A L'Outrance.

Turning to face his foe,
The knight holds his lance at rest, Now, steady, good lance! and so You will find the heart in his breast.

"Dark knight, of foes the first No quarter I give more take;
My lance's terrible thrust, There's naught but your blood can stake."

"I know you-as strong as a hold, But hold you awhile at bay,
The one of us dies the maid,
And the other sides on his way."

"Ho! the clang of the steel!
Clear through his armor it thrust!
He sees his spear and meet-His worst enemy bites the dust."

"From 'neath the darkening skies, What ricks he of lance or spear!
The one of us dies the maid,
The other sides on his way!"

Cooperator in the fight, He swings his sword again-Acclaim him the noblest knight, Because it is he that it is slain.

HOME AT LAST.

"Well, then, let me put you a question. Have you ever taken the pains to study what this League of Service means at close quarters? Have you examined its aims and work?"

"I have regarded it as a piece of unworthy fanaticism."

"Regarded it? Yes, that is the mistake. You have stood aloof, and measured it from the height of your own supposed omniscience. I did the same. Would it not be wiser to take nothing for granted, not even your own omniscience?"

"Well, what would you have me do?"

"Simply cease to judge and begin to examine. Get rid of misleading words—fanaticism is one of them—and weigh facts. I will make you a definite proposal. Give me this week.
Let me show you the kind of things this crusade is actually doing. If at the end of the week you still disapprove, you will at least have more than theory and prejudice to support you; but I shall be greatly surprised if you don't find yourself on our side before the week's ended."

"Don't assume too much," said Jordan. "I will promise you the week, but as for myself, I can promise nothing."

"Very well," said Stancroft cheerily. "That's understood. I'll call for you this evening about six o'clock, if that will do."

"That will do," said Jordan.

Jordan sat silent a long time after
feeling was a sense of overwhelming surprise at his own conduct. He had expected Stancroft's visit; he had intended to make it the occasion of lifelong controversy. On the contrary, he had capitulated without a struggle.
More than this; he had exposed his own heart in a way which seemed irreversible. It was possible that these were the acts of Robert Jordan, that taciturn, reticent Jordan, who had always put a severe restraint upon his inner feeling, who had never even to his wife or child made a full exposé of his own soul. And he had done this to a man whom he had never before even regarded as an intimate friend. He, whose every act had been the fruit of calculation, had allowed himself to be mastered by an impulse of confession, wholly foreign to all his previous instincts. And yet he was conscious of a sense of relief, as of a burden lifted from his heart. What did it all mean? Another might have told him, but as yet he had no vision to discern the truth that what he was experiencing was the birth of humility. His egoism was upon the cross, and through all the cruel anguish a soft voice whispered, "Lord, it is good for me to be here."

It was as though a city had fallen, leaving erect a single bell-tower, which rang out to the awful sound of the thrilling Angelus—a high note of mysterious consolation amid disastrous ruin.

A letter lay upon his desk in Olivia's handwriting. It had lain there for days unopened. He had vowed in the hardness of his heart to refuse all communication with the child who had deserted him; but now he looked up Olivia's letter, and slowly broke the seal. So much had happened that was contrary to his will, that seemed of little consequence if he once more obeyed his impulse rather than his habit. So he broke the seal.

The letter bore no address and was very brief.

"Dear Father," it read,—"If you should come back to me in love and honor, would you refuse him what he asks, and be true to me?
I will not, cannot, come to you, till you say 'come.' Will you say the word? He has been ill; he is now well, and his one desire is reconciliation with you. For myself I ask nothing. Do with me as you please; I plead not for myself, but for Robert.
To-morrow I shall be once more in New York, and will await your reply at Dr. Gaunt's house in Washington Square.

Your child, OLIVIA.

He looked at the date upon the envelope. It was a week old. So then his children had come to New York, they had waited no doubt for some sign from him, and all the time their plea for kindness had lain upon his desk unread. "Robert is alive and well,"—yes, and he loved Robert. He knew it now. The old affection, the old pride in his boy, the old hopes that he had cherished for his success in life, all those feelings that had once been his delight returned upon him now in torturing vehemence. Once more he had let occasion slip, he had failed to know the hour of his visitation, he had mismanaged his life with a folly truly tragic. He had lost his boy once through harshness which he no longer justified, he had lost him a second time through mere obstinacy.
Vaguely he became conscious of something that defied human calculation in these happenings. He heard over him the dark wings of fate beating the expectant air, he felt round him the fast-closing web of destiny.
And yet, as these phrases flashed through his mind, he knew that they were false. Destiny, fate—these could not explain the paradox of his conduct. What, then, could it be?

