The results of the two different systems stand in glaring contrast to each other. The deposits in the banks of the United States fell off 20 per cent. between May and September, 1893, while those of Canada fell off only 3 per cent. The loans and discounts on our side of the line fell off 191-2 per cent. while on the other side the shrinkage was only 1-3 per cent. Savings bank deposits in the United States during the same time declined 3 per cent, and would have declined much more but for the enforcement of the 60 day rule. In Canada these deposits remained stationary or slightly increased.

In fact the only trouble in Canada was due to its proximity to us. It was a sort of induction from the great disturbance in the neighborhood, but Canada fortunately had the means of minimizing even this. Her bank system was so arranged that the demands for more currency could be met on every day and hour when it came and did not require the banks to put up $114 in order to get $90 of circulating notes three or four weeks after the event.

The difference between the two countries is stated by Mr. Cornwall thus: "The business conditions in Canada have been of the banks, in round numbers $60,000,000 so that Canada had all this time a wide

Next day, a gray overcast, gloomy day, the ship sailed. Captain Hammond went with them on board, returning in the tender. Trix, leaning on her father's arm, crying behind her veil; Charley, by his mother's side, stood on deck while the tender steamed back to the dock. And there undere the gray sky, with the bleak wind blowing, and the ship tossing on the ugly short chop of the river, they took their parting look at the English shore, with but one friendly face to watch them away, and that the ginger whiskered face of Captain Hammond.

Edith Darrell left Charley Stuart, and returned to the brilliantly-lit drawing-room, where her lover and Lady Helena and their friends sat waiting the announcement of dinner. Sir Victor's watchful eyes saw her enter. Sir Victor's loving glance saw the pallor upon her face. She walked steadily over to a chair in the curtained recess of a window. He was held captivo by Lady Portia Hampton, and could not join her. A second after there was a sort of sobbing gasp—a heavy fall. Everybody started, and arese in consternation. Miss Darrell had fallen from her chair, and lay on the floor in a dead faint.

They carried her up to her room—restoratives were applied, and presently the great dark eyes opened, and looked up into her lover's face.

She covered her own with her hands, and

The young man made a wry face. "In three weeks! My dear Lady Helena, what are you thinking of? We are to be married the first week of September."

"October, Victor—October—not a day sooner. You must wait until Edith is combletely restored."

There was a pause after the captions concluded—then Charley opened his lips and spoke:

ed and saw it all, she felt that something would happen.

Something did. On the eighteenth of September there came from London, late in the evening, a telegram from Lady Helena. Sir Victor was with Edith at the piano in the drawing-room. In hot haste his aunt sent for him; he went at once. He found her pale, terrified, excited; she held out the telegram to him without a word. He read it slowly. "Come at once. Fetch Victor. He is dying.—INEZ."

d CHAPTER XVI.

Half an hour had passed and Sir Victor did not return. Edith still remained at the piano. She played so softly that the shrill whistling of the wind around the gables was plainly audible above it. Ten minutes more, and her lover did not return. Wondering what the telegram could contain, she arose and walked to the window, drew the curtains and looked out. As she stood watching the trees she heard a step behind her. She glanced over her shoulder with a half smile—a smile that died on her lips as she saw the grave pallor of Sir Victor's face.

"What has happened:" she asked, quickly. "Lady Helena's despatch contained bad news? It is nothing"—she caught her breath—"nothing concerning the Stuarts?"

"Nothing concerning the Stuarts. It is from London—from Inez Catheron. It is—that my father is dying."

They left her alone, with a watchful attendant on the alert in the your day and night's travelling, suppose you go to bed; I'll wake you in time for breakfast, and you needn't worry about anything. Captain Hammond has been here," says Trix, blushing in the wan, morning light, "and he will attend to everything."

Charley nodded and turned to go, but his ister detained him.

"You—you saw her, I suppose?" she said hesistatingly.

"Edith do you mean?" Charley looks the friell. "Yes, I saw her. As I went down for that purpose, I was hardly likely to fail."

"And what has she to say to rerself?"
Trix asks bitterly.

"And what has she to say to reself?"
Trix asks bitterly.

Yes, there was something hidden, something on the cards not yet brought to light; and to the death-bed of Sir Victor Catheron the elder, Sir Victor Catheron the younger had been summoned to hear the whole truth.
Would he tell it to her upon his return, she wondered. Well, if he did not, she had no right to complain—she had her secret from him. There was madness in the family—she shrank a little at the thought for the first time. Who knew, whether "He knows, then. Oh, thank God. Reason has returned at last."

