A Word of Warning to Speculators.

Fort Wayne, Ind., June 19.—In an interview here yesterday in regard to the financial affairs of the country, Senator Calvin S. Brice said the United States has for ten years been making an average of $500,000,000 of executities a year. One half of this amoun nar been absorbed by Europe, and the other half by the people of this country. The outlet to Europe has been thoroughly clogged and no securities whatever are being marketed there. The probabilities are there will be little if any outlet for American securities within the next two or three years. This has had a tendency to depress prices of American railway securities. The loss of millions of dollars, which has been sustained must assuredly be felt by the people of this country. Many people who three years ago estimated themselves wealthy are practically penniless to-day through the immense shortage in the class of securities. The severe liquidation which is now taking place must be felt in financial quarters throughout the country. Abundant crops will no doubt help to ameliorate our condition, but at the same time it behoves everyone to be comservative in their dealings and not go to extremen.

The Tarte committee reassembled and received some very startling evidence from Owen Murphy. He described once more the going down Into McGreevy's lower office "through a trap door" and making five notes of $5,000 each for Thomas-McGreevy. The contracts for the crosswall were made in this same office. The letter withdrawing Gallagher's tender he was confident was not in Gallagher's handwriting. He thought it was written by Michael Connolly. In connection with the supplementary tender for the Levis graving dock, he said that it was agreed between himself and Hon. Thomas McGreevy that they should put in a tender for the job at $74,000, and Mr. McGreevy was to have all over $50,000. Lady Brooke Furnishes Food for Scandal

Openly Accused of Causing Cumming's Ruin. Name Unsavorily Coupled With

That of the Heir-Apparent. Her Career as a "Plunger" and Leader

London, June 19.—Ascot week did not close without the gossip-mongers having the best of it. For several days rumors have been afloat both in the clubs and drawing-rooms to the effect that the exposure of Lady Brooke in connection with the baccarat scandal was inevitable and that legal steps had already been taken against the Prince and herself. Sir William Gordon Cumming's friends accuse her openly of having been the cause of his ruin. The relations between the Prince of Wales and Lady Brooke have been the topic of social gossip on several occasions. As yet nobody has openly accused the pair of any undue intimacy, yet it has been repeatedly hinted that if Lord Brooke were not so easy-going he would long ago have put a stop to the repeated interviews between his wife and the heir-apparent.

Massacred by the Score—A Protest from the British and German. Consuls.

New York, June 19.—A letter from Port-au-Prince dated June 8 says there was at that time a reign of terror there which had then lasted for nearly a fortnight. Men were being executed every day by the score in the squares and streets of the city, and nobody knew when the massacre would end. On May 30 Hippolite's soldiers entered by force the Mexican consulate and dragged out of the house Gen. Souli, Mr. Rossier Leger Cauvin, recently Minister of Justice under Hippolite, and Cauvin's brother. These men were shot under the cathedral walls.

The diplomatic corps demanded an audience of the President. Mr. Tweedy, acting consul for the British Government, demanded an explanation, and wanted to know what security the other consular houses had. The President lost his temper, and said: "is this the way to talk to me—the President of this country?" Saying this, Hippolyte turned his back and bounced out of the room. Finally the President was induced to return, and an apology was made. The French consul accepted it. The German consul said he would certainly report the affair to his Government. The English consul supported his German associate. The consuls then retired.

The real leaders of the insurrection have not been captured. Only the rank and file have been made prisoners and ruthlessly shot.

The Government Side-Tracks the Opposition Leader,

And Gives Him No Opportunity to Inquire About Their Policy.

Ottawa, June 19.—Mr. Davin introduced a bill to amend the Railway Act. It contained a clause supplying what the member for Assiniboia described as an omission from the Railway Act of last year, the result of an excision made by the Senate, a provision prescribing precautions to be made against prairie fires. It proposed to compel railway companies to make a fire guard six feet wide within 100 feet of their line whenever it passed through uncultivated ground. Another clause related to the provision of automatic air brakes, and another provided for the building of fences on each side of the line in settled districts. The bill was read the first time. On motion of Sir Hector Langevin the House agreed that Governmont orders have precedence on Thursdays for the remainder precedence on Thursdays for the remainder of the session.

In Committee of the Whole a resolution was passed declaring it to be expedient to amend the Inland Reveuue Act and to proamend the finand revenue Act and to provide that the person in whose name a license is granted to act as a compounder shall upon receiving such license pay to the collector of inland revenue the sum of $150.

The four living wives of A. Riley, charged in Brantford with bigamy, are Esther Cronk, Woodstock; Mrs. Kearns, a widow with two children; Phoebe Vise, an Indian, and Mary Schooley, a Delhi girl. The last marriage was celebrated in 1855 by Rev. Mr. Ames, Methodist. Riley's first wife was dead before he married Esther Cronk. There is every reason to believe that Riley has half a dozen other wives through the country, and nearly all the women with whom he has associated have themselves lived with several other men. Since his arrival in Brantford Riley has been living with a colored woman, and he also asked a married woman to elope with him.

London, Saturday, June 20.

OSLIGATORY VOTING. The question of obligatory voting ha been brought under the notice of the House of Commons by Col. Aymot, who last night submitted his bill in favor of making every man responsible for the poll-

Obligatory service of the State is thus no new thing. The only question left for Parliament to consider is not whether obligatory voting is a right or wrong principle to affirm, but whether or not it is expedient. Of its expediency, of the benefit which it would prove to the community, no one who has had anything to do with the "getting out of the vote" at election times can have any doubt. Every active party man knows that the absentee voters are chiefly composed of two classes: (1) Those who look down with lefty contempt upon the service of the public and hold aloof from politics because of the supposed vileness or inconsistencies of their fellow-men who interest themselves in affairs of State; (2) those who look upon a vote as a marketable commodity, to be sold for a price, and who decline to go to the polls except for value received. The men who aid to bring out the vote know how much trouble these two classes give. They know how unsatisfactory all this shirking is, and if they were at liberty to expose the tactics of the past they could show how much corruption has resulted from the state of matters to which the lack of an obligatory voting law has given rise. The evils are many, and Parliament should not shirk the responsibility of applying the only effective remedy so far proposed.

We favor the adoption of the principle of obligatory voting because it would make each man responsible for polling his own vote, just as it makes each juryman summoned responsible for answering his name when the panel is called. We indorse the principle because it would do much to econpmize the time and money of both political parties now spent in coaxing men to do their duty. The adoption of the principle would aid in making electoral campaigns less corrupt; it would put down personation and perjury, now all to o previ lent, and it would firmly establish the democratic principle of "one man, one sote," to which the Liberal party here and in Great Britain has given its adhesion, and to the adoption of which we have yet to DISSIPATING A GREAT FORTUNE. Difficult as it may be to make a great forane, it seems to be even a harder task to lispose of it at death in the way that will do the least harm. A complete history of the Stewart millions would naturally include as its last chapter an account of the distribution of the money after the great merchant's death, but this last chapter is stretching out to the proportions of a second volume, which threatens to become much more intricate and sensational than the first. A. T. Stewart, the millionaire New York merchant, left no children to erpetuate his name and fortune; his widow survived him only a few years, and now that his colossal business is carried on by other men, his name, which used to be almost a household word throughout America, is heard chiefly in the courts of law. Ex-Judge Hilton and the other heirs who have battled incessantly for his money ever since his death, have compromised their differences by agreeing upon a division of the property, and are now c last night submitted his bill in favor of making every man responsible for the polling of his own vote.

