find satisfactory answers.

Since the premier returned to London from the scene of his personal local triumph at Bewdley he has kept silence, and none of the leaders of the Conservative party has made a public statement. Thus the newspapers and the people can speculate at will and they are taking full advantage of the opportunity. One of the favorite guesses, and the Daily Express states it as a fact, is that Mr. Baldwin will resign both the prime ministership and the leadership of the Conservatives. But lem of how to carry on the governcessor, to whichever party he might belong, could not command a suffi-cient majority of his own followers in the House of Commons to enable him to conduct the administration. The political writers in the morning newspapers exhaust their in-genuity in seeking a solution of the parliamentary impasse and submit suggestions. Nearly all of turn on two alternatives: either that some coalition is possible, or that the Conservatives, as the strongest party numerically, will continue the government by the suf-ferance of the opposition parties. Such an arrangement, it is admitted, would produce a colorless ad-

Another suggestion, made by the Westminster Gazette, is that the leaders of all parties might be called in council to examine the possibility of making a temporary arrangement another election.

The week-end doubtless will be taken up with party conferences, especially meetings of the ministers. The belief grows that should the Laborites, as the second strongest party in the house, be invited to form a ministry they would refuse, preferring to wait until they could command a strong enough following in the country to enforce their own policy without having to consider the good will of the other parties.

Some political writers contend there is no immediate hurry, pointing out that it would be quite feasible for Mr. Baldwin to carry on, if he so chooses, until parliament meets in January, Whether such a delay would please the country may be doubted, for, in the words of the Times, "the government for all practical purposes is impotent and stalemated—the very worst condition for the British government in the present state of the ernment in the present state of the Sixty-nine of the successful Laborite candidates owe their election to a minority vote in three-corneder contests, the combined Conservative-Liberal vote in those constituencies greatly outnumbering the stituencies greatly outnumbering the Labor poll. Among the surprises of the election was the result in Coventry, where three Conservatives were ousted by the big free trade vote, although Coventry is the center of the automobile industry, which has boomed under a tariff.

Twenty-four candidates must forfeit their deposits of £150 each, having failed to poll the requisite one-eighth of the total votes recorded. One of the victims is H. J. Tennant, brother of Mrs. Asquith, who opposed Sir William Alexander in Central Glasgow, where Sir George Paish, Liberal, lost his deposit in the election of 1922. ST. THOMAS AND CENTRAL GIRLS DEBATE WINNERS

London East and London South Collegiates Vanquished in Argument.

W.O.S.S.A. DEBATE SERIES

Girls from the St. Thomas Collegiate Institute defeated the representatives of East London Collegiate in one of the most interesting W. O. S. S. A. debates heard in London for some time, at the Central auditorium last night.

The topic, Resolved, that an eighthour day for wage and salary earn-ers should be made compulsory by law," was productive of sterling arguments, both from the affirmative and the negative, the latter being represented by the local students. Dama Lumley and Edith Hogan argued for St. Thomas, while Lena Cline and Hilda Gowie spoke for East London. The judges were Albert Roberts, Mrs. E. K. Albright and Dr. K. P. R. Neville.

In addition to the debate, a program of no mean merit was also given, among the entertainers being the following: Violin solo, Bonnie the following: Violin solo, Bonnie Banks; reading, Irma McLurg; dances, Lillian Adams and Daisy Mitchell; piano solo, Fraser Row-land; piano duet, Marion Johnston and Marjorie Pirie; musical trio, Harold Powell, William Duncan and

To provide a setting for the presentation of their summer sports' trophies, the local council of Anglican Young People are planning to f January, the banquet also taking the form of a rally of the young people of London and the district. This decision was reached last eneving at the regular monthly meeting of the council held in Cronyn Memorial Parish Hall, and Mrs. John Mire-house, Miss Winnifred Dumaresque and Miss Lillian Moss appointed to and Miss Lillian Moss appointed to make arrangements for the banquet.

A great deal of important business was brought before the council last evening. Miss Mabel Hogg, the vicepresident, occupied the chair.

The sports committee, under the convenership of James Dean, presented their report, and also a complete schedule of sports for the coming winter. In connection with the summer sports presentations the trophies have not yet been obtained, out the committee in charge of this particular feature reported that pur-chases would be made shortly. The purchasing committee were among the many others to suffer inconvenience through the failure of the Home Bank, the $50 deposited there to the credit of the council, having been set aside especially to Railway in running a special train on trophies. The amount has recently been made up, however, by voluntary donations to the council.

The annual reports of the secretary and treasurer were given, in-dicating that the local council's first year of existence has been a splen didly successful one. Branch reports given for the past month indicated that the greater number of the associations were busy with bazaars, rummage sales or plays as a means of raising funds.

Men's Club in the United States a similar organization has recently been formed in this city.

A group of clubs fro mthe various Young Men's Christian Associations in the State of Ohio which had originally been separate units in their own cities came together for affiliation. They agreed to unite under the mutual title of the Ohio Association of Y's Men's Clubs. Edward Jenkins, general secretary of the London Y. M. C. A., conceived the idea of forming such a club in this city. Mr. Jenkins worked strenuously in face of doubt and disappointment, aided only by a small band of faithful enthusiasts. The new organization gradually took form and on Nov. 15, a dinner was held at which an unanimous vote was recorded in favor to the formation of the club. Last Tuesday evening the task was completed and the Y's Men's Club of London was formed.

The objects and purposes of this club are several, and may be sum-med up briefly as follows: To culti-vate good fellowship among Y. M. C. A. members everywhere; to promote among Y's men ethical and profitable business ideas and courtesies; to enable Y's men to keep better informed on all matters of civic, national, economic and social interest; to support deserving philanthropic and social movements; to encourage efficiency and justice in civic affairs. free from political interference; to develope a substantial patriotism by sound character building; to stimuate the use of all Y. M. C. A. privlieges thus creating a closer bond with its members; to foster the good-will of the general public toward all Y. M. C. A.'s, and to serve the association in whatever capacity op-

What is a rattle?

Failure of a police constable to answer this question to the satisfaction of the court resulted in the acquittal of five men charged with hav ing liquor in other than a private dwelling at police court this morn-

The men were kicking up a run pus at 83 Dundas street last night and neighbors complained to the police. P. C. Williams was sent to investigate.

At the rear of the building the officer said he saw a number of men come out and walk to the end of the yeard to a shed. He also heard rat-tles. Then he entered and told them tles. Then he entered and told them of the complaints from neighbors. Later he went to the shed in the rear and discovered a number of bottles containing cider and alcohol.

Associated Press Despatch. Luxor, Egypt, Dec. 7.—The first stage of the work of dismantling the golden canopy forming the outer shell of the shrine in Tutankhamen's tomb was started today, when the folding doors were taken off their hinges and removed to the ante-chamber.

gan, however, the remainder of the scaffolding erected to protect it was removed, and the dust left everywhere by the demolition of the wall between the mortuary chamber and the ante-room carefully swept up Removal of the wall revealed nothing of interest-that is to say, no potsherds or boxes were discovered as there were among the rubbish filling the wall and staircase of the tomb. Removal of the doors of the shrine was a long and difficult task, lasting the greater part of the morn-ing. The doors are about 5 feet high

The second scene was indisputably the most effective of the whole even-ing, when Mrs. Hayward and Mrs Link appeared in two successive novelty numbers, for both of which they were extraordinarily well suited. In the first, a schoolgirl skit, these attractive London women looked for all the world like two modest little maids, and their rendition was per-haps the most perfectly done of any that have been seen in amateur pro-ductions here. Clarkson States Home Bank Shareholders Have Little Hope of Escape.

That was the message which G. T. or less stockholders, who met in Massey Hall with the aim of taking any possible steps for their protec-The greatest point at issue tion.

was whether or not the shareholders would likely be called on for the double liability, and Mr. Clarkson pointed out that either himself or some other person who may be apof as much money as possible to clear up the claims of the depositors and other creditors. The point cam up while the shareholders were discussing whether or not they would appoint inspectors to assist the liquidator, in addition to the inspectors to be appointed by the creditors

"In my opinion, the full double liability will have to be collected, if possible," Mr. Clarkson stated. "That would mean an attempt to collect the full $2,000,000, though I consider that 60 per cent of it would be uncollect able. Immediately following the appointment of a permanent liquidator it can be shown to the court that there is no reasonable possibility of the assets of the bank providing sufficient funds to meet the claims of the creditors, and the next step be the application for the collection of the double liability. The liquida-tor would have no option in the mat-He would not be performing his duty if he did not take that step, and any failure to do so would leave him open to a charge of neglect of duty.

That brought up a number of questions, one of them was to determine the position of the shareholder who is also a depositor. So the question was, would a shareholder who is a depositor be allowed to deduct the amount of his deposit from the double liability, or would he be obliged to lose both amounts? Mr. Clarkson's statement was that the shareholders must stand on their own feet, and the depositors must stand on theirs. The two transactions must remain separte which would mean that the de positor-shareholder would be in a particularly unpleasant position, for not only would be lose his double liability, but he would doubtless get little more than the 25 per cent of his sent to the Dominion government to rovide sufficient funds to pay the reditors in full without having to all upon the shareholders for their

Conservative Party Will Meet to Discuss Next Step-Ramsay Mac Donald Mentioned As Next British Premier-British Convinced Supporters of Free Trade.

LABOR RESENTMENT PART CAUSE OF DEFEAT

Associated Press Despatch. London, Dec. 7-It is understood that Premier Baldwin has summoned meeting of the cabinet for Monday to consider the situation and that a meeting of the Conservative party to debate its next step and possibly to elect a new leader to replace Mr. Baldwin will be held i nthe course of the coming week, as it is generally held that Mr. Baldwin, whose policy the country has rejected, will resign as premier. In any case, owing to the unseating of the minister of labor and the minister of agriculture, reconstruction of the gov-ernment is unavoidable, unless, as seems extremely likely, the whole cabinet should resign with Mr. Bald-

Moral of Election.

The moral of the general elections which have resulted so disastrously for the government of Premier Baldwin is that the British people still are, as they were in 1906, convinced supporters of free trade.

