

British News

THE IRISH REBEL MOVEMENT

It is not surprising that the Irish rebel movement has been so successful in its aims...

CLAIMS OF A CONVENT

Through the decision of the House in this singular case no one knows, the following report is well worth perusal...

NECESSITY FOR AN ARMS ACT

We have just had a conversation with a friend who is in a fit of discontent...

After having taken such steps...

After having taken such steps as to become a member of the University of St. Ursula...

On behalf of the respondent...

On behalf of the respondent it was further contended, amongst many other reasons...

Ball depriving Queen Elizabeth...

Ball depriving Queen Elizabeth of her prerogative right to the Crown...

SAINT JOHN, SEPT. 8, 1848.

The arrival of the English Mail on August 26th...

Police Officer - James Kennedy...

Police Officer - James Kennedy, one of the Police men, has been discharged...

Dr. George Carey - We regret to state...

Dr. George Carey - We regret to state that the Captain George Carey...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

Wheat - The loss to the company...

The loss to the company was about $3,000. The most disagreeable consequence...

men. The loss to the company will be about $3,000.

The most disagreeable consequences of this fire to the community, was the absence of a supply of gas to that portion of the city south of Grand street, last evening, and the sudden demand for other means of illumination, in many instances, which hoisted the supply. Broadway was dimmed for once and many stores were closed at an early hour, while in those which remain open, candles and spermacet did temporary duty. To those accustomed to the brilliancy of Broadway in the evening the change was as novel as the occurrence was unusual. — New York Courier and Enquirer, August 31.

What France wants.—The great difficulty in the eyes of the English people, is that France lacks religion, and the kind of education that comes from religion. She needs the ten commandments more than a new charter.—London Standard.

London paper says.—The patent medicine which was introduced into England, from the States, under the singular title of "Shaking Quaker," is said to be a very good one.

Green Cove Passages.—The lovers of good things will be following the Green Cove Passages, and will be glad to know that a quarter of a pound of fresh butter, four eggs, well beaten, pepper and salt, as well as sufficient, stir all together, and bake four hours in a buttered dish. Some add to the other ingredients a quarter of a pound of sugar and eat the pudding with meat or sauce, but opinion of the most exquisite prefer it to be hot, and with the first service.

Warning to shippers.—A remarkable and very recent case occurred near the Yellow Springs, in Chester county, on Sunday last. A gentleman named W. H. Miller, of Nantuxent township, was driving a team of four horses, and was accompanied by two ladies; at the same time working a pair of mules. A spark from the cigar caught the dress of one of the ladies, and she was severely burned. The fire spread rapidly, and she was unable to get up. The fire was extinguished, but she was so badly burned that she could not get up. The fire was extinguished, but she was so badly burned that she could not get up. The fire was extinguished, but she was so badly burned that she could not get up.

Deaths of J. W. Hammond, Esq.—We have to announce, with deep regret, the death of this celebrated comedian. Hammond has fallen a victim to the common summer complaint, so frequently fatal on our arrival in this city. We understood that he and seven children are left to sustain their unexpected bereavement. Mr. Hammond was the brother-in-law of Douglas Ferris. It will afford his family and friends some consolation to learn that Mr. Hammond received the kindest attention from his professional brethren here, during his illness, and that the masonic fraternity, of which he was a member, undertook the task of conveying his remains to the earth with becoming honours.—N. Y. Albion.

THE OCEAN MONARCH BURNED AT SEA—LOSS OF ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY LIVES.

Never, in our experience as journalists, has it been our lot to record a more painful or melancholy catastrophe than the complete destruction of the Boston Packet ship Ocean Monarch, which took place off the port of Liverpool on Thursday last. The noble ship has become a prey to fire, and an awful sacrifice of human life has taken place.

The following particulars are given by Captain Murdoch.

The Ocean Monarch, 1300 tons burthen, left the Mersey early on Thursday last, with about 250 souls on board, including the crew and passengers. We discharged the pilot about 5 o'clock. No incident worthy of note occurred until we arrived off the Ormshead, at which time it was nearly 12 o'clock. Orders were given to tack ship, and while hauling the main yard it was stated that one of the steeage passengers had made a fire in one of the ventilators without reflection. I immediately sent the steward and another man to extinguish the fire and bring up the delinquent who had made it. Immediately after this one of the cabin passengers came on deck and stated that the cabin was full of smoke, which was coming from below. On hearing this I ran down to ascertain the position of affairs, and found that the ship was actually on fire. I then hurried back to the deck and gave orders for water poured upon it, and directed that the ship should be kept before the wind in order to lessen the draft, but the flames with a rush, almost instantaneous lighting, burst forth, and in less than five minutes the whole stern of the ship was completely enveloped in the fire element. I then gave orders to have the ship brought to the wind. All was now a scene of the utmost confusion, noise, and disorder. My orders could not be heard. Despair had seized almost every soul on board. The scene which presented itself was most awful to contemplate, much less to look upon. The flames were bursting with immense fury from the stern and centre of the vessel. So great was the heat in these parts that the passengers, male and female crowded forward.—In vain did I entreat and beg of the passengers to be composed. I pointed out to them that there were several vessels around us, and that, if they preserved order, they would all be saved; that although the case was desperate it was not hopeless. It was of no avail.

