Dawson. I presume the service is in full swing.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Why are they returning parcels ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Those were sent during the winter when there were no facilities.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Mine was sent on the 12th of May.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Navigation was not open, I suppose.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I have heard that some were returned since.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. At all events, the postmasters have no instructions to return matter that can be sent forward.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Why did they not keep the mail matter until the service was made available to the public ? And why did not the Postmaster General inform the public of some date when they could avail themselves of this service ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. They were not instructed to return it.

Mr. McDOUGALL. The hon. gentleman says there is a contract for the service, but he is not in a position to assure us that the service will be performed.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The postmasters have not been instructed, so far as I know, to return this matter. I suppose they take note of the conditions of the country and of the service, and they think it better, I suppose, when it is not possible for the matter to go forward, to return it. They acted upon their ideas of what is best. They are not acting in that respect under any instructions from me.

Mr. McDOUGALL. But they have no right to violate a law of the post office, and no law of the post office gives authority to a postmaster to return mail matter in transit for a point beyond his post office. The postmaster who takes upon himself to do that without the authority of his Minister, should be subject to dismissal. If the matter is in transit for a point beyond the post office where it happens to stop, it is the duty of the postmaster having charge of that mail matter, to hold it until the first opportunity to forward it, unless he has directions to the contrary from the Postmaster General's department.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I will say to the hon. gentleman that the very moment he brought the matter to my attention, I had a telegraphic message sent to this postmaster not to do what he has complained of.

Mr. MONTAGUE. If I am not incorrectly informed, the postmasters stated they had returned these parcels by instructions, as there was no service of that kind established.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. No such instructions were given.

Mr. MONTAGUE. The hon. gentleman is positive as regards that ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I am satisfied they would act upon what they considered the needs of the situation. They had no facilities for sending other than letters to the Yukon district until the opening of navigation, and it would be a reasonable thing for them to do, in the ordinary course, to communicate with the senders of parcels and return the parcels to them during that period. Whether instructions were sent to them on the opening of the Dawson route how to act, I could not say. I will get the hon. gentleman that information, if he desires it. But I do say that since we have facilities for sending parcels other than letters, and since the matter was brought to my attention, I had the necessary instructions sent to the postmasters.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Instructions for the future are that all sorts of mail matter go forward ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. During the period of navigation.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Was there not some arrangement between the contractor carrying the Canadian mail and the man who had the contract for carrying the United States mail, by which the former swapped off the privilege to the United States contractor to carry the mails through Canadian territory ? Was not that the cause of the delay ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. No, that was not done. It happened that the United States Government were desirous of establishing a mail service through Canadian territory to connect with Alaska. It was not considered by the Government proper to allow a foreign country to take a mail service through Canada, to establish stations and huts and to maintain a service as if they were exercising sovereign power in our country. But in order to show proper courtesy to the nation that desired to have that service, we agreed to make a nominal contract with their contractor in order that he would be acting as the contractor of the Canadian Government. He was not supposed to be performing any service for us more than he chose voluntarily to perform. He was nominally our contractor in order to enable him, in the name of the Canadian Government, to establish huts in Canada, and to carry on the service as in the name of the Dominion. His service substantially was for the United States Government.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Did you pay him anything ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. We did not pay him anything. We depended on the Mounted Police for our service and not upon him.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Were there not other tenders from Canadians for the service for which this man was paid nothing ? Were there no other bona fide tenders recommended by Mr. Fletcher, the post office inspector ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. There was a return laid on the Table of the House showing everything that occurred in regard to the service in the Yukon. We did advertise for tenders and we received numbers of tenders, but the department came to the conclusion that it would be better not to put the service in private hands, although we tried to obtain a service in that country, for fear that the contractors might not be able to maintain the service. It was thought better to rely on the police.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Did not the service under the United States Government break down and prove unsatisfactory ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. If the hon. gentleman refers to Richardson, I may say that I do not think that Richardson ever gave a proper service to the United States. I think he was an unsatisfactory contractor to them. I do not think he had the facilities, or the staff, or the equipment necessary.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. It broke down.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. He never had any practical accountability to us. We extended to the United States the courtesy of the Canadian service.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I understand the only arrangement the hon. Postmaster General had was with this American contractor ; that this American contractor failed in his contract with the United States, and that, therefore, the service he was expected to do for Canada, for nothing, was not done.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. His contract with the United States called for some $46,000 or $50,000. In reference to our interest in the service we agreed in a neighbourly way that we would establish an exchange office at Dawson City. We would carry all the mails we could through to Dawson City, and we told them that we would allow them to receive them at Dawson City, although at a Canadian point. They agreed to reciprocate that courtesy at Dyea and subsequently at Skagway. They thought it would be their duty and their interest to maintain a service with Alaska through

Mr. MULOCK.

Canadian territory and in view of the fact that a large part of their mails, that we would be carrying, for Dawson City might be American mails I presume the American Government authorized their contractor to reciprocate on their behalf by carrying mails to Dawson, and in this way Canadian mails would go too.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. That is not exactly what I gathered from the hon. Minister's first statement. As I understand it, in so far as the Canadian Government depended at all on the performance by that American contractor of that contract, there was a failure. That is to say, that the United States arrangement fell through, that Richardson was not able to carry out his contract, and that in so far as the Canadian Government had expected work to be done in connection with their mails, in getting their mails forward, and for which they would not have to pay anything, there was failure and disappointment.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The word failure is a vague term. I believe the contractor was employed to perform a fortnightly service and to maintain it with regularity through the winter. I do not think he did so or that he had the proper equipment to carry his mails with despatch, and if there were any Canadian mails entrusted to him they suffered the same as the other mails. He did not perform his service as regularly as the police did.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. The statement that has come to me is pretty nearly the statement, as I understand it, from the Postmaster General. The information I have is that the Canadian Government made a contract with Richardson, who had the United States mail contract. That is correct, I presume ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. No, it is the other way.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Richardson had a contract with the United States ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I do not understand the order of time in that way. There may have been a contract. The gentleman came here and stated that he was tendering for the United States mail service or had some service with the United States, but that he could not carry out his contract without the permission of the Canadian Government. It seemed proper to give that permission, but it seemed proper to give it, not in the way that he would be the United States contractor, but that he would be the Canadian contractor. In order to enable him to carry out his contract with the United States and at the same time oblige the United States, we made a nominal contract and the Canadian Government gave him permission to carry United States mails.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. The order of the contracts does not matter, but it comes to this, as my information seems to agree with that of the hon. Postmaster General. Under the contract that was made he was to carry the mails in and out of the Yukon, free of charge to this Government, the only consideration being the privilege granted by the Canadian Government of passing through Canadian territory. The contract provided for two trips per month each way. That was the only service that it called for. The statement that I have is that there was no other arrangement, outside of the police, for carrying these mails, and that the Canadian Government depended on the contract where the contractor was not being paid for the service, that this was the only contract which existed until December, 1898, when tenders were invited for a semi-weekly service to alternate with the service under the Richardson contract. A large number of tenders for this service were received and the post office inspector recommended the acceptance of one of them, stating to the department that he was thoroughly satisfied of the ability of this tenderer to perform the service, in addition to which the tenders were each accompanied by a marked cheque for $4,000. The report in regard to which I have information has not been brought down. I have had no communication with Mr. Fletcher. This is the statement of the parties who were tendering. Shortly after the tenders were received the department decided that the Mounted Police should carry the mail and inaugurated the present service. The point I was endeavouring to make on this information is, that until this present arrangement for carrying the mails by the police, the only contract the Government entered into was that contract by which they expected to get the service done without paying any cash. The result of that, as the world knows, was a complete failure.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I hardly think that is a fair description of the situation. The hon. gentleman's instructions are inaccurate as regards the dates. The arrangement with the police was not made in December, but everything was ready for the mail to go forward as soon as the ice would admit. I remember giving my instructions very early in the fall of the year. It may be that these tenderers put in marked cheques, but I did not think it would have been safe to have depended upon contractors, and I do not think so yet.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. After the experience—

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Yes, after the experience. I am quite willing to admit that Mr. Richardson was not a satisfactory contractor, but I would ask the hon. gentleman, in fairness, to take the whole of my statement when I say that he was only a nominal contractor with us. It is hardly a fair description of the situation to say that we were making a bargain to get the service performed for nothing. The nominal character of the service was to oblige the United States Government—

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. What other service was there outside of that Richardson contract before the present arrangement with the Mounted Police?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The Mounted Police service continued from the previous year, and throughout the whole of 1898-99.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. If you mailed a letter at any point on the Sound for the Yukon in September, 1898, how would your officers send that to Dawson?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It would have gone by the police.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. And not by Richardson?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I do not think the Richardson contract began then.

Mr. BELL (Pictou). Was it stipulated that a certain fixed amount of mail should be carried by Richardson?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I think so; the contract was laid on the Table.

Mr. McDOUGALL. If Yukon mail matter is addressed via Seattle, would it not be sure to go to the Yukon district by that route? I understand from the Postmaster General that although the postmaster at Victoria had authority to refuse to send mail matter to the Yukon district, yet the officers here had no authority to refuse to forward that mail. When I complained at the post office here, the officers told me that they had no information as to the matter.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Where did the hon. gentleman post his mail matter?

Mr. McDOUGALL. In the House of Commons.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The postmaster of the House of Commons is not an officer of the Post Office Department.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Is he not an officer acting between this House and the post office of the city of Ottawa?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I do not know what his status is.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Well, I know that when you mail matter here you are supposed to be mailing it at the post office in the city, where the regulations ought to be perfect if they are perfect anywhere. I complain that I was not informed here that this matter would not be forwarded.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It will go now if you send it.

Mr. McDOUGALL. It is the duty of the Postmaster General to give information, and he should give it to the House and to the public.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I want to do my duty to the hon. gentleman, and if he wishes my advice, it would be that if he puts that in the post office properly addressed it will go forward without any delay. I told the hon. gentleman that some days ago.

Mr. McDOUGALL. The last thing the hon. gentleman told us about the mail service there was that it had gone to the dogs.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. If the hon. gentleman will give me that parcel I will be responsible for its going forward without any delay.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Before this item passes, I wish to ask the Minister if he has a gentleman by the name of Landerkin employed in the Toronto post office?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. We have a most efficient officer by the name of Landerkin in the inspector's office at Toronto, drawing a salary of, I think, $400 a year, and his services are so valuable that I propose to ask the hon. gentleman (Mr. McDougall) to join with me to enable us to have the opportunity of increasing his salary with that of others.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Did he pass the civil service examination?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I think so.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Is he a son of the hon. member for South Grey (Mr. Landerkin)?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I will have to tell the hon. gentleman (Mr. McDougall) that he is said to be a son of my esteemed friend (Mr. Landerkin), and I will have to ask the hon. member for South Grey (Mr. Landerkin) to supply the hon. gentleman from Cape Breton (Mr. McDougall) with any further information he may require on that point.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I understand that in the county of Halifax it has been the practice, at some post offices at least, to make up what are called private mail bags for the convenience of persons who live a long distance from the office, and to give them in charge of the mail courier to be delivered at the addresses. This is a practice which, rightly or wrongly, has prevailed in certain districts, and Mr. W. C. Henley, of Spry Bay, so received his mail. I should have said that in 1896 the post office was moved from the immediate vicinity of where he resided, and he now lives two or three miles away from the office. He had been in the habit of receiving what is called a private mail bag made up at the post office at Spry Bay; and on the 12th April, 1899, the following letter was addressed by the inspector of Nova Scotia, Chas. J. Macdonald, to the postmistress at Tangier, county of Halifax:

Is it a fact that you are making up a private mail-bag containing the correspondence of W. C. Henley, Spry Bay, notwithstanding my express instructions to the contrary? If so, please discontinue it at once.

What Mr. Henley complains of is, that, while this privilege is denied to him, it is extended to certain other persons in the city of Halifax. Mr. Henley is a strong Conservative and a very active worker, and he has a suspicion, rightly or wrongly, that this privilege has been taken away from him because he is a strong worker in the ranks of the Conservatives. I can give the hon. Postmaster General the names of four persons who are strong Liberal workers in the city of Halifax—

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The hon. gentleman need not tell me about the other cases, because there is only one rule in the department in these matters. I can recall only one instance of being asked to have orders sent to a contractor to carry a private bag. It may be the case in point, or it may not be. But I can state, generally, that there is nothing obliging any contractor not to carry a private bag, it being left entirely optional to the contractor to do so or not, as he thinks proper. It is the custom for couriers to be neighbourly, and sometimes for a small douceur to drop mail matter in boxes, and so on, along their route, and I have never authorized any instructions such as are indicated in that letter. Mr. Macdonald has no authority to interrupt any arrangement of that kind, and the couriers are at perfect liberty to carry private bags for persons by the way, if it does not interfere with the proper despatch of their work.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). The explanation of the hon. gentleman is very frank and satisfactory, and I trust he will see that these instructions are countermanded. I agree entirely with him that, so long as no responsibility is placed on the Crown, the practice is a matter of convenience to the people, and might very well be done. I see no objection to the course pursued. The difficulty I see about it is what I mentioned to the hon. gentleman, that, while it is done in other cases, instructions have been given in this case by Mr. Macdonald, apparently without authority. I will rely on the hon. gentleman to see that those instructions are countermanded, and that Mr. Henley is placed in the same position as other persons in the county.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Would the carrying of that private bag interfere with the proper discharge of the courier's duty?

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). Not at all. As I understand the facts, the contractor is perfectly willing to carry the bag, and the postmistress is perfectly willing to place Mr. Henley's mail in the bag, and Mr. Henley does not ask the Government to assume any responsibility at all. He is willing to trust the postmistress to put his mail in the bag and the contractor to bring the bag, and he simply asks, as a matter of convenience, that that should be done.

Mr. BELL (Pictou). In this particular case it is clear that it is not the contractor who has been interfered with, but the instructions have been issued to the postmistress. Has the inspector any authority as to that?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I tried to cover the whole situation by my answer. I spoke about Mr. Macdonald. I say, no instructions have been given to any officer, so far as I know, to interfere with the arrangements that may be made with couriers in these cases for the carrying of private bags.

Mr. BELL (Pictou). The hon. Minister says there is no desire to interfere with couriers.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Or any officer. I am not playing on words at all.

It being Six o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

QUEBEC RAILWAY, LIGHT AND POWER COMPANY.

The House resolved itself into committee on Bill (No. 84) an Act respecting the Quebec Montmorency and Charlevoix Railway Company, and to change its name to "The Quebec Railway, Light and Power Company."—(Mr. Carroll.)

On section 13,

Mr. SUTHERLAND. It has been pointed out to me, with reference to the schedule, that schedule A is all right, but the law clerk of this House has pointed out that some twenty or thirty pages of schedule B might be struck out without destroying the effect of the Bill at all. I am sorry that the hon. member in charge of the Bill is not present, but in view of the report of the law clerk, I would move that in the 13th clause, after the words "set out" in the fifth line the words "in part" be inserted. The object of that is to save a very large expense in connection with the printing, besides avoiding encumbering the statutes with it. And on page 9 of section 1, down to page 37, I move that all be struck out.

Mr. HENDERSON. Has the promoter notice of this?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. No.

Mr. HENDERSON. Then the Bill had better stand.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. You can allow it to stand till the third reading.

Mr. MONTAGUE. We shall allow it to stand in committee if it stands at all.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. If there were really an opposition, or criticism in any way, it would be all right not to pass it through committee.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I do not know anything about it except that the promoters are not here.

Mr. HENDERSON. We do not know whether there is any opposition, because no notice has been given.

Motion agreed to.

Committee rose and reported progress.

IN COMMITTEE—THIRD READING.

Bill (No. 3) respecting the Canada Accident Assurance Company.—(Mr. Monk.)

IN COMMITTEE.

Bill (No. 4) to incorporate the Canada Plate Glass Assurance Company.—(Mr. Monk.)

NIAGARA, ST. CATHARINES AND TORONTO RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. CALVERT moved that the House resolve itself in committee on Bill (No. 69) to incorporate the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Railway Company.

Mr. LANDERKIN. I move in amendment,

That the Order of the Day for the House in Committee of the Whole on Bill (No. 69), being an Act to incorporate the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Railway Company, be discharged, and the Bill referred back to the Standing Committee on Railways, Canals and Telegraph Lines for further consideration.

When this Bill was considered before the Railway Committee there were several other committees of the House meeting, and many members of the Railway Committee were unable to be present. Under these circumstances, I think it would be well to have it referred back for further consideration.

Mr. CALVERT. When this Bill was before the committee we had a thorough discussion upon it, we had a good-sized committee, and we spent a good deal of time in discussing it. This Bill has been before the House a considerable time, and I think every member who is interested in it at all thoroughly understood that the Bill was coming up before the committee that day. I do not think it would be fair, after we have considered the Bill so thoroughly, to have it referred back now. I think the hon. gentleman who moved this resolution was there and voted on the Bill, and I do not see any reason why it should be referred back to the committee at all.

Mr. WOOD. I can corroborate the statement made by the hon. gentleman who moved the amendment, that in consequence of several members of the Committee of Railways and Canals being absent at other committees, it had not a fair consideration, and had these other members been present, this Bill would not have been reported to the House by the Chairman, it would have been simply voted out of the committee altogether. I think it is only fair that it should go back where it may have a full and free discussion on its merits. I suppose it is scarcely worth while to take up the time of the House in discussing the question now if it goes back to the committee; but if it goes back to the committee, I am quite certain this House will never see it again. If it should unfortunately come here again, I have a resolution prepared which I shall move; but at present I shall content myself with saying that I believe the Bill should be referred back in the interest of all concerned, in the interest of the public, and in the interest of the city I have the honour to represent.

Mr. IVES. I do not think the reasons given for referring this Bill back are sufficient. If there were not enough members of the committee present to form a quorum, that would be a good reason for sending the Bill back.

Mr. HENDERSON. I think the reason advanced by the hon. gentlemen opposite for referring this Bill back, are altogether insufficient. Many Bills are passed with a very small attendance before the Railway Committee. For myself I was not present when the Bill was considered before the committee, but it is a Bill that I understand thoroughly well, and I know that if it is referred back I shall make it a point to be there and I shall support the Bill, as I am doing now. I do not see what is to be gained by referring the Bill back.

Mr. J. McMULLEN (North Wellington). I can fully corroborate the statement that when this Bill was before the Railway Committee there was not a very large attendance. But it seems to me that is not a sufficient reason for referring the Bill back. It was carried before the committee on the very narrow majority of 3. There are some provisions in the Bill that, in my opinion, are exceedingly objectionable. This road has had a very checkered history. It has been before the Ontario legislature and before Parliament no less than 14 times, when this company was asking either for amendments, or renewals, or extensions, or alterations in its charter.

Mr. CALVERT.

From the time they first got their charter, which I think was in 1881, down to the present time, they have built about 12 miles of road, and have got 14 different amendments to their charter. They had a charter covering almost the entire Niagara peninsula. They first got a charter from Niagara Falls. The city of St. Catharines has unquestionably suffered considerably, having granted a considerable amount of money towards the construction of this road. But after they had built 12 miles of road it was eventually sold, and all it brought was $36,000. Now what have we done? In the haste with which that Bill was rushed through that committee, when it was nearly one o'clock, we granted the present company, which is a new company altogether, power to bond that 12 miles of road now built, at the rate of $25,000 a mile, which would come to $300,000. I must confess as a member of that committee that I feel ashamed that we should have given them power to bond 12 miles of road for $300,000, when they admitted before the committee themselves that all it cost them was $36,000. I contend that of itself is sufficient evidence to convince this House that there must have been a good deal of rush to get the Bill through, with that peculiar provision, or else the committee was unquestionably lax in the discharge of its duty. I have never known in the history of this Parliament a Bill to come before the Railway Committee where the incorporators securing such privileges as these, that is to say, power to bond 12 miles of road that cost $36,000 with a mortgage of $300,000, and to place these bonds upon the market. That of itself shows there was a great deal of laxity on the part of the committee. This fact, if there were no other reasons, would justify us in referring that Bill back to the committee in order that that peculiar provision of it might be recast. I say we should not allow that company these enormous bonding privileges upon the 12 miles of road that they got for $36,000. Suppose the present company should try and realize upon these bonds, suppose they sold them for 50 cents on the dollar, that would be $150,000. They take out the $36,000 that they paid, and they would have left $114,000 of a clean balance to put into their own pockets, and leave it just where it is, and allow the next bondholders to come in and go through the same operation.

Now, I do not think we should sanction a private Bill of that kind and allow it to become law. We cannot deal with that clause before the House as well as we can deal with it before a full committee. This company got their first charter in 1881. The original charter was granted by 44 Vic., chap. 73. It was a charter to build from St. Catharines under the name of the St. Catharines and Niagara Central Railway Company. In 1882 they were before the Ontario legislature again. In that year they got an amendment allowing them to build a line from St. Catharines to the village of Bismarck, thence to Smithville, and to Caledonia or Canfield, on the Grand Trunk Railway, with branches also to or near Hamilton, on the Hamilton and North-west Central to Queenston. Then, again, by 45 Vic., chap. 62, they got power to build from Hamilton to Toronto. That was away back in 1882. In 1884, by 47 Vic., chap. 72, they got further corporate powers. In 1885 they again appeared before the Ontario legislature for the purpose of securing the ratification of the by-law of St. Catharines granting them certain amounts of money for the construction of this line, and granting them the right to construct a line to Hamilton and Toronto from any point on their line. All these improvements and changes in their charter are supposed to have been made in order to place this company in a position in which they could construct their lines, for which they had received charters. In 1886, by 48 Vic., chap. 79, they got a further extension, and a still further extension in 1887, by 49 Vic., chap. 78. They had then been seven times before the Ontario legislature. I presume that for very shame's sake they could not go back any more to the legislature after they had done little or nothing in the way of construction, and it was then that they came to the Dominion House. What did they do here? In 1887, by the statutes of Canada, chap. 60, they got it declared to be a work for the general advantage of Canada, and got authority for a branch from Oakville to Cooksville. In 1888 they got, by the statutes of Canada, chap. 78, re-enacted all the previous Acts, consolidating them, and the time extended to the 22nd of May, 1890, for beginning the work, and to 1893 for completing it. In 1890, chap. 54, sec. 36, they got power to extend from Hamilton to Burlington, and the time for completion was extended two years. In 1891 they got power to increase the bonds and power to extend to the Niagara River. In 1892 the time was extended again. In 1894 they again got the time extended, and in 1895 they got the line extended through Hamilton to Brantford and Woodstock, with power to build to Port Dover, and a loop line to Thorold, to lease to the Hamilton Radial Railway Company, and to change the name to Niagara, Hamilton and Pacific Railway. In 1896 and in 1897 they got power to build from St. Catharines to connect with the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railway at Smithville in Lincoln County, and they also had the time extended for two years. This is the history of legislation in connection with this road.

Mr. TAYLOR. It cost them a lot of money.

Mr. McMULLEN. Yes, they have had a lot of legislation that has taken up a considerable amount of the time of this House.

They have been seven times before the Ontario legislature and seven times before this House. All they have done is to build 12½ miles of railway that cost, I have no doubt, a considerable amount of money. But, after all, it was sold out under the bonded debt, and they admitted themselves that all that the little line brought was $36,000, although I believe St. Catharines had given bonuses on two occasions of $60,000 each, or $120,000 altogether, for the construction of this road. After all that money was sunk in it there is only this 12½ miles left, which was sold under the bonded debt, amounting to some $370,000, for $36,000. Now, the company comes back for the fifteenth time and asks that the time be extended so that they can build to Hamilton and Toronto, and it is also asked that we shall grant them power to bond, not only the new line, not only the portion that they have already built, but—

Mr. CALVERT. I would like to ask the hon. gentleman (Mr. McMullen) if the old charter does not give them power to build to Hamilton and Toronto, which charter has not expired?

Mr. McMULLEN. The old charter does, but it is about to expire.

Mr. CALVERT. It has not expired yet.

Mr. McMULLEN. And they want, before it expires, to get another extension. They want to come to this Parliament and get five years to enable them to carry it over another five years. I contend that we should at least call a halt in connection with this charter. In the first place, I contend that granting permission to bond the road to the extent that they are asking is exceedingly objectionable. I have never known, in the history of this House, that Parliament has granted to a company power to bond a railway for ten times the amount that it cost. We are really giving them power to bond and to place on the market bonds to the extent of ten times the amount that they acknowledge that the road cost. I do not think we should do that. If a man bought a bond for $300,000 and Parliament gives him power to realize $300,000 by putting the samp of legality on it, it is committing an imprudent act. That bond provision deserves to be reconsidered and recast by the Railway Committee before we should allow it to pass. I think we should ask the promoters of this road to go back before the Railway Committee and show their bona fides, beyond all doubt, before we renew this charter. I hold myself responsible for it, as well as other members of this House; but I think that, perhaps, in the past, we have been too lax in granting charters without looking fully into the financial ability of those seeking the charter to carry out the work that they ask Parliament to give legal existence to. In my opinion, it is unwise to legislate in the direction of chartering every company that comes before us seeking to get these powers, and when a company have had the history that this company have had, when they have been so frequently before Parliament as this company have been, where its history is so exceedingly objectionable, I think we should hesitate before granting their request. I know of no other railway that has a history so objectionable as this one, unless it is the Great North-west Central. That road has had a checkered existence also, but when they last came before the Railway Committee, we tied them down to a very short time for the purpose of getting those into whose hands the road has now come, to make some progress with its construction. To give these people the time that they are asking and to allow them to issue bonds to the extent to which this charter would enable them to issue and to place them on the market, would be most unwise. These people are Americans. They came before the committee and they offered some explanations. We were told that they were members of a very important financial firm some place in the United States. Let us ask them to deposit to the credit of the Receiver General, or to make an arrangement in some way to deposit money in Canada as a guarantee that they would carry out this undertaking. It is time that we should do that, knowing the history of the road as we do. They have seen how often it has been before Parliament; they know of the amendments which have been made to this charter.

Mr. CLARKE. May I ask the hon. gentleman (Mr. McMullen) a question? Has the hon. gentleman overlooked the fact that the names of very responsible Canadians have been added to the list of those who are seeking this legislation?

Mr. McMULLEN. I admit there are some very respectable names, one or two, but I do not know whether they are directors or not. They may be provisional directors put on to lend a kind of grace and dignity in the meantime, and after this Bill is passed, they may get out and allow some others to take their places. They will have accomplished their purpose if they secure a renewal of their charter and the extension of the time, and then their services will not be required any more. They lend their names to it now, when it needs some kind of decent representation, and afterwards they can retire. When you look over the whole situation and consider the enormous cost of that line as proposed to be built, and then try to find the men who have the money to carry out an undertaking of this kind, I cannot say that Parliament would be justified in coming to the conclusion that these men mean business. Possibly they expect they may be able to sell this charter. They talk about running an electric line in place of a steam line, and they may be able to sell out for some consideration. We know well that charters have been sold out in the past. I can look back to the date, many years ago—my esteemed friend from Hamilton will correct me if I am wrong—when the Canada Southern charter was sold for $60,000. There have been any number of charters granted to the peninsula of Niagara, but there are only two or three that could be successfully carried through, and this line is not one of them. Let us get these men to come before the Railway Committee, and show their bona fides as to the carrying out of this undertaking. That is a reasonable request. The question came up at the closing hours of the committee meeting, when the committee was pretty well exhausted, and when they were ready to allow almost anything to slip through without criticism. The passage of the clause I have drawn the attention of the House to, and the bonding powers granted to this company, is sufficient evidence that the committee did not give that Bill the consideration they should have given it, out of respect to themselves as well as for the protection of the public interest. If this Bill is referred back to the committee it will receive that consideration which it deserves, and the committee can criticise the ability of these men to carry out what they have undertaken. I question very much that after it gets through the committee, it will come back to this House in the same shape it is in now.

Mr. JAMES SUTHERLAND (North Oxford). As chairman of the Railway Committee, I feel called upon to make a few remarks with regard to this Bill. I am in the judgment of the members of the House who were present, when I say, that the number of members attending this committee when the Bill was passed, was above the average. Further, this Bill was allowed to stand on several occasions at the request of those who said they were opposed to it, and in accordance with their request it was made a special order at a previous meeting, and then, again at their request, postponed to the day on which it was finally considered. In my humble opinion, the history of the legislation with regard to the past state of affairs has nothing whatever to do with the question, the member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) to the contrary notwithstanding. If any censure is to be attached to anybody, it is on this Parliament for granting the legislation that is referred to with regard to a company that is now out of existence. Let me call your attention to the fact, Mr. Speaker, that if there is any argument with regard to the legislation of the past, it is an argument favourable to the present owners of this property, and for the reason that they have dropped, in the legislation which is now before the House, between one and two hundred miles of road that was previously chartered by Parliament. However, as I have said, that has nothing to do with the present case. Parliament did grant a great many privileges to this old company, and they built 12 miles of the road. They became insolvent, and what we have to consider is the state of affairs arising after the bankruptcy of this former company. The people who owned the bonds took occasion to proceed in the courts in the ordinary way, and this was advertised for sale by the Superior Court of the province of Ontario. As to that, all I have to say is, that every Canadian, and every Canadian company who now oppose this charter, had the privilege of bidding at that sale. Now, Sir, I have said what I had to say as chairman of the committee. Let me now say that the reason I support this Bill is because it is in the public interest of the locality that this railway should be put in good running shape. Canadians would not risk their capital in the enterprise when the Americans bought this property, and out of common courtesy to these foreigners who have invested in a proper and legal enterprise, I believe this Parliament should pass this legislation. A respectable counsel of the city of Toronto; one of the most respectable and reliable counsel in that city, appeared before the committee and gave the names and the business of these four American gentlemen who had bought this property from the courts, and he pledged his word that they were men of high financial standing. He gave also the names of the Canadians associated with them as provisional directors, and they are men of very high standing in our own community. I have heard no good reason why this Bill should be referred back to the committee. There was a large attendance at the committee when it passed; both sides were represented by counsel and there was a long discussion. I am surprised at my hon. friend (Mr. McMullen) making a long speech with regard to the history of a company which is now out of existence, and saying nothing with regard to the case as it stands at the present time; not even referring to the resolution which he himself moved and which was rejected in the committee by a majority of three. If I had a vote I might have voted with my hon. friend in regard to curtailing the number of miles they might get leave to build; but, after a long discussion, and after hearing counsel on both sides, it was decided by a majority of the committee that the Bill should pass as it now stands. I say, Sir, that in the interest of the locality in which this road is situated, it would be doing a great injury to this community, if the people who purchased this road in good faith and who show their ability to do the work, are not encouraged to do so.

I want to point out that this company became bankrupt, and the people who bought the property paid the highest price that could be got for it, as it was sold by tender by the court. The road had been condemned by the Department of Railways and Canals, and the trains had stopped running, and manufacturers and others interested in that line were suffering for want of communication with the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Railway. To satisfy the Minister of Railways and his department, these men had to put their hands in their pockets and spend $50,000 or $60,000 of their own money before they asked for any legislation from this House; and there is no unbiassed member of this House who would say, that, after these men have bought this property, paid their money for it and met the demands of the Minister of Railways, expending altogether over $100,000 of their own money to put it into good shape, they should not receive an Act of incorporation. There has not been one reason given in the committee, or out of it, why this company should not be incorporated, as our law requires that it must be, in order to work the property. While there may be a difference of opinion as to what extensions should be granted, these men cannot fairly be refused incorporation as a new company. They have dropped between one and two hundred miles from the charter, for which they previously paid.

Mr. WOOD. Nothing of the kind.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I can prove it. I will risk my reputation in this House that the words I state are true, and, if my hon. friend will back them up, that in previous legislation they had power to build to Port Dover.

Mr. McMULLEN. They had power several times to build, but from time to time they stopped.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. My hon. friend will please answer my question. Had they not power to build to Port Dover?

Mr. McMULLEN. I do not know.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Well, I know. That power can be found in the statutes of the Parliament of Canada. They ask in this Bill for power to extend to Port Dalhousie, to Fort Erie and to the city of Toronto, via Hamilton. I have no objection to a difference of opinion with regard to the extension; but there is no reason why any reflection should be cast on the character of the men who have purchased this road. It is in the interest of the community in which this road exists, that they should receive an Act of incorporation, and, if the question were referred to the Railway Committee, I do not believe that there would be five men to stand up and refuse to give it to them.

Mr. W. McCLEARY (Welland). Mr. Speaker, to me it is a very sad commentary upon the representation of the people in this House, that there are men in it who will stand up against the people's interest in favour of any monopoly. There can be no reason given for the action of those hon. gentlemen opposite who have spoken against the incorporation of this company, other than that they must be influenced to withhold legislation from a company that may compete with other railway corporations. As the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) has said, this company has had a somewhat checkered career; but, as the hon. member for North Oxford (Mr. Sutherland) has so plainly put before the House, it has been no fault of the company which is at present seeking incorporation. It is an unfair and unjust thing on the part of this free Parliament to say, that this charter, which is in existence to-day, shall not be continued to these people, who have had the courage to put their money into a concern which no Canadian would buy. The property was twice put up by the Superior Court of Ontario for sale. The judges thought the first offer was too small, and they would not accept it. They called for new tenders, and the highest tender they could get was from the men who are now seeking incorporation. When the hon. member for North Wellington says we are giving the company power to bond the road for ten times the amount they have paid for it, that is unfair, because every one knows that for the 12 miles they have built, the Government granted a subsidy of $3,200 a mile, the city of St. Catharines granted a bonus of $80,000, and guaranteed bonds for $88,000, and my own town guaranteed the interest on $20,000, at 6 per cent, for twenty years. To say, that the city of St. Catharines, the town of Thorold, in which I live, and the whole community about there should be deprived of railway competition, is most absurd on the face of it, particularly as this Parliament has already incorporated a company and given it the necessary powers to build this line. As the chairman of the Railway Committee, the hon. member for North Oxford, has very truthfully said, it is very seldom that there is such a large gathering in that committee as there was when this Bill was discussed. It received at the hands of that committee very careful consideration. The hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) took up a great deal of the time of that committee. For nearly two hours this whole matter was discussed, pro and con, and the result was, that the committee reported the Bill, with some slight amendments, to this House. Why should this House go back on its record simply because three or four men may have some interest—I am not going to say what it may be—in asking for a reconsideration of this measure, in order that they may be able to pack the committee and carry their object against the wishes of the people? The truth is, that the Niagara Peninsula has only one railway; that is, the Grand Trunk. It may be said that we have the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo, but that only runs from Hamilton to Stony Creek, a distance of 10 or 12 miles, and then goes up the mountain. The fruit-growers of the

Mr. McCLEARY.

Niagara Peninsula have complained, time and again, of the rates they have to pay for the transportation of their fruit. Why should that district be kept under the thumb of one railway? As I stated the other morning in committee, before these 12 miles were built, the people of the town of Thorold paid 60 cents a ton to the Grand Trunk on coal coming from Niagara Falls, a distance of 8 or 9 miles; but, since that short line was built, we have only had to pay 25 cents a ton. So that, if we had this extension to Hamilton and Toronto, giving us the competition we ought to have, by connecting us with the Canadian Pacific Railway, as well as with the Grand Trunk, it would no doubt be for the benefit of the whole community. I sincerely hope the House will not accept the motion of the hon. member for South Grey (Mr. Landerkin). The Bill stands on its merits, and it should be passed.

The time for the consideration of private Bills having expired, the House again resolved itself into Committee of Supply.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I have now before me the return, and while the subject is fresh in the minds of the committee, I would call the attention of the hon. Postmaster General to one or two points which seem to corroborate the impression I had of the arrangement. There was an arrangement dated 17th May, 1898, —a good deal earlier than the hon. Minister thought it was—the chief consideration of which was its cheapness, for which reason probably it failed. Under that arrangement, on condition of being allowed to carry the United States mails between Juneau and Alaska, a contract was entered into, without payment of any kind, for the carriage of the Canadian mails, and no security of any kind was taken for the effective discharge of that service. Afterwards, late in the fall, tenders were asked for for a regular service, the tenders to be received at Ottawa until noon on the 1st February, 1899, for the conveyance of Her Majesty's mails. Up to the 21st November, 1898, it is clear there was nothing but this abortive arrangement I have referred to. The return contains a report from the post office inspector, Mr. Fletcher, which is apparently the report to which I referred this afternoon. It is dated February 8th, 1899, and mentions the various tenders received. Mr. Fletcher says that there were only two bona fide offers at Victoria, and neither of the tenderers was in a position to furnish the service. Then there is a draft contract, so that from the official information brought down, whatever else there is behind, in connection with the order of the House, there is simply that document, under which the hon. Postmaster General was unable, before recess, to state who would take officially a letter posted at the time that agreement was in force, at Victoria, or Seattle, or Fort Townsend, or Vancouver, or what arrangement the Government had for carrying a letter, posted according to the rules and regulations governing mailing matter, to the city of Dawson. I know of no arrangement of any kind, and certainly there is none under the cover of this order except this arrangement which fell through. The arrangement with the police, of course, is not a contract and not covered by the terms of this order, but is simply an arrangement between the Post Office Department and the Mounted Police Department arrived at by correspondence. It is notorious that from May down to November, 1898, the condition of affairs was simply scandalous, and the reason seems to have been the want of proper arrangement.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. In 1897 arrangements were made for the carriage of the mails to Dawson and return by the Mounted Police. Originally that service was called for as a monthly service, as the country was just being developed. That service was subsequently made a fortnightly service, about September or October, 1898, and has so continued down to the present. The return laid on the Table covers all the hon. gentleman asked for. There was no contract made with the Mounted Police, but simply an arrangement between the two departments, I think, in 1897. There was first of all a monthly service as the facilities for travel were much less than during the past year. In the summer of 1898, the police were able to establish huts which they could stock with provisions and so be able to carry the service by means of relays. Prior to that the mails had to be carried on dog trains, which carried the food required along with the mail matter.

Mr. TAYLOR. I received a letter from a friend of mine in Calgary who states that a letter mailed at Brockville takes two or three days longer to reach Calgary than a passenger does, owing to the fact that the mail comes into Ottawa, remains here over a night or two, and then starts on its way west, instead of being, as it should be, transferred, as passengers are, at Carleton Place. I would like to know from the Postmaster General whether steps will be taken to remedy this?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I am not able to answer the hon. gentleman (Mr. Taylor), but I am inclined to doubt the accuracy of the statement; because we have at the head of the railway branch an officer who has not his superior in the service, and that officer has the fullest support of the department in making all the improvements that the interests of the public require. If such a thing happens as the hon. gentleman referred to, I am sure it is not with the knowledge of the head of that branch; but I greatly doubt that such a state of things does exist.

Mr. TAYLOR. Will the hon. gentleman (Mr. Mulock) look into the matter?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I will look into it carefully.

Mr. TAYLOR. The statement made to me by my friend in Calgary is that letters bear the Ottawa post mark, showing they come to Ottawa before they are sent to Calgary.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I cannot say as to that, but what I wish to have understood is that I believe the letters go by the quickest possible route.

Mr. TAYLOR. If they come to Ottawa there must be delay.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I will look into the matter.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). May I bring to the attention of the Postmaster General, on this vote, as I may not have another opportunity, the fact that the post office accommodation in the city of Halifax is very defective. I think this matter has already been brought to the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Mulock) attention. I suppose that it is a matter that the department of Public Works would eventually have to deal with. I brought it to the attention of the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte), and submitted to him a resolution passed by the Board of Trade of Halifax with regard to it. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Mulock) has ever been in the city of Halifax, he knows that the post office accommodation would be a disgrace to a country town of 5,000 people. We have 40,000 people in Halifax, besides seven or eight thousand in Dartmouth who are largely accommodated by the post office in the city. There is not sufficient accommodation for the officials, or for the public, and the building, which is made to contain the post office, the Customs Department, the Inland Revenue Department, the Marine and Fisheries Department, and various other offices, is absolutely insufficient for the purpose. While the Public Works Department may be directly concerned, still the hon. Postmaster

General has a certain responsibility in connection with it; and I hope and trust that, if he has not investigated the matter, he will do so and will endeavour to get the people of my city some accommodation in this respect before long. This is the growing time, as the hon. gentleman knows, and the Government accommodation, in Halifax should grow with other things. I am sure there is no place in Canada, as my hon. friend the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) will admit, in which some additional accommodation is more required than in the city of Halifax; and I know if my hon. colleague (Mr. Russell) happened to be in the House this evening he would be the first to support me in the suggestion I am making.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I may say that the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Borden's) colleague (Mr. Russell) has on more than one occasion brought the matter to my attention. The hon. gentleman is correct in saying that this is a matter belonging to the Minister of Public Works; and I can only hope that that department will, in good time, be able to provide the accommodation required. From what I have been told of the accommodation there, the hon. gentleman has not overstated the condition of affairs.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I am asking, of course, for the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Mullock's) moral support in connection with my application.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I think you will have it.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). I am aware that the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) has given considerable attention to the matter just brought before the committee.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The Minister of Militia (Mr. Borden, King's) is going off to camp, so it is suggested that we proceed with the estimates relating to his department.

Mr. FOSTER. When does the hon. Minister of Militia propose to go to camp?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. To-night if he can get away.

Mr. FOSTER. And he wants to get his estimates passed before he goes?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman might just as well go right now.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Last year I called the attention of the Minister of Militia to the case of a young man in my constituency who made application for admission to the Military School at Fredericton, N.B. He received, as I understand, a certificate for admission, and after a few days there he was ordered to leave for his home without giving him, so far as I could learn, any particulars as to the reasons that led the officer in charge of the institution to refuse to give him instructions after that time. I have here the report of the discussion which took place between the Minister of Militia and myself last year. It is as follows:—

Mr. McDOUGALL. Will the Minister state the rules on which young men are admitted to the military school at Fredericton, and on what grounds they are discharged after being there a short period? I am acquainted with the case of a young man who went to the military school at Fredericton a great expense, and after he had been there a few weeks or a month was ordered home. The reason given to me for this action was that the young man was a Conservative.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Nothing could be more untrue and unjust than to make a statement of that kind. I do not charge it against the hon. gentleman; but it would have been only fair if the hon. gentleman had sent me notice that he would make a charge of this kind. I can assure him that if he will send me the name and the particulars, I will investigate the matter. But there is not the slightest particle of political partisanship in connection with the administration of the military schools. We never inquire as to a man's politics at all. I presume the hon. gentleman is referring to the men who are sent from the different militia battalions throughout the country to these schools of instruction.

Mr. McDOUGALL. This man was never under instruction in any way until he went to Fredericton. The man's name was McKenzie. I forget his Christian name now.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. But he was not a member of the active militia.

Mr. McDOUGALL. No.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Then he had no business to go there.

Mr. McDOUGALL. There were a number of young men from the neighbourhood who went there, but it happened that their politics were different, and the others got not only one term but two terms.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I do not know that the hon. gentleman (Mr. McDougall) understands what he is saying, but I am sure I do not understand what he means. No man can enter these schools, unless he has joined one of the militia corps of the country. We provide schools at the different depots to teach non-commissioned officers and officers of the active militia. The colonel in command of a battalion makes a request through the proper channel to have some of his officers or men received at a given school, and in the maritime provinces that is at Fredericton. If there is room there these men are received, and in all cases they are received in the order in which the names are sent in. No question is made as to politics. We know nothing whatever of their politics. As a matter of fact, four-fifths of the commanding officers of the militia are Conservatives, but the department does not know any difference between a Conservative and a Liberal. We receive in these schools every man who is properly recommended and is a member of the active militia, in the order in which application is made, and if there is room for them.

Mr. McDOUGALL. I know personally these young men about whom I speak, as they are from my neighbourhood. Two brothers, one Archibald McDougall and the other, Daniel McDougall, attended the military school at Fredericton, and before they went there they were never under one single hour's instruction in their life. They were never members of any corps.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. They could not go there without belonging to a corps.

Mr. McDOUGALL. They never had any connection with any corps belonging to the militia, and the other young man was precisely in the same position in that regard.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Would the hon. gentleman (Mr. McDougall) give me their names?

Mr. McDOUGALL. Daniel McDougall and Archibald McDougall; they served their time one or two terms.

Mr. WOOD (Hamilton). Were they Conservatives?

Mr. McDOUGALL. These two were Liberals. The man who was sent home after a short time was John McKenzie, I think?

Mr. MILLS. Was he a member of any corps?

Mr. McDOUGALL. No.

Mr. MILLS. Was he a Tory?

Mr. McDOUGALL. Yes. The three men lived within a mile of my place, and I might say my authority is the father of this young man, McKenzie, who complained to me about how his son was treated, and he could not understand it except that the young man gave away that he was a Conservative.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Could the hon. gentleman give me about the date McKenzie went there?

Mr. McDOUGALL. As near as I can remember it was September or October last.

That ended the discussion on that point last session. On the 10th of May last, I put the following question to the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence (Mr. Borden):—

Why was Francis McKenzie, of Christmas Island, refused instructions in the military school at Fredericton, in 1897?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Mr. Borden). Want of intelligence and educational attainments, showing that he was not likely to become efficient.

Then, on the 29th of May, I put the following question:—

What commanding officer recommended the admission for instruction at the military school at Fredericton, N.B., of the following persons from the county of Cape Breton:—Archibald J. McDougall, Dan J. McDougall, Hugh P. McKinnon and Francis H. McKenzie? To what volunteer companies did they belong and how long have they been members of such company?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Mr. Borden). 1. Commanding officer of the 94th Battalion. 2. To No. 3 and 4 companies, 94th Battalion (as stated at the time by the officers commanding those companies). 3. It is not known how long they have belonged.

Now, in the discussion last year the Minister of Militia and Defence gave me to understand that none of these young men could get admission for instructions at the military school without first belonging to some active militia in the Dominion, and that they should have a certificate from some officer of that militia to entitle them to admission to the school. I know these young men, and I know they did not belong to any active militia in the capacity of officers, privates, or anything else, they were simply civilians who had never spent a day in drill.

Mr. PRIOR. Were they accepted?

Mr. McDOUGALL. They were accepted at the military school, with the exception of this McKenzie, who was only kept there for a short time, and the Minister of Militia and Defence informs me that it was because he was lacking in intelligence and educational attainments. Well, I know the young man, and I know him to be intelligent, and I know him to have the necessary education to qualify him for any ordinary position that he applied for in any company. He compares very favourably with the other young men, and I cannot understand the Minister giving that answer. Now, finding that the answers made to my questions were unsatisfactory, and that a great injustice was done to this young man, and that instead of giving what to my mind was a proper explanation in accordance with the facts, a further wrong was done to the young man by insulting him on the floors of this Parliament. I addressed a letter to the Minister of Militia and Defence the other day which I will read. The hon. Minister has to-day thousands in the active militia not nearly as intelligent as the young man of whom I speak; he has, to my own knowledge, hundreds in the active militia not as intelligent. I addressed this letter to the Minister of Militia and Defence to acquaint him with the fact that I was about to bring this matter to the notice of the House. I am not taking him unawares in the matter, and I hope he will be prepared to give me information more in accordance with the facts than he has done. My letter is dated June 7th:

Hon. F. W. Borden,

Minister of Militia and Defence.

Sir,—The answers given to my question in respect to the refusal of military instructions to

Mr. Francis McKenzie at the Fredericton Military School, and in respect to his admission and the admission of others, not being satisfactory, I shall be obliged at the earliest convenient opportunity, to bring the matter again to the notice of the House, and now beg to advise you of the fact, and also that I shall be obliged to challenge the accuracy of the answers to my questions, in which I believe the commanding officer of the 94th Battalion, who, I understand, occupies a seat in the House, is concerned.

I have the honour to be, sir,
Yours faithfully,
(Sgd.) H. F. McDOUGALL.

Now, I addressed a letter also to the hon. member for Victoria, N.S. (Mr. Bethune), who I understand to be the commanding officer of the 94th Battalion, and who issued certificates to these young men who were admitted to the military school:

Ottawa, June 7th, 1899.

J. L. Bethune, Esq., M.P.,
House of Commons.

Sir,—The answers made to my question by the hon. Minister of Militia in respect to the admission of young men to the military school at Fredericton being unsatisfactory, and in which I understand, as commanding officer of the 94th Battalion, you are concerned, I beg to advise you that I shall be obliged to bring the matter to the notice of the House again at the earliest convenient opportunity.

Yours faithfully,
(Sgd.) H. F. McDOUGALL.

A great injustice was done to these young men, and I cannot understand what the motive would be upon which this young man would be discharged without, as far as I can ascertain, a single word of explanation before he left that institution. If this practice has been going on, the people of this country have been defrauded. If the rules and regulations of the militia service say that a young man cannot be admitted to the military schools without first belonging to the active militia in the capacity of private or officer, or in any other capacity, I cannot see how this young man or any of these young men have been admitted. The commanding officer, I am in a position to say, knows these young men also nearly as well as I do, and he knows that they did not belong to the active militia.

Mr. BETHUNE. They signed the service roll before they were recommended to go to the school, and they belonged to the corps when they were recommended. They have to sign the service-roll before they can go to the military school.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Am I to understand that all that is required is to sign the service-roll before a man can go to the military school?

Mr. BETHUNE. Yes, I suppose so.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Well, then, either the hon. member (Mr. Bethune) or the Minister is not correct, and I will leave the

Mr. McDOUGALL.

Minister and the commanding officer of the 94th Battalion to settle this matter between themselves. I understood from the statement of the hon. Minister that they would have to belong to the active militia.

Mr. BETHUNE. That is what I mean; it is the same thing.

Mr. McDOUGALL. What is the difference between signing the roll there and right after going into the institution? I cannot see it.

Mr. BETHUNE. I cannot recommend anybody to go to the school until he has a certificate that he belongs to the company or to the corps.

Mr. McDOUGALL. I would like the hon. gentleman to explain where he can find some of these young men to-day that he has been recommending and giving certificates to that they belong to certain companies. One of these young men, Hugh P. Mackinnon, left my employment to go to the military school. He never remained a day in any company, and the country paid his expenses at Fredericton. He never returned to our part of the country, but he went to the United States and settled there. There are several others besides him who went under the same circumstances to the military school at Fredericton. I cannot understand this. Public money is expended in this way, and certain young men are getting favours that others do not get.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Mr. Borden, King's). Mr. Chairman, the hon. gentleman has read the bulk of what took place across the floor of the House a year ago in regard to the subject which he now brings up. The gist of it seems to be that I stated that no man would be allowed to attend military schools in this country unless he was a member of the active militia. I stated that, and it is a fact. If the men to whom the hon. gentleman refers were not members of the active militia, all I can say is that a fraud has been perpetrated on the country. I have no personal knowledge of the facts. I am told by the officers of the department that every one of these men came to the school with the statement of the captain of the company to which they belonged to the effect that each one of them was a duly enrolled militiaman, and the captain's certificate was filed at the school when the men applied for admission. I have that statement here under the hand of Mr. Hemming, major in charge of military depot No. 4 at Fredericton. I can possibly have no other knowledge of the subject than that which I can get from my officers. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. McDougall) is able to show that a fraud has been perpetrated on the Militia Department, I promise that a searching investigation into the matter will be made. That is all that I can promise him. In reference to these men, I will read to the hon. gentleman the full report :

Fredericton, N.B., May 19, 1899.

From O. C. No. 4 R.D., R.C. Regiment, to D.O.C. M.D. No. 9.

In reply to your letter of the 18th instant, I submit to you the following information regarding the non-commissioned officers referred to therein :—

Corporal P. Mackinnon, 94th Battalion, joined No. 4 Regimental Depot, R. C. Regt., on the 1st of October, 1895,—

A year before the present Government came in.

—and he was struck off on the 31st of December, 1895.

Six months before we assumed office.

Obtained a first-class certificate.

Corporal A. B. McDougall, 94th Battalion, joined No. 4 Regimental Depot on the 1st of October, 1895, and was struck off 31st December, 1895.

The hon. gentleman (Mr. McDougall) ought to have begun his investigation a little earlier.

Obtained a second-class certificate.

Private D. McDougall, 94th Battalion, joined No. 4 Regimental Depot on the 7th January, 1896, and was struck off on the 21st March, 1896.

Some months before the present Government came in.

He obtained a first-class certificate.

Private F. H. McKenzie, 94th Battalion, joined No. 4 Regimental Depot on the 6th October, 1897, and was struck off on the 30th October, 1897, in accordance with General Order 94, paragraph 4, 1897.

(Sgd.) T. D. R. HEMMING,

Major,

Commanding No. 4 Reg. Depot, R.R.C.I.

In regard to the case of Private McKenzie, my hon. friend claimed that the answer I gave was one calculated to do an injury to this man. I would regret exceedingly if such should happen to be the case ; nothing was further from my intention than to do this man, or any one else, an injury or an injustice. The hon. gentleman has asked why this man was not allowed to attend the school. Let me point out to him that the answer which I gave him was in the exact wording of General Order 94, referred to by Major Hemming, under which supervision and control is exercised over the men who are sent to the schools of this country. I will read to the hon. gentleman the provision :

General Order 94.—Commandants of schools will not only see that these instructions are complied with, but they will so arrange that by the constant supervision of an officer detailed for that purpose, attached non-commissioned officers and men who give evidence by want of intelligence or educational attainments that they are not likely to become efficient non-commissioned officers, are to be immediately returned to their corps and the cases promptly reported to headquarters.

These are the exact words of my answer to the hon. gentleman (Mr. McDougall). The answer was given to me by the General Officer Commanding, and was taken from that provision of the General Order, and the report on this was :

Peter McKenzie, 94th Battalion, was struck off on the 30th October, 1897, in accordance with General Order 94, paragraph 4, 1897.

I have given to my hon. friend (Mr. McDougall) all the information I had. I have no personal knowledge of the case, and nothing would be further from my wish or desire than to inflict an injury upon any man, and if the young man has received any injury from what has taken place, he must thank my hon. friend (Mr. McDougall), and not me.

Mr. McDOUGALL. I beg to differ from the hon. Minister, and I tell him that I still hold to my ground.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Of course you do.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Yes, and that is, that the young man is perfectly intelligent and perfectly fit to acquire the knowledge he went to that school for. Notwithstanding what the officers say, there must be something besides that reason which led to the dismissal of that young man from the school. With regard to W. B. McDougall to whom the Minister referred ; he went to that school under the same circumstances as McKinnon. He was on his way to Boston, took in the school at Fredericton on the way, and never returned to the country until he came home to see his people last summer. He is a citizen of the United States. He went there not with the intention to belong to the active militia, but for the purpose of passing a few months on his way to Boston when the times were dull. That is practised with the knowledge of the officer of the militia who is giving these people certificates. Several of the young men besides these named have gone to the United States and are there now, and they never stood a day in any company. They may have put their names down on the roll just as they were getting their certificates from the officer, but nothing more. If only that is required I have nothing to complain of, but I understood from the Minister (Mr. Borden) last year that they should belong to an active militia corps, and have served in it. I did not understand that all that was necessary for them was to simply sign the roll.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Let me tell the hon. gentleman (Mr. McDougall) that signing the roll is of the essence of the whole matter. That means taking the oath and becoming enrolled in the active militia of the country. On being enrolled the man binds himself to serve three years. It often happens that the captain of a company gets hold of a good man, between camps, and enrolls him and he is sent to the school in order to be more efficient when the camp comes around another year. By the act of enrolment these men become members of the active militia, and when their captains send a certificate that they were enrolled in their companies, the commandant of the school has no alternative but to receive them if he has room, provided, of course, that they were recommended by the commanding officer of the battalion and the D. O. C.

Mr. McDOUGALL. What has the Minister to say with regard to the abuse of this system?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. If the hon. gentleman establishes a case of abuse I will see that it is investigated in full. If the department is being imposed upon, we want to know it, and we will take every precaution in our power, but I can scarcely see how we can take more precautions than we do now. In the first place, the captain of the company must certify; in the second place the commanding officer must approve, and in the third place the D. O. C. must recommend before the man can get a place in the school.

Mr. McDOUGALL. The abuse is in permitting these young men to go to the school without serving a single day of training in the active militia, and never returning or remaining in any part of Canada when they got their training at the school. I am establishing a case now, and the hon. member for Victoria, N.S. (Mr. Bethune), who knows these people and who is commanding officer, knows these men did not remain in Canada after getting instructions. I ask him to say whether or not Hugh McKinnon, W. B. McDougall and McNeill (I forget his first name), ever stood one single day in the active militia since they received their instruction at Fredericton. I am quite sure they did not, because they were not in the country.

Mr. BETHUNE. That is no fault of mine.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I understood the hon. member (Mr. McDougall) to say that these were all Conservatives and constituents of his.

Mr. McDOUGALL. I did not say that. If the hon. gentleman referred to the discussion which took place last year, he will see that of the four young men I named, I stated only one of them is a Conservative. The other three received their instruction. One of them went to the States, and the other two returned home. The only Conservative out of the four did not receive instruction. He was refused and insulted.

Mr. BORDEN (King's).

Mr. BETHUNE. The first thing to be done is that the man must sign the service roll, one of which is kept by the captain of each company, and a copy is forwarded to the D.O.C. of the district. I received the captain's certificate, which reads:

I, the undersigned, hereby certify that the aforesaid.....has taken the oath of allegiance to his Sovereign on.....date; also, that he has a permanent residence in the military district within the prescribed limits, bears a good character, and is able to read and write fairly.

Then the medical certificate follows that the man is physically fit, and so on. I apply then for permission to admit the candidate to the school, and I address that to the D. O. C. If the D.O.C. wishes he approves and forwards application to the commandant of the school, and if there is room the candidate is admitted. There are about ten officers and twenty non-commissioned officers admitted from the district annually, and we take our proportion of that number, which would be an average of four each quarter. I advise our captains to send as many as possible to the school with a view of promoting the efficiency of the corps, and I have perhaps a dozen applications for each quarter. The hon. gentleman (Mr. McDougall) must remember that McKinnon and McDougall attended the school in 1895, long before this order was issued which caused the sending back of McKenzie. It was under a different order altogether that McKenzie was sent back.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Do I understand the hon. gentleman to say that McKinnon attended the school at Fredericton?

Mr. BETHUNE. Yes.

Mr. McDOUGALL. But he never attended drill before or since?

Mr. BETHUNE. I have nothing to do with that. I examine the roll at various times, particularly at the annual training. I know McKinnon belonged to the militia at the time he applied for his admission, and that is all. I have the captain's certificate to that effect. That was in 1895, when anybody could be admitted, non-commissioned officer or private, who was able to read and write, and whether he passed his examination or not at the end of the course, was not material. But this order to which the Minister referred changed the whole of that. McKinnon applied at the term beginning the 1st of October, 1897, and in the meantime, on the 9th of that month, this order was issued which the Minister read:

Not only must officers commanding corps exercise great care in selecting or recommending men for course of instruction, but they must also ascertain that besides physical fitness these men possess more than an average degree of intelligence.

They have to see that he is not only able to read and write, but possesses more than an average degree of intelligence. That was not inquired into, when McKinnon went to school. I did not know anything about this order; it was not issued then, and McKenzie was accepted in the meantime. I want to read this further order:

Commandants of schools will not only see that these instructions are complied with, but they will so arrange that by the constant supervision of an officer detailed for the purpose, attached non-commissioned officers and men who give evidence, by want of intelligence or educational attainment, that they are not likely to become efficient non-commissioned officers, are to be immediately returned to their corps and the cases promptly reported to headquarters.

It was the act of the commandant of the school; nobody else knew anything about it. It was Colonel Maunsell or Major Hemming, I think, who was commandant at that time. These orders appeared in the meantime, after the man's application had been accepted. He went there on the 1st of October, and in the meantime these orders appeared. The commandant of the school thought McKenzie was not making sufficient progress, and ordered him home. No one other than he knew anything about the matter.

Mr. McDOUGALL. It seems to me the hon. Minister might have given that explanation, instead of the answer he gave, that in the meantime, while this young man was undergoing instruction, the changes in the regulations took place which made it necessary for the commandant to discharge him. That would have been a fairer and much more appropriate answer for the Minister to make than the answer he did make.

Mr. BETHUNE. No one is to blame, if blame there be, but the commandant of the school. So far as I was concerned, I acted in accordance with instructions as they existed at the time.

Mr. E. G. PRIOR (Victoria, B.C.) I am not surprised that the hon. member for Cape Breton (Mr. McDougall) brought this matter before the House, because to a gentleman who is not au fait with military matters, it certainly looks suspicious. With regard to the intelligence of the man, my hon. friend says he is above the average of intelligence, and I, for one, cannot understand how a man who is known by the hon. member as a man of intelligence, could not pass the examination required in that case. If a man can read and write, and shows himself at all amenable to discipline and teaching, he can pass. I would like to know how long he was tried. Was it the first day he was there that he was sent away? Because I will defy any man to prove a man's want of intelligence in an hour or two of drilling.

Mr. BETHUNE. He went there on the 1st of October, and his name was struck off on the 30th of October.

Mr. PRIOR. That being the case, I have nothing more to say as to the evidence of his want of intelligence. You have to leave it to the commanding officer of the school to say, whether a man is getting on with his drill. If a man is there for a number of days, you can find out whether he is likely to make a good soldier or not. But there is another thing on which I would like to say a few words; that is, in regard to men signing the roll for the purpose of getting into the school. There is no doubt there is a tremendous lot of fraud perpetrated by officers in the militia in this matter. A man who, perhaps, has some "pull," goes to the captain of a company and says: "I am not doing anything now, and I would like to get into that school." The captain would like to give him a helping hand, and he says: "Go and sign the roll." The captain, who is responsible, sends his certificate to the commanding officer, who must accept it; it is forwarded to the doctor, who certifies that the man is physically capable, and then the certificate is sent on to the commanding officer of the school. And the man goes and puts in his time at the school at the expense of the taxpayers of this country. He has no idea of joining a regiment or fighting for his country. He is simply putting in what he calls a good time there, and, when he comes out, that is the last the commanding officer, or any one else connected with the school, sees of him. I have seen this in my own regiment. Men have gone into the schools, and, as soon as they get a fair smattering of military matters—which, I am glad to say, they do—they go across the line, and are only too gladly taken by regiments in the United States. That is not what we want, and I would like to call the attention of the Minister to this, so that, if possible, some means may be adopted for making officers more careful of the men they take into these schools. I think it would be a good deal better, if it were made imperative that men, before being taken into a school, had to serve a certain time in a regiment, instead of being allowed to join one day and sign the next. It is not fair to those who have served months, or perhaps years, in the regiment without being able to get into the school, to see these men getting ahead of them. I am not astonished at the hon. member for Cape Breton bringing this matter up. He simply did so because he thought this man had not been fairly treated. After the explanation he has heard, I think he will see that the state of things is different from what he thought existed.

Mr. BETHUNE. The state of things that existed then does not exist to-day. Order 94 covers the whole of the hon. gentleman's objection:

As a general rule non-commissioned officers only will be recommended. Only where these qualifications are possessed in a marked degree will a private soldier be recommended.

With regard to the other point raised by my hon. friend, the regulations say :

Non-commissioned officers or men recommended must have completed at least twelve months' service in the corps to which they belong, and must have attended the last annual training of their corps.

These are the regulations now.

Mr. McDOUGALL. I may say, that this young man is possessed of more than the average intelligence and learning possessed by the men in the several companies of the 94th Battalion, and the hon. member for Victoria knows that very well. He knows that the majority of the men in those companies to-day are men who are not educated—that many of them cannot write their names. I am quite sure of that, as they are people with whom I have been doing business for the last twenty or thirty years.

Mr. BETHUNE. They belong to your county.

Mr. McDOUGALL. No, the hon. gentleman's county ; but they happen to have been customers of mine for twenty or thirty years and I know their education and character possibly better than the hon. gentleman does. I know that the young man in question is possessed of a great deal more than the average intelligence of the whole of these companies.

Mr. FOSTER. It is dry work criticising $295,000 of public expenditure in the absence of the responsible Minister. Of course, it is very imperative that the hon. Minister should go to-night, but he ought to have had his estimates down before, and it would be better to take up some other item and wait until the Minister is back, as no doubt he will be in a few days.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. colleague had so much faith in the accuracy of his estimates as to leave them in my hands, confident that with the assistance of his officials, I could give the hon. gentleman all the information they desire.

Mr. EARLE. There are some items in these estimates which it would be impossible to discuss satisfactorily in the absence of the Minister responsible.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Under those circumstances, I will withdraw the item.

Mr. CLARKE. Can the hon. gentleman give any information respecting the arrival of any consignment of these medals ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Mr. Mulock). I received a letter from the Minister of Militia yesterday, in which he said that none had yet been received from the mint in England, and he was not sure when they would come. They have been ordered, and his department had been pressing for them.

but it might be a couple of months before they would arrive.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The deputy informs me that the first consignment was to have left England the first of the month, and the expectation is that it might be on its way out, and from now on small consignments will arrive from time to time.

Mr. PRIOR. That is another reason why we should have a mint in Canada.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Could we not pass the item of annual drill with the understanding that the whole thing may be reviewed on the main Estimates ?

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman will see that this is only part of the item and cannot be reported.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Why not let the whole item go through, and let the whole discussion take place on the other items ?

Mr. FOSTER. My hon. friends have been here three months and have not seen fit to bring down the supplementaries until a day or two ago, and the Minister of Militia did not see fit to bring down his items until an hour or two before he went away. It is all a little bit of pressure that will not work.

Item withdrawn.

Contingencies—To pay Mr. S. J. Carter, temporary clerk in the dead letter office at Winnipeg, as a provisional allowance to meet the exceptional cost of living in Manitoba from 1st July, 1898, to 30th June, 1899, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Civil Service Act..... $43

Mr. FOSTER. How long is it going to cost so much more to live in Winnipeg than at Ottawa ? I notice that the hon. Postmaster General is extending his allowance. Heretofore, in the estimates, at least, for the last few years, it was confined to railway mail clerks and officers in the inspectors' divisions, particularly the travelling officers, but he is now extending it to the dead letter department, that now being a distributing department under his legislation. I would ask him to look into this matter thoroughly so as to see whether or not there is really a difference which would make it necessary longer to keep up that distinction as between the cost of living in Winnipeg and other cities.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The information we have is that there is considerable difference. The other day in the Public Accounts Committee, there was evidence of persons of standing from Winnipeg that the cost of living there was greater.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not think that subject was gone into, but only incidentally mentioned.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. This young man is one of the temporary writers, with a salary of only $430, and I think the increase allowed in Winnipeg is only 10 per cent. I will have inquiries made in time to give the information on another year's items.

Mr. FOSTER. For the essentials of life, the prices should be cheaper in Winnipeg than here. Beef and grain products come from that country.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The freights on imports are pretty high.

Mr. FOSTER. When you come to put the increase on bulk freights into the cost of living and consider the very small amount of that which a man uses, I do not think that can affect the question. The sentimental part will, no doubt, be kept up as long as possible, even though there be not good ground for the increase.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. What about house rents ?

Mr. FOSTER. If the rents and taxes are any higher in Winnipeg than in Ottawa, and you get any less there for your money, I give up the item.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the percentage of the increase ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The practice has been to allow ten per cent.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Does that apply to the Yukon ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I wish it did.

Mr. FOSTER. To what department now, outside or inside, do these dead letter clerks belong ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The inside.

Mr. FOSTER. It seems to me that there is just as strong and well-defined a difference between a vote for your inside department of the post office and your outside department, as between your post office and your militia vote. I do not suppose that my hon. friend (Mr. Mulock) would borrow from the Militia Department to make up a shortage in his own department and think he was right in doing so ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Certainly not.

Mr. FOSTER. Then, on what principle can he take a vote which is canvassed here and passed in this House for the special work of the outside division, and apply it to the inside work ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. What item does the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) refer to ?

Mr. FOSTER. To the last : $908 to recoup the amount paid out of the miscellaneous appropriation of the outside service of the Post Office Department for removal expenses of the officers of the inside service who were transferred from Ottawa to cities where dead-letter branches had been established. When I was in the Finance Department, we attempted to draw the line very closely with reference to the demarcation of appropriations ; because, if you allow the clerks in a department to violate that rule in small matters, they are taught to violate the rule and to regard the rule, therefore, as not being one that ought to be thoroughly kept. The Auditor General, with whom I had numerous conversations, drew the line, and we passed in the Treasury Board resolutions holding the accountant of each department strictly for account for misappropriating from the credits they got, or over-expending, or diverting to different votes the credit cheques which the Auditor General gives them from time to time, and out of which they pay. Now, my hon. friend will see that this is a principle which is vital in parliamentary appropriations and expenditures ; and it is only because I see that it is persistently violated, and, in some cases which will come before our judgment very soon, most grossly violated, it seems to me, that I refer to the matter. This violation of rule actually takes away from the significance of a vote of Parliament. For instance, we are coming to a vote by and by which involves this case : The House canvassed a certain proposed expenditure for the Interior Department, and, without the least authority of Parliament, so far as I can see, a very large amount of that vote is taken and distributed in a department of work which was never contemplated by Parliament, the money never having been voted for that purpose. Then the Ministers come and ask Parliament to recoup them. Now, there is one mode by which the Government can get money which Parliament has not voted, if its case is strong enough and if urgency exist through a new demand having suddenly sprung up. The Governor General's warrant is there for that purpose, and the Governor General's warrant will bring money for the purpose of such an expenditure. But where would be the sanctity of appropriations by Parliament, if, for instance, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries is going to give half his vote to his needy neighbour, if the Minister of Customs is going to give half his revenue for expenditure, not a cent of which should be given to expenditure ? The principle is, that a parliamentary vote should cover the purpose for which it is intended, and, if urgency exists, the Governor General's warrant, in large matters, is a means by which expenses can be met. In small matters, the Government can draw from the vote for unforeseen expenses. Of course, if you have an era of general extravagance, such as there are many signs of at the present time, the miscellaneous vote will be spent in the first few months of the Ministers' mad career, and so they estop themselves from getting anything from that source. I wish to call attention to this, as a matter of principle.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I do not take exception to what my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) has stated—

Mr. FOSTER. Of course, this case, in itself, is a small matter.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Yes, but still, the principle is sound, and I quite approve of what the hon. gentleman has said. The only thing I can say, in justification of this case, is this. The Bill for decentralization of the dead-letter branch passed Parliament at a very late date in the session, and the cost of moving expenses of the staff did not occur to those who prepared the estimates, and so there was no item in the estimates, as there ought to have been, for that service. The Act was put in force, and the members of the staff went on their way, paying their own expenses, as, I believe, is the custom, and rendering an account. When the accounts came in, it was found that there was no appropriation for this service. Unfortunately, the occurrence had taken place; there was nothing in the unforeseen item for it, and I had to assume the responsibility. I felt that the Act of Parliament having been passed directing that decentralization should take place, was to some extent, if not a complete vindication, at least an authorization from Parliament to decentralize that might, at all events, be cited, ad misericordiam, in mitigation of the offence.

Mr. FOSTER. I am not taking exception to the expenditure.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I quite understand that, Mr. Chairman; but I desire to explain how the case occurred. I can offer no defence for it, except that it grew out of the circumstances in developing a new system.

Mr. PRIOR. I see there is an amount here of $416.33 for the removal of G. A. D. Mailleue to Victoria, B.C., in connection with this decentralization of the dead-letter branch. There is no doubt that Mr. Mailleue is a very good public servant, and a very good man for the position he occupies, but I do not see how it can have cost $416.33 for his removal expenses to Victoria, when I see that Mr. T. I. D. Moffat is allowed for expenses to Halifax $12.15.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I do not know to what extent the practice has been followed, but I suppose that, if Mr. Mailleue is a married man, we should have to pay to move him, and his family, and furniture. These accounts have all been properly audited.

Mr. FOSTER.

Mr. PRIOR. What we want in British Columbia is population; so I suppose this is all right.

Department of Public Works—
Further amount required for printing,
stationery, sundries, &c..... $3,000

Mr. FOSTER. I notice the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) has departed from the general rule. The general rule to which we have carefully stood, and for very good reasons, was to divide these amounts so that what was needed for stationery should go to stationery, what was needed for printing should go to printing, and the same for sundries. That division was made in my own department for the good reason that where you have a lump sum you can run too much of it into sundries, and find out afterwards, when the bills come in for printing and stationery that you would not have enough to pay them.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Printing and stationery generally together.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. This is really only a question as to the form of an account. According to the explanation furnished me by the officers of the department, it appears there was a practice in the department to charge telegrams against each distinct work to which they related. That was carried on until recently, when the Auditor General called attention to it, and thought that the whole telegraphic account should be put together. The consequence is that this item is necessary in order to provide for the telegraphic bills which remain unpaid, the Auditor General not being willing to have the item charged to the various works as in the past. It does not increase the appropriation, but merely enables the Minister of Public Works to comply with the requirements of the Auditor General.

Mr. FOSTER. Has the Auditor General made the same stipulation with reference to the travelling expenses, or is it the practice now to charge the travelling expenses against each one of the works, and to take the general travelling expenses of officers who are here at Ottawa and distribute them all round amongst the different works?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I have sent for the information, and will reserve that item for a little while.

Mr. MONTAGUE. It has been the practice in the past, when a public work was being constructed in any part of the Dominion, to charge to that public work the travelling expenses, and a certain amount of the telegraphic expense, the engineering expense, draughtsmen's work, and all that sort of thing, to the special account. When these accounts are not given in detail, it is impossible for the House to know just how much money is being spent in each one of these services. I think the Auditor General did well to call attention to that method and suggest the other one.

Penitentiaries—

Kingston Penitentiary—To pay the expenses of the Devlin investigation $2,632 73

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I think this item ought to stand. It is arranged with the Solicitor General (Mr. Fitzpatrick) that there shall be a discussion, but if it is the understanding that this question can be taken up on the main Estimates we can go on with the penitentiaries, with the exception of the Devlin investigation.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In the absence of the Solicitor General, any of these items relating to the Justice Department may be held for consideration or the subjects may be discussed on the main Estimates, if any hon. gentleman desires it.

Experimental Farms—

Balance of $300 due on purchase for Experimental Farm, of portion of Lot 1, Con. B, Rideau Front, Nepean Township, and interest thereon at Government Savings Bank rates, from 15th March, 1887, to 1st July, 1899 (amount $159.22)..... $459 22

Mr. MONTAGUE. What is the history of this case?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It was in consequence of the fact that the owner of the farm had a minor child who had a claim in consequence of his mother's right to the property which could not be paid until he came of age. He came of age this last year, and the amount has been paid out. This is on the original purchase money of the Experimental Farm.

Mr. FOSTER. Was the original amount $159.22?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. A claim was made for interest on the money.

Mr. MONTAGUE. $300 is the original amount.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. $159 is the interest.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. Was the ground taken and entered upon and occupied from that time?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Certainly. This was not the price for this piece of property, but only the portion retained because of a minor child's interest in it.

North-west Territorial Exhibition—

Revote of amount lapsed out of $4,000 voted in 1897-98..... $387 36

Mr. MONTAGUE. Why was this not put in?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The accounts did not come in.

Mr. FOSTER. Does this settle everything, probably?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Are you advertising for claims?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No.

Omaha Exhibition—

Re-vote of amount lapsed out of $5,000 voted in 1897-98..... $727 20

Mr. FOSTER. What was the whole cost of the Omaha Exhibition?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. $8,000 was the amount voted. I cannot remember the exact cost, but it was $100 or $150 less than that amount.

Printing, binding, &c., Canadian and other Patent Records, further amount required. $2,000

Mr. FOSTER. Where is that work done?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not know exactly. But it is done partly in Montreal and partly in Toronto, but it is under the management of the Printing Bureau entirely. This is really the lapse of votes for several years which have been paid out of succeeding years. I wish to close up the matter so that we can start fair. This is really in consequence of the fact that bills were not rendered in time for several years, and they were paid out of the succeeding votes. This is an accumulation of lapsed votes.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Is the branch still self-sustaining?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, it costs $9,000 a year.

Mr. MONTAGUE. But outside of that?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, outside of that.

Mr. FOSTER. The whole patent department is a source of income?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, a large source of income.

Purchase of books and publications for Patent Office library..... $2,000.

Mr. MONTAGUE. What are these books?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. There have been no works upon patent law, patents and inventions in the department, and I think I explained already to the committee that I have been obliged to secure the services of some younger men. The older patent examiners had books of their own, especially Mr. McCabe, whom the hon. member for Haldimand (Mr. Montague) knows very well. Mr. McCabe had a library which has been used by the other examiners. It is now in the Patent Department and I propose to take it over for the use of the other examiners.

Mr. MONTAGUE. You are taking over the old books.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes. We propose to take over Mr. McCabe's library and purchase some new books.

Mr. FOSTER. I would like to know whether these books are Mr. McCabe's private property, or whether they were originally purchased by the Government?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, he had paid for them and the other patent examiners have been using them, and he thought that it was only right that he should be reimbursed.

Mr. FOSTER. They were not paid for originally by the Government?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No. Mr. Decelles valued these books at $1,700, and I am asking $250 more with which to buy such new books as are necessary.

Quarantine—

Amount transferred to Department of Public Works$2,000

Mr. FOSTER. What is that for?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Last winter there was necessitated a very large quarantine in Halifax in consequence of the arrival of the Doukhobors there in the middle of winter and of their detention. There was no money available in the Public Works Department for this purpose, and I made an arrangement with the Auditor General to allow us to take a portion of the quarantine vote on the understanding that it should be returned. He afterwards advised that I should ask for a supplementary vote. The money has been expended on the arrangements at Halifax for the accommodation of the Doukhobors when they were detained there in consequence of small-pox.

Cattle Quarantine—

Tuberculosis—Further amount required for salaries and expenses..... $5,000

Mr. MONTAGUE. Where is that money being spent?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. All over the country. I announced to the country at large I would test cattle for the people wherever it was asked for, and the increase in that work has been very great. Consequently there is an increased expenditure. The number of cattle subjected to the test was a great deal larger than the year before.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Who are the parties who make the test?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Various veterinaries all over the country who are qualified to do it.

Mr. FISHER.

Mr. MONTAGUE. How are they paid?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. They are paid fees, and they receive their expenses.

Mr. MONTAGUE. What is the mileage fee?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. They are paid at the rate of $5 a day for their work. They are paid no mileage expenses, but they are paid the actual disbursements in going to and from their work, whatever accounts they certify.

Mr. MONTAGUE. How do you make up the time? A man goes out two or three miles, say three miles, makes a test and comes back. What do you allow him?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It takes him two days to make a test. As a matter of fact it takes two days from early in the morning until late at night. Some of them have asked to have an extra day, counting two days as three, but we refused.

Mr. MONTAGUE. You do not allow mileage, but only actual expenses?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Actual disbursements.

Mr. MONTAGUE. What do the disbursements come to?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I have a statement of the actual disbursements, but there are only the lump sums paid to each officer. I cannot say how much it cost per mile. I have a list of the payments made to the different officers.

Mr. MONTAGUE. What are the names of those who have been paid?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. There are 30 names here altogether of persons to whom payment has been made.

Mr. MONTAGUE. These are, I understand, your veterinaries employed all over the country?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. There are veterinaries employed all over the country, and in addition we have two or three officers who are under salary and whom we send out where necessary, where there is no veterinary competent to do the work. The others are paid so much a day, whenever they are called upon to work and they are paid their actual disbursements. If my hon. friend will mention any place in which he is interested, I will give the names.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will read the list, as it will be useful to have it on "Hansard."

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I may say in connection with Mr. A. H. Hall, whose name appears on the list for

$1,175 services and $960 expenses, that Mr. Hall has been working in the eastern part of Quebec where there have been a very large number of demands upon his time, where there are no railways and where he has been driving about with teams. Following is the list:—

manently in Montreal and has a salary. Professor Adami, of McGill, also gets $1,000 a year salary. I thought it was necessary to have a man of standing to do the bacteriological work in connection with the milk tests, and I employed Prof. Adami.

Mr. MONTAGUE. That is all right.

Sundry veterinary surgeons under $30.		280	75	240	20

Mr. MONTAGUE. There seems to be some items there outside of the salaried men which would indicate that some of these veterinary surgeons are almost constantly employed.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. There are one or two.

Mr. MONTAGUE. One man seemed to have been employed for 200 days.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. A couple of months ago I stopped that man.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I was about to say that he had better be employed permanently by the department. There is another man getting $800.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That is Mr. Moore, who is employed per-

Mr. PRIOR. What becomes of the cattle suffering from tuberculosis?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. They are quarantined and isolated, but we have not ordered their slaughter. We quarantine them strictly and as a general rule they are slaughtered by the owners. There has been a good deal of difficulty in consequence of demands for compensation, which I have not felt justified in acceding to.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Have you the question of compensation under consideration?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I have not had it under consideration, because when I got a vote to deal with this matter I pledged the House I would not pay compensation, and I have not felt free to do so.

Mr. FOSTER. None has been paid ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. None.

Mr. PRIOR. When in quarantine are they under the control of a veterinary surgeon until they are discharged or slaughtered ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Not directly under the control, but the owner would be liable to a severe penalty if he broke the quarantine.

Mr. McDUGALL. What are the regulations under which the service of these veterinary surgeons can be obtained by any one who would like to have his stock examined ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Any one who makes application to the department is sent a form of application, which he is expected to sign. That form of application gives the conditions under which the Government will make this test free of charge, and one condition is that the owners shall not ask for compensation. I confess that I have shrunk from allowing the thin end edge of the wedge of compensation to be entered. I felt it was such a large question and would require such a very large vote, that I did not think the House would grant it, but when I obtained a vote of $15,000 to deal with the question I distinctly pledged myself to the House that none of it would be used for compensation.

Mr. McDUGALL. Suppose a farmer living 2,000 miles from Ottawa finds that sickness has appeared amongst one or more of his stock, has he got to make written application to the Minister at Ottawa to get the services of a veterinary surgeon ? If so, I cannot see the use of it.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. We have applications from the North-west and from the furthest points east, from people who write that they fear there is tuberculosis in their herds. We immediately send to them a form of application and inform them who is the nearest veterinary authorized to make a test. As a general rule that veterinary is quite close to them. Of course, where there is a great deal of work to do, we appoint another veterinarian.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Suppose the complaint is made by the owner of a neighbouring herd ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I have taken the ground that this is not a compulsory test, and that we cannot force any man to accept the test. There has been a great deal of discussion in the agricultural press and at agricultural meetings about it, and a good deal of experience in the United States and in England about it ; and I did not think it wise or feasible in the present state of public opinion or knowledge of the question, to make the test compulsory. Therefore, I have only acted when the owner of the cattle wanted to have the test applied.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. When that question of compensation comes up, I hope the Minister of Agriculture will remember my case, for I, unfortunately, lost nine or eleven head of Jerseys under the practice the Minister refers to. While there was no compensation, I had the services of one of the veterinary surgeons, who ordered the slaughter of the whole herd.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I am very careful not to order the slaughter of any animal, because if we do that we may be liable for compensation. It is left entirely to the discretion of the owner of the animal to say whether he will have it slaughtered or not. It is quarantined, so that he cannot sell it or its products, which might be dangerous to the public health.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I may add that there was, unfortunately, a penalty imposed upon me in addition to the loss of the herd. The animals, unfortunately, got affected just before June, 1896, and I think I lost a good many votes among the farmers, who thought I had infected their herds.

Mr. MONTAGUE. What is the number of the whole staff in connection with the quarantine work ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I could not say off-hand.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Has it increased or decreased ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Including the tuberculosis work, it has increased ; but apart from that I think it is about the same.

Mr. MONTAGUE. The hon. gentleman has removed the quarantine as against the United States. What is he doing with those officers ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I have dispensed with the services of a number of officers along the American frontier who were there on salary ; but I have had to retain certain officers there to make tuberculosis tests of animals which might come in from the United States without certificates, and they are paid by fees and are not on regular salary. Consequently, the expenditure is considerably less on that account than before.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Are you maintaining the sheep quarantine in the North-west against the scab ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No special quarantine, except that animals coming from the United States require to have a certificate that there are no contagious diseases in the district from which they come.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I suppose the hon. gentleman has given up all hope of getting the removal of the embargo in Great Britain?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. For the present I practically have.

Mr. MONTAGUE. The hon. gentleman has found that it was not a case of thinking that our animals were infected, so much as wanting to protect their own interests.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I found that the schedule being established, it was very much harder to get rid of it.

Mr. BRITTON. Perhaps this would be a good time to ask the Minister if his attention has been called to a rather interesting and very important report made by a person named Julian Ralph, who is now in India as a special representative of "Harper's Weekly," with regard to the plague in that country called the black death, and with regard to the precautions necessary to be taken to prevent it spreading to Europe and America. He gives, first, the circumstantial causes which tend to the spread of this trouble, and, secondly, the precautions to be taken. If the hon. Minister has not seen the report, I shall be glad to hand him an extract from it.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I cannot say that I have seen the report in question. I may say that my chief quarantine officer, Dr. Montizambert, has been watching carefully the plague in India, and the precautions taken in Europe against the introduction of the bubonic plague, and we are watching all vessels that might carry that disease.

Mr. McMILLAN. I would like to ask the Minister if he has a statement of the number of animals found to be infected by the veterinary surgeons who inspected the herds, the percentage of animals, and the number of examinations?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I have a statement here in two parts. It is as follows:—

CATTLE TESTED FOR TUBERCULOSIS.

Province.	No. tested, July, 1896, to July 1, 1898.	No. Diseased.	No. tested, July 1, 1898, to April 20, 1899.	No. Diseased.
Ontario.....	3,000	188	6,184	119
Quebec.....	1,267	200	3,120	62
Prince Edward Island.....	159	11	276	5
Nova Scotia.....	117	23	124	12
New Brunswick.....	241	14	414	23
Manitoba.....	231	127	780	233
Totals.....	5,015	563	10,898	454

I ought to say, in explanation of the state of affairs in Manitoba, that the tests were largely made in connection with certain dairy herds at the request of the local health authorities, and I have no doubt they show a much larger percentage of disease than would be found were the tests distributed over the whole province; and I do not think it can be fairly considered an average test for the province of Manitoba. In the other provinces the tests have been spread all over the province, and, therefore, the proportion indicated by the figures is about the proportion of the disease. I have not made out the percentages for this year, but the percentages of last year in the various provinces ranged from 5 to 6 and 8 per cent of diseased animals; and I may safely say, I think, that that is as high as the average of the disease in the country at large.

Mr. ROGERS. How long is the quarantine maintained on a herd, or by what means is it removed?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The quarantine against tuberculosis affects only the animals found to be diseased. If they are isolated from the rest of the herd, the rest of the herd is released from the quarantine immediately on the premises being properly disinfected. The diseased animals are kept in quarantine, and the stables where they are, are quarantined as long as they stay there.

Mr. CLANCY. Did I understand the hon. gentleman to say that the department does not now order the slaughtering of diseased animals of any kind?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I am talking only of tuberculosis.

Mr. CLANCY. How does the hon. gentleman expect to check the disease if it is left entirely optional with the owner to slaughter the animal or not, the department standing back on the sole ground that compensation might be claimed if the animal were destroyed? On one side that is, no doubt, in the interest of economy, but I doubt whether it is in the interest of the purity of our herds.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The diseased animals are quarantined, which means that they cannot be disposed of or removed, and cannot be put in contact with other animals.

Mr. CLANCY. Yet they are still the property of the owner, and kept there?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Certainly.

Mr. CLANCY. There is a limit, I presume, to the time they will be kept there.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, the quarantine is not removed.

Mr. CLANCY. Then, the animals may be left there until they die.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes.

Mr. CLANCY. Is not that an unusual course?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. It is the law.

Mr. CLANCY. I fancy it is a very bad law. If diseased animals are to be kept in quarantine with some that may not be diseased—and I am told that sometimes, even on close examination the veterinary surgeon is not quite sure—it seems to me that is not a step in the right direction. The better way would be to say to the owner, that the animal should be slaughtered, if a cure is not possible, and give him no compensation, rather than let it stay there until it dies, without giving compensation.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The condition of affairs is very different under different circumstances. The test shows that the animal is affected by the disease tuberculosis. The results of examinations have been so uniform that I may say this test is almost infallible. The test does not, however, show the extent of the disease in the animal. A good many appear to be perfectly healthy and sound, and are, perhaps, quite fat. If they are slaughtered, in some cases the flesh is perfectly good for meat, and in others it is not; and the question, whether that flesh may be sold for food or not, is left entirely in the hands of the local health authorities.

There is, however, another point. Occasionally, the animals recover. If, at any time later on, the animal which is being quarantined, is offered for test again, and is found not to react, it will be released from the quarantine. There are cases where animals have reacted, and then later on have not reacted; and, when later on they have been slaughtered, it has been found that the disease existed in them, but the tubercles became inactive, and the animal was really healthy, although the presence of the disease was proved to have been there before.

There is another reason why it might not be profitable for the owner to slaughter his animals. While the cow is diseased, it is also clearly proven that, in the large majority of cases, the calf born of that cow is not affected; and, if special care be taken to take the calf away from the mother, there is no reason why it cannot be raised, free from the disease. In the case of valuable breeding animals, it may be worth while to keep them and breed from them for the sake of the offspring.

Under those circumstances, it seems to me wise to leave the determination of what shall be done with the diseased animal in the hands of the owner, so that he may act according to what he believes most suitable to his own circumstances. That is the reason why no order is given for slaughter, but the law is carried out, so as to see that the animal is not allowed to go about and spread the disease, or that its products are not sold so that they might spread the disease.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman will know, from the reports of his officers, that the manner in which this quarantine is kept is very loose indeed. It is quite clear that, unless there is a constant watch, it is impossible to have the law enforced. Suppose a farmer has a portion of his herd diseased, all that can be done is to keep them apart from the others, because you could not keep an officer to watch over cases of that kind, and the result is a great deal of looseness. I think that, on the whole, it would be better to slaughter the animals, and the farmers should have some compensation for the loss. Any one having any knowledge of the subject knows well that the disease may be spread from the looseness that obtains all over this country, owing to the fact that the control is in the hands of the owner, who is anxious to make the most he can from his animals, and the strong incentive not to incur loss is sufficient to bring about a state of things that may be the means of spreading the disease to the balance of the herd or to the neighbouring herds. I think money could not be better spent than to eradicate the disease, wherever the department can find it, and every farmer should have reasonable compensation.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Why should he have compensation, if he has diseased animals which ought to be killed, in his own as well as the public's interest?

Mr. CLANCY. The disease may have come to his stock from imported animals, and not depend upon any act of his in any sense whatever. At the town of Guelph, they imported, some seven or eight years ago, a considerable number of very fine thoroughbred stock. The animals were kept in quarantine a long time, and it was afterwards discovered that they were diseased, and had come to Guelph, and affected the whole herd, as well, possibly, as the other herds in that neighbourhood. There are the best of reasons why the department should make some compensation under such circumstances.

Hog Cholera and Sheep Scab—

Further amount required for compensation for slaughtered hogs and sheep, and for salaries and expenses..... $13,000

Mr. CLANCY. I may say to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fisher) that when his main Estimates come up, I shall ask for some information with regard to the officers appointed in the quarantine department, and their salaries. I shall not discuss the matter now.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I shall give the hon. gentleman all the information he asks for.

Further amount required for printing, stationery, sundries, &c..... $3,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. An hon. gentleman opposite asked a question respecting the item to which the travelling expenses were charged. I find that the practice is, in the case of the Minister and chief officers at headquarters, travelling expenses are charged to contingencies, while the expenses of engineers are charged either to the surveys in the preliminary work or to the general votes for the respective provinces; and they will be found in the Auditor General's Report accordingly. The ex-Minister of Finance (Mr. Foster) called attention to the fact that this item of $3,000 for contingencies does not conform to the practice that divides sundries from printing and stationery; and so I would divide this item in this way:

Printing and stationery..... $ 760
Sundries 2,240

The item of $2,240 relates to telegrams, under the circumstances which I have explained. The additional item of $760 means that there is a considerable amount of work being done, and necessarily, therefore, some additional expense for printing and stationery.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Can the Minister of Finance say whether this item of $3,000 has anything to do with the expenses of the chief engineer to the Yukon and to London on the last trips he made?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No.

Mr. FOSTER. I suppose none of this was appropriated to buy those French flags?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The Minister of Public Works did not leave me any information upon that point.

Mr. FOSTER. He will get a new one in Paris.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. At present we go in for the old flag. I may remark also that in this case we ask for the appropriation.

Mr. FOSTER. We have done a hard day's work, and I think we had better close up.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. So early? I thought hon. gentlemen opposite would prefer to take up some further items in the public works. I think we might as well sit until twelve o'clock.

Mr. FOSTER. All right.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Does the Government intend to take up Supply to-morrow?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think so, but I would like to reserve that point until the Premier returns.

Public Works—Chargeable to Capital—Quebec—

River St. Lawrence ship channel—Additional amount required..... $60,000

Mr. FOSTER. How much does that make the total appropriation?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The appropriation for the year was $256,000, to which this will have to be added. There has been a considerable amount of work going on, and the Minister reports that it is absolutely necessary to have this additional sum if the work, which is so urgent, is to be done.

Mr. FOSTER. This is a tremendous expenditure; we used to spend $75,000, $100,000 and $150,000 a year. The Minister will have to give us an idea of the work that was done and what still remains of obligatory work that this $60,000 is to cover. I do not ask for it in detail, of course.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The Minister's memorandum showing expenditure up to the 27th April shows amounts of 1897-98 paid in 1898-99, $16,690.93; for new buildings and machinery at Sorel, $41,344.71; dredging plant, $111,269.19; deepening the channel, $52,385.37; testing of channel, $5,095.58; hydrographic survey, $23,431.22; total, $250,217. This left some $5,000 available at the date when the memorandum was prepared and large amounts of work still required.

Mr. FOSTER. I supposed it was about like that. When you come to get the facts, you find that the active work of bettering navigation receives only about one-fifth of the whole vote that has been expended. The rest has gone into these sink-holes at Sorel and into the dredging plant. It is really too bad that when the whole shipping interest and business interest of the country are anxious to get a channel there which is of a certain depth and width, and when we pour out our money to the extent of two or three hundred thousand dollars a year, we find in the end that a very small proportion of it really goes to the work of deepening the channel. These shops at Sorel and all the paraphernalia about them, I believe, are a perfect sink-hole of expense. Were the old buildings burnt down—was that the reason for the new buildings, or are these extensions?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). I had the opportunity of going through these buildings with the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte), and I venture to say that nobody who inspected the buildings could doubt the necessity for rebuilding. They were actually falling to pieces, rotting down. The hon. member (Mr. Foster) made one remark which, I think, he would not make on reflection, certainly would not make if he saw the work done. The foreman seems to be an exceptionally smart man, one of the smartest in his line that I have ever met. He took us through the new dredges and explained the mechanism. He will be able to do ten times as much work as with the old dredges. He showed us the working of the old as compared with the new dredges, and it is not too much to say that, by comparing the work of the old dredges was mere pottering—we were positively wasting money in using the old dredges, considering what can be done with the new ones. Of course, I know nothing about the cost, whether these have been cheaply built or not; but certainly the new mechanism will do splendid work, and, I think, will repay the public three times over for the outlay.

Mr. FOSTER. There is no doubt about its being good policy to have dredges which are strong enough and of approved pattern to do the work and do it thoroughly. But what I have found in connection with the whole business is that there is a lot of money expended that does not reach the ultimate point. I have long been of the opinion—I do not give it as an expert, of course; it is an opinion formed from my having to do with these accounts—that we would be further ahead if we wiped out the whole caboodle, and simply had our dredging done by contract, after public call for tender, and have it thoroughly supervised by competent officers. It might be said that there is not plant enough, but plant can always be found where there is call for it. If it is once the settled policy of the Government that all that paraphernalia, the basis of which is largely patronage, which will get in in spite of fate, is discarded and you simply appropriate clean money and have the dredging done by actual contract, by men who make that their business, and who will carry it on as economically as possible, I believe we would get much further ahead than we are. I do not think it is possible to carry on an establishment at Sorel such as that without a very large amount of expense that might be avoided on the other plan. I agree with my hon. friend that there is no use fiddling away with a spoon dredge when you want the strongest and best kind of dredging done. But I think we go at it in the most expensive way, and it entails a tremendous amount of trouble on the department which would be entirely avoided if you laid down the hard and fast principle of getting this done by contract. Dredging will never cease in this Dominion, it will increase rather than decrease, because as commerce and its needs expand, you will have these smaller harbours that have to be helped, and the larger harbours that have got to be kept up, and the river courses that have to be kept clear. So you will have an incentive for competent business men to put money into adequate plants, and these would be at the disposal of the Government on the contract system.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Is the Minister of Finance able to say what will be the total expenditure for 1898-99?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. $316,000.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Chiefly and largely in plant.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Is the Minister able to say how much the hydrographic work proper costs out of that $300,000?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Out of the $256,000 appropriated, there was expended, up to the 27th of April, $250,000 odd, and of that $23,333 is chargeable to the survey.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I want to call attention to a great economy that might be effected when this expenditure is swelling. That work, I am satisfied on a comparison of results, is far more economically discharged by the hydrographic officers of the Marine Department. I think it is a mistake to have that work divided, or to have two departments doing the same class of work. It stands to reason that the one department or the other ought to have that work under its exclusive supervision. I know the work that has been done on the Georgian Bay and Lake Erie, it is managed on a scientific basis. You have in the Marine Department the nucleus of a splendid hydrographic service, you have there excellent men who have had special training and every advantage. The other system, no matter how good it may be, is costing the country a great deal more from the very beginning. If the whole thing was thrown into one department it would be far more economically and efficiently managed.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I quite agree with the remarks of my hon. friend that where the same works occur in different departments, it is desirable they should be consolidated. I am advised that these surveys are really necessary in the Public Works Department to enable it to carry on the dredging. That is a preliminary survey to doing the dredging work, and, therefore, it seems properly to attach to the Public Works, just as the survey of an engineer who goes out to locate a wharf or a break-water.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. That is all right enough, because it is preliminary work, such as taking the soundings. That is not what I refer to. I refer to the technical and nicer part of that work that comes at the end rather than the beginning. The Public Works Department are now engaged in making charts, and so is the Marine Department. It is such fine work that I think ought to be under one management.

Public buildings, Ottawa—
Towards reconstruction of portion of Western Departmental Block destroyed by fire, revote of lapsed amount..... $9,860

Mr. FOSTER. Is there anything in the main Estimates for that Western Departmental Block ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No.

Mr. FOSTER. If this does go through, it must be understood that on the main Estimates we may have a discussion upon the cost of that Western Departmental Block.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I can give my hon. friend the cost now from the information furnished to me. The vote in 1896-97 was $36,989.34 ; in 1897-98, $90,139.82 ; 1898-99, $59,860, making altogether, $186,989.16 voted for the repairs of the block. With regard to the particular item under notice, it is for work which was expected to have been done at the close of one year, but was delayed or passed over into the service of the next year, and they neglected taking an appropriation, and the money lapsed.

Halifax quarantine station, Lawlor's Island $17,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is a vote rendered necessary by special expenditure in connection with the arrival of the Doukhobors. A small item in the same connection has been referred to by the Minister of Agriculture.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). I think there is enough charged to enable them to stay for three or four years in quarantine. There is item 32 of $2,000, which was in the Department of Agriculture, and in the Department of Public Works we have $17,000 more. Can the hon. gentleman tell us whether or not these are permanent works ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (Halifax). They will be suitable for other parties.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They will be used for other immigrants.

Montreal Public Buildings—
Improvements, alterations, repairs, &c., work done..... $2,054 10

Mr. FOSTER. What was the nature of these alterations ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The expenditure is as follows :—

To pay for repairs to heating apparatus, gas-pipes, wash-basins, new partitions, doors, locks and knobs, hinges, glazing, painting, repairing and pointing with cement stone-work, steps and platforms, &c., and materials received for the above work from 1st August to 1st October, 1898.....	$1,333 74
Post Office— To pay for new oak doors, trimmings, &c., for the lobby of the post office, 270 superficial feet, including glazing, varnishing and polishing same	$630 36
For new street-receiver of the post office on St. James Street	100 00
	720 36

Total grant required..... $2,054 10

Quebec—Citadel—Governor General's quarters, to pay for work done.. $2,236 51

Mr. FOSTER. What is this for ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That was for repairs. in consequence of the Governor General having taken up his residence there. At the beginning of the season it was not known that His Excellency intended to occupy the Citadel.

Mr. FOSTER. That is for this summer's occupation ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Ottawa Public Buildings—
Photographic establishment for Patent offices, Department of Agriculture.... $7,000

Mr. ROSS ROBERTSON. I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Agriculture about this expenditure of $7,000 for a photographic equipment. I recognize the fact that a photographic establishment is one of the most useful annexes that the public departments could have, especially in connection with the department that my hon. friend controls, but in connection with the archives department as well. In the British Museum where valuable documents are stored there is a photographic establishment for the purpose of assisting in the examination and reproduction of records. But it strikes me that $7,000 is a large sum for an equipment.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That includes a very large amount for other works in addition to the photographic apparatus. I have not the exact figures in my mind and I have no memorandum. It includes a large amount for steel shelving put into the building, and which was substituted for the old wooden shelving which was considered dangerous in the Langevin Block, a building intended to be practically fire-proof. This work has been going on during this year, and, while the item appears, on the face of it, to be for photographic apparatus, that really has cost less than half of the amount indicated. I am speaking from memory when I say less than half, but I think that the photographic room, the dark room and the staircase to reach it, because it is away in the top of the block, and they had to construct a spiral iron staircase, cost nearly $3,000. The remainder of the money is for other work, such as this steel shelving which is being put in to a considerable extent in place of the old wooden shelving, which is looked upon as being dangerous in that block.

Mr. ROSS ROBERTSON. Does that refer to the steel shelving on the second floor of the Langevin Block where Mr. Brymner's department is ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes, and some above that.

Mr. ROSS ROBERTSON. Are these shelves now filled with the books taken out of the Western Block ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Yes.

Mr. ROSS ROBERTSON. As I pointed out on former occasions in regard to the archives, there has been difficulty with people, not only those who have come from the United States, but from Great Britain, in obtaining a look at valuable public documents owing to the disarrangement of the archives department after the fire in the Western Block.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That is all settled now, so that the documents are easily obtained and available.

Mr. FOSTER. What are the items in reference to this $7,000 ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They are as follows :—

For heating, plumbing, electric motor, shafting, new pump, &c.....	$ 900
"Eclipse" office furniture, 54 sections of steel shelving.....	2,101
One circular iron stair.....	274
J. Bailey, for iron-work, &c.....	327
W. J. Charleson, for hardware supply....	421
C. Ross Co., for desks, chairs, blinds, duck	215
Material of all kinds.....	1,006
Labour	1,600
Painting material	55
Labour, painting.....	100
Total	$7,000

Mr. FISHER.

Mr. FOSTER. Where was that done ? Is that work done in the room or rooms to be used for photographic purposes ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. No, this steel shelving is in a number of rooms on the second floor of the Langevin Block. The room which is allotted to us as a photographic room is right in the centre of the block and back from the street up on the roof. There was no access to it except by this spiral staircase which has been put in from the third floor. This will run up to what is equal to $2,500, and perhaps more.

Mr. FOSTER. Then there is something for plumbing and all that sort of thing ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. We had to put in a water tank and get a water supply for photographic purposes.

Mr. FOSTER. And that cost $900 ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I do not remember the items.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). Yes, that was what the hon. Minister of Finance read.

Mr. FOSTER. Is that photographic establishment for the Government or is each Minister going to have a little photographic establishment of his own ? The Public Works Department, with their view of being a microcosm in themselves, have, I believe, a full-fledged photographer there, with lots of lantern slides, chemicals, dark cloths, and all the like of that. I am not sure but that the hon. Minister of the Interior (Mr. Sifton) has tucked away in some of his rooms an elaborate system of photography as well, and now the young Minister of Agriculture comes along with his spiral staircase and $900 worth of plumbing and photographic establishment. I think the Government need one photographic establishment, but, in the name of all that is economical, why do you not make one do for all the work of the Government. By and by it will be that every good Grit will be running in to have his picture taken for nothing. Seriously, I want to ask the hon. gentleman what would be the character of this photographic business ?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. This photographic work is carried on in connection with the classification of patents for the exchanges and rearranging them in the patent office. It will be quite impossible to do that work away from the department, because the patents have to be taken off to the room and spread out and photographed and brought back immediately and placed where they belong. It would be impossible to allow these patents, which are the only records we have, to go out of the charge of the department. It is a work that will take several years. After that, if the patents increase as they are, the room will be kept busy all the time with this work. It would be quite impossible to do it in any other department or at another place. The work in connection with this is provided for under the vote for classification of patents in the main Estimates, and that is the reason this photographing arrangement was needed.

Mr. FOSTER. Is it not possible that the photographing work which is done for the Public Works should not be brought under the same system. Who is the photographer?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. Mr. Desjardins, an officer of the department. He could not undertake this work without special arrangements for it. The room is now wholly occupied by him and his assistant, and at the rate they are able to do the work it will take nearly three years to get through the arrears.

Mr. ROSS ROBERTSON. I have no desire to find fault with this expenditure for a photographic room, but I would like to ask the Minister whether a person who desires the photographic reproduction of documents in the Archives Department, will have the opportunity of using this photographic room on payment of a fee, or on payment for the negatives or for the prints. In the British Museum no documents are allowed outside the museum, but they may be placed in charge of an official and taken to a photographic room where they are reproduced; prints made and the public accommodated. The reason I mention this is, that I had occasion to have about 100 photographs made of historical works in the Library, and the light in the Library is so wretched that it was impossible for the photographer to work. On a special occasion the Librarian has kindly allowed, under the charge of an officer, a document to be taken out and photographed, and brought back immediately. If this room could be made available for the public I think it would be a step in the right direction, and it would be of immense assistance to a large number of people who are searching the Archives Department in connection with the writing of Canadian history.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I am not aware of any such request having been made, but I quite agree that such work could be done there perfectly. As a matter of fact we have applications for copies of patents which we have not yet reached in our ordinary work, but which we have photographed for the applicants. In making this classification of patents we have made arrangements to keep the negatives, so that at any time application is made for a copy of a patent, we can print it at once and have it available. I see no reason why, if it is desired to photograph documents in the archives, it could not be done in that way. I shall take steps to see that that privilege is given to the public.

Mr. BENNETT. With respect to the expenditure of this $7,000, were tenders asked for the work performed or the materials purchased?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. That would be in connection with the Public Works Department, but I can safely say it is work that could not be done by contract. It would be impossible to explain at the commencement of the work what was required, and it must necessarily be done by day's work.

Mr. BENNETT. What about the construction of the spiral stairway?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There were no tenders for that.

Mr. BENNETT. For what part of the expenditure were tenders asked?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. For the electric motor only. The largest item is $2,100 for sections of steel shelving. There are only two firms in Canada which make that class of work, and both have been employed by the Government at prices which are deemed to be fair.

Mr. FOSTER. I have no objection at all to those two enterprising establishments getting the work of the Government, but because there are only two, is no reason why there should not be tenders asked as between those two. Even if there were but one such establishment in Canada, there ought to be some method of getting at the price of the work as compared with similar establishments in the United States so as to see, that while Canadians do get the work, which I am glad of, the Government still protects the public treasury by the competition principle. Is the work simply done by private agreement between the Minister and the gentlemen who own these factories?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. When we have only two establishments of the kind in the country we are not always sure we would have competition even if we called for tenders, because there is a strong temptation, if they are human, to put their heads together. The matter was the subject of negotiation with the parties, and ultimately a price which was considered a very reasonable one was agreed upon.

Mr. BENNETT. For what other item, except the electric motor were tenders called for?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There were no tenders for anything else except the motor item of $900.

Mr. BENNETT. Then there has been an expenditure of $6,000 in respect to which tenders have not been invited. My humble protest goes out against such a system, particularly in view of the fact that if a mail contract is to be let for $60, or $70 a year, or a buoy service is to be provided at $60 a year, competition is invited. But when it comes to an expenditure of $6,000, the Minister can go to his party friends and distribute the patronage without tender. It is a striking fact that the firm of Charleson & Company appear for a considerable amount here, as well as in a number of other places, especially in the Public Works Department. I again protest against the large expenditure of $6,000 being made without competition being invited.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. About $1,700 of this is for labour performed by the men regularly employed in the service of the department; so that that would hardly be a matter for tender.

Mr. BENNETT. If that much is expended on labour, it shows that the work is a fair matter for competition.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is one of the great questions, whether contract or day labour is preferable. Some think day labour is preferable.

Mr. ROSS ROBERTSON. Referring to the vote for the archives, I would like to ask the Minister of Agriculture, whether it is the intention of his department, at any future time, to issue a catalogue of the works in the archives branch, other than the list that is published in the very excellent report which Mr. Brymner, the archivist, issues each year?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. I have not discussed that question with Mr. Brymner at all. It is a matter that has not been brought to my attention.

Mr. ROSS ROBERTSON. The Minister is aware that there is no catalogue at present except the card catalogue, so that, when a non-resident of Ottawa wants certain information for historical purposes, it is very difficult to lay hands upon the proper books or documents.

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE. The cataloguing of these books and documents would take some little time, and it could only be properly done by a man with special qualifications for the work.

Committee rose, and reported progress.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies) moved the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to, and the House adjourned at 12 midnight.

Mr. BENNETT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY, 15th June, 1899.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

PRAYERS

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 150)—from the Senate—to incorporate the Imperial Loan and Investment Company.—(Mr. Landerkin.)

Bill (No. 151)—from the Senate—respecting the Canadian Northern Railway Company.—(Mr. Ellis.)

Bill (No. 152)—from the Senate—respecting the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company (Limited).—(Mr. Morrison.)

POST OFFICE ACT AMENDMENT.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Mr. Mulock) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 155) to further amend the Post Office Act. He said: Under the Post Office Act, publishers may inclose in newspapers sent to subscribers certain matter, such as accounts, circular invitations for subscriptions, &c.; but are not allowed to do this in the case of sample copies, that is papers sent to other than subscribers. The first section of this Bill proposes to extend the same privilege to sample copies as is now given in the case of copies sent to regular subscribers. The second section proposes to make eligible for the position of superintendents of railway mail service, clerks who have been in the railway mail service, even though they may not have been continuously railway mail clerks. At present superintendents must be chosen from those who have been for ten years railway mail clerks, and that rather limits the choice. The third section provides for the fixing of a rate for mailable matter mailed after the regular hour for closing the mails. The object is to enable the post office to forward to the trains matter that would ordinarily have to wait the next outgoing train, and for this service to charge a late-fee. This system is in use in Great Britain, and, possibly, elsewhere.

Mr. CLARKE. Will there be an extra collection from boxes in connection with that?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I cannot go into the details. We will endeavour to make it as effective as possible. That may be a point to be considered in connection with it. The last provision is to enable the department to provide indemnity for the loss of registered mailable matter to the amount of $25, or whatever less sum is sufficient to make up the actual loss, and to charge fees as an insurance fund to make good the loss to the department under such circumstances.

Mr. DAVIN. Will the hon. Minister (Mr. Mulock) please say what the object of the second clause is—that with regard to railway mail superintendents?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. At present, a railway mail superintendent must have been ten years a railway mail clerk. Some railway mail clerks are transferred from the railway mail service on the trains to the railway mail service in the cities—perhaps to be assistant superintendents—and the clause provides that the superintendent may be chosen from those who have been in the railway mail service, whether they have served ten years on the trains or ten years partly on the trains and partly inside.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

INSPECTION OF TUBERCULOSIS.

Mr. BERGERON asked:

1. Have the Government caused an inspection to be made for tuberculosis, in the county of Chicoutimi, since 1896, and notably at Hebertville?

2. If so, what sums have been paid for such inspection?

3. To whom have the amounts been paid, and how much has been expended for salary, travelling expenses and board?

4. Has one David Ouellet received any money in connection with the said inspection?

The MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE (Mr. Fisher). This is practically the same question as the hon. member for Montmorcency (Mr. Casgrain) asked some time ago. He has a motion on the paper now for all the papers connected with it, which I shall be glad to bring down when the motion is passed.

HON. JUDGE CHOQUETTE.

Mr. TAYLOR asked:

1. To what judicial district was the Hon. P. A. Choquette assigned as a puisne judge of the Superior Court of the province of Quebec?

2. Does the said Hon. P. A. Choquette reside at the chief town (chef-lieu) of the judicial district to which he was so assigned?

3. If not, where does he reside, and in virtue of what authority?

4. How much has been paid to the said Hon. P. A. Choquette for travelling expenses from the date of his appointment to the present date?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL (Mr. Fitzpatrick). 1. Arthabaska. 2 and 3. The department has no definite information as to whether the judge has yet removed to Arthabaskaville, but some recent correspondence with him would seem to indicate that he still resides in Montmagny. In October last the judge asked to be allowed travelling expenses in connection with courts held at Arthabaskaville for six months from the date of his appointment, but he was informed in reply that such claim could not be allowed. 4. $450.

I. C. R.—ASSISTANT MANAGER.

Mr. CASGRAIN (by Mr. Taylor) asked:

1. While Mr. A. R. Macdonald, late assistant manager of the Intercolonial Railway, was suspended, who acted in his stead?

2. Did the person so acting in Mr. Macdonald's stead receive the salary of the assistant manager?

3. Is it not a fact that at one time three persons were receiving the salary of assistant manager, viz., A. R. Macdonald, one Belleau and one Ouellet?

4. Was the said Ouellet dismissed, and if so, for what reason?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). 1. While A. R. Macdonald was suspended, Chas. Belleau, chief train despatcher at Rivière du Loup, acted as superintendent in his stead. 2. Macdonald's rate of pay was $141.66 a month. Belleau's rate of pay as chief despatcher was $83.33 a month, to which, while he was acting superintendent, we added $41.67 per month, making his pay during such period $125 per month. 3. No, that is not the fact. 4. Yes, Ouellet was dismissed for neglect of duty.

GRANT TO THE CITY OF OTTAWA.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved that this House do resolve itself into Committee of the Whole to-morrow to consider the following proposed resolution:—

That it is expedient to provide that in consideration of the municipal corporation of the city of Ottawa providing adequate water supply and fire protection for the property of the Dominion Government in the said city and in the vicinity thereof, and exempting the Dominion Government from any charge therefor, the Minister of Finance and Receiver General be authorized to pay out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada the sum of $60,000 per annum for a period not exceeding twenty years, for the purpose of improving and beautifying the city of Ottawa by the acquisition and maintenance and improvement of public squares, and the improvement of the streets and thoroughfares in the said city: such a sum to be paid to a board of commissioners to be appointed under the authority of an Act of the Parliament of Canada to be passed for such purpose.

Motion agreed to.

INSPECTION OF WHEAT.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE (Sir Henri Joly de Lotbinière) moved: That Order No. 17, for the second reading of Bill (No. 132) to amend the General Inspection Act, be discharged, and that he have leave to withdraw the said Bill.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the reason of this extraordinary proceeding?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE This Bill is for the inspection of wheat, and my hon. friend understands what an important question that is. The Bill was prepared with considerable care with the view of rendering justice, as we thought, to all parties concerned. But since the Bill has been in print, and even before the Bill was printed, I received protests from a number of millers, dealers and others, especially in Ontario and Quebec, against some portions of the Bill, and asking to be heard before the Bill was pressed in this House. I thought it was only fair and just to delay the Bill in order to grant their request. A couple of days ago there was a meeting of the representatives of the Ontario millers, and of the different boards of trade of Toronto, Montreal and other cities, as well as of the western members and representatives of western interest; and the result was that we adopted a number of modifications to the Bill which, I think, are of a nature to render justice to all parties. The Bill was at first prepared more with a view to meet the requirements of the North-west exclusively rather than of the whole Dominion. Now that we see what the views of the east are, as well as those of the west, we shall try to embody them in a new Bill. The Bill as introduced and printed has been so much changed and amended by various new provisions, that we think it would be very difficult for the House to discuss it and understand it until it is reprinted. Therefore, I ask leave to withdraw this Bill that I may introduce another one.

Motion agreed to.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE moved for leave to introduce a Bill (No. 156) to amend the General Inspection Act.

Mr. FOSTER. Please explain the purport of the new Bill.

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. I have done so to some extent in explaining the purport of the first Bill. The real purpose of the Bill has not been discarded. The purpose was to recover for our Manitoba wheat the good name to which it is entitled, and which it was in danger of losing if the measures necessary to secure a good inspection continued any longer to be neglected. The intention of the first Bill was to protect the good name of our Manitoba wheat, and that is the intention of this Bill. Everybody understands how important that is. Indeed, I look upon the wheat of the North-west as ten times more valuable than all the gold of the Klondike; and I do not think we can take too much care to teach the people of England, who are the principal consumers of that wheat, to appreciate its superiority.

Sir HENRI JOLY DE LOTBINIERE.

The first Bill was prepared at the instigation and on the advice of the farmers of the North-west, the dealers and exporters; it was really for the purpose of protecting the grain of the North-west. But it was a little too exclusive in that it had in view the consumers of North-west wheat, who live principally in England, to the neglect of the consumers in Ontario and Quebec. Naturally, these latter thought they had a perfect right to ask that their claims should be heard and taken into consideration, and that they should receive protection and fair-play. The Bill had not been prepared from that point of view, but rather from the point of view of exportation to England. In the preparation of the new Bill we have endeavoured to give fair-play to all parties, to the millers and exporters of Ontario and Quebec, as well as to the wheat-growers of the North-west.

Mr. DAVIN. Does my hon. friend (Sir Henri Joly de Lotbinière) provide for an enlarged percentage of Red Fife in No. 1 hard in the Bill?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. We increase the percentage from two-thirds to seventy-five per cent.

Mr. FOSTER. Does the hon. gentleman allow any inspection east of Winnipeg?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE. That is exactly where the difficulty lies. We had so much confidence in our inspection that I must say the claims of the east were to a certain degree overlooked, and it was on account of the millers of Ontario bringing forward that claim to consideration that we have amended the Bill so as to give them the right, in case there is reason for them to be dissatisfied with the inspection in the North-west, to have another inspection made.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

SUPPLY.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding) moved that the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed to, and the House resolved itself into Committee of Supply.

(In the Committee.)

Further amount required for unforeseen expenses generally.....	2,000 00
Additional amount required for winter mail service	1,500 00

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I see in the account here $10,000 for the "Stanley," and $20,000 for the maintenance of Dominion steamers. That makes practically $30,000 in addition to the general vote for maintenance. How much does that make altogether for the year ending June, 1899 ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). Repairs and maintenance are always kept separate. This is a special vote for repairs, $3,000 for the "Lansdowne," and $7,000 for the "Stanley." After the heavy winter's work the "Stanley" has been at Pictou undergoing certain repairs to her bottom, sides, boilers and machinery. The repairs have been made under Mr. Stephen's survey. This is separate altogether from the "Lansdowne" account. As to the $20,000 for the maintenance of the Dominion steamers, the hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper) will recollect that I have already explained that in 1897 "La Canadienne" had been injured and the local engineer reported that it would cost close upon $40,000 to repair her. I determined not to repair her, so that in that year she was not in the service. The "Aberdeen" was transferred from the marine service for a year to the fishery service, and paid out of the fisheries vote. I had "La Canadienne" examined by Mr. Stephens, and I found that the local engineer had hugely exaggerated the case when he said that it would take $40,000 to repair her. I found that it would take nothing like that sum, and when I had "La Canadienne" repaired she took her place again in the fishery service, and the "Aberdeen," which had been paid out of the fishery vote, went back to the marine vote. The marine vote had been cut down by this $20,000, and now that the "Aberdeen" has gone back to the marine service, this amount has to be voted for maintaining her.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I do not think the hon. Minister quite understands what I mean. I am not referring to the bulk vote. I see in the present Estimates for the year ending June, 1900, $145,000 for maintenance and repairs to Government steamers. What would the vote be for the year expiring the 1st of July, 1899, as compared with the vote for 1899-1900, which is $145,000, adding this amount of $30,000 ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I think I gave the items, but I have the statement here showing what the vote has been since 1897-98. In 1897-98, it was $117,644.39. A vote was taken last year of $112,000. The expenditure makes this $20,000 more, or $132,000, and the addition of $10,000 for repairs to the "Stanley" and the "Aberdeen" would make the expenditure $142,000.

Mr. McDUGALL. I would like to ask the hon. Minister whether he is able to give any information to the committee in regard to the extraordinary price paid for coal. This item covers an item for coal bought from the Dominion Coal Co. I have no complaint as regards the amount charged by the Dominion Coal Co, being $1.95 per ton, but I do complain about $6 and $6.25 per ton being paid for coal. Six dollars and $6.25, it appears, were paid to a gentleman in my county and also at Gaspé.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. These accounts only came in for the first time lately from the Dominion Coal Company for 1895-96-97, and, of course, I could not pay them without a vote.

Mr. McDUGALL. The hon. gentleman is mistaken. If he looks at K-99, Auditor General's Report, he will see the name of C. & W. Hackett, North Sydney, coal, 29½ tons at $6; trimming coal and sundry labour, $5.65. He will also find, on the same page, A. T. Carter, Gaspé, coal, 290 tons at $6.25 per ton.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am glad the hon. gentleman (Mr. McDougall) has called my attention to these charges, because, in view of what has been stated in the House, it is absolutely essential that I should explain how hon. gentlemen came to be misled. Until the year 1896 the Auditor General was accustomed to publish these small amounts in lump sums, called "supplies" for the different agencies. For reasons of his own, the justice of which I do not call in question, the Auditor General has seen fit since that time to publish every small detail, down to the price of every little item of baking powder.

Mr. FOSTER. That was done before 1896.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, because, as I showed the other day, from the Auditor General's Reports, these items were formerly grouped together. I am not complaining about that. I am perfectly willing, if the House is satisfied, no matter what size the Auditor General's Report may grow to be by this new process; I am perfectly willing that it should be so, and I make no complaint whatever.

But I want to state here that the manner in which the Auditor General's clerks have copied the accounts have led hon. gentlemen opposite—I attach no blame to them for it—into very serious error. Charges have been scattered broadcast throughout the country that we have paid prices for goods which are absolutely misleading. The clerks in the Auditor General's office have misled the members of this House, and misled the country, by not copying the accounts just as they found them in the vouchers. Now, take that item on page K-99—Coal, 290 tons at $6.25. That appears to the hon. gentleman (Mr. McDougall) to be a gross piece of mismanagement.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Certainly.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman (Mr. McDougall) would be led to believe that we paid $6.25 for soft coal, and, if that were so, no doubt something would be wrong in my department. Now, the Auditor General's clerk had before him the fact that that bill was rendered for 201½ tons, another bill for 43½ tons, and another for 45 tons, making the total quantity 290 tons; and on the face of each of these bills it was expressly stated that that coal was "anthracite coal." The clerk copied that bill into this book simply as "coal," leading the people to believe it was soft coal, and from one end of the country to the other the people are reading the "Hansard" reports, and believing the officers of my department have been paying $6.25 for "soft coal," when the very voucher under the hands of the Auditor General's clerk shows that it was not "soft coal," but "anthracite coal." The department has been entirely misrepresented by that kind of thing. I may explain here, as much as I can, but I cannot overtake the misrepresentations which have been sent out with regard to the matter. The "Hansard" has gone all over the country, and, make as many explanations as I can, I never will be able to get these explanations in the hands of those who made the misrepresentations.

