THE Phantom Lover.

By the Author of "A Bachelor Husband."

CHAPTER XXVIII. I suppose I was a fool to imagine that I could ever make you care for me. I suppose it was conceited that led me to think I could ever cut out this phantom lover of yours...

She was staring at him now; her face was white and incredulous. "If you—if you think I'm going to believe that—" she began, in a high, unnatural voice...

Better to hurt her now, he told himself, than to let her go on to worse pain and humiliation.

"Those letters!" she said shrilly. "Whose letters? They were from him—they were from him—weren't they from him?" she asked hoarsely.

CHAPTER XXX. A long moment of silence followed Mickey's broken confession. He dared not look at Esther, though she was staring at him, staring hard, with a curious sort of wonderment in her grey eyes...

He was despondent and hungry, and hunger alone makes a man angry. He looked at the girl for whose sake he had raced all those miles of wild-goose chase, and a bootish longing to hurt her, to let her suffer rose in his heart.

trying to look as if she knew every inch of the Gare St. Lazare and had been there thousands of times before. But her heart was beating up in her throat, and she would have given a great deal had it been compatible with dignity, to rush after him and beg him to stay.

"But I don't believe in him—I don't believe anything he says," Esther told herself feverishly; she moved on again away from the trays of flashing diamonds.

CHAPTER XXX. And so the dream had come true after all, and she and Raymond were together in Paris. As she looked up into his handsome face it seemed to Esther that all the past hours of grief were as if they had never really existed...

"You're not going to leave me?" Esther gave a little gasp. "You're not going to leave me?" The hardness of his eyes did not soften.

things you would not let me say when we were last together...

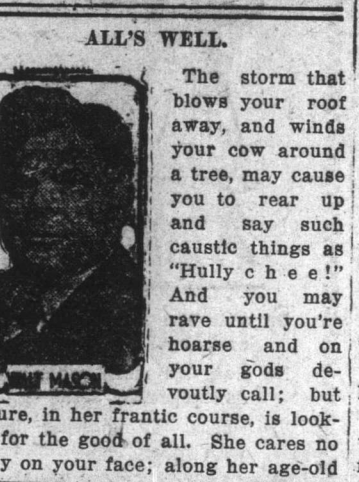

She rose and walked on again; she turned out of the gardens and found herself in a street of shops. People looked at her curiously.

Two girls passing her were chattering in French—Esther looked after them vaguely. "This was really Paris—this rather noisy, confusing place, the Paris she had longed to see.

He walked quickly till he drew a breath with her, and there was a curious eagerness in his face as he stopped a little to look down at hers; then he gave an exclamation of sheer amazement.

His overwhelming conceit suddenly woke the wish in his heart to know if she still loved him, or if she had forgotten him, and a little flush crossed his face and his eyes grew tender as they met the tragedy of hers; he looked hastily round.

feeling fine! A few days ago though, I felt pretty miserable—kind of tired and drowsy. I must have been very much run down, until someone recommended— Dr. Wilson's HERBINE BITTERS.

ALL'S WELL. The storm that blows your roof away, and winds you crow around a tree, may cause you to rear up and say such caustic things as "Hully c h e e!"

He took one of the letters from her suit-case and stared at the handwriting—Raymond's writing. The whole thing was too preposterous.

He spoke with savage impulse. "I won't bother you with my unwelcome company any longer. You will be able to get breakfast in the restaurant, and you will find that most people here understand English."

A man passing stared at her, half stopped, went on again, then turned, paused irresolutely, and finally came back.

"I thought it must be you," Raymond was saying nervously. "And yet I could not be sure. Somehow I never thought of you and Paris as being in any way compatible, and yet—"

Britain Has Huge Budget Surplus--Unemployed in Toronto Clash With Police--Labor Candidate Defeated.

