Kentville, N. S.,
April 15, 1915

W. G. CLARKE, Esq.,
Warden of the Municipality of the County of Annapolis, and

GEORGE W. SHIPTON, Esq.,
Road Surveyor in Annapolis County

Sirs:—Relating to the matters referred to me by your communication of the 12th of April inst., I beg to say as follows:

1.—The Municipal Council of every Municipality is obliged as I understand the law to set off road sections covering all the highways in the Municipality, and define their limits. Section 5 of the Highway Act uses the words "may from time to time," but "may" in that case as in every case where a public duty is enjoined by a statute, means "must," and it can be understood generally that it is the duty of County Municipalities to have all the public highways in the Municipality set off into districts with definite bounds. It would be unthinkable that there is any portion of a public highway which does not belong to some road district, and still less that the limits of each district should not be absolutely set and affixed. The highways of a Municipality are vested in the Municipality, and their duty in the respect which I am pointing out appears to me to be plain.

2.—I know of no obligation which a Municipality is under to direct a Surveyor of a highway as to his duties. The law points them out. When once a Surveyor is appointed he is obliged to be sworn into office, and to faithfully perform his duties. He takes over by his appointment and oath of office all the powers which are given by Statute to Surveyors. He exercises them on his own responsibility, and is accountable to the public for the way in which he discharges his duties, and is liable to a penalty if he neglects to do that which the law requires him to do.

3.—Subject to the unlimited authority of Municipal Councils over highways, regulated however by express provisions of Statute, there are certain duties devolving upon Supervisors of public grounds which they are bound to perform when a proper occasion arises, and they are as a body set in motion as pointed out by the Statute.

4.—The discharge of the duties which I have outlined, covers everything which appears to me to be required of in the communication which I have received, and I think careful and exact adherence to what is stated will be found ample under all circumstances.

Yours very truly,
W. E. ROSCOE.

Ordered that the matter be laid over till to-morrow morning. In the meantime some of the Councillors to visit the locality and look over the situation.

The commission appointed to lay out a road at Granville Ferry to connect with the new bridge reported that they had laid out the road, but were unable to make an agreement with Mr. Troop, the owner of the land.

Ordered that the report be received and adopted, and arbitrators appointed.

The report of the Board of Revision and Appeal was read and on motion adopted.

The following is the report:

Report of Board of Revision and Appeal.

We, the undersigned, your Board of Revision and Appeal, beg leave to report as follows:

BELLEISLE

April 19
Mrs. Howard Abbott and son Hilton of Annapolis are visiting Mrs. Abbott's cousin, Miss Sadie Gesner.

Mr. Benj. Goldsmith returned to his home in Digby today, after spending a few days with his son, Charles Goldsmith.

Sergt. Kenneth Gesner and Private George A. Gesner, who came from Halifax, on Thursday to attend the funeral of their nephew, returned to their regiment to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Goldsmith and family will have the sincere sympathy of the community in the death of their son John Mason, age 17 years and 7 months. He died at the Military Hospital, Halifax where he was doing guard duty with his regiment. He contracted measles about a fortnight ago, but was getting along very well when pneumonia set in, causing his death very suddenly on Wednesday the 14th inst. The funeral took place on Friday afternoon the Rev. Ernest Underwood, officiating. May God in his tender love and mercy strengthen and help the heart-broken parents to bear their great sorrow.

In the account of the fire which occurred in this community last Monday morning the 12th inst published in the "Evening Mail," the "Mail" correspondent must have been entirely misinformed or else has drawn largely from imagination. The buildings burned down were store-sheds, and carpenter shop, belonging to Mr. Sylvester Bent, and situated on the corner of the Marsh road. The fire was caused by Mr. Bent striking his foot as he was entering the shed and falling forward, striking his lantern, and breaking it as he fell. Luckily the wind, which was blowing a gale was from the south driving the fire out across the fields; otherwise the damage would have been pretty bad. Mr. Bent's loss was partly covered by insurance.

WEST PARADISE
April 19

Mr. Sheridan and wife of Albany spent the week end at the home of his brother Mr. Milledge Sheridan.

Miss Ethel Saunders, who has been in Massachusetts during the past few months is visiting her mother Mrs. J. W. Saunders.

Mr. Harry Abbott has a cow which gave birth to twin calves, also a sheep that had triplets. Who says farming does not pay.

Our local meat vander is again going his rounds, and is giving his usual good satisfaction in providing us with good wholesome meat.

Owing to a few cases of scarletina having broken out in this vicinity, our school was closed during the past week, and we understand will be closed this week.

Mr. Arthur Morse, who has been suffering from a severe strain of one of the muscles of his back, caused by lifting a heavy wheel has so far recovered as to be able to be around again.

We regret to report that Mr. Harry Abbott has sold his valuable farm, to Mr. Walker of Windsor, and is leaving us again to live in Bridgetown. We shall miss this genial couple very much indeed.

The West Paradise Telephone Co., have added several new telephones to their line. They have placed them in the following houses: Arthur Bent, Frank J. Poole, B. W. Saunders, Fred Bath and Charles Sabean.

Mr. Edson Burke, merchant of Paradise, is calling on the farmers in this vicinity once a week buying eggs and butter for which he pays cash. This we consider a move in the right direction and is well patronized. It reminds us of days long gone by when our estimable friend J. W. Beckwith of Bridgetown, used to run a similar team, forty years ago.

PARADISE
Mrs. George Ricker has returned to her home at West Somerville, Mass.

Mr. F. E. Cox of Middleton, Editor of the "Outlook" was in Paradise last week.

Miss Mabel Elliott, who was obliged to rest on account of throat trouble, has returned to her school at Weymouth.

The death of Mr. Isaac Freeman, who resided in Paradise several years ago, occurred in Berwick last week. The remains were taken to Bridgetown for interment.

Water entertainment at the Paradise Athletic and Dramatic Club on Monday Evening was a debate: "Resolved that country life is preferable to City life." The affirmative was supported by Messrs. Kenneth Brooks and Edson Burke and the negative by Messrs. Avard Longley and Reginald Bishop.

THE WEEK'S WAR NEWS

British Troops Have Begun a Strong Advance South of Ypres

LONDON, April 20—British troops have begun a strong advance in Belgium south of Ypres. The War Office last night merely circled the taking of a hill in that region but a dispatch to the Morning Post from "North of France," under date of yesterday states that the British lines have been pushed forward three miles after fighting fully as fierce as that at Neuve Chapelle. The correspondent writes: "In point of view of territory recovered, this latest success of the British army south of Ypres is the biggest advance that has been made since the autumn, for they have advanced five kilometres, and have obtained possession of a district of the greatest tactical value."

"The fighting, I hear was quite as fierce as at Neuve Chapelle. The British advance swept on to a point where there were no trenches and the men were exposed to heavy fire while digging themselves in. It was a case of breaking through the German lines of trenches to a point considerably behind them."

The attack commenced Sunday morning when the miners, whose admirable sapping has been a feature of the campaign, sprung a series of mines of exceptional strength.

"The British artillery, following up the sappers, played havoc with the German trenches, and, as at Neuve Chapelle, the infantry fell upon a foe utterly demoralized."

"The action is still in progress and the British advance has been unchecked."

"Eight hundred German prisoners have already come in and everything points to the enemy's losses being greater even than those at Neuve Chapelle. Their attitude is one of depression."

WAR BRIEFS

Typhus fever, worse than the black plague, is increasing in Servia. Nearly 200 hundred doctors have died from the infection.

