LOVERS IN PRIZEFIGHT Society Leaders Have a Seven-Round

Mill in the Dining-R

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 9 .- Alvin Moss, of 4100 West Pine boulevard, and Lionel Kalish, of Delmar avenue, society leaders, in love with the same young girl, fought a prize fight the other night under an agreement that the loser was to withdraw all claims, real or fancied, which he might have on the favors of the young lady. The scene of the combat was the

As the house was illuminated with electricity, this did not cause a cessation of hostilities. In the fourth the brawn and weight of Kalish began to tell, and Moss was only saved by the gong. He came to the scratch in the fifth gamely, but was on the defensive in this and the succeeding round. In the seventh

-William Allan.

London, Aug. 9 .- King Edward and Queen Alexandra were crowned in Westminster Abbey shortly after noon today. Though the ceremony was bereft of some of the elaborations and pageantry originally, it lacked little in the way of spectacular perfection. The whole ceremonial was of a magnificently decorative character, and presented a constant changing panorama around the two central figures enthroned in their robes of velvet ermine guished assemblage of actors, the fulfillment of whose various roles necessitated constant movement.

Each stage of the ceremony, with its old world usages, furnished its quota of interest, while the interior of the noble church, filled, as it was, with officiating prelates in vari-colored capes, with princes and diplomats, officers in gold-laced uniforms, with heralds, pursuivants and other officers of state in medieval costumes, with peers and peeresses in rich robes, with oriental potentates in many-hued raiment, with men of all types and all shades of complexion, from distant points of the new crowned monarch's empire, with its dazzling display of jewels and wealth of color, presented a picture which in combined brilliancy and distinction has seldom been excelled.

Almost as animated was the scene in the vicinity of Westminster Abbey, where bands of music stationed about the building relieved the tedium of the early waiting, and soon after the doors were opened state coaches, carriages and automobiles rattled up in a ceaseless line, the rich apparel of their occupants eliciting hearty approval, which, however, was surpassed past at a swinging pace to take up a favored position guarding the route, near the abbey.

THE COLONIAL PREMIERS and the privy councilors were warmly welcomed, the Fijians, in petticoats, the center of much interest, and a red Indian chief, in his native costume, feathers and blanket, decorated with the customary mirrors, caused the most

As the hour appointed for the departure of the royal procession approached the excitement about Buckingham Palace was most marked. Punctual to time, the advance guard of the royal cavalcade issued from the archway, the horses of the troopers curvetting nervously as they faced the wall of humanity that cheered their coming. Shortly afterwards came the Prince and Princess of Wales' procession, and finally within a few minutes their majesties' state coach appeared at the gateway, and

THE KING AND QUEEN smiled and bowed in response to the mighty roar of cheers that awarfed all previous welcomes. The scene in the vicinity was remarkable. On the roof of the palace were perched a number of fashionably dressed ladies, members of the household, and their cheers, with the fluttering of their hankerchiefs, as the King and Queen entered the royal coach gave the signal for the deafening plaudits of the populace, which greetfrom the gates. The ovation was taken up by the crowds which thronged the Mall, and was repeatedly acknowledged by the occupants of the state coach.

THE KING LOOKED PALE. The King looked pale, and rather had led one to expect, and while punctiliously bowing from side to side, he did so with a gravity very unusual back in the carriage, and moved his body very little. His curious crimson robes and cap, the maintenance which, simply a band of ermine with a crimson veivet top, doubtless gave him the unusual appearance. THE QUEEN RADIANT.

The Queen, beside him, was radiant. She never looked better. The cheers which greeted the pair were loud and unmistakably genuine, and very different from the perfunctory applause which usually greets the appearance of members of the royal family.

The three processions to the abbey were carried out according to programme, and the only striking features of the first two were the gorgeous state carriages and the beautiful trappings and horses. The crowd paid but little attention to the occupants of the vehicles. The Prince of Wales sat quietly in his carriage, but the Princess of Wales bowed and smiled constantly. It was not till the King's procession came that was any show of enthusiasm. Lord Kitchener, Admiral Seymour and came in for much attention, but they all seemed to look straight ahead, and pay little attention to the people along

Lord Kitchener, in the resplendent full-dress uniform of a general, also looked unfamiliar, and many persons did not recognize him. center of which was placed a small deep red book of service. Without the tapestries or light furnishings of the tiers upon tiers of seats, which rose 50 feet high, the combination of white and red programmes by tself produced a gala effect. The preiminary eulogies of the decorative ar rangements were not overstated. The entire scheme had been carried out harmoniously, and even the stands did not seem out of place. A peculiarly beautiful effect was presented by the King's and Queen's boxes, comprising half a dozen rows of chairs in white satin, relieved only by the crimson of the seats. Beyond the structural decorations for the seating of the spec tators, there was little attempt at any display, and the old gray arches lent their stately perpective to the scene, untouched by flags or any gleam of GLITTERING ARRAY OF PLATE. The various chairs to be used by the King and Queen in the service attracted special attention, but what inevitably caught the eye was the glittering array of god plate, brought from various royal depositories, ranged along the chancel and behind the altar. On top of the arch separating the nave from the chancel, sat the surpliced orchestra. In stalls within, with the other ambassadors, were the United States ambassador, Joseph H. Choate, and Mrs.

Choate, and many officials. During the long wait, Edwin A. Abbey, the American artist, who was commissioned to paint the coronation scene in the abbey, and who wore court uniform, took careful note of the surroundings for the historic picture ordered by the King. The peeresses took advantage of the long interval to stroll up and down, but the peers sat stolidly awaiting the arrival of the sovereign. Their ermine caps presented a solid mass of white. The service commenced with the reconsecration of the regalia. The procession of the clergy with the regalia then proceeded from the altar to the annex, all present standing up and the choir singing "O God, Our Help in Ages Past." Preceding the regalia came the boys of Westminster Abbey, followed by the children of the Chapel Royal and the choir, in royal uniforms.

The Duke of Connaught took his place beside the Prince of Wales in the abbey as the procession entered, bowing as he making vivid contrasts with the deep passed the Prince. The Archbishop of Canterbury took his seat in front of the coronation chair, and the Earl of Halsbury, the Lord High Chancellor, seated himself by his side. Several minutes elapsed, however, before the King and Queen came in sight of those gathered about the threne. Suddenly "VIVAT ALEXANDRA!"

"VIVAT REX EDWARDUS!" with blasts from trumpets. Yet there was another wait. "What has become of the King?" was asked by people who were shut off from sight of the nave. The Queen waited patiently, the organ ceased, and then resumed: there was another fanfare of trumpets, another chorus of "Vivats!" and King Edward appeared and walked to his chair in front of the throne, bowing to the Queen as he passed, and then knelt in prayer. After removing his cap his Majesty stood up, and the Archbishop of Canterbury, in a trembling voice, read the recognition, beginning: "Sirs, I here present to you King Edward, the undoubted King of this realm," etc.

GOD SAVE KING EDWARD! Then there was a hoarse shout, and the blending of the choir and the people, women and men, in the cry 'God save King Edward." Several times this was repeated, and the abbey rang with loud fanfares. Again the King and Queen knelt, and the Archbishop of Canterbury walked to the altar and commenced the communion. While the gospel was being read the King stood erect, supported on each side by the bishops in their heavily of the Creed all the members of the tically be royal family turned eastward. King Edward and Queen Alexandra followed the service carefully, frequently looking back at the copies of the service which they held in their

THE OATH. The administration of the oath followed. Standing before the King's chair, the archbishop asked: "Sir, is your majesty willing to take the oath? The King answered in firm, strong tones, "I am willing," etc., his replies being easily heard high up in the triforium near the roof. Then the inkstand was brought and the King signed the oath. He did not advance to the altar, but sat in the chair he had occupied since the service began. While the choir sang "Come, Holy Ghost, Our Souls Inspire," the King remained seated and the Queen stood up. After the archbishop's anointing prayer a gold canopy was brought over the King's chair, and his majesty divested himself of his outer robe and walked to the ancient chair, while the choir sang Zadok's anthem. PLACING THE CROWN.

Later the archbishop had similar difficulty, owing to short sightedness, in placing the crown on the King's head. In fact, the choir started "God Save the King" while the Archbishop of Canterbury was still striving to place the crown on the ruler's and a great shout went up and the electric lights were turned on. JOYBELLS.

As the acclamations died away the clanging of the joybells, the noise of guns and the shouting of the people outside penetrated into the abbey, where the King still sat, motionless, his dazzling crown on his head and his scepter held firmly in his hand. After singing "Be strong and play the man," and the presentation of the Bible, the King advanced and knelt while he received the benediction. He then walked to the great throne, where he stood on the dais for the first time surrounded by nobles. The Archbishop of Canterbury followed, the King being obliged to stand while awaiting the arrival of the archbishop.

Having placed the King into his new throne the archbishop knelt and paid horage, the aged prelate scarcely being able to rise until the King assited him, and himself raised archbishop's hand from the steps of the throne. The archbishop, embroidered copes. During the singing seemed to be in a faint, had to prac-

The incident created considerable excitement, and several prelates rushed forward to help the primate. The next person to pay homage to His Majesty was the Prince of Wales, who knelt until King Edward held out his hand, which he kissed, after touching the crown as a sign of fealty. The Prince of Wales then started to return to his seat, when the drew him back and put his arms around him and kissed him. After this the King once more gave the prince his hand, this time to shake, and the hearty vigor of King Edward's grasp showed that his hand at any rate had report from Montreal, of the for-

The Duke of Norfolk (as earl marshal), accompanied by representa-tives of each grade of the nobility, read the oath beginning: "I, Duke of etc., do become your liege man of life and limb," etc. The respective representatives next touched the crown and kissed the King's cheek, the Duke of Norfolk being the only peer to read the oath. This portion of the service was considerably shortened.

And later on, when Violet returned to her room, she was delighted to find her cousin lookng so fresh and radiant. "What pretty hair you have, child," remarked Veronica later.

Violet only laughed. "Do you really think so? Mr. Maitland often declares that it looks as if I have been playing among the current bushes, but I think he likes it just the same," replied Violet innocently.

"I wanted you," he replied tenderly, "and you are more to me than all the people in the world!" But look at me," she said, shyly; "I do believe I am disfigured for life! Do you not think so?" And for an answer she was clasped in a warm embrace, and kisses were showered upon her. And later, when Maitland left, there was a newer and even softer expression in her eyes, a brighter and more winsome expression about her mouth. Her heart was happy and she went up the old oaken staircase humming the air of an old love song.

The Coronation.

The coronation has been accomplished, and the King has relieved public anxiety as to his ability to meet the physical requirements of the ceremony. As a spectacle it has been less Impressive than it would have been on the day first appointed; but while the colors have been toned down, it has gained in human interest, being enriched by the emotions of sympathy and gratitude, called out by his majesty's illness and his happy recovery. On this occasion the central figure of the ceremony appeals to millions not only as a sovereign, but as a fellow-man, who has passed through a period of suffering with courage and serenity, and who took great hazards in an effort to prevent a keen disappointment to the multitude which had gathered from all parts of the world to pay him tribute. It is the good fortune of King Edward, as it was of his mother, to enjoy the affection of his subjects, but apart from the personal element, the British people feel that in honoring the crown they are honoring themselves. The monarch is regarded as the Incorporation of the power and dignity of the Empire, and represents a thousand years of political concepts, so that the ceremony at Westminster Abbey today is not the glorification of an individual, but an expression of race consciousness, and an affirmation of the principles underlying the British constitution. For this reason, all who live under British free institutions, of which the crown is the symbol, will join in congratulations to the King, and in wishing him a long and unclouded reign. To his gracious consort, Queen Alexandra, is also given the homage of the hearts of her people.

Public Safety.

Our attention is drawn to this sublect by a report published in the Buffalo Express, made to the Minister of Public Works at Toronto, by Mr. Robert McCallum, the engineer for the Province of Ontario, with reference the Fort Erie ferry railway

According to Mr. McCallum's report the road is in a dangerous condition even after recent repairs are given full gredit. He finds the road improperly built in the first place-sharp curves, rails half a dozen different sizes and shapes, weights varying from eighty to forty pounds and the heights from 31/2 to 41/2 inches, and old when first used on this road. "Some of them are far from being straight, others are worn at the ends, and also in other places to such an extent as to render them, in my opinion, unfit to serve the intended purpose longer with a reasonable degree of safety. I found a piece of rail in the track only 41/4 inches long. In many places the ties are too much decayed to hold the spikes. In some instances ties have either never been put in, or if so, have decayed to such an extent as to disappear altogether." These and other similar objections he makes, and concludes by "From the foregoing it will be seen that I do not consider the railway in fit condition for passenger traffic, nor in my opinion will it be until the defects referred to have been

The Steel Combination.

The Birmingham correspondent the London Times confirms the report that an Anglo-Canadian steel combination has been formed. His information is that in includes Guest, Kean & Co., Bolckow, Vaughan & Co., Sin Christopher Furness and the Dominion Iron and Steel Company. The first rumor connected the Nova Scotia Steel Company with the deal, but this has been authoritatively denied. the Birmingham dispatch is correct, Guest, Kean & Co. are one of the largest fron and steel corporations in Great Britain, and operate several plants. Sir Christopher Furness is a great captain of industry, and last year spent several weeks in this country, looking over the field. The Dominion Iron and Steel Company is a young Canadian giant. It is the creation of American capital, but within the past year the controlling interest has passed into Canadian hands. The change was desirable, as there is now less danger of absorption by the United States Steel Trust. The Dominion Company promises to become the most formidable competitor of the American trust, owing to greater natural advantages, such as the proximity of limestone and coal to the smelters, a safe and commodious harbor at Sydney, and the possession of an almost inexhaustible bed of iron ore at a short distance, enabling raw material to be assembled at the lowest cost on the continent. In addition Cape Breton is better situated for the export trade than any steel center in the United States, being 1,232 miles nearer than Pittsburg to Liverpool. The phenomenal rise of this industry has been a great boon to the Maritime Provinces, and has already made Canada a world factor in iron and steel production. The Nova Scotia Steel Company is another great the springing up of Mr.

development, and equally striking Clergue's iron and steel enterprises at Sault Ste. Marie. It may be there has been no amalgamation of British and Canadian interests, as reported, but there is no doubt that the fron and steel resources of Canada are attracting the attention of British capitalists.

[From the Philadelphia Times.] When Edward VII. of England was an undergraduate at Oxford University he had an adventure which led a newspaper of that time to describe the "Prince as a Prisoner." It said that "not very far from Oxford, at a place called Steeple Barton, there was a farmer named Hedges, a man of much independence of character, commonly known as "Lord Chief Justice On one occasion the prince and his friends were out with the South Oxfordshire hounds, but, meeting with indifferent sport, they roof Farmer Hedges, and presently rid-ing into his farmyard. "Though Lost to Sight, to Memory Dear."

This beautiful and familiar line will be found in a song of two stanzas, written about the year 1700, by Ruthven Jerhyns, an obscure poet, and published in the Greenwich Magazine for Mariners.

Sweetheart, goodbye! The fluttering sall
Is spread to waft me far from thee;
And soon before the favoring gale
My ship shall bound across the sea.
Perchance, all desolate and forlorn,
These eyes shall miss thee many a year;
But unforgotten every charm—
Though lost to sight, to memory dear. Sweetheart, goodbye! One last embrace!
O cruel fate, two souls to sever!
Yet in this heart's most sacred place
Thou, thou alone, shall dwell forever.
And still shall recollection trace
In fancy's mirror, ever near,
Each smile, each tear, upon that face—
Though lost to sight, to memory dear.

[From the London Answers.] Lord Roberts once found himself the center of a circle of new friends in a London club. An examination of commercial books structed Mr. Coste, who accompanied not many years old reveals the fact me, to have surveys made of all the that the caligraphy of those now in middle years was much superior to that of the present day. There is also a dispute as to the respective merits of ordinary and "vertical" writing. But the real cause of the decadence in writing is in the now general use of the typewriter. Few people in offices do not use them, and it has been aswell. The same has been said of in the theory. The routine of writing lessons still continues as usual in the schools.