The fate which has come upon the Conservative party so soon after it discarded the coalition leadership of David Lloyd George, is due primarily to the free trade convictions of people, but also partly to a ober of other attendant circumstances. The first of these circumstances is that the party itself was divided on the wisdom of choosing the plank of protection upon which to challenge a new mandate from the country, since, judging from the exof 1906, there was every prospect of a repetition of the disaster which overtook the party when it trod a similar path pointed out by Joseph Chamberlain. No other policy, other than that of protection, could have been selected with a greater prospect of reuniting the Liberal party and bring to the Liberal side party and bring to the Liberal side the surpassing talents of David Lloyd George in electioneering and in the political game generally, according to astute political observers. No Achievement.

The second circumstance was, say these observers, that the Baldwin Government during its year in its credit to recommend it to pop favor, and, moreover, it had shown such weakness in its foreign policy, so much so that it even had been asserted that the recent concessions in the reparations problem made by M. Poincare, the French premier, had as their motive a desire to in-fluence the British elections and keep Mr. Baldwin in power, because it was feared if the Liberal or Labor party obtained the reins Poincare would find either of these parties much harder to deal with.

The resentment felt by the Labor party at Premier Baldwin's tactics stitute the third circumstance. Labor alleged that the premier's tactics had as their object the springing of a quick succession of elections, with the aim of exhausting the Labor attenuated election funds, and thereby giving advantage to the wealthier rivals of the party. The fourth circumstances was the

APPEALED AND REJECTED. London, Dec. 7 .- The Evening Standard today insists that Premier Baldwin, "having appealed to Caesar and been rejected," has an alternative but to submit the resignation of his government.

The situation now is one of the most complex that has ever occurred in British politics. It is generally believed Premier Baldwin will continue to conduct the government until he meets with defeat in the Commons. Since it will be impossible for him to put through the protecting measwhich formed the only purpose of his campaign, he probably will invite defeat as the most graceful way out of his position by proposing any motion in the House which the Laborites and Liberals oppose.

The government would thus be overthrown, and the King, according to custom would summon J. Ramsay MacDonald as leader of the official Opposition party, to form a cabinet. Cabinet Ministers Succeed.

Among the cabinet ministers and under-secretaries who were successful in their contests, Sir Laming Worthington-Evans, postmaster-general, retained his seat for the Colchester division, Essex; Lt.-Col Amery, first lord of the admiralty for the Sparkbrook division of Bir-mingham; Rupert Gwynne, financia secretary for the war office, for the Eastbourne division of Essex; Mr Ormsby-Gore, parliamentary under secretary of state for the colonies for the Stafford division of Stafford shire, and Viscount Wolmer, parliamentary secretary to the board of trade for the Aldershot division of Wallaceburg, Dec. 7.—Seven lives were lost in a fire of unknown origin which tonight completely destroyed the home of Harry Babcock, lot 26, concession 6, Sombra Township, about seven miles northeast of here. blaze was discovered by neighbors about 8 o'clock, but had made such headway that rescue of the inmates of the house was impossible.

The first to arrive found the front door locked, and an effort to break in through windows was thwarted by the flames, so that those who gathered at the alarm were helpless, and were forced to stand by until the ruins of the building cooled sufficiently to make a search for the bodies possible. Harry Babcock was in Dresden during the day, and arrived on the scene of the conflagration about the time the first of the remains were found.

Story of the Fight. The full story of the fight for life will never be known, but it is surmised that the fire started from the explosion of a lamp, and that the women, after making a frantic but futile effort to quench the flames, turned their attention to an effort to save the little children. This seems borne out in a measure by the fact that the remains of three were found near where the front door once was. The remains of the other four were found further back in the debris of the building, as though they might have been trapped in the upper story. Tonight nothing but blackened ruins and charred remains of the seven people mark the spot of what 1923, at the King Edward Hotel, in Toronto, and from the number of ap-plications already received the Queen City will be the mecca for hundreds of prominent men throughout the had been a happy home, and sorrowing neighbors, by the flickering of lanterns, are endeavoring to find some clue which will open the mystery of the catastrophe.

Harry Babcock is an auctioneer in addition to operating his farm, and this morning left his happy family, with their guests, Mrs. Ramsay, sister of Babcock, and her son, while he went to Dresden to assist his brother with a colesion.

Nearing Collapse.

Heartbroken and nearing a nervous collapse, he is comforted to some extent tonight by the sympathy of the neighbors, who can hardly realize that a whole family was practically wiped out in a few short moments and apparently without a chance to fight for their lives. For some years Babcock operated a store at Charlemont, a short distance from his farm, and he and his family were well known and highly respected in the neighborhood. Mrs. Ramsay has been neighborhood. Mrs. Ramsay has been a guest at the home of her brother for a short time. She at one time lived in Sarnia, but for some time has been living in Port Huron.

Neighbors are unable to give any explanation of the origin of the fire. They say that about a half hour before the fire was seen they saw members of the stricken family about the place. Attention was attracted to place. Attention was attracted to the trouble when flames were seen leaping from the house and the en-tire structure was blazing before the first of the relief party arrived.

Stock Fed. A search of the barns and stables showed that stock had been tended to and that everything there was intact, so that neighbors scout any theory of the fire being other than absolutely accidental. The flames had gained such headway when discovered that it is impossible for them to be a covered that it is impossible for them. to hazard any opinion as to the par-ticular part of the house in which the fire started. It is not known whether all the family had retired the fire started. Mr. Babcock cannot tonight give any idea of his monetary loss, which will be fairly heavy, as he is too much overcome by the sudden wiping out of his entire family, and his chief regret is that he was unable to assist them in the moment when they needed him most.

Police Get Unopened Bottle of Ale in His Pocket and Court Did Rest.

DOUBTED HIS ALIBI

Tale of Present From Toronto Friend Did Not Strike Judge as Satisfactory,

For having a bottle of ale in his possession unopened, Roy Spence, 521 Richmond street, was fined $200 and costs in police court this morning. The liquor had not been analysed, but Howard Cluff defendant's counsel, admitted that it probably contained a little more than the 21/2 per cent legal maximum.

Mr. Cluff submitted that it was a shame to fine any man $200 for hav-

Washington Inquires About Posibility of Treaty Negotiations.

PRESIDENT APPROVES

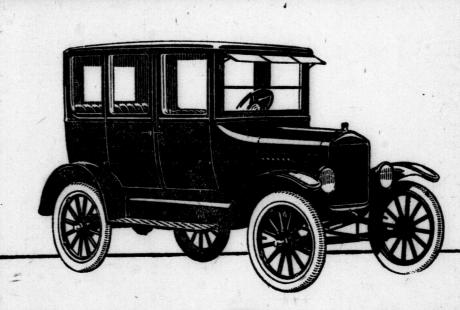

Associated Press Despatch. Washington, Dec. 7. - Inquiries have again been made of Canada by the United States government as to the possible negotiation of a treaty which would permit of a deep waterway from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic by way of the St. Lawrence

Announcement of the forwarding of the inquiries was made today at the White House, in explanation of the statement made by President Coolidge yesterday in his message to Congress that efforts were being made to obtain a treaty with Canada which would make possible "the development of the great power and navigation project of the St. Lawrence River." The project was given the president's indorsement.

Inquiry was made of the Canadian government about a year ago as to it sposition with regard to such a treaty, and the response received was that Premier King and his government did not regard it practical to sanction the porject at that time. The response was not interpreted in Washington as definitely closing the door to negotiation.

The White House announcement made no mention of any reply to the new inquiries of the United States government, and it is presumed that the Canadian government has not vet forwarded its replies.

The Gat Lakes-St. Lawrence project has ben energetically advocated in the United States by the agricultural interests of the Middle West, who see in the construction of a deep waterway to the Atlantic a direct outlet for exports to Europe. Ranged against the middle western

PORT BRUCE ROAD TAKEN OVER BY ELGIN COUNTY ing hand.

Aylmer, Dec. 7 .- At the last meetng of the Elgin County Council in St. Thomas last week the county council took over the remaining portion of the Port Bruce road, that is from the bridge over the creek to the lake. The other nine miles of this road, from Port Bruce to Aylmer has been a county road for some hardly a mile in length, has been used probably as much as any road in the county. It is the only road for all traffic into Port Bruce. The Malahide council has had consider able expense for some years in keeping this roadway in shape for the heavy traffic demanded. The efforts of Malahide's deputy reeve, R. B. McKenney, were responsible for the council taking over the road at this last session.

Leona La Mar, the Girl With 1,000 Eyes, the Feature Week of Dec. 17.

One of the most attractive fall bookings announced by Loew's, Inc. for Loew's London Theatre is Leona LaMar, the girl mind reader and exponent of thought transference, who in recent months has mystified the leading scientific investigators, whose efforts were to determine the source of her ability to reveal names and describe various objects.

Perfectly normal in other respects, Miss LaMar assumes the appearance of one hypnotized during her psychic moments and lacks absolute control of her mind. A fainting spell has usually followed these demonstrations similar to those one has after a long, tedious strain of work.

Miss LaMar is accompanied by W. A. Shannon, a scientist, who became interested in her work several years ago and arranged a number of vau-deville tours. Her work in England quite recently stirred the British investigators to action and drew much favorable comment from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, a confirmed believer in spiritualism and communication with departed souls. Miss LaMar's offering will be given in addition to the regular performance of vaudeville and feature pictures.

Brantford, Ontario—"I was always tired and the least exertion would put me out for a day or two. I had a pressing pain on the top of my head, pain in the nape of my neck, and when I stooped over I could not get up without help because of pain in my back. I did not sleep well and was nervous at the least noise. I keep house but I was such a wreck that I could not sweep the floor nor wash the dishes without lying down afterwards. A friend living near me told me what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for her, so I began to take it. With the first bottle I felt brighter and got so that I could wash dishes and sweep without having to lie down. I have taken ten bottles all told and am now all better. The Middle-Aged Wife Whose Husband Is Having His Last Fling-Shall She Stand by Her Girl Friend When All the World Has Turned Its Back? Can Two Live on $25 a Week?

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a middle-aged married woman with a husband I still love, notwithstanding the way he acts. I have always worked hard, and made many a sacrifice to help my husband succeed in life, and until recently he has been devoted to me. But now he is inclined to and fault with everything I do. He is cold and distant to me, never says anything nice to me, never gives me any presents any more. He is a changed man, and I do not know whether he has ceased caring for me entirely or not. Of course, there is a woman in the case. He is infatuated with a woman from whom he gets love letters, and on whom he is wasting his ney. I do not know what to do. I hate to break up the home, and yet my heart is breaking over this change, and it seems almost impossible to stand the strain much longer. HEARTBROKEN.