Reason has returned. Since vesterday he has been perfectly sane. His first words were that his son should be sent for, that the truth should be told."
There was a half-suppressed sob. Lady Helena covered her face with both hands. Her nephew looked at her, then back to Miss Catheron. The white face kept its calm, the pitying eyes looked at him with a gentle compassion no words can tell.

"Wait one moment," she said; "I must tell him you are here."
She hurried upstairs and disappeared. tell him you are nere."

She hurried upstairs and disappeared.

Neither of the two spoke. Lady Helena's face was still hidden. He knew that she was crying—silent, miserable tears—tears that were for him— He stood pale, composed, expectant—waiting for an end.

"Come up." Miss Catheron's soft voice at the head of the stairs called. Once more he gave his aunt his arm, once more in silence they went in together.

A breathless hush seemed to lie upon the house and all within it. Not a sound was to be heard except the soft rustle of the trees, the soft, ceaseless patter of the summer rain. In that silence they entered the chamber where the dying man lay. To the hour of his own death, that moment and all he saw was photographed indelibly upon Victor Catheron's mind. The dim gray light of the room, the great white bed in the centre, and the awfully corpse-like face of the man lying among the pillows, and gazing at him with hollow, spectral eyes. His father—at last.

He advanced to the bedside as though under a spell. The spectral blue eyes were fixed upon him stedfastly, the pallid lips slowly opened and spoke.

"Like me—as I was—like me. Ethel's son."

"My father!"

son."
"My father!" him. It was the first time in his young life he had ever been in the presence of death. And the dying was his father, and his father whom he had never seen before.

"Like me," the faint lips repeated; "my face, my height, my name, my age. Like me. O God! will his end be like mine?"

A thrill of horror ran through all his hearers. His son strove to take his hand; it was withdrawn. A frown wrinkled the pallid brow.

"Wait," he said painfully; "don't touch me; don't kneet here. You don't know what wat, he said paintuly; "don't tonch me; don't speak to me. Wait, Sit down; don't kneel there. You don't know what you are about to hear. Inez, tell him now."

She closed the door—still with that changeless face—and locked it. It seemed as though having suffered so much noth.

This prompted her to give them a trial in her daughter's case, who was at the time so weak that she could not leave er room. The result was remarkable. There was soon a marked improvement, and by the time two boxes were used Miss Humble appeared to be so much recovered that the treatment was liscontinued. Miss Humble was sent on a visit to some friends in the United States in the hope that a change of air would prove beneficial, but she returned to her home mother was then determined to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a further trial, and the result proved most gratifying, as the girl's health has been completely restored, and she is as well and strong to-day as any girl of her age. Mrs. Humble told the story of her daughter's illness and recovery with impressive-ness that carried conviction of its abso-lute truthfulness. Miss Humble also corroborated her mother's statements.

Six days later, Sir Victor Catheron and his aunt came home. These six days had passed very quietly, very pleasantly, to Edith. CLEVELAND, Nov. 23.—A Washington special says the letter of the Lake Erie fishermen complaining that the Canadian officials on the ram Petrel illegally removed their nets from their portion of the lake belonging to the United States has been referred by the state department to the British embassy. As the state department it was stated that it is a case to be decided in the courts. If the American ment it was stated that it is a case to be decided in the courts. If the American fishermen had set their nets north of the imaginary line which is drawn directly through the lake from east to west, then they were in Canadian waters and Canadians had a right under the treaty to seize dians had a right under the treaty to seize their nets and contents. If, however, they can prove that their nets were set south of the line or in other words in American waters, then they will have a good case for heavy damages and the United States authorities will back them to the utmost. However, the matter is one that must be determined by a law suit and until the courts decide, the United States government can go no further

A Serious Thing for Farmer Bevin, CHATHAM, Nov. 23.—Charles Bevin, the farmer who was held up on the Raleigh highway on the night of September 22 by colored footpads and robbed of all his money, has been arrested on the charge of shooting William Ellerbeck on the same night. Ellerbeck lost his leg. The evidence points to the fact that after being robbed Bevin returned to the city, armed himself and set off home, vowing to get even with the next man who stopped him on the highway. The next man happened to be young Ellerbeck, a respectable man, who knew nothing of the highway robbery and innocently accosted the desperate farmer. If the charge can be proved, it will mean not alone a criminal matter, but also a suit for damages heavy enough to take Bevin's whole farm. A Serious Thing for Farmer Bevin

> Mrs. Jas. Wight of Wexford, is Called to the Eternal Beyond.