Mr. FOSTER. Send them out a copy of the vouchers.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I would have to send them all over the Dominion. Some of the Conservative papers have copied the item and called the attention of their ten thousand and one readers to the alleged fact that the Department of Marine paid $6.25 for soft coal, which every one knew could be purchased for $3.25. I cannot see what excuse the clerk in the Auditor General's office had for doing a thing like this. I know very well that the Auditor General, neither directly nor indirectly, would be a party to such wrong-doing. But, nevertheless, the injury has been done. I hold in my hand the original vouchers which went through the Auditor General's office, and on the face of each of these vouchers it is plainly stated that Carter's account was for anthracite coal. I cannot understand how such a mistake came to be made in the Auditor General's office. But this is not the only complaint I have to make. My hon. friend from South Leeds (Mr. Taylor) cited a series of apparent overcharges, and, when I asked my accountant for an explanation, he stated that if the clerks in the Auditor General's office had copied these accounts as they should have been copied, misrepresentations would not have been made, not only with regard to coal, but with regard to other articles.

Sir LOUIS DAVIES.

Mr. TAYLOR. Name them.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I shall. For instance, in Mr. Parent's account there was a good deal of half fun and half earnest about a pair of scissors costing $3.60. Now, they are not "scissors" at all, but "shears" for cutting sheet-iron, and yet they were copied in the Auditor General's Report as "scissors." The clerk would have no object in misleading the House and the country, but nevertheless hon. gentlemen have been misled. Then, there was a great deal said about the price paid for bricks. The hon. gentleman from South Leeds (Mr. Taylor) talked for hours about it, and I do not blame him, because the Auditor General's Report shows simply that bricks were bought at 4 cents each. They were not ordinary bricks.

Mr. TAYLOR. They were white bricks.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, they were fire-bricks, bought for the furnaces, and they were not paid for at the rate of 4 cents each, but the account shows that they are "white-bricks," purchased at 3½ cents each, as low a price as ever was paid for them. Why did not the Auditor General's clerk copy that in; why mislead the House and the country; why allow the department to lie under this heavy cloud of extravagance which the hon. gentleman (Mr. Taylor) has raised against it. I hold in my hand each of these accounts, and they are open to the inspection of hon. gentlemen opposite. But that is not all. Then, I was seriously charged with being an extravagant man, because I had bought a bucket for $4.80. The account is Mr. Chouinard's of Quebec. I turned up the account, and I find that it does not say a bucket alone but a "bucket of pickles," which we bought for $4.80. By the omission of the word "pickles" I am represented as paying $4.80 for bucket.

Mr. FOSTER. That left you in a bad pickle.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Then my hon. friend spoke of biscuits. He seemed to know a great deal about the price of biscuits, and waxed very warm about that. What biscuits? There is no designation of the kind at all. Well, I turned up the account, and they are marked ginger biscuits, which I am told is a special kind, and the price charged is said by my accountant, who has been accountant for many years, to be reasonable and proper.

Mr. FOSTER. How much?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. $3.20 for 28 pounds. Sometimes His Excellency and suite take a little trip down on the "Druid," and the officers at Quebec provide the best fare for them.

Mr. MONTAGUE. It is not fair to charge His Excellency with eating a bucket of pickles.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I will leave that question to the critics on the other side of the House. Now, I want to call my hon. friend's attention to some others of the little items he speaks of. Mr. Gregory, the agent at Quebec, after seeing the report of the debate in "Hansard," wrote the following letter to the accountant:—

Baking powder in this city is sold by grocers at from 15 cents to 60 cents per pound. Go to any grocer in Ottawa, and ask him the price of the "Royal" baking powder, and I do not think you can get it under 50 cents a pound; that would make it $6 per dozen. There are several other brands, varying in price to 15 cents a pound. We never buy the latter; but, occasionally, we buy as near the "Royal" as possible: hence the charge by Chouinard of $4.80 per dozen. We usually pay $3 per dozen, as you will see by M. Thibaudeau's and Ls. Mercier's bills. Baking powder is in one-pound, half-a-pound and quarter-pound packages; that would make a difference in price. The higher price is for special purposes, and many people think it is cheaper on account of its superior quality, and taking so much less to cause the rising of flour, especially pastry.

As to the price of biscuits, on some special occasions, when the Governor-General has been on board, or some other distinguished persons, for a fine quality of table biscuits as high as 20 cents per pound has been paid; but this very rarely happens.

Now comes the question of brick at 4 cents apiece. I paid $35 a thousand for the white fire-brick I built my house with, and bought several thousands; that is pretty nearly 4 cents apiece. The bricks we paid 4 cents for, by the hundred, are worth it, and that is the price. Every one of them was selected by hand, a large portion of them being arch-bricks, and all imported into this country from Scotland, and used for our furnace buildings.

Mr. TAYLOR. The finest buildings. The hon. gentleman will find that my statement that they were white bricks is right. I have read those letters.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This is the official's report.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Where do you find fire-bricks mentioned?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. They are called fire-bricks by Mr. Gregory, and they are put in the account as white bricks, and I am told by my accountant and deputy that they are fire-bricks.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. What is stated in the account sent to the Auditor General?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. "White bricks" in each case.

Mr. MONTAGUE. How long has that clerk been in the office? We must have suffered badly from him.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. In your days the Auditor General did not set down the details.

Mr. FOSTER. I will correct my hon. friend. If he takes up the Auditor General's Report for 1895, he will find that the details are just as minute there as they are in the last report.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman is wrong. I cited the other night from the Auditor General's Report a great many instances in which he grouped a number of these small charges together as sundries. I went to the Auditor and asked him why he had adopted the new system. He said he had adopted it in the year 1896, before this Government had come into power.

Mr. FOSTER. I will read to my hon. friend these items from the Auditor's Report of 1895:

Washers, 5 lbs. at 8c.; screws, 79½ gross, $10.51; sash fasteners, 2 doz. at 20c.; pulls, 6 at 5c., 75 at 2c.; buttons, 54 at 3c., 60 at 2½c.; door-springs, 2 at 50c.; tarred felt, 6 rolls at 65c., 6 rolls at 60c.

And so on.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not doubt that there are a large number of details, but what I say is that he was accustomed to group these small items in one lump sum of $2,000 or $3,000. I do not complain of his doing this, but I want it done squarely. On the question of these bricks for which we charge 3½ cents and 3 cents—

Mr. TAYLOR. Four cents.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. One place at 4 cents; but here is the bill and the hon. gentleman will not find a charge of 4 cents in it. The Auditor General's Report for 1891-92, page C-265, showed that 511 fire-bricks cost $52.79, or over 10 cents each.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman must know that there is quite a difference between fire-bricks and bricks used for building purposes. No one ever knew of fire-bricks being used for the erection of a residence.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. These are not fire-bricks for a residence ; they are used for the furnaces.

Mr. TAYLOR. For arches over windows.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. For the arches of furnaces in lighthouse stations and fog signals. I was pointing out that according to the Auditor General's Report of 1891-92, white bricks were then bought at over 10 cents each. And in the Auditor General's Report of 1893-94, at page J—22, 400 fire-bricks cost $16. or 4 cents each ; and in the Auditor General's Report of 1895-96, 579 fire-bricks cost 4½ cents each. In the bill which the hon. gentleman criticises these bricks are charged for at only 3½ cents.

Mr. COCHRANE. Does the account say they are white brick or fire-brick ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. White brick, and the agent tells me that they are fire-brick for furnaces.

Mr. TAYLOR. Read his letter ; he says they are for the arches of the house.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The arches of the furnaces.

Mr. TAYLOR. No, no.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (reading)—

Every one of them was selected by hand, a large portion being arch-bricks, all imported into this country from Scotland, and used for our furnace buildings. * * * As to the iron at 3½ cents, that was a special order of a special size—6 in. by 3 in. by ½—specially made for tanks, and sold at the time all the way from $2 to $3.50, according to gauge. The whole bill for this special iron only amounted to $25 or $26. We could have bought ordinary tank plates at $2.25 to $2.50 ; but these special sizes always cost more, and had to be specially ordered. The price may appear high, but has always been so for such brands of iron.

Now, when it comes to bar-iron, there are several prices. There is common bar-iron and bolts, used for building wharfs. That iron can be bought at $1.90 per 100 lbs.; but refined iron, in bars, differs in price according to size, and is always considerably higher than common iron. We use the very best refined iron in our forges in making chains, swivels, shackles, &c., &c.

As to nails, common nails can be purchased at from $2.10 to $4 ; finishing nails, $3.15 to $4.50 ; and wire nails, $3 to $5, according to size. In our business, we sometimes require 200 or 300, or so, of specially hand-made nails, and the quantity of such nails obtained by us is very small.

Then he goes on to say about the confusion in the accounts :

These things are jumbled up in the blue-book, in the shape of baking powder, biscuits, nails, iron, &c. For instance, one pair of scissors is marked down at $3. Why, it might be a pair of shears for tinsmith work, worth from $2 to $5. Putty is quoted at $1.85 per pound, when it is meant for 100 lbs., and it is cheap at that. The question of shovels also came up. Shovels vary in price from 50 cents to $1.50. The shovels that we use and buy at 90 cents are very large and strongly made, specially for coaling vessels, and carry nearly half a bushel.

If the large quantity of 3½-cent iron is referred to in the attack, they are steel plates of a special size used in the construction of the deck-house of the "Constance." I can only say that it was most difficult to get it at any price at all, because the stocks here were all out, and Mr. Parent had to import it specially in the winter, paying high rates of freight and cartage. Even now steel plates are exceedingly scarce, demands being months ahead of the supply.

Now, the accountant gives a memorandum on the same lines, explaining that the biscuits were ginger and table biscuits, and the beans complained of were charged $2 a bushel, or 175 pounds at 4 cents. I do not know whether that is reasonable or not, but can only compare it with prices paid heretofore. In the Auditor General's Report of 1895, K—101, 5 cents per pound are charged for beans. On page K—13 of the same year, $2.10 per bushel is charged. The best quality of beans is sold at 3 cents per pound in cities, and in outside parts at 4 cents per pound. As regards coal, I have given the hon. gentleman pretty full explanation of that. I find in the Auditor General's Report of 1893-94, pages J—48 and 49, 161 tons of coal charged at $6.90.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Does that say hard coal ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am pointing out that prices charged in previous years are higher than the ones criticised now. This is anthracite coal and not soft.

Mr. McDOUGALL. There are two other bills.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not know whether it is necessary for me to read all through these explanations. He goes through it pretty much as did the agent at Quebec.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Does the same explanation apply to the bill of Mr. Hackett of North Sydney, for coal—29½ tons of coal at $6, page K—99 ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have not all the accounts for that. The accounts were sent to the Committee on Public Accounts, on the motion of my hon. friend. Will I have to look them up and see if the same explanation applies ?

Mr. McDOUGALL. Why does the hon. gentleman pay in Pictou 65 cents per ton more for coal than in Cape Breton ?

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. It is better coal.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It must be better coal.

Mr. McDougall. Not at all. Cape Breton coal is being brought into Pictou to take the place of Pictou coal. What is the system under which coal is supplied?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The bulk of the coal is supplied by tender, but should a vessel come into port out of coal either the agent or the master of the vessel buys a supply at the current market prices, and has to certify that it is the current market price.

Mr. McDougall. It seems to me that the hon. Minister, knowing that during the season a large quantity would be required for the use of his steamers, ought to ask the coal people for tenders, and then instruct those in charge of the steamers to apply to the parties whose tenders are accepted for the coal they need.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have explained that the coal is purchased by tender, but often a vessel goes to an outport short of coal, and is allowed to purchase the necessary supply for the time being at the current market price.

Mr. Taylor. The hon. Minister has attempted to clear up the charges that I made and produces a file of accounts which do not at all refer to the item I was discussing, page K-46, $4,475, the bill for which are in the Public Accounts Committee. The parcel my hon. friend has sent across to me refers to a bill for $1,423.84.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have sent the hon. gentleman part of the bills. Here are some more.

Mr. Taylor. My hon. friend has said that in the accounts there are no bricks at $4, but the first item in the Auditor General's Report is 100 bricks at $4.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. While the Auditor General's clerk has entered so many bricks at $4 per 100, I cannot find any voucher to correspond with that. They are all $3.50 per 100.

Mr. Taylor. I saw that in the Public Accounts Committee, and they are marked white brick, and the letter which my hon. friend read corroborated that fact, because he said the best buildings in Scotland are built from them and they are used here for arches.

Mr. Gibson. They do not build houses in Scotland with white bricks.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. They do not build houses in the Marine and Fisheries Department. I told the hon. gentleman, on the authority of the agent in Quebec, that these were purchased for furnaces.

Mr. Taylor. The hon. Minister tells us that what was put down here as a pair of scissors by the clerk is in reality a pair of tinsmith shears. But if he had referred to Mr. Parent's account for things we could all understand, he will find at page K-46 that Mr. Parent supplied sixty-seven kegs of nails at an average price of $4.12 per keg. They run from $3.25 to $5. At the same time Chown & Co., of Kingston, as seen at page I-19, supplied twenty-eight kegs of nails at an average of $2.27½. There is double the price paid in one case that is paid at another for an article that everybody knows about. And the Minister comes down and in the supplementary Estimates asks for $30,000 additional to carry on this service.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I explained that.

Mr. Taylor. In the main Estimates last year the hon. gentleman asked for $95,000, and now he comes down for an additional $10,000, and an additional $20,000, making a total of $125,000, a sum larger than ever was asked by the late Government for this service.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That is not true. I gave the hon. gentleman the amounts and he ought not to make that statement. I showed that the expenditures had been as follows, in round numbers:—

1885-86	130,000
1886-87	141,000
1887-88	150,000
1888-89	126,000
1889-90	114,000
1890-91	111,000
1891-92	127,000
1892-93	146,000
1893-94	142,000
1894-95	129,000
1895-96	150,000

Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper. Does the hon. gentleman know in what years these larger sums covered part of the purchase of the "Stanley," the "Aberdeen," and other vessels?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The money to purchase the vessels is voted apart from this.

Mr. Taylor. It is as my hon. friend (Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper) says—the years when there is a large amount it is accounted for by the purchase of some Government steamer.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I beg the hon. gentleman's pardon. The purchase price of these steamers was voted apart from this. We would not take a vote for maintenance and buy a steamer with it.

Mr. Taylor. The charge that the hon. gentleman makes is that the Auditor General's Report did not give details until 1896. Why, my hon. friend from North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) could not have remained in the House had that been the case. He came here day after day with details of prices, and declaimed against extravagance, and said that when his friends got into power all this would be done away with, and all goods be bought by public tender. But is that the case? The hon. gentleman (Sir Louis Davies) is asking now, as I predicted he would, for a supplementary estimate to make up the deficiency caused by these extravagant prices. His purchasing agent paid $4.12 for nails, when we know that the price last year for the average sizes was $2 at wholesale—the Government ought to get them at wholesale.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Will the hon. gentleman (Mr. Taylor) listen to the explanation Mr. Gregory gives as to the nails:

As to the nails, common nails could be purchased at from $2.10 to $4; finishing nails, $3.15 to $4.50, and wire nails $3 to $5, according to sizes. In our business, we require 200 or 300 or so of specially hand-made nails, and the quantity of such nails obtained by us is very small.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. Minister had better discharge the man who makes the statement that wire nails are worth from $4 to $5 a keg.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. He says from $3 to $5.

Mr. TAYLOR. I ask my hon. friend from Hamilton (Mr. Wood) what wire nails are worth? They are manufactured in Hamilton.

Mr. WOOD. It would depend upon the size.

Mr. TAYLOR. But from 3-inch up the prices are the same. When you come down to half and quarter inch, you pay a little more. I know about nails; I have sold them, and know the prices. The price was $2.25 at retail in the country stores last year. My hon. friend from South Wellington (Mr. Kloefer) told me this morning that he had purchased a car-load last year at $1.80. And the Government that ought to buy them at bottom prices, pays $4.12 for sixty-seven kegs purchased from Mr. Parent.

Mr. WOOD. Are they finishing nails?

Mr. MILLS. Yes, I think they will prove to be finishing nails.

Mr. TAYLOR. Another item that the hon. gentleman did not mention when he was picking out a pair of scissors and some white brick and blaming the Auditor General for inaccuracy, was condensed milk. This article is made at Truro and sold at the factory at $3.50 a case. I see by the accounts that the Yukon contingent were supplied at Vancouver for less than $5.50 a case, freight paid. And the Government purchased from fifty to one hundred cases and paid from $8 to $9.60 a case.

Mr. BENNETT. Was it sold by Charleson?

Mr. TAYLOR. It was sold by friends of the Government. I find in the accounts of Kennedy, of St. John, four cases at $6, or more than double the price for which it can be purchased.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I think it fair that the agent's statement should be given. He says that the account of J. Kennedy for condensed milk at $8 and $9 a case was challenged before the amount was paid, and the agent reported that the wholesale price in St. John for "Reindeer brand" was $2 a dozen, and "Swiss brand," $2.75. The amount was paid on receiving this explanation. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Taylor) will turn to the Auditor General's Report for 1895-96, he will see that condensed milk was paid for at $2.40, $2.25 and $3 a dozen. The hon. gentleman was perfectly satisfied with these prices then, but he finds fault with the same or a little lower prices now.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. gentleman (Sir Louis Davies) said that the details were not given in the Auditor General's Report previous to the advent to power of the present Government. Now he is able to quote details—

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Taylor) must not misrepresent me. I did not say that there were no details published; what I said was that very little of these details was given. The Auditor General was accustomed to enter "sundry supplies" in lump sums of $2,000 or $3,000.

Mr. TAYLOR. We find the same thing here. At the bottom of Mr. Parent's account you find "sundries, $100.38." And in other accounts you will find charges for "sundries." My hon. friend (Sir Louis Davies) is now proving that the Auditor General did put in details under the late Government. He is trying to meet the overwhelming proof that under his administration supplies are bought without tender, and altogether from political favourites, at two or three prices.

As to the condensed milk, that is an article that is sold everywhere, and the best known brands are the "Reindeer" and one or two others. But the best brand that was sold to the Yukon contingent, the "Reindeer" brand, was sold at Victoria at $5.60. Then, take up other items, the price of which everybody knows. Look into Kennedy's account, and you will find a large quantity of currants charged at 10 cents a pound. You can go to any store and get 3 pounds of them by retail for 25 cents; the wholesale price is about 5½ cents. That is the price charged at Victoria and Vancouver to the Yukon contingent. I see that my hon. friend pays Bate & Son, in Ottawa, 9 cents for currants, and he pays his friend in the county of St. John 10 cents a pound, paying double prices for the article. These things account for the extravagant waste of money, and explain how it is that the Minister is obliged to ask, in the supplementary Estimates, for an extra $20,000 to pay the supplies of these steamers.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I think the Minister of Marine and Fisheries is in error in saying, that the accounts that he referred to do not include the cost of these Dominion steamers. The only case in which there was a separate account shown by his own report, Appendix No. 8, for the construction of steamers out of the ordinary amount which we take in that form, was the case of the vessel to replace the "Glendon" and "Lady Head." After that, as is shown by the Minister's own report, these vessels, both the "Stanley" and the "Aberdeen," which were built in my time, appear under a lump sum for Dominion steamers.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Not the "Stanley." I remember the vote passing; the ex-Minister of Finance brought it down.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I am quoting from his own official report, page 52, Appendix No. 8, where he will find the only two items separated for purchases for steamers, away back in the case of the "Lady Head" and the "Glendon."

But I wish to bring out a point in connection with the tidal survey. The hon. gentleman is asking $2,066.66 to supplement the sum of $4,000, which he took last year, and in connection with the general vote of $4,000 which he has in his estimates for the following year. It is in regard to a service upon which the hon. gentleman held such peculiar views that it is difficult to understand why he is spending money at all. On the 12th of May, the hon. gentleman told me across the floor of the House:

The scientists pretend that we should make a survey of the currents around the coast, and try and describe them more accurately on the chart than they are described at present, but I have not been able to find a practical seaman who shares that opinion, or an expert who recommends me to incur that expense.

Again, in that debate, he says:

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I told the hon. gentleman that I was keeping an open mind on the subject.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. But the Minister makes the extraordinary statement that no practical navigators had declared in favour of the necessity of this service.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. How can I help that? I have done all I could to inform myself, and I have yet to find a practical navigator who says it is necessary.

Now, in order to bring that question up sharply, I endeavoured to question the Minister of Marine and Fisheries; he thought that I was cross-examining him. On May 17th, he declined to answer a question which I put on that subject, when he said:

I am quite unaware whether there are petitions sent in by practical seamen or not. I will bring down any petitions there are.

Since then, the hon. gentleman has handed me across the floor of the House a petition, to which I call attention, because here is a service for which we are voting money from year to year, in regard to which I have complained from year to year that we were not voting enough, and that he was only half doing the work. Yet, while the Minister is asking for main and supplementary Estimates here, in the year 1899, his position was, that this was a scientific matter, and that practical navigators were not favourable. What does this petition say that has been unearthed. It was received in the department in October, November and December, showing that many names on the petition came forward in October, and the balance of the names were forwarded later. The petition shows exactly how wrong the Minister's position is, and how necessary this service is in the minds of practical men:

We, the undersigned masters and officers of vessels engaged in the navigation of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and of the waters on the Atlantic coast of the Dominion of Canada and of Newfoundland, desire earnestly and respectfully to petition the Government and Parliament of Canada, that they would promptly take such steps as they may deem advisable to obtain as thorough a knowledge as possible of the currents in these waters, whether due to the tides or to any other cause, and to distribute amongst mariners the information obtained.

We believe that the serious loss of life and of property due to shipwrecks attributable to "unknown currents" during fogs or hazy weather may thus be greatly diminished. In such weather these currents are a cause of great anxiety and danger.

Then follow several hundred names in one column, and in other columns are shown their rank, name of vessel, and tonnage of vessel. In that list will be found officers of nearly every line of steamers approaching our coasts on the Atlantic, or up the River St. Lawrence. You find there the names of well-known mariners, who have been navigating those waters for a lifetime. Take, for instance, Captain Richardson, of the "Sardinian," now retired from the service on account of age, a mariner of great experience and splendid standing. Then, there was the late Captain Hugh Wylie, of the "Polynesian," the commanders of the "Carthaginia," the "Lake Ontario," and the "Vancouver." I mention these as ships well known, but there are several hundred others. Then, there is Captain Trott, of the cable steamer "Minia," a very experienced navigator, well known to all connected with shipping. This shows that the position the Minister took, in saying that the question was not being pressed upon him by practical men, is erroneous. This petition itself should not have been lost sight of, particularly when the Minister was not entirely inactive, but was obtaining grants of money from year to year for this service. I want to ask the hon. Minister a question in regard to this item respecting Robert Angus and S. C. Hayden: when were there gentlemen appointed?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. On the 1st of May.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Of this year?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Whose places do they take?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. They do not take anybody's places. Mr. Dawson reported to me that the tidal service reports from each station were rendered useless because they were not worked out, and he said that he must have some technical clerks to work them out. I told him I could not appoint any until I got authority from Parliament. When I asked the Auditor General about it he said that I must take a special vote for it, naming the clerks. I went to Council and got authority to employ these two men, one of whom is a graduate of Prince of Wales College, and the other who has been employed by Mr. Dawson, off and on. He was a telephone or telegraph man.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Is that Mr. Hayden?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Mr. Hayden is the graduate of Prince of Wales College. Mr. Angus was a telephone and telegraph man, and he had been temporarily employed with Mr. Dawson. Mr. Dawson said that temporary employment was not what he wanted. He wanted two clerks to devote themselves to working out these figures. I got an Order in Council appointing them at $600, and I have to ask a special vote to pay the difference between $400 and $600 for the current year.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Will the hon. gentleman increase the vote after July to make this amount?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Mr. TAYLOR. I would like to ask the hon. Minister to explain an item I find in the Auditor General's Report paid to Mr.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER (Pictou).

Parsons, one of the agents of the department.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. He is the agent of the Marine Department in Nova Scotia.

Mr. TAYLOR. In a bill, which he is paid for his disbursements, I find seven cases of condensed milk at $4.50 per case that he has been allowed to purchase. He has purchased it at $4.50 per case, whereas merchants who have supplied this article at Charlottetown and elsewhere have charged from $8 to $9.60.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The purchase of the article at St. John was made through our agent, Mr. Harding, in the same way that Mr. Parsons purchased it at Halifax. It was certified to, but as the amount seemed large the accountant sent it back to Mr. Harding for an explanation, and that explanation I have referred to. It was purchased in the same way by Mr. Harding as by Mr. Parsons.

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. Parsons purchased this himself and presented the account. He purchased it for $4.50, while you are paying $9.60 in some cases for the same article to other parties. I would like to ask the hon. Minister what political friend received $25 for exterminating noxious insects? You will find that in the Auditor General's Report, K-16. You need not mind looking it up. His name is E. A. Evans.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Who is that?

Mr. TAYLOR. I suppose he is a political supporter of the Government who had to get something, and so he is put down for $25 for exterminating noxious insects.

Lighthouse and Coast Service—

Towards the construction of Upper Traverse permanent lighthouse, to replace lightship $20,000

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. In connection with this lightship, is this the first item that appears to authorize that?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Has this work all been done?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, it is now under way, and it is to pay for the work which is being done from day to day. We are building the wooden part of this structure, and taking it down to be sunk. I will require $20,000 more in the Supplementary Estimates next year as the entire work is estimated to cost $40,000. It has been a subject of a great deal of consideration, not only on my part, but on the part of my colleagues, and a special investigation has been made into it by the chief engineer personally who visited the ground. The shipping interest reported to the department that, if possible, the erection of a permanent structure in place of the floating lightships would probably result in an enormous advantage in the navigation of the St. Lawrence, and it was thought that the building of a permanent structure would keep navigation open for two or three weeks later in the fall. The lightships had to be taken away before the ice formed, whereas if there were a permanent structure and permanent lights located at that point it would render navigation safe until that time. My hon. friend from Quebec West (Mr. Dobell), the shipping interests of Quebec and Montreal, the insurance companies, and everybody interested in obtaining longer, better and safer navigation in the St. Lawrence, took the greatest interest in this work. At first the chief engineer felt inclined, from his general knowledge of the subject, to the opinion that it would cost in the neighbourhood of from $70,000 to $100,000, perhaps, to complete this work, and I hesitated, but at the request of the hon. member for Quebec West, I sent the chief engineer down to make a thorough inspection of the ground, to find the depth and strength of the water and to obtain all the data necessary to form as accurate an opinion as it is possible for an engineer to form.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Can the hon. gentleman say when the engineer went down?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Last autumn; I think sometime about September, although I cannot give the hon. gentleman a more accurate idea than that. Afterwards he made his estimate and report. After consultations with practical men he came to the conclusion that the structure could be built for about $40,000. The vote for the maintenance of lights will not enable me to pay for it out of that. As I intimated last year that I would do so, I am asking for a special vote of $20,000, which will be paid before the end of the year, and I will ask for $20,000 more.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. This opens up a very important question, which may be attended with considerable danger and certainly a great deal of inconvenience to the department. I do not recall a case, no matter how pressing the necessity of lights and aids to navigation, of a departure being made from the rule which has governed the department in the making of its estimates. For instance, there is only $30,000 taken, as a rule, to cover the cost of new lights. It once was $40,000, I think, for a year or two, but the amount was reduced to $30,000. The practice was that the items of the estimate should be under a sort of division among the provinces. We had, in order to secure an approximately fair division as between the different coasts, the Pacific, the Atlantic, and the St. Lawrence, and so on, to make that arrangement. The department is inundated from January to December with calls for lights. I am not saying a word against the Upper Traverse. That subject was often discussed and considered in my own time, but I am adverting to the departure that is being made in connection with this matter. Hitherto it has been possible under the implied instructions from this committee and the House for the Minister to simply give an answer that he has estimated for the construction of lights, and he cannot exceed that, that the amount has been divided and to go beyond that is not in his power. You have here an urgent case I admit, but it must have been before the Minister for a long time, and so that excuse is taken away. This Traverse light-house is one of the largest works ever undertaken by the department, and yet the Minister goes ahead, and without consulting Parliament, commits the country to an expense of $60,000 or $70,000 for one light, which is more than double the cost that Parliament has hitherto allowed for any light in all Canada. This is an extraordinary thing, and it brings up many considerations in connection with the system under which the country is now governed.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I think I will be able to explain it to my hon. friend (Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper) in a manner satisfactory to him. I do not call in question the principles which he said should control us in obtaining or expending this vote. The hon. gentleman will remember that this is not the first time I have taken Parliament into my confidence on this matter. I discussed it last year, and, although I said we had not reached a conclusion, yet I was in hope that when the engineer had made the survey, we would reach a conclusion and be able to build the light. I found that the present lightship had to be condemned, this was her last year anyway, and if I were to put in a new and improved lightship it would cost $50,000 or $60,000. The question arose as to whether I should wait until the first of July to begin this work, or whether I should prepare the woodwork before the ice went away, when I could do it at one-half the cost. I submitted all the facts to my colleagues in Council, and they thought, under the circumstances, I would be well warranted in taking an amount from the general appropriation, because I could do the work for one-half the price, and then when Parliament met, I could ask for a special vote, because the general vote would not cover that, and the other expenditure. I did not venture to start out on a large expenditure on this occasion without having taken Parliament into my confidence, because I informed Parliament that if the engineer reported the work could be built for any reasonable sum, I would undertake the work rather than supply a new lightship. The hon. gentleman will, therefore, see that from a business standpoint as well as from a constitutional standpoint, I was more than justified in going on. I cannot conceive it possible for any one to question the propriety of building this permanent structure, once the chief engineer reported it was feasible and could be built for $40,000.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. The Minister has nothing before him beyond the estimate of a very competent engineer, I admit, in regard to work, a large portion of which is certain of being under water. The Minister has not even asked for tenders, I understand.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The chief engineer satisfied himself thoroughly after making three or four visits to the place and examining it, that he could build it much cheaper than if it were let by contract. He told me more than that, that it was a kind of work which he would not care to trust to contract, as it was work which was required to be carefully done, under daily supervision.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Who is superintending it ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not know : he is a first-class man, though.

Mr. DOBELL. Mr. Lemieux.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. He is the best man in the country.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. He bears a very high character, and the chief engineer reported him to me as being an extremely capable man for this kind of work.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. The answer of the Minister is an answer that could be given in any case where you preferred to be governed by the Governor in Council rather than by the Parliament of Canada. Hitherto, in all these matters in connection with the construction of lights, the rule has been—

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. And a good rule.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. The rule has been that Parliament would first determine what work of that character would be undertaken, but now the same spirit that has taken possession of the Government in other matters has shown itself in this. They get the Governor in Council to approve and they go on with the work.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Had to.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Not at all.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Well, I was compelled to build a new lightship, or I had to start and build this permanent light.

Sir LOUIS DAVIES.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Why ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Because the present ship will not last more than this year, and I had to have a ship, or a permanent light ready for next year.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. That is no excuse. In 1896 or 1897, the Minister knew his lightship would not last, and he could then have come to Parliament. The excuse given by the hon. gentleman is an accusation against himself. In 1892, when I was in the department, the question was before the department, although at that time there was no urgency as to the lightship not lasting for some years. The Minister in this case has departed from the sound constitutional practice of not asking Parliament for an appropriation in time. He has opened the door to extraordinary pressure, and left himself open to a great deal of difficulties in the future. I do not object to the substitution of a permanent light for a lightship ; but I enter my protest against any department incurring this responsibility first, and then coming to Parliament simply to register a mechanical approval of it. How many men has Mr. Lemieux under him, and how much is he paid ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. He has fifteen men, my deputy tells me, and we pay the men through our agent. We calculated the other day that by the end of this month we will require the whole $20,000. but, of course, the accounts are not paid until I get this vote.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. When were these men employed ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Sometime before the ice went out of the Louise Basin. We had to do this particular cribwork on the ice, or we would have had to postpone it for another year.

Mr. BENNETT. This is on a par with the construction of a lighthouse on the north shore of the Georgian Bay, which was brought before the House by the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule). The work was done there by day's work and not by tender.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Nearly every year the chief engineer reports to me that owing to the peculiar circumstances of the case such and such a lighthouse has to be built. He advises it should be built under the supervision of Mr. Noble there, and built by our own men by day's work rather than by contract. That frequently happens ; and, as far as I am concerned, I am governed almost altogether by Col. Anderson's advice in that matter.

Mr. BENNETT. I remember that, during the term of the last Parliament, there were three lights built on the shores of the Georgian Bay. One was a very difficult structure, built on a rock of about an acre in extent and 20 miles from the shore. The Minister has undertaken an expenditure of about $40,000, of which about $20,000 has already been spent.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Will have been by the end of this month.

Mr. BENNETT. There is no use quibbling about a day or two. The Minister has based his whole argument on the report of his engineer, who, he says, recommended that the work should be done by day's work, and personally supervised. Mr. Lemieux, a first-class man, is now looking after the work. Surely, if tenders had been called for and the work let by contract, the department could have availed itself of the services of Mr. Lemieux to watch the contractor.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I can only say, that Col. Anderson reported to me that this work was of a very special character, that the cribwork had to be built on ice, and then sunk, and that, unless it were built with great care, he could not guarantee that it would stand the run of the tide there; and he strongly recommended that it should not be done by contract, but done under our own supervision. What would the hon. gentleman have me do in such a case? Would it be for me to call for tenders in the face of that recommendation?

Mr. BENNETT. The engineer is not on the ground, and will not be on the ground, supervising the work personally.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. But he has been on the ground continually.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Lemieux is entrusted with the duty of looking after the work. If he can look over a corps of men in the employ of the Government, surely he could look after a contractor's men, and see that as good and efficient work was performed by men employed by the contractor as by men employed directly by the department. This department appears to be conducting its work in a similar manner to the Public Works Department. Last night we had a sample afforded of the way in which the Public Works Department does its work, when we were informed that $6,000 worth of work is done on the Langevin Block without a tender being called for. I also find, in the Report of the Auditor General, that certain work was done by the Public Works Department in connection with the taking out of some scows to work with the dredge "Challenge"; and that work, amounting to nearly $2,000, instead of being done under contract, is entrusted to a party friend, who does just what he likes. True, the hon. Minister is fortified by the opinion of his engineer; but, when he brought his judgment to bear upon the question, surely he must have seen that if this foreman could overlook the men in the direct employment of the department, he could overlook work done by men under a contractor. But the Minister stands responsible for undertaking a work involving an expenditure of $40,000, without calling for tenders. It is the duty of the Opposition to point out these facts, and, as long as I am here, I intend to do it, more particularly as hon. gentlemen opposite seem disposed to acquiesce in everything of this kind done by the Government.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not think my hon. friend is quite fair to me. The general statement is correct, that I am taking the responsibility, as Minister, for having this work constructed by day's labour, and, if I do not succeed in having it done as cheaply as it could be done by contract, I shall be held responsible. What is the fact? Here is a man at the head of the lighthouse department, Col. Anderson, a man of very great experience, who has been in that position for the past twenty years. He was a long time making up his mind whether it could be built there at all, and stand the pressure of the ice and tides. After making a number of surveys, he came to the conclusion that it could be done, provided it was done in a proper way and done very carefully, and he came to me and said; "I could not advise this being let by contract, for I cannot take the responsibility of the work being properly done, unless it is done under my own supervision; and, if we can get a trustworthy man to superintend the work, I would advise that it be done by day's labour." I think I am justified in taking his advice. If I did not, and the work should be carried away, I would be held responsible for not following the advice of my expert officer.

Mr. BENNETT. Under the late Government, when a lighthouse was to be constructed, tenders were called for, and the work was given to the lowest tenderer, and the person who got the contract was bound to give ample security to the department for finishing the work. The position of the Minister is this. If the structure is carried away, he can blame Mr. Lemieux, but he cannot fall back on him for damages; but, if the Minister had followed the ordinary course, and asked for tenders, and required security to be given for the performance of the work, he would have had the security put up by the contractor to fall back upon. So that the Minister is much worse off than he would be, if he had let the work by contract.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not think my hon. friend would have taken any other course, if he were in my position.

Mr. BENNETT. How does the Minister know that the work could be done cheaper by day's labour without calling for tenders?

Mr. CLANCY. Has the engineer given in a written report to the effect that this could not be well and safely done by contract?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I had a great many conversations with him, and am almost sure that his report is in writing.

Mr. CLANCY. It is important to know, because it is very difficult for the committee to make a distinction between Mr. Lemieux following out plans and specifications made, for which tenders were had, or plans and specifications for construction by day's work. There is a distinction without a particle of difference. I must confess that I cannot see any difference, whether Mr. Lemieux has supervision of this work done by the day or let by tender.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I do not very well see how the Minister of Marine and Fisheries was at liberty to depart from the recognized principle, unless the Government have the courage of their convictions and set that principle aside in all the departments. The practice followed in the Marine Department was that in nearly all cases, in which the cost was under $10,000, the work was put in charge directly of one of the officers of the department who employed day labour. That practice proved very successful and economical. But here is an extraordinary departure. This is the heaviest piece of work undertaken by the department in a great many years. We have never had any such work undertaken since 1888, and in this instance the rule that is binding by statute on all the departments is set aside altogether. The hon. Minister did not even know the name of the man who had charge of the work, and had to get his name from his colleague, the hon. member for Quebec (Mr. Dobell). Not an engineer in his department, either the chief or any of his subordinates, has been given the supervision of the work.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The engineer is there constantly.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. The chief engineer has been in the city of Ottawa nearly the whole time, for I have seen him here daily. The hon. Minister ought to give us the report on which he is acting, and also the reports which Mr. Anderson made some years ago. All the risk is being run by the country. There is no protection whatever to the Government, and should this foundation be carried away.

Mr. BENNETT.

the expenditure would not be $40,000 but double that. The risk of its being carried away is enormous, and that was one of the reasons why no lighthouse was attempted there in former days. The trouble about erecting any lighthouse there is to get a foundation that will stand, and we have in this case, not only the absence of the risk which would devolve on the contractor had this work been let in the usual way, but we have also the absence of the technical supervision of a known and responsible officer of the department. Mr. Lemieux may be all right in his own way, but is simply a temporary employee, only employed by the Government for superintending this particular work. What is he paid?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Four dollars a day.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Here is a $4 a day man willing to go down to the Traverse and spend his time there. He may be a very good man in a way, but the hon. Minister will not pretend, and I am sure his hon. colleague from Quebec will not say, that Mr. Lemieux is an expert or an engineer.

Mr. DOBELL. I consider Mr. Lemieux is a specialist in wharf building and block building. I have known him for many years, and have given him orders for heavy work, and left the carrying out of the work entirely in his hands. He is really a genius in wharf building. I do not wish to appear as if I had not some degree of responsibility in urging upon my colleague the construction of this work. From the first time I entered Parliament, I saw the necessity of having a permanent lighthouse in the Traverse, which is a narrow waterway, 500 feet wide in a river about six miles wide, with nothing to indicate where that channel-way is except two lightships known as the North Traverse lightship and the South Traverse lightship. These are taken down, as soon as the weather permits in the spring and remain there until the weather in the fall becomes too boisterous or ice forms in the river and is carried up and down the river, and liable to cut the lightships through, as they are built of wood. Those lightships then are removed, and it is only two years ago that a large steamer came up the river St. Lawrence late in the year laden with goods, but when she came to the Traverse these lightships had been removed. She waited there three days to get a pilot steamer to show her the way through, but that pilot could not be got, so she went back down the river and discharged somewhere in Nova Scotia. My contention is this—and I am perfectly satisfied that the House will agree with me—that our object should be to make our navigation as long as possible in the year. If we can possibly make it nine months instead of six, we shall be doing a great benefit to the whole country. To accomplish this, the first thing necessary was to make one or two permanent lighthouses in the Traverse to take the place of those two lightships. It happened that one of these lightships was reported unsafe and not fit for the service this year. An estimate was obtained as to the cost of another one, and it amounted to something like $70,000. I then urged on my hon. colleague that a permanent lighthouse could be erected there at a much less cost and with much greater benefit to the country, and I urged him to have it done before the ice had gone out of our Louise dock basin, so that we could make the bottom of the pier exactly to correspond with the place where it had to be put at the Traverse. I believe that an engineer went down and made plans of what was required, and the work was then begun and carried out. I believe that the work will be done for one-half what it would have cost if we had waited until now.

Mr. CLANCY. Was Mr. Lemieux ever a contractor?

Mr. DOBELL. I do not think he ever took a contract. He works by the day.

Mr. CLANCY. How did the hon. gentleman come to discover his genius?

Mr. DOBELL. Because I have employed him, and the works he constructed for me some years ago gave me entire satisfaction. This is no ordinary work. It has to be sunk in an exact position and at the edge of this deep channel. It has to be sunk in twenty-five feet at low water, and at high water it will be sunk something like 42 feet. So that it is not ordinary work. Besides, it has to resist the ice and is of very peculiar construction.

Mr. CLANCY. Will the hon. gentleman (Mr. Dobell) say whether Mr. Lemieux ever before constructed a work of that kind?

Mr. DOBELL. I do not think there is a similar work in the country. When you require a special work, you must have a man with special qualifications to carry it out.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. He runs no risk, and gets $4 a day. No one is disputing that this work should be undertaken. I began the discussion myself and took great care to avoid that, because I knew that if it was possible to build a permanent work there it was desirable to do so. But I did challenge—and I do it again, as the hon. gentleman (Mr. Dobell) does not seem to have followed me at all—the handing over of these things either to the Government or to any one member of the Government, no matter what his ability may be. To plunge into a work of this kind that could have been and should have been brought before Parliament to get authority for it, is something not only novel, but dangerous, and it puts this House at once in the position of being nothing more than a body to register the decisions of the Government. That is what I protest against. We have the Minister of Marine and Fisheries telling us that a work is going on that, according to the estimates of his own engineer, will involve us in an expense of $40,000, a work that, in my day, was estimated by the same engineer and the same officers at a far greater sum. And more than that, it is a work that involves, as the hon. member for Quebec knows well—and he will not deny it, certainly no engineer of intelligence would deny it—danger of the whole work being carried away.

Mr. DOBELL. The Government could have that insured if they wish.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. The Government does not insure; the Minister does not propose to begin any practice of that kind, and the suggestion I do not take to be a serious one. Speaking from memory, in my time the estimate of the cost of this work was $60,000 or $70,000; and you have the risk of losing the whole of it. You could get a lightship, not for $75,000, but for $40,000.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Not the new and improved light-ship.

Mr. DOBELL. The wood of which a lightship would have to be built has advanced considerably in the last ten years, I speak of oak and elm. Any one acquainted with the trade knows this to be a fact.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. The light-ships are not always built of wood. The light-ships on the coast of England are not of wood, I believe.

Mr. GIBSON. They have no ice there.

Mr. DOBELL. May I ask the hon. gentleman this—does he mean to say it is worth while to take up the time of the House discussing whether it would be best to build a light-ship of iron or wood? Surely, if you can get a permanent lighthouse on the Traverse, it would be a much greater benefit than keeping up the lightships.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I object to the interruption, and I shall not address myself to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Dobell) further, if he persists in discussing the wisdom and propriety of engaging in a work about which Parliament never was consulted. My protest is that this action has been taken without consulting Parliament, when we should have been consulted in the first place. No one is discussing the propriety of the work itself. The Minister says—and I do not quarrel with him for that: "I take my stand on the opinion I get from my engineer; I do not understand these things in their technical aspect, and I act upon the reports of my engineer." We must have the same means of knowledge that he has. We are entitled to it.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Certainly.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. It is an important thing for consideration whether the hon. gentleman has plunged into this, as I fear he has, prematurely. Or not exactly prematurely, because he says that his light-ship was used up, and he had to come to a decision before he had an opportunity to consult Parliament. My answer is that he was neglectful in not consulting Parliament a year ago, when his light-ship was showing signs of being used up. We have Mr. Lemieux there at $4 a day. What is he paying the men and where do they come from? Does he ship them from Quebec, and if so, is the cost of transport and maintenance borne by the Government?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The cribwork was being carried on in the Quebec basin, while the ice was there, and it will be taken down through to Traverse. Mr. Lemieux is there. The hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) was astray in saying that no officer of the department has control over him. Mr. Noble, who is a good man—

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. A very good man.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—has been there three or four times watching the work. Col. Anderson has been there also, I think more than once.

Mr. DOBELL. Three times.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Since the work began?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes, and watched the work very carefully. As the hon. gentleman knows, we have taken into our own hands the work formerly done by contract, of buoying the St. Lawrence between Montreal and Quebec. Therefore, we shall have an officer in that part of the world, and the work at Traverse below will have the benefit of his constant and continuous supervision. We take a general vote every year for the construction of lighthouses of about $45,000. And when the vote was going through last year, I stated that this matter was under consideration. I was quite aware, of course, that what I could spare of this $45,000 would not enable me to do this work, or to do that part of it which is to be done in the ensuing year. So, we were placed in this position, we had either to let a year go by, as my hon. friend (Mr. Dobell) has said, or we had to build that cribwork before the ice went out. My hon. friend told me, and he was backed up by the engineer, that if I did not get the work done before the ice went out, it would cost me three or four times as much as to get the cribwork done afterwards. The question was whether I should go on and construct it, knowing that I could not finish the whole work out of the vote I had and then come to Parliament and ask for a special vote in the supplementaries—which, when I began, I thought it would be long before June—or abandon it to another year. But I could not abandon it for another year, for the present light-ship has about run its course. So, I had either to build the permanent work or else get a new light-ship. I do not see what more I could have done. Of course, technically, speaking, it may be said that we strained a point. If the engineer had had his mind made up when my supplementary Estimates went through last year, I would have asked a vote; but, as I explained to the hon. gentleman, the engineer wanted further surveys and examinations before he made up his mind. He satisfied himself that it could be built, and the exact spot on which it could be built, and the amount for which it could be built. But this was after the supplementaries of last year were voted. Then I had to decide whether to abandon the work for another year or take the responsibility of going on with the expenditure, and, at the earliest moment, take Parliament into my confidence and ask for a vote for the work to be done this year. I had no doubt as to the wisdom of the scheme. I felt there would be no objection raised to that. All, I believe, are satisfied that this aid to navigation is one of the most pressing and important in the Dominion; and I am sure I shall have the support of my hon. friends opposite, as of those around me, in carrying it out. The whole shipping interest of Montreal and Quebec are looking forward with anxious interest to the completion of this work. The insurance companies are more than delighted at the fact that the work is going on. The very fact that we are taking in hand these great and expensive works for improving the navigation of the river St. Lawrence, will have a material effect in reducing the enormous rates of insurance which are now being charged on the shipping which comes to that river. The only point that can be taken advantage of is when they say: You should have taken a vote last year. I have told the hon. gentlemen why I did not take a special vote. Col. Anderson had not sufficient knowledge to enable him to say that the work could be built for less than $75,000. I could not bring myself to the conclusion that I would be justified in asking the House for $75,000. But after he had made his further survey and talked for a long time with Mr. Noble and Mr. Lemieux, he came to the conclusion, after going over his estimates carefully and seeing what the woodwork and stone could be purchased for, that it might be built for $40,000. When I was informed by these gentlemen: Unless you begin the work before the ice goes, you must leave it for another twelve months, I took the responsibility of saying: We will go on, and ask Parliament at the first moment for authority to defray these bills. I want this money to do that, and I am sure the House will not think that I have taken an extreme departure.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. What are the men getting who are working under Mr. Lemieux?

Mr. DOBELL. In the early part of the season, before the ships came in, they were getting $1.25; since then, I think, the wages have risen to about $1.50.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I am asking in regard to these men on the work the Minister speaks of.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have not the knowledge. Mr. Lemieux employs them, and he is under the control of Col. Anderson. Mr. Noble has been there three times, and Col. Anderson has been there since the work began, two or three times. Mr. Lemieux knows the names of the men. They are paid by the agent in Quebec, Mr. Gregory. They are doing the cribwork.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Does the hon. gentleman give them instructions to go on with the sinking of the cribwork and fill it up?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It will be done under Col. Anderson's special supervision.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Is it to be done by day's work?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The whole work will be done under Col. Anderson's special supervision, under his responsibility and care. He reported that that was the only safe way he thought it could be done, so that the department would have control of it all the time, and see that the work was actually done in such a way that it would resist the pressure of the ice. I believe that report is in writing.

Mr. MONTAGUE. What was the special difficulty in the construction of this cribwork?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The depth is 25 feet at the lowest possible tide, and when the tide is high, it is 42 feet.

Mr. BENNETT. What proportion of the money goes for labour, and what for material?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I could not tell. Tenders have not been called for the material. The material has been bought by Col. Anderson, and Mr. Noble, and the agent at Quebec.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Has the hon. gentleman's officers any idea of what the material costs?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. My deputy tells me that the accounts are kept in Quebec, and I cannot answer the hon. gentleman.

Mr. WALLACE. I think the Minister has utterly failed to justify the course he has taken in this matter from the start up to the present day. He says it became a case of urgency. There was no urgency about it. If the Minister had been looking to the affairs of his department as closely as the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Gibson) would have done in the same position, he would have provided for this, there would have been no need for this undue haste. Then he tells us that he is entirely guided by his engineer. Well, why not let the engineer run the whole department? What is the need for a Minister if he exercises no judgment of his own in this matter? He says the engineer did these things. He says no tenders were asked, and so the law is violated. No information is given to the public, as should have been done. He says the engineer recommended this. Why not have given us the report of the engineer. If the hon. gentleman has a report from his engineer that has convinced the Minister, why not let us see that report so that we may decide if the Minister has a right to be convinced. He says the job can be done for $40,000; we do not know but that it may cost $60,000. He says: Look at the enormous difficulty in sinking a crib in 25 feet of water. Well, there are men who are able to sink a crib in 100 feet of water. He says the work is under the constant supervision of Col. Anderson. My hon. friend from Pictou (Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper) says that he sees Col. Anderson nearly every day in Ottawa, so it is not under his constant supervision, because, I presume, Col. Anderson has many other works to look after which occupy his time largely in other places. But the Minister has not justified the violation of the law in going into this work without asking for tenders, and without a proper understanding of the work.

Mr. W. GIBSON (Lincoln). Since the hon. gentleman has been kind enough to mention my name, I may say for the benefit of the committee, that I have just about finished a piece of work in water, not, perhaps, quite as deep as the Government requires this to be done. There is a serious difficulty in sinking cribs where there are 17 feet of tide to contend against. As I gather from what has been stated before the committee, at low water the crib is 25 feet deep, and at high water it is 42 feet, there being a rise of 17 feet at the tide. With respect to the wages that the Government are paying their men, I say frankly, that the Government are very lucky in getting their men at $1.25 and $1.50 a day, for I have to pay to the same kind of labour $1.75 per day; and at the same time I have to pay my foremen $5 a day instead of $4. The hon. member for Pictou (Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper) asked the Minister if he could give him an idea as to the cost of wages and the cost of material. I may say that after an experience of 30 years in constructing public works, I have found, invariably, that the cost of wages and the cost of material are almost identical. In ordinary circumstances the one costs just about as much as the other. This may be a special case. I have no doubt there is a good deal of difficulty in contending with the tide, because with the tide there is a current and sinking a crib under such circumstances entails a good deal of trouble. I think it will be found that, when this work is completed, the cost of wages and material will run along on parallel lines. I may say that I approve, and have always approved of work of this kind being let, wherever it is possible to secure tenders, to the lowest tenderer, if the gentleman who is the lowest tenderer is a reputable man and able to put up the necessary security, and I venture to say, that the Government would be justified in giving a contract of this kind, though not in this case, to the lowest tenderer, if his price were below the estimate of the engineer. My hon. friend from Pictou (Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper) wished to make the point, but I think he could hardly have been serious, that the risk was entirely put upon the contractor, because, if a work were let under contract by that hon. gentleman, I am in the judgment of the House in saying, that he would have made some provision for the payment to the contractor, as the work progressed, from month to month, of perhaps 80 per cent or 90 per cent. If that work were carried away, would not the Government be out 80 per cent or 90 per cent, if the Government had paid to the contractor that amount?

Mr. BENNETT. There would be the sureties to fall back on.

Mr. GIBSON. That just shows that my hon. friend (Mr. Bennett) does not know that the Government does not accept sureties in connection with work. It accepts the contractor's deposit of 5 per cent or 10 per cent, when the work is tendered for.

Mr. HAGGART. And it also accepts securities.

Mr. GIBSON. Not at all. Apart from securities, I would like to know, from the hon. member for South Lanark (Mr. Haggart), if he ever followed up these securities under any contract he let in which the contractor failed. Did he follow up the securities in the case in which Goodwin ran away after he had done the mucking, leaving the heavy work for the Government to do? In the case of this peculiar kind of work, such as has been described by the hon. Minister, the Government were perfectly justified in doing this work by day labour. I can recall an instance of another company which had a similar piece of work to do, at a place called Norman, in the Lake of the Woods region, where the risk was so great that the company would not give it to a contractor, because they felt that, in the event of a washout or the dam being carried away, they would be at a loss to the extent of the work that had been done. In my opinion, from what I have gathered from the information given to the committee by the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries, this was a piece of work that could not be let to a contractor, except at an exorbitant figure, and I consider the Government were perfectly justified in doing the work themselves.

Mr. CLANCY. Does the hon. gentleman know anything about this work in question?

Mr. GIBSON. No.

Mr. CLANCY. Well, then, the hon. gentleman's information is not worth a great deal, is it?

Mr. GIBSON. I am very much obliged to the hon. gentleman; but, considering the works I have carried out, and the experience I have had, I hope I am not as stupid as the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clancy) would lead this House to believe. I can gather the nature of that work from the experience I have had of that kind of work, because I can tell my hon. friend, in a word, that a contractor very seldom has the same kind of work to do twice, and he has to gather his experience from the different kinds of work he has to do, so that he must have a general knowledge. Surely, the building of a crib, framing it, dove-tailing and filling it with stones, is only a question of labour and a question of quantity.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. GIBSON. Exactly. The question of putting it down to a greater depth means a great deal more in this case, because you have the tide to contend against, which has a rise of 17 feet, in addition to which, there is a flowing river and consequently a strong current.

Mr. MILLS. It is an advantage, rather than anything else, because you can do the work at a time when the water is out.

Mr. GIBSON. If my hon. friend (Mr. Mills) would confine himself to law, he would be all right, instead of talking about the building of cribs. In the building of a crib, you build it out of the water, and gradually sink it. You anchor it as near the place as you can, and it settles by reason of the filling, so that it is not built from the bottom, but is built from the top and sunk down as the work progresses. So much for my hon. friend who has just taken his seat. With the danger of the tide and with the danger that the work might be carried away, I say, that the Government were perfectly justified, in my opinion, in having this work performed by day labour, so that it might be completed by the close of navigation.

Mr. CARGILL. I understand, from what the hon. gentleman (Mr. Gibson) has stated, that he has found, in taking contracts, that the cost of material being always equal to the cost of wages, that would be a fair price or value for any contractor to estimate work upon. Is that right?

Mr. GIBSON. Yes.

Mr. CARGILL. In this particular case it would depend altogether as to what these two cost, what the contract would be worth. As to the amount of wages paid for the work, I understand that the wages paid were from $1.25 to $1.50 a day for ordinary labour, and $4 a day for supervision. The hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Gibson) has been in the habit of paying $1.75 a day for ordinary labour, and $5 for supervision; so that it just depends on the amount of wages paid. I inferred, from what he said, that the price of doing a piece of work of this kind wholly depends on the wages you have to pay to do the work, therefore, if he had got the contract it would have cost the country 25 per cent more than the fixed price.

Mr. GIBSON. I think I would be justified, and I think the hon. ex-Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Haggart) would bear me out, in saying, that better results will be obtained from men at $1.75 a day, working for a contractor, than from men working for the Government at a lower rate of pay. Mr. Brassey's experience—and perhaps there was no greater authority, at all events up to the time he was engaged in public works—was, that he got the same comparative results in all parts of the world, no matter what the wages were. If he got coolie labour in India at 25 cents a day, he got 25 cents worth of work, and, if he paid the English navy $1.25, or 5 shillings, a day, he got $1.25 worth of work, plus the profit. While I, perhaps, pay in this case 25 cents a day more than the Government. I would expect to receive that additional return from my men on account of the wages being higher.

Mr. HAGGART. As the hon. gentleman (Mr. Gibson) has appealed to me—perhaps I am not a good authority on the subject—I may say a word or two. The reasons for not doing this work by tender are, to me, the most extraordinary I have ever heard. Here is a crib that is being built, as the hon. member for Lincoln knows, in the Louise Basin, at Quebec. This is all the expenditure there is up to the present time. It is being built there, and it is to be towed down to the work. Up to that period, what reason is there why the work should not be let by contract? This cribwork was built on the ice in the Louise Basin, in the city of Quebec, where, above all places in the world, it could be let by tender and carried out under the supervision of the officers of the department.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. You and the engineer differ on that. The engineer thought it should be done by day's work.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. As to the question raised by the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Gibson), although I am not an authority on this matter, I would cite the practice of the Minister of Railways (Mr. Blair) as against his contention. That hon. gentleman (Mr. Blair) let out a contract for cribwork a short time ago in the city of St. John, N.B., where there is greater depth of water and a greater tide.

Mr. DOBELL. They are not parallel cases.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. It may be a defect on my part, but I did not appeal to the hon. member from Quebec West (Mr. Dobell) as an expert in this matter.

Mr. DOBELL. No, but I feel perfectly satisfied from my experience of the hon. member (Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper) that he only wants to get at what is right, and that he does not want to deal in any vain imaginings. I merely wished to assure the hon. gentleman that the two works are not parallel, and I shall not interrupt him again.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. It was for the reason that I did not wish to indulge in any vain imaginings that I did not address my remarks to the hon. member from Quebec West (Mr. Dobell). I know that he has some responsibility in this, for he apparently employed the men and fixed the wages.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Oh, no.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Well, he was the gentleman who furnished the name of Lemieux when the hon. Minister did not remember it. Lemieux was one of his own employees, and having got Lemieux employed it is only fair the hon. gentleman (Mr. Dobell) should see the Minister through it. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Dobell) were a better authority on the subject his view would be valuable, but I think the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Gibson) is a more serious man to tackle on cribwork, and that without any disparagement to the hon. member (Mr. Dobell). Now, I am an absolute tyro in these matters, and I know no more about them than does the Minister of Marine, but I point out that the Minister of Railways (Mr. Blair), who has expert advisers also, gave a contract for cribwork at St. John where the water is deeper and the tide stronger than at the Traverse. Does the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Gibson) now say, that we are running a risk at St. John and that it would be better to do the work there by day's work?

Mr. GIBSON. They not only have the tide at the Traverse, but they have a current also, which is not the case at St. John. I suppose the cribwork the hon. member refers to at St. John is the wharf.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER
Yes.

Mr. GIBSON. Then the circumstances are entirely different. I was not aware until the ex-Minister of Railways (Mr. Haggart) told us, that this cribwork was built and towed down the river and put in its place, and my judgment is that the Government did perfectly right in building it at a point where the timber could be got easier and cheaper, and the question of towing was a matter of very small importance. What I tried to point out was, that the Government ran the same risk, comparatively speaking, whether they let this by contract or did it by day's work. If let by contract the Government would have to pay the contractors every month 80 or 90 per cent of the total cost; and if perchance a storm arose and the cribwork was wrecked while being towed, the contractor would have to repair it, it is true, but suppose he was not able to do so, the Government would have to replace it in the end at the country's expense. In my humble judgment the Government have taken a wise course, although it may not be according to parliamentary practice in doing this work without tender. I have not seen the place and do not know the circumstances, but generally speaking when a reputable engineer makes a recommendation of this kind; when a trustworthy engineer of the Government tenders this advice to the Minister, I consider that the Minister either has to take the recommendation of his engineer, or discharge him as being unfit to give the advice. If any criticism is offered on the fact that the Government are paying extravagant wages, I wish to state here that the Government are not even paying the current wages that are paid to like workmen in other parts of Canada.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I did not raise any point about the wages paid. I rather inferred that Lemieux was got cheap, and that the men were got cheap for good work.

Mr. GIBSON. So they were.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Too cheap, I thought.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER (Picou).

Mr. TAYLOR. The Minister gives the excuse of urgency for dispensing with Parliament altogether in this matter.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Oh, no.

Mr. TAYLOR. Oh, yes.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am not dispensing with Parliament; I am appealing to it now.

Mr. FOSTER. After you undertook the whole expenditure.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No; we are only beginning the work.

Mr. TAYLOR. The Minister (Sir Louis Davies) said that his engineer recommended that if the work was not done before the ice went out, it could not be done at all.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. What I said was, that it might cost three times as much.

Mr. TAYLOR. Well, I have experience in that kind of work, and I know that cribwork can be done as well on the water as on the ice. You start the bottom in the water, and all you have to do is to build up. I have sunk a great many piers, and I prefer doing it in the summer season than doing it on the ice, because you will do more work in a day in summer than you will in winter. There is no question of urgency about the matter at all. When the Liberal party was in Opposition, their charges rang through the country against the Conservative Government because they built the Curran bridge by day's work, but in that case there was urgency, for the work could only be done in the winter when navigation was closed. This is a case which has been standing for years and years, and it is only now they find it urgent to spend $70,000 or $80,000 on a lighthouse. If the Government is going to act in that way there is no necessity for a Parliament at all, and we might as well pack up our trunks and go home. I state here that the engineer of the Marine Department will not make a statement in writing that it was absolutely necessary to start this cribwork on the ice, for I say as a practical man, that you can do it as cheap in summer on the water as you can in winter on the ice. The engineer will not contradict my statement in that. There is no question of urgency at all in this case; it is simply a job, and a job worse than the Curran bridge.

Some hon. MEMBERS. No.

Mr. TAYLOR. In the case of the Curran bridge the money was voted by Parliament, but in this case the money is spent and given to political friends of the Government before being voted by Parliament. My friend from Quebec West (Mr. Dobell) has a man in his employ, and he says to him: We will get you a job from the Government at $4 a day constructing cribwork, and you will have the pleasure of hiring the men, and you will keep the time and everything else. That is the way the money of the country is spent. There has been a light-ship there for years. Why not keep her on until you can consult Parliament to see whether Parliament is willing to change that and build a crib-pier at an expenditure of $75,000 or $80,000. But these hon. gentlemen undertake to expend this large amount of money without tender, among the friends of the hon. member for Quebec West (Mr. Dobell) and the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Gibson) justifies that, although when he sat on this side of the House he condemned the late Government if it let a $100 job without tender. When the hon. member for Pictou (Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper) was in charge of the Marine Department, the Gananoque Narrows light, late in the fall of the year, was moved by a big storm. The engineer came down to look at it, and he decided that the only way to protect it was by placing one or two hundred cords of hard stone, hard-heads, around it. These could be purchased from the farmers at from 50 cents to 60 cents a load; yet he would not allow that to be done under the inspection of a man he could name, during the winter, when the farmers could haul the stones on their sleighs and dump them on the ice. He called for tenders and the contract was let at, I think, 60 cents a load. But the ice was so bad that the work could not be done till the spring, when the stones were carried to the light in boats, and dumped in the river. This was a $200 job which the Minister would not let except by tender; but here is a job of $80,000—

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. What is the hon. gentleman talking about? No one has mentioned $80,000.

Mr. TAYLOR. When the bills come in, I think the hon. gentleman will find that the total will not be much less than $80,000. I would like to see the report of the engineer who said that this work had to be constructed in the winter time on the ice, because I do not think any engineer of standing will say that it was absolutely necessary to start the work on the ice.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Nobody said it was absolutely necessary.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. gentleman made that statement a short time ago.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I did not say anything of the kind. I made the statement that it would cost very much less if started on the ice.

Mr. TAYLOR. That that is the recommendation of the engineer?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Mr. TAYLOR. And that was the cause of the urgency. Why not wait for Parliament, which was in session in March, and then make the statement that this work was required? But the hon. gentleman has admitted that he wanted to give his friends in Quebec West an opportunity of employing Mr. Lemieux. My hon. friend near me will inquire who Mr. Lemieux is. He gets the job, and then the Minister comes here and lays the blame on the engineer of the department, charging him with being responsible for starting this cribwork in the winter. I would rather do the job in the summer, when you can work for ten hours, than in winter, when you can only get seven or eight hours' work. You can do the work cheaper in summer than in winter. That is my experience of crib building. I prefer doing it in water to doing it on ice.

Mr. McDUGALL. I would like to ask the hon. member for Quebec West (Mr. Dobell) if any one recommended Mr. Lemieux before he was put in charge of that work. Then, I would like the hon. gentleman to inform the House if Mr. Lemieux is a brother or relative of the hon. member for Gaspé?

Mr. DOBELL. If the hon. member had heard what I said, he would know that I volunteered everything I knew about Mr. Lemieux. I believe he is no relation whatever of the hon. member for Gaspé. I never asked, but I feel perfectly satisfied that he is not. I never even asked him whether he was a Conservative or a Liberal. I never do ask that question. I have not quite got over my prejudice for liking many good Conservative workmen, if they are better than Liberal workmen, and I am surprised that the hon. gentleman who spoke before (Mr. Taylor) could make up such a tissue of misrepresentations.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

Mr. DOBELL. I take it back, and I say a tissue of misstatements. I have been so dazzled by the eloquent but imaginative words that have proceeded from the opposite side, that I have almost been afraid to speak. But the hon. gentleman's inaccuracies, I will call them, were perfectly marvellous in their development. They began at $20,000, they crept up to $30,000, they went on to $40,000, and they finally finished at $80,000. That shows what is gained by eighteen years' experience. I have only had one or two years, and I have no doubt that if I could acquire the same power of exaggeration, this pier instead of costing the $40,000 would easily be increased to what the late Minister of Marine and Fisheries estimated, viz., $70,000 or $80,000. But it is only going to cost $40,000, because it is being handled in a proper businesslike way, and the work is put in the hands of the right man. I will again bear testimony to the ability of Mr. Lemieux. I never knew a more experienced expert in wharf building. The building of this pier, which has to be taken down the river and placed just where it is wanted, is the work only of an expert. I do not think I need take up the time of the House. My position is that the pier will be built and sunk for $40,000. As there will probably have to be another of these piers built later, I venture to say that if you call for tenders for that, it will be found to cost twice as much as this one.

Mr. DAVIN. Will the hon. gentleman say whether these are bottle-necked cribs?

Mr. MONTAGUE. I have listened with a great deal of attention to the hon. member for Quebec West (Mr. Dobell), and I have come to this conclusion, that both he and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries are trying to humbug the House. That is a serious charge, but I make it deliberately—that they are trying to humbug the House in connection with this proposition.

Mr. FOSTER. Just before six o'clock, I wish to ask the Minister if he will fortify himself with the report of his engineer for the discussion after dinner?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. You are surely not going to carry this on after dinner?

Mr. FOSTER. I certainly am. This is the most extraordinary development of the whole thing, that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries sits there and thinks this is a trifle—a laughing matter.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not say anything of the kind. The hon. gentleman has not been in the House during the last two hours while this subject was being discussed.

Mr. FOSTER. If the hon. gentleman thinks he is going to arrogate to himself the appropriation of public moneys without even bringing down to Parliament the report of his engineer on which he makes that appropriation, he is reckoning without his host.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I never made any such assumption, and gave all the information necessary.

Mr. FOSTER. Is there any appropriation in the main Estimates for this work?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman has not brought it before the House, although the main Estimates have been before the House for nearly two months.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman did not let me, but delayed business by his tactics.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman knows that if he wanted to bring that item before the House, he could have done so any time within the last two months.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Has the hon. Minister a report from his engineer stating what the cost would be?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes, $40,000.

Mr. SPROULE. This will be probably like the lighthouse on Manitoulin Island, for the construction of which tenders were called for, but after the tenders were received they were put aside as being too high, and the work was done by day labour, under the supervision of somebody recommended by the hon. member for Algoma, and my information is it cost half as much more again as it would have cost had the tender been accepted for its erection.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not think the hon. gentleman is right in that.

Mr. SPROULE. And the material was bought from the bookkeeper of the hon. member for Algoma, because it would not do to appear in his name, and among them they furnished the labour and succeeded in getting the lighthouse built at a cost a little more than half as much again as it would have cost had the lowest tender been accepted. I hope in this case it will not turn out that the bookkeeper of the hon. member for Quebec West (Mr. Dobell) is supplying the timber and some other of his employees the men. It will probably cost half as much more again as the estimate.

Mr. PRIOR. I would like to ask the hon. member for Lincoln if, when referring to Mr. Brassey, who every one knows was one of the biggest contractors in the world, he stated that when Mr. Brassey employed Asiatic labour at a low price, he only got value for that price, but that when he employed English navvies, white labour, at double the price, he got double the work?

Mr. GIBSON. What I did say was that the experience of 40 years by Mr. Brassey, who is perhaps one of the greatest contractors England ever produced, and who was the father of the present Lord Brassey, he said that although he could get in India coolie labour at 25 cents per day, he only got from that labour 25 cents worth of work, and that when he paid the English navvies $1.25 per day, he got from them the full value in work.

Mr. PRIOR. That went to prove that it was cheaper to employ white labour at high prices than Asiatic at low prices.

Mr. GIBSON. The net result was the same.

Mr. PRIOR. Is that the hon. gentleman's experience?

Mr. GIBSON. I have never employed Asiatic labour, but Mr. Brassey said he found the same conditions in every part of the world.

Mr. PRIOR. I hope the contractors on the Pacific coast will get to know this and act accordingly.

It being Six o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

(In the Committee.)

Mr. FOSTER. I had not the advantage of being present when the vote was first brought up, and I may have to ask one or two questions for information that have been already asked and answered. At what time did this work commence?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). The ex-Minister of Marine and Fisheries Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper explained that this matter was before the department some three years ago. About 18 months ago it came prominently before my notice, and I asked the chief engineer, Col. Anderson, for a report on the probable cost. His estimate then was $60,000 to $70,000. Not feeling at liberty to recommend so large an amount to my colleagues, the matter was left over, until my hon. friend from Quebec West (Mr. Dobell) commenced to press it upon me very strongly, stating that unless something was done, the insurance rates on the St. Lawrence would be largely increased. I told him I would bring the matter before the House last session, and did so in a general way, stating the amount of Col. Anderson's estimate and saying that during recess he would make a more careful examination personally and that I would not ask for a vote at that time. In the summer I instructed Col. Anderson to make a personal examination. He did so, and consulted with a number of men in Quebec who had knowledge of the cost of building such works and those who understood the cost of material. He was then prepared to revise his report. At that time the catastrophe we had feared occurred, and we were informed by the insurance companies in Montreal that the English companies were considering seriously the advisability of increasing the rates on the St. Lawrence. Col. Anderson reported that the work could be built for $40,000, and said if a part of it could be undertaken before the ice moved out, a great saving could be made. He reported also that owing to the character of the work, it could be best done by day's labour. I brought the matter before my colleagues and explained that my general vote, $45,000, for lighthouses, would not be sufficient to do the ordinary work and at the same time pay the amount for this work that would be called for before the end of the year; but I thought there would be plenty of time to obtain a vote from Parliament, as I had explained the matter to them last session, before very much expense had been incurred in the work. They agreed to that, and Col. Anderson was authorized to proceed with the work.

Mr. FOSTER. What was the date of the authorization?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It was after I got back from Washington, and before the ice left—I suppose in the month of March. Col. Anderson went to Quebec and made arrangements with Mr. Lemieux to do that portion of the work which had to be done on the ice. That work has proceeded, and it is to pay for that, and to pay for the cost of conveying the woodwork down to the spot, that I ask for this vote.

Mr. FOSTER. When did Mr. Lemieux commence his operations?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. As soon as authority was given. I may say that I lost no time after the House met in putting the House in possession of the facts. Early in the session, in answer to some questions across the floor of the House, I stated these facts and said on the supplementary Estimates I would ask for this vote. I might have asked for an increase to the general vote, but thought that this was special work which should be specially voted. In the meantime, deputations had waited on me in the insurance interest in Montreal, pressing the national importance of the work in view of the extraordinary increase which had been made by the insurance companies. I received a communication—a private one, it is true—from Lord Strathcona, pointing out the tremendous importance of assuring Lloyds in England that we were doing everything that was possible. I answered him that I would press the matter upon my colleagues and would also recommend it to Parliament at the earliest possible moment. This is not a party matter; it is looked upon by all sides of politics as a vital work in the interest of the shipping interest, and in the interest of the navigation of the St. Lawrence. I thought I would be justified in going on with the work by day's labour in accordance with the advice of the chief engineer, coming to Parliament at the earliest possible moment for the necessary funds. Of course, I cannot pay the bills if the money is not voted. There are some things, such as wages, that can be paid out of the general vote that will have to be recouped when this is voted. There is more interest in this work, not only here but in England, than I could possibly express to my hon. friend (Mr. Foster). Even within the last fortnight I have received numbers of letters from gentlemen interested in insurance rates on the St. Lawrence, pressing upon me the importance of this and kindred works. I am sure that if my hon. friend reflects he will not take any stand against this Government providing all necessary aids to navigation to the great city of Montreal. The hon. gentleman knows that in some cases, after votes have been submitted to Parliament and before they have been actually carried, the Auditor General has taken that as sufficient justification to allow the expenditure to go on. That is stretching the technical constitutional rule; but I am quite sure that in proceeding with the construction of a public work which will meet with the approval of both sides, particularly when I proceeded in accordance with the advice of the chief engineer. I acted in the public interest, in view of all the circumstances. It is not a great deal, in comparison with the total cost of the work. I have now, not in the main Estimates, as I was inadvertently misled by a statement of my deputy to say, but I have put in the supplementaries for the coming year a provision for the additional $20,000 really given to us. The work, which a few years ago was estimated to cost $75,000, will now be finished for at least $40,000; and, when it is done, the general opinion is, that we will have prolonged the safe navigation of the St. Lawrence for a period varying from a fortnight to over three weeks in the autumn. I need not say to my hon. friend what an immense advantage this will be, not only to the commercial interests of Montreal and Quebec, but of the Dominion generally. I would appeal to my hon. friend on higher grounds. I acknowledge there is a good deal of force in the criticisms which have been advanced by hon. gentlemen opposite as to the impropriety of any work being undertaken by any Government until full authority has been given by Parliament. But last year we discussed this matter pretty fully in the House. I told them what it was my intention to do, if the engineer made a report and brought the sum down to a reasonable figure; and, if I was able to pay the sum which up to the 30th of June would be required to pay for this work, out of the general vote of $45,000, I would be strictly and technically within my rights. It will exceed that amount; therefore, I come to Parliament. But I did not wait until the Estimates came down. I told the House, in the early part of the session, that I was going on with this work, exactly what was being done, and that I would bring down, at the earliest possible moment, in the first supplementary Estimates, a vote to defray the necessary expenses up to the 30th of June. If I had not done that, I would have had to provide for a lightship for this year; the present one could not go on beyond the year, and I would have had to put a vote in the supplementary Estimates for this year. So that I had to choose between building a lightship, or constructing a permanent light; and I had to make up my mind upon constructing it, even although I had to incur liabilities for an amount beyond what was within my vote, within my control by the vote of Parliament, and I would come to Parliament at the earliest moment and ask them to give me a vote for the necessary expenditure up to the 30th of June. Really, there is no difference of opinion on either side of the House as to the absolute and pressing necessity for the work; and I cannot see, under the circumstances, how I would be justified in letting it stand over until after a vote in the Estimates for next year was obtained. I, therefore, would urge upon my hon. friend to look at the matter from a reasonable standpoint.

Sir LOUIS DAVIES.

Mr. FOSTER. Could my hon. friend refer me to the "Hansard," where he took the House into his confidence?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I cannot at this moment. I thought my hon. friend would recollect it. I mentioned, last year, that the sum estimated by the engineer was so large that I had not made up my mind to do it.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman said he had discussed the matter in the House before.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes, I brought it to the notice of the House, and stated that I was going on with the work now, and that, when I brought down the supplementary Estimates for the year, they would contain a vote to cover this very amount. I did not lose an hour on the very first feasible opportunity of bringing it before the notice of the House. I think, therefore, not only with reference to last year's debates, but with reference to the statement I made this year, that I have taken the House into my entire confidence. I am sure my hon. friend who has been my predecessor in this office, will recognize how essential it is that, in a technical matter of this kind, the Minister for the time being should be governed largely by the advice of his engineer. I have no hesitation in saying, that I am fortunate enough in possessing in Col. Anderson a man of great experience, of great common sense, a man who has a thorough understanding of the necessities of navigation and a desire to keep well within constitutional rules also. There may be some question in the mind of some hon. gentleman, whether every kind of work, good, bad, or indifferent, should not be let by contract; but I will say this, that not only myself, but each of my predecessors, as far as I can make out, has, time and again, on the advice of Col. Anderson, the chief engineer, when he thought a lighthouse could be built better and cheaper, and that it was in the public interest it should be built by day's labour, under the supervision of the officers of the department, instead of by contract, he has let the work in that way, and it has been in the public interest to do so.

Mr. CLANCY. Has the hon. gentleman the report in his department, stating that the lightship was no longer fit for use after this year?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, I have not got that here, but I tell my hon. friend that such is the case. It was a question last year, whether we should continue that ship this year. It is very old, and could not go on with safety. Last year we had to remove that vessel very early in the year because of the ice, and the danger of leaving her there after the ice comes on.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the estimated cost of the cribwork?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have not the exact amount of the cribwork estimated here. But it is now finished, and we can do nothing more until we get a vote.

Mr. FOSTER. It would be somewhere near $20,000.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I would judge, from what my hon. friend from Lincoln (Mr. Gibson) has said, that it must be one-half of the total cost, or about that sum.

Mr. FOSTER. Has the Minister a report of the engineer?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. My deputy told me he would have it here, and I will give it to my hon. friend.

Mr. FOSTER. I hope my hon. friend will credit me, when I say, that not a single word I am going to speak, with reference to this matter, is in a party sense at all. But I must say, that, when I came in this afternoon, and heard the discussion going on, I was very much disappointed, because I thought that, on the face of it, one of the first rules of parliamentary appropriation was violated by my hon. friend, and I have looked to him, of all the members of the Cabinet, not to do that.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The first question I asked Col. Anderson was this: Will our general vote of $45,000 enable us to do the work, if it is necessary to be done up to the 30th of June? I cannot spend beyond $45,000. Well, he said, I do not think it will. And so I decided to go on, and come to my colleagues to see if they would authorize me to go on with this work until Parliament met. I did this in consideration of the enormous saving it would be to the public, and in consideration of the fact that the present lightship could not go on another year, and that I must either provide a permanent lightship or a new one. I was told by him that to provide a proper lightship of the modern style would cost in the neighbourhood of $60,000 or $70,000. There was not a shadow of doubt that the public interest demanded that a permanent lightship should be built, if it could be done.

Mr. FOSTER. I am not discussing the relative merits of the lightships. I was going on to say something else. I know that we are partisans, all of us, and the best of us are probably too much partisans; but, when you come to the administration of matters financial, I think it ought to be a pride and the honour of leading public men on both sides to see that the well-understood principles of appropriation and expenditure of money are carried out fully, and according to the precedents, and according to the rules.

Now, I was myself in the Marine Department for several years before I undertook the Finance Department, and I became acquainted with this question of the Traverse lightship and the investigations which had, to a certain extent, been carried on as early as that relative to the merits of the two. In the first place, when I came into the department, I found a well established tradition. There was annually an amount of from $30,000, or $40,000, or $60,000 put aside for the building of additional lighthouses and lightships, and it was the tradition of the department before, and I immediately followed it up, that the moment an estimate was brought before the House to be voted on by the House the Minister was to lay on the Table a list of the lighthouses that he proposed to build with that $30,000, or $40,000, or $60,000. I never considered, as they had never considered before, that it was doing what was proper to be done to go outside of the statement which was made on the taking of that vote. Neither did I ever get a vote without giving that information to the House. That is to say, in the matter of new buildings the House asks to be seized of what it is proposed to do so that it may hold the Minister to account for doing what he proposed to do under the vote which he had obtained. There were two very dangerous points; the Murr Ledges on the south coast of New Brunswick and Traverse in the St. Lawrence. These two were very difficult places. In reference to these two the best attention of the department was given to them for several years, and the question was considered as to whether a permanent construction or a lightship would be the better. In reference to the Murr Ledge we need not speak now, because that is not under discussion, but in reference to Traverse, there were two opinions as to whether a lightship would be better, or whether a permanent construction would be better. Everybody agreed that a permanent construction would be better, but there was a very great question and doubt as to whether a permanent construction could be made which would be secured within what might reasonably be appropriated for that purpose. Although it was understood in the department that it would be wise to spend even a large sum of money if you could assure a permanent and stable construction, there was always doubt, as to whether it could be made, with any fair contribution from the treasury, permanent or not. But it would have been the last thing that I should have thought of doing, in any way at all, not only to build a permanent construction on the Murr Ledge or at Traverse, but even to undertake a new lighthouse, unless something had been destroyed, and I thought it was absolutely necessary to replace it, without having been authorized, without having made a full statement, and having it discussed before the House. What has the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries done? He comes down here, fifteen days before the financial year closes, and asks for a vote of $20,000, all of which is to be expended by the 1st of July, the inference being that the work that has been done is pretty closely up to the $20,000 mark or will be within a few days. It does not make any difference, in principle, as to whether it is $500 or $20,000, although the House generally will give more attention to a large amount than it will to a small amount. The question then is really this: Without having advised Parliament, or getting the sanction of Parliament upon it, the hon. gentleman undertakes by Order in Council, to make an appropriation of what may come to $40,000, or what may exceed $40,000, by a large amount. I remember that in my time what was supposed would construct that lighthouse was between $60,000 and $75,000, and we never got lower figures from Col. Anderson than that.

THE MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I did not either until lately.

Mr. FOSTER. I remember that explanation so that the matter has two aspects. In the first place I think it is utterly beyond doubt that there is considerable risk in putting this large amount of money into the form of a permanent construction in the Traverse. There may be a difference of opinion upon it; the hon. member for Quebec West (Mr. Dobell), may think that it can be placed there and will be permanent without serious risk or danger, but I think he will agree with me that we would be better convinced of that after a thorough trial of

Mr. FOSTER.

it. The Traverse is a very difficult and nasty piece of navigation; the current is swift and other difficulties, which my hon. friend well knows, import an amount of doubt into this question which makes it a public risk. When you add that to the other it seems to me that the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries would not do his duty unless he came specially to this House and discussed the matter. Now, he knew he was going to do this. He brought down the main Estimates and he knew that he must make an appropriation for the work which would carry him after the 1st of July, which would appear in the Estimates of next year. He did not put any amount in the main Estimates for the Traverse lightship; he only put in what was the regulation amount. If there had been an idea in the hon. Minister's mind that within that $45,000 he was going to take some portion of it for the Traverse construction he should have informed the House of that, because it is a matter of great interest, and would have provoked a good deal of discussion. Anyway he would have had the benefit of the discussion of this matter at an early day. In the matter of so much importance the hon. Minister should not have left it in that condition. I should like to see the discussion upon this question which took place when it was discussed and find out for myself how far it went, but I know it did not go so far that it aroused the interest of the House, or led to any general discussion, and it certainly did not give the sense of the House in favour of constructing a permanent lighthouse, or doing that which was going to amount to $40,000 or $60,000. That is where, I think, the hon. Minister did not sufficiently weigh and give sufficient force to the salutary principle that is absolutely necessary for the good administration of any Government in a constitutionally governed country, that you must have the assent of Parliament and the vote of Parliament before you undertake to expend the people's money. You must have an authorization before you undertake to do it. The Minister sees the necessity for the thing; he is honest in building it; it ought to be done; he thinks great good will come out of it, but the case is an extraordinary one in which an individual Minister or a Government ought to go away from that rule. If they have been neglectful in not bringing it up in the proper time, then that is one of the inadequacies of administration, and they must suffer the penalty of that neglect and wait until they have time to bring it before the House in order to put it under way. It is so easy to start the ball rolling in this way of irresponsible appropriations that the very first one ought to be very carefully guarded against, and, as I said, I was disappointed when, this afternoon, I came here and found that this moot matter, involving so large a sum of money, was actually under way and practically completed without having any adequate preliminary discussion or the assent of the House and before we were pledged to the carrying of it out. I am not disposed to carry this matter a bit farther than I think it ought to go, but I do want to say to my hon. friend, and as especially to him as to any one on the front benches, that it is in accordance with his standing, his reputation and his legal knowledge that he should be a veritable watchdog in this respect over some of his colleagues who are probably not as conscientious as he himself is in this matter of spending money; the hon. Postmaster General (Mr. Mulock) for instance. I do not know how I formed that impression that the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries would be very careful and strong upon a point of this kind.

Well, it is not the first case, and I suppose you can go back to other Governments and find where there are exceptions. I am ready to grant that ever and anon there will something occur which will make it absolutely necessary for the Government to father the responsibility of the expenditure of even a large sum of public money, but in this case it could have been avoided by a little more prevision on the part of my hon. friend (Sir Louis Davies). If, when he found in March, about the opening of Parliament, that it was better to spend as a limit, $50,000 or $60,000, he had taken the first opportunity of discussing that matter in the House, he would have got the support of the House if his grounds were good—and I think his grounds were good if Mr. Anderson has been explicit in his recommendation in that respect; I think that because I have a great regard for Mr. Anderson's standing, and for his discretion, and for his knowledge as well. I do hope that on both sides of the House, we will strive to keep that fundamental principle as intact as it possibly can be kept. Now, as to the method in which this work has been done—and we will talk as man and man—could any case be more clear than the building of a cribwork above ground on certain specifications—Mr. Lemieux is not building it without specifications and plans definitely laid down by Mr. Anderson—could a case be more clear that any competent contractor could tender on that. The Minister lays a great deal of stress on supervision, but you would not give that work to a contractor without supervising him from day to day. You always have your paid inspectors to look after work, and you would undoubtedly have him for a construction on the Traverse on which so much depends both for the Minister and the department. They know it would be a serious blow to their reputation if they undertook to build a permanent structure there and afterwards found they commenced on a slippery foundation and came to grief. In this case you have all the specifications and plans as given by Mr. Anderson, and it is the plainest kind of thing to give a tender on. When you come to putting your cribwork down on the Traverse, there might be a question as to whether the Government had not better undertake that work with the aid of its own vessel; but so far as the $20,000 of cribwork is concerned, there never was a plainer piece of work for open tender than that. However, my hon. friend (Sir Louis Davies) says: We can do it just as cheap by day's labour, and if Mr. Anderson says it could be done by day's labour as cheap, I think we are justified in doing it. Well, you can stretch that too far. The officers of a department are simply men who recommend what kind of work should be done, and the details of its execution, but they are not the men to fix the public policy of the Government or of the department. Since confederation the rule has been laid down which all Governments were to abide by, that to all these large works the contract system should be applied.

THE MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. As a general rule.

Mr. FOSTER. Yes, it is laid down by Order in Council, binding upon every department, and only in some departments is the method specified by which they can get out of it. My hon. friend (Sir Louis Davies) will agree with me that since 1896 there has been, by open and implied statements of one Minister and another, and by practice, a slipping away from the principle of contract and tender. You might appeal to the labouring interests in that respect, you might say that you can do it in some cases just as cheaply by day's labour, but take it on the whole, any Government which embarks upon that system by way of experiment will find that the door is opened by the jobbing system to jobbery, and that although, under the contract system, through lack of supervision, you may find work scamped, yet you will also find that the contract system will give the best general results. Have good supervision, then let the work by open tender, and take the lowest responsible contractor. Every once in a while we hear a Minister say: I think it can be done cheaper by day's work, and I shall do it on my own responsibility. Well, Mr. Speaker, we must have some principle to go upon, and you may depend upon it the safe principle is that of tender and contract. You will find objection to be urged against any system, but much less objection can be urged against the system of tender and contract than against any other. Granted, times of stress, granted political aspirations and political wishes—and they are always around us—the Minister who is open to giving a job to whomsoever he likes by day's work, is not only going an uneconomical way about it, but he is leaving himself open to certain pressure, which may be exercised upon him, to the detriment of the interests of the country. I hope I have not said anything unnecessarily strong; indeed, I have not discussed this matter from a party point of view, but I do wish to impress upon the leaders of the Government—I suppose it is a work of supererogation for me to do so—that they ought to be careful of the general traditions and underlying principles of good financial administration in the matter of the expenditure of this country.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I assure the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster), absolutely and unreservedly, that the past traditions of the Marine Department in that regard have been scrupulously carried out by myself. I cannot hope to have, the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) would not expect me to have, the knowledge and experience which Col. Anderson has in these matters, to enable me to judge whether in an exceptional case the general rule, which is a good one, should be departed from. Last year I was called upon to build three or four lighthouses on the Alaskan and British Columbian coasts, leading up to the Lynn Canal, and Col. Anderson, who had made a special visit on my instructions, reported to me that in his opinion, and beyond any peradventure, it would be madness to let that work by contract. They were too far away from the centres where material could be provided, and he recommended that we could do a great deal better by our own ship and our own men than we could by contract.

Mr. FOSTER. That is quite different. This is close by.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I said to Col. Anderson: "We will build them just as you say." We did build them, and I think they have given satisfaction, and have been built a great deal cheaper than they would have been if we had built them by contract. The first thing we talked about was the necessity of calling for tenders. Col. Anderson was very strong the other way. He said it was a special case in which he would unreservedly advocate building the pier by the department under our own officers. He said: "If you called for tenders, the margin of risk is so great that an enormous sum would have to be added to the cost by the contractor."

Mr. FOSTER. There is no margin of risk in building the crib.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The building of the crib is a small part of the work by the time you get it down and loaded with stone. We hope to have it down by the 1st of July. I can assure my hon. friend that I had Col. Anderson, not only in consultation, but a formal written report from him, advising me strongly to do this work under the supervision of the department. We have had Mr. Noble down there, one of the best men, to superintend the work, and Col. Anderson has made visit after visit there; and we shall have the advantage of having Col. Anderson's assistant engineer, who is at work in connection with the placing of buoys in the St. Lawrence, within reach of this work, so that he can examine it from week to week. It is a great and important work, one of the biggest the department has ever undertaken. Col. Anderson thought—and I yielded to his judgment unreservedly—that in the public interest we should take the responsibility of doing the work ourselves. I know that not only on this side of the Atlantic, but on the other side, at Lloyd's and other places, they are waiting anxiously to know what we will do in regard to this and other kindred works. The hon. gentleman knows that we have entirely reconstructed our work on the south-east coast of Belle Isle; we are building another work at Flower Ledge in the Straits of Belle Isle; and we are building this third work in the Straits of the St. Lawrence. I am in hopes that these works will be proceeded with, with promptness, energy and despatch, so that those parties may know that everything possible has been done by us to give such aids to navigation as will do away with the prejudice, the unreasonable prejudice, which exists against the safe navigation of these waters, and to put the shipping of the country in such a shape that it can insure its vessels at reasonable rates. I cannot impress too much on hon. gentlemen the importance which is attached by the shipping interests to this business. I am pressed, not only weekly but daily, to get the work pushed forward; and my hon. friend (Mr. Dobell), who, perhaps, is more responsible and more looked to than any one else in matters of this kind, has never let a day go by since I returned from Washington last March, without bringing me letters from men at Lloyds, and from commercial men of Quebec and Montreal and other places, urging the great importance of pressing forward this work at once. For a long time Col. Anderson did not yield to the belief that this work could be done for less than $70,000; and while he held to that estimate, I hesitated. I could not bring myself to recommend to my colleagues to appropriate so large a sum. But while I was at Quebec last year on the Joint High Commission, my hon. friend (Mr. Dobell) pressed the matter upon me again and again, and asked that Col. Anderson should be brought down to examine the ground again completely, and make a new and thorough report; because he was satisfied that the work could be done for a very much less sum. Col. Anderson came down, examined it, and made his report; and when he satisfied himself that the work could be done for $40,000, my mind was made up at once, that instead of building a new lightship we should build a permanent lighthouse ; and I am satisfied that the whole commercial interests of Quebec and Montreal, and the insurance interests on the other side of the Atlantic, will be a unit in saying that we have done the right thing and done it at the right time ; and if in doing it we have somewhat stretched the constitutional rule, I would ask my hon. friend, in view of the importance of the work, not to oppose it.

Mr. FOSTER.

Mr. TAYLOR. I would like to put a few questions to the hon. member for Quebec West (Mr. Dobell), who is the practical man of the Government. In the first place, I would like to ask him the size of the crib.

Mr. DOBELL. I would answer my hon. friend, though really the remarks he made this afternoon about the course I adopted—

Mr. TAYLOR. If my hon. friend will answer the question—I have two or three more to put to him—he can discuss the matter afterwards.

Mr. DOBELL. I am going to answer as I like. The hon. gentleman this afternoon went out of his way to reflect on me without the slightest reason. No antecedents in my course should warrant him in saying that I put this man Lemieux on the work because I wanted to find him employment. I recommended him to my colleague because I knew he would do the work well, and that he could be trusted to carry it out successfully. The crib is 100 feet long and 50 feet broad. It is 10 feet longer and 10 feet wider than I recommended, but Col. Anderson thought he had better be on the safe side.

Mr. TAYLOR. Then, I understand that the deep water is 25 feet, and the tide rises 17 feet, which makes 42 feet until you get above water ?

Mr. DOBELL. That is right.

Mr. TAYLOR. Then, I presume it will sink 8 feet in the ground, and stand 10 feet above water ; so that we would have to have a crib 60 feet high by 100 feet by 50 feet.

Mr. DOBELL. There is no chance of its sinking, because we found the bed rock.

Mr. TAYLOR. Then, 50 feet will cover its height ?

Mr. DOBELL. Yes.

Mr. TAYLOR. Is the crib built of square timber ? If so, of what quality ?

Mr. DOBELL. The crib is built all of merchantable square timber, and is so built that the ice will not hold on to it. It recedes, so that the ice will pile up and fall over. That is, it is wider at the bottom and tapers towards the top, its average width being 50 feet.

Mr. TAYLOR. Has it centre courses, and if so, how many ?

Mr. DOBELL. It is built so solidly and so strong of timber that the only difficulty they feared at the time was that they could not sink it. But they have provided for this and I feel sure it will be a success.

Mr. TAYLOR. What size are the pockets for stones ? Are the timbers 10 feet square, 6 feet apart or 12 feet apart ?

Mr. DOBELL. Really, I have not the plan in detail, but I know that it is specially strong.

Mr. TAYLOR. I presume my hon. friend has seen it since it has been under construction, and he can tell me the size of the pockets for the stonework. He can give me a general idea.

Mr. DOBELL. I would say that they are from 10 to 12 feet square.

Mr. TAYLOR. In that case there would be five courses of timber one way and 12 the other way. Then, the Minister says there is $20,000 expended on that work already.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I said, that by the 1st July there would be $20,000 required.

Mr. TAYLOR. What kind of timber will be used—pine, spruce or oak ?

Mr. DOBELL. All below low-water is either hemlock or spruce. There is nothing better than hemlock under water. Above water, yellow pine and other timbers adapted for that purpose.

Mr. TAYLOR. I hope that neither yellow pine nor any other soft wood would be put above water. In erecting a lighthouse, surely the Government will use the best quality of oak. I understand that on the pier a house is to be erected.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Mr. TAYLOR. I understood that about $20,000 would be spent this month to pay for the cribwork, and towing it down, and sinking it.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Mr. TAYLOR. Any contractor will furnish the woodwork of this size and description, if the contract is let by tender, for $10,000, and make a good profit—100 x 50 and 50 feet high, with timbers crossing every 10 or 12 feet. Calculate the quantity of timber and figure it up per thousand, and where will the hon. gentleman put one-half of $20,000.

Mr. DOBELL. Is the hon. gentleman going to scold us because it is not costing enough ?

Mr. TAYLOR. My hon. friend says that $20,000 is already spent on the crib.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I said that I am instructed that $20,000 will be required by the 1st July.

Mr. FOSTER. That can only be for the crib and towing it down.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. And putting it in its place.

Mr. TAYLOR. How much has been expended to date?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I cannot tell, because the liabilities are there yet to be paid.

Mr. TAYLOR. Has the hon. gentleman brought down the plans and estimates made by Col. Anderson?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have brought down the report, and will read it, if the hon. gentleman wishes.

Mr. MONTAGUE. How much has been paid already?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I cannot pay until I get the money. There may be a small sum paid for wages, out of the general maintenance vote.

Mr. MONTAGUE. What amounts are due at present?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I cannot tell, but I am instructed that it will require $20,000 by the 1st July. The report is dated 4th November, 1898, and is as follows:—

I have made a thorough inquiry into the question of replacing the two lightships in the Traverse of St. Roch, River St. Lawrence, below Quebec, by permanent lighthouses on piers, and, in accordance with instructions, I submit the results.

General Description.—The Site of Lighthouse.

The Traverse is a critical point in the navigation of the St. Lawrence, the deep-water channel being only about a quarter of a mile wide for a distance of three miles, with a $7\frac{1}{2}$ -knot current running through it, partly in a diagonal direction. Being in a wide part of the river, with submerged flats, four miles wide each side, it has always been necessary to mark it well, and from its position range lights on shore have not been practicable. It has, since 1836, been marked by lightships, one at the upper and the other at the lower end, on the south or port side of the channel. The lower lightship is a staunch iron vessel, and carries a powerful steam-whistle. The other is a wooden vessel, and is practically worn out, and must be soon replaced.

Mr. FOSTER. This dispenses with only one.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

The development of the trade in the St. Lawrence has of late years induced shipowners to run more risk in attempting to navigate the river earlier in the spring and more particularly later on in the autumn than used to be thought prudent. This condition has given rise to complaints against the lightships, on the ground that they cannot be put out sufficiently early nor left out sufficiently late to accommodate the shipping. The department has consequently been urged to replace one, if not both, of the lightships by more reliable and permanent structures.

On three occasions, the last time in August last, I have taken soundings and have examined the bottom in the neighbourhood of the two lightships to test its suitability to receive the foundations of piers. In both localities it is of mud, apparently overlying shale, and with good level terraces in about four fathoms at low water. Near both lightships spots with only two fathoms can be found, but I fear these would not be sufficiently near the channel nor sufficiently in line to be satisfactory, and the bottom there appears to be more uneven in surface and in texture.

To build piers in 24 feet water at low-water springs, which would give about 41 feet at high-water, piers with large bases would be necessary, and to resist the very strong current and the probability of field-ice, weight and stability are essential. The conditions at each end of the Traverse are practically identical, except that a powerful fog-alarm would be required at any establishment at the lower end, while none would be necessary at the upper end.

The cheapest piers, and the most easily built, would, of course, be of wooden cribwork, filled with loose stone ballast, and for work below low water mark I would recommend this construction. No matter what description of top-work was adopted, above water the question is somewhat difficult to decide. For permanency and efficiency, a steel casing lined with a thick wall of concrete, and a concrete deck, would be best; but this plan would materially increase the cost of erection beyond that involved in using timber-work throughout. From what I have seen of old wharfs in Quebec, I think the timber-work is fairly durable nearly up to high-water mark; above high-water mark, or wherever it is subject to alternate wetting and drying, it decays very rapidly, say in ten to fifteen years, or at most twenty years, if extra good timber is secured.

From the fact that the Upper Traverse lightship is in such bad repair, it is urgent that we should build a pier at the Upper Traverse at once, and I think it advisable that a pier should also be built at the Lower Traverse if the necessary funds are provided, because it would be so much more reliable than any lightship, and would be at the station when the need for the aid is most urgent, and when a lightship cannot be kept there, at the very end of the season. With the tendency every year to extend the season, and to bring larger ships to the St. Lawrence, the necessity has become pressing. The cost of maintenance of a lighthouse, once established, is less than that of a lightship, while the cost of erection will probably not greatly exceed the first cost of a lightship.

I want to impress that on my hon. friend. I had to decide whether to build a new lightship or a permanent lighthouse.

Mr. TAYLOR. Why not repair the one there?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. You cannot; it is worn out.

The necessity for a permanent lighthouse at the Lower Traverse is not so urgent as at the upper end, because the lightship is a first-rate one, because the greatest risk is incurred in autumn, when steamships are leaving the river, and have to make the upper entrance first; and because a permanent lighthouse at the upper end, in range with Pillar's lighthouse, leads into the lower end of the channel, which can be navigated by working the two lights together. A second permanent lighthouse would, however, increase security and admit of improvement in the service.

That is a matter we will have to consider later on, in the years to come.

Finished plans for a pier or lighthouse have been designed, but from a rough estimate based on the cubic contents of a structure of suitable size, it is estimated that it would cost $40,000 for a wooden pier with a lighthouse, complete; or, if the portion above water were finished in steel and concrete, the cost would be increased about $20,000, but this change would probably prolong the life of the structure, without extensive repairs, three-fold. I recommend a wooden pier, with the top-work finished in concrete, surmounted by a wooden lighthouse and keeper's dwelling, as the best permanent investment, at either station. The increase in the size of the pier to receive a first-class fog-alarm, and the installation of the fog-alarm would probably add $10,000 to $12,000 to the cost of the Lower Traverse establishment.

I further recommend that the work be done by the department under its own direct supervision. If such work were done by contract the contingent risks would be so great that it would be necessary to put on a large margin to meet them, and the opportunities for slighting work of this kind would offer a great temptation to a contractor. If done by the department, good work and materials would be assured, and the cost would probably be less than by the contract system.

Mr. TAYLOR. I do not see a word there about urgency.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The very word "urgency" is used. If I cannot convince my hon. friend, I will only have to give it up.

Mr. FOSTER. What my hon. friend (Mr. Taylor) says is that he hears nothing in that report about the necessity of building on the ice.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This report was given me last November. I consulted the hon. member for Quebec West and said we would have to wait until Parliament met, when we would take a vote. He pointed out that we would lose a season, that the lightship would not last for another season, and that if something was not done the rates on the St. Lawrence would be increased. Then he told me that the work could be done so much cheaper by constructing the cribwork on the ice.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the date of that report?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It is dated 4th November last. I told Col. Anderson to consult with the hon. member for Quebec West and with those he recommended as having experience in this matter. They must have had half a dozen interviews. It was then suggested that Mr. Lemieux, an expert in these matters, should be brought up to the department, and I told them to bring him up. So my hon. friend Mr. Dobell, Mr. Anderson and Mr. Lemieux consulted. I was there and did what I could, though I do not profess to be skilled in these matters. After long consultation, Mr. Anderson told me he was satisfied it would be in the public interest and would save money to commence the cribwork on the ice.

Mr. TAYLOR. As I understand my hon. friend from Quebec West, the 42 feet of this pier is of hemlock and spruce.

Mr. DOBELL. Not the whole 42 feet. What is between low water mark and high water mark and is subject to changes, may require other wood.

Mr. TAYLOR. There is no hemlock, then, above low water mark, 25 feet?

Mr. DOBELL. There may be for a tier or two above, but there is no timber above the 25 feet that the superintendent did not think perfectly safe. Above that is pine.

Mr. TAYLOR. Because, I can inform the hon. gentleman, if he puts in hemlock which is not covered by water all the time, that is wet sometimes and dry sometimes, it will not last more than five or six years. I have had experience in building wharfs. Now, I have figured out the cost and I will give the figures later on. But I would like him to explain, as a practical man, how this work can be done better on the ice than in open water?

Mr. DOBELL. I do not think it wants any explanation. I will appeal to the intelligence of any man in this House.

Mr. TAYLOR. Besides the hon. gentleman (Mr. Dobell) himself, there are, perhaps, not more than half a dozen men in this House who ever built a crib.

Mr. DOBELL. I see the hon. gentleman has a perfect knowledge of this business. I begin to find I have a master of the art before me. Therefore, I must be careful. But I appeal to my hon. friend (Mr. Taylor); if there is an uneven bottom—

Mr. TAYLOR. But you explained that this was a level rock bottom.

Mr. DOBELL. No, not level. We had to frame the bottom of the crib so as to fit the place where it is intended to rest.

Mr. TAYLOR. I know how that is.

Mr. DOBELL. I did not know until I saw this work going on, and found they were fitting the bottom of this crib, much as a bootmaker would fit a boot for one's foot, so as to fit exactly where it is intended to rest. Mr. Lemieux has engaged an expert diver who took his soundings and measured every foot, taking great care. I do not see how my hon. friend could make such a structure in the water.

Mr. A. C. MACDONALD (King's, P.E.I.) I must say I am very sorry for the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, as well as very glad. I am sorry for the unbusiness-like way in which he seems to have conducted everything in his department that has come before the House to-day. He had a good reputation as a business man with us, but it has not grown since he came to Ottawa. He has had the engineer of his department make plans and specifications of a public work, and, no doubt, an estimate of the cost. The engineer has gone further and advised that it would be in the interest of economy to carry on this work by day labour. If I were in the Minister's place and my engineer advised me against my own judgment, I would rely on my own judgment and call for tenders, just as a man would do in his own business. The hon. Minister spends $40,000 of the public money without the sanction of Parliament. Why, the Queen of England cannot spend a pound of public money without the sanction of Parliament, and the hon. gentleman is putting himself above the Queen by spending $40,000 without the sanction of Parliament and without tenders. Urgency, he says! Why, where is the urgency? It is in building a crib 100 feet by 50 feet and 42 feet high. Any one who knows anything about timber knows that a crowd of men could build that whole structure in a fortnight. Is it being built in the open sea, where it is likely to be torn to pieces by the storm? Not at all; it is in a dock where there is not a ripple to disturb it. The urgency is that it should be built on the ice. Why, any man knows that it could be built more readily in the water than on the ice. In the water you can float your timber about as you require, slide it up on skids and bolt it down. The structure sinks as you build up. It is ridiculous to say that there was urgency to construct this on the ice.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It is evident that we have the wrong engineer in the department.

Mr. MACDONALD (King's, P.E.I.) I am not an engineer, but I have common sense enough to know that that is right. We are told that this is a matter of a technical nature and that nobody but an engineer can construct it. Why, there are a hundred and one people in the hon. gentleman's own constituency who, with the plans and specifications could build that structure. Technical work is all my eye. While I am sorry to see the Minister badgered, I think it is in a good cause, and that he will be more careful in future to let out work of this kind by contract. The same thing may apply to the matter under consideration in the early part of the day, when hon. gentlemen on this side of the House found fault with the prices that were paid for articles consumed on the schooners engaged in the fishery protection service and steamers.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Do not let us go back to that.

Mr. MACDONALD (King's, P.E.I.) I wish to show that one thing is on a par with the other. Now, what do we find? I am not blaming the Minister of Marine and Fisheries more than his predecessors, but I say there is something particularly rotten about that whole business, from first to last. I have experience enough to know that there is great room for saving public money in regard to the supplies to these fishing schooners and steamers used by the department in protecting the fisheries. We find very ordinary seamen put on those vessels, and they are fed like fighting cocks, with jams, tomato sauce, sausages, macaroni, plums, lemons, syrups, oranges, vermicelli, catsup, marmalade, prunes, lamb, calves' foot jellies, bananas, evaporated cream, curry powder, figs, fancy biscuits and capers. Now, I say, that the larger portion of these things are wholly unnecessary for a service of that kind, and they are used in enormous quantities. In one instance there were 40 pounds of curry powder used, at 40 cents a pound. There is curry enough to make us all feel pretty warm, anyhow. There is something particularly loose about the manner in which public money is expended in this branch of the service. I want to say to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, that there is lots of room for him to show his business capacity in controlling the expenditure of public money in his department. Now, with respect to this cribwork. There have been no tenders asked for its construction. It will be constructed at the end of this month, and I think the next best thing the Minister can do is to ask for tenders for the placing of that crib in position, and the ballasting of it. They talk about $20,000 or $30,000 for the construction of that cribwork. I do not think it will cost any such sum. I should say, from my little experience, that $10,000, or $15,000 at the outside, ought to construct that cribwork. However, I do not want to confine the hon. gentleman to a few hundred dollars; but I think public money should not be squandered in this free fashion, without public tenders.

Mr. E. COCHRANE (East Northumberland). It appears to me that the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Sir Louis Davies) is talking to us, on this side of the House, as if we were not interested in the navigation of the St. Lawrence. I want to tell him that we are as much interested in the safe navigation of the St. Lawrence as he is, or as the Government of the day. But there is a principle involved in this question for which the hon. gentleman and his friends were great sticklers, when they were on this side of the House. I was sorry to see the levity the hon. gentleman manifested, when my hon. friend from Prince Edward Island (Mr. Macdonald) was talking about the supplies that were purchased.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. My hon. friend must not object to my recognizing the humour of my colleague from Prince Edward Island.

Mr. COCHRANE. Humour! Well, Mr. Chairman, if he thinks it is humorous to pay double prices for luxuries for the men employed in the fisheries service that the farmers of this country have to pay for, he is greatly mistaken—these farmers that were bled white, as they said, when hon. gentlemen opposite were on this side of the House. You think it is very nice to tax the farmers more than double for luxuries for men that are not above them in position.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Mr. COCHRANE. I understand that "Oh." But I understand that the farmers of this country do not feel disposed to pay for biscuits at 20 cents a pound, and then have the Minister come back and lay it on the Governor General, when there is a hundred pounds of biscuits. The Governor General never ate that amount of biscuits. I hope you will recognize that fact. Whenever you are brought to look for any extravagance, you get behind a Tory official. But now the hon. gentleman has—I was going to use the word "meanness," but I will refrain—he has the audacity, when he is brought to book, to say, that the Governor General used the biscuits. Just think of the state the farmers of this country were in, when the Tory party left office—bled white by an extravagant Tory Government, as asserted by the Liberals; and the Liberals would hardly allow us to breathe, unless we did it under contract. They come in, and propose to expend $40,000 without contract. They led me to believe, in my innocency—and I was as much led astray as was the contractor (Mr. Gibson), who spoke so feelingly this afternoon, and who found out that he was mistaken, as I was—they led me to believe that they were building this pier in the winter time at a place where they were going to put it this summer. But we find now that they were building it in a harbour where there was not a wave to disturb the peaceful breast of my hon. friend from Quebec West (Mr. Dobell). I would not insinuate that that hon. gentleman would do anything wrong. I would not even suppose that he urged on the Minister to accept his advice. I would not consider that he had any influence with the Minister, when he sent his friend up to Ottawa to consult with the engineer of the Minister. I think it was an insult to his engineer to bring in outsiders that he did not know.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. He is a colleague of mine.

Mr. COCHRANE. Why, the member for Quebec West is a colleague of yours; but this gentleman that he brought up to consult with your engineer, surely is not a colleague of yours.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Order. The hon. gentleman must address the Chair.

Mr. COCHRANE. I beg your pardon. I addressed you when I began, and I did not expect that I would have to address you, every sentence that I uttered. But, if you want me to say, "Mr. Chairman," every time I begin a sentence, I will address the Chair.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I would remind the hon. gentleman that it is out of order to address himself to an hon. member.

Mr. CASEY. Do not say, "you."

Mr. COCHRANE. Well, where have you been all summer? I was just saying that this engineer, Mr. Lemieux, came up from Quebec to consult with the engineer of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. Why did he allow Mr. Lemieux to come up? Was the Minister acquainted with him before he left? He shakes his head. Well, Sir, this genius from Quebec is equal to the occasion of building a cribwork in a bay where there is not a breath of air to ruffle the water. He came up and consulted with the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries and the member for Quebec West (Mr. Dobell) came up—I do not say that he had any motive at all; I would not suspect any such thing—but the fact is that he came up and got his friend to come up with him. He impressed the Minister to such an extent that he had a recommendation made by his engineer that it was necessary to construct this pier, he said, on the ice, although I do not find that in the report. I do not think it cuts any ice in the hon. gentleman's report. I would say it looks very much like a job, if it were not going to offend you, Mr. Chairman. If that expression is too strong I would be disposed to take it back, but I cannot help feeling that there is a job in it, not only a violation of principle, but there is a job put up for the hon. member for Quebec West to have his friend at $4 a day employed, and all the friends he sends down there. He said that he would have no objection to a Tory working there, but I venture the assertion that if there are Tories there it is on the understanding that they support the hon. member for Quebec West in the next election. If an election were to come on in the near future, I suppose we would have the same job perpetrated that we had when the Western Block was being reconstructed. They had an election going on over in Wright, and they had hundreds of men from that constituency employed. I saw five men holding a ladder for one man to work on. If there is an election brought on before that pier is completed, I will venture the assertion that all the idle men in Quebec will be found working on that pier. I say to the hon. Minister that he should have regard to the burning words that he uttered in the past, and I admired him when he was on this side of the House, although I sometimes thought he was talking to the gallery with that innocent look that he assumes. I would like to ask the hon. gentleman if he does not feel it down in his heart that he has gone back on his public record in this House in consenting to such an iniquitous job as to carry on a work without contract. His conscience will trouble him, and to-night when he retires to his bed, and lays his head on his pillow he will realize how far a departure he has made from the principles he laid down when he was on this side of the House. I speak in all seriousness; I say it is unfortunate, and I am sorry to think that public men can be found in this country laying down sound principles while in Opposition, and then going back upon them when they get into power. What did the hon. gentleman do to-day? He presented a humiliating spectacle. He went back to the public records, and he appeared to me to be perfectly delighted when he found that a Tory Government had perpetrated an iniquity such as that which is charged against him. This is a case of the hon. Minister undertaking to build a pier which is going to cost the people $40,000 without consulting Parliament. What position is he in to-day? He tells us that he had to do it, that the old light-ship was worn out, but when we come to find out, the light-ship is doing duty to-day, and will be doing duty all this season. I am satisfied if the Minister had consulted Parliament and got an appropriation, and if he had let that work by tender, he could have had the work done as expeditiously as he will have it done without tender, and with less money.

Mr. FRASER (Guysborough). Mr. Chairman, I would not have taken any part in this discussion had not the hon. gentleman (Mr. Cochrane) seen fit to contrast the farmers of this country with the fishermen. I want the hon. gentleman to understand, at least, in so far as the courts of this country have decided the matter, that the farmers are much more purchasable than the fishermen, and that if he sees fit to make a distinction and set the farmer above the fishermen, he makes the biggest mistake he ever did. I can refer the hon. gentleman to the hon. gentleman on his right who understands what the fishermen are, and he will find that so far as intelligence is concerned, the fishermen of the lower provinces are not only the peers, but if there is any difference, the superiors of the farmers for whom he sees fit to speak.

Mr. COCHRANE. I did not say they were not.

Mr. FRASER (Guysborough). I will refer the hon. gentleman to his colleagues from the lower provinces, who, unfortunately for the fishermen, happen to represent them on that side of the House on the present occasion. The hon. gentleman says that Conservative parties are purchasable when they get work. He understands that better than I, better than any other hon. member, and he knows whether or not they should be considered in this case as a purchasable party when they get work. He ought to know, and I have no doubt that he does. He understands exactly how it was done in other days.

Mr. COCHRANE. Are you referring to the hon. member for Quebec West (Mr. Dobell)?

Mr. FRASER (Guysborough). If the argument meant anything, it meant that the hon. member for Quebec West (Mr. Dobell), in getting men to work who were Conservatives was therefore able to purchase them.

Mr. COCHRANE. No, I did not argue that.

Mr. FRASER (Guysborough). I beg the hon. gentleman's pardon; that is his argument.

An hon. MEMBER. Question, question.

Mr. FRASER (Guysborough). If the hon. gentleman who calls question will just wait a moment I will reply to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Cochrane), because I understand that this is debate. It may be rather hard on the hon. gentleman who represents farmers to have this matter brought up, but I maintain that if the hon. member (Mr. Cochrane) proved anything it is that the Conservative party, if they get work, are purchasable. He cannot deny that. The hon. gentleman said that the farmers are more intelligent, and that the fishermen are inferior to the farmers. The hon. gentleman is on record, and I venture to say that he will find that the words that he uttered were just of that character.

Mr. COCHRANE. No.

Mr. FRASER (Guysborough). The matter has gone beyond him now, and he knows it as well as I do. I want him to understand that these fishermen are the peers of the farmers of this country. In this country, composed of farmers and fishermen as it is, there is as much, if not more intelligence represented in the same degree of life by the fishermen than the farmers for the reason that the fishermen and sailors go abroad and see the world more than other men in their position in life, and if the hon. gentleman thinks that the farmers are more intelligent he makes a mistake. I do not say this because I happen to represent a county largely composed of fishermen, although I am glad to make that statement just to show the men that sent me here, but I do say that so far as the fishermen are concerned they are as intelligent men as any in Canada.

As to the building of this work the hon. Minister has given an explanation. That explanation may not be satisfactory to hon. gentlemen opposite, but there is the explanation. I want to draw attention to the fact that, when any question is raised on the other side of the House as to an expenditure made in the regular way by the officials, it is a legitimate argument to say that hon. gentlemen opposite stood by an expenditure made in the same direction, and even to a greater extent, and never raised their voices against it. Is it not the fairest and best argument to point out, in making purchases now, according to the regular method pursued by the late Government, that hon. gentlemen did not find fault when their own friends were in power. It is not an argument to say that, if wrong was committed, wrong should be perpetuated, but it is a strong argument to say that the Government are doing in the regular way the legitimate work of the the Government, and in a way that hon. gentlemen opposite approved of when these expenditures were made by them. If that be the case, they are not in a position to find fault with us. So far as the fishermen are concerned, they can hold their own with the best in the country.

Mr. W. H. MONTAGUE (Haldimand). I am somewhat astonished at my hon. friend (Mr. Fraser), not only at the style of his address, but at the warmth with which he rose to defend the reputation and intelligence of the fishermen down upon the sea coast, whom nobody else in this House has mentioned in this debate with the exception of the hon. gentleman himself. Will the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fraser) tell me where the hon. member (Mr. Cochrane) slandered the fishermen?

Mr. FRASER (Guysborough). I did not say he slandered them.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Then, what has the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fraser) been complaining about?

Mr. FRASER (Guysborough). I simply rose to say that he represented them as inferior to the farmers.

Mr. MONTAGUE. The hon. member for Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane) did not refer to the fishermen at all, and the effort on the part of the hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Fraser) to get an occasion whereupon he might proclaim himself as a hero in defence of the fishermen, is altogether uncalled for. The fishermen were never mentioned in this debate, until the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fraser) mentioned them. The hon. member for Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane) stated that luxuries had been supplied to the crews upon the boats, which luxuries had to be paid for by the farmers of Ontario, and which luxuries the farmers of Ontario were not able to buy for themselves. That was the statement pure and simple, and if the hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Fraser) can see in that statement of fact, slanders on the fishermen, which would give occasion for all his stormy and blasty indignation which he has fired off in defence of his friends and supporters the fishermen of Nova Scotia, I confess that gentleman has better ears than any other member in this House. The farmers of Ontario do not claim, nor do the people of Ontario claim, any superiority over any one, but the hon. member (Mr. Fraser) may remember the day and if he does not his colleagues will, when these Liberals used to attend meetings in the electoral campaigns in Ontario, and with tears the size of cricket balls rolling down their faces—

Mr. COCHRANE. Crocodile tears.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Yes, crocodile tears; they told the farmers of Ontario that they were being taxed and bled white on their binder twine, in order to give free binder twine to the ignorant and servile fishermen of Nova Scotia. Where was then the thunderous voice of the hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Fraser) in defence of the fishermen?

Mr. FRASER (Guysborough). I was not there then. Who made the statement.

Mr. MONTAGUE. My hon. friend (Mr. Fraser) was not there, but he heard it stated many and many a time in this House.

Mr. FRASER (Guysborough). I never did, and I want you to mention the name of any one who used these words.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I am not quoting now directly from "Hausard," but the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fraser) knows that time and again the Conservative Government were attacked for placing a tax on binder twine, while they gave free twine to the fishermen of Nova Scotia. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Fraser) need not resent the small statement of the hon. member for East Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane) when he (Mr. Fraser) remembers that a certain gentleman whom he now follows in this House referred, not only to the province of Nova Scotia, but to the other maritime provinces, as "the shreds and patches of the Dominion," and not only that, but referred to the province of Nova Scotia as "the dry nurse or the wet nurse of boodlers." I do not remember the thunderous tones of the hon. member (Mr. Fraser) being then raised in defending the fair honour of his province in this Parliament. Now, with regard to the matter which has been under debate; it appears to me that the hon. member for Quebec (Mr. Dobell) has been the adviser of the Minister of Marine all the way through. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Dobell) nods his head in assent. He has been the adviser as to the extreme importance of this work. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Dobell) nods his head again. He has been the adviser as to the man who was to be selected to supervise the work. Let me ask him, did he advise that the work should be done by day's work or by tender?

Mr. DOBELL. I have no hesitation whatever in saying, that I believe the work is being done certainly from 30 to 40 per cent less than it could have been done by any other means.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Then, the hon. gentleman (Mr. Dobell) advised that it should be done by day's work?

Mr. DOBELL. Certainly.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. And very properly so.

Mr. MONTAGUE. The Solicitor General, of course, comes from the city of Quebec, and he, no doubt, quite agrees with his Quebec colleague. Now, after the hon. gentleman representing Quebec West, and the Solicitor General had both offered their advice, and the Minister of Marine had yielded to their importunities, may I ask the Minister if he himself has gone carefully into the figures with regard to the expense. We are told on this side of the House, that this crib work could be built for about $8,000 or $9,000, and the Minister tells us that up to the 1st of July he will require $20,000, and that sum, apparently, would cover nothing but the cribwork. It is a plain arithmetical calculation as to the number of feet, as to the value per foot, as to the number of days of labour required, and has the Minister of Marine and Fisheries gone into that calculation with his engineer?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I accepted the statement of the engineer that this is about the sum that will be required on the first of July. I could not do anything more than that.

Mr. MONTAGUE. That is very indefinite, but let me ask how far has the work progressed at the present moment?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I cannot tell.

Mr. MONTAGUE. The hon. member for Quebec West (Mr. Dobell) will know, and the officer of the department is here.

Mr. MONTAGUE.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do as every other Minister does, I accept the statement of my engineer, that up to a certain date there will be a certain expenditure required, and upon his report I ask Parliament for that sum.

Mr. MONTAGUE. We want to know how far the work has progressed?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The engineer is not here, but my deputy tells me that between the 20th and the 23rd of this month, the cribwork will be towed down to its place and the work of submerging commenced.

Mr. MONTAGUE. That is an important point for the future. We are to understand that the towing of the crib and the submerging of it is to be finished by the 1st of July?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That is the belief. It is upon that belief that this estimate is made.

Mr. MONTAGUE. That is to cost $20,000?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. So I am advised.

Mr. MONTAGUE. How much will the towing down cost?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I could not tell the hon. gentleman.

Mr. MONTAGUE. The hon. member for Quebec West will know.

Mr. DOBELL. About $250.

Mr. MONTAGUE. How much will the sinking cost?

Mr. DOBELL. A great deal. It is to be filled with stone.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I venture to believe that it will not be filled with stone by the 1st of July.

Mr. DOBELL. Why not?

