What an Englishman Says of British Col-

What an Englishman Says of British Columbia's Capital.

An Englishman thus writes of Victoria, B. C.:— The climate of Victoria appears to me all that could be desired. Thoroughly temperate and healthful; winter short and pleasant, with a very scanty snowfall; summers such as we in England and Ireland remember with regret, or hear our elders tell of many years ago. The only complaint I heard was concerning a ceel breeze which grows every evening with greater regularity, seeming over the Olympian snow-range in Washington territors— It acted on my constitution like a most invigorating cold bath. The country round Victoria is levely. The reads are frimged with thickets of wild from the old country) in immense hushes. The roads remind one of the lanes in Kent, but nowhere in Kent is such luxuriance of vegetation; such wealth of green and light and shadow. A land of extreme beauty; a very paradise of scenery, with the great snowy background of the Olympian range. Compared with Victoria—this Belle of the Pacific—Tunbridge Wells is the worn out commens, and Brighten and Eastbourne, with all their wealth, are far outshene by the natural charms of the Canadian Pacific.

A most lovely neighborhood But, oh! these Victorians want to make up their destiny; to learn to spend as well as make money; to drain, and clean, and water, and light, and do the very little nature has not done for them. Day by day the dusty streets are swept by the breezs to the infinite discomfiture of the dweller and visitor. Night by night the noxious gasses of their primitive roadside gutters are disinfected by the cool draft from the mountains. Were it otherwise they would soon learn their penny wisdom was pound foolishness, and even as it is, typhoid is to common,

The New Gold Mines in Asia.

The new gold mines discovered in the valley of the Djolgute river are called New California. The valley is upon the Chinese bank of Amoor, opposite the Russian col-ony of Tgnachino, and as the soll is very marshy, and there is no roads it is only so-cessible in the winter. Gold was first dis-covered there in May, 1884, and it soon atcovered there in May, 1884, and it acon attracted a great many adventurers, the earliest comers being Russian deserters and escaped convicts from Siberia, and by the month of January in last year there was a colony of 9,000 Russians, the tetal having been very much increased since, while there are also about 6,500 Uniness and 150 adventure of different pationalities, the last turers of different nationalities, the last named of whom have joined the Russians, the erganization of the colony being altogether Russian.

The goldfinders are divided into 722 small

The goldfinders are divided into 722 small groups of workmen, all of whom are absolutely equal. These groups elect twelve elders, who did not work themselves, but superintend the diggings, and receive a salary of 200 roubles a month. They are selected from among the dealers in gold and tavern keepers, and form a sort of district pelice corps. They do not meet with any interference from the Chinese authorities in this remote valley, the laws of which are vary simple but severe, the penalty of death this remote valley, the laws of which are very simple but severe, the penalty of death being inflicted for cheating at play, for adulterating the gold dust, or for theft; while flegging is inflicted for drunkenness during the hours of labor or for bringing females into the colony.

Since the foundation of the colony there have been only three murders and two in-flictions of the death penalty; a Russian having been hung for adulterating the gold dust, and a Jew flogged to death for having spread false news as to the appreach of a body of Russian troops, hoping thereby to send down the price of gold owing to the panic. There are twenty-seven taverns in the colony, and, owing to the competition the prices are not high, except for spirits The gold fields which are twenty-five miles in The gold fields which are twenty-five miles in length by three miles broad, are said to be very rich, and 7 psunds of gold are obtained from 32 cwt. of gravel, even with the primitive mode of washing adopted there.

Celestials in British Columbia.

The Victorians have a very sharp way of dealing with the cheap labor difficulty. No vessel is allowed to bring to port more than one John Chinaman for every hundred tons of its size. Consequently a ship of feurteen hundred tens would only be allowed to carry fourteen of the heathen ones. We have just seen in a file of Victorian papers that a vessel of that size was found to have fifty Chinaman on board, and the captain was mulcted in a penalty of $500. Every Chinaman coming to Victoria has to take out papers of naturalisation and pay a poll tax. But the cute Celestials post their naturalization papers to their friends in China, who come ever with them, and thus escape the tax. scape the tax.

