CHAPTER XXVII.

It was three-cornered and quaint, and at the end branched off into another room, which led through a long French window to the grounds. Lord Court closed the door between the two rooms, and, pushing a chair to the fire, made his guest comfortable, handing him at the same time the batch of newspapers that had just arrived from London.

"Now you are settled," he said, genially. "You look as if sleep would not come amiss; and, such being the case, I shall have no hesitation in leaving you. I must drive to Beverley Town, a good distance away; I have an important interview on hand with a troublesome tenant. I shall be back however, before dinner. Are you sure you won't be bored?"

Stuart replied in the negative, and, after seeing him cozily ensconced, Lord Court quitted the room, and made his way to the stables.

Left to himself, Stuart leaned back wearily, and gave way to thought. Once again the struggle raged between duty and desire. The love that he had thought was treasured only for the woman who had deceived him, and swept away all memory of that other girl who, through all her trouble and sorrow, had soothed and helped him. There was everything to call him away, yet he felt he could not go until he had gazed once more on the delicate beauty that had seemed to him the personification of truth and sweetness in the summer that was gone. There was something altogether strange and incomprehensible in Margery's marriage. The earl had casually mentioned the love that his dead sister had had for his wife, and Stuart would have followed up the remark in order to learn how it was that the village girl had become the Countess of Court; but the earl would talk of nothing but Sir Douglas Gerard and the wonderful discovery of his daughter.

Stuart took up his paper and forced himself to read; but the words seemed to run into each other, and his mind refused to be diverted from the mystery and perplexity that tormented it. As he lay back, wearily gazing into the glowing coals, he saw his duty clearly—he must leave the manor and put every barrier between Margery and himself. Vane had been true, faithful, devoted; to her he would return, and by earnestness and determination try to thrust out all remembrance of his false love from his heart, and forget that she even existed.

The struggle was ended now, he told himself; his path was clear and well defined. A sense of peace stole over him, the firelight flickered amid the fast-glowing shadows. Stuart's head drooped, his eyes closed, and his troubled spirit was soothed in slumber.

The afternoon grew into winter dusk; the fire had settled in a glowing mass of red embers, and not a sound disturbed the silence. Presently the door was opened gently, a white hand pushed aside the curtain, and Margery stood in the room. As her eyes fell on Stuart's motionless form her heart gave one great leap, then sunk again; she let her gaze rest with unspeakable sadness and tenderness on her lost lover's face, then she turned to go. She moved away softly, and her hand was on the door, when a sound came from behind:

"Margery!"

She turned at once, to see Stuart with his hand outstretched.

"I am sorry," she faltered, faintly. "I did not know you were here. I came to find my husband. I have disturbed you."

Stuart's hand fell, and he bowed his head to the arm of the chair.

"You are ill!" Margery went on, quickly. "Let me—"

Stuart raised his head and rose to his feet, steadying himself with one hand on the chair.

"I was dreaming," he answered, hurriedly; "but I am awake now, Lady Court."

"Carnol made us strong and healthy and gave us wonderful appetites," writes Miss Winifred Bartlett

What answer do you get when you ask most people who are ill what their trouble is? "I don't know," is the answer almost invariably, weakness, run down condition, losing weight, despondent, sleeplessness, nervousness, lack of energy, tired, listless, headaches? Carnol has proved, by the thousands of testimonials we have, to be a wonderful remedy for all these conditions. Read what Miss Winifred Bartlett says, about Carnol, and what it did for her and her family when they were run down.—"One month last winter I was ill, and what it did for her and her family when they were run down with flu. Father was working at a factory and told his chum about our being run down with flu. His chum said that in 1921 his family was laid up with the same thing, so he went to the druggist and the druggist told him to give them Carnol. He said it was good for people who had been ill and were still very weak. This man told my father that it was the very best strengthener and body-builder his family had ever tried in

The color faded from Margery's face.

"Your husband has gone to Beverley Town," Stuart continued, in a voice that sounded strange in his own ears. "He settled me comfortably in his own 'den' before starting, and told me that he would be home to dinner."

Margery bowed her head and turned toward the door, when Stuart moved forward as if to arrest her. "As I shall leave you this evening," he said, hurriedly, "I will take the present opportunity of informing you that the letter and proofs I spoke of this morning shall be sent to you as soon as possible."

"You are very kind," responded Margery, as calmly as possible. "Thank you for all you have done."

There was a pause. Margery felt as if some strong, unknown power held her to the spot. She wished to move away, yet could not; and Stuart let his eyes rest on her fair loveliness, feeling that his resolution to depart was growing weaker and weaker as he gazed.

"I have done nothing," he said, almost harshly, trying to hide his agitation.

"It is all so new and strange," murmured the girl, putting one hand to her throat and speaking as if to herself. "How often we have discussed the story of my mother, yet how far we were from the truth! And we were cousins all the time."

"What use is there in recalling the past?" asked the young man, hoarsely. "It can bring nothing but pain."

Margery looked up at his pale, drawn face.

"Pain?" she repeated, slowly. "I wonder if you know what pain I have suffered!"

She spoke unconsciously, urged by the memory of all her sorrow, her girlish despair and her humiliation.

"What should give you pain?" cried Stuart, harshly, folding his arms in his agitation. "You have riches, title; you can do as you will; you are Lady Court."

The bitterness of his voice went to her very heart.

"How cruel you are!" she murmured, her head drooping upon her breast.

"Cruel?" he repeated, moving to her side, mad with the intoxication of his love and the remembrance of her deceit. "Were you not cruel when you coquetted with me, led me on, lied to me, and then deceived me?"

"Deceived you! What do you mean?"

Stuart met her clear, blue eyes, started, yet strangely steadfast.

"Why do you say such wicked, such cruel things of me?" she asked.

Stuart hesitated for a moment. A sudden strange fear crept into his heart.

"You may give them other names," he said, huskily; "I call it deceit, I call it wickedness to act as you did—to laugh at me, to send false, tender messages to the while you were fooling another man, and suddenly to leave the village for him, forgetting me and all the words you had spoken only three days before."

Margery had moved slowly to the table. She still wore the long robe of white serge that she had donned in the morning. She looked up at Stuart, mystified and pained by his words. She put one hand on the table and gazed at her old lover, whose arms were still folded across his breast.

"I do not understand," she said, distinctly yet faintly. "You accuse me of deceit."

"Let me recall the past," returned Stuart, letting his hands drop to his sides, while he moved nearer to her.

"On the day we plighted our troth, the words I spoke, Margery, were from my heart, not lightly meant or lightly given, but solemn and serious; while yours—"

"While mine," she cried, raising her head proudly, "I've as truly in my heart now as they did on that day! Ah, what have I said?"

She moved to a chair, and, flinging herself into it, buried her face in her hands, while he stood as he was, hardly realizing what it was that caused the sudden glow within his breast, the unspeakable happiness that possessed him. In a moment, however, Margery rose; pride had come to her aid. She looked at him steadily, her two small hands clasped.

DREAMS.

When I was a lad I longed to be A sailor sailing the open sea, And I cherished a wish through a happy year To work as a railroad engineer. Then Peary lived, and I pledged my soul To go with him to the northern pole, And I was a soldier brave and true With shoulder straps on my coat of blue; And I did real things in my boyish dreams, Now here I am come to forty-three And I never have sailed the open sea.

I never have sat as an engineer Watching to see that the lights are clear. I have bridged no streams and have sunk no mines. I have spent my life just writing lines! But the boy still lives and jingles as then In the glorious deeds of the fighting men.

Jazz to Go

Old Man Statistics from "Wear" announced recently that Jazz was on its last legs. It seems that 80 per cent. of the radio listeners have tired of jazz bands and want something better in the way of music. Just think of having an entire programme without a single spasm of June Night; All Alone; What Has Become of Sally; You and I; My Best Girl; Dear One; and Only You. Seems too good to be true. The glittering gin and jazz palaces just off Broadway in the Roaring Forties and the Furious Fifties are doomed by the radio vote. 'Tis a consummation devoutly to be wished. Not in vain the nation's strivings, nor by chance the current's flow, error-mazed, yet truth-directed, to their destined goal they go.

