Love a Conqueror

WEDDED AT LAST.

CHAPTER XLVII.

"Poor child, how terribly you are changed!" he murmured softly. "Tell me of yourself, Shirley. Why—good Heaven!—I remember now they told me that when you came here you were—"

He could not utter the word; the thought was too painful—that she, his cherished darling, should have known want and misery! It was too horrible.

"That I was starving," she said, with a little smile. "Did it hurt you to think of it? Ah, do not—do not look at me so, Guy! That is all over now, you know. You must forget it, and—"

"No; but you will find it so," was the mournful answer. "Think of me as a woman fallen too low even to fill such a humble post as this. Has Lady Oliphant told you why they are sending me away?"

"My darling, peace!" he cried entreatingly, cut to the heart by her words and manner. "You are breaking my heart, Shirley. You will come to me now, my dearest—you will leave me again? Let me take care of you. Give me a right to protect you."

"Oh, hush!" she almost shrieked. "Oh, hush—he does not know—he does not know—no, you shall not touch me! Avoid me rather, as you would any vile, polluted, poisonous thing!"

She had left her seat, and was pacing up and down the room in an agitation which was past all control—she seemed terrified and shamed almost beyond her strength. Guy watched her piteously, all his heart going out to her in an agony of tenderness and love, not knowing what to say to comfort her, and sorely puzzled and bewildered himself.

That he should have discovered Shirley Glynn in Mrs. Grant, the Erindale schoolmistress, was strange enough; but, as he watched her, he recalled the stories which had gone round of the village and reached the Rectory and the Hall—of the constant and strangely timed visits of the doctor and her midnight walks with him—also the rumors of voices and the presence of a strange man in the cottage on Christmas night. What did it all mean? It was maddening!

What strange mystery was this? If indeed it was true that Shirley loved the young surgeon, he—Guy—loved her well enough to stand by and see them happy together. She need not fear.

"Shirley," he said, and his voice was very low and his face very colorless as he went toward her. "I cannot even believe your own witness against yourself. Why do you not trust me, dear? Is it that, after all, you doubt me? Is it that you believe me the murderer of your husband? Ah, you know that, deeply as he had wronged me, I forgave him all fully!"

She was looking at him now with a strange expression in her eyes. It seemed as if she longed, yet feared, to tell him something—to trust him, but dared not. For a moment she stood thus, voiceless, silent, pale as death itself; then she turned from him with a passionate gesture of despair.

"And you were in the room, and—"

"You did not see me, Guy—and the reasons I had for wishing you not to recognize me then are tenfold stronger now."

"I cannot understand them, Shirley."

"Nor is it necessary that you should. Ha, if I could trust you—if I could trust you!"

The great tears welled up slowly into the weary eyes and fell heavily upon the clasped hands as they lay upon the table. He leaned toward her, with a great earnestness upon his face.

"Listen to me, my darling," he said very gently, but with an impressive gravity in look and manner. "You have acted, I am sure, with perfect unselfishness throughout everything. You have suffered as I think few people have ever suffered; but your un-and resumed her restless walking to and fro.

"I forgave him all fully, and few, I think, mourned his death more than I did," Guy continued sadly. "That shame and disgrace fell upon me through his death did not affect my sorrow. You know—do you not?"

"Oh, no—oh, no—oh, no!" she screamed out wildly. "It must not be—the crime has been expiated and atoned for, the search must cease. Guy, for the love of Heaven, you must give it up! What can I say, what can I do to induce you to grant me this?"

"My dearest, the search is over; there is no need of such distress. But in my own heart I feel, I am sure, that I know the murderer, and, if I please Heaven ever to bring us face to face, he shall pay the penalty of his crime!"

"Oh, Heaven cease, or you will kill me!" She swayed forward and sank down at his feet in a sudden weakness and terror which took all the light and life and warmth and color from her face, over which stole an ashy-gray shade like the hue of death itself.

As he stooped over her to raise her, with hands that shook like a leaf, she shuddered at his touch and shrank away.

"Shirley!" he exclaimed, with quick pain. "What have I done that you should fear me thus?"

"I fear you—as I fear the whole world now!" she said faintly, without lifting her head; and the despairing hopelessness of her tone made him shiver as if a sudden chill had touched him.

"You might fear the whole world, my dearest, and yet not fear me," he answered softly; and, as the grave, tender voice fell upon her ear, she raised her head suddenly, and tried to stand. He lifted her to her feet, put her gently into a chair, and, drawing up another, sat down near her.

"What is it you fear to tell me?" he said, so gently that the words were as a caress; but she only shook her head wearily in silence.

"You know that Jack is here?" he asked tenderly.

"Yes."

"You will see him, of course."

"I have seen him," she answered pitifully.

"But he does not know," he began.

"No; I have seen him as I have seen you, unseen myself, Guy—and she looked up at him pitifully. "Do you not remember? It was not so many months ago that I was in the room where you were. You had come to fetch Midge at Mrs. Ford's cottage; it was the day after they had taken me in."

selfishness and your suffering, my dearest, have missed their aim. You thought to spare me; but, sweet, did you not know that you were adding greatly to my misery?"

"I knew; but it was right—and, oh, how earnestly I thank Heaven for giving me the strength to go!"

"Even now?" he said sadly.

"Even now—ay, more than ever now."

"But, Shirley, you left me to save me from disgrace. You thought that, if you became my wife, you would add to the suspicion of my guilt. But I have borne the suspicion for over a year now, alone and uncared for. Think what it would have been to me, Shirley, to have your love to brighten those weary months! And you, my poor girl!" he added tenderly. "What has your life been? You have known even want, in your vain endeavor to teach me a lesson of forgetfulness—a lesson, darling child, that I shall never learn!"

She had covered her face with her hands as she listened, and Guy could see how she trembled.

"Sorry! I am very glad," he said gently. "Why should I be sorry, Shirley?"

"I thought—I thought she was to be your wife."

"I shall have no wife, Shirley," he replied. "I am growing into a confirmed old bachelor. Do you know, dear, that Midge had something to do with my finding you to-day? Jack and I had both noticed so many little things in her which reminded us of you that, when Lady Oliphant described you to me to-day, a thought flashed upon me like lightning that Mrs. Grant must be our Shirley."

"Ah, Heaven, send that she be not like me!" she answered bitterly. "Oh, Guy, when I think of the misery of all these years, I wonder that it has not killed me! It seems to me that only the happy die; the wretched are always left."

"There are many happy days in store for you yet, Shirley," he said gently. "And now, dear, may I ask you a few questions? Only one or two, which may be of use to me, Shirley, when and why did poor Hugh dismiss Latrelle?"

She started violently and once more the wild look of terror flashed into her eyes.

"Why—why do you ask?" she forced herself to say, trying to hide her agitation.

"For a simple reason, dear. The man was a scoundrel. I have no doubt—"

But she interrupted him with a cry of pain.

