Parcels for Nfld. Forces Overseas.

- 1) Parcels must not exceed 11 lbs. in weight.
- 2) Parcels addressed to members of the Newfoundland Forces Overseas should bear the name and address of a second addressee to whom the parcels may be delivered or forwarded if it should prove impossible to deliver the first. The original address should be written on the FRONT of the parcel where the postage stamps and Customs declaration are affixed, and the second or alternative address should be written on the BACK of the parcel.
- 3) If a second address is not furnished at the time of posting, and delivery cannot be effected, the contents of the parcel, unless of exceptional value or of a personal nature, will be turned over to the Military Authorities for distribution.
- 4) Parcels containing articles of a personal nature or of special value will be returned, if a request for their return in case of non-delivery is made by the sender, such request to be written on the cover of the parcel at the time of posting.
- 5) This plan is being adopted at the suggestion of the British Post Office, which states that the present procedure of holding undeliverable parcels at the Dead Letter Office until instructions are received as to their disposal is resulting in the waste of a large quantity of perishable foodstuffs, which form the contents of 90 per cent. of parcels addressed to soldiers.

The Sound of Wedding Bells

—OR— Won After Great Perseverance!

CHAPTER XXXV.

"Well, look here, you know," grunts the earl, "you mustn't go and use yourself up for to-morrow. Don't get overtired, my lad."

"No, no," says Archie, with a smile. "I am not overtired. Perhaps I am a little anxious. I shall be as fresh as a lark to-morrow."

"Have something to drink?" says the earl. "Here, Dulcie, come and mix him something."

But Archie shakes his head. Then he goes into the shadow, to the motionless figure, and stands beside her, looking down at her. He cannot speak to her, for the moment cannot control his voice.

She looks up. Her face is pale, her dark eyes look wild and full of a troubled pain.

"Archie," she says, "I want to speak to you."

"Yes," he says, not coldly, but with gentleness, tender patience.

"I want to tell you something," she says, and she puts her hand upon his arm.

He nods, and forces a smile. "After you left me—" she pauses, and her lips twitch.

"I know," he says. "You met some one whom we will not name. Don't distress yourself, dear."

"But I want to tell you," she says, and her face grows paler.

He shakes his head. "Not to-night, Dulcie. You shall tell me to-morrow. Yes, to-morrow," and he smiles, with a twitch of the lips.

"Very well," she says. "You are tired now. Yes, I will tell you to-morrow. But I must tell you."

"You shall," he says, "after the race," and he looks down at her, infinite love, infinite pity, and tenderness in his eyes.

Strange to say, and it puzzles him, she meets his gaze steadily, unflinchingly, and with the loving look which has come into the dark eyes of late.

"You look tired," she says, presently, and her hand, so soft and warm, seeks his and closes round it with a caressing clasp.

His face works with sudden emotion.

"I—I am tired, I think. Perhaps it is the excitement. I didn't know the affair was going to take to itself so much importance. Yes, I'll own to being tired."

"You must go to bed and rest," she says. "You have not smoked to-night, let me light a cigarette for you; the last one."

"Yes," he says. "Will you? The last one," and he smiles sadly at the significance of the words.

She goes to the sideboard and gets his cigarette case, and he watches her lithe and graceful form, which, after to-night, he shall never hold in his arms again, with a pang of passionate love and despair.

She selects a cigarette and lights it for him, and as he takes it her fingers follow the cigarette and touch his lips.

It is a caress invented by the cunning of a woman's love, and it moves

In Five Minutes! No Indigestion, Gas Or Sour, Acid Stomach

The moment "Pape's Diapepsin" reaches the stomach all distress goes.

"Really does" put bad stomach in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach regulator in the world.

him so that he shrinks and turns pale. "What is the matter?" she breathes.

"Nothing, nothing!" he says, lightly, but in a low voice. "I—I am afraid I have caught a chill. Is there any brandy there, aunt?"

"Let me," says Dulcie, and she glides, in her peculiar way, to the table, and mixes him some brandy.

"It is unlike you to take spirits," says Lady Brookley; "but I think it is permissible to-night."

"I think it is," says Archie.

Once more she lets her fingers touch his, and this time he touches them with his lips.

"Thank you, Dulcie," he murmurs. Then he drinks the "whole at a draught," flings the cigarette in the grate, and stretches himself. He cannot endure it longer; the sight of her tortures, maddens him.

"I'll go up now," he says. "If I don't look fit and fresh to-morrow the backers will be frightened, uncle. Good-night, aunt; good-night, sir."

Then he comes to Dulcie, who has shrunk back near the door.

"Good-night, Dulcie," he says, and his voice quivers.

"Good-night," she says, and she gives him her hand. "Good-night, dear Archie," and she raises her head and looks at him.

The look is only too plain. It is a woman's way of saying, "Kiss me."

For the life of him he cannot withstand it, though he meant never to touch her lips again.

"Good-night," he repeats, and he bends his head and kisses her twice, thrice, so passionately that she cringes and shrinks back with maidenly alarm.

Then he puts her from him gently, tenderly, and goes up-stairs.

"I think I will go up, too," she says to Lady Brookley.

"You look tired, dear; do. I shall be glad for all our sakes when this eventful morning shall have come to a close. This is my first experience of the turf, and I hope, devoutly, it will be the last."

"You must put in an appearance with all your colors flying to-morrow, my lass," says the earl, heartily; "no pale cheeks, you know. The red flag to the topmast, and all hands piping."

So she goes up to her own room. There is no storm in her heart. The storm has passed, and left her calm. The temptation of the moment resisted and overcome, has brought about a reaction, in which she sees and knows that her love is fast grounded, and that the past cannot avail to keep Archie from her heart.

So, worn with the trial she has undergone, Dulcie sinks to rest, and the last word that leaves her lips in the self-communion that comes before sleep is "Archie!"

And he? Weary and tempest-tossed, he paces the room until the dawn. Then, remembering how much depends upon him, how, perhaps, many a man's fortune rests upon his strength of muscle and cool nerve, he throws himself upon the bed, and forces sleep to visit his wild brain and weary, anguished heart.

But dreams come with sleep, and for the few hours that he lies wrap-

Deceived AND Disowned

True as Steel!

PROLOGUE.

OVER THE BAR.

THE scene would have served as a "set" for a modern melodrama. The sun had sunk in regal splendor, and there was still a faint glow in the summer sky. In the background, almost hidden by noble trees, was the Elizabethan manor called the Grange, which dominated the little Sussex village of Wrenstead. In the foreground was one of those encampments which appear magical to the mind of youth, especially when it vegetates in the countryside; there were the familiar tents, the gayly painted caravans, and the string of horses, which would perform such wonderful feats when the circus was set up and the ring made. The encampment was not only that of a circus, but of a traveling theatrical company; and on lines stretched between the trees hung, fresh from the wash-tub, portions of the theatrical wardrobe: the white dress of Ophelia, the trunks of Romeo, the toga of Julius Caesar.

On these mystic forms and colors, the flickering light of a fire cast lurid gleams. Beside the fire, John Wynter, the proprietor of the circus and theatre, stood looking into the glowing embers and occasionally re-reading a log or a branch. He would have been a tall man, but a cruel injury, done years ago, had bent the once straight back and twisted the once graceful figure. There was still beauty in the face, notwithstanding its sternness; there was a touch of genius in the eyes. For this man, to whom Fate had been so unkind, was singularly gifted; he could play all the parts in the theatre, excepting that of the handsome lover; it was his brain which directed the fortunes of the traveling troupe; it was his ready wit which turned aside the difficulties in the way, or surmounted them.

