Leif Ericsson—The Discoverer of America

THE FIRST WHITE MEN to tread American soil were Leif Ericsson and his sea-dashed Viking crew. This was nearly a thousand years ago, when the Scandinavian peoples ruled the seas and held the secrets of navigation. The history of the fair-haired, liberty-loving sons and daughters of Sweden, Norway and Denmark is rich in song and story. We have millions of these splendid folk in our own land, and wherever the standard of Liberty and Human Progress has been raised they are found in the front rank, bravely fighting for the Right. Better citizens or greater lovers of Personal Liberty are unknown. For centuries our full-blooded Scandinavian brothers have been moderate users of Barley-Malt brews. Who can truthfully say it has injured them in any way? It is the ancient heritage of these peoples to revolt at Prohibitory Laws, and their vote is registered almost to a man against such legislation. For 75 years Scandinavians have been drinkers of the honestly-brewed beers of Anheuser-Busch. They have helped to make their great brand BUDWEISER exceed the sales of any other beer by millions of bottles. Seven thousand, five hundred men, all in all, are daily required to keep pace with the natural public demand for Budweiser. ANHEUSER-BUSCH · ST. LOUIS, U.S.A.

A Great Intrigue,

OR, THE Mistress of Darracourt.

CHAPTER IX.

He turned and came toward them, and Lucille saw the old lady's fierce expression soften into a strange kindness.

"So you are here still, are you, sir?" she said, and the tone was gentler than her words.

"Yes, my lady," he replied.

"Humph!" she said, thoughtfully. "They told me you were going to leave the country. What are you doing here?"

"I am Miss Darracourt's servant, my lady," he replied, gravely, just raising his hat towards Lucille.

"Miss Darracourt's servant!" repeated Lady Farnley, as if she was pondering over it. "Humph! she might have a better!"

"And she might have a worse," he said, with perfect respect, and with a grave smile.

"I'm not sure of that," she snapped, but she smiled as she spoke, and her eyes dwelt upon his face indulgently.

"I suppose I ought to tell her that you are an idle, ne'er-do-well, Harry Herne, eh?"

"It would be quite superfluous, my lady; there are so many to tell her that."

"And you still keep him, my dear?" she asked, turning to Lucille.

By this time Lucille had regained her usual composure, and met the sharp eye steadily.

"I am accustomed to judge for myself, Lady Farnley," she said, coldly, almost haughtily.

"Well, well, my dear, you are your own mistress. I dare say he'll be useful."

"Have you any commands for me, my lady?" he said, almost interrupting her.

"Eh? Oh, no; you can go, sir; I see you are anxious to be gone," but as she turned she called to him again.

"What's the matter, Harry? What are you limping for?" He turned back with a slight flush on his tanned cheek, and his color showed the faint trace of the whip weal, which had not entirely disappeared. "And what's that on your face?" she added, with something like concern. "Come here, Harry!"

He came closer, his eyes downcast.

"Yes; there's a mark right across your face, and a cut on your temples. You have been fighting, sir!" and she held up her finger and shook it at him.

"No, I have not," he said. "I met with an accident on driving. A mere nothing. Good-morning, my lady," and he raised his hat and limped quietly away; but as he went his eyes sought Lucille's imploringly and earnestly.

Lady Farnley turned to her sharply.

"He's been fighting! That was a story, of course!"

"Indeed, it was not!" exclaimed Lucille. "It was an accident. The ponies ran away with me, and—and we should have been killed, but he—Harry Herne—threw himself upon them and stopped them. He saved our lives! It was splendid! If he had not been there, one or both of us must have been dashed to pieces, I think!"

"One of us! There were two of you, then? That girl with you! I could have spared her!"

"Oh, Lady Farnley! It was not Miss Verner—it was the Marquis de Merle!"

Lady Farnley turned towards her with a sudden start.

"The Marquis de Merle with you! and—and Harry Herne saved him!" she said, with a strange infection.

"And—and what did he say? Did he—did he thank him?"

"Yes," said Lucille, her eyes flashing; "in a way peculiar to marquises, perhaps. He struck him across the face with his whip, and the mark you saw was the result."

The old lady stopped, and with her face white as death, save for the rouge spots, grasped Lucille's arms.

"What!" she gasped. "Struck him—with a whip—the marquis struck Harry Herne!"

"Yes," said Lucille, compressing her lips; "he struck him—for no cause, unless for saving his life!"

"The—coward!" She trembled like a leaf, and Lucille took her arm and drew it within her own. "Thank you, my dear; thank you. I am an old woman and easily upset. Struck him! Oh, Heaven; there will be blood spilt! I know it—I know it! To strike him! Well, well—what happened? Quick, my dear!"

"Nothing," said Lucille, with strange quietude. "Harry Herne—he might easily have killed him with a single blow!—bore it like a man!"

"A man! A gentleman!" exclaimed the old lady. "I see it all. You were there, and he wouldn't quarrel before you. Oh!" and she drew a long breath.

Then she turned swiftly, imploringly, to Lucille.

"My dear, mischief will come of this. It will; I know it. But you must prevent it. Do you hear?" she insisted anxiously. "You must send him away—"

Lucille's brows came down.

"Why should I send him away?" she said, her eyes glowing with hauteur, as it seemed. "He has been here all his life—long before I came. He loves this place, with better cause than I have. He prayed to me to let him remain. He saved my life, bore insult for my sake, and, to reward him, I must—send him away!"

The old lady looked up at her, with mingled admiration and distress.

"Well, well, well!" she muttered. "You won't, I see. Oh, you have all the Darracourt spirit, my dear! Well, I can't help it. Harm will come of it. You don't know—"

She stopped abruptly, and Lucille broke in quietly.

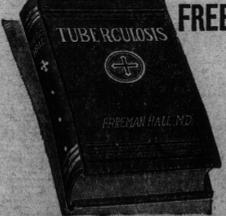

"What is it I do not know? Why are these two men such enemies? And what is this Harry Herne? Will you tell me?"

Lady Farnley looked from side to side, then she rose.

"No, I cannot tell you," she said. "It is not for me. It is not for you to know, either. Let it rest my dear. I—I made too much of it, I daresay. There! Here's the carriage!" and she got up with an air of relief. "Help me in, my dear; I'm shaken all to bits, and I thought nothing would Don't wait—write to-day. It may mean the saving of your life.

move me any more, but I didn't calculate on this."

"You will not tell me?" said Lucille.

The old lady seemed to shrink from her.

"No, no! Don't ask me," she muttered; "and"—catching Lucille's arm as she stood back—"and don't ask any one else to tell you. Do you hear? Be a good girl now, and humor an old woman who likes you already, and will be fond of you, if you will let her," she was almost whimpering. "Let the thing rest. Oh, dear! Tell them to drive on. Wait!