"I had a reply, he felt as though a hand closed over him, a Power not himself was breaking him anew by slew, and he knew the name of that Power. He fell upon his knees in a great horror of darkness. His prayer was characteristic. "God be merciful to me—a fool," was all he found to say.

Toward evening Stancroft called for him. "I make one stipulation," said Jordan. "I will go wherever you wish to take me, but I will not meet Gaunt."

"I have no intention that you should," Stancroft replied. "It is a movement, not a man, that I wish you to study. I simply wish you to see some of the things that are actually being done by the movement, that you may form your own estimate of them."

Jordan nodded his assent. Presently, as the carriage rolled eastward, Jordan said abruptly, "You've not told me your own story yet. I should be glad to hear it."

Stancroft thereupon began to narrate how his acquaintance with the League of Service had begun his engagement with Butler and his resentment at Butler's interference; the gradual awakening of his own conscience, his determination to examine for himself those causes of offence which Butler had enumerated against him, and all those subsequent stages of his thought, until the hour when he had acknowledged his wrong, and had determined on its reparation.

"But surely it is a monstrous thing that Butler should claim the right of interference with your personal liberty. You must have felt it so," said Jordan.

"I did. I was never so enraged at anything in my life. But the more I thought about it the more I came to see that Butler was right—right not only morally but socially."

"Yet it's quite simple," said Stancroft.
"If Isaiah of Jeremiah had been editors of a great newspaper in Jerusalem, I imagine they would have done precisely what Butler is doing.
I gather that you made it your business to interfere a good deal with the liberty of the individual. And the ground of their interference was the same as Butler's, viz., that all individual liberty is conditioned by the general social welfare, and that the right of a community to happiness takes precedence of all individual rights."

"But Butler threatened you?"

"Well, I both needed and deserved the threat."

"I had threatened you, you would have attacked me," said Jordan bitterly.

"My dear doctor, you would never have threatened me, and you know it.
The most you would ever have done would have been to preach a sermon on social duty full of glittering generalities, which I should have promptly applied to some one else. That's the vice of the pulp—it deals with mankind in the mass, it is afraid to deal with individuals. It grows eloquent about the tragedy of the poor man's one eye lame, but it never takes the rich thief by the throat and says, 'Thou art the man.' O, don't think I am blaming or deriding you. I know the difficulties of your position, but those very difficulties make it necessary for men like Butler to do what you cannot do. Doctor, I have lived fifty years, and for twenty of those years, I have attended your patients. In all those fifty years, butler was the first man who spoke to me as an individual, honestly, searchingly, and without fear."

Jordan did not reply—no reply was possible, but his thoughts were painful. For he knew that Stancroft's accusation was true. The heroic, the prophetic element of a public ministry—that element which creates men of the Knox and the Savonarola type, the masters of the conscience, the dictators of morals, the regenerators of society—that element was not in him.
His ideal had been to go smoothly, to conciliate all men, especially the wealthy, to avoid offence—ah, how much it all seemed, and how unworthy! Once more his pride was on the rack. Stancroft had virtually condemned his whole wis-domy as futile, and he wondered how many more of his hearers scorned him in their hearts even while their lips praised him.

The carriage was at that moment passing a shop outside which a long line of people waited. The rain was beginning to fall, but they stood silent and meek, moving a step at a time toward the door of the shop.
No one appeared to take any notice of them. Well dressed persons hurried by, upon their errands of business or pleasure, without so much as glance at this abject throng. But as Jordan looked more closely he saw half a dozen men and women passing along the line, speaking earnestly to man to man. And as the white electric light flashed upon them through the driving shower, he saw that each of these busy people wore upon the bosom a simple cross of quaint design.