Ottawa, Aug. 8. - A statement of Canada's trade by countries has been prepared by the customs department. There is an increase in the trade of the Dominion with all the principal countries with which we deal. A feature of the statement is the steady growth in business with Britain. It will also be noticed that there is a big increase in the trade with Germany, Canada's third best customer, notwithstanding the adverse treatment accorded to us by the German Empire. The total imports for consumption in the fiscal year up to June 30 amounted to $202,791,595, as against $181,237,988 in the corresponding period of 1901. Following were some of the

RESPECTED LADY DEAD

Mrs. Mary Barclay Passes Away at Hyde Park.

One of London Township's oldest and nost respected residents passed away at Hyde Park this morning in the person of Mrs. Mary Barclay, widow of the late John Barclay. Mrs. Barclay was born in Scotland 84 years ago, and she came to Canada with her parents when a child. Her marriage to Mr. Barclay took place about 65 years ago and their long and happy married life and their long and nappy married life was terminated fifteen years ago by Mr. Barclay's death. The deceased lady was a life-long member of the Presbyterian Church, and by her exemplary life and character she had won many friends. One daughter and won many friends. One daughter and three sons mourn the loss of a good and loving mother, they being Mrs. John Fisher, of Hyde Park; William and Hugh Barclay, of British Columbia, and John Barclay, of Butte, Montana. Mrs. Yeo, of Westminster Township, is a sister of Mrs. Barclay. The furreral takes place at 4 nm. on Monneral takes place at 4 p.m. on Mon-day at Hyde Park. Rev. W. A. Wylat the game, "Say, Chimy, dis game day. gifs me a chill in de eyebrows."

Well, now for the game. A great crowd was in attendance, but not to see the game as much as to cheer Tommy Reycraft, the popular young man with the broad smile, because his team was winning, and he came near getting a couple of chances to distinguish himself. A small, delicate young man was playing second base; when he made that phenomenal slide, not to mention the condition of his bloomers, the vast throng began to yell such cute little pleasantries as "Oh. Charlie, Tillie is looking at you"; Aren't you lucky that little Robby isn't in London this week to say funny things to you." Little Charlie Tolmie did not care for the jibes of the crowd, however. He played on the winning

WESTERN ONTARIO.

Forest, Thedford, Arkona, Parkhill, Alisa Craig, Dresden and Lucan celebrate next Tuesday as civic holiday, and Wat-ford does similarly on the 14th. A singular accident happened a few miles east of Harrow, on the Lake Eric miles east of Harrow, on the Lake Eric Railroad, Thursday morning. Mrs. James Wright, wife of a well-known farmer, was driving into Harrow, and at the railway crossing failed to notice a freight train approaching at a rapid rate. The horse she was driving had just reached the crossing when the train whizzed by. The cylinder head struck the animal squarely on the neck and decapitated is as cleanly as though done with a knife. Mrs. Wright was uninjured.

Firemen's Demonstration.

Stratford, Ont., Aug. 9 .- The demonstrations here in connection with the Volunteer Firemen's Association was quite a success. A procession was formed, and proceeded to the Athletic Park, where the games were to take place. Shortly after the events were started rain commenced to fall, and continued throughout the day, making it unpleasant for everybody. Part of the programme was gone through with, and resulted as follows: Band competition-1 Milton, 2 Seaforth. Hose reel race-1 Paris, 2 St. Marys, 3 Thorold. Best dressed company-Thorold. There were many other attractions arranged for, but on account of the rain these events had to be called off.

THE CORONATION SERMON

Eloquent Discourse Delivered by Ven. ceive from God's minister the insignia Archdeacon Davis.

The coronation sermon was preached by Ven. Archdeacon Davis, whose text

II. Kings, xi., 12: Jehojada, the high priest, "brought forth the king's son, and put the crown upon him, and gave him the testimony; and they made him king, and clapped their hands, and said, God save the king."

In bidding you all welcome here today to take part in this sacred and solemn service, I must express my own deep regret that his Lordship the Bishop of Huron, who was to preach on this occasion, is absent, and that that duty has fallen to my lot. Had he been here to speak to us with his earnest eloquence and loyal patriotism, he would, I am sure, have moved our hearts. But though he is absent the Holy Spirit is present. Let us pray that he may solemnize our hearts and impress us very seriously with the culated to teach.

Its history goes back to about the year 616, when the Saxon King Sebert erected there a church, and dedicated it to St. Peter. With this church monasteries were built called Eastminster and Westminster. This Abbey of Westminster was destroyed by the Danes when they burnt London. It remained in its blackened ruin until restored by Edgar in 985. History tells us that Edward the Confessor pulled down the Church of Sebert, that had been patched and roofed by Edgar, and built a large minster. But the present abbey is not the one King Edward erected, though standing where it did. It was built by Richard III. and his son Edward I. about the middle of the thirteenth century. (I.Sam. x. i.). Again "Samuel took the horn of oil and anointed David in the midst of his brethren." (I. Sam. xvi. 13). Anointing with oil was then according to divine direction the form of setting

And as a Christian nation we be-lieve that God will, in answer to the repeated the Niocene Creed, and the prayers of his people, give divine grace to enable his servant to discharge his solemn duties. After the anointing the king kneels and the archbishop offers prayer and blessing over the consecrated sovereign.

Then Edward VII., being king Die gratia, by the grace of God, must reof his office. Then follows the pre-sentation of the sword of justice, the royal robe (implying that he is God's overseer), the golden orb (a round ball with a golden cross on top), which is to remind him "that the whole world subject to the power and empire of Christ our Redeemer," next the gold ring, and the archbishop says: "Receive this ring, the ensign of kingly dignity, of defense of the catholic faith," then the scepter, which represents rule and power to execute justice, then comes the crowning, with the prayer that God may crown the sovereign "with all princely virtues, which may adorn the high station wherein Thou hast placed him." And the rubric adds: "At the sight whereof the people with loud and repeated shouts cry, God save the King."

Brethren, it is our pride that the British crown has has it many precious stones. in It is studded with the glorious brilliants of justice, righteousness and solemn lessons such an event is cal- freedom. It is a crown bright with the rich jewels of a free people's love, The coronation of King Edward VII. loyalty and devotion. It is a crown content and secure. It is a crown studded with the memories of those victories which bless mankind. It sparkles with illustrious names, such as Crossley, the philanthropist, Agincourt, with about 8,000 Britons, gloriously defeated the French army over 100,000; Blenheim and Ramilles, Corunna and Trafalgar, Waterloo and Inkerman. May we ever be loyal to that crown and prize the achievements ed in this event. A coronation is a right. After the crowning comes the very solemn and sacred event. It is presentation of the Holy Bible, the most valuable thing this world affords, wherein is wisdom, wherein is the royal law, wherein are the lively oracles of God." The Bible is and must ever remain the bulwark of religious liberty and British freedom. When on the death of Mary, Queen Elizabeth ascended the would give back to the people the Holy Bible. She prized it herself, read it carefully and prayerfully, and gave that precious treasure to her subjects. May we ever value that pre-cious Book and read it as God's message guide of our King's life and the rule of his kingdom, so may it be of all our actions. I must not omit to mention that this solemn service is not concluded without the Holy Communion. Of all our kings, it is said, only two, John and James II., did not communicate on this most solemn day in their lives, and each of these two reigns ended in disaster. For this reception the King lays aside his crown and with becoming reverence kneels at the holy table to parhis Lord's dying love. Oh, that he and we, too, may feed upon Christ in our hearts by faith! Earnestly let us pray that King Edward's reign may be long and happy; that it may be a time of peace and prosperity, and that true religion may flourish and the Gospel of Jesus Christ be preached to all peoples.

How lovingly did our of the nation for the recovery of the King. The recovery was more rapid than we dared even hope for. more prayer went up for him in his iliness than there would have the hearts of his people. And it has brought the nation nearer to Saviour's throne of mercy. He has shown marvelous courage and true British pluck in all his intense suffering. He is worthy of our admiration. From the time of his first speech as King of England, delivered January when he said: "My first melancholy duty is to announce to you the death of my beloved mother, the Queen," and always to walk in her footsteps," he has proven himself worthy of our loyal affection and most sincere respect. As a Christian people, let God's past mercies encourage us to pray for future blessings. Remember, a Christian nation cannot be made of unchristian people. Let us, brethren, be and bowed heads, Canon Dann de true and loyal to our King. Above all, livered the following prayer, which let us be true, loyal and obedient to our Heavenly Ruler, the Lord Jesus Christ. May we each be the redeemed Edward, but to each one of us here

THE PROCLAMATION.

The congregation again sang a hymn, "Now Thank We All Our God," at the conclusion of the sermon, and Archdeacon Davis said to the people: "Sirs,-I proclaim unto you Edward, the son of her majesty the late Most Gracious Queen Victoria, as our undoubted King.

"This day the King and Queen are anointed and crowned in manner following:

pertaining to his high office, to govern the people of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the dominions therete belonging, according to the statutes in parliament agreed on and to the respective laws and customs of the same; to cause law and justice, in mercy, to be executed in all his judgments; to the utmost of his power to maintain the laws of God, the true profession of the Gospel, of England, and the doctrine, worship, discipline and government thereof as by law established in England.

"Then his majesty is solemnly anointed as kings, priests and prophets of old were thus made and consecrated to teach and govern the people of Israel.

"He then is girded with the sword of justice, invested with the Imperial robes, presented with the orb, the ring, the scepter of the cross, the scepter of the dove, the ensign of the kingly power and justice. "Then his majesty is crowned in the ancient chair of St. Edward.

"And being crowned, he is present-ed with the Holy Bible, the most valuable thing this world affords, wherein is wisdom, wherein is the royal law. wherein are the lively oracles of God. "After the coronation of the King the Queen also is anointed and crowned. 'And finally the King receives the homage of the peers and bishops, who have been summoned for that purpose.'
When he stopped speaking, the congregation rose and sang the National

Return of the King and Queen to Buckingham Palace.

London, Aug. 9 .- The departure of the King and Queen from the Abbey was signaled by another salute, and the massed bands playing "God Save To the Editor of The Advertiser: the King." The entire route of their majesties' return to the palace was marked by scenes of enthusiasm similar to those which greeted their progroute through clubland and on Constitution Hill giving the hundreds of thousands of persons occupying the stands and windows an opportunity of greeting the newly-crowned King and his consort before they re-entered Buckingham Palace, which they did in the midst of remarkable scenes, the entire crowd from Constitution downward joining in singing the National Anthem. These persons will do well to get signed evidence, which they can produce in future years, or they will be suspected of untruth when they tell about the fish jumping into their boats. Many a good man's reputation has unjustly suffered because something has happened to him out of the common experience. Why did the pike jump into the canoe. Every fisherman will know why, but others will doubt the story because they do not know. They will say that the fish could have no desire to get into the boat. Nor emen had it any such desire. It was making the a rush at a fly or an escaping minnow and did not see the canoe gliding up. With so many craft on the bay, and so many fish jumping up, the only wonder is that more of them do not do the trick. However, two cases in one week is not a bad record.

Long ago, or long it seems now, though few years have passed since go next. then, Helen played with her doll under a great elm tree which shook its branches in front of a southern home and cast its shade across the broad veranda and Corinthian pillars. few years went by and Helen's skirts lengthened, and her hair, which in former summers had been left to curl, was knotted on her head, and she put in her time with hammocks and books when the great tree threw its shadow along the house. Then she had callers, Helen did, gentlemen friends of her early youth, and gradually they fell away to two, who became suitors and rivals. One was long of face and hair-which was straight-and talked of authors and flowers. The other was tall, had smiles for everything, his curly hair dancing over a shining face. Mrs. Gray liked this dandy of the South. Helen was more favorably impressed with the former. Their names were Frederick Hudson and Harold Stetson. Frederick was a young attorney of the town, and Harold—well, he had nothing to do, and did nothing, for his father was

When the bells rang out for Christmas Helen and Harold walked slowly up the aisle of the church while the organ piped out its wedding march. Bright were the lights and rich the gowns: beautiful were the flowers and sparkling the gems that night. all the tears were tears of joy and all that was said were congratulations. But in the back of the church sat a young man, somewhat by himself, and watched the march to and from the altar, and who had heard the words that made the two one for all time. After the procession had passed out of the door he, too, rose and went away. It was Frederick Hudson, law-yer, but the place knew him no more, for that night he went away into the North and the snow.

One night in the early spring fol-lowing the wedding Harold was brought home by his companions. He was breathing hard, and when Helen stooped over him the men laughed and she smelled liquor on her husband. From then on he drank hard and sat late before the green cloth. After a time old Mr. Stetson died and Harold was left with the mills and the estate of his father. But he ran through it all like the fire that got in his cotton gin, and had nothing. Helen have a thing to add, for she had given him all she had and all her mother had left, even to the house with the elm tree where the girl had spent her babyhood.

As for working, Harold knew little and cared less. The young man thought if he could get away from his associates he could get to work, and even if it was that of a day laborer it would be the "entering wedge." It was that which caused them to sell sire to get away from all who knew them that drove them to Chicago, where for a time they struggled against fate and where Harold fell among those who were like the assothe woman was summoned to the morgue. The Kentucky Stock Farm staff writer, "Hawley," bears down hard on the judges at Detroit for allowing heats to be laid up, and in the course of his remarks he says: "Had it not been for what must be called a state of lethargy in the judges' stand, the doubt on a story related by another, meeting would have been one of the but quite naturally selects from his most perfect ever held in this country. own adventures an incident quite as While it is very hard to criticise the surprising as the one he has just lisjudges' stand, especially when occupled by men of such position, integrity and fairness as those that presided but stating bald effects. during the late meeting, yet it must not be passed, and in justice to the Grosse Pointe last week to lay before made a brilliant run in the stretch, were openly committed and the amazand won by a head, Joe Frey beating ing laxity of discipline in the stand. Heats were laid up in the most flagrant manner, horses were driven into second, third or fourth position that could have won, and to can the climax, in the 2:09 pace, absolute highwaymanry was at large. It seemed as if Tracy, the escaped convict, or Claud Duvall had come to the track and were carrying on their nefarious practices." Perhaps this is putting the natter pretty strongly, but it is quite certain that the practice of laying up heats is being pretty vigorously worked in such races as are decided by the three-in-five system. It will be news to most horsemen who have not been following Grand Circuit to learn that Elastic Pointer, the fast brother to Star Pointer, in John Hussey's stable. is blind. At Cleveland this horse paced a mile in 2:051/2, and if Hussey can get him to use his speed in company he ought to take a very fast record. Elastic Pointer is not the only horse Hussey is having trouble with, for he has another very fast one that has been acting badly in his races. This is Metellas, 2:11, by Mambrino King, a horse than can, when so minded, trot around 2:08, but that persists in single footing when asked to score down to the word. Just what caused Metellas to take it into his head to cut up in this manner is difficult to say, for when he was in the stable the Buffalo trainer, Charley Eldridge, he appeared to be a model in his havior. If Hussey does get him going kindly for him, Dare Devil will have to take second place in Mambrino

[Breeder and Sportsman.] The judges' stand has been a subject for more discussion than any other part of the racing game, but it will not be out of place at the present time behind Gun Fire. The card was made to say a word or two more. The harness racing season will open soon, and there were very large fields, but there it is very important that nothing be done on any association track in Caliing done as well as punishing those who do it after it is done. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure on all occasions, and this is as applicable to the facing game as to any By placing men in the judges' stand who know the rules "and knowng uare maintain," much good can be accomplished, but associations should go beyond this. There should be at least one judge appointed whose principal duty shall be to keep his eye out for jobs and crooked work of every kind, and to nip them in the bud. every kind, and to nip them in the bud. The important personage who sits in the stand and looks wise, may be as honest as the sun, but unless he has Canadian defender, Trident, in the "job" shown him he never sees it. THE AFTERNOON NEWSPAPER. The splendid growth of the evening paper is, however, in complete accord with the fitness and reason of things. We are a busy and strenuous people. We go to work early, and have no time in the morning for newspaper reading. We glance at the headlines, read hastily a few items, and turn to "the or-ders of the day." Who can stop to as-similate the editorial comments, the book reviews, the dramatic and musical notices, the correspondence, etc., of a Because our Watch stock is always morning paper? Even if the evening papers did not print first the greater proportion of the news, they would be paired. valued for their departments, editorials and elaboration of the news. The morning newspaper is a necessity of modern existence, the evening paper is a comfort, a joy and a blessing. Necessaries we accept as a matter of course; the comforts and luxuries of civilization we appreciate and cherish. To progressive people luxuries are the real necessaries of life. Men who think, study and digest the recorded news of the day—political, literary, industrial, artistic-may "take" any number of papers, but they read a good afternoon paper which prints all the fit news, and honestly, rationally and candidly comments upon it.—From the Chicago Evening Post.