Answer: I believe that in a case such as yours that patience. and forgiveness are a better than divorce. A young woman, whose husband has been unfaithful to her, can wipe off the slate, and make a fresh start, and rebuild her life again, but at middle age it is too late. A woman who has loved her husband for many years can no more really separate herself from him than she can cut herself in two, and still go on living. He is part of her very existence, and she is happier near him, even when her soul is torn, with jealousy, than she is entirely

There is no excuse for a middle-aged man who has been a good, faithful husband suddenly turning into a Lothario, but it is a very com thing for men to do, and you have plenty of company, if that is any comfort to you. Brokenhearted Wife. Around fifty is the dangerous age for men when even the sedatest of them often start to sow a wildwhen they fall easy victims to any vamp who comes along. Why they do this heaven only knows. Perhaps it is a last flareup of romance before they settle down to old age. Perhaps it is sort of a reaction against the long years of jogtrot matrimony and a desire to see if they are still lady killers. Perhaps it is because by that time a man has usually made his fortune. and the gold diggers go after him.

Anyway, many middle-aged men break their faithful old wives' hearts, and make fools of themselves by indulging in a little flirtatious fling of which they soon tire, because it does not take them long to ascertain that they have gotten too old for such escapades; that they are at heart too moral to enjoy the double life; that there is small allure for them in bought kisses; and that, after all, there is no woman for whom they really care except the old wife at home with whom they have all memories in common, whose affection is true and tried, and who knows just what they like to eat, and what to do for their rheumatism.

So, if the old wife has enough patience, and philosophy, and humor, to let her husband have his little spree, he will come back to her a chastened man, and be a better and a tenderer husband to the end of the chapter. Nor should this be so hard for the woman to do, because no wife can live with a husband for twenty or thirty years without finding out that every man is a small boy who has to be spanked, and kissed, and forgiven every now

Dear Dorothy Dix-I have a girl friend who, as far as I know, hasn't done any serious wrong, but they say that she has taken part in a disgraceful incident. I understand that she wasn't at fault in this case, and is trying to live it down. I feel sorry for her because I do not believe in turning your back upon a friend in trouble. But I find that people who know this girl's past are inclined to judge me by her.
Would you advise me to leave her alone, or to

A FRIEND IN DOUBT. public opinion?

If you are convinced that the girl is innocent, and that she is really trying to do right, stand by her. There is often a crisis in which a woman is either pushed down into the pit, or lifted up into safety by just one outstretched hand. The fact that you believe in the girl will make other people believe in her, and public opinion, which blows first one way and then another, will veer to

But it is true that we are judged by the company we keep. Especially girls are, and unless this young woman shows unmistakably that she has broken with her old associates, and that she is determined to walk warily, you will not be justified in making the sacrifice that is required of you.

If a girl is inherently given to wrongdoing, she hasn't any right to expect to hide herself behind respectable women's skirts. And if a girl is just silly and foolish, and is always getting herself into compromising positions, she simply isn't worth your running any risk for. As soon as she fot herself out of one scrape, she'd get into another, and the fact that she isn't as bad as she seems to be is no excuse for her. A girl has not only to be good, but to look good and act good.

DOROTHY DIX. good, and act good.

Dear Miss Dix-I am engaged to a young man whom I love very much d who loves me, but he only makes twenty-five dollars a week. Can two people live on that in these days?

I suppose they could if the woman was a very good manager, and they didn't have any sickness, and no babies came, but it wouldn't leave much margin for doctor's bills and dentist's bills, and all the other bills and ills of daily life.

Much money isn't necessary for people to marry on, but you must have a margin of safety. No marriage is happy where there is continual anxiety over where the next meal is coming from, and where the wolf is howling at the door. Better wait until your sweetheart is making a better salary.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1923.

An Election That Failed.

Just why Premier Baldwin wished to force an election in Britain was never very clearly understood in this country. The nearest approach to a sufficient explanation was that he desired to have the approval of the people on his move to change the fiscal policy of the country to one of indefinite to positive protection. If that were his motive, he has had his

The election did nothing toward giving Britain a more stable and definite government; it has confused and muddled the whole system of government, as there now exists three parties in the Commons, and no one of them is great enough to carry on were the other two to come together in opposition to any move on the part of the largest group.

The Labor party used the election to better its position to a greater extent than did the Liberals, but both made their gains by taking seats away from the Conservatives. At week, and will keep it up for 60 the close of the last session the Con- years. servatives had 346 members, Labor 144. Liberal 117. That gave the Conity of 85 over the other two most material in the peak of prices in powerful groups in the house. Today the Conservatives have 259, Labor 184, Liberal 148. That leaves the Conservatives with a minority of 73 under the combined Labor and Liberal vote. It is a distinct and positive reversal of the former position, and one that is almost hopeless from the standpoint of practical politics as applied to the business of government. The British electors have given no definite answer to show what they do want. They have said that they do not want the protective policy of Baldwin.

They have not said that they desire the unrestricted free trade advocated by the Liberals.

They have not said that they are ready to take the advanced platform put forward by the Labor party.

There may be an attempt at a coalition, but its chances of success great parties and have any degree bers. of assurance that when they are yoked together they will walk in the to be denied the supreme privilege would cause no surprise

Unfortunate as the fact may be there are and always will be those who through sickness or other misfortunes are more or less hedged about by limitations that they are powerless to overcome.

It is a wise man who sees in these people an opportunity for service that reaches out over the bounds of his own selfish interests.

Happy is the man who advances to the stage where he sees in the need and surroundings of some other person an opportunity to inject a ray of sunshine in a surrounding that may have more than its share of dark skies and lonely hours.

Farm Tragedies.

With all the accidents on the streets of cities, it is doubtful if they can present such heart-rending catastrophes as the burning of a farm home near Wallaceburg, where seven women and children were burned to death. This spring there was a similar case just outside of Exeter, where a family almost equally large was burned to death.

The heart of Western Ontario goes out to the father and husband in that tragedy near Wallaceburg, for the day on business, only to find are meagre. THE PRUDENCE OF COURAGE.

Be of good courage and let us play the man.—II. Samuel, x., 12. There is a sharp distinction between courage and recklessness. The reckless man is ignorant; he rushes into danger without hesita simply because he does not know what danger means. The brave man is intelligent; he faces danger because he understands t and is prepared to meet it. The drunkard who runs, in the delirium of intoxication, into a burning house is not brave; he is only stupid.

But the clear-eyed hero who makes his way, with every sense alert and every nerve strung, into the hell of flames to rescue some little child, proves his courage. The more keenly we are awake to the perils of life, the higher and grander is the possibility of being truly brave.

To drift along, as some people do, through this world of sin, as if there were nothing in it to fear; to slide easily downward, as some do, to the gate of death, as if there were nothing beyond it to fear; to sport and dance, and eat and drink and sleep, as some people do under the arch of heaven, as if there were no One above it to fear-what is this but the part of the fool who hath said in his heart, "There is no

God, there is no sin, there is no judgment?" But to face the temptations and perplexities and dangers of the world without yielding to fear; to pass, without trembling, by the dark portals of the grave in a faith that is stronger than fear; to dare to live in the presence of the holy, mighty God in the confidence of a love that casteth out fear-that is courage. (Copyright, 1923, by The Republic Syndicata)

Old Teacher Thinks the Plan of Hustling Pupils Along Is Not Likely To Produce Results.

ditor of The Advertiser: Sir,-It does seem to me that there is too much stress being put on the who arrived home, after being away children in some of the grades of the public schools in order to try and problems. This is especially true in regard to mechanical arithmetic, and it is the policy of the local board, It is unspeakably hard for a man then it ought to be checked up fast

There are some children who not work these questions in a give and yet that is what they expect or try to create.

I know for a fact that when you mention to some children that they are going to have ten or fifteen minutes and no more in which to do a certain number of addition and division and multiplication quest there are some in that class who get rattled and nervous, and not do anything approaching the best work they are capable. The reor which they are capacity as sult is always the same, these pupils get a low standing in the class, and are made to feel their position. The system of trying to get a uniform levelopment in all subjects from all children is so wrong that there can nothing said to justify it. children have not the same talents, and all are not capable of the same

There is too great a tendency to rush things along in our public schools today, and this plan will never produce the best results. Kincardine Resident Points Out Tha There Are Large Peat Bogs Waiting To Be Used.

Editor of The Advertiser: Sir,-I notice in yesterday's Advertiser that Dr. Hugh Stevenson is urging the city council to try and get the freight rates lowered on Alberta coal. This is commendable, at least, if the railway can afford it.

For years I have been advocating the use of peat, of which there is a great extent convenient to towns and country. Fifteen years ago, I drew attention to the use of peat as a check on coal combines and also of the possibility or probability of the United States placing an embargo on coal entering Canada.

There was a large fuel industry started near Stratford, and samples of the product I have had the pleasure of inspecting. It was clean and nice to handle, and it is a first-class fuel, but the cost of manufacture was too great, and the scheme was aban-At that time anthracite could be laid down in Kincardine in the neigh-

In my boyhood in Scotland, much peat was burned, and in later days used to kindle coal.

Peat, when dry, will produce an intense heat with a good draft, and I see no reason for large and expensive machinery to press it into briquettes. In earlier days in Scotland and Ireland, the natives were content to go to some convenient content to go to some convenient cog and cut the required peat with a spade, made specially for peat cut-ing. Rifle Goes Into Discard as a Military Weapon Next War Will Be Fought with New Arms and New Rules

By A RETIRED MAJOR

HE rifle has gone into the discard as a military weapon.

It is used more to-day as a wand with which to perform drills than an arm to use against the enemy.

The rifle will be relegated to the use of hunters. Rifle clubs will keep up the tradition, as archery clubs play about with bows and

But as a serious weapon for war, it is no longer entertained by the war colleges of the world. The authorities in all countries are now furlously engaged in re-writing the military manuals as the result of the experience of the late war. And one of the most embarassing problems before them is to erase the numerous chapters founded upon the use of the rifle, the "superiority of fire." the "covered advances by rushes," and so forth, and to substitute in their places rules and instructions for the attack on an enemy armed with cannon, machine guns,

To get at the extent to which the rifle was used in the great war is difficult. In the beginning, in the retreat from Mons and other splendid dramatic actions of the day when armies and battlefields shifted overnight, the rifle was used in accordance with the little red manuals which the British army swore by. Hundreds of thousands of men manoeuvred and sectioned their way across the landscape, making use of cover, digging rifle pits, and firing their sturdy little Lee Enfields according to the best practise laid down in musketry regulations. Thousands died with bullets in them in the first months of the war.