"Oh, let him rest—let him rest!" she cried pitifully. "It hurts me—it hurts me to think of him!"

And you—you are not sorry—you do not love her?"

She spoke with a more natural expression now; the bewildered look had passed, and a tinge of color had stolen into her face in her momentary gladness. It was a wonderful relief to Guy to see that color and the changed expression of her face; and he smiled as he answered—

"I thought—I thought she was to be your wife."

"I shall have no wife, Shirley," he replied. "I am growing into a confirmed old bachelor. Do you know, dear, that Midge had something to do with my finding you to-day? Jack and I had both noticed so many little things in her which reminded us of you that, when Lady Oliphant described you to me to-day, a thought flashed upon me like lightning that Mrs. Grant must be our Shirley."

Scotia's Earnings.

For the year ending December 31st, the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company earned in round figures $1,256,000. After providing for the interest on the first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds outstanding and the sinking fund in connection with the same issue there remained a balance of considerably over $900,000. As there is outstanding $3,000,000 of debenture stock bearing 6 per cent. interest, this is equal to more than 5 times the amount necessary to pay the interest on the debenture stock.

We offer, for sale in lots to suit purchasers a block of Nova Scotia Steel & Coal 6 per cent. debenture stock at 98 and interest.

THE GREATEST PHILANTHROPY.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

Known them. They are the men who unconsciously "keep life sweet" in Winston Churchill.

We were talking about love, marriage and divorce the other day. A young girl had critically doubted the permanency of love under the pressure of poverty, and another woman, a young school teacher, spoke up warmly.

"You're wrong," she said. "I used to think that love always flew out of the window when poverty came in at the door, but I've learned better since I knew the Glascocks, those dear old people I boarded with last year. They have been as poor as church-mice all their lives, and they've had all kinds of other troubles, sickness and loss and interfering relatives, and yet I can see they love each other just as much as any young lovers."

"And they are happy, too, in spite of everything. I can tell you it's been a great lesson to me in the meaning of love to have lived with them."

Can you imagine a finer tribute than that which this woman paid her two old friends?

I cannot. For in her defence of the power of love inspired by their she proved these people philanthropists of the very highest order.

PROFITS IN COAL.

Mine Owners Said to be Making the Most Money—Merchants' Figures—Regulating Prices at the Consumers' Expense.

"I am paying 3s. a ton more for my coal than I did a month ago," says the man sitting at home. "Where has the extra money gone to?"

A coal merchant who was interviewed by the Daily Graphic showed no hesitation in answering the question.

"The collieries have been getting it," he said. "The demand for coal is so enormous for export, owing to the increased prosperity of the peasants of Europe, that if we go up 1s. to the public the collieries put the price up 1s. to the merchants. Half of the merchants in London to-day are simply steering straight for bankruptcy."

"But the owners, too, are crying out."

"The colliery owners' profits in the last two years have been enormous. We are simply distributing agents for their profits. Look at these figures of the B— colliery. Last year's profits, over £600,900. Would not you like to have a few shares?"

"Indeed I should. But can the collieries do as they please will you?"

"They have us by the throat. They act in concert far better than we do. They have committees which regulate the selling prices of coal. E keeping the pits working short time when work is slack, they have succeeded not only in keeping up price but in running them up to such point that they are masters of the situation."

"2s. charged to DeLray 5d. But they have had so many extra expenses—workmen's compensation, insurance, rescue appliances, and so on?"

"These are amply covered by 5d. a ton, and they have put up the price of coal 2s. We are 2s. or 3s. worse off."

"Give me an instance."

"Here is coal for which we were paying 8s. 6d. a ton at the pit-head in the summer, and for which we got 21s. 6d. We are now paying 12s. and getting 23s."

"What are the charges you have to bear besides that 12s.?"

"Carriage of the coal from the pit to London, waggon hire, loaders' and carmen's wages, horse and van maintenance, and office expenses."

The merchant here showed his balance sheet, with every item worked out. One month's trading, on a turnover of many thousands of pounds resulted in a net loss of nearly 5d per ton. Another month's trading compensated for this, the net profit being over 1s. per ton.

"What about the present price of coal?"

"Coal is normally by the end of January 4s. above summer prices. At the present moment it is 2s. 6d. above summer prices, but it has to be remembered that the summer prices of '13 were 2s. more than those of '12. Whether the price this year will go up more than the normal 4s. depends on supply. The merchant won't keep coal up more than he can help."

"Do you mean he would rather give up my coal at 20s. than 20s.?"

"Infinite. The merchant wants coal to be a necessity, not a luxury. And he considers the owners are asking too much money?"

"Emphatically."—Graphic, Jan. 29.

Married to Kanwaroo.

At the recent Church Congress in the Old Country, a speaker complained of the lack of information respecting the Empire at home. He said he had read of a poor woman who, when shown a kangaroo at the Zoo and told that it was a native of Australia, replied, "Good gracious, and my daughter is married to one of them."

This reminds us of the story of the Irish emigrants who went to the West Indies. They got on so well that a year or two later they sent and included more Irish folk to emigrate. When the second batch arrived, they were greeted by a crowd of blacks who greeted them with such homely words as "Begorrah," and so on.

"What! black already," was the amazed comment of the newcomers.

DANIEL BOONE.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good-Old Swash."

Daniel Boone was born in Pennsylvania, February 11, 1735. If he had stayed there he would never have become famous.

Some men succeed by keeping everlastingly at it, but Boone was not that kind. He made himself familiar to society by moving everlastingly away. Bucks County, Pennsylvania, in which he grew up, was densely populated, having a house every few miles, and this oppressed Boone's proud, free spirit so much, that when he became of age, he packed up and moved out to Kentucky. At that time Kentucky consisted of wilderness thickly infested with Indians, who made it a policy to divide the white settler into as many sections as possible whenever they found him. Boone had a long, well-groomed rifle, and as he roamed through Kentucky, ever and anon, offering out a patch of woods and raising a crop, he practiced with his rifle until he could knock off the eyebrows of a "y" at 500 yards.

Hunting, Daniel Boone, became a very common cause of demise among the Kentucky Indians. Boone survived and explored almost all of Kentucky and used his rifle instead of running up a bill at the nearest grocery store, 300 miles away.

After the revolution, Kentucky became so thickly settled that every month or two, Boone would discover boot tracks. This confinement and crowding was unbearable, so he moved on to Louisiana, where he flourished until the steamboat came down the river and chased him out. He then removed to Missouri, where he spent his old age in peace and industry, clearing out timber, building miles of rail fence, and now and then taking long refreshing drinks out of the Missouri River. He died in bed at the age of 85 and if he crossed the River Styx it is a safe bet that he went down a few hundred miles below the ferry and swam it by himself.

Don't stay stuffed-up! Quit blowing and snuffing. Ease your throbbing head—nothing else in the world gives such prompt relief as "Pape's Cold Compound," which costs only 25 cents at any drug store. It acts without assistance, tastes nice, and causes no inconvenience. Accept no substitute.

