TWO THOUSAND PRINTERS STRIKE
IN TORONTO FOR 44-HOUR WEEK

Strike Effects Nearly One Hundred Job Shops and Includes Printers, Pressmen and Bookbinders—Increase in Wages Also Demanded.

A despatch from Toronto says:—Rejecting a final offer from employing printers of the Toronto Typothetae of a minimum wage of $36 for a 48-hour week or $33 for a 44-hour week, 2,000 union employees of the printing industry, job section, decided to go on strike on June 1. At the meeting of Local 91, International Typographical Union, the National Pressmen's and Press Assistants' Union, and the Bookbinders' and Bindery Women's Union, the report of negotiating committees of the unions that the offer of employers, he rejected was unanimously endorsed.

The strike is likely to prove a protracted affair. Employers state, through Treasurer F. M. Kimbark of the Toronto Typothetae, that it is impossible for them to meet the demands of the unions, and union officials declare that their members are insistent in the demand for the 44-hour week without a reduction in wages at least, if not with an increased wage.

Employers and unions are provided with large funds to carry on the fight. Some time ago the Typothetae announced an assessment of three months' payroll and overhead expenses to meet expense its members might incur by a strike, and later the union levied a 10 per cent. weekly wage assessment on its members. The Toronto printers will likely receive $17 a week strike allowance for single men and $22 a week for married men, which is what is now being paid to the Hamilton strikers.

According to union officials, there the 102 members in the Toronto Typothetae. President Andrew Gerrard of the printers' union, claimed that some of these concerns had agreed to give the 44-hour week with present wages, pending a settlement, and in these shops men would be permitted to work.

Among the latter is the Wilson Publishing Company, a large newspaper distributing concern, the closing down of which would have had a serious effect upon publications throughout the country.

Some officials of the Typographical Union claim that the National Pressmen's and Press Assistants' Union may come out of the strike, with better agreements than other organizations. The pressmen are insisting upon $42 a week and the 44-hour week, and have been able to secure the signatures of some employers to an agreement to this effect.

Canadian News in Brief

Dawson, Y.T.—A silver-bearing area, which comprises 1,000 square miles, and which assays up to 7,000 ounces of silver to the ton, is being developed by the Guggenheims in the Yukon. Ore is being shipped which assays 200 to 700 ounces per ton, with stringers of carbonate that go 1,700 to the ton. All that is handicapping this district, known as Camp Mayo, is the shortness of the open season on the Stewart River, and it may be necessary to build a railway to adequately handle the output.

Vernon, B.C.—What is believed to be the highest rental ever paid for a ranch property in the Creston Valley has been agreed upon for this year's hire of the Tornico ranch, which has been taken for one year at a rental of $1,000 for ten acres. This does not include the use of the house. The place is planted entirely to trees and small fruits.

Calgary, Alta.—It is estimated that one thousand silos will be built in the three prairie provinces of Canada during this year. It is reported that one firm in the States, which has made a specialty of erecting silos, have secured orders for two hundred of these structures to be erected in Manitoba alone. Saskatchewan farmers will build several this season, while in the south-west of Alberta, where fifty silos were erected last year, another fifty will be built this summer.

Calgary, Alta.—Fifty oil drilling outfits will be in operation in Alberta by the middle of this summer, according to present indications. The Imperial Oil Company are behind about twenty of these, while other prominent British and American interests are promoting other companies. Development work will take place in practically every district from the Montana border to the Fort Norman discovery well.

Regina, Sask.—The assistance of the Mounted Police had to be secured to control the crowd at the Dominion Land office at Prince Albert waiting to make applications for homesteads. Agents throughout the province report the heaviest rush for homesteads experienced since 1908. Saskatchewan received 150 entries in the past week and has issued more than 1,000 homestead permits. Homestead entrants are stated to be overwhelmingly British and American.

Winnipeg, Man.—Construction work on the provincial telephone system costing approximately one million five hundred thousand dollars will be commenced this June by the provincial government, according to J. Lowrey,

THIRTY PERISH
IN TULSA RIOTS

Racial Fight Between Whites and Negroes Results in $1,500,000 Loss.

A despatch from Tulsa, Okla., says:—Martial law prevailed in Tulsa Wednesday afternoon, with order restored under the grim threat of four companies of war-manned State troops. Twenty hours of desperate race rioting had destroyed over a million dollars' worth of property and razed the entire negro section.

The city, blood-drenched and blackened by incendiary fires, was beginning to care for its dead.

According to the latest authentic report, nine whites and twenty-one negroes are known to have been killed during the race clash. An estimate places property damage at $1,500,000. All this, according to Gen. C. F. Barrett, commanding the State troops, called here to maintain martial law, was incited by "an impudent negro, a hysterical girl and a yellow journal reporter."

Representative citizens of Tulsa met on Thursday and condemned the city and county law enforcement officials, holding them responsible for the disastrous outbreak. In addressing this meeting Gen. Barrett stated that, while he was ordering the withdrawal of the National Guard from Tulsa, there was no intention to remove the martial law edict until such time as it was shown the city could care for itself.

A committee, in which Mayor T. D. Evans was denied a place, was appointed to care for the helpless negroes, estimated to number more than 3,000, and to expedite the work of rebuilding the burned negro quarter.

"Most of this damage was done by white criminals, who should have been shot and killed," E. J. Martin, former Mayor, said, after he was selected Chairman of the Emergency Committee.

University Standards.

Entrance requirements in several Faculties of the Provincial University have recently been raised and announcement is made that, in some cases, a still further increase will soon occur. Intelligently considered, this action is seen to be unquestionably in the best interests of the parents of the youth of Ontario.

To study for an additional year in the local collegiate institute or high school before beginning a university course is not a hardship to any boy or girl. Quite the contrary. It means another year at home under parental care and influence; it means also a saving in money.

Success in a university course depends very largely upon two conditions, viz., a good educational foundation which enables one to grasp readily what is taught and a maturity and stability of character which prompts one to study diligently even when away from parental oversight. The attainment of both these necessary qualifications is made easier by more rigid university entrance requirements.

In raising its standard the University of Toronto is acting solely in the interests of prospective students and their parents, is carrying out its well known democratic policy, and is augmenting its right to its position as "the poor man's college."

Prisoners of War.

Probably the first feeling most of us have in reading of the beginning of the trial of Germans for maltreating war prisoners is one of regret that the dragnet could not have brought in some of the more considerable offenders instead of such small fry as non-commissioned officers.

One of the chief industries in Germany of late has been the production of alibis. The men who did the things that outraged the civilized conscience in the war are now anxious to keep mum and lie hid. They are eager to let the dead past lie buried. When they perpetrated the cruelties upon their prisoners they laughed at any threat of punishment in days to come. Verily, the tribunal that now sits upon their deeds has taken a long time to assemble. It is true that time has cooled passion and made a truer perspective possible. It is also true that the period that has elapsed has enabled many culprits to evade a proper penalty.

