Principal's Report.

The close of another year brings with it the pleasing duty of submitting a Report of the Institution under our care.

No event of an unusual or startling character has occurred to mar or interrupt the general progress of the work during the past year. There has been a gradual and steady increase in prosperity. Our circle of friends has been extending and widening day by day. The need for such an Institution is now recognised as a work of necessity, and the support which has been accorded to it by our numerous subscribers throughout the Province and elsewhere, has been given cheerfully and with sincere wishes for its welfare.

While gratified by these marks of appreciation, it is our desire, with God's blessing, to strive after higher results, and to extend as far as possible the Institution's sphere of usefulness.

10. Susan Ann Jones,	11—	Indiantown, St. John.
11. Della Maud Greene,	7—	Portland, St. John.

One girl, Mary Jane Estey, was discharged on account of incapacity and being subject to epileptic fits. One big boy, George D. Morgan, absented himself after being a few weeks at school and did not return, and one of our old pupils, Sumner L. Jones, developed symptoms of consumption which is prevalent among his relatives, and Dr. Brown, after attending him for some time, considered it advisable for him to go home.

One boy and one girl, Edward M. Wheary and Isedore Ricker, have been removed, although they should have had a couple of years more schooling, the former to assist his parents on their farm at Keswick, and the latter to take her share of the household duties at her home in Turtle Creek.

Three new boys, Melborne D'Orsay, of Memramcook, the protege of Hon. D. L. Hanington, Humphrey Lutes, of Steeves' Mountain, Moncton, and Henry H. Cogle, of Bloomfield, have been admitted. The latter was somewhat past the usual age for admission, but being of a quiet disposition and anxious to learn, the point was waived in his favor, and the chance of improvement given him for the next two or three years.

Two bright little girls from Portland, St. John, Susan Ann Jones and Della Maud Greene, have also been admitted.

Applications for the admission of other children from Chatham, etc., have been received, and will be considered in due course.

The Hon. Mr. Hutchison applied for the admission of a young man, James Clark, who is in his employ. It was a matter of regret that application had not been made before, as his age precluded his admission.

Health.

The general health of our household has been good, and, with the exception of the boy referred to, very few cases occurred to need the services of our physician. The sanitary arrangements and healthy location of the house, with the care and supervision exercised over the pupils when at play, have no doubt contributed largely to the attainment of this desirable result.

When a child complains of feeling unwell no time is lost in summoning the Doctor, whose skill is usually effective in restoring it to health.

No epidemic invaded our household, and what few ailments there were, quickly yielded to the remedies applied.

Changes.

Mr. George E. Powers, who left us in May, 1887, to visit his father in England who was seriously ill at the time, returned in July last, and his services are again rendered available to the Institution.

Mr. W. O. Barnaby, a graduate of the Hartford Institution, was appointed assistant teacher last summer, and entered on his duties at the commencement of the session in September.

Instruction.

The general work of the schoolroom has gone on steadily and harmoniously, the curriculum of study being substantially the same as in the previous year.

Our endeavours have been mainly directed to the teaching of the English Language as being the basis of knowledge and the means whereby all other subjects can be more readily acquired. The ordinary subjects of an English education: Penmanship, Arithmetic, History, Geography and Drawing follow and take up the usually limited period on which we can rely for retaining our pupils at school, a common complaint of most Institutions of this character being, that the children are removed before their education is half completed.

We have, however, one studious and intelligent boy, Ernest L. Prince, who can write a good hand, compose a nice readable letter, write an essay on any ordinary subject, is fairly well advanced in Arithmetic, Scripture, History and Geography, can draw a pleasing picture, in either pencil or water color, and is now adding French and Latin to his other attainments. This boy is of an enquiring turn of mind, and naturally fond of study. He lost his hearing in infancy, and also the sight of one eye, by a severe attack of spinal meningitis. He has been with us since the opening of the Institution in 1882.

Parents' Procrastination.

As our Report will find its way into numerous households, who have but a limited acquaintance with the class of our fellow creatures for whom we are laboring, it is thought desirable to give as much information as we can, in the brief space at our disposal, respecting their condition, past and present, and the beneficial effects of education upon them, with the hope that parents of deaf mute children will see the importance of providing for their welfare, by securing an education for them, while age renders them eligible for admission.

The influence of friends is often needed to induce parents to part with their little ones, although they may know that the separation is necessary for the child's good, and often the very love of parents for their off-spring forms an obstacle difficult to surmount when offering them the advantages of the Institution, and urging their acceptance before it becomes too late.

One young man, the son of respectable parents, living on the north coast of the Province, was detained at home because he was useful on the farm. His usefulness prevented him getting an education.

