The Playground and Recreation Association of St. John's have taken over the Prince's Rink for Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, till the end of February, and will invite the children of the city, who cannot afford to pay the admission fee, to be their guests on these afternoons. It has been found that many of the children who would like to take advantage of this invitation do not possess skates. If you have a pair of child's skates knocking around your home, which your child has outgrown, won't you hand them over to the Association for one of these youngsters? You can leave them at the Rink Office or at Gray & Goodland's, or if you drop a line to the Secretary of the P. & R. Association (P.O. Box 55017) the skates will be called for.

The Heir to Beecham Park

CHAPTER VIII.

"You have had an ugly fall," he said, briefly. "Your arm is broken—how did it happen?"

He pushed Stuart gently into a chair near at hand, and while he spoke, he deftly cut away the slight tump's sleeve from the wounded limb with a pair of scissors taken from his pocket.

"I can't quite remember," Stuart replied, speaking with an effort, and passing his left hand over his eyes. "I came an awful cropper, I know, and must have banged my head. Is the arm broken? If so, you had better send for Metcalf and have it set."

The butler was moving away; but Sir Douglas stopped him.

"There is no need to send to the village—I can manage this. Go up to my room and send down my man; it is not the first time he has helped me in this sort of thing."

Stuart lay back in his chair; he was still feeling faint and weak. He caught Sir Douglas' eye, and smiled a little.

"I feel rather like what the boys used to call a 'jolly duffer,'" he said, slowly. "I can't think what made me so stupid; I don't usually fall about in this way. I wonder how long I was senseless—and I have never thanked you for helping me." Stuart was gradually recovering himself, and woke to the fact that this was a stranger. "I beg your pardon."

"It is granted, Cousin Stuart," Stuart looked mystified, and then said, suddenly putting out his left hand:

"You are Douglas Gerant; I am very glad to see you."

Sir Douglas grasped the hand. "Thanks, my lad," he said, quietly; then, looking round: "Here is Murray. Now sit quiet, and don't speak, and we'll settle you in a trice."

Stuart watched his cousin curiously as he prepared the bandages and improvised some splints; he scarcely felt the long, white fingers as they moved over his wounded arm, and winced only as the bones clicked together. But he grew fainter as the bandages were wound round; and, as the operation was finished, Sir Douglas, without a word, held the brandy to his lips again and forced him to drink some.

"You have pluck, Stuart," he said, quietly. "You are of the stuff to make a man. Now, if you take my advice, you will go to your room and rest. I fancy that arm will trouble you rather to-night; so try to get some sleep now."

"My head feels rather queer. I confess," Stuart responded; and he gladly let his cousin draw his hand through his arm and lead him through the hall to the stairs.

Mrs. Crosbie was sitting down as they approached.

"Stuart," she exclaimed, in genuine dismay, "what is the matter?"

"He has fallen and broken his arm," Sir Douglas answered, quietly. "I am taking him to his room; it will be wise to let him pass, Cousin Constance, as he has had a nasty touch on the head."

"Arm broken!" cried Mrs. Crosbie, in alarm. "But it must be set! I will send for Dr. Metcalf at once!"

"You can send for the doctor, if you like," Sir Douglas remarked, as he drew Stuart up the stairs; "but his arm is already set. I have had considerable experience in such cases, and I can assure you it is all right."

Stuart smiled faintly at his mother, and she followed him up the stairs, a little annoyed, a little anxious, and oddly enough, a little glad—annoyed because Sir Douglas had taken so much upon himself; anxious for her son, whom she loved better than anything on earth; and glad, because she saw in this illness a chance of bringing about the marriage between Vane and Stuart, which she so much desired.

Sir Douglas left the mother and son together when he had encoined his patient comfortably in a large chair; and Mrs. Crosbie busied herself with many little offices about the room, quitting the apartment only when she saw Stuart's eyes close in slumber. She met Vane on the landing, and, with an affectionate glance, drew the girl's hand through her arm.

"He is resting, dear," she said, "so I shall leave him for a while. We must nurse him together, and we shall soon get him well."

Vane's face flushed a little.

"I will help you gladly," she returned, and she spoke honestly. Her first thought, like her aunt's, had been that this would bring Stuart and her self more together. She had another duty to perform, too. She must ingratiate herself with Sir Douglas Gerant, and try by every means in her power to wipe away the memory of her foolish mistake.

Stuart slept for an hour or two, and dreamed of Margery, but when he awoke the pain in his arm was so great that even her sweet image was banished from his thoughts. His mother came in as night fell, but Stuart was too ill to broach the subject of his love. The blow on the head was more severe than he had imagined and he grew feverish as the day declined. He heard the tower clock chime the night hours, and whenever he moved his head, his eyes rested on the figure of Sir Douglas reading by the window, and ready at any moment to tend him.

And at the small cottage by the Weald another being sat and watched by a sickbed, watching with a heart that was growing sadder and sadder as the moments passed, Margery, still in the white cotton gown that she wore when she pledged her troth, knelt by Mary Morris' couch, trying to alleviate the pain that was racking the poor, wasted frame. She was ignorant of her lover's illness, and she thought only with a sense of peace and happiness. What a long, wonderful day it had been, she thought as she sat beside the little window and watched the veil of night darken the sky—a day in which her girlhood was buried forever, a day in which the golden glory of all earthly happiness dawned for her! She turned from the window to watch the sick woman. The paroxysm of pain seemed past, and she was asleep. The house was quiet as a tomb. In another room the loving, faithful husband and companion was lost to trouble in slumber. Margery was alone; she moved softly to the window and drew back the curtains, and immediately the room was bathed in the silver radiance of the moon.