The Gorgonzola.

A famous maître d'hotel said the other day of cheeses:

"The public taste has returned to the more delicate cheeses—the bries, the gorgonzolas. It has turned away from cheeses of the ripe gorgonzola type."

"That is a good thing too. These ripe cheeses are not healthy. By 'ripe' I mean, of course, cheese like that of which the editor wrote in his paper."

"Will the person or persons who shipped us the gorgonzola cheese last week kindly call or send for same? Otherwise we shall be obliged to shoot it!"

The Financial Peril.

We do not know that we can at this stage offer any better criticism on the Budget and other proposals of the Government which entail the imposition of extra annual taxation to the extent of $650,000 a year, than to re-publish what Sir Robert Bond set forth in this connection in his Manifesto last fall:—

THE FINANCIAL PERIL.

The peril which immediately faces the community is the financial peril, in part arising out of the Government's Railway Scheme, and in part out of the wasteful and improper expenditure of the revenues of the Colony.

When the Government introduced their Railway Scheme before the House of Assembly four years ago, the Prime Minister led the House to believe that the whole of the five Branch Railways would not exceed 250 miles in length nor cost more than Four Million Dollars. I pointed out at that time what I plainly saw was an error, and I warned the Government that double the amount of money named would not see the Colony through the Contract. My warning was not heeded, and already, with not one of the Branches fully equipped and completed and ONLY THREE OUT OF THE FIVE BRANCH RAILWAYS entered, more than FIVE MILLION EIGHT HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS have had to be raised on loan. ($5,829,999.99.)

"The loss to the Colony by the Government floating the two loans in London, which comprise the above amount, and paying the Messrs. Reid in Gold instead of in 3½ per cent Debentures at par WAS MORE THAN FOUR HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS (407,211.14). This is the difference between the par value of the Debentures and the amount realized by their sale or transfer. To this must be added the further loss of the interest on that sum at 3½ per cent per annum. As I have previously stated the Government practically made the Messrs. Reid a present of nearly HALF A MILLION DOLLAR by their wicked folly.

"Still the peril walketh in darkness. While half the work contracted for has not been completed, and nearly SIX MILLION DOLLARS have already been added to the Public Debt on that account, another loan of at least an equal amount will have to be raised to meet the Colony's obligations to the Messrs. Reid under the Government's Railway Contract, or the Country will default and become bankrupt. If that money can be raised at all, it can only be raised by paying dearly for the accommodation; it can only be raised by adjusting our rates of interest to meet the altered conditions of the money market, that will mean an additional loss in principal and interest; it can only be raised then provided we have put our JOHN WESLEY died 1791, aged 58. The great founder of the religious communion of the "people called Methodists." He was the son of an Anglican clergyman and took orders himself in 1735, but later he abandoned all ecclesiastical traditions and established on a wonderfully well-divided basis the connection called by his name. He accomplished a great work of religious revivification, taking the world as his parish; and, profound as was his conviction of his high calling as an Evangelist, John Wesley "built better than he knew" in rearing the denominational edifice which is the monument of his faith and strenuousness.

HORACE WALPOLE died 1797, aged 80. The younger son of Sir Robert Walpole. In 1768 he retired from public life and devoted himself to the writing of books and the accumulation of works of art.

Live well, and then, how soon so'er thou die,
 Thou art of age to claim eternity. —Randolph.

Boy Perished in Fire at St. John, N.B.

St. John, N.B., Feb. 25.—One young life was snuffed out and several people had narrow escapes from serious injury in the fire that last night destroyed the top floor of the Grand Union Hotel, opposite the Union Station. Alfred Johnston, aged twelve years, who lived with his widowed mother in the hotel, was the victim. He was asleep in one of the rooms at the top of the building and on account of the fierce flames firemen were unable to get into the part of the house where his room was located. It was not until the flames had been beaten into submission that members of the fire department were able to recover the little body, and then it was too late to revive him. Drs. Warwick, Addy and Manning were present but it was at once seen that there was no hope of restoring life and the body was removed to Chamberlain's undertaking establishment. When the mother learned of her loss she was wild with grief, and wandered about the scene of the fire, moaning and crying out for her child. She was cared for by people living in the vicinity of the hotel. Guests in the house were rudely awakened by the flames breaking in to their rooms and several persons lost many of their belongings in the dash to safety. One man was asleep and awakened to find the end of the bed in flames, and the floor and walls of the room burning fiercely. He escaped with only a certain amount of clothing. The fire caught in the top floor near the head of the stairs and one of the clerks gave the alarm. Box 8 was rung and the fire department was soon on the scene. Two more alarms were necessary. Lines of hose were run to the top of the neighboring buildings and tons of water were poured into the burning structure. The water supply seemed particularly good and the stream had good force. Thousands of people were attracted to the scene of the fire which started about ten o'clock and they remained almost to the last. The building and furnishings were damaged to the extent of about $10,000, but below the top floor the damage was all done by water. The office on the ground floor was flooded and the members of the Salvage Corps assisted in sweeping the water from the place.

A Strange Apparition.

MARY GIVES A CUE TO IT.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Tom was in the woods yesterday, and although very tired, the poor old soul went down to Mrs. Ellsworth's on Noad Street for milk at about 7.30, mostly to save me from going. Now, wasn't that good of him. But I am glad he went, for he heard a bit of news that I must give your readers. He heard that Mr. George Pike, who works with Mr. Joseph Ross, in the grocery business, while coming out from his home on the hill a few minutes before, had an experience that he will not soon forget. Mr. Pike had reached nearly to the railway track when he saw a strange, flat looking object cross the street and stop in front of him. It seemed to be something the shape of a large sculpin, and appeared to be getting smaller under his gaze. Taking out his match box he lit a match to determine what the strange animal was, but it disappeared with the flash of the light. When Tom came home and told his story, I fell into deep thought, and I said, why Thomas, dear, there is a meeting of citizens called for to-night in the Court House, to consider the advisability of doing away with the old fashioned road board system, and forming a Town Council. Oh, I have it, says Tom. That was the road board George Pike saw, and it is troubled and dying hard. I have heard of the actions of some road boards not being able to bear the light of day, but this apparition could not stand the light of a match.

So I asked Tom to shake off his tired feelings and go to the meeting and hear what would be done.

The meeting, Tom says, was very enthusiastic, and a retired school teacher waxed warm on the subject of having a Town Council at once.

He was backed up by one of our business men, who Tom tells me, winked at a friend, as he took the retired pedagogue's hand and clasped it after the meeting. A committee of 25 was formed who will meet to-day and discuss the advisability of presenting the Government with their request at once. But it is generally thought that an elective road board would be rich enough for our board at present.

Hoping George Pike will give the committee the benefit of his recent experience, and with thanks to Tom, I am, yours etc.,

MARY.

Hr. Grace, Feb. 26, 1914.

Finding Fault.