The Queen of the Ocean yacht was the first to come to our assistance. Her owner, Mr. Thos. Littledale, with whom were Sir Thos. Hooketh, Mr. Tobin, Mr. Park, and Mr. Aufreder, ordered the boat to be lowered, and proceeded with an alacrity and zeal, aided by the gentlemen named and the crew of his craft, to pick up all within their reach.

The Brazilian steam-ship Alfonso, the Prince of Wales, coasting steamer, and the New York packet-ship New World, after some time, came up and rendered effective service.

The Queen of the Ocean remained alongside till three o'clock. At that time the vessel was burnt near to the water's edge, and there were only a few of the passengers on board, several boats being alongside endeavouring to take them off. Finding that the yacht could do no more, Mr. Littledale ordered her to start for Liverpool, where we arrived about seven o'clock in the evening.

ENGLISH NEWS.

LIVERPOOL, August 30.

COMMERCIAL.

The Liverpool Times says:—All departments of trade and commerce have been in a very unsatisfactory position during the past week. The uncertainty which prevails respecting the harvest and the extent of the potato disease has been most injurious to the markets for foreign and colonial produce, although holders have been anxious to realize still from the causes above noted, buyers have manifested unusual caution in their operations. Money is comparatively scarce, and there is more demand, but the rate of discount is not higher than present.

The price of American flour has advanced 2s. to 2s. 6d. per bushel, and is now 31s. to 31s. 6d. per bushel for Western Canal and Richmond, 31s. to 31s. 6d. for Philadelphia and Baltimore, 31s. to 31s. 6d. for New Orleans and Ohio, and 31s. to 31s. 6d. for Canadian. Indian Meal is 17s. to 18s. per bushel.

LIVERPOOL TIMBER MARKET.—Three cargoes of Quebec Pine have been sold at from 14d. to 14 1/2d. per 100 ft. for Pine 17s. to 18s. Oak 21d. to 22d. Pine 15s. to 16s. Deal 27s. to 27 1/2s. per standard. A cargo of St. John's Pine, 12 1/2 inches average, has been sold at 10 1/2d. per 100 ft. The market is quiet with Spruce Deals, and sales are now effected with difficulty, even at the low prices.

IRELAND.

The excitement in Ireland has settled down into a dull, gloomy, and most unprofitable state. The Queen's troops still possess all of the important points in the north, with the certainty that during the whole of the approaching winter the most rigorous military and police regulations will be enforced, and that any attempt at organizing clubs, and otherwise thwarting the endeavors of the Executive to maintain tranquillity, will be instantly repressed. The trial of Mr. John Martin has terminated in his conviction, and a sentence of transportation for ten years. A writ of error has been submitted to the Attorney General. The future fate of Mr. Doherty is still in the balance.—The Government having failed to procure his conviction on his first trial, owing to the disagreement of the jury, was not more successful on a second attempt. Nevertheless additional evidence was adduced, there was a greater disagreement among the jury than before, and the jury was again permitted to separate without returning a verdict.—Mr. Doherty was remanded to prison, and he is allowed to be received for his enlargement. These momentary triumphs tend, however, to aggravate the prevailing mischief. Almost all the English journals supported by powerful men in Paris, are calling upon the Government to establish a military tribunal, in order that the great palladium of liberty, trial by jury, may not be endangered by such a course as some individual jurymen have adopted. It is said that Government will make another attempt in the course of civil procedure, to promote the prosecution who have made themselves amenable to the law, but if they are defeated they will accept other more effective measures. Considering the critical state of affairs in France, threatened as she is with all the horrors of another fearful death, surely she cannot be so much terrified by Irish liberty who, at such a moment, would wish to allign the good feeling of the vast majority of the English people.

The accounts from all parts of Ireland respecting the potato crop fill us with the deepest alarm and apprehension. In the southern counties the disease has exhibited itself in the most formidable form in almost every locality. In the West of Ireland, the potato crop is said to be almost entirely destroyed. In the North of Ireland, the potato crop is said to be almost entirely destroyed. In the North of Ireland, the potato crop is said to be almost entirely destroyed.

THE CHEAP SALE OF MADE CLOTHING

advertised in another column at the commencement of the Fall trade.

It is still going on for a few days only, previous to the commencement of the Fall trade.

CONSUMPTION.