She stood and gazed on at the dark-blue heavens, the glittering of myriads of jeweled stars, the moonlit earth, till a cloud seemed to obscure her vision; and, when she gazed again, the stars were gone and a ruddy haze, pierced by the sun's golden beams, illumined the sky.

She rose softly, moved on tiptoe to the bed, then, with a sudden shudder, dropped on her knees beside it. While her eyes had been closed in sleep, while the dawn had spread its roseate veil over the night, a spirit had flown from earth—Mary Morris was dead!

CHAPTER IX.

The days passed away, and Stuart Crosbie gradually recovered from the effects of his fall. Despite the assurance from Sir Douglas that her son was doing well, Mrs. Crosbie satisfied herself and summoned the village doctor, together with a fashionable physician from town, only to receive the same opinion from them, coupled with the expression that Stuart could not have been better treated. The young man passed four days in his room; but as the pain left his head, he insisted on donning his clothes and descending to the garden. His mind was haunted by Margery's image and the thought of her sorrow; for the news of Mrs. Morris' death had reached him through his servant, and he longed to rush away and comfort his darling. He had seen little of his mother during the past four days; Sir Douglas had constituted himself head nurse, and Mrs. Crosbie, who was not quite at home in a sick-room, gave way to him with a little annoyance and jealousy, though she would not let it be seen. Stuart had not been sufficiently well, during the short time she visited him, to speak about Margery—indeed, he scarcely had strength to reply to her inquiries—the heat was still very great, and, although he had an excellent constitution, he was considerably weakened by the fever and pain. But, though he could not collect his ideas to speak of Margery, she was never absent from his thoughts. The vision of her sweet blue eyes, her wistful, lovely face, haunted his bedside, bringing a sense of peace and rest to his troubled dreams.

At last, after four days had passed, Stuart insisted on leaving his room and seeking the air, urged, in fact, by a strong desire to see his mother and tell her of his love. Sir Douglas offered no opposition to this move; the severe effects of the fall were now passed, and, with such health and vigor as Stuart possessed, his arm would soon heal. Nevertheless, it was a rather shattered likeness of the handsome cousin that greeted Vane Charteris' eyes as she crossed the hall; and saw him making slow progress down the stairs.

"Let me help you," she said, gently, moving forward at once, and putting out her hand.

"Thanks, I am rather shaky," returned Stuart, smiling faintly. "How do you do, Cousin Vane? Thanks for all your kind messages."

Vane made no reply, but helped him down the stairs, across the hall to the colonnade, and, pushing forward a large chair, she soon made him comfortable.

"Thank you," he said again; "you are very kind. Is my mother anywhere about?"

"She has gone to Chesterham on some missionary business," replied Vane, leaning back against one of the white pillars, and looking extremely pretty and graceful in her long, soft pink gown. "I don't think she knew that you were coming down, or I am sure she would not have gone." (To be continued.)

Remember that all cake batter, except for sponge or angel cakes, should be well beaten after all the ingredients have been combined. Dishes in which milk, or molasses mixtures are to be baked should be especially well greased.

An Electrical Girl

LONDON, Eng., Jan 17, (C.P.)—An "electrical girl" has been discovered at Keighley, Leeds. She is a mill worker, but recently whenever she approached a spinning frame threads began to break and the machine ran as if acting against some magnetic opposition. Directly the girl left the vicinity of the machine it became normal again. "This is the first case of its kind I have heard of," the manager of the factory said. "The girl has broken down under the strain of her experiences."

Just Folks.

By EDGAR GUEST.

PEACE IN THE HOME.

A little path to a little gate,
A shout of glee when the children got
A simple meal when the day is done,
Good appetites when the food comes on.

With love to rule at the table fair,
Oh, what exultation this anywhere?
Count your riches and boast your fame
But more than these you can never claim:
The faith and love of the little few Who watch and wait at the dusk for you,
If you come be glad at the long day's close,
You have all that any man ever knows.

If peace be yours when the shadows
fall
They can have no more in a marble hall,
And a king by his queen is never met
With a warmer welcome than that you get.
And the kiss she gives when you come from town
Would be the same if she wore a crown.

For whether you're rich or whether you're great Doesn't matter at all where the children wait;
If love be there when the day is spent
And you sit down to your meal content,
If there's joy in your home, then
while you live,
You have all that this life on earth can give.

The New Remedy for Colds Has a Double Action

William Street Lady Strongly recommends Vicks Vapo Rub and Chest Colds
Treat one cold with Vicks Vapo Rub and, as in the case reported below, you will adopt this external method for all the cold troubles of the family.
Miss Genevieve Martin of 24 William St. writes: "I have used several full size packages of Vicks Vapo Rub and can conscientiously recommend it. It is a household word with us. All members of the family are continually asking for Vicks for head and chest colds, burns and bruises."