The kicking game will bring you fame, unpleasat, grim and ghostly, so call a halt if finding fault is what you're doing mostly. Some men seem born distressed, for when they are anything ever pleases; in every cause they find the flaws, the spavins and diseases. They kick at home and when they roam about the town they grumble, and every talk they make's a knock, and every step a stumble. They scold, they scowl, they hoot, they howl, at every forward movement; they hurt the town, and hold it down, and balk at each improvement. There is a trail of woe and wall where'er they've gallivanted; the booster hates such moldy skates and thinks they should be planted. They are a bore, the town grows sore beneath their ceaseless wiggings; the band will play some music gay when they have skipped the diggings. Just look around and note, cogs wound! how much the grouch is hated, then make a vow to clear your brow, and keep your bile abated. So call a halt if finding fault is now your daily pastime; let out a roar just one time more, and let that be the last time!

A Two Reeler.

"THE COMEDIAN'S MASK."

"The Comedian's Mask" is without exception the strongest two-reel drama of its kind ever shown in St. John's, and the large number of lovers of motion pictures that will witness it to-day and to-morrow at the Crescent Picture Palace will bear out this statement. Added to this wonderful picture is "A Romance of the Rails," a railway story; "Tweedledum as a Tuple," a lively comedy, and "The Hall Room Girls" a comedy that creates laughter. See the pillow fight; read about it and afterwards witness the big two-reel drama "Soul to Soul," which will be presented Wednesday and Thursday.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 1. Two young officers of the Turkish Military Flying Corps, were killed here to-day, while attempting to make a flight from Constantinople to Alexandria.

LONDON, March 1. The Local Unionist Party at Cambridge, a big working class division of London, represented by Hon. Dr. Machinara, just attempted to hold a referendum on Home Rule. The result showed nearly 5,000 opposed, 300 for a referendum and 300 in favor. A large number of the electors did not vote.

CHIHUAHUA, March 1. Marion Letcher, the United States Consul here, to-day awaited instructions from Washington as to whether he should accept a special train offered by General Villa to bring the Benton investigating commission from Juarez to this city. It is expected here that the Consul will be placed in charge of the work of disinterring the body, and probably complete a report for the State Department. Villa said he was anxious that the Commission should hasten as he desires to make an early start for Terreon.

LONDON, March 1. The Outlook opposes the suggestion made by the Observer, that a bust of George Washington be placed in Westminster Abbey. It says that the adoption of this suggestion will be the conversion of the Abbey into a scene of permanent and visible outrage upon all loyal inhabitants of Canada. Are we to have a monument to Washington, and none to his victims? Let us be logical, and erect another to Paul Kruger, late President of the Transvaal Republic. He had some qualifications. Washington was the mortal enemy of England, and persecuted the British population.

LONDON, March 1. The recent activities of the suffragettes in their campaign of destruction in Scotland is being met by remarkable precautions. Mackintosh of Mackintosh, has initiated a system of dog-guards at his home in Moy Hall, Inverness, where some of the finest Jacobine relics are kept. A large number of sporting dogs usually kept at Moy Hall kennels have been distributed around the mansion; and they raise the alarm on the approach of any person during day or night. Since Mackintosh began this system of dog-guards, other owners of houses have decided on the same method. Almost every Highland mansion and shooting lodge now has its guard of dogs.

A Garden of Valentines.

When the helpers are ready, the gardener tells them what they must do if they expect to harvest a good crop of valentines. First of all comes the planting. The Gardener seats the helpers in chairs arranged in a wide circle, and, standing in the middle, he asks each one what part of a valentine he wishes to plant. One answers, "A border of lace paper;" another, "A pink rose;" a third, "A funny rhyme;" a fourth, "The picture of a little girl;" and so on. Then the gardener begins to talk about his garden, mentioning the names which have just been given to him. Whenever any helper hears the name of a part of a valentine that he has chosen, he must leave his seat and behind the Gardener, holding a card to some part of his clothing. The Gardener begins like this: "I want to have a particularly fine garden this year, so I saved only the best seed. I had a beautiful lace-paper plant, last year, and the finest little girl's picture in the world, a wonderful bow and arrow, a big gold 'A' funny rhyme, etc."

When the names have all been called, the chairs are empty, and there is a long line of boys and girls, standing one behind the other, waiting to be planted. Then he cries, "I am going to plant the seeds now." Every one must run and try to capture a card; as there is one lacking for the number of players, someone is left out to become the next Gardener. The boys choose different names, and a game goes on as before.—Woman's World for February.

Days of The Press Gang.

Life in England's Old Georgian Navy Was Hard and Brutalizing.

There can be no question about it—life in the Georgian navy was insufferably hard. According to Mansfield, "it was brutalizing, cruel and horrible, the kind of life now happily gone forever, a kind of life which no man to-day would think good enough of a criminal. There was barbarous flogging, bad pay, bad food, bad hours of work, bad company."

This is putting the case strongly, and to one not born or bred to the sea it is exactly what it must have seemed. How then did they get me to enter the service? There were several ways in vogue. A captain or being appointed to a vessel, besides attending to her armament and equipping her for a voyage, had also the responsibility of furnishing her with a crew. He set about this by establishing a recruiting office ashore, generally at a sailors' tavern, and placarding the fact through the town and the surrounding country with the announcement that "Captain Blank R.N. was now fitting out H. M. ship So and So for a cruise in foreign waters."

Following this came promises of unlimited rum, prize money and the King's bounty. When the gullible one came to the bait he was plied generally with drink and flattery, the King's gold flung before his staring eyes and his bedridden brain filled with stories of the joys of life in the King's navy loudly bawled in the sea ballads of the day. That these joys were not unknown is shown by the fact that the bounty was at one time above $350.

When these gentle means failed to complete his number the captain sent a few boat loads of sturdy fellows ashore after their own kind of an officer. This party or "press gang" proceeded to the resorts of merchant sailors and picked up any stragglers they found in the streets. In times of need no male between boyhood and old age was safe.

My Experience in Chicken Raising.

The ideal mother hen is the pattern followed in brooding. The dangers to be avoided are chilling, overheating and crowding. Though many losses and crosses are obliterated by the substitution of the artificial brooder or the average hen, still it is after all but an artificial mother, and a very great deal depends upon the one who supplies the gray matter that cannot be infused into the copy, however accurate it may be.

Also the style of brooder must suit the one who supplies the gray matter; for instance, a shoe box in the kitchen with a little cover at one end and a piece of wire-netting on top does very well for the one who wants but a few chickens for the table, while the best commercial equipment is none too good for the poultryman or woman raising several thousand chickens. Each one has his or her peculiar needs and hence the many varieties of brooders on the market.—Isabella E. Jewell, in Woman's World for February.

