NATIONAL POLICE MEMORIAL A pavilion honouring Canadian police officers killed in the line of duty will be erected in 1993-94, on a picturesque site behind Parliament Hill, overlooking the Ottawa River. It will serve as a viewing and resting area for the numerous visitors of the National Capital, and afford them the opportunity to pay their respects to those who gave their lives serving Canadians.

Police officers from across the country are encouraged to contribute towards the National Police Memorial Pavilion. To date $200,000 have been raised, but $300,000 are still needed to complete this monument paying tribute to the courage displayed in the preservation of justice.

Twenty-five percent of the 214 names of police officers that will appear on the monument were members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The Royal Canadian Mounted Police does have its own cenotaph in honour of Force members killed in the line of duty, erected at the RCMP Academy at Regina, Saskatchewan; but this Pavilion will be a reminder that as members of the largest Canadian police force, we share the pride and sentiments of other police organizations in this project.

CENTENNIAL RIFLES

In 1980, I acquired a pair of RCMP Centennial Rifles from a recently retired staff sergeant. Now, however, I am interested in selling these items to an interested party. The rifles are marked with serial numbers 668 and 669, respectively, and have never been fired. Both guns are still in their original packing sleeve with the original documents.

SNOWBIRDS REUNION — A FLYING SUCCESS!

It is difficult to say whether more and more RCMP members are retiring to pension, or if it is just that more and more ex-members are becoming weary of our Canadian winters and are learning about our Arizona reunion every Third Thursday in February (T.T.I.F.). Of course, the great coverage given the reunion by the RCMP Quarterly certainly attracted a lot of attention. Thanks!

On February 25, 1993, Russ Harper, Commandant of the American Legion Mesa Post # 26, welcomed 234 RCMP veterans and their guests to a wonderful buffet and fantastic evening held at the Legion, because the swelling number of guests simply outgrew the former Snowbirds' meeting place. Officer Tim Zehring, Crime Prevention Unit, Mesa City Police, addressed the gathering on community-based policing. President Ted Smith presented them both with engraved RCMP plaques to commemorate the event.

The 1994 RCMP Veterans Snowbird Reunion will be held Thursday, February 24, at the American Legion, 505 W., 2nd Avenue, Mesa, Arizona. Price $30.00 couple / $15.00 deposit to be sent to:

P.S.: Don't forget the "coffee klatch" held in the Little Mesa Cafe, 3929 E. Main Street, in Mesa, at 9:30 every second Saturday morning, starting November 13, 1993. Join us and find out what's going on in our lives and we'd like to know what's going on in yours!

Corps Sergeant Major Retires

by Supt R.G. Bourne, OC, Gander Sub-Division

November 5, 1993, marks the 60th anniversary of the birthday of Corps Sergeant Major E.B. Young. This date coincides with his retirement from the Force, concluding a remarkable career which has spanned over 41 years of service to Canada. During most of his service, he was directly or indirectly involved in recruit and in-service training, a role in which he had a profound influence on many thousands of members throughout their careers.

The quintessential Canadian, Young is of Chinese and Ukrainian extraction, having been given an anglicized adaptation of his father's name of Ing. He joined the Force in 1952, and as a constable, Young showed an exceptional level of leadership, dress and deportment during his recruit training and initial field service. These qualities did not go unrecognized, as he was to serve on the "Depot" Division [the Training Academy at Regina, Saskatchewan] drill staff for two years before being posted to "H" Division, Nova Scotia, and subsequently transferred to the drill staff at "N" Division, Rockcliffe, Ontario, after only five years service.

The world of recruit and in-service training was to remain paramount in his life for the next 20 years, a period which included transfers to "N" Division and "P" Division at Penhold, Alberta, where he was a drill sergeant. Suffice it to say, while in the capacity of drill sergeant, Young was instrumental in maintaining the high standards of excellence established at these divisions. Later, in Training and Development Branch, at Headquarters, Ottawa, he became involved in the planning and implementation of a number of significant policies and facilities. During this period, he succeeded in introducing safety glasses and ear protectors as required firearms training equipment. He researched, designed and, by 1969, implemented the first combat-style, practical firearms courses for both rifle and revolver across the Force. These accomplishments were followed in turn by the completion of the necessary research and design recommendations leading to the construction at "Depot" Division of two 16 firing-point indoor safety ranges for revolver and full bore rifle training, which were the most advanced, indoor, police firearms facilities in North America at that time. These ranges were constructed on the metric scale (50 and 100 metres respectively) and included a modern gas training facility, state of the art armourer shop, lecturing facilities and offices for training staff.

In 1971, C/S/M Young authored the first official RCMP manual of tactical training and introduced shotgun training into the recruit and field training programs. He was later seconded to the Canadian Penitentiary Services to conduct an evaluation of their arsenal facilities and equipment, and weapons training programmes; which resulted in major changes being introduced by that Department, including maintenance of their weaponry by RCMP armourers.