Vicks comes in salve form and for tonsillitis, bronchitis, coughs or chest colds you just apply it over throat and chest and cover with warm flannel.
Its action is two-fold—the volatile ingredients are released as vapors by the body heat and inhaled with each breath directly into the air passages.
At the same time Vicks is absorbed and stimulates the skin like a liniment or plaster. Colds are usually relieved over night.

Though primarily intended for inflammation of the air passages, Vicks is just as good for surface inflamma-tions such as burns, bruises, cuts and stings.

Household Notes.

Sliced canned pineapple and cottage cheese are an excellent combination to serve on shredded lettuce, with mayonnaise dressing.
To make a glass of malted milk doubly nourishing, flavor with chocolate or cocoa, and beat it in an egg.
Strain and chill before serving.

To Save St. Paul's

There can be, of course, but one answer to the report of the Expert Commission appointed by the Dean and Chapter to examine into the structural condition of St. Paul's. What they suggest must be done, for they say that unless the work is put in hand at once and "vigorously pressed to a conclusion the situation may rapidly become grave," says the Telegraph.

Indeed, it is no secret that many architects of standing consider that it is grave now and has been for some time past, and they naturally express themselves in private with much greater frankness than they would allow themselves in public. But we need not look beyond the measured language of Sir Aston Webb's report to appreciate the fact that the strengthening of the pillars of the dome of St. Paul's Cathedral must be proceeded with instantly, if we are to avert all risk of a disaster for which, should it occur, we should be justly reproached by contemporary opinion throughout the world and by posterity for all times to come.

The Load of the Dome.
It may be remembered that the Commission issued their first interim report as long ago as June 1, 1922, when they drew attention to the condition of the masonry of the main piers, which are described as "carrying a considerable proportion of the great load of the drums, the inner and outer domes, and the interior cone which strengthens the outer dome itself, and also carries the external lantern and cross above." In other words, the principal supports of the dome are in a bad state, which means that the dome itself must fall sooner or later unless the supports are strengthened.

These main piers, be it observed, are not solid. Their appearance of massive strength is highly deceptive. They are evidences rather of scamped work in the seventeenth century, for Wren's contractors filled the solid stone shells with rubble—and apparently indifferent rubble at that—and much of this has perished, while the stone casing itself is succumbing to the tooth of Time. Experiments have been carried out on the north-east pier with the object of forcing liquid cement under pressure into the interior so that it may set and take the place of the rubble which has perished and the idea is to follow this up by replacing with new stone the broken stones of the outer facing, as has already been done on the south-west pier.

The Commission say that they cannot be sure that all the perished rubble in the north-east pier has been replaced by cement and that it is now practically a solid pier, but they express themselves as "satisfied" with the result, and they do not hesitate to recommend that similar treatment shall be given to all the other piers.

Wanted £140,000.
The alternative would be a much bigger undertaking. That would be to take off the dome and rebuild the main piers, but as the weight of the structure supported by the piers is over 40,000 tons, the operation would be big, lengthy, costly, and even hazardous. It may, indeed, come to that later on. If so, vilest posterity; it is a job we must leave to our descendants. Even what is proposed will cost, it is estimated, from £120,000 to £140,000, which means in all probability at least £250,000, judging by the way in which such estimates frequently work out. But the money must be found, and we see no reason why the State, pressed though it is, should not make a grant from the Treasury for this purpose.

If any building in this country can be truly styled a national and historic monument, it is St. Paul's Cathedral, and we cannot conceive that the faintest opposition would be raised in any responsible quarter. If we may venture to make comparisons between hallowed shrines, we should say that though St. Paul's is not so venerable as Westminster Abbey, which touches perhaps finer chords and appeals to even deeper emotions, yet St. Paul's means more to London and to Londoners. Assuredly, they would miss it more; the loss of its dome floating serenely above the turmoil would be felt more acutely and poignantly.

Londoners and St. Paul's.
Londoners feel about St. Paul's what the old Romans felt about the Capitol—while stands the Capitol Rome shall stand. There would be a superstitious shiver run through the Empire if any disaster happened to St. Paul's, and all who use the English tongue would say—and not without justice—that those who let St. Paul's perish, when they had been gravely warned of its danger, had wretchedly failed in their trusteeship. St. Paul's belongs not to London alone but to the Empire, and it is not unlikely, when the position is made known, that help will flow in generously from the Dominions and the Colonies. It would be a pleasing thought that they had contributed

Little Jack Rabbit

"Cock-a-doodle, doodle, jiggle, Here's the early morning Bugle," shouted Reddy Comb, the rooster newsboy, as dear Uncle Lucky finished his Clover Cereal.

Scampering down the hall, Little Miss Mousie opened the front door and picked up the paper. Right at the top of the first page, in big black letters, was printed: "Old Man Wessel locked up in Jail. Brave Policeman Dog arrests the old robber."

While musing in Mr. Lucky Lethifoot's Swallowtail Coat, "Uncle Lucky, Uncle Lucky!" shouted Little Miss Mousie, running back to the kitchen with the paper, "read the news. How did it ever get printed in time?"

"Some paper, this Bunnyside Bugle," laughed the dear old gentleman bunny, putting on his spectacles. "I declare, I must send a box of Cabbage Leaf Cigars to the kind Policeman Dog and a barrel of Lollypops to his little Bow-wows," and without waiting to read the paper, dear Uncle Lucky hopped over to the telephone:

"Hello, Central, don't delay Till my whiskers all turn gray."