*So wonderful was the musketry work of the Old Contemptibles in that retreat from Mons that the German high command in their report on the battle said that they had encountered a far greater strength of machine guns in the British force than their intelligence branch had given warning of. It wasn't machine guns. It was the rapid fire of the regular soldier trained to a hair at Hythe to use his rifle at every range from a hundred to a thousand.

But when the armies came to grips and sat down to wrestle it out, the rifle suddenly

The bomb came in. Deep trenches made rifle work obsolete. The cannon began to crowd up in rear. The trench mortar made its appearance, with its short-flung load of dynamite. machine gun came and in the trenches.

When the Canadians first tasted action, at Ypres, the rifle was still a weapon, not an implement. The Third and the Fifteenth old originals can tell you of those April days when platoons used rapid fire over the parapet into melting mobs of grey.

Machine Guns and Bombs

B UT before the first year was out, the rifle had become several things other than a rifle: a handle for a long confidence-inspiring knife known as a bayonet (which was rarely employed for anything but inspiration;) a handy lever about the trench: a crutch, a support for the rubber sheet in making a temporary shelter in the trench, and finally a sort of symbol of soldierliness, a wand to be used out of the line for drill, a thing to be kept clean and spotless, if possible, in the trenches. if you wanted to earn your rum issue.

And by the time the Somme battles loomed up, the first battles in which the Canadian corps took part as a whole, the decline of the rifle as a thing to shoot with was established.

By Christmas, 1916, there were thousands of experienced troops in the corps who had never fired their rifle in anger. They carried it with them everywhere. It was never out of their reach. They stood their tour of sentry go with it beside them, bayonet fixed. They slept in dug-outs with it beside them. They went on working parties with it slung on the shoulder by its sling-strap. It had become a sort of fetish, in fact. In the forward area, you never met an infantry man without a rifle unless he was a runner or a batman or some other excused

He went into battle with it, bayonet gleaming but usually slung on his shoulder, the better to free his hands for bombing, or digging or some other practical military exercise. When Vimy came along, a whole army streamed over the ground, behind a vast barrage wall, and every man had his rifle slung over his shoulder like a bag of golf sticks, bright bayonet sticking up stiffly back of his head.

If he ever scented danger, he took prompt action, in spite of the inconvenience of that infernal rifle bumping about him. Suppose he were on sentry-go on the fire-step and saw ething moving out in front. Did he at once take aim with his rifle and bring it down? He never even thought of his rifle. A bomb was in his hand and over the top. Or he notified the sergeant, who promptly organized a little the top in the dark to the kill. In the daytime, the man who tried to look over the top for marks to shoot at with his rifle usually got a bullet through his eye. For we and his rifle. Right to the last, the snipers used the rifle for all it was worth. But they were specialists. There were usually only a dozen or even less in a battalion. They had special rifles, sighted with telescopic sights, trimmed stocks, special ammunition. For in battle, what the artillery didn't do the machine guns did. After the Somme, the average battalion had four machine guns of an antiquated type. By the time Amiens was fought every Canadian battalion had thirty-six Lewis guns. Bristled with them. Each platoon had two, and it was about all the platoon could do to carry them and their parts. The rest of the platoon were bombers and bayonet men. A few "riflemen" were included as a sort of an obeisance to a defunct idol. But when a battalion went tearing into action, behind a wall of shell fire, with its thirty-six Lewis guns streaming out death at the slightest target, and the bombers and rifle-grenadiers tossing their little packages of destruction into every hidden cranny, the rifle reached the depths of its aban-

When Rifles Did Help

T HERE are, of course, numerous exceptions I in a war as long and varied as the last. One time, our own unit was holding on the Mericourt front. And in advance of our trenches, in view of the great width of No Man's Land, we had a series of advanced posts in shell holes strung along in front about seventy-five to a hundred yards. We put two men in each post. An officer visited the posts every

We had recently received a rather large draft of new men, and were breaking them in by scattering them amongst the older troops in all duties. But through some error in the dark, this night, the officer or n.c.o. responsible for, relieving the posts, placed two of the new men together in one shell hole, instead of an old and a new man.

It so happened that this night, the Germans come to play the game according to the new rules, in which the rifle took no part. They expected hombs or even Lewis gun fire. But rifle fire, carefully aimed, at close range, was a phenomenon on which they had not counted.

Apparently the leaders of the raiding party were knocked out with the first few shots. At any rate, the big raiding party, within a hundref and twenty-five yards of our trench, be-

If it had been two old-timers in that shell ole, their probable conduct would have been this: They would have flung a couple of bombs to give the alarm, then retired at top speed to the trench to give details of the alarm, and joined with the trench garrison in the storm of bomb and Lewis gun fire which would have met the Germans. But the Germans would have succeeded in placing many bombs in our trench and possibly have effected an entry at some

German Marks Make Last Stand As Real Money in Toronto's "Ward"

Out-of-Workers Listen Seriously to Barker Offering Fortunes in Russian Rubles, Austrian Kronen, and Other Worthless Money for a Ouarter.

In front of the soap box stood a crowd of out-of-workers, shifting from foot to foot in the mud and listening dull-eyed to the spellbinder. "As I say." went on the barker, moistening his lips under his grey mustache, "if a gentleman has an immediate need for his quarter. I

Nobody seemed on the point of buying. But they all listened to him perfectly seriously.

It was the Russian ruble, the Austrian kronen and German mark, not worth the paper they are printed on, making a last stand as serious money in Toronto's Ward.

"In normal times this note I hold here is worth about $125,000. Suppose it goes up to where the ruble is worth only one cent. You will have $2,500. You can walk right into a bank and get $2,500 for this one note." One man's eyes shone and he moistened his

The barker lifted the little pink bit of worthless paper up and looked at it lovingly.

Russia is coming back, gentlemen. Every day her money gets more valuable. Don't let anyone tell you Russia isn't coming back. Once a country gets to be a republic she stays that way, gentlemen. Look at France. She's been a republic a long time."

A man in the front row in an old army coat nodded. Another man scratched his neck. The barker drew out a big blue-green bill and laid it alongside the Russian ruble note. No one explained to the listening men that the cheap looking Russian money had been printed in million-ruble denominations as fast as the presses could work in order to wipe out the value of the old imperial money and in consequence the money holding class. Now the Soviet has issued rubles backed by gold. None of these are in the hands of the barkers.

"To the first man that pays a quarter for this 250,000 ruble note I am going to give free this German mark note for 10,000 marks." The barker held both bills up for inspection.

'Don't ever think that Germany is through. You saw in the paper this morning that Poincare is weakening. He's weakening, and the mark He was Coue-izing the crowd. A man pulled

Sniper an Exception

WELL remember the major, company commander, in whose command this astounding incident happened, and his indignation at the two triumphant recruits, which indignation gradually melted into the most uproarious laughter as the full beauty of the situation dawned on

We had a company sergeant-major who was a great rifle enthusiast, and instead of taking advantage of his prerogative to carry only a pistol into action, he would invariably take his rifle. which he kept in sniper-like perfection. He had been a seasoned hunter in the foothills of the Rockies, loved hunting, and during the lulls in the battle, halts during the barrage, he would lie on a likely spot and pot Germans, sometimes at colossal ranges. But he couldn't impart his enthusiasm to his men. They would say: "Let Kid Lewis do it!"

The rifle grenade is one of the handiest antirifle to shoot a rifle grenade. During the early experimenting with the Mills as a rifle grenade. we cut down some Lee-Enfields to a short little stub for popping the grenades into the air. Perhaps in future wars, the grenadiers will be equipped with some sort of sawed-off rifle primarily for grenades which can also be used for shooting ball ammunition if an extraordinary occasion should arise.

Of course, snipers will always exist. There are jobs for snipers and their rifles which no other arm can usurp. One day we were held up in the Amiens fighting by machine guns firing over a broad, fallow field, perhaps seven hundred yards across. We hadn't time to organize artillery co-operation. We couldn't flank. The scout officer came along with two snipers. He found the machine guns with his binoculars; and the snipers with their fancy sights fired about a dozen beautiful shots and silenced three machine guns hidden in copses and long grass. There are hundreds of such examples.

Still, the rifle, as the inseparable arm of every soldier, has suffered a total eclipse. The sword is still used by cavalry (whenever cavalry can find a war where there is no barbed wire and no machine guns), but the sword as the weapon it used to be is comic opera stuff. Perhaps, some day, ushers of the black rod, grand masters and grand viziers of the sacred innermost temple will carry rifles as they now carry

WHY DO FOX HUNTERS WEAR THEIR RED COATS?

THOUGH we often speak of fox-hunting as our oldest national country sport, we speak incorrectly. For, until about a century and a half ago. no packs were kept exclusively for fox-hunting. Stag hunts, boar hunts, even hare hunts were our earlier sports, and for such green was the usual "livery" worn by hunters, though different masters mig change the color—the original theory being that the hunters wore the "livery" of their host, the great man who ran the hunt.

When fox hunting began to be taken up as an independent sport, pink was first more or less generally adopted as the direct opposite to the prevalent green of the other chases, and we still speak of huntsman's "pink," though the actual shade of the coat has changed to red.

The wearing of the red coat is a sign that the rider is an admitted member of the particular hunt (having paid his club subscription) and not a casual visitor.

What is to Become of Sir Henry Pellatt's Castle? The Empty Substance of a Gorgeous Dream

By GREGORY CLARK

HAT is to become of Casa Loma? What is to be done with Sir Henry Pellatt's magnificent castle overlooking the city of Toronto, reputed to be the most splendid private residence in America?

It is no private residence now. Sir Henry dwelt in one wing of it during the war years, throwing its vast halls and hundred chambers wide open with an open-handedness that has characterized nearly fifty years of military activfty to Red Cross and Danghters of the Empire and sundry other organizations of a patriotic

But with the war over, and a practical-minded city imposing stern taxes on the baronial property, though the value of the place has mounted four-fold, Sir Henry abandoned Casa Loma about a year ago, found himself an apartment in the city, and devoted himself to his large country estate near King, Ontario.

There stands the castle, on a hill overlooking the city, visible from every attic window for miles, lonely and alone, as abandoned as any of the mediaeval ruins of the old world which inspired it, though it is only twelve years old.