The most enduring memories of recruit training for most members are often those involving drill instruction, and may well include a recollection of a trepidatory audience with the ominous Sergeant Major to address various shortcomings regarding discipline, dress or deportment. It is these aspects which tend to dominate the conversation whenever former troopmates gather and reminisce about the good old days. In retrospect, for those who still harbour some lingering resentment for being paraded before a Sergeant Major, it should be remembered that recruit training divisions invariably possessed an insatiable appetite for volunteers to tend to stable management, property maintenance and an assortment of seemingly menial, but highly-essential barrack duties. As a drill instructor and later as Sergeant Major, Young earned the well-deserved respect of his subordinates as well as his superiors for his uncompromising standards regarding discipline, dress, decorum and personal integrity.

In 1972 he was promoted to the rank of Sergeant Major and transferred to "D" Division, Manitoba. Here, during 1973 — the RCMP Centennial Year — he was to organize and direct our centennial ceremonies and celebrations in that province.

In 1976, Young returned to Headquarters, where he served as Executive Officer to the Director of Organization and Personnel, in what was unarguably the largest and most challenging and influential directorate in the Force, at that time. Four years later, he returned to his first love, assuming responsibility for development of policies overseeing Induction Training, in what was later to become the Training Directorate.

The crowning glory in a career marked by prodigious accomplishments and excellence of service came on February 8, 1989, with his appointment to the prestigious rank of Corps Sergeant Major — the highest rank attainable by a non-commissioned officer in the RCMP. It was a singular honour, bestowed at the discretion of and upon the favour of the Commissioner of the RCMP, upon a most meritorious non-commissioned officer. As the Corps Sergeant Major, Young's responsibilities include the provision of advice on matters which are of special interest to him: protocol, ceremonial, dress policy, deportment, standards of drill and drill instructor training, as well as honours and awards. He is regularly called upon by officers across the Force to provide advice, information, and assistance on such matters.

C/S/M Young has authored an invaluable record of instruction protocol, detail on ceremonies, honours, drill and customs of the Force. He has, in effect, served as the custodian of the Force's traditions, particularly during times when these customs and values were judged by many as having little or no validity in the contemporary policing environment; and when asked about his function, he would sometimes describe his role as the "Keeper of the Myth". Today, there is evidence of a growing resurgence of interest in these time-honoured conventions, not only within the RCMP but other police services as well. Since his appointment as C/S/M, Young has been a much sought-after advisor and lecturer on matters of protocol and ceremonial. He assists in the organization of state events and funerals for numerous police services, and frequently works with the Secretary of State, various military authorities and regiments, as well as the Chancellery at Government House.

A year ago, C/S/M Young was among the guests at a formal Government House luncheon held in honour of Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II, during her state visit to Canada. He felt particularly honoured to have been seated at Her Majesty's immediate left, adjacent to Their Excellencies, the Right Honourable R.H. Hnatyshyn and Mrs. Hnatyshyn. The honour was indicative of the high regard of His Excellency for C/S/M Young in view of his invaluable contribution over the years in matters of national honours, ceremony and state protocol.

It was a direct result of C/S/M Young's initiative, with the support of Commissioner N.D. Inkster, that the RCMP Corps Ensign was designed and authorized through the issuing of Letters Patent by the Governor General, in 1991. As a member of the executive of the Heraldry Society of Canada, C/S/M Young was particularly well qualified to work in conjunction with the Chief Herald of Canada, ensuring that the Corps Ensign and Divisional Badges reflected long-established heraldic standards, practices and the law of arms. The Ensign was proudly displayed, along with our national flag, before thousands of cheering Toronto Blue Jay fans at the Sky Dome and millions of television viewers across the nation by an RCMP Flag Party during the 1992 World Series, at Toronto, Ontario. The RCMP Corps Ensign will serve as a permanent legacy and tribute to Corps Sergeant Major E.B. Young and his dedication and loyalty to the Force throughout his career.

Corps Sergeant Major Young's honours include: the RCMP Long Service and Good Conduct Medal with Gold Clasp and Stars, the Queen Elizabeth II Silver Jubilee Medal, and the 125th Anniversary of the Confederation of Canada Medal. He has recently been admitted to the Most Venerable Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem by the Governor General of Canada. As well, he has been invested as an Officer in the Military and Hospitaller Order of St. Lazarus of Jerusalem. ■

RCMP Monitors Former Yugoslavia

by C.B. Evans, Assistant Editor

On April 27, 1992, the Secretary of State for External Affairs, the Honourable Barbara MacDougall, and the Solicitor General of Canada, the Honourable Doug Lewis, announced that Canada would provide 30 civilian police monitors from the RCMP to the United Nations peacekeeping operation in the Balkans Crisis. Civilian police personnel from 21 countries, including Norway, Ireland, and other Scandinavian countries, were deployed in certain demilitarized areas designated as United Nations Protected Areas (UNPAs), where all armed forces would be either withdrawn or disbanded. — Ed.

Peacekeeping commitment

Canada had been among the first countries to call for United Nations presence in the Balkans to help bring stability to the various republics of the former Yugoslavia. This deployment ensured that Canada was contributing to the key military and police components of the United Nations Protection Force (UNPROFOR). In May 1992, UNPROFOR deployed a 13,000-member force primarily in Croatia. The role of UN troops is to ensure that the areas remain demilitarized and that all residents are protected from armed attack. Canada had already committed one of the largest contingents to the 31-nation force, with 1,200 Canadian Forces personnel operational in the region of Daruvar. The RCMP contingent would operate in the same general area of Croatia as Canada's military contingent.

