

CONTRACTORS ARE COMPLAINING BECAUSE BULK TENDER ACCEPTED

It Is Said the Individual
Tenders for Alexandra
School Were $400
Lower.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES EXPLAIN SITUATION

Experience in the Past With Individual Contractors Did Not Work Out Satisfactorily.

There is trouble brewing over the awarding of the tenders for the Alexandra school on Colborne street.

The contract was given to Hyatt Bros. for about $44,000, some weeks ago. That firm put in a bulk tender, and it was the lowest of such bids.

It is now stated that individual tenders would bring the price down $400 and possibly more.

This fact is admitted by members of the board of education and also by City Architect Nutter.

"There is no doubt that the bulk tender of Hyatt Bros. was the lowest bulk tender," said Mr. Nutter. "It is also true that individual tenders, the lowest in each case, would have brought the price down perhaps $400 or $500. I told the tenders, but I did not make any recommendation. That was for the board to decide, and they accepted the offer of Hyatt Bros."

Chairman Speaks.

"The tender of Hyatt Brothers was not the lowest, if the individual tenders are considered," said Dr. A. J. Wyckoff, chairman of No. 2 committee. "We had something more to consider than the mere question of price. We have had work done in the past that was not up to our requirements, and we did not care to have the same experience repeated. When we looked at the proposition from every standpoint, we came to the conclusion that the citizens' money would be invested to the best advantage by awarding the contract as it was awarded. It is worth considerable money to have the contract in one man's hands. We have had some experience in the other line, and it was not at all satisfactory. Let somebody open the question, if he wants to."

One contractor claims that he was $2,000 lower on one branch of the work, while others claim that they were low.

It is probable that something will be said on the subject at the next meeting of the board on the subject.

McCLARY CO. OFFER HIGHER ASSESSMENT

Propose That It Be Raised From
$150,000 to $200,000—
Expanding Industry.

At the special council meeting Monday night, among other things to be considered will be the McClary assessment.

Although the fixed assessment of the McClary Company, made some years ago, does not expire for a year or two it is understood that the company will voluntarily suggest that an increase of one-third in their assessment be made for the next few years. The present assessment is $150,000, so that this will add $50,000 to the city's assessment roll. These figures do not include school taxes, on which the company pays its full assessment.

At the present high rate of taxes this will mean quite an increase to the city's revenue.

The figures, 1,200 employees, representing nearly 600 families, hardly give any intelligent idea of the ramifications of the McClary business in London. Fully half the population of the city is in some way affected by the growth and success of the McClary business.

The city purchases of the company itself, yearly reach a very great amount without taking into consideration the purchasing powers of the employees whose wages amount to about half a million yearly.

The growth of the McClary business during the past few years is splendid evidence that the council made no mistake when fixing their assessment some years ago. With a fixed assessment the company is in a position to definitely consider their development plans for the future, and if the growth during the next few years is as great as it has been during the past the fixed assessment should certainly prove a good thing for London.

It is not likely that there will be any objections raised by any of the aldermen to the suggested increase in the company's assessment.

BIG HORSE SHOW

Fine Exhibition at Madison Square
Draws Many Exhibitors.

[Associated Press.]

New York, Nov. 12.—Madison Square Garden never drew more attractive trade today, with the great amphitheatre beautifully decorated for the opening of the 25th National Horse show, marking as usual the initiation of the New York social season.

The society set, whose particular function this is, was early in evidence both in the boxes which circled the show ring and in the arena itself, where the thoroughbreds of the notables are put through their paces. With 1,740 entries to be judged, there was promise of incessant activity from the moment the bugles sounded to late Saturday night, when the exhibition closes. The entries exceed by 200 the previous best record.

SEVERAL LONDONERS IN PERIL OF MEXICAN MOBS

Fear They May Suffer as a
Result of the Anti-American Outbreak.

Many Londoners, whose relatives live in Mexico, which is now in a very unsettled state as a result of the lynching of a Mexican "greaser" in Texas some days ago, have had cause for worry during the past few days owing to the anti-American outbreaks in various centres.

The homes of Americans are being attacked everywhere, and it is feared that Canadians may come in for some of the attention being given all English-speaking people by the rioters.

Troops have been called out to protect life and property in many sections.

There are many Londoners in the different districts, among them Mr. Thomas Hodgins, a former employee of the T. B. Escott Company; Mr. Wilfrid Laing, of Fraser, of Cordoba City, Vera Cruz Province; Mr. George Berrel, Mrs. Carr-Harris, a daughter of Mr. Donald McLean, and Mr. W. D. Love, a son of Police Magistrate Love, who went to Mexico City a short time ago. Mr. Berrel and Mrs. Carr-Harris are in the northern part at present.

Mr. Hodgins has not been home for over a year.

LONDON POSTOFFICE SEVENTH ON LIST

Ontario Stands First Amongst Provinces According to Report Just Issued.

Revenue Shows an Increase in Some Records of the Dead-Letter Office.

Ottawa, Nov. 12.—According to the annual report of the Postoffice Department, the people of Canada posted during the past fiscal year 456,035,000 letters, 45,104,000 postcards, and 10,465,000 registered letters. In addition, the mails handled 14,975,900 free letters on Government business, 600,000 pieces of third-class matter, and 7,000,000 packages of fourth-class matter. The increase in the number of letters and postcards handled was 45,705,000, or a little over ten per cent.

The rapid expansion of the service involved an increased expenditure of $822,951, but despite this the total revenue of $7,955,547, was $743,710 in excess of the total expenditure.

Other figures showing the growth of country areas follows: In the number of postoffices there was an increase of 408; in postal notes offices, 441; in the aggregate mileage of mail routes, both by land and water, 1,475,505 miles; in the revenue from the sale of postage stamps, $726,424.

As usual Ontario does almost as much mail business as the rest of the provinces combined, and Toronto is the leading city of the Dominion in respect to letters handled. The total number of letters posted in Ontario last year was 203,448,000; in Quebec, 85,334,000; in Manitoba, 43,068,000; in British Columbia, 37,266,000; in Nova Scotia, 25,321,000; in Alberta, 20,822,000; in Saskatchewan, 18,659,000; and in New Brunswick, 17,500,000.

By cities the reports show the following totals for letters: Toronto, 1,709,493; Montreal, 1,063,238; Winnipeg, 695,051; Vancouver, 257,261; Ottawa, 210,139; Hamilton, 202,921; London, 145,250; Halifax, 114,318; St. John, 110,074; and Calgary, 125,749.

At Dead Letter Office.

The total number of letters, books, packets, etc., received at the dead letter office was 2,547,749. These included 5,427 letters containing money amounting to $27,206, 3,419 letters containing checks to the face value of $518,044, 460 letters containing to the face value of $171,883, 2,093 letters containing express orders to the value of $47,317, and 3,667 letters with postoffice money orders valued at $43,669. Some of the contents of the dead letter office are of a most curious nature. There were thirteen suits of baby clothes, 220 blouses, 254 cakes, twelve packages of chewing gum, twenty-four packages of cigarettes, one ear drum, two gramophones, four parcels of hair, eighty-eight pieces of maple sugar, fifteen pedigrees, ninety-eight shoes, 102 silver watches, fourteen artificial teeth, and six pairs of trousers.

JUDGE SAYS FRASER IS NOT A LUNATIC

Case of Rich Old Man Who Married Dundas Girl.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Toronto, Nov. 12.—In a judgment covering thirty-five closely typewritten pages, Mr. Justice Britton holds that Michael Fraser is not at the present time insane.

The courts may yet have to deal with the question as to whether he was sane at time of his marriage, which his relatives are seeking to have declared a nullity on the ground that he was not mentally capable of making a valid marriage.

He is over 80 years of age, and worth $80,000. He married Hannah M. O. Robertson, of Dundas, a young lady of 30, last January.

BIT INTO GEM-SHOP WHILE EATING OYSTERS

Piccadilly Street Resident Found
Seventeen Pearls in a Bivalve.

While eating oysters in his home at 265 Piccadilly street, Mr. A. E. Chapman made the remarkable find of seventeen pearls in a single oyster shell. Several of the pearls were unusually large and would have been quite valuable, it is said, if only the bivalves had not been cooked. Mr. Chapman declares that in the future he will prefer his oysters raw.

ASQUITH VISITS KING GEORGE V.

Premier Will Not Try To Do
Further Business Unless Peers Are Created

DATE OF THE ELECTION

Question Now Is Will It Be Held in December or January Next?
A Tense Situation.

London, Nov. 12.—Premier Asquith yesterday visited King George V.

The object of the visit was to acquaint his majesty, who, like his father, often confers with the cabinet ministers, of the failure of the constitutional conference and to advise him of the course the Government intends to pursue.

Herbert Henry Asquith, the prime minister, who must decide this question, thus far has kept his own counsel. He left town quietly this afternoon, and not even the members of his cabinet knew his destination until the newspapers announced his arrival at Sandringham, where King George is in residence.

It is believed that the cabinet has decided not to carry on any further work with the Parliament without such guarantees as would insure success to the Government's policy.

Ordinarily the resolution of the veto power of the House of Lords which passed the House of Commons at the last session would be discussed in the upper chamber and the Government would await their rejection before taking action. The refusal of the constitutional conference to accept the Government's compromise, however, makes discussion of the veto resolution useless in the view of the radicals, and the opinion prevails that the Government either must resign or advise the dissolution of Parliament.

It is significant that the trend of feeling in Liberal circles distinctly favors an immediate election, and the Government is openly hostile to the Liberal proposal to delay the election until the next year.

On the other hand the Conservatives are suffering from lack of cohesion, and an influential section of the party is openly hostile to Mr. Balfour's leadership, his policy being not aggressive enough for them.

The campaign practically began to-night with speeches in all parts of the country. Organizations of all kinds are getting on their war paint. Not the least of these are the suffragettes, who are making a determined effort to bring the election issue to the fore.

The changes will be somewhat extensive, it is understood, and will mean a remodeling of the whole building.

The estimated cost, etc., will be sent to the incoming council, with a recommendation that the changes be made at the earliest possible moment after the New Year.

NEW RUBBER COMPANY FOR MERRITON, ONT.

London Shoe Company Is Associated
With Other Firms in the Enterprise.

The Independent Rubber Company, with a capital of $50,000, composed of some of the largest shoe manufacturers in Canada, has been formed and will shortly begin work at Merriton, where they have taken over a building formerly used as a woolen mill.

Mr. James Robinson, a large dealer of Montreal, who some time ago bought out the business of the Robinson Lindsay Rubber Company, was in Toronto Friday closing out the business.

Mr. Robinson, who is a Montreal alderman, is largely interested in the Independent Rubber Company. With him are associated the firms of Gar-side & White, McLaren & Dallas, Toronto; the London Shoe Company, of which Mr. Philip Pocock is the president; Kilgour-Ramer Company, of Winnipeg, and the Amherst Shoe Com-

GAS PRICES CUT TO 90 CENTS IS COMPANY ANNOUNCEMENT

After July 1 Next Year, London Users Will Be Able to Get It for Ninety Cents Per Thousand as Agreed Upon With the City Several Years Ago.

After July 1 next, gas will be furnished citizens of London at 90 cents per thousand feet.

This announcement was made by Mr. J. C. Duffield, managing director of the City Gas Company, to The Advertiser, today.

A similar reduction was made in Toronto some time ago, and in other places, such as Montreal, for instance, the price of gas has been cut considerably.

"We will sell gas at 90 cents per thousand feet after July 1 next year," said Mr. Duffield.

The present price is 95 cents, and the reduction is consequently a little better than 5 per cent.

This has nothing to do with Niagara power, whatever, as the company had agreed to make this concession before Niagara power entered the field.

QUEBEC AND THE NAVY.

The patriotic utterances of La Patrie, reported in yesterday's edition, are a reminder that the greater part of the French-Canadian press has accepted the naval law, and is endeavoring to recommend it to the French-Canadian people. The solid and enduring forces of the province will not put themselves in opposition to the main current of Canadian sentiment. Even Mr. Bourassa adopts a tone of unwelcome sobriety. In his Montreal speech, perhaps he begins to see that the forces he has set in motion are liable to get beyond his control. He vehemently protested his loyalty to British connection, as though trying to atone for the anti-British utterances of his aides in Drummond.

We in Ontario must bear in mind that Drummond is not the whole province of Quebec, and that the Nationalists are not the whole French-Canadian people. The bulk of the French-Canadian press and the majority of the leaders of the French-Canadian people are supporters of the naval law, and acknowledge Canada's obligations in respect of the naval defence of the Empire. There is no evidence that the majority of the French-Canadians are not prepared to follow them. English-Canadians who rail at Quebec indiscriminately will not help the French-Canadians who are standing manfully by rational and national imperialism, and are not forgetful of what they owe to British institutions.

BUSINESS IS BRISK.

The plethora of advertising in this great home journal of late is both a cause and consequence of brisk business conditions. The rush caught us by surprise on one occasion, but this will not happen again—i.e., the unpreparedness. Advertising has continued to expand, but the space devoted to news will not be permitted to contract.

London merchants are doing some of the cleverest advertising in the country and they are getting results. The majority of them report that the retail business was never better than at present. The outlook is for a record holiday trade. There is an optimistic feeling in mercantile circles throughout the whole country. Business generally is in the healthiest condition; the factories are busy and no one able and willing to work will be unemployed this winter. The early touch of cold weather has given an additional stimulus to trade. It may be a hard winter, meteorologically speaking—if so, all the better—but it will not be a hard winter in other respects even for the poorest. All these favoring circumstances have reacted on the local retail business, and the most enterprising among the local merchants have responded by a campaign of publicity, setting forth attractively their bargains and offerings for the Christmas season, which has been ushered in rather sooner than usual. Readers will find the advertising pages a profitable study. They will save time and money by consulting them.

A REFORMING MINISTER.

Hon. Charles Murphy has earned the thanks of the country for his neat job of departmental house-cleaning at Ottawa. It was not easy or pleasant work. The printing bureau had been organized in the first place with a disregard of ordinary business methods. The growth of its operations, which have reached enormous proportions, naturally tended to multiply the defects. There seems to have been an endless division of authority, and a lack of unified and responsible control. The absence of system was brought to the notice of the former Government in 1891 by the civil service commission, but no remedies were applied.

Mr. Murphy began to make inquiries a month after taking office. His first move was to instruct the superintendent of stationery and other principals that they must not make purchases or give orders for outside printing without first consulting him. Some of them did not vary their practice, but deceived the minister by false returns. The worst offender was Gouldthrie, the late superintendent of stationery, who committed suicide while a fugitive from justice. Gouldthrie began to take "rake-offs" from American firms in 1907, and pocketed some $24,000. The vendors of the goods recouped themselves by simply adding this sum to their price lists. Of these goods, $25,000 worth has been seized without payment by the department, thus reducing the loss to $71,000. Gouldthrie purchased far in excess of the needs of the bureau in order to obtain his illicit profits. For instance, he had 42,539 typewriter ribbons in stock, although the annual average used was $426. Most of these ribbons were unsuitable.

Mr. Murphy has effected a complete reorganization, by which he expects to save $150,000 a year. He has devised a system which will be an automatic check on abuses. He attacked a difficult problem skillfully and courageously, and has apparently solved it satisfactorily.

THE BRITISH CONFLICT.

The failure of the veto conference will enable the British Government to appeal to the country under favoring circumstances. The budget has justified itself as a revenue-producer. The revival of trade has blunted the edge of tariff reform as a political weapon. The Government will have the further advantage of making the House of Lords the dominant issue, which is not the fighting ground the Unionists prefer. They tried in the last election, with some success, to divert attention from the constitutional to the fiscal question. The tariff agitation thrived on the unusual amount of unemployment a year ago. As prosperity has silenced this cry, it is highly probable, as the Associated Press intimates, that the Unionist campaign will be fought on Home Rule. Some of the Unionist journals assumed that the Conservative members of the veto conference had assented to the federal principle, and now find themselves compromised. The Observer and the Times were evidently quite prepared to support Home Rule under another name, if the conference had given the signal.

With tariff reform eclipsed for the time being, the Liberals will endeavor to force the fighting on the Lords' veto. This issue will unite the Liberals, the Irish, and the Labor parties. On the other hand, there are many signs that the Home Rule bogey no longer affrights the English people. It had little effect in the last election.

All the omens point to the return of the Government by an increased majority. With the obstruction of the peers removed, the Liberal party will be able to continue its great constructive task of social reform, so well begun.

The people of Canada wrote 455,085,000 letters last year, and no doubt some of them were sorry afterwards. The shop-worn bogeys of Ireland and Germany will be taken off the shelf again for service in the British elections.

The situation in Great Britain is a warning that a tractable second chamber is preferable to an all-powerful one.

As between the anti-Imperialism of the Nationalists and the Imperialism of the Denison brand there is not much to choose.

Tolstoy has disappeared with the intimation that he intends to spend his last days in retirement. His despairing wife has tried to end her life. The Russian prophet is carrying his doctrine of quietism to an absurd extreme. But the Russian character tends to extremes.

The Toronto News says that of the 49 teachers employed in the bilingual rural schools of Essex, more than half either hold a grade of certificate lower than third class or hold no certificate at all. It is certainly time for a change.

THOUGHTS OF A MIDDLE-AGED BACHELOR.

[London Truth.]
Season of fading leaves and windy skies,
This is the rightful moment, is it not,
For men of middle age to moralize
A lot?

When I myself look back on days gone by,
And muse upon the habits of my prime,
I'm bound to own I had a downright high
Old time.

I was not then a wicked fellow; no!
O'er me no moody parent mourned or raved;
It was not wine that made folk call me so Depraved.

A fell disease had laid its hold on me;
I was a veritable turtle dove,
Destined by hook or crook always to be
In love.

The fatal thing about it, so to speak,
Was the bald fact one girl would never do,
I used to love a different one each week
Or two.

Beneath a hundred girlish smiles I'd bask,
Sunning myself in Cupid's heavenly spark,
But none of these could ever make me ask
Papa.

Time passed without my meeting with my "Fate,"
And love soon dwindled to a settled sham,
Leaving me here the simple celibate
I am.

No, don't imagine I am sick of life,
Although I may be crusty, glum and quaint;
Nor that I'm hoping now to win a wife,
I ain't!

PATHETIC.

[Toronto Globe.]
Mr. Joseph Chamberlain's latter urging Britain to give Canada a preference before the opportunity is lost for ever, is more pathetic than convincing. Canada has never demanded a preference in return for the one she has given. All she expects is that the British manufacturers will make good use of it by sending to this country manufactured articles that are both good and cheap.

A TIP FOR THE CENSUS MEN.

[Vancouver Province.]
The census enumerators are now at work in China, and have been specially cautioned to be careful of their P's and Q's.

TWO KINDS OF NATIONALISM.

[Woodstock Sentinel.]
It will be noticed that the Nationalism of Col. Roosevelt and the Nationalism of Mr. Bourassa have only this in common, that each is the expression of the personality of its creator. For the rest, they are as far apart as it is possible for them to get. Col. Roosevelt's Nationalism is federal and in a sense really national; Mr. Bourassa's is racial and provincial.

HIS CLAIM TO FAME.

[Neepawa Reporter.]
Goldwin Smith's claim to fame may rest on his literary work, but to us it is more noteworthy that, according to the terms of his will, he had kept the same housemaid for thirteen years.

WILD AND WOLLEY.

[Toronto Globe.]
Capt. Clive Phillips Wolley is an Imperialist of the Imperialists. He told the members of the London Canadian Club that "the other nations of the world have got to come to heel and do as we tell them." That's the real stuff. Come to heel, you dogs. Move that the captain be sent to interview Kaiser William and tell him to come to heel.

A POOR BARGAIN.

[Stratford Beacon.]
A bilingual system of schools that teaches neither French nor English is a dear bit.

HEEDLESS.

[Omaha Bee.]
If some young men were more inclined to take the advice "Go to the ant," they might not so often have to go to their uncle.

ONE GOOD GUESSER.

[Harper's Weekly, a week ago.]
We are not a real prophet, but as a good guesser we beat them all in 1904 and 1908. So we guess again:
That Roosevelt will lose New York by 100,000.

That Woodrow Wilson will carry New Jersey by 10,000.

That Baldwin will carry Connecticut by 5,000.

That Harmon will carry Ohio by 25,000.

That the results in Massachusetts and New Hampshire will be close, with the chances in favor of Foster and Bass.

That Beveridge will be beaten.

That the Democrats will have a majority of 49 in the next House of Representatives.

That Democrats will succeed the Honorable Chauncey M. Depew and the Honorable John Kean in the United States Senate.

Amen! So be it.

A SIGN.

[Chicago Record.]
When a man begins to think he really understands a woman it is a sign that she has him thoroughly fooled.

HARDLY.

[Cleveland Leader.]
The Druggist—What can I give you, sir?
The Customer—I don't know.
The Druggist—Why—er—what is it you want?
The Customer—That's for you to find out. You don't expect me to be able to read this prescription, do you?

FAVORS PHYSICIAN AS MEDICAL INSPECTOR

Dr. Downing Advises Local School Board to Name One to Co-Operate With Nurse.

At the afternoon session of the convention of the London Teachers' Association, held in the Normal School yesterday, a question took place on medical inspection. Dr. Downing, introducing the subject, the speaker gave an historic resume of the question, dealing with its rise in England, its spread to the United States, and its introduction into Canada. There had been some objection to the system at first on the part of the teachers, who claimed that it interfered with the routine of the schools, and appeared to take the authority out of their hands. This opposition, however, had almost entirely disappeared, as it was found results were highly beneficial.

The medical inspector was a valuable assistant in preserving the health of the child. It relieved the teacher of much responsibility and guaranteed proper protection of the child from disease.

Dr. Downing favored the appointment of a physician as medical inspector. A nurse was necessary, but her work would be secondary to that of the doctor.

He thought the local board of education should appoint a physician, rather than a nurse. Better still, to have both, and the physician should be the very best man available, one with tact and judgment. The nurse could instruct the children in the best methods of caring for themselves. The returns from the employment of such excellent and efficient teachers and servants were excellent, and would be more fully appreciated in the future than at the present time.

Mr. R. A. Little spoke on the subject, "What To Do With Children Between the Ages of 14 and 16." It was a most comprehensive study. He advocated night schools, with attractive features, to counterbalance the effect of the 5-cent theatre.

Mr. Stevenson gave a splendid talk on "The Music of Poetry and the Poet's Music," with "Oral Reading for Senior Grades."

The Glee Club of the Women Teachers' Guild furnished a programme during the evening.

The Officers.
The officers of the association for the coming year are as follows:
President—Dr. Downing.
Vice-President—Miss B. McGee.
Secretary—Miss E. Knott.
Executive—Mr. G. McDonald, Mr. Claude Brown, Miss A. Brydons, Miss Tolhurst, Miss Egan.

Auditors—Mr. A. McQueen, Mr. R. A. Little.