KATE. "Yes, I happened to be in that very city when the German aeroplane dropped the bombs."

ALICE. "Did you run for the cellar?"

KATE. No; I heard there were rats there.

"Johnny, I don't believe you have studied your Geography."

"No, mum, I heard pa say the map of the world is changing every day, and I thought I'd wait a few years until things got settled."

I know of a case in a seaside town in Cornwall, where the wife of a German has been making a German flag to float over the town when England is conquered. Referee.

A British Officer says, it is wonderful how these French peasants stick to their homes, while they are under shell fire every day.

Fifteen of Princess Patricia's Regiment, invalidated home from the trenches arrived in Halifax by C.P.R. Steamer.

Australia offers a third Contingent for the war, and it will likely be accepted. The Dominions have provided more troops than were expected.

Bad teeth has been the cause of the rejection of about thirty percent of the total rejections among the British volunteers.

The Dutch people are highly praised for their great kindness toward the wounded soldiers on their way to England from Germany.

The Colonial Empire, which before the war was about five times the size of Germany and upon which Germany expended more than three hundred millions of dollars is almost destroyed.

Five and a half millions of tons of German shipping and one million tons of Austro-Hungarian shipping have been driven off the seas or captured during the war.

Before the war the opinion prevailed that Great Britain would not be able to get men sufficient to man the fleet. But the men have been forthcoming.

Southern Europe is highly excited over the forcing of the Dardanelles, and probably it will bring Roumania, Greece, Bulgaria and Italy into the War.

The probability is that the Germans are preparing for another drive for Paris or Calais.

It is reported that King Victor Emmanuel has twenty-five millions of dollars of his private fortune invested in the Krupp armament works, which he stands to lose if Italy opens war with Germany.

The fine United States Officers in the German army have been ordered home. It is believed the cause is bitter feeling towards the United States in Germany.

The Eitel Friedrich hoped to escape from Newport News, but is now safely interned.

I. W. Bottomly, 44th. Regiment of Niagara Falls, paymaster in the First Canadian Contingent, has been dismissed from the service in England on charges growing out of shortage in his accounts.

No annual Oxford and Cambridge boat races in March this year. At least two thirds of the under graduates are under arms.

On Easter day a Taube dropped bombs on a Church near Ypres, Belgium, killing twelve women outright, besides inflicting other injuries. The preacher died shortly after of his wounds.

It is reported that a Russian Colonel has been court-martialed and executed as a spy for giving information to the Germans by which the Russian army was entrapped.

Arbour Day Observance Should be General

The Objects for which it Stands are to the General Advantage of Canada

Arbour Day is not observed in Canada to the extent which its importance warrants.

The people of Canada must ever keep in mind their dependence upon her forests. With large areas suitable only for forestry purposes, it is essential that the value of trees and their protection should be thoroughly impressed upon Canadians.

While Arbor Day is observed in the rural schools and in some city schools its recognition by the general public is not as general as it should be.

In the province of Nova Scotia, Arbour Day is celebrated to a limited extent in the schools. This is not sufficient however. The observance of Arbour Day should be general. There is need in every part of Canada for the education and instruction which Arbour Day represents. The day should be observed as a public holiday, at a time most suited to the climatic conditions of the locality. Public recognition should be given to Arbour Day, and the planting and protection of shade trees, the preparation of flower and vegetable gardens, and the thorough cleaning up of homes and surroundings should be advocated as special duties for the day.

Arbour Day has its justification in the value of trees, from whatever point of view they may be considered. Nothing contributes so much to make the world a pleasant place to live in as trees. The true home feeling is not satisfied without the presence of the trees, with their shelter and shade, their beauty of form and leaf, their blossom and fruit, their varying shades with the passing of the seasons, and their fulness of colour in the autumn days. They also afford homes and shelter for our feathered friends the birds during their annual visits to us.

There is nothing which will add beauty and value to a home or the schoolhouse more than the presence of trees; there is likewise nothing which adds more to the comfort of the pedestrian than shade trees on the roadside. The way may be long and dusty, but under the cool shade of the trees relief is found.

It is to be hoped therefore, that the celebration of Arbour Day will become more general; that the planting and care of trees and shrubs around schoolhouses, homes, public spaces and by roadsides may have the effect of developing a keener appreciation of the value and beauty of trees; and that in thus enlarging the field of Arbour Day activities greater interest may be created in the protection of our Canadian forests from the reckless destruction by fire and the axe with which they are threatened.

First Dose Ends Indigestion, Heartburn, Or Gas On Stomach

The question as to how long you are going to continue suffering from indigestion, dyspepsia or out-of-order stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking Tonaline Tablets.

People with weak stomachs should take Tonaline Tablets occasionally, and there will be no more indigestion, no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, no heartburn, sour risings, gas on stomach, or belching of undigested food, headaches, dizziness or sick stomach; and besides, what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors. All these symptoms resulting from a sour, out-of-order stomach and dyspepsia are generally relieved five minutes after taking Tonaline Tablets.

Go to your druggist and get a $1.00 box of Tonaline Tablets and you will go to the table with a hearty appetite, what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh and you will know there are not going to be any more bad nights and miserable days for you. Tonaline tabs freshen you and make you feel like life is worth living.

Tonaline Tablets cost $1.00 for a 50 days' treatment. At druggists or mailed by American Proprietary Co., Boston, Mass.

"Moving" in the North

When "moving day" comes in the city, the furniture vans are ordered for a certain time, the household effects are loaded into them, and a little later in the day they are unloaded again at a new address. It is all a matter of a very few hours. But moving day in the new frontier country involves a great deal more of time and effect—it spreads over a whole week, or a fortnight, or sometimes even a month, and to a new address away up into Canada's northland instead of merely a few blocks away.

Our new North is becoming so popular a residential district that an increasing number of people are every year going into it, and in New Ontario, in the northern parts of the prairie provinces and in the now famous Peace River country new homes are constantly being made by incoming settlers. But moving comes first, and a great possession of heavy freight teams, variously laden with goods and effects, is usually on the way at some point in this vast region.

Winter is the time when most of this northern moving is done for it is easiest when there is snow on the ground. Heavy sleds are used instead of the vans one sees in town, but they are loaded frequently to the limit of their capacity with goods and chattels of various kinds. Household effects, groceries to last for months, farming implements and sundry boxes and bundles are packed together carefully and securely, with strong ropes around the whole to keep the load in place. Some of these goods are new, bought for the purpose at the last outfitting post, but some others bear the marks of long use in other homes.

Not frequently there is much human interest in these settler's loads. Armchairs, that would seem hardly worth the trouble of moving are brought, not for their value's sake, but because of certain family associations. A cradle or a baby-wagon may sometimes be seen on top of some baled hay, or a kitchen table, around which the family has sat in other days, is packed in with parts of some new farming machinery. The supplies that are taken in with the rest have been carefully chosen to serve the needs of northern settlers, for they will be a long way from market when they finally reach their new home, and their shopping for perhaps a whole year has been done in advance.

The people themselves travel in a different kind of conveyance. Little houses, or "caboozes" are used for moving the settler's families over the trail, and in them sleigh-riding and picnicing of a protracted kind are combined. They are cosy and comfortable despite their narrow quarters, and when the weather is not too cold it is possible to have really good times in a caboose. Every inch of space in it is utilized to good effect and in this little house-on-wheels, walled sometimes with boards, sometimes with canvas, and heated by a small stove, several persons eat and sleep and travel for two weeks or longer.