THE BRITISH BUDGET. LONDON, April 25. Great Britain's surplus of revenue over expenditure during the past year totalled £230,500,000, Austen Chamberlain announced in the House of Commons this afternoon, introducing the Budget. The actual receipts were £1,425,000,000 while the expenditures last year were £1,195,428,000. The amount applied to the reduction of the national debt was £254,600,000. The foreign debt was reduced by £117,300,000 to £1,161,500,000 on March 31. The ordinary expenditure for this year, Chamberlain declared, would be £974,023,000, while the ordinary revenue with the dropping of excess profits duty and two other small changes, would be £1,058,150,000. Chamberlain announced there would be no change in direct taxation and large sums would be collected in excess profits arrears. The total debt on March 31st, he said, was £7,573,000,000. He estimated the total sum available for debt redemption this year would be £103,000,000. Among the new items to be provided for next year, he pointed out, was the interest on the United States debt of Great Britain, amounting to more than forty million pounds.

COALITION LIBERAL ELECTED. BEDFORD, England, April 25. Fredrick C. Kellaway, Coalition Liberal, has been elected to the House of Commons for the Bedford Division of Bedfordshire, over F. F. Riley, Labor. The election was made necessary by Kellaway's recent elevation to the Postmaster Generalship.

THE COMING CONFERENCE. LONDON, April 25. Right Hon. Winston Churchill, Colonial Secretary, referring to-day in a luncheon speech to the forthcoming Imperial Conference, said that the British Government had taken the utmost pains to place before its Dominion colleagues the subjects to be discussed and was anxious to receive from them additional topics. The conference was to be not a temporary or occasional affair or periodical institution, but a meeting of the regular Imperial Cabinet. He thought they could anticipate a properly successful series of discussions.