With great sorrow we chronicle the leath of Mrs. J. Wight, the beloved wife of our esteemed and respectable citizen, which took place on Monday, 26th Nov., at 10 p.m. Needless to state that the neighborhood was pained on hearing the appalling news, for like a gleam of lightning the mournful message travelled through our country, swelling the hearts of all with deep sympathy for the loss of such a devoted wife, loving mother, and christian wo-man. The obsequies were held at St. James' church on Wednesday, 28th Nov., at 10 a.m. The altar was heavily draped in black with mottoes emblematic of grim death. Virgin wax tapers, like a cluster of bright stars, surrounded the altar, and the body of the much lamented. American Government Abuses.

Mr. Abram Stevens Hewitt sailed recently for an absence of six weeks in Europe. As mayor of the city of New York, representative of her interests in the national Congress, merchant, financier, manufacturer, litterateur and public benefactor, he is among the first citizens of the United States, and therefore his opinions are valuable. In an interview he said many interesting things. After discussing the capital and labor question at length, he said:

"The system of government under which we are now living in the United States was designed for conditions quite different from those now existing. It fulfilled those conditions admirably, but its limitations have been outgrown; they are now apparent.

'Judges, for example, as it seems to me, should not be voted for at all. They ought to be selected by the highest ap-pointing power in the State. Under a system of universal suffrage the elect-ors cannot possibly be qualified to pass ors cannot possibly be quanted to passupon the proper qualifications of a candidate for a judgeship. It is a scandalous but inevitable evil, it seems, under our system of electing Judges by the ballot that the candidates for the judicial ermine are forced, like other candidates for elective office, to pay assessments of money to the political organization through which they receive their nomination.

'All the candidates for judgeships in New York are required to pay such assessments. The judges of the higher courts are expected to contribute largely to campaign funds. I believe there is one exception in my knowledge—Judge Lawrence, when nominated the second time, declined to pay any assessment. I myself have subscribed to a fund to be used to pay an assessment for a personal friend of mine, a man of the highest qualifications, who made a judge of in-corruptible and lofty dignity and worth. He was a poor man, and the assessment had to be paid, and it was subscribed for him. A system which permits such abuses is wrong, of course.

"Our system of government is, for this reason, the most expensive in the world. "It used to be thought that a monarchy, or an aristocracy, involved more cost than a republican form of govern-ment. That has ceased to be true, thanks to our foreign rulers. These gentlemen from over the seas who fill our municipal offices have changed all that. Where the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland draws say $2,000. 000 a year from the public purse, under our American system of government it costs, perhaps, $20,000,000 a year to elect our 'American Sovereigns.' Doubtless we can afford to pay heavily for self-government and be proud of it.

"It has been said that the individual system of government encourages independence, self-reliance and civic virtue.

That is true. But it has also led to the um of the skin.

degradation of the sulfrage.

"I consider the British system of government in some respects the best now in existence, yet it can be improved by the abdition of special privileges. And the least costly. The members of Parliament, who are he lawmakers, have way of filling the offices, but it is a very good one. In the main the best men are chosen, though now and then a good official may be lost. Army purchase has been abolished, and the aristocracy or wealthy class can get into office, as a rule, only in the diplomatic service.

'Municipal government in Great Britain has developed many difficulties of late, but the County Councils seem in ther increase sorrow in those grief- a fair way to remedy those difficulties a lar way to remedy those dimenties. The remedy is at the expense of individual rights, but those must yield to the general good. That is the tendency of the day, and it is along precisely that line socialism may work itself out."

We lived in a plainish way, then; $8 spent in two theatre tickets was a tremendous outlay; and we walked out to dinners—I tucking up the train of my best gown under a long cloak, and laughing if the wind snatched it away from me at the corners and whipped it around my feet. Then he graw richer, and we broadened the borders of our phylactery, and then—how—when—dear knows if I can rembember, we grew farther and farther away from each other. As an individual the Khedive of Egypt is a young man of great ability and intelligence and a worthy scion of the line of rulers founded by Mehemet Ali. He is coursegous and untiring in his efforts to make his reign one of progress. He has as great a desire to elevate the people as was possessed by his father. Tewfik Pacha, and a faw greater capacity for accomplishing results. He is the devoted friend of that section of his people known as "Young Egypt," which represents in a large measure the benefits of popular education.