"What number, please," asked the little telephone goose lady operator at the other end.

"Dear, dear, dearest me!" exclaimed dear Uncle Lucky. "I forgot to look in the book. I declare I'm getting full of rheumatism and forgetfulness."

"Here's the number," squeaked Little Miss Mousie, who like the devoted little housekeeper she was, had come to "Bargain Corner, forty-four, Lucky Three-in-One Cent Store."

"Thank you," sighed polite Uncle Lucky, and then calling it over the wire, he shouted for an answer. The

Germany Looking for a Government

"The most remarkable example of hesitation and uncertainty in a new environment is to be found, not in any of the Allied countries, but in Germany, the country that dared most and lost most decisively in the war," says the Times. "Germany has presented during the last few months an instructive spectacle. She cannot find a Government. The worst evil from which she suffered—that financial disorder which very nearly plunged her into revolutionary conditions—has been removed by the combined efforts of the Allied Governments, of America, and of the more capable of her own statesmen.

"Thanks to the application of the Dawes Scheme, she is rapidly recovering economic stability; the nation as a whole and individual citizens can lay their plans, draw up reasonable budgets, and calculate ahead. Financially Germany is recovering. The currency is fixed, prices are steady, and the familiar processes of economic intercourse are working once more without too great friction. The chief cause of psychological and social disturbance has been removed. Yet this very fact, that the German people are again tranquilly at work,

Better Late Than Never

The Board of Trade Report should give consideration to the question as to whether or not it is wise to continue to allow the export of raw wood from Newfoundland. The suggestion comes somewhat late. Two years ago when the Crowe and Mooney Bills were rushed through the Legislature, there was no objection raised to them with the exception of the protests made by the Telegram when they were first suggested, and by members of the Legislative Council when the bills reached that Chamber.

It is late in the day to enforce an embargo on raw timber, but better late than never, unless it is determined to strip the country bare of forest growth. Already serious inroads have been made upon it, and even the three mile limit from which the fishermen obtained their supplies has been considerably depleted by the exporter.

Information based on the views held by expert foresters shows that reforestation in Newfoundland, excepting in certain localities where all the conditions are favourable, is impracticable as a commercial undertaking. The soil for the most part is shallow, and once the forests are cut down, the humus in which the seed germinates is quickly removed by the erosive action of extremes of temperature and running water.

May we thank the following for sending us gifts during the last two months, which are a great help to us in our work: Mrs. G. N. Murphy, Mrs. J. A. MacDonald, Mrs. Mitchell, Gray & Goodland, Harvey & Co., Mrs. F. R. Emerson, Mrs. W. B. Clouston, Mrs. Pinesent, Mrs. R. G. Reid, Mr. A. V. Ross, Mr. H. J. Wyatt.

Improved Health in Cold Weather

The Registrar General's Table of Vital Statistics for January, which appears in this issue, indicates that the health of the city in spite of the severity of weather, or perhaps because of it, has been most satisfactory. The birthrate is, with the exception of one year, the highest for the month of January since 1920, and the death rate, with the exception of that in 1922, the lowest. Infant mortality is equal to the lowest record in the same five year period, and the deaths among children under one year is just half the number previously shown.

Enquiry Into Expenditure on Charitable Institutions. Riotous Extravagance.

The Government Commission on Charitable Institutions met yesterday to pursue its enquiry into expenditures in relation to Public Health. During the past two months, an examination has been proceeding into public accounts and vouchers, and a very large amount of data has been collected, so much, in fact, that it has caused an embarrassment as to the direction in which reform should first be attempted.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES. RESTORATION, SAYS GREECE, EVEN AT THE COST OF WAR.

The Greek Minister of the Interior, M. Konditis, according to an Athens despatch to the Exchange Telegraph, urged before the Cabinet to-day that Greece could only obtain satisfaction from Turkey by restoring the Patriarch to Constantinople even at the cost of war. It is denied that the election of a new Patriarch is imminent, it being suggested that such a procedure was exceedingly unlikely because it would have the appearance of legalizing Turkey's arbitrary action in expelling Patriarch Constantinos.

HERIOT'S POLICY CARRIED IN SPITE OF PROTESTS.

The suppression of the French Embassy to the Vatican was voted by the Chamber of Deputies this evening 314 to 250. It was the realization of part of the programme upon which the Left groups of Radicals and Socialists were elected on May 11, and which Premier Herriot, refusing to accept advice from his self-termed well wishers or the bitter criticism from his avowed political opponents, carried through with firm determination for the interest of France.

GREECE SUGGESTS SUBMITTING CASE TO HAGUE TRIBUNAL.

A despatch to the Havis Agency from Athens says a note protesting against the expulsion of the Patriarch Constantinos from Turkey had been delivered by the Greek Charge D'Affaires to the Turkish Foreign Minister at Ankara. LAST NIGHT'S HOCKEY.