A picturesque mass of stone wrought into beauty, worth how many millions of dollars today only architects can guess. In four of its seventeen great suites of rooms the furniture stands just as if it were occupied. There are coverlets on the huge antique four-posters. Fires are laid in the priceless seventeenth century fire-

DUBLIN'S MYSTERY VAULT

A VISIT to the vault of St. Michaers Church, Dublin, is an eerie experience. It is a death chamber in which bodies laid to rest hundreds of years ago may still be seen. Some are in open coffins, some laid out on the stones; and all are in a state of perfeet preservation. The atmosphere of the van't is fresh and sweet, and absolutely dry.

The only living organisms to be found are huge spiders; no other form of animal life can exist in the vault for more than a short time: No one knows how the spiders subsis: or on what they feed, but the webs they have span through the centuries are left un-

Scientists have experimented by air analysis and other tests but no saisfactory explanation of the phenomenon is forthcoming. That it is possible to introduce such germs is proved by the fact that a bunch of flowers, placed by a visitor on one of the coffins, rethe decay of the body it contained.

A long case holds a dozen pairs of military boots, spurred and agleam. Photographs on the walls record Sir Henry's visits to two coronations, a jubilee and that memorable expedition of the Queen's Own, his regiment, to eer, by any means. But it is for sale.

"I made a mistake," said Sir Henry. "I should never have built Casa Loma so close to the city. It was in the county when I began it. It is deep in the city to-day.

"I should have built it at King, on my country estate, on some oak-crowned hill. I can see it there. . . . And it wouldn't then be swamped in taxes, as it is to-day, making it worthless, in these hard times, to live in."

One can picture Casa Loma remote on one of those old Ontario hills, impregnable, baronial, afar, behind a moat and a draw-bridge, with respectful county bailiffs armed with tax forms standing at the outer gates of the estate, debating the propriety and the risks of venturing

Sir Henry has even tried to rectify his mistake to the extent of getting estimates on the cost of removing Casa Loma, stone by stone, panel by panel, lock, stock and barrel, to his King estate, twenty-one miles by road from Casa

"But it was out of the question," said Sir

So it waits, while rumors fly, a sight no visitor to Toronto misses, a monument to a masterful man's ambition, a work of very real beauty from the hands of Canadians, architect to artisan, a burden, a moral lesson, a problem. What is to become of it?

Rumor one: A priestly order desires to gain possession of it for a monastery or an episcopal palace. This is the most intriguing of all rumors, since the castle dominates, in its position, the most Orange city in America.

Rumor two: A syndicate wishes to purchase the place as a magnificent apartment house, the lits main floor a military museum and library rates to be very exorbitant such as only the very of the most splendid sort, as a memorial. Its wealthy can afford; thus a score of military makes the best hotel kitchens and Rumor three: An educational institution. Rumor four: A millionaires' club.

Rumor five: A palace for the king. There is no regal residence in Canada, only vice-regal. The king has no palace in Canada. It was suggested that the numerous loyal and patriotic organizations of Canada buy Casa Loma for that Rumor six: A railroad station. The tubes or underground railway which Toronto must sooner or later devise will need a centrally-located station of some description.

Rumor seven: That governments should cooperate in getting Casa Loma as a joint war museum, art gallery, soldiers' hostel, soldiers' club, and headquarters for the disabled veterans of Canada.

This last rumor is the only one which Sir Henry Pellatt will discuss. Of all the others he has nothing whatever to say.

"If I can't have Casa Loma myself I would rather see the soldiers in it than anyone else," he said. "I have a certain value set on the property in my mind. I would be willing, if the soldiers got it, to contribute a million dollars towards it-by taking a million off the value I have in mind."

Rumor further has it that the soldiers could get it for $700,000. Despite the fact that there are numerous properties all over Canada already owned by the government, and that as far as seldiers are concerned, even disabled soldiers, the government's policy has been one of strict retrenchment, the soldiers' organizations in Toronto are soliciting the support of soldiers all over the dominion in a determined effort to have the government take into practical consideration the purchase of Casa Loma as a soldiers' hostel.

Commenced in 1911

ERGEANT-MAJOR GEORGE CREIGHTON, military secretary to the mayor of Toronto and head of the soldiers' information bureau at the city hall, says:

"The property is ideal as a soldier's hostel. Five hundred permanently disabled men could be housed in it. Its basement could be turned into a recreational club for soldiers with a rifle gallery, bowling alleys, gymnasium and swimming pool-all of which are already there-and places. Rugs on the floors from the mills of to support what one millionaire conceived and could feed a thousand. Its great hall could accommodate large meetings. Its grounds would support garrison parades. It is simply ideal."

> Sir Henry made possible an inspection of the property and agreed to an artist making sketches within its walls for the first time.

Casa Loma was commenced in building in 1911, after a dozen years of preparations. It is not wholly completed yet. The central hall of the castle, a vast chamber ninety feet square and vaulted to the roof, still is filled with the builder's scaffolding. Many of the hundred rooms are unfurnished. But in 1914, Sir Henry moved into the east wing living quarters, the main rooms of the ground floor, the library, dining room, kitchens, four suites of living quarters and servants quarters being furnished to the last degree of completeness.

Not the faintest idea of the richness and magnificence of Casa Loma can be gathered from a single visit. The artist who made the sketches made three visits, and each one found him more helpless to decide which feature of the inexhaustible interests of the castle to select.

For example, the main corridors of all floors of the castle are two hundred feet long, as wide as a city street and high. The walls of corridors and chambers are paneled in great ten foot squares of the richest grained walnut. The borders are deep carving the full richness of which is likely to escape the eye in the lavishness with which wood carving is spread throughout the main floor. The ceilings are moulded in splendid patterns after seventeenth century ceilings. The floors are oak planks, a foot wide. spaced with teak, studded like ship's decks, except where a formal chamber demands a fine floor in smaller pattern.

The mantels are genuine seventeenth century marble and inlay pieces, worth about $1,500 apiece. The furniture throughout the downstairs are museum pieces, rare, massive antiques, delicate Chippendales and Adams.

There is nothing inside the eastle the least bit out of proportion with the outside. The George Second clock which stands just inside the main entrance is the biggest clock imaginable, done in lacquer and rosewood. The beds in the private suites are huge four-posters.

Looking down the main corridor towards the conservatory gives a sense of being back in the days of the Louis. Past dark panelled walls and the bright marble conservatory which alone is as big as the average house and lot. Casa Loma is no period. It is a bold combination of the massive Scottish castle and the fine-lined chateau. It grew out of the vision of Sir Henry who visited many splendid mansions in Europe when, as an officer of the Canadian militia, he went to England to Victoria's jubilee, to the coronations of Edward and of George, and finally when he took his regiment. the Queen's Own, to England. He admits he saw a bit here, a bit there, a wall, a door, a great room, a ceiling, and carried the memory of them with him, until as Casa Loma took form in his mind, he began to select deliberately the parts that have been assembled with such genius by E. J. Lennox, the architect who also built the City Hall in Toronto, into this castle which now stands empty.

Romantic Secret Chambers

HERE was romance in the heart of the man who built it, for even in these plain days, there are secret chambers and passages in the castle like those described in Scott's novels. Just within the main entrance is a sort of reception room which Sir Henry used as his own den. In the carving of one of its panels is a hidden button. Press it and the panel swings out, disclosing a staircase that leads directly to Sir Henry's own bedroom, where another secret door is concealed as a panel. In his bedroom is a hidden locker operated by pressure on a certain spot in the panel.

From the basement of the castle, a wide tunnel, down which a regiment in fours could march, leads over to the stables, back of the

Out of Sir Henry's bedroom suite (the seventeen suites of Casa Loma each consist of four large chambers and a bathroom) there extends passage out to a sort of opera box or balcony, which overlooks the great ninety-foot central hall. From here, the host can look down upon his guests, or can sit to listen to the organ in its oft opposite.

It has the grand touch, all the way through. And it could not be duplicated for four times its cost. Carpenters who built Casa Loma got thirty-three cents an hour-and they were master carpenters, too, to handle such massive wood. During the building. the masons struck for carven corners, through bronze doors of the forty-seven cents an hour—and if you look most delicate tracery design (modeled after closely at the walls and battlements and gigan-Italian seventeenth centrey doors) you look into tic buttresses of Casa Loma, you will see that a mason had to be a mason to master such monster stones as those. Here it stands, the baronial castle, and the baron will not dwell in it. How different from the day, architecturally so to be mourned, when the baron appointed the assessors and the tax collectors himself.

Sir Henry has successfully fought the assessors, and has had the value of his property reduced from time to time by them. His plea is that the castle, as a private dwelling, does not increase but actually depreciates the value of his land, since the fabric he has built upon it is not easily saleable. The present situation confirms Sir Henry's contention. The building itself is now assessed at about $100,000. If no institution takes the castle, what will happen? It will take a very wealthy man indeed to support a burden of millions like Casa Loma, without revenue in itself and constantly nibbled by taxes. Each beautiful stone, each splendid beam, each object d'art which has been put into it for the materialization of a man's dream is one more weight in a colossal burden to penalize him who would dare transmute any dream (save the most small and modest of dreams) out of mist and star dust and thin air into the tangible facts of stone and wood.

"POLITENESS is all very well, but there are times when it is superfluous," recently remarked Mr. Chauncey Depew. America's foremost raconteur and he proceeded to illustrate his contention by telling the story of Sam Lung. Sam was a Chinese stevedore, and one day he was standing with his back to a heavily-laden motor truck that was backing silently in his direction.

Another Chink, who had been helping Sam, seeing the coming truck, stepped aside, and began in the sing-song of their people to inform him of the danger.

He could bestride his toy-empire like a Colossus, and no one would be a penny the worse for it-except the other would-be Colossuses!

Signor Mussolini has several bolts up his sleeve, which he will probably time when the larger nations are too busy wrangling with one another to pay much attention to him. For the benefit of any small nation that may be the victim of a future Mussolini bolt, I have thought out a suitable reply to his probable demands: "My dear fellow, you shall have as many salutes from as many guns as there are in this country -pop-guns included-and we will command the whole of our population to wear waistcoats made of the Italian national colors and to eat spaghetti until they die of indigestion!" This should prevent further friction.

Once, when his presence and advice were urgently needed, he refused to do anything until he had finished a novel in which he was immersed. But that was probably a pose, like Drake's game of bowls, adopted for the sole object of allaying panic.