Another intelligent young man, about thirty years of age, neglected in his childhood, but with ability enough to earn his own livelihood, now perceives the disadvantages under which he is placed, and seeks admission with us.

The consideration of these facts should prevent the recurrence of similar cases in future.

Historical.

Our Lord says, "The poor ye have always with you," and as mention is made of the deaf in some of the oldest records, there is no doubt that mankind was subject to this deprivation in the earliest ages.

While this was the case, however, no systematic effort was made to give them the benefits of education until about a century and a quarter ago.

The general avenues of learning were of course closed to them, and consequently they were deemed incapable, untrustworthy and hardly fit to be taught.

They were excluded from the possession of property, and as late as the reign of Queen Elizabeth, the oldest son of Viscount Buttevant was deprived of his inheritance because he was deaf and dumb.

A brighter day was dawning, and in 1754, the Abbe de l'Epee in Paris, Samuel Heinicke in Dresden, and in 1760, Thomas Braidwood in Edinburgh, started almost simultaneously to release those whose minds were

"Deaf and Sealed

In the strong prison house which silence keeps."

The labors of these early pioneers in the work soon attracted attention, and schools were gradually established in various countries.

Origin of the Alphabet.

The one-hand alphabet used on this continent is derived from a curious engraving, published in Madrid by Juan Pablo Bonet, a Spanish Monk in 1620. Some of the letters remain the same while others have been considerably modified and improved. Very little was done for the deaf in Spain after Bonet's death, the work apparently dying out, but 150 years after, his alphabet found its way to France, and also an able exponent in the hands of the Abbe de l'Epee.

From France Dr. Gallaudet brought it to America, where it is now in almost universal use.

In 1680 George Dalgarno, a Scotchman from Aberdeen, invented a "lettered hand," the letters of the alphabet being indicated by touching different portions of it. The vowels in Dalgarno's alphabet are the same as in the two-hand alphabet used in the Old Country, and the latter with various modifications was probably derived from it. In these modifications an attempt is made to represent the shapes of the capital letters.

An ungainly alphabet is used in Italy and Mexico, in which touching the fingers indicates some of the letters, while the others are formed by pinching the ears, nose, cheeks, etc. Besides its ungracefulness the time taken up by its use, would be considerably greater than by either Bonet or Dalgarno's alphabets.

The existence of these alphabets prove that attempts had been made to instruct the deaf at an early age, but these efforts were limited to certain exceptional and isolated cases, and while the results were good as far as they went, no broad and systematic effort was made to educate the deaf and dumb as a class, until the time of the Abbe de l' Epee in 1754.

The following incident induced him to take up the work: He was visiting at the house of a lady in Paris, who had two daughters deaf and dumb. While waiting for the lady, who was absent at the time of his call, he addressed himself to the two young ladies, but obtained no reply. He repeated his questions, but their eyes remained steadily fixed on their work. Not knowing how he had offended them, he arose to go, thinking them extremely uncivil. At this juncture their mother returned and explained to him that it was not incivility that had sealed her daughters' lips, but inability to comprehend his questions as they were both deaf and dumb. His sympathies went out at once for their affliction, and he resolved from that moment to devote his talents to their education.

"He knew that every language was a collection of signs as a series of drawings is a collection of figures, the representation of a multitude of objects, and that the deaf and dumb can describe everything by gestures, as you paint everything with colors, or express everything by words; he knew that every object had a form, that every form was capable of being imitated; that actions struck your sight, and that you were able to describe them by imitative gestures; he knew that words were conventional signs, and that gestures might be the same, and that there could therefore be a language formed of gestures as there was a language of words."

These ideas formed the basis of his teaching, and despite the numerous difficulties and obstacles which beset his path at every step, he worked steadily on, and was at last rewarded by seeing his pupils restored to society, from which they would have been forever debarred but for his unwearied patience and perseverance.

His success emboldened him to establish a school at Monmartre in Paris. A humble and unpretentious building in his day, but which has since been replaced by a magnificent palace with beautifully laid out gardens and shrubs and trees of all kinds, with splendid fountain ornamenting their centre.

Such was the commencement of the work, which has since spread to all countries. The system of teaching inaugurated by the Abbe de l' Epee has been very generally adopted on account of its adaptability to the needs of the deaf mute. A few institutions favor the oral method, which is usually called the German system, having been founded by Amman and Heinicke in Germany.

Statistics.

There are now about 400 institutions established for the education of deaf mutes in various countries of the world. Of these Germany heads the list with ninety institutions, the United States with seventy three, France with sixty seven, Great Britain and Ireland with forty six, Italy with thirty five, Austria and Sweden with seventeen each, Switzerland eleven, Belgium and Russia ten each, Spain and Norway seven each, Canada six, Denmark four, Australia and Netherland three each, Japan and Mexico two each, Portugal, New Zealand, Luxembourg and Brazil one each.