All the preparations were steadily making for the night's performance, and John Wynter was free to indulge in one of those reveries to which he was so much given. It was always backward that his mind traveled, back to the day when he had suffered the great wrong which had robbed him of strength and comeliness, and rendered him a marked man among men and an object of pity to women. Once, twice, he raised his head and looked with a darkening face and brooding eyes at the house rising above the trees; and, as he did so, his lips moved with inaudible words.

The clock in the neighboring church tower struck eight; and Wynter roused himself from his reverie, as one by one, from tent and caravan, the little motley crew, ready to transform themselves from clown to king, from dairymaid to princess, at a moment's notice gathered round the flickering flame. The sun had nearly set and its last rays were reflected on the distant windows of the manor house upon the hill.

"Verner's back, Wynter," said one of the men, as he lit his pipe. "I suppose we shall have to move on; he hates us strolling players, so they say in the village yonder, and calls us a pack of thieves and beggars."

An indignant murmur ran through the little company.

DESPAIRING WOMAN NOW HAPPY MOTHER

Mrs. Stephens Did Not Need The Surgical Operation.

Patoka, Ill.—"I had been married five years and my greatest desire was to become a mother.

The doctor said I never would have a child unless I was operated on for female troubles and I had given up all hopes when a friend told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it regularly for sometime, and I am in better health than ever, and have a healthy baby girl. I praise your Vegetable Compound for my baby and my better health. I want all suffering women to know that it is the sure road to health and happiness."—Mrs. GEORGE STEPHENS, R. F. D. No. 2, Patoka, Ill.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful in overcoming woman's ills because it contains the tonic, strengthening properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, which act on the female organism. Women from all parts of the country are continually testifying to its strengthening, curative influence.

It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

"He ought not to talk about beggars. He was little more than a beggar himself a couple of years ago," said Wynter, laughing harshly.

"What happened then?" queried one of the others, a man named Hick, who played the hero in the theatre, and the clown when a circus was deemed more profitable.

"His brother, Squire William, as fine a man as ever breathed, died, and left his estate—all the land you can see for miles around—and his young son, in trust to Squire Verner, as he calls himself; and a nice squire he makes, grinding down the tenants in order to get as much money as he can for his own precious son, Morgan."

"Ah!" commented another. "I see! It's a bad lookout for the other youngster. Poor little devil!"

As he spoke, there was a sound in the bushes, and Wynter, after listening intently for a moment, sprang up and darted into the brushwood. There was a cracking of dry twigs, a momentary scuffle, and suddenly he reappeared, leading by the hand a little boy.

Waving the others back, Wynter brought his captive into the light of the fire and of the flickering naphtha lamps, which shone on the child's pale features. He was about eight or nine years old, with a fair, high-bred beauty, that showed him to be no peasant's son. His dark eyes looked out on the strange faces, peering so eagerly into his, with a dauntless courage, and a mass of sunny hair, curling in natural rings, clustered over his ivory forehead.

"Well, youngster," said Wynter as he relaxed his hold of the child's arm, "what are you doing here, and what's your name?"

"I'm Ernest Verner," was the calm reply, "and I've run away."

There was a murmur of astonishment, mingled with amusement, at this explicit declaration.

"Yes, I've run away, and I won't go back. You won't send me back, will you?" he said entreatingly.

Wynter cleared his throat.

"It's naught to do with me, young sir. I suppose you've quarreled with your uncle, is that it?"

"It was with Cousin Morgan," said the boy, in a low voice. "He was cruel, and I called him a coward to—"

"And then?" asked Hick, as the child paused.

"He struck me with Griley's whip—and I knocked him down."

HOW TO MAKE

Boys' PANTS Last!

Some joker or wisecracker has said, "Make the coat and vest first." The wise mother knows it is no joke to get Boys Pants to last.

and in fact it is practically an impossibility, as Boys will be boys now, as always, in any pair of Trousers.

We are showing this week a pretty good range of BOYS' PANTS.

WE HAVE THEM!

Sizes run from fours to tens, and in one range made of English Woollen Tweeds the price of size 4 is $1.45, rising 5c. extra for each size larger. We have other qualities of course. And right here we want to say

We do not guarantee that they will last any longer than any other Boys' Pants, as we do not feel we could be responsible for these garments for any healthy boy. But these goods are very difficult to get and we want to tell the boy's mother with a pair of English Tweed Trousers at $2.25 or $2.50 pair. You cannot better these values.

We are also showing a splendid range of Men's Winter OVERCOATS.

These are of the latest cut, double breasted, belted, and newest style collar, and are very reasonably priced.

Call for Blasting Raiders!

Allied Officers Urge a Big Attack Against German Airdrome

Paris, Nov. 14.—"The best way to prevent German air raids is to destroy the German airdromes in Belgium," said a Belgian officer with whom I was sitting at a table in a hotel at a small town near Nieuport.

"Our conversation had been interrupted by a sudden boom like the hum of giant bees, drowned by the thunder of shells around us.

"Goths going to bomb Dunkirk or Calais," said the officer. "At this season they pass every fine night. Our batteries always fire on them as fast as your mother, seven thousand feet, at least, the very rare to bring one down around us.

"You Americans seem to pay very great attention to aviation. You are misled by any wild talk of reprisals on German towns, which military authorities will only be compelled by public clamor to want to prevent air raids and concentrate your efforts against hornets' nests.

Call's Reprisals Unsatisfactory

The officer's theory sounded reasonable, so I asked for further explanations. His argument was simple. "Firstly," he said, "reprisals objectionable from the moral point of view. If a man kills a stone at your mother, you defend her by throwing two stones at his mother?"

"Secondly, reprisals are a very senseless unsatisfactory. The nearer German towns as Karlsruhe, Cologne, or other allied planes must pass over a belt of German-held territory in Belgium or Alsatin, which is reluctant to bomb. It is least hundred miles of land that gives immunity from raids as soon with London.

"Overland planes can be shot continually. Their advanced camouflage and preparations cannot attack them in the air. To bomb man towns properly would require much larger air forces, both of ers and of battle planes to get them, than the results would justify. We should be playing the same game. Germany's whole object is to make us distract a big part of our air fleet from the actual battle."

"Exactly the same thing applies to my third point, that it is to send a strong force of battle planes back to England for London protection. That is just what German batteries are inadequate. No matter how many you send, they will be shot down."

"Finally, bombing airdromes, which raiders can start in any logical, but perfectly feasible, idea is not to bomb one of them here and there from time to time, but to concentrate all efforts against them and never let them have destroyed them."

Airdromes Easy to Photograph

That sounded good, but I wanted further confirmation. I got it the next day from a flight commander in charge of the aviation photographic service on the Belgian front, who was visiting. This officer has a reputation and wide practical experience in all branches of aviation. His row of decorations—French, British and British—bears witness to his skill.

"There are two points to be considered. First, can you locate the airdromes? Second, can you smash them when located? As regards the first, let me tell you the air photographic work of the airdromes is the easiest. Here is a photograph showing the characteristic shape of the hangars and the general disposition of a field. Even at a great height, where the risk to the photographer is trifling, no man is possible.

"You suggest that the Germans alter the shape of their airdromes to camouflage. As an aerial photographer, and the British and Americans will bear me out, I tell you they cannot deceive us long and cleverly. Sooner or later they become obvious.

Call for Blasting of Raiders' Bases.

Allied Officers Urge a Big Campaign Against German Airdromes in Belgium.

Paris, Nov. 14.—"The best way to prevent German air raids is by 'smoking out the hornets' nests,' that is, by destroying the German airdromes in Belgium," said a Belgian staff officer with whom I was sitting a few days ago in a hotel at a small coast town near Neuport.

Our conversation had been interrupted by a sudden drone overhead, like the hum of giant bees, quickly drowned by the thunder of guns all around us.

"Gothas going to bomb London, Dunkirk or Calais," said the officer. "At this season they pass over here every fine night. Our anti-aircraft batteries always fire on them, but they fly so fast and so high, seven to ten thousand feet, at least, that it is very rare to bring one down."