There is, perhaps, no disease with which our country is afflicted, which sweeps off annually so many victims, as that fatal destroyer of the human race—Consumption. Day after day, year after year, the insatiable monster hurries to the portals of the cold and silent tomb, fresh added victims to its conquest. No walk of life is exempt from its ravaging influence. No age is exempt, from its cruel and fatal grasp. The old, the middle aged, and the young, all alike, are food for this common enemy of mankind. The white-haired patriarch whose life of temperance has rendered his system impervious to the attacks of other ills, and whose good deeds prepared him for the enjoyment of his declining years, may be seized by this insidious foe, and ere long his life and soul may be torn from a world ever bright to minds which look complacently on their well spent days.

On Sunday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

On Monday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

On Tuesday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

THE CHEAP SALE OF MADE CLOTHING

advertised in another column at the commencement of the Fall trade.

It is still going on for a few days only, previous to the commencement of the Fall trade.

CONSUMPTION.

There is, perhaps, no disease with which our country is afflicted, which sweeps off annually so many victims, as that fatal destroyer of the human race—Consumption. Day after day, year after year, the insatiable monster hurries to the portals of the cold and silent tomb, fresh added victims to its conquest. No walk of life is exempt from its ravaging influence. No age is exempt, from its cruel and fatal grasp. The old, the middle aged, and the young, all alike, are food for this common enemy of mankind. The white-haired patriarch whose life of temperance has rendered his system impervious to the attacks of other ills, and whose good deeds prepared him for the enjoyment of his declining years, may be seized by this insidious foe, and ere long his life and soul may be torn from a world ever bright to minds which look complacently on their well spent days.

On Sunday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

On Monday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

On Tuesday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

THE OCEAN MONARCH BURNED AT SEA—LOSS OF ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY LIVES.

Never, in our experience as journalists, has it been our lot to record a more painful or melancholy catastrophe than the complete destruction of the Boston Packet ship Ocean Monarch, which took place off the port of Liverpool on Thursday last. The noble ship has become a prey to fire, and an awful sacrifice of human life has taken place.

The following particulars are given by Captain Murdoch.

The Ocean Monarch, 1300 tons burthen, left the Mersey early on Thursday last, with about 250 souls on board, including the crew and passengers. We discharged the pilot about 5 o'clock. No incident worthy of note occurred until we arrived off the Ormshead, at which time it was nearly 12 o'clock. Orders were given to tack ship, and while hauling the main yard it was stated that one of the steeage passengers had made a fire in one of the ventilators without reflection. I immediately sent the steward and another man to extinguish the fire and bring up the delinquent who had made it. Immediately after this one of the cabin passengers came on deck and stated that the cabin was full of smoke, which was coming from below. On hearing this I ran down to ascertain the position of affairs, and found that the ship was actually on fire. I then hurried back to the deck and gave orders for water poured upon it, and directed that the ship should be kept before the wind in order to lessen the draft, but the flames with a rush, almost instantaneous lighting, burst forth, and in less than five minutes the whole stern of the ship was completely enveloped in the fire element. I then gave orders to have the ship brought to the wind. All was now a scene of the utmost confusion, noise, and disorder. My orders could not be heard. Despair had seized almost every soul on board. The scene which presented itself was most awful to contemplate, much less to look upon. The flames were bursting with immense fury from the stern and centre of the vessel. So great was the heat in these parts that the passengers, male and female crowded forward.—In vain did I entreat and beg of the passengers to be composed. I pointed out to them that there were several vessels around us, and that, if they preserved order, they would all be saved; that although the case was desperate it was not hopeless. It was of no avail.

The Queen of the Ocean yacht was the first to come to our assistance. Her owner, Mr. Thos. Littledale, with whom were Sir Thos. Hooketh, Mr. Tobin, Mr. Park, and Mr. Aufreder, ordered the boat to be lowered, and proceeded with an alacrity and zeal, aided by the gentlemen named and the crew of his craft, to pick up all within their reach.

The Brazilian steam-ship Alfonso, the Prince of Wales, coasting steamer, and the New York packet-ship New World, after some time, came up and rendered effective service.

The Queen of the Ocean remained alongside till three o'clock. At that time the vessel was burnt near to the water's edge, and there were only a few of the passengers on board, several boats being alongside endeavouring to take them off. Finding that the yacht could do no more, Mr. Littledale ordered her to start for Liverpool, where we arrived about seven o'clock in the evening.

THE OCEAN MONARCH BURNED AT SEA—LOSS OF ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY LIVES.

Never, in our experience as journalists, has it been our lot to record a more painful or melancholy catastrophe than the complete destruction of the Boston Packet ship Ocean Monarch, which took place off the port of Liverpool on Thursday last. The noble ship has become a prey to fire, and an awful sacrifice of human life has taken place.

The following particulars are given by Captain Murdoch.