HUNDREDS HOMELESS IN PARIS FLOODS

River Seine Is Again On a Rampage Owing to Rains.
[Associated Press.]
Paris, Nov. 11.—The River Seine is again on a rampage. The rapidity of its current today forced all the steamers to suspend operations. Prolonged rains in Eastern France have swollen the affluents of the Seine and the steady rising of the river has caused renewed uneasiness in the lower sections.
The suburbs of Paris in the vicinity of the river bed are already flooded slightly.
The River Muerthe and its branches are over their banks, inundating many villages. Great damage has been done at Nancy, where fifteen hundred persons have been driven from their homes.
The valley of the River Moselle is flooded and many factories have been shut down.

THIRTY DROWNED IN ENGLISH CHANNEL

Storm Off French Coast Wrecks Calais Fishing Fleet.

BLIZZARD IN GERMANY

Rhine Is Now 18 Feet Above Normal and Is Still Rising.

Calais, France, Nov. 12.—The severe storm which raged in the English Channel and the Straits of Dover Friday caught the Calais fishing fleet unawares. Several of the vessels were sunk and thirty fishermen were drowned. One of the craft collided with a coast steamer.

A boat occupied by four customs agents is also missing.

Berlin, Nov. 11.—A heavy snow-storm Friday ushered in winter throughout Northern Germany. Since noon snow has been falling, but it was of a soft variety and has left the streets deep in slush.

Telephone and telegraph wires are all down to the north, as are those communicating with Bremen. Direct telegraph connection with England is interrupted and the house was able to communicate with London only by means of telephone by way of France.

Cologne, Germany, Nov. 11.—The River Rhine was 17 1/2 feet above its mean low level Friday night and is still rising.

Mannheim reports the river at 18 feet and at Moselle it has reached 23 1/2 feet. At Metz the river is the highest that it has been for years. The lower parts of that city are flooded, as also are those of a number of towns below the Metz. Up stream the Rhine is reported to be falling.

Half a lemon placed in the water in which dish towels and kitchen clothes are soaked is said to sweeten them wonderfully. However, after a thorough washing sunshine will do wonders.

Changed every day should be placed in every room. The water absorbs much injurious matter and acts favorably in other ways upon the patient.

COMMISSION NAMES THE ENGINEERS

Mr. Robert Lyons Made Chief of the Power House Staff.

HAS TWO ASSISTANTS

And a Third Will Be Selected From Plant Using Niagara Energy.

At the meeting of the water commissioners, held last evening, Mr. Robert A. Lyons, at present engaged with the London Electric Company, was named chief engineer of the power-house, at a salary of $1,500 per annum. Mayor Beattie made a strong plea for the appointment of Mr. Robert A. Lyons, but was outvoted. The latter will be made assistant. Mr. Kenneth McLeod was also named an assistant. In addition the board will appoint a fourth, and an effort will be made to secure a man from a plant where Niagara energy is in use.

A score or more of applications were read. Among them were those of Messrs. W. J. Stewart, Alex. McLean, Kenneth McLeod, W. C. Allen, F. Fortner, Wm. Bush, Robt. A. Lyons, R. J. Quayle, G. F. Galloway, Murray E. Wilson, Fred Groves, all of this city, and Grover Glass, of Ingersoll. The discussion simmered down to four applicants, Messrs. Lyons, McLeod, Stewart and Quayle. Commissioner Chapman supported the application of Mr. Lyons as chief engineer. He stated that Mr. Lyons was willing to take one of the three daily shifts, a condition to which he had at first objected. Mr. Chapman considered him the best-equipped man who had applied, and thought he should be given the position. He also pointed out that the hydro-electric commission had reserved the right by act to approve of the appointees. It was certain that they would not approve of Mr. McCormick, and it was not doing the fair thing by him to put him in such a position.

"I do not favor the appointment of Mr. Lyons," said Mayor Beattie. "We should not turn Mr. McCormick down. He was virtually promised the position, and I do not see how we can go back on it."

Chairman Preece declared that the board could place Mr. McCormick as second in command. He was entitled to consideration. Four men would be necessary to man the Horton street and Springbank stations. Mr. McCormick could easily be made second choice.

However, he (Mr. Preece) would not favor him as chief. Mayor Beattie withdrew his objection to the selection of Mr. Lyons, provided the commission would guarantee to place Mr. McCormick. This was agreed to and the appointment was made.

Mr. Kenneth McLeod, who is at present engaged on the construction work, was also named for the staff. The appointment of a third assistant was deferred, until an effort is made to secure a man from some Niagara power-house, where he has experience, along lines similar to the work here.

"I suggest that we submit the names to the hydro-electric commission," said Mr. Chapman.

"Let us make the appointments, and if they do not like them, let them do the objecting," said Mayor Beattie. "They might hold up the work," pointed out Mr. Chapman.

"If they want to do that, let them take the responsibility," continued his worship. "I am tired of going with fingers in our mouth and asking what we can do. It is getting tiresome. Let us make our appointments like men, and if they are objectionable to the commissioners let them object."

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING— A FOREWORD

BY MEG.

November is still young, yet the recent snowfall reminds us forcibly that winter is at hand. Closely associated with winter is the thought of Christmas cheer and Christmas giving—a season dear to the heart of each of us. Unfortunately, though, the mention of gifts and Christmas purchasing brings to many women unpleasant and unpleasant visions of former Christmas shopping expeditions. We all know these women who leave the bulk of their buying until the eleventh hour. About the 23rd of December they commence to "get busy." In great haste they enter a shop, probably without even the vaguest idea of what is most appropriate for the intended recipient, or in keeping with their pocketbook's limitations. A weary afternoon and evening follow in frantic efforts to provide each member of their circle with a gift. There is a press of many shoppers at every counter, and it is impossible for the clerks, supplemented though they are by a host of part-time hands, to give each customer the attention and consideration they would at a less busy time. Too often, indeed,

A SON OF THE IMMORTALS

BY LOUIS TRACY.
Author of "The Stowaway," "The Message," "The Wanderer of the Morning," Etc.

The President, agitated and stuttering, sprang to his feet and declared, "I expressed my views in an informal manner."

"Yes, yes," agreed several voices. The turn given to the discussion by Alec was quite unforeseen and far from their liking.

"It has been your Majesty's wish that we should state our opinions fully and freely, and in no way less than I may be wrong. Deliberate is not Kosnovia."

"Rubbish!" shouted Stampoff, hammering the table with a clenched fist, and which has been here today will be heard openly in the streets of the capital tonight. Tomorrow it will be preached far and wide throughout the confines of the country by every man who has his welfare at heart. This marriage must not take place, I say, and I have come here with the King, and was prepared to give my life to establish him on the throne.

"I am not a sacrifice, I am a man, and I will not sacrifice if it will save my beloved land from a catastrophe—and this proposed marriage is nothing less!"

A curious thrill convulsed the council. Every Serb there was stirred by the General's bold defiance. He had uttered the rising storm by a calm announcement.

"I suggest that we defer this discussion till tomorrow morning," he said. "It has found me unprepared, and, if I am not very much mistaken, many of the gentlemen here did not anticipate that the question would be raised today in its present acute form."

It was evident that the majority of ministers favored the adoption of the King's proposal; but Stampoff, who looked at them angrily and drowned their timorous agreement by his resolute cry:

"God's bones! Why wait till tomorrow?"

Then, indeed, Alec was stung beyond endurance. "Perhaps, in the circumstances," he said, "it would be advisable that you should absent yourself from tomorrow's council for the Serbs."

"Not while I am Minister for War!" came the fiery response.

"That is for you to decide," said the King.

"Then I decide now! I resign!"

"Excellent! By that means you save your conscience," the King said, retaining the friendship of Kosnovia's most faithful son by refusing to accept your resignation."

A shout of applause drowned Stampoff's vehement protest, and Alec seized the opportunity to hurry from the council chamber. He did not try to conceal from himself the serious nature of this unexpected crisis, though he was far from acknowledging that the people at large attached such significance to his wife's natural ally as the King.

He might, and did, he failed utterly to realize the importance of the situation. The old Serb and he were the best of friends. He had taken no single step without consulting the man who had been his political tutor since his childhood. Even when he ran counter to the King's advice, he had always listened to it eagerly, and he invariably took the utmost pains to show why he had adopted another course.

Till that day there had never been the shadow of a breach between them. How, then, was the War Minister's irascible attitude to be explained? Was Cousin Jullius pulling the strings in some unrecognized manner? Was Beliani a party to the scheme? These questions must be answered, and speedily. Meanwhile, by hook or by crook, he must keep all knowledge of the dispute from Joan's ears until after the wedding.

In the palace courtyard a man standing near the gates tried to pass the sentries when the King arrived. He was instantly collared. Under-sized, poorly clad and poverty-stricken in appearance, he was hustled unceremoniously by a stalwart Albanian policeman until Alec's attention was drawn to the scuffle.

A white despairing face became visible for a moment as a choking voice cried: "Save me, your Majesty! I am John Sobieski!"

"Sobieski!" thought Alec, ordering his carriage to stop and alighting quickly. That is the Polish hotel waiter of whom I have heard so much, he said to himself. He said the man had done his best to bring assistance, but his efforts were frustrated by blunder here and there, and he thought something ought to be done for him. I promised to attend to it, and I am doing so.

By this time he had reached the policeman, who, assisted by a soldier, was dragging the protesting waiter to the guardroom.

"Release that man!" he said. The man saluted, and the trembling Sobieski fell on his knees on the pavement.

"Get up," said the King, who felt a special aversion to such a display of abasement. "Recover your wits, man, and tell me what you want."

"I ask protection, your Majesty," murmured the desperate Sobieski. "My life is in danger. I have come here to see Mon-sign, but they told me he was not at home. I have been turned out of the situation, so I have nowhere to go. If I am found wandering in the streets tonight I shall be killed."

"I am sorry to hear that," said the King, who seemed to be thoroughly frightened. "Take charge of him," he said to the pandur, "and have him sent to my bureau in five minutes."

The bureau in question was that apartment on the first floor overlooking the courtyard, in which Alec had preferred his claim to the throne of Kosnovia to the perplexed President of the embryo republic.

He was there, with a few faithful Pouski had spoken those plain words to Prince Michael Delgrado, and his situation was so convenient for his self-interest and daily comings and goings that he had utilized it temporarily as an office and private audience chamber.

At the top of the stairs he happened to catch sight of Pauline, Joan's staid-looking maid. Though he obtained only a casual glimpse of her, he fancied that she was distressed about something, and it occurred to him after he was in the room and the door was closed that perhaps she wished to give him a message. Bosko, the taciturn Albanian whom he had now definitely appointed as his confidential attendant, was standing near the table with a bundle of documents that demanded the King's signature.

Realizing that the Frenchwoman would meet Bosko in a minute or two when he went out with the signed papers, and could then make known her wish to speak to him, he decided to wait. He was, however, bent on the task of writing a peruse several departmental decrees hurriedly. He made any state paper with out mastering its contents, and one of the palace guards brought in Sobieski, who had concluded his self-imposed task. As it happened, the various items were mere formalities, and when he wrote "Alexis R." for the last time, Bosko and the soldier left the room, and the frightened little Pole found himself alone with the King.

"Now," said Alec, kindly, "tell me what you want and why you are so afraid."

Sobieski at once plunged into a rambling statement. He spoke the Kosnovian language with the fluent accuracy of his class, but Alec's alert ears had no difficulty in following his meaning. His story was that several customers of the safe had denounced him to the proprietor as a spy in the King's service, while some of them went so far as to charge him with responsibility for the deaths of those thirty-one heroes of the Seventh Regiment whose bodies had been found on the stairs and first floor landing of the hotel.

His master had no option but to discharge him, and Sobieski felt that he had good reason to fear that his life was in danger. Alec pook-pooked the notion; but the timid little waiter was so woe-begone that the King pitied him.

"Tell me exactly what you did on the day of the revolt," he said. "You came here, I understand. How was it that no one listened to you?"

New York, Nov. 11.—Charged with writing a threatening letter to John D. Rockefeller, demanding $50,000, Peter Lilljoh, a Hungarian, 23 years old, is held at police headquarters. Lilljoh, who accuses Lilljoh of sending the letter to him to be forwarded to Mr. Rockefeller, made the complaint which caused the young Hungarian's arrest.

The others were addressed to Kardoff and directed him to translate and forward the message to Mr. Rockefeller under threat of death.

CORRESPONDENCE

Sanatorium for Consumptives.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

On various occasions there has appeared in your columns articles roundly denouncing the action of the county council at its June session in dealing with the question of a grant of $4,000 to the above institution. Now, what are the facts of the case? On page 12 of the printed minutes of the June session you will find that the county council went into committee of the whole on the question, and after fully discussing it, recommended that the matter be laid over until the December session for further information.

The information wanted was whether there was any provision made for incurable cases. Some members said there was, some thought there was not. Hon. Adam Beck's number was called up on the telephone, but both he and Mrs. Beck had gone to the Galt horse show. Several other members of the Health Association were called up, but they could not give a definite answer, so the council laid the question over until the December session to get the information.

What is there in these proceedings that the officers of the Health Association should take offence at?

Are the members of a representative body like the county council to be denied the right to deliberate on any expenditure which it is proposed they should make? Or is it an insult to ask what is to be done with the money? Surely in this enlightened age things have not come to that pass, but it was stated in your columns that on account of the action of the county council that Middlesex patients would not be admitted at any price.

The whole county has been shocked several times in recent years by free press describing the desperate plight of some friendless, homeless victim of the white plague.

In some cases a place in which to lie down and die seemed almost to be denied to them; even the hospitals were closed to them.

In a recent issue of The Advertiser, Hon. Adam Beck stated that by a vote of the hospital trust incurable cases would now be admitted to Victoria Hospital. Think of it, O ye charitable people! Shut up in a contagious ward in the hospital when all authorities agree that the principal requirements for the cure or alleviation of the dread disease is fresh air and sunshine. Doctors are only human, and being human, are liable to err. They might diagnose a case and pronounce it incurable, which under proper conditions might be curable.

Why not admit all cases of the disease, even if it is necessary to erect another shack for so-called incurables, and give them a chance for their lives, and as much relief as possible while they live, if incurable?

If this were done, I am sure there is not a member of the county council but would do his utmost to help the good cause along. Yours truly, CITIZEN.

MOVEMENT TO TAX AUTOS FOR GOOD ROADS

A Meeting of the Ontario Motor League Was Held in Toronto.

Toronto, Nov. 11.—The good roads movement in Ontario is gathering strength, if the meeting of the Ontario Motor League, held at the King Edward last night is to be taken as an indication. The large banquet hall was filled with a representative gathering of members of the league.

Col. Hurdman, chairman of the Ontario branch, the chairman of the Hamilton branch, and many other out of town members being present.

The meeting was called, following a reference which a special committee representing the motorists of the province recently had with Hon. W. J. Hanna, provincial secretary, respecting an increased grant from the Government for the purpose of improving the country roads throughout Ontario. While no earnest was given of what the Government would be prepared to do, the members of the league, President Stone explained, had been called together to discuss a suggestion to the Government, that if the present grant of contributing one-third to the cost of constructing roads in counties was increased to one-half or giving dollar for dollar, instead of one dollar for every two dollars expended by the county, the league would consent to a tax upon automobiles on the basis of the horsepower of the machine. The condition of acquiring with this tax was made clear, that the money should be specifically devoted by the Government to this purpose. This discussion disclosed a desire to overcome rural antagonism to the automobile.

Frederick Nicholls pointed out that it was estimated there were 5,000 automobiles in the province, with an average horsepower of 25. On the basis of 50 cents per horsepower, this would create a revenue of $625,000 which would provide interest and sinking fund on a sum of between one and two millions of dollars. Heavy motor vehicles used for commercial purposes should, of course, be subject to special consideration.

PEACH DISEASE IS VERY DANGEROUS

Expert Issues Warning to Fruit Growers About New Disease.

Toronto, Nov. 10.—The little-peach disease has been investigated by Mr. L. Caesar, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, who journeyed to the peach districts of Michigan and has returned with valuable information for fruit growers.

Little-peach, he says, is a very destructive disease, and in the opinion of the majority of Michigan growers, is several times more destructive than peach yellows. Wherever affected trees have been allowed to remain the whole orchard, as a rule, has become hopelessly diseased. In some cases, an expert grower stated that he had himself seen more than 100 orchards, thus destroyed. So far as known no variety of peach tree is exempt. Japanese plants are quite subject to the disease. It is clear, therefore, that they must not be overlooked when taking measures for the control of the disease. Little-peach attacks trees from two years of age upwards. This is also, of course, true of yellows.

In Michigan.

The disease has been successfully controlled in Michigan and other places, but only by the removal each year as soon as possible of all diseased trees, and also all suspected ones. It is absolutely necessary to remove the suspicious cases as well as the diseased.

Co-operation in control measures is necessary, and where orchards are close together, as in Ontario peach districts, it is imperative for no person to remove a diseased tree without the consent of his neighbor. If, however, the orchards are half a mile apart, more can be done. It is able to keep his own orchard fairly free from the disease, even independently of his neighbors.

Where trees have been removed because of the disease young trees may, if desired, be set in the same place next spring. Such trees are not any more subject to little-peach and yellows than any other trees in the orchard.

The cause of little-peach or of yellows is not yet discovered. It is not definitely known in how many ways the disease is spread. It is probably first brought into a district on nursery stock, and once in the orchard it certainly spreads from one tree to another. But just how no one knows. Many think that the time of infection is during the blossoming season. A number of things point to that way, but the evidence is not conclusive.

The disease can be propagated by budding. The ordinary inspection is not sufficient for little-peach, as this disease often does not show until the latter part of September. Therefore, inspection work should continue up to the coloring of the leaves by frost.

It is not an infrequent occurrence to find trees with all the symptoms of little-peach except that the fruit ripens somewhat prematurely or at latest in the normal time. Such fruit shows no signs of yellows. This is possibly an abnormal case of little-peach, though some think it is due to both little-peach and yellows attacking the tree at the same time. Whatever be the cause these trees must be destroyed, as if they had typical little-peach or yellows.

In some districts in Ontario little-peach has already caused the loss of several orchards and of many trees in nearby orchards. Every grower is urged to destroy at once every tree marked by the inspector and every suspected tree. There is no use of hoping for the recovery of trees; they never recover from this disease.

A much fuller account of the little-peach disease, with recommendations for its control is being published, and may be obtained free in a few days from the department of agriculture, Toronto.

OTTAWA AFTER INDUSTRIES.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Detroit, Nov. 11.—Herbert W. Baker, publicity and industrial commissioner of Ottawa, Canada, came to Detroit yesterday on the pretext of an advertisement he had inserted in the Free Press two weeks ago, to interest the automobile manufacturers of this city in the proposition of establishing branch factories at Ottawa. Mr. Baker received a number of letters in answer to the advertisement, and is now negotiating with six large automobile concerns. He will remain here a week.

"Canada is now ripe for automobile factories," said Mr. Baker last night. "East of Ottawa the country is all virgin territory for the automobile industry. The American businessmen who want to participate in the prosperity of Canada must establish branches of their business there, for Canada will not consider the matter of reciprocity in business."

POLITICAL FIGHT ON IN PORTO RICO

Republican Party Making Desperate Effort to Oust Unionists.

San Juan, Porto Rico, Nov. 10.—The fiercest political battle this island has ever known is being fought out at the polls today. The Republican party is making a desperate effort to oust the Unionists, who now hold every elective office in the island—with a solid house of delegates. The Unionists have been having their own way for several years. This is a considerable difference in the political platform of the parties. The Republicans are for ultimate statehood, and the Unionists for autonomy. This latter is explained as a government similar to that of Canada, with a governor-general appointed by the president, who will have no veto power or part in government.

There is to be elected a delegate to congress, a house of representatives, alcaides, and municipal officers for all the 66 municipalities. Hon. Robert Todd, editor of the El Tiempo, a Republican, will carry San Juan for Alcaide. His election is conceded on account of his great personal popularity.

Non-Resident Delegates.

There are seven legislative districts, entitled to five representatives each. The political bosses have interpreted the law to mean that it is not necessary for a representative to live in his district, so nineteen, or a majority of delegates, live in San Juan. This permits the political boss to be elected in a safe district. The governor-general to this state of affairs, and in an elaborate opinion Attorney-General Brown held that a delegate must be a resident of the district he was to represent. This cut no figure with the bosses; the opinion was not followed.

Exciting Time.

This will be the last election under the present law. In future, the island will be divided into 35 districts, and a resident elected from each. Then there will be an elective senate or partially elective, to take the place of the executive council, now sitting as the upper house.

An exciting time is promised today, but Gov. George R. Coulton, cool, wise, impartial, refused to be drawn into political assistance of Col. Stanton, chief of the insular police, will quickly restore order, quell disturbances, and see, as far as he is able, that there is a free vote and a fair count.

The voting is confined to the citizens of Porto Rico, and native-born Americans, but one-sixth of the island takes no part in insular politics, and are not asked to do so, either as candidates or voters.

London hockey was given a flying start at the annual meeting held in the Teumseh House last evening, when about 25 or 30 players met and discussed prospects and elected officers.

London will have a junior team at any rate, and whether or not the second team will be senior or intermediate was left in the hands of Ken Casselman, London's representative to the O. H. A. meeting in Toronto a week from today. Mr. Casselman, when he observed what course others in this district will adopt, will decide on behalf of the local club. The meeting last night was a very fine one, a number of new players who have come to London during the past year turning out.

There appears to be plenty of material, and the men are confident that they will be able to make things lively in this part of the country during the coming winter.

NO TROUBLE TO GET ACCOMMODATION.
There will be no trouble securing rink accommodation, as the management is at present considering propositions from two owners, both of whom want the O. H. A. games.

Monday and Friday nights can be obtained for games, and there will be no difficulty over practice hours.

Arrangements will be made for a gymnasium as soon as possible, and the players will be put through a course of training that will fit them for the ice as soon as a good sheet covers over.

"Hank" Wagner at last night's meeting expressed the belief that the Meds. would not enter the O. H. A. field this winter, as the sawhorses are through with the game for one season at least. This being the case, the regular London club will have a large number of players from the college, and there will be no difficulty framing two teams.

Ken Casselman is again made president of the club, with W. R. Vining secretary. The executive is made up of these officers and the managers of the teams who will be appointed later. Rev. J. J. Inkster, of the First Presbyterian Church, has always taken a keen interest in sports in this city, is honorary president, and the following patrons were named: Sir John Carling, Hon. Charles Hyman, Hon. Adam Beck, Major Beattie, Senator Coffey, Willis Cox, John Carling, Jeffrey Hale, George H. O'Neill and James Duffield.

Among those who attended were Bert Hayes, George Nightingale, "Baldy" McQueen, Jack Barker, Ken Casselman, Ward Casselman, Wilson, Homer Pearson, J. McPherson, J. Orr, G. Procter, Chas. Parkinson, "Crow" Carrothers, Hank Wagner, "Nibbs" Martin, Art Wheatcroft and Bert Perry. McKnight and Oldreave, of Toronto, and McCosh, of Paris, were among the newcomers.

JOE JEANETTE MAY MEET
JOHNSON IN FINISH GO
Former's Manager Makes Proposition for a Bout in Paris—May Be Accepted.