CIVPOL Mandate

Originally, the role of the UN civilian police (CIVPOL) was to monitor local police in the performance of their duties without discriminating against persons of any nationality, to prevent the abuse of peoples rights, to assist humanitarian efforts in the delivery of aid and to create the conditions of peace and security required for negotiations of an overall political settlement of the Yugoslav crisis. They would also play an important role in the voluntary return of displaced persons.

The Canadian CIVPOL (CANCIVPOL) mandate was to last for a one-year period, but only C/Supt. O'Reilly and Supt. Lalancette were to stay for the entire year. (Actually, nine members stayed for one year.) The 28 other RCMP members, representing a wealth of experience from protective policing, drug enforcement and municipal and provincial patrolling, would be deployed in relatively peaceful UNPAs, areas at best considered unstable, where UN authorities would be looking out for their best interest. They would be rotated out and replaced after six months. Twenty CANCEVOPOL members were assigned to the Western Sector of Croatia (at Daruvar, Pakrac, Grubisno and Okucani). Eight were needed in the Eastern Sector, and were subsequently deployed to Erdut, Darda, Ilok and Bobota.

In Canada, police officers are armed, but CIVPOL monitors are not. Because their role is to be there in support of local police who are armed, and because their role is essentially peacekeeping, the use of weapons is deemed unnecessary.

Assignments

C/Supt. M. O'Rielly, contingent Commander, and Supt. J. Lalancette, were in charge of the RCMP contingent. C/Supt. O'Rielly also assumed the position of Chief of Staff of Canadian Civilian Police (CANCEVOPOL) in Sarajevo, at UNPROFOR Headquarters. As Chief of Staff, he was to assist the CIVPOL Commissioner in the overall coordination and operation of all civilian police contingents in the UNPAs. UNPROFOR Headquarters in Sarajevo had to be evacuated and relocated to Belgrade, the former capital of Yugoslavia, due to the intense fighting. It was moved again due to political pressures and the fact that the UN had placed strong economic sanctions against the Serbian part of the former country for their part in the conflict.

On March 2, 1993, C/Supt. O'Rielly was appointed UNPROFOR Commissioner by the Secretary-general of the United Nations, replacing C/Supt. Kjell Johansen (Norway). This is the first time that a Canadian has been appointed to this position. C/Supt. O'Rielly had participated in two RCMP United Nations peacekeeping missions — in 1989-90, with the United Nations Transition Assistance Group (UNTAG) as Deputy Commander of the RCMP Namibian Contingent in Africa, as well as District Commander of 300 CIVPOL personnel. He faces a daunting challenge and will be responsible for controlling and managing a force of over 600 CIVPOL personnel dispersed throughout the former Yugoslavia.

Supt. Lalancette was assigned to Zagreb as CIVPOL Liaison Officer between Croatian police authorities and the civilian police contingents in Zagreb.

On duty in new surroundings

The CIVPOL component of UNPROFOR or any UN peacekeeping mission is unique in that upon entering the mission, police officers relinquish their chain of command, leadership roles and rank structure, to the leadership and management styles of police officers of higher or lower rank, who have been appointed to management positions within their mission area. Rank and position status at home shifts from supervisor to subordinate and vice versa. These changes cause culture shock, which is in addition to the trauma of having to adjust to new surroundings and working conditions.

The RCMP, with its established reputation for law enforcement and its experience in Namibia four years before as civilian police monitors, were to play a central role. Because CIVPOL has no police officer status, anything that needs to be investigated is carried out by local police, under most circumstances accompanied by one of the CIVPOL representatives. In situations where the human rights of individuals are blatantly violated, CIVPOL monitors are responsible for reporting to the UN authority who would then take it up with the local authorities.

During the course of the hostilities, the professionally-trained local police were soon supplemented with militia, and monitoring became confusing because it was difficult to determine the legitimate police. CIVPOL monitors soon found themselves investigating criminal offenses, but without executive police powers of enforcement (they are peacekeepers), they had to pass the information to the local police for follow up.

The humanitarian agencies of UN High Commission for Refugees (UNHCR) responsible for refugees, and the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) responsible for the care and treatment of prisoners, have very few representatives in the UNPAs. Often they arranged negotiations for prisoner exchanges and refugee movements, but were unable to show at the given time. CANCEVOPOL monitors were quick to recognize the need for CIVPOL involvement in these situations and took it upon themselves to help these people under trying and dangerous circumstances.

In June 1992, CIVPOL were called to monitor an exchange of prisoners. At the appointed time and place, the prisoners arrived under heavily armed guard. Neither ICRC nor UNHCR had arrived. Rather than see the prisoners, who were obviously in weakened conditions, be returned to prison, a CANCEVOPOL monitor, with assistance of an interpreter, negotiated for three hours to gain an agreement on this exchange of prisoners. The RCMP member was able to send three prisoners to the hospital and gained permission to photograph those who had been tortured. In addition, he persuaded the guards that the interpreter, who they considered the enemy, would be protected by him at any cost.