A Snake Story.

For six menths a young man named Ferguson, who resided at Great Falis, has been in failing health, despite the care of his physiciaus. Among many odd symptoms was that of a peculiar choking sensation, which was not understood until one day a make thrust its head cut of the young man's mouth. The sick man called his sister, and she, wrapping a cioth around her hand, when next the hissing head appeared, seized it, and with a quick pull landed the venomous reptile at her feet. Her action killed her brother. The tail of the anake had grown into the young man's body, and in tearing it away a blood vessel was broken, and the young man bled to death.

So Mr Trezarr is the guest of the war minister's only son, a pleasant gentlemanly youth, who does his best to make the banker's enforced imprisonment bearable to him, and never lost an opportunity of informing him that if he were to venture forth into the street he would assuredly be killed, and who has always some wondrous tale to tell of the sinking of British ironclads, or the annilhilation of British ironclads, or the annilhilation of British armies, or that the Sultan was on his way to help them, for the Egyptain leaders were quite clever at the apreading of false reports as were the Russians.

Very similar tales were told to Nellie by Arabi Pasha's wife, only to her account was always added semething of the miraculous, as was to be expected from a lady who believed in sorcery and always kept a dream interpeter in her employ in whose predictions she placed the most implicit confidence.

Meltie felt very uncomfortable in this lady's presence at first, lest she might know or guess the future that was intended to be in store for her and feel angry or hurt thereby. But she before long breached the subby. But she before long broached the sub-ject of her own accord, and it did not appear to be at all a sore one.
"When you are my sister we shall leve each other very much," she murmured ently.

"When I am your sister? I don't exactly

"Then I must be your sister already, for the pasha believes that he has married me."

"Believes, little one? If be, has done so he must know for certain, I should say."

"Well, he thinks so then," rejoined Nellie, petulantly, "but I am quite sure that he has not, first, because I was no consenting party, and secondly, because I was another man's wife at the time."

"Ah, but, little sister, if any one has

"Ah, but, little sister, if any one has made a mistake in the matter it must be made a mistake in the matter it must be yourself, for you are young and doubtless feelish, whilst Ahmed Arabi has the wisdom of more than double your years, and beside, he would not do wrong to the meanest thing that breathes. A good and blessed thing it is to be the wife of such a man, for she never hears an angry word drop from his lips. He is really one in a thousand, and now that he has sunk all the English ships and taken the English King prisoner he will doubtless be made the sovereign of all Egypt and will be almost as great as the Sultan himself."

His taking of the English King prisoner amused Nellie, despite the sorrows of her heart. After that she saw it would be a vain and foolish thing to pump the Valide Khanoum as to how the war was going on, since her replies would be very unstrustworthy indeed.

From that date Nellie felt that she should

From that date Nellie felt that she should know no rest until she was possessed of better information concerning affairs of moment outside her gilded prison.

Mrs. Trezarr accommedated herself to her changed position wonderfully well.

She felt a keen interest in the most trivial, themes of harem gossip, and would rell her eyes and clap her hands at any marvelous narration as though to the manner bern, As to Mr. Trearre, she seldom even inquired after him, such conduct marking the dif-ference between living with a husband twen-

One day the Valide Khaneum came into Nellie's little room with an open letter in her hand and a face that was very cheerful and bright, and addressing the fair girl by her usual affectionate epithet of "Little Sister," said to her in excited tones: ter," said to her in excited tones:

The Valide Khanoum quickly made an

I will dip into the middle of it at ence, where he declares that he has at last got the Feringhee invaders in the hollow of his hand and has had to close it in order to utterly crush them. He next pays many compliments to their courage and the generalship of their chiefs, but says that their graves, nevertheless, await then at Tel-el-Kebir and that in another sun and moon, by which he means a day and night, they will have co-cupied them and Egypt be free. And now comes the all important part of our lerd's sword towards the advancing home;

Its brandish in the air was sufficient algnal for every trumpet to blow out, for every lines to grip the pigskin, for every foot to turn in and every heel to drop.