There was a disposition on the part of Sir John Thompson and other members of the House to raise objections to the measure because the penalties which the mover proposed for non-compliance with its provisions were too severe, but Col. Amyot very soon disposed of the supposed bugbear by asserting that so long as the principle was affirmed he was prepared to let Parliament modify the penalty. Col. Amyot takes the proper ground. If it is right and proper that each man should go to the polls, or express religious or conscientious scruples against that course, then it should not be difficult to crystalize this view into law or provide a reasonable penalty. Col. Amyot's bill suggests fine or imprisonment and disfranchisement for a period would meet the case. But that is a minor consideration.

Parliament should have no difficulty in affirming the principle that a vote is a trust to be used in the public interest. If it is not used, then it seems fair that the public should know the reason why. But some say they are opposed to compulsory votting—a better term is obligatory voting.

Why, we should like to know? Is measure because the penalties which mover proposed for non-compliance with mover proposed for non-compliance with the mover provide a preaction of the supposed bugbear by asserting that so long as the principle was affirmed he was prepared to let Parlianent modify the penalty. Col. Amyot takes the proparground. Col. Amyot's bill suggested fine or imprinonment and distranchisement for few years. Our view is that distranchisement for a period would meet the case. But that is a minor consideration.

THE attention of those who think that alcohol is necessary for ordinary medi cal use is drawn to the statement by Dr. Bucke, superintendent of the Asylum for the Insane in this city. In his last annual report, Dr. Bucke says that "During the past year neither mechanical restraint nor alcohol in any form has been used at the asylum. This makes seven years during which we have used no alcohol nor alcoholic beverage either in sickness or in health."

INDIANS AS SOLDIERS.

Miss Elaine Goodale, superintendent of schools among the Sioux, is perhaps the best authority on the Indian question of any American living. She has devoted the best part of her life and work and thoughts to the subject, and the reasons she gives why the Indians should not be enlisted in the United States army are deserving of attention. Her argument is that the noble qualities called into exercise by war can be swill be infinitely better employed as stock raisers, in the trades, in school and college than as privates in a regular army. Then Miss Goodale gives these results of her own observation:

"What is the character of the ordinary privates soldier? A fair-minded and thoughtful man said to me recently, 'He is the scum of our cities!' Did I not myself shrink from the brute and the sensualist in shrink from the brute and the sensualist in shrink from the brute and the sensualist in his content of the church in the Ominion. Mr. Dymond suggested to Mr. Arkell that as he had obtained a favorable expression of opinion from the Synod he should hang up his motion until next year.

Mr. Arkell demured at first, but finally consented to withdraw it, having regard to Mr. Brown's assertion.

The ladies found another gallant champion, however, in Colonel Gilkison, of Brantford, who took up the weapons Mr. Arkell had laid down by moving that the word "male" be expunged from canon 19 upon the formation and organization of vestries. In effect the colonel's resolution was practically the same as that of the former. The mover supported his motion with proper comment.

probably did four times as much as the men.

C. Jenkins took the opposite view. There were frequent collusions of temper and opinion in vestry meetings from which women would be better excluded. He did not think the game worth the candle, and ladles would not thank them for the privilege of admission into the vestry discussions. God had created man and woman in different moulds, each to work on his and her own lines.

Rev. John Hales paid a tribute to the ladies as church workers. But the apostles themselves had never assigned such work to women as the amendments called for. Each sex had its own work assigned, and the canon should stand.

Rev. Mr. Brown had too much respect for the ladies to pull them down from their high pedestal to the worldly lowner of the men. If ladles were in the vostny would influence the possibility of marrice men getting a parish. ("Oh! oh!") No one more appreciated the grand things women were doing for the church, howers.

B. Stanley, of Lucan, said the ladies doing for the church, however.

B. Stanley, of Lucan, said the ladies should be encouraged in every way and a stigma should not be thrown upon them by asserting that they had not the ability to take part in the vestry meetings.

Rev. R. McCosh, of Petrolea, maintained that all who were acquainted with the American church knew that its success depended mainly on the ladies. Three-fourths of the congregations there were composed of ladies. If women had admission to verstries there would be no reason to complain of slimly attended meetings.

Rev. W. T. Hill contended that the men who opposed Col. Gilkison's motion were really the best friends of the women. It was degrading to allow them in the vestry meetings.

Rev. Mr. Asbury, of Delaware, was once the rector of a church at Philadelphia, where the vestry privilege was given to the meetings.

Rev. Mr. Asbury, of Delaware, was once the rector of a church at Philadelphia, where the vestry privilege was given to the ladies, and he never knew of any harm resulting. (Applause.) It would not degrade them to be members of the vestry; they could act as peace-makers and would have a wholesome influence.

Rural Dean Cooper remarked that as for being peace-makers ladies even lost their tempers sometimes. (Laughter.) He knew where clurch divisions arose because the ladies desired an unmarried clergyman, while the young men of the congregations wanted a married minister with young daughters. ("Hear, hear.") With so much gailantry in the land women were getting into critical positions. Ladies often neglected their domestic duties to run around on benevolent errands, and when women took such positions they were stepping out of their proper sphere. As an example of a woman's influence he cited one instance where great dissension resulted through the anger of a mother because an unmarried clergyman treated some young ladies to cice cream and neglected to include her daughter.

Rev. Mr. Caswell, of Kenvenga, followed in the cause of the ladies. The whole spirit of Christianity held that they should be put side by side with men.

Henry Macklin, of this city, was in accord with the resolution. Women had the intelligence of men and the whole tone of modern thought was that intelligence should be the basis of franchise. (Applause.)

He esteemed too highly the position of woman to drag her from her native arena to the continually recurring disputes of vestries. She had a position which man could not assume, and man had a position to which she could not attain. ("Hear, hear.") If there was ever a halo about home it was when weary man left the battle field of discussion and contention to find a place untouched by the storms of the day. He would simply say that in the epistle of the apostle it was taught that wives should learn from their husbands at home, and in his judgment it did not mean that it was to be fought out to the bitter end. He hoped they would at least suspend their action until the wisdom of the church decreed that it was for its interest. Such would be the best for the church, for the honor of women and of men.

Branch Opened in Brockville-Officer Guarantee Fund-Business of the Year Reviewed.

The annual general meeting of the Bank of Toronto (being the thirty-fifth since the commencement of business) was held at the banking house of the institution, June 17,

The directors of the Bank of Toronto beg to present to the steckholders the thirty-fifth annual report of the bank's affairs.

Notwithstanding the feeling of uncertainty that prevailed so widely and the unfavorable conditions under which many branches of business have been suffering during the past year, your directors have pleasure in reporting that the net profits of the year have been maintained.

After the reading of the above the president, George Gooderham, Eaq., addressed the meeting as follows:
GENNLESEN,—In moving the adoption of the report, I ask your indulgence while I make a tow remarks in enlargement of the topics contained in it.

The past year has been, as you are doubtless aware, an eventful one in financial centers of two contients. Unwise if not reckless investment and speculation in questionable securities resulted in enormous losses and lock-up of capital and threatened disaster unparalleled in extent, which was only averted by measures as unique as they were successful. Happily we in Canada were interested mainly as onlookers, yet during the time this apprehension and uncertainty prevailed those having your interests in charge had additional cares and anxieties.

requested to act as secretary.

Messrs. Walter S. Lee and T. G. Blackstock were appointed scrutineers.

By request of the chairman the secretary read the following:

After making full provision for all losses and deducting expenses, interest accrued on deposits and rebate on current discounts, the net profits amount to the sum of ... $282,449 94 he balance at credit of profit and loss on May 31, 1890, was .......... 23,808 67

The addition to the rest thus reported makes this fund amount to $1,600,000.