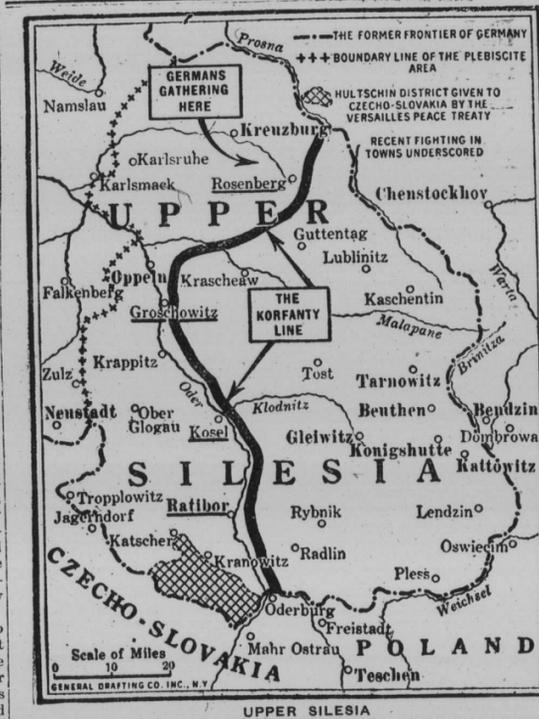

It will be no great satisfaction to any one to have a few underlings put in jail, while the men higher up are at large and at leisure to compile their apologetic memoirs. The prospect is that whatever punishment is meted out will go no further than to settle a few inconspicuous grudges; it will not satisfy the long and heavy-laden account of all humanity against German militarism.

Says Business Depression of 1921 Has Passed

A despatch from New York says:—The business depression of 1921 has definitely passed and the financial condition of the United States is such now that it should inspire only optimism, W. P. G. Harding, Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, declared in an address before the annual meeting of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

"The public has a lot of buying power left. We want to get the people out of the idea that prices are going lower and lower," he asserted.

16 GOV. CANDIDATES
RETURNED IN SASK.

Nominations for Provincial Elections Result in Return of Cabinet Ministers.

A despatch from Regina, Sask., says:—Nominations for the provincial elections in Saskatchewan closed on Thursday, with Government candidates returned by acclamation in 16 of the 63 seats. This may be increased later as the results of the nominations in nine constituencies are still to come. The acclamations include three Ministers of the Government: Hon. C. A. Dunning, Provincial Treasurer; Hon. S. J. Latta, Minister of Highways, and J. A. Maharg, whose portfolio is yet unknown.

Elections will be held in 60 of the 63 constituencies a week from today, those of Cumberland, Isle a la Crosse, and the Tisdale having been deferred. Owing to the condition of the roads in the Tisdale district, polling and nomination has been deferred two weeks. The Government has a candidate in every field except Thunder Creek, the principal opposition being offered by the Independents, who nominated 34 candidates to-day. Three Conservatives were named as such throughout the province, three Laborites and three non-partisans.

In most of the constituencies the fight will be two-cornered. In the cities of Regina, Moose Jaw and Saskatoon, where two members are to be elected, there are five in each city named. Outside of these three cities but one candidate is to be selected.

The following Government candidates were elected by acclamation to-day: G. A. Scott, Arm River; A. D. Pickel, Battleford; H. T. Halvorson, Cypress; Robert Dunbar, Estevan; H. M. Therres, Humboldt; D. M. Finlayson, Jack Fish Lake; R. J. Gordon, Lloydminster; Hon. S. J. Latta, Last Mountain; Hon. C. A. Dunning, Moose Jaw County; B. Larson, Milestone; J. A. Maharg, Morse; J. G. Gardner, North Qu' Appelle; George Spence, Notukeu; C. A. McDonald, Prince Albert; Dr. J. M. Uhrich, Rosthern; W. H. Sahlmark, Saltcoats.

His Majesty May Open
Ulster Parliament

A despatch from London says:—The Press Association announces that King George is likely to accept an invitation to open the Ulster Parliament.

Quebec, Que.—The average number of men employed in asbestos mining operations last year in the province of Quebec was 1,890, and in milling operations 1,340, making a total of 3,230, and the total wages paid amounted to $415,242. During 1920, the exports of asbestos were 152,740 tons, valued at $11,521,536; and of asbestos sand and waste 36,303 tons, valued at $365,920. Shipments were made to the United States, Great Britain, Japan and France. A portion of the shipments to the United States were re-shipped to supply the South American trade.

Fredericton, N.B.—The city of Fredericton has decided to erect several buildings under the Dominion Government housing scheme. One hundred thousand dollars has been secured through the provincial government, and the first lot of houses will be under construction in the next couple of weeks. This will relieve to a certain extent the scarcity of the living accommodation of this city.

Halifax, N.S.—Announcement has been made of the sale of fifty thousand acres of timber lands in Yarmouth and Digby counties, Nova Scotia, by the Fraser Pulp and Lumber companies of New Brunswick, to the Nova Scotia Timberland Co., Limited. It has not been definitely stated what the purchase price was, but it is understood to be in the neighborhood of several hundred thousand dollars.

Last year 146,628 people emigrated from Great Britain, and 4,307 from Ireland.

WILL DEEPEN RIVER.

The cost will be in the neighborhood of $100,000.

The municipal councils of the townships of Culross and Greenock are holding special meetings for the purpose of making arrangements to proceed with the deepening of the Teeswater river. This action on the part of the councils is the sequel to the sitting of the Ontario Municipal Drainage court held last week, when Provincial Drainage Referee Henderson made an interim order that the Township of Culross complete the survey which was begun by Engineer Roger some time ago.

This drainage scheme is of vital interest to hundreds of land owners in no less than five different townships in the counties of Bruce and Huron and has been the cause of much litigation in the courts in the past fifty years. The early pioneers saw the great advantage to be gained by the proper drainage of this river and as early as 1877 the matter was brot up in the Provincial Legislature when a petition was presented to have the drainage of the stream improved but no action was taken. Then in 1903 the Municipalities of Greenock and Culross petitioned for the drainage of the stream.

The Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives, destroyed by fire on November 30th last, must be replaced by buildings, larger and fireproof.

Accommodation is needed at the Muskoka Free Hospital for 400 adults in early stages of the disease. This will rest 250 of them to their homes and loved ones—cured. The remainder will be greatly benefited.

A few months for each patient soon means thousands cared for.

Funds are urgently needed for this work.

Again—adults in advanced stages must be treated at the King Edward Sanatorium, on the banks of the Humber, near Weston. Extensions are necessary. Many of these patients can be saved.

And again—little children—stricken with the dread disease—must be cared for at the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptive Children, near Weston. Ninety per cent. of these are saved to become healthy men and women.

Funds are urgently needed to cover the cost of extensions.

Further, funds are urgently needed to carry on the work of The Cagle Institute in the City of Toronto, where the needy poor come for free examinations, including X-ray, and for medical and nursing assistance.

Fifteen thousand needy consumptives have been cared for to date at the hospitals conducted by the Association.