Newfoundland's Day Should Be June 24.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir.—There is something in the English after all. Yesterday's parade of the United Societies of the city was probably the largest and most successful ever held here. Everything was conducive to its success. The weather could not have been better had the committee the choosing of it. The sun shined, the air cool for walking, and thanks to the sprinkle of rain the previous afternoon there was no dust. Acting Mayor Mullaly had special attention paid the streets along the line of march and for that, among other things, the thanks of those in charge are due him. The celebration of St. George's Day, the first time as far as I am aware on which the day was kept as a public holiday, commenced in the C.C.C. hall with the dance of the Warrant and Non Commissioned Officers of the Church Lads Brigade. It started at ten o'clock St. George's Eve and so St. George's days was ushered in to the sounds of music, and dancing and making merry. It was a most successful dance and I had the honour of a complimentary ticket of which I took advantage. My old friend Jerry Houllhan and his Missus were there. I should not be a bit surprised but the dance will be duly reported in the Comic Weekly in Jerry's inimitable style so justly famous. I almost forgot to say that the previous afternoon Mrs. Gordon Winter generously despoiled her conservatory of the beautiful roses growing therein. Ladies sold them, at fancy prices and the proceeds were devoted to the Beaumont Hamel Grounds Fund, thereby not only advertising St. George's Day but raising money for so worthy a cause. Killing two birds with one stone. She very kindly sent me a beautiful rose which was the only decoration I sported in yesterday's parade. I considered myself honoured at her thoughtfulness. The great event of the day was the Parade in which the Newfoundland British Society, the L.O.A., S.U.F., L.O.F., S.O., E., and the Scouts participated, all headed by the C.L.B. with band and accompanied by the Methodist Guards and Salvation Army Bands. Mrs. Julia Salter Earle and I as Secretary and President represented the St. George's Society which was revived or recreated that day. The assembling point was Mallaly Park. Everything connected therewith having been thoroughly worked out by the committee in charge went through without a hitch and it was wonderful to see how simply and easily everything was accomplished. Mr. Kenneth Ruby the Grand Marshal in charge of the whole parade would have been in Haig's class had he participated in the Great War. The line of march was down Theatre Hill to Hutchings Street, down Water Street, up McBride's Hill and Church Hill where the procession entered the Cathedral by the western door. It was a work of art to get the vast assemblage seated. The officers of the societies who headed the procession occupied the front seats and the members lay in behind. The Band of the C.L.B. occupied some of the choir stalls and during the service rendered Land of Hope and Glory and God Save the King. The Brigade and Scouts occupied seats on either side of the church near the organ. The church was filled to overflowing, many being obliged to stand and crowds unable to be admitted. The churchwardens, ushers and society officials deserve great credit for the manner in which they accommodated the large congregation. The choir entered and left singing professional hymns which were very inspiring. Mr. King at the organ excelled himself and held control of the singing which was heartily entered into by those present. Canon Jeeves preached an eloquent and forceful sermon appropriate to the occasion which could not but fail to be uplifting. Considering the amount of despondency prevalent I was a little disappointed to learn that the collection was to be devoted to the tower fund but one cannot have everything. The reforming the ranks after the service was carried out without a hitch, the procession going out the way it came in, proceeding along Gower Street to Cavendish Square past Miss Ethel Dickinson's monument along King's Bridge Road to Government House grounds where the respects of the Societies were paid the King Waive, to the Governor. The officers surrounded the entrance in which stood His Excellency Sir Charles Alexander Harris, K.C.M.G., and with him Miss Harris. Mr. George B. Lloyd of the Post Office the Chairman of the Committee then presented Miss Harris with a beautiful bouquet of roses, emblematic of the day and made his address which in eloquence and patriotic fervour left nothing to be desired and was what was to be expected from such a loyal son of the Empire. The Governor and Miss Harris who shookhands with all. Mr. W. T. Lever, Secretary of the Parade Committee, was also presented to the Governor and Miss Harris. Cheers were called for all connected with the Royal family, the Governor, Lady and Miss Harris. Mr. J. C. Parsons then grouped and photographed the officers with the Governor and Miss Harris in the center. The procession then proceeded to Military Road and Rawlins Cross, Queen's Road to the starting point and then dispersed, everyone agreeing that it was the best ever, nothing happening to mar his pleasure. Great crowds occupied the space on either side of the line of march. The afternoon and evening were quietly spent, all the nickels being packed. The event of the evening of course was the concert in the Methodist College Hall by the St. John's Octette, a local organization which made its debut that night. For this also I was sent complimentary tickets. I am not going to attempt to describe that concert beyond saying that it was an eye opener as to what talent there is in the city and country. I am safe in saying there was nothing like it here before, every number being faultlessly rendered and the audience would be there yet had the performers given the concert that the audience desired. There were sufficient patriotic songs to connect the concert with the spirit of the day. The artists were fortunate in securing the services of Mrs. John Murphy and Mrs. Herbert Outerbridge, the former with the violin and the latter with her recitations charming the packed house and having to respond to encores. Mrs. Outerbridge having to come on a third time. The concert was under the patronage of His Excellency and the Lord Bishop of Newfoundland and under the auspices of the Llewellyn Club and the proceeds were for the Social Service Fund, a most worthy object. Next year I am hoping that all performances on St. George's Day will be for the St. George's Society. As St. George's Day is also Shakespeare's Day it would be nice if a play of Shakespeare's was at night put on in the Casino. God Save the King concluded the performance and so one of the most eventful days in the history of the country was brought to a close. It was a very eventful day and many precedents were established, first the holiday, then the dance on the night preceding the holiday which I think is a good scheme.

UNEMPLOYED AND POLICE CLASH IN TORONTO.

TORONTO, April 25. The police came in direct contact with the unemployed traders this afternoon. On orders of Deputy Chief Geddes, police reserves and a mounted squad swept the City Hall Drive and lawn clear of the huge throng which had gathered. Deputy Chief Geddes made an effort to tell the throng that the meeting was over and the place was to be cleared, but his words were drowned in a roar of jeers and hisses. When the police augmented by reserves from every division in the city and cleared the crowd away in five minutes, the move of the police seemed to catch everyone unaware. The scene was one of fleeing hundreds. An angry crowd tried to pull the policemen from their horses. One constable used his rawhide whip freely, whereupon three men attacked the constable and started to tear his uniform. He used his baton freely and drove off his attackers. Four arrests were made.

ISN'T CHILDHOOD TAMER.

There is no question but what the children of to-day have far more amusements, more toys, more luxuries, and more attention than the children of a generation ago. And yet in some ways I think they don't get as much out of it all as we did.