Promise me, my dear—it's for your own good—promise me you won't inquire; now there's a good girl. Don't scowl at me like that."

Lucille forced a smile.

"I did not mean to scowl," she said quietly. "Very well, I will promise—for the present. But I may ask you to release me from that promise, Lady Farnley."

"That I never will," said the old lady, swiftly; and with these words the carriage moved away.

CHAPTER X.

You might live in a worse place than Wandsworth—and you might live in a better.

It is not poverty stricken, like some of the neighborhoods in London, the greatest and finest and richest city of the world; it is not exactly squalid, but it is emphatically and decidedly depressing.

It is here that the honest, hard-working artisan seeks his well-earned repose—it is here that the small tradesman makes an equally hard-earned livelihood, and it is here Mr. Sinclair, or, as he was styled on the posters, Mr. St. Clair, had a local habitation and a name.

Amusement was provided in Wandsworth by the Oriental Music Hall.

It is not an imposing edifice by any means, but, though it is attached to a saloon and adds considerably to the revenue of that establishment, it is quite respectable.

It was the evening of the day Mr. Sinclair had paid his visit to Darracourt, and he had just finished exploring the Wandsworthians in the Oriental to "Come into the Garden, Maud," and assuring them that he was "The Pilgrim of Love."

He was in anything but an amiable and peaceful mood as he climbed the narrow staircase of No. 21 Eden Row to the almost as narrow room in which he lived.

Mr. Sinclair lived in what is termed "the first floor back." It was a small room, meagerly furnished, the most conspicuous article being, next to the bed, a large lithograph portrait of "Senior St. Clair, the world-famed tenor," the next an enlarged photograph of a girl with yellow hair, great gray eyes, and thin lips—the portrait of Miss Marie Verner.

"I've never felt so fearful as to-night," he muttered. "It's seeping her, I suppose, and the thought that she's left that school, and gone to live among the swells. Oh, if I'd only married her! I was a fool to leave her free. A fool! and now I shan't sleep all night, and—there's nothing to drink," he added, thirstily.

At that moment there came three or four peculiarly dismal groans, as if seemed from behind the box, but in reality from the next room.

Mr. Sinclair glanced at the wall with a scowl.

"And now he's going it, to make things worse. And he'll keep it up all night, I suppose."

Another groan seemed to indicate that the supposition was not unfounded, and Mr. Sinclair, muttering, "Well, I suppose I may as well go and talk to him as sit and listen to him groaning," put out his candle for economy's sake, and groping his way to a door on the landing, knocked not over gently.

A voice, which seemed to come from a distance, answered, "Come in!" and Mr. Sinclair entered.

British Fleet Admirals Are Young in Years

Most of Them Are Veterans in the Service, However—Average Age About 52 Years.

The Hero of the Heligoland Fight.

Rear-Admiral Sir David Beatty, the admiral who made the daring attack on the County Westford man, who has seen service before. He is 43 years old and is the son of Capt. D. L. Beatty of Bonaventure County, Westford, Ireland. His father is deputy lieutenant of Westford. He married Ethel, the oldest daughter of Marshall Field, Sr., of Chicago. He entered the Navy in 1884; he served in the Soudan in 1898, obtained a D.S.O., was mentioned in despatches, was given a medal of the 4th class Médaille and was promoted to a Commander. He served in China in 1900, was again mentioned in despatches, obtained medal and clasp and was promoted Captain. He has thus been twice promoted for his work in active service. He became a Rear-Admiral in 1910. Well done Beatty!

With the thought of everybody in the Empire directed to the doing of our fleets at sea, writes the Naval correspondent of the London Times, an account of the individual officers commanding the squadrons engaged in war cannot fail to be of deep interest. Foremost, of course, is Admiral Sir John Jellicoe, whose appointment was announced August 12. To a large number of people he has hitherto probably been an unknown personality. During the occurrence of the immediate future, however, many other men whose names are unfamiliar to the public will certainly come to the front. Some of these officers are referred to in the following sketches.

A glance at the fleet commanders as a whole shows that, comparatively speaking, this is the day of young admirals. There are hardly any officers flying their flags in the fleet who can be called veterans in point of age, though the term may be used in regard to their service, for the majority have had over 40 years in the Navy. In the First Fleet, the oldest officer, Vice-Admiral Sir Douglas Gamble, is 57, and the youngest, Rear-Admiral Sir David Beatty, 42. The average age is about 52 years. This affords a contrast to the custom in many navies which employ only admirals of between 50 and 60 years of age.

Sir John Jellicoe, who as Commander-in-Chief of the Home Fleets is in supreme command in the North Sea, was 54 in December, and has been in the Navy since 1872. He is a gunnery specialist, winning the £80 prize for gunnery when at college as a lieutenant in 1885. Twice he has seen war service, first in the Egyptian War of 1882, and secondly in China, in 1900, when he was wounded in Sir Edward Seymour's expedition to relieve the Peking Legations, of which expedition he was Chief Staff Officer. His thoroughness as an administrator has been shown as Naval assistant to the Controller Director of Naval Ordnance, Third Sea Lord and Second Sea Lord, which latter post he has just left. Afloat, he has been rear-admiral commanding that fleet, and vice-admiral commanding the Second Division of the Home Fleet. When in command of the "Red" Fleet during the 1913 manoeuvres he showed his skill in raiding the Humber and other East Coast places.

Rear-Admiral C. E. Madden, Chief of the Staff to Sir John Jellicoe, is a brother-in-law to that officer, both admirals having married daughters of Sir Charles Cayzer. Entering the Navy

O. W. HOLMES born 1809, American author who was perhaps, the most versatile of the American men of letters who were his contemporaries. As an essayist he must be placed among the first masters of the craft—with Addison and Leigh Hunt. His poetry, particularly the short pieces in the "Autocrat" and the "Professor," is written with deep human experience.

SIR CHARLES NAPIER died 1853, aged 71. English General, whose brilliant victory at Meenace, in 1843, crushed the power of the rulers of Sindh and led to the annexation of that province.

LOSS OF THE "ROYAL GEORGE," 1782, when Rear-Admiral Kempfeldt went down with about 1,000 souls at Spithead. The carpenters had laid her more on her broadside than they intended, and a sudden gale laid her on her side, the water rushed through her lower deck ports, and in three minutes she went down.

In Drama Without Words—Real Living Pictures.

There is a delightful series of patriotic living pictures by Mrs. Rossley's pantomime girls on Monday, one of the prettiest novel acts ever seen here; a little war drama carried out entirely by children, and when one looks on these pictures and thinks they are the children of our own city, seems past belief. Mrs. Rossley, we know has great patience, her beautiful pantomime work has shown us that; but her living pictures of next week are wonderful and we hope patrons will appreciate them. This series of pictures of real flesh and blood is entitled, "For King and Country."

Arresting Lines.