GUARDS 9
TERRA NOVAS 2

The hockey game between the Guards and Terra Novas drew another large attendance to the Prince's rink, included in the number present being His Excellency the Governor and Lady Wardlaw. The game in the whole was only fair, and saw the Terras fall down under the crushing attacks of the Guards by the one-sided score of nine goals to two. The Guards played minus the services of "Billy" Clouston, who met with an injury in the first game. Henley Munn filled his position nicely and, with Ralph Herder on the line-up for the first time in season, the front line proved to be as strong as ever. The Terra Novas as had a new addition to their team in the person of Gordon Johnstone, who gave good service while he was on the ice. Mr. J. M. Tobin, the official referee, controlled the game.

First Period

The game opened up at 7.35 with an excellent sheet of ice. The Terras pressed matters and confined the rubber to Guards territory, but the play was quickly transferred to the other end by J. Herder. Several end to end rushes followed without any result, until four minutes of play had elapsed when Errol Munn scored a pretty goal from the side. The brand of hockey then grew rather ragged, and the referee was kept blowing his whistle for off-sides and deliberate kicks of the puck. Repeated attacks then followed on the opposing goals, with good individual runs by Patterson of the Guards, and Canning and Gillis for the Terras, but nothing materialized. Henley Munn, for body checking Peters a moment later was given a two minute rest. During his absence Peters made a successful get away and evened up matters by a well directed shot from the outside. Canning tried another of his spectacular runs almost immediately and nearly scored. The Guards pressed hard during the close of the period, and from a face-off in front of the Terra Nova goal, E. Munn lost no time in lancing the puck through scoring No. 2. The gong sounded leaving the Guards, 2 goals; Terras 1.

Second Period

Upon resumption of play Gillis made an end to end run but the shot barely missed the mark. The Terras pressed hard to equalize, and both Field and Canning were trying their hardest to score. The Guards defence were successful in stopping all onslaughts. Play transferred to the other end and just about the moment when Gillis was getting started for another of his runs, Henley Munn skated in fast, captured the disc and easily beat Field, scoring No. 3. Ralph Herder then made his appearance on the ice. Play was now confined to Terra territory, with Whelan, E. Munn and R. Herder pressing hard for further results, but goals were lost through lack of combination. Ralph Herder made a bold effort to score, but Peters managed to clear, but lost to Henley Munn, who once again bulged the twines with a terrific shot. Jim Herder was next benched for a slight infringement and he was followed in quick succession by Barrett of the Terras. As play progressed a good exhibition of hockey was handed out. Errol Munn got in some very tricky play, using the boards to advantage, but he was frustrated from scoring by hard back checking. Before the gong sounded to close the period Henley Munn, who was playing a good game in centre ice, once again found the net for his team. Period ended Guards 4; Terras 1.

Third Period

From the drop of the puck in the final session the Terras rushed hard to narrow down the score, but they found the Guards defence lines hard to beat and from then on they appeared to have lost heart. According as play progressed, the Guards had the upper hand, and the exhibition put up by the Terras was one of disappointment to their supporters. The game, however, took on a different aspect when Canning took the puck from near his own goal, and made a pretty sweep of the rink with Clarke alongside. Canning passed to Clark near the goal, the puck hitting the boards from behind the net and same out to the front. Canning then skated in hard and scored, in 6 1-2 minutes. This play brought forth the plaudits of their supporters. Play quickly changed, however, when Henley Munn came back thirty seconds later and easily beat Field for another counter. From then on it was all Guards, with Errol Munn in possession of the puck. Munn's tricky play resulted in another goal, scored by Coultas. Seven minutes later Errol Munn made a zig-zag sweep of the rink and chalked up another tally for the Guards from a close up shot. The Terras now appeared to be going to pieces, and Canning, the mainstay of the team, was powerless to keep his players up against the attack. On one occasion Canning and Field combined nicely, but Currie made a spectacular stop. Jim Herder, who was playing one of his best games for the season, made a successful getaway and upon drawing near his opponents' goal, made a perfect pass to Errol Munn, who was responsible for the final goal. Full time then sounded, leaving the Guards victors by the one-sided score of 9 goals to 2.

Notes on Votes

It is often said that women are represented already by their husbands, fathers and brothers, and so do not need to vote. It does not take much thinking to realize how absurd this statement is. What about the man with a wife, widowed mothers, four or five sisters and half a dozen unmarried daughters? His vote represents himself and all these women, and it counts one; while the vote of his bachelor neighbor next door, who puts out a female relative in the world, counts for just as much. Since the object of the vote is to get at the wish of the majority, it is clear that the only fair and accurate way is for each grown person to have one vote, and each to represent himself or herself, a man by nature too different from a woman to be able to represent her. Whatever his goodwill, he cannot fully put himself in a woman's place, and look at things exactly from her point of view. To say that in no respect a reflection upon his mental or moral ability than it would be a reflection upon his musical ability to say that he cannot sing both soprano and bass. Unless men and women should ever become alike (which would be regrettable and monotonous), women must either go unrepresented or represent themselves.

Another proof that women's opinions are not now fully represented is the lack of sufficient humane and protective legislation, and in general the imperfect legal safeguarding of the moral, educational and humanitarian interests that women have most at heart.

