THIS MORNING'S DESPATCHES Horrible Indian Murder. A Train of Emigrants attacked and Burned. New Orleans, May 2.—A special to the Piyanque from San Antonio, Texas, says that a train of 6 wagons, 75 mules, 9 men and 2 women were attacked by Indians at Howard, well above Fort Clark. The train and all hands were captured and burned, except the women, who escaped. Gen. Merritt sent Lieut. Vincent, with Casperly, in pursuit, who overtook and fought them. Lieut. Vincent was killed. Jackson, Miss., May 2.—The Republican convention here, after electing delegates to the Philadelphia convention and endorsing Grant, adjourned.

Work is progressing satisfactorily on the Galt and Dooan Railway. We believe it is the intention of a number of the young men of Brantford to organize a Dolly Varden Base Ball Club, with certain elastic uniforms. The Galt Reporter says that on Tuesday evening last the pupils in Dr. Tassie's school presented Miss Macpherson with $40 in aid of her home. C. L. Goodman of Gilmford, was found guilty at the Hamilton Assizes for attempting to burn the house of his brother-in-law, Peter James McKee, on the night of the 20th ult. Inspection in Hamilton.—The Rev. Mr. Fletcher, late of Scarborough, was on Wednesday evening invited pastor of the McNab street Presbyterian Church, Hamilton, formerly under the charge of Prof. Inglis. The Gardner and Wilson Lockman Sewing Machine Companies, Beckett & Co. and Morrison, Clark & Co., of Hamilton, have concurred in the request of their workmen and adopted the nine hours system. THE BEVERLY ASSAULT CASE.—At the Hamilton Assizes on Wednesday, David Moore, a colored man, about thirty years of age, was indicted for an assault with intent on Maria Craig, on the 26th of March last. We gave the particulars at the time of the assault. The jury found a verdict of "not guilty."