Mr. William Watson contributes to the Times the most arresting lines which have yet appeared on the war:

At last we know you, War-Jord; You that flunk

The gamblit down, fling down the mask you wear;

Publish your heart, and let its pent hate pour.

You that had God for ever on your tongue.

We are old in war, and it in gulle we are young.

Young also is the spirit that evermore Burns in our bosom even as heretofore.

Nor are these thews unbraced, these nerves unstring.

We do not wish God's name make wanton play;

We are not on such easy terms with Heaven.

But to Earth's bearing we can verily say:

"Our hands are pure; for peace, for peace we have striven";

And not by Earth shall he be soon forgive;

Who lit the fire against that flames to-day.

The First Month's War
 The phase of the war, most satisfactory to us, is that on the sea. Our losses have been of a strictly minor character, consisting of the sinking by a mine near Harwich, of the unprotected cruiser Amphion, built in 1911, of 3,360 tonnage and ten 4.1 guns, and the damaging of the 3rd class cruiser Amethyst of 3,000 tons, with twelve 4 inch guns, and of the destroyer Lavotis in Heligoland Bight in the recent fight. The Germans have had to part ignobly to Turkey with the battle cruiser Goeben, a capital ship of 22,640 tons armed with ten 11 inch guns and twelve 5.9 guns and the cruiser Breslau of 4,500 tons. She also lost in the Gulf of Finland the Magdeburg, a sister ship of the Breslau, and Rear-Admiral Beatty has sunk the two of the Kohn class, the Mainz and another and put a third in a sinking condition. The Kohn class were built in 1909. They are of 4,280 tonnage and carry twelve 4.1 guns. They have also lost several destroyers. Another important loss of the allies was the battleship Zrinye, built in 1912, of 14,230 tons and carrying four twelve inch guns and eight 9.4 inch guns. The daring raid of Rear-Admiral Beatty has sent a thrill of enthusiasm throughout London and the Empire. Although no battleships appear to have been engaged and no capital ships have been lost, the raid around Heligoland, although it has resulted only in the disposal of some of the smaller German cruisers was undertaken in spite of mines, submarines and destroyers, shows that the Germans have not ventured to place their battle fleet as far out from their shores as Heligoland, and that they are seeking shelter under the guns of the many fortresses which secure the mouth of the Elbe and the entrance to the Kiel Canal. The true value of the navy is to be seen not so much in this famous exploit as in the way the Navy is sweeping the open sea of cruisers which would hamper the commerce of ourselves and our allies. It is a silent victory, but so far it has been most effective. On land the position is otherwise, the odds in the field are against us at present. The Germans appear to be swarming in the French Provinces in the North West. Nord and Pas de Calais and the German pressure all along the front is exceedingly great. But all this was expected and we have the satisfaction of knowing that a great fight is being put up, and that the Germans are still a long way from Paris, where they expected to be a fortnight ago. It is a month to-day since the Germans commenced their blows against France and their progress is much slower and the opposition is much stiffer than they anticipated.

Arrested for Embezzlement and Pleads Guilty.
 To-day Detective Sergeant Byrne arrested under warrant a twenty-one year old clerk of the West End on a charge of embezzlement. Accused was engaged in the office of Storey & Co., Coal Merchants, and within the past six months at various times feloniously took sums of money belonging to that firm to the extent of six hundred dollars ($600.00), all of which he appropriated to his own use. At one o'clock to-day the accused was brought before Judge Conroy who informed the prisoner that before pleading he had the right to go before the Supreme Court and be tried by a jury or be dealt with summarily. He chose the latter course, pleaded guilty to the charge read to him and was remanded for eight days, at the expiration of which he will come up for sentence.

GOT TWELVE MONTHS.—The fisherman of Old Pelican, who was on remand for larceny, was sentenced to-day as follows: (1) for the larceny of a bank book to 6 months, (2) a suit of a Naval Reserve uniform to 3 months, and (3) a stick pin, key and a quantity of underclothing to 3 months; in all a period of 12 months imprisonment.

POLICE COURT.—A drunk and disorderly was fined $5 or 14 days. A motor car driver for having no tail light had to pay costs. The case against a man for obstructing the street was dismissed.

The names of those appointed to receive donations will be published after the meeting on Monday.

Medical Man Arrested on Serious Charge.

A Canadian medical practitioner named Foster is now under arrest on a serious charge, having been brought in on to-day's train from Witless Bay, where he was taken into custody last evening by Sergt. Noseworthy. The alleged charge for which he is held is a serious breach of the Game Laws. Accused has been visiting Newfoundland periodically within the past 12 months, toured many sections of our coast speculating in the fox business, and is said to have identified himself with the exportation of foxes from the island in the interests of Canadian capitalists and fox dealers. Accused is now at the police station. He was looking for bail shortly after his arrest but up to 2 p.m. had not secured the necessary bondsmen.

The St. John Ambulance Association has had many enquiries as to how, in the present national emergency, aid can be rendered to the sick and wounded of the British Forces on land and sea.

Effective assistance can be provided in the following ways:—

The bridegroom in a few choice words responded. Following this the company repaired to Section Foreman Conran's house where a big dance was held which was kept up into the wee sma' hours of the morning. The Telegram extends congratulations to

Training of the Recruits.

For the purpose of training the recruits in musketry, they will be divided into three classes, viz. those who have had experience, those who know a little of the use of a rifle, and those who have had no training in rifle shooting. The first mentioned will receive some theoretical training at Pleasantville and then be taken to the Southside Range for three days' practice, under Sergt.-Inst. Moore. The squads will consist of 64 members who will visit the Range in turn, returning to Pleasantville to complete their training. These plans were submitted to Capt. J. W. March, Musketry Instructor, and were approved.

SQUID ON LOCAL GROUNDS.—Squid made their appearance on the local grounds yesterday afternoon and in addition to our fishermen, the men of some of the bankers in port, were engaged jigging them. A fair share of codfish was secured off the Narrows yesterday, because of the presence of squid bait.

Mrs. Geo. B. Coffin and three children have been here for the past week or so visiting friends.

All arrangements for the encampment of the Volunteer Regiment at Pleasantville Grounds are almost completed. Last night the Quartermaster's Department of the Patriotic Committee met and unsealed the tenders received for provisions and all camp equipments. They are of bell shape and each will accommodate six men. This morning the work of pitching more camps was continued. On Monday the volunteers will be sworn in and on Tuesday will go under canvas.

Garden Party at St. Kyran's.