On another occasion, CANCEVOPOL monitors negotiated their way into the Bejlovar military prison, with the assistance of the RCMP Liaison Officer, to interview 43 prisoners of war. On a second visit, guards were persuaded to allow photographs to be taken of prisoners who had been beaten and tortured, and to allow several of the older prisoners to be released on their own recognizance and returned to their families (pending their trials for crimes against the republic). The resulting comprehensive report was sent through the chain of command to

by Cst. B. Flanagan, Public Information Officer
RCMP Contingent (UNPROFOR)

During the summer of 1992, Sarajevo and the airport were opened for humanitarian reasons after another period of fierce fighting plaguing former Yugoslavia since 1991. Sarajevo was by then a war zone where three warring factions positioned in and around the city and the airport constantly bombarded the inhabitants with sniper activity, mortar shelling, and heavy artillery fire from surrounding hills and roaming tanks.

CIVPOL's function is to provide security in and around the airport and thus to ensure safe passage of humanitarian goods to the people trapped within the city. The warring parties do not want the civilians to leave because they offer the only tool they have for bargaining when it comes time to negotiate either the exchange of prisoners or those killed in the fighting. On more than one occasion, opponents have threatened to terrorize the city if they do not get what they want — this usually means that the regular shelling would be intensified, inevitably raising the death and injury toll of the civilian population.

In June 1992, six RCMP members equipped with flak jackets and helmets volunteered for rotating tours of duty to Sarajevo Airport to perform a variety of tasks. Their work consisted of negotiating and controlling prisoner and displaced persons exchanges, securing inner perimeters, examining cargo for contraband and processing people in need of medical treatment. One of them, Reg. No. 26720, Sgt. J.F. Hull was appointed Chief Monitor. He was instrumental in forming close liaisons between all the parties to ensure negotiations ran smoothly under the most adverse conditions (many of which civilian police had never seen or heard about before).

For his efforts and outstanding duties, Sgt. Hull was presented with the Force Commander's Commendation by CIVPOL Commissioner K. Johansen.

Not in a lifetime of police work in Canada would anyone find conditions such as the ones endured in the former Yugoslavia during that summer of 1992, and in Sarajevo which suffered the fiercest fighting of any place in this former republic. ■ support a UN protest. An RCMP member also spearheaded the tracing program, whereby relatives of people could be located through the efforts of CIVPOL.

Another RCMP member initiated the visitation program, whereby friends and family members from both sides who had been separated during the war could, by pre-arrangement with the controlling authorities, meet for a set period of time under the control of CIVPOL and local police. This program is very successful in Sector West.

In other cases, CANCEVOPOL brought together families who had been separated during the war, in most instances at great risk to their own safety.

Conditions

Members of CIVPOL are not only subject to the fight occurring daily, but also to living conditions that, as a result of the war, are below acceptable standards. They are forced to travel to work in armoured personnel carriers for their protection.

CIVPOL stations have been established, but with no heat or electricity, no supplies, office equipment or vehicles with which to perform the tasks. Fighting, house burnings and vicious crimes against people are daily occurrences. Each station has one vehicle; it is very frustrating for CIVPOL because they cannot monitor the police except on foot. Moreover, 47% of monitors in the stations are unable to communicate in the language of the mission, and 43% cannot drive a vehicle. In any other situation, the language facility could have been considered a barrier, but given the nature of the conflict, it is probably better if CIVPOL monitors don't speak either language — this way it cannot be assumed that they are taking sides. This is why in the selection of RCMP members for this duty, language was not an overriding requirement.

Accommodations for the members are provided through rented houses or rooms in the locations where they are working. Costs are very reasonable in the smaller towns and quite expensive in the larger centres, such as Zagreb. Many monitors live in isolated communities and endure the same living conditions, power failures and shortages of food as the local people lacking many of the everyday amenities. Food, for the most part, would be deemed unfit for human consumption by our standards.

Besides the obvious physical hardship, members are under incredible mental stress. They are trying to understand different cultures and are working with unfamiliar people who only want to fight each other. Maintaining impartiality is very difficult for monitors in the face of many injustices and atrocities committed by both sides — it is of vital importance for them to remain completely neutral and not to take, or give the appearance of taking sides.

Although they are working under very difficult conditions, members are usually relatively safe as long as they are cautious and follow basic safety procedures. The Canadian Battalion has provided extraordinary assistance and support to all our members.

Making a difference

The Canadian policing scene is one envied around the world, and CANCEVOPOL monitors very quickly set to work to help many of the station commanders acquire some supervisory experience, to organize the station monitors into some semblance of order. An increase in house burnings and threats against people to leave their homes caused an increase in the number of refugees and displaced people who came to CIVPOL stations for assistance.

In Sarajevo, some RCMP members became chief negotiators in prisoner exchanges, body exchanges and the general processing of refugees. Negotiations were difficult because CIVPOL had to first negotiate a cease fire between warring groups and persuade refugees, through interpreters, that it was safe for them to leave the security of the buses. These highly volatile situations called for understanding, courage, tolerance and a willingness to be involved — on several occasions, the soldiers were intoxicated, argumentative, and unwilling to cooperate. On many occasions, CANCEVOPOL had to place themselves between soldiers and interpreters, whom the soldiers wanted to shoot.

There were several similar instances reported where RCMP monitors used tact, firmness and sound judgement and were able to cultivate good working relations with local authorities and governing bodies, without whom the programs would have failed. The difficulties are compounded because the guidelines and restriction of movements are as changeable as the guards who control the checkpoints. Danger exists because of treachery, hate, mistrust and suspicion harboured by the warring group. In all situations, confusion among the ordinary people created fear and easily exploded into violence, which the members had to control. Members must use common sense and innovation to resolve problems where there are no written rules.