I REMEMBER.

When a man has garnered glory, won fame serene and high, some one always has a story that will make him writ and cry. When he writes an ode immortal, or invents a dinner for a someone, with a sentence utterwords of bitter scorn. "I remember," says the kicker, "when he played a cheaper game, and it surely makes me snicker when I contemplate his fame. Now men hail him as a winner, but I'll tell a truth or two; he went bankrupt as a tinier back in Punktown-by-the-Slough. Now for him the welkin rattles, yet I knew him on a day when the sheriff seized his chattels and the bailiff had their say. I recall when he was working in the town department store, but he had no head for clerking, and they fired him from the door. I remember when his father gathered junk about the town, and it grieves me, all this nother, o'er his latter-day renown."

Oh, the winners earn their winnings by their qualities of brain; oft they rise from cheap beginnings to the heights of all attain; and all fair and honest parties praise them for the zeal they've shown, but the old jealous smarties wring their withered hands and groan. Bitter are the grouches wallings as they sit upon the grass; they remember all the fallings of the big men as they pass. Having gained no fame or shekels, won no prize in any race, they remember all the freckles on the passing Caesar's face.

There, he has just flown away after saying that we left Uncle Lucky and Little Jack Rabbit in the big arm chair in Lady Love's pretty bungalow in the dear Old Bramble Patch.

"The wind has gone down," said the little rabbit lady by and by, after a while with a sunny smile.

"Gracious me!" exclaimed Uncle Lucky, taking off his spectacles. "I must have fallen asleep."

"I counted up to maybe a million," said the little rabbit, who, you remember, had cuddled up in the old gentleman bunny's lap, with his ear pressed against Uncle Lucky's big gold watch. "Your watch is a good ticker."

"It ought to be," laughed the old gentleman rabbit. "It has had enough practice."

"Come, let's go for a walk," he added, hopping up to take down his dear old wedding stovepipe hat from the wooden peg behind the door. Putting on his khaki cap, the little rabbit followed his nice old uncle down the winding path through the bushes out to the Sunny Meadow. The air was full of song. Blue Birds caroled all about and from the pasture bushes the Song Sparrows sent their notes of joy. Mr. Happy Sun from the Sky Country was turning the blades of grass to a tender green and making the dew drops sparkle from the green ferns along the bank of the Bubbling Brook.

Let me remember where we left off in the last story. Dear me, your Uncle Dave has written so many that he might forget what has gone before. If it wasn't for Bobbie Redvest's help, that dear little bird often comes to my window early in the morning and tells me what to write to all you boys and girls.

"There, he has just flown away after saying that we left Uncle Lucky and Little Jack Rabbit in the big arm chair in Lady Love's pretty bungalow in the dear Old Bramble Patch."

Report to Railway Commission on Repairs to Dock

(By COLONEL W. MITCHELL, A. M. E. I. C.)

ST. John's, Nfld., March 5, 1920.

Hon. W. S. Monroe, M.H.A., Prime Minister and Chairman Railway Commission, St. John's, Nfld.

In accordance with instructions received from H. J. Russell, Esq., General Manager of the Newfoundland Government Railway, as contained in the copies of the correspondence between him and Mr. W. I. Bishop, appended to my letter of transmittal to Mr. Russell, and with verbal instructions received from him on Monday, the 22nd ultimo, I have inspected the Dry Dock owned by His Majesty's Newfoundland Government, at St. John's, Newfoundland, and beg to report as follows:—

In view of the condition of the Dock, its size and situation, I have, in my investigations, considered three aspects of the case, namely:—

- (1) The necessary repairs to the Dry Dock required to make it safe and watertight, and to reproduce it more or less as originally built.
- (2) The widening of the floor of the Dock to suit the dimensions of modern ships commensurate with the length of dockage available, together with the necessary work required to make the structure watertight.
- (3) The desirability or otherwise of providing a new Dock suitable for modern requirements with modern handling equipment and facilities for repairs, at some other site.

DESCRIPTION OF DOCK.

The existing Dry Dock is situated at the Western end of the Harbor on reclaimed ground, and was built in the year 1884, by Messrs. Shanon and Sons, of New York. The Western Pier of the present Dock premises abutts upon what was formerly the Long Bridge spanning the expansion of the Waterford River at this point. The Dock is of timber construction, designed to suit the type of vessels then in use, and at the time of its construction embodied most of the latest developments in pumping plant and general docking facilities. It is built upon spruce foundation piles, with the exception of the floor, which rests upon a concrete slab about 2 feet 6 inches thick. This slab rests upon a glacial deposit of compact silty gravel overlying the bed rock.

James P. Howley, Esq., in his "Observations upon the Geological Structure underlying and in the immediate vicinity of the Dock at Riverhead, 1884," remarks: "The strata immediately overlying the rock is a glacial deposit of Till, consisting of finely pulverised slate, with a certain proportion of oxide of iron and lime derived from mineral veins which, combined with fragments of the rocks themselves, all firmly cemented together, forms practically a natural concrete of a very tenacious description." While excavating the bottom of the Dock Mr. Howley was not himself present, but the Superintendent of Construction reported that upon reaching the required depth of 31 feet below high water mark, the whole of the more recent alluvial and sewerage deposits overlying the Till had been removed, and some 18 inches of the latter also. Mr. Howley remarks: "It was indeed a most fortunate circumstance that some suitable material should be met with almost exactly where needed." From this information it would appear that little or no trouble was to be anticipated from the presence of water under the floor.

The Dock is enclosed by a continuous line of 5 inch tongued and grooved timber sheet piling driven some 20 feet outside of the coping line to form a watertight bulkhead. If this sheet piling had been driven into this impervious material and continued, as it was, to completely surround the structure, it is difficult to conceive that any trouble from leakage should be anticipated; and, it was undoubtedly on this basis that the Dock was designed.

The Working Floor consists of longitudinal and transverse timbers carrying a timber deck three inches thick. The transverse timbers are continued up the sides at intervals of 4 feet, and to these are bolted the altars or steps, which have a vertical face of 8 inches in height and a horizontal width of 11 inches. The ribs are supported on timber piles, the sides and end being further supported by solid gravel fill. In this type of construction it is usual to place an impervious material on the face of the embankment and between it and the altars, to ensure watertightness, but there is no evidence to show that this was done in this case.

The Entrance to the Dock consists of closely sheeted timber walls supported, like the sides, on piles. The entrance is closed by a floating caisson, with suitable inlet valves for flooding the Dock.

The Dimensions of the Dock are as follows:—

	Bottom	Top
Length	528 ft. 4 in.	569 ft. 8 in.
Width	49 ft. 10 in.	122 ft. 6 in.
Gate	49 ft. 10 in.	82 ft. 8 in.
Depth over Sill	25 ft. 2 in.	H.W.O.S.T.
Depth over Floor	26 ft. 11 in.	H.W.O.S.T.

The Pumping Plant consists of 2 the thirty-six inch Centrifugal pumps, operated by 2 high speed steam engines, at the rate of about 180 revolutions per minute. The pumps have a suction lift of 27 feet 6 inches, and discharge horizontally into the discharge flume which flows into what is known as the Municipal Basin. There are, in addition, two drainage pumps of 10 inches and 14 inches respectively, to take care of the water accumulating in the Dock. A new boiler of suitable capacity has recently been installed. The only handling equipment is a Sherleg Derrick placed on a jetty near the entrance to the Dock on the North side.

CONSTRUCTION.