The garden party held at St. Kyran's on August 15th under the auspices of Rev. Fr. Fyde, was a decided success. Favored with an ideal day, crowds of people from the surrounding settlements were in attendance—Bar Haven, Miramichi, Paradise, Clattice and nearby places being well represented. Immediately after the celebration of mass all repaired to St. Peter's Hall where a sumptuous feast was spread and to which ample justice was done by all present. The afternoon was spent in a nearby field where refreshments were partaken of and sports and races indulged in—not the least enjoyable feature of the programme being a shooting match at the close. Tea was served in the hall by the ladies in charge who provided themselves on this as on all other occasions when their services are called for—hostesses of no mean ability. Dancing occupied the time until midnight when the crowd dispersed well pleased with the day's enjoyment. Financially the results were all that could be desired, the success of the affair being largely due to the capabilities of Rev. A. Fyde, our energetic and resourceful parish priest.—C. A.

City of Antwerp Great Stronghold of the Belgians.

Elaborate Fortifications of the Scheldt.—The Key to the Low Countries.—Defensive Works are of an Exceptionally Powerful Kind.

The removal of the seat of government in Belgium from Brussels to Antwerp, following the development of Germany's plan of campaign, is not a hasty step, but absolutely in accordance with Belgian intentions formulated some years ago, when the menace of a German invasion cast its shadow over the country. Events now taking place would go to show that the great port on the Scheldt is destined to play an important part in the war.

It is known that British strategists have taken the greatest interest in the modern defence scheme of Antwerp, and when the big guns are fired it is not at all likely that they will be served exclusively by Belgian gunners.

Napoleon's Dictum.

Whether Napoleon was strategically justified in describing Antwerp as "a pistol pointed at the heart of England" is still a controversial subject with military experts. The best judges do not concur in the description. As a naval port Antwerp itself is open to numerous and weighty objections, and it is a question whether any amount of money and labor would render it suitable for such a purpose. But Antwerp has always been, and will always remain, the key to the Low Countries, a fact which accounts in some measure for the elaborate fortifications by which it is encompassed. Some six miles from the quays of Antwerp down the devious and treacherous river Scheldt two grim-looking armed turrets come into view on the right bank, half concealed by earthworks. These works are known as Fort St. Philip, and are reputed to be armed with heavy artillery of somewhat obsolete design. Half a mile lower down on the opposite bank, but more hidden than St. Philip, are more of these powerful structures. The turrets are so placed that their guns command a wide stretch of the river in either direction, and are even capable of shelling Antwerp. The landward defences of the city, however, are much more imposing, at all events to the unprofessional eye. The grass-covered glacis extends for several miles and encloses three sides of the city. It is broken at intervals by roads and watergates, along which all traffic entering the city must pass, and at these points there are very strong earthworks and redoubts. Here and there one may discern the lean muzzle of a quick-firing gun shrouded in its tarpaulin, while the glacis is dotted with gaily painted sentry boxes.

During the past four or five years most of the guns have been removed from the works, and the forts themselves dismantled. The step is due to a decision reached by the Belgian Military Commission, which, after a detailed inspection carried out in 1909 reported unfavourably on the defences of Antwerp in their old state, and condemned them unreservedly as a source of weakness rather than of strength from the military point of view. The Commission pointed out that since the forts were constructed the range of siege guns and field pieces has been more than quadrupled, and that an investing force could comfortably shell the city and port by high-angle fire without suffering any inconvenience whatever from the forts, which lie much too close to Antwerp itself to offer a serious obstacle or to hold the invading hosts in check at a safe distance. As the removal of the old defences and the building and arming of modern forts was a matter involving many millions of francs, the question was long and warmly debated before an affirmative decision was reached.

New Fortifications.

The Belgian Chamber finally authorized the necessary disbursements, and the plans for the new system of fortifications were at once set on foot. In this work it has been rumored that some leading French strategists took a share, but the stories have not been categorically denied by the Belgian authorities. The work was planned to continue until 1915, but at the present date some idea of the general scheme is to be obtained by a casual inspection. Batteries and redoubts have been thrown up at a distance of nine to twelve miles from the city boundaries and while the forts themselves are of a much simpler design than those they replaced, their armament comprises very powerful modern field and siege artillery. From what source the new weapons were to be obtained was a question that was keenly discussed after the passage of the measure by the Chamber. In addition to a Belgian concern two foreign firms were invited to tender for the lucrative contract, namely, Krupp and Schneider-Cremona. The Belgian nationalists were opposed to the acceptance of the German tender under any circumstances, whatever. They urged that the new forts were to exist in the first place as a means of defence against a possible German invasion, it would be folly to acquit a firm of that nationality, and particularly one with such intimate official connections as Messrs. Krupp, with minute details relating to the number and calibre of the guns to be mounted. The logic of this argument was undeniable, but it failed to carry weight with the authorities, who finally promised by giving an equal share in the contract to French, German, and Belgian firms.

thorized the necessary disbursements, and the plans for the new system of fortifications were at once set on foot. In this work it has been rumored that some leading French strategists took a share, but the stories have not been categorically denied by the Belgian authorities. The work was planned to continue until 1915, but at the present date some idea of the general scheme is to be obtained by a casual inspection. Batteries and redoubts have been thrown up at a distance of nine to twelve miles from the city boundaries and while the forts themselves are of a much simpler design than those they replaced, their armament comprises very powerful modern field and siege artillery. From what source the new weapons were to be obtained was a question that was keenly discussed after the passage of the measure by the Chamber. In addition to a Belgian concern two foreign firms were invited to tender for the lucrative contract, namely, Krupp and Schneider-Cremona. The Belgian nationalists were opposed to the acceptance of the German tender under any circumstances, whatever. They urged that the new forts were to exist in the first place as a means of defence against a possible German invasion, it would be folly to acquit a firm of that nationality, and particularly one with such intimate official connections as Messrs. Krupp, with minute details relating to the number and calibre of the guns to be mounted. The logic of this argument was undeniable, but it failed to carry weight with the authorities, who finally promised by giving an equal share in the contract to French, German, and Belgian firms.

ish force would land to take the invading German army in the flank. This persistent assumption on the German side of Belgium's participation in a great continental war must now be considered symptomatic of German intentions.

Holland to Remain Neutral.

LONDON, Aug. 24. England may rest assured that come what may, Holland will not jeopardize her neutrality by improperly supplying goods to Germany, declared Mr. Trubb, the Dutch Minister of Industry and Commerce, in an interview published by the Daily Telegraph. "We are gathering wheat only for our own necessities. The export from Holland of wheat is now absolutely forbidden, and there is consequently no possibility of any country being supplied from this source. "With a view to maintaining our own supply of wheat, we hope to get cargoes from America, but if will be necessary for each ship to carry papers proving conclusively that the cargo is destined for Holland, a neutral country, and that it will not be transferred to another country.

St. John's Gas Light Company. Dear Sir,—I have analyzed a sample of Sulphate of Ammonia made at your Works, and I found 20.5 per cent of NITROGEN, Sulphates of Ammonia and Nitrate of Soda are the two principal Nitrogen manures.

Sulphate of Ammonia is less soluble than Nitrate of Soda, consequently it is a safer manure to use during a wet season.