The directors desire to avail themselves of the provisions of the Banking Act authorizing the formation of an officers' guarantee fund. A resolution will be submitted for your approval authorizing them to establish this fund and to contribute thereto out of the funds of the bank.

A branch of the bank has been opened in the town of Brockville under favorable auspices.

The directors cannot close this report without referring to the loss the bank has sustained in the decease of their late collegue, W. R. Wadsworth, Esq. Mr. Wadsworth was one of the charter members of the bank, and by his sound judgment and experience at all times rendered it good service.

the largest in the history of the trade.
Prices were good, and the farmer, factory man and dealer all made money.
The export of cattle was very active;
the number shipped largely exceeded that of any former year. Prices were good, and caused a large and active circulation of money. Farmers and feeders did well; the shippers, however, barely held their own during the early part of the season, and experienced considerable loss towards the end.

perienced considerable loss towards the end.

The results of the year in the timber and lumber trades were unsatisfactory. In Britain prices were much depressed, and very unremunerative returns were received by manufacturers and shippers, while shipments to the United States were delayed owing to the impending tariff changes, which did not take place until too late in the season to permit of any considerable movement.

The results to merchants and manufacturers cannot, I think, be said to have been satisfactory. Speaking generally, profits have been small and losses much in excess of an average. Of this there is ample evidence in the large increase in numbers and importance of failures that have taken place.

The bank has not come through the year without its reverses, and while we have benefitted by the conditions that were productive of increased activity in business, we have also met with more than the usual amount of losses. But, roviewing the business as a whole, I think we can consignatulate ourselves on the results of the year's operations. We have been faithful in endeavoring to ascertain the full extent of the bad debts and in writing them oil, in addition to making provision for possible losses in cases where doubt and uncertainty seemed to exist; and, having done this, we are still able to report profits somewhat in excess of last year.

As a result of investigation made, the board decided to open a branch of the bank at the town of Brockville, and we are justified in saying that up to this time the results have exceeded our expectations.

You will all share in the regert which is expressed in the report regarding the death of the late W. R. Wadsworth, Esq. He was one of the petitioners named in the Act of Incorporation, and his name also appears in attendance at the first meeting held for the purpose of organizing the bank. In all the preliminary steps he took an active part, and shared in the duties and responsibilities of the Provisional Committee. He has, therefore, had a longer connection with the bank than any of our number, and his interest in the bank's affairs continued to be manifested throughout this long period of over 35 years.

The directors have had under consideration the establishment of an officers' guarantee fund in connection with the bank, to which the officers should contribute. The rule has been to take the bonds of private parties as securities indemnifying the bank against loss from the want of fidelity on the part of employes. This rule has on the whole worked well, but the absolute enforcement of its as been in some cases attended with difficulties, and we have thought that it might be supplemented by the establishment of a fund of this character. The bank has been of its office

The resolution was adopted.

On motion of Walter S. Lee, Esq., seconded by Henry Gooderham, Esq., the directors were authorized to establish a guarantee fund for the officers and employes of the Bank of Toronto, and to contribute thereto from time to time out of the funds of the bank.

A resolution was then passed tendering the thanks of the stockholders to the president, vice-president and directors for their care and attention to the affairs of the bank during the past year.

Balloting for the election of directors for the year then took place, and the scrutineers subsequently reported the following named gentleman-unanimously elected:

while the River Thames was flooded, the young man whose brave conduct has been thus signally rewarded by royal recognition was instrumental in saving the life of a child of Henry Pritchett, Horton street, who had accidentally fallen into the swollen stream. At the risk of his life he dashed into the river and swam to the rescue of the child, afterwards gallantly swimming down stream to the rescue of a younger member of the family, whom he reached too late to save alive.

The praiseworthy deeds of the young man were at once noted by Mr. Hyman, M. P. for the city, who procured the necessary affidavits and made a strong application to the size of the color of the street.

An Irish Story, BY TIGHE HOPKINS, AUTHOR OF "TWIXT LOVE AND DUTY," "FOR FREE-DOM," ETO.

And work of it," said Aunt Barbara, as she carried Dora off upstairs, leaving Arthur to start Mr. Bucknall for his train, and to entertain Trenchard. "But tell me, how did you hear? You know I couldn't send to you, for I had no address, and even if I had one I don't think I would have brought you back, though you may guess how much I have missed you these dreadful days." "Dear Aunt Barbara" exclaimed Dore

"So you know nothing about the money, Aunt Barbara?"

"So you know nothing about the money, Aunt Barbara?"

"Nothing in the world, dear. It seems to me that nobody knows; Mr. Bucknall—that's the solicitor—doesn's know; and the bankers know nothing except about the small balance with them; and Arthur knows no more than the rest."

"Nobody has explored the tower, then,
Aunt Barbara?"

"The tower, Dora?—no; what has the tower to do with it? I declare I haven't borne to think of that terrible tower since the night of the storm."

"I shall show you what is in the tower, aunt Barbara," said Dora. "Oh, how glad I am that I came."

"But tell me, dear; tell me at once," pleaded Barbara. "And then I want to know about yourself. Dear, dear, the mystery and the trouble we've had these days. And I not knowing what to think of poor dear Anthony leaving us in such a plight as this."

"Aunt Barbara," said Dora, "the tower is full of money, full of it. I found it accidentally, at least almost accidentally, for I never knew what I was looking for.
There is an underground room in the tower, and I don't know how much money stowed away there in bags. I did not dare to tell whilst Uncle Anthony lived, for I thought from what the newspapers said that poor Uncle Anthony had most likely died without telling anybody."

"Hid in the tower—a room full of gold—I declare I don't know what to make of it," said Barbara, hopeless surmise written on her features.

Then trning the conversation, as if for relief, she went on the tower store.

"No, my dear, no; not selfishly, for came quickly enough as soon as you knew—and in the middle of the honeymoon, too, and the honeymoon—but I needn't ask if that has been a happy one, your face tells me that."

me that."
Dora smiled.
"And I am going to send you back to finish it, depend upon that," added Barbara. "Oh, but this money, this money—and you have really seen it down there, down in the tower? I never heard of any underground place in it at all."
"You shall see it to morrow, Aunt Barbara."

"You shall see it to morrow, Aunt Barbara."

"Yes, yes, to morrow will be time enough. Now that I have you with me I am not troubled about anything. But we must tell Arthur. But, my dear, tell me first, why did you keep yourself unknown to us all those months?"

"Ah, I came here in a bad spirit. I was envious and angry because my father had deserted me and left everything away from me. I.—"

"Well, dear," said her aunt soothingly, "I can't wonder that you took it to hear?, and I can't approve of your father treating you so. For I cannot think that you did anything bad enough to deserve it."

"I married against my father's will," answered Dora. "I know now that his wishes were the right ones, but I had my punishment."

"But tell me, how did you hear? You know I couldn's send to you, for I had no address, and even if I had one I don't think I would have brought you back, though you may guess how much I have missed you these dreadful days."

"Dear Aunt Barbara" exclaimed Dora, "I wish I had been with you."

The name Dora gave her fell strangely upon Barbara's ears.

"Does she know it then?" thought Barbara Bora was much the taller of the pair—and looked her in the face.

"I am your aunt," said she, "and you known that?"

As her aunt said this, however, it was Dora's turn for astonishment.

"Why how long have you known it this said.

"Only just now," answered Miss Nugent, smiling.