Reclamation of the site was commenced by dumping gravel fill, which was secured from a borrow pit in the South Side Hill. This fill was extended along the Long Bridge to the face of the present wharf on the North Side of the Waterford River for some hundred feet in width. From this embankment were carried in an Easterly direction forming the North and South banks of the Dock. For construction purposes these embankments were closed at their Eastern end by a temporary cofferdam. The permanent wooden sheet piling was then driven through the aforesaid banks (extending from the cofferdam) completely surrounding the site of the Dock. The nature of the bottom on which the embankment was placed consists of sand and mud overlying the Till already referred to. Excavation for the bottom of the Dock was then carried out in the dry, and the permanent construction completed before the removal of the coffer dam.

PRESENT CONDITION OF THE DOCK.

Considerable leakage is apparent on both sides of entrance inside the Dock, along the South side and, to a lesser extent, at the West end of the Dock, and on the North side. This leakage is sufficient to keep one drainage pump going continuously and amounts to about 350 gallons per minute. Of this about 130 to 150 gallons, depending upon the state of the tide, leak through the keel of the caisson, the remaining 200 to 230 gallons being infiltration through the banks or from the bottom. The general conditions are shown on Drawings Nos. 1 and 2 appended hereto. The timber work, particularly at the entrance, both inside and outside the Dock is very badly decayed, and large cavities exist in the banks at these points. The condition here is undoubtedly serious since, as is apparent, the timbering at the entrance takes the whole thrust of the caisson; and, it is my opinion that, in its present condition, it is in imminent danger of collapse. Cavities in the sides of the Dock, (shown on the typical cross section) appear at frequent intervals along the South side, and are again due to the infiltration of water washing the fill into the Dock. The timber of the sides is in a fair state of preservation, but is showing signs of disintegration, for about half way down from the top. The decking of the floor is practically entirely decayed, as are also a number of the longitudinal and transverse stringers.

In order to determine the sources of leakage, and the methods to be taken to cope with them, I made a thorough examination of the entrance and the sides and had four holes drilled through the floor at the points indicated in Drawing No. 1. At Bore Nos. 1 and 2 water was found under the floor running in a free stream. Pipes were erected in the holes, and the water rose, in the case of Bore No. 1, to a height of 6 feet above the floor level, and in Bore No. 2 to a height of 11 feet above the floor level. In Bore No. 1 there was very little appreciable fluctuation in the level of the water, due to the rise and fall of the tide; but, in Bore No. 2, the fluctuation of the water level corresponded almost exactly to the tide fluctuation. In Bore Nos. 3 and 4, while water was found, it was under no appreciable head. The nature of the strata under the floor at Bore Nos. 1 and 2 is beach gravel, and at Bore Nos. 3 and 4 is the Till or impervious material already referred to. It seems apparent that, in excavating for the Dock, Till was reached as stated, but being of a tenacious clayey nature and, consequently, difficult and costly to excavate, no more was taken out than was absolutely necessary to attain of the Dock is obviously caused by the effect of this load on the floor of the shed to the piles supporting the Dock off the vertical than towards the North side which is not so deep, but is probably having become due to decay, and the bank which rises just about the position.

REPAIRS TO EXISTING DOCK

Before considering the Dock as it presents itself into the question of building a new Dock by building a new distance into the Dock so reducing the capacity for repairs, while giving the condition for the repairs, however, a safe place.

It is safely without protection than the caisson, since any which exist in the East of the Embankment, the repair of the caisson follows as a matter of course. The extent of the work is indicated in Drawing No. 5, and the complete renewal of the caisson on the Harbor face to the hundred feet West of the renewal of a number of the complete renewal of the caisson through holes in the concrete to seal the position of a Retaining Wall to be placed on the embankment. This involves stripping of the Altars which can be reused and replaced by new Altars to say just how the Piles will have to be replaced.

The Sides have to be replaced, and the work will amount to the replacement of the caisson. A continuous line of steel Sheet Piling, impervious material, at the South end of the caisson, and the South bank to the caisson, along the Western side of the existing caisson, and the North side of the caisson. Similar Sheet Piling to connect to the existing caisson at the Pump House. The present caisson completely replaced and the new Keel, and the interior of the caisson.

The present Main caisson is in very good condition, and is situated under the caisson section of 27 feet 6 inches to 2 1/2 hours to the caisson. Pumps are provided, and provided with a discharge pipe to prevent the drainage into the Dock, the roadway on the North side of the Western end of the caisson. Drawing No. 5.

To assist in the caisson, I would recommend the caisson of Power Capstons, generated, be placed on the caisson.

A Comprehensive Programme.

The speech of the Honourable A. B. Morine in the Legislative Council yesterday, in moving the second reading of the Bill to provide for the Reconstruction and Maintenance of Highroads, gives to the public in detail the comprehensive road building policy decided upon by the Government, but it goes further than that. It is a pronouncement that the Road Board system which resulted in the expenditure of millions to little purpose, which left the door wide open to dishonesty and corruption, and which permitted discrimination to be practiced in the distribution of the funds, has been consigned to the scrap heap. It is a pronouncement as significant of beneficial results as that other great measure the Redistribution Bill. The proposals outlined refer to Highroads in particular, but it may reasonably be expected that in the course of time a similar system will be made to apply to roads of every kind throughout the Island.

The most drastic change suggested by the bill is to lift the construction of Highroads out of the arena of politics, as the Leader of the House admirably expressed it, into an atmosphere of non-partisanship. Time will show to what extent that is possible. Undoubtedly the Commissioners will not find the importunities of politicians the least of their difficulties, but the fact that their authority is not restricted by any other department will to a great extent place them in a position to turn a deaf ear to any such supplications or threats.

Turning from the general effect of the bill to the actual programme outlined, we have to confess that it is of such a comprehensive nature as to make it appear almost too ambitious, but those who admired the eloquence of the speaker yesterday were compelled also to admit that the facts and figures given, and the arguments advanced in support of his proposals were the result of a long and laborious study of the whole situation and not merely empty phrases which lent themselves to oratory. Reading the speech in cold print to-day, there may be persons who will, in spite of the subject matter, consider the proposals visionary. They are visionary. So were the ideas of those men who suggested joining the Atlantic to the Pacific by an iron road. To-day, however, it is an accomplished fact, and more than that, it has pushed out spurs in other directions, until now the C. P. R. covers some 13,860 miles of country, and across the continent run other lines parallel to it. People scoffed at the idea of harnessing the Niagara, another dream of practical minded visionaries, but to-day its power is turned to man's account. Who ever believed that any transportation facilities other than those of the horse and camel were possible in the shifting sands of the Sahara? Did not we ourselves ridicule the idea of speaking across the Atlantic, and drive from our shores the visionary who suggested that Signal Hill should be made the centre of exchange for such conversations?

And we might go on interminably quoting instances of men who dreamed dreams to which those of little faith paid scant heed, but which in the fullness of time amply rewarded the promoters.

Newfoundland lends itself admirably to road building operations. Newfoundland possesses resources which will remain unproductive until roads have been built throughout its length and breadth. The people will remain in ignorance of the country's vast possibilities, will be deprived of the benefits of close intercourse, and will continue to have no share in those comforts and conveniences enjoyed by the rest of the world until transportation facilities are provided. Tourist traffic will no doubt be attracted to our shores by good roads, but while they may cater to the requirements of those seeking pleasure, what is of far greater importance is that they will provide the people of the country with the means of adding to their livelihood.

It matters not whether the programme outlined will be completed in two, three or four years. The fact that it has been decided to commence operations, and that the completion of the plans is courageously undertaken are what count. Newfoundland has reached a period in her history when, if she is to go ahead with the other countries of the world, she must conform to the new order of things, even if it means sweeping away long established traditions which have outlived their usefulness. Only she must watch carefully to see that the men who direct her destiny are inspired by love of her, and are clear of head, strong of purpose, and honest and upright in their conduct.

