Fear Not the Truth.

It was an awful face for me. I had always prided myself on my record. In eleven years I had never missed an envelope, nor missed taking the first train. And now I had failed in the most important mission that had ever been intrusted to me. And it wasn't a thing that could be hushed up, either. It was too conspicuous, too spectacular. It was too inviting the widest notoriety. I saw myself ridiculed all over the Continent and perhaps dismissed, even suspected of having taken the thing myself.
I was walking in front of a lighted case, and I felt so sick and miserable that I was ready for a pick-up. Then I considered that if I took one drink I would probably, in my present state of mind, not want to stop under twenty. I decided I had better leave it alone. But my nerves were jumping like a frightened rabbit, and I felt I must have something to quiet them, or I would go crazy. I reached for my cigarette case, but a cigarette seemed hardly adequate, so I put it back again and took out this cigar case, in which I keep only the strongest and blackest cigars. I opened it and stuck in my fingers, but instead of a cigar they touched on a thin leather envelope. My heart stood perfectly still. I did not dare to look, but I dug my finger nails into the leather and I felt layers of this paper, then a layer of cotton, and then they scratched on the facets of the Czars' diamonds!
I stumbled as though I had been hit in the face, and fell back into one of the chairs on the sidewalk. I tore the wrappings and spread out the diamonds on the cafe table; I could not believe they were real. I twisted the necklace between my fingers and crushed it up in the air. I believe I almost kissed it. The women in the cafe stood up on chairs to see better, and laughed and screamed, and the waiters had to form a body guard. The proprietor thought there was a fight, and called for the police. I was so happy I didn't care. I laughed, too, and gave the proprietor a five-pound note, and told him to stand every one a drink. Then I tumbled in to a friend, the Chief of Police. I felt very nervous. He had been so happy at the Chief's gift, and he was sure to be disappointed when he learned I had sent him off on a false alarm.
"But now that I had found the necklace, I did not want to find the woman. Indeed, I was most anxious that she should get clear away, for if she were caught, the truth would come out, and I was likely to get a sharp reprimand, and to be laughed at."
"I could see now how it had happened. In my haste to hide the diamonds when the woman was hustled into the carriage, I had shoved the cigars into the pocket of my coat. Now that I had the diamonds safe again, it seemed a very natural mistake. But I doubted if the Foreign Office would think so. I was afraid it might not appreciate the beautiful simplicity of my hiding place. So, when I reached the police station, and found that the woman was still at large, I was more than relieved.
"As I expected, the Chief was extremely chagrined when he learned of my mistake, and that there was nothing for my go. But I was feeling so happy myself that I hated to have any one else miserable, so I suggested that this attempt to steal the Czars' necklace might be only the first of a series of such attempts by an unscrupulous gang, and that I might be in danger. I continued the ceremony. The old Ambassador was immensely impressed, and when he had already had been the object of an attack by robbers, he assured me that his Imperial Majesty would prove ungrateful.
"I wrote a swinging personal letter about the invaluable services of the Chief to the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, and they gave him enough Russian and French medals to satisfy even a French soldier. So, though he never caught the woman, he received his just reward."
The Queen's Messenger paused and surveyed the faces of those about him in some embarrassment.
"But the worst of it is," he added, "that the story must have got about; for, while the Princess obtained nothing from me but a cigar case and five excellent cigars, a few weeks after the coronation the Czar sent me a gold cigar case with his monogram in diamonds. And I don't know yet whether that was a coincidence, or whether the Czar wanted me to know that he knew that I had been carrying the Czars' diamonds in my

IN THE FOG.