"You Americans seem to be paying very great attention to aviation. Don't be misled by any wild talk about reprisals on German towns, which the military authorities will only adopt if compelled by public clamor. If you want to prevent air raids you must concentrate your efforts against the hornets' nests."

Calls Reprisals Unsatisfactory.

The officer's theory sounded reasonable, so I asked for further explanations. His argument was simple.

"Firstly," he said, "reprisals are objectionable from the moral viewpoint of the Allies. If a man throws a stone at your mother, would you defend her by throwing two stones at his mother?"

"Secondly, reprisals are in a military sense unsatisfactory. To reach even the nearer German towns, such as Karlsruhe, Cologne, or Frankfurt, allied planes must pass over a wide belt of German-held territory, French, Belgian or Alsatian, which they are reluctant to bomb. It is just this hundred miles of land that gives Paris immunity from raids as compared with London.

"Overland planes can be observed continually. Their advance can be signalled and preparations made to attack them in the air. To bomb German towns properly would require much larger air forces, both of bombers and of battle planes to protect them, than the results would warrant. We should be playing the Germans' game. Germany's whole object is to make us distract a big part of our air fleet from the actual battle line."

"Exactly the same thing applies to my third point, that it is wrong to send a strong force of battle planes back to England for London's protection. That is just what Germany is playing for. Fourthly, anti-aircraft batteries are inadequate. No one will dispute that.

"Finally, bombing airdromes from which raiders can start is not only logical, but perfectly feasible. The idea is here to bomb one or two of them here and there from time to time, but to concentrate all our efforts against them and never rest until we have destroyed them utterly."

Airdromes Easy to Photograph.

That sounded good, but I wanted further confirmation. I got it the next day from a flight captain in charge of the aviation photographic service on the Belgian front, which I was visiting. This officer has a high reputation and wide practical experience in all branches of aviation, as his row of decorations—Belgian, French and British—bears witness. He said:

As regards the first, let me tell you, of all the air photographic work, spotting airdromes is the easiest. Here is a photograph showing the characteristic shape of the hangars. And the general disposition of a field. Even from a great height, where the risk to the photographer is trifling, no mistake is possible.

"You suggest that the Germans can alter the shape of their airdromes or try camouflage. As an aerial photographer, and the British and French will bear me out, I tell you camouflage cannot deceive us long or successfully. Sooner or later the trick becomes obvious.

Nerves of the Stomach

Were Weak and Inactive as Result of Nervous Prostration. Lost Twenty Pounds—Had to Take Sleeping Powders to Get Any Rest.

St. Catherine's Ont., December 3rd.—Many people never realize that the movement and action of every organ of the human body is dependent on the energy supplied by the nervous system.

When the nervous system gets run down there is weakness throughout the entire body. You feel tired and languid and your stomach and other digestive organs are similarly affected. Appetite fails, digestion is poor, you do not get the good of what you eat and gradually grow weaker and weaker.

"This process can only be stopped by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which goes directly to create new nerve force and thereby to invigorate the whole human body."

Mrs. Geo. S. Elise, 46 Davidson street, St. Catherine's, Ont., writes: "My husband had an attack of nervous prostration, and, although he doctored for some time and tried different other medicines, he could not get relief. He had to resort to sleeping powders given him by the doctor to make him sleep. The greater part of the trouble seemed to be with the nerves of his stomach. He began to lose weight, and kept on going down until he had lost twenty pounds. We had read advertisements in the news papers for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and noticed that it seemed to be doing a lot of good for people troubled with nervousness, so my husband decided to try it. He found benefit almost from the start, and continued this treatment until he had taken about twelve or thirteen boxes. The results were most satisfactory. He is now enjoying good health, sleeps well, and has gained back nearly all the weight he had lost. He also uses Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally, and thinks them an excellent remedy. I have also used this latter medicine for dizzy spells and liver trouble, and was completely cured of these complaints. We think a great deal of Dr. Chase's medicines, and cannot speak too highly of them."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edimanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

every airdrome positively. Mind you, all the airdromes from which London is raided, to say nothing of the centres for German planes used on the Flanders battle front, are in Belgium. To force them to move to Germany would increase their difficulties a hundredfold. Moreover, we could follow them there.

"Now, as to the question of destruction, if the Allies concentrated their whole bombing activities on airdromes, one of two things would happen: Either we should destroy the hangars, airplanes, local supplies, rail heads, and crew shelters—the latter point being important, as airplanes take a long time to train, and once a pilot's nerve is affected he is useless—or to prevent as the enemy would be compelled to withdraw an undue force of battleplanes from the front for protection. That would be the precise advantage in our favor that the Germans are trying to obtain, by raiding London.

Wants Policy of Initiative.

"In both cases we should be imposing our attack on the enemy, not accepting his initiative. There has been too much of that in this war already. If the Allies had followed Napoleon's policy of initiative, things would have been very different to-day.

"By bombing airdromes you destroy the air raid evil at its source. Reprisals, battleplane defense at home and anti-aircraft batteries are merely palliatives, like treating the symptoms of a malady and neglecting its real causes.

"His argument convinced me, but subsequent thought led to the query: 'If this plan is so obvious, why have not the allied army authorities adopted it?' I discussed this latter with Belgian, French, and British officers in the aviation and other services. Here is the sum total of my conclusions:

First, the army does it, but does not do it enough. The British constantly bomb German airdromes, but only some of them, with limited forces and only from time to time. Second, the army does not always do the obvious and logical thing. Army rulers do not always agree on a policy to be followed. They are hampered by tradition or by political considerations due to popular pressure. The case of Kitchener and explosive shells is an outstanding instance among many.

Third, a General commanding an army or a division, is naturally obsessed by the purely military side of his operations. There is a battery or munition dump he wishes to have blown up, a railroad or junction to be destroyed, a concentration of troops to be attacked and thrown into confusion or stores to be destroyed. He sends bombers out on these jobs in order that the task before him may be facilitated.

Losses Now Quickly Repaired.

Local advantages, no doubt, are thus gained, but railroads can be repaired, men concentrated afresh, mines and munitions resupplied and batteries replaced. Meantime the German bombing planes are doing the same behind his lines and the Gothas are raiding London, the former nullifying his own advantages and the latter bidding fair to force him to divert his air forces whether he will or not, to reprisals on German towns. He is not bold and up-to-date enough to take a wider view, to realize that if he can destroy the German airplanes he will 'put out the enemy's eyes' and his advantages will be multiplied enormously.

Finally, aviation is a new arm in war. Even now the British are only just making an independent air ministry, and by the nature of things the practical aviation leaders are young and consequently of inferior rank. It is difficult for them to impress their views, however backed by expert knowledge and personal experience, on their less well informed superiors. There are still too many obsolete methods, too much tradition in old Europe.

It has been America's pride to 'scrap' what is obsolete in favor of more up-to-date and better things. According to opinion here she must scrap the ideas of reprisals and aerial activities that balance and nullify each other. She must concentrate her effort and use her influence with the Allies to induce them to follow her example, on striking at the enemy's air bases and smoking out the hornets' nests. Thus and thus only can be won the absolute 'mastery of the air' with all that it implies.

Chinese Fleet.