With the Sealers

The sealing steamers operating on the Northern Front are all together with the exception of S. S. Ranger, and there is no word of any seals being struck. Capt. Burgess of S. S. Prospero, sighted several schools of old seals in the water yesterday, while Capt. Jacob Keen of the Seal also saw a few old seals. The steamers are making fair progress, and news of a more encouraging nature is expected to-morrow. A message of Job Bros., from Capt. Carter, of the Thetis states the ship is making good progress towards the Prospero in order apparently to take on board some of the ill-fated Stella Maria's men. The following messages have been received:

The sad intelligence was received last night of the death of Mrs. C. Wilson at Moose Jaw, Sask., after a brief illness. Deceased was the widow of the late Wm. Green, H.M.C., of this city, who predeceased her some nine years ago. She left here about three years ago to settle down in the West, her second husband being Christopher Wilson of Moose Jaw. She leaves to mourn, besides husband and one brother (Joseph Mullins), five sons—R. J. and Harold of this city, Gordon of Toronto, Charlie and Frank of Moose Jaw, and two daughters—Mrs. S. G. Forbes and Mrs. Harry Hall, of the latter place, to whom the Telegram extends sympathy.

Bell Island Dispute

SETTLED TO SATISFACTION OF ALL.

As a result of a conference between representatives of the Government, Besco and Bell Island Miners, held in the Colonial Secretary's office this forenoon, the major grievances of the latter had been adjusted, and an agreement has been reached which appears satisfactory to all concerned. Those present were the Prime Minister, Hon. W. S. Monroe; Colonial Secretary, Hon. John R. Bennett; Minister of Justice, Hon. W. J. Higgins, and Minister of Agriculture and Mines, Hon. W. J. Walsh. Representing Besco were Messrs. H. B. Gillis, C. B. Archibald and A. McDonald. The Miners' representatives were Messrs. P. Sheans, D. Barron, D. Dobbins, E. Highmore, R. Locke. According to the arrangement made, the clock punch system which was most objectionable to the men has been abolished, and working hours will be the same as heretofore. A statement made to the Telegram by the Prime Minister the men have established the fact that they can but make a bare existence under the present wage scale, but they are content to let the matter go on for the present. When it can be shown that the Company is making profit on their ore, this matter of wages will be adjusted. Under the present circumstances the Government has to give first consideration to labor rather than to securing taxes for the treasury, and it has been arranged that employment for 1,500 men will be provided at once, and that by May that number will be increased to 2,000. At present being eight and nine hundred men are at work. Another point gained is that payment of wages will be made in cash instead of by cheque as prevailed formerly. The delegation expressed appreciation of the manner in which the negotiations were conducted and appear content with the outcome. They return to Bell Island this afternoon when a general meeting will be called and the arrangements submitted for ratification.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

March 12th.—Waked betimes by the noise of the rain on the roof, and to my great discontent, find the water do come through on to my ceiling and ruins it beyond all recovery. Indeed, I do seem dogged by misfortune, being that every day some new call is made on my slender purse, and God knows how I shall ever survive the years without recourse to borrowing or the bankrupt's courts. But what makes me mad above all else is my wife saying the ruined ceiling is a judgement on me for my meanness, and will now have to put in the new ceiling she did beg of me so often. Anon abroad, and now drenched with the rain, while my feet soaked also from walking through puddles. Indeed, the streets in the worst possible condition, and the most disagreeable thing that they should be so. This afternoon to the Legislative Council, where Mr. Morine discourses at great length and with much eloquence on the Government's road building scheme. Among other things he did say in answer to Mr. Gibbs that the new roads would cost 5,000 dollars for every mile. The Woman's Suffrage Bill is given its first reading, and I do hear how there will be many eloquent discourses in its favor when it comes up for second reading on Monday. Little news from the sealers this day, about the greatest hope of a big catch this season. Home and do find my wife busy over some wallpaper designs, and tells me how, since she must have some new ceilings done, she will also have the house repapered. This puts me so out of patience that I could have beaten the wretch, yet said nothing to her, since 'twould be but a waste of breath.

Mysteries of the Ancients

The Department of Agriculture of Egypt has seeds which were found in age-proof containers in the tomb of King Tutankhamen, which they will endeavor to propagate at their Agricultural Research Laboratories. These seeds may represent herbs containing medicinal properties that this age and generation knows not of. It was the simple roots and herbs of the field that half a century ago produced Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a remedy that has never been equalled in overcoming ailments peculiar to women.

CANADA'S ATTITUDE ON DISARMAMENT QUESTION.

GENEVA, Mar. 13.
Canada has officially notified the League of Nations that she cannot adhere to the League's security protocol, but is prepared to consider the acceptance of compulsory jurisdiction by a world court of international justice with certain reservation, and is willing to participate in any general conference for the reduction of armaments which does not involve prior acceptance of the protocol.

DISARMAMENT PLANS RECEIVE A SETBACK.

GENEVA, March 13.
International disarmament has received a set back in the impression shaming forth like some sinister beacon at Geneva to-night as a consequence to the day's memorable meeting of the League of Nations, when Great Britain and all her Dominions except Ireland rejected the Geneva Peace Protocol, which was erected to achieve disarmament by establishing a world reign of compulsory arbitration and security. Dr. Eduard Benes, Czechoslovakian Foreign Minister, who is the official reporter of the Council on the protocol, informed the Press to-night that he will introduce a resolution to-morrow that the entire problem of international peace and disarmament be referred to the next assembly of the League.

Obituary
MRS. C. L. KENNEDY
(H. F. SHOEN)
Received a telegram from W. H. Kennedy, a venerable member of the Order of Holy Cross, such a comrade, member in the Order.
Kennedy was the late Capt. Patrick Kennedy, most enterprising and masterful entrepreneur of his own century. For years he employed of his own money in prosecuting his other ventures. He died at other ventures, successful in all his life, and his family, a ready fountain of high character, kindly sweet disposition, and gentle friends and neighbors, who loved to be with him, and his strong personality, which never allowed him to be pure in heart, and to ignore the comfort of his friends, and his own needs. He was a host of friends, and his wife, Mrs. C. L. Kennedy, who was ever ready to help her husband, and his children, and his friends, and his neighbors, and his community, and his country, and his world, and his universe, and his eternity.

Obituary

MRS. C. L. KENNEDY.
(H. F. SHORTIS.)

Received a telegram this morning from W. H. Kennedy, Postmaster of St. John's, announcing the death of her venerable mother, who passed away at 3.50 a.m. fortified by all the rites of Holy Church, of which she was such a consistent and practical member, in the 81st year of her age.

Mrs. Kennedy was the daughter of the late Capt. Patrick Kelly, one of the most enterprising planters, sealers and master mariners of the century. For years he sailed out in the employ of Ridley & Sons and was the owner of the vessel "Halcyon" in prosecuting the Labrador and other fisheries. He also commanded several other vessels, and was most successful in all his undertakings.

The deceased was a lady of exceptional personality, combining refinement and energy with the capability and energy with the quality of the good wife and mother. She was kind-hearted in the extreme, and no case of need came to her door without receiving freely and fully of her aid. She was a home-keeper in the truest sense of the word, and her family found her a ready fountain of service, comfort and guidance. She was a woman of high character and of a remarkably sweet disposition. Looking back on the life she had lived, she was ever ready to do good to her friends and devoted to those who were dear to her. Her regard for her husband was strong and her sense of duty unwavering. We shall never forget her in heart and who had the strength to ignore the petty things which distract us from right living. All her affection could suggest to add to her comfort during her illness. She was devoted to her children, and spared nothing in ministering to their needs. Peacefully and bravely she awaited her last moment, when at length the Almighty God called her spirit. She was a Catholic of deep and lovely faith and noble heart of whom it may be truly said she was ever ready to do good to her husband and her children.

Her husband predeceased her some ten years ago, as also her son John, who was a most prominent public official in the United States. She leaves to mourn three sons—W. H., Postmaster Harbor Grace; Charles, commander a large and prosperous tin business, and Ronald, Inspector of Roman Catholic Schools for the Diocese of St. John's, and two daughters—Mrs. Keefe of Boston and Mrs. Little at home, several grand-children, two sisters, many relatives and a host of friends—Request in St. John's.

