What is Carnol and what will it do?

Carnol is a pleasant-tasting preparation, composed of Glycerophosphate Salts in combination with Iron, the soluble nutritive properties of Fresh Beef and Cod Liver's Extract.

Glycerophosphate Salts are commonly called "Blood Salts" and are known the world over, and recognized by scientists as positively the best blood builder and nerve invigorator yet discovered.

The Fresh Beef stimulates and nourishes the system, and supplies it with the vitamins so necessary in all run-down conditions.

Cod Liver's Extract, the alkaloid or nutritive elements only, with all the bad taste of cod liver oil removed is also one of the ingredients of Carnol.

Cod Liver Oil is not only a food and a flesh builder, fortifying the body against all kinds of disease, but is a specific for the germ of consumption and helps to check and destroy it.

Carnol is not a "hit and miss" preparation but is made from the prescription of a leading conservative physician, who ranks high in his profession.

Any doctor will have to admit that the ingredients used in Carnol are the finest of their kind, and for this very reason many physicians prescribe Carnol in their practice.

In all cases of Anæmia, Consumption, Nervousness, Neurasthenia, Rickets, so general among children, chronic bronchitis, general feebleness, impoverished blood and in all run-down conditions, Carnol is the ideal remedy.

Carnol provides food for the nerves and food for the body, increases weight and helps to keep the whole system.

Disease is slow growth—it does not start in a day or does it stop in a day. Therefore to get the best results from Carnol, a Course of Carnol should be taken.

Carnol is sold by all good druggists everywhere.

Under False Colors

Lord Somerton's Ally.

CHAPTER XV.

"But I am going this morning, Elsie: I am going now, I must not wait another hour. Do not look so troubled, little girl; my head is all right. These doctors make so much fuss over trifles. I want you to write to me all the details of this sad affair about Zeba and the fire. You must not blame yourself, darling. Dr. Denver is of opinion that it was the work of some thief, and would have occurred anyway. I am sure that you warned the poor woman often enough. You must tell the doctor that I insisted upon returning to London this morning. I must not dally away my time any longer. And now let us say good-bye, Elsie. I have no wish to meet Lady Helena. I feel that she is my enemy."

For a few minutes the girl clung to him fondly.

"And when shall I see you again, Colin?" she asked. "I am afraid to part with you. It seems that there are so many enemies between us. I dreamed last night that you did not really belong to me at all, and it was horrible!"

"Foolish little girl," he said, stroking her hair tenderly. "Who is to take you from me? Surely not Lord Somerton? You must have faith in me, darling, whatever may occur. Tell me that you will listen to nothing evil that may be said about me—tell me, and it will make me strong in my fight."

"Colin, why need you ask?"

She raised her fond eyes to his, and he read a eternal love in their misty blue depths.

"Suppose," he persisted, "suppose that I was proved to be a villain in the eyes of the world—"

"I cannot suppose any such nonsense," Elsie interrupted. "To me you are everything that is noble and good. No matter what was said about you, no matter what wickedness was laid at your hands, I would not believe one word of it; I could not, because it would be impossible for it to be true!"

"And you will write to me, darling, write to me, in care of Noel Campbell. I will send you my own address some day. At present, I wish to stay with my friend. He is working hard, and we help each other."

Elsie opened her eyes in surprise.

"I did not think that you would go back to him after what you told me about Noel Campbell," she said. "Do you not remember that you called him a mad man—a weak, cruel man?"

"It was unkind of me to say so much as that. He is not all bad, and I am devoting my energies to his regeneration, darling."

He evaded saying anything more.

End Corns

The simplest way to end a corn is Blue-jay. Stops the pain instantly. Then the corn loosens and comes out. Made in clear liquid and in thin plasters. The action is the same.

At your druggist
Blue-jay

about Noel Campbell, and a few minutes later kissed his sweetheart a fond farewell.

"You will write to me every day," he questioned again. "I shall wait for the postman as I have never waited before."

One close and lingering embrace, and Elsie saw his tall form disappearing among the trees of the winding avenue.

But fresh trouble was in store for Elsie. At the breakfast table Lady Helena hinted that Mr. Ernscliffe was suspected of being the murderer of Zeba. Elsie refused absolutely to discuss the matter, but she was nevertheless worried, and took the first opportunity that presented itself to write her lover.

This letter she wrote to Colin Ernscliffe:

"My Darling—I have news for you which you may laugh at, but which seems terrible to me. I am given to understand that you are suspected of stealing certain papers from the rectory; in short, that you are a thief employed by my distressed cousin, Noel Campbell, to obtain for him some kind of incriminating evidence against my father. Further, in the determination to crown your mission with success, you may be accused of the murder of my poor Zeba! It is not monstrous? Your sad departure this morning appears to me to vibrate your nerves. You merely went so that you could safely carry away your spoil! Now, I leave you to act as you are best advised, and I know that my clever darling will punish these officious and silly people as they deserve to be punished. I have forbidden Lady Helena to ever breathe one syllable against you again, or she leaves Blairwood forever."

Write to me, darling, and tell me that you are well! Write to tell me when we shall again meet, and repudiate the cruel things that have been said about you. With love forever and ever, your sweetheart, —ELSIE.

Elsie dressed without the help of her maid, and went to the post with her letter. She could not trust it to the letter-bag, with so many prying eyes about.

Midway between the Park and the village she met one of the footmen. He touched his hat and passed on, and Elsie knew intuitively that he had been sent to the rectory with some message from Lady Helena.

"I begin to hate her!" thought Elsie, "and once I thought her one of the best of women! But what have I to fear? I am no longer a child! I will defy them all!"

She walked slowly along, with eyes downcast, until she was startled by the grave tone of Mr. Vallance.

"Good-morning, Miss Sterne," he said; "I was on my way to the Park to see you. Are you going far?"

"No; only to the post office," replied Elsie, almost defiantly.

"I will walk with you, then."

She could raise no objection, but was conscious that he eyed the letter in her hand suspiciously.

All at once he paused when they were near to the post office, saying: "Miss Sterne, is that letter addressed to Colin Ernscliffe?"

"It is, Mr. Vallance," she replied, with flashing eyes.

"Then I cannot permit you to mail it," he said, sternly.

CHAPTER XVI.

The rector spoke authoritatively, and he held out his hand for the letter.

"You will either destroy it now," he went on, "or allow me to do so."

He did not appear to anticipate that Miss Sterne would do otherwise than promptly obey him. He could not bring himself to regard her as anything but a child.

"I have been blind to permit this intimacy, and there is much blame attached to the carelessness of Lady Freeman. Upon inquiry I find that you have met Mr. Ernscliffe more than two or three times, and he has never been properly introduced. It is an infamous piece of business upon his part, to endeavor to turn the head of an unsophisticated schoolgirl. You are little better, Miss Sterne, while this man, if no worse, if my other suspicions concerning him are correct while this man is doubtless a polished adventurer!"

"They had walked past the post office, and Elsie was tightly clutching her letter. He was pale, but her lips were set firmly together.

"I grant that there is an artist—a great artist—named Colin Ernscliffe, but what proof have we that the person who has introduced himself to you in that name is not masquerading? These things are so common, so very common. The newspapers are full of them."

"But Lord Somerton recognized him, Mr. Vallance," Elsie said.

"There I think that you are mistaken, because Lord Somerton cast the first doubt. He declares that he does not remember ever meeting Mr. Ernscliffe."

Elsie remembered that this was so, but she did not doubt her lover for one moment.

"These romantic-looking fellows—artists, poets, and the like—always appeal to the emotions, to the imaginations of very young girls," the rector continued. "They talk and look sentiment from long practice, and consider the occupation of breaking hearts a delightful one. So far I have only pictured the man who calls himself Colin Ernscliffe in the light most favorable to him. I have no proof that he is any worse than a heartless Bohemian—I have no proof that he is not Ernscliffe, the noted artist, but in my own mind I believe that he is not only an impostor, but a professional thief. I believe that it was he who broke into my study last night, and that he, or some of his accomplices, have caused the death of poor old Zeba. The motive is at once apparent, Miss Sterne. He has been employed to commit these crimes by your cousin, Noel Campbell, the ulterior object being the undoubted possession of Blairwood Park, and its princely revenue."

Elsie laughed scornfully, and Mr. Vallance glanced at her in pained surprise.

"You forget, sir, that I am Sir John Sterne's daughter—his only child."

Two or three times, and he has never been properly introduced. It is an infamous piece of business upon his part, to endeavor to turn the head of an unsophisticated schoolgirl. You are little better, Miss Sterne, while this man, if no worse, if my other suspicions concerning him are correct while this man is doubtless a polished adventurer!"

"They had walked past the post office, and Elsie was tightly clutching her letter. He was pale, but her lips were set firmly together.