There are two distinct Mussolinis. The Mussclini who appears outside his own sanctum. whether on the platform or at a cabinet meeting, never opens his mouth until his mind is made up. He listens to others talking for an hour at. a time, and when they have talked themselves out he summarily disposes of the matter under discussion in a few even sentences, uttered in a silken voice.

But there is another Mussolini who is only known by his intimates and secretaries. This man talks and argues with irritating insistency for hours together. The silken manner drops and the voice becomes harsh as it rises and falls. He is full of doubts and questionings and he needs the positive assertion of others to make him feel comfortable. He longs to be popular; and, sometimes, he is haunted by the thought of assassination.

In a word, the public Mussolini is a poseur, who manages fairly effectually to Little do they realize that, alone in his sanctum, he sometimes trembles at the possible consequences of his own actions and requires more than the reiterated assurances of his companions to bring balm to his soul.

He's a Real Labor Man. Two Eight Hour Shifts

DETER PALLISEN, Danish consul for Calgary, Alberta, who has been invited by the federal government to attend the dominion dairy conference to be held in Ottawa November 30-December 1, is an outstanding example of what a man gifted with natural ability and business acumen, coupled with industrious habits and a cheery optimism, can accomplish in a new

'Mr. Pallisen, popularly known as "Pete," arrived in Calgary from Denmark in April, 1899, a poor man. Now he owns and actively supervises nine creameries and has a half interest in the tenth. His creameries produce from 3,500.-000 to 4,000,000 pounds of butter per year. In dispose of these products he has three wholesale warehouses in western Canada, at Calgary, Vancouver and Victoria. His butter is shipped, not only to all points in North America, but also to the Orient and Great Britain.

As a sideline, Mr. Pallisen cultivates six sections of land-in other words a farm comprising six square miles. It is needless to say "Pete" is a busy man. Several years ago his friends induced him to become a candidate for the city Labor Temple, and addressed a large audience of trade unionists.

"Do you believe in the eight-hour day?" he

"I certainly do," he replied, "I work eight hours before supper and eight hours after." And yet in spite of this proof that he was a working man he did not get the Labor vote.

HIP-HIP-HOORAY!

A DELIGHTFUL story is told concerning Mr. Henry Arthur Jones and an emotional woman in the gallery of a certain London theatre. Noticing some one with a beard enter a private box she, in spite of her husband's counsel, stood up and waved her program.

"Three cheers for the King!" she yelled loyally. "Go' bless 'im! Hip-hip-hooray!" Others also stood up. One was able to inform the lady that the new arrival in the private box was not His Majesty, but Mr. Henry Arthur

Famous Sallies of Judge Darling To Be Heard No More in English Courts

Noted Judicial Figure Resigns at Age of 73-"I Do Not Feel That I Am Dead," He Says-Sentenced a Man to Death in French

E NGLAND has lost its wittiest judge. At the age of 73, Right Hon. Sir Charles Darling age of 73, Right Hon. Sir Charles Darling has resigned his office.

There will be no more "Darling cases." From the lord chancelor down to the ushers of the court, a state of mourning prevails. For his lordship added more to the gaiety of the nation by his brilliant wit than any contemporary judge. He was also a great lawyer, and his decisions were rarely upset by the court of

As a judge, Sir Charles liked "human" cases, and he generally managed to get them. Hence the "laughter in court" with which his name is associated. The public looked forward to and enjoyed a "Darling case" quite as much as the witty judge himself.

A woman sitting next to him once at a dinner party asked him whether she ought to call him "Justice Darling" or

"Darling, Justice." "Simply Darling," was the reply.

He was not even afraid of criticising the law occasionally. "These laws were made for lawyers," he once remarked. 'What we want to do is to clarify them with a little common The judge often in French, of which language he is a student and master. He tried many cases, including that of Stinie Morrison, the Clapham Common murderer.

. A few of his cleverest sayings in the course of a quarter of a century on the Bench illustrate his biting wit:

streets. There they always repair the surface first, and then dig it up and do the drains." "In this court we can't allow more than one person at a time to tell the truth."

"It (society after the war) has now reached a point where it can be seen in a walk along the street that we differ by the width of heaven from what our mothers were."

There was a moving scene in the High Court when Mr. Justice Darling took his leave. At the close of his last case, Mr. Harold Morris, K.C., one of the counsel engaged, observed that members of the Bar had always received kindness, courtesy and consideration at the hands of Mr. Justice Darling. He assured his lordship that he had won their esteem, respect, admiration and affection. Mr. Justice Darling, speaking with emotion, stated: "It is now over 26 years since I took the judicial oath, an oath which obliges a judge to do many things which must be disagreeable to other people-he has often to do things which are really not agreeable to himself-and it cannot but happen that in the administration of justice he must inevitably dissatisfy many people.

"I have tried to remember some of the qualifications which you may find in Portia's speech to the Doge of Venice, and I think that that is in accordance with the principle and practice of English justice. One of the greatest safeguards for the administration of English justice is that the facts of cases are ascertained by juries whenever the litigants desire to have a jury, and not by judges. Juries have greater freedom and are able to give decisions which are none the worse because they have not to give their reasons for arriving at them. If I have merited half of what you say about me, it is that I have not had to sit alone merely with the old law books to guide me, but that I have had what I have always felt to be the assistance of juries. Now, may I say a word about the Bar? No one, except he who has been a judge, can have any idea of what assistance the Bar is in the administration of justice. Having said that to the Bar, let me say that I do not feel that I am dead. (Laughter.) I hope that perhaps on the judicial committee of the Privy Council I may see you again. Now, I leave this court for the last time. I cannot pretend to

Farrar's High Ball Record Worth Weight in Gold

Sometimes accidents help singers. Some sopranos in Tosca sing the aria "Vissi d'arte" in the torture scene half sitting, half re-that position, and that this was hailed as another stroke of profound originality in Jeritza's Tosca. "Stars" speak sometimes when they should not. There is a record considered worth its weight in gold or even more in this time of illegal liquor selling. It is by Caruso and Farrar. They are singing a duet. If you have that record, or your friends have it-it was quickly withdrawn from sale-and if you listen carefully, you will hear in an interval of the singing Farrar say to Caruso, "Have a high-ball!" The late and forever lamented Enrico Caruso, the kindest hearted man in the world, could not forego his pranks. One that was famous was the occasion in "Forza del Destino," when Caruso, as Alvaro, and another singer who took the part of Don Carlos, clasped hands and swore eternal friendship. Caruso, at that great moment, softly dropped an egg into the extended hands of his colleague and let go.

The other singer, absolutely unequal to the situation, walked about for some moments with his hands clasped piously before him in the vain wish to hide his head and discover a place where he could deposit the egg of which he had been made the unwilling custodian.

B.C. Attorney-General Trained by the "Old Lit"

Rapid Rise to Power of Hon. Alexander M. Manson Practised Politics at University

NYONE who was around University College, Toronto, in the exciting days of the "Lit" elections ten or fifteen years ago will readily understand the rapid rise to power of Canada's est attorney-general, the Honorable Alexander Malcolmn Manson of British Columbia. Manson was always in a hurry, and from the first registration of freshmen in the college year until the votes were all in at four or five a.m. on the day after the elections, he was the organizing genius of the "Old Lit" party. The cartoonist in his graduating year book has pictured him grinding out scores of "freshies" through the "machine," ably supported by class-mates now prominent in other spheres, and very much to the dismay of "Unionist" leaders, who see their finish as a result of his activity. Manson's college biographer adds: "Though he pays more attention to practical politics than to their scientific aspect, the work he does in March, April and May suffices to put him in first-class honors in political science each year."

Leaving the halls of learning for the great new west, Manson located in Prince Rupert, where his talents were soon recognized, and he was returned to the legislature as Liberal standard-bearer for one of the constituencies of Northern B.C. From the first of his parliamentary career he participated effectively in debates on the floor of the house, while in committee he was indefatigable. The quotation which introduces his Varsity record might, with equal appropriateness, summarize his political career to date in the west-"E'en tho' vanquished, he could argue still."

Manson's record as a parliamentary tactician started many years ago, and though he is still a young man in the early forties he has a reputation that is enviable, and, whatever the future of party politics, he may be counted upon as one of the most energetic, capable and resourceful of Canada's coming young statesmen.

It was sleeting. The mud was deep. The night was cold Number nine was straggling along any old way, and little Doc cared. It was no night for care.

As the weary, muddy, cavalcade neared Villers, a group of guides whose duty it was to lead each platoon to its hut were waiting in the dark at a crossroads. Hearing Doc's advance, one of the guides sang out:

"Who's this?" Before Doc could pull himself together to answer with his platoon number, there came, from down back that dirty, straggling line in the night, a sissified voice as follows

"This is Canada's gift to the Motherland!"

ONLY MAN TO SHED BLOOD FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE

'Twas H. Miles-But Since the Accident It Is Said His Enthusiasm Has Waned

R. H. MILES, who was quite recently M R. H. MILES, who was named a member of the Provincial Council of Quebec, is perhaps the only Canadian legislator who can boast of having shed his blood for the cause of female suffrage. More, he did this in parliament!

It happened during the session of 1921. Sitting as member for St. Laurent, Mr. Miles rose on one occasion to advocate the extension of the franchise. He made an impassioned speech. gesticulating and moving about in the approved French-Canadian manner. So wrought up did he become that a deputy at the adjoining desk thought it wise to slide back Mr. Miles' chair, to give greater freedom of territory.

Unfortunately, at the close of the speech, the obliging deputy neglected to slide the chair back into position.

Mr. Miles down, where chair wasn't. In falling, his head struck the sharp corner of a desk. Blood gushed from a scalp wound, and he was carried out half unconscious amid a scene of considerable excitement. The ten members of parliament who were also medical men rushed to the injured man's assistance, and eventually every one of them was entitled to claim a little credit for assisting in staunching the flow of blood.

That was the last important speech the St. Laurent deputy made in favor of female suffrage. His enthusiasm waned, and to-day it is said he is rather inclined to believe the affairs of the country can be carried on just as well without the assistance of women.

A druggist by profession, Mr. Miles has succeeded in keeping himself in splendid health. At 66, he has a sprightly carriage that makes many a younger man envious.