Numbers of celebrated men have placed on record their enthusiastic approval of woman suffrage in practice, and Hon. Hiram W. Johnson, U. S. Senator from California, has this to say: "There is every reason to regard equal suffrage as having justified itself in California. The women have proved themselves a great force for good government. Their understanding of politics is surprisingly keen. On every occasion when they have thus far exercised the franchise they have proved themselves intelligent voters. In several particular instances the women have waged battles in this State in behalf of decency and good government that challenge the highest regard for them as voting citizens."

Wife Took all the Bed

LONDON MAN'S COMPLAINT TO MAGISTRATE.

Mr. J. A. R. Cairns, the Thames Police Court magistrate, speaking at a meeting held at Cadby Hall, London, recently, under the auspices of the Lyon's Debating Society, gave some instances of the quaint problems which come before him. He said a man, who had evidently lost a night's sleep, sought advice from him on one occasion as to how he should deal with his wife, whom he found occupying the centre of the bed, and who refused to budge, east or west, to make room for him.

A man of seventy, who was continually being brought up before him on the charge of being drunk and incapable, always advanced the same excuse. The offender had only one tooth, and his invariable remark was: "Inasmuch as it is impossible for me to eat solids I must use liquids." When Mr. Cairns suggested that milk would be cheaper and more sustaining, the old man eyed him for a moment, and then ejaculated, "Sir, I have not come down to that yet."

He lifts the hood, a moment tinkers with things that slide, and things that roll, and says—like other earnest thinkers he uses words that hit the goal—"Your carburetor's full of clinkers; you shouldn't burn cheap grades of coal." He knows just where the grief is hidden, he's wise to every fateful sign, and goes to work, when he is hidden, and makes the twisted parts align; and when some paragon I've ridden, I find the bus is working fine. He knows his trade, he does not guess, he knows his business, con and pro; and when we've accidents distressing he takes our boats and makes them so, and hears the auto fans confessing that he relieves much human woe. Radio as a Factor in Tracking Criminals

TORONTO, Jan. 17 (Can Press)—An instance of the part radio will ultimately play in police work is the fact that an international code for radio use has been completed after several months' work, and is now in actual use between the guardians of law in American and Canadian cities. This was spoken of in a recent address by Chief Dickson, of Toronto.

MRS. B. H. HART SICK FOR YEARS

Wants Women to Know How She Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Cornwall, Ont.—"I am now giving your medicine a fair trial and it surely is doing me good. I used to feel so tired in the morning, that I didn't want to get up, but that feeling is leaving me now. I also sleep better and feel more like working. For seven or eight years I have had headaches, tired feelings, pains in my back and across my body. I read letters in the newspapers saying what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done others. My husband says I quit too soon, but I am not going to stop taking the Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine until I am better and haven't an ache or a pain. Isn't that the right way? I have great faith in your medicines. They must be good when those who take them speak so highly of them. I am recommending them to my friends and I will gladly answer letters from women asking about them."—Mrs. B. H. Hart, Box 1081, Cornwall, Ont.

Mrs. Hart is willing to answer letters from sick women asking about the Vegetable Compound.

ARE ALL WOMEN CATTY?

The Authorman had been talking with a woman whom he has always admired for her gentle nature, sweetness of disposition, and her unusually strong sense of justice. The name of another woman came into the conversation. I don't know what the first woman said. Something called me out of the room at that moment. But later, when our friend had gone, the Authorman said: "Are all women catty?" "There was a touch of cynicism in his voice, but there was also a touch of wisdom."

time pretending to be so loyal. I don't know why I didn't let her know I understood perfectly she was trying to scratch me. She's had it in for me ever since the time we were both up for president in our bridge club and I was elected."

"Perhaps she didn't realize how it sounded," I suggested. "Some people are stupid that way."

"I know," said Jane, "but Nina isn't stupid. No one would call her that. She's very clever. You know that."

And I had to admit I did.

A Very Clever Scratcher. Clever enough to know just what points in one's armor are weakest. Clever enough to skillfully penetrate the armor while at the same time appearing to try to be particularly nice.

In other words to strike at you with a sharp claw sheathed in soft, harmless looking fur.

"Another friend told me of a crowd of girls where cattiness was a highly developed art. If one wore a frock more than once or twice to their functions one was likely to be greeted with the fur sheathed scratch: 'My dear that is the sweetest frock. Every time I see it I like it better.'"

Sometimes a jesting manner is the fur camouflage. Another woman I know, brilliant but bitter, has a way of repeating nasty things people have said about you as if she thought they were a huge joke, too absurd for you to mind. But she knows you do mind. And she means that you shall.

Comfort For Her Who Gets Scratched. There is one comfort for those who are scratched. Cats seldom scratch unless there is some fear behind the scratch. Jealousy and envy are forms of human fear. One doesn't like to be scratched, but jealousy and envy are often forms of flattery. Which fact may be some comfort to those who get scratched.

Juvenile Delinquency

Massachusetts News: Some judges go far as to declare that in from 80 per cent. of the cases sent to their attention, the trouble began in the child's home at an when it could only set its course some standards. A child neglected parents before it goes to school be set on the right course in school, but such children often have the discipline nor the curriculum derive more than a meagre from school work. These observations support the conclusion that nearly all juvenile delinquency is the fruit of parental delinquency, and that in correcting the child the court serves well enough in a superficial way, but wholly misses, because it lacks the jurisdiction, the fundamental problem, which is home reform. After the child gets into court, both it and its parents can be taken in for the best interest of the State, but the case comes to the judge five to fifteen years after it can be adjudged to best advantage.