Obedient to each brazen sound the regiment formed by the troops, changed into serried equadrons and them advanced out into the plain at a rapid trot in a glittering column of equadrons at wheeling distance.

Amidst the tumultuous see of swaying human forms and tossing horse's heads it was some little while before Frank Donelly could discover him whom he especially sought, but suddenly in the very thickest of the strife, he found himself face to face with him.

The recognition was mutual, and the next instant their blades were crossed. Both had been previously whetted, both Briton and Egyptian was full of blood lust that is over born of such de

Thereupon, Drury Lowe's cavalry, comprising the Irish dragoons, the Life Guards and an Indian lance regiment, made asweeping flank movement on Mahsameh station and the railway, hoping to get in their rear and cut them off to a man, but the Egyptians were so swift foeted and the ground so bad for cavalry that he failed in this.

By midnight the British vanguard, consisting of General Graham's brigade of 1,800 bayonets, a Bengal lance regiment and our friends, the Irish dragoons, were at Khassassin, with their nearest supports half a dezen miles in their rear and the slew moving guards just as far to the rear of them again.

There was no time to draw a pistol from his helster, for his rival's sword was at his throat, and there was death in that rival's eyes, if it was expressed by human orbs.

"Strike," gasped Arabi in French, "strike! Do I look as though I was afraid to die?"

The Egyptian infantry were in full retreat and a second or two later the Egyptian cavalry also broke and fied, whilst the Irish drageons, now reinforced by the swarthy Bombay cavalry, pursued them across the desert plain to almost under the guns of the Tel-el-Kebir batteries.

The Ornelties of Heathenism

(CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.)

On his way to the centre of Africa, Mr F. S. Arnet wrote from Bihe as follows to Mr. Sanders at Bailundu, cencerning "a Bihe barbarity": "A few days age I neticed a little boy, about eight years of age, who belongs to Ruskit's town close by, going about with both his hands in a sad mess. The left ene was completely distorted and three of the fingers jointed together in one red, sore mass, the palm bulging forward, the arm above the wrist was skinned and also the right hand. I found that this youngster had been out visiting at the king's youngster had been out visiting at the king's town or somewhere near there. The boy in playing about had stolen some beans belonging to a daughter of Jamba Yamina, the king, they call her Naroma Cunengile, who, to punish the child for stealing her beans, put his hands into a pet of boiling water. I have seen semething of that work before, and from the state of the child's hand's she must have kept the left hand, at least, for a few seconds in the water. The poor little tellow, smart and good-looking, is injured for life, and this creature in woman's shape has not been called in question for her crueity. If you are passing here at any time, has not been called in question for her orueity. If you are passing here at any time, yeu could see the child; the boiled hand beggars description."

To this Mr. Sanders adds:—

"People talk of the innocence of the heathen, but they only need to live in a heathen land to learn that the dark places of the earth are full of the inhabitants of cruelty."

What do you think of a man taking his engines as they bring up long lines of open cars, all crowded with soldiery, to the support of their comrades, and behold away to the left the dark clouds of Egyptian cavalry sweeping across the plain with the evident resolve of outflanking the small lititish force, earth are full of the inhabitants of cruelty.'
What do you think of a man taking his hands full of dried grass, setting it on fire and then applying it to the naked shoulders and breast of his wife, simply because his beans were not cooked quite as soon as he thought they ought to be? This has happened here in Chilumi.

Cautions for the Aged

Cautions for the Aged.

Age works great physical changes, many of which are generally recognized. Some of them involve dangerous liabilities, and impose the need of constant caution.