It is not to be wondered at that after such an experience of moving the settlers are glad to reach the end of the road and to begin the actual work of getting "set to rights" in their new home. It is a hard way to go. On one trail alone, that to Grande Prairie, in northern Alberta, there are two hundred hills, and six rivers and fifty creeks are crossed. If the weather is bad or if the moving is too long delayed into the spring, it becomes a difficult and sometimes a dangerous matter to travel with a heavy team over the soft places. More than one settler's party have come to grief along the way, and several times within the last few years loads of supplies have broken through the ice while crossing the rivers and lakes and been lost or damaged. Occasionally, when the traveller is belated or caught in an early break-up, he is compelled to store half his freight along the road and come back for it some months or a year later.

This moving of settlers over the northern trails with families and stock and miscellaneous possessions is one of the most significant phases of the immigration into Canada, for many of these travellers come from other lands. It suggests hardship and tediousness, but it has its measure of good fun also. One is glad to know, too, that most of the people thus moving in are able to make good homes for themselves at the end of the long, hard way, and that very few of them ever have occasion to regret the move they have made.

About four weeks ago he was taken with a sore foot which developed into gangrene. After a few days of intense suffering the doctors decided to amputate his leg in order to save his life. The operation was performed and Mr. Grimm seemed to be doing nicely up until a short time before his death. He leaves a widow, one son, and four daughters besides a number of other relatives and friends to mourn his loss. The funeral took place on Friday afternoon conducted by Rev. Percy Johnson (Methodist) assisted by Rev. M. W. Brown (Baptist) and was largely attended.

Rev. Mr. Wheeler was taken suddenly ill last Monday morning and was on the sick list during the week, with Dr. Devine in attendance. We are glad to report him much better at time of writing.

It is generally understood that the Rev. Mr. Wheeler, will in spite of his resignation some time ago, remain with his people here, for perhaps another year, which arrangement seems to suit all around.

We understand that Mr. Kenneth Chute has purchased the old farm near the mill bridge, of his brother, Mr. L. L. Chute and will, probably, be making improvements on the place during the summer.

Tempus fugit—time flies! for, in spite of an occasional cold wind, the usual signs of Spring are in evidence such as the early morning song-birds, the opening Mayflower, maple sugar in abundance, the small boy with his fishing tackle, etc., and even though a belated snow-storm should overtake us, we know, by instinct, as it were, that Spring has come to stay—welcome Spring!

We regret a report that R. J. Shaffer is to remove to Woodstock N. B. to take charge of the International Harvester Company office there. These breaks cannot be readily repaired,—no loss can, really.

Roadmaster W. Daniels is undoubtedly a public benefactor. A split-log drag has been over the entire section twice, ditches have been ploughed, and gravel put in several places so that our travelling is good. Can any other sections beat this?

The United Belgian Relief Society gave a clam supper which netted $20. The proceeds were equally divided. We must sound our own praise a little. The Lawrencetown residents certainly respond to calls for help. Thanks to Mr. Covert who so kindly provided a large quantity of exceptionally fine clams, gratis.

The Lawrencetown South Side Belgian Relief Society was organized in January and after eleven meetings report the making or contribution and sending to headquarters the following articles:

Great Cities of the World

COPENHAGEN, THE CITY OF SPIRES

A race of stalwart people with yellow hair, fair complexions and eyes as blue as the sea which surrounds, eager to set sail on any enterprise of conquest and daring—thus do we think of the Danes of a thousand years ago. Physically, the people of Denmark to-day display the same characteristics as they did ten centuries ago yet a visit to their country does not bring one to a vivid realization that they are descendants of the fierce Vikings whose joy was to embark upon the ocean in their galleys and whose coming struck terror to the people of any coast where they might choose to land. The Danes are still brave, but in a phlegmatic stolid wax that savors little of the impetuous, fiery, roving nature of their ancestors. They are unambitious, very honest, and possess a remarkable fund of common sense.

In the old days Denmark easily combined her chief occupations of seafaring and agriculture. No part of the country is far removed from the sea, and it was a simple matter to alternate between a plough and a dragon-proved boat. It is true that ships continue to come and go, but on errands far more peaceful than of yore. A vessel that leaves the shores of Denmark nowadays probably carries a cargo of thousands of pounds of the excellent butter for which the country is noted. A steamboat of this dainty perishable freight receives an entirely different welcome in England from that which the inhabitants of ancient Britain accorded to a Danish boat from which sprang scores of sturdy warriors the moment it touched the shore. Though they fought bravely against invasion, the Britons were ruled by four Danish kings, chief of whom was Canute, with whose name is linked the familiar story of his command to the ocean to advance no farther as he sat upon the sea shore.

Many English people can trace their descent to these virile Northmen. "Saxon and Norman and Dane are we," sang Tennyson in his welcome to the Danish princess, "Sea King's daughter from over the sea, whom we now know as Alexandra the Queen Mother.

But these roaming tendencies of the Danes have been checked. The people whose conquests made them dreaded throughout Europe have settled down to cattle raising and tilling the soil in their own little peninsula. They have few colonies—Greenland, Iceland and the Faroe Islands being in fact, the only ones. They are content with the grain fields and meadows of their own country, which is so admirably adapted to agriculture. Though low, the land is not of a monotonous dead level. The islets and the southern part are very green and fertile; but farther north there are moorlands covered with heather over which the winds sweep wildly. Beech trees are very plentiful. You will come upon them singly in clumps, in small groves and in forests.

Hans Christian Anderson whose stories are so dearly loved not only by the children, but many grown-ups, has told us many stories of his native land. He has led us to expect to see a long-legged stork on its nest on the roof of many a gabled farmhouse; he has told us how the north-east wind and the sunbeams fought over Copenhagen, which is the capital of Denmark. To this city he made his way while quite a young boy, with only a little money in his pocket. Like a second Dick Whittington, he made the pilgrimage to seek his fortune, and his genius won him friends and fame.

The elements in warring over Copenhagen must have effected a compromise, for in summer the climate is most delightful; but the north-east wind and the mud king hold sway in the winter. In many northern cities the dazzling whiteness of the snow and the jingle of sleigh bells enlivens the winter scenes, but in Copenhagen there is very little sleighing, the snow usually melting into the general grey-ness as it falls.

But in the summer it is pleasant, and one feels its charm to the utmost as one walks along the Langelinie, a beautiful promenade by the waterfront from which one can view the Sound, which harbors the shipping of many nations. As evening draws on the sky grows green and opal, banded with purple and red and other gorgeous hues of a northern sunset, against which the grey, undulating coast of Sweden is outlined in the distance.

The Tivoli is another charming spot in the summer, and especially in the evening when the great outdoor resort is thronged with people and the lights give a touch of glamor to the scene. It is a huge garden or park, where one may hear concerts, see pantomimes, listen to a band, patronize Japanese ball games, "shoot the chutes" or lunch at one of the numerous cafes.

A Danish lunch usually consists of three or four kinds of sandwiches, with tea, or coffee, or a light beer. The waiter hands you a slip of paper, on which are names of about fifty varieties of sandwiches. There is also a choice of bread, and you mark your selection in one of three columns showing which kind you desire. When the sandwiches are brought you discover that they are not really sandwiches at all, for they are made with only one slice of bread, what we would term the filling being laid on top. A plate of these viands presents a very conglomerate appearance supposing, for example, that the people at a table have ordered among them salmon, cheese, lobster, hard-boiled egg, beef and radish smorrebrod—that is the Danish name.