"I grant that there is an artist—a great artist—named Colin Ernscliffe, but what proof have we that the person who has introduced himself to you in that name is not masquerading? These things are so common, so very common. The newspapers are full of them."

"But Lord Somerton recognized him, Mr. Vallance," Elsie said.

"There I think that you are mistaken, because Lord Somerton cast the first doubt. He declares that he does not remember ever meeting Mr. Ernscliffe."

Elsie remembered that this was so, but she did not doubt her lover for one moment.

"These romantic-looking fellows—artists, poets, and the like—always appeal to the emotions, to the imaginations of very young girls," the rector continued. "They talk and look sentiment from long practice, and consider the occupation of breaking hearts a delightful one. So far I have only pictured the man who calls himself Colin Ernscliffe in the light most favorable to him. I have no proof that he is any worse than a heartless Bohemian—I have no proof that he is not Ernscliffe, the noted artist, but in my own mind I believe that he is not only an impostor, but a professional thief. I believe that it was he who broke into my study last night, and that he, or some of his accomplices, have caused the death of poor old Zeba. The motive is at once apparent, Miss Sterne. He has been employed to commit these crimes by your cousin, Noel Campbell, the ulterior object being the undoubted possession of Blairwood Park, and its princely revenue."

Elsie laughed scornfully, and Mr. Vallance glanced at her in pained surprise.

A Fish Story

(John O'London's Weekly)

There is a remarkable shark story in Mr. Frederick O'Brien's "Atolls of the Sun." An old pearl diver, addicted to rum, named Huri Huri, was diving in the lagoon of Rangiroa, and a native, thus described his experience:

"He was all alone in his canoe, and was in deep water. He had gone down several times, and had in his canoe four or five pairs of shells. He looked again and saw another pair and plunged to the bottom. He had the shells in his sack and was leaving the bank when he saw just above him a shark so big that as he said, it could have bitten him in half as a man eats a banana. The shark thrust down its nose towards Huri-Huri, and he took out his shells and held them against the beast. He kept its nose down for half a minute, but then was out of breath."

"He was about to die, he believed, unless he could reach the air without the shark following him. He threw himself on the shark's back, and put his hands in the fish's gills, and so stopped or partly stopped the shark's breathing. The shark did not know what to make of that, and hurried upward, headed for the surface, by the diver. Huri-Huri was afraid to let go even there, because he knew the mao would turn on him and tear him to pieces. But he took several long breaths in the way a diver understands and still held on, and tore the shark's breathing places."

"Now the shark was angry and puzzled, and so rushed to the bottom again, but with the man on his back. The shark had not been able to enjoy the air at the top because he breathes water and not air. Huri-Huri closed his gill openings, and puffed his nose, and he came up again and again descended. By pulling at the gills the shark's head was brought up and he had to rise. All this time, Huri-Huri was thinking hard about God and his own evil life. He knew that each second might be his last one in life, and he prayed. He thought of Tona (Jonah), who was saved out of the shark's belly in the sea, when Christ was born, and he asked Jesus to help him. . . ."

Up and down they went for half an hour, the shark's blood pouring out after "A"ute, tore at the gills. Now he could direct the shark any way, and often he guided him toward the beach of the lagoon. The shark would swim toward it, but when he felt the shallow water would turn. But after many minutes, the shark had to stay on top altogether, because he was "so far gone to dive, and finally Huri-Huri steered him right upon the sand. Huri-Huri fell off the mao (shark) and crawled up farther, out of reach of him."

"The fish could barely move his tail when the watchers on the shore reached it, and every bit of skin was rubbed off the diver's body, for the shark's life is as rough as a file, but the diver lived to become a deeply religious man."

"The fish could barely move his tail when the watchers on the shore reached it, and every bit of skin was rubbed off the diver's body, for the shark's life is as rough as a file, but the diver lived to become a deeply religious man."

A 1923 Masterpiece at the Nickel

"THE RAGGED EDGE," A FILM THAT WILL LIVE LONG.
"The Ragged Edge," a screen version from the wonderfully popular book by Harold McGrath, is the big week-opening attraction at the Nickel Theatre commencing to-night. It's a picture all St. John's will like first, because it's real, red-blooded entertainment every inch of the way. A great novel made into a big picture; second, because it has Alfred Lunt and Mimi Palmer in the leading roles. These two newcomers are destined for big things—and they are said to be the finest looking couple on the screen; third, because the beautiful scenes take the spectator over considerable territory, to the land of real adventure and romance. It's a picture you'll talk about, too, for a long time because it was made expressly for audience consumption, with the thrills, the tears, the laughs, the situations that audiences want and want to pay for.

RECREATION AND CRIME.
London Daily Herald, it is worth recalling that, in one of the most valuable papers read before the British Association, Dr. Burt, of the L.C.C., discussed "crime" among children. He came to the conclusion that it is the spirit of adventure that leads youngsters to the Police Court. He found that in districts where parks and open spaces offer opportunities for games and sports, juvenile "crime" sinks almost to zero. "The race to Penitence," said Mr. Pett Ridge recently, "should be an obstacle race." Slums make it easy. Decent dwellings amid decent surroundings deter children from growing up as criminals, and in the long run may "pay" the City Corporation even if let at a rent that is not "economic."

WHERE THE CHILDREN ARE.
The houses where the children are. Have laughter through the day. The music sweet of pattering feet. And the sounds of merry play. The sunny skies of listening eyes. And the countless charms of May.

Just Folks.
By EDGAR A. GUEST.

Wolf! Wolf!
The Villager (New York) In January, 1923, the business men prophesied that France were allowed to continue in the Ruhr, civilization would come crashing down. The business men were not speaking metaphorically; they meant exactly what their words said: they truly believed that the politico-military action of France would bring on the collapse of Europe, and this collapse not two years hence, five years, twenty years hence, a gradual decline to catastrophe, but immediately. According to a large number of Englishmen, civilization should have been a heap of jackstraws about the first of May last, and here it is October, and the very prophets of total extinction are now finding things looking brighter! The difference between the fortune-teller and the business man is that the fortune-teller would never make this mistake twice. The business man goes on, strike after strike, crisis after crisis, as sure as ever of "the inevitable."

Barter, it appears, was filling his powder horn on Friday last, preparatory to going shooting, when it became choked. Whilst he was in the act of clearing it, he emptied a portion of the powder into his hand, and just as he had done so some ashes fell from the pipe which he was smoking, into the powder, causing an explosion. As a result his hand was badly burned, and upon being removed to hospital here it was found necessary to amputate two of his fingers, while it is quite probable that he may lose a third. The man was very fortunate in not receiving the contents of the explosion in his face.

British Empire Steel Will Have a Better Report

COMPANY'S FIGURES SHOW LARGE PRODUCTION THIS YEAR. Montreal.—The president of British Empire Steel Corporation, Roy M. Wolvin, left this week for another trip to the Sydney plants and properties of the organization, accompanied by a small group of American steel men. Included in the party was George F. Downs, the newly-elected director from the Lackawanna Steel Company. The frequent trips of Mr. Wolvin to the company's plant, accompanied by important steel operators, leads to the conclusion that an attempt is being made to strengthen the board of directors by the addition of operators of known experience and ability and from among the new president, or, at least, a new active operating head to succeed D. H. McDougall, the vice-president and operating head of the company, who recently resigned.

Year's Operations Better. British Empire Steel has had a much improved year, despite the strike that tied up production and let the company in for a loss of between $300,000 and $1,000,000. This is seen in some figures of increased production in comparison of the company's lines. These figures are as follows:

|          | Nine Months | 1923      | 1922 |
|----------|-------------|-----------|------|
| Coal     | 3,324,630   | 2,838,180 |      |
| Pig Iron | 193,072     | 63,127    |      |
| Ingot    | 220,725     | 56,295    |      |
| Blooms   | 191,885     | 55,520    |      |

Earnings Are Increased. The net results of the year's operations is likely to be an increase of about $2,500,000 in earnings. That is in actual earnings and forgetting the $4,000,000 of special income the corporation took into its figures last year on account of a payment from the Dominion government for damages in connection with the cancellation of a contract to supply ship plates. With such an increase in earnings the company could increase the write-off for depreciation to around $2,000,000, and just about earn the preferred dividends. It would leave nothing for the common, but nevertheless, the improvement would be distinct for a close figuring of the last year's earnings without allowing for the special sum of $4,000,000 indicates that the preferred dividends were far from preferred.

Fake Promotion Spoiled

BY WELL-POSTED BANKER—MOVING PICTURE PROJECT SHOWN UP BY FACTS. St. John.—There arrived, with much ceremony in one of the chief centres of the Maritime provinces, a man whose mission was to organize a motion picture producing organization. It was his plan, he asserted, to produce good films in that city and suburbs, and he dilated at some length in his monologue on the benefits in advertising and publicity the city would receive. According to his statement the value of the first film would be at least $1,000,000. And such a film could be produced for about twenty thousand dollars.