BY RICHARD HARDING DAVIS.
Continued.
"I gave a roar like a mad bull, and I jumped down the stairs six steps at a time.
"I demanded at the office if a distinguished lady of title, possibly a Russian, had just entered the hotel.
"As I expected, she had not. I sprang into a cab and inquired at two other hotels, and then I saw the jolly of trying to catch her without outside help, and I ordered the fellow to go to the office of the Chief of Police. I told my story, and the ass in charge asked me to calm myself, and wanted to take notes. I told him this was no time for talking notes, but for doing something. He got wrathful at that, and I demanded to be taken at once to his Chief. The Chief, he said, was very busy, and could not see me. So I showed him my silver greyhound. In eleven years I had never used it but once before. I stated in pretty vigorous language that I was a Queen's Messenger, and that if the Chief of Police did not see me instantly, he would lose his official head, and that the fellow jumped off his high horse and ran with me to his Chief, a smart young chap, a colonel in the army, and a very intelligent man.
"I explained that I had been robbed in a French railway carriage of a diamond necklace belonging to the Queen of England, which her Majesty was sending as a present to the Czarina of Russia. I related to him that I had succeeded in capturing the thief, and would be made for life, and would receive the gratitude of three great powers.
"He wasn't the sort that thinks second thoughts are best. He saw Kussell, a French decorations sprouting all over his chest, and he bell, and pressed buttons, and he let out orders like the captain of a penny steamer in all the city gates, and ordered all cabmen and railway porters to search all trains leaving Marseilles. He ordered all passengers on outgoing vessels to be examined, and telegraphed the proprietors of every hotel and pension to send him a complete list of their guests within the hour. While I was standing there he must have given at least a hundred orders, and sent out enough commissaires, sergeants de ville, gendarmes, bicycle police, and plainclothes Johnnies to have captured the entire German army. When they had gone he assured me that the woman was as good as arrested already. Indeed, officially, she was arrested; for she had no more chance of escape from Marseilles than from the Chateau d'If.
"He told me to return to my hotel and possess my soul in peace. With in an hour he assured me he would acquaint me with her arrest.
"I thanked him, and complimented him on his energy, and left him with a good deal of confidence. I felt that she was a very clever woman, and a match for any and all of us. It was all very well for him to be jubilant. He had not lost the diamonds, and had everything to gain if he found them; while I, even if he did recover the necklace, would only be where I was before I lost them, and he did not recover it I was a ruined man."

Boy Had Fits For 6 Years

Druggist advised Dr. A. W. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD—Cure complete and lasting.
Mrs. J. D. Fisher, 28 Park St., Amsterdam, N. Y., writes: "When six years ago my boy began to have fits. They came on his slightest excitement, and sometimes turned purple. After the fit he could not talk.
"The family physician said all he could do was to keep them down somewhat. The second physician pronounced them intractable, and that he could not cure him. He suffered for six years and before beginning the use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food had three fits in about five days. Our druggist recommended Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food. He has taken seven boxes and has had the symptom of a fit since. His color has greatly improved; he is not nervous and irritable like he used to be, and we consider his cure complete."
Bark results are only obtained by the use of the genuine Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food—not from imitations or substitutes. 50 cents a box, all dealers or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