For many years missionaries in China have been trying to educate the people of that country to discard the injurious practice of foot-binding. If these same Chinese women could see the atrocities in foot-wear now so common amongst the women of this so-called Christian country, they might well resort to the missionaries that they had better go home and preach common sense to their own women. A prominent physician in Toronto, speaking at a public meeting, last week, said: "Many people are being treated with drugs and liniments for various diseases when the root of the matter is their deformed feet. High heels and pointed toes are the doctor's best friends." At this same meeting, called together for the purpose of forming a society to educate people in the proper care of the feet, it was shown from various authorities that much harm accrues to the whole system, mental and physical, from the high heeled, cramped, balanced, forward, unnaturally level, pointed foot-wear of the present fashion and that its prevalent use is as much due to ignorance as to vanity. It looks very much like a rude imitation of the pagan Chinese whom we are attempting to convert. To say that the fashionable monstrosities of the present fashion are natural and conform to the normal shape of the human foot is to make a serious reflection on the wisdom and skill of the Creator.—Wesleyan.

The Anniversary of Ypres.

(London Times.)

This day, Oct. 31, will in future, we trust, always be held sacred to the memory of the officers and men of our old regular army, the army which in 1914, in the glowing words of the prime minister, "gathered the spears of the Prussian legions into its breast, and in perishing, saved Europe." Our suggestion that the most critical day of the first battle of Ypres should be made a national anniversary has been received with so much enthusiasm throughout the country that it needs no further commendation. The flood of letters we have received, the general approval expressed by the press, make it certain that in years to come this day of days will be set apart for the celebration of the deeds of the heroes who fought and died in 1914 for the greatest of causes. We did not expect that the movement would take definite shape this year, nor was this our object. Our new troops, including the legions to-day on the very slopes where the old army kept its line against the repeated attacks of great masses of the enemy. Our object in recalling the events of the first battle of Ypres has been to urge that, in contemplating the splendid achievements of the new armies we should never forget to hold for ever 'in remembrance the immortal valor of the 'Old Contemptibles.' This is now assured, and in years to come the day should have its permanent place among our national festivals. We may have greater victories to celebrate, but none more instructive with the crowning glory of sacrifice.

By a natural mischance the early campaign of the old army has in the past three years been associated in the popular mind with Mons rather than with Ypres. The reason is that, while the incidents of Mons, where only half our forces were actually engaged, very quickly became known, the story of Ypres was only told long afterwards, and even now is still being gradually pieced together. The excellent narratives already in print tell much, but by no means all. Parts of the story may never be recovered. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who has diligently collected many details, relates as an example the episode of Captain Rising and ninety men of the Gloucester Regiment. These men defended some point with such heroic tenacity that when, some days afterwards, the brigade attempted to get the names of the survivors for commendation, not one could be found."

We have been asked why, when every battalion did magnificently, the 2nd Worcesters should be singled out for special commendation. The reason is that it was their proud lot, at the bidding of Brigadier-General Charles FitzClarence, to retake Gheluvelt at the point of the bayonet between 2 and 3 a.m. on October 31, and so to save the line. Lord French, who should be the best judge, said in his despatch that "if any one unit can be singled out for special praise it is the Worcesters." Again we have been asked why we should praise the general whose keen eye saw the danger and gave the order which turned the tide, while leaving unnamed the officer who led the battalion into action. In this instance the criticism is just. The officer who led the Worcesters on that great day was Major (now Lieut.-Colonel) E. R. Hankey, who happily still survives. We trust that the battalion he commanded will now receive some special battle distinction, such as the old army prized, and that their leader will not be forgotten. Yet other correspondents chide us for not calling attention to the steadfast courage and devotion of the 1st South Wales Borderers, whose staunchness alone endeavored the Worcesters to advance. The undying distinction of the Borderers is that when the line broke they stuck to their trenches and refused to budge. They were a little to the north of Gheluvelt, and they, too, stemmed the tide with indomitable fortitude. There were many such units, while the experience of Sir Thomas Capper and the Seventh Division is an epic in itself. The deathless story of Ypres, is so full of examples of matchless heroism that to tell in detail would be to recall to mind half the units of the old British army. There were the 2nd Queens, who had two officers and 60 men left that night; the 2nd Welsh, left with "three officers and 92 men," the 1st Coldstream, "perhaps the hardest hit of all" on Oct. 29, who "at the end of that dreadful day" had not a single officer left; the 2nd Wiltshires, almost destroyed near Zonnebeke on Oct. 24; the 2nd Life Guards, charging on foot behind Hugh Dawnay at Klein Zillebeke, together with the Blues under Gordon Wilson; the 2nd Royal Scots Fusiliers, who fought in the battle until the whole battalion disappeared; the 1st Camerons, who met a like fate; the list is so long that we know not when to stop, nor can we recount here the prowess of the French and Belgian units which share with the British the pride of the first battle of Ypres. For us, and for our Allies alike the memory of the struggle of October and November, 1914, can never fade away.

It is evident that chaos will last until the army takes a hand. Nicholas Nicholasievitch is by far the best disciplinarian in the army. If the revolution had restored him to the command of the forces Russia might to-day be something more than a pitiful mess. But he was a Romanoff, and with the mock Republicans this outweighed his genius. At the head of the army Nicholas would be the real head of Russia, whether his official title was regent, president, dictator or generalissimo. If it is not too late, he would restore order, in time to confront Germany. It would be a day for easier breathing among the Allies if this laconic soldier took the place of the series of political mountebanks who have made a joke of Russia. It would be a painful day for the Prussians, who never could corrupt him.

MONDAY, Dec. 3rd, 1917.

Carry On!

The last casualty list is the climax of the sad record that has been reaching the country for days past. Many, too many, of the names follow the glorious but terrible words "Killed in action"; the number of wounded has mounted grievously high. More of the blood of this old island, every drop of it precious, has been spilled in the great cause, consecrating it and making it yet holier and more worthy to be upheld. There is one proud consolation in so much grief. These lists are not only the toll of duty; they are the price of fame. Fame! None of these men sought it. They came from an obscure corner of the world, unversed in war, merely offering to do what should be demanded of them and content if they could do it well. But they won it, long ago, and none will dispute their right to it. By sheer merit and worth they won it, by proof of the things and the stuff of which heroes are made. They are a part, and not the least part, of a division which is famous in a huge army that has not a coward in it. Where there is more than ordinary work to be done, some job more difficult than the ordinary, to be tackled, there the 29th will be sent to do it and to tackle it, if it is not already facing the same task somewhere else. Where the 29th Division goes the Newfoundland Regiment goes, and it is not the last of its battalions in the field. That is why, after the fine performances in Flanders and their heavy cost, which would have earned most regiments a rest, our men were flung into the fight again, undoubted somewhere in the great Cambrai battle—because they were the sort of men that were wanted. That is the epitaph of these brave fallen; let it be our pride and solace. It must be more than that. It must be an example and an inspiration, it must strengthen into adamant our determination that the great record will not be permitted to break off as long as there is a man left to carry it on. See to what it has grown already! Suvla and Caribou Hill, Beaumont Hamel, Gueudecourt, Monchy, Steenbeke, another name, which we do not know, to mark October 9th, and now yet another, it may be "Bourlon" or "Wontaine". The old regulars of the British army are proud of their histories, but which of their tattered banners, bearing names that go back to Marlborough and beyond, tells a prouder story than this that can be read on the young standard of Newfoundland, its colours yet fresh but soaked through and through with blood? Must that story end there? Shall there be no names added to it? That is for Newfoundland at home to answer. There is no need to ask Newfoundland at the front.

Deserting Very Prevalent.

Causes Trouble and Expense.
Master mariners and owners of shipping generally have experienced much difficulty with seamen this fall. It is only by offering big financial inducements that men can be procured at all to go to sea, owing to the risk involved by the submarine menace, and then when sailors have signified their intention of joining a vessel they back out at the last moment and as soon as they get any advance cash in their possession. Invariably it happens that when a vessel is ready for sea with a cargo some of the crew absent themselves and the captain has to go on a "wild goose" chase seeking their whereabouts. In consequence of the delay occasioned the vessel there is perhaps a loss of thousands of dollars not to mention the inconvenience to those interested in the cargo. This morning the captain of a vessel in port sought the aid of the authorities to find a seaman who had deserted him.

