ANOTHER YUKON MURDER

Body Perforated by Bullets Found in River Twenty-Two Miles Above Dawson—No Clue to Victim's Identity—Large Man Upwards of Forty.

That another murder has been committed on the Yukon and the body consigned to the water there is no doubt. Inspector Howard conducted an inquest on the remains last night before the following jury: R. L. Cowan, M. Rogers, E. E. Tiffin, J. D. Bell, W. R. King and George Madey. The evidence submitted at the inquest was practically as stated above the witnesses being Corporal Piper, Sergeant Telford and Dr. MacArthur. The jury brought in the following verdict: "We the jurors find that deceased came to his death by bullet wounds at the hands of some person or persons unknown." The body was turned over to the undertaker and buried last night but will again be disinterred should it be found necessary to establish identity. The police will immediately go to work to ferret out the mystery of what is undoubtedly a murder and evidently a cold-blooded one. While the task seems a hopeless one, others fully as hopeless, the O'Brien murders for example, have been ferreted until the meshes were woven into a web of facts that no evidence could puncture. The Yukon has faith in her excellent police service and the chances are even now that unless the perpetrator of this last fearful crime has left the country and is far away he or they will be brought to justice. A broad field for fine detective work is now open.

BRODERICK'S PLAIN TALK

Regarding Buller's Actions on Field

Special to the Daily Nugget. London, July 17.—In the columns this afternoon the Buller controversy was again introduced on the war office vote, Sir Edward Grey, liberal, charging the office with having acted unfairly towards Buller and demanding the additional correspondence. Broderick, secretary of the war office, replied that shattering remnants were dismissed owing to the general's reputation. He opposed the publication of further documents, saying they could only prove Buller guilty of prepossession that had been listened to would have brought disgrace upon British arms without parallel in history. When Buller sent his note of despair to White advising his surrender he had a hologram in his pocket that White could hold out seventy days and had food for that time.

A REMARKABLE FEAT.

The feat which has been accomplished by Mr. De Windt, the representative of Pearson's Magazine, now in Dawson on his return trip to England, will live long in the annals of venturesome exploits.

The most important result that has been achieved by Mr. De Windt is the determination of the fact that the construction of an inter-continental railroad is a feasible scheme.

Time, however, will serve to decide whether a trans-Siberian railroad is needed in the transaction of the world's business.

For the present it is sufficient to pay deserved recognition to the extraordinary exploit that the presence of the De Windt party in Dawson assures us has been accomplished.

DECISIONS RENDERED

Lower Dominion Claims Are Involved

Question as to Length of Claims Difficult to Solve, Original Posts Gone.

A couple of decisions recently rendered in the gold commissioner's court will be of interest to the mining public, one in particular, effecting the title to the ground adjoining 232 below lower on Dominion on the right limit.

"Creek claim No. 232 below lower discovery on Dominion was staked on January 13th, and recorded January 25th, 1898. Creek claim No. 233 below lower was first staked on February 13th, and recorded February 18th, 1898, and the upper half of said claim was re-located February 25th, and recorded March 8th, 1901, by one Peter Olsen, who subsequently sold to defendant D. A Reign of Terror

Charleston, W. Va., July 7.—Prosecuting Attorney Ossent, of Fayette county, was here today to see Gov. White, to ascertain if something could be done to check the federal officers in the enforcement of injunctions against striking coal miners.

The second decision referred to is in the case between Ole Ackerson, Albert Appquist and Auguste St. Onge and Wm. E. Haddock, and is over the hillside adjoining the lower half, right limit, of 54 and 55 below on Bonanza and the benches contiguous.

The plaintiffs are the owners of the hillside claim described as adjoining the lower half, right limit, of No. 54 below discovery on Bonanza creek, staked on the 27th and recorded on the 29th of July, 1898.

On the Fort Kane Trail

Gilroy indeed had Christmas day here in the little cabin snuggled against the snow incrustated side of Crow peak. Santa Claus had failed to strike the Fort Kane trail. Teddy and Freddy, the Squire twins, had looked with blinking eyes to their mother's faltering explanation that the old chap could not get across the range, but when they had cuddled beneath their own buffalo robe and at a safe distance in a few unmanly sneezes they privately exchanged the opinion that something else was wrong. What reindeer could not breast the drifts of the Fort Kane trail?