The appointment was made. In the meanwhile the bank manager fortified himself with some facts and figures regarding the motion picture industry, obtained from trade periodicals catering to the industry. The organizer painted a glowing word picture of the possibilities of the first picture, in a monetary sense. After he had subsided, the bank manager disclosed the sales values of some of the best known and most expensive films of the age, and only a few had a market value of a million dollars or over. The bank manager's knowledge of the motion picture finances proved a surprise to the visiting organizer-promoter. The talk of the banker was so explicit and effective that half of the delegation began to think. And the result was that the promoter had to move on to another location. Following the refusal of the manager of the banking and trust institution to involve his bank in the scheme, the bulk of the directors, whom the promoter had carefully chosen, refused to buy the shares of stock he had allotted to each.

What Would Nelson Have Said?

Yesterday was Trafalgar Day. Yesterday, one hundred and eighty years ago, Nelson by his famous victory rendered the elaborate plans of Napoleon for an invasion of England futile.

To-day our Naval armaments are being reduced and a somewhat similar programme is being followed by others of the Great Powers—but not by all. This policy is based more upon the desire for peace and to reduce expenditure, rather than upon any concrete evidence that the nations have undergone any change of heart since the Great War ended.

France to-day is "waging war" with a country with which she is at peace, paradoxical as that may sound. The Turk has succeeded in returning to Constantinople from which he was ousted bag and baggage in consequence of the war, and his triumphs by peaceful methods will not tend to make him any the less a source of discord in Eastern Europe in the future.

It is said that the calling up by Russia of her three classes of territorials for training has no military significance, but were she to embark upon a policy of aggression in order to restore union in the country and divert the attention of her people from their domestic grievances, she would not be establishing a precedent. The feelings of Greece towards Italy are not any the more amicable because of her humiliation, nor has Mussolini yet smoothed out his feathers, ruffled by the Janina murders.

The Peace of Amiens in 1802 was but a breathing space in the struggle between England and France, in order to enable the contestants to gather strength for the fight to a finish which was bound to follow.

In Lloyd George's book "Is it Peace," he says:

"You cannot talk long to a Frenchman without realizing how this spectre of German childhood haunts France and intimidates her judgment. These children, it is said, are nourished on vengeance; one day the struggle will be resumed, and France has no natural defence against the avenging hordes that are now playing on German streets and with the hum of whose voices German kindergarten resounds.

There are seventy millions of Germans in Europe. A generation hence there may be a hundred millions. They will never rest content so long as millions of their fellow-countrymen are under a foreign yoke on the other side of the Rhine, and it will only be a question of time and opportunity for the inevitable war of liberation to begin."

In referring to the Treaty which brought the war to an end, and which beyond effecting a cessation of hostilities, has little to commend it, the distinguished writer declares:

"It is one of the great ironies of the European situation that the Treaty of Versailles is being gradually torn to pieces by the countries which are not only the authors but have most to gain by its provisions."

Nelson from his column in Trafalgar Square looks eastward always, and is a constant reminder to the Britisher that he must ever be prepared for eventualities from that quarter.

Could he but speak what would be his advice to that assembly of Empire statesmen gathered in conference beneath the shadow of his monument?

Papyrus Meets His Waterloo.

Britons far and near will learn with regret of the defeat of their Great Hope, Papyrus by the American three-year-old Zev. They will, however, hide their feelings, pay their money and look pleasant, and congratulate their victors without any more feeling of acrimony than had they been successful, would they have shown any inclination to gloat over their rival's defeat. Such is the way of the Britisher, and such is the spirit that has won for him the world over the title of a true sportsman. We have no doubt that plucky little Donaghue and Papyrus too upheld their reputation in this respect at Belmont Park on Saturday.

Funeral Obsequies of the Late Dr. W. T. Scully

A large and representative concourse of citizens of St. John's paid their last tribute to the memory of the late Dr. W. T. Scully on Saturday, when all that was mortal was conveyed to the Railway Station, under supervision of Undertaker Myrick to be conveyed to his home town by express. A considerable number of people proceeded to Hr. Grace by the train, and others motored out, in order to be present at the funeral service. Arriving at Harbor Grace, the basket was taken in charge by Undertaker R. T. Parsons.

The congregation which assembled in the Cathedral yesterday afternoon, filled the sacred edifice to overflowing when the service for the dead was taken by Rev. T. D. O'Neill. The cortege then left the Cathedral and solemnly wended its way to the graveside in the family plot; a deputation of the Knights of Columbus acting as pall bearers. The closing prayers of the service were recited by Rev. Fr. O'Neill, assisted by Judge Casey and Messrs. R. and W. Kennedy. Many was the regret expressed by the congregation when, having paid their last tribute to the departed, they left him resting in the bosom of Mother Earth, there to await the final call.

Preliminary Enquiry Resumed

When the preliminary enquiry enquired into the death of Michael Fewer of Chapel's Cove, Harbor Main District, was resumed on Saturday, the evidence of Dr. L. E. Keegan of the General Hospital and Dr. W. E. Jones, of Avondale, was taken. Plans of the locality and premises where the alleged assault took place, causing the death of Fewer, were put in by Mr. Wm. Noel of the Crown Lands Office. Anthony Hawco, who is accused of causing the death of Fewer did not make any statement and adjournment was taken until 3 p.m. to-day.

Police Cutter Makes Rescue

Yesterday afternoon, on receiving a report from Fort Amherst that a motor boat was in distress in the Narrows, three policemen were despatched to the rescue, in a motor boat cutter which was formerly used by the special Labrador Force during the gold rush. They picked up the disabled boat in which was Mr. Thos. Kearney and his children. They had been out in the Harbor for a spin and engine trouble developed.

Rev. B. T. Holden at Gower St. Church

(I.G.M.) The Rev. B. T. Holden of the Congregational Church occupied the pulpit of Gower Street Methodist Church yesterday morning, and the message which he gave cannot be soon forgotten. Such words and principles as Mr. Holden enunciated make impressions which abide.

For his discourse the Rev. gentleman based his remarks upon the story of Eden, as recorded in Genesis, in reference to the fall of man. If the sermon were given a title it would be something as follows:—"The responsibility and dangers of choice or free will." This responsibility of choice began with consciousness, or, as the preacher expressed it, self-consciousness. Whatever the real condition of men may have been in the long past, there came a moment when he became conscious, and was thus the masterpiece of creation. This consciousness and power of choice, mark him as superior to all other living creatures; and in this great fact lay the two principal points which the preacher emphasized, namely, the responsibility of free will and the danger thereof. Free will implies great responsibilities; hence the possibility of great danger, as a wrong choice may alter a whole destiny. Making, wherever found, possesses some mark or trait of consciousness. Even the uncivilized tribes of the jungle have respect for certain conditions of life, and these instincts they carry out with awe and trembling. These tribes may be wild, but yet they are superior to the lower creation. The tiger will tear and steal its prey, because it does not know any better. It has no higher instinct, no consciousness. But a man cannot do so without being conscious that he is breaking some law, and that his choice in so doing will entail trouble upon him. The higher the position in life the greater were its dangers. The simple, rural life of the rustic has its peculiar temptations and dangers, and so in the more advanced stages of civilization the same principle applies. Wealth has great danger. Governments present great dangers. Even virtue and saintliness have their dangers, in as much as these conditions represent greater prominence in their own peculiar sphere, and they present a greater responsibility than the simple, quiet, rural life of the English people in the Elizabethan era was not so strenuous as life in the Victorian age; nor was it as strenuous as life to-day. Some people say that the old order of life was better, others say differently. To-day industry and invention are so developed as to make man a mere unit, similar to a machine; therefore he specializes, and instead of being an agent of many parts, he does but one thing. This life loses much of its variety and interest; hence the possibility of monotony. All these things have their dangers, which need to be guarded against, so that extremes become not the rule. Wealth and governments are confronted with danger, and this danger increases responsibility, and a consciousness which belongs to each individual; for into every life comes the opportunity of good and evil, and it is the choice of these elements that really makes one's destiny. The power of evil, or evil itself, may not be understood, but it can be overcome with good. Either one or the other must have the victory. If evil triumphs, then conscience is beaten, and wrong survives. It was so in Eden. The evil overcame the good, and as the result evil has been in the world ever since. It is the evil in the world to-day that is the danger point, and so great are powers of evil that some men seem to fear that even civilization itself stands in danger. But this need not be so, it should not be. The power of choice and the influences for good, and the higher instincts of mankind, with the teachings of the Christian Church, are sufficient to combat the powers of evil, and to give unto each person the victory. This then is the thought of the sermon. The thought of evil, and the thought of good, and the question as to which shall triumph.