Information has just reached us that Canada has opened two new institutions recently, one at Winnipeg, Manitoba, under the charge of Mr. J. C. Watson, and the other at Victoria, British Columbia, under the charge of Mr. John Ashcroft.

There are therefore eight institutions now in Canada, which are educating 730 pupils.

While Germany has ninety institutions, which are educating 5,600 pupils, the United States with its seventy three institutions is educating upwards of 8,000 children.

The total number of pupils being trained by these 400 institutions is about 26,500, and over two thousand teachers are engaged in the work.

These statistics show conclusively that this deprivation is not limited to any race or country. The Caucasian, Mongolian and Ethiopian are alike subject to it. All races and all countries have their share of deaf mutes, as is evidenced by the provision which the civilized nations above referred to have made for their instruction.

We cannot presume that those nations not represented by institutions for deaf mutes have no deaf mutes, but merely that their state of civilization or educational system has not reached that philanthropic point where, provision having been made for those who hear, it stretches out a helping hand and takes within its sheltering arms the deaf and dumb who are often the last to be cared for or thought of in any scheme of intellectual progress.

It is somewhat remarkable that the high and cultured state of civilization presented by such countries as Great Britain, Germany, France, Russia, etc., does not tend in any way to the limitation of deafness or to the stamping out entirely of this deprivation, and were we to judge of its effect on the human race by the deaf mute population of these countries, or by the number of the educational institutions established for their benefit, we should say that so far from lessening this affliction it had a tendency to increase it.

Possibly the means used by a highly civilized nation to extend education among its people, to reach every class, and to bestow the privilege upon every individual member of it, may only show what really exists in other countries, but which is invisible on account of the dense ignorance prevailing respecting this class, and also on account of the utter indifference which barbarous or even semi-civilized nations feel for the welfare of those who are apparently deficient in intellect.

Increase of Deaf Mutes in New Brunswick.

There were 33,878 deaf mutes in the United States in 1880, giving one deaf mute to 1,500 of the general population, and this proportion also obtains in the Old Country.

In 1871 the general population in New Brunswick was 285,594, and the number of its deaf mutes 306. This gave one deaf mute to every 933 of the general population.

According to the census of 1881 there was a general population of 321,000, and its deaf mute population 401.

This gives the large proportion of one deaf mute to every 800 of the general population.

Whether this striking result is due to a large increase in infantile diseases, such as scarlet fever and spinal meningitis, or whether it is due to a greater tendency on the part of adult deaf mutes to marry deaf mutes, we have no data to determine.

Intermarriages of the Deaf.

Deaf mutism is evidently increasing in the Province, and the following facts should deter intelligent deaf mutes from seeking partners for life who are similarly afflicted to themselves.

There is no doubt that deafness is hereditary, and in certain cases parents will possibly, and in others probably, transmit it to their children.

From statistics collated by the Rev. W. W. Turner, it was shown that in 86 families with one parent a congenital deaf mute, one-tenth of the children were deaf, and in 24 families, with both parents congenital deaf mutes, about one-third were born deaf.

Parents who become deaf through accidental causes are not likely to have deaf children.

A percentage of the children of parents who were both born deaf will probably be deaf.

The children of parents where only one is deaf, but with deaf mute relations on either father or mother's side, will probably be deaf.

The largest proportion of deaf mute children are the result of marriages of congenitally deaf parents who have also deaf mute relatives.

The consideration of these facts should induce the friends and teachers of deaf mutes to use their influence in dissuading them from intermarriage.

Other Causes of Deafness.

The causes which are most prolific in the production of deafness are:

- I. Disease in infancy.
- II. Intermarriage of deaf mutes.
- III. Marriages of hearing and speaking people who have blood relationship.

The second of these I have already referred to.

As regards the diseases which cause deafness the following statistics will show those which have the greatest tendency to produce it:

Out of 1886 pupils educated in the Illinois Institution, one of the largest on this continent, 490 were born deaf, cerebro-spinal meningitis caused the deafness of 299, scarlet fever 135, brain fever 92, fever 63, typhoid fever 45, gathering in head 44, measles 42, inflammation of the brain 36, falls 35, colds 27, whooping cough 24, pneumonia 22, spasms 21, excessive use of quinine 15, diphtheria 12, mumps 7, and various diseases the rest.

In reference to the third cause of deafness: the relationship of parents, it is difficult to obtain correct information, although the example of royal personages in this particular might have made it fashionable.

Of the 490 born deaf in the above list, 76 were children of first cousins, 17 of second cousins, 9 of third cousins, and 9 of fourth cousins.

