A NARROW ESCAPE.

A Dublin despatch of the 16th inst., says: William O'Brien, M. P., pulled down in United Ireland, the following account of the escape of himself and Mr. Dillon, M. P. from Ireland:

"We were from Dublin on Wednesday night to a yacht lying in the harbor. Next morning found us in a boat away towards the coast. On Friday and Saturday we lay in a dead calm. On Sunday morning we started for the coast. A Dublin steamer or also passed close to us. A heavy fog started us from night on Sunday night. Four steamer hawking for hours were around us during the night. We cleared the land in the morning and started for the coast. The French coast to the west of us. We were becalmed again on Monday and were obliged to keep up the harbor. A Irish gale sprang up Monday night in which the yacht behaved magnificently. While passing Greenway after midnight we were apparently pursued by a revenue cutter, which, however, was unable to reach us. The cutter was in the chase. In the morning we were running before the wind for Cherbourg, where we were to land. The cutter was in the chase. We had reached our last day's supply of fresh water. All the arrangements were made for the night. The prominent Dublin citizens who were present, and we had unparalled good luck. Local and Special News.