The best general view of the city can be obtained from the top of the Round Tower, a grey stone building which was built as an astronomical observatory by King Christian. This curious tower is in the form of two hollow cylinders, between which runs a broad spiral way leading to the top. The slope of this ascent is so gentle that it is said that Peter the Great of Russia once drove up it in a carriage drawn by four horses.

The site of Copenhagen is naturally very flat, but parts of it have been built where old military ramparts were thrown up, and this gives it a slightly rolling appearance. The irregularity of the old gabled houses, the rich color of the old brick walls, the red roofs, the tall spires, make the panorama viewed from the Round Tower quaintly appealing.

Copenhagen has rightly been called a city of spires. Her skyline is a succession of these slender points many of which are decidedly unique. On the Exchange, a gabled building of red brick and white sandstone is an octagonal tower. Over the alternate corners of this peers a dragon's head. The bodies of the four animals unite in the centre, and, twisted together, form a spiral 160 feet high, appearing to end in the merest point. The Church of our Saviour has a steeple 288 feet high, crowned by a golden ball. Its special claim to distinction is based on the strangely built spiral staircase that winds around its exterior.

On Rosenborg Palace are four towers of unequal dimensions. It is built of red brick and white sandstone like the Borsen, or Exchange, and in the interior is an interesting collection of armor, furniture and jewels that belonged to Danish royalty.

The Marble Church is a most imposing edifice, though not as magnificent as it was planned to be when it was started in 1749. The work on it was continued for twenty years, and then it was left unfinished, eventually almost falling into ruins. In 1874 a wealthy banker had it completed, and though it is not so high as it was originally intended to be, it has a magnificent dome that is only a few feet smaller than St. Peter's in Rome. Another interesting church is the Church of Our Lady, where the coronation ceremonies were held for many centuries. Here are to be seen statues of Christ and the Apostles, which were executed by Denmark's great sculptor Thorwaldsen.

In the Thorwaldsen Museum are to be found most of the works of Thorwaldsen, and his body rests in an ivy-covered tomb in the central courtyard of the building. The building has some pictures in colored cement on the outer walls, but these mural decorations have been injured by the weather.

At the royal china factory in Copenhagen one may obtain beautiful little models of Thorwaldsen's works in biscuit china. Here are to be seen a large staff of artists busily engaged in making designs for the lovely pieces of porcelain. For the more expensive pieces the designs are signed by the artist and are not duplicated; but even the very common blue-fluted porcelain is hand-painted. A great many of the decorations are copied from nature, and the artists have before them birds, animals, flowers, fruit, and so on.

A company which might well be emulated in every town and city of the world is the Milk Furnishing Society of Copenhagen. It is over thirty years ago that Dr. Busck, a kindly wholesale butter dealer, noticed that one of his valuable employees was looking worried. On being questioned, the man said that his baby was not thriving, and he wasn't able to get good milk for it. The saloon-keeper, from whom he had been getting the best that could be obtained, was threatening to cut off even that supply because the man did not patronize his bar. This state of affairs stirred the doctor to a deep indignation. He had never thought very seriously about the purity of the milk supply before but he interested a number of people in the problem and was instrumental in beginning a most efficient system, by means of which both rich and poor in Copenhagen can be sure that the bottle of milk that the milk man leaves them or that they procure at a milk shop will not be responsible for a tiny grave or plant on the germs of disease in the system of older and stronger people. The official motto of the society is, "pure milk from sound cows."

Over five thousand farmers in the surrounding country are under contract with the society. It is to their advantage to report cases of disease among their animals, employees or family whenever they detect them. The cows are inspected in their quarters once a month and are carefully groomed before milking so that no dirt from them may shake into the milk pail. It is strained and cooled, sent in sealed cans to the city, where white-clad people work in large, cool, spotless factories inspecting it, filtering it through two layers of gravel, cooling it and bottling it. The utmost vigilance is exercised in regard to the cleanliness of bottles and cans, for "milk is no cleaner than the dirtiest thing it touches," they say. The society ensures to the inhabitants of Copenhagen a milk supply that is not abnormal in taste or color; that does not come from cows in poor health; that contains no diluting matter, no preservative, acid or dirt.

Another instance of the splendid public spirit in Copenhagen is the formation of "colony gardens," as they are called. The rich may leave the city during the warm months and go to their summer homes but there are many thousands who cannot do this. However, they have an opportunity of having a country residence in miniature. A square preferably in the suburbs where rents are cheapest, is divided into gardens about fifteen feet by twenty. On each one is built a summer house, over which waves the red and white flag of Denmark, and trees, flowers and vegetables are grown on the rest of the plot. The tenants usually plant vegetables the first year of their occupancy, but probably from seeing how their neighbors beautify their ground, their aesthetic sense gradually gains the ascendancy over their materialism. The rent varies from $1.50 to $5 a month, depending on the location of the colony, and the tenant himself erects the summer house according to a general plan. If he gives up his garden he has no trouble in obtaining a satisfactory price for the same.

It is owing to co-operation that the citizens of Copenhagen have these gardens, which add to their comfort and their pleasure. In fact, throughout Denmark the value of co-operative societies is clearly realized. There are co-operative slaughter houses, where the pigs are killed under the most sanitary conditions. There are co-operative societies to export eggs. If a Dane has only one egg he can export it; if it is a fresh one. By co-operation they are able to supply the increasing demand for their butter, eggs and bacon, though, to be sure, they do manufacture margarine, which they often use themselves in order that they may export all the more butter.

Heligoland

Heligoland is a name seen frequently in the newspapers despatches at this time, for it belongs to an important naval base in the North Sea. Its importance does not arise from its size for it is little more than a cloud on the horizon, so small in fact, that one can command its entire boundary from one spot on it and take in the sea-line in one great circle. It is only one mile long and a quarter of a mile wide at its widest place, and in shape might be likened to a grand piano.

The name Heligoland means Holy Island. For what reason the island was thus named has not been satisfactorily explained. It is mentioned in history as far back as the Roman historian, Tacitus. Since then it has had many owners. It was for a considerable time claimed by Denmark, but was captured by England in 1807. It was ceded to Germany in 1890 in exchange for some African possessions of that country. Since then the island has been strongly fortified. The Heligolanders, some two or three thousand in number speak a dialect all their own. They call it "Hollumer." Many words closely resemble the English, as the following will show:

Buwter, breat en greene tzie (cheese)

Is guth Inglisha en guth Friesch.

The islanders are said to be descended from Friesian pirates.

Fishing and lobstering are the principal occupations of these folk, for there is a very little soil on the island worth cultivating. They are a hardy sun-browned race, and the men wear bright jackets and hats of every picturesque shape that straw is capable of. The people have an island patriotism that would be hard to match. There are few horses in Heligoland and not many cows, a few sheep and goats, and dogs complete the life on this little speck of land out in the North Sea. Not a single horse was on the island until the German occupation, and it is said that an old lady dropped senseless when she unexpectedly came upon one that had been landed.