New York, Nov. 10.—Joe Jeanette, the negro heavyweight, had an easy victory over Black Bill, putting him out in the fifth round of a scheduled 10-round bout before the Longacre A. A. tonight, Black Bill practically quit.

Negotiations have been opened for a fight to a finish between Jack Johnson and Joe Jeanette to be held in Paris, France, on the day the Grand Prix is run next year.

Jeanette's manager, Daniel McKerrick, notified a representative of Johnson that one of the boxing clubs in Paris stood ready to guarantee the colored champion $25,000 win, lose or draw, providing Johnson would agree to a finish contest, or $20,000 for a bout of 20 rounds.

Johnson was in Chicago yesterday and the proposition, it is said, was wired to him. His local representative, however, said he was sure the offer would be accepted. Jeanette, who has met Johnson half a dozen times in the ring, has been trying to secure a match ever since the Reno affair. Jeanette has never been knocked out, and in a 40-round battle in Paris a year ago he put Sam McVey, the California negro, away. In that affair Jeanette was knocked down more than a dozen times, but he always came back.

[By Associated Press.]
Savannah, Ga., Nov. 11.—Neither death nor injury of driver or mechanic marred the first day of the races of the Savannah Automobile Club, held under the auspices of the Automobile Club of America.

The day did not pass, however, without leaving its possible toll of life, but the casualty was incidental.

William Rice, a 12-year-old boy, watching the races, had his skull crushed by a falling signpost. He is reported dying at a hospital.

Prodded at 10 o'clock amid the cheering cries of several thousand spectators, the two races began. The six starters in the Savannah challenge race and the eight in the Tiedeman trophy race were called to the mark by Starter Fred Wagner at the same time.

Falch Away First.
First on the line was Hughie Hughes in his F. A. L. car. As he got the count and the starting signal on the back by the starter, he sped off at a tremendous pace and it bounded forth in the race which was not to end for nearly five hours. At half-minute intervals, the other entrants for both races were off.

Keenly interested in the start, and watching the car with breathless attention, the crowd sent salvos of applause after its favorites. Then, catching its breath, it sat back to watch the reappearance of the cars as they rounded the grandstand turn.

Marmion Never Stopped.
First to show was Lou Hinemann in a Marmion.

Starting second he had passed Hughes in a quick order, and then, with Dawson showing the fastest time, 16 minutes and 29 seconds, for the first lap. The start he got in that lap he never lost, maintaining his advance to the end of the race. Not once did he stop, not even for water or gasoline. No other car in the long race had such a record.

Soon it was clear to those who were following the race closely that the Savannah trophy, because of the failure of Dawson, Frank Geinaw or Roebeling. Then the ninth lap saw the elimination of Geinaw. His steering gear, as he had on a back stretch turn, he lost control, and his car went with tremendous speed along the soft ground at the edge of the road, plunging through one bank, and on to another. It came to a stop after it had been battered to pieces, and his mechanic sat tight and escaped without a scratch.

Wrecked Car Second.

Robbing lost nearly a minute by a stop for fuel, but was going strong until disaster overtook him. On the eighth lap, last lap, his car skidded, crashed into a palm tree, and damaged the gear mechanism so that it was impossible to clear found themselves with no brake and with but one speed and that the highest.

Undaunted, they drove a pace on, finished in second place after they had been reported out of the race, with a part of the gear mechanism broken. Roebeling had thought himself ahead of all others, having no signal gear arrangement with pit men, and the cheering of spectators along the course to meet that victory was in sight.

When Hughes, when Hughes, Hinemann was somewhere on the back stretch on the fifteenth lap. The race was then declared finished. Another car, broken H. Pearce, in a F. A. L. car, was broken an axle in the ninth lap after some spectacular speed.

The Tiedeman Race.
At about 2:30 o'clock the winner of the Savannah trophy finished. Nearly an hour before Knipper had finished in front of his competitor in the Tiedeman race. From the first lap he had kept a lead without stopping once for trouble or of any kind, finished with a margin that he might have made much wider had he cared to.

Witte, in his little E.-M.-F. was doing good work, but never did he have Knipper's speed. The best he could do was second place, with a time of 3 hours 26 minutes and 34.22 seconds.

In the Savannah trophy race, with higher power cars than in the Tiedeman race, Dawson showed average speed of 62.68.

Dazzling Speed.
The time in both races was regarded as record-breaking.

Knipper averaged 58.44 miles an hour, and unquestionably could have done much better.

In the Savannah trophy race, with higher power cars than in the Tiedeman race, Dawson showed average speed of 62.68.

Fogel, of Philadelphia, Says He Has Made Three Propositions to Carry Out Famous Deal.

[By Associated Press.]
Philadelphia, Nov. 11.—Negotiations for a trade in players have been opened directly between the presidents of the Philadelphia and Cincinnati National League Baseball Clubs, according to Horace S. Fogel, head of the local organization.

Fogel, who is today President Horace, of the Cincinnati club, opened negotiations with him five or six days ago and that in his reply to Herrmann he made three propositions.

Fogel declined to state what his propositions are except to say that the position are expected to be exchanged by players mentioned in the now famous deal were involved in one way or another. The Cincinnati president should have the propositions before him now, Fogel said, and he was awaiting a reply.

Regarding Manager Charles S. Doolin's status with the Philadelphia club, Fogel said that he never seriously considered Doolin's resignation, and that the club will not take any action upon it.

Herman Talks of It.
[By Associated Press.]
Cincinnati, Nov. 11.—President Herrmann, president of the Cincinnati National League Baseball Club, says he probably will have important announcements to make some time today, but will not say in advance what is to be made public.

That it is a deal with the Philadelphia National League team taking more players to the Cincinnati club, and bringing more to this city from there, is the report in baseball circles. It is said that the deal includes the exchange of two Cincinnati players for two Philadelphia men, in addition to the four men of each team already traded. HEAVILY FINED
Hunter Who Shipped Dog Out of the Rabies District Found Guilty.

Toronto, Nov. 11.—The third session of the part of the Government for the shipping of dogs from rabies infected districts in Ontario to uninfected districts in the north for hunters was conducted successfully in the police court yesterday, and the imposing by Magistrate Kingsford of a fine of $30 on the Canadian Express Company.

Mr. W. N. Ferguson, counsel for the express company, admitted their company's agent a Blair, Ont., had accepted two dogs in a box. The box was addressed from N. Sykes, Blair, to J. N. Sykes, at Shewanburg, near Parry Sound. There was nothing on the box to indicate that dogs were in it.

Dominion Constable Cook said he had noticed the dogs on their arrival at Parry Sound. They had been shut up for five days, with only two slits in the box, half an inch wide by four inches long.

TIPS NOT ALLOWED
London Hotel on New Plan Does a Thriving Business.

London Nov. 11.—Not a vacant room in a year, its first year, too, is the record of a hotel in the Strand, London, whose characteristics is that it does not allow tipping. The success of the hotel, the directors believe, is mainly due to the non-tip rule. Guests are forbidden to offer a servant of the hotel a gratuity and servants found accepting them are instantly dismissed. People know exactly what it is going to cost them before they get into the hotel, and when they pay their bill there is no need for them to put their hands into their pockets to tip anybody.

The management has had no difficulty in securing plenty of waiters and chambermaids, despite the fact that they receive no tips.

BURER REMANDED.
Niagara Falls, Nov. 11.—Luther Burer, charged by the colored woman, Mrs. Washington, with shooting her on Oct. 19, was remanded for another eight days, today, on account of the woman being able to appear against him.

Light Question.

ABILITY OF McMASTER'S

Hager Explained That He Wanted
Competent Men and Would Not

[G. N. W. Dispatch.]
Ottawa, Nov. 11.—Hamilton, Montreal and Ottawa voted against the protest of the Argonaut Club against the specially called meeting of the Inter-provincial Rugby Union to discuss the validity of the Ottawa-Argo game played in the capital last Saturday. The game stands as played, Ottawa being a winner, 22 to 10.

Joe Wright, one of the Ottawa delegates, withdrew all but one of the original declaration that in his opinion the club based its protest. The question of whether the game should be replayed or not resolved itself at once. Wright said: "The game was started too late, and was the light sufficiently bad at the finish to interfere with the playing of a championship game?"

Light Was O. K.
The statements of Referee Russell Britton and Umpire William McMaster practically settled that point, when the former declared it was sufficiently light for him to see the ball when it was batted out to the quarter and passed to the centre half on the last scrimmage, and McMaster's declaration that in his opinion the game could have gone on five minutes longer without interruption from imperfect light, was shown the delay in starting was caused by the junior game occupying the field until a few minutes past 7 o'clock. The Argonaut delegates were prepared to affirm the game was 20 minutes late in getting under way. The affidavit of Timekeeper Walter Harman, that the full time had expired, and the affidavit of the Argonaut goal judge that McMaster was not on the field when he followed the ball for a try, did not enter into the regular discussion, and though all the referees were referred to during the evening.

The Matter of Officials.
"It wasn't my intention to bring the matter of referees up at all," said Mr. Wright; "but now that you have mentioned the subject, Mr. Hager, I have something to say. In the face of all the protests against McMaster from our club, did you name him as an official? And why did you not wire to the secretary of the Hamilton club asking if he could get Robbins and Hayes, and inform them that you were appointing them to the regular discussion, and though all the referees were referred to during the evening."

"I wanted to be sure of securing competent officials as far as possible," said Mr. Hager. "After I wired to Hamilton asking Robbins and Hayes, I could have secured them, I found both Robbins and McMaster would act, and therefore I appointed them in order to get the best of officials. It was after I had appointed them I received word from Hamilton that Robbins and Hayes were available."

GETS OFF LIGHTLY.
Toronto, Nov. 11.—Mr. Justice Britton reduced the fine to six months imposed on Charles Hardy for assaulting the late Thomas Horner, of the Saranac Hotel, to five months.

The reason he gave was that Hardy might get out about the beginning of the bricklaying season.

Hardy is a bricklayer, and says he can get work at that occupation if he applies at the beginning of the season.

AMBASSADORS HAVE GONE.
Ottawa, Nov. 11.—Mr. Hoyt and C. M. Pepper, the United States representatives, have left Ottawa for Washington. They seem satisfied with the results so far attained.

THOUGHT MAKES MAN AND MOVES WORLD

A Powerful Address By Lt.-Col. Turner to Salvation Army Convention.

"As a Man Thinketh in His Heart, So He Is," was the keynote of an exceedingly thoughtful and instructive address by Lieut.-Col. Turner, of Toronto, formerly of this city, in the Clarence Street Citadel of the Salvation Army last night. After expressing himself as delighted to find the flag of the Salvation Army still flying at the masthead in London, and after commenting on the favorable growth of the Army throughout Canada, Col. Turner dealt with the all-important part which thought plays in the make-up of our life and character. He referred to the Darwinian theory of the evolution from the ape through the agency of the human faculty of thought and then pointed out how this faculty is the constitutional feature of man. Man is a thinking creature, and what he is or what he is to be, depends entirely on his thoughts. In the brain of everyone there sits a little weaver at his loom and fills his shuttles with thought stuff. Asleep, awake, sane or insane, the weaver keeps at work. All the marvels of the scientific world have been evolved from human. All world's progress to date has been achieved because men have thought. America was discovered because far back in the fifteenth century men thought deeply in the old world. Thought makes the man; it is the fabric of thought we weave that lives on and survives our wealth or poverty and our death itself. The character we weave out of thought stuff is immortal; it is our very selves. Modern science tells us that we possess six senses. We are at least aware of five, and these five or six senses, like telegraph wire going out in various directions, gather for us experience from the outer world; but there is an inner wire that brings us knowledge from God. Our heart and mind are inseparably connected, and the little weaver of thought puts on his shuttles what we put into the weaver's bin. It is for us to say what thought stuff the little weaver shall weave into our character.

"I am not an advocate of Christian Science," declared the colonel, "but there is a good deal of truth underlying that doctrine."

"In the republic of the brain there are legislative faculties which decide what we shall place in the weaver's bin. The good or evil deed begins in thought. A deed is but a thought completed, a sign hung out to show what the weaver inside is doing. A deed of necessity exists in thought before it does in action. The primary conflict of character lies in the region of thought."

"There is a natural selection in nature. The fruit tree brings only certain blossoms to fruition. We reject a special selection of our thoughts—that thoughts shall be matured into action and what shall not. God's attempt to elevate the human race has been thwarted because we do not think as He would have us think."

Our minds, the speaker declared, are dwarfed because we do not allow our thoughts to flow in the range of God's thoughts. We have fallen far short of what He intended we should be, because our thoughts have fallen short of what He intended we should think.

Short addresses were given by Western Ontario officers who were present at the officers' convention yesterday, including Capt. Paulet, of Wallaceburg; Adj. Hardanuck, of St. Thomas; Ensign Locke, of St. Marys, who has been an officer for twenty-five years, and Major and Mrs. McGillivray, the new local immigration officers, who were introduced by Col. Chandler. Both Major and Mrs. McGillivray were enthusiastically greeted by the audience. The major has been deeply bereaved by the death of his mother, of which he learned from a telegram received Thursday night.

During the evening solos were rendered by Capt. Boynton, of Essex, and Mrs. Chandler, of London. Instrumental selections were given by the string and brass bands of the two local corps. Despite the inclement weather the meeting was well attended. Tomorrow evening a memorial service will be held in the Clarence Street Citadel in memory of the late Comrade Pawcett.

A CHORAL PERFORMANCE

Important Musical Event To Be Held This Winter.

The London Choral Society, under the direction of Mr. J. R. Cornelius, are preparing for a performance sometime in January or February. The object of the society is to enthrone London along musical lines, and with this end in view the chorus of 100 voices will be chosen as far as possible from London vocalists. Mr. Cornelius is an experienced conductor of orchestral and choral work, who has recently come to London from London, and he desires to secure London soloists for the principal parts. A few more voices are also required for the chorus. Through the courtesy of Hyatt Avenue Methodist Church the practices are being held in the church basement.

PEOPLE DISPLEASED WITH CONDITIONS

Lyman Abbott Says This Was Cause of Democrats' Sweep in Recent Elections.

NOT ANY REVOLUTION

But a Definite Popular Insurgent Movement Within the Republican Party Which Succeeded.

[Associated Press.]

New York, Nov. 11.—Dr. Lyman Abbott, editor of the Outlook, of which Mr. Roosevelt is a contributing editor, today gave out his (Dr. Abbott's) interpretation of the recent election as embodied in an editorial to appear in the next issue of that publication: People Dissatisfied.

"Popular dissatisfaction with present conditions, especially with the high prices; indignation at the manifestation of the special interests of the tariff revision, and still more at the defenses and eulogies of the tariff bill; wrath at the corruption and the hypocritical pretences disclosed in certain influential Republican circles, coupled with the forgetfulness of the fact that the exposure and the prosecution were furnished by Republicans; a growing conviction that there was an alliance between the special interests and the Republican oligarchy with the belief that the easiest way to hit it was by voting with the Opposition; indifference to the fact that which to many voters appeared to be a contest rather between persons than between principles—an impression which a too-personal campaign tended to increase; the general inclination in America to make a change in political control from time to time, an inclination which the political conditions that prevailed in solid states does much to justify; some fear in certain quarters, not wholly politically effective, because wholly undefined lest the spectre of radicalism should work havoc to business interests; the fact that the Republican party was divided between the insurgents and the regulars, while the Democratic party, freed from the traditions of Cleveland and the personality of Bryan, was for the first time in years, united—all these causes combined to bring about a political revolution."

No Revolution.

"But I do not believe the election a reaction and revolution. The facts that in every state except Indiana where there was a definite popular insurgent movement within the Republican party, which succeeded, that in every state except Pennsylvania, where there was no such movement within the party, or where it failed, the Republican party was victorious; that with the single exception of the senator from Indiana, no senator who was retired by failure to secure either a renomination or a reelection, was re-elected; that the element in the party; that of the governors elected a decided majority represent the progressive rather than the reactionary element in their respective parties, including the representatives of progressive thought as Woodruff, Wilson on the Atlantic coast, and Hiram Johnson on the Pacific; that the insurgents are not a new element, but are reorganized as leaders in the Republican party—all indicate that the election, which is a single triumph of the Democratic party, is not a defeat of progressive principles and does not indicate a decadence of the progressive spirit."

Did No Harm.

"Nor do I think that the Jack O'Lantern bugaboo of Mr. Roosevelt's imagined monarchical ambitions cut any considerable figure in the election. The fact that the greatest falling off in the Republican vote was in the State of Pennsylvania, where his voice was not heard, is significant. It is significant if not conclusive upon that point. The simple fact is that a Democratic triumph was publicly predicted by both Democrats and Republicans eight months ago, and was repeated by the enforced retirement of Messrs. Aldrich and Hale from the Senate, and by the Maine election in September; Mr. Roosevelt was called in to save the situation; he responded to the call, but could not turn the tide. He did something more important, he heartened the progressives in his own party, carried forward in his own state the work of party purification, so well begun by Mr. Hughes, and did something to inspire with the spirit of genuine and national democratic progress the party of his political opponents."

HIGHHANDED ACTION

United States Immigration Officer Makes Compulsory Traveller Pay Head Tax.

Windsor, Nov. 11.—John E. Ritchie, who travels for a Belfast house, called on his Windsor trade yesterday. Having a few hours on his hands he decided to cross over to Detroit, where the city before he took the International Limited for Toronto. As he stepped off the ferry at Detroit he was nabbed by an immigration officer and made to pay the head tax of $4. Mr. Ritchie, who is a well-known commercial traveller, was very indignant, and tried to explain to the officer that he had made a mistake. However, he could not do anything but pay the $4 asked, but he paid it under protest. He returned to Windsor, secured the aid of another well-known Toronto traveller, and went to the United States headquarters in Detroit, where everything was smoothed over and the $4 returned.

MANUEL'S MONEY

Private Fortune of Portugal's Former King Now in London

London, Nov. 11.—A considerable portion of King Manuel's private fortune has been entrusted to Messrs. Coutts, the famous bankers, in the Strand. This another notable name has been placed on the firm's books, which contain the signatures of all the members of the British royal family from George II. to George V. One other king in exile, Louis Philippe, banked with Coutts, as did the Empress Frederick and Leopold, King of the Belgians. Apart from royalty, Coutts' clients number thousands of illustrious and wealthy folk; in fact, the rooms in the bank's new Strand premises are already proving inadequate, as a storehouse for the colossal deposits, which include no less than £200,000,000 of foreign bonds.

Tea Cup Invades the Office

An Old Country Business Practice Making Headway in Toronto.

A reporter called yesterday afternoon shortly before 4 o'clock on a department manager one of Toronto's large industrial concerns and promptly at 4 o'clock a young lady brought in two cups of tea. The reporter was invited to partake of what proved a most delicious and refreshing beverage, and business being laid aside for a moment, the manager explained that a few months before he had been to England, where he had bought the 4 o'clock tea custom practically universal among business houses. He had enjoyed it so much, and it had seemed to him so well, that after coming home he had adopted it in his own office. He said he always used Red Rose Tea because it had the fine flavor and smooth richness of some of the choicest kinds he had got in the old country.

Upon inquiry at the office of the Red Rose Tea Company, it was found that the practice had been begun there only a few days ago, and that with their usual ambition to be a little ahead of the procession, they served a cup of delicious tea not only to every member of the office, but to every stranger who happened to be within the gates at the appointed hour. The tea is served to everyone at his or her desk, the drinking occupies only a minute or two, and the tea is so deliciously refreshing and stimulating that the working efficiency of the staff is increased for the rest of the day.

The remarkable success of Red Rose Tea and the high esteem in which the firm is held by the trade throughout Canada, is a striking tribute to the forceful and progressive business

WHAT HAVE YOU LOST? JUST READ THIS LIST

If You Left It On a Car the Street Railway Company Have It For You.

Did you lose your umbrella yesterday? Are you one of those absent-minded persons who go out on a rainy day, armed with an umbrella, and then promptly leave it in the first street car in which you ride? If either of these questions apply to you, then the London Street Railway Company may be able to help you in recovering your property. Yesterday no less than nine umbrellas were left on street cars in different parts of the city. And the same thing occurs on every rainy day. This does not only apply to umbrellas, but to almost anything that is carried loosely in the hands of those who use the trolleys.

The list of lost articles collected by the different conductors and handed in to the company reads like the catalogue of a second-hand store. And the number of these articles are never called for. They are kept for thirty days and then turned over to the conductor on whose car they were found. Kindly peruse the following list, and be convinced that all the absent-minded people in London are not dead yet. This list only covers the month of October, and among several articles that have since been recovered there was handed in to the company by the conductors 14 purses containing various sums of money, 32 gloves, 18 parcels, 1 cap, 1 collar, 1 pocket comb, 3 books, 2 odd babies' shoes, 1 Bible, 1 gas globe, 1 string of beads, 1 pair of spectacles, 1 veil, 1 pair of overalls, 1 apron, 1 baby's coat, 2 pairs new stockings, 1 package of seeds, 2 pails, 1 doll's buggy, 1 muff, 3 handbags, 2 toy boats, 1 jar pickles, 1 bag soda biscuits and 3 odd rubber bands.

Yesterday, besides the umbrellas, a woollen shawl, a purse and a pair of gloves, were found. Last month 37 parasols and umbrellas of every description were collected.

One of the men stated this morning that the same umbrella had been left three times in his car alone, and often the same people have lost different articles. Not a day passes but that some article is found, and it keeps one's man busy marking and checking them up in case they are called for.

GRANDS' ATTRACTIONS FOR NEXT WEEK.

"When All Has Been Said" Monday, Nov. 14
 Frederic Villiers, Wednesday, Nov. 17
 Nat C. Goodwin, Thursday, Nov. 18
 "The White Squaw" Friday and Saturday
 Matinee and Night, Nov. 18 and 19.

"When All Has Been Said," an important attraction for London has been announced for Monday, Nov. 14, when Lieber & Co.'s drama by Bayard Voller, called "When All Has Been Said," founded on Jackson Haags' "That Which Never Dies," will fill an engagement of one night. Lieber & Co. have made the play one of their most important productions of the year, and have equipped it with a very strong cast. Emily Stevens, Charles Balsar, Eugene Ormonde, Master Antrim Short, George Woodward, Joseph Sparks and other well-known names are conspicuous in the company. The play is being produced all this week at the Royal Alexandra, Toronto.

Frederic Villiers. If you wish to get a correct idea of modern warfare, with its grim horrors and some of its grim humor, you should not fail to hear Frederic Villiers' marvelous talk on Wednesday, the 16th, at the Grand Opera House.

EUGENE ORMONDE.

With "When All Has Been Said," at the Grand on Monday Evening Next.

Mr. Villiers is the dean of the war correspondents. He has told the story of every great war of our generation, and his vivid pencil has portrayed scenes in the thickest of the fights that are part of history. Plevna, Shilka, Afghanistan, Tel-el-Kebir, fighting in the Nishava Valley, the battles of Ping Yang, and the fall of Port Arthur, have all been described in stirring narrative and picture by this great war artist. He was through the Boer war, and lately was with the Spaniards during the Riff campaign in Morocco. These are only a few episodes in his crowded career. A wonderful collection of sketches made by him on innumerable battlefields is to be shown on Wednesday next.