Mr. MONTAGUE. How is it to be done?

Mr. DOBELL. By stone thrown into the crib.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I thought at one time, by the figures given by the hon. member for King's, P.E.I. (Mr. Macdonald), that it was going to be filled with currie powder, because $400 worth of currie powder seems to be more than sufficient to make all the currie required for the Governor General when he goes down there.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Will the hon. gentleman give me the authority on which he makes that statement, because he is putting it on "Hansard," and it will go everywhere.

Mr. MONTAGUE. It was 400 pounds, and it is worth about a dollar a pound.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman is making a statement for which he has no authority.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I have made the statement which was made by the hon. member for King's only a few moments ago, and which the Minister of Marine did not challenge.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Has the hon. gentleman verified it?

Mr. MONTAGUE. No, I have not.

Mr. MACDONALD (King's, P.E.I.) I say that there is a statement in the Auditor General's Report that 400 pounds of currie powder was bought at 40 or 50 cents a pound.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. On what page?

Mr. MACDONALD (King's). I have not the page.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I know nothing about the matter. I am only repeating a statement which was unchallenged when it was made by the hon. member for King's. Does the hon. member for Quebec West say that the sinking will be done by the 1st of July?

Mr. DOBELL. I did not say that.

Mr. MONTAGUE. How many cords of stone will it take?

Mr. DOBELL. I really cannot tell you.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman knows that the money will not be paid until the work is done.

Mr. MONTAGUE. I understand that, but I want to know what the money is to be paid for. The hon. gentleman surely knows how many cords of stone it will take.

Mr. DOBELL. I feel perfectly satisfied with what was said by the late Minister of Marine, the hon. member for Pictou (Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper), when he enjoyed that office, that he would have done this work if he had not found that it was so expensive. The lowest estimate he got for the work was $75,000. The Minister to-day tells you that it will be completed and put in its place for $40,000.

Mr. MONTAGUE. How are you going to construct this work for $40,000, if you spend $20,000 on what is less than half the work?

Mr. DOBELL. Can you not leave it until you find what it is going to cost, and, if we fail, then bring up your charges. Let us go on with the work.

Mr. MONTAGUE. The suavity, the generous confidence, and the supreme indifference which the hon. gentleman affects towards details becomes him very well; but the House looks at these matters, even though we are not just as practical men as the hon. member for Quebec West. The hon. gentleman and his colleagues have made statements before that have not been verified. We remember two or three years ago when, by the great offices of the hon. member for Quebec West, we were going to have a fast steamship line across the Atlantic. We almost heard the sound of the fog whistles of those bottle-necked steamships; and yet here we are, three years after the patient, earnest, constant, determined, forward-and-backward efforts of the hon. member for Quebec West, and we are no nearer the bottle-necked steamships than we were when the hon. gentleman began. He took the same position then that he does now. He showed the same supreme contempt for details and the same suave indifference to the questioning of the members on this side of the House when any one attempted to get some information from his superior knowledge of steamship matters; and now, after having been the close adviser, genius and guide of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries with regard to this whole question, the hon. member for Quebec West says: "Oh, why can't you leave this until a later stage, and see whether we are right or not." We have the statement of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries that this work is only going to cost $40,000; but the Minister is unable to tell us what the opinion of his chief engineer is as to how that money is to be divided—how much is to go for cribwork, how much for stone, and how much for sinking. Has the hon. gentleman those figures now?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No.

Mr. MONTAGUE. The hon. gentleman has not those figures, and I submit, with all due respect to the officer he mentions—an officer for whom this side of the House has equal respect to his own—that it is an extraordinary proposition that a Minister of the Crown will spend money not yet voted by Parliament on a work as to the cost of which he has not a detail from the engineer on whose opinion he is basing his whole calculations. He ought surely to be able to tell the House how much is to be spent on cribwork and how much for superstructure. From whom was this timber bought, may I ask the Minister?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I could not give you the names.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Perhaps the hon. member for Quebec West can tell us?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, no. The accounts will be brought down. The hon. gentleman has been a Minister, and he knows that he never saw such questions asked in Parliament before.

Mr. MONTAGUE. The hon. gentleman has a memory as short as a match. He sat on this side of the House for years, and I venture to say that there is not a question of detail which we have put to him that does not find a 200 per cent precedent in questions put by hon. gentlemen opposite when they were on this side of the House criticising the late Administration. Surely we have a right to ask where the supplies for this work were bought? Can the hon. member for Quebec West tell us who supplied the timber?

Mr. DOBELL. No, I cannot tell.

Mr. MONTAGUE. He cannot tell. I venture to say that he knows what the day labourers are paid.

Mr. DOBELL. No, I do not.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Did not the hon. gentleman recommend them?

Mr. DOBELL. No.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Well, that is a different policy from what is followed in most cases. But surely he ought to be able to tell us where the timber was purchased.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It was purchased through Col. Anderson and the agent at Quebec.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Not by tender?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No.

Mr. MONTAGUE. That is a case where tenders might have been called for.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It had to be bought at the lowest market price for timber of that kind.

Mr. MONTAGUE. Quebec is a business place where timber could be got at a short order, and there is no excuse for tenders not being called for that. I think it is material to know from whom the timber was bought, and the price at which it was bought. The market price in the mind of the Minister or the mind of the hon. member for Quebec West may be a shade different from the market price at Quebec.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The instructions were to purchase everything at the current market prices. I am quite sure my hon. friend will be satisfied that I am giving, frankly and freely, all the information I have, and I would frankly appeal to them that we might go on, as the matter has now been pretty thoroughly discussed.

Mr. SNETSINGER. I fail to see how hon. gentlemen on the Opposition side can complain with any seriousness of the course of the Government in this matter, when they contrast it with their own record. They spent a half a million dollars on Sheik's Island dams, and never called for tenders. They gave a contract without tender for a lock on the Cornwall Canal which cost a lot of money, and which has never had a crank turned on it yet; and those who built that dam made a large profit out of it. All this was done without tender, yet we have these hon. gentlemen protesting that this Government should not do $4 worth of work without calling for tenders.

Mr. MACDONALD. Did the Tories do right?

Mr. SNETSINGER. They did wrong; but it illbecomes these same hon. gentlemen to make such an outcry about these small matters.

Mr. NICHOLAS FLOOD DAVIN (West Assiniboia). I rise to say a few words on a subject that has been very fully discussed. I do not propose to deal with the extraneous subject that was debated by my hon. friend from Guysborough (Mr. Fraser). Fishermen are, I apprehend, as useful citizens as any other class of men. If the farmer ploughs the land, the fisherman ploughs the sea. If the farmer cultivates the land, the fisherman cultivates the seas. But I was rather struck by the reason given by my hon. friend from Guysborough why the House should accept his statement, that the fishermen are intelligent men. He asked the House to believe in their intelligence because they sent him here. Far be it from me to say, that the slander of the fishermen was on the Government side of the House, rather than on this, but I think that retort might fairly have been made by my hon. friend from East Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane).

I am not going to say anything with regard to the point that was so strongly put by my hon. friend from York, N.B. (Mr. Foster), namely, that the Government had done wrong in departing from the rule that they should not spend public money without first coming to Parliament. That has been fully discussed. But, after hearing all that my hon. friend the Minister of Marine has said on this subject, and after all that the hon. member for Quebec West (Mr. Dobell) has said, I am still unable to understand why tenders were not called for. Colonel Anderson had clearly made specifications. That fact is admitted by the hon. member for Quebec himself.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Perhaps my hon. friend was not here when I read Colonel Anderson's report. I acted on his special report that, under the circumstances and having regard to the peculiar character of the work, it would, in his opinion, be very much better done under the supervision of the department than by calling for tenders.

Mr. DAVIN. I was here when that report was read, but the one sentence to which my hon. friend refers, is at the close of that report, and it seemed to me to be a non sequitur. I did not see how it hung together with the previous part of his excellent report. It is perfectly clear that the department was in a position to ask for tenders. I am quite ready to admit the urgency, but again I ask, why were not tenders called for, because it cannot be seriously maintained that the delay which would result from the calling for tenders would be such as to materially interfere with the urgency. I heard my hon. friend the Minister of Marine, after recess, make a long and eloquent plea to justify what he had done; but, if you look at the character of that statement, you will find that it bears a strange and striking similarity to those made by the Ministers of Trade and Commerce, and Agriculture, and Interior, and Militia, and by other Ministers, when apologizing for precisely the same official misdemeanour that my hon. friend the Minister of Marine has apologized for to-night. When we protest against the Government letting out a large contract like this without calling for tenders, we cannot forget that there is not a department in that Government that, contrary to—I was going to say, law—contrary to the well-understood rule of procedure in these matters, contrary to what is due to Parliament, has not been guilty of the same offence; and in each case each Minister has had to make the same excuse, in each case we have had the same special pleading as we have had to-night.

For my part, I may tell you that in Manitoba and the North-west Territories, one of the strongest features in impression made against this Government—and there is a strong impression against it prevailing there to-day—is due to the fact that every department has been guilty of just such an offence as we are dealing with at this moment. How can the people feel secure that honesty will prevail in the administration of public affairs, when large contracts, amounting to $40,000 and $50,000, are given and no tenders called for? And in a case like this, as has already been hinted at by one of the previous speakers, we ought to be specially on our guard, more particularly at a time like this, because there cannot be the least doubt, notwithstanding the innocence of demeanour assumed by my hon. friend from Quebec West, that if we were on the eve of an election to-morrow, the fact that this work is being done by day labour by the Department of Marine, would be a temptation that certainly it would be difficult for that department not to yield to, to so manipulate that contract as to influence public opinion in the province of Quebec.

I need not point out the utter absurdity of the reasoning put forward by the hon.

member for Guysborough (Mr. Fraser). He said, that, because my hon. friend from East Northumberland referred to a well-known fact, a fact to be deplored, that there is not a constituency throughout the length and breadth of Canada—and I suppose, not in any other constitutionally governed country—in which there is not a certain set of men, belonging to both parties, who are liable to influences that, to say the least, are undesirable—that, therefore, my hon. friend from East Northumberland admitted that the Conservative party was purchasable.

Why, Sir, it is mere rhodomontade; it is pure nonsense. There are men professing Conservatism, just as every sensible man on the other side will admit that there are men professing Liberalism, men who are a disgrace to whichever party they profess to belong, who, instead of thinking of their duty as citizens, think how far they can utilize their privilege of citizenship to benefit themselves momentarily, to swell the number of dollars in their own pockets. I wish we could hold them up to well-merited reproach; I wish we could drag them from the obscurity in which they hide their infamy. But, to pretend our saying there are such men, is to prove that the Conservative party is purchasable, is as I say, the merest rhodomontade. Why, we know very well that here in Ottawa and in every place where public works are constructed, if those public works are administered by day labour instead of by contract, they can be manipulated so as to influence opinion, so as to affect the results of elections. And how can you prevent the public looking with suspicion on a transaction of this kind, and especially at such a time? For, however closely you examine what has been said by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and by the hon. member for Quebec West, you can find no reason why tenders should not have been called for. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Dobell) has stated the rate of pay at $1.25 and $1.50 per day. Does he know what is being paid for the timber?

Mr. DOBELL. My hon. friend from Russell (Mr. Edwards) just now informs me that the price is 12 cents per foot.

Mr. DAVIN. Can the hon. gentleman say where it is being bought?

Mr. DOBELL. No.

Mr. DAVIN. The hon. gentleman represents one of the constituencies of Quebec. We are told that this work will cost $40,000, constructed of timber and stone. No doubt it was such a structure as this, with a difference that was before the eye of the previous Ministers of Marine and Fisheries, and we know that if you add steel and other materials, which the Minister of Marine and Fisheries tells us will cost from $20,000 to $25,000 more, you bring up the cost to the $70,000 which was before the mind of the hon. member for Pictou (Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper) when he was Minister of Marine and Fisheries. We have no guarantee of what it will cost, except the probabilities held out by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries speaking—I say it without offence—in a rather second-hand way, because he does not profess to know.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I speak from the report.

Mr. DAVIN. We have only the probabilities thus held out as ground for believing that the work will be confined, even in its simplest form, to $40,000. We have the admirable speech of my hon. friend from Lincoln (Mr. Gibson), who, speaking as a master in questions of this kind, threw light upon it for those of us who are laymen in matters of construction. He tells us he was accustomed to pay $1.75 a day, and quotes the well-known dictum of Lord Brassey that you get what you pay for. Now, is it not an inference that cannot be said to be presumptuous, but one that may be honestly made, and with the utmost respect for members of the Government, that paying $1.25 and $1.50 a day instead of having a contractor do the work with labour at $1.75 a day; and remembering, as we must, how we have seen, as my hon. friend from Northumberland (Mr. Cochrane) says, men in strenuous idleness trying to put in time around some of these very buildings and grounds—is it not a fair inference, I say, that the men on this work will try to make the work go as far as they can, and that instead of getting value for what we pay, we shall find that we pay far more than we should have paid if we had handed the work over to a contractor, even if that contractor paid higher wages?

Now, I confine myself to that one point. There are grave objections besides that, but I confine myself to this one because it is one that has impressed me most. As I tell you, Mr. Chairman, after listening last session to the excuses of the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright), to the excuses of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher), to the excuses from the Minister of Militia (Mr. Borden), to the excuses of other Ministers, for doing precisely the same thing, we are forced to the conclusion that it has become a system with our ministerial friends to transgress the cardinal rule that tenders shall be called for in all cases where possible. Therefore, Sir, it is our duty on all such occasions as this to call public attention to this attack which, being systematic, gathers a criminal complexion, to protest in the strongest possible language in this House, so as to emphasize the rule that is well established and well understood—although lately so much broken here—and, emphasizing that rule, to try to guard as much as possible in the future against similar misconduct and similar misdemeanours.

Mr. DAVIN.

Mr. McDOUGALL. The hon. member for Quebec West told us of the quality of timber being put into this crib. I would like to know whether the hemlock timber to which he refers is sawn, hewn or round, or in what condition?

Mr. DOBELL. It is square timber, but whether sawn or hewn, I do not know.

Mr. McDOUGALL. In stating the price at 12 cents, does he mean to say that squared hemlock timber costs 12 cents a foot?

Mr. DOBELL. I should say that for squared, sound hemlock timber, 12 cents is an exceptionally low price.

An hon. MEMBER. A cubic foot.

Mr. DOBELL. Yes.

Mr. McDOUGALL. What is the price of the pine timber?

Mr. DOBELL. I should say it would range from 25 to 27 cents.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Am I to understand that this cribbing is laid close joint or open joint?

Mr. DOBELL. I wish I could induce the hon. member to go down and look at the work. I am perfectly satisfied that he would be also satisfied with this work. I forgot to say that Col. Anderson said that he did not like to leave the building of such a crib to contractors, because any failure to have the timbers properly welded and bolted together in that pier might cause it to break up at an early date.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Has Mr. Lemieux instructions to ask for tenders for the supply of stone?

Mr. DOBELL. I could not say. I believe he is taking measures to get stone from the farmers on each side of the river.

Mr. McDOUGALL. The hon. gentleman knows that if this man goes round and buys stone from every friend of the Government in the neighbourhood, he will have to pay the price that is asked for it.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The price is fixed by the engineer here.

Mr. McDOUGALL. No, the engineer here has no means to fix the price. The way to govern the price is to ask for tenders and see who can furnish the stone the cheapest. The hon. gentleman may be correct in doing the work by day's work, but the timber and the stone should have been obtained by tender and contract. Any one who knows anything about building work of that kind, knows that he can get material of that kind much cheaper under tender and contract. Is the hon. gentleman in a position to say what is the price fixed by the engineer, as he says the price is fixed by the engineer here?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No.

Mr. BENNETT. There is a clause in this item 62 referring to an allowance to Judge Wilkinson in an investigation into charges against light keepers. There is a case reported in to-day's "Mail" newspaper to which I wish to call the Minister's attention, the case of a man named James Quicke.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I would ask the hon. gentleman to let that stand, because I have no information about it whatever. I will examine the records and will be glad to bring my hon. friend the information when I find it.

Mr. BENNETT. I want to ask him another question referring to the lighthouse on the Georgian Bay, known as Hope Island lighthouse. Two years ago the keeper was dismissed and a temporary appointee is entering on the third year of service. Does the hon. gentleman intend to make that a permanent appointment?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have not given the matter any consideration. The present keeper was installed by the inspector, and I have let it rest. I will look into the matter.

Mr. SPROULE. It seems extraordinary that the Minister should come, with the limited information he has given this House, and expect us to vote money in this way. He cannot tell how much stone is in the cribs, how much timber will be required, or what kind of timber.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I said a careful estimate had been made some years ago by Col. Anderson, and he estimated the cost of this work in the neighbourhood of $70,000 or $75,000, on the assumption that the superstructure above low water was to be built of iron and cement. After consultation with Mr. Lemieux, the foreman, and after going personally to Quebec to inspect the wood work which had been under water for 80 or 90 years, he came to the conclusion that his first estimate was larger than it ought to be, and after revising his estimates carefully and going through them in detail, making another examination of the ground, and taking soundings to ascertain the exact description of the bottom, he made up his estimate and submitted it to me that it could be done for $40,000. Into the details of that estimate I did not go. I am not an engineer and I could not tell whether his estimates were right or wrong. But I know that Col. Anderson has been there for 30 years, and there is not an officer in the civil service that more deservedly enjoys the confidence of his chief than Col. Anderson. I have not found him astray in his estimates so far, and I appeal to the House if I was not bound to accept estimates so carefully framed, and which had been under Col. Anderson's consideration for nearly three years. I ask the hon. gentleman could I have done more or could I have given the House more information?

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. gentleman has gone to a good deal of trouble to defend Col. Anderson, against whom I have not said a word.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It is his estimate that we have here.

Mr. SPROULE. What I was about to say, if the hon. Minister had listened to me, was that while the estimate may be all right, the time has nearly expired when this money may be spent. I understand that this money is required before June 30th.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Twenty thousand dollars of it.

Mr. SPROULE. Then, the money must be nearly spent, or the hon. gentleman requires more to be spent in the next fifteen days. What I do complain of is the fact of the money being spent without any estimate being furnished to us as to what the work will cost, that the money has been practically spent up to the present, that more money is required, and that in the face of that fact that the hon. Minister requires more money immediately, he is unable to give the committee any information of what has been done with that which has been already spent. He says there has been so much money spent, but he cannot tell us how many cubic yards of stone or how much wood has been used, or what this stone or wood has cost. The hon. member for Quebec West (Mr. Dobell) says that this is a most wonderful work, that it is like some of those clocks that you never have to wind, that he never saw anything like it. If we accept his own statement, he never saw anything like it before.

Mr. DOBELL. Go down with our hon. friend who has promised to visit the place.

Mr. SPROULE. I am referring to the hon. member for Quebec West, who professed to give information and to know so much about this work, yet when he was asked for details he had no details to give. He did not know from whom the timber was purchased. Some one was uncharitable enough to say that it might have been purchased from himself because he was in the timber business. I do not think the hon. gentleman would go into a transaction of that kind, but it might be done in the same way in which it was done on Manitoulin Island, where a large quantity of timber was purchased from the hon. member for Algoma (Mr. Dymont), and put in the name of his book-keeper, so that it would not appear as a transaction with that hon. member. There may be a suspicion of something of that kind going on down here, but I do not think that such a course was pursued in this case. I think the hon. Minister should have given the House more information, especially in view of the fact that this is not a work let by contract, although it could easily have been let by contract. In regard to Col. Anderson, the engineer of the department, I believe him to be an exceptionally good man. He has endeavoured to do his duty faithfully; I have not one word to say against him, and it is not with a view of discrediting the ability, the honesty or the integrity of Col. Anderson that I speak, but it is in regard to the limited information that the hon. Minister is able to give the committee when he asks them to vote such a large sum of money on the spur of the moment, most of it money which has been already spent.

Mr. TAYLOR. And not voted.

Mr. SPROULE. A very large part of the money that is available has been spent and the expenditure is going on.

Gratuity to the widow of the late Robert Muirhead, engineer of fog whistle at St. Paul's Island, equal to six months' salary.	$250
Gratuity to John Chisholm, light-keeper at Michaels Point, Manitoulin Island, equal to one year's salary.....	250

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. My hon. friend (Mr. Foster) asks me to give an explanation of these two gratuities. Robert Muirhead was the engineer of one of our fog-whistles. Many of these men, who are at isolated places, get into a rather despondent condition. He shot himself, and representations were made to the department that his widow and children were in a very poor condition. On these representations the Government granted a gratuity of $250. John Chisholm was the lightkeeper at Michael's Point. That light has been abolished and the keeper is to be allowed a gratuity equal to one year's salary.

Mr. POWELL. Have you thought any more of Thomas Allan's gratuity?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No.

Scientific Institutions—

To provide for cost of rebuilding dwelling in the observatory grounds, Toronto	$2,000
--	---------

Mr. FOSTER. What building is that?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This $2,000 is for the cost of rebuilding the dwelling in the observatory grounds, Toronto. Hon. gentlemen will recollect that, last year, I explained that the British Association had recommended the transference of the magnetic observatory from Toronto to a place nine miles out, because the electric railways prevented the observations having any value. The old magnetic observatory was left empty when a new building was provided. We are repairing that old building to be used as a dwelling-house for Mr. Stupart, the observer, so that he will be continuously on the spot.

Mr. SPROULE.

Fisheries—

To provide for repairs to steamer "Acadia," of the fishery protection service	$9,500
---	---------

Mr. BENNETT. Is that work to be done by contract?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This item of $9,500 is for repairs to the steamer "Acadia." The "Acadia" is nineteen years old. Her upper and lower decks were found, on examination, to be decayed, and new decks are being put on. The engine and boilers are being thoroughly overhauled. The amount as stated is thought to be rather underestimated for all the repairs necessary, but Commander Spain reports that he will endeavour to do the best he can with the sum.

Mr. POWELL. Is she an iron vessel?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes, but with a wooden deck.

Mr. FOSTER. Where are the repairs being made?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. At Halifax.

Mr. BENNETT. Is this work being done by contract?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, you could not do this work by contract.

Mr. TAYLOR. Are Longard Brothers doing the work?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not know.

Mr. POWELL. What do they estimate for the decks?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have no itemized account here. I have only got the full amount. She was thoroughly overhauled and examined by our Government inspector.

To pay Her Majesty's Government balance of divisible expenses in connection with the Behring Sea Arbitration at Paris, which were to be shared jointly between Great Britain and Canada, O.C., 20th February, 1899. $1,802 62

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This matter has been in process of adjustment for years back.

Mr. FOSTER. Does that close it out ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This closes it out.

To pay F. Peters and E. V. Bodwell each $1,000 for legal services in the adjustment and distributing of the Behring Sea award of $473,151.26..... $2,000

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. When the award was made by Judge King and the American commissioner, they awarded to each vessel a lump sum. For instance, we will say they awarded to the ship "Vigilant," her officers and crew, $37,000. The question arose as to how much of that would go to the owner, how much to the captain, how much to the mate, and how much to the men. I wrote to the commissioners, stating that it was impossible for me to divide the money, and they referred me to the evidence. It was utterly impossible that I should go through thousands of pages of evidence, and so I referred the matter to the counsel who had been engaged throughout the investigation, and they reported to me on an equitable division of the sum.

Mr. TAYLOR. Who is Mr. Peters ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The partner of my hon. friend from Pictou (Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper).

Mr. PRIOR. Can my hon. friend tell me how much Mr. Peters has been paid, and how much Mr. Bodwell has been paid ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Mr. Bodwell will not accept the sum I tendered to him, and which I reasonably thought should be paid.

Mr. FOSTER. How much ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I thought $30 a day, while he was at his home in British Columbia, acting as junior counsel, was reasonable and fair, and then, when he came to Halifax, I allowed him $40 a day. Mr. Bodwell says he will not accept that sum, and he is filing a petition of right. I did not feel disposed to pay any more, and the matter stands in that way. I am glad to say, that the distribution of the award made by these gentlemen has been very satisfactory.

Mr. PRIOR. I want to bring to the attention of the Minister a case of hardship in connection with this matter. I have had two or three letters from Mr. W. J. Ward, and in one of them he writes—

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. If my hon. friend (Mr. Prior) would do me the kindness to come over to my department, I will go through the papers with him. There is an immense mass of papers in connection with the case, and I would have to go through the evidence and give him the report of the adjusters.

Mr. PRIOR. I went to the department, and I saw Mr. Venning, and he looked through the whole of the papers, but he could find nothing in regard to this claim of Mr. Wm. J. Ward. Evidently, the claim was lost in some way, and it seems unfair that any man who was on the vessel when she was seized, should lose his claim simply because some one has blundered. Mr. Ward writes to me :

I went before Mr. Bodwell at the time of the sitting of commissioners, and he made out my claim in the presence of Captain Warren, and he said he would send it in, so of course I believed it was sent to headquarters the same as the others. When the claims were advertised for, I sent my claim in to the Hon. Mr. Peters. He said he received it. I gave evidence before the commissioners in Captain Warren's case. I was engaged as steward on the "Dolphin," Captain Warren, in the year 1897, and was on board at the time of the seizure by Americans. My wages were $40 a month and 25 cents a skin for two boats, termed lay-money. My claim put in by Mr. Bodwell was $500 and interest. When the award money came here, I applied to Hon. Mr. Peters for my amount. He told me to apply to Collector Milne, who told me to get Captain Warren to identify me, which I did right there, and Captain Warren verified what I said as to wages, &c., and Collector Milne made a note of it, and said he would forward it to Ottawa.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Is that one of the Warren claims ?

Mr. PRIOR. Yes.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman knows that is in chancery.

Mr. PRIOR. I understand it is in chancery, and there was something like $130,000 sent to the receiver, but only the Indian claims and one man is included, and that man is not Mr. Ward. He was on board one of the steamers when it was seized, and, through some mistake, apparently, on the part of Mr. Bodwell, Mr. Peters, Mr. Milne or the department here, his letters were lost, and he loses his claim of $500, which is a large amount for a man in his position. I would ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to try and rectify the matter in some way.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. If the hon. gentleman gives me a memorandum, I will be glad to look into it.

Mr. PRIOR. I am glad to hear the Minister say so. I have been to the department, and received no satisfaction, although I must say, that the officers treated me with every courtesy and gave me all the information they could. This man is a constituent of mine, and the only way I can get at the matter is to bring it up before the House.

Gratuity to R. N. Venning, for special services in connection with the Behring Sea Claims Commission, years 1895, 1896 and 1897 $750

Mr. FOSTER. Is this the total of all that is given to Mr. Venning for his extra services?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That is all.

To pay John S. Hall, Q.C., taxed account for professional services re Bruce eel fisheries, in the years 1891 and 1892..... $1,100

Mr. FOSTER. What is this about?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This arises out of an old case extending back in 1891. The fees were taxed by the Department of Justice, and sent to me, and to my untutored mind, coming from the maritime provinces, I thought the fees were too large, and I refused to pay the bill. I sent it back to the Department of Justice, and we had a good deal of correspondence about it, but eventually the department refused to tax it lower, and Mr. Hall now wants his money.

Gratuity to Commander Wm. Wakeham, for services in connection with the Hudson's Bay expedition, 1897..... $500

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Mr. Wakeham was in entire command of the expedition, and he was ordered away from his home and vessel, and sent up there, and I must say, that he conducted this expedition in a remarkably excellent way.

Mr. FOSTER. Did he get nothing more than his pay, when he was up there?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No.

Public Buildings, Ottawa—including ventilation and lighting—Repairs, materials, furniture, &c..... $11,000

Mr. TAYLOR. Might I ask the Minister in charge the price the Government are paying for the electric lighting of the public buildings in Ottawa, and what arrangements have been made?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. $2.25 per lamp per year up to 3,000, and for any number in excess of that $2 per lamp per year, for each 16 candle power lamp.

Mr. TAYLOR. I live in a small town of 4,000 population, where we have an electric light company. I have in my house 22 lights of 16 candle power, and for them I pay $30 a year, which is an average of less than $1.50 per light; and here in the city of Ottawa the Government are paying $2.25 per light and using several thousand lights. Why did not the Government put in a plant of their own, instead of doing the lighting by contract—I presume without any tender? It appears to me to be an outrageous charge.

Mr. PRIOR.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. At the time this contract was made I think there was only one company in Ottawa supplying electric light.

Mr. TAYLOR. If tenders had been called for, other companies would have been formed.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It would hardly pay a company to be formed for that special purpose.

Mr. TAYLOR. Why not? Go to Montreal, Toronto or anywhere else where the electric light is used, and you will not find people paying as much as the Government.

Mr. FOSTER. Will the Minister say whether there is any contract with the electric light company?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is a written contract.

Mr. FOSTER. I think we ought to have that contract.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I will have that contract brought down before concurrence, if my hon. friend will accept that statement.

Mr. FOSTER. Can the Minister say how many lights are availed of under this contract, and whether it covers all the lights of the Government?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, the total number approaches 6,000.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the method of calculating? Suppose the lights are not all used, do we pay for every fixture, whether the lights are burning or not?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes. I am advised that the fact that some of the lights are not always used all the year round was an element in the transaction.

Mr. FOSTER. So that if you have 6,000 installed, you pay absolutely for 6,000 lights?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. So I understand.

Mr. FOSTER. How was the price fixed?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It was fixed as the result of negotiations between the Minister and the company. It was a subject of discussion as to what would be a fair sum, and the rates were determined on, having reference to what was paid by private parties in Ottawa; and by comparison with what is paid in Ottawa, I am informed that the prices are considered reasonable.

Mr. FOSTER. Is the price lower, and if so, how much lower than is paid by householders in Ottawa who have from 30 to 50 lights. For instance, there are said to be 600 lights above this Chamber. They are at work while we are here, for about four months in the year, and for the rest of the year they are not lighted. Is it possible that we are paying $2.25 or $2 for these as well as for all the other lights?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I so understand, but I understand at the same time that when the rate was fixed, the fact that a considerable portion of the lights would not be used all the year round was considered, and affected the price fixed for all.

Mr. FOSTER. Suppose these 600 lights are used for four months in the year and unused the rest of the year. Then, go through the corridors, and you will find that a large number of lights are not lighted at all except for the four months that the House is in session. Then go into the departments, and during the summer and holiday season you will find that many lights are not used there. So that you may fairly come to the conclusion that of these 6,000 lights which we pay for, we do not continuously use during the lighting time more than 3,000 at the outside; and yet you are paying $2.25 per light, when I can inform you that a householder in this town who uses 20 or 30 lights is not paying as much. When you come to make a contract for an immense number of lights, a company can afford to give them at a great deal lower price than they would charge for a smaller number of lights. I would like to know whether or not, in the fixing of this price, the responsible officers of the department made thorough inquiries, and whether there was any report to show the cost of lighting in this and other towns. If these are facts, it makes no matter who supplies these lights, it is a very big "cinch" at $2.25 and $2.

Mr. HOLMES. I had occasion a short time ago to make some inquiries concerning the cost of electric lighting in various parts of the province of Ontario. I sent inquiries to a number of towns, and the average price I found that was charged per year for the incandescent light was about $4 a light. They make different arrangements according to the circumstances. I have the electric light in my house, and pay $6 per light per year for 6 lights. I have 12 lights in my house, and in consideration of the fact that they are not used all the time, the company deduct a certain percentage. From the inquiries I have made—and I have inquired pretty thoroughly into the matter—the average charge throughout the towns of western Ontario is about $4 per light per year.

Mr. SPROULE. The company that is charging that in this country must have a very big profit. In the town of Durham, where there are two companies, they are selling their lights at $1 per light per year, running to 12 o'clock at night and put on again at half-past five in the morning. In the place where I live, and where there are only about 2,000 lights in the whole place, the charge is a little over $2 per light for 16-candle power lamps. Go to Collingwood and Meaford or other towns in that northern country, and there is not one where more than $3 per light is charged per single light. But if you take a number of lights, the price is reduced very much. Any company that has the lighting of this building at $2.25 per light of 16-candle power, considering the time these lights are used, has quite a big cinch on the Government. Does that include the putting in of the plant, or if not, how much does it cost to put in the wires?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The wiring is a part of the contract.

Mr. SPROULE. What do they charge for that?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. About $3.50 per lamp.

Mr. SPROULE. How long does the contract run?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. One year.

Mr. SPROULE. At the end of the year, what would be the result in the event of not renewing the contract?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I understand that we are quite free to make any better arrangement, if we can.

Mr. SPROULE. If the company put in the lamps, these lamps would be kept for a length of time.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The contract does not oblige us to keep them longer than a year.

Mr. SPROULE. How many lamps are there now?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Nearly 6,000.

Mr. SPROULE. That is $18,000 for putting in the lamps.

Mr. INGRAM. I understand that there is a large number of reflectors in connection with these lights. There are 931 lights, which means the wiring of the reflectors attached to these lights.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I understand there are actually 900 lights, but they are 10 candle-power, and equivalent to 600 lights of 16 candle-power, so that we pay for 600 only, owing to the difference in candle-power.

Mr. SPROULE. And you pay $3 each for putting them in?

Mr. FOSTER. I think that all this talk has amply demonstrated that we had better have the contract before us.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I will bring the contract down, but will be glad to know what other points you desire information about.

Mr. FOSTER. Does the plant belong to the Government?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The fittings belong to the Government.

Mr. FOSTER. Those have been paid for extra.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, and they are the Government's property, and the wiring too.

Mr. SPROULE. If you do not continue the contract, they have the privilege of taking them out.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Not at all; that is not the ordinary way of business.

Mr. PRIOR. I have been looking into this matter a little myself lately, because I have noticed a great many lamps all over the departmental buildings, which are never in use, and I have a question on the Orders of the Day which refers to this matter:

1. By what individual, firm or company, is the electricity for lighting purposes in the Houses of Parliament and the several departmental buildings supplied?

2. Is it supplied under contract?

3. If so, what is the date of the contract and for what term?

4. Is the electricity supplied paid for by the Government at a specific sum per annum, or by the amount of energy shown as passing through meters, or at so much per lamp in position in the buildings?

5. If by meter at what rate per 1,000 Watt-hours? If by lamp, at how much per hour, month or year per lamp?

I notice that in any number of the offices there are far more lamps than are required the contract which obliges us to renew it seems to me, if we are paying per lamp, that we must be paying a great deal more than if we were paying by the meter. It would have been a great deal cheaper to pay by the meter than by the lamp.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The contract is made for one year, and we are now in the second year, but there is nothing in the contract which obliges us to renew it. We did renew it, by an Order in Council. The contract is with the Electric Light Company of Ottawa, and the rate is per lamp of sixteen candle-power at the figures I have described.

Mr. PRIOR. Is not that an extraordinary way to let a contract, namely, so much per lamp?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Of course there are two methods—the one per lamp and the other by meter. I am advised that at the time the contract was made, it was considered a very fair contract. I am afraid that the charge for electric lighting somewhat varies—one man paying one price and another another. Many private houses pay much in excess of the rate fixed by the Government.

Mr. FOSTER.

Mr. McDOUGALL. That is for the year round?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. In the estimate for the purposes of the Government contract, account was taken of the fact that a great many of these lights would not be used the year round. I am also informed that, finding that some of the lamps were not used, a circular was issued recently to the several departments to ascertain how many lamps they could dispense with, and if any can be dispensed with, they will be cut off.

Mr. SPROULE. $4 a lamp for putting these in is about three times what they are worth. $1 a lamp is what they are put in for at our place.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Including the wiring?

Mr. SPROULE. Yes, everything. If you get chandellers, they are charged extra.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Is my hon. friend's house a stone one?

Mr. SPROULE. It is brick.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The boring through the stone walls is quite an expensive item.

Mr. SPROULE. They will make everything an expensive item, if you let them have their own way. You have all those lights, and they are supplied by the one wire, and it is little less than highway robbery to charge any such figure. The company must either consider that the Government will come to any terms at all, or are disposed to believe that they enjoy a monopoly, and that no other company will do the work under the figures they ask. I made a good deal of inquiry before we installed the plant in the town where I live. I found that in some places lights are supplied for $1 per light per year, and $1 a light for wiring where wires are exposed. In Durham, there are two companies, and that is their own figure. In several towns they put them in, if you will make a three-year contract, but in other places they will charge you $1 per lamp for putting them in. At the end of three years, if you do not elect to keep them, they have the right to take out the wire by paying a moderate amount. If you want a single light, they will charge you $2 or $3, but if you take half a dozen, it is much lower. In many towns, where you take a single light, all they charge is $1 to $1.50, that is, where they are not used all night, but are available at any time up to twelve o'clock midnight and again in the morning. You take a building where there are so many lights, and so few of them used as there are here, it seems to me a very dear contract, and the party who made it knew very little about the business, or else was indifferent about it.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think we shall have to ask my hon. friend (Mr. Sproule) to arrange these matters, because it is evident he can do these things cheaper than some of us can. He says he can get lamps put in at $1 each. I am not speaking of the supply of light, but of the first cost of wiring, &c. That would be $3,000 for 6,000 lights.

Mr. SPROULE. That would be a good price.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I may inform the hon. gentleman that the transformers alone cost $7,000. I am informed that that is the actual cost.

Mr. SPROULE. I do not know what apparatus you have, but I speak of the facts I know.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). Do you require transformers in your town?

Mr. SPROULE. I do not know what you call transformers; but there is an instrument put in to prevent them burning out.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. This is a box placed on the outside of the building.

Mr. SPROULE. There are several in the town in different places, but not in the houses. They put a transformer on each branch, one branch supplying one street, and another another street.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Where you use the alternating current, you must use a transformer to reduce the current for house light. The transformer is indispensable.

Mr. SPROULE. Then, they must be there, as they are here.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. It may be, that you do not use the same system.

Mr. SPROULE. It is the incandescent light. What other system is there?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. It depends on whether you use the alternating system or direct. You probably use the direct.

Mr. SPROULE. What is the difference between one and the other?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. If the hon. gentleman were to touch an alternating wire, he would find out.

Mr. SPROULE. That is no answer. The Minister professes to know something about it, but evidently knows nothing. If he did, he would explain it.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I do not know very much about it, but I know that, where you use the alternating system, the current is tremendously powerful, and you must use transformers to diminish the current to use it for a house light.

Mr. POWELL. That is, reduce it from a high to a low voltage.

Mr. TAYLOR. It is quite evident there has been a transformer put in here. The Minister has done the transforming, and deceived the House and the country. When he came down with the vote, it was discussed and understood that the Government were going to put in their own electric plant. That is what the money was voted for. Now we find he has gone into a contract, paying two or three prices to get the work done. Why did he not use the money for the purpose for which it was voted, and provide the Government's own plant, as was promised? But they put in a transformer, and there is a job here for the Minister or for somebody. The hon. gentleman is going to bring down the contract. That is what we want. I would like to have my hon. friend from West Huron (Mr. Holmes) bring down the papers to which he refers. He must refer to incandescent street lamps and store lights, not house lights, because he cannot find in Canada an electric company that charges $2.25 for house lighting. The Ganoque Light and Power Company will put in a light in any house for $1 a light, and do their own wiring, but charging extra for the lamps. If you want a chandelier, of course, you pay for it. A dollar a light per year is the average for a house light. The lights in this House run pretty steadily for four months. But how about the lights in the offices here? The office hours are from nine to four, and yet we have to pay $2.25 for the lights in the departments. Practically, there is no night work done in the departments. Now, in the main Estimates the Government are asking for $100,000 for lighting and ventilation. Have there been any improvements in appliances for ventilation in this Chamber for the last eighteen years? Sitting here, as we are going to do, all this season, there should be some electric fans put in. But we have the same old system of opening the windows and blowing down cold air upon the members, and giving them colds. There has not been $5 spent in any change in the windows. But we are asked to vote $100,000, and to pay $2.25 for the first 2,000, and $2 for the balance of 10,000, or 12,000, or 15,000 lights we use—using $100,000 to light these buildings. Why did not the Minister provide his own plant, as he promised? We had a plant here that worked well and lighted the buildings. What became of that? This item must certainly stand until the contract is brought down.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If it stands, it will have to be for a better reason than the hon. gentleman (Mr. Taylor) has given. He says, that 6,000 lights at $2.25 will cost $100,000.

An hon. MEMBER. He did not say so.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is what the hon. gentleman said—that we were going to ask for a vote of $100,000, and—

Mr. TAYLOR. I say, you are asking, in the main Estimates, for a vote of $100,000 for lighting and ventilation.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We are talking about lighting now.

Mr. TAYLOR. But that is my statement—that you are asking $100,000 for lighting and ventilation.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Taylor) is mixing up two things.

Mr. HOLMES. It would appear from what the hon. member from South Leeds (Mr. Taylor) says that he prefers darkness rather than light. If I understood him aright, his investigation was in reference to street lights. My investigations were not in reference to street lights alone, but also in reference to lighting houses with incandescent lamps. I have not the papers before me, but the information I got from the different towns to which I sent, shows that the average price paid was about $4 per year per light, house lights as well as others, but not including arc lights.

Mr. TAYLOR. I ask the hon. gentleman to bring down the papers, or name the towns that pay $4 for house light. It cannot be done.

Mr. HOLMES. I say that in my town we are paying more than $4 per light.

Mr. McCLEARY. The hon. gentleman must be mistaken when he says he is paying $6 for incandescent lights.

Mr. HOLMES. The hon. member must remember that every town in Canada has not water power the same as Welland has.

Mr. McCLEARY. I can refer you to towns that run electric plant by steam power as well. When the hon. member decided to pay $6 for 16-candle-power lights he must have had a notion of running for Parliament, and did not care much what price he paid. Somebody must have imposed upon him. We have an electric plant in our town, and I had something to do with putting it in. The town owns the plant, and has wired the private houses for $2 a year per light of 16-candle-power.

Mr. SPROULE. How do you test the lights here with regard to strength? Do the Government have their inspector for electric lights?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is an electrician attached to the Public

Mr. FIELDING.

Works Department, who makes an examination to satisfy himself that the lights are of the proper candle-power.

Mr. SPROULE. I think the sooner the Government gets a plant of their own and supply their own electric light, the better and cheaper it will be for the country.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the total cost of the installation of these electric lights? I find in the Auditor General's Report for the year 1897-98, which, I think, probably might include payments on that account, that $49,980 have been paid in one payment on account of electric apparatus. Electric triplex fire-pumps complete, with dynamos, four at $8,900. Then, switch boards, cabling, &c., $3,325. Does that take in the transformer business?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No.

Mr. FOSTER. Then comes the electric light wiring in the East and West Blocks, 678 lights in the East, 712 in the West, at $3.50 for the wiring. That would be about 1,400 lights in the two blocks. The wiring does not seem to have been charged on the cost of labour, but at so much for each light. You put in wiring for one light for $3.50, and in a space of a few yards you may have one or two dozen other lights, yet the wiring costs $3.50 for each light. There does not seem to be any basis upon which to charge the cost of labour, but the lights are all lumped together and charged as a lump sum. There does not seem to be any rule of business at all in simply saying to a man: Wire my house, and I will give you so much per light.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. It is very often done that way, I think.

Mr. FOSTER. It seems to me that the wiring of a house would be according to the cost of wire that you need, and the amount of labour necessary to put it in. You can take the wire into a large room, and you have all the expenses of wiring into that room; but when you get into it, it is a small matter to connect two or three dozen lights in that room. It is not a business basis to charge so much per light for the wiring. The same basis seems to have been adopted there as was adopted for payment of the lights; whether they burn three months or one month, whether they are used or not, you pay so much a light.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. But they calculate before they start in. They go over the building and find out about how many lights there will be to put in; they make their calculation as to the quantity of wire, the number of lamps and the amount of work which will be necessary to get into the building, and as to the transformers, and they total it up and find out how much it will be per lamp.

Mr. FOSTER. That is a nice explanation, but it does not fill the bill. I do not think that any officer or Minister has done his duty in reference to the public funds, that he is dispensing, unless he makes a close calculation as to the cost of wire and the cost of labour for wiring the building, and unless he sits down with the man and on that basis comes to a conclusion as to how much he will give him. If that is not done it is simply working by a rule of thumb. You may put a dozen lamps in a room when you do not require to use them. Unless the department can show that there was a calculation as to the cost of labour and as to the cost of wiring so that they would be able to show what the total cost would be, giving a fair profit, I do not think that they have done their duty. Take this building, and it is the simple, common-sense view; take a little room up stairs, part of which I have the privilege of occupying. There are twice as many lights as are ever necessary to be used. They are not used more than three months or three months and a half during the year, and during that time they are not constantly used, notwithstanding which we are paying $2.25 or $2 for each one of these lights. Then there is a generator, which is charged for, and various other things. I find that at one point in this Auditor General's Report, but it is fragmentary, and I would like to know the total cost, first of the plant that is necessary and next of the wiring.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Do I understand the hon. gentleman to say that he would like to have a statement of the cost of wiring. It is $3.50 per light.

Mr. FOSTER. Yes, but I wish to come to another point. Is there in connection with this what you might call a large plant—dynamos?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We have nothing to do with the dynamos at all.

Mr. FOSTER. Yet we paid for them.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, the dynamo is, of course, connected with the manufacture of the light. We do not manufacture the light.

Mr. FOSTER. We paid for the dynamo?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No.

Mr. FOSTER. Here is the bill. Yes, here are "electric triplex fire pumps complete with dynamos."

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Not for lighting.

Mr. FOSTER. These are for what purpose?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. For fire protection.

Mr. FOSTER. Well, then, there is a switch-board, cabling and the like of that.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is all in connection with the pumps.

Mr. FOSTER. $38,923 for that.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. How many are there of these pumps?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Four.

Mr. FOSTER. $9,000 each.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. $8,500.

Mr. SPROULE. I would like the hon. Minister to tell us how many transformers they have, and whose make they are.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They are Westinghouse transformers. There are about 6,000 lamps. As there are about 500 lamps to each, that would mean nine or ten transformers. If we had 6,000 it would be 12, but we have under 6,000.

Mr. SPROULE. How many lights are there on each wire that you could cut off in this building?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is a switch for each row.

Mr. SPROULE. How many are there in each row?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. As there are 900 altogether, that would be 150 on each wire of the 10 candle power lights.

Mr. SPROULE. Are the 10-candle power lights increased by the Luxfer prisms to 16 candle power.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. If they are we do not pay for 16-candle power.

Mr. SPROULE. But we are paying for the prisms; we are supposed to pay for the increased light. Are your lights all 16 candle power irrespective of the prisms?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I understand that they are only 10-candle power, but our contract is so much per lamp for 16-candle power lights, and thus we are paying for 600 while we have 900 lights.

Mr. SPROULE. You have 150 on each wire, and yet you pay $3 apiece for putting in the lamp and for putting in the wire.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. That is a separate transaction, and I am advised that the cost is $1.60 for each lamp above.

Mr. SPROULE. $1.60 for each lamp is very high. I think 50 cents per lamp would be very high when they could be put in with one wire. When we are putting so many lamps on each wire it should be very much less. How much do these transformers cost?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The whole thing represents about $7,000.

Mr. SPROULE. For ten transformers?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes, that is roughly correct.

Mr. SPROULE. The contract is all in the interest of the contractor and not in the interest of the country that is paying for it. There are ten of these transformers in, and the contract is for one year. Do I understand the hon. Minister correctly that these wires are now purchased out and out, that the company has not the right to take them if this contract should be cancelled at the end of the year?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Certainly not. They are Government property.

Mr. SPROULE. Although they are Government property and have been paid for, some companies make one contract and some another.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is no such qualification.

Mr. SPROULE. I presume that if the company performed their contract satisfactorily that it will be continued from year to year?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I suppose anybody who undertakes work of that kind and gives satisfaction may reasonably expect a continuance of that work, but there is nothing in the contract to say that it shall be for more than one year and we are at liberty to abandon it and make any other arrangement which in the judgment of the Government is best.

Mr. FOSTER. Will the Minister of Finance give us the cost of this arrangement here by itself?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. BENNETT. In the town of Barrie where the electric light is owned and conducted by the town and is a steam power, the rates there are $2 up to 20 lights, and $1.50 after that, 16-candle power.

Mr. INGRAM. Formerly the people of Ottawa had the choice of paying by meter or by the lamp, but they are now compelling the people of Ottawa to use according to meter. Why should they not give that privilege to the Government?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Evidently the Minister thought the present arrangement was better than he could accomplish by meter.

Mr. INGRAM. These lights are not very much used, and the meter system would be better for the Government.

Mr. FOSTER. Does the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fielding) want the House to believe, that it is cheaper to pay $2.25 for each lamp when they are not used one-third of the year—and in that paying more than do householders supplied by the same company who use their lights the whole year—than it would be to pay by meter for the power you use?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Everything turns on whether we are paying more than householders pay. Some gentlemen tell me that the Ottawa rates are higher than are quoted by gentlemen on the other side of the House, and my information is that private persons are paying more than the Government pay.

Mr. BENNETT. In Barrie where it is a steam power the rates are $1.50, and I believe in Bracebridge where there is water-power the rates are still cheaper.

Mr. CARGILL. What is the Minister paying for his own lights?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am not rich enough to afford electric light; I belong to the working classes who have to use gas.

Mr. FOSTER. If the hon. gentleman will bring the information down on concurrence we can discuss it in the main Estimates. The Minister of Public Works, when the first vote was given, went into the subject quite extensively as to the cost of wiring and all that sort of thing, and these details must be in the department, and should be brought down.

Mr. SPROULE. If the Minister has any information as to what would be the cost if measured by electrometers, we should have it.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We do not know what quantity we use now, and we would have no means of making a comparison.

Mr. SPROULE. You know how many volts would be used in your electrometer for a 16-candle power, if you use a standard light, and it is very easy to calculate from that.

Mr. POWELL. Not only has the promise been given to the House with respect to the ownership not been carried out, but there has been a direct breach of faith with the House so far as the making of the contract is concerned. There was a distinct pledge given by the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) that the lighting should be let by tender. He first announced his scheme, which was to add to the plant at the foot of the hill. I will read from "Hansard" what the Minister of Public Works said, when this vote was first going through the House:

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. As to the item of $75,000, the idea is to change the system of lighting which we have to-day. Part of the buildings are lighted by electricity and the balance by gas. The bills so far have amounted to from $21,000 to $23,000 a year for gas alone. The idea in my mind is this. We would change the whole thing and build a new plant at the foot of the hill, where we now have a plant, increasing the strength and capacity of that plant and using electricity for fire appliances. We are not now protected. After the fire in the West Block, we went all over the buildings, and found that we were in no way protected. My intention is to add to the plant we have now, to do away with lighting by gas, which costs us a great amount of money, and to utilize our electric power not only for lighting but for appliances against fire. We propose to put electric pumps in every building. I have no definite plan yet, although I have given a great deal of attention to the subject, and my intention is to have the best possible means to protect these buildings against fire. My proposal is to change the mixed system into one system, and I am sure that it will effect a great saving.

At a later period, he said :

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I am sorry he has not the same confidence in me that I might have in him. We are now spending for gas a sum varying from $18,000 to $22,000 or $23,000 a year, and our electric system costs us about $10,000 a year. It is admitted that it is dangerous to use gas in these buildings, and a few days ago a committee of the House properly suggested that gas should no longer be used. Some means ought to be taken to guard against the great disaster we have experienced. I consulted with the engineers of my department, and with engineers and architects outside, and they suggested to me that it would be better, in the public interest, that a system of electric lighting and electric protection against fire should be adopted. My hon. friend (Mr. Foster) wants a detailed plan ; will he permit me to say that it would not be wise to give it, as I intend asking for tenders.

Mr. FOSTER. Tenders for what ?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Tenders for putting in all this apparatus.

There was a distinct pledge given by the Minister (Mr. Tarte), and the vote was passed through the House, and the Opposition did not demand the details on the express promise of the Minister, that he would call for tenders, and that the giving of the details and estimates of his engineers would interfere with the tender.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. He does not appear to have carried out his intention of a separate lighting plant.

Mr. POWELL. He did not carry out his intention although he pledged the House to this scheme. Not carrying out his intention has nothing to do with the fact, that he (Mr. Tarte) has gone to an enormous expense and asks the House for a vote of $100,000. If he thought it advisable on a vote of $75,000 to call for tenders, a fortiori he should think it necessary to call for tenders on a vote of $100,000. The hon. gentleman from Huron (Mr. Holmes) says that $4 is the average cost. I happen to know a little about electric lighting. I had a good deal to do in a small way with the details. I happen to be president of a company in the town in which I live ; and I may say—and I will be fair to the Minister of Public Works—that there is a great deal of difference made in the schedule of charges adopted as respects dwelling houses, and banks, churches, stores and other buildings of that kind. There is a higher tariff for other buildings than for dwelling houses, and there is a great difference between the two rates.

Mr. CARGILL. That is owing to the length of time the lights are burning.

Mr. POWELL. I do not know the reason of it ; it is a practice that prevails almost everywhere. I think it is something like the railway tariff, based on all that the traffic will bear. Then, what the hon. member for West Huron (Mr. Holmes) says may be true, taking all Canada together. I know that in the cities of Fredericton and St. John, as the Minister of Railways will bear me out in saying, the rate is higher than that.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. It is double what it is here. I was surprised to find the rates here so low.

Mr. POWELL. That is owing to the water-power. In the maritime provinces the cost is greater because we use steam. But this much is certain, that taking the large group of lights together, the price does seem high. In the summer time, for instance, in these departmental buildings, the exception is the burning of a lamp at all ; and in the winter time the lamps are only burned for a short period, because the offices are closed at five o'clock.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. A good many of the offices are dark, and the lights are kept going all day.

Mr. POWELL. There must be a small number of lights used. When you even take them into account, the charge strikes me as excessive from the knowledge I have of tariffs generally.

Harbours and Rivers—Nova Scotia.... $7,738.12

Mr. FOSTER. What is the first item ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It is a re-vote of $3,481 to pay a balance due to the contractors for the construction of a wharf at Hantsport. The cost of the wharf was $5,947 ; superintendence and contingencies, $204—making the total cost of the work $6,151.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Can the Minister give me any information about the building of a wharf at Iona in the county of Victoria ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is an appropriation for such a work and arrangements are being made to build it, but I think the work of construction has not begun.

Mr. McDOUGALL. I understand that there was a quantity of timber landed there lately, and I want to know what that is for. Has the work been let by contract?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It was first proposed to repair the old wharf, and a quantity of creosoted timber was obtained for that purpose. The question is under consideration, however, whether it is not better to build the wharf entirely anew. There is the question of site also involved, and no further progress has been made.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Has the site been selected?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Not at this moment.

Mr. McDOUGALL. My information is that there is a man in charge.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There was a man put in charge to receive the timber and take care of it; but the site of the new wharf has not been fixed at the present time.

Mr. McDOUGALL. I would like to ask the Minister if he can give me information as to what the Government propose to do with regard to some balance due on the cost of repairing the old wharf in 1896? When the hon. member for Victoria, N.B. (Mr. Costigan) was looking after the Department of Public Works, he gave instructions for the repairs of that wharf in the beginning of the summer season of 1896. The instructions came through myself. I remember also that my hon. friend from Victoria, N.S. (Mr. Bethune) was interested in the repairs of that wharf at the time; but after the expense of repairing the wharf had been incurred, at the request of the department, the people who performed the work had not been paid. They have been paid in part. I understand that the Government, on coming into power, at the instance of somebody who made it his business to protest against the payment of the expenditure on that wharf, just because the parties who were engaged on the repairs of the wharf were not supporters of the incoming Government, sent a man to examine the work—whether an official of the department or a man in the service of the Government I am not sure; but that person, I am informed, reported to the department that the charge made by the parties who did the work was, in his opinion, excessive. On that report, that man undertook to go to work, accompanied by somebody who knew nothing of how the work had been done, and did not consult with the parties engaged on the work or the foreman in charge or anybody else who could give him reliable information. But he took with him a supporter of the Government, who was evidently the man who protested against the payment of the money incurred in the cost. The explanation given by the parties engaged on the repairs of the wharf was to this effect, that the work cost more than it should have cost, in the judgment of a person unacquainted with the circumstances. The timber had to be got at short notice from a distance at a season of the year when it was difficult to get it—I think in the month of May; and the appliances for performing the work had to be sent for at a considerable distance. A pile-driver, for instance, and the freighting of that pile-driver, were a portion of the charge. The appliances for putting the pile-driver into use had also to be got. They had to take the men who were available for doing the work. The work was difficult, the wharf had become a wreck, because the storm had carried a piece of it away. There was a lot of stone and sticks in the bottom, and the work could not be done with the same facility as it could have been, had this stuff not been there; so that the men whom the department sent to examine the work, could not see anything like the work that had to be done. Up to this moment, I understand, these people are without their pay. The hon. member for Victoria, N.B. (Mr. Costigan), who had charge of that department at the time, is now supporting the Government, the ex-Minister who ordered the work, and the hon. member for Victoria, N.S. (Mr. Bethune), who was interested in getting that work done, and who, I think, will bear testimony to the statement I make. What I want is a promise that justice will be done those people by paying them their day's wages. I venture to say, that they did not charge for an hour more than they spent honestly in the performance of that work. If I remember right, there was a limit to the amount that the foreman would be allowed to spend, which limit, I believe, he exceeded. He could not help it; the work had to be done, steamers were waiting, freight had to be transferred from the railway to the steamers, to be carried to Baddeck. The work was, therefore, of the greatest possible necessity, as the hon. member for Victoria will admit.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The matter belongs to my department, and not Public Works. I can promise that justice will be done, but whether in the sense the hon. gentleman expects, I cannot say to-night, for this reason. The matter was brought to my attention by my hon. friend from Victoria, two or three days ago. I told him that at least two years ago claims had been made on my department which seemed excessively large. I referred the claims to the agent at Nova Scotia, who made an examination into the facts, and a report. I have not been able, since my hon. friend spoke to me, to look up the report again, but my impression is, that at the time I formed an adverse judgment on the claim, but promised to look into it very carefully again, and intend doing so.

Mr. McDOUGALL. I venture to assure the hon. Minister, if he means to rely on that report, he will rely on what is not worth relying upon.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Does the hon. gentleman recollect who the officer was?

Mr. McDOUGALL. I do not, and I care not who he was; the report is not such as the Minister should pay any regard to, because the means that officer took to get information were not sufficient.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That may be. I promise to look into the matter very carefully, and to look up the papers again. I recollect, however, very well the impression I formed, after sending the agent there to examine and to report, and that impression was rather adverse to the claim. I shall, however, look into it more particularly.

General repairs on improvements to harbour and river works..... $5,000

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I propose to reduce that to $2,000.

Mr. McDOUGALL. I want to call attention to an answer given by the hon. Minister of Public Works to a question put by myself a month or two ago. I asked, whether he had visited a place called Gabarus, in the county of Cape Breton, and examined the location for a breakwater or pier there for the building of which applications had been before the Government for years. I asked the hon. Minister, whether he had visited that place, when on his tour around Cape Breton last autumn, and he said he had not. But I have information from the people of that locality that he did visit and examine the place.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There must be a misunderstanding. The chief engineer, who accompanied the Minister on that occasion, says they desired to visit Gabarus, but could not get there on account of stormy weather.

Mr. McDOUGALL. That seems very strange, because I have information from the people, that the Minister did visit the place and spent a short time there. He told me another thing, which I did not ask, in reply to my question. He said, that a survey had been made years ago, and that the report was rather against the building of the breakwater or pier at that place. I wish to say, that a survey was made under the Administration of the late Mr. Mackenzie, and then an estimate of about $100,000 was made. Year after year, however, I tried to get a grant for a breakwater in that place, and finally, four or five years ago, I succeeded, after a good deal of trouble, in having another survey made, and accompanied the engineer myself. A site was selected, with the approval of the people.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Who was the engineer?

Mr. McDOUGALL. Mr. Milledge, I believe. A site was selected, acceptable to the people, and I understood, on making inquiry of the Department of Public Works subsequently, that a report was made by the engineer to the effect that a suitable breakwater or pier could be built there for between $25,000 and $30,000. That was about five years ago, or about two years before the last general election. The Minister then promised me that he would recommend to his colleagues the granting of a sufficient sum to provide for that breakwater, and I think that, before the Minister of Public Works undertook to volunteer that reply to my question, he should have gone further, and related the circumstances in connection with the subsequent survey, the result of which was so far different from that of the first survey. I would ask the Minister of Finance to make a note of this, and confer with his colleague, the Minister of Public Works, in order to see if he cannot make up his mind to recommend a grant for the building of a breakwater or pier at this particular place. It is a very important fishing station. There are some 80 or 100 large fishing boats there, without protection of a harbour, and the people have to haul their boats up on the beach every time there is any sign of a storm. Within the last fifteen or twenty years, some 12 or 15 vessels have been driven ashore there for want of protection. I have frequently brought this to the notice of the department, and I am sure that my friend the Deputy Minister will remember that I made many visits to the department, and perhaps bothered him a good deal more than he cared for in respect of this matter. I would ask the hon. Minister of Finance to try and coax the Minister of Public Works to give some further attention to this question.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. My hon. friend manifests so much more confidence in us than in his own friends as to quite flatter us. He says, that he tried year after year with them, and got nothing, and now he expects us to do the work. I know the importance of the work to which he refers, and have had frequent representations from gentlemen in the district on the subject. I will discuss the matter with the Minister of Public Works. Still, even at the reduced estimate of $30,000, the amount is a considerable one for a single work.

Mr. McDOUGALL. The hon. gentleman will see that it took a long time to knock out the report showing the cost to be $100,000.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Then, he must give us some time also.

Public Works—Chargeable to Income—Ontario — Kincardine — Balance due contractors for reconstruction of north pier..... $3,384 08

Mr. INGRAM. What was the original contract ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It was $11,000.

Mr. INGRAM. Would not what you are asking for now and what they have already received make up more than $11,000 ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They have been paid $7,920, and there is a balance of $3,334.39.

Mr. SPROULE. Who has the contract ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Messrs. Bowman, Bowman & Porter.

Mr. SPROULE. Was the contract let by tender ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Dredging—including the salaries of engineers, superintendents and clerks connected with this service :—

New dredging plant.....	$15,000
Dredging (Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick).....	5,000
Dredging (British Columbia).....	5,000
	$25,000

Mr. BENNETT. What is this $15,000 for new plant ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Tug for Lake St. John, $2,000 ; new scows, $3,000 ; new tug, " Sir John," $5,000—I think the item ought to be passed for the sake of the name—scows for River St. John, $3,000 ; pile driver scows, $2,000—total, $15,000.

Mr. SPROULE. I do not know whether this is the proper place, but I would like to get some information as to the rule of the department where dredges are hired by the day or hour.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The rule of the department is to pay $80 per day for a minimum service of 600 yards.

Mr. SPROULE. I suppose the department pays an inspector whose duty it is to see that this minimum of work is done ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. Is the inspector supposed to be there from the time the dredge commences work in the morning and continuously while the work is going on ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. Are the inspectors allowed to do other work for the dredging companies and also to attend to their duties for the department ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. They are expected during office hours to devote themselves wholly to the service of the Government.

Mr. FIELDING.

Mr. SPROULE. Then, I think the Minister had better investigate the case of his inspector at Owen Sound. My information is that the inspector visits the dredge about ten o'clock, remains a short time, and spends most of the day around town smoking and amusing himself, going down to the dredge two or three times to see how the work is going on. The rumour is also that he is employed by the dredging company to do a portion of their work. I do not say that this information is absolutely correct, but if it is correct, then, according to the hon. Minister of Finance, this man is not doing his duty.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is no information in the department to the effect the hon. gentleman states, though I am not in a position to contradict it. The dredges are visited occasionally by an engineer of the department who should see to it that the officials do their duty.

Mr. SPROULE. Would the hon. Minister be good enough to get the information ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. What is the name of the inspector ?

Mr. SPROULE. I cannot give it.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We will find it out.

Mr. SPROULE. I would like to ask one or two more questions, but, perhaps, they will come up more appropriately on other items.

Mr. CLANCY. Are the dredges paid for any excess over 600 yards ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, any excess enters into the day's work.

Mr. CLANCY. I suppose they cut off pretty sharply when they have done that quantity ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I think it not unlikely. If by mistake they do too much, the country benefits to that extent.

Roads and Bridges—

Spray River bridge at Banff—For work done	$1,050
Sappers' bridge, Ottawa—Completion of repairs	700
	$1,750

Mr. SPROULE. I suppose this is to pay for an item on Sapper's bridge ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

Mr. BENNETT. Was that work done by contract ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. It was done by the men of the department.

Mr. INGRAM. Who has charge of the Banff work ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The superintendent of the park has the care of the Banff bridge.

Mr. WALLACE. I desire to call attention to the condition of Dufferin bridge alongside the Sappers' bridge in Ottawa. It has been in a disgraceful state for years. I do not suppose there is such a miserable footway in the city of Ottawa or in any other city. The bridge belongs to the Government, as I understand it. My hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) suggests that the city is responsible.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I do not like to make any dangerous admissions, but I am inclined to think the hon. gentleman (Mr. Wallace) is right. As the Government is paying such attention to the Washington of the North now, this matter will have to be considered.

Mr. WALLACE. Any one who walks over that Dufferin bridge, as I do many times a day, knows that it is disgraceful and dangerous for foot passengers. They attempt to put in a few old planks, and leave five times as many old planks remaining.

Mr. SPROULE. Did the Government build both those bridges?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I understand the Sappers' bridge was built by the Imperial Government, but the Dominion Government, by arrangement made some years ago, agreed to maintain them both, so that they are both a charge upon the Government for maintenance.

Committee rose and reported progress.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies) moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. WALLACE. What business do the Government intend to take up to-morrow?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The Government hope to get through these Estimates, and also to take up the Redistribution Bill, if possible. With the concurrence of the Opposition, we will get through both.

Motion agreed to, and the House adjourned at 12.20 a.m. (Friday).

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY, 16th June, 1899.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

PRAYERS.

FIRST READING.

Bill (No. 157) respecting the Manitoba and South-Eastern Railway Company.—(Mr. McAllister.)

STRIKE OF THE G. T. R. TRACKMEN.

Mr. MACLEAN. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to ask the leader of the Government whether there is any truth in the report in the morning papers that the Grand Trunk Railway trackmen's strike has been settled?

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Not so far as my own information goes. Negotiations are proceeding, but I am sorry that I am not in a position to say that they are ended yet.

Mr. CLARKE. In this connection, might I ask the right hon. leader of the Government if there is any objection to the Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Blair) bringing down to the House, on Monday, any instructions that have been given to the engineers of his department to make an examination of the road-bed of the Grand Trunk Railway?

The PRIME MINISTER. Not at all.

Mr. CLARKE. Several communications have been received by members on this side of the House asking whether such examination is being made.

COUNTERFEIT $1 BILLS.

Mr. BERGERON. I would like to call the attention of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) to information which I have received to the effect that there are about 15,000 or 20,000 counterfeit $1 bills in circulation, chiefly in the city of Montreal, but of course they go everywhere. They all bear the date of 1878, as I would imagine by the description given. I am told that the bankers can detect them by a slight mistake made in the picture of Lady Dufferin, but the general public is misled. The suggestion which I am asked to make to the Minister is that the issue of 1878 be recalled and replaced, so as to protect the holders of those bills from the great loss which they will sustain in seeing these bills refused at the bank.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). I shall be glad to give the hon. gentleman's suggestion all due consideration. I was aware that similar counterfeits were afloat. I have heard very little complaint on that score, but I promise to give the matter attention.

ANTI-JAPANESE LEGISLATION.

Mr. PRIOR. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to ask the right hon. gentleman when he will bring down the correspondence and telegrams that passed between the British Columbia Government and the Dominion Government in regard to the anti-Japanese and Chinese legislation of the former Government? I have a notice of motion on the paper, but the right hon. gentleman asked me to allow it to stand twice. It seems to me that he should be able to bring it down after having made a statement in the House in regard to the matter.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I brought down all the correspondence in regard to the anti-Japanese legislation between the British Columbia Government and Canada several days ago.

REPRESENTATION IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I intended to-day to bring the Redistribution Bill to the consideration of the House. I am sorry to see that the House is somewhat thin, but as my hon. friend the Postmaster General (Mr. Mulock) has to be absent next week on an important domestic event, he desires to make a statement to-day and move the second reading; and if hon. gentlemen on the other side are not ready to debate it to-day, we will adjourn the debate.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL (Mr. Mulock) moved the second reading of Bill (No. 126) respecting representation in the House of Commons.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the explanation which I am about to offer to the House might more properly have been given on the introduction of the Bill, but unfortunately I was unable to be present on that occasion, having to attend the last ceremonies in connection with the death of a gentleman who had been a very prominent citizen of Canada, and accordingly the explanations which I then would have made, I now briefly offer to the House. It has not been the custom in the Canadian Parliament to make changes in the constituencies except in the session immediately succeeding the decennial census, but it has happened that, ever since confederation, the census and the succeeding redistributions have taken place while our political adversaries were in power. The opinion of the Liberal party, and, I think, of all fair-minded men will be that the redistributions, especially that of 1882, and certain features of that of 1892, were not upon fair lines, that the effect of these redistributions has not been to secure in this House that fair representation of the public opinion of Ontario that our constitution contemplates, but that they have resulted, on the contrary, in an unfair representation of public opinion in this House, as I will endeavour to prove, and therefore the existence of this legislation calls for the removal of the causes, at the earliest moment, even if it takes place after the redistribution that has occurred since the decennial census of 1891. The chief abuse of the power vested in Parliament to redistribute, and to which this Bill directs itself, arose under the Act of 1882. As hon. gentlemen now in the House and who were then in the House, will remember, and as other hon. members, who came since, will have learned from reading, that measure was offered to Parliament and was forced through Parliament ostensibly to accomplish two purposes. One was to give to Ontario four new members to which the province had become entitled after the census of 1881, and also to arrange for two vacancies arising from the merged constituencies, Cornwall having been merged with Stormont, and Niagara having been united with Lincoln. The exigency, therefore, that occurred was to provide these six seats, and the justification for the wholesale changes in the ridings that took place on that occasion was said to be to produce a better equalization of the ridings. If one of the objects on that occasion, the wholesale alteration of the political map of Ontario, was to produce an equalization of the population of each riding, the slightest reference to the populations of the ridings after that redistribution will show how completely that attempt failed. I may say, Mr. Speaker, that at no period since confederation up to this time, will you find any due respect paid to the subject of the equalization of population in the various constituencies, here in Ontario, or in any other province of Canada. You find in our own province of Ontario, for example, the population of constituencies after and before every redistribution showing very wide differences. I have a table before me showing the populations at the various periods, but for one moment, to prove my first proposition, that the Redistribution Act of 1882 did not even accomplish the ostensible ground upon which that wholesale disturbance of the political map of Ontario took place, I may just give to the House, in a brief summary, the figures showing the populations of some of the ridings of Ontario after that attempt made to equalize the populations in the various ridings. The census of 1881 showed that if each riding was to have an equal population for each riding, the population would have been 20,904.

Mr. PRIOR.

Mr. WALLACE. What year was that?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I am referring to the census of 1881. Taking 20,904 as the unit of representation for the province of Ontario, and allowing a reasonable margin under and over that sum, as being reasonably within the unit, because it is not possible to produce an absolute equality, I will suggest that we take the numbers as 19,000 and 22,000 as representing the outside limits of a unit of population of 20,904. It is to be borne in mind that when the redistribution of 1882 was taking place the then Government had thrown aside all the restraining influences, such as county boundaries and entire municipalities, so there was not the difficulty with them in producing an equalization of population that there is in the present case where the policy of the Administration is, that paramount the question of population is one involving respect for county boundaries. We have taken the ground in Parliament, and before the public that county boundaries shall govern, that no county should be divided into two or more divisions, and such divisions united with fragments of other counties. If it is that a county's population is not sufficient to entitle it to have two members, it shall have only one; if its population is not sufficient to entitle it to three but more than one, it shall be limited to two. In 1882, that principle was not in force, and not being in force it would have been possible for the then Administration to have equalized population as much as they desired. But, Sir, if they did desire it they most effectively failed in their desire, for out of the 92 seats that Ontario was entitled to as a result of the census of 1881—assuming any population between 19,000 and 22,000 as fairly representing the unit of population of 20,900—I say that of the 92 seats, the population of thirty of them, after the redistribution of 1882, was under the minimum of 19,000, and the population of thirty-four of them was over the maximum of 22,000. There were 64 of these 92 seats that did not conform to the principle on which that Bill was said to have been founded, namely, the equalization of population, and only 28 of the 92 had a population between 19,000 and 22,000. Taking the population of the various ridings of Ontario, as a result of the Redistribution Act of 1882, we find that the population of Leeds and Grenville—in order to save time I shall give the figures in round numbers and leave out the fractions of thousands—the population of Leeds and Grenville in 1882, being the smallest population of any riding in Ontario, was 12,000, and then we have a scale of population extending until at last we come to the constituency of West Toronto, which was given one member with a population of 38,000. We have proof in these figures, that whatever may have been the object of the Government of the day in regard to equalization, there was a practical failure to carry it out, inasmuch as West Toronto had a population more than three times that of Leeds and Grenville. We had after 1882, in Ontario, three constituencies with a population of 13,000; two constituencies with 14,000; four constituencies with 15,000; five constituencies with 16,000; eight constituencies with 17,000; five constituencies with 18,000, and so up to the maximum of West Toronto. And if you take the census returns of 1891, you will find the same inequalities perpetuated. As a further illustration I may remark that the population of the east riding of the city of Montreal—and I suppose if there should be equalization in one province there should be equalization in another—the population of East Montreal at the census of 1881 was 67,000, and it was only given one member and continued to be represented by one member until this present Parliament, although the population of that constituency had increased from 67,000 in 1881, to over 90,000 at the decennial census of 1891. I have reviewed the figures of every province in Canada from confederation down to the last census and last distribution, and I challenge contradiction of my statement, that you will not find in any province, or in the Territories, that at any period of time from confederation to this moment, there was any due regard paid to the principle which it was pretended governed the Redistribution Bill of 1882; namely, that the ridings were to be equalized in population. I am aware, Sir, that since this present measure has been before Parliament, an attempt has been made to prove that equalization of population is a cardinal principle of the Liberal party and is in harmony with the old doctrine of representation by population.

Mr. MACLEAN. Hear, hear.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The hon. gentleman says "hear, hear." He evidently is quite unfamiliar with the meaning of the question of representation by population. That question arose during the union of the provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, and the Liberal party then argued on behalf of the people of Upper Canada that there should be a proper regard for population in the representation of the two provinces, in the common legislature of the two provinces; but I have never yet heard it said—and if it has been said by any one in authority I have failed to find it—I have never yet heard any authoritative utterance binding on the Liberal party, that in each of the provinces, the ridings should be equal in population. On the contrary, the proposition that was advocated by the Liberal party in Parliament in 1882—I was not then, however, a member of the House—the proposition that we have advocated on the platform and elsewhere since; the resolution of the Liberal party at the Ottawa convention of 1893, all prove conclusively that the Liberal party took the ground, that in order to provide safeguards against the party for the time being governing the country making an abuse of their power, there should be some guiding principle to restrain them, and, Sir, that restraining influence which we sought to establish, that proposition which we adhered to, that proposition on which we went to the country on and which helped us to carry the country was: That there should be no breaking up of county boundaries in arranging for the representation of the people in Parliament. If, as a result of any redistribution measure —this or any other which the Liberal party advocate—there should be an inequality in the population of the various ridings; that is quite proper, if it is in deference to the paramount and dominating principle that there shall be no breaking up of county lines, and no creating seats out of fragments of different counties.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I intend to prove to Parliament, by figures which I will give the House, and the accuracy of which cannot be challenged; I will prove that the Redistribution Act of 1882, produced a representation of parties in Parliament that a fair redistribution Bill would not have produced. I will prove that the continuance of that Act during the elections of 1887 and 1891, and up to the last general election of 1896, produced the same unjust results. From 1882 down to the present time, I will prove that the Liberal party has been unjustly treated as a result of that Redistribution Act, and I will further prove that if the Redistribution Bill of 1882 had been upon fair lines many gentlemen who occupied seats since then, and many of those in the House to-day, would not have been elected. Were it not for the Gerrymander Act of 1882 and the subsequent one of 1891, there are several members of this House who never would have been returned. I shall speak now of the Bill before Parliament. It does not propose to do complete justice to the people but it proposes simply for the present, to do away with the more glaring injustices of previous redistribution Acts. The present measure does not propose to affect the ridings east of the county of Ontario, for it was westerly of and including the county of Ontario that the principal work of the gerrymander was done. There, under the guise of finding six new seats, and the pretense of equalizing populations, it was represented as necessary to distribute about fifty ridings; and taking those fifty ridings and taking the measure before the House to-day, which seeks to restore the municipalities to the counties to which they belong, and to give to the counties, when so restored, their fair representation, and looking at the votes cast since 1882 down to and including the year 1896, you will find that the voice of the people, as distinguished between Liberals and Conservatives, has been unjustly and unfairly represented in Parliament because of those unfair measures. The Government of the day took a number of municipalities of strong Liberal tendencies, and grouped them together, creating a number of hives. In their exultation at the time, they called them Grit hives, and they were not mistaken in that term. They succeeded in weakening a large number of surrounding ridings, detaching municipalities having Liberal majorities from this, that and the other riding; and, grouping those detached municipalities into one riding here and one there, they succeeded in weakening the fair strength of the Liberal party in a large number of ridings, and in that way carried constituencies for the Conservative party which otherwise they never could have carried. Now, Sir, if that is true—

Mr. MULOCK.

Mr. BENNETT. Hear, hear.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. If that is true, and I say it is true, then Parliament since 1882 has never fairly represented public opinion of Ontario. I will give the hives which were created at that time, and the results. There were created in 1882 eight Liberal hives, with overwhelming Liberal majorities in them. They were North Brant, West Bruce, West Elgin, South Huron, South Middlesex, West Ontario, North Oxford and South Oxford. In the different general elections these ridings gave the following Liberal majorities:—

	Aggregate Liberal Majority.	Average Liberal Majority.
In 1882	6,071	771
1887	7,210	901
1891	7,473	934
1898	6,663	833

Now, Sir, what was the effect of giving these enormous Liberal majorities in these eight constituencies? The Bill before Parliament affects some 43 constituencies in Ontario—

Mr. WALLACE. More than that.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It affects the following constituencies in certain respects:—In doing away with the hives, and in abolishing constituencies which do not correspond to counties, Bothwell and Cardwell, and bringing the constituencies of Haldimand, Welland, Lincoln and those others into their proper limits, the Bill affects the following constituencies, namely:—Bothwell, Brant North, Brant South, Bruce North, Bruce West, Bruce East, Elgin West, Grey South, Grey East, Grey North, Haldimand, Huron West, Huron East, Huron South, Kent, Lambton West, Lambton East, Lincoln, Middlesex East, Middlesex West, Middlesex North, Middlesex South—Monck is abolished, but my figures embrace the time when it was a constituency—Musakoka and Parry Sound, Norfolk South, Norfolk North, Ontario North, Ontario South, Ontario West, Oxford North, Oxford South, Peel, Perth North, Perth South, Simcoe North, Simcoe South, Simcoe East, Welland, Wellington North, Wellington Centre, Wellington South, Wentworth North, Wentworth South, York North, York East. West York was not affected by the gerrymander. It is the same constituency that it was prior to that legislation.

Mr. WALLACE. The legislation which the hon. gentleman proposes now tumbles West York upside down.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It takes that portion that belongs to the city of Toronto, and puts it into the city.

Mr. WALLACE. It takes half the district away.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It leaves enough for the hon. gentleman to handle.

Mr. BENNETT. To be elected in.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Well, he will have his opportunity. Now, Sir, I take these ridings and I present to the House—

Mr. McNEILL. Before the hon. gentleman leaves that part, might I ask him a question? He says the Bill affects North Bruce. How does he know that the judges will deal with North Bruce?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I am glad the hon. gentleman calls my attention to North Bruce. The Bill will leave it to the judges to deal with that matter. The hon. gentleman is aware, as well as any one in this House, how North Bruce affects him, as a member of this House. He knows very well that, from the day that Gerrymander Act of 1882 was passed to this moment, that Gerrymander Act and the Gerrymander Act of 1892, were the reasons whereby he got a seat in this House. The hon. gentleman knows that full well, and, if he challenges the statement, I can give him the figures. He is very discreet, and he will not challenge it.

An hon. MEMBER. The Minister is perfectly satisfied to leave that to the judges.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Perfectly satisfied.

Mr. McNEILL. But he wishes to prejudge the case.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Well, I will return to my hon. friend's constituency in a short time, and he will see whether or not it is wise and fair to submit to the judiciary whether the north riding of Bruce should remain as it is or not.

Mr. McNEILL. I am quite willing that it should be. I do not object to that, but I object to the hon. gentleman saying that the judges will alter it.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I have not said that they will alter it. I do not know what the hon. gentleman bases that statement on. It is on nothing I have stated.

Mr. FOSTER. A little incautious that time, were you not?

Mr. CASEY. A moment of weakness.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I have stated nothing that I did not desire to state.

Mr. FOSTER. Tell us who the judges are, now?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The hon. gentleman need not be at all concerned on that account. The judges will be fit, proper and honourable men.

Mr. FOSTER. For your work.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The Premier authorizes me to say, that there will be no objection to naming the judges before this Bill becomes law.

Mr. FOSTER. I should say so. You know them all.

Mr. McNEILL. I am quite satisfied with any of them.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Well, my hon. friend will have to make a virtue of necessity.

Mr. McNEILL. Hear, hear.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Well, Mr. Speaker, may I be permitted now to prove a proposition that I advanced a short time ago? Taking the votes cast in the constituencies, the names of which I have read—forty-six of them in the general election of 1882, forty-six in the general election of 1887, forty-six in the general election of 1891, and forty-three in the general election of 1896; and, adding together the majorities obtained by Liberals and Conservatives in all these elections, let us see if we can find out what ought to have been a fair representation of parties in this House.

At the general election of 1882, the 43 constituencies that I refer to gave a Liberal majority at the polls of 8,574. The election returns gave for those 46 seats, 15 Conservatives and 31 Liberal members. If there had been a fair representation of those various majorities—

Mr. WALLACE. I would like to ask the hon. Minister if he selected those 46 constituencies all over the province or in one part of the province?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I have taken the 46 constituencies, the names of which I read to the hon. gentleman, and all of which are affected by the Gerrymander Acts of 1882 and 1892, and by the Bill now before Parliament, which seeks to return to all these counties affected the municipalities which are not now, and have not been since confederation, part of the counties for electoral purposes.

Take those 46 seats, and if the representation had been in proportion to the majorities which they gave in the election of 1882 to the Conservatives and Liberals instead of the Conservative party having had 15 representatives in this House in that Parliament, they would only have had 10, and instead of the Liberals having only had 31 they would have had 36. In other words, while the Liberal party got only 15 seats in Parliament, a fair representation of that party, according to the vote cast, would have been 26, so that the Liberal party was deprived of ten votes on a division in this House.

Take the returns of those same 46 counties in the general election of 1887, and the following is the result:—There was a Conservative majority of 5,447 and a Liberal majority of 10,257. The election returns assigned to the Conservative party 22 seats in this House and to the Liberal party 24 seats, giving the Liberals a majority of two votes in this House, out of the total 46. But a rightful proportion would have given the Conservative party 16 seats in this House and the Liberal party 30. In other words, the Liberals would have had a majority of 14 instead of only 2, so that by that gerrymander the Liberal party was wronged out of 12 members on a division.

Mr. CLANCY. How does the hon. Minister know that it would give that difference?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I have added up the figures, and the hon. gentleman will get the same result, if he will add up the election returns.

Mr. CLANCY. That does not determine anything.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The hon. gentleman will have every opportunity of giving his views on my argument.

The general election of 1891 gave the Conservatives 3,661 of a majority and the Liberals 13,516, but the election returns gave the Conservative party 15 seats and the Liberals 31, or a majority of 16 in Parliament. But a rightful proportion would have been 10 seats for the Conservatives and 36 for the Liberals, or a majority on a division of this House of 26 for the Liberals, instead of which they only had 16. In other words, the gerrymander wronged the Liberals out of 10 seats.

I now proceed to the election of 1896, the present Parliament. I omit three seats in my figures, namely, North Simcoe, which was represented by the late Mr. McCarthy, which I omit for obvious reasons. North Wentworth and North Brant, in the meantime, had been merged into one, and Monck had disappeared, so that the figures I am now giving have to do with only 43 seats instead of 46. In this connection, I group with the Liberal majorities the member for West Bruce, and the member for Prince Edward County, independent Patron Liberals.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Hon. gentlemen will not get much comfort out of whatever little argument they might make by my having grouped these with the Liberal party, if they think they are not correctly grouped.

The figures are as follows:—The 43 constituencies gave a Conservative majority of 3,814 and a Liberal majority of 12,442. The election returns gave 17 Conservatives and 26 Liberals, or a majority of 9 for the Liberals in this House. But a fair proportion, based on the majorities given at the polls, would have been 10 Conservative seats to 33 Liberals, or a rightful Liberal majority in Parliament of 23 instead of 9. In other words, the gerrymander caused a loss to the Liberal party of 14 votes on a division of this Parliament.
Mr. MULLOCK.

Mr. HAGGART. Why does the hon. gentleman make the division on majorities instead of the total vote polled? Does he not see the distinction?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I take the majorities as a fair test. Take the gross majorities and divide them by the gross number of seats, and you get a fair proportion of the majority of seats.

Mr. HAGGART. No, it is the total vote polled which the hon. gentleman ought to take.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The hon. gentleman is free to argue that point.

Mr. CLARKE. Have you given the figures, showing the average unit of representation of these 46 seats?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It must be 20,904.

Mr. CLARKE. Of those 46 seats?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I could give the hon. gentleman the figures to add up if he desires them. The result of that redistribution has been that, as a result of the various general elections, in 1882 the Liberal party lost 10 votes on a division of Parliament; in 1887, they lost 12 votes on a division; in 1891, they lost 10 on a division; and in 1896, 14 on a division. That being so, I think I have made out a case showing the existence of a grievance, and a grievance which a popular assembly like this is bound, at the earliest moment, to redress. My hon. friend from North Bruce (Mr. McNeill) is anxious to take part in this discussion, so I will illustrate the effect of this redistribution with the case of North Bruce. The hon. gentleman had not a seat in Parliament when the Redistribution Act of 1882 was passed, still he, doubtless, had some influence here. By the Confederation Act, North Bruce was divided into two ridings—North Bruce and South Bruce. The township of Saugeen was part of the riding of North Bruce. When the census of 1881 was taken, the county of Bruce had a population of 65,183, which, if equally divided into three, would give 21,729 for each constituency. The Redistribution Act of 1882 gave three seats to the county of Bruce. The population of North Bruce, as it existed under the census of 1881, was 20,735, being less than the unit of population for the county.

Mr. McNEILL. There was no North Bruce at that time. Is my hon. friend (Mr. Mulock) speaking of Bruce as it was when divided into two ridings?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The county of Bruce was divided at the time of confederation into two ridings, one of them being North Bruce; in that riding of North Bruce was the township of Saugeen, and in that township of Saugeen was a very substantial Liberal majority.

Mr. McNEILL. And in the township of Bruce also.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. And in the township of Bruce also—let the hon. gentleman take what comfort he can in that. Well, Sir, the two south townships of North Bruce were Saugeen and Elderslie—

Mr. McNEILL. The hon. gentleman is mistaken.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The hon. gentleman (Mr. McNeill) might as well possess his soul in patience—

Mr. McNEILL. I thought the hon. gentleman (Mr. Mulock) wanted to be right in his facts.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I am giving nothing but facts.

Mr. McNEILL. The hon. gentleman is mistaken.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I wanted to say that the county of Bruce was divided by the Redistribution Act of 1882 into three ridings, North, West and East Bruce; and as a result of that redivision, there was given to West Bruce a population of 24,218, and to North Bruce a population of 18,645.

Mr. CLANCY. Does the hon. gentleman (Mr. Mulock) mean to say that is the population as he finds it to-day?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I am speaking now of the population when the Redistribution Bill was passed.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman had better deal with it as it is now, not as it was 100 years ago.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I will come to that presently—and I will take up Bothwell, too, for the benefit of the hon. gentleman.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman has already taken that up in his schemes.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Put it down, rather.

Mr. FOSTER. You must take a thing up before you can put it down.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I was saying that, as a result of the division of Bruce in 1882, North Bruce was left with a population of 18,645, and West Bruce with a population of 24,218, a difference of 5,573. In order to accomplish that inequality it was necessary to detach from the original riding of North Bruce the township of Saugeen, with a population of 2,090, thus making North Bruce, which was below the unit of population, still further below that unit, and increasing the disparity between North Bruce and West Bruce.

Mr. McNEILL. Would the hon. gentleman allow me a question?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Yes.

Mr. McNEILL. Would the hon. gentleman say what was the population of these ridings at the next census?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I will come to that.

Mr. McNEILL. The reason I ask the question is that North Bruce was at that time rapidly filling up with settlers, whereas the south was an old riding; and the hon. gentleman will find at the next census there was a great change, and North Bruce had greatly increased, while South Bruce had largely diminished.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I will come to that. I am showing that the riding of North Bruce at the time of the Redistribution Act of 1882 had about 5,500 population less than West Bruce, and in order to bring about that inequality it was necessary to detach something from North Bruce, and the only thing that could be detached was the township of Saugeen, and that was detached and for good reason.

Mr. McNEILL. And the township of Bruce also.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. No; if we deal with the matter geographically Saugeen would come before Bruce.

Mr. McNEILL. But it was detached.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It was not part of North Bruce at that time.

Mr. McNEILL. The hon. gentleman is mistaken.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Now, if the hon. gentleman (Mr. McNeill) will only be patient—

Mr. McNEILL. Of course, if the hon. gentleman wants to make misstatements of fact—

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. That is the last thing I desire to do.

Mr. McNEILL. Well, I tell the hon. gentleman he is mistaken.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Then, the hon. gentleman (Mr. McNeill) will have an opportunity of proving that. I would like to be allowed to proceed.

Mr. SPEAKER. I might call attention of hon. gentlemen to the fact that while interruptions are sometimes allowed, they are being carried further than is consistent with the courtesy of debate.

Mr. McNEILL. I desire to say that nothing is further from my intention than that. I wish to keep the hon. gentleman right as to the facts, and if he does not wish me to do so, I will not say another word.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I have not the slightest desire to prevent reasonable inquiry as I proceed, but there is a limit even to that. What I wish to illustrate and will illustrate, if I am allowed to proceed, is that the Gerrymander Act—and I make the proposition and we shall see whether I prove it—the Gerrymander Act of 1882 and the Gerrymander Act of 1891 resulted in enabling the hon. gentleman (Mr. McNeill) to carry North Bruce from 1882 up to the present time; and if there had been no gerrymander, if the votes that were cast in the portions of North Bruce detached from it had been cast in North Bruce, he would not have been in Parliament from that time to this. That is my statement; now, I will proceed to prove it. North Bruce, before the Gerrymander Act of 1882, had a population less than that assigned to West Bruce, yet they detached from North Bruce a portion which had a Liberal majority and added it to West Bruce, increasing the Liberal majority in West Bruce. The result was that the riding of West Bruce was left with a population nearly 6,000 greater than that of North Bruce; and in the election which took place a few weeks afterwards, the hon. gentleman carried North Bruce by 88, and the Liberal party carried West Bruce by 892. Now, if the Liberal township of Saugeen, with a population of 2,090, had not been detached from North Bruce, making that population of that riding so much more below the unit of population, the hon. gentleman, instead of having a majority of 88, would have been defeated by nearly the same number. The township of Saugeen, that properly belongs to North Bruce, at that time gave a Liberal majority of 161, which would have wiped out his 88 majority and left him in a minority of nearly as much. So much for the beginning. I think I have made a start with the hon. gentleman. No doubt he had good reason to thank the gerrymander in that case.

Well, Sir, I proceed to the election of 1887. In that election the riding of North Bruce gave the hon. gentleman a majority of 113. The riding of West Bruce gave the Liberal candidate a majority of 1,085. The township of Saugeen, which he had fortunately got rid of, had given a Liberal majority on that occasion of 214. Where would his majority of 113 be, and where would those great orations which he has embalmed upon the "Hansard" have been but for the gerrymander of the riding in 1882? Great was the power of the gerrymander. Well, the 1891 election came on. How did the ridings behave then? It was getting a little uncomfortable for the hon. gentleman. He succeeded in carrying North Bruce on that occasion by the enormous majority of 30. The Liberals carried the hive of West Bruce by a majority of 930. The Liberal township of Saugeen which had been so successfully placed in the hive to make it sure of returning a Liberal, had on this occasion given a Liberal majority of 222. Why, Sir, he would have been nearly 200 in a minority if he had faced the music without the Gerrymander Act of 1882. I do not wonder at the hon. gentleman advocating and worshipping such legislation. He says that his riding was rapidly increasing in population, that his soul was so moved by a desire to equalize populations that in 1882 he felt it necessary to detach in anticipation 2,000 population from North Bruce and put it into West Bruce, because he thought that in ten years hence the population of North Bruce might become more nearly equal. Well, in 1891, when his majority had come to 30, what took place? He was afraid to face the music again with that majority of only 30, and something else had to be done. Saugeen could not be detached, but there was a municipality that had been showing up badly so far as the hon. gentleman was concerned. There was the little town of Port Elgin, which, in the year 1891, had given a Liberal majority of 88, it was in my hon. friend's constituency. Now, if Port Elgin could by hook or by crook be detached from North Bruce it might save the hon. gentleman once more; and then in 1892, for the first time, he argued about the importance of equalizing the population, and to that end he detaches the small village of Port Elgin from North Bruce and puts it into West Bruce, because at that time North Bruce had become slightly more populous than West Bruce. There was in 1891 a difference in favour of North Bruce of 1,812, and by putting Port Elgin into West Bruce he could make West Bruce more populous than North Bruce. But he only equalized them to the extent of 302. In 1892 the hon. gentleman took Port Elgin out of North Bruce and put it into West Bruce in order to bring about an equalization of 302; but in 1882 he weakened the population of North Bruce which was then below that of West Bruce, and brought it down to a minority of nearly 6,000.

Mr. McNEILL. Will the hon. member allow me to interrupt him?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Yes.

Mr. McNEILL. I think my hon. friend's memory is a little defective. I want to remind him that I stated on the floor of the House that it was not only for the purpose of equalizing the population, but because Port Elgin had been put five miles off in another constituency, and I thought it was unreasonable that I should be obliged to go five miles into the territory of West Bruce to find a majority against me. I frankly stated that on the floor of the House; and I ask the hon. members on the other side if they think in all fairness that that arrangement should be allowed to continue. I also stated at the time that the village of Port Elgin had been left in the riding of North Bruce at the suggestion of a friend of the hon. gentleman, namely, the Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson). He and I had a little conversation across the floor of the House at the time.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. You have not stated it all.

Mr. McNEILL. Do you want me to state it all? I understand that my hon. friend's explanation of the matter was this: There was a suggestion made to put in the township of Saugeen, which Sir John A. Macdonald opposed. There was also a suggestion made to put in a strip of territory lying between the villages of Southampton and Port Elgin, together with those two villages, which Sir John A. Macdonald had also refused to do. My hon. friend proposed that the village of Port Elgin should be put in, and Sir John A. Macdonald, after some pressure, agreed to that. My hon. friend's explanation of his suggestion that Port Elgin should be put in, a village which gave a Reform majority, was that, having induced Sir John A. Macdonald to put in the village of Port Elgin, he would also be able to induce him to put in the township of Saugeen, which he had already refused to put in. Is that the correct explanation?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. I will give my explanation.

Mr. McNEILL. Does that fairly represent what my hon. friend said?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. The hon. gentleman will give his impression, and I will give my remembrance.

Mr. McNEILL. My hon. friend can look at the "Hansard" of that date and find out whether I am correct. I pointed out to him at that time that he must have thought Sir John A. Macdonald was a very silly bird to be caught with a small pinch of salt on his tail in that way.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. My hon. friend at some length has endeavoured to explain why he was able to succeed in having transferred the village of Port Elgin to West Bruce, namely, because he did not think it fair that he should have to travel five miles out of his constituency, the proper constituency of North Bruce, to meet his constituents of Port Elgin. Now, Sir, the hon. gentleman was in Parliament in 1892 when that Bill was passed; and if he was so moved in his soul against any portion of his riding being in another riding, I presume his principles were not limited to the riding of North Bruce, but would apply generally. The hon. gentleman, in 1892, supported a proposition to detach from the north riding of the county of Wentworth the township of Beverley, and annex it to the neighbouring riding, and he split the north riding of the county of Wentworth into two parts, separating the south part from the north part by the townships of Ancaster and Beverley and the city of Hamilton. He supported that Act, so far as North Wentworth was concerned. Now, what was the effect of the detachment of Port Elgin from North Bruce on the election of 1896? Again, I remind the hon. gentleman, and I remind the House, that in 1882 it was not deemed by those who advised the Government from North Bruce—and in Parliament the hon. gentleman was credited with having given them advice—but it was not deemed necessary in 1882 to bring West Bruce and North Bruce nearer together, in point of population, than nearly 6,000. Yet in 1891 and 1892, ten years afterwards, the hon. gentleman insists on a change, though the effect promoted equality to the extent of 302 only, whilst an inequality of 6,000 did not move him in 1882. It was not because Port Elgin was a little outside of North Bruce that Port Elgin was detached from North Bruce; it was because Port Elgin in 1891 had sounded a warning note, and given a majority of 88 against the hon. gentleman's party. He knew that if he had to face the electors in another election, with Port Elgin in North Bruce, it would be against him, and accordingly, Port Elgin was transferred to West Bruce. In 1896, the hon. gentleman's majority was 31. Port Elgin on that occasion gave a Liberal majority of 78. If Port Elgin had not been, fortunately for him, detached by the Act of 1892, he would have been defeated in the general election of 1896. So I have proved, I think, to the satisfaction of every fair-minded man, that, in the four elections since 1882 to the present time, the Gerrymander Act, and the Gerrymander Act alone, has seated the hon. gentleman here. That is an illustration of how the Liberal party is to-day unrepresented to the extent of 14, as a result of the Gerrymander in Ontario to which I have alluded. I say, that the point can be established by the figures I have given, and that the North Bruce case is a fair sample. The hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Clancy) desired to have his case considered. I would speak of Bothwell, then, as follows:—

Mr. CLANCY. With respect.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. And with much greater respect after the next elections. There is an argument to be made in favour of certain changes in 1891 in regard to Bothwell. The population of Bothwell, at the time to which I refer, was 27,102. It was by that Act reduced to 22,477.

Mr. CLANCY. In 1891?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. In 1881. By the Act of 1882, as the result of the election then, Bothwell had a Liberal majority—a very considerable majority—some two or three hundred.

Mr. CLANCY. When?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. In 1882. By the Act of 1882 the following municipalities were detached from Bothwell:—Euphemia, with a Conservative majority of 30, was taken away.

Mr. CLANCY. Where did Euphemia belong?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I will just give my facts, and the hon. gentleman can give his.

Mr. CLANCY. I think the hon. gentleman will pardon me, because he is going on to deal with municipal county boundaries.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Euphemia is a part of the county of Lambton. There were also detached from Bothwell the townships of Howard and Orford, and the town of Bridgetown. These municipalities gave a Liberal majority of 321. Taking from that amount the 30 Conservative majorities detached, there was a net loss to the Liberal party in Bothwell of 291. There was added to Bothwell, by that Act, Wallaceburg, with a Liberal majority of 10, and Chatham township, with a Conservative majority of 64. The net loss to our party by the additions was 54, and the net loss by the detachments was 291. In other words, the change made to Bothwell weakened the Liberal party by 345. In 1882, after the gerrymander, the Conservatives carried that riding—Mr. Hawkins, I think, was the member—by a majority of 16. If these changes had not been made, instead of his having carried that riding, the present hon. Minister of Justice (Mr. Mills) would have been elected by 329. Take that same riding, and see how it would have turned out for my hon. friend (Mr. Clancy), if there had been no gerrymander of that riding in 1882.

Mr. CLANCY. My hon. friend had better follow up the successes of the hon. Minister of Justice there, year after year.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I will take the vote cast by the municipalities that were detached from and added to the electoral district of Bothwell by the Gerryman-de Act of 1882, and we will see how the vote turned out. The hon. member (Mr. Clancy) was declared elected by a majority of 87. The municipalities which were detached from Bothwell by the Gerryman-de Act, gave a Liberal majority in 1896 of 379. The municipalities that were added to Bothwell by the Gerryman-de Act, gave a Conservative majority of 66. By the addition of that Conservative majority to Bothwell, and by the detachment of that Liberal ma-majority from Bothwell, the Liberal strength was weakened by 445. Where would the hon. gentleman's majority of 87 have been, but for the Gerryman-de Act, which gave him 445 votes?

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Mulock) is wiping out Bothwell. He does not propose, in his Bill, to build up Bothwell as a constituency, but he proposes to do away with it entirely. So, the hon. gentleman will see that his argument falls to the ground. He is not restoring Bothwell; he is wiping it out in toto. So, that this has nothing to do with it at all.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I am simply illustrating the working in detail of the Gerryman-de Act, so that, no matter whether Bothwell is a municipal county or an electoral riding, in either case, the Gerryman-de Act of 1882 is what seats the hon. member at this present moment. I do not propose to trace in detail every riding, although I have no doubt some hon. gentlemen will take up other portions of the province in question, and deal with them more in detail. I have given these few illustrations, and I can give more, if necessary, to prove the general proposition that I laid down, that the Gerryman-de Acts of 1882 and 1892 have operated to deprive the people of a fair expression of public opinion, according to their party views, on the floor of this House.

Mr. CLANCY. Does the hon. gentleman know that the hon. Minister of Justice sat for the riding of Bothwell from 1867 until defeated in 1896, almost continuously, with the exception of one session after the election of 1882?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I am well aware that, because of the principles that he advocated, because of the confidence of the people in him, and because of the good sense of the people, the Minister of Justice was able to a large extent to overcome the disadvantage he laboured under in consequence of that Redistribution Bill.

Mr. CLANCY. What became of his principles the last time?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The hon. gentleman will be better able to answer that than I am.

Mr. CLARKE. Before the hon. gentleman (Mr. Mulock) passes from his consideration of the effects of the gerrymander of those constituencies, might I ask him how many candidates ran in North Bruce last election?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The hon. gentleman will have a full opportunity of going into that later.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh.

Mr. LANDERKIN. Get the "Parliamentary Companion" and you will find it there.

Mr. GILLIES. Give it to the Postmaster General.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It is only necessary to look at the map of Ontario to see what little regard was paid to the convenience of the people in carving out constituencies. My hon. friend from North Bruce (Mr. McNeill) reminded me, for example, of what took place in the county of Brant. I think I am right in saying that the north riding of Wentworth and Brant, running from Oxford through Brant to Wentworth, part of several counties, comes in contact with six or seven other ridings so shapeless is it. I believe that the north riding of the county of Ontario, consisting principally of a tier of townships ranging in width perhaps from four miles to twelve, has a length of nearly 150 miles, almost as great as the distance between Ottawa and Montreal. I should like to know on what principle the riding of North Ontario was built up in that way. How were people, members of the same constituencies, supposed to meet and confer and deliberate on public affairs, how were they to meet and discuss when separated by the practically impossible distance of over 100 miles. No person can look at the map of Ontario in the gerrymandered district, and form any other conclusion than that it was a measure designed not to secure, but to defeat, the will of the people. And, Sir, if that be the case, the duty is upon us to redeem, as we have redeemed up to this, more and more the pledges given by us to the country prior to the general election; it is our duty, I say, to redeem here one of our pledges, and our chief pledge, and since hon. gentlemen opposite are so anxious to assist us in redeeming our pledges, I bespeak from them their co-operation in dealing with this measure.

The Bill itself is in principle a very simple one. It is in conformity with our principle not to disturb county boundaries, and that being the case, we have to take these counties whose population is not sufficient to entitle them to two members, and assign to them one member. This applies to the counties of Dufferin, Haldimand, Lincoln, Peel, Welland, Wentworth, Muskoka and Parry Sound. Some of these counties have a population somewhat in excess of the unit, but not sufficient to entitle them to two members, and accordingly nothing remains except to assign to them one each.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the population of the county of Wentworth?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I shall give the population of these counties as the result of the census of 1891. Dufferin, 16,860; Haldimand, 23,440; Lincoln, 30,079; Peel, 24,871; Welland, 30,631; Wentworth, 29,869; Muskoka, 17,038; Parry Sound, 19,317.

Mr. DAVIN. Might I ask the hon. gentleman if all his calculations are based upon the census of 1891?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. This is a Redistribution Bill that ought to have taken place immediately following the census of 1891, and as the hon. gentleman (Mr. Davin) is aware, there was a bad Government in office at that time. Then, we come to another group of counties that are entitled to be represented by more than one member, but perhaps are not entitled to three. They are Brant, Elgin, Lambton, Norfolk, Ontario, Oxford and Perth.

Mr. CLARKE. What is the population of Brant?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. 36,445.

Mr. CLANCY. Does that include the Indians?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It is taken from the census.

Mr. CLANCY. We all know that, but what I ask is, does it include the Indians?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I am not able to say whether it includes the Indians or not.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Well, the hon. gentleman ought to be able to say that, when he presents a Bill to this House, and founds an argument in favour of it upon these very figures. He ought to know whether two or three thousand population of a county have been disfranchised by him or not.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The hon. gentleman knows that the Indians of Brant, some of them, are entitled to vote, and perhaps all of them.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. They are not; they were disfranchised by you last year.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The hon. gentleman is not familiar with the Ontario Act.

Mr. CLANCY. I wish to ask the Postmaster General—

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

Mr. SPEAKER. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Clancy) wishes to interrupt he must ask the permission of the hon. gentleman addressing the House.

Mr. CLANCY. Then, I will ask the permission of the Postmaster General, because this is an important point.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I will explain to my hon. friend (Mr. Clancy) the point which I think he desires to make. The Ontario Act gives the franchise to an Indian who chooses to take his location ticket and be separate from the band and not receive an annuity, and is not in other ways dependent upon the Government. There may be some enfranchised and there may not, but the census will speak for itself and the voters' list of the province will speak for itself.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh.

Mr. CLARKE. Would the hon. gentleman read the population of the counties that have two members each?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Yes. Brant, 36,445; Elgin, 43,377; Lambton, 58,810; Norfolk, 30,992. Do the hon. gentlemen desire me to read all these figures?

Mr. CLARKE. I would like to have them on record.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. They are all in the census.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Better have them here too.

Mr. CLANCY. I may tell the hon. gentleman (Mr. Mulock) that the township of Tuscarora is entirely excluded from the local franchise which we have adopted. It was included in the Dominion franchise, but all the Indians of that township are excluded under our present franchise.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. How many?

Mr. CLANCY. Somewhere about 2,000, I believe.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Then, the hon. gentleman will have an opportunity of suggesting in committee whether he thinks Brant ought to have less than two members. Ontario, 43,355; Oxford, 49,849; Perth, 51,716. I now come to another group of counties that the Bill proposes to assign three members to, namely, Kent, Huron, Bruce, Grey, Middlesex, Simcoe, Wellington and York. The population of these are: Kent, 58,019; Huron, 66,781; Bruce, 64,604; Grey, 71,214; Middlesex, 58,540; Simcoe, 82,727; Wellington, 57,543; York, 61,391. Then, I come to the city of Toronto. The Bill proposes that there should be four members to the city of Toronto. Since the Bill has been before the public, other views have been suggested, and they have been fully considered by the Government. I may say that it has never been the practice in Canada to give as full representation to groups of population in cities as in the more sparsely settled districts.

I want to remind hon. gentlemen of the representation of the city of Montreal. According to the census of 1881 Montreal had a population of 140,000, and yet it was left at that time with three members only. It was not then considered to be inadequately represented, nor was it deemed necessary to have an equalization of population in the three ridings; for whilst the centre riding had only 25,000, Montreal West had 48,000 and Montreal East 67,000. So that if inequalities are suggested by the present Bill, whilst I would not defend anything in the Bill which could not be defended on its own merits, simply on the ground that it existed before, still I would point out to hon. gentlemen opposite that their party did not deem it an unfair thing to leave Montreal Centre with 25,000 population and Montreal East with 67,000, the latter constituency growing and increasing in population until 1891, when its population exceeded 90,000; and yet it had merely one member until the general elections of 1896.

Mr. CLARKE. How did Montreal fare in the redistribution of 1892?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The population of Montreal in 1892 attained the figure of 182,000.

Mr. CLARKE. And the representation?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It had five.

Mr. CLARKE. That inequality was done away with.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It was, in 1896. The population of Toronto, according to the census of 1891, was 144,000, and if you add to it the portions of Toronto that are at present in the constituencies of East and West York, the population would be brought up to 191,000.

Mr. CLARKE. 177,000.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Well, whatever it brings it up to, it will not be much less than that of Montreal with its five members. The figures I have given are census figures. I will say, with reference to the representation of Toronto, that the Government are desirous of making this Bill in every respect fair, and removing from it every possible semblance of unfairness. It is in that spirit that the measure is conceived; it is in that spirit that suggestions that have appeared in the press have been entertained, and it is in that spirit that I am authorized by the Government to announce that if it is the wish of this House, the Government will approve of increasing the representation of Toronto from four to five.

Mr. MACLEAN. What will the unit of representation be then?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. That would depend on what you make the total population of the city. The population of Montreal is 182,000, making the unit of population there about 36,000.

Mr. MACLEAN. Will the hon. gentleman now tell the House why the city should not have representation equal to that of the county portions of the country? Why should the city be disfranchised, or have two votes that are only equal to one elsewhere?

Mr. LANDERKIN. Why did you support that system before ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It is not for me to find explanations, but there are various arguments. For example, one argument is that a city is sure to have among its population men representing outside constituencies. There are many gentlemen living in the city of Toronto and representing outside constituencies both in the Senate and in the House of Commons.

Mr. WALLACE. How many ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I have not gone through the list, but I think I would be safe in saying that there are half a dozen residents of Toronto representing outside constituencies. We have, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for East York—

Mr. MACLEAN. I represent the city as well as the county, and I live in the city.

Mr. LANDERKIN. And brought up in the country.

The PRIME MINISTER. It is doubly represented.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. There are probably to-day resident in the city of Toronto 20 members of the Senate and House of Commons.

Mr. WALLACE. Only two in the House of Commons.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I know three—the hon. member for North Simcoe (Mr. McCarthy), Mr. Speaker, and the hon. member for North York (Mr. Mulock), and there may be more—I have not gone through the list.

Mr. CLARKE. You are wiping one of those seats out, occupied by a gentleman who resides in Toronto.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I am not anticipating that it will deprive the hon. gentleman of a seat.

Mr. CLARKE. You are wiping out the constituency he represents now.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. He represents a constituency, part of which is in the city, and part of which is outside the city. I now come to the next point in the Bill.

Mr. WALLACE. I would ask the hon. gentleman, before he goes on, if it is proposed to divide Toronto into five constituencies ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It is proposed to assign five seats to the city of Toronto, and to leave the judiciary to divide the city.

Mr. HAGGART. Will the hon. gentleman be kind enough to tell me where he takes the seat from that he gives to Toronto ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. That is a very proper question, because it is quite impossible to give another seat to Toronto without taking it from some other place. The hon. gentleman is aware that Bothwell is disappearing, and that its fragments are going back to the counties from which they came. That will give back to Kent a considerable portion of the territory that belonged to Kent municipality, raising its population to 58,000 odd. It was proposed in the draft to give Kent three members, but in order to meet the views of those who think Toronto should have another member, it is proposed to give that city that other member, and to give two members to the county of Kent.

Mr. CLANCY. That fixes it all right now, does it ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I trust that the hon. gentleman will find that any objection he had to over-representation in Kent will be overcome by that. The Bill also proposes to restore to certain counties in the province of Quebec a number of municipalities that were destroyed from time to time.

Mr. CLARKE. Is any change made in Algoma ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. No. In the province of Prince Edward Island—

Mr. McNEILL. Before the hon. gentleman comes to that, I would like to ask him whether the judges are to take into consideration the increase of population since the last census, or is the increase or change of population during the last eight years to be left out of consideration altogether ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The Bill mentions the matters that are referred to the judges. The census deals with the subject of population. This is a measure that is proposed to be passed in this year, 1899, which should have been passed in the year 1892. And they will sit as if they were sitting in 1892, having before them the census of 1891, the maps of the provinces, the history of the country and such other circumstances as they may deem necessary to guide them in arriving at a fair judgment.

Mr. MACLEAN. Will the judges sit as a court and hear both sides or in secret conclave and decide for themselves.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I am not able to say whether they will sit as a court.

Mr. MACLEAN. If the matter is referred direct to the judges, are they to meet themselves and settle it among themselves and not as a court ?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It is not desirable they should sit as a court, I presume, but as commissioners.

Mr. McNEILL. I did not quite understand the hon. gentleman's answer with regard to the population. Am I to understand that the judges are not to take into consideration any change of population that may have occurred during the last eight years, or are they to be allowed to take into consideration any such change that may be brought to their notice?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. This is a measure being past nunc pro tunc. They will sit and undo what my hon. friends succeeded in accomplishing in 1892. They will be asked to assume that they are sitting immediately after the census of 1891.

Mr. CLARKE. Will the hon. gentleman give us some information respecting the constituencies of Ottawa and Hamilton, which are now represented by two members each? Is it intended to have them divided into two constituencies, each returning one member?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It is not intended to do anything which is not indicated by the Bill.

Mr. CLARKE. The intention, then, is that there shall be two members representing Ottawa and two Hamilton, and they are to be elected by the city at large?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The Bill will not interfere with anything it does not purport to interfere with.

Mr. MACLEAN. How are the judges to deal with the city of Toronto?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The judges will assign five seats to the city of Toronto.

Mr. MACLEAN. Will they be free to give West Toronto two members and some other portion one member?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. They will be free, unless the Bill should otherwise circumscribe their powers.

Mr. MACLEAN. Does it?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I find nothing in it. If the hon. gentleman will read the Bill—

Mr. FOSTER. But the hon. Minister is explaining the Bill.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. Quite right, and I do not object to that question. If the hon. member does not understand, let me tell him that the Bill proposes to ask the judges to take the city of Toronto and divide it, as in their judgment seems right, into the number of constituencies the Bill assigns to that city.

Mr. MACLEAN. Can the judges give to West Toronto two members and East Toronto only one?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. They will be asked to give five separate seats.

Mr. MULLOCK.

Mr. MACLEAN. That is the very point I wished to be informed upon.

Mr. CLARKE. Will the judges be asked to divide the constituencies of Ottawa and Hamilton and make two in each?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I have explained that the Government, on this occasion, is not dealing with the whole province, but only seeking to deal with the more glaring abuses of the Gerrymander Acts; but if the Bill does not go far enough to satisfy hon. gentlemen opposite, perhaps the Government will be prepared to advance it a stage.

Mr. McNEILL. Would the hon. gentleman say whether it is to be left to the judges to determine whether they will hear evidence or not, or whether they are to be precluded from hearing evidence?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The Bill contains all the necessary provisions to guide the judges. The subject, no doubt, will be discussed fully in Parliament, and if the arguments are sufficiently cogent to suggest any wiser course, no doubt a wiser course will be adopted.

Mr. McNEILL. What is the course intended by the Bill?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I refer my hon. friend to the measure.

Mr. McNEILL. I am asking for an explanation, and I am sure the hon. gentleman does not want to be discourteous. He says that if some wiser course is suggested, such course may be adopted. But I want to know what the course now provided is. Are the judges to determine, under the Bill as my hon. friend understands it, and which he is supposed to be explaining, whether they will admit evidence or not, or are they precluded from admitting the evidence?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I refer the hon. gentleman to subsection 2 of section 2 of the Bill:

The letters patent appointing the commissioners shall direct them, in making the divisions, to consider the distribution of population according to the latest census of Canada, the public convenience, and such divisions as appear to them best calculated to do substantial justice.

Mr. McNEILL. Are they to take evidence in reference to that or not?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The clause of the Bill contains their instructions and they will interpret it.

Mr. McNEILL. What is the intention in the mind of my hon. friend who has charge of the Bill?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. My intention would not override any provision of the measure.

Mr. McNEILL. What I want to know is, what, according to the hon. gentleman who is explaining the measure, is its intention with regard to this matter?

Mr. FOSTER. Let some one else take hold of the Bill.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I desire, Mr. Speaker, to continue my remarks.

Mr. McNEILL. My hon. friend refuses to give the explanation.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I refer the hon. gentleman to the Bill. I next come to Prince Edward Island. The Bill restores the county lines to the province of Prince Edward Island. That island is entitled to five members, and the counties have, until very lately, been represented each by two. A change was made. Portions of one county were detached and given to another, and the number of members reduced from six to five. It is now proposed to restore to each county those portions that municipally belong to it, and to give representation accordingly—one to King's, which has the smallest population, and two each to the other counties, whose population exceeds that of King's.

Mr. MARTIN. Is it intended to divide the counties of Prince and King's?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It is not intended to divide the counties of Prince and King's into two separate constituencies, but to adhere to the practice which had so long obtained since confederation of allowing each county to vote as one constituency, sending two members each.

Mr. MARTIN. Why is the principle of dividing the constituencies established for Ontario and not for Prince Edward Island?

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The measure endeavours to disturb as little as possible the arrangements that have obtained in each province, from confederation down, and if the people of Prince Edward Island has had one system of voting and the people of another province another system of voting, we desire as little as possible to interfere with those customs which the people have become accustomed to.

Mr. FOSTER. The Bill is founded on custom now.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It is adapted to consult the convenience of the people.

Mr. MARTIN. Will the hon. Minister—

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I understand the hon. Minister to have declared that he would decline to be interrupted.

Mr. WALLACE. On the contrary, he is just delighted, Mr. Speaker, to have questions put to him.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. With these remarks I beg to move the second reading of the Bill.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER (Cape Breton). After listening attentively to the speech with which the hon. Postmaster General (Mr. Mulock) has favoured the House, I am at a loss to know why he prefaced his remarks with an apology and a tendering of his sympathy to the House for his absence when the Bill was introduced, so that the duty of introducing and explaining the Bill devolved upon the Premier. When the hon. gentleman prefaced his remarks with that statement, I supposed he was going to deliver an able, clear exposition of this measure, which he found the Premier had not understood. The Prime Minister, it would appear, had taken his place, unfortunately, in the hon. gentleman's absence, but had lamentably failed in doing justice to this measure. We all listened with great interest to hear the words of wisdom which should fall from his lips in explanation of this measure, which the Prime Minister was quite unable to explain. But I think that those who have heard the latter part of the hon. gentleman's speech, must have come to the conclusion that he himself knew little or nothing about the Bill. When asked the commonest, simplest and most pertinent questions, as to what was intended by the Bill, he answered: I must refer you to the Bill. With the hon. gentleman, it was the Bill, the whole Bill, and nothing but the Bill. It was not the William that was equal to the occasion, but the Bill.

Now, I may say at the outset, that, in one respect, the House was indebted to the hon. gentleman. He has certainly exhibited a frankness which the Prime Minister failed to exhibit, when he introduced this measure. The First Minister, with the great plausibility which he possesses, undertook to explain that this was a very innocuous measure, intended to correct some little inadvertencies of no very great import. But the Postmaster General has thrown off the disguise, and tells the House and the country that this Bill means one thing, and one thing only—to strengthen the hands of the Liberal party before they venture to appeal to the people. That is the beginning and the end; that is the whole story. The hon. gentleman clearly confesses that he is afraid, and the Government of which he is a member are afraid, to face the popular verdict. I am not at all surprised at that, having learned, as they have, the feeling of this country, from one end of it to the other, in regard to the measures they have put before this House. I am not surprised that they have to come to the conclusion that there was one thing, and one thing only, that was of great importance to Canada, and that was the salvation of this Government. Under the law and constitution of the country, they are compelled to go back to the electors, from whom they received power, and ask them for a renewal of their term of office. They find that it would be hopeless, in view of the position they have taken, in view of the measures they have attempted and have succeeded in forcing through this House, for them to challenge the independent verdict of the country. They could not do so with any hope of success. Consequently the hon. gentleman has thrown off the mask to-day, and told us that this Bill means one thing, and one thing alone. There is no regard for distribution of population. The hon. gentleman tells us the question of representation by population was a big one, when it was one between Ontario and Quebec, when the Liberal party in the province of Ontario were demanding, in thunder tones, that their province should have greater weight and influence by being allowed representation according to its population. But, he said, it was a provincial question. Does not the hon. gentleman see that every argument, every word, that George Brown ever uttered in defence and support of the principle of representation by population, applies, and forcibly applies, to the mode in which that representation shall be distributed in the various provinces? Does not the hon. gentleman see that the whole story of representation by population is a farce, if the Government can so dispose of the population so as to prevent the fair and independent verdict of the country being given by the voice of the great body of the people? There is no doubt that, under the system of county boundaries and arrangements that have long existed, a certain difficulty arises in establishing a hard-and-fast line of rigid adherence to the unit of population. The right hon. First Minister, when he introduced the Bill, read a long portion of a speech of the Right Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald on the importance of county boundaries. But he forgot that Sir John had delivered himself afterwards, when he had had ten years' more experience of public life, in 1882, when he qualified largely the views originally presented by him in regard to the great importance of county boundaries, and showed that the question of population must be taken into consideration, in order to give the people a fair and equal voice in the representation of the country. Every person knows that, in certain sections of the country, there are cases that affect the views and sentiments of the people that do not prevail in other sections; and the only way by which you can get a fair and dispassionate verdict given by the people is, without disturbing the county boundaries unnecessarily, without doing any violence to these that can be avoided, to so arrange it that the unit of population shall be maintained as nearly as possible, avoiding the disturbance that would follow a too close adherence either to the county boundaries on one side, or to the unit of population on the other. But the hon. gentleman started out by saying, that this Bill is intended to correct the unfairness practised in 1882 by what he calls the Gerrymander Bill. He has denounced, in the strongest terms, the violence that was done by that Bill to the county boundaries. He has discoursed on that subject very forcibly and very fully. I ask the hon. gentleman whether he is a supporter of the Liberal Government of Ontario.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER.

Mr. McMULLEN. Two wrongs do not make a right.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. But I thought that Liberals never did wrong at any time, under any circumstances—I thought that was the doctrine of Liberalism. I say, that every word that the hon. gentleman has said of the Gerrymander Bill—as he calls it—the Redistribution Bill of 1882, applies with tenfold force to the province of Ontario, as gerrymandered by Sir Oliver Mowat. And yet Sir Oliver Mowat has not only never failed to have the hon. gentleman's hearty support in all these measures that were taken for the purpose, avowedly, admittedly, of striking down his opponents and increasing the power of the Liberal party in Ontario—doing the grossest violence to county boundaries, and everything that the hon. gentleman has spoken of as so important—but he was brought down here by the Premier to become a member of the Liberal Government here. By supporting the Ontario Government, these hon. gentlemen have adopted the policy propounded by Sir Oliver Mowat, and have given their imprimatur to the most extravagant act of gerrymanderism that has ever been committed within the bounds of Canada. I would recommend the hon. gentleman, and I would recommend the Government, to abandon this pretext of following the county boundaries, and to acknowledge that the only principle underlying this measure, the only principle which they know anything about, is the great cardinal principle of obtaining, by means fair or unfair, such advantage as will enable them to strangle certain constituencies in Canada, when they have to appeal again to the electorate. That is the only principle in this matter.