As the steamer approaches Heligoland the island is seen to loom up, a red rock in the ocean, without a neighbor or a companion except the little island called Dune three-quarters of a mile away. On three sides it rises almost precipitously out of the sea. A small ledge of white sand is the only spot where passengers can land, and on this ledge nestle many white-walled, red-roofed houses. On the rim of the rock, nearly two hundred feet above, is another town, with a church tower and a lighthouse for central ornaments. This is the Oberland while the town below is the Unterland. A great staircase of one hundred and eighty-two broad low steps leads from one town to the other in crevices of which grow masses of foliage. There are few trees on the island, but the Heligoland roses never fail to attract the visitor. Some of the principal streets and shops are in the Unterland, while the best hotels and government buildings are on the Oberland. The streets are generally narrow, but very clean, and they are always decorated with the national colors of white, red and green. As a native poet says:

Green is the land,
Red is the rock,
White is the strand;

These are the colors of Heligoland. Life is delightful on Heligoland in summer. Thousands of visitors come here during that time to enjoy the quiet and the splendid sea bathing. The lighthouse is the greatest on the North Sea and one of the really great world lighthouses. It is needed here, for there are many dangers to shipping along this coast, and it protects the ships bound to or from the great port of Hamburg, on the Elbe River, the mouth of which is only thirty-six miles away.—Nevin O. Winter, in Youth's World.

Carl Ruroede, a citizen of the United States has been sentenced to three years imprisonment for taking part in a conspiracy to fraudulently procure passports to send German reservists back to Germany on espionage missions.

Vigilance the Price of a Good Complexion

To retain the natural beauty of the skin only proper care and treatment is needed. Our skins are naturally clear and healthy, but the demands of everyday life and unnatural living quickly spoil their freshness and beauty. So necessary is this care that no woman can afford to neglect it. The Nyal people have just issued a new booklet, "Your Complexion," which contains most useful and interesting information on how to care for the complexion in such a way that its beauty and freshness will be preserved for many years. It also includes directions for best methods of massage. The constant use of some good preparation, such as Nyal's Face Cream, is absolutely necessary to keep the skin really clean and healthy. It is a nourishing, oxygenated, greaseless skin-food which leaves no shine. Get a 25c or 50c jar and rub it gently into the skin. See how quickly it is absorbed, leaving the skin pleasantly refreshed and delicately fragrant. 1204
All Nyal preparations are justly famous, and none more so than Nyal's Face Cream, which we unhesitatingly recommend. Call or telephone us for your copy of this book, which contains most valuable information.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 21, 1915

We wish to call special attention to that portion of the Report of the Health Officer of the town, which appeared in the Monitor of last week, where the desirability of a "Clean-up Day" was urged. The Board of Health and also upon the Council. This movement is a general one, not only in the Province, but in other Provinces and other Countries. It is not only that we may be in the fashion that we press the suggestion. We speak for the health of our fellow citizens and because we desire to see our town confessedly one of the prettiest in the Valley, attractive to visitors and a delight to the citizens.

In many places Arbor Day has become a regular occasion for cleaning up and beautifying as well as for the planting of trees. Let the officials request, to appoint the day and request its observance, and young and old will be encouraged to take part in the good work.

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever."

The opinion seems to be spreading in Germany that the time has arrived for the consideration of the terms of peace. But, there seems to be a wide difference as to what the terms of peace shall be. Some are asking for peace with a view to hold what they now have of Belgium and France, lest, if the war continues, they should lose this hold and their country would be in a worse position.

It is certain, however, that the Allies will not consent to peace upon this basis. Others are asking for peace but upon a very different basis. Dr. Gustav Hoch, a member of the Reichstag, has been giving expression to the views of the Socialist Party in the following strong words. "A durable peace can only be achieved under the following conditions; no conquests; no violation or subjection of any nation; free competition of all nations in foreign countries; an understanding for a peaceful solution of disputes between governments; and a sympathetic limitation of armaments. Such a peace corresponds so well to the interests of the bulk of the nations in every country that it ought to be possible and immediately."

Dr. Hoch promises that this programme will be championed by the German Socialists in the present session of the Reichstag. It is hardly probable that the Socialists will find themselves strong enough at present to enforce the acceptance of this programme. But, it is couched in terms, somewhat ambiguous it may be, but certainly revealing a disposition very different from the idea that might be right.

The position taken by the British Group of the World Alliance of Churches for Promoting International Friendship is presented in the last number of their organ, "Goodwill." Without attempting to decide the question of the end of the war, the "Goodwill" believes that all well-wishers of the nations should now be seriously considering the principles which should be taken to make forever impossible a recurrence of the carnage, destruction and misery now experienced. And it lays down for consideration and discussion the following principles of the objects which should be aimed at by the Christian Churches:

1. That Christian principles should rule States equally with individuals.
2. That justice and fellowship must be made supreme in future international relations.
3. That all international disputes should be settled by methods of Justice and Conciliation.
4. That the Anglo-American Treaties should be used as a basis which nations should adopt for the peaceful settlement of their differences.
5. That the feeling of Fellowship and the Desire for reconciliation should govern the Christian attitude toward enemies both in the Conduct of the war and in the Conclusion of Peace.

This Summary is plain, unambiguous, easily understood, and indicates the only basis of action which will sooner or later introduce the era of Universal Peace.

WILLIS MINARD HENSHAW
The death of Willis Minard Henshaw of Centrelea occurred in Halifax on Sunday morning April 18th aged 22 years. Last November he enlisted as a stretcher bearer in the 25th Nova Scotia Battalion, and had not death called him, would soon have left for the front with the second contingent. He had suffered from an attack of measles but eventually died from a contagious disease which prevented his remains being brought home to Centrelea for interment. The burial took place in Halifax. Besides the grief-stricken parents he leaves to mourn their loss four brothers and two sisters. One brother Fred, is at present serving on home guard duty in the garrison at Halifax.

assured that the whole nation was at his back, and being offended because President Wilson had sent warships and soldiers to Vera Cruz and otherwise interfered with his plans, should determine to carry the war across the border and pillage American cities and shoot in cold blood American citizens, and approaching Pittsburgh give orders to commandeer the property of the Electric Steel Co. for war purposes, as Germany without any such provocation has devastated Belgium, scattering and killing men, women, and children, would these Pittsburgh officials maintain their conscientious scruples in this case and submit to the destruction without any effort to prevent it. We do not think they would. Much as we hate war, and much as we believe in the ultimate and universal triumph of international peace, we are confident that the nations now fighting to restore Belgium to her own people and to overthrow a military despotism which is the main cause of all carnage and distress, are the servants of righteousness and truth. Speaking especially for France, M. Paul Sabatier says "A Frenchman cannot now utter the word 'peace.' To use it would be akin to treason." When a quarrel is for money or for a piece of territory, one can make peace without moral loss. To make peace while an ideal is at stake is an abdication. Even to think of it is to be false to the voice which tells us that man is born for other things than to enjoy the material heritage of his fathers. It is the honor of Belgium, France, and their Allies to have seen at once the spiritual nature of the war. No doubt, we are fighting for ourselves, but, we are fighting, too, for peoples."

The Canadian Pictorial for March presents a two page picture of a horse brought to the bedside of a wounded soldier who is lifted up a little so that he can pat the nose of his favorite charger. The fact is that the man, a cavalry officer, was shot and fell from the horse. The horse, whose name is "Fiquig" missed his master and pined with "war sickness" refusing to eat and in a fair way to die. But by daily visits to his master, the horse recovered and was well. The orderly reported, "Fiquig" fit for fighting, eats like four horses." The French call this disease "Maladie de Guerre." The blue cross branch of the army is now trying to save the horses that are dying of the "war sickness," but it is estimated that close on to a million of them are beyond hope of cure.