Mr. Villiers at the close of his talk will add on this occasion his personal reminiscences of the late King Edward. He appears in London under the auspices of Lieut.-Col. A. A. Campbell and officers of the Seventh Regiment Fusiliers.

Mr. Nat. C. Goodwin Has Played Many Characters.

Mr. Nat. C. Goodwin is to add to the many characters in which he has appeared in a comedy called "The Captain," by George Broadhurst and C. T. Dazey, at the Grand Opera House on Thursday, Nov. 17. Goodwin has created probably more roles than any other actor. And, fortunately for him, they have most all of them been successes, and have brought him reputation and money. Of course, like many other stars, he has not always met with success. It would take too much space to enumerate the many characters in which he has appeared. Some of the most prominent plays in which he has been seen to great advantage was the "Gilded Fool," "In Missouri," "David Garrick," "An American Citizen," "Ambition," "The Cowboy and the Lady," "The Genius," "Turned Up," "Lend Me Five Shillings," "Confusion," "The Golden Giant," "When We Were Twenty-One," "The Master Hand," "The Usurper," "The Easterner," "Shylock in 'The Merchant of Venice,'" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream." He has rarely left the comedy field, but when he has done so, has shown names are conspicuous in the company. The play is being produced all this week at the Royal Alexandra, Toronto.

Jacques Cantier, a French-Canadian trapper, is in love with the supposed Indian girl, Neamata, by name, while she has given her heart to an English fur trader named Bruce Marshall. He in turn is in love with Neamata's beautiful sister, who dwells in the foreign land from whence he comes. With her chaperone, the golden-haired Octavia comes to visit her fiancé; the sisters come face to face, not knowing each other, and it is from this situation that Miss Clarke has woven her play.

Bernhardt Coming to London. Sarah Bernhardt comes to this city on Thursday, Nov. 24, and while no definite announcement has been made as to prices, etc., it is expected that the Grand will be packed, on this, the second visit of the famous French actress. Thirty years ago, at the old Gaitey, Mme. Sarah Bernhardt first played in London. Since then England and America have learned to know the sound of her agile French voice as they know the slower English of their own actresses. During all that time she has resolutely refused to speak our language. She reads it, and which is more difficult, writes it; to falter in her speech would be against the swift and rush of her nature, and she refuses. But to hear her discuss Kipling's untranslatable "Barrack-Room Ballads," or Wells' latest novel, or nice points in regard to M. Maurice Rostand's translation of his father's "Chantecler," is to realize that her knowledge of the language is sufficiently intimate. She goes to America for eight months, but will speak hardly as many words, save in French.—London Sketch.

In reply to the numerous reports of a truce being declared between Charles Frohman and Klaw & Erlanger, and the National Theatre Owners' Association, Mr. Klaw makes the following statement: "There is absolutely no truth in the statement that Mr. Charles Frohman or Klaw & Erlanger, or either of them, has signed any paper of truce with the National Theatre Owners' Association, and it is time that the assertion which has appeared in some papers was flatly contradicted.

"We have always regarded the attitude of the National Theatre Owners' Association as a huge joke, and nothing has happened since my return from the Northwest to change our opinions. The one-night towns in that part of the country, where there are clamoring for our attractions. Some attractions booked by us would probably like to play them, but a resolution passed by the so-called National Theatre Owners' Association has rendered that impossible. These foolish deluded men, after clamoring for a long while for what they called an 'open door,' when they got within sight of it, promptly shut the door by passing a resolution that nobody could book more than two interests. That meant simply this: That Klaw & Erlanger could book their own shows and the shows of some other manager, but would have to stop there, while on the other hand, the National Theatre Owners' Association could book any number of theatres. That is all that the one-night stands are suffering from today.

"Overtures have been made to us to try to ease this situation. Unfortunately, our lips are sealed as to the individual who made the overtures, and we are not in the habit of breaking either our words or our contracts. Consequently, we are in the awkward position of waiting for the other fellow to do it. But we do not propose to tolerate misrepresentation, be the subject, and if false reports and lies are sent out we intend to promptly nail them. There is no agreement signed with the National Theatre Owners' Association, and there will be none. None is necessary."

Circumstances have played strongly into the hands of Robert Hilliard with his play, "A Fool There Was," by

An Appreciation of Sarah Bernhardt

James O'Donnell Bennett writes in the Chicago Record-Herald: The first performance in America of "Emile Moreau's" tragedy, "The Trial of Jeanne d'Arc," brought endless demonstrations of some of the simplest and some of the subtlest attributes of the art of Sarah Bernhardt, and none, perhaps, so miraculously revealed, simplicity and subtlety as the lovely transition from panic and despair to spiritual exaltation which she wrought amid the pharisees of the prison scene of the third act.

Here the maid has faltered. Overborne by the threats of ecclesiastics and soldiers, confused by the legal phraseology in the accusations which have been launched at her, and aghast at the threat of excommunication from the synods of the University of Paris, she makes a dash for the sign of deliverance and self-justification. The whole episode of the recantation and the recanting of the recanta-

Porter Emerson Browne. A king flees from his incensed subjects because of his devotion to a woman; a quondam leader of men, rich and of good breeding, faces a laughing public because of another and the man in the street wonders how it is possible that such things happen. Mr. Hilliard and Mr. Browne picture the steps a man takes in such a career. Events have made the play timely. Mr. Hilliard's season has been extremely successful. In a few weeks he will play in the Southern states, a new territory for the play, but one in which Mr. Hilliard is very popular.

Lillian Russell, who is en route to the Pacific Coast under the direction of Joseph Brooks in a new play entitled "In Search of a Sinner," by Charlotte Thompson, has this to say on these two subjects so close to the heart of woman—dress and man: "To keep a man, don't let on you're trying, but keep on the job every minute, and it is too easy. Just be a kitten and the toy that the man expects you to be, but be an interesting kitten, and a clever toy, because there's lots of competition in this game.

There is no such thing as style. A well-dressed woman wears what she comes her, regardless of the passing vogue. Every woman should set her own styles. Women spend too much on dress. A few gowns are worth a trunkful of shoddy freaks. American women want too many costumes. Women love to dress because they love to control and boss men. A woman is a chump if she doesn't dress the best she can without being extravagant.

unseen voices. "I am wicked, ungrateful, I confess. . . . [Then she stood an instant, poised in an attitude of listening.] Yes, yes, understand. I was so unhappy. Pardon your Jeanne."

Again the voice of Cauchon broke in: "Jeanne, listen to me!" With a wrenching of her body Mme. Bernhardt brought the girl back to earth, then took the act of abjuration in hands that were as eloquent of wonder and shame as her eyes, and moaned, "With a cross the cross where our Savior died, I signed this—I—I—"

Then she broke into frenzy, and in frenzy tore the paper to pieces, crying and laughing together in the sense of deliverance and self-justification.

The whole episode of the recantation and the recanting of the recantasaints of her weakness, and, finally, the following of that with the defiance of the judges—these were the stages in this flight of histrionism that once more demonstrated that supremacy which Mme. Bernhardt has time and again borne in upon us during the past week.

There seems literally to be no contrast, no gradation, no contradiction of the emotions that she cannot express and impart.

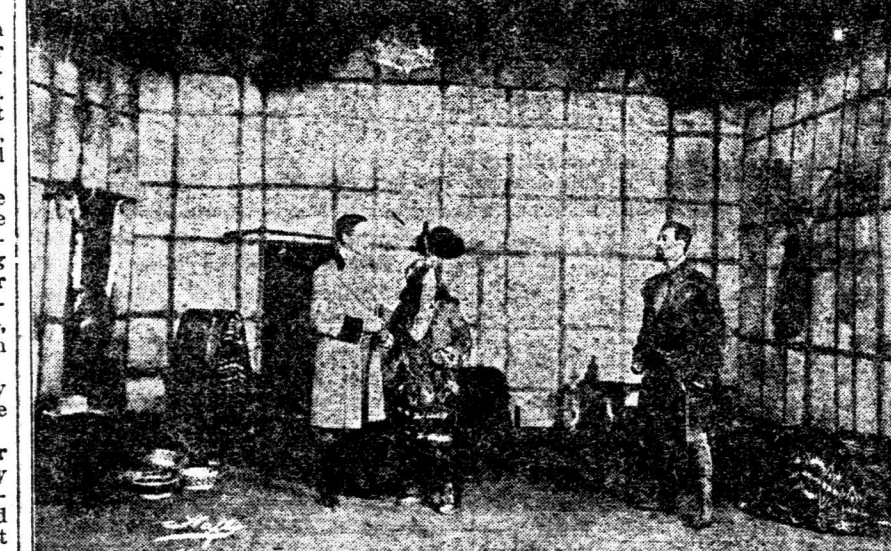

This role is relatively new to her, and hence her triumph in it cannot be credited merely to the finesse that comes of years of familiarity with a given part. Of her Marguerite Gauthier she sometimes say that she puts it on and off as abstractedly and as easily as one slips the hand into an old glove. Here she put on a new part and plays it with absolute authority and conviction as to its technical detail and in a passion of inspiration as to its spirit.

She first produced "The Trial of Jeanne d'Arc" at her theatre in Paris on the 25th of last November. It relates in four acts events leading up to and centering around the trial and death of La Pucelle. The first act is a feverish exposition of the ecclesiastical and political intrigues that hurried the French and English adherents of the French claims of the House of Lancaster into the diabolical murder of Jeanne d'Arc. This act, in which the Maid does not appear, is masterly in its massing of the somber figures whom superstition, hate and self-interest impel to the crime. The credence of witchcraft is mirrored in the apprehensive eyes and reflected on the powerful, sullen, cruel faces. The regent Bedford is presented as one who believes himself to have been bewitched by Jeanne.

Later in the play another spell is laid upon him by her—the spell of her purity and the spell of a great pity for her—had he turn its eyes, not be touched with humor.

Michelle said that of all the qualities of Jeanne d'Arc her honest good sense was the most conspicuous. This sense was thus infused into her speech and her glances were absorbing and touching in the extreme.

From the ordeal of the torture the audience had to turn its eyes, not be touched with humor.

tion had occupied far less time than is required to read this account of it, but all its transitions, its sure flight from the abyssal despair and self-loathing to the heights of spiritual victory, it had illustrated once more certain aspects of the art of acting in which Mme. Bernhardt is supreme.

The exquisitely soft, slow facial play by which the coming of the voices of Jeanne was indicated, the hands moving across the countenance as though each downward movement meant the letting of more light, more music, more, in a word, of the miracle into the prisoner's soul, the irradiation of the face that simultaneously was effected, the following of the shame of the recantation with the wonder of the vision, the following of that with the piteous yet joyous confession to the

Nat C. Goodwin's Tribute to Woman's Ingenuity

"Man is ingenious, and I don't mean that as a personal recommendation for myself," said Nat Goodwin, who is to appear in "The Captain," at the Grand Opera House on Thursday, Nov. 17, "but for clever demonstration of gray matter, give me woman—and especially the one I met on my way to the first rehearsal of 'The Captain.'"

I was on a closed car, though the windows were down. Suddenly the 'powders' that he thought that this planet needed a little water, and the water came down in torrents. Then it was that this feminine part of the 'genus homo' showed her tact. She was a Venus de Milo, dressed like a queen, and with the bearing of Cleopatra. She would attract the attention of a sensible man even, so that it was not to be wondered at that a 'chappie,' with a lean cane for an escort, and a shop girl, with a mouth full of gum, looked askance at the star passenger, the former wishing she were on his calling list, and the latter that she possessed some of her outfit. Haughtily she removed the coin from her purse. A shift in the wind drove the rain in on her back, and caused her to shudder. She called the conductor and bade him draw up the window sash. He worked like the anchor of a tug-of-war team, but to no avail. With an exclamation of contempt, she placed the coin between her lips, and at that sash she went. A tug and a jerk! It must have yielded to the force of her charms, for up it came with a bang; with a slight recoil she was cast backward, the grip of her coin was loosened, smack it went against the window pane, and plucked rattled down between the outer sheetings and the back of the seats. The passengers gathered about, or the coin, but it was no use. There it lay in full view, yet out of reach. After every means had been exhausted woman's ingenuity came into play. With a bow and a nod, she approached the beau ideal with the cane. Mine for a minute, eh? He was only too willing to be of service. To the girl with the gum: 'Your gum will assist me to recover my coin. May I have it?' It was the old story over again. "Them that has gits," she got the gum. She placed it on the end of the cane, leaned over the narrow opening, sighted the coin, jabbed at it; it stuck, and out of the hole she drew it. The apple was all smiles. He thought he had made a hit. He got thanks for his service, as she returned the cane, leaving the gum sticking to it, and removing only the "coin."

THEATRICAL NOTES.

George Whitefield Chadwick, director of the New England Conservatory of Music, who is writing the music to be used in connection with Henry W. Savage's important new production of "Everywoman," is the best-known American symphonist composer. He has several times led the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra in the rendition of his own works, while as a teacher he stands likewise in the very first rank.

Miss Gertrude Quinlan, who has won such notable popular and critical approval as the star of Henry W. Savage's production of "Miss Patsy," will shortly withdraw from that fare in order to prepare for her new play, "Pinnick Flora." This is a comedy by a new author, and its central role suggests somewhat the character of Flora Wiggins, in "The College Widow," the role which first gave Miss Quinlan the fame she enjoys as a character comedienne.

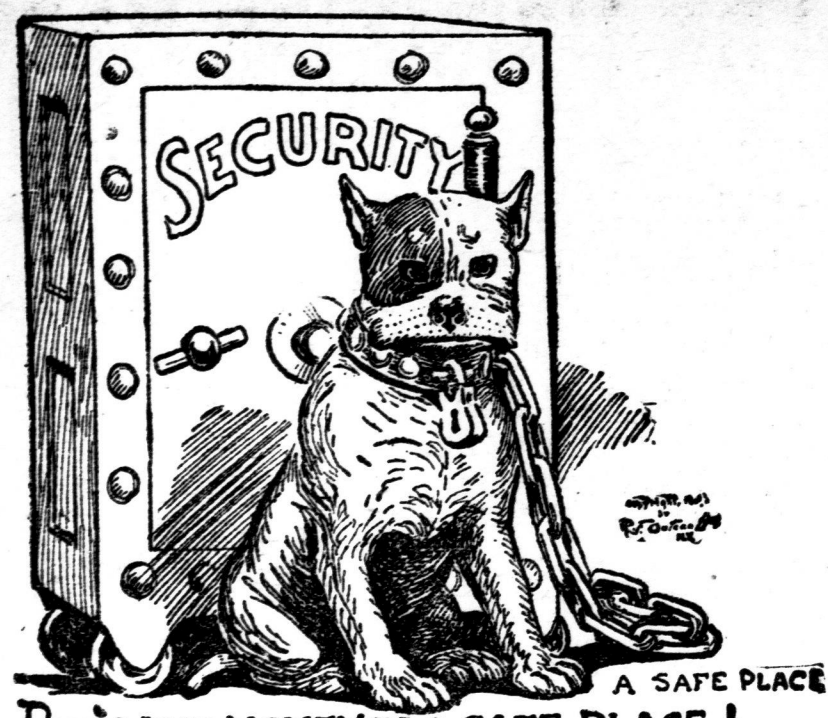

In writing "Everywoman," the modern Morality play which Henry W. Savage is to make one of the most important features of his new season, Walter Browne found the suggestion for the work in the famous Fifteenth Century Morality "Everyman"—revived a few seasons ago after lying dormant for centuries in England. "Everyman," however, is absolutely of the present day, while its locale is in New York City.

Lest You Forget

Here are a few vital points to remember before you buy any automobile

REMEMBER: THE NAME—E-M-F "30."

REMEMBER: THE PRICE—$1,350 f.o.b. Walkerville, fully equipped with magneto, five lamps, acetylene generator and tube horn.

REMEMBER: THE GUARANTEE—For one year against breakage "from any cause whatsoever."

REMEMBER: THE RECORD—Over 18,000 E-M-F "30" cars today in the hands of owners, and every owner boasting—ask them.

REMEMBER: THE SAVING—E-M-F "30" at $1,350 saves you about $500, as compared with the price asked for in cars of the same size and power and quality. It saves you at the very least $150 from the price of the so-called "assembled cars" that list at $1,500, and which cannot be sold for less because of having to pay the extra parts makers' profits.

REMEMBER: The difference between price of E-M-F "30" and would-be competing cars at the higher prices will pay, twice over, your year's maintenance account—gasoline, oil, tires, repairs, and an annual overhauling, twice over, no matter how hard you drive the E-M-F "30."

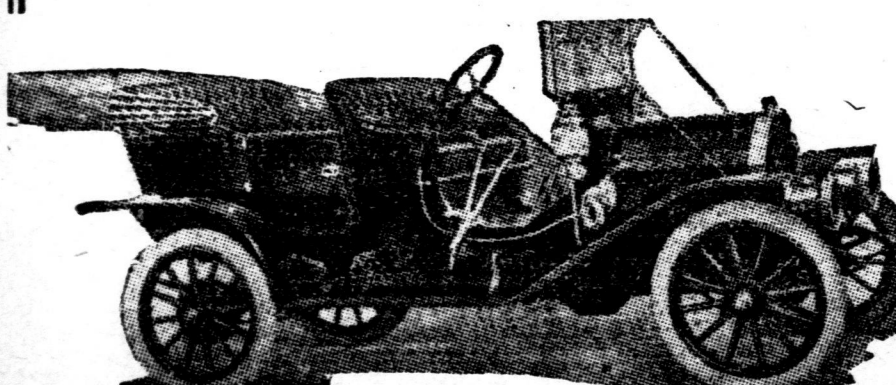

REMEMBER: That no other thirty or thirty-five horsepower car is made of such excellent materials, and is therefore as light, therefore as economical in operation and maintenance.

REMEMBER: That the E-M-F Company has over $7,000,000 invested in plants, and that not only is every part, from the Pig Iron and the Raw Steel bars, made in our own factories, but that every pound of steel or brass or any other metal that enters into these cars is first made from our own formula; then analyzed to prove its quality, and finally tested to prove its efficiency.

REMEMBER: That cars for which you must pay more are "assembled" product—that while their makers may prate loudly about quality, they don't know what material actually goes into their cars, but must take the word of others who are making the parts for profit, and who have no interest in the ultimate user of the car.

REMEMBER: The transmission, not the troublesome, noisy, nerve-racking kind you often hear, but selective, sliding gears that you find in the specifications of every first-class car.

AND FINALLY, REMEMBER: The record of the E-M-F Company, never repudiated a guarantee or a promise, written, verbal or otherwise. Remember, that when we guarantee our cars for a full year we know whereof we speak, for we have made every part and we know absolutely the strength and quality of every piece of steel in it. Remember, that we are the largest automobile manufacturers in the world—that we now have thousands of delighted owners recommending our product, and that, in view of our tremendous output, we need a lot more of such friends. Remember, that we have always said "a satisfied owner is the best salesman," and that we have always kept that in mind and seen that every owner was satisfied.

WILL SEE BILLS

Social Improvement Statutes Will Be Sent to the Municipalities.

When the statute revision commission of the Ontario Government completes their revision of the local improvement sections of the municipal act, these revisions will be embodied in a separate bill for presentation to the Legislature. But before this is presented to the Legislature copies of the bill with notes explaining the changes in the sections will be distributed to all the municipal officers of the country. At the same time the companies act was revised and consolidated this plan was followed and copies of the act sent to all registered companies.

Effect of Them Uncertain.

Speaking of the local improvement sections of the municipal act, an official of the commission this morning said: "These sections are in such shape that it is almost impossible to give a legal opinion as to their effect. For some time now the commission have been meeting in the Government lobby of the legislative chambers on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays. When the session begins the commission and the law clerks will have to seek other quarters in the overcrowded building. It is expected a portion of the reconstructed wing will be available for use by that time." The commission consists of Hon. F. Osler, formerly of the court of appeal, chairman; Sir William Meredith, Justices Anglin, Teetzel and Garrow, and Judge Snider, of Hamilton. The statutes revised and consolidated by the commission so far are:

Landlord and tenants act, law of trustees, law of transfer of property, municipal act (local improvement sections), pawnbrokers act, land titles act, marriage act, pharmacy act, dentistry act, anatomy act, surveying act, Law Society, and infants act, chartered accountants act, apprentices and miners act, innkeepers act, veterinary surgeons act, stationary engineers act.

THREE BLAMED FOR LITTLE GIRL'S DEATH

Montreal Jury Gives Verdict on Case of Cecile Michaud.

Montreal, Nov. 11.—The jury which has been investigating the murder of little Cecile Michaud, after being out an hour, returned a verdict holding L. E. J. Perrault, Albert Chevrier and Achille Derome legally and criminally responsible.

The evidence secured during the day was inconclusive, save that of a negro musician named Mitchell, who swore he saw two of the men in an auto at the Bellevue Hotel at 10 o'clock, while the Michaud girl was on the sidewalk and Chevrier was in the bar. The case has aroused great interest owing to the fact that the two girls in the case were under fourteen years of age, and had been taken to the hotel for improper purposes, and while one escaped alive, the other was seen for six weeks, when her body was found. Considerable comment has also been caused by the fact that although complaint had been made over the disappearance of the girl, the little effort had been made to look the matter up until her body was found.

WINNIPEG ROTTEN SAYS DR. SHEARER

Says Conditions There Make It Worst City in Canada.

Toronto, Nov. 11.—Rev. Dr. J. G. Shearer, who has just returned from a month's trip in Western Canada and the United States, as one of twenty speakers of the International American Purity Federation, pronounced Winnipeg the worst city in Canada. "They have the rottenest condition of things in Winnipeg in connection with the question of vice to be found in any city in Canada," Dr. Shearer said. "Two years ago they had no vice district in Winnipeg. One year ago they had 25 houses in a restricted area. Now they have 65 houses, with probably 250 inmates. Every one of these is criminal under the terms of the code of Canada, yet they are permitted. Instead of the criminal code certain rules and regulations are established for them. Here are some of them: They must not play the piano too loudly; they must not make noise enough to attract attention on the street; they must not have white female cooks; they must not solicit from the windows and doors."

Every one of these criminal dens is also an illicit liquor dive. Remarkable to say the inmates receive summonses regularly each quarter from the provincial license authorities. They come before the provincial magistrate and pay over $100 and costs. They then are not disturbed for another three months. These dives sell liquor 24 hours a day, seven days a week at the price of a being permitted to do so each house pay $400 a year. This money, therefore, must go into the provincial treasury or into some grafters' pockets. It is generally believed in Winnipeg that the whole criminal business is founded on graft, but naturally any man hesitates to name the grafters."

Lame back comes on suddenly and is extremely painful. It is caused by rheumatism of the muscles. Quick relief is afforded by applying Chamberlain's Liniment. Sold by all dealers.

TRADE IS GOOD THROUGH CANADA

Outlook for Coming Season Is Very Bright in All Lines.