Now, Sir, the hon. gentleman says they are very anxious to have a fair measure. Is this a fair measure that has been laid upon the Table of this House? So gross was its unfairness that the hon. gentleman and his colleagues have been compelled to change it already, because they could not face a second reading of this Bill until they had admitted its gross unfairness. Is that a fair Bill that allows a Conservative district, with 200,000, as this Bill did allow them when introduced, to elect only four members to this House, while it gives to districts containing a population of 200,000, supposed to contain a Grit majority, power to return ten members to this House? Within the four corners of this Bill you find 200,000 constituents, avowedly Conservatives, held down to four members, and you find districts containing a population of 200,000 allowed to send ten members to this House. Is that fair? Is there an hon. gentleman on the other side of the House who will say that that is a legitimate measure?

I shall only refer briefly to the observations made by an hon. gentleman who sat down after telling the House that he did not know anything about the Bill, and that we would have to read it for ourselves; he did not know what the judges would consider it their duty to do under this Bill, whether they would hold a court, whether they would take testimony pro and con, and whether they would sit in secret. But this is a vital question, and touches the foundation of this measure. Yet the hon. gentleman admitted that he did not know anything about it, and I suppose we shall have to retain a lawyer who will be able to construe the Bill for us in such a way that we may find out what it means.

Now, Sir, I may say that if this Gerrymander Bill of 1882 was as frightful a measure as the hon. gentleman has intimated, the people of Canada have great reason for thanking God that that Bill was put upon the statute-book. If the Conservative party owed to that Bill the power under which they have governed this country since 1882, down to three years ago, no persons ought to be so thankful as the hon. gentlemen opposite. Suppose this Bill of 1882 had not been passed in the form in which it was passed, and suppose these gentlemen opposite had come into power, where would Canada be to-day? Why, Sir, the first thing that would have happened the National Policy, the life-blood of this country, that which they now admit is the great source of life and vitality for this country, would have been swept away. Where would preferential trade have been, the pretense which has covered the breasts of hon. gentlemen opposite with decorations? There would have been no preferential trade. We would have been taking a tariff made at Washington against England, and the attitude of Canada would have been that which was described by the Hon. Edward Blake in the "Times" newspaper, at the heart of the Empire, who declared that the policy of the hon. gentlemen opposite contained the germs of commercial subjugation to the United States, soon to be followed up by the political disintegration of our country and our absorption by the United States of America. If the Bill of 1882 had not been passed, where would the Canadian Pacific Railway have been, with its 7,000 miles of railway and branch lines owned or leased, covering this country? It would have been wiped out by hon. gentlemen opposite, who, under their resolution tabled only two years before 1882, declared that the work ought to stop at the foot of the Rocky Mountains, and who had never dreamed in their wildest imaginations of connecting the city of Ottawa, the seat of Government, with Fort Garry, now the city of Winnipeg. I say that if the hon. gentleman has shown that Canada owes to that Bill what he says it does, in keeping the Liberal party out of power and maintaining in power the Conservative party, which has made Canada what it is to-day, and if, as he says, that was an unfair measure, then unfairness was never used more wisely and in the best interests of any country than was that measure.

Now, Sir, the hon. gentleman has admitted that political gain is the object. If ever the Minister of Justice committed an act that to the end of time will stamp him as a narrow-minded man, blinded by personal passion and prejudice, he committed it when he drafted this Bill for the purpose of striking down a man whom the electors of Bothwell had declared that they considered a better man than himself. I say that all through this measure, whether we consider its treatment of the hon. member for North Bruce (Mr. McNeill)—

Mr. GIBSON. You read him out of the party.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER—who here and now I recognize and always recognized, as an ornament to this House. I read him out of the party—why did I read him out of the party? Why, Sir, if hon. gentlemen opposite knew what the word gratitude means, the last man they would touch is the hon. member for North Bruce. The last men they would touch are the hon. members for East York (Mr. Maclean) and West York (Mr. Wallace), for they owe their positions in this House to-day to the support that they received from these gentlemen on a very vital and important measure. I say, therefore, that if ever black ingratitude stamped a measure that emanated from any Government in the world, it stamps this measure by which the hon. gentlemen opposite endeavour to strike down men to whose support they owe their position on the Treasury benches to-day. Although I think these hon. gentlemen who are aimed at were mistaken in the course they took, I recognize that they were actuated by the highest and most conscientious motives. And now the Government endeavour to strike down these men by abusing the power that they believe they possess, but which I do not believe they possess; and I will tell the House before I sit down why I do not believe they possess the power to put so infamous and so unconstitutional a measure as this upon the statute-book of Canada. The hon. gentleman gloats fiendishly over striking down the hon. member for North Bruce (Mr. McNeill), as he thinks he is doing; he gloats fiendishly over striking down the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Clancy). But it is not done yet, and I do not believe it will be done. Before I sit down I shall show the unconstitutionality of this infamous Act, and that the right hon. Prime Minister has read himself out of court on the constitutional question. I shall expose the hollow and empty pretenses by which the right hon. gentleman has endeavoured to bolster up the constitutionality of this measure, and which the hon. Postmaster General wisely avoids, because, I suppose, he knew that a measure such as this never was contemplated by the Act of confederation, and that it was a violation of the spirit and sentiment that underlies the whole of that Act. They have brought in this Act, this unconstitutional, this unfair, this unjust measure for the avowed purpose of strengthening their hands against an outraged electorate in this country. But I believe that there is independent sentiment enough in the great independent electorate of the country to rise in its might and say that a Government who have no means, no measures, nothing that they can show that is calculated to promote the public interest, who are driven to the miserable expedient of cutting and carving the constituencies so as to enable 200,000 Liberal voters to send to Parliament ten members, while 200,000 Conservative voters are only able to send four members—that a Government that are reduced to such an extremity as that are unworthy of the support of independent free men. The independent men, and they are numbered by thousands and by tens of thousands to-day, who believed what these gentlemen declared, solemnly, in this House and on every hustings in this country, were their principles which, when they got into power they would maintain, face to face as these hon. gentlemen are, with every promise violated, with every principle that they had propounded trampled under foot—these independent men, by tens and hundreds of thousands will say: We are not to be dragged at the heels of a Government or of a party that, having violated every principle and being unable to show anything they can do for the country in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine, come down to Parliament and say, there is only one measure that we put in the mouth of the Governor General to submit to Parliament, and it is a measure to strengthen the hands of the Liberal party by cutting up constituencies in violation of the constitution of the country.

Mr. TAYLOR. They are constitutional wreckers.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. My hon. friend (Mr. Taylor) says that they are constitutional wreckers. They are a destructive party. There are two parties. Men and parties are moulded upon two great principles. The party that accomplishes anything for the country are a constructive party. The Conservative party from the first hour of the birth of Canada, thirty-two years ago, down to this hour, have proved that they were the constructive party. Measure after measure, calculated to aid, to expand, to unite, to consolidate, to develop and to build up a great nation on this northern half of North America, has come from that party, and it is due to those measures that hon. gentlemen opposite are enabled to boast of the grandeur and greatness of Canada to-day. We can point to-day to the great constructive policy of the Conservative party which have brought forward every measure—I say it without hesitation—every measure that has made Canada great, progressive and prosperous, and we not only brought them forward, but we fought them through the Parliament of Canada and put them on the statute-book despite all the power, all the influence and all the opposition that hon. gentlemen could offer to them, and by which we have built up here in Canada an edifice and a monument that every Canadian may look upon with just pride and may congratulate himself that the Liberal-Conservative party had the desire and had the power not only to conceive these great measures, that have accomplished so much for Canada, but to carry them out, to make them law, and to put them into successful operation despite all the opposition that hon. gentlemen could offer. I pity them; I am sorry that the success of the Liberal-Conservative party has been so great that, when, with the assembled wisdom of the present Government, they sat down in Council to conceive what great measure should be inaugurated in this last year of the 19th century, when they asked themselves: What great measure is it that we should put before the Parliament of Canada, and, when, after they had scanned the country, after they had searched the country from end to end, after they had looked it over from the east to the west and from the north to the south, they were driven to the humiliating confession that everything had been done, that nothing had been left for them to do except to introduce a Gerrymander Bill. That Bill, and that Bill alone, will be handed down for all time to come as the great effort of the assembled wisdom of the great Liberal Government and party in this year of our Lord to signalize what the last year of the century could accomplish, a Gerrymander Bill, nothing more, nothing less. When it comes before this House the hon. Postmaster General who undertakes to explain it to the House, after having admitted that the object of the Bill is undisguisedly to strengthen the Liberals and to break down the strength of Conservative sentiment in this House and this country, closes by declaring that, practically, they will have to retain a lawyer to enable the House to know what the clauses mean as he himself is unable to explain them. But the hon. Postmaster

Sir CHARLES TUPPER.

General tells us, and I think he has followed the right hon. Minister in that respect, that Quebec is untouched. Why is Quebec untouched? Was there no room after the Act of 1882? These hon. gentlemen have intimated that they would not attempt any alteration in that province except of a most insignificant character. In this they pay a tribute to the effect of the Act of 1882 so far as that province is concerned. When we come to Prince Edward Island the hon. gentleman says they wanted to go back to the former state of things where two counties would return two men each and the other one, because it would leave county boundaries untouched. The hon. member for West Toronto (Mr. Clarke), asked a very pertinent question: Why should you leave Hamilton with two members and Ottawa with two members and take away two members from West Toronto and divide them into single constituencies? The hon. gentleman (Mr. Mulock) does not seem to know whether that would be the effect of the Bill or not; but, undoubtedly, although I am not a lawyer, I believe, that is the effect of the Bill. He is asked the question: Why do you do that? Oh, well, he says, because we do not want to disturb the state of things that existed a long time ago. What has he to say as to St. John, N.B.? Why is he disturbing the condition of things in St. John, N.B., which existed for a century, for the last hundred years? The city and county of St. John have always elected two members, one for the city, and those having votes in the city voted also for the member for the county. Has anybody ever complained of that? Why, Sir, the secret is simply this: The right hon. gentleman (Sir Wilfrid Laurier), or his mentor in this matter, who is an astute authority on everything like gerrymandering and arranging elections, says to him: The Liberal party will have a better chance if you separate the city from the county; and so, in order to give the Liberal party a better chance, a condition of things which has existed for a century is to be swept away and the Liberal party strengthened. I do not think it will be necessary for me to waste any more time with the remarks which fell from the Postmaster General in introducing this Bill. Notwithstanding that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Mulock) has slightly referred to the manner in which the Bill was introduced by the Prime Minister, I must be permitted to go back and to pay some attention to the remarks made by the right hon. gentleman on that occasion. I do not think the right hon. gentleman was at all happy. He introduced the Bill, as he always does, with such an extremely bland and pleasant manner that you would suppose it was one of the most innocuous things it was possible to conceive, and that all you had to do was to fall down and worship it as being of the most charming, fair and excellent character. But when I ventured to make a few observations in relation to the Bill, my right hon. friend, unfortunately for himself, lost his temper and did not do himself quite justice. In reference to myself he made some very extravagant statements, and he charged me with having been guilty of making a speech which contained nothing but "Billingsgate," or abuse. I do not think the right hon. gentleman knows what "Billingsgate" is, for if he did he would not apply the term to anything that I had said.

The PRIME MINISTER. I have sat long enough in this House to understand something about it.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I had said nothing except to give a little resume of the measures which the Government of the right hon. gentleman introduced into this House, and I drew the attention of the House perhaps in somewhat strong terms, to the opinion I entertained and which I believe the country entertained with reference to these measures. That is not Billingsgate. "Billingsgate" is using low, vulgar language. I ought to know something about it as I have the honour to be a fishmonger; being a member of the Fishmongers' Guild, which is the only one of those old English guilds which really performs important services for the Government of England to-day. The right hon. gentleman pays a very poor compliment to the measures he and his Government have forced through this House, if he says that a simple reference to them is "Billingsgate." I said nothing more than to characterize the measures of the Government as they should be characterized, and I leave it to the right hon. gentleman to reconcile it to himself whether the term "Billingsgate" is properly applicable to those measures with which he has been so closely connected.

But, Sir, I did challenge the constitutionality of this Bill, and I drew the attention of the Premier to the fact, that he closed his speech without having made any reference to the authority upon which he ventured, in the year 1899, to bring forward a redistribution measure. I told the right hon. gentleman what he well knew, that he would search the records of the Parliament of Canada in vain to find any such Act passed at such a time, and, for the sufficient reason that the constitution of the country indicates in plain and unmistakable terms, not only the time, but the only time that was proper for a redistribution Bill. Could anything be more illustrative of the force and wisdom of the constitution of the country, which provides that such a measure as this should only be enacted immediately after the close of each decennial census; could anything better illustrate that than the position in which the Postmaster General found himself to-day. In the year 1899 he is explaining a Bill that is to settle the redistribution of seats in the Parliament of Canada, and when he is quoting the population of constituencies and is asked what population he is referring to, his answer is: Oh, to the population in the census of 1891. He is asked again: Are you not aware that in various sections of the country there has been an overwhelming change since then, that that which might be proper after the census of 1891, has ceased to be so in 1899, because there has been such unexampled progress made in many sections of the country as to render absolutely absurd any comparison founded upon the census of 1891; and the hon. gentleman (Mr. Mulock) replied: The judges have got to go back to 1891; yes, Mr. Speaker, the judges have to become antiquaries. They cannot take cognizance of the condition of the country to-day, but they must act on the population of the country in 1891, and only on that. Such a proposition has only to be stated to show the utter absurdity of it, and to show the wisdom of the Imperial Act which gives us our constitution, under which a redistribution is to be made only after each decennial census. It has always been recognized that the only time such a measure should be dealt with by the Parliament of Canada was after the decennial census. Section 51 of the British North America Act says:

On the completion of the census in the year 1871, and of each subsequent decennial census, the representation of the four provinces shall be readjusted by such authority and in such a manner and at such a time as the Parliament of Canada from time to time provides.

There is an absolute direction that this measure shall take place after the decennial census, and then to show in the most emphatic manner that then and then only could such a measure be dealt with. It is said in section 92, in reference to the exclusive powers of the provincial legislatures:

In each province the legislature may exclusively make laws in relation to matters coming within the class of subjects next hereinafter enumerated, that is to say: "The amendment from time to time, notwithstanding anything in this Act, of the constitution of the province, except as regards the office of lieutenant governor."

The British North America Act is not contented with stating that the only time provided for a redistribution Act is after the decennial census; not satisfied with that, you have on the face of the same Act, a broad distinction drawn between the Dominion of Canada and the various provinces by saying that the provinces can pass a Bill of this kind at any time. It would be difficult to find anything more conclusive as to that.

Mr. BRITTON. Does the hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) think, then, that the Act that was passed in 1893 to amend the Act to readjust the representation of the House of Commons was unconstitutional?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I have read to the hon. gentleman, and, if he is a lawyer, as I believe he is, and a very able one, he ought to be able to understand this:

Sir CHARLES TUPPER.

On the completion of the census in the year 1871, and of each subsequent decennial census, the representation of the four provinces shall be readjusted by such authority, in such a manner, and from such a time as the Parliament of Canada from time to time provides.

I think that answers the question my hon. friend asks.

Mr. BRITTON. I do not think that answers it at all, because that provides simply for readjusting the representation as between the different provinces. That is a very different thing from determining the limits of the electoral divisions in any one province; and the Act I refer to seems to me no more constitutional than the Act now proposed, because that Act did change the boundaries of a great many constituencies. I will send the book over to the hon. gentleman.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will deal with that, as the hon. gentleman will see, before I sit down, because it will follow on the argument I am now addressing to the First Minister on this very important question. I addressed the right hon. gentleman on that point, and called his attention to the fact that he had addressed the House on the Redistribution Bill, and, although he knew very well that the right to pass any such measure was challenged by the press all over this country, except after a decennial census, he had sat down without any reference to the authority under which this Bill was proposed. The hon. gentleman undertook afterwards to deal with that question, and said—I read from "Hansard":

He asked me if we have power to bring in such a measure, since there has been no census. I answer in words which I hope he will adopt, that, according to the precedents laid down on the floor of this House more than once, we have that power. Redistributions of constituencies have taken place under similar circumstances not only after a census, but during a session when there had been no census. I would call to the hon. gentleman's attention the fact that in 1883 or in 1885, Parliament, at the suggestion of a Conservative Government, brought in a measure to redistribute the counties of Argen-teuil and Terrebonne. One or two years later the Government introduced a Bill to reconstitute the constituencies of Terrebonne and Montcalm. If that can be done for one, it can be done for many. There is our power.

There is the hon. gentleman's argument. It is delightfully indefinite. He says, 1883 or 1885. The hon. gentleman, bringing in a Bill to redistribute the constituencies, contrary to what he knows to be the strong sentiment and opinion of a large section of the country—I am inclined to think that the whole of it, except where extreme partisan necessity indicates a divergence from it—the hon. gentleman, knowing that, had taken so little pains to ascertain whether he had any authority or power to do so, that he absolutely referred me to Acts of 1883 or 1885 in which, he said, it had been done. There are no such Acts in 1883 or in 1885. The hon. gentleman will search, as I have done, in vain, to find any such Acts, giving any such authority or power.

The PRIME MINISTER. Will the hon. gentleman allow me? I stand corrected. I meant 1893. I had not supposed that the question of power would be challenged, in view of the precedents already introduced in this House. But my hon. friend from Kingston (Mr. Britton) has just called the attention of the hon. leader of the Opposition to the Act of 1893, which recast the Act of the year before in several particulars, four or five at least. In regard to the county of Terrebonne, I meant to refer to the Act of 1869, 32-33 Victoria, which took the township of Doncaster from the county of Montcalm and put it in the county of Terrebonne.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The right hon. leader of the Government and the hon. member for Kingston will find that that does not relieve them from the difficulty in the slightest degree; and I think I shall be able, I do not say to convert them, but to convince them that they are dancing on air, and have no foundation whatever under them, in reference to this matter. But the Prime Minister, when the hon. member for Beauharnois (Mr. Bergeron) referred to the matter, went on to say:

I not only answered it, but I answered it most effectively by quoting your own precedents. I quoted the Bills of 27-28 Victoria, and 32-33 Victoria, where the limits of the counties of Terrebonne, Montcalm and Argenteuil were reorganized by this Parliament.

Why, Sir, was anything ever more absurd? The authorities which the hon. gentleman quoted were Acts passed before the Parliament of Canada was organized.

The PRIME MINISTER. No, no. The Act of 32-33 Victoria was passed in 1869.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The hon. gentleman said the Acts of 27-28 Victoria and 32-33 Victoria, both passed before the Parliament of Canada had any existence.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend is altogether wrong. The Act of 32-33 Victoria was passed in 1869, and here it is.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will give the hon. gentleman my authority for the statement I have made. The first Representation Bill passed was 35 Victoria, chapter 13, which was passed in 1872.

The PRIME MINISTER. Pardon me. My hon. friend is wrong. The first Bill is 32-33 Victoria, chapter 46, an Act to detach the township of Doncaster from the county of Montcalm, and to attach it to the county of Terrebonne for electoral purposes.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will come to that in a moment.

Mr. LANDERKIN. Next week.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. My hon. friend is very happy, and I am glad to see that he is enjoying himself; but, if he will possess his soul in patience, I will give him a little subject for contemplation before I take my seat, as I know that my hon. friend, with all his geniality, is open to conviction, and I will address my argument to him with confidence that, in the course of time, he will be over here.

Mr. LANDERKIN. I will listen patiently.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The second Readjustment Bill was passed in 1882, 45 Victoria, chapter 3. In 1887 it was amended by 50-51 Victoria, chapter 4.

The PRIME MINISTER. Amended? Is it possible? I cannot believe it.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will tell my hon. friend how it was amended. He made a contract, involving about $5,000,000, and, when the original contract was forced out of the hands of the Government and laid on the Table of the House, it was found to contain the word "east," where "west" should have been found, and, consequently, the whole thing was an utter absurdity. That contract was taken out of the House by the Minister of Railways, and amended, and "west" put where "east" was; otherwise, it would have been perfect nonsense. I want to ask my hon. friend, if a mistake is made in any Act, whether it has reference to a contract or a redistribution of seats, whether he thinks that a clerical error like that should not be corrected.

The PRIME MINISTER. Certainly. That is what we want to do: we want to correct mistakes.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I hope my hon. friend is satisfied with his position on that question. The Act of 1887 was to correct clerical errors—first, to make the number of members mentioned in the second section of the Act of 1882, as revised, include the members from the North-west Territories, and second, to declare that every county, township, village, &c., shall be as it stood prior to the bringing into force of the revised statutes. I may say, that in 1887 the Right Hon. Sir John Thompson, then Mr. Thompson, moved for leave to introduce Bill No. 42, to amend the Representation Act. He said ("Hansard," 1887, page 889):

The Representation Act, as published in the Revised Statutes, continues the old enactment that the House shall consist of 211 members, and a subsequent chapter deals with the representation in the North-west Territories; but it is proper that the second section should be amended to make it conform with the present number of members of the House. There is also a difficulty arising from the fact that, since the representation in the House was last distributed, the boundaries of some municipalities have changed, and, therefore, if the Act reads as it now does, from the day the Revised Statutes were brought into force, the boundaries of some of the constituencies would be different from those boundaries as established by the Act of 1882. The Bill contains a short clause declaring that the meaning of the Representation Act is that every county, town, township, village or other territorial division, shall be as it stood prior to the bringing into force of the Revised Statutes.

The amendment was caused by the Revised Statutes not having taken sufficient notice of the Redistribution Bill. On that occasion the Right Hon. Sir John Macdonald, for whom the right hon. Prime Minister has great respect, as every man in this country now has, whatever he may have professed to have had before, said ("Hansard" of 1887, page 840):

I think the principle was set early in our legislation that there should be no readjustment of the constituencies,—

Mark that. The hon. gentleman has quoted a column of Sir John Macdonald's speech, as being the highest authority he could offer to this House.

I think the principle was set early in our legislation that there should be no readjustment of the constituencies, either in regard to the boundaries or otherwise, except every ten years, after the taking of the census, and I think it would really be well if we should adhere to that rule. Occasionally, by the addition of a rural portion of a county to a town, there may be a little inconvenience, but it would be much better that that little inconvenience should be borne than that we should have little Bills brought in on every alteration of the bounds of the constituencies for electoral purposes. We would have continual taunts of gerrymandering thrown across the floor. We had better leave the matter as it is, so that the electoral districts shall remain both as to boundaries and otherwise as they are until the next readjustment. Depend upon it, we would bring upon ourselves a great deal of trouble and a great many objections from both sides of the House by making any other alterations in the boundaries of constituencies, because if the argument of convenience is adopted in one case, that argument will apply in another, and various reasons will be given why it is convenient to alter the boundaries of constituencies. The boundary of a constituency should not be altered except once in ten years.

That is the opinion of an hon. gentleman who commands to-day the undivided confidence of the people of this country. In the committee, the late Sir John Thompson said ("Hansard," 1887, page 1127):

The object is to correct a clerical error in the Revised Statutes. Notwithstanding the addition made of the four members for the North-west, under the Act of last session, the Representation Act was carried forward into the Revised Statutes with the word "211." The object of section 2 is to preserve the Representation Acts as they existed prior to the Revised Statutes. Of course the Revised Statutes repealed the previous legislation. It is not intended that the boundaries, as previously established, shall be changed.

While on that subject, I may say, as the late Sir John Thompson has been referred to also in this connection, that he moved for leave, in 1893, to introduce a Bill—and I now call the attention of my hon. friend from Kingston (Mr. Britton) to this, as I promised to answer before I sat down, the very pertinent question he put me. Here is the explanation given by Sir John Thompson, when he moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 42) to amend the Representation Act:

This is a short Bill which I introduce for the purpose of amending the Representation Act of last session in certain particulars which are of a clerical character, and which merely relate to the correction of the boundaries, without making any change in any of the principles on which the Act was founded.

Mr. BRITTON. The question I asked the hon. gentleman was with reference to 1893.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. This is the Bill of 1893, and this is what Sir John Thompson said in introducing it.

Mr. BRITTON. If that is so, then it is a most unfortunate caption to the Bill, because the title is "An Act to readjust the Representation of the House of Commons."

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am now giving my hon. friend his answer. In the words of the man most able to answer him, and that is Sir John Thompson, who introduced the Bill, and who referred to the contents and not to the title. Sir John Thompson said:

The first section is more accurately to define the boundary lines of the electoral district of Nipissing. It enumerates the parishes and gives the boundaries with more technical accuracy. The second section is to correct an error in respect to the city of Ottawa. While the Bill was in committee the committee adopted a section stating that the electoral district of the city of Ottawa should consist of the city of Ottawa, &c., &c., the limits of which had been changed since the passage of the previous Redistribution Act; but the law clerk, in placing the section, placed it as a paragraph to a section which provided that the places thereafter mentioned should return one representative.

A purely clerical error, under which the city of Ottawa could elect but one representative. And just as you would change west to east or east to west, if found to be a clerical error, you correct a clerical error of that kind.

This would have had the effect of depriving the city of Ottawa of one of its members. Therefore, we provided that the city of Ottawa shall consist of the city of Ottawa, except that part thereof known as New Edinburgh, and shall return two members. Then there is the amendment substituting the word "east" for the word "west," in order to correct an error in respect of the boundary of one of the new districts of the county of Ottawa. In the next section we correct a mistake in respect to the electoral district of Hochelaga, providing that it shall consist of the towns of Ste. Cunégonde, St. Henri and Côte St. Antoine and St. Gabriel ward of the city of Montreal. The Act of last session describes Côte St. Antoine and St. Gabriel as being wards of the city of Montreal, whereas St. Gabriel only is such. There was a parish left out in the description of Rouville, and also in that of the electoral district of Bagot, and in Provencher some of the rural municipalities were left unenumerated.

Mr. LAURIER. Will the hon. gentleman explain what is the technical error which he intends to correct by his amendment in the district of Nipissing?

Sir JOHN THOMPSON. I can describe it in a general way by saying that the description in the Act of last session did not suit the amended boundaries of the province of Ontario.

That was the sole comment, I believe, made by the right hon. leader of the Government in reference to a Bill which was accepted, as my hon. friend from Kingston will see, not only by the Opposition, but by the whole House as a measure intended purely to correct clerical errors, and upon which no question should arise.

It being Six o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

THIRD READING.

Bill (No. 4) to incorporate the Canada Plate Glass Assurance Company.—(Mr. Monk.)

QUEBEC RAILWAY, LIGHT AND POWER COMPANY.

House resolved itself in committee on Bill (No. 84) respecting the Quebec, Montmorency and Charlevoix Railway Company, and to change its name to "The Quebec Railway, Light and Power Company.—(Mr. Carroll.)

(In the Committee.)

Mr. TISDALE. I understand that all this Bill, except part of section 13 was passed. In the absence of the hon. member for Kamouraska (Mr. Carroll), who has charge of the Bill, I am instructed by the promoters to agree to the striking out from the schedule of all after the words after "say" on the 9th page to the words "9266" on the 37th page.

Mr. SPROULE. What does that mean?

Mr. TISDALE. It is simply descriptions of property in the deed, and these were objected to by some hon. members as loading the statute unnecessarily.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I take it that the amendment moved by the hon. gentleman from Simcoe (Mr. Tisdale) is to the same effect as the amendment I moved on Wednesday night. I would like to read a letter addressed by the solicitor of the company to the Law Clerk of the House:

The amendments proposed by Mr. Sutherland on Wednesday night in Committee of the Whole to clause 13 and to the schedule "B," are satisfactory to the company and are consented to.

(Sgd.) A. FERGUSON,

For the Company.

As the member in charge of the Bill was not present I did not like to press it then, though I had been informed that it was satisfactory. I suppose there will be no further objection to the amendment I moved on Wednesday—to add the words "in part" in the 5th line of section 13 after the words "set out," instead of inserting the whole schedule, and strike out some 30 pages of the schedule.

Mr. TISDALE. I thought the words "in part" were inserted before.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. Yes, they are inserted.

Mr. BAIN. When that had been done objection was taken that the promoter was not present, and we did not strike out all these pages.

Bill, as amended, reported, and read the third time and passed.

NIAGARA, ST. CATHARINES AND TORONTO RAILWAY.

House proceeded to consider the proposed motion of Mr. Calvert that Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair for House in committee on Bill (No. 69) an Act to incorporate the Niagara and St. Catharines and Toronto Railway Company, and the motion of Mr. Landerkin in amendment thereto, that the Bill be referred back to the Committee on Railways and Canals for further consideration.

Amendment negatived.

Mr. W. GIBSON (Welland). Mr. Speaker, before you leave the Chair, I think it is only right that I should offer some explanation to the committee why I supported the amendment of the hon. member for South Grey (Mr. Landerkin). I am quite sure it could not have been pointed out to the committee, when this Bill was under discussion, that the city of St. Catharines gave to this railway $80,000, and this House proposes to give effect to legislation that will place in the hands of the promoters of this railway the power to bond the road to the extent of $25,000 a mile. As was pointed out the other night by the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen), this railway was bought in for a sum equal to something between $35,000 and $37,000. While I have no objection to the legislation being given to incorporate the company, I think that some limitation should be placed upon the powers given them. In the first place, without going to the expense of building another inch of this railway, under section 9 of the Bill, the company:

May issue bonds, debentures or other securities to the extent of $25,000 per mile of its railway and branches ; but such bonds, debentures and other securities may be issued only in proportion to the length of railway constructed or under contract to be constructed.

The railway as already constructed is about twelve miles in length, and, if this Bill is agreed upon by this Parliament, we will be placing in the hands of the gentlemen who are now seeking incorporation, $300,000, which will represent a property that cost them something like $35,000 or $40,000. I think I would be doing an injustice to the county that sends me here, and particularly to the city of St. Catharines, which promoted the incorporation of this railway at the inception of the undertaking, if I did not ask this House not to give unconditional powers to these incorporators to bond the twelve miles of railway already built, and place in the hands of these gentlemen $300,000 of the people's money. Even if these gentlemen were not successful in realizing on the bonds to the extent of the par value of $300,000—suppose we say that they can only get 50 cents on the dollar—we will be then placing in their hands $150,000, a sum which would represent a property that they acquired for $35,000. My reason, and I think a reason should be given to the House for asking that this Bill be referred back to the committee, is that some provision may be made by which protection can be given to the city of St. Catharines, and I would suggest that a condition be imposed upon the incorporators by which $80,000 of the bonds of this company should be made payable to the order of the city treasurer of St. Catharines. When we have placed that amount to the order of the treasurer of St. Catharines ; if the railway were extended further than twelve miles, the length already built, if these gentlemen show their bona fides by extending the line either to Port Dalhousie or Fort Erie or to Hamilton, it is quite competent for the citizens of St. Catharines to refund $80,000, the amount that they paid in good faith for the construction of this road. If the hon. members of this House declare in favour of this Bill they will be legislating in a most vicious way in view of the fact that they will be giving these incorporators the control of $300,000 to do with it as they like. Under this Bill, $300,000 can be placed at the disposal of these people the day after the legislation has been enacted and this Bill becomes law. I want to ask every hon. member in this House if this is the kind of legislation to give to these incorporators who come along and find a road embarrassed as this road is. The city of St. Catharines and the citizens of that place contributed a large sum of money towards the construction of this road. The town of Thorold, represented by the hon. member for Welland (Mr. McCleary), I understand, gave $40,000. The city of St. Catharines gave $80,000, so that there is $120,000 taken out of the pockets of the people, and when this road became embarrassed, under its management, the people's money was handed over, holus bolus, to a corporation who bought the road for $35,000. I leave it to the judgment of this House if this is not vicious legislation. I claim that we ought to be very careful in seeing that every protection is given, not only to the people of St. Catharines, but to the people of Thorold, and to those who have put $120,000 into this railway. I have no objection to the railway being built in any way or shape. I believe it would be in the interest of the county I represent. A large portion of the people are in favour of the railway, but, so far as the interest of the city of St. Catharines is concerned, I think I would be forgetting my duty as the representative of the county were I not to point out to the House the grave situation and the grave aspect which this road presents in its present condition. All I ask is that the protection of this Parliament be given to the county I represent, and more particularly to the city of St. Catharines, which has given $80,000 towards the construction of this road. I would ask that in the issuing of these bonds special protection should be provided, and that they should be made payable to the treasurer of that city to the amount that St. Catharines has already paid out. If the railway is extended there will be no great hardship in the city repaying that money to the company. Should the railway be built, or a portion of it, I feel satisfied that the citizens of St. Catharines would be willing to repay that money, but until it is, they are entitled to that $80,000. If I remember rightly the intention, when the railway was first projected, was for St. Catharines to give $160,000 towards the construction of the road, $80,000 was to be paid by St. Catharines upon the completion of the railway to the city. Then, upon the completion of the line from St. Catharines to either Hamilton or Toronto, I am not quite clear as to which city—at all events, when the railway was extended from St. Catharines to Hamilton or Toronto, $80,000 more was to be paid for the construction of the road. The railway was not built to either of these cities. At the time that the railway was under construction I know that an offer was made on behalf of the Canadian Pacific Railway to the promoters of this road that if they would give up the charter they would pay to the promoters the whole of the expense of the construction of this twelve miles of railway plus 10 per cent for profits. When that offer was made to the railway company, the largest shareholder, the late Mr. Neelon, was inclined to accept it, but other advice prevailed upon the poor man, and he rejected it, or, in other words, he demanded not only 10 per cent profit on the construction of the line from Niagara Falls to St. Catharines, but an addition of 10 per cent on the prospective profits that were to be made out of the construction of the railway from St. Catharines to Toronto or to Hamilton. The Canadian Pacific Railway very properly refused that offer, and the result was that the railway never went beyond St. Catharines. It fell into bad shape, although I must say for some of the gentlemen who are promoting this road that they have put the road, as I understand it, in a fairly good shape and in a good state of repair. What I am more particularly concerned about is, not to object to the construction of the road, or its extension in either direction, but I do object to power being given to these gentlemen to raise, on debentures, $300,000 upon a railway which cost them only $35,000 or $40,000. With these remarks, I leave it to the judgment of the House whether the city in the county which I represent is not entitled to the consideration that I ask for.

Mr. T. S. SPROULE (East Grey). As I understand, the hon. gentleman has two objections to this. The first is that the House would give authority to this railway company to bond this road for $25,000 a mile because the whole road was bought for $36,000. I suppose the hon. gentleman will not deny that there are 12 miles of the road built. They had power to bond the road for $30,000 per mile before a mile was built, and if there has been money enough put into that road to build 12 miles, it must be that much more valuable now than when they had power to bond it for a greater sum. Therefore, I think the House is not going astray when they are giving authority to bond it for $30,000 to-day. Originally the charter of this road gave authority to bond for $30,000 because it was passing through a section of country where the right of way was very expensive. The other feature of it is that if we pass this we allow them to raise $300,000, but it is only upon the portion of road already built or under contract to be built. He says they may raise that money and they may squander it. They cannot do that, because they can only raise it when the road is under contract to be built. He wishes part of this money should be given to St. Catharines so as to compensate that city for the heavy bonus she gave. But St. Catharines has the advantage of the portion of the road that is built at the present time, and if there is any money raised by way of selling bonds to the extent of $25,000 a mile, it must be on the road either built or under contract to be built; and if there is any more built St. Catharines must get the advantage of the whole. So with Thorold. I do not see in the reasons the hon. gentleman has given any ground for refusing this company the right to bond the road for $25,000 a mile. Certainly both St. Catharines and Thorold will get the return that they expected to get when they gave bonuses for that road that the company might be able to bond the road for $25,000 a mile

Mr. W. S. CALVERT (West Middlesex). In reply to the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Gibson), I may say that I was a little surprised at what he said with reference to St. Catharines. The other day when the committee met we had before us the mayor and solicitor of St. Catharines, and some others, and they were most anxious that this Bill should be passed. I think it is of great importance to St. Catharines that this charter should be granted for this company. The city of St. Catharines has contributed, as he says, the sum of $80,000; they have also secured bonds to the extent of $80,000, making $160,000 as the interest St. Catharines has in this road. They have up to the present time paid $120,000 with interest, and they still owe $40,000. Now, a city contributing so much is naturally anxious to receive value for their money, and they appeared here the other day and urged upon the committee and upon every person interested to grant this charter. I may say with reference to this matter, as the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) remarked the other day, that an Act of incorporation was granted to the old company by the Ontario legislature in 1881, chap. 73 of the statutes of that year. In the following year the charter was extended from the city of Hamilton to Toronto. Now the Government of Ontario, situated as they are at the seat of operations, know whether it is in the interest of that portion of the country to have this road extended to Hamilton and Toronto. The objection seemed to be that they did not wish the road to pass the city of Hamilton. After a full discussion before the committee, they decided by a fair majority that it should be extended to the city of Toronto. Now, the hon. member for North Oxford (Mr. Sutherland), in discussing this question the other evening said, that we were not asking now by this charter within 150 or 200 miles of what the old charter received from this House. I may give some of the places to show that the hon. gentleman is absolutely correct. For instance, in 1895, by Dominion statutes, chap. 61, this company was authorized to go from Hamilton to Brantford, from Brantford to Woodstock, from Woodstock to Port Dover, from Port Dover to Port Burwell, and also to build a loop line from Thorold up to a point between St. Catharines and Jordan. Now, figuring out the distance between these places, I find that the hon. member for North Oxford is absolutely correct, that the old charter granted was some 175 miles more than the charter we are asking for to-day. Now, this road, it is true, cost a great deal of money, and the people of St. Catharines have contributed largely to it. That 12 miles cost a lot of money. Now, my hon. friend says they are bonding it for $25,000. But $25,000 per mile would be covering the whole road, and if this road is worth as much as the hon. member for Lincoln says, is it possible to suppose that the city of St. Catharines, or my hon. friend himself, or any other capitalist, would allow that road to be sold for $36,000? Now this road got into bad repair and the Railway Department said to the company that unless that road was put in proper condition they would have to stop it. The consequence was that those gentlemen who purchased this road spent $12,000 or $15,000 in strengthening the trestle work and bridges. Then the bondholders put on a receiver in order that they might receive back the money they had contributed. After a time the bondholders placed it in court, and the High Court of Justice sold out the road. The final judgment for sale was pronounced in the bondholders' action on June 9th, 1897. The master's report on sale was made on the 31st of January, 1899, and the vesting order vesting the railway, undertaking, franchise, &c., in the purchasers, and ordering the receiver to give up possession, was made on the 14th of April, 1899. Now, this road was advertised, these gentlemen were the highest tenderers, and the consequence is that if you expect gentlemen to come in and purchase a road of that kind, sold by the courts of this land, and then say that they shall not be permitted to have a charter and run it under that sale, it is a strange condition of affairs. Now this section 276 of the Railway Act compels any company who purchase a road from the courts to come to this House at the session immediately following, and ask for a new act of incorporation. That is what we are doing here to-day. The old charter between the city of Hamilton and Toronto has not run out, they have to the 23rd of July to complete that road, and they have commenced operations upon it, I am told. These gentlemen did a certain amount of work in order to comply with the Act. The solicitor of the company makes this statement:

The branch to Hamilton and Toronto was commenced in 1895; right of way for a considerable distance was acquired, and grading done. The time for commencing the branches and completing the whole undertaking of the company had been extended, the last Act being chap. 92, Dominion Statutes, 1894, which authorized the commencement of the branches before the 23rd of July, 1896, and the completion of the undertaking before the 23rd of July, 1899. The Act of 1895, which authorized the line to Brantford, Woodstock, &c., required it to be commenced before 22nd July, 1897, and completed before 22nd July, 1900. This line to Brantford, Woodstock, &c., was not commenced within two years, but the main line was commenced within the proper time, and the branch to Hamilton and Toronto was commenced within the proper time. The result, therefore, is that the time for completing the main line and the time for completing the branch to Hamilton and Toronto will not be up till the 2nd of July, 1899.

It seems to me strange that our friends should object, because I am told these gentlemen are going on in good faith. I am informed by Mr. Lash, the solicitor for the company, that there is no doubt that these men are able and intend to have this road built. Now, I believe the other day before the Railway Committee, we limited the time to one year for the commencement, and to three years for the completion. That is limiting them very well, and certainly it is only fair, when these men have put their money in, bought it from the court in good faith, and now come back to this House as the law requires, to ask for reincorporation; it is only fair that they should be permitted to go on with the work. I trust this House will grant the request of the incorporators and do as the Railway Committee did the other day, pass this Bill.

Mr. GIBSON. The hon. gentleman asked me why I, with others, did not undertake to go into a thing of this kind. I might tell the hon. gentleman and tell the House, that I had an opportunity of going into it, and I decided I would not go into it, because I saw very plainly the whole and sole object of these promoters was to acquire certain rights and privileges belonging to the Government of this country, in order that they might sell out these privileges to some one else.

Mr. WM. McCLEARY (Welland). I am certainly amazed at the attitude the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Gibson) takes in this matter. He is the representative of the county of Lincoln, and as well of the city of St. Catharines, which has a population of upwards of 10,000 people, and why he should take a position in this House which must be clear to every member is contrary to the interests of the people whom he represents, I cannot understand. He makes his excuse on the ground that if this Bill will state that the city of St. Catharines shall be recouped the $80,000 it paid as a bonus to the original company, his objections will be withdrawn. Now, Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member for West Middlesex (Mr. Calvert) has stated, the mayor of the city of St. Catharines, one of the aldermen of that city and one of the leading merchants of that city, were before the committee when this Bill was discussed. I am quite certain, Sir, that they understand the needs and requirements of their city, and the views of their citizens, quite as well as the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Gibson) does—and I say that with all due deference to his great discernment of the needs of his own people. And, if these representatives of the city of St. Catharines had an idea of asking that this money be recouped, I am sure they would have stated so; but they are satisfied, as I know full well, that this company should receive the incorporation they are asking for, and be allowed to continue this line to the city of Hamilton, the city of Toronto, and to Port Dalhousie and Fort Erie. To support this statement of mine I will read a short article from the St. Catharines "Journal," a Liberal paper which supports my hon. friend from Lincoln (Mr. Gibson):

THE N. C. R. TO TORONTO.

The present owners of the St. Catharines and Niagara Central Railway have secured the passage of a Bill in the Commons to incorporate the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Railway Company, and to acquire rights for the extension of their road to Hamilton and Toronto. Whether these people proceed with the construction of these extensions or not, they are at least arousing some action on the part of the Grand Trunk Railway and other local companies that have temporized with the city of St. Catharines for too many years in this matter of local accommodation. The "Journal" hopes the company will proceed with the extensions, including the one to Port Dalhousie, and that they will prove paying investments. The opposition to their Bill in the Railway Committee at Ottawa was most active, and came principally from the Grand Trunk Railway, which opposed the extension to Toronto, and from the Hamilton members, who opposed the extension of the line from Port Dalhousie to Hamilton. The Bill was strongly supported by Mayor Keating, of this city, who happened to be present.

The opposing interests have had this city and district in their power for a considerable time, and as they have failed to supply demand for extended accommodation, the new proposal should be encouraged.

Now, Mr. Speaker, instead of having cold water thrown upon this project by the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Gibson) he should have taken another course, and in my opinion he has come far short of fulfilling the duty he owes to his political friends, as well as to the entire community he represents, in assuming the attitude he does here to-night. I hope the hon. gentleman (Mr. Gibson) will reconsider it, and give his aid to the passage of this Bill. So far as the town of Thorold in my constituency is concerned, I want to say that we are most anxious we should have something for the money we have put into this road. The city of St. Catharines would not do without the Niagara Central Railway to-day for any sum of money. I even believe that city would be willing to take that road and run it in their own interests, for it has added to the prosperity of the whole community. As I have said, the town of Thorold wants to get something in return, and there is no reason why this Bill should be opposed, other than the interests of the Grand Trunk Railway, and of the electric road that is running from the city of Hamilton, part of the way through Lincoln and down to the village of Beamsville. Mr. Speaker, I do not think these private interests should be held by this Parliament as paramount to the interests of the people.

Mr. JAMES McMULLEN (North Wellington). I have listened with a good deal of pleasure to the suggestion of the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Gibson), and I think it a wise suggestion. We all know well that we are giving this company power to go on with that twelve miles of road at the rate of $25,000 a mile or $300,000. We have had it on their own statement before the committee, that they bought the road for $36,000. I would like to know from my hon. friend (Mr. McCleary) what guarantee this House has, and what guarantee the city of St. Catharines has, that this money will be honestly applied to the construction of the road. All that my hon. friend from Lincoln (Mr. Gibson) asks is, that the city of St. Catharines should become possessed of the bonds that are to be issued on that twelve miles of road to the extent of the $80,000 they hold. I would go further than that and I would say, that out of the $300,000 bonds which they are authorized by this Act to issue, they should deposit with the treasurer of the city of St. Catharines $200,000, in order to secure to that city that the undertaking we are chartering by this Bill will be honestly carried out. That would prevent these men from selling these bonds and putting the money in their pockets, and leaving St. Catharines in the position it was left in before. My hon. friend (Mr. McCleary) knows perfectly well what the history of this road has been. When they got power to bond the road at $10,000 a mile they sold these bonds and spent the money. Then they got their power extended to issue bonds to the extent of $20,000 a mile, and they got the city of St. Catharines to take $80,000 of these bonds and sold the rest. When that amount was consumed they came back to Parliament, and got power to bond the road to the extent of $30,000 a mile. What did they do with the city of St. Catharines? They went to that city, and induced it—I cannot understand how the city permitted itself to be induced—to give up $80,000 of bonds on a road bonded at $20,000 a mile, and to accept in exchange $96,000 of bonds on a road bonded at $30,000 a mile. In other words, they gave up bonds on one-third of the road, or 4 miles, in exchange for bonds on one-fourth of the road, or 3 miles. The Act that enabled the company to bond the road for $30,000 a mile, declared in the plainest terms that the object of the bonded debt was, first to take up the amount of bonds that had been issued at $20,000 a mile, to settle with the city of St. Catharines, and apply the balance of the money to build the road to Hamilton and Toronto. That covered the entire issue of $30,000 a mile, or $360,000 of bonds. But they violated the Act, and have we not a right to conclude that they will violate the Act again? They actually sold the $360,000 of bonds, and did not build a mile of the road. They simply carried out the arrangement about the 12 miles, which, at the time they got the bonding power, were all built. They never applied a dollar of the money to the construction of the road. They simply issued the second bonds, and took up the first, and pocketed the balance of the money. I contend that a road that has a history of this kind deserves to be closely watched by this House. An hon. gentleman opposite who addressed the House, said he was led to the conclusion that the opposition of my esteemed friend from Lincoln (Mr. Gibson), myself and others to this Bill was based on a desire to favour the Grand Trunk. I challenge any hon. gentleman in this House to point to any statute of this country that contains in it the peculiar and extended provisions contained in this charter. As I said before, it has been before Parliament fourteen times, and this is the fifteenth time, and every time it has come, it has brought new provisions. One of its provisions, after reciting how many places the railway may go to, winds up by saying: "with full power to pass over any portion of the country." Carte blanche, if you will; go as you like. If they went to one village, and did not get a bonus sufficient to induce them to build there, they could go to another. If they went to one township, and asked for a bonus, and did not get enough, they could go to another. In this way they could auction one against the other. They were not bound to any point. They could go over the whole Niagara Peninsula between Toronto and Fort Erie. They had the privilege, by their charter and amended Acts, to do as they liked.

Mr. CASEY. That is the old charter. That is not in this charter.

Mr. McMULLEN. That was the Act passed in 1882 in the Ontario legislature. After reciting a number of places—Bismarck, Smithville, Caledonia, Canville, and other places—it winds up by giving the company full power to pass over any other portion of the country. Though the charter had all these enormous and unlimited privileges, the company has never made any particular progress. The only thing the incorporators have ever done is this: By manipulating one Act after another, they have got $80,000 or $100,000 out of the city of St. Catharines; and my esteemed friend (Mr. Gibson) made a suggestion to-night that is creditable to him. He is trying to prevent the city of St. Catharines being again euchred out of what it is entitled to. That city has virtually produced the money that built the railway. My hon. friend says the mayor of St. Catharines was here. I do not wish to cast any reflection upon anybody, but I do not know who was the mayor of St. Catharines when that exchange of bonds was made. Unless there was some extenuating circumstance, I say, that was an exceedingly stupid act. If these people are to go on with this road, I want to know what objection they can have to depositing these bonds with the city treasurer of St. Catharines. If they are honest and sincere, they cannot object to that. If they went to a municipality, and asked for aid, and the aid were granted to them, and debentures were issued, those debentures would not go into the hands of the company at all, but would go into the hands of trustees. Our municipal law contains the strict provision that, in case of aid being granted to a railway, the money is held by trustees, and shall not be handed over to the company, except as the work goes on, and 25 per cent shall be retained until the work is finished. That provision is inserted for the protection of municipalities, and I ask, why it would not be fair for this House to impose a like provision upon these people, if we are going to grant them power to bond that railway. I am quite willing to be stigmatized with others as desiring to favour the Grand Trunk; but I wish to see the people who granted money to put this road where it is, properly protected, if we are going to revive this charter and give this company an opportunity to go on, without any more fooling and humbugging. There has been too much of that in the past, and we do not want any more in the future. Their charter has not yet elapsed, and they can do a good deal of work before it does; and, if the people of St. Catharines, the people of Hamilton and the people of Toronto are anxious to see this road built, the best thing we can do is to refuse the charter, because the company will then come to a crisis; and, if, as my hon. friend says, these men are Americans and have plenty of money, the only possible way in which they can keep the charter alive will be by putting on men and pushing the work to the utmost before the time for building the road expires.

Mr. SPROULE. Does the hon. gentleman not know that since it was sold by the courts, they must get new legislation?

Mr. McMULLEN. My hon. friend is mistaken. It was sold out, but they have not only got the bonds, but the franchises. The law provides that the sale of the bonds carries with it the franchises, and they can exercise every power to-day which they could if they were the old incorporated company. They can go on and build a very considerable portion of that road.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Private individuals, buying a road from the courts, have to receive incorporation within one year, or they cannot continue.

Mr. McMULLEN. That may be the law. I do not claim to be a lawyer, but I was under the other impression. They can incorporate under the Joint Stock Companies Act if they like.

Mr. SPROULE. No, they cannot.

Mr. McMULLEN. But I say, if they go on they will then have the sympathy of this House. If they come back next year and show positive evidence of a considerable quantity of work having been done, and that they are going to carry through the road, their charter will be record in Canada of a company which showed evidence of good faith, not being allowed the privilege of any legislation necessary to enable it to go on. We will do well to guard the interests of the people against any further impositions by any company. It has been said that these men are Americans of high standing. That may be, but I have heard of Americans, men of very high standing, who could do some very small things. These men, it is said, are associated with others of high standing in Canada. But I have heard of men of very high standing in Canada getting badly euchred by men of high standing on the other side of the line. The Americans, in many cases, are too sharp, shrewd and keen for us, and that may prove to be the case in this instance. If this Bill should go to committee, I would urge that we should make some provision to protect the city of St. Catharines against a second instalment of the evil or loss that she has already suffered. No one can deny that after putting her money into that road, the proposition made by my esteemed friend (Mr. Gibson) is a proper and prudent one. Have we done anything of this kind before? I claim that we have. When the Hamilton and Buffalo road was built, it was built also, I think, by some Americans. There was a very large amount of money owing to the labourers along that road, and the men who furnished materials, and there was a certain amount coming to the company from the Dominion treasury by way of subsidy. Representations were made to this House with regard to the danger of allowing these men the handling of the money, and the Railway Committee ordered that all accounts that could be proved due to the men who had furnished labour and materials should be paid before any money was handed over. We took it into our own hands to prevent these poor creditors being defrauded of their just rights. The city of St. Catharines does not quite stand in the same position, because she has not appealed to us, but she may do so when it is too late, and we ought to do what is possible to protect that city in the future. My hon. friend, I think, deserves credit from his constituency and from the city of St. Catharines for asking this House, if it is going to allow the company to bond that road some $25,000 or $30,000 a mile, to provide that at least $200,000 of those bonds shall be deposited with the city of St. Catharines until such time as the city is prepared to pay them out again; and if then that city should repeat the folly of the past, we, at least, will have done all we could to help her. I have no particular interest in the city of St. Catharines, but I do contend that, under the circumstances, that city should have our protection, and be put in a position to be recouped the money to which she is entitled. Hon. gentlemen opposite may make any insinuation or charge they please, my hon. friend may repeat his charges, but they all fall to the ground before the argument we have presented on behalf of the city of St. Catharines. As to the insinuation that we are actuated by other than public motives, I am glad to be able to say that I was never asked by the Grand Trunk Railway to take any action in this matter, but when the Bill was before the Railway Committee I noticed its peculiar provisions, and voted against it. I then pointed out how wrong and imprudent it was to grant these men the power of bonding that road for $30,000 a mile, and I must say that never in my eighteen years of parliamentary life have I known a charter to be granted by this House with so many objectionable features in it, and I know of no railway which has such an unsavory record, from then down to the present, as this Niagara Central Railway. I do not know what the present parties intend to do. Their intention may be better than those of the old company. These new men may possibly show some desire to go on, and if they do, we have no desire to cripple them. On the contrary, we want to give them every encouragement, but we desire to prevent these bonds being carried to the other side and the money being put into the pockets of those men, and the enterprise left in the same position as it has been in the last twenty years.

Mr. McCLEARY. Is the hon. gentleman in a better position to judge of the city of St. Catharines than the mayor and council?

Mr. McMULLEN. I have full confidence in the judgment of my hon. friend from Lincoln.

Motion agreed to, and the House resolved itself into committee.

(In the Committee.)

The CHAIRMAN. The hour for private Bills has expired.

The committee rose.

REPRESENTATION IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

House resumed the debate on Mr. Mulock's motion for the second reading of Bill (No. 126) respecting representation in the House of Commons.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Mr. Speaker, when the House rose at six o'clock, I was dealing with the points that had been raised by the leader of the House and some other gentlemen in reference to precedents that it was contended would warrant the consideration of such a measure as this; and I think I may safely say that, so far as I had gone,

I had satisfied hon. gentlemen opposite that they were entirely mistaken in supposing any of these cases was really a precedent for such a Bill as that now before us. I may say that, in dealing with the amendments, 56 Vic., chap. 9, I have shown the Bill was, so far as I have gone, to correct clerical errors: 1st, to define more accurately the boundary line of Nipissing; 2nd, to correct errors of the law clerk in placing the city of Ottawa among those places that returned one member, thus depriving Ottawa of a second member; third, to correct the description of St. Hyacinthe so as to include about twenty voters who were of no county, which will also be recognized at once as a merely clerical error. I may say that the present Judge Ouimet, who was then in this House, moved the second reading. As to the description of the electoral district of St. Hyacinthe, he said, as will be found in "Hansard" of 1893, page 1617:

The description of the county of St. Hyacinthe remained as it was according to the original establishment of the county in 1864, but since then the parish of Ste. Marie de Madeleine has added a certain part of the parish of St. Jean Baptiste, and it is in order to include about twenty farmers there that the amendment is moved. As it is now, these farmers are in no county.

Mr. BERNIER. The reason given by the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Ouimet) are perfectly true. The changes made by the motion are only a matter of detail; they were rendered necessary in order to allow a certain number of electors of the parish of St. Jean Baptiste to exercise their right of vote, which they would be deprived of should the law remain as it is. The electors are included in the parish of Ste. Marie de Madeleine. It was formed with part of those of La Présentation, St. Charles and St. Damase, in the county of St. Hyacinthe, and with a slight portion of the parish of St. Jean Baptiste. Were not the change effected just introduced into the law, or were not a new enumeration of the parish included in the county of St. Hyacinthe inserted into the statute, 25 electors at least would be deprived of their right to vote. I had the honour to hand over to the hon. the Minister of Public Works a petition signed by the interested electors, and asking for this change in the law. I fully approve of the amendment just made. I would add, through this change the limits of the county of St. Hyacinthe will be, as regards the House of Commons, exactly the same as those for the local house.

These reasons, given by gentlemen on both sides of the House, show that this section was simply the correction of a clerical error. My hon. friend (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) says it was not a clerical error. I ask him: Does he say that an Act such as this, proposed by a gentleman belonging to one party, seconded by a gentleman belonging to the other, and accepted by the House without a word of criticism, justifies the introduction of the Redistribution Bill now before us? If not, it is a waste of time to dispute whether it is a clerical error or an amendment to correct what every one was disposed to regard as a clerical error.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER.

cal error. Now, the next amendment was in 1895. The object was to detach Courcelles and Joliette from Berthier and annex them to Joliette. The Bill was drawn up and agreed upon by the member for Berthier, Mr. Beausoleil, and Mr. Ouimet, and was accepted unanimously by the House as a correction of a clerical error, and as simply carrying out the wishes of the House, without affecting in any way any party question or arousing any opposition. Then, I drew the attention of my right hon. friend to the fact that the quotation he gave of 27-8 Vic., as undoubtedly an error, as that chapter was passed before confederation. The chapter of 32-3 Vic., to which he referred, was also a proposal of the same character as that to which I have referred, as the House will at once see; and whether you call it a clerical error or an error of whatever kind, it threw upon the House the duty of amending the law so as to carry out what it is well understood to mean. The Confederation Act provided, as regards Quebec:

Quebec shall be divided into 65 electoral districts, composed of 65 electoral divisions, into which Lower Canada is at the passing of this Act divided under chap. 2 of the Consolidated Statutes of Canada, chap. 75 of the Consolidated Statutes for Lower Canada, and the Act of the province of Canada of the 23rd year of the Queen, chap. 1, or any other Act amending the same in force at the union, so that each electoral division shall be for the purposes of this Act an electoral district entitled to return one member.

The amendment in this case was to detach the township of Doncaster from Montcalm and attach it to Terrebonne for election purposes. The section reads as follows:

From and after the passing of this Act, the 16th subsection of section 1 of chap. 75 of the Consolidated Statutes of Lower Canada, intitled "An Act respecting the divisions of Lower Canada into counties, and the boundaries of certain cities and towns, for the purpose of representation in the legislature," shall be read and construed, in so far as relates to the election of members of the House of Commons of Canada, as if the township of Doncaster therein mentioned had never formed part of the county of Montcalm, and the said township, so detached from the county of Montcalm, shall be attached to the county of Terrebonne, for the electoral purposes hereinbefore set forth.

I may say that the second and third readings were carried on the same day without any discussion, it being one of those obvious and necessary corrections in order to give a proper interpretation to the Act. It was introduced by the hon. member for Terrebonne, and met with the unanimous concurrence of the House. I think, therefore, I have disposed of every one of the suggestions that have been made by the hon. gentleman, for there is nothing in the shape of an argument that can be raised in my judgment upon the subject. I have shown that from the date of confederation down to the present hour, there has been no Redistribu-tion Act whatever, except after the taking of the decennial census. That has been recognized from the first down to the present time as the only time when a Redistribution Act could with any propriety be referred to the consideration of this House. I do not believe that in the days of that eminent man who so long led this House of Commons, there was any person on either side of the House who ever ventured to suggest that a Redistribution Act could be brought forward at any other period than after the taking of a decennial census. I am not aware that such a suggestion has ever been made, it certainly never was entertained; and these slight verbal alterations, and corrections of clerical errors, to carry out the obvious wish of Parliament, certainly, instead of forming any basis for the introduction of such a measure as this, all go to prove that no such Act has ever been contemplated or undertaken before.

Just imagine the speech delivered in this House to-day by the Postmaster General when he says that these judges, when appointed, are going to become antiquaries, they have to go back into ancient history in order to find out their duties. Here we are within a little more than a year of the time when a new census has to be taken in Canada, after immense changes have taken place all over the face of this country in regard to the movement of population, and within a little more than a year of the time of taking a new census, you wish to go back and act upon a census taken nine years ago. Why, Sir, that appears to me a proposition so eminently absurd that I cannot understand how it came to enter the minds of the hon. gentlemen, except some dire necessity induced the Government to believe that their only hope for the future was to pass a Redistribution Act in order to relieve themselves from the verdict that they believe in their conscience will be rendered against them by the people of Canada unless the constitution of the country is violated. Sir, I want something better than that. We ask the Government, strong as they are in numbers—and they are only strong in numbers—to give to the people of this country some justification for a grave violation of the constitution, some reason that has more weight than a mere desire for party gain. I believe you will search in vain the history of any country for the introduction of a measure by a gentleman charged with such an important change in the law, in which he singles out individual members of Parliament who are to be struck down and decapitated under the Act that he holds in his hand. I say he has disclosed to the House the sole object of this monstrous violation—I will not say of the constitution, but of everything like common sense which you can apply to such a question as we are now considering. I believe that hon. gentlemen will find their labours in this House in vain. I do not hesitate to say so. They may force the measure through here by mere numbers, just as they forced through the Drummond County Railway Bill and the Yukon Railway Bill. Sir, what position do they occupy in reference to these measures? It is because they have dragged their supporters through the mire in reference to these measures that they are now compelled to adopt some means of enabling those supporters, who have sacrificed the esteem of their constituents by their course, to get back to this House when next they have to appear before the country. That is the object of the Bill. We all remember how they found men unwilling to take the responsibility of swallowing such a monstrous measure as the Minister of the Interior ventured to propound to this House, a measure, that the more it is considered, becomes more and more revolting. Am I using too strong language? Why, Sir, the only time that we have seen the blind supporters of hon. gentlemen opposite unwilling to come up to the mark, refuse to stand by the Government on any emergency, was when that measure was proposed, and after it was discussed and examined, five members who had always supported the Government, turned their backs upon them and refused to support them. That is not all. We have here a declaration of one of their present supporters, a gentleman who sits behind the Government. I draw attention to what he says on this matter, because I believe that the Yukon Bill has created in the minds of the Government the absolute necessity of this violation of the constitution by redistributing the constituencies within a year or two of a census. Now, Sir, this is what the hon. member for Lisgar (Mr. Richardson) tells us in the paper which he publishes in the city of Winnipeg, on the 19th day of May last:

As pointed out in the "Tribune" some time ago, time has thrown much new light on Yukon transportation and routes which were at one time regarded by some as feasible, are, according to Government authorities, very problematical or worse. In any event, had the Yukon Mann & Mackenzie railway deal gone through, the line would have been of little service to the country. With only three months' navigation at one end of the railway, and a possibility of none at all at the other end, it is just as well for Canada that the enterprise was stopped. In this case, Sir Charles Tupper's change of mind seems to have been in the right direction. It was brought about by the independent members of the Conservative party.

Now, I give you something still more amusing. Sir Charles Tupper has given evidence on the floor of this House that would satisfy any man with a head on his shoulders, that the grounds for his action were such as warranted that action. But I will now give the hon. gentlemen something a little more amusing than a reference to myself:

It is now an open secret that the rank and file of the Liberals were not grievously disappointed at the action of the Senate in blocking the deal.

"The deal," mark you, Mr. Speaker, from one of the supporters of the hon. gentleman present in this House.

It saved the country a kingdom of what is spoken of as valuable mineral lands.

Is it any wonder that hon. gentlemen opposite, knowing that they have to face the electors, at no distant day, think it is a necessary preparation to redistribute the seats and change the judge, to pack the jury, before they go to trial. That is the position of hon. gentlemen opposite. I do not intend to detain the House at any very great length, but there are two or three points that still require consideration. First, I will allude to the fact that I have shown that hon. gentlemen are unable to show any precedent whatever for such an Act; I have shown from the opinions of the Right Hon. Sir John Macdonald that such a thing as a redistribution Act was never contemplated in his day except after a decennial census. I have said before that, although hon. gentlemen may force this measure, as they have forced other measures through this House, contrary to the convictions and opinions of hon. gentlemen who sit behind them, and some of whom went into open revolt, I hold the opinion that this cannot become law, and I will give my reason for it. We have a Senate Chamber in this country; we have a security against hasty, ill-advised and extremely partisan legislation, against measures that violate the constitution of the country for party purposes. When I refer to that branch of the Parliament I feel that there never was a time, in the history of the country, when that body enjoyed the confidence of the people as they do to-day. The protection they gave to this country in the rejection of the Yukon measure, and the evidence we now have which hon. gentlemen have given, that they have saved the country from one to two million dollars by the rejection of the Drummond County Railway deal, have given to the Senate of Canada a position in the confidence of independent and intelligent men, of all parties, such as, for many years before, they have not enjoyed. I say more, Sir, that in my judgment the Senate would have been perfectly right to have rejected the Franchise Bill sent up last session. In reference to any one of these measures I have never exchanged a word with any Senator intended to influence his action, or to ascertain what action he proposed to take, nor do I intend to do so in reference to this measure. What I say in reference to that branch of Parliament will be said in my place on the floor of Parliament, but I do say, Sir, that the idea that is attempted to be circulated throughout this country that measures touching the franchise and the redistribution of seats constitute matters

SIR CHARLES TUPPER.

especially appertaining to the House of Commons with which the Senate has no right to interfere, is entirely erroneous and outside of all precedent, either British or wherever parliamentary government exists. The Senate, in my judgment, would have been perfectly right, after a majority in this House had an amendment voted down that was reasonable in its character, that any province, the maritime provinces or any outlying province, should have the same protection as that enjoyed in Ontario, when such a proposition as that was made, when a change was proposed in the constitution of the franchise by which this Parliament was to surrender its right and control, one of the most fundamental elements in the possession of this House being that it should control its own franchise—when that was handed over and when it was shown how that was likely to effect the interest of this Parliament, the Senate would have been perfectly justified in throwing out that Bill. There was one argument by which the Government could have got that franchise Bill carried. The statement was made that if the Senate would abandon the amendment in regard to allowing the same rights of appeal to the judiciary in one province as in another, and if that Bill was passed, the Government would use all its power and influence to get the legislatures, where that right did not exist, to change the law so that it should exist. How has that been carried out? We have had nothing laid on the Table of the House yet to prove that the Government acted in accordance with that pledge, but we have very strange evidence to the contrary. In the province of New Brunswick a general election for the local legislature has taken place. There will not be another for four years, so that there was no necessity to push through a franchise law. Under the inspiration, I do not hesitate to say so, of the autocrat of the legislature of New Brunswick, who, we now recognize, sits in this House, and who went down there and used the most gigantic efforts that a public man could put forth, and of the most corrupt character, both money, pledges and promises of public money—

MR. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) knows that it is unparliamentary to charge an hon. member of the House with corruption.

SIR CHARLES TUPPER. Mr. Speaker, I have no wish to say anything unparliamentary. But I was referring to matters that were referred to in this House, and that have been referred to unchallenged by the hon. gentleman to whom these references were made. But I will tell you what I may say and what I am justified in saying that we had a right to believe that when a member of the Government pledged the Senate that, if they passed that Bill, that they would use their influence with the local legislature to give to the electors of provinces the protection of the judges, we had a right to believe that a member of the Government here would use his power and influence in fulfilment of his pledge. What have we seen? We have seen a legislature, after a general election, when it had no concern or interest in the franchise for three or four years, passing a franchise Bill to take away from the judges the power of revision and handing it over to the sheriffs nominated annually by the Government of the day. Had the Senate known, not only that this promise would not be redeemed, but that the local legislatures were actually legislating with the object, not of affecting their own constituencies, or their own position, or their own friends, but with the object of affecting the return of members of this House—with such a spectacle as that before them, the Senate will act wisely if they protect this Parliament against legislation that is calculated to violate every principle of constitutional right, every principle of fair play and justice, in the interest of a party.

There is no such delicacy in reference to these measures in England. When Mr. Gladstone, at the head of a majority in the House of Commons, passed his Franchise Bill, he was told directly that that Franchise Bill would be rejected by the House of Lords. Did Mr. Gladstone force the measure through the House of Commons and appeal to the country, as the only means by which he could carry it? No, Sir; he recognized the propriety of arranging, with the concurrence of the eminent men of the two parties, such a Redistribution Bill as would warrant the House of Lords to pass the franchise measure which had been proposed.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. The Government of the hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) did not consult the Opposition much in 1882.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will come to that in a moment. If the Postmaster General takes the advice he gave to a member on this side of the House a short time ago, and possesses his soul in patience, he will hear something about 1882. The time has perhaps come when it is well to refresh the memories of these hon. gentlemen opposite, with the views they held in 1882, and to contrast them with the views they hold to-day. I think the incident I have referred to, proves conclusively that, as to the franchise and redistribution of seats, the House of Lords, one of those great British institutions to which we look as an exemplar, dealt with the franchise and dealt with the redistribution of seats as a part of the duty that devolves upon every independent legislature, so as to insure that no unjust party measures are forced through Parliament by a dominant majority in one House, and allowed, sub silentio, to become law without the protest and interference of another. But we are not without a Canadian precedent on this very question. When the Hon. Alexander Mackenzie was leader of the Government of Canada, a measure was passed through this Parliament to gerrymander the constituency of West Huron in the interest of a member of this House. The Senate rejected that measure, and I heard Alexander Mackenzie say that which I have no doubt some other members on both sides of the House heard him say—I heard Alexander Mackenzie say: I have no reason to complain of the Senate; they differed from me on two questions that were sent up by the majority which supported me in the House of Commons, one the Nanaimo Railway Bill, the other the West Huron Bill, and I am bound to say, that in both cases the Senate was right. So we see that the only attempt made in dealing with the question of redistributing a seat so as to affect the position of a member of this House, except at the specified constitutional time, was rejected by the Senate, and the head of the Government who suffered from that rejection, himself was compelled to say, that in that case the Senate did what was absolutely right. My hon. friend the Postmaster General (Mr. Mulock) is anxious to hear something about the discussion in this House in 1882, and I will favour him. The Hon. Edward Blake, then leader of the Opposition, said:

Full deliberation is needed for another cause—because this measure is exceptional in its character in this: All other measures of legislation which you bring before Parliament, you submit, when the time of trial comes, to the constituencies which sent you to do their business; you submit to the same men and the same set of tribunals throughout the community; you go before them and you say: "Five years ago you entrusted me with power to act as your representative; such and such things have I done, I bring them before you as the fruits of my labours in that capacity.—"

I bring the Yukon Railway Bill; I bring the Drummond County Railway Bill; I bring the Franchise Bill, by which we degraded the House of Commons, in depriving it of the power to legislate with regard to its own franchise—I bring these here to you.

—and I ask you who sent me to judge whether I am deserving of your continued confidence or no." But this is a measure, Sir, which proposes to alter the jury, to alter the tribunal, to provide for a different set of jurors to try those who are to come before them very shortly for trial upon the events of the last four or five years. No longer are we to appeal to the same set of men before whom we fought the battle four years ago;—

That seems to be the great trouble with the hon. gentlemen opposite: they fought the battle of 1896, and they won—by a fluke. And, when my right hon. friend was challenged as to the mode by which he got there, he summed it up in these expressive words: Well, we are here, and you are there. That is all he could say. Well, Sir, at no distant date they have got to go back to the same tribunal; they have got to say to the men who sent them here: There are the fruits of our labours; there is what we have done for you; will you return us to power again? We will see.

—no longer are we to say to them: "You returned me by such and such a majority, or you defeated me by such and such a majority, and I appeal to you, on the one hand, to continue your confidence, or, on the other hand, to reverse your vote of want of confidence on the issues which have been raised during those four or five years." No, it is proposed to provide for a different set of jurors, to whom hon. gentlemen, afraid to appeal to those who sent them here, propose to appeal to vindicate their conduct.

I commend that to the careful consideration of hon. gentlemen opposite, to whom it is specially applicable now.

The PRIME MINISTER. I suppose we will have the answer to Mr. Blake's speech.

SIR CHARLES TUPPER. The Hon. Edward Blake continued to say:

I am amused at this commentary upon the boasts of these hon. gentlemen for the last four years, and this testimony to the sincerity of these boasts.

Mark you, Mr. Speaker, the Right Hon. Sir John Macdonald, who led the Government, was not undertaking to change the jurors in violation of the constitution of the country, but he was redistributing the seats, as at the time he was compelled to do by the constitution. Whether he did that fairly or unfairly, I shall not at this moment say, but I shall have a very strong argument later on to prove that he did not act unfairly. Sir John Macdonald was not volunteering to violate the constitution then, but he was acting under the constitution, which compelled him to do as he did. Sir, what would be the indignant language of Mr. Blake, if he were here to-day and saw this attempt to violate the first principles of our constitution, by undertaking, contrary to that constitution and to all precedents, to redistribute the seats in this Parliament? Hon. gentlemen opposite know that, in a year or two at the outside, and before the decennial census, they must go to the country, and they fear to appeal to the same tribunal which has been watching their misdeeds.

Why, all the time they have been telling us how proud they were to consider that the day was approaching on which they would go back to their constituents and invite them to endorse their action. All the time they have been telling us they were growing in strength, growing in popularity, particularly in Ontario. All the time they have been telling us of their superior strength in Ontario, under the returns. I do not know the exact figures; it has not been worth my while to count them up. I suppose they give about three to one in favour of hon. gentlemen opposite, and they say they are stronger to-day and are more than three to one. I do not know in what way they lead themselves to this belief; but I know it to be an unfounded belief. I know this Bill proves, and they have a shrewd suspicion of it, that they cannot carry their present seats and retain their present majority; and this Bill is designed so far as they can make up by legislation for the strength they have lost by their misdeeds for the last four years and by the results to which they have led.

Substitute three years, and it is perfect. That is the comment of Mr. Blake on a redistribution Bill, introduced at a time when under the constitution it was necessary to have one. That was the mode in which he challenged the character of the Bill then brought before the House. My right hon. friend, I see, smiles when he reflects that all that is the evidence of the view that Mr. Blake held as to the effect of that Act. In 1872, the Right Hon. Sir John Macdonald said:

In determining the mode of distributing the new seats, the Government took into consideration the principles which have guided the establishment of the elective system in the provinces ever since they have been provinces; and it will be found that in them all, while the principle of population was considered to a very great extent, other considerations were also held to have weight, so that different interests, classes and localities should be fairly represented, that the principle of numbers should not be the only one.

I give that as an answer to my hon. friend—as a qualification of the long quotation he gave from Sir John Macdonald's speech on that occasion—and to show that although Sir John Macdonald did attach at the outset perhaps greater importance than he subsequently did to the question of county boundaries, he never lost sight of the question of population. Sir Mackenzie Bowell, on that occasion, as will be found in "Hansard," at page 1377, said:

At that time, so much in love with the principles of representation by population were hon. gentlemen opposite, that they denounced the Government for not demolishing the small boroughs of Brockville and Niagara. They supported it to such an extent that the hon. member for Lambton moved the following resolution affirming that principle:—

"That the six additional members to be allotted to Ontario are due to the increased population of that province, and should be allotted with reasonable regard to the population. That the Bill be referred back to a committee of the House with instructions to amend the same by allotting members for Ontario in such a manner as to give, as far as practicable, representation to those parts of the population which, by the present division would be excluded from their fair share of political power."

Now, Sir, as I have shown, we have a Bill submitted for our consideration that takes a section of the country where there are 200,000 constituents, who it is believed are of Conservative leanings, and allots to it four members. On the other hand, it takes another section with 200,000 constituents, where hon. gentlemen opposite think they are strong and can return whom they like, and gives it ten members. That is the mode in which the principle of population is carried out by these hon. gentlemen. Sir John Thompson on the introduction of the Bill of 1892, said :

I may say that we are proposing to introduce this measure in accordance with the provisions of the British North America Act, which require that after the completion of each decennial census the representation of the various constituencies in this House shall be readjusted on certain well-known and well-defined principles.

The mode of division hitherto adopted has been very convenient, because it corresponds with the county lines. There were three counties in the Island (Prince Edward Island), and they were each represented by two members. In order to make five constituencies it will be necessary to depart from county lines and the readjustment which I propose, and the plan of which I will lay on the Table of the House, is, I think, the fairest that can be suggested with regard to that province. We propose that there shall be five constituencies, named West Prince County, East Prince County, West Queen's County and East Queen's County, and King's County, each having one member. The division is made according to the description of lots in that island, which I think correspond to townships elsewhere, and no lot, according to the original divisional of the island, is divided. The division by population will be thus : West Prince County will have just about 21,000 of a population ; East Prince County will have 20,723 (this includes the town of Summerside) ; West Prince will have a population of 22,209 (this includes the city of Charlottetown) ; East Queen's will have a population of 23,466 ; and King's, which includes Georgetown, will have a population of 21,684 ; so that under this plan the population of the island will have been equalized as nearly, I think, as is practically consistent with adhering to the township lines I have mentioned.

I trouble the House with these extracts to prove two things—first, that the principle of population has always been considered even from the first, although not to the same extent, and with increasing weight and importance, always has been considered—not as a hard and fast line by which you must adopt the same unit of population, irrespective of county lines, but to be followed as far as is practicable without doing violence to certain constituencies and time-honoured rights which the electors had possessed. The principle of population was considered as one of great importance. My right hon. friend has discarded entirely the question of population. He has proposed a Bill which will carry out the worst features of county lines and county representation, without that regard to population which hon. gentlemen on all sides of the House have recognized in the past.

While I was speaking of the Senate I forgot to draw attention to the fact that the views I hold as to the perfect right of the Senate are shared by hon. gentlemen opposite, or by the Liberal party, so far as we may judge by past action—not when a redistribution Bill appeared in violation of the constitution of the country, just before instead of after a decennial census ; but when a redistribution Bill was sent up to the Senate by a Conservative Government, in accordance with the constitution, immediately after a decennial census, and when an hon. gentleman who is a member of the present Government, representing the Liberal party in the Senate, moved the six months' hoist, and every Liberal in the Senate, I believe, voted to vote down that Redistribution Bill. That, I believe, was in 1882. I remind hon. gentlemen of this to show them that they ought to look in vain to the Senate as entitled to claim from that body, irrespective of party feeling of any kind, that it should at the bidding of any Government pass a measure that is avowedly, as stated here by the hon. gentleman who moved the second reading of the Bill this afternoon, to break down, as far as this Government can break down, the rights and interests and position which hon. members of this House have obtained, and put supporters of this Government in their places.

Now, Sir, there is another feature of this Bill which might not have been expected. As I have said before, the province of Quebec is practically left untouched. There is very little proposed alteration in that province, but taking the question of a due and fair and just representation of the different provinces in this House, what is the position. It happens for the moment, but I am by no means wanting in confidence that at no distant day the position of the province of Quebec, so far as it is politically concerned, will be greatly changed. I see that the hon. gentleman laughs at the suggestion. I would be paying a poor compliment to that province if I should suppose that under existing circumstances, my right hon. friend could look to that great and important province with confidence to obtain a reaffirmation of that support which he enjoyed at the last election. I will not go into the question why. I think, if the right hon. gentleman does look to it with confidence, he will be greatly deceived.

The PRIME MINISTER. Somebody is sure to be deceived.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. That is quite true. I think I am saying what is no secret to my right hon. friend when I say that no man was more deceived than he in the province of Quebec at the last election. I happen to know that one of his most trusted friends and lieutenants was asked after the close of the polls at the election of 1896 : Where do you think you are ? He said : I have no doubt we are in. His friend, a personal friend, though not a political one, said to him : The polls are now closed, the contest is over, you can afford to be frank, what is your calculation ? He said : We expect a majority of eight in the province of Quebec and thirty in Ontario.

The PRIME MINISTER. I did not say that.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I do not say that the right hon. gentleman did, but he thought it if he did not say it.

There is one respect, however, in which the province of Quebec enjoys a very great advantage over the province of Ontario. Every one will admit that, under our system, the intention is that the rights and interests of the electorate should be very much of the same character throughout the different provinces. But what is the fact? The fact is that in the province of Ontario you have one man one vote. A man, however large his means, though he may be a millionaire, though he may have the country covered with his property in various directions, though he may have all over the city of Toronto a dozen valuable establishments and places of business, can only give one vote. How is it in the province of Quebec? There a man, without a tithe of the property or weight of influence in the country of the man in Ontario, can give a half dozen votes. Yet my right hon. friend thinks that is all right now. So long as in Quebec he thinks he enjoys a great numerical majority, of course that system is all right and proper. But I draw his attention to it to show that this Bill is not quite so fair and equitable as might have been expected.

When we come to analyse this measure—and I draw the attention of the hon. Postmaster General, who has given us long columns of figures on the subject, to two or three things that strikes one at the outset. Every public man admits that under our parliamentary system it is most important that the electorate should be equalized as far as reasonable. There are certain things that makes it inconvenient to equalize it, but so far as it can reasonably be done, equalization should be effected. I take Simcoe, and I find that Simcoe has three members with a unit of population for each of something like 28,000. But Simcoe happens to be Conservative, and does any person doubt that if that county were Liberal it would not return four members under this Bill? It has now three members requiring 28,000 of a population to return each. Why is it then that Brant, with a population less than half that of Simcoe, has two members? If Brant is entitled to two, under this changing and remodelling of constituencies, is that fair? Does any one believe that if Brant were Conservative it would not have one member instead of two under this Bill, and that if Simcoe were Liberal it would not have four instead of three. Why, it is perfectly obvious that the thing is done in violation of everything like equalization of representation, so far as population is concerned. It is evidently done for the purpose of giving a double advantage to a county that happens to be

Sir CHARLES TUPPER.

Liberal, and less advantage to a county that happens to be Conservative. Take Algoma; that county has but one member, although it has a population of 36,514. Brant has a member for each 15,000 of its population, if you take out the Indians, who have been disfranchised by this Government. You have given two members to Brant, with its 30,000 population, and you give only one to Algoma, which has 36,514 of a population. Does not that revolt against every principle of justice when you come to consider it for a single moment? Take the whole population of Brant, including the Indians, and the unit for its members is 15,608 as against the unit of population for a member for Algoma of more than double, 36,514.

One of your arguments, and it is one I do not intend to discuss now, although it is very interesting, is that thickly settled places, such as towns, do not require an equal representation, compared with rural districts. Then, your argument is altogether against you in the case of Brant, because you give the county of Brant two members, although its population is but 30,000, leaving out the Indians, while you give Algoma, which has 36,000 of a population, or double that of Brant, including the Indians, but one member.

Take the city of London, with a population of 31,977, and you give it but one member, yet you give Brant, with the same population, two members, and you give Norfolk, with a population of 29,842, much less than London, two members.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. What year is the hon. gentleman quoting from?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The census of 1891, according to which the population of London is 31,977.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. I think the hon. gentleman is quoting the wrong figures.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am taking these figures from what I supposed to be a correct source, but of course I am not as familiar with the populations of the various counties in Ontario as my hon. friend is.

Mr. WALLACE. The figures you have given are quite right.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am glad to hear it. I endeavour to give the most correct information I can, and I am stating it as fairly as I can. There is no object in making a statement with reference to the figures to this House that is not fair, because it is easily refuted by gentlemen who know. Now, I do not wish to pursue that subject further. My right hon. friend attached great importance to county boundaries, as compared with maintaining county boundaries, questions of population were of no importance. But what about Quebec? That province is left practically untouched. I find a curious illustration mentioned in the press, and I assume that it is correct. It is a curious example of what the hon. gentleman has done in Quebec :

The first twelve lots in the three first ranges of the said township (Stanford) which formed part of the parish of Notre Dame, are transferred from the electoral district of Drummond and Arthabaska to the electoral district of Megantic. Is it possible to do greater violence to the principle—

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend (Sir Charles Tupper) will pardon me. I do no violence to the principle. The first three ranges of the county of Stanford, which were formerly in the county of Arthabaska are now in the county of Megantic.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am informed, that you have to cut across lots in order to transfer electors from one county to another for political purposes. If that is not correct, the right hon. gentleman will have an opportunity to correct it.

The PRIME MINISTER. I will give authority for that.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I shall be glad to have it. I now come to a point which I regard as a very important one, and that is to endeavour to show that the attacks made upon the so-called Gerrymander Act of 1882 are without foundation. And I would draw the attention of the Postmaster General (Mr. Mulock) as well as of the Prime Minister to this matter. There is only one way by which you can establish that there has been a gerrymander, that violence has been done to the arrangement of constituencies. But, in the first place, I may say that I hold hon. gentlemen opposite responsible for the great gerrymander in the province of Ontario. That this is a gerrymander I think everybody admits. I do not think there is a gentleman on the other side but will admit that every principle of population and county boundaries and township lines and every other was violated by the Mowat Gerrymander in the province of Ontario. And when the right hon. Prime Minister asked the gentlemen who had signalled his public career more by that act than by any other one act of his life, when they invited him to leave that Government and become a member of this Government, they adopted his policy and were committed to the defence of that Act. But for that Act the Liberal party would not be in power in Ontario to-day. Is there a gentleman on the Government benches who will venture to deny that the present Liberal Government in Ontario owe the fact of their being in power to this gerrymander, that but for it they would have been swept from power at the last election? Then I say these gentlemen are not in a position to wax so exceedingly virtuous in regard to what they hold to be a violation of fair-play and justice under the Redistribution Act of 1882. But, Sir, that Act has remained, with some slight alterations—which were also objected to—in 1893, and it is that Act that they propose mainly to redress by the present Bill. Is it not so? Very well; I was saying that there was only one way to prove that a Redistribution Act does violence to fair-play and justice in the interest of party. And what is that? Before you can maintain your case that a Redistribution Act has had the effect of unfairly affecting the conditions of parties, you must show that, through that Act a minority of votes have elected a majority of representatives. Is not that a perfectly obvious proposition? Can you give any evidence that the Redistribution Act of 1882 unfairly operated against the Liberal party unless you can show that the party that polled the minority of votes elected the majority of members? Now, what are the facts? It is not a matter of argument, but of demonstration. We have the figures. I have here a statement of the official returns of the elections prepared by an officer of this Government, and what does it say? It says that in the province of Ontario the Conservative vote in 1896 was 191,052, and they elected 43 members; while the total Liberal vote in Ontario was 166,335, and they, a minority of 24,717, elected 44 members, or one more than the Conservatives. Now, where is there a fair-minded man, where is there a man of intelligence who will dare to stand up in this House and say that the Gerrymander Act of 1882, amended in 1893, acted unfairly when this was the result?

The PRIME MINISTER. What returns is the hon. gentleman quoting from?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. From the official returns, which are open to my right hon. friend as they are to everybody else. I may be incorrect, but I am stating what I believe to be the official returns. Of course, it must be frankly admitted that there were a number of independent members, and it will not be forgotten—and nobody knows it better than my right hon. friend—that every one of those members would have been behind us if we had had a majority.

The PRIME MINISTER. I do not know that.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I would like to see the independent member on that side of the House who would not be on that side to-day if we were sitting on the front benches. Now, I may carry this argument a little further. My right hon. friend has admitted that no province is gerrymandered by the Conservative party except Ontario. He leaves all the other provinces intact, because they have not been subjected to what he calls the gerrymandering influence. Therefore, let me go back to Prince Edward Island for a moment. Could anything be fairer than the adjustment of the constituencies of Prince Edward Island? Could anything be fairer than the statement of Sir John Thompson, in which he showed that, without doing any violence to the boundaries, those constituencies had been so divided as to give practically the same number of people the same representation, except in case of the cities where, for reasons which hon. gentlemen opposite hold strongly, the people do not require the same representation. But why is the change now? Why do you separate in the city of Toronto the two members that were elected for the same constituency? Why do you say that in the city of Toronto every man should have one vote and only one? Toronto must be divided into five constituencies by the Bill as remodelled; yet, in face of the declaration that you do not intend to allow the same man to vote for two members except in the city of Ottawa and the city of Hamilton, you separate them in West Toronto. Why should that be done in Toronto, and why go down to Prince Edward Island, and break up these five constituencies now so fairly adjusted? I will tell you the reason why. Because Prince Edward Island, at the last election, went against the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. He came back with a minority at his back instead of having the whole vote, as he promised he would have. He knows that if he came back at all, if there was a general election tomorrow, he would come back alone, unless these constituencies were gerrymandered. Therefore, every principle is thrown to the winds, there is no principle in reference to county lines, no principle in reference to population, no principle in reference to numerical representation, nothing but the one principle that makes for party gain.

Now, take the whole Dominion of Canada, and what are the facts? At the last general election the Conservative party polled 413,000 votes as against 397,194 Liberal votes. Yet the country was gerrymandered, was it, with nearly 16,000 more Conservative than Liberal votes in the whole Dominion, although the Government have a large majority sitting behind them. There is the conclusive evidence establishing beyond controversy that no injustice was done to political parties in Canada, taking the country broadly: I will not say that there may not be individual cases that would be subject to close criticism; but I say that taking the country broadly, take the province of Ontario, and I can demonstrate that although you have a majority of one in this House, you are in a minority of nearly 25,000 votes. I give that to the House as a reason why this Redistribution Bill is now introduced. These gentlemen know that it is their only chance of coming back, discredited as they have become by their indefensible acts which they have forced through this House. They know that their only hope of salvation, their only hope of escaping the verdict that will overtake them in the next election, lies in re-arranging the constituencies as this Bill proposes. They hope to escape the verdict of an indignant people by clothing, as this Bill attempts to clothe, 15,000 people who are Liberals with more power than 30,000 who are Conservatives, by giving 200,000 people who are Conservatives six members less than are to be returned by 200,000 people who are supposed to be Liberals.

I do not intend to pursue this subject further at the present time than to say that the Bill is its own condemnation. Its introduction is the strongest possible evidence that this Government is afraid to go back to the electorate as they left it. They got their positions, as I have shown on more than one occasion, by professing one policy in one section of the country and another policy in another section. They know that to-day they stand in the position of having violated every promise they gave to the electorate of this country upon which they obtained power; they know that they stand in the presence of an intelligent electorate branded with having been false to every principle they professed from the first hour of their public life down to the present moment. The country has trusted them, the country took them at their word, and it has been deceived. The right hon. gentleman knows it, and his colleagues know it. The gentlemen behind them have been dragged through the mire in support of those measures that have ruined this Government in the estimation of the country. So the only hope left them is to gerrymander the constituencies of the great province of Ontario so as to give them some chance of getting back here. I say that I believe this Bill will come to naught. I believe this Bill cannot become law. I believe it is impossible that such a gross violation of the constitution in the interest of a party, with their flimsy plea upon which it is based, can ever succeed. You may be able to force it through this House, but I misjudge the independent character of the Parliament of Canada if such a measure ever becomes law.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS (Mr. Pater-son). I will endeavour to confine myself to a discussion of the Bill itself, and the hon. leader of the Opposition will pardon me if I do not take up all the points he has alluded to, such as the Yukon Railway and others of that class. When, some 27 years ago, I first entered Parliament, I was given to understand by those who were familiar with the rules of Parliament, that it was not considered in good taste, in alluding to what transpired in another Chamber, to mention the Senate by name, but the member must always speak of the matter as something that had transpired in another place. We have one of the leaders of this House to-night, in discussing the question that is before the House, not resting his case upon argument, not resting his case on a fair and full argument addressed to the members of this House, who are to discuss it, but, with an open shamefacedness—I was going to say, with a want of shamefacedness—addressing himself to the Senator's Gallery, and, before investigation and debate by this House, assuming that he is in a position to insult another branch of the legislature, by saying, that he can count upon them to throw out the Bill, against which he has not used any argument worth being considered in this debate. If there be one instance, and he has given not one (except at the last, when he alluded to two or three counties in respect to which there is alleged to be a disproportion of population, as represented in this Chamber) in which an argument has been used, and one which I have seen in the Conservative press during the few weeks that they have had this measure before them, is, that the city of Toronto, with its added population, from the adoption of the principle of confining within the municipal bounds the people living there, were not receiving their proportionate representation. One other argument was, that the county of Kent, less in numbers than the county of Simcoe, was to get three members because, as they alleged, it was a Liberal county, while the county of Simcoe, which, they alleged, was a Conservative county, was only to get three members; and they pointed out the disproportion. To-day, when the hon. gentleman (Mr. Mulock) who moved the second reading of the Bill, announced that the Government, after consideration of this question, and while it may not have been deemed necessary in the interest of what is fair and just to cities and towns in this respect, have come to the conclusion that he mentioned, I am at a loss to know what possible valid reason hon. gentlemen can give against the Bill, as it affects that city. With two members for Kent, each of these members will represent more than an equal number in the county of Simcoe, which has three members. If disproportionate representation of counties and cities is to be a reason why this Bill is condemned, then—if I may follow the bad example of the hon. leader of the Opposition, and allude to what is possible to transpire in another place—I would ask him, if he can count for much help in that direction; on account of undue representation, or want of proper representation. Imagine that argument in that other place. The Bill goes before that body—I am drawn into discussion, because that hon. gentleman has made a shameless appeal to that body—but, when they come to look around their Chamber and to recognize the fact that there are 24 members of that House now who represent the whole of the province of Ontario, numbering over 2,000,000 of people, and when they see that one-quarter of the whole number are from the city of Toronto, they will not be apt to think that Toronto is unrepresented.

Mr. CLANCY. Is the hon. gentleman (Mr. Paterson) answering the newspapers, or answering the discussion by members of this House?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. There has not been much discussion by members of the Opposition, and I am answering them both at once, or I am endeavouring to do so. I was pointing out that it may be conceded, in reference to the city of Toronto, that, even with its five members, each of these members will represent a larger number than the members elected, after this Bill becomes law, will represent in rural constituencies. This is granted. It has been a recognized principle in this country, and, I think, in other countries, that cities do not expect, and that they have never received, if they have expected, proportionate representation with rural constituencies. My hon. friend (Sir Charles Tupper) knows that in his own Bill that was the case. The hon. gentleman who moved the second reading of the Bill pointed out that no injustice is done to these cities. Look at it from the reasonable point of view—I dwell not now upon the fact that members representing outside constituencies live within the city, and that, while they represent faithfully their own constituencies, they know also what affects the city constituency. When any measure comes before this House, they can raise their voices in reference to how it may affect those constituencies within city limits. I point out another fact to you, Mr. Speaker, a fact that every hon. gentleman recognizes, and which has been recognized by both parties, and it is, that if there be a distinction made, it should be made in favour of a rural population rather than in favour of a city like Toronto. Why? We know that if, during the session of Parliament, there is a measure proposed that affects the city of Toronto, the people of that city know it in the morning. The indefatigable reporter has got a full report of the transaction, and it appears in the newspapers, and, if there be anything affecting the interest of the city, there is no time lost in taking action in regard to it. They can get a meeting of the board of trade or of the city council at an hour's notice. Within twenty-four hours of the meeting you have a delegation of the representative men of the city coming before your committee to present their views. In a rural constituency, the interests of which might be affected by some measure before the House, it is impossible to summon any deliberative body amongst themselves; it is not as easy to get a meeting in such a rapid manner, or to reach the views of the people dwelling in a rural constituency.

Mr. CLANCY. Are these the reasons which induced the hon. gentleman to make up his mind to give the city of Toronto five, instead of four, members?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. I have explained to hon. gentlemen that, listening to what might be said by hon. gentlemen, with the view of meeting their views, if there is anything in it, that the Government have taken one member away from what the hon. gentleman concedes to be a Liberal riding, and given it to the city of Toronto, that the hon. gentleman claims as Conservative. I am not going to take a position that the hon. gentlemen opposite have taken. It may be, that all the constituencies that they are willing now, for the purposes of this discussion, to give to the Liberal party, may all go to the Liberal party after the passage of this Bill; but I am not prepared to say, that the city of Toronto, which has been given five members, is sure to return five Conservative members, any more than I am sure of saying, that every constituency that is dealt with and finally readjusted by the judges, will return, as hon. gentlemen opposite say, all Liberal members. We do not know what the result of the elections may be. All we have to see to, and what this Bill proposes to accomplish, is, that the voice of the people shall be heard on the floor of this House in a fair, free and open manner, in such a manner as it will send to Parliament men that will speak the voice of the majority, as the voice of the majority will have it spoken. I may be pardoned, and I will take a little longer than I intended just to allude to the reason why this Bill has been introduced, because I dare say, that I am addressing a House in which the majority of the members are not conversant with the subject of the redistribution or the Gerrymander Bill of 1882. I am inclined to believe that the majority of this House were not members of it at that time. I was then a member of this House, as also were other hon. gentlemen I see around me; but to those who were not present at that time, and who may not have read "Hansard," which gives a very fair account of the proceedings that took place, I wish to point out the iniquities of that Bill, which the Liberal party of that day, the Government party of to-day, protested against. There was a great deal of indignation expressed and a great deal of denunciation of the Bill. I can remember how some of the hon. members who were struck at, distinctly and evidently struck at, voiced their indignation. The then member for South Brant had a voice that could be heard, and it was heard denouncing that Bill as iniquitous; the voice of the present Minister of Justice (Mr. Mills) was also heard in strong denunciation. And there was a reason for that. If hon. members who were not present then will take the "Hansard" of 1882 and read the twenty-two amendments that we moved to the Bill, which recite the iniquities of the measure, I believe that they, like many Conservative members of that day—save and except a few who were lost to all proper feeling of what was due between man and man—will blush when they read, and when they understand the nature of that gerrymander. And what was it? A majority in the Parliament of Canada, elected not upon that issue, used their power in this Chamber, without debate and in dumb silence, to vote down amendment after amendment, and not daring to lift their heads when they understood the iniquities which they supported by their votes. And, Sir, the iniquities of that Bill were further exemplified in this, that men who sat side by side in this Chamber, men who dined at the same table, men who were friends socially witnessed the scene in this House of Conservative members so far forgetting themselves that they deliberately, through the force of a majority in numbers legislated to strengthen their own political position. That was bad enough, but that was not all that aroused indignation. They saw members of this House who were brave enough to legislate in order to strengthen their own position, and who were mean enough, at the same time, to plot against their fellow-members in the adjoining constituencies, so as to put them to political death by an Act of Parliament. That was what raised the indignation. It was then shown that this member, and that member, and the other member, and still another and another of the Liberal members who could not be defeated in any other way, were singled out to be legislated out of Parliament, amid the jeers of some of the more gross-minded of their political opponents. The Bill was fought against; twenty-two amendments were moved, each one reciting an iniquity, and these amendments were voted down in dumb silence, forty-two yeas and ninety-nine nays; vote after vote, not a word of defence from the Conservative Government supporters who though they might with downcast heads vote for the gerrymander of 1882, could not for very shame stand up and defend it.

Now, Sir, what does this Bill do? Is there any member on the other side of the House who is struck personally or individually by this Bill? No, nothing of the kind. There are certain members of Parliament on this side of the House supporting the Government who will not have such safe constituencies as they had before, but where is the member who can say he is being legislated out by this Bill. Does my hon. friend from Bothwell (Mr. Clancy), whose riding disappears, and disappears not to strike at him, but in conformity with the principle that has been adopted; does he say he is being legislated out of the House by this Bill? Sir, he cannot say so. He lives in the county of Kent, I believe, and that county is to be divided for two members, but that division is not to be made by a majority in this House; that division is not to be made by a revising barrister of five years' standing, as was the case under the Conservative Franchise Bill; no, that division is to be made by the judges of the land. And what judges? The very highest judges of this land. Who can tell how they will divide the county of Kent? Will my hon. friend (Mr. Clancy) say that if a political party divided the county of Kent it could not be so divided as to return two Liberal members.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. gentleman's friends in Ontario have divided it in that way.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. Will my hon. friend state that it is not possible to divide the county of Kent in such a way as to give a majority to two Liberal members, if it was the desire of this Government, and the desire of the majority in this House so to do? Sir, this Bill takes the division out of the hands of a political majority and gives it to the judges of the land. There is no man struck at individually. It proposes to return to the county boundaries, and that is a principle that the Liberal party has contended for time and again.

Here let me allude to some remarks of the leader of the Opposition. The hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) appealed to the members of another Chamber in order to strengthen his position with them, in order to coach them, if it is possible to do so; he appealed to them with a shamelessness that is not often witnessed on the floor of this Parliament. He told them they did right in the Yukon matter—though he supported the Yukon Bill himself. He told them they did right in throwing out the Drummond Railway Bill, and he told them they did not do right when they did not throw out the Franchise Act, leaving them to infer that they would do wrong if they did not throw out this Redistribution Bill. He argued that the Senate was within its right when they rejected these Bills, because it merely gave the people the opportunity of pronouncing upon the questions at issue, but he also admitted that if the people had pronounced in favour of any public measure, then the Senate would pass it without the slightest hesitation. That is the argument of these hon. gentlemen opposite; it is the ground upon which they stand, and I will take them upon their own ground. The Redistribution Bill, the second reading of which has been moved to-day, is a Bill which has been before the people of Canada. The nature of that Bill, the object of that Bill, were before the people, were pronounced upon by the people, and this Government was returned to introduce that Bill and to ask this Parliament to pass it. I therefore think, Sir, that the hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) will appeal in vain to any legislative body which has any regard for justice, to throw out this Bill. The people have declared at the polls that they want this Bill. They have declared themselves in favour of this Bill by a majority of their representatives in this House, and with that declaration of the people the Bill will go to the Senate. And, as to the complaint of the hon. gentleman about the passage of the Franchise Bill in the Senate, it may be that the Senate was influenced by the fact that they knew that that very Franchise Bill was a question submitted to the people of this country and approved of by them. They know that the people of this country pronounced for the repeal of the Franchise Act, and the Franchise Act was repealed. And, Sir, we are here to-day carrying out one of the pledges in the platform adopted by the great national Liberal convention that met in this city in 1893. Almost all of the pledges then made have been carried out. This pledge remains to be fulfilled. This pledge the Government intend, as far as it is in their power, to fulfil, as they have fulfilled almost all their other pledges; and should they fail to pass the Bill, they will have been true to what they promised to the people, and upon those who assume the responsibility of casting out the measure the blame will lie, and not upon the Government. Sir, hon. gentlemen opposite fight the Bill, and denounce it as an infamous Bill—so infamous that they say that the snow will fly before we finish discussing it. Well, let me say, so far as I am concerned, that if we were seeking party advantage in this matter, the longer the measure is obstructed by hon. gentlemen opposite, the worse it will be for themselves, if I am any judge of the people of this country, and I think I am. I have been in Opposition when we have fought very hard some Bills that were introduced by the Government of the day. I can even remember the leader of the Government of that time lecturing us very severely, and telling us that we were bringing Parliament into contempt with this factious opposition, as he was pleased to term it, and keeping the House in session day after day, as we did, when that Government introduced a measure to throttle the electorate, and to wipe out one of the great political parties of this country. We answered: "We will assume the responsibility; if we are fighting in a way that we ought not, it is to our own loss, for the people will visit our conduct on our heads." But the people said we were right, and they returned us to power. So I say to hon. gentlemen opposite: If you believe this Bill is a monstrous and infamous Bill, it is your bounden duty to fight it. If you are willing to assume the responsibility, do so, confident that your action will commend itself to right-thinking people in this Dominion. Let obstruction be used, if obstruction should be used against this Bill—criticism, full, free, and to the utmost extent; it is the right and privilege of members of the Opposition to use it. To go beyond that is within their power if they see fit to exercise it. Upon them alone will rest the responsibility. But the question comes to this. Perhaps hon. gentlemen opposite view the measure from a different standpoint from what I do. Perhaps they can see some injustice, some unfairness in this Bill which I confess I am unable to see. It may be so; but when we go back and appeal to the people, we will suppose that one of these hon. gentlemen goes into the county of Perth and appears on a public platform in favour of the candidate of the Conservative party, and meets with the candidate of the Liberal party; and the candidate of the Liberal party takes up "Hansard" and reads that it was declared in Parliament by the Conservative party that it was a monstrous thing and an infamous thing for you men of North Easthope and you men of South Easthope to be allowed to vote in the municipal county to which you belong, and in which you exercise your municipal rights. Will that strengthen the Conservative party? If in addition it is pointed out that the precious time of Parliament was occupied, not in argument but simply in clogging the wheels of progress, in an attempt to defeat this Bill, will that strengthen the position of the Conservative party? Go into the townships of Burford and Oakland, which by the Act of these hon. gentlemen in 1882 were torn out of South Brant, which had the proper unit of population, as near as might be; so that 5,000 people were taken out of that riding and put them into another county, giving it a population of about 25,000, leaving South Brant with about 21,000. Go to those people, and on the platform say to them: "Men of Burford and Oakland, the Conservative party say that it is an infamous thing for you to vote again in the county of Brant, where you live and do business, where you elect your county councillors, and where all your municipal interests lie." Go into the township of Ancaster, which was torn from the county of Wentworth, in order to put to his political death honest old Joe Rymal, who had the respect of every man on either side of the House. They took that township and tacked it on to the county of North Brant; then they went away west to the county of Oxford, and took another township there and tacked it on to the other end of North Brant, thus putting parts of three counties together, and making a constituency which was 4,000 under the unit of population—all to kill honest Joe Rymal politically. Go to the township of Ancaster, and tell the electors there: "The Conservative party held Parliament till the snow flew, and declared that it was an infamous thing for you men of Ancaster to vote in the county to which you belong." Yes, obstruction is the privilege of these hon. gentlemen, if they choose to use it.

Mr. CLANCY. Will the hon. gentleman permit me to ask him a question?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. Will the hon. gentleman sit down, please. When the hon. members for East and West York go before those of their constituents, who reside within the municipal limits of the city of Toronto, and some one rises before them and reads "Hansard" to show that it was declared in Parliament to be an infamous thing—

An hon. MEMBER. A diabolical thing.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS—a diabolical thing and a monstrous thing for those men to be permitted to vote in the city in national matters with the men with whom they vote on every municipal question, do hon. gentlemen think that they will strengthen themselves wonderfully in that way? If they go to either of the ridings of the county of York from which these portions of the city of Toronto are taken, and say to the electors there: "This is an infamous Bill and we are going to fight it till the snow flies," what will the men of York say? They will say: "We have had three members in the past and we have three members now; we are represented as strongly in the House of Commons as we were before." Do you suppose these men will feel that an outrage has been perpetrated upon them? Why, Sir, it will not bear investigation. Well, how are the other provinces dealt with? How are hon. gentlemen opposite going to go down to the other provinces and justify their threat to keep Parliament here till the snow flies? When it is pointed out to the people on the platform that the proceedings of Parliament were delayed, that tens of thousands of dollars of the money of the people of this country were wasted in obstruction, the electors in New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, or Prince Edward Island will say to them, what is the reason of this? Why did you fight that Bill in this way? "Oh, because it was an infamous bill." "Well, well, what kind of a Bill was it?" Why, do you know that up in Ontario they removed some of the atrocities, as they termed them, that were committed in the Redistribution Bill of 1882. The Liberal party took the ground then that the county boundaries should be retained, and brought in this Bill to restore them." The question was then asked: "Did they make the county boundaries?" The answer must be: "No they did not." "Then, who made the county boundaries which had to be removed because they were so monstrous. That must have been done by these men." "No." "Well, who did it." "I cannot tell, they were made some thirty or forty years ago, before this Government took birth." "Well, how could you blame this Government for that?" "True, but do you not see that some of these counties are entitled to two or three members and they divide them up so that the Liberals will get a majority?" "Oh, is that so? Who, then, did the dividing? Was it the party in the majority in the House?" "No." "Who, then?" "I suppose they appointed political partisans of their own to do it, and that is how this monstrous thing was done." "No, they appointed the judges." "You mean revising barristers?" "No, Well, what judges did they appoint?" "They appointed judges selected from the highest court in the land, men at the very top of our national life in this country."

What, Mr. Speaker, do you think the people will say of those who attack a Bill of that kind, who declared they will obstruct it until the snow flies? Well, they are welcome to all the opposition they can make, if they think it is any advantage to them. In opposing the Bill they are acting within their rights, but the people will have something to say of their conduct. My hon. friend from North Bruce said that he had no objection to the judges deciding the divisions. I would have expected nothing less from the hon. gentleman, knowing his great respect for and knowledge of the judiciary. But what will the people think of those people who thus inferentially insult those judges, who, if there is any gerrymandering possible, are the only ones that can do it? I do not think that the people will take the view which these hon. gentlemen take of this Bill.

These hon. gentlemen say: You are not carrying out the principle of representation by population, which is one of the principles of the Liberal party. Sir, that was one of our principles, in the old times, as between provinces and that principle is embodied to-day in the British North America Act, and is a fundamental principle in the constitution of this country. Representation by population, as between the provinces. But while you can get a unit of representation as between the provinces, no man can devise and no one has ever suggested that you could secure a perfect unit of representation in the electoral boundaries of the different ridings of this country. That unit of representation is not to be lost sight of altogether, nor is it in this Bill. It is to be observed as nearly as possible, and the hon. leader of the Opposition has told us himself that it is impossible fairly to observe it. He has pointed out where differences exist under this Bill, and he has increased the number—I do not accuse him of doing it wilfully—of the population of the city of Toronto. He says Toronto has a population of 200,000, which will give 50,000 to each of its five members. But there are not 200,000 people in Toronto, according to the census of 1891, which is made the basis for the judges to go upon, and which is the last authoritative statement we have of our population. I speak subject to correction, but when those divisions that are to be added to the present electoral district of Toronto are added to it, under the operation of this Bill, there will be 180,000 in that city, represented by five members, so that each member will represent 36,000. And if I am not mistaken, the present member for West York (Mr. Wallace), in his present constituency, is representing 41,857 souls, under the law of to-day.

Look at the electoral districts as constituted by hon. gentlemen opposite in their Bill of 1882, still further confirmed and enlarged by the Act of 1892, when, as was pointed out by the hon. gentleman who moved the second reading of this Bill before the House, hon. gentlemen opposite cast aside the views held by Sir John Macdonald relative to the necessity and desirability of maintaining county boundaries, and tried to justify themselves on the plea of equalizing the population in the different electoral districts much more closely than it was possible to do retaining the county bounds. But I venture to say that if you will take their measure and examine the ridings made by these gentlemen, who talk so glibly about the equalizing of population now, you will find greater disparities of population in the ridings, as established by them, than you will in the operation of this Bill and the divisions established under it by the judges of the land. Does the hon. gentleman shake his head? Let me give him a few instances.

The electoral districts of Brockville and two townships with a population of 15,853 were taken out of South Leeds, leaving the latter 22,449. Was there any discrepancy there? Cardwell is formed out of parts of Peel, Simcoe and Dufferin, having a population of 15,382. It adjoins North Wellington, with a population of 24,956, and South Wellington, with a population of 24,373. Durham West, with a population of 15,374, adjoins Ontario South, with a population of 19,033. Frontenac, with a population of 13,445, adjoins South Leeds, whose population is 22,449. Grenville South, with a population of 12,929, adjoins Dundas, whose population is 20,132. North Leeds and Grenville, with 13,521, adjoins Carleton, with 21,746. Lennox, with 14,900, adjoins Addington, with 24,151. Middlesex West, with a population of 17,288, adjoins Middlesex East, with a population of 25,569, and that is one of the counties which those hon. gentlemen gerrymandered. Northumberland West, with a population of 14,949, adjoins Northumberland East, with a population of 21,995. Peel contributed two townships to form Cardwell, leaving it only with 15,466, while York West, which adjoins Peel, with a population of 41,857. Peterborough West has a population of 15,808, while the east riding has 21,919.

Hon. gentlemen opposite may say: But some of these you are not touching at all. I grant that, but are we thereby gaining any advantage? Is there any party advantage being sought by our not touching them? The right hon. leader of the Government, when introducing the Bill, in the absence of the Postmaster General, explained that we only proposed to rectify the more glaring iniquities of the Gerrymander Act of hon. gentlemen opposite. And where that Act is not interfered with, there is no party advantage to be gained by us, because the ridings are left as they were formed by these hon. gentlemen opposite, who so forgot what was due to every sense of honour, that they deliberately gerrymandered the counties in order to further their own political advantage. Any riding not touched by us is a riding constituted by hon. gentlemen opposite, and so constituted for their own party advantage, under the Gerrymander Bill of 1882, so that we can have nothing to gain by not touching it. If these hon. gentlemen did not seek their own advantage when they cut up 54 counties, threw in townships out of this county into that and vice versa, why did they do it? If they did not cut up every county it was because they believed certain counties were so strong in their interests that it was impossible to touch them in any way and make them more sure and safe for the Conservative party.

We attempt to rectify this wrong; we attempt to keep our promise to the people to carry out that for which we received the mandate of the people, to rectify the grossest feature of that Gerrymander Act, so that the people of this country might not be coerced, so that one political party might not be favoured more than another, but that their free voice should be heard, and that voice should rule, no matter what the consequence was either to Conservatives or to Liberals.

Hon. gentlemen opposite have spoken a good deal about the county of Brant. They would minimize the population of that county. I think the leader of the Opposition said there were 30,000 people there. There are in the county of Brant over 36,000 people, according to the census of 1891, and there are far more there now. I believe that there are over 40,000 people in Brant; but I do not mention that, because the judges are not to consider the municipal census, but will deal only with national figures, properly authenticated by the officers of this House, and I wish to deal only with the figures that the judges must deal with. There are between 36,000 and 37,000 souls in the county of Brant. That county has now two members given it now for the first time under this Bill, if it becomes law. Since the days of confederation, aye, before confederation, the county of Brant had two members. It is not because the county of Brant is, as I was proud to hear the hon. gentleman acknowledge, a banner Liberal county, that it is given two members; it is because, under the rule that is laid down by every principle of fair-play, the county ought to have two members. Is party advantage the object?

Mr. PATERSON.

Mr. CLANCY. Certainly.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. That is about the answer I should expect from the hon. gentleman? Would he say, that the county of Brant ought to have only one member?

Mr. CLANCY. Yes.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. What would he say, then, in reference to the county of Norfolk, which has a smaller population than Brant?

Mr. CLANCY. I would say—

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. Let me show how this works. The hon. member for South Norfolk (Mr. Tisdale), when speaking on the introduction of the Bill, said—speaking subject to correction—that this Bill would have a bad effect upon him, because—although, be it remembered, the judges, and not this Government, are going to divide the county—the north riding would be a perfectly safe constituency, while the south riding might be a very difficult one for a Conservative to carry. I do not profess to judge of the situation as the hon. member (Mr. Tisdale) does. Now, the county of Norfolk, with some thousands less than the county of Brant, ought certainly, in all fairness, to have one member taken from it before the county of Brant has a member taken from it. To do this would mean that the hon. member for North Norfolk (Mr. Charlton) would be returned by an overwhelming majority, while the hon. member for South Norfolk would be wiped out of political existence. We do not do that: we divide the county; and the hon. member for South Norfolk has an excellent chance to be in this House after the next election representing that riding. Do these hon. gentlemen wish one member taken from Norfolk? The figures between Wentworth and Norfolk are very close, Wentworth having a slightly less population than Norfolk. Without doing great violence to principle, we might give Wentworth two members and Norfolk one. Wentworth would be sure to return two Liberal members, as it did. I believe, from confederation down to the time the Bill of 1882 was passed. But we give Wentworth only one member, while the county of Norfolk, which, for years and years, has returned one Liberal and one Conservative, because it has a few more population than the county of Wentworth, is given two members. And hon. gentlemen opposite talk of an infamous Bill, and say they will sit until the snow flies in order to point out the infamies contained in this measure. Well, I do not think I need to enlarge more on this Bill.

Mr. WALLACE. Oh, yes.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. Well, I have no objection. I do not propose to go into the legal argument, as to whether we have a right to do what we here propose. The hon. leader of the Opposition, in these matters, is a layman like myself, and so I cannot accept him as an authority, though, from his age and his long parliamentary experience, he might be better able to judge than I. Still, this is a question upon which I fancy, the legal gentlemen in this House will be better qualified to speak. Speaking subject to correction, so far as I can remember, I know of no lawyer of any standing who has taken the ground that it is not possible for this Parliament to bring in a Bill for redelimiting the boundaries of a riding within a particular province. I have not heard that argued inside the House or outside of it, so far as I know, and it strikes me that no one will be found who will take that position.

Mr. FRASER (Guysborough). Not if he has a reputation to lose.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. I am not going to pronounce upon that; I leave the lawyers to talk on that part of the subject. I confine myself to the merits of the Bill, and I speak as I do in order that gentlemen who are now in the House may understand the reason why this great convention of the Liberal party assembled from all parts of the Dominion should take the position they did upon this question. It was recognized that the Bill passed in 1882 was a deliberate attempt to throttle the free expression of the will of the people of this country. Therefore, it was that men from the east, as well as men from the west, joined with the men of Ontario in declaring that this was one of the measures that must be introduced. The Bill of 1882 was a Bill that dismembered counties with a view to drive out of political life men sitting by the side of those gentlemen, and who had always fought them fair. Some of the best men that were in this House at that time were struck at. Some have passed away from these scenes of strife and debate; others there are who have voluntarily retired; but, Sir, there lives in the minds of those who were present, and who know what took place on that occasion, the feeling that never in the Parliament of Canada—save and except when the Franchise Bill was introduced—was so extraordinary a Bill presented. I scarcely know how to characterize it and keep within parliamentary bounds. When they saw men like the genial Liberal whip of that day, who has passed away from these scenes, a man who had the respect of members of both parties in this House, the genial member for South Perth, James Trow. When they saw that man struck at in a cowardly fashion by taking one of the townships out of his riding, because it gave 200 Liberal majority and throwing it into North Oxford that had already 1,000 of a Liberal majority, then they felt that a pass had been reached the depth of which they had not believed it was possible to be reached by men who could be elected as representatives of the people. And so with the present Minister of Justice (Mr. Mills). His riding was formed at the time of confederation, it was a riding that he had carried time and again, and townships were torn out of his county because they contained a Liberal majority, and were thrown into West Elgin that had hundreds upon hundreds of a Liberal majority already. And that was done in order to compass the political death of a man who was one of the ornaments of this House, and admitted to be so by Sir John A. Macdonald. In my own case, I had a riding that I had won from the Conservative party, won it fairly and honourably, and grew stronger as I went on. But they took out of South Brant Burford and Oakland, that gave some hundreds of Liberal majority, and threw them into another riding to equalize the population, and made it 25,000, while they left South Brant with only 21,000. There was the little township of Oakland, a three-cornered township that squared out the Township of Brantford, and that was 12 miles from the nearest point of the county into which they put it. The township of Burford they took out of South Brant and joined it to South Oxford. This little township of Oakland was 12 miles from the riding into which it was put. It was almost within sound of the bells of Brantford city, the main town of the riding, while the main town of the riding into which it was put was 50 miles away. On the third reading of that Bill I rose and recited these facts, and said that I wanted to ask a question of the gentleman who had charge of this Bill, I wanted him to look me in the eyes, but he sat with bowed head and dared not raise his eyes. Not one word of defence was given, and they voted down my proposition by 99 to 42. Yet that little township of 939 souls that I asked to be put back into the county of Brant, if put back, would have only given the south riding of Brant less population than the riding that was 12 miles distant from it into which they threw this township. That is gerrymander, but there is no gerrymander in this Bill. It is not possible to have a gerrymander in this Bill. If it were possible, and if it were done by political partisans, still there could be very little of a gerrymander as long as you are tied up within county bounds. It would be almost impossible for political partisans to accomplish much of a gerrymander even if they were entrusted with it. The Liberal party have some rights in this Parliament, with their majority they have a right to determine the bounds of the different counties and ridings. But they said: No, we will stand for a principle that will meet with the universal approval of every man of principle in this country. Though we have the right and power, and though we have the precedent of these hon. gentlemen opposite, we will divest ourselves of the power, and limit the changes within county bounds. Then we will leave it to the judges of the land, those judges shall be taken from the highest ranks and they shall fix the bounds, and when they fix the bounds we will not ask the right, as a majority in this Parliament, to review the bounds that they fixed. And yet hon. gentlemen opposite are going to stay until the snow flies to fight this Bill. Sir, I do not ask them to desist from that resolve. The more they denounce as infamous and as monstrous this Bill, the surer I am that they will meet with the condemnation of every right-thinking man in this country. For my own part, and speaking honestly and sincerely, I am proud to belong to a party that has received this Bill with entire approbation; it is accepted, so far as I can judge, even by those men supporting the Government who will not stand politically as fair a chance as they do under the existing constituency.

Mr. GIBSON. Here is another.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. I can point to a lot of them, but not the first word of complaint have they uttered against this Bill, because they recognize that a Government that is strong enough, fair enough, that has confidence enough in the people, to leave these matters to be settled by the highest judges in the land, cannot but meet with the respect and approbation of the country at large. This measure is supported by the men who stood up in Opposition to those who supported the Gerrymander Bill in 1882, by the men who believe that it is manly, just and fair to give both political parties equal rights, so that the voice of the people may be heard, let that voice be pronounced for or against them. I am in favour of the second reading of this Bill. I am proud that this Bill has been introduced into Parliament, so that the people throughout this country will recognize that the principles and operation of that Bill is an announcement and earnest that there are men administering the affairs of this country, supported by faithful men behind them, who are prepared to do what is just and what is fair by all who dwell in this broad Dominion. Therefore, I need scarcely say that I am in hearty sympathy with this Bill, and that I am quite ready, for my own part, to allow all the discussion to take place and all the argument to be sent forth in reference to its principles, until the snow flies. I will say one word more. An hon. gentleman asked if the judges would hear argument before coming to their decision. I have not the slightest doubt that the judges who will be appointed will be able to read, and that they will have "Hansard" before them.

Mr. PATERSON.

Mr. CLANCY. Is the hon. gentleman talking to the judges now?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. They will have "Hansard" within their reach, and they will read the arguments that will be adduced. Therefore, any arguments that hon. gentlemen opposite have to address against this Bill, it will be their privilege and their duty to advance these arguments now. The judges will read these arguments, I have no doubt.

Mr. BEATTIE. Do you suppose they will read yours?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. I should judge, from the fair and impartial character of the gentlemen who adorn the judiciary of Canada, that they will not read one side alone, and though I may not perhaps be able to adduce as strong an argument in favour of this Bill as hon. gentlemen opposite will be able to adduce against it, I venture to say that if they read the arguments which may be adduced in reference to this Bill, they may perchance read the few arguments I have endeavoured to advance. Therefore, I have not the slightest doubt that, with the census of 1891 before them, with the arguments of hon. gentlemen opposite before them, they will avail themselves of every source of information. I have no doubt that they will be able to avail themselves not only of the Dominion census in reference to the inequalities of population of different counties, but also in reference to the population of the townships and the towns and cities comprised within these. With a map before them, which I suppose they will desire to have, they will know themselves where these townships lie and they will have all the sources of information that will be necessary to form a judgment, that they will desire to have, as they no doubt will desire to have, in order to discharge their duty as, I think, every one will admit, they will discharge their duty in such a way as to commend themselves to every person. I only allude to this. I am pleased to see that some hon. members opposite are awakened to what they think is right in reference to this matter, that in a question of this kind arguments on one side or the other only, should not be listened to, but that both sides should be heard. They will hear both sides; they will avail themselves of the arguments pro and con. How was the Bill of 1882 prepared by these hon. gentlemen themselves? Did they want this matter argued by both political parties? No; in a chamber, with closed doors, they summoned their heelers and their party workers from all the different counties, and there they sat down, with a map before them, took this township out of that riding, that township out of this riding, placed this township into that riding, and that township into this riding and when they had brought the Bill down to the House, without any one knowing anything about it, they wished to force it through by the majority of their own supporters. That is how they allowed both sides to be heard in arguing the question as to what was right and proper in reference to that matter. Let me show what they accomplished bearing in mind that their purpose was to equalize the population. I will give you a few instances. The municipal county of Oxford had a population of 49,857, and can more easily be divided into two ridings than Durham or Peterborough; yet two townships, Dereham and Blenheim, with a population of 9,631, were taken out of Oxford. They were taken out of Oxford, and mind you, we were asked to equalize the population. That was the reason for taking these two townships out. One of the two townships, which together had a population of 9,631, went into Perth, and the other into Brant, and they took the two townships of Easthope, north and south, and Burford from Brant, and put them into Oxford to make up for the population of 9,631 that they had taken out. They added a population of 9,639, or eight more than that of the townships that they had taken from that riding.