OBITUARY

MRS GILBERT WILLETT

Early on the morning of April 16th there passed away Granville Centre's oldest resident in the person of Mrs. Gilbert Willett, after an illness of two weeks. Mrs. Willett, whose maiden name was Barbara Ann Pigott, was born in 1828, and was a daughter of the late William Pigott of Bridgetown Bereft of her mother in infancy her early days were spent in Lower Granville at her grand-father Bohaker's. At the early age of sixteen years she married Gilbert Willett, of Granville Centre who pre-deceased her some ten years. For seventy-one years she has resided on the farmstead, the present residence of Mr. Norman Willett. Mrs. Willett was one of the remarkable women of her day. Hers was an active, useful life possessed of more than average ability, her talents and capabilities were used in her home and among her neighbors where she won the very highest esteem and respect, which continued through her long life. No more respectable home could be found than hers; family, friends, and acquaintances alike always found it warm welcome. She attended to her household duties up to her last sickness, and her faculties were but slightly impaired, despite her eighty-seven years of life. She leaves behind two daughters, Mrs. H. O. Walker of Bridgetown, and Mrs. Gilbert (Cairns) of Granville Ferry and three sons, Reid, Simcoe and Norman of Granville. One son, Rupert died three years since, and one son in young manhood. She also leaves four half-brothers, Elias, Charles and Lansdale Pigott of Bridgetown, and William A. Pigott of Granville Ferry, and two half-sisters, Mrs. John Lockett of Bridgetown, and Mrs. Harrison Bear River. She was all her life an ardent member of the Episcopal Church. The funeral was very large notwithstanding a stormy day. Rev. C. W. Neish, Rector of the Parish, conducted the service, dwelling on the solemnity and beauty of life, from the words—"My life is swifter than a weaver's shuttle," found in Job 7: 6. The interment was in the family lot in Wadeville Cemetery.

"A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches."

Mrs. Burton of Hampton, Receives Letter from friend in England

My Dear Mrs. Burton,—I am very sorry that your most kind letter of September 21st should have remained so long unanswered. I felt it was so good of you to be thinking of us in this terrible time of our nation's peril. It is indeed a life and death struggle, such an awful war as the world has never known. Ours is a righteous cause and we pray and trust we shall be brought safely through. The military despotism of Germany must be conquered for the good of the whole earth; but the cost is fearful in the loss of so many precious lives. It has been a bright spot in the darkness and most cheering to see the loyalty and devotion of our Colonies and British subjects everywhere. How splendidly the Canadians have come forward to help us! They have behaved magnificently and also the Indian troops,—Australians and others. Our only grandson who has been in Canada two and a half years and joined the Territorials has now come to England with the Contingent of Canadian troops at Salisbury and we are expecting to see him before being sent away. Things are going on in a fairly normal condition immediately around us, special guards everywhere and every precaution being taken against the threatened invasion of our shores, the whole nation doing their utmost to help.

Edney is helping the police in guarding bridges at Nuyton. It means a good deal of self-denial to be on duty for hours after a very strenuous day's work,—electrical engineer. Harold is in a very important post as Curate in charge of a large parish in Newcastle and is holding special services for soldiers, having between eight and nine hundred officers and men each Sunday who seem to value the services and give him much encouragement.

We fully endorse all you say of the blessing to us in having Lord Kitchener at the head in this great crisis. We feel such confidence in him. Our youngest son in West Africa has just finished his 2nd year's term and is now due for his four months' leave to come home, which he sadly needs after two bad illnesses but they cannot spare the doctors to go away and he has been passed by the Medical Board to stay on and will probably be sent to relieve some other doctor who has been there overtime. Edward was instituted last week to the parish of Kirk Harle (a small church) in Northumberland by the Bishop of Newcastle, who took Harold with him as his Chaplain.

With kindest remembrances from all
Believe me very sincerely yours,
M. T. D.

Boys and Marbles

Spring is certainly coming. One sign of this is the squawking of the wild geese overhead. Another is the boys playing marbles in the streets. But, what kind of a game of marbles is this that they are playing. The old fashioned game of marbles which we played when boys was all right. But the game these boys play is all wrong. Do the parents of the boys know that the game as now played is a gambling game? Some I dare say, do not know, and others I dare say, do not care. Those who do care should prevent their boys from forming a bad habit. As for the girls, if such there be, is not this matter that which the city fathers and the policeman should begin an investigation?

Don't Cough Your Throat Sore "Nerviline" Will Cure You Quickly

City and Country Labor

The unemployment problem is still existent in the cities and scarcity of labor is still complained of in rural districts. The question is how can the one be reconciled with the other, and the one brought to supply what the other needs and the other to take what the one possesses in excess. After the war there may be a rush of immigration, but that cannot be for a year at least. We must, therefore, make the best of the situation and try to get along with what we have. A Toronto paper has been publishing letters from a number of men who have accepted positions on farms. They all, without exception speak in good terms of their experience. The pay is not lavish, but the food is good and abundant, the bed clean and life in the open brings a keen appetite for meals and a pleasant desire for sound refreshing sleep. One man writes: "I have tramped miles and miles after deer and dropped too exhausted to eat or sleep. Here when I'm hungry I have a good meal to go to and when I'm tired there is a nice clean bed waiting. You know how I hated to break from the city, but now Mary and I are both glad we came. You should see her with her skirt tucked up bustling to and from the barns. It's the pastoral life for us all right. Men who wander cities idle and hungry while there are opportunities like this offering are crazy."

Perhaps readers of this may think the writer of the foregoing has hit upon a soft spot. It is more than likely however, that he is possessed of that Mark Tapleyism that should accompany all desires for work. That hopefulness which leads to success, and at this period of time, begets some fulfilment of the scriptural injunction to bear one another's burdens. Every man, yes and every woman who goes to work in this strain of spirit, and to all it is possible, is helping to take the handicap off somebody else's shoulders and is contributing to the welfare alike of his own country and the empire. He is uplifting his fellowman, he is assisting in the clothing and feeding of his countrymen, may be his townsmen at the front, and he is setting an example that cannot be too extensively followed. He is doing his share towards reconciling the wants of the city with the needs of the country. He is also probably prolonging his own life as well as making matters easier for others. Above all he is proving himself a true patriot in earnestly doing his best to promote production.

TALKING ALARM CLOCK

Those who are obliged to arise at an early hour on penalty of missing trains or other important things, but who have become used to the buzz-zz-zz of the old-fashioned alarm clock, have a new invention offered them at the modest price of twenty-five dollars.

This is a talking alarm clock, and the price is indeed modest when it is known that the invention was put on the market in the year 1900, and that its cost then was $2,500.

In the evening, before retiring, you set the clock for 6.30; at 6.30 you will probably get up. Here is what will awaken you.

"Six-thirty, six-thirty, six-thirty; time to get up; get up, can't you? Get up, you miserable, lazy man. Get up, get up, get up!"

If you are awake in the middle of the night and wish to know the time press a button and the clock will tell you the nearest quarter hour, as "Two fifteen, if it happens to be 2.15 or 2.18. The phonographic record is on an endless belt, and the grooves in which the voice vibrations are recorded run lengthwise of the belt. The belt continues to give out sound until shut off when once started. So far the clocks have been supplied with belts which talk in thirty-five languages.

Since the prohibition of vodka, the consumption of tea in Russia has enormously increased, and the price of this article has gone up in consequence.