CANCEVOPOL members were the driving force in programs to facilitate the processing and assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons, an on-going exchange of letters and parcels between relatives trapped on both sides, visits to family members and the graves of loved ones and exchanges of prisoners and bodies. These programs are operating successfully because CIVPOL monitors are now tasked with the responsibility, backed by additional people supplied by UN humanitarian agencies. CANCEVOPOL was instrumental in launching the involvement of CIVPOL in the Refugee Program, motivated by the necessity to take action out of respect for human dignity. Compassion for the suffering compelled them to become involved at great personal risk to their own safety in the face of great adversity.

Workload increased

In September 1992, fifteen additional RCMP members were sent to Bosnia-Herzegovina and Croatia to increase the number of RCMP-UNPROFOR monitors from 30 to 45. They were part of a 120-person additional deployment of police by the United Nations, and are expected to stay with UNPROFOR for eight months.

Conclusion

Although most members have access to telephones and can communicate with their families and colleagues, news from home is always considered a real treat. People are encouraged to write to their friends and colleagues serving in Bosnia-Herzegovina and Croatia. Mail should be addressed as follows: Name, rank, Canadian Police Contingent (RCMP), UNPROFOR-CFPO 5003 via Belleville, Ontario K0K 3R0.

Because the presence of foreign police authorities in monitoring roles seems to be the way of the future, civilian police organizations may become even more involved in peacekeeping. The RCMP's high standards of selection and training has made its participation in UN peacekeeping efforts very much sought after — the dedication and commitment of RCMP members has been exemplary during their mission in the former Yugoslavia.

Commissioner Inkster's comments about the Force's involvement in Namibia a few years ago are still relevant, "I would not be surprised that this is not a trend of the future, where police officers will participate in peacekeeping operations simply because peace officers are seen as less threatening towards one's sovereignty, because law enforcement is a general practice around the world and for that reason, we may well see a shift, given that other conditions are right, towards law enforcement peacekeepers as opposed to military." The RCMP's role in the Balkans Crisis will probably not be the last chance it will have to uphold not only a long Force tradition but also a long and honourable Canadian tradition. ■

Reunited

by Sgt. T.A. Cameron, Station Commander, CIVPOL Station
Grubisno Polje, Croatia

The following is an account of actions taken by UNPROFOR CIVPOL in returning two young Serbian children from Banja Luka to their parents in Grubisno Polje. The sincere gratitude of the family was expressed in a personal letter from the mother, and in a school essay by the daughter. The three Canadians referred to are: Sgt. Terry Cameron, Cpl. Jacques Thériault and Cst. Tom Witzke. — Ed.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Zoric came to Grubisno Polje Station and, through our interpreter Tatjana Samardzija, requested CIVPOL assistance in locating their children, 17-year-old Dragan and 11-year-old Dragana, who they had not seen for over one year. The children had been sent away for their safety during the war. Now that the fighting had moved to Bosnia-Herzegovina, they did not know where the children were and were feared dead. We were their last hope of finding the children.

Our investigation revealed that the children were in Banja Luka, in Serbian-controlled territory, where UNPROFOR were not overly welcome. We were able to contact them by SATCOM telephone, courtesy of the Dutch Signals Corps attached to the Argentine Battalion. When the Zorics were advised that their children were well and safe, they requested our assistance in getting them back to Grubisno Polje.

Although problems were anticipated in getting our members into Banja Luka and getting back out with the children, we decided to attempt the mission anyway. Through a series of SATCOM telephone calls, arrangements were made to have the children ready for pickup.

On July 23, 1992, Cpl. Thériault and Cst. Witzke travelled to Banja Luka. Once into Serbian territory, they had to pass through many military and police checkpoints. On several occasions, Serbian authorities were being difficult, but through persistence and gifts of several large bags of BBQ chips, passage was usually cleared. On one occasion, Serbian forces fired in the air as the car drove past, in a typical form of harassment. The rest of the trip was made with great haste: the children were picked up at their aunts' house and returned (at top speed) directly to their parents' house in Grubisno Polje, with no real difficulties encountered.

The reunion was as emotional for the family as for the rescuers. The Zorics invited us to join the celebrations. We learned that Dragana's 12th birthday was coming up the following Saturday, and we were invited to attend. We were not able to buy a birthday card, so we made one up and put money in it. At the party, we met some of the Zoric's neighbours and relatives. It was a very special party.

Even if we did not accomplish anything else during our six months tour here, this one happy ending would make it all worthwhile. It was clear that the three "Canadians" would never be forgotten in the Zoric household.

One Adventure of Mine

Though I am a little girl, I have experienced some awful and some cheerful adventures. I picked out one true story.

Everything started when the war started in Grubisno Polje. When the shooting started, my parents took my brother Dragan and me to our grandparents in Bosnia for our safety. There was peace in Bosnia. But in Grubisno Polje and the surroundings, shells were falling. We were concerned for our Dad and Mom, we did not know if they were alive and in good health, and phones did not work for some time.