No. 3 Committee Content to Work On Own Judgment.

City Engineer Sought to Restrain Them, But Was Not Heeded.

The members of No. 3 committee were informed by the city engineer last night that nearly ten miles of cement walks, the limit fixed by the council for construction in one year, had been reached, and he suggested that they consult No. 1 committee and the city auditor before putting down more walks. No. 2 committee decided, however, that they are quite competent to judge when they should stop, without any advice from No. 1 or Mr. Jew-ell. They said in effect that they will construct more walks if they feel like it, which at present they do. In this connection it is interesting to know that a larger portion of the funds of this committee have been spent already this year than is at all usual. The city engineer has power over his department, where most of the money is spent, and in other years, with the chairman, has kept the expenditure down. During his long illness this year the committee had a free hand, and used it.

The committee awarded tenders for three new sewers as follows: St. James street, Ben Johnson, $575, and 22 cents for side drains: Colborne street, Harding & Leathorne, $1,326 84 and 22 cents foot for side drains: High street. Harding & Leathorn, 80 cents foot. Ald. Fawn Island, lying in the St. Clair River, abreast of Marine City, Mich., is to be the object of bitter litigation between rival claimants. The island is located on the Canadian side of the national boundary line, and for years has been in possession of Dr. Parker, of Marine City, under a title from the Ontario Government, obtained in 1875. An earlier deed, however, from the English Government in 1852 is said to have granted the property to John Miller. A controversy has always existed over the legal ownership, though the rights of the Miller claimants have never been actively asserted, because the island formerly had not been considered of much value. It is said, however, that its prospects of being developed into choice summer resort property are very promising, and the Parker title is now to be contested. George Roberts, of Marine City, has purchased the title of the heirs of John Miller, grantee from the British Government, and will attempt to possess himself of the property. tween rival claimants. The island is himself of the property.

HEAVY FALL SALES INDICATED

Manufacturers Are Not Making Any Concessions-The Situation on the Other Side.

Toronto, Aug. 9.-Bradstreet's weekly review says: At London there is a fair movement in wholesale trade for the fall. Country retailers have experienced a better demand for seasonable goods since the first of the month, and have been placing some liberal orders for the fall. The outlook for the fall business is excellent. Values are firmly held. Country remittances are fairly satisfactory.

There has been a good movement in trade circles at Hamilton this week. The orders from near by points, as well as from the Northwest, are satisfactory, and travelers' reports indicate that there will be a large sorting trade done this year in fal land winter lines. In Toronto this week there has been a fair movement in wholesale trade for this time of the summer, when many business men are away on holidays. Orders for the fall are keeping up well, travelers' and mail orders being quite liberal for the summer holiday season. The general outlook seems to favor a considerable expansion in the demand for most lines the coming season, and the retailers are making ample preparations for a larger turn-over the next six months. Values of staple goods are firmly held. The manufacturers are not making price concession, and the wholesale trade are content to hold stocks at value and not try to force sales. Payments are very fair for August. The demand for money is fair for this season, and will improve later on. Rates are steady. VICTORY FOR British Court Gave a Decision in Their Favor.

ANOTHER STRIKE AT HAMILTON

Toronto Musicians Want More Pay-Miners Will Appeal to President Roosevelt.

London, Aug. 8. - The morning papers discuss with great warmth today the decision handed down by Justice Bigham in the King's bench division of the high court of justice yesterday in a case where the Welsh Coal Owners' Association sued the Miners' Federation for $500,000 damages for ordering stop days without consulting the mine owners. Formerly stop days had been mutually arranged by a sliding scale committee, but in this case the men acted independently. Justice Bigham decided in favor of the defendants on the ground that there was no malice in the action of the men, who believed a reduction in the output would be a benefit.

The liberal labor organizations nail the justice's decision as a victory for labor. The Conservative newspapers urge that the dispute be carried to a higher court in the hope of obtaining compelled to haul it down. a reversal on the ground that Justice Bigham's decision places enormous power in the hands of trades unions. MICHIGAN COAL STRIKE SETTLED Saginaw, Mich., Aug. 8.—The coal miners' strike has finally been settled. An agreement was signed Wednesday afternoon at a conference of the state board of arbitration. The miners' committee decided to adopt the scale substantially agreed on July 2, when President Mitchell, of the national organization was here. The contested question of car pushing was held in abeyance until the next annual meeting of the operators. The terms of

DENT. Wilkesbarre, Pa., Aug. 8. - President Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers, in an interview, said with reference to the decision of Judge Goff in the habeas corpus proceedings, against the miners in West Virginia:

The only thing to do now is to make an appeal to President Roosevelt for the pardon of the men in jail, and this will probably be done at once."

MUSICIANS WANT MORE PAY. Toronto, Aug. 8.—Unless the managers of the five theaters in this city come down with an advance to the orchestral players and inaugurate other reforms, including the conferring of absolute control upon the leaders as to the choice and control of the men, there may be trouble before the opening of the fall season, which begins as early as Aug. 18 at the Toronto Opera House. The advance asked is from $15 to $17 50 a week at theaters which have a daily matinee, and a proportionate increase where only two matinees a week are given. Another demand, which it is said will be made, is that houses which will seat 1,500 persons, shall have an orchestra of not less than nine

STRIKE AT HAMILTON.

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 7. — A committee of three from the Electrical Workers' Union waited on General Manager Hawkins, of the Cataract Power Company, today. The union's representative stated that there was no prospect of settling the wage dispute by arbitration, owing to the difficulty in securing a third arbitrator, and it was proposed that representatives of the union and the company endeavor to settle the matter among themselves. Mr. Hawkins, however, thought arbitration was the most satisfactory way to settle the difficulty, and nothing resulted from the conference. The climax was reached this evening, when the night shift failed to report for duty, which means that a general strike of electrical workers has been ordered. At this afternoon's confer-ence Manager Hawkins told the repre-searching inquiry into the matter.

sentatives of the union that the company intended to stick to the former agreement to arbitrate, and refused to interfere with the arbitrators, claiming that it was no fault of theirs if the arbitrators selected could not agree upon a third man. The men gave the company until six o'clock to settle the trouble, but no action was taken, and a strike was ordered. Between 40 and 50 men are affected by the trouble.

THE OWNERSHIP OF MARCUS ISLAND

A Question That May Lead to The Ex-Premier Will Shortly Leave International Trouble.

JAPANESE SEND A WARSHIP

To Head Of a United States Expedition - Instructions to the American Captain.

Honolulu, Aug. 2, via San Francisco, Aug. 8 .- According to the Honolulu men who are interested in the Marcus fixtures which were allowed to remain Island guano expedition, against which Japan has sent a war vessel, as reported by the last advices received from the States, the vessel which left here for the island carried a complement of Mauser rifles, and her captain had instructions from the company to plant the American flag on the island and keep it floating until Captain A. A. Rosehill, the discoverer of the island, who left his claim to it on a cocoanut tree on Marcus Island in 1889, is in command of the expedition. The company's claim is based on this title, which is on record in the State department in Washington.

Honolulu, Aug. 2, via San Francisco, Aug. 8 .- No intimation that the vessel left here with arms on board was given out until the news was received that Japan had laid claim to the island and had dispatched a war vessel there. Colonel Thomas Fitch then made public the instructions given to Capt. Rosehill, which, while designed to prevent any conflict, were intended to compel the Japanese to allow the Americans to land or to use force to drive them away.

Capt. Rosehill's instructions from the company are to inform the Japanese on Marcus Island that his expedition making a scientific investigation the value of the guano deposit of the island, and attempt to make a peaceful landing. In the event that Japanese still refuse to allow him to land, (Rosehill is to sail away out of sight of the island and return under cover of darkness, land an armed force and raise the American flag, and keep it up until it is torn down by a superior force. At the same time the captain was told to avoid a conflict in every way possible.

In the event of his encountering a Japanese war vessel, the commander of the expedition is to present his credentials as the discoverer of the island and the agent of the Marcus Island Guano Company, and to state that the object of his expedition is to make a scientific examination of the island for the company. If the island was found to be of value, the matter of ownership is to be referred to the United States and Japanese Governments. If the officers of the war vessel still refused to allow a landing, Capt. Rosehill is instructed to start ashore with an armed force in a boat flying the American flag, and to attempt a landing, and carry out the purposes of the expedition until physically restrained. The schooner commanded by Rosehill is the Julia E. Whalen. She has on board a crew of nine and a taxidermist, W. A. Bryan, of the Bishop Museum, Honolulu, and T. F. Sedgwick, of the United States Agricultural Station, who went to make an examination of the guano deposits.

DEATHS ON TROOPSHIP. A dispatch to the Times from Melbourne states that the army transport ship Dayton Grange has arrived there with two thousand troops on board. The men are said to have been greatly overcrowded, and illness was widespread, the sanitary provision being deficient. Five deaths occurred during the voyage, and ninety men are now in the hospital. The war office will be asked to make a readiness for the coronation. The short route of the procession is decorated at some points more brilliantly than before. The main thoroughfares, however, miles of which were gay with flags and bunting in June, are now stripped, except for the illumination in place. Westminster is the center of activity. The chief stands in the vicinity of St. Margarets have been redecorated and Piccadilly has been refurnished with crimson Venetian masts, supporting trophies and flags, joined by streamers of gay bunting. The same general scheme prevails in Pall Mall. Many clubs' stands have disappeared. The private stands, recovered in crimson, are doing a fair business, prices for seats running from $10 to $50, with the cheaper class sold out. Westminster Abbey received the precious regalia, which was taken under a strong guard from the tower, and also a wealth of gold and silver plate from

CORONATION EVE. The eve of the coronation of King Edward VII. was marked by large crowds, which wandered somewhat aimlessly through the semi-illuminated down Whitehall, where the Canadian arch was the center of attraction, around Westminster Abbey and along the Strand, where the sidewalks were blocked with the populace. The people were deterred from any of rowdyism by the acute resigns collection of the recent postponement of the coronation, and those who had seen the unrestrained exhibitions which occurred on the slightest pretext during war times could not fail to notice the different temperament shown tonight

The brilliancy of the illumination held the country visitors to the city so spellbound that vehicular traffic became more and more difficult as the night wore on.

Until a very late hour the stand speculators did a thriving business and around those stands occupying good locations there were lines of people anxious to get seats at the last moment. Many of the thousands London, Aug. 8.-Everything is in who walked through the streets exhibited unmistakable signs of intention to sit up all night in the hope of securing a free coign of vantage from which to view the procession.

A CITY OF UNREST. In an undramatic sort of way Lonwas transformed by the multitudes wishing to see any part of the ceremonies into a city of great unrest. The idea of sleep or an adequate allowance of time for rest was quite given up by the people in the streets and underlying this intensity of expectation there was curious nervousness among the majority lest they should awaken from their shortened slumbers to find the great event once more postponed.

Among the many incidents of the night, one of the most curious occurred at Scotland Yard, where a Scotch magnate, who had received a sudden elegraphic invitation to be present at Westminster Abbey with the proviso that he appear in court dress, appealed at a late hour to the police to help hire or borrow the clothes necessary for admittance.

SALISBURY EXCUSED. Acting upon medical advice, Lord Salisbury obtained the King's permission to absent himself from the coronation. The ex-premier will shortly leave for the continent. One of the most curious incidents of the coronation will be the appearance of the uniform of the Salvation Army in Westminster Abbey. Edward directed that a representative of the Salvation Army should be invited to the coronation, and Bramwell Booth was appointed to attend the ceremony. A difficulty arose about the uniform he should wear, and the earl uniform he should wear, and the earl and one of the wealthiest. This is a marshal, the Duke of Norfolk, intimated he was not authorized to re-so than newspapers always take. But cognize the uniform of the Salvation every reader is supposed to have sense Mr. Booth thereupon wrote to King Edward requesting permission to wear the uniform of the army, and his majesty readily gave consent. Mr. Booth will appear in the uniform of his rank of the Salvation Army.

About 350 natives have already been procured, and these were awaiting a boat to take them to Delagoa Bay, when a Portuguese war-ship appeared and a party was sent ashore from the vessel to round up a few natives. By mistake some of the natives engaged by the association were taken, which caused a stampede among the others. It will take some time to correct the bad im-pression which this made on the natives. With a loud bellow of rage the bull turned quickly, and with good luck hooked the 'gator on the side, half turning him over. The saurian raged and bellowed and finally managed to get loose. He then struck the bull again a sounding whack, half knocking him down. Following this, he darted up and caught the bull with his jaws on the nose. The bull beilowed with pain and stamped on the gator's head. For a few minutes they plunged around and then the bull got loose. With more caution he plunged at the 'gator and managed to gore him badly, partly ripping his side open. The 'gator had enough now and tried to crawl away, but the bull kept on pushing and goring till the 'gator was nearly dead. He then jumped on the bloody carcass, furiously stamping on it till it was a shape'ess mass.

Meanwhile the cows were having a aged things differently, and had affairs more their own way. They ran toward the 'gator and, watching their chance, jumped on him. As his lordship, with eral offer he has tendered the star. As his lordship, with her own consent, had previously closed the bargain for her on these terms, he is not surprised that an adherence to the contract should be required, and he says as much, pretty dedically.

"Bah!" returns the lady, with an emphasis on the monosyllable that an Englishwoman could never effect: "he seems to forget that I make my own affairwho saved him last year from bankruptcy? who filled the house night after night, though Coronella sang faise through a whole opera, and Tamboretto was as hoarse as a crow? back."

Holyhead was inexpressibly provoked.

There is scheming and there is intrigue behind the imitative scenes in a theater as within the actual walls of a court. Who knows what an amount of thouble, and civility, and subservience, foreign to his real nature, he had lavished to effect the arrangement which he now saw on the point of subversion Bravoura entertained no mean opinion of her own powers; in fact, it was whispered that the celebrated singer considerably overrated her thients, and the manager was satisfied that he could have got sweeter notes for less money elsewhere. He was willing, however, to oblige Holyhead, her was he averse to a name that still looked so attractive in the bills; accordingly, he concluded a treaty of extreme liberality on his own part, and now he the imitative scenes in a theater,

"You will not," said he, controlling his temper with an effort: "you will think better of it, signora, if only on my account."

adieu," he added, moving toward the beil.

The signora's hand shook visibly, and her deep bosom heaved under her somewhat untidy morning dress. This was not what she wanted at all. She had no more intention of going to Italy than she had of losing her theatrical engagement, but she wanted to be implored to stay, and that her acquiescence should be made a great favor of, and serve as a pretext for the indulgence of a thousand future whims, including a certain fairy carriage with cream-colored pontes, on which she had set her heart. She took, moreover, a delight in tormenting Holyhead, which none but her own sex can understand. She was under countless obligations to him. He had stood her friend for years, and she liked him just well enough to enjoy vexing him. She snatched the bell-rope from his hand, and pointed to a chair in her noblest tragedy attitude, with stiffened arm and down-turned wrist. down-turned wrist.