The entire discourse was distinctly delivered, and every word and sentence were well heard, and the people came away carrying in their hearts a personal message—a message which had touched their conscience, and which had reminded them that they too live in a world where good and evil exists. They were also reminded that evil will finally be vanquished, and the ultimate outcome of the struggle will be on the side of the good.

CIVIL WAR TREATIES GERMANY

BERLIN, Oct. 22. New that Dr. Von Kahr, Military Dictator of Bavaria has hoisted his colors and notified the Central Government he is no longer disposed to obey Berlin's orders. Chancellor Stresemann and members of his ministry realize they are confronted with a situation threatening as never before the disruption of Germany. It is obvious that there are only two alternatives before Reich Government, east to negotiate with Bavaria, the other is to resort to force, thus letting loose the horrors of civil war, and it is certain Berlin will move heaven and earth to avoid the latter alternative. There seemed Sunday to be a certain relaxation in the tension and there were no signs of perturbation political or otherwise around Government headquarters.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22. The United Fruit Company's steamer San Gil, out of Boston for Havana, Colon and Port Limon, sent out wireless calls for help at 5.30 this morning, stating that she was sinking in heavy seas southwest of Jamaica. The message said the steamer was pounding to pieces, and passengers were leaving in boats. "Hurry Help" said the message, and then gave her position. Fifteen minutes later came another message: "Help! Quick!" This message broke off short, and no further communication has been heard. The nearest vessels answering could not reach the scene before the middle of this afternoon. The San Gil is operated by the United Fruit Company.

New Sanitary Stables Nearing Completion

The erection of the new Sanitary Stables under the supervision of contractor James Bulger, is fast nearing completion, and it is expected to be ready for occupancy by the end of the month. The building when completed, will be a big addition to the Sanitary Headquarters. It measures some 164 feet in length, 44 feet in width, is a wooden frame, and is supported by a number of concrete pedestals. The ground floor, which is being made of concrete, will be used for the horses, while feeds, hay, oats, etc., will be stored on the second floor. Adjoining the building suitable offices are now under course of erection. The building will cost in the vicinity of $6,000. Mr. Bulger, the contractor, has spared no effort to make the new premises as commodious as possible, and he is deserving of every congratulation for the very short space of time he has taken in the erection of same.

SCHOONERS ARRIVING.—Quite a number of fish laden schooners from the northward, arrived in port this forenoon. A number of the vessels became becalmed in the Narrows and the tugs had a busy sport bringing them to anchorage.

LET'S TALK OF PRICES

Of Some That Are Reasonable and Others That Aren't.

CERTAIN MEMBERS of the local trade have memorialised the Government, asking that the recent Customs Order governing the assessment of imported Boots and Shoes for duty be rescinded. With their petition they forwarded the Government a schedule of prices. Let us take some of the figures included therein as the text of this present discussion of the boot and leather industry of Newfoundland.

According to the trade memorial and price schedule referred to, Men's Work Boots and Children's McKay Bals, Boots imported for the Newfoundland trade are both bought in the American market at the same price, namely, $1.40 per pair.

It must surely strike even the most casual observer that there is something peculiar about such a statement. How is it possible to buy two such different articles—different both as to cost of manufacture and as to relative wear and tear for which each is designed—at exactly the same price. At a conservative estimate, a pair of Men's Work Boots should cost at least twice the price of a pair of Child's Boots. Are the Child's Boots priced too high? Or, are the Men's Work Boots priced so low as to call into question their fitness for the purpose for which they are sold?

The petition to the Government from the retail trade in Boots and Shoes sets a Manufacturer's Price of $1.85 on Men's McKay Boots. The duty on such a pair of Boots under the old rate was 96c. Freight about 10c. per pair. Total landed cost, $2.91 per pair. The selling price of such boots averaged $4.50 per pair.

The same Boot, under the new schedule to which some retailers object, can be landed at a total cost of about $4.03 per pair.

Under the old schedule, the retail trade, selling these boots at $4.50 per pair, could make a total profit of $1.59 per pair. That is profiteering at the rate of over 54 per cent.

Under the new schedule, taking the total landed cost as $4.03 per pair and the retail price as still $4.50, the profit per pair would be 47c. That profit figures out at the moderate rate of about 12 per cent.

Now, let the purchasing public decide for themselves whether the retail trade are as much concerned about the consumer as they are over the fact that under the New Schedule their rate of profit on such boots is reduced from 54 per cent. to 12 per cent. As a matter of Fact the public are not one little bit concerned over or affected by the matter. Their boots cost them no more under the New Schedule than under the Old. But, retail profits are very largely reduced and, quite naturally, retailers are raising a howl, not of protest on behalf of the Dear Public, but in memory of Departed Profits.

A first-class all-leather McKay Boot is being sold by local factories at $4.10 per pair. This Boot will outwear three pairs of the stuff that retailers want admitted to the country at a low duty. If the retailers are really as interested in the consumer as they allege, let them feature this locally made boot before all others, keeping local factories running and local workmen employed, keeping local money in the country and supplying the country with a boot made of first-class leather, covered by the manufacturer's guarantee and representing full value for every cent spent on its purchase.

Daghild's Repairs Effectuated

Searching Enquiry Into Explosion at Sea Being Held.

The repairs to the freighter Dagchild, which ship met with a boiler explosion while on her way from Wabana to Philadelphia, about ten days ago, had her repairs speedily effectuated at the latter port, and she is now at Sydney loading coal for the Dominion Coal Company at Montreal. Two separate probes into the cause of the explosion on board the Dagchild were held at Philadelphia after her arrival, one by the Chief City Coroner and the other by the British Vice Consul, the latter acting under orders from Sir H. G. Armstrong, British Consul General at New York. Thirty-two Chinamen of her crew who became badly frightened over the explosion, are held in custody until the enquiry is completed. The cause of the explosion might possibly be attributed to too much steam, only death reported on board that of a pet monkey owned by one of the ship's crew.

An Attack on Baldwin

The funding of the debt of the United States, which remains his principal achievement, is being attacked in England, apparently to have elicited any of the public appreciation from America which was under discussion. It is argued that since the United States seem equally well or ill pleased with the nations that pay and those who are foremost when the funding debt was under discussion. It is argued that since the United States will make no effort to pay, it were foremost when the funding debt was under discussion. Shortage of Crops on West Coast

WORK ON HUBBER PROCESSING FAVORABLY.

Hon. Joseph Downey, Minister of Agriculture and Mines, who has just returned from a visit to the West Coast, reports that the crops which have just been harvested are the worst for a long number of years due to the most extraordinary conditions which prevailed. Contrary to the general rule growth was a month later in starting on the West than on the East Coast and the fields were not green until July. The hay crop in consequence is very short. The shortage in the potato yield may be reckoned from the fact that in fields from which 80 to 150 barrels are usually dug the returns this year are from 15 to 65. The industrial condition of the West Coast on the whole is fairly good according to the Minister and quite a number of people find employment from the Hubber activities. The work on this project is going on apace. The structural steel for the erection of the mills has been landed at Corner Brook and the work of erection will begin in a few days. The filling in of the site, an immense undertaking is now nearing completion. The work at Deer Lake is progressing most satisfactorily and about 7 train loads of crushed rock are being moved up daily. At the Main Dam, which is being built by the Bishop Construction Co. the progress has been exceptionally good and according to the estimates of the engineers the footings will be placed before the full floods overflow the temporary dam at Grand Lake. The waters are as yet twenty inches below the top stop logs and as the lake rises about 1 inch per day there yet remains a period of twenty days to complete the position of the dam as originally planned.

Amid Eternal Fires

LIVING FOURTEEN YEARS ON A VOLCANO TOP.

In a bungalow on the brink of the crater of the active volcano of Kilauea, in Hawaii, lives a man, Professor E. A. Jaggar, who has devoted many years to the study of volcanoes. This scientist carries on his investigations in the midst of terrifying eruptions, and in the course of his fourteen years' sojourn on the mountain top he has experienced some remarkable adventures.

Picture, if you can, a bungalow with a broad veranda, somewhat suggestive of California, but more typical of the South Seas. It overlooks the active crater of Kilauea, Perched high up on a steep of vegetation, it is a fascinating retreat by night and an awe-inspiring eyrie by night.

From the edge of this veranda the outer crater of Kilauea stretches across the foreground for a distance of two or three miles, forming a great sunken oval.

Issuing from a hundred fissures and cones are jets of steam and smoke, reminding one that Mother Earth still holds within her depth those primeval fires which ages ago tore continents asunder, thrust mighty peaks up from the sea, and submerged whole countries beneath the waters. Within a stone's throw of this fiery pit, the Jaggars live and work.