As his name indicates, Mr. Miles is of British origin. He speaks French fluently, though not elegantly. As a matter of fact he learned the secondary tongue from his farmer neighbors, and from guides and fishermen. These French-Canadians, with but little schooling, pay mighty little regard to the rules of grammar. Mr. Miles, learning the language "by ear", unconsciously memorized all the faults of omission and commission. The result is decidedly incongruous: a grand seigneur who speaks like a yokel!

It is as if Hon. Arthur Meighen addressed his House of Commons in the language of George Ade and the syntax of Ring Lardner. But Mr. Miles does not mind; he never speaks English to a French-Canadian

Rubber Shock Absorber Made First Hockey Puck

Cricket Balls Were Too Hard, and Rubber Balls Too Swift-Idea From Shop Display

HE start of the hockey season recalls to the mind of Mr. W. K. George of Toronto the circumstances regarding the invention of the hockey puck. Mr. George was not the inventor of the elusive bit of rubber known as the puck, but he was acquainted with the man who claimed the honor of not only being its originator but the actual maker of the first puck. This man was the late Dr. Robert Jared Bliss Howard, son-in-law of the late Lord Strathcona.

"When the playing of hockey on the ice began to come into vogue," explained Mr. George, "difficulty was experienced in getting a suitable puck. Cricket balls were tried, and they were found to be too hard, while baseballs and rubber balls were too swift.

"Dr. Howard, then a resident of Montreal, was among those who had become a devotee to the game and one day, while passing the warehouse of a manufacturer of carriages, paused to examine the articles on display in the window. Among these articles on display were some of those pieces of rubber which it was customary to place between carriage springs as shock absorbers. The idea then and there occurred to Dr. Howard that the solution of the problem regarding the hockey puck might possibly be found in this carriage shock absorber. He accordingly purchased one, which, on reaching home, by the aid of a sharp knife, he cut into circular form. That night it was tested, and the participating players decided it furnished the problem of the hockey

Good old-fashioned housewives make their Christmas cakes in November so they will be properly ripened by Christmas, but press of other matters has kept ours a little late this year. The making is a great business and the preparation of the fruit needs a whole kitchenful of children. I don't know how I ever managed to make a cake before I had a family. The ten-year-old blanches the alimonds and cuts the raisins, the eight-year-old cuts the peel, the six-year-old stones the currants and gets himself soaked in the process, the two-year-old puts in the rose water "all mineself," and even the baby helps by being extra good all afternoon. "Santa Claus' House."

Of course this cake is too rich to use in quantities, and as it keeps indefinitely is a great standby for unexpected visitors. The Christmas cake which interests the children even more than this one is "Santa Claus' House," which we make every year and put in the place of honor in the center of the table. For this I make two sponge cakes, long and narrow with straight sides, put one on top of the other, and cut the whole thing in the shape of a house. There is enough cake left to make two chimneys, which are held in position by hatpins while the icing is being applied. A thick white icing over the whole structure, chocolate bars for doors and windows and a little red Santa Claus standing at the front door with a pack on his back make a very appetizing centerpiece. And when we investigate the inside of the house we find that Santa has left little presents in the shape of a ring, a tiny horseshoe, a button and several five-cent pieces so nobody will be disappointed.

Boxing went over last night the biggest it's ever gone in London.

Though probably not the best card that has ever been staged here, the nals, two "resignations," and one fans were seeing real earnest effort, canvas dive only left two decisions and that is the main object of amateur boxing.

Jones, the Wingham man, who succumbed to Davey Smith, was lightweight champion in one of the Brigades of Guards. Smith's per-formance is all the more creditable. Jones says that he has had nobody Brigades of Guards. Smith's to work out with, and was a birrusty, but he freely admitted that Smith had a devastating wallon. He it if he had been in form.

Referee Lou Marsh struck some of the fans, who jeered at Penfold, jeers. "The kiss-'em" and "hug-'em" bronight. Outside of their staleness they sound poorly coming as they usually do from "lily-whites" who would be both hugging and kissing the can-vass, if they had the courage to climb over the ropes at all.

Even the boys who "resigned" last night deserve credit. Several found their condition not good enough for the going. And after all, amateur shows are not "knock-'em-down drag-'em-out" affairs. They are staged with the idea of giving the fans a peek at fighting in the defans a pecu-veloping stage.

The "seconding" Whitby, the Essex boy had, either wasn't good or the lad himself had seen the "boys" across the river at Detroit do their points won at the same time.

WOULD MAKE WARD SHORTSTOP.

"Say, wouldn't Aaron Ward look great at shortstop?" emitted Miller luggins in the bailiwick of the Yankees yesterday afternoon. "How come?" the Miller was asked. "Why shortstop? Didn't you say the other day that Deacon Scott was a fixture at that position?"

"Well, yes-and then again, no," evaded the crafty Huggins with conmate ease. "Scott looks like a fixture just now. But suppose he should take it into his head to retire into the cooperage business? Suppose he should accept that proposition he had last fall to join a corporation which manufactures hen cages? Col. Ruppert and I were discussing that problem only this morning."

"Does this mean that you are going to Chicago on a hunt for a second baseman?" the pint measure wizard was asked. "Well, yes, and then again no," evaded the crafty Miller with greater ease than ever. "If I had a man like Eddie Collins to play second base I would transfer Ward to short, where I believe he would play even better ball than he did at second. If I had a second baseman like Harris of Washington I would put Wardie at short. But how are we going to pry a second sacker loose from some of the other fellows when they all would want Ward

JUDGING. Judging boxing shows in Canada is a difficult task. The large percentage of Britishers always to be found in a Canadian audience like cleverness, shown in good defensive side-stepping, blocking and ducking, and lead their group, with a total of 514 Canadians lean to the slam-bang style of fighting which counts on the other tendance and Bible study. THE BULLDOG BREED.

Hamilton Spectator-Soccer has not made the progress it should have done this year, for which there are several reasons, and one of the chief of these is because no attempt worthy of the name has been made to Canadianize the sport. Not so very long ago a well-known team allowed an opposing eleven to replace a player who had been injured, and in the council chamber a certain official, who belonged to neither club, actually wanted the chamber a certain official, who belonged to neither club, actually wanted the from the amount of material and from the spirit displayed by the felgame to be replayed, and made a motion accordingly. Needless to say, this official had his training in soccer ethics in the Old Country; he is one of the old school, who, rightly or wrongly, still sticks to Old Country rules and regulations, forgetful of the fact that they are living in a country where conditions are vastly different. The average Canadian cannot understand soccermen. Enthusiasts of the game see other sports forging ahead, but are forced to admit that their own game is not getting the same support. The cry for a change that is going up is timely.

ST. THOMAS.

The acquirement of Fred Crompton, veteran boxer of Toronto, as coach for the Elgin A. A. World's Champion Yankees May Be Seen Here Next Year

ondon Fans Have Prospects of Seeing World's Champs in Action.

MEAN LARGE GUARANTEE

By FORD RUTHER.

President Heard of the London cumsels has announced that when in Chicago at the annual meeting of the Michigan-Ontario League on Dec. 11 he will endeavor to make tentative arrangements to have the world's phampions, the New York Yankees, Babe Ruth and all, visit London next

A visit of the world's champions here is made possible, due to the fact that when moving from New York to Detroit and vice versa they usually pass through St. Thomas on the Michigan Central, and there are usually one or two open dates when long moves are being made. Bringing the world's champions here would rejuire a tremendous financial guarantee, and any arrangements made now will be tentative only, the final of the contract depending entirely on the support professional paseball receives in London during the first two months of next year.

All Good Games.

During the past number of years, thas been the policy of the directors of the London Baseball Club to have major league team play an exhibition game here with the local M.-O butfit each year. In all such exhibitions the fans have been given good games as well as seeing major league crews in action.

In none of the games were the locals outclassed. The Detroit Tygers visited London during the latter part of the 1920 season—Ty Cobb and all locals outclassed. The Detroit Tygers visited London during the latter part of the 1920 season—Ty Cobb and all—and they had to hump themselves to Dexterous also ran. win, 5 to 4, copping only after George Dauss poled the ball over the sign boards for a home run.

In the spring of 1921, on the day before the opening of the season to be exact, the Pittsburg Pirates under Mooney Gibson stopped off in London while going from Cincinnati to Bos ton, and they, too, were extended to win from the locals, 9 to 8.

Delotelle Stands Out.

However, to Oscar Delotelle goes the honor of being the only M.-O. pitcher to defeat a major league team. This feat was performed in August, 1922, when Hugh Duffy and his Boston Red Sox made a friendly tall on London. The score was 5 to 3. Then last year we had the privilege over the Washington of looking over the Wash Benators under Donnie Bush.

Bringing a major league team to London is a rather expensive venture. However, the local directors are planning to continue to give the local lans the best possible.

New York, Dec. 7—President Heydler probably will be among the vanguard of baseball men who start west Saturday for the big baseball meeting in Chicago.

While it has been the custom of the National League to hold nual session in New York in December, a date and a policy inaugurated by President Pulliam, the National has departed from its procedure of long standing this winter, and is joining the clans of the section which hasn't had a championship in three "Of trades that may be contemplated by the clubs of the league I know nothing," said Heydler today. "That kind of business never comes into this office until it is over. I know that Boston, Philadelphia, Brooklyn and St. Louis are anxious to increase their strength—indeed, all eight clubs are anxious to increase heir strength, but particularly these

"There has been no communication between this office and the commissioner of baseball regarding baseball matters other than the ordinary matters other than the ordinary routine. Whatever Judge Landis has in mind he has kept to himself, and we shall hear his communications in joint session. There have been changes suggested in the procedure which governs baseball, but these are supplementary to the original code, and clarify some points."

Jackpot for Owners.

The expense of the three world series in New York has been so great that the plan to take the first cost out of the gross receipts, instead of making the clubs pay individually, may go through, although there are some of the smaller clubs that would not agree to such a change if they thought New York was in for any more victories. This item of finance shows how far the world series has departed from the original idea of a reward for the players to a jacknot for the owners. Primarily the intention was to Canadian Press Despatch.

Special to The Advertiser. Owen Sound, Dec. 7.-Declaring among nations and that everything COUNTY COUNCIL ACTS dealt at considerable length with the "The position of Jews among nations today and their future according to prophecy.' Church Union. Rev. Harold Young, Methodist, Peterboro, and Rev. G. A. Woodside, Presbyterian, Brantford, were the principal speakers at an enthusiastic meeting last night in the interests of church union. It was the first public gathering in Owen Sound on this question. Their messages showed great oratorical ability, were based on most convincing facts and, although the appeals were made from widely different points of view, they reached the same conclusion.