Yours truly, JAMES DAVIES, B.S.C., F.C.S. Analyst and Assayer.

A Heathen on the War

A heathen statesman strikes the sole note encouraging to Christians under conditions which are such a reproach to their religion and their reason alike. Premier Okuma at Tokio said quite recently that to bring about a great peace a great war is sometimes unavoidable. The general disturbance in Europe, he thought, might resolve itself into the final war of the world, leading to a permanent and universal peace. The divine benediction of "peace on earth, good will to men" can be realized only through establishing the reign of human law. It may be that the punishment of the warring nations may now be so severe that with one accord they may unite against the scornful declaration that no great power in a dispute with a small one would submit to be brought before a European Aroopagus. Austria has been the world's greatest offender in recent years, and is ripe for reproof by all nations loving peace. Peace should be dictated, not by the commanders of war but by the leaders of thought and conscience.

'Twas ever Thus

Old Rox, in his motor, goes by like a gust; the sad, toiling voter is choked by the dust. "The rich are too easy," the toiling one cries; "their nerve is too brassy, and swivel their eyes! All things are adjusted unfair in this land, and I'm so disgusted I scarcely can stand. The poor man is cheated clean out of his shirt, and then he is treated as though he were dirt. The wealthy employer goes touring around in his old destroyer, just burning the ground; he scatters the gravel and gumbo and dust on workers who travel on foot—on the crust!" The worker grows wealthy, for industry pays; his bank roll is healthy, and happy his days. And then in his motor he scorches the road, and some other voter, oppressed by his load, is crying, "By thunder, the rich are too brash! They're flouting their plunder, their till-gotten cash. Some day the poor toilers will rise as one man, and to the despoilers will fasten the can!" The man thus complaining some day may be rich; then he, too disdainful the man in the ditch, will speed up his motor and go like a gust; there's always a voter to stand in the dust!

Had Head Severed At the City Hall.

Elden Cutler Killed Instantly on Board Tug Cruiser this Morning—Hawser Got Around Neck and Head Dropped Overboard.

One of the most tragic deaths that ever happened off the port of Halifax was that of this morning when Elden Cutler, a young man of about 25 years, had his head severed from his body while on board the Brister tug Cruiser, while on her way to the North West Arm with the barque King Malcolm in tow. It will be remembered that several weeks ago the barque mentioned went ashore near Yarmouth, and Messrs. C. Brister and Son purchased the barque as she was. They afterwards succeeded in floating her, and then towed her to Yarmouth, where some repairs were made. Early yesterday morning the barque, in tow of the Cruiser, left Yarmouth for Halifax and when off Herring Cove shortly before 3 o'clock this morning, the distressing accident occurred.

Elden Cutler, who for several months had been employed on the Cruiser as a deck hand, was near the stern of the tug, apparently attending to the hawser which was attached to the barque being towed. Just how the accident occurred no one can tell. There was a heavy sea running at the time and some difficulty was experienced in manoeuvring. During one of the big seas the tug was holed to, and just about that time the hawser must have in some way either cut through the neck of the men or his neck was caught between the hawser and the rail.

What happened, only took a second or two, and then the lifeless body of Cutler fell to the deck and his head went overboard, and although efforts were made to get it, the task proved unsuccessful. The body of the dead man was brought to the city about noon, and Medical Examiner Finn will hold his usual investigation into the death.

The deceased was unmarried, and has lived for some time in the city before joining the Cruiser. A brother of the deceased, Brown, Cutler, of St. George's, Nfld., was on the tug at the time of the

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, Aug. 11th, 1914.
WAR IN THE DARK.

This is a war without correspondents. Following the practice never firmly established until the Balkan war, the military authorities are making it impossible for any newspaper correspondent to come within sight of the field operations. The rule is so strict that it would scarcely be worth while for anyone to imitate the notorious Viennese lieutenant who, in the Balkan war, gave a circumstantial account of a battle which never took place, and which, if it had taken place, must have occurred at a time when he was securely imprisoned in an hotel many miles away. Nobody would accept any unofficial account of actual fighting without reserve. As a matter of fact, some newspapers which sent out war correspondents have already recalled them. Not only is it impossible to get news by means of correspondents, but it is difficult to get any news at all without the consent of the military authorities. The truth is that the distribution of news through the post and the telegraph is so mechanical that a Government can control it entirely. In the first week of the war we happen to have heard of the Belgian and French victories because they were successes gained by our allies. But vast events may be taking place all over Europe of which we know nothing. There has been no information, for instance, as to the movements of the Russian army, and, for all published evidence to the contrary, the Austrian and Serbian armies might both have been annihilated.

WHAT LONDON IS DOING.

Although London is neither working nor playing at anything like full pressure, it must be by far the liveliest and most active of the five capital cities concerned in the present war. Paris, at any rate, has turned its back sternly on its always exaggerated reputation for frivolity. One hears that it is strangely quiet. Most of the shops are closed. Omnibuses and trains are infrequent. It must be safe by this time to drive about the city in a taxi-cab. Even hotels are being shut up, because every man on the staff, from the proprietor to the boots, is going to the war. And imagine Paris with its cafes closed at 8 o'clock! London by comparison is normal. Restaurants and theatres are still carrying on their programmes, although in the first case with revised menus and in the second with extremely and at times abnormally scanty audiences. One or two German restaurants took to closing earlier in the evenings just after the war was first declared but have now resumed ordinary hours. They, of course, have had special trouble in connection with the recalling of their waiters and assistants to fight for Germany. Street traffic has diminished, but there are still better services of cars and omnibuses than there ever were in Paris. The contrast between the two cities is explained by the circumstance that France has a conscript army and we have not. It is a point worth making at this moment that our freedom from conscription gives us an enormous advantage over the Continental nations. A conscript army is a huge weapon, but the power of the arm that wields it is money. A nation with a conscript army practically ceases from trade. Our ability to keep the commercial machine working will give us staying power in a conflict which is exhausting and may be continued.

HERR BALLIN'S EFFORT.

A page that has escaped attention in the fateful history of the last fortnight was the effort of Herr Ballin, the chief of German shipping and the personal friend of the Kaiser, to avert war. He interrupted a cure at Kissingen and came to London on July 23 ostensibly to conduct negotiations for the acquisition of oil fields in California or Mexico. In reality I learn the object of his visit was to consult with Lord Haldane, Sir Edward Grey and Mr. Churchill, each of whom he saw on the day of his arrival here. Next day he also discussed the situation with them, and on his return to Germany a special messenger from Berlin was franked through the German lines with a despatch for Lord Haldane. No one realises more than Herr Ballin the critical condition in which the German mercantile marine now is, because even with the cessation of hostilities it will be many years before it recovers its recent prosperity if ever it does so. On the German register there are 2,019 steamers of 4,743,046 tons gross, most of them of modern construction, the tonnage owned by the Hamburg-American Line and the Norddeutscher Lloyd being just about half of that aggregate, while no fewer than 25 fine liners were being built for them. The former's company's handsome offices in Cockspur Street, London, are, of course, closed. All the Ger-

A Loss of Perspective.