The Ocean Monarch, 1300 tons burthen, left the Mersey early on Thursday last, with about 250 souls on board, including the crew and passengers. We discharged the pilot about 5 o'clock. No incident worthy of note occurred until we arrived off the Ormshead, at which time it was nearly 12 o'clock. Orders were given to tack ship, and while hauling the main yard it was stated that one of the steeage passengers had made a fire in one of the ventilators without reflection. I immediately sent the steward and another man to extinguish the fire and bring up the delinquent who had made it. Immediately after this one of the cabin passengers came on deck and stated that the cabin was full of smoke, which was coming from below. On hearing this I ran down to ascertain the position of affairs, and found that the ship was actually on fire. I then hurried back to the deck and gave orders for water poured upon it, and directed that the ship should be kept before the wind in order to lessen the draft, but the flames with a rush, almost instantaneous lighting, burst forth, and in less than five minutes the whole stern of the ship was completely enveloped in the fire element. I then gave orders to have the ship brought to the wind. All was now a scene of the utmost confusion, noise, and disorder. My orders could not be heard. Despair had seized almost every soul on board. The scene which presented itself was most awful to contemplate, much less to look upon. The flames were bursting with immense fury from the stern and centre of the vessel. So great was the heat in these parts that the passengers, male and female crowded forward.—In vain did I entreat and beg of the passengers to be composed. I pointed out to them that there were several vessels around us, and that, if they preserved order, they would all be saved; that although the case was desperate it was not hopeless. It was of no avail.

The Queen of the Ocean yacht was the first to come to our assistance. Her owner, Mr. Thos. Littledale, with whom were Sir Thos. Hooketh, Mr. Tobin, Mr. Park, and Mr. Aufreder, ordered the boat to be lowered, and proceeded with an alacrity and zeal, aided by the gentlemen named and the crew of his craft, to pick up all within their reach.

The Brazilian steam-ship Alfonso, the Prince of Wales, coasting steamer, and the New York packet-ship New World, after some time, came up and rendered effective service.

The Queen of the Ocean remained alongside till three o'clock. At that time the vessel was burnt near to the water's edge, and there were only a few of the passengers on board, several boats being alongside endeavouring to take them off. Finding that the yacht could do no more, Mr. Littledale ordered her to start for Liverpool, where we arrived about seven o'clock in the evening.

THE OCEAN MONARCH BURNED AT SEA—LOSS OF ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY LIVES.

Never, in our experience as journalists, has it been our lot to record a more painful or melancholy catastrophe than the complete destruction of the Boston Packet ship Ocean Monarch, which took place off the port of Liverpool on Thursday last. The noble ship has become a prey to fire, and an awful sacrifice of human life has taken place.

The following particulars are given by Captain Murdoch.

The Ocean Monarch, 1300 tons burthen, left the Mersey early on Thursday last, with about 250 souls on board, including the crew and passengers. We discharged the pilot about 5 o'clock. No incident worthy of note occurred until we arrived off the Ormshead, at which time it was nearly 12 o'clock. Orders were given to tack ship, and while hauling the main yard it was stated that one of the steeage passengers had made a fire in one of the ventilators without reflection. I immediately sent the steward and another man to extinguish the fire and bring up the delinquent who had made it. Immediately after this one of the cabin passengers came on deck and stated that the cabin was full of smoke, which was coming from below. On hearing this I ran down to ascertain the position of affairs, and found that the ship was actually on fire. I then hurried back to the deck and gave orders for water poured upon it, and directed that the ship should be kept before the wind in order to lessen the draft, but the flames with a rush, almost instantaneous lighting, burst forth, and in less than five minutes the whole stern of the ship was completely enveloped in the fire element. I then gave orders to have the ship brought to the wind. All was now a scene of the utmost confusion, noise, and disorder. My orders could not be heard. Despair had seized almost every soul on board. The scene which presented itself was most awful to contemplate, much less to look upon. The flames were bursting with immense fury from the stern and centre of the vessel. So great was the heat in these parts that the passengers, male and female crowded forward.—In vain did I entreat and beg of the passengers to be composed. I pointed out to them that there were several vessels around us, and that, if they preserved order, they would all be saved; that although the case was desperate it was not hopeless. It was of no avail.

The Queen of the Ocean yacht was the first to come to our assistance. Her owner, Mr. Thos. Littledale, with whom were Sir Thos. Hooketh, Mr. Tobin, Mr. Park, and Mr. Aufreder, ordered the boat to be lowered, and proceeded with an alacrity and zeal, aided by the gentlemen named and the crew of his craft, to pick up all within their reach.

The Brazilian steam-ship Alfonso, the Prince of Wales, coasting steamer, and the New York packet-ship New World, after some time, came up and rendered effective service.

The Queen of the Ocean remained alongside till three o'clock. At that time the vessel was burnt near to the water's edge, and there were only a few of the passengers on board, several boats being alongside endeavouring to take them off. Finding that the yacht could do no more, Mr. Littledale ordered her to start for Liverpool, where we arrived about seven o'clock in the evening.

THE OCEAN MONARCH BURNED AT SEA—LOSS OF ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY LIVES.