Laundry Girl Meets With Accident.

A girl named Hazel Jones, an employee at the Empire Steam Laundry on King's Road, met with a painful accident on Saturday evening last. In some unaccountable manner she got her hand caught in the "mangler," a machine which is a part of the process of the laundry work. As a result her hand was badly crushed, the flesh especially about the fingers being fearfully lacerated. She was attended by a doctor, who bandaged her injuries temporarily. Later she was taken to the General Hospital for treatment.

CAPT. CLAYTON LECTURES.—Rev. Capt. Clayton gave another interesting lecture last night on "The Experiences of a Chaplain in the Trenches in France and Flanders" at the Grenfell Hall. Rev. Dr. Jones, Rector of St. Thomas's, presided, and the attendance was large. At the close of the address a vote of thanks was passed to the lecturer by acclamation.

Keep the Hi-Press Wearing.

And "Keep the Home Fires Burning." They are sending from St. Mary's for the Hi-press rubber boots, and we also get from Buri. Orders sent by men and youths: While the hardy sons of Burgeo say the rubbers are tough and strong, and all over Terra Nova. Sure they sing this cheery song:
CHORUS:
Keep the Hi-press wearing,
'Tis for them we're caring,
When we are so far away,
On the briny foam;
No matter who may fout it,
We have no doubt about it,
They're the best boots that are sold
On our dear Island Home.

Every day we're getting letters saying "Our corns are growing less." Some more have no rhombatics. Since they wore the good Hi-press; And there's more whose feet were chilly.
Tells us now 'tis at an end,
For in the Hi-press rubbers
They have surely found a friend.

CHORUS:
Keep the Hi-press wearing, etc.

The Regiment and the "Blue Puttees."

A Straight Answer from the Minister of Militia to the "Star." December 3rd, 1917.

Editor "Daily Star."
Sir,—An article appeared in the editorial column of your paper on Friday last,—which was copied by the "Evening Herald" on Saturday,—under the heading "Is this True." The article purported to be founded on an alleged letter from a wounded soldier, now in one of the hospitals in England, written to a friend in the city, in reference to the matter of furlough for the "blue puttee" boys. As this article contained charges of a sweeping and serious character against the military authorities at the Base and at the Depot in Scotland, I felt it my duty on Saturday to cable the entire contents of the same to the Prime Minister, Sir Edward Morris, in London, requesting him, in view of the serious character of the charges, to institute an immediate and searching inquiry on that side for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or otherwise of the several assertions made; at the same time asking that a complete report of the findings of such enquiry be cabled out here without delay for the information of the public.

We have had a great number of letters and communications published in the daily press, since our Regiment went overseas, making statements and charges against the administration of the Regiment, and against our Patriotic Institutions, but nothing has previously appeared containing such serious charges as those contained in the article in question.

The time has arrived when this sort of thing should be taken up and the question decided, once and for all, whether there is any justification in such statements. You called on me, Mr. Editor, as Minister of Militia to take action in this matter at the same time intimating that I might be deterred from doing so through some political or social influence. Well, Sir, let me assure you that no influence you can name will prevent me from doing my duty to the boys of the Newfoundland Regiment. Whilst I am head of the department, as far as it is in my power, I will see justice and fair play awarded every one of them. May I ask that in future all letters and communications sent to you for publication and which may work to the detriment of the Regiment, or any member thereof, be submitted to me first for investigation, and I can assure you and all other sections of the Press, that the closest scrutiny and enquiry will be afforded them and a true and correct statement of the facts furnished. This, I hope, will obviate the publication, very often of statements that are not warranted by fact. No soldier in the Newfoundland Regiment need fear any trouble for himself; if he has a genuine grievance to express he will find a channel whereby that grievance can be adjusted and he need not be in any way be affected by his actions.

As this matter is one that is necessarily of general interest I am taking the liberty of sending a copy of this letter to the other daily papers, requesting publication by them also.

Thanking you in anticipation for space in your valuable paper, I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your obedient servant,
J. R. BENNETT,
Minister of Militia.

"One Loving Sets Another"

The words above are professions of St. Paul and have suggested them. We have learned of heavy casualties listed to-day, which are the of the brave and noble our Newfoundland. They made the Supreme. They have freely laid down their us, in accordance with their religion (which is real religion), and the principles of Liberty and they held.
We sympathize most lovingly with their friends and friends who are at their early departure. But most of these loved and fortified by the thought, those unselfish souls, with greater force. The body may perish, but the ever, and part of their have left with us. Enter into the hearts of them to unselfish. The high resolves, which a terial standpoint, our fall appear to have been so called upon to realize of Science or mechanical Energy or Force, while it in form, is never by Soul Force is the high impulse can be goes on through what has accomplished the poses.
Soul Force, however different from Mechanical Force, progresses it seems to be merely that the after many incarnations the final consummation to a higher circle, as with us to-day, and their high impulses.

"One Loving Spirit Sets Another on Fire"

The words above are from the Confessions of St. Augustine. They have suggested themselves to me, learning of heavy casualty lists published to-day, which tell us so many of the brave and unselfish heroes of our Newfoundland Regiment have made the Supreme Sacrifice. They have freely laid down their lives for us, in accordance with the tenets of their religion (which was in them a real religion), and those noble principles of Liberty and Justice which they held.

We sympathize most deeply and lovingly with their parents, relatives and friends who are left to mourn their early departure from our midst. But most of these know, and are comforted by the thought, that in dying, those unselfish souls still live and with greater force. The material body may perish, but the soul lives on for ever, and part of their spirit they have left with us to-day. It will enter into the hearts of others, and fire them to unselfish action to carry on the high resolves, which from a material standpoint, our fallen heroes appear to have been so suddenly called upon to relinquish. Students of Science or mechanics know that Energy or Force, whilst it may change in form, is never lost or destroyed.

Soul Force, is the same in this respect as Mechanical Energy, and no high impulse can ever be lost, but goes on through all the ages, until it has accomplished its destined purposes. Soul Force, however, may be different from Mechanical Force, for as it progresses it seems to increase (or is it merely that it transmutes) until after many incarnations it reaches the final consummation destined.

The gallant souls who have passed to a higher circle, are still in touch with us to-day, and stirring us with their high impulses. Some that had the opportunity are perhaps re-incarnated amongst us to-day. Wherever they are, their spirit fires us and encourages us to continue in their and our higher endeavors, and without understanding is he who shall say, that they have died in vain.

Love was the guiding principle of their life, despite any weaknesses which we all, of the body material, are subject to, and their death is one of love, by which they have thrice glorious ascended higher, leaving us to Carry On.

And shall we fail those brave spirits, of whom it is meet to say—"Greater love hath no man than this, that he lay down his life for his friend."

"THE SENTINEL,"
St. John's, Dec. 2nd, 1917.

The Late Samuel Harding.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—Kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to record the death of Samuel Harding, of Greenspond, which occurred at that place on Friday, Nov. 23rd. Uncle Sam, as he was familiarly known, was respected by all who knew him and many an interesting account the writer has heard him relate of his experiences at the seal-fishing in the sailing ships of long ago. For many years he was watchman with the firm of J. & W. Stewart with whom he was a great favorite. Deceased who was in his 96th year, leaves to mourn him five sons and thirteen grand-children to whom sympathy is extended. Interment took place on Monday the 26th inst., in the C. of E. Cemetery.

Yours etc,
A FRIEND.

A Gracious Gift.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

A very gracious and beautiful act came to my attention the other day. The woman whom it concerns is one of the finest women I know. She has brought five children into the world and by the aid of an indomitable energy and a clever pen has borne most of the burden of their support and education herself. In addition to that she had given them such a home life, such a background, such standards and ideals as few women with all their time free, give their children.