Mr. CLANCY. How did these ridings stand then?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. The hon. gentleman asks how these ridings stood. One of the Easthopes was in North Perth and the other one in South Perth. North Perth was represented by a Conservative and South Perth was represented by Mr. Trow, the genial Liberal whip, who has passed away. They had some hundreds of a Liberal majority in South Perth, and they thought to assassinate Mr. Trow by taking this township out of North Oxford, knowing that they could not assassinate Mr. Sutherland, who had a thousand of a majority. Blenheim, with a population of 5,606, was taken out of Oxford, and put in Brant, because they had taken Burford and Oakland, with a population of 5,797 out of that county. They did that to equalize population. Middlesex, with a population of 64,453, could easily be divided in three ridings. The township of Euphemia was taken from Lambton, South Dorchester from Elgin, and Stephen from Bruce, three different counties, in order to make up the population of Middlesex. Grimsby, in Lincoln, with a population of 2,705, was transferred to South Wentworth in 1892. But that left too few in Lincoln, so they went to the County of Welland and taking the township of Pelham, with a population of 2,554, added it to Lincoln to replace Grimsby. That was their way of equalizing. It would be just as nearly equal in all these cases if they left the townships where they were, but there was the sacred principle of equalizing the population, and so it had to be done. The township of Walpole was taken out of Haldimand and replaced by Wainfleet, belonging to Welland, and the township of Whitchurch was taken out of North York and replaced by transferring West Gwillimbury from South Simcoe to it. I might go on giving numerous instances of this kind to show the members of this House who were not present in 1882 what injustices were perpetrated. And when the great Conservative convention met in Ottawa—

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). They never had such a thing as a convention in their history.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. Did I say a Conservative convention?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Yes.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. Oh, no, they never had such a thing as a convention. But when the great Liberal convention met in Ottawa to deal with grave and momentous matters, they realized that the iniquity perpetrated on the province of Ontario in 1882, was sufficient to warrant the Liberals from all parts of the Dominion, in standing by the declaration, that whenever the Liberal party returned to power it was their bounden duty to introduce a Bill to remedy that injustice. Sir, this pledge, as far as the Government is concerned, has been implemented by presenting this Bill to the House. And if this Bill be defeated by any means or from any cause, the Liberal party will not be afraid to appeal to the constituencies as they are at present constituted; and if we have to appeal on the issue, that the torn municipalities should be returned to the parent trunk from which they were riven, then, I venture to say fair-minded Conservatives will say, that if there is one reason more than another which would lead them to transfer their past allegiance from the Conservative party and give it to the Liberal party, it is that the Conservative party have used their power to throw out an honest measure under which no party advantage was sought to be obtained, but which was placed absolutely and without appeal, as far as the distribution of the townships composing the different electoral districts of the counties are concerned, in the hands of the highest judges of the land.

Sir, I have spoken a little longer than I intended to with reference to this. The scenes witnessed in the House in 1882, the gross unfairness then perpetrated, when twenty-two amendments declaring our grievances were voted down in silence, when these scenes of 1882 come before my mind, I cannot help expressing my indignation, though, perhaps, it is not as keen after seventeen years as it was at that date. When I think that men like Mills, and Alex. Mackenzie, and Trow and Joseph Rymal, and Gillies, of North Bruce, and all of those men who stood here on principle, were attempted to be politically assassinated in defiance of every principle of justice, I sometimes get a little warm. My voice is not so strong as it was at that time, but with such voice as I have I denounce the gerrymander of 1882 now as I denounced it then. Despite the appeal that has been made in this House to another Chamber, I still believe that this Bill will become the law of the land. I believe it, because it is a just Bill, I hail it as a return on the part of the representatives of the people of this country, to the principle of a fair and equitable representation for the Canadian electorate in the Dominion Parliament.

Mr. WALLACE. I beg to move the adjournment of the debate.

The PRIME MINISTER. Oh, no, it is too early yet. We will be here until the snow flies if the hon. gentleman does not go on.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. The hour 's a reasonable one to adjourn, and I can hardly understand why the Prime Minister should insist upon this debate being pushed through on a Friday night with a very thin House.

The PRIME MINISTER. We have been threatened to be kept here all summer, and that threat was made even before the measure was brought down.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I never heard of any such threat. I have stated from the first that this measure would, I thought, be fully and fairly discussed, but such a thing as obstruction being attempted has never in my judgment, presented itself to anybody. I have not heard of it, and I do not propose to be a party to any such thing. I draw the right hon. gentleman's attention to the fact, that in 1882, he made it a grave charge against the Government that they postponed the Redistribution Bill until the last hours of the session? But, Sir, that Bill was introduced when the House had been in session eighty-six days, and this Bill, the only Bill announced in the Governor General's speech, has not had its second reading moved until ninety-two days after the opening of Parliament, in the fourth month of the session. I am astonished that my hon. friend should even have moved this Bill on a Friday, because he knows it is not possible to keep the members here on that night. I hope he will not persist in his course in refusing to adjourn at midnight, and if he does, it certainly will not be calculated to advance the business of this House.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend (Sir Charles Tupper) forgets that the circumstances of this session and the circumstances of the session of 1882 are not at all parallel. The debate on the Address in 1882 did not last for more than four weeks, or more, and though the second reading of this Bill is moved on the 92nd day of the session, it was introduced nearly a month ago. It is no fault of ours that it was not taken up before this. When my hon. friend (Sir Charles Tupper) per) tells me that no obstruction has been threatened, and that he has not heard of it, I must tell him that probably he is the only man in this House who did not hear the hon. member for West York (Mr. Wallace) and the hon. member for South Leeds (Mr. Taylor) both say that we would be kept here all summer. More than that, I heard my hon. friend (Sir Charles Tupper) say only this afternoon, that this Bill would never pass.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I did not refer to any obstruction in this House. I certainly said I did not believe this Bill would become law, but that has no reference to obstruction here. The Prime Minister forgets that owing to the circumstances of the Government, this session was called at a very unusual period of the year, and yet, in the case of the single Bill mentioned in the Governor General's Speech, he has moved the second reading of that Bill only on the ninety-second day of the session.

The PRIME MINISTER. If my hon. friend tells me that there will be no obstruction to this Bill,—

Mr. WALLACE. Ah!

The PRIME MINISTER. There is the answer. I was going to say that if my hon. friend tells me there will be no obstruction to this Bill, I will agree at once to the adjournment.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I can only say that I have never been a party to any obstruction of this Bill; I have never proposed such a thing, or contemplated such a thing. But, of course, I am only one member of the House. I am not in a position to answer for every one; but it is no part of my policy that this measure shall be other than fully and fairly debated, and I am only saying to the right hon. gentleman what I have invariably said everywhere among my own friends.

The PRIME MINISTER. Exactly; and I may say to my hon. friend that if he tells me on his authority as the leader of his party that there will be no obstruction to this Bill, I will agree at once to the adjournment.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I do not think, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. gentleman should press me in that way. He knows that I am as powerless as he is to answer for the action of others. Every member of Parliament is independent. I can only say that I have been opposed and am opposed now to obstruction in regard to this Bill; I do not see anything to be gained by it; but I do say to my hon. friend, and I say it in all seriousness, that he will not be consulting the progress of business if he forces the House not to rise at this hour of the night.

The PRIME MINISTER. Well, I will make another proposal to my hon. friend. We will resume the discussion of this Bill on Tuesday if he will agree to take a division on it next week, and I will agree to the adjournment.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh!

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. On the first day of the discussion on the second reading of the Bill, to which the Government attach such vital importance, it is most unreasonable that the hon. gentleman should ask me to agree that a division shall be taken on the Bill next week. I have stated in full frankness my views in regard to the progress of public business, and the progress in regard to this Bill, and I cannot do more than that. I say that with as much authority as I may have in this House. I say to my hon. friend, I do not propose, and have never proposed anywhere, under any circumstances, that this Bill should be met by obstruction; but it is a measure of grave importance, the very gravest importance, and to say that I am going to be a party to an agreement that a division should be taken next week on this Bill, is what I am not prepared to do, and what I will not do.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend will see that I am altogether right. On a measure of this importance he is not in a position to say that there will be no obstruction. I believe my opinion is shared by every member of this House that when a measure of this kind has been debated five days and we are not able to take a division upon it, then the opposition to it can be nothing but obstruction.

Mr. CLANCY. Is the hon. gentleman willing to apply that rule to the Bill of 1882?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. With regard to that Bill, which was one that ought to have been opposed more than this—I speak from recollection, but I believe that it was only discussed three days. I speak subject to correction, but I think the debate on the second reading occupied only one day, and we spent a day in committee; possibly we went back into committee afterwards: and on the third reading, when the 22 resolutions were moved, they were moved with very short speeches, without replies being made. If I am not mistaken, the Opposition at that time, speaking through their leader, agreed that the first division should be accepted as the recorded division for all the remaining motions, unless some member objected. This was done in order to expedite the business of the House. I think the hon. gentleman will find that to be correct, so that resolution after resolution was moved and declared lost without the members being called in. That is my recollection of the facility given to that Bill, which, from my point of view, was a Bill that required very much more discussion than this Bill.

Mr. WALLACE. I can call the Minister's attention to the fact that in the discussion of the Franchise Bill of 1885, the Opposition of that day systematically obstructed the business of the House for more than twelve weeks, causing the session to last twenty-four weeks and four days.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. It was a very bad Bill, and we had to improve it.

Mr. WALLACE. I think it was an excellent Bill in its principle, and one that should have been adopted, that was adopted, and was endorsed by the country. I will just say this much more before the adjournment of the debate, if that is to be—and I am not very particular whether it is to be or not—that hon. gentlemen on the other side have taken a wrong course, in my opinion, if they think, by the threats made by the Minister of Customs from one end of his speech to the other, those made by the Postmaster General, and those now made by the Premier himself, they are going to deter us from discussing this Bill. All these hon. gentlemen are conveying veiled threats of what will happen, if we dare to exercise our constitutional rights that Parliament gives us, in opposing this Bill. No one proposes to do anything but what is legitimately right and proper, and, if we do anything contrary to that, public opinion will condemn us; but I can tell hon. gentlemen opposite that they are not going to prevent us giving the most strenuous opposition to this Gerrymander Bill by any such threats as they have made.

Mr. McNEILL. I should just like to say to my right hon. friend that if he considers what has been said by the leader of the Opposition dispassionately, he will see that the better course to take in the interests of progress is to allow the debate to be adjourned at twelve o'clock at night. The hon. gentleman who leads the Opposition said that it was no part of his policy to obstruct the measure, and he went as far as it is possible for any one in his position to go in assuring the right hon. gentleman that he did not wish obstruction, and that he would—at least, I understood him so to mean—endeavour to see that there was not obstruction; but he could not possibly speak for every member on his own side of the House, any more than my right hon. friend could. But I feel quite satisfied that if the Government take the course of forcing on the debate on a very important measure of this kind at twelve o'clock at night, after the appeals that have been made it will not conduce to that pleasant feeling on both sides of the House which would be likely to promote the progress of the business of the House.

The PRIME MINISTER. I certainly take the word of my hon. friend the leader of the Opposition fully, as he gave it, and I acquit him of all intent, as he stated himself, of any kind of obstruction; but my hon. friend evidently will not answer for his party. If my hon. friend will answer for his party, I am ready to accede to his wishes, even if there be one or two recalcitrants. If he will not speak for his party, I have no other choice than to go on with the debate.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I do not propose to be a party to any obstruction of this measure, but I say it was very wrong to have introduced this Bill to-day. It should have been introduced yesterday. This looks like a design to take this Bill up before empty benches and prevent the discussion to which a measure of this importance is entitled. It was wrong to force me to reply to the speech on the second reading, on a Friday, when, as the right hon. gentleman knows, the House is usually empty. The right hon. gentleman showed want of courtesy in forcing this measure on to-day, of all days in the week. He knows that to keep a small number of members in this House, on a Friday night, when it is difficult to keep members here, is an act of grave injustice. While I have endeavoured to facilitate the progress of business as much as possible and see no advantage to be derived from anything in the shape of obstruction of this measure, still I think it should be fully and fairly discussed. At this period of the session every one is anxious to proceed with the public business, but I am not prepared to make any engagement that will tend to prevent full discussion of this measure, and I would be acting very improperly in the position I occupy were I to make any such engagement. I have made an appeal that ought to be acceded to without hesitation, and the hon. gentleman will be consulting the interests of the Government, if he is anxious to proceed with public business, by acceding to the reasonable and proper request that I make.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend knows it, without my telling him, that I would not willingly be lacking in courtesy towards anybody in this House, and to the hon. gentleman himself less than anybody else. If I did not go on with this measure on Thursday, my hon. friend knows the reason.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I do not know why the right hon. gentleman did not go on with the measure yesterday.

The PRIME MINISTER. Because I intended yesterday to finish up the supplementary Estimates.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. No communication was made to me on the subject.

The PRIME MINISTER. I spoke to the hon. member for York (Mr. Foster) on the subject.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Before I entered the House, immediately after three o'clock?

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

The PRIME MINISTER. Perhaps so. To-day I said that I intended to take up the Bill, because my hon. colleague, the Postmaster General, has to be away for an important domestic event, Tuesday next, and I added that if the hon. gentleman was not ready to discuss the Bill, we could then adjourn the debate. I did not force my hon. friend to speak. If he spoke, it was simply because he chose to do so. I stated frankly this afternoon—

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I did not hear it.

The PRIME MINISTER. When the Bill was called, I made the statement, in the hearing of everybody, that if hon. gentlemen opposite were not ready to debate, we would adjourn the debate. But the hon. gentleman apparently was ready, and has therefore no reason to charge me with any want of courtesy.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I say it was grossly unfair to move the second reading of this Bill, especially in the manner in which the Postmaster General moved it, and compel a reply on the spur of the moment. I should have much preferred speaking on another occasion. I did not hear the proposal made or would have objected to it. What should have taken place, was that the Bill should have been moved yesterday. Then we would have had opportunity to discuss it fairly. But even the proposition to move the second reading of a measure of this kind, when there was not a fair opportunity to reply to it, was a most unfair proposition. There was no courtesy in suggesting such a thing. It was simply most unfair. I again appeal to my right hon. friend. I have no hesitation in saying that I shall not remain in the House, if the debate is forced on. I shall be obliged to leave the House, because after having spoken at such length, I am not able to remain longer to-night. I shall leave the matter in the hands of my hon. friends to do the best they can, conscious that a grave injustice has been inflicted on the party, a grave discourtesy on myself, and that course of conduct will not promote the progress of public business.

The PRIME MINISTER. As far as discourtesy is concerned, I have only to say to the hon. gentleman that if that is the way he understands courtesy, he need not ask me in the future for any favours.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I ask no favour.

The PRIME MINISTER. He knows that he asked me not to present the Bill on a certain day because he was to be away.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. That was the day before yesterday, and I thank the right hon. gentleman for not bringing it on then.

The PRIME MINISTER. Then we will stick to the rules of the House.

Mr. BENNETT. How long is it intended to keep the House in session to-night ?

The PRIME MINISTER. A reasonable time.

Mr. BENNETT. What is a reasonable time is open to a great deal of discussion. What may be considered a reasonable time in our opinion may not be considered reasonable by hon. gentlemen opposite. The right hon. gentleman last week gave the House a test of force, and I do not think it was altogether successful. True, there are not a great many members here to-night ; but if this be kept up until ten o'clock to-morrow morning—and that was considered reasonable time the other night—we will have to bow to the inevitable and stand it. The debate is new, and a large amount of figures have been flashed on us as to population, which we have not had the opportunity of examining into, and we want to fortify ourselves with arguments. This proceeding is grossly unfair. The hon. gentlemen opposite who spoke regaled us with long rows of figures, carefully compiled, but I rather think they stumbled under the weight—the Postmaster General did at all events ; and when these hon. gentlemen succumbed under the load of figures compiled by themselves, surely it is only fair that we should have an opportunity of perusing them in "Hansard." Since my name was dragged into the discussion, since I was quoted as having said that I was prepared to stay here until the snow flies, I can say to hon. gentlemen on this side that if they are prepared to stand on the principle that the whole question of redistribution should be left to the judges, instead of limiting them to certain matters, I am prepared to remain here and keep them company.

The House divided on motion to adjourn the debate.

Motion negatived.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Before we proceed further, Mr. Speaker, I would like again to ask the right hon. the First Minister whether he thinks it seemly, whether he considers it in conformity with parliamentary procedure anywhere, that a measure of such importance as this, the only measure that the Government considered worthy of a place in the Governor General's speech, should be proposed for second reading on the ninety-second day of the session, on a Friday, and the discussion proceeded with at half-past twelve o'clock, with the fact made clear before the House and the country that there are only forty-one members present.

Mr. FRASER (Guysborough). Fifty members present.

The POSTMASTER GENERAL. There are some paired.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Quite true. I myself was paired with the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright), and he being absent I could not vote. Allowing for members paired, let us say there are fifty members present. Now, does the right hon. leader of this House think that he is consulting the dignity of Parliament—

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I do not think the hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) has the right to make a speech.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am endeavouring to keep close to the point.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. I suppose it would only be by unanimous consent that the hon. gentleman could speak.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Then, with the unanimous consent of the House, I would say, without party feeling of any kind, but out of respect for the proceedings of Parliament and out of consideration for the dignity of discussion in the House, I do not believe that my right hon. friend will insist on this discussion proceeding at half-past twelve on Saturday morning, with fifty members present. The hon. gentleman has found every disposition on my part, since the House opened, to forward public business in every way I possibly could. There has been nothing indicating the slightest disposition to obstruct by the Opposition. The right hon. gentleman is not considering what is due to the House, he is not considering what is due to the Government in the promotion of public business—if that is their object—and I make a further appeal to him before being obliged to leave the House.

The PRIME MINISTER. I do not think if my hon. friend will pardon me for saying so, the word "seemly" comes with any grace from his mouth, considering the conduct of the Opposition during the present session. We have seen so many things that are not seemly. We have seen a debate on the Address protracted by a repetition of the same things over and over again for four weeks and more. That was not seemly. We have seen the business of the Government obstructed almost at every turn. I think that on a day like this, and henceforth we should sit at least until half-past twelve if we are to have the blessing of a prorogation. It would have been better if we had consumed the time in proper discussion instead of filibustering as we have for the last forty minutes. But as we are within ten minutes of the time I had set down for the adjournment of the House, and now that the hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) sees by the division that the House is not with him, I will agree to the adjournment.

Mr. PRIOR moved the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to and debate adjourned.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved the adjournment of the House.

ADJOURNMENT—PRINTING OF EVIDENCE TAKEN BEFORE COMMISSIONER OGILVIE.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Before the House adjourns, I would like to ask the right hon. leader of the House if he is in a position to state how soon we may expect to have the evidence taken before Mr. Ogilvie printed. It was ordered by the House to be printed promptly, and it is of great importance in reference to the progress of public business that we should have it as soon as possible. There has certainly been abundant time to have it in our hands if due expedition had been observed.

The PRIME MINISTER. I do not admit that. I am sure that all expedition has been observed. I cannot say at the moment when the papers will be ready for distribution, but I will inquire into the matter and will press it as far as possible.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. My hon. friend will probably be in a position on Monday to say when we may expect this document to be printed?

The PRIME MINISTER. Certainly.

Motion agreed to, and the House adjourned at 12.30 a.m. (Saturday).

Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY, 19th June, 1899.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

PRAYERS.

APPELLATE COURT FOR YUKON TERRITORY.

Mr. PRIOR asked :

Is it the intention of the Government to bring in legislation this session constituting the full court of the Supreme Court of the Province of British Columbia an appellate court for the Yukon?

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). That question is now under the consideration of the Government.

I. C. R.—CONTRACTS FOR TIES.

Mr. MONK (by Mr. Dugas) asked :

1. Have any contracts for ties for the Inter-colonial Railway been given by the present Government in the province of Quebec?
2. To whom were these contracts awarded?
3. Were tenders for such contracts invited through the newspapers?
4. What is the price per tie?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). I will have to ask the hon. gentleman (Mr. Monk) to move for a return. It is quite impossible to give an answer to that question involving so much minutiae and detail.

LIGHTING HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT AND DEPARTMENTAL BUILDINGS.

Mr. PRIOR asked :

1. By what individual, firm or company, is the electricity for lighting purposes in the Houses of Parliament and the several departmental buildings supplied?
2. Is it supplied under contract?
3. If so, what is the date of the contract and for what term?
4. Is the electricity supplied paid for by the Government at a specific sum per annum, or by the amount of energy shown as passing through metres, or at so much per lamp in position in the buildings?
5. If by metre, at what rate per 1,000 Watt-hours? If by lamp, at how much per hour, month or year per lamp?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Mr. Tarte). 1. The Ottawa Electric Company. 2. Yes. 3. The 1st February, 1898, for one year, and continued for another year. 4. At so much per lamp. 5. $5.25 per lamp per year for first 3,000; $2 for each additional lamp.

DR. DEMERS, OF METIS.

Mr. DUGAS asked :

1. Is the Minister of Railways aware that one Dr. Demers, of Métis, is in the habit of constantly riding on the Intercolonial Railway on a railway bicycle ?

2. Is such a practice lawful and permitted by the authorities of the Intercolonial Railway ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). 1. I am not aware that Dr. Demers, of Metis, is in the habit of riding on the Intercolonial Railway on a railway bicycle. 2. Such practice is not lawful, and is not authorized by the authorities of the Intercolonial.

I. C. R.—EMPLOYMENT OF OCTAVE VALCOUER.

Mr. DUGAS asked :

1. Is one Octave Valcouer, of Ste. Flavie, in the employ of the Government on the Intercolonial Railway ?

2. Was not the said Valcouer dismissed from the service for intemperance ?

3. What position does he now hold in the service of the Intercolonial Railway ?

4. Why was he reinstated ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). 1. Octave Valcouer is employed on the railway as a cleaner at Ste. Flavie. He was employed in May, 1897, as a new man, it is not known he was in the service before. 2. There was an Octave Valcouer employed as watchman at Ste. Flavie, who was dismissed from the service in February, 1894, for intemperance. 3. He is not now in the service of the railway. 4. He was not reinstated.

MONEY ADVANCED TO QUEBEC HARBOUR COMMISSIONERS.

Mr. PRIOR asked :

1. What amount has been expended by the Government on the harbour of Quebec since the 1st of January, 1870 ?

2. What amount has the Government advanced during this period as a loan or loans to the Quebec Harbour Commissioners ?

3. How much of this amount advanced has been repaid to the Government ?

4. What is the present amount of arrears on that account, (1) for capital, (2) for interest ?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). 1. The Government has spent nothing directly. 2. $3,748,519.62. 3. Nothing. 4. (1) $3,748,519.62 ; (2) $1,305,315.01.

I. C. R.—COMPLAINTS AGAINST CAPT. REYNOLDS, OF THE "MULGRAVE."

Mr. McLENNAN (Inverness) asked :

What was the nature of the complaint lodged against Captain Reynolds, of the Intercolonial Railway ferry steamship "Mulgrave," and by whom ? Has an investigation been held ? If so, by whom and what was the finding ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). I am not aware of any complaints having been lodged against Capt. Reynolds, of the ferry steamer "Mulgrave." An investigation has been held by Capt. Smith, R.N.R., of the Marine Department, into the stranding of the ferry steamer "Mulgrave," on the 3rd of September, 1898. The finding was that Capt. Reynolds was not to blame.

I. C. R.—COMPENSATION TO MR. HUGH MORRISON, RIVERSIDE, INVERNESS.

Mr. McLENNAN (Inverness) asked :

Is it the intention of the Government to compensate one Hugh Morrison, of Riverside, Inverness county, for alleged damages sustained by the crowding out of his dwelling by the building of a "snow fence" along the Intercolonial Railway ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). The Government has not decided to compensate Hugh Morrison, of Riverside, Inverness county, for alleged damages sustained by the building of a "snow fence" along the Intercolonial Railway.

I. C. R.—MEN EMPLOYED ON ALBA SECTION.

Mr. McLENNAN (Inverness) asked :

What proportions of the Alba section of the Intercolonial Railway lie in the counties of Inverness and Victoria respectively ? What is the number of men employed from each county on said section, and by whom recommended ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). Two and one-fifth miles of section No. 6 are in Inverness county and four miles in Victoria county. Three men are employed on this section. M. A. Gillis, the foreman, is from Victoria county, and the men were appointed by direction of the Minister, except Mr. James McLean. Neil McKinnon, under man, is from Cape Breton county. James McLean, under man, has been in the service since 1892, and was recommended by Mr. T. V. A. McDonald.

BONDS OF PUBLIC OFFICERS IN YUKON TERRITORY.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER asked :

Have any of the officers employed in the public service in the Yukon district since February, 1897, given bonds under the provisions of section 5, chapter 19, R.S.C., or other statute ?

2. If so, what are their names ?

3. Is it a fact that no name of a Yukon official appears in the returns respecting bonds of public officers laid on the Table of this House for 1896, 1897, 1898 and 1899 ?

4. If the answer to the above is in the affirmative, what is the explanation ?

5. Has the Government any record or list under its control or in its possession wherein the names of the Yukon officials appear as having bonds under the statute above ?

6. If so, how many names appear there ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton). 1. Yes. 2. Customs : W. W. Hall, J. E.

Whiteside, F. Charman, W. N. Carmichael, J. A. McMartin, David Stevens and P. R. Steele; Post Office: I. J. Hartman, W. H. Scott, D. A. E. Strickland. 3. The name, D. W. Davis, Collector of Customs, appears on said list. 4, 5 and 6. The names of the officers who have given bonds do not appear to have been filed with the Registrar General. There is no complete list. The organization of the district has been proceeding as rapidly as possible, and it is expected that securities will be completed in a short time.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL—VALUATION OF LAND ALONG BALSAM LAKE SECTION.

Mr. GRAHAM (by Mr. Lang) asked :

1. What is the length of the Balsam Lake section of the Trent Valley Canal ?
2. Who were the valuers for the Government to value the land along this section of the canal ?
3. On whose recommendation were they appointed ?
4. How much per diem were they paid as wages, and what was their allowance for expenses ?
5. What was the total amount paid to each valuator in connection with this work ?
6. Did any of the land owners complain to the Government of any unfairness in connection with these valuations ?
7. Have any of the land owners refused to accept the compensation offered them for their land ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). 1. The length of the Balsam Lake section is 18½ miles. 2. The valuers are Messrs. Pope and McEachren. 3. Mr. Pope was recommended by Mr. H. Corby, M.P., and Mr. McEachren by Col. Hughes, M.P. 4. They were paid $10 per day and their living and travelling expenses. 5. The total amount paid Mr. Pope was $873, and Mr. McEachren received $1,053. 6. No complaints of unfairness were made in connection with these valuations. 7. Only two of the landowners have refused to accept compensation offered to them for their land.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL—PAYMENTS TO MR. F. D. MOORE, LINDSAY.

Mr. GRAHAM (by Mr. Lang) asked :

1. What was the total amount paid by the Government paid to F. D. Moore, barrister, of Lindsay, for conveyancing and other expenses in connection with the purchase of land for right of way along the Balsam Lake section of the Trent Valley Canal ?
2. What was the average paid to Mr. Moore for each deed drawn and title passed along this section ?
3. On whose recommendation was Mr. Moore appointed to do this work ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). 1. The total amount paid by the Government to Mr. F. D. Moore, of Lindsay, for conveyancing and other expenses in connection with the purchase of land for right of way along Balsam Lake section of the Trent Canal is $559.43. 2. The average paid Mr. Moore for each deed drawn and title passed is $37.29. 3. Mr. F. D. Moore was recommended by the Hon. John G. Haggart.

PORT OF CHEMAINUS, B.C.—PILOTAGE LIMITS.

Mr. PRIOR asked :

Has any Order in Council been passed defining the limits in which a vessel going to Chemainus, B.C., has to be spoken by a pilot before the Pilot Board can collect pilotage from her ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). The port of Chemainus is claimed to be within the Nanaimo pilotage district, which was established by Order in Council of the 2nd of October, 1879, to include the port of Nanaimo and all other ports in the Island of Vancouver, excepting Victoria and Esquimalt. Under the by-laws of the pilotage district referred to, approved by Order in Council of the 29th September, 1883, the limits for speaking vessels bound for Nanaimo are defined by the 29th and 30th regulations, and the 25th regulation defines pilotage rates for the Gulf of Georgia and straits navigation. The by-laws do not define any limits for the port of Chemainus for the purpose of compulsory pilotage, but the agent of this department at Victoria advises the department that he understands that a ship bound for the port of Chemainus, if spoken to in Fuca Straits or Haro Channel is charged pilotage by the Nanaimo pilots.

EXPENSES CONNECTED WITH PLEBISCITE IN MONTREAL.

Mr. QUINN (by Mr. McDougall) asked :

Has the Government paid all the expenses connected with the plebiscite of 29th September last in the city of Montreal? If not, what amounts remain unpaid? What has been paid, and to whom?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). The answer to this question is furnished by the Auditor General. The payment of these accounts rests altogether with the Auditor General. 1. All the claims made by the returning officers in Montreal have not been paid, some of the items being held in suspense awaiting explanations and some having been disallowed on the ground that they were not legitimate charges. 2. Amounts unpaid: The Auditor General reports as follows :

CUSTOMS OFFICER AT LEPREAUX.

Mr. GANONG asked :

Is there any customs officer at Little Lepreaux or any other place in the parish of Lepreaux, in the county of Charlotte, N.B. ? If so, what is his position ? Where is his office ? What is his name ? What is his salary ? When was he appointed, and on whose recommendation ?

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS (Mr. Paterson). John W. Mealy was appointed acting preventive officer at Lepreaux on the 14th October, 1898, at a salary of $10 per annum. Inquiry is being made regarding the location of his office.

ANTI-JAPANESE AND ANTI-CHINESE LEGISLATION.

On the order for Mr. Prior's motion for :

Copies of all correspondence, telegrams and reports between the Government and the present Government of British Columbia in regard to anti-Japanese and anti-Chinese legislation.

Mr. PRIOR. I think the right hon. the Premier brought down those papers the other day, and if so there is no necessity for putting this motion.

The PRIME MINISTER. I have brought them down, and they are now in the hands of the printer.

Mr. SPEAKER. The order is dropped.

INLAND REVENUE OFFICE AT VIRDEN.

On the order for Mr. Roche's motion for :

Copies of all correspondence between the Inland Revenue office at Virden, Manitoba, and the branch at Winnipeg, relative to a registered letter containing $92.20 or thereabouts, said to have been sent in January, 1897, from Virden and delivered to H. A. Costigan at Winnipeg ; for a copy of all reports and correspondence between Dr. Barret, inspector of the Inland Revenue Department, of Winnipeg, and the department referring to this matter, and to all alleged shortages and absence of H. A. Costigan from July, 1897.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Dropped.

Mr. SPEAKER. The order is dropped.

I. C. R. ENGINE AND CAR MILEAGE, &c.

Mr. FOSTER moved for :

Return showing : 1. The combined engine and car mileage—total, and that of the Intercolonial Railway—for each month from March 1, 1898, for the terminals, bridge, and other leased portions of the Grand Trunk Railway, as contemplated in the thirty and thirty-third sections of the schedule to Bill 138.

2. The amounts for (a) maintenance and repairs, and (b) for all other operating expenses, separately incurred by the Grand Trunk Railway Company and the Intercolonial Railway each month since March 1, 1898.

3. Copy of returns and information made under section 33 of said schedule for each month from March 1, 1898.

He said : The comma in the second paragraph should be after the word "separately" instead of after the word "expenses." The comma placed after the word "expenses" makes a difference in the reading.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). It will take some little time to bring that return down. I cannot promise to have it down for some time.

Motion agreed to.

LETTING OF CONTRACTS WITHOUT TENDER.

Mr. NICHOLAS FLOOD DAVIN (West Assiniboia) moved for :

Orders in Council respecting the letting of contracts without tenders, passed since the 23rd June, 1896.

He said : Mr. Speaker, in rising to move this motion, I think I can assure the House that it will not be necessary for me to trespass long upon its attention, because my object is to get information rather than to press strongly any views that I may happen to hold. But this opinion I hold strongly—and I think it will commend itself to the House—that the Order in Council that was passed in 1880, requiring that contracts for any work costing over $5,000 should as a preliminary have public tenders inviting competition, and thus securing for the public the advantage of the usual commercial rivalry, embodied a wise policy. I think I am not overstating the case when I say that there has been a tendency to ignore that Order in Council, and to ignore generally the wholesome system of inviting tenders. The other day we spent a considerable portion of the time of this House in dealing with a work in the hands of the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Sir Louis Davies)—an important work, which, it is admitted, will cost $40,000, and which may cost more ; and yet there were no tenders. If there were only that one case, I think it would justify a motion like this. But it will be in the memory of this House that last session a great deal of our time in committee was occupied in discussing the cases of one Minister after another who had ignored that Order in Council, and the time-honoured practice of which that Order in Council was partly the expression and partly the foundation. It will be remembered, Mr. Speaker, that in regard to a very great work which the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright) undertook to secure for Canada, he ignored the calling for tenders. The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher) did the same in a much smaller undertaking, but still one involving a considerable outlay every year on the part of the Government; and last session attention was called in this House to a flagrant case in the Public Works Department, which partly, I suppose, because of the nature of the department, seems to be the great sinner in this respect. Last session attention was called to the case of the Edmonton bridge, where a change was made from ashlar masonry to concrete in a work involving $40,000; and yet no tenders were called for, although the character of the work was completely changed. Now, Mr. Speaker, it is not my intention to pile up a list of cases against the Government on this subject; but, glancing over last session alone, in a hurried manner, which I was compelled to do, I found that we had before us not only the case of the Edmonton bridge, but the case of the Western Departmental Block, which, I believe—I shall be corrected by the acting Minister of Public Works if I am not correct—involved an outlay of $90,000; and all that work was done by day work—no tenders were called for. Then, we had the telegraph line on the north shore of the St. Lawrence, no tenders being called for. Then, we had before us several dredging cases—the dredging of Toronto harbour, the dredging of Coteau Landing, and elsewhere; and in neither case were tenders called for. In each case, when the attention of the Minister of the department was called to it, the same thing happened as happened the other night, when my hon. friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries admitted that tenders should in all cases possible be called for. He made the special plea of urgency; but, as was pointed out, there would have been no difficulty in calling for tenders, because the specifications were at hand. Then, last session, there was a case in the department of the right hon. leader of the Government, to which attention was called, that is, the drug supply for the Mounted Police at Prince Albert. There the contract was given to W. J. Fleming without tender, although that gentleman had tendered the previous year and failed to get the contract because his tender was higher than those of his competitors. In the same way the supplies in the Indian Department have been given without any tenders being called for. Instead of the system being to call for tenders, we seem now to be getting into the system of doing the business of the country as much as possible without them. Then, there was in the department of my hon. friend the Minister of Militia (Mr. Borden) the transportation of the Yukon supplies given to the Boston and Alaskan Transportation Company without tender, and the purchase of the supplies without tender. In the case of Messrs. Bate & Co., no public tenders called for, although the purchase was a large one; and not only no public tenders called for, but the way the tenders were called for, ignoring the merchants and commercial men, who of all others should be considered in that matter as a matter of justice, that is, the merchants and commercial men of the Pacific coast in British Columbia. However, I am not now dealing with the question from the point of view of justice to any section of the community. I am dealing with it from the point of view of the interests of the community at large. I will call attention to one small case that illustrates the danger which necessarily attaches to ignoring tenders. In the case of the Coulonge Slide, a certain amount of work had to be done and a gentleman visits the department and has a conversation with one of the officers. That officer says to him: You may as well have this contract; and not only that, but tells him what he will give him the contract for. It is a contract for supplying timber, and he offers to give it to this gentleman at $22 per 1,000 feet. The offer is accepted, and at the very spot where the timber is to be delivered, it is delivered by a man who supplies it to the contractor at $15 per 1,000 feet. The man, Mr. Tremblay, who got the contract, was not a lumberman at all, and this is what the Auditor General says:

The Government paid $22 a 1,000 feet to Tremblay for the planks, while it was delivered by Proudfoot on the spot for $15, the Government paying 46½ per cent on the first cost to a man who never spent a day on the work.

Further on, the Auditor General says:

With regard to the supply No. 1, it does seem to require explanation that Mr. Brophy, who knows all about the products of the neighbourhood of the different works under his control, should not have taken care that the owners of the saw-mills at Coulonge were communicated with as to their ability to produce the elm and as to the prices which they would take, before making a bargain with a person who had no mill, and on a basis of getting the logs many miles away, and, therefore, going to the expense of drawing the plank the long intervening distance to the slide.

In his evidence Mr. Tremblay says:

On or about the 4th June I went to Ottawa from Bryson, being still out of employment, and went to Mr. Brophy and told him, speaking about the plank, that, from my own experience, elm plank would do for the Coulonge Slide. He then said to me: "You are doing nothing here, I will give you $22 a 1,000 for good elm plank delivered at the Coulonge Slide." I said: "All right, I will taken the contract." I came to Bryson, after making the contract, which was a verbal one.

After explaining what he did to secure the lumber, he said that at the suggestion of Mr. Brophy the name of Mr. Bertram was substituted for his in the contract, and the man Tremblay, as he had some other work to do for the Government, seems actually to have checked his own account, which was put in in the name of Bertram. It struck the Auditor General, as it would any one, that this was irregular, and I just cite it as an instance. It is a small thing, if you like, and does not come within the Order in Council, but it illustrates the danger, in Government works especially, of ignoring the ordinary precautions taken even by private individuals in order to get work done at the lowest rate.

I have referred to the dredge contract. If you will turn to the Auditor General's Report, you will find that he communicates with the department on the subject of the dredge contract for over $5,000, let without tenders. On March 31st, 1898, he wrote the secretary of the Public Works Department:

Sir,—I received yesterday at 4.30 p.m., your application, No. 208, for $20,360, in favour of J. W. Wurtele & Co., for steel plates, etc., for the construction of a dredge-hull. There is a general Order in Council of May 23rd, 1880 (shown at page 20 of my report of 1896-97, and at a similar place in several preceding reports), which fixes $5,000 as the limit of contracts which can be let without public tender, unless special authority be obtained from Council.

The Order in Council of Nov. 25, 1897, which gives authority to contract with Wurtele & Co. and with the Cavanagh Co., for $20,460 each, explains only that "quotations have been obtained." Nothing is said about the existence of a standing regulation, which requires to be abrogated to make the contract possible.

You will find similar case discussed at page R-322 (herewith) of my report of 1896-97.

I do not think that a special exempting Order in Council is complete unless it mentions explicitly the general regulation, whose operation it suspends, and also the fact that it is suspended.

I call attention to the wording of this letter of the Auditor General's, because it points to one of the reasons I have for making this motion. It is not sufficient to mention the reasons given in each case for suspending the Order in Council, but it should also be stated whether, as a matter of fact, the council has been properly informed by the Minister, who has been asking for this overriding Order in Council, because, Sir, it is perfectly clear that a strong, self-willed Minister may, by ignoring this wholesome rule, embodied in an Order in Council, that tenders shall in all cases be asked for if possible—and there are very few cases where it is not possible—actually commit the Government to a certain course in his department, which the Government itself, if properly informed, would not have assented to. What happens then?

Let us put a hypothetical case—and I do not put it specially for this Government, but wish to apply it to every Government, whatever side may be in power. Let us put the case of a Minister who wants to do wrong. The only way he can do it is by ignoring the calling for tenders. He arranges with some contractor to have work done at a certain price. Well, he is in a bad box, unless he can get an Order in Council. He goes and makes any plausible case to Council. If he be a man, as I say, of strong will and great force of character, with the multiplicity of things before the Council, the worry upon the mind of the Prime Minister, and the weight of his own department upon each individual Minister, he may get his Order in Council through. And, once it is through if you seek to expose the transaction, you are not dealing with the Minister, but with the Government, and not with the Government, but with the whole party. The moment we attack that Minister who has got an Order in Council, there are a hundred shields to keep off every arrow you may let fly. A hundred! Nay, every party man throughout the entire Dominion throws his ægis over the guilty Minister. Now, I am putting that purely hypothetical case, but is it not palpable that, in every case where the system of calling for tenders, where public works are to be made, or changes in public works effected, we should have the rule that the Order in Council should forthwith be published, so as to let the public eye on the transaction at once. If, in every such case, the Order in Council has to be published, it would be a great bridle upon the kind of Minister I am speaking of.

Again, in the case of the Berthier channel dredging, the Auditor General has had to call attention to this rule, as I say, of ignoring tenders:

Moreover, although the limit of $5,000 has been exceeded on Mr. Robillard's contract, I do not find any indication of a public call for tenders, as required by the Order in Council of May 23, 1880.

I have sent for the book, and will read that Order in Council later on. With reference to the above, the Minister of Public Works wrote to the Auditor General on July 16th, 1898:

As to not having asked for tenders, I may remind you of the fact that I did not give any contract to Mr. Robillard. It was day's work. And I have a perfect right to do any amount of work by day's labour without asking authority from anybody. The Order in Council of 23rd May, 1880, clearly states that I cannot give any contract exceeding $5,000 without being authorized. But I am perfectly free to do by day's labour any work, whatever the amount may be. However, I stated in the House during last session of Parliament, that I would do away, as far as feasible, with dredging by the hour,—

And so on. Now, what really should be done by the Government, if they wish to follow in the footsteps of their predecessors, if they really wish to be guided by the example of Sir John Macdonald's Government, that in 1880 passed that Order in Council, when they find a Minister of the Crown evading it in this way—I do not wish to use the word offensively—when they find a Minister saying that he is not compelled to act under the Order in Council, if he refrains from making a contract, and has the work done by day labour, is to supplement the Order in Council of 1880, so as to prevent such evasion in the future. This system is, as a system, liable to more abuse than that of work by contract, as we know. Take, for instance, a case I have not yet mentioned—take the case of the fence around Major's Hill Park. We had that case up last year, and we remember that there was a good deal of laughter; but the humour of the laughter would not be so apparent to the people at large. There was a good deal of amusement at the clever way in which the Minister of Public Works evaded the Order in Council, by saying: This work, it is true, will cost a good deal more than $20,000; nevertheless, in no single year have I spent more than $5,000, and I am doing the work by day labour. Now, I recall the contract that was made for transportation to the Yukon, and also for purchase of supplies; I want to call the attention of the public and of the House of Commons to what was brought out. The hon. senior member for Victoria (Mr. Earle) called attention to the fact that the transportation could have been done for a great deal less than the price the Minister of Militia had agreed upon, if tenders had been called from the shipowners of the Pacific coast. The hon. gentleman stated that one shipowner told him that he would have been prepared to contract at a price, as it turned out, far less than the work was done for. Take, in regard to the large item of $14,000, in Bate's contract. My hon. friend (Mr. Earle) called attention to the fact that no items were given, and it was thought probable that if the merchants on the Pacific coast had got a chance to tender, better prices would have been got there. Now the language of my hon. friend (Mr. Earle) is this:

Here is what the gentleman says, and I presume this is information he gave to the hon. gentleman's officers:

"We did receive an inquiry from the Government, through Col. Peters, for a tender to carry some 200 tons of supplies for Dawson via the Yukon. We were then in a perfect position to handle the business, and we made a quotation of $275 per ton right through to Dawson City, particularly pointing out at the time that in offering this as a weight proposition we were giving an extremely good quotation, because, as these supplies would run as high as three ton measurements to one ton weight, which, at market quotation of $200 per ton weight or measurement (ship's option) meant that we were quoting $275 against $600."

There is the Order in Council. At that time Sir Hector Langevin was Minister of Public Works, and the hon. baronet who leads the Opposition was Minister of Railways and Canals:

On a joint memorandum, dated March 20, 1880, from the hon. the Minister of Public Works and the Minister of Railways and Canals, recommending that hereafter all public works involving an expenditure of over $5,000 shall be let by public tender and contract, unless owing to urgency or other cause it be deemed advisable to take different action, and that in all such cases authority be obtained by an Order in Council. That, with all tenders submitted, a money guarantee, or approved accepted cheque, shall be given, to be open to forfeiture in the event of the tenderer failing to make the necessary 5 per cent deposit, hereinafter referred to, within eight days after receiving notice of the acceptance of the tender, or of his declining to enter into contract when requested, the amount of such guarantee to be fixed at a sum not less than $1,000 nor more than $5,000. That upon acceptance of a tender, and notification by the department concerned, the intending contractor shall, within eight days, deposit with the Government a sum of money equal to 5 per cent of the amount of his contract. That in all cases where tenders have been called for, the lowest received shall be accepted, unless good and sufficient reasons appear for passing over such tender. The Committee shall submit the above recommendations for Your Excellency's approval.

The first sentence is the important one from the point of view of this motion, and I would urge on the attention of the Prime Minister the advisability of supplementing that Order in Council by another one requiring that in any case where a Minister undertakes work by day labour of over $5,000, he shall have an Order in Council to authorize him so to do. Now, Sir, as I told the House, I do not intend to trespass upon its time, but just to bring before its attention a few cases, a few specimen bricks, to illustrate what seems to be a system of departure from the wholesome rule, and which justify me in making this motion.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Mr. Tarte). Surely there can be no objection to the way in which my hon. friend has brought this question before the House. It is a fair question for debate. The hon. gentleman has alluded to some contracts for public works in which my department is engaged. The first case he alludes to is the Edmonton bridge. Well, that case was debated last year in the House. It is not exactly a case where a public tender was not asked for. A public tender was first asked on a statement of the engineer in chief of my department, that stone was available; but when it was found that no stone was available, we then decided what was the next best thing to do. Mr. Coste, who was then Chief Engineer, reported to me that in his opinion concrete work was at least as good work as any stone that could be procured there. I may say that since last year I have made frequent inquiry in reference to the use of concrete instead of stone, and all who are conversant with public works know that the use of concrete is becoming more and more general in public works. A few days ago I was in Buffalo, where they are rebuilding their great breakwater, and if I remember right, they have already rebuilt with concrete about 3,000 feet of the superstructure which had decayed. I have no hesitation in saying, and this is not a party question, that any engineer who will look at the Edmonton bridge will agree that the concrete work which has been done there is much better than any work which could be done with the stone that may be available. But I understand that that is not a case in point. The question is whether I should have asked for new public tenders after I found out that the first tenders could not be adhered to, that is to say, when I found out that the work could not be carried out with stone. Well, the reports are before the House. I may say frankly that I relied then, and would always rely to an extent, on the reports of my officers. The second work to which my hon. friend alluded is the Toronto harbour, and I think I may put in the same category the work at Coteau Landing, and some other works of the same kind. Under the late Administration, for some years, dredging had to be done by dredges hired at so much an hour. I followed the same system to a large extent, not merely because I was desirous of giving out a great deal of work by day labour, but because more works were pressed upon my attention. Hon. gentlemen on both sides who are conversant with the development of our trade, and the consequent necessity of developing our harbours and rivers, will understand that demands for harbour improvements come to us every day. The Department of Public Works, I am sorry to say, is not equipped as it should be, we should have a great many more dredges. I was in the House a few days ago when a debate took place upon this subject, and I may say immediately that the work which we are doing with our own dredges is better done and cheaper done than it could be by contract. I do not hesitate a moment in saying that this is the case with Toronto harbour, with the dredging at Coteau Landing, at Owen Sound and at some other places. And so with the dredging I am just now doing at Goderich. It would be very difficult indeed to give out by contract a great many of these works. I speak now as I would speak if I were on the other side of the House to-morrow. I do not know how long I may occupy the seat I am in now. If my health does not improve I may not be able to remain in this place very long; so I speak with more freedom than I have ever spoken perhaps in the past. What I am doing now, I think any Minister of Public Works would do under the same circumstances. There is a lot of dredging that cannot possibly be done by contract for the reason that you do not know exactly what quantity you will have to take out. In the Toronto harbour, I am just now dredging the entrance. There are engineers in this House who will agree with me when I say that it is impossible to make a survey every day just to see how much mud I will be obliged to remove from this harbour or that harbour. The Department of Public Works has to do one of two things: Either to have dredges of its own to do such work, or to hire dredges, to a considerable extent, at the lowest possible prices.

Now, by looking at the reports, my hon. friends will find that the work we have been doing by day labour, if I may use that word, or by hiring dredges, cost between 11 cents and 13 cents. I think it is rather a small price. I quite admit that there are some dredges belonging to my department which are doing dredging at a less cost, but there are others which are doing dredging at a higher price. All that is a question of whether it is hard or soft material. I must maintain the stand I have taken with the Auditor General. I have represented to him, and I believe it is the true stand, that hiring a dredge at so much an hour is not giving a contract, because I am not giving a distinct quantity of work: I can stop the work of that dredge to-morrow, or at any hour. I cannot call that a contract. The hon. gentleman has alluded to a small incident that occurred between the Auditor General and my department about the Coulonge slides booms. What are the facts? Mr. Brophy is superintendent of my department for slides and booms. There are a good many repairs to be done every year; in fact, every month, upon these slides and booms. Any hon. gentleman who has been Minister, either of Public Works or Railways and Canals, on either side of the House, will agree with me that it would be impossible to ask for tenders every time for small supplies of timber or stone. We would spend more money in asking for tenders than it would be worth. In this case, Mr. Brophy has an interview with a gentleman who had been employed by him formerly, and he asks him: How much can we get such a quantity of elm for? Mr. Tremblay makes a price for him, and Mr. Brophy, who is a man of great experience, gives him a contract at $22 a thousand feet. That was the regular price of the market then. It is possible Mr. Tremblay may have made some little profit. Any man who has been in business, either in his private capacity or in his public capacity, knows that such little incidents are inevitable, that, when you give a job to a man for which you will pay $10 or $15, he will generally manage to save a few cents or a few dollars. In a case like this, it would be quite impossible to ask for tenders for supplies to the extent of $200 or $300. It would make it impossible for any Minister, or for any business man, to carry on his work. Now, permit me, Sir, after having given these short explanations, to allude to the general system in asking for tenders. Since I became Minister of Public Works, it has been my duty to call for tenders for many works. I would give as instances only two or three cases which have just been under my consideration. When I took office, I found that tenders had been asked by my predecessor for dredging Collingwood harbour. The chief engineer of my department had reported against the lowest tender, that of Messrs. Boon & Armstrong. Representations were made to me that I should give the contract to the lowest tenderer. The late lamented Dalton McCarthy called upon me, and suggested that I should overrule my chief engineer and give the contract to Messrs. Wood & Armstrong. I did so. The chief engineer of my department said: These gentlemen cannot possibly carry out the work that they are undertaking for the sum at which they have tendered; they cannot possibly do it in the time they have specified. The ordinary deposit had been put in my hands, and I overruled Mr. Coste. I awarded the contract to the lowest tenderers. If there was ever a man whose life has been burdened, it is myself in reference to this Collingwood harbour. Our friends from Collingwood came to my department over and over again—they are here to-day—telling me that the work is not being carried out, and that, worse than that, the town is losing a vast amount of trade because the contractors are not carrying on their work as fast as they should. I am asked: Why do you not take the contract out of their hands? It is a contract for dredging, and to dredge harbours requires dredges. If I took the contract out of their hands, I would be obliged either to provide dredges, or to hire dredges, or to ask for new tenders, all of which would take a great deal of time. Another instance. I asked for tenders for several works of repairs in connection with Goderich harbour. Mr. Coste reported against the lowest tenderer. He told me: I have been a divisional engineer in that district. There is one or other of us a fool—either Mr. Maddigan or myself. I say that Mr. Maddigan cannot carry on that work for the price that he has tendered for. Mr. Maddigan was recommended to me by the Canadian Pacific Railway authorities, for whom he had done work, and by my hon. friend from North Wellington (Mr. McMullen). He was a contractor in good standing and repute at the time. I awarded the contract to him. Delays took place, and finally Mr. Maddigan was obliged to give up his work. We have lost a good deal of time; Goderich has lost a good deal of trade, and I have felt a great deal of anxiety about these works, because, at the time, I was much afraid that the spring freshets would carry everything away. I do not make this statement—let the House understand me well—to say that tenders must not be asked for, that tenders must be got rid of every time. I do not mean anything of the kind. But I say, without any hesitation whatever, and supported by three years of experience in the Public Works Department, that the Minister should have great latitude in dealing with tenders. I know that if I were on the other side, I might smile, as the hon. ex-Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Haggart) does.

Mr. FOSTER. You would do more than smile; you would not content yourself with smiling.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I would content myself with fair criticism in such cases, because this matter, I believe, is above party politics. We are here to-day; my hon. friends on the other side of the House will be here in the future, as they have been in the past, and they will have to deal with this difficulty. The hon. leader of the Opposition (Sir Charles Tupper) has lived in England, and my hon. friends, on both sides of the House, have studied English history enough to know that in England they do not work upon the same system. There, tenders are asked from a list of picked men, and not from the general public. Is it not the experience of hon. gentlemen who have been Ministers of Railways and Canals and of Public Works in this country, that the less competent a man is to perform the work, the lower will be the tender that he is inclined to make? The less experience and the less money he has, the more he will be inclined to tender at a low figure. Why, because he will expect that something will turn up. He will not pay his men and often he will not pay for his material. I state here that if I could always find trained foremen, men of experience, I would have no hesitation in pressing upon the Government the advantage of doing as much work as possible by day's labour. In the first place, the workmen are better treated by the Government than they generally are by contractors, who set out to make a large profit out of their contract. And, Sir, in the end, is not the system of contract by public tender virtually the system of day's labour? If I, as Minister, award a contract to any contractor, will he not of necessity have to do the work by day's labour? I would like to know why the Department of Public Works or the Department of Railways and Canals, if it has competent engineers and experienced foremen cannot carry on a public work by day's labour as well as by contract. I do not say that the system of asking for tenders should be got rid of; not by any means; but at the same time I claim that public works when constructed by day's labour are generally better done than if let by contract. I was not in the House for a moment, but my colleague tells me that my hon. friend (Mr. Davin) referred to the work done on the Western Block. He will,

I believe, on reflection agree with me that this work being rebuilding and repairing it was quite impossible to make a contract of it. I invite with pleasure members of Parliament on both sides to inspect the work done there; they will be quite welcome, and my officers will be glad to show them that work, and be it said to the credit of my chief architect and the officers concerned, that never in Canada has there been work better done than the rebuilding of the Western Block. I carried out that work by day's labour and I am glad to say by union men. I have recognized the importance of dealing with labour organizations, and I have been treated by them with every degree of consideration. I pay testimony to the fact that they carried on this work not only with a great deal of ability and intelligence, but with a great deal of devotion to their duty. I did not intend to speak at such length, but I think I have endeavoured to answer the objections made by my hon. friend (Mr. Davin). It is a fair matter for debate in this Parliament, and I do not complain of the manner in which he has brought the subject before the House.

Mr. MACKIE. The hon. member for Assiniboia (Mr. Davin) has not informed himself upon this question or else he would not blame the Minister of Public Works for carrying on the Ottawa River improvements by day's work instead of by contract. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Davin) does not apparently know very much about the way in which public works on the Upper Ottawa have been carried on by his own party. Hardly any work has ever been done by contract there. All these slides have been constructed by day's labour, and the lumber bought by the Government wherever they could buy it on the best terms. It is utterly impossible that slides and such work should be given out by contract. As to this Cculonge slide which the hon. gentleman (Mr. Davin) speaks of, I suppose that during the past eighteen years that the Conservative Government was in power there has been more money thrown away on that slide than on any improvement in the Ottawa River. There has been timber bought for 6 cents, 7 cents and 8 cents a foot, and it has been returned to the late Government as high as 15 or 20 cents a foot, by the same parties pretty much as this last transaction went through. I hope the work will be run a little better now as another man is in charge. As I have said, the improvements on the Ottawa River have been done for years and years by day's labour, and none of the work was ever done by contract or could the repairing of these slides be done by contract. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Davin) complains of $22 a thousand being paid for elm planks, but I do not think that is out of the way, because I have seen that paid for pine on the same work.

Mr. DAVIN. I do not propose to know anything personally about these prices, but the point I made was that $22 was paid, whereas they were delivered on the ground for $15.

Mr. MACKIE. I could show the hon. gentleman (Mr. Davin) where the same thing was done seven or eight years ago. I could show him that lumber was paid 5 cents a foot for, and was charged at the rate of 15 cents to the Government; and not a small quantity either, but hundreds of dollars worth; and not by the man who made the timber, nor the man who handled it, but it was given in another man's name altogether. Now, I can tell the hon. gentleman (Mr. Davin) that there was not very much of that work went to the Liberals when the Conservatives were in power. You did not find many Liberals working on the slides or on any Government work in those days.

Mr. POUPORE. As to the question of repairing slides I quite agree with my hon. friend from North Renfrew (Mr. Mackie) that it must be done by day's work and cannot be let by contract. The price for which timber is bought by parties who are dealing in timber, is not supposed to be the price that the Government has to pay, for the reason that when parties make a specialty of getting out timber, they of course expect to make a margin and no doubt the Government buys that timber at the lowest price they can get it for. It is not supposed that the parties who get out the timber should sell the timber at the cost of getting it out. There would be no sense in that. They get out their timber and they hold it for sale to the Government or any one else who wants to buy it. It does not follow that there has been any steal about the matter, because one man supplied timber at 15 cents and the Government had to pay 22 cents. It only follows that the man who got the timber out made a margin of profit on his timber.

Mr. LEIGHTON McCARTHY (North Simcoe). As this motion has been enlarged upon beyond its original form, I wish to say a word or two with regard to it. The hon. the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) referred to the Collingwood Harbour works, but whether it is those who press the claims of Collingwood upon him, or whether it is the contractors, who have made his life a burden during the past year, the hon. Minister did not state to the House. Doubtless the hon. gentleman (Mr. Tarte) has been pressed to do something on behalf of the town of Collingwood, and in my judgment very properly so. The contract for the work of the improvement of the Collingwood harbour was let to contractors, and the contractors, according to the reports in the department, have not, perhaps, fulfilled their duties as well as they should have done. Under these circumstances the Minister says: What can

I do ; it requires time to call for tenders, to have tenders put in and to review and accept the most acceptable tender, and if the existing contract is put an end to, a great delay would ensue. Surely the hon. gentleman from Assiniboia (Mr. Davin) does not mean by this motion that the Minister of Public Works should not act as any man occupying a position controlling an ordinary business would act. If the Minister of Public Works considers that it is his duty to that section of the country in which a public work is being constructed or carried out, to order that the contract for that work should be put an end to and carried on by day's labour ; or that that contract should be extended and extended at once so that the work may be properly and satisfactorily done (the work being of urgent and immediate necessity), surely the Minister should be allowed to exercise his judgment under such circumstances, provided he carries on the work in the cheapest and most expeditious way, and in the way which is to the best interests of the country. Now, if the conduct of the works at Collingwood harbour requires any such treatment at the hands of the Minister of Public Works, surely no hon. member on either side of the House would criticise the action of the Minister, provided, of course, that in consequence of that action the work is carried out in a proper, expeditious and economical manner, having regard to the existing condition and requirements of the work. Why should we wait for tenders ? Why should the Minister let the work by tender if it is necessary that it should be done hurriedly, and if it is done in the cheapest way ? This, it seems to me, is the answer. But if, on the other hand, there is plenty of time for the doing of the work, I think the proper system is the system of tender, although the Minister has criticised it, and with some effect ; because it often happens that the lowest tenderer gets the contract because he is the lowest tenderer, although he is not the best man for the work. But I would submit, with all due deference to hon. members of this House, that in a case of the kind which has been referred to, if it is necessary that the work should be proceeded with hurriedly, or a contract altered or changed, the Minister should see that that is done expeditiously and in the proper way, and no criticism should be made of his action by any hon. member on either side of the House.

Mr. GEO. E. FOSTER (York, N.B.) If the answer made or attempted by the hon. Minister of Public Works was meant as the answer of the Government to the real question which is before the House this afternoon, I beg leave to submit, Mr. Speaker, that it is not an adequate one. It is quite true, this is a question which we may well discuss without alluding to party on either side. It is a question of a great public principle—the way in which the moneys of the country are expended, and the system upon which Ministers, for the best expenditure of those moneys, and, going a little deeper, for the sake of public morals and honest government, ought to act. My hon. friend, the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) scurried, in his skirmishing style, inimitable in its way, all around these different points. Amongst other things, he raised objections of different kinds to contract work, where it could not well be done by contract, and the like of that. Now, we may as well meet on fair ground first as last, and say that there are certain works which it is impossible to do by contract and do them well. For instance, there is a work, such as my hon. friend spoke of, which in some of its details, at least, involves the tearing down of a building partially burned or destroyed, and the replacing of that building by a mixed structure. In such a case, where you cannot get sufficiently definite data upon which to base a tender, the Government are perfectly justified in my mind in putting its competent foreman at work and having the matter carried out under him piecemeal ; and yet, it may happen, in the course of the dismantling of the old or partially burned building and rebuilding it, that a great deal of the work which supervenes on the first work may be perfectly clear and definite, just as much so for contract purposes as any entirely new work. If the general policy is one of letting work by tender and contract, it seems to me that the Minister is not absolved from calling for tenders for the plain, definite portions of the work, and having them done according to the approved rule. The Minister also urges a case which occurs when great hurry is needed—when a public work having been partially destroyed, and the work of its reconstruction having been delayed for some unforeseen reason, the necessities of business or trade require that it shall be immediately done. In such a case, taking the season and the demands into account, the Minister cannot incur the delay which would be involved in calling for tenders. Granted that there are cases in which that will occur ; but after you have exhausted all these cases, in which, perhaps, it is not best that tenders should be called for, there yet remain, as my hon. friend will admit, the great mass of the public works of the country, which may well come under the rule of tender and contract, where there is time enough and to spare for calling for tenders, where the work is plain and definite, and can be contracted for on plans and specifications of quantities. In these cases, then, it would seem as if the Government must do either one of two things. Either they must acknowledge that they do not propose hereafter to carry out the rule which has obtained, which has been legalized, and which ever since confederation you may say, has been the settled rule, although you will, of course, find exceptions to it—and we have not heard from the Minister yet whether it is the intention of the Government either to acknowledge their failures in this respect, or they must take the ground that they have repudiated the system of tender and contract. The Minister comes very close to this when he says that he will try to do work by day's work as far as he possibly can; and when he makes an argument—which is intended to prove that after all contract work is simply day's work—that if a contractor has to hire men by the day to do his work, he does not see why a public department is not justified in the same way in hiring men and doing work by day's work. Carried to its logical conclusion that means, of course, that the Government do not any longer take their stand on the ground of tender and contract; but, arguing as my hon. friend has argued, that both are the same thing, the conclusion comes with force to every man who reads his words, that as they are both the same thing, it is just as well that the Minister should do the work as let it filter through the hands of a contractor. My hon. friend mentioned the method prevailing in England. I venture to say that there is no country in the world in which the system of tender and contract is so absolutely and relentlessly carried out in its public works as in Great Britain. If my hon. friend would show as much ingenuity in laying down conditions, in making plain the specifications down to the finest items, and in putting conditions on the contractor which would involve him in great loss if he did not carry on his work according to his tender, provided there was no absolute obstacle in his way, I think he would be doing better for the public expenditures of this country than he is in making these ingenious excuses for violating the system of tender and contract. No one would have any objection to the Minister of Public Works, who has to depend on his engineers, and whose duty it is to have full confidence in them, following the advice of his engineers as far as he can. Always this should be taken into account, that the engineer has not and ought not to have anything to do with either party, or, going above that, with the public rule for the disposition of work. He is to look at the subject from the departmental standpoint.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Mr. Tarte). May I ask the hon. gentleman a question? Suppose I ask for tenders for a dry dock or something like that, and suppose I receive three or four tenders. Then, suppose my chief engineer reports that the lowest tenderer cannot possibly carry out the work for the price he has offered; what would my hon. friend advise me to do in that case?

Mr. FOSTER. I will give the hon. gentleman my advice very clearly. If I relied on the engineer, and I thought he was a competent engineer, and he satisfied me that the man who put in the lowest tender either had proved in former work for the department not to be reliable, or had so made up the figures for the work that it was absolutely impossible for him to carry it out, I believe the Minister has no other recourse than to rest on the opinion of his engineer and his own common sense, and to say that it cannot be done for that money. That does not abolish the principle of tender and contract, however. That leaves to the Minister the liberty of putting aside the lowest tender and either going to the next or calling for new tenders. My hon. friend said that in England they pick and choose. So they do. So the hon. gentleman in his own department does or ought to, and in the case he has spoken of he should pick and choose, too. His own good sense, with the evidence of his engineer, with the evidence he has of the former work of that contractor, with the evidence of the actual quantities that are to be taken out and the absolute impossibility of doing the work for that sum—all that is sufficient to justify him in picking and choosing and not accepting the lowest tender. But it does not justify doing away with the rule of tender and contract. The English Government knows its men, it studies their history, and records their work, and it does pick its contractors, but it never goes to work and chooses its contractors simply out of its own political party for the time being. It treats them on their merits as contractors, and my hon. friend can do the same. He is not necessarily driven to do away with the contract and tender system, because, at one time or another he may have had to set aside the lowest tender; but he can explain to the House why he has not accepted the lowest tender, and if the grounds are good the House will not fail to justify his conduct.

But there are stronger reasons than those for the good and sound rule that has been laid down. It has been laid down in this country because, taking it all and all, my hon. friend must agree with me, and I hope the Government will also, it is better in the interests of economy and public morals that contracts should be made upon tenders called for and published, so that the public may have information as to the work going on. I think it would be an excellent thing as well that in these important contracts, when Orders in Council are made, they should, as my hon. friend has suggested, be published, so that the conditions may be known. These, no doubt, are the grounds upon which preceding Governments were led to the conclusion that it was better, taking it all together, that the rule should be tender and contract. And why? I think it stands to reason, in a country like this, where government by party is the rule—and I think my hon. friend is on record as having said, whether it be an original remark of his or not I do not know—that you cannot make elections with prayers.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. It is about true, and my hon. friend knows it well.

Mr. FOSTER. My hon. friend must know, when ignoring all higher influences, that the moment a Government is released from that public notoriety, influence and check which tenders and specifications and a contract based upon these two impose upon a Minister, that moment the Minister is left open and unguarded to the whole pressure of the party behind him, and all its corrupt influences.

It may not entirely obliterate, it may not entirely do away with the evils that come in the train of party politics, but I do say that if the principle of public tender and contract be efficiently administered, it is a very strong bulwark against extravagance in expenditure and the corrupting of public morals, and I think that these are the two reasons which guided preceding Governments in laying that down as a salutary rule. But my hon. friend has fought shy of the cases in which the Government plainly ignored its duty to call for tenders. What reason, for instance, in the case of the work now going on under the Minister of Marine and Fisheries—a work which has been canvassed in this country for many years, which is of the utmost importance, which is not of urgent necessity, in which there is great risk, and which involves from $40,000 to $60,000 of the people's money—what reason do we find in anything my hon. friend has said this afternoon why the Government, why the Minister who has charge of the department, should undertake of his own motion to construct this permanent work in the River St. Lawrence, without ever having canvassed the question in this House, and then without getting a single dollar voted for it, going into an expenditure of half of the total amount necessary, and then, fifteen days before the financial year expires, come and ask for a vote? What reason was there? There were no old ruins to tear down, no rotten timbers to take up, no subaqueous difficulties to be met. There was the ice, and all above it was space and atmosphere, and on the top of the solid ice a certain amount of timber was to be put together, according to certain plans and specifications. No case was ever shown clearer for a proper estimate and a proper figuring out by a contractor, yet about $20,000 was spent on that work, without a contract or tender, and without asking the consent of this House. What reason was there in that case for the department abandoning the principle of tender and contract? Why should the Minister make an illegal expenditure of money without a vote of Parliament, to such a large extent, and without any reason of urgency? The Minister could have had from this very Parliament, to enable him to go on with that work, the assent of Parliament to the expenditure, if he had taken due diligence, as soon as or shortly after Parliament was called together. Anyway, it was the Minister's business to have foreseen this, and to have got his vote before he undertook the expenditure.

There were two things. What did we have? Not even an apology from the Government. They will go to work, without a cent being voted, in a case which was not urgent and was foreseen for years, and incur an expenditure upon individual responsibility of $40,000 or $50,000, and in the next place they spend half the money above ground on as plain a piece of work as ever was undertaken, and they do it without tender and without contract. Suppose you cannot always get the dredge you want. The hon. Minister uttered a trite truth when he said: You cannot dredge a harbour without a dredge, but my hon. friend has been successful in getting men to dredge harbours who did not have any dredges. That was about as near to it as he could come. There are papers before the House to-day, in which it is indubitably shown that a man who never in his lifetime did any dredging, and knew nothing more about it than any other dry goods man, was approached by the department, as the initial letter shows, to know whether or not he would not like to embark in the business of dredging.

What in the world ever possessed a department, under the dictation of a Minister, to indite a letter to a man who was as foreign in all his works and ways to dredging as one of these "Hansard" reporters here, suggesting to him that he might undertake a piece of dredging somewhere—would he? And the next letter says: Yes, he would be glad to do it; had not thought of it before, but would like to undertake it. Have you any dredges? is the next question. No, but I know where they are, and I think I could get some. What excuse is there for a Minister, in the face of an Order in Council and of the rule of Government in expenditure for over thirty years, to undertake a twenty thousand dollar job of ordinary plain dredging in the St. Lawrence River at Coteau without tender or contract? And above all, what excuse is there for him, by a letter, to suggest to a private business man that he might undertake it? It is not undertaken by the man who owns the dredges, but by the man who hires them. The man who owns the dredges does the work, and gets his pay, and the rake-off is to the other. The man who hires the dredges is not in the business as overseer. No. Is he a foreman? No. He knows nothing about it. He is there to take his rake-off, and he takes it. There is no excuse for this in anything the hon. Minister has stated. We can go further, and take that same hon. gentleman, who, in his place in this House, promised and pledged his honour as a Minister, that, when he got his $75,000 voted for electric lighting of this House, he would call for tenders and ascertain the cost?

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. Would the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) allow me a word?

Mr. FOSTER. Certainly; two or three of them. We have the afternoon before us.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. When I made the statement to which my hon. friend refers—and I made it; I do not deny it—I contemplated putting up a plant of our own. My hon. friend (Mr. Foster) himself suggested that, instead of putting up a plant, I should perhaps apply to the electric companies. I did not put up a plant, and I do not see that I had any tender to ask for.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman has had his two or three words; but I do not think he has made his position very much better. He acknowledges that he did make a pledge to Parliament, on which this $75,000 was voted. He never came back to Parliament to explain to Parliament that he had changed his mind. That is the Bourassian philosophy again.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I said in that debate that I might change my mind.

Mr. FOSTER. This is the Bourassian philosophy, worked out in the Department of Public Works. That philosophy lays it down, as a fundamental rule, that you are perfectly honest and consistent, if you say you are going to do so and so, and if, the very next moment, you do something the very reverse—provided that in the meantime you change your mind. The other parties to the contract do not count. The Parliament that voted $75,000 on a certain condition of things, does not count. The Minister changed his mind, and so he is perfectly right and perfectly consistent. We shall have, I hope, in the presence of my hon. friend, something to say later about that lighting contract. I hope that his health will be sufficiently restored to enable him to remain with us a little longer. Some one has suggested that if he is anxious to have a change of air, he might get it without much expense by himself and his party coming over to this side and letting other gentlemen manage the Government for a time. I do not intend to go into a full discussion of this general question to-day. But I do say that since this Government came into power, they have heaped up example after example of this almost repudiation—it is practically and in fact repudiation—of the old principle of tender and contract. It has been done so often that now it does not seem to call for a word from hon. gentlemen opposite. I am inclined to think, however, that the last has not been heard of this matter.

Though it is a perfectly open thing to discuss day's labour as against contract, I hold that, before the Minister goes against the experience of thirty years and undertakes to undermine an old system and establish a new one, he should have the courage to get up and say he does intend to do so. Then we can discuss it, and, if the day labour system is the best, let it be so declared after the matter has been thoroughly discussed. But I warn the Ministers, that if they do away with the tender and contract, they are making a future for themselves as compared with which the little hot water resulting from the Collingwood business would be as nothing.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). The hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster), I regret to say, has reopened the case of the Traverse lightship, which I discussed at length the other day.

Mr. FOSTER. And shall likely reopen it again.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I am glad of the discussion; the more it is discussed, the better I shall be pleased.

Mr. WALLACE. The hon. gentleman (Sir Louis Davies) did not seem to be much delighted the other day.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Wallace) does not know how delighted I was. It gave me an opportunity to make full explanations, and it gave me an opportunity to read and place on record Col. Anderson's report, which induced the department to enter on the contract, and which contained reasons which, I think, satisfied gentlemen on both sides of the House.

Mr. FOSTER. If my hon. friend (Sir Louis Davies) will allow me, there is one point which I wished to emphasize, and of which I am reminded by the mention by the hon. gentleman of the engineer's report. Engineers have a duty to perform in advising their Ministers. But, when a Minister tells us that he has virtually set aside an Order in Council and a principle of conducting public business that has been recognized for twenty or thirty years, he is using his engineer's advice for a purpose for which his engineer could not have given it; and, if he did seek to give it for that purpose, he went entirely beyond his duty.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not wish to be understood as having advanced that argument. I am not now, nor have I been, guilty of a breach of the rule the hon. gentleman suggests. There is a general Order in Council, which has always been observed in the department which I preside over. When we desire to go counter to that Order in Council, a report is presented in the special case, setting out the special circumstances which, in the opinion of the Minister, justify the departure from it, and asking the consent of Council. If that consent is given, an Order in Council is passed, which, pro tanto, repeals the general Order. I did not go contrary to an Order in Council; I did not myself undertake the responsibility of the construction of this permanent lighthouse at Traverse without the consent of my colleagues. In the first place, I had three different surveys made by Col. Anderson: and it was only when Col. Anderson satisfied himself beyond doubt that a permanent lighthouse could be constructed for $20,000 or $30,000 less than he had at first supposed, that I entertained the idea of building it immediately; and it was only when it was pressed upon me from London, from Montreal, and from the leading commercial outports of this Dominion, that something should be done, and that at once, to check the unreasonable fear which possessed the insurance public at Lloyd's that the navigation of the St. Lawrence was dangerous—a fear which induced them unduly to raise the rates against our shipping—it was only when I saw that a case of urgency was before me, that I took the action I did. What was Col. Anderson's report, in substance? In the first place, he reported, after examination, that the lightship at the upper end of the Traverse was practically worn out and must be immediately replaced. I had, then, either to replace that lightship with another—and the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) knows that I could not replace her with a good lightship with the modern improvements at a less cost than $40,000—or provide a permanent light. And, when I was advised by Col. Anderson, after he had made three surveys in the place, that the permanent lighthouse could be built there, and that it would not only offer additional safety to the ships navigating the St. Lawrence, but probably prolong the safe navigation of that river for three weeks in the fall, and make it navigable earlier in the spring, I did not hesitate a moment longer.

Mr. HAGGART. What was the date of the Order in Council authorizing you to commence the work?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I forget the date, it was immediately after my return from Washington. My hon. friend beside me says it was in the month of March; it was before anybody went to work.

Mr. HAGGART. Was it after the House met?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, just before the House met, just about the time. I think I can get the hon. gentleman the date, if it is important. Col. Anderson's last report was made in November. I was in Washington in December, January and February. The moment I got back this urgent matter was pressed upon my attention, and I took action instantaneously. The hon. gentleman says there was no urgency. Col. Anderson reports that there was urgency. His report says:

Sir LOUIS DAVIES.

It is urgent that we should build a pier at the Upper Traverse at once.

That is last November. At "once" meant before the next navigation began. Therefore, I had every element of urgency present in this case. The hon. gentleman says that I should have waited till the House met, and until I could have got a vote through supply. Well, Sir, I would have had to lose the whole season. As I explained the other day—I do not want to go over the whole argument—I would have had to lose the whole season and wait for another year if I had not begun the work when I did. It was on the advice of Col. Anderson that I decided to do the work, and to do it under the direct supervision of the department and not by deputy. What does the report say:

I further recommend that the work be done by the department under its own direct supervision.

Mr. BENNETT. Was the date of Col. Anderson's report subsequent to the interview with the hon. member for Quebec West (Mr. Dobell)?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The date of Col. Anderson's report was back in November.

Mr. BENNETT. But the report where he speaks about its being done under contract?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That is the one I was reading. It was dated back in November.

Mr. BENNETT. Had he at that time seen Mr. Lemieux?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. At that time he had talked with the member for Quebec West a number of times, probably.

Mr. BENNETT. And he knew the wishes of that hon. gentleman as to how he preferred it should be done?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not think he did. I do not think the hon. member for Quebec West had any interest, or any preference one way or the other, except the public interest.

Mr. BENNETT. The member for Quebec West stated that he expressly brought up Mr. Lemieux, because he was an expert, a genius, as he said.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Certainly, that is all true.

Mr. BENNETT. Then the engineer knew what report you wanted ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman is now making a most unjust imputation upon Col. Anderson. Col. Anderson is not moved by considerations of that kind at all. He is an old, experienced and careful officer, with a great reputation. He has been there certainly over twenty years. He has a great reputation, which he is certainly not going to imperil at the request of the member for Quebec West, or anybody else. I will undertake to say that there is not in the departments at Ottawa a gentleman possessing a better reputation in his line than does Col. Anderson. When the hon. gentleman interrupted me, I was reading his report upon the very crux of the question now before the House ; and what I understood my hon. friend to say was that if the facts were as I contended they were, they justified a departure from the general rule that applies to the letting of contracts by tender ; that is, if the Minister is satisfied, after receiving the report of his engineer, that it is more in the public interest to build the work under the direct supervision of the department and not by tender, then he might do so, and do so in the public interest.

Mr. FOSTER. I did not say that. I took occasion to say that a Minister should be very careful as to how he used the report of an engineer to enable him to set aside a general and well-established rule as to the construction of public works, because the engineer's office does not extend that far.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman did not stop there. He said he would have no hesitation himself as a Minister, and he would approve of other Ministers acting in that line, that if they were satisfied from the report of their engineer, and having carefully weighed it themselves, and came to the conclusion that the engineer was right on the facts submitted to them, they should exercise their common sense and conduct the work under the direct supervision of the department—that it was proper to be so done.

Mr. FOSTER. That is very different from this case. My argument was on the case whether the Minister of Public Works should set aside the lowest tender or not. My argument was that if the evidence and the expert testimony were against the lowest tenderer being applied to, or if he were an unreliable person, the Minister had a perfect right to set him aside.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have here Col. Anderson's report upon this point :

I further recommend that the work be done by the department under its own direct supervision. If such work were done by contract the contin-gent risks would be so great that it would be necessary to put on a large margin to meet them, and the opportunities for slighting work of this kind would offer a great temptation to a contractor. If done by the department, good work and materials would be assured, and the cost would probably be less than by the contract system.

Mr. FOSTER. Now, my hon. friend will allow me a direct question. Does he suppose that this referred to the cribwork done upon ice concerning simply the quality of the timber and the manner in which it was to be put in, and the labour ? Did not that refer more to the placing of the thing and the like of that, in the rapids ?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. It referred to the entire work, no doubt, and referred also, I have no doubt, to the building of the cribwork. The hon. gentleman seems to think the building of the crib does not involve careful work at all, but it did. This cribwork required not only the greatest care in the selection of the wood, and the elimination of all improper material, but the construction of that work had to be done in such a thoroughly satisfactory manner that it could resist all pressure and trouble. Now, the hon. gentleman speaks of the building of this crib as if it could not be done cheaper and better upon ice. But then it has to be floated down and sunk in its place, and the hon. gentleman knows that the greatest possible care must be taken to put it in exactly the spot where it ought to be, and the only spot in which it possibly can be kept. Can that be done by contract ? Does the hon. gentleman believe that a work of that kind could be satisfactorily done by contract, that we could have the assurance that a contractor would carry it out as we will carry it out—placing that cribwork down in the exact spot so that it shall not move for years to come ?

Mr. FOSTER. My hon. friend will credit me, in a former debate we had upon this question, with having said that it might be that good reasons could be urged for the lowering and placing of it in the current, by the Government, with its own officers ; but I could not say in regard to cribwork—

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I was calling that to his attention, that he had admitted in a previous debate that so far as this particular point was concerned, the sinking of that cribwork and filling it with stone, and putting it in the proper place so that it would resist the ice and current, was a most critical and careful piece of work ; and he admits we were right in doing that under the direct supervision of the officers of the department who will be responsible for it. Well, that is the very work for which we are taking this $20,000. The hon. gentleman was told the other night that the cribwork was to be taken down and sunk out of this money.

Mr. FOSTER. Will the hon. gentleman be candid with the House and say how much of the $20,000 went to the cribwork and how much to float it down?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I cannot tell you exactly. If Col. Anderson had been here Friday and Saturday, I could have given it to you.

Mr. FOSTER. I dare say $500 would float it and place it.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. But how much will it require to sink it and fill it with stone? Floating it down is a small work. It has to be sunk, and it has to be filled with stone in its proper place, and that will require a large expenditure.

Mr. FOSTER. Has the cribwork left Quebec yet?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not know whether it has left yet. I gave the assurance of my deputy last week that it would be done and be sunk on the spot on the 23rd. That is the report of the deputy, and the hon. gentleman does not assume, I suppose, that I have any knowledge personally other than that furnished by my officers.

Mr. FOSTER. I venture to think that not $500 out of that $20,000 will be required for sinking that crib.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman cannot escape me by saying that. I did not say it was to cost more than $500 to take it from Quebec to the Traverse. I say that when you get to the Traverse you have accomplished very little work until you get it sunk and put in position, and filled with stone. There is where the labour is going to come in.

Mr. FOSTER. That will take you a couple of months.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No, it will not take a couple of months to sink it. The stone is there ready. The stone had to be brought in bateaux or boats.

Mr. FOSTER. Are they there now?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes. I do not suppose the boats are lying there in a row, but the stone is all secured, and ready to go in, and it is to pay for them that I want this money.

Mr. BENNETT. Do they charge a demurrage on the boats for the time they are kept there?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. How much a day would he suggest? I do not suggest that they are kept there. I tell the hon. gentleman the stone is ready and prepared, and would be put in the cribwork as soon as the crib was ready to be submerged. That statement was made on Thursday last. Now I have proved to the hon. gentleman the three things which he said were necessary. First, that it was a case of extreme urgency, national urgency, a case in which the execution of the work was clamoured for by the commercial public and those interested in our commerce on the other side, a case in which the existing work was worn out, and the engineer reported it had to be replaced. I approved of the report of my chief engineer that it was pre-eminently a case where the work should be done under the supervision of the department and not by tender. Having approved of this report I went with it to Council, submitted it to my colleagues, and got Council's approval. I do not know of any work that has come under my observation since I have become Minister, the carrying out of which in the manner in which it has been undertaken could be justified more than the one the hon. gentleman has referred to.

Mr. N. CLARKE WALLACE (West York). The hon. gentleman (Sir Louis Davies) stood up, made his speech, and sat down without expressing one word as to the general principle we are discussing here to-day. I presume that he could not justify the principle that has been endorsed by the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) at any rate. But what about this Traverse lighthouse? The hon. Minister, from the information that we already have, has utterly failed to justify the course he has taken in regard to that lighthouse. In the first place, he told us that it was a case of extreme urgency. That matter has been before the department for all the years that he has been Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

Mr. FOSTER. And long years before.

Mr. WALLACE. And long years before.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). What sad neglect of public duty there was in those days.

Mr. WALLACE. After the hon. Minister came in three years elapsed before it became a case of urgency. He said that he had a report last autumn from his chief engineer, Col. Anderson, and, although it was a case of great urgency, he waited five months until March, before he took any action.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). I told you I was away in Washington.

Mr. WALLACE. I am aware that the hon. gentleman was away in Washington a good deal of that time.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Wallace) was there himself.

Mr. WALLACE. I was there, but—

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. We were there together.

Mr. WALLACE. I think if there was a case—

Mr. DAVIN. I hope it was not a case of champagne.

Mr. WALLACE. We are not going to say anything about that.

Mr. FOSTER. They hang together on that.

Mr. WALLACE. If it were a case of urgency the hon. gentleman (Sir Louis Davies) had his secretary there, and the hon. gentleman should know there whether it was a case of urgency just as well as he should know if he were in Ottawa. He says that it was never thought that it would be possible this lighthouse could be built for any less amount than $60,000 or $75,000, but his chief engineer revised his estimate. He places extreme reliance upon his chief engineer, and I find the habit has grown up among Ministers, when they get into a difficulty, of getting some of their officers, or some engineer, to stand between them and harm. The hon. gentleman says that his chief engineer reduced the cost by from $20,000 to $30,000 for building this lighthouse. I would like to know what it was that caused him to reduce the expense of this lighthouse from $75,000 to $40,000 under the estimate of the same engineer. Has the cost of material decreased in that time? Not one bit of it. I believe lumber is dearer to-day by 15 per cent or 20 per cent than it was last year. There is no decrease in the price of lumber. This stone that was to be taken in bateaux to be used on the work, when the crib goes down, will require the same labour as if the work had been done years ago. What is it that has caused the chief engineer to reduce his estimate? He makes an estimate that the work can be done for $40,000. We have no reason or information given why this reduction in the estimate of nearly 50 per cent was made by the chief engineer. What occurs next? The report was made in November. It was a case of urgency, yet nothing was done for four or five months, until March, until the time that the House was meeting and until the main Estimates were being prepared by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries Department. Why did the hon. Minister not put that item in the main Estimates?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The main Estimates will be for next year.

Mr. WALLACE. It was a case of urgency; it would have to come before the House and receive the consideration of the House. The hon. Minister waits until the supplementary Estimates come down. He says the expenditure will be for next year. These bateaux with their loads of stone are waiting for the crib which is still in the dock at Quebec, and which has not been floated down, so that nothing will be done until the 1st of July. The hon. gentleman says that this is a case that his engineer reported will be better done without tender. The first reason is that of economy. He says that it would be better done by the Government, because it would ensure the materials being of the best character. It looks to me as if the whole machinery of the department had broken down and was worthless. If they had let a contract, and if they had given the public a chance to tender for the work, their inspector, if a capable man, would be able to supervise every piece of timber that went into the crib as the work progressed. The man who was building it could stand there himself as well as the inspector or the foreman and select this piece of timber, reject that piece, and see that the materials were good. The Government say that the case is urgent, but they have utterly failed to prove there was an urgency about the thing at all, I have demonstrated that the same man could select as good materials as a Government inspector, as he could as foreman of the work. Again, we are told that this work requires great care and precision and that it is vitally important this crib should be dropped in the exact spot. But the Government engineers could do that just as well with a contractor as they could under the present system. If the Government engineer gave directions, as he has to do now, the contractor would have to carry them out. Every statement made by the Minister (Sir Louis Davies) has failed to justify his departure from the salutary rule, that tenders should be asked for and that the consent of Parliament should be obtained before important works are undertaken.

Why, to-day we heard the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) take the ground pretty broadly that it was better that public works should be done by day's labour and under the control of the Minister. Let me give you a sample of how much better it is. The Ontario elections took place in the beginning of March last year, and any one who went to Major's Hill Park in the month of February, could see scores of men digging a trench for the foundations of a wall to go around that park, a wall that is utterly useless and unnecessary. Any child knows that one man digging in the month of May could do more work than fifteen men digging in the month of February, when the ground was thoroughly frozen. It was an utter waste of public money. I saw these men day after day working there, and so far as any utility in their labours was concerned, you might as well get them to dig holes and fill them up again. I have no doubt that the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) would like that system extended all over the country, so that the public money might be used for political purposes to help his friends, and not used by him as a trustee for the people, as it should be used. Again, last year we had the Minister of Militia (Mr.

Borden) glorying in the fact that he had not called for tenders. He told us that he had asked pretty nearly every one to tender for the Yukon supplies, but when his statement came to be analysed, we found that he had asked one or two men to tender for groceries, and one or two men for the other supplies. There were no tenders asked for in the proper acceptation of the term, and yet the Minister (Mr. Borden) told us that he was glad to have an opportunity of assisting his political friends. I charge that these gentlemen on the Treasury benches have utterly ignored the principles that have governed the control of public expenditure since confederation. They have ignored the principle that when public money is to be expended every man in Canada has the right to have the opportunity offered him of tendering for the work constructed by such expenditure. Another case occurs to my mind, but I will not refer to it, as the Minister concerned is, as usual, absent from his seat. When that Minister is present, I shall deal with a case in the city of Quebec as to which supplies were offered him and not accepted, and the facts of which I became acquainted with when in Quebec. The Minister of Railways (Mr. Blair) follows, of course, the bad example of the other Ministers. He wants cars, and he wants engines, and he wants sleepers, for the Intercolonial Railway, and he buys them without contract, and he pleads as an excuse that there was urgency. There was no urgency, the thing is absurd. The business of the Intercolonial Railway did not jump up to enormous proportions; it was simply going along in the even tenor of its way, and the Minister knew twelve months or two years beforehand everything that was required by the road. But suddenly he found there was urgency, and he said to the Canadian manufacturers: Can you build these cars and engines in twenty or thirty days? Of course the Government knew that the Canadian manufacturers could not do it in that time, and they utilized that circumstance to take the work away from Canadians and to hand it over to the people of the United States. The interests of the workingman of Canada is not considered, but the interests of the workingman in the United States is looked after, and all on the plea of urgency.

Mr. FOSTER. Nearly half a million dollars.

Mr. WALLACE. Yes, nearly half a million dollars in this one case was paid over to the people of the United States when there are thousands of men in Canada today seeking employment and not able to get it.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). The hon. gentleman (Mr. Wallace) heard the statement made in the House that the car works in Canada were full and could not take any more work.

Mr. WALLACE.

Mr. FOSTER. That statement can be controverted.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The statement has been made officially and has not been controverted.

Mr. WALLACE. That is all very well; the Government said to the Canadians: Can you make these cars in twenty or thirty days, and they said: No we are full up with employment for twenty or thirty days.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The statement: We are full up for thirty days, was not the statement made.

Mr. McDUGALL. Well, make it two or three months if you like.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That was not the statement, and it is just as well to be accurate about it.

Mr. WALLACE. Whether or not, it does not interfere with the principle. There was no excuse for urgency, because every car and every engine and every sleeper required could have been anticipated for years ahead. It appears to me the Government wanted an excuse to let this contract in the United States, and to let it without tender.

Mr. HAGGART. By private contract.

Mr. WALLACE. By private contract, and without tenders, and without competition.

Mr. HAGGART. Made by the Minister.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Is the hon. gentleman (Mr. Wallace) sure it was done without tender? My recollection is not that. I am pretty sure tenders were called for and that the Minister stated so in the House.

Mr. WALLACE. Well, the Minister has not stated that in the House, so far as I have heard.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes, he has.

Mr. WALLACE. I would like to see the Minister of Marine and Fisheries show any such statement made to the House.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Will the hon. gentleman withdraw if I show it to him?

Mr. WALLACE. Most decidedly. Then, the Minister of Public Works says they do these things in England; they select contractors, and do not ask the general public to tender, but ask these selected contractors.

But that is quite a different affair from the mode adopted by the Ministers here, who go to one or two dry goods men or grocers, their own friends, and ask them to furnish supplies at their own figures. I am not making any charges against these men who supply the goods; but I say that the practice is entirely wrong—that where large quantities of supplies are required year by year by the Government, they are bound to ask for tenders. They are bound to let every man in Canada who is able to compete for the supply of these articles, have an opportunity of doing so, in justice to these men and in justice to the people whose trustees they are.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I have found the answer given by the Minister, and I will read it for what it is worth. The Minister was asked on the 25th of May:

How many palace or sleeping cars were ordered by the Government for the Intercolonial Railway, between the 1st January, 1888, and 1st April, 1899? To what company or firm were the orders given? Were public tenders called for? What prices are to be paid for each class of car? Why were not the orders for these cars given to Canadian firms so as to provide work for Canadian citizens?

The year, 1888, is, perhaps, a typographical error for 1898. The answer of the Minister of Railways and Canals was as follows:—

Sixteen palace and sleeping cars were ordered by the Government for the Intercolonial Railway between the 1st January, 1888, and the 1st April, 1899. The orders were given to the Crossen Car Company for eight of these cars, and to the Wagner Palace Car Company for the other eight cars. Tenders were not called in 1888 for five of these cars, but tenders were called for eleven. $14,045 each for five sleepers and $19,940.80 each for eight sleepers, and $9,800 for each of the three parlour cars. The cars recently ordered were obtained from the Wagner Palace Car Company, after tenders asked for and obtained from several large firms in the United States. The department, before making a contract with United States manufacturers, had applied to the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Railway Companies, Messrs. Crossen & Co., and Messrs. Rhodes, Curry & Co. for offers. The two last mentioned firms declined to offer for these cars on the ground that the orders they had then on hand from the Intercolonial Railway were all they could fill within the time allowed. The first two companies would not undertake the work, as their shops were overcrowded with their own work. The department needed these cars for the opening of the tourist season this spring, and had no alternative than to place these orders with the Wagner Palace Car Company, whose tender was the lowest of the United States firms.

That point the hon. gentleman will, of course, withdraw.

Mr. WALLACE. There is just the point that these men could not tender within the time allowed.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. But the work was let by tender. You said it was not.

Mr. WALLACE. Some of it was let by tender, but what kind of tender was it?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. All these Wagner cars bought this spring were let by tender.

Mr. WALLACE. These five were not let by tender. A portion were let by tender, but it was no public tender at all. Then, he says that two firms, which I assume are Canadian firms, refused to tender because they had already contracts which it took them all their time to fill; and urgency was the plea there made. They had to be ready in time for the tourist season. But they knew two years ago that there was a tourist season. It had not suddenly burst upon them, as the Yukon burst on the Minister of the Interior unexpectedly, and found him unprepared, the tourist season has always been there; so that an excuse of that kind will hardly go down.

The PRIME MINISTER. It will go up, then.

Mr. WALLACE. In my opinion the Government have utterly failed in their duty to the people in this regard. But they do not care; business is business, and you will see what a good time we shall have next year. They go on, utterly regardless of the law, or of what the country requires. Papers are asked for, publications are demanded by Parliament, and the rules of Parliament are utterly ignored. I was looking the other day for a report of the Auditor General which had not yet come down, although the law imperatively required that it should be down months before. The law was disregarded. In this case the interests of the people are disregarded. The interests of manufacturers, and those who should be permitted to tender for public works or public supplies, are disregarded. I think the interests of the country require that we should go back to the old and recognized method.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). There is no question, Mr. Speaker, that there are many rules of parliamentary government which are absolutely disregarded in this House, and this debate is a good example. There was no occasion at all, on the motion of the hon. member for West Assinibola (Mr. Davin) for this debate which has taken place. What is the motion? It is simply for Orders in Council respecting the letting of contracts without tender, passed since the 23rd June, 1896. On this motion the House has gone into a discussion of the principle which should guide the Government in the carrying out of public works—whether the works should be done by contract on tenders, or whether they should be done by day's labour. On this question the law is very plain. The law says that the work is to be done by contract except where, in the opinion of the Minister, it can be done more advantageously by day's labour. This is section 13 of the Public Works Act:

The Minister shall invite tenders, by public advertisement, for the execution of all work,—

This is very broad. There are two exceptions, however. The first is :

—except in cases of pressing emergency, in which delay would be injurious to the public interest,—

In such a case the Minister should not invite tenders or let the work by contract, but proceed himself with it. Then, here is the second exception :

—or in which, from the nature of the work, it can be more expeditiously and economically executed by the officers and servants of the department.

Now, we know that there are certain works which can be more effectively done by the department than by contract. We have seen examples of that. My hon. friend stated a moment ago that there was an Order in Council to guide the Public Works Department in carrying out this section. An Order in Council was passed in 1880, providing that for all works except those involving an expenditure of less than $5,000, tenders should be called and contracts let ; but this is only for the guidance of the Minister. The rule is that in all such cases the Minister is bound to ask for tenders ; but if it is expedient that the work should be done by day's labour, then he can deviate from the rule. The rule is not disputed by anybody ; but the motion of my hon. friend simply implies that the rule has been departed from in certain contracts let by the Government, and he assumes that certain works have been done without tender ; and he wants to have those cases brought down to the House, and when they are brought down he will be ready to make a case to show that the spirit of the Public Works Act has been violated. Until then, it is premature to discuss that question. When the return is brought down, when the facts regarding all the works that have been done by the Government without tender have been placed before Parliament, then we shall be prepared to discuss the question whether or not it was advisable for the Government to carry on these works without tender, or whether they are justified in doing so. Whether or not they were always justified in doing so, there are cases beyond dispute in which the Government did properly in not calling for tenders. There may be others which require explanation, but then and then alone can the conduct of the Government be impugned.

My hon. friend referred to a case in my department in which, he said, drugs were bought without any tenders. I have no recollection of the fact, but, assuming the statement of the hon. gentleman to be true, that the contract were given without tenders, there was, no doubt, sound justification for it, as we will be able to show at a proper time.

There are other instances of works in the Public Works Department having been given out without tender or contract, which, when the papers are brought down, will be shown to have been the best course to adopt under the circumstances. I submit, therefore, that this discussion is out of order. What we say is, that at the proper time the question, as to whether the Government, in any particular case, acted properly or not in letting out the work without tender, will be decided when that particular case is before the House. At this moment there is nothing before the House, but to allow the motion to go, and it will be granted at once.

Mr. NICHOLAS FLOOD DAVIN (West Assiniboia). My right hon. friend stated very fairly the question I wish to put before the House, and I think he will agree that the discussion which has arisen has been a very useful one, and that the House is indebted to those hon. gentlemen who have brought into the debate so much information calculated to be of interest to the country.

Let me say a word with reference to the speech of the hon. Minister of Public Works. That hon. gentleman laid down a very peculiar proposition. He said that he was in favour of doing as much work as possible by day's labour, and then asked, what was the difference, after all. Must not all contract work, he asked, be done by day labour ? Of course, his reasoning is this : You contend, he said, that I should not have any work done by day's labour, but by contract. But contract work has to be done by day's labour, and, therefore, I am perfectly justified in dispensing with a contract and giving the work out by day's labour. On the same reasoning, I could prove to the hon. gentleman that any pickpocket could be justified in picking money out of another man's purse. He might reason as on the same ground as the hon. gentleman. It is right that you should pay your debts, but, as a rule, you cannot pay them without taking money out of your purse. You, therefore, take the money out of your purse, and that is all that a pickpocket does. The reasoning is exactly similar, and the argument was a most extraordinary one for a Minister to put forward seriously. It reminded me of those syllogisms given to one when studying logic, such as the non-distribution of the middle term.

I confess that I was very much alarmed at the remarks of the hon. Minister, when, after his now long experience—because he has been Minister of Public Works for three years—he told us that, in the administration of a large spending department, he approves as much as possible of giving out the work by day's labour. What does that mean ? Every administration of public works by day's labour is the resorting, so far as it can be done in any department, to personal government. We all know what has been the result of personal government to the public in every country in which that system has been the rule. There is no country in the world that has suffered so much, that has been pillaged so much, as France, by reason of men administering great spending departments just as they pleased, because that, after all, is what this system amounts to. If the Minister is to build public works by day's labour as much as he possibly can, he is resorting, within the confines of his department, to personal government, and personal government has resulted in the most wholesale pillage in every country where it has been practised. If we may hark back for one minute to first principles, suppose that in private matters you have an agent for some large estate, whom you empower to make contracts with whomsoever he pleased, and either to call for tenders or do what work has to be done by day's labour—that is to say, you take his own honesty and ability as the only guarantees of his good faith and judgment—there is no one who would not say that that is not a sufficient check on the weakness, and the greed, and the favouritism, and the hundred and one temptations to which, in any transaction where money is concerned, a person, left solely to act according to his own pleasure, is exposed. There is no comparison whatever between the temptations to which a private individual, managing a private estate, is exposed, and that to which men occupying the position of a Minister of the Crown, and acting for the public, is subjected, because we know, unfortunately for ourselves, that we cannot get the people of this or any other country to look on the expenditure of public money in the same way as they do the expenditure of a private firm or individual. A man who would be scrupulously honest in his private dealings, will be, as a rule, in the dealings with the Government inclined to the belief that it is no sin against Heaven, no sin against his own honour, to take advantage of the Government, and place more money in his pocket than he is entitled to. Who knows better than the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding), who has been Prime Minister of a province, or the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) who not only is Minister of Public Works now, but has been an active party manager in the past for many years in the province of Quebec, or the Minister of Railways (Mr. Blair), who has been Prime Minister of his own province, what we all know, that, the very moment you allow a department to resort to the system of doing large public works by day's labour, it is almost impossible to guard against abuse and fraud? From the very moment you have a work in charge of a department and that department doing work, as the hon. gentleman says, by day's labour, that department employing men, that very minute, it is not merely against his own weakness he has to be on his guard, it is not merely against the possible greed in his own bosom, it is not against the favouritism that he himself would desire to show that he has to be on his guard, but he has to be on his guard against rapacity from a hundred quarters in various parts of the country. Nearly twenty years ago an investigation was held, the most thorough, I believe, that has ever been made in Canada, and probably the most thorough investigation that was ever made in any country, an investigation made, I am in a position to say, without fear or favour. Nobody has dared in the course of these nearly twenty years to impugn the good faith or ability with which that inquiry was carried on. It was an inquiry into all the affairs connected with the Canadian Pacific Railway up to the date of the commission issued, I think, in 1880. Some 72 contracts were inquired into. I will quote a few of the decisions of this commission. Let it be remembered that they inquired into contracts let by Governments of both parties and by the Department of Public Works and by the Department of Railways and Canals:

We think it would be an advantage if no transaction involving an expenditure beyond a specified sum could be arranged for by competition or otherwise, unless such expenditure should be first directed by some higher authority than a department, and unless the report or recommendation of the department in which such direction is asked should, amongst other things, give a written report from its engineer—when the object of the expenditure involves engineering results—and this, whether that report be in accordance or not with the step recommended.

Also:

That in this work numbers of persons were employed as Government officials who were not efficient in the positions to which they were appointed, having been selected on party grounds, irrespective of the question whether their engagement would be advantageous to the public interests.

That was the conclusion forced on that commission after having inquired into 72 contracts, some of them let by Mr. Alexander Mackenzie, others by the hon. baronet (Sir Charles Tupper) who leads the Opposition, others by Sir Hector Langevin. Another of their general conclusions, was this:

That the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway was carried on as a public work at a sacrifice of money, time and efficiency.

Now, I would press these conclusions on the hon. Minister of Public Works, because I think from the point of view of the efficiency of his department, the principle he laid down was entirely heretical. Here is another quotation from the general conclusions of this commission:

That large operations were carried on and extensive purchases made with much less regard to economy than would have happened under similar circumstances in a private undertaking.

That the practice which permits a department to originate and enter upon transactions involving the expenditure of large sums of money, and without other authority to award the contracts under which such expenditure is intended to take place, is a disadvantage.

Another conclusion, is as follows :—

It is true that the statute does not require the award to be authorized by the Privy Council, unless where the lowest (available) offer is passed over, but it is suggested for consideration, whether, unless regulations are to be adopted of a more stringent character than those in force up to this time, so as to exclude offers of a gambling character, it would not be well that all contracts involving sums above a specified amount, be awarded only after consideration by some higher authority, for instance, a committee of the Privy Council.

Now, Mr. Speaker, my object is to get the returns for which I have moved. My object was not to make a case against the Government. I did not speak as a partisan. I spoke simply as one asking these returns. But I confess to you, Sir, that some of the remarks made by my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works are calculated to alarm Parliament and should alarm his colleagues. And I would urge them to supplement the Order in Council of 1880 so as to put a brake upon the downward tendency of my hon. friend (Mr. Tarte), a tendency to depart from the wholesome system of calling for tenders and from surrounding himself with those safeguards, without which a public man, a Minister of the Crown, however virtuous he may be, and no matter whether he be Liberal or Conservative, is apt to fall in the slippery ways in the administration of a great spending department, with its hundred and one temptations, with its hundred and one dangers arising from party influence and human greed.

Motion agreed to.

It being Six o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

THE NIAGARA, ST. CATHARINES AND TORONTO RAILWAY.

House again resolved itself into committee on Bill (No. 69) to incorporate the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Railway Company.

(In the Committee.)

On section 9,

Mr. LARIVIERE. As you will remember, Mr. Chairman, a debate took place in this House on the second reading of this Bill, with regard to these extraordinary bonding powers which this section grants the company. It has been elicited by the debate that this railway was sold under the authority of the courts of justice for the sum of $36,000, that is to say, the 12½ miles already constructed, and the franchise for the rest of the road to be constructed. It is true that we have been informed in the committee that the present owners of the road have spent some $30,000 or $40,000 to put it in such a condition that the Government will allow it to be operated, because hitherto the road has been left in such a bad state of repair that the Government had to step in and stop its running. So it appears that the whole amount that the present owners of the road have spent in order to acquire it and put it in running order is $76,000. Now, we are asked to allow that company to bond the 12½ miles already constructed to the extent of $25,000 per mile; therefore, if the company issues bonds and sells them, no matter at what rate, they will not only recoup themselves for what they have already paid for the road, but will make a splendid profit out of the transaction.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Will my hon. friend allow me at this point to make a suggestion? I am prepared to meet his views, according to instructions from the owners of this franchise. My hon. friend is mistaken in giving the sum of $76,000 as what they have actually paid out; the sum is $102,000. If his objections to this clause remain the same as those expressed at a previous meeting of the committee, I am prepared to meet them by this amendment:

Provided that with respect to the railway heretofore constructed, and that this Act authorizes to be acquired from such purchasers, bonds, debentures or other securities shall be issued only to the extent of $15,000 per mile and less until the said railway shall be operated by electric power, after which the remaining $10,000 may be issued.

That will meet the views of my hon. friend and the suggestion of the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Gibson) the other night, that a certain portion of the securities be held back until they had shown their good faith in carrying out the enterprise.

Mr. LARIVIERE. There is no doubt that the suggestion of my hon. friend goes half way. I want to deprive them of the privilege of bonding these twelve miles until the system will have been completed. My object would be attained by striking out that part of the clause which refers to the road already constructed.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Under this amendment they could only issue bonds for the amount of their actual expenditure.

Mr. LARIVIERE. I accept the statement of my hon. friend that already $102,000 have been expended. If I have made a different statement before it was on that made before the Railway Committee by the promoters of this Bill. We were told in the committee that the company had hardly spent $40,000 besides the cost of the road.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. That is a mistake. The total amount is $102,000.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. When will my hon. friend move his amendment?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I will move it now.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. I do not want to fight this thing out. I was taking part in this debate only from a general stand-point. I am not interested in the locality and I do not want to interfere in the construction of the road, but, from the general stand-point, I thought it was unwarrantable on the part of this Parliament to allow this House to pass a Bill whereby speculators could make a nice speculation, take the money that they can realize and then let the road go where my hon. friend for Dorchester (Mr. Morin) sent another road on another occasion. Does your amendment apply to the whole of the road? I fail to see that that would compel them to build the whole road as this only relates to the portion of the road already completed.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. This portion of the road was of no use at all until this money was spent on it, and the bonds would not sell for a cent on the dollar until the extension is made complete. I will read to my hon. friend the works that have to be completed before the road will be of any use. Besides the $102,000 expended on the 12 mile section there will be an expenditure of $50,000 for repairs now going on—new ties, ballasting, filling and replacing trestles, and new bridges:—

The extension to Port Dalhousie alone and the conversion of the line to an electrical line will cost as follows, and work will go on this summer:—

Right of way, two draw-bridges and terminals at Port Dalhousie and St. Catharines	$ 80,000
Power plant	100,000
Changing present line to electricity...	60,000
New electrical equipment, locomotives and cars, &c.....	75,000
	$467,000

So my hon. friend will see that with the bonding power we are leaving them they would not have 25 per cent of the money that they have to expend this summer.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. This amendment only requires that a few miles of the road shall be operated, otherwise the bonding powers will be resumed just as they are asking for them.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. They have not only to make this change, but they have this large expenditure.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. You say that the road shall be operated, but you do not say for what distance. If you say the whole system it will cover that point. Say "operated and completed," so that it will cover the whole distance.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I suppose there would be no objection to that.

Mr. BRITTON. I perhaps may be wrong, as I was not at the committee, I regret to say, to hear the discussion that took place in favour of the Bill, but the objection to this Bill seems to me to be this: Here are certain persons who come and buy this road, which is in a state of dilapidation, not used at all. They give something like $35,000 or $30,000 for it.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Nothing of the kind.

Mr. BRITTON. I understand that to be the case. It has been stated that they paid some such sum as that.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Besides which they accepted liens.

Mr. BRITTON. And it is now proposed to expend a large sum of money upon it. I dare say the hon. gentleman stated that they would expend their money in good faith, but there is no guarantee of this. These gentlemen come here and say that it will cost so much for this thing and so much for the other thing, in all some $300,000 or $400,000. There is no guarantee that these things will cost so much or that that money will be expended. They have twelve miles of road already constructed that by the Bill they are authorized to buy from the present owners. It is the property of this corporation and they have at once the power to bond that twelve miles at the rate of $15,000 a mile.

Mr. CLARKE. But they will have spent nearly $15,000 a mile.

Mr. BRITTON. They have not spent $15,000 a mile. They have spent $36,000, and whatever these liens come to.

Mr. CLARKE. They have spent $100,000.

Mr. BRITTON. Grant that it is $102,000. 12 miles by $15,000 is $180,000 and the difference between $180,000 and $102,000 is a very considerable sum. I do not know what protection there is against their taking that twelve miles of road already constructed and putting bonds upon it to the amount of $15,000 a mile, floating these bonds and doing nothing in reference to it.

Mr. CLARKE. The statement read by the hon. member for North Oxford (Mr. Sutherland), I think, ought to satisfy the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Britton). The gentlemen who acquired this road do not intend to rest satisfied with fixing up the twelve miles already constructed. That is only part of their scheme. They have to make extensions, one of which is to Toronto. They have already expended $102,000, and they propose to expend $50,000 more, making an expenditure of $152,000. That is on this twelve miles portion. The extension to Port Dalhousie and the conversion of the road to an electrical road will involve a further expenditure of more than $300,000, making in all $467,000. I think as the gentlemen promoting the Bill have acceded to the wishes of the hon. member for Provencher (Mr. La-Rivière), there should be no opposition. This is a Bill affecting a large and important part of the province of Ontario. It is a Bill that will substantially enhance the value of every acre of land between St. Catharines and Toronto. It is a Bill that both of these cities have asked Parliament to pass. Some of the leading citizens in Toronto have identified themselves with the promoters in asking for this measure. The fact that their names are connected with this Bill is a guarantee of good faith, that they propose to complete the road. I cannot understand why these persistent objections are being offered to this Bill. None of these objections were raised, except the objection of the hon. member for Provencher, in the committee. The discussion was as to whether the road should be extended from Hamilton to Toronto. After a thorough discussion the committee decided to pass the Bill, and I do hope that there will be no further objection to it. In regard to the limitation of the bonding power for the twelve miles, the city of St. Catharines, which is probably more deeply interested in the successful operation of this road than any other municipality in Ontario, is anxious that the road shall be constructed and operated. The statements made on Thursday, or Friday, in the House aroused the people of St. Catharines, and a special meeting of the city council was called to-day and a strong resolution was passed, a copy of which, I think, has been sent to the hon. member for North Oxford, asking Parliament to pass the measure and asking the representative of the constituency in this House to support it. The council even goes so far as to ask that there should be no limitation of the bonding power given under the old Act to these twelve miles. If hon. gentlemen will permit me, I may read the resolution, which will show that the city of St. Catharines, as represented by its council, is most anxious that this Bill shall pass and that the road shall be built. This resolution was passed to-day:

Moved by Alderman McCarron, seconded by Alderman Woodruff, that whereas Messrs. Powers, Calvin, Herbert and their associates are applying to the Parliament of Canada for an Act to enable them to hold under the Railway Act the property, rights and franchises of the St. Catharines and Niagara Central Railway, lately purchased by them, and whereas the chief interest the city had in the said road was its extension westwards towards Hamilton and Toronto, and for the purpose of encouraging the building of the road to these points this corporation endorsed bonds of the company to the extent of $80,000, and in addition thereto granted a loan to the company of $40,000; and whereas the right of the said company to complete its line westward would have only expired, if the said road had not been sold, on the 5th day of October, 1901 (60 Vic., chap. 9); and whereas it appears that strong opposition is being developed in Parliament against the passage of the said Act as applied for, and this council consider that the withholding from the present owners of the road of any of the rights possessed by the old company, whereby the construction of the road westward would be discouraged or delayed, would be detrimental to the interests of the city of St. Catharines and adjacent municipalities, and it would be a breach of faith on the part of the bondholders on whose behalf the said sale was had, if they did not do all in their power to assist the purchasers of the road in obtaining what they paid for. Be it therefore resolved by the municipal council of the city of St. Catharines in council assembled, that this council do record its unqualified approval of the Bill now before Parliament, as passed by the Railway Committee, and do hereby request Wm. Gibson, Esq., the member for Lincoln, to give same his support, and that he be specially requested to urge upon Parliament that the undertaking be not crippled by the curtailment of the company's bonding privileges as asked for, especially with regard to the twelve miles of road already constructed, upon which a large amount of money must in the very near future be expended in order to make it useful and safe for public traffic, and that the mayor be instructed to forward by telegram to Mr. Gibson a copy of this resolution.—Carried.

(Sgd.) W. Y. KEATING, Mayor.

It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, in view of the strong feeling evinced by the people of St. Catharines, as expressed in the resolution passed by the city council to-day, that this Bill should not be further obstructed, but that it should be permitted to pass Parliament. We ought to reach some conclusion to-night, especially when the hon. member for North Oxford (Mr. Sutherland), the chairman of the Railway Committee, has agreed to the proposition submitted by the hon. member for Provencher (Mr. La-Rivière) that for the present the power to bond the twelve miles section should be limited to $15,000 per mile. That road when completed will be first-class in every particular. It will be an electric road, and the advantages to the city of Toronto from the construction and operation of that road will be very great indeed. Citizens of Toronto are labouring under a serious disadvantage, being practically tied up, except during the season of navigation, to one railway. Competition by this road will also be a very great advantage to the people of St. Catharines, to the people of the Niagara peninsula, as well as to the community resident between Toronto and Hamilton. I do not wish to take up the time of the House further, but in view of the concessions made by the promoters of the Bill as to the limitation of the bonding power on the twelve miles section, I would urge that the committee should now pass the Bill.

Mr. BRITTON. I do not wish to obstruct the Bill or to talk against time or anything of the kind. I wish to point out, however, that a considerable opposition was manifested against the Bill on the two previous occasions on which it was before the House. The promoter of the Bill, who is also chairman of the Railway Committee (Mr. Sutherland), has proposed an amendment now which may perhaps meet the views of those who so strongly opposed the Bill on a former occasion, and I ask that in deference to the views of these gentlemen, the committee should be allowed to rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

Some hon. MEMBERS. No, no.

Mr. BRITTON. There are very few members present in the House and as there will be plenty of time to dispose of the Bill, this postponement I ask will not do any harm. If this is a proper Bill to pass it will pass then. I am a good deal like the hon. member for Provencher (Mr. LaRivière), who says he does not oppose the Bill on personal grounds. I am not specially interested in that part of the country, but it does seem to me that these are dangerous bonding powers to grant to a road situated as this is. They originally buy a few miles of road, then they seek to bond these few miles, first to the extent of $25,000 a mile, and now according to the amendment, for $15,000 a mile. I do not question the good faith of the owners of the line, nor do I deny that they spent some money in addition to the amount they paid for the road. But I do say it is a very dangerous thing to allow the owners to bond this small piece of road without reference to what they may do with regard to the other line. They may or they may not build the line asked for in their charter, but if they get $180,000 of bonds and do not construct, Parliament will deeply regret giving them such powers.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. Do I understand that the suggestion has been accepted by my hon. friend (Mr. Sutherland) ?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Only one objection was raised to this Bill that had any weight, and that was the objection raised by the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Gibson) the other night, and by the hon. member (Mr. LaRivière) to-night. The promoters of the charter have met that objection to the fullest extent, and if hon. members in this House have any doubt of their bona fides, they are prepared to go further. There is no reason why, in the public interest, this Bill should not pass, and at this stage of the session, with a large number of other Bills on the Order paper waiting to be considered, it seems unreasonable that this Bill should be further delayed.

Section, as amended, agreed to.

On section 10,

Mr. BRITTON. This clause grants this company fuller powers than are usually granted. A small railway company, with a small piece of road, may by this clause fill the whole lake with vessels, and buy or acquire docks, and do a transportation business to any extent.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Not at all.

Mr. COCHRANE. Even so, who will it hurt ?

Mr. BRITTON. It gives them power "to carry on generally the business of transportation."

Mr. SUTHERLAND. In connection with the line.

Mr. BRITTON. Under our law, American citizens are not allowed to own ships here, and when this Bill was originally put forward none but Americans were connected with it. In order to meet the objections raised in committee, certain Canadian names were added, but these gentlemen have not a single dollar of real interest in this company in Canada. This company is allowed the right to build and construct vessels and carry on generally the work of transportation on the lakes. If we give them this power, we are giving them a power, contrary to what heretofore has been considered good policy on the part of this Parliament. It is not like a great railway such as the Canadian Pacific Railway or the Grand Trunk Railway. The statement of the Bill that it is a work for the general interests of Canada is only put there for the purpose of bringing it under the Railway Act; it is not for the general interests of Canada in any other sense. It is not inter-provincial. It is simply this short road from some point on the Niagara River to the city of Toronto; and yet, this small provincial railway company has power under this section 10 to engage in the general business of transportation on any of the lakes of this Dominion; and we are giving it this power, apparently with our eyes open, to please the genial and charming chairman of the Railway Committee. I would like to please him as much as any one; but that is what is being done now, without fairly considering the opposition of members who are not present to-night, and who could state more clearly than I can, the grounds of opposition to this Bill.

Section agreed to.

Committee rose and reported Bill, with amendments. Amendments read the first and the second time, and agreed to.

LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

Mr. FLINT. Before the Orders of the Day are called, Mr. Speaker, I would like to call attention to the position in which an important motion, that stands in my name, occupies on the Order paper, and to ask, whether a particular day cannot be set aside for its discussion. This matter is one of more than ordinary interest at present, owing partly to action taken by this House, and, as there is very considerable uncertainty as to whether it will be reached in the regular order of notices of motion, and as, even should it be reached, there will be but very little time for its discussion, under the rules of the House, and as it will be admitted that this motion should not be disposed of without a fair measure of discussion, I would ask the Government, if a day cannot be fixed for discussing it.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The Government are fully aware of the fact that if this motion with regard to the question of prohibition is left to take its rank on the Order paper, there is no probability of its disposal the present session, and I have no hesitation in saying that, in order that it may have full discussion, the Government will fix a day for the debate. It is not possible, however, for the Government to fix a day now, even approximately, but I may say that, as soon as the debate on the redistribution is concluded and that Bill is disposed of, we will be able to take this matter up.

Mr. FLINT. That is perfectly satisfactory.

THE OGILVIE COMMISSION.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Can the hon. Prime Minister give me any information as to when the report of the Ogilvie commission will be printed?

Mr. BRITTON.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I am informed by the Clerk of the House that the papers will be ready Wednesday.

MR. COSTE'S TRIP TO THE YUKON AND TO ENGLAND.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Is the right hon. gentleman able to say anything further concerning the return touching Mr. Coste's report? There was some confusion with regard to it. One had been brought down which did not relate to his trip to the Yukon and afterwards to England. That Order in Council was passed about a month ago.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Does the hon. gentleman allude to the report on the cost of Mr. Coste's expedition? That will be ready in a day or two.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I allude to the report on the expedition last made by him to the Yukon and afterwards to London.

The PRIME MINISTER. As to that, I have no information to give my hon. friend.

THE GENERAL INSPECTION ACT.

Mr. PENNY. At the request of the Minister of Inland Revenue, I move that the Order that the House form itself into committee on Bill (No. 55) further to amend the General Inspection Act, be discharged, and the Bill withdrawn. The hon. Minister has asked me to bring this Bill in as an amendment to his Bill on the Weights and Measures Act.

Motion agreed to, and Bill withdrawn.

SMALL FRUIT PACKAGES.

Mr. PENNY. The hon. Minister of Inland Revenue has asked me to submit this Bill as an amendment to the General Inspection Act, I beg to move that the Order that the House resolve itself into committee on Bill (No. 56) to define the size of small fruit packages, be discharged, and the Bill withdrawn.

Motion agreed to, and Bill withdrawn.

THE MONTREAL, OTTAWA AND GEORGIAN BAY CANAL.

The House resumed adjourned debate on the proposed motion of Mr. Peapore for an Address to His Excellency the Governor General, praying that he will cause to be laid before the House all petitions, applications and letters in relation to the Montreal, Ottawa and Georgian Bay Canal.

Mr. G. E. CASEY (West Elgin). In pursuance of my course in moving the adjournment of this debate, the last night it was up, I propose to say a few words on the motion. I do not intend to go into the details or figures, as these have been exhaustively dealt with by gentlemen more directly interested in the scheme and more intimately acquainted with the locality. But, as a member for western Ontario, where this scheme is not perhaps so well understood as it ought to be, I feel it my duty to give the House and the country the benefit of such opinion as I have been able to form upon it. Although my own district is in no way directly interested, I believe that the whole of Canada, and especially the whole of Ontario, is interested in the development of our back country and of such mineral and other resources that may be therein. We have too thin a strip of settlement even in this the best situated of all the mainland of the province. If you go 150 miles back almost of any point from the lake, in the province of Ontario, you will find yourself rather in the backwoods, comparatively speaking. Perhaps in most places the margin of full settlement is very much less. This is not such a depth of settlement as a considerable and well-balanced country demands. It is not such a depth of settlement as this grand province of Ontario is fitted to sustain, and to sustain in comfort and wealth. If, therefore, the present scheme commends itself to our judgment as one likely to develop that back country by opening up markets for its products and facilities for new manufactories and industries of other kinds, you may be sure that it will promote settlement in the very near future, and that, with the development of the resources of that country, will come the influx of a larger population, and, consequently, great accession to the province and the Dominion. This scheme does seem to fulfil the requisites to that great and desirable end.