"Every Needy Consumptive Must Still be cared for"

Drainage Aid Act for a drainage scheme comprising the improvement of the Teeswater river from Pheasant's dam at Chepstowe, in the township of Greenock, upstream a distance of 18 miles to the 8th concession of Culross. The proposed drain was surveyed and a report made by the late James Warren, D. L. S. of Walkerton. At that time the assistant Commissioner of Public Works recommended a substantial measure of aid, but the scheme was never carried out. Since then although the municipalities have had to face several claims for damages and the matter has been a live issue at the municipal elections the situation is practically as it was in 1871. The matter of the improvement of the Teeswater river is a very important question of public interest. Here there is an area of swamp land comprising some 24,000 acres, which is a good clay loam, valued at several hundred thousand dollars, which at the present time cannot be cultivated. Under the proposed drainage this great tract known as the Greenock swamp will be turned into arable land. The main obstruction in the river is a ridge of shale rock at Pheasant's dam at the village of Chepstowe. This is where the proposed work will commence and when this is completed a dredge will be brought into use and the bed of the river dug out and a few points the course of the stream will be straightened. It is expected that the work will be commenced this summer and will be proceeded with as soon as Engineer Roger completes his survey. It is estimated that the work will cost in the neighborhood of $100,000 and as the scheme comes under the Provincial Drainage Aid Act the Province will pay 20 per cent of the cost. The balance will be raised by special taxation on the improved lands.

SOMEBODY'S BRIGHT IDEA

An automobile wrecked through being hit by a train in a Texas town now serves as a warning to other auto drivers. The wrecked car has been placed on a substantial platform at the crossing, and on a large sign attached to the car is painted: "The driver of this automobile did not look and listen." The wrecked car will serve a good purpose in this way resulting no doubt in saving other cars and lives. There are many wrecks along life's highway to warn us of danger. The wise man is on the lookout for these warnings and is often saved from disaster by heeding their admonition.—Nashville Advocate.

The man of business is strictly business; he understands business; he talks business; he does business and is full of business. He does not meddle in other people's business; to worry others with your business is not business; if you let others know your business you will soon be out of business; to get out of it is your business. To tell others to do, but not to do it himself, is the preacher's business; to let others do it and yet not do it himself is the policeman's business. To ask a stranger for the loan of a dollar, that is no business; to make that loan is poor business.

Hanover seems to have a poor supply of drinking water. The Ontario Sanitary Inspector states that only 62 out of 441 wells in Hanover contained "real good water, fit for domestic use." Of the remainder, 169 wells showed "absolute filth," with traces of intestinal organisms" and the remainder showed signs of pollution but were not too bad. It is proposed to erect a waterworks system at a cost of $35,000, the water to be taken from the Saugeen river was proposed and filtered, but the by-law was defeated.

SHOCKING CHILD DEPRAVITY.

On Wednesday afternoon of last week Billy, the five year old son of Mr. Byron Welton, Flesherton, and little grandson of Mrs. Wm. Welton, Mount Forest, was shockingly maltreated by two other little children by the names of Brown, the elder of whom is eight years of age. Billy had a pet dog on a string, which the other boys wanted, but which Billy would not give up. He had left ab. at half past four. He was found lying unconscious in a field at eleven o'clock at night. About him were a number of stones which were apparently used to batter him with. He was in a deplorable state. His jaw was shattered and the mosquitoes had bitten him badly. He was rushed to the Sick Children's Hospital, Toronto where X-ray examinations showed that his skull was not broken. The Brown boys, it is said, have wretched home training and what to do with them is a problem.—Flesherton Advance.

It is reported that at the next session of the Ontario Legislature John O'Neill, M.P.P. for one of the Toronto divisions, will introduce a bill to clean out all liquor out of the cellars of this province. Of course the owners will be compensated.

"Papa, if I was twing would you buy the othre boy a banana too?"
"Certainly my son."
"Well, papa, you surely ain't going to cheat me out of that other banana just 'cause I'm all in one piece?"

DIFFICULT PROPOSITION

The publication of a newspaper is a difficult financial proposition at any time and especially under present conditions of high costs for wages and material. If newspapers had advanced in proportion to advancing costs, the reader would have been paying $10 for his daily newspaper and at least $3 per year for his weekly. As it is the advertiser has carried some of the increased costs. Papers that have survived have taken care of the balance of the increased production and increased efficiency and economy in management.

JUST SUPPOSING

Suppose an editor should, just for once, relieve his mind by printing all the news he happened to know at that minute! Options would be thrown up, citizens arrested, families disrupted, fights fought on the street corners, candidates resigning, ministers leaving for distant parts, lawyers taking long vacations, business men turning things over to their clerks for a season, hired girls hunting for new jobs and so on down a long list of casualities—and the editor would be so mused up that his corpse couldn't be identified by his own family. The newspaper man doesn't know everything but his work is such that he earns a lot that common sense, common decency and common prudence keep out of the paper.—Freeholder.

CROWBAR SAVES FARMER

Joseph Schurter a Greenock farmer was seriously injured Monday evening when, as he was assisting in taking down a large frame barn on the farm of his neighbor, Ferdinand Gra near Chepstowe, the building collapsed, one of the heavy pieces of timber falling on him. He was unconscious for several hours. Schurter, with a number of other men, had just pulled out a brace preparatory to letting down a heavy beam, when a brace at the other end of the timber, being badly rotted, fell out and a portion of the frame crashed to the ground. The only thing that saved Schurter from being crushed to death was that an iron crowbar, on which the timber fell, supported the weight of the stick until the other men could pull Schurter out. The crowbar which was a very heavy one, was bent almost double from the weight of the timber.

SUCKED AN EGG; NEARLY DIED

In this fast age we live in the midst of dangers but never until we heard the experience of a North West farmer the other day, had we contemplated the horrible possibility of death through sucking an egg. It now appears that even this apparently harmless and innocent pastime which small boys are wont to indulge in out behind the barn, ought to take its place along with auto-speeding and sleeping sickness as one of the great present day menaces of human life. We understand that the farmer had nearly finished the egg-sucking operation but the last pull at the egg loosened a bit of shell which settled in his wind-pipe. He was miles from town but a doctor was got on the phone and gave hasty directions. For a time it was feared he would struggle to death but finally he came thru by a narrow squeak. It was a close call that the farmer is happy to be alive and we are assuming that from now on he will abide his eggs in a more conventional manner.

BROKE INTO STABLE AND STABBED HORSE.

Mr. Jos. K. Vick is mourning the loss of his good mare Vickie Klock, which had to be shot in consequence of injuries inflicted on her by some person unknown. The affair happened a few nights ago. Mr. Vick had been exercising the mare, getting her ready for the racing season, and had left her in the stable at his home about midnight, in perfectly good condition. About three o'clock in the morning he was awakened by a noise in the stable, and found, on going out that somebody had drawn the staple holding the padlock which secured the door and had cut a gash in the mare's high foreleg near the shoulder. It did not seem to be a serious cut; but a few hours later the wound began to swell, and when a veterinary surgeon was called he found that the wound was about five inches deep and appeared to have been made with a dagger or hunting knife. The muscles had been cut so that, even if the mare's life could have been saved, she would have been permanently lame; but poisoning set in despite all precautions, and she had to be killed. Mr. Vick has his suspicions as to the perpetrator of the dastardly deed; but unfortunately he has nothing on which to base further proceedings.—Owen Sound Advertiser.