It seems to me as if childhood to-day is tamer. Here is an example of the sort of thing I mean. As I was out walking one beautiful morning recently I saw that which savors of spring as surely as the smell of violets or the sight of the northerling birds or the sound of the lawn mower—the balloon man. And behold, he had not only the silly air-filled balloons bobbing tamer on a stick, which are his common stock of late years, but three real gas balloons tugging aloft at their strings as a balloon should. Immediately I bought those three balloons and carried them to my nephews and nieces.

Had Never Flown a Balloon.
I supposed, of course, that they would rush for the string bag, lengthen the tether, as far as the supply of string would permit, and fly those three balloons aloft in competition. They had never heard of such a thing! Their idea of the way to treat a balloon was to fasten a clothes pin to its string so it couldn't get away and then let it bob tamer around in the house.

"But if we didn't have a clothes pin and took it outdoors," they pointed out to me, "the string might slip and it might get away."
I admitted the danger. "But suppose," I pointed out, "that it did. Wouldn't that be better than to keep those balloons tethered until they shrivelled up?"
And I remembered the balloon that got away from us—the little boy next door and me. And how it sailed away and we followed it over field and mill until it vanished from sight altogether, and left us to sit down on a stone wall and wonder how far it would go and glimpse a vision of the "world without walls" from its escape.

Shades of St. Valentine.
Again I was with some children on the day before Valentine's Day and found they were sending their valentines by mail! With their names written on them! "Shades of St. Valentine!" Why, I thought the chief flavor of the occasion came from dropping one's valentine at a door and then running away to hide while someone rushed to the door and tried to find one out or, failing that, to guess from whom the mistle sweet (or the opposite) came—and, conversely, from trying to be smart enough to catch the bearers of mist-stives at one's own door.

The valentines these children sent were far grander than any I ever sent, and doubtless cost twice as much. But I protest the favor of St. Valentine's Day was not in them.
Those Dangerous Old Days.
And then there is that day which to me for years was understood to be called "Fotchojall." Of course, I

They laughed when I came home last night.
And said I didn't get a bite.
They snickered at the joke at me.
And all the fellows asked to see The ones I'd caught. "One!" said they.
"He's been out fishing all this day. An' hasn't caught a single thing. And even got a fish to string."
They laughed at me, but all their jeers traveled no further than my ears.
"Was true I'd fished all day without snagging a single speckled trout. But what of that? I'd had a day That I could loaf and dream away, I'd chummed with birds and friendly trees.
And been as care-free as the breeze.
I'd rested whoso'er I'd willed.
To me the hum of trade was silenced,
I'd let my thoughts go wandering far
To where life's happier glories are;
I'd whistled like a boy once more,
And even stretched full length on shore
To watch the white clouds sail the
The very way I used to do.
They laughed when I came home at night.
And said I didn't get a bite.
They seemed to think my luck was bad.
They couldn't guess the fun I'd had
And couldn't know that all that day
I'd been a free man, blithe and gay,
And though of fish I'd landed none
I'd caught the joys for which I'd gone.