"The words were scarcely a hymn—they were rather the long plaintive sigh of a weary human heart. The congregation, which now quite filled the hall, listened in perfect silence.
The majority of faces in the crowd were hard and stolid, many seemed visibly bruised by the buffets of circumstance, all were careworn and weary; but as the simple melody rose and fell a soft light seemed to fall upon them all. 'Stealing away—stealing away—' surely it was the inarticulate cry of their own souls they heard in the plaintive words.
And then, without announcement, one of these grey-garbed women prayed, in a voice that seemed but a continuation of the music, so soft was it, so nicely toned to the spirit of the hymn. The prayer was simplicity itself, it was like the prayer of a little child. Perhaps that is why it moved the people so much. Perhaps the hardest and roughest of them had memories of little children long since estranged or lost. Perhaps that was why it was that Jordan felt the smart of unaccustomed tears in his eyes; for his thoughts went back to a small white room in which Olivia had slept as a little girl, and a white bed beside which she prayed.

The prayer ended, and another hymn was sung. There was no address. No sermon. Palmer had taken the chair in the centre of the platform, but his duties were merely nominal. He called upon one and another of his strange audience to speak, until the speaking became free and general. Jordan sat entranced.
He had never heard speaking like this. Men who by their own confession had been drunkards, thieves and outcasts, rose, and in heartfelt words, and with streaming eyes, narrated how they had been saved and delivered. A suicide told of how a woman's hand laid upon his arm, as he was hurrying to his doom, turned him back to life and hope. (She's here now, God bless her. She's sitting not far from me, but she doesn't want to be seen.' All eyes turned in the direction that the speaker indicated; Jordan unconsciously rose to look, but saw only a shy grey figure in the dim light under the gallery.

And then, while he thus stood, thrilled and excited, from this same dim spot under the gallery, a man rose and began to speak in a low clear voice, and with the unmistakeable accent of culture. Jordan's face became deadly pale. It seemed as though a great wave had passed over him, blinding and bewildering him; and through this obliterating haze the voice reached him in smatches. "I was a wanderer—a prodigal—I have come home"—so the phrases of the speaker reached him. And then in an instant, the wave passed, and he knew the voice.

"Oh, my boy, my boy!" he cried.
It was all that he could say. He would have fallen had not Stancroft put his arm around him. In another moment other arms were about his neck. The shy grey figure was by his side, the long lost son had found his father.

HOW WEAK GIRLS MAY GROW INTO STRONG WOMEN.

The Blood Supply Must Be Kept Rich, Red and Pure—Good Health Means Good Health.

Healthy girlhood is the only path to healthy womanhood. The merging of girlhood into womanhood lays a new tax upon the blood. It is the overtaxing of the scanty blood supply from all these headaches, backaches and siccities—all that paleness, weakness and weariness—all that languor, despondency and constant ill health.

Unhealthy girlhood is bound to lead to unhealthy womanhood and a life of misery. Nothing but the blood building qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can save a girl when she undertakes the trials and tasks of womanhood. That is the time when nature makes new demands upon the blood supply. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new, rich blood which meets those demands with ease. In this simple scientific way Dr. Williams' Pink Pills fill a girl with overflowing health and strength.

Miss Eva Tombs, Amherst, N. S., says:—"Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done me a world of good. I was completely run down, was very pale, easily tired and suffered from frequent severe headaches. Though I tried many medicines I got nothing to do me the least good until I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.
Even the first box of these seemed to help me, and after taking a half dozen boxes I was again a strong, healthy girl. I should not again feel run down. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will be my only medicine, and I strongly recommend them to every weak and ailing girl."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Swearing Boys.

It is regrettable that profanity has become common among boys. It is not in the least out of the ordinary to hear a group of boys of 10 to 15 years when together upon the streets or in any place to play a game of ball, to hear them using oaths that might suit the tongues of the proverbial fishwife or costerm

THE ACADIAN.

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM ONE OF THE "OLD BOYS."

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JULY 16, 1909.

The total apple crop of 1908 in Nova Scotia was about 680,000 barrels. The quantity exported was 587,652 barrels, 2527 half barrels, and 3050 boxes; equal to 590,912 barrels. The quantity used in Canadian markets—including shipments to Montreal and Quebec—is closely estimated at 90,000 barrels, making a total crop of 680,932 barrels.

We have received the prize-list of the Nova Scotia Horticultural Exhibition, to be held at Middleton on Oct. 6th, 7th and 8th, next. Premiums amounting to $2,000 are offered on fruits, vegetables, grains, poultry, etc. The Exhibition seems to be in good hands and the people of Middleton have sufficient enterprise to make it a success. Copies of the prize-list may be had on application to the secretary, Mr. W. G. Parsons.