FRANK STANLEY ARRESTED

Following the investigation into the burning of Frank Stanley's house and barn in Bruce township the middle of April, which lasted five days before Fire Marshall Eaton of Toronto, sitting in Township hall, Underwood, High Constable E. Briggs of Walkerton arrested Frank Stanley the owner of the burned property, on a charge of unlawfully attempting to obtain a sum of money from the Wawanosh Insurance Company. Stanley was let go on furnishing $1,000 bail to appear before Magistrate J. Tolton at Walkerton next Monday, June 6th. Great interest centered around the investigation which began last Thursday, lasting until Tuesday night. About forty witnesses were examined but there was no direct testimony as yet to who set fire to the buildings. The result of the investigation will not be known until the Fire Marshall sends his report to Crown Attorney Dixon, which we understand will not be for a couple of weeks. Mr. O. E. Klein was the Crown's lawyer at the investigation.—Telescope.

The Secret of the Old Chateau

By DAVID WHITELAW.

Synopsis of Previous Chapters.
 Vivian Renton and Eddie Haverton, modern soldiers of fortune, have been gambling with Hubert Baxenter, a prosperous attorney, in his London apartments. After their departure late at night Renton returns to the house, murders Baxenter and hides the body on the roof. While waiting for night to come again in order to make his escape, he finds in a desk a curious old yellowed document telling of a mysterious chest left in the care of French noblemen, the Marquis de Dartigny, of the Chateau Chauville. The chest has been handed down from one generation of Baxenters to another and carefully guarded in the hope that some day its rightful owner will be found. Renton decides to investigate as the missing heir and claim the chest. He goes to France to make some useful inquiries about the Dartigny family. The story of the mysterious chest goes back to the troubled days of the French Revolution and the escape of the Marquis and little granddaughter to England, where the chest and document were given to the Baxenters for safe keeping. Now, more than one hundred years later, Hubert Baxenter's body is found, but the police find no clue. Meanwhile, Renton changes his name to Baptiste Dartin, and visits Canada; then he presents his fictitious claims to Robert Baxenter, new head of the firm, and receives the treasure chest. Robert calls on Stella Benham whose heart is set on making a great success on the stage. She tells him he must wait a year for her answer.

CHAPTER X.

The Secret of the Dartignys.
 The same motives which had been responsible for Vivian Renton's residence in the cafe in the Latin Quarter, now seemed to cause Baptiste Dartin to fix upon a secluded boarding house in Camden Town as his London abode. The accommodation was not at all to his extravagant tastes, but it was only temporary—and in Mornington street he felt at least safe from any unwelcome recognition from his late friends.

It was to a room on the first floor that he carried the ancestral chest of the Dartignys. It looked curiously out of place there upon the faded flowered cloth of the crazy table. The boldly branded escutcheon, the time-blackened wood, with its heavy, rusted hinges and clappings, suggested with a silent eloquence a dignity strangely out of place among the tawdry furnishings of the room.

Dynasties had risen and fallen, wars and famines had ravaged France, and through it all the chest of the Dartignys had lain, hidden from the very light of day, in the dusty cellars beneath the Strand. Above its head the life of a century had played its part, the tramp of crowds claiming Waterloo had shaken its very dust. Monarchs had been crowned, had reigned and been gathered to their rest. And through it all the secret of the Chateau Chauville had slept.

Vivian was not dead to the sense of romance, and these thoughts passed through his mind as, after trying in vain to fit any of the keys on his ring to the lock, he stood hesitatingly, a heavy poker he had picked up from the fireplace in his hand. The pause was but momentary, and the man laughed at himself for his fancies.

With his penknife he whittled away at the wood beside one of the hinges, and inserting the point of the poker he used it as a lever. The oak was stout and the workmanship good, but perseverance won the battle, and with a creak of protest the wood splintered and yielded up its secret.

A little cloud of dust rose as Vivian wrenched off the lid, and when this had settled a curious sight met his eyes. A few pieces of gold and silver plate, richly chased and of exquisite workmanship, gleamed through wrappings of decayed and threadbare cloth. There were cases of worn-out eaten leather, too, containing quaint old brooches and necklaces, rings and bracelets—valuable enough, but dulled with age, as though the stones had despaired of ever seeing daylight again. The man who now regarded them felt a distinct disappointment, creeping over him, as one by one he lifted out the treasures.

After all, a certain gentleman whom he knew in Aldgate would give him, perhaps a thousand pounds for the collection as it stood—"fences" are not generous where ancient jewel settings are concerned, and the melting-pot is no respecter of escutcheons and monograms and curious workmanship. Why, it had cost him the five hundred he had taken from Mortimer Terrace to prepare for this coup, apart from the—yes, it was distinctly disappointing! He sat down in an old horsehair armchair and lit a pipe. It was a peculiar sight—the dull gleam of the vessels on the old tablecloth with the background of tawdry wallpaper and cheap oleographs. One of these, a portrait of the late Queen Victoria, seemed to be regarding the scene with marked disapproval. Dartin wondered what Mrs. Bates, his landlady, would think if she were to come up. He broke off in his thoughts as his eye fell upon a small square of parchment partly hidden beneath one of the leather cases. He had not noticed it before and he took it up with interest. It was tied by a faded thin red ribbon to a large, heavy key of intricate workmanship. Vivian translated the words on it in wonderment:

"Key to the hidden closet in Chateau Chauville, fitting the keyhole behind the apple in the right-hand panel on the south side wall of the dining-hall."

Vivian sat for some minutes deep in thought. The words on the scrap of parchment were amazingly vague, and he asked himself whether he had not already spent too much time and money on the affair of the de Dartignys. Better to see old Moseburg at once, clear the matter up and turn to other and more profitable game.

The deft brushwork of his agreeable who knew. Vivian's past associates were barred to him by the happenings at No. 9 Mortimer Terrace. It would never do to tread upon the trail of that sleeping crime. By taking on this affair he had burnt his boats and brought his fist down on the table, jingling the costly litter spread upon it.

"No; I'll see it through—to the very end. I'll realize on some of these jewels and put the others in a safe deposit. Luckily, I know the old chateau; I can at least test the truth of this matter of the key-hole."

He had been shown over the place once, and no doubt the old caretaker would be willing to show him over again.

He packed the valuable objects away in one of his portmanteaus, keeping back only a chain and locket and a small string of pearls. This latter he pledged with Attenborough, the same afternoon, the price lent upon it being such as to cause the spirit of Vivian Renton to rise considerably.

That evening as Monsieur Baptiste Dartin, in company with Robert Baxenter, sauntered among the promenaders in the "Empire," he laughingly told the story of his fortunes. He made very light of the whole affair.

"About a thousand pounds' worth, I should say, Mr. Baxenter; nice old monogram stuff—rather too swanky for us Colonials, I'm afraid. By-the-by, I brought this for you—a sort of memento," and Vivian took from his pocket the locket and chain. "Rather quaint, eh? I expect there is some lady somewhere who—"

He had spoken facetiously, but there was a look in the young solicitor's eyes which caused the speaker to break off rather abruptly.

"Well, it'll be a memento of a romantic occasion, anyway. Come, the ballet's beginning. I don't want to miss any of it. It's all new to me, you know."

Robert Baxenter, murmuring his thanks, dropped the locket into his vest pocket and followed M. Dartin back to the stalls. Neither seemed anxious to return to the subject of the treasure of the Dartignys.

CHAPTER XI.

The Carved Apple.