What do you fellows think?
"Sir Andrew rose with disapproval written in every lineament.
"I thought your story would bear upon the murder," he said. "Had I imagined it would have nothing whatsoever to do with it I would not have remained." He pushed back his chair and bowed stiffly. "I wish you good night," he said.
"There was a chorus of remonstrance, and under cover of this and the Baronet's answering protests a servant for the second time slipped a piece of paper into the hand of the gentleman with the pearl stud. He read the lines written upon it and tore it into tiny fragments.
"The youngest member, who had remained an interested but silent listener to the tale of the Queen's Messenger, raised his hand commanding.
"Sir Andrew," he cried, "in justice to Lord Arthur Chetney I must ask you to be seated. He has been accused in our hearing of a most serious crime, and I insist that you remain until you have heard me clear his character."
"You!" cried the Baronet.
"Yes," answered the young man briskly. "I would have spoken sooner," he explained, "but that I thought this gentleman—the incident his head toward the Queen's Messenger—was about to contribute some facts of which I was ignorant. He, however, has told us nothing, and so I will take up the tale at the point where Lieutenant Sears laid it down and give you those details of which Lieutenant Sears is ignorant. It seems strange to you that I should be able to add the sequel to this story. But the coincidence is easily explained. I am the junior member of Chudleigh & Chudleigh. We have been solicitors for the Chetneys for the last two hundred years. Nothing, so matter how unimportant, which concerns Lord Edam and his two sons is unknown to us, and naturally we are acquainted with every detail of the terrible catastrophe of last night."
"The Baronet, bewildered but eager, sank back into his chair.
"Will you be long, sir?" he demanded.
"I shall endeavor to be brief," said the young solicitor, "and," he added, in a tone which gave his words almost the weight of a threat, "I promise to be interesting."
"There is no need to promise that," said Sir Andrew, "I find it much too interesting as it is." He glanced ruefully at the clock and turned his eyes quickly from it.
"The teller of that handsome," he turned to the servant, "that I take him by the hour."
"For the last three days," began to young Mr. Chudleigh, "as you have probably read in the daily papers, the Marquis of Edam has been at the point of death, and his physicians have never left his house. Every hour he seemed to grow weaker; but although his bodily strength is apparently leaving him forever, his mind has remained clear and active. Late yesterday evening word was received at our office that he wished my father to come at once to Chetney House and to bring with him certain papers. What these papers were is not essential; I mention them only to explain how it was that last night I happened to be at Lord Edam's bedside. I accompanied my father to Chetney House, but at the time we reached there Lord Edam was sleeping, and his physicians refused to have him awakened. My father urged that he should be allowed to receive Lord Edam's instructions concerning the documents, but the physicians would not disturb him, and we all shrouded in the library to wait until he should awake of his own accord. It was about one o'clock in the morning, while we were still there, that Inspector Lyle and the officers from Scotland Yard came to arrest Lord Arthur on the charge of murdering his brother. You can imagine our dismay and distress. Like every one else, I had learned from the afternoon papers that Lord Chetney was not dead, but that he had returned to England, and on arriving at Chetney House I had been told that Lord Arthur had gone to the Bath Hotel to inform him that if he wished to see his father alive he must come to him at once. Although it was now past one o'clock, Arthur had Madame Zichy lived, so we could not go to recover Lord Chetney's body. We spent a most miserable night, hastening to the window whenever a cab came into the square, in the hope that

It was Arthur returning, and endeavoring to explain away the facts that pointed him as the murderer. I am a friend of Arthur's, I was with him at Harrow and Oxford, and I refused to believe for an instant that he was capable of such a crime; but as a lawyer I could not help but see that the circumstantial evidence was strongly against him.
"Toward early morning Lord Edam awoke, and in a so much better state of health that he refused to make the changes in the papers which he had intended, declaring that he was no nearer death than ourselves. Under other circumstances, this happy change in his would have relieved us greatly, but none of us could think of anything save the death of his elder son and of the charge which hung over Arthur.

WOES OF WOMANHOOD.

Weakness and Suffering Banished by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.
Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are good for men and women, and growing boys and girls, but they are good in a special way for women. At special times a woman needs a medicine to strengthen her blood supply, or her life will be one round of suffering. That is when Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are worth their weight in gold, for they actually make new blood. There is not a month in her life from fifteen to fifty that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not a boon to every woman. They help the growing girl safely over the critical time when her blood is overtaken by new demands. To the woman of middle life they bring relief and bring her strength for her time of change. And during the thirty odd years that lie between Dr. Williams' Pink Pills fill a woman's life with the happiness of health, giving her strength and energy for every function. A woman's surest protection against all the ills that come to her because of her sex, is to set her blood right at once by the course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—and then to keep the blood right by taking the Pills occasionally. Mrs. Eliza Cloutier, St. Jerome, Que., is one of the many unfortunate sufferers restored to health by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says: "It would be difficult for me to say how much I suffered. I was tormented by headaches and backaches; my appetite failed and I wasted away to such an extent that I was unable to do housework. I was constantly taking medicine, but it did not help me any. One day a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I procured a couple of boxes. By the time these were gone I felt some improvement, and this encouraged me to continue the use of the Pills, gaining strength day by day, until after I had taken six or seven boxes I was again well and strong, and I have since continued in the best of health. I can strongly recommend these Pills to all weak and ailing women."
Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Greatest Soldier.