"Sit down!" she screamed. "We do not part like this! How dare you use me thus?" Then the storm burst, in French, in English, in Italian, in woman's universal English, in Italian, in woman's universal language of gasps and sobs and tears. She accused him of heartlessness, of injustice, of mistrust; in one breath of neglecting her interests; in the next of domineering over her actions. She would never have come to England but for him. He had never influenced her in the least in England or elsewhere, and never should; but it was cruel, it was base, it was infamous, not to advise her now in her need, and assist her in her begotiations. Then she ingenious put him in the wrong, yowing it was his overrated the wrong, vowing it was his overrated opinion of her that made her break with her good friend the manager; that it was her good friend the manager; that it was in accordance with what she believed to be his wishes that she had written to increase her demands; but how could she know what he liked if he never told her, if he never came near her, if he neglected her, and left her to do everything for herself? What had she to amuse her? Whom did she ever see? What a life was hers—triste, stupefying, embetante. Theaters, diamonds, carriages, picnics, what were they to her? It was all Holyhead's fault, and she never could forgive him, not if he was to go down on his knes

We need scarcely say that "Nobs." as his familiars called him, was a most un-We need scarcely say that Roos. as his familiars called him, was a most unlikely person to assume that humiliating posture. He did nothing of the kind, but he gave in, nevertheless. By dint of promises and assurances, and a little scolding and a good deal of soothing, the signora was induced for the present to postpone her departure for her native land, under the express stipulation, however, that she should not delay her flight an hour after her-engagement was concluded. She longed so for Italy, dear Italy—the very day her theater closed she should start. How fervently Holyhead hoped she would!

The fact is, he had endured rather too many of these scenes. If constant dropping will wear away a stone, it is no less true that the continual action of the element has, on the other hand, a petrify-ment has, on the other hand, a petrifying tendency on the softer substances, and the fair sex are prone to forget that the most alarming demonstrations, when and the fair sex are prone to forget that the most alarming demonstrations, when often repeated, must fail in their object of intimidation. Even the kettledrum is powerless to rouse the metal of the equine philosopher on whose shoulders it was usually placed, and Holyhead's sentiments of late in a passage-of-arms with Bravoura had been simply suggestive of weariness while it lasted and relief when it was over.

weariness while it lasted and rener when it was over.

Yet he had not strength of mind to free himself at once from the influence exerted by this overbearing and not very attractive woman. A thousand times he resolved that nothing would be so easy as to break the imaginary bonds which held him; a thousand times, from mingled motives of good-nature, indolence and a certain manly consideration of the signora's amour propre, he paused on the eve of a rupture. He knew he had but to say a word, and it was done; yet he hesitated, and every day the task became more difficult. My little playfellow informs me that if My little playfellow informs me that if you choose to be at the trouble of taking bold Chantlcleer from his roost in his first sleep, and will bring the astonished bird into a lighted room, you may amuse yourself with the following experiment: Place his beak upon the table, and from that beak draw a line with chalk in any direction you please, and the infatuated fowl will not move his head from the spot until the chalk be rubbed out. Doubless he believes firmly that he is held fast by the nose. My little playfellow cites this instance as an example of the want of wisdom in the gallinaceous tribe, but when my little playfellow gets older he may possibly see parallel cases of helplessness in the unfeather. low gets older he may possibly see parallel cases of helplessness in the unfeathered biped. I think I know of more than one whose terror is imaginary, and yet restrictive as the line of white chalk—who lays down his foolish beak in some inconvenient spot, and though everyone else knows him to be as free as air, will not helieve he can move an inch from else knows him to be as free as air, will not believe he can move an inch from it to save his life. Samson snapped the strongest fetters of the Philistines like withy bands, and yet I have little doubt that Delilah could have held and bound the champion fast with a thread of her golden hair. Habit and indolence combined will sometimes weave a tie enduring as the very handcuff of necessity herself

Holyhead was a widower: like many another such, the failure of his first "venture." to use Mr. Weller's appropriate expression, had rather stimulated than dampad his hopes of a happier future. In his position, manly, good-looking, with a large fortune, a peeress' correct at his disposal, he need have had little trouble in selecting some fair sirl from any London ballroom, who would have been willing to share these advantages; but it is almost as difficult to choose from too many as too few. Like the man who looks for a straight stick in the wood, his lardship found himself. wood, his lordship found himself iching the boundary of his quest withreaching the boundary of his cless with-cut soving exactly what he wanted, and while one was too forward, another too shy, a third somewhat remartie, and a fourth a little affected, he had gradually eccustomed himself to the society of Bravoura and her set till his male riends opined in their discrimination that "Nobe would never marry at all."

He had his own ideal, revertheless, as most mer have. Helvheed's was an arterior and the more come to then handsome, more frank than forward, young fresh, untutored, and there could scarcely be found two individuals so different as the Signora Bravoura, of all the principal theaters in Europe, and Miss Isabella Jones, Verbena Villa, Regent's Park. I do not affirm that Lord Holyhead traced the least-resemblance between them as he rode slowly away down the long perspective of Portland Place.

Portland Place.

Bella goes home rather fluttered and pleased with her morning walk; rather more impatient than usual of the narrowing circumstances which she foresees must ere long shut her completely out from those brilliant circles of which she has had an occasional glimpse. She is the last young woman on earth to plead guilty to nerves, yet the parrot's screams, appear more discordant than usual and she covers him up with a shawl, much to his disgust, and leaving him in total darkness, with a crust and a lump of sugar, at eleven o'clock in the day. The aiderman's breakfast must be prepared, and she must herself preside at that meal, supplying his wants with her own hands, and lending a patient ear to his details concerning his gout and other infirmities, glad at any sacrifice to keep him off the distressing subject that is nearest both their hearts. Gout is not an amusing topic for a girl of twenty, nor is it advisable for a patient of three-score to dwell upon the various symptoms of his malady; but when there is a skeleton in the house, even the proprietors are fain to cover it up with whatever rags come most readily to hand; and the nearest relatives had better drivel on in the emptiest of conversation, acting their several parts with studious forbearance, than advert to a topic on which they are sure to disagree. After breakfast she takes him out for a walk in the brightest part of the day. The aiderman, like most energetic men, is an extremely willful and obstinate patient, one of those who resolutely decline the pill unless it be sufficiently gilded; and although the doctor tells him walking exercise is indispensable, without Bella's arm and Bella's company he could scarcely be induced to step over the threshold. So the good daughter walks out with him day after day, postponing all her own little occupations and amusements to the convenience of papa.

I think the old seldom sufficiently appreciate the forbearance and attentions of the young. Filial duty apart, I think I ought to feel under considerable obligations to my junior when he puts off his pleasures or his excitements to sit and listen to my platitudes, when he consents to sacrifice the poetry of his life to my unquestionable prose. His society is to me like some reviving cordial, a sip of the cup that was once so strong and sparkling, that I drained so greedily, with such a noble thirst. Mine to him must, I fear, be at best but an anodyne, a draught that affects him as would "the drowsy syrups of the east." He is a willing listener; alas! I fear I ride him on occasion much too hard. I marvel he does not yawn at that story I have told him so often about Brummel and the Brighton coach. I wonder whether he really believes in my short-tailed gray horse, or the retriever that was drowned the day we heard of Waterloo, or my famous "inning" at St. Albans, off Catapult's bowling, when the last of the Caesars was a boy? Does he consider me a deliberate and circumstantial liar, or only a fond, foolish old man, whose memory runs away with him? At least, he is patient under the infliction, kind, gentle and considerate; at least, I owe him thanks for riveting one of those links I think the old seldom sufficiently ap gentle and considerate; at least, I owe him thanks for riveting one of those links which are parting so fast between myself and the world that is passing away from me. When he goes back to his horse, or his cricket, or his sweetheart, he will not, I think, be the less light-hearted, or the least successful, that he has smoothed a few yards of the old man's down-hill path toward his grave.

Rusticus expectat dum defluit amnis. The crossing of Oxford street, when they extended their walk so far, is always to Bella a subject of grave and nervous responsibility. He is indeed much altered; he has acquired that anxious, restless look which so soon stamps age on the countenance; and had it not been for the full, sweet voice, pleasing and musical as ever, even Bella would have failed to recognize him.
She blushed, however, as she did so.
Bella's blushes were easily forthcoming when she was interested, and, rather to when she was interested, and, rather to her own surprise, she asked him news of John Gordon in the very first sentence. I have my own opinion that, while she did so, Miss Jones found out some hing she had never suspected before.

There was something in his tone that struck both his listeners, although each struck both his listeners, although each struck both his listeners, although each was naturally preoccupied with the intelligence it conveyed. Bella's heart beat fast as she thought she was so soon to see John Gordon, yet she was a little surprised it did not beat faster; and I question if she looked forward to the interview with half the anxiety of her father. father.

Nevertheless, the first thought of the kind-hearted old man was for his young

Gilbert laughed, but it struck even Bella that there was something very forced and hollow in his laugh.

"No," he answered, speaking through his set teeth, like a man in pain; "I have something to do first. I cannot stay. I am glad to have seen you. I must not wait any longer Good-bye. Bella and her father hastened homeward to the Regent's Park. On their way they encountered Lord Holyhead once again, and Bolla's dark eves brightened considerably as she smiled her acknowledgments of his lordship's very marked and Actaratic solute. She tring marked and deferential salute. A year ago she could not have faced John Gordon half so coolly after an faced John Gordon half so coolly after an absence of eight-and-forty hours. Do not blame her therefor. We cannot all be mirrors of constancy and fidelity. In a world of change like ours, it is surely better to be less immutable than impressionable, to be more allye to the influence of the present than the past. It may be heresy in love, but it is sound commonsense, nevertheless, in common life. Shall everything around you change—the trees, climate, the surface of the country? Shall you, yourself, as your doctor tells you, lose your own corporeal identity, by the process of waste and supply, once in every seven years, and shall your senin every seven years, and shall your sentiments and affections; madam, undergo ne corresponding mutations? Forbid it all the prescriptive rights and privileges of womanhood! Remember his seneschal's sage advice to the noble Moringer:

For a certain space of time, how long or how snort they never afterward ansummer remembered, neither spoke more than a few commonplace words of courteous greeting. She had expected him all day. Well she knew that he would hurry to her the very instant he arrived in London, and her unselfish heart ached more painfully for his misery than her own. She had desired that he might be admitted; she had resolved to grant him this one interview, to use her gentle influence as far as possible in softening the blow that was mevitable; and then never to see him again. It was and then never to see him again. It was almost a rehef to perceive by the expression of his face that he must have made the same discovery as herselr; it hightened her task ever such a little. How different from the meeting she had anticipated twenty-four hours ago: when she was to have given him up voluntarily with such ready generosity. Was it easier to give him up now, when the impassable guit yawned between them? Was the treasure less valuable because she must never so much as think of it

She was the first to speak. Her heart was sore to see his aftered looks, his pale, worn face, on which grief and anxiety had set the marks as of physical pain. She remembered him so well in the prime of health and happiness and manly vigor. What a contrast now! She could scarce keep back her tears.
"You are ill!" she said, and her voice

"You are ill" she said, and her votes shook; while from an impulse she could not resist, she took his hand. "You look wretched. You are completely broken down. Ah, Gilbert, Gilbert, for my sake do not give way like this!"

It was too much. His heart was full, and even a man's pride was insufficient to control his weakness as he bent over the dear hand he had hoped to make his own. She had to find courage and strength for both. Who can tell what it cost her? Who can calculate the strug-gle that tore that fond, true heart? "Be it so," he replied. "At least, I am consoled to see you can bear it so cheerfully. At least, I am glad to be the only sufferer."

They were cruel words, and she felt them so; but she knew that men are unstable to properly to the strength of their least in properly to the strength of their just in proportion to the strength of their affections, and she could not bear to think Something in Ada's tone that spoke of human longing and vain natural regret, seemed to call him. as it were, to the rescue. He was a man, and he argued like a man, pressing into his service all the considerations of sophistry, expediency and precedent which might at least, he thought, persuade, if they were powerless to convince. He rose they were powerless to convince. He rose from his chair, and his whole exterior seemed to glow and change, while the full sweet tones of the kindly voice smote sweetly, as of old, upon her ear. With all the impassioned energy of a man who is pleading for life, and more than life. pleading for life, and more than life. he urged upon her every argument that love could suggest to fly at once with him, and be his own forever. He pleaded his faith, his truth, his fond obedience, above all, his altered condition now, and his future destruction if deprived of her. He drew such a picture of their future as dazzeled even his own mental vision. Gilbert was never deficient in eloquence; and the advocate's own being was indeed, wrapped up in his cause. Then he asked indignantly what it was, this obstacle, that stood in the way of more than earthly happiness? A right granted without consideration, and repudiated by the possessor's own deliberate act; an alliance never sanctioned by love, and dissolved by mutual consent of the conthe possessor's own deliberate act; an alliance never sanctioned by love, and dissolved by mutual consent of the contractors. Was this imaginary difficulty to embitter the whole future lives of two guiltless persons? HOW ARE YOUR KIDNEYS?

THIS SIMPLE TEST WILL TELL.

If any on your family have been troubled with kidney disease, make a test of the urine, and satisfy yourself whether you need a food remedy be-fore the disease has caused serious complications.

Tomorrow morning put some urine in a glass bottle, and let it stand for 24 hours. If it shows particles or germs floating about, is milky or cloudy, or contains a reddish sediment, then your kidneys are diseased.

Commence at once to take Ferro-zone to arrest these unnatural conditions. Ferrozone is especially intended for the immediate relief and cure of kidney and bladder troubles, and its health-giving, strengthening proper-ties will be felt at once in new, pure blood, healthy circulation, good color, increased vigor, and a general strengening of the system.

Ferrozone quickly corrects urinal disorders, headache and pain in the back. It improves the appetite, digests the food, and makes it nourish the nerves, makes them strong and enduring, and fits one for lots of hard work. Don't be misled by cheap, so-called

Tempted she was indeed, and who can tell how sorely? Yet did Ada come out of the furnace pure and radiant as an angel of light. It was hard to see him pleading there so eagerly, hard to know what must be the result of his failure in the one dear hope of his life, hardest of all to stifle the voice that cried for him so loudly in her own breast. Ada, too, was deficient in imagination. She could picture to herself—oh, far too vividly—the happiness of a lot on which she must not even dare to think; could appreciate with a thrill that was not altogether painful the intense devotion appreciate with a thrill that was not altogether painful the intense devotion that scrupled not for an instant to leave country and friends and kindred, and all for her sake; that would willingly and thankfully lose everything else so it gained but her. Men did not usually lovelike this. It was something to have found the treasure; alas, that it had been were only to be given the! Her visions found the treasure; alas, that it had been wen only to be given up! Her visions, too, had been of a golden future, rich in all the blessings of domestic happiness and love; a future that to a woman—and such a woman as Ada—was a very type of heaven upon earth. Now that it was impossible she felt for the first time how she had cherished and leaned upon this future—how she had made it the goal and the object of every thought and every action—how it had indeed become a part of her very existence, without which the life before her was a

Then it seemed so easy to make herself and him happy. What was the sacrifice of character and reputation and earthly honor? Nothing for his sake. Nay, it would be a pleasure to prove to him that she too could give up all for one she loved. The opportunity was present, the cage was open; it seemed so easy to be free—so easy but for one consideration. consideration.
"Gilbert," she said, and the loving look she bent upon him was pure from all earthly feeling. "Gilbert, you have often

It was my pride and pleasure to belive this, to know that you were different from others, to feel that I could trust you and depend upon you to the last. The time has come to put you to the last. The time has come to put you to the proof. There is right, Gilbert, and there is wrong. Would you ask me to turn out of the path that leads to heaven even for your sake? Would you wish to see me lost, body and soul? Oh, I know you better than that! You are generous, and chivalrous and good. Assist me in my task, hard though it be. Join me in the painful effort. I need never then be ashamed of the past. Do not deprive me of my only consolation, but let me me of my only consolation, but let me carry with me that memory pure and unsullied into another world." He could almost ha never to see her more. She had enlisted all his better feelings in the cause. Was she not worthy of any sacrifice, though it were his life's happiness, as she stood there so pure, so sorrowing, so lovable—the soft cheek so pale and wan, the tears gathering fast in those deep, fond eyes? Had she been less beautiful she might have conquered. But no, he could not give her up—could not voluntarily resign her to another, his type of all that is most englaying and attractive. resign her to another, his type of all that is most enslaving and attractive, his very ideal of womanly perfection both in body and mind. Right or wrong, if man could do it, he would win her still. He could not stand upon the heights that she had reached, nor breathe so pure an air as that refined, exalted nature. There was an earthly leavening in his devotion, deep and absorbing thought it was a draw in the could leavening in his devotion, deep and absorbing though it was—a drop in the cup of his affection which, like some cunning poison, sweetened while it strengthened the draught. Banishment from her presence was too severe a sentence; he could not bear it and live—he said so. [To be Continued.]