It is doubtful if any other scientist has engaged in such a series of adventurous expeditions as Professor Jaggar, says a writer in the October 'Wide World Magazine.' There is, for example, the trip to Mauna Loa, in September, 1919, when that untamed monster poured forth her fiery torrents for weeks on end, until the island rocked and the sea was lashed into steaming fury.

It was a spectacle that an ordinary man would count compensation for a whole lifetime of monotony, yet the Professor refers to it as little more than a passing incident in his work. Lurid lava pools, spouting hundreds of feet in the air, inspire no terror in his mind. Lakes of molten fire may burst their confines and blaze a broad trail of destruction down the mountain side, but they do not cause the patient searcher to turn back from his quest.

A few summers ago Professor Jaggar determined to undertake a very difficult task in connection with the observation of Kilauea. He had observed that the lava seemed to ebb and flow in the crater with some semblance of regularity. But how much the lava rose, how often it rose, and what connection, if any, these changes might have with other natural phenomena, were questions that remained unanswered.

The director of the observatory proposed to make accurate measurements of the rise and fall of the lava in one of Haleakalan's lava lakes every fifteen minutes for a period of four weeks.

When he set up a shelter in the crater he discovered that he was indeed getting "close to his subject." The shelter consisted of a square of canvas supported by four heavy green timbers, a rude table for holding papers, a kerosene lantern, and a stool. In the course of the month of observation the temperature of the lava increased so much that it burned off the bases of the four green timbers.

Sleeping quarters for certain of the observers were set up not far from the transit shelter. They consisted of a small tent and a few pieces of furniture, including a bed. How anyone could have slept amid such surroundings is difficult to imagine.

On one occasion while they were in the shelter, a rift opened in the floor and there rushed forth a blast of intensely hot gas. The temperature of the rocky floor was almost unbearable and Mrs. Jaggar's gloves, blowing from the table to the floor, burst into flames before she could pick them up.

About $750,000 worth of street construction and repairs will be done in Los Angeles next year as a result of violations of the motor vehicle law by speeders and others. The law now in effect provides that all traffic fines collected must go into a special fund to be used for street work and nothing else.

Music most entrancing will be heard at the Methodist College Hall on Tuesday night.—oct22.31

Long-Distance Man-Hunts

THILLS IN THE GREAT NORTH-WEST.

More than 700 miles by dog team was the trip made recently by Constable F. Stevenson, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, in bringing to justice a man charged with the murder of a trader.

This, however, is by no means a record in the annals of the Force, which has several longer and no less thrilling man hunts to its credit.

Two years ago an Eskimo who had murdered a white man in the Yukon was tracked over a thousand miles before he was captured, following which the Crown prosecutor and a judge travelled 3,000 miles to conduct the trial.

One of the longest of these hunts was that carried out by Sergeant Frank Smith, who covered seventeen hundred miles by dog team and canoe in search of a murderer named O'Brien.

During the trip the sled in which the sergeant travelled part of the way overturned into a dyke, injuring its occupant's leg so severely that he was unable to use it for some days. Undaunted, he continued his journey which ended in his finding his man two weeks too late; the civil authorities had succeeded in capturing him. The hunt cost the Government £30,000.

Another long-distance chase was participated in by a member of the same Force following the murder by Victor Fournier and Edward la Belle of Three French Canadians. The detective concerned, Sergeant W. H. Welsh, undertook to hunt the criminals alone and at the end of a thrilling nine hundred miles' trip he succeeded in arresting the prisoners with an little less than a London Policeman makes in apprehending a pickpocket.

It takes Money to Bake at Home

for there is the cost of the coal (or gas), and the ingredients that are called for by the recipe. There is the labor, and worry, the fear that the slamming door will make the cake "fall" in the oven, and the question whether the cake will be really good or just "so-so." That represents more money than it will take to buy Drake's Cake from the nearby grocery

ZEV BEATS PAPYRUS—TRACK HEAVY AND SOGGY.

Belmont Park, Oct. 20.—Coming down the home stretch with a blinding irresistible burst of speed, Zev, of the Fancos Stables, and the great son of Miss Kearney, scored a smashing thoroughbred victory for the United States to-day, conquering Papyrus, English Derby winner, by the decisive margin of six lengths, over the mile and a half Belmont course.

With Zev's victory went $80,000 of the $100,000 purse and the crown of the three year old champion of the world, which was at stake for the first time, in one of the most colorful spectacles the turf history has ever known.

The track was heavy and soggy from several days rain, and Zev's answer to the pre-race fears that he was not in the best of condition, was that he galloped a convincing and impressive victory over Papyrus. After a bad start Zev overtook his rival before the first quarter pole had been reached and thereafter was never headed, despite the game and gallant effort of the English horse.

ST. BONA'S VS. COLLEGIANS.

In the second game of the second round of the intercollegiate football series, played Saturday afternoon on St. George's Field, the St. Bon's defeated the Collegians (Methodist College) by a score of one to nil. The game was hard fought. The St. Bon's scored the one and only towards the end of the second half, through a penalty kicked by Raymond Halley. So far this season the St. Bon's have won out in every game they played.

DINNER FOR JUNIOR FOOTBALLERS.

At a meeting of the Holy Cross Committee, held yesterday forenoon, it was decided to dine the winners of the first Junior Football Trophy, at Smithville, on October 30th. The Committee hope to make the affair a big success and plan to have at least 150 old boys of the Holy Cross Schools present.

WHAT MCGRAW AND HUGGINS HAD TO SAY WHEN SERIES WAS OVER.

Statements by Yank and Giant Managers follow:
Miller Huggins, Yankees:—"We are happy that we were able to win the championship from such a fine club as the Giants. The Yankees all played well and did their part. We had good pitching and our batting was timely. I think we proved to all we had a fighting ball club. I would not attempt to name our hero. Frank Frisch, I believe, was the outstanding player on the Giants, and one of the big heroes of the series."
John McGraw, Giants:—"The better team won. I would not attempt to deny that. They won by good base-

Catalina

On Tuesday night, 6th ult., a goodly number of the people of Catalina and nearby places forsook (temporarily) their homes for the Parish Hall, where a concert was being "put on" on behalf of St. Peter's School. The programme was quite lengthy, occupying two and a half hours, and full of comedy and humorous stagings from beginning to end. Where each and every member did his (her) best it is unwise to particularize. From what we gather on the outside from various spectators, the affair was most pleasing throughout, and some of the items could well bear repetition. Financially the concert—supplemented by teas and candy sales—equalled if not exceeded our highest expectations. One cannot but express here how much we appreciate the generous help so willingly given by the members of the C.E.W.A. and all others who helped to make the entertainment so successful.

To my co-workers in staging the different items of the programme may ball. Our pitching handicapped us hopelessly but a champion club should have good pitching. Joe Dugan and Ward, with my way of thinking, were the stars of the series. They are both wonderful ball players. The only thing I regret is that the Yankees did not bat in their winning runs in the last game instead of having them presented to them. I would like to say that not once during the series was Babe Ruth purposely passed.

London, Oct. 16.—A. P. Lucas, the famous Essex cricketer, died to-day. Mr. Lucas, who was a prominent cricketer fifty years ago, played for England in 1880 in the first Australian match. Previous to, and after his admission to first-class of county cricket, in 1894, Mr. Lucas was a member of the Essex XI.

BATTILING SIKI PUT OUT.

All Coons Look Alike to Constable Kelly of St. Lambert.

Toronto—Among the famous gentlemen of the ring who have recently honored Montreal with their presence was Battling Siki, the Senegalese boxer, who did a turn with our old friend Jack Johnson, a good-humored fighter, despite his faults. Siki had a career in France, and the newspapers there said he was a marvel at punishing Jack Barleycorn. Indeed, it was reported that the festive Siki trained on whiskey. At any rate, he played the mischief on occasion on the Boulevard and had the life frightened out of the waiters and bartenders in the wine shops and restaurants of Gay Paris. He boarded a train for New York and then began to terrorize the passengers on a Pullman before the train had reached Victoria bridge. As this is not Paris, such things do not go, and the conductor sent out signals of distress for the suppression of the pugnaeous Siki. At St. Lambert Constable Kelly got aboard and ordered Siki off. Siki said no, and the officer said yes. Kelly grabbed Siki by both wrists and, despite his struggles, yanked him off the train. Then the Senegalese was taken to the calaboose. Kelly evidently is not a man to be trifled with and it is evident that a light-heavy-weight is the same to him as any other man, white or black. Three cheers for Kelly, who is evidently the right man in the right place.

Labor Erects Bar to Lady Barbers

Portland, Ore., Oct. 11.—(Associated Press)—Half a dozen committees still were to report when the convention of the American Federation of Labor resumed work to-day.
Reiteration of its stand in favor of modification of the Volstead Act, so as to permit the sale of light wines and beer, and action refusing lady barbers a place in organized labor affiliated with the Federation, marked yesterday's sessions, which were given largely to oratory and debate.

