away with, its interests in the meantim to be guarded, the inference is, by imperial control, and in time an Irish force substituted therefor.

The financial features of the bill do not seem to have as vet been very clearly worked out. The plan seems to be to appropriate a particular fund, which will amount in round number to what Ireland's contribution to the imperial exchequer would be. Over this fund he would retain imperial control. It is to be collected by the imperial authorities, and is to be in lieu of a tribute or tax levied upon the Irish people.

The judges are to be paid by the Irish legislature, but for six years the appointment to the bench will remain in the hands of the imperial authorities. It is provided that the Irish parliament shall meet on the first Tuesday in September in each year. On the whole the scheme seems to be a fair one, and should satisfy the wishes of forts to interfere with the lieutenant the Irish people and the friends of home governor, and his responsible advisors. Having failed to defeat the measure on rule generally. In many respects it resembles the colonial legislatures, and in one or two instances it has accepted sugrepresentatives of the people, the opponents of the measure, headed by Dr. gestions from the constitution of the Weldon, M. P., waited on the governor United States. Every precaution to avoid friction, and while giving to the people of general, and asked him to take action to Ireland the right of self government, to retain unimpaired and unshaken the unity of the empire, seems to have been any sensible person would have expected it to be. He, in effect, told these meddletaken. As to what the ultimate fate of the bill will be, it is hard to forecast. If some gentlemen, that the coal lands were the property of the province of Nova it passes the commons, as is quite likely, Scotia, and that the lieutenant governor, it will be immediately thrown out by the in giving his assent to the bill, was to be house of lords. This will necessitate an presumed to be acting on the advice of appeal to the people. They will have the his constitutional advisors who, in turn, bill squarely before them then, in all its were responsible to the people. And so details with every feature, pro and con, the matter stands. If, in the meantime fully discussed during the debates in both as a result of the measure, the dreaded branches of the imperial parliament. With no other issue to complicate the question then, the verdict of the people of Great Britain and Ireland at the polls will measure, no one can ever say that Mr.

Hon. Mr. Foster delivered his budget speech on Tuesday. It is substantially a repetition of the same old story of the prosperity which the national policy has brought to the people of Canada. According to the minister of finance, the country was never as prosperous as it is now, the people were never so happy and contented with their lot, and all this is due to the fiscal policy of the government for which he speaks. Viewing the country in the light in which Mr. Foster views it, it is not to be expected that any material change in the policy of the administrathe situation from other points of view it did seem as if there was a general demand