London, Feb. 3.—Sir Ernest Shackleton said to-day that the announcement that Sir J. M. Barrie was the anonymous donor of the $50,000 which made the Shackleton Antarctic expedition possible, was incorrect. "Sir J. M. Barrie," he said, "is not the donor, while the amount stated is also incorrect. The donation which made the expedition possible was one for $75,000, but I am not at liberty to give the name of the donor."

Small Nut Loaf Cake.

An emergency cake, easily prepared, yet delicious, which may be baked in layers, paddings or a loaf.

Ingredients: ½ cup butter, 1 cup sugar, 2 eggs, ½ cup milk, 1½ cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, ¼ teaspoon vanilla extract, ¾ cup broken nut meats.

Cream the butter and sugar. Sift the baking powder with the flour. Add the milk and flour to the creamed butter and sugar, as directed for white loaf. Mix thoroughly, then add another egg and beat. Finally add the third egg, and then the extract and nutmeats.

Bake in the medium-sized dripping pan in a moderate oven. Frost with caramel icing. The nuts may be omitted from the cake and added to the frosting, or omitted altogether. This cake is best when fresh.

ELECTRICITY ON A FARM.

The new $150,000 house which James J. Hill is having constructed on his 7,000-acre farm at North Oakley near White Bear, Minn., will be equipped to utilize electricity to the fullest extent. Electric motors will be used for various farming operations. Prior to signing a five-year contract for electrical power, Mr. Hill had experts investigate the advisability of an isolated power plant, but eventually he decided in favor of central station service.—Electrical World.

TRAIN NOTES.—An express will go out as usual to-night. The Lakeside express which left Fort aux Basques at 5:55 p.m. yesterday is due early tomorrow morning. The local train from Carleton Place arrived in the city at 1:30 p.m. to-day.

The Wonder of Brazil.

"Brazil! Oh, yes; where the nuts come from!"—such is the usual facetious remark evoked by any mention of the Brazil, a remark which the merchant would probably amend by substituting "coffee" for "nuts." Yet this is no exaggeration of the average Anglo-Saxon attitude towards this vast country, with its limitless possibilities, an area greater than that of the United States, and more unexplored land than in any other portion of the habitable globe, writes Cyril Campbell, in Blackwood's Magazine.

"What North America has been to the Latin—an outlet for surplus labour and energy, a smiling haven from oppression and poverty. Yet between the two is a great gulf fixed, the gulf of creed, race, and traditions, of which the Panama isthmus is the outward and visible barrier, rather than the geographical link."

"Certainly few places are more attractive at first sight than the capital, Rio de Janeiro. For Rio is a bustling, thriving centre of trade, with wealth and population increasing by leaps and bounds. She must have 'the finest street in the world,' and so a mighty avenue sweeps through the town. It is like placing a boulevard on the Equator, and the mind shrinks from the Avenida's glare, and turns gratefully to the narrow coolness of the Ovaidor, the old-world business street, where all the pomp and vanity of the Brazilian world can be focussed in a glance."

"One must admit that this restless engineering development is the only reasonable outlet for the Brazilian surplus energy. Were he to sit still and merely amass wealth he would need pay the penalty of 'succumbing to the fatal lethargy of the tropics. It has chanced that wealth has been granted to him, pressed down and running over. There is not one word—'coffee.' It is the dominant note in the country. Men talk coffee, read coffee, think coffee. And it is not to be marvelled at, for Brazil actually supplies five-eighths of the world's markets; may more, the State of Sao Paulo alone could, unhampered, satisfy the entire demand."

"The problem which confronts Brazilian statesmen, a problem engendered solely by the amazing increase of wealth, is the possible demoralization of the country. If the immigration returns are to prove the ruling force in the State in the future, the Brazilians have little to fear, since, although it must be admitted that the Germans outnumber those coming from Great Britain or the United States, the Portuguese easily head the list."

By Authority.

The following letter from His Majesty's Ambassador at Madrid, containing a warning against a fraud known as the "Spanish Swindle," has been received from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies by His Excellency the Governor. As it appears that the perpetrators of this fraud are still endeavoring to defraud residents in the overseas Dominions it is considered desirable that the letter of the Ambassador be communicated to the press for the information of the public.

JOHN R. BENNETT,
Colonial Secretary,
Colonial Secretary's Office,
28th February, 1914.

British Embassy, Madrid.

Sir,—I should be grateful if you would allow me to call attention in your columns to the so-called "Spanish Swindle." This time-honoured fraud continues to be practised upon the unwary by a gang of ingenious swindlers established in Madrid and other Spanish towns. Assisted by accomplices in England they single out their victims and extract money from them by means of a letter which is generally to the following effect:—

A Spanish prisoner who is dying in a military prison desires to provide for his only daughter. He possesses a large fortune secreted somewhere, and offers to transfer it to his correspondent if the letter will maintain and educate his child. Certain obligations, however, must first be discharged, and for this purpose about £100 is to be forwarded in bank-notes to a given address where the prison chaplain will receive the sum and escort the girl to England. The fortune will then be handed over. The story is usually supported by forged documents and newspaper cuttings.

I hope that this letter may serve to put some prospective victims on their guard. Persons receiving letters such as I have indicated would do well to communicate with His Majesty's Embassy.

Yours faithfully,

ARTHUR H. HARDINGE,

His Britannic Majesty's Ambassador.

Criminals I Have Known.

By T. P. O'CONNOR.

The name of Pigott not unaturally suggests that of the other figure which played so important a part in the moving melodrama of the Parnell trial. I have already asked the reader to interpret the word criminal in a broad sense. It is open to question whether Henri Le Caron could properly be designated by that title. He also insisted himself that his occupation had been honourable as well as beneficial. He never showed any sign of excitement except when Sir Charles Russell put to him a question which threw doubts on the nature of the part he had played in the Irish Revolution. His face flushed, his eyes sparkled as he claimed that he was a military spy, and that he had acted in the interests of his country. Military spies have played an important and honourable part in history, and are both a necessary and a perilous occupation. So let Henri Le Caron be taken at his own estimate, and find a place in this gallery, not as a criminal, but as one who figured in a great State trial.

Parnell and Le Caron.

I remember the first time I heard the name of this extraordinary man. It was from one of the ardent and extreme leaders of the Irish movement, and it was in the lobby of the House of Commons. My friend spoke with enthusiasm of this dare-devil, who was described as bolder, more daring, more extreme than even the extreme in the ranks of the Irish-Americans. This enthusiasm in courage and in vehemence was rendered the more remarkable in the eyes of my friend by the fact that he was not an Irishman, but a French-Canadian, as his name showed. As a matter of fact, the French-Canadian was an Englishman named Beach, and almost the very moment when his patriotic Irish zeal was being extolled to me, was walking up and down one of the corridors of the House of Commons, conversing with Mr. Parnell, and attempting to trap that wary and suspicious political leader into some admissions which might have landed him in jail or dragged him to the gallows. To mark the tragic comedy complete, this fateful interview, described many years afterwards in a public court when Parnell was fighting for his life and for the life of his cause, was communicated a few moments afterwards to Sir Robert Anderson, then at Scotland Yard, and one of the most powerful and almost fanatical opponents of everything that Parnell represented.