Fawnette in an Egyptian Dance

STAR MOVIE TO-NIGHT.
Many attractions of exceptional merit have been presented at the popular Star from time to time, especially so during the past few weeks when the great Fawnette has on many occasions actually "pulled down the house" with applause, but the dance that this talented artist has for to-night will from all indications eclipse anything she has yet attempted. As will be seen from the ad, Miss Fawnette will render an Egyptian dance, in an Egyptian costume and this in itself will be well worth seeing, whilst Mr. Tesori will render in his usual style, two pretty class numbers.

The feature picture entitled "After the Show" is a William de Mille production, with Jack Holt, Lila Lee and Charles Ogle in the title roles. It is a story of the lure of the footlights, the great white way—and a lonely girl who wanted to be an actress. But when the rich young "angel" of the show came into her life with his midnight suppers and love talk—well the rest is told in this extremely heart rendering story. It is a picture of which we hear examples every day, and it is one that will bring forth laughter and tears. Just see it to-night.

Rev. Dr. Hemmeon

The following item, taken from the Daily News, will be read with pleasure by the many friends of the learned doctor who, during his stay in St. John's, won the regard and respect of all. The Telegram joins with its contemporary in congratulating Dr. Hemmeon upon receiving his Doctorate from the University.

On Thursday last Dr. George J. Trueman was inaugurated as President of Mount Allison University in succession to Rev. Dr. Borden, recently retired. Dr. Trueman will be well remembered by those who had the privilege of listening to the addresses delivered by him when the Methodist Conference was in session last June. Several degrees were conferred upon prominent Canadians, including that of Doctor of Divinity on the Rev. Douglas Hemmeon, of Wolfville and formerly of St. John's. The News extends congratulations.

Obituary.

SUSANNAH ELLIOTT BRIFFETT.

On October 9th at Rosedale, Alexander Bay, there passed within The Veil the soul of Susannah Briffett in the 96th year of her age. Until within a fortnight of her death deceased was in good health, with a clear memory and remarkable vitality. Her illness was of short duration, and a blessed, calm and peaceful death brought to an end the earthly chapter of a life spent in genuine service to God and her neighbor. One can almost safely say that never again shall Alexander Bay know such an outstanding personality as Mrs. Briffett. One who, with such scant opportunities in youth, should become such a keen student of history, and so readily conversant with affairs entirely outside the scope of average persons. Together with this remarkable trait she had a passion for trees and flowers; and not only her own premises, but other gardens, beautified through her efforts, will bear silent witness to her life for many a year to come. Thus her rare gifts and outstanding qualities made Grandmother Briffett an altogether unique character, and her company unusually interesting. And moreover to her deep spirituality and simple faith there is abundant evidence. Throughout her whole life she remained staunch and true to the faith of the Fathers and all that was mortal of a faithful servant of God and His Church was laid to rest in the cemetery at Glenora by Rev. W. J. Rowe, Incumbent. Susannah Briffett was the daughter of Richard Elliott Sprout of England. She married Augustus Jean Briffett of St. Marie, France, who predeceased her eighteen years ago. Surviving her are five sons, Richard, Hippolyte, Robert, Arnold and Louis, all of whom live at Rosedale; nineteen grandchildren, and ten great-grandchildren, and two sisters, Mrs. Buckler of Gloverton, and Mrs. Cook of St. John's, to all of whom we extend sympathy in the passing of her, whom to know was truly to love.

It is said to be a story that will help to bring happiness into many homes and teach future brides and grooms to "look before they leap."
Of this picture one New York critic wrote:
"A powerful drama, splendidly acted by a superb cast. It features one of the most absorbing climaxes in the history of the silent art."
It is said to abound in dramatic situation. In the cast are Charles Richman, Barbara Castleton, William Tooker, Peggy Shaw, Benny Granger, Mabel Wright, Alice May, John Randall, Myrtle Stewart and John Tavernier.
Harry Millarde, who made "Over the Hill," directed "My Friend the Devil." It is adapted from Georges Ohnet's celebrated novel, "Doctor Rameau."

The Toll of the Streets

Boston Transcript: War takes its toll chiefly among the young manhood of the country. The accidents that mark the progress of our civilization do worse. They slaughter the children. It is stated that of last year's 75,000 deaths by accident, more than 20,000 were the deaths of boys and girls less than fifteen years old. It has come to pass that the public streets are death traps for the young. Hardly a day passes in a populous community without seeing the life crushed from one or more little forms. The part which the automobile plays in making this record is well known, but the automobile is not the only menace.

Quebec's Bid for the Tourist Traffic

An earnest attempt is being made by the citizens of the Province of Quebec to encourage tourist traffic to the Province of Quebec, and the Quebec Tourist Association has been organized to that end. The new organization commences with the hearty support of all well-disposed citizens to realize the importance of the tourist trade, and the Quebec Government is lending aid, and has shown practical signs by the grant of $5,000 that has made through the intervention of Hon. J. L. Perron, Minister of Lands.

The position to-day is that Quebec is the ideal playground of a continent, and only a small portion of the tourist traffic that should come this way. There are still, there are not the facilities for caring for even this traffic, and it would be expected that the volume of traffic would enormously grow on the principle of "tell your friends." The aim of the Association is to have established in the province suitable hotels and camps along the main highways, to give facilities of cleanliness and service to hotels which live up to the standard set by the Association, and generally to educate the province towards the desirability of having this province a great recreation ground for traffic. The move is an excellent one, and is properly supported by the business men, who have much work to gain directly, it should mean in the figures of President Baubien a sum of $50,000,000 to $50,000,000 per year of money into the province each year.

Hon. Mr. Perron, speaking at the banquet of the Association, called on business men to give their time to the work for the next six months. He recalled that the Province has spent, or will have spent at the end of this year, $20,000,000 for roads, and he was naturally anxious that there be a good harvest for the province from this expenditure.

Gossipers

The lady who on Tuesday last had two residents of Cabot Street before the Court for using insulting language towards her, wishes it made plain, as Judge Morris, in dismissing the case did, that the parties absolutely denied under oath, the insinuations which she made had any foundation, in fact she does not belong to Orquet, but

Successful Selling

The Secret About It, If There Is a Secret, Is to Look From the Customer's Viewpoint.

A successful retail saleswoman says that she marks the beginning of her greatest success and happiness in her work from the day she realized that salespeople are inclined to look at the matter of buying from their own point of view, whereas they should look at it from the customer's side of the counter, says Indiana Retail Grocers' Bulletin.

In her own words: "It came to me very forcefully one day when I was doing some shopping for myself and getting poor service. I was concerned, of course, about being perfectly suited with what I bought and with getting the best possible value for my money, and I resented first, the indifferent attention, and finally, the effort of the salesman to press something on me that I didn't want. "I saw then, as I had never before, why we who are in selling work all the time, making our living that way, regard customers as cranky, hard to please, expecting too much, etc. Every mother's son and daughter of us takes the customer attitude when we go out to spend our hard-earned money. We like to have store-people welcome us, we expect them to show us their goods gladly and patiently, and we want plenty of time in which to do our selecting. When we don't conclude to buy, we don't like to be made uncomfortable by sour looks from someone who seems to be saying, 'I've just wasted my time.' This saleswoman's frank statement of her experience and change of attitude makes clear a bed-rock principle of selling. Simple as it may seem, many people in selling work do not seem to have ever grasped the idea that the first thing to do in dealing with a customer is to get the measure of that customer, so as to understand his or her point of view. There is nothing wonderful or mysterious about this. Just ask yourself: "If I were this person, what would I expect in the way of service from the store?" Do You Have a Real Interest in Your Work?

Every time the boss asks you a question about something concerning the business and you cannot give an intelligent answer, you have dropped a notch in your standing with him. Your boss wants men in his employ who are really interested in the business and he has a right to expect you to study and become familiar with everything in your department at least.

You may think you are slaving through with expenditure of little brain power, and you may continue to do so for a time, but there is bound to come a choice in favor of the better-informed man. You have an opportunity in holding your job which should bring out a feeling of real interest in your part. If you are not a success in the position you hold you have a greater loss than the man who employs you, although you may think that your lack of interest is the other fellow's loss. The state of mind in which you hold yourself in your indifference to what is good for your firm is bound to react on your ability to do. Besides, your employer can discharge you, and all you will have to tell when you apply for another job is what you know and what you can do.—Work.