It has always seemed to me that the children took this a little too much for granted, gave in return only what they would give an ordinary mother—or less.

They had started a "Mother M. Fund."

I was wrong. I met this woman the other day. I asked what she was writing now. "I'm not writing this year," she said. "I'm just resting. Later I shall take up my work again because I love it but (proudly) not because I have to."

And then she told me (a lump comes into my throat just to write of it). The children have started a Mother M. Fund. They put the money in my account in the bank and I am to draw a certain sum each week. They all club together and give according to their means.

"I didn't like it at first," she went on. "I've always been so independent. But then my son wrote me the most wonderful letter. I want you to see something in it. I keep it with me all the time."

And she read:

A Beautiful Thought Beautifully Expressed.

"I want you to draw this every week, dear mother, just as you would a salary well earned, but I want you to use it and treat it in your mind as interest only on the great amount of blessing you have always showered on each and every one of us."

Wasn't that beautiful? And unusual?

When the original relation is reversed and it comes time for sons and daughters to "do for" fathers and mothers, one sees so much miserably giving, so much ungracious giving. Yet often such sons and daughters pride themselves that they give, at all.

Why Not Start Such A Fund This Christmas?

As if it were enough to give so ungraciously that the recipient feels like a pensioner or so that those who gave you your start in the world have a bare subsistence while you enjoy luxuries.

I think a mother and father fund ought to be started among every family (no matter how small the sum so that it is all each honestly and generously can afford) where the father and mother have less than the child ren; and that the father and mother should be made to feel that it is not charity but "interest only on the great amount of blessings you have always showered on us."

FORESIGHT.

Foresight is the faculty of looking several hundred yards into the future and telling how far the price of town lots will jump. It is one of the noblest attributes of mankind; and has made it possible for many a man who formerly couldn't get credit for two pounds of soda crackers to join the country club and lie around for hours at a time in a pair of Scotch knee pants.

Some of the easiest money ever made in this country was the result of foresight which enabled its possessors to buy up several townships of land at 25 cents an acre and hold on until a railroad poked its nose through it. In the middle west great fortunes have been made by merely sitting down on a half section of clay subsoil and waiting until somebody from the east comes along and offers the price of an armored cruiser for it. This is one reason why the farmers in the corn belt are not buying anything with a wheelbase shorter than 124 inches and a motor with more cylinders than a talking machine.

In recent years foresight has done more to develop the oil fields of the southwest than money. It is a great gift to be able to sit in a swivel chair on the ninth floor of an Oklahoma office building and locate the spot where an oil well is ready to break out into song. A good brand of foresight may be purchased of the professional clairvoyant, who delves into the future at $2 per delve and puts a price on May corn that causes the customer to let go by wire, after which there is an early frost and a jump of nine cents a bushel.

Foresight is a valuable thing to have when a woman is about to pick out a husband for a few years. Just because a man who is courting a trunkful of 7 per cent. school bonds shaves every day and wears a pink carnation in the lapel of his coat, that is no sign that he will not sit around the house in a soft shirt and a tan beard four days old within a month after the wedding presents have been surrounded by moth balls. Love is all right in its place, but whenever it usurps the seat of the safety razor and plain home cooking there is bound to be a lack of harmony which can be heard by every neighbour in the block. Despite the limited supply of bridegrooms, by the exercise of a little foresight a woman will be able to find one that will fit into the home like an octagon rug in the front hall.

UNHAPPY RUSSIA.

Poor Russia, torn and rent in twain has reached an evil pass; though she has statements safe and sane, they cannot put up grass; for every time one tries a trick for bringing the bacon home, some angry voter throws a brick, and there's a bustled dome. And far off, where the northern piles in long white drifts the snow, the ex-czar through his whiskers smiles, and says, "I told you so."

The exiled monarch's safely canned, beneath an arctic sky; he thinks about his native land, and winks the other eye. Alas, poor Russia in distress! Her troubles never stop; she changes so no sport can guess which party cuts some ice, the next it's in the soup; today it's peace at any price, anon for war they whoop. And Nicholas, amid the snow, is swatting arctic flies; he's resting, while his whiskers grow, and looking pretty wise. He sweeps the ice and sleet away from off his kitchen floor; and digs some paths, so feet may stray from well to hen-house door. The bleak north wind is blowing strong, and there are signs of snow; and as the ex-czar toils along, he sighs, "I told you so."

Household Notes.

Every man should know at least a little about cooking.

Onion soup is a savory dish to serve on a cold night.

Salmon can be used instead of codfish in potato cakes.

Add a sprig of mint to new potatoes while boiling them.

Fried filet of fish is excellent served with cabbage salad.

If you don't serve potatoes with meat be sure to serve spinach.

Prune puddings or whips make cheap and wholesome desserts.

When One's Temper Gets Short

Most of us feel out-of-sorts at times but when a naturally cheerful chap turns into a continual grouch it is pretty safe to suspect that the digestion is the cause. A few doses of Stafford's Prescription "A" will soon convince you.

Stafford's Prescription "A" is a regular cheer-bringer, it brightens up the landscape, puts you in good humour with everybody and gives you an appetite like a schoolboy.

Prescription "A" is prepared only by "DR. F. STAFFORD & SON," Manufacturers of "3 Specialties": Stafford's Liniment, Stafford's Prescription "A", Stafford's Phosphate Cough Cure.

Everyday Etiquette.

"When I escort a young lady home should she wait until I mention leaving her before going into the house?" asked Bert.

"You should leave after talking a very few minutes. The young lady is your hostess and probably would not feel like hurrying you by a pointed hint. You should, therefore, take the initiative," replied his father.

Record Collection.

FOR CHRISTIAN BROTHERS.

Yesterday's collection for the Christian Brothers taken up in all the R. C. Churches of the city was again considerably in excess of all previous years and $1,055.48 more made up as follows:—

Cathedral $3,969.00
St. Patrick's 1,704.00
St. Joseph's 124.64
Mt. Cashel 50.00
Kilbride 52.65

After Last Mass the collectors assembled at the Monastery (Mt. St. Francis). Hon. J. D. Ryan, who handed the entire amount to Rev. Bro. Ryan, Superior of the Brothers, made a happy speech, eulogizing the Brothers' good work, which, he hoped, would soon be extended to St. Joseph's Parish. He congratulated all concerned on the result achieved. Rev. Bro. Ryan replied eloquently, thanking the people for their generosity on behalf of his associates and regretting his inability to express his deep sense of gratitude. He had received messages from Rev. Bro. Kennedy and Ryan, now abroad, who were present in spirit and conveyed their thanks to the community for their testimony of good-will. After reviewing the Order from its inception, he thanked absent friends for their contributions, including those who were at the scene of War, and Sir Edward Morris; also he paid a tribute to the late John P. Grace, Esq., who with J. L. Slattery, Esq., and others, had always worked so tirelessly and nobly for the Brothers. In closing he trusted that the terrible war would be over by the time the collection came round again.

Messrs. M. Bambrick, J. Doyle and J. Clooney, tendered the amounts from St. Patrick's, Kilbride and St. Joseph's Churches, respectively, as did also Rev. Bro. Ennis, of Mt. Cashel, who also spoke in appropriate terms of the donors and wished the country success and prosperity.

Hon. P. T. McGrath, on behalf of the Press, made a brief but fluent speech, pointing out, as had been demonstrated, that the response would be more liberal each succeeding year. He paid a tribute to the late Bro. O'Hurley and to the ex-pupils at the front.

Mr. J. L. Slattery spoke eloquently of the efforts of Hon. J. D. Ryan towards the advancement of education and said it was the intention of ex-pupils to erect a monument to the late Bro. O'Hurley.