THE WESTERN MARKETS

Are in Good Shape and Collections at All Points Are Fair.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Montreal, Nov. 12.—Reports to Bradstreet say both local and country trade has felt the benefit of more reasonable weather conditions. Sorting orders are larger than a week ago, and general lines are now moving quite freely in this connection. In dry goods there is a good inquiry on spring lines, and indications point to a large trade. The new price list of the Dominion Textile Company shows advances from 2½ to 5 per cent, and it is intimated that these prices are subject to advance without notice. Business in furs has picked up to some extent. Business in metals holds steady as reported a week ago. Metals continue in active demand at prices about steady. State natural falling off is noted for builders' supplies, but considerable outdoor work is still going on. A fair business is noted in groceries, with prices of all lines steady. Country trade has a fairly good tone for this time of the year. Receipts of provisions are generally large and in most lines prices are inclined to be slightly easier. The grain trade continues quiet. Collections continue slow.

Toronto reports say the feature of the week is an improvement in the sorting trade consequent upon more favorable weather. Business generally is quite active. Shipments of goods are large and the outlook for winter trade is decidedly bright. The demand for men's and women's clothing, and for fur wear, is extremely heavy. Values are generally steady to firm. A good business has also been moving in millinery. The holiday trade in fancy goods, jewelry and notions promises to be large, and houses interested are receipt of good orders from all parts of the country. The hardware trade continues steady, with all seasonal lines moving briskly. Trade in groceries is also of satisfactory proportions. Heavy goods are still being ordered from that part of the country are encouraging. Collections generally seem to be fair, although there is considerable complaint on this score from some districts.

Western Trade Good.
Winnipeg reports say retail trade has been active during the past week, and jobbers in most lines report a good sorting business. Retail trade in holiday goods is already beginning to pick up, and the indications are that the trade volume will be well up to, if not in advance of previous years. Hardware trade is a little quieter, although seasonal lines are active. Grain and flour trade has resulted in easier prices for both wheat and flour. Dairy produce and cured meats have advanced. Collections are fair.

Vancouver and Victoria reports say general trade holds a good steady tone and in some lines the approach of the Christmas season has already stimulated business. Wholesalers generally report good remands from interior points and the movement of goods is heavy. It is reported the potato crop in most districts is turning out poor. Collections are good.

Quebec reports to Bradstreet's say that trade is not more than holding its own, and no improvement is anticipated until the weather is more settled. In the city retailers are preparing for the holiday trade. The latter it is expected will open earlier than usual. Collections are only fair.

London reports say local trade is fairly active, and wholesalers are busy sending out goods for the winter season. Local factories are busily engaged. Trade in the district is fair, and deliveries of produce are large. Ottawa reports say a satisfactory volume of business is noted in all lines of trade. Local retail trade has shown marked improvement this week, and the outlook for the future continues good. While collections are on the slow side improvement in this respect is looked for in the near future.

MOVE TO ABROGATE GAMBLING STATUTE

After Hart-Agnew Law, Which Prevents Race-Track Betting.

New York, Nov. 11.—A move to abrogate the Hart-Agnew law, which by preventing gambling on race tracks, gave racing a severe blow in this state, is seen today by State Senator Agnew in an order to show cause why the appointment of the state in 1907 into Senate and Assembly districts should not be reviewed. The order was issued a few days ago by Justice Bischoff, of the supreme court, upon a petition of five signers, and is returnable on Nov. 16. Governor Horace White, George H. Cobb, temporary president of the Senate, Speaker Wadsworth of the Assembly, and Attorney-General O'Malley have been served with court notices in the matter.

Sensor's View.
Senator Agnew, speaking of the attack on the appointment of 1907, said: "The same point was raised at the time the Hart-Agnew bill was under consideration. At that time it was declared that the appointment of 1907 was unconstitutional, and that the election of Senator Wallace was unconstitutional, and that as a consequence the laws passed by his vote were also unconstitutional. It will be remembered that the Hart-Agnew bill could not have been passed without his vote."

Know of Action.
"I have known that such action was contemplated, as I have known that it is the intention of the Legislature to take advantage of this attempt, should it be successful, to wipe out the present anti-race track gambling laws off the statute books."

BAD ROADS MAKE A SMALL MARKET

Poultry Prices Up a Little and Dairy Produce Is Unchanged.

OATS ARE AT A PREMIUM

Only Two Good-Seed Leads of Potatoes on the Square This Morning.

This morning's market was very small, perhaps the smallest Saturday market for months. The country roads are in a bad state, owing to the recent rains, and this, in all probability the main reason why farmers are not bringing in their produce. There was a little bit of everything, with poultry and apples in evidence. Poultry is inclined to be dearer, although the supply is very plentiful. Chickens are now selling at 10c to 12c per lb. or from $1.50 to $2.00 per dozen. The demand for chickens and ducks is exceptionally brisk, and ducks are a little scarce.

Several barrels of good Spy apples were offered at $3.00 per barrel. The demand was brisk, considering the price.

The supply of potatoes was a disappointment, there being only two good-sized loads on the market. The price per bag remains about the same as the first of the week. If the roads are better next week potatoes ought to be very plentiful. The demand at present is very good.

Celery and cabbages were a little in evidence. Celery is quoted at 30c to 50c per dozen bunches. Cabbage prices are just the same, ranging from 20c to 30c per dozen, according to size.

One lonely little load of light oats brought $1.00 per bushel. This was the only lot offered, the roads being too heavy for any large loads. The demand is good, and next week ought to see a good supply.

There were various prices paid for eggs. In the dairy hall 50c per dozen for good fresh eggs was asked, or 35c to 40c while outside on the square fresh eggs were selling from 20c to 30c per dozen. This was also the price for creamery butter, sold at 20c to 25c per lb.

Dressed hogs were scarce, and as a consequence the price did not rise. It was expected that live hogs will be cheaper on Monday, and this will be reflected in the price of dressed hogs.

Beef is selling about $8 by the carcass, and a drop is expected in this figure next week. The other butchery prices remain unchanged. Hides and wool are the same as last Saturday.

There is not much change in fruit. Navel oranges will be largely in evidence from now on, and as the crop is reported exceptionally large, a reduction in price will take place. Apples are moving well. Grapes are finished. Cranberries are reported to be plentiful.

The following are the quotations:

LODGE AMALGAMATION

Eureka 30, and Forest City of I. O. O. F., May Merge.

It was recently proposed to amalgamate the three downtown lodges of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, but the proposition has apparently failed. Eureka Lodge, 30, and Forest City, 38, have signified their desire for such union, but Dominion Lodge, 45, is strongly opposed to the scheme. It is possible, however, that Eureka and Forest City lodges will unite in any case. Choral Lodge in East London is essentially an east end lodge and has therefore not been considered in the proposed amalgamation.

COMMITTEE PASSES

OTTAWA TRIP ACCOUNT

Ald. Tancock Raises an Objection, But Bill Goes Through.

At the meeting of the manufacturers' committee of the city council yesterday afternoon, the accounts of the Ottawa deputation, amounting in all to $140, were ordered to be paid. Ald. Tancock objected.

"When they selected the delegation, they named 18 or 20 men," he declared. "Then they passed a motion limiting the expenses of the deputation to $150. Those two motions are contradictory to my mind, and I do not see that they were necessary. We should pay the legitimate expenses of the delegates named. The motion regarding the limitation of the expenses of the delegates should be withdrawn."

However, the committee thought they should be paid, and on motion of Ald. Underwood, the account was passed.

The use of the committee-room was given the Dominion Patent Company to display their wares during the last week of the month of November.

The East London Business-men's Association offered to assist the committee in "boosting" the city. The communication was filed.

Those present were Ald. Fitzgerald, chairman, Ald. Jeffries, Ald. Underwood, Ald. Ashplant, Ald. Eckert, Ald. Tancock, D. H. Gillies, H. B. Archer, W. Hayman, and Secretary Baker.

Great Triumphs Are Achieved Only by the Great

The geniuses who conceived and constructed the deserve the greatness and prestige their instruments have been awarded since their first world-conquering triumph in 1855. That triumph has remained undimmed, unquestioned and unshared ever since that time. The Steinway Piano stands today unequalled for its velvety, opulent and sonorous tone. The greatest artists in the world volunteer the strongest praises for the Steinway.

LONDON MAY HAVE SCHOOL NURSES
Head of Toronto Staff Outlines System There.
INSPECTION MADE DAILY
Close Watch Kept on Children to Prevent Infection and Epidemic.

Miss L. L. Rogers, R. N., superintendent of the School of Nurses of Toronto, gave an interesting address in the students' lecture room of Victoria Hospital last evening on medical inspection among the school children. A large number of nurses and the members of the board of health, board of education and hospital trust were present. Miss Rogers came to London at the special invitation of Miss Stanley, lady superintendent of Victoria Hospital, for the benefit of the board of education, who are considering the institution of medical inspection in the local schools.

Miss Rogers stated that it began in 1842 in Paris, France. "The first city in America to adopt it was Boston, which inaugurated the system of daily inspection in 1894," said Miss Rogers. "The idea was taken up by Chicago in 1895, and when an epidemic of measles and scarlet fever broke out in New York in 1896, the department of health of that city assigned inspectors to investigate the conditions of the schools. The result of the inquiry showed that a number were ill with contagious diseases contracted in the class rooms, where over-crowding, bad air, etc., favored infection."

"In 1897, New York appointed 150 inspectors at $30 per month. At that time their duty was to examine all children sent by the principal or teachers, but in 1903 this system was reorganized, and the doctors were requested to make a routine inspection of each class room. The result of this was a serious depletion of the rooms, and to remedy this it was suggested that a nurse be appointed to supplement the doctors' efforts. Miss Rogers then told how this plan changed the whole system by keeping the child in the school under supervision and treatment, which proved so valuable that the city appropriated $30,000 for a staff of nurses the following year. This led to still another revision in the system, as the nurses were requested to make a daily inspection."

PROMPTLY ENDS INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, GAS OR HEADACHE FROM A BAD STOMACH

Your out-of-order Stomach feels fine five minutes after taking a little Diapepsin.

There would not be a case of indigestion here if readers who are subject to Stomach trouble knew the tremendous anti-ferment and digestive virtue contained in Diapepsin. This harmless preparation will digest a heavy meal without the slightest fuss or discomfort, and relieve the sour, acid stomach in five minutes, besides overcoming all foul, nauseous odors from the breath.

A feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, Belching of Gas and Eructations of undigested food, water-brash, Nausea, Headache, Bilioussness, and many other bad symptoms; and, besides, you will not need laxatives to keep your stomach, liver and intestines clean and fresh.

If your Stomach is sour and full of gas, or your food doesn't digest, and your meals don't seem to fit, why not get a 50-cent case from your druggist and make life worth living? Absolute relief from Stomach misery and perfect digestion of anything you eat is sure to follow five minutes after, and besides, one case is sufficient to cure a whole family of such trouble.

Surely, a harmless, inexpensive preparation like Diapepsin, which will always, either at daytime or during night, relieve your stomach misery, and digest your meals, is about as handy and valuable a thing as you could have in the house.

Torontos Experience.
"On April 25, 1910," continued Miss Rogers, "the board of education of Toronto appointed three nurses. Each nurse has a group of four schools, which she visits regularly. The minor contagious diseases are treated in school, if the parents cannot do so at home, and the parents are visited to urge care for those requiring medical attention. The nurse not only aids in getting the children back to normal conditions, but is constantly aiming at prevention by seeing that the pupils keep their bodies clean, that the clothing is changed as often as possible, that the teeth are brushed carefully to prevent decay, that the fingernails are cut and kept clean, and that the hair is regularly washed and brushed. Advice is given to the parents as to the better methods of living, the proper food to be used, to allow fresh air and sunshine in the room, and to sleep with the window open."

In dealing with the benefits derived from this effort, Miss Rogers said: "By making better citizens of these children we diminish the number of insane asylums, have fewer jails and poorhouses, and besides that, we shall have a healthier and nobler generation to look forward to."

Lantern slides, illustrating the working of the system in New York city, were shown and explained. Mr. W. W. Gammage, Mr. C. M. R. Graham, Mr. W. T. Strong and Inspector Edwards also spoke, the latter stating that he had been making a study of medical school inspection and favored the system outlined by Miss Rogers.

The board of education have taken steps to have a nurse appointed for the schools of London.

The increase of passengers by the Liverpool Tramways for the past nine months was 2,829,309, and of receipts £15,000, over those of the corresponding months of the previous year. Twenty years ago the sum paid by the British nation for life assurance was a trifle over £18,000,000 a year, but, according to the latest Government returns, it is now over £41,000,000 per annum.

The silk has almost passed out in London, except for ceremonial occasions, and it is not often seen, even in Piccadilly or the Park. One reason for this falling off is said to be the advent of the motor car, which enables an extensive number of people to live out of town, where the silk hat, with its attendant frock coat is unnecessary.

WHEN YOU FEEL CROSS AND ARE EASILY WORRIED AND IRRITATED, CHANCES ARE THAT THE LIVER IS NOT RIGHT AND YOU NEED

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Life is too short to be cross and grouchy. You make your own self miserable, but also those about you.

Don't blame others. Blame yourself for not keeping the liver right. When healthy and active the liver filters the poisonous bile from the blood and passes it into the intestines, where it aids the process of digestion and keeps the bowels regular.

But when the liver balks the whole system becomes clogged with a mass of fermenting food, which gives rise to gas on the stomach, belching of wind, pains about the heart, and a multitude of annoying symptoms which accompany indigestion and constipation.

There is nothing in the world which will more promptly afford you relief than Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. This statement is true. A trial will convince you. This medicine acts definitely and directly on the liver and bowels, and cleanses the whole digestive and excretory system.

Mr. Theo. Bedard, Lac aux Sables, Portneuf County, Que., writes: "I have found Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills the best treatment obtainable for indigestion and impure blood. They cured me of indigestion, from which I suffered for four years."

"This certificate is given without solicitation, so that others may not waste their money buying medicines of no value when they can get Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills, which I am convinced are the best."

A girl named Annie Flaherty, aged 20, met with a terrible death while at work in the Madeira woolen mills, Galway. It appears that she leaned over a wooden partition in one of the work rooms to speak to a friend on the other side. An axle of one of the machines, which projected through a hole cut in the partition, caught her dress, tossing her round and round and dashing her head against the ground several times. The force with which she struck the ground was so great that portions of the planking were broken.

The anniversary of the death of Charles Stewart Parnell, which took place on the 9th of October, nineteen years ago, was commemorated by a procession to the grave in Glasnevin cemetery. Many beautiful floral offerings were laid on the grave, which by the way, is still unvisited. The anniversary of his death has been observed with unbroken regularity, but of late years the annual ceremony has somewhat declined in impressiveness. It seems as though many of his fellow-countrymen are already beginning to forget the work he did for Ireland.

AMERICANS STUDY AT OXFORD RHODES' SCHEME A SUCCESS

American Students Making Fair Progress There—Social Atmosphere is Good Criticism of Appointees From the United States Not Regarded as Just by an American.

Taken as a whole, the Rhodes scholarship experiment at Oxford is working out well. It probably has been of more benefit up to date to America than to England. The relationship of the other countries cannot be discussed.

This is a summing up of the situation by Lucian W. Chaney, of the United States department of commerce and labor, who has recently returned to Washington after seeing his son, Newcomb Chaney, one of the American scholars, finish his course there. Newcomb Chaney was one of the American students from Minnesota, and is now doing graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania.

General Situation Discussed.

In speaking of the general situation at Oxford Mr. Chaney said: "Of course, Oxford is a very old institution, and the Rhodes scholarships are very new. It is therefore rather early to look for any pronounced results. Oxford places the most emphasis on classical studies, but while she has only recently paid more attention to what you might call modern scientific research work, she is well equipped for it. "SLEEPLESSNESS."

Thousands of people all over this land toss night after night on a sleepless pillow. The eyes do not close in the refreshing slumber that comes to those whose heart and nerves are right.

Some are troubled with weak and smothering spells; others palpitation of the heart; others have their nerves unbalanced; but whatever the cause—it comes entirely from a perangement of either the heart or nerves, or both. Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound, refreshing slumber. They do this by their invigorating effect on the heart and nerves and will tone up the whole system to perfect condition.

Mr. H. Jewel, Keswick, Ont., writes: "I am glad to have the pleasure of telling you what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. I would have weak spells, seemed to lose my breath, and would have to get up in the night as I could not sleep. I tried many medicines but found nothing good until I used Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I took three boxes and it is three years ago since I did so, and I haven't been troubled since."

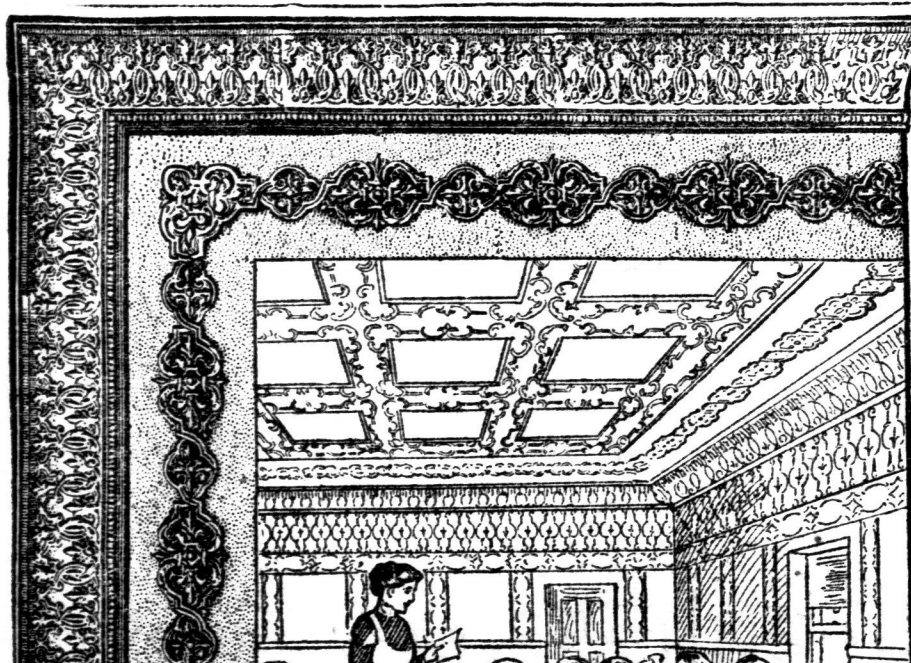

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

walls, and they can find American papers and magazines there. But there is no classiness in the American contingent.

"I think if there is a point where they might be fairly criticised it is in the fact that some of them are saving a part of their scholarship money for European travel, and for this reason some of them do not go in for the more expensive features of athletics as they might."

Athletics on Amateur Basis.

"Athletics in the university are on a very strictly amateur basis. There is no common fund from which athletic expenses are defrayed. If a man wants to go in for any sport he has to furnish his own equipment, and if he is going to compete outside of Oxford he pays his own way."

"I know that some of the men have subjected themselves to criticism by saving this money, and living as close as possible, to have money for travel after they finish. Of course, this was not what the founder of the scholarships intended, but they hardly see any way out of it if they choose to act along that line. It is not, however, the common custom."

"I should say on the whole that the experiment is working satisfactorily, and possibly this country is getting more benefit from it just now than England."

THE RARE BEAUTY

passengers and freight, and carry an enormous number of passengers for a penny a mile in competition with the trolley lines that run up and down the banks.

On the Buda side the ground is flat; the city of Pest occupies a promontory crowned by the palace, which is one of the most attractive royal residences in Europe, and one of the largest. It is built of pure white marble, the roof is decorated with domes and towers, and the front facade, which faces the city of Buda across the river, is broken with porticoes.

The palace stands upon the site of the ancient Roman citadel, rising several hundred feet above the river bank, and the approaches and front of the building are treated in a liberal and artistic manner by introducing colonnades, monumental stairways, terraces protected by balustrades and groves of the noble trees, and Matthias and Kirke were both built by King Bela IV. in the thirteenth century, and were rebuilt by Maria Theresa in the middle of the eighteenth century. The palace has 860 rooms, 201 of which belong to the emperor comes to Budapest to open parliament, and gives a grand ball, to which invitations are extended with democratic generosity. He came this year as usual in June, upon his return from his first visit to Sarajevo and Mostar, the capitals of his new provinces, Bosnia and Herzegovina, which were annexed to the empire last spring.

Emperor's Influence.

It was an illustration of the solitude he has always shown and explains the influence which he has exercised over the heterogeneous population of his empire. Few men of his age would have taken a long journey to the mountains as he did to assure his subjects of his interest in their welfare and to witness the first meeting of the first diet of those provinces. He was attended by a large number of both Austria and Hungary, and several members of the cabinets of the dual monarchy, which added to the solemnity and the importance of the visit. It is not surprising that the population of these tumultuous provinces were touched by the proof which their sovereign gave them of his concern for their welfare and his interest in their progress. Their reception was enthusiastic as well as respectful. They responded with hearty cordiality to his advances, and his improvement to them. This first meeting between the inhabitants of Bosnia and Herzegovina and their sovereign was served by the HUNGARIAN PARLIAMENT to remove the prejudices of many, and to establish friendly relations which will assist in solving problems which are difficult and urgent.

His majesty did not remain long in Budapest, and his reception of the parliament took place at the palace instead of the parliament house. No balls or dinners were given because of his age and fatigue from his long journey, but all the other formalities were observed.

The people of Hungary feel a profound gratification in a possession of a palace for their king, which is one of the most beautiful in the world, as well as one of the largest, although one unfamiliar with its significance would pronounce the monstrous building a useless extravagance. National pride and hope for the restoration of the ancient Magyar kingdom are gratified every morning when a Hungarian crosses a bridge over the Danube comes into the street from his dwelling. When he looks upon that palace he is reminded that he is a citizen of a great nation and has a responsibility to perform. The Hungarian royal regalia, the crown of St. Stephen, who reigned a thousand years ago; his coronation robe with its scepter and orb of gold, and the sword of authority, are kept in glass cases guarded by soldiers, where the people can see them whenever they visit the palace.

The Matthias Kirke, a perfect example of the old Gothic, which was commenced in the twelfth century by King Bela IV. is one of the most beautiful churches in Europe, although the Magyars claim another still more beautiful at Kaschau, a neighboring city, which was built in 1382-1497, and is the cathedral of the adjoining diocese.

Parliament Building.

In addition to the palace, national pride has found expression in a parliament house, which the people of Hungary think is the grandest structure ever erected since the temple of Solomon. It is a huge pile of sandstone, covering nearly four acres, larger than the parliament house at London or the capital at Washington, and is an architectural conglomerate, with a forest of Gothic spires and a Byzantine dome 350 feet high rising from a French chateau roof. The building was designed by Prof. Steindl, director of the architectural department of the Royal Technical School, who has done much to develop and cultivate the architectural taste and ambition of the Hungarian people. One can see the results of his influence and instruction in the long line of buildings that include the principal streets and boulevards of the city. They are a mixture of the French and Italian schools, pretentious and ornate. There is nothing in Europe to surpass them in solidity of construction, although, like the apartment houses of Vienna and Berlin, they lack what we consider the ordinary comforts of life.