Naval Prize Money.
Dear Sir, Please allow me space to again publish a letter in connection with Naval Men's prize money. Some time ago I asked the Paymaster-Commander of H.M.S. Briton for a little information through the press. To a certain extent the information asked for was received, but the Paymaster did not say that "One Returned" was not or could be told that the prize money was handed over to the Nid. Government. Now Sir, I am under the impression that there is something wrong about this business. To-day I was speaking to a man recently returned home from Canada where he was employed for the last six or seven months, and he told me that as every returned sailor was being paid their prize money when he left there, he thought that as soon as he got home he could go up to draw his prize money. So on his arrival he went on board H.M.S. Briton, and on his record being looked up he was told that he had drawn war service gratuity, and owing to that his prize money had been handed over to the Militia Department. He then went to Major Howley and was informed by that gentleman that he had no orders to pay out prize money, but if he had he would do so. Now in the name of goodness how could that man pay out prize money whether he had orders or not, if that money is not in the country? Now, Sir, some time ago a committee was appointed at a meeting held by the R.N.R.'s to look into the matter of naval prize money and I am sure that the said committee started their investigation in a proper manner. I outlined their procedure in my last letter to the press. Now it seems, Sir, that some party or parties are trying to keep certain facts from us. Permit me, therefore, on behalf of the R.N.R.'s to say that if the proper information is not given us in the very near future, the party or parties responsible will find out that we are not fools enough to stand easy while the wool is being pulled over our eyes. What we want and what we mean to have is a straightforward answer. Why do not those people speak up and say "you will be paid the prize money as soon as it is received by the Government," or if it is already received pay it out sooner or later. It doesn't matter in the least what state the country is in financially as that has nothing to do with the paying of this money, as prize money is apart altogether from Government money. It is money received by the Prize Court for goods or ships captured during hostilities and handed over to the different Governments to be distributed to ranks and ratings of H.M.S. Navy. So you see the prize money has not to be taken from the Government chest. I hope, Sir, that I will not have to take up the valuable space of your paper again on this matter. If I do, I will have to publish our intention re same. So now it's up to the Government representatives to get busy and see that justice be done to those that gave up everything for their countries' sake.
Thanking you for space, Mr. Editor, I am Sir, yours truly,
JOHN RODGERS,
ex-Skipper R.N.R.

Feels Just Fine in Mornings Now,
Says Mrs. Sanson
Giffard Woman Always Gets Up Ready For Her Household Work Since Taking Tanlac, She States.
"For years before I got Tanlac I never felt hungry at all; but now it takes three good meals a day and often a little something between meals to satisfy me," said Mrs. Arthur Sanson, Giffard, P.Q., recently.
"I suffered terribly from indigestion and nervousness, and for five years had to live on a liquid and vegetable diet. Even a light meal caused me great distress and I often got very dizzy. At times I had such rheumatic pains in my left leg I could hardly stand to do any of my household work. I was extremely nervous, the least noise would make me jump, and my nights were long, restless and full of misery."
"But Tanlac certainly has been fine for me, for I have a perfectly wonderful appetite now, and an even eating all kinds of meats without suffering afterward. Those rheumatic pains have disappeared from my leg, and I feel fine all the time. I sleep well every night and get up ready to do my household work, and, in fact, feel just like a new person. I certainly am grateful to Tanlac."

Arraigning the Railway Commission.
Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—There was a time when it was considered by some unjust to direct any criticism toward the railroad, and there may have been some ground for such a claim when the railroad was operated under private management and finance, but now that the railroad is financed with money wrung from the fishermen and wage workers, the above claim loses all its weight, and the railroad must be placed in the same category as any other public question and therefore subject to the same criticism.
Now, while I have no desire to offer any destructive criticism, and will not do so—I do desire that you will open your columns to a series of articles which I propose to write, in which I will endeavor to show that there was absolutely no necessity for the heavy expenditure in the purchase of engines, which, by the way, are unsuitable for the road. Nor was there any necessity for the hundreds of dollars squandered on the so-called improvements for the handling of freight that will never be offered. Why the Government squandered hundreds of thousands on locomotives when we already have more than enough to handle the traffic; and why other hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent in purchasing locomotive appurtenances, can only be explained on the supposition that some one in the Government or some one in the employ of the railroad got a rake-off in the way of commission. However, this and other phases of the subject will be given due attention in subsequent articles. No attempt is made in this short note to explain the whys and wherefores of anything. This note is merely intended as an introduction to that which is to follow.