One is to guard against undue exertion. The tough, elastic coat of the arteries is apt to become, on the one hand, chalk-tike and brittle, or, on the other hand, fatty and weak. Nature seeks to guard against the consequent danger by rendering older persons less inclined to effort. But a little extra exertion put forth suddenly, may cause the weakened vessels to give way, from the increased force with which the heart throws the blood into them. Hence may result appeals to give the latter being colors.

So, too, the heart itself (or its acrts great curved trunk which first receives the blood from the heart) may be in a similar condition, and suddenly fall because of undue exertion, when it might have been equal to the ordinary work of years. Such no doubt was the last case, when an elderly gentleman hurried to reach a railroad train, and fell dead on entering it. The aged ahould firmly refuse to hurry.

A like caution applies to whatever quickens the action of the heart. Every one knows the power of violent emetions in this knows the power of violent emetions in this respect. No one wishes to fall dead in a fit of anger. Undue eating, especially of stimulating food, is almost as dangerous. All the appetites need to be kept under con-

A special caution is needed in descending the stairs. In our normal voluntary movements there are certain nice adjustments affected by unconscious mental acts. But age effects such a change in the brain substance that mental activity is lessened. An old man can no more think as quickly as a young than he can run as fast, or jump as high. Hence the missteps of the aged in descending stairs. Aged persons, therefore, should form the habit of taking their bearing, so tospeak, at the top of the stairs, and keep their mind on each step down by a conscious veluntary effort.

The aged should also most carefully guard against a chill. It is mere dangerous for an old man to catch cold than for a young man to catch a fever.

Pack the Lungs with Air.

Deep breathing and holding of the breath is an item of importance. Persons of weak vitality find an uninterrupted succession of deep and rapid aspiration so distressing that they are discouraged from perserving in the exercise. Let such persons take into the ngs as much air as they can at a breath lungs as much air as they can at a breath and hold it as long as they can, and they will find a grateful sense of relief in the whole abdomnial region. Practice will increase ability to hold the breath and the may be learned of packing the lungs. This is done by taking and holding the long breath and then forcing more air down the treache by swallows of air. The operation may be described by that of a fishe's mouth in water. To those who have never learned may be described by that of a fishe's mouth in water. To those who have never learned it will be surprising to what extent the lungs may be packed. Caution at first is needful but after practice will warrant large use of the treatment. The whole thoracic and abdominal cavities will receive immediate benefit and continuance and temperance in eating, good air and right exercise, will bring welcome improvement.

Palatable and Pure.

Distilled water is not essential to good health. It is "flat, stale and unprofitable." Unless well erated it is unpalatable. The process of distilling separates the mineral matter, but not the velatile substance. The matter, but not the velatile substance. The compounds of nitrogen and sulphur may reappear in the distilled water, and the peculiar odor so repulsive to delicate tastes. If clean soil-water cannot be obtained, make a large, deep and clean cistern, and keep it clean. Take a sound cak or ash barrel, put clean. Take a sound cak or ash barrel, put a false bettom (pertorated) 3 inches from the bettem of the barrel; place three inches of clean washed gravel on the top of the perforated bettom; on this twelve inches of granulated charcoal, made from hard maple; on this 4 inches of clean washed sand, and then place a perforated false top over the sand, so that water poured into the barrel will not disturb the filtering materials beneath. Insert a wooden faucet in the side of the barrel, clese to the bettom, and you will have a filter which will make good rainwater filtered through it as clean and palatable ter filtered through it as clean and palatable

Bating Lemons.

A good deal has been said through papers about the healthfuldess of lemons. The latest advice is how to use them so The latest advice is how to use them so that they will de the most good, as follows: Most people know the benefit of lemonade before breakfast, but few know that it is more than deubled by taking another at night also. The way to get the better of the bilious system without the blue pill or quinine is to take the juice of one, two, or three lemons, as appetite oraves, in as much loe-water as makes it pleasant to drink without sugar, before geing to bed, In the morning, on rising, at least a half-hour before breakfast, take the juice of one lemon in a goblet of water. This will clear the system of humor and bile with efficiency, without the weakening effects of calomel or congress water. People should not irritate the stomach by eating lemons clear.