The strike in the coal mines of Cape Breton has assumed rather alarming proportions, and the likelihood is that it will not be settled for some time. The soldiers have been sent from Halifax to preserve order, and the coal company threatens to close some of the mines for an extended period if the strike is not soon broken. Meanwhile, as is their custom, the two great Halifax dailies are doing their utmost to prevent the public from getting any fair idea of the true state of affairs.

Odds and Ends.

Those women who recently met in a monster Convention at Seattle got into a bad row, all among themselves, and the police had to be called in. It seems that one of these Roman-nosed dames wanted to be made president and wasn't. She had tried to pack the meeting so as to secure the coveted honor, but the other side got wise and spoiled the sister's game. Then followed name-calling and a general mix-up. When the police arrived the whole convention was hatched in tears. And yet some wonder why governments hesitate to give the dead and interesting females the franchise.

When the big Woman's Convention was being held in Toronto a couple of weeks ago one of the subjects discussed by these gathered women was marriage and its relations, whatever that means. One female asserted that half the female patients in insane asylums were there because of their husbands; and that eighty per cent of marriages were only ostensibly nappy, while ten per cent ought really to exist. This woman certainly has a glib way of asserting these marriage per cents, but she would be stumped if required to prove them. The woman herself was never married. She has a large Roman-nose, we saw her picture in the Toronto papers, and it is a safe guess that she is doomed to the single stall.

Another unmarried woman spoke, and she thought that the women should start on a new tact and prevent marriage. Girls, she said, married without knowing anything about young men, and no wonder there was trouble. We don't know just what knowledge this lady expects young women should have of their husbands-to-be, but we can assure her that no matter how well they may know them before, they are bound to learn very much more after the ceremony and very much will depend upon this latter knowledge, as to whether they are happy or otherwise.

Another lady and public speaker dramatically thanked God that she had not a daughter, adding that if she had and a man made her as unhappy as she had been, she would shoot him on sight. Now, we do not know the special kind of unhappiness this lady had, or it's particular cause, but from the fact that she paraded it in public, we are forced to the conviction that, whatever it was, the cause lay not altogether with the man in the case, and that she had probably seen another who pleased her eye better. This woman, by her picture, was pretty, but exceedingly silly in her speech, and was pictured in a big hat.

Taken altogether that Toronto Convention, wherein some thousands of women were gathered from all over the world, was decidedly unwholesome, and we are pleased to believe that the other women of the world are having a maximum of happiness in life. These selfish and self-cultured females, who did so much talk in Toronto, are unhappy because of themselves, and the further away they keep themselves from the ordinary walks of life, the better pleased mankind will be. These hammer and tongs sporting, Roman-nosed females, who propose to run the earth, and all the men and animals thereon, have a lot of trouble ahead of them.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ACADIAN.

DEAR FRIEND,—Your account of the recent anniversary was very interesting reading to me. Seeing the names of the sons and daughters of some of my former College mates in the lists of students compels me to remember that it is 23 years since I walked out of Acadia with my coat, and still highly prized, 'A. B.' parchment. Each man knows his own way, but Dr. W. B. Hutchinson's incumbency as President seemed so entirely fitting to us exiles on the other side of the world, that we were astonished at his resignation. We looked forward to seeing him in the chair at least a quarter of a century. We, the exiles aforesaid, were delighted to hear of our old companion and friend, Rev. E. D. Webber, having been chosen to fill the place we remember to have seen occupied by Dr. Stephen DeBlois, and Dr. Thomas Higgins. Personally I can shut my eyes any time and hear his musical, deep-toned voice, as he delivered his graduating essay, and note the peculiar radiance of happiness that over-appeared the benevolent countenance of the late Dr. Parker, during its delivery.

I am sure it will not be considered a criticism on the sentiments of the address, as reported by you, of a former President, Dr. Trotter, when I congratulate you all on your quiet environment, and your escape from the rush and excitement of life as we whirled about by it, in the United States. Acadia is the 'happy valley' of my meditations and dreams, the place where learning can be acquired for its worth, and where the process of learning cannot be broken by the fierce rivalries of commercialism, or corroded by the canker of sordid desire for dollars and ham-sandwiches.

The Baptists of Southern California are building a school of their own. It is to be situated in the city of Redlands, 70 miles from Los Angeles, in the very center of the finest orange groves in the world. It was thus placed in order to obtain as nearly as possible, inside the Convention territory, the very characteristics known at Acadia. Forty acres of land, $100,000.00 in cash have been donated by the citizens of Redlands and appropriately the name is to be 'The University of Redland.' The churches of Southern California have subscribed a full $200,000.00 already, and a building to cost $100,000.00 is in process of erection. The President, Rev. J. N. Field, D. D., has announced that the doors will be opened for classes on the first of October next.

