A CIVIL WAR EPISODE
THE RAID UPON PORT GIBSON AND WHAT CAUSED IT.
 Fifty Aristocratic Southern Girls Were Taken as Prisoners of War and Wore Carriage to Vicksburg and There Held as Hostages.
 "I was mixed up in one little unrecorded event of the civil war," said General B. "that was interesting from its very unusualness, and which, as I look back upon it, seems strangely picturesque. We were attached to what was known as the marine brigade, a little fleet of 12 tinclad river steamboats that plied up and down the Mississippi river after the surrender of Vicksburg. The term 'tinclad,' by the way, is somewhat misleading, as it is not remotely allied to the marine corps. The tinclads were really boats heavily planked with oak for the purpose of protecting them somewhat from the ravages of bullets. One day our little flotilla of four companies was ordered to march down to Port Gibson and there, much sealed orders in regard to further proceedings. Imagine our surprise upon finding the tinclads that we were expected to capture and carry back to Vicksburg as prisoners 50 of the most aristocratic Confederate young men in the city. However, we had served long enough to obey orders without question, and, provided with guides familiar with the town, we set about our business and not too agreeable. We first established headquarters at the residence of a prominent Confederate Judge. "Then different squads were sent out to call at the homes of the young women and escort them to the place of rendezvous. The instructions were that they were to be taken to the city and held as prisoners of war, but were on no account to suffer any discomfort or indignity. "Of course, there was great weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth from father and mother, but the incident had to be accepted as belonging to the fortunes of war, and at the end of two hours 40 of the 50 young women were assembled at the rendezvous. Mercy was implored for one delinquent. An additional hour was granted, and at that moment the young women were dispatched to her home to persuade her to follow their example in gracefully submitting to the inevitable. The result was that before the hour was up the last prisoner had put in an appearance, though in a very defiant mood. "Our troubles, however, by no means ceased. The young women were hardly fairly begun. The next question was how to transport our beautiful captives to Rodney, a distance of some 20 miles from the rendezvous. In the condition from the devastation of war and consequent neglect. All the good horses, too, like all the good mules and mules, were scarce as for carriages, they had most decidedly fallen into a state of innocuous desuetude. "There was obviously nothing for us to do, but to gather together all the broken down old horses and dilapidated vehicles in the vicinity, which we somehow managed to hitch together with plow harnesses, bits of coaches, drawn up into lines, began the process of loading on our victims, and when they were all stowed away in a motley looking procession, I can assure you. Even the sound of farwells and the sight of weeping eyes could not blind us to the humorous aspect of the scene. You must remember that we were all pretty young fellows in 1863. The civil war was fought by men whose average age was only 23. However, we made our way slowly, amid tears and laughter, to Rodney, where we embarked for Vicksburg. Upon arriving there the provost marshal, who put them on parole, confining them to the limits of the city. Most of them had friends who were in the town, and when they were released to remain, and suitable quarters were found for the rest. "The reason for the whole transaction, it seemed that some northern young women school-teachers had been taken prisoners by the Confederates and were at that moment being taken to the front by the forces to wash and mend for the soldiers and perform other menial services. These Confederate young women were, therefore, to be held as hostages until the northern women were released. "There was little delay in the exchange, and we had our visitors in Vicksburg only 20 days. They were, however, very gay, delightful days. Yankee officers and Confederate maidens intermingled socially, and the acquaintance so readily formed upon some instances a mutual pleasure. I could indeed, point to more than one romantic marriage that was the direct outgrowth of our raid upon Port Gibson."
 Nameless and Dejected Tombstone.
 Spoking of tombstone literature, we have some in our own cemetery which would be worth a good deal more than the stones which mark a grave not so very old as the following:
THE PIANO DETECTIVE.
 Work That Keeps a Heathen Busy Most of the Year.
 "Did you ever hear of a piano detective?"
 The city had detective scratched his head reflectively and then was compelled to admit that he had never heard of such an individual.
 "Well, there are a dozen or more of them in Philadelphia, and they make good money too."
 "Their work is simple. You see, a great many piano firms sell instruments on the installment plan. That is, the purchaser pays, say, $50 down on a $500 or $600 instrument and agrees to make good the remainder at so much a month. By far the greater number of such purchasers are as honest as the sun, but once in a while a man comes along whose little scheme is to move out the piano a day or two after it is delivered and sell it for a couple of hundred dollars.
 "It is the business of the piano detective to circumvent this sort of thing. As a rule, some suspicious movement of the piano dealer causes him to be placed under suspicion. The dealer can't step in and take his instrument back, and the detective is the only thing he can do is to watch it. Here is where the piano detective comes in. He hovers around the house in which the piano is kept, day and night, and day, watching any attempt to make way with the piano. Usually three or four weeks are long enough to settle the question one way or another. If the piano-buyer is crooked, he is practically certain to make some sort of a move before the expiration of that time. If he doesn't, the piano detective is not in the least suspicious, and the piano detective is called off by his employer, with no one but himself and two or three others the wiser. But the prevention is a necessary one."