In the first place, I must begin by saying that I fear that a great many of our people, even in the province of Ontario, are ignorant of the resources that exist in the rough or partly developed country, even in the Ottawa valley and the other connecting waterways to the Georgian Bay.

In the South-western Peninsula, a veritable land of Goshen, where every acre is arable and all fruits and grains can be grown, we are too apt to think of this district as a desert, with rocks partly covered with valuable timber, but largely denuded even of that by the ruthless and wasteful lumberman's people are too apt to think him. I am afraid even members of this House who have sat for many years here, on the banks of the Ottawa River, do not know what exists 25 or 50 or a hundred miles up that noble stream and on its tributaries. I confess that after as long a term here as almost anybody in the House it is only within the last year or two that I have been able to get any clear personal idea on these points myself. Within the last couple of years, however, I have made some excursions up the river, and I have found much that surprised and delighted me. There is, along the Ottawa valley, not to speak of a wider district, a vastly greater extent of first-rate farming land than anybody who has not visited that region is apt to suppose. There are mines, of silver, at all events as good as any in British Columbia—and I have seen some of the best there. There is timber still within reach of the river, though not much upon its banks at the present time. Above all—I think I may fairly say above all—there is the greatest series of useful water-powers that can be obtained in any district on the continent of America. I do not think I should be going too far if I said that the water-power of the Ottawa River is available at the different cascades and rapids along its length, is more immediately useful, more practically valuable for manufacturing and for the production of power than the water-fall of Niagara itself. Probably I should not be going too far if I said that an equal number of horse-power could be developed along the Ottawa River. A pleasant peculiarity possessed by the great rivers, almost alone of our great rivers, is that of taking a nice little drop of from 15 to 30 feet every few miles along its course, and of providing in the middle of the cascades a number of islands which will be very convenient places for manufactories, mills and power-houses. We are all familiar with the Chaudière Falls, within the limits of this city, though we hardly realize that it is like the others of which I have just spoken—a series of cascades between islands, for the islands in this case are so covered with structures of various kinds that we forget that they are actual islands and regard them as being artificially constructed. Let us go to the head of Deschenes Lake, upon which stands the town of Aylmer, and we find one of the most remarkable water-falls anywhere, at the Chats. Here is a natural dam of a height, I think of 35 feet and three miles long, with 13 or 14 natural water-falls, which run all summer and capable of producing a vast number of horse-power each. It is the most remarkable series of water-falls that I have ever seen, at all events. The unsubmerged portions of this dam, which appear as islands in the river, are, some of them, of large extent and capable of containing whole villages or towns of workers.

Mr. POWELL. Where is that?

Mr. CASEY. At the head of Deschenes Lake, twenty-eight miles above Aylmer. These islands are so placed that a railway could easily be run from one side of the river to the other, putting all the industrial establishments using this great water-power into communication with each other and with existing lines of railway on each side. Further up the river you come to other powers of a similar nature, at Portage du Fort, Grand Calumet, Allumette, Des Joachims—I need not go over the list, as you have heard them before ; but they are all of them convenient and accessible for the purpose of establishing industries. When I say they are convenient and accessible, I do not mean that they are now in a state of development to be put to the use of which they may be made capable. It is exactly such a project as this canal that is needed to make the glorious water-powers available for practical purposes. There will have to be locks at all these rapids, and there will have to be dams at the locks to regulate the flow of water ; and where you put a lock, as everybody knows who has lived along the Lachine or Welland Canals, you provide a developed water-power. So, parties who intended to establish industries would only have to make arrangements with the canal company for the use of water-power which would be developed by the construction of the canal itself. Now, through the development of the water-powers of this glorious river there is a tremendous field for future enterprise. We are only at the beginning of the use of electrical power. It seems highly probable that, besides being applied to all purposes of railway locomotion, electricity will become the principle agent in the smelting of our ore, especially some of the refractory ores that are hard to manage in the ordinary way. The Ottawa River is capable of smelting all the ore that can be brought to it from all parts of Ontario, and of running all the railways in this part of the province at all events. The same remark, to a great extent, will apply to the other end of the route, the river which this canal system would descend into the Georgian Bay, where mills, pulp factories and industries of all sorts could be established, as well as at this end of the route.

Now, Sir, I may be asked why a canal through this country would do more to develop it than would a railway. I think I have already partly answered that question by showing how the mere construction of a canal would provide power in convenient form for many industries. I may go a little further. Suppose these industries to be established, they will not only provide freight to be carried by the canal during the time it is opened, but, during the winter time when the canal is stopped by frost, the water powers will be going on, and freight will be produced which will have to be shipped by rail. So this canal will not only provide freight to be carried through its own system, but freight to be carried by existing and future railways in the same district or country. As a through route for grain from the great west, our own and that of the United States, this canal would stand unrivalled. The earlier projectors whom you have heard mentioned, and the statesmen who are not projectors, who have in years past referred to this as a practical route for a canal, certainly had great foresight.

A look at the map shows that if a canal

be feasible along the lines on which this is laid down, it is the directest line possible between the upper lakes and the head of sea-going navigation at Montreal. Rival schemes have at different times been proposed, surveys have been made, and a great deal of talking has been done ; but none of them can pretend to compare in directness with the route now under consideration. Referring again to my geographical situation, as a member from western Ontario, I should be naturally inclined, perhaps, to favour the long-proposed and long-talked-of canal from Georgian Bay to Toronto, known as the Capreol scheme. But, Sir, there are various reasons why that scheme, which the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) and the hon. member for West York (Mr. Wallace) tried to galvanize into new life the other evening, cannot compare with the scheme now under consideration, especially from the point of view of a Parliament looking to that which would be in the best interest of the greatest number of people. In the first place, that canal would not develop a new country of great but unworked resources, it would go almost entirely through a country which is already well settled and developed and supplied with means of communication, largely at the public expense. In the second place—and I think this alone is fatal to the scheme in comparison with the Ottawa and Georgian Bay plan—freight coming from Georgian Bay to Toronto by that proposed canal would be only some fifty or sixty mile nearer Montreal when it got to Toronto than freight would be when delivered at the Georgian Bay terminus of the Ottawa and Georgian Bay Canal. So, that, after all this canalling between the Georgian Bay and Toronto, you would only gain sixty miles towards tide-water, and you would still have the eastern half of Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River, with its rapids and canals to descend, before you reached the head of sea-going navigation. Now, Sir, that comparison alone is quite sufficient to knock this scheme out. It is 430 miles from the Georgian Bay to Montreal by the proposed canal route ; it is somewhere between 360 and 400 miles from Toronto to Montreal by lake and river navigation, so that you would only be gaining thirty or forty miles towards tide-water by constructing a canal from the Georgian Bay to Toronto, while by constructing something like fifteen or twenty miles of actual canalling on the Georgian Bay route, you would place Montreal in direct communication with the waters of that bay. That consideration alone, I think, is sufficient to turn the scale in favour of this scheme as compared with the other.

But if anything further were wanted, it is the fact that there is a financial proposal by responsible parties before the Government to build a canal from Ottawa to the Georgian Bay ; there is no definite proposal from any parties at all, that I am aware of, to build a canal the other way. The latter is a scheme that has been talked of a great many years, but it is one which nobody with capital has been willing to take up. The present scheme has been talked of for some time, and persons with capital have been willing to take it up, and have shown their ability and readiness to go on with it. So I think we may fairly leave out of the account the talked of, but not proposed, Toronto scheme, in favour of the well-defined scheme which has taken shape for a canal between this city and the Georgian Bay.

In this connection, it is only fair-play and common justice to refer to my old friend, Mr. McLeod Stewart, of this city, and the efforts he has made to secure the construction of this canal, and the phenomenal success that has attended those efforts in the money markets of the old country. I do not think any other Canadian, not a heavy capitalist, has ever had such success as Mr. McLeod Stewart has had in floating a scheme of this kind on the English market. The greatest possible credit is due to his brains and pluck for what he has done in this matter, no matter what the future of the scheme may be.

Now, Sir, I want to say a few words in reference to some remarks by the hon. member for East Grey on the last occasion this scheme was before us. He rather questioned the accuracy of the estimates made by Mr. Clarke, Mr. Shanley and Mr. Bender, formerly Government engineers, and well known men, but it is from their governmental surveys that the figures used in this debate by the friends of the scheme, have been compiled; they are official figures. It is possible that the hon. gentleman's knowledge of the scheme when he spoke had not been perfected by an examination of the profile of the whole Ottawa and Georgian Bay Canal scheme, which had been hung up in the lobby of the House a day or two before he spoke on the subject; he is therefore excusable for not having fully realized the facts of the case. He was also in error, as I find from some notes I have here of what he said, in saying that there would be sixty-eight miles of canal to be built under this proposed scheme. As a matter of fact, I understand that there will be only something between twenty and thirty-three miles of canal on the whole route from Montreal to the Georgian Bay, about fifteen miles of which are already in existence between here and Montreal, leaving a balance of something about eighteen miles, probably, to be constructed. As a matter of fact, this is hardly a canal scheme at all, it is a scheme for developing the inland navigation which already exists, by connecting lakes and rivers which are in themselves navigable, by means of locks. Nearly all the so-called canalling on this scheme consists of short stretches between lakes, except one considerable stretch which has been referred to by other speakers.

I think that is all I have taken note of here that was said by the hon. gentleman, to which I need refer on this occasion. The great gain in distance between Liverpool and the western wheat market, by this route, has been already alluded to in this House and I do not think it necessary to repeat these figures. I think it may be taken as proven by statistics, already placed before this House, that this route will vastly shorten the distance between the western grain fields and Liverpool and that it will become the chief channel for such part of the grain traffic as is water borne. I think it would by no means do away with the railways; it would by no means injure their usefulness or receipts. It has not been found elsewhere that canals have been ruinous to railways, in fact, as I think I pointed out a while ago, the construction of this canal would be most useful to the railways in providing freight, both summer and winter, to railways contiguous to it or connected with it at certain points. That is all that is necessary for me to say, in this connection in stating my reasons for furthering this scheme. To summarize they are these: First, a cheapening of grain transport, and, second, the establishment of great industries, the development of the water-power situated along this canal, mills for grinding some portion of the grain in transit, pulp mills, saw-mills, factories of all kinds, the development of electrical power, for all purposes and the consequent settlement of this uninhabited region as a result of this great development of industry. For all these reasons I have felt compelled, though I at one time looked upon the scheme as chimerical, to give my warm adhesion and support to it. Of course, I do not know what the Government are prepared to say on the subject, or, whether they are prepared to commit themselves to-night to any definite statement. I do not think that we should be too insistent upon them to say exactly what their opinion is at this moment, though it is doubtless most advisable that their decision, whatever decision they may come to, should be made known to the public. It is well that they should know what hon. members on both sides of the House think upon the question, and I have thought it would be interesting to them to know what a member from a distant part of the province of Ontario, having no personal or local connection with the scheme, thinks about it, and for that reason I have taken up this much of the time of the House.

Mr. THOMAS MACKIE (North Renfrew). Mr. Speaker, I suppose that as this proposed canal will pass along the border of my constituency I will be expected to say something in regard to the matter. I shall not pretend to state all the advantages to Canada involved in this project. I merely want to point out the water stretches along the route. I need not say anything about the Ottawa River between here and Montreal, which is pretty well known, and as to which it will not cost very much to construct a ship canal along its course. I imagine that the most expensive portion of the route will be the first four miles from Ottawa to the head of Deschenes Rapids. From that point there is a water stretch to the Chats Rapids about 30 miles over which there are steamers now running that are drawing from seven to eight feet of water. There is a canal to be built at the Chats Rapids, but it will not cost quite as much as it would have done at one time, because a portion of the work was constructed years ago. Then we go on to the Chats Lake, which takes us through a fine stretch of water for about 25 miles until we come to Portage du Fort. This course runs through a fine farming country. Supplies used to go to the lumbering districts here, but now the settlement is so much improved and farming has taken the place of lumbering to such an extent that the produce of the district has not a local market and must find an outlet at the seaboard. At Portage du Fort there is a succession of rapids but the water is deep. When we get above these there are other stretches and we pass through lakes six to eight miles in length with rapids between them. When we get above Pocket's Rapids at Westmeath, we have a stretch of water for about 60 miles. From there to Des Joachims there is a stretch of about 40 miles and the water is supposed to be about 200 feet deep. There is an inland lake, which, with a short canal into it, would enable us to escape all the rapids. Most of these rapids only require one or two locks to enable us to get over them. At Mattawa we leave the Ottawa River. It is supposed that this canal is going to cost a large amount of money in constructing it along the course of the Ottawa River. I do not think it will if the promoters take the right way of handling the project. There is a large number of stretches of lakes, thousands of square miles in extent on the Upper Ottawa. With very little expense these lakes could be dammed up so as to retain the freshets which come down the Ottawa in the spring. This would regulate the water level during the whole season. We will say that there will be 10 feet of a rise and fall in the Ottawa River. I feel quite satisfied that by damming the Upper Ottawa and reserving the water it could be kept five or six feet higher in the lower Ottawa all season that it is at low water in the summer so that it would not take so much canalling as might otherwise be necessary. We know that great areas are flooded by the water that comes down the Ottawa River in the spring, but the adoption of this suggestion would retain the water and enable you to have sufficient water for the purposes of navigation all summer. The water-powers along the Ottawa River would be enhanced in value by having this steady flow of water all summer. Then we leave the Ottawa River at Mattawa which is 200 miles from Ottawa. The canal, as proposed, will follow the Mattawa, 40 odd miles, until it enters Lake Nipissing, after which there is deep water all the way along the French River until the Georgian Bay is reached and very few locks would have to be built from there through to the Georgian Bay. This scheme has been discussed for many years, and surveys have been made by eminent engineers. I think Mr. Walter Shanly made a survey of the whole route at one time, and he estimated that the canal would cost $30,000,000. That was some forty years ago. I imagine that works that would cost $30,000,000 at that time could be constructed now for $20,000,000.

In those days all great works were constructed by manual labour, and we had not steam drills or steam dredges or any of these modern labour-saving appliances which now cheapen construction. I feel satisfied that at the present day, $20,000,000 would give us that great water route clear through to the Georgian Bay, and I believe, Sir, that without any trouble whatever, we will have an adequate flow of water the whole season around. This route, in my opinion, is feasible of construction, and being feasible it will afford the shortest possible route, and the quickest and cheapest means of transportation from the Georgian Bay to Montreal. The lumber is now getting small on the Ottawa River and its tributaries, and I believe if this canal is constructed, fine timber will be found further back and brought down by vessels and barges for shipment. Let me impress upon the Government that they seriously consider this matter, for I believe that when they get an estimate of the cost of the work, they will come to the assistance of the people and have this canal constructed. I hope, Sir, before two years are past, to see a good section of the Georgian Bay Canal at least under way.

Mr. W. C. EDWARDS (Russell). Mr. Speaker, when the Trent Valley Canal was under discussion in former years in this House, each member representing a constituency in the district was expected to say something in its favour. And, Sir, when the Ottawa Ship Canal is under discussion in Parliament, it not only is a question for the members in the district, but it is a question interesting to members all over the Dominion, because it is a matter which vitally affects the whole of Canada. It is my opinion that the portion of the country which will derive the greatest advantage from the construction of this canal is the great producing areas of the North-west, because the prime question with the producers of that district is to get their produce cheaply to the seaboard. It is said that the construction of the canal will reduce the cost of transit of our north-western grain to the seaboard, fully 50 per cent. I am not able to verify this statement, but I do know that the Georgian Bay Canal is the shortest and best route to the head of ship navigation, notwithstanding the statement of the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) that a canal running around by way of Toronto would be more beneficial in that respect. At the same time, Sir, I am not able to be so enthusiastic as some of the other members who have favourably discussed the Georgian Bay Canal question. I believe that before the St. Lawrence Canal system was constructed, was the time when this Georgian Bay Canal project should have been carried out. Forty years ago it was a live question in this portion of the country, and I feel sure it will become a live question again, but just how soon I am unable to say. If the proposition, that a British syndicate is to build the canal can be satisfactorily carried out, it may be a live question almost immediately, but I must be permitted to express my individual opinion, that that is hardly the right way to go about the matter. The Government is asked to guarantee 3 per cent interest on $18,000,000 or $20,000,000, for the carrying out of this project, and if that amount be sufficient to complete it, it should, in my opinion, receive the hearty support of every member of this House. We must, however, remember that all the estimates now being made are on the basis of a survey which took place away back in the sixties, and if it is found that the $20,000,000 will not construct the canal, my opinion is that the Government undoubtedly would be called upon to guarantee interest on a further sum.

Mr. POUPORE. No.

Mr. EDWARDS. At all events that is my opinion. Now, Canada can carry a certain amount of indebtedness, and it is my belief, speaking in general terms, that the indebtedness of the country is at present sufficiently large, and that a sufficient sum has been paid out to afford means of transport from the west to the east until we reach further development.

Mr. POUPORE. Will my hon. friend (Mr. Edwards) allow me one word? The conditions upon which the guarantee is asked are these. The Government is not responsible, nor will the bonds commence to run until after the canal has been completed. I would like my hon. friend (Mr. Edwards) not to forget that feature of it. The Government do not assume any responsibility now.

Mr. EDWARDS. I do not oppose, but I support with all my heart the carrying out of this project just as rapidly as it can properly be carried out. As to the providing of the finances, I simply made the statement that I think we are beginning at the wrong end, and I was proceeding to say further that in the matter of expenditure on public works, this country can bear just so much, and for the present we have reached, perhaps, the limit of large expenditures until we have a large population in Canada. We have expended a large sum of money in the construction of the Grand Trunk Railway, in the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, in the construction of the Parry Sound Railway, and at present we are expending a large amount in the deepening of our St. Lawrence Canals, each of which undertaking is affording means of transportation from the west to the east. Now, my opinion is, that if this project will in any way add materially to the burdens of the people, it would be desirable not to proceed at once with its construction; but, if the English syndicate will build a canal on the conditions suggested, and if it will be satisfactorily carried out in every respect, I say with all my heart, let them build it. It is my humble opinion, however, that a more judicious and better way to proceed would be for the Government to come to Parliament for an appropriation to carry out a survey, and to estimate exactly the cost of the construction of this canal. After this is done the question will be in a better shape to be dealt with. I am throwing no cold water on the scheme whatever; I am perfectly in favour of the scheme, but this has been my view from the first, and it is my view now. As to the development of the Ottawa region, and the advancement of our mineral and lumber resources, and the affording of the cheapest and best route for the carrying of the grain from the Northwest to the east, there is no doubt at all that the Georgian Bay Canal is the best scheme. Now, this question has been dealt with at length in a statistical way by other speakers, who are far better posted on the subject than I am. I have simply dealt with the general principle, and have suggested what I think is the best way of proceeding with it. I believe the time will come, whether in the near future or in the more distant years, when this great work will be carried out; and when it is, it will not be simply a matter of local interest, but as a work of great interest to Canada, perhaps greater, than any of the great public works of the past.

Mr. NICHOLAS FLOOD DAVIN (West Assiniboia). Mr. Speaker, I desire with great diffidence to say a few words on this vast engineering project. I would not presume for a moment to speak with any authority on a matter of this kind; but I think one may form such an opinion on the scheme as to justify him in endorsing it and voting for it, even though unequal to the task of discussing it from an engineering standpoint. Now, Sir, what my hon. friend who has just addressed the House has said is what weighs most with me in regard to it. I saw a calculation, made by an eminent engineer, as to what the reduction in the cost of carrying the wheat of the North-west would be, if we had the Montreal and Georgian Bay Canal; and it exceeded 50 per cent the calculation made by my hon. friend from Russell (Mr. Edwards). With a canal like this, you would secure for the vast grain fields of the North-west and for the vast mineral products on the shores of Lake Superior the greatest possible benefit, and you would secure for the people of the North-west what is their great desideratum, to be brought to the sea on approximately equal terms with the people of Ontario. Now, it does not seem to me that the financial objection, which has been stated by my hon. friend, is a very serious one, or one which should make us pause, when we are confronted with a question of going on with this scheme. My hon. friend deprecates adding to the burden of taxation and the burden of debt of this country. There is nobody in this House who would be more earnest in endorsing an attitude of that kind than myself. But, when I look at the proposal of my hon. friend, I do not see that it is a very alarming one from that point of view. It only asks for a guarantee after the canal had been completed and is in working order—after it has become an established fact. And we have the evidence of Mr. Thompson, of Duluth, who, I am told, is a high engineering authority, before the Senate committee, as to the feasibility of this scheme, and not only as to its feasibility, but this eminent expert declares that it has this unique advantage, that no canal scheme that can be projected on this continent can for one moment compare with it, whether you regard it as an outlet for the North-west Territories, or as a vast power-producing scheme for developing the incoherent wealth along its border. That being so, I do not think we need have much hesitation in endorsing it. Guaranteeing the bonds on $20,000,000, after the work has been established, does not seem to me to compare in onerousness with some schemes which have been entered into in this House with a light heart. I have been in this House now some fourteen or fifteen sessions, and it has been my fortune to see, session after session, gentlemen who would hesitate to vote a small sum, come down and with a light heart vote millions and millions away for schemes which a great number of them did not understand. But although this is a vast and complicated undertaking, although in its many ramifications it is one that would require great study and some expert knowledge thoroughly to master it, yet, as compared with some of the schemes I have referred to, it is easily understood. There is not one of us who has travelled over a canal, inspected a lock and seen power produced by damming, who cannot understand what a great advantage this great work would be to Canada, if once it had become an accomplished fact. It would not only be a great thing for those vast fields in the North-west and those unmeasured and immeasurable mining properties on the shores of Lake Superior, but it would do more than even the $60,000 a year which the right hon. gentleman proposes to give, to make the city of Ottawa the Washington of the North; and it would add immensely to the wealth and commercial importance of the city of Montreal. Now, I am told that for this great wealth-producing scheme Canada is too small—that we could not bear the taxation. My mind goes back to the first time that I was taken over these buildings, by a Minister of the Crown, in 1872; and, although he was a colleague of Sir John Macdonald, when I praised the buildings—and then the Langevin Block was not built—he said: “Yes, but what a fearful piece of extravagance! They are altogether beyond this country; it was a monstrous thing ever to build it. Canada cannot bear the burden which they entail upon her.” Now, we know that these buildings are not large enough. We know that the great mistake that was made was not to have such foresight as would realize the great progress which Canada would make and the great expansion which its business would enjoy.

Sir, I am sure that the most sanguine man amongst us does not realize the progress that Canada will make henceforth every year. We have only to look back to the progress made by the United States. Look back to the time when the United States had a population about the size of ours, and a little later on when that population had to some extent increased, read the speeches of the statesmen in the English House of Commons at the time when the population in the United States was not as large as that in Canada, when the trade of that country would not compare with ours to-day, when its organized and developed works could not be placed in the scale one minute with those of Canada, look also to the progress made by that country since then, and then you will be able to make some forecast of the vast possibilities that are before this great premier colony of the Empire. Looking at ourselves geographically, we are in the process of forming a vast empire. We have the finest wheat lands, both undeveloped and developed, in the world. There is no country in the world to-day that has such a vast prospect, there is no country in the world holds out to the agriculturists of England, Ireland and Scotland and the continent of Europe, such advantages as those great plains in our North-west; and even handicapped as those great plains are by their distance from the sea, I can assure my hon. friend that I could take him to farmers around Indian Head, Regina and Moosejaw, who came in there poor men ten or fifteen years ago, and who have since made wealth, who have not only the farms they settled on—the 160 acres and the pre-emption—but have bought Canadian Pacific Railway land. They are land-holders, they are cultivating large tracts, and some of them have $10,000 and $15,000 to their credit in the banks. These are not isolated cases, and they have reached that position in the face of certain enormous difficulties. When you take into account the vast extent of territory they have to travel to get to the seaboard, when you take into account the large amount they have to pay for freighting their wheat to the seaboard, it is a triumphant testimony to the wealth that is at the command of any competent farmer who goes to these plains, that in the face of these difficulties they have been able to make smiling homes and rich farmsteads, and to have $10,000 and $15,000 to their credit in the banks.

You know, Sir, that I, from time to time, in this Chamber, contended strenuously that whatever Government is in power, whether it calls itself Liberal or Conservative, it is bound to do all that it can to reduce the freight rates from the centre of this continent to the seaboard; it is bound to place the farmers of the North-west Territories as nearly as possible on an equality with the farmers to the east and west, who are near the seaboard. Especially is the Government of Canada bound to do that and bound to have the Canadian Pacific Railway co-operate with it, because not merely to build the Canadian Pacific Railway, but other lines of railway, we in the North-west Territories have given the land. It is from us the lands have come. To be sure, you sometimes boast that you have subscribed millions, but if you have, we have given our share, we have given the lands to build this great railway and other railways, and therefore the farmers of the North-west Territories, whose lands have been thus given, are entitled to every possible consideration in order to place them on a level, or as nearly as possible on a level, with the farmers more fortunately situated as to distance.

What I have contended might be done in another way, will be done directly and efficiently the moment you have a canal of this kind constructed. All experience shows us—the experience of the United States, of Hungary, of Germany, of England—that there is no competitor of a railway so successful in lowering freight as the canals; and now I am going to bring before you another astonishing fact. There is no such feeder for the railways, whose freights it reduces, there is no such enricher of the railways as that very canal. In England, on the continent of Europe, in the United States, it has been proved to the astonishment of railway owners, who spent tens of thousands of dollars fighting the canal, that after the canal had been in existence, after it had reduced their freight rates, they have been ready to bless God that the canal was built, because it has produced so much wealth and commerce in the little towns along the routes of both the water-way and the railway, that instead of having their freight lessened, the railways had to build hundreds of cars and increase their engine and their station power, because the little towns and villages that were as silent as the city of the dead, became full of thriving business, owing to the construction of the canal, and the railway had all it could do to deal with the local traffic. So that you need not be surprised to find a man so far-seeing as Sir William Van Horne, the ex-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, endorsing this scheme, because he knows well that the minute you have a scheme of this sort in operation, you will increase the traffic on the railroad. There is wealth along the Ottawa River to-day, yet that wealth will be but a flea-bite compared with what will exist after this canal has been five years in existence. Towns will spring up that are now not dreamed of, factories will be built, and electric power will be brought into play, that in every kind of production of civilized advance and progressive energy, will be a powerful factor.

I wish to speak on this matter as a North-west man. If anything has to be paid, we will have to pay our share, and by the time we have to pay it, we will have very much more population than now and be better able to bear the burden, but speaking as a North-west man, knowing the advantages this scheme would be to every farmer, and looking forward to a time when not merely this canal with its advantages will be a great producer, but looking forward to a time when our waterways will be properly utilized, so that into the remotest part of this continent we shall be able to send by water, and send effectively, I would hail the accomplishment of such a work as this, believing that it would be of the greatest possible advantage to the North-west Territories, and as I have already said, not only to the North-west Territories, but to Canada at large.

Mr. BRODER moved the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to, and debate adjourned.

ATTACHMENT OF SALARIES OF CIVIL SERVANTS.

House resumed adjourned debate on the proposed motion for the second reading of Bill (No. 38) respecting the attachment of salaries of public officers and employees of the Government.—(Mr. Richardson.)

Mr. RICHARDSON. This Bill has been before the House for the last three or four sessions, and I think it is just as well that we should discover whether it is to be killed now or whether we are to go on with it. I may say that last session the Prime Minister promised that while he was unable to support it then, if it was brought up this year in some amended form he expected to be able to support it. That being the case, I took measures to have the Bill drafted in the most careful manner—

Mr. SPEAKER. I think the hon. gentleman (Mr. Richardson) has spoken on this motion; if so, he is out of order in speaking now.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I am anxious to have the second reading, and I move it.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman has already moved the second reading.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I merely wished to call attention to one or two points. The Minister of Justice gave me his opinion of the Bill, which is to the effect that there is no constitutional objection—

Mr. SPEAKER. This is the same debate as when this Bill was up on a previous occasion, and the hon. gentleman cannot speak twice. He is out of order in speaking now.

Mr. RICHARDSON. When do I speak, then, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. DAVIN. Speak on the motion to go into committee.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Do I speak next year or—

Mr. SPEAKER. When the Bill is in committee the hon. gentleman will have the opportunity to speak.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I have no doubt from what I know of the members that they will favour the second reading and allow the Bill to go to the committee.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I have no objection to the second reading of the Bill. I do not commit myself to the principle, and in such a thin House as this, I would not have the House committed to it finally. We can take the second reading and consider the Bill further at a later stage.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Am I at liberty to reply to that, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. BERGERON. No.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the second time.

ADJOURNMENT—PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Before the House adjourns, Mr. Speaker, there is a matter to which I want to call to the attention of the House. I have here the report of a meeting that was held at Pictou, this report appearing in the Toronto "Mail and Empire," and I wish to call the attention—

Mr. SPEAKER. On the motion to adjourn at this time no speeches can be made except on a question as to whether the House should adjourn or not.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I propose to oppose the adjournment if necessary.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman is not in order, on such a motion as this, in calling attention to the report of a public meeting.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend wishes to make a personal explanation concerning something in the paper to which he refers.

Mr. SPEAKER. If it is a personal explanation, of course that is different.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Decidedly, it is a question of personal explanation. I had the honour to be invited to a picnic of the farmers of Prince Edward County on Saturday last. At that meeting certain speeches were made, one by myself, and I wish to call attention to a report which does me serious injustice. The report has a sub-heading "the Yukon iniquity," and immediately under that says:

R. L. Richardson, M. P. for Lisgar, Manitoba, and editor of the Winnipeg "Tribune," spoke on the same topic,— —the topic mentioned by the previous speaker was tariff rates on the railroads——and mentioned incidentally that while the old Government put down the rates one and one-half cents, and were strongly censured by the Opposition, the latter had, since coming into power, not been able to lower them one cent.

I have no conception what that refers to. I did not speak as to the late Government putting down rates. My knowledge of history does not lead me to believe that they ever reduced the rates on anything. Nor did I say anything about this Government not reducing rates. The statement is so different from anything I said that I do not even know what it can refer to. It says also:

He spoke strongly on the abolition of the Senate, and considered it as a needless expense to the country, but at the same time was very thankful they hoisted the Yukon Bill.

It is true I referred to the Senate, advocating its abolition. I believe in the abolition of the Senate and have always believed so. I have no apology to offer for that opinion. But I did not express thankfulness that the Senate had hoisted the Yukon Bill; I did not refer, directly or indirectly to that measure. As a matter of fact, I voted for the Yukon Bill, and would not take the absurd position of expressing thanks that the Senate had hoisted it. The report goes on to give a list of those who spoke, including Mr. D. D. Rogers, M. P. for Frontenac; J. L. Haycock, ex-M.P. for Frontenac—Mr. Haycock was not at the meeting at all—W. V. Pettet, M.P. for Prince Edward; Arnold McFaul, Honorary County President—Mr. McFaul was not at the meeting—W. B. Scott, vice-president, and A. S. Carson, grand trustee, B. F. Wilson, E. T. Dorland and James P. Urtelle. Not one of the last three of these gentlemen named spoke at all. This report refers also to Mr. Goldwin Smith's speech, and I think in justice to Mr. Smith I should make this statement—

Mr. DAVIN. Order.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Richardson) is clearly not in order now.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Then I will conclude. I merely wished to put myself right. The report of Mr. Goldwin Smith's speech, is, I may say, a tissue of falsehoods.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) moved the adjournment of the House.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

PRAYERS.

TIME FOR PRESENTING PRIVATE BILLS.

Mr. LANDERKIN moved:

That that portion of the 49th rule which limits the time for presenting Private Bills, be suspended in respect to the Bill affecting the Edmonton District Railway Company, according to the 19th report of the Select Standing Committee on Standing Orders.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I hope the time has now come in this session when it is really a question whether such a motion as that should receive the attention of the House. I do not say that this is not an exceptional case, but I think it is necessary that at this period a reason should be given to the House for any further extension of the Rule.

Mr. LANDERKIN. This is the last meeting the committee are to hold this session, and this Bill had been advertised in several papers, but one paper in the Yukon Territory had not been received, and it was owing to that we suspended the rule. In every other particular the rule was complied with.

Mr. SPROULE. The serious objection is, the continuing to introduce private Bills so long after the proper time has expired.

Mr. LANDERKIN. The reasons assigned by the proposers of this Bill were considered by the committee sufficient for the suspending of the rule. They showed that it was impossible for them to comply fully with the rule, and as there was no private interest in danger, we thought it a hardship to knock them out.

Motion agreed to.

THE STATIONERY SUPPLY FOR MEMBERS.

Mr. GIBSON moved:

That the third, fourth and fifth reports of the Joint Committee of both Houses on the Printing of Parliament, be concurred in.

Mr. FOSTER. I would like to know what is the purport of this. The report says:

The committee recommend that a report be made to both Houses, calling attention to the fact that a resolution passed by this committee on Friday, 13th May, 1898, and reported to both Houses, and which was concurred in, viz.:

"That for the next fiscal year and for the future, the members, officers and those on the official list of the Press Gallery of the House of Commons, be provided for their use with stationery in every particular equal to that supplied to the hon. members of the Senate, and that Messrs. Gibson, Sutherland and LaRivière be appointed a sub-committee to have powers to revise and suggest such alterations as may be deemed expedient therein for the convenience of members, &c.," has not been acted upon, and the committee urge its recommendation to be carried into effect.

If the House has already passed that report, I do not see what further effect the House can give it if they pass it again. If it has not gone into effect there must be some good reason, and perhaps the chairman of the committee can give us that reason. Might I also ask the chairman of the Printing Committee with reference to the stationery for the use of members, as to where it is bought and how it is bought?

Mr. GIBSON. This matter was brought before the Joint Committee on Printing shortly after its organization in the first session of this Parliament, and it was pointed out by the members of the committee generally that the stationery supplied to the members of the House of Commons was very much inferior to that supplied to the members of the Senate. The Senators on the committee informed us that they had an internal committee appointed to regulate all matters connected with the stationery supplied, and it was then suggested that a committee might be appointed from the House of Commons to deal with this question. I may say frankly that I went to the present Speaker of the House, and he told me that he was informed by the Sergeant-at-Arms that this was entirely within his own cognizance, and that the Committee on Printing had nothing to do with it. The matter rested there and then. It was afterwards brought up in the committee—I was not present at the meeting, but, however, I will not go back on the report—and this report was reaffirmed on the 6th of June, and we are asking for concurrence in it. So far as the committee are concerned, they cannot give any explanation to the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster), further than to say that complaints have been made to them from time to time about the muddle on the envelopes, about the inferiority of the paper generally, and about the meagre, and might I say measly, quantity of stationery that was supplied to the members of the House of Commons this session and last.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

Mr. GIBSON. For that reason I am glad that the matter has been brought before the House, because if it is in the hands of the Speaker then we know who to look to. It has always been considered that the committee supplied the stationery, and on behalf of the committee I might say that they are quite willing to deal with this matter as they do in the Senate. The privilege has not been extended to us further than the supplying of the leather trunks, and I think the members will agree that the leather trunks given this Parliament will bear comparison with any trunks previously supplied. I may say that every member of the committee is quite in accord with this recommendation which was passed by the House in May, 1898.

Mr. FOSTER.

The committee that was then appointed by the Printing Committee consisted of Mr. LaRivière, Mr. Sutherland and myself, and I may say frankly that we have never done anything, simply because Mr. Speaker claimed that that was entirely in his own hands. Of course, if the House wants to take the matter up and place it in the hands of the committee, I as one member of the committee am willing to take my share of the responsibility of furnishing the members of the House with good stationery.

Mr. LaRIVIERE. In the Senate this part of the public service is under the control of a committee called the Committee on Contingencies. We had a similar institution in this House in former years, but it was abolished, and this service was vested in the Committee on Internal Economy, of which I understand the Speaker is chairman. The House in former years did away with one of its privileges, and I think it was a mistake. It is true, we have now no control over this matter, except in making complaints if we are not properly dealt with, and voting the money for the payment of the service. When we were investigating this matter, we called upon the clerk in charge of the stationery department upstairs, and asked him how it was that the stationery we were getting to-day was inferior to that which we had got hitherto, and we were informed that he had received orders from the hon. the Speaker to purchase the stationery from a certain firm in Toronto, and that samples had been supplied to that firm, and they had pledged themselves to supply stationery of a quality equal to the samples, but they had not carried out their contract. There were no tenders asked for. They were simply asked to supply the stationery of the House, provided that it would not cost any more than that which we had before, I understand, from a firm in Scotland. They were not asked whether they could supply the stationery any cheaper, or whether they could supply the same article, but they were asked to supply an article almost equal to that, and were allowed the price that was paid before. I think this is an unbusinesslike manner of dealing with this matter. At any rate, the House is not responsible for what has been done; but to-day we are face to face with the fact that we are getting stationery which is not equal to what we ought to have as members of this House, and I hope that an understanding will be come to between those who have charge of that branch of the service and the Printing Committee of this House, which is responsible for the payment for the same. By such an understanding we perhaps would get a better article, and give to the members of the House the satisfaction to which they are entitled.

Mr. WALLACE. Would the hon. member tell us the name of that firm in Toronto?

Mr. RICHARDSON. The name of the firm was not mentioned.

Mr. BERGERON. Yes, it was. When we examined the clerk of stationery in the committee, we had from him the name of the firm which now furnishes the stationery. It is the house of Warwick Bros. & Rutter, of Toronto. Now, I do not want to occupy the time of the House except to repeat what the hon. member for Lincoln (Mr. Gibson), and the hon. member for Provencher (Mr. LaRivière) have both said, that we were very much astonished last year and the year before to find that the stationery was in such a bad condition; and as we were members of the committee which was supposed to buy the stationery, we asked the chairman the reason. We were told that the committee were not responsible for it. Then, a committee was struck on the 13th of May, 1898, consisting of three gentlemen, Messrs. Gibson, Sutherland and LaRivière, to look into the matter. They in fact did nothing, because they reported that Mr. Speaker had taken upon himself to see to the furnishing of stationery for the House. We then called upon the clerk, and he told us that he had instructions to buy all the stationery he required from the house whose name I mentioned a moment ago. We have had many complaints from the members that the stationery is bad, and we thought it better to bring the whole question before the House, as we are now doing.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I may say that last session several complaints were made to me of the quality of the stationery. I do not know that I had any more right to interfere than any other member of the House, unless as a member of the Printing Committee. I made inquiry of the clerk of stationery, and he told me that there was no complaint of the stationery furnished by the firm named. It is only fair to that firm to say that. He told me that that firm did not supply the envelopes, which were the principal subject of complaint.

Mr. BERGERON. The whole stationery is bad.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. However, the members of the House did seem to be under the impression that the Committee on Printing was responsible for the quality of the stationery furnished. I was not present at the meeting of the committee, but I understand that they thought, I believe unanimously, that it would be a solution of the matter to place it in the hands of that branch of the committee which belongs to the House of Commons, and the chairman has explained the reason why that committee never met or took any action. It is in the hands of the House, I suppose, to say what position they will make of the matter.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). This is a question that ought to be determined by the committee themselves.

Mr. FOSTER. They have determined it. They cannot put their determination into effect.

The PRIME MINISTER. Where is their determination?

Mr. FOSTER. It seems to me that the committee went as far as they could. They appointed their sub-committee, and gave into the hands of that sub-committee the charge of the stationery, and ordered them to get it; but when the sub-committee took steps to do that, they found, as has been stated, that Mr. Speaker thought it to be his duty to attend to the matter. Consequently, the committee came up against a fence, and they have not been able to do anything.

The PRIME MINISTER. This is a matter, I repeat, on which we can ask the views of the committee; and if there is a conflict of jurisdiction there ought to be some means of untying the knot, and giving satisfaction to the House. I would advise that the report be sent back to the committee for their further consideration.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not see what the committee could do other than they have done. They discussed the question and came to a conclusion in 1898, a year ago, and their conclusion was endorsed by the House a year ago; and they simply have not been able to do anything. If we endorse their resolution or send it back to them, it is we ourselves who have to deal with ourselves, because it is the House that has adopted the action of the committee, and, therefore, has undertaken to stand behind the committee.

Mr. GIBSON. The resolution carried a year ago.

Mr. FOSTER. Yes, the resolution was carried by the House a year ago. Consequently it is for the House to consider whether its idea, as expressed by the resolution of the committee, which it adopted and made its own, shall be carried out or not. For my own part, I think the better thing to do will be to have the stationery for the use of members selected by the members of the committee of the Printing Committee. The Printing Committee have charge of the printing affairs of the House and they would select the kind and style of stationery they want, I give it simply as my own opinion, that it would be far better for the committee and the House, after the committee has done its duty by selecting the samples and deciding on the quality of the stationery, to hand those over to the Queen's Printer and make him responsible for seeing that the stationery is supplied according to the sample. We had better keep this matter of peddling around the patronage for the paper we use out of the hands of the Speaker.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). If there is a conflict of authority between the committee and the Speaker, I would not interfere to pronounce either one way or the other. On the contrary, I think the sound rule would be, if I may state it so, to support the authority of the Speaker, and I would not be prepared to say who is in the wrong. The best suggestion is to send the report of the committee with instructions to give the matter their consideration again.

Mr. FOSTER. Why not ask them to confer with the Speaker?

Mr. LARIVIERE. My hon. friend has failed to read the wording of this report. It is only a recommendation that a report be made to both Houses calling attention to the fact that a certain resolution was passed by this committee on Friday, 13th May, 1898, and reported to both Houses and was concurred in. It only calls attention to the report made a year ago upon which no action was taken. I do not know that it would be necessary for this House to adopt this report, which is merely a report to the House for our own information and does not call for any action.

The PRIME MINISTER. The fact remains that there is a conflict of jurisdiction, and the best way is to refer the report to the committee, and if they have to confer with the Speaker, they can do so.

Mr. BERGERON. Last year, three members of the committee were appointed to do what is done in the Senate, but they did not do anything, because they were told they could not do anything on account of the Speaker doing it himself. The question is to be decided whether it belongs to the Speaker or the committee to choose the stationery.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. If my hon. friend will allow me to make the suggestion, he will see that the course proposed by the right hon. First Minister commends itself to the judgment of the House. Here is a conflict of jurisdiction, and it is only treating a matter of that importance with sufficient consideration that the committee be instructed to confer again on that subject and make a report to the House.

Mr. GIBSON. On behalf of the committee, I may say that we will be delighted to meet the Speaker and decide the question, because there is no other way. And with the consent of the House, I would move that the fourth and fifth reports of the Committee on Printing be adopted, but that the third report be not concurred in, which is the report dealing with the question now discussed.

Mr. FOSTER.

Mr. RICHARDSON. It will be proper to bring to the attention of the House a point which members of the committee seem to have overlooked, and that is that when Mr. Clark, the clerk of stationery, was examined by the committee, he informed them that the promise was made that the stationery to be supplied by the Canadian producers would be just as good as that supplied from Scotland. It is only fair to Mr. Speaker to say that that was one of the reasons why the change was made, and Mr. Clark informed the committee that in view of the fact that the stationery was not so good, a change would be made back to the old system, and we would obtain the proper kind of stationery.

Mr. CLARKE. Has any step been taken since this discussion came up before, to improve the quality? The envelopes used to-day are not fit to be used.

Mr. SPEAKER. If the hon. gentleman will be good enough to renew his question to me, when we are in committee on supplementary Estimates connected with the House I shall be glad to give him every explanation. The motion is that the fourth and fifth reports of the Joint Committee of both Houses on Printing be adopted, and that the third report be referred back to the committee for further consideration.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I would like to take this opportunity of calling attention of the committee to paragraph 63 A in the third report of the Printing Committee, page 403 of the Votes and Proceedings. The motion to print the return therein mentioned was a little premature as the return was not complete. It lacks a date. I have spoken to members of the Government and they agree in my view of the matter that the printing could be deferred until the supplementary return comes down and the date supplied.

Mr. LARIVIERE. That matter is submitted to a special committee with instructions to see that it is brought down.

Motion agreed to.

FIRST READINGS.

Bill (No. 158) respecting the Edmonton District Railway Company, and to change its name to the Edmonton, Yukon and Pacific Railway Company.—(Mr. McInnes.)

THE BELLEVILLE AND PRINCE EDWARD BRIDGE.

Mr. HURLEY moved :

That in accordance with the recommendation contained in the 19th report of the Select Standing Committee on Standing Orders, the 51st rule and also that portion of the 49th rule which limits the time for presenting Private Bills, be suspended in respect of the Bill respecting the Belleville Prince Edward bridge.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the explanation of this?

Mr. HURLEY. This Bill is asked, not for the purpose of building a bridge, because the bridge has been in existence for eight years; but the proprietors failed, and the parties who had a mortgage bought over the bridge. Now we desire to change the name of the company, so as to facilitate the carrying on of the business by the new proprietors.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I had a letter from Mr. Corby, giving the particulars with regard to this matter, and pointing out that there was no opposition on the part of anybody interested. It is a purely local matter.

Mr. BERGERON. What are the facts? We did not hear the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Hurley's) explanation.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. This is a bridge at Belleville, and the object of the proposed legislation is to change the name of the company and to transfer that property to the new company. Mr. Corby assured me that all parties interested were satisfied. In any case, there will be sufficient notice, as there are only a few interested, and all interests can be represented before the committee. No harm can possibly be done, and the measure will be of great assistance to the new company and to the district that the bridge is intended to serve.

Mr. LANDERKIN. This matter was before the Committee on Standing Orders this morning. As the hon. member for South Oxford (Mr. Sutherland) has said, this is not asking for incorporation of a new enterprise, but to change the name, in consideration of new proprietors having taken over the bridge.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. This is done with the consent of the old holders. No private interests will be injured, and the public interests will be served by the Bill.

Motion agreed to.

THE EXCHEQUER COURT AND RAILWAY DEBTS.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL (Mr. Fitzpatrick) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 159) respecting the jurisdiction of the Exchequer Court as to railway debts. He said: This Bill is a very short one. The object is to meet such difficulties as occurred in the case of Gray and the Manitoba Northwestern. My learned friends of the House will remember that it was held by the Privy Council that, in case where a railway incorporated by the Parliament of Canada ran partly in one province and partly in another, there is no court that has jurisdiction to dispose of in its entirety. The object of the Bill is to give the Exchequer Court jurisdiction to deal with cases of that sort.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

ALASKA BOUNDARY AND PACIFIC CABLE.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER (Cape Breton). Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would invite the attention of the right hon. leader of the House to a report of what is said to have taken place in the other Chamber, an announcement by the Minister of Justice that a line has been agreed upon for the Alaska boundary. While I am on my feet, I may say also, I am sure the House will be glad to learn from the leader of the Government what the present position of the Pacific cable question is, whether it has been decided that there should be another convention upon that subject generally. The House, I am sure, would desire to be informed what is the position of these two questions.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). With regard to the first question, the provisional boundary of Alaska, the report of what is said to have taken place in the other Chamber is inaccurate. What the Minister of Justice intended to say, probably, was, that negotiations were going on for the settlement of a provisional boundary. I explained the matter the other day. The proposition was to have a provisional boundary on the Chilkoot Pass, the White Pass and the Chilkat Pass or Dalton trail. On the Chilkoot Pass and the White Pass a boundary has been agreed upon for two years, and there is nothing to be said with regard to that that would not apply to any time within the last two years. With regard to the Dalton trail, negotiations are proceeding, I may say, satisfactorily, for the location of a provisional boundary. I said, in explaining this matter before, that I thought this boundary would be satisfactory. I think it will be. But my hon. friends know that, until these negotiations have been completed, the Government is not authorized to make them public, to give communication of them to Parliament. I have reason to believe, however, that, so far as these provisional boundaries are concerned, we shall reach a satisfactory settlement. With regard to the permanent boundary, the matter is where it was when it was last mentioned in the House.

Concerning the other question to which the hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) has called attention, the Pacific cable, the hon. gentleman knows that this is a matter which has absorbed a good deal of our attention. Unfortunately, as is well known, the Imperial Government did not choose to ratify the agreement arrived at by the Imperial commission in 1896. They rather introduced resolutions based on this agreement. The Imperial authorities, as my hon. friend knows, and as the House knows, rather took another view, and made other propositions. We did not see our way to accept these new propositions. Without breaking any confidence, and without entering upon a subject on which I have no authority to speak, I am surely authorized to say—I believe I am, at all events—that we made representations to the Imperial Government, and that a conference is about to take place between the agents of the colonies and the Imperial authorities. The Government has decided to appoint my hon. friend the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte), who is to go to Europe, and Lord Strathcona to take part in this conference with Sir Sandford Fleming, an expert in the matter. Sir Sandford Fleming, I believe will sail this week.

Mr. WALLACE. I would ask the First Minister as to the transport of goods through the White Pass. I would like to ask, if there is any difficulty in passing Canadian goods in bond through that pass into Canadian territory again.

The PRIME MINISTER. Over the railway?

Mr. WALLACE. In any way.

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend (Mr. Wallace) knows that we have had for two years a bonding arrangement on the White Pass. The goods are collected at the Summit House, where we have a station of the Mounted Police. The arrangement has worked satisfactorily, though we have had at times some objection. The American authorities made conditions which we thought were not in the spirit of the agreement entered into. There have been at times some complaints made, but I must say that of late I have not heard any complaints of the passing of goods and the bonding facilities. Some reports appeared in the press recently that there had been difficulties put in our way by the American authorities. But these reports were not confirmed, after investigation.

Mr. McNEILL. Is the right hon. gentleman in a position to say whether his provisional arrangement as to the boundary is to last any considerable length of time? There was a talk about two years, or can he say whether it is to be of shorter duration?

The PRIME MINISTER. I may say to my hon. friend that no limit of time has been at all taken into consideration. I may say further that we intend to press as much as we can a definite settlement of the boundary.

INQUIRY FOR RETURNS.

Mr. FOSTER. I would like to call the attention of the Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Blair), and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding), to a return which was brought down with reference to the Central Railway. The Minister of Railways and Canals, so far as these papers go, ends the correspondence about the 8th of September, 1898. Although that ends the correspondence, I do not think it ends the matter, and I have an idea that it may have been transferred to the Department of Finance. I desire to call the attention of the Minister of Finance to it, and if there is any further correspondence in reference to it, I would ask if he will be kind enough to bring it down as a supplementary return.
Sir WILFRID LAURIER.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). If the hon. gentleman will send me the return, I will inquire.

PATRONAGE OF THE COUNTY OF VICTORIA, N.S.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Before you proceed to the Orders of the Day, I wish to call attention to what I consider is an important matter. It will be in the recollection of hon. members of this House that when this Parliament met three years ago, we had on this side of the House the hon. representative from Victoria, N.S., (Mr. Bethune). In some mysterious way that hon. gentleman disappeared from this side of the House and took up his seat on the other side.

Mr. SPEAKER. I suppose the hon. member will conclude with a motion?

Mr. McDOUGALL. I intend to conclude with a motion. I think that something has come to light which makes it necessary that this House should learn something more about the mysterious way in which that hon. gentleman was induced to cross the floor of this House, without, so far as I know, making even the ordinary genuflexions before you, Mr. Speaker, in doing so. My attention was called to an article which appeared in a newspaper published in my county a few days ago, which makes that mystery more mysterious, and which, to my minds, calls for an explanation, if not from the member for Victoria, from the Government, and more particularly from the Minister of Finance. The letter appears in the North Sydney "Herald," published in the county of Cape Breton, and is headed "Patronage of Victoria county—letter from Hon. Wm. Ross":

Editor Herald: As there appears to be considerable doubt and nervous uncertainty in the county of Victoria as to the person who now holds the Dominion patronage in said county, and to save me the trouble of writing letters on this subject, I quote the following from a letter received from the Hon. W. S. Fielding, dated May 8th:—

"In the meantime, it is as well that all the parties concerned should understand that the patronage of Victoria is being administered under the advice of Hon. Geo. H. Murray. Anybody who says anything to the contrary either makes a mistake or is desirous of misrepresenting things and making trouble."

To this I may add the following letter addressed to me by the Hon. G. H. Murray, when about leaving for London:—

"As I am now leaving for England in a few days, I would be obliged if you would give such matters of federal patronage as may arise in Victoria county during my absence your best attention. I have written to the Hon. Mr. Fielding advising him to accept your views. I would like to have you consult Mr. Morrison, M.P.P., upon all matters which would require local knowledge."

These letters should once and for all settle the question asked by my numerous correspondents in Victoria.

(Sgd.) W. ROSS.

Halifax, N.S., June 7th, 1899.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege, I think, as a member of this House, to protest against what I consider to be a gross injustice to the people of the county of Victoria. It is also my privilege, one which I hold accidentally, to be a constituent of the hon. member for Victoria, and as a constituent I think it a great injustice to my fellow-constituents of that county to be treated in that way. They elected an hon. member to represent their interests in this House by the large majority—by a vote for the hon. member of 1,049 against 877—and after he has put in three years' service in this House, they are told to-day that they have practically no representation here that will be listened to, and instead of having a member to look after their county, they are referred to a gentleman who to-day is parading the streets of London, and never had a seat in this House, and as I said before, the county is without representation in this House. I think that the hon. Minister of Finance owes it to the people of Victoria to explain this very strange position, which not only the Government seems to undertake to occupy, but the member for Victoria also. We have had very strange things take place in the past, and it is no doubt within the knowledge of some hon. members of this House that this gentleman to whom the patronage is transferred as a sub-representative of a sub-representative of the county of Victoria was once a Minister of Militia and Defence in this House, and the defeated candidate in that county has to-day the privilege of not only exercising the privilege of the representation of that constituency, but of transferring that duty to another person. I do not know, but I think I have reason to suspect that my hon. friend from Guysborough (Mr. Fraser) has something to do with this matter. It is not many weeks ago that I thought it my duty to refer to him as having had some responsibility in the transfer of the seat of the member for Victoria from this side of the House to the other side. I had reason to believe that, because of the things that have taken place to my knowledge in past years. I have only to refer the House to a letter of Hon. Wm. Ross, written some years ago in reference to certain negotiations which took place between the hon. member for Victoria and the hon. member for Guysborough. I will take the liberty, Mr. Speaker, with your permission, of laying the letter before the House, as it may help to throw some light upon this mystery:

Halifax, Dec. 19, 1893.

M. H. McKenzie, Esq.

Dear Sir,—My present intention is to leave here on the 26th inst., so as to be in Sydney that night, and be present at all their ceremonies on the 27th. I wrote D. C. Fraser three times, but he is backing and filling, and my present impression is that he will not go. I must be home Saturday night. It is not to be expected that Sam will be ashore before the new year. I will be pleased at seeing as many as possible of my friends at Sydney. On the square, a friend of mine is acquainted with a young man in the "Herald" office, and he says Cahan wrote Bethune asking if there is any truth in the report that he and Fraser have entered into that rotten alliance, and the doctor did not reply, so they conclude the treaty is signed by both interested parties.

They are not in favour of it, stating that Bethune cannot bind the party. Indeed, they understand the wily, sly, sneaking Doctor well, and say that he is thoroughly selfish and cares nothing for party, but all for self. John A.'s conduct cannot be concealed, but Bethune's cant and hypocritical ways make him a more dangerous and corrupt man than John A. You may make what use you like of this information, but be sure to suppress names. The Harris element is stupidly tied to Bethune. When Sam comes home he will have to decide if he will run. If he so states, then that would be worse than dynamite into the camp of those two beauties, who think they hold the political destinies of Victoria in the hollow of their hands. Even one candidate to begin with would create terror and confusion in the camp. Sam must select his colleague with the approval of our friends in the council if he will win.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) W. ROSS.

Mr. WALLACE. Was the hon. member for Guysborough one of the beauties.

Mr. McDOUGALL. The hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Fraser) is one of the beauties. I wish to get some information from the hon. Minister of Finance in regard to this statement, which is a very important one, and I think a very serious one. I beg to move that the House do now adjourn.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). I suppose it is my misfortune and my lack of intelligence, but I have great difficulty in understanding what the point is that the hon. gentleman desires information upon. If he will be good enough to tell me what it is that he desires information upon it will be a great pleasure for me to give him the information that he desires. What is the point?

Mr. McDOUGALL. The point is this. I want to know why the county of Victoria, N.S., does not have a representative here.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman seems to have the view that if an hon. member does not control the patronage of the county that county has no representative. If that be the case, Cape Breton has no representative, inasmuch as the hon. gentleman (Mr. McDougall) does not control the patronage of Cape Breton. That is exactly where the shoe pinches. The hon. gentleman's control of the patronage of the county was the only thing he ever had to put him in, but now that the hon. member for Cape Breton has lost the patronage of the county he has lost any hope he may ever have had of coming back as a member of this House.

Mr. McDOUGALL. The hon. gentleman had better wait and see.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman would have done better to have waited before he brought these petty matters up for the entertainment of the House. Cape Breton was taken from his control in the local elections, and the hon. gentleman knows that he made a pilgrimage away from this House one month ago to try and save the remnant of his political influence in the municipal district of Grand Narrows, and there also he was beaten. The hon. gentleman seems to be disturbed because the premier of Nova Scotia has been allowed to offer advice to the Government in certain matters affecting the county of Victoria. There is no reason why we should not speak candidly in reference to these matters. It is a well-known practice under party government that a defeated candidate, where his party is successful, is consulted respecting the patronage in his county. In this case, the defeated candidate, some time afterwards, was appointed to office, and the moment he ceased to occupy an independent position, the moment that he occupied a position as an officer of this Government, then we thought that he should cease to occupy a position as a political adviser. Thereupon, we looked for another, and we found an able representative of the Government in the person of Premier Murray of Nova Scotia, who represents the county of Victoria in the local legislature, and who, we think, is worthy of all the confidence that this Government can give him. The hon. member for Cape Breton says that he would like to have some information as to the mysterious means whereby the hon. member for Victoria, N. S. (Mr. Bethune) crossed the floor of the House. If so, he will have to apply to that hon. gentleman himself, as I have no knowledge of any mysterious means. That hon. gentleman, exercising his own free will, crossed the floor of the House and took his position on this side of the House, and from that moment to this he has given the Government a loyal and independent support. I want to acknowledge that support, and to thank that hon. gentleman for it; and I say it is a support that is all the more creditable to that hon. gentleman because it came without a shadow of any condition in any shape or form. The hon. gentleman did not ask to control the patronage. He was perfectly aware of the fact that the patronage of Victoria would be controlled by the hon. gentleman who had been advising us in the past. The hon. member for Victoria, N.S. (Mr. Bethune) perfectly understood that, yet, feeling that the policy of the Government in relation to the great public questions was in the true interest of Canada, of Cape Breton, and in particular, in the interest of his own county, he gave us his support freely and unconditionally, and there is nothing in the transaction which does not do him the highest honour.

Mr. FIELDING.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I confess I am quite at a loss, after the hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) has taken his seat, to know what he means. He professes to be quite at sea in respect to what my hon. colleague from Cape Breton (Mr. McDougall) meant. I think my hon. colleague made it tolerably plain. My hon. colleague never claimed that he, or I, the defeated candidates of Cape Breton, were entitled to use our positions as representatives of that county to advise the Government. That is not the complaint at all, and my hon. friend does not make that complaint now. The complaint he is making is of an entirely different description. I am in the judgment of the House when I say that it is a well-recognized principle of responsible government and parliamentary government, and it is a principle to which hon. gentlemen on the Treasury benches resort every hour in the day. When they are called upon to state to this House on what grounds they have exercised their extreme power in regard to patronage, in displacing parties from office without any reason assigned, their answer has invariably been that they have done it upon the advice of the representative of the county supporting the Government, or, if it is a county in which the Government have not a representative in this House, then, they state, as the hon. Minister of Finance has stated, that they look to some other person. I quite agree with them in the selection of Mr. Murray, the Premier of Nova Scotia. They were quite justified in this while the representative of the county of Victoria was an opponent of the Government. They have acted quite right in this, and I believe they have followed a precedent which has been recognized by both parties on both sides of this House in referring to a gentleman who holds the position of the local representative of that county and a high position in that province for advice in regard to the county. That is not the point at all. The point is a grave one, in my opinion, and it is that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bethune), who was elected by the electors of Victoria to oppose this Government in a straight party conflict, and to support the Conservative party, has changed sides, has left the Conservative party and gone over without having had the manliness to assign, publicly or privately, so far as I am aware, to any person connected with the Conservative party, the reason why he has changed his seat in this House. I never questioned his action. I did not consider the action of that hon. gentleman of sufficient importance for me to give it a thought.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Oh, oh.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. When I was instructed that negotiations were being had with that hon. gentleman for the purpose of transferring his allegiance to the party that he was elected to oppose and to abandon the party that the county of Victoria elected him to support, I did not consider it worth my while to exchange a word with him or to have any communication with him whatever. I did not consider his action in this House, or out of it, of sufficient importance to require such information. I felt that, when the county that had elected him had the opportunity, they would mark with proper indignation the action of the hon. gentleman who had betrayed his constituency, as they might be expected to mark the unjustified and unjustifiable action of that hon. gentleman. I quite understand that there are occasions on which an hon. gentleman may transfer his allegiance, but such occasion is only when he can give valid grounds to Parliament and to his constituents for his change. The point raised by my hon. friend (Mr. McDougall) is most important in connection with parliamentary government, and it is: that the hon. member for Victoria (Mr. Bethune) having abandoned his party and become an unquestioning supporter of hon. gentlemen opposite, should not be treated by the Government with such personal contempt. The Government could have taken no action better calculated to show that he has deprived himself of anything like respect from the Government he has gone to support, than that they should not consult him with reference to the patronage of the county that he claims to represent—although I confess I agree with the Minister of Finance and the Government in the view, that the hon. member (Mr. Bethune) has proved himself so unworthy the confidence of his constituents as to deprive himself of that respect and consideration that every independent supporter of the Government is entitled to claim at their hands. That is the point which the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) has found it convenient to run away from. He has not told the House why they have treated a gentleman who supports them and claims to represent Victoria, N.S. (Mr. Bethune) with such supreme contempt as they have meted out to him in this case. I have no hesitation in saying, that if they had no supporter in this House representing that county, that this gentleman whom they consulted was a suitable person to consult, but it was treating the member for Victoria

(Mr. Bethune) with contempt that they should go down to Halifax and consult a private individual, a defeated candidate who publishes over his signature to the world, the contemptuous manner in which the present member for Victoria (Mr. Bethune) has been treated. That is the point. It is beside the mark for the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fielding) to talk about the position that my hon. friend from Cape Breton (Mr. McDougall) occupies in this House. He (Mr. McDougall) sits here, as I sit here, sustained by an overwhelming majority of his constituents at the general election, and although when the Minister of Finance purchased the seats—

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes, purchased the seats—

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). I ask, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) withdraw that statement.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will give you the reasons for my statement in a moment.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I rise to a point of order, Mr. Speaker. The hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) will either be sustained or he will take that expression back; one or the other.

Mr. SPEAKER. I do not think it is at all parliamentary to accuse an hon. member of this House of purchasing a seat in Parliament.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I have not done so.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) has done so, and I appeal to "Hansard" to prove it.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. No.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I appeal to every hon. member who was listening to him.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will now speak on the question of order.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) had not finished his sentence.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. And I had no intention of finishing the sentence in the manner which the Minister of Finance assumed. I stated that when the Minister of Finance claimed, that since the elections of 1896, the constituency of Cape Breton had, by electing local members of the Liberal party, shown that my hon. friend (Mr. McDougall) and myself are not in a position to represent the county of Cape Breton; the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fielding) cannot sustain such a contention. I was going on to point out that the Liberals were elected to the legislature in the county of Cape Breton owing to the inducements held out by the Finance Minister (Mr. Fielding), to the effect that he would perpetrate a complete change of policy by abandoning his own policy, and by adopting the policy which I have fought for in this House and out of it, for a quarter of a century. I say that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fielding) abandoned his policy, abandoned the policy to which his leader was committed, and made an arrangement outside of this House by which the province of Nova Scotia should be carried for the Liberals, upon principles diametrically opposite to those preached by the Liberal party for years. I was justified in stating that the Minister of Finance purchased the support of the people of Nova Scotia, not for himself, but for the local legislature, by adopting the policy of his opponents and abandoning his own policy. When the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fielding) taunts my hon. friend from Cape Breton (Mr. McDougall) on that score, he touches me equally, and I tell him that the mode in which the local elections were carried, only confirms the fact that my hon. friend retains the confidence which the electors of Cape Breton have placed in him for many years, and that I retain that confidence with which they have twice entrusted me. It was hardly worth while for the Minister of Finance to go so far afield, to attack the position of an hon. gentleman in this House whose present and whose future is as firm, if not more so, than that of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Fielding) himself, for we know that he (Mr. Fielding) at the last general election abandoned his own constituency and went to an outlying section of the province to be returned to this House. And I am told that hon. gentleman (Mr. Fielding) is now, like Japhet in search of a father, hunting over the province of Nova Scotia to find some other constituency which he may carry. He had two railway enterprises to elect him in this outlying section of the province, but he has not been able to realize expectations and now I am told he is looking for another county to represent. I do not say he may not succeed in getting one, but it ill-becomes an hon. gentleman occupying his position to taunt another member of this House with not representing the constituency that sent him here.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I might tell my hon. friend (Sir Charles Tupper) that rumour has it that he is not going to run in Cape Breton, but that he is now looking out for another constituency.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I can set that rumour at rest for once and for ever. I can tell the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding) that if I return to this House, I shall return as the representative of the county that twice, by overwhelming majorities, elected me. I can tell my hon. friend (Mr. Fielding) that it would take a stronger opponent than

Sir CHARLES TUPPER.

he is to deter me from running in that intelligent constituency of Cape Breton. So much for that. My hon. friend from Cape Breton (Mr. McDougall) put a plain, straightforward question, and the Minister of Finance sat down without answering it. The Minister was asked, why it was that he and his Government have departed from the well-recognized principle of parliamentary government, which provides that the members of the Government should look, and properly look, to the representatives of the counties who support them in this House, for consultation and advice. In failing to answer that question, the Minister of Finance has admitted that the Government have adopted a course which I believe never before was adopted, except under very peculiar circumstances by the hon. gentlemen now on the Treasury benches who have in some other cases made bargains as to the use of the patronage of a county with people not in this House. We still await the answer of the Minister of Finance to the important question put to him.

Mr. D. C. FRASER (Guysborough). Mr. Speaker, I would not have spoken at all, only that the junior member for Cape Breton (Mr. McDougall) referred to me as having had something to do with a transaction which is not altogether creditable. I am sure that no more creditable mission could be assigned to me than to try to convert any of these gentlemen. If I did that, I ought to be regarded as a returned missionary, worthy to receive an ovation which none of them have ever been honoured with. It shows what a small matter will raise such a furore. If the hon. leader of the Opposition had taken the time to inquire why the hon. member for Victoria, N.S., (Mr. Bethune) had left that side of the House, he would find that he came over here for reasons altogether creditable to himself. The hon. gentleman started out by saying that such a thing was never known as a member not having the patronage of his county; then, he tried to show that the hon. member for Victoria was not worthy of that position; and then he returned, by saying that such a thing was never known as a member not having the patronage of the county he represented, and he called on the hon. member for Queen's and Shelburne (Mr. Fielding) to say why this was not given to him. The hon. gentleman gave the answer himself, by saying that the hon. member for Victoria was not worthy.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. We will take that answer.

Mr. FRASER (Guysborough). I am not taking it. I am only showing the strength of the hon. gentleman's argument; I am accepting nothing. The hon. gentleman altogether loses sight of the fact that the patronage of that county—and he knows it could be in no better hands—was in the hands of those people before the hon. member for Victoria saw fit to come over to this side of the House. I can very well understand how the hon. member waited long to see whether there was any sign of penitence on the other side. He did not want to leave them, for he had been associated with them for some time; he did not do so until he gave them over to that despair and that just judgment that is bound to follow them. But after that he saw the patronage in other hands, so that there was no wrong done in the meantime. I think I can hear the hon. leader of the Opposition, if the opposite state of facts existed. If the hon. member for Victoria had come over to this side of the House, and the patronage had come into his hands, I can fancy in what burning words the hon. leader of the Opposition would have thundered at the corruption, and would have asserted that the hon. member was purchased. These hon. gentlemen seem to think that the hon. member for Victoria ought to be paid by patronage for coming over. They cannot understand anything else. They cannot understand why he should have come over without immediately getting his patronage and his pay. The hon. gentleman came over without asking for the patronage, and he is giving his support to the Government without that support being purchased. It is inscrutable to these hon. gentlemen to find an hon. member changing his views politically without being paid for doing so. The letter which the hon. member for Cape Breton read, as he knows very well, had nothing to do with politics. The meeting which Mr. Ross and myself were going to attend was a different meeting altogether. I suppose a busy man ought sometimes to be able to change his mind, when he finds that he cannot go to a place to which he thought he could go; but let me tell the hon. gentleman, in the presence of the hon. member for Victoria, that the hon. member for Victoria and I never discussed the question of his coming over.

Mr. GILLIES. Then, you were not a pair of beauties.

Mr. FRASER (Guysborough). No, and I hope we never will be such as the hon. gentleman who made the interruption; it would require a large number of him put together to make a pair of beauties. We never discussed the matter. The hon. gentleman, after he came over, discussed with me the reason why he came; but I never spoke about it, or wrote about it, to the county or anywhere. I only know that I saw a sign of weakening in the hon. gentleman. He had a good training, for in his youth he had associated with respectable people, and I knew that there was hope for him, although he had forgotten himself so far as to make an alliance with doubtful people.

But I felt that, after he had sown his wild oats, he would return to those to whom he naturally belonged. But the hon. leader of the Opposition looks at him with contempt, because he did not at once plunge into the work of dealing out offices, and getting the only thing which hon. gentlemen opposite can understand in politics, that is, being in politics for what there is in it. The hon. member for Victoria stands in a different position.

Mr. FOSTER. A great reproach for the rest of you.

Mr. FRASER (Guysborough). A great reproach to the ex-Minister of Finance, I have no doubt, but none to any one on this side of the House. The hon. member is here of his own free will; and, if he has not the patronage of the county, it is not from any lack of confidence which the Government have in him, but just because he came himself, without asking for such a thing. There will come a time when he will show that he has bathed in the pool of Siloam, and become clean from his surroundings.

Mr. McDOUGALL. The hon. Finance Minister thought it proper to refer to a municipal election which took place in a part of my constituency some weeks ago, and in which I took part. Now, in view of the circumstances connected with that election, I thought the Minister of Finance would have been the last man in this House to refer to it. The man whose election I opposed, as an elector of that district, was elected, and I may now inform the House of the circumstances under which he was elected. A short time before the election had taken place, the friends of the hon. Minister of Finance in that district undertook to make additions to the voters' list, with a view of giving them an advantage in the election; and it turned out, subsequent to the election, or perhaps a few days before the election was over, that a good deal of fraud had been perpetrated in connection with putting these new voters on the list. The facts were inquired into, with the result that it was proven in court that some seventeen names were forged by those who were applying to have the names put on the list. Not only were the names that were put on forged, but the name of the magistrate to the affidavit, supposed to have been taken by those people, was forged; and of these names the sheriff of the county put eight, I am informed, on the list, after calling his court for the consideration of the names to be put on for the 25th of the month, and having ascertained that the 25th fell on Good Friday, without notifying the parties interested, except the party friends of the hon. Minister of Finance, that he should put the names on the list on the 24th of the month. When the witnesses who were called, went to the court on the 25th, they found that the work had been done on the 24th, and that was all the explanation they could get. If I remember rightly, under these circumstances sixteen or seventeen names were put on the voters' list, and the man who was elected was a friend of the hon. Minister of Finance, with the support of those votes. For months before the election he had gone round that district. He took with him on one occasion, the inspector of fisheries, and visited a river in the constituency, and promised the people interested an expenditure of $500 for the cleaning out of that river, with a view to getting their support in the election. He had the railway people going through the district, buying material for the railway, and he himself had the privilege of buying material for the railway, in order to influence voters. He not only had that, but he had authority to promise to the people of that district employment in the repairs to that railway. Some of those repairs have taken place since, and I had a letter from one of the people in that district, a few days ago, informing me that a piece of work, which had to be done in connection with the repairs of the railway, and which only required fifteen men, had forty-two men engaged on it.

In another case a petition was sent around the district, addressed to the Prime Minister of Nova Scotia, asking for aid to a railway, and a few days before the elections an answer was distributed among the electors of that municipal district to the effect that some $1,500 would be spent on that road.

Mr. LANDERKIN. Surely they could not buy your supporters that way?

Mr. McDOUGALL. Certainly, they did succeed in buying support. This thing is going on with the knowledge of the Government here, who are appealed to for this kind of assistance in these contests, and all with the knowledge of the Government of Nova Scotia.

The Liberal party were in power in the municipal government in the county, and they offered every terms they could think of, every inducement they could devise, to influence the electorate to vote for their man. Those were the means by which they secured the return of their candidate by nine of a majority; and I may as well tell the hon. Minister of Finance that the law partner of the Prime Minister of Nova Scotia is the man who secured the exit of one or two important witnesses in a case brought up for fraud against those forgers who took part in preparing for that election.

The hon. Minister of Finance referred to my strength in the constituency I have the honour to represent. Well, Sir, I have represented that constituency almost continually for the last 21 years in this House, and in another House, and I would ask nothing better than that the hon. Minister of Finance should follow me from stump to stump in the next election. He went to my constituency some years ago, and there was not a district where he addressed public meetings, in which my majority was not largely increased, and his own friends advised him to keep out of the county the last election, and no doubt would give him the same advice in another election. I am quite willing, at any moment the hon. gentleman wishes, to try the strength of the two parties in the county of Cape Breton, to meet the hon. gentleman and let him give an exhibition of his strength in that county as compared with mine.

Mr. J. A. GILLIES (Richmond, N.S.) I regret very much indeed, as one of the representatives of the island of Cape Breton, to find that one of my colleagues from that favoured spot of the Dominion, occupies so unenviable a position as the hon. member for Victoria, N.S. (Mr. Bethune) does in this House. That position has not been at all improved by the attempt of his pseudo-friend, the Minister of Finance, to come to his rescue. During the two Parliaments before the hon. member for Victoria came to this House, that county was represented here by a strong and consistent supporter of the then Government. I refer to Mr. John A. Macdonald, and when that gentleman deemed it advisable, in his personal interests—not because he had any fear of not securing his return—to retire from the political field, what did he do? He put his hand on the shoulder of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bethune) and did everything in his power to have him elected to this House. What did we all do on this side? We went into that county and exerted ourselves, might and main, for the election of that hon. gentleman in the teeth of the fiercest and most unscrupulous opposition, aided and abetted by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Fielding). How did we find the hon. member for Victoria treated in this House by his friends? He sat on this side, near where I am standing now, a trusted supporter of our party, sent here by the people of Victoria to support the Conservative party in this House. The lines were well drawn in that county between the two parties. He was put up as our candidate, and every man of us did all we could for him. The other side put up Mr. Sam. Campbell as their candidate. The hon. Minister of Finance and Mr. Murray, the Premier of the province, did what they could for Mr. Campbell. Every political agency that could be used was brought to bear to elect Mr. Campbell in opposition to my hon. friend from Victoria, who was our candidate. When the hon. gentleman came to this House we trusted him, we gave him our confidence, and you may judge of our surprise when we suddenly found him fitting over to the other side, for reasons best known to himself and the Minister of Finance. We find him now seated behind the Minister of Finance and voting with the Government on every occasion; and yet the Minister of Finance has humiliated him by writing a letter down to Halifax to the Hon. Wm. Ross, who was not a candidate in the election, telling Mr. Ross that virtually the hon. gentleman (Mr. Bethune) is repudiated by the Government, although he deserted his friends and went and allied himself with his opponents. I quite agree with my hon. friends on this side that Victoria county was most ignominiously treated by the Government when the Government showed their want of confidence in the representative of that county in the manner the Minister of Finance did in that letter to Mr. Ross. Upon what principle of representative government can the Minister of Finance justify his conduct in declaring that the gentleman representing that county of Victoria, sitting behind and voting with him, and attending the party caucuses, meeting Ministers and going in their private rooms, is not fit to be entrusted with the patronage of the county?

Talk about parties being defeated in municipal elections, what is the record of Mr. Murray, who is a personal friend of mine as I am of his. Why, he ran, time and again, for the local house in his native county of Cape Breton, and could not get elected. He ran in 1887 for the House of Commons, and was defeated by hundreds of votes. In 1891, he was again defeated by hundreds, and in 1896, when he ran against the hon. leader of the Opposition, he was a third time defeated, and defeated by a thousand votes. Talk about parties being defeated in municipal elections, Mr. Murray ran an election in his own native municipal district, and could not get elected. That is the history of an hon. gentleman who is now entrusted with the full confidence of the Minister of Finance and his colleagues, and for whose sake the Minister of Finance spurns his newly-found friend (Mr. Bethune), who now misrepresents the county of Victoria in this House. I am not one of those who would find fault with any one for changing his political attitude, when he does so for a proper reason. Any man has a perfect right, for any good and sufficient reason, to change sides at any time. But when a man walks deliberately across the House and gives no reasons to his colleagues and the people who sent him here for his change of allegiance, his conduct is highly reprehensible.

What about one of the beauties from my province (Mr. Fraser), who never opens his mouth without putting his foot in it? That hon. gentleman was properly designated, yoked as he was by the Hon. Mr. Ross with the hon. member for Victoria, as one of a pair of beauties. He is a beauty. And he sits there, for the last time, I venture to say, for the county of Guysborough, and he knows it. He has been tramping from the east to the far west looking for a place, looking for a judgeship. He would have gladly taken a judgeship in British Columbia, but failed in that attempt, owing to the strong and justifiable remonstrance of my hon. friends in this House who belong to the bar of that province. They said to the Government: If you appoint that man to a position on the bench in the province of British Columbia, we will hold you responsible. They said then very properly: If you are going to appoint a judge for that province he should be a lawyer in some sense. Well, the hon. gentleman is a beauty, but certainly would not fill the bill as a judge. I was delighted when I heard that we were to be spared the terrible public infliction with which we were once threatened of having that hon. gentleman to fill a judgeship down in our province. I was gratified to find that they were going to put him far beyond the Rocky Mountains. But it appears they did not want him there. It is pretty well understood that the members of British Columbia brought to bear on the Prime Minister very strong pressure to have such a calamity averted. I venture to say that if he, the Prime Minister, were at liberty to speak now he would endorse every word I say—that they made such a remonstrance to him that he would not dare to send in the hon. gentleman's name for that position.

Mr. MORRISON. If I may have the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Gillies) permission—I may say that he is enough of a lawyer to know that only a member of the bar of British Columbia is eligible for the position of judge in that province.

Mr. GILLIES. I knew that long ago, and the hon. gentleman (Mr. Morrison) was quite right in recognizing that I knew it. But it was something the hon. member for Guysborough did not know until he was informed by my hon. friend from New Westminster (Mr. Morrison).

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Gillies) must confine himself to the matter brought up on this motion to adjourn, and not go into other questions.

Mr. GILLIES. I will do so, Mr. Speaker. I might refer—

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I may call your attention, Sir, to the fact that attention was drawn to the personal appearance of the hon. gentleman by the letter which brought this discussion before the House.

Mr. GILLIES. The hon. Minister of Finance seemed to take great pleasure in taunting, or endeavouring to taunt, my hon. friend from Cape Breton (Mr. McDougall) with the fact that at the last local election that county was carried by a large majority by the Liberal party. But that is not the question at issue at all. The position he took and the reason given by my hon. friend the leader of the Opposition (Sir Charles Tupper), fully explained how that county was carried at the last local election. Why, Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman who to-day holds the portfolio of Finance in this Government occupies a position, one of the most vulnerable occupied by any man in this House, and he will know it before this Parliament is over, and this House will know it. If it is parliamentary to so designate it, I will say that some of his tricks will be exposed, and if it is not parliamentary I would say he resorted to artifices in that province that were utterly indefensible. And as the word "humbug" has been held to be parliamentary, I say he carried on a complete system of humbug. What is his career? What is his history? Was he not the Repealer of 1886 and 1887? He sits here now, Minister of Finance of a Dominion that he tried to disrupt and destroy. He was the great economist, and he sank the province of Nova Scotia in debt to the extent of $3,500,000, a province that, when we came in in 1884, did not owe a dollar. Are not these facts? Was he not a constant borrower of the public funds on the eve of every election spending the money all over the province—

Mr. SPEAKER. I hope the hon. gentleman (Mr. Gillies) will not require to be called to order again. He is wandering away from the subject.

Mr. GILLIES. I was replying to the hon. Minister of Finance, and if I went far afield, I am simply trying to follow him. Now, Mr. Speaker, I only cite a few of the matters that will be brought up in detail at another time. The record of the hon. Minister of Finance for the last decade is one of the most indefensible made by any public man of Canada; and he only found his way into this House when the hon. member for the county which he now represents was got rid of by giving him the position of a county court judge.

Mr. J. L. BETHUNE (Victoria, N.S.) I desire to say only a few words at this time. I did not think that I had attracted so much attention among hon. gentlemen opposite. First, I may explain, with regard to this letter which has caused such merriment in reference to the hon. member for Guysborough—the remark in that letter to which reference has been particularly made does not refer to the hon. member for Guysborough but to another Mr. Fraser. The hon. gentleman himself seems not to have known it. The first sentence, it is true, refers to the hon. member for Guysborough—with reference to his going to Sydney, but the other refers to another Mr. Fraser who represented the county in the local House.

Mr. MILLS. He was the father of Repeal.

Mr. BETHUNE. No, it is another Mr. Fraser. All this talk about the hon. member for Guysborough being a beauty, and so on, goes for nothing. I came over to this side because I like it better. I believe I am forwarding the interests of my constituents by being here; I am sure that I am here with the approbation of two-thirds at least, and probably nine-tenths of my electorate. If any hon. gentleman wishes to test that, let him resign his seat and I will resign mine. I am here also because I like the policy of the present Administration; I think it is very much the same as that I advocated when soliciting the confidence of my electors. There are changes, but they are for the better, they are for the extension of trade and the advancement of every interest in the Dominion. But the last straw to break the camel's back was the conduct of the hon. member for Cape Breton (Mr. McDougall). In the year 1896 I had the honour of travelling with him from Cape Breton to Ottawa, and he regaled me with abuse of the late Government, particularly one of his colleagues who is not in this House now, but is in another branch of Parliament. He discouraged me completely. He abused the Government ever since the death of the late Sir John A. Macdonald, and since the time of the late Sir John Thompson, especially. But passing over all these to the time of the Government of the present leader of the Opposition, the hon. gentleman was very severe on the present leader of the Opposition, his colleague, for not taking him into his Cabinet in 1896.

Mr. McDOUGALL. The hon. gentleman is making a statement that is utterly without foundation.

Mr. BETHUNE. The hon. gentleman will not deny that he said more than once—

Mr. SPEAKER. When an hon. member is charged with making a certain statement, and the hon. member who is so charged, gives it an explicit denial in the House, it is the parliamentary practice to accept that denial.

Mr. BETHUNE. I accept the denial, but the facts are so, nevertheless.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I ask the Chair to enforce the rules of the House.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. member who has the floor should accept the statement of the hon. member for Cape Breton (Mr. McDougall).

Mr. BETHUNE. The hon. gentleman will not deny that he said more than once: "Why don't you leave that party? I would not stay with them another day." Surely, the hon. member will not deny that I said that.

Mr. McDOUGALL. The hon. gentleman is making a statement which is far from the facts. I made a statement to this effect, and frequently did so, that I did not want to be in politics, if I could help it, that I suffered a great deal from being in politics, and would not remain, if I could find a way to leave them.

Mr. BETHUNE. I said to the hon. gentleman (Mr. McDougall) more than once: "Why don't you leave that side of the House? I would not stay with them another day." He must remember distinctly that I said that to him. Now, what led up to that? Those things that I have just mentioned—among other things, the abuse of his present leader—led up to it. I said more than once: "Why don't you leave that side? I would not stay with them another day, if they treated me in that way." From that on, and all the way up, I was entitled—I do not know if I had better say it—

Mr. McDougall. The hon. gentleman is making a statement which is entirely untrue.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman has placed himself out of order by characterizing a statement of the hon. member for Victoria as entirely untrue. The hon. gentleman understands that that is not the way to contradict an hon. member in this House. It is perfectly proper to contradict him absolutely, but that particular language is not parliamentary.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to ask you this, and I think the House is entitled to have an opinion, because this is an important matter. Suppose an hon. gentleman in this House gets up, and undertakes to repeat a private conversation with a member of this House, and makes a statement that is absolutely untrue.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. If any gentleman questions what I say on this question of order, he will have an opportunity of stating his views. I am assuming that an hon. gentleman states on the floor of this House a private conversation with another hon. gentleman; suppose it is myself. Suppose I say on the floor of this House that I had a conversation with the right hon. gentleman the leader of the House, and I make a statement that is not true, I may be entirely mistaken. The right hon. gentleman would not say the statement is false, because that means a wilful untruth. But I contend there is no other means by which the right hon. gentleman could put himself in a just and proper position, unless he can challenge straightly the truth of the statement that I am making. There is no other means of carrying on discussion in this House. The difference between charging a member with falsehood, and charging him with making a statement that is untrue, is, that the one is wilful, and the other may not be so. The hon. member for Victoria makes a statement concerning a private conversation which my hon. friend says is entirely untrue. Now, I want to know, if my hon. friend is convinced that the statement is altogether inaccurate, what language is he to use in this House that is parliamentary, and that will challenge the accuracy of the statement? I do not think there is any other mode of dealing with it.

Mr. LANDERKIN. With reference to this point of order; a member of this House brings before it a private letter, written by a private citizen to another private citizen, a letter endorsed by the leader of the Opposition, and endorsed by the member for Cape Breton (Mr. McDougall), can he take refuge by saying that, while he did not object to a private letter, he could object to a private conversation?

Mr. CLANCY. I rise to a point of order. The hon. gentleman is not discussing the point of order at all.

Mr. LANDERKIN. Let the hon. member keep calm. I do not see how they can take that ground, when they have obtained control of a private letter, obtained I know not how, whether with the consent of the writer or not. When they bring that here, how can they prevent another member replying to that letter, as the hon. member for Victoria has done?

The PRIME MINISTER. My hon. friend has appealed to me. My hon. friend knows that if, unfortunately, there is a discrepancy between two members in a version of facts, of course one is in the right, and the other must be in the wrong. But my hon. friend knows that if, unfortunately, there is a contradiction as to facts, there are certain ways of expressing it. When an hon. gentleman contradicts another member, he implies that what he says is untrue. But my hon. friend knows that the etiquette of parliamentary life does not permit the use of the words "untrue," or "false," or anything of that kind. The balance of authorities go to say that the member must say that such a statement is not in accordance with the facts, that it is inaccurate, or something of that kind.

Mr. SPEAKER. I entirely adhere to the view I first took on this matter. I do not want to be too severe in challenging expressions used by members of this House, but the limitations and courtesies of debate are laid down by the Speakers of the English House of Commons. Now, here is a decision in 1883, which was given by Mr. Speaker Brand:

It is not in order to apply the epithets "untrue" and "diagrammatic" to statements made by an hon. member.

And again, by the same Speaker:

It is not parliamentary to say that a statement made by a member of the House is not credible.

But there is a way of contradicting a member in the House, and Speaker Brand lays it down this way:

It is not unparliamentary for an hon. member on his own responsibility to say that a statement made by another hon. member is opposed to the fact.

Perhaps the distinction is not very wide, but the manner of making a statement is polite in one case, and I do not think it is polite in another case. I think that neither the term "untrue" nor "false" should be used by hon. members of this House.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Withdraw, withdraw.

Mr. BETHUNE. In reference to the patronage of my county, I may say that I never asked for it; in fact, I refused it, as the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) can testify. He spoke to me about taking the patronage in his department. I refused it, but eventually said that I would accept it, with the proviso that I would consult with Mr. Murray in regard to any recommendations I should make. That was the only conversation I ever had about patronage. I came over without a single word or without any one ever asking me how I was going to vote on the Yukon Bill, and that was the first vote that I gave on this side of the House. No one approached me; I made up my mind, after reading the Bill and seeing that it was a good Bill, to vote for it. Ever since then I have experienced quite a change on the part of hon. members on the other side of the House. The hon. leader of the Opposition (Sir Charles Tupper) made an agreement to see me before the vote took place on the Yukon Bill. I asked him where I would see him, and he said that he would see me in my seat before the vote was taken. I sat there until five o'clock in the morning, but he never spoke to me, and I do not think he cared how I voted. I support this Administration because I believe the Government is composed of true, honest and manly statesmen, and I shall continue to support them as long as I find them acting as they are. I believe they will advance the best interests of the Dominion. I think that is their intention, and under these circumstances, I do not see anything disgraceful in supporting them. A large majority of the people in my county are pleased that I do support them, as time will show.

Motion to adjourn, negatived.

INQUIRIES FOR RETURNS.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I want to recall the attention of the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) to a return ordered by the House a month ago. The right hon. Premier stated yesterday that he knew nothing about it, because the hon. Minister of Public Works was not in the House at the time.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Mr. Tarte). What is the return?

Mr. SPEAKER.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. It is a return ordered on the 17th of May, for copies of all instructions, correspondence, reports, accounts and vouchers connected with the expedition of the chief engineer, Mr. Coste, to the Yukon.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. I will have it just now. It is in my room.

Mr. PRIOR. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I wish to call the attention of the right hon. Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) to what I am afraid is a serious omission in some papers that he laid on the Table of the House a few days ago. I refer to the documents relating to the recent disallowance of certain statutes passed by the legislature of British Columbia. I have had a notice of motion on the paper for quite a time, but the right hon. Prime Minister twice asked me to let it stand when it came up. When the notices of motion were called yesterday, I said that I would move it, only I believed the papers had been brought down. I asked the right hon. gentleman whether he was sure that all the papers in connection with the disallowance of the anti-Japanese legislation had been brought down. He informed me that they were, and that there was no need for me to move. But I have gone carefully through these papers, which have been brought down by the Prime Minister, and I believe that there is a very important document which is not included. If the right hon. gentleman will look at page 27 of the return, he will see that there is a letter from the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain to the Governor General, the Earl of Minto, which is as follows:—

Downing Street, 9th May, 1899.

Governor General,

The Right Honourable

The Earl of Minto, G.C.M.G., &c., &c.

My Lord,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch No. 83 of the 24th ult., forwarding copy of a letter from the Department of Justice, representing the desirability of an early expression of the views of Her Majesty's Government with regard to the legislation affecting Japanese subjects passed by the legislature of British Columbia in 1898.

2. In reply, I have to refer you to my despatch No. 92 of the 2nd instant.

I have, &c.,

J. CHAMBERLAIN.

I have looked through these papers, and I have failed to find any mention of the despatch, No. 83 of the 24th ult., forwarding a copy of a letter from the Department of Justice. This letter is of the greatest importance in regard to this correspondence, and I would ask the right hon. Prime Minister whether he knew that letter was there and if so, if he will be good enough to have it brought down.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I cannot answer my hon. friend (Mr. Prior) at this moment. This return has been prepared by the officers of the department. I understood that they had brought down everything, but perhaps something has been omitted. Does my hon. friend refer to the memorandum of the hon. Minister of Justice or to a letter of Mr. Chamberlain?

Mr. PRIOR. I refer to the despatch inclosing the report of the Minister of Justice.

The PRIME MINISTER. I will see to it.

Mr. PRIOR. There is another matter that I want to call the attention of the right hon. gentleman to, and it is that on the 17th of May I moved for an Address to His Excellency the Governor General for copies of all letters, telegrams, &c., received by the right hon. Prime Minister of Canada, the Hon. J. I. Tarte, the Minister of Public Works, or the Hon. A. J. Blair, the Minister of Railways and Canals, from the Northern Telegraph Company (Limited), and also for copies of all letters from the right hon. Prime Minister of Canada, or from either of said other Ministers to any of said companies. A return was brought down and it has the endorsement:

Papers referred to the hon. Minister of Public Works for report in so far as this department is concerned.

I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte) whether there is any other correspondence that has not been brought down.

The MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS (Mr. Tarte). Speaking for myself, I do not know of anything more than I have brought down. I have brought down everything I have.

Mr. PRIOR. This return calls for letters from and to the right hon. Prime Minister and the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals. There are no letters from either of these hon. gentlemen, and I want to know whether they have any or whether they have seen the return?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). I have not seen the return. I will look at it and see if there is anything I can bring down.

Mr. PRIOR. Mr. Speaker, it seems extraordinary, when an Order of the House for a return is made, that an hon. Minister, to whose department it relates, has never seen it. Surely it was referred to his department.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I daresay it was referred to my department, but the officials, possibly, not finding anything on the official file, did not think it worth while to refer it to me, so that I have not had it under my observation.

Mr. WALLACE. What is the use of Parliament passing an Order for papers when a Minister gets up and says that he knows nothing about it. His department is bound to provide information in obedience to this Order, yet the hon. gentleman (Mr. Blair) gets up and coolly tells us that he knows nothing about it.

The PRIME MINISTER. These orders are referred to the officers of the department to look over the files and see what is on the files, but my hon. friend does not expect that the Minister will supervise these returns.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Oh, yes. These papers cannot come down without the consent of His Excellency the Governor General, and that cannot be got without the advice of the Cabinet, and not merely one individual member, but the whole Cabinet is responsible.

The PRIME MINISTER. All this is purely ministerial duty. The Governor in Council has nothing to do with that. The order of the House is that these papers should be brought down, and the Government has no discretion but to bring them down.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I differ from the right hon. gentleman in toto caelo.

Mr. McDUGALL. I wish to ask with reference to papers which were ordered by the House last May, concerning the transfer of a property at Grand Narrows. The Minister told me some time ago that he had to send to Moncton to get these papers, and it is extraordinary that such little information as they contain should take six weeks to get. The general manager is here now, and I cannot see what excuse can be pleaded for the delay, unless it is that the Minister is unwilling to give them to the House.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. The hon. gentleman ought not to say that. He knows that he met the secretary of the Railway Department in the corridor two or three days ago.

Mr. McDUGALL. A week ago.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. It was explained to the hon. gentleman that the secretary had sent two or three telegrams to Moncton urging the papers to be forwarded. I cannot go to Moncton myself to get them. The hon. gentleman knows that the Department has made every effort to get these papers from Moncton. I am not aware that they have arrived yet, but the officers of the department know it is my desire that they should be laid on the Table the very moment they are received.

FAST ATLANTIC LINE.

Mr. McNEILL. I wish to again call the attention of my right hon. friend to a matter of immense consequence, and to which I referred the other day. This Parliament has been in session for three months, and neither the House nor the country has had any information whatsoever from the right hon. gentleman as to what steps are being taken in reference to the Fast Atlantic Service. Some time ago the right hon. the Prime Minister was good enough to say, that steps were being taken by the Government; I now venture to ask him to give some information as to what is being done in regard to this most important matter.

The PRIME MINISTER. I will be able to make an announcement to my hon. friend (Mr. McNeill) within a very few days.

SUPPLY—DISMISSAL OF EMPLOYEES ON BEAUHARNOIS CANAL.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding) moved that the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Mr. J. G. H. BERGERON (Beauharnois). Before we vote any money to Her Majesty, I want to bring before the House a matter which I believe would be more worthy of the despotic Government of Russia than of the enlightened Liberal Government of Canada. Since 1896, we have been hearing of acts of despotism by this Government, but I have to present a case now which excels in despotism any of them yet heard of. There were on the Beauharnois Canal several employees, some of whom had been there since 1871, and had always done their duty well. On the 13th day of May last they were notified that they were dismissed. At this date they had fixed up their little residences for the summer, and cultivated their gardens, as they did yearly in order to obtain some vegetables, for their daily wage did not amount to a great deal. At this date, and under these circumstances, they were notified, without any reasons being given, that they were to be turned out of doors, some of them even out of their own houses which they had built on Government land. When this matter first came to my attention, I hardly believed it could be possible, and I asked the Minister (Mr. Blair) the names of those who were so dismissed and the reason for their dismissal. I was told the names of those dismissed, and the date of their appointment, one of them being appointed in June, 1871, and he is now a man over 50 years of age. I may say en passant that this man is placed in a very awkward position, because being so long at this particular employment he is now unable to turn his hand to anything else. I asked the question of the Minister (Mr. Blair):

By whom have they been dismissed, and on whose recommendation?

And he replied:

By order of the Minister.
Mr. McNEILL.

Mark you, Mr. Speaker, the Minister gave no reason whatever for their dismissal, and he made no statement as to whether they had done their duty faithfully or not. I asked:

Why have they been discharged?

And the Minister (Mr. Blair) answered:

They were discharged because their services were not acceptable.

Again, the Minister gave no reason. I may mention that one of the men employed to replace the man dismissed, is, I am informed, over seventy years of age, and he is expected to work day and night as lockman on the canal. His name is Paquette. The House will see that the reasons given by the Minister do not amount to a great deal, and that the discharge of these men is simply an act of tyranny. He tells us that they are discharged because they are not acceptable to the Ministers, and he leaves us to assume whether they were not acceptable because of their politics or otherwise. As a matter of fact, one of them was a Liberal, although the Minister evidently did not know it. He was appointed in 1894, and he was evidently set aside because he had been appointed by me. Now, I wish to put a statement before the Minister of Railways and Canals, and if the statement is not true he will have to deal with one of his own employees about it. One of these discharged men, named Lefebvre, met Mr. Beique, the superintendent of the canal, and he said to him: "Mr. Beique, we have always been good friends; have you made any report against me, or what is the cause of my dismissal?" And Mr. Beique replied: "I have not reported against you." Lefebvre then said: "How can I get a position anywhere, because if I ask for employment I will be told I do not deserve it, as I must have been discharged by the Government because I did something wrong." Mr. Beique replied: "As to that you need not fear, because I will give you a certificate that you are a good, honest, respectable man, and I never had a better man on the canal than you." Lefebvre then said: "What is the reason I have been dismissed?" And the superintendent replied: "I will tell you the truth. I went to Ottawa lately, and I met Mr. Blair in the passage of the House, and Mr. Blair said to me: If we have an election this fall, have you any men on the Beauharnois Canal who will vote for Bergeron?"

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Who said that?

Mr. BERGERON. Mr. Blair said that.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Do you say I said that?

Mr. BERGERON. Mr. Beique said you said it.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Did Mr. Beique tell you I said that?

Mr. BERGERON. Mr. Beique told that to be the man who told it to me.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I never saw the man in my life.

Mr. BERGERON. Well, wait until I am finished. Lefebvre said to Mr. Beique: "Give me the reason that I have been dismissed," and Mr. Beique replied: "I saw Mr. Blair, the Minister of Railways and Canals, and he said to me: If we have an election in the fall, have you any men on the Beauharnois Canal who will vote for Bergeron?" And Beique continued: "I was challenged to give the names of those I thought would vote for Bergeron and your name was amongst the others, and that is why you are dismissed." Now, Sir, that is the reason given by the superintendent of the canal to one of the men who was dismissed, and the Minister of Railways and Canals can settle with his employee as to whether he said it or not. If it is not true that the Minister said it, then the superintendent of the canal deserves censure, but if the superintendent spoke the truth, then the Minister undoubtedly deserves censure. The letter dismissing these men was very curt. This is the one which was addressed to Lefebvre:

Valleyfield, 10th of May, 1899.

Sir,—I have received instructions to notify you that your services as lockman on the Beauharnois Canal shall not be required after Saturday, the 13th of the present month.

I have the honour to be, sir,

Your devoted servant,

(Sgd.) J. F. BEIQUE,
Superintendent.

Mr. Joseph Lefebvre.

At the date this letter was written these men had been at work ten days of the season. If they had been notified last fall that they would not be employed again this spring, they would have been able to look out for some other employment, but they were not even notified then that the Government did not intend to employ them any more. Having done their duty, they were under the impression that they would be employed again. They spent the winter there; in the early spring they made their gardens, cleaned their houses, and made preparations to spend the summer there as usual; and on the 10th of May they received notice that on the 13th they would not be required any longer. They were put on the street, although some of them had been there for nearly 20 years; and some of these men have 12 or 13 children, and they have not been able to find any work. And these people have been put out simply because they were not partisans of hon. gentlemen opposite. It is the greatest piece of tyranny we have ever had in this country. I am convinced that the hon. Prime Minister cannot in his heart sanction anything of that sort, for we have heard him say in this House that no man would be dismissed from public employment unless it was proved that he was not worthy of the position he occupied. I put this case before Parliament, and I hope the press will take hold of it. I sympathize very much with these men, not because I know them or because I have probably appointed them, but because they are good, honest, respectable men, the best men that have been working on that canal or on any canal in the country. I sympathize with them because they are on the street. For this the hon. Minister of Railways is responsible, and if I have any friends on this side of the House, when his Estimates come, I shall make him feel it.

Mr. McNEILL. Mr. Speaker, I would have expected that there would have been some explanation from the hon. Minister in reference to this matter.

Mr. BERGERON. He has not got any.

Mr. McNEILL. It certainly is one of the most grievous cases that has ever been laid before this House. Although we have had some grievous cases of dismissals since hon. gentlemen opposite have come into power, I think this is one of the most cruel and disgraceful cases that have come before this country or any other under constitutional government for many a long day. If the statement of my hon. friend (Mr. Bergeron) is true—and I presume he is in a position to know whether it is true or not—these men have given no cause for their dismissal except that they happened to belong to a different stripe of politics from the Minister. They are respectable men, men who have been conducting themselves with all propriety, men who have been pursuing their work in the most proper manner; and they have been turned out with their families on to the streets, absolutely without means of support, without any investigation of any kind, simply because they happen to be Conservatives. I thought the hon. Minister would have had something to say. I venture to say that the sense of justice of the people of this country from one end of it to the other will be outraged by conduct of this kind; and the Government sit here dumb, without one word to say in defence of their course. It only shows how utterly callous they have become in this respect. So long as I sit in this House, I will raise my voice against conduct so cruel and so unmanly.

Motion agreed to, and House resolved itself into committee.

(In the Committee.)

Militia and Defence—

Further amount required for annual drill $125,000

Mr. BERGERON. What is the amount in the main Estimates for this?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Mr. Borden). I may say to the committee that it is intended to reduce the main Estimates by exactly this amount. This amount is required for the 1st of July, as a large portion of the militia has been sent into camp under the plan of the Major General before that date, and it is proposed to reduce the amount in the main Estimates for the purpose of annual camp by an amount equivalent to the amount asked for here.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not understand my hon. friend. He had $300,000 voted for this current year, and he is asking now for $100,000. Does he mean now to spend $400,000 for this current year?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. Does the hon. gentleman mean for next year to spend only $300,000?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. If the whole of the militia is to be trained each year, the cost of doing so is $400,000 to $425,000, and, if that policy be continued, an additional amount will be required, but I do not intend to ask for that until the supplementary Estimates for next year come down.

Mr. FOSTER. That is not quite the way to treat the House. The hon. gentleman ought to have pretty well established in his own mind how much he proposes to have for next year. He is going to drop off $100,000 in the main Estimates, but has not a single idea that he may not ask the full amount at the end of the next year. What is it that calls for this enormous amount during the present year of $425,000? That is an immense amount of money for annual drill, and, while the House is always generous in voting militia estimates, if all the militia estimates are to partake of the buoyancy of this one, the ultimate sum will be enormous.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. So far as the particular item for annual drill is concerned, the amount is not larger than for any previous year, when the whole force was called out for annual drill. It has scarcely ever happened that the whole force has been called out. During the past three years a larger percentage of the force has been drilled and camped than ever before; but, if the whole force is to be drilled annually, the cost will be about $425,000.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Is that twelve days' drill?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes, in camp; also drill of the city corps—the whole annual drill.

Mr. FOSTER. Are the city corps taken out for annual drill?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. This year they are taken out for two days, but they drill at headquarters, in the cities.
Mr. BORDEN (King's).

Mr. FOSTER. For that two days they are out, you incur all the transport expenditure.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. They drill near their headquarters, so that the transport expense is not large; but we do incur some expense.

Mr. FOSTER. How much of this $425,000 is for transport, and how much for actual service in the field and drill in the armoury?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I have here an estimate of the cost of the camps now going on, which perhaps will throw some light on the question. The Niagara camp, from June 6th to June 17th, 1899, costs $42,600. That actual number of men was 3,900. It was composed of a squadron of the Governor General's Body Guards, the 2nd Dragoons, the 3rd Dragoons, the 12th Battalion, infantry, and a number of other corps.

Mr. FOSTER. How much of that is transport?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I am unable to tell the hon. gentleman at this moment. I had understood that the estimates of the Department of Justice were going on before six o'clock, and my papers became disarranged somewhat while I was in Niagara, and I have not been able to look into the matter since. I will give the best information I can, and after recess supplement what is required.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman had better let his estimates stand until after eight o'clock, and let some other estimates be gone on with. The division into transport and other expenses is somewhat an important point, and I do not think we can go on discussing these items without having the information.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. It was my intention, on the main Estimates, to have gone very carefully into this matter, and I have notes in connection with the main Estimates, giving, I think, the information which the hon. gentleman wants; but, if thought better to give the whole explanation at once, that could be done after recess.

Mr. WALLACE. The hon. gentleman should bear in mind that we would like to have the estimates of the transport and day for the camp to commence to-day at Niagara. The first camp, from the 6th to the 17th June, is concluded, but another camp opens to-day. I am told that a corps from the county of Lanark starts to-day for the camp at Niagara. They have to go to Kingston, or some place on the St. Lawrence, to get to Niagara. That would mean, I presume, that they would not be in camp until some time to-morrow afternoon. That is, three days of the week are gone. I presume, they would return so as to reach home before the Sunday of the next week. That would give not more than three or four days of next week, and not more than three days of this week, for drill, and they are supposed to have twelve days' drill. A large portion of the time is, therefore, spent going and coming, and a very large expenditure is necessary for their transport. We would like to have the full particulars.

Mr. TYRWHITT. Are we to understand that it is the policy of the Government to drill the entire militia annually? As a well-wisher of the militia, I would highly approve of such a policy; but, if this is to be a desultory case, it will be so much money wasted.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Speaking for myself, I am in favour of the annual drill, and, since I have been in the position of Minister of Militia, we have had annual drills, to a very large extent, almost the whole of the force being out every year. But I cannot say that the policy has been absolutely settled. I think, however, we are coming to that, and I agree with the hon. gentleman, that, in order to get the fullest results from the expenditure made on the militia, we ought to have annual drill. The money voted by Parliament would do more good, and, though the sum is larger, we shall get far better results than we should, if we drilled only every other year, or drilled only a portion of the force each year.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I think it is very undesirable that in a matter of such great importance as that which the committee is now considering, any hon. gentleman on the Treasury benches should speak for himself apart from the Government. If ever there was a question that the Government was bound to consider and to form a policy upon, it is this question as it now stands. The statement made by my hon. friend from Simcoe (Mr. Tyrwhitt), who understands these matters a great deal better than I do, must carry conviction at once to the mind of every hon. member of the House. To propose the additional vote this year without intending to adopt that policy and carry it out is an absolute loss of the amount of the vote. It seems to me, therefore, before the House is asked by the Government to vote this money the Government ought to determine what their policy is. I do not hesitate to say that, with such information as I can gather in regard to this very important question, I entirely agree with what the Minister of Militia has said. I believe that the only question is not whether the whole force should be called out for annual drill and the expenditure incurred, but whether the 12 days of annual drill is sufficient. I do not hesitate to say that in my judgment, the Government would act wisely if they determine, even at some additional expenditure, to render the militia force of this country as effective as possible, and to deal with the question with such vigour as will give undoubted results. Instead of expending the very large amount of money as in the past, I am afraid, has too often been done without accomplishing all that the House has a right to expect. I think that this is a question of sufficient importance to have been determined by the Government, and I believe that a short time would have been enough to enable them to determine whether they would ask for this $100,000 and then abandon this policy, thus rendering the expense practically useless, or adopt the policy of incurring this increased expenditure for the purpose of having the militia as effective as possible.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The demand of my hon. friend (Sir Charles Tupper) is not unreasonable in itself, but I think it has not come at the proper time. The vote before us is for $125,000 which is already expended or is being expended, as the drill is now going on. So the money must be voted. I am glad to see that the hon. gentleman responds to the vote in the manner he does. When the Estimates for next year come before the House, the hon. gentleman will be entitled to an answer as to what the policy of the Government is on this question. My hon. friend (Mr. Borden, King's), in opening his Estimates, made the statement that it was the intention to decrease the vote of next year by the sum of $125,000. The question arises, what sum should we expend yearly? But to go on with the discussion of this question at the moment seems inopportune. The financial year is divided awkwardly for appropriations of this kind. Part of the appropriation must be spent in this financial year and part of it in the next financial year. How much should we spend? Should it be $300,000 or should it be $400,000? Should we have a yearly drill of the whole force, or only drill the whole force every second year, as has been done sometimes in the past. The consensus of opinion, as I understand my hon. friend to say now is that no false economy should be practiced in this matter, that we should spend whatever is to be spent to maintain the militia on a proper footing of efficiency. This is the question, and I am glad to see it approached as it is by both sides of the House, not regardless of the consequences, but in the spirit that we must have an effective militia. The Minister of Militia will take this into consideration, and when he comes with his Estimates for next year, he will be able to give the hon. gentleman the answer he asks for.

Mr. BERGERON. The Minister of Militia has not his papers here to-day to enter into the full discussion, but between now and six o'clock we might as well occupy the time in going over some features of the case. We spend a great deal of money in militia and defence. If it is well spent, that if there are good results from it, there is sound reason why the people should bear this burden. We have devoted to this service what represents a capital of $15,000,000. We spend annually, $425,000, which is the interest on about $14,000,000. A great many people in the country do not see this matter in the same light as we do here who have discussed it for years. They think the money is not all spent for a good purpose. Now, as the hon. leader of the Opposition (Sir Charles Tupper) said a moment ago, I believe that some improvements should be made. It seems to me if you are to have an efficient militia, eleven or twelve days' drill is not enough. From what the hon. member for West York (Mr. Wallace) said a moment ago, I understand that the twelve days includes the days occupied in transporting. In my county it takes two days to go to and come from the camp, leaving only ten days actual drill. What can the soldiers learn in ten days actual drill? Still, the expense is there. I understand that we shall come back to this subject later, so I do not wish to go into it generally, but there is just one other point I wish to mention. Battalions going to camp should go there with their own men. I know—and I am sure my hon. friend the Minister of Militia does not ignore it—that a good many battalions leave home with hardly any men at all, and pick up their men in Montreal, from among the men on the wharfs, and so on. That is not in accordance with the militia institution as we should like to have it. And I call the hon. gentleman's attention to it, in case it has not been mentioned to him before, that his local instructor or the Deputy Adjutant General at Montreal—I speak of that part of the country because I know it better—should see to it that battalions leave headquarters with their own men. In the cases I speak of, men on the wharfs put on the uniform of Her Majesty, spend nine or ten days in camp and then cease to belong to the militia. That is done on a pretty large scale. This does not bring the results that we should have for such a large expenditure of public money. Now, my hon. friend the Minister of Militia says, that the amount of money he is now asking, $125,000, will be deducted from the main Estimates. I see that in the main Estimates he is asking for $400,000. Last year he got $300,000. So it would appear that next year the amount will be $525,000. Even if he deducts this amount of $125,000, the Estimates will be $75,000 more than was given him last year. When he comes here with his papers ready for the full discussion, I should like to have him explain why we are called upon to increase the vote by this amount. If there are good reasons for that, I think the House is entitled to have them. I will defer other remarks that I have to make on this point.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Later on, I shall endeavour to give the hon. gentleman the explanation that he asks. I had expected that the full discussion of the militia vote would come up on the main Estimates, and that probably a short explanation would be regarded as sufficient in the case of this item, which is immediately necessary. It is certainly more convenient to give the general explanations and the policy of the Government upon the main Estimates.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I think that is the wisest course to pursue on the present occasion. It would be a pity to depart from what the Minister of Militia and Defence had proposed himself to do on the main Estimates. He is hardly in a position to-day to deal with the whole policy of the Government as effectively as it would be done on the main Estimates. I think we will have to be content to take such explanations as my hon. friend can give in reference to this, and leave the question of the general policy to be dealt with on the main Estimates.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I am glad the leader of the Opposition takes that view. It is certainly the most convenient way. The country has before it the very important statement made by the new Major General, which will, no doubt, involve considerable discussion.

Salaries and wages of civil employees.. $9,000

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. This item covers expenditure that it has been the custom in the department, and I think, in other departments, to pay, out of the vote for the next year. A portion of this vote for civil employees for the year now coming to an end, was used in paying expenditures belonging to the previous year. Another portion of the vote is due to the fact that owing to the introduction of the new rifle, which is a very intricate piece of machinery, we have had to employ artificers, men with special knowledge of that rifle, and send them to different parts of the country. They are civil employees under the stores department. The stores department, at the present moment, is under the control of the civil branch. Then, in addition to that, we have purchased the Oliver equipment, of which already a very large number have been manufactured, and we have had to employ additional help in order to take care of that. So that the whole amount here, which is only $2,500 in addition to the amount actually expended last year, is required in the two items that I have referred to.

Mr. BERGERON. Last year $60,000 were voted in that item; that will be $69,000 altogether.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The usual vote for this purpose has been $62,000, and it was reduced last year to $60,000. Out of that, between $5,000 and $6,000 was paid on the previous year, and the additional amount is required to make that up and pay off the expenses which, I say, have been incurred owing to the introduction of the new rifle and the Oliver equipment. I am asking for an increased amount next year, so that we will not have to ask for a supplementary vote.

Military properties $35,000

Mr. BERGERON. We voted $131,000 for that last year, and the hon. gentleman is asking for $35,000 more.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. This vote is for maintenance and repairs. A large portion of this is being expended on the Rockcliffe rifle range, the new heating apparatus at St. John's barracks, the London barracks, stables for fourteen extra horses, repairs for the artillery barracks at Quebec, fire-extinguishers for military buildings, Toronto, new chimneys on the drill hall, and general repairs, St. John's barracks. The money is now being expended. Contracts were made, and there is not sufficient money to pay the various contracts.

Mr. FOSTER. That is just the great objection. Does not the Minister see that he is coming down here on the 20th of June and asking us for $35,000 additional, which he has actually spent or contracted to spend, and for which he had no authority at all? The hon. gentleman came down last year and, after having looked over his department, he said to Parliament: I want you to pass $131,000 for a certain purpose. He comes down now and says that he has spent $35,000 more than Parliament gave him, has actually spent the money, or contracted to spend it, and he had no appropriation for it at all. It is really a perfect farce for us to come here and listen to a Minister giving his explanations, and then vote the money asked for, and find out when next year comes around that he asks for 25 per cent more, and that he expended it before he asked for it. Now, the hon. gentleman's Estimates are all of a piece with that. With reference to that $25,000, it is all very well to say that we must vote it because it is spent. But the Government had no authority to spend it. They had authority to spend $300,000 and no more, but they spent $25,000 more already on drill alone. That might be called for under the advent of General Hutton, and the new policy which the Government does not say is their policy yet. They are able to say amongst themselves: We will undertake to carry out the policy so far that we will spend thousands of dollars that have not been voted to us, but we cannot say we will do it for another year, we have not made up our minds. And so, with all his Estimates. Here we have nearly $300,000 of an extra vote, almost every cent of which is either now expended or contracted for without any appropriation, and with the Minister in full possession of his senses, looking over his whole fields, coming down last year and asking from Parliament what he wanted for the year's vote and the year's expenditure for militia. It is this practice which this Government is fast making, a rule against which, I think, on both sides of the House, we ought to protest. I think my hon. friend the Solicitor-General (Mr. Fitzpatrick) will join with me in that protest. Let him be frank enough and brave enough to say at the time he asks for his Estimates what he wants, even if it is large, and say what he wants it for. Then the House will take it into consideration and say whether it will give it or not. If the House gives it, the Minister has the right to expend it, but if the House refuses it, the Minister has no right to set up his own will against that of the House. If the Minister conceals from the House the expenditures which he proposes to make, or goes on and makes expenditures to the tune of hundreds and thousands of dollars, without the money having been voted and without there being any urgency, it is making a farce of appropriation. Thus, the Minister seems to be becoming an appropriator, to absolve the House of its functions entirely, and he is taking away those sacred functions from the possession of the House. If the Minister had been ill, or away, or if some catastrophe, or some great event had happened, which imported urgency into it, it would have been different, but it is the ordinary hum-drum existence of Canada in regard to these militia matters. You can absolutely expend half a million on properties if you like, but the Minister should say how much he would like to expend and ask the House to give him that much money and then try to keep within it. What excuse is there in regard to these properties in which there is no urgency, of over-expending the vote by 25 per cent and coming down, after it is spent, and saying: Hurry this, because the money is all spent. That is what I want my hon. friend to see. We are not fighting a measure of the Government, or anything necessary to make our militia properties what they ought to be, but for heaven's sake let us have something nearer to the appropriation than getting 25 per cent away from it in a matter where there is no urgency.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Mr. Borden, King's). I admit frankly that there is a good deal of force in what the hon. member for York, N.B. (Mr.

Foster) has stated, but I think, he went a step too far when he undertook to say that I had intentionally concealed from the House expenses that I intended to make. That is not true; that is not a fact.

Mr. FOSTER. I said "either that or." I put in the alternative.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I have pointed out to my hon. friend, more than once, that the unfortunate practice had grown up—I found it existing in my department when I came in—of expending out of funds voted for one year moneys to recoup or pay off the expenditures which had taken place in the previous year, from the next vote.

Mr. FOSTER. Over-expending in the previous years.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. That was being done. I did not invent that practice. I am sorry to say that I have not been able to put an end to it, but, in the main Estimates for next year, I have endeavoured, as far as possible to estimate for the full amount we shall want. I think it is better we shall close up this year by taking enough money in the Estimates for the current year which closes on the 30th of June, so that we can make a fair start next year, and that is what I have been endeavouring to do in these Estimates.

Mr. FOSTER. $35,000 of an over-expenditure.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. This squares the amount for this year.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes, it is due to a considerable extent to the expenditure on the Ottawa rifle range, which it was considered very important, in the interest of the militia, to complete and which cost more money than was anticipated.

Mr. FOSTER. How much more?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I think it cost something like $15,000 or $20,000 more. I shall be able to give a full explanation to the committee, because we are asking for a still further amount and I shall have a statement of every item in connection with that range to place before the committee at the proper moment.

It being Six o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

Military stores $39,700

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Mr. Borden). In order to carry out the camps this year, which are larger than usual, it was absolutely necessary to increase our stores, and we were obliged to purchase marquees, tents, waterproof sheets, blankets, water-bottles, &c., amounting to $39,700. Our stores have been rather running down; they are not as large as they ought to be for the force we have, and, although these stores were purchased specially for the camps this year, they can be utilized permanently, and it was in the public interest that they should be purchased.

Mr. BORDEN (King's).

Mr. SPROULE. Were the stores purchased by tender?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. They were purchased at contract prices by the extension of contracts which we had already made with various parties. The marquees were purchased in Ottawa, a large portion of the blankets from W. C. Caldwell, and the waterproof sheets were purchased in Montreal; I forget the name of the firm, but at the contract price and from the contractors of last year. It was a mere continuation of the contract.

Mr. SPROULE. Were the contracts which they got last year, the result of tenders?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Mr. EARLE. I wish to call the attention of the Minister to the accounts for supplies purchased last year, and to certain discrepancies between the cost, as published by the Auditor General, and the cost as given in a return brought down to this House.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. That is in connection with the Yukon supplies, and there is an item later on which will bring that whole question up.

Mr. EARLE. I will postpone my remarks until then.

Mr. CLANCY. Does Mr. Caldwell, from whom these blankets were purchased, live in London?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. No, Mr. Caldwell does not live in London. He is a manufacturer, and they were purchased direct from him, and he has been supplying the department for many years. They were purchased at the same prices as formerly.

Mr. SPROULE. Do I understand that these supplies were purchased without the Minister having the money to pay for them?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. That is so. We depended on the generosity of Parliament to give us the money. We could not send the men without blankets.

Mr. SPROULE. I fear the Minister has more confidence in Parliament than Parliament has in the Minister.

Mr. BENNETT. How many years do these contracts extend over for the supply of blankets, and tents, and so on?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Contracts are usually made for specific quantities; but, if we have a contract which we consider a favourable one, and we require more stores, and there is not ample opportunity to ask for tenders, then, upon the recommendation of the officers in the department, we very often extend the contract. That was done in this case.

Mr. BENNETT. How much did the blankets cost?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Eighteen thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars is the amount estimated. That is about the amount required, but, of course, it is not exact to the dollar.

Mr. BENNETT. When was the contract with Mr. Caldwell made?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I think it was made a year ago.

Mr. BENNETT. There is a very marked difference between the way the Minister of Militia conducts his department and the way the Postmaster General conducts his. When a contract for a mail service, which is usually made for three years, expires, though it may only amount to $40 or $50, the Postmaster General calls for new tenders on the ground that some person might perform the service more cheaply. But the Minister of Militia, who made a contract a year ago for blankets at a certain price, finding this year that $20,000 worth of blankets are required, assumes that the price is the same as in the preceding year, and makes a new contract at the same price. I submit that this is grossly unfair. I understand that the price of wool has greatly decreased since a year ago, and had tenders been called for, the Minister might have made a considerable saving.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I do not know where my hon. friend gets his information. As a matter of fact, the price of woollen goods has increased from 20 per cent to 25 per cent. That is what I am advised.

Mr. SPROULE. Last year wool sold for from 16 to 18 cents a pound, whereas this year it is selling for from 14 to 15 cents. I have seen a thousand pounds sold at 14½ cents. So that the price is a good deal lower than it was a year ago. I would like to ask the Minister what was the amount of the contract for blankets last year, and what was the price paid for them?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I am not able to give that information from memory. I may say that I am having careful statements compared of the relative prices, and if these items are allowed to pass, I will promise the fullest information when we come to the main vote for clothing and supplies. There will then be ample opportunity, and I think it will be more convenient, to discuss the matter, as the hon. leader of the Opposition agreed this afternoon that we should go into the whole question then.

Mr. SPROULE. This is a very large item. It seems to be an extension of the contract for one line of goods, amounting to over $13,000, and we have no information as to the cost of the goods under the original contract, or whether it was a large or a small one. I suppose the Minister does not know whether there were more tenders than one?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes, there were more.