Germany's Come-Back at Sea

ALARMS HER COMPETITORS. COPENHAGEN—German shipping is showing remarkable recuperative powers, so much so that other maritime states are to-day concerned lest this "dreaded competitor" soon will regain her old position. The quotation from the Scandinavian Shipping Gazette, which publishes an article on the subject. In 1920 Germany had 420,000 gross tons of steamers and motorships, according to this authority, and in June of 1923 a total of 2,510,000 tons. "Bitter complaints are made against the resumption of the German competition in practically all waters, but perhaps principally in South American seas," the Gazette says in conclusion.

Senator Scores Tin-Horn Sports

GRIEBACH DEEPLY STIRRED BY MOVIE PLAN TO KILL BUFFALO.

EDMONTON, Alta., Oct. 18.—(Star Special.)—Senator W. A. Griebach, Edmonton's warrior senator, is deeply stirred over the proposal to have Indians hunt down 2,000 surplus buffalo at Wainwright, while movie cameras record the scene. "No living Indian in this country has killed anything bigger than a gopher with bow and arrow," says the general, "and no Indian in this province has the strength or the skill to kill a buffalo with a bow and arrow. The result will be that hundreds of these unfortunate beasts will be shot with from one to one dozen arrows and wander over the Wainwright Park in agony for perhaps weeks or indefinitely. "I consider this to be a hideously cruel proposal and entirely disgraceful to all concerned. When in Wainwright the other day I heard of some New York alleged sportsmen who were willing to pay $500 a piece for the privilege of shooting buffalo in the Wainwright Park. The shooting of domestic cattle in a pasture would be about as thrilling. "I sincerely hope that the park management will see that no tin-horn sports of this variety are permitted to intervene. "Evidence accumulates that, in connection with the slaughter of 2,000 surplus buffalo in this park, a number of ignorant and vulgar persons are having something to say. These animals have ceased to be wild animals or sporting animals in any sense of the term, and their slaughter is, and ought to be, a purely commercial transaction, to be carried out with all the delicacies consistent with a task of that sort. No sportsman and no person of decent feeling will tolerate any other procedure. "The work of slaughtering the surplus buffalo is under the direction of Superintendent Smith of Wainwright Park and D. J. Duclos of Edmonton. Submerged and protected camouflaged pits are now being constructed in the valley and on the hillsides where the final stampede will take place. Eight thousand animals are to be herded together, 2,000 surplus bulls marked out and killed. It is not planned the Indians shall do any extensive hunting, officials say in answer to General Griebach.

Lashed to Ring Bolts

In Deck of Dismasted Barkentine For Three Days Before Being Picked up by a Passing Liner. New York, Oct. 13.—Lashed to ring bolts in the deck of the dismasted barkentine John S. Emory, of Boston, Capt. E. H. Davis and his crew of nine drifted for three days through pounding seas before being picked-up by the liner Samland, which made port yesterday. For the last twelve hours on board the barkentine, the crew was out of food. Only the lashings kept them from being washed overboard, as every wave passed over the stripped deck. When the storm subsided somewhat for a brief spell, the men distilled some water in an old copper kettle. Fighting fire with an emery wheel, cotton waste and gunpowder from a cartridge. When picked up, the crew had almost no clothing left.

It Pays to be Courteous

One can never tell in this world when or how he will reap the fruits of his courtesy or discourtesy towards others. A merchant is a fool if he wantonly subjects any class of men with whom he comes in contact to treatment that arouses their antagonism. He should and will suffer somehow for his folly. A buyer in an Eastern city who was well known for his lack of consideration to travelling men lost his position. For a long time he was unable to get another. In speaking of the matter an acquaintance said: "Half a dozen men of less ability than he have stepped into positions that he might have had, but he antagonized all the people who otherwise would have been glad to help him, and so he was left out in the cold."

Reported Huge Cave Discovered

Winnipeg, B.C., Oct. 12. (Canadian Press.)—Rumors that Shuswap Lake has a cave that will rival other mammoth underground wonders of the world are correct, according to R. Roberts, of Shuswap, B.C., who declares he is one of the only two white men ever to enter the place. For many years rumors have been current that a huge cave existed there. According to Roberts, the mouth of the cave is hidden by silt and river wash and can only be located by one who has been there before. "An Irish-American named Kennedy found it while seeking a home," said Roberts. "He attempted to file on it only to find that that section of the country was reserved for soldiers wishing to take up land. Disappointed, he carefully covered up the entrance to the cave. Kennedy told me about it and two weeks ago I explored the place. For about 200 feet I proceeded through a narrow passage, sometimes able to go ahead at a crouching walk; then again compelled to crawl, owing to the low roof. At the end of the passage I came into a huge cavern. The candle I held threw no light on the roof, so great was the cave. Radiating from the cavern are scores of passages, several of which I examined. Far off in one of these I could hear the roar of a large waterfall, possibly indicating the existence of another large cave. The cave is of natural formation, but there is a lack of stalactites and stalagmites common to other caves, though they occasionally appear in the passages." Mr. Roberts expressed his willingness to guide a party to the cave.

Many Hurt in Riot Started by Toughs

Women and Children are Trampled During Wild Stampede in London.

London, Oct. 8.—Shouts of "earthquake! earthquake!" in a crowded street market held in the east end of London yesterday caused a wild stampede in which a number of people were trampled, hundreds of caged animals destroyed and a quantity of miscellaneous property ruined or stolen.

The scene of the disaster was the narrow Solater street, Bethnal Green, a noted centre for the sale of animals for domestic pets. Local traders say that an auction was in progress in the open street when a band of toughs burst in from a side thoroughfare and rushing into the throng of thousands of marketers and spectators, yelled "earthquake!"

The crowd fled screaming towards both ends of the street, while the stalls with which it was lined were overturned. The caged birds and animals and other property that fell in the path of the terrified mob suffered severely, many of the creatures being trampled to death and many of the people falling among them to be trampled themselves.

Hundreds of canaries and other small cage birds, besides parrots, cats, dogs and chickens, were crushed within their frail cages. Women and children shrieked, maimed dogs howled, parrots screeched and chickens squaked. A number of birds escaped, fluttering wildly about the street after gaining a freedom which was destined to end in starvation.

The Daily Mail gives the casualties as 90 persons injured, of whom a dozen were taken to hospitals; 2,000 small cage birds either killed or escaped; 100 dogs and cats and scores of poultry killed. Many of the animals were poisoned stock.

The terror of the crowd was impressed by the explosion of bottles of gasoline in one of the overturned stalls. This led to the belief that shooting was in progress, as the district abounds in ruffians. The dealers assert that the whole affair was an organized raid by a gang of thieves. Anyway, there to have been wholesale looting during the panic.

Complete Autonomy of Paris

BUT UNITY OF WHOLE IS KING'S CONCEPTION OF FUTURE EMPIRE.

London.—Special Cable to the Canadian Press by George Hamblin, Staff Correspondent—"Into our conference we seek to carry the spirit of the freedom of London, knowing that, so long as the spirit survives, the British Empire will endure."

These words were used by Right Hon. MacKenzie King, Premier of Canada, when in her ancient gullhall of tradition and story, London conferred on him, as on Premier Baldwin, of Great Britain, and Bruce of Australia, her honorary freedom.

And the words were indicative of the tenor of his remarks then and at a subsequent luncheon given by the Lord Mayor in the Mansion House.

"It is inevitable," continued Premier King, that as the British Dominions continue to increase in size and grow in importance and influence their freedom in all particulars will become commensurate with the extent of their interests; but with such changes and modifications of existing forms and methods of procedure as may be necessary to this end, and they will be worked out in a spirit of co-operation, worked out by conciliation and confidence in a manner which, whilst rendering more apparent and real the complete autonomy of all the self-governing parts, will continue to maintain the unity of the whole."

To America in a Minute

Words Flashed Under the Waves. In spite of the rapid strides made by wireless, the under-sea system of sending messages from one country to another is more popular to-day than it has ever been, a fact which is now the largest cable in the world, running from Weston-super-Mare to Far Rockaway, Long Island, U.S.A.

More than 1,800,000 lb. of gutta-percha, 4,000,000 lb. of copper, and 80,000 miles of iron and steel wire were used in the construction of this mammoth cable, which will be capable of transmitting hundreds of words from the Old World to the New in less than a minute.

The cable system was the outcome of the genius of both British and American telegraph engineers, who joined forces at an early stage by way of giving effect to their ideas. The first satisfactory cable was laid between South Foreland and Sangatte seventy-two years ago.

A Battle Against Odds.

Behind the laying of the first Atlantic cable, projected sixty-seven years ago, there is a stirring story of indomitable perseverance and battle against odds.

Two warships, one British and one American, were lent for the purpose of laying the cable, which snapped when 80 miles had been paid out. As a result, 700 miles of new cable had to be made, and the attempt was renewed the following year. Scarcely had the operations begun when the cable broke again. The ends were spliced, after a delay of several days, and the task continued, only to be interrupted by yet another break.