"But how?" said Dors, more bewildered than ever. "I thought it had been my secret only."

"Your uncle must have known it this from your father's solicitors in Australia; twas from that I learned it. Anthony talked about it which he was delifious; about that and the money; he talked about me and the money; he talked about it when he was delificus; about that and the money; he talked the money is a complete of the money.

"Hid the money is queried Barbara in the turn.

"And how sorely I wanted you through it all!" she ended.

ELIZABETH ANN KITCHEN,

Tam still using it, and, with God's blessing, 1hope to be entirely cured.

ELIZABETH ANN KITCHEN, Paris, Ont.

Mrs. Kitchen refers us to the Rev. Alfred Brown, Episcopal minister in Paris. Rev. Mr. Erown says:

"Thereby certify that Mrs. E. A. Kitchen, of this town, is well known to me, and that every statement of hers is worthy of credency."

Can imagination pictures darker scene of suffering so long endured? What torments! What agonies suffered from day to day!

The dark clouds have passed away; the silver lining appears; and now in its bright splendor the effulgent sun shines out, and Mrs. Kitchen's life is no longer shrouded in darkness and misery. That life-giving remedy, Paine's Celery Compound has been her physician and salvation, and has accomplished more than all the skilled doctors this lady ever employed.

Women of Canada, we tknow that many of you are suffering as severely as Mrs. Kitchen once did. Thousands of you are experiencing some of her symptoms, which if not attended to and speedily dispelled, will certainly lead to consequences as terrible as those described in the above letter.

Let us remind you that these troubles arise from an imperfect and disorganized condition of the nervous system. When the nervous system is deranged the whole body is out of gear. Your weaknesses and frailties are well known to us, no matter how silently you may suffer. Those head-aches, neuralgic pains, feelings of goneness, nervousness, despondency, tired brain, weak, flabby muscles, sunken eyes with dark circles, and palid cheeks, all tell of some ills and miseries. Paine's Celery Compound, used when any of the above symptoms are experienced, will certainly drive off all danger. Among the members of your sex it has proved a blessing; and Canadian women in all sections of our country have testified willingly in its favor.

Take warning before life is in actual danger. A week's delay may aggravate and complicate your malady, and hasten your death. Act to-day, and act wisely.

THE, LONDON ADVERTISER, SATURDAY, JUNE 20.

The Board of Works.

At the meeting of No. 2 Committee of the City Council held Thursday night the following business was transacted: The petition of Garfield avenue residents for a sidewalk was filed. Tenders will be called for artificial stone walk on York street from Adelaide to William. George Cox's claim for injuries to his wife through a defective bridge on English street was referred to Ald. Bartlett and the engineer. Wm. Moran's complaint of the condition of King street in front of his property will be attended to by Ald. Winnett and the engineer. The East End hall janitress, Mrs. Ferguson, resigned, and T. Edwards was given the job at the old salary. A tender at $54 for a flag-staff in Victoria Park was accepted. Ex-Ald. Murray Anderson suggested that when Dundas street is block-paved the present cobblestone gutters be permitted to remain. The tender of C. Beckett for cedar-blocking north Richmond street at 652 cents per yard was accepted, being the lowest of eight which were opened. The passing of the pay sheets and a few minor matters were then attended to, and the committee adjourned. Those present were Aldermen Connor (chairman), Scarrow, Shaw, Winnett, O'Meara and Bartlett.

The Dreary Winter in Newfoundland.

The isolation of life in the distant parts of Newfoundland during winter is extreme. Outside the peninsula of Avalon there are hardly any roads; even if they existed snow and ice would render them impassable. Out to sea stretches a vast icy pavement, through which it is often impossible for a steamer to ram its way. So all the long winter months the little hamlets lie surrounded by the great snow blanket and cut off from communication from all mankind save those who inhabit their little settlement. Should the store of provisions ran con from communication from an manking save those who inhabit their little settlement. Should the store of provisions run low the situation is perilous, for there is no maximum latitude to the progressive school of Japanese, with a minimum disturbance of attendance, perhaps some of the men go out over the frozen sea to meet the yessels, and carry home food to their families. Should the ship fail to come, the people are sometimes driven to eat their mands of the progressive Japanese and the save the deam of the men go out of the substitution of the XXIV. Articles of for those of Dort and Heidelberg, then in maximum latitude to the progressive school of light. He is not meant to be separated of ancient landmarks.

dogs, of which several are usually kept in order to draw home wood from the forests on sleds. So great is the difficulty of communication during winter that a clergyman relates that on one occasion, as near to the capital as Trinity Bay, 40 shillings had been demanded, and 25 were actually paid, for the conveyance of a single letter overland to the city by a cross-country guide. While the coast is ice-bound the direct steamers from England do not touch at Newfoundland, but the mails are brought up from Halifax in a small wooden steamer, expressly built for facing the ice; but even this vessel cannot always manage to get in, and mails have to be carried ashore seven or eight miles over the ice on men's backs.—[From "A Chat About Newfoundland." hy Lady Blake, in North American Review for June.

CLAD TIDINGS.

The Struggle The present conflict going on in Japan. In Japan is chiefly religious, the political and social conflicts having been ended in the recasting of the political status and the adoption of our system of social methods.

As pertaining to the denominational struggle in Japan—of which we could wish we might see much less—perhaps nothing is more significant than the action of the Presbyterian Church in recasting its statement of doctrine. As our readers are no doubt generally aware, Presbyterian missions, like others there, have made rapid progress, and the native membership is large and influential. The native communicants, however, have been indisposed to accept all the teachings of the church, and this fact induced the missionary members of the Synod to assent to the recent modification in the canons of belief. With this in view a committee composed of judicious and conservative men believed to have controlling influence was empowered to report such changes and modifications in the articles of faith as would in their judgment afford a maximum latitude to the progressive school of Japanese, with a minimum disturbance of ancient landmarks.

This committee in its report recommended report was rejected. After rejecting these modifications the Synon which met last November prepared and adopted a standard of faith expressive of strict Japanese Christian opinion. An addition was made to the Apostles Creed by the insertion of a clause, in the following words, as a preamble to the creed itself:

"The Lord Jesus Christ, whom we worship as God, the only begotten Son of God, for us men and for our salvation, was made man and suffered. He offered up a perfect sacrifice for sin, and all who are one with him by faith are pardoned and accounted righteous; and faith in him working by love purifies the heart.

"The Holy Ghost, who, with the Father and the Son, is worshipped and glorified, reveals Jesus Christ to the soul, and without his grace, man, being dead in sin, cannot enter the Kingdom of God. By him the prophets and apostles and holy men of old were inspired, and he, speaking in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, is the supreme and Infallible judge in all things pertaining unto faith and living. From these holy Scriptures the ancient Church of Christ drew its confession, and we, holding the faith once delivered to the saints, join in that confession with praise and thanksgiving."

To these changes—which Minister Swift in his report just sent into the Government from Tokio—the American and European members of the Synod of Japan have assented. There is no doubt that such statement covers ample ground, and that the statement as formulated will commend itself to the Japanese mind quite as readily as if the Japanese were required to assimilate the unrevised confession of those Westminster divines of 250 years ago, who were no more a divine body than any General Assembly of to-day, and who were probably not quite so well calculated to formulate a system of doctrine for the church of to-day as an equal number taken from that church at the present time. There is such a thing as inviting people to believe too much, and this we are glad to see our Presbyterian friends in Japan have wisely avoided.

Mission News. Figures that are almost startling are given in connection with the Telegu mission (Baptist) in India. The baptisms reported in five months of the last mission year were over 5,000. The work is still going forward.