At the Pilgrims' Club dinner in New York in honor of Lord Kitchen-er, says the London Chronicle, Mr. Chamberlain referred to him as the greatest living soldier. "Moltke, the battle-thinker of the nineteenth century, was once, in his own hearing, described in the same words, with the addition that his achievements entitled him to a niche in the temple of fame superior to Caesar, Hannibal, Alexander, Turenne, Frederick, Napoleon and Wellington. 'No,' said the illustrious strategist, 'I have no right to be mentioned in the same breath with these great commanders, for I have never in all my life directed a retreat. But neither has 'K. of K.'"
The Glencoe Massacre.
The massacre of Glencoe took place on Feb. 13, 1692. Intertribal rivalry between the Scottish clans was really at the bottom of it, and the Master of Stair, the implacable enemy of the Macdonalds, obtained a decree to expatriate that set of thieves, on the ground that they had not surrendered to King William by the date named in the proclamation, January 1. The order of the day was to "kill every Macdonald in Glencoe under the age of seventy." It began by the shooting of the Macdonalds, who, after his hospitality had been treacherously partaken of for a fortnight, the fiendish work was bungled, however, and fully half of the tribe escaped to the fastnesses, to return later to find the blackened ruins of their houses, their murdered kinsfolk, and their flocks driven away.

World's Largest Butterfly.

The largest butterfly in the world, the Ornithoptera Alexandra, is found only in British New Guinea, and specimens are worth anything from $100 upward. The male measures eight inches across the wings, and the female no less than 11 inches—a wing spread exceeding that of many small birds. The story of the first discovery of this gigantic butterfly is a curious one. A naturalist saw a specimen perched on the top of a tree, and, failing to capture it by any other means, finally shot it! From the fragments of this inauspicious commencement he decided that the species was entirely unknown to science, and he forthwith fitted out an expedition, at a cost of many thousands of dollars, to go in search of the insects. Two members of the party fell victims of the Papuan cannibals, and another was only rescued in the nick of time. Despite of this inauspicious commencement to his enterprise, however, the naturalist persevered, and ultimately succeeded in obtaining perfect specimens.—Wide World Magazine.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., MAY 27, 1910

King's Message to Overseas Dominions.

London, May 24.—King George has issued the following message:—
To my People Beyond the Seas:

"The innumerable messages of kindness from my loyal subjects beyond the seas have deeply touched my heart and have assured me I have it full measure their sympathy in the great trial which has befallen me and them; that my sorrow is their sorrow, and that we share the common loss. The happiness of all his people throughout his dominions was dear to the heart of my beloved father; for them he lived and worked and in their service he died. I cannot doubt they will hold his name in grateful remembrance.

"I am now called to follow in his footsteps, to carry on the work which prospered in his hands. As a sailor I have been brought into constant with the overseas dominions of the crown. I have personally realized the affectionate loyalty which holds together many lands of diverse people in one glorious fellowship. Nine years ago I travelled through the empire, accompanied by my dear wife. Had the king lived we should, together, at his expressed wish, have visited South Africa the coming autumn to open the first parliament of the South African union, the latest and greatest evidence of that peace and harmony which my father loved to promote.

"It will be my earnest endeavor to uphold the constitutional government, to safeguard in all their fullness the liberties which are enjoyed throughout my dominions and under the good guidance of the Ruler of all men, I will maintain upon a foundation of freedom, justice and peace the great heritage of the united British Empire.