Messrs. W. J. Higgins and J. Harris spoke in commendatory terms of the services of the deceased, "Soggarth, Aaron," and indicated what was being done towards perpetuating his memory. Their thanks were expressed to Hon. J. D. Ryan for the use of the B. I. S. rooms for the purpose of holding meetings.

SCHR. BONANZA TOTAL WRECK.—The schr. Bonanza, which drifted ashore at Holyrood during last Friday morning's storm, is now a total wreck. All removable articles, together with the crew's belongings, have been salvaged. The hull of the ship is covered by insurance.

As a token of Remembrance a Portrait of the giver is long cherished and thought more of than the usual ordinary gift. J. C. PARSONS, Bank of Montreal Building.—nov17,tf

BRITISH CAPTURES FOR NOVEMBER.

LONDON, Dec. 2. The number of German prisoners taken in November was 11,551, including 214 officers; 133 guns, including 40 heavy guns, and also 303 machine guns and 64 trench mortars, besides great quantities of engineering stores, ammunition of all natures and war materials of every kind were also captured.

ATTACKS ON VERDUN FRONT.

PARIS, Dec. 1. The Germans made a violent attack last night on the Verdun front. The war official reports two efforts were defeated by the French, who, after a severe engagement, held their line intact.

SOLDIERS AND CONSCRIPTION.

LONDON, Dec. 2. The Press Association reports that the ballot taken yesterday among the Canadian soldiers in England, was overwhelmingly in favor of conscription.

AIR FIGHTING.

LONDON, Dec. 2. A British official statement from headquarters in France, says fifteen hostile machines were brought down and three others driven down out of control. Seven of our machines are missing.

LOYD GEORGE INTERVIEWED.

PARIS, Dec. 2. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.) Premier Lloyd George, interviewed today by the Petit Parisien, said the moment is very serious, everything must be given way before the importance of our object. We have the men, munitions, economic and financial resources and the feeling that we are fighting for the right. Let us strain every nerve now to make our direction and control into realities. If we don't waste time and are resolved to win the war we shall do so. We must have the will, patience, endurance and tenacity then we shall conquer.

"THE RIGHT THING AT THE WRONG TIME."

NEWTON, Mass., Dec. 2. Lord Lansdowne's letter, urging upon the Entente Allies a statement in general terms of their war aims, was termed "the right thing at the wrong time" by ex-President William H. Taft, speaking last night on the great war before the local chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

AUSTRIAN PAPER ON PEACE.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 2. The Vienna Neue Freie Press invites Britain to consider whether it is not possible to open peace negotiations. It considers that such an invitation should properly come from Austria, because the dissensions between Britain and Germany dating from the death of Queen Victoria, did not directly affect Austria. The paper argues that a war of destruction has already been rejected by Lansdowne, and probably by Asquith, and that it becomes impossible on the day that Russia and Germany agree upon a peace.

ACQUITTED ON MURDER CHARGE.

MINOLA, N.Y., Dec. 2. Mrs. Desautels was acquitted by a Supreme Court jury last night of the murder of her husband, John L. Desautels.

Following Joshua's Campaign.

(From the Wichita, Kas., Beacon.) And now the British Mesopotamian army has captured Hebron, twenty miles from the birthplace of Christ. More than thirty-three centuries ago Joshua, at the head of the Israelite hosts, marched over the same ground, capturing Hebron and putting its King to death. In one of the battles he found the time was too short and so he commanded the sun and moon to stand still while his men fought. Forty years before, Moses was leading the children of Israel out of Egypt to this promised land of Canaan. He sent out spies, who were overawed by the giant sons of Anak whom they saw at Hebron. All but Joshua and Caleb gave unfavorable reports, and the Lord was displeased at the perverseness and the credulity of the Israelites, and decreed that they must wander forty years in the wilderness. "How are the mighty fallen," mournfully sang David as a requiem for his friend Jonathan, nearly 3,000 years ago, and then he asked the Lord for guidance. God commanded him to go to Hebron, and there he was anointed King of Judah and reigned seven years before going to Jerusalem. And almost fifty centuries ago Abraham built an altar at Hebron and there bought his first land. There was buried his faithful wife Sarah, and also Isaac and Rebekah Wedding Bells.

A very pretty wedding took place at the C. of E. Cathedral, on Saturday, Dec. 1st, by the Rev. J. Brinton, the contracting parties being Miss F. Grouchy, daughter of the late Philip Grouchy, of this city, and Mr. Austin Tipples, of St. George's. The bride was charmingly attired in wine color tulle silk with hat to match and was supported by Miss Clarence Piccott who acted as bridesmaid; the bride was given away by Mr. A. C. Grouchy, of Pouch Cove. The groom was ably supported by Mr. Alex. Grouchy, brother of the bride. After the ceremony the happy couple drove to 112 Barnes' Road, the home of the bride's mother, where a reception was held. The bride and groom received many useful presents.

Severely Wounded at Passchendaele.

Lieut. George T. Shaw in Prince of Wales Hospital, London—His Father now a Resident of Dartmouth.

Bridgewater has often been noted in the casualty lists of this world war; many of her finest young men have been killed and many wounded, some few made prisoners. In one of the late lists, Lieut. George T. Shaw is reported severely wounded. Lieut. Shaw was a teller in the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Bridgewater in 1913, and was then moved to an agency of that bank at Youngstown, Alberta, where he subsequently enlisted in the 175th Alberta Battalion and went overseas in October, 1916. In July, 1916, he was married at Winnipeg to Miss Lou Sprague, of Bridgewater, daughter of Capt. R. G. Sprague (who is now in a German prison) and Mrs. Sprague (nee Hunt-er). On Nov. 6th, in the big fighting at Passchendaele, Lieut. Shaw was severely wounded in the right leg, resulting in a compound fracture, and is now in the Prince of Wales hospital, London. Lieut. Shaw was the eldest son of Capt. Samuel Shaw, formerly of Newfoundland, now of Dartmouth, Nova Scotia. His wife with her little baby, resides at Bridgewater.—Halifax Mail, Nov. 27.

Recruiting Meeting at Bell Island.

Hon. J. R. Bennett, Minister of Militia, and Mr. W. J. Higgins, M.H.A., will leave by motor for Portugal Cove to-morrow, where they will join the mail boat for Bell Island and at night will hold a recruiting meeting in the C.I.B. Armory. A number of hands-men from the C.C.C., together with a squad of returned soldiers, will also go along. Great preparations are being made by the Patriotic Committee of Bell Island for a successful meeting and it is expected that quite a large number of recruits will offer.

Warner's Rust-Proof Corsets. A Work-a-Day Corset as well as for Dress.

Warner's Corsets are made to wear, not to rust, break or tear. You may pay all kinds of money for a Corset but you will never have a better fitting, a better wearing, or a more comfortable Corset than a Warner's.

We can give you any Warner's style that is correct for fashion and your figure, and we confidently expect to fill every Corset requirement with a Warner's Rust-Proof, so remarkable are they in shape, comfort and wear.

CHARLES HUTTON,

Sole Agent Newfoundland.

The following despatch has been received by the Minister of Militia, through His Excellency the Administrator:

Downing Street,
29 October, 1917.

Governor,
Sir Walter E. Davidson, K.C.M.G., etc., etc., etc.

Sir,
I have the honour to acknowledge your despatch No. 118 of the 24th August last, and to request you to inform your Ministers that the Army Council who have been in communication with the Central Prisoners of War Committee, state that the packing for Newfoundland prisoners is done by Lady Bective, and the War Contingent Association. In this, as in all other cases, the Central Prisoners of War Committee accept the charge for the cost of the parcels, and when necessity arises they will be glad to consider an application for financial assistance from the Newfoundland War Contingent Association who as Care Committee are responsible for these prisoners. If therefore the Association have presented their accounts for payment to the Newfoundland Pay Office, all that would appear to be necessary would be for them to transfer them to the Central Prisoners of War Committee when necessary.