The Khedive is only in his twenty-first year; but an Oriental of that age is usually as mature as a man of thirty in the Western World. He has very definite ideas on the subject of his duties and responsibilities. As an example to the youth of his country he observes in the

The Khedive is an accomplished linguist. His French and Gernara are perfect, and his English, while use dient, is very good. He speaks Tuckish gramatically, and his Arabie is said to be the best. This means much when we realize the marvellous vocabulary of a language having nearly a thousand synonyms for common words like "horse," "lish," or "lion." He knows some Italian and modern Greek also.

Algernon Charles inburne and His Associates.

Back, perhaps twenty years ago, two young men, with very radical ideas about art, went one day to paint some frescoes at Oxford. One of them bore the strange name of Dante Gabriel Rossetti. The other was Burne-Jones. While they were at work a young man with a shock of flery red hair, a broad, pale brow and a diminutive frame came to watch them. He was a young poet with the soul of a Greek. He had not then published "Laus Veneris." This was the beginning of the famous pre-Raphaelite school. The three young men, Rossetti, Burne-Jones and Swinburne, were afterward joined by Rossetti's brother and sister, by William Morris, George Meredith and Millais, and together they revolutionized English ideas about art, and perhaps, literature as well. Dante Rossetti is now dead. During his life the school almost entirely confined its energies to art and literature. Later, after his death, it developed radical political tendencies. Its present leaders are Morris and William Rossetti.

England never saw a stranger apparition in literature than when the first of Algernon Charles Swinburne had the least of hereditary influence in making him into the born revolutionist that he was. His father was the Admiral Swinburne known to history. If not rich, his estates were ample, and he had leisure to travel and study as he liked. He left Oxford before he had taken his degree, owing to gome disagree-

The poet is rather bald and wears a full beard. He is nearing seventy now, and of late years his hearing has been seriously affected. Always of a retiring disposition, his affliction has made him more of a recluse than ever. He lives very quietly in a little village not far from London with his friend, the poet Theodore Watt. The latter is a stout conservative, and it is hinted now and than that under his influence the poet's views have undergone somewhat of a change, and that he is no longer the red radical of his youth. But the story may be doubted, since it has never been authoritatively confirmed. The poet is often to be seen striding over the heath near his estate, but he is not communicative when approached save to communicative when approached save to little children. Of these he is passionately fond, and will take them with him often

He has written much in praise and appreciation of other ārtists, so that his own original work has been rather obscure. But who so will read his sonnets on democracy and kindred subjects will recognize what a strong, rugged fire burns in his soul. Manners are important. They mean len ent in the success or failure of life Yet, like all good things, they are both over valued and under valued. It is a human characteristic to judge by ap-pearances, and from them to draw con usions, even though the experiences of life should teach us differently. When we see a man with an attractive person-bity and refined manners we have no desitation in deciding that his innerself, ltis character, must correspond with his outer self, for few people are able to resist the charms of polish d and agreeable conduct. Happily the natural conclusion is most often the true one, but we should not forget that appearances are deceitful, and that the old saying that the broadcloth coat hides the rogue is not always untrue. On the other hand, some of the truest and best people in the world, men and women who are widely known for their genuine excel-lence, their intellectuality, their good-ness of heart, possess only the most indifferent and unattractive manners Even though they stand pre-eminent in ability and character, we are apt to harbor unpleasant judgments against them because of abrupt and unpolished conduct. When we understand this we should realize that a man's personal deportment is not a safe guide. We shall learn that manners, while unquestionably to be de-sired and cultivated, should neither be over estimated nor under-estimated. There is a happy medium, a fortunate union. Of course character is to be pre-ferred to polish in genuine worth, but there is no good reason why the two should not be united. While such undue prominence should not be placed of manners as to make them the chic manners as to make them the cher qualification of success, they should not, on the other hand, be decried as frivol-ous or foppish accessions to earnest man-hood. To forgive a man every social vice, to conduce a very his offences against honor or honesty, to sympathize with his well-merited punishment, because of his manners, which attract and please all coming in reach of his influence, are attitudes of society highly dangerous to to that perception of truth and fact which is necessary to all right thinking. fictitious. "Rudeness is a social sin, for it transgresses against the charity which avoids from principle the giving of needless offence to any one." There is no excuse for intentionally giving way to one's own arrogance and petty personal tyrainy; to allow the coarse, selfish part of one's nature to hide and overpower the better self. Good manners may be artificial and assumed, but they are better than ratieness if rudeness is natural and spontaneous. There are some things in nature which should never be in evidence, and of these one of the most important is rudeness. On moral grounds it is unchristian, for it transgresses the golden rule, sins against moral grounds it is unchristian. for it transgresses the golden rule, sins against justice, and causes the passions of anger and ill feeling in the one to whom it is addressed. Mentally, it is a want of sense and judgment, for a clear percep-tion will show that it is opposed to in-tellectual justice, and socially it is a bad policy to pursue, for it alienates friends and creates enemies. It may be added, moreover, that good manners show a sense of self-respect and a recognition moreover, that good manners show a sense of self-respect and a recognition of the respect and rights due to others, marks of courtesy which alone distinguish the true gentleman. People of position and influence stand as patterns for their inferiors; hence, to them good manners are essential. The religious person loses the best part of his religion if he forgets that kind and uniform courtesy which is the companion of all true charity. In brief, those who stand in any degree as leaders and men of influence should realize their most complete possibilities by cultivating courtesy as a distinguishing characteristic. "The greatest scholar, the greatest ruler, the greatest saint, ought to be by inference the greatest gentleman."