Mr. CLANCY. I understand that the proposition of the hon. leader of the Opposition this afternoon was not for a limited discussion on the matter now under the consideration of the committee, but rather on the general policy of the Government as to taking so large a sum of money each year for the purpose of drill and otherwise. But what I would like the hon. Minister to answer is whether in asking for tenders last year a specific quantity of blankets was called for, and whether the tender was limited to last year, or did the hon. gentleman give the public notice that the contract would extend over more than one year? Because, apart from what was stated a moment ago, that there has been a very decided decline in the price of wool everybody knows who has taken the trouble to glance over the newspapers. It seems to me that if the hon. gentleman, in asking for tenders, called for more than he required at the time, he deprived himself of the chance of a possible decline in the market price of the goods.

Mr. BENNETT. On reference to the Auditor General's Report of last year, I find this item: W. C. Caldwell, 5,500 pounds of blankets, at 47½ cents, or a total of about $2,600. From the smallness of the amount, it would hardly seem that a tender was called for that. I presume this is Mr. Caldwell, the member for Lanark in the local House.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. That is only a small part of the contract.

Mr. HENDERSON. Will the Minister say whether these are white or gray blankets?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Gray.

Mr. HENDERSON. I would say that 47½ cents a pound was a most outrageous price.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The blankets the hon. gentleman has just referred to were white blankets.

Those I am now asking a vote for are gray blankets.

Mr. HENDERSON. I am sure that gray blankets were tendered for before at much less than 40 cents a pound. I say that because a firm in my own town was among the tenderers.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I may not be correct in stating the price. I think the hon. gentleman is correct in saying that there were tenders considerably below that. I found some in the department when I came in; but the blankets which were sent in were not all wool, and were condemned and refused, and we were unable to accept the completion of the contract.

Mr. HENDERSON. Those were not made in my county. The gentleman in my county who tendered did not receive the contract.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. It goes without saying that they were not from the hon. gentleman's county, but we did receive blankets of that kind. With regard to the length of time referred to by the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Clancy). I may say that when I came in I found that there were contracts let for three years from the date when the present Government came into office, or shortly before; and there were some contracts for two years, which did not come into force until a year after we came in. The matter was referred to the Minister of Justice at that time, and he thought no Government had power to enter into a contract of that kind. Those contracts were terminated, and since then we have followed the system of letting our contracts for each year.

Mr. SPROULE. That is not what the department is doing now.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I say that having got a good contract, and urgently requiring further goods of the same kind, we frequently, on the report of the officers of the department, ask for an increased quantity. That is what was done in this particular case.

Mr. CLANCY. My hon. friend will see that neither he nor the officers of the department are in possession of information in regard to prices without asking for tenders. No one who is not engaged in the business can tell whether he is getting goods at the proper price or not, in the absence of tenders. That is the only means of determining that question. It is a very easy matter for the hon. gentleman to let a contract for some $20,000, without tender, and then say he let it to that particular party because that party gave very good satisfaction. No doubt the goods delivered in the past may have given satisfaction, but that is no justification for the hon. gentleman taking up the old contract and extending it to further purchases. He had before his eyes the fact that there has been a decline in the prices of wool, and there ought to be a corresponding decline in the prices of blankets. I hope he will be able to offer some better excuse than the opinion of his officers, because they can have no knowledge of the special subject.

Mr. SPROULE. It does seem to me that we should have more information on this item. It looks a little fishy all through, especially when we consider that Mr. Caldwell is a very good Grit. He was given a small contract for $2,000 worth of woollen goods, and was paid 47½ cents per pound for manufactured wool, which, in all probability, he purchased at about 18 cents. Forty-seven and a half cents, to begin with, is a very big price, as any man in the House who knows anything of the woollen business will admit. Wool has gone down since considerably, and yet the hon. gentleman extended the contract on the same basis for $13,000. It is inexplicable that the hon. Minister cannot tell us what is the cost per blanket or per pound, or how many blankets were supplied. He sets up his usual plea of urgency, but I do not see how that plea can hold when the Minister must have known whether he intended having the militia drilled this summer or not; and if he did, he had ample time to provide whatever was necessary. I remember some years ago, the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) objected very strongly to what was then the custom of giving the contracts for military clothing to certain firms and then extending these contracts after they had expired. The hon. member said that practically the W. E. Sanford Manufacturing Company of Hamilton then had the monopoly, although one or two other parties were asked to tender, and he then strenuously contended that had tenders been called for, as they should have been, from the leading firms or the public generally, the militia supplies could have been got much cheaper. I am not saying whether the system then followed was wrong or not, but if it was wrong then, it certainly is to-day, and there are stronger grounds to-day for departing from that custom of extending tenders. Because there has been a decline in the price of woollen goods, and they can now be purchased much cheaper than a year ago. I do not understand that the hon. leader of the Opposition could have agreed to let the items go through without information. The Minister asks us to let the items go through on his promise that he will furnish us all the information when the larger items come up. But there can be no justification for his extending this $2,600 contract into a $13,000 contract, and for asking us to let the item pass without giving us the information which would enable us to judge whether the bargain is a good one or the reverse. Whether there was urgency or not the hon. Minister should have come down here with information that would satisfy the House, and he ought to let the item stand until he can furnish us the information we require. He has practically given us no information.

Mr. TYRWHITT. I am in a position to speak authoritatively on the subject of wools, as I sold wool last week at 13 cents a pound, the lowest price in the last thirty years. Last year, when this contract was let, wool was worth 16 or 17 cents a pound. My hon. friend from East Simcoe (Mr. Bennett) has quoted the Postmaster General as having said that, in the case of postal contracts, he is in the habit of calling for tenders periodically. All I can say is that in my riding when a contract, which is held by a Conservative, expires, tenders are called for, but in the case of contracts held by the political friends of the Postmaster General they are renewed on expiry. I only hope that a similar policy is not being pursued by my hon. friend the Minister of Militia, as we all like to think that his department is non-political, and certainly had tenders been called for money would have been saved in this case.

Mr. CLARKE. I would just like to ask two questions. First, was this contract awarded to Mr. Caldwell before the preferential tariff came into force? And, second, was it optional for him to fulfil that contract or not?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I am afraid that I cannot give the information, but I will make a note of the question and bring it down later. If my hon. friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) will accept my statement, I will make a memorandum and bring down the fullest information I can when these items come up next. I cannot give him any information at present, but it is urgent that the item should go through, and as the main Estimates and the supplementaries have to come up yet, there will be ample opportunity for discussion.

Mr. CLANCY. Did it occur to the hon. Minister, when extending that contract, that his friends, inside the House and out of it, were declaring that in consequence of the preferential tariff, goods had been greatly brought down in price, of course, including blankets. I am afraid he extended the contract without having his eyes open, for the purpose of favouring his friends. Mr. Caldwell is a very respectable citizen, and it is no crime to be a Liberal, but even an advantage when contracts are in question, and I venture to say that if he were a Tory, the contract would have been looked into and the preferential tariff would not have been lost sight of. The hon. Minister must either confess that the benefits which he and his friends have been endeavouring to portray in such rosy hues to the consumers of this country as arising from the operations of the preferential tariff are a myth, or he is guilty of having entirely ignored that preferential rate for the purpose of favouring his friends.

Mr. SPROULE. I hardly think we should be expected to let an important item like this pass on the meagre information we have had. Now, while I do not think there is anything in the preferential tariff to reduce the cost of this article, the very statement the Minister made in defence of what he had done, is a strong evidence that he knows very little about the value of the goods. He started with the contention that woollen goods were considerably higher than they were last year, in the face of the fact that the wool sold at its highest last year, at 18 cents a pound, and that this year the highest figure is 14½ cents, while wool can be bought for about 13 to 13½ cents. When the manufacturer can buy wool at 13½ cents a pound and sell it at 47½ cents a pound, after putting it through his cards and machines, it must be evident to everybody that either the farmer is not getting a fair value for it or the manufacturer is getting too much. The manufacturer is selling this wool to the country and the farmer is helping to pay for it. How many farmers will say that it is not a distinct injustice to them that, while the wool they sell is reduced in value, the Government is paying as much for wool as they did last year. And this is done without tender, the transaction being with political friends of the Government. It shows great carelessness on the part of the Government and great injustice to the agricultural class. They are getting a very low price for their wool, and the only way by which this advantage can in part be made up to them is by the Government exercising most stringent economy. The Minister, in asking for this vote, gives us no information; he does not know how much he is paying. He says this is an extended contract, no effort having been made even to ascertain whether they could get the goods for less than last year. As to the plea of urgency, I cannot see any point in that. The Minister of Militia must have known months ago whether he intended to drill the militia or not. Knowing that, it was carelessness on his part or on the part of the officials of the department, to wait until the last hour and then be obliged to make a contract without the sanction of Parliament, spending the people's money without asking Parliament to grant it, and only coming to us after the money is spent. We do not know at what price they have bought blankets, whether at $1 a pound or at 47 cents a pound or what. They make a contract for $13,000 worth—

An hon. MEMBER. Eighteen thousand.

Mr. SPROULE—and we have the Minister's statement that he is giving a contract for $39,700 worth of supplies, spending the money before Parliament has voted it; and then, in the innocence of his heart, he asks Parliament to vote this money without telling us how he spent it, except that he says he did not invite tenders. Couple that with the fact that his arrangement was made with a political friend of the Government, and it justifies the belief that the Minister has been unmindful of the interests of the country and is not exercising the economy he should exercise.

Mr. FOSTER. In the item of $125,000, to provide for the annual drill, there is included the men's wages, and also, I suppose, the transport—

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. No. I may explain that the item I am asking for will be completely absorbed in the pay of the officers and men and the supplies of food in camp. The transport is not included. It is a matter which comes in later through accounts rendered by the transportation companies, chiefly railways, and will not be paid until some weeks, at any rate some days, later, and, therefore, is not as urgent as this vote.

Mr. FOSTER. Am I to understand that the supplementary Estimates will contain an item for the transport of the men for the current year's drill?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. No, the main Estimate of $430,000 for the next year includes the transport.

Mr. FOSTER. But it is not the transport for next year, but for the current year.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The accounts will not come in until after the 1st of July, and this is always the course that has been pursued.

Mr. FOSTER. Now, my hon. friend (Mr. Borden, King's) stated before dinner that the reason for these high estimates was that it had been the bad practice hitherto to pay one year's account out of the next year's appropriation, that he was changing all that, and that, therefore, he had to ask for this large amount. Now, he virtually tells the House that he proposes to take out of next year's appropriation what will be necessary to pay for the transport that takes place during the current year.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The hon. gentleman knows quite well that there are difficulties with the Auditor General in paying amounts the accounts of which come in after the 1st July. Perhaps in this case there would have been no difficulty, but, as a matter of fact, in any camp which takes place the bills for transportation never come in until July or August. It might be more regular, I admit, to include these with the item which I referred to before six o'clock, and take a further estimate. But that was not included in the account, as I have ascertained since six o'clock, and it is expected to pay the transportation out of the regular vote for next year.

Mr. FOSTER. My hon. friend has not yet told the House what this current year is going to cost for the drill of the soldiers. He took $300,000; he is going to use that; he has now taken $125,000; and he is going to use that. And yet he has got to pay out of next year's appropriation for the transport of the men for this same annual drill which is taking place in the current year. There is nothing in the contention of my hon. friend that difficulties arise, and the auditor has to audit the accounts. But my hon. friend knows there are two months allowed after the 1st of July for the auditing and general winding up of the accounts, and that the appropriation for the preceding year is carried to that extent to wind up accounts which have been contracted in the year that was past. So, there is nothing at all in these little difficulties that my hon. friend conjures up, to prevent his taking a vote for transport and drill for the current year. But my hon. friend acknowledges now that he is not asking the House for all the money necessary for this year's drill, and that he is going to take a portion of it out of next year's appropriation, which he has no right to do. We never know where we are with this hon. gentleman's estimates. Here we come for transport a little later, and we have an amount of $15,000 for transport. The whole vote that was brought down last year for transport and freight was $30,000; so that the hon. gentleman is asking 50 per cent more than he told the House last year would be sufficient for the work he had in hand. He has not only asked 50 per cent more of a vote, but he has actually taken it upon himself to spend the $15,000, and is now coming, ten days before the year is over, to ask Parliament to give him half as much again as he asked for last year, and which he has spent on his own motion entirely, and without a vote of the House. It gets worse and worse, as you go down. Here is "miscellaneous and unforeseen." He is actually asking for a supplementary estimate for $10,000 for miscellaneous and unforeseen. His whole main estimate last year for that purpose was $15,000. He is asking for two-thirds of the original vote as a supplementary, nearly all of which he has spent. He was not kind enough to tell the House last year that he would want $25,000. He slipped in $15,000, then goes to work and spends $10,000 more without any authority. What can we think of this Minister? Or, is it part of a deep-laid plot, whereby the Minister of Finance says to the country: My estimates are not so very great? Is it that the Minister of Finance whispers in the ear of the Minister of Militia and Defence and the other Ministers: Keep down your main estimates ; only get a part, and I will allow you to have a supplementary next year ? I cannot think the Minister of Finance would do that. I think the Minister of Finance must tell his colleagues: I want you to put to the last cent of what you are going to spend in the Estimates, and we will get the Governor General's signature to authorize for the work of the coming year, and beyond which we are not expected to extend. If the Minister does that, then the Minister of Militia and Defence is adding 50 per cent, adding 75 per cent, adding 25 per cent to the main vote that he asked for the year's services, and, after having spent that money, he comes down and asks for these things ten days before the financial year is over. My hon. friend is a terrible sinner in this respect. He knows it, he confesses it, and thinks he has absolved himself ; and the next year goes and does the very same thing again. With reference to the feed of these troops, is everything tendered for ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Absolutely everything, and given to the lowest tenderer. Now, with regard to this matter of transportation, whether we should have included the vote for the transport of troops in the sum for transporting the troops in this vote, there may be some question. But I am inclined to agree, and my hon. friend disagrees. He is disappointed, when I agree with him. It is absolutely impossible for me to please my hon. friend. He stands up here, and he scolds, and, when he makes a point that I think is fair, and I at once admit it, then he is annoyed because I admit it. Now, I say at once that I was not aware that the sum necessary for transport was not included. I think, if I had been aware of the fact, I would have included it. Unfortunately, it is impossible to increase the vote. I believe, according to the rules of Parliament, we can reduce it, but not increase it. Therefore, I am afraid that, unless a further supplementary is brought in, my hon. friend will have to take this vote as it is, and next year we will take a vote for transport out of the same vote in the main Estimates. Now, with reference to transport, let me say a single word. In the main Estimates the sum for transport estimated for the whole year is $40,000 ; for 1896-97 it was $47,000. But since we came in, we have reduced the rate, and this is the point on which, I am sure, we will receive the commendation of my hon. friend. We have reduced the cost of transport of troops by one-third. When we came into office, the rates charged were 3 cents a mile for officers, and 2 cents per mile for non-commissioned officers and men. The transport of one company, say, 42 men and 3 officers, for 100 miles, according to the old rate, was $98 ; according to the present rate, established in August, 1897, the cost would be $60. When the party exceeds 125 men, the reduction will be much larger. The transport of three companies, 126 men and 9 officers, for 100 miles, under the old rate, would be $280 ; the present rate is $176.67, a saving of $104. If they return within three months, the cost under the old rate would be $560, and under the present rate $270. I am sure this is one respect in which the administration of this department will receive the approval of my hon. friend.

Mr. CARGILL. There is a matter to which I wish to draw the attention of the Minister, having been requested to do so by a constituent of mine. It appears that sometime ago a gentleman who was about to go to the Military School at London made application for transport. If the committee will permit me I will read a letter which I have received, which perhaps will put it in better shape than I can. It is as follows :—

Recently Mr. A. G. Stewart, of our town, wished to attend the military school at London, a requisition was furnished him, reading via Canadian Pacific Railway via Streetsville or Toronto, the regular fare of which is $6 (Government pays, I think, two-thirds of regular rates). He should have gone Canadian Pacific Railway to Wingham, 30 cents ; Wingham to London, $2.25. These are regular fares.

On his return he asked the commandant to issue him requisition via Grand Trunk to Wingham ; but no—that could not be done—he must send him via Canadian Pacific Railway, taking a day to make the trip, and the Government whacks up the difference in fares again.

You may think this is a small matter ; but if this goes on all over the country the people are paying sweetly for an "able and economical Liberal Government." You would not pay $4 or $5 extra to send a man to London on your own business. I am a Liberal, but I hate the people to be imposed upon. I am beginning to think that Governments (Liberals or Conservatives) don't care a cent for the interest of the people, the great object appears to be the manipulation of votes.

I might have left that part out, but I want to deal fairly, and put the Conservatives on the same plane as the Liberals. I believe that if the Minister and his department will look into this matter they can arrange to have the transport charges of these pupils greatly reduced. On this one particular item, there is a saving, as I make it, of $2.30 in one fare. This gentleman could have gone from Teeswater by way of Wingham to London for $2.70. In the face of that he was sent over the Canadian Pacific Railway by way of Streetsville and Toronto to London at a cost of $6, making a difference of $3.30 between the two fares. In these Estimates I notice there is a vote of $15,000 for transport. Taking into consideration the saving that there would be on the basis of which I have spoken $10,000 would be sufficient for this purpose. I hope the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence will look carefully into the matter and see that the cheapest rate is arranged in sending these men to the Military School.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I am very much obliged to my genial friend (Mr. Cargill), for having called my attention to this matter. I would be very much obliged to him if he would send me the letter, as I was not able to catch all he said, or if he would send me a copy of it.

Mr. CARGILL. I have no objection to giving the hon. gentleman the name of the author of this letter. The gentleman who wrote me this letter is a general agent of the Grand Trunk Railway. He is not located at any particular station, but he can sell tickets from any one station of the Grand Trunk to any other station of the Grand Trunk. I understand local ticket agents are only permitted to sell tickets from their own station to any other station, and I fancy this is the way that this matter was drawn to this gentleman's attention. The party had made application to him for transport charges by way of the Grand Trunk, but he was instructed to go by way of the Canadian Pacific Railway via Toronto to London.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The responsibility for the mistake must rest primarily with the officer in charge of the district, or of the depot who is supposed to be on the watch to guard the public interest in matters of this kind. I shall take care that the matter is looked into and that the blame is traced home to the proper parties. We could have only one object, and that is to have the money voted for the purposes of the militia spent economically so that it will go as far as possible. We do not get enough as it is for the purposes of the service, and I am sure there is no desire on the part of anybody at headquarters, and I cannot understand how there could be a desire in the interest of any railway company on the part of any person at district headquarters to impose on the country as it has been suggested has been done by making these transport charges two or three times what they ought to have been. I am glad the hon. gentleman has called my attention to the matter, and I will see that it is carefully investigated.

Mr. SPROULE. Has the hon. Minister any more information about this than what he has given?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I will promise the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule), if he will allow the matter to go through, that I will get him a statement of the information as fully as can be got. I cannot give it to him to-night. However, I may say this to my hon. friend that when he says the price of wool is 13½ cents, and goes on to assume that, having paid 47½ cents to the man who supplies blankets, we actually gave him the difference between 13½ cents and 47½ cents, making no allowance at all for the cost of manufacturing, I think he is trying to create an impression in the public mind which is not creditable to himself and not fair to the department. I am not able to say whether the price is 47½ cents or not, but I have promised the hon. gentleman that I would bring the information, and I will bring it when the main Estimates are reached. I cannot do any more than that now. I have already stated that I am not a professional in the matter. I was told that the price of wool had increased at the time this arrangement was made. We bought these blankets in March, speaking from memory, as it was necessary we should have them ready by the early part of May in order to have them examined at headquarters and issued in time for camp. My recollection is that at the time the price of wool was higher than it was at the time at which the contract was made in the previous year. I can only tell my hon. friend what my recollection is, as I have not the figures here to fortify myself. But I think my hon. friend will perhaps allow the vote to go through on the promise I have made to give him information at the earliest possible time.

Mr. SPROULE. I do not propose to lie under the imputation that I have made a statement that is not creditable to my reputation or to myself.

This wool, after it is bought from the farmer passes through the manufacturer's hands only; he pays the farmer 13½ cents a pound for it, and all he has to do is to wash it and grease it and put it through his machinery, and then he sells it to the Government for 47½ cents a pound. No one will deny that that is an enormously high figure. Some years ago I had occasion to send circulars to persons who supplied blankets to the Interior and Indian Departments, and I know that there was a fair margin of profit. It is the duty of the Minister to give us some information, and in the absence of that, I am justified in taking the only information available to me, namely, the price paid on the contract last year, and the Minister tells us that the present supply is under an extension of the same contract and at the same price. When that contract was made last year wool was higher than it is now, and even though the Minister paid a fair price last year that price should undoubtedly be lower to-day. The Minister asks us to let the item go through, and he tells us we will get the information afterwards. That is on the principle of locking the stable door after the horse is stolen. The only check the House has on it is to refuse to vote the money. The whole transaction is irregular, because the Minister spent the money before the House voted it, and he spent it without calling for tenders. This item involves $39,000, and yet the rule is that any contract which involves the expenditure of $5,000 shall be thrown open to tender and the lowest tenderer get the contract. The Minister gave the contract to his political friends, and, apparently, he made no effort to get the price reduced. Yesterday I saw long wool sold right from the farmer's wagon at 13½ cents per pound, and even if the wool was the same price as last year, the difference between 13½ cents a pound which the farmer is paid and the 47½ cents which the Government pays the manufacturer, is altogether unreasonable.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Perhaps I had better quote the price of wool, if the hon. gentleman insists on it, and if he confounds white blankets with gray blankets.

Mr. SPROULE. The difference is that the gray are cheaper than the white.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Quite so. Nevertheless, the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) insists upon saying that we are paying 47½ cents a pound for these blankets, when he does not know anything about it.

Mr. SPROULE. I say that the Minister has refused to give us the necessary information, and that, consequently, we are obliged to take the information available to us. He told us that these blankets were bought from the same contractor and at the same price as last year, and I have the Auditor General's Report before me, which says that they cost 47½ cents a pound last year.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I said we continued the same contract with the same contractors.

Mr. SPROULE. And at the same price.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I am quite sure that the item quoted from the Auditor General's Report does not cover this case. I have here "W. C. Caldwell, Lanark, $2,380, 9,555½ pounds at 40 cents." In spite of that, the hon. gentleman (Mr. Sproule) says we are paying 47½ cents. I did not suppose it was possible for an hon. member of this House to deliberately misread—

Mr. SPROULE. I call the hon. Minister to order. If he looks at L-77, Auditor General's Report, he will see the item 5,460½ pounds at 47½ cents per pound, and I read that exactly as it is there. I do not want the Minister to say that I am misleading, when I gave the only information that is available to this House.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I did not intend to say that the hon. gentleman misread it intentionally.

Mr. SPROULE. You say "deliberately."

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Well, I withdraw that statement. I have got here the Auditor General's Report for 1897-98, and the item is "W. C.

Caldwell, Lanark, contractor, $2,380 ; 9,555½ pounds at 40 cents.

Mr. SPROULE. What page is that ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. L-44.

Mr. EARLE. Look at L-77 and you will see the very item as quoted by the hon. member for Grey (Mr. Sproule).

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. If the hon. member (Mr. Sproule) took the trouble to look at the heading he would find that the blankets referred to were of special weight, and special quality and specially manufactured for the Yukon.

Mr. SPROULE. What difference does that make when they are bought by the pound ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I do not say the hon. gentleman wished to misrepresent, but when he attempts to criticise and impute all sorts of improprieties to the Minister, he did not take the care he ought to have taken to satisfy himself as to the facts.

Mr. SPROULE. I satisfied myself as to the facts, and I quoted nothing I did not find in the Auditor General's Report.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Now, with reference to the wool trade. I am not very familiar with it, but a friend has handed me a copy of the Dry Goods "Review," in which I find the following:—

The advances in fine wools will, it is said, affect a number of lines of woollen goods in the market. The cause generally assigned for the higher prices of wools is the ravages made by drought in Australian flocks. There were, for example, 61,000,000 wool-bearing sheep in New South Wales in 1891; in the same colony, in 1898, there were just 41,000,000, and it is claimed that several good seasons are required to restore the Australian wool clip to its former position. Other parts of the world, namely, South Africa, South America and the United States, have been producing less, and, in consequence, the market for fine wools has shown a remarkable buoyancy.

Mr. SPROULE. Does not the Minister know that there is none of that kind of wool used in blankets ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I am referring to the general condition of the wool trade which the hon. gentleman spoke about.

Mr. SPROULE. You cannot pull the wool over our eyes.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. This paper goes on to say :

As an illustration of this take the price of the grade known as "60's tops"—that is merino wool that has been combed before being spun into yarn—and the quotations of price in the English markets show the following advances:—1899—Price per lb. in pence : Month of January, 21 ; month of February, 20½ ; week ending March 4, 20½; week ending March 11, 20½; week ending March 18, 21; week ending March 25, 21½; week ending April 1, 22; week ending April 8, 22½; week ending April 15, 24½; week ending April 22, 26.

Continental prices have ruled even higher than this. The manufacturers have, therefore, been forced to threaten advances, which will apply to all markets, including Canada, where British and foreign woollen materials are largely purchased. A Bradford report, of May 20th, says:

"The better inquiry for all classes of finer cross-bred wools is fuller sustained, and, as these afford the only good substitute for real merinos, the hardening tendency is not likely to be checked for some little time

"The lower and cheaper cross-bred wools have been distinctly worst to buy in London, and both wools and yarns of this class have been slightly dearer in Bradford, but, as the supply of these wools is both very large and is also increasing, one can hardly look for any continued advance of moment.

"English reports show that the wholesale and retail trades there have been loath to accept the threatened advances of manufacturers. Competent authorities state, however, that some are doing so, and that all must realize the necessity of paying more, or going without the goods."

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER.
Time.

Mr. TYRWHITT. It is quite unnecessary for the Minister of Militia to tell us that he knows nothing about wool when he reads from a paper quotations of the prices of merino and South Australian wools. Anybody who knows anything about wool at all knows that the blankets supplied to the Canadian militia are manufactured from Canadian combing wool, the cheapest in the market. While Australian wool and Spanish merino might be worth from 25 to 50 cents when imported, Canadian combing wool is only worth 13 cents.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I beg to differ from my hon. friend. The blankets furnished to the militia for a number of years past have been half shoddy, and in the least dampness they stank very disagreeably. I have no doubt that the Colonel himself knows that what I am saying is a fact. But we are pleased to believe that lately the department have exercised some supervision over the blankets, and have, at least, got all-wool blankets. I am not at the present moment prepared to say anything in regard to the contention of the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule), as to whether the prices were the lowest that might have been obtained or not. I understand that tenders had been asked for by the department and quotations obtained from the leading men in the business; but we are now getting all-wool blankets instead of half or three-quarters shoddy, as was the case for many years. Those blankets were very disagreeable to the men, and it was very bad economy on the part of the department, because every militiaman and every other person who uses blankets knows from experience that such blankets, besides being very disagreeable, only last a short time as compared with a good all-wool blanket.

Mr. BORDEN (King's).

Mr. SPROULE. The only trouble with the logic of the hon. member for North Oxford is that it is not based on facts. He says the Government asked for tenders from different firms, whereas the Minister says he did not do so at all.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I understood so.

Mr. CLARKE. Were all those articles for the camps furnished by public tender?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes, all of them.

Mr. PRIOR. Does the Minister say that when the troops go to camp the supplies of bread and meat and all that sort of thing are obtained by tenders asked from certain people, or from the public?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The whole public, invariably.

Mr. WALLACE. I find that the quotations for ordinary Canadian combing wool are 13 and 13½ cents. It costs 10 or 12 cents to manufacture, which would bring the cost up to 26 cents. Yet we find at one place in the Auditor General's Report that 9,000 pounds were got at 40 cents from W. C. Caldwell, and at another place 9,000 pounds were charged at 47½ cents. I would like to know whether these were the same class of goods, whether tenders were called for, and whether these were the lowest tenders. These blankets are supplied to the department for a long distance ahead, so that the Government cannot claim any urgency in the filling of the contract; and 47½ cents for an article that would cost 24, 25 or 26 cents seems to be extraordinary. The Minister told us last year that he did not ask for tenders for supplies for the Yukon, but he went to eight or ten parties in all for four or five different classes of goods, so that in each case only one or two persons were asked for prices. That is no way to do business. We are called upon to vote enormous sums for the militia, and if we knew that the money was economically expended, I am sure that no vote would be given by this House more cheerfully; but we do object, and will object, to money being squandered by the Department of Militia; and when the Minister is called to account in this House, he is not ready with any explanation as to how the money had been expended. He simply asks us for enormous sums of money without any check or safeguard. Evidently he is permitting the officers of his department to run the department and run him too. He comes here without a particle of information in regard to these matters. Somebody throws a newspaper into his hands, when he is called to account by the hon. member for East Grey (Mr. Sproule) for the price he pays for wool, and he says Cape wools and merino wools are rising in price. He says he does not know much about wool. He knows this, however, that Cape wools are not used for making blankets for soldiers or for anybody else, for that matter, but that Canadian long wools are used for the manufacture of these blankets. I am sure that the hon. member for North Oxford (Mr. Sutherland) is quite misinformed when he says that the blankets formerly used were half shoddy, but that now some attention is being paid to their manufacture. I have seen the specifications and forms of tender, and I know many of the men who in years past have been tendering for the supply of these blankets, and I know that for the last fifteen or twenty years pure wool blankets have been required. We have had an excellent inspector of these goods, Mr. Watson, a man thoroughly competent, and I am sure that he would not permit a single blanket to pass that was not pure wool and that did not come up to the specification. So that the department are not getting better blankets now than they did before, and I am quite safe in saying that blankets ought not to be any dearer than they were when wool was at a higher price. But when that was quoted here at 47½ cents per pound and quoted in another place at 40 cents per pound, we say that both those figures are far too high. Go to any retail dry goods store in Ottawa, and I am quite sure you will get an excellent white wool blanket—which is much dearer than a military gray blanket—for less money than either of these quotations. And these quotations should be lower even than the wholesale prices, because they are the manufacturer's prices. Mr. Caldwell, I understand, is a manufacturer of blankets, so that it is manufacturers prices the Government should have had. To pay 47½ cents per pound for blankets for the militia is absurd, and the hon. Minister will have to explain under what conditions or circumstances such an enormous price is paid, before this vote can receive the sanction of this House.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Does the hon. Minister say that the supplies for the camps are obtained by public tender?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Does that rule apply to the camp in Nova Scotia?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. According to my recollection a return was brought down from the department last session, showing that supplies were obtained by asking a selected number of parties to tender and not by public advertisement.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I think the hon. gentleman's recollection it at fault. In the autumn of 1896, there were only a few days to get the supplies, after the camps were determined upon, and it was thought prudent to place the matter of getting the supplies in the hands of three gentleman—Mr. Chipman, of Kentville, Mr. Dodd, the provincial member for the county of King's, and I think the district officer commanding the district. Those three men made the contracts, and that was the only time, either under the late Government or since, when that course was pursued.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. That was the case in my mind, and I did not know whether that system is still followed.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. It has never been followed since. In reply to the hon. member for Grey, I may say that the price 47½ cents was a special price paid for blankets specially manufactured for the Yukon.

Mr. WALLACE. What kind of special manufacture were they?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. They were heavier.

Mr. WALLACE. That would make no difference as they were sold by the pound.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. They were manufactured very hurriedly too. The time was short, and we required them in a few days.

Mr. WALLACE. Supposing so, that would not make them cost any more.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. It was so reported to me. With regard to the other price, 40 cents, I am informed that it is a reasonable price for the quality of goods which we have received.

Mr. WALLACE. How does the hon. Minister know when he did not call for tenders?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. We asked prices from various dealers, and we do not always necessarily give the contract to the lowest tenderer. We asked for samples, and upon the report of the inspector as to which show the most value, a contract may be given. I can assure the hon. gentleman that I have had a great deal of trouble since I have been in charge of the department in reference to this matter. At that time we were being furnished with blankets which were, as an expert said, half shoddy. These were condemned and the contracts closed, and the excuse made by the men who were manufacturing these blankets, was that the price was so low—I think something like 37 cents—that they could not furnish an all-wool blanket. We think it is better economy to supply the militia with good all-wool blankets, it has been my object to do that, and I believe we have done that at the lowest price possible. I am prepared to go before any committee and produce the articles we have supplied to the militia and let any committee competent to judge decide whether we have paid extravagant or unjust prices or not, particularly in comparison with the stuff supplied to the department prior to 1896.

Mr. SPROULE. If the committee could not get any more information out of you than we do to-night it would not be worth your while going before them.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I am very sorry I cannot supply both the information and the capacity for taking it in.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. Minister of Militia was taken in when he gave 37½ cents per pound for hurry.

Militia clothing $20,000

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. This clothing is required to fit the troops out for camp. We found that we were short of certain garments, and it is absolutely necessary to have them ready, and we are giving the work to the contractors, the W. E. Sanford Manufacturing Co., who are this year doing a very large part of our work.

Mr. EARLE. I must call the attention of the hon. Minister to a return brought down last year, in which he gives the prices of various classes of goods furnished, and then at the bottom there is a class of goods, tools, hardware, axes, hinges, &c., and in parenthesis "purchased after competitive tender prices have been received." The inference is that in the other cases, no tenders were received, and I notice there are two sets of blankets supplied by J. W. Woods and W. C. Caldwell.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I think no tenders were asked for in the case of the Yukon blankets. The blankets now under consideration are ordinary blankets used in the camp, and not the special kind used for the Yukon.

Mr. EARLE. Are the ordinary kinds used in camp paid at the rate of 47½ cents per pound?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. No, only those specially manufactured for use in the Yukon.

Mr. EARLE. Purchased without tender?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Mr. BORDEN (King's).

Mr. SPROULE. How then could the hon. gentleman quote figures at 40 cents per pound, and say I was making a mistake. Instead of my making a mistake he was, either inadvertently or otherwise, keeping back information from the House. He admits that the blankets we quoted were for the Yukon.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I pointed to my hon. friend that he ought to have exercised a little caution in quoting that price of 47½ cents. If he had looked at the heading of the page, he would have observed that it was headed: "Supplies to the Yukon," and that the 40 cents were for an entirely different thing and come under another vote altogether.

Mr. CLANCY. Are the blankets for the militia all wool?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Mr. CLANCY. What is the difference between those and the blankets purchased for the Yukon? Both are purchased by weight and both are all wool. They are both purchased by weight, if I understand aright, and both are pure wool, I suppose. Why is one higher-priced than the other?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I am not able to give further information than I have already given.

Mr. CLANCY. Surely, the hon. gentleman must have this information. He pays 40 cents a pound for one kind, and declared they were all wool, and 47 cents for another kind that cannot be better than all wool, unless the hon. gentleman has some silk mixed with them.

Mr. MACDONALD (Huron). There are different qualities.

Mr. CLANCY. I do not think my hon. friend (Mr. Macdonald, Huron) knows much about this matter. He understands his profession a good deal better. In any case, I am not asking him questions.

Mr. MACDONALD (Huron). I suppose a medical man knows about as much about wool as a lawyer, anyway.

Mr. CLANCY. Perhaps the hon. gentleman (Mr. Borden, King's) will answer.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. Bain). We are discussing the item of clothing now.

Mr. CLANCY. I do not suppose the hon. Minister will refuse to answer because we are past the particular item.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I will endeavour to have the information for the hon. gentleman at a later time.

Mr. McNEILL. Am I to understand my hon. friend (Mr. Borden, King's) to say that blankets, supplied under a contract calling for all-wool blankets, would not be all-wool blankets, while those that were bought without contract were all-wool blankets? If so, I cannot understand why that should be. There surely ought to be some officer whose duty it should be to find out if the goods supplied were according to the terms of contract. It seems to me that this whole discussion only emphasizes what has been pointed out before—how very inadvisable it is to have goods supplied to the Government in any other way than by tender and contract. I would like my hon. friend to explain, if he would not mind, why blankets should not be all wool, if supplied under contract which calls for all wool.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I cannot say why it is; I simply said they were not, as a matter of fact. One of the reasons may be, that, when tenders are asked for, people are induced to tender who are not financially strong, who are anxious to get hold of a Government contract, and who perhaps hope to bring political influence to bear. Perhaps they put in a tender at a lower figure than they can eventually manufacture good goods for, and trust to their political pull later on to have these goods paid for, though they are one-third or one-half shoddy. I am afraid that thing has happened in the past, and I have endeavoured to guard against it. But my hon. friend (Mr. McNeill) misunderstood me, if he gathered from what I said that I have given up asking for tenders. In this particular case, and in the case of blankets for the Yukon, tenders were not asked for; but we ask for tenders for all the clothing and all the other necessaries for the force. Occasionally, when we have a favourable contract and want an additional quantity of goods, we simply enlarge the contract. In that case I act on the recommendation of experts in the department that the price which is recommended to me is fair and the goods up to the mark. That is what I intended to convey, and, if I conveyed a different impression to the committee or to my hon. friend, it was done unintentionally.

Mr. FOSTER. I think the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Clancy) is altogether too exigent in asking information from the Minister. The hon. gentleman made it as plain as it could be made. One set of blankets cost 40 cents a pound, and the other set of blankets cost 47½ cents a pound. The first set of blankets were the best that could be bought, all-wool; the second set of blankets were the best that could be bought, all-wool; 40 cents a pound for one, and 47½ cents a pound for the other. Why? Because the second batch was heavier than the first!

Mr. McMULLEN. Those who are informed with regard to the manufacture of woollen goods for the Yukon, know perfectly well that extra labour is put on these goods. I am sorry that the hon. member for North Lanark (Mr. Rosamond) is not here. If he were here, he would not challenge the statement I have made. Forty cents a pound for all-wool blankets is a reasonable price, and, when you buy goods upon which extra labour must be put, as in the case of these blankets for the Yukon, 47½ cents a pound is a fair price. I quite agree that it is a sound principle that tenders should be asked for for all supplies, I care not which party is in power. But, after all, circumstances may arise where it may be necessary to depart from that well-established rule. In the case of these goods manufactured for the Yukon, I do not see how hon. gentlemen opposite, who know that the goods had to be of the best material and the best manufacture, specially heavy and well put together, can say that 47½ cents a pound is too high a price.

Mr. EARLE. There was not a woollen mill in eastern Canada, or in Canada anywhere, that was not manufacturing blankets specially intended for the Yukon trade last year. So, there could have been no difficulty in getting a supply from any of them, except that, possibly, they could not fill orders as fast as they came in. The merchants in the dry goods line in western Canada and on the Pacific coast were all carrying a stock of blankets particularly suited for the Yukon trade.

Mr. McMULLEN. My hon. friend (Mr. Earle) is mistaken. I claim to be a stockholder in a woollen mill, one that manufactures very largely for the Canadian trade, and we did not manufacture anything for the Yukon. The goods for use in the Yukon had to be manufactured in a peculiar way to meet the extreme conditions that prevail in that country, and for that reason you had to use particularly good stock and put extra labour on the goods.

Mr. EARLE. In reply to the hon. gentleman, I would simply say that he must be mistaken. The only difference between the Yukon blanket and others is, that they are heavier and more closely made. But there is nothing special about them at all, and all the large mills in the province were making blankets that were able to make them at all.

Mr. CLANCY. We hear the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) getting up and defending his friends and assuming to know a great deal. I would like to know where the hon. gentleman got his information when he says there was extra labour put upon these blankets. He stated a moment ago they were not made in his own establishment. Now, I would like to know upon what authority the hon. gentleman is speaking when he is defending his friends? If he is a woollen manufacturer and can say from his personal knowledge that they were of a different kind in consequence of more labour having been put upon them, that might be good evidence.

Mr. McMULLEN. In reply to my hon. friend, I will say that I have had samples shown me, I have looked at them, and they were recommended by Mr. Ogilvie as the proper style and character of goods to be manufactured for the Yukon district. I have seen them in Toronto. I wanted to see whether we could produce those or not, and I came to the conclusion that it must require some peculiar kind of machinery, and that we had not the machinery necessary to produce the very thick blankets wanted for that district.

Mr. McNEILL. The hon. Minister of Militia and Defence said a short time ago that when he called for tenders, experience proved that he did not get the best results. If that was the experience with tenders generally, I cannot quite understand why it is that he pursues the system of tendering. But the hon. gentleman says that a man tendering has a political pull and can get his goods through; so, I suppose that a man who supplies goods without tendering does not have any political pull at all. That is a new doctrine.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I think my hon. friend did not catch my observation. I said that when we ask for tenders now we ask the tenderer to supply a sample of what he proposes to give us. The old rule has been to have a certain sample in the department, which was shown to the would-be tenderer, and called the standard. Then, there was often a serious question as to whether the sample supplied was exactly like the standard. But now we ask the would-be contractor to send in with his tender the sample of what he proposes to supply. We find the present plan very much better, because we have men in the department who are experts, and can judge as to the relative value. I said that we did not bind ourselves to accept the lowest tender, but to accept the tender which gives the department the best value for the money. That is the system which I endeavoured to explain a short time ago, and which my hon. friend, perhaps, did not catch.

Mr. McNEILL. The question my hon. friend and I were discussing across the floor of the House a short time ago was whether the system of tendering was the better plan. He was contending that he got better goods without tender. If the political pull gets goods through the department in the case of the old plan, the political pull would get goods through the department under the new plan just as well. The question I was discussing with my hon. friend was as to whether there should be tenders at all, and he defended his not asking for tenders on the ground that he got better material. I say that if he got better material when he did not ask for tenders, it was the fault of the department, and my hon. friend is responsible for the department. They should not accept goods if they were not up to the sample. But I think my hon. friend will see from what has taken place now, how injudicious it is from every point of view, to get supplies without tender, if there is time to get them by tender.

Mr. MOORE. I do not pretend to know anything about the exigencies of the case described by the Minister of Militia and Defence, but I do know a little about blankets, for I have sold them for the last 20 years. I know that 47 cents is too high a price to pay per pound for the best blankets made in Canada. I have no doubt you can go to wholesale houses in the city of Montreal, such houses as Gault Bros. & Co., and buy the best quality of white blankets for 40 cents a pound, or less, and you can get English blankets of the same quality for that price. You can get a pair even of the best blankets made in this country for 40 cents a pound, and in such large quantities for less.

Mr. HENDERSON. Now, we seem to be getting nearer to the point, and a gentleman who knows something about blankets has been able to tell us just exactly what the price is. The price of 40 cents seems to be the outside price for white blankets. We all know that gray blankets are not worth as much as white. It is a well known fact that inferior wool is put into the gray blankets. The finer wool, the select part of the fleece, is used to make white blankets, the higher grade of blankets; but the inferior parts of the fleece, that are not worth nearly so much, are used to make gray blankets. Consequently, if 40 cents a pound is a fair price for white blankets, and from my knowledge and experience I believe it is, then gray blankets should not cost anything like as high as 40 cents. I would ask the Minister who is the examiner of these goods at the present time. Is it the same man who acted as examiner under the previous Government?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The present man is Mr. Robertson.

Mr. HENDERSON. Is that Mr. Robertson of Hamilton?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Mr. HENDERSON. Is he a practical dry goods man?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Mr. HENDERSON. I think it was rather a serious charge that was made against Mr. Watson, who acted as examiner for a great length of time under the previous Administration, to say that he deliberately allowed goods to be put on the Government which were not at all up to the standard. I confess to knowing something of the nature of the tenders that were called for under the previous Government. My recollection is that they had not only to be all-wool, but that they had to be all Canadian wool. Certainly, Mr. Watson would have been very much to blame if he had permitted anything but an all-wool blanket to be supplied under these contracts. From my knowledge of the man I cannot suppose that he did anything of the kind, and I rather fear that perhaps the hon. Minister and the hon. member for North Oxford (Mr. Sutherland) were pulling somewhat on their imaginations when they said that Mr. Watson permitted the Government to be defrauded in this manner by having goods foisted upon them which were half shoddy. I do not think the hon. Minister or the hon. member for North Oxford could have been sincere when they ventured the statement that the goods that were delivered under the contracts of the old Government were largely shoddy and very much inferior to those supplied at the present time. It seems to me that that statement has been made without proper consideration, and I hardly think it is fair to the gentleman who examined these goods on former occasions.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I certainly did not intend to cast any reflection upon the gentleman to whom the hon. member for Halton (Mr. Henderson) refers. If he had not referred to the matter specially I would not have said anything about it. But the fact is that the blankets were being supplied and I think I have abundant evidence of the fact in the department, which were part shoddy. I do not believe that Mr. Watson was aware of the fact; I am quite sure he was not. I do not impute to him any complicity whatever in the matter, but the fact existed, and I felt it to be my duty to employ other inspectors and other inspectors have been employed since, although Mr. Watson has been employed in the department in other matters, in examining other purchases outside of blankets.

Mr. MOORE. I would like to ask the hon. member for North Oxford (Mr. Sutherland), who states that blankets formerly supplied were two-thirds shoddy, if they were white blankets?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. They were gray blankets, so far as I know.

Mr. MOORE. The prices we were quoting on white blankets were more expensive than those on gray blankets. You cannot get any shoddy into a white blanket at all.

Mr. WALLACE. The hon. Minister of Militia and Defence has told the House that Mr. Watson did not know the difference between a good blanket and a bad blanket. I do not think there was ever a more unwarranted statement made by a member of this House. Many of us know Mr. Watson as a scientific expert in that business, a man whose whole time was devoted to seeing that the article was exactly similar to that which the contract called for. I know, of my own knowledge, of hundreds of blankets being rejected because they, for some reason, were not quite up to the standard. Mr. Watson never permitted a blanket to go through that was not up to standard. Mr. Watson never permitted any of those irregularities that are complained of. The hon. Minister says that he does not blame Mr. Watson. Mr. Watson exercised a careful supervision over these articles, and the hon. Minister cannot produce a tittle of evidence to justify the statement he has made. He has stated another fact to this committee, and it is the only fact of any importance, because every other statement he has made on the question of furnishing supplies, has bemuddled this committee rather than afforded any information. He has made the statement that he has discontinued the practice of asking for tenders in the regular way and adopted a new system under which every man has to send in a sample of his own goods at his own prices. Hundreds of samples may be sent in and they may amount to more than the goods that are to be supplied. The thing is so absurd and so unbusinesslike that it does away with the whole system of tendering. The hon. Minister will be able to say: Mr. Smith's goods suit me very much; of course they are quoted at the highest price, but that does not matter. They are just the class of goods we want, and Mr. Smith gets the contract.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Caldwell.

Mr. WALLACE. Mr. Caldwell, I beg his pardon. We will call him Smith this time. If you adopt that principle, and the hon. Minister says he has adopted it, it absolutely does away with the safeguard of tendering. The Minister, in the first place, should know what he wants; he should know the size of the blanket required for the militia, the weight, the colour and the quality. The old plan was that there was a sample and a pattern sealed up, and every tenderer had to supply a blanket up to that standard of colour, quality &c., and had to comply with the specifications in every way. Under the new regulation all this is done away with, and the Minister has unlimited power to give contracts to his friends without regard to prices or anything else except the inauguration of a system of jobbery in the Militia Department.

Mr. TYRWHITT. I did hope that when the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McMullen) assumed the duties of Minister of Militia we should receive some enlightenment on this wool question, and, in speaking of his assuming the duties, I must admit that it is a position for which he is eminently fitted by his experience in Ontario and by reason of his constantly coming in contact with the agricultural community. We know that a strike has lately taken place amongst the trackmen of the Grand Trunk Railway. Strikes appear to be in the air, and the first thing we know there will be a strike in the Cabinet which will give my hon. friend from North Wellington an opportunity of taking his place as Minister of Militia, the present Minister being promoted to a higher position. We have heard a good deal about the waste of time in this House, but we must all realize that we are not only wasting our own time, but the time of the country, or the country is losing the time which is being wasted here. It appears to me that when the hon. member for North Wellington takes his role as Minister of Militia we may expect him to bring this discussion on blankets to a conclusion by admitting that Mr. Caldwell, being a good, staunch member of the party, it was thought to be in the interest of the party to give him this contract for blankets at a good, fair price.

Transport $15,000

Mr. FOSTER. This is an increase of 50 per cent—more.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Fifty per cent, I think. It was $30,000 last year.

Mr. FOSTER. The main Estimates calls for $30,000. Now my hon. friend is calling for $15,000 more, or 50 per cent over the original estimate. This $15,000 is all spent. The Minister last year having a knowledge of his department asked the House to give him $30,000 for transport. He has spent that, and spent one-third more without any warrant, and I suppose he is ready to make another confession.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The $30,000 was expended on the 1st of February, but $15,000 out of that sum was incurred the previous year. We should have taken a vote for $45,000, but next year, beginning even on the 1st of July, I hope the vote in the main estimate will be sufficient.

Miscellaneous and unforeseen expenditure $10,000

Mr. FOSTER. That is also a notable item. Last year the total expenditure under that head was only $14,800, which was large. For the current year the main Estimates ask $15,000, and now the Minister asks $10,000, making $25,000 in all.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Mr. TYRWHITT.

Mr. FOSTER. So far as I am concerned, I will not consent to that passing unless there is a most thorough explanation of it. Patience ceases to be a virtue after a certain time. The money is all expended now. It is a perfect contempt this Minister has for Parliament. The members are to him nothing more than wooden heads, automatons. He does not think any more of them than the Government does of the hon. member for Victoria, N.S. (Mr. Bethune), who supports them and to whom they will not give the patronage of his county. What is Parliament to a Liberal Minister of Militia?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The vote we take for the current year is $15,000, and the explanation of the additional amount required is as follows:—$3,000 of the $15,000, as in the case of the other votes I have mentioned, was used to pay expenses incurred the previous year.

Mr. FOSTER. What expenses; give us the items?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Large sums for printing and stationery were due from previous years, and in addition to that $3,000 were required for the military surveys in July and August.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. What previous years?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. 1897-98.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. That is only one year.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. This vote is used, first, in paying for compensation on account of illness and accidents.

Mr. FOSTER. How much?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I point out to the hon. gentleman that owing to the fact we have called out a much larger proportion of the militia than formerly, these charges are much higher. They include compensation for the horses as well as for the men who become ill in camp. A part of the item is for reconnaissance service, a most important service which is being carried on at the Royal Military College and for which $5,000 is being expended annually. It is a topographical survey of the frontier of this country, and maps are being made which are most interesting and valuable, and it gives a most important training to the young men of the Royal Military College.

Mr. SPROULE. Is that carried on annually?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Mr. SPROULE. Why is it unforeseen then?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. It has been carried on in that way, but I think perhaps it might be separated from this vote. However, the vote is for "miscellaneous" and unforeseen. The third is for legal expenses, the fourth for telegrams and telephones, the fifth for advertising, printing and stationery, and the sixth for sundry expenses. I trust that the vote of $20,000 in the main Estimates will be ample for the next year. We are asking for $10,000 now, which will bring the vote up to $25,000, but at least $5,000 of that was incurred in the year ending June, 1898.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Far from that topographical survey being unforeseen, the Minister will find that it began as far back as 1895, when Captain Lee, of the Kingston Military College, took charge of the survey in the Eastern Townships.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. It is carried on more extensively now.

Mr. FOSTER. The Minister has not given us one iota of information on this matter. He has simply read certain headings under which it is to be expended. He says he wants $10,000, but he does not give the committee the amount he wants under each head. Take compensation: last year it amounted to $437. That is a very small sum. He says that this year more men are called out, and there will be more legs broken and more horses balled, and the like of that, and he will have to pay more. How much more? The hon. gentleman must have made his estimate on some basis; he must know what he wants this money for. It has all, or nearly all, been expended. What has it been expended for? Not a word of information about that. Now, we come to the reconnaissance survey. How much does the hon. gentleman expect to expend for that? How much has been expended during the year?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. $5,000 during the current year.

Mr. FOSTER. When does that reconnaissance survey go out?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. In July and August.

Mr. FOSTER. When did it go out last year?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. In the same month.

Mr. FOSTER. How long was it out?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. About two months.

Mr. FOSTER. Well, what amount was expended? They went out in July, and they came in in September, and all the accounts, without any doubt, are paid. We ought to know how much is paid for that reconnaissance survey.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I am sorry to say that I have not got the figures here; but if my hon. friend expects a statement, I will bring the full statement.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not think we can do that on an item like this. The Minister's duty is to cut his garment according to his cloth—to suit his appropriation to his needs. Every Minister pledges his faith when he asks a certain vote from Parliament. We come to a point where the Minister has expended nearly $25,000, and we ask him how much has been spent on the reconnaissance survey and he cannot tell. He thinks it is within $5,000. Would it surprise him if he had spent only $2,000?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I know that very much more than that is spent. For maps and photographing maps something like $1,500 or $1,800 was spent in connection with the defence committee which sat here last year, and in connection with the staff ride which took place in the west in order to give the officers who have been attending the staff course at Kingston an opportunity to study to advantage. I am sorry to say I cannot give the hon. gentleman the amount.

Mr. FOSTER. I am sorry to say we shall have to let this item stand, it is so gross. The Minister should stop gallivanting around the country. He has had from the 16th of March till the 20th of June to get up the information for these supplementary Estimates, and then he comes and asks us to let them slide through on grace and favour. That is an injustice to the Minister himself. The first thing the Minister should do when he comes and asks for money is to have the information required by the House. The Minister of Militia, being such an awful sinner in reference to his Estimates, should at least have the information; but he does not seem to know a single dollar which he has already expended of this $10,000 vote which he asks Parliament to give him to pay his bills.

Mr. WALLACE. I think any one spending a day in the department could give at least as much information as the Minister has given us this evening on all the items he asks us to pass. He has the assurance, without giving us any explanation, to ask us to pass these enormous sums of money, amounting to a total of over a quarter of a million. He has given no reason that would satisfy a reasonable man, and that is all we ask. We are anxious to make the militia force as efficient as it can be made; but the Minister must give us some assurance that these sums are being properly expended and some information as to what they are being expended for; but he apparently has no care and no knowledge of the details or working of his department. He comes here after a year, when he should be watching the business of that department day by day, and he has to acknowledge and confess on every item that is brought up that he does not know the first thing about it. When the estimates for the supplies were going through, it was pitiful to listen to his staggering attempts to give some facts or justification for his votes ; but it was all simply guess work. And here we have another exhibition of the same kind.

Mr. SPROULE. It has always seemed to me the natural order of things to have the Minister submit an estimate to the House, and have that based on some intelligent data which he would give the House when the House was expected to vote the money. But that is reversed by this progressive Government. They take the opposite course. They first spend the money, then they fail to get the information and they ask the House to take the whole thing on trust. The Minister says he will get the information on concurrence, and if he cannot, he does not care. I have thought that for the last year or more most of the time of these Ministers was occupied in taking jaunts around the country. They seem to be all the time on the tramp, in Pullman cars, or off to the old country, or down to Washington, or to the maritime provinces, or to the Yukon ; leaving their deputies to run the departments. Then, when they come to the House and submit their Estimates, they ought to be able to give some information, but they cannot. They do not seem to know anything about their departments, and ask the House to vote the money on trust every time. That is the exhibition we have had to-night over and over again, and we had a similar exhibition last year. The thing seems to be going from bad to worse, and in another year or two we will have Ministers on the road all the time and utterly ignorant of what is going on in their departments.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Is any money to be spent in the forts of Louisburg and Sydney in making any surveys in connection with the old and new fortifications ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. No. The survey referred to is a topographical survey of the face of the country along the shortest line between this country and the United States, taking in all roads, and canals, and important strategic points on the frontier. It does not refer to any survey of harbours or points not near the frontier.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Did any of the hon. Minister's officers visit these places during the last season ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I think I sent the chief engineer of the department to visit Louisburg, but I think no work has been carried on there. The only point in the maritime provinces where there has been any expenditure is, I think, Annapolis, the old fort of Annapolis.

Mr. WALLACE.

Mr. McDOUGALL. What was the object in sending an officer there to make an examination, if nothing is to be done ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. To see the condition of the old fort, and make a report.

Mr. McDOUGALL. To make a report of the old fort ?

Mr. SPROULE. We have about 4,000 miles of coast line ; can the hon. Minister tell us how much of this has been gone over by that topographical survey ? Is it the intention to make a topographical survey of the whole coast, or what portion has been gone over ? If it be the settled policy of the Government to make a survey of the whole coast, why is this item in miscellaneous amounts ? It ought to be in the regular items of expenditure that take place from year to year. It could not have been unforeseen, and the money must be provided on the basis of some policy. What is the policy ? How much ground has been gone over by the survey, and how far is it intended to carry that survey ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I may point out to my hon. friend that this is confidential. We are not supposed to publish to the world what we have done, or are doing, or propose to do, in these matters of defence. The survey is a confidential one, which is not shown to everybody, but I will be glad to show it to the hon. gentleman.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. It has evidently been concealed from the Minister, too.

Mr. FOSTER. That is the only green spot the Minister has found to-night. Do I understand him to say that a portion of that unforeseen money went for the defence commission.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. No, there is a special vote for that.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. This is for making photographic copies of these maps which have been made by the young men engaged in the survey, and for use partly by the defence commission, and partly by the men who were engaged recently in the staff rides, which my hon. friend has heard of.

Mr. GILLIES. In connection with the question of my hon. friend from Cape Breton, I may bring to the attention of the hon. Minister the fact that some of his predecessors in office had taken steps to have some repairs made in order to preserve the old forts at Louisburg. I think that I had some conversation with the hon. Minister himself on that subject, and he told me that he did intend having something done in that connection, but I fear that, in the multiplicity of other matters during the past year which have engaged his attention—the Yukon and other distant regions—he has overlooked that very interesting portion of the Dominion. I would like to ask him, if he really intends to have something done for these old forts, because the spot is most historic, and filled with reminiscences of the French régime, and, besides, these forts are standing monuments of the bravery of the British forces, and should not, therefore, be allowed to fall into utter ruin. I would, therefore, ask the hon. Minister, if it is the policy of his department, to have the necessary appropriations made for the preservation of these works, and thus do some credit to the department over which he presides.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I must confess that this is a most interesting question to me, and, I think, quite an important one. I think it very desirable indeed that these old historical landmarks should be preserved, and, so far as the sum voted by Parliament would permit, I feel disposed to see that expenditures are made in this direction as rapidly as possible.

Mr. McDOUGALL. Apart from the view of preserving those old fortifications, in view of the fact that that part of the country is now, as regards fortification and protection, in a state very different from what it was in formerly, the hon. Minister would not be doing anything out of the way, if he went a little further, and did something in the shape of ordinary protection to those particular forts, irrespective altogether of what is necessary to keep them in preservation.

Mr. BELL (Addington). This item is of great importance. In reading down the list, I find that I can explain to any of my constituents who may ask me for an explanation, the item of clothing. I could also make a very good excuse for the item of transport; but, when we come to miscellaneous and unforeseen, and we are told that a certain amount was expended on a topographical survey, which is confidential, it seems to me that, apart from that consideration, the hon. Minister ought to give us some explanations that would enable us to justify the expenditure of this amount of money. There is no department I feel more anxious to maintain than the Department of Militia and Defence; there is no Minister I would like to protect more than the Minister of Militia, and I hope he will be able to give us some information which will enable me to justify him, when I am asked to explain what this expenditure is for.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. Shall this resolution be adopted?

Mr. FOSTER. Oh, no; this item must stand until we get the information.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I hope the hon. gentleman will not ask to have the whole item stand on that account. My hon. colleague has promised to furnish all the information on the main Estimates, and there will be ample opportunity to discuss all the points. Hon. gentlemen opposite must see the advisability of having these items passed within the current year, and I hope they will not press unduly the point now taken, when they have the pledge that on the main Estimates every point may be raised in connection with these items.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. Minister of Finance should have used a little persuasion with his brother Minister before this. He knows that it is a sad exhibition for a Minister to come down with his items, after he has had a whole calendar year to get ready for them, and then confess to the House that he is not able to give the explanations that are really required. What has the hon. Minister been doing, nights and days, and days and nights, Sundays and week days, up to this moment? This sort of thing is becoming chronic, and is really evolving itself into a complete contempt of Parliament. In the first place, the hon. Minister says: I am not going to be bound by the votes I have obtained from Parliament and my department, but will spend just as much as I like, irrespective of those votes, whether the matter be urgent or not. Who is going to say that this reconnaissance is urgent? What enemy has been coming into the country? So it is with most of the other items. The Minister said: My party is strong, and will see me through; when I want $15,000, I will apply to Parliament, but, if I like, I will spend $10,000 more, without the authority of Parliament, and rely on my party seeing me through. Then I will go on and spend $10,000 more. I know my party will carry me through, and as to those fellows on the other side, and as to Parliament, in these days of progress, Parliament, at any rate, does not count for much. That is the first thing the Minister says, and he and other Ministers are getting into the habit of making appropriations, over spending, and then, just at the close of the year, saying: We want this money to meet our expenditures. And then, to add insult to injury, he wants us to pass it without giving any information. I call the Finance Minister's (Mr. Fielding's) attention to it. His hon. colleague does not even know how much the reconnaissance cost, or how much has been spent—he does not know anything about it. We have a duty to ourselves to perform, and the Minister (Mr. Fielding) should have been spending some hours of patient labour with his brother Minister (Mr. Borden, King's) behind him, to get him drilled up for the elementary work of giving a few explanations of this simple item. We must make a stand somewhere, and I do not see any better place to make it.

Mr. CLANCY. Can the hon. gentleman (Mr. Borden, King's) tell the committee if these gentlemen are permanently employed is making the reconnaissance surveys. I see here the names of Mr. English, Mr. Anderson and Mr. Bogert.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Capt. English is one of the professors of the Royal Military College, and these others are cadets in the college. One set of men is taken out, perhaps, two years, and then a new set is taken out.

Mr. CLANCY. I am not questioning the pay they are receiving. They are given a certain number of days, one at $8 a day and expenses—Capt. English—and the others $3.50 a day and expenses. Are these cadets?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Mr. CLANCY. What work do the cadets do?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. They make a complete survey of the country as to the roads, the location of every house and building, the height of every hill, and so on—it is a most complete topographical survey and it requires scientific knowledge; and it is at the same time, very valuable to the country. It is also of great utility to the young men themselves. I do not think that the prices paid are out of the way for the work that is done.

Mr. MACDONALD (King's, P.E.I.) Do I understand that these men are cadets getting their education at the college?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes, this employment is during vacation.

Mr. MACDONALD (King's, P.E.I.) And when they get through a certain course of training others are taken in their places?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Mr. MACDONALD (King's, P.E.I.) So they are getting their training in the college and the Government is paying them for the work they do besides. That looks awkward to me.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. As I understand, there are two points involved here. One is the improper practice of asking a small vote and expending a much larger sum, and some discussion has taken place upon that. It seems an extraordinary condition of things. Another is that the Minister, having spent for this financial year $10,000 more than the vote of $15,000, is unable to tell the committee anything more, practically, than he has spent that sum of money. He is unable to give even the heads of the expenditure. The topographical survey represents a comparatively small portion of this amount, as the Minister will admit. Now, I had some experience as a Minister of the Crown, and I cannot understand a Minister being left in the position before this committee that the hon. gentleman occupies—without the information usual on an occasion of this kind, where explanation of expenditure is to be made. It is a matter of a very short time for a clerk. The Minister has all the assistance required, and when a Minister is to ask for supplies, the first thing he naturally gets is a statement of the expenditure that has already been made and an estimate of the heads of expenditure for the coming year. And the hon. Minister will see that he puts himself in a position where reasonable men may suspect him in this connection, when so simple information, information which he would reasonably expect the House to want when he is asking sanction for this expenditure, is withheld or not given. Now, he knew to-day that he would have to ask the House for this extraordinary vote, to ask not only this side of the House, but hon. gentlemen behind him, to practically indemnify him for an absolutely illegal act. Perhaps, that is too strong a word, but, at any rate, the House will understand what I mean.

Mr. FOSTER.

The PRIME MINISTER. Hear, hear.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Yes. The hon. Minister has exceeded the authority given by the Supply Bill of last year and by this committee. This that is now before us amounts to nothing more nor less than an indemnity at the hands of the House for spending more than he was authorized to spend. He is not asking the House for authority to spend money, the money is gone. What he asks is that, under the circumstances, we approve of his having anticipated what he believed to be the view of the House. Now, unless we are going through a mere farce, unless this is a sort of slot machine affair, we are entitled—no, it is not a matter of being entitled, but we are bound—to ask for the items of expenditure, barring, of course, anything that the Minister says is of a confidential character in connection with defence, details of plans, &c.; but nobody asks that these be exhibited. It seems to me we have a very important duty before this item passes, and it is to get some ground for arriving at the conclusion that, under the circumstances, the expenditure ought to have been incurred or, having been incurred, can fairly be approved by the committee.

Mr. FOSTER. I do not want to stay here and do no work. I think the Minister of Finance had better drop this item. This item would not have taken 15 minutes if the information had been at hand. I made my protest on the over expenditure, as I did in all the other cases. There was some information in the other cases, there is none in this.

Mr. SPROULE. Before six o'clock there was certain information asked for which was not forthcoming, and on every item we have dealt with since then, we have been treated in the same manner. The hon. gentleman does not appear to know any more about his department than a man living in Africa. Now, there was about $47,000,000 voted last year to carry on the affairs of the Government, and if every Minister had over expended in the same proportion as the hon. gentleman, we would have expended up to the present time pretty close on $60,000,000, and it would have been done with the same propriety as the Minister has made this expenditure, that is to say, without any authority. The information the hon. gentleman has given the committee does not justify us in passing this item. It is not enough for him to say that he will bring down this information on concurrence, because practically the money is spent already. If the Minister is either too lazy, or too indifferent, or does not know enough to get up the information in his department, then I submit he should resign and allow some other person to be put there who would furnish the committee that information before they are asked to vote the money.

Mr. CLANCY. For the same service in the year 1896, $13,133 were spent; in 1897, $13,048; in 1898, as appears by the Auditor General's Report, $14,803. Now the hon. gentleman comes to that same year, 1898, having exceeded the former year by at least $1,000, and asks for $10,000 more with practically no explanation. I am afraid the committee would have to close their eyes and turn their backs upon their duties if they assented to that item going through without the hon. gentleman giving the fullest explanation.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Some hon. gentlemen opposite seem to talk as if supplementary Estimates were an entirely unknown quantity. I have been in the House for a number of years, and I never knew a session of Parliament in which there were not supplementary Estimates for the current year. The ex-Minister of Finance charged that I was almost committing a crime because I failed to estimate last year the full amount of money that I required for all the services. I venture to say that it has never happened in any year that any Minister has been able to get through the year without coming to Parliament and asking a further sum as supplementary Estimates. That never happened in the hon. gentleman's time, nor under the Mackenzie Administration. In a country like this, which is growing, and in a department like this, with constant new orders necessary to be promulgated, and constant changes in the administration of the military branch, it is absolutely impossible to estimate very closely. I have made inquiry just now as to this item, and I am told that a large part of it is for printing and stationery, $10,000 or $12,000 of the whole vote. I am further informed that until the accounts are in for the end of June, it is impossible to say exactly or even approximately what amount will be required. The money that is voted will not be spent if it is not required, and I am informed that this vote is required. I have told the committee that a portion of the vote for the year, $15,000, was used, as I have admitted has been customary in my department, in paying expenditures incurred in the previous financial year. That has happened in this vote to the extent, I am advised, of $5,000. As I said before, I am asking for a vote in the main Estimates of $20,000, which I am informed will be required for the next year. I want to close up completely the accounts of this year so that no portion of the next vote, as has happened in the past, shall be required to liquidate any of the liabilities of this year. So that, taking $5,000 difference out of the vote which was passed in the previous year, and adding that, there will be left $5,000 to be used in the present year, making the expenditure of the present year $20,000, which is the amount I estimate will be sufficient for next year. I do not want to ask any favours of the hon. gentleman at all. I dare say that their criticism is intended to be fair, although I think that their characterization of me and of the administration of my department is, perhaps, a little extreme. I think that they couple their criticisms sometimes with terms, as to gadding about the country and so on, that they might very well spare. But I say to the hon. gentleman that this money, if voted, will be spent in a way that will promote the welfare of the militia. It will be submitted, as the hon. gentleman knows it must be submitted, to the eye of Parliament and to the country. This vote, I believe, is required. I have given the best information as to the direction in which the expenditure is to take place, and I should be very glad if the hon. gentleman would allow this vote to pass. I promise him on the main Estimates, where there is a similar item, that I will give him the fullest details in reference to this which can be got in the department. I will take pains to have a statement made out to-morrow.

Mr. CLANCY. As the hon. gentleman is going to have a statement out to-morrow, I would like to ask him to have a statement made out in regard to the printing. He has just stated that the necessary printing will amount to about $10,000.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Or $12,000.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. That is for the whole year.

Mr. CLANCY. Ten or twelve thousand dollars for the whole year. During the last three years the printing cost $5,000 for one year and $6,000 for the two subsequent years. I hope the hon. gentleman will be in a position to explain why it has jumped up to $10,000 or $12,000.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I will be able to explain it.

Mr. FOSTER. That is what we ought to know now. Does the hon. gentleman think that it is sufficient to come down to the committee in order to get it to pass an estimate, to say two things, first, that this expenditure is necessary, and, second, that it will be submitted to the eye of Parliament after it is expended. If these two statements are sufficient to carry a vote through, what a fine time a Minister would have and what an utter, screaming farce it would be to call two or three hundred men together to vote supplies! When the hon. gentleman states that about three or four hundred dollars was all that was necessary for printing and cannot explain why the estimate for printing is 50 per cent more than last year's vote, and 60 per cent more than the preceding year, I think we should know what has happened to make this difference.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. A new edition of the rules and orders, which is a large volume, has been issued. The present General Officer Commanding desires to communicate with the officers of the militia by means of the printing press and twice a week he issues orders. They are really daily orders, but they are only issued twice a week. This costs money. I looked into it very carefully before I authorized the expenditure, and I thought it was well worth while to try the experiment, and so agreed to it. This is one of the causes of the increase. The rules and orders is another, and in the changes which are going on now, and the establishment of new branches of the service, a very great deal of printing has been necessary. I believe it will be found that it is a good use to be made of public money to print fully the instructions and directions so that they may be placed in the hands of every officer in the country. This is what is being done and that will account for a large part of the expenditure asked for in this vote.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Borden, King's) is simply wasting the time of the committee. It is impossible for you to get the supplementary Estimates through to-night. It is impossible to get your supply Bill; you cannot get it. What is the reason that the hon. Minister wants to stick at this item and obstruct the whole business of the committee? He says that he will bring a statement down to-morrow. Let that item stand and we can go on with the others, but for heaven's sake do not let us stultify ourselves by passing items without information.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). Let us reserve that item and take the next, relating to the Royal Military College.

Royal Military College, including an increase of pay to Prof. Worrell, $200, and to Prof. Chartrand, $200..... $10,400

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. This item is due to the fact that the attendance at the college has been considerably larger than was anticipated. It is really a matter of book-keeping, because the money which the candidates pay in comes back into the treasury or to the Receiver General. Really, this does not involve any expenditure of money, because it balances on the other side of the account.

Mr. SPROULE. How much was received from the fees of students attending the Royal Military College last year?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. About $17,000.

Mr. FOSTER. $17,000 extra.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. No.

Mr. SPROULE. How many students attended the college last year?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Seventy-five.

Mr. SPROULE. Does each pay a fixed sum or is it on a scale proportioned to the number of subjects that each takes up?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. No, they pay a fixed sum.

Mr. SPROULE. How much is that sum?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Three hundred dollars for the first year, and $350 afterwards.

Mr. BELL (Addington). I see that additions are to be given to Prof. Worrell and Prof. Chartrand. What were their salaries previously?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. One thousand dollars.

Mr. SPROULE. How many years is the term composed of?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Three.

Mr. SPROULE. The first year $300, the second $350, how much for the third year?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. $350.

Mr. SPROULE. That is, $300 for the first year, $350 for the second and $350 for the third. There are 75 students. How many first, second and third year men? Perhaps if the hon. gentleman has not the information now we will get it when the main Estimates come up.

To purchase of Hamilton rifle range..... $3,000

Mr. FOSTER. Is this the total value of the range?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. No, there was $5,000 voted last year, and it was found that $3,000 more would be required. I can give the hon. gentleman the exact information. That is to purchase the site.

Mr. FOSTER. $8,000 for the site?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. No, $3,000 for the site. It will cost $5,000 to construct the range. There has really been nothing done, because we have only now expropriated the land.

Mr. FOSTER. You will not need this vote then.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The $5,000 was voted specially for construction.

Mr. FOSTER. I can hardly conceive that before you got your land, you would so word a vote that it would be all for construction, and not to pay for the purchase of the land out of it.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. If the hon. gentleman desires it there is no particular urgency about this.

Mr. FOSTER. It is just putting so many words in your Supply Bill, because you cannot use the money.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We will reserve the item.

To complete payment for London property.. $1,090

Mr. FOSTER. Does this finish that?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

The PRIME MINISTER. That is one of your legacies.

Mr. FOSTER. Somewhat.

Defence Scheme Committee..... $6,100

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. A Governor General's Warrant was obtained to meet this expenditure. The defence committee was composed of Major General Leach, Capt. White, of Royal Navy, Col. Dawson, of the Imperial Army, and Major Lake, former Quartermaster General here; all Imperial officers. This amount is required for their subsistence, transport, and expenses. There is embraced in this estimate the sum of $685, being for 137 days' pay at $5 per diem, to Mr. Charles Panet for services as secretary of the commission; and $123 for 123 days' pay at $1 per diem to Mr. Claire Hugg for services as messenger.

Mr. FOSTER. These allowances were fixed by the British Government?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. Why was this not foreseen and voted last year?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. It was the subject of correspondence between the Imperial Government and this Government after the close of Parliament.

Mr. FOSTER. Carried.

Arms, Ammunition and Defences—

For accoutrements..... $100,250

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. This is really a revote. There was an item of $150,000 voted last year which we expected to be able to use, but the Auditor General declined to allow it to be used because the expenditure was not incurred prior to the 30th June last. I am asking for $100,000 now, and in the supplementary Estimates of next year the $50,000 will be included, so that we are asking the revote of the $150,000.

Mr. PRIOR. Is this vote for the Oliver Equipment?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Mr. PRIOR. Would the Minister tell us whether this equipment is finding favour in the permanent corps and the other corps, to which it has been issued?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. We took a great deal of pains with reference to this matter. A dozen sets of the Oliver Equipment and two or three other equipments were made and sent out to the different depots and thoroughly tested, and the reports we received were that the Oliver Equipment was unquestionably the best. On the strength of these requests it was recommended by the staff here and adopted, and I have heard no complaints up to the present moment.

Mr. PRIOR. It seems to me that although the straps may be very good they have the old fashioned pouches, and any militia man who has been in the field knows that with the small ammunition in use at present for the new rifle, where men are going at the double or lying down, it is impossible to keep these cartridges in the pouches. I have heard complaints as to this from a great many, and I was anxious to know whether any such complaints had reached the department. Does the hon. Minister know if the Oliver Equipment has been sent to the rifle corps in the interior of British Columbia?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I believe it has not yet been sent.

Mr. PRIOR. I hope the Minister will see that it is sent right away, because they are very anxious to get to work.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. The arms have been sent, I think.

Mr. SPROULE. Is there any portion of this vote used for purchasing arms?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. No.

Mr. SPROULE. Perhaps this might be a convenient time to get some information from the Minister, as to why he gave his sanction to the sale of a large number of the old rifles at 25 cents each.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Sanction was given upon the recommendation of Col. Lake, Quartermaster General; and for the purpose of relieving the department from the care of this large quantity of rifles, which were obsolete and useless and expensive to keep. As soon as it was determined to sell these rifles, tenders were invited in all the leading newspapers in the Dominion. I had occasion, in reply to a question to read to the House, the advertisement which was issued, and which, I think, was current in all the leading newspapers for two months. Tenders were received from a dozen different firms, and the highest tender was accepted. I may say that all the rifles, so far as I know, were purchased in Canada, and are in Canada now.

Mr. SPROULE. Then, there must be something wrong about the Auditor General's Report, because the last information was, that they were sold to a firm in New York.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. That was a small lot which were sold prior to the sale of this large lot. The same firm tendered for the large quantity, but at a price very much lower than we received.

Mr. SPROULE. I did not understand that there were any tenders asked at all.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes; I read to the House the advertisement and a statement of all the newspapers in which it appeared, and I think it ran for two months.

Mr. SPROULE. I remember some years ago applying to the department for rifles for cadets, and the department would not grant them unless the parties would enter into a bond to be responsible for the return of these rifles, and the price put upon them was $15 apiece. You could not get one of them for less than that amount. So that to sell them for 25 cents apiece seems extraordinary. If it had been known in the country that they could be purchased for that sum, I think a great many would have been purchased in the country.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. That is undoubtedly true. I do not know what the bond to which the hon. gentleman refers to was; but at that time that was the standard rifle of the country. It has since become obsolete, a new rifle having taken its place, and it could not be used, because it would involve the danger of mixing two kinds of ammunition. It is useless, and worse than useless, because it would entail expense on the department to take care of it, and we require the room in our stores and armouries in order to take in the new rifle. I may say that we have still a large number of the old rifles. The hon. gentleman has referred to the granting of rifles to schools and cadets. We are doing that every day, and I think we have an ample number for all purposes of that kind. Certainly, 30,000 rifles still remain unsold. We are glad to issue them to all cadets free.

Mr. PRIOR.

Mr. PRIOR. Would the hon. Minister supply public school cadets in British Columbia with these rifles, if application were made for them?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. Yes.

Mr. PRIOR. I am very glad to hear that. While this vote is on, I would ask the Minister, if he will look into the matter of these pouches. I would not like to set up my opinion against that of the General, but I am strongly of opinion that cross-belts, such as Australians and ordinary sportsmen use, are far the best for soldiers to carry their cartridges in. These belts have a little pocket for each cartridge. I would like the Minister to inquire about them.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE. I am very much obliged to my hon. friend for calling my attention to that; and if he, as an experienced officer, would be kind enough to write me a letter, pointing out the particular thing that he suggests, I would be very glad to take it up.

Amount required to pay cost of maintenance of prisoners in Yukon territory	$10,000
--	----------

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. The average number of people in the cells of the guard-rooms last year was about 60, and the cost of maintenance was about a dollar a day.

Mr. PRIOR. I have seen an item in the papers about sending some of the long-term prisoners to the coast, and keeping them in New Westminster.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. They are not to be sent until after a certain period.

Mr. BENNETT. Although it is not included in this item, I would like to ask the Solicitor General a question relative to the superannuation of county court judges of Ontario who have exceeded seventy-five years of age. A little while ago, the statement was made in the press that such was to be the policy of the Government. I think I asked the question in the House early in the session, and the answer was, that it was pending consideration. I think it is very harsh to keep these judges, some half dozen in number, with a sword hanging over their heads; and it is even harder on the gentlemen of the same political faith as hon. gentlemen opposite who are making pilgrimages here, looking for judgeships. It should be known what the policy of the Government on this subject is.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. My hon. friend will admit that that pilgrimage has not begun since 1896, but has been in operation for a number of years. My hon. friend will remember that last session a Bill passed this House for the purpose of superannuating judges who had reached seventy-five years of age. That Bill met with a very sudden end in the Senate, and, so far as I know, it is not the intention of the Government to renew that legislation this session. After that Bill met its fate, I think there was some discussion in regard to allowing these judges to retire on full pay; and, not speaking for the Government, but speaking merely as a member of the bar, I think that any judge who has reached seventy-five years of age, should be entitled to retire on full pay.

To provide for living expenses of one judge in Yukon territory $1,500

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I sent to the Solicitor General a memorandum in order to call his attention to papers which I would be glad to have, in connection with this and the following item, that is to say, a copy of the Order in Council or any correspondence fixing the allowance for living expenses.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. The request is a proper one, and no doubt between this and to-morrow afternoon I will be able to furnish the papers my hon. friend asked for.

To pay Hon. Mr. Justice McGuire travelling expenses on the occasion of his return to the Yukon territory to resume his judicial duties in the North-west Territories.. $293

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. There is no statutory provision which would cover these expenses, and therefore we take a special vote.

To pay amount for supplies to Judge Dugas in the Yukon..... $957 35

Mr. FOSTER. What are these supplies?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I will bring down the account to-morrow.

To pay for law-books, &c., and freight thereon, obtained for the use of the Bench and Bar of the Yukon Territory.. $2,500

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. It is the intention to provide for the Yukon such a nucleus of a law library as has been provided in the North-west Territories, and I think it is very essential and proper that we should do so in order that the judges who go into that country, and cannot possibly bring in a supply of books, should have access to the books they may require.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Hear, hear.

To pay for stationery, &c., and freight thereon, obtained for the Yukon Territorial Court..... $500

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. This is for typewriting supplies, stamps and paper, and cost of freight for the use of the clerk.

Contributions to Canadian Law Library, London, Eng..... $250

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. This is a contribution by the Dominion Government to the law library which was established in London to be used by the Canadian lawyers.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Exclusively.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. It is used practically by the Canadian lawyers, but not exclusively, because I remember last summer seeing English counsel engaged on Canadian cases consulting our books. I saw there the reports of the Supreme Court, all our statutes and some French authorities from the province of Quebec.

Mr. FOSTER. Where is this library kept?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. Upstairs in the High Commissioner's office. There is a contribution from the province of Ontario, and I think in some of the other provinces also.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. That is a very good idea, I think.

Expenses of Chief Justice Strong in connection with sittings of Judicial Committee of Privy Council..... $1,000

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Is the Government in a position to make any statement with regard to Chief Justice Strong's position—whether it is proposed in the ensuing year that he shall retain his position as chief of the Supreme Court of Canada here and perform these duties as he did last year?

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. There is no change.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. It does seem to me that unless the experience of the Chief Justice has been to the contrary, it is a very small sum to cover the purpose intended to be covered by a gentleman holding his position in London as a member of the Judicial Committee and living there. It is putting him in a very invidious position, compared with the ordinary law lords with whom he has to associate. As one member of the House, I am willing that, not an extravagant, but a fitting allowance, should be given to the man who goes abroad to represent Canada in the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I shall take note of what my hon. friend says, and would like very much, if possible, to make an increased allowance. Chief Justice Strong renders very important service to us over there. His knowledge of the law of the province of Quebec is very great, and he is in a position, when cases from that province come up, to render very valuable service to it and the whole Dominion. When we give him less than the allowance given to a counsel who goes over to plead a case it seems to me we are practising false economy. I am sure that the right hon. Prime Minister sees the force of what has been said on both sides and the necessity of making some arrangement to have the amount increased. Of course, I am not supposed to know what is going on on the other side.

For professional services, to Mr. C. J. R. Bethune $75

Mr. PRIOR. Is that the member for Victoria?

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. They would not give him a dollar.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. The Solicitor General may have occasion to be absent, and expressed the desire that we might take up his main Estimates, and I understand that hon. gentlemen opposite have given their consent to this.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. The hon. Solicitor General spoke to me and asked me to speak to other members of the bar on this side. Those to whom I spoke were quite willing to expedite the passage of these Estimates, under the circumstances, reserving one item for the purpose of general discussion. It does not matter which item we reserve.

Circuit allowance, British Columbia.... $13,000

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Is there any special item in these Estimates or in contemplation to provide for the sitting of a full court at Vancouver, where it now sits, as well as at Victoria?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I am not aware of any provision having been made, but I think it would be proper that such should be made.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Has there been any correspondence between the local and the Federal Governments on that score?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I am not in a position to say.

Enforcement of the Allen Labour Law... $4,000

Mr. CLANCY. Who has been appointed agent of the Justice Department at Wallace-

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER (Pictou).

burg, Ont., for the purpose of enforcing the Act? The Solicitor General will probably call to mind that I asked last session if an agent had been appointed there, and the reply was "yes." I have failed to learn from that day to this who that agent is.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I cannot give the name now, but if the hon. gentleman will send me a memorandum I will have the information at question time tomorrow.

Mr. CLANCY. Can the Solicitor General say whether an agent has been appointed or not?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I cannot. I know that the department has agents in all the judicial districts of Ontario, and my impression is that they are instructed to see to the enforcement of the Alien Labour Act. The infractions of the law are first reported to the Department of Justice which then decides whether action is to be taken, and instructions are sent, not generally, but in each particular case. I will be happy to give the hon. gentleman the information tomorrow afternoon.

Mr. CLANCY. A request was made last year that an agent should be appointed at Wallaceburg, Ont., to enforce the law, and after some delay the Solicitor General told us that an agent had been appointed there. So far as I know no agent has been appointed.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. If I said last year there was an agent appointed at Wallaceburg it was because I had the information from the officials of the department. I certainly would not have given my hon. friend that answer if I had not authority for it. However, I will verify the statement and be able to answer to-morrow.

Exchequer Court of Canada..... $10,650

Mr. GILLIES. I asked the Solicitor General last year with regard to making provision for the more speedy trial of actions arising out of collisions at sea. According to the practice that obtains in the province of Nova Scotia, and I believe in the other provinces as well, the chief justice is judge of the Exchequer Court, in all actions formerly tried by the Admiralty Court. The Solicitor General agreed with me last year that this was most inconvenient for persons residing at a great distance from the capital of the province, where the chief justice resided. If a collision takes place on any part of the coast, the party complaining must go to Halifax and have the necessary affidavits made there, and the warrants issued from there, and by the time he has that done the vessel against which the claim is made may have gone to sea and is for ever beyond the jurisdiction of the court. Last year I suggested that the county court judges might be made judges ad hoc, and the convenience of the public would be served by such appointments. In our province there are seven county court judges who could be made judges ad hoc, giving them power to attach any vessel, and then all subsequent litigation could take place before the Exchequer Court judge. If the Solicitor General made such a provision it would not entail any further expense upon the department, nor would it interfere in the slightest degree with the emoluments of the Exchequer Court judges in the different provinces, and it would be a great convenience to the public.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I quite appreciate what my hon. friend (Mr. Gillies) says. The hon. member for Yarmouth (Mr. Flint), as well as himself, have already discussed the matter with me several times. I can only say, as I said last year, that this is a condition of things that ought to be remedied. If a collision occurred on any part of the Nova Scotia coast under circumstances such as the hon. gentleman mentioned, there would be a case of hardship which must in the end defeat justice. I think the difficulty might be obviated by having a deputy registrar at different points on the coast where a case was likely to occur, who, under the admiralty practice, has authority to issue in the first instance a warrant, and when the warrant is executed the whole matter can be tried in the regular way before a judge. There is no possible inconvenience in that. It is a grievance that ought to be remedied. When my hon. friends brought this matter to my attention last year, I discussed the matter with the Minister of Justice, and then understood that some provision of this sort would be made. But I think the registrar of the Admiralty Court at Halifax has authority to appoint deputy registrars.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. No, he has to be constituted by Order in Council.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. Then, the matter might be disposed of in the manner suggested by my hon. friend. But, as I said before, this is a hardship which I think can easily be remedied, and ought to be remedied. Last year when we discussed it fully I think the member for Yarmouth made some representations to the department in writing.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. In the case of British Columbia, which is very similar, the Solicitor General will recollect that two months ago, at the request of the chief justice, who is the local judge in admiralty, I asked him to discuss with the Minister of Justice the propriety of obtaining an Order in Council to constitute Vancouver a registry. There we have two judges, we have Judge Martin at Victoria, who is the local judge, and we have the chief justice at New Westminster, and he suggested in court that this subject should be brought to the attention of the Government. It is the very inconvenience which is now found on the Atlantic coast, but with this difference, that we have the two judges in the cases mentioned, and all that is needed is an Order in Council to constitute Vancouver a registry.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. That has been done in Ontario, if I mistake not.

Mr. GILLIES. The Solicitor General will remember that the Admiralty Act passed in 1891 provides for these deputy registrars or courts. It does not require any legislation here at all.

Mr. CLANCY. I understand that the papers and correspondence relating to the case of Thomas Maher, who was kidnapped by an official of the United States, have been laid upon the Table two or three weeks ago. Is it the intention of the Government to take any steps on the part of Maher to demand reparation for the ill-treatment he received?

Mr. COWAN. I may remark that I brought this matter up in the House a few weeks ago. I was in communication with Maher, and also with his solicitor in Detroit, and had an interview on the subject with the Department of Justice to-day, who decided that they would take the matter up immediately. I may say that the cause of the delay—I do not know whether the Solicitor General is aware of the fact or not—was on account of the boat being subsequently seized by the American customs officer. The House may remember that Maher was arrested on the Canadian shore and taken from his boat. The boat remained on the Canadian shore, and the American official went to the Canadian side and took the boat, and it was sold in December last for $15. I was trying to get information through Maher and his Detroit solicitor of what had become of the boat, and I only received that information last night, and had the interview to-day with the Department of Justice in connection with it. While I am on my feet I would like to draw the attention of the Department of Justice to the Admiralty Court for the province of Ontario. If I mistake not, the Solicitor General is in error in thinking there are several such courts in Ontario, there is only one. We in the west have considerable inconvenience by reason of the regulations in connection with the Admiralty Court there. We have a deputy registrar at Windsor, and the general registrar at the city of Toronto. When a writ issues in a case where both the solicitors reside in the city of Windsor, or in any western town, in making the search is difficult to find where process was issued and the nature of papers filed. It does seem to me that we might utilize the county judges which we have in Ontario, some of whom have had wide experience in admiralty practice. I know, for instance, that the senior judge of the county of Essex had rather an extensive practice in admiralty. It seems to me that Ontario should be divided into several districts, with one central admiralty district and one judge for each district. That would save the expense of the judge travelling all the way from Toronto to hear these cases. With all due deference to Judge McDougall, one of the best judges on the Bench, at the same time I think his standing is no higher than that of the senior judge of the county of Essex. This is a regulation that might easily be made, with a saving of expense and it would certainly facilitate the practice both of clients and solicitors in the west. I may also state that the Western Bar Association have laid the matter before the late Government time and again, and passed a resolution to that effect.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I quite agree with the view taken by my hon. friend of subdividing the admiralty district so far as that can be done conveniently. I would call his attention to what takes place in England. There you have but one Admiralty Court for the whole of England, and that court is in London, notwithstanding that London is not by any means the great seaport town of England. You must necessarily have in these matters some sort of unity. The best we can do is to follow the precedent set on the other side.

Mr. CLANCY. I would ask if the hon. member for South Essex (Mr. Cowan) is the mouthpiece of the Justice Department. The Solicitor General has not answered my question.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I beg my hon. friend's pardon. I think he has not lost anything by the delay, as the hon. member for South Essex has much more recent information from the Department of Justice than I have. If the hon. member for Bothwell (Mr. Clancy) will allow me, I will adopt what my hon. friend from Essex has said and repeat the statement he has made upon his authority, because I have not looked into the matter myself.

Mr. CLANCY. The hon. member for Essex did not make any statement that throws any light upon the question that I asked. I asked if it is the intention of the Government to take steps to procure compensation to Maher for his illegal arrest?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I think that is a question that ought to be put to the right hon. Prime Minister. I do not think it is a matter which affects the Department of Justice particularly. That would be a matter of policy for the Government to decide as to whether or not it is their intention to take proceedings in reference to making a claim for the outrage—I cannot find any other word to qualify it—to which this gentleman was subjected, and if my hon. friend will repeat the question to the Prime Minister or allow me to call his attention to it, I may be able to have authority for the answer.

Mr. COWAN.

Mr. QUINN. Before the item is passed, I would like to draw the attention of the hon. Solicitor General to the question of the Admiralty Court at Quebec. We have no Admiralty Court and no office of the Admiralty Court in Montreal, and I know that numerous petitions have come to the Government asking that they establish, at least, an office of the Admiralty Court in Montreal. Now, we not only have to go to Quebec to argue a case, but we are obliged to engage counsel in Quebec to take charge of a case arising altogether in Montreal. I think that if my hon. friend is going to accede to the request of the hon. member for South Essex (Mr. Cowan) he should do the same thing in regard to establishing the registrar of the court in Montreal through whose office procedures might be filed in order to promote the trial of cases originating at Montreal.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. This is a question which, I am aware, is engaging the attention of the members of the bar in our province, and there undoubtedly exists reasons, so far as Montreal is concerned, why this change should be made. The suggestion was that we should appoint a deputy registrar of the Admiralty Court, who would be a resident of Montreal, and would issue writs there in the usual way, and that the judge of the Admiralty Court should go to Montreal whenever required for the purpose of trying cases there. That would be one way to remedy the difficulty, and I understand that this suggestion received the approval of the bar of Montreal. I quite appreciate that the members of the bar should be granted the request that the hon. member for St. Ann's division, Montreal (Mr. Quinn) makes.

Mr. PENNY. I am not a lawyer, but I wish to say that this question has had a very great deal of attention in Montreal, and that it is the desire of the merchants and those who have to do with shipping, that an Admiralty Court should be established in Montreal. It has been a very great source of annoyance, not only to lawyers, but also to merchants and those who have to do with shipping to go to Quebec whenever they have had any matter of business with the Admiralty Court. I think, if it is possible to establish an Admiralty Court in Montreal it would be a great benefit to all those who have to do with the shipping business.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I propose that we reserve this item No. 51, on the arrangement that was mentioned, and pass the other one—that we reserve the general item.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. We will take up No. 52 and allow No. 51 to stand.

Mr. SPROULE. We can deal with any item on that one.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. The whole matter remains open.

St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary..... $93,100

Mr. BERGERON. Is the commission over?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I am under the impression that the commission has ceased to sit, and that its report has been made.

Mr. FOSTER. Has it ceased to draw pay?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. It will when we get the supplementary Estimates through. There is a small item of $53.

Mr. BERGERON. How much did it cost altogether?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. The hon. member for Jacques Cartier (Mr. Monk) asked a question as to what this commission has cost, and I have it here in the expectation that the question will come up to-morrow, but I may give the information now:

James Noxon—
Remuneration, $2,520 ; disbursements, $752.43.
O. K. Fraser—
Remuneration, $2,320 ; disbursements, $566.56.
D. A. Lafortune—
Remuneration, $2,340 ; disbursements, $39.75.

Mr. CLANCY. That is only for last year. Can the hon. gentleman give us what it cost altogether?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. That, I think, is all the expense connected with the St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary. Some of these commissioners acted at Kingston also. I will look up the question and see.

Mr. CLANCY. What is the total amount of the whole investigation, including Kingston?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I cannot give that; the question is put thus:

What is the total cost to date of the St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary commission of investigation?

The answer is: $18,076.17.

Mr. QUINN. Does that close the matter?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I really think it does. There is a small item in the supplementary Estimates of $53.

Mr. QUINN. I am only asking the question by way of suggestion to the hon. Solicitor General. I think it would be well to have a receipt in full from these gentlemen.

Dorchester Penitentiary $49,300

Mr. SPROULE. I think we should have some explanation of this increase of $1,200.

Mr. GILLIES. There was an investigation in this penitentiary. Can the hon. Solicitor General inform the committee what was the cost of this investigation?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I cannot give the cost of the investigation. There has been considerable delay in connection with this matter. The Order in Council was passed in September, 1898, appointing the Hon. David Laird to act as commissioner, but he declined to accept the position. Subsequently Mr. Daniel Macdonald was appointed by Order in Council on the 22nd of October, 1898. Mr. Macdonald was notified of his appointment on the 26th of October, 1898. He having also declined to act Mr. E. N. Bill was appointed by Order in Council of the 24th November, and notified of his appointment on the 3rd of December. The commission has been in session since that time. I have sent down for an interim report, but I have not yet received it, as to what has been done.

Mr. GILLIES. What is the cost of it?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I cannot give that, because the remuneration which is to be paid has not been fixed. There is to be one commissioner and a secretary. The secretary's allowance is $10 a day while engaged on commission work.

Mr. GILLIES. Has the commissioner been paid anything yet?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I cannot answer that. My impression is that he would not have been paid anything yet, because the rate of his per diem allowance has not been fixed.

Mr. BERGERON. Do you say that the secretary gets $10 per day?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. That is my information.

Mr. BERGERON. How much is the commissioner to get?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. Something in the same proportion.

Mr. GILLIES. Who is the secretary?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. James Friel, of Dorchester.

Mr. QUINN. If the hon. gentleman will pardon me for going back to the item of Dominion police, I would like to ask if it is the intention of the Government to grant the petition of the police for increase of pay?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I am not aware of such an application. If there is one it has not been brought to my notice. There is an item of $2,200 in the supplementary Estimates to provide for extra remuneration on account of extra services rendered recently.

Mr. QUINN. I understand a petition has been sent in by the police asking for increase of pay.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. It is quite possible without my knowing anything of it. I am asked the reason for the increases in Dorchester. There is an addition of $400 of salaries, because a guard has been added to the staff. There is an increase of $800 in maintenance caused by increase of population. The discharge expenses have decreased $300 and the working expenses increased $500. The reason for this last is because the wood on the reserve is becoming scarce and it is necessary to have a greater quantity of coal. Industries are being decreased $200, because the requirement of the farm are not so great next year.

Manitoba Penitentiary..... $41,200

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. In this there is an increase of salaries of $1,100, because two guards have been added to the staff. There is an increase of $400 in maintenance, due to increase of population. I may say that the average population last year was 80, while the present population is 111.

Mr. CLANCY. This is the growing time.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. Unfortunately yes. Working expenses have decreased $700. This saving is effected by the use of a more economical kind of coal.

Mr. QUINN. I suppose the increase of maintenance is due in each case to the increase of number.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. Not always. On the whole, there has been a very great saving, notwithstanding that the population has increased from 1,100 at which figure, it stood in 1894, to 1,460, the expenses have decreased from $464,000 in 1894 to $356,000 last year.

Mr. QUINN. In maintenance ?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. In expenses. I think cost of maintenance was decreased also. I cannot speak from memory, but if the hon. gentleman will consult the report of the Minister of Justice, he will find the cost of maintenance, and I think he will learn that it has decreased at St. Vincent de Paul and Kingston—that is per capita.

Mr. QUINN. So the increase would be on account of the increase of number ?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. Yes.

British Columbia Penitentiary $47,700

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. There is here an increase of $2,000. The inspector reports to me that this amount is needed to provide building material to commence the building of a new wing. The institution has been overcrowded and some 50 convicts have been transferred to Manitoba. The construction of additional accommodation will occupy several years and the present amount is required to meet the requirements of the present year.

Mr. BERGERON. Who makes the repairs ? At St. Vincent de Paul the prisoners did it.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. And it was an extremely costly luxury to use the services of the prisoners there. It may be that the work of the prisoners could be utilized to advantage in some ways in connection with the construction, but the wall at St. Vincent de Paul cost a great deal more than it should have cost because the prisoners were employed on it. About 60 per cent of the stone paid for never went into the wall, being actually destroyed by the prisoners or caused to disappear in some way. I cannot say whether the prisoners are or are not employed in this work in British Columbia.

Mr. BERGERON. It is generally done.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I know it, but I cannot say whether it is done in this case.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Who has succeeded the late warden ? Was he an officer already in the service or was he a new man brought there ?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I have no present recollection of the change.

Mr. SPROULE. The hon. Solicitor General tells us of prisoners being transferred to Manitoba. How does he keep his accounts, in that case as between Manitoba and British Columbia ?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I do not think there would be any accounts as between the two penitentiaries. The accounts of the two would be kept clear. If a prisoner is transferred from British Columbia to Manitoba the increased cost would fall upon Manitoba.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. You are bringing convicts from the Yukon now.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. To British Columbia, yes. These transfers happen every day, convicts being moved from one place to another where there is better accommodation.

Mr. QUINN. If the hon. gentleman will pardon me for going back to the item for Dorchester. I see he asks an increase of only $1,200, but there is an item of $6,000 in the supplementary Estimates to meet the expenses of Dorchester penitentiary.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. That is to meet the expenses of the commission that has been in progress since the middle of December. The commission consists of one commissioner, and Mr. Friel is the secretary. The remuneration of the commissioner has not been fixed yet, but the secretary is paid $10 a day while engaged in the work of the commission.

Mr. QUINN. That is not part of the regular expenses ?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. No ; I trust we are going to have an end of that.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. The hon. Solicitor General says that the pay for the commissioner has not been fixed. I would call his attention to the general Order in Council of September 21st, 1897, fixing the pay of these commissioners at $10 a day. It is in the Auditor General's Report.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. I have not the Auditor General's Report before me ; but if the hon. gentleman will look at it I think he will see that this refers to St. Vincent de Paul and Kingston.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. No, it is general.

Rate of remuneration which should be allowed commissioners appointed to hold inquiries or investigations into public matters or departmental business under chapters 114 and 115 of the Revised Statutes of Canada.

And it provides that it shall not exceed $10 a day.

Mr. FOSTER. I think, Mr. Chairman, that we have done a good day's work, and, as it is now half-past twelve, the hon. gentleman would consult the convenience of the whole House, if he would consent to adjourn.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We have been making some progress in the last fifteen minutes, very encouraging and gratifying progress ; but in the early part of the day we did not do very much, and I suggest that we go on with the supplementary Estimates, with the understanding that any item that is controversial be held over.

Mr. FOSTER. I am sure my hon. friend will not ask us to come here at three o'clock and ask us to stay after 12.30, especially as we have to go to work at ten o'clock in the morning.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. We are not making very great progress with these estimates.

Mr. FOSTER. That is not our fault.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Whatever the cause may be, it is very slow ; and, unless we can make a greater degree of progress, I think it is only reasonable that the House should be asked to sit later than we have been doing. If we are to get this session through at a reasonable time, we shall have to work harder.

Mr. FOSTER. Human nature has its limits.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. The limit used to be three o'clock in the morning under the hon. gentleman.

Mr. FOSTER. The hon. gentleman may go on if he chooses, but I can assure him that he cannot hope to make very much progress.

Mr. GIBSON. I would like to say a word. When the hon. member for York, N.B., (Mr. Foster) was Minister of Finance, and objections of this kind were taken, he was always ready with excuses, and he made us stay till two or three o'clock in the morning. There are other members of this House who are anxious to get through, and I appeal to the Opposition, if it is fair for them, when a certain hour arrives, to ask the Government to stop the work just to suit their particular convenience. Hon. members of this House know that we have been compelled to stop here till three or four o'clock in the morning by the same hon. gentleman who wants us to adjourn at twelve o'clock.

Mr. BERGERON. You kept us here for five months.

Mr. GIBSON. I am sure that the country is watching the proceedings of this House ; and we ought to be willing to go on at a reasonable hour, like this, with the business in order that the session may come to a close by the middle of July. As one member of the House, I am ready to inconvenience myself, by staying here and attending to the business of the House as long as any one else ; but we ought to do it in a reasonable way, and I protest against the Opposition blocking the business of the House, when an hour has arrived when they want to go home. I remember being told that if we objected going on with work, we might quietly take our hats and go home. I have seen times when this House argued by the hour over matters of no value, involving only a few dollars, and then, when the last days of the session were reached, millions were voted without any consideration whatever. I am sure that, in the interest of the House and of members who attend to their parliamentary duties faithfully and honestly, the members of the Opposition ought to be willing to make better progress.

Mr. FOSTER. What is the use of the hon. gentleman talking about progress being made, when we have put through the whole of the estimates of the Justice Department from simple grace and favour ? The hon. gentleman knows that those estimates usually take up a whole day's sitting. We have allowed them to go through, simply because we want to make some progress, and wanted also to convenience the Solicitor General, who is going away ; but, when we have done that, and have reached this hour, we should not be asked to sit longer. I remember often, when Sir Richard Cartwright would simply close down his desk, and say : Human nature has its limits, and I will go no further. I do not want to be quite so emphatic, but I must protest against our sitting any longer.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. What is the answer to the hon. member for Lincoln, that Parliament usually, at this period, when the Estimates were before us, has sat until two o'clock, and very often three, in the morning ?

Mr. FOSTER. I dare say, we will sit that late before this session is through ; but, when we have passed a generous slice of the Estimates at this hour of the night, with the idea of going home, I do not think that hon. gentlemen on that side ought to ask us to sit here longer.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. At the risk of differing from some of my colleagues, I will accept the hon. gentleman's suggestion ; but, at the same time, I must intimate that we shall hereafter have to ask the House to sit much later than this, if we are going to expedite business.

Mr. FOSTER. And if the Ministers have their information all ready.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. I am afraid all the information that can be furnished will not satisfy the hon. gentleman.

The committee rose, and reported progress, and the Chairman (Mr. Bain) took the Speaker's Chair.

Mr. BERGERON. This is entirely out of order. The Deputy Speaker cannot delegate his powers, and we should have here in the Chair either the Deputy Speaker or the Speaker himself. The Deputy Speaker cannot delegate his powers to any member of the House.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. As my hon. friend (Mr. Foster) is anxious to go home at this hour, I will, without discussing the point, move the adjournment of the House.

Mr. FOSTER. We cannot adjourn.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE. Then, we can go on with the other estimates.

Mr. BERGERON. You cannot move back into committee.

Motion agreed to, and the House adjourned at 12.30 a.m. (Wednesday).

Mr. FOSTER.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY, 21st June, 1899.

The SPEAKER took the Chair at Three o'clock.

PRAYERS.

ST. VINCENT DE PAUL PENITENTIARY COMMISSION.

Mr. MONK asked :

1. What is the total cost to date of the St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary commission of investigation ?
2. Are there any claims still unpaid in connection with said commission, and what are said claims ?
3. What amount was paid to each commissioner ?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL (Mr. Fitzpatrick). 1. $18,076.17. 2. Estate of the late E. A. Meredith, 12 Sundays previous to passing of Order in Council allowing Sundays, $120 ; R. J. Eilbeck, payment for 53 days at Brockville by order of the commission, $8.50 per day, $344.50 ; O. K. Fraser, supplementary account, $54.55 ; total, $518.05. 3. Jas. Noxon, remuneration, $2,520, disbursements, $752.43 ; O. K. Fraser, remuneration, $2,320, disbursements, $586.56 ; D. A. Lafortune, remuneration, $2,340, disbursements, $39.75.

ATLIN LAKE DISTRICT—BREWERY LICENSES.

Mr. McINNES asked :

1. Have any brewery licenses been issued for the Atlin Lake district ?
2. If not, why not, and when does the Government intend issuing licenses for that district ?
3. Are there any breweries now operating in the said district ?
4. Has any brewery plant been imported into the said district with the sanction of the Government ?

The MINISTER OF INLAND REVENUE (Sir Henri Joly de Lotbinière). 1. No. 2. As Atlin Lake is an unsurveyed and not regularly settled locality, under the provisions of section 7 of the Inland Revenue Act, the Department has no right to issue any licenses until specially authorized by Order in Council. The Government does not consider that, up to the present time, the conditions of that section of the country would justify the issuing of licenses. 3. None that the Government is aware of. 4. No.

RIFLE RANGES IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Mr. McINNES asked :

1. Has application been made for a rifle range in the city of Victoria ? If so, when ?
2. Has any petition been received against establishing the range at Oak Bay ? If so, from whom, and what are the grounds of objection ?

3. Has any petition been received against establishing the range at Esquimalt? If so, from whom, and what are the grounds of objection?

4. Did the Government expropriate any of the land covered by the new D. R. A. range at Rockcliffe, near Ottawa?

5. Is the Government aware that the old range at Clover Point, Victoria, has been closed?

6. What action does the Government propose taking to provide a rifle range at Victoria?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Mr. Borden). 1. Yes, 25th of November, 1898. 2. Yes, from "The Victoria Golf Club"; Fred Peters, on behalf of Oak Bay Hotel, and Sir Charles H. Tupper, Robert Cassidy and other residents of Victoria. The reasons alleged were: (a) A range would destroy one of the most beautiful areas of residential properties; (b) a rifle range there would be a distinct source of danger to those travelling along the provincial government's road; (c) passing on the links of the Golf Club, it would be also a danger to golf players; (d) the road is exposed to ricochets of wide shooting; (e) the nature of the ground would not tend to the development of good shooting; (f) it would be dangerous to steamers and shipping going between Trial Island and the shore. 3. No. 4. Yes. 5. It is no more used by the Department of Militia. 6. The matter is now under consideration.

DREDGING IN RICHMOND COUNTY, N.S.

Mr. GILLIES asked:

1. What amount was expended in dredging the harbour of Descousse and around the public wharf there from the 1st day of June, 1891, to the 23rd June, 1896?

2. What amount, if any, has been expended in dredging this harbour since the 23rd June, 1896?

3. What amount was expended in dredging at the two entrances of St. Peter's Canal, viz.: at the entrance, at Bras d'Or Lake end, and also the entrance at the Atlantic end, between the 1st day of May, 1891, and the 23rd June, 1896?

4. What amount has been expended in dredging at the points mentioned since the 23rd June, 1896?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). 1. $3,610.58. 2. No expenditure. 3. This work is under the control of the Department of Railways and Canals. In 1892-93 dredging was done at the Bras d'Or entrance to the canal to the amount of $1,067.03. 4. No expenditure by this department.

WEST ARICHAT BREAKWATER.

Mr. GILLIES asked:

1. What amount was expended in repairs upon the breakwater at West Arichat, county of Richmond, N.S., between the 1st day of May, 1891, and the 23rd June, 1896?

2. What amount has been expended upon this breakwater since the 23rd June, 1896?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). 1. $2,015.88. 2. $700 was voted last year, of which we spent $285.15 during the present fiscal year, and the work is now proceeding with the balance.

BABIN'S COVE WHARF.

Mr. GILLIES asked:

1. What was the cost of construction of the public wharf at Babin's Cove, Arichat, county of Richmond?

2. When was the said wharf constructed, and what was the full amount expended thereon from the 1st of October, 1891, to the 23rd June, 1896?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). 1. $3,155.04. 2. The wharf was commenced in December, 1893, and completed in October, 1894. The total expenditure to date is as stated above.

DESCOUSSE WHARF.

Mr. GILLIES asked:

1. What amount was expended in the construction and repairs of the public wharf at Descousse, in the county of Richmond, between October, 1891, and 23rd June, 1896?

2. What amount has been expended on the said wharf since 23rd June, 1896, up to the present date?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). 1. $5,693.66. 2. No expenditure.

EMPLOYMENT OF JOSEPH CLARKE.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER asked:

1. Was Joseph Clarke employed at any time in the Yukon district by the Government?

(a) If so, in what capacity?

(b) Was he at one time in the Mounted Police force at Fort Macleod?

(c) What was his record in the force?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton). 1. Yes. (a) Stenographer to the Gold Commissioner; (b) yes, from August, 1892, to 19th April, 1893. He was in the police force from the 25th March, 1892, to 19th April, 1893; (c) fair, until he deserted on 19th April, 1893. He surrendered himself on the 9th August of the same year, and was fined $100. He was supposed to have been induced to desert by another member of the force, who deserted at the same time. I was not aware of the fact that he had been in the Mounted Police or that he had ever before been in the Government service until the question was put by the hon. member.

HOPE ISLAND LIGHTHOUSE-KEEPER.

Mr. BENNETT asked:

1. Who is the permanent keeper of the Hope Island lighthouse, Georgian Bay?

2. If any person has been so appointed, when was he appointed, and upon whose recommendation?

2. If there is no permanent appointee to such position, is it intended to appoint a person permanently, and if not, why not?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). 1. Charles Vallée. I think I told the hon. gentleman the other day that he had not been appointed permanently; but I find that he was appointed by Order in Council of the 20th April, 1899. He was formerly assistant to Mr. Marchildon, and he was placed in charge by the inspector of lights, when Mr. Marchildon was suspended. He was recommended by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

VANCOUVER DRILL HALL.

Mr. PRIOR asked :

1. Has the Government awarded the contract for the erection of the drill hall at Vancouver, B.C. ?

2. If so, to whom and at what price ?

3. How many tenders were received for the work; from whom were they received, and at what figures ?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). The contract has not yet been awarded. The matter is before Council, and, pending the awarding and execution of the contract, it is not usual to make public the names of the tenderers nor the amounts of the tenders.

EMPLOYMENT OF E. McKEOWN.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER asked :

1. What was E. McKeown (H-26, Auditor General's Report) employed to do in the Yukon provisional district ?

2. What was his record according to official report and records, if any, in the Department of Justice ?

3. What was his occupation when appointed ?

4. How much public money has been paid this officer to date ?

5. If he has left the service who now performs his work ?

6. Does any record exist which shows what work was done by this officer, and if so, where is it ?

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton). 1. E. McKeown was employed in detective work in the Yukon provisional district. 2. The Justice Department has no record. 3. This is answered by the answer to No. 1. 4. $2,881.15. 5. He has left the service. I do not know whether any one is employed in the same capacity or not. 6. I presume his record would be with the Commissioner of the territory. There is no record here in the department.

THE ACTIVE MILITIA FORCE.

Mr. FOSTER asked :

(a) Is the Department of Militia and Defence aware that some of the majors of field batteries in brigades have been asked to resign on the ground that they are commanding officers whose tenure of command had expired ?

"The Militia Act," Chap. 41 of the Revised Statutes, section 22, which reads: "Of what corps the active militia shall consist."

Mr. BENNETT.

The active militia force shall consist of regiments and troops of cavalry, regiments and field batteries of artillery, companies of mounted infantry, companies of engineers, regiments and batteries of garrison artillery, battalions and companies of infantry, and naval and marine corps in such proportions as Her Majesty appoints; and the strength of each such regiment, troop, battery, battalion, company or corps, shall be regulated and officers appointed thereto from time to time by Her Majesty.

(a) 1. Does not section 22 of the Militia Act distinctly authorize the establishment of a larger corps or unit than a field artillery battery ? (b) Were not regiments and companies of garrison artillery previous to 1893, called brigades and batteries just as field artillery corps are now called brigades and batteries ? (c) Is not a field artillery brigade under this section 22, a corps or unit like a battalion, a field battery, a corps like a company or (the unit called) a garrison battery in section 22 ?

2. Have not a field artillery battery and a garrison artillery company (increased establishment) nearly the same establishment (except horses), namely, one major, one captain, three lieutenants, and a total of one hundred of all ranks ? (b) When two, three or more field or garrison artillery batteries are united to form (organize) a larger corps or unit, are the majors of the field artillery commanding officers and the majors of garrison artillery not commanding officers ? (c) Are the lieutenant-colonels of field artillery brigades, commanding officers ? (d) Are the majors of field artillery brigades, commanding officers ? (e) If so, under what regulations or provision of the Militia Act is the status of field artillery officers different from the garrison artillery officers ?

3. Inasmuch as in the list of regimental establishment of the permanent force and active militia for the financial year 1898-99, issued with general order dated July 1st, 1898, the 4th, 7th and 9th Field Batteries have no establishment, have no existence except as part of the 2nd Brigade, are the three majors on the establishment of the 2nd Brigade, commanding officers ? (b) If so, under what authority or regulations ? (c) And where, in the regimental establishment, is the independent unit they command ? (d) Do they appear in the list of officers commanding corps, militia lists, January and April, 1899 ?

4. By Regulations and Orders, Militia of Canada, 1898, paragraph 76,—as far as practicable with due regard to the public service and military requirements are not all promotions in corps by seniority (b) And do not the majors of the cavalry, garrison artillery and infantry, succeed by seniority to be lieutenant-colonels ? (c) Are the field artillery majors of a brigade less efficient, or why should they alone not succeed by seniority to be lieutenant-colonels ?

5. If it be true that the strength establishment of the 2nd Field Artillery Brigade is 306, the strength establishment of the 2nd Battalion is 668, what senior captain of the 2nd Brigade was appointed 11th June, 1884, senior captain of the battalion was appointed 10th April, 1885 ? (b) Are the majors of the 2nd Brigade so much less efficient than the majors of the 2nd Battalion, or why should they not succeed by seniority like the infantry majors to the command of their corps; a corps of less than one-half the strength of the 2nd Battalion ?

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Mr. Borden). I have divided these various questions into subdivisions, alphabetically arranged, and beg to reply as follows:—A. Yes. 1. (a) Yes. (b) Yes. (c) No.

2. (a) Yes. (b) Yes. (c) Yes. (d) Yes. (e) There is no difference.

3. (a) Yes. (b) The custom of the militia of Canada. (c) It is not shown. (d) Yes.

MR. COSTE'S TRIP TO THE YUKON AND ENGLAND.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. When motions were called, I was unavoidably absent, having been called out of the House, and with the unanimous consent of the House I would beg to move:

That the papers laid upon the Table of this House respecting the trip of the chief engineer of the Public Works Department to the Yukon and his trip to London, as per Ref. No. 118, be referred to the Select Standing Committee on Public Accounts.

Motion agreed to.

CLAIMS AT MACAULEY POINT, B.C.

Mr. PRIOR. I wish to ask the hon. Minister of Militia and Defence (Mr. Borden) if he will kindly hurry up those papers that were ordered with regard to the claims at Macauley Point in British Columbia.

The MINISTER OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE (Mr. Borden). I am very much obliged to my hon. friend for reminding me of this. The papers were handed me yesterday, and with the permission of the House I will lay them on the Table.

DISALLOWANCE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA STATUTES.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). My hon. friend from Victoria, B.C. (Mr. Prior) called my attention yesterday to a return which was brought down a few days ago, and which he said was incomplete in two particulars. First, that it did not contain certain letters written by the Department of Justice, and second, that it did not contain the despatch of the Colonial Secretary, despatch No. 92. I now bring down the papers from the Department of Justice that were missing, and beg to inform my hon. friend that he will find despatch No. 92 at the bottom of page 26 of the return.

SUPPLIES FOR JUDGE MAGUIRE AND JUDGE DUGAS IN THE YUKON.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. Might I ask the hon. Solicitor General if he is able now to comply with the request I made in the Committee of Supply last night for any written instructions relative to the living expenses and the supplies provided to Judge Maguire and Judge Dugas in the Yukon?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL (Mr. Fitzpatrick). The sub-items of item 73 upon which I promised to furnish last night additional information are the following:—

To provide for living expenses of one judge in the Yukon territory.....	$1,500 00
To pay amount for supplies, Judge Dugas, in the Yukon	957 35

No new Order in Council has been passed making provision for the living expenses of the judge of the Yukon territory, but there is in the statute authority under which an Order in Council can be passed; and the Minister of Justice instructs me to say that this first vote is taken, subject, if it is passed, to this money being used for the purpose of meeting the living expenses of the judge in the Yukon territory under the statute. As to the amount of supplies for Judge Dugas, when Mr. Dugas was appointed, he received his travelling expenses which enabled him to go into the Yukon territory. After he arrived there, he found it necessary to make a purchase of some additional supplies which he thought were necessary, and he reported that these supplies which, if he had purchased them in eastern Canada would have cost $230 to $250, actually cost the amount here set down. After the bill for supplies was sent to the Department of Justice, that the judges might consult further about the matter, the bill was sent to the commissioner for investigation and report. When the bill is returned, if it is found in order, it will be paid; and this item is taken for the purpose of paying the bill when it comes back duly certified.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. I quite follow the Solicitor General. May I further inquire under that head, in view of what was stated in the Committee of Supply, whether there is any correspondence touching the question of living expenses or the question of supplies, with either of the judges?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. There is none with reference to the living expenses, but there is a personal letter written by Judge Dugas to the Minister of Justice on the subject of supplies. I saw that letter to-day. I am not sure that I have authority to say that I would bring that letter down without consulting the Minister. It is not, if I am properly informed, on the departmental file yet. It accompanies the account, and explains to the Minister why the liability was incurred. I see no objections to producing the letter.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. On that, no doubt, we shall have further information to-morrow. My point, as the Solicitor General understands, was to ascertain exactly what the understanding was with either of these judges as to the emoluments of his office. Of course, Judge Maguire was a judge of the North-west Territories, and was directed to proceed to the Yukon. Judge Dugas was a magistrate, I believe, in the city of Montreal. I desire to know whether when this gentleman undertook the duties in the Yukon, there is any official arrangement with them or understanding that they should be given anything over and above a certain amount, and, if so, I want to see the written record of that arrangement.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. There is no written record and no written arrangement on the subject, but there was an understanding that they should have living expenses. I understand that Judge Maguire took his place at the general mess, and will make no claim to any special amount, except as Parliament may vote a special amount to enable him to go to and from the Yukon country. Judge Dugas' claim is for some additional allowance above the ordinary mess.

Sir CHARLES HIBBERT TUPPER. There was no written document in regard to their having the right to live at the public mess?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL. No, I understand not.

ANTI-JAPANESE AND ANTI-CHINESE LEGISLATION.

Mr. PRIOR. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I may say that the right hon. leader of the Government (Sir Wilfrid Laurier), who has just answered a question in regard to disallowance of a British Columbia statute, evidently misunderstood my request. I invite the attention of the right hon. gentleman to the letter that he says he has brought down. What I asked for is the despatch No. 83 from the Governor General to Mr. Chamberlain, not from Mr. Chamberlain to the Governor General. I want the despatch brought down that inclosed the opinion of the Department of Justice. I do not see that here.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). I think it is there. I know nothing of it and will have to inquire. I will give the answer to-morrow.

DELEGATION OF MR. SPEAKER'S POWERS.

Mr. BERGERON. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I wish to bring to your notice, Mr. Speaker, a matter which you might explain. Last night the House was adjourned by Mr. Bain, of Wentworth. I do not know whether the powers under which he acted were delegated by the Deputy Speaker; if so, it was not in order. I was told afterwards that his powers were delegated by you. Your word will explain the whole matter.

The PRIME MINISTER. You do not want us to be sitting here until this time?

Mr. BERGERON. No, but we want to know whether things are carried on in the proper way or not. Mr. Speaker has the right to delegate his powers, but the man to whom he delegates them has no right to delegate them to another person.

The PRIME MINISTER. That is a very fine point.

Mr. BERGERON. A very nice one.

The PRIME MINISTER. A fine one, I said.

Mr. BERGERON. We want to know whether, yesterday, as a day, counts for something or not.

Mr. SPEAKER. I may explain, for the information of the House, that before I left the Chamber during last evening, about ten o'clock, I specially requested Mr. Bain, of Wentworth, who was presiding over the committee, to take the Speaker's Chair for me, after the committee had got through its work and close the House for me. I asked him personally, and, of course, I had an absolute right to do that in the absence of the Deputy Speaker. If he had been here, he would have done it, no doubt.

ENFORCEMENT OF THE ALIEN LABOUR LAW.

Mr. CLANCY. Before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to ask the Solicitor General if he can conveniently give me an answer to the questions I put last night when the House was in committee?

The SOLICITOR GENERAL (Mr. Fitzpatrick). In answer to the hon. gentleman's (Mr. Clancy's) first question, I may say that the agent of the department at Wallaceburg, appointed in connection with the Alien Labour Law, is Mr. O. Allen.

ARREST AND IMPRISONMENT OF THOS. MEAGHER.

The SOLICITOR GENERAL (Mr. Fitzpatrick). I may also inform my hon. friend (Mr. Clancy) that, as appears by the papers brought down by the House, there has been considerable correspondence between the Government of the Dominion of Canada and the authorities of the United States in regard to the case of Mr. Meagher. As my hon. friend knows, what amounts to an apology has been offered by the United States authorities for any violation of the personal liberty of Mr. Meagher, and with that apology or explanation, the Government of the Dominion of Canada has declared, through the home authorities, that it is content. In addition to the question of personal liberty, a question comes up respecting a boat taken from Mr. Meagher. The attention of the department was drawn to that only within the last two days. No request was made before by Mr. Meagher, or by anybody for him, that the Government should take any further steps in the matter, and it was impossible to take steps until a request was made by him or some person acting for him. The question of the boat was brought up the day before yesterday, and will be dealt with by the department.