The parliament house cost $10,000,000, which is equivalent to twice that amount in our country, as values go. It was erected to commemorate the 1,000th anniversary of the founding of the Hungarian kingdom. The interior is a blaze of splendor, marble stairways, pillars, ceilings and walls, onyx pillars, mantels and door frames, bronze and brass work that glistens with polish, mosaics in gold and colors, and brilliant mural decorations in Egyptian, Moorish, Saracenic and modern styles—a wild kaleidoscope of color and gildings which gratifies the Magyars, a race that retains to this day the oriental features, passions and tastes of its ancestors. Here and there within the building you can find groups of Ionic and Corinthian capitals and exquisite examples of Gothic tracery, both in oak and marble, in the arches, windows, wainscoting and screens.

Throne Room.

The throne room, where the emperor sits once a year and receives an address from his loyal Hungarian subjects, and the two legislative halls are magnificent apartments finished in carved oak of Gothic design in the most elaborate manner, and the libraries, reading-rooms, committee-rooms, retiring-rooms for the prime minister and the members of his cabinet, who have seats on the floors of both houses; the private restaurants and public cafes and other accommodations for the members of parliament and their constituents are much more extensively and handsomely fitted up than any I have seen in the other European capitals. However, the American taste would prefer the simple dignity and massiveness of the United States capital at Washington, and perhaps one might truthfully say that the two buildings illustrate the character and habits of the two nations.

Until about five hundred years ago the Hungarian parliament met in the open air in what is called the Bakosfield, an extensive plain to the north of the town, and it is said that on occasions of important events more than a hundred thousand men in armor used to gather to see that their wishes and opinions were properly represented in the decisions of important matters of the government. That custom, with many others, has been abolished, but it would be to the advantage of the members of the ministry and the leaders of the political parties to wear armor and helmets of steel even in these days. Last spring, when the chamber of deputies adjourned, the prime minister of Hungary, Istvan Tisza, on a couch in his retiring-room, and his minister of agriculture was being sewed up by a surgeon because of a controversy with the opposition on the floor of the chamber, in which inkstands and other missiles were used as arguments.

KEEP SUICIDES HIDDEN

side. "Come," I said, "we'll secure you a fat vaticum, and really he'd have got $500."

"I've a mind to shoot that cropper," he whispered. I was ready for him, at his right hand. Well, the poor fellow was left-handed!

"What?"

"He whipped a pistol from his left coat pocket and shot himself through the head. Men screamed. Women went into hysterics. There was a rush from the table. Then, while inspectors, croppers, spies and old hanties made a big ring round it, servants got rid of the body that table's quick door washed up the floor. In half an hour the table had started business again, and when timid ladies asked, 'Was there a suicide?' a dozen of us—dressed up like gentlemanly players—laughed at the idea of it. 'But I heard a pistol,' said one lady. 'It must have been one of those champagne corks in the Atrium,' I answered."

Thus I learned of the "quick doors." Probably not one reader out of twenty who has been to Monte Carlo knows of this queer device, which is to be hoped, not by experience.

Each roulette and trente-et-quarante table is so situated with respect to the casino's architecture that a dark and narrow secret corridor built in the walls leads from close beside it to the police rooms down in the basement. A door concealed in the wall paneling gives access to each secret corridor—which is just wide enough for a wide man or woman, and is lighted by electricity and built with a heavy slant down to the basement.

Do you see? When a desperate loser threatens to scold the spies grab him in the midst of all the players. He is seen a moment, surrounded by them. Then he disappears as in a transformation scene. They push and pull him quickly to the wall beside the table. The concealed door opens. Flop! The disturber is flung in! Flop! The concealed door shuts! You would not know a door was there. And that is all. No more disturber.

But in the steep, slanting, narrow corridor, mysterious, without windows, leading God knows where, the prisoner shoots downward to the basement, breathless, stunned, pushed and pulled by the brethren," laughed the ex-spy.

"Rough treatment, yes," he concluded. "It is Monte Carlo principle that a little rough handling is the best way to treat disturbers. Nine out of ten would have cooled down before the police inspector asks them what their kick is."

"What is the charge?" I asked. "Disturbing the peace of the principality. It is a sovereign government. Also a health report, where invalids' nerves must be respected. Once outside, the disturber is escorted to his hotel, allowed to pack up and pay up, and then taken to the frontier."

"Why, the frontier's just across the street!"

"Yes, but the man is expelled from Monaco and the papers all regular. If he comes back he's in the wrong. Should he hang himself in daylight they will cut him down. Should he do it at night they will bury him with half an hour's delay."

"And if he doesn't hang himself?" I asked. "In that case, all depends on whether he has brought back some more money!"

DANISH AGRICULTURE.

How the State Assists an Educated Peasantry.

In the October number of the Journal of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries a short account is given from the foreign office report of Vice-Consul Turner on "State Assistance to Agriculture in Denmark."

The sums granted for the encouragement of agriculture in 1910 amounted in all to £233,313, or about a twentieth of the whole national annual expenditure. On that basis this is equal to an annual grant of £8,000,000 for agriculture in the United Kingdom.

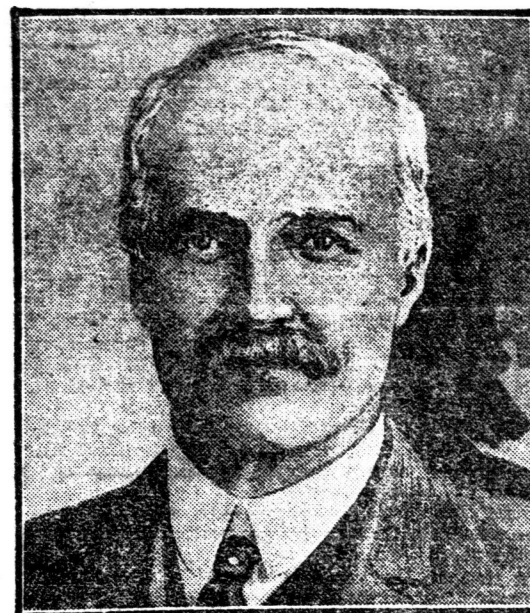

The subvention to the local agricultural societies amounts to £10,900. There are 115 of these societies, with 84,500 members, and in addition the state pays a good deal for lecturers and the travelling expenses of small holders and pig breeders, and provides prizes at local shows.

Some 250 horse breeding, 1,310 cattle breeding, 250 pig breeding, and 90 sheep breeding associations also receive state aid towards the improvement of stock. Fifteen hundred dairies, practically all of them co-operatives, go without direct aid, but £666 is given to the Control Societies which give subsidies for the education of dairy managers and for experiments in cheese, etc. These societies also keep milk records of all the cows in the country, so that only the best are bred from and the dairy stock is constantly improved.

The sum of £222,222 is at the disposal of the parish councils through the district commission each year for five years, for the purpose of assisting peasants to purchase holdings. The Heath Society, which exists for the

Newbro's Herpicide Makes the Hair Beautiful

To have long, thick, luxuriant hair and the ability to dress it properly should be the desire of every woman who wishes to be considered attractive. Nice hair is merely a question of care and cultivation. Hair that is dull, brittle, uneven and full of dandruff shows the want of proper and reasonable care.

Kills the Dandruff Germ Stops Falling Hair

To give nature a chance is all that is needed. Just get rid of the Dandruff Germ and keep the scalp in a sanitary condition by the use of Newbro's Herpicide, then note the change which will gradually take place.

The hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become light, fluffy and snappy, a joy to the head it adorns, the envy of others who have failed to heed these words. Herpicide does not stain or dye the hair. It stops itching almost instantly.

A COMMUNITY OF CENTENARIANS

A French Village in Which Most People Grow to a Great Age.

Longevity is one of the virtues, or vices, of the times. Men are counted young up to forty, and sixty has become an age at which one reaches maturity. Mr. J. P. Macdonald has discovered Poix, a French village of two hundred and fifty inhabitants. The Morning Leader publishes his tribute: "But the occasion I am about to describe is no ordinary one; for this once indeed, I wholeheartedly proclaim Poix to be the most remarkable, the most magnificent corner in the universe. Within a single wonderful week no fewer than three of its inhabitants—Mme. Marie Bouant, M. Georges Moreau, M. Henri Grand—have celebrated their hundredth birthday, become centenarians; and they can eat without false teeth, and they are blessed with a mighty profusion of children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and great-great-grandchildren. Thus in a village of 250 souls one may positively behold and marvel at three distinct branches of five generations. And naturally, therefore, has the mayor of Poix (himself a peasant, in a blue blouse), organized a banquet in honor of the amazing Mme. Bouant, and the extraordinary M. Moreau and Grand, aged one hundred and still flourishing. Never such a scene! Here, seated at long tables under a tent, three hundred guests—important officials, guests amongst them, too. Slim, elegant old M. Hector de Faloise, for instance, Senator of the Department. Then, MM. Bourgeois and Bertrand, deputies. Then M. Rivet, mayor of Poix, and the representatives of the neighboring villages of Beurre, Buisson, Liseron, and Merle; and local stationmasters and schoolmasters, and three or four gendarmes, and a marquis's son, and a count's son, and a chief of a small fire brigade (in uniform), and next to me—old Pere Poinin, the 'incomparable,' who grips my arm emotionally and observes—'Such is Poix.'"

THE EXTERMINATION OF THE BACHELOR

Max Nordau Says He Can't Be Forced to Marry.

Dr. Max Nordau, writing in the Montreal Standard, deals with some startling figures that seem to point to race suicide. There are two main reasons for the decline in the birth rate in France and elsewhere; moral depravity and the prevalence of the bachelor. Dr. Nordau criticises an ingenious suggestion that a heavy term of military service should be the portion of reluctant bachelors. "Prof. Lannelongue is confident that these measures would put an end to the depressing idleness of the man and give him abundant work day and night. He was very unwise not to offer his outline of the law to a vaudeville manager or the editor of a magazine for a formal opinion. With their habit of inventing brilliant situations in life they would have called his attention to very serious defects and omissions in the work, which have apparently escaped his ingenious direct mode of thought. It is very fine to tell young men that they must marry at the age of 29, and to impose upon those who rebel a heavy military service. But our well-developed sense of justice is indignant that anyone should be punished on account of a neglect for which he is not dependent upon his will. It requires two persons of different sexes for a marriage. Suppose that a young man desires nothing better than to obey the command of the law-giver, but up to his 29th year he has not found the kindred soul who is ready to make him happy as the angel of his domestic hearth. The young fellow not favored by fortune appears before the military authorities and says: 'I have sought for years a woman who would come to an understanding with me, but have not found one. Perhaps I do not have the gift of attraction. I am not handsome. I am not rich. I am not handsome. I am not entertaining. In short, I am a bachelor in spite of my willingness to place a wedding-ring on a girl's slender finger.' Will the authorities say in answer to this pitiable man: 'That is no concern of ours; either marry at once or march to the barracks!' That would be intolerable injustice. If the state, under threat of punishment, requires young men to marry at a certain age, then it must also offer them the possibility of obeying its command under all circumstances. It must officially deliver to them the bride whom they could not find themselves. The necessary completion of Prof. Lannelongue's and his chief's governmental matrimonial intervention."

FIRST SAMPLE OF BRITISH RADIUM

Precious Mineral Extracted in England—Worth £11,000.

The first radium that has been extracted in Great Britain from British ore was exhibited in London on Oct. 26, at the factory of the British Radium Corporation at Limehouse. The occasion was marked by a gathering at the factory. Up to now 550 milligrammes of pure radium have been produced, and the process adopted by Sir William Ramsay and his chief assistant, Mr. Norman Whitehouse, is so rapid that radium which has been extracted in two months at Limehouse could not be extracted in less than a year by the latest method in use on the continent. The gentlemen who visited the works were shown a quantity of 10 per cent. radium, which at the present time is worth about £11,000. It is stored in a specially constructed safe, lined with lead and asbestos and with remarkable precautions are taken to insure its safety. Pitchblende, the mineral from which radium is obtained, is very rare, and only two deposits of serious magnitude have so far been located, in Cornwall and in Austria. Explaining the method of work and its results, Sir William Ramsay said that the pitchblende ore was obtained from the Tremethy mines, near St. Ives, Cornwall, and delivered in a concentrated form at Limehouse. There the uranium and iron are precipitated, and the next stage is to dissolve

Wainwright

THE BUFFALO TOWN OF THE GOLDEN WEST

A Second Saskatoon

From the Wainwright Star, Sept. 22, 1910.—

On the 14th day of August last, the order-in-council incorporating Wainwright as a town took effect, and another milestone in the brief but remarkable history of the place was reached. The next stage will be incorporation as a city, and if the citizens work together in a spirit of unity, and keep pushing for settlement, and reaching out after industries, it will not be many years before this step can be taken. Wainwright is situated in the heart of a very fertile district, and is a railway centre of importance. On the east there is no city nearer than Saskatoon, and on the west Edmonton is the nearest centre of importance. Why should Wainwright not become a second Saskatoon? A branch line is to be built from here, which will mean the concentration of more train crews here, and will make this a distributing centre for the villages that will spring up along the line. Already quite a few big concerns have made this a distributing point for a considerable territory.

From Saskatoon to Edmonton is 225 miles. In all this distance Wainwright leads today in population, and there is no reason why it should not continue to lead. In fact, there is no reason why Wainwright should not be a second Saskatoon in population and business.

Think what this should mean to those who buy property now in Wainwright. In 1906 had a population of 3,011. Now it has 12,000. In 1906 Saskatoon was about six years old. Wainwright is only two years old, and has a population of 1,000, which is more than Saskatoon had at the end of its second year.

It is not unreasonable to expect that Wainwright, with practically every advantage that Saskatoon enjoys, and some that it does not, should in a few years have a population as large as Saskatoon has now.

A few years ago lots could be bought in Saskatoon as cheaply as they can be bought in Wainwright today. These same lots which Saskatoon has multiplied in value several times. If Wainwright should become a second Saskatoon, those who buy lots there now, will make a profit of from 100 to 1,000 per cent on their investment in a few years.

Big Yields in Wainwright District

Eighty-five bushels of oats to the acre—27 to 37 bushels of wheat to the acre—these are some of the yields in the Wainwright district this year. J. H. Mills, who homesteaded the Southwest 1/4 sec. 24, Tp. 44, R. 6, recently threshed a field of oats which averaged 85 bushels to the acre. A field of wheat on the same farm averaged 27 bushels to the acre. A farmer named Adamson, near Wainwright, had 50 acres that averaged 37 bushels of wheat to the acre. In view of the fact that in many sections of Western Canada the grain crops were exceptionally light this year, these fields prove the superiority of the Wainwright district. More breeding is being done in this district this year than ever before, and the object being to promote the growth of the largest in the history of the district. This means a big increase in Wainwright's trade. It is announced that work will begin soon on the highway bridge over the Battle River near Wainwright. This will bring to Wainwright the trade of a large and prosperous farming community which is now cut off from the town a good part of the year by the river. Minnesota parties are now negotiating for the purchase of 10,000 acres in the Wainwright district, to be settled with farmers from the States in the early spring. If the land is secured it will all be broken up at once.

Why These Lots Are Offered for Sale

The Townsite of Wainwright was laid out about two years ago by the Grand Trunk Pacific, and lots were offered for sale. The railroad had selected Wainwright as one of its Divisional Headquarters, and located there extensive improvements, including 14 miles of sidewalk, a 12-stall cement roundhouse, repair shops, and office buildings for division officials. The town was not extensively advertised, and the lots were sold for the most part to those who through a personal visit or through friends became convinced of the town's future. The G. T. P. retained a considerable amount of land adjoining the original townsite on three sides, in order to provide for the town's future growth. It has now for the first a method of disposing of this land. The portion immediately adjoining the original townsite on the northeast, and just across the street from the new $18,000 public school. The lots in this subdivision are being offered at low prices, the object being to promote the growth of the town, rather than to get the largest amount of money possible for the lots. What the Grand Trunk Pacific desires most to accomplish by putting these lots on the market, is to make room for the natural growth of the town in the direction in which it will logically grow, attract people to Wainwright, and thus increase the freight and passenger traffic into and out of the town. It has been the policy of the G. T. P. to sell its town property at a low price, and give the people who buy it and improve it the benefit of the advance in value. This policy is being carried out at Wainwright, and the people who buy these lots now will share in the growth of the town and the advance in realty values, as the purchasers of lots two years ago, when the townsite was first laid out, have shared in its growth up to this time. By purchasing lots from the Grand Trunk Pacific, you take no risk whatever. It is different from buying from irresponsible parties.

the radium out of the clear liquid. When precipitated, the radium is converted into radium bromide, and by repeated crystallization this bromide was separated into various grades of commercial saleability. "The actual time occupied in getting the radium liquors is a week," said Sir William, "and the crystallization which goes on afterwards takes a couple of months. The last continental process which I saw described last week occupies a year." As illustrating the certainty of the process in use at Limehouse, he mentioned that of 530 milligrammes produced, only one milligramme was left behind in the liquid. Up to now just half a gramme had been extracted at Limehouse, but the process is now going on continuously, and the works are laid out to produce one gramme per month. So far only five or six grammes are known to have been produced in the whole world. "It has been supposed," said Sir William, "that Austrian pitchblende is particularly rich in radium, but it is no richer than any other. Moreover, the supply of pitchblende in Cornwall, as far as I can judge, is much larger than in Austria. There is no other source of supply of such magnitude known at present. The supply of radium in Great Britain is assured." Questioned as to the practical uses of radium, Sir William Ramsay said: "It has been used to cure rodent ulcer, which is somehow allied to cancer. Then there are gases given off called radium emanations, which dissolve in water, and these have been found extremely effective in cases of rheumatism, gout, and neuritis." Sir William added that the energy of radium diminished so slowly that one-half only would have spent itself in 1,700 years.

What Home Folks Think of Wainwright

Of the 80 odd employees of the Grand Trunk Pacific who make Wainwright their headquarters, one-half are owners of Wainwright real estate. Eight of them, including the station agent, one engineer, two firemen, a postal clerk and a foreman, have bought lots within the past few days, and expect to build on them next year. Seventy per cent of the citizens of Wainwright own their own homes. During 1910 upwards of 100 new buildings were erected at a total cost of upwards of $150,000, an average of $1,500 each. They included a number of residences costing from $2,500 to $5,000 each. When home folks do not hesitate to invest their money in real estate and improvements, it is pretty safe for non-residents to make investments in that town. A live growing town like Wainwright is the town in which to invest for big, quick profits.

43 MILES ON SOLID SALT ROAD

Wonders of the New Railroad From Salt Lake City to San Francisco.

At many points on the line of the new Western Pacific Railroad from Salt Lake City to San Francisco there was not room enough in the canon for both river and railroad and solid walls of masonry had to be built to carry the tracks above the stream.

At other points the sharp curves in the canon have sent the tracks back and forth from one side to the other on steel bridges and high trestles. In building the line material and workmen frequently had to be let down the sides of the canon by ropes hundreds of feet in length to start construction on new sections.

Wagon roads are everywhere impossible, says Leslie's Weekly. At last after endless turnings and twists in fighting its way through 150 miles of the canon the tracks come out into the broad valley at Orville, over which for countless ages the Feather River has poured debris from its mountain fastnesses.

So much gold did the river bring down that the soil down to the solid bedrock is being dug up by dredges and washed for its gold. Large tracts of land given over to olives, oranges and other fruits are being now torn to pieces in the ceaseless hunt for gold, which is being found in such quantities that the miners are beginning to rival in their wealth the pioneers in the gold fields of the state. In contrast to this long stretch of

Building for the Future

Confident that the population of the town will increase rapidly in the future as it has in the past, the people of Wainwright are building for the future, rather than for the present. The Town Council, in planning public improvements, keeps the future growth of the town constantly in view. Wainwright was the first town on the G. T. P. between Saskatoon and Edmonton to put down cement sidewalks. It now has half a mile of cement sidewalk in the business section. It is now just completing one of the finest and most expensive public school buildings in any of the new towns between Winnipeg and Edmonton—a two-story, basement and attic brick building containing four classrooms, two music and chemical rooms, a teachers' room, and two large indoor playgrounds for the pupils, the whole costing $15,000. The school grounds occupy one entire block, 300 by 500 feet.

A sidewalk has just been completed from the business section to the school, at a cost of $1,500. The Town Council recently appropriated $2,000 for the construction of four fire cisterns each 10 feet square and 35 feet deep, to be filled with water for fire protection. The Council is now planning to build a Town Hall and Fire Headquarters to cost $15,000 to $20,000. It is also planned to build a large rink for indoor ice skating and for hockey and curling matches.

Wainwright doesn't do anything by halves. The citizens believe in the town's future, and in making provisions for it. Certainly the town's growth in the past and the influences back of it justify their faith in it.

Nearly a Thousand Buffalo Now at Wainwright

Recent additions to the herd of buffalo in the National Buffalo Park at Wainwright have brought the total number in the herd up to upwards of 950. Of these 150 are calves, born in 1910. There are still about 50 head on the Pablo Ranch in Montana, remnant of the herd purchased by the Dominion Government. They include 35 "outlaw" bulls, which it has been impossible so far to round up. Another roundup will be made in the near future, and as many of the remnant of the herd as possible will be captured and shipped to Wainwright. The remainder will be run down and killed for their heads and hides. A buffalo head, mounted, is valued at $600, and a good buffalo robe is valued at $150. A number of sportsmen, including Mayor Pauling and L. Forster, of Wainwright, will go to Montana to participate in this last buffalo hunt on the continent. Each of the hunters will pay $250 for the privilege of assisting in running down the "outlaws." Howard Douglas, Government Commissioner of Parks, who superintended the removal of the buffalo from Montana to Wainwright, recently predicted that Wainwright would continue to grow rapidly in population. The Dominion Government, he said, would advertise the town through the National Buffalo Park, which would attract many people to Wainwright.

How Money Is Made in Town Lots

A couple of weeks ago we sold three lots in Wainwright to a Winnipeg barber for $200 each—one-tenth cash and the remainder in nine monthly payments without interest. Since then the Town Council has planned to build a $15,000 to $20,000 Town Hall on the same street, and within a block of these lots. The building of this Town Hall will add at least 50 per cent to the value of the three lots. It is safe to say that the owner will be able to realize a profit of 50 to 100 per cent on these lots before he has completed his payments on them. As he does not pay any interest on the deferred payments, and will not have to pay any taxes on the lots until 1912, it is easy to figure that he has made an exceptionally good investment. But if he had waited a few weeks he would have lost this opportunity for big profit, because if we had those lots for sale now we would not sell them at $200.

Every day counts in these growing Western towns. New industries are being established, public improvements are being planned and something is happening every day that adds to the value of real estate. The time to buy is NOW—TODAY. Tomorrow the lot which you can buy today for $100 to $150 may be worth 50 to 100 per cent more. You cannot make a mistake by investing in Grand Trunk Pacific lots in Wainwright. They are in the section of the town which, because of its location will be most popular. They are high and level, overlooking the business section and the railroad yards, and convenient to school and churches, and within a few minutes' walk of the business centre. Sidewalks have been constructed and streets graded right up to the subdivision. Wainwright is one of the leading Divisional Points on the Main Line of the Grand Trunk Pacific; has the National Buffalo Park; has immediately tributary to it one of the richest farming districts in the Dominion; and is already a wholesale distributing centre of importance. It is bound to continue to be the leading town between Saskatoon and Edmonton. As it grows in population real estate values will advance. Now is the time, and Wainwright is the place to invest for big, quick profits.