Never, in our experience as journalists, has it been our lot to record a more painful or melancholy catastrophe than the complete destruction of the Boston Packet ship Ocean Monarch, which took place off the port of Liverpool on Thursday last. The noble ship has become a prey to fire, and an awful sacrifice of human life has taken place.

The following particulars are given by Captain Murdoch.

The Ocean Monarch, 1300 tons burthen, left the Mersey early on Thursday last, with about 250 souls on board, including the crew and passengers. We discharged the pilot about 5 o'clock. No incident worthy of note occurred until we arrived off the Ormshead, at which time it was nearly 12 o'clock. Orders were given to tack ship, and while hauling the main yard it was stated that one of the steeage passengers had made a fire in one of the ventilators without reflection. I immediately sent the steward and another man to extinguish the fire and bring up the delinquent who had made it. Immediately after this one of the cabin passengers came on deck and stated that the cabin was full of smoke, which was coming from below. On hearing this I ran down to ascertain the position of affairs, and found that the ship was actually on fire. I then hurried back to the deck and gave orders for water poured upon it, and directed that the ship should be kept before the wind in order to lessen the draft, but the flames with a rush, almost instantaneous lighting, burst forth, and in less than five minutes the whole stern of the ship was completely enveloped in the fire element. I then gave orders to have the ship brought to the wind. All was now a scene of the utmost confusion, noise, and disorder. My orders could not be heard. Despair had seized almost every soul on board. The scene which presented itself was most awful to contemplate, much less to look upon. The flames were bursting with immense fury from the stern and centre of the vessel. So great was the heat in these parts that the passengers, male and female crowded forward.—In vain did I entreat and beg of the passengers to be composed. I pointed out to them that there were several vessels around us, and that, if they preserved order, they would all be saved; that although the case was desperate it was not hopeless. It was of no avail.

The Queen of the Ocean yacht was the first to come to our assistance. Her owner, Mr. Thos. Littledale, with whom were Sir Thos. Hooketh, Mr. Tobin, Mr. Park, and Mr. Aufreder, ordered the boat to be lowered, and proceeded with an alacrity and zeal, aided by the gentlemen named and the crew of his craft, to pick up all within their reach.

The Brazilian steam-ship Alfonso, the Prince of Wales, coasting steamer, and the New York packet-ship New World, after some time, came up and rendered effective service.

The Queen of the Ocean remained alongside till three o'clock. At that time the vessel was burnt near to the water's edge, and there were only a few of the passengers on board, several boats being alongside endeavouring to take them off. Finding that the yacht could do no more, Mr. Littledale ordered her to start for Liverpool, where we arrived about seven o'clock in the evening.

THE OCEAN MONARCH BURNED AT SEA—LOSS OF ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY LIVES.

Never, in our experience as journalists, has it been our lot to record a more painful or melancholy catastrophe than the complete destruction of the Boston Packet ship Ocean Monarch, which took place off the port of Liverpool on Thursday last. The noble ship has become a prey to fire, and an awful sacrifice of human life has taken place.

The following particulars are given by Captain Murdoch.

The Ocean Monarch, 1300 tons burthen, left the Mersey early on Thursday last, with about 250 souls on board, including the crew and passengers. We discharged the pilot about 5 o'clock. No incident worthy of note occurred until we arrived off the Ormshead, at which time it was nearly 12 o'clock. Orders were given to tack ship, and while hauling the main yard it was stated that one of the steeage passengers had made a fire in one of the ventilators without reflection. I immediately sent the steward and another man to extinguish the fire and bring up the delinquent who had made it. Immediately after this one of the cabin passengers came on deck and stated that the cabin was full of smoke, which was coming from below. On hearing this I ran down to ascertain the position of affairs, and found that the ship was actually on fire. I then hurried back to the deck and gave orders for water poured upon it, and directed that the ship should be kept before the wind in order to lessen the draft, but the flames with a rush, almost instantaneous lighting, burst forth, and in less than five minutes the whole stern of the ship was completely enveloped in the fire element. I then gave orders to have the ship brought to the wind. All was now a scene of the utmost confusion, noise, and disorder. My orders could not be heard. Despair had seized almost every soul on board. The scene which presented itself was most awful to contemplate, much less to look upon. The flames were bursting with immense fury from the stern and centre of the vessel. So great was the heat in these parts that the passengers, male and female crowded forward.—In vain did I entreat and beg of the passengers to be composed. I pointed out to them that there were several vessels around us, and that, if they preserved order, they would all be saved; that although the case was desperate it was not hopeless. It was of no avail.

The Queen of the Ocean yacht was the first to come to our assistance. Her owner, Mr. Thos. Littledale, with whom were Sir Thos. Hooketh, Mr. Tobin, Mr. Park, and Mr. Aufreder, ordered the boat to be lowered, and proceeded with an alacrity and zeal, aided by the gentlemen named and the crew of his craft, to pick up all within their reach.