Bad Effect of Pickles.

The influence of acid in retarding or arresting salivary digestion is further of impertance in the dietectic use of pickles, vinegar, salads and acid fruits. In the case of vinegar it was found that one part in 5000 sensibly retarded this process, a processing one in 1000 rendered vary slow. portion of ens in 1,000 rendered very slow, and one in 500 arrested it completely; so that when acid salads are taken together with bread the effect of the acid is to prevent any salivary digestion of the bread, a matter of little moment to a person with a vigorous digestion, but to a feeble dyspeptione of some importance. There is a very widespread belief that drinking vinegar is an efficacious means of avoiding getting fat, and this popular belief would appear from these experimental observations to be well founded. If the vinegar by taken at the these experimental observations to be well founded. If the vinegar be taken at the same time as farinaceous food it will go atly interfere with its digestion and assimilation.

She is under especial obligations to the press and to progressive persons who petitioned in her behalf as well as to the Legislature, and notes the change in Connecticut sentiment as folthe change in Connecticut sentiment as fol-lows: "In 1833, when the law was passed by which my life prespects were destroyed it was celebrated by ringing the bell hung in the steeple of the church, into which we were not allowed to enter, and by firing a were not allowed to enter, and by firing a cannon thirteen times, placed upon an eminence a few rods from my door; and to day when your telegram arrived, the only jubilant display I wished to make was to have a private nock where my tears of joy and gratitude could flow unobserved for the change that has been wrought in the views change that has been wrought in the views and feelings of the mass of the people.

and feelings of the mass of the people.

The following story is told of an enterprising Toronto jobber, the events having taken place some time age: The merchant in question, naving heard of the arrival of a country trader who was know to be a large purchaser and of unquestionable credit, was resolved to get him to visit his establishment, and once there, he felt sure he could secure him as a customer. He accordingly sent out one of his drummers, of whom he had quite a number, adapted to every taste and disposition. The ene sent, however, returned without success. No. 2 was dispatched, with no better result, and again No. 3, and so en until all had gone and come back without their man. The merchant now determined to go himself, and finding that brandy and water and free tickets to the theater were of no avail, for the country the theater were of no avail, for the country he was reduced to the necessity of employing a ruse, which, as the sequel shows, was simple as well as effectual. On taking his departure after a pleasant interview the merchant took care to commit the "mistake" of taking the trader's hat instead of his own. Next merning, as was expected, the merchant received a prompt visit at his store from the trader, who came to look up the hat which he supposed had been hurriedly exchanged. This was what the merchant wanted, and through this means he sold a good bill of goods and secured a regular enstower. he was reduced to the necessity of em

Farmers, as a general rule, says one of them in a recent letter, do not take pains enough with this part of their farm work. I am convinced that I can get more clear cash from an acre that is well plewed than I can from an acre that is only half plowed. What I mean by half plowed is where it is plowed by guess, deep here and shallow there, wide furrow here and a narrow one there, with the furrows standing on edge or turned over very flat. We can do good plowing just as easily and just as fast as we can heg it ever.

take you set in exact line with the stakes and furrow where you begin, and then go shead with the plow until you come to the first stake. Step and take the stake down and lay it to one side out of the way, and then go ahead sgain, taking the end stake and the object beyond for your guide. In plowing the first two times around set your owing the first two times around set your ow-wheel so as not to plow more than 4½ thes deep. After you have gone thus far lie your wheel so as to plow the depth in wish to have your plowing done. By ling as I have described we avoid the high like furrow we would have if we plowed first two times around as deep as we the first two times around as deep as we do the rest of the bed.