VARIETIES OF GRAIN FOR THE MARITIME PROVINCES

In Bulletin No. 81, of the regular series issued by the Director of the Dominion Experimental Farms and entitled "Division of Cereals: Summary of Results, 1914," Dr. Charles E. Saunders, Dominion Cerealist, recommends the following varieties of grain for the Maritime Provinces:

SPRING WHEAT—Red Fife and White Fife old standard sorts in the highest class for bread-making; Early Red Fife and Marquis, maturing earlier, are worthy a trial; Huron and White Russian give good yields but are not of early ripening and are of lower strength for bread-making especially White Russian.

OATS—Banner and Ligowo are white oats of the best standard. Ligowo ripens earlier. The black varieties give smaller yields than these. Very early oats are Daubenev and Early Day.

BARLEY—Manchurian, a selection from Mensury, and Ontario Agricultural College No. 21, a selection from Manchurian are strains of six-rowed barley that are superseding the older varieties. Two-row varieties of good standard are Duckbill, Goldthorpe and Canadian Thorpe and Swedish Cavalier.

PEAS—Arthur for earliness and yield. Golden Vine (small), White Marrowfat (large) and Prussian Blue are good sorts.

ABOUT THE WAR STAMP

The Post Office Department, having given notice a week or two ago, in connection with the War Revenue Act, that all letters and postcards mailed in Canada for delivery in Canada, the United States or Mexico and letters mailed in Canada for the United Kingdom and British possessions generally or wherever the two-cent rate applied, should in addition to ordinary postage carry a one cent stamp as a War tax and also having notified the public that such war tax, while it should be paid preferably by the postage stamp marked "War Tax," could, if such stamp were not available, be paid by an ordinary one cent postage stamp is now issuing further notice that postage stamps may be used for the prepayment of war duties on bank cheques, bills of exchange, promissory notes, express money orders, proprietary or patent medicines, perfumery, wines or champagne, as well as upon letters and postcards, postal notes and post office money orders, the intention being to provide facilities in those portions of the country where excise stamps are not readily available. This in view of the fact that postage stamps may be obtained at all points over the whole country, in many places where there is no Collector of Inland Revenue and no Inland Revenue stamps could be obtained, is a distinct convenience to the public, and no doubt will be largely taken advantage of.

Try this Thirsty Flour

A very thirsty flour. Absorbs a lot of water. Because it contains so much gluten. Manitoba wheat is wonderfully rich in sturdy gluten.

And, think of it, FIVE ROSES is milled exclusively from the very cream of the Manitoba wheat berries.

So FIVE ROSES must be awfully thirsty, don't you see.

In your mixing bowl it greedily absorbs more water.

So you get more loaves than usual without using more flour. You use less.

Your flour lasts longer, doesn't it? Less trips to your dealer.

That's how FIVE ROSES saves money. Actually saves YOU money.

Use this economical flour.

OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Cured Both Stomach Trouble and Headaches

PALMERSTON, ONT., June 20th, 1913. "I really believe that I owe my life to 'Fruit-a-tives'. Ever since childhood, I have been under the care of physicians and have been paying doctor's bills. I was so sick and worn out that people on the street often asked me if I thought I could get along without help. The same old Stomach Trouble and distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Sometime ago, I got a box of 'Fruit-a-tives' and the first box did me good. My husband was delighted and advised a continuation of their use.

Today, I am feeling fine, and a physician meeting me on the street, noticed my improved appearance and asked the reason. I replied, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives". He said, "Well, if Fruit-a-tives are making you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can".

Mrs. H. S. WILLIAMS.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box. 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Sober Doctors

Sir Victor Horsley says "All doctors should be teetotallers, for alcohol in any dose, however small, is a narcotic poison and the nation would greatly benefit by increased efficiency of medical service if all medical men were total abstainers just as the public would enjoy a notable freedom from accidents if taxi-drivers and motorists of all sorts and conditions were teetotallers. As regards the custom which still lingers, oddly enough, of using alcohol as a drug there is no question that no doctor should use the products of the liquor business or speak of them as though they were tonics for they are not. Innumerable victims have not unjustly attributed their fatal misfortune to advice given by a doctor.

If alcohol is to be used as a drug it ought to be employed like other narcotic drugs, namely in measured quantities and for a limited period only. But no doctor can or should be restricted in any way in his choice of a remedy.

No one, who has closely investigated the action of alcohol in recent years, prescribes alcohol. It is rapidly disappearing from both hospital and private practice. This great advance in medical work is the outcome of our better recognition, not only of its invariably adverse effects but also of the unreasonableness of using a very bad drug when there are so infinitely better ones at hand. When this scientific position we add the immense losses caused to the nation by this drug, every one will feel relief when it is abolished by civilization."

H. ARNOTT, M.B., M.C.P.S.

Getting Off to School

When I'm starting off for school, Shortly after eight, Not a minute's time to spare, 'Fraid I will be late, Then from out the sitting-room, Or some other place, Mother always calls to me, "Have you washed your face?"

When I'm hurrying like mad, Then I hear her say, "Have you brushed your teeth my child? Do it right a way." Then she comes and looks at me, Before I'm fairly through: "Why, you haven't combed your hair I'm surprised at you!"

And another thing she asks Whether rain or shine: "Have you cleaned your finger nails? It is nearly nine." Then it will be, "Wait my dear, Do tie up your shoe, What a lirty handkerchief! That will never do."

So it goes till I am tired, Say, it's funny, though! Don't see why she always wants Everything just so, When I think I'm ready, then She is sure to call, Wonder how I ever do Get to school at all!

My Conscience

Sometimes my conscience, says he, "Don't you know me?" And I, says I, skered through and through, "O' course I do You are a nice chap ever' way, I'm here to say! You make me cry, you make me pray, And all of them good things that away—That is, at night, Where do you stay Durin' the day?"

And then my conscience says onc' more, "You know me—shore?" "Oh, yes," says I, a-tremblin' faint, "You're jes' a saint! Your ways is all so holy-right I love you better ever' night You come around—tel plum daylight, When you air out o' sight!"

And then my conscience sort o' grits His teeth, and spits On his two hands and grabs, of course, Some o' old remorse, And beats me with the big butt-end O' that thing—tel my closets friend 'Ud hardly know me. "Now," says he, "Be keeful as you'd or to be, And allus think o' me!"

CHAPTER I.

It was the morning of the day after; to be exact, the day after the semi-annual banquet of the Elk Lodge, held at the Regal Club in New York, Percival VanNess awoke reluctantly in the possession of a raging thirst, a blinding headache and the proverbial dark brown taste. The remorseless rays of dawn made their way into the luxuriant bed chamber even through the tightly drawn blinds and the barred shutters. Surely it could not be day so soon. Percival decided to treat this false testimony of the new day's arrival with silent contempt. He closed his eyes tightly, drew the clothes over his head, turned over on his side and tried to snore. But this process jarred his aching head and he soon desisted. He felt that he could drink the Hudson dry.

Thus smothered, he fell into a troubled doze. In a feverish dream, he followed Hendrick Hudson and his followers over the Catskills, but never succeeded in catching up with them or in getting one little drop out of the flasks which they carried under their arms.

A loud knock awoke him and Norah the second girl's voice called, "Mr. Percival; Mr. Percival." "Yes," groaned the sufferer. "Get up Mr. Percy; Mr. VanNess wants to see you in the dining room before he goes to the office."

"All right" muttered Percy. "Another call down, I suppose. Why can't father let a fellow sleep."

"Hurry up," added Norah, "It's half past eight now. He said not to stop to dress, but come down in your dressing gown."

Percy grinned wryly. The admonition as to dressing or rather not dressing was unnecessary. He was still clad in the dress suit in which on the previous evening he had proposed the toast, "The Ladies, God Bless Them."