"Three Musketeers"
Made on World's Biggest Stage

The biggest motion picture stage ever constructed, Douglas Fairbanks made his celluloid version of Dumas' immortal story, "The Three Musketeers" prepared for the screen by Stuart Knoblock and directed by Stuart N. Easton, who also directed Mr. Fairbanks in "The Mark of the Cross". The first shots taken were of the hero's boudoir, the set for which was erected on "Stage No. 6," which is the largest motion picture stage ever built, and which is located in Hollywood, Calif.

The Queen's room is as near the reproduction of the famed Louvre as it was humanly possible to make it. Every proportion and detail is historically correct even to the panelling of the walls which was all hand-painted with exactly the same pictures as the ancient book-covers graced the walls of this noted chamber.

action, "The Three Musketeers" excels anything Fairbanks has ever done. There are sixteen distinct fights, in one of which Fairbanks and his three musketeers engage eight rivals. This feature will be the Star Theatre beginning to-morrow.

Michael's Convent
at St. George's

Some time past the nuns of St. Michael's Convent St. George's assisted by their friends have been preparing a Bazaar to be held at Easter for the purpose of the Bazaar is to obtain funds for improvements necessary to a very progressive programme. Michael's is the only boarding school on the west coast. It is held in the electric plant. Under the guidance of a most efficient teaching staff, pupils receive teaching equal to that of more pretentious schools in other parts of the Island. St. George's College and C. H. E. Convent are included in the programme. A short while ago the nuns presented an opera "The Witch of Capri" which ran for two nights and proved a great success. It is the hope of their many friends that the Bazaar will see the hopes of the good nuns realized.

Proceedings at the Legislative Council

THURSDAY, March 12.

The Council met at 3.30 p.m., pursuant to adjournment.

HON. MR. MORINE—In moving the second reading of the Bill to provide for the construction, re-construction and maintenance of Highroads, I desire to ask the indulgence of the House for making somewhat lengthy remarks, which I consider necessary in view of the importance of the matter, and because of the fact that it did not receive the serious debate in the Lower House that I think it merited.

In another place, and with reference to another Bill, a Speaker remarked yesterday that "the Bill was a Canadian one; in fact the Ontario Act, and he failed to see why this country should be a rubber stamp for any Canadian legislation." The Bill now before the House is, also, in the main, a copy of Ontario legislation, and I make no apology for that fact, which is in itself a guarantee of the excellence of the Bill. Ontario is the greatest province of the British Empire; the motor traffic over its roads is probably as great as the motor traffic of all the rest of the Empire. It has now 49,000 miles of roads upon which automobiles can be driven, the capital expenditure of which has been not less than fifty million dollars (50,000,000.00), in 1924 ninety-six thousand (96,000) American tourists came into Canada, the greater number of them into Ontario, and out of three million (3,000,000) cars crossing into Canada, probably two-thirds were into the same province. The Bench and Bar of Ontario have no equal in Canada, and the enactments of its legislature are the models for all the Western provinces. It may be accepted, therefore, as proven, that any legislation of Ontario with reference to motor roads or motor traffic is worthy of the serious consideration of this House.

The design of the Bill may be divided into four sections:—

1.—To Centralize Authority.

Now, the construction and repair of Main roads generally are legally under general authority of the Minister of Public Works, but certain roads in Avalon Peninsula are legally under Road Commissions.

Practically, main roads are cared for, if at all, in a crude and unsatisfactory manner, money for repairs being expended under single Commissioners or so-called boards.

The present Bill creates a Commission with sole authority over Highroads, so-called.

2.—To Classify Roads.

Now, all roads are termed either Main or Local roads, without legislative definition, and without classification as to their relative importance. Henceforth there will be: (1) Highroads; (2) Main Roads; (3) Local Roads, and the definition of a Highroad will be "Any road designated by the Governor-in-Council" under this Act.

It is intended that from time to time, not all at once, certain main arteries of vehicular traffic, chiefly those of importance to tourist traffic, should be treated as Highroads under the control of the Commission.

(3) To lift the construction of Highroads out of the arena of politics, in the narrow sense of the word, into the atmosphere of non-partisanship; out of parochialism into Nationalism; and to expend money for the construction and maintenance of Highroads upon the principle that the aim is to build and repair public utilities, not to divide public money as graft for partisan supporters; and, furthermore, to do this with regard to the needs of the Colony as a whole, not dividing the money for districts, as local improvements, or pro-rata of the population without regard to the relative importance of the roads themselves.

(4) To expend the money borrowed on the credit of the Colony for the purpose of roadbuilding in such a worthy way as to make it a real capital investment, for the development of the resources of the Colony; not a mere waste upon current account. The roads to be constructed will be as much a capital investment, and as much for posterity as any railway, and will in many cases make the building of branch railways unnecessary.

The machinery of the Bill provides for a Commission of four, the Government Engineer as Chief Commissioner. The Chief to have a vote as a Commission and also as Chief, and so a veto.
But a small addition will be necessary to the present salary of the Government Engineer. His duties as Government Engineer have largely ended as regards the railway by reason of its acquisition by the Government. He already controls the design and building of bridges. It is not intended to pay fixed salaries to the Commissioners. They will be compensated by fees, as Directors are for attendance at Board meetings. The cost will be small.

METHOD OF WORK.

Where possible, road construction will be done under contract. (5b.) It is designed that Highroads shall be maintained by a patrol force, so to speak, persons employed by contract or otherwise to keep in repair certain fixed portions of roads, under inspection by an official having a large extent under his general care. A strict time saving plan. There are provisions in the Bill for the care and propagation of trees on or beside highroads, so that they may be made beautiful.

PROGRAMME.

There is much in the way of preliminary work to be performed before construction can be in full swing, it will be necessary, for instance to survey very carefully in sections of the Colony before definitely locating roads or extensions of roads. A considerable quantity of up-to-date road-making machinery must be imported. It may be essential that few, a very few expert road-builders should be imported to show our very capable foreman how motor roads should be built. This is highly expert work, and we shall want the very best and most economical methods. Our laborers will quickly learn the lessons taught, and in time improve upon them. America and Canada are experimenting in this almost lost art, until recently, of building durable or everlasting roads, as the Romans did.

I wish now to give some notes of prospective routes of highways in Newfoundland which have come under the general design of this Commission and which have been discussed though not absolutely adopted, but yet will give the public and the House some idea of the thoughts which are behind the Bill.

In putting forward these notes it must be understood that surveys have not yet been made and that routes suggested may have to be modified to some extent when the surveys are made.

It is first suggested that a highroad should be constructed from Port aux Basques to Corner Brook. Connecting with the Railway Terminus at Port aux Basques, the highroad would, as far as feasible, follow the route of an old road for the first 20 miles. This old road follows closely the railway track and it may be found expedient from a scenic point of view to leave it in places and strike out a new route. Probably half of this 20 miles would be new road and the other half improved reconstructed road.

This brings us to Little River, (St. Andrew's). The old road appears from old maps to have crossed the river by a ferry further down stream than the railway bridge but the new road will probably keep along the left bank of Little River till it reaches the present river bridge about three and a half miles further up-stream than the railway bridge, following an existing farm road. Little River is one of the choice salmon fishing places. After crossing Little River public roads will be followed to Upper Ferry on Grand River. The distance between the rivers is five miles mostly through arable or cultivated land. The hill and river scenery is fine. Grand River will be crossed on the new reinforced concrete bridge, now in course of construction, which will be the longest bridge in the country, measuring as it does upwards of 1,100 feet.

The road would then follow the right bank of Grand River upstream, through O'Regan's and Smithville, along a country road for about two and a half miles. Here begins the salmon fishing of Grand River extending many miles upstream through the north and south branches of the Codroy River.