In plowing the first two furrows (the first time around) we have two essential things to leek after. First, to do our plowing straight; second, to turn the furrows over in good shaps, and have the edges of the furrows meet and set firmly tegether. This will prevent the grass from growing up between the furrows to a great extent. Now we can go ahead and finish up our bed. Be seeme to bean the furrows atraght and the we can go ahead and finish up our bed. Be sure to keep the furrows atraght and the same width the entire length of the field. If you hold your plow firm and steady your furrows will be as straight as a line. Keep your beds the same width at both ends of the field, and then when we come to finish we have only one furrow the entire length of the field to turn out. This, I think, is much better than to have one end finished and frem one to five furrows on the other end to turn out yet. Right here I would like to say a word which I consider very important in doing a good job of plowing. It is this: I consider it very essential that the driver and team understand each other pretty well. If you have a good, strong, well-kept team, and one that is steady and true to pull, I see no reason why we can't de our plowing in a workmanlike manner.

Sowing Grass Seed. nt of seed required for an sore of ground intended for grass cannot be properly estimated, although most farmers sow a given quantity every year without giving proper consideration to the quality of the seeds or the condition of the soil. The soil may be in excellent condition to-day for seed, but may require double the quantity of seeds in two or three days after. In the first place, seed will not germinate unless the proper conditions are favorable for so deing. When the ground is hard, as is When the ground is hard, as is upon growing grain, there are a great many upon growing grain, there are a great many otherese egainst the seed. Rirds eat muon of it, while a large portion of it rots on the surface. In such cases a large quantity of seed is necessary. Many of the poor seed is necessary. Many of the poor catches " of clover are due to not using lew a telegraph wire to run from the forward steering wheel to the after one, and it was four hours before the mate was returned to consciousness. The second officer, whose room was abait the mate's with a similar aperture in the bulkhead, was also uncon-scious. The vessel was then 700 miles east when the full extent of the danger was made knewn to Captain Stannard, he at once ordered all the openings described to be closed up and the hatches battened down. The ship is divided into four water-tight compartments, with iron bulkheads seperating them. That one where the fire was located was about forty feet long, and reached from the upper deck to the keelson. There were stowed bales of jute, carpets, paper stock and burlap, and Captain Stannard rightly concluded it to be useless to attempt to distinguish the fire with water. The smoke from the smoldering mass permeated every corner of the vessel and made it impossible for the men to remain below decks. Several of them were prostrated

The consigness are much pleased with the manner in which Captain Stannard acted, and say that to his determination is due the safe arrival of the ship. The damage to the cargo is said to be in the neighborhood of $10,000, mostly covered by insurance

STODDARD'S MULE.

A Story of How It Broke Ferryman Di

Many years age down in Idaho, during a gold excitement, a good many men went into the country to make money outside the gold hunting industry. Their idea was to make the old fellows delve for the gold while they apprepriated it afterward. Rellin while they apprepriated it afterward. Rollin Daggett, afterwards Nevada's congressman, says the Carson (Nev) Appeal, established a ferry boat on a small creek and named the venting a musty legend to the effect that it was thus named because so many lives had was thus named because so many lives had been lost in the attempt to cross it. The stream was not over a dezen yards wide and the water nowhere over two feet deep, but he rigged up a flatbeat and pulled it back and forth by a rope contrivance. Whenever prospectors crossed he regaled them with horrible tales of the treachery of the stream, and the remorseless quicksands which had hearn as many men and mules to terrible drawn so many men and mules to terrible

In the night when he ferried people over he would caution them not to get too near the edge of the beat, as a fall overboard was certain death. By letting the dim old lantern go out and making alow time he freuently impressed the passengers with the lea that the stream was half a mile wide; For night trips he charged $5, but if the wind was high and the weather bad he struck sanguine prospecters for much larger sums. In the daytims $1 was his modest charge.