The Brazilian steam-ship Alfonso, the Prince of Wales, coasting steamer, and the New York packet-ship New World, after some time, came up and rendered effective service.

The Queen of the Ocean remained alongside till three o'clock. At that time the vessel was burnt near to the water's edge, and there were only a few of the passengers on board, several boats being alongside endeavouring to take them off. Finding that the yacht could do no more, Mr. Littledale ordered her to start for Liverpool, where we arrived about seven o'clock in the evening.

THE OCEAN MONARCH BURNED AT SEA—LOSS OF ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY LIVES.

Never, in our experience as journalists, has it been our lot to record a more painful or melancholy catastrophe than the complete destruction of the Boston Packet ship Ocean Monarch, which took place off the port of Liverpool on Thursday last. The noble ship has become a prey to fire, and an awful sacrifice of human life has taken place.

The following particulars are given by Captain Murdoch.

The Ocean Monarch, 1300 tons burthen, left the Mersey early on Thursday last, with about 250 souls on board, including the crew and passengers. We discharged the pilot about 5 o'clock. No incident worthy of note occurred until we arrived off the Ormshead, at which time it was nearly 12 o'clock. Orders were given to tack ship, and while hauling the main yard it was stated that one of the steeage passengers had made a fire in one of the ventilators without reflection. I immediately sent the steward and another man to extinguish the fire and bring up the delinquent who had made it. Immediately after this one of the cabin passengers came on deck and stated that the cabin was full of smoke, which was coming from below. On hearing this I ran down to ascertain the position of affairs, and found that the ship was actually on fire. I then hurried back to the deck and gave orders for water poured upon it, and directed that the ship should be kept before the wind in order to lessen the draft, but the flames with a rush, almost instantaneous lighting, burst forth, and in less than five minutes the whole stern of the ship was completely enveloped in the fire element. I then gave orders to have the ship brought to the wind. All was now a scene of the utmost confusion, noise, and disorder. My orders could not be heard. Despair had seized almost every soul on board. The scene which presented itself was most awful to contemplate, much less to look upon. The flames were bursting with immense fury from the stern and centre of the vessel. So great was the heat in these parts that the passengers, male and female crowded forward.—In vain did I entreat and beg of the passengers to be composed. I pointed out to them that there were several vessels around us, and that, if they preserved order, they would all be saved; that although the case was desperate it was not hopeless. It was of no avail.

The Queen of the Ocean yacht was the first to come to our assistance. Her owner, Mr. Thos. Littledale, with whom were Sir Thos. Hooketh, Mr. Tobin, Mr. Park, and Mr. Aufreder, ordered the boat to be lowered, and proceeded with an alacrity and zeal, aided by the gentlemen named and the crew of his craft, to pick up all within their reach.

The Brazilian steam-ship Alfonso, the Prince of Wales, coasting steamer, and the New York packet-ship New World, after some time, came up and rendered effective service.

The Queen of the Ocean remained alongside till three o'clock. At that time the vessel was burnt near to the water's edge, and there were only a few of the passengers on board, several boats being alongside endeavouring to take them off. Finding that the yacht could do no more, Mr. Littledale ordered her to start for Liverpool, where we arrived about seven o'clock in the evening.

THE OCEAN MONARCH BURNED AT SEA—LOSS OF ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY LIVES.

Never, in our experience as journalists, has it been our lot to record a more painful or melancholy catastrophe than the complete destruction of the Boston Packet ship Ocean Monarch, which took place off the port of Liverpool on Thursday last. The noble ship has become a prey to fire, and an awful sacrifice of human life has taken place.

The following particulars are given by Captain Murdoch.

The Ocean Monarch, 1300 tons burthen, left the Mersey early on Thursday last, with about 250 souls on board, including the crew and passengers. We discharged the pilot about 5 o'clock. No incident worthy of note occurred until we arrived off the Ormshead, at which time it was nearly 12 o'clock. Orders were given to tack ship, and while hauling the main yard it was stated that one of the steeage passengers had made a fire in one of the ventilators without reflection. I immediately sent the steward and another man to extinguish the fire and bring up the delinquent who had made it. Immediately after this one of the cabin passengers came on deck and stated that the cabin was full of smoke, which was coming from below. On hearing this I ran down to ascertain the position of affairs, and found that the ship was actually on fire. I then hurried back to the deck and gave orders for water poured upon it, and directed that the ship should be kept before the wind in order to lessen the draft, but the flames with a rush, almost instantaneous lighting, burst forth, and in less than five minutes the whole stern of the ship was completely enveloped in the fire element. I then gave orders to have the ship brought to the wind. All was now a scene of the utmost confusion, noise, and disorder. My orders could not be heard. Despair had seized almost every soul on board. The scene which presented itself was most awful to contemplate, much less to look upon. The flames were bursting with immense fury from the stern and centre of the vessel. So great was the heat in these parts that the passengers, male and female crowded forward.—In vain did I entreat and beg of the passengers to be composed. I pointed out to them that there were several vessels around us, and that, if they preserved order, they would all be saved; that although the case was desperate it was not hopeless. It was of no avail.