Memorial Service

The memorial service in College Hall last Friday afternoon was to one at least a season of special interest. He was not looking for the spectacular in the form of portrait, or drapery, or for the attraction of music. He had rather an eye, metaphorically speaking, to the addresses to be given. In this expectation he was not disappointed, although they were not along the lines usual on such occasions. Mr. Dixon indicated the course of events in English history that has resulted in the loyal adhesion of all classes throughout the empire to the form of constitutional government as represented in the British throne. He showed how the royal authority was restricted by the Barons; how subsequent sovereigns abused their authority and made themselves unworthy of the sympathy of the nation; that so widespread was the dissatisfaction of the people that when Victoria came to the throne the impression was very general that she would be the last of British sovereigns. But Victoria won all hearts by her loving rule. Her sympathies were for all classes of the people. She came to the throne saying, 'I will be good.' So faithfully did she carry out that resolve that her subjects yielded in return their loyal affection, and when she laid down the burden the loving loyalty given her was easily transferred to her son whose recent death is being, perhaps more universally lamented than even that of his honored mother. The constitutional monarchy has become the foundation upon which the empire now rests in profound tranquility. Love has conquered.

Mr. Johnson told us when he first saw the late king. It was in 1860 in Halifax. Some years afterwards he saw him again in St. Paul's Cathedral, when he took his seat, emaciated and feeble, leaning upon the arm of his mother. He was just recovering from a serious attack of typhoid fever. The sermon that day was from the text 'Bear ye one another's burdens.' The speaker believed that as the prince listened he thought of the buried dead beneath him; of John Howard, the great prison reformer; of Lord Nelson, whose motto for those under his command was 'England expects every man to do his duty,' and others of similar spirit; men who gave themselves for their country's good, and that beneficent purpose should be to seek the good of his fellow beings. He lived up to this high ideal, not only of service for the good of the empire but also for the promotion of peace and good will among all nations. So well did he fulfil his purpose that at the end of life he could say 'I think I have done my duty.'

The writer has not attempted to reproduce the words of the speaker on this occasion, but in an imperfect way their line of thought, with an occasional word of his own.

Miss Fanny Crosby, the blind poet and hymn writer, has just celebrated her sixtieth birthday. She was born in Putnam County, N. Y. Aside from her blindness Miss Crosby is still in possession of all her faculties, gets a round by herself and takes an active interest in all that goes on about her.

Why continue to fuss with uncleanly, ragged clothes and shoes when you can get this neat, compact, convenient Hill Dryer. Instead of being spread all over the yard and supported by numerous poles, every inch of every line on the Hill Dryer is within easy reach—and you can hang the whole wet, white, wetting step, without having to hang the heavy basket up and down the yard through snow or damp grass.

Set up a Hill Dryer in a convenient spot near the house and see how many items, how much time, work and bother it saves. Once used it and you could never come back to the old-fashioned clothesline method.

Hill Dryers are made in several sizes and fit for lawn, balcony and roof. Hold 100 to 120 feet of line—revolve 50 lbs. comes to you—takes apart, folded up and put away, keeping your lawn entirely clear of obstructions.

Why put one up in your yard for next wash-day. Or call and see it.

OPTIMISTIC OPPORTUNITY.

Never before in all the world's old age history of humanity, have there been such great need and such good ground for optimism. Always an essential element in the right living of an individual or a nation, it becomes imperatively necessary at this particular juncture in the world's affairs. Many circumstances combine to make the month of May, 1910, present to the Canadian optimist his finest opportunity, and to carry the opportunity nearer home, never, as applying to our town, province and the educational institutions in our midst, has the optimist had a wider opportunity for his especial frame of mind.

The real optimist is ever an opportunist, who exerts most energy and influence where most they are desired by surrounding conditions. He never wastes his candles at mid-day; he never spills his joy into the main current of some drouth of despair, where it will give new vigor to fainting life and misplaced confidences. And if he be truly an optimistic opportunist, he will recognize the demand of the opportunity for his special contribution to the peace and success of the circuit of his influence.

Whatever influence Halley's comet may have had, or is having, physically upon the earth, it is absolutely sure that its psychological influence is very great. To a marked degree, are human and other beings affected by the awesome visitor of the sky, and all manner of weird speculations have arisen from the foment of discussion and intuitive dread, every disorder of the climate, every insubordination of man or woman, animals or birds, have been attributed to the comet, of all nations and peoples.