There is a little arbor adjoining the inn of the "Three Lilies," a sheltered, vine-clad retreat from which the fair land of France spreads itself out, a radiant picture in the Summer sunshine—and fully appreciative of all this beauty was the man who sat before an easel within its pleasant shade one August afternoon.

Baptiste Dartin had no great knowledge of the art of painting, but he was gifted with a superficial skill in color which a student of less virile brain might have studied years to acquire and never succeeded. He had been in Massey three weeks and the small population were beginning to like this stranger from Paris who depicted—and made them presents of—such delightful little paintings of their countryside.

Monsieur Paul de Barron, the present owner of the property of Chateau Chauville, was in residence at the chateau, and Henri, the caretaker, who well remembered Vivian's last visit, had less time on his hands than formerly. He was able, however, to slip up to the "Lilies" of an afternoon, where, cigarette in mouth, he would watch the deft brushwork of this agreeable acquaintance. Vivian had given him a slight sketch of the chateau towers above the trees, and the old fellow, so it were as sacred things, had become the painter's very slave for it.

Henri, seated beside him this Summer afternoon, watched the artist in a lazy content. Beside him there were a box of cigarettes and a bottle of claret. The sun beat down through the vines clustering overhead and scattered little golden discs of radiance upon the boarded floor. A bed dined musically over the flowers in the garden. Flamed between the supports of the trellis-work, cornfields and vineyards shimmered in the heat; afar off the hills, patched with forest lands, spoke of breeze and shadow.

Vivian, skilfully touching in a purple shade beneath a clump of poplars, was speaking carelessly. He did not take his eyes from his sketching-block.

"I'm glad you like the little drawing, Henri. I'm no artist, but—"

"Ah! monsieur—it is the chateau I love, not the art—that is—I mean," Henri stammered over his faux pas, "it is very beautifully done, Monsieur Dartin."

For a moment Vivian painted on without speaking, then:

"I'm better at interiors, Henri—dim old rooms and all that. Look at that old paneling in the chateau, for instance—what a charming picture, Henri; I'll do it for you, if you like, when Monsieur de Barron goes away—next month, didn't you say?"

And Henri, who had no wish that the treasures under his care should bluish unseen, rose to the bait with avidity—monsieur was too kind—he would have it framed like the other and they would go on either side of his bed.

And so it was that on an afternoon when the September sun made glorious the old carvings of the Chateau dining-room, Monsieur Baptiste Dartin stood for the second time in the ancestral home of the Dartignys. He had entered warily, even to the extent of looking anywhere save at the paneling by the fireplace. He remarked, instead, to old Henri, on the carved ceiling, the windows in which the de Barron escutcheon had replaced that of the Dartignys.

It was old Henri, too, who suggested the subject of the sketch to the right of the great stone hearth, with its rich coloring of oak and the little grouping of dim family portraits. There was a beam of sunlight that came athwart the room, and Vivian could hardly repress a start as he saw that this rested upon an exquisite carving of a cornucopia, and in the fruit that was tumbling from it an apple showed prominently.

He chose a posita by the table, facing the fruit. He was so eager to examine. Surely never since the historic apple of Eden, had fruit such to the fascination of a man. The painter could hardly hide his irritation when he saw that old Henri, taking a seat near him, produced his cigarettes and settled down to enjoy the painting.

For an hour or two work went on steadily and silently, then the caretaker rose and stretched his limbs. He had work to do, but he must attend to the old servant no shadow of suspicion had place, but there was an unformed idea at the back of his head that it was hardly right to leave him there alone, but—he was such a gentleman, and if he offended him he would stand little chance of possessing the picture in the artist's sketch-book.

"Only another half-hour, Henri; the light of this setting sun is splendid—look at that golden ray on that old soldier's coat in the portrait—I can let myself out if I don't see you."

And it was said in such simplicity that the caretaker, entirely disarmed, hesitated no longer.

The door of the dining-room closed behind him, and the artist, waiting a moment, rose warily and tip-toed to the windows. He could make out the bent figure of the old man crossing the gardens and watched him until he disappeared into one of the farm buildings which showed across a meadow of parched grass that was separated from the gardens by a graceful line of poplars.

It was some moments before Vivian's strong fingers could make any impression on the carved apple—moments when he told himself that, after all, he had been chasing a shadow. Then, suddenly, a little creak, and he imagined that the wood beneath his hand moved; beads of moisture prickled out on his forehead as he verified this, then the top of the apple unscrewed gratingly and came away in his hand. He gave a little cry of relief.

Hastily whipping open his shirt he drew out the key which he had found in the chest and which he had suspended round his neck by a ribbon. He was not surprised that it fitted the keyhole that came to light behind the carving—nothing would surprise him now—and he told himself that he had succeeded and that he was on the threshold of wondrous things. A hasty glance at the window showed him the old man still at work in and out of the barns across the meadow.

Woman's Interests

Stocking Repairing.
 The woman who has a large family to keep in whole stockings is sure to be interested in ways of making foot-gear last the longest. Prevention is better than cure, and the thrifty woman avoids mending as long as she can by a few simple rules, and then goes at the task when it must be done, in a business-like way that gets the best results.

Prevention of stocking darning consists, primarily, in washing the hose more frequently than is usual. It may look like saving to some to let the family go with one pair of hose per member each week, but it is waste of the most extravagant order. Frequent washing allows the worn places to thicken up, changes the places where the rubbing comes and saves in many ways, besides being more sanitary. A pair of fresh stockings daily in hot weather and two or three pairs per week in cold weather will make more washing, it is true, but the stockings wear longer and have to be mended less frequently. Many a case of foot trouble can be traced to unclean stockings.

Nails cut frequently and smoothly save stockings, as a ragged nail quickly goes through the toe of the stocking. Well-fitting shoes with good soles also save darning.

But when holes appear they must be darned—never mend with clumsy patches that invite foot trouble. A smooth, light-colored darning, to stretch the hole over, and cotton of the same weight as the stockings will result in a smooth, even darn that will not hurt even a baby's foot; while a patch will cause agony on account of the thick seams. Many a woman considers herself economical because she never buys darning cotton, but slaps on a clumsy patch from a worn-out stocking; but she has failed to consider the importance of feet. A shoe expert who fits hundreds of people yearly with special—and therefore expensive—shoes, says that much of the trouble is caused by ill-fitting stockings, patched stockings, stockings too small and stockings too large. The woman who goes about the house in horrible old shoes and stockings patched and repatched and thinks herself economical will one day pay the penalty.

When a thin place appears in a stocking reinforce it strongly and smoothly with cotton woven in and out and it will last much longer than to wait for the break to come. Many darn the heels and toes of new stockings, and it certainly pays to do so for children. Knee protectors worn at home by small boys and girls save the stockings which are sure to be torn in the most conspicuous place. These protectors can be made from cloth, old stockings, soft pieces of leather, or can be purchased ready made.

Heel protectors are worn by some men for the same purpose, while others save the worn-out socks and put on two pairs when ditching or doing some dirty work, then throwing them away when the work is done.

It pays to save in every way possible, for darning will always be the bug-bear for busy women. Save all the old stockings and let the children play in them. Use new feet for the good stocking legs when low shoes are not worn, and encourage every member of the family to take off promptly any stocking that develops a hole, no matter whether clean or soiled. A stitch in time saves more than nine in darning, and the thrifty woman takes that stitch in time.