If exact information could be ascertained on this point, it would probably show that 8 or 10 per cent. of congenitally deaf children are due to this cause.

Our Proposed New Building.

Some unexpected difficulties having presented themselves in the course of our efforts to complete the necessary arrangements for the erection of our new building, the work, to our regret, has been considerably delayed. It is pleasant to report, however, that these obstacles have now been removed, and we have every prospect of being located in more commodious premises during the course of the present year.

The importance of this step is becoming more and more apparent every day. It is evident from the statements made in a previous part of this report that our Province has a high percentage of deaf mutes according to its population, really more than its share when compared with that of other countries. The fact that it increased from one in 933 to one in 800 of the general population during the decade of 1871 and 1881 is exceedingly suggestive of the future needs and wants of this section of our population.

Acknowledgments.

Grateful acknowledgments are hereby tendered to our numerous friends for the many favors received from them during the past year, and which have contributed in no small degree to the pleasure and improvement of our pupils, and to the general welfare of the Institution.

Our acknowledgments are especially due to our large circle of friends who have contributed so cheerfully from year to year towards the funds of the Institution. Their kind aid has materially assisted us in maintaining the Institution in a state of efficiency.

Our sincere thanks are again due to Dr. Brown for his valuable and gratuitous services. No disease of an epidemic character visited us during the year just closed. We had the usual number of coughs, colds, etc., but all rapidly recovered when under the Doctor's care. The boy with consumption referred to in an earlier part of this report is still able to walk about, but has not regained his usual strength.

Mr. George H. Davis merits our thanks for supplying the Institution with free medicines, and Dr. Torrens for dental services.

Numerous illustrated papers, The Maritime Farmer, Kansas Star, Deaf Mute Voice, pamphlets and magazines for children, and annual reports of Deaf and Dumb and other Educational Institutions have been received with pleasure. They are a valued source of instruction and amusement.

The Christmas and New Year holidays were spent very enjoyably by our pupils at the Institution, none of them going home at this time. Their Christmas tree was gaily decorated with all kinds of fruit; toys to amuse, in profusion, good and useful articles of clothing, the sweets of life in the shape of candies and confectionery, and some of Florida's best efforts ornamented its various branches, affording a pleasing contrast to the dark green of our native spruce.

The distribution of such an array of good things afforded much enjoyment as they were presented to the little hands already stretched forth to receive them.

In this connection our thanks are due to Messrs. W. H. Thorne, Manchester, Robertson & Allison, R. D. McArthur, W. L. Prince, C. M. Bostwick & Co., W. A. Porter, W. Kennedy and others.

The annual visit of our committee, represented by Mr. G. T. Whelpley and Mr. R. D. Forgan on New Year's day, was also a signal for rejoicing, expectation being ripe as to the contents of the various parcels and packages which Sir John Allen and other gentlemen had so kindly provided for them. It is needless to add that their expectations were not disappointed.

We cannot close this brief report without acknowledging the aid which our Local Legislature has extended to this Institution for several years past. Without it, we could not have carried on the work. We did not expect to realize and accomplish all we wished at once. We knew that "great events from small beginnings rise," and that to establish and build up a large and flourishing Institution for the deaf mutes of New Brunswick would be a work of time and patience, and probably beset with numerous difficulties.

An educated mute being questioned as to his knowledge of Divine things previous to instruction, replied, "I knew nothing about my soul and had no definite idea of God. I regard my former state as a dark chaos of nothing, with the great personage above as something dreadful and terrible, and my present enlightened state, as if a heavy and gloomy cloud had passed away and left the resplendent and glorious rays of the Gospel reigning in bright and unbroken sunshine."

If then an intellectual course of training can accomplish such results as these, and replace the dark clouds hovering over their untutored minds with rays of light, we may look forward to the future of this Institution with renewed hope and confidence, trusting that as our opportunities increase we shall be the means of conveying to all those with whom we come in contact the glad "tidings of great joy," which have been to all people.

Medical Report.

FREDERICTON, N. B.,
January 29th, 1889.

To the President and Directors of the Deaf and Dumb Institution at Fredericton:

GENTLEMEN,—

I beg respectfully to present this my Sixth Medical Annual Report of the above Institution.

I am happy to state that the past year has been attended with little sickness of any account.

In the month of May last one of the pupils, Sumner L. Jones, of St. John, was taken ill with what proved to be consumption. He was treated in the Institution while there was any hope of his ultimate recovery, after which, in the month of June, he was allowed to return to his home.

The sanitary condition of the School continues to be all that could be desired. The pupils are all healthy, cheerful and happy.

I have the honor to be, sirs,

Your obedient servant,

T. CLOWES BROWN, M. D.,
Physician to Deaf and Dumb Institution, Fredericton.