When, therefore, one of my young reporters on the "Star" informed me that a man named Le Caron was giving evidence, I pricked up my ears, and I resolved to go to the court the next day and study and chronicle the man's evidence. Never was I so rewarded. For three full days I watched this man's extraordinary face, writing my description almost without ever looking at my manuscript. It was one of the most remarkable faces I have ever seen. If ever a man looked his desperate part, it was Le Caron.

An Extraordinary Figure.

One of the revolutionaries whom he mentioned prominently in his evidence declared that he had never trusted him because of his "Mephistophelian" face. It was not a bad description. Imagine a little man with a body thin almost as a skeleton, surmounting this with a face more like the edge of a razor than the ordinary face of flesh and blood, with a skin as yellow as though he had jaundice, with cheekbones that seemed to protrude through the thin flesh, with sunken cheeks, and then add a tiny black moustache and above all, add a pair of black piercing, almost burning eyes, and you have some conception of this extraordinary figure.

In spite of the palpable delicacy—for the man was already stricken with mortal disease—there was an air of restless alertness. And in spite of the eyes that seemed always to be burning and speaking, there was usually a look of impenetrable mystery and brooding reticence. He was just the man whom it was possible for even the most scrutinizing observer to read. It was the mask of a yellow Sphinx. At times you might almost trace a resemblance to that terrible Corsican who conquered and dominated Europe, and who also, when he wished, could hide his thoughts from a million eyes, and who, even on a sanguinary battlefield in which his life, his throne, and his gigantic interests were involved, revealed to not one of the hungry and anxious troops who looked upon it whether he was confident or hopeless of the issue. In daring, in cunning, in impassivity, in coolness in the face of appalling danger, Le Caron had something that was Napoleonic.

Deciding on Life and Death.

He had an astounding story to tell.

Becoming associated by accident at an early period of his life in the States with some of the leaders of the then powerful revolutionary section of the Irish movement in America, Le Caron conceived the idea that he should devote himself to the part of a spy. By his assumption of the part of a man more daring, more merciless, more violent than any other, he gradually established his reputation, and was advanced from point to point, till he finally became one of the innermost and small circle which guided the whole movement. Those who have studied such movements, whether in Russia or in Italy, in the days when a struggle for greater liberties had to face all the innumerable weapons of a powerful and despotic Government, it will be realized that men in that terrible innermost circle will wield a power more dreadful than even the despotic Governments they are fighting. It is one of the inevitable and awful consequences of a revolutionary conspiracy that the fidelity of its members should, when needs be, be guaranteed by the decree of death against treason. This is why in Russia, for instance, there are often as many assassinations of the conspirators as there are of the officials of the Government. In Russia, too, it has happened that a watchful and cunning police with all the funds of the State at their disposal are able not only to buy the most daring, cunning, and impressive revolutionary, but place him at the very head of that terrible inner ring which decides on life and death. The story of Azeff is a remarkable instance of this.

Le Caron was the Azeff of the Irish Revolution in the United States. He was one of the three men known as the "Triangle," before whom came all the most serious and sometimes tragic issues. One can imagine the feelings of Le Caron when sitting in a room with three or four men to decide perhaps the life of another human being, and on the very question whether or not he was guilty of treason, with the certainty within his bosom that if the awful secret of his own life were known, he would not have been allowed to leave the room alive. And it was his duty perhaps to condemn another man for the very deed of which he himself was guilty. I can still remember the shudder when Sir Charles Russell quietly asked Le Caron what he had done on such occasions, and Le Caron replied, "I voted with the majority."

A Spy of Scotland Yard.

Le Caron was nominally a chemist in a small town near Chicago. He attended to his duties in connection with the revolutionary organization with the most scrupulous care, and naturally, for that was after all the chief business of his life. The organization was divided into what are called camps. At each of these camps the whole business was discussed, and now and then proclamations were read which informed the members of the future tactics of their leaders. It was strictly ordered that the proclamations should be burned immediately after they had been read, so that no trace of them might remain behind. And a further precaution was adopted that a copy was given only to the few men who, like Le Caron, held the highest and the most trusted offices in the organization. When Le Caron returned to his chemist's shop from the meeting of the camp he solemnly took a copy of the proclamation and by the next post it was on its way to England to a private address, and within a few hours afterwards it was in the hands of Sir Robert Anderson and placed among the archives which he was piling up for use at the proper time against the deadly foes with whom he was waging war. Many of these proclamations were read out during the trial. They were somewhat turgid in style, and with their apparent confidence in their strictest secrecy while this dark-skinned man with the burning eyes was all the time sending them to the formidable chief of Scotland Yard, they produced a rather ironical effect.

Comic Contrast.

One of the few occasions in which Le Caron departed from his usual gravity and impassivity was when his counsel read out a letter of introduction given to him when he was about to visit some of the camps in the Southern States.

The terms of perfect confidence in Le Caron as a true member of the organization who could be implicitly trusted were in such a contrast with the man standing in a witness-box in London and giving the whole story and all the then away, and was at once so poignant and so comical, that Le Caron's grim face relaxed and it was covered by a smile.

When eggs are broken and cannot be used at once, they will keep much better if the shells are removed and a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt beaten in for each egg.

Sick, Sour Stomach Indigestion, Or Gas

Take "Pape's Diapepsin" and in five minutes you'll wonder what became of misery in stomach.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear. If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

New Fancied Dances!

Must be Kept Within Bounds at Westmount.

Montreal, Feb. 17.—That tangoers one-steppers, bunny huggers, hesitators and advocates of all other new fancied dances who wish to find their Parisian delight within the bounds of Westmount, will in the future be obliged to temper their enthusiasm to such an extent as the city fathers deem in keeping with propriety, was clearly forecasted at the weekly meeting of the Westmount City Council last night.

The incident which gave rise to the discussion of the dancing question by the council occurred at a dance in Victoria Hall some time ago, when it is said that many of the best people were shocked by the new dances given by a certain few of those present. Many complaints were made as to the manner in which some of the guests were dancing, and acting Mayor Common advised the men in charge of the dance that if the objectionable dancing was not stopped, the light would be turned out. An announcement to that effect was greeted with applause on the part of the majority of those present.

HEALTHY AND UNHEALTHY LIGHTING

Gas, it may be said, vitiates the atmosphere. True. But it also helps to purify it. Its purifying power is greater than its vitiating power. Electricity does not vitalize, nor does it purify. Hear what three eminent men have said:—

Much evidence has lately been adduced to show that gas is more useful than the electric light in promoting efficient ventilation of air. It is for this reason that gas is being frequently substituted for the electric light. The latest example is, perhaps, the Society of Medical Officers of Health, which has recently installed gas on its premises, after experience with the electric light.—Dr. Jamieson's. Hurry.