A Place for Everything.

A resident of West Philadelphia tells a good story of himself, which he held as a secret for many months. He was entertaining a friend from out of town last Christmas, when the conversation turned upon wives and their habits. The Philadelphia Telegraph records The Philadelphia had just explained how careful his wife was, and that she had a place for everything. 'Why, do you know," he said, "after I had dressed this morning and turned out the gas I found that I had forgotten a handkerchief. I opened the bureau drawer, and there in the corner, as usual, was a pile. I took the top one, and did not have time to strike a match. Here is the handkerchief. I have not even unfolded it." He drew it out, and shaking out the folds, showed his friend—the baby's

PERFECT EGYPTIAN STATUE

Prof. Flinders Petrie has just brought to light from excavations near Thebes an important specimen which he considers the finest example of Egyptian sculpture in existence. In describing this valuable find Prof. Petrie says the ability of the Egyptians in expressing the sculpture in existence. In describing this valuable find Prof. Petrie says the ability of the Egyptians in expressing the characteristics of race has never been better shown than in this statue. The figure is carved in ebony and is highly polished. The original motive is that the girl has before her a monkey, walking upright with a tray on its head. The marks of the edge of the tray are seen on the breasts, the hands of the girl are occupied in steadying the tray. The figure is that of a negress of the Upper Nile. Negresses were brought into Egypt in large numbers as slaves in the time of the XVIII. dynasty, 2000 B.C., to which this figure belongs. The good modeling of the profile, jaw and lip is noticeable. The expression is admirably given, showing the intent, careful air, looking down at the tray which is being carried. The perfect treatment of the under side of the jaw, its junction with the neck, and the pose of the head are points which show a fine artist.

SUFFERED TEN YEARS

From Kidney Trouble, Pain In the Back and Hips.

An Ingersoll Lady's Remarkable Recovery by the Use of Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets.

Do not let any lady who is suffering the miseries of backache and derangement of the kidneys hesitate one moment in procuring Dr. Pitcher's Backache-Kidney Tablets. These Tablets are the formula of Dr. Zina Pitcher, the eminent Kidney Specialist, and have cured hundreds of cases of the severest type of Kidney Disease which ordinary remedies could not benefit. They are small in size, chocolate-coated and mild, yet thorough-going in their action—just suited to the requirements of a lady's delicate organism.

Mrs. W. Wallace, whose home is Bell street, Ingersoll, Ont., speaks of the benefits she derived from the Tablets, "For many years, some ten or twelve, I have had a great deal of trouble with my back and kidneys, the pain getting into my left hip. I have doctored and doctored and tried all sorts of kidney remedies and finelly determined to the as follows: remedies, and finally determined to try Dr. Pitcher's Backache-Kidney Tab-lets I got a bottle from A. A Family Characteristic.

A little girl was visiting her grand-ma, who lived on a farm. One of the cows which had learned to jump fences, had a little calf. One day the little calf was seen attempting to jump over a fence. The child, seeing it, exclaimed: "Oh, grandma, see that little calf jumping the fence! It must have inhaled it from its mother!"-

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Y. W. C. A.

O INCE Miss Anna Stever has taken charge of the work of the Young Women's Christian Association of this city it has grown apace, until now it is in a very flourishing condition.

There is a membership of three hundred and fifty, composed almost entirely of city girls, some of whom have their homes here and a great many of whom board.

The work of the Association is divided into five parts, and the five vice-presidents of the department each have charge of one part.

Miss A. R. Yates has charge of the business department, which includes the noon rest, boarding, printing, membership, employment and finance.

Miss M.McMillan has charge of the social department, which has for its chief work the providing of something pleasant and attractive for one evening of each week and the scattering of invitations to meetings and leaflets in the factories.

Mrs. J. W. Jones has charge of the educational department, which includes domestic science, business classes, literary club and physical culture.

Mrs. C. W. Leonard has charge of the junior and extension work, for the Dominion, for girls under sixteen and for girls in outside places of busi-

Mrs. L. L. Weld, assisted by the devotional committee, has charge of the Sunday afternoon meeting and all systematic Bible work carried on in the association.

The clubs and classes in the association are numerous and to all of these. except the cooking class every girl in the city is welcome, whether she is a member of the association or not.

Twice a month the "Whatsoever" Circle of the King's Daughters, in charge of Miss Jarvis, meets. Their motto is "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do; do it with all thy might," and in the fulfillment of this principle, the members of the circle devote themselves to home missionary work in the poorer quarters of London.

The association is desirous of forming clubs in the different factories. They already have two very successful clubs, one in the Helena Costume Company, and one in Perrin's factory and they hope to have more in the fall when club work, which is not followed during July and August, begins again. These clubs, although under the are self-governing, as are all the other of the association, while the officers clubs of the association.

The president of the Helena Club is Miss Smith, and of the Winnifred Club, which is named for Miss Winnifred MacDonald, former president of the Dominion Association and now Mrs. (Dr.) Barry, missionary to China, Miss

The meetings presided over by Miss Stover are held once a week at the noon hour in the factory. Mr. Perrin has kindly given his private office for that purpose and has had it fitted with camp chairs for the girls, while the Helen Costume Company have given their lunch rooms.

Short devotional exercises are followed by singing lessons and gymnasium classes, several of the leading musicians of the city kindly giving their services for the former.

In the junior work there are two clubs, the Alexandra, president, Belva Chapman, for girls from eight to twelve, and the Victoria, president, Edna Maybank, for girls from twelve to fourteen. These clubs have practically the same work, meeting once a week after school, devoting their time to gymnasium work and instructive games; while the Alexandra Club is studying the life of Christ in Scripture, history, tradition, art and song. There is a kitchen garden class for domestic training and each club has its own song, cheer and colors, chosen by the members themselves.

Every day, during the noon hour, girls in offices and stores bring their lunches to the bright rooms of the association, over the public library, and have their noon rest. Tea and coffee is provided for them at two cents a cup, and the reading room with all the current magazines and the daily papers is open to them to rest and read in.

Tuesday afternoon, the students' Bible class, mostly composed of girls from the collegiate institute, meets after four o'clock. Mrs. W. Weld conducts the meeting and Miss Lucy Mc-Mechan is president. They study the Scriptures and read works in connection with their study, as for instance, Sharman's Life of Christ, and Mary L. Babcock's Life of Jesus.

Tuesday night the "I Will Trust" Club meets. Miss Unwin is the president and Miss Trebilcock leader. This class studies the Sunday school lesson for the following Sabbath and Sunday school teachers find it very helpful.

At eight o'clock Thursday night the business class meets to study shorthand, composition, spelling and writing under the tuition of Miss Isabel Magee, Miss Stella Macklin, Miss Trebilcock and Mr. Latta.

Thursday evening, also, there is a physical culture class conducted by Miss Stover.

Friday morning at half-past eight the evening. Of course, the particular Miss Stover conducts a Bible class, disposition of every man is going to meeting in the Normal school and Fri- tell here just as it does everywhere day night a cooking class, in charge of Miss Butchart, principal of the London School of Domestic Science, meets in the rooms. Saturday night Miss Eliza Yates conducts a literary club, which has for its aim the study of good literature. Last year the members studied the "Idylls of the King," "The Tempest" and Canadian history and poetry. Saturday night is also the evening when it is the duty of the social committee to provide charades, music, games and occasionally refreshments. The committee is much Music Club, which very kindly provided a concert on the first Saturday evening of every month last winter.

.Sunday afternoon, informal meetings are held in the rooms when one of the city ministers or someone actively engaged in Christian work, conducts a short service.

Although the work of the association is flourishing, the officers are very much hampered by the lack of funds to provide suitable accommodation. Every day from three to eight or ten secretary is compelled to send them

About $12,000 of the necessary $30,-000 is already subscribed, but from present appearances, it will be some years before they can hope to build and furnish a residence with an auditorium capable of seating about three hundred, a thoroughly equipped gymnasium with competent instructor and offices all in the same building, and yet what a boon it would be to the numerous girls in London earning their own living and yet deprived of all the advantages of home life.

This Y. W. C. A. boarding house would be self-sustaining with an efficient matron in charge, and would be made as home-like as possible to the girl boarders. Now that the Young Men's Christian Association have such a beautiful building, it is regrettable that some of London's philanthropists do not turn their attention towards the extremely worthy obect which the Y.

W. C. A. have in view. They are carrying out their plans on a small scale in "Summerholm," their Port Stanley home for girls. Some slight idea of the necessity for this place is seen when it is shown that there are now twenty-four girls boarding at Summerholm and there are eighteen on the waiting list.

All unmarried members of the association are admitted to Summerholm at a merely nominal rate per week. Some member of the Summerholm Board is always present as hostess and chaperone. A matron is in charge of the cooking and kitchen work and the girls are always free for the boating, bathing, fishing and other joys of Port Stanley.

A board of management of twentyfive ladies assisted by an advisory board composed of leading men of the general direction of the Y. W. C. A., city is in charge of the general work

Children's Confidences.

It is a beautiful thing for a mother to have the confidence of her children. But many a woman does not realize this until it is beyond her reach. When her children are grown up she misses it and feels hurt that they do not bring their anxieties, love affairs, plans and ideas to her to be talked over. Such a woman would be indignant if you told her that she herself was to blame for this state of affairs, but it is true none the less. How many times on sees a child, filled with eager delight at a new game, run to his mother, eager to tell her all about it, to be met with, "Run away, dear, don't bother me now." What effect does this have? Does the child wait for a more propitious moment? Not at all: the confidence is never given. The child, if often met with this thoughtless indifference, is forced to live in a world of his own.

No one denies that a child's tiny troubles are bitter to him for the time. "It takes very little to make a child happy." Yes, and just as slight a thing to make him miserable; and in both states he needs sympathy, just as we bigger children do.

If a woman wants to have her children confide in her, and wishes to be their dearest friend, as well as their mother, she must not discourage the confidence of her little ones. Consider for a moment the immense influence she gains, if her children tell her freely all their little secrets and she knows day by day what those busy brains are thinking.

Feminine Influence.

It is commonly supposed that a man's conduct during the day depends upon whether or not he enjoys his breakfast. It is said that at the breakfast table a cheerful bearing and a joyful demeanor on the part of the feminine part of the family are most effective in putting the man of the house into the right sort of humor for the day. There are other views, however, on this subject, and one of them comes from a woman whose experiences in her married life have ben of a kind to encourage any wife.

She disagrees with the accepted view as to the potency of good humor in the morning. Her scheme is very dif-

"The most important moment of the day to a man's peace of mind," she says, "is the ten minutes that follow his return from the work of the day. At that time one word may change his whole state of feeling.

"He comes home usually tired. Work or the vexations of business during the day have frequently brought him to a point of fatigue or nervousness at which a very little thing may decide what his mood will be for the rest of else. But my rule will hold good for the average man. "The most important thing for the tactful woman to do is to wait until she sees some signs of his temper before she makes any decided move. Account no duty small. Forget not 'the anise and cummin," the little matters of courtesy, kindness and consideration for the feelings of others, acknowledgment of favors received, the answering of letters, the manifestation of Christian sympathy, and the These lesser matters ought not to be lost sight of whilst we chiefly regard the weightier matters of the law.-Everard.

A PRAYER FOR PATIENCE. For patience, Lord, in faith I ask, That I may trials bear, And count it not an irksome task
A cross with Thee to share;

The patience Thou didst ever show In every trouble keen, Abashing each malignant foe By its supernal sheen;

The patience, with an upward look Into thy Father's face,
Enabling Thee contempt to brook
With dignity and grace;

The patience that enriched Thy life Of sorrow and of pain. Of sorrow and of pain, And turned for Thee all hate and strife To everlasting gain, Abundant measure, Master, mine, Of this I ask in prayer, That I, reflecting Thee, may shine E'en in the midst of care.

Forgive me that I ever gave Myself to passion's frown; O teach me, Lord, how to be brave And how to keep my crown.

-Rev. William H. Bancroft. THE BEST GIFT.

Love, true love, is everything to you. "If I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, but have not love, I am become sounding brass or a clanging cymbal. "I wear them all the time for street and home use, and my husband likes me best in them—says I look trim and girlish in one," with a deprecating smile.

"And so you do; wish I could wear them," sighed the other. "Would you mind if I gave you some pointers about putting on a shirt waist?" asked the second woman suddenly. "There's such a lot in that, you know.

"Why, no, I didn't know. I never thought about it." Well, there is. To begin, haven't yours pinned down in the back, have you? 'No, I never do; I hate pinning

Slowly he came fastened the window, hoping by shutting him in the room to have an opportunity to talk to him a little and toss the nuts around for him to jump for, as I had sometimes done with the other squirrels. To my great surprise, little Friskey made a dive for the window, knocking his head thereon, and fact. fell to the floor with a thud which made my heart ache, for I thought he had hurt himself and would never come again to visit us. Of course we petted him and gave him nuts and apples, and ever since then he has come often to the window. After pleading in squirrel fashion, if he does not get what he desires he will insist upon due courtesy being shown him by uttering a queer little noise which I suppose his companions interpret to mean, "I just must have some nuts." But let me tell you about one of the other squirrels which came to call one afternoon. A lady had been visiting at the house and had left her jacket on the couch while she went into another room. Along came Mr. Squirrel with his nuts. He hid one, two, three in the sleeves of the lady's jacket and ran off for more. The lady, having finished her visit, took up her jacket thinking to put it on, when out rolled Mr. Squirrel's hidings on the floor. How the lady and her hostess laughed when they saw to what use her jacket had been put and how sorry we all felt when we thought of his possible disappointment when he should come back and find his hiding place discovered. I believe, though, that just didn't care at all, for he probably had plenty of others hidden out in the

A professor of legerdemain witnessed the following trick at a juggler's performance in India some little back. A woman with a baby swung in a bag around her waist came on the stage and endeavored to balance a ball on her nose. This she failed to do on account of the hindrance caused by the child.
She repeated the attempt, but met

The woman screamed as she realized the danger into which the child was thrown, and the indignation spread to the audience. Unconcerned apparently about the babe, its mother, or the audience, the juggler took the child and threw it into a bag which he held in his right hand. Then, taking a firm hold on the neck of the bag, he whirled it over his head and violently brought it down upon the floor. At the same time the woman screamed and fell upon her knees, begging the juggler to desist; but he told her to keep quiet, and repeated the performance. By this time two British officers were on the stage and were struggling with the juggler, trying in vain to get hold of the bag. The magician pushed them to one side, scowled angrily over their interference, and then forced them off the stage. Then, bowing and smiling to the audience, he placed his hand in the bag and drew out a pair of white doves, which dust from the eyes.

THE GARDEN GAME.