The Queen of the Ocean yacht was the first to come to our assistance. Her owner, Mr. Thos. Littledale, with whom were Sir Thos. Hooketh, Mr. Tobin, Mr. Park, and Mr. Aufreder, ordered the boat to be lowered, and proceeded with an alacrity and zeal, aided by the gentlemen named and the crew of his craft, to pick up all within their reach.

The Brazilian steam-ship Alfonso, the Prince of Wales, coasting steamer, and the New York packet-ship New World, after some time, came up and rendered effective service.

The Queen of the Ocean remained alongside till three o'clock. At that time the vessel was burnt near to the water's edge, and there were only a few of the passengers on board, several boats being alongside endeavouring to take them off. Finding that the yacht could do no more, Mr. Littledale ordered her to start for Liverpool, where we arrived about seven o'clock in the evening.

THE OCEAN MONARCH BURNED AT SEA—LOSS OF ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY LIVES.

Never, in our experience as journalists, has it been our lot to record a more painful or melancholy catastrophe than the complete destruction of the Boston Packet ship Ocean Monarch, which took place off the port of Liverpool on Thursday last. The noble ship has become a prey to fire, and an awful sacrifice of human life has taken place.

The following particulars are given by Captain Murdoch.

The Ocean Monarch, 1300 tons burthen, left the Mersey early on Thursday last, with about 250 souls on board, including the crew and passengers. We discharged the pilot about 5 o'clock. No incident worthy of note occurred until we arrived off the Ormshead, at which time it was nearly 12 o'clock. Orders were given to tack ship, and while hauling the main yard it was stated that one of the steeage passengers had made a fire in one of the ventilators without reflection. I immediately sent the steward and another man to extinguish the fire and bring up the delinquent who had made it. Immediately after this one of the cabin passengers came on deck and stated that the cabin was full of smoke, which was coming from below. On hearing this I ran down to ascertain the position of affairs, and found that the ship was actually on fire. I then hurried back to the deck and gave orders for water poured upon it, and directed that the ship should be kept before the wind in order to lessen the draft, but the flames with a rush, almost instantaneous lighting, burst forth, and in less than five minutes the whole stern of the ship was completely enveloped in the fire element. I then gave orders to have the ship brought to the wind. All was now a scene of the utmost confusion, noise, and disorder. My orders could not be heard. Despair had seized almost every soul on board. The scene which presented itself was most awful to contemplate, much less to look upon. The flames were bursting with immense fury from the stern and centre of the vessel. So great was the heat in these parts that the passengers, male and female crowded forward.—In vain did I entreat and beg of the passengers to be composed. I pointed out to them that there were several vessels around us, and that, if they preserved order, they would all be saved; that although the case was desperate it was not hopeless. It was of no avail.

The Queen of the Ocean yacht was the first to come to our assistance. Her owner, Mr. Thos. Littledale, with whom were Sir Thos. Hooketh, Mr. Tobin, Mr. Park, and Mr. Aufreder, ordered the boat to be lowered, and proceeded with an alacrity and zeal, aided by the gentlemen named and the crew of his craft, to pick up all within their reach.

The Brazilian steam-ship Alfonso, the Prince of Wales, coasting steamer, and the New York packet-ship New World, after some time, came up and rendered effective service.

The Queen of the Ocean remained alongside till three o'clock. At that time the vessel was burnt near to the water's edge, and there were only a few of the passengers on board, several boats being alongside endeavouring to take them off. Finding that the yacht could do no more, Mr. Littledale ordered her to start for Liverpool, where we arrived about seven o'clock in the evening.

THE CHEAP SALE OF MADE CLOTHING

advertised in another column at the commencement of the Fall trade.

It is still going on for a few days only, previous to the commencement of the Fall trade.

CONSUMPTION.

There is, perhaps, no disease with which our country is afflicted, which sweeps off annually so many victims, as that fatal destroyer of the human race—Consumption. Day after day, year after year, the insatiable monster hurries to the portals of the cold and silent tomb, fresh added victims to its conquest. No walk of life is exempt from its ravaging influence. No age is exempt, from its cruel and fatal grasp. The old, the middle aged, and the young, all alike, are food for this common enemy of mankind. The white-haired patriarch whose life of temperance has rendered his system impervious to the attacks of other ills, and whose good deeds prepared him for the enjoyment of his declining years, may be seized by this insidious foe, and ere long his life and soul may be torn from a world ever bright to minds which look complacently on their well spent days.

On Sunday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

On Monday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

On Tuesday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

THE CHEAP SALE OF MADE CLOTHING

advertised in another column at the commencement of the Fall trade.