In October, my uncle registered me in a school. I finished the fifth class there and I found new friends. With the friends, I was more cheerful.

The fighting stopped in Grubisno Polje a few months after the UN came. But then the war in Bosnia-Herzegovina broke out. Our parents wanted to come and pick us up, but the roads were closed. Shells were landing near the village where we were.

We had all thought there was going to be peace, but unfortunately we were wrong. One day, a storm was coming. Lightning was flashing and at the same time shells started to fall over the village. At the beginning we thought it was thunder, but we were convinced otherwise when one shell landed in our grandmother's backyard. We became very frightened and the next day, we went to Banja Luka. A week later we heard the happy news that Dad and Mom had asked the UN to help and come and get us. On July 23, the telephone rang and the UN callers advised they would come in two hours. A few minutes later, friends from our street came to bid farewell. We were frightened in a way, but we were also happy. We did not trust them because they were strangers. After a few hours, the UN arrived and they said we were going home. I cried but I did not know if it was because I was leaving or because I was happy. When we arrived home, I did not know whether it was a happy dream or reality. We were all crying because we were happy to be together again.

The beginning of this story seemed horrible, but the end was cheerful.

Dragana Zoric

This is a sincere thanks to the UNPROFOR Authorities

We are taking advantage of the opportunity to say thanks to the UNPROFOR Authorities (CIVPOL Grubisno Polje, Canadian Police, Specially to Tom, Jacques and Terry) for making it possible for our children to come back home from Banja Luka.

When the war in Croatia started, like other parents we were forced to send the children to Bosnia-Herzegovina, where it was safe, and at least not to have them suffer the atrocities of war in Croatia. But, as the war started there too, we were forced to ask UNPROFOR to help us, because we were very happy when UNPROFOR arrived here in Croatia. We do not have enough words to express our gratitude for that success in these hard times, when the humanity and care for one unfortunate family in Croatia won.

In that situation you exposed your lives, not thinking of your families that are far away from you, and they want you back as much as we wanted our children back. We want the whole world and other families that have the same problem, to hear about that humane gesture. (...) Sincere regards to Jacques, Terry and Tom.

Police Service Dogs On Tour

by H.H. Ruitenbeck,
Assistant Liaison Officer, The Hague, Netherlands

S/Sgt. G.G. Radke, head trainer, RCMP Police Dog Service Training Centre, Innisfail, Alberta, and Sgt. R.J. Sheppard, RCMP Headquarters Training Research Unit, Ottawa, Ontario, visited the United Kingdom, Hungary and the Netherlands from February 21 to March 12, 1993, observing police dog training procedures and facilities in those countries.

Their tour commenced with a week in London, observing the training procedures and facilities. Next they travelled to Budapest, to see how they handled police dog training in that country. The last stop was the Netherlands, where they spent the third week of their hectic tour. One of the highlights of the tour was their visit to the Municipal Police Training Centre in Rotterdam, to study the science of odour/scent detection.

The technique goes something like this: a suspect drops a gun, knife or some personal item(s) at the scene of a crime. The items are retrieved, individually wrapped in a piece of special preserving cloth and placed in air-tight containers. Later, when suspects are brought in, each one is asked to handle a small metal pipe, on which their scent is collected. Each handled pipe is wrapped in preserving cloth and individually sealed in air-tight containers. Next, the metal pipes containing the odour of the suspect or suspects are arranged in a row at the edge of a table. A specially-trained dog is then allowed to smell a piece of cloth containing the odour from an item retrieved at the crime scene. If the dog detects a match between the scent on the cloth and one of the pipes he will indicate this by some predetermined sign, such as a bark or sitting.

(L-R): S/Sgt. Radke, Adjudante J.C. de Bruin and Adjudante J. Sterk, Rotterdam Training Facility, and Sgt. Sheppard.

This particular technique has proven extremely successful and highly beneficial to the judicial authorities as well as the police in the Netherlands, and is currently being studied for its evidence and criminal identification potential by the Force. ■

— Asian Recruiting — Coordinated Law Enforcement Unit

by Sgt. J.B. Connolly

In 1974, the Coordinated Law Enforcement Unit (CLEU) was formed in British Columbia. The concept was to utilize personnel from the local RCMP and municipal police forces in Joint Forces Operations (JFO) in the Vancouver and Victoria areas. Investigations assigned to these units would focus on major criminals whose activities were multi-jurisdictional in nature and often beyond the resources of the local police. Manpower and equipment would also be available to assist local and foreign law enforcement agencies.

Nearly 20 years later, the CLEU/JFO mandate remains the investigation of organized and major crime. To fulfil this mandate, we must continually update equipment, train personnel and employ people to meet the changing needs of a culturally varied population.

By 1992, it was apparent CLEU/JFO was not appropriately staffed to investigate major crime within the Asian communities in British Columbia. Existing personnel did not have sufficient linguistic skills or knowledge of the Asian culture to police these communities adequately.

The CLEU Joint Management Team was presented a proposal to hire, as "Provincial Special Constables", people with Asian backgrounds who could speak, read and write one or more of the predominant languages within the Asian community. Previous law enforcement experience was also important. The proposal was accepted and a search for suitable candidates was undertaken. Advertisements were placed in local Chinese newspapers and as a result 150 applications were received. Many of the applicants did not meet the criteria; however, some applications were from individuals with doctorate degrees in various branches of academia.