> A few weeks ago some of the grain dealers of Manitoba were found mixing No. 1 and No. 2 hard wheat and selling the mixture for No. 1, thus misrepre senting Manitoba wheat as to quality. It is needless to say that the farmers ment. During the past week dis-honest Canadiau shippers of cheese have been branding summer cheese as September make and placing it on the English market. This can have no other effect than to lower the grading of Canadian cheese and consequently lower the price. It is too bad that these too staple articles of our country should be thus misrepresented.

It is generally a speakers and in the course of his remarks is reported by the Recorder as having made the following reference to the House of Industry: "He Alex. McGregor, of Smith's Falls, died in utter wretchedness, from delirium tremens, on Monday night of last week. He was for many years a bartender in Smith's Falls, but for the past four or five years had been loafing abcut doing nothing but drinking. He was a sort of a miser and led the life of a hermit, dwelling in a little hovel he had built for himself, and in it he would spend days and weeks alone About ten days ago he went out and contract let, and all amounted to $15,537, more than $400 less than the estimate. It now costs for charities in the countries about $12,-About ten days ago he went out and charities in the counties about $12,-bought several bottles of liquor with which he drank himself to death. All ance of the House of Industry will though living in squalor be left a cash account in the bank of over $5,000, every $1,000 assessment."

He Said His Sympathies Are With Cana London, Nov. 30.—Arnold Foster, M.P., has written to the Times to direct its at has written to the Times to direct its attention to important omissions from its report of Lord Ripon's exchange of views with the copyright deputation on Tuesday. Lord Ripon, he says, expressed his willingness to submit to Sir John Thompson the deputation's argument. Lord Ripon added: "My departmental sympathies are naturally in this question with those colonies Lespecially represent." are naturally in this question with those colonies I especially represent."

Arnold Foster comments: "This is a remarkable declaration and it startled other delegates besides myself. If a secretary of state appear in the cabinet as an avowed advocate, prejudiced in behalf of his Canadian clients, it seems high time that British authors and publishers find some other channels to convey their views, inasmuch as if Canadian views be accepted the property of British authors will be in jeopardy in Canada and still more so in Australia and the United States."

HAMILTON, Nov. 30.—Herbert Wilson, a local musician and teacher of voice culture, and James Smith, who jointly managed the production of the opera "Billee Taylor," in the Grand Opera house last week by local talent, have left the city with the receipts of the performances. The opera was a great success financially and otherwise, and it was believed St. Peter's Home for Incurables, in aid of which the opera was given, would be at which the opera was given, would be a least $200 richer as a result, but the ful receipts, exclusive of rent of the Oper house, have gone with Wilson and Smith and several of the former's friends have and several of the former's friends have been victimized to the extent of about $82 each, which they had loaned to the tenor singer. Mr. McKenna, the costumer, of Toronto, also loses $150 on the transaction. It is estimated the receipts from the three performances amounted to about $760, and Wilson and Smith, besides taking this money with them, have neglected to pay incidental expenses connected with the production of "Billee Taylor."

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—The police have been asked to be on the look-out for a man name director of the LaFayette College, Boston, who had skipped away from that city after having swindled his creditors to the extent of $20,000. Raymond had always been considered as honest and was highly esteemed in and around Boston, where he was engaged in a lucrative business and had filled inany important positions, among these, that of President of the French Club of Boston. In addition to the above defalcation Raymond also swindled one of his compatriots named Bailley of a sum of $4,500. Raymond is supposed to have come to Montreal and the police are now endeavoring to locate him.