The road ends about Smithville and following the river past South Branch and continuing along the North Branch, a new road, generally through wooded land with high agricultural values, will have to be made as far as Crabbe's, a distance of about 31 miles. From this point to St. George's, a distance of about 21 miles, the road will follow as a general rule, the existing road that parallels the sea coast giving fine views. Several large salmon rivers are crossed in this area such as Highlands, Crabbe's, Midland, Barachois, Robinson's, Fishell's and Flat Bay, the bridging of which will be very costly owing to their great width near the sea. It may be found cheaper to abandon the old road and go further inland in order to have undue bridging expense. A farm road exists from St. George's to Stephenville Crossing, 7 miles, which will require considerable improvement. Until Stephenville Crossing is reached there is practically nothing in the way of housing accommodation to be met with except Tompkins, Doyle's, South Branch and Robinson's, where the space is limited, but at Stephenville a log Cabin was built some years ago, that, I think, is now closed where tourists were catered to. Leaving Stephenville Crossing there are practically no roads to meet with until the shores of Bay of Islands are reached. The distance is about 42 miles through wooded country. The road would follow the course of Harry's Brook as far as Spruce Brook, taking in all the splendid salmon pools of that river. At Spruce Brook is situated the well known log-cabin in which can put up quite a number of tourists. There is no lack of sport, fishing, shooting, and boating in the neighbourhood. At this point the road would leave the railway and follow the valley of Spruce Brook into the heart of the Serpentine country which is characterized by lofty snow-capped hills, salmon rivers and great mineral prospects. The road would come out on Bay of Islands amidst grand land and sea scape somewhere near Frenchman's Cove, which place, I understand, is connected by road with Corner Brook, a distance of 14 or 15 miles, but no doubt this road will require a good deal of reconstruction. At Corner Brook there is a first-class up-to-date hotel with between 60 and 70 bedrooms under modern management. Thus far it might be said this programme has been definitely decided upon.

It might not be amiss to point out the possible future developments in connection with this road. In the first place it will connect at Stephenville Crossing at once with a road system somewhere about 40 miles to the Port aux Peninsula, some of which is in good condition and parts very picturesque. Secondly, I understand that it is probable that the N.P. and P. Company will connect their plants at Corner Brook and Deer Lake by road, which will mean adding about 32 miles more to the system. Another mile or two will connect with the Bonne Bay Road, which by building of a large bridge over the Humber at Deer Lake, will open up probably the grandest scenery in Newfoundland.

Marshall Brothers

... about 57 miles. Having got to White Bay, the next stage was to go to Green Bay, a distance of 24 miles to Springdale 5 miles in all, and with the completion of a further length of 9 or 10 miles, connection would be made with the Hall's Bay road to Badger, 35 miles. This is a good road if that narrow and motorists and farmers people are using it. It passes close by the Gull and Copper Propositions. When Badger was got out there was further speculation, and again what it is immediately intended to do under the road programme, to connect Badger with Grand Falls. This entails the building of 12 miles of new road, and the construction of 7 miles, with some to be built. A new motor road recently built from Grand Falls to Badger, 22 miles, and if our roads come true we might have in the distant future a continuous route from Port aux Basques through the Notre Dame Bay, a route by our rough reckoning of 100 miles. Since the building of the 12 miles of road from Grand Falls to Badger, the people of the district have imported 75 motor cars, the desiring of the 12 miles of road to Badger, which will then carry to them immediately 75 miles of road, with prospects of more to follow.

... across the country the next stage is to run a road from Gambo to Badger, a much needed winter road with the railway. This road has been surveyed from Badger to the S.W. Arm of Trinity Bay, a distance of 2 1/2 miles. There is a distance of 4 miles long from Gambo to Badger which is in fair condition. Gambo is a fine fishing centre, and a small hotel here might do well in the winter time. The total length of the road to be built to reach Westport would be about 45 miles, and in connection with this road there is the possibility of it extending further down the shore, perhaps as far as Badger Bay.

... in order it is proposed to reconstruct the roads in the Peninsula from Bonavista and Trinity Bays, which start at Clarendville and proceed to the Harbour, George's Bay, then to Goose Bay, Southport, then to King's Cove to Badger. A piece of new road will be built from Summerville to King's Cove to reach some very steep hills. From King's Cove there is a network of stretching direct to Trinity, and to Clarendville, but it is intended to reconstruct the Coast road from King's Cove to Bonavista, thence to Clarendville via Port Rexton. Trinity will be linked back again to the peninsula between Princetown and Clarendville by the existing road. Powell's Country which is the longest length of this system, will be 104 miles. There is much fine scenery to be met in this District, and while the road will be confined to a few miles for some time yet the time will doubt come when it will be connected up with the Avalon System, although treated as last it is ... really the most important, being within touch of about one quarter of the entire population. The Highway being in good order as far as Holyrood, the work of construction will start there. The main road running thence via Brigus, Clarke's Beach, Bay Roberts, Spaniards Bay, Tilton, Harbour Grace, Carbonear, Salmon Cove and up through the Bay de Verde District to Caplin Cove will be put in first-class order. From Caplin Cove it will go to Old Perlican. From Old Perlican to be near New Melbourne has been recently newly built in part. This work will be carried on to Hear's Content and will comprise a good deal of diversion work to cut out steep hills. The existing road from Hear's Content to Whitbourne will be similarly treated and Whitbourne to Colinet will be realigned to cut out steep hills and widen it. At the latter place the Placentia Road will be joined.

... Starting again at Holyrood, the existing road to Placentia will be reconstructed. It is needless to point out how popular this road will be with its unsurpassed fishing opportunities at Salmon River, Colinet, Rocky River, North Harbor River, and Purfords. To say nothing of its magnificent scenery. The run from St. John's to Placentia is said to be about 88 miles.

... The annual cost of the Ferry across Placentia Gut is fifty-five hundred dollars ($5,500). The upkeep and care of a swing bridge would not be more than fifteen hundred dollars ($1,500) a year. The cost of such a bridge would be about fifty thousand dollars ($50,000); allowing interest upon the cost at six per cent. (6 p.c.), or three thousand ($3,000) per year. It is apparent that a suitable bridge could be built and money saved. Such a bridge would open the Cape Shore country, and be the finest grazing section on the Eastern side of the Colony, to the railway station at Placentia, and connect that shore by rail with the market here in St. John's. Such a bridge would also allow connection with Argentina and the country beyond towards the bottom of Placentia. I wish to enroll myself as a very strong advocate for the construction of such a bridge.

... is the connecting link between Trepassy and Salmonier via St. Mary's and St. Joseph's. I understand there is an existing road but not for motor. The length from Trepassy to Salmonier River (Hurley's) measures on the map, as the crow flies, about 30 miles.

... The round trip from St. John's to Trepassy and back via Salmonier and Holyrood would be in the neighborhood of 177 miles.

... The round trip from St. John's round Conception Bay across to Old Perlican thence to Hear's Content, Whitbourne, Colinet and back through Salmonier and Holyrood, would approximate 255 miles.

... Much would still remain to be done about the vicinity of St. John's which must be for future consideration, especially to the north of the city, where there are numerous cross roads such as that from Holyrood to White Bay on the Trepassy Road, the Brigus to Whitbourne Road, the Carbonear to Hear's Content, that would pleasantly vary and shorten the longer round trips, which can be only thought of at some future date.

... It seems to me that we ought to commence, and if possible construct, this year say fifty miles on the West Coast, between Port aux Basques and Bay of Islands, twenty between Little Bay and Botwood (that is to say, five between Springdale and the bottom of Hall's Bay, and fifteen between Badger and Grand Falls), twenty-five on the north side of Bonavista Bay (Gambo to Indian Bay), twenty on the Trinity Peninsula, twenty-five between Holyrood, C.B., and Colinet, twenty between Permeuse and Trepassy, and as much as possible on the North side of Conception Bay and the South side of Trinity Bay. We should aim to construct double as much in 1926, so that by the end of 1926 the Colony should possess 400 miles of new Highroads, fit for motor traffic.