RECIPE FOR RAINMAKING.
 Sulphuric Acid, Water and Zinc Create Artificial Storms.
 Some years ago Kansas was overrun with so-called "rainmakers" who did a thriving business in vicinities afflicted with drought. The Rock Island railroad had a rainmaker who traveled and made rain from Texas to Iowa. At the time the process employed was guarded as a secret, and no doubt the expense of which was considerable. The process employed was guarded as a secret, and no doubt the expense of which was considerable. The process employed was guarded as a secret, and no doubt the expense of which was considerable.

A PECULIAR SPIDER.
 He Catches Bats as Big as Larks in Six Weeks' Web.
 Far up in the mountains of Cayuga there is a spider that spins a web like bright yellowish silk, the central part of which is a flat circular disc, while the supporting lines, or guys, as they are called, measure sometimes 10 or 12 feet, and extend in every direction. The stout threads twining round your face like a lace veil, while, as the creature who has woven takes up his position in the middle, he generally catches you right in the nose, and, though he seldom bites or stings, the contact of his large body and his hairy legs is anything but pleasant. If you forget yourself and try to catch him, bite he will, and, though not venomous, his jaws are as powerful as a man's, and you are not likely to forget the encounter.
 The bodies of these spiders are very handsomely decorated, being brightly colored in red, yellow and black. The web is covered with the most delicate silken colored fur. So strong are the webs that birds of the size of larks are frequently caught therein, and even the smallest but powerful scaly lizard has often sat and watched the low monster-measuring, when waiting for his prey, with his legs stretched out, fully six inches—striding across the middle of the net and noted in rapid manner in which he winds his stout threads round the unfortunate captive.
 He usually throws the coils about the head until he has reached the end of the web, and then he sits in the center, waiting for the next victim. In many instances the spider has been seen to unfurl dark nooks of the jungle you come across most perfect skeletons of small birds caught in these terrible snares.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Take the Tombstone Along.
 The cemetery superintendent says that there is one peculiarity about the funerals of Chinamen which is never noticed at any other funeral. The tombs are always arranged in a regular order. Most of the tombs are simple slabs of marble, with the inscription in Chinese characters, which are arranged up and down in a regular order. In two or three instances the funerals of Chinamen have been known to be delayed because the friends of the man who was to be buried were waiting for the tombs to be finished. The stones are always taken to the cemetery in the undertaker's wagon.—Baltimore Sun.

He Wouldn't Lie.
 Walton (to Fishmonger)—Just throw me half a dozen of those trout.
 Fishmonger—Throw them?
 Walton—Yes; then I can go home and tell my wife I caught 'em. I may be a poor fisherman, but I'm no liar.—Household Words.
 The Caddis' Faux Pas.
 "You can't imagine how shocked I was to discover that my caddis smoked cigarettes."
 "The little rascal!"
 "He said he had smoked invariably smoke a pipe, you know."