Vancouver Mill Men Strike.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Dec. 3.—The employes of the Royal City mills here have struck work owing to a cut in wages. The cut ranges from 10 to 30 per cent. About fifty men are out. The employes of the Hastings Mill, belonging to the same company, may also strike. These mills are about the only ones running in British Columbia at present, and the company claim they cannot pay higher wages owing to keen competition with Puget Sound mills.

MINISOR, Nov. 30.—A few days age James Miller of Comber undertook to hit a cow with a club because while leading it by a rope it had become unruly and had jerked him into a ditch. In jumping to avoid the blow the cow threw Miller against the fence, where he was found unconscious several hours after. It was supposed at first that he had been injured in ternally as there were no outward marks on his body. This turned out to be the case, as he gradually sank and yesterday he died.

Murray, in an interview nere, gave expression to his views upon the Canadian copyright question, upon which a controversy is in progress between Mr. R. T. Lancefield, of this city, and Mr. Daley, London, England, in the London Times. Mr. Murray said: "These letters have been published since I left England, but from what I am informed on the subject I certainly favor the Canadian view very strongly, and wonder why England and English authors should object; at all. As I under stand it, Canada proposes to take the copyright into its own control. The Canadian Government will license a Dominion firm to publish so many copies on payment of an author's royalty of ten per cent., and hand that amount over to the British author. Diamond Swindlers in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—For the last two weeks this city has been the scene of operations conducted by a very dangerous gang of diamond swindlers, composed of three women and two men. They previously carried on business in Boston and Cleveland, the robberies in each place amounting to about $8,000. Since coming here they have lived in gorgeou (style, and concocted an elaborate plan to rob leading jewelers of diamonds and other precious atones. The establishments of Richard Hemsley and Mr. Cochenthaler, on St. James street, have been robbed by substituting paste stone: for real jewels, and the stealing was most cleverly done. The gang will be shordly broken up, as the police are after them.

"Died in an Open Boat.

HALIFAX, Dec. 8.—Last Wednesday James Wagner, a married man living at Black Rock, Luenburg county, after purchasing a flask of whiskey at Lunenburg, started for home in a small sail boat. The night was dark and squally. Next morning a boat was found at anchor and in it was Wagner's body. He is supposed to have died of exposure. Over a year ago Wagner accompanied a man named Tanner on his way home near the same place. Next morning Tanner's body was found frozen stiff. Wagner's was arrested, charged with causing Tanner's death, but acquitted. Wagner's father was drowned that for a week pasta close watch had been kept on Faile's movements, as it was feared he would do something rash. Faile was suffering from mental trouble and was greatly disturbed by the strikes in the States, which seemed to fill his mind with terrible forebodings for the future.

He was found lying on his bed with his throat cut from ear to ear. A bloody razor was lying by his side and a pool of clotted blood covered the bed. From the blood sprinkled on the floor and dressing table, it would appear that the committed suicide standing in front of the mirror, as drops of blood cover the floor from the bureau to the bed. During the past two or three days he had sent numerous letters and telegrams to his friends in the United States who evidently became alarmed over his condition, as one friends in the United States who evidently became alarmed over his condition, as one of his friends, H. Taken Back to Mimico.

HAMILTON, Nov. 23.—Ernest Rabbitoy, who some time ago escaped from Mimico school, has been hiding in the city for several days. Detective Doyle and Truant Officer Hunter went to his mother's house to search for him. The detective opened the door and as he did so he looked behind it. Crouched in the corner he discovered young Ernest. He was taken in hand and brought to the cells, where he will await transferral to Mimico again.

Given a Heavy Sentence.

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—In the Recorder's Court L. S. Noel, trader, was found guilty of knowingly renting a house in Jacques Cartier street to a woman named Bigley, alias Mitcheson, for immoral purposes. The accused was sentenced to six months in jail without the option of a fine. The accused gave notice of appeal, and was liberated on giving $200 tail. There is a movement on to enforce the law on this point, which has so long been a dead letter

Success of Anti-Toxine,
HAMILTON, Dec. 3.—Dr. Edgar, of the city hospital, has inocalated several persons suffering from diphtheria with the anti-toxine remedy last week and in every case upon the application of the lymph the patient began to recover. Some of the tests were of the most severe nature. In one case an infant one year old, whose constitution could not have stood out long against the disease, was saved, and another case was that of a four-year-old boy, who would certainly have died under ordinary treatment. Light cases of diphtheria were reported to the medical health boy, who would certainly have died inder-ordinary treatment. Light cases of diph-theria were reported to the medical health officer for the week.