He went along in this way for several months, the men whe rushed to the hills looking upon him as the benefactor to his but simple remedies appear to be more as a gargle, but a little rum and honey disassived in sage tea is better. An application of clothes wrung out in hot water and applied to the neck, changing as they begin to cool, has the most petency for removing in inflammation of anything we ever tried. It should be kept up for a number of hours; the lay there in the middle of "Death's he lay the ment of a solution of the middle of "Death's he lay the middle of "De self, was drowned. When he was cut loose he lay there in the middle of "Death's Ford" half out of water so that all who came along saw what a miserable sham the ferry was, and that any four-footed animal could walk across. Daggett tried to get the mule away but he was too heavy to budge, and so he lay there in sight for weeks, until Daggett's business as ferryman was ruined. That's the reason old Dag hardly ever speaks to Charlie Stoddard when he meets him.

Servants in India-

"In India," said a gentleman with an Or iental tan on his face, "the customs with regard to the servants are somewhat peculiar. When a man is invited to a dinner party, or is sitting at the table in his boarding-house, his own 'bearer,' or body servant, stands behind his chair to wait upon him. The There were stowed bales of jute, carpets, paper stock and burlap, and Captain Stammard rightly concluded it to be useless to attempt to distinguish the fire with water. The smoke from the modifiering mass permasted every corner of the vessel and made it impossible for the men to remain below decks. Several of them were prostrated during the passage and had to be cared for in the engine room.

A consultation of the officers was held, and all but the coptain thought it advisable to make for St. John's or Halifax. Some dissantifaction was expressed when Captain Stammard made up his mind that he would bring shave seal to New York.

The succeeding ten days and nights were filled with apprehension. The decks are of iron covered with wood, and it was feared that before reaching part the heat would force its way upward to the deck and give vent to the smoldering flames. THE HOUSEHOLI

Housekeeping in Japan.

A lady writing from Japan says.

"Housekeeping here has no trials, the worn and vexed spirits of American chies lains ought to rest in Japan after death Capable and faithful servants are plust and cheap. Our establishment boasts five and for these we pay about what two would cost in New York. I do not visit my kitchen once a menth, never give a order outside of a spoken wish, yet the domestic machinery moves with an east most any effort on the part of the mista.

The manners of the servants are amula not to say startling, to an American a not to say startling, to an American accustomed to the cheerful familiarity of her native help. Every night at bedtime our five retainers appear, prestrate themselves in succession to the earth, and retire. This is to wish me good night and to renew their testimeny of profound respect and pleasure over the privilege of serving me. It was difficult at first to preserve the preserves we district for the ceremony, but necessary dignity for the ceremony, but now I am as majestically gracious as any other potentate. The other day, on one of my rare visits to the kitchen, a hairpin became loosened and dropped without my notice. I had been seated in my ewn room notice. I had been seated in my ewn room only a few moments when my houseman entered, bearing a small salver, which he presented to me with many genufications. Fancy my surprise to see a little hair-pin upon it, and to learn from my proud but embarassed servitor that it had fallen to the kitchen floer from my head. Afterward I found there had been a discussion as to who should pick it up, and almost a quarrel as to whom belenged the ineatimable honor of bearing it to its owner?"

On the plains of Afghanistan, in Central Asia, a joint commission of Englishmen and Russians is slowly laying down the boundary line which, it is hoped, will mark the farthest limit of Russian progress southward on the road toward the English possessions in India.

A correspondent who is with the commission writes to the London "Pioneer' an account of the cold weather which has been experienced. Those who have enjoyed the delights of camping out in the long summer vacation will perhaps shiver a little at this story of tent life in the valley of the Oxus:

On the night of the 23rd of December the thermometer went down to 2 deg. below head is generally allayed.

way, and then the flames would have a clean sweep fore and aft. But with a steady courage and admirable coolness the captain continued on his course and quieted the fear of his crew.

"I have been at sea many years and have suffered shipwreck," he said; "but never was I placed in so terrible a position as en this passage. Sailors can fight all the elements except fire. In a gale of wind, so coupled are the crew with their duties that they have but little time to think of danger, but in this case all know their fearful peril."