Making Over Your Face.
 Does your face need making over? Have you ever thought of renovating it? How about taking a tuck in your eyebrows, ironing out your wrinkles, shrinking your chin, and, if your hair-line is not becoming, draping it at another angle? You wouldn't hesitate to make over your clothes, now would you? Well, why not make over your face?

There are your eyebrows: Perhaps you've never given them any attention. Perhaps you've never thought how much they have to do with the expression. Are they too broad and big for your face? If so, reshape and trim them down. Brush them as often as you do your hair. All the beauty experts sell special eyebrow brushes and little tweezers to pull out the unruly hairs. And I've just heard of a new kind of mullage which has a magic way of making the hairs lie flat—giving the penciled look.

Iron out your wrinkles. Do it with massage and ice. You know how you pad your coat to make it fit without a wrinkle. Well, pad the sunken tissues. It is these that make the wrinkles. Tone the tissues up. Keep them from being loose and flabby. It is when they lack strength or are tired that the wrinkles come. Be sure that you select a cream for the massage that will strengthen these tissues. There are creams that are special tissue builders, and there is a right and a wrong way to use them. Rub the cream into the forehead with a firm upward stroke. Wait a few minutes, and then, with the thumbs above the ears, rub with the fingers along the line of the temples. Finish with a rotary movement, which means rubbing round and round. An application of ice to increase the circulation is a good finishing touch.

Refresh up your lifeless, sallow skin with a good face lotion. A purely vegetable lotion is best—one that will not dry the skin. Use it in place of soap and water, applying it with absorbent cotton. Wash your face this way in the morning, and at night use a cream. One with peroxide as its special ingredient will whiten your skin.

Then health, you know, is about the best beautifier I know. It freshens the skin and gives charm to the expression.

Agassiz Wensleydale.
 This is a small, mild flavored cheese weighing when ripe about two and a half pounds, made after the method used for the manufacture of Little Wensleydale cheese in the north of England.

To make 2 cheeses—50 lbs. fresh milk, 3 oz. starter, 7 c.c. rennet. The amount of starter may vary, the object is to have about .22 deg. acidity in the milk at the time of adding rennet. Room temperature about 68 deg. F.

Heat the milk containing starter to 82 deg. F. and add the rennet. Stir for three minutes and then stir the surface only at intervals of three minutes till coagulum forms; probably this will take ten minutes. Cover the vat and leave for one hour. When ready, cut the curd, using the vertical knife lengthwise and across vat and, after three minutes, the horizontal knife in the same way. Stir with the hand for ten minutes and if the curd seems firm enough it need not be scalded. If the acidity in whey at cutting is less than .14 deg. it is advisable to scald but an initial acidity of .22 will usually mean about .15 in the whey. Scalding temperature is 90 deg. F. for this cheese. Remove the curd from the whey on to cloths placed on racks in the cooler. The plug in the cooler is left in place so that the curd is partly immersed in whey. After thirty minutes draw off the whey and cut the curd into blocks six or ten inches square and later into smaller squares.

As the cheese is made here the curd is usually ready for grinding and salting in three hours from time of removal to cooler. Acidity at time of grinding .25, or not more than .3. The curd is broken up by hand (unless there is a very large quantity) and salt at the rate of 1 oz. to 5 lbs. curd added; the latter should be tender and free from visible whey. It is packed into tin moulds 5 ins. high by 4½, pierced and fitted with two tin followers, the lower one also pierced. A wooden follower is placed on top and weight five pounds or six pounds to each cheese put on at once.

Eighteen hours later a muslin bandage completely covering cheese is pasted on and cheese replaced under press. Six hours later cheeses are removed from the moulds and put in a draughty place in the curing room. They will be ready for market in about three weeks, but will improve up to four weeks if not allowed to dry too much.

Twenty-five pounds of milk testing 3.3 per cent. contains .825 pound butterfat. This makes one cheese weighing about 2½ pounds when ready for sale.

Classified Ad Aids Cupid.
 A war romance via the "Personal" classified advertisement columns of a daily paper has just been consummated, says a London despatch.

It is the story of an Australian ex-sergeant, who, after having won the D.C.M. and the M.M. at the front, passed through Birmingham in 1918 en route to a demobilization camp. On a railroad station platform he talked with a pretty girl for fifteen minutes, and—the Australians being quick workers, received a gift of a lock of hair before he left. He did not learn the girl's name, however. Returning to Australia, he moved to Tasmania, and from there wrote the chief constable at Birmingham, saying that he had fallen in love with the girl, and asking aid in finding her. An advertisement was inserted in The Daily Mail, of London, the girl saw the "agency column" notice, photographs were exchanged, and last week she sailed for Hobart, Tasmania.

The Soul of the Advertisement
 Granted an arresting headline, the art of writing a retail advertisement is just the ability to say one's ad intelligently, in logical order, and, above all, naturally.

No "literary gift"—no flowery language—is necessary. The best copy is the earnest, over-the-counter talk you would give to a customer.
 In other words, put yourself—your soul—into your writing.
 Grammar is useful, but not indispensable. It doesn't make or break the advertisement. It is your own earnestness and conviction that makes people believe and respond to what you say.

You will find, as you devote more attention to your advertising, that it will return you dividends of pleasure as well as of profit. As time passes, customers will notice an omission and speak to you about it. This experience is not imaginary. It is a fact—as many merchants and publishers will testify.

One of the most enjoyable things you can do is to spend an hour or so a few evenings a week thinking out a well-balanced weekly newspaper advertising campaign for your store and your merchandise. And, having thought it out, carry it through regardless of other people's opinions or whims.

You have three of the best trading months ahead. Do, then, as we suggest, and watch results.

It is in every man to be first-class in something, if he will. Only himself can hold him back. There is no excuse for incompetence in this age of opportunity and efficiency; no excuse for being second-class when it is possible to be first-class, and when first-class is in demand everywhere.

Remarkable Christian Names

It is one of the minor tragedies of life that a man is allowed no voice in the choice of his baptismal name. No doubt the parent who had twins christened Cherubim and Seraphim, because, as he explained, "they continually do cry," was proud of his cleverness; but he could scarcely expect his offspring to "rise up and call him blessed," any more than the man whose five children had to sign their names Imprimis, Finis, Appendix, Supplement, and Erratum.

Equally unfortunate were infants launched into the world as Not-Wanted James, Is-It-Maria? and That's-It-Who'd-Have-Thought-It. Even Odious Health and Troublesome John Sims could afford to smile at such labels while deploring their own, while it was without malicious intent that the parents of an American named Cumber christened him, as their fifth, Quintus. Naturally, his political opponents could not resist referring to him in print as Mr. Q. Cumber.

While some parents exhibit too much ingenuity at the baptismal font, others seem to be singularly lacking in that virtue. One man called his sons, in order of birth, One Stickney, Two Stickney, and Three Stickney; and his daughters, by way of numerical variety, First, Second, and Third Stickney.

The two children of another parent were christened Also and Another, while the progeny of a Mr. and Mrs. Frost were known to an amused world as Jack Frost, Winter Frost, White Frost, and Early Frost.