The courses first opened will lead to the degrees, A. B., Ph. D., and B. Sc. For a few years there will be classes in Academic instruction covering the work done in the third and fourth years of the High School. It will be necessarily an expensive school for students, the bare tuition fee for the year being $100.00, and board anywhere in this part of the world, even for day laborers, is $20.00 per month.

Recently I had the pleasure of performing the marriage ceremony for a Nova Scotia boy, Frederick Harter West, who was born in Halifax, but who attended the Berwick school under Principal Robinson for several years, about the same time as my younger brothers, Fred and Avery. His father and uncles were in the West India trade in Halifax for many years, but now the families are located in Southern California. The groom is a prominent resident of Fallerton, and his charming bride is the only daughter of Prof. R. H. Tripp, of Long Beach, retired from active service after 40 years as a College professor, in the Middle States and in Occidental College, Los Angeles. Mrs. West was herself a High School teacher for many years.

The past year has been the best in the history of the San Bernardino Baptist church. In the regular services, and without any outside assistance whatever, forty-six converts were added to the church by baptism, the sacred ordinance having been administered on thirty different occasions, covering every month in the church year—June 1st, 1908, to June 1st, 1909—except December and January. Of these new members only three were under 18 years of age. One of them was a Chinaman and one was a native of Calcutta, India. During those months, in addition to his other duties, the pastor officiated at sixty-three funerals, and performed the marriage ceremony for 34 couples.

During the recent session of the Legislature of this state a new law to govern the treatment of 'dependent delinquent children' was passed, that created a 'Juvenile Court,' a 'Detention Home,' and a 'Probation Committee,' as a part of the legal procedure of every county. In this county the pastor of the First Baptist church was chosen to be the chairman of the Probation Committee, made up of himself and six prominent citizens of the county. Of the six, three are Justices of the Peace in their respective cities, one is a wealthy orange grower, one a city marshal and deputy sheriff, and the other is the leading lady physician of the County Seat. It was the duty of the Probation Committee to secure property and fit it up as a Detention Home, select the superintendent and matron and take supervision of all its internal affairs. As chairman of the committee it is my duty to audit all bills at the Home, to become acquainted personally with every boy and girl brought to it, and to see that the Home is really a 'home' to the unhappy children under its roof. The Home has been running now for two months, and no other work has de-developed more fascinating interest. The duties in no way conflict, but in fact coincide, with the duties of the pastoral office. MARK BAILEY SHAW, San Bernardino, Cal., July 3rd.

Wolfville Boy Weds.

The following clipping we have much pleasure in giving a place in our columns, and with a host of other Wolfville friends of the groom, a son of Dr. R. V. Jones, beg to extend best wishes to the happy young couple: "A very quiet wedding, but one of great interest to the community, took place Tuesday evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. T. L. Hatch on south Cedar street, when their daughter, Miss Frederica Illick Hatch, was united in marriage with Mr. John Cecil Jones. The ceremony took place at eight-thirty o'clock, in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the bride, and was conducted by Rev. Everett Leshar.

"The bride is a very charming and accomplished young lady, a graduate of Pillsbury Academy in the class of 1907, and since that time a successful teacher. During her school days she won many honors for scholarship, and at the same time, by reason of her beautiful disposition, was widely popular. The groom is instructor in English at Pillsbury Academy and one of the most popular members of the faculty.

"Mr. and Mrs. Jones left on an evening train for a two weeks trip. They will be at home to their friends.

in Suite 15 in Kelly Hall after September 1st."

NYAL'S SPRING TONIC.

A pleasant bitter, purely vegetable, an energiser and stimulant composed of those vegetable tonics and bitters which supply the system with material that has been denied during the winter. At the spring season the body craves just these elements which are combined in proper proportion to produce the greater human energy. Nyal's Spring Tonic is good for any season but particularly necessary in the spring. It gives new snap and spring to the muscles, braces up the tired nerves and stimulates the appetite.

We have the formula and so can thoroughly recommend it.

Smith—Murray Nuptials.

