She is bading with timber and dea s for Livergo i, and is be ing rigged at the same time. She is a full-rigged ship of 1,500 tons burden, two decks, fron knees, fron standing rig-ging, and only just launched. It is a pleasure to walk the wast deck and to look up at the tapering masts and the huge yards. Through ports in the bows a gang of men are loading monstrous birch timbers and squared logs, and a swarm of painters, riggers and carpen-ters cover the deck. The hold is a splendid hall, fine enough for a ball-room. The timbers are noble, noble sticks, shapely, clean and enor-nonsly strong, and the iron knees, brit tiant in red paint, hold her rigid against uything. The officers' gaarters and the sources for the men are on deck, and are nodels of comfort and elegance. This a a sample of St. John skill and labor, und a monument to its enterprise and wealth.