Ten candidates were selected for full assessments. Standard security reviews were completed in Canada and in Hong Kong with the valuable assistance of the Royal Hong Kong Police (RHKP). Exhaustive interviews and testing identified three candidates as having all the qualifications required by CLEU.

On January 4, 1993, Ivan Ho, Sai-leung (former member of the RHKP), Philip Tsang, Chiu-ping (former member of the RHKP), and Bosco Lee, Kwai-kwan (former member of the Independent Commission Against Corruption, Hong Kong), were sworn in as Special Provincial Constables under the British Columbia Police Act, by Mr. P. Engstad, Director, CLEU. They were enrolled in the Justice Institute of British Columbia, at Vancouver, for basic training in federal and provincial law enforcement procedures and statutes.

On April 16, all three graduated at the top of their class. They received their Identification Cards and British Columbia Police badges at a ceremony at the Justice Institute attended by their friends, relatives and classmates, followed by a luncheon with instructors and CLEU personnel. The three Special Constables have been posted to CLEU/JFO and are currently involved in criminal investigations within the Asian community of British Columbia.

As far as it is known, this was the first project undertaken by a law enforcement agency to specifically recruit personnel with Asian cultural and language capabilities. If successful, it has the potential to foster greater understanding between cultures and enhance the level of police service provided to the Asian-Canadian community. ■

The Voice

Whilst policing Dawson City (Yukon) — or what was left of it in the late twenties — I was talking to an old fireman, when the local fighting drunk entered Front Street. "Here he comes," said the fireman. "You haven't had long to wait. He's floored many a man!"

I had to act immediately, so I stepped out into the road and announced in my loudest, clearest, most authoritative voice: "JACK, I AM GOING AROUND THE BLOCK, AND IF YOU ARE STILL ON THE STREET WHEN I RETURN, I WILL ARREST YOU AND TAKE YOU TO THE BARRACKS!"

To my surprise, and relief, he had dissappeared by the time I returned. The voice never failed. It always worked for me on the many occasions I had run-ins with Jack, including the time I had to come to the sergeant's aid when Jack was getting the better of him in a tussle. In this instance, as always, the voice worked.

Certainly, the voice, if you are blessed with the right kind, can be a highly effective play for a policeman. It provides the perpetrator with an excuse to back away without having to resort to using force and can diffuse a potentially explosive situation.

Submitted by Reg. No. 10376, ex-Cst. S.T. Gibson, who served with the Force from December 27, 1927, at Regina (Saskatchewan), Dawson City, and took his discharge at "E" Division (British Columbia) on December 26, 1931. — Ed.

The RCMP Honour Roll

The Force's honour roll of members killed on duty appeared in the first "RCMP Quarterly" magazine Vol. 1, No. 1, July 1933. Updates appeared in Vol. 18 No. 4, Vol. 29 No. 2, and Vol. 49 No. 4, bringing the list of members who had given their lives in service to the Force, and Canada, up to the year 1984. It is time for another update, to remember members who have lost their lives in the performance of their duty. The complete honour roll of the Force appears hereunder. — Ed.

If only we had been told..!

Senior Constable Hower of Nagambie reminds us that people are quick to call the police when things go wrong, but some overlook calling when things have been put right. He cites the case of a Mr. Hugh Forrest of South Melbourne, who was listed as a missing person in 1950, after being last seen in Wodonga. The case was never cleared.

Until, that is, a Patrol Licence Inquiry last year turned up an identical name with a Nagambie address.

Nagambie police visited the address and spoke to the female occupant, who confirmed that yes, the licence holder was the "missing" Mr. Forrest and that he had died just a few weeks previously.

It transpired that Mr. Forrest had reappeared shortly after the original report had been made. Such was the joy of the reunion, no one thought to tell the police!

Musical Ride on Ice

by ex-Cpl. L.V. Moxham

My brother and I joined the Force November 15, 1932, and were assigned to "C" Squad at Depot Division (Now referred to as RCMP Training Academy — Ed.) at Regina, Saskatchewan. Our introduction to equitation, or horseback riding, was a very new experience for many of us, and the thought of being part of the Musical Ride never entered our minds.

Early in January 1933, volunteers were solicited from "B", "C", "D", "E", and "F" Squads to participate in a special skating exhibition based on the manoeuvres performed on horseback by the Musical Ride.

Approximately 20 of us readily volunteered, seeing it as a welcome diversion from the every-day foot drill and other recruit training.

Our sergeant major at that time was L.J. Sampson — a great friend to all recruits. He supported the program and attended many of the daily practices held at the Regina Stadium Rink. After many weeks of practice, we performed in red serge each night and twice on Saturday during the Regina Ice Show. At that time, Evelyn Chandler was the star attraction of the ice show, which was the forerunner of the present-day Ice Capades. The daily practices were directed by a member of the office staff of Depot Division who had experience in organizing such events and was an excellent skater himself.

Back row: Csts J. Peer, D.H. Minor, A.J. Lily, A.E. Bridges, F.W. Wilson, C.G. Malcolm, L.V. Moxham and J.L. Dubé.

The author retired from the Force on December 26, 1952. Names of members shown in the photograph are correct to the best of his recollection..Ed. ■

Cheek..!