2. The Secretary of the Central Prisoners of War Committee has been asked to communicate with the Newfoundland War Contingent Association in the sense of the above. The cost of clothing the prisoners of war will fall as in other cases upon Imperial funds, though the actual despatch of it is undertaken by the Care Committee.

3. No doubt those who are able to contribute to Red Cross Funds in Newfoundland will bear in mind the work that is being done for Newfoundland prisoners of war by the Central Prisoners of War Committee.

I have, etc.,
(Sd.) WALTER H. LONG.

Parcels and Letters for Regiment.

Must be Sent to Pay and Record Office.

It has come to the notice of the Minister of Militia that a rumour is being spread, supposed to be based on the statement of a returned soldier, to the effect that parcels for men in the Newfoundland Regiment are tampered with and pilfered, and stating that there is a sickness in the Postal Department in the Pay and Record Office, London. The Minister of Militia is able to state that the handling of postal matters in the Pay and Record Office, London, is carried out very thoroughly, and such statements as the above only tend to create dissatisfaction and uneasiness with the relatives overseas. The public have been notified through the Press on different occasions that letters and parcels for men overseas should be addressed: Pay and Record Office, 1st Newfoundland Regiment, 58 Victoria Street, London, S.W. 1; but in spite of the fact, it has come to notice that letters and parcels are sent direct to Scotland. If parcels are sent through the proper channels, every precaution is taken for a safe delivery, from the time they are deposited in the Post Office, St. John's, until they are delivered to the addressee. One case may be cited where a soldier in Scotland to whom four parcels were sent, claimed that he had not received any of these parcels. Complaint was made by the parents of this man, and the matter was investigated. Later the man in question admitted having received the four parcels, but in the meantime, the Regimental authorities and the Pay and Record Office, London, were being discredited for mismanagement and carelessness in looking after the welfare of the men. The public is strictly recommended to follow instructions regarding postal matters published in the Press periodically; and in the event of any complaint of non-delivery or breakage of packages, to notify the Department of Militia, in order that an investigation may be made.

Ship That Was Ashore

IS HERE WITH FLOUR CARGO. The S. S. Beverley, Capt. Turner, which went ashore at St. Mary's, on November 24th and was refloated again on November 29th, arrived here yesterday. The ship brought a cargo of about six thousand barrels of flour from Montreal where she left 15 days ago. The night before she went ashore a severe storm raged. Capt. Turner was trying to make harbour when his ship grounded on a mud-bank, it being densely foggy at the time. After part of her cargo was removed and put on board the S. S. Erik, the Beverley came off into deep water again. She is but slightly damaged as a result of being ashore and is making very little water.

Booming the Kaiser.

A Neutral Diplomat Tells How the German Emperor Curries Favour With His Duped Subjects.

During the past year the work of reviving the declining popularity of the Kaiser among the mass of his subjects has been carried on with extraordinary energy and thoroughness by a branch of the German Secret Service that has been established for that special purpose.

The department is under the control of Herr Ledder, a keen business man, who before the outbreak of the war was manager of the publicity department of the Hamburg-America Steamship Company at Hamburg. "I know Ledder well, and when I was in Germany some little time back, he gave me some rather interesting details of his work."

Recently a sixpenny book has been published in Berlin entitled "Our Kaiser in War Time." It was written apparently by a Socialist member of the Reichstag, Herr Goetmann, but beyond consenting to allow the book to be attributed to him, Herr Goetmann was paid £250 for doing so, he had nothing to do with the authorship of it.

The book was written by a secretary in Ledder's department. The idea of publishing the book under the name of Herr Goetmann was simply to ensure its popularity—a piece of trickery, the cleverness of which was greatly appreciated by the Kaiser.

In the Picture Palaces.

I saw a copy of the book. It teemed with stories of the Kaiser's thoughtfulness and affection for the German working people. It was related how he often, after a day's work at Headquarters, would devote himself to the study of problems connected with food and other matters especially affecting the working classes.

"First feed our soldiers, then our working people, and from what is left, however little it may be, we will be able to take what will suffice for the larder of the Emperor." This was reported to be the Emperor's exclamation after discussing the food problem on one occasion.

The Kaiser was so pleased with this invention that he ordered the words he was reported to have said to be exhibited at all cinema shows under the heading: "What the King-Emperor has said about our food."

The cinema theatres have been used to boom the Kaiser's popularity in the most ridiculously extravagant fashion. One picture shown is of the Kaiser kneeling by the bedside of a dying soldier in a military hospital. This picture was an absolute fake. Servants from the Royal Household played all the parts shown in the picture.

Secret Service agents are continually travelling about Germany investigating where and to what extent any specially hostile feeling exists towards the Kaiser. In districts where such feeling exists, special steps are promptly taken to allay it.

A curious plan was adopted some time last March, designed both to test and boom the Kaiser's popularity. It was given out that the Kaiser was extremely ill. Every day for nearly a week bulletins were issued about his health, which was described as causing his medical attendants great anxiety. Long articles appeared in all the papers describing and reviewing all the work the Kaiser had done since the outbreak of war, and the ceaseless mental strain that he had been under.

The Kaiser Recovers!

One drawback to this plan was that it kept the War Lord of Europe, much against his will, confined to his rooms. He was at Potsdam at the time. It was intended that the Kaiser should remain ill for at least a week, but after five days' confinement, the Emperor gave orders that his complete recovery should be announced.

Rejoicings in honor of the Emperor's recovery were organized by Herr Ledder's department in different parts of Germany, but they fell rather flat. "The Emperor's recovery," Herr Ledder said to me, "was altogether too rapid. I believe a lot of people suspected that he had not been ill at all. The Emperor spoiled the chance of a really good boom by his impatience."

But in spite of all these efforts to bolster up the Kaiser's popularity, it is declining. Here is one concrete instance of this fact:

At a bazaar in Berlin, held last April, in aid of a military hospital in Berlin, autographed picture post-cards of the Kaiser were offered for sale. They were offered for sale in the evening when the bazaar was attended chiefly by working class people, whom it was the Kaiser's wish should have them. Three dozen post-cards were on sale. Only two dozen could be sold and the highest price fetched was four shillings.

Two years ago, under almost precisely similar circumstances, four dozen autographed photographs of the Emperor were sold in twenty minutes and the highest price paid was £1 6s.—Pearson's Weekly.

Your Boys and Girls.

As a rule babies are fed too often after the first year and, too, a great variety of food with too little milk. The secret of successful feeding throughout childhood is to keep largely to a milk diet.

By the beginning of the second year a child should be allowed more food than milk and should be fed with a spoon. The child should, at this period, be receiving five feedings a day of from eight to ten ounces of milk or some modification of milk, that is a feeding at six and ten a.m. and one, five and nine p.m.

This is the time that many mothers think they must give the child something to chew on because it has teeth starting. The six incisive teeth, however, which a child usually has at this age, are not chewing teeth and it is not until six to nine months later that a child is supplied with teeth intended to grind food into small particles.

Household Notes.

Parker House rolls can be made with a little cornmeal in them.

Eggs scrambled with salmon make an appetizing luncheon dish.

Orange rind mixed with the apple in apple pie improves the flavour.

The cheaper cuts of beef require more careful cooking than the fine cuts.

Eggs preserved in water glass should be very fresh, clean and infertile.

Stick a whole clove in each piece of lemon served on the afternoon tea table.

Cleanliness is a matter of tremendous importance in everything that pertains to food.

Add a pinch of borax to the rinsing water of handkerchiefs, if you would have them a little stiff.

Rub the ends of the ribs of the umbrella with vaseline where they are fastened. This prevents rust.

To prevent milk from curdling when used with tomato, mix a little bicarbonate of soda before mixing the two.