Missionaries Should Marry Native Women.

Not a few white men who live in savage countries advise their European brethren there, if they intend to live long in the land the mission is embarrassed by its very success, for the large ingathering requires a large addition to the native pastorate, while funds do not increase proportionately.

Smoke Blossoms.

"Did you ever see a smoke blossom?" Well, the way to make them is this: Buy one of the latest new CAT CIGARS. Light it and blow a ring in a still atmosphere, and then watch it. The smoke making the ring revolves towards the center as you look towards it. While it is floating away a part of the ring shoots slowly away from the rest forming a loop. When the two sides of the loop come almost together the loop seems to burst at its apex and a lily-shaped blossom appears thereon. Try it. Manufactured by

Editor of the ADVERTISER:

Sir,—I have, as you know, for some time advertised in Canada, and the States a prescription for the hair called "Dr. Dornewends Hair Magic." I have received some thousands of fiattering testimonials from those who have used it as to its merits as a resionative of gray or faded hair; also as a promoter of the growth and a certain cure for dandruif.

A great many of my correspondents ask the questions: "Why is my hair fuling out? As it is impossible for me to answer every one, I take its impossible for me to answer every one, I take the liberty of encroaching on your valuable space to make a general reply. A great many persons do not seem to be aware that excessive washing and rubbing is injurious to the growth of the hair; such is the case, however. Constant washing and rubbing the scalp and hair causes over irrutation and removes the oily substance which gives strength to the hair, undue heat easied by the wearing of heavy headgen; is also failing out of the hair; gray of raded hair and finding out of the hair gray of raded hair and finding out of the hair gray of raded hair and finding out of the hair when caused and substances. I really think that the time has now come when I may relate, without danger or in-discretion, the one adventure which has refallen me in a life which, I am thankful as been otherwise remarkably de-befallen me in a life which, I am thankful to say, has been otherwise remarkably devoid of startling experiences. It happened many years ago. All the persons chiefly cencerned in it are dead, and I daresay that by employing fictitious names I shall fulfill the requirements of prudence.

Workingham, where I have exercised my calling as a medical man throughout my professional career, is a manufacturing town which has, I believe, returned Liberal or Badical members of Parliament ever since 1832; so that everybody was surprised when Sir Horace Sibthorp, one of the principal territorial magnates of the county, came forward to solicit our suffrages. He came forward, it is true, as a Radical, and even as what in those days was esteemed a very extreme Radical; but that, of course, only increased the general surprise. What his motives were for thus departing from the traditions of his order I did not inquire—indeed I have never taken much personal interest in party politics—but he was triumphantly returned, and his skill in oratory—possibly also the incongruity of his position—soon earned for him a popularity far greater than had been enjoyed by any of our previous representatives.

It was on account of what I had been Joyed by any of our previous representatives.

It was on account of what I had been told about his eloquence that I attended a great meeting which he addressed shortly after his election; and I must say that a finer apeaker I never listened to. He talked what seemed to me at that time to be rather wild and dangerous nonsense, although many of the schemes which he advocated have since become law; but the fascination of his voice and gesture, and his air of thorough, enthusiastic conviction were such that one could not help being carried away by him, and I soon found myself applauding as loudly as anybody. He was a tall, spare man with singularly bright brown eyes. His age was probably nearer 60 than 50; but he had a youthful carriage and, but for his gray hair, he might have 60 than 50; but he had a youthful carriage and, but for his gray hair, he might have passed for being on the better side of middle life. His speech, as I have said, interested me; but as he went on I began to take another and a more professional interest in the speaker. Those curiously brilliant eyes of his, the pallor of his complexion and a blutsk tinge about the lips, which grew more apparent as he approached his peroration, were symptoms of an unmistakable kind, and it was very evident to me that Sir Horace's political career would be a brief one. He sank back into his chair at last, completely exhausted, amid a tremendous outburst of cheering, and I observed that he left the platform immediately afterward, leaning upon the immediately afterward, leaning upon the arm of one of his friends, while somebody else rose to address the meeting.

Not being particularly anxious to hear this gentleman's views, I slipped away, and was leaving the hall when a messenger ran was leaving the hall when a messenger ran after me and caught me by the arm.

"Dr. Drew, you're wanted," said he breathlesity; "Sir Horace Sibthorp has been taken ill."

been taken ill."

I went at once into the little room behind the platform, where, as I had expected, I found Sir Horace lying in a dead awoon, with two or three frightened-looking gentlemen standing hopelessly around him. It was some little time before I was able to restore him to consciousness; but when his senses returned they did so with astonishing rapidity, and our grave faces seemed to amuse him.

I accepted his invitation all the more willingly because his words seemed to show that there was some genuine alarm underlying that assumed jauntiness of manner; but unhapply the careful examination which I made after accompanying him to his hotel did not justify me in saying anything reassuring to him. To put things plainly, his condition was such that he night die at any moment and that are might die at any moment, and that, even under the most favorable circumstances, he was very unlikely to live more than another year or two. Naturally, I did not tell him that; but I warned him that he could not afford to trifle with his health, could not afford to trifle with his health, and that it was absolutely necessary for him to avoid excitement.

"My dear sir," he returned, smilingly, "you might as well order me to avoid meat and drink. You give me to understand that unless I retire from public life I shall kill myself, and I daresay you are right; but there is another fact to be taken into consideration, namely, that for reasons with which I need not trouble you, private life would kill me. I firmly believe that my best chance is to go on with this sort of thing. It is ridiculous enough," he added, with a shrug of his shoulders, "yet, somehow or other, it exhibitations are me."

It is raidculus enough, "he added, with a shrug of his shoulders, "yet, somehow or other, it exhilarates me."

"I don't wonder at that, Sir Horace," said I, "you can I see anything ridiculous in the with you this evening, though I am pretty sure, now that I think over your speech in cold blood, that I utterly diagree with it."

"Dear me "he exclaimed, with an ammed to want half I think over your speech in cold blood, that I utterly diagree with it."

"Dear me "he exclaimed, with an ammed twinkle in his eye; "so you took me seriously, did yoo? You really bolives that I was shoene?" Well, between ourtifact I was shoene? Well, between ourtifact I was shoened when the suddenly started, staggered forward and fell heavily to the ground. I saw no more of him for some months after this. Toward the end of the summer, when Parliament had risen, he came down to address his constituents once more, and I had promised myself the pleasure of listening to him again, but was prevented from doing so by professional engagements. I was walking homeward, late on the evening which I had seen advertised as appointed for his meeting, when a poke in the back from a walking stick made me turn round, and there was Sir Horace himself.

"You're the very man I want, doctor!" he called out cheerily. "Are you too busy to drive home with me and make an ex-amination of this troublesome heart of matter, but I've had some uncomfortable symptoms to-day."

I said I was quite at his orders, and presently I was seated beside him in his brougham, which took us out of the town at a high rate of speed. On the way he told me that he had been consulting some of my London conferes, who had done their best to frightem him.

"As if getting into a funk was likely to prolong one's life! However, I should just like to hear what you think of me. There are one or two matters which I ought perhaps to see to in case of accidents."

perhaps to see to in case of accidents."

The coachman did not turn in at the gates of Sandridge Park, as I had expected him to do, but, wheeling abruptly to the right, conducted us all along a lane running parallel with the palings and pulled up beside a small iron gate.

'I daresay you didn't know that I have a tiny abode here which belongs to me exclusively," said Sir Horace, as he jumped out, 'Well, I can take you into it; but I'll lay you 10 to I in anything you like that nobody else can."