From Echo District comes a report of a juvenile offender who is quick on his feet — literally and figuratively.

Young Paul got word that marijuana plants were growing in a certain back-yard. So, after school, he sneaked into the yard to search for his "pot" of gold, but came up empty-handed.

On taking his leave, Paul noticed that the back door was unlocked, so he decided to take a look inside. He also decided to take a camera that had been left on a table. At this stage, the occupants arrived home, and Paul and the camera disappeared unseen over the back fence.

The occupants immediately realised what had happened and called the police. But, before they arrived, Paul knocked on the front door and politely informed the occupants that he had left his schoolbag inside and that he would return their camera if they would give him back his bag!

Under his exemplary leadership, the Force has become a national law enforcement model in the elimination of discrimination as well as in the access to its ranks and its services to a culturally diverse public. Instituted in 1990, these awards are the highest that the Government of Canada bestows in this area. MCC seeks to promote appreciation of Canadian Citizenship, encourage active participation of Canadians in all aspects of society and help break down the barriers that prevent many Canadians from fully exercising their citizenship rights and responsibilities.

YOUTH AND POLICE Many members feel that it is important to have a positive influence on the youth of their community and this is why Cpl. A.B. Porter, NCO i/c Reston Detachment, volunteered his time and talents as a driver and chaperon for the Virden Army Cadet Corps # 2528 during their road trip to Fort Still, Oklahoma, in 1991. Porter, who has two children in the corps, received special permission to wear the Review Order of dress when on parade during the trip. The cadets had a great time and were welcomed with open arms wherever they went. The trip was such a success that a follow-up trip to the U.S. Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs was conducted in 1992, which met with equal success.

In 1993, a third road trip was planned and carried out to Minneapolis/St. Paul, Minnesota. During this trip, they were treated again to the generous hospitality of the U.S. National Guard and visited the National Armed Forces Cemetery and the Vietnam Memorial. Everywhere the cadets went, people were impressed by their excellent deportment, manners and discipline, which reflected positively on Canadian youth as well as the Force.

DRUG AWARENESS During Drug Awareness Week, November 15-21, 1992, Shamattawa Detachment, in conjunction with local nursing station staff and the First Nations Reserve collaborated on a campaign to discourage solvent abuse. This year's campaign, with the motto "If you can't drink it, you can't sniff it", was highly successful. Shamattawa residents were invited to attend an opening ceremony at the Community Band Hall, with the opening prayer conducted by Elder Allan Redhead, followed by talks by Chief Ken Beardy and his four-member council. Police and nursing staff conducted seminars outlining negative effects of solvent abuse and showed the video "Sniffing Stinks". The Shamattawa Youth Group assisted by preparing posters and banners as well as the food and beverages.

During that week, more than a dozen seminars were held at the Abraham Beardy Memorial School. Each class was visited and the topic of solvent abuse extensively discussed. Workshops were set up on the most abused substances — gas, nail polish and plastic wood — and on a variety of related subjects such as solvent addiction, health problems, sniffing and the Law, what to do when your friends are sniffing and alternatives to sniffing. Many children, parents and community members were invited to share their thoughts and opinions on solvent abuse.

The event was a great success and follow-up sessions are currently under way. Police and nursing staff have continued their work by preparing a play depicting a gas sniffer getting into trouble with the Law and ultimately ending up at the local nursing station for medical treatment. Also, a bigger and better Drug Awareness Week is being planned for 1993 to continue the war against solvent abuse.

HOT SHOTS For the third time in the eight-year history of the Media Shoot, the team from The Pas Detachment has taken top honours with a total score of 553 points, beating out their closest rival, the Manitoba Telephone Service, by a substantial margin of 139 points. Held at The Pas Firearms Association Range, this event started out as an energy outlet for members of the two local media outlets, the "Opasquia Times, and station CJ 1240, who were constantly battling it out in sports competition. It was hoped that the annual Media Shoot would attract attention to the great facilities available to gun enthusiasts in the area, and to the fact that guns can be used for recreational purposes and not necessarily a medium for violence. Organizers are thankful for the Pas Firearms Association members for their assistance in the annual event, as well as for the use of their range facilities and clubhouse. Many thanks to Greg Taverner, Norman Watkins and Bob Uchtmann for their professional approach to the competitions and the unenviable chore of trying to create order out of chaos.

CROSS-CULTURAL EXPERIENCE From October 8-10, 1992, a Cross-Cultural Camp was conducted on the Goodfish Lake Reserve, Whitefish Lake. The Camp provided an opportunity for St Paul Sub-Division members and the residents of the reserve to develop greater mutual respect and understanding of each others culture and special problems, in a traditional Native setting. Members slept in teepees, ate traditional Native meals cooked over open fires, and attended seminars and group meetings conducted in the open air. At the conclusion of the Camp, all participants expressed favourable comments concerning the experience and each party felt they received a greater appreciation of the others' special needs and perspective on life.

They should also be commended for their involvement in the youth basketball program in the city.

NEW PURSUIT VEHICLE The Academy has acquired a new pursuit vehicle. However, the only thing it can catch are the large snowdrifts which accumulate on the Parade Square during the winter. The diesel powered grader is reportedly the first such vehicle to be owned by the Force.