He would merely add that no member who had experienced their meeting room under the old conditions could deny the improvement that had taken place since gas had been substituted for the electric light and the new system of heating and ventilation had been installed.—Dr. Reginald Dudley, before the Society of Medical Officers of Health.

I have in my mind's eye, at the moment, a hall which, in the old days was lighted by gas, and in which a large audience could, with comfort, sit through an hour's lecture, or with pleasure through a three hours' dinner, but which, with the march of civilization, had its illumination changed from gas to electricity, the latter being employed with all the latest refinements to effect the lighting under the best conditions, with the result that any large gathering within its walls leads to a state little short of asphyxiation.—Vivian B. Lewes, Professor of Chemistry at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich.—nov8,11

The vicar of Leeds, Eng., Dr. Bickerteth, tells of a clergyman who rang him up on the telephone to ask if he would consent to his taking a marriage service in which the word "obey" was left out. He replied that he was not the bishop, but was tolerably certain that the bishop would not allow him to omit the word.

"But who is the lady going to marry?" he inquired. "The answer was, 'She is going to marry a doctor.'"

He then asked, "Would she mind if you put in the word 'consult' instead?"

LONDON, To-day.

Lord Minto died at four o'clock this morning.

JUAREZ, To-day.

The committee to-day was prevented from proceeding to Chihuahua to examine the Benton body by rebel orders. Col. Avila, military commander here, declined to permit them to board the regular passenger train which was waiting.

LONDON, To-day.

Bomb outrage attributed to suffragettes occurred at the Church of St. John the Evangelist at Westminster shortly after the conclusion of evening service last night. A loud explosion was heard just after the church had been closed. Investigation found the front gallery, pulpit, several windows and a number of pews destroyed. The Vicar, Archdeacon Wilberforce, is Chaplain of the Commons.

ELPASO, Texas, To-day.

The trip of the Benton Investigation Commission to Chihuahua was suddenly postponed or abandoned to-day shortly before the Commissioners were about to take train. Those concerned said any explanation must come from the State Department. Refugees who are deeply interested in the situation were at a loss to account for the new turn of affairs. Several refugees said they thought Carranza's attempt to use Benton negotiations as a lever to obtain recognition of the Rebel Government and dispatches from Washington indicate the State Department is already satisfied it has the correct version.

LONDON, To-day.

Back to South Africa was the keynote of the great Labor demonstration at Hyde Park yesterday in support of the nine deported labor leaders. In case this undertaking will be found impossible, it is proposed that nine English labor leaders be sent to take the places of the evicted nine. Tom Mann has already volunteered to do so. A hundred thousand persons attended the gathering. Vicious speeches were made denouncing the action of the South African Government. A resolution was passed, condemning the proclamation of martial law and the subsequent actions of the Government demanding repatriation of the deported leaders.

City versus Progressives.

The Halifax and City teams will play their final game at the Prince's rink to-night. Preceding the match there will be a three mile race, as already mentioned between Messrs. Patterson, Evans and Squires. Yesterday afternoon the visiting and city teams were entertained at Donovan's hockey.

A swindler now under indictment in the United States advertised, "Throw away your glasses." Those who sent him five or ten dollars received in exchange a small box of tablets which the United States mail officials found could be manufactured for twenty-five cents per thousand. There is no medical, chemical or mechanical means of restoring to normal an eyeball which is irregular in shape for such is the condition in most cases when glasses are worn for constant use. Hypermetropia, myopia, and the various forms of astigmatism are simply cases where the cornea, or clear front portion of the eyeball, is not absolutely spherical, and there is no other known means of overcoming such defect excepting by adjusting glasses. It is to be hoped that none of our Newfoundland friends have been duped by the swindler referred to above. You are always safe in consulting R. H. The Pancake Party and Dance held by the lads of the K. E. Brigade, in their armoury, on Tuesday night, was a most enjoyable affair. About 150 young people attended and a very pleasant time was spent until 11:30 when all retired to their homes well satisfied with the evening's amusement. Music was furnished by the McCarthy Bros., of Riverhead.

Sealers! Harbour Grace Notes.

Some young men of the industrious class secured some mussels on Tuesday and sold them readily at 25 cents per bucket. One young man assures us it was the first coming of them and they would be cheaper in a few days.

Dr. Cron arrived by Saturday night's train having been at Bellefleur and assisted in stamping out the smallpox cases there.

Mr. Jonathan Parsons, of Bear's Cove, spent a few pleasant days of last week visiting friends at Freshwater.

The Young People's Christian Endeavour Society lately formed in connection with the Presbyterian Church held its regular monthly meeting last night and the members enjoyed the social very much. The object of the Society is to meet weekly for Bible study, etc. while the monthly meetings, are to be for business, with a social at the end by way of dessert.

Old and young are eligible for membership, and each member has some special work. We asked one little child of 9 years what part he could take in such a social. "Oh," said he, "I am the flower committee, to take the flowers to any sick person I hear of." The pastor, Rev. Mr. Magner, is taking a great interest in the organization, and it promises to be productive of much good. May it be so.

Mr. Arch. Noseworthy, the obliging mail carrier to and from the South Side, met with a painful accident while in the woods yesterday. He let a heavy stick of wood fall on his foot, and although it pained quite a bit he paid very little attention to it. After reaching home the pain became more severe and the foot began to swell. He is still in great pain and unable to move about.

Judge Oke was confined to his home for a couple of days this week suffering from a heavy cold. He is now able to be about again.

Almeriana's Long Trip.

The S. S. Almeriana, Capt. Merrick, arrived here from Halifax, Saturday night, bringing about 300 tons of cargo and the following passengers:—Messrs. Tibble, Smith and Peterson.

She left Halifax Sunday, February 22nd, and made a good run to Cape Race but on Tuesday evening became jammed in the ice off the Cape, and was carried about by the ice until Saturday when she was able to make for this port. One night the ship was near being driven ashore, and only by skilful management was she brought clear.

The ship was six days on the trip from here to Halifax, and during the passage encountered heavy westerly gales, accompanied by sleet and snow. On arrival at Halifax the ship was coated with heavy ice. She sails again to-morrow for Liverpool.

Destructive Fire.

House Razed to the Ground. The house owned and occupied by Edmund Russell, Newtown Road, was totally destroyed by fire on Saturday evening last.

The fire was supposed to be caused by defective stove funnelling and gained headway rapidly, so that the occupants barely escaped with a few belongings.

No alarm was sent in, owing to the distance from the city, and if the fire companies had been called no water was available. There was no insurance on the house, and the loss to Mr. Russell is a heavy one.

B. L. S. Meeting.

The adjourned annual meeting of the B. L. Society was held yesterday morning, the chair being occupied by the President, Hon. J. D. Ryan.

The following were appointed as members of the L. and A. Committee:—Messrs. W. J. Higgins, C. J. Fox, J. Carey, J. M. Darcy, T. J. Power, J. H. Dee, P. J. Grace, R. Allsup, A. Summers, W. J. Harris, M. J. O'Hara, E. J. Ring, E. J. Brophy and P. K. Devine.