Vernal Greenwood, with its poetic suggestiveness, is pardonable, and partridge Roast has an appetizing flavor; but what shall we say of Mr. Bull, who had his first-born dubbed Wild, and of Mr. Keye, whose infant son was branded Donne Keye, in honor of his mother's maiden name.

A glance through the registers at Somerset House will reveal hundreds of curious names, says an English newspaper. Thus we find Reservoir Green rubbing shoulders with Noah Ark Smith; Britannia Bottle smiling across the page at Joseph Ann Reynolds and Affability Box; and Happy Ephraim Jiggins with Virtuoso Jane Spurgeon; Man Friday Wilson and Merry Christmas Finnett look on enviously.

Names of great warriors and statesmen are associated with the most unwarlike and unpolitical of surnames. Thus we find Arthur Wellesley Waterloo Cox fraternizing on the same page with Napoleon-the-Great Brown! and Richard Coeur de Lion Tyler bridging the centuries to compare notes with Robert Alma Balaclava Inkerman Sebastopol Delhi Dugdale, whose father was a tailor.

John Redvers Buller Thomas' and Ezekiel Methuen Macdonald Baden-Powell Williams owe their names to the Boer War; while the parents of King David Haydon, Martin Luther Upright, and Lord Nelson Jones have gone farther back in history for inspiration. There are parents for whom nothing less than royal labels will suffice. And thus we encounter Empress Eugenie Aldridge, Albert Edward Prince of Wales Morris, King George Westgate, and Royal Consort Partington.

One Unhappy man was condemned to go through life labelled Ananias; and in Norfolk there was living not long ago a man who signed his name Mahershalahashbaz.

While the majority of parents are content with one or two Christian names for their children, there are others who must have a long string of them. Thus there is living a short time ago a woman who had a name for every letter of the alphabet, from Anne Bertha Cecilia to Winifred Xenophon Yetty Zeus.

Bottles As Messengers.
A wire received from Philadelphia recently announced the finding of one of the Lusitania's lifebelts. This sad reminder of disaster must have traveled three thousand miles, and occupied years in its journey.

Not one of the several clues relating to the unexplained disappearance of the Waratah proved to be genuine, but the evidence of bottle messages has often been accepted in courts of law.

The Nimia sailed from Newcastle, New South Wales, in July, 1912, and was never heard of again. Long afterwards, a scrap of paper torn from a log book was washed up on the New Zealand coast. It bore a scrawled message: "Nimia is sinking fast by hurricane in 42 S, 160 E. Gott save us."
The German consul at Auckland was able to establish the fact that the handwriting was that of the captain of the ill-fated vessel.

The General Steam Navigation Company's vessel Oriole left London for Havre in January, 1915. The following month several of her lifebelts were picked up near Hastings, but the Oriole never reached her destination. Subsequently a Guernsey fisherman picked up a beer bottle, containing a sheet of paper on which was written a brief message signed by three of the crew—"Oriole—torpedo—sinking."

The Allan liner Huronian left Glasgow in 1902, and disappeared entirely. Five years afterwards a man saw a bottle washed up by the tide on the north coast of Ireland. He opened it and found a paper on which was written the message, "Huronian sinking fast. Tip heavy. One side under water. Good-bye, mother and sister, Charles McFall."

Several bottle messages were put in as evidence during an inquiry into the loss of a Grimsby trawler, the Angus. One, picked up on the coast of Norway, read, "Steamship Angus. All hands nutny. Collision with foreign barque."

Bottles have been known to come to land even fifteen years after they had been cast into the ocean.

Surnames and Their Origin

MORGAN
Racial Origin—Welsh.
Source—A given name.

This is a family name which has been formed from the given name in the normal process which marks the development of Welsh surnames falling within this classification.

That virtually no widely known variations of the name exist is due to the fact that it is a name not easily simplified or changed in form. Most changes in names, as in words, of course, have come about through a tendency to simplify rather than to make complex.

Morgan is very ancient as a given name in the Cymric branch of the Celtic tongues, and its meaning was "sea white."

While the Welsh had their clans in somewhat the same fashion as the Irish and the Scottish Highlander, the clan system among them does not seem to have persisted to the extent that it did in Ireland and in the Highlands, at least to the extent of imposing itself upon the family name system of later generations. For the most part the Welsh formed their family names in much the same fashion as the English, using them in the first place as mere explanations of the individual's parentage. The Welsh word corresponding to the "son" of the English, the "Fitz" of the Normans and the "Mac" of the Gaels was "Ap." Thus "Evan Ap Morgan" was simply "Evan the son of Morgan." And just as these prefixes and suffixes have been dropped later in English and Gaelic names, so the "Ap" has been dropped in the Welsh names.

O'ROURKE
Variations—O'Rorke, O'Ruarc, Rourke, Rooke, Rorke.
Racial Origin—Irish.
Source—A given name.

The Clan O'Rourke, from which the Clan O'Reilly took its origin, and which in its turn was an offshoot of the Clan O'Connor, is listed among the oldest of clan organizations among the Irish.

As a clan name, which virtually was the same thing as a family name, this surname probably antedates anything in the way of an English family name by some three or four centuries.

The founder of the O'Rourke clan was a chieftain named Roarc O'Connor, the youngest of the twelve sons of the famous Tiernan O'Connor. The date was some time prior to 93 A.D.

A grandson of Roarc, Feargal O'Rourke, was the thirty-ninth Christian King of Connaught. This monarch died in 954, and for a period of several centuries afterward this clan contributed many monarchs to the royal list of this kingdom.

Like most of the Irish names, this one has suffered rather drastic changes in spelling through its translation into the English language.

The given name of "Roarc" is derived from ancient Gaelic words meaning "very swift."

STERN REMINDERS OF RHEUMATISM

The Trouble Must be Treated Through the Blood.

Every rheumatic sufferer should realize that rheumatism is rooted in the blood and that to get rid of it it must be treated through the blood. The old belief that rheumatism was caused by cold, damp weather, is now exploded. Such weather conditions may start the pains, but it is not the cause. Liniments and outward applications may give temporary relief, but they do not reach its sources in the blood. The sufferer from rheumatism who experiments is only wasting time and money in depending upon such treatment; the trouble still remains, and it is all the time becoming more firmly rooted. Treat this disease through the blood and you will soon find relief. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills act directly on impure, weak blood; they purify and strengthen it, and so act on the cause of the rheumatism. Mr. P. J. MacPherson, R.R. No. 5, Cardigan, P.E.I., says: "About three years ago I was attacked with rheumatism. I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and soon the trouble disappeared and I am in better health than before. I also know of an old lady acquaintance who was badly crippled with rheumatism in her arms and legs, and who suffered very much. She, too, took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and is now able to do her housework. I tell you this in the hope it may be of benefit to some other sufferer."

You can procure Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or they will be sent you by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing direct to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Ask Yourself
Am I living the sort of life that will give me the largest returns in brain energy and gripping thought, in masterful living; that will keep me always fit for the biggest things I am capable of doing? Am I doing the sort of things that will encourage my aspiration, feed my ambition, develop my mental and physical strength, or am I forming habits which will tend to sap the largest percentage of my energy, demoralize me, demoralize my efforts, kill my ambition, mar my ideals?

