GOLF. ON A NEW PRINCIPLE.

A little book upon golf, just issued, is attracting considerable attention among devotees of the sport. It is entitled, Golf on a New Principle," and is pub-shed anonymously. Its object is to de-nonstrate that the present clubs in use are entirely inefficient and unscientific The writer declares that the present years, he says, the improvements we have made in our golf clubs have all tended toward one end, which is the oncentration of weight immediately behind the blow. He is thinking, of ourse, of the bulger, and of its graduated tendency to become more and more a simple stick with a round block of wood at the foot of it. If such a tendency, he asks, has been welcomed by all experts, why should we not go one step further, and make our clubs sco that the planes of shaft and the point of impact are one? In other words, he builds a club with a head like a hammer. It is just as though a mall barrel of wood were stuck straight upon the end of the golf stick. For such an invention it is claimed that it makes comparatively an easy pastime that it robs the swing of all fatigue; that it insures greater accuracy, and that older players can play two rounds where hitherto one has tired them out.

Charged With Murder

Trial of Ephraim Convay at Woodstock.

An Important Question of Time the Orr Murder Case.

Waterloo and Huron Assizes-A Mor treal Man Cleared of Serious Suspicion-The Chicago Sausage-Maker's Case.

CONVAY'S CASE. Woodstock, Ont., Sept. 22.-Ephraim Convay was placed on trial yesterday before Judge Meredith on the charge of murdering George Frost, at Prince-ton last March. The crown pressed the first story of the prisoner that he has hit the boy with a shovel because teased by him, and subsequently the line sausage factory, showed that Mary heart; the finding of a pistol, the same gert's office in the sausage factory a one purchased by Convay in Wood-night. Constable Watson deposed that the prisoner said to him he bought the pistol for "that cuss of a Grover" (his partner), but Frost had taken up the juarrel, and he (prisoner) was after

The defense admitted the purchase of the pistol by Convay in Woodstock. It is thought that the defense will proceed along the following lines: Convay was living with the man, Harry Grover, with whom he worked the farm on shares. In the course of his daily duties on the farm he was thrown into constant association with the dead boy, George Frost. The latter will be shown to have possessed a mischievous spirit and to have teased the old man until the latter's life became almost unbear-That, as a consequence, Convay mind was worked up to such a high nervous pitch, and that in this frame of mind he bought the pistol as a means of protection against any possible assault. This may be followed up by showing that on the day of the killing Convay was being tessed by Frost; that the latter threatened him with the plank while Convay was in the turnip pit, and that in his nervous excitement the old man drew his pistol, hoping to scare the boy off, but instead discharged the weapon.

The principle feature of the case yesterday afternoon was the evidence of the prisoner Convay, who went into the box as the last witness for the lefense. Convay says that when he was in the turnip pit the boy Frost spat upon him and teased him. He refused to leave when asked, and then witness hit him on the head with the shovel. Frost swung a plank around strike Convay, and the old man drew the pistol, which he had carried for several days, fearing an attack. The plank struck the hand holding the pistol, and it went off, Frost staggered and fell. Prisoner did not say anything know that it was the bullet that kill-