A very pretty home wedding took place at the residence of Mrs. Angus S. Murray, Linden avenue, on Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock, when her eldest daughter, Miss Annie Hay Murray, was united in marriage to Mr. J. William Smith, of Halifax. The spacious parlors were prettily decorated for the occasion with plants and cut flowers, and filled with invited guests from Wolfville and elsewhere. Mrs. (Dr.) Moore presided at the piano and skillfully rendered the wedding march and other selections. The bride, who was one of Wolfville's most talented and popular daughters, looked very charming as she entered upon the arm of her mother, who was handsomely attired in grey satin. She was gowned in a costume of white satin with Venetian point lace overdress, with veil and orange-blossoms, and carried a bouquet of white roses and carnations. She was attended by her sister, Miss Margaret, dressed in an embroidered ballate princess over pink and carrying a bouquet of pink roses and carnations. The groom was supported by Mr. Donald McKay, of Liverpool. The impressive ceremony was performed by Rev. Robert Murray, of Harlowe, uncle of the bride. After congratulations had been tendered by the assembled friends dainty refreshments were served, when the happy young couple took their departure for Kentville in Mr. D. R. Munro's fine automobile, followed by the best wishes of a host of friends. They will spend the honeymoon in Cape Breton and will reside in Halifax.

Presentation at Canning.

At the close of the evening services on Sabbath, 4th inst., a large number of the friends of Rev. J. Sellers gathered in the parsonage and presented him and Mrs. Sellers with the following address, accompanied with an envelope containing $50.00, afterwards increased to $55.00. This presentation, over and above all claims, was highly appreciated by the pastor as evidenced by his appropriate reply, after which all joined in a service of sacred songs, closing with prayer by the pastor.

To OUR PASTOR:—We, the members of your congregation, have assembled here this evening for the purpose of expressing our gratitude and good will to you while you have been in our midst, also our regrets that you are taking your departure to another field. We feel that while you have been with us you have guided us over stony paths and rugged ways and we certainly will feel our loss. We have to congratulate Yarmouth on their selection and fully realize that what is our loss is their gain.

We have always found you faithful to your duties, with a hand extended to those in trouble and a word of hope and encouragement to those in sorrow.

We wish to add that your beloved wife, Mrs. Sellers, shall also be greatly missed in church, Sunday-school and social life. She has been faithful to the duties in her station, and the Sunday-school particularly, will miss her loving words and counsel.

While some may have differed in their opinions as to you and caused some unpleasantness during your stay, yet we trust that you will feel that you have had the deep sympathy and support of the main body of your congregation and remember that no great or good man has lived and done his duty without being censured from some source.

While we feel deeply the loss of both you and Mrs. Sellers, it is gratifying to know that you have been engaged in a larger field for work, and to trust your untiring efforts will be crowned with a large measure of success and that the Lord will let his light so shine on you that it will dispel every cloud that may cross your path.

We trust that we will find in your successor, Mr. Hockin, a man capable of taking up the work that you have so successfully carried on, and we wish to place ourselves on record in giving him all the assistance possible in his new field of labor.

In token of the esteem in which you have been held we take this, our last opportunity, of expressing our appreciation of your services by a small donation to you and your beloved wife and trust that your journey here and many friends of Canning will be long remembered.

Canning, July 5, 1909.

The Uses of Bile in Digestion

Bile is quite as important as are the gastric juices in the process of digestion.

Without bile human life is short; for, bile hastens the passage of the food along the alimentary canal, and thus prevents the fermentation of food in the intestines, which in turn causes gas, wind, flatulency.

Bile, in short, is Nature's esterase and maintains a regular and healthful process of digestion and of elimination of waste matter by way of the bowels.

But to have a regular flow of bile the liver must be kept healthy and active and here is where Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills come in, for they are definite, specific and direct in their action on the liver.

It is only by setting the liver right that constipation can ever be cured. It is only by setting the liver healthy that biliousness and bilious, sick headaches can be thoroughly overcome. It is only by setting the liver active that the most difficult cases of indigestion and dyspepsia will ever vanish.

Gleaned by the Way.

Scintillated (on guard)—'Halt! Who comes there?' The Colonel—'Idiot!' Scintillated—'Advance, idiot, and give the countermand.'

He (cautiously)—'What would you say if I should ask you to marry me?' She (likewise cautiously)—'If you knew what I would say would you ask me?'