STRICTEST DRAMATIC CENSOR.

Vienna once possessed the strictest dramatic censor ever known, in the person of Frantz Hoegelin, who held that post in the Austrian capital at the beginning of the last century, notes the London Chronicle. Hoegelin published a manual for the guidance of censors. "A pair of lovers should never be allowed to appear on the stage alone. They must always be accompanied by a third person of mature years." Marriages out of one's class were also strictly forbidden by Hoegelin on the stage, and he quotes an instance of a play of which he refused to pass because the author made the hero, Count Valdemar, marry a gardener's daughter. "Such marriages have unfortunately been known to occur in real life but that is no reason why they should be allowed on the stage," he said.

Three Doctors Attended Her.
Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup Cured Her.

It has long been known that the balsamic odor of the newly cut pine tree and its invigorating lungs and consumptive improve and revive amidst the perfume of the pines. Since but few can command the luxury of a visit to the pines, it will be good news to many to know that the essential healing principle of the pine has been separated, and refined, and combined with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines of recognized worth in the manufacture of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

Mrs. Charles McDermott, Bathurst, N.B., writes: "I thought I would write and let you know the benefit I have received through the use of your Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Three years ago I had Consumption and had three doctors attending me, and they were very much alarmed about my condition. I was so weak and miserable I could not do my household work. While looking through your B.B.B. Almanac I saw that Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup was good for weak lungs so I got a bottle and after taking ten bottles I was completely cured. At that time I weighed 135 pounds and now weigh 172, a gain of 37 pounds in three years. I am now in the house all the time and would not be without it for anything as I owe my life to it."

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had a bad case of leucorrhoea and falling of the uterus and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully until I began taking your medicine. It has also helped other women to whom I have recommended it."—Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ontario.

Gardiner, Me.—"I was a great sufferer from a female disease. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me in three months."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R.F.D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Maine.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It cures many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration, and every day brings fresh evidence of the great work they are doing. One of the latest to sing their praises in this neighborhood is Mrs. Emel Carlson. Here is what she is telling her many friends:

"For about two years I was sorely troubled with Kidney Disease brought on by a strain. My head ached, my sleep was broken and unrefreshing, and I was always tired and nervous. The least exertion would cause me to perspire freely, and my perspiration had an unpleasant odor. "Three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me. They are certainly the best medicine I ever used. "I have had many of Mrs. Carlson's symptoms. My kidneys were wrong. Make them right with Dodd's Kidney Pills."

THE DOWAGER QUEENS OF EUROPE

By Mabel Keightley,
Author of "The World's Heroine," "Mother," "Life," etc.

By the death of Edward VII. of England this past spring, one more dowager-queen was added to Europe's list of dowager-queens. Russia has her Marie Dagmar, Italy has her Margherita, Portugal her Amelie, Holland her Emma, and Spain her Christina. Even France has her ill-fated Eugenie.

Alexandra, the queen-mother of England, is possibly the best known, though the present upheaval in Portugal brings Amelie much in the limelight of publicity. The Princess Alexandra was the eldest daughter of the late King Christian of Denmark. She was much famed for her beauty, and rumor tells us that Edward, then Prince of Wales, fell in love with her. She was, however, married to the Prince of Wales, and the fact remains she became the Princess of Wales, March 10, 1863. Her beauty, intelligence and tact soon won the hearts of the British people, and when Edward ascended the throne in 1901 her popularity, if possible, was increased.

The queen-mother is a highly accomplished lady, and her position as it can be called, is photography. Her work with her camera will compare favorably with that of the best professional, and the proceeds from the sale of these gems are given to charity, of which cause she is a great worker.

In the face of the great social duties which her position as consort to the King of England demanded of her, her duty as a wife and mother always predominated. Despite her years, the queen-mother still retains her beauty and youthful appearance, and though Queen Mary is well thought of and popular in a certain sense, her following never equal that of Alexandra.

The sister of England's dowager is the royal widow of Russia, Marie Sophie Frederika Dagmar, and three years her junior. Since the death of Alexander II. sixteen years ago, Marie Dagmar has wielded great influence over her son, Nicholas II., the present Czar. She has advised and has been Russia's emissary to other courts on many occasions.

Owing to the ill-health of the Czarine, the one-time lovely Princess Alexandra of Hesse, she has been said to dominate and make the latter's life most unhappy, but this may be without foundation, for living quietly at Gatchina, she and her daughter-in-law meet seldom.

In defiance of the troubled times she has passed through since her widowhood, and the sorrows she endured during her reign as empress, she, like Alexandra of England, still retains her youth and beauty. The sisters are very similar in appearance, and a strong bond of affection exists between them.

The dowager-queen of Italy, Margherita, is a daughter of the late Duke of Genoa, and married the late King Humbert in Turin on April 21, 1863. Possibly no more accomplished queen ever shared a throne than Margherita. She was a pianist, a singer, a master of the violin, piano, lute and mandolin. In literature she excels. She is a splendid linguist, is familiar with the tongue of Horace and Cicero, is a charming conversationalist, charitable, courageous, and altogether a much beloved and delightful woman.

The assassination of her husband, to whom she was deeply devoted, came as a crushing blow. She was fortunately instrumental in preventing a prior attack, and the fatal deed left her for a time inconsolable.

She, like Marie Dagmar of Russia, is a mighty figure in the government of her country. It has been stated her objection prevented the marriage of the Duke of Abruzzi to Miss Katherine Elkins, the beautiful American, though now rumor tells us the objection has been overruled.

Amelie of Portugal is one of the most supremely beautiful and intellectual of the dowager-queens of Europe. Her father was the Comte de Paris, and though she shared the throne with the late Carlos, her married life was most happy.

Always charitable and studious, she secured a degree of medicine and practiced upon the poor of Lisbon, of course, incognito.

That bravery is not the least of the dowager-queen's superior traits has been proven when she protected the present king by sheltering him in her arms at the time of the cowardly assassination of her husband and the crown prince, her son, on Feb. 1, 1907, when the royal family were driving in the streets of Lisbon.

She still, more or less, figures largely in affairs of state, owing to the youth of Manuel, who succeeded to the throne of Portugal, and the handsomely monarch of the old world, an inheritance from Amelie of Portugal.

Emma, mother of Wilhelmina, of Holland, though little heard of during these late years, proved herself, when called upon, to be a remarkably sagacious and worthy consort to the ill-reputed King William III. of Holland, and a worthy regent to the youthful Wilhelmina.

Although an invalid, she held the hand of her son, and for nearly fourteen years, but upon her daughter's ascension to the throne she was still singing their praises.

Still SINGING THEIR PRAISES

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS DOING GREAT WORK IN SAS-KATCHEWAN.

Mrs. Emel Carlson Tells How Quickly and Completely They Cured Her Kidney Trouble.

Colonsay, Sask., Nov. 11.—(Special.)—No remedy has done as much for the wheat growers of Saskatchewan as Dodd's Kidney Pills. They occupy a place in the family medicine chest on nearly every farm, and every day brings fresh evidence of the great work they are doing. One of the latest to sing their praises in this neighborhood is Mrs. Emel Carlson. Here is what she is telling her many friends:

"For about two years I was sorely troubled with Kidney Disease brought on by a strain. My head ached, my sleep was broken and unrefreshing, and I was always tired and nervous. The least exertion would cause me to perspire freely, and my perspiration had an unpleasant odor. "Three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me. They are certainly the best medicine I ever used. "I have had many of Mrs. Carlson's symptoms. My kidneys were wrong. Make them right with Dodd's Kidney Pills."

gladly relinquished her responsibilities, and, retiring from public life, now lives quietly and peacefully, enjoying the sincere affection and regard of the people of Holland.

Quite similar to Emma of Holland is that of Maria Christina of Spain. Similar and still far greater.

Christiana was an Austrian archduchess, a quiet, unassuming, little woman—quite unaccustomed to the pomp and splendor of court life. For a time she was abbess in a nunnery, but left to become the second wife of the dissolute Alfonso XII.

She was left a widow at 27—Alfonso's death having occurred in 1885 at the time of a revolutionary upheaval. Six months later Don Alfonso XIII., Leon Fernando Maria Santiago Isidor Pascual Marican Antonio, King of Spain, Jerusalem and many other lands, was born. His coming into the world settled the upheaval of the political party and the queen-regent took up her duties.

That those duties were arduous and turbulent is a fact well known. Her burdens were many and varied, but she came out of them triumphant, and has given to Spain a young king that is idolized as no king of Spain has been for centuries.

The empress of past glories, Eugenie of France, is now an old, sorrowful, broken-hearted woman of 84.

She was the daughter of a Spanish count—the Count of Montijo. She was a charming, lovely and vivacious girl.

FLYING IN DREAMS

The Sensation Becomes Less Frequent as Maturity Is Reached.

The sensation of flying is one of the earliest to appear in the dreams of childhood. It seems to become less frequent after middle age. Beaunis states that in his case it ceased at the age of 50, says a writer in the Atlantic. It is sometimes the last sensation at the moment of death.

To rise, to fall, to glide away has been the last conscious sensation, recalled by those who survived, being dying but have afterward been brought back to life. Pieron has noted this sensation at the moment of death in a number of cases, usually accompanied by a sense of well-being. The cases he describes were mostly tubercular and included individuals of both sexes and with atheistic as well as religious beliefs.

In all this sensation to which expression was given was one of flying, of moving upward. In some death was peaceful, in others painful. In one case a girl died clasping the iron bars of the bed, in horror of being borne upward.

Pieron associates this sensation with the similar sensation of rising and floating in dreams and with that of moving upward and resting on the air.

WOMAN'S CROWNING ABSURDITY

Some of the Fantastic Things She Has Done to Her Hair.

Recent feminine hairdressing, which has come in for no end of criticism and ridicule, is simplicity itself compared with some of the previous achievements. An English writer in the Queen records the appearance of high tortoise shell combs at a recent ball and intimates that they were coming in again because of the prevalence of directorie fashions.

In Queen Anne's time the hair was worn in curls down the back. Caps too were worn; also cuffs tied under the chin, a most becoming fashion. Then a reaction took place, the dresses became wider in the skirt, and by 1730 they were out of all bounds, and toward the middle of the century they stood off at right angles from the waist.

With these hoops the hair was dressed in quite a different style. The head appeared small in comparison with the body, and close-fitting caps or coifs were worn.

Then the penultima began to swing the other way and a few years later the ascension of George III., 1760, structures of horsehair, wool, and hemp began to be worn, with the addition of metal plates and powder, and by 1775 these heads, as they were termed, became prodigious; in some cases they were three feet high, often surmounted by models of ships in full sail, or wheeled carriages, dolls, spun glass flowers or feather plumes.

Such structures, made up of materials such as meal, etc., were insupportable. Three weeks of the most tedious weather was hot was considered quite long enough for a period for a "head" to be worn before reconstruction. These don't, however, caused great discomfort to the wearer at the time, and the articles known as back scratchers became necessary. So absurd was this abnormal hairdressing that caricaturists made sport of the subject, depicting women with heads so high that staiders had to be used in reaching them.

Then about 1780 the skirt became smaller and the "head" lower, but plumes were worn. These were forbidden at court by Queen Charlotte, but without avail. As the "head" diminished in size the number of plumes increased to three in number, as we see in many old prints of the period, such as those of the old Bath assemblies in 1757, when leghorn picture hats and hair in curls were worn on the parade.

Owing to a scarcity of flour at the end of the eighteenth century, the hair was imposed by Pitt upon the wearers of hair powder, thus causing the decline of the craze, in excessive hairdressing both in men and women. About this time the small hoop disappeared and the skirts became ooser and more flowing.

At the beginning of the nineteenth century, when French and English dress trusted each other and Pitt was in office, the Empire style of dress was in vogue and that which was styled a la Bastille. The hair was arranged in loose locks about the face and the head was generally swathed in figured ribbons and silks; jeweled bands and ornaments were added to match the dress, with girle or sash around the waist.

There were also soft clinging garments of the classical style, such as and had had many love affairs prior to her capturing the affections of Louis Napoleon in 1851. Her beauty and wit intoxicated him. He made love to her ardently and openly, but wishing an alliance with one of royal blood, he offered her a position as mistress of his heart and home, but not his throne. In answer she made this famous reply: "Your majesty must surely know that the only avenue of approach is through the door of the chapel." They were married at the altar of Notre Dame two years after their first meeting.

Eugenie was without doubt the evil genius of Napoleon III. Through her persuasion he sent Maximilian to Mexico, with its disastrous results; she incited the wrath of the King of Italy, and thus lost his support. She was the cause of Austria withholding aid when it was so badly needed. Her disobedience to Napoleon's commands was responsible for her de-thronement. Her very life was in danger through her intrigues. In disguise she escaped to England with the aid of an American dentist, a Dr. Evans. A few years later, upon his release from Germany, the fallen emperor joined Eugenie and her son at their modest home in Kent, where he died. Eugenie's son, Prince Louis, her pride and hope, was sent to South Africa in 1897 at the age of 17, to separate him from a lovely girl of humble parentage whom he loved, and there he fell pierced by the assegaes of the savage Zulus.

Unlike our other dowager-queens, Eugenie cannot say, "I have fought a good fight." She was the cause of Mexico's disaster, and the pitiful condition of the country, which she caused her husband's defeat, her son's death, her husband's downfall, and now, alone with the memories of the luxurious life she led, she is a broken woman, near by a mausoleum which she built for her husband and son. Poor Eugenie! Poor Eugenie!

MABEL KEIGHTLEY.

A GREAT FIELD FOR THE DOCTORS

Young Physicians Wanting a Franchise Might Go to China.

Personal hygiene is a matter of little importance in China as yet. His excellency Wu Ting rang realized this, and in his lucid remarks that China is a cleaner country than Americans, because they have to take a bath only once a month or so. "Physical exercise for the sake of better health is never indulged in, says the Chinese, and as well known, the heavy set, well-rounded body is greatly esteemed as a type of well being.

Municipal cleanliness up to the last few years has been entirely neglected. Sewers are found only in the cities occupied by foreigners. The wells are generally surface wells, with possibilities of contamination wholly unconscionable.

The belief, so often expressed, that "cold water is poison and must therefore be boiled and used as tea and otherwise," has probably saved the lives of millions. But just why their cold water is poison has never occurred to them. Drains are almost never present. Stoves are of such a construction that the rooms are filled with smoke and soot.

As a result of this lack of knowledge along the lines of personal, household and municipal hygiene sickness is found everywhere. In certain cities cholera is always present. Plague still runs riot in some of the centres of population.

Tuberculosis is seen on every hand. Smallpox is so common that there is a certain expression, as they speak of some child, "He is so young that he has not had smallpox yet." Epidemics at this hour are raging quite unchecked by native endeavor in some of the Chinese provinces.

Because of his ignorance of human anatomy, the Chinese physician knows nothing of surgery, and he is particularly afraid of the knife. Conditions are seen every day in Chinese streets that would be most easily remedied by surgical science.

Acupuncture needles and instruments for scarification largely constitute his list of instruments. But perhaps this is fortunate. These needles are thrust, regardless of possible infection, into muscles, joints and various organs of the body that the evil spirits may escape.

The treatment of the insane has been in all periods of Chinese history in most inhuman. Even today it is not uncommon to see people in chains or imprisoned amid unspeakable conditions who are—perhaps only have been—insane. Only ignorance and superstition can explain these conditions.

The treatment of the teeth is conditionally attended to. In cases of intolerable pain and decay the pulling of the teeth is the only resort. Usually each village has one or more tooth pullers, who, seated at some prominent corner, for a few cents will pull any or all of the teeth of whoever in desperation is driven to them. Immense numbers of cases of necrosis of the jaw and other conditions are found, due to this enforced neglect.

NOSES THAT SUFFER.

The humorous view is naturally that which comes uppermost in considering a society known as the "Association of Noses That Suffer," recently organized in aesthetic Paris. It is interesting to find, however, that some physicians are serious about the matter. The well-known French physiologist, Pere, has made experiments which he thinks demonstrate that many odors, whether agreeable or unpleasant, have a marked fatiguing effect upon normal human beings, even to the point of encouraging neurasthenia. Of course, in the general investigation in the new and untried fields which science encourages at present, there are inevitably many errors, but it is equally true that we are learning every year a great deal about the human system and the conditions which increase or decrease its efficiency. If odors do act as stimulants or narcotics, it will be useful to know it. If they do not, continues Collier's Weekly, this movement will pass away with so many others. To take one illustration, if it is true that headache is frequently produced by the odor of honeysuckle, lily or carnation, only good can come of the knowledge. All these new psychological allegations are worth consideration, whether the percentage of them that amount to anything after careful examination be small or large.

AN ODD NUGGET OF GOLD.

There have been many large and oddly shaped gold nuggets found in the United States and elsewhere, but the oddest of them all was that discovered at the Midhas mine, on Sulky Gully, near Melbourne, Australia, in 1887. The nugget was flat and almost the exact counterpart in contour of a colossal human hand held open, with the exception of the thumb and forefinger, which were closed together in a manner so as to make it appear that the thumb was holding the finger in place. Its greatest length was 12½ inches and its greatest width 8 inches. It was of the very purest gold, with but a little foreign substance adhering, mostly between the "fingers," and weighed 617 ounces. It was found in the northwest main drive of the Midhas mine, 120 feet below the surface of the earth, and at a spot only 50 feet from where the famous Lady Brassy nugget was discovered the year before. It weighed 51 pounds of pure gold.

GOOD HEALTH FOR YOUNG GIRLS

WHAT IS NEEDED IS THE RICH, RED BLOOD DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS ACTUALLY MAKE.

Perhaps you have already noticed that your daughter in her "teens" has developed a fitful temper, is restless and excitable. In that case remember that the march of years is bringing her to womanhood, and at this time a great responsibility rests upon you as parents. If your daughter is pale, complains of weakness, dizziness, or "feels all tired out" after a little exertion, if she tells of headaches, backaches, or pain in the side, do not disregard these warnings. Your daughter needs help for she is most probably anemic—that is, bloodless.

Should you notice any of these signs, lose no time, but procure Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for her unhealthy girlhood is bound to lead to unhealthy womanhood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills enrich impoverished blood and by doing so they repair waste and prevent disease. They give to sickly, drooping girls, health, brightness and charm, with color in the cheeks, bright eyes, a lightness of step and high spirits. A case typical of thousands cured through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is that of Miss Grace Cunningham, Winnipeg, Man., who says: "I really cannot say enough in praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as they have made me feel like a new girl. I was pale and almost bloodless, and think on an average I missed at least three school sessions a week, because I felt like a broken-down person, and too weak to do anything."

The doctor's medicine I took did little for me, but I kept me in hope. I gained strength and color, and I was advised to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they soon made me feel like a new person. Day by day I gained strength and color, and I have your medicine to thank for it."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers, or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50. Write to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.

AGONY ON OPERATING TABLE

Did Not Remove Stone in Bladder GIN PILLS Passed It.

Joliet, P. Q.

"During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone in the Bladder. He decided on an operation and was assisted by another doctor. They said the calculus was larger than a bean and too hard to crush and they could not take it out.

I returned home suffering greatly and did not know what to do, but was recommended by a friend to try GIN PILLS. I bought a box and found relief from the pain at once. I took a second and a third box of GIN PILLS, after which I went back to the specialist. He told me the calculus was reduced in size, still he could not remove it, although he tried for two and a half hours.

I returned home again and continued to take GIN PILLS as they reduced the pain very much, but I did not expect that they would relieve me of the stone, but to my great joy I passed the stone on Oct. 3, and am now a well man and very happy.

I am sending the stone in to you so that you can see for yourself what a great work GIN PILLS did for me. GIN PILLS are the best medicine in the world, and because they did so much for me, I will recommend them all the rest of my life."

WHY THE WIND BLOWS MECHANISM OF WEATHER

[By A. T. in T. P.'s Weekly.]

The recent report of the astronomer-royal on the weather for the year ending May 10, 1910, though mostly of a technical character, must have attracted a good deal of attention, and probably some speculation as to the possibility of accurately noting the weather in our changeable climate. The report dealt with a very memorable year—a year in which the mean temperature was below the average, the horizontal movement of the wind much above the average, the pressure of wind so great as to cause two storms of exceptional severity and duration, and the rainfall excessive. The general newspaper reader wants to know what causes all this, and how the mechanism of Nature is set a-going so that the result is good or bad weather, or that queer kind which is described as "all sorts of weather." Meteorology, most of the laws that rule the weather are known. Heat, moisture, wind, and lightning are mysterious things no longer. The invisible wheels which govern the weather in one or more of these conditions can be almost seen at their work.

Hot and Cold Air.
The common idea is that weather depends on the heat or lack of sunshine. The truth is that it depends on the direction and movement of wind. Warmth certainly comes from the sun, but wind is the distributor of the warmth. Visiting any place that is warmer than itself, wind always takes some of the warmth away with it. Visiting any place that is colder than itself, wind brings it. This implies, of course, that wind moves; but what makes it move? It moves by its own weight. Wind is simply drifting air, and the drift is caused by the very same power which draws a falling stone towards the earth. Nobody knows how far the atmosphere of our earth reaches above the land and the sea on which it rests. It is known, however, that it consists of gaseous particles, all trying to get away from each other, and that, under certain conditions, they can be compelled to come closer together, contraction, or forced to fly apart, expansion. A quart bottle, for example, holds 22 grains of air at the temperature of 70 degrees. If the bottle be cooled by submerging it in ice, the air inside contracts, and when this occurs, more air rushes in through the bottle's neck. The quart of air now weighs more than 22 grains. If the bottle be heated, the air it contains expands; its tiny particles fly further asunder, and many of them escape from the bottle altogether. There is still a quart of air, but it weighs much less than the original 22 grains. Now, consider the earth and the sea under the influence of varying degrees of the sun's heat. Where the heat is greatest, the air is made lighter and expands. Where the heat is least, the air is unexpanded and heavy. Both the hot and the cold, being heavier, is drawn more effectively down to the ground. It does so it drives the lighter air up out of its way, just as a lump of lead dropped into a pail of water forces some of the water upwards. If the earth were equally warm by every part, and continued at constant temperature, wind could not exist. "Blows" because of heat and gravitation. In other words, air moves from the place where its weight or pressure is most, towards the place where its weight or pressure is least.

Two Currents.
There are two great conflicting air-currents which influence the atmosphere of the whole earth. One rushes from the poles to the equator, and the other from the equator to the poles. The polar current—coming as it does from those regions of eternal ice, where the air is cold and heavy—lies low, and as near the surface of the earth as it can get; the equatorial current—warmed, expanded, and made lighter by the sun—lies high, and in an opposite direction to the polar current. There is thus a constant circulation. At the equator a stream of heated air is always rising. It rises because of its relative lightness, just as a balloon rises. Simultaneously and in the opposite direction, a colder and denser current descends from the north and south of the equatorial belt. The one current is constantly feeding the other, and occupying the place which the other has vacated. The flow goes on without pause. In the lower latitudes, with their variable winds, it is sometimes the one and sometimes the other of these currents which prevails at a particular place.