By RUTH CAMERON.

The other day a neighbor died. She had been walking a long time on the sidewalk when a passing automobile threw up a stone which bruised her face. In three days she was dead of blood poisoning. The absolute tragedy of it all lay in the fact that that afternoon she had been asked to make one of a party of automobilists and had refused.

"John hasn't had his car very long," she explained, "and I have three little children dependent upon me. I do not feel that I should go anywhere I might be in danger."

What is more, for years she had ordered her life with this same view in mind, not to incur danger! She had denied herself pleasures; had stayed home while others went automobile-ing or sailing in the power boat, because automobiles and power boats were a source of danger!

Sources of danger! Where are they, or rather, where are they not? How can we escape from them? True people do die in automobiles and in motor boats. Likewise they die in beds and in bath tubs. Drowning is both unpleasant and frequent, but it is no less pleasant and nowhere as near frequent as asphyxiation.

For months, because of an unquestionable element of danger which now and then claims a victim, this woman had denied herself certain pleasures in which thousands of people indulge daily with absolute impunity. She had children dependent upon her; but fate, unmindful of her precautions or her children, stepped in and snatched her away.

The doctor, consoling her husband, said that it was too bad she hadn't gotten out of doors more, because her blood would have been in better condition and less liable to infection.

To blame her for wanting to avoid all danger for her children's sake would be unkind and unjust. But one cannot help pitying her for a loss of perspective and a blind senseless system of petty precautions against the one great force before which man stands helpless; a system which was a source of deprivation to herself and an exasperation to her husband and her friends.

The last few years of her life she did not really live; she guarded herself against death. She watched over a hundred entrances through which death might come. She knew the danger that lurks in a pin prick; of the bacillus that might make a mortal wound of a scratch. She watched with fascinated eyes the match with which her husband and his friends lit their after dinner cigars. She protested, laughingly taxed with her deep concern over the match's final disposition, that she wasn't going to "be burned like a rat in a trap."

And so it went. She watched over a hundred entrances through which danger and death might come upon her; but death, free to use thousands of entrances over which no mortal can hope to stand guard, stalked down upon her nevertheless.

Life no longer presented itself to her in friendly guise. It was but death, wearing many masks. The tragedy of that! For, as Stevenson says, "So soon as prudence has begun to grow up in the brain, like a dismal fungus, it finds its first expression in a paralysis of generous acts. The victim begins to shrink spiritually. To be otherwise is to ossify, and the scruple monger ends by standing stock still."

WHAT THE WAR WILL COST.

What will the war cost Europe in money alone? This is a question many people are asking themselves. An eminent French statistician, M. Francois Delavigne, tried to answer it three years ago. He made a calculation at the time of the Agadir crisis of the probable cost of a general war between the Powers of the Triple Entente and the Triple Alliance. M. Delavigne took as the starting point the cost to France of the war of 1870-71, which, after the deduction of the military contribution to Prussia and certain other items not directly connected with the war, amounted to £140,000,000. This gave, for an army of 1,200,000 men engaged for a period of eight months, the sum of about 10 shillings per head per day. M. Delavigne then estimated the rise of the cost of living in the forty years since the war at about 33 per cent. so that in 1911 the daily upkeep of a soldier in arms would have cost something like thirteen shillings and fourpence. Assuming that France in a European war would operate with an army of 2,400,000 men, to which 600,000 "territorials" would be added, M. Delavigne showed that every day of the war would cost France £2,000,000, or for a war of eight months' duration £480,000,000. In a similar way he estimated the cost to Germany, which would have to maintain about 5,000,000 men, including the supplementary Reserves and the Landstrum at £2,000,000 a day, or £725,000,000 for an eight months' campaign; to Austria-Hungary, with her army of 2,500,000 men, at a total of £330,000,000; to Italy, with her 3,500,000 men, at £460,000,000; and to Russia, with equally 3,500,000 men at £450,000,000. The total for the five Continental Powers would thus have been, in round figures, £2,500,000,000, or, adding the naval expenditure of Great Britain and of the other Powers, about £4,000,000,000. The mind is unable to grasp this stupendous figure. To-day it would have to be increased, for since 1911 both the size of the armies and the cost of living have gone up.

Knee Joint Stiff Three Years CURED BY NERVILINE.

Anyone would marvel at my recovery, writes Mr. Leonard Loham, a young man well known about Chatham. I had inherited a rheumatic tendency through my mother's family, and in my early days suffered frightfully. About three years ago the pain and stiffness settled in my left knee joint. I was lame and walked with a very distinct limp. Nerviline was brought to my notice and I rubbed it into the stiff joint four or five times a day. It dispelled every vestige of pain, reduced the swelling, took out the stiffness and gave me the full use of my limb again. I don't believe there is a pain-relieving remedy, not a single liniment that can compare with Nerviline. I hope every person with pains, with sore back, with lameness, with lumbago, with neuralgia—I do hope they will try-out Nerviline which I am convinced will quickly and permanently cure them."

If Nerviline wasn't a wonderful painless remedy, if Nerviline didn't quickly relieve, if Nerviline wasn't known to be a grand cure for all rheumatic conditions, it wouldn't have been so largely used as a family remedy for the past forty years. No better, stronger, or more soothing liniment made. Get the large 50c. family size bottle; small trial size 25c.; sold by any dealer, anywhere.

We learn from people who came by the Morweena to-day that there is a great depression in trade in Montreal as a result of the state of warfare, work is very backward and hundreds of people who were paid off since war broke out, are touring the city looking for employment.

Divorced Life

By Helen Hanson Fuesler

Marian Dines With a Poet

Marian was quick to sense the atmospheric change. She felt rather than saw, evidences of Miss Barker's healthy toward her. It evinced itself chiefly in that extreme formality which one woman often elects to employ toward another of whom she is jealous. There were no further signs of the near intimacy which had recently obtained between them.

The development amused Marian. It was merely another side of the amusing situation which Barker had precipitated when he had begun showing his sentimental interest in her. Marian took a wicked delight in being exclusively gracious toward his sister. This riled Miss Barker, and wound up with her premature departure for Boston several days later, leaving Bert behind to follow at his pleasure. The latter, secretly delighted at this unexpected solution of the annoying problem, rushed back to the boisterous household after the Boston-bound part of his family was safely on the train, with the eager hope of spending an evening alone with Marian.

He arrived there to find the bird flown. Marian was dining in an odd little cafe on Macdougall Street with the poet she had met at Mrs. Walter's party. The poet, true to his promise to invite Marian to dine on the proceeds of the trolley he had peddled to her eyes, had telephoned that afternoon, and made the engagement.