And as to my supply of veterinary remedies it is essential, as it has in very many instances proven its value. A recent experience in reclaiming what was supposed to be a lost section of a valuable cow's udder has again demonstrated its great worth and prompts me to recommend it in the highest terms to all who have a herd of cows, large or small. The Brick Industry.
Dear Sir,—I saw an article in the Trade Review under the heading of "Local Made Brick." I quite agree with the writer that very few people more especially those who are interested in the brick making business have any idea like he has tried to convey along those lines. First I may say that according to what Messrs. Smith & Sons have been doing, it will take them two years or more to ship a million of brick, and secondly instead of employing thirty men all the year around, I am safe in saying they do not employ more than fifteen, and I may say also that the buildings mentioned which they have supplied brick for were not built out of any more than a third of their brick. We have had a brick yard for about 60 years and we have a lot of other work beside filling orders. There are possibilities in the industry, which means plenty of hard work and if one wants to live by a brick yard he has to get right down to his job or he is likely to fall short.
Yours truly,
W. L. BUTLER,
Shoal Hr. T. B.

Civic Charity.

The Public Charity Committee consisting of representatives of the Churches and charitable and industrial organizations met last Thursday night at the Grenfell Institute and reviewed the situation in the city. The opinion was unanimous that, notwithstanding the projected supply of labor to the unemployed, the amount and degree of poverty is of such a serious nature as to require immediate relief. Some idea of the suffering can be had when it is known that owing to the curtailing of factory output, the pay sheet of the city factories is less than that of a year ago by over ten thousand dollars weekly. Many factories have closed down and families wholly, or in part, dependent on these, are in extreme and often almost unknown destitution. It was calculated that there is immediate need of at least $5000.00 for distribution.

After mature deliberation it was determined to raise an appeal to the public such appeal to be of the following nature:

- (1) A circular letter will be addressed to heads of business establishments soliciting contributions.
- (2) A similar letter will be forwarded to the staffs of such establishments who will ask that one of their number receive contributions.
- (3) A public appeal will be made in the press so that the entire community will be made aware of the need. Mr. D. M. Baird has kindly consented to act as general Treasurer for the fund and all contributions will be paid to him.
- (4) Disbursement will not be made by the Committee or its Treasurer direct, but the monies received will be distributed on somewhat the same plan as that which was adopted by the Curriers Association.

It is very earnestly hoped by the Committee that the well known kindness of St. John's people will respond to a very deep and pitiful necessity.

DOUGLAS HEMMEON,
Chairman.
H. E. COWAN,
Acting Secretary.

Died From Exposure.

The following message was received by Mr. M. S. Sullivan, M.H.A., from St. Kyrans this morning:—"Henry Monks, aged 65, of Monkstown, Paradise Sound, Placentia Bay, left home on Saturday last about 10 a.m. and did not return. He was found at 4 p.m. the same evening in an unconscious state, was brought home and died."

T. D. LEONARD.
There is a shortage of supplies in this district at present owing to its being cut off from steamer visits and destitution is rampant.

Putting in a Bid.

The business of the House of Assembly, for the past week or two, seems to be the airing of personal grievances, political views and obstructionist moves—a repetition of the tactics of a political campaign. Threats to visit the offices of certain city dailies and there punish the men who have committed offenses against those who figure prominently in the Opposition are among the matters that are threshed out in the House. Taken altogether, the country's business, the real object of the Assembly's existence, seems to be relegated to distant regions to await the cleaning off from the slate the many and varied causes of complaint and disappointment. One of the papers that support the Government, last week hinted at a drastic cure for the recent scandalous occurrence in the House—the taking charge of the Legislature by some of the public present. The Standard also thought of the same cure but for modest reasons refrained from putting it into type. That cure is that if the business of the Legislature is to be interfered with, and law and authority defied and treated with contempt, the political capital should find another place for its business where the work of the Legislature could and would be conducted without such exhibitions as have taken place in St. John's, not only recently but on many occasions in the past.—Harbor Grace Standard.

TO CORRESPONDENTS—Stephen Stag—King's Cove. Nothing doing: We do not mind your ignorance of the use of commas, colons, semicolons, interrogation points, exclamations, periods, parentheses, quotation signs, brackets, markouts or cut downs, but we do most strongly object to your writing on both sides of the paper, and mixing prose and "poetry" indiscriminately. Hence much as we regret not giving your interesting communication space, we can only state in explanation that you have not conformed to the elementary requirements of Journalism, and consequently your contribution becomes part of the daily accumulation of the W.P.B.