These are fundamental questions which strike at the very tap-root of our possibilities. What we should be ambitious to do is to bring out the largest possible man, the man we are capable of being, the man we long to be. And we should live and work with this end in view, and not like a man who should say: "I want to bring out the divine possibilities in me, for I realize that I have two natures, two selves, so to speak. The largest possible man in me is ever prodding me on, ever suggesting to me that I bring him out and give him a chance; but I am not willing to pay the price, I am not willing to do the hard work, which would make the larger man possible, and so there is nothing I feel I can do but go on, year in and year out, letting the little man in me get my living while the larger man is thundering at the very gates, asking to be let out, to be given a chance to make good."

BITS OF HUMOR FROM HERE & THERE

Nothing Much.
"Pa, what are ancestors?"
"Well, my son, you are one of yours. Your grandpa is another."
"Oh! Then why is it people brag about them?"

Saving Money.
Mrs. Doughless—"I saved the money to buy this coat, darling."
Doughless—"How did you manage it, precious?"
Mrs. D.—"I bought it with the money you gave me for a new hat and had the hat charged to your account."

Not Time for Everything.
First Constable—"Did yer get that car's number?"
Second Constable—"No! too blinkin' fast for me. That was a good lookin' girl on the back seat, wasn't it?"
First Constable—"Aye, that she was."

Short, But Confusing.
Have you ever heard the story of Gilligan?
Gilligan was an Irishman, and he once got the position of station-master of a little wayside line of a not-much-used little Irish branch railway. Gilligan was not accustomed to sending in reports, and as he had to send one in to headquarters every day he found it rather difficult work.

First of all his reports were so long, and rambled so from one subject to another, that the officials at headquarters could not understand them, so they requested him to make his reports shorter, but sensible.

One day a light engine ran off the lines quite close to the station of which Gilligan was station-master.

The following day, in wording his report, Gilligan said:
"Engine off again, on again, gone again.—Gilligan."

Tom Was Puzzled.
An expedition was sent to one of the Southern States to observe the recent eclipse of the sun.

The day before the event one of its members said to an old darky belonging to the house where he was staying: "Tom, if you will watch your chickens to-morrow morning you'll find that they'll all go to roost at eleven o'clock."

Tom was skeptical, but sure enough at the time predicted the sky darkened and the chickens retired to roost. The Negro, amazed beyond measure, sought out the scientist.

"Perfessor," he asked, "how long ago did you know dem chickens would go to roost?"
"About a year ago," he replied with a smile.

"Well, if dat don't beat all! Why, perfessor, a year ago dem chickens wasn't even hatched!"

WELL SATISFIED WITH BABY'S OWN TABLETS
Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she will use nothing else. Her use of them leads her to believe there is no other medicine to equal them for any of the many minor ailments of childhood. Concerning them Mrs. Eugene Bolvert, East Aldfield, Que., writes: "My baby was terribly constipated, but after the use of Baby's Own Tablets he is entirely well again. I am so well satisfied with the Tablets that I lose no opportunity in recommending them to other mothers." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Myself.
I have to live with myself, and so I want to be fit for myself to know. I want to be able as days go by, Always to look myself straight in the eye; I don't want to stand, with the setting sun, And hate myself for the things I've done.

I don't want to keep on a closet shelf A lot of secrets about myself, And fool myself, as I come and go, Into thinking that nobody else will know The kind of a man I really am; I don't want to dress up myself in sham.

I want to go out with my head erect, I want to deserve all men's respect; But here in the struggle for fame and self I want to be able to like myself. I don't want to look at myself and know That I'm bluster and bluff and empty show.

I never can hide myself from me; I see what others may never see; I know what others may never know; I never can fool myself, and so, Whatever happens, I want to be Self-respecting and conscience-free.

How a Salesman May Fail.

He may fail from lack of tact in introducing himself.
He may fail from lack of confidence in himself.
He may fail if he is slovenly in his dress and careless in his habits, because this leads other men to suspect that he is not prosperous and does not represent a first-class concern.

He may fail if he speaks indistinctly or too rapidly or if he lacks ambition and earnestness.
He may fail because he indulges in awkward expressions and gestures or proceeds by undue familiarity.
He may fail from lack of dignity.
He may fail because he does not answer questions and criticisms intelligently and concisely.
He may fail from inability to profit by his mistakes.
He may fail because he does not try to learn in advance, the characteristics of each man he meets.
He may fail because he does not use the influence of his lists.
He may fail because he mis-reads his customer; is quick when he should be slow; is slow when he should be quick or because he talks too long or not long enough before telling his business and coming to the point.
He may fail because he does not have a full knowledge of, or cannot describe what he is selling.
He may fail by neglecting to do or say one or more of a hundred things in the right way. Also by doing or saying a wrong thing at the wrong time or in the wrong way. The excuse given is seldom true.

LIVE STOCK MARKETS TORONTO

Light cattle receipts at the Union Stock Yards yesterday failed to bring about any improvement from the depression which marked the trade last week. While values in most cases held steady with last week's close the undertone was a week one. A little demand was apparent for export cattle but buying was by no means heavy and the stocker and feeder trade continued to be at a standstill. Cows suffered a further decline in a slow trade, while bulls sold at a price which were little changed.

The cattle trade was a draggy one but there was a fair demand, and practically everything was sold. The packers were slow in getting started but more activity was noticeable toward noon. Expectations yesterday were to the effect that the offerings for the balance of the week would be light and that prices would not change much. Thirteen loads of yesterday's receipts were billed through for export to England. The receipts contained several loads of choice butcher cattle, but these did not have a brisk sale. Choice butchers generally sold from $8 to $8.75 while a few heavy cattle brought $9 per cwt.

A light offering of calves resulted in a better tone and slightly stronger values. The quality of the offering was only medium, but a good cleanup was erected at strong prices. Choice calves brought from $8 to $10.50 and medium from $6 to $8.

Packers quotations for hogs were on the basis of $8.50 fed and watered but a small offering prevented them securing them at the desired cut. Hog closed last week at $9 per cwt. on the fed and watered basis, and sales were made yesterday at the same price. An effort will be made by the packer buyers today to bring about a cut of 50 cents a cwt.

SAFETY STOP FOR MOTORS

Mr. John G. Clarke, Greenock, has invented a safety stop for motor vehicles, which will add to the safety of motor travellers, as it positively prevents a car running back on a hill road. The invention is a small clutch attached to the propeller shaft of car and is operated by a lever in front of the driver's seat. The clutch is applied by hand and released automatically when car is started ahead. The action of the safety stop is so positive that when it is engaged the car cannot be backed by starting the engine. In fact it will stall the engine until started ahead.

When you see a man with a red nose you can usually be assured that it has not been made with water colors.

Niagara-on-the-Lake is to have a basket factory owned by a company composed of fruit-growers, who are determined henceforth not to be handicapped as in years past by failure to get baskets in which to ship their fruit. The growers also expect to save a lot of money on the enterprise.

A daring young girl succeeded in looping-the-loop in an airplane 199 times in one continuous performance. It was a demonstration of wonderful nerve, but there are some women who will wonder if she could make 199 loops with a needle and thread in mending a garment. Why, she never need to mend a garment, so long as she can do tricks in the air.