It proved to be an interesting evening with the shag-haired rhymer. He regaled her with reams of his

John Hollands Volunteers in Montreal.

Mr. I. C. Morris received a post card by last evening's express from Mr. John Hollands now of Montreal, on which he states that he has joined the 5th Royal Highlanders, and that the company was then going into camp at Valcartier for two weeks, and then to England for the front.

Mr. Hollands is the son of the Rev. Mr. Hollands, of Carbonara, and he was engaged in the teaching profession before leaving here in June last. He was educated at Bishop Field College, and is a young man of splendid physique and will no doubt give a good account of himself.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its office is the nerve center of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the office. An order is received at the office, its history is recorded at the office, and finally payment is received at the office. If the office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Mr. Percie Johnson represents this world known firm in Newfoundland. — 29/17, 14

Big Feature Show at the Crescent.

Prima Donna Scores a Big Hit in Two Renditions.

Miss Alice Clark, the talented soprano, now appearing at the Crescent Picture Palace, was accorded another grand ovation at the Crescent Palace last night, when she sang the popular song "I Dream I Dwell in Marble Halls," from the opera Bohemian Girl, and for the encores delighted the audience with the beautiful Irish ballad "Mother McCreche," which every lover of music should hear. The prima donna in character costume deserved the applause tendered her. "The Red Rose Tree" is a true drama of the underworld in which Edwin August stands out very prominently. "The Option," a society drama and the "Dead Line" a Western story were full of life and excitement. The comedy subject was indeed a very comical one and for one complete programme of feature the same show which is repeated to-day, cannot be excelled. The attention of our readers is directed to the great feature for Monday, "Robespierre." In three acts, a remarkable story of the French Revolution.

Successful Garden Party.

A very successful garden party was held at Mortier, in the district of Burn, on the 15th inst. The grounds were prettily decorated for the occasion and the stalls were very attractive, being laden with numerous good things that met with a ready sale. Ladies from the adjacent settlements attended, and rendered much valuable assistance to the promoters of the affair. Patrons came from far and near, and the success of the affair marked a red letter day in the annals of this thriving settlement. As a finale to the day's proceedings a dance was held in the school room at which all present thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The proceeds were quite substantial and will be devoted to the funds of the R. C. church at Fox Cove, which is about a mile distant from Mortier and was built by the residents of both places. The people of Mortier are very grateful to all their patrons, particularly those from Burn who in no small measure contributed to the success of the affair by furnishing music for the occasion. — (Con.)

A Patriotic Act.

Last evening the Baseball League met and decided to play a couple of 'double header' games within the next few weeks, as the League have decided to vote the sum of $50 to the Patriotic Fund. Truly this is an act of genuine patriotism and merits public approbation. Other leagues that are longer in the sporting arena than the Baseballers should follow suit.

BRITAIN RULES THE SEA

The first important naval battle of the war was fought yesterday. Eight, resulting in the sinking of two German cruisers and two boats, and the capture of two German scouting cruisers. The British fleet, under the command of Admiral Sir David Beatty, defeated the German fleet, under the command of Admiral von Flotow. The British ships were not damaged, while the German ships were heavily damaged. The British ships were able to sink the German ships with ease. The British fleet is now the most powerful in the world.

Lord Kitchener, for War, announced yesterday that the reinforcements received from this country had decided that France should be the theatre of operations. ### Two German Cruisers Sunk, One Fired—Many Damaged—A German Scouting Squadron Smashed—Well Done, Beatty!

THREE GERMAN CRUISERS SUNK!
Special to the Evening Telegram.
LONDON, Aug. 28.
It has been announced here that the British fleet has sunk two German cruisers and two German torpedo boats off Heligoland, while a third cruiser was set on fire and left in a sinking condition. Several German torpedo boats were also damaged. No British ships were lost in the battle and the loss of life on the British warships was not heavy.

BRITAIN RULES THE WAVES! ! !

LONDON, this a.m.
The first important naval action was fought yesterday in Heligoland Bight, resulting in a smashing blow being delivered by the British cruisers, destroyers and submarines to the German scouting squadron. The officer in chief, command was Rear Admiral Sir David Beatty, who told in dry, laconic phrases of the engagement in an Admiralty official despatch. The story is succinct and thrilling. The following text was issued last night: "Early yesterday morning a concerted operation of some consequence was attempted against the Germans in Heligoland Bight. A strong force of destroyers supported by light cruisers and battle cruisers, and working in conjunction with submarines attacked the German destroyers and cruisers guarding the approach to the German Coast. Two German cruisers were sunk and many damaged. The enemy's cruisers were engaged by the British cruisers and battle cruisers. The first light cruiser squadron sank the Mainz, and in return only received slight damage. The first battle cruiser squadron sank one cruiser of the Kochu class, and another German cruiser disappeared in the mist heavily on fire and in a sinking condition. All the German cruisers thus engaged were disposed of. The battle cruiser squadron, although attacked by submarines, and floating mines successfully evaded them and is undamaged, while the light cruiser squadron suffered no casualties. The flotilla cruiser Amethyst, and destroyer Lavotis are damaged. The British loss of life is reported not heavy. The importance of this daring raid is the fact that the British fleet passed behind Germany's heavily armed outposts on Heligoland Island, and engaged with signal success the German mosquito fleet

NATIVE INDIAN TROOPS WILL BE USED AT THE FRONT.

Wave of Enthusiasm and Loyalty in India—Handsomeness Gifts from the Principal Indian Princes.

Special to Evening Telegram.
LONDON, To-day.
Lord Kitchener, Secretary of State for War, announced in the House of Lords yesterday that in addition to the reinforcements which would be received from this country, the Government had decided the British army in France should be increased. The troops of the increased forces were now on the way. He said that all the gaps in the army of France were being filled up. The employment of native Indian troops mentioned by Kitchener was later confirmed by the Marquis of Crewe, Secretary of State for India. The Marquis said it has been deeply impressed on the Government that the wonderful wave of enthusiasm and of loyalty at the present time passing over India is largely due to the desire of the Indian people that Indian soldiers should stand side by side with their comrades of the British army. The Secretary was aware that the employment of African troops to assist the French army would have been met with the disapproval of India if they had been debarrated from guarding the entrance of the Kiel Canal.