"Hurry up," was Norah's parting injunction.

Percival dragged himself wearily to the edge of the bed and sat there doubled up, his long legs clumsily extended, his throbbing brows tightly clasped in his trembling hands. The only son of a multi-millionaire he felt at that moment as wretched as any beggar in whole city of New York.

At length he arose. It would not do to delay longer. Norah's excited tones were indicative of the paternal anger. He surveyed his handsome dissipated features somewhat ruefully in the mirror, ran his fingers through his curly auburn locks and then descended haltingly to the dining room.

Percy VanNess Sr., a slight bald man, in whose peevish face one might read dyspepsia, was dividing his attention impartially between graham wafers and postum, the morning paper and indiscriminate abuse of the servants.

He looked up irately at his son's entrance. "You are a fine sight arnt you," he exclaimed, as his shrewd eyes took in every detail of the boy's appearance, the rumpled dress suit, the bleary eyes and trembling hands. Percy shrugged his shoulders sheepishly and made a detour to the side board, where he slacked his thirst.

Mr. VanNess nervously consulted a handsome time-piece. "I have just five minutes to deal with you sir" he said. "This is the fifth time within three weeks that you have been brought in to the house in a state of helpless intoxication. I have spent about a million dollars it seems, in the production of an imbecile. This is the last straw. I have reached the limit of human endurance. Pack up your things and get out of the house. I will deposit five hundred dollars to your credit in the Manhattan Trust Co. I don't want to see your face again for three years. If at the end of that time you feel ready and fit to go to work, come back."

"All right sir," answered Percy, and prided himself that not a muscle of his face betrayed his inward trepidation. Mr. VanNess rang the electric bell fiercely. The butler appeared instantly.

"My hat and coat James."

"And now sir," concluded the parent as he struggled into his coat and rammed his silk hat on his head, "I don't want any complaints from you or any begging letter to your mother. You can hoe your own row. Money has made a milkop of you. Let us see what poverty will do."

With a grunt that might possibly have construed as a farewell, he hastily departed.

His mother had never been very near to him. Society and charity absorbed most of her time, and he had always been left more or less to the servants.

"Well Norah" he said a bit ruefully, "I am not a Belgian and therefore of little importance. Tell her I am going on a trip for three years and will write often. No, tell her I will write sometimes. So long Norah."

And so the heir of VanNesses or rather the disinherited heir left his ancestral halls and in the home of his childhood only an Irish servant watched him depart.

By the time he reached the Grand Central depot, Percival's resolution to go to Denver was altered by the pale cast of thought. Why should he spend his meagre hoard in an expensive journey, when influential men near at home leaving his son and heir staring moodily at the table.

Where would he go? What should he do? He had had an expensive education, had travelled in Europe and most of U. S. A., yet he knew no trade and no profession. The only money he had ever earned had been over the poker table. One thing, however, was certain, he must leave New York at once. Should he go east or west? It did not matter. He would let chance decide it. What month was it, December, Well, he would go to Denver.

"Coffee?" asked the solicitous James.

"No," said Percival, with decision, "But pack my grip will you. I am going on the next train to Denver."

Bathed and properly garbed for daylight, travelling bag in hand, the only son of the VanNesses took a farewell survey of his apartments.

"What is the water doing?" he asked Norah, who stood sympathetically by.

"She has not rung yet," Mr. Percy.

"Tell her I want to see her will you Norah."

Norah nodded assent and quickly departed. Percy watched her go lightly, thinking with regret that he would miss her pleasant Irish face even more than the faces of his parents.

Norah soon returned. "She says she cant see you now. She was all tired out last night with the Charity Ball, and she is talking on the phone to Mrs. Sylvester about the Belgian relief work and the Red Cross."

"All right," said Percy and shrugged his shoulder resignedly.

His mother had never been very near to him. Society and charity absorbed most of her time, and he had always been left more or less to the servants.

"Well Norah" he said a bit ruefully, "I am not a Belgian and therefore of little importance. Tell her I am going on a trip for three years and will write often. No, tell her I will write sometimes. So long Norah."

And so the heir of VanNesses or rather the disinherited heir left his ancestral halls and in the home of his childhood only an Irish servant watched him depart.

By the time he reached the Grand Central depot, Percival's resolution to go to Denver was altered by the pale cast of thought. Why should he spend his meagre hoard in an expensive journey, when influential men near at home would perhaps help him for his father's sake, if for nothing more. He resolved to go to Boston. A train was just pulling out. He hastily bought a ticket and swung himself on the car.

He made his way to the smoker, where for a time he idly smoked, and smoked, and watched the passing scenes and his fellow passengers. At length he fell into a doze. The day so far had been an eventful one and the future was uncertain, but man is mortal and must sleep sometime. He was aroused by a heavy hand on his shoulder and a hoarse voice whispered,

"Why didn't you go to Denver?"

Will the Old Order Change

That enthusiastic and persistent friend of the movement for world peace, Dr. David Starr Jordan, Chancellor of Stanford University gave an address before Y.M.C.A. of the University of California the other day that had some clear-cut sentences in it. Here is a quotation:

"This war was not brought on by envy between the nations. There is more rivalry between the two great German trusts than between Germany and England. And who ever heard of an Englishman envying anything and anybody? The war was brought on by being prepared for it. Like most other murders, it came from carrying weapons of defence. So the nation most prepared was the nation most responsible."

Of course there is nothing specially new in this, for others have been saying about the same things and most of us have come to quite believe them. But looking toward the future, they are tremendously significant, and they are so clearly stated that they make an excellent text for some very definite and positive thinking that we ought all to be indulging in.

As the war drags its weary course most of us find ourselves asking with increasing earnestness the question, "Will this really be the war that will end war?" And it must be confessed that the answer which comes is occasionally somewhat disquieting. And especially is it so when we try to think out the way by which such an excellent and much-to-be-desired consummation might be reached.

Of course there are some who see a plain and assured way to it. They tell us that if the allies will only smash Germany, crush and cripple her by the strong and relentless hand of war, the thing will be practically done. But we are by no means hopeful of the genuineness and permanency of a world of peace that is wrought out by such methods. There must enter into the situation something else of a different quality before we have what we desire. The Germany we smash may decide to abide her time in bitterness and hatred and wait for the new day in which she will be able to smash back. And we who have smashed may also decide that we must keep prepared to meet that day when it comes.

There must somehow come a new order in international politics, a new word feeling, or we be worse off after the war than we were before it. If that new order does not come we will see a mad rush in armaments such as the past has never witnessed, and the whole world will go back with a fresh determination to that insane and futile effort of trying to prepare and establish peace by preparing for war.

But what do we mean by a new order in international politics, and how is such to be brought about? Truly these are great questions, and what man can answer them? Not this writer certainly, and probably not any other one either. But what this writer can say is, that he believes these questions can be answered, that they must be answered. They are the questions that we must live with and struggle with and give our very lives to solve. World peace will be an achievement of mind and spirit, not of gunboats and cannon.

And how can we ordinary individuals, who seem so helpless in the face of such a tremendous proposition, do anything to further the good cause and solve the great problem? Perhaps we can do more, a great deal more, than we are inclined to think at times. We can do this, we can cultivate in our own souls an atmosphere that will make a new nationalism, a new patriotism, a new world-vision, a new internationalism, possible. We can learn to think of this world as a unity, of mankind as a brotherhood, of human relations as a sacred trust and obligation to service. And that will help mightily to bring on the great good day for which we long.