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

OTTAWA, May 2. Mr. G. E. Cartier introduced a Bill to facilitate an arrangement between debtor and judgment creditors, and to abolish preferences in favour of judgment creditors. In answer to a question Mr. F. Hinek said it was not the present intention of the Government to propose any change in the tariff on books imported into Canada. Hon. Mr. Holton moved the following resolution on the subject of the appointment of Judge F. J. Doherty, as Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba:—That in the opinion of this House, the appointment of F. J. Doherty, Esq., to the office of Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Manitoba, to which office an annual salary of $7,000 is assigned by law, while he continues to hold his commission as a Judge of the Superior Court of Lower Canada, under which he is entitled to receive a salary of $12,000 per annum, is not only inconsistent with the whole spirit of our legislation respecting the independence of judges, but is a plain contravention of the words of the 8th section of the 7th chapter of the Consolidated Statutes of Lower Canada, whereby it is enacted "that no Judge of the Superior Court of Lower Canada shall sit in the Executive Council, or in the Legislative Council, or in the Legislative Assembly, or hold any other place of profit under the Crown, as long as he shall be such Judge." After considerable discussion the debate was adjourned at 6 p.m. After recess, Mr. Gault moved that the House go into committee on the Bill to repeal the Insolvent Law. Hon. Mr. Anglin said that the House do not go into Committee of the Whole on this bill, but that they go into Committee on it this day three months. The House divided on the amendment with the following result:—For, 49, against 74, majority against the amendment. Mr. Harrison then moved, in amendment to the motion to go into Committee of the Whole, that he be the Inspector of the said committee to examine the Province of Ontario from the operation of the said Bill. The House then went into committee. Mr. Mills in the chair. Mr. Jones (Halifax) moved that the committee do now rise. The House divided on this motion, the members changing sides amid great noise and confusion. The vote was counted and the motion decided lost. The Bill was then adopted, and the Committee rose and reported the Bill without amendment. The third reading is ordered for to-morrow. Found Guilty of Murder. Wm. Caulfield, a middle-aged man, resident of Oshawa, was tried at the Whiting Assizes for the murder of his wife, Ann Caulfield, on the night of the 4th of November last. From the evidence it appeared that the prisoner and his wife did not live happily together; that both were given to drink and frequently quarrelled; and that the wife had separated from him and was living out at service at the time of the alleged murder. The last time that Mrs. Caulfield was seen alive was in the company of the prisoner at the house of a neighbor named Wood. Three weeks before the murder she was in the witness box, abused her husband, of whom she appeared to be jealous, in the most outrageous manner. They subsequently appeared to be friendly, and left the house together, the unfortunate woman was found drowned the next morning in Warren's mill stream, about forty rods distant from Mr. Wood's house. Part of the woman's bonnet was found on the bank of the stream; also tufts of hair which were alleged to be the prisoner's, and there was the appearance of a struggle having taken place. The jury, after an hour and a half's deliberation, returned into Court at 9 p.m. with a verdict of guilty, accompanied by a recommendation to mercy. On being asked who he had to say why sentence should not be passed upon the prisoner, the prisoner vehemently protested his innocence. Mr. Justice Wilson sentenced him to be hanged on the 30th June, stating that he would submit the jury's recommendation to the proper quarter, but on the evidence, they could have come to no other conclusion. An Arctic Voyage on Lake Ontario. (From the Oswego Advertiser, April 29.) Yesterday at about two o'clock p.m. the steamers Lawrence, Capt. Reed, and Milwaukee, Capt. Lamphere, of the Northern Transportation line, entered this port and were soon moored at the Company's wharf. As it was known that a fleet of propellers had left Oswego a week since bound up the lakes, and as the appearance in our port of these two were the first evidence that any of them had passed through the ice fields which had blocked their progress, an unusual degree of interest was felt in them, and a large crowd soon gathered at the wharves. The indications of the passage, the detritus in the ice at the lower end of Lake Ontario, and the exciting scenes incident thereto, as related by the passengers, were equal to the descriptions of Capt. Kane of scenes in his Arctic voyage. The Oswego left Oswego on Saturday, the 20th inst. The Brooklyn on Sunday morning, the 21st, at day-break; the Young America on Tuesday morning; the Empire the same day; the Milwaukee on Wednesday. This fleet of steamers assembled at Cape Vincent, which point they reached without serious obstructions from ice in the St. Lawrence. The Lawrence left Cape Vincent on Tuesday at two o'clock and pushed out into Lake Ontario to encounter the ice, and to enter into a five days struggle to pass the frozen barrier. The others followed the Lawrence one at a time, but did not come up with it until Thursday, when a fleet of thirteen propellers, some of them bound down, were in sight, wedged in by the immense field of ice. At one time nine of the propellers were within hailing distance. The passengers describe the scene presented by this spectacle as beautiful and sublime. The expanse of ice was boundless. Thirteen of these beautiful craft stood out upon the frozen surface, puffing and struggling for progress through the icy mass. This struggling lasted from Tuesday the 23rd until Sunday morning the 25th. The incidents were of the most exciting nature. Sometimes the propellers would push their way ra-

CHAPTER XXVIII.

THE VOYAGE AND ITS TERMINATION.

"As you are aware the vessel is sinking, we have signalled the steamer to come and take us on board. Once you and your daughter are safe on the Dutchman's deck, we are in your power. Now, to be plain with you, I am urged to take steps to prevent that, and I have refused, in the belief that, for the sake of your own life and that of your daughter, you will engage to be silent as to the circumstances of the voyage. What do you say? Do you promise to be so?"

"If I did make you such a promise, would you rely on it?" said Bridgenorth, regarding him with a full and steady look.

"I would, Monsieur. I can read a man's character in his face, and I am convinced that whatever promise you make will be kept. Again what say you?"

"I promise," answered Bridgenorth, readily. "To no one on board the steamer will I or my daughter mention the cause of our being here."

"I am satisfied," returned the captain; "and you and Mam'selle shall be the first to leave the vessel."

The result of the conversation Rousell conveyed to Dubosque in a few brief words.

"Then am I foiled and baffled," hissed the Frenchman, clenching his teeth and swearing a furious oath, as he and the hunchback went forward to their old position at the bow.

The steamer was now at hand, and not a moment too soon, for scarcely had all on board reached her deck when the little vessel which had settled deep into the water gave a plunge forward, and sank almost silently out of sight.

At an early hour on the following morning the steamer landed them on the quay at Rotterdam. Fortunately Bridgenorth had a large sum of money in his possession, so that their situation was by no means serious, and while on board the steamer they had, to Helen's intense satisfaction, resolved to proceed up the Rhine in the hope of meeting Edwin Allerton and Ritchie Dunlop, and hearing tidings of Hermann.

As they were quitting the quay by one of the narrow bridges they saw Jaquin and Dubosque standing near as if watching their motions.