Wolfville should be affected least of all in this respect, but even here there has been, and is, an undercurrent of disquiet, natural in some instances, produced in others, and as a consequence in still others, all because of a pessimistic feeling regarding things as found, but all blamed to the comet.

The superstitious, always alert for weird cause for dark consequences, have made the most of the excellent chance. Many people, not very wise and credulous enough to accept all newspaper stuff as sacred writ, have been expecting all sorts of things to happen. Some things expected have failed to arrive, while the unexpected has certainly been in our very midst. But the evils that have come are not necessarily attributed to the big celestial tramp.

Further, the growing unrest in the world's industrial and religious affairs should affect us least of all the people upon whom the sun shines, because we do not appear to have either in sufficient quantities to be affected by comets, or anything else. There has been a most devastating series of strikes in the republic to the south, besides a terrible milk war in Boston has attracted our attention. All these are attributable to the mysterious comet that no one is certain to have seen. But why should such results affect us here? We have nothing to strike about and not sufficient milk to go to war over. Other matters have caused disquieting effects with its unrest and misanth.

Moreover, our faith in humanity is being seriously shaken by innumerable revelations of the criminality of man, murder, divorce, corruption in high places, the white slave trade, have all given us a queer conception of human goodness as to be found in our own country; but, to come down to our own locality, we are absolutely free from these disquieting revelations, comet or no comet.

In the empire of which we form a part, is much vague foreboding following the death of the King at a time particularly critical in the history of the empire. The press speculates of future trouble following the change of kingly hands upon the helm of state. With England's nerves hardly normal after the excitement of a recent election, and its revolutionary portent, we are again stirred by the thought of dire possibilities. All of these disquieting circumstances as affecting the rest of the empire, do not seem of consequence to us. But other things do, though of less moment to the empire, matters affecting Wolfville commercially, religiously, and educationally, are of moment, of serious moment.

Now, however, is the optimist's opportunity. Simply to talk good common sense into the public ear, and to refuse to believe or entertain the idea of failure, as a permanent chattie. Many have misgivings, after disbelief, superstitious imagines. But where others are awing off their balance, there is need for the optimist to keep his poise. When others fuss about the superficial external, the optimist must needs dig to the verities and declare the deeper and fundamental facts.

Nothing is more fatal to unhealthy speculations and fears than a hearty laugh. No myth will consent to stay to be made fun of. You can smile a difficulty out of sight. Fear will severing a duet with faith, and when optimism takes the platform pessimism stalks through the door.

Every optimist must become aggressively optimistic. Let them thrust the candle into the darkness and fling a cheery note into the babbling discord. Let them declare the verities of life, and draw the minds of our people away from uncertainties. Only the superficial one can retain pessimism. A knowledge of the great facts of the world and humanity ever begets optimism. Let us, therefore, declare them and utilize to the full, as good citizens and friends, this splendid opportunity for the optimist. Our empire, our dominion, our province, our town, our educational institutions, are all bound to fulfil the place and part designed by providence, and we should be present at the banquet of success.

Don't Drug Children.

When you give your child a so-called "soothing" medicine you are not curing its sickness. You are merely drugging it into temporary insensibility. The so-called soothing medicines contain opiates, and an overdose may kill the child. When you give little ones Baby's Own Tablets you have the guarantee of a government analyst that this medicine is safe. And you have the word of thousands of grateful mothers that this medicine will promptly cure all minor ailments of childhood. Mrs. Alphonse Roy, Scott Junction, Que., says: "My little one was weak and sickly and used to cry day and night, but since giving him Baby's Own Tablets he has thrived splendidly, and is as good-natured and happy as I could wish." Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Rev. Dr. MacArthur, Acadia Baccalaureate preacher this year, is one of the most eminent pulpit orators in the United States. On the 15th of this month he preached the 40th anniversary sermon in the Calvary Baptist church. Dr. MacArthur has had only one pastorate which he entered upon in 1870 at the close of his theological course of study. His church is engaged in mission work among Spaniards, Italians, Armenians and Persians in New York City. It has raised over $2,000,000 for home and benevolent work. It is the parent of several churches which have grown out from it. Pastor and people were never more firmly united than at present.