... the North side of Bonavista Bay needs and deserves in the place of a railway it long ago earned and was denied. Twenty miles on the Trinity Peninsula, in special portions, will help materially towards opening a good motor road between Clarendville and Bonavista, Trinity and Catalina. A similar quantity built next year will thus give a touring mileage of 104 miles.

... Twenty-five miles between Holyrood and Colinet, already partially constructed, will open a good road to the S.E. arm of Placentia, and a bridge across the Gut, which I heartily favor, will open the road to Argentina and beyond, and allow the trade of Placentia shore to reach the railway. Twenty miles constructed between Permeuse and Trepassy will open a motor road for travel and trade from St. John's down the South shore past Trepassy to St. Mary's, and thence to Holyrood, via Salmonier. I confess I want to travel that road, via the grand and beautiful South Shore to Trepassy and St. Mary's, places which I, in common with the most of you, have never seen. The road all the way around Conception Bay, and back via the South Shore of Trinity Bay to Diddo and Whitbourne, and also the road from Carbonear to Hear's Content, is calling loudly for attention, which it will well repay. From Whitbourne it will be possible to motor to Colinet, and return by Salmonier and Holyrood to St. John's. This whole round can be made possible this year, and in 1926 it can be made first class all the way.

Arle Marks Co. in Brilliant Comedy

GIVE COLORFUL PERFORMANCE OF FAMOUS PLAY "ARE YOU A MASON?"

Lovers of good comedy plus excellent entertainment and brilliant acting got all they looked for in the Arle Marks' presentation of that famous play "Are You a Mason?" which opened in the Casino Theatre last night. At times the building fairly rocked with laughter and the fun continued right up until the last curtain.

The players do full justice to the piece, and Arle Marks gives a fine performance of the role of Annie Bloodgood. She looked and acted it, and in bringing out the part so realistically does full justice to the play and to herself. W. L. Phillips who played Amos was working under difficulties, for only on the previous day he underwent an operation, which, though slight, made it rather difficult to gain full command of his voice. But nevertheless, Mr. Phillips went through his part flawlessly. Lindsay E. Perrin as George Fisher, supplied his audience with abundance of laughs, his female impersonation was a scream. Miss Agnes Stutz put her ability to good use as Nora Casey. Paul Brady gives an expert rendition of the part of Ernest Morrison, an architect. Frank Perry on whom the story hinges, is cleverly played by Ray Wasmund, whose acting and mimicry is all that the role calls for. A. Paul D. Mestrol as Hamilton Travers registers well. Walter Deluna is seen as John Halton and his performance of the role is exceptionally good. Louise Adell gives a sincere performance of Eva Perry. Peggy Logan puts realism in the part of Lulu Bloodgood. The remainder of the cast: Susie Macdonald, made in the Perry home; Merle Scott, Carolina; and James Daly, (one of New York's finest performers) all give true characterizations.

The vaudeville act by DeLuna and Adell was a big feature of the program. Lindsay Perrin appeared in a specialty which nearly brought down the house. The Scotch Lads and Lassies went over big in their Scotch Review. A violin solo by Merle Scott was beautifully rendered. As a whole the performance is one none should miss.

Stamina As Wonderful As Its Flashing Speed

The ideal motor car must have the qualities of both the sprinter and the long-distance runner to the highest degree and it is one of the sources of its ever-increasing popularity that this is true of the Chrysler Six.

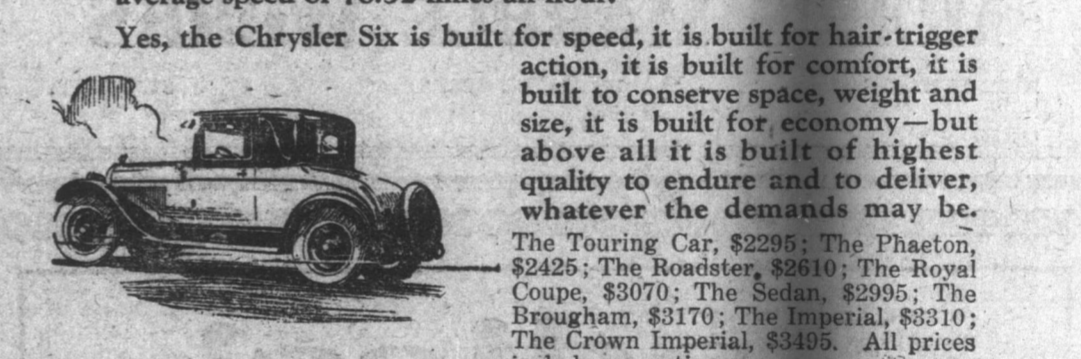

Like the winner of the 100-yard dash, the Chrysler Six is quick on the get-away and develops flashing speed almost instantly. These qualities have been a source of wonder and delight ever since the car was first introduced.

Yet the Chrysler, unlike the usual short-distance champion, also possesses the stamina and dogged endurance of the long-distance marvel.

If there ever had been any doubt of this it was dispelled once and for all when the Chrysler Six recently covered 1000 continuous miles in 13 hours, 6 minutes, 16 1/2 seconds elapsed time, for an average speed of 76.32 miles an hour.

Yes, the Chrysler Six is built for speed, it is built for hair-trigger action, it is built for comfort, it is built to conserve space, weight and size, it is built for economy—but above all it is built of highest quality to endure and to deliver, whatever the demands may be.

Power of the Press Discussed

LLEWELLYN CLUB WINS DEBATE
BY NARROW MARGIN.

There was a large gathering at Canon Wood Hall, last night of both sexes, to hear the debate between the M. C. L. I. and the Llewellyn Club, and the evening proved profitable and enjoyable. The speaking was good and the presentations by both sides were better than at any year.
Rev. J. B. Elliot, President of Llewellyn Club, was in the chair and in his opening remarks welcomed all present particularly the members of the M. C. L. I. who are now in their 60th year of activity. The subject that would be debated was an interesting one, it was almost a vital one, and he felt it would be handled in a manner worthy of the men in whose hands it was placed. The subject was announced as follows:—

Resolved: "That the public press has greater influence in moulding public opinion than have all other agencies combined."
The leaders were to have 15 minutes, the second men 10 minutes, and the other three on both sides 7 minutes each, whilst at the close the leaders were to have 7 min. each. Rev.
R. J. Power, M.A., Mr. T. P. Halley, B.L., and Mr. B. C. Gardner were the judges, and the debaters were for the M.C.L.I. who had the affirmative side of the subject, Messrs. S. P. Whitway, Wm. White, J. C. Puddister,
R. Hearder, W. Dwyer; and for the Llewellyn Club, with the negative side, Messrs. R. E. Wood, L. Colley, J. G. Hodder, George Tucker, R.
G. MacDonald.

Mr. S. P. Whitway was the first speaker, and on behalf of his team he expressed the pleasure they felt at being privileged to come before such a splendid audience. The press, he defined, as being the literature of a country. Public opinion is the predominating sentiment of a people. It is not merely the snap judgment of the people. Wherever people are for-bidden to speak or write freely, there is no true public opinion but only where there is freedom of speech and freedom of the press, is there real public opinion. Public opinion is a product of the eighteenth century, before that there was none, as he would interpret it, because before that there was no printing press. Victor Hugo says "the printing press is the greatest invention in history." After the institution of the printing press people began to read and to form opinions for themselves and it has come to be greater than all can be against it. From the very beginning the power of the press came to be felt so much so that the rulers feared it, Henry VII censored it, because he feared it. Charles I feared it, and inflicted severe punishment on anyone who dared to speak against him or the throne. In the Cromwellian days, the suppression ceased, and after that improvements gradually came and in 1763 John Wilkes gave us freedom of speech. George II lost the American colonies because he had no press with him. From the beginning the press had to fight its way, it had against it Kings, Lords, Commons, but it won out. The history of the great war just over is an example of the power held by the press over public opinion. Before it began the press warned the people of the mother country of the preparations being made by Germany, but the warning was not heeded, and when the press decided that Asquith was not the man to win the war, the papers turned on him and overthrew him. The press has gained greater power with its advancing years, and thus shall "the first be last and the last be first."