The Earth's Rotation.
But wind is not always due north in one hemisphere and due south in the other. There is a mighty force which directs it otherwise. This force is derived from the earth's rotation on its axis. It was John Hadley, an English mathematician, and the intimate friend of Newton, who first announced this cause as an explanation of the trade winds. The air being a gaseous envelope, which encases the spinning globe, shares in the movement and spins round with the same velocity as the surface on which it rests. The direction of the spin is from west to east, but its velocity varies at different points on the earth's surface. In the equatorial regions, every spot on the line of the equator will describe a circle equal to the circumference of the earth. The velocity there must be about 1,600 miles an hour—the calculation being based on the fact that the rotation is completed in about 24 hours, and that the earth's circumference is about 24,900 miles. North or south of the equator, the velocity of rotation becomes less, because the circle described by any spot (as will be seen on examining the circles of latitude on a globe), will get gradually smaller. Keeping in mind that the air comes from places where the earth's spin is least, what happens to it when it reaches the equator? It is not at all underfoot. It cannot accommodate itself all at once to the great change of motion. Everybody has experienced the sudden pitch in a carriage when it is started from rest. So the wind lags behind the earth in its swift rotation from west to east. It reaches the equatorial regions from the northeast on the north side, and from the southeast on the south side, of the equator.

Our Climate.
The prevalent winds in this country come from the southwest. Their origin is partly due to the air which rises from the heated equatorial belt. Blowing from regions of high velocity, these upper currents move faster than the earth beneath them. Deflection, as already explained, again occurs, but in a different direction from that of the trades. In the northern hemisphere they blow from the southwest, and in the southern from the northwest. These southwest winds bring most of our rain; in other words, the earth's spin dominates our water supply. A southwest wind delivers an weather first of all to the west, and afterwards to the east. As a rule rain falls in Ireland before it reaches the neighborhood of London. The rain is caused by the cooling of the vapor which the air has absorbed in its passage across the hot regions of the Atlantic Ocean. When it reaches our cold shores its cargo of water is discharged as mist, cloud, rain, hoar frost, or snow. On the other hand, east and north winds are generally keen and dry. They come from regions where there is very little ocean, and, being dry, they imbibe moisture wherever they find it.

The Speed of the Wind.
The varying force of wind is a matter of daily observation. Between the dead calm and the hurricane there is a gentle air, the light breeze, the sailing breeze, the gale, the great storm, and the tempest. When air moves so fast that three miles an hour its motion can hardly be felt. The atmosphere is then in a state of "calm." The speed of a gentle breeze varies from thirteen to eighteen miles an hour. A sailing breeze moves at the rate of thirty-five, a gale at fifty, a respectable storm at seventy-five and a hurricane at one hundred miles an hour. In the case of the latter, the wind is little more than half an ounce on every square foot of surface that it moves against. The light breeze has the pressure of a pound and a quarter, the sailing breeze six pounds, the gale thirteen pounds, the storm twenty-eight pounds, and the hurricane about forty-five pounds—all on the square foot of surface. Architects, and engineers know that the wind is no respecter of persons.

LIMITATIONS OF THE AEROPLANE

In Warfare It Will Not Be as Valuable as Some People Imagine.

Those who regard the aeroplane as invaluable in warfare, far beyond its possibilities, are led to their conclusions by two errors; first, they do not differentiate between the wonder of the invention, per se, and the limitation of its application. Second, that this conquest of the heavens has nothing to do with the subjugation of man. It has not yet put man into new faculties; and yet it is man and not machines that we have to deal with. While it has given new means of military observation, it does not follow that these observations will be more intelligible nor his deductions more reliable, nor his judgment and genius superior to what it had been before. The unreliable and diverse opinions of scouts on things that they have been in actual contact with is a well-known military phenomenon, and that is perfectly natural, since there are no two men whose perceptive faculties are identical. A good scout is one of the rarest elements in an army, for he is good at a time when he is lived in an environment and followed a vocation that develops the faculties of observation and renders them accurate.

THE BIBLE'S SECRET.
The literary influence of the Bible appears the more wonderful when we consider that it is the work of a race not otherwise famous or famous in literature. We do not know, of course, what other books may have come from the Jewish nation and vanished; but how have power or beauty they possessed; but those that remain there is little of exceptional force of charm for readers outside of the Hebrew race. They have no broad human appeal, no universal significance, nor even any signal excellence of form or imagery. Joseph is a fairly good historian, sometimes entertaining, but not comparable to Herodotus or Thucydides or Tacitus or Gibbon. The Talmuds are vast storehouses of things new and old, where a careful searcher may now and then find a fragment of the past, a fragment of moral tapestry in histories of medieval literature, Ibn Ezra of Toledo and Rashi of Lunel are spoken of with respect. In modern letters, works as far apart as the philosophical treatises of Spinoza and the lyrics of Heinrich Heine have distinction in their kind. No one thinks that the Hebrews are lacking in great and varied talents; but how is it that their literature, their only contribution that counts is the Bible? And how is it that it counts so immensely? The power of the Bible in literature lies in its nearness to the very springs and sources of human life—life taken seriously, earnestly, intensely; life in its broadest and deepest meaning; life interpreted in its relation to universal laws and eternal values. It is this vital quality in the narratives, the poems, the discourses, the letters, gathered in this book, that give it first place among the books of the world not only for accuracy, but also for greatness. From an article in Century Magazine.

would starve to death were it not for the ideas sent them from the land of the Mikado. A striking proof of this is the birth of the hobble skirt. Why, the hobble skirt is half a century old in Japan. Japanese women have worn dresses wrapped tightly at the knees for years, yet almost a duplication of our costume is handed to the world as new.

Naturally, in thinking over the charge of the talented Japanese noblewoman, one turns to lady's habits and her wardrobe today and of the past few years for confirmation. It cannot be denied that her statements are in the main correct, for besides designs in dress half a score of the fads dear to the fashionable woman are found to be directly traceable to the Flowery Kingdom.

Mildred rises at 9 a.m. and slips into her silk kimono, a direct importation. The wide loose sleeves fall back gracefully from her hands so that she may be free to pour her chocolate and nibble her toast. About 10:30 mildred's apparel is changed to a skirt and mandarin jacket and she is ready to have her nails manicured. The manicuring of the nails in Japan is as old as the nation itself, and we are indebted to that country for the various processes followed and the appliances used. Serious fashionable perfumes and sachets are duplications of Japanese native flowers, and very many cosmetics used by the social set to remove wrinkles and beautify the skin and face have been sent to us from over the seas. In the afternoon, when the woman of fashion goes shopping, she carries a handbag very similar to the one carried by the women of Japan. Her dress may be of the popular ponce, and her coat at least is made in the so-called "new" hobble style. When she goes to the theatre or opera her exquisite little opera bag is another gift from Japan. Even at the end of the day, filled with many varied helps from this island empire, mildred goes to sleep warm and happy with her fancy Japanese silk quilt tucked well around her.

BUSINESS-RAISING.

If you want to rise in the world you must raise something else. If you want to rise in business raise the business you are in. Don't imagine that when you have given your life to the lifting up of a business the house will try to keep you down. A house cannot rise and keep down the man who raised it any more than a man can rise out of the water and keep down the life-preserver that raised him.

A man can do a dollar's worth of work for a dollar. When you are working for nothing but a dollar your work will not run out at more than 50 cents. To do a dollar's worth of work you must work for a dollar and something more. You must work for the love of the business, or for the love of something—for something more than the dollar. A mere hiring of a man to do a dollar's worth of work for a dollar, because he has nothing to work for but the dollar. He may meet the requirements as to quantity, but never as to quality. So long as a man thinks of himself as a hiring he will never hitch his wagon to anything but a pay envelope. A large employer said the other day that he never distributes his pay envelopes without putting in them an inspirational leaflet—just a bit of printed matter to encourage his men. Starts to work immediately. To spur their ambition, to incite them to his endeavor. Men need something more than money. They need an encouraging word. They need stouts backbone. They need a friendly handshake—a handshake with a grip in it that helps a man get a new grip on himself.—The Young Man in Business.

CRUELITIES OF THE ZOO.

A menagerie of beasts and birds means a collection of captured walking and flying creatures taken from their natural modes of life, deprived of their own instincts, and subjected to the cruelties of the zoo.

Cured Awful Ringworm

"Well over four years ago my two little girls were taken with a dreadful scalp trouble that the doctors called ringworm. They attended the Hospital as out-patients for a year. I had to apply their ointment with a brush, giving the children frightful pain. I also had to have their heads shaved every two weeks, but they got no better under the treatment. They used to cry with the tormenting itching, and their heads were covered with a thick scurf and crust.

"About a year ago I determined to try the Cuticura Remedies. I used plenty of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I used only about three cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment and they were cured. Their hair has grown long and nice again. They had become so ill after their three years of suffering that I had to send one away to the hospital, and the other to the home, well and strong. My younger girl was away from school nine months with the disease. I am so grateful to Cuticura and my children's sake I hope other mothers will try it. The Cuticura Soap I will use for life for it makes the hair so lovely."

Are Legends the Best for the Little Ones?

EARLY TRAINING AS REGARDS HISTORY VERY FAULTY

[By G. K. Chesterton.]

We most of us suffer from having learnt all our lessons in history from those little abridged history books in use in most public and private schools. These lessons are insufficient—especially when you don't learn them. The latter was indeed my own case; and the little history I know I have picked up since by rambling about in authentic books and countryside. But the bald memories of the small history books still master and, in many cases, mislead us. The root of the difficulty is this: that there are two quite distinct purposes of history: the superior purpose, which is its use for children; and the secondary or inferior purpose, which is its use for historians. The highest and noblest thing that history can be is a school of the heart of all generations, the eternal infancy of mankind. Such a story as that of William Tell could literally be told of any epoch; no barbarian implements could be too rude, no scientific instruments could be too elaborate for the pride and terror of the tale. It might be told of the first flint-headed arrow or the last model machine gun; the point of it is the same; it is as eternal as tyranny and fatherhood. Now, wherever there is this function of the fine story in history we tell it to children only because it is a fine story. David and the cup of water, Regulus and the "atque scelerat," Jeanne D'Arc kissing the cross of spear-wood, or Nelson shot with all his stars—these stir in every child the ancient heart of the race; and that is all that they need do. Changes of time and local color are nothing; it did not matter that in the illustrated Bibles of our youth David was dressed rather like Regulus, in a Roman cuirass and sandals, any more than it mattered that in the illuminated Bibles of the middle ages he was dressed rather like Jeanne D'Arc, in a hood or a visored helmet. It will not matter to future ages if the pictures represent Jeanne D'Arc cremated in an asbestos stove or Nelson dying in a top-hat. For the childish and eternal wish of history, the history will still be heroic.

The Historian's Business.
But the historians have quite a different business. It is their duty, not merely to remember that humanity has been wise and great, but to understand the special ways in which it has been weak and foolish. The historians have to explain the horrible mystery of how fashions were ever fashionable. They have to analyze that statuesque instinct of the south that molds the Roman cuirass to the muscles of the human torso, or that element of symbolic extravagance in the later middle ages which let loose a menagerie upon breast and casque and shield. They have to explain, as best they can, how anyone ever came to have a top-hat, how anyone ever endured an asbestos stove.
Now the tale of the heroes are a part of religious education; they are meant to teach us that we have souls. But the inquiries of the historians into the eccentricities of every epoch are meant as a part of political education; they are meant to teach us to avoid certain perils or solve certain problems in the complexity of practical affairs. It is the first duty of a boy to admire the glory of Trafalgar. It is the first duty of a grown man to question its utility. It is one question whether it was a good thing as an episode in the struggle between Pitt and the French revolution. It is quite another thing in that immortal struggle between the son of man and all the unclean spirits of sloth and cowardice and despair. For the wisdom of man alters with every age; his prudence has to fit perpetually-shifting shapes of inconvenience or dilemma. But his folly is immortal; a fire stolen from heaven.

Legends Inspire.
Now the little stories that we learnt as children were partly meant simply as inspiring stories. They largely consisted of tales like Alfred and the cakes or Cleopatra and the poisoned wound. They ought to have entirely consisted of them. Little children ought to learn nothing but legends; they are the beginnings of all sound morals and manners. I would not be severe on the point; I would not exclude a story solely because it was true. But the essential on which I should insist would be, not that the tale must be true, but that the tale must be fine.

The attempts in the little school-histories to introduce older and subtler elements, to talk of the atmosphere of Puritanism or the evolution of our constitution, is quite irrelevant and vain. It is impossible to convey to a barely breeched imp who does not yet know his own community, the exquisite divergence between it and other communities. What is the good of talking about the constitution carefully balanced on three estates to a creature only quite recently balanced on two legs? What is the sense of explaining the Puritan shade of mortality to a creature who is still learning to walk?

Visited by a Leopard

Thrilling Adventure of George Maxwell, One of Roosevelt's Hunting Companions—Leopard Invaded His Room and Nearly Killed Him.

When a leopard comes into the house he is very careful not to shut the door. This rule may not hold for elephants or giraffes, but it seems from the following account that leopards favor the open-door policy. If the door is open, they run; if it is shut, they become peevish and begin roughing it. The story below is an extract from a letter of Mr. George Maxwell, written to a friend in the Transvaal and reprinted in the Wide World. Mr. Maxwell, Roosevelt's last year, with Colonel Roosevelt, last year, hunting big game in Africa. The letter reads:
I am writing this on my back in Nyeri Hospital, as the result of coming off second-best in a flare-up with a huge leopard. The thing happened on the evening of Nov. 9, last. About 8:30 p.m., just as it was getting dark, I took a walk over to Mr. McDougall's, my nearest neighbor, about three-quarters of a mile distant, and had dinner there; afterwards we sat talking round the fire. MacDougall's house is a small stone building containing only one room, about 16 feet by 14, with the door in the centre of one wall and the fireplace in a corner.
Three nights before this a leopard had taken away one of his pigs, so he had put up his rifle and one of mine as trap-guns at his piggery. On this particular evening, however, he had not yet set them.
About 10:30 p.m., as we sat smoking and talking round the fire—the door open, as usual—my little dog ran out and started barking round by the piggery.
"That blest leopard must have come back," I said, half-jokingly; "the dog is evidently after something."
"Oh, he's always kicking up a fuss over nothing," returned MacDougall. A minute or so went by; then we ting with difficulty that there is any morality at all? We may put on one side the possibility that some of us may think the Puritan atmosphere an unpleasant one or the constitution a trifle rickety on its three legs. The general truth remains that we should teach, to the young, men's enduring truths, and let the learned amuse themselves with their passing errors. It is often said nowadays that in great crimes and moral revolutions we need one strong man to decide; but it seems to me that that is exactly when we do not need him. We do not need a great man for a revolution, for a true revolution is a time when all men are great. Where despotism really is successful is in very small matters. Everyone must have noticed how essential a despot is to arranging the things in which everyone is doubtful, because everyone is indifferent; the boats in a water picnic or the seats at a dinner party. Here the man who knows his own mind is really wanted, no one else ever thinks his own mind worth knowing. No one knows where to go to precisely, because no one cares where he goes. It is for trivialities that the great tyrant is meant.

But when the depths are stirred in a society, and all men's souls grow taller in a transfiguring anger or desire, then I am by no means certain that the great man has been a benefit even when he has been a tyrant. I am sure that Cromwell and Napoleon managed the mere pikes and bayonets, boots and knapsacks better than most other people could have managed them. But I am by no means sure that Napoleon gave a better turn to the whole French revolution. I am by no means so sure that Cromwell has really improved the religion of England.

heard the sound of feet rushing toward the door, and, looking round, saw by dog come tearing in with a snarling leopard at its tail. I never saw a bigger. The brute was coming at such a speed that it was through the doorway and nearly on top of us before it could stop.

Both of us promptly started shouting at it—partly to relieve our feelings partly in the hope of saving the dog. What with the shouting, our proximity, and the lamplight, the leopard was so scared that it made quite a mistake. It tried to rush on again, but, missing the door, got to the far side of the house, where it kept jumping up at the walls and windows. MacDougall and I continued shouting at it. We thought the episode rather funny, but otherwise, and that at any moment the beast would find the door and bolt, having received a fright that would last it a long time.

All of a sudden, while it was jumping about, the leopard came against the back of the door and shut it with a bang. Then it dawned on me that we were in a bad fix, and no mistake, for a leopard will fight most desperately when cornered. By this time the brute was in a frenzy of rage at being trapped and flew round and round the room like a streak of lightning, sending dishes, cupboard doors, and everything flying. MacDougall and I retreated to corners, using our chairs as shields. We had no weapon of any kind, and it was dangerous to move, for the leopard was naturally thought we were coming to attack it. All the time my little dog was dashed hither and thither after the infuriated brute, worrying it whenever he got a chance.

As I was nearest the door I thought I would make an attempt to open it, as otherwise the beast would undoubtedly finish the pair of us. I meant to go very slowly and only move when its back was toward me, but I had only made my first step when the leopard turned round and, with a horrible growl, sprang at me with terrific force. The light was very bad, and it must have sprung higher than I expected, for it knocked me off my feet and I was lying on my back with its claws home in my scalp, ripping it like a piece of cloth. Staggering and half-dazed, I got to work upon it and kept punching it with my fists and with my fists and about the head with all my strength. I don't suppose I did much damage, but I think I must have kept the brute from putting its teeth into my legs or body, for it tried repeatedly to catch my hand as I hit at it, while the dog jumped up and bit at its ear. Presently the dog caught it by the hind leg, and it turned round sharply to get at him. Seizing my opportunity, I made for the door, though I was blinded with blood that I could hardly see where it was. I threw the door open and looked round just in time to see the leopard going for MacDougall.

I made to go round and try to get the brute off him, but when I got half-way I heard the door close again, and I knew it was no use doing anything, so long as the leopard could not get out, so I went back to the door. I think it was just as well, for I had not even a chair in my hands at that time, and the animal would probably have finished me altogether. When I looked round again the beast was just going to spring at MacDougall, but he caught hold of a blanket and held it up in front of him, which stopped it from leaping.

I stood still—I was getting very weak by this time—holding the door open with one hand, and keeping the blood out of my eyes with the other. The leopard must have been getting tired, for it stood motionless by the side of the bed, and I could have pinked it nicely if I had only had a spear. The plucky dog was still worrying it, biting at its nose and legs, and presently it turned round and snapped savagely at him. As it did so it felt the night air coming in, turned round, saw the open door, and, with a snarl, with the dog still biting at its hind quarters, so that I did not even get a farewell kick at it.

After we had got rid of our unwelcome visitor we began comparing wounds. I put my hand up to my head for the first time, and it felt just like a field of plowed meat. MacDougall

A novel means of identification has been adopted by one of the large institutions for deaf mute children of New York. The children sometimes wander away or become lost while travelling, and, as many of them cannot read and write, it is often a difficult thing to return them to the institution. By tattooing the name and address on the skin it is an easy matter for the deaf mutes to be identified. The tattooing is done in ink that is not indelible, but which will stand for a year or two.

THE RED CROSS FOUNDER

His Death at Switzerland—How Henri Durant Started the Movement—Won a Nobel Prize.

At the age of 82, M. Henri Durant, founder of the International Red Cross, died at Heiden, in the canton of Appenzel, Switzerland, on the 28th of October.
"One who loved his fellow-men," M. Henri Durant was almost forgotten by the world he served so well. His name came before the public only a short time back, when in 1901 he shared the Nobel prize with M. Frederic Passy, receiving a sum of $4,000. Durant had given his time and money to the cause of the unhappy victims of war, and no one better deserved this recognition. From the Tsaritsa he received a yearly pension.

He was born in Geneva on the 8th of May, 1828, the eldest son of a member of the Representative Council. In 1857 he published "Une Notice sur la Regence de Tunis," which is still one of the most important works concerning that country. This was followed by a study of slavery in Mohammedan countries, and in the United States, compared with the bondage of the Hebrews.

Anglo-Saxon women acted on the ideas of the young author—Mrs. Beecher-Stowe, Miss Florence Nightingale, and Elizabeth Fry.
After the battle of Solferino, one of the most bloody battles of modern times, at which he was present, Durant applied to Napoleon III. for permission to employ the Austrian doctors for the prisoners by the French, in relieving the sufferings of the wounded. Not only did Napoleon III. give permission, but granted the prisoners the freedom of movement that they helped Durant. From this time the emperor took a great interest in him, and sent him a long autograph letter of congratulation. On the occasion of his "Souverain de Solferino," Durant received congratulations from Victor Hugo and a number of the great generals.

Three nights before this a leopard had taken away one of his pigs, so he had put up his rifle and one of mine as trap-guns at his piggery. On this particular evening, however, he had not yet set them.

After the battle of Sadowa, Queen Augusta invited Durant to Berlin, and said to him: "When I read your 'Souverain de Solferino' I was so struck by it that I told my majesty about it. The king said to me after having read the whole of it. We must make this a success."
In 1863, Henri Durant went to Dresden to obtain the patronage of the King of Saxony. He afterwards described how he drove up to the palace and was received with "paternal benevolence" by the great chamberlain, who took him by the hand and led him through many corridors to a small room, scantily furnished. Here he was informed the king would see him. Durant, with much fervor, unfolded his scheme and begged the king to patronize the work, and to send a delegate to the Geneva convention.

"His majesty," said Durant, "smiled when he saw my agitation, and concluded the audience with these precious words: 'I will do what I can; for a nation which did not join this humane work would certainly shut itself under the ban of public opinion in Europe.'"
In 1872 he also founded in Paris, Brussels and London "L'Alliance Universelle de l'Ordre et de la Civilisation," by help of which he brought about the London conference in 1875 for the abolition of slavery. In 1870 he had founded in Paris a society which was intended to be an international union for the sifting and settlement of all disputes between the nations, that was might be averted. In 1872, by the request of the London Peace Society, he gave a lecture on "Arbitration," which evoked much enthusiasm. The well-known and constantly growing "Fraternalite par Correspondance" was begun by Durant already in 1849. It is now one of the most energetic branches of the international peace movement. Durant and Bertha von Suttner, who calls Durant "her revered master," are honorary presidents of this society.

MOTHER'S LITTLE TREASURE

What mother does not look upon her baby as a little treasure? What mother would not rather suffer herself than see her precious little one suffer? The well child brings joy to the home—the sick child brings misery, despair and care. But, mothers, there is no need for your baby to be cross and ailing; even during the much dreaded teething time. "Baby's Own Tablets" keep him well as an occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets cure all stomach and bowel troubles; destroy worms and make teething easy. Mrs. Pierre M. Cormier, New Richmond Centre, Que., writes: "Baby's Own Tablets have been of great benefit to my little one, and now he sleeps well and eats well and is happy all the time." The Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers at 25 cents a box, or direct from The Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.