500 Miles an Hour

WORLDWIDE AIR TRIPS ON CONTINENT.

Mr. F. Handley Page, the great British pioneer, writing in the Daily Mail, says:—

"The year 1924 closes with a new record of nearly 250 miles an hour, by Lieut. Bonnet in France, flying 1925 a speed of 300 miles an hour should be exceeded. This does not mean that a commercial machine flying at this speed between London and Paris, for example, but that over a distance of 2 1/2 miles this speed will be attained."

"The commercial aviation now types aircraft will be in service on the continental routes, particularly attention being paid to increased safety reliability. New three-engined machines capable of flying on any two engines, should one break down, will largely used, and will eliminate any possibility of forced landing."

"Great improvements are looked for this country in 1925 in the formation of light aeroplane clubs, by means of which it will be possible for very large number of people to go to fly at a very small cost, a cost that is being subsidised by the Air Ministry."

"A speed of over 80 miles an hour for a pilot and passenger has been achieved with a low-powered machine equipped with what is practically a large motor-bicycle engine. A considerable improvement of this type would make the cost of flying exceedingly small and bring the time much shorter. When machines of this size are used for trips to the Continent to the place of an ordinary outing on a Saturday afternoon."

Produce and Provisions

(Trade Review)

Codfish—The foreign markets are in good condition, except in Italy, where there has been a decline in Labrador since December, but there is reason to believe that better prices will prevail there in February. The Oporto market is still kept under forty thousand quintals of Newfoundland fish. For week ending Jan. 26th, the total was 38,743 quintals, with 2,629 at the week's consumption. This was about 1,000 quintals less than the previous week, and is accounted for by offering of a newly arrived consignment of cheap Norwegian fish which is now worked off. The total Norwegian stocks there the same date were 13,884 quintals, and their consumption was 5,543 quintals. The Spanish market shows no falling off, and profitable prices for our fish continue to be realized at Alicante. The exports for this week totalled 17,188 quintals of dried codfish, 500 quintals haddock, and 100 quintals ling, as follows:—By schr. Nellie Walters, 3,100 quintals, from Thomas Garland, Gaultois to Leixoes, Portugal; by schr. Flowerdew, 5,714 quintals, from James Baird, Ltd., St. John's, to Pernambuco. By schr. Tishy, 2,064 quintals from the same firm to Barbados. By S.S. Silvia, 6,310 quintals from various St. John's exporters to Halifax and New York, mainly for transportation to the West Indies. Adding the haddock and ling taken in the Nellie T. Walters' cargo to Leixoes, the total is 17,788 quintals.

Common Cod Oil—Enquiries for industrial oil are very scarce at this season and so little is doing that it is impossible to give any reliable quotations. The heavy shortage in the Menhaden fishery in United States waters is expected to have a strong influence on market prices, but so far it has not had any special effect.

Cod Liver Oil—There is no news during the past fortnight from Norway in regard to their catch of fish or prices on the refined oil. We fully expect to have some information very soon, and intend to keep our readers fully informed as to the conditions and the prospect of prices for the coming season. Reports from scientists are very persistent that the sunlight plays a very important part in the development of the vitamin potency of cod liver oil. In the Senjen district of Norway, where the fishery is carried on at this season, the sun never appears over the horizon for fully a month. There is only a twilight for about three hours. The fishermen leave for the fishing grounds while it is yet dark, and are overhauling their trawls while it is light. The twilight has disappeared before they get home again. The Norwegian Government have many light-houses along the coast to guide the fishermen to their harbors at this precarious work. Now that the scientists have decided that the vitamins come by sunlight through vegetation that frequents the sea water, it is certainly absurd to expect the best oil from fish caught under such conditions in Norway. Everything points to Newfoundland as the place to get the richest and best oil. The fishery is carried on during the long summer days when vegetation of all kinds is abundant, and the codfish get this vegetation as well as the bait fish which are abundant at that season.

Flour—The price of wheat keeps on soaring. Winnipeg quotation was up to 2.16 3/8 yesterday. It costs $11.65 to land here now, following the trend of the wheat market. St. John's prices are still below the cost of importation, and high grade flours are selling at $11.25 to $11.50 per barrel, wholesale. An upward change from this is inevitable.

Pork—The market, same as in salted beef, has been dull during the week, and will likely continue so until sailing time. The advances in prices that occurred since early December will no doubt be maintained all the winter and into the time of outfitting for the fishery, which means that the fishermen will have to pay $3 per barrel at least more than they did last year. The wholesale price of fat back is now $35.25, ham but $34.50, spare ribs $28.25 and short cut clear $35.25 per barrel.

Beef—The barrelled beef market continues quiet with local prices unchanged. Trade is rather dull since New Year, but there will be some reasonable activity during the next few weeks in outfitting for the seal-fishery. The local market is well supplied, as the imports for 1924 were double those of 1923. Box flank mutton is quoted still at $27 in the wholesale houses; extra family $24, naval beef $28.25, family special $21.50, plate beef and boneless flank $21, beef hams $17.50.