THE LOON IS A DANGEROUS BIRD WITH WHICH TO BATTLE.
 The loon, or great northern diver, is a powerful bird, living in the same waters as one of them conquering a man happened many years ago.
 A young Micmac Indian, living at Grand Lake, N. S., wanted to get the skin of one of these beautiful birds to present of his "girlfriend" on her birthday.
 One day the youth, who was an adept at imitating the peculiar sobbing cry of the loon, succeeded in calling a bird within shooting distance. His shot, however, failed to take effect, and the bird, although so severely wounded, retained sufficient life and strength to remain upright in the water.
 The boy, thinking that his game did not need another shot, swam out to retrieve it, but when he approached near enough to seize the bird it suddenly made a dash at him, sending his head and neck out with a spring like an arrow from a bow. It was only by a quick duck of his head that the Indian succeeded in avoiding the blow. He swam about the loon several times, attempting to dash in and seize him by the neck, but the wary bird succeeded in flogging each effort by swimming fact him and lunging out with his powerful neck.
 The Indian then swam up to within a few feet of the bird, and, diving under him with considerable skill, sought him by the legs. He carried him under, and, although the bird struggled fiercely, managed to retain his hold. But when they both reached the surface again a battle royal began, the Indian seeking to carry his prize ashore and the bird attempting to regain his freedom. The bird, however, was too much for his foe and before the Indian had covered a yard on his shore bound course dashed his head, and from his beak full on the naked chest.
 The effect of the blow was almost instantaneously fatal, for the loon is not so close to the Indian's heart—Youth's Companion.

STORY OF NOSES.
 Why Romanians Had a Nasal Organ of Roman Type.
 The features are developed by the nose. A nose of the Roman type and pleasant surroundings and thoughts will have a pleasing face. The shape of the nose and chin will depend entirely upon the strength and character of the mental faculties.
 At 10 a boy's nose may be small and turned up at the end, at 15 it may have grown larger and be straight and at 25 it may be pronounced Roman. It all depends upon his blood.
 The Romans had big noses with high bridges because they were a sturdy and determined race of people. Sturdiness and determination will give a man a Roman nose, no matter how small a nose he was born with. The Greeks had straight, delicate, finely chiseled noses because they were an artistic and poetic people. You never saw a poet or an artist with a Roman or snub nose, did you?
 On the other hand, it would be hard to find a great general who had not a Roman nose. Get pictures of Alexander the Great, Napoleon, Wellington, Grant and Sheridan, and you will find the nose and chin full, strong noses of the Roman type. You see it is quite safe to say that if we could have portraits of all the great men of the world, we would find that the olfactory organ tells us much about the man. These men were not great generals, they were great men because they had Roman noses.—San Francisco Bulletin.

SECRET OF BRIGHT COLORS.
 An Englishman Pays Dearly For a Sunshine Trick.
 In speaking to the writer about the favorable influence that fine weather has upon the production of bright and delicately shaded dyes and colors, a famous English manufacturer of carmine recently said:
 "Some years ago I was aware of the superiority of the French carmine, and being anxious to improve upon my own process, I went to Lyons and bargained with the most celebrated manufacturer in that city for the acquisition of his secret, for which I was to pay $5,000. "Well, I was shown all the process and saw a most beautiful color produced, but I noticed that there was not the least difference in the French carmine and the one that I constantly adopted myself. I thereupon appealed to my instructor and insisted that he must have kept some secret of the water and the materials, which were in every respect similar to my own. I still felt so much in the dark that I said, 'I have lost both my labor and money, for the air of England does not admit us to make good carmine.' "Stay," said the Frenchman. "Don't deceive yourself. What kind of weather is it now?"
 "A bright and sunny day," I replied.
 "And such are the days," said the Frenchman, "on which I make my color. When I try to attempt to manufacture it on a dark and cloudy day my results would be the same as yours. Let me advise you, my friend, only to make your carmine on bright sunny days."
 "The moral of this," continued the Englishman, "will apply quite as well to the making of many other colors used in manufactures, and also in the fine arts. It illustrates in a practical way the chemical influence of light upon certain coloring compounds or mixtures."