Nevertheless for two days after Christmas they watched the trail with eager eyes. Today hope fairly danced within them. A gray pall seemed to fall upon the narrow gulch and the mountains. Even the flames in the deep fireplace refused to dance, and the logs sulked blackly. Mrs. Squire had been called to the nearest ranch by the illness of the one neighbor she had known in this desolate western home. Her husband had gone away, ostensibly in search of "deer meat." Perhaps in reality he wanted to get beyond sight of those four pathetic, questioning eyes, for there was absolutely not a dollar in the house with which to placate Santa Claus. Indeed it was a grave question how the Squire establishment would be run until spring. There was the hole in the next gulch which Squire had been guarding heroically from prying eyes, but even if its prospects were known would any one advance him ready cash?

The afternoon shadows were beginning to fall when Freddy was called to wrestling with the unruly fire. An exultant shout from Teddy, clinging desperately to his watch of the window.

"They's somethin' comin', Ted! I hear it!"

Their hearing, sharpened by long days and nights in mountain silences, caught the distant plunk, plunk of an approaching horse. There ought to have been bells or reindeer, but any sort of vehicle or animal would do if only Santa Claus held the lines. They were wild to rush out to the trail, but the horrors of blizzards had been drummed into their small brains until they were quite willing to obey the parental injunction to stay indoors.

Nearer and nearer came the sound. The boys stood on tiptoe at the window. Ah, he was turning in from the trail! There were two of him on horseback!

The twins threw open the doors and stood bareheaded and expectant as two horses stopped and their riders finally entered through the snow barred gate. At sight of the reindeer Teddy could no longer hold back the tears. The disappointment was too great—nothing but cowboys and rough looking ones at that!

Freddy pulled himself together and with innate western hospitality told the men to come in.

"If you want to see pop, you'd better wait," he volunteered. "He's gone to track a deer, but he'll be home 'bout supper time."

The taller man of the two pounced upon the logs until a brilliant flame illuminated the room, burnishing the hair of the twins until it shone like gold. As he straightened up he caught sight of Teddy's burning eyes.

"Hallo, kid! You ain't afraid, are you?" he said gruffly, but not unkindly. The second man sat down on the log side of the fireplace, breathing heavily.

Teddy shook his head.

"I ain't afraid, but I thought you was Santa Claus. Mom says he's somewhere along the trail. I guess he ain't comin'."

"Pshaw!" said the tall man, looking from one boy to the other. "This horse was most unhandy fer the ole trail." Then, in a wheedling tone, "If you was ter give us some vitts ter eat p'raps we might help the ole chap out a bit of we come around him up the trail. Now, if you could show me where the coffee was, and some bacon, we could do the rest."

Freddy was all importance on the instant. He hauled out the tin can of coffee and ground away until the tall man bade him stop. He found bread, too, and some cold beans and a small slab of bacon.

It was the tall man who did all the work. His partner sat by the fireplace dejected and uninterested, but not unwatched. Under the heavy eyes of the would-be cook anxious never to be kept guard on the ailing one, the two children prattled on, enjoying the unusual opportunity of playing host. At last the scant meal was set forth, and the two men rearranged their chairs before the table and certainly seemed to the twins

New Style Booster Club

The Booster Club, which has for its objects "the discouragement of unkind criticism, to push and uphold worthy fellow-men; to encourage everything public-spirited, praiseworthy and laudable," is a Chicago enterprise. Recently its president, Mr. John A. Huesner, was asked for his idea of "how to help the other fellow out," and he gave it most ably in the columns of the "Evening Lamp." I take pleasure in quoting from Mr. Huesner's article:

"Believe him to be a friend. Meet him on the ground of confidence. Greet him with hand extended in honest human cordiality instead of withheld behind the back in an attitude of hesitancy and suspicion. These are the first steps in the march of mutual helpfulness. A heart that pumps red blood and throbs with the genial currents of friendliness is not in a state of chronic defensiveness. Convince the man that it is down that the attitude of the world is friendly, and this alone will put him on his feet and set his heart bounding with the stimulative action of cheer and courage. Be frank. Many seem to think frankness consists in plain speaking to a third person. At least a too common practice warrants this conclusion. After you have convinced the man who is down that you are really his friend, ready to defend him against all comers, it may be the kindest and most helpful thing in the world to show him how he came to be down. This may hurt, and it sometimes takes rare courage, but if he knows that you would be the last person in the world to expose his faults to another, he will respond to the ordeal in the right spirit. Be loyal. Win from friends—and from enemies, if you have them—the expressive compliment of being characterized as 'a stayer.' Let it be known that the breath of suspicion will not cause your friendship to wither away—and that nothing short of a cyclone of incontrovertible evidence will uproot your loyalty and devotion. Never descend to scandal. This carries a double penalty. It hurts the fair name of its intended victim and brings unfailing contempt upon the man who retails this poisonous commodity. Don't let dis-

or sour desire to do the helpful thing. Failures of this sort are characteristic of weak natures. Of course you will encounter ingratitude until human nature has been completely revolutionized. But what of that? 'Be not weary in well doing.' That is sound doctrine, as well as good common sense. In other words, keep everlastingly at it, no matter if you do strike a Tartar now and then.