It is still going on for a few days only, previous to the commencement of the Fall trade.

CONSUMPTION.

There is, perhaps, no disease with which our country is afflicted, which sweeps off annually so many victims, as that fatal destroyer of the human race—Consumption. Day after day, year after year, the insatiable monster hurries to the portals of the cold and silent tomb, fresh added victims to its conquest. No walk of life is exempt from its ravaging influence. No age is exempt, from its cruel and fatal grasp. The old, the middle aged, and the young, all alike, are food for this common enemy of mankind. The white-haired patriarch whose life of temperance has rendered his system impervious to the attacks of other ills, and whose good deeds prepared him for the enjoyment of his declining years, may be seized by this insidious foe, and ere long his life and soul may be torn from a world ever bright to minds which look complacently on their well spent days.

On Sunday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

On Monday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

On Tuesday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

THE CHEAP SALE OF MADE CLOTHING

advertised in another column at the commencement of the Fall trade.

It is still going on for a few days only, previous to the commencement of the Fall trade.

CONSUMPTION.

There is, perhaps, no disease with which our country is afflicted, which sweeps off annually so many victims, as that fatal destroyer of the human race—Consumption. Day after day, year after year, the insatiable monster hurries to the portals of the cold and silent tomb, fresh added victims to its conquest. No walk of life is exempt from its ravaging influence. No age is exempt, from its cruel and fatal grasp. The old, the middle aged, and the young, all alike, are food for this common enemy of mankind. The white-haired patriarch whose life of temperance has rendered his system impervious to the attacks of other ills, and whose good deeds prepared him for the enjoyment of his declining years, may be seized by this insidious foe, and ere long his life and soul may be torn from a world ever bright to minds which look complacently on their well spent days.

On Sunday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

On Monday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

On Tuesday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

THE CHEAP SALE OF MADE CLOTHING

advertised in another column at the commencement of the Fall trade.

It is still going on for a few days only, previous to the commencement of the Fall trade.

CONSUMPTION.

There is, perhaps, no disease with which our country is afflicted, which sweeps off annually so many victims, as that fatal destroyer of the human race—Consumption. Day after day, year after year, the insatiable monster hurries to the portals of the cold and silent tomb, fresh added victims to its conquest. No walk of life is exempt from its ravaging influence. No age is exempt, from its cruel and fatal grasp. The old, the middle aged, and the young, all alike, are food for this common enemy of mankind. The white-haired patriarch whose life of temperance has rendered his system impervious to the attacks of other ills, and whose good deeds prepared him for the enjoyment of his declining years, may be seized by this insidious foe, and ere long his life and soul may be torn from a world ever bright to minds which look complacently on their well spent days.

On Sunday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

On Monday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

On Tuesday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

THE CHEAP SALE OF MADE CLOTHING

advertised in another column at the commencement of the Fall trade.

It is still going on for a few days only, previous to the commencement of the Fall trade.

CONSUMPTION.

There is, perhaps, no disease with which our country is afflicted, which sweeps off annually so many victims, as that fatal destroyer of the human race—Consumption. Day after day, year after year, the insatiable monster hurries to the portals of the cold and silent tomb, fresh added victims to its conquest. No walk of life is exempt from its ravaging influence. No age is exempt, from its cruel and fatal grasp. The old, the middle aged, and the young, all alike, are food for this common enemy of mankind. The white-haired patriarch whose life of temperance has rendered his system impervious to the attacks of other ills, and whose good deeds prepared him for the enjoyment of his declining years, may be seized by this insidious foe, and ere long his life and soul may be torn from a world ever bright to minds which look complacently on their well spent days.

On Sunday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

On Monday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

On Tuesday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

THE CHEAP SALE OF MADE CLOTHING

advertised in another column at the commencement of the Fall trade.

It is still going on for a few days only, previous to the commencement of the Fall trade.

CONSUMPTION.

There is, perhaps, no disease with which our country is afflicted, which sweeps off annually so many victims, as that fatal destroyer of the human race—Consumption. Day after day, year after year, the insatiable monster hurries to the portals of the cold and silent tomb, fresh added victims to its conquest. No walk of life is exempt from its ravaging influence. No age is exempt, from its cruel and fatal grasp. The old, the middle aged, and the young, all alike, are food for this common enemy of mankind. The white-haired patriarch whose life of temperance has rendered his system impervious to the attacks of other ills, and whose good deeds prepared him for the enjoyment of his declining years, may be seized by this insidious foe, and ere long his life and soul may be torn from a world ever bright to minds which look complacently on their well spent days.

On Sunday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

On Monday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

On Tuesday morning, on board the ship "Ann Dashiwood," Capt. George S. Briggs, aged 19 years and 7 months, eldest surviving son of Mr. James Briggs, Portland, Ship Builder.

THE CHEAP SALE OF MADE CLOTHING</