Sugar—Prices of refined sugar are again lower, but there has been no important movement in the raws, which continue about the same as they have been for some time. The Cuban crop is now in full swing and it is believed that prices will soon be slightly lower than they are to-day as there will be an avalanche of sugar coming on the market during the next two months, which must certainly have an effect on the prevailing price.

Molasses—Reports from Barbados state that the sugar canes have been greatly delayed, and there will be no appreciable quantity of sugar or molasses ready for shipment before the month of March. Prices quoted to-day are only indications of what some would like to see and nothing definite can be stated for several weeks. The requirements of good honest molasses in this country a few years ago was fully thirteen thousand puncheons per annum, but this past year the total importations was only about nine thousand puncheons. The very high duty of about eight cents per gallon on choice molasses, and nearly ten cents per gallon on fancy molasses is killing our trade with the British West Indies. The trade is now going for American granulated sugar, which many consider a great mistake, as the Forney Tariff was a direct hit at many of our fishery productions, and we should endeavor on all occasions to give the preference of our trade to British connections.

Tea—The tea export season in Calcutta is an end and the market remains in the same stonion position. Advice from Colombo to London agents since New Year say that the market in Ceylon was one penny higher per pound than it was in December. In fact the price went so high that buyers stopped operations. Dealers on this side of the Atlantic are now selling Indian tea at rates cheaper than they can be bought at.

Potatoes—The price of imported potatoes advanced 20 cents a sack since our last issue. The half sack of 80 pounds is now $1.75 to $1.85 and the 180 pound sack $3.50 to $3.70. Stocks are being reduced considerably since December, as the consumption is generally at its height in the winter months. Local grown supplies are not moving since New Year owing to the frosty weather.

Hay—The local price of hay is unchanged at $34 to $35 per ton for haled imported. There is not much doing this week in this commodity, and there has been no importations since our last report. There is a good deal of imported hay held in wholesale stores, and this, together with the home-grown stocks on hand, will keep prices at present levels for three months at least.

Oats—The Canadian market has grown quite strong, and there is an advance of fifteen cents a sack on white oats in the local wholesale market this week, and five cents a sack on No. 2 feed oats. The quotation for the former is now $4.35 per sack of 4 bushels, and for the latter $4.25 per sack. We expect to see even a further advance before spring.

Who is Educated?
 "In his very interesting address at the Educational Institute Congress in Edinburgh, Sir Robert Blair asked for general assent to the proposition that a people could not be called educated until three generations of the whole population had passed through the schools of a national system," says the Glasgow Herald.

"Our assent is modified by several considerations. There is something in the idea of primitive freshness of the brain. Some of the ablest men that Scotland has produced have sprung from a lowly and ignorant stock, and have been the first of their race to receive any education at all. Is a family which has been educated under a national system for three generations likely to produce a Telford?"

"And is it possible to educate a whole population, or even a majority of it? Educational tests applied in war-time in Britain, America, France, and even Germany showed that school instruction passes over the heads of about 40 per cent. or more of the scholars—for mere ability to read sporting news and make elementary (and erroneous) financial calculations thereon does not constitute education."

Protection Against Fresh Vegetables

PROTECTION FOR TUBERCULOSIS.

TORONTO, Jan. 25. — (Canadian Press)—Writing to the Globe Dr. R. N. Wolfenden takes strong exception to a statement made by another doctor in regard to the winter and early spring purchase of vegetables and fruits from across the border, a matter in which housewives are interested. The doctor mentioned had said "Protection against fresh imported vegetables is protection for Tuberculosis," and would deny the plea of fruit growers in Canada to receive first consideration.

Dr. Wolfenden says: "There is all the 'vitamin-bearing' food produced now in Canada that can be needed, and if green vegetables are really in demand in the winter and before out-of-door stuff arrives on the market in this country, enough of this could and undoubtedly would be grown by the hundreds of farmers here throughout the winter if there was demand and recompense in it to justify their work. At the present time fresh strawberries from the U.S.A. are being sold in the shops at $1.50 a quart, and certain vegetables at proportionate prices. How much of this expensive stuff

Old man now feels 35

Mr. Colbourne, a man of eighty years of age, after having taken Carnol, now feels like a man of thirty-five.

When the average man or woman passes the age of three score and ten (seventy years), generally his system needs toning up once in a while. Naturally his vitality is reduced. He is easily fatigued. Sometimes his appetite fails him. He doesn't always sleep soundly. Mr. Colbourne says that his father, who is 80 years of age, felt like a man of thirty-five after taking Carnol, but read the son's letter: "I want to recommend your Carnol tonic to everyone who is in need of a good tonic. I had very sore lungs and was in a very weak condition. People said I wouldn't live for six months. I was thoroughly discouraged to think that I had only a short time to live. One night I was reading a newspaper and saw Carnol advertised, so I made up my mind to try it, and the very first bottle I took I noticed I was gaining in weight and felt much stronger. Now I wouldn't be without Carnol. I recommended it to several people and they said it was the finest tonic they had ever used. I also recommended it to one of my brothers, who, after the flu, had a very weak lung, and who received great benefit from taking Carnol. My father, who is now a man of eighty years of age, says that he feels like a man of thirty-five after having taken Carnol. Everybody I recommend Carnol to says they wouldn't be without it. They say it is a life-saver." —Thos. Colbourne, 13 Champagne Street, Ottawa, Ont. 11-24