Fruit, Vegetables and Nuts' is a garden game. The players must seat themselves in a circle; the more there are the merrier. The leader must provide a soft ball. One made from handkerchief will do. Throwing the ball across the circle, the leader says the name of a fruit, a vegetable or nut-for instance, "Apple." The one to whom the ball is thrown must catch it, and before the leader has counted ten throw it to another player, saying the name of a fruit, vegetable or nut beginning with the sec-ond letter of "apple"—for instance, The player who catches the ball must keep up the game by tak-ing the third letter of apple and replying. Thus:

Player No. 1, "Apple"; player No. 2,
"Pear"; player No. 3, "Peach"; player
No. 4, "Lemon"; player No. 5, "Eggplant.

"Apple" being exhausted now, the game is continued with the letters of Thus: When player No. Eggplant," receives the ball he responds with Grapes.'

The same name must not be used twice. If any player fails to respond by the time the leader has counted ten, he must drop out of the game The player who stays in longest wins You must watch out for the ball and have your wits about you if it comes to you suddenly. The turns are not taken in order, you must understand, and anyone is liable to receive the ball when he is not looking for it. This is a very jolly game.

THE VANITY OF CHICKENS

What an Unusually Close Observer of Fowls Has Noted.

[From the New Orleans Times-Democrat.]. "Speaking of chickens, do you know am inclined to think the chicken is about the vainest thing there is in the fowl line," said a man who lives in Carrollton and who has made a rather close study of the feathery trible, "and I think I have good reasons for the the others having taken their share of faith that is in me. We are in the habit of using the expression as vain as a peafowl. The peafowl is, of toward the open window, peeked in, course, very vain. They seem to ap-hesitated and in a moment had drophesitated and in a moment had drop-ped to the floor below. Instantly I of their plumage. They strut around with an infinite sort of pride, and they leave no sort of doubt in a person's mind as to the existence of an inordinate vanity. Peafowis will actually go crazy if you rob them of their tail feathers, and I have observed not a few instances which substantiate this

"But recurring to chickens, I have found them as a rule vainer than any other kind of fowl. I have a rather interesting brood at my place now, and I have been making a little study of the members of the group. They are now only a few days old. They had not arrived at the piping stage they began to display what I may call a pride in the matter of their personal appearance. They began to peck at their wings before they had thoroughly dried and within a few hours after they had left the shell. They began to shake themselves somewhat after the fashion of the older chickens when they wallow for a while in the dust. "Chickens, you know, take a dust bath, and then flutter their feathers and shake themselves in order to get rid of the dust. Well, these youngsters, before they had been out of the egg three hours, began to go through these motions. They began to fix themselves up, I may say. They seem to know instinctively that a chicken ought to arrange its toilet, just as other things in the broad kingdom of life, and so they went about the task. The expression, 'As mad as a wet hen,' is no doubt due to the hen's displeasure at having her feathers soiled and disarranged by water. What more melancholy spectacle can one find than the proud rooster whose plumage has been dampened by a sudden

"Yes, chickens are very vain, and they begin to show signs of their van-ity early in life I know of no other fowl that begins priming so early in life as the chicken, and I suppose my experience is about the experience of every other man who has had occasien to observe the conduct of these useful members.'

KNITTING AS A MEDICINE.

(From the Family Doctor.) Knitting is declared by specialists in the treatment of rheumatism to be a most helpful exercise for hands liable to become stiff from the complaint, and it is being prescribed by physicians because of its efficacy in limbering up the hands of such sufferers. For persons liable to cramp, paralysis or any other affection of fingers of that character; knitting is regarded as a most beneficial exercise. Besides the simple work is said to be an excellent diversion for the nerves, and is recommended to women suffering from insomnia and depression. In certain sanitariums patients are encouraged to make use of the bright steels, and the work is so that it is much enjoyed by them.

A scientific man will listen respectfully to a new theory, because there are many unsolved problems in the universe. But he holds the theory in abeyance until he sees how it works. If it settles a few vexed questions he will say it is likely to be a true theory; if it settles a large proportion of these questions he will be inclined to adopt it; if it satisfactorily disposes of all the perplexities which he has heretofore encountered he will whistle his old theory down the wind, and accept the new one without hesitation.

His rule is that what produces the best results must be true, and when a new theory has been successfully put to that practical test he has no prejudice against an acknowledgment of its claims. Let us give an illustration which is furnished by astronomy. Up to the beginning of the seventeenth century the planetary orbits were supposed to be circles—that is to say, the path around the sun in which all the members of our solar system moved, from Mercury to Neptune was thought to be circular. There were some difficulties, however, which the circle failed to solve, and these increased until astronomers were in despair.

When Kepler came he declared that the orbits were not circles, but ellipses. Perhaps no proposition ever created more astonishment. It was daring to the edge of rashness, and for some time was held at arm's-length. on, though, it was discovered that Kepler's theory disposed of all the difficulties which had attended the notion of circular orbits. Experiments were made with it by the score, but it never failed to vindicate itself. It worked, it produced results, and from that hour to this it has dever been blurred by doubt.

The rule is a good one to apply to so ciety, to civilization, and to religion, as well as to astronomy. When we hear of Christianity as a new moral and spiritual theory its beauty and come-liness attract the intellect and move the heart. But we cannot fairly judge either of its worth or its truth until we find out what kind of a commun-ity, what kind of men and women, it can make. Mere arguments are seldom conclusive, for in a debate the brighter or more strategic mind takes the lead; but when instead of arguments you have facts, and can say to the world,"Christianity has done this or that; it has caused the people to create these or those institutions, political or charit- | joy.

If we contrast Christianity with Mohammedanism or Brahmanism, regarding them all as theories of life, the weight of argument would be in favor of Christianity, for, taken as a whole, of Christianity, for, taken as a whole, Christ's teachings are peculiarly unworldly and uplifting. But when we place modern Europe by the side of Arabia or India, regarding them as elements of human progress, as exponents of the best that can be done by three conspicuous forms of religion, argument becomes dumb and the matargument becomes dumb and the matter is decided by results.

In such a competition Christianity has nothing to fear. Whether it be considered as human or divine is just now a matter of secondary importance. We look simply at the prerogatives which men enjoy under it; at the kind of ambition which spurs men to action; at the moral tone of society at large; at the institutions which are the logical consequence of belief in Christ; at the literature in which the people delight; and at the sympathy for those who are unfortunate which prevails.

Brush your theological creeds aside and look at Christianity as a dynamic force; measure its influence in the career of anyone who has been consecrated by its spirit; note its encouragement of public and private virtue, its insistence on a high standard of honor, its injunction to provide for the helpless and care for the needy, its promise or pledge that when we leave the body we shall take up residence in "a house not made with hands." Then compare these peculiarities with the general teaching of any other religious system on the planet, and you will be compelled to admit that in the production of a noble life, Christianity leads all the rest. It is not strange, therefore, that this higher thought was ushered in by an overture in which angels predicted peace on earth and goodwill to men. Nor need we wonder if he who bore the sacred massers from however healed the sacred message from heaven healed the sick or raised the dead by word of command. The Person who could pro-ject himself into the life of eighteen centuries and give shape to more than fifty generation would find it an easy task to master the mysteries of disease

The digestive system of man, and that of all other animals, at that time was a capital offense in Kentucky, and the greatest horse-thief was a man named Fontaine. Now, be yond the stomach we find the intestine soon overtaken, and when asked where (or bowel), which in man averages about 26 feet in length. Attached to the caecum we find the appendix, a little "Certainly," said Booth in the most good-natured manner; and, wheeling the horse, he rode back to Louisville, with his captors.

The city jail was then in charge of Thomas, who knew Booth well. "We have brought you Fontaine, the horse-thief, and claim the reward," said the farmers proudly, addressing the failer. "Where is he?" they were asked. Booth was produced. "Why, what does this mean, Mr. Booth?" asked Thomas. "I haven't the slightest idea," said the great tragedian, with the utmost simplicity. "I met these two men with this horse and they insisted upon giving it to me. I guess they stole it. I think one of them is Fontaine."

What Can a Woman The rustics were about to be locked up, when, by the most singular coincidence a man rushed to the prison door on horseback and shouted out the information that the real Fontaine had been taken into custody. Booth made Fontaine's acquaintance in jail, and In Times of Suffering and the horse thief, who was executed later, left by will his skull to the actor.

Dewey's Responsibility.

The boy pupils of a down-town school were studying the history of the war with Spain, says the Philadelphia Times. One boy seemed to have diffi-culty in remembering the names of some of the American commanders, who were conspicuous in that trouble. "Here," the teacher said finally, going to her desk and taking out some souvenirs of the jubilee parade of 1899, "take these buttons home this afternoon, study them over-night, and tell me in the morning, which is Schlau me in the morning which is Schley, which is Dewey, and which Sampson." She handed him buttons bearing the likenesses of the three commanders, and the boy took them and went home. In the morning the teacher called him to her desk and asked him if he knew the names of the three officers. He produced two buttons, saying, "This is Schley, and—" handing out the sec-ond one—"this is Sampson." "That's right, that's right; very good.
Of course the third is—where is the third button I gave you "

Fourth Century Shorthand. That shorthand was used in the ancient world is well known, but our in-formation is still scanty and any addition is welcome, says the Bishop of Manchester, writing in Notes and Queries. A Hopeless Case.

There was a brilliant reception at the house of Mrs. Amory. Among the guests was a certain Mr. McKenzie, a man of grave and somewhat taciturn demeanor, whom several of the young ladies present had tried to engage in conversation, but without much success. One of them spoke to the hostess about him. "He seems to be rather uneasy and out of place at a party like this," she said. "Yes," replied Mrs. Amory, with a bright smile, "he can't talk anything but sense."

Mohammedanism.

A German missionary who has worked for many years among the Moham-medans says: "Honesty compels every candid student to acknowledge the old view formerly entertained in Christian circles concerning Mohammedanism, according to which the teachings of the great Arabian prophet are nothing but devil's doctrines and dogmas, is altogether incorrect. In reality Mohammedanism is nothing but a rationalistic type of Christianity in the form of a most unfortunate state religion. The times are past when scolding about the Moslem creed as the production of the devil will satisfy, and the struggle against Islam on these premises is a failure. Practically all-of the mission literature that in the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries was written against Mohammedanism is useless."

Chinese "Autographs."

After the siege of Pekin, the Lotos Club of New York, which has long been in the habit of entertaining distinguished men, gave a dinner for Wu Ting-Fang, the Chinese minister at Washington. The autograph-seekers kept him busy between courses, and to enhance the value of his signature, they were unanimous in asking Mr Wu to write in Chinese.

Several of them, later in the evening, were comparing his signatures as they appeared on their menu cards. Unfamiliar as they were with the Chinese script, they could see that the characters were not the same. Just then Chow Tsz Chi, the Chinese consul, came up, and was at once asked what the writing meant. Mr. Chow hesitated a moment, and then gravely read these "autographs" as follows: What a funny, red-nosed man!"

"How short and fat you are!"
"An amusing, bald-headed fellow!"

The man who won't take the time to who then begins to tell her the day's stock of funny stories, after she is too sleepy to stay awake, so that she always goes to sleep on his hands while he is talking to her, had an awfully funny one to relate unto her after he had doused the glim and crawled into bed a few nights ago, says the Wash-

At this stage of it the narrator heard an exceedingly gentle feminine snore alongside of him. "B'jee, if she hasn't gone to sleep on me again," he said to himself, aggrievedly. "Mary," he said aloud, "are you awake?"

There was no reply. "Huh! wonder she couldn't be civil enough to keep awake while a fellow's telling her a good story, anyhow," he growled to himself, and then he had

"Hooray! I'm very glad," Mr. Smith said in a moved voice. Then the doctor proceeded: "Your daughter wishes to speak to you. Hold your ear there while I lift her up." Mr. Smith held his ear there and heard with strange emotion the inarticulate complaining voice of the little daughter whom he had not yet seen.

Nickel-Steel's Peculiarities.

Steel alloyed with 36 per cent of niekel is said to have the smallest coefficient of expansion of any known metal, amounting to only one two-millionth for one degree Fahrenheit. For this reason nickel-steel has been largely adopted for the material of pendulum rods in high-grade clocks. The change of length with rise or fall of temperature is so nearly imperceptible that the counterbalancing change in the brass bob suffices to compensate for it. Nickel-steel also possesses a remark-able power of resisting rust. If nickel should ever be discovered in sufficient qualities greatly to reduce its cost, says a writer in Machinery, it would have an important influence on future steel construction, for nickel-steel would generally be used. It is an interesting fact that nickel combined with iron is frequently found in meteorites.

Railway Electric Lighting.

The state railway administration in Prussia has just settled upon a system of electric lighting for trains which is attracting much attention in Germany. The axle-driven dynamo having been found objectionable because it borrows too much power from the locomotive, and the system of storage batteries being undesirable for other reasons, the plan adopted is to place on the locomotive a steam-driven dynamo, which supplies a current to a small regulating battery in each car. Thus every car in a vestibuled train has a separate lighting system fed from its own accumulator, although the general supply comes from the generator on the locomotive. Each car is provided with ceiling lamps and reading lamps.

Snow Against Bullets.

The result of experiments recently carried out in Norway, by firing Krag-Jorgensen rifles against heaps of snow, indicates that the schoolboys' traditional winter fortifications might be rendered of great value in practical warfare, carried on in regions where snow abounds. Although the muzzle velocity of a Krag-Jorgensen bullet is 2,360 feet per second, yet it was found that a bank of unarmed snow arrested such projectiles at a depth of penetration not exceeding 4 feet. This is nearly equal to the resistance of rammed earth, and exceeds that of ordinary

Brain and Intellect. The exact seat in the brain of the highest intellectual faculties has formed a moot point in science since the functions of the organ of mind began to be investigated with accuracy, says the London Chronicle. The general opinion localizes what we term "mind" in the prefrontal lobes of the brain, but by another school of thinkers the hinder lobes have been credited with performing our highest cerebral duties. The balance of evidence is decidedly in favor of the former view, and recent researches and observations by Dr. Phelps, an American investigator, would appear to assist in strengthening the opinion that the most important portion of the brain is its anterior region. In the course of the investigations in question some 295 cases of brain injury and disease were examined. In all save two it was noted that interference of extensive nature with the pre-frontal region resulted in serious disturbance of the mental faculties. Less severe injury produced less marked effects. facts parallel the researches of other investigators, and they are further substantiated by what is observed in cases of idiocy connected with a want of development of the frontal lobes of

THE CULTURE OF CANADIAN FISH

How Propagation of Bass, Whitefish and Salmon Is Conducted.

A Proposition Now Under Consideration to Create Small Lakes for Rearing Fish.

[Toronto Star.] The greatly increased number of tourists who yearly visit Ontario summer resorts is subjecting the waters to incessant fishing. This, with the unforately too successful operations of the peacher, has rendered game fish failing springs. Into this incubator a in places where they once abounded now almost extinct. To restore these places and prevent the angler's sport being further impaired extensive fish planting has been undertaken by the Ontario Government. The most speedy and satisfactory method of restoring the catch in the Muskoka lakes and rivers has been found to be the transporting of the full grown parent fish from where they can be found in large humbers, and liberating them in the summer resort district. The small mouth species of black bass, as fine a sportsman's fish as ever swam, abounds in Lake Erie, and it is known that though the black bass is a strennous fellow and a great fighter on a line, he does not interfere with the other varieties of finny life found in the northern lakes. It was decided to induce these gentlemen to go north. PARLOR CAR FOR FISH.