"Above all, be ever ready to deny an unproven attack upon the good character of any man and to make malicious insinuations unpopular. Then be as ready to help a man to mend his ways as many are to help him break them. This line of reasoning reduced to actual conduct will mightily increase the area of sunshine in the shadow-haunted atmosphere of human existence; it will reduce the number of suicides and make men cling to life because this old world will seem altogether too good to leave!"

This is an excellent system to formulate, although it is a difficult one to carry out.

The difficult part lies in trying to show the man "how he came to be down." Nine men out of ten will not permit the kindest and most unselfish friend in the world to finish such a recital. They will leave him, made indignant and wounded by his frankness, because he did not attribute their misfortunes to cruel fate, but to themselves.

The tenth will listen and profit; and that is why only one man in ten who is down can be really aided to rise by the efforts of friends. It is the egotism of trouble which keeps men down more frequently than the cruelty of fate.

It is very easy in these days for a man to become depressed, blue and pessimistic. There are many conditions to induce this state of mind for the struggling business aspirant. Enormous rents, enormous trust combinations, false standards of living, are all productive of despondency and despair, unless a man takes himself in hand and realizes the fact that in every "blue" mood he wastes enough energy to make himself master of circumstances if properly conserved and used. Every time we fear failure, dread poverty and anticipate disease, we scatter the wealth of power which lies in each one of us to the four winds of heaven.

Every time we meet the worst from of fate with a calm, steady frown and say, "We shall triumph later on, you are only putting temporary obstacles in our way," we add to our natural vital forces, just as we add to a bank account when we make a deposit.

The very first and most important thing to do for the "man who is down" is to impress him with an idea of the power within himself. Just so certainly as he awakens to an understanding of this truth he will rise, though the whole world seem to be against him.

The fact is, the world is never against a man who is not against himself. Once let the most unfortunate man make close acquaintance with his own real self, and stand by it, asserting its right to all God's blessings, and they will come.

He will, however, very likely change his ideas regarding what real blessings are. Great wealth is not a blessing. Comfort is.

Power and position are not blessings—influence for the good of humanity is.

The success which means passing others on life's track and pushing them back is not a blessing—the success which means enlarged opportunities for helpfulness is, and all these shall come to the man who is down, if he will rise and claim them. —Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

SULPHUR MAGNATE

Ronald Morrison Visiting Dawson

Conditions on That Creek Are Satisfactory—Black Eye Has Disappeared.

Mr. Ronald Morrison of No. 36 above on Sulphur is in Dawson for a few days, this being his first trip to town for several months.

Questioned this afternoon as to the outlook for Sulphur creek Mr. Morrison stated that conditions are constantly improving and the creek getting better as time elapses.

At any rate I am perfectly satisfied with the conditions on the creek and I think that most of the other claim owners feel the same way.

DELEGATES ARE CHOSEN

Grand Camp of Arctic Brotherhood

Meets in Dawson August 6—Three Days of Unlimited Festivities.

At the regular meeting of the Arctic Brotherhood held on Tuesday evening delegates were elected to attend the meeting of the grand camp which will convene in this city on Wednesday, August 6, and continue in session three days.

Within the fold of the Arctic Brotherhood are now something like a dozen different camps scattered between Nome and Juneau and it is expected that practically all will send delegates to the grand camp.

The committee on entertainment has been appointed and has decided upon a program to be carried out. The opening night will be an open session, the camp meeting on the main floor and the balcony and galleries being reserved for the ladies and friends of the order.

Valuable Relic

A badly demoralized automobile that looked as though it had seen better days standing in front of the Fairview this morning attracted considerable attention. It is of a vintage of year ago and to add insult to injury some wag tacked a placard to the rear wheel which announced that the machine was one of the new engines to be employed on the Klondike Mines Railway.

Filthy Premises

For keeping a latrine that was alive, C. Lindahl, a resident of Third avenue, paid $10 and costs in police court this morning. In passing sentence Magistrate Wroughton took occasion to remark that there is no excuse for such negligence and that the health ordinance must and will be enforced.

Intruder Shot Dead

Connellsville, Pa., July 7.—During the night an unknown man entered the house of Lud Pritt's, a mountaineer living near Rockwood, Pa., and proceeded to the apartments of Pritt's young wife, evidently supposing her to be alone. Her screams aroused her husband, who was in an