Mr. R. E. Wood, the leader for the negative side, welcomed the members of the M. C. L. I. His side did not profess to have the experience of their opponents, but nevertheless they hoped to be able to produce arguments sufficiently convincing to prove that there are much greater influences than the press. He first explained that the subject as they understood they had to debate it, had reference to the public press, and not the press in the more widely accepted term, and he would define the public press as newspapers, magazines, periodicals etc. Public opinion is what people think, provided it is strong enough to take action, much depends on what people think. He would not attempt to deny that the public press has some influence but it is an exaggeration to say that it has a greater influence than all other agencies combined. When a man is asked to decide on a subject it depends much on the sort of character that he is,
and the opinion he will give depends largely on the training he has received.
Religious training counts for much, and when a boy goes out in the world, his character either improves or deteriorates. The opinion of a man depends on the knowledge he has got on the subject matter. We are, or should be, always gaining information and this depends largely on what we learn from other men; information is continually being passed from one to another, and because of this men always like to associate with people who have knowledge to impart. The public press adds to a man's knowledge, but it does not always give reliable information. A man's influence will depend on his intelligence and

 Party training adds to his natural or failure. What applies to numbers, also applies to numbers, this is public opinion formed. William White confined his views to the years following 1814. The first year the public press of the country had so swayed public opinion the doctrine of the super man they considered themselves far superior to the whole world in commerce and that were the whole world people ready for the fray. The press had lulled the people into false security. When the British nation decided on mobilizing a voluntary army, it was to the press it looked to recruit. To the appeals sent out, there was a mighty response, and it was because the press had so swayed the people that this was possible. As the war progressed, the Allied armies were puzzled that the morale of the German people had kept up so well and after studying the situation it was decided that only the press would have any effect on it. Then it was that the German lines were bombarded with thousands of pamphlets, etc., every day, so much so that the morale was broken. One writer has said that if the Allies knew what poison was done in this manner they would give up lead and fight with paper only. A year ago the Labor party got into power in England, by the aid of the newspapers, but when that party challenged the country to another struggle, the papers were against it because of its connection with Bolshevists and the result was the election of the Conservative party by a huge majority.

 Mr. L. Colley, the next speaker for the negative, felt that if the opposing side had to argue that the public press was the greatest of all agencies, they would have an easy matter, but it was much more difficult for them to prove it was greater than all other agencies combined. If we go back to our own childhood, we will find that the things learned then have a great influence on our lives. The home has the greatest influence in the world, and particularly in this so with the mother, Helen of Troy, Queen Elizabeth, Queen Victoria, Florence Nightingale and Elizabeth Fry were quoted as women who had swayed the people and wrought wonderfully. The influence of woman was very great. Patriotism played a great part in the winning of the war, it was the love people had for their country that made so many sacrifices. Then there was the influence of the pulpit. If there were no public opinion before the press was instituted, what about the Crusaders. Who can doubt the wonderful influence of John Wesley and others of his class who did much to mould and organize public opinion?

 Mr. J. C. Puddester felt that it was on arguments and facts and not by eloquence that the debate should be won. He dealt with the influence of newspapers from the standpoint of circulation, and quoted figures showing the enormous scope of newspapers, daily and weekly, in America, Canada, in the year 1923. These, he said, must create a powerful influence more than all other agencies combined. It was through the newspapers that all matters were ventilated and all questions discussed.
 Mr. J. G. Hodder dealt with the influence of school life, and its corresponding influence on after life; it was education that made the great possible. Clubs, fraternal societies and other organizations also exert a powerful influence, and it would be an unwise policy for a newspaper to oppose any of these organizations.
 Mr. R. Hearder confined his arguments principally to the influence of books which are the product of the printing press. Carnegie said "A collection of books is a real university," and university students in America, four hours poring over the books to every hour spent listening to a professor. He referred to the weight of public opinion stirred up by the publishing of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and of the works of Dickens.
 Mr. George Tucker spoke from the standpoint of the man on the street at the present day, 6 per cent of whom are disinterested and the other 94 per cent of whom, he contended, are not influenced one way or another by the press. The modern man does not digest half of what he reads, and even after he has read, he forms his own opinion. People through the ages have been fooled and to-day they are forming their own opinions. The Press is merely a vehicle of knowledge, it conveys and does not mould.
 Mr. W. Dwyer dealt with the press as it deals with matters in the public interest, and broadcasting matters that other agencies, such as the pulpit, decline to handle. He went on to show the power of the newspapers in political campaigns and mentioned the various slogans used by the winning parties for some years past. He dealt with cartoons and mad mentions of the inaugural address of President Coolidge, which he was able to appreciate only because we have newspapers.
 Mr. R. G. McDonald, the last speaker, thought the newspapers have not the power as claimed, because they do not all work in the same channel, and there are always as many against a matter as there are for it. Northcliffe had influence because he was a genius and not merely because of his power as a newspaper controller. He also emphasized the influence exerted by the church and other agencies.
 The leaders then summed up and Mr. Wood led off answering some of the arguments put up by the other side. He was followed by Mr. White-way, whose seven minutes address was brilliant, and was commented on by some of the speakers who followed.
 The Judges then retired to make their decision and after returning Rev. Mr. Power, on their behalf, announced the decision, in a very witty speech. The points were calculated two for argument and one for presentation, and it was found that Llewellyn Club had 38½ and the M.C.L.L. 37.
 Mr. J. C. Puddester, Vice-President of the M.C.L.L., then proposed a vote of thanks to the Judges, and this was seconded by Mr. C. E. Hunt, Vice-President of Llewellyn Club, being carried by acclamation.
 The chairman closed with a few brief remarks, after which the National Anthem was sung.

In economy, in reliability, in appearance, in miles of transportation delivered, no less than in riding qualities, the Rugby leads its price class.—mar13.13

Current Radio How to Operate Your Regenerative Receiver to Avoid Whistling EDITED BY JOHN M. CLAYTON. As we have often stated in these articles, the regenerative receiver has been the butt of more blame than it deserves with respect to the origin of "whistles." Any set that is allowed to oscillate while receiving music is going to send out a whistle. If a regenerative set oscillates it will whistle; if a radio frequency amplifier is allowed to oscillate it will also whistle, and usually far worse than the regenerative receiver due to the fact that a higher plate voltage is used on the amplifier tubes, it therefore comes down to a matter of operating the set in a non-oscillating condition, no matter what type of set it may be, rather than trying from the regenerative tuner and buying some other kind of receiver. In the regenerative tuners of today we usually have two controls. First the secondary tuning condenser, and second the regeneration control. The old types of regenerative receivers sometimes had two tuning controls, but practically all of them to-day have only the one. In tuning, Copyright, 1925, by The American Radio Relay League, Inc.

Derailment Near Mount Pearl The incoming Carboner train met with a derailment east of Mt. Pearl at 2.30 p.m. yesterday, several cars leaving the rails. None of the cars went over the siding, and the passengers and the train crew escaped uninjured. A relief train arrived on the scene of the accident about half an hour later and brought the passengers and mails to town. The accident was attributed to a broken rail. The derailed cars were placed on the track during the night and arrived in town about midnight. The broken rail was soon replaced and no interruption in the service resulted. The regular 8.45 a.m. train went out as usual. St. Patrick's Night, Irish Night, director Mr. Charles Hutton, Synod Hall. Secure your tickets at Hutton's, only a limited number.—mar12,21