To Meet Minister. Mayor Harris received a telegram today from George P. France, Sarnia, secretary of the Blue Water High-

In their weekly comment on the market for unlisted bonds and stocks, A. J. Pattison. Jun., & Co. say Alberta-Pacific Grain common was fairly active without any change in price; Gunns preferred was active, a few hundred shares changing hands: the stock gradually worked up to 30, and was last quoted at 29 bid, none offered. There was a fair amount of dealing in Howard Smith 7s between 99.25 and par. Mattagami 6s sold off to 64.75. News from Mexico was responsible for many offerings of Northern Mexican Power and Development common at 10, and the preferred at 36.50. Western Groeers preferred at 36.50. Western Groeers preferred and Montreal, with no stock offered. The following are approximate quotations:

New York, N. Y., Dec. 8.—Chief interest in this week's stock market centered in the brisk advance of the railroad shares, particularly the low priced issues. Standard industrials showed few important changes, although operations for the rise were resumed in a select of automotive and tobaco issues and specialities.

Buying of the railroad stocks was influenced by high current earnings and carloadings, rumors of mergers and accumulation by powerful financial interests and President Coolidge's declaration in favor of comsolidations and freight rates that will yield a fair return on the investment.

Another sharp reduction in domestic crude oil production helped the oil shares, but the gains were modified later by reports of new financing by the pure oil and other companies and the revolutionary disturbances in Mexico.

Steel shares were rather heavy on reports of al reduction in operations and indications of another sharp drop in unfilled orders when the November tonnage statement of the United States Steel Corporation is issued next week. Uncertainty over the British elections and the outcome of the fight over the speakership of the House of Representatives had a somewhat restraining effect on trading earlier in the week. The foreign exchanges dropped sharpity on the news that the Conservative majority in the House of Commons had been wiped out and that Premier Baldwin's protectionist program apparently had been rejected by a majority of the Abitibi Gen. Everything the Farmer Trades In

Local Market

Considering the overcast skies the market square was very well filled this morning. There was no hay brought in, but there was little shortage felt, as more than forty loads have been sold in London this week. A, number of orders have been placed for delivery on Monday. Vegetables predominated, and there was a large showing of cabbages, pumpkins, cauliflowers, carrots, beets and apples. Butter, which was fairly plentiful, sold at from 40c to 42c a pound. Some makers with a special brand asked as high as 45c and in a few cases with particular customers were able to get it.

Dressed chickens went at from 20c to 25c a pound, and you could get a bird from 75c to $1.25, according to weight.

Solicitor Owens were appointed a committee to make a final draft of the bylaw. The proposed lease provides that the city should take over the gas plant for five years at an annual rental of $6,000. The city will keep the plant in repair and the lease commission. The gas company will be intrusted to the public utilities commission. The gas company will be protected by insurance, the premium of which would be paid by the city.

Hospital Board Meets.

An encouraging report of the year's work was presented at the annual meeting of the Stratford Hospital Board this afternoon. During the vear over eleven hundred patients were given treatment at the institution. The operating accounts show a surplus of $105.69.

The following directors were elected: Alex. Faill, J. A. Makins, A. C. McLeod. Wm. Preston, H. W. Strudley, K. C. Turnbull, H. L. Griffith, G. G. McPherson, J. P. King and D. M. Wright. A bylaw was passed naming the chairman of the board of health an ex-officio member of the board of directors. The organization meeting of the board will be held next Friday night.

The Perth County Council and the board of education of Stratford came to agreement this morning over the United States government warehouse report for December 1 shows. delivered. United States government warehouse report for December 1 shows a surplus over last year of 740,000 cases which is less than was anticipated and has resulted in a firmer feeling in United States markets. The early arrival in the east of western turkeys has given rise to the idea that there are more turkeys in the west to market this year than previously. From reports received it appears that western turkey crop has been overestimated, and in all probability will not run any heavier than last year.

The Greatest Ball Player of All Time

Hans Wagner Tells His Own Story In a Fascinating Narrative

"Wagner the Greatest," says John J. McGraw

"In my mind there is no doubt about Hans Wagner topping them all, past or present. I believe that ninety-nine out of every hundred baseball men, if asked the question, would make the same reply. So uniformly good was Wagner as a player that it is almost impossible to determine whether his highest point of superiority lay in his fielding, in his batting or in his base-running. He was a topnotcher in all!"

If You Are a Ball Player-

Don't miss this treat! Hans Wagner, during his thirty years or more of professional baseball, played every position on a team. In his remarkable series appearing exclusively in this newspaper, he gives expert instruction on the playing of each position—professional tips that no college or amateur ball player can afford to miss!

At Last, John P. (Honus) Wagner, Considered by Every Authority and Credited in Every Official Record as the Greatest Baseball Player That Ever Lived, Has Finally Been Persuaded to Tell His Story.

THREE ARE ARRESTED BOOTLEGGING CHARGE

Officers Allege Ringleaders in Custody At Walkerton-Hunt Still.

Special to The Advertiser,
Walkerton, Dec. 7.—Arrests considered of more than passing importance were made today when David Witting, "Red" Bill McKenzie and Sam Stanley were taken into custody on liquor selling charges.

It is alleged that they are the ringleaders of the bootlegging business in this district and the officers feel the arrest is therefore very imfeel the arrest is therefore very im-

For about two weeks a couple of strangers have been in the district and they became customers of Witting. It is stated that they went with ting. It is stated that they went with him to a farm and got two gallons of liquor after purchasing a bottle at his home in town. On the way back from the farm they told him they were officers and it is said Witting became so nervous he nearly wrecked the car and one of the officers had todrive it to town.

Inspector Beckett of Cwen Sound and Officers Joseph White and James Farrell of Walkerton figured prominently in the case and they are con-nently in the case and they are con-fident they will locate the still which is alleged to exist.

Appin, Dec, 7.—A most successful bazaar was held in the town hall under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church. The booths were decorated in red, white and blue. A well-loaded orange tree was an object of much interest, and the candy booth also was a great favorite. A weiner and roll booth proved a busy place, as well as the fancy work, apron, hand-kerchief, towel and miscellaneous booths. Supper was served from 6 to 8, after which a splendid program was introduced by Rev. M. C. Parr. The ladies' quartet of Cook's Church delighted the audience with quartets, duets and solos. An autograph quilt was auctioned during the evening. Proceeds of bazaar and quilt amounted to $250. Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good. Pour 2½ cunces of Pinex in a 16-oz. bottle; then fill it up with plaing granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make 16 ounces—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded.

$564.46 on the proper side of the Balance

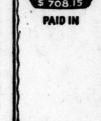

ENDOWMENT Policies issued by the Mutual Life of Canada give the full benefit of the profits earned by the Company, and the cost of protection is reduced to the vanishing int. Gradually these profits help outweigh the premiums until in the end you receive more money back than you paid in, and your insurance all these years has cost you nothing.

Take the case of Mutual Life Endowment Policy Number 28083. The holder of this policy took out a 30year endowment at the age of twenty. At the close of the contract the total premiums paid in amounted to $708.15. The Company paid back to him a total of $1,272.61, representing a net gain of $564.46!

In other words, this policyholder received $179.71 for every $100 invested with the Company.

Cuticura Healed.

"About a year ago a few small pimples broke out on my face. A month later my cheeks and chin were entirely covered with large, red pimples that festered and scaled over, and frequently caused irritation. I tried different remedies without success. I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. After using it I could see an improvement so purchased more, and after using two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, together with the Cuticura Soap, I was healed." (Signed) G. Marcoux, Laval Hospital, Ste. Foye, Quebec.

Silver To William

SPLENDID BANQUET

Warden William Ross, one of the most popular men who ever presided over a Middlesex county council was host to the councillors last night at a splendid banquet in the Grigg House. County officials and their wives were also among the guests

During the evening the warden wa presented with a magnificent cabinet of silver by the members of the council, the address being read by A. L. McDougall, the presentation being made by C. C. Henry.

The address which accompanied the cabinet of silver was as follows: "At this the last session of the county council for the year we desire to avail ourselves of this opportunity of expressing to you our sincere appreciation of the kind, courteous and efficient manner in which you have directed the business of this counci of the office of warden.

"Although having the advantage of but few years' practical experience in municipal affairs, it was early recognized that you possessed the charac-teristics of one admirably fitted to guide the deliberations of those who serve under you.

"Many times, no doubt, some of us have said things that tried your patience and which would have irritated many others, but by your quiet and unassuming manner and your tact and ability at all times, you have won the confidence and esteem

"That our appreciation may not be expressed in words only, we ask you to accept this cabinet of silver and in the years to come as you use it daily, may it remind you of your associates during the year in which you so ably discharged the duties of your mportant office.

Wished Happiness.

"That you and your estimable helpmate may have many years of health, happiness and prosperity is the sin-cere wish of the members and of-ficials of the 1923 council of Middle-

"Signed,—C. C. Henry, J. M. Ross, George Lewis, William J. Fuller, Allan McPherson, J. E. Harrison, A. . McDougall."

In thanking the members of the council, Warden Ross stated it had been a pleasure to act as warden during the year, because he had the whole county council at his back. From January to December there hadn't been one member of the council who had tried to put him in a

Archie Ferguson, ex-reeve of Lobo, who acted as chairman of the even-ing, referred in glowing terms to the ability of the warden. He also men-tioned the fine service that J. S. Cousins had rendered the county and the township of Westminster. "Mr. Cousin's work when he was warden was certainly an inspiration to every member of the council," declared Mr Ferguson.

Speakers of Evening

Among the speakers of the evening vere: County Solicitor J. C. Elliott K.C.; T. G. Turnbull, County Clerk John Stuart, Sheriff Graham, County Engineer Charles Talbot, J. S Engineer Charles Talbot, J. S. Cousins, W. A. Collins, J. N. Sullivan A. C. Hodgins, J. M. Ross, J. E. Harrison, R. T. Reycraft, A. Winter Mayor Wenige, E. S. Little, W. J. Fuller and J. Morgan.

Those who took part in the splendid musical program were: Mrs. G. H. Owen, Miss Calvert (daughter of the reeve of Strathroy), Miss May Winter (daughter of Councillor Win.

Winter (daughter of Councillor Winter, London Township), Capt. T. E. Robson, C. C. Henry, Tom Elliott.