LONDON, To-day.
A glorious victory has fallen to the British fleet: With all the courage and fearless enterprise that have distinguished British officers who many times have gone into the very jaws of their enemies. Admirals Beatty, Christian and Moore conducted combined operations in the fight off Heligoland of which the enemy had all the strength at his command. Their triumph was complete. The German light cruiser Mainz and another of Kochu class and a third whose name is unknown were destroyed as well as two torpedo boat destroyers. The tale is probably not complete. Evidently concerted attack was planned, just as seamen of the old world have planned it to begin in the dark and reach its decision point at dawn. The attacking force comprised a battle cruiser squadron, light cruiser squadron and destroyer and submarine flotillas. Rear Admiral Sir David Beatty, the youngest flag officer afloat commanded the first battle cruiser squadron which comprised the flagship Lion, Queen Mary, Princess Royal and New Zealand. To Sir David Beatty fell the opportunity and honor which will make him and his officers envied of the whole fleet, for to him fell the conduct of operations under the directions of Sir John Jellicoe Commander-in-Chief Sir David Beatty is one of the most brilliant of the navy's officers, and with him were Rear Admiral A. G. W. Moore, Rear Admiral Christian, Commodore R. J. B. Kyes, Commodore Reginald C. Godenough and Commodore William Goodenough. Complete as was the victory British suffered little, all their ships being afloat and in good order. What is to be especially noted is the high efficiency of British gunnery. Not a German cruiser escaped and the torpedo boat destroyers fled wildly in search of shelter. Not only were two of their number sunk but not a few others were damaged by British fire. In addition to not losing a single ship the British loss of life was not heavy.

GERMAN TORPEDO BOAT DESTROYED.

CHEFOO, Aug. 28.
The British torpedo boat Welland engaged and sank the German torpedo boat destroyer S. 90.

and races in India will render anything of the sort altogether impossible. That enthusiasm has found vent in many different ways. In some cases by gifts of great liberality for service troops in field. I was told only yesterday by the Viceroy of India that sons of the principal Indian Princes had sent a gift of twenty-five hundred thousand dollars for troops in the field. I feel confident, therefore the action we take will meet with a most enthusiastic reception in India. I believe it will be approved by your Lordships and the Commons and public opinion here generally.

SITUATION UNCHANGED.

PARIS, To-day.
An official communication issued by the War Department last night says the situation on our front from the Dept. of Semie, in Northwest France, to the Vosges remains the same to-day as yesterday. German troops appear to have slackened their march.

BRINGING WOUNDED TO SOUTH-AMPTON.

LONDON, To-day.
Virtually all the wounded men brought back to England from the front, will be disembarked at Southampton docks and from there sent to various hospitals in the country. Nearly all the big London hospitals appear on the official list as hospitals which have made arrangements for the reception of wounded men.

HONG KONG, To-day.

The German steamer Senegambia, with a cargo of cattle and coal, was made a prize yesterday jointly by the British cruiser Hampshire and the French cruiser Duplex. The German steamer C. Ferdinand Lacasse, from Yokohama for New York arrived here last night. A British prize, and reported the German steamers York and Prinz Waldeman had also been captured and were being brought here.

SEVEN MORE PRIZES IN THE FAR EAST.

CHEFOO, To-day.
Three German merchant ships, the steamers Frisia, Harnal and Alond Pakiat have been captured by the British fleet and taken to Weihaiwei.

AUSTRIA AT WAR WITH BELGIUM.

VIENNA, Aug. 28.
Austria to-day declared war on Belgium, and the Ambassador was handed his passports. Until to-day Belgium was the only one of the allied powers at war with Germany.

GERMAN BRUTALITY.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.
France has submitted to the United States and other neutral governments a sworn statement that after an engagement at Moncel, a German officer fired on three Red Cross Nurses, killing two and wounding the third.

RUSSIANS ARMY READY TO ATTACK LEMBERG.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 28.
The Russian army has driven in the outlying Austrian defences and is now in a position to attack Lemberg, the capital of Austrian Galicia. The Russians are only twenty miles off the city in heavy forces.

DESTROYED BY GERMANS.

LONDON, Aug. 28.
The Official War Bureau declares that Louvain is now a heap of ashes and twisted ruins. Even the beautiful buildings, many of them of historic importance, were not spared by the ruthless invaders, everything has been destroyed. The Germans set fire to the city at a hundred points by using explosives and bombs. All the inhabitants were taken prisoners, and are now in concentration camps, guarded by German soldiers.

BELGIAN COLONY ATTACKED.

PARIS, Aug. 28.
A despatch from Libreville, says the Belgium Congo has been attacked by German troops.

PATRIOTIC FUND.

MONTREAL, Aug. 28.
The Bank of Montreal has voted twenty-five thousand dollars to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, and a similar amount has been subscribed by the Bank of Nova Scotia.

FEAR TROUBLE FROM DIRIGIBLE.

ROTTERDAM, To-day.
The Nieuwe Courant says the people of Antwerp fear another visit, not merely by one but by many Zeppelin dirigibles. The inhabitants of houses in the vicinity of the Royal Palace have left their homes. Steam is kept up constantly on the Royal yacht. At the first sign of trouble the Queen and Princess will be taken to England, the paper states.

MIRARD'S LINDENT LUMBER-KAY'S PRIZES.

MADGEBURG'S CREW CAPTURED.

Special to Evening Telegram.
LONDON, To-day.
The Post's St. Petersburg correspondent wires that the crew of the German cruiser Madgeburg, which went ashore in the Baltic, were captured. It is not known whether the ship can be brought to port or not.

THIRTY SURVIVORS OUT OF 2000.

LONDON, To-day.
The Chronicle's Boulogne correspondent gives the story of a wounded soldier who arrived here. He declared he was one of thirty survivors of a British company of two thousand who were practically wiped out by German artillery.

LONDON JOYFUL.

LONDON, To-day.
The city rang from one end to the other with cheers when the news of the victory in the North Sea was announced. All the gloom of the last few days, with disheartening messages of German advances was instantly dispelled. Wait till we hear of the feet has been the one expression heard from every lip since the war began. You could not make anyone believe that anything could happen to England while the fleet was on the sea, but like every other man in this war England had to keep her movements secret. All knew that the feet was where it would do the most good, but the public did not know where that particular place was.

CALL FOR MEN.

LONDON, To-day.
The Daily Mail's editorial, concerning the concentration of Germany's immense strength to crush the British expeditionary force, say Germany has brought the stupendous odds of 2 to 1 against the British soldiers, of whom we may well feel proud, but the situation is most critical. France has done everything in her power, Russia cannot help except by indirect pressure. Great Britain alone can find more men and find them she must. The nation must prepare on a colossal scale and must send every gun that can be spared, here and now, to a decisive point in France.

GERMANS BOMBARD UNDEFENDED TOWN.

LONDON, To-day.
The correspondent of Reuters at Antwerp sends the following official statement: "On Thursday the Germans, contrary to the laws of war, bombarded Malines, an open and undefended town. The enemy also bombarded a region about Heystvedenburg, a town seventeen miles south east of Antwerp not occupied by the Militia."

A Panic Opportunity.

Rothschild once said that the foundation for his fortune was laid by buying at panic prices and holding for the resultant rise. Many securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange have not sold so low since the panic of 1907.

The following stocks at closing prices of July 30, besides giving a good income yield, afford an excellent opportunity for future profit.