An old customer walked into his brother's office the other day and after pondering awhile with the tape in one hand and his forehead in the other he turned to the man behind the counter and said:

"I want to sell 100 shares of American bank stock."

"But wait a minute. It is selling at

78. I have 200 shares. One hundred I bought at 78 and the other at 75. Now, which should I sell?"

"Well, let's see," said the clerk, but as he began figuring he looked up, a gleam of fire in his eye, and it was by an effort that he remarked that the puzzle questioning him was an old customer.

"Yes, sir," the old man explained. "I asked my wife what she thought, and she advised that I should sell the 100 I bought at 78. I did arithmetic for her for three hours and she told me that I should not take a loss when I might just as well have a profit. I thought that she was right and so I came to enable me to make it possibly clear to

THE FIRST RUBBER SHOES

They Met in Summer and Became

Better in Winter.

India rubber shoes were first manufactured in Roxbury, Mass., in 1838, and were "fearfully and wonderfully made." They really bore a resemblance whatever to a shoe. They had the appearance of having been run into molds or blown, the same as glass bottles are made. They were made of pure rubber gum. No attempt was made to imitate the shape of the shoe or foot they were hollow tubes, tapering toward the toe.

At the place where the opening to pull on the overshoe should be was an irregular hole, without shape, just as they came from the mold. The hole was enlarged with a sharp pair of shears to fit the instep, or cut high or low to suit the taste of the customer. The work was done by the salesman after the buyer had selected, according to his requirements heavy or light, thick or thin. Men's sizes were very heavy, the soles being frequently from one-fourth inch to half an inch thick. They were made in pairs and stuffed with straw or hay to keep them in shape for shipment.

The lady's foot, inserted in such a shoe, was shaped like india rubber gum, weighing at least a pound, presented a clumsy appearance, indeed, particularly when compared with the light and truly artistic appearance of the present-day overshoe. The first attempt at making overshoes of india rubber did not prove a success, a large amount of capital being lost in the experiment, as well as the unsold stock. They answered the purpose in cold weather, but would not stand the test of a hot day, and were a disgusting mess, meeting in a disgusting manner. Experiments to remedy this difficulty resulted in reaching the opposite ex-trême, the shoes being so stiff that they could not be drawn over the foot, and this obstacle to success was not overcome until Charles Goodyear discovered his process of vulcanizing rubber, which rendered his name immortal.

Rapidly following this era of improvement the india rubbers shoe began to assume beauty of proportions and practical utility.

RADIATED HEAT.

An Easy Way to Cure Potosians

Wounds of All Kinds.

The early application of radiated heat has been long known as an effective method of curing cuts, lacerations, insect bites and punctured wounds, as from fish spines and sharp inanimate bodies.

It is now well known that in fact anywhere, like Wau-Kau-Kau, I mention it for the benefit of readers of Forest and Stream. Even those who are "chained to business" may use it, as it is good for the most delicate of patients.

Dr. Constantine Hering, a noted scientist, who died in Philadelphia in 1889, after 81 years, was the first person I know of who had used radiated heat to antidote the poison of a snake bite. He did it in his own person and successfully antidoted the virus of one of the most poisonous snakes of South America, the ladder-headed cobra. It is so strange that, although the fact of radiated heat is so generally known, it is so admitted to all kinds of virus, it is so ad-

THE ATHENS REPORTER HUNT CLUB.

The Reporter Hunt Club has all arrangements made for their old hunting grounds of Lake-Ne-tah lake on the morning of October 26th.