The car is divided into sections, with a passage down the center, and a double door on each side for convenience in loading. Besides a section for ice at each end, the car contains ten fish tanks of galvanized iron, so constructed that the water may freely circulate from tank to tank. Drain pipes are attached for emptying, and a hose for filling, so that the water is easily changed. Fish soon die in "flat" water, so an air pump is provided that sends fresh breath bubbling through the water from be-

These lakes could be made in every way suitable for the spawning, hatching, and growing of the settlers. By keeping the years separate the smaller fish would not be killed, and as season by season batches arrived at an age entitling them to the franchise, they could be taken without any trouble and deposited with their elders. The hatchery plan has long been followed by the Dominion Government with great success, and last year experiments were made with the small-mouthed black bass. The parents were confined in a pond situated on the Bay of Quinte, about 100 feet square, and providing spawning surface for about 50 fish. The bottom descended by ledges, so that the water varied depth from four inches to five feet at the deepest point. The water, which is clear and cool, is supplied by neverquantity of parent bass were placed, and the results were very satisfactory, as it enabled the department to comply with the long standing and annual request of the residents of British Columbia and the Northwest Territories for a supply of black bass. L Sandwich hatchery alone turned out $2,000,000 young fry semi-hatched eggs, a million of which were deposited in the lake at Toronto. The hatchery on the Detroit River at Sandwich, Ont., is devoted exclusively to the hatching of whitefish. The parent fish are caught in seines as they descend the St. Clair River to the natural spawning grounds of Lake St. Clair. They are then confined in crates until ready for spawning, after which they are liberated, and find their way back to Lake Erie. The whitefish hatchery in Manitoba, situated at Selkirk, has not been a success, as only a small percentage of the eggs can be hatched out. The failure is due partly to the system of capturing the parent fish with gill nets, which seems to upset them. On the Restigouche River in New Brunswick is situated the most successful of Canadian salmon hatcheries. It has a capacity of 1,700,000 eggs. The fish are nearly all caught during June in the department's nets, and are confined in a retaining pond until ready for spawning, which is about the middle of October, when they are released. Salmon hatcheries situated at Grand Falls, New Brunswick, and Bedford, Nova Scotia, are supplied with eggs obtained from fish confined in a salt water pond located at Carleton, op-posite the city of St. John. The fish are purchased from bona fide fishermen, and on being returned to the water, afford a second source of revenue. It is said the popularity of the hatchway in the neighborhood is remarkable. An establishment of great service to Lake Memphremagog is the little hatchery at Magog, Quebec, in which salmon trout and whitefish are hatchlong nets fastened at one end to the ed from eggs supplied from Newcastle

Up-to-Date Methods of the Modern Hotel Cook.

He Wears Good Clothes and Expensive Jewelry and Spends His Money Freely.

The up-to-date hotel thief is entirely different from the old-fashioned sneak thief, who prowled through corridors, often operating with the aid of servants, or gaining an entrance through the cellar way and back doors.

The new type of hotel thief drives up in style to the summer hotel or city hotel that he has selected for his field. Until he amasses experience enough to aid him in carrying off big prizes that enable him to have periods of rest and recreation between his enterprises he is obliged often to take chambermaids and bellboys into his confidence, sending them on ahead of him sometimes to prepare ways and means

If he has a wife with him she will invariably be handsome and finely gowned and jeweled. She will be gracious, often fascinating, and will pose as a martyr to the male friends that are picked up by the couple on their journeys. Nothing appeals to a great many men so much as the idea of a pretty and neglected wife who is sac-rificing herself for her husband.

The couple will be extremely hospitable, and will entertain in their hotel rooms. Then there are various methods that are put in operation. Champagne will be consumed and whist or poker proposed. Or frequently, as there has grown to be a degree of suspicion about these hotel card games, there is no talk of cards.

The large hotels make special efforts to protect their guests known to be men of importance financially. Such men are the favorite prey for the adventurers of this class, who will en-deavor to dupe them by plans well conceived and executed, appealing to some special fad or folly of the man to be victimized.

PHILIPPINE WHISKY BEATS FORTY-ROD

Doctor Details Its Nature and Its Effect on Soldiers.

Vino is manufactured in the nipa swamps around Manila Bay, and the contiguous lagoons. Nipa does not grow inland or in the higher lands, says a United States army doctor, writing in the Philadelphia Medical Journal. The greatest nest of distilleries is in the vast swamps in the delta of the Rio Grande. The parent and the sap collected much in the same manner that we collect maple sap. A native fits out his banka (wooden dugout), which is eighteen to thirty-six feet long and thirty inches beam, with ten or twelve ollas, or earthen bowls, holding from three to five gallons each, and paddles through the narrow waterways between the small islands densely covered with the nipa palm, and frequently without leaving his position in the banka can jab a tube into the spongy stem and tie fast a section of bamboo to collect the sap. Making his rounds again, he empties these containers into his ollas and paddles off to the distilleries, where it is disposed of for a few centavos.

At the distillery the sap is mixed with the juice of the sugar caneabout 25 per cent. of the latter being used-fermented, distilled and in a crude way rectified. The product is vino, taking that name from the Spanish word for wine. Vino is a pungent, colorless fluid, exhibiting an alcoholic strength of from 50 to 80 per cent. and showing some butyric ether, but I never saw a trace of amylic alcohol (fusel oil).

The native-excluding those of the larger cities, who have adopted civilized habits—does not get drunk. It is a rarity to find a drunken native. Of the 500 or more natives we had in our command we never had a case of drunkenness. The only case of intoxication that I ever saw among the Maccabees was our "major domo," or head servant, when we lived at Colonial Blanco's, and he had surreptitiously emptied a bottle of cocktails that belonged to the commanding officer.

The native never drinks vino as it is in the market. He dilutes it with water, adds sugar and oil of anise and drinks it as "anisette," in the manner that his civilized brother takes a cordial. For a "long drink" he has bottled beer, made at the native breweries of San Miguel in Manila, or imported Japanese beer

The intoxication from vino is purely profound insensibility of the toxic dose of alcohol. The American soldier saw in vino a substitute for whisky, and, to the amazement of the native, took it raw and in big gulps. As a result he was dead drunk in a remarkably short space of time.

The young lawyer was floundering in tangle of his own making in a case he had before a supreme court justice, who is known, says the New York Tri-bune, as the humorist of the bench. The justice listened attentively to the young man's efforts to disentangle himself, but after a while he was visibly impatient, and the young man perceived that the time had come for excuses. So he began: "You see, your honor, to be perfectly frank with you, I am the least bit rusty methods of procedure in cases of this nature. He Kept His Vow.

From an anecdote told by William Eleroy Curtis in his "Yankees of the East" it may be inferred that the attitude of the small boy toward a fence is the same in Japan as in other countries.

Mr. Gobel, the missionary, built himself a modern house on what is known as "The Bluff," south of Yokohama, and surrounded his grounds with the stalk of the nipa fruticans is tapped first fence that was ever built in that part of the world. The pocketbook did not drop out as I had expected, but, what was better still, eight pairs of kid gloves, from which the tags had never been removed, rolled out upon the floor. The Peculiar Chinee.

The retiring Chinese minister, Wu Ting-Fang, in a lecture on his countrymen, discussed the question, "Are the Chinese Peculiar" He quoted from Bret Harte's famous poem, Heathen Chinee," and concluded: "From your standpoint we are peculiar, but from our standpoint you are peculiar. Which we are depends on the point of view. In China we have always been in the habit of accepting a man's word in all business transactions. That is peculiar, isn't it? You exact a writing from him, and since foreigners have begun to settle in China, the ancient custom of trusting a man's word is not so popular. Chinese merchants now exact some kind of writing from their foreign customers. We respect age, while you respect muscle and brawn. We respect age because wisdom and experience seem to be its natural companions. Peculiar, isn't it? From your point of view Hercules is your hero.

Too Prudent.

Mr. Davis had been out in an easterly storm without his rubbers, and Mrs. Davis was both anxious and injured. "James," she said, dolorously, 'you know that a lack of prudence has caused the death of many people. Too much prudence caused the death of Aunt Mary Davis," said her husband, promptly, "my father's aunt. Haven't I ever told you about her" "Don't be flippant," said Mrs. Davis, severely, "and do change your shoes at once." "Flippant! I should say not," and Mr. Davis took his turn at leading the said of looking injured. "My father's aunt wasn't a person to encourage flippancy even when she was alive. And surely now that she's gone-but I'll say no more, my dear, except that your sug-gestion surprises me. "Aunt Mary's husband was a druggist, and he invented some medicines that were supposed by him to cure all the ills that flesh is heir to. But unfortunately the public didn't see it in that light, and when Uncle Mary-for that was what he was always called—died at the age of 65 he left about ten dozen large bottles of what he had named 'X 4' which the man who bought most of his stock refused to take. Aunt Mary had never been sick in her life, but she knew X 4 had been considered by her husband a most nourishing medicine, and she couldn't bear to see it wasted. So she began to take it, morning and night, morning and night, till she had emptied three dozen bottles, and then all of a sudden she died. So you see in her case 'twas prudence that killed her. If she hadn't wanted to save that medicine she might—" "Will you go and change your shoes?" inquired Mrs.

John Knight was the rector of St. Martin's. The little mission had been established by contributions fro.n members of the fashionable Church of St. Jude. St. Jude's was rather "low" in point of ritual, and was more than extremely exclusive in point of congregation. "What need is there to rub elbows with people who live in flats and boarding-houses, when we can provide for their needs in a thoroughly Christian way by the establishment of a church where they will feel more at home?" asked the vestry and the wardens of St. Jude's. Thus it was that St. Martin's was founded, but because of its location, the "flatters" and the "boarders" refused to attend services there, and so it happened that the rich and the poor had the gospel preached to them while the "middlers" went without the Bread

The Rev. John Knight was 27 years old. He was a big fellow, an athlete and a graduate of Harvard, where the unitarian atmosphere failed to affect his stalwart churchmanship. St. Mar-tin's was his first charge. Owing to the dependence of the little parish upon the Church of St. Jude the rector of the mission was thrown more or less in contact with the congregation of in contact with the congregation of the greater parish. John Knight was rather "churchly." His altar was a thing of beauty. There were always flowers on it in two great brazen vases, flanked by two great candlesticks with cross midway.

When the parishioners of St. Indo

When the parishioners of St. Jude heard of the candles they declared that the Rev. John Knight was drifting rapidly to Rome, but John Knight was doing nothing of the kind. He knew his parishioners, and he knew that an appeal to the eye would make that an appeal to the eye would make easier the appeal to the heart. Now John Knight was sincere. In the ab-sence of the rector of St. Jude the priest of the little mission filled the pulpit. The St. Jude people had kicked at his candles, but they didn't kick at his sermons. Young women who never before had thought of doing a stroke of missionary work volunteered for work in the slums around St. Martin's. With this aid, John Knight labored to extend his district and to carry the gospel of the Christ that it might sweeten the homes of the many.

There was one woman in St. Jule's parish who held aloof from the work at the mission of St. Martin's. She was the one woman above all others John Knight would have liked to see at work among the lowly. He had met Katherine Forbes when she had visited her brother at Harvard. Katherine Forbes was peerless. Everybody said so, and it must be true. John Knight believed it. Katherine Forbes was a bit disdainful, but there was some-thing in her face which showed that the disdain was largely affected.

It is better told quickly. John Knight was in love with Katherine Forbes. He was no recluse. He went into society to the extent that a clergyman may when his parish duties do not demand him. He saw Katherine Forbes well and knew that he was not without favor in her eyes. But what woman brought up in luxury and with absosutely burning social ambitions would ever marry the rector of a missionary church with a pittance of $1,000 a year in his own right, with an added four hundred from his parisioners, aided by the missionary board? Then there was George Banks. He was of a family as old as that of John Knight. He was big, good-looking and worth two millions. Knight had the size and the good looks, but the bal-ance went down in Banks' favor with the weight of the millions. Banks was in love with Katherine Forbes. Everybody in St. Jude's knew it and talked about it, and said the marriage would be a fine thing, and that the Rev. John Knight ought to read the marriage service, because, even though "he is awful 'high,' he does read beautiful-

Well, time went on, and John Knight fell more and more in love with this matchless woman, who went about among his poor and lost her haughtiness in her very pity for their condition. One night he told her, and then came the struggle of the girl's life. Then the rector leaned over Jimmie with a queer look in his face and says, 'Jimmie, you must never tell,' and then he gets up and he walks up and down the room and mutters to him-self, 'She must never know,' I suppose he was talking about Mrs. Johnson, though why he didn't want her to know who run over Jimmie I can't see for the life of me.

Baby's Own Tablets

For Weak, Sickly Children in Hot Weather.

Thousands of children die during the hot weather months, because summer complaints and stomach troubles come suddenly, and mothers do not have the means at hand to promptly check and cure them. In homes where Baby's Own Tablets are used, these precious little lives can be saved, and no home where there are infants and young children, should be without them.

Baby's Own Tablets will promptly cure all stomach and bowel troubles, and are a great relief to teething children. The Tablets are sold under a positive guarantee that they contain neither opiate nor harmful drug. Crushed to a powder they can be given with absolute safety to a new born babe.

> Mrs. R. Ferguson, 105 Mansfield St., Montreal, says:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets and have found them the best medicine I have ever given my children. My baby has always been small and delicate and suffered so much last summer with his teeth that I did not think he would live. Then he was attacked with dysentery, a feverish skin and a cough. As the doctors' medicine did not help him I sent for Baby's Own Tablets and they did him a wonderful amount of good, and he is now getting on splendidly. I gladly give my experience for the benefit of other mothers.

If your druggist does not keep these Tablets they will be sent by mail post paid at 25 cents a box by writing direct to

COSMOPOLITAN CITY IN NORTHERN CHINA

New Russian Commercial Center Is Freest Port in World.

[From the Boston Transcript.] Never was there such another town as Dalny, Russia's new commercial two years ago, Nicholas invoked the of suggestion or training taught the blessing of God upon the undertaking, so truly peaceful, and took upon himself the care of building the new city and its port.

Dalny is a city without a country, if such a thing is possible. No particular ful. To this duty, as he sees it, Tow-flag has more right to fly above it than ser devotes himself with an admirable another. It is the freest port in the world. They have not even built a custom house, and no import or export duties will be collected on any sort of goods whatever. Even the moderate rates of Chinese customs will not be charged on goods landing or to be exported thence.

If Dalny ever grows to a large city as those acquainted with eastern trade conditions say it will, it will be most ejected from the platform, his grief is cosmopolitan. Its tendency in that direction is shown already. There is a population of 50,000 persons, mostly behavior, according to many of his Chinese, but with nearly every other feminine charges, is dignified and ex-Chinese, but with nearly every other nationality represented. In the architectural style of the houses and the buildings already completed this is shown more distinctly. Combinations of modern and ancient, of occidental and oriental, such as are in the houses of Dalny, can be found nowhere else.

Take one of the most prominent houses in the foreign residence quarter, for instance. The first floor is full of French lines, the second half timbered after the old English style, the half story above is Chinese, and on the pagoda-like roof are set Russian chimnevs. German traces predominate in the adjoining house, with its stepped coping, but it has English doors and windows and porches like those in Japan and China. Jack Tar is noted for a complaining lisposition. He fancies his lot is a disposition. hard one—and perhaps it is—and never seems weary of finding fault with his surroundings. He has never been known to be satisfied with any possible condition of affairs, no matter what efforts might have been spent in pleasing him. A good example of this is shown in a story told by the skipper of a large American sailing vessel now moored at a Philadelphia wharf. On his last trip from San Francisco to this port he had with him some passengers; so as to prevent friction, he humored the seamen more than he otherwise would have done. On the second day out the crew all came aft and demanded to see the skipper. "Well, boys, what's the now?" he asked.

INGENIOUSLY-MADE TOY TORPEDO BOATS

Simple Mechanism Makes It Dive and Rise Again.

The boys who buy boats, and there are plenty of boys who own whole fleets of them, are just now adding to their naval equipment a fascinating little toy torpedo boat, that goes clockwork and moves about, diving and disappearing and reappearing and diving again, all in a manner highly real-

This boat, which is made in sizes, one a foot in length and the other fifteen inches, is slender and sharp and torpedo-boat-like in appearance, with a little dome and conningtower rising in the center, and with a part of the upper surface of the boat protected by a railing.

The boat is driven by a screw pro peller operated by clockwork, and it is steered with a rudder in the ordinary way.