Hang Week's Wash in a Few Minutes on a Hill Clothes Dryer

Clean Compact Capacious Convenient

Why continue to fuss with uncleanly, ragged clothes and shoes when you can get this neat, compact, convenient Hill Dryer. Instead of being spread all over the yard and supported by numerous poles, every inch of every line on the Hill Dryer is within easy reach—and you can hang the whole wet, white, wetting step, without having to hang the heavy basket up and down the yard through snow or damp grass.

Set up a Hill Dryer in a convenient spot near the house and see how many items, how much time, work and bother it saves. Once used it and you could never come back to the old-fashioned clothesline method.

Hill Dryers are made in several sizes and fit for lawn, balcony and roof. Hold 100 to 120 feet of line—revolve 50 lbs. comes to you—takes apart, folded up and put away, keeping your lawn entirely clear of obstructions.

Why put one up in your yard for next wash-day. Or call and see it.

DOCTOR THE CAUSE

NOT THE EFFECT

If you are afflicted with boils, pimples, scrofula, salt rheum, eczema, or any other indication of impure blood, don't waste time and money in external remedies for the treatment of these symptoms.

YOU CAN AVOID ALL THESE THINGS BY TAKING NYAL'S BLOOD PURIFIER

Sometimes there are no outward symptoms of impure blood, but instead there is a feeling of languor, a run-down listless condition, loss of appetite,—showing that the organs and tissues of the body are not being nourished as they should be.

The use of Nyal's Blood Purifier is followed by the most pleasing results. The boils heal up and disappear; the skin becomes soft and smooth again, instead of harsh and scaly, or pimply. The liver is stimulated, the blood enriched, and soon the whole system feels the beneficial effect of this excellent remedy.

Pure blood means health and strength. Nyal's Blood Purifier makes pure blood.

Canning Items.

Memorial day was observed here by a union service held in the Methodist church on Friday evening. Addresses were given by Rev. Dr. Crowell, Rev. Arthur Hockin and Rev. Mr. Gibson, of Kingsport. The mass marched in regalia and occupied front seats. A game of base-ball between the teams of Canning and Canard was played here on the afternoon of Victoria day resulting in a victory for the latter team, the score being 14-7. Rev. Arthur Hockin exchanged pulpits with Rev. Mr. Gibson, pastor of the Congregational church at Kingsport on Sunday, the fifteenth.

The pupils of the preparatory and intermediate departments of the Canning public school gave a very instructive and interesting patriotic entertainment on the afternoon of Empire day. Songs, recitations, and exercises were rendered in a manner which reflected much credit on the pupils and their teachers, Misses Hilda Hockin and Estella Loomer. Speeches were also made by some of the visitors. Miss Marion Parker was home from Halifax for over Sunday. Mrs. Halle Bigelow is visiting her parents in Wharfedale.

Mrs. John DeWolf has been visiting relatives in Parrsboro.

Miss Nellie Sheffield spent a few days recently with friends in Truro.

Mr. Sydney Bienkhorn has returned from a business trip to Parrsboro.

Mr. and Mrs. David Peery and son John returned on Wednesday from a visit with relatives in Parrsboro.

Mrs. (Dr.) Jacques, of Halifax, is visiting her father, Mr. Stephen Burgess.

Mr. Beckwith, of Jamaica, in the colleges but more especially those which are characteristic of Acadia. The book contains many Acadia songs never before published and is full of the Acadia spirit from cover to cover. It is certainly a rare collection of college songs.

The book is bound most tastefully in cloth with a design of the college on the cover, and will be ready for distribution about May twenty-fifth. Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of price $1.25.

Sporting News.

On Victoria day the Acadia baseball team defeated the Truro team by the score of 9-2.

On the same day the Victoria's went to Hantsport where they won by the score of 7-0. This was the first defeat Hantsport has met in three years, and only one player reached third base. Henshaw had 17 strikeouts in his favor. Victoria's battery: Henshaw and Webster. Hantsport battery: Beasley, Beasley and Gunn.