STEAMSHIP COMMUNICATION BETWEEN PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND AND GREAT BRITAIN.

Mr. ALEXANDER MARTIN (East Queen's, P. E. I.) I would like to ask a question of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher), or, as he is absent, of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Sir Louis Davies), who, I understand, is acting for him. I would like to ask if the Government has made any arrangements for providing cold storage and steam communication between that province and Great Britain? Last year and the year before last, I brought this question before the House, and I got the answer then from the Government that they were in correspondence with steamship owners for a service between that province and Great Britain.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman is making rather too much of a speech to ask a question.

Mr. MARTIN. I desire to ask the Government what steps they have taken, or have any arrangements been completed, towards establishing this service.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). Last year the Government made arrangements under which four steamers were to make different sailings from the island to Great Britain, but the third or larger vessel would not go the fourth time, because the depth of water at the railway wharf was not sufficient. We obtained another vessel in her place, which went home late in December with a large cargo. Early in the spring we began dredging to make a proper dockage for these large ships, and that work is being proceeded with, and is verging towards completion. Early in the spring, having talked with my hon. friends the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir Richard Cartwright) and the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher), and with their concurrence, I communicated with several steamship owners to see if we could obtain a steamer. The correspondence went along for over a month or six weeks, and I was not successful; they could not give us a steamer. They thought that a special steamer would have to be constructed for that service; and failing, by private letters to the different steamship companies, to obtain a suitable steamer, we have advertised for tenders for the service, and those tenders are returnable on the 15th of July. I am not sure whether we will be successful, but we are doing everything that possibly can be done to obtain a suitable boat. All the information has been communicated to the Charlottetown Board of Trade, who take a lively interest in the matter.

Mr. MARTIN. Can the hon. gentleman tell me when those tenders were called for?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The public call for tenders was made within a very few days; but the private call for tenders has been made some time. I wrote to Mr. D. E. Campbell, agent of a line in Montreal—I forget the name of the line—and corresponded with him for a length of time about it. Finally he gave me an answer about four weeks ago that he would be unable to provide a steamer this year. But I am in hopes the public call for tenders which has just been advertised, will result in our getting a boat.

Mr. MARTIN. The point to which I wish to draw attention is this: That this correspondence has been going on for two years, this year tenders have been called for—

Mr. SPEAKER. Order.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Tenders were asked for privately from these gentlemen early in the spring, in the month of May, and I was not able to secure from them by correspondence a satisfactory reply. Failing in that, we have now issued a public call for tenders, anybody may come in, and I am not without hopes that we shall succeed.

SUPPLY—ELEVATORS IN THE NORTH-WEST.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding) moved that the House again resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Mr. NICHOLAS FLOOD DAVIN (West Assiniboia). Before you leave the Chair, I wish to bring to the attention of the House a most serious charge made against my hon. friend the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Sifton), our representative from the west in the Cabinet. I have in my hand the Winnipeg "Daily Tribune," of which the issue for June 3rd contains an article, an extract from which I wish to read to the House. It is as follows:—

That the Douglas Elevator Bill should have been defeated in committee came as a decided surprise even to those who are well aware how far machine politics has led us away from government according to the will of the people, and how near it has brought us to government according to the will of great corporations. For when the Bill was introduced, Mr. Sifton, the member of the Government within whose department such matters come, and who could ensure a majority for the Bill, spoke in its favour, and announced that he would give it his support. Then we had the appearance in the inspired press of editorial articles pointing out the justice and necessity of the measure.

The elevator-owning grain-buyers, however, sent representatives to Ottawa, or rather, the chief members of those combines went there in person. What means they used to secure the support of politicians and of the Canadian Pacific Railway, we have nothing but circumstantial evidence to tell us. That the representations they made in private were more potent than their public representation of familiar sophistry, is evident from the result. The committee of the Bill was composed equally of western Liberal members and of members who habitually support monopolist interests. Mr. Sifton, being also a member, held the deciding vote. To the deep regret of every ally of the western settler, Mr. Sifton was not present when the Bill came up in committee. Two other western members, one Liberal and one Conservative, were also absent. The monopolist members of the committee thus outnumbered the members in favour of the Bill, and the first clause, securing the right to build small elevators or flat warehouses, the essential portion of the Bill, was voted down. The committee then adjourned indefinitely.

Dr. Douglas, the author of the measure, is a strong supporter of the Liberal Government, and has up to the present been an equally strong personal supporter of Mr. Sifton. His confidence in the Minister of the Interior has, according to his published interview, received a severe shock. In this interview, published elsewhere in this issue, he explains how this Bill was defeated. "It is a terrible blow to our whole west," he says, "and of course we know where to place the blame. It was the cold steel of Clifford Sifton that did it. * * * There is nothing left that will relieve the people who have been suffering for years. The mischievous scheming of Clifford Sifton is the cause of our defeat."

This interview appeared in a Toronto daily some time ago, but we have not yet seen any contradiction or correction of its statements. The charge is a most serious one, and if the explanation of the defeat of the Bill thus given is well founded, many a western settler will share in Dr. Douglas's indignation at the course followed by the representative of Brandon constituency in Parliament, and the representative of the west in the Government.

That interview appears in the "Evening Telegram" of May 19th. It is headed:

SIFTON KILLED THE BILL.—ELEVATOR MONOPOLY TRIUMPHED.

Ottawa, May 18.—"It was Sifton's cold steel that did it; it was nothing else."

The words came from Rev. J. M. Douglas, a Government supporter from West Assinibois, and their inspiration was in the defeat of the Bill designed to curb the elevator monopoly in Manitoba and the North-west. Some of Clifford Sifton's prettiest scheming was revealed in this second knock-out blow to the hopes of the westerners, who have been, and still are, at the mercy of the elevator men.

Canadian Pacific Railway influence in the Cabinet defeated Douglas's Bill last session. Aware of the strong feeling in the west against the elevator evil, that was as far as the Government dare go. When the Bill appeared again this session, the Administration, particularly Clifford Sifton, gave it apparent endorsement. The measure had the Government's best wishes, Laurier and Sifton said, and then the scheming began. They would not trust Douglas's precious creation to the mercy of the Railway Committee, which not only had many other things to do, but might be inclined to view with some hostility a measure antagonistic to the wishes of the Canadian Pacific Railway. A special committee, Sifton insisted, would be a proper body to handle the case of the people versus monopoly. A special committee was thereupon appointed. Its members were of Clifford Sifton's choosing, and, from the standpoint of monopoly, the choosing was done well. It was essentially a farmer's grievance which Douglas proposed to remove, yet by a process of reasoning not beyond the comprehension of the ordinary man, the Minister of the Interior concluded that there should be a total absence of farmers on the special committee which was to decide the fate of the Bill. To give his intentions some slight colour of good faith, Richardson, Oliver, Douglas and Rutherford were made members of the committee. Every one of the other six could be depended upon to safeguard the interests of the railways. Two of them, Haggart and Tisdale, were objected to by such a staunch Tory as Dr. Thomas S. Sproule, M.P., when their names were proposed for a similar committee the other day. It was in vain that Douglas and others protested against the committee as appointed by Clifford Sifton. The ten of them met together to-day, and soon the Bill upon which the whole Canadian west sets so high a value, was rejected on the following division:—

Mr. DAVIN.

For—Richardson, Rutherford, Oliver, Douglas.—4.

Against—Bertram, Haggart, Tisdale, Fisher, Casgrain, Rosamond.—6.

No sound argument could be urged against the Bill. Geo. H. Bertram insisted that a case had not been made out, and Sidney Fisher, who travels in the disguise of a practical farmer, was not willing to grant his suffering brethren relief. He had the presumption to suggest that an inspector be appointed to look into the complaints, and that idea will be put forward when next the committee meets. But for the approaching by-election in Winnipeg, the chances are that Douglas's Bill would to-day be in the fulness of life. The powerful elevator interest of that city were naturally enough rabidly hostile to the measure, and fear of the injury they would be able to do the Liberal candidate in the coming fight led to the scheming which easily won out when the clash came to-day.

Rev. J. M. Douglas is an angry man. A thorough partisan, he declined to reserve criticism of the Government for the iniquitous treatment of the people he represents.

"It is a terrible blow to our whole west," he said, "and, of course, we know where to place the blame. It was the cold steel of Clifford Sifton that did it; it was nothing else. He may hope to carry Winnipeg by such means, but I have my opinion of the elevators of Winnipeg if they respond to such detestable tactics. We are offered something—an inspector; of what consequence is a beggarly concession like that? My whole Bill is not killed, but there is nothing left that will relieve the people who have been suffering for years. The mischievous scheming of Clifford Sifton is the cause of our defeat. That is a strong statement, but it is a fact that no one can get away from."

Mr. Speaker, this is an interview with the hon. member for Eastern Assiniboia (Mr. Douglas). I am not going to discuss the fate of the Bill. The fate of the Bill is an important question, but the fate of the Bill is a trifling question compared with the serious charge that is here brought against a Minister of the Crown. I did not bring this matter up for the purpose of attacking the Minister; I brought it up because he represents us in the Cabinet, and to have a statement like that made in regard to the Minister who represents the west in the Cabinet, and made also by a supporter, is a most serious matter. I have no desire to amplify. All I can wish now is to hear what is the explanation.

The MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR (Mr. Sifton). Mr. Speaker, I appreciate, I may say, without saying much more on the subject, the anxiety of my hon. friend the member for West Assiniboia (Mr. Davin) lest, perchance, something might be said that would injuriously affect the reputation of the Minister of the Interior. I have no doubt the hon. gentleman has been, and is, trying to protect my reputation. I appreciate this as one of the indications of that hon. gentleman's efforts in that direction. The matter which the hon. gentleman has referred to is one which it is quite proper to bring before the House, and, in speaking of which I have no hesitation in expressing my opinion or in declaring my position. I do not know, Sir, that it is of any great interest to know what the editor of the Toronto "Telegram" thinks about me. Anybody who has paid any attention to the remarks of the Toronto "Telegram" for the last two years, would not require to have the time of the House of Commons taken up for the purpose of further informing him of the opinion which the editor of the Toronto "Telegram" does me the honour of entertaining in regard to myself. The editor of that paper has a perfect right to have whatever opinion he chooses of me, and I presume I have the same right to entertain whatever opinion I choose in regard to him. I do not, however, take so many occasions of expressing my opinion in regard to him as he does in expressing his opinions in regard to me. I shall not waste the time of the House discussing newspaper articles, because it would be truly a waste of time, if members of the Government were to take up the time of the House in discussing all the motives ascribed to them in Opposition papers, and in papers which are semi-Opposition, semi-independent, and sometimes ministerial, for one reason or another, from time to time. The position in regard to the Bill of the hon. member for East Assiniboia (Mr. Douglas) is simply this. That hon. gentleman has entertained strong views upon a certain question. That question is as to whether legislation should be passed by this House compelling railway companies in Manitoba and the North-west Territories to confer certain facilities for the shipment of grain which they do not now enjoy. The opinion which the hon. member entertains is, that certain regulations should be enacted by this House to the effect that individuals might place upon the property of a railway company a flat warehouse, under certain conditions, practically unrestricted. I think that is a fair statement of the position of the hon. member for East Assiniboia upon this subject. The matter came up last year; I have forgotten exactly how it was disposed of last year, but this year it came up again. The hon. member for East Assiniboia brought in a Bill this year, of which, as it appeared to me at the time, the question of flat warehouses was only a secondary and less important part. He brought in a Bill which provided a general system of regulation and inspection of elevators, and in which he provided for the particular privilege which he has in mind, and which he advocates very strongly, that flat warehouses might be erected wherever persons who might make application for the purpose, desired to do so. The Bill came before the House, and, in speaking of it, I said that we approved of it in a general way, that is to say, we approved of the general principle of regulation. I referred to the general principle of regulation as one which I approved of, and I suggested that we should send the Bill to a special committee for the purpose of its being fully and carefully considered. The matter was sent to a special committee, and, inasmuch as a serious portion of the charge against me is, that the committee was constituted by me, or at my suggestion, in such a way that it would not deal fairly with this Bill, I desire to read the names of the members of that committee:

Messrs. Bain, Bertram, Bourassa, Campbell, Casgrain, Davis, Douglas, Fisher, Haggart, Sir Henry Joly de Lotbinière, Oliver, Richardson, Roche, Rosamond, Rutherford, Sifton, Tisdale.

I venture to say, Mr. Speaker, that if a committee of this House were appointed to select a committee that would represent the business capacity and the independence and the good judgment of the House fairly well, for the purpose of dealing with a matter of that kind, a better committee could not be selected. The House will observe that the representation of western members on the committee is very large, and that was because the western members were particularly interested in this question as affecting Manitoba and the North-west almost exclusively. It is only necessary to read the names of the members of the committee to dispose entirely of the idea that anybody could possibly unduly influence its decision. The Bill went before the committee, and I was present at the first two or three meetings and listened carefully to the discussion which took place. The result of the information I derived there, in addition to what I knew about the subject before, brought me to the conclusion that I was prepared to support strongly the features of the Bill relating to the regulation and inspection of elevators, but I was not prepared to support that provision which provided for the unrestricted erection of flat warehouses upon the railway property and alongside the elevators. Whether I arrived at that conclusion rightly or wrongly, it was my opinion, and I may remark that my colleague the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Fisher), who was upon the committee with me, entirely shared my view. In that we differed from my hon. friend from East Assiniboia (Mr. Douglas) who brought in the Bill. My absence from the committee was altogether accidental. It was not for the purpose of shirking the vote. The member for West Assiniboia (Mr. Davin) and every other member of this House knows, that whatever advantage there may be in a private member absenting himself from a vote—and the advantage is very questionable—there is no advantage to a member of the Government so doing because a member of the Government must assume the responsibility. When my hon. friend (Mr. Douglas) found that his Bill was defeated, he naturally assumed that as my colleague the Minister of Agriculture voted against the Bill, I would have voted the same way if I had been present. That would not necessarily follow, but as a matter of fact if I had been there, I would have voted with the majority of the committee and against the provision of the Bill relating to flat warehouses. On the other hand, I would have voted in favour of the provisions of the Bill relating to inspection. That states clearly and definitely what my position in the matter is. So far as the killing of the Bill is concerned, as I have said, my absence from the committee that morning was altogether accidental, and I had no idea that a final vote would then be taken on the Bill. A few days afterwards I saw my hon. friend from East Assiniboia (Mr. Douglas), and I asked him if he desired to go on with the other provisions of the Bill which did not meet with the disapproval of the committee, and expressed to him my willingness to help him through with that portion of the Bill which I approved of. My hon. friend (Mr. Douglas), however, was not disposed, as I understood him, to go on with the Bill, and I asked him to let me know if he did wish to go on so that I might give him my aid. As to whether the hon. member for East Assiniboia (Mr. Douglas) used the expression which the newspapers attribute to him, I do not know. I am quite sure I never asked him and I have not any intention of asking him. What I know is, that in my conduct with respect to the Bill there was nothing that was not perfectly straightforward and perfectly in accordance with my duty as a member of the Government, and I am quite prepared to take the responsibility for anything and everything I did in that connection. As the suggestion has been thrown out, that the Bill was unfairly dealt with, I particularly desire to call the attention of the members of the House to the personnel of the committee, which I think is an ample guarantee that the Bill could not otherwise than have been fairly dealt with.

Mr. WALLACE. Let us hear from the hon. member for East Assiniboia (Mr. Douglas).

Mr. GEO. H. BERTRAM (Centre Toronto). The question raised by the hon. member for West Assiniboia (Mr. Davin) requires some little consideration from the members of the House who were members of that special committee. I think there was some reflection cast on the committee by the writer of the articles read to the House, because it is intimated that the "cold steel" he speaks of as being given to the Bill by the Minister of the Interior, was given in the selection of the committee, who it is suggested would not deal with the question on its merits. Now, it never disturbs me what appears in newspapers against anything I say or do. Newspapers are at perfect liberty to express any opinion they choose about my conduct, but I take the liberty of saying, that if any newspaper, or any member of this House, states that I was influenced, or could in any way be influenced by anybody or any corporation in my consideration of a question of this kind, that newspaper or that member makes a statement that cannot be supported by the facts. I had a strong sympathy with that Bill, and when a large body of elevator men came here from Winnipeg to oppose it, they were desirous of seeing me but I refused to have any conversation whatever with one of them. I said I was prepared to listen to the arguments advanced before the committee with a perfectly frank and open mind, and to give my decision according to the merits as they presented themselves to me. It is unfair that any newspaper or any member if there be one, should cast a reflection upon the members of that committee. I attended the meetings with the firm intention, that if there was any monopoly which in my judgment was injurious to the interests of the farmers of the west, I for one would do everything in my power to break up that monopoly. I had no sympathy with monopoly, and I so stated in the committee, but I could not agree with the remedy that was proposed by the promoter of the Bill, even if there was a monopoly. I gave my reasons for opposing the Bill in the committee, and I had no other reasons than those given. The statements regarding the Minister of the Interior and the reflections cast upon the members of that committee, are not creditable to those who made them; for I am sure that every other member of the committee, as well as myself, acted in what he believed to be the best interests of the country. Members of Parliament may differ; members will differ on public questions; every member has a right to his own opinion, but no member and no newspaper has the right to say that a member of this House privately holds a different opinion from that which he gives public expression to. So far as I am concerned, I state here, that any one who says I was appointed on any committee because I might be influenced in some direction other than for the public interest, is making a statement which cannot possibly be supported by the facts. I stated at the time that the promoter of the Bill did not make out the strong case I expected he would make out, and I gave my reasons for believing that to be the case. So that the statements that have been appearing in the newspapers from time to time are, in my judgment, void of the truth. I believe every member of that committee acted in accordance with his own judgment as to what was in the best interest of the country, and that no influence of any kind was brought to bear upon him, either directly or indirectly, in regard to his action as a public man.

VALLEYFIELD COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

Mr. BERGERON. Before you leave the Chair, Mr. Speaker, for the House to go into Supply, I desire to bring to the notice of my hon. friend the Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson) the fact that a great many complaints are made in Valleyfield and in Beauharnois in regard to the operations of his officer there. One of the most important manufacturers in Beauharnois told me the other day that he has the invoice of goods that have been in Valleyfield for the last ten days, and he has not received them yet. Many other people in Valleyfield complain of the same thing. This may be due either to lack of knowledge or lack of industry on the part of the officer; but I believe it is due to the fact that he spends most of his time in writing in a Grit newspaper in Valleyfield, abusing me and the Conservative party, and neglecting his work. It is my duty to call the attention of the Minister of Customs to the fact, and I do so hoping that for the future this man will have less to do with newspapers, and will stick to his office, and do the work which he is paid to do.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS (Mr. Paterson). I will make inquiries in reference to what the hon. gentleman has said; but I fancy that it will not be because he does not attend to his duties if complaints are made against him. I fear it will be rather because I have been trying, through economy, to carry on the work of the port with perhaps less men than I am able to do.

Mr. BERGERON. No.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. Well, seeing that by the returns he has collected something like $38,000, I do not think that he can have time to attend to a great deal more than his duties. His salary, I think, is about $500.

Mr. BERGERON. Yes, very small.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. That would only be about 1½ per cent for collection, which, I think, is lower than is paid in almost any other port in the Dominion. However, I am not attempting to say that what the hon. gentleman has mentioned is something that it is not worth while to inquire into. If it be unfortunately true that some merchants have been delayed in getting clearance for their goods, it may be that I do not give a collector sufficient help. However, I will inquire into the matter.

Mr. BERGERON. If I may be permitted to put my hon. friend's mind at rest, I will say that the officer who was in charge before, and who was dismissed by this Government for no reason at all but partisanship—a fact which they have recognized by paying not only his salary, but his pension—collected the last year he was there over $90,000, besides doing the work of excise and the collectorship of canal tolls. That was Mr. Danis, who was dismissed simply because he voted for me.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman has already spoken.

Mr. BERGERON. This is pro bono publico, Mr. Speaker—more so than a great deal that is said here.

Mr. SPEAKER. I cannot help that.

Mr. BERGERON. I hope my hon. friend will see to it.

Mr. WALLACE. The Minister might have stated, when he made his explanation, that the collections at Valleyfield are of a special character, not like the usual business of other ports; but there are enormous manufactories there, which bring in large quantities of goods that are dutiable. So that while the payments into the customs may be very large, the work of the department is not large in proportion.

Mr. TAYLOR. The hon. member for Beauharnois may not have a right to speak a second time, but there is an hon. gentleman in this House who has a right to speak, and we on this side of the House are very anxious to hear from him; and from the debate that has taken place here to-day, we ought to hear from him, that is the hon. member for East Assiniboia (Mr. Douglas).

Mr. FOSTER. I had hoped that the hon. Minister of Customs, before he sat down, would have made some statement with reference to what fell from the lips of my hon. friend from Beauharnois (Mr. Bergeron), namely, that this gentleman, who is a paid officer, and who is supposed to be a non-partisan officer, as that is the principle on which the Government acts, is continually employed in writing partisan newspaper articles against an independent member of Parliament. My hon. friend the (Minister of Customs) forgot that point. Is he going to condone it by silence, or does he really approve of it, as we must take him to do when it has been so pointedly brought to his notice, and he says nothing in the way of reproof.

Mr. BERGERON. I did the same thing last year.

Mr. FOSTER. Is it really a principle upon which our hon. friends opposite intend to go, that they will dismiss peremptorily, without investigation, on the mere call of a defeated candidate or a member of Parliament, a man who exercises simply his undoubted right of voting for a Conservative, on the ground of political partisanship, and then they will employ a man, and pay him with our money—it is not the money of the Minister of Customs, but the money of the people of this country, Conservatives and Liberals alike—his $500 a year, for doing what? Making a few collections and bespattering Liberal-Conservative members of this House with his vile articles in the newspapers? Is that going to be done, and my hon. friend has no voice in the matter at all? Dozens of men have been dismissed without the least investigation, without a charge being preferred by anybody but a defeated candidate or a member who wants the place for one of his heelers, on the ground of political partisanship; and yet my hon. friend employs and pays with the people's money a man who is continually writing articles against an independent member of Parliament.

Mr. BERGERON. He is the editor of the paper.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. I said I would inquire into the matter.

Mr. FOSTER. I did not hear you say that.

The MINISTER OF CUSTOMS. I certainly said it, and I do not propose to condemn any of my officers without investigation.

Mr. BERGERON. The very same thing was said by the Minister of Railways and Canals last year.

Some hon. MEMBERS. Order, order.

Mr. TAYLOR.

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. member for Beauharnois has already spoken twice.

Mr. BERGERON. I will do it at another time. You will not save any time by this.

SEIZURE OF TRAPS AND ROPES IN PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

Mr. A. MARTIN (East Queen's, P.E.I.) Before the motion is put, I would like for a few moments to call the attention of the House to a return which was brought down on the 1st of June of this year in reference to the seizure of traps and ropes belonging to Benjamin Compton & Co., of Belle River, in the province of Prince Edward Island, by the cruiser "Acadia." This company is a small firm in Prince Edward Island engaged in lobster fishing, who had their traps seized a few days after the expiration of the fishing season. It is well known, Mr. Speaker, that when the fishing season is over, it takes quite a number of days to take the traps in. When there are 700 or 800 or 1,000 or 2,000 traps several miles from the shore, perhaps ten miles, it is almost impossible on the very day the fishing season is over to take these traps ashore, and I am assured by some firms in that business in the province that it is not usual. In this case, these men, who were actually poor men, had their traps and ropes to the value of $150, seized by the "Acadia" within a few days after the close of the season. It appears that the Department of Marine and Fisheries refused them an investigation. There is no presumption at all alleged that these poor men were fishing. It is, on the contrary, alleged that on the very day the fishing season was over, they closed up their factory and did not bait their traps for three days before the expiration of the fishing season. Yet in the face of that, this cruiser seized the traps, and those poor men, who demanded an investigation, had no remedy.

I have something else to complain of in the return brought down. It begins with a letter from one of those men, Francis Cook. That letter refers to a statement delivered to the Minister of Marine on the second day of August, but that statement is not in this correspondence. Whatever object the department had in suppressing that statement, I do not know, but the fact remains that it was suppressed. If the department received that statement, it should certainly be included in the correspondence brought down. I find also that this letter, which is signed by Francis Cook, disclaims any such thing as a violation of this law. Mr. Cook says:

They used every effort to take in their traps, but the season was inclement, and it was impossible on the very day the season closed to do so.

This will appear more clear, as I proceed with this correspondence. I find also here a statement signed by Commander Spain, which has reference to some papers in connection with this matter, which were left with the Minister of Marine in his house in Charlottetown.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I notice that, and have written to Commander Spain, asking about it, and asking if he has the papers, and if so, to send them to me.

Mr. MARTIN. What about that other letter?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No letter of the 2nd August can be found in the department.

Mr. MARTIN. I happen to have a copy of it here, which the company sent to me. Let me read the words that Commander Spain used.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. There is no doubt about the words, and I have written Commander Spain, asking for the papers.

Mr. MARTIN. The papers were given to the hon. Minister by Commander Spain in his house in Charlottetown, with a full report on the matter. It is quite evident that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries had no personal knowledge at all, for, otherwise, he would not have written Commander Spain after Commander Spain had given him the papers at his house. I hope it may augur well for those poor men that the hon. Minister did not study the report of Captain Spain at all, and I trust that, when he reads that report carefully, he will come to a different conclusion, and will see that these poor men, whose property was ruthlessly seized without any just cause, will be reimbursed their loss. This property was seized by the cruiser, and taken to Charlottetown, and there sold for a trifle. The whole thing, costing about $150, was sold, at a hole-and-corner sale in Charlottetown, without the knowledge of the company, for $8.95, and the expenses of the sale and seizure had to come out of that, so that there was scarcely anything left.

I have here the statement made by those men. I have the statement made by C. L. Barnes, of Murray River, which is included in this correspondence. Mr. Barnes makes this statement with regard to this seizure:

First, that no violation of the law was directed by me, and I am assured none was allowed by the manager.

Here is the excuse which he gives for having those traps out for a few days after the close of the fishing season:

Owing to peculiar circumstances, many of my traps were several (7 or 8) miles from the shore. Promptly on the 16th July—that is exactly the close of the fishing season—arrangements were made for the landing of the traps and gear, and every available hour thereafter was occupied in the effort. From Thursday, 17th July, until the seizure, a schooner was watching every opportunity of wind and tide to effect the landing of the gear, and in the meantime the fishermen, commencing with those traps nearest the shore, were constantly employed, when the very inclement weather would permit, in landing the traps.

According to this statement, those poor men made every effort to land their traps. They began the very day after the close of the season, and there can be no presumption that they were fishing at all. They were, instead, engaged in landing their traps. Further on, the statement is made, that they had not baited their traps within three days of the close of the season, and Mr. Barnes goes on to say:

As a trawl line was stripped of traps it was ballasted by a weighted trap near the middle, and the buoys used as marks or guides to the other trawls. These were the ropes seized by the "Acadia."

I think Commander Spain says that the Minister himself was actually on board.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No.

Mr. MARTIN. Commander Spain writes:

The Minister will remember passing and remarking on these very traps when he was on board the "Acadia" last season.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. That was a fortnight previously.

Mr. MARTIN. It does not matter. At any rate, the Minister was on board the "Acadia," and I think it is becoming on his part, though a belted knight now, to look after the interests of those poor men. I will, however, proceed to show the House the letter I am quoting from, signed by those men, and which states that the ropes that were seized by the cruiser were at the time being used by these poor men in taking in their traps. These were the ropes seized by the "Acadia."

When the outrage was perpetrated our fishermen and manager were employed in taking traps ashore.

That is the statement made. That is a very singular thing. Does the Minister pretend to say, can he stand up in his place in this House and say, that the fishermen of Prince Edward Island, on the 15th of July last, on that very day, every fisherman began to bring in his traps? Is it the practice to do it? I do not think the Minister will say that it is the practice; because, if they stop fishing—and there is no presumption that these men were fishing—and if they do not bait these traps, it does not matter how long they are left out.

When the outrage was perpetrated our fishermen and manager were employed in taking traps ashore, and had a boat loaded at the time. This, with the manager's explanation, made it manifest that we were using every effort to fulfil the law, and should show the department that the act of Commander Spain, whose sailors, by his orders, cut the trawl line from our boats and destroyed the traps in the presence of my men, was wanton and unnecessary.

Cut the trawl from the boat actually, when they were taking in their traps. Here is a statement that will have weight with the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. He knows the harbour, and he knows that it is a very poor harbour and that it is almost impossible to land these traps without accident. They say :

The winds, tides, currents, &c., make Belle River a place of peculiar difficulty to navigate, especially with heavy laden boats, and the Government would do well to consider this fact in making decision in this matter.

The letter closes asking for justice. There is another statement, a letter written by the Minister himself. He writes to Dr. Barnes, in answer to that gentleman's letter of 29th April, 1899. Among other things, he says :

The facts were represented by your attorneys at great length,—

I do not know whether a brief was given him orally or whether a written statement was made with regard to the act ; but the presumption is that they gave him a written statement. The Minister refers to it here and we have nothing of it in the correspondence. So, there are three important parts of this correspondence that are not here. I do not say they are suppressed with the intention of hiding the true state of affairs ; I can only say that they are not here and, therefore, that I cannot refer to them.

—and the matter received the closest investigation and every consideration. These traps were seized by my officers some eight or ten days at least after the close season had begun.

That is the correspondence, so far as we have it. Now, here is a letter dated 2nd August, which does not appear in the correspondence at all. I do not know whether the Minister of Marine and Fisheries had seen it, but it would appear that he had not, because it is not brought down. Had he seen it, he might have come to a very different decision in regard to the confiscation of the property belonging to these poor men. And I think that coming from that province, he should have some sympathy with these poor men, under the circumstances I have related. They tried to fulfil the law ; they tried to have the traps in at the proper time. They had stopped fishing. I would not like to defend the men if I thought they were guilty, but I am given to understand, and I believe it, that they had stopped fishing. That being the case, this is an instance of peculiar hardship, and one which, I hope, the Minister will look into. I will not take up the time of the House by reading all this letter, but I will read a part of it. It is from Benjamin Compton & Co. :

Mr. MARTIN.

As we had permission from the Department of Marine and Fisheries to ship our goods without being stamped, having sold under contract, we were therefore compelled to have our goods in Charlottetown before the 20th July.

So, according to this, the hon. Minister himself may have been the means of getting these poor men into this trouble. He gave them permission to ship their goods without being stamped, and so to remove them to Charlottetown. The time expired on the 20th June. Before that day arrived these poor men, I suppose, would have to have their goods at the point from which they were to be shipped to Great Britain.

We came to Charlottetown on Wednesday, 17th July, and returned Thursday night, and intended to take in the remainder of the traps and gear on Friday and Saturday, but owing to wind and rough weather, we were unable to even make an attempt to leave the shore. In order to allow our boats to leave the shore, the tide, where our factory is situated, must not be lower than half-tide, owing to the flats which extend out for a long distance.

That is a very important fact for the hon. Minister to know—that these men could only engage in the work of landing these traps at certain times of the day, when the tides were high.

And during the week following Saturday last mentioned, when the tides were suitable it was very foggy, and it would be useless and dangerous to start out ; so we were positively unable to land any traps during that week.

There is a week gone, very unsatisfactorily accounted for, and good solid reason given why these poor men found it impossible to have their traps landed at the time specified.

Thinking we might have further trouble to land the traps with our boats, we engaged a schooner from D. J. McMillan—

Here is a statement I wish to draw the attention of the Minister to. These men do not appear to have left their traps longer than they were compelled to leave them.

—to take them all in one load. She was prepared to do so last week, but could not do so on account of the weather. In the meantime, the "Acadia" destroyed 133 traps and took 1,400 fathoms of new rope, valued together at $150.

So, I am not astonished that these poor men make a demand for reparation for the wanton destruction of property by the "Acadia," and I do hope the Minister will give this matter his serious consideration. When he studies more closely the report of Commander Spain—and I suppose he has studied, or, at least, looked at it—and take into consideration this letter, which, as I say, evidently he has not seen, and all the circumstances in connection with the case, I am sure he will see his way clear to reimburse these poor men the loss they have sustained.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. This matter has already received the very close attention of the department. I regret very much that my hon. friend (Mr. Martin) should give his countenance to the assertion that these men have been badly treated.

Mr. MARTIN. Does the hon. gentleman cast any reflection on the truthfulness of those men?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I do not understand what the hon. gentleman means. I am not referring to these men. I am referring to his action in this House as a member of Parliament. I regret very much that he should give his countenance to men who were engaged in fishing under the circumstances in which those men were. We have been trying for many years to put a stop to illegal fishing after the 15th of July, enormous sums of money are spent every year in that effort. The best lobster packers assist the Government in so doing, but it is felt that unless the illicit fishing which takes place after the 15th of July can in some way be suppressed, the whole industry will be entirely destroyed. I have made most strenuous efforts at great expense to put a stop to this illegal fishing for the past three years, and I am proud to say that my hands have been strongly upheld by most of the largest lobster packers all over the maritime provinces. There are a certain number who will insist on fishing illegally, in spite of all law and regulation. I need not do more than state to the House the facts as reported officially by Commander Spain to me. Commander Spain is a very experienced, a very careful, and a very prudent officer. He does not pounce upon traps which are found after the close season opens, and seize them and destroy them; he always gives a reasonable time for the owners to take them in. But I would appeal to every hon. member from the maritime provinces, if 15 days after the legal season expires, and hundreds of lobster traps are found at some miles from shore with lobsters in them, whether the officer would not be liable to dismissal if he did not seize them. Commander Spain reported on the 20th of December to me:

These traps (of Compton & Co.) were destroyed by the "Acadia" on the 30th day of July last in Northumberland Straits,—

That is 15 days after the season expired when they could be legally fishing.

—being found in the water some 15 days after the commencement of the close season. The excuse the owners made in their letter to the Minister on the 2nd of August last was, that the weather had been so stormy and bad that they had been unable to take them in. The Minister will remember passing and remarking upon these very traps when he was on board the "Acadia" last season.

That was about the 18th of July when I was going down to the Magdalen Islands, but they were not destroyed then because it is supposed they were going to take them in in a day or two.

The excuse made by these people is not correct. The weather had been fine for some considerable period before the 30th, and the traps should have been taken in. There were lobsters in some of them, and the necessary action was taken in this case, as in others all around the coast.

What could be done, because these people were friends and supporters of mine, the hon. gentleman does not suppose that I take any pleasure in destroying the property of this kind or that Captain Spain takes pleasure in destroying property of this kind. What is to be done? Five miles from shore hundreds of lobster traps are found 15 days after the time expires for fishing. The officer takes them up and he is told he is not to destroy them. If the officer of the Government would not be sustained in enforcing the regulations we might as well dismiss them and let everybody use traps whenever he pleases.

Mr. MARTIN. I would like to say—

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman cannot speak again.

Mr. MARTIN. But I have an explanation to give.

Mr. SPEAKER. If it is a mere personal explanation.

Mr. MARTIN. I do not submit to the hon. gentleman's attributing to me a desire to defend illegal fishing. I do not see that the hon. gentleman has proved that there was illegal fishing. He made from the very first—

Mr. SPEAKER. The hon. gentleman can make no reply, only a personal explanation.

THE NORTHERN COMMERCIAL TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

Mr. E. G. PRIOR (Victoria, B.C.) Yesterday I called the attention of the Government to some returns that I had asked for in regard to the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company (Limited). I stated that some had been brought down from the Public Works Department, and I asked whether there were not some more to come down from other departments. I see to-day that not a word has been said and no papers have been brought down, so I think it my duty to bring the matter before the House. I do this because I think it will show a most extraordinary state of affairs in the Government; it will show, at all events, the extraordinary manner in which this business Government, as they call themselves, carry on the business of the country with business men. I also feel sure that when I have finished what I have to say—it will take me some little time, because there are lots of letters to read—the members of this House on both sides will think that the Government has a very poor idea of business morality. It is a matter which I think reflects very little credit on every one of the members of the Government who have been concerned therein. Now, there are some gentlemen on the other side of the House who are interested in one of these Bills under discussion, and, perhaps, some gentlemen will wonder why they do not bring this matter before the House instead of myself. Well, I do not know whether it is that their party fealty makes them sit quiet under any amount of injustice sooner than bring it up and bring discredit on the Government, or whether they do not take any interest in the matter at all. But I bring it up, because, in the first place, I believe that a thing like this is a great blow to the fair fame of Canada, and also because several gentlemen interested in both these Bills are personal friends of mine, and they are not here to defend themselves, and I think it only right that somebody should get up and defend them. Now one of these gentlemen is a man of high standing, the Hon. James Roche, at the present time, I believe, a member of the English House of Commons; another gentleman is Mr. Holt, also a member of the English House of Commons. They are interested in this Bill, together with one or two gentlemen who are members of this House. I will give a short statement of how the matter stands so far as I can.

Mr. SPEAKER. Is the hon. gentleman referring to a Bill that is on the Order paper?

Mr. PRIOR. No. During the last year there were two Bills passed by the Parliament of Canada. One was Bill (No. 119) entitled an Act to incorporate the Dawson City and Victoria Telegraph Company. The other was Bill (No. 139) entitled an Act to incorporate the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company. The first Bill bore the names of John Morris Catton, of London, Eng., William Stewart Rainbow, London, Eng., and Charles Thomas Dupont, of Victoria, B.C. The incorporators of the other Bill were: The Right Hon. Lord Thurlow, London, Eng., Theodore Van Puten, London, Eng., Edward Friedburg, Surrey, Eng., William Braid, Vancouver, B.C., William Naismith, Vancouver, B.C., Allen Haley, Windsor, N.B., and Isaac Burpee, St. John, N.B. Having moved for these papers, I asked the Government yesterday whether there were not some more to be brought down, because I knew for a fact that more correspondence had passed between the members of the Government and the company than was laid on the Table. I asked for the telegrams and cablegrams, and papers received by the right hon. Prime Minister of Canada, by the Hon. J. I. Tarte, Minister of Public Works, and by the Hon. A. G. Blair, Minister of Railways and Canals, and also copies of all letters from those gentlemen. Well, Sir, there is not a single letter brought down from any of the Government except from the Minister of Public Works, and on these papers is noted the fact that they are referred to the Minister of Public Works for report in so far as his department is concerned. I do not know whether this is the usual course; I presume it is; but the fact of the matter is, that there is not a single paper brought down showing that there has been any correspondence with the right hon. leader of the Government or with the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals. I do not know what the reason is, because I know such correspondence did take place. Whether it is that these hon. gentlemen are ashamed of the correspondence that did take place, whether they are ashamed of the documents they put their names to, or whether they are purposely suppressing them, I cannot say. I cannot believe that the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals did not know that he had had correspondence with one or more of these companies. The Order is as plain as possible. It asks for letters or papers signed by him, or written by him, to any particular company. It seems to me that this matter of building a telegraph line into the Yukon must have been brought up in Council, and, therefore, every hon. Minister must have heard the particulars, and must have heard the whole thing being discussed. With the permission of the House, I will now read the correspondence. I would not do so, if it were not necessary that I should do so. I do not think hon. gentlemen will be able to understand the matter, unless I begin at the beginning and go right through. In these papers which have been brought down, the first letter is dated 3rd September, 1897. It is from the United States Electrical Supply Company, of New York, per W. J. Clarke, to the Commissioner of Public Works, Ottawa, Canada, in which the company offer to undertake the work of building a telegraph line into the Yukon. They say that they have had large experience, and hope that they will be allowed to tender for the same. The next is an answer from Mr. Roy, Secretary of the Public Works Department acknowledging the letter, and stating that as yet no decision has been arrived at by the department concerning the matter.

Mr. PRIOR.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). What is the date of that letter?

Mr. PRIOR. The 20th of September, 1897. The next letter is dated the 26th October, 1897, and it is from Ashcroft, B.C. It is from Daniel O'Hara, acting as secretary of a meeting held there in regard to many matters, amongst which was the telegraph line. There was a meeting held at Ashcroft on the 25th of October, at which several prominent gentlemen were present, amongst them the Hon. C. F. Cornwall, who was formerly a Governor of British Columbia, and, amongst other matters discussed, is the telegraph line. The following resolution was adopted :—

Resolved by the people of Ashcroft and vicinity that, being familiar with all the circumstances in connection with opening up of telegraphic communication with the gold-fields of the North-west, and Omenica, Cassiar, Peace River and other important sections, we are of the firm conviction that the most feasible, if not indeed the only practicable route, is to build such line from Quesnelle via the old telegraph trail to Telegraph Creek, on the Stikine, and via Lake Teslin to Dawson City, thereby taking advantage of the large sums of money expended in seeking the most practicable route by the company known as the Overland or Collins line in the early 60's.

Resolved, that the provincial government be and are hereby requested to take such action in regard to improving the overland trail from Quesnelle to Telegraph Creek, bridging such streams or establishing ferries as are found necessary, removing fallen timber, &c., &c., and that such action be taken by having parties of men sent in to Quesnelle, Hazelton and Telegraph Creek at the earliest possible date in the spring, and to be engaged in such actual work on the trail not later than March of next year, so that the trail may be in condition for travel for the thousands that will pass over it, beginning as early as April next.

I have just read that to show that the people of British Columbia, who are on the spot and have seen a good deal of the country, think that this is the best line. The next letter is a very important one. It is dated the 30th of November, 1897, from Montreal, and is signed by Mr. Charles R. Hosmer, who is now, and, I suppose, was then, the manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway Telegraph Company. It reads as follows :—

4 Hospital Street,
Montreal, Nov. 30, 1897.

Dear Mr. Tarte,—The question of telegraph communication with the Klondike has, during the past few months, received my most careful consideration, and from many inquiries I have made in all directions I am thoroughly convinced that the only feasible way by which a telegraph line can be constructed and maintained afterwards, is by the extension of the present Government line from Quesnelle, through Fort Fraser, Hazelton, Telegraph Creek, Lake Teslin and Old Fort Selkirk, to Dawson City. I inclose you a sketch showing suggested routes, with approximate distances. I might say that this route is practically the one surveyed by the Russia-American Telegraph Company in 1866-67, and that the telegraph line was completed, and in working order, to about Hazelton, when word was received that the Atlantic cable had been successfully laid, which necessitated the abandonment of the project.

I would suggest that the Government undertake at once the construction of that portion of the line between Quesnelle and Lake Teslin, an approximate distance of 740 miles. From inquiries made, I understand that there is a fairly good supply of black pine and spruce along this line, particularly between Quesnelle and Hazelton (320 miles), and I would advise the using of the native timber along the route for the poles. These should last at least five or six years. This 470 miles, with the establishment of stations every 40 or 50 miles, I would roughly estimate as costing about $250,000, which would mean an interest charge to the Government of $6,000 to $7,000 per annum. I think—

I want the House to remember this.

—I might almost safely say to you that if this line were constructed, I could get our Canadian Pacific people to take it off your hands and operate on a basis that would return to the Government 4 per cent of the outlay, or about $10,000 per annum.

I need not point out to you the vast importance of telegraph communication with that country. The interest charge of $6,000 or $7,000 a year could be saved many times over in numerous ways in the administration of the country alone. Each one of our telegraph huts or stations might form a North-west Mounted Police post, and the adoption of this all-Canadian line would quickly and safely open a new route and territory.

I hope the Government will consider the matter of sufficient importance to warrant their ordering the work started at once, and that you will not be obliged to await the sanction of Parliament, otherwise it will be impossible to get the line in operation so that it will be of any service during the coming year. Later on, the telegraph line might be continued from Lake Teslin to Dawson.

I need not add that I would be very glad to be of any service I can to you in this matter.

Yours sincerely,

(Sgd.) CHAS. R. HOSMER.

Hon. J. Israel Tarte,
Minister of Public Works,
Ottawa.

Now, Mr. Speaker, nothing was done after that letter. There is no more correspondence then for something like eighteen months, or a little under. Evidently, the Government did not think it was wise to build the line then. Nothing more was done, and no further correspondence was had, until the letter written on the 11th of April, 1899. There is no reply to Mr. Hosmer's letter brought down, and evidently the Government did not act on it. The next letter is, as I say, dated on the 11th of April, 1899, and it was signed by Allen Haley, H. S. Holt and James B. Roche, shareholders in the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company, Limited. It is addressed to the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Tarte), and it is as follows :—

Ottawa, 11th April, 1899.

The Hon. J. Israel Tarte, Minister of Public Works of Canada,
Ottawa.

Sir,—Referring to the interview which the undersigned, Dr. Haley, M.P., one of the provisional directors of the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company (Limited) and chairman of the provisional board of that company, Mr. H. S. Holt, of London, England, chairman of the directors of the Commercial Telegraph Construction Syndicate (Limited), and the Hon. James B. Roche, of London, England, had the honour to have with you yesterday, and in accordance with your suggestion we have the honour to submit to you the following memorandum with regard to the construction of a telegraph line from Skagway to Dawson City, in the Yukon district :—

The Northern Commercial Telegraph Company (Limited) was incorporated by an Act of the Canadian Parliament passed at its last session, chaptered 111, for the purpose of, amongst other things, constructing and operating, as mentioned in clause 3 of the Act (copy inclosed), cable and telegraph lines between Vancouver and Dawson City.

The company has an authorized capital of £100,000, and the Act of incorporation provides that as soon as 25 per cent thereon has been subscribed and 10 per cent thereon has been paid into a chartered bank, a board of directors shall be elected by the shareholders.

In October, 1898, the Hon. James B. Roche, one of the undersigned, having previously visited the Yukon district, decided to take up the matter of the construction and operation of a cable and telegraph line to that country, and arranged with the provisional directors of the Canadian company to proceed to London and take steps to obtain subscriptions for the company's capital, to make the necessary arrangements for the purchase of material, for the making of surveys, and for the construction, in the first place, of the land portion of the telegraph line from Skagway to Dawson City, and later for the laying of the cable from a point on Vancouver Island to a point north of Juneau.

Before returning to England, in October last, Mr. Roche visited Washington, D.C., and arranged with the United States authorities to procure the requisite permission to lay and land the submarine cable through American waters and upon American territory for the necessary distance, and as incidental thereto for the construction of the land line between Skagway and the summit over the small extent of the American territory between these points.

On his return to England no time was lost in taking steps to arrange for the raising of the necessary capital for the contemplated work, which resulted in a company, "The Commercial Telegraph Construction Syndicate (Limited)" being formed in the latter part of January last for the purpose of entering into the various contracts which the operations of the Canadian company rendered necessary.

I may say that I first met Mr. Roche in British Columbia after he had returned from the Yukon.

This syndicate has contracted with W. T. Henley's Telegraph Works (Limited), of 27 Martin's Lane, Cannon Street, London, Eng., to undertake the construction, laying and erection of the land line. Henley's Company is the most responsible cable and telegraph construction company in England, and has lately laid the cable from Halifax to Bermuda. Mr. Sydney Gedge, M.P., is its chairman, and will no doubt answer any inquiries.

The wire necessary for the land line was ordered at an early date and has been made. One-half of it was shipped from Liverpool on 15th March, 1899, and is at the present moment on its way to Vancouver.

A survey of the route of the land line has been made, and upon the report of that survey, the contracts referred to have been entered into. Arrangements for the delivery of the necessary telegraph poles have also been made.

Mr. Holt, who is the chairman of the syndicate, and Mr. Roche came to Ottawa this week with the necessary authority to subscribe the necessary capital stock in the Canadian company, and to make the requisite payment thereon as required by that company's Act of incorporation. The Canadian company has been duly organized by the requisite amount of the capital stock having been so subscribed, and the requisite amount paid in thereon, to the credit of the company in the Bank of Montreal, at Ottawa.

Mr. PRIOR.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, you will see that they left nothing undone that was called for by their charter.

Before returning to England last October,—
That was six months before this letter was written.

Before returning to England last October, Mr. Roche had acquainted the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals with his connection with the charter of the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company (Limited), and of his intention to proceed to arrange for the carrying out of its object, and it was not until two weeks ago that he learned with great surprise of the intention of the Dominion Government to construct as a public work a telegraph line over the same route as that authorized by the charter of the Canadian company.

In view of the expenditure and preparations which the company above mentioned have already made and arranged for, to carry out the above telegraph and cable scheme, and of the fact that the construction and operation by the Government of another line of telegraph to serve the same purposes might seriously prejudice the carrying out of the cable portion of the company's scheme, the undersigned would respectfully submit, as there can be no necessity for two lines of telegraph over the route in question, the Government should not proceed with the building of its proposed line.

The companies intend going on at once with the construction of the land line from Skagway to Dawson City, and expect to have it completed and in operation early in July next. The undersigned begs further to state that if the Government decides to abandon the construction of its proposed line the companies will take over at cost and charge all material that the Government may have acquired for the purpose of such construction.

By the charter of the Canadian company, and by the general Acts respecting telegraph and marine electric telegraphs, the priority of Government messages and the fixing of the rates to be charged by the company on all business are fully provided for.

We have the honour to be, sir,

Your obedient servants,
(Sgd.) ALLEN HALEY.
(Sgd.) H. S. HOLT,
(Sgd.) JAMES ROCHE.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). What is the date of that letter?

Mr. PRIOR. The date is the 11th April, 1899, and it is addressed to the Hon. J. I. Tarte. The next letter brought down is from Mr. Gobell, the Deputy Minister of Public Works, dated 15th April, four days after the above letter, and addressed to Allan Haley, Esq., M.P. It is as follows:—

Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, 5th April, 1899.

Dear Sir,—The hon. the Minister has had under consideration the letter you have sent to him in reference to the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company, which, as you state, has taken active steps towards the construction of a line of telegraph from Skagway to Dawson City.

The hon. the Minister thinks you will easily understand that the fact that charters are granted to companies for the purpose of constructing works over a certain territory does not preclude the Government of Canada, if it thinks such a course advisable, from undertaking the construction of such works.

I may say, however, that the hon. the Minister has never been officially apprised, as he should have been (the matter being of his department),—

I wish the House to pay particular attention to those words, "the matter being of his department."

—of the intention of the company, and he regrets that it is only when he has taken all the necessary steps for the purpose, despatched a party of men to undertake the construction, purchased the materials required, that it is brought to his knowledge that a chartered company is about to undertake the same work.

The hon. Minister further believes that if any disappointment is experienced by the company, it is largely and, in so far as he is concerned,—

Mark the words, "so far as he is concerned."

—absolutely due to the fact that he, as the responsible Minister in charge of the construction of telegraph lines, has not been informed in time of the fact that an action parallel to his own was intended to be taken by the company in question.

He regrets that matters are now in such a position that he does not see how it is possible for the department to withdraw from its present situation.

I have the honour to be, sir,
Yours very truly,
(Sgd.) A. GOBEIL,
Deputy Minister.

Allen Haley, Esq., M.P.

On the 21st April, or seven days afterwards, there is a letter from Mr. Allan Haley, to the Minister of Public Works, which reads as follows:—

Ottawa, April 21st, 1899.

The Hon. J. I. Tarte,
Minister of Public Works.

Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated 15th instant, signed by your Deputy Minister, in reply to the communication which Mr. Holt, Mr. Roche and myself forwarded to you on the 11th instant on the subject of the construction of a telegraph line between Skagway and Dawson City. I may say that, although your deputy's letter bears date as already stated, on the 15th, it only reached me at the House of Commons about 5 o'clock this afternoon.

As you may remember, our letter of the 11th instant was written upon your suggestion for the purpose, as you stated, of enabling you to bring this matter before the Government in Council, which you said you intended to do, but your deputy's letter does not indicate that the matter has been submitted to Council.

As was stated in our interview with you, as well as in our letter, Mr. Roche, when he first took up the matter of the construction of the line in October last, acquainted the hon. the Minister of Railways and Canals of his intention in that respect, having been given to understand and believing that the head of the Department of Railways and Canals was the proper member of the Government to approach on the subject. From time to time since then, the Minister of Railways and Canals has been informed of the steps that were taken, and the progress that was being made in the matter. Under these circumstances, we do not think that the representatives of our company can be blamed for your want of official notice of the fact that the construction of the telegraph line by our company was being arranged for. We further have to state that the fact that the Minister of Railways assured Mr. Roche in October last that the proposed construction by the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company of the telegraph line in question would be looked upon favourably and have the sympathy and support of the Government, is, in our view, a sufficient reason why the Government should not have undertaken and should not now proceed with the construction of a line for the same purpose. As the only difficulty suggested in the way of your department withdrawing from the proposed construction of the line in question appears to be one arising out of the expenditure which your department has already incurred in the matter, I cannot see why it is impossible so to withdraw in view of the fact that the companies which my associates and myself represent, have already, in our former letter offered to indemnify the Government fully in respect of that expenditure, which offer I now beg to renew on their behalf.

It is, I presume, unnecessary to urge what must surely be admitted, that two lines of telegraph through the district of country in question are quite unnecessary, and in view of the facts above, and in our former letter, stated, we consider that we have the right to insist that there should be a reconsideration by the Governor in Council to build this line as a public work, and we have, therefore, most respectfully to request that you will for that purpose bring the matter before Council at the earliest possible date.

Awaiting your reply,

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,
(Sgd.) ALLEN HALEY.

The next letter is from J. Israel Tarte :

Office of the Minister of Public Works of Canada,

Ottawa, April 27th, 1899.

Allen Haley, Esq.,
President Northern Commercial Telegraph Co.,
Ottawa.

My dear Sir,—In answer to your communication of April 21st, and to follow suits to the conversation that I had with you, I beg to say that I was authorized by His Excellency the Governor General in Council to go on with the construction of the telegraph line from Skagway to Dawson, with the ultimate object of constructing also a line from Quesnelle to Dawson. When I was so authorized, your company had not given to myself, or to the Governor in Council, any intimation that you intended going on with the work authorized by your charter.

I do not know, Mr. Speaker, how many members of the Government a company is to give notice to. One would have supposed that if they had given notice to the Minister of Railways and Canals, even though not the proper Minister, he would have sent the notice to the proper Minister. He goes on to say :

I feel that it is in the public interest that the line from Quesnelle to Dawson be proceeded with as soon as possible, and, in fact, the present portion of the line that we are constructing will be used as part of the line from Quesnelle to Dawson. In my conversation with you yesterday, I stated that no guarantee having been given to us that your company or any other company would be ready to go on with the construction of the telegraph line on the basis pointed out in this letter, the Government does not see anything else to do than to go on with the work which is now under way.

I may say that we have received reports from the officers in charge of our line that the work is proceeding speedily.

However, I will always be glad to receive any offer from your company, without pledging myself to accept any such offer.

Truly yours,
(Sgd.) J. ISRAEL TARTE.

This, Mr. Speaker, constitutes the whole correspondence that has been brought down to the House by the Government; but, as a matter of fact, I know that that was not all that took place. I do not know that I can give all that has taken place, but I can give a good deal more than has been brought down to the House. The hon. Minister of Public Works stated that he had brought down everything that was in his department, so far as he knew. The last letter I read was answered by Mr. Haley the very same day on which it was written, and it seems to me extraordinary that that letter cannot be found in the Department of Public Works; and it is another extraordinary and very suspicious circumstance, to my mind, that that letter was the only one in which the Minister of Railways and Canals was directly concerned. It was as follows:—

Ottawa, April 27th, 1899.

To the Hon. J. Israel Tarte,
Minister of Public Works,
Ottawa.

Sir,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of yours of to-day in regard to the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company matter.

With reference to your statement as to your want of notice of the intention of our company to go on with the work, I can only repeat that the Hon. Mr. Blair, the Minister of Railways and Canals, informed my co-directors by letter that his department was the proper one to communicate with on the subject, and that they accordingly did so as early as October last, and from time to time since then. I do not, therefore, think that it can be said that the company did not take the proper steps to communicate to the Government their intentions.

You stated to me yesterday that you had a strong preference for the all-Canadian route. I communicated this to my colleagues upon the board, and they ask me to acquaint you with the fact that if the survey will show that this line is feasible, they are quite prepared to abandon the cable portion of their scheme and make the communications between Vancouver and Dawson City by land only.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) ALLEN HALEY.

Now, I have here some letters which Mr. Roche's solicitor has put into my hand, and Mr. PRIOR.

which he states are true copies of the correspondence which has taken place, none of which has been brought down by the Government. Here is one from Allen Haley, H. S. Holt and Jas. Roche:

Ottawa, Ont., April 18, 1899.

The Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier,
G.C.M.G., M.P.

Sir,—We have the honour to address you as the head of the Dominion Government on the subject of the construction of a cable and telegraph line from British Columbia to the Yukon district. On yesterday we had the honour of an interview upon the same subject with the Hon. Mr. Tarte, his department being, as we understood, the one under which the construction of the proposed Government line of telegraph to the Yukon was being undertaken, and in accordance with his suggestion we wrote him on the 11th instant a letter, of which the inclosed is a copy. On the following day, as we regretted to learn, Mr. Tarte was taken seriously ill, and as the result has been confined to his house and unable to attend to business ever since. Owing, we presume, to Mr. Tarte's illness, we have had no reply to our letter, and as it is of the greatest importance to the companies that we should have a reply at the earliest possible date, we respectfully request that you would take up the matter with a view to giving us an answer. We may further say that we understood from Mr. Tarte that the subject was one which would have to be dealt with by the Governor in Council, although in accordance with his suggestion the letter was addressed to him, and we therefore consider that we are quite in order in addressing you as the head of the Government for the purpose of having the subject dealt with.

We have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servants,
(Sgd.) ALLEN HALEY,
(Sgd.) H. S. HOLT,
(Sgd.) JAMES ROCHE.

I do not see any reply to that, and I am informed that no reply was received. On the 27th of April the following letter was sent:

Ottawa, April 27th, 1899.

To the Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, G.C.M.G., President of the Privy Council,
Ottawa.

Sir,—
Re the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company (Limited).

Referring to our interview with you this afternoon, and in compliance with your request, we have the honour to submit to you the following facts:—

There is no use my reading the whole of this letter, because a great portion of it consists simply of a copy of what was sent to the Minister of Public Works, setting forth the whole circumstances. It states that the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company was incorporated, and goes on to say:

Whilst in Ottawa last October, Mr. Roche acquainted the hon. the Minister of Railways and Canals with his connection with the charter of the above company, and of his intention to proceed to arrange for the carrying out of its objects, and he received from Mr. Blair a letter on the subject, of which the following is a copy:—

Department of Railways and Canals, Canada.
Minister's Office,
Ottawa, October 6th, 1898.

Dear Mr. Roche,—I am very much pleased indeed to learn that it is your intention, representing the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company (Limited), to proceed without unnecessary delay with the construction of the telegraph line from the coast into Dawson City, to be followed thereafter with reasonable despatch by the laying of a cable or cables from Vancouver to the point of connection with the land line.

The Government is extremely desirous that private enterprise should take up this work, and that it be prosecuted without delay; and the needs of the district are such that we believe an enterprise of that nature would be found extremely profitable. You may rely upon receiving the countenance and approval of the Government in carrying this enterprise forward to a successful issue.

Yours faithfully,
ANDREW G. BLAIR.

J. B. Roche, Esq.,
Albermarle Hotel, New York City.

Yet this was not brought down. And the Minister of Public Works has continually told these gentlemen that the Government had no advice that these gentlemen intended to go on with the work. These gentlemen, in their letter to the right hon. the First Minister, continued as follows:—

In another letter by the Hon. Mr. Blair to Mr. Roche, the former wrote as follows:—

“Since you were here I had a call from the gentleman who represents the other company incorporated at the last session of Parliament.

That is the company incorporated as the Dawson City and Victoria Telegraph Company. This letter is from the three provisional directors to the right hon. First Minister, after they could not get any satisfaction out of the Minister of Public Works, and they quote the letter of the Minister of Railways and Canals.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). What is the date?

Mr. PRIOR. On the copy I have here there is no date. The letter is from Mr. Blair to Mr. Roche, and is signed “A. G. Blair”:

Since you were here I had a call from the gentleman who represents the other company incorporated at the last session of Parliament. He evidently came in consequence of newspaper statements respecting your action, and is the bearer of cable messages from the gentlemen in England connected with the other company, desiring to know how far the Government is committed to yourself,—

That is Mr. Roche.

—and intimating that if matters had not gone too far to be recalled, or if we were not open to treat with them on similar terms, it would hardly be worth while for them to proceed with their undertaking. I mention this so that you may learn what is moving—

He is posting the other company.

—and as an additional reason which may urge you to such activity in the prosecution of your enterprise as is practicable. I told this gentleman very frankly that my department had an understanding with you, and that we were giving you the preference, at least until we were satisfied you were delaying in pushing the work unduly; and I said that upon that point we would be in no position to form an opinion until next spring.

Yours faithfully,
(Sgd.) ANDREW G. BLAIR.

The letter to the right hon. First Minister then goes on to set forth the circumstances just as they are set forth in the letter to the Minister of Public Works, and then proceeds as follows:—

From time to time, after Mr. Roche's return to England, the Minister of Railways and Canals—the proper Minister, as Mr. Roche understood, to communicate with on the subject—was informed of what steps were being taken and what progress was being made in the matter in England.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Who states that?

Mr. PRIOR. This is a letter to the right hon. First Minister from Messrs. Haley, Roche and Holt.

Mr. Holt, who is the chairman of the syndicate, and Mr. Roche came to Ottawa on the 9th instant with the necessary authority to subscribe the required capital stock in the Canadian company, and make the requisite payments thereon as required by the Act of incorporation, and the Canadian company has been duly organized by said requisite amount of stock having been subscribed, and the necessary amount paid thereon to the credit of the company in the Bank of Montreal, Ottawa. It was not until about ten days before Mr. Roche and Mr. Holt left London for Canada (on the 27th March), that they heard with great surprise of the intention of the Dominion Government to construct, as a public work, a telegraph line over the same route as that authorized by the charter of the above company. They at once informed the Minister of Railways and Canals that they were leaving for Ottawa immediately.

Then it goes on:

It was only after the arrival of Mr. Roche and Mr. Holt in Ottawa that we learned for the first time that the construction of the proposed Government line was in charge of the Department of Public Works, and we submit herewith a copy of the correspondence which has passed between the Minister of that department and ourselves on the subject.

Mr. BERGERON. And those papers are not brought down.

Mr. PRIOR. None of them.

We think we should point out in addition that the subscription of the necessary capital was obtained upon the assurances given us, as above, that we might rely on the support of the Government, and we now think we may fairly ask the Government to abandon the construction of a rival line of telegraph.

That letter was from these gentlemen, the provisional directors, to the First Minister. No answer was given to that, so far as I can find out, and on the 3th of May another letter was sent signed by Allen Haley and James Roche. Mr. Holt had then gone to England. This letter is to the right hon. First Minister :

Sir,—Re Northern Commercial Telegraph Company.

In accordance with your request at our interview of the 29th ult., we forwarded you a memorial of the whole facts in respect of the matter, and you stated that you would bring the subject before Council on Monday last (May 1st), and that we would receive an answer on the following day.

We have not had any reply or even any acknowledgment of our memorial.

As we have on more than one occasion on behalf of the company stated, at the request of the Minister of Public Works, our readiness to reimburse the Government for any cost they have been put to in preparing to commence the work themselves, we must now withdraw this offer, it not having been accepted, and we having decided to commence our line forthwith.

We have the honour to be, Sir,

Your obedient servants,

(Sgd.) ALLEN HALEY,
(Sgd.) JAMES ROCHE.

I am told that there is no answer to that, and nothing more has been heard about it. I can only tell you what I have been told by Mr. Roche's solicitor. That is the whole correspondence I have in my hand. The first portion was what the Government brought down, and the second, and most important part, is what the Government did not bring down. I cannot believe, for one moment, that the Government did not know that that correspondence had taken place. I cannot for one moment believe that the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals was not cognizant of the fact that he had months ago written letters to these gentlemen urging them to build a line and telling them that they would have the Government support, and he must have known also that the Minister of Public Works, who had been before Council, as I presume he had, had got authority from Council to build a line on the same route as that on which those gentlemen had got a charter.

I might also state, before going further, that the other company, the Dawson City and Victoria Telegraph Company, had also been at work. They had got the capital subscribed, they had spent quite a large sum, so I am informed by the directors who have written to me—over 400 pounds sterling—in getting that company started, they have paid the expenses of sending out an engineer to the Pacific coast, they had sent him to New York, and then further and had paid his expenses, and when he got there, of course they had to recall him. They also made an issue of stock on the market in London, and now I am informed that they have sent, through Lord Strathcona, a claim against the Government for damages. I refer now to the Dawson City and Victoria Telegraph Company, which is now called the British Columbia, Victoria and Dawson City Telegraph Company.

Mr. PRIOR.

The hon. Minister of Public Works is not here or I would put the question to him, but perhaps the hon. Minister of Railways will tell us whether he did or did not give any notice to his colleague the Minister of Public Works, before these gentlemen came from London, of their intention of building the line, of what they had been doing and, in fact, the whole information he had from them. Did the hon. gentleman give the Minister of Public Works notice of this or did he keep the whole of this information to himself, and let the Minister of Public Works go on building the line and let these other gentlemen go on spending their money? The Minister of Public Works was asked, as well as the right hon. First Minister, to bring this matter before the Council. Did they do so? I presume they did. I presume that the hon. Minister of Public Works did bring it before Council or else how did he get the money to proceed with the work his department is now doing in the Yukon? Did he get a Governor General's warrant? There is no parliamentary vote for it, there never was any vote for it, so far as I know last session, there certainly must have been some kind of hole-and-corner proceeding which nobody knew anything about except those interested.

There is another thing to which I wish to refer. The hon. Minister of Public Works, in one of his letters, states that he had no knowledge as to the standing of the company, its financial standing, whether it was capable of carrying on the work. I was informed in this House by the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries, on the 15th of May, in answer to a question I put him, and the question and reply is here in "Hansard" :

Mr. PRIOR (by Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper) asked :

" 1. Is it not a fact that the English representatives of the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company (Limited), now in Canada, have communicated to the Government the readiness of the company to commence forthwith the construction of the Dawson and Skagway telegraph line under their charter ?

" 2. Have the Government received information from the High Commissioner for Canada, in London, that the company which the gentlemen represent is quite capable of carrying out the work, and whether, under these circumstances, the Government proposes to undertake the work themselves, in opposition to an Act of Parliament granted last session to the above named company ?"

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). 1. The company mentioned only communicated with the Department of Public Works—which is in charge of the construction of telegraphs—about three weeks ago, its readiness to construct the telegraph line from Skagway to Dawson.

Do you mean to tell me that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries was so ignorant of the correspondence that had taken place between these gentlemen and the Minister of Railways and Canals ?

Active steps had been taken by the department some time before for the construction of the telegraph line in question. 2. On the 22nd April, Lord Strathcona telegraphed, at request of company, that their finances were ample. I may remark, with regard to question 2, that it is argumentative in its character, as many questions are that are now being put on the list.

Now, Sir, after they received that telegram, surely they had no compunction of conscience about trusting these gentlemen with carrying on this work. It is not a very expensive work.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. May I ask what company was referred to in Lord Strathcona's telegram stating that its finances were ample ?

Mr. PRIOR. That referred to the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company (Limited), the one with which the correspondence was held which has been read. It seems to me there must be an extraordinary state of affairs in the Cabinet when, in serious matters like this, dealings with gentlemen of high standing both in the financial and political world in England, charters can be given by Parliament, capital can be subscribed and the work actually commenced ; when correspondence can be carried on with one member of the Government, a gentleman at the head of one of the largest departments under the control of the Government ; when letters can be received from him stating that the Government is prepared to back them up in every way and hopes to see them put the work through as quickly as possible, and, after all, when these gentlemen come to Canada they are told that they have made a mistake, that they have got to the wrong department, and they go to the Minister of Public Works and he tells them that not a word has been said to him or to the Government. So these gentlemen, who, perhaps, do not know as much as we do as to what is the proper department—

Mr. FOSTER. From whom did they get their charter ?

Mr. PRIOR. From the Parliament of Canada.

Mr. FOSTER. And from the committee over which the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Blair) presides.

Mr. PRIOR. As the hon. gentleman (Mr. Foster) suggests, before they can get their charter, it must be approved by the committee over which the Minister of Railways and Canals presides. If it is the case that the Government are at loggerheads, that they do not trust one another, that even in Council when one Minister proposes a matter, the other Ministers clear out, it seems to me that I have not done very wrong in bringing the matter before the House. To my mind it is a most lamentable exhibition of want of confidence between the Ministers or of jealousy. The Minister of Public Works stated in some letters that were written that this matter was one of too great value to be carried on by a private corporation.

An hon. MEMBER. There ought to be something in it for the boy.

Mr. PRIOR. That is the only conclusion you can come to. I may be right or wrong, but I venture to think that it should be a principle with the Government that, where a matter of public interest can be undertaken and carried out by a private corporation and by private enterprise, the Government should not step in and compete with them. I do not think it is fair. And as regards this matter being too valuable, too much money to be made out of it, as the Minister of Public Works said, if gentlemen look at the charters they will see that the Government and Parliament took powers to keep down the rates, to cut them down at any time if they were exorbitant—in fact they could cut down moderate rates if they chose. Now, the Minister of Railways and Canals, as I have said time and time again, told these gentlemen they were to go on with the work as quickly as they possibly could, that the Government would support them and wanted to see the line constructed. This will be seen by the correspondence. The Government, no doubt, has a right to build the line. But I ask : Is it in the interests of the public that the Government should step in and build a line that they must have known was being carried out by companies that had plenty of backing, that had commenced already, had ordered their material and were actually on the ground with some of it ? To my mind, this is a great breach of faith and one that is bound to injure the credit—yes, the credit of Canada—in the money markets of the world. We are trying to get all the capital we can into Canada, especially into British Columbia ; and if the people of the financial world see that, no matter what charters they get from the Government, the Government can step in on the ground that the concession is a valuable one and compete with them, or even knock them out, it will check the inflow of capital. In regard to that, I would show what the railway and shipping "World" of March last says with regard to the other company—the Dawson City and Victoria Telegraph Company :

We were recently informed that this company had let a contract for the construction of the line, and that the resident engineer had been despatched to British Columbia to start the work, so that no doubt considerable expense has been incurred. When the prospectus of the debenture stock was issued, we felt compelled to criticise it adversely on account of the visionary estimates it contained ; but we want to see the company get fair-play, and now that the Government has decided to build a line and ruin the franchise, the company is certainly entitled to liberal compensation. If there are reasons to-day for the line being built by the Government, they doubtless existed a year ago, and the two charters above mentioned should not have been granted. The fact that the C., B. C. & D. C. T. Co. was issuing debentures and preparing for work was given wide publicity, and yet it does not appear that the Government notified the company of its intention to render the charter valueless. This mode of procedure is unworthy of a Government, and is calculated to seriously prejudice Canadian interests in Europe. If capitalists once came to the conclusion that they are not to be treated honestly by the Government, and that after proceeding in good faith to carry out the powers unanimously given them by Parliament, their franchises are to be arbitrarily rendered worthless, they will leave such investments severely alone.

I think this opinion must be the opinion of any right-thinking gentleman in this House. Evidently, the Government have been looking up the letter they received in 1897 from Mr. C. Hosmer in which he told them that this was a valuable franchise and the Canadian Pacific Railway would build it and hand it over to the Government for a certain concession. I presume that is what the Government is building on now. I do not want to say anything more. Other hon. gentlemen, I hope, will take the matter up. It seems to me a disgraceful affair—I cannot make use of a less expressive word—that the Government should pretend to these gentlemen that they had never received any notice from them, and should build a competing line which is going to ruin these two charters. I also think that both of these companies, which have spent large sums of money, should either receive compensation from the Government or be allowed to go on with their work.

THE MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). Perhaps it would be well that I should state to the House at this stage what my knowledge of this matter is. As the hon. gentleman has devoted a good deal of time to it, has read the correspondence, and has undertaken to characterize the conduct of the Government in terms far from mild, it may be as well that I should for that reason also put the whole facts before the House, so far as they are within my knowledge. In the first place, the hon. gentleman alluded to the fact that there had been some correspondence, as he stated, from Mr. Roche and others to me, and from myself to them, which had not been brought down. I want to say in respect to that, that there was no intentional withholding of any correspondence which I had with the gentlemen he has named. I explained to the House yesterday that I was not acquainted with the fact that this return was being sent in, or that it was before the House, and that I would have my officers see whether there was any correspondence which could properly be brought down, and if so, it would be brought down. I gave these instructions. I was not prepared for the hon. gentleman bringing this up again to-day, or I would have taken extraordinary pains to hurry the inquiry and ascertain as to that without delay. I can only say at this stage that all the letters which were written by me to Mr. Roche have been read to the House. They only consist of two, copies of which the hon. gentleman appears to have in his possession, and which he has read to the House. I have no doubt those copies have been furnished by Mr. Roche. Mr. Roche has not said, and Mr. Roche will not say, that he ever wrote a letter to me. He certainly never did. I have none from him in my possession, except it might possibly be a short note which I will refer to later, and which would not be at all material to the examination of this question, or to the forming of a judgment upon it.

My first connection with the matter arose from being the Government member upon the Committee of Railways, Canals and Telegraph Lines. Two Bills came before that committee during the session of 1897, and were dealt with by it. The gentlemen who were promoting those Bills respectively, more especially the gentlemen who were promoting the Northern Commercial Company's Bill, were in communication with me in respect to it, I presume by reason of the connection which arises between promoters and the Government member of that committee in respect to such Bills, they assume that so far as any particular member of the Government would be supposed to have cognizance of the policy of the Government in respect to the incorporation of companies, and generally in respect to telegraphs. I was that member. It would be, of course, a different question if the Government should decide upon the construction of a telegraph line; then the subject would immediately pass under the direct control of the Minister of Public Works. But that stage had not been reached. These gentlemen my hon. friend has mentioned here, the hon. member for Hants (Mr. Haley), the hon. member for King's, N.B. (Mr. Donville), I think, and I am not sure but what there may have been another member—at all events, those gentlemen were in frequent communication with me while the matter was before the Committee of Railways, Canals and Telegraph Lines. After that, they advised me that some English gentlemen would take hold of the Northern Commercial enterprise, and carry it through, and one of them introduced Mr. Roche to me. He came to the office and told me he had been looking into it, that he had been in communication with our friends who were incorporated in the company, and he was anxious to know what attitude the Government would take with respect to it. I told Mr. Roche very frankly that the Government felt the necessity of having a telegraph line built through that country as speedily as possible. I told him we had not undertaken it before, because we were in hopes a private company would take it up, but that it would need to be taken hold of with energy, with promptness, and that no delay could possibly be allowed, because the subject was of such importance, it was so vitally necessary to that section of the country that we should have telegraphic communication with it, that no delay would be countenanced by the Government. These gentlemen, members of Parliament, friends of the Government and incorporators of this company, asked me to write a letter to Mr. Roche which would express the views of the Government on the question. That was the letter which was first read, and which is dated the 6th of October. I did not fail in the conversation I had with Mr. Roche, to assure him that this enterprise, if it was to be taken up by his company, must be taken up energetically, it must be taken up in a business way, and with the intention to carry it through, otherwise the Government would certainly take it up itself. After writing that letter to Mr. Roche, I think I received a short note from him in which he told me that he was then about leaving for New York to sail for England to have this matter immediately put through. That was in October; it might be the 6th, the 7th or the 8th. I am not sure but it was the 6th, the very date of that letter which was referred to. He said he was going to New York, and he asked me in a confidential way to let him know if I heard that there was any disposition on the part of anybody interested in the other company to move in the matter. I certainly did prefer the company which is known now as the Northern Commercial Company, so far as my own preferences were concerned as a member of the Government. On examination of the routes which are laid down for these two telegraph lines, hon. members will perceive that the line which the Northern Commercial Company is incorporated to construct was the one which could be built the most speedily, and which would give us connection with Skagway with the least delay, and that it was very much the more preferable route, and I expressed myself in that manner. Now, Sir, having received a request from Mr. Roche, either verbally or in writing—I do not wish to commit myself to a direct statement as to whether it was verbal or in writing, I think it may have been in writing—asking me to let him know if anything was going on which would show there was activity on the part of the rival company, I told him I would do so if I heard anything, and he gave me his address, and I sent the note which has been read secondly by my hon. friend, the date of which he does not appear to have in his possession. That letter was written confidentially by me to Mr. Roche, and whatever Mr. Roche may be, whether a member of Parliament or not, and I understand he is a member of Parliament, I have no hesitation in saying that he is no gentleman. I cannot conceive it possible that a gentleman having asked another to make a confidential and friendly communication to him, would make use of that communication in the public press. He published both of those letters in the London papers for the purpose of serving his own ends, in entire disregard of what would obtain between gentlemen. I do not hesitate to say that, and I am not only saying it here, I am repeating what I have stated in effect to Mr. Roche himself when he came here a short time after action had been taken by the Government, and I think shortly after the session of Parliament. Mr. Roche called upon me after the opening of the session of Parliament, and said that he had been made aware of the fact that the Government was moving in respect to the construction of the telegraph line. I said to him at once: Mr. Roche, I am bound to tell you, sir, that I feel, in making use, as you did, of confidential communications, which I sent at your request, and in a friendly manner, and by publishing them in the public press in London, you have acted in such a way as that I do not think you have any right to expect any further consideration from me, nor do I think—

Mr. PRIOR. Were those communications on public business?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. No, Sir; this second letter was a private communication, confidential communication; it was so understood by Mr. Roche, and it was invited from me as confidential and friendly communication. After this communication, which I speak of as being confidential, was sent by me to Mr. Roche—

Mr. WALLACE. I would like to ask the hon. Minister whether these letters were marked "confidential"?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I cannot say whether they were marked "confidential" or not.

Mr. WALLACE. Has the hon. Minister copies of them?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I have copies of them.

Mr. WALLACE. Then, why cannot you give us the information?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I have not seen them since they were written; I cannot say whether they were marked "confidential," but that question does not enter into them, and I wish to say further that Mr. Roche did not pretend that, because they were not marked "confidential" he was justified in using them. He offered some lame explanation and admitted that they ought not to have been used, and acknowledged the confidential character of the communication in his conversation with me.

Mr. PRIOR. Nobody who knows Mr. Roche will ever say that he wants to make any lame excuses.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. My hon. friend (Mr. Prior) may have that opinion of Mr. Roche. I can only point to the use he made of the letter which he had invited me in a confidential way to write to him, which was not the use I would expect that a gentleman would make of a communication received in that manner. That is my opinion of him, and I state it openly and without hesitation. After having written that letter, which was close upon the 6th of October, I wish to inform this House that down until the time that the Government had taken action, that it had decided that it could delay no longer the construction of the telegraph line from the Yukon country, from the 6th of October down until that time, no one, either verbally or in writing, by telegraph or by letter, Mr. Roche, or any one on Mr. Roche's behalf, gave to me the slightest information, or intimation that they were intending to carry on this work, or that they had made any progress in that direction. There was, I believe, a total blank between these dates, and as the hon. member for Victoria, B.C. (Mr. Prior) is in close communication with Mr. Roche, he will be able to ask Mr. Roche to put him in possession of the copy of any communication which he ever caused to be sent to me between the dates I speak of, from the 6th or 7th or 8th of October, down to the day when the Government came to a decision in respect to this matter.

Mr. HAGGART. At what date did the Government decide?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I do not remember.

Mr. WALLACE. We want to know that.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I will give it to you; I do not carry it in my mind, but we will be ready to furnish hon. gentlemen with all the information.

Mr. PRIOR. Will the hon. gentleman let us know when the Order in Council was passed?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Certainly.

Mr. WALLACE. We want to know. The hon. Minister is able to give the House the date of the 6th of October.

Mr. BLAIR.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I give it because the date has been given here. We will furnish hon. gentleman with the date when the Order in Council was passed. I want to state that, speaking for myself, and so far as I know, for every member of the Council, there was no notice, no communication of any kind, or description, received from Mr. Roche, or on behalf of Mr. Roche, stating that he had moved one peg from the moment that he left this side of the water with the avowed and declared intention of immediately taking this work up and pushing it through.

Mr. PRIOR. Did you not get any letters?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. No, sir. I desire to say, in the most unqualified manner, that I never heard from him until after action was taken by the Government. When the date of the session was approaching, and when the spring was opening and we were feeling that it was time that some action should be taken with respect to this matter, the subject was brought up. I do not know whether I would be free to state what took place in Council—

Mr. WALLACE. Did not the hon. gentleman know from these letters that have been read that action was being taken?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I did not know of these letters until they were mentioned here.

Mr. WALLACE. Mentioned here?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Until they were mentioned here in Ottawa.

Mr. WALLACE. They were published in the London "Times."

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I did not say they were published in the London "Times," because I do not know. I say they were published in a London paper, so I was informed. I cannot say that, because the first intimation I had of their publication I received from the hon. leader of the Opposition (Sir Charles Tupper) reading from a London paper.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. It was from the "Financial Times," of London.

The MINISTER OF FINANCE (Mr. Fielding). That is different from the London "Times."

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I know that Mr. Roche, when I mentioned the subject to him and complained of his conduct, admitted that they were published in the London papers. The papers that they were published in was a matter of indifference to me. I did not inquire and I do not know. I think I am free to say this much, that when the subject came under consideration in Council it was remarked upon that neither of the companies that had been incorporated by this Parliament at the last session, had made any move whatever towards pushing this work through, so far as we knew. And if I were free to say what statement I made to Council on the subject—I do not know that I am, but, if I were, hon. members would know that Council was in full possession of the knowledge that these people of the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company, who had expressed, through Mr. Roche, their intention of going on speedily with the work, had never moved a step since October last, so far as my knowledge extended. Thus, it was necessary that something should be done, and Council came to the conclusion which they did reach in the matter. These are the facts substantially as they are in my possession, and I invite the hon. member for Victoria, B.C. (Mr. Prior) now to call upon Mr. Roche, to furnish him with a copy, or I would ask him to furnish the original, or the press copy, of any communication, which he himself ever forwarded to me on the subject, from the 6th of October until after Council had decided this question.

Mr. PRIOR. May I ask the hon. gentleman (Mr. Blair) a question? In regard to the British Columbia and Dawson City Company, have the Government had any information from them that they were carrying out their work?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. None whatever, so far as I know. I never heard from them until very recently, and until this subject came up. I understand now that they were trying to organize their company in London, but as to whether they were organizing or not I cannot speak with confidence. It appears to me that the conclusion which the hon. gentleman drew from the facts, which he stated to this House, was an entirely unwarranted conclusion even from these facts. The hon. gentleman has said that the conduct of the Government was most disgraceful in reference to this subject. I want to say, if I can form any judgment as to what is proper conduct, the company have no reason to complain of any treatment they received either from the Government as a whole, or from any member of it. So far as I can form an opinion on this question, that is the judgment I have formed.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I would like to ask the hon. gentleman a question before he sits down, because this is a very important matter, one of the gravest that has come before this House. He attaches great importance to not having heard anything from the company. Now, the communication that the hon. gentleman had in Ottawa on the 6th of October with this company was to the following effect:—

I told these gentlemen very frankly that my department had an understanding with you.

In a letter, written the same day, he said to the Commercial Company:

I am very much pleased indeed to learn that it is your intention, representing the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company (Limited), to proceed without unnecessary delay with the construction of a telegraph line from the coast into Dawson City.

My hon. friend has formed a very natural inference as to why these parties came to him, because they knew that he was chairman of the Committee on Railways, Canals and Telegraph Lines, and, therefore, they would naturally go to the chairman of that committee, which had passed the charter for them, as the proper Minister to deal with. They did so. My hon. friend (Mr. Blair) informed the company that he was very glad they were going to proceed with this matter; but he did not stop there, for on the same date he wrote a letter to that company.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS: What date is that?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER: The 6th October; both on the same day. Another company approached the Minister, and the Minister, having had communication with this Northern Commercial Telegraph Company, informed them:

I told these gentlemen very frankly that my department had an understanding with you.

Instead of raising a doubt as to his department being the proper one for them to negotiate with, he told another company, their opponents and rivals, that he could not do anything for them, because his Department of Railways and Canals had an understanding with the Commercial Telegraph Company. I draw the attention of my hon. friend (Mr. Blair) to the fact that this occurred on the 6th of October. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Blair) very well knows that companies are not organized in a day. He knows that this gentleman had to go back to London, that he had to make all the preliminary arrangements for floating the company, and getting the capital together, and that, in the very nature of things, he could not take any action, further than making preliminary arrangements, until the spring opened. I would like, before my hon. friend (Mr. Blair) sits down, that he should address himself to that question, as to where his difficulty arose from the fact of their making no communication to him. There was no time. They had the company to float, which the hon. gentleman (Mr. Blair) knew on the 20th March was floated, because I read to him from the "Financial Times" the use that had been made of his letters in floating the company. The company, therefore, having been floated to a large extent on the authority of the Minister of Railways and Canals, before he advised his colleagues to build the line themselves, he certainly should have informed them that he promised this company they would receive the support of the Government in promptly carrying out their undertaking. He was bound to ascertain what steps they had taken in the undertaking he had with them already, that they would do this work. Therefore, I cannot see what point my hon. friend (Mr. Blair) makes, when he states to the House that, when the Government acted, he had received no communication from the company. There would have been no time for them to communicate. It was only on the 27th of March that they learned it was the intention of the Government to proceed with this work, and the moment Parliament opened, I drew the attention of my hon. friend (Mr. Blair) to this as a very grave and important matter in connection with which the undertakings of the Minister were apparently being overthrown by the action of the Government of which he was a member. I now draw attention to that, in order that, before concluding his remarks, the Minister should clear up that point.

It being Six o'clock, the Speaker left the Chair.

After Recess.

THE NIAGARA, ST. CATHARINES AND TORONTO RAILWAY.

Mr. CALVERT (by Mr. Clarke) moved third reading of Bill (No. 69) to incorporate the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Railway Company.

Mr. SPROULE. In the absence of Mr. Maclean, I move:

That the Bill be not now read a third time, but that it be referred back to the Committee of the Whole, with instructions to amend it so as to provide that the maximum first-class passenger rate on said railway shall not exceed two cents a mile.

I may say, in support of this motion, what is known to almost every member of this House, that if there is any railway in Canada which ought to be able to carry its passengers at that low rate, it would be a railway through this section of country, which is one of the best settled portions of the province of Ontario or of the Dominion of Canada. In addition to that, I am informed that this railway is intended to be an electric railway, and if so, I do not think there is any electric railway in Canada charging more than 2 cents a mile, and, therefore, it would not be any hardship on this road to impose that restriction upon it.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. Speaker, I hope my hon. friend will not press that amendment at the present time. The section through which a portion of this road is built, and through which the company wish to build, is desirous of having further railway communication; and if, as my hon. friend says, it is to be an electric road, there is no doubt that its rates will be in accordance with those of competing roads and will not be anything like 2 cents a mile. Unless a general Act were passed, I think it would be unfair thus to handicap this enterprise. While there may be a great deal to say on the general principle, I hope this amendment will not carry as an amendment to this Bill.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER.

Amendment negatived.

Bill read the third time, and passed.

THE NORTHERN COMMERCIAL TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

House resumed consideration of the motion of the Minister of Finance, that Mr. Speaker do leave the Chair for the House again to go into Committee of Supply.

Mr. SPROULE. I understood that the hon. Minister of Railways had not finished his speech at six o'clock, and I do not see him present to continue the explanation which he desires to give the House. As the Minister has just come in, I would ask, whether it would be in order for him to continue his explanation. It was only owing to his absence that I was about to say a few words.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS (Mr. Blair). I have not yet said what I proposed to say in answer to the question that the hon. gentleman who leads the Opposition had asked me. I understand the hon. gentleman to have made some reference to one of the letters which I have written, and to have said, in that connection, that there ought to be at least some months allowed Mr. Roche within which to arrange this business, and that the action which the Government had taken, assuming that they were under obligation by reason of what had taken place on the subject, was taken without their having allowed the time to Mr. Roche which they should have allowed him under the circumstances. I have just to call the attention of the committee to the copy of the letter which the hon. gentleman read this afternoon to the House, and the committee will see at once that, so far as I was concerned, I gave Mr. Roche no assurance that the Government would be under any obligation to wait his convenience, or that the Government would wait any particular length of time for him to set to work and get this enterprise under way. My letter has already been read, but I would like to read it again, in view of the statement I made before recess :

I am very much pleased indeed to learn that it is your intention, representing the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company (Limited), to proceed without unnecessary delay with the construction of the telegraph line from the coast into Dawson City, to be followed thereafter with reasonable despatch by the laying of a cable or cables from Vancouver to the point of connection with the land line.

The Government is extremely desirous that private enterprise should take up this work, and that it is prosecuted without delay ; and the needs of the district are such that we believe an enterprise of that nature would be found exceedingly profitable.

This is the assurance which the letter contains :

You may rely upon receiving the countenance and approval of the Government in carrying this enterprise forward to a successful issue.

We had a good deal of conversation, and I have been recalling that conversation as well as I could, having regard to the lapse of time, and I am quite clear that Mr. Roche did not understand, from anything which I said to him, that the Government, so far as I was entitled to speak for it in the matter, would hold itself bound, in any way, to stay its hand in the prosecution of this work. I was quite sure, in my own mind, that until Parliament met, and I think I so stated to him, there would be no action taken, and I believe that if that company had gone to work actively, had taken the enterprise up immediately as Mr. Roche expressed his ability to do, there would have been no disposition on the part of the Government to act. Mr. Roche knew from our conversations, that if he wanted to be in the field first with his telegraph line, he would have to go into it without delay ; and in the course of these conversations, he stated, not once but many times, that he had been all over this ground, that he had gone to British Columbia, that he had been through this country, representing, as I understood, a syndicate of capitalists, and that he had studied the situation and come to the conclusion that the proper way to get into that country with a telegraph line was to build one from Skagway through to Dawson, and to connect British Columbia, either at Vancouver or Victoria, by a cable with Skagway. That was the matured scheme he had in his mind and he stated further to me, if I am not mistaken, that he had been down to Washington prior to this, and had made arrangements with the Washington Government. All this took place before he had a word of conversation with me or before I knew that an individual such as Roche had any existence. He said that he had made these explorations in British Columbia before Parliament had actually granted this charter, and he left on my mind, as strongly, as clearly as one could, the impression that he had all the means and was ready to go right ahead with this work without delay. Seeing that he had been through British Columbia, that he had gone over the territory to find out where it was best to locate a telegraph line, and had been to Washington to complete his arrangements—all these would naturally justify one in believing that he was not a mere charter-monger, but a man who had his financial backing secured, which would enable him to proceed without any delay. That was the situation then, as Mr. Roche impressed my mind.

My hon. friend the leader of the Opposition calls my particular attention to this paragraph in my letter in which, he says, I spoke of there having been an understanding between my department and Mr. Roche. This letter is a letter written by Mr. Roche on the afternoon of the same day as that on which the one I have now read was written. Mr. Roche would know perfectly well the extent and nature of the understanding, he would know it was no understanding intended to tie, so far as my action could do it, the hands of the Government in any respect at all. He would know that it depended on the expedition with which he acted, whether or not he would be left in possession of the field for telegraph purposes. My hon. friend the leader of the Opposition claims that it would take four or five months before Mr. Roche could get home and do his financing, but I have pointed out already that he did not represent to me that he had any financing to do, that he did not approach me as one who was not fully equipped for the purpose of going on with the work. Quite the contrary. Just look at the facts as they exist. Mr. Roche represented himself to me as having acquired this Northern Commercial Telegraph Company charter. That charter was a Canadian charter. He would not have to go home to England for the purpose of getting any Bill passed there or any charter granted there. He had a charter here, and that charter required that the company should have a meeting and organize here and deposit a certain amount of money. Is it not perfectly idle for anybody to tell us that it was our duty to wait six months or until the month of April, for Mr. Roche to come out here for the purpose of organizing his company? Will any one say it was the duty of the Government to have waited until he chose to move before taking any action in the matter, or that we were under any obligation to ask Mr. Roche what he had done? I did not consider myself under any obligation to ask him what he was doing. I did not even know his address.

Mr. FOSTER. I suppose you did not know Dr. Haley's address.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I did, but Mr. Roche was the man who was carrying this thing through.

Mr. PRIOR. Mr. Roche, M.P., England, would have found him.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Mr. Roche left my office, assuring me that this thing would be taken up right at once, without any delay. He even told me they would have a cable laid this summer. He knew further that the Government were immensely impressed with the necessity of having a telegraph line through this season, and he knew, from my conversation with him, that the Government would have to take action at the coming session of Parliament, and that the ordinary time for the sitting of Parliament would be very much earlier than the time at which it did take place this year. And yet what occurred? Not a move was made. So far as we were concerned, we had not an intimation from the company, indeed the company was not organized until a month after they had notice that the Governor in Council had taken this action.

Mr. SPROULE. When did the Government decide to take action or pass the Order in Council?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. My impression is that it was on the 3rd of March, and that is the impression of my right hon. friend the Prime Minister. In the first place, Mr. Roche did not have any assurance from me that the Government would hold itself bound to stay its hand, nor did he have any promise from me that any length of time would elapse before governmental action would be taken. He did not ask for it. All that Mr. Roche and his friends desired of me was that I should write him a letter which would show that there was a friendly disposition on the part of the Government, and you can see from the language of this letter that it did not give them assurance of anything beyond that. He was told simply that the preference of the Government would be for the building of a line by a private company rather than by the Government, and if they went on and pushed the work, the Government would countenance and approve of the enterprise. Mr. Roche asked me, and I said I would unhesitatingly ask the Minister of the Interior, when they got in there, whether he could make any arrangement with respect to the use of the telegraph by the Government.

Mr. BLAIR.

Mr. PRIOR. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Blair) knew they had bought the wire?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I did not know. I am glad the hon. gentleman (Mr. Prior) has mentioned that, because the first thing Mr. Roche said when he came here during this session was that they had the wire already, that this company, the Henley Company, or whatever the name was, had furnished the wire, and it was then at Vancouver. I said: If you are able to satisfy the Government that the work will go on speedily, the Government will let you take it up and I advised him to put himself in communication with the Minister of Public Works, in whose department the work of carrying on the construction would be. And he did so, I believe. The Minister of Public Works, I also believe, ascertained from Mr. Roche that there was no wire at all at Vancouver for the company. Mr. Roche afterwards told me that he had been under a misapprehension, that the wire had been blocked somewhere on the way. And when I gave the Minister of Public Works that explanation—because I think the general feeling of the Government was in favour of having the work done by private enterprise if we could be assured that it would be pushed forward vigorously—when I said to the Minister of Public Works in explanation of Mr. Roche's first statement as to the wire being in Vancouver, that it had been blocked somewhere on the way, the Minister of Public Works, I believe, made inquiries and could not find even that the wire was on the way.

Mr. PRIOR. Did Mr. Roche tell that to the hon. gentleman personally, or did he write him to that effect?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I have just said that, while I may have received a short note from Mr. Roche to the effect I stated a moment ago, I never received a letter from Mr. Roche in my life. He told me, on his first visit during this session, that the wire was in Vancouver.

Mr. PRIOR. That was in April?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Yes, that was in April. He said afterwards that he was mistaken, that the wire had been stopped somewhere on the Northern Pacific—I think that was the line of railway on which he said it was being sent. And, as I say, the Minister of Public Works, I believe, made inquiries and satisfied him that there was no wire for the company anywhere on the coast.

Now, there is one thing that I may freely say, and that is that even if there had been no letter written by me, the disposition of the Government was to deal with any responsible company rather than to take up the work as a Government work; and when this gentleman came out here, if he had satisfied the Minister of Public Works that he was prepared to go right on vigorously and push the work through, I believe the Government would have been only too glad to have given his company their countenance in the matter. But the Government felt that if the necessary assurances could not be given, if there was likely to be delay, it would be prejudicial to the interests of that section of the country. The main point was to get a line of telegraph there as speedily as possible. If any hon. gentleman says there is anything which made it the duty of the Government to wait any longer than we did wait, I do not know where it is to be found.

Mr. TAYLOR. You did not wait until Parliament met and supplies were voted.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. The Government had to determine upon a policy. So far as Mr. Roche is concerned, the Government was under no obligation in any case or from any point of view to wait beyond the time it was necessary for them to mature their policy for the session. The Government took this up before the House met, so that we might be in a position to declare to Parliament at the earliest moment when we might be called upon, what our policy was.

Mr. FOSTER. Will the hon. gentleman say if there was anything given by Parliament for it?

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. Where?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES (Sir Louis Davies). In the Estimates.

Mr. FOSTER. But where?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. In the Supply Bill.

Mr. FOSTER. Whereabouts in the Supply Bill?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Right there before your eyes.

Mr. TAYLOR. Last year's Supply Bill?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. Will the Prime Minister name the item?

The PRIME MINISTER. "Public Works, telegraph line in British Columbia."

Mr. FOSTER. Will the hon. gentleman (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) take "Hansard" and the Estimates and tell what that vote has been for years and years? Does he mean to tell this House that that was a vote which was to provide for the beginning and prosecution of this work, the building of a new telegraph line into the Yukon territory? Will the First Minister from his place—

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I have only one word to say, and if I may be allowed—

Mr. FOSTER. The fact is, there is no appropriation.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. When the date for the meeting of Parliament was approaching, this subject was brought up as a subject which it would be proper and necessary to deal with without further delay. The Council was in possession of all the facts which I have stated now to the House, including the fact that this Northern Commercial Company had given assurance that they would take this thing up and put it right through; and when inquiry was made it could not be ascertained that they had done anything. So far as my knowledge and information went, I was obliged to report to my colleagues in Council that I did not know of their having done a single thing. Nor did I know of their having done anything. Nor is there now any evidence that they had done anything. I cannot well see how they could have done anything very important, how they could have incurred obligations or contracted liabilities when they never organized the company until a month afterwards. Now, there is no foundation, it does appear to me, for the strictures which my hon. friend (Mr. Prior) has passed upon the action or inaction of the Government. And all the stories with which my hon. friend has regaled himself and his friends on that side of the House as to disputes and differences in Council, as to differences and strife in Council over this matter—all these are simply figments of the hon. gentleman's imagination.

Mr. TAYLOR. Can the Minister inform the House when the order was given to Charleson and Co. for the supplies?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. That is not in my department, but I am told it was about the 13th of March.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I regret that I was not in a little earlier to hear the explanations which the Minister of Railways and Canals gave in reference to the point to which I called his attention, as I thought it was a very important one. The hon. gentleman seems to think that the fact that he had not had any communication from this company was a sufficient reason for the Government undertaking the construction of this work themselves. I draw the attention of the Minister to the fact that his communication with this telegraph company had taken place on the 6th of October, and that any person who is acquainted with these matters knows perfectly well that it takes a considerable time to organize a company in London.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. The company is a Canadian company, and was organized here.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. But that is only the commencement of the undertaking; that company has to obtain the capital.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. They had the capital long before that. If they ever had it, they had it before then.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. But it is not customary for capitalists in an important enterprise, nor is it practicable, to arrange the capital for a large enterprise of that kind until they are in a position to put the legislation that has been obtained formally before the public; and the very communications that took place between the Minister of Railways and Canals and the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company, as contained in his own letters, are the best possible evidence that it was necessary for them to take measures to obtain in London the capital which this enterprise required. Now, I may say that I happened to be in London at the time these companies were floated, and I felt it my duty, as the House knows, the moment I saw a statement made in the Speech from the Throne, which I think was the first intimation that we had in this country, or that any person had anywhere that the Government contemplated engaging in this work—the moment my attention was drawn to that, I felt it my duty, in the debate on the Address, to draw the attention of the Government and of the Minister of Railways and Canals promptly to correspondence over that hon. gentleman's signature that was entirely incompatible with the statement that the Government intended to go on with the work. I may say that it is impossible, in my judgment, to attach too much importance to the action that members of the Government of Canada may take, and especially to the action that is taken by the Government, in regard to matters of this kind. We all know that with the boundless resources which Canada possesses, it is of the greatest importance, where there are sound and practicable enterprises that afford a fair prospect of being undertaken, that the capitalists who are induced to put their money into these enterprises should have absolute confidence in the declarations, not only of the Government of Canada, but of the Ministers composing that Government. I say that in my judgment no more fatal blow can be struck at the interests of Canada, nothing can be more damaging to the best interests of Canada, than for any members of the Government to place themselves in a position that destroys the confidence of the British capitalists in their statements. This is not the first occasion, I think, on which members of the Government have failed altogether in adopting a course which is calculated to promote the interests of the country. I drew the attention of the House a year ago to the very remarkable course pursued by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries when he publicly advised the people of Great Britain, at a speech delivered by him, and reported in the papers, not to invest money in the development of the Yukon.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. No.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. My hon. friend questions the accuracy of that statement, but I happen to have under my hand the proof that will settle that question.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I used no such language as the hon. gentleman attributes to me; I advised caution and prudence.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I will tell the hon. gentleman what he said, by reading from a paper, one of the most extreme supporters of this Government that is to be found in Canada or elsewhere, that is the "Canadian Gazette," of London, which is published, as everybody knows, under the immediate auspices of the Government, and never loses an opportunity of praising everything that they do, and defending the Government under all circumstances. I am now quoting from one of their own organs, from a report of a speech delivered by the hon. gentleman at Tenbigh, in Wales:

Later in the day Sir Louis Davies attended a luncheon given in his honour, and replying to the toast of his health, gave an interesting account of the various provinces of Canada, and the immense and unlimited resources of Canada. With reference to the newly-discovered Klondike gold fields, he said he had been asked by many men if he could advise them to send their sons out to the fields, and he answered emphatically, "No"; and when asked if it would be wise to invest money in companies for developing the fields he replied, doubly emphatically, "No."

Was I right or was I wrong when I stated that the hon. gentleman had used the strongest language he could use as a Minister of the Crown to prevent British capitalists from investing their money in the development of the Yukon?

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. The hon. gentleman is not purporting to read a report of my speech.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I am reading now from the "Canadian Gazette," a verbatim report of the hon. gentleman's speech.

As a member of the Canadian Government, he knew what he was talking about. They were doing their best to establish a provisional Government in that region, but they advised that every one who could possibly wait should delay going to the Klondike fields for the present, and he hoped that his words would go further than the room in which he was speaking.

This was at a time when, under the excitement produced by the discoveries in the Yukon gold fields, people were flocking there from all parts of the world, and when the hon. gentleman, as a Canadian Minister, said that he had been asked whether he would advise British subjects, people in England, to go there, he said: No. And he said: When I am asked whether I would advise people to invest capital in companies for the development of these gold fields, I say, doubly emphatically, no.

The MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES. I advised them to wait for further information.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. If the hon. gentleman (Sir Louis Davies) can find any terms in the English language stronger than that, better calculated than that to deter and prevent capitalists in England, whose attention was then being invited to this subject, from investing their money, I can only say he will have greater ability than I give him credit for. I know of no means by which, as a Minister of the Crown, he could have taken a more determined attitude to prevent British capital, at a most important crisis, at a time when it is desirable that British subjects should go into that country, from being invested in that country, than those which he used. The hon. gentleman, a few days afterwards, was collared by the hon. member for King's, N.B., (Mr. Domville), who told him that he was organizing a company, and there was no doubt at all that the hon. gentleman (Sir Louis Davies) was trying to throw cold water on it. In the face of this statement, which was made, and which was repeated before a section of the chamber of commerce afterwards, the hon. gentleman puts his name to a letter to the hon. member for King's, which I will read to the House; and I may ask hon. members of the House, whether they think this mode, adopted by an hon. Minister of the Crown, is likely to promote the interest of Canada. The letter is dated London, July 30th, 1897, a week afterwards. The hon. gentleman put his name to this letter, which was published in the prospectus of the company with which the hon. member for King's was connected—the Klondike, Yukon Pioneers (Limited). It is as follows:

London, 30th July, 1897.

I have received your note of to-day's date telling me that a syndicate is being organized to open up and develop the Klondike Yukon country. I have no hesitation in saying that the policy of the Government is and will be to assist in the opening up and development of that rich country, and I need not say to you that we shall be glad to look favourably upon every bona fide company which has that for its object. Your personal connection with such a company would be an additional guarantee of its bona fides, and I will be glad to hear that it has been successfully launched.

(Sgd.) L. H. DAVIES.

This is the position of a Minister of the Crown. He invites the people of Great Britain to believe that there is no person they could confide their capital to with better prospects of favourable results than with the hon. member for King's. Here you have a Minister of the Crown one day saying that he would advise neither the people nor the capitalists of England to invest anything in the development of the Canadian Yukon gold fields, and you have him, a week afterwards, putting his name to a document which largely resulted in the floating of this company. The promoters of this company, the men who put their capital into it, are resting their claims to-day largely upon the fact that they were induced to do so by this letter, over the signature of the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and he is now held responsible, and the good name of the Government of Canada is being seriously affected by the course which that hon. gentleman has pursued. Then, we have the "Financial Times," of December 14th, 1898, saying:

In a leading article yesterday we criticised the curious prospectus of the Canadian, British Columbia and Dawson City Telegraph Company (Limited), which was inviting subscriptions from the public for £225,000 in 5 per cent first mortgage debentures at 95. * * *

From subsequent inquiries we have made, our surprise at the omission of any reference to the existing scheme is rendered infinitely greater, for we find that those behind the Canadian, British Columbia and Dawson City Telegraph Company (Limited) were perfectly conversant with what the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company was doing. This is made clear by the following letter, addressed last October, by Mr. Blair, the Canadian Minister of Railways and Telegraphs, to the gentleman who was arranging the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company matter.

I find no reference to "private" in this letter. I do not believe it was a private letter; I believe it was a letter placed in the hands of the promoters of this company by the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Blair), exactly as the hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries had placed a letter, over his signature, in the hands of the hon. member for King's, to aid and assist in floating a company. I believe there is something curious and suggestive in the fact that the hon. gentleman, on the 6th October, informed this company that he was Very much pleased indeed to learn that it is your intention, representing the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company (Limited), to proceed without unnecessary delay with the construction of the telegraph line from the coast to Dawson City, to be followed thereafter with reasonable despatch by the laying of a cable from Vancouver to the point of connection with the land line.

That is not a private letter. It is the letter of a Minister of the Crown; it is a letter of the chairman of the Committee on Railways, Canals and Telegraph Lines, under whose supervision this charter had been placed on the statute books of Canada, and for which fact, objected to in part by the Government, they will be made largely responsible. The letter is dated the 6th of October, 1898, and says, in part:

I told these gentlemen very frankly that my department had an understanding with you.

I ask the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals, was that a private understanding? Is that the mode in which Ministers deal with these questions? Have they private understandings?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. The understanding is stated in the letter.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Have they private understandings with the promoters of companies? He says it was a private understanding.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I beg your pardon.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes, he denounces the gentleman with whom he had this communication, on the floor of this House, as no gentleman, and on what ground. He had approached him as a public man, not as a private individual, as a Minister of the Crown; he had approached him as a Minister who had led him to believe that this matter was in his department.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Are you professing to quote what I said?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I have quoted your exact words, word for word, what you said. I say that the hon. gentleman wrote a letter to this gentleman to convince him that this matter was entirely in his department, because he said:

I told these gentlemen very frankly that my department had an understanding with you.

These gentlemen to whom he refers, were organizing a company for the same purpose, and who had also approached him, and he writes to the gentleman with whom he had had the previous communication: I have been approached by other parties, but I have refused to give them any assistance.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER.

I told these gentlemen very frankly that my department had an understanding with you.

Was that a private understanding? If so, the hon. gentleman puts himself in a very equivocal position in this House. If Ministers of the Crown are going to take hold of promoters and have private understandings with them, it is time this House should wake up and see what the real position of matters is. It was not a private understanding. The hon. gentleman was approached as the Minister at the head of the department who led this gentleman to believe that it was a matter in his department, because he said that his department had had this understanding with him. He was approached by this gentleman, not as a private matter at all, but to know what he could expect from the Government of the day. The Minister had already told this gentleman that the Government would give him every assistance.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I did nothing of the kind.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes, the Minister (Mr. Blair) wrote that he was pleased to learn it was their intention to proceed without unnecessary delay with the construction of the telegraph line from the coast to Dawson City. He informed this gentleman, that having been approached by another company he told the other company they were too late, as his department had an understanding with the Commercial Company, that the Government would give them their assistance. Does the Minister (Mr. Blair) deny that? Here is what he wrote:

I told these gentlemen very frankly that my department had an understanding with you, and that we were giving you the preference.

Does that mean anything or does it mean nothing?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. He had a letter from me to show what it meant.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Yes, he had two letters from you; one to show that you were delighted they had taken hold of the enterprise, and the next to show that you had refused to give any assistance to a rival company, because you had agreed to give this company the preference. This was a business transaction between the Minister and this gentleman. It did not pretend to be secret or confidential; but to-day the Minister denounces this gentleman because he used these letters, believing and knowing that they were public.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. May I ask the hon. gentleman a question?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. Certainly.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. Does the hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) seriously pretend to be attributing to me the language he does, believing that I used it?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I say I have got it over your own signature.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. I am asking the hon. gentleman whether or not he pretends to say, in Parliament, that I said that both these letters were private and confidential letters?

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. If the hon. gentleman (Mr. Blair) says he did not denounce the gentleman to whom he wrote these letters and state he was no gentleman, for publishing these letters which were private, then, I say that "Hansard" will prove that I am right and that the Minister is wrong.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. "Hansard" will prove nothing of the kind.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. What will "Hansard" prove?

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. "Hansard" will prove that I stated to this Parliament, that I wrote a second letter to this gentleman which was confidential, which he knew was confidential, and that he was no gentleman when he published that second letter. That is what "Hansard" will prove, and that is what the hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) heard me say, and yet he deliberately misrepresents me.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I have both of these letters in my hand, and neither of them is private, and neither of them is confidential. Mr. Speaker, if they were private and confidential, the hon. gentleman (Mr. Blair) ought not to sit any longer on the Treasury benches as a Minister of the Crown. If this pledge to give the aid and assistance of the Government to the company, to stand in with the company, and to refuse to have anything to do with the rival company, if that is a private communication it carries with it a damning insinuation as to the position of the Minister, which ought to deprive him of sitting here as a Minister of the Crown.

The MINISTER OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS. The hon. gentleman (Sir Charles Tupper) is quite free to entertain any opinion he pleases; it is a matter of indifference to me, but he must not say that I said something which I did not say.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER. I have said that the Minister declared that these letters written by him were of a private character. But he dare not say now they are private, because if he does he convicts himself of standing in with the promoter of a private corporation, to co-operate with it and to give it the support of the Government as against another corporation. If he says he did that privately, why should he do so? The only excuse the Minister can have for writing such a letter is, that he was acting in the interests of the country, endeavouring to get capital invested for a valuable object, and if that be the case, as it must be, then the gentleman receiving that letter had a perfect right to use it for the purpose of strengthening his hands in securing that capital. Here is what the Minister wrote, and in its very nature it is a public communication:

The Government is extremely desirous that private enterprise should take up this work, and that it should be prosecuted without delay, and the needs of the district are such that we believe an enterprise of that nature would be found extremely profitable.

Sir, I say that that letter was intended to, and did give most valuable assistance to the gentleman concerned in raising that capital. When an important and valuable public work is proposed, and when a charter has been given by the Parliament of Canada to enable parties to prosecute that work, I say that the Government of Canada were right in strengthening the hands of the parties by stating that the Government would appreciate the work. I am not attacking the Minister for promising the aid and assistance of the Government in a public way, but I am attacking him for that, having thus committed the Government of Canada, having thus committed himself in the most emphatic way to the support of this company, and when this company expended a large sum of money to carry out his suggestion, he should turn around and allow the Government to destroy this private enterprise. Strange things as the present Government of Canada has done, I cannot believe that the First Minister and his Government, with these facts before them, as they are before this House to-day, would decide to step in and use the public money of Canada to destroy an enterprise which they had encouraged. And mark you, Mr. Speaker, down to this very hour the Government has no authority from Parliament to spend a single dollar of public money in such an undertaking. Without warrant, without authority, without the knowledge of this Parliament, they propose now to go on with the public works which will strike down the private enterprise they pledged themselves to support, and with reference to which a Minister of the Crown told them they had a preference from the Government, and might rely upon the assistance of the Government. If the Minister of Railways had stated these facts to the Government as they stand before the House to-day, I cannot believe that the Government would have taken such a course as they now propose. And if this Government would do such a thing, then it is a great misfortune for Canada that it has such a Government. This is not merely a question affecting this company alone; it is a question affecting the good faith of Canada. If Ministers of the Crown are so reckless as the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Sir Louis Davies) was more than a year ago, and as the Minister of Railways and Canals is today; if Ministers are so reckless as to pledge the support of the Government to the undertakings of private corporations, and then destroy the fruits of the labour and expenditure of these private corporations, if they are so reckless as that, then we have come to a pretty pass indeed. And, Sir, the Government did this without the slightest intimation to the company, as is told by the promoter of this Bill who is a member of the House of Commons of Great Britain. He tells us that it was on the 27th of March he received the first notice that the Canadian Government were not acting in good faith with him, and that then he was proceeding in making all his arrangements, and doing everything necessary to carry out the enterprise in the most thorough manner. If the hon. gentleman had ascertained that these parties, in whom he had confidence when he wrote these letters—for I presume he must have taken the trouble to learn what their position was before he would commit himself to such statements as these—were unable to carry out the work, and that, notwithstanding that they were well disposed, the work was going to lag and fall in their hands, then, acting fairly and above-board, he would have withdrawn that preference which he had declared, over the signature of the Minister of Railways and Canals, he would give to that company. But what are the facts? It appears that Lord Strathcona has been communicated with, and he has cabled to this Government that this company have all the resources and ability necessary to carry this work to completion. That is the position; and, in my opinion, no more fatal blow could be struck at the credit of Canada. Attempt to float a fast line service in England to-morrow, and what will you be met by? I do not believe that this Government have ever recognized the importance, not to themselves, but to Canada, of the Government of Canada keeping good faith with British capitalists, and here is a most signal instance of it. Let them attempt to float in England to-morrow a fast line service, which depends on an Act of the Parliament of Canada and on the action of the Government of Canada, and they will be met at every turn by British capitalists who will say: We cannot touch that enterprise, because, after we have spent a million or half a million dollars, the Government will tell us that they have changed their minds, and are going to build and operate a fast line service themselves. The importance to Canada, in the first place.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER.

of bringing British capital into this country cannot be overrated; and, to avoid making it utterly impossible for the soundest and most judicious financial enterprises to be undertaken by the aid of British capital, the very first element of success is, that the Government of Canada shall be regarded as the Government of England is regarded; so that, when their faith is pledged to an enterprise, it can be confidently relied upon, and, when private capital is induced on the pledge of the Government to take up a great enterprise, Governments may rise and fall, half a dozen may succeed each other, but whatever Government is in power shall feel bound to carry out in good faith that pledge, whether they approve of the enterprise or not. Not only are the Government of Canada bound to adopt such a course in reference to all these enterprises, that what they do shall be above-board and carefully considered, but, when the faith of a Minister of the Crown is pledged to give aid, and support, and countenance to the enterprise, they should hold that as a most solemn and sacred obligation. They owe that, not merely to themselves or to this House, but they owe it to this country; because upon the maintenance of good faith in relation to these enterprises depends the only hope by which Canadians can take into that great money market of the world the soundest enterprises which have any Government subsidy or aid connected with them. If you admit that the Government have induced private capitalists to embark their capital in what was declared by the Government of Canada to be an important enterprise, in which they were interested, and to which they had decided to give the preference to a particular company, you cannot say that it is open to them, without a word or a line of communication, to turn round and say: We have changed our minds; we have come to the conclusion that this is a work which will afford more patronage to the Government and enable us to provide for a lot of hangers-on, who are daily tormenting us for places and emoluments, and we have come to the conclusion to throw over your company and take up the work ourselves. And they take it up without the consent of Parliament. I felt it my duty, the moment the statement was made that the Government contemplated taking up this enterprise, to put before the Minister of Railways, in the debate on the Address, the position in which the Government stood. I asked the Minister of Railways, during that debate, to do himself the justice of relieving himself from the position in which he was placed in reference to this matter, and to explain to the House that, while he had confidence in those parties, the whole thing had broken down, they had been unable to carry out their undertaking, and had been told that the Government had undertaken to carry it out themselves. But not a word of explanation did we hear from the hon. gentleman down to the moment this afternoon when the hon. member for Victoria (Mr. Prior) put this matter plainly and succinctly before the House—as far as he could do so, with this garbled correspondence, which, it appears, is the only information the Opposition have been able to obtain. It is not merely hon. gentlemen sitting on this side of the House who have taken exception to the course of the Government on this matter. There is not an independent member sitting on the other side of the House, there is not a member of the Government who has been cognizant of the actual position of things, who does not feel that the Government have entered upon a course that is utterly indefensible. There is not a business man in the country, whether Conservative or Liberal, if this question were put to him, as a matter of plain, simple business, who would not say that the Government of Canada had failed in what it owed to itself, to Canada, to everything like fair, and just, and honourable management of public business. You could not select a dozen of independent, intelligent men of any stripe or party who would not give heavy damages against the Government of Canada for the position in which this company has been placed—for the cruel and indefensible wrong that has been done to it, by the Government stepping in and blighting all its prospects, and going back on the pledges and declarations of a Minister of the Crown. The Minister of Public Works, it appears, when he learned that his hon. colleague, the Minister of Railways and Canals, was assuming to deal with this question of telegraph lines, said: Oh, I think you will have to hear from me; I have got a few friends whom I have used before, and whom I want to use again. And, just as the Minister of the Interior sent up a crowd of his friends into the Yukon to perform duties for which they proved to be utterly unfit, so the Minister of Public Works, without the authority of Parliament, without the authority of anybody—because the Government of Canada, it appears, are not his masters, but, he theirs—says he is going to take hold of this matter, and is going to sweep aside the Minister of Railways and his promoters, who had gone in on the pledged faith of the Crown, and is going to send one of his own men to carry out the work, in order to provide for a horde of his own hungry hangers-on. I say it does not require a long speech, it requires simply to state the facts as they are set forth in the garbled correspondence. Why is it that the correspondence with the hon. Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr. Blair) is not brought down. That is covered by the motion. Was the Minister of Railways ashamed of the correspondence he had with these gentlemen? Was the right hon. the First Minister ashamed to have the wretched disclosures made that would be made if the correspondence between himself and these gentlemen were included in this return? The right hon. gentleman had a most important correspondence with one of the most independent and intelligent members of this House, a supporter of this Government, who had been induced to lend his aid to the organization of this company, and that member approached his leader with a respectful memorial signed by these British capitalists who had been induced to take hold of this undertaking upon the pledged faith of a Minister of the Crown. Did that memorial not require a reply? Was not that a matter that demanded, not that Mr. Gobeil should give the go-by to the whole affair by writing a letter saying that Mr. Tarte was master of the situation, and nobody else could have anything to say in a work of this kind, except under the authority of that great despot of this Government. The House, Sir, has been treated with contempt. Why? Because these hon. gentlemen were ashamed, when they came to look this disgraceful transaction in the face, to bring down the public documents that this House had ordered, and which, as Ministers of the Crown, they are obliged to bring down in order to put a faithful and complete knowledge of the transaction before the House. If acts of this kind are to be continued, if one Minister after another is to be allowed to show such an utter disregard of what his official position, of what his own duties, as a member of the Government require, in dealing with great capitalists and great and important enterprises, the people of Canada will have good reason to deplore that the hour ever came when the duty of administering the affairs of this country was entrusted to gentlemen who seem to know neither what their own honour, their own character as public men demands at their hands, nor what the best interests of Canada demands at their hands as well.

The PRIME MINISTER (Sir Wilfrid Laurier). In the course of my public life of more than twenty years now, I have heard very extraordinary propositions put forth by my hon. friend who has just addressed the House, but I must say I never heard a more reckless one than the one to which he has just given utterance. If it be summarized in a few words, it amounts simply to this, that private interests are to take the lead of public interests.

But before I proceed further, let me address myself to a personal matter brought against me by the hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat and by the hon. member for Victoria, B.C. (Mr. Prior) as well. In the return brought down in answer to an Address of the House, voted some few weeks ago, calling for correspondence between Mr. Haley, a member of this House, and Mr. Roche and myself as Prime Minister, no correspondence of mine appears. The reason is simply this, that the letters which was sent to me by Mr. Haley and Mr. Roche were referred by me to the Department of Public Works, and I did not file them in my department, but turned them over to my hon. colleague the Minister of Public Works. I answered these communications, but not having put the matter on record in the Privy Council, I did not file my answers there but kept them in my own correspondence, and the reason why no correspondence of mine appeared in the return brought down is because the clerk of the Privy Council, in preparing the return, took what was on record on the files but of course had no access to my private correspondence. I hand, as every Minister does, these motions to the clerk who has to deal with them, and he looks over the files and copies what is on the files, but as this matter had been referred to the Department of Public Works, the Minister in charge of which was unfortunately ill, and as the answers which I gave to the correspondence sent to me I did not file in the records of the Privy Council, these answers were not copied by the clerk. But I have them here and shall read them to the House. I received a communication between the 11th and 15th of April, which I answered on the 19th of April, as follows:—

Ottawa, 19th April, 1899.

My dear Haley,—I have received your letter inclosing copy of your memorial to the Minister of Public Works. The subject therein referred to is very important, and, as you are told by Tarte, it will have to be taken up by Council. Tarte has been kept away from his office by illness since a few days, but it is probable that he will be able to resume his duties within a day or two, and we will then take up your memorial without delay.

My hon. colleague, the Minister of Public Works, was ill longer than I anticipated. I thought at the time that he was simply suffering from an indisposition, but it turned out to be a very serious illness. More correspondence followed, and on the 3rd of May, I wrote as follows:—

Ottawa, 3rd May, 1899.

My dear Haley,—I have your letter of this day. I had understood in the last interview that I had on the subject therein referred to, that you would call at my office on Tuesday, May 1st, and that I should then be prepared to discuss the matter with you and your friends and give you an answer. You state in your letter of this day that you have been expecting an answer from me since the 1st of May, and that you did not even get an acknowledgment of your memorial. There has been a misunderstanding either on your part or mine, but it is not material to go further in this. At all events, let me say that I will be glad to see you at any time that may be convenient to you re the Northern Commercial Telegraph Company.

That reply shows that I had seen Mr. Haley and his friend Mr. Roche and that I desired a further interview with them to discuss the matter more fully. I had answered, as it was my duty, all the communications sent to me and had arranged for an interview, as I thought with Dr. Haley and Mr. Roche. It appears, however, that there was a misunderstanding, and they wrote me and I answered accordingly. This is all the information I have to give in reply to the statement made by the hon. gentleman that I had in some way, unknown to myself, not complied with the order in this particular and failed to all rules of honour. I may repeat what I had occasion to say once before that I am the guardian of my own honour and do not care to thrust the hon. gentleman between me and my honour.
