Whene ar with anxious thoughts opprest, We would our hearts to sorrow yield,

Let us the spreading cloud arrest, And note the lilies of the field:

No robes of silk, with broider'd hem, Such texture of such beauty show ; Nor dose the jewel'd diadem Of Eastern King so richly glow.

Erst in soft bow'rs of Paradise, Where all was guilelessness and bloom, Before was heard. Sin's fell device; Or uttered Man's primeyal doom,

They scattered fragrance through the nir, And wore their gay and shining dress, Pride of the charms, that cluster'd there, Of innocence and loveliness.

Still, on the curst and guilt-stain'd Earth They bloom, as in that happy time ; Still, joys attend their vernal birth, As when they sprang in Eden's clime.

And still, as they, sweet relics, blow In mid-wood glade or open dell-Thro' sunny weal and stormy woe, The story of their trust they teil.