The party for this year will be made up as follows: Phil Halladay, president,

E. L. Roscoe, vice-president,

The party go via G. T. R. to Brookville, where teams will be in waiting to convey them to their destination.

From the large quantities of ammunition and provisions already ordered, it is safe to conjecture that the boys intend to give a good account of themselves as on former trips to the great north woods.

Mr. N. C. Williams of Smith's Falls is in Athens this week.

Highest price in cash paid for grain at the Athens Grain Warehouse.

Miss Ethel Stinson, who has been seriously ill, is now, we are pleased to state, considerably better.

Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Algire visited friends in Boston last week. Mr.

Algire returned home on Saturday evening.

Last week Mr. C. C. Slack designed a handsome title page for his latest musical production—"Our Own Canadian Home"—which he is having printed in Ottawa.

At Brookville market on Saturday the following prices were paid: Apples sold at $1.00 per bushel; potatoes,

30¢; oats, 30¢; eggs, 20¢ a dozen; butter, 24¢ a pound; lamb, 8¢; pork,

6¢; chickens, 40¢ a pair, and ducks at 70¢.

On Monday, while assisting at the tank improvements on Main street,

Mr. Geo. Nash had one of his fingers caught in the pulley and injured to such an extent that he will lose the top of it.

Mr. Herb Sherman, who went to Manitoba about two years ago, surprised his many friends in Athens by visiting them last week. He has achieved success in his new home as only good words for the Prairie province.

A Great Salmon.

The largest salmon ever captured in Charlottetown, was an authentic recorded catch, was hooked and landed this week by Messrs. Ed. Curry and James Cavanaugh. They were travelling in the vicinity of Wolfe

Island and had the fish "struck" when they felt the fish "strike".

Mr. Curry said he had no reason to suppose from the fight put up that there was anything extraordinary about the fish, but that it was a steady pull from start to finish. Both men are expert anglers.

The second effort was successful and the prize was safely landed and expeditedly despatched. Its measurements were, length 10 1/2 ft.; length,

3 1/2 ft.; and its weight, 2 1/2 lbs.

The monster was brought to Athens and exposed to public view for several hours. Many local anglers called at the Armstrong house and inspected it, and those qualified to judge were unanimous in pronouncing it to be one of the best of the kind. It was the native fish of Charlottetown. It is now being mounted, so that in the future, when this "big fish story" is told, indisputable evidence of its truthfulness may be exhibited.

HALLEL.

MONDAY, Oct. 16.—The German

Medicine Co. did considerable business in Chantry during their week's stay.

baby was received by B. Park of the latest man.

his son's wife in Watertown, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevens attended the funeral.

The remains of the late Thomas

Rosenbarker were placed in the cemetery on Friday last.

BROKEN DOWN MAN.

Stomach Rebellious—Digestion Goes Wrong

Nervous Shattered—South American

Man Made a New Man out of a Broken

Down One.

When the system is all run down nature needs help to bring it back to a good healthy normal condition.

Whether in springtime, summertime, autumn or winter, South American

Nerve is a power in restoring wasted nerve force; in toning up the digestive organs; dispelling the impurities from so much diseased and suffering. H. H.

Darcock, of Mount Forest, Ont., says he was all run down, weak, languid, had no appetite, nerves shattered; he took South American Nerve, and in two weeks was a new man.

I think it the best medicine in the world to make a new man out of a broken down one.

Consumption's ravages in Ontario are increasing at an alarming rate. A magnificent collection of portraits of shows 507 deaths from consumption for the months of June, July and August, as compared with 465 for the same months in 1898.

There is fear of a coal famine in some places in Ontario, owing to the fact that the coal cannot be brought to the mines in Canada in sufficient quantities to supply the demand owing to the scarcity of cars on the other side.

ing hickory nuts on his farm. He Powell has the contract for the transport of boats from the river St.

Lawrence to Charlottetown, to which place of boats for the salmon and plot of ground, some