Finally the cable was properly bedded. Once again, however, the Fates stepped in, this time so effectively that the project was abandoned. The chief electrician ruined the cable by working it with too high a power!

250,000 Miles of Cables.

It was not until ten years had elapsed that further efforts were made to link England and America by cable, the work being carried out by the Great Eastern. Over a thousand miles of cable were laid; then a snap occurred, all attempts at picking up the lost cable being futile. Subsequently another cable was laid, the older cable afterwards being located and spliced. By the end of the 'seventies four cables were operating between the two countries, the total length of cable in use at the present time being over 250,000 miles.

The network of cables linking up

SPEAKING OF TEETH.

How can we be sure about anything in a medical line? We are told one thing with such enthusiasm, and then just as soon as we have adjusted ourselves to believe that the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, we are told the same with equal enthusiasm. It is scarlet fever, for instance, people had no idea that the danger time is the first day and that the peeling is harmless has not been universally known but it is one of the latest and it looks as if it might be accurate.

Once A Day.
The matter of the teeth, in some of the stages that I passed through in my life time: I should I brushed my teeth. At 10 in the morning, but not of course. I brushed them. I should I brushed my teeth five times a day and should at least two or three toothbrushing, however, was still of the kind, across the front discovery was that all this had been absolutely futile. I should I brushed my teeth five times a day and should at least two or three toothbrushing, however, was still of the kind, across the front discovery was that all this had been absolutely futile.

teeth. If one did this one need not worry about dentist's bills. "A clean tooth never decays."
Dental Floss Supplants the Toothpick.
The next phase was the dental floss phase. Tooth brushes were not enough, even if one had three, used them five times a day, and brushed the teeth across, up and down, inside and out. One must also employ dental floss for one's teeth toilette if one hoped to get the clean tooth that never decayed.
Another phase (I am always sure of the exact chronology) was the discovery that the toothbrush could be an enemy as well as a friend; it could catch germs from the atmosphere and convey them into the mouth. One was advised to keep the brush in alcohol between cleanings.
But better than this too simple method, declared one prominent dentist at a convention, one could construct an arrangement of a rubber bag and tube with a flow of water that was to be in some way persuaded to flow through the toothbrush while one was brushing one's teeth.
Brush Your Gums!
My own dentist told me just the other day that the latest dope on the way to defeat this horrible enemy was to brush the teeth in such a way that the teeth away from us, is to brush the gums as well as the teeth.
"And lastly I have just read that a big dentist and lecturer has made these following startling statements: "Dental floss often does more harm than good."
"Likewise the toothbrush."
"A clean tooth often does decay and a dirty one often remains whole."
"It is simply a matter of diet."

Our Dumb Animals.

REPORT OF CHIEF AGENT FOR WEEK ENDING OCT. 19TH.

Attended two sales of cattle and sheep. Saw picture everything was carried out satisfactorily. Had received several complaints of lame horses in town also some complaining from nearby outports. Three horses in the city are being kept off the streets for a rest. I also received a complaint from a lady director of the Society for Duckworth Street and King's Beach for throwing broken plate glass in the track of the horses as they come up from Water St. This is a very dangerous thing to do. These ladies were prepared to come into court to prove the charge. I saw the man this morning and spoke to him about the seriousness of what he had done. He said he thought it was the work of the Council employees to gather it up. I told him to have it put in a receptacle for them to take away. He went it up while I was there and promised to do better in future. I would like to ask here that all people sweeping up nails, broken glass, iron hoops, would not throw them in the streets. I think it would be a good idea if the teachers of the different schools would ask children to pick up nails, etc. when they see them in the streets; also not to throw tin cans and glass bottles in the drinking troughs. My attention has been called to this several times by Municipal Council employees. One of our city cabmen very nearly met with a serious accident a short time ago, through his horse being caught in a wire hoop. Several complaints of horses on poor pastures have been attended to. In the Oct. number of "Our Dumb Animals," published in Boston, is a picture of the S. P. A. Tent—and the race course on Regatta Day. I would like to get a few subscribers to this very valuable magazine at one dollar per year. I would also like to state that the horse reported in last week's report did not belong to the Municipal Council, but was employed by the Council. Will all friends of animals' phone complaints to No. 683.

THE GIFTED WIFE.
He married Rose Evelyn Shifty, because she was stately and fair; her manners and bearing were snifty, like cascades of gold was her hair. She reigns like a queen in his shanty, she is wise to all fads that are smart, she talks much of Ibsen and Dante, and writes for her Club about Art. His love for his wife has not faded, he still sees his world in her eyes; but often when weary and jaded, he longs for his grandmother's glass. My love, it is great and unending, his heart with affection is warm; he follows her footsteps admiring the wonderful grace of her form. Her coffee is bitter and frightful, her biscuits are vitrified things, but oh, it is surely delightful to listen to her when she sings! And still, when the music is ended, he finds that he's heaving some sighs; he's thinking of his cookery, splendid, the years for his grandmother's pie. He married Miss Shifty, the younger, who looks on baked beans with distress; she thinks intellectual hunger is all that a man should possess. She dishes up music and verses, instead of the Shaker Rolled Out; and when he is starving releases a sonnet that somebody wrote. She moves in her grass like a swallow, she floats like a cloud in the skies; but oft when his stomach is hollow, he thinks of his grandmother's pies.

Reports on Hudson's Bay Route

A report upon the Hudson's Bay railway belt and Hudson's Bay has just been issued by the Natural Resources Intelligent Branch of the Department of the Interior. It is without an interesting document. The memorandum contained therein was compiled from all available information, and the authorities quoted are there by the hundreds. A point which has been long in dispute is the length of time each year Hudson's Strait may be deemed open for purposes of navigation. No less than twenty-seven authorities are quoted in respect to this point, mainly captains who have navigated their vessels through these waters for long or short periods, as the case may be. The average of the twenty-seven opinions, which naturally vary greatly, is that the strait is open for navigation fifteen weeks out of the fifty-two, which is neither too short a period as many have claimed nor so long as many boasting for the Hudson's Bay route had hoped for.
The report points out that the testimony before the special committee of the Senate in 1919 tended to indicate that boats on this route should be limited to size under 5,000 tons deadweight capacity. Preferably 3,000 tons with 17 foot draught, specially designed to avoid the vertical sides of the lake carriers and with bows properly reinforced to combat ice conditions. Capt. Bernier, who was one of the witnesses was of the opinion that any sized boat could be used provided the design was correct, in other words differing materially from the ordinary ocean carrier; while the chief engineer of the department of railways and canals suggested boats of not over 8,500 dead-weight tonnage and not over 25 feet draught, as Nelson Harbor is designed for boats that do not draw over this amount.

The report goes on to state that insurance rates on vessels on such a route would be high until such time as statistics can be secured which would prove the risk not abnormally high. Government boats operating on this route in 1914 were asked to pay 11 per cent premium per voyage. This was deemed excessive and no insurance was carried, the vessels making thirty-eight voyages without loss.
The question of fog, haze, ocean currents, ice jacks and uncertain compass findings owing to the northern latitude of the Bay are all dealt with, the inference being that with all sorts and conditions of aids to navigation, lighthouses, wireless, airplanes, special pilots, etc. the season of navigation might be extended for a considerable period over the fifteen weeks that the majority of opinion favors.
With the report as it pertains to harbors and harbor facilities one is not impressed. Neither Post Nelson

Churchill is by any means ideal, though of the two Churchill is favored. Taken all in all the report is not one that would tend to make the individual capitalist at all enthusiastic over putting up money on the prospect of getting therefrom an ample return, at least so far as trans-Atlantic navigation is concerned.
As to the mineral possibilities of this north land it is quite another story. Of minerals there are plenty, copper, so far as is now known is holding first place, with gold second. However, the country has not been thoroughly prospected, and probably, owing to its inaccessibility will not be, for many a long day.

Health and Comfort in the Home.

Many a chill can be avoided by the wise use of heating with ever-ready gas stoves. An inset gas fire can easily be installed in any ordinary coal grate, and will provide the necessary warmth at any time.
Gas Fires make no work. There is no Coal to carry upstairs, and no ashes to be cleared away. They are ideal for use in daintily appointed rooms. There is no smoke or dust. They also ventilate the room. Enquiries solicited.

$15 for a GIFT!

That's what a valued friend of ours told us last March when paying half a year's Disability premium, because he had not been sick or injured, even for one day, in 27 years. Nevertheless he accepted a policy and our friend is now on his tenth week of neuritis at $15.00 per week, and this $150 will go a long way to offset the extra burdens and expenses of his illness. Again the old adage "You never can tell" and it's better to have it always and not need it than need it once and not have it.

Total Claims paid in all lines are $81,000,000.