The Late Mrs. Annie Rose.

Very general sympathy has been felt and expressed over the death in Lower Horton, on Thursday last week, of Annie Maud, the wife of Mr. George Rose. Until about seven weeks ago Mrs. Rose had enjoyed good health. She attended St. John's church on Easter Day and sang in the choir. A few days later she was taken suddenly ill and after over six weeks of agonizing suffering, she passed away in a state of unconsciousness. She leaves two daughters, the youngest about four months old. The late Mrs. Rose (nee Silver) came with her sister, Mrs. Thos. Rose, from Dartmouth to Lower Horton about twelve years ago. She soon formed a large circle of friends. In 1906 she was married in St. John's church to Mr. George Rose, late of the Indian army. For many years she sang in the choir and has taught Sunday-school in St. John's church, and was always ready to help in all departments of parish work. Her kindly genial disposition rendered her a universal favorite, and she will be very generally missed in the church and community.

The funeral took place on Sunday at St. John's church and was largely attended. A number of wreaths were sent including one from the choir of St. John's church. A number of hymns were sung in the church. The family desire to return thanks for the kindness of the neighbors and friends and the many expressions of sympathy for their great loss.

Dr. Bill Going Abroad.

Dr. E. Gordon Bill, who was graduated from Acadia in the class of 1902 at the age of 17 years, has been pursuing mathematical work at Yale University. He received his B. A., M. A. and Ph. D. degrees in mathematics from Yale, the latter when just 22 years old. Since he received his Ph. D. degree in 1907, Dr. Bill has been employed as instructor both in the university proper and also in the Sheffield Scientific School. Dr. Bill has read papers before The American Mathematical Society, which is considered a high honor among mathematicians. Next month he leaves for Europe for advanced studies in mathematics. He will spend some months at the celebrated German University of Göttingen, in further learning the German language and attending lectures by the famous mathematicians, David Hilbert and Felix Klein. After this he will proceed to Italy and work at the University of Padua, studying the modern method of Algebraic Geometry, under one of its greatest masters, Francesco Severi.

Acadia's New Song Book.

Acadia graduates and all who are interested in the institutions on the Hill will be glad to welcome the advent of a neat little volume entitled 'Acadia Songs.'

A song book with music has been a long felt need at Acadia, and now we rejoice to say that it is an accomplished fact.

The committee having the music in charge has made a selection from the best songs common among all the colleges but more especially those which are characteristic of Acadia. The book contains many Acadia songs never before published and is full of the Acadia spirit from cover to cover. It is certainly a rare collection of college songs.

The book is bound most tastefully in cloth with a design of the college on the cover, and will be ready for distribution about May twenty-fifth. Sent postpaid to any address on receipt of price $1.25.

Children Had Eczema

Treatment prescribed had no effect.—DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT made thorough cure. Mrs. Otha Vanout, St. Antoine, St. John's, N. B., writes: 'I have found Dr. Chase's Ointment to be a permanent cure for Eczema and other skin diseases. One son, while nursing, broke out with itching watery sores all over his head and around the ears. Many ointments were prescribed to no effect. The child's head became a mass of scabs and he suffered agony untold. He became weak and frail and would not eat and we thought we would lose him. Providentially we heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment and it soon thoroughly cured him. He is seven years old now and strong and well. An older boy was also cured of eczema by this Ointment and we hope more people will learn about it so that their little ones may be saved from suffering.'

As a cure for eczema and itching skin diseases there is no treatment to be compared to Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment. It comes in a box, at all Dealers of Educational, Station & Co., Toronto. Dr. Chase's Recipes sent free.

The Charles Fawcett Mfg. Co., Ltd., Sackville, N. B.

Gentlemen:—The VICTOR Steel Range to hand safely, and I must say it is simply 'GRAND.' It seems like play, almost, to cook now. I'm sure I'll sing its praises to all my friends. I hope it will still continue to prove successful. Wishing you every success in your business, I remain, Yours &c.