Her Baby had Eczema. Mrs. P. Clarke, Belmont, Mass., writes: 'My baby had eczema on his neck. The sore was very bad and nothing seemed to help her. Hearing of some remarkable cure Dr. Chase's Ointment had made me begin using it and with the third application the sore began to heal. The cure was thorough and complete and we give all credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment.'

Minister's Wife—'Wake up!' There are burglars in the house, John. Minister—'Well, what of it? Let them find out their own mistake themselves.'

'What is your principal object, anyhow,' asked the visiting foreigner, 'in building that Panama canal?' 'Well,' answered the native, 'we have an idea it will limit the size of future battleships.'

The Pains of the Aged. Are usually due to the tendency of the kidneys to wear out as age advances, giving rise to the accumulation of poisons in the blood and causing backache, headache, aching limbs and rheumatism. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Pepper Pills are particularly adapted to aged people because they can be relied upon to invigorate the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels, and so remove the cause of pain and ache.

'It is the duty of every man and woman to be married at the age of twenty-two,' said the lecturer.

'Well,' said a woman of thirty, with some asperity, 'you needn't tell me that. Talk to the man.'—Philadelphia Ledger.

'That, sir,' said the jeweller, triumphantly, pointing to a marble timepiece, 'is a magnificent specimen of the clockmaker's art. That clock will go for eight weeks without winding.'

'And how long,' asked the customer, 'will it go with winding?' 'A ticking or dry cough can be quickly loosened with Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. No opium, no chloroform, nothing unsafe or harsh. Sold by A. V. Rand.

Mrs. Highmore—He preached to an audience of women, did he? And he took for his text, 'Let your woman keep silence in the churches?' That must have seemed like a deliberate insult to all of you.'

Mrs. Upmore—Quite the contrary. You ought to have heard how he roasted Paul for writing those words!

CASTORIA. The Kind You Have Always Bought. One evening the head of the household came home earlier than usual and was very hungry. He said to the maid, 'Please tell the cook to accelerate the dinner.'

The maid brought back word to this effect: 'If you please, sir, the cook says she hasn't any in the house but if you can wait a little while she will send for some.'

Over the country he hungrily strode. He swallowed a forest or two at a gulp. And picked his teeth with the fork of the road.

A man came into a police court the other day, carrying a friend on his back. 'What is the matter?' asked the judge. The man answered, 'Judge, this man is a friend of mine, and his name is Gann. Now, Gann is loaded. I know that it is against the law to carry a loaded gun on the streets, so I brought him in here.'

The judge said: 'Gann, you are discharged.'

At one time both Montague Matthews and Matthew Montague were members of the British House of Commons. Mr. Matthews was a big, powerful giant of a man. Mr. Montague was thin and emaciated. The Speaker frequently confused the two.

'I can't understand it,' said Montague Matthews. 'There's as much difference between us as there is between a horse chestnut and a chestnut horse.'

At a dinner recently several men were discussing the merits of different kinds of game. One proffered a woodcock, another woodcock, and still another thought a quail the most delicious article of food. The discussion and the dinner ended at about the same time. 'Well, Harry, said one of the men speaking to the water at his elbow, 'what kind of game do you like best?' 'Well, Mr. Jones, to be frank, almost any kind of game suits me, but what I like best is an American eagle served on a silver dollar.'

Why the Salesman Succeeded.

He was neat in appearance. He had dignity of bearing. He was never late in keeping his appointments.

He had no conceited and arrogant manner. He believed in his proposition. He never talked too much. He gave his prospect with respect with gross flattery.

He knew all the fine points of his own goods. He never offended the prospects by undue familiarity. He never attacked his competitor's goods.

He never ridiculed his prospect's ideas and methods. He made a careful preliminary study of his prospect's case. He relied on solid argument based on facts, and not on bluff.

He never got lost in a forest of details, and could stick to essentials. He had not been 'with the boys' the night before, showing the effects.

He never talked too much. He gave his prospect a chance to explain his needs and position. He could answer questions and objections intelligently, concisely and convincingly.

He did not try to close his prospect before he had worked him up to a point of conviction. He never lost his nerve because the prospect presented such a sniveling front, and did not forget that battles are won by hard rallies at the finish.

He knew his business when he made his approach; talked clear cut business after he got in, made it his business to fight all the way through, and do business before he left.

A falling tiny nerve—no larger than the finest silken thread—takes from the heart its impulse, its power, its regularity. The stomach also has its hidden, or inside nerve. It was Dr. Shoop who first told us it was wrong to drug a weak or falling stomach, heart or kidneys.

His prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—is directed straight for the cause of these ailments—those weak and faltering inside nerves. This, no doubt, clearly explains why the Restorative has not only grown so rapidly in popularity, but also why those who test the Restorative even for a few days soon become fully convinced of its wonderful merit.

Anyway, don't drug the organ. Treat the cause of sickness is the only sensible and successful way. Sold by A. V. Rand.

Anyone dropping from the clouds into Les Avants, the delightful and great European summer resort, might well think that he had chanced upon Prospero's private garden, for he would find himself completely enveloped by a scented sea of blossoms. At this moment, growing in undulating masses, are millions of stalks of the golden-eyed narcissus. Nor are the hillsides covered exclusively by this flower. They are almost equally invaded by forget-me-nots and other flowers whose home is in thick herbage. As a consequence, the place is full of visitors, ascending and descending, and everywhere stooping, their arms laden with the white and splendid bunches. The snapshot shows Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Dixon resting amongst the flowers. Mr. Dixon is a brother of Rev. Canon Dixon, Toronto.

Nothing in the way of a Cough is quite so annoying as a jolting, teasing, wheezing, bronchial Cough. The quickest relief comes perhaps from a prescription known to Druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And besides, it is so thoroughly harmless that mothers give it with perfect safety even to the youngest babies. The tender leaves of a simple mountain shrub, give to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its remarkable curative effect. It is truly a most certain and trustworthy prescription. Sold by A. V. Rand.

An amusing incident occurred in connection with the recent visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to Aldershot, when Master Wood (grandson of the Princess) presented a bouquet to the Princess. The little fellow had been well coached beforehand, and was anxious to carry out his instructions thoroughly, which, in fact, he did—banding the bouquet and bowing with singular grace. But as he walked away he involuntarily muttered, 'Thank goodness, it's over!' a remark which caught the quick ears of the Prince of Wales, who, laughing heartily, exclaimed, 'That part was certainly not rehearsed!'

Pain can be easily and quickly stopped. Pain Tablets—Dr. Shoop's—stop headache, womanly pains, any pain, anywhere, in 20 minutes. Formulas on the 25c. box. Ask your Druggist or doctor about this formula—It's New. Sold by A. V. Rand.

One of the anecdotes which Andrew Carnegie is fond of telling concerns a crabs' bacolor and an aged spinner who one day found themselves at a concert. The selections were apparently entirely unfamiliar to the gentleman, but when Mendelssohn's 'Wedding March' was begun he pricked up his ears. 'That sounds familiar,' he exclaimed. 'I'm not very strong on those classical pieces, but that's very good. What is it?' The spinner cast down her eyes. 'That,' she told him, demurely, 'is the Maiden's Prayer.'

The Maid—Young Spriggs, the poet, is awfully round shouldered, isn't he? The Man—Yes, that's his literary bent.

Five church seats might be appreciated more if they were less comfortable.

What Think You of This, Young Ladies.

Not very long ago, a number of female educationists in Japan drew up a code of rules by which the girls of the Flowery Kingdom are to guide themselves in the matter of social deportment. These rules certainly do not err on the side of leniency, yet it must be confessed that some of them are replete with that rare wisdom mis-called common sense.

Don't have a talk with young men in a closed room; the presence of a third party is required. Don't visit young men. Don't see a bachelor at his lodgings except under the guardianship of an older woman.

Don't communicate with young men; when necessary, send letters through proper men. Don't open yourself the letters which you have received from a stranger. Don't exchange photos and other articles with young men.

Don't go out, if possible, after sundown; when necessary, be accompanied by a chaperon. Don't travel or put up at a hotel without a chaperon. Don't live alone in any house without a chaperon, expect relatives or friends.

Don't behave vulgarly towards men taking every care in speaking and deporting. Don't speak with men and receive favors therefrom without being introduced to them in a proper manner. Don't take a walk or play games with a young man without a chaperon.

Don't see young men off or meet them on a trip.

AFTER SUFFERING YEARS

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fox Creek, N. B.—I have always had pains in the loins and weakness there, and often after my meals my food would distress me and give me nervousness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me much good. I am stronger, my digestion is better, and I can walk with many others. I have encouraged many mothers of families to take it, as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers.—Mrs. WILLIAM BOUTWELL, Fox Creek, N. B.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from good herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women after all other means have failed, and that every suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has cured thousands to health, and her advice is free.