The boat is wound up through an pening in the top of the conningwer, which is got at by unscrewing the top of the dome. It is, of course, sential that this cap should be put back in its place before the boat is put in the water; otherwise, when the boat dived she'd fill through that opening and sink.

The contrivance that makes this boat dive and reappear and dive again, effective as it is, is extremely simple, consisting of a small weight sliding on a bar running fore and aft inside the boat, this being shifted in the operation of the clockwork that runs the opeller, and at the same time, with this weight shifted forward on the rod the boat is brought down a little by the head and the continued motion drives her under.

Gradually the machinery works the ball aft again, and the boat rises again; repeating this diving and coming up as long as the machinery runs. that stops it brings the ball on the rod to the middle, and the torpedo boat then floats on the top of the water. This little automatic torpedo boat sells, according to its size, at $3 and

EXPENSIVE EQUINES WEAR FALSE TAILS

Imitation Caudal Appendages Cost Considerable Money.

"False tails for horses," said a dealer in horse equipments to a New York Sun reporter, "are provided for animals that have become what is called rattailed. It would be in the case of a fine horse only that such a deficiency would be supplied, for false tails are somewhat expensive.

"The least expensive of them would cost $27 50 and they would run from that up to as high as $50. "What? Why, certainly. You could buy a whole horse of some sorts for what such a tail would cost, but the cost of these tails is not disproportionate to the value of the horses upon which they are used. These animals are fine, handsome and valuable carriage horses, lacking only in this fea-ture, useless in their work without it.

"The false tail is attached to the crupper of the harness and is further secured in place by fastenings made fast around the actual tail; it is put on and taken off with the harness. It is worn without the slightest discomfort to the horse, it can't come off, and isn't swell grub, I'll admit, but what it is absolutely undistinguishable from a natural tail.

"False tails for horses are made in England, and while in some cases it might be possible to supply demands from tails in stock here, they commonly made to order, for the individual horses for which they are reouired. It takes about two months from their receipt to fill orders for false tails.

"The demand for them varies with the fashions in which horses' tails are worn. When horses' tails are worn short there is naturally less demand for false tails than there is when long tails are in fashion."

RESULTS OF AN ERA OF VERACITY BY LILLIAN C. PASCHAL.

newspapers, files of 1948:

From the Butte (Mont.) Daily Digger, Sept. 12, 1948:

Yesterday afternoon a remarkable circumstance occurred on the volcanic minence west of the city, known as Big Butte. It was an adventure of two miners who had been prospecting for the new mineral silvoro. They had unhooked their patent divining-rid from a ledge of rock where they had located a lead of the precious metal, the natural amalgam of gold and silver, now so much more in demand than the old-fashioned gold.

The electric filaments on the finder of the appliance were observed to be in a state of great agitation. Instead of searching the face of the cliff for silvoro, as the delicate threads were accustomed to do, they were waving wildly toward the western sky. Upon looking in that direction what was the estonishment of the men to behold what appeared to be a strange bird of gigantic proportions flying swiftly toward them. Transflexed with fear, they watched the terrifying object as it dropped its inflated black wings and settled neiselessly to earth near the spot where they stood.

On nearer view it seemed to be a sort of airship. Its machinery gleamed with allyors, which explained the action of the divining-rod. Over its side appeared the head of a most grotesque personage. Steadying his uncanny craft, he leaped out with surprising agility. He was of alarming height, and his head seemed to center toward one terrible eye in the middle of his face. He approached and spoke to them in a strange kind of English, saying he was well acquainted with the races of the earth at a distance, having studied their ways and listened to their various languages through the astronomical apparatus in one of the public observatories in his home on the planet

Conversing genially all the way, the miners brought their strange guest into the city. He was not to be seen when the reporter called at a late hour last night. He is said to be remarkable in appearance, nearly twelve feet in height and clad in garments woven of one piece without seams.

His awestruck captors aver that his one eye possesses a basilisk power, but in a peculiar and alarming directionthat of evoking absolute truth from the unfortunate victim of its fascinating glare; that, no matter what is in the speaker's mind to say, the unvarnished truth, however unpleasant it may be, comes from his lips with that dreadful eye upon him.

They also ascribe to their celestial visitor among other black arts the power of becoming invisible at whenever and to whomever he chooses. Possibly the latter faculty belongs aiso to his airship, as no trace of it can be found on Big Butte.
But should his possession of this truth compelling power of eye prove to be a fact it is rather disquieting to speculate upon the direful changes that may be wrought in human affairs by presence of this unique being in our midst.

Clipped from the Anaconda (Mont.) Copper Sheet, Sept. 16, 1948:

Many accounts have been given of the man from Mars who arrived last week from the sky. He has been seen by few, but it appears that little escapes his eye. It seems that Dr. Dash, the company physician, while writing a prescription for Mike, was startled by the sudden appearance of the giant form and truth exacting eye of the Martian; hence Doolan's discovery that all the potent symbols on the bit of white paper signified no more than salt water and soda.

HARROWING HORROR!

The Martian Murderer! Done to Death! Pulled from the Pulpit!

The Rev. Dr. Blank, pastor of the People's Church, lies in a critical condition at the city hospital, the victim of violence at the hands of his own parishioners. The Sabbath quiet of that church was rudely broken by a scene of riot and bloodshed. No clear account can be obtained, though we append exclusive interviews with prominent members who were present.

But it seems that regular service was in progress when the magnetic pres-ence of the Martian was felt by all, and it is presumed that his evil spell was over the minister, the Rev. Mr. Blank, and caused those astounding utterances which enraged his usually decorous congregation into insurrection against him. They rose as one man and literally tore him from the pulpit. He escaped, though seriously injured, through side door and was taken to the hospital. Fears for his safety even in case of recovery are entertained, so great is the feeling against him.

The crowd was dispersed by officers of the law amid much excitement. The

THE SCOURGE REMOVED. This is the day of special thanksgiving appointed by the president to show our gratitude that a national scourge been mercifully lifted from our land. We may once more walk freely forth into the light of day without fear of the immense shadowy form and piercing eye of the Martian who has caused a reign of terror in the United States for the last three months. Some little resume of his career may not be amiss here. In the town where he first appeared, Butte, Mont., there are yet traces of his ravages. He put an entire stop to the system of social calls among the ladies. Instead of joyful greetings the caller met with such remarks from her hostess as "Old frump!" "Hateful thing!" and "What did you come here To which the visitor responded, to her own horror as well as that of her dear friend: "Just to see if you had bought any new furniture to replace that shabby stuff in your parlor." It grew too dangerous. After the first week of hair pullings all calling ceased. No woman could call her tongue her own with the baleful Martian influence upon her. For the same reason there have been no dances at the clubs this entire season, and the churches and schools are yet in a cha-this monster is abroad. A mass meet- | The town itself is now divided in half, East Butte being the abode of the larger part of the grown male popula-tion, and West Butte occupied by the majority of the ladies. There are but few residences or homes occupied. They are chiefly boarding houses now.

This is the direct result of the busy month when the divorce courts turned out an average daily grist or 213 decrees, a total aggregation of 6,391, for the month of November, 1948. On the other hand, many are reunited who had been estranged before. Several prominent and highly esteemed citizens are residing for the present in the city jail, while as many prisoners are released, their innocence having been proved beyond a doubt since the advent of the Martian.

Everybody has read the famous Truth Issue of the Anaconda Copper Sheet. It has been translated into fourteen languages. As is well known, it was caused by an unexpected visit of the Martian cent revolution against medical men to the editorial rooms just as the printer's devils began their nightly rush for We need not describe that memorable sheet, pocket edition, size 5 by 9 inches, its advertising columns of bargains reduced to facts and four sticks of nonpareil, its society news shorn of all glory of glowing adjectives, the microscopic corner occupied by police items divested of their padding, re-minding one of a row of brownie skeletons; the page devoted to paying gold mines and rich strikes in the Klondike shrunk by the hydraulic pressure of that Martian eye to five lines, the uncomplimentary nature of the marks about the "greenroom" and the results thereof—all this is well known to our readers. This was the last edition destined to be issued from the Copper Sheet fonts. That paper is now no more. The building was burned to the ground that night. The editor was forced to fly for his life, but he afterward made a great fortune by printing souvenir editions of the Truth Issue, which have been sold in all parts of the world. The editor has since retired to private life.

That the Martian monster finally traveled over this great country of ours, seeking whom he might devour, and that wreckage and destruction followed in his path, are matters of current history. We need not repeat

When he created such terrible havoc in our halls of congress, as a result of which we have had to call extra elec-tions to fill the numerous vacant seats in both houses on account of the boodle and bribery scandals; when he tam-pered with the president's message, which told us how many millions accrued to that noble statesman from the sugar trust; when our marts of com-merce had been closed by him; when the stock exchange had been made the abode of spiders and silence; when at the last he committed the heinous crime of disclosing and therefore destroying the methods by which model machine made city government was conducted in our great vice-protecting city of New York; when, short, our whole system of living had been turned upside down and inside out by the Archimedes screw of that compelling eye, it was time for the na-tion to rebel. And we did.

No common methods would avail to rid us of a visitor who could render himself invisible to the police when wanted. So a day of public hypnotism was appointed. On that day, Dec. 23, 1948, at 10 a.m., the whole country foined in an effort to hypnotize the Martian back to his lair in the empy-rean. Standing under the open sky and looking toward the east, every person in the United States over eighteen years of age concentrated his thoughts and prayers upon that one object.

The hum of industry was stopped; every train and mill and store and factory in the whole vast area of the continent was blanketed in one tremendous silence as the millions of people faced the morning sun as though by swing of a mighty pendulum swayed by common human impulse, for every soul on earth has some dread of power which compels the unvarnished truth at all times. The common enemy was in Washington at the time, ascending the steps of the congressional library. So many hostile thought currents focussed upon his will proved too much for him. He was overwhelmed by an inclination to call his airship and journey again

At 10:20 a black speck appeared in the sky above the gilded dome of the library. At 10:30 he stepped into his conjured airship, and the awful eye was seen to close slowly three times as the vessel rose above the city. the incubus, the nightmare of liv-

For his four weeks' attendance at Sandringham and recovery of the King from typhoid fever in 1871 Sir William Gull received £10,-Twice this amount was paid to Sir Morel Mackenzie for his treatment of the late Emperor Frederick, and in addition he was presented with the order of the Red Eagle. The doctors who attended Queen Victoria in her last illness received 2,000 guineas each, while Dr. Lapponi's skill in removing a cyst from the Pope's side a few years ago was recompensed with £500. But the record in medical fees is held by the ancestor of the present lord mayor of London, Dr. Dimsdale, who received for his journey to St. Petersburg and vaccination of the Empress Catharine II. £10,000 as his fee, £5,-000 for traveling expenses and also the title of baron and a life pension of £500 a year. Frederick Treves has earned a generous reward for his skill. At little more than a moment's notice he placed his whole time at the King's service, and for at least seven days and nights he never went to bed, snatching sleep at Buckingham Palace at odd moments. His daughter's wedding occurred during these critical days, and it was only when she drove herself to the Palace and put the case before her father that he took a hurried half hour to attend the quiet ceremony.

NEW YORK TO PARIS BY RAIL

Scheme Is Far From Being As Wild As It Sounds.

Harry De Windt, Intrepia Explorer and Journalist, Illustrating Its Feasibility.

Harry De Windt believes he has demonstrated the feasibility of a railway route from Paris to New York by way ered the distance with an expedition organized in Paris last year, being now en route from Seattle to New York. after experiencing untold hardships.

Moscow and thence to Omsk, Irkutsk, Yakutsk, thence to Bering Strait, over to Seattle, and now by easy rail stages to New York. He declares the railway can be built and successfully operated, an assertion which means that twentieth century travelers may, if he be right, yet journey in a Pullman the entire distance from gay Paris to somber New York.

and arrived at Dawson City July 20, and at Seattle July 28. The first 5,000 miles of his journey were covered in nine months and one day. From Irkutsk on he had one long siege with snow, cold and threatened starvation. Only the appearance of a whaling vessel at Whadyluk saved him and his companions from death. Once in New York City he will have traveled nearly 11,000 miles by land to reach his destination.

The weather was extremely unfavorable to travel. Storms were incessant were far apart and food scarce in every settlement. Nevertheless, at They said to him:

The dogs struck off into 500 miles of waste where not a strange face was to be met with nor the track of a beast or bird to be seen. When a thousand miles had been covered of the last part of the journey De Windt, suffering from lack of food, came upon a native village. Although surly in manner the natives gave up pemmican and fat for food.

On May 20 Bering Strait was reached and there the explorers came upon unfriendly Tehuktchi. These natives are most low in the scale of civilizaof Bering Strait. He has almost cov- tion. Only swamp and rock are visible. The members of the tribe die weekly of starvation and scurvy. Much of their food is raw seaweed. They held a carousal while De Windt was with them. According to custom, they put to death one of their aged people— one mouth less to feed. The ceremony is called Kamitok."

DEATH NOT FEARED.

The victim selected was indifferent to his fate, even assisting in the preparations for his death. A preliminary feast on outlandish foods was had. The entire tribe became drunk with the exception of the executioner, who was forced by unwritten law to remain sober that he might dispatch the victim at the proper time. While drunk, members of the tribe threatened De Windt's life, and he was sorely troubled for himself. At sunset of the day of the feast the Summarized his mode of travel, De men and women began to wail, and Windt accomplished the distance in a roll was sounded on walrus hide drums. GOLD IN ABUNDANCE.

The De Windt party made the important discovery that the Russians are working a number of gold mines and high, savage winds from 60 to 80 in the Siberian region which are of degrees below zero, the sledge stations untold value. If the same mines were located in Alaska or the States the rush to them would be unprecedented. De Windt had with him on his remarkable journey the Vicomte de Cluichamp-Bellegarde and George Harding. As early as 1896 the explorer had attempted to make this journey from Paris to New York, taking a reverse course to the one just pursued. He crossed Alaska first and then enstores and kept him a prisoner for forty-one days, after which he was rescued by the American Whaler Belour sledges begging for food, but we vedere and taken back to San Francisco. Just about the time of the Chinese outbreak at Pekin, De Windt prepared for another effort, but the Russian government would not then allow him to pass through Siberia. His third effort has proved successful.

De Windt announced before his departure from Paris that the main object of his expedition was to "explore the unknown regions between Nijni From this point, after a short delay, Kolymsk and the Bering Strait, with the Trans-Alaskan line now being acopinion of skilled engineers, be not only feasible but comparatively inexpensive in view of the enormous mineral resources that have lately been discovered in the northeast districts of Siberia, and through which the line would pass.'

As for De Windt himself, he is a journalist as well as explorer, and is one of the best-liked men in London society. He once rode from Paris to Pekin, which brought him into prominence for a time, and he has been distinguished by pronounced artistic and musical tastes. Some years ago his first wife, a sister of Walter Long died and recently he has been married to a sister of Lady Petre. The second Mrs. De Windt is young and very beautiful, a daughter of a professor in Toronto University.

WOMAN OF COURAGE. Mrs. De Windt is a singularly courageous woman, proud of her husband's fame as an explorer, and eager to be with him whenever she can. De Windt's sister, Lady Brooke, is the only English woman now living bearing the title of rance. She is the wife of the Rajah of Sarawak, and was received by Queen Victoria as a reigning sovereign. Some years ago the rajah was in command of an expedition against the Dyaks. The Klondike railway now building is destined to reach Dawson City and The Russian government provided eventually Cape Nome. It will then be within 2,000 miles of the Siberian Railway. Powerful trade reasons may exist generations hence for connecting the two lines or the war lords of Russia may deem it wise to build down to the straits, but just at present it does not seem as if any all-rail route to Asia and Europe could compete for an instant with the fast steamship service. Railroading under any circumstances in Siberia or Alaska is an expensive, dangerous proposition. It is a great satisfaction, though, to know that De Windt's bravery has made known the feasibility of a route and paved the way for the engineers when capital prepares to act.