The question of holding a parade on St. Patrick's Day was discussed, but was postponed for final discussion at next Sunday's meeting.

T. A. Juveniles Meet.

The regular monthly meeting of the Juvenile Branch of the T. A. and R. Society took place yesterday, and eight candidates were elected to membership. During the meeting the prize donated by President Ellis was awarded to Master Wallace for having brought in the greatest number of candidates during 1913. A similar prize has been offered for this year, and great enthusiasm prevails.

A MODERN INSTANCE.

It was something like a ringworm on his head, or rather at the back of the neck, just below the hair, and seemed inclined to spread. Washing with antiseptic solutions, and the use of common ointments scarcely availed to prevent its getting larger. He was puzzled. Then he saw an advertisement of Zylex and Zylex Soap, and decided to use them. Procuring a box of Zylex and a cake of Zylex Soap he washed the part carefully, and applied the ointment freely. The result was marked almost from the first. In a few days the spot had disappeared, and everything was as well as ever. Now he uses Zylex Soap regularly and keeps a box of Zylex always handy.

Have you such spots? Then use Zylex. You will soon forget that you have had any skin troubles. At all druggists. Zylex, 50c. a box; Zylex Soap, 25c. a cake.—Feb 26, 1914.

The New Railway Loan. Mr. Lloyd's Criticism.

Mr. Lloyd.—He said that he was glad to know that the Leader of the Government had been extenuating and apologizing for the fact that he was out in his calculations. There can be no doubt but that he is very considerably out in his calculations, and it is apparent to everybody that he is absolutely out of his element tonight. It might appear from the tenor of some of his remarks, we are not living in the year of 1914 but in 1910, and that the clock had gone back four years. We are here tonight dealing with the third Loan Bill on a question of a Railway Contract. The question before us is not whether the Government had a mandate from the people or not to begin the contract, as the bulk of the Premier's remarks had reference to. For what has the mandate to do with the matter under discussion tonight? In 1910, when the railway contract was before the House, it was passed, sealed and delivered, and we must abide by it. What we are dealing with now is a third loan to carry out the 1910 contract, and not whether the contract was good or bad. We are now called upon to pass a third loan, but the Leader of the Government declares it a trifling matter, a mere flea-bite, and the trifle is that this country is called upon to pay two million dollars more than it was given to understand it would, after the second loan. The Leader of the Government denies that he gave the country to understand in 1910 that four millions of dollars would pay to carry out the contract. He can deny it as much as he likes, but he will convince nobody. He will not even convince his own colleagues sitting near him. In 1908 the Prime Minister stated in his Manifesto that his railway and other policies would be effected not only without adding to taxation, but that he would carry them out and also reduce taxation. The Resolutions tabled in connection with the Budget or Wednesday, is an illuminating comment on that pledge. They provide for a quarter of a million dollars more than there was on the duties taken off last year. Not merely the $380,000 taken off was put on, but actually $650,000, and this is the effect to-day of the Government's policy, and this is the outcome of five years' effort to reduce taxation. The Leader of the Government remarked that the full cost of a mile of railway was as well known as the price of a barrel of flour. If this was so well known, why did he not announce it in 1910 when the contract was before the House? Why did he reckon it at $15,000 a mile, some thousands below the final cost. But even at $15,000 a mile and even with his under-estimated mileage of 250, the Prime Minister was short in his calculations. He was also out both in mileage and cost per mile. Did he not repeat the statement at a meeting at Burn, long after, and did he not tell the people eighteen months after that the Government was going to build and complete the lines of railway for a total charge of $140,000 a year for interest, even after his errors were pointed out? Did not the Minister of Finance, who was in charge of the Loan Bill, say that the railways were not going to cost more than $4,000,000, and did he not ridicule the idea of extras, bringing the cost up to $5,000,000? What happened in the Upper Chamber? Did not the Leader, Hon. Mr. Bishop, who was in charge of the Railway Resolutions, ask the House to take the matter into careful consideration in as much as the policy entailed a probable cost of $4,000,000 for the construction and equipment of the whole railway? Take the impression made at that time on the mind of Hon. Mr. Robinson, who endorsed the $4,000,000 estimate, and refused to accept the idea that the cost was going to be anything like $7,000,000. Not one word was heard that the cost was going to be more than $4,000,000 until the Premier came in this House in 1912 and asked for an extra loan of $2,000,000. And then he assured this House that not only was everything going to be paid for out of the loan, but that there was going to be a balance to the good. Yes, there is a balance, and we are dealing with that balance now. That balance is like a number of other Government balances in the Bank, on the wrong side. Instead of having a credit balance of $11,000, we have a debit balance of two million dollars. We admit that we have to meet those bills, but it is not our duty to bear in silence the blundering of the Government. It is our duty to point out the financial errors of the Government, and we are endeavoring to do that as well as we can. We realize the duty of fulfilling the obligations of the railway contract, but we do not know the extent of these obligations. The Leader of the Government has given up estimating it as a bad job, and the Minister of Finance abandoned it as a hopeless task. The country cannot rely on the estimate, given by the Leader of the Government. We are told the loan of four millions of dollars would complete the railways. The Leader of the Government was then four millions of dollars out. Two years later we were told that two millions of dollars more would be required. Again he was out in his reckoning, and another two millions is asked for. No one knows what he is going to be out this time. The Minister of Finance, in introducing the Loan, had virtually given it up, and so had the Government. The Minister of Finance has palmed the latest estimate on the Government Engineer. We have to-day a letter before us from the Government Engineer, but that letter does not say that two million dollars will finish the contract, although a few days ago we were given to understand that his estimate was the estimate of the Government Engineer, and moreover that official could not forecast, nor is 't within his duty to attempt to forecast what the new loan will realize. The Premier, instead of laboring issues about the mandate to build the branch lines and the excellence of the contract, should have explained to us why he is asking for a third loan. He should have told us why he is going to try to float three and a half per cent debentures. The attempt is most unique, and no one knows it better than the Leader of the Government. So far as I have been able to discover, I have not been able to find any colony for the past fourteen months, no matter how large or important, placing a 3 1/2 per cent loan on the market. Surely that is a matter that has occupied the attention of the Government. It is perfectly true that the financial strain of last year has been relieved somewhat, and that last month there was much financial buoyancy, but a week or two ago some of the colonies had a set-back on even 4 per cent loan. Under these circumstances, then, it is necessary for the Government to watch the market closely before floating the loan. In conclusion, he said, that his criticisms on the estimates regarding the railway contract were not meant to imply that the Leader of the Government wilfully and deliberately deceived either this House or this country, but what he did charge him with was great laxity of conduct in creating the impression that this country was going to get through this railway contract on a loan that would entail a charge of $140,000 and with going to bind in financing of the country.