He dismissed the carriage and led the way into what, so far as I could see in the seemed to amuse him.

"Don't look so solemn, all of you," said he, laughing; "didn't you ever see a man faint before? It's a little way I have; it doesn't mean anything serious, I assure you."

I could have assured him that in all probability it meant something very serious indeed, and I almost felt that I ought to enlighten him, although, of course, I was not his medical attendant, and my opinion had not been asked. No donbt my face reflected the thoughts which were passing through my mind, for presently Sir Horace said, in the same jesting tone:

"I know you're dying to listen to my heart, Dr. Drew. Well, I'm not going home to-night; so if you'll come round and smoke a clgar with me at 'he Red Lion, where I intend to sleep, you shall be gratified. Moreover, you shall have the additional pleasure of prescribing for me.

I accepted his invitation all the more willingly because his words seemed to show that there was some genuine alarm undervious that we had not entered that way.

"Well," I answered, "I suppose we got in by opening one of those panels."

"Quite so, my dear sir; but which of them? And if you were to hit upon the right one, do you think you would hit upon the dodge of making it yield? Simple though the trick is, I doubt whether you would discover it, because nobody has done so yet. And I have every reason to believe," added Sir Horace, with a twinkle in his eye, "that some people have tried their best."

I presumed that he alluded to his wife, I their best."

I presumed that he alluded to his wife, and indeed he presently avowed, with his accustomed candor, that such was the case. "Lady Sibthorp," said he, "is a woman superior to nearly all the defects which disgrace erring mortals like myesif; still to prove to her and others that she is not absoluted. prove to her and others that she is not absolutely angelic, heaven has afflicted her wich one small failing in the shape of an insatiable curiosity. So, you see, this impenetrable den of mine serves the double purpose of protecting some of my papers from inspection and humiliating her ladyship—which I feel sure must be good for her soul. I have a little bedroom beyond that curtain; I sometimes sleep here. However, I don't often do that, because it is inconvenient having ne place to put my man.

I explained my presence and broke the news of her bereavement to her as gently as I could. If I had had more time to collect myself I might have been rather less abrupt; but I am bound to say that her nerve showed no sign of being shaken, though she frowned and looked distressed.

"This is most unfortunate," was her rather odd comment upon my narrative. And then looking me straight in the face, she added calmly, but a trifle sternly, "Sir Horace must not die just yet."

"But, my dear madam, he is dead," I remonstrated.

"It is possible," she continued, without deigning to notice my interruption, "that he may die to-morrow, for his brother, Admiral Sibthorp, is said to be sinking fast, still people often linger on longer than is expected. It is tiresome to have to enter into explanations; but I suppose the position of affairs must be made intelligible to you. Admiral Sibthorp, as perhaps you may be aware, is heir to the baronetcy and the entailed estates. As he has half-a-dozen daughters and no son, the mext in succession is Dick Sibthorp, the only child of Sir may be aware, is heir to the baronetcy and the entailed estates. As he has half-a-dozen daughters and no son, the next in succession is Dick Bibthorp, the only child of Sir Horace's younger brother, who died many years ago. Dick is married to my sister, and I am very fond of them both; that, I suppose, is one reason why Sir Herace has chosen to bequeath his personal property, which is very large, to the admiral, instead of to them. Dick is only to inherit in the event of his surviving his uncle. I may tell you," she added with a scornful smile, "that I am acquainted with the contents of my late husband's will, and that I long ago found my way into this Bluebeard's closet of his, of which he was so childishly proud. Since he chose to defy me, I thought and still think, that, having outmaneuvered him, I was fully entitled to take every advantage of my success. Well, now you understand how things are. The admiral must, of course, have made a will leaving all that he has to dispose to his family. If, therefore, he survives Sir Horace, his haughters will divide a great sum of money between them, while poor Dick will come into a property which he will not be well daughters will divide a great sum of money between them, while poor Dick will come into a property which he will not be well enough off to keep up."

"I quite understand all that, Lady Sibthorp," I replied. "What I do not under-stand is why you should imagine that I am likely to assist you in perpetrating a ing out to her that, even were I as great a secondrel as she obligingly assumed me to be, there would be insuperable objections in the way of my doing what she wished. Under the peculiar circumstances of the case it might be requisite to hold an inquest upon her husband's body; in any event, the necessary arrangements for the interment must not be delayed; finally, Sir Horace's non-appearance in London and my own absence from home during a whole night would of course give rise to inquiry.

"No inquiry will be made about Sir Horace," she answered; "he has always been eccentric and uncertain in his movements, and Thompson, his valet, is quite accustomed to losing sight of him. As for you, you have the advantage of being a

"Well, Lady Sibthorp," said I, "I won't my tening the truth about our recent interview, Lady Sibtherp?" I inquired, grimly.

"You can tell it if you like," she answered, "but I really think you had better hold your tongue. In self-defense I must give you the lie, and I think I am more likely to be believed than you are. Besides, what will you gain by telling your preposterous story? You won't injure me, for I shall leave Sondridge very shortly, and you won't do yourself much good by incurring the wrath and ill-will of Dick Sibthorp, who will now be your great man in these parts. Dick firmly believes me to be the best and kindest of women-as indeed I am for those I care for. He will certainly conclude that you were either intoxicated or the victim of some hallucination, and you may depend upon it that nine people out of ten will agree with him."

Well, there was something in that; and I am a quiet, peaceable man, constitutionally

Well, there was something in that; and I am a quiet, peaceable man, constitutionally adverse to being mixed up in scandals. Duty no longer compelled me to expose Lady Sibthorp, and expediency seemed to counsel silence. So, in giving my account of the circumstances attendant upon Sir Horace's death, I merely stated that, after having vainly sought the secret entrance through a night and half-a-day, I had at last found that some agency for which I was unable to account had caused it to fall ajar.

CULLODEN, June 2.

DEAR AUNT FRUDENCE;

As I saw the other letters I thought I would write a short one. I am 12 years old and in the Fourth Book. I study history, geography, grammar, arithmetic, literature and a few other studies connected with the fourth class. I have one brother and one little sister. I go to Sunday school two every Sunday—to the Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday schools. My pa is a tinsmith, and is the superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school. I think I will close now. From your loving neice,

MINNIE M. PEDLOW.

[You certainly are very fond of Sunday school when you go twice on one Sunday.

DUNNINGVILLE, Mich., May 18, 1891.

DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:

It is now some time since I have written to you. I intended to write before this, but it seemed hard to get started. I can't tell you how glad I am for that little preach, as you called it, for I was tired of the way most of my little cousins' letters read. I know what you are most interested in now, and I know you will be glad to hear of all of us going to school, then you are willing to leave us to the kind care of our teacher. Now, Aunt Prudence, I am going to tell you there are two things I am sorry for; one is, because you have grey hair, and again I am sorry you have so little. Now, I hope your hair will come in thick and brown again, for that is the color I expect it used to be. My hair is kind of yellow, or, as ma says, it is kind of delicate ginger. I must tell you our crope look good; our potatoes are just coming up and we have some early sweet corn up as high as my finger. Well, for fear you will be tired of my linge, I will close. So good-bye, dear suntie. From

DUNNINGVILLE, Mich. May 13, 1891. DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:

I thought I would write to you too. My sister Julia has written different times, and me says I may write and be your niece too. I am not going to school these days for I am troubled with earache so much. Sometimes I can't go to sleep it is so sore. Ma is busy at garden these days, and I have to mind the baby for her. Sometimes I get tired, but for all shat I love him. There was a man offered me 10 cents for him, but we can't spare him. Well, I am 6 years old, and this is my first letter. I would like to see you. I will have to close now and go to rock my little brother. Good-bye. From LILLIE E. BEODIE.

DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:

I saw your little children's letters in the Advertiser, and I thought I would write too. I am 15 years eld and I am going to school yet, and I thought I would write with her. I have five sisters and four brothers. One of my little sisters is not very well. We do not take the Advertiser, but we take the Toronto Mail and the Fireside. I live on the bank of River Thames, and they catch a lot of fish in the spring. Your niece,

As soon as the examinations are over I am going with aome boy friends camping in Muskoka, where we can row, sail, swim and shoot all we want to. Have you ever been there? I took a prize for mathematics and another for literature last year at school, but do not know as yet whether I shall gain one this year. I have four brothers and two sisters. I hope you will have a pleasant summer. May I write again? From your loving nephew,

CHRISTIAN ISLAND, May 27, 1881.

DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:

I take the liberty of addressing you as my aunt, being assured that you would like to have me as one of your many nieces. Though I am an Indiana girl, yet I am certain you will not object to that. I am 14 years of age. I go to school and study reading, arithmetic, geography, grammar, history, English language, writing and drawing. The school is supported by the Methodist Society and taught by an Indian. I just came home a few weeks ago from visiting my friends at Cape Croker. Christian Island is situated on Georgian Bay. I am afraid I am taking too much space in the letter box. I will write again. I hope to see my letter in print. I am a member of the White Badge.

In a steeplechase on the Morphettville course on April 18 at the Adelaide cup meeting Alfred Reed was riding a horse called Messenger. At the stone wall in front of the grand stand a mare called Emile jumped with him, but the mare blundered, altimately rolled over, got one foot entanggled in Messenger's rein and tore the head part of the bridle, which let the bit fall out of his mouth. Reed nevertheless kept him on the course, with the bit against his chest, went a mile and a half over six more fences and finished a splendid second.

Mr. Ariel Lathrop, brother-in-law of Senator Stanford, who for a number of years has had charge of that gentleman's interests, was traveling last week on his way east, where he will spend the summer. Not long ago there was considerable friction at Palo Alto between Marvin and Mr. Lathrop, the result being that the celebrated colt trainer handed in his resignation to Senator Stanford on that gentleman's return from Europe. The Senator investigated the matter and soon found that Marvin was in the right, the result being that Mr. Lathrop's authority at Palo Alto was made subordinate to that of the Alto was made subordinate to that of the Alto was made subordinate to that of the man's return from Europe. Ariel Lathrope, brother-in-law to Governor Stanford, owner of the Palo Alto Farm, California, having seen Axtell at Terre Haute, states that the horse was a revelation and never was he so surprised as to his individuality. He expected after making due allowance for tales told by those with "fish to sell" to see a little jack-legged stallion with only a fast record in his favor. Instead he saw a grand specimen of the trotter in structural and muscular development. After taking a few measurements and viewing the stallion sufficiently long to fully take in his grand points, he said: "No wonder he trots and trots fast."

paper which gives some of the author's suggestions about horses. However ridiculous they may seem to horsemen in this enlightened age, they are little worse than some modern practices. Here is his way of curing a balky or restive horse:

"Let a footman stand behind you with a shrewd cat tied at the end of a pole, with her bellie upward, so that her mouth and claws be at liberty. When your horse doth staic or go backward let him thrust the cat betwixt his thighs.

"Let the footman and the standers by threaten the horse with a terrible noise, and you shall see it shall make him go.

"Also the shrill crie of a hedgehog, being strait tied by the foot under the horse's taile, is a reminder of like force, which was proved by Master Vincentic Respino, a Neopolitan, who corrected by this means an old, restive horse of the king's." But Blundeuil did not think this was good every-day practice, for he says further: "The waies rehearsed are not to be commonlie used; but only in time of neede, and then with good discretion; for otherwise you should but amaze your horse and drive him to despair, for he shall never understand your meanes."

Anxious Mamma—Little Dick is upstairs, crying with the toothache. Practical Papa—Take him around to the dentist's. Haven't any money? You won't need any money. The toothache will stop before you get there.

He might begin by taking a handful of bran and a handful of oats and mixing two tablespoonfuls of the flaxseed jelly with it and getting this amount twice a day. Perhaps it would be as well to teach the colts first to take the bran and oats, then adding the jelly. some extent take its place. There are only two or three ways left to us of meeting the difficulty now. It is too late to grow corn for the silo, or even for green food in best form, although if put in at once it might yet answer for the latter purpose.

once it might yet answer for the latter purpose.

Three things may yet be done which will prove helpful if rains come soon. Our clover meadows may be cut early, and we can grow millet and rape. If clover meadows are cut early we have still a chance of a second crop, which may go far to make up for the loss of the first one. This, of course, can only be done where the common red clover is grown.

Millet furnishes an excellent substitute for hay, as may of our farmers very well know, and it may be sown any time this month. It will furnish from one to three tons of fodder, as valuable ton for ton for feeding purposes as good hay when it is cut at the right time and properly cured. It is also much relished by the stock. It is an excellent food for mileh cows. There are several varieties, as common millet, Hungarian grass, German millet, Italian or golden millet, and the Golden Wonder millet. The common millet and Hungarian grass are best known in this country, and are probably as good as any, although the fields.

grass are best known in this country, and are probably as good as any, although the Golden Wonder millet is well spoken of in the United States.

Millet will grow on a great variety of soils, but is best adapted to humus soils and rich loams. It is least adapted to light sands and gravels. It will not germinate well in lumpy soils. As it is a shallow feeding plant, thorough pulverization is of much consequence in preparing a seed bed. It should be cut when fully headed out and cured after the methods adopted in curing It should be out when fully headed out and cured after the methods adopted in curing clover. If cured by the sunlight while lying where the mower left it the color fades, and its feeding value is much impaired. It should therefore be cured in the cock after it has become thoroughly wilted. If not cut until the seeds begin to ripen it becomes woody and its feeding value is much impaired. It is a plant that flourishes best in warm weather and is casily injured by frost at any stage of the

There is still time to sow rape, and in bushel to one bushel of seed is sown per acte.

There is still time to sow rape, and in root-growing sections this will prove of much service in providing pasture in autumn which may be used in the place of supplies of fodder, which, under other circumstances, would have to be used. Barley may also be sown on up to the end of June, and even later to cut for green fodder. It has not been much used for this purpose in this country, but has proved of much service in providing fodder in autumn in the New England States.

These dry seasons which keep coming occasionally remind us of the importance of growing a variety of fodder crops. Those who have a good crop of rye to cut as a substitute for hay need not have so much concern. On this farm we have 40 acres of rye. We have been using it since about the first of the month for the stock, and have some twenty acres of it standing in the shock to be used as winterfodder. The remaining portion will be put in the silo. The ground on which it grew is now being plowed for rape. We have thus secured a crop which, this year, is more valuable acre for acre than hay. We expect to get a crop of rape, as last year, of more value for feeding than the rye, will thoroughly clean the ground at the same time, and it will be left in a good condition for growing crop the following year.

Of course, many of our farmers know all about the subjects of which this letter treats, but sometimes there is no harm in being reminded of what we already know. Yours, etc.,

Ministers' Assessments.