Bridgenorth's whole frame stiffened with anger at the sight, and drawing Helen's arm firmly within his own, he walked towards them.

"My promise has been kept to the letter, but know that the hour of forbearance is ended, and that of punishment will in due time come. We are on equal terms now, and I warn you that you have incurred my implacable resentment."

With an ironical bow and smile Dubosque lifted his hat.

"For the present," he observed "we are constrained to bid Monsieur and Mam'selle adieu. But we cannot go without assuring them that we shall meet again, for Victor Dubosque never relinquishes a pursuit or falls in any of his undertakings."

"And neither does Jasper Jaquin," said the hunchback, with a malicious grin. "Master Bridgenorth has learned by this time that my power is not to be despised. He thinks he has got the best of it just at present, but I can wait for my revenge, and will have it some day. You are not yet done with Jasper Jaquin."

"And you Mam'selle, are not yet done with Victor Dubosque," said the Frenchman, addressing Helen. "You hope, no doubt, to be united to your German lover; but know that I mean to seek him in the battlefield and kill him with my own hand. Then, when my presumptuous rival is effentially out of my way, I do not despair of securing the fair hand of Mam'selle."

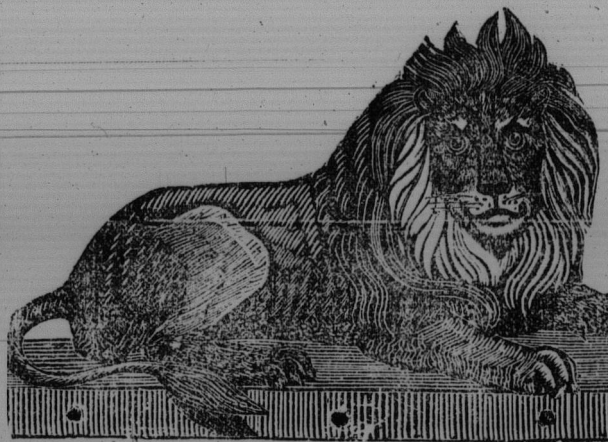

"Begone, wretches!" roared Bridgenorth, in scornful indignation. "Bid us of your hateful presence, or I shall call the police to rid us thereof."

"No need, Monsieur; we are going. Adieu—my, not adieu, but au revoir, that is more correct. Au revoir, Monsieur; Mam'selle Moir, au revoir!"

So saying, he bowed again with insulting politeness and turned away, followed by the hunchback, who at parting favored them with another diabolical grin.

"The Book Trade in Toronto. The correspondent of the London Advertiser says, 'Among the new books to be brought out by Adam Stevenson & Co., are Mr. Teine's ray and entertaining "Notes on England," and his no less remarkable work on English Literature. Lord Dufferin's "Letters from High Latitudes" will, no doubt, enjoy a large sale, as many will desire to be able to wait in the gubernatorial presence the delicate incense so flattering to His Excellency's genius as an author. As peers are coming out vigorously in the literary line, not a few may be attracted by Lord Oranthurst's "Astronomy and Geology Compared." His Lordship is not of the easy school of which His Grace of Somerset is a high priest, as all will see who follow out his careful and polished comparisons. Those whose fond of historic-religious controversies will do well to take up Dean Stanley's Lectures on the History of the Church of Scotland, and Dr. Rainey's vigorous reply thereto. More who are devotees of science alone will enter enthusiastically upon the hard reading in Huxley's and Lubbock's latest productions, in which we are told all about the anatomy of vertebrate animals and the manners and the customs of savages in prehistoric times. But there is a class, far too numerous, who delight in another kind of reading, and to them it may be whispered, as a great secret and a terrible temptation, that Charles Roade has another novel in the mill, and probably Messrs. Hunter, Rose & Co. will let us know the result ere long. That enterprising firm is getting fairly to work again, and will soon have ready three novels by Anthony Trollope, Mrs. Oliphant and George Macdonald, all of which will be highly appreciated by the public. The importers and publishers are hampered in their operations by the unsatisfactory condition of the tariff and the copyright law."

Mr. James Zimmerman, well known in Galt and vicinity, brother of the late Samuel Zimmerman, who was killed at the Desjardine's accident on the G. W. Railway fifteen years ago, has become a king among the railroad men of the west, and is likely to become a very wealthy man. His last operation was securing the contract for building the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad from Clam City to Traverse City.