To the Editor of the Adventises:

Permit me to call attention to a manifest injustice in the recent assessment of ministers' salaries in this city, in accordance with an act passed by the Ontario Legislature. the assessors have not considered the est mated annual rental as a part of his in come, and that on the other hand it has been so regarded in every case where the minister pays his own rent. It is confessedly in the power of the assessors to add the house rent. Since they have not done so the only remaining reasons are that they are incapable, or indolent, or purposely partial. I am most willing to pay my full share towards the revenue of the city, but I am not willing to do so while others of whom the majority have larger salaries than I are permitted to escape from paying their just dues by the fiction that a certain part of their income does not pass through their hands.

Accounts of the devastation caused by sheep worrying dogs in this Province have become an old story to Advertiser readers, though the reports of municipal councils and otherwise. According to the Southern Planter a farmer down in that part of the country has lost $250 worth of fine sheep by dogs and is harassed by legal proceedings for shooting the latter. A correspondent of the journal mentioned says: "Until sheep-raisers are protected by law, they must devise all sorts of plans to protect themselves. I will give you a plan I have found effectual. Make a pen of any kind of rough chear poles, about six feet square at the bottom and about threefeet at the top, and about five feet or more high. Put in the pen meat, bones and a small piece of fried meat, touching with the meat the outside poles (broiled meat is best.) the outside poles (broiled meat is best.) Uhe dog smells the meat and goes up on the outside of the pen, and jumps down into it through the top. I have caught over twelve dogs in this way, some of them coming five miles distant, and most of them coming five miles distant, and most of them half-starved, worthless dogs. I sometimes catch dogs belonging to my near neighbors; then I inform the owners, and request them to keep the dogs at home. If caught the second time they will be killed. I have lost none of my sheep lately, but my nearest neighbor has lost seven. A good many dogs have of late years prowled about my yard at night and eaten the young poultry; but now not one that comes about my premises escapes." premises escapes. Feed Well.

Among the general run of farmers, especially during a season like the past when coarse grains were excessively high priced, there is not much danger of over-feeding. Even in districts where dairying is the special line pursued it is not desirable that cows should be kept down in condition to mere "skin and bones" as some seem to make it. To do the best work in milk pro-imagine. To do the best work in milk pro

imagine. To do the best work in milk production of which she is capable the cows must be well nourished and in "good heart" at least. We commend the following on this topic from the Breeders' Gazette:

"Under-feeding ruins more live stock in the west than over-feeding. Grave as are the objections to pampered breeding animals, yet where there is one beast ruined by an excess of heating food there are a sicozen well-bred ones suffered to lanes into lozen well-bred ones suffered to lapse into a state of hopeless degeneracy by a failure, in the case of young stock, to keep them growing or by neglecting to provide a sufficient ration to support breeding animals against the taxes of nature. Feed the youngsters generously on proper food-stuffs, and when they are matured, if of the right stamp, they will not require extra care. Prof. Sanborn argues that there is even more in feed than in breed, and the facts are not all against him. Whatever is worth keeping at all in the way of farm stock is worth keeping well."

In other words, in buying 100 pounds of butter we pay for 10 pounds of water, 13 pounds of curd or cheese, and 3 pounds of salt; yet it is doubtful if we would be satisfied to eat pure fat. The water enables us to "apread" the butter, and the salt suits most of us.—[Rural New Yorker. Bristles.

Retention of Moisture.

The advice given is first-class, but the reasons for it are not sufficiently clear, says the Farmer's Review. Surface stirring is sone chiefly to retain the moisture already in the soil. That it exposes "fresh soil to absorb the atmosphere" may be partially sorrect, but it is doubtless more correct to argue that surface stirring breaks the contaction of the capillary tubes or interstices in the soil, and thus lessens radiation and avaporation. The loose earth on the surface baused by stirring implements may be correctly regarded as a mulch, and no matter how dry the weather may be or how dusty the operation may prove, constant agitation of the surface soil should be kept up in the corn field. This spring the writer has more than ever before observed the effect of loose than ever before observed the effect of loose surface soil causing the retention of moisture. On an experimented plot where potatoes have been planted in strict accordance with the Carman trench system of culture, the soil of the trenches is always moist, even although ridged up; whereas, the same soil on an adjoining plot not surface stirred has dried out and baked hard. Mr. Carman claims that the trench system is to be commended on the score that it assists in the retention of moisture, and we

is to be commended on the score that in assists in the retention of moisture, and we are already convinced that this idea is correct. It might be added, that while the labor of digging trenches for potatoes according to the Carman plan is rather severe the principle is all right, and might be practiced with horse implements contrived for the purpose. for the purpose. Dry Weather Hints.

In the last issue of the Stockman and Farmer the following was suggested by the prevalence of drought in many localities:
"In many parts of the country the weather has been very dry, so much so that pasturage is being cut short, and unless rains come soon the cows will shrink very much in their milk. It is always a good much in their milk. It is always a good practice to plant some corn specially for feeding green to the cows, and we would advise those who may be short of pasture in the summer to plant corn now, but we hardly know what to advise in case the important business, and arrangements will be described by the mode shortly in Komoka and Delaware for trading. Welland Patrons held a convention on Tuesday at Welland and a large amount of important business was transacted. Grand present drought continues. The hay crop will be light even though rain falls soon, but if it doesn't the crop will be extremely poor and also full of weeds. If the cows poor and also full of weeds. If the cows are good ones and paying well, rather than have them suffer for feed we should give them part of the meadow land for pasture and depend for winter feed upon corn fodder and, if it can be sown, a crop of Hungarian grass or millet. Either of these grasses will make a fair crop with one good rain provided the soil is good in quality and mechanical condition. One other way in helping tide over the drought is to get rid of the poor cows; they eat as much as the good ones and are too costly to keep when there is plenty of feed, but to keep them now is actually ruinous."

Butchers and the "Big Four."

Butchers and the "Big Four." The National Butchers' Protective Asso riation, which held its annual convention in Pittsburg, Pa., recently, devoted considerable time to discussion of ways and means to break the dressed beef monopoly—represented by the "Big Four"—now so nearly in control of eastern markets. The plan most favored was that of establish-ing at some point an immense slaughtering and distributing establishment, with minor depots in leading markets, at which members could secure their beef.

Do Not Procrastinate. A word of warning is given in the Prairie Fatmer by Mrs. L. Harrison, of Peoria, Ill., about having necessary supplies at hand when needed. She says:

"The poet has well said that 'Procrastination is the thief of time.' This very curping fallow has teleponent from here."

cunning fellow has stolen much from bee-keepers by telling them. Time enough yet; wait and see if you need them before order-ing hives, sections, etc.' Last year many colonies swarmed and emigrated for lack of hives to put them in; and honey wasted for want of sections. Bee-keeping, instead of being a heaven-born pleasure, became a fret and worriment. Factories ran night and day during the busy season to keep up with their orders and then failed. Goods sometimes Butter contains water, though not as much as is generally supposed. The Connecticut station analyzed 18 samples of butter—11 from private dairies and 6 from creamerles. An all-corn diet is about the worst you can give to brood sows. Feed laxative feed; at this season give them pasture or plenty of grass in the pen. A mixture of salt or wood ashes—I to 3 by measure—will supply them with some of the mineral elements they need.

Retention of Moisture.

The South Dakota Experiment Station has issued a bulletin on corn culture, which will interest many farmers. Among the general remarks appear the following:

"Stir the surface often, keep the harrow and cultivator moving from planting time antil the corn is laid by. This frequent stirring keeps the crust broken and is of great value in exposing fresh soil to absorb htmospheric moisture, and with it plants food."

The advice given is first-class, but the feasons for it are not sufficiently clear, says he Farmer's Review. Surface stirring is sone chiefly to retain the moisture already in the soil.
